The Ecclesiastical Society of Amity, (including Bethany, until 1763), was formed in 1737, and incorporated in 1739; being taken from the north-western part of New Haven, and the north-eastern part of Milford.

Before this time, the people living nearer New Haven, attended services there, and the others, in Milford, riding, some of them, ten or twelve miles, to procure gospel privileges for themselves, and baptism for their children. Their first meeting was held in 1738, and on the second Sabbath in August, 1740, the first service was held in their church.

The first settled minister was Mr. Benjamin Woodbridge, who was installed on the third of November, 1742, and served his flock faithfully, until called to his reward, December 4, 1785. The parish of Amity was incorporated as a town, January, 1784, taking, as was meet, the name of its beloved pastor for its own, and henceforward was "Wood-bridge."

The church records are especially good; the baptisms beginning, November 14, 1742, going on regularly until 1753, when there is a break. In 1762 only one baptism is recorded, and then no more until 1771. The marriages begin in 1742; but the deaths not until 1785.

The baptisms of the early children of the people, are to be found in the church records of New Haven and Milford, and the deeds of those two towns, until 1784, give much information concerning the families; also the Probate Records of New Haven, in which district, Woodbridge still remains.

From a copy of the church records, made by the late S. P. Marvin, the following has been arranged by Louise Tracy, Genealogist, New Haven, Conn.

The Ecclesiastical Society of Amity (including Bethany, until 1763) was formed in 1737, and incorporated in 1739; being taken from the north-western part of New Haven, and the northeastern part of Milford.

Before this time, the people living nearer New Haven attended services there, and the others, in Milford, riding, some of them, ten or twelve miles to procure gospel privileges for themselves, and baptism for their children. Their first meeting was held in 1738, and on the second Sabbath in August, 1740, the first service was held in their church.

The first settled minister was Mr. Benjamin Woodbridge, who was installed on the third of November, 1742, and served his flock faithfully, until called to his reward, December 4, 1785. The parish of Amity was incorporated as a town, January, 1784, taking, as was meet, the name of its beloved pastor for its own, and henceforward was "Woodbridge."

The church records are especially good; the baptisms beginning November 14, 1742, going on regularly until 1753, when there is a break. In 1762 only one baptism is recorded, and then no more until 1771. The marriages begin in 1742; but the deaths not until 1785.

The baptisms of the early children of the people are to be found in the church records of New Haven and Milford, and the deeds of those two towns, until 1784, give much information concerning the families; also the Probate Records of New Haven, in which district Woodbridge still remains.

From a copy of the church records, made by the late ^{Rev} S. P. Marvin, the following has been arranged by Louise Tracy, Genealogist, New Haven, Connecticut.
