INTRODUCTION.

LITTLE was known in this country respecting the antecedents of the Leete family (descendants of Wm. Leete) in America, until the reception here, quite recently, of an interesting volume, entitled "The Family of Leete." This book was printed in London, in 1881, "for private circulation," and was generously sent to public libraries in this country by Joseph Leete, Esq., of Eversden, South Norwood Park, S. E. Surrey, England. To this book we are indebted for most that we know of the family history anterior to the emigration of Wm. Leete to this country in 1639.

From it we learn the great antiquity of the family name; that Gerard Letie or Lete held lands in Morden, Cambridgeshire, in 1209, in the reign of King John; that Matthew Lety held lands in 1370; that Bobertus fil Lete was assessed to a subsidy in 1326-27; that John Leet, grocer, of London, made a will which was proved in 1442; that John Lete, of Cottenham, made a will proved in 1523; that Henry Lette, of Cottenham, husbandman, made a will proved in 1527; that Henry Leete, of Comberton, made a will proved in 1541, etc.

From the same source comes our knowledge of the Leete coat of arms, for though used by Governor Leete in this country, as his seal proves, all knowledge of its use, and even of its existence, had long been obliterated. It is described as follows: Argent, on a fesse, gules, between two rolls of matches, sable, fired proper, a martlet, or. Crest: on a ducal coronet, or, an antique lamp, or, fired proper. The origin and signification of the arms have not been ascertained.

The name anciently was variously spelled—Letie, Lete, Lety, Leet, Lette, Lytte, Leete, etc., etc. As early however as the reign of Queen Elizabeth, three hundred years ago, Thomas Leete, of Ockington, spelled his name Leete, and his descendants, for two hundred years, with great unanimity, followed that spelling of the name, and it is the common spelling still. Latterly, however, some branches of the family write the name Leet, omitting the final e. In this book it is uniformly retained, but it should not be forgotten that some important families now spell the name without it.

Wm. Leete was born in Dodington, Huntingdonshire, England, in 1612 or 1613. His grandfather was Thomas Leete, of Ockington, Cambridgeshire, England, who married Maria Slade, of Rushton, Northamptonshire, daughter of Edward Slade. Thomas Leete had four children, two sons and two daughters. Both his sons he named John. These were distinguished, in speaking of them, by their place of residence, John of Dodington (the elder), and John of Islington. His daughters were Jane and Rebecca. Jane married Richard Dale and Rebecca married Thomas Fowler.

John Leete of Dodington, son of Thomas of Ockington, married Anna Shute, daughter of Robert Shute, one of the Justices of the King's Bench. They had two sons, William, who came to Guilford and was afterward Governor Leete, and John, of Midlow Grange, Huntingdonshire, and a daughter Anne, who married Robert Raby.

William Leete, son of John of Dodington, "was bred to the law, and served for a considerable time as clerk in the Bishop's Court at Cambridge, where, observing the oppressions and cruelties then practiced on the conscientious and virtuous Puritans, he was led to examine more thoroughly their doctrines and practice, and eventually to become a Puritan himself and to give up his office."

He came to America in Rev. Mr. Whitfield's company, and was one of the signers of the Plantation Covenant on shipboard, June 1, 1639, arriving in New Haven about July 10. When they had agreed upon Guilford as a place to settle, he was one of six selected to purchase the land of the native Indians, in trust, for the plantation until their organization.

[When the lands in the village were surveyed and laid out for individual ownership, he selected for his residence a lot opposite to that of William Chittenden, on the corner of what are now Broad and River streets, a site overlooking Menunketuck river as it winds its way through meadows reclaimed from the sea, as green then as now, or, when it meets a full tide, expanding into a broad lake. His outlying lands (about 250 acres) were located chiefly some three miles away, in the southwesterly quarter of the town, and the place was named from him Leete's Island. That which goes by this name is not strictly an island, but a part of these lands, at first called Horse Island, is surrounded with salt meadows, and of course was once an island.

This section of Guilford still retains the name of Leete's Island, and the lands have been owned and occupied by Leetes almost exclusively down to the present generation. It has now its post office and store, and has recently come into prominent notice as the location of Beattie's stone quarries.

The following is a fac-simile of Governor Leete's signature :

- J^{no} Leete:

His seal has been preserved in the family to the present time. It bears a correct representation of the Leete Coat of Arms.] T.

Mr. Leete was called upon to fill many public offices. He was clerk of the plantation from 1639 to 1662. He was one of four to whom was entrusted the whole civil power of the plantation, without limitation, until a church was formed, June 19 (June 29 N. S.), 1643. When the church was formed, he was selected as one of the seven pillars "for the foundation work." Samuel Disborough and William Leete were chosen to meet the court at New Haven in 1643, when the combination of the jurisdiction of the New Haven Colony was planned and organized, and Guilford, Milford, Stamford and other plantations, hitherto independent colonies, united in one jurisdiction with New Haven, establishing a General Court for the whole jurisdiction, to sit twice a year at New Haven in April and October, and to consist of the governor, deputy governor, and all the magistrates within the jurisdiction, and two deputies for every plantation. Mr. Leete was a deputy from Guilford to this court till 1650, and from 1651 to 1658 was the magistrate of the town. In 1658 he was chosen deputy governor of the colony, and continued in that office until 1661 when he was elected governor, which office he held until the union with Connecticut in 1664. After the union he was an assistant until 1669 when he was elected deputy governor of the Connecticut Colony, holding this office until 1676 when he was chosen governor, which position he retained by continuous reëlection until his death in 1683. Upon being elected governor he removed to Hartford, and being continued in office he remained there until his death, and was buried there.

In Treasurer John Talcott's Account Book, now in the State Library in Hartford, under date of April 18, 1683, is this charge to Connecticut Colony :

"To 11 pound of powder for the Great Guns at Gov^l leet's funerall, Bb 01:07:06."

His tombstone was discovered about 1830, in the ancient burial ground in the rear of the First Church of Hartford, where it had long been hidden by an accumulation of earth. His descendants of the present generation have erected a plain granite monument to his memory.

"During the term of forty years," says Dr. Trumbull, the historian, "he was Magistrate, Deputy Governor, or Governor of one or other of the colonies. In both colonies he presided in times of the greatest difficulty, yet always conducted himself with such integrity and wisdom as to meet the public approbation."

When two of the Judges of King Charles I., Goffe and Whalley, fled to New England for safety, upon the restoration of Charles II. to the throne of his father, Mr. Leete exerted himself for their protection. For several days they were secreted in the cellar of his store and fed from his table. And at other times and in other ways he rendered them important aid. The cellar where the Judges were concealed is still to be seen in much the same condition as when they occupied it.

The object of these pages is to give, as far as possible, a record of the descendants of Governor Leete, by families, in genealogical order down to the present time, in the case of all that bear the Leete name. In the case of descendants of other names the record will not be continued after the first generation in each case. Our record for the first hundred years after the settlement of Guilford is nearly complete. No Leete moved out of the town in more than ninety years from its first settlement, and the town records furnish material for the family record. Moreover, a large portion of the family has always remained in the town or vicinity. Of the present inhabitants of the town more than eighty are Leetes. The record of these has been mostly preserved, and through them the record, partial or complete, of many who have moved away has been ascertained. Nevertheless in the removals and re-removals of the last one hundred and fifty years, branches of the family have, from time to time, been lost sight of, and consequently many names which properly belong on these pages are not found here.

Mr. Leete was a man of energy and perseverance. In Dec., 1843, he removed from Washtenaw Co., Mich., to Clinton Co., Mich., then a wilderness. The winter was very severe, so that thousands of cattle died for want of food. The snow fell to a great depth and became crusted, so that it was impossible for cattle to forage. But Mr. Leete carried all his stock safely through the winter, and saved himself from pecuniary loss, by constantly felling forest trees, upon which his cattle could browse. And by his untiring energy he made his wilderness home to blossom like the rose.

He died, aged 92, Aug. 6, 1873. In his prime he was a man of imposing physical proportions, standing six feet in his stockings. He was a custom house officer for thirty years, his duty being to board and inspect all incoming vessels. During the war of 1812 he boarded a West India vessel laden with rum, sugar and molasses, claiming to be bound to New Haven, to which place it was his duty to accompany it. When off New Haven, instead of running in, they kept on to Huntington, and attempted to bind or confine Mr. Leete, but by his commanding presence, physical force, and the use of his knife he kept them from their purpose. At Huntington they transferred their cargo to a sloop to go to New York, manned with two men and a boy. Mr. Leete boldly went aboard, and when near New York the crew in alarm escaped in their boat. He took the sloop in, it was condemned with its cargo and sold, and Mr. Leete received $1,000.

In 1860 his two sons, Jonathan and Elijah, were in the coasting trade between Guilford and New York, having for their only assistant on their sloop a Malay named Jack. When in the Sound off Norwalk, Mar. 15, 1860, they were both murdered and thrown into the sea. The bodies were never found, and Jack escaped the gallows because there was no legal proof of the murder.
