THE NEW MONUMENT.

At the Anniversary Banquet on 22d February, 1888, the third regular toast was:

“The Monument to the W. L. I. Dead in Magnolia Cemetery.

“Time has wrought great changes in its condition. It should be speedily replaced with a memorial column in gray granite from our native hills and the heroic names of our ‘unreturning brave’ preserved to posterity in imperishable bronze. Survivors and successors should forthwith unite in this patriotic work, and success will crown their united efforts.”

Whereupon it was unanimously

Resolved, “That an Executive Committee of Fifteen be raised, with full power to act; that of said committee the President of the W. L. I. Veterans and the commanding officer of the W. L. I. shall be members ex-officio; that of the remaining number there shall be three survivors from each of the three companies of the war, and four members from the company at large.”

NAMES OF THE COMMITTEE.

Hon. Charles H. Simonton, President W. L. I. Veterans; Capt. W. Lucas Simons, Comd’g W. L. I., ex-officio.

Ex-Capt. Wm. A. Courtenay.

" At every board a vacant chair,
 Fills with quick tears some tender eye,
 And at our maddest sport appears
 A well known form that will not die ;

" We lift the glass, our hand is stayed,
 We jest, a spectre rises up,
 And weeping, though no word is said,
 We kiss and pass the silent cup."

"And she speaks in a voice that is as sad as death,
 There is duty still to be done,
 Tho' the trumpet of onset has spent its breath,
 And the battle been lost and won.

But, hark to the past, as she murmurs, 'Come,
 There is duty still to be done,
 Tho' mute is the drum, and the bugle dumb,

MORTUARY

OF THE

Three Washington Light Infantry Companies

1861-65.

"Furl that banner, softly, slowly,
Treat it gently—it is holy—
For it droops above the dead;
Touch it not—unfold it never,
Let it droop there, furled forever,
For its people's hopes are dead."
[Father Ryan's "Conquered Banner."

"The purpose for which you gathered yourselves into an association (1866) is of the holiest. It was to take care of the memories of your dead comrades, and to provide for the relief of their widows and orphans. Whatever you forget, you cannot forget these things. That is a surrender no true man would ask. It is a surrender no true man would make, for he could not make it without infamy.

"Your dead comrades! How sacred the tie that binds you to their memory. Side by side you have toiled with them on the weary march night and day, in summer's heat and winter's snows. Side by side you have stood with them on the crimson field where battle raged and death gathered in his harvest of the brave. You are the witnesses of their constancy and valor; you are the sponsors for their good names. In obedience to a sentiment of honor and the call of duty and in pledge of their sincerity, they made the last human sacrifice—they laid down their lives. Of the three companies that bore your name one hundred and fourteen soldiers died in battle, in hospital, or on the weary wayside. Officers and men, they were of the very flower of this ancient city, her young hope and fair renown. What a story does that record tell of constancy, of faithfulness to duty

"Of them, their patriot zeal and pride,
The lofty faith that with them died,
No grateful page shall further tell
Than that so many bravely fell;
And we can only dimly guess,
What worlds of all this world's distress,
What utter woe, despair and death,
Their fate has brought to many a hearth."

“Were not these men honest and true? By a thousand tokens we know that they were! And in after days or years, when the blinding passions and prejudices of the war have passed away, and a calmer reason and fairer appreciation of motives and conduct have taken place, the stranger who passes through the leafy streets of yonder City of the Dead and looks upon the consecrated spot, God’s acre, where lie the bodies of thousands of our soldiers gathered from the battlefields of many States, and arrayed in order and marked each with a marble headstone bearing his name and the number of his regiment; and passing still further on, shall lift up his eyes to the monument which you with pious hands have reared to the memories of your own dear dead comrades—he happily musing upon the political influences and principles under which these men were reared, and yielding to the instincts and pleadings of a generous humanity swelling at his heart, will exclaim in the tones of that pity which is akin alike to justice and to love—for what is it but great nature’s voice: ‘It is true! It is true! These men were honest as they were brave.’

Soldiers, rest! For you no more the bugle here on earth shall sound reveille! You have waked to another morn in a brighter Realm, and the burden of your song is: ‘On earth, peace, good will towards men!’”—From Ex-Capt. Hon. W. D. Porter’s Address, 22d February, 1873.
