City Cemetery.

(Bloomington, Ill.)

(A partial list, only, the writer not having time to spare in which to secure more.)

Many of the oldest gravestones in this cemetery erected during the '30's, '40's, were formed from a soft grade of marble, and present much evidence of natural disintegration. The inscriptions are completely obliterated from a few, and many others are slowly disappearing. Many of those given herewith were deciphered with difficulty. Several of the older slabs were broken in pieces, and a few broken off near the ground had been re-set to a depth covering parts of the inscriptions.)
