Andersonville Cemetery, Georgia.

This Cemetery is located about half a mile northeast of the Railroad Depot, at Andersonville, (formerly Anderson), Ga., a station on the Southwestern Georgia Railroad, sixty miles from Macon, and near by the Prison Pen or Stockade that was erected by the Rebel authorities, for the reception and confinement of soldiers of the Union Army, who had been captured and were held as Prisoners of War.

The original number of interments in this Cemetery (12,912), has been increased by the removal of the dead which had been collected and interred in the Public Cemetery, at Montgomery, Ala., and of a large number of Prisoners of War who had been buried at Macon, Columbus, Thomasville and Albany, Ga., from the battlefields of Griswoldville and Sunshine, and the scattered dead on the route of General Sherman, to Savannah, south of the Georgia Central Railroad.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

There is no National Cemetery in or near Philadelphia. Those who died in the General Hospitals and Camps in and around the city are buried in lots set apart for this purpose in the different local cemeteries in the vicinity, principally in Glenwood, Odd Fellows', Mount Moriah, Woodland and Lebanon Cemeteries. These lots were afterward either donated to or purchased by the United States Government, and are cared for the same as National Cemeteries. Quite a number of those included in the following list, who are shown in the Roster as being buried here, have since its preparation been removed by friends, and are so noted.
