

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

the presence of this book

in

the J.M. Kelly library has been made possible through the generosity of

Stephen B. Roman

From the Library of Daniel Binchy

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

ANCIENT LAWS OF IRELAND.

ἡμῶν τεκταγὰς

AND

CERTAIN OTHER SELECTED
BREHON LAW TRACTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE COMMISSIONERS FOR PUBLISHING THE ANCIENT LAWS AND INSTITUTES OF IRELAND.

VOL. IV.

DUBLIN:

PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE:

PUBLISHED BY

A. THOM & CO., 87, 88, & 89, ABBEY-STREET;
HODGES, FOSTER, & CO., 104, GRAFTON-STREET.

LONDON:

LONGMANS & CO.; TRÜBNER & CO.
OXFORD: PARKER & CO. CAMBRIDGE: MACMILLAN & CO.
EDINBURGH: A. & C. BLACK, AND DOUGLAS & FOULIS.

1879.

Price Ten Shillings.

27, UPPER PEMBROKE-STREET,
DUBLIN, 1st September, 1879.

MY LORD,

Having been requested by the Commissioners for publishing the Ancient Laws and Institutions of Ireland to edit such of the Brehon Law Tracts translated by the late Dr. O'Donovan or Mr. O'Curry as might be most suitable for publication, the Rev. Dr. T. O'Mahony and myself proceeded to prepare for the press the text and translation of the several Brehon Law Tracts contained in this volume.

The Rev. Dr. T. O'Mahony, in consequence of ill-health, was unfortunately obliged to retire from all connexion with the editing of this volume before he had finally revised the entire Irish text. I am much indebted to the kindness of Mr. W. M. Hennessy, who corrected for the press that portion of the original text which had not been finally revised by the Rev. Dr. T. O'Mahony.

The notes appended to the text, except mere references, were selected by the Rev. Dr. T. O'Mahony from those appended to the manuscripts of the original translators.

For the Introduction I am exclusively responsible.

The Index and Synopsis have been prepared by Mr. P. Bagenal.

I am, my Lord,

Your Lordship's obedient servant,

ALEXANDER GEORGE RICHEY.

The Right Rev.

The Lord Bishop of LIMERICK,

Secretary to the Commission for Publishing the Ancient Laws and Institutions of Ireland.

CONTENTS.

	Page
INTRODUCTION :
Part I.—General observations as to the translation,	vii
„ II.—Of the Tract entitled “Of taking possession,”	xiii
„ III.—Of the “Fine” and the “Gulfine” system,	xlix
„ IV.—Of the Incidence of Fines,	xciv
„ V.—Of the Succession to Land,	ciii
„ VI.—Of the Tract entitled “Judgments concerning Co-tenancy,”	cxix
„ VII.—Of the Tract entitled “Bee Judgments,”	cxli
„ VIII.—Of the Tract entitled “Right of Water,”	clvi
„ IX.—Of the Tract entitled “Precincts,”	clxiv
„ X.—Of the Tract entitled “Divisions of Land,”	clxx
„ XI.—Of the Tract entitled the “Crith Gabhlach,”	clxxiv
„ XII.—Of the Tract known as “The Sequel to the Crith Gabhlach,”	ccviii
„ XIII.—Of the Tract known as “Of Succession,” and concluding observations,	ccxxiii
Synoptical Contents of Introduction,	ccxxxi
I.—Ὅτι τεκτήσατο ; or “Of taking lawful possession,”	1
II.—Ὁρεαθὰ κομαθήσεα ἀνθρώπου ; or “Judgments of Co-tenancy,”	67
III.—Ὁεχ βηεθὰ ; or “Bee Judgments,”	161
IV.—Κοιβήνυρ υἱρεῖ ; or “Right of Water,”	205
V.—Μαῖςνε ; or “Precincts,”	225
VI.—Ὅο βρεῖτεάννυρ, &c. ; or “Of the Judgment of Every Crime,” &c.,	239
VII.—Τέο ἀν περῶνν α ἀνταῖβ ; or “The Land is forfeited for Crimes,”	263
VIII.—Ῥοῦλὰ τῆρε ; or “Divisions of Land,”	275
IX.—Ὁε Ῥοῦλαῖβ ἀνεοῖλ τυαῖτῖ ; or “Of the Divisions of the Tribe of a Territory,”	281
X.—Κριθ Γαβλάε, the Crith Gabhlach,	297
XI.—Do. do., the Sequel to the Crith Gabhlach,	343
XII.—The unnamed Tract entitled “Of Succession,”	371
General Index of the Text,	389

INTRODUCTION.

I.

THE Brehon Law Tracts contained in this volume have been selected by the Editors as specially illustrating the land-laws of the early Irish, and the constitution of the Celtic family and tribe.

Upon the former of these subjects it is not to be anticipated that we should find in any work, composed by a lawyer of the Brehon school, a series of definite rules systematically arranged; or even an attempt to lay down the general principles upon which, in any class of cases, the judge or arbitrator proceeded. The idea of law in its technical sense was wholly foreign to the ancient lawyers. They dealt not with laws, but customs; which, of unknown origin, handed down from remote antiquity, often obscure, and frequently misconceived, influenced the public opinion of each tribal community as to what it was right should be done in each particular case. The Brehons were gradually approaching the idea of general legal propositions by an induction from numerous and distinct cases which had been decided in accordance with pre-existing customs.

This mode of dealing with legal questions has been largely illustrated in the preceding volumes; assuming an individual case to have resulted in a concrete decision, they vary to a certain extent the constituent facts of the case by adding some, or striking out others, and speculate as to the variation in the decision which should have followed such an alteration in the facts. This mode of dealing with legal questions naturally fell in with the idea that all legal rights should be treated from a negative point of view, that is, considered not with the object of being enforced, but rather of being compensated for when infringed, the amount of such compensation being assessed in fixed ratios with reference to the varying circumstances of each case.

To record the existing customs of their tribe was not an easy task for the ancient lawyers, for it involved the necessity of reducing the indefinite general opinion of the tribe into a series of abstract propositions by a wide induction from particular cases. The most indefinite custom cannot exist, or be transmitted, without being reduced to some form which is capable of oral transmission, and in every uncivilized community certain ancient rules, dealing indifferently with moral and legal matters, are handed down from father to son, and remain the exclusive possession of the elders of the tribe and the sages of the law. Such ancient rules, when preserved, rarely afford any distinct or reliable information; they are intended to serve as catch-words or suggestions to assist the memory to recall what had been previously orally communicated; generally in a rhythmical form, always in language condensed and antiquated, they assume the character of abrupt and sententious proverbs, the drift of which cannot be more than vaguely guessed at. Collections of such sayings are to be found scattered throughout the Brehon Law Tracts, and in them, if anywhere, are to be found whatever abstract legal propositions the Brehons possessed; it is to be regretted, although it may be naturally anticipated, that but little clear and definite information can be extracted from these passages. If we were certain that they were preserved in their original form, and had no doubt of the accuracy of the translation, yet the actual meaning and practical application of these brief and oracular utterances would be to a great extent a matter of mere speculation; such, however, is far from being the case, and the modern critic approaches the consideration of them under great, if not almost insuperable, difficulties. The first inquiry naturally is, whether we possess an authentic Archaic text; upon this preliminary and cardinal question it is impossible not to feel most serious misgivings; however ancient any particular rule, or rather apophthegm, may be, the grammatical form of the language in which it is expressed cannot claim very high antiquity ; it is manifestly much later than the Irish of the glosses ; the words have lost their inflexions, but the sentences have not assumed a logical construction, and their present form very much resembles a Latin inscription in which the inflexional terminations of the nouns and verbs have been erased. Both the text and matter of popular literature orally transmitted undergo a constant assimilation to the language and ideas of the day ; but many examples prove that ancient formulæ handed down as the exclusive possession of a comparatively small number may at length become unintelligible even to their exclusive custodians ; the Salian hymn of Numa and the litanies of the Arval brothers were repeated long after their direct meaning was lost. Although it cannot be contended that the text of the Brehon law had become as absolutely antiquated as the formulæ last alluded to, it is evident that the commentators felt that they were dealing with an uncertain and difficult text ; the numerous and often conflicting glosses, and the commentary, sufficiently prove this. The original text may perhaps have been as much, and as little, understood by the Brehon of the 16th century as the original text of the laws of the Decemviri by the Roman of the 1st century.

An ancient legal text is further very much embarrassed by the necessary use of purely technical terms, which can have no life or meaning apart from the society in which they originated, and which when once lost can never be recovered. The extensive reforms effected during the present century in the English Real Property Law have already rendered obsolete a large proportion of the terms of legal art which were familiar to the cotemporaries of Lord Kenyon. In the case of an hereditary profession, as was that of the Brehon judge, the use of technical terms throws about the simplest operation the air of mystery, in which the exclusive possessors of any speciality desire to hide their calculations ; and thus by every profession whose members assume an abstruse character, heralds, lawyers, theologians, &c., there are used vastly more technical words than are necessary, the object of which is rather to cloak trivial, than to express complex, ideas. Difficulties arising from this cause occur plentifully in every Brehon law tract.

The task of translating the original text is further embarrassed by the ordinary absence of punctuation in the manuscripts. When the sentences in a paragraph are intended to be fully developed, an intelligent reader supplies for himself the want of punctuation (which is a very modern invention), and successfully follows the sense of the authors as it is gradually developed. The original Brehon text consists altogether of curt and proverbial expressions, which rarely attempt the completeness of a sentence, and are strung together without an attempt at logical or grammatical connexion; indeed it may be fairly supposed that if one of these paragraphs had been read through to a Brehon judge for the first time, evenly and without strong accentuation, he would have found himself much perplexed if required to explain the meaning. It is apparent that the most ancient passages possessed a rythmical structure, and that the movement of the verse, and the pauses in the lines, threw out separately and emphasized the curt and unorganized apophthegms. Passages of this character, when all the words are reduced to the one dead level by being successively written out without stop or accent, are absolutely deprived of all the aids to their comprehension, which their author assumed would be lent to them by the voice of the oral teacher.

Editors of such a text must exercise the utmost caution, and are exposed to constant temptations. The first necessary step which should precede translation is to break up the text into the proper paragraphs and sentences. The form of the text gives no indications how this should be done, and hence in the present case the logical process has been often inverted, the punctuation being fixed with reference to an a priori conjecture of the general drift of the passage. Such speculations, however ingenious, are always practically of little value, when a large proportion of the words are technical terms, the precise meaning of which is unknown to the author. The editors of this volume, which contains many passages of peculiar difficulty, have felt themselves forced to reconsider the principles upon which the more ancient text should be translated, and to lay down some rules for their own guidance in the matter. They have come to the opinion that the only consistent principle upon which a translation of the archaic passages can be based is to adopt the explanations of words contained in the glosses, and to assume the correctness of the views as to the general meaning of the text expressed in the commentary. It may be easily conceded that the authors of both the glosses and commentary were themselves unable to translate the text with accuracy, or with certainty to divine its meaning; but their condition in respect to the modern editor is as twilight to absolute darkness. At what date the original family and tribe-system was broken up in Ireland; whether it had not been superseded by another organisation even before the date of some of the commentators of the Brehon law tracts, is a question which cannot be answered without much consideration and further examination of both the Brehon law and the existing materials of Irish history; but whether the original Celtic family and tribe-system did or did not exist in its completeness at the time of commentators, they lived under the influence of the ancient traditional law, and must, as an hereditary caste, have cherished the recollections and spirit of the old customs, the exact knowledge of which may even have ceased to be of practical importance. As a means of understanding the present, as even a fragmentary survival of what was once useful knowledge, every lawyer learns as a matter of course much which is really obsolete and unpractical. The English law student is instructed in much of the law which has been long since advantageously abolished. The theory of the feudal system, the origin of the manor, the feigned proceedings by fine and recovery, are taught to modern students, who may never have any need practically to apply them; but by this process the tradition of the old real property law of England is handed on; and a second rate practitioner of our day could to some extent explain a case in the year books which would be absolutely impenetrable to the trained mind of an accomplished civilian. Before attempting to fix the meaning of any passage in the original text, the editors have consulted the glosses and commentary with the view of ascertaining what the original commentators understood the general drift and meaning of the text to be, and the punctuation and translation has, as far as possible, been based upon the assumption of the correctness of the views of these early critics. The more any student becomes conversant with the ancient texts, the more he must be impressed with the fact that any other mode of dealing with them is wholly conjectural. It is possible for an ingenious editor, by a due application of stops, and the interpolation of words, supposed to be understood, in italics, to produce any results he may desire, and by such a process a very plausible and consistent appearance may be given to a translation which bears a very feeble (if any) resemblance to the original. It is the simple duty of the editors of the present volume to give the public a translation as correct as possible of the Irish text, and they have anxiously abstained from the constant temptation to translate this text in accordance with their preconceived views of what it ought in any given case to mean; they at the same time desire to warn students of the subject that in their opinion the present translation of the original text can not be received as final or satisfactory: it is essentially tentative: that other students will differ from it in many particulars is certain; that some may successfully revise and correct it is most probable; neither the late distinguished scholars, who originally translated the MSS., nor the present editors, nor any future critic are certain to be always successful in dealing with such a subject matter. The reader cannot be too clearly reminded that the translation of the original texts has been conducted upon the principles before stated; that conjectures founded upon the supposed meaning of detached passages of text, and unsupported by the commentary are uncertain; and that the commentary, not the text, is, in the opinion of the editors, the reliable basis for any conclusions or further speculations. These observations are the result of a prolonged experience in dealing with these Brehon texts; the most difficult of the passages in question have been translated and re-translated; frequently the translations were apparently most consistent and probable, but again and again they have been found to be inconsistent with what the glossists and commentators manifestly understood them to be, and in many such instances the editors had finally to admit that their own views as to the meaning of the text were, although perhaps ingenious, altogether mistaken. As to the technical legal terms occurring in the text, the editors have desired to translate them as far as possible; it must be observed that such words cannot find an exact equivalent in any modern language; the complex ideas represented by these words were, as is the case of all legal terms of art, formed under peculiar and transitory conditions of society, and their real and living use and meaning perished with the system out of which they sprang. Their meaning can be only approximated by a diligent comparison of the divers passages in which they occur.

II.

THE TRACT ENTITLED "ON TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION."

THE first tract contained in the present Volume is entitled "On Taking Lawful Possession," and the importance and peculiar meaning of this title will be obvious from the subsequent observations.

The first portion of the original text down to page 33 is obviously composed as a consecutive treatise dealing with the symbolic ceremonial by which an action for the recovery of the possession of land was instituted; the latter portion consists of a selection of isolated rules, some dealing with hereditary succession to land, others having no more than an incidental connexion with those which precede them.

This tract, in itself of obvious utility to the practising Brehon, is the subject of lengthened and clear explanations, and it would appear that the commentary annexed to the text is formed by combining several antecedent commentaries from different manuscripts, inasmuch as very similar notes upon the same passage succeed each other in the text.

The great importance of this tract arises from its exhibiting in the clearest manner the mode in which the judicial authority of the Brehon arose, and the series of legal fictions by which a defendant was constrained to come into court, and to submit his case to the jurisdiction of the customary Judge. It is most interesting to observe that the authority of the Brehon among the Celtic Irish arose in precisely the same manner as that of the Judges, by whatever title they may be called, among the other Aryan tribes; that the peculiarity of the Brehon system does not prove any abnormal organization of the Celtic tribe, but was in truth but an instance of archaic survival; and that a Roman might have recognised in the proceedings before the Brehon the ancient and technical formulæ, from which with difficulty and after long delay the Civil Law succeeded in freeing itself.

The evolution of the idea of law and judicial authority is inseparable from and follows that of government and social organization; the judicial system of the Celtic Irish was permanently fixed by the arrested development of their social organization, from many causes, which it is not intended here to discuss, but most of which were originally physical. The Celtic Irish never formed town communities, or were subject to any vigorous central authority; it was utterly impossible, therefore, that they could attain to ideas of law, which are evolved by the needs of a more complex civilization; the peculiarity of the Brehon is that professional lawyers of great acuteness and considerable technical education developed in numerous written works the logical results of a purely archaic customary law.

In the introduction to the last volume we drew special attention to the fact that all judicial authority, at least among the Aryan or Indo-European tribe communities, is originally derived from a system of voluntary submission to arbitration, and we treated the Brehon process by distress as a legal fiction illustrative of this principle; the formulæ necessary for the institution of actions to recover the possession of land, and which are dealt with very fully in the present tract, in a remarkable manner illustrate this rule, and present extraordinary analogies to the ancient processes of the Roman law. We desire very briefly, and with special reference to the forms of actions—the subject of this tract—to re-consider the origin and theory of judicial authority in primitive communities. Every archaic society is governed absolutely and exclusively by “Custom,” which may be defined as the acquired habits of any human community. Whence any such habits were originally acquired, or when any society began to acquire and transmit any fixed modes of acting, are questions wholly foreign to this introduction; we must accept as a fact that every human community appears to have acquired certain habits of acting, and that the surrounding physical conditions have been most influential in either originating or modifying them; abstract ideas of right or wrong are very obscure in the members of a primitive community; even in the ordinary affairs of daily life they consult their own comfort and advantage much less than do the members of a civilized society, and do and endure many things because their ancestors did or endured the same, for the local opinion of the tribe believes that their ancestors were wiser than themselves, and what has been shall continue to be done. In such a state of society the ordinary incidents of life, such as the birth or death of any member of the community, &c., are followed by fixed and well-known results, and the status, property, and position of each individual depend upon, or are affected by, the occurrence of a well-understood fact, or group of facts. The progress of any such society arises from the efforts of individual members to get rid of the custom which restrains their personal freedom, to act otherwise than the unwritten law of public opinion decrees that they must act, from the struggle of the free will against the local custom. In such communities the individual dares not attempt to attain his object by open contradiction, or repudiation of the venerated local usage, and strives, therefore, to effect his purpose through fictions by means of which the custom is violated in fact, though observed in appearance. If a man, who desires to do something which he is forbidden to do directly, observes that in the event of certain facts occurring the custom will allow him to do what he desires, he may artificially produce the requisite state of facts, and then, in apparent conformity with the custom, circuitously effect what he could not have directly accomplished; in such a case a series of acts are consciously done solely for the object that a certain effect may follow; the object desired is the consequence of the act done, and arises from the actual pre-existence of the necessary antecedent fact; gradually as it is understood that the custom can be thus evaded, the necessary antecedent acts became less and less real, and finally assume the form of a symbolical, or pantomimic performance, which, with the object of individual convenience, is gradually more curtailed, until at last it is simply alleged or verbally asserted to have been performed, and matters are allowed to proceed upon such assumption. Up to this point it is manifest that the necessary antecedent facts must be fully and correctly performed, simulated, or alleged, and that any failure so to do, or incorrectness in so doing, must result in the failure of the whole operation. Finally, the exception having become more familiar than the rule, the society begins to believe that the individual has a right to do directly what he has hitherto affected indirectly, and the formula, which originally was the foundation of the matter, is discovered to be an unmeaning technicality and rejected altogether. The ceremony of marriage among half civilised nations is the most obvious instance of this fact, and the form of marriage by wife-capture existed in Rome, as in many other communities, for centuries after the date at which its meaning was so utterly forgotten that historical romances were invented to account for its origin. As to transactions of this kind during the intermediate period, when the necessary antecedent facts were merely simulated or alleged, two points must be observed; first, that unless the simulation was correctly performed, or the allegation full and complete, no results at all followed, and secondly, that if the ceremony was correctly gone through, precisely the same results followed as would have resulted from the real occurrence of the facts simulated to have occurred.*

The jurisdiction of Judges was gradually established by a series of fictions. In the original tribe each "paterfamilias" ruled as of right those under his absolute jurisdiction; but, if differences arose between members of two distinct families, there was no original authority to which either could appeal; such disputes could be decided only by a recourse to force and arms; the manifest inconveniences of such a system called for some remedy, as the society progressed towards order and civilisation. At some period there arose a custom, or general public opinion, that under certain definite circumstances the hostile litigants should submit their quarrel to the arbitration of the tribe, and that the question in dispute should be decided by reference to the assumed pre-existing custom.

The rule that in such cases recourse should be had to arbitration was in its inception one of imperfect obligation, and the contending parties might still insist upon the natural right to assert their claims sword in hand; the regulations as to judicial process among the early

* The common recovery in the English law was one of the most elaborate and successful of legal fictions; by this process the owners of estates tail succeeded in practically repealing the Statute "De donis." The original form of procedure in actions of ejectment is often described as another instance of legal fictions; but it does not fall within Sir H. S. Maine's definition of the term; it was not introduced to create or attract jurisdiction, for the Court of Common Bench had original jurisdiction to decide the question really in issue; and it produced no change in the rules of the Common Law relative to titles to land. In its inception it was nothing more than a fraudulent abuse of the procedure of the Court arising from the alteration in the form of judgment entered up in actions commenced by the writ "de ejectione firmæ;" and the alterations in the procedure, which established it as the ordinary action for the recovery of land, were introduced by the Court itself.

Norse settlers in Iceland illustrate this most clearly;* but gradually the increasing pressure of public opinion caused the reference to arbitration to become the accepted and normal mode of deciding differences between the members of the tribe. It is to be observed that the public opinion, or custom, did not require the intervention of the arbitrator until the dispute had reached a certain point, viz., until the public peace of the tribe was broken by the occurrence of actual hostilities between its members. An individual could not institute a suit to determine a right as against his neighbour; but if he assailed his neighbour, spear in hand, the community required both to submit their rights to arbitration. The plaintiff, therefore, who desired a judicial decision upon his claim, proceeded openly to assert his right in an hostile manner, confident that upon the inception of the combat the other members of the community would intervene and enforce the custom of arbitration against both parties; the neighbours would not, however, step in between the parties until matters had gone on to the point at which the custom required a submission to arbitration, nor could the defendant be required to admit that the custom applied to his case, unless all the preliminary requisite circumstances had actually occurred. The pantomime of actual conflict had to be correctly acted up to the critical point, otherwise there would be no basis for the jurisdiction of the arbitration, and it should not be pushed beyond a definite point, otherwise actual conflict would have occurred, the very thing which the plaintiff desired to avoid. Hence the extreme technicality of all the early procedure, which proceeded upon this theory, and the fact that ancient lawyers devoted their attention to the formulæ requisite to bring a defendant into court, and disregarded the principles upon which the case should be decided when brought before the arbitrator; for the decision of the case it was assumed that the existing custom was sufficient, and the "sensus communis" of the members of the community evolved the presupposed usage which ruled the case.* Ignorance of the prescribed formula deprived a

* "Then Flosi spurned the money, and said he would not touch a penny of it, and then he said he would have only one of two things; either that Hanskuld should fall unatoned, or they would have vengeance for him." (The story of Burnt Njal, vol. 2, p. 155.) This was after the judgment, and the tender of the compensation.

* The proceedings at the trial at the Hill of Law in the second volume of the Burnt Njal illustrate this fact, and prove that the technical terms relative to various classes of wounds, &c., and the mysterious and obscure proceedings incident to an action, were not peculiar to the Brehon Law. The course of the proceedings in this case may be briefly stated as follows:—Mord, the nominal plaintiff, gives technical notice of the institution of suit (p. 235); Flosi, the defendant, in the night secretly resigns his priesthood and joins the Thing of Askel to escape the jurisdiction of the Court (p. 239); the next morning Mord opens his case with the following notice—"I take witness to this, that I except all mistakes in words in my pleading, whether they be too many, or wrongly spoken, and I claim the right to amend all my words, until I have put them into proper shape. I take witness to myself in this" (p. 242); the first objection taken is in the nature of a challenge of the array, viz., that two of the neighbours on the inquest were relatives to Mord, one his godfather, the other his second cousin (p. 248); Thorhall, the adviser of the plaintiff, demurs to the challenge on the ground "that he challenged them not for their kinship to the true plaintiffs, the next of kin, but for their kinship to him who pleaded the suit" (p. 250). The demurrer is allowed. The defendant again challenges the array on the ground that two men on the inquest were lodgers only, not householders (p. 250). Thorhall replies that the men qualified as owners of cattle of a value equal to that of the requisite qualification in land (p. 252). This was a novel point. Flosi said to Eyjolf—"Can this be law?" Eyjolf said he had not wisdom enough to know that for a surety, and then they sent a man to Skapti, the speaker of the law, to ask him whether it were good law, and he sent them back word, "that it was surely good law, though few knew it" (p. 252). Then followed a challenge to four of the inquest; "for those sit now at home who were nearer neighbours to the spot" (p. 253). To this challenge Thorhall demurs on the ground that a majority of the inquest was rightly summoned, and that therefore the case should proceed, whereupon a further application is made to Skapti, who replies, "More men are good lawyers now than I thought. I must tell you then that this is such good law in all points, that there is not a word to be said against it; but still I thought that I alone would know this, now that Njal is dead, for he was the only man I ever knew who knew it." The inquest are then called on to give the verdict, which they do without further evidence, for they themselves were the witnesses (p. 256). The plaintiff goes then before the Court, and proves the finding of the inquest as to the fact, and the defendant, Flosi, is called to defend the case, or rather to show cause against the finding. Eyjolf, on behalf of the defendant, pleads to the jurisdiction of the court, which was the Eastfrithersting, whereas Flosi, being now a Thingman of Askel, was within the jurisdiction of the Northlandersting. This objection was fatal; but a second suit is immediately instituted against Flosi for contempt for court for employing a lawyer in the court to whose jurisdiction he was not subject, "for having brought money into the fifth court" (p. 261). This step was taken to compel Flosi to withdraw the plea to the jurisdiction. Other technicalities follow, but the litigation finally resolves itself into the "Battle at the Althing."

man of, not of the right, but of the possibility of bringing his antagonist before a Judge; and the possessors of the requisite mysterious forms, whether patricians, pentiffs, or Brehons, thus acquired the advantage of being the sole possessors of these secret and essential forms. Thus, in the Roman law, the term "actio" became the generic designation, which signifies a particular form of procedure taken as a whole including the ceremonies, acts, and words, which constituted it; all of which had to be correctly gone through before the Judge had any jurisdiction in the matter. The case of the Romans proves that it is quite possible that an actual written law should co-exist with such a purely archaic conception of the position and jurisdiction of the Judge.

This period in the development of Roman law is clearly illustrated in the following passages:—

"The Quirites (men of the lance) had, in their judicial customs, even to the promulgation of the twelve tables, forms of procedure, assimilated to acts of violence, and to the combat, in which we at once see their predominant characteristic, the military life, and the important part played amongst them by their favourite instrument, the lance; as also the predominance of the sacerdotal and patrician elements, which had regulated the forms, and which had preserved the pantomimic action of former days."*

"The actiones leges were completed in jure before the magistrate, and this was the case even when it was necessary for him to appoint a Judge. This was the form, the preliminary step;"† (that is, the intervention of the state did not proceed beyond compelling the parties to submit the quarrel to an arbitrator; the state did not pretend itself to enforce the law in the first instance);

"But notwithstanding the fact that the sacramentum, and the judicii postulatio were generally forms for the enforcement of all substitution of rights, and that they had in all cases a certain uniform characteristic, however much the details and necessary formulæ, adapted to each individual case, might vary in each instance, according to the nature of the law, or according to the provisions of the law upon which the right was based, it was necessary that the parties should be familiar with the acts and ceremonies suited to their particular case.”*

* Ortolan, History of Roman Law, sec. 140.

† Id., sec. 142.

“Such was the early system of procedure amongst the Romans. Its characteristic was symbol; it is here that we find the lance, the tuft of grass, the tile, and the material representation of ideas, or of objects. It is here that we find the gesture, the legal pantomime, the simulated act of violence, the fictitious combat (manuum consertio), for the most part symbolising the transactions and processes of an earlier and barbarous period; here we find the utterance of sacred terms, and he who should be so unfortunate as to say “vine” (vites) in an action concerning vines, instead of using the word “arbores,” which was the religious term peculiar to the law of the case, would lose his action; here we find the impress of the sacerdotal finger; we see it in the sacramentum, the preliminary deposit of money in the hands of the plaintiff for the benefit of public religious service; we see it in the pignoris captio, accorded subsequently on occasions in which religious sacrifices were concerned; and it is here we find the weight of patrician influence. The magistrate was a patrician; the Judge could only be selected from the order of patricians; in one word, jus and the judicium were in their hands.”†

The explanation of the latter statement plainly is that it was the original tribe, not the mere sojourners or strangers on the spot, who had the right to intervene to preserve the peace, and that none but a member of the original tribe could be assumed to know the local custom.

The Roman ceremonial to which we desire to draw particular attention, as presenting peculiar analogies to the Brehon procedure detailed in the present tract, is the manuum consertio, which formed portion of the symbolic action which took place in the process known as the “sacramentum.” This proceeding appears to be nothing else than a personal conflict between the litigants, fought out over the subject matter in dispute; if the subject of dispute was such as could not conveniently be carried or led before the prætor, a portion was brought into court, and the formalities were enacted over it as if it were the whole (deinde in eam partem quasi in totam rem præsentem fiebat vindicatio). If it was a flock of sheep or herd of goats, a single sheep or goat, or single tuft of hair was brought; if it was land, a clod; if it was a house, a tile, (Gaius IV § 17 Poste's translation). The essence of the action was an actual combat over the subject of dispute; a mere personal conflict apart from the subject matter in dispute was not sufficient to compel a submission to arbitration as to title; the actual "res" or its symbol must have been fought across by the contending parties. It is remarkable how far even at the date of Gaius, the original form in actions as to the possession of land had been symbolised for the convenience of the parties. Originally, when land was the subject of controversy, the prætor repaired with the litigants to the spot, and they there performed in his presence (in jure) the ceremony of the manuum consertio. At this stage of the procedure, the breach of the peace was designedly produced in a symbolic form, but every thing else was real. When, however, the Roman territory became too extensive for the prætor to attend every such fictitious combat, the ceremony was adapted to the change in circumstances, the presence of the prætor was dispensed with; the parties, accompanied by their respective witnesses, performed the manuum consertio upon the ground in dispute, and carried a clod as portion thereof to the prætor, and then matters proceeded as if the prætor had been present upon the locus in quo during the performance of the ceremony. Subsequently the necessity for the litigants to resort to the lands in dispute was dispensed with; they left court and again returned, it being assumed that they had in the meanwhile repaired to the lands in question; that is that the statement that there had been a manuum consertio became an untraversable allegation in the pleading, and of course was soon absolutely dropped out and disregarded.*

* Id., sec. 143.

† Id., sec. 144.

The Brehon procedure for the recovery of land is identical with the Roman form up to the point at which the contest for possession was reduced to a mere symbolic formula; probably from the small extent of the tribe lands in which such disputes arose, the further step of substituting an untraversable allegation that a conflict had arisen for an actual or simulated conflict did not occur to the Celtic lawyers; but the procedure, although crystalised in this archaic form, was modified to suit the circumstances of different cases, and was adapted to admit what in our

* Mr. Poste in his edition of Gains (p. 499, 2nd ed.) asks the question, "What was the exact nature of the 'manuum consertio?'" Upon the analogy of the oath taken by the parties in the wager of battle in the old English law he conjectures that the term was equivalent to δεξιωμα, an oath or pledge that the party believed in the justice of his case; in the first edition of his work he adds, "It must be confessed, however, that none of our authorities allude to the oath (jusjurandum) having formed a part of the procedure by sacramentum, and possibly the manuum consertio was merely a symbolic battle." In his later edition he adds "Is it possible when we consider the common Aryan descent of the Romans and our Teutonic ancestors to suppose any connexion between the forms of Roman and Teutonic litigation? Or, was manuum consertio merely a symbolic battle, an idle reminiscence of a process belonging to a period anterior to the existence of public tribunals, the period of self-help, when the remedy of the litigant was to redress his wrongs by the prowess of his own right hand? Or was manuum consertio, like Diductio and Vis ex conventu, a fictitious trespass necessary for the basis of the penal (?) proceedings by sacramentum? Or was it merely the means of identifying the subject of litigation?" (p. 500). The supposed analogy between the Roman action and the Wager of Battle is very doubtful. The English proceeding was one of the modes of arriving at a finding upon the issue of fact arising upon the pleadings, by an appeal to the Divine power to testify as to this fact by giving the victory to the party in the right. The assertion of right was an appeal to the Divinity by both of the combatants, who might be hired champions, but ought to be persuaded of the truth of their cause. Upon the result of the combat depended the finding, as to the question of fact, upon which judgment was entered. What resemblance there is between these cases it is difficult to see. There can be little doubt that manuum consertio is to be translated in its ordinary meaning as a combat, not a "symbolic battle, an idle reminiscence of a process belonging to an anterior period," but, for the purposes of the suit, an actual combat, as for the purpose of barring an estate tail, the recovery was an actual action, pleaded to and defended by the tenant in tail; and the judgment over in warrentee against the vouchee was full compensation to subsequnt tenant in tail and the remainder men.

present system of English pleadings would be described as a counter-claim.

It is to be first observed that the introduction of the community for the purpose of compelling the parties to submit to arbitration, was quite independent of any intention or desire of the parties that there should be an adjudication as to their several rights to the land in question; it arose from the existence of the fact that two claimants were at one and the same time in possession adversely to each other of a certain piece of land. This is very clearly shown by a case cited in the commentary.* Ninne, the son of Matech, with three horsemen was on his way to Ulster; they unharnessed their horses upon certain lands, which had previously belonged to their tribe; this fact was unknown to them, they had no intention of making any claim to the lands in question, and their halt there was merely accidental. The occupier of the land required them to depart; "Then the two, who were with Ninne replied; 'It does not make our claim greater that we have unharnessed our horses here; it is not to claim our share therein.' (The occupier replies) 'This is not easy, for it was your own before; they shall not be left there for that reason.' They did not know until then that it had been theirs before. The person whose land it was drove their horses from it by force. They afterwards complained to Conchobar Mac Nessa concerning it, and he awarded a fine for unlawful expulsion upon the person who drove the horses out of the land, and an equivalent for what was driven off it, and he gave them lands in proportion to their family."

This story recognises the right of Matech to require an adjudication as to his rights in respect of the lands, although the King compounded this claim by an equivalent given out of his own lands. This bare fact of a contest for possession was gradually modified into a fixed procedure by which notice of the intended entry was served upon the occupier, and the transaction was witnessed and probably regulated to members of the tribe, the occupier given ample time to consider whether he would abandon the lands to the claimant, or submit the case to arbitration, and, finally, damages payable to the occupier for an illegal entry secured in the event of the claim proving unfounded. The entire process in its fully elaborated state was tedious, requiring, if the occupier simply remained quiescent, a period of not less than thirty days. For ten successive days (or at least on the first and tenth day) the claimant gave notice of his demand, and of his intention to enter if no answer were returned; on the tenth day, accompanied by his witness, and leading two horses by their bridles, he crossed the boundary, and remained upon the contested premises, but just within the march, for a day and a night; he then retired, and during the subsequent period of ten days (or at least on the middle and last day) repeated the notices previously given; upon the twentieth day he again crossed the march, with four horses and two witnesses, and advanced one third way towards the centre of the lands. If again he received no answer from the occupier, he withdrew, and for two days more gave notice outside of his intention to make his final and decisive entry; on the thirtieth day he again entered the lands with eight horses, and with witnesses of whom a certain proportion were of the chieftain rank (flaiths), and the others freemen (feini); upon this last occasion he advanced to the centre of the land, and took possession, unless the occupier submitted to arbitration. The prolonged period requisite for the notices and several entries, was intended to allow the occupier time to consider whether he would consent to arbitration; and the final entry was in such a form as to compel the occupier either to abandon possession, or actually to resist, for it is stated that, "unless law be offered to him before going over" (which must mean the crossing of the boundary on the thirtieth day), "it is not unlawful for him not to come out, until it is ascertained whether the land is his or not." If, however, the occupier distinctly refused arbitration, and contested the rights of the claimant, the lengthened procedure was unnecessary, and the matter was brought to an issue by an actual forcible entry and occupation of the lands in question; "if it be certain to him (the claimant) that law will not be given to him before going over" (i.e., before he has crossed the boundary upon the thirtieth day), "it is not unlawful for him that he has not given notice, provided that he has brought the means of taking possession"; and again; "if it be certain to him that law will not be ceded to him, it is guiltless for him to go over with all his cattle."

* Page 5.

The symbolism of the procedure is evident; the claimant is to enter upon the lands in such a fashion as to show that he is not seeking as a traveller to cross the piece of ground in question; he does not drive his chariot into or upon the lands, for in such case his intention might be ambiguous; his horses must be loosed from the chariot, and led by the bridle as if to graze; the duration of the first entry is intended to prove by a lengthened sojourn within the fence that his claim was not to traverse but to occupy; on the first two occasions upon which an actual conflict is not anticipated, he is attended by a witness or witnesses to testify to the performance of the essential act; upon the third occasion he is accompanied by witnesses, who must consist of members of the noble and of the free class of the tribesmen. The necessary presence of the former is remarkable; it is very probable that they are representatives of the community, whose office would be two-fold; either to intervene as the Roman prætor in the actio sacramenti, if an actual conflict occurred, or if the occupier abandoned the possession to recognise the claimant as the legal occupier of the land. That the arbitration must have rested upon either voluntary submission or actual conflict, is manifest from the statement that the result of an unresisted entry on the thirtieth day by the claimant, not followed by a submission to arbitration by the occupier, was not in the nature of a judgment in rem, but merely legalised the plaintiff's occupation until the question of right was decided; and this continued legal occupation had no other result than to inconvenience the occupier to such an extent as to compel him to discuss before the professional arbitrator the question of right.*

* The Welsh process for the recovery of land is analogous to the Irish. "There are three kinds of dadenhudds of land; and these dadenhudds are, a dadenhudd by tilth and ploughings, a dadenhudd by car, and a dadenhudd by bundle and burden."

The symbolical acts by which a man expressed his intention of subsequently taking possession, and which upon the last entry amounted to constructive possession, were manifestly unsuited to the case of a woman; it was necessary for her to represent in pantomime the incidents of her ownership, and if she failed in the appropriate details, the ceremony was wholly useless for the purpose of putting the occupier in such a position that public opinion would require his submission to arbitration; thus when the Brehon Sencha, with the design of causing the process to fail, declared that the formulæ in the two cases were the same, blotches arose on his cheek as a punishment for his unjust advice; nor was he cured until his daughter Brigh communicated to the female claimant the requisite symbolic acts for the purpose of establishing her right to force the occupier to an arbitration.

The exclusive possession of the knowledge of such ancient forms was in all early societies the basis upon which rested the

"And these dadenhudds are not to be prosecuted except by the son, in the place where his father was theretofore, or in the place where his parents were formerly; for a dadenhudd is not to be sued by kin and descent."

"Whoever is to prosecute dadenhudd by tilth and ploughing, is to remain upon the land, without answering, until he may turn his back on the stack of the forthcoming harvest, and that without answering to anyone, and the answer; and the ninth day from the following calends of winter, law."

"Whoever is to prosecute dadenhudd by car, by having been with his car and his household and his hearth, belonging to himself, or to his father before him, upon that land, is to be there, without answering, until the ninth day, and then give an answer; and at the end of the second ninth day proceed to law."

"Whoever is to prosecute dadendudd by bundle and burden, by having been with his bundle and his burden, his fire, himself and his father before him using a hearth, upon the land, is to be there, without answering, three nights and three days, and give an answer; and at the end of the ninth day, law."

"And the dadendudds are not to be adjudged to anyone, unless there shall have been a grant and delivery of the land to him previously by the lord." (Ancient Laws and Institutes of Wales, vol. i., p. 171.)

It is to be observed that these forms of action are confined to claims founded upon actual ouster, or by lineal descent to lands granted to individuals in several property. The narrow limits within which a claim by hereditary descent were restricted by the Welsh law are subsequently explained in the section of the Introduction dealing with the fine and the gailfine organization. The full details of the procedure in such cases are in the same work, vol. ii., p. 277.

power of the sacerdotal or patrician classes. If the correct fulfilment of ancient traditional litanies, or the dramatic performance of a complicated pantomime, was necessary for every tribe man who desired to accomplish his devotions or to assert his right, the class, which possessed the traditional and requisite formulæ, exercised an undefined but unlimited influence over the uninitiated lower order. The first step towards the establishment of original judicial power, was the publication, or perhaps the vulgarisation, of the antique formulæ. A knowledge of the custom was practically useless unless accompanied with the further knowledge of the appropriate form of action; hence immediately after the passing of the Twelve Tables a further effort was made to prescribe regulations for the forms of procedure, or the actions of the law (leges actiones); and hence the severity of the blow inflicted upon the Patriciate by the devulgaration of the formulæ by Flavius Fimbria. There is some inconsistency between the text and commentary as to the form pursued by a female claimant, but upon the whole the principle of the variance between the two ceremonies is obvious; the symbolical acts to be performed by a woman represented the ordinary incidents of her occupation of the land; for the horses led by the man, in her case were substituted the same number of sheep; the period of thrice ten days was in her case reduced to thrice four days; she made three successive entries, first, with two sheep and one female witness; secondly, with four sheep and two female witnesses; and lastly, with eight sheep and three female witnesses; the text cites what must have been considered the leading case of the woman Ciannacht, which contains further particulars of the procedure which had apparently fallen into disuse before the date of the commentary. It was necessary for the claimants of either sex upon the first entry to remain a full day and night within the fence, and by the commentary it appears that upon the second entry also it was necessary for the woman to remain for this period upon the lands; the witnesses therefore who accompanied her upon these occasions were women, not men; but upon the occasion of the third and final entry she "claimed her right with a male witness." Whatever be the reason that upon the two first entries the witnesses were female (as to which the gloss gives a curious explanation), it is evident that the witness upon the occasion of the third entry was required to be a male, and we may infer that this arose from his fulfilling not merely the duty of witnessing the transaction, but of intervening, in the name of the community, in the manner above suggested. The original also represents Ciannacht not only to have driven the appropriate number of sheep into the land, but also to have carried with her a sieve, a kneading trough, and a baking instrument (probably a griddle); these articles clearly indicated her intention not merely to enter, but also to remain upon the lands, and to perform the duties of her position as housewife.

This ceremonial, necessary as a general rule for the assertion of a claim to the possession of lands, was, from its nature, in some instances impossible, and in many inconvenient; and the form was therefore varied to suit the peculiar nature of the case, hence the passage in the text:—"There are seven lands with the Feini—into which cattle are not brought for entry; it is men that are required" (p. 7); and that in the commentary:—"the same number of cattle which is brought to take possession of the other lands is the number of men that shall be brought to take possession of these lands" (p. 9). The two first cases excepted are those in which the entry with horses was absolutely impossible, viz., (1) a dun fort without land, or (2) a church without a green; the four next exceptions are cases in which the horses to be brought upon the land would be exposed to some necessary peril, viz., (3) "a land upon which there are plunderers," which is glossed as meaning a land upon which the cattle have been killed; this is a very ambiguous expression, and may bear two entirely different meanings, according to the reference of the term "plunderers," either the persons in occupation, or to third parties; the general object of the exception is that the claimant should not be obliged to go through the details of the ceremony, if there were reason to anticipate his horses would be injured or stolen; (4) an island into which it would be impossible, without great inconvenience, to bring the horses; (5) land the cattle upon which were suffering from murrain; (6) land the cattle upon which were upon certain contingencies liable to be seized by some local potentate in exercise of some customary right. Two instances of lands of this description are given; the lands of Tir-Mudhain, the cattle upon which were forfeited to the King of Caisel on the day on which he assumed the sovereignty, because the inhabitants of the lands had killed a former King of Caisel; and the lands of Rod-Adamair, the cattle upon which were similarly forfeited to the Coarb of Lismor the day on which he assumed the Abbacy, a custom explained as the reward granted to Saint Mochuta, the founder of Lismor, for having expelled a serpent out of the lands in question. In both these instances the lands were subjected to some curse or penalty, in expiation of the sins of their former owners, and such exceptional rights should not be confounded with any of the feudal incidents; (7) the last excepted case is that of "land which the chief divides after the death of the tenant (occupier), where a hole is made, where a stone is put." It is evident that this passage was ambiguous to the glossists and commentators; the immediate gloss upon the text is perplexed and contradictory; it seems to explain the exception as referring to any proceeding on the part of the chief to re-enter upon a portion of the tribe land (dibadh land), after the death of the member of the tribe to whom it had been allotted, for the purpose of re-distributing it. In a later passage of the text, which occurs in page 21, there are two classes of land excepted in the following words, "except in the case of the lands of Conn Cetcorach, or of land devoted to the support of a mansion which is a Nemeadh-person's," the latter of these exceptions manifestly corresponds with the sixth exception of the passage in the 7th page, and it may be assumed that the former exception, in the latter passage, agrees with seventh exception in the earlier portion of the work; this is rendered certain by the explanation in the gloss that the phrase "Conn Cetcorach's land" denoted some particular portion of the "dibadh" land; the gloss in page 23 explains the exception as referring to a contest between tribesmen upon a re-distribution of the land by the chief, but adds the very difficult passage, "as to the land which is lent or let for rent, it is into it the requisites for taking possession are brought." That the ancient ceremonial should be exclusively (or at all) applicable to lands let upon rents, is highly improbable, and it is in contradiction to the cases of Ninne son of Matech, and Ciannacht, which were evidently considered as leading authorities. The only explanation of the gloss which can be suggested, is that the glossist intended to distinguish the two classes of lands; those held in common by the members of the tribe, and divided and re-divided among them by the chief, to which the entry with horses was not necessary; and those held by members of the tribe in severalty, to which the ceremony was applicable; but that at the date at which the gloss was written the free members of the tribe had been reduced to the position of paying rent to the chief for the land held in severalty, and that thus the payment of rent had become one of the incidents of several ownership.

The claimant having, however symbolically, asserted his claim to possession of the lands in question by a forcible entry, if he failed to sustain his right, became a trespasser ab initio, and was bound to pay damages to the defendant whose occupation he had wrongfully disturbed. Every step in the procedure had to be taken in such a manner that the damages for the entry, if wrongful, were ipso facto secured to the defendant. In the case of a male claimant, every witness, whom he brought with him on each occasion, was to be of an honour price equal to the value of the land. The fine for the entry fell upon the claimant and his witnesses, who, most probably, in the subsequent proceedings testified to the validity of the claim, and it would seem that when the claimant, after the third entry, was put into possession of the lands in question, all the stock and other property brought in by him upon the lands, were charged with the damages ultimately to be found payable to the defendant if the claimant's case failed; and it may be conjectured that in the original form of the action the claimant was bound to put on the land upon the occasion of his third entry stock equivalent to the value of the land; such at least seems to be the passage in the text:—"If there be Fenechus," (submission to arbitration conceded as a customary right), "speedy judgement is passed in his favour. If there be not Fenechus, lawful possession is given; its price is to be offered with sheds, cows, food, habitations, attendance of cattle, except in the case of the land of Conn Cetcorach, or the land devoted to the support of a mansion which is a Nemadh-person's" (p. 21).

The exceptions prove the rule that it was necessary in all other cases to bring in the equivalent in property. If this be correct the analogy to the actio sacramenti in all its essential points is complete; and the property to be placed upon the land represents the subject matter of the symbolic wager. This system of counterclaim was strictly logical, and founded upon the mode in which such transactions were regarded by a tribe in an early stage of civilization. The symbolic act was regarded as a real and bonâ fide transaction, and all the consequences followed from it, which should have followed if the thing dramatically represented had really taken place; the ceremonial was a short-hand mode of writing, but was for all purposes that which it represented. The defendant was forced to arbitration upon the assumption of an actual conflict, arising out of an actual adverse entry; the claimant could not deny the reality of the trespass, which was the basis of his claim to obtain a judicial decision of his rights, and was estopped from traversing this fact when the defendant sought in his turn damages for the wrong symbolically inflicted. Thus, among the Maories, when a man guilty of manslaughter expiated the offence by submitting to the form of being wounded by the avenging kinsman, he was considered as absolutely dead for all purposes; he lost his status as a member of his tribe; his property was divided as if he were actually dead, and he was, as if a stranger, re-introduced into his original tribe by the ceremony of adoption.

The amount of the fine to be paid by the unsuccessful claimant, as may be anticipated, varied, according to the Brehon Law, with reference to the various circumstances of the case. "If the nobles have entered over a full fence, and it is a land which has not a chief and a tribe, it (the fine) is a "Cumhal" and forfeiture of stock. If they have entered over an half-fence it is three-quarters of a "Cumhal," and three-fourths of the stock. If they have entered on land which has not any fence at all, it is half a "Cumhal," half the stock. The stock only is to be divided by the plebeians, and half a "Cumhal" is the fine if it be in Cain-Law.* If it be land that has a chief and a tribe, it is forfeiture of the stock with a "Cumhal" fine, if entrance be made over a full fence, and one half if there be no fence at all; and this is the same with respect to plebeians and nobles" (p. 25).

The peculiar distinction in this passage between land which has a chief and a tribe, and that which has not a chief and a tribe, is worthy of observation. The original translation has in many passages given this meaning to the words in question; it must, however, be confessed that this translation is most unsatisfactory; it implies the existence of extra tribal land, a fact most improbable in a country such as Ireland, in which there was no fringe of unsettled lands between the Celtic occupiers and an anterior defeated population; the whole island was divided into distinct and very well-defined tribe districts; neither between the tribe-marks which must have been everywhere continuous, and still less within their limits, could there have been established independant landholders, disconnected from the prevailing system of society. It is to be observed that the word in these passages translated "tribe" is "coibhne," which is translated "hereditary right" by the same translator in such passages as "land to which he thinks he has an hereditary right" (coibhne); and the word coibhne itself is frequently used as designating a particular class of property in land, coibhne-land as contrasted with dibadh-land.* The term must signify both the nature of the right of an individual to certain landed property of a particular character, and also the land which was itself the subject matter of such a right. In the original text (page 39) the claims of heirs of females are spoken of as affecting "coibhne"-land, and it may be reasonably concluded that the coibhne-lands were those which had been allocated in severalty to distinct families, and were descendable in the families of the original real (or supposed) præpositus. The tribe lands, being those held in common by the members of the tribe, are manifestly described as the dibadh-lands, in which the share of each occupier was for life only. If this conjecture be correct, the passages in question should be translated "Lands which have not an owner in severalty, and hereditary transmission"; coibhne-land would thus be equivalent to the Norse "udal"-land; and the same word when used to express the right of an individual to such land (or his share therein) would correspond to the well known term "udal-recht." If this conjecture be correct, much of the apparent difficulties and contradictions in the text and commentary would be

* Was the forfeiture of the stock absolute in the case of land without a chief or tribe? or did it in this case also depend on the result of the action? Although not without hesitation, we adopt the former theory, viz., that in the case of such lands the stock was absolutely forfeited, because the form of action was inapplicable. That the forfeiture was absolute may be gathered from p. 27, line 24, and p. 31, line 31.

* Cund, or conn, is simply a form of the word meaning "head," and, as applied to an individual, must be a correlative term, indicating the position of the individual specified in relation to one or more others. The idea implied by the word "coibne" is that of the issuing out and interlacing of various branches springing from one common stock, and it thus means an association of persons grouped together with reference to a common right or subject-matter. This is exactly the ancient idea of the ownership of "hereditary" lands, not land in its entirety transmitted from one individual to another, according to certain rules of succession (which is our modern conception of heirship), but land in which all the descendants of the original acquirer jointly take an interest. This coibne property means property held jointly by the acquirer and his descendants. The head of an actual or potential family would be the cund, or conn; and if the family were organized on the geilline system, he would be then identical with the "geilline-flaith." Dibadh property, in its original sense, as contrasted with coibne property, seems to express any property divisible, or to be divided, among several distinct persons. The necessary equivocal use of such terms is hereafter referred to in a subsequent section.

removed. We find in this tract four distinct classes of land to which the prescribed process of formal re-entry is unapplicable, having reference to the nature of the estate in the land, and not to the locality or intrinsic circumstances; the three more important of these are the following; first, the land described in the text at page 7, in the passage above referred to, as "land which the King divides after the death of the tenant, where a hole is made, where a stone is put"; whatever be the precise meaning of the rule, the text refers to dibadh-land redivisible after the death of each occupier; secondly, "the land of Conn Cetcorach", which also is explained to mean debadh-land, and, thirdly, the land which has not "cund" or "coibhne." If the third class of land is simply a negative description of the lands included in the preceding passages, the meaning of all these passages is simple and clear, viz., that the common tribe lands, distributed from time to time among the general members of the tribe for agricultural purposes, and meared by distinct mounds and boundary stones set up by the executive of the tribe, and in which the owner had only transitory interests, were not lands to which the process of recovery of possession by entry was applicable. The fourth excepted class of lands, viz., those subject to the rights of some Nemedh person, are lands upon which the process is rather facilitated than prohibited, in the interest of the claimant. It is a common error to assert that all lands in Ireland under the Brehon Law were held as tribe lands, and that the entire tribe were the owners of the lands comprised in the tribe-district; it is manifest that much land was held in severalty, and upon such terms that individuals had specific rights in distinct lands, either by hereditary descent, or as founded upon contract. It is quite possible that lands should be cut out of the general tribe-land, and become the subject of several ownership and hereditary rights, without their vesting in any individual in absolute property. Portion of the tribe lands may have been acquired by a single family, or by an individual on behalf of himself and his family or possible descendents, and these may have been transmitted by hereditary succession, or sold without any one person acquiring the rights which are implied by the English term in "estate"; lands may be enjoyed in severalty as between the family and the tribe, but jointly as between the members of the family itself. Such were the principles of the Norse udal tenure of land; and some such system of land-holding seems to be the basis of the Celtic Geilfine system, which it is proposed to deal with in the following section.

A curious exception to the necessary formulæ occurs in the case of individuals described as "raitech"-persons. A raitech-person is defined in the commentary as one "who was up to this time (the time of the action) abroad, living apart from the tribe, and who does not know that he has not land, and he comes with his cattle, and his neighbours say the land is his, and judges tell him to go as far as the third of the land" (p. 29).

The raitech was therefore an acknowledged tribesman, who, after long absence returned to his tribe, and, upon the information given to him by members of the tribe, proceeded bond fide to assert his hereditary right to the coibne-lands of his family.

The raitechs were divided into three classes; the two first were the man who had got into failure, and the man who had deserted upon failure; both these classes comprise those who had lost, or failed to obtain, any share in coibne-land, and were so to say "out on the road"; the third class of raitech is defined thus, "The King is called raitech, because he owns his share of waifs of his road, and also from his generosity." (Page 31.) The introduction of the King into the class of broken men is probably due to a fanciful play upon words; it may, however, be observed, that the King, who claimed a share in any coibne-lands in a tribe territory, would probably be resident outside, and would find it difficult to carry out the full ceremonial in the prescribed fashion.

The broken man returning to his tribe would find it impossible to drive his horses upon and off the land in dispute at the proper periods; he had no house or "green" of his own to resort to in the meanwhile ; and what was more important, he was not in himself a security for the damages the occupier could recover, if the claim proved to be groundless. He was therefore permitted to graze his horses upon the lands during the intervals between the entries, paying a fixed price for the grazing ; and, if the case were decided against him, he was allowed three days to clear out, and, subject to the payment of the small damages of three "seds," he was permitted to drive off his beasts (p. 27).

The original text, and the detached instructions in the commentaries, contemplate the use of horses exclusively in the symbolical entry ; and horses appear to have been both the original, and at all times the preferable stock for the purpose. In the gloss an illegal entry is defined as "the bringing illegal means of taking possession into land, i.e., cows after horses when he could find horses," the fine for which was a "cumhal" or forfeiture of stock, or three "seds" ; the glossists are at variance as to the precise amount (p. 33). It is evident that at some period cows were substituted for the horses, which in the original ceremony were indispensable. There appears to have been some distinction, certainly, as to the amount of fines, between the case of an entry to recover possession made by a noble, and one made for a similar purpose by a simple freeman, or plebeian, as it is translated. It may be conjectured that this form of action was, in its origin, confined to the recovery of lands by the patrician or noble class, and that the horses and chariot were the symbol of military possession, as was the lance (at later time represented by the wand) in the case of the Romans ; that a similar form of action was invented for the benefit of the lower orders, and that ultimately the two formulæ were confounded, although it was always understood that the claimant only used cattle instead of horses from necessity, and that he was not at liberty to substitute them for horses "when he could find horses."

The forms of the Brehon procedure for recovering the possession of land ended with the reference of the dispute to arbitration ; the object of the process was that his right at law should be granted to the claimant; that there should be "Fenichus"; the pressure was put upon the defendant that there might be "Fenechus," a proceeding or judgment in accordance with the custom of the tribe. Thus the whole ceremony of the Roman actio ended with the appointment of the judex. The ancient procedure ended precisely at the point where the modern commences. As to what is now considered the essential of an action, the pleadings in court, Gaius dismisses it in very brief terms; "deinde quum ad iudicem venerant, antequam apud eum causam perorarent, solebant breviter ei et quasi per iudicem rem exponere; quæ dicebatur causæ collectio, quasi causæ suæ in breve collectio." (Gaius IV. 15.)

To understand this we require only an account of the mode in which a dispute is decided in an Indian village community. The case is submitted to the entire body of the inhabitants, who represent the original tribe, or family, to the patricians in fact of the small "civitas." The body thus assembled combine in themselves the functions of witnesses, judge, and jury. They include in their number all those who knew the facts of the case, "the respectable men of the neighbourhood," so familiar to us as our ancient form of jury. They themselves are the living testimony as to what is the custom of their community, and this custom they apply to the facts of the case assumed to be within their own knowledge. The villagers talk over the case among themselves, apparently in a very confused manner; separate groups form, who discuss the question in various ways; but at length a result is evolved; there is a general consensus arrived at, and the judgment is given in a purely concrete form. In Mr. Wallace's description of the confused discussion and ultimate result of a meeting of a Russian Mir to assess taxation and divide the village lands, we have a vivid description of the workings of such a primitive assembly. At this stage of civilization it is clear that there was no form of procedure after the submission to arbitration. When the community had grown too large to sit together and decide as one body upon the case, a committee of the entire body would be appointed to hear and decide the dispute. This stage of the judicial development existed among the Icelandic Norse. Of this procedure there are the most detailed accounts in the two trials before the Althings related in the Saga of the Burnt Njal, and before referred to. In these cases it is evident that the defendants were not bound to submit to the jurisdiction, unless the preliminary ceremonies were accurately gone through, and the judges selected in accordance with the custom. Numerous points of the utmost nicety are raised by the defendants to every step of the action, and equally technical replies are made on behalf of the plaintiffs. These very special points of practice are decided by the general assembly, because they were antecedent to the creation of the court. But it is something very foreign to our ideas that the judges, when at last legally appointed, neither hear any speeches from the parties, nor examine witnesses; they retire from the public meeting, talk the matter over, and come to a decision on grounds wholly apart from what we should consider the merits of the case. When a society became numerous, and its customs complicated, the general public naturally felt their own ignorance of the traditional rules by which any cases should be decided, and there arose a necessity for experts who had made the knowledge of the traditional custom their special study. The Icelandic Norse clung tenaciously to the custom of a public assembly, and solved the difficulty by the appointment of the "Speaker of the Laws," who attended the Althing, and was its professional adviser.* The Celtic Irish lost the ancient custom of the

* "In those days there were no books; everything was traditional; the law itself was committed to memory and the custody of faithful lips. Time out of mind there had existed amongst the nations of the north men who, like Ulfgjót, had made the customary law their study, and learned its traditional precepts by heart. There were the lawmen or lawyers (lögmen), a class which we shall still find flourishing in the time of which our Saga tells. They were private persons, invested with no official character, but who enjoyed all the influence which an exclusive knowledge of any one subject, and, most of all, of such a difficult subject as law, must necessarily give to any man in an early state of society. But when general assembly, and the decision of what the local custom was, fell into the hands of the Brehons, the hereditary and professional possessors of the secret of the custom. But the Brehon was not a judge in the modern sense of the term; he represented the assembled tribe, and when he had once got possession of the case there were no sacred formulæ to prescribe the mode in which it should be conducted. It is evident that the reference of the dispute to a single individual, in whatever character he acted, necessarily introduced new elements in the procedure; the court no longer could be held not only to decide upon the law, but also to testify what the actual facts were; hence the introduction of pleadings (causæ collectis), the full statement of the case (peroratio), and the examination of the witnesses, and also the arrangements for the remuneration of the judge. The foundation of the jurisdiction of the Brehon, as simply the professional witness of the local custom applicable to the facts, (and unable to apply to the case, what in English law is termed "equity," the appeal to an over-ruling moral law antecedent to or over-ruling the technical law when it worked injustice,) is illustrated by the rule (page 51), "Constant is every old law of every territory of covenants. When any territory is uncovenanted, it is then every disputed case is brought before the King." By a "territory of covenants" is meant a district in which there was an established custom, supposed to rest upon the "consensus" of the tribe, and which was testified to by the local hereditary Brehon; "territory the Althing was established, we first hear of a law officer properly so-called. This is what we have called the "speaker of the law." His bounden duty it was to recite publicly the whole law within the space to which the tenure of his office was limited. To him all who were in need of a legal opinion, or of information as to what was or was not law, had a right to turn during the meeting of the Althing. To him a sort of presidency or precedence at the Althing was conceded, but with a care which marks how jealously the young Republic guarded itself against bestowing too great power on its chief officer. He was expressly excluded from all share of the executive, and his tenure of office was restricted to three years, though he might be re-elected at the end of the period." Dasent, Burnt Njal, p. lvi.

The judicial power in Iceland was vested in the Court of Laws, composed of the priestly heads of the original families, each with two assessors, whom the official lawyer instructed upon any point of law, if requested to do so.

uncovenanted" is glossed "where the defendant or plaintiff has not a Brehon," that is, when the community has failed to retain a record of their customs by the appointment of the regular witness to the existence and nature in the person of the Brehon; in such a district there was no law to be applied to the question in dispute. In this case therefore the King himself was the judge. From this passage we may infer that at a very early date the general meeting of the tribe, which did continue to meet for some purposes down to a late period, had lost its judicial power, and that the King had acquired the powers and position of the assembly of the tribe, or, which in this case is more probable, there still hung about him certain surviving fragments of his ancient judicial function.

When a professional or hereditary class undertake the duty of recording and transmitting the customs of the tribe, the hitherto indefinite custom, or habit of acting in a particular manner, is necessarily reduced to the form of short rules committed at first to memory, subsequently to writing. Two fragments of these ancient dicta occur in the present tract (p. 39 and p. 45). The difficulty of translating passages of this nature has already been referred to, but, difficult as is the task of translation, more so is the attempt to extract from them and develop at length, the customary rules dimly hinted at, rather than embodied, in the curt and oracular sentences. An attempt is here made by the assistance of the glosses and commentary to express in distinct terms the substances of these passages. The following is submitted to the criticism of the reader by the editors, as a result of such a comparison, but made by those who can claim the possession of no source of information, which is not available to the ordinary student.

(I.)

1. The sons, and, if there are no sons, the daughters of their mother, claim a right to enter upon and take possession of the lands, in respect of which legal contracts for full consideration, and dealing with coibue-land, had been made with their mother, for the geilfine chief, who must for this purpose be one of the geilfine division,* confirms the contract.

2. Brigh made the decision, which fixed the rule of succession to lands in respect of which contracts had been entered into upon the occasion of a woman's marriage.

3. The lands are divisible with reference to the number of the members of the family inclusive of the grandchildren, and the great-grandchildren, but of the land thus divisible is excepted one-seventh, which becomes the property of the geilfine chief. This one-seventh is fixed with reference to the extent of the lands themselves.

4. On the extinction of the class of great-great-grandchildren, their land goes back to the other classes representing the three prior generations; in such case it is divided among the classes representing the three prior generations; on the extinction of the great-great-grandchildren class the other classes of the family became the owners. It is not divided among them in other proportions than the liability for the wrongs done by members of the family; and, therefore, in such a case the class representing the sons gets no more than one-fourth part.

5. When the members of a family exceed seventeen in number, they cease to be organized as a family.

6. The fuidhir-tenants are not subject to any joint liability for wrong committed by their kinsman, unless they form five house-holds of them, completely organized as a family, upon the principle of mutual liability.

7. If the fuidhir tenants consist of five households, organized as a family, under a chief, and having sufficient stock, they divide their property among them, as do the members of the family, and are subject to liability for each other's deeds in the same proportion.

* It is subsequently suggested that the expression, "Unless he be the sixth," may be taken in its literal sense as meaning the sixth head of the family in lineal descent, a construction of the words which, in the view subsequently taken of the geilfine, would be practically equivalent to that in the text.

(II.)

1. A son does not succeed to all the land of his mother, unless he claim it through her by virtue of a marriage contract of which the family had notice (i.e., unless it be "cruibh" or "sliasta" land).

2. (As to lands other than "cruibh" or "sliasta" lands), her sons divide it upon her death, but (they do not succeed to the entire) for one-half reverts to the family of the (her) father; the remaining half only her sons divide.

3. The half, which reverts to the family of the (her) father, the members of that family duly divide among themselves.

4. In the case of a "bo-aire" chief (who dies without leaving a son) there comes to his daughter by right of relationship no more than one-half, i.e., fourteen "cumbhals" of land if the deceased had twenty-eight "cumbhals" of land. The same rule applies to the "bratach" lands of a "bo-aire" chief.

5. Land given by the family to the deceased to be used as a road, upon the terms of his restoring it, is to be restored by his daughter, if she succeed, in its entirety; but she is to be paid by the family upon giving it up, one half the value of it.

Of these rules, those numbered I., 1-5 appear to relate to the mother's cruibh and sliasta lands, and are framed with the view of regulating that succession in accordance with the principles of the geilfine organization, which are subsequently discussed in this Introduction. The rules numbered II., 1-3 deal with the succession to a woman's other than cruibh and sliasta land; and those numbered II. 4 and 5 deal with the succession of a daughter, in default of sons, to her father's land. The very remarkable rules, I. 6 and 7, do not appear to have any immediate connexion with the question of female ownership of land. It would be premature here to consider the meaning and operation of these rules until the nature of the family itself and of the geilfinne system has been to some extent established, and the proposed explanation of the system of descent is, therefore, postponed to a subsequent section.

It remains to draw attention to some isolated rules in the latter portion of this tract as illustrative of the nature and date of the Brehon Law. The first paragraph, to which attention is desired to be drawn, is the case of Seither in the original text (page 17). She claimed as against the chiefs of the tribe, certain lands which they had taken possession of; the glosses explain this by their having erected boundaries, or set up stone landmarks; comparing this with the passage in page 7, where "dibadh" land is described as "the land which the chief divides after the death of the tenant, where an hole is made (or, a mound is raised), where a stone is put," her ground of complaint was that the chief of the tribe had measured off as common tribe property, the land which she claimed in separate ownership. Her father and mother were of different tribes, and her right to the land was established. She then sought that she should not be subjected to the imposts which fell upon the unfree holders of land ("fuidhirs"), nor should she be expelled from the land (put out into the road), for failure to perform the military duties incident to the possession of the land. She was freed from this obligation (of military services) by her tribe, according to the rule "that female possession reverts, i.e., that one-half of the land, which passed to a woman, falls back into the general tribe land, and that in consideration of this the tribe releases the residue during the female owner's life from the duties incident to the possession.* It is clear from this rule that

* These rules, as far as they deal with the succession of women to land, or the succession to the land of women, must be taken to represent the effect of the judgement of Brigh which established the rights of women.

The rule that women, as being incapable to do military service, should forfeit one half of the inheritance, could be introduced only after a date at which the military incapacity of women was an acknowledged fact.

This would bring down the alteration of the law of succession in the favour of women to a date subsequent to the year 697. "Connected with Adamnan's journey to Ireland in 697, the Annals record a transaction, which they despatch with enigmatic brevity: Dedit legem innocentium populis. In other words, they allude to a social reformation, which was brought about by Adamnan, and which, having obtained the highest sanction of the people, became, as in the case of many modern Acts of Parliament, associated with the name of the propounder. A synod was convened at Tara, within an enclosure called the Rath-na-Senadh, or "Rath of the possession of any portion of the tribe land entailed the duty of military service; but that this was an incident to the possession of land by a free member of the tribe (as the "trinoda necessities" of the early English Law), not a feudal service due to the chief of the tribe. The contradictory glosses upon this passage prove that the commentators were unable to explain the point of the division, and that the condition of society had then materially changed since the date of the original text. The note to this passage, printed at the foot of page 17, shows how the later commentators had lost the correct traditions of the law, and preferred the display of a scrap to genealogical information the Synods," where the memory of the chief actor was perpetuated in the name Fupall Adhamhnain, or "Pavillion of Adamnan," which was given to a portion of the space; also in the Suidhe Adhamhnain, or Adamnan's chair; the Dumha Adhamhnain, or Adamnan's mound; and the Cros Adhamhnain, or Adamnan's cross, situated at the east of the Rath. This moynonl, or "convention general," was held, as a semi-legendary record states, at the instance of Adamnan, for the purpose of procuring a national enactment exempting women from war and expeditions." "Reeve's Life of St. Columba," p. 1.

In relation to this law the following passage occurs in the "Vision of Adamnan," which is preserved in the "Leabhar Breac":—"It was this precept, too, which was preached in the great convention of the men of Erin, when Adamnan's rule was put on the Gaedhil, and when women were made free by Adamnan, and Finachta Fledach, son of Dunchadh, son of Aine Slaine, the King of Erin, and by the men of Erin also. For it was alike that men and women went into battle, and into conflicts, until the Rule of Adamnan was imposed."

"It is to be regretted that we have not a more historical account of the institution of this law than the following, which is taken from the Leabhar Breac and Book of Lecan:—"Adamnan happened to be travelling one day through the plain of Bregia with his mother on his back, when they saw two armies engaged in mutual conflict. It happened then that Ronait, the mother of Adamnan, observed a woman, with an iron reaping-hook in her hand, dragging another woman out of the opposite battalion, with the hook fastened in one of her breasts; for men and women went equally to battle at that time. After this Ronait sat down, and said, 'Thou shalt not take me from this spot until thou exemptest women for ever from being in this condition, and from excursions and hostings. Adamnan then promised that thing. There happened afterwards a convention (moynonl) in Ireland, and Adamnan, with the principal part of the clergy of Ireland, went to that assembly, and he exempted women at it." (Petrie's Tara, p. 147.) Reeves' Life of St. Adamnan, p. 179, note. It seems that Adamnan took occasion of a great religious revival to ameliorate the condition of the Celtic woman, and that the reform thus effected was considered as one of the great events, as it undoubtedly was, in early Irish history. The celebrated judgment of Brigh, certainly the rules embodied in this tract, cannot have been of an earlier date.

to the intelligible explanation of their text. Evidently for the purpose of getting in the names of her brothers, it is stated that she claimed against her brothers; the author of this cannot have understood the first line of the original text which is very clearly explained in the gloss; and the possibility of an adverse claim by a sister against brothers in respect of land derived either through the maternal or paternal side, is absolutely at variance with the express rule laid down in the commentary, page 15, line 33.

When the authentic tradition of the custom was once affected by the changes in the existing modes of life and dealing with property which must have arisen from the political convulsions to which the Irish Celtic nation was subjected during the historic period, the Brehon lawyers had no definite and abstract legal principles to guide them, and the analogies which they may have discovered in the Ecclesiastical and English systems, with which they came in contact must have been essentially misleading. There is, therefore, no reason to doubt the fact, which is patent upon the face of their writings, that the Brehon lawyers found much difficulty in dealing with the ancient texts, and have annexed to them the most varying and contradictory explanations.

In most early customary laws the validity of any transaction usually depended upon the performance of some prescribed mode of stipulation; the following passages are, therefore, worthy of notice as indicative of a very modern and equitable mode of viewing the essence of the transfer of property: "(As to) the person who buys without stealing or concealment, with purity of conscience, it (the subject matter of the purchase) is his lawful property, according to God and man; if his conscience is free, his soul is free."* There is in this passage an assertion of the doctrine of a purchase for valuable consideration without notice, and the title of the purchaser is referred to his moral condition at the date of purchase, not to the fulfilment of the requisite ceremony of purchase. The same idea is evident in the following passage, also: "Except the covenants which are forbidden by the Feini, nothing is due without deserving it, for every contract, which is unsafe, is entitled after nuptial present according to the Brehon, except in case of poverty, or prohibition, or want of power."*

* Page 33.

In this passage there are involved the doctrines of consideration as the necessary basis for a contract, of purchase for valuable consideration and part performance, and of the rescission of the contract by an inequality in the condition of the parties which in equity would now cause an agreement to be set aside, or specific performance to be refused. In the latter portion of this paragraph "poverty" must mean such pressure of poverty upon one of the contracting parties as would prevent his acting as a perfectly free agent; and "prohibition," according to the gloss, the fact of notice affecting the purchaser that the vendor has no equitable title; "want of power" is explained as duress, or influence of a moral or immoral character.

There are other passages in this tract which lay down in a direct manner the ancient theory of society that the individual exists only as a member of some recognised community and therefore that his contracts are always subject to rescission by the head of the community to which he belongs. "There are four covenants which are not binding, though they (the parties) are proceeded against; that of a bondman with his chief; of a son with his father; of a monk with his abbot; of an "ulach" person with another if alone. For the chief, and the tribe, and the church may redeem (rescind) every good contract, and every bad contract which are made with their subjects, except what they themselves order them; for these are the three defective covenants mentioned by the Feini; the covenant with the subject of a church; the covenant of a servitor of a chief; a covenant with fugitives from a tribe."† The principle here laid down is clear and distinct, but even at the date of the original text it had become modified by the application of equitable principles, for the passage concludes thus: "They are bound not to be remiss about covenants, because if they should be remiss about covenants, then they do not annul the covenants of their subjects," which is an application to the case of the equitable doctrine of laches.

* Page 59.

† Page 55. This statement, or one almost identical, is frequently repeated in the Brehon Law Tracts.

This passage is followed by a very obscure paragraph dealing with what are styled "ternal covenants," not agreements in our sense of the word but the legal results arising from the acts or omission of three persons in a certain relation. It is suggested that the passage may be illustrated thus ; A contracts with B that the latter should do something affecting C, or which C may forbid to be done, and C having notice of the transaction does not interfere ; and thereupon by reason of C's omission to do so the contract becomes binding upon him. This principle, (if our explanation of the passage is correct), is an excellent example of the equitable doctrine of "acquiescence."

The latter portion of this tract must be considered as a mere common place book of some Brehon, who wrote out in the blank pages which followed the first part, a number of independent dicta, as he learnt them, or as they occurred to his memory ; very few of these rules have any connection with the subject-matter of the original work ; there is little, if any, sequence of thought, and they manifestly are of very different origin in point of date ; this latter portion is however valuable both on account of the very ancient rules as to the succession to land which are here preserved, and as illustrating the extent to which the ancient law was modified by equitable principles, a result doubtless attributable to the indirect influence of the civil law.*

* "They speak Latin like a vulgar language, learned in their common schools of leachcraft and law, whereat they begin children and hold on sixteen or twenty years, conning by rote the aphorisms of Hippocrates and the Civil Institutes, and a few other parings of these two faculties. I have seen them where they kept school, ten in some one chamber, grovelling upon couches of straw, their books at their noses, themselves lying prostrate, and so to chant out their lessons by piece-meal, being the most part lusty fellows of twenty-five years and upwards." Edd. "Campion's account of Ireland," page 18 (A.D. 1571).

Mr. Prendergast goes so far as to speak of the Brehon as giving "his judgment according to the Brehon Code, formed partly of Irish customs, and partly of maxims culled from the Roman Digest." (The Cromwellian Settlement, 2nd edition, p. 15.) This is an exaggeration, fortunately for the antiquarian value of the Brehon Law Tracts.

III.

THE "FINE" AND THE "GEILFINE" SYSTEM.*

In all the Brehon Law Tracts there are references to an existing organization, generally known as the Geilfine system, and to the four classes designated as the Geilfine, Deirbhfine, Iarfine, and Indfine.† No distinct explanation of the system is anywhere given by the writers of these tracts, but it is everywhere assumed as existing, and of so well-known and notorious a character that it did not seem to our authors necessary to state its details or to lay down the rules by which it was governed. That it was familiar, or assumed to be familiar, to the students of these works is proved by the figurative use of the terms primarily indicating the members of this system as indicating certain definite relations of place; remarkable passages of this nature occur in the "Bee-Judgments"‡ and the "Right to Water."§ It is obviously impossible to understand the scope or meaning of many of the rules contained in the original text, or of passages in the commentary, without forming some clear conception of this peculiar organization of individuals assumed throughout, as pre-existing, and endeavouring to define the technical terms connected with this system, which so often occurs, used sometimes in a primary, and sometimes in a secondary sense. In the Book of Aicill, published in the last volume of the Brehon laws, there occurred a very remarkable passage, explanatory of the mode in which property was divisible among the members of a family in

* It was originally intended to have devoted a separate section of the Introduction to each of the Tracts contained in this volume; it was, however, discovered in the progress of the work, that owing to the identity of the questions which arose in certain of these Tracts, it was impossible to adopt this course without much repetition of previous statements, or an embarrassing amount of cross references. The sections III., IV., and V. of the Introduction are designed as dealing with the questions which arise upon the Tracts entitled "Of the Judgments of every Crime, &c.," "The Land is forfeited for Crimes," and "The Divisions of the Tribe of a Territory," and also with the rules of succession contained in the first Tract in the volume. The consideration of the remaining Tracts has been necessarily postponed until after the discussion of the question of the "geilfine" system.

† This word sometimes appears as "Innfine" or "Finnfine."

‡ p. 173.

§ p. 207.

accordance with the rules of the Geilfine system,* and an attempt was made in the Introduction to that volume, to explain the rules laid down upon this subject in the commentary upon the Book of Aicill.† The explanation given by the editors of the preceeding volume of the passage, with which they were immediately dealing, has been to that extent admitted to be correct by the various authors, who have, since the date of the publication of the last volume, written upon the subject; and before any attempt to draw further deductions from the additional information, which is afforded by the law tracts now for the first time published, it may not be inexpedient to reprint the passage in the previous introduction dealing specially with this subject.

“The most remarkable custom described in the Book of Aicill is the fourfold distribution of the family into the ‘geilfine,’ ‘deirbh-fine,’ ‘iarfine,’ and ‘indfine’ divisions. From both the text and the commentary it appears that the object of the institution did not extend further than the regulation of the distribution of their property. Within the family seventeen members were organized in four divisions, of which the junior class, known as the ‘geilfine’-division, consisted of five persons; the ‘deirbhfine’ the second in order, the ‘iarfine’ the third in order, and the ‘indfine’ the senior of all, consisted respectively of four persons. The whole organization consisted, and could only consist of seventeen members. If any person was born into the ‘geilfine’-division its eldest member was promoted into the ‘deirbhfine’; the eldest member of the ‘deirbhfine’ passed into the ‘iarfine’; the eldest member of the ‘iarfine’ moved into the ‘indfine’; and the eldest member of the ‘indfine’ passed out of the organization altogether. It would appear that this transition from a lower to a higher grade took place upon the introduction of a new member into the ‘geilfine’-division, and therefore depended upon the introduction of new members, not upon the death of the seniors. The property held by any class, or by its members as such, must have been held for the benefit of the survivors or survivor of that class; but, upon the extinction of a class, the property of the class or of its members as such passed to the surviving classes or class according to special and very technical rules.

“On the failure of the ‘geilfine’-class, three-fourths of its pro-

* p. 330.

† p. cxxxix.

perty passed to the 'deirbhfine,' three-sixteenths to the 'iarfine,' and one-sixteenth to the 'indfine'-class.

"On the failure of the 'deirbhfine'-class, three-fourths of its property passed to the 'geilfine,' three-sixteenths to the 'iarfine,' and one-sixteenth to the 'indfine.'

"On failure of the 'iarfine'-class three-fourths of its property passed to the 'deirbhfine,' three-sixteenths to the 'geilfine,' and one-sixteenth to the 'indfine.'

"On failure of the 'indfine,' three-fourths of its property passed to the 'iarfine,' three-sixteenths to the 'deirbhfine,' and one-sixteenth to the 'geilfine.'

"On failure of the 'geilfine' and 'deirbhfine'-classes, three-fourths of their property passed to the 'iarfine,' and one-fourth to the 'indfine.'

"On failure of the 'indfine' and 'iarfine,' three-fourths of their property passed to the 'deirbhfine,' and one-fourth to the 'geilfine.'

"On failure of the 'deirbhfine' and 'iarfine'-classes, three-fourths of their property passed to the 'geilfine,' and one-fourth to the 'indfine.'

"On failure of the 'geilfine' and 'indfine,' three-fourths of the property of the 'geilfine' passed to the 'deirbhfine' and one-fourth to the 'iarfine'; and of the property of the 'indfine,' one-fourth passed to the 'iarfine,' and one-fourth to the 'deirbhfine.'

"Two possible combinations of two extinct classes, viz.:—the 'geilfine' and 'iarfine,' and the 'deirbhfine' and 'indfine,' are omitted from the commentary. It would appear that upon the failure of any two classes the whole organization required to be completed by the introduction of a sufficient number into the 'geilfine'-class and by promotion carried on through all the classes upwards; and if there were not forthcoming sufficient persons to complete the organization there was no partition among the surviving two classes, but the property went as if the deceased were not members of an organization at all. The rules as to the distribution of property upon the extinction of any one class or of any two classes may be understood from the annexed diagram.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	(9)	(10)
Indfine, .	16	1	1	1	0	8	0	8	0	4 4
Iarfine, .	16	3	3	0	12	24	0	0	4 12	12 12
Deirbhfine, .	16	12	0	12	3	0	24	0	12 4	0 0
Geilfine, .	16	0	12	3	1	0	8	24	0 4	12 0

The rule upon which the distribution of the property of such an organization depends appears clearly from the above diagram.

Let it be assumed that each class possesses property represented by the figure 16. The class or classes extinct are denoted in the subsequent columns by a cypher, and the distribution of the property of the extinct class or classes is indicated by the numbers set opposite the names of the surviving classes. Three-fourths of the property of any extinct class pass to the next junior class, and in default of any junior surviving class, to the next senior class. The remaining one-fourth is treated in the same manner. If, exclusive of the class which has received its share, there remains but one class, the residue passes to that class, but if two classes survive, three-fourths of the residue pass to the next junior class, and, in default of such class, to the next senior class; and the residue, one-fourth of a fourth, or one-sixteenth of the entire, goes to the remaining class. If two classes become extinct, the property of each is distributed according to this rule, in which case, if the two classes which become extinct are next to each other, the distribution of the property of both is identically the same; but if the extinct classes are not next to each other, the property of each is distributed to the remaining classes in varying proportions. It is evident from the commentary that the original principle, however it arose, had been forgotten, so that the distribution contained in column 8 of the above diagram is very awkwardly expressed, and the cases in columns 9 and 10 are altogether omitted. The meaning of this very artificial arrangement appears from the following passage:—‘If the father is alive and has two sons, and each of those sons has a family of the full number—i.e., four—it is the opinion of lawyers that the father would claim a man's share in every family of them, and that in this case they form two ‘geilfine’-divisions. And if the property has come from another place, from a family outside, though there should be within in the family a son or a brother of the person whose property came into it, he shall not obtain it any more than any other man of the family.’ From this it appears that the whole organization existed within the family, and consisted of the actual descendants of a male member of the family, who himself continued in the power of the head of the family. As soon as a son of the house had himself four children, he and his four children formed a ‘geilfine’-class, and each succeeding descendant up to the number of seventeen was introduced into the artificial body. The entire property exclusively belonging to this family within a family was confined to the members of the organization until the number exceeded seventeen, when the senior member lost his rights to the separate estate, retaining those which he possessed in the original family.

"This arrangement must be regarded as an invasion of the archaic form of the family, and an introduction pro tanto of the idea of separate property. How or when the system arose we have no information, but arrangements equally complicated have been elaborated in the evolution of customary law.

"If it be admitted that the parent and his first four children (or sons) form the original 'geilfine'-class, it may be conjectured that the term 'geilfine'-chief, so often occurring in the Brehon law, indicates a son of the head of the family, who has himself begotten four children (or sons), and thus founded as it were a family within a family; and further, that, as upon the death of the head of a family each of his sons would become the head of a new family, the 'geilfine'-relationship in such an event would disappear, and its members would resolve themselves into a family organized in the normal manner. It may be conjectured that the parent always continued in the 'geilfine'-class, and that therefore it contained five members, although the other classes comprised four only, and that hence was derived the peculiar title of 'geilfine'-chief."

In this passage the system was accepted as a very singular institution, regulating the distribution of the property of a family; no attempt was made to account for the existence of rules so unusual, although it is obvious, that the mere existence of rules so complicated and in themselves so unreasonable must be referable to some anterior social system, as is the case with the rules of the English law dealing with the succession of real estate. Three distinct theories as to the origin and working of this system have been published since the date of the last volume of the Brehon Law Tracts, by Sir H. S. Maine in his Lectures on the Early History of Institutions; by Dr. W. K. Sullivan in his introduction to the Lectures of the late Eugene O'Curry; and by Mr. J. F. McLennan in an appendix annexed to the last edition of his work upon Primitive Marriage, and entitled the "Divisions of the Ancient Irish Family."

So numerous and important are the references to the Geilfine system in the tracts comprised in the present volume, so radically does this system underlie the organization of the family, and the succession to land, to illustrate which, the majority of the tracts now published have been specially selected, that it may not be considered an abuse of the restricted duties of an editor to explain the views upon this subject put forward upon such distinguished authority, and to state the objections to the reception of any of them in its integrity, before an attempt is made to propound a theory of the origin and working of the system, wholly deduced from the Brehon Law Tracts themselves, and which, although not in itself to be assumed as correct, as no modern explanation of so archæic an institution could claim to be, is at least consistent with the authorities and in itself; and affords a key to the rules as to the succession to land, scattered throughout the present volume.

The views of Sir H. S. Maine upon this subject are clearly put forward by him in the following passages selected from his work :

“Any member of the joint-family, or sept, might be selected as the starting point, and might become a root from which sprang as many of these groups of seventeen men as he had sons. As soon as any one of the sons had four children, a full Geilfine sub-group of five persons was formed; but any fresh birth of a male child to this son or to any of his male descendants, had the effect of sending up the eldest member of the Geilfine sub-group, provided always he were not the person from whom it had sprung, into the Derbhfine. A succession of such births completed in time the Derbhfine division, and went in to form the Iarfine, and the Indfine, the After and the End-families. The essential principle of the system seems to me a distribution into fours. The fifth person in the Geilfine division, I take to be the parent from whom the sixteen descendants spring, and it will be seen, from the proviso which I inserted above, that I do not consider his place in the organization to have been ever changed. He appears to be referred to in the tracts as the Geilfine chief.*

“The Irish family is assumed to consist of three groups of four persons, and one group of five persons. I have already stated that I consider the fifth person in the group of five, to be the parent from whom all the other members of the four divisions spring, or with whom they are connected by adoptive descent. Thus the whole of the natural or adoptive descendants are distributed into four groups of four persons each, their rank in the Family being in the inverse order of their seniority. The Geilfine group is several times stated in the Brehon Law to be at once the highest and the youngest.

* Early History of Institutions, p. 210..

"Now Mr. W. Stokes has conveyed to me his opinion that 'Geilfine' means 'hand-family.' As I have reason to believe that a different version of the term has been adopted by eminent authority I will give the reasons for Mr. Stokes' view. 'Gil' means 'hand'—this was also the rendering of O'Curry—and it is in fact the Greek χείρ. In several Aryan languages the term signifying 'hand' is an expressive equivalent for power, and specially for Family or Patriarchal Power. Thus in Greek we have ὑποχέριος and χέρης, for the person under the hand. In Latin we have herus 'master,' from an old word cognate to χείρ; we have also one of the earliest cardinal terms of ancient Roman Family Law, manus, or hand, in the sense of Patriarchal authority. In Roman legal phraseology the wife who has become in law her husband's daughter by marriage is in manu. The son discharged from Parental Power is emancipated. The free person who has undergone manumission is in mancipio. In the Celtic languages we have, with other words, 'Gilla,' a servant, a word familiar to sportsmen and travellers in the Highlands, and to readers of Scott in its Anglicised shape 'Gillie.'

"My suggestion, then, is that the key to the Irish distribution of the Family, as to so many other things in ancient law must be sought in the Patria Potestas.* It seems to me to be founded on the order of emancipation from Parental

* The use by Sir H. S. Maine of the term "patria potestas" is very infelicitous as basing his theory upon a doctrine of the Roman Law, which their own lawyers admitted to be peculiar and exceptional. The more general term "headship of the joint house" may, however, be substituted for it without injury to the argument.

Authority. The Geilfine, the Hand-family, consists of the parent and the four natural or adoptive sons immediately under his power. The other groups consist of emancipated descendants, diminishing in dignity, in proportion to their distance from the group, which according to archæic notions, constitutes the true or representative family.

"The remains, which we possess, of the oldest Roman Law point to a range of ideas very similiar to that which appears to have produced the Irish Institution. The family under the Patria Potestas was, with the Paterfamilias, the true Roman Family. The children who were emancipated from Paternal Power may have gained a practical advantage, but they undoubtedly lost in theoretical dignity. They underwent that loss of status which in ancient legal phraseology was called a capitis diminuto. We know too that according to primitive Roman law they lost all rights of inheritance, and these were only gradually restored to them by a relatively modern institution, the equity of the Roman Prætor. Nevertheless there are hints on all sides, that, as a general rule, sons as they advanced in years were enfranchised from Paternal Power, and no doubt this practice supplies a partial explanation of the durability of the Patria Potestas as a Roman Institution. The statements therefore which we find concerning the Celtic Family would not be very untrue of the Roman. The youngest children were first in dignity."*

The entire geilfine system rests according to this view upon the patria potestas of the original progenitor without any reference to common property; the members are those up to the number of sixteen, who are the subject of the patria potestas, whether sons or remoter descendants, either by actual descent or adoption, and irrespective of age or the possession of property. It may be inferred that in Sir H. S. Maine's opinion the existence of the common ancestor is essential for the maintenance of the system, and that he regards all the members as living at the same time.

The theory of Dr. W. K. Sullivan is very different, and is contained in the following passage of his work :

* Id., p. 216.

"The whole Fine Duthaig included several stages of consanguinity;—(1) the Cindfine or children the sons having the foreright;—(2) the Bruindfine, from bruind, the womb, the sons and daughters of heiresses or daughters of the Gradh Fine, or nobility inheriting property in their own right; (3) the Gelfine, which seems to have been sometimes used for all relatives to the fifth degree, and sometimes for the relatives to the fifth degree exclusive of the direct heirs. These constituted the family in the strict sense of the word. From the gelfine branched off, (4) the Derbfine, which included relatives from the fifth to the ninth degree; (5) the Iarfine, or relatives from the ninth to the thirteenth degree; and (6) the Indfine, or relatives from the thirteenth to the seventeenth degree. Beyond the latter degree, the Fine merged into a Duthaig Daine, that is, the nation at large, who were not entitled to a share of the Dibad, or property of deceased persons, or liable for the payment of fines or amercements on account of crimes, etc., except those of their own special Fine, within the recognised degrees of consanguinity. The Gelfine were the representatives of the rights and liabilities of the family or house; they formed a kind of family council styled Cuicer na Fine, or the five Gials, or pledges of the family. As they represented the roots of the spreading branches of the family, they were also called the cuic mera na Fine, or the five fingers of the Fine. When property, in default of direct heirs, passed to collateral heirs, the Gelfine received the inheritance in the first instance, and assumed all the responsibilities attached to it. In default of relatives of the fifth degree, the property passed to the representatives of the other Fines."*

This opinion of Dr. W. K. Sullivan has been adopted by Mr. W. E. Hearn, who after citing the Welsh rule of inheritance, viz., "The ancestors of a person are his father, and his grandfather, and his great grandfather; the co-inheritors are his brothers, and cousins, and second cousins,"† proceeds thus: "We may observe, I think, a similar case in the difficult case of the Irish Fine. The ingenuity of the Brehon professors multiplied distinctions which are not found in the laws of other countries, and it is not easy distinctly to understand their writings on this subject. I venture however to suggest that 'Fine,' like Familia, was used in various senses, and included both the more limited and wider bodies; that of the six kinds of Fine enumerated in the Brehon Laws, the first three include the Sui heredes and Agnati, and that the remaining three are subdivisions, how far practically important we cannot tell, of the Gentiles. The Geil-fine included the fifth descent, which, if the Ego were not counted, brings us to the sixth descent as in other cases. The other three Fines taken together, extend to the seventeenth degree, at which point all traces of kinship are assumed to be lost."*

* Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish, Vol. I., p. clxiii.

† Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. II., p. 427.

If this view be correct the Geilfine system is simply a mode of calculating kinship; the Geilfine has no existence as a social entity; the particular Fine in which any individual should be classed depends altogether upon the person, who is assumed as the stirps; it would also seem that the five members of the Geilfine class, and the four members of the other three classes are not considered by these authors as "individuals" but as successive generations, and that the original ancestor is altogether excluded; and it also must manifestly follow that the members of the four classes could not possibly co-exist.†

* The Aryan Household, p. 173.

† Authors, who speak of property as being divisible among relations in the seventeenth degree, cannot have considered the difficulty, or impossibility of ascertaining kinships so remote, or the consequences which would probably result could all the relatives of this remote degree be once ascertained. It would be necessary, for such purpose, to trace up seventeen male descents for the purpose of discovering the stirps, and in the second place to complete the requisite genealogical table of all the male descendants of the stirps throughout seventeen generations downwards. The stirps, upon the ordinary average of human life, must have been dead upwards of 500 years, and there is no existing noble or royal family in which this inquiry could be attempted with any prospect of success.

Thus the relatives in the seventeenth degree of the Count de Chambord include all the descendants of Louis, the first Duke of Bourbon, son of Robert of Clarmont, and grandson of Saint Louis, who died in A.D. 1341. Those of the present

The theory of Mr. McLennan upon this subject is different in every respect from those of Sir H. S. Maine and Dr. W. K. Sullivan. The two cardinal assumptions upon which he proceeds are, (1) that the terms geilfine, derbhfine, iarfine and indfine are correlative, and that, therefore, the four classes of the system must exist from the inception; (2) that the arrangement was founded upon the possession, and intimately connected with the distribution of property; (3) and that the members of the groups included only certain of the members of the family.

The geilfine system according to this view originated in the existence of four persons, related in the same degree to the original stirps; each of whom was the primary member of one of the four classes, and as a necessary result the Father or stirps was excluded from the organization, and the subsequent members of each class were the lineal descendants of the original member of that class.

"If we conceive one of the organizations, initiated as in the case pronounced upon by the lawyers, to be completed (1) through the death of the Father, and his two sons leaving a set of four grandsons in their places, each as the eldest member of his division; and (2) through the filling up of the divisions by the birth of descendants to the several grandsons, the following table will then represent the organization:—

Indfine.	Iarfine.	Deirbhfine	Geilfine.
A ¹	A ²	A ³	A ⁴	Fathers and Brothers.
B ¹	B ²	B ³	B ⁴	Sons and First Consins.
C ¹	C ²	C ³	C ⁴	Grandsons and Second Consins.
D ¹	D ²	D ³	D ⁴	Great Grandsons and Third Cousins.
--	--	--	E ⁴	Great great Grandsons.

German Emperor include all the descendants of Frederick IV., Burggraf of Nurnberg, who died in 1332. As to their probable number when discovered, it is a matter of geometrical progression. If we consult the pedigree of David it will appear that, as seventeenth in descent from Reu, he counted among his relatives within the seventeenth degree the entire nations of the Jews, Edomites, Ishmaelites, Moabites, Ammonites, Midianites, and several others.

"The seniors of the division are A^1 , A^2 , &c., the brothers who constituted the 'family of the full number, i.e., four'; and the other men in the divisions along with them respectively, are their first-born sons, grandsons, &c. A^1 is the eldest of the four brothers, A^2 the next eldest, and A^4 is the youngest. The following features of the system now become intelligible:—

"1. It is at once obvious why it is said the geilfine division is the youngest, and the indfine division is the oldest.

"2. We can see a reason why, as a rule, there should be four men only in a division, and why there should be a fifth man in the geilfine division. The age of marriage among the ancient Irish was seventeen years—the age for finishing fosterage. Thus A^1 would be at least fifty-four years old before his great grandson D^1 would be born; he would be between eighty and ninety years old before E^4 could have a son; which would be the signal to A^1 to 'go out of the community.' As a rule then, there could be only four generations of men in existence at a time, and represented in the divisions. The fifth man, or rather boy, in the geilfine division must have been added to postpone the going out 'into the community' of the senior of the indfine. When he went out, he became, as we shall see, a pensioner on his division, and were he to go out when E^4 was born, he might be a charge on that division for a term of years. Before E^4 could have a son, however, A^1 would be a very old man. Indeed, the 'going out' must have been rare. The law, however, provided for it, as it did for the divisions not being full, and even for their becoming extinct. Whatever the purposes of the organization were, the existence of the whole number of the seventeen men was not essential to them, and in the eye of the law a division existed so long as there was one man in it (Senchus Mor, Vol. III., p. 333).

"3. So far as the organization was an artificial institution, it may have been a sufficient reason for limiting the number of divisions to four, that there were four men only in a division. More probably the reason was that four was, on the average, the full number of sons in a family.

"4. We have a clue to the 'self-acting principle,' as Sir Henry S. Maine aptly calls it, according to which the oldest member of each division passed into the next, on a new man 'coming up' into the geilfine division. Among the Irish the next brother, or other nearest male agnate next in seniority to a deceased chief, succeeded to the chieftaincy in preference to a son. We can, therefore, understand how they should provide for the succession of brother to brother, in order of seniority, in the headships of divisions; and failing brothers for the succession of cousin to cousin (of the same class) in order of seniority. It accords with this succession law that when A¹ 'went out,' A² should succeed to him as head of the indfine division, that A³ should succeed A² as head of the iarfine, and A⁴ succeed A³ as head of the derbhfine. But we saw that before A¹ went out he would be very old. Before another 'going out' could occur through the birth of a grandson to E⁴ the brothers would certainly be all dead, and the first cousins, B¹, &c., would be the heads of divisions. It would be next B¹'s turn to go out, and he would be succeeded in the headship of the indfine division by B² as the cousin next in seniority; and B² being succeeded by B³, and B³ by B⁴ all the seniors would be promoted as before. By the fourth occurrence of such an occasion it would be D¹'s turn to go out; if, indeed, before then the organization had not collapsed through the extinction of divisions and want of men to reform them."*

In a subsequent passage Mr. McLennan explains the mode in which this system would work as a quasi-entail of the family lands. "The most simple way of regarding the rules established for the fourfold organization, in order to see how they operated as a succession law, is to conceive it to be started by four brothers, A¹, A², &c., on the death of their father, leaving to them ancestral lands, which had come to him as next-of-kin, and which, at common law, they were entitled to divide equally between them. Thus regarded, the arrangement operated, in the first instance, as a settlement of the respective shares of the brothers on their heirs of line, the survivors, or survivor of them, as far as great grandsons. When a son B appeared, A shared the division lands with him; when a grandson appeared, they were shared again between the father, son, and grandson; and they were finally redistributed on the appearance of a great grandson. After this there were redivisions as the men in turn died, till, they all being dead, the land was shared in the proportions specified between the remaining divisions. The chief peculiarities of the system, it will be seen, are (1) that it stopped succession in the direct line, except in the geilfine division at great grandsons; (2) that the principle of primogeniture appears in the formation of the groups of co-inheritors and parceners; and (3) that a life-tenancy only was given to any heir. To comprehend the working of the system, we must think of the four brothers as having one or more brothers who shared with them the lands on the death of their father, but remained outside the organization. These, I conceive, were the men of the family with their descendants, or whose descendants, if they were dead, might, on the extinction of one or more divisions, enter the organization by forming new divisions. If the indfine, for example, became extinct, the iarfine would become the indfine in the reformed organization, the deirbfine, the iarfine, the geilfine, dropping the odd man, would become the deirbfine, and the next eldest brother to A⁴, with his descendants, would become the new geilfine division. The new divisions would enter with a share of the ancestral lands equal to that possessed by the others, except so far as the others had their shares increased by the distribution between them of the lands of the indfine. And thus the organization would continue, confining the lands to great grandsons, till it collapsed through the extinction of two of the lines and the failure of men of the family to reform it. The succession law acting no longer, the lands of the extinct groups would then go to the next-of-kin, and be subject to the common law of succession, whatever that was, till the lands were again resettled by the formation of a divisional organization.”*

* Primitive Marriage, 2nd edition, page 472.

It is to be observed that Mr. McLennan clearly distin-

* Primitive Marriage, 2nd edition, page 496. It is to be observed that the technical terms used are those of Scotch, not of English, law.

guishes between the actual existing form of any legal organization, and the legal theory by which such form is determined. He does not assert that the Irish 'fine,' as a rule, was organized as a complete geilfine system, but proposes his theory as the abstract system of the Brehon lawyers, upon which, under certain circumstances, the 'fine' would be organized so far as it went, and which it should assume if fully developed. The English lawyer knows that the abstract and complete form of the English manor is as purely ideal as any Platonic archetype, but that the existing manors do, as far as circumstances admit, present more or less resemblance, and approach more or less nearly, to the theoretical manor described in our Real Property text books. Mr. M'Lennan's scheme however involves difficulties which he has wholly failed to explain. Why should the ordinary rules for the succession to land be suddenly arrested upon the birth of a fourth son, and the shares of the several sons thereupon pass in strict entail for three generations according to the law of primogeniture? Why should the succession in the case of the geilfine division be extended to one generation further than in the case of the other classes? and why should the head of the indfine division remain in the system, although he had himself a descendant in the fourth degree, but "go out" upon the birth of a descendant of his youngest brother in the same degree? Mr. M'Lennan assumes the four members of each class to have held the original share of the first member of that division, as joint tenants; and if so the following questions must at once arise. If A¹ goes out and A² must thereupon cease to be head of the iarfine division and succeed A¹ as head of the indfine, and A³ pass similarly from the deibhfine to the iarfine, and A⁴ from the geilfine to derbhfine, does A² cease to be a joint tenant of his own original share with B², C², and D², and become a joint tenant of the original share of A¹ jointly with B¹, C¹, and D¹, and is this process repeated in the other classes, so as to leave the four junior members of the geilfine class sole tenants of the original share of A⁴? and further if, upon the entire extinction of the indfine class, the geilfine class become in the "formation of new divisions" the derbhfine class, how is the fifth man of the geilfine class got rid of? Mr. M'Lennan simply says that in this case the geilfine division drops the fifth man, but we must confess that such exclusion appears to us as inexplicable as his original inclusion.

In dealing with a question such as the present, there is nothing more misleading than analogies and assumed resemblances. Each of the three above-mentioned authors, who have treated of this subject, has supported his theory by reference to rules existing in other archæic systems of law, which are more or less confidently stated as arguments for the acceptance of the proposed theory as correct. But a profitable comparison can only be instituted between two known objects. An attempt to define the qualities of any thing unknown by reference to the qualities of a known quantity rests upon antecedent proof (more frequently the suppressed assumption) of their identity. This argument from tacitly assumed resemblances has been often in the present day too far pressed, frequently with very unfortunate results; in dealing with an inquiry like the present, it would seem to us that the first step is to discover, as far as possible, what the actual texts with which we are dealing say upon the subject, and to draw our conclusions from them free, as far as may be, from those a priori ideas of law, which, as incident to the form of society in which we live, naturally influence our judgment; and that when we have arrived at some definite conclusions in this manner, then, but not until then, the analogies and resemblances of other system are useful for the purpose of testing the probability of the correctness of the results to which we have attained, and as explaining or illustrating many points of detail which at first failed to attract the attention which they deserved.

When an attempt is made to deduce, from the existing remnants of the works of the Brehon lawyers, a consistent theory of the organization of the ancient tribe and family, there arises the obvious difficulty, that the documents, with which we have to deal, are not the contemporaneous exposition of an existing system, and that we have no means of arranging them according to the date of their production; even the original text and commentary of many of them are separated by long intervals of time, and exhibit ideas altogether discordant. The earliest date of the original text, or rather of the customary rules laid down in the original text, is not, and probably cannot be, ascertained; the latest commentaries and glosses are probably not earlier than the 16th century; they certainly cover a period extending from the Danish invasion to the reign of Elizabeth, during which the country was exposed to continued war and confusion, and subjected to all the political and social causes which would naturally lead to the breaking up of the ancient tribe and family system, and the substitution of the arbitrary power of chiefs commanding bands of armed retainers for the regular action of ancient and established custom. The analogy of other nations in a similar condition would naturally lead us to anticipate that during this period the chiefs were constantly gaining ground as against the rights of the individual members of the tribe, and such would appear to have been the case from the days of Conn Cetcorach to that of the chiefs, who, in the 16th century, obtained from the English Government grants of the tribe lands in fee or fee-tail with the object of defeating the custom of Tanistry, or of destroying the rights of the customary holders. The original constitution of the tribe or family during such a period gradually ceases to be an existing social fact, and tends to become merely a rule for the distribution of property upon death, after a fashion which would be strange and inexplicable, if we did not understand it to represent a social system which had for all practical purposes disappeared. The distribution of property according to the Geilfine system, as expounded in the commentary to the Book of Aicill, bears the same relation to the original constitution of the 'fine,' as the rules of the English law, relative to the succession of real estate, bear to the feudal system, or as the distribution of property according to the later Civil Law does to the early Roman family. Those of the Brehon Law tracts, which deal with the geilfine system as an arrangement of the tribe or family, would seem therefore the more ancient and authoritative with regard to the nature of that organization; and it is worthy of remark that the differences, which exist between what may be a priori assumed to be the earlier and later tracts, are just what might be anticipated to have arisen under these circumstances.

The most important document upon the subject of the tribe and family organization is the tract entitled "Of the Divisions of the Tribe of a Territory" published in this volume, and we desire particular attention both to the text of this tract, and the obvious deductions to be drawn therefrom.

The word translated tribe in the title of this tract is "cinel," which is generally understood to mean a tribe in the full extension of the term, and containing a greater or less number of "families."

The word translated "territory" means not a mere extent of land, but primarily the tribe or people themselves, and thence a tract inhabited by a definite body, and regarded with reference to the rights of the occupants.

The word "fine," translated variously "tribe" or "family," (a circumstance which has been noticed as an error by some critics of the present translation of the Brehon Laws,) appears on the face of this document as not having any very precise or technical meaning, implying any number of persons conceived as forming a class whether from identity of descent, or similarity of rights.

This document must not be considered as a description of the ordinarily existing tribe, but rather as an explanation of the form which a tribe would assume if fully developed in every direction. It is remarkable that this tract would appear to consider the tribe and family as commensurate, if not identical. It would be, however, an error to consider that we must, from the tract in question, infer such to be the case, a result contradictory of many other passages in the Brehon Law tracts and opposed to all analogy.* The number of families in the Celtic tribe was never theoretically fixed, as were the number of the Roman gentes or Greek φάρται; and our author naturally deals with the simplest case of the tribe consisting of one family, or, which is perhaps more probable, when he deals with the family, he directs his attention to some one supposed instance.

* The following passage is conclusive upon this point: "An 'aire-fine' be it known; a man who leads his family ('fine') when they are on their way to the chief ('flaith')."—Post, p. 349.

The mode in which the tribe or family was organized according to this tract, was as follows:—

(A.) The “fine” of the chief (flaithe-fine), consisting of—(1) the chief’s fuidhir tenants; (2) the kinsmen of the chief; (3) the dependents of the chief.

(B.) The divisions of the “fine” of the territory—(1) the geilfine; (2) the deirbhfine; (3) the iarfine; (4) the innfine; (5) the deirghfine; (6) the duibhfine; (7) the finctacuir; (8) the glasfine; and (9) the ingen ar meraibh. The nature of the five latter divisions, as to which there is no doubt, is of much importance in determining that of the four first in the second part of this catalogue. The “deirg-fine” are described as those who have shed blood; from whom no debadh property comes; who receive no share of the tribe (“fine”), but who nevertheless pay for the crimes of their kinsfolk. Dr. W. K. Sullivan describes this class as consisting of those “who killed, or attempted to kill the senior members of their fine in order to get at their dibad, or property;”* in this he follows Dr. O’Donovan, who states, in the note annexed to the text, that they were those who were guilty of the murder of a brother familyman, i.e., one of the seventeen men of the four principal divisions. A permanent division of murderers is indeed an anomaly in a tribe organization, and there is a much simpler and more obvious explanation; in the present volume there is contained a tract entitled “The Land is forfeited for Crime,” in which it is laid down that the land of one who had committed a crime was “given for his crime;” that his land was the primary fund for the payment of the “dire”-fine and compensation in exoneration of those who by reason of their kinship, or family relation, to the criminal, were bound to make good his default. The deirg-fine-man was one who by reason of a crime had forfeited his share in the property of the "fine," but in other respects continued to be recognised as a member.

* Manners and Customs, &c., Vol. I., p. clxvi.

The "dubhfine" were those whose claims to be members of the "fine" were under dispute, and who were required to substantiate their rights by ordeal, or by lot.

The "fine-tacuir" were not members by descent, but by a contract of adoption.

The "glasfine" were the children of a female member by a stranger, defined as the children of an Albanach, and described as kindred from beyond the sea.

The "ingen ar meraib" were those commonly believed to have claims to be members, but whose title rested merely on common repute, and was not the subject of ordeal or lot. This term "ingen ar meraibh," literally "the nail on the finger," may be similiar to the word "nagel kyn" as designating indefinite and indescribable relationship. It is to be observed that these five latter classes consist of men not full members of the "fine." The "deirghfine," although members by descent, had suffered a "diminutio capitis," and were not in the enjoyment of full rights. Of the remaining four classes two were confessedly not members at all, and the membership of the two remaining classes was either in supense or unprovable. The four classes of the geilfine, &c., must therefore represent the members of the "fine" of admitted descent, and full rights. These classes are in this tract described as follows:

"The geilfine extends to five persons; it is they that get the 'debadh'-property of every kindred chief (cond) who leaves 'dibadh'-property.

"The 'deirfine' extend to nine persons; their 'dibadh'-property is not divided according to the number of kindred heads.

"The 'iarfine' extend to thirteen men; they get only the fourth part of the fines, or of profits, of the ground, or of labour.

"The 'innfine' extend to seventeen men; they divide among themselves, as is right, whatever part of the tribal-land is left as 'debadh'-land."

From this tract the following deductions may be safely made: (1) the organization of the "fine" was based upon the exclusive possession of land by the "fine" as a distinct community, and had direct reference to the mode in which the land was divided among them.

(2) The four classes of the geilfine, deirbhfine, iarfine, and 'innfine' consisted of seventeen members of the "fine" of pure descent, and full rights.

(3) Each of these four classes was complete in itself and possessed distinct joint rights both as against the other three classes as well as against the general members of the "fine."

(4) The four classes of full members do not comprise all the members of the fine. The "dubhfine" man, who had succeeded in establishing his position in the "fine" by ordeal or lot did not enter into the "geilfine" classification, but received a share of a fixed amount.

With reference to the "deirbhfine" division there is stated a rule that their property was not divided according to the number of kindred heads; it is possible that this may be introduced to point out that as between the "geilfine" and "deirbhfine" divisions, the two classes were to be considered as different and equal stocks, and the "geilfine" had no advantage in the division of property by reason of the greater number of its members; it would seem more probable that this is a general rule to the effect that property which passed to the "deirbhfine" class was to be divided "per stirpes" and not "per capita." This fact is put beyond doubt by the passage in page 259 describing the mode of the division of the "dire"-fine payable to the family (and "fine") of a slain man: "Three cumhals of "dire"-fine go to the son and to the father; there are three cumhals of "dire"-fine remaining after that; a cumhal of "dire"-fine of them goes to a brother collaterally.—There is one 'cumhal' of 'dire' fine then after that—that is to be divided from the lowest man of the 'geilfine' division until it reaches the uppermost man; and from the uppermost man until it reaches the lowest, &c."

A man therefore could stand in some relation to a

"geilfine" class, which did not include either his existing father, son, or brother, and from which we must assume that he himself also was excluded. The same conclusion must be drawn from the liability to pay fines. Upon this point Mr. McLennan remarks : " That the divisional organization was one of the divisions of the 'fine,' or sept, appears from a curious passage in the Book of Aicill (Vol. III., p. 481) which discusses the question from whom a forced exaction, as in payment of a penalty or fine, might lawfully be levied. Here the 'seventeen men' are several times referred to as specially liable to such an exaction if levied on account of the crime of any man connected with them, in terms which seem to imply that every tribesman had, necessarily, a connexion with a divisional organization which was liable for his defaults. In one place the text, which, as it stands, reads as nonsense, must have been intended to indicate that the distant relatives of the criminal were liable for him only when the divisional organization was incomplete, or had collapsed—a reading which is confirmed by the text. The four nearest tribes bear the crime of each kinsman of their stock, geilfine, &c. (Senchus Mor, Vol. I., p. 261.) Here the connexion is disclosed between a tribesman, himself not the member of a divisional organization, and the organization responsible for him."*

The seventeen men must have exercised an authority and rule over the other freemen, of the "fine," or must have filled some quasi representative position in relation to their fellows. If the former were the fact it is improbable that so remarkable a difference of status would have been passed over by the author of this tract.

(5) The seventeen men are not represented as occupying among them the entire territory of the "fine," for there was a surplus of land available for members of the "dubhfine" or of the "glasfine."

(6) The existence of the organization of the "fine," does not seem to have been limited by reference to the life or lives of any person, or class of persons; the existence of such classes as the "dubhfine" and the "ingen ar meraibh," the members of whom were contemplated as possibly increasing in number with the rest of the "fine,"* prove that "fine" so constituted had continued for very long periods.† But upon the completion of the four classes to their full number an important change took place as to the rights of the members of the "fine" in respect of their common property. The words in this tract "From this forth it is a case of a community of people, it is then family relations cease," are glossed as meaning that upon this contingency the subdivisions of land and liability separate, or that the relationship becomes extinct, or that the four families become extinct. The meaning of the glossist is quite clear, not that the previous members of the "fine" cease to exist as individuals, but that the organization of the "fine" as far as relates to the mode in which the common property is held ceases to exist and the community is dissolved into a number of persons holding the land they occupied independently of each other and without rights of inheritance to the lands of each other. That this is the correct interpretation appears from the passage in the first tract in this volume, "From seventeen men out they are not a tribe-community‡ and the commentary upon that passage. (7) The special geilfine class possessed a certain superiority over the other three, and by some such title had an exclusive right to extern property falling in, and as a natural consequence according to the first principles of Brehon law was also subject to a primary liability for the crimes of the members of the "fine."

* Primitive Marriage, 2nd ed., p. 480.

These results may be supplemented by some other conclusions gathered from the tracts contained in the present and preceding volume.

There was at the head of the "fine" a chief who represented the "fine" in its collective capacity.

In the Book of Aicill, in discussing the right to property found upon roads, and the remedy for injuries done to roads, a distinction is drawn between the king of the territory, and the geilfine chief, in this passage distinctly described as the "geilfine flaith"; and the latter is treated as representing the rights of the "fine" as the former those of the entire community.* The "geilfine" chief of this passage would appear to be the same as the "fair chief of the tribe" whose assent was requisite to the validity of contracts dealing with "coibne-property";† and also with the "head of the tribe" who had certain rights in the nuptial presents of women of the tribe, and the gains of an harlot a member of the tribe.‡ The "geilfine" chief was not always, it appears, necessarily a member of the "geilfine" class, for in the second of the passages referred to, there occurs a curious proviso restrictive of the power of the "fair-chief of the tribe," viz., "unless he be the sixth" which, although explained in the gloss in an obscure manner, appears to mean unless he be not one of the first five, i.e., of the geilfine division properly so called.§ There appear allusions to chiefs of the deirbhfine, iarfine, and indfine divisions, which implies that some one of the class possessed a seniority, or superiority, over the other members of the class.|| It would also appear that when a class was once formed, it continued to subsist as long as any one member of the class continued in existence; as we should now express it, the members of a class were as among themselves joint tenants and not tenants in common. The movement of individual members through the different classes was not caused by the vacancies in the three latter classes but by a superfluity of members in the first class; and that the social position and rights of the classes among themselves was in the inverse order of the seniority. That there were some connexion of kinship between the members of the four classes is everywhere assumed, but the relationship which may have existed at any time between the members may not have been that upon which the system was originally constituted. The existence of a father and four sons is more than once referred to as the basis of an

* Page 295.

† Vol. IV., p. 243.

‡ Page 39.

* Vol. III., p. 307.

† Vol. IV., p. 39.

‡ Id., p. 63.

§ Another and slightly different explanation of this passage is suggested subsequently, see p. lxxxviii.

|| Vol. IV., p. 243.

ordinary "geilfine" system, but it does not follow that although the existence of a father and four sons would result in founding the system, it could not be formed by five persons of the same stock, standing in another relationship to each other; it might, it appears, be formed upon the basis of five co-existing brothers. That the deirbhfine were not descended from the geilfine is shown by the passage, which describes the property of the geilfine division upon the death of the five members of that division passing to a branch extern to the 'geilfine,' viz., the deirbhfine division.* In the glosses upon this passage there is the following: "In this case after the death of the five persons which are the geilfine division, the land is divided among the three 'fine' divisions, and in this case there is no female heir." As a female is here assumed to have been entitled to succeed upon the failure of male heirs, the extinction of one of the classes implies both the death of the original members, and the failure of their issue, and it is therefore necessary in any theory of the system to find room for the succession of lineal descendants to the land of their ancestors.

Mr. McLennan after pointing out that such a system must be primarily founded upon the possession and distribution of land, and that the liability of the members for the acts of members of the "fine" is based upon the rights which they enjoy in respect of the common property, makes the following important observation: "It is not difficult to imagine that arrangements of such obvious convenience as defining and limiting the liabilities of kinsmen for one another, if once successfully established among the superior classes, would in time be imitated by the inferior; and the peculiar settlement of property, worked through a divisional organization, as may be easily seen, is nowise in its nature, inapplicable to movable estate."†

In conformity with this observation of Mr. McLennan, a remarkable analogy to the geilfine system in the "fine" appears to have existed among the families of the "fuidhir" tenants, which is worthy of much attention in the consideration of the present subject. These tenants, settled upon the chief's share of the tribe lands, were recruited from the broken men, who had lost land and kinship, and in the tribe organization were supposed to form portion of the "fine" of the chief (flaithfine), but at an early period they seemed to have formed artificial families upon the system of reciprocal liability, and to have acquired a right of hereditary transmission of property. The passage to which we refer lays down as a general principle that "the natural bondman does not bear the crimes of his relatives," but that if there were five houses of "fuidhir" tenants, each householder having a stock of one hundred cattle, and all under one chief, they formed an association, recognised as a portion of the tribe, for each thereupon shared in the common tribe land (dibadh) and paid for the crimes of the other member of their separate organization. The phrase "They share the tribe property," translated as in the last sentence by an earlier glossist, is translated by a subsequent commentator, "Each of them shall share the tribe property of each other;" according to this view the reciprocal liability for crimes drew with it common rights and joint ownerships in the aggregate stock of the five houses.* But whatever rights the five head men of these "fuidhir" houses acquired in the common stock, it must have been subject to the succession of lineal heirs, as in a subsequent passage we read (in respect of the case of fuidhir tenants), "the father does not sell anything to the prejudice of his sons, grandsons, great grandsons, or great great grandsons."† To constitute such a community there must have been a certain number of persons belonging to different households, and also possessing an adequate amount of property. The sons, brothers, &c., of an household were liable for each others deeds without such organization, and the addition of impecunious persons into such an association would create a liability without any reciprocal guarantee.

* Vol. IV., p. 39.

† Primitive Marriage, 2nd ed., p. 492.

* Post. page 43. The precise meaning is not important, but we are inclined to prefer the latter translation.

† Post, p. 287.

There must have existed distinct and early laws of hereditary succession to lands of inheritance (orba) among the Irish Celtic tribes, but these rules have in fact been amalgamated in the "geilfine" system, and cannot be now understood apart from it; the Welsh rules which may be assumed to have some general resemblance to those of the Irish, throw, in our opinion, considerable light upon this subject. The relation of the father and son in the Welsh law in respect of the family inheritance resembled rather the civil law substitution, than the English joint-tenancy; "neither is the son to deprive his father, during his life, of land and soil; in like manner the father is not to deprive the son of land."* Such a rule, if strictly carried out, would have created a perpetual succession, and the right of the heir could be barred only in one way, viz., by an agreement between "father, brothers, cousins, second cousins, and the lord;" a proceeding the same as the present mode of barring a Scotch tailzie. Upon the death of the father, the daughters took nothing, unless there was a failure of male heirs; upon the death of the father the sons divided the lands between them in the following manner: "When brothers share the patrimony between them, the youngest is to have the principal tyddyn, and all the buildings of his father, and eight erwes of land, his boiler, his fuel hatchet, and his coulter; because a father cannot give these three to any but to the youngest son; and though they should be pledged, they never become forfeited. Then let every brother take an homestead with eight erwes of land; and the youngest son is to share, and they are to choose in succession from the eldest to the youngest."†

The inheritance having been thus divided among the first generation of descendants, was again divided among the grandsons, and again among the great grandsons, after which there was no further apportionment. By this we must understand that the three first generations of descendants took "per capita," and that the fourth generation retained

* Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. I., p. 177.

† Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. I., p. 543.

the existing shares by household or per stirpes. The reshar- ing was subject to the exception that no one should "remove from his tyddyn to another; because the tyddyns are of such a number that no one is obliged to be a builder for another".* The right to inherit the share of any deceased relative, was not as collateral heir of the deceased, but as a lineal descendant of the original ancestor;† to use the terms of English law, heirship was claimed not to the last seized, but to the purchaser; but the right of inheritance stopped short at the fourth generation of descendants; the descendant in the fifth degree had no hereditary claim through his ancestor to any portion of the lands of inheritance, and therefore kinsmen more distantly related than third cousins could not be heirs to each other in respect of shares in lands of inheritance. In default of relations within this degree the land escheated to the king.‡ It is to be remarked that according to this system the elder brothers go out of the father's house and establish themselves in separate buildings, upon distinct portions, cut out for them of the lands; and the youngest son is left in the possession of the original homestead and all its gear. The redivisions are not partitions of the land exhausting the entire, but on these occasions each male descendant acquires a fixed portion as his share; after the third generation there is no further redistribution of the land; and after the fourth generation the family organization is dissolved into separate households, each of which (for the purpose of inheritance) had no relationship with the others.§

* Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. II., p. 291. † Id. ‡ Id., Vol. I., p. 545.

§ That the hereditary right of succession to property and the claims of kinship should cease, or be very much diminished at some particular point in the chain of descent, is a conception not unknown to ancient law. "The typical example of this division of the clan, as of so many other of our early institutions, is found in India. In that country the degree of kindred, as I have already observed, were determined by the nature of the sacred rights in which the kinsmen shared. The nearer relatives offered to their deceased ancestors the pinda or sacrificial cake. The more distant relatives made an offering of water. The former were called Sapindas, or persons connected with the cake. The latter were called Samanodocas, or persons connected by equal oblations of water. The relation of the Sapindas ceases with the seventh person, that is, with the sixth degree of kindred." (The

In the following observations it is desirable to use the term "tribe" and "family" in a technical sense, treating the former as indicating the larger organization known as the "cinel," the latter as equivalent to the "fine;" this distinction between the "tribe" and the "family" appears in all degrees of kindred in this passage are calculated according to the rules of the English, not of the Civil Law.) "The relation of the Samanodocas ceases only when their birth and family name are no longer known. The Sapindas have the primary right of inheritance to a deceased person; and failing the Sapindas the Samanodocas succeed. In other words all those persons are Sapindas, who have a common great-grandfather, or other nearer ascendant, that is second cousins and all nearer relatives. All those persons are Samanodocas, who have a common great-great-grandfather, or other more remote ascendant, that is third cousins and all more distant relatives. In the former case, the common ancestor who marks the limit, is the father's grandfather. In the latter case it is the grandfather's grandfather. Thus the Prince of Wales and the Ex-Crown Prince of Hanover are Sapindas, because they trace descent from the same great-grandfather, King George III., but their children fall into the wider circle of Samanodocas, or more remote kinsmen.—The Aryan Household, p. 168.

The actual text of the Welsh Law is as follows:—

1. When sons share their patrimony between them, the youngest is to have the principal tyddyn, and all the buildings of his father, and eight erwes of land, his boiler, his fuel hatchet, and his coulter; because a father cannot give these three to anyone but to the younger son; and though they should be pledged, they never become forfeited. Then let every brother take a homestead with eight erwes of land, and the youngest son is to share; and they are to choose in succession, from the eldest to the youngest.
2. Three times shall the same patrimony be shared between three grades of a kindred; first between brothers, the second time between consins, the third time between second cousins; after that there is no proper share of the land.
3. No person is to demand re-sharing, but one who has not obtained a share by choosing; thence the proverb, there is no choice in what is settled.
4. No person is to obtain the land of a co-heir, as of a brother, or of a consin, or of a second cousin, by claiming it as heir of the one co-heir who shall have died without leaving an heir of his body; but by claiming it as heir to one of his own parents, who had been owner of that land until his death without heir, whether a father, grandfather, or great-grandfather, that land he is to have, if he be the nearest next-of-kin to the deceased.
5. After brothers shall have shared their patrimony between them, if one of them die without leaving an heir of his body, or co-heir, to a third cousin, the king is to be the heir to that land.
6. As a brother is rightful heir to his patrimony, so is his sister rightful heir to her gwaddol, through which she may obtain a husband entitled to land; that is to say, from her father, or from her co-inheritors, if she remain under the guidance of her parents and co-inheritors.
7. If an owner of land have no other heir than a daughter, the daughter is to early systems, and correlative terms expressing them are found in many languages.*

The "family" came into being under certain circumstances, and again was dissolved upon the existence of a certain state of facts; the "tribe" existed before the "family" came into being and continued to exist after the latter had been dissolved; the "tribe" consisted of an aggregate of individuals connected by a real or assumed relationship, and occupying in separate households a district of which they in some manner were the common owners.

Let us consider the circumstances under which a "family" organized upon the geilfine system came into existence; the mere fact that a member of the tribe had a certain number of children would be insufficient, for it rested upon the basis of the possession of a distinct and separate property; nor again would the bare fact of the possession of land enable a member even of the "family" to found a new geilfine group, for there was only one such organization in each family.

The property upon which a family was formed was not a right to a share greater or less in the general tribe land to be allotted from time to time, or a right to depasture the waste of the tribe, but the exclusive possession of a definite portion of the tribe land, granted out the general mass, and appropriated as the exclusive and hereditary property of the descendants of some definite individual, an estate corresponding to the A.S. boeland, and described in the Brehon Law as "orba."

be heiress to the whole land.—The Dimetian Code, ch. xxiii., A. L. & I., vol. i., p. 543.

"Distribution is in the first place to be between brothers. The youngest is to choose his tyddyn with such houses as may be upon the eight erws, if he be an uchellor, and from oldest to oldest let them choose their tyddyn, and to every one what houses may be upon his tyddyn. And after that let the youngest son share in every case; and from eldest to eldest let them choose. Afterwards cousins are entitled to a re-sharing, but no one shall remove from his tyddyn for another, because the tyddyns are of such number that no one is obliged to be a builder for another. And in that manner are second cousins to re-share. And, after the third sharing, let everyone re-claim his share in his possession lawfully through guardians of land-borderers.—Cyoreithian Cymru, xxxi., 1, A. L. & I. of Wales, vol. ii., p. 291.

* The Aryan Household, 161–171.

If land has thus been dedicated to the use of a separate family, the claims of its members to enjoy their several proportions by hereditary right must be traced from the original acquirer, or in the old English law term "from the conqueror." This is very clearly shown by the Welsh rule that heirship is traced back in the first instance to the ancestor, and not to the deceased. As the family increased, the additional further accommodation is provided for, not by the enlargement of the original dwelling, but by the erection of new buildings with several allotments. The brothers under the Welsh law did not upon the father's death take equal undivided or divided shares, but to each was allotted his homestead with his eight erws of land in severalty. The existence of the thickly scattered "raths" in Ireland would of itself prove that the "family" occupied its district in this manner, and in the tract of the "Crith Gabhlach" (also published in this volume) the several members of the tribe are assumed to occupy separate houses, classified as to size, &c., in accordance with the rank of the occupiers; the Celtic family never seems to have clung together in the peculiar form of the Slavonic household.

In considering how a geilfine system might have been formed, the question why the number of seventeen formed an element in the organization may be postponed for subsequent consideration. Nothing can be more embarrassing than an attempt to reconstruct a system founded both upon hereditary descent, and certain assumed arithmetical proportions. A family arranged upon some rules of inheritance can be easily understood, if once the principle of hereditary succession which underlies it, be ascertained; a political institution resting upon the selection of a fixed number from the indefinite mass of the population, can be supposed to have been an actually working institution. But when we read of assemblies formed of members selected in certain proportions; or in fixed numbers, out of different stocks, or of property divided among the descendants of some ancestor, in a fixed number of shares, it is clear that we are no longer dealing with actual facts, but with theoretical descriptions of what the institution was supposed in the abstract to have been. The numbers in each family must be uncertain; some men have many, some few or no descendants. The actual condition of the population must soon have rendered its arithmetical classification impossible, if such classification ever existed in fact. No one pretends to believe in the actual existence of the early Roman constitution, with a permanently fixed number of tribes, curiæ, gentes, and familiæ; and yet upon the assumption of the existence of an almost impossible state of facts rest the number of the members of the senate, and the organization of the legion. Institutions, as all else, must accommodate themselves to existing facts, and in such cases as those to which we have referred the principle of hereditary right must shake off the incumbrance of arithmetical arrangement, or the numerical arrangement be carried out in disregard of the strict rules of descent.

* Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. I., p. 177.

The original acquirer of "orba" land establishes upon it his household, and as the number of his sons increases beyond the capacity of one common dwelling, they successively go out, take separate allotments, and establish themselves in distinct homesteads. This scattering of the original household must have arisen as a matter of necessity, as the consequence of an increase in number beyond the accommodation of the paternal dwelling. The eldest would probably first marry and leave the original home, and the order of their departure would probably follow that of their seniority. That the sons took their separate allotments during the life of the parent, and not upon his death, is the only mode of explaining the Welsh rule that the youngest and not the eldest son, succeeded to the father's house and gear; this must have rested upon the assumption that the youngest son alone remained in his father's house, which he jointly occupied with the father, upon whose death he remained in sole possession by survivorship, rather than succeeded by inheritance. Each son as he successively left his father's house received his share in the lands of inheritance, and, having become the head of a distinct household, would cease to be a joint owner with his father in the original property; the portion acquired by an elder son who had thus gone out would pass to his descendants, according to the ordinary rules of descent, but the undisposed of residue of the original lands would survive to the youngest son, who had not gone out, as representing his father in the manner before mentioned.

The "geilfine" system began to exist when there was a father and four sons; but the question arises as to the particular date at which this happened. That such date was that of the birth of the fourth son is in every way improbable; the members of the system are always spoken of as "the seventeen men," who have definite rights and considerable liabilities, which could neither be enjoyed nor performed by infant children residing in their father's house. The members of the geilfine stood in definite relation to each other; they had certain rights in each others property, but what was more important, they were jointly liable for the wrongs committed by any of the "family," and were guarantors among themselves for the payments to be made in respect of any such. That a man's four infant sons, who resided in his house, and possessed no independent property, were joined with him as security for his debts, would be of no advantage to extern creditors, and the father could not expect any benefit from having joined with himself as co-securities, his sons, who had no property except a contingent interest in what he himself possessed. The nature of the relation between the members of a "geilfine" system implies that they all are sui juris, and all owners of property efficient to answer their joint and reciprocal obligations. It is at this point that the great importance of the mode in which the "findhir" tenants are organised into a fictitious family is apparent. This was, as stated in the passage before referred to, effected by combining into one, five distinct households, not individuals, each possessing a fixed minimum of property. The unit here, as is generally the case in early tribal systems, is not the individual, but the household; when an individual is spoken of, he is referred to in his character of the head of an household ; his property is originally the property of the household, of which he is the manager rather than the absolute owner. It is remarkable that the hereditary rights of succession of "findhir" tenants is apparently connected with the fact of their being organised ; this would be a natural consequence of such an arrangement, for the property of any "findhir" house having been caught by the system of mutual guarantee, the household would be continued for the purpose of the fulfilment of the guarantee, in the persons of the sons of the original head as a member of the artificial family. For these reasons there are considerable grounds for assuming that the four sons, who jointly with their father formed a "geilfine," are four sons who have gone out and established themselves in independent homesteads upon their allotments.

Disregarding again for the present the question of numbers, the father and his sons, who have left the original home, and established themselves as the heads of independent houses, form the nucleus of the "geilfine" arrangement of the family ; we have now an organization of households and a community, or land held by a community (coibne), instead of land held by an individual as head of an house ; and in place of being "the paterfamilias" the father becomes the "geilfine" chief, or the head (ceud) of the community. The number of households in the community is fixed by the number of new homesteads established by the sons who have gone out, that is, a number equal to the sum total of the father and his forisfamiliarized sons ; and if the union be an union not of individuals, but of householders representing their separate homesteads, the system will not be broken up by the death of any leaving issue, but his successor in the headship of his house will take his place in the geilfine system.

The youngest son, succeeding his father as head of the original household, would at an early period probably succeed to the headship of the family also. The ancient religion of the Irish Celts has absolutely disappeared, but if their religious ideas resembled those of many others of the early Aryan tribes, among whom the headship of the family is intimately connected with the performance of the sacred rites at the original hearth, it would not appear unnatural that the headship should remain with the son, who, although the youngest, occupied the original home of the family.

The geilfine system having been once originated, it is to be considered whether the sons of the original acquirer represent the branch of system technically known as the "geilfine" branch, or represent the first members of the four distinct branches, as is the opinion of Mr. McLennan. To the latter opinion there appear to be insuperable objections. It excludes the ancestor from the system altogether; it confines the number of households in the family to four; it certainly fails satisfactorily to account for the extra member of the geilfine branch; it introduces the wholly foreign theory of primogeniture; and it involves the fatal difficulty that a large proportion of the members must be infants; as to the extraordinary longevity and power of reproduction he attributes to its members, we take no objection, as its author throughout treats the geilfine system, not as an existing social organization, but a speculative theory of descent.

That the geilfine class was formed before the deirbfine began to come into being, must be, in our opinion, the conclusion to be arrived at, upon an examination of the texts, and is the only theory upon which the peculiar intimate union between the members of each class among themselves, and the gradations of rank and probable difference of wealth among the classes can be accounted for.

The creation of the deirbfine class is similar to that of the geilfine, and would appear to have arisen in the same manner. If the sons, who leave the original home, take fixed allotments to which their descendants will be confined, and the original home and the balance of the lands of inheritance remain with the youngest son, and are available for the establishment of his descendants, it must follow that until the lands are completely occupied, the elder stocks must be constantly losing ground in point of wealth as compared with the younger. If a son of the youngest son can, on leaving the original home, receive an allotment similar to that which his father's elder brother received, his position is much better than that of his first cousins, and with each successive generation the disparity would become more marked. The answer to this objection is, that the existence of this very disparity, is one of the most peculiar, and, at first, unaccountable facts of the geilfine system, according to which the members of the geilfine class are, by the introduction of new members, promoted, or degraded (it is immaterial which term is used) into and through the three other classes, with a loss upon the occasion of each removal of position and property, but with a co-relative diminution of liability.

That the four branches of the geilfine system represent four distinct generations of the descendants of the original acquirer must be admitted; the terms descriptive of the four classes are repeatedly used as expressing the four successive generations descending from a supposed ancestor; but it appears equally certain that none of the classes were the descendants of any other of them. The glosses, indeed, treat the geilfine branch as being sons, the deirbfine branch as being grandsons, &c.; but if the views of the commentator in the Book of Aicill are not to be actually discarded, the "indfine" class contained the senior members of the system, and the geilfine the youngest; and hence the anomaly that the word which signifies the junior members of the class, are supposed to indicate the sons, and that which signifies the senior members of the class the great great-grandsons of the same person. So far, however, from treating the "deirbfine" as representing the "geilfine" class, the former is spoken of as a foreign branch taking only upon the failure of the issue of the geilfine.

The youngest son of the original acquirer, having succeeded his father, marries in his turn, and his sons, beginning with the eldest, go out successively and settle on their allotments. The second head with his four forisfamiated sons forms a new geilfine branch, and that formed by the four sons of the original acquirer is pushed down into the deirbfine class; the original house, being that out of which the successive generations have swarmed, always continuing as an household of the geilfine, and thus the existing chief with his forisfamiliated sons always forming the geilfine division; the claim of the several branches of the system to their respective allotments, supposing the generations to have died off evenly, and the whole number seventeen to have been filled up, would be as follows: the geilfine would be the sons of an existing head or chief; the deirbfine, the first cousins of the geilfine, would claim as the grandsons of the previous chief; the iarfine, second cousins of the geilfine, would claim as great-grandsons of the second last chief; the indfine, the third cousins of the geilfine, would claim as the great great-grandchildren of the original acquirer. The senior branch upon this supposition is that most removed from the chief for the time being, and for the reasons before stated also the least wealthy. The four divisions, representing four successive generations, would, if the analogy of the Welsh Law is of weight, complete the system; if the right of hereditary succession was not transmissible beyond the fourth generation of the descendants of the original acquirer, the sons of the fifth chief or head would have no right to allotments, and no further independent households could be formed.

If the respective classes represent in the manner above mentioned four successive generations of the descendants of the original acquirer, each generation represents either brothers or the descendants of brothers; and each class, taken by itself, formed a distinct subdivision of the family, the members of which were the nearest relations of each other.

If each class represents a generation, it, at first sight, is difficult of explanation how four successive generations remain of the same number, neither less, nor more, but this objection is removed if we admit that each class is in fact the offspring of a single individual.

We are strongly inclined to believe that in its inception

the respective classes were not tied down by any fixed rules as to numbers, although at the date of the commentary on the Book of Aicill the number of seventeen was considered as of the essence of the system. The geilfine organization is frequently spoken of as the "seventeen men," which would lead to the supposition that the number was always kept up by some contrivance to that amount; but from the rule that a class was not extinguished as long as there was one member of it in existence, it is clear that the system could, and must often, have been worked with very reduced numbers; a circumstance not incompatible with its successful operation, for the survivorship existing among the members of each class would concentrate the property of all in the hands of the last survivor, and leave the amount of property available for the fulfilment of their mutual guarantees unaltered.

The numerical form of early institutions arises from the desire of half-educated men for an unattainable arithmetical completeness in their arrangements, and from the wholly unwarranted assumption, with the view to enable them to construct theoretical systems, that all the families would be of some fixed amount, and that the members would be born or die off in the required order. The lawyers who reduced to writing the customs of the "fine," assumed that the number of children in each family would be five, that is, four who go out, and one who remains in the original home, and that, therefore, the system in its complete development must consist of seventeen persons, although probably as a fact it frequently fell short of that amount. The perfect form of seventeen persons, divisible in the four classes, each representing four brothers, with the addition of the head of the household occupying the original home, became the accepted theoretic form of the institution. If the number of seventeen members once became the supposed essence of the arrangement, that, which originally consisted of four classes, each of which was assumed to be four in number, and which, therefore, with the addition of original house, made up seventeen individuals, was considered as an organism of seventeen persons, sub-divided for occult reasons into four classes containing each a certain number.

In the "Bee Judgments" and "Rights of Water," allusions are made to the four geilfine classes, which manifestly prove that the four classes were regarded as distinct from, and contrasted with, each other. The geilfine system must have been familiar to the authors of these tracts, who illustrate local positions by reference to the relations between these classes. Nothing can more clearly show that each class was considered as a complete entity in itself.

Although the rule may have prevailed from an early date that the four geilfine classes should comprise no more than seventeen members, the number thus theoretically fixed could not often have come into conflict with facts; the chance of four successive householders in the lineal descent having each five sons, all of whom marry and have issue, is very remote, and may be practically dismissed from consideration.

We have already stated our explanation of there being four classes in geilfine system, and no more, viz., the rule that hereditary rights were not transmissible through more than four generations, and that therefore the organization could not be carried on beyond the great-great-grandsons of the original acquirer; other results worthy of consideration would arise upon this contingency, which are implied in the remarkable phrase; "From this forth it is a case of a community of people, it is then family relations cease." At first sight it would appear that the paragraph states that the innfine class divide among themselves the residue of the lands "of the family" as if it were "common tribe land," and that thereupon the organization of the "family," was dissolved. This would imply that the "innfine" class could at once on coming into being, dissolve the "family," a conclusion contrary to all the passages, which treat the "family" with its four classes as a continuing entity; it is quite impossible to imagine that the completion of the system involved its dissolution. It appears that no further generation of sons issuing from the original dwelling could obtain allotments, because the fourth occupier of the house was the last who had a right to settle his sons on the "family" land; his younger son, the fifth occupier of the original holding, could put out his sons as they married, but was obliged to divide the original holding, which up to this would have remained entire, among all his sons. The peculiar privileges attached to this holding would be lost, and all the "households" placed on an equality; the house which up to this had been the chief's house would become one of the houses of the ultimate "geilfine" divisions, thus permanently raising the number of members of the class to five; the undisposed of residue of the land, so much as had not been allotted to the sixteen members of the four divisions, would be divisible among the households probably per stirpes. The land of the "family," which up to this had been regarded as the undivided property of the community (coibne land), is broken up among the various members in independent properties. This explains the expression relative to covenants dealing with coibne property, "which the fair chief of the tribe ("family") confirms unless he be the sixth;" for the sixth chief of the "family," however elected, would be the first who did not represent the rights of the original acquirer. We have no information how the "geilfine" chief was subsequently appointed; the note prefixed to the commencement of the Tract "On Succession" proves that the succession to the headship of the "family" was an open question, and that the lawyers were inclined to support the doctrine of seniority as against some previously established rule.

It is necessary to consider the rules of succession laid down in the commentary in the Book of Aicill, with the object of ascertaining how far they agree with the theory of the origin of the geilfine system which has been here suggested. The well known passage in the Book of Aicill appears to treat of the question how the property of a household should be divided among its members, and would therefore deal with a much later stage of the Brehon Law, when the property of the originally united household was subject to distribution among its members. The principle that this property should be divided among seventeen persons at most, was then accepted, but the reason for such a number being fixed upon had at that time been forgotten, as there are no definite grounds shown for the distribution of the members into the four classes, and the essential and distinct unity of each class has been abandoned by the supposition that an individual of one class can be passed on into another class by the increasing number of junior members, and that, when the number of possible members exceeds seventeen, the senior member of the "innfine" class passes out of the organization.

It was, of course, impossible, when dealing with the mere distribution of property among the members of the household to suppose the system broken up when the number exceeded seventeen, and the extrusion of the senior member was a device to avoid this difficulty. Sir H. S. Maine's explanation of this passage, supposing it simply to express a late mode of dividing household property upon the analogy of the prior distribution of family property, may be adopted with the exception of the continuance of the parent in the geilfine division.* The addition member of that division was, it seems, introduced from the older system, and retained after the reason for the fact had been forgotten.

Assuming the original geilfine system to have been such as has been suggested, the principle for the division of the property of the household laid down in the Book of Aicill is clear and consistent.

The actual relationship of the members of a fully devel-

* Although great weight is to be attributed to the opinion of Sir H. S. Maine, it may be fairly conjectured that at the date of the Commentary upon the Book of Aicill the rules for the distribution of property in the case dealt with were a mere survival of an organization which had practically ceased to exist, and that the seventeen consisted of the seventeen junior male descendants of the stirps, without reference to the original number of sons, and that these seventeen were arranged in classes after the analogy of the ancient divisions of the family. The anomalous results which would follow in some cases where the number of male descendants exceeded seventeen would not be more extraordinary than those which in exceptional cases occur under all systems for the distribution of property after death.

oped geilfine system, if all the members died off at regular intervals, would be as follows. The members of all the four classes would then be the descendants in the fourth degree of the original acquirer; the "geilfine" division would be the first cousins of the deirbfine division; the second cousins of the iarfine division, and the third cousins of the innfine division; the deirbfine division would be the first cousins of the geilfine division; the second cousins of the iarfine division, and the third cousins of the innfine division; the iarfine division would be the second cousins of both the geilfine and deirbfine divisions, and the third cousins of the innfine division; and the innfine division would be the third cousins of the three other divisions. Their relationship might also be traced by representation, that is by the relationship which at the first existed between the original members of each division, in which view the geilfine division would be the nephews of the deirbfine division, the great nephews of the iarfine division, and the great great nephews of the innfine division; the deirbfine division would be the uncles of the geilfine division, the nephews of the iarfine division, and the great nephews of the innfine division; the iarfine division would be the uncles of the deirbfine division, the great uncles of the geilfine division, and the nephews of the innfine division; and the innfine division would be the uncles of the iarfine division, the great uncles of the deirbfine division, and the great great uncles of the geilfine division. As upon the failure of any class the property is to be divided among classes and not per capita, their shares are in the first instance determined by the assumed natural relationship of these divisions, and if this does not differentiate the classes, then by their representative relationship; the nearest class taking three fourths, the next three sixteenths, and the most remote taking one sixteenth. On the extinction of the geilfine, three fourths would pass to their first cousins the deirbfine, three sixteenths to their second cousins the iarfine, and one sixteenth to their third cousins the innfine. On the extinction of the deirbfine three fourths would pass to their first cousins the geilfine, three sixteenths to their second cousins the iarfine, and one sixteenth to their third cousins the innfine. On the extinction of the iarfine division, a difficulty would arise, as both the deirbfine and geilfine divisions would stand in the same relation, viz., that of second cousins, and their respective portions would have to be determined by their representative kinship; the deirbfine division as representing nephews would take the precedence of the geilfine division as representing great nephews, and three fourths would go to the deirbfine division, three sixteenths to the geilfine division, and one sixteenth to the innfine division. In the case of the extinction of the innfine division, all the other divisions stand to them in same degree of actual kinship, and the division of the property would follow representative kinship exclusively, three fourths passing to their nephews the iarfine division, three sixteenths to their great nephews the deirbfine division, and one sixteenth to their great great nephews the geilfine division. The distribution of the property of any two extinct classes follows precisely the same rules; if the property of each class be separately divided in the proportion of twelve to four between the surviving classes in accordance with their nearness of kinship. Thus upon the failure of both the geilfine and deirbfine division, the property of both is divisible between the remaining classes, their second and third cousins, three fourths to the iarfine, and one fourth to the innfine division; but upon the extinction of the iarfine and innfine divisions, the two surviving classes standing in the same degree of actual kinship to both, the principle of representation is introduced and three fourths pass to the deirbfine and one fourth to the geilfine division.

This mode of explaining the geilfine system gives the key to the rules laid down in the 39th page of this volume. The passage referred to is an attempt to lay down the rules for the succession to a female in the technical terms used in reference to the organization of the family. It appears from the gloss that the rules 3 and 4, in page xlii, deal with the succession to the property of a deceased female, and that the grand-children and great grand-children, there referred to, are not those of the deceased female, but of the original settler, if we may use this modern term. It appears that the hereditary right to the vacant lands did not extend beyond the fourth generation of the stirps, and that descendants of the several generations are conceived as co-existing. The existing descendants of the original stirps may be classed in two modes, either as constituting a geilfine system, or classified with reference to the relationship which the original members of any division of such a system would have borne to the original stirps. In a fully formed family the members of the geilfine class would be the original members of their division and descendants in the fourth generation of the stirps; the deirbhfine class would represent their fathers, the descendants in the third generation, and similarly the iarfine and innfine would represent ancestors who were the grandsons and sons of the original stirps; thus the terms geilfine and deirbhfine might in a secondary sense be used to designate descendants in the fourth and the third generation. The four generations of the male issue of the settler seem to have been regarded as forming four classes equivalent to the classes of the geilfine system, and having similar rights of property and succession inter sese.*

Upon the completion of the Geilfine system the "family" does not appear to have dissolved beyond the extinction of hereditary rights in the land of the family; the organization still continued upon the basis of mutual guarantee and liability; the seventeen houses (or the lesser number actually in existence) formed the patriciate of the "family," jointly liable for the compensation for the wrong committed by members of the family, and jointly entitled to share in certain proportions in the compensation payable for wrongs inflicted upon members of the family. The chief represented henceforth the "family;" not the hereditary rights of the original acquirer, for property falling in from externs vested not in him but the geilfine class; to the last the distinction of the "tribe" and "family" must have been clearly marked, the family rested on the lands of inheritance booked to the original acquirer, and as a family had no property external to that, the tribe possessed the general undivided tribe lands and the waste pasturage lands; these latter it is to be observed cannot have been included in the lands of the "family" which were finally divided upon the completion of the geilfine system. The claim of an individual to share in the pasturage was founded upon his being a member of the tribe, and had no connexion with his membership of a family, and when, we proceed to consider the Crith Gabhlach, it will be clear that, in the organization of the tribe, the family was wholly disregarded, as in the legion, the individual citizens were equal in the face of the law, and the paternal authority disregarded.

* The difficulty in this explanation is the incomprehensible glosses, page 41, lines 30 and 31. It may be suggested that the glosses in question have been transposed.

The conclusions, to which we arrive, may be briefly stated as follows:—(1) the geilfine system was an ingeniously contrived organization of the "family" with the object of keeping it together upon the basis of mutual guarantee, founded upon the antecedent rules of succession to lands of inheritance (orba); and of retaining the lands of inheritance in the descendants of the original acquirer, as far as the existing rules as to "remoteness of limitations" permitted; (2) that it was contrived in the interest of the noble classes, who possessed sufficient influence to procure portions of the public tribe lands to be granted to them and their families to the exclusion of the rights of the general body of the "tribe"; (3) that as the general tribe lands were appropriated by the noble class, the system in its earlier stages gradually became obsolete, and merely a subject of antiquarian enquiry; and that the later commentators, especially when once the idea of seniority as the basis of succession had been established, were unable clearly to explain its origin and probably found more difficulty in understanding it than does the modern student; and (4) that the system when existing in its latest state of survival was adopted as the basis for a system of rules relative to the distribution of the property of an household, to which in its origin it had really no analogy.

IV.

ON THE INCIDENCE OF FINES AND COMPENSATION FOR CRIMES.

It is a cardinal principle of the Brehon Law that the liability to pay the fines and compensation for crimes, committed by a member of a tribe or family, should fall upon the persons who would be entitled to his property upon his death, and in the same proportions.

In this volume there are contained two tracts as to the persons by whom, and the proportions in which, such fines and compensation should be paid, viz., the tract entitled "Of the Judgment of every Crime which any Criminal Commits, &c.," and that entitled "The Land is forfeited for Crime." If we could therefore succeed in ascertaining the mode in which such fines and compensation should be assessed upon persons other than the criminal himself, and in what proportions the fines and compensation payable for the death of any member of a tribe or family should be divided, we cannot fail to acquire a certain degree of knowledge as to the distribution of property upon the death of the owner, and shall be in a position to understand the otherwise obscure rules as to the succession to land contained in the first tract published in this volume.

The former of these tracts would appear to be of a very modern date, and not to be free from the influence of the principles of English Law. The reasons upon which the conclusion is arrived at are the following: (1) it distinctly recognises acts of violence to be crimes, and does not regard them as merely torts, treating the consequences of crimes in the light of punishments for wrongful and illegal acts; (2) the payments to be made by the criminal or his guarantors are considered as compromises by which he may escape the punishment due to his crimes, not as arrangements by which the quarrel between the parties is to be compromised; (3) it seems to recognise a coercive jurisdiction as possessed by the Judge to which the parties were obliged to yield; (4) it treats the execution of the criminal, his imprisonment, or his servitude as the possible consequences of his crimes, and, as a logical result, discusses the contingency of his evasion to escape punishment.

All these ideas are manifestly foreign to archaic law.

The extreme vagueness and uncertainty of the use of the terms "deirbfine" and "geilfine" in this tract are very remarkable ; an uncertainty very puzzling to the authors of the glosses and commentary, who have frequently to correct and explain the manner in which these words are used.

It appears that the former term is indiscriminately used in three different senses : (1) as descriptive of all the members of the geilfine organization, (2) as the deirbfine class as distinguished from the geilfine, and (3) as a term descriptive of certain relationship merely.

The glosses and commentary are especially important in dealing with this tract, as without a very careful reference to them erroneous conclusions may be derived from an unaided examination of the original text.

The tract commences with a statement of the property and persons liable to the payment of fines and compensation. The rules of the priority here laid down may be summarized as follows :—(1) The criminal himself was primarily liable ; this is to be inferred from the words, "If he absconds," commencing the paragraph, and stating thus the contingency upon which the subsequent secondary liabilities arise ; (2) The property moveable or immoveable of the criminal in the second degree was liable ; when we proceed to the second tract upon the subject it will appear that this liability was considered as a charge specifically affecting the property in question ; it may be observed that this rule involves the idea that the injured party had a legal right to the payment of the fine and compensation, a theory of anything but an archaic nature. (3) His father was liable in the third degree, whose liability is obviously founded not so much upon kinship, as upon his position as the head of the household of which the criminal was a member ; this passage is glossed with the explanation, "when he has no son, for it is upon him (the son) it (the crime) should go before it went upon the father ;" we may conclude therefore that the author of the gloss would introduce the son into the list in priority to the father; it would appear that the original text contemplates the criminal as forming portion of his father's household, but the author of the gloss perceives that the case of the criminal being himself the head of an household has been omitted, and points out that in such case the son whether as the co-owner of the household, or next in blood would be primarily liable; the old rule of the "coir-feine" law cited in the gloss proves that the liability did not affect ancestors or collateral relations so long as there was in existence issue of the criminal to be made answerable. (4) His brothers, in equal shares; with brothers the liability by reason of kinship here stops short, for the next class in order are (5) his "deirbfine" (not deirbfine relations as in the translation, for there is no word in the original equivalent to relations); this word is explained in the gloss as equivalent to "geilfine," and must therefore mean that the liability fell upon the members of the geilfine organization, falling upon the several classes successively, and ultimately upon their default upon the geilfine chief personally; such at least is the conclusion we draw from the following gloss; viz.: "Upon the chief, i. e. the chief who is over the geilfine division which happens to be there; and it is not the chief of the deirbfine divisions, nor of the iaryfine division. It is on them (the geilfine division) the crime is charged before he brings it to the "deirbfine" division from whom he [the chief (?)] has taken their pledges." (6) The household in which is his bed and where he is fed, which seems to mean that the liability then falls upon those who have harboured him and assisted his escape, for these words are qualified by the gloss: "if he is not caught upon his bed." (7) The king, the head of the tribe, as contrasted with the head of the family.

The second paragraph is evidently introduced from the work of some other author, as it is merely a re-statement of the rule laid down in the first paragraph, in a much less satisfactory form. It is remarkable that in the paragraph there is introduced after the "deirbfine" a class described as the "taoibhfine," glossed as "his brother's side family." This would lead to the conclusion that in the latter paragraph the "deirbfine" meant not the members of the geilfine organization, but the first-cousins of the criminal. It is, however, not desirable to embarrass the clear statements of the first paragraph as explained by the glosses, or to start conjectures resting upon a paragraph so confused as the latter undoubtedly is.

A mere sojourning stranger, from whom the chief had not and could not have taken pledges, if guilty of a crime, and not possessed of property, did not render any of the family or tribe liable to contribute to the fine or compensation payable in respect of his crime; he was simply "put upon the road," declared "exlex," and abandoned to his fate.

(The principle that the liability to pay should be commensurate with right to receive is remarkably laid down in the following rules contained in the Commentary:)

In the case of any unintentional* crime except "killing," the eric fine is primarily payable by the criminal; the compensation ("what he owes beside the eric fine," i.e. the honour price) is payable by his family "in the proportions in which they divide his property."

In the case of unintentional "killing" (with certain exceptions) both the family and criminal contribute to pay the entire, whether he has means of payment or not, the criminal paying one "cumhal" of the compensation, and the same share as his father or son in the six cumhals of dire fine, the family contributing the residue in the shares in which would divide his property. The reason for this rule is stated to be that if he himself were killed the entire family would participate in the compensation.

As to intentional crimes, the rule was different. In such cases the criminal, his son, and his father were successively liable to the full extent of their property in exoneration of the family.

When payments have to be made by the criminal, they first fall upon his movable, secondly upon his immovable property, and finally upon himself, by which is meant that he should serve for it until he worked out the value of six "cumhals."

* In page 249, line 1, "intentional" is printed by mistake for "unintentional."

At page 259 is discussed the proportions in which the amount payable for "killing" should be divided among the kin of the deceased. The words of the Commentary are as follows:—"When the man who is dead in this case has a son, he takes the cumhal of compensation alone, if he be alive; and if he is not alive, his father is to take it; if he (the father) is not alive, his brother is to take it; if he (the brother) is not alive, it is the nearest person to him that takes it. It is thus the body-fine is divided—three cumhals of dire-fine go to the son and to the father. There are three cumhals of dire-fine remaining after that; a cumhal of dire-fine goes to a brother (the brothers?) collaterally. There are two cumhals of dire-fine still after this; a cumhal of dire-fine of these goes to the son and to the father. There is one cumhal of dire-fine there after that. This is to be divided from the lowest man of the geilfine division until it reaches the uppermost man, and from the uppermost man until it reaches the lowest man," &c.* Thus, of the six

* This passage illustrates the connexion between the father and son which so often occurs in ancient law. As long as the son forms one of the household of which the father is the head, he is obviously one of those in the hand of his father, and a co-owner of the household property; but even after he has left the original dwelling and established a hearth for himself, he does not completely succeed in shaking off his connexion with his parent. Hence the three emancipations requisite at Roman law to free the son from the patria potestas. It is with reference to this principle that we may explain the passage in the last volume which has produced so much discussion, viz.:—"If the father is alive and has two sons, and each of these has a family of the full number—i.e., four—it is the opinion of lawyers that the father would claim a man's share in every family of them, and that in this case they form two geilfine divisions; and if the property has come from another place—from a family outside, though there should be within in the family a son or a brother of the person whose property came into it, he shall not obtain it any more than any other man of the family." (Vol. iii., p. 333.) From the present passage it is clear that, although the son established a separate household for himself and his sons, the father took a share in the money payable for his body-fine; and hence it may be inferred that the father was entitled to support in the son's house. If a son obtained orba lands, and, having four sons, established an independent "geilfine" system, it appears that his father could claim a man's share in it. The point of the question in the passage referred to seems to be, what was the position of the father if he had two cumhals of the dire fine, the father takes two, the son two, the brother one, the geilfine division one. As to what is styled the compensation (the honour price) none of it passes to the geilfine division; this the son, in the first instance, is entitled to; in default of a son, the father; in default of the father, the brother (or brothers); and in default of a brother, the nearest person to him, by which we must understand that it passes as a succession to the person or persons who would be entitled to the brother's property upon his death. This Commentary is appended to a text which deals with the question, "Who are they who divide the chattels and the dibadh property (of a deceased person?). The answer to this in the original text runs simply thus—"Four, father and son, brother and family." The Commentary, however, upon this text deals with the mode in which compensation and dire fines are divisible, and between whom. Nothing can show more clearly that to the commentator the persons entitled to "dibadh" property and to compensation and dire fine were the same and in the same proportion; but he has certainly failed to explain whether it was in accordance with the rule applicable to the compensation, or according to that applicable to the dire fine, the dibadh property would devolve. It would seem that the rule applicable to the compensation, not that applicable to the dire fine, is the analogy to the rule for the devolution of the debadh property. The rule sons, who had both obtained grants of orba land, and severally founded distinct "families" in which of them should the father take his "man's share" and how should his rights be arranged as between the two families?

The opinion referred to laid down that the father had a distinct and independent right to a "man's share" in both of the families, although they formed two distinct geilfine divisions. The second portion of the passage points out the distinction between the rights of a father and that of any other member of the family in the form of an argument, viz. :—"So different is the position of the father from that of any other member of the family, that in the preceding case the father has his right to a 'man's share' in both families, although in the subsequent case no member of a family, whatever be his apparent equity, has any special rights whatsoever." The father in the supposed case would occupy the anomalous position of being a member of two incipient "families."

as to the dire fine laid down in this passage is wholly inconsistent with that stated in page 247, line 2. The latter passage is introduced as explanatory of the rule in page 245, line 26; but it must be observed that the explanation is inconsistent with the rule which it is supposed to explain, and that, to make any sense of the passage, we must read at line 4 of page 247 "share in" for "take." Now, the whole explanation is introduced to explain the apparent anomaly of the family contributing to the payment of the compensation for an unintentional killing, and no such explanation would be necessary unless the fact of the family sharing in the liability to pay, and the right to receive compensation presented some difficulty which required explanation. This difficulty must have been that the rules as to compensation were in some extent inconsistent with what would have been naturally expected to have been laid down upon the subject—that is, that they deviated from the fundamental principle of the rules as to liability to pay or receive fines and compensation with those which regulated the devolution of property upon death.

If the family, by which we must understand the parties liable in the second degree, paid the amount to which the criminal himself was primarily liable, they acquired a charge upon his property, which they could enforce to taking possession and the receipt of the profits. "The limit of the duty of the family which pays his, the kinsman's, trepasses until they are paid back every 'sed' which they have paid, together with its profit, the grazing of the grass, nor the must, nor the corn do not go into account against them."*

The injured party appears to have possessed a similar right as against even the land of the wrongdoer, if he had land, but the members of the family could discharge the claim against themselves by handing over the criminal, and retain the land for themselves. "And the family have the choice whether to hand him over and have the land to themselves, or whether they will give the land for the crime ; and it is within the choice of the family this lies." It follows from this passage that the injured party had an acknowledged, and acquiesced in, right to seize even the land of the wrongdoer in payment of his demand, which would have led to the very inconvenient result of a stranger being settled upon the tribe or family land ; what would be the legal status of the stranger is difficult to understand, whether he would be entitled only to the profits of land held by the wrongdoer in exclusive ownership merely, or whether the possession of the land would have drawn with it the accessories of sharing the common tribe land, and the depasture of the waste ; to avoid this difficulty the family might surrender the wrongdoer, and themselves acquire his portion of land.

* Page 257.

The second tract entitled "The Land is forfeited for Crimes," is of a very miscellaneous nature, and of a palpably late date. The idea of the forfeiture of the lands of a criminal, irrespective of their value and amount, arose in the English and other feudal systems from the nature of the tenure of land. The lord possessed the absolute ownership, the tenant only the usufruct upon the condition of the performance of the incidents of his tenure ; the commission of a felony, in its nature a quasi-treasonable act, terminated the right of the tenant to the usufruct, and the land escheated to the lord of whom it was held ; the escheat of the land in such a case rested upon an entirely different basis from that of the forfeiture of the felons' goods ; but when the land was held in absolute ownership, and the possession of the owner was that of the head or member of a family, although his goods might be forfeited, the land could not ; the law as to the gavelkind lands of Kent was a survival and illustration of this principle. In the preceding tract the wrongdoer either lost the possession of his land temporarily until its profits paid off the amount to which he was liable, or absolutely as the result of his loss of status, not as a punishment in the correct use of that term. The author of this tract has thrown together a number of loose memoranda and references to authorities upon the subject of the forfeiture of land, and the fines payable in respect of theft, in a manner which would suggest that they represent the heads of some law argument upon the subject. The case upon which he relies is the remarkable decision as to the forfeiture of Bregia by the tribe of Aengus Gabhuaidech, in consequence of the latter having wounded in the eye the King Cormac at his palace at Tara; the circumstances of the case are fully set forth at the commencement of the Book of Aicill in the preceding volume. It is to be observed that in the original authority there is no allusion to a forfeiture of the land at all; the decision was that the members of Aengus' tribe should undergo a "diminutio capitis," viz., that in a certain proportion the inhabitants should be reduced to the condition of "daer" stock tenants; and that which is treated as a forfeiture of the land arose from their refusal to submit to the sentence, and emigrating in a body into Munster. Our author treats the transaction as essentially a forfeiture in the nature of a punishment for a crime. "For what old Adam did great things were lost," i.e., as by the transgression "all the fruits of Paradise were forfeited by Adam, so his lands were forfeited by Aengus."*

Various other passages prove the late date of this tract, and that it was written either by an ecclesiastic, or under ecclesiastical influence, such as the following extract noted down for citation, "God has not formed corruption nor any particular species of violation, the merciful God deems such things atrocious; unless land is given no umpire can heal them, i.e., unless land is obtained as the eric-fine the crimes cannot be taken away, though it be a righteous judge who estimates them, for he would pronounce no falsehood."† In a subsequent passage we find an extract from the Gospel of St. John introduced by the well known phrase of "ut dixit lex." It would appear in one passage that the author was attempting to introduce the doctrine of the Roman "hæres."*

* Page 267. The peculiar judgment upon this occasion may have arisen from the fact that Aengus, when he wounded King Cormac, was acting in an official character as the "aire-echta" of his tribe.

† Page 265.

Although evidently drawn up for some practical purpose, the tone and manner of this tract closely resemble portions of the introduction to the Book of Aicill, which the author manifestly had before him, and it is probably of the same and as late a date.

Apart from a few incidental extracts from previous authors, it cannot be considered as an authority on the Brehon Law, and is valuable as illustrating the change to which the older system must have been subjected from the influence of the Church.

At the date of its composition the Irish lawyers were perplexed by the conflicting ideas of the old law on the one hand, and Christianity and the Roman Law on the other, the state of mind so curiously exemplified by the introduction to the laws of Alfred.

V.

THE SUCCESSION TO LAND.

In the preceding section we have endeavoured to ascertain the proportions in which fines and compensations were payable by the parties secondarily liable, as affording some reliable information as the rules of succession to property, and enabling us thus to explain the passages in the first tract in this volume dealing with the subject, and as also explaining the practical effect of the geilfine system upon the succession to land.

However strongly the rule may be laid down that the liability to pay the fine or compensation falls upon those who would be entitled to the property of the wrongdoer upon his death, and in the same proportions, it is clear that this liability could only fall upon the persons in esse at the time, those resembling the class of persons entitled under an ordinary English settlement of real estate, whom we should describe as having vested estates in remainder, and must exclude the unborn issue of all such,

* Page 267.

although such issue may subsequently come into being, and succeed to the possession of the estate. The rules for the incidence of these payments must have been drawn up to meet ordinary cases; and the more complicated and unusual must have been decided according to the principle involved in these rules—involved, not expressed—because the Brehon lawyer is always dealing with specific concrete cases, and however elaborate in his arithmetic calculations, never attempts any abstract rule or definition. Before discussing the rules as to the succession of land, it may be observed that to a large proportion of the tribe land the legal idea of a succession must have been inapplicable. It is now an admitted fact that the Irish tribe was not in its organization an anomalous institution, but was simply one example of those village communities which existed among all the early Aryan nations, and that the forms of all these communities resembled each other in their general features. In all the numerous books published lately upon the subject, this principle has been laid down; and the difficulty in dealing with the subject at present is not to discover analogous cases, but to escape being entangled in or misled by the countless examples of institutions more or less similar, with which we are now so abundantly furnished. The district of the tribe was at first as a matter of fact, and was always in theory considered to be, the property of the tribe; from this are first to be subtracted the dwellings of the members of the tribe, with their curtilages; next the chief's share; and lastly, those portions of the general tribe land which had been in same manner (it is immaterial how) allotted to individuals or families in exclusive ownership. The residue of the lands, unappropriated to individuals, consisted of the common tillage and meadow land, and the common pasture or waste. The common tillage and meadow lands were divided out from time to time in separate proportions, and according to some customary law among all the members of the tribe who also enjoyed the right to depasture the waste according to certain fixed rules. It is clear that to these latter two classes of land the idea of succession is wholly inapplicable; the right to till or graze the public lands was a purely personal and temporary right enjoyed by the individual as being a member of the tribe, and enjoyed by his sons, not by any hereditary right, claimed from or through their father, but in their own right as themselves being members of the tribe for the time being. The ownership of these lands was vested in the collective tribe, but the rights of each member were personal, temporary, and incorporeal. But the nature of the interest of the owners in land cut out of the general tribe land, and allotted in exclusive ownership was entirely different. They claimed under a grant made to one or more persons, and made their title through the grantee or grantees; this title to land is usually spoken of as being hereditary, and the land in question described as inheritable land, or land of inheritance; but it does not follow that although the title must be made under a particular grant, and through the original grantee, that the actual owners stand in the relation of "heirs" to the person through whom they claim. Our modern ideas of inheritance and heirship are involved with those of the transmission of property by descent and primogeniture; and much of the confusion which exists upon this subject, has arisen from the inquiry proceeding upon the assumption that purely local and arbitrary rules of our own municipal law are universal and eternal principles.

Land might be allotted in separate ownership for a limited period (e.g., for a life), or in perpetuity; but although the former class of grants are found among the A. S. charters, in the case of the Irish tribes we have no reason to believe that the grants were limited in duration.

When land was alienated in perpetuum, it passed upon the death of the original grantee to the person or persons entitled, according to the custom, to the succession to his property; such persons might, or might not, be identical with his nearest agnates; but even if they were, it did not follow that their title to the succession was founded on descent or even blood relationship. The origin of all successions appears to be not descent, but co-ownership.

The legal unit is not the individual but the household; the head of a house acquires property for his household, and possesses it as the manager of an implied partnership, not as an absolute owner. The household need not include all his descendants, or consist exclusively of them. The emancipated sons, under the old Roman, would not have shared in their father's property, which would have passed to an adopted son. Our ideas as to the transmission of property in ancient times are, perhaps, embarrassed by too exclusive a reference to the Roman law, in which the hæres presents a misleading resemblance to the feudal heir; but in countries in which the technical unity of the family, exhibited in the existence of the Roman hæres, was not continued, the succession was manifestly equivalent to survivorship among joint tenants; and this principle of survivorship applies not merely to the property of the head of the household, but to that of every member of it. Let us observe how a perfectly simple process is obscured by the use of words. If a household consists of A, the father, and B and C, the sons, they are co-tenants or co-partners in the property of the household, with the father, A, as the manager; if the father, A, dies, the property survives to B and C, the sons; in this case the sons would be commonly spoken of as taking in the character of their father's heirs. On the other hand, if B, one of the sons, dies, the property survives to A, the father, and C, the surviving son; we should in this case think that no rights to property had passed, and speak of the possibility of B succeeding to his father as having ceased. Again, if a third son, D, is born no visible change has taken place, but, in fact, a new member has been introduced into the joint tenancy or partnership, and the rights of the three original joint tenants, diminished pro tanto. The extent to which heirship is traced in the collateral line in any ancient law depends upon the greater or less magnitude of the original joint family. If, for any reason, families have hung together for several generations, continuing to form one household, the death of each member increasing the shares of all the other members in the common fund, the extent of collateral heirship admitted by the customary law may be very wide ; and, on the other hand, it will be probably found that in the case of a nation which, from some external reason, has acquired the custom of inhabiting small and distinct habitations, the degrees of collateral heirship will be contracted, unless the idea of relationship be kept up by family religious rites. The reason for the rule that the liability to pay fines and compensation falls upon the persons who would take the property of the criminal, and in the same shares, is that, as the family has to pay for the wrongs committed by its members, the payment falls upon the common fund, and diminishes pro tanto the shares of all who take by survivorship.

This is illustrated by, and explains, a difficulty which arises as to the incidence of, and the rights to, fines. In some passages the father is the person primarily liable, in some the son, and in some they are represented as jointly entitled to the compensation. Who in any given case were entitled to the succession, or liable for wrongs, must originally have turned upon the question of fact, who, at the date of the death, or of the crime, were the members of the household to which the deceased or the wrong-doer belonged.

The rules as to the succession to land have been embarrassed by the use in the Brehon Law of words descriptive of different kinds of interests in lands, or, rather, of lands distinguished by a reference to the nature of the interests of the possessors ; and the terms used are such as involve a cross division. The primary distinction between the general tribe-land and the lands of inheritance is perfectly clear ; the former are the fearan fine ; the latter are the orba lands. The latter class of lands are subdivided into those upon which the geilfine organization had been, and those in which it was not, established. The former lands are described repeatedly as "coibne" land—that is, land which was the property of an organized association of persons. The root of the word seems to imply something like the spreading of branches from a common stock, and it is frequently used to denote the association of different individuals considered as one body in a legal point of view. There also occurs another term frequently used as descriptive of land, viz., "dibadh," the explanation of which involves much difficulty. It is used, as has been observed, in the first tract as descriptive of common tribe land as contrasted with coibne land; it is also used to express the property passing from a deceased to the parties entitled to the succession, and it is used in the latter sense evidently to describe the share of a deceased co-owner in coibne land when it passed by succession. It would appear that the term is used rather in opposition to the term "coibne" than as descriptive of any specific class of lands, and designates land which is divisible among various parties as tenants in common, and not as members of an association. The same land might be described as either "coibne" or "dibadh," according to the rights of the individuals then under consideration. The question as to the succession to "cruibh" and "sliasta," the interests in which were created by express contract, may be postponed until after that of the two other classes—viz., (1) land of inheritance not subjected to the geilfine organization, and (2) lands upon which a geilfine organization had been established.

Assuming that the penalty for wrong falls upon the household of the wrong-doer, and that the succession to his property would take the form of a survivorship of the other members of the household, three possible cases would arise—

(1.) If the wrong-doer, or deceased, as the case might be, were a member of his father's household, the liability would fall upon the father, and the share of the deceased pass to him, in both cases in his character of head of the household.

(2.) If the son did not go out during his father's lifetime, and after his death continued in the house in joint possession with his brothers and their descendants, the latter would both incur the liability and take the succession, in each case as the co-members of the household, but the transaction would apparently be different from the preceding case, for the fact of the succession would be here apparent.

(3.) If the son had gone out and established himself as the head of an independent household, the liability would fall upon, and the succession accrue to, his own children or remoter descendants, the co-members of the household, and in this case there would appear to be liability and heirship resting upon descent.

The right to fines or compensation would follow the same rule as the liability to pay them.

In the latter two cases, if we were to speculate who at any given time might be the co-members of the household, our calculation would include all persons necessarily members of the house who could come into being during the life of the wrong-doer, or deceased.

The two tracts in question in various passages state the persons liable to pay and entitled to receive fines and compensation. The statements are apparently contradictory, but a clear idea of the order of priority may be obtained by a careful comparison and analysis. We may disregard the passages in which the general word "family" is used; in all such cases the liability of the members of the family among themselves would be secundum legem, and this must be necessarily implied. We may similarly disregard the passages in which the term "the nearest hearth" is used; this term must either mean the household next liable in order according to law, or refer to cases inapplicable to the question of succession.

In page 243 the order of liability is thus described:—(a) the father; (b) the brother; and (c) the geilfine (see the gloss as to the latter term, and the preceding gloss introducing the son in priority to the father). In page 245 it is—(a) the brother; (b) the geilfine division; (c) the deirbfine; (d) the taoibhfine or the iarfine division; and (e) the iarfine. In 247 it is the son. In page 269 it is—(a) the son; and (b) the father; and in pages 249 and 268 it is simply the geilfine.

As to the right to receive the compensation, in page 245-6 we are told that the body fine for the death of father or son is payable to the entire family. In page 255 the father and the son of the slain take half the eric fine between them. In the page 259 the body fine of six cumhals is divided in the following proportions:—To the father, two; to the son, two; to the brother, one; and to the geilfine, one.

These fluctuating dicta involve no real contradiction. There is no statement in any of them inconsistent with the others, if we suppose that on each occasion the author is dealing with some specific case, asserting the liability of some individual defendant, but not defining the order of liability of the persons secondarily liable as among themselves.

Bearing in mind the principle, "As long as there is a family before him, it is not backwards he sues," there can be no difficulty in stating the order of liability and the reasons for it.

The liability falls first upon the persons who would be the members of his household; if he were the head of an household, its members would be his own sons, and, therefore, upon the son the liability first falls.

If he has not left his father's family, the liability falls upon the father as the head of the household; if he were dead, those next liable are the brothers who would have been joint owners with the criminal.

Thus the liability is confined to the persons who were, or had been, members of the same household with the wrongdoer; but at this point the liability of relations stops, and the geilfine division of the "fine" assumes the liability. There was no intervening liability between that of brothers and that of the general "family."

If we now attempt to translate this priority of liability into a theory of the succession, the following observations appear of importance:—

(1.) The rule that the parties liable pay the fine in the proportions in which they would divide his property, does not imply that eo instanti upon death the property would have been divided among the parties named; it means that the liability, as a damnosa hereditas, or negative quantity, pursues the same line of succession as the actual inheritance would have pursued.

(2.) The term son must be read as "sons," and inclusive of the descendants of sons, and the observation applies to the term "brother" also.

The sons of the deceased take in priority to his brothers; but of such a rule, when once admitted to exist, there are two possible explanations, either (a.) that the brothers succeed if the deceased die without leaving sons or lineal descendants surviving him, or (b.) that the brothers, or their descendants claiming through them, succeed to the inheritance upon the general failure of the sons or their descendants, as we should express it, upon the general failure of the male issue of the purchaser; or, as it might be put, whether upon failure of male issue of the original acquirer, his brothers or their descendants would claim as his heirs, or as the collateral heirs of the last of the issue. This involves the question what was the nature of the interest taken by the sons of the deceased in his lands. At the present day, and in the English Law, the eldest son, succeeding as heir to an estate in fee, takes the estate absolutely without any obligation to transmit it to his own heir; according to the old French law of substitutions the eldest son took the estate, but was deprived of all power of alienation, so that the succession upon his death passed to his heir; and the principle of the Scotch tailzie is similar.

In all early systems of law the idea of primogeniture is absent, and the land passes to all the sons; supposing it thus to pass, the practical working of the rule of descent hinges upon the question whether these sons take as absolute owners, with full powers of alienation, or whether all the male descendants of the ancestor have a claim to a portion in the lands which cannot be defeated by their predecessors; and if so, how long does this right exist, or at what date is it extinguished?

Although the tribe may be considered as perpetual, and its members, at however remote a date, retain their rights in the common land, there is no indication that the lands of inheritance were subject to such a rule, which, if it existed, would have bound property in a perpetual entail, and prohibited alienation. It is to be remarked that in no passage is there allusion to land passing to the descendants of an owner generally, and in perpetuum; on the other hand, there are frequently allusions to the four first generations of the descendants of the deceased, and the clearest intimation that the head of a family, who was an owner of property, could not alien for his own purposes, to the injury of his descendants, and that there existed in the sons a certain right to the father's land, sufficient, at least, to restrain the latter's power of alienation. The residue of the land of the "fine" remains undivided until the constitution of the "innfine" class, which fixes a date connected with existence of a fourth generation of descendants.* Lands were estimated "according to the amount of their property from great-grandson to the great-great-grandson;"† this passage is explained as stating the mode in which land is divided upon the death of a daughter (who must be a daughter, not of the original ancestor, but of the survivor of his sons—although this is immaterial), upon whose death the latest descendants entitled, are specified as the great-great-grand-children of a common ancestor.

A remarkable passage occurs in page 287, which, whether it refers to estates of "fuidhirs," or separate property in land generally, expresses the author's idea of hereditary succession. "The son is enriched in the same ratio as his father, and the father does not sell anything to the prejudice of his sons, grandsons, great-grandsons, or great-great-grandsons." Thus, an owner of land was restrained from alienation in favour of his four next generations of descendants, which implies that all the members of these four generations took an interest in the lands of their ancestor; and, if these four generations had thus joint rights in the land, as quasi-joint tenants, the death of any one would operate as a survivorship for the benefit of all the existing members of the class, and the shares in the land would vary, from time to time, according as new members were introduced upon their birth; and if this hereditary right was not transmissible beyond the fourth generation, all the existing members of the class at the date of the last division (the date of the introduction of the last member into the class) would hold in severalty, and form respectively new hereditary stocks. It may be suggested that the reason for the assumption of four generations as the basis of this system of descent, was as follows:—the land vested in the original acquirer, as head of his household, and as a portion of the joint property, which he could not alien during his life, and the rights of those who succeeded to the land were based upon the theory of their being the surviving members of his household. When the fact of succession passed into a theory for succession, the right of succession would be given to all those who could possibly have been existing members of the household at date of the death of the head, and descendants of the fourth degree were considered as the most remote who could stand in that position. A law of heirship founded upon such a basis would draw the limit of collectoral heirship at third cousins; this may seem to some a very narrow and imperfect scheme of title by descent, but the difficulty seems to us not to reduce it to this limit, but to extend it so far. The succession, in default of sons, passed first to the father, and then to the uncles of deceased, but manifestly all more remote collateral relations were excluded, and the succession of the gailfine class was equivalent to a succession to the family to which the deceased belonged. The rights of the heir-at-law, however remote his relationship to the deceased, is a purely English and modern idea, imported into the feudal law by a very transparent fiction, and almost within the present generation, systematized by recent statutes. As against the father or the brothers, there does not seem to have been any restraint upon alienation, and naturally because they could not have been members of the household of the deceased, and they could not be considered, except by a fiction, as having any joint ownership with the deceased in the subject matter of the succession. The “alienation” applied to the ownership of land, such as we are dealing with, must be understood as alienation in accordance with the local custom, and so far as it was thereby permitted, and is not to be confounded with the unrestricted rights of disposal, which we now associate with absolute ownership.

* Pages 283-287.

† Page 33.

In considering any rules of descent, it must be remembered that the terms son, brother, &c., are correlatives, and possess no meaning until we have ascertained who is the father, brother, &c., to whom they refer—until we have fixed the stirps, the relationship to which determines the succession. The original stirps must manifestly be the head of the household, when the land in question was granted in several ownership out of the common tribe land; but if the right by descent were always traced back to the first acquirer, the extent to which collateral successions would exist must have been far wider than the text authorizes us in concluding it to have been. If we are right in our opinion that the general rule of all male descendants to a share in the inheritance ceased with the fourth generation, it follows that the members of the family who then acquired separate, not undivided shares, each became a new stirps for a fresh line of descendants.

When land has been granted out of the common tribe land in severalty, and as the property of an individual, if the inheritance become vacant by the failure of heirs to the grantee, the land thus left without an owner falls back into the general tribe land out of which it was taken. Whether in such a case it becomes the property of the chief, or of the members of the tribe, depends upon the question whether the chief has, as was ultimately in most European countries the case, succeeded in substituting himself for the general body of the members of the tribe as the representative of the State. That lands of inheritance, upon which no geilfine system had been established, did so revert, is proved by the special rule relative to extern inheritance in the case of a fully organized "fine," in which latter case the geilfine division were entitled to a succession, in the nature of an escheat, in vacant inheritances. This we take to be the meaning of the passage in page 285 :—"The geilfine extends to five persons, and it is they that get the dibadh of every kindred chief who leaves 'dibadh' property." The phrase "who leaves" is glossed "who becomes extinct of." The geilfine division are here described as five co-existing persons, who take jointly an inheritance under certain circumstances. There would be no necessity for the observation, if the "dibadh" property in question passed to them as those primarily entitled to the succession; their right to succeed is a privilege connected with their official or local position as the five men of the geilfine division. The property in question cannot have been the "dibadh" property of any of the seventeen men, for it would then have survived to the men of the division of the deceased. This implies that the five men of the "geilfine" division represent the entire "fine" for the purpose of receiving successions, as they represent the community in being ultimately liable in certain cases for the wrong committed by the members of the "fine." If an allotment made to a member of the "fine," other than the seventeen men, became vacant by failure of heirs, the land fell not into the common property of the "fine," but became the exclusive property of the five men. If brothers, however, take a succession next to the sons of a deceased, this rule could not (subject to the exception subsequently noticed) apply until the "geilfine" system had been completed, and the land divided among the members, because every member of the "fine" must in that case have left a brother or nephews surviving him, except a sixth or younger son of the first geilfine chief, and a son of such son, or a sixth or younger son of the second "geilfine" chief, &c. Successions so very rare as these could not be considered as in the nature of a privilege or the subject of a special rule, and, as up to the date of the final partition the "geilfine" chief is assumed to be the owner of the waste, there would be little object in such a regulation; but its meaning is evident if it implies that the fifth "geilfine" chief, and his four brothers, who jointly form the last and permanent "geilfine" division, continuing to represent the "fine" for the purpose of liability, continue also to represent it beneficially as entitled to the succession to vacant inheritances. Their position would in this case be very similar to that of the lord of a manor in the English law.

It is stated in the introduction to Mr. Curry's Lectures that the succession was at first to the sons or remoter male issue exclusively, but that ultimately the daughters became entitled if there were no sons.* Although the authorities cited to support this seem to the cases and rules dealing with cruib and sliasta land, there is no reason to doubt the general accuracy of the statement.

There are, undoubtedly, in the glosses to the first tract in this volume, indications that at the date of the glosses, daughters had succeeded in acquiring a right to succession upon the death of their brothers, and that the later lawyers altered the original text, by the introduction of words supposed to have been omitted, and thus corrected the law to make it accord with the later usage; thus, in the original text at page 39, line 23, there is the passage, "an extern branch stops it (i.e., the property) if the five persons of the geilfine-division perish." This is glossed as follows—"and in this case there is no female heir." This gloss manifestly follows up that in page 41, line 24, referring to page 39, line 16, "all the geilfine-division have become extinct, and all the land is obtained by the daughter in right of her female 'coarb'-ship, or as I have to tell concerning the dibadh-land of the head (cinn) to whom the land belonged, i.e., the daughter; it is then the land is divided among the three tribes." The right of females to a succession would be manifestly suggested by the feudal law; the first English settlement was founded upon the assertion of this principle; and such a doctrine would be popular among the owners of land, naturally desirous to transmit their property to their female issue. The principle of female succession to lands other than cruibh and sliasta, does not exist in the original text, and appears as struggling into existence at the date of the latest commentators; such a theory of succession is in contradiction to the old conception of the household, and that it was repugnant to the opinions of the older school of lawyers is shown by the restrictions by which it was limited even in the case of cruibh and sliasta land.

* Manners and Customs, vol. I., p. clxxx.

The obvious objection in a system of tribe law to female succession is that it naturally leads to alienate the lands of the family, and by intermarriages with externs to transfer them to members of a foreign tribe. This difficulty arose in the days of Moses. Thus, on the petition of the daughters of Zelophedad, of the tribe of Manasseh, who had died in the wilderness, Moses laid down the rule that the daughters should succeed to their father's inheritance if there was no son;* but the objection to this rule was soon perceived and stated by the fathers of the family of Gilead, viz., "if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of our fathers, and be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received; so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance."† The rule, as originally laid down, had to be modified by the annexed proviso, "every daughter that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his father. Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe, but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance."‡

At whatever date female succession was established, it appears to have been subject to a restriction similar in effect to the later Mosaic rule. "A female heir is here referred to who has had the father's and the grandfather's land for a time, and though she should desire to give it to her sons, she shall not give it."§ The introduction of female succession to land is contemporary with the birth of the idea of absolute ownership, and fixes the date at which the idea of the family and tribe is finally broken up. Although the rule of female succession existed under the Brehon Law it may

* Num. 27, 1.

† Id., ch. 36, 1.

‡ Id., v. 8.

§ Page 39, see gloss, p. 41, line 4.

be regarded as a proof of the late date of the author who asserts it as a rule, and must be rejected from any statement of the ancient law of succession.

The succession to the cruibh and sliasta land rested upon express contract, and this class of lands consisted of those which, to use a modern term, were settled upon the marriage of a daughter of the house; that this form of succession was considered as an infringement of the common right of the family is proved by the necessity of obtaining the consent of the geilfine-chief to the contract. The effect of this contract, it would appear, was to introduce the daughter into the class entitled to the succession upon the death of the father. It must be presumed that the daughter during her life was entitled to the possession, as in the Welsh law in analogous case it is stated, "her gwaddol constitutes her proprietorship if she abide by her kindred."* The succession of her children was, however, much restricted; if she were married to a native freeman, her sons would be themselves entitled to the rights of full members of the tribe and upon the obvious principle that they could not claim at once under and against the custom, they lost, for the general benefit of the family, two-thirds of the lands; if her sons were, through their father, "exiles and foreigners," i.e., if they had no claim to any portion of the family land under the customary law, they were left in possession of the entire at the will of the family, "while they are doing good with it." If the only issue of the marriage were daughters, there appears to have been a question whether they were entitled to a succession. Their right to the land was established by a leading case decided by Brigh, probably the wife of the Brehon Sencha previously referred to,† and it would seem that the passage introduced in page 41, line 16, is intended to be a report of the judgment. The case is thus stated—"The mother had died, and left no son, and there are no sons, but daughters only. And the daughters shall obtain all the land with obligation to perform service of attack and defence, or the half of it, without obligation to perform service of attack and defence; and there is power over them to compel them to restore the land after their time." Hence it would appear that they were bound to indemnify the tribe against loss by reason of their incapacity to serve, or to compound for this liability by surrender of half the land, as a tenant of a lease, perpetually renewable, may, upon obtaining a fee-farm grant, free his holding from future liability to rent by releasing to the landlord a proportionate part of the lands; and that the interest taken by the daughters was for their own lives, and upon their death the lands fell back into the common fund of land out of which it had been taken.

* Ancient Laws, &c., of Wales, vol. 2, p. 607.

† Page 17.

VI.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.*

The subject of this tract may be more correctly described as the rules regulating the mode of the partition of lands held by joint tenants, and the rights which, upon the partition, arise between the owners of the several portions.

The composition of the tract is remarkably consecutive, and, from the author's point of view, logically developed. The commentary is unusually clear and intelligible, although in some instances explanations are introduced which anticipate, or are merely copied from, subsequent passages of the original text; thus the commentary in page 77 is identical with the text at page 113; and towards the end of the tract passages evidently taken from other writings are introduced, some of which are difficult to understand, and others directly contradict the leading principles laid down in the body of the work. A remarkable instance of the latter case occurs in page 147, from line 6 to line 19.

* The word translated in the text "co-tenancy" is translated by Dr. O'Donovan as "joint-tenancy." This is a very remarkable error not as to the meaning of the Irish word, but of its presumed English equivalent. The subject discussed in the tract is the rights arising between persons, who have ceased to be joint-tenants by a severance of their joint-tenancy, and become owners in severalty of their separate holdings. We have no English term expressing such a legal relation, and the words "co-tenancy" and "co-tenants" have been used as the nearest equivalent expression. The learned translators did not profess to be skilled in the terms of English law, but they grievously embarrassed their translations by the use of technical words which they could not be expected to understand. The present editors have carefully removed from the translation every English term, the use of which could lead only to a misconception of the original text.

This tract does not apply to any process similar to the modern enclosure of a common. That the general tribal land or public pasture should be cut up into separate lots, and divided among the members of the tribe in absolute ownership, was foreign to the ideas of any early community, and the author, at the commencement of the tract, carefully points to the circumstances under which the relationship described by him as "co-tenancy" arose. "Whence does co-tenancy arise?" he asks; and to this question himself replies—"From several heirs." We are here reminded of the important statements referable to the land of the "fine" in pages 287 and 285, the former of which states that the land of a family was not at all divided, and the latter states that in certain circumstances the members of the geilfine organization divided among themselves the residue of the tribe land as dibadh land, and that thereupon the family relations ceased, and there was henceforth what was called a community of people. The partition of the lands need not be confined to the case of a "fine," but must be extended to the breaking up of any inheritance among several heirs, which, if the theory of the rules regulating the succession to land hereinbefore proposed be correct, necessarily took place on the completion of the fourth generation of the descendants of the founder of the household or first acquirer.

The author understands that the pre-existing rights, which depended upon joint ownership, are determined by the fact of the partition, and that the owners of the several lots must henceforth deal with each other individually, and that their mutual rights depend upon an agreement contemporary with the division of the lands. "The heirs, in the first place, partition their shares and their possessions, and each of them guards against the other of them, and each of them gives a pledge of indemnity to the other."* The reciprocal rights between the adjoining and now independent owners, which are to be thus secured by mutual pledges, would in the civil or English law be inferred in the case of any adjoining owners, and the transaction takes the form of the mutual covenants, which are sometimes necessary, to meet peculiar circumstances, in our deeds of partition. It is, however, to be observed that the giving of the indemnity was not accompanied with any detail of the extent and nature of the indemnity itself, which was defined and explained by reference to the custom, and that the material pledge given and preserved was not the corpus out of which the compensation or damages was to be paid, but rather the evidence of the existence of a contract the nature of which was assumed. "Each cotenant shall place a pledge of the value of two 'screpulls' on one of the rack pins of each other's at the foot of the bed as security for the fulfilment of the duties of co-tenancy; and though he should not fulfil them, this is not the pledge that shall be forfeited for it, but the 'smacht'-fine which we have mentioned before, or sacks, or fines for man trespass according to the nature of the trespass, if trespass has taken place therefrom."* The subsequent relation of the parties is clearly expressed in the phrase—"the new custom avoids the security,"† meaning that the relations which had previously existed between the parties, arising by implication from their position as joint owners, had come to an end, and that their subsequent mutual rights rested upon the legal consequences of the interchange of pledges.

The several lots in the land to be divided having been ascertained, the duty of sufficiently fencing their respective shares fell upon the several parties. There are no rules given for the extent of fencing, which each several owner was to execute, and as each fence was common to two properties, it must in every case have been a matter of arrangement between the parties; but, very specific directions are given as to the size and materials of the fences to be erected. There are four kinds of fence specified; (1) a trench, corresponding with what is now usually called in Ireland a "ditch;" a trench with the earth dug out of it, piled on one side of it in the fashion of a wall or mount; the trench was to be three feet deep, three feet wide at the top, one at the bottom, and two at the middle. The mound corresponded with the form of the trench out of which it was excavated, being three feet in height, three feet wide at the base, and one foot at the top. (2) A stone wall of six feet in height, three feet wide at the base, and one at the summit: this was evidently a dry stone wall like those now common in the West of Ireland, because the only instrument specified as necessary for their erection is an iron bar, and there is no allusion to the use of mortar. (3 & 4) The other two kinds of fences, described as a "strong" or "close" fence, or a "felmadh" (otherwise a naked) fence, were of wood or timbers set together; the details of these are elaborately given, but must appear to the modern reader rather obscure. The former is thus described: "the top of the one tree shall be on the trunk of the other tree, and so as that the smallest sucking pig could not pass through it for its closeness, nor the ox pass over it for its height." The latter class of fence was not of so substantial a nature. "The naked fence should be thus made; the length of a foot to the articulation (or separation) of the big toe is to be between every two stakes, and six feet in its height, or twelve hands, if it be measured by hands; and three bands of interwoven twigs upon it, a band on it at the bottom, another in the middle, and another at the top, and a certain space between every two bands; and a hand is the length of the pole (the interweaving) from that out, and a black-thorn crest upon it at the top; and every stake should be flattened at top by three blows struck on its head, after being first thrust by the hand in the ground as well as you can,"* The nature of the fence depended upon the nature of the place in which it was to be erected, which is thus explained—"a trench or a stone wall in the plain; and the naked fence in the half plain, and the close fence in the wood.”* It appears from this that the right of separate ownership was not confined to arable or even grazing lands, but in some cases included what would have been expected to have formed portion of the waste of the tribe; this separate ownership of forest accounts for what would be otherwise difficult to understand, the liability of owners of lands for trespasses committed by wild animals.† The constant and regular attendance of all the parties engaged in the fencing was attempted to be secured by the very naif rule; “each of them shall give his victuals into the hand of the other at night, that he may remember to come in the morning to his share of the cotenancy work; and the victuals of the person that will not come may be safely used, and if the victuals of any of them be used, he shall pay fine for overuse.”‡

* Page 75.

† Page 74.

* Page 77.

The whole theory of the damages paid in respect of the most usual form of trespass, the trespass of a neighbour's cattle, was calculated after the usual Brehon fashion, every possible form and incident of the trespass being introduced, as an arithmetical quantity, influencing the ultimate result. In a passage in a later portion of the tract§ the actual amount of damage done is suggested as the basis to calculate the sum of the compensation to be paid. “A worthy neighbour is brought to appraise the trespass, and grass of equal value is given at the decision of the neighbours;” this matter-of-fact mode of estimating the damage was probably considered unscientific by our author who proceeds to lay down every possible element in estimating compensation, and to annex to each a fixed value. These distinctions, if stated at length, would occupy much space; and the actual amount payable in respect of any supposed trespass, or the possible number of results which might be produced by varying the elements of the calculation, is of little practical importance. This desire to reduce matters necessarily fluctuating to certain results, this wholly misapplied pretension to arithmetical accuracy, was the essential vice of the Brehon law, and the glory of

* Page 77.

† Page 121.

‡ Page 77.

§ Page 147.

its professors; the working of this system was so fully explained in the introduction to the last volume, that it is unnecessary here to recapitulate it, and it is not needful on the present occasion to do more than to summarize what were the chief elements in their calculations upon this subject. The personal responsibility of the defendant, either by wilful acts or culpable negligence, divided all trespasses into "man" trespass, and ordinary or "cattle" trespass. The extent of the trespass, whether the cattle had merely run in and upon the lands, or walked about thereon and eaten the verdure and crop; or had spent some time there not only eating but lying down, was also defined; and technical names were given to these species of trespass, viz., "tairsce," "airlim," and "feis;" and the proportion of damages payable in respect of each fixed, as so constantly occurs in these calculations, in the geometrical ratio of two.* The time at which the trespass took place, whether by day or night, had to be taken into account; the former involving twice the compensation of the latter. The season of the year could not be overlooked; we are told, "that the year is divided into two parts for regulating 'smacht'-fines, for the 'smacht'-fines of each quarter are not alike, *because it is difficult to regulate the 'smacht'-fines of the winter season, and of the spring cold, for saved provisions are more precious than growing grass.*"† The nature of the crop upon the land was obviously the principal element in the damage; the questions of the existence or sufficiency of the fence, the period of the duration of the trespass, the number of cattle which trespassed, the number of gaps they crossed the fence, all affected the result in fixed ratios. As a specimen the

* See the calculation as to the extent of the precinct, post, page 227.

† Page 79. The division of the year, stated in the text, into two unequal parts, viz., the summer period comprising five months, being the last month of spring, the three months of summer, and the first month of autumn, and the winter period comprising the last two months of autumn, the three months of winter, and the first two months of spring, was made, in the opinion of Dr. O'Donovan, with the object solely of regulating the price of grazing lands.

"That the Pagan Irish divided the year into four quarters is quite evident from the terms Earrach, Samhradh, Foghmhar, and Grimhridh, which are undoubtedly ancient Irish words, not derived from the Latin through Christianity; and that following rules may be taken, as to cases really simple, and involving only four of the above elements. "Four sacks are due for feis trespass in a winter grass field over a full fence, two sacks for 'airlim'-trespass, and a sack for 'tairsee'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of winter grass land, or upon an inclosed field of winter mountain land, or winter wood, or an old winter milking place, or into an inclosed field of summer grass land, two sacks are due for 'feis'-trespass, and a sack for 'airlim'-trespass, and half a sack for 'tairsee'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of winter mountain, or winter wood, or an old winter milking place, or a pastured field of summer grass land, or into an inclosed field of summer mountain or summer wood, a sack is due for 'feis'-trespass, half a sack for 'airlim' trespass, and a quarter of a sack for 'tairsee'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of summer mountain, or summer wood, or summer old milking place, half a sack is due for 'feis'-trespass, and a quarter of a sack for 'airlim' trespass, and the eighth of a sack for 'tairsee'-trespass. The eighth of the eighth is the fine upon every trespassing animal, for every beast is a trespasser in a cotenancy. For the 'tairsee'-trespass of one animal upon a pastured field of summer mountain pasture, whatever animal commits it, the sixth part of the half of one sack is due,"* &c. The liability for the trespass is very clearly based upon the neglect of the owner, as appears from the exceptions, viz., the cattle being driven over by a man or dog; or straying in consequence of heat or fear, or owing to any kind of violence; but these exceptions very properly extend only to "airlim" trespass, for if the cattle be left on the land to each of these began with a stated day, three of which days are still known, namely, Bealltaine, otherwise called Ceideamhain, or beginning of summer, when they lighted the fires at Uisnach at the beginning of Samhradh; Lughnasadh, the games of Lughaidh Lamh-fhada, which commenced at Taillte on the first day of Foghmhar, the harvest; and Samhain, i.e., Samh-fhuin, or summer end, when they lighted the fires at Tlachtgha.

Introduction to the "Book of Rights," p. liii., but see the gloss which Dr. O'Donovan himself cites in the subsequent page.

* Page 81.

eat and lie down, there is neglect on the part of the owner, and the trespass becomes "feis"-trespass.

In the case of lands not in cultivation or grass the fine for trespass takes a pecuniary form; thus in the case of the church of a "nemadh" person it is stated to be an ounce of silver, and the estimation of the amount is combined with the number of eighty-four cattle, in a manner which is far from clear; in the case of a king's dun fort, or a churchyard there is no money fine fixed but "every hole made in the place is to be filled up with eric-sod and the place pressed, stamped and levelled.*

The trespass of horses involved a different question from that of cattle; the mere halting of travellers on their road could scarcely be considered in the light of a wrong, and at the same time an entry with horses upon land might result in an action for the recovery of the premises, and it was the duty of all the members of the tribe or family to prevent thus, in an indirect manner, the institution of legal proceedings. Hence arose the two forms of horse-trespass, technically known as "fothla" and "tothla" trespass. The former arose when travellers unharnessed their horses upon the land of an absent man, and asked a neighbour accidentally present where they had unharnessed their horses; it was the neighbour's duty to tell them that the land was the private property of the absent owner, and to warn them off, whereupon if they did not leave the place they were liable for the trespasses of their horses; on the other hand if the neighbour saw them with the bridles in their hands, as if in the act of making a legal entry in assertion of a right of ownership, he was bound to question them as to their object, and in default of so doing, became himself liable for the trespass, if the strangers were ignorant that they were intruding upon a separate property. The second case arose if unknown strangers unyoked their horses in the land of a separate owner, and the neighbour, accidentally present, either expressly informed them, or by his silence permitted them to believe, that they were not committing a trespass, in which case he was himself personally liable for the damages. This passage would lead to the conclusion that the elaborate fences, directed in this tract to be erected about the lands allotted in severalty, very frequently, if not ordinarily, had no existence.

The trespasses of swine naturally were the subject of customary rules; "if they eat the grass they are trespassers like other grazing cattle. If they root up the land, other land shall be given until proof of the restoration of the land is completed; that is until two horses in yoke are brought and left there, and it is seen that no part of the earth stick to their teeth while grazing it."* The damages for the trespass of swine were of course fixed with reference to the supposed size and age of the pigs, but in a preceding passage reference is made to an old and purely fanciful rule that the hole made by the pigs should be filled up with corn and butter; if such a rule existed it must be referred to some religious origin.†

The young and troublesome pet pig, a constant source of mischief, was a subject of special rules; it was evidently regarded as the prime cause of breaches in the fence and the ringleader of the cattle in the homestead; "the young pig which first breaks through the fence, and shows the way to the herd, there is a 'smacht' fine upon him equal to that of one animal. The second time that he goes, there is a 'smacht' fine upon him equal to that of four animals, and compensation equal to that of two animals. The third time that he goes, there is compensation upon him equal to that of three animals, and a 'smacht' fine equal to that of seven animals. The fourth time that he goes, there is a 'smacht' fine upon him equal to that upon the whole flock, and compensation equal to that upon four animals."‡

The rules having been fixed as to ordinary trespasses, our author proceeds to discuss what must be considered as purely imaginary cases; it is difficult to see where the rules of practical importance end, and where merely legal speculations, and vain distinctions and discussions commence;

* Page 97.

† Page 99.

‡ Page 109.

but when the amount of "smacht" fine and compensation for the trespasses of pet herons, hens, pet deer, pet wolves, pet old birds (hawks), pet foxes, and bees becomes the subject of quasi-serious discussion we surely have left the regions of practicality behind, and are witnesses of useless displays of pure dialectic subtilty.

As to bees it is very naturally remarked that their owner cannot prevent their leaving his premises and flying into those of his neighbour, "for they are swift, and there is no restraint upon them, and because they do not fly all together;"* in this case the owner was not guilty of a wrong as incident to their trespasses, and therefore there was no 'smacht'-fine payable in respect of it, but merely compensation. The only occasion upon which the bees of a neighbour can be understood to commit trespass is when they swarm into the adjoining land; the sole injury incident to this trespass is occupation by the swarm of some infinitesimal portion of the neighbour's land, and the trespass involves its own compensation, for the swarm fix their nest and make their honey on the spot they thus wrongfully occupy. Thus the compensation for this trespass resolves itself into a joint ownership of the honey produced by the swarm:—"How is the fine of their produce paid? At the time of smothering the bees, the man who sues makes a seizure of that honey, and it goes into the keeping of safe hands, and it is afterwards submitted to award. The decision which is right to make afterwards concerning it is to divide the honey between them into three parts, i.e., a third for attendance, and a third for the bees, and a third for the owner of the land. And the third allotted for the land is itself divided into three parts, i.e. a third is given to the man who owns the bees on account of the land from which they come, the other two thirds are divided between the four nearest farms, i.e. where the food is. If this distribution of it every year shall be deemed tiresome, each nearest farm takes a swarm."

This passage affords us a means of understanding the manner in which these Brehon tracts are composed. The whole question of bees is discussed in a subsequent tract in this volume, and, upon a comparison of these rules with the latter tract, it is evident that there were subsisting certain simple well-known customs as to swarms of bees, and that each author simply uses the subject-matter as a means of displaying his dialectic powers in the elaboration of rights and rules which never were attended to or expected to be observed.

* Page 105.

The question of the bees having been dismissed, the next which is discussed at great length is that of hens. The trespasses of hens may involve negligence on the part of the owner, for by proper rag-boots fowl may be restrained from wandering; the absence therefore of rag-boots bring hen trespasses within the class of man-trespasses, as resulting directly from the negligence of their owner, and consequently within a higher scale of damages. Great ingenuity was displayed in classifying the nature of hen trespasses; first, the trespasses of a hen within a house, which are subdivided into three classes, viz., snatching away, spilling, and wasting, for which respectively different compensations were fixed; secondly, trespasses outside of the house in the garden, subdivided again into soft swallowing of bees, injuring roidh-plants, and injuring garlic; and further in such case arose the further questions whether the bird were a cock or a hen, and if the latter whether it were or were not barren. The inconsistent repetitions in the commentary relative to this case prove that it was a favourite subject of discussion in the schools.

The most extraordinary discussion is reserved for the case of dogs, the authors of which were certainly devoid of any sense of the ridiculous. The feeding of a dog naturally involves responsibility for its acts, but the dog trespass, which particularly attracts the notice of the author of the original tract is that involved in his depositing his ordure on the land of an adjoining owner. The commentator remarks that there are four trespasses of hounds, viz. man-trespass (i.e. trespasses against men), mangling of cattle, breaking of dwellings, and committing nuisance on land. The three former he passes over without notice, and proceeds to consider the interesting questions which arise under the last head; "what is required by law is to remove the dog's ordure out of the ground as far as its juice is found, and it (the ground) is to be pressed and stamped upon with the heel, and fine clay of the same nature is to be put there as compensation. This is the test of reparation; that two horses of a chariot in yoke come there and graze there, and if no part of the sod of grass stick to their teeth in grazing on it the reparation is complete. And three times the size of the ordure is due for compensation, and its size of butter and its size of dough and its size of curds; and the part of them that is not obtained in the one is to be claimed in the other afterwards. And if it be in the presence of the owner that the hound has committed nuisance on the grass, a fine for man trespass shall be paid by him for it."*

Man-trespases, properly so called, wrongful acts committed by the defendant himself in respect of the land of an adjoining owner, are divided into various classes, and described by specific technical names; but as no explanation is given of these terms, with the exception of "fothla" and "tothla" trespases, it is impossible to explain the distinctions to which they refer.†

The subject of "man-trespass" is resumed at a subsequent page,‡ and treated of at considerable length and in the usual manner. The first wrongful act discussed is that of cutting down trees or underwood upon the land of another. The various species of trees and shrubs are divided by the original writer, and more in detail by his commentator, into various classes, founded upon some nobleness inherent in the trees themselves, and the extent to which the tree is injured forms of course an element in the calculation. The following extract is sufficient to illustrate these rules:—
"For the cutting of trees or stripping them, full 'dire' fine is paid for each, i.e., a perfect compensation for the portion of them which is damaged, and five 'seds' as 'dire'-fine.

* Page 123.

† Page 99.

‡ Page 147.

But all trees are not equally noble, for there are seven chieftain trees and seven common trees, and seven shrub trees, and seven bramble trees, and the 'dire'-fine for each is different. The chieftain trees are oak, hazel, holly, ash, yew, pine, apple. The 'dire'-fine of the oak; a cow-hide is due for stripping off it the barking for a pair of woman's shoes; and an ox-hide for the barking of a pair of man's shoes; and also to cover it until the test of its recovery is had, i.e., smooth clay and cow-dung and new milk are to be put upon it until they extend two fingers beyond the wound on both sides, and half fine shall be for it until it is whole. For cutting the trunk a cow is paid, and five seds are its 'dire'-fine. A colpach-heifer is the fine for their great arms, or for their small oaklings; a 'dairt' heifer for their branches. The 'dire' fine of every chieftain tree of them is such."*

The only class of man-trespass dealt with is the breaking down and passing through a fence† (the English trespass quære clausum fregit). As to this, distinctions are drawn having reference to the extent of the breach and the status of the wrongdoer, and in the latter case the compensation to be paid by the native freeman in every case is double of that payable by a stranger, probably because the payment of compensation arises from an implied contract, and is not founded in theory upon the tort.

There are four exceptional cases in which it was justifiable to make gaps or breaches in private fences:—(1) a breach before the hosts, which is glossed to mean "in flying before an host," but which reference seems rather to mean "to permit the advance of the host"; (2) before provisions, glossed "of the host," which would mean, for the purpose of bringing up supplies to the host; in both these cases the host must mean the armed array of the inhabitants of the district in which the fence is situated; (3) for the passage of chieftains "if they had found no other passage," and (4) for the conveyance of materials for the erection of any of the following buildings, (a) a mill, (b) an oratory, (c) a shrine, and (d) a king's dun fort.

* Page 149. See the notes appended to the text as to the meaning of this difficult and obscure passage.

† Page 153

The principle of a right of way of necessity is clearly stated; such rights must have immediately come into existence upon the division of joint tenancies into separate lots; this right is however fenced in with peculiar restrictions which prove the exclusive possession by its owner of the servient tenement, and the anxiety of proprietors to prevent the acquisition by their neighbours of easements by continued user; "There is one stay (quere, restriction on full enjoyment, or easement) which every co-tenant is entitled to from the other, i.e. in a land without an opening, without a road, without a way; he is entitled to full passage over every co-tenant's land that is next to him, but the manner in which he is bound to pass is with six persons about him, three persons from the owner of the land, and three persons from the man who seeks the passage shall attend to keep them (the cattle) close to the fence in order that they may not spread over the land. If he has a way, this may be omitted; if there be two mounds to it, or two stone walls, he is restrained by them, for they are witnesses."*

The liabilities or duties annexed to lands held in several ownership are expressly laid down in this tract; this subject has been already noticed with reference to the rights of women to land, but the enumeration in the following passage is worthy of a reference:—

"The liabilities of land now, i.e., service of attack and defence against wolves and pirates, and attendance to the law of the territory, both as to the hosting and feeding and service of defence."

"The liabilities as regards roads, i.e., a fence is required for it alone, and it is necessary to cut them and cleanse them, and remove their weeds and mire in time of war and of a fair; and because it is expected that each should assist the other.†

Very interesting information is given incidentally in the commentary on this tract, which proves the existence

* Page 157.

† Page 145.

at the date of its composition of tenants in the modern sense of the term, holding land for periods either fixed or uncertain, and paying rent in kind. The details as to this mode of land arise incidentally from the discussion of the liabilities and rights of the owner of a several lot, who is absent at the date of the partition and as a necessary consequence does not erect the fences between his portion and those of the adjoining owners, or who leaves the district to escape the fulfilment of his duties in this respect. In such a case the two adjoining owners would have no complete fence to their portions, as far as they meared the lot of the absent man, and his abandoned lot would lie between them, enabling their cattle to trespass across upon their respective holdings. In such case the adjoining owners can distrain upon his property, if he has any, until he makes the fence; if he has no property they can distrain the "next of kin to him of his family," until they fulfil his duties on his behalf. This is explained in the commentary as follows:—"Let them distrain his family until they fence their brother's land,"* showing that the liability would fall on the members of the household to which the absent man had previously belonged. If his family were unwilling to fulfil this obligation, they could escape it by conceding the right of grazing the land to the two adjoining proprietors, who in consideration of the year's grass themselves complete the fencing of the land, and occupy the derelict lot with their cattle in equal proportions. If the absent man return in the course of the year, and find that, his family having refused to fulfil his duties on his behalf, his lands are in the possession of his neighbours, he was held to have a claim upon his family, who by their failure to perform their duties to him had caused him to be temporarily left without home or farm. His rights under these circumstances against his family are explained in the following rather obscure passage:—"If the deserter has come from outside into the territory after this, his family shall give him land during the term of the hire (lit. loan), and they shall obtain the hire, and the part of his farm-buildings which he may have found on his coming back shall be obtained by the deserter. If his family have land, and they give not of it to him, the hire is to be obtained by those who are outside, and the portion of the erections which the law has not declared forfeited, the family shall purchase for him. If the family had no land at all, they equally divide the hire between the time and the labour, and he himself purchases the portion of the erections which the law has not confiscated. If the family have land, and he would not accept of it, the hire shall be divided equally between time and labour, and he shall obtain no portion of the erections.”* The explanation which we suggest for this passage (the general meaning of which is not obscure) is that notwithstanding the division of the land in several lots, there still survived certain obligations among the members of the several houses, both towards third parties, and inter sese, to aid in carrying out the works incidental to a partition, and therefore if the family failed to fulfil their duty to an absent member, and permitted the adjoining owners, in consideration of fencing the land, to occupy it for a year, they were bound specifically to compensate the owner on his return for the temporary loss of his holding. If the word translated “hire” is taken in the double sense as meaning both a “letting,” and the “subject-matter of the letting,” the rules may be read thus:—

* Page 131.

A. On his return his family must provide an equivalent in land during the residue of the year; his family shall be entitled to receive from him the letting value of the land, and at the end of the year he shall be entitled to whatever “improvements” shall have been made by him on the portion of land so allotted to him.

B (1). If his family have land of their own and do not allot to him an equivalent therein during the residue of the year, land must be procured for him from a third party during the period, and his family pay the rent of it for him, and all the “improvements” which he shall have effected on the land at the end of the year must be purchased by the family for him.

* Page 131.

(2). If the family have no land, they must give him in time and labour an equivalent to the value of his land during the residue of the year, and he must in this case himself buy in what in the preceding case the family were bound to purchase for him.

(3). If his family offer him a compensation out of their lands, and he refuse it, they are bound to compensate him in time and labour equivalent to the value of the land for the residue of the year, and he loses all right to the improvements.*

The difficulty in understanding this passage arises specially from the mode in which the rights of third parties are made apparently to depend upon the dealings between the owner and his family and as was before stated this explanation is very uncertain and not perhaps more than conjectural in its details.†

Some commentator upon this passage, fortunately for us, has had his attention directed to the question as to the rights to the "erections" upon the land, and not very logically proceeds to explain the rules on this subject as between landlords and tenants in the modern sense of the term. From this passage we conclude that there were two modes of letting land, viz., for an indefinite term, and for a fixed period, but that in both cases the lessor could resume possession, and that the fact of the period of the holding being ascertained bound the tenant and not the landlord. The terms "with necessity" and "without necessity" in this passage, applied to the act of either landlord or tenant in determining the tenancy, are the same as are used in reference to wrongful acts in the other portions of these laws, and in such passages they have been translated as "intentional" and "unintentional;" the meaning of the word "necessary" as qualifying an act may be taken to be that the act in question was the natural result of the circumstances in which the person who did it was then placed ; thus a "killing with necessity" would include justifiable homicide or manslaughter, and a "killing without necessity" would be equivalent to our term murder, meaning the slaying of another wrongfully and "with malice aforethought;" the best translation of these terms in relation to the determination of a tenancy would seem to be "reasonably" and "unreasonably," a qualification of an act not very logical, and probably expressing the general opinion of the neighbourhood upon the moral aspect of the transaction.

* See the explanation of this passage given at page 135.

† The subsequent commentator sees the difficulty of explaining these rules and suggests the following key to their meaning, viz :—"It is the land of another man that he has in this case let out on hire" (p. 135); that is, that when the family procure land from a third party for the use of a "deserter" they occupy the double position of tenant and landlord.

The rules laid down on this subject are as follows:—

A. If the letting be for an uncertain period, in all cases the tenant, if he determine the tenancy, leaves the erections behind him ; but if the landlord determine the tenancy for any reason whatsoever, the tenant may carry away the erections with him.

B (1). If the letting be for a term certain, on the expiration of the term, the tenant must leave the erections behind him.

(2). If the tenant determine (surrender) the tenancy for reasonable cause, the value of his erections is apportioned between (having reference to) "time and labour;" but, if without reasonable cause, he must leave them behind.

(3). If the landlord, even on the last day, unreasonably determine the tenancy, the tenant may remove his erections ; but if reasonably, there is a division of their value having reference to time and labour.

C. If the lands have been let for agricultural purposes, with an agreement to manure and dung them, and a period has been fixed for the determination of the tenancy, the case follows the ordinary rule ; but if no period has been fixed, it shall, nevertheless, be considered as a tenancy for a fixed period—such period to be ascertained by the award of "the neighbours;" the grounds upon which it would proceed may be gathered from the commentary, at page 137. "If he has specified no particular time between them at all, the land shall belong to the 'man without' (i.e., the tenant, as con-trusted with the owner), until the time of his manure or dung has been taken out of it."

D. If the letting be for grazing, and "for forming erections" (with a covenant to erect buildings), the rent is "one-third of every animal on which there is increase;" but if for grazing only, every seventh cow is left for payment of the rent, but the tenant is allowed for every seven cows to pasture without further payment, in addition to every seven cows, as many sheep as were considered the equivalent of a cow.

E. If the tenant has agreed not to break up the land, and has ploughed it in violation of his agreement, the "tillage and seed" are forfeited, and he pays five "seeds" as damages; but he can always break up the land if there was no agreement to the contrary.

F. Farm buildings found upon the land by the tenant, are, at the determination of the tenancy, to be treated as having been erected by him.*

Some information as to the rent of land may be obtained

* Page 133. These equitable doctrines applied only to free contractual tenants. The unfree customary tenants were very differently treated.

"The free tributes, as I have heard,
Are they which we have above mentioned;
Of the noble tribes these are due,
Who are upon lands external [to the mensal lands].

"The unfree tribes,—a condition not oppressive,
They are in his [the king's] own lands;
Servile rent by them, it is the truth,
Is to be supplied to the palaces of the chief king.

"The tribute which is due of these [Is] of fire bote and wood;
[also] the renewing of his cloaks, constant the practice,
A tribute in washing and in cleaning.

"This is due of the best part of them
Run and purple of fine strength,
Red thread, white wool, I will not conceal it,
Yellow blaen and binnean.

"From the unfree tribes of ignoble countenance,
Who fly with the rent from the land,
Twice as much is due
As they had carried off from their fatherland."

Book of Rights," p. 223-4.

from an earlier passage in this tract dealing with the mode in which land-trespases are estimated; the answer which it gives to this question is as follows:—"From its rents; if it be winter grass that is injured, two-thirds of its rent is the fine for the trespass; if summer grass, it; the fine, is one-third."* On this passage the gloss says:—"Two-thirds of the fair rent, or price that is paid for its 'feis'-trespass and 'airlim'-trespass is what is paid for its 'airlim'-trespass only, for it is four sacks that are paid for its 'feis'-trespass, and two sacks for its 'airlim'-trespass. Two-thirds of the rent which is paid for a "Tir-Cumhaile" of the best land to the end of three quarters of a year is what is due for 'feis'-trespass in a meadow of winter grass-land over a full fence, i.e., three 'screpalls' for the three quarters; i.e., two 'screpalls' for 'feis'-trespass in winter, and one 'screpall' for 'feis'-trespass in summer, and this is the third of the three 'screpalls.'†

Those who are desirous to work out questions of this nature, are referred to the Tract entitled "Divisions of Land," contained in this volume, in which the measures of land are explained, and the addition or diminution in the value of land produced by the presence or absence of various qualities.

The letting of land, as explained in this tract, was carried on upon essentially mercantile and equitable principles, and was wholly unconnected with any feudal tenure.

Sir H. S. Maine has successfully shown that the feudal relation of Lord and Vassal among the Irish (so far as it was developed) rested upon the hiring out to the less wealthy classes of cattle and not of land. The benefice which the tenant received as the consideration of his services, must have been of value, and not otherwise easily attainable; and Sir H. S. Maine therefore points out that in the earlier stages of society there was a superabundance of land in proportion to the amount of cattle available for cultivation and manure, and that what the vassal desired and obtained was not land to till or pasture his cattle upon, but cattle for the purpose of utilising his otherwise valueless lands. This tract, however, exhibits to us a condition of society altogether different from that in which the 'saer' and 'daer'-stock tenancy took their rise. We find tenants paying very substantial rent under grazing leases, tenants willing to expend money in "erections," and manuring their holdings, and also that the custom of tenants taking land for agricultural and grazing purpose, had existed sufficiently long for the development of a custom determining the duration and incidents of the tenancies, and the respective rights of landlord and tenant as to future and permanent improvements. The manifest inconsistency between cattle-tenure and the rules laid down in this tract on the relation of landlord and tenant, is one of the many proofs of the social changes which must have occurred between the date at which the older Celtic customs were in force, as being in accordance with, and springing from, the daily needs of an existing society, and the period when the latter and speculative commentaries were composed; and, therefore, of the impossibility of extracting any one uniform system of jurisprudence from the mass of Brehon Law Tracts of unknown authorship and uncertain date.

* Page 97.

† Page 97.

The contents of this tract are sufficient to put an end, once and for ever, to an assertion, which seems to have become an axiom adopted by all authors on Irish history and antiquities, and which has also gained considerable political notoriety, namely, that the ancient Irish had not attained to the idea of exclusive ownership in land, and that all the land, until the influence of English law prevailed, was considered as the joint property of the tribe or family. It is evident that the several and individual ownership of land was perfectly familiar to the Irish lawyers, and that the most advanced applications of this doctrine, such as hiring of land for limited periods and under specific covenants, and also the doctrine of servitudes, were not unknown. The question of importance upon this branch of Irish antiquities, is not whether several property in land was known to the Irish Brehons, but what was the proportion which, in the historical period, the lands held by the body of the tribe bore to those appropriated to individual and separate owners.

In an introduction, such as the present, many interesting, although incidental, statements, which are of much antiquarian value, must necessarily be left unnoticed.

None of the Brehon tracts gives more complete materials for estimating the merits and demerits of the early Irish lawyers than does the present. This may be attributed to the fact that the work in question, being probably of a late date, contained few difficulties in its construction, or references to ancient and antiquated customs. The glosses prove that the subsequent commentator felt no difficulty in understanding the original text. The subject matter was also practical in its nature, and remarkably adapted for the mode in which the Brehon school dealt with legal subjects. In despite of a style singularly wearisome and confused, it is impossible not to observe that they have worked up into a consistent form a mass of local and varying customs; that they have laid hold of important legal principles, though in an uncertain and illogical fashion; and that in the selection of their rules they have exhibited an honest and equitable spirit; on the other hand, this tract illustrates their incapacity to arrive at legal abstract propositions, and the extreme indefiniteness or mistiness of expression to which they were habituated; their prevailing error of mistaking arithmetic conclusions for definite propositions; and, lastly, their predelection to wander away from the practical application of their rules into the discussion of imaginary and fantastic cases, which were elaborated in the nature of scholastic speculations. The wisdom, for which the Brehon lawyers obtained such undeserved credit, rested upon the feeblest, not the most important, portion of their work. The vulgar of the day may have listened with amazement and admiration to discussions as to the various liabilities of hens, or the trespasses of dogs; and most of their modern translators and students, confessedly ignorant of jurisprudence, seem to have been struck with astonishment at these dialectic performances; but the test of the merit of every legal school is its success in the application of its scientific conclusions to the practical affairs of life. That the Brehon lawyers reduced the mass of customary rules into a tolerably definite form, and contrived to base their doctrines upon a foundation more or less logical, and that, although possessing no original jurisdiction, by the general equity of their decisions, they succeeded in establishing their judicial power, are merits which the cursory student of the present day, repelled by the form of their works, is perhaps too slow to admit.

VII.

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

The culture of bees in the middle ages possessed an importance which, in our modern days, it has altogether lost. Until the introduction of sugar into Western Europe at so cheap a rate as to admit of being considered an article of ordinary use, honey was largely employed as the only means of sweetening the food; and almost until our own days the consumption of wax for candle was very extensive. At whatever date the sugar-cane was first cultivated in Europe, (the western nations first became acquainted with it shortly after the date of the first crusade), the extensive use of this article in Ireland cannot have arisen before the introduction of West Indian sugar at the end of the 16th century, up to which date the cultivation of bees must have continued to be a matter of considerable importance in Ireland.

The importance of bee-culture in Ireland is proved by the well-known legend relative to their introduction into the island. This is printed in Colgan's "Acta Sanctorum," under the date of the 13th of February, the feast of St. Dominicus, or Modomnicus. As the book is not easily accessible, the passage is here transcribed:—"Narratur ibidem et aliud de ipso S. Modomnico seu Dominico miraculum vere prodigiosum, universæ patriæ continuâ veritate proficium, et perenni famâ viro sancto gloriosum. Traditur enim primus esse, qui vel apes absolute, vel saltem certi generis apes in Hiberniam transvexerit; unde magna deinceps in illo regno, quâ ante caruit, apum et mellis abundantia remansit. Sed quia hæc periodus, ut fabulosa, a duræ cervicis hereticis irridetur, et quibusdem emunetæ naris Catholicis tanquam parum fundata minimè arrideat, placuit plures, eosque graves et vetustos, ejus producere testes. Cum S. Modomnicus, discipulus sancti Patris (S. Davidis) ad Heberniam reverteretur, et navem ad transfretandum ascenderet, ecce omnis multitudo apum terræ illius, unde exierat, consequens eum, in navi cum eo consedit. Ipse enim examinibus apum nutriendis atque servandis, diligentem curam de Patris David mandato dabat, ut indigentibus aliqua ciba suavioris oblectamenti ministraret. Discipulus vero nolens tanto beneficio fratres defraudare, iterum ad Patris presentiam rediit, sequente tamen eum turbâ apum, quæ ad alvearia propria proroxerunt. Cum secundo valefaceret fratribus, et viam suam carperet, ecce apes, ut prius, eum insequuntur; quod cum videret, iterum ad fratres revertitur; et similiter eum apes omnes concomitantur. Cum tertiâ vice hoc factum iterassent, et vir Dei nullatenus vellet eas a fratribus abducere, cum omnium fratrum benedictione et Patris David, licentiam transfretandi cum apibus accepit; apes quoque S. David benedicens, ait; terram, ad quam properatis, vestro abundet semine, nec unquam deficiat vestrum inibi semen vel germer: nostra autem civitas a vobis in perpetuum immunis, nec ultra semen vestrum in eâ exerescat. Quod usque in presens tempus completum esse cernimus; nam si aliunde in illam civitatem deferantur, nequâquam durare possunt. Hibernia autem insula, in quâ usque tunc apes vivere nequebant, postea magnâ mellis et apum fertilitate florebat. Quod enim ibi apes autea vivere nequebant, ex hoc colligitur, quod si pulveres vel lapilli de Hiberniâ inter apes aliarum terrarum projicerentur, fugientes tanquam nocivam devitabunt.

“Hujus historiæ veritatem confirmat nomen loci, quo apes illæ in Hiberniam directæ primo collocatæ sunt, ab ipso eventu desumptum; is enim locus in regione Fingalliæ

sive comitatu Dubliniensi situs, Lann-beachaire, id est, Ecclesia Apiarii adpellatur, &c.”*

The present tract must be considered as an exercise in which the question of the ownership of bees, their swarms, and their honey, is selected as a subject for dialectic subtlety. From the passages in the preceding tract dealing with bee trespasses, and incidental passages in the present, it is evident that questions relating to the ownership of bees were, in the ordinary course of life, dealt with on much less refined principles than are here suggested; but the present tract is valuable as illustrating the modes of thought, and the logical abilities of the Irish lawyers. For the purpose of raising all possible questions as to ownership and possession, no subject could have been more ingeniously selected than that of the rights to bees and their produce; and upon this point some few observations are necessary.

The ownership of bees raises at once the question of what is meant by possession. This term is generally defined as expressing the simple notion of a physical capacity to deal with a thing as we like, to the exclusion of everybody else, and the possession continues, even without physical contact, if the physical force to retake the object can be reproduced at will.

The most remarkable illustrations of the legal conception of possession arise in the consideration of the possession of live animals. The animals which ordinarily exist in a domesticated state, such as cows and horses, hardly differ from other property. Animals, on the other hand, which are in a wild state, are only in our possession so long as they are so completely in our power that we can immediately lay hold of them. The meaning of the distinction is, that the tame animal will naturally, and of itself, remain within the possession of the owner; the wild animal will as certainly attempt to escape, and will most probably succeed in doing so.

* The good father, who deals so hardly with thick headed heretics and sceptical Catholics, is however himself embarrassed by evidence as to the existence of bees before the date of St. Modomnicus: “Quod autem in Hiberniâ ante sanctum hunc Dominicum natum apes et mella fuerint constat ex irrefragabili testimoniâ regulæ S. Ailbei, in quâ num. 37 ita legitur, ‘cum sident ad mensam, adferantur herbæ, sive radices, aquâ lotæ in mundis scatellis; item poma, cervisia, et ex alveario mellis ad latitudinem pollicis, id est, aliquod favi.’ S. autem Ailbeus floruit in Hiberniâ simul cum S. Patricio, et aliquot etiam annis ante ejus adventum, sive ante annum 431. Ad auctoritates S. Ængussii et aliorum qui dicunt S. Dominicum primum fuisse, qui apes in Hiberniam attulerat, dicendum hoc esse intelligendum de certo genere apum: sunt enim in Hiberniâ et domesticæ et silvestres, ac diversi coloris et generis apes; præcipuarum autem ex his genus et semen videtur S. Dominicus primus advexisse.” (Vitæ Sanctorum, p. 328, n. 7-8.) The legend therefore affords no means of fixing the date of this tract.

We do not possess the fish in a river, although the several right of fishing belongs to us; but we do possess fish when once they are placed in a receptacle, whence we can at any time take them. According to the civil law, the ownership of wild animals is founded upon the fact of capture, and exists only so far as they are actually or constructively in restraint. The Institutes are clear upon this point:—"Ferre igitur bestiæ, et volucres, et pisces, et omnia animalia, quæ mari, cælo, et terrâ nascuntur, simul atque ab aliquo capta fuerint, jure gentium statim illius esse incipiunt. Quod enim ante nullius est, id naturali ratione conceditur, nec interest, feras bestias et volucres utrum in suo fundo quis capiat, an in alieno."*

The ownership of the locus in quo of the capture is here entirely excluded from the consideration of the vesting of ownership.

This law has been in England very considerably modified, by reason of the exclusive privileges generally conceded to owners of land. There is not the least difficulty in a man having possession of that of which he is not the owner, and it was consistent with the idea, which attaches to our word "close," to treat the person entitled to the possession of inclosed land as in possession of all the game which at any time happen to be there. It was, therefore, obviously correct to decide that, when a trespasser kills game upon the land in my possession, the game is mine. It is, however, very difficult to apply these principles to the case of bees; the hives, the honey in them, and the bees in the hives, are manifestly in the possession of the owner, but as to the bees who fly away or swarm out, he has no means of identifying or recapturing them, unless by close and immediate pursuit; bees which leave the hive are in the same position as wild animals which escape from their cage. In the case of wild bees, according to the Roman Law, the owner of the soil would have neither property nor possession until he physically possessed himself of their nest and honey; in this latter case, according to the general principles of English law, the possessor of the land should have, in right of such possession, a possession in the bees and their nests upon his land, and he alone, by actually securing them, should become their owner. The trespasser who secured a swarm or bees' nest upon the land of another, had, under the civil law, both property and possession; under the English law he should have the possession, but the property should vest in the owner of the land. The law as to bees is thus laid down in the Roman law:—"Apium quoque fera natura est. Itaque apes, quæ in arbore tuâ censederint, antequam a te in alveo includantur, non magis tuæ intelliguntur esse, quam volucres, quæ in arbore tuâ nidum fecerint. Ideoque si alius eas incluserit dominus eorum erit. Favos quoque si quos effecerint, eximere quilibet potest. Plane integrâ re, si prævideris ingredientem fundum tuum, poteris eum jure prohibere ne ingrediatur. Examen quoque, quod ex alveo tuo exvolaverit, eousque intelligitur esse tuum, donec in conspectu tuo est, nec difficilis persecutio ejus est, alioquin occupantis est."*

* Inst., Lib. ii., Tit. 1, De occupatione ferarum.

Bracton, as might be expected, adopts the passage of the Institutes; but in quoting his authority, Blackstone adds the following observations:—"But it hath been also said that with us the only ownership in bees is ratione soli; and the charter of the forest, which allows every freeman to be entitled to the honey found within his own woods, affords great countenance to this doctrine, that a qualified property may be had in bees, on consideration of the property of the soil whereon they are found."†

* Inst., Lib. ii., Tit. 1, De apibus.

† Black. Com. B. II., P. II., Chap. 1.

The mode in which the ownership of bees, their honey, and their swarms, is discussed in the present tract, and the principles applied by its authors, are a very fair test of the extent to which the Brehon Lawyers were acquainted with, and influenced by, the Civil Law, of which the rule of ownership resting on possession was one of the primary doctrines.

The rights to the produce and swarms of a hive of bees upon the farm of any proprietor are, according to the theory of the authors of the present tract, founded upon an implied contract between him and the adjoining owners of land. The holding of the owner of the bees is assumed by them to be square, or at least four sided, and each of the sides to be meared by the lands of a distant owner. The bees are supposed to enter into and gather honey on the four adjoining farms, the owners of which, by reason of the sustenance thus afforded to the bees, acquire definite rights in their increase and produce. The unpractical nature of this treatise is shown by the fact that the author believed that bees did not breed, or throw off swarms, until the third year, and it is upon this assumption that their calculations are based. They allow the hive what is styled, "three years of exemption, one year for their production, one year 'while they are few,'" and the year of their breeding, which must mean the year of their first swarming. During this period the adjoining owners have no right to the swarms, but only to a certain definite proportion of the honey produced. Four vessels of different sizes are assumed as the measure of the quantity of the honey produced, and these vessels are themselves arranged by reference to the size of cattle at different periods of their growth, (1) the milch cow vessel, which when full a man of ordinary strength could raise to his knee, (2) a "samhaise" heifer vessel, which a man could raise to his navel, (3) a "colpach" heifer vessel, which a man could raise as high as his loins (or waist), and (4) a "dairt" heifer vessel, which a man could raise over his head; the several proportions out of these respective quantities of honey to which the adjoining owners were (or perhaps each of them was) entitled, was one-half, one-third, one-fourth, and one-fifth of an esera, or drinking cup; this was the amount fixed by the ordinary rule, but there were also contingent claims for a supply of honey in the case of an entertainment to a person of rank, or upon the occasion of sickness. The swarms of the third year must be assumed to have belonged to the owner of the hive, for upon the expiration of the three years, "the period of exemption," the four adjoining owners became each entitled to a swarm out of the hive. In the distribution of the swarms the author assumes that bees throw out three swarms in the year; the first assumed to be the best, the second swarm also of good quality, and a third inferior swarm, described as the "meraighe" swarm. Three only of the adjoining proprietors could get their swarm in the third year, and the fourth had to wait for the following season, when he was entitled to the first and best swarm of the year.

The lands in question were assumed to bear the same relation to each other as the divisions of the geilfine, and they were entitled to their swarms in a rotation founded upon the supposed relationship existing between these four classes. As the number of the geilfine divisions were four, and that of the lands, inclusive of the original farm, entitled to swarms, was five, the theory could not be completely carried out. The original farm, which obtained the swarm of the third year, must have been considered as the geilfine class;* the other lands were classed with reference to the proximity of the hive, and the degree to which the bees would, therefore, be supposed to resort to it for their honey; the nearest land was described as the "deirbfine" land; the next nearest must have been the "iarfine," and the third the "innfine." The remaining adjoining farm could not have had any name derived from the geilfine relation, but must have been introduced as a consequence of the assumption that the original farm was a square. That the original farm was the geilfine farm follows from the fact that the second was the deirbh-fine, as otherwise the geilfine must have been postponed to two remaining classes, or introduced after the deirbhfine; but the order of the four classes must be observed, which is a matter of importance in considering a passage in the next tract in this volume dealing with the rights to water.

* See Gloss, page 178, line 22.

The owners of the adjoining lands were bound to set a watch "in the bright times, when the bees send out a swarm," and, if a swarm escaped through their negligence, they "shall support the bees until the end of another year," that is, the further distribution of swarms was adjourned to the next season. The case of swarms, which were not allotted to, and taken possession of by, one of the four adjoining owners, is next discussed; if a swarm, not the property of one of the adjoining owners, swarmed within the farm of the owner of the hive, no question could arise; a rule determining the ownership of a swarm could only arise, when it had left the farm of the original owner, and settled upon the lands of a third party. For the purpose of deciding this question our author refers to the analogous case of the rights to the fruit of a tree, belonging to one person, but planted in and growing out of the land of another.* Such a question is foreign to any European system of law, but it frequently arises in the Courts of Ceylon, where not only the owners of the tree are different, but even the tree and its produce are held by many persons in joint, and necessarily undivided, ownership. It is easy to understand how such a question might arise in a country such as Ceylon, where a farm used for the cultivation of large trees, such as a cocoa-nut plantation or mango-grove, has, in the course of several generations, been split up into innumerable shares among the descendants of the original proprietor, but, considering the small size and insignificant value of the fruit trees in Ireland at the date of this tract, and the abundance of land, it is difficult to believe that the case is aught but imaginary, unless we assume the existence of the letting of land for garden purposes, with a customary rent reserved out of the produce.

The general rule on this subject was that the bottom (the land) was entitled to the fruit of the top (the tree) every fourth year, and that in the other three years it was divided into two parts between the respective owners; the text then refers to the contingency of bees swarming upon such a tree, and treats the swarm as if it were portion of the natural produce of the tree itself. The general rule as to such swarms of unclaimed bees is stated in the commentary thus:—*"It is to the land out of which it (the tree) grows originally, that its produce belongs every fourth year; until (then ?) the produce of the bees is divided into two parts to the end of three years between the owner of the bottom of the tree and the owner of the top, and its produce every fourth year is due to the owner of the bottom, in the same way as the owner of the top gets the produce of the tree every fourth year, so the owner of the bottom of the trees obtains the produce of the bees every fourth year. This is when the original owner of the bees is not known." This rule refers to the division of the ownership of a stray swarm between the owners of the land and of the tree. The rules as to swarms, the ownership of which was either admitted or asserted, is stated subsequently in the commentary, and it is to be remarked that in the decision of such questions, two additional elements are introduced, the greater or less certainty of the ownership of the swarm, and the rank of the owner of the tree.

* Page 167.

† Page 169.

(1.) "As to known bees in the trunk of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' two-thirds of their produce are due to the owner of the tree, and one-third to the owner of the bees, to the end of three years, and they (the bees) are the property of the owner of the tree from that out.

(2.) "As to doubtful bees in the trunk of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' three-quarters of their produce are due to the owner of the tree, and one-fourth to the doubtful owner of the bees, to the end of three years, and they belong to the owner of the tree from that out.

(3.) "As to the known bees in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' one-third of their produce is due to the owner of the tree, and two-thirds to the owner of the bees, to the end of a year, and they belong exclusively to the original owner of the bees from that out.

* P. 171. The punctuation of this passage has been altered from that in the text.

(4.) "*As to doubtful bees in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' one-half of their produce is due to the owner of the tree, and one half to the owner of the bees, to the end of a year, and they belong to the owner of the bees from that out; or, according to others, it is to the owner of the tree they belong.

(5.) "As to known bees in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh,' one-half of their produce is due to the owner of the tree, and one-half to the owner of the bees, to the end of three years, and they belong to the owner of the tree from that out.

(6.) "As to doubtful bees in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh,' one-half their produce and one-eighth go to the owner of the tree, and one-half except, one-eighth to the owner of the bees, to the end of three years, and they are the property of the owner of the tree from that out."†

The two further rules which should correspond to rules 3 and 4, are omitted in this part of the commentary, but in a subsequent passage the further rule occurs ‡—"As to known bees in the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh,' the fourth portion of their produce belongs to the owner of the tree, and three-fourths to the original owner of the bees, to the end of a year, and they are the property of the owner of the bees from that out."‡

There is a passage in the original text which puts the rights of the "nemedh"-person upon an entirely different footing, and classes a swarm of bees as one of the seven fugitives not entitled to the protection of his house, and therefore in this case the "nemedh"-person, being obliged to yield up the fugitives to the pursuing owner, receives but one-third of one year's produce as a gratuity. This passage is quite inconsistent with the rest of the text, and the detailed rules of the commentary, and proves how much of the regulations laid down in this tract are purely dialectic, and what different conclusions may be arrived at by shifting the point of view from which the question is regarded.

* This rule is variously given in page 189.

† Page 183.

‡ Page 189.

The questions are then discussed which deal with the conflicting rights of the man who finds a stray swarm, and the owner of the land on which the swarm is found; these may be summarised as follows:—

(a.) If the swarm is found in a green, that is, the open grassland immediately surrounding an house, one-fourth of one year's produce to the finder, and three-fourths to the owner of the house.

(b.) If in a tree in a green, if the bees have been there a year, one-half to the finder, and one-half to the owner of the house.

(c.) If in the land between the green and the waste, one-third to the finder, and two-thirds to the owner of the land.

(d.) If in waste unappropriated land (land not separate private property), the finder takes all, subject to a claim by the chief, if it be public land of a lay-tribe, or by the church, if it be public land of a cleric-tribe to "one-third of every third."

The position of the "daer," and "saer"-tenants, and their personal connection with a superior, is marked by the rule that "daer"-tenants of a church give over to the church one-third of their finding; "daer"-tenants of a chief give to their chief one-third, except in the case of bees found in the waste land, and in that case one-ninth; the "saer"-tenant of the church gives over one-fourth, except in the case of bees found in the waste land, and in this case one-twelfth; the "saer"-tenant of a chief gives no portion to the chief. Two other subjects are discussed in the tract, but neither of them are of such importance as to deserve a special analysis. The first is with reference to injuries inflicted by bees. The mode in which this question is considered is much less detailed than in the text and commentary of the Book of Aicill, and the matter is referred to the judgement passed upon the occasion of the bleeding of Congal Caech; the passage referred to in the original text is as follows:—"It happened on a certain day that I was left alone in the garden, without any one to take care of me, and the little bees of the garden rose up with the heat of the sun, and one of them put its poisonous venom in one of my eyes, so that my eye became awry, for which I have been named Congal Claen."* It may be reasonably conjectured that the tale of Congal Claen had rendered the question of damages arising from the sting of a bee a favourite subject for legal speculation.†

In the latter portion of the tract are considered the damages payable on account of the stealing of a hive, which only deserve notice as proving that property in the bees when confined in an artificial nest was recognised by these lawyers.

We are now in a position to consider the mode in which the ownership of bees, their honey, and their swarms, are discussed in the present treatise. What is most obvious is the absence of any general principle applicable to the consideration of the questions raised. The rights of adjoining owners are referred to a state of things purely imaginary, viz., the supposition that every farm is meared by four neighbouring farms, which are the nearest to the premises in question, an assumption geometrically impossible; the consideration of the rights of the parties standing in this impossible relation is then considered upon the assumption of a fact actually incorrect,

* The Battle of Magh Rath, p. 35.

† Ancient law-givers appear to have entertained serious apprehensions of the injuries which might be inflicted by bees, of which the following examples suffice:—

"Si quis apiaria in civitate, aut in villâ forsitan construxerit, et alii dampnum intulerit, statim moneatur, ut eas in abditis locis transferre debeat, ne forte in eodem loco hominibus aut animalibus dampnum inferrant. Et qui hæc præcepta aut testationem neglexerit, et dampnum suffocationis in quadrupedes intulerit, quod mortuum fuerit, duplum restituat: quod vero debilitatum, ille obtineat, et simile dampno reddat: et pro iudicis contestatione, quam audire neglexit, v solidos coactus exsolvat."—"Leges Wisegothorum," Lib. viii., tit. vi., 2.

"Apes si occidunt hominem, ipsas quoque occidi festinanter oportet; mel tamen expendatur in medicinam et in aliis necessariis."—"Theod.," Pœn. xxxi., 18.

"Apes si occiderint hominem, statim occidantur, antequam ad mel perveniant, ita saltem ut non per noctem ibi restent; et mel quod fecerint comedatur."—"Ecgb." Conf. 39.

"Apes si aliquem occiderint, statim occidantur, et mel quod antea fecerint datur."—"Ecgb." Pœn., Lib. iv., s. 37n.

viz., that bees do not swarm until the third year; and the distribution of their swarms is regulated by reference to the false analogy of the divisions of the family in such a manner as to involve an arithmetical error. In considering the ownership of swarms not included in the preceding rules, the author fails to grasp the clear rule of the civil law, that ownership depends upon the reduction into possession, and the equally clear principle of the English law that a trespasser cannot take any advantage arising from his own wrong. The mode in which our author proceeded was this:—he observed that on all such occasions a contest as to the ownership arose between certain definite parties, the finder of the bees, the original owner of the bees, and the owner of the land in which the bees had swarmed; he never applied any general principle to the rights of any of them, but finding them, or at least two of them, in conflict as to the ownership, he admitted that all had rights, and strove to regulate their rights in an arithmetical form. The analogy upon which he at first proceeded, that of a tree planted by one in the land of another, he after a time abandons, and the subsequent statements are referable to analogies, which he has not disclosed. There is an entire absence of any scientific mode of thought, but the account between the various parties is taken, having reference to the circumstances in the case, which would strike the mind of an unprofessional arbitrator when attempting to make up the quarrel on grounds calculated to satisfy the contending parties; however long and apparently elaborate the treatise may be, it does not, except in the detail and elaboration of its numerical calculations, rise over the level of ordinary ancient regulations upon the subject.

The Welsh law dealt with the subject in the same, though in a more prefatory manner. "On whatever boundary a wild swarm is found, the law says that it is right for the owner to hew the tree on each side; and he on whose land the tree may fall, is to have the swarm;"* and again, "Whoever shall find a swarm of wild bees is to have a penny or the wax; and the owner of the land is to have the swarm.”*

* Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. I., p. 97.

No clearer example can be desired of the essential difference between the Celtic mode of thought, apparently clear, yet really indefinite, when dealing with a practical question, and the hard and logical habits of thought of the Norman lawyers (who were equally ignorant of the civil law), than the following enactment of the Assise of Jerusalem upon the subject of bees:—“Sel avien che per aventura le ape che sonno nelle mie casse vanno fora, et restano in altrui casse de voluntà di esse, la rason vol ch’io non habbia action alcuna de andar a prenderle per forza de la casse d’altri; per che sonno ucelli salvatichi, per che tosto che le usciranno da le mie casse, io no hò piu signoria in quelle, se non tornano iterum ne le mie casse, et sonno mie mentre sonno in ditte mie casse, et non piu; la rason de simil ucelli e che vanno ogni zorno fora per viver de li beni de fora, et però quelli che li hanno chiusi in le sue casse sono sui patroni, mentre voranno stare, ò ritornare; ma se alcun vien al mio loco dove tegno le ape, et porta una cassa onta di dentro di qualche odore, per el quale intrano dentro tutte, o parte de le mie ape, et le porta via, la rason commanda che quel che farà questo sia tenuto di tornar indrieto le mie ape con tutto el frutto che haverà fatto, et poi esser condanato personalmente secondo che li judici stimaranno che valevan quelle ape, et che potevan lavorar per quel anno, et restituir altro tanto a la justitia de jure; et similimente se le mie ape fanno miel in altrui arbore, la rason judica ch’io non habbia alcuna rason, nè alcun altro del qual fosseno le ape, ma quello deve esser del patron del arbore; et questo è di justitia, perche nessun non puo segnar le sue ape che non somegliono à le altre, et cosi come le vivono de li fiori, et beni d’altrui, cosi deve esser il miel di colui, nell’arbor, o terreni del quale volontariamente vanno a farlo; parimente se le mie ape a far el suo miel a qualche arbore salvatico che non ha patron, la rason vole che cadauno possa prender di quel miel senza errare verso alcuno, perche è loco com- mune, dal quale de rason ogni homo puo pigliar, etiam le ape, et portarle, dove li piace senza errare, de jure, et per l'assisa de Hierusalem."*

* Ancient Laws of Wales, Vol. II., p. 289.

It is impossible to believe that the author or authors of this tract and commentary (which has been manifestly altered from time to time, amended, and enlarged), had any acquaintance with the civil law, and it must be admitted that, in its present condition, it is a remarkable and most unfavourable specimen of the manner in which the Brehon teachers approved and discussed legal questions.

* Assise of Jerusalem, see 215. What is most remarkable in this section of the Assise of Jerusalem is the distinct manner in which actual possession is laid down as the only ground for the ownership of bees, and the clear argument upon which it is founded—viz., that the ownership consists in simply retaining them in actual possession, and is not founded upon any expenditure of labour and food in their maintenance. The doctrine of constructive possession which appears in the section of the Institutes is here disregarded, and thereby the difficulty is avoided which arises from the limitations of the constructive possession introduced into the Roman text, "Donec in conspectu est, nec difficilis persecutio ejus est." Also, when no actual reduction into possession has taken place, it is presumed to have been made by the owner of the soil, as no one else could enter upon his lands for the purpose; and the case of the bees being fraudulently induced to escape from the possession of their owner is anticipated and provided for. How difficult it was to form clear ideas as to this matter appears for other attempts at legislation upon this subject. Thus, in the laws of the Wisigoths was contained the following section:—

"Si quis apes in silvâ suâ, aut in rupibus, vel in saxo, aut in arboribus invenerit, faciat tres decurias, quæ vocantur characteres; unde potius non per unum characterem fraus nascatur. Et si quis contra hoc fecerit, atque alienum signatum invenerit et irruerit, duplum restituat illi cui fraus illata est, et præterea xx flagella suscipiat."—"Leges Wisigothorum," Lib. viii., tit. vi., l.

The ownership is here founded upon the discovery simply of the swarm, and no reduction into actual possession was required; and the question whether the person who so found them was rightfully or not upon the place where the bees had swarmed is altogether overlooked.

In the present tract the Brehon lawyer has seen the two distinct grounds upon which the ownership might be founded, but has worked out logically neither train of ideas, and concluded by compromising both, with reference to a supposed analogous case, and in an arithmetical manner.

VIII.

RIGHT OF WATER.

The subjects discussed in this treatise are neither riparian ownership of running water, nor servitudes connected with the use of water, but the right to conduct water courses for the construction of mills, and the right of the adjoining owners to use such mills, and to draw water from the mill course and pond. The Brehon lawyers permitted anyone desirous of constructing a mill to bring the necessary supply of water through the lands of his neighbours, and to acquire by compulsory purchase the ground necessary for the purpose upon the terms of paying a fixed legal compensation for the same. "Every co-tenant is bound to permit the other (co-tenants) to conduct drawn water across his border;"* and, "this is the second instance in the 'Berla' speech where the law commands a person to sell his land though he should not like to do so."† The process in question was a very archæic anticipation of the modern "Land Clauses Consolidation Act," specifying the terms upon which the necessary land may be purchased, the amount to be paid, the matters to be taken into consideration upon the occasion of the purchase, and the rights arising by implication of law in the work when completed. Certain lands, from their nature, could not be compulsorily acquired for the purpose of the erection of a mill, viz., the "nemed"-land of a church, or (2) of a dun, or (3) the circuit of a fair-green. The author understood that the right of acquiring land for a work of public utility must be restricted by rules which would prevent a disproportionate violation of private right, or an excessive inconvenience to the public itself. The amount of the purchase-money for the land to be taken was not, as may be easily anticipated, the subject of valuation, but was fixed in every case by an express rule, and the price was not measured by reference to the extent taken, but the fact of the compulsory taking was to be compensated for as a quasi-tort. Thus, a "sed" of ten "screpalls" was payable for every farm through which the water course was carried; some variation in the price was, however, permitted, having reference to the nature and value of the land itself: "If it be arable land, though it (the water) should pass through only half a step of it, it shall be paid for after this manner (that is, the price shall be one "sed") ; but if it be unprofitable land, half a "sed" is its price, otherwise it is a day at the mill for every land over which it passes that is due for it."*

* Page 213.

† Page 215.

Three classes of land are enumerated for which no compensation was payable, either on the ground that the owner of the land was benefited, not injured, by the construction of the water course, or because it was evident that he incurred no damage whatsoever; these are (1), "lands on which a mill stands, so that it yields produce," which is explained in the gloss as meaning the land used for the construction of the mill pond, which afforded to the owner of the land a constant and abundant supply of water, or, according to another commentator, of fish; (2), a house and close previously without a supply of water, and which, therefore, was benefited by the mill-stream being constructed close to it; and (3), a trench usually dry, and used only to carry off the winter drainage, the owner of which was obliged to permit its use without compensation.† It would have been fortunate for the English public if the equitable considerations which in the Brehon law deprived the owners of land taken for public works of any compensation, if the construction of these works resulted in a profit, not a loss, to the owners of the land required, had been taken into consideration by modern legislators. Whatever bargain or arrangement had been made by any owner of land in connexion with the construction of a mill, a dam, or a bridge, became absolutely binding if acquiesced in during the lives of two subsequent owners:‡ "If they have been so acknowledged, it is right that they should remain so for ever, gratis or for payment, according to the Brehon."§ This passage very fully expresses the archaic idea of ownership; the

* Page 213.

† Page 215

‡ Page 211.

§ Page 213.

owner was owner merely for the term of his own life, as between himself and his family he was in some sort only a tenant for life, whose contract as to the subject matter was not binding upon his successor. This idea of ownership is quite foreign to the English law, but is exactly what existed in the case of "substitutions" in the old French law, or in that of a Scotch tailzie. The English law has superadded to the power of dealing with property which is incidental to ownership, the conception of absolute ownership being perpetual in its duration, a fallacy which has exercised immense influence upon our real property law, and is the basis of our whole system of conveyancing. This rule also is an instance of the application of the principle of "limitation" of actions, which within only recent times has been recognized as of paramount importance in our jurisprudence. The period of limitation fixed by this rule is during the life of the father and grandfather of the person affected by it, and as the normal period of limitation in the Brehon laws is the space of three generations, a subject subsequently discussed, it may be reasonably concluded that the party who entered into the original agreement was the great grandfather of the person whose right to object to the transaction was barred, and that the father and grandfather had acquiesced in the acts of their predecessor. In a very obscure passage of the commentary we have an express statement that the period of limitation was such as we have mentioned, and the assertion that the period of limitation did not run as against a minor: "If they were recognized during the lives of three persons, they are lawful from that forth. But if the son of the third man did not acknowledge them jointly with his father, he being an infant, and in case he was so, they shall not be lawful, until he shall have acknowledged them, for the same period after he has come to the age of reason."* The only explanation which can be suggested for this passage is, that the acquiescence during the three continuous lives was not the simple acquiescence of the successive owners whose lives are taken into account

* Page 213.

in the computation of the time, but the acquiescence of their families during their successive lives ; thus, if the owner (so called) had a son, both father and son must acquiesce during the life of the former, and the son, who was an infant at his father's death, having been unable during his infancy to do any act to bind his rights, was entitled after his father's death, and for the same period as he had lived as a minor during his father's life, to elect whether he would or would not confirm the acts of his father ; and if he allowed this space of time to elapse without insisting that, by reason of his infancy, there had not been any legal acquiescence during his father's life, he was estopped from relying upon the fact of his infancy, and the imperfect acquiescence during the father's life was validated by reason of the retrospective effect of the son's subsequent acquiescence.

If the owners of the lands required for the construction of the race or pond preferred to take certain rights in connexion with the watercourse and the mill in lieu of pecuniary compensation, they were at liberty to do so.

Mr. O'Donovan has stated his opinion on this subject in his note, which is appended to page 220 of the text, but he does not appear to have realized the difficulty of applying the first paragraph of the text to the right to grind corn at the mill, or to have attempted to reconcile this passage with the very explicit and detailed statements of the commentator in page 217. The tract commences thus: "There is equal right to the water drawn through the tribe lands due to the lands out of which it is drawn."* What is the particular right dealt with in this passage ? Does it refer to the right of grinding corn in the mill, or to some other right incident to the water course ? and is the mode in which this right is to be exercised, or are the persons by whom it is to be exercised, compatible with such a supposition ? The rights of the adjoining owners are regulated in reference to the geillfine system, and the lands are divided into four classes corresponding to the four geillfine divisions. Mr. O'Donovan describes this theoretical division of the land to have been as follows:—

* Page 209.

The land in which the mill-race was first turned off, "the course," was geilfine land; the land on both sides of the mill-race, down to the mill-pond, was deirbhfine land; the land surrounding the pond was iarfine land; and the land on both sides of the race, from the pond to the land, was the innfine land. It is clear in the text that the innfine-land was the pond itself in which the water was contained, and that the deirbhfine land was somewhere between the source and the pond, and it is not certain that the author of the passage in the original text contemplated any water-course running from the pond down to the mill. It is quite true that the author of the commentary at page 217, divides the lands into four classes corresponding with Mr. O'Donovan's; but the question may be asked whether he is dealing with the same subject matter as the author of the first paragraph of the original text. The authors of the glosses evidently did not understand the distribution of the lands contemplated in the original texts; one gloss describes the deirbhfine land as the pond, and another apparently describes the pond as the iarfine land. But the patent objection to the first paragraph being considered as describing the rights of adjoining owners of land to grind their corn at the mill, is, that thereby there would be no surplus time left at the disposal of the owner of the mill house, whose rights could not well be excluded from consideration. The computation of time in this tract has reference to the working days of the week, and Sunday is kept out of the account as an holiday; if, therefore, each first day (i. e., Monday) belong to the land out of which the water is drawn, and three days are allotted to the pond, and one day to each of the remaining classes, viz., the deirbhfine and iarfine lands, the entire week would be divisible among the owners of the adjoining lands exclusively. This objection does not apply to the scheme regulating the mode of working such a mill contained in the commentary.* According to this rule the right to work the mill is divisible between six classes: (1) the well, (2) the owners of land from the well to the pond, (3) the pond, (4) the owners of land from the pond down, (5) the artizans, and (6) the attendance; 'one-third goes to the land, and the things which belong to it, and one-third to the science of the artizans, and one-third to food and rude labour.' The two latter classes, the artizans and attendance, represent the proportion allotted to the owners of the mill, for capital invested and current expenditure; the rotation is arranged with reference to a period of three weeks, containing eighteen working days, distributed thus:—

* Page 217.

	1st Week.	2nd Week.	3rd Week.
The Well, . . .	Monday.	—	—
Well to Pond, . . .	—	Tuesday.	—
Pond, . . .	Tuesday.	Monday.	Monday.
Pond down, . . .	—	—	Tuesday.
Artizans, . . .	Wednesday and Thursday.	Wednesday and Thursday.	Wednesday and Thursday.
Attendance, . . .	Friday and Saturday.	Friday and Saturday.	Friday and Saturday.

It is clear that if the author of the first paragraph of the tract had considered the adjoining lands to have been divided upon this system, the pond should have been described, not as the innfine, but as the iarfine lands; and in one of the glosses we, in fact, find this correction made; if the pond was the iarfine lands, the two intermediate classes, viz.:—the deirbhfine and the iarfine lands must have been placed between the source of the water and the pond; and, as before remarked, we find in the first passage no allusion to any race from the pond to the mill. It may be suggested that the first passage refers, not to the right to use the mill, but to draw water from the mill-course and pond—a privilege perhaps not of much value in Ireland, but one which the Brehon lawyers, to whom the rule "De minimis non curat lex," was unknown, would not disregard in their calculations.

The present tract concludes with the following remarkable passage:—"There are seven ditches, according to the Feini, the injuries done by which are not paid for (though such should be done by them), for every person shall be corrected (restrained?) by his security, unless they have been made free ; the ditch of a 'dun'-fort, the ditch of a 'cill'-church, the ditch of a fair green, the ditch of a mill-race, the embankment of a mill-pond, the ditch of a turf bog (the hole caused by the cutting of turf), a ditch which is at a bridge ; for, from this out (i.e., with the exception of these specified cases), each one pays for the injury sued for, or caused by each ditch which one has made in his land, to him who has sustained the injury, for every surety shall be sued unless these exceptions have been established as regards water. It was thus that the common right to conducting water was established by the Feini.*

This passage states that ditches (or constructions of any kind) are divisible into two classes, viz. ; those the owners of which are responsible for the accidents arising from their construction, and those the owners of which are exempt from damages in that respect ; the reason why mill-courses fall within the latter and the former class, is stated in the gloss, viz. :—"They are erections, concerning the construction of which authors have laid down no defined mode of construction." All the ditches referred to are made in the exercise of legal right ; and all, except the cutting of the bog, may be considered in some degree as public works ; the cutting in the bog would be an exercise of a right in common land in the ordinary manner. Now the very principle of damages in the English law, which would be applicable to such cases, would be, that a person who had constructed any work of such a nature in the exercise of a legal right, and with due care and precaution, would not be liable for damages in respect of an injury which occurred to a third party, caused by the existence of the work in question, or the legitimate mode of using it. This is the point which was applied to Railway Companies, in the case of the King v. Pease, 4 B & Ad. 30 ; the question in such case is always one of negligence in the construction or using of the work. This appears to the point taken by the author of the gloss, viz. :—that there was no established rule regulating the mode in which the mill-course should be constructed—and that the construction being in itself legal, it was impossible to consider the mode of construction a ground for damages. The obvious mode of deciding the question by an issue of fact as to whether the construction in question was or was not properly constructed, and with all ordinary care, was a course which would not recommend itself to the Brehon lawyer accustomed to the use of distinct arithmetical formulæ. This passage is interesting, as illustrating how the Brehon law was taught; in any modern system the author would have laid down an abstract proposition, illustrated it by particular examples, and fortified it by previous decisions; and, thus having established his general proposition, would have applied it to the facts of the case, then the subject of consideration. The Brehon lawyer must have had in his mind, however vaguely, some abstract rule with reference to which he classified a number of individual cases; having made his classification, he then instructed his pupils by specifying the result of the analysis, without communicating the principle upon which it proceeded. It is this mode of dealing with legal questions, which, in the case of the Brehon law, creates such difficulty and obscurity. Their works are neither simple statements of antecedent customs, nor a teaching by deductions from expressed general principles; the logical process may be described as a series of enthymemes with the major premiss suppressed; but a careful examination of many of these passages will disclose the general rule upon which the author proceeded. The form of their works must have been determined by their original function, as the professional witnesses of unwritten custom; the decisions pronounced by them in cases of the first instance, would naturally fall within Sir H. S. Maine's definition of Themistes, clearly illustrated in the following passage:—"It is certain that in the infancy of mankind, no act of legislature, nor even a distinct author of law, is contemplated or conceived of. Law has scarcely reached the footing of a custom—it is rather a habit. It is, to use the French phrase, 'in the air.' The only authoritative statement of right and wrong, is a judicial decision after the facts—not one pre-supposing a law which has been violated, but one which is breathed for the first time by a higher power into the judge's mind at the moment of adjudication."

* Page 221.

The present tract is a curious instance of this mode of dealing with novel questions. Water mills were introduced into Ireland by Cormac Mac Art, probably in the course of the third century, and the rules referable to them could not have grown up until the use of these constructions had become common, and questions had arisen upon the subject. There was therefore no antecedent custom; nor was there any sovereign power capable of establishing a law, in the proper sense of the term, upon the subject. The Brehon Judge must have proceeded in such cases precisely as the English Common Law Judges in a similar position; they referred to a supposed antecedent custom their decisions upon the novel cases arising before them, and by a series of decisions upon particular instances, ultimately created the materials from which general legal principles might be deduced. In the case of the Brehon Judges the form of their decisions continued unaltered, which the writers of their law tracts embarrassed themselves by adopting. The scholastic logie was known to, and taught in the schools of the Irish ecclesiastics in the middle ages, but in the Brehon law tracts there is not a trace of its influence. This fact may be attributed either to the natural opposition of the representatives of the old customary law to the schools in which the Canon or Civil Law would be considered as authoritative, or to the mode of teaching natural to an hereditary class of lawyers, influenced by traditional forms, and desirous to retain as a monopoly the secrets of their law.

IX.

PRECINCTS.

The open space around a dwelling, which was assumed to be within the peace of the owner of the house, has been referred to in the Book of Aicill, published in the preceding volume, with reference to the compensation payable by third parties for acts of violence committed within it.* The author of the present tract proposes to state the extent of the precinct with reference to every grade, both lay and clerical, and to discuss certain questions connected with the subject. The determination of the precise extent of each precinct he attributes to the decisions of a convention of the bishops, "ollamhs," chiefs, poets, sages, and seniors of Ireland, held at Sliath Fuaid in Magh Breg, and alleges that the extent of the precinct fixed for each class, for the violation of which fines should be paid to the owner of the house, was written by the men of Erin in the great "Cas" of the ancients. The unit in this calculation is the extent of the precinct of the lowest grade, entitled to enjoy the privilege of sanctuary, that is the "bo-aire" chief, which was fixed in simple and archaic fashion. Let him be placed at the door of his house in his customary seat, with a spear, twelve hands breadth long, from the iron head to the horn ferule; so far as he could cast it did his precinct extend. This measurement of the limit of the precinct to which the owner of the house was entitled, rests upon the same principle of the well-known rule of the "maritime league" in international law, viz., that external combatants must suspend hostilities when their further prosecution would endanger a neutral in his usual and legal place of residence. The ordinary spear cast having been assumed as an unit it is doubled for the next higher grade in social rank, and so proceeds by geometric progression through the five remaining ranks to the King, whose precinct is consequently a circle with a radius of sixty-four spear casts.

A King of King, i.e., either a provincial, or the national King, had, by virtue of his rank, a precinct, independent of measurement, inclusive of the entire plain, or meadow, within which his dwelling stood; and the same privilege was conceded to the Archbishop of Armagh, as "Coarb" of St. Patrick. A different method was adopted in fixing the extent of the precincts of the dwellings of ecclesiastics; in this case the calculation is based upon the extent of the greatest, and not the smallest, precinct; to a church, "in which were the three grades of bishop, professor, and archinech," approximately translated in the text, a "cathedral." belonged a precinct with a radius of two thousand paces; to a bishop, a saint, or a hermit, one of one thousand paces, "if it be in a plain," that is, inclusive of all the open surrounding space to the maximum extent of one thousand paces; the precincts of the lower ecclesiastics diminished in the same ratio as their respective "honor-prices." The right of protection was one accorded to the owner of the house for his own benefit and security; it was not a right of the fugitive who required protection; it might, therefore, be waived by the owner of the house, who was not bound to concede its benefit to a stranger, and if it were violated the result would be that damages should be paid to the owner of the house solely. The position of the two extern hostile parties was not altered by the fact that the fugitive succeeded in getting within the precinct of a third party, and therefore the owner of a precinct, as the condition of the inviolability of his own household, was bound to secure to the pursuer the legal redress to which he was entitled; this appears in the following passage, "What is protection as to reciprocal rights? because there is no protection without offer of law."* The right to the benefit of the rule as to the precinct was therefore suspended if the owner of the house refused to give to the pursuer the necessary guarantee. The protection afforded by the precinct naturally extended not only to the fugitive, but also to the property brought by him within the limit. Damages for the violation of the precinct did not arise solely from the fact of violation, but notice that the place in which a person was seized, or property recaptured, was within the limits of the precinct of a third party, was requisite to make the act otherwise justifiable a wrong as against the owner of the house; for among the cases of exemption is placed that of "ignorance," which is defined (with reference to some known case) as the seizure of cattle

* Ante Vol. III., Page 119-145.

* Page 233.

under protection, in the belief that they were not under protection; which must mean, in ignorance of the fact that they were within a precinct.*

The two other cases of what is called "exemption," that is, non-liability to damages for actual violation of the protection, are unlawful protection, and forcible violation; the former exception is free from difficulty, and applies to the case of the owner of the house refusing to fulfil his reciprocal duty of guaranteeing to the pursuer his legal rights; the latter is, however, not so clear; "forcible violation" of the protection of a precinct is the very act for which damages are payable, and, if this expression be referred to the pursuer, it would follow that the most aggravated cases would be exceptions to the rule. The only other to whom the "forcible violation" could be referred would be the fugitive himself, and it is suggested that the case contemplated is that of a fugitive refused protection, and himself forcibly entering the precinct. The construction put upon this last mentioned passage is strengthened by the fact that the succeeding paragraph assumes that the protection to be legal must be assented to by the owner of the house, or some one on his behalf.†

The assent to the entry of a fugitive within the limits of the precinct must have been given by the head of the household himself, or by some member of the family as his agent, and on his behalf. Hence his first wife and his unemancipated son,‡ or even an emancipated son or any person of the family could receive a fugitive. A very clear distinction as between express and implied agency is drawn in the text with regard to the reception of fugitives by persons other than the head of the house. If the protection is accorded to the fugitive by any member of the family by the express direction of the head of the household, full honor-price was payable for its violation; but if there were no express direction given for the reception of the fugitive, and a member of the family acting on behalf of the head of the household received him within the protection of the precinct, the amount of the honor-price payable for the violation of the protection was diminished, in accordance with the more or less intimate relation of the head of the house to the person who had assumed to act on his behalf. The person, who, on behalf of the head of the household, as his agent either express or implied, received a fugitive, was never entitled personally to any damages for the violation of that protection, which he could not have given in individual capacity. This implied agency extended only to those members of the household "who had no expectation of separation from the head of the house,"* thus a mere armed retainer or mercenary soldier temporarily resident in the house could not act on behalf of the head, nor could a person himself a fugitive under protection; as to these cases then is cited in the text the old rule: "Sanctuary of sanctuary; one pilgrim does not protect another; no one is entitled to fines for the violation of the protection of his hired soldiers." It would be attributing perhaps too much ingenuity to the Brehon Lawyers to believe that they worked out these rules by reference to the doctrine of implied agency; it would be more safe to conjecture that at an early period a fugitive might have been received into the protection of the household by any of its members, and subsequently their action was explained as being as that of implied agents of the head of the household.

* Page 229.

† Page 229.

‡ Page 231, but see note on this passage.

The amount of damages payable in respect of a violation was varied with reference to the elements which entered into all such calculations, such as the extent of the violence used towards the fugitive, and the ranks of the fugitive and of the person whose protection was violated.

The number of the persons who could at the one time be received into sanctuary was necessarily limited; the pursuer could not be expected to yield to the claim to protect fugitives, unless the owner of the precinct could himself restrain them from departing, as otherwise his guarantee that justice should be done would be nugatory. The number of fugitives who could at one time be received into protection was therefore limited to twenty-seven.

* Page 231, but see note on this passage.

The church claimed to exercise a more extended protection than was accorded to the laity : " It is safe for her to protect before the terms (specified times) without offer of law in either of them, and to protect after the terms with offer of law, and to protect against death and unjust fines always."*

The rules with regard to the precinct, and the protection thrown over fugitives by the head of the household, would seem to be a survival of earlier ideas modified to meet the circumstances of a denser population, and the claims of the ministers of the Christian religion. There must have been originally some distinct and symbolical act by which the fugitive was removed into the protection of the house ; if this was connected with the ancient pagan religion, it may have fallen into disuse after the introduction of Christianity. The original position of the fugitive is thus described by Mr. Hearn : " Another division of the same class (the dependents of the family) consisted of refugees, especially refugees for homicide. It seems to have been an ancient belief that the stain of human blood, however incurred, required purification. There was also the danger of the blood feud from the kinsmen of the deceased. The homicide, therefore, generally fled from his home, and sought a person who could purify him from his sin, and also protect him from the avenger of blood. If such a suppliant applied to the House Father in the proper form, as recognized by the House Father's worship, and addressed him by the proper adjuration, such a request could not be refused. The stranger had brought himself within the protection of the House Spirits, and they would resent any wrong done to their suppliant. Away from his hearth indeed, and without the appropriate ceremonial, the House Father might at his pleasure grant or refuse the mercy to any person who sued for it. But the suppliant in the technical sense of the word, the ικέρης or the man who came to the holy hearth was a different case. Him the House Father was bound to receive, and when he had received him, the stranger was initiated, and became, at least for the time, a member of the household.”*

* Page 235.

X.

DIVISIONS OF LANDS.

This tract is an attempt to fix arithmetically the value of a cumhal of land (τῆρ cumāle), having reference to the quality and advantages of the land in question. Arable land is divided into three classes—(1) first-class arable land, (2) hilly arable land, (3) labour-requiring arable land. A cumhal of the first class is valued at twenty-four milch cows, of the second class at twenty milch cows, and of the third-class at sixteen milch cows. Weak land, which may be understood to mean land fit only for grazing, is also divided into three classes, viz.,—coarse land, weak land, and deep land, a cumhal of which respectively is valued at twelve dry cows, twelve (q. ten) dry cows, and eight dry cows. The tract then considers the extent to which the value of any cumhal of land is increased by what were considered as its accidental and extrinsic advantages, such as the existence of a wood or mine upon the land, its fitness for the erection of a mill, or its facility of approach, or nearness to a highway. Each of these accidents is taken into account to increase the value in a certain ratio, and the value of any given cumhal of land is to be estimated, having reference to both the quality of the land and its accidental advantages.

Upon the first view it might appear that the whole tract is but a piece of solemn arithmetical trifling, such as the Brehon lawyers loved to exercise their ingenuity upon ; but a little consideration will prove that there is a practical basis for this apparently fantastic estimate. That the estimate is not of the character of a modern tenement valuation is obvious, for it applies to a state of society in which taxation was unknown, and not even its author could have anticipated that the price of land, when actually sold, could be regulated in this manner. To understand the meaning of this tract, it must not be forgotten that in ancient Ireland there was no currency or established standard of value, and that all mercantile transactions were carried on upon the footing of simple barter. In such a condition of the market how are the relative prices of articles quoted ? The existence of a fixed standard of value means that the value of all other articles is estimated by the amount of them which can be purchased by fixed quantities of some one selected commodity. Any commodity may be selected as the normal standard, our habit of selecting gold or silver simply arising from the fact of their indestructible nature, and the assumption that their value in exchange is invariable.

* The Aryan Household, p. 109. The term "derggfine," which occurs in "The Divisions of the Tribe of a Territory," (page 285, l. 15), has been previously explained in accordance with the gloss upon that passage; but the existence of a class of members of a family, deprived of their land as a consequence of homicide, is so unusual a fact that it might be plausibly suggested that the "derggfine" included originally the ἱκεταί admitted into the family, and when the original rights connected with their admission had become obsolete, and the custom, which must have been a late one, of forfeiting (to use this very inaccurate phrase), the lands of a wrongdoer had been introduced, the term (derggfine) was applied in the way in which the authors of the glosses understood it to be used.

When we speak of the penny loaf being larger or smaller, we mean that the amount of bread which a penny will purchase has increased or has diminished. When we state that a pound of tea costs two shillings or five shillings, we mean that the amount of silver which is equivalent in exchange to one pound of tea is greater or less. Both statements merely express the ratio which the value of a commodity fluctuating in the market bears to the value of ascertained quantities of a commodity assumed to be fixed in value. If, however, there exists no fixed standard of value, how is the price of any commodity to be stated ? This difficulty was met by the ancient Irish, as by every other people under similar circumstances, in the following manner :—the actual amount of any article brought to market, or handed over to another person, is fixed by a certain unit which depends upon the mode in which the article is dealt in. Slaves and cattle would be counted by the head ; metal by the usual weight of the bars ; and farm produce by the form in which it was offered for sale. Thus at the present day we deal in so many head of cattle, barrels of potatoes, or sacks of corn. Here the difficulty arises how to express the ratio which the value of any number of cattle bears to any given number of sacks of corn. For this purpose an abstract measure of value is invented, which is roughly estimated to be represented by a certain amount of each of the articles ordinarily brought to sale, and a given quantity of each article having been fixed as representing this value in exchange, the several quantities of the different articles are supposed to be equal in value to each other in the normal condition of the market. As in the present day, in remote country districts, a man who pays for the grazing of so many cows may take it out in the grazing of sheep or geese, each cow being represented by a customary number of the smaller animals, so in ancient times the value of a cow would be considered as equivalent, for the purpose of exchange under ordinary circumstances, to so many sheep, geese, &c.

It has been frequently remarked that in primitive societies the rule of supply and demand has almost no existence, and that the same price will continue to be paid for the same article during very long periods of time, and without regard to what are called mercantile considerations. As long as this mode of dealing is applied to articles which can be sold by measure and weight, and are of the same average quality, there is no difficulty in working the system; but as soon as an attempt is made to apply it to land, the difficulties involved become apparent. Land can only be sold by reference to its superficial extent, but the qualities of any two pieces of land of the same acreage are very different, and therefore their value in exchange cannot be the same. How, therefore, can the value of any piece of land be expressed with reference to the imaginary standard of value to which all other articles are referred? This is the question which the author of this tract attempts to solve, viz.:—What is the par of exchange of land in the market with reference to the other subjects of exchange? That he should fail in doing so in any practical manner was inevitable, for the question was, in its essence, insoluble; but he adopts the only reasonable mode of approaching the question, and handles the matter with considerable acuteness. He assumes as the base of his calculation a fixed measure of land, which he defines as the land-cumhal; he then divides land with reference to fertility or fitness for pasturage, and brings out the result in cattle; he then considers the accidental qualities of any particular land, and treats them as raising the value in a certain ratio; the value of any land in exchange would thus be represented by a certain number of cumhals in cattle, irrespective of the actual acreage of the land.

The basis of the whole calculation rests upon the superficial extent of a cumhal of land; and the commentator naturally appends a table of the superficial measurements upon which his calculation is founded. "How is a tir-cumaile measured?" By grains; three grains in a proper inch; six inches in the hand; and two hands in a foot; six feet in a pace; six paces in an "intritt" measure; six "intritts" in a "lait" measure; six "laits" in a "forach" measure.

The tir-cumaile would seem to be seventy-two square forach-measures. The following table represents the statement of the text:—

inch.
1	hands.
6	1	feet.
12	2	1	paces.
72	12	6	1	intritts.
432	72	36	6	1	laits.
2,592	432	216	36	6	1	forachs.
15,552	2,592	1,296	216	36	6	1

If we assume the foot measure to be practically equivalent to the modern foot, the "tir-cumaile" would be about 285 acres; on the other hand, if the forach-measure were equal only to 144 feet, as would appear to be stated in the passage referred to in the note to the text, it would be equivalent to about 10 acres. There are no means afforded by the text to enable us to express any definite opinion as to which of these quantities is the correct result, and it would be inconsistent with the object of the preface to discuss the question generally with reference to other and extraneous authorities; nor, perhaps, could such inquiries lead to any definite result.

The ingenious mode of calculating the value of land devised by our author, could never have been practically applied; the term "tir-cumaile" originally meant, and probably always continued to mean, "the land of a cumhal," and when so used, necessarily excluded the assumption of the land being of any fixed acreage. Mr. O'Curry considers the phrase "tir-cumhaile," as much land as would suffice for the grazing of a cumhal of cattle, and this may have been the ordinary sense in which the term was used.

XI.

THE CRITH GABHLACH.*

This tract has received especial attention from Irish Antiquarians, inasmuch as it professes to give a detailed description of the several social ranks and organization of the Irish tribe. Mr. O'Curry has, in his Lectures on the Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish, adopted this treatise as an authentic and archæic work, and without hesitation accepted its statements as a sufficient authority for his detailed account of the earliest form of the Celtic tribe system. Dr. W. K. Sullivan, adopting the views of Mr. O'Curry upon this subject, attributes the date of its composition to the middle or end of the seventh century. Before any discussion as to the nature of the work and the conclusions which may be fairly drawn from its statements, it is necessary to consider the probable date of its composition. It must be first remarked that it does not consist of an ancient text with an annexed commentary and explanatory glosses, but is manifestly written throughout by an author according to a definite plan, and that to the later lawyers who may have made use of it, it presented no archæisms, either of custom or language, which required special comment or explanation. The most important passage, as indicating the probable date of the composition, is the statement relative to the four rights to which it was proper that a king should pledge his people, the first of which is stated to be "a right to help him to drive out foreign races, i.e. against the Saxons."* Assuming that these latter words are not a gloss which has crept into the text (and there is no reason to believe that they are), the date of the work must coincide with a period at which the Saxons were regarded as the enemies par excellence of the Irish people, and not merely as a hostile, but as an invading race. It is obvious that no Irish writer would have singled out the Saxons as the special enemies of the Irish during the period covered by the Danish invasions, nor after that date until the Saxon had, in the mind of the people, been substituted for the Dane as their natural enemy. The date of the work must therefore be either before the end of the eighth century, or after the English invasion, the period covered by the Danish invasions being absolutely excluded. The early relations of the Irish and Saxons were of the most friendly character, and naturally so as the Irish were then busily employed in plundering, and perhaps to some extent, conquering, their christian and Celtic neighbours across the channel. This point is thus discussed by Dr. W. K. Sullivan, in the following passage of his preface to the Lectures of Mr. O'Curry:—"The common object of attack, Roman Britain, brought the Irish and Saxons in contact at an early period. And this intercourse was, on the whole, of a most friendly character. . . . The hostility of the two peoples appears to have first arisen in consequence of the quarrels between the Irish and Saxon churches. Political causes helped to develop this hostility as soon as the Saxon dominion extended to the north of England, and the Saxon kings of Northumbria came into direct contact with the Scotie kingdom established in Scotland. The wars carried on by the Saxon kings against the Scots and Picts involved the Irish in the quarrels of their brethren in Scotland, and led to the ravaging of the coasts of Ireland by the Saxons. Venerable Bede records an expedition of this kind sent in the year A.D. 684, by Ecfrið, King of the Northumbrians, under a commander named Beort, 'which miserably wasted that harmless nation, which had been always most friendly to the English, inasmuch as in their hostile rage they spared not even the churches or monasteries.' It is in the seventh century that we find mention for the first time of the Saxons as enemies. The first notice of the Danes or Norsemen occurs in 790, or more correctly in 795. After that date, and until the arrival of the Normans, the Danes alone are mentioned as hostile foreigners. This circumstance is of very great importance in connexion with the date of the law tract, the Crith Gabhlach." After citing the passage above referred to, he proceeds:—"If this example be not an interpolation of much later times, it shows, taken in connexion with other circumstances, that the important document in question belongs to the period anterior to the Viking expeditions, and in all probability to the middle or end of the seventh century."* If this view of the meaning of the passage be correct, it follows that one plundering expedition against the Irish seaboard so profoundly affected the national mind, that the Saxon was held by the people as a national enemy to be expelled from the island which he had invaded. No allusions to the Saxons as such enemies are cited from any of the early Brehon Law tracts or popular romances; no act of hostility save one isolated plundering expedition is referred to; and it is to be remarked that after this event the Saxons at least were ignorant of any hostile relations existing between them and the Irish; Bede reprobates the expedition as a wanton attack on a friendly nation; and at a later date Alcuin was of the same opinion, when, in a passage quoted by Dr. W. K. Sullivan, he described the Irish as "gentes Scotorum innocuas Anglis, et semper amicas."* The passage of the tract referred to would rather lead to the conclusion that the date

* Mr. O'Curry, shortly before his death, revised and corrected his previous translation of this tract, making many important alterations and emendations. This revised addition has been entrusted to the present editors, and on all occasions the later and more matured text of Mr. O'Curry's translation has been followed in the present edition.

* Page 335.

* Manners and Customs, &c., vol. i., p. xxxvi.

* The details of this raid, as related by the original authorities, are a proof rather of the friendly terms which always subsisted between the two nations, than that its result was to establish permanently hostile relations. The entire passage in Bede is as follows: "In the year of our Lord's incarnation 684, Egfrid, King of the Northumbrians, sending Beort, his general, with an army into Ireland, miserably wasted that harmless nation, which had always been most friendly to the English; insomuch that in their hostile rage they spared not even the churches or the monasteries. The islanders to the utmost of their power repelled force with force, and, imploring the assistance of the Divine mercy, prayed long and fervently for vengeance; and though such a curse cannot possess the kingdom of God, it is believed that those who were justly cursed on account of their impiety, did soon suffer the penalty of their guilt from the avenging hand of God; for the very next year that same king, rashly leading his army to ravage the provinces of the Picts, much against the advice of his friends, and particularly of Cuthbert of blessed memory, who had been lately ordained bishop, the enemy made show as if they fled, and the king was drawn into the straits of inaccessible mountains, and slain with the greater part of his forces, on the 20th of May, in the 40th year of his age, and the 15th of his reign. His friends, as has been said, advised him not to engage in this war; but he having the year before refused to listen to the most reverend father, Egbert, advising him not to attack the Scots, who did him no harm, it was laid on him as a punishment for his sin, that he should not now regard those, who would have prevented his death."—"Ecclesiastical History," Lib. IV., c. 26.

The Saxon Chronicle states—"A.D. 684. Here in this year Egfrid sent an army against the Scots, and Beorc, his alderman with it, and miserably they plundered and burned the churches of God."

The Saxons at least considered this raid a sin, and believed the king's subsequent death was a signal Divine chastisement.

The following is the statement in the Four Masters: "The age of Christ 683, the 10th year of Finachta. The devastation of Magh-Breagh, both churches and territories by the Saxons, in the month of June precisely; and they carried off with them many hostages, with many other spoils, and afterwards went to their ships."

The same raid is mentioned in the Annals of Ulster under the year 684, and in the Annals of Clonmacnoise under the year 680.

The captives taken upon the occasion of this raid were restored by the Saxons: "Adamnan went unto the Saxons to request [a restitution of] the prisoners, whom the North Saxons had carried off from Magh Breagh the year before mentioned; he obtained a restitution of them, after having performed miracles and wonders before the hosts; and they afterwards gave him great honour and respect, together with a full restitution of everything he asked of them." The Four Masters, Vol. I., p. 291. The Annals of Clonmacnoise, under the year 686, states that, "Adamnan of the work must be brought down to some date after the English invasion, unless there be internal evidence which would render such a conclusion improbable; and, if the date be so far postponed, it must be referred to a period considerably subsequent to the first invasion, to that at which all the Irish tribes stood in a hostile position to the English king, and the invasion was at length successfully checked, or at the earliest date, to the first quarter of the fourteenth century.

There is also internal evidence which, independently of the passage referred to, would lead to the same conclusion.

The most remarkable change in the organization of the early Irish Church was the substitution of an episcopal for the monastic system. In the earlier form of church government the abbot, not the bishop, was the ruling ecclesiastic; the "coarb" of the original saint was the head of the ecclesiastical tribe; the pre-eminence and territorial jurisdiction of bishops arose at a date long subsequent to the commencement of the Danish invasion. Is it probable that a treatise descriptive of the ranks of society, if written during the life of Adamnan, and the vigorous existence of the Columban monasteries, would omit any allusion to an abbot, and speak of the bishop as travelling "for the good of the church and the territory," and as of rank equal, if not superior, to the king of the tribe? There is further no allusion whatsoever to the geilfine system, nor to the geilfine flaith as representing his "fine," and therefore an important item in the social system brought back sixty captives to Ireland." In the Annals of Ulster, under the same year, there is a similar statement.

It therefore appears that this invasion of the Saxon amounted merely to a raid along the coast between the rivers Liffey and Boyne; that all the restitution sought by Adamnan on behalf of his country was freely accorded; and that the incursion was regarded by the English as a sinful violation of their friendship with an allied nation. And it is more remarkable that upon his return to Ireland Adamnan succeeded in introducing into Ireland the Roman mode of computing Easter, which proves that at that date the Irish cherished no peculiar feelings of animosity toward the English or their ecclesiastical usages. (See Bede Ecc. Hist., Lib. V., c. 15.)

All the above references are contained in the notes to Dr. O'Donovan's edition of the "Four Masters."

—a very remarkable omission in a treatise of the character of the present. The condition of society exhibited in this work is that of the tribe system in state of decay and decadence, and rapidly tending to assume a feudal form. The simple freeman has sunk to the condition of the Saxon ceorl; the tribe lands have, to a great extent, if not altogether, been monopolized by the noble classes; the political power has passed into the hands of the chiefs and greater nobles; all classes, from the highest to the lowest, are bound together by the semi-feudal bond, founded upon the system of lending out cattle; all classes are rated for the payment of tribute to their superiors; and the basis of society seems rather to be personal service than the common rights of the members of the tribe. Except for the survival of ancient terms, and some archæic rules and peculiarities arising from the absence of a circulating medium and the material conditions of the people, the condition of the country, as thus described, was not very different from that it exhibited in the last century. This is the opinion of Mr. O'Curry, as expressed in the following passage:—"It is not very easy to translate into modern language the technical terms of the ancient law of Landlord and Tenant; but a very well matured system existed at a very early period indeed, under which, although there was no such thing as absolute property in land in any individual, still, within the tribe, individuals held exclusive property in land, and entered into relations with tenants for the use of the land, and these again with undertenants, and so on, much as we see in our own days. Now these relations constitute the first test of rank and condition. The Flaith—a word in some sense may be translated the Lord or Nobleman—was distinguished by being the absolute owner (within his tribe) of land for which he paid no rent, so that, if a man possessed but a single acre in this way, he was a Flaith. All other persons holding land held it either from a Flaith or from some tenant of his; and the rank and precedency of these persons depended upon the amount of their possessions."* Although there are many statements in this description to which exception may be taken, it fairly represents the practical condition of the Irish as depicted in the Crith Gabhlach, subject to the material correction that such was not the original system of the Celtic tribe, but rather the condition to which the tribe had been reduced at the date of the composition of this work. The same causes were at work in Ireland as elsewhere, and with the same results. The chiefs and nobles had succeeded in crushing the lower orders, and had converted into their own separate property the land originally the common property of the tribe. The Crith Gabhlach might fairly be described as a compendium of the rights and emoluments of the higher classes, of their house tributes, rents, cuttings, and costerings, and is not dissimilar from the old law book of the Brehon whereby the English commissioners "perceived how many vessels of butter, and how many measures of meal, and how many porks, and other such gross duties did arise unto M'Guire out of his mensal lands."*

* Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish, vol. ii., page 34.

It is not to be concluded that any Irish tribe or province was ever actually organized in strict conformity with the rules laid down in this tract. It is impossible to believe that a nation so mobile and turbulent as the Irish Celts lived under a system so rigid in its laws and pedantic in its minutiae; that the different classes possessed so much and no more than the amount of property herein set down against them; inhabited houses of precisely the prescribed size, furnished in the manner described, and supplied with the farming instruments directed; that the occupiers of them paid so much and no more than their customary rents; and that the whole society, from the provincial King downwards, were bound, and acquiesced in, a complete system of semi-feudal service. The work must be considered as a description of society fully organized according to the current legal theory at the date of its composition; but it can no more be assumed that the existing community accurately corresponded to the legal theory, than that the condition of England in the twelfth century, was such as Blackstone's sketch of the feudal system assumes it to have been.

* Ante, vol. iii., page 36.

The Crith Gabhlach treats of the various ranks of the freemen of the tribe, their mutual rights and duties, and the power and privileges of the King; the unfree classes of the community are only referred to in connexion with the rights and qualifications of the free.

The author lays down as the cardinal principle that the proper grade of the layman among the people is determined by the amount of his property. The number of classes of men is stated to be seven. That this number was selected as the sacred number, and was not in accordance with the actual state of facts, appears from the statement of the author himself, and the mode in which the division in classes is varied in different passages. The grades of a people are stated to be as follows:—(1) the "fer mbidboth" man, (2) the "bo-aire" chief, (3) the "aire-desa" chief, (4) the "aire-ard" chief, (5) the "aire-tuisc" chief, (6) the "aire-forgaill" chief, and (7) the king. This sevenfold division is stated to be derived from the similitude of the ecclesiastical orders, "for it is proper that for every order which is in the Church, there should be a corresponding one among the people."*

The two first classes represent the free but not noble, the latter five the free and noble.

The divisions of the noble class are then specified, and the number of them is again seven, viz.:—(1) the "aire-desa," (2) the "aire-echta," (3) the "aire-ard," (4) the "aire-tuisc," (5) the "aire-forgaill," (6) the "tainaise" of a king, and (7) the king. To complete the number seven in this, two further classes are introduced, the "aire-echta" and the tanist; the latter of these was an official person and not a class of individuals, and the same observation is applicable to the "aire-echta." The non-noble classes are classed as follows:—(1) the two grades of "fer-mbidba" men, (2) the "og-aire," (3) an "aithech" person, (4) the "bo-aire febhsa," (5) the "mbrugh-fher" man, (6) the "fer-fothla" man, and (7) the "aire-coisring"

* Page 299.

man. The seven classes are here again completed, first by the introduction of the "aithech," a very anomalous class, as subsequently explained in the text, and by the addition of the last three, viz., the "mbruigh-fer," the "fer-fothla," and the "aire-coisring," two of which are the names of officers, and not of classes.

The scheme of classification used by the author of the tract on Precincts, must have been different from that of the author of this tract; for he also, dividing the society into seven classes, states the two lowest to be the "bo-aire" and the "aire-desa," and the highest to be the king, omitting to give the names of the four intermediate divisions, and, with reference to the extent of their precincts, he fixes their rank upon the basis of a geometric progression, a gradation inconsistent with the ratio of their properties and honor-prices as fixed in this treatise.

The several ranks are divided with reference to the amount of property requisite to qualify for each respectively, and from and in the proportion to the requisite amount of property follow their rights and privileges (some of which we should now class as duties): (1) the legal value attributed to their oath, contract, guarantee, and evidence; (2) the honor-price; (3) refectations, or the nature and amount of food they should receive from a host; (4) sick maintenance; (5) the extent to which they could give protection to a third party who claimed it; (6) the "taurereic," or the amount of stock to be delivered to them by the superior to whom they commended themselves (the commendation to a lord in consideration of the "taurereic" might be oppressive or advantageous to the inferior, according to the circumstances of the time); and (7) the "bes tigi" or house tribute, payable in kind by the inferior to the superior to whom he had commended himself.

The following analysis of the necessary qualifications and rights of the several classes will render the relative positions of the respective ranks clear.

A.—THE NON-NOBLE CLASSES.

1. The “mbidboth” man. This class is sub-divided into two sub-classes, viz., the “mbidboth” man who had attained the age of fourteen years, but not yet that of seventeen years, “unless he has taken possession or succession before that, or a man of the Feini grade be a co-occupant with him,” i.e., unless he is himself in possession of a house, or be the joint occupant of one with a free man of full age(?), and the “mbidboth” man who had attained the age of seventeen years. The oath, contract, or guarantee of the former extended to the value of a “dairt” heifer; his refection was milk and stirabout; his protection extended to one of his own grade over the territory; his honor-price was a “dairt” heifer. The value of the oath, &c., of the latter was a “colpach” heifer; his protection extends to one of his own rank until he has given him double food (two meals?); his refection was milk and stirabout; his honor-price a “colpach” heifer; his proportionate stock (taurcreic) was four “seds” in value; his food rent (bes tigi) a wether; his sick maintenance for himself and his mother new unskimmed milk every third, fifth, ninth, and tenth day, and also on Sunday.

It appears from this that the very lowest class of freemen were not, as has been stated, wholly devoid of property; they are presumed to possess a house, in respect of which they may be required to pay food rent to a superior, and they had a share, however small, in the common pasture, otherwise they could not have availed themselves of the proportionate stock (taurcreic) they might receive.

2. The Bo-aire or enriched churl. The “mbidboth”-man, upon acquiring the necessary amount of property, became ipso facto a “bo-aire” chief, because, in this case, there was no change of status, as in the transaction afterwards mentioned from the non-noble to the noble class. This increase is attributed to the profits made by stock received from a lord in the first instance; for he is assumed to have commended himself to a lord; such would seem to be implied by the rule:—“In three days after notice half a portion (of fencing ?) is due from him for a field ; a third part of the fee for his theft, and his drunkenness, and his laming, and of 'eric' fine for killing him goes to his chief ;" the chief, his lord, has a right to a certain amount of his labour, and a share in all damages for injuries done to him.

A. The lowest grade of the general class of "bo-aire" is the "og-aire," that is a young-aire, one who lately acquired the rank of a "bo-aire;" his property must, therefore, be assumed to be the minimum sufficient to qualify for that rank. His property consists "of sevens;" seven cows and a bull; seven pigs and a boar; seven sheep, and one horse. The change in his position is marked by the statement that "He has land of three seven (21) cumhal value." The right to the land is connected with the possession of stock; but if a cumhal of land means enough land to graze a cumhal of cattle, or three cows, it would follow that he obtained grazing land far in excess of that which was necessary for his assumed stock. That the lands of a "bo-aire" may have far exceeded what was requisite for the grazing of a stock of "sevens," appears from the statement that there might be four or five "aithechs" on the land of one "bo-aire;" and as each "aithech" is defined as possessing ten cows, ten pigs, &c., the author must have contemplated the case of a "bo-aire's" lands being sufficient to graze fifty head of cattle, besides lesser beasts. The land held by the "bo-aire" was not his separate property, for there is a distinct reference to his paying one out of seven cows for the use of the land. The difficulty in understanding the "bo-aire's" position arises from their being no explanation of how or from whom he obtains the thrice seven cumhals of land. Stock, not land, is what the lord gave to the man who commended himself to him; that it was stock which was given pre-supposes that the inferior receiving the stock had, independently of his lord, the means of grazing them. It may be assumed that the proportionate stock given to the freeman not possessing other cattle, i.e., the "mibdboth"-man fixes the share in the pasturage lands of a tribe to which each freeman was absolutely entitled, and that the right to put a larger amount of stock upon the common pasture land, was connected with the actual amount of stock possessed by their owner; but that for every additional seven cattle put upon the lands, one was left as the payment for the year's grazing—the profits of the waste grazing lands would probably in the end be monopolized by the chief, as the English feudal lords of manors contrived to possess themselves of the waste. The “og-aire” also possessed one-fourth share in a plough, an ox, a plough-share, a goad, and a bridle, and a share (quere, one-fourth) in a kiln, a mill, and a barn. His house was nineteen feet in length, with an out-house of thirteen. His proportionate stock was eight cows; his food-rent was a “dartaith” heifer. His refection extended to two men, who were entitled to no more than milk and stirabout, and a certain amount of new or sour milk and cakes. The passage which describes the extent of his evidence, &c., and the amount of his honor-price, is very remarkable. It appears from a subsequent passage that the normal amount of the honor-price, and legal value of the oath, &c., of a bo-aire, was five seds;* but in the case of an “oc-aire,” this was reduced to three seds, which fact is thus explained:—“And the two seds, which are wanting to it (his honor-price) are wanting, because the stability of his house is not perfect, and he is not competent to undertake liabilities for them, like every other “bo-aire” for the smallness of his property,† from which we must conclude that the new “bo-aire” was not a full “bo-aire,” and did not obtain the full rights incident to his rank until some subsequent period.

B. The second sub-division of the “bo-aire” is the “aithech,” who is distinctly stated by our author not to be a “bo-aire,” but why he was not so considered it is difficult to discover. His property exceeded that of the “og-aire;” his stock was “ten,” i.e., ten cows, ten pigs, ten sheep, &c.; his house was twenty feet in length, with a kitchen of fourteen; the value of his oath, &c., and his honor-price was four seds; his proportionate stock was ten cows, and his food-rent the choicest of a herd of cows, and a bacon, four sacks of malt, and a wooden vessel of salt; he was entitled to refection for two, milk and stirabout, butter on Sunday, venison, sea-grass (?), onions and salt. His property and social position was superior to that of the "og-aire," and he was not considered as of the "bo-aire" rank, but what was styled "an immovable tenant." The reason given for this is as follows:—"What is it that puts this man from being in the rank of a 'bo-aire?' Because it may be that four or five such may occupy the land of a 'bo-aire,' and it could not be easy for each of them to be a 'bo-aire.'"* What is very noteworthy as to this class is the disproportion of the food-rent to the other incidents of his position, and proves some uncertainty as to his status. He, although possessing cattle, is described as grazing them upon the land of a "bo-aire;" but as a "bo-aire" is not described as having any land of his own, it must mean that he was some kind of sub-assignee of the "bo-aire's" grazing rights, and that the transaction bore some resemblance to the grazing partnerships referred to in the Book of Aicill.†

* Page 309.

† Page 307.

C. The "bo-aire" febhsa, or the wealthy "bo-aire," is one who has acquired the full rights of his class. His property is larger than that of the "og-aire"—he has twelve cows and twice seven cumhals of land, a house of twenty-seven feet and a back-house of fifteen, a share in a mill and a kiln, barn, sheep-house, calf-house, and pig-stye. As before remarked, the value of his oath and his honor-price were five seds, his proportional stock twelve cows, and his food-rent a male "colpach" heifer with its accompaniments.‡

D. The next class, the "mbruighfher" is evidently an official of the "bo-aire" rank, not an independent sub-division of the entire class. He is "the 'bo-aire' for obedience to judgment." His property is represented as twenty cows, two bulls, six bullocks, twenty hogs, twenty sheep, four house-fed hogs, two sows, and a horse, and he has also sixteen sacks of seed in the ground; he has a lawn for sheep about his house, a house of twenty-seven feet, and a back-house of seventeen feet, and outhouses. The value of his oath, &c., and his honor-price, are six seds. His proportionate stock was two cumhals, and his foot-rent a cow with its accompaniments.* The very peculiar enumeration of fines for all conceivable injuries to himself and his property prove that he occupied an exceptional position. It would seem that he was in some way bound to offer hospitality to a king, a bishop, a poet, or a judge "from off the road," and that his supply of eatables for such purpose was portion of his "obedience to judgment."

* Page 309.

† Ante, Vol. III., page 142.

‡ Page 311.

E. The highest of the members of the "bo-aire" class is described under the title of the "fer-fothla chief," and was so called because his cattle having become too numerous for the grazing which he himself possessed, he had commenced to give them out to others as taurcreic, or additional stock. There is no amount of property fixed as the necessary qualification for this rank, the test of the qualification for which was that his property was in excess of his means of supplying necessary grazing. The amount of his honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., is eight seds, his house was twenty-seven feet in length, with a back-house of seventeen. His proportionate stock was four cumhals, and his food-rent a cow with accompaniments one year, and a male colpach heifer the other.

A "fer-fothla" chief manifestly stood at the head of the "bo-aire" class, for it was the "fer-fothla" who is described as passing from the non-noble to the noble grade in the manner subsequently discussed.

F. The "aire-coisring" chief is evidently an official person, and not a sub-division of the "bo-aire" class. He is described thus:—"Why is the 'aire-coisring' (i.e., the binding 'aire') so called? Because that he binds people, king, and synod on behalf of his tribe (cenel), in their rights of safety by verbal engagements; but they concede to him leadership, and a right to speak before (or for) them. He is the family chief then. He gives a pledge for his family to king, and synod, and professional men, to restrain them in obedience."† His honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., were fixed at eight seds. His house was thirty feet in length, and the outhouse nineteen. His proportionate stock was five cumhals, and his food-rent a cow with its accompaniments, and a male "colpach" heifer, with its proportion of other food. No amount of property is fixed as a necessary qualification.*

* Page 311.

† Page 317.

The "aire-fothla" passed under peculiar circumstances from the "bo-aire" class into the noble class—that of the "flaiths." These are explained in the following passage of the text:—"When does the 'Aithech'-tenant become a chief having the bo-airich-ship? Upon going into a true green (the extent of precinct suitable to the rank of a flaith). When he has as much as the 'aire-desa,' it is then he is an aire-desa, &c."† When we turn to the explanation of an "aire-desa" chief's qualifications in a subsequent page, the following passage occurs:—"And he is the son of an 'aire,' and the grandson of an 'aire.'"‡ The "bo-aire-fothla" chief did not attain the rank of a "flaith" by merely purchasing an acre of land, for there is no reference to land in the transaction; nor did he acquire it by virtue of possessing merely the property of a "flaith," for his property was required to be double of that at which a "flaith-desa" was valued, nor again could he be considered a "flaith," unless both his father and grandfathers were "aires," which must mean something more than they had been "bo-aires." That there was some element of hereditary descent requisite to fix the social position of a "flaith" all analogy leads us to expect. The elevation of a "bo-aire" to the rank of a flaith was not simply equivalent to his being rated at a higher valuation. He acquired what was called the "deis"-right, which is thus defined in the text:—"What is the deis-right of a 'flaith'? The goodly right to protect his office or rank. There are four 'deis'-rights prescribed for the 'flaith'-chief. The ancient protection of the people (or territory) is his office in the territory, together with the office of leader, or 'tanist'-leader of the army, whichever office it may be, of his 'giall-na'-tenants, his 'saer'-tenants, his 'sen-cleithe'-tenants, the punishment of every imperfect service, the following of cottier tenants and 'fuidher'-tenants whom he brings upon his land, because his wealth is the greater and better.”* And again, “Why is the ‘aire-desa’ so called? Because of the fact that it is on account of his ‘deis’-rights that he is paid ‘dire’-fine. Not so the ‘bo-aire’ chief; it is in right of his cows he is paid ‘dire’-fine.”†

* Page 319.

† Page 317.

‡ Page 321.

Upon this subject Mr. Hearn makes the following observations:—“Among the members of the clan itself, within the ‘cinel,’ in the strict sense of the term, and apart from the exceptional privileges of the royal house, there was a well-marked difference. That difference was between the noble and the free, or, as it may otherwise be expressed, between the gentle and simple. Both classes were equally members of the clan, and, to a certain extent had equal rights. But both by public opinion, and by the custom which supplied the place of law, certain sections of the community possessed, in comparison with other sections thereof, an acknowledged superiority. Their descent was purer; their wealth was greater; their wer-geld was higher; their share in the public lands, or in the distribution of booty, was larger; they were the natural leaders of the community in war, and its natural councillors in peace. Accordingly, we observe in the early history of all Aryan nations, the presence of what may be called a natural aristocracy, as the leaders and kinsmen of a natural democracy. It is not difficult to understand that some households should be more prosperous, more numerous, and more wealthy than the others. Yet these advantages are rather the effects than the causes of such a difference as that which we are considering. Even if there were no evidence, that in at least certain societies, land was distributed according to the rank of its holders, they are inadequate to explain all the facts of the case. They may account for the difference in modern society, where individuals rise and fall with a rapidity unknown to archaic nations; but they do not explain the strongly marked lines, which intersect the society of the ancient world. The preceding inquiries point, for the cause of the difference, to some sentiment connected with the peculiar religion of our forefathers, and consequently affecting their descent. The facts correspond with the expectation. A certain series of pure descents was sufficient to establish freedom, and a share in the government of the community, and in the distribution of lands; but another and a larger series was necessary for the full enjoyment of all the honours and all the consideration which the community could give." "The rule of nobility seems to be the result of two other rules. One is that fundamental principle of taking the common great-grandfather as the stock or founder of the joint family or Mæg; the other is the rule of the Three Descents. The effect of the latter rule was, that for the purpose of acquiring full rank in any particular status, the claimant must show that his father and both (?) his grandfathers had held that status. Consequently, a man who claimed to belong to the nobility of the clan must show that his grandfather was noble—that is, that his grandfather had a kin, or in other words, had a great-great-grandfather who was a freeman." After referring to various other archaic systems of law, Mr. Hearn makes the following remarks upon the existence of this rule among the Celtic nations:—"The Celtic nations also exhibit traces of a similar custom. In Cymric law, the descendant of the original Altud or stranger to the district, was, after the lapse of three generations, ranked as a "Briodwr;" and thenceforth became irremovable, and was entitled to his share in the lands of the 'vicinity.' In Scotland a similar rule applied to serfs, although it is possible that in this case the rule may have been introduced from England. In Ireland the descendants of a Bo-aire, or Ceorl, might aspire, when they possessed land (?) for three generations, to become Flaths."* So, too, "A 'Fuidhir' family† in the fourth generation—indeed, in the third, for the Daer Botach had also right of settlement—could not be ejected from the land. That is, the third descendant was capable of transmitting heritable right, and the fourth of acquisition by virtue of such right." As a curious exemplification of this principle,

* Page 321.

† Page 321.

* Manners and Customs, &c., Vol. I., p. cix.

† Ib., p. cxxi.

Mr. Hearn refers to a passage in the Introduction of the preceding volume relative to the claims of his original church upon the property of a former member.* Upon the practical working of this rule Mr. Hearn further remarks:—"These considerations indicate the triple distinction of the ancient free population. It consisted of freedmen, of freemen, and of nobles. The distinction rested exclusively upon blood, and could not, therefore, be removed by grant either of people or of King. By the operation of time, if there were no disturbing influences, each lower class naturally passed into the one next above it. Each step of the promotion brought with it increased consideration, additional strength and influence, by reason of a more numerous kindred, and more extended alliances, and no small material advantage, both direct and indirect. At a later period, when the dependent portion of the household became developed, and the Gesindschaft was established, other varieties of rank arose. Nobility was then derived, not from birth, but from official position, and attendance upon the throne."†

The idea of "limitation" in the Irish law was connected with three successive lives, either of three persons in lineal descent, grandfather, father, and son; or of three successive over lords, as in the case of Daer Fuidhir tenants,‡ or of three successive owners, as in the case of rights of water. The same idea of three, or its multiples, being the basis of such calculations, also appears in the passage in this tract, stating that cottiers and "fuidhir"-tenants been "sencleithe"-tenants, and irremovable after serving for nine times nine years.

We may now proceed with the analysis of the remaining ranks in the tribe.

* Vol. III., p. lxix.

† These extracts are selected from the VIIIth Chapter of "The Aryan Household," pp. 193 to 209.

‡ Upon this point Mr. Hearn seems to have fallen into error.—V.S.

B.—THE NOBLE CLASSES.

1. The "aire-desa".—The property with reference to which this and the subsequent class are arranged, is manifestly land, as the number of the tenants of each is respectively stated, as in the non-noble classes the number of their cattle. The tenants of the "aire-desa" were ten, five "giallna," and five "saer"-tenants. The amount of food to be furnished by the tenants is stated in detail. An incident to the right of feasting at the houses of his tenants ("coshering") was the number of persons whom he might take to their houses from the "Calends" to Shrovetide; ten couples are the number specified in this case; in return he was expected "to protect his tenants in all just suits of 'cain' law and 'cairde'-law, standing towards them in the relation of a patron to his clients. The legal value of his oath, &c., and honor-price was ten 'seds'; the length of his house twenty-seven feet; his proportionate stock was six 'cumhals,' and his food-rent two cows."*

2. The "aire-echta" was an officer of the tribe, and does not represent a class; this is obvious because no property, qualification, rights, or liabilities, are specified in his case.† The duty of the "aire-echta" was "to avenge the insult offered to a territory in which a person was lately killed;" he was an appointed avenger of wrongs. This is illustrated by the case of the blinding of Cormac Mac Airt, "Aengus Gabhuaid-dech" was an "aire-echta" (translated "champion"), who was avenging a family quarrel in the territories of Luighne, and he went into a woman's house there and drank milk in it by force; and the woman said, "It were better for thee to avenge the daughter of thy kinsman upon Cellach, son of Cormac, than to consume my food by force."‡ Aengus thereupon at once proceeded to Temhair and slew Cellach; the point of the story seems to be that the woman reproached the "aire-echta" for plundering her under colour of avenging a family quarrel, while he left unperformed the more important and dangerous duty of slaying the king's son for the abduction of one of the women of the tribe.

* Page 321.

† Page 223.

‡ Ante, Vol. III., page 83.

3. The "aire-ard." He had twenty tenants, ten giallna, and ten "saer"-tenants; twenty couple were "his right on a feasting;" his honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., was fixed at fifteen seds; his proportionate stock was seven "cumhals," and his food rent three cows. There is no statement as to the size of his house.*

4. The "aire-tuisi," who had twenty-seven tenants, fifteen "giallna" tenants, and twelve "saer" tenants; he had thirty couples at the feasting. The value of his oath, &c., and his honor-price was fixed at twenty "seds"; his house was twenty-nine feet in length; his proportionate stock was eight "cumhals," and four cows his food rent. The aire-tuisi in the third generation participated in the government of the tribe. "He makes (assists in making?) 'corus'-arrangements in the 'raith' right of his father and grandfather."†

5. The "aire-forgaill" stood in rank at the head of the nobles, and next to the king and tanist; his position is marked by the words "he testifies to the character of the grades we have enumerated, in every case in which a denial of a charge is sought, because his quality is superior to that of his companions." This passage might lead to the conclusion that the "aire-forgaill" was an official who had the power of deciding the status of the individual members of the tribe, but inasmuch as the "aire-forgaill" chief is introduced into the list of titles of dignities in the subsequent tract, although the "aire-echta" is omitted, it is probably that the name indicates a class, not an office, and that the right to give evidence as to the status of a member of a tribe was incident to the position of the first class of the nobles. He had forty tenants, twenty "giallna" and twenty "saer"-tenants; the value of his oath, &c., and honor-price was fixed at fifteen seds; his house was thirty feet in length; his proportionate stock nine "cumhals," and his food rent five cows.‡

6. The "tanist" of the king or his elected successor. He had five "sencleithe"-tenants more than an "aire-forgaill"-chief from which it may be conjectured that his father and grandfather must also have been "aire-forgaill" chiefs. His honor-price and the value of his oath was fixed at thirty seds; ten "cumhals" were his proportionate stock, and six cows his food rent. There is no reference as to the size of his house, or his receipts from his tenants, which may be assumed to have been considered the same as those of the "aire-forgaill" chief, and it is probable that the additional five "sencleithe"-tenants, which he is stated to have, were not in addition to the number of the tenants required for the rank of an aire-forgaill, but are introduced to indicate that his tenants had acquired the position of "sencleithe"-tenants under his family, as a proof of the status of the tanist himself.*

* Page 325.

† Page 327.

‡ Page 329.

7. The king. This rank is sub-divided into three classes:—

A. A king of hills or of horns; the term is not easy of explanation; it, however, is used to designate the position of the head of a fully organized tribe. Naturally no property qualification is annexed to this rank. His honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., were fixed at seven "cumhals"; his proportionate stock was twelve "cumhals," and his food rent six cows. The size of his house is not stated.*

B. A king of companies, the head king of three or four reguli. His honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., were fixed at eight "cumhals," for which amount his "sick maintenance" was to be commuted; his proportionate stock was fifteen "cumhals," and his food rent eight cows.†

C. The head king, whose supreme position is indicated by the passage, "under his control every chief is who cannot be corrected by his lord." His honor-price and the value of his oath, &c., were fixed at fourteen cumhals; as the supreme head he could give, but not receive, cattle, and therefore there is no reference in this case to proportionate stock or food rent.† His residence is described with much particularity as a fortified "dun" fort, but the length of his house does not much exceed that of the higher noble classes, being only thirty feet.

The rank of every freeman determined that of their family and dependents, and entitled them to proportionate compensation. "Half the sick maintenance of a man of every grade is due for his lawful son, and his wife; for it is half which is due for every lawful person, one-fourth for every unlawful one. The wives of mercenary soldiers have sick maintenance in right of their sons and husbands. Stewards and couriers are sustained with half the maintenance of their chief. They arrange that their share in the maintenance corresponds with their sustenance by their chief. Every artizan who makes the manufactures of a chief, or a church, is sustained with half maintenance, according to the rank of each person whose manufacture he makes."*

* Page 329.

† Page 331.

The object of the author in fixing the number seven as the basis of his classification appears in the passage:—"The maintenance of every grade in the church is the same as that of its co-grade in the laity."* He desired to treat the seven grades of the church as correlative to the seven grades of the laity, the ostiarius corresponding to the "mbidboth"-man, and the bishop to the King; or rather, finding the number of grades in the church fixed at seven, he attempts to classify the laity in seven grades, and either omits or interpolates ranks to produce the required result. This fact is conclusive of the extremely unreliable nature of the classification contained in this tract, and the impossibility of treating it as historical evidence of the organization of an Irish tribe at any period.

The analysis of this classification is shown in the annexed table. None of the incidents of any rank are introduced except such as are more or less common to all, and capable of being numerically expressed.

In these tables the names of the classes printed in Italics are those which are rejected upon the ultimate analysis. The introduction of the "aire-echta" to make up the number is manifest in this table. The series of numbers in all the columns seem to have been fixed before he was introduced, and any numerical qualifications attributed to him would have destroyed the regularity of the numerical sequence.

* Page 333.

	Value of Oath, &c., and honor-price.	Rent in kind from Tenants.	Company at Cosherring.	Company in the Tribe.	Proportionate Stock.	Food rent of House.	Size of House.	No. of Tenants or property qualification in Cattle.
a ¹ . Mhidboth,	1. 1 dairt heifer.	—	—	—	4 cows or 5 seds.	1 wether.	—	—
a ² . Do.,	2. 1 colpach heifer,	—	—	—	8 cows or 10 seds.	1 dartaiah heifer.	19 feet,	21 cumhals of land, and 7 cows.
b . Og-aire,	3 seds or 2½ cows.	—	—	—	10 cows.	1 cow, &c.,	20 "	10 cows.
c . Aithech,	4 seds or 5 cows,	—	—	—	12 cows.	1 male col-pach heifer.	27 "	14 cumhals of land and 12 cows.
d . Bo-aire-féhsa,	5 seds, 4½ cows,	—	—	—	2 cumhals.	1 cow,	27 "	21 cumhals of land, 20 cows.
e . Mbrugh-fér,	6 seds, 7½ cows,	—	—	—	4 cumhals.	1 cow and 1 heifer.	27 "	Do., with excess of stock lent out.
f . Fer-fóthla,	8 seds, 7½ cows,	—	—	4	5 cumhals.	1 male col-pach heifer.	30 "	—
g . Aire-coesring,	9 seds, 11½ cows,	—	—	5	6 cumhals.	2 cows,	27 "	10 tenants, 5g. 5s.
A. Aire-desa,	10 seds, 9½ cows,	1 cow, 1 col-pach & 3 dartaiah heifers.	20	6	—	—	—	—
B. Aire-echla,	15 seds, 14½ cows.	2 cows and 8 heifers.	40	7	7 cumhals.	3 cows,	—	20 tenants, 10g. 10s.
C. Aire-ard,	20 seds, 19½ cows.	4 cows and 11 heifers.	60	8	8 cumhals.	4 cows,	29 feet,	27 tenants, 15g. 12s.
D. Aire-tuist,	15 seds, 19½ cows.	5 cows and 14 heifers.	—	9	9 cumhals.	5 cows,	30 "	40 tenants, 20g. 20s.
E. Aire-forgaill,	30 seds, 28½ cows.	—	—	10	10 cumhals.	6 cows,	—	—
F. The Tanist,	7 cumhals,	—	—	12	12 cumhals,	6 cows,	—	—
G ¹ . A King of Horns,	8 cumhals,	—	—	80	15 cumhals,	8 cows,	—	—
G ² . Do. of Companies,	14 cumhals,	—	—	30	—	—	37 feet,	—
G ³ . Head King,	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—

If we turn to the scheme of the ranks of a tribe contained in the next tract, we find the arrangement wholly different. The titles of rank (or of discredit) given here amount to twenty-six. The arrangement is in the inverse order of that in the present tract, commencing with the King and proceeding downwards. The nine last of these classes may be disregarded as representing the unfree class. They are described as not possessing the right to go into the assembly who had no dire fine, and were not worthy to enter into bonds or securities.

There remain therefore seventeen distinct terms, representing, according to the author, so many classes of the free members of the community. Their respective grades are marked solely by the amount of their honor-price, and the number of persons to free feeding they were entitled. A reference to the case of the class No. 9 (the henchman "seirthuid"), and class 21, the "aire-tuisi", will show that the phrase "free feeding" means the supply of food to a certain number of individuals, not a right to pasture so many head of cattle. The sequence of the ranks of the free persons in the tribe, according to the sequel, would be represented as follows:—

Ranks.	Property.	Free-feeding.	Honor-price.
The "Uaitne,"	None, .	2 and a cow, .	5 seds.
The 'second' of a "Bo-aire,"	8 cows, .	3	2
The "Bo-aire,"	10 "	4	3
A "Flaethem" of one vassal,	—	5	4
A half "Flaethem" person,	—	8	5
A full "Flaethem" person,	—	10	10
A "dae" person,	—	—	4 half cumhals.
An "ansruth" person,	—	4	$\frac{1}{3}$ cumhal and a sword.
An "idhna" person,	—	5	3 thirds of a cumhal.
An "aire-fine" Chief,	—	6	7 cumhals to four.
An "aire-desa" Chief,	—	10	1 cumhal to seven.
An "aire-tuisi" Chief,	—	20	$1\frac{1}{2}$ cumhals.
An "aire-ard" Chief,	—	30	$3\frac{1}{2}$ cumhals.
An "aire-forgaill" Chief,	—	30	$3\frac{1}{2}$ cumhals.
A King of the 3rd rank,	—	—	$7\frac{1}{2}$ cumhals.
A King of the 2nd rank,	—	—	14 cumhals.
A King of the 3rd rank,	—	—	5 cumhals of gold and a jewel.

As to the ranks common to both, the following result may be arrived at by a comparison of the tests:—The freeman, without any property, is called in the Crith Gabhlach a “mbidboth,” and in the sequel an “uaitne”-man, these two terms representing the lowest class must be identical.

The “og-aire” of the first list corresponds partly with the ‘second’ of a “bo-aire,” and partly with the “bo-aire” of the second list.

The “aire-desa” is common to both, and it appears from the amount of their honor-price, that the “full flaithem” and the “aire-desa” of the second list are identical.

The titles of the “aire-ard,” “aire-tuisi,” and “aire-forgail,” are common to both lists, but the latter tract treats the “aire-ard” as identical with the “aire-forgaill.” The sequel treats the “aire-ard” (or “aire-forgaill”) and the “aire-tuisi,” as officials simply, and they should, according to this authority, be struck off the list of the classes of society.

The result will be to reduce the number of the actual ranks of society to four:—(1) the “mbidnoth” or “uaitne” man, the freeman without property; (2) the “og-aire,” or bo-aire, the freeman possessing a property qualification; (3) the “aire-desa,” the noble with property qualification; and (4) three grades of Kingship. It is to be remarked that at these points the valuation as to honor-price exactly coincides.

If we refer to the scale of compensation for the death of any person killed, as set out in the Book of Aicill, the result is as follows:—

- | | |
|--|-------------|
| 1. A king, bishop, professor, chief poet, and every archmech person, or best “aire-forgail” chief, | 14 cumhals. |
| 2. A middle or lower “aire-forgaill” chief, or “aire-ard” chief, | 7 do. |
| 3. An “aire-tuisi,” or “aire-desa” chief, | 4 do. |
| 4. A “bo-aire,” or “og-aire” chief, | 3 do. |
| 5. A “fer-midbaidh” person, | 2 do. |
| 6. A “fleseach” person, or “dair”-workman, | 1 do.* |

* Vol. iii., p. 475.

Upon a comparison of these three lists, the following results follow; that the essential distinctions as to ranks were five only, viz. :—(a) the Kings of three orders, and those persons, who, from their official position, were placed in the same category; (b) the nobles, who were sub-divided into four classes :—the “aire-forgaill,” the “aire-ard,” the “aire-tuisci,” and “aire-desa”; and that the best “aire-forgaill” filled an official position, which placed him in the same category as the king; (c) the freeman possessing property, the “bo-aire;” (d) the freeman without property; and (e) the non-free classes.

That a great proportion of the classes introduced into the sequel are purely imaginary is evident upon the face of the tract. As between this tract and the Crith Gabhlach, to which it is supposed to be a sequel, the list in the former appears the more ancient and trustworthy; the author of the sequel, if he had had the Crith Gabhlach before him, never would have abandoned the principle of systemizing the ranks in sevens, nor omitted so many as seven of the grades. He also ignores the precise directions as to the sizes of their respective houses, and the amount of their furniture, which occupy so large a proportion of the Crith Gabhlach, and he does not allude to the amount of proportionate stock and food rent, which in the Crith Gabhlach is stated as an essential mark of rank, upon the assumption that all classes were bound in a feudal tie to some superior. The statement in the Book of Aicill is clear and practical, and is far more valuable as an authority than the later tracts. It naturally follows that we regard the Crith Gabhlach as, to a great extent, an imaginary work, the Utopia of a Brehon Lawyer, and, although containing very numerous fragments of archæic law, not affording any distinct basis of an historical character; and that a description of the condition of the ancient Irish nation, if founded upon a faith in the Crith Gabhlach, as descriptive of an existing order of society, must be considered as merely imaginary.

The concluding portion of this tract discusses the duties, rights, and appropriate mode of life of a king, according to the standard of the period ; of the ideal king, who is described as a man full of lawfulness in all respects, consulted for knowledge, learned and calm.

Although there is difficulty in explaining many of the details, a definite picture is given of the mutual relations of the king and his people, and the mode of life at the date of the work. The duties and rights of the king are conceived as resting upon his representative character ; as the "flaith," as the patron of his retainers or clientèle, or the head of the house on behalf of his family, represents in the assembly or before the judge all those technically "in his hand," so the king stands as the agent of his tribe ; "he swears for them to the king (i.e., to the superior king) on behalf of the territory. He denies (or makes oath) on their behalf ; he proves for them to the extent of seven cumhals. He goes into co-judgment, into co-evidence, with the king for his people."* The relation of the king to the tribe implied reciprocal rights and duties, as that of head of the household to its members :—"They are entitled to righteous judgments. They are entitled to a pledge on their part. They are entitled to sustenance as they sustain."* In three cases the king is authorized to bind the people by his promise made on their behalf ; viz., a pledge for hosting, which means a levy of the armed force for a definite purpose, three of which are stated in the text ; a pledge for right ; and a pledge for international regulations. For three purposes the king was entitled to call the people together ; for a fair, for a meeting for correction, or making a contract, or for the purpose of accompanying himself to the boundary.* The paragraph commencing in page 335 states :—"There are now four rights which a king pledges his people to observe." By this, having reference to the passage which follows, should probably be understood the rights which the king is entitled to exercise as against the people ; the measure and extent of his executive authority. The first right mentioned is the right of "Fenechus"-law, but it is added :—"It is the people who proclaim it. It is the king that proclaims the other three rights, and it is the king that enforces them." The enactment of rules to bind the people rested with the people themselves; the king had no legislative power; he enforced obedience to the law, but could not himself enact one. As the idea of the enactment of a new law, in the correct use of the term, was quite foreign to the state of society with which we are dealing, this perhaps might be more correctly expressed by the statement that the people declared the custom, and made the regulations incident thereto, and that the king carried them out into execution; having reference to the second right attributed to the king, the "Fenechus"-law proclaimed by the people dealt with the division and management of the tribe land, which at the present day is the all-engrossing business of the Swiss Communes.

* Page 333.

The second right of the king is defined as "a right after they have been defeated in battle, and he consolidates his people afterwards so that they are not broken up; and a right after a mortality."* Both of the circumstances under which this right of the king arose, are cases in which the tribe had suffered the loss of many of its members, and the relative proportions of the several households had been materially altered, and for the stability of the tribe, and to ensure cultivation, it would be requisite to redistribute the tribe land among the surviving members. The extreme case of a tribe having been driven out of its original territory, and establishing itself in a new district, would be an instance of the circumstances under which the exercise of this unusual authority on the part of the king would be necessary; so also if, by any casualty, a large proportion of the tribe perished (we frequently read in history of the destruction or banishment of an entire gens), the result must have been, to a greater or less extent, a recasting of a mode in which the tribe land was distributed.

The third right is defined as that of the King of Cashel in Munster, that is, such well-known rights as the King of Cashel, taking him as the leading case, is understood to possess.* Three such are enumerated, the first of which is obvious enough, "the right to help him to drive out foreign races." The right secondly mentioned, "a right for the sowing of seed," is not so simple or easy of explanation. Dr. O'Donovan explained it as a right of the head king, when the under kings were fighting among themselves and neglecting their legitimate business, to compel them to abstain from hostilities, and "to sow their lands." This is a remarkable instance of the habit of attributing the morals and ideas of the nineteenth century to the members of a semi-civilized community, and assuming that they did act as we think that we ourselves ought to have acted if placed in their position. If the over-lords had exercised this right it would have been very fortunate for the general body of the people, and the greater part of the annals would never have been written. The simplest explanation appears to be that the king could enforce the cultivation of the tribe-land in the ordinary course of customary husbandry. The third right is that "of lighting up religion, such as is found in the right (or law) of Adamnan."* The historical celebrity of the "Cain-Adamnan" arose from the rule exempting women from liability to military service; but this rule was only one of the clauses, and the reference here made seems to be to those enacting the performance of specified religious duties.

* Page 335.

* This passage in the original text manifestly refers to the celebrated Psalter of Cashel, supposed to have been written by St. Benean (or Benignus) to appease his relations, justly indignant that he, being a Munsterman, had blessed Connacht, whither he had been sent by St. Patrick to preach Christianity. "Cognati Sancti Benegni, ut populus Eoganiæ Casselensis, Olildiana progenies, et alii Momonienses, audito prædicto ejus facto, non parum offensi et contra virum Dei indignati dicuntur. S. autem Benignus, ut istam offensam aliquo grato delueret obsequio, famosum illud chronicon, quod Psalterium Casselense nuncupatur, inchoavit et composuit; in quo non solum totius Hiberniæ Monarchorum, sed specialiter Mumoniæ, acta, jura, prærogativæ, et successio censcribantur."—Colgan, Trias Thaum. c. 33, p. 205. If we are to assume that the Book of Rights practically represents and contains the substance of the Psalter of Cashel, the "right of a king" refers merely to the amount of food and supplies which he was entitled to receive from his feudatory chiefs. The Book of Rights is singularly devoid of any legal information or value whatsoever. If the author of this treatise was acquainted with the Psalter of Cashel, or the Book of Rights, it is difficult to understand how he has placed the feudal relation of the kings and their chiefs upon the taking of cattle and food rent, and not upon the receipt by the chiefs of the extravagant and fabulous gifts stated in the Book of Rights. The gifts represented in the Book of Rights, as presented by the King of Cashel to his feudatories, are, of course, imaginary; but that a "king of companies" should take from the head king fifteen cumhals of cattle as his proportionate stock, and pay eight cows as the food rent of his house, is equally incredible. It would seem that both authors, each after his own fashion, were desirous of stating the relative positions of the King of Cashel and his under kings. The relation was created by the receipt by the inferior from the superior of some benefit, and a subsequent render of service in consideration of it. The actual transaction may have taken a merely symbolical shape, which the author of the Book of Rights has exaggerated in a poetic (?) form, and the author of this tract described in accordance with the usage prevalent among the lower classes. As there may be some who believe that St. Benean wrote the Psalter of Cashel, I do not rely upon the reference to that work as a conclusive evidence of the date of this tract.

The rank of the king was regarded as official, not personal; if, therefore, he engaged in the labour fit only for a plebeian, he was for the time being reduced to the plebeian grade, and his dire fine assessed accordingly. The four occasions when he thus lost his status were when he used a clod-mallet, or a shovel, or a spade, or when he travelled alone. The reason for this latter rule is remarkable: "This might be the day upon which a woman alone (without witnesses) might swear her child upon a king a day upon which no one could give testimony but herself alone,"* a rule not devised for the protection of the moral character of the king, but to prevent the danger of the introduction into the family of the king of spurious bastards, and to guard against such mischief as was caused by the facility with which Shane O'Niel acknowledged all children attributed to him. In one other case the king lost his status, and was entitled to the "dire"-fine of a non-noble person: when in retreating from battle he was wounded in the back. Upon this point the author remarks, with characteristically trivial accuracy, that the rule did not apply when the weapon had passed through the body and came out at the back.*

The days of week are in this treatise portioned out to the various duties and pleasures of the king.* He abstained from labour on Sunday, but his "occupation" upon this day was drinking ale, and distributing it to others, "he is not a lawful Flaith who does not distribute ale every Sunday." Strange to say there is no allusion to any religious ceremonial, an omission the more remarkable as the author writes under evident ecclesiastical influence. The remaining days of the week were appropriated as follows: Monday to public business ("for causes for the adjustment of the people"), Tuesday to chess, Wednesday to coursing, Thursday to marriage duties, Friday to horse racing, and Saturday to announcing his decisions ("giving judgments"). Such a passage is ample proof how much of the details and arrangements in this treatise are purely fantastic. No one for a moment imagines that a king spent his time in the absurd routine here suggested; yet it is not, in our opinion, more imaginary than the preceding specification of the size of the houses and the amount of the furniture of the respective grades of society. Such a work as the present can be relied upon in its general results only; as to the numerical details we have no means of distinguishing which are imaginary and which are exact.

* Page 335.

The king was responsible, both to his own people and to externs, for illegal or irregular seizures or requisitions; this appears in a negative form from the exceptions to his assumed liability. The three excepted cases are: (1) the requisition levied upon a rebellious and reconquered territory; (2) a requisition upon the members of his own tribe when an extern king was his guest; when there was an unusual demand upon his hospitality; (3) the seizure of dry cattle which have trespassed upon the tribe waste. In the two latter cases the cattle were to be restored, which proves that what the author was treating was not the return of (or payment for) the goods, but the consequences of their illegal seizure.

The duty of hospitality is strongly enforced upon the king; such is the meaning of the paragraph commencing, "There are three fastings which bring no offence to a king."* The fasting alluded to is not the fasting of the king, but the fasting of his guests ; a failure in the duty of hospitality is only excused by the absolute want of the means of providing the necessary food ; what we should express in one general term is here stated in the form of three special exceptions. At the conclusion of the tract, the author describes an Irish king sitting in state at the head of his retainers and court ; and in the passage it is certain that he has omitted no detail which, in his opinion, enhanced the splendor, or testified to the power, wealth, and luxury of a Celtic prince of the period.* At the south end of the house, which must be understood to be a large four-sided hall, are posted the body guards of the king, four in number ; these are not men of his house, or of his tribe, but broken, landless men, whom he had freed from dungeon or gallows, or from servitude of the lowest grade, men without tribe or home, who existed only as the hirelings of their masters ; the man, whose life the king had spared in battle, was not considered as sufficiently in his power, "for he may lay hands upon him and kill him out of devotion to his own chief or people"—such a man could not be trusted, for he had a tribe and home to which he might return. The four guards surround the king—one in front, one in the rear, and one on either side ; to secure the fidelity of these mercenaries, they are watched by another stranger, one of the hostages furnished by the subject tribes, or the under kings ; it is easy to see that if this man was a hostage for the fidelity of his tribe, they in turn were securities for his personal fidelity to the king, to secure which, further, he was allotted land to the large amount of seven cumhals, equivalent to the honor-price and judicial value of an under king ; he is seated by the guards behind to watch their actions. From the king's right hand, along the east wall of the hall, are ranged successively his guests, his poets, his harpers, flute-players, horn-blowers, and jugglers ; opposite the king, at the other end of the hall, sits his champion, who would be described in an Eastern court as "his chief fighting man ;" on the king's left hand, along the western side of the hall, are ranged his wife, his brehon, and his "saer"-tenants, or noble vassals; at the door is stationed a "man of deeds," to keep it; before the champion and the doorward is set up the spear of each "against the confusion of the ale-house;" close to the champion, in chains, stand the "unredeemed hostages," whose appearance in fetters was manifestly an essential portion of the spectacle. Having exhibited the king in fulness of his power and splendour, the author asks: "Which is greater, a king or a bishop? The bishop," he replies, "is higher, because the king stands up (to salute him), by reason of religion. A bishop, however, raises his knee to a king."*

* Page 337.

* Page 339.

The impression produced by the Crith Gabhlach as to the condition of the Irish people at the date of its composition, is very unfavorable. Their houses must have been small and ill-furnished; the length of the house of an "og-aire" is set down as seventeen feet—about the size of the cottage of poorer class of farmers of the present day—and the house of the head king is stated to measure only thirty-seven feet in length; from this we must conclude that the habits and mode of life of the upper and lower classes were very similar; the houses would seem to have consisted each of one room only; the description of a house, as having so many "beds," not rooms, in it, shows that they all slept in one chamber; the houses were wood, or wattle-work, of a very unsubstantial character; the back house so often alluded to was probably a detached kitchen; the furniture described is of the simplest nature, and in insignificant quantity; although some golden and silver articles are mentioned, there is scarcely an allusion to rich dresses, jewels, personal ornaments, or works of art; the ordinary diet seems to have been of the coarsest description; and it is remarkable that there is no allusion to wine throughout; the description of the king's court must be very much exaggerated, or the size of his house under-estimated, for it would be impossible to crowd into a room of thirty-seven feet in length, the number of persons detailed as forming his court and retinue; the want of refinement in manners is marked by the fact of the champion and man of deeds at the palace retaining their spears "against the confusion of the ale-house."

* Page 339.

The old tribal organization continued to be the supposed form of their social system. We read of the king calling his people together for various purposes, and of the people themselves declaring the "Fenechus" law, but the universal system of commendation extending from the low "mbidboth" man to the king of companies (every one of whom received cows from a superior, and paid his food-rent), and the masses of non-free tenants who swelled the retainers of the "flaith," prove that the new system of personal relation was being rapidly substituted for the bond of tribal union; the tribe lands had been monopolized by the noble class; whether by grant or force, fairly or unfairly, is unimportant. The double process is summed in the Latin sentence—"Hæc ferè pascua data sunt depascenda sed in communi; quæ multi per potentiam invaserunt." As a natural consequence, landless men and "fuidhirs" abounded; the general instability is proved by the custom of hostages, and the presence of the foreign retainers who surround the king; and the rules, as to the maintenance of the wife of the mercenary soldier, show that the hired gallowglass, the curse of Ireland, was not unknown.

The Crith Gabhlach may be fairly characterized as the fantastic production of an antiquarian lawyer of a strong ecclesiastical bias, composed at a date at which the tribe system was breaking up, and the condition of the people, both moral and material, had much deteriorated. The work is of the highest value as an antiquarian treatise, rather on account of the general principles which it assumes, and the incidental statements which it contains, than from the accuracy of its classification, or the truth of its minute details; and any deductions founded upon a belief in its historical value must lead to conclusions involving the too common error of substituting an imaginary, for the actual, condition of a people.

XII.

SEQUEL TO THE CRITH GABHLACH.

This tract deals with the same subject as the preceding, and can be advantageously considered in connexion with it. In the original manuscript no special title has been prefixed to the treatise, and for the purpose of the present volume it has been named the sequel to the Crith Gabhlach, implying that the subject dealt with in the preceding tract is further discussed in the present, but not that it was a work by the same author, or composed by another author as an appendix or continuation of the Crith Gabhlach; in the last section of the introduction it has been sufficiently shown that two different schemes for the sub-division of the rank of society are adopted by the respective authors, and that, so far from being complimentary, the latter tract is contradictory to the former.

The legal rights with reference to which the several ranks are classified by this author are specified by him as nine in number. As stated by the author, these appear to have been as follows:—(1) the greatest and least number of attendants brought by them to their cosherings upon their tenants, or accompanying them as their “company in the tribe”; (2) their feeding, probably the amount and nature of the food to be provided for them; and the amount of compensation to be paid to them under the following heads:—(3) for “esain”; (4) for wounding; (5) for insulting; (6) for the violation of their protection; and as (7) their honor-price; (8) also the obscure fines described as “blush”- and blister-fines; (9) and their exemptions before and after refectations.* Although the classification may have been originally made with reference to these several heads, the detailed rights and duties of each class are very imperfectly stated, and all reference to some is wholly omitted. It is remarkable that to a large proportion of the classes specified the alleged grounds of the classification, certainly the greater portion of them are inapplicable, and that there is not any reference made either to their proportionate stock and food rent, or the sizes of their dwellings, matters dealt with in detail by the author of the Crith Gabhlach. The twenty-six classes stated in this tract of the classes of this tract are enumerated downwards, that is, commencing with the head king, and proceeding downward to the lowest grade, but it is perhaps more convenient in considering them to adopt the inverse order, and to proceed from the unfree classes as the natural basis. The nine last classes are intended to comprise the individuals, not members of the tribe, either as originally unfree, or as having lost their original status; they are described as not possessing a holding, or talents, or followers, and therefore not worthy to form part of the assemblies, or companies of refection, nor entitled to "dire" fine, or to enter into securities or give evidence. They are evidently regarded not as servile, but unfree, having no status, and possessing in their own persons no legal rights; it would follow from analogy that their persons could be protected and their property secured to them only by the intervention of some member of the tribe, in whose "hand" they would technically be considered to be.

* By “exemptions” we should understand “privileges” in the full extent of the word; either special rights or special duties, the enjoyment or performance of which distinguished the individual from the general mass of the nation.

When the definitions of these nine classes are considered it appears that they are not arranged with reference to their respective rights, for they are all described as possessing none, but rather with reference to the causes whereby they had lost, or did not possess, any recognised status, and that the nine classes are sub-divisions of one class, distinguished from each other by purely accidental circumstances. The ranks thus enumerated are as follows:—

(a) A "hENCHMAN,* a soldier of a good race"—the nearest to the hip of a leader when going to the meeting, who, with his wife, was entitled to free feeding, and a fine for certain injuries. This is clearly a description of the immediate followers of the King; either of the four personal attendants who surrounded him in his hall,† or of the mercenaries whose wives had sick maintenance in right of their husbands.* The description in the Crith Gabhlach of the class of persons with whom the kings surrounded themselves, proves that they were selected precisely because they were not members of the tribe, and, therefore, bound to the lord by simply personal interests.

* Page 353.

† Page 339.

(b)† The freeman who had "lost his patrimony, his lands, and his stock, and did not possess anything throughout the territory visibly or invisibly." By the loss of all his property the freeman lost also his status. This class must be distinguished from the "mbidboth"-man, the lowest class in the Crith Gabhlach, who, as having cattle lent to him by a lord, and paying food rent for his house, did possess a certain amount of property, however small, and therefore retained his status.

(c) A "cow grazier of a green,"† a term used metaphorically to express the case of the freeman who has lost his status, not from poverty, but by reason of disgraceful cowardice—a man dishonoured, as the Greeks expressed it, by having lost his shield; he is described as keeping his cattle within the green or enclosure near his house, and not daring to drive them out into the common pasture through fear of the wolves.

(d) A "Baitse"† tenant, of whom no description can be given except that contained in the text:—"A man who is not freed by profession or residence; that man does not belong to a company, who has not the deeds of a champion in him. He does not go security, nor is he a pledge with a chief or a church, because it is a sunbeam he is called."

(e) The fifth class is described as "a man matched with a bad wife, by whom he is rendered deranged and unsteady; such a person is defined as an "oinnit."† Extraordinary as are some of the definitions of the Brehon lawyers, it is impossible to believe that the author of this tract seriously intended to express what these words, in their plain and ordinary meaning, state, and not to suspect that an ancient and forgotten rule, either as to the origin or

* Page 331.

† Page 353.

some specific acts of the wife, survives in this apparently absurd description.

(f) A "midhlach"* person, an effeminate, unwarlike man, a coward or an imbecile. As the coward has already been enumerated under the head of the "cow-grazier of a green," this class may more properly include idiots and imbeciles; the added words "so that he is the material of a victim to be given on account of the territory" (if the translation be correct), might mean that he was a very fit person to permit to be killed in expiation of a blood feud. The word "cimbid" admittedly means a man whose life is forfeited, "a victim," and the text appears to refer to his being utilized in this fashion, when it speaks of being or affording the "material for a cimbid."

(g)† A clown, moultbank, or buffoon, not a jester simply, but what we should call an itinerant tumbler, dishonoured because he "went out of his shape before hosts and crowds."

(h) A "rias-caire" man,† "a robber whom his race and family shun, a violater of 'cain' law, and of law, who goes from marsh to marsh, and from mountain to mountain," or as it is also explained, expressive of the latter fate of such an one, "a rath-builder who is enslaved to a chief and a church."

And lastly, (i)† The person described as "a crumb-fox, who gets the crumbs of all food natural and unnatural, whatever he crunches or eats is his;" by which may be meant a starving roguish outcast ready to appropriate and consume the fragments of other's victuals.

These descriptions of the unfree men throw a light upon the meaning and intention of the author's classification; he is not merely stating the legal grades and acknowledged ranks of society, but arranging the men of the society in which he lived, with reference both to their actual rank and supposed respectability, as he expresses it when he says that persons are estimated not only by form and race, land, tillage, and property, but also by their profession and worthiness. It is very natural to speak with contempt of cowards, fools, mountebanks, &c., but no one can contend that these various disreputable characters were acknowledged steps in the social hierarchy, which had its culminating point in the head king.

* Page 353.

† Page 355.

If a writer of our own day undertook to describe the various ranks of English society, and having commenced with the following:—"Tramps, housebreakers, acrobats, idiots, henpecked husbands, cashiered officers, insolvents, &c.," finally concluded with the "bishops, earls, marquises, dukes, the Lord Chancellor, and the Queen," we should understand that he had confused the ideas of legal rank and social respectability in a hopeless manner; and yet any such work, if preserved to a date at which a wholly different form of society had been substituted for that now existing, would be valuable to the antiquarian of the future as illustrative of the gradations of our society; but we may hope that enough of our literature will remain to prevent the occurrence of the mistake that insolvents and acrobats were ranks in society in the same manner as dukes, or that insolvents and housebreakers were permanent castes.

Bearing in mind the fashion after which the classification of the unfree persons has been constructed, let us turn our attention to the seventeen classes into which the free members of the tribe are divided. If we refer to the table in page excvii it will be observed that the ranks not common to both the systems of classification in this tract, and in the Crith-Gabhlach, are marked in italics. On examination, all these will appear to be grades of social respectability—not legal ranks—grades of respectability which gave those who possessed them substantial claims against the members of their families or third persons, or affected their compensation for wrong, but did not elevate them in the assembly above the other freemen, or entitle them to political privileges or grades in society arising from official position or public services.

These classes among the nobles are as follows:—(a)* the "aire-fine" the head of a "fine" (probably, as before suggested, the "geilfine-flaith"), a person of consideration and importance, as representing the members of the "fine," but no more forming a rank in the tribe than the head of a house as representing the several members of the household.

* Page 349.

(b)* The "idhna"-person, who has a number of sons who are born to him, and of male relatives (or brethren) to the number of thirty champions. He is entitled to free living of five from his "fine." The key to the interpretation of this lies in his right to free living from the "fine." He must belong to a "fine," and there must be other households in the "fine," in which he should have his free feeding for four. His qualification was the possession of sons and brothers, warriors—thirty in all. He appears to have been the head of a household (or joint family) within the "fine," so numerous that the household allotment being insufficient to support them, a certain number were supported by the remaining houses of the "fine." A person, the head of a numerous household, would manifestly be one of much power and influence in the early stages of society.

(c.) The "ansruth"*-person is described as one "who protects his mansion and his land. He is allowed (lit. For him is) the wounding a person in each term of the year. He has no fewer than twenty (attendants) in an extern territory. He has free feeding for four on every side, and from every chief in his 'tuaith.' He is entitled to a trusty sword for his honor-price." As the "idhma" was entitled to support from the "family," the "ansruth" was entitled to it from the tribe. His position involves the wounding or slaying of his others, and his absence from the tribe-land with the accompaniment of a strong escort. His peculiar honor-price, the sword, indicated his office. He may be easily identified with the "aire-echta" of the Crith Gabhlach.†

* Page 349.

† The position of the champion or defender of a territory is well illustrated by the following passage of the Tain Bo Chnaille :—

"Cuchulainn then asked his charioteer where the great road which passed Emania led to, and he answered that it led to Ath na Foraire (i.e. the Ford of Watching) at Aliabh Fuaid (a well-known mountain lying at the south of ancient Emania, in the present county of Armagh). 'Why is the ford called the Ford of Watching?' said Cuchulainn. 'Because,' said Ibar, 'there is an Ultoman champion constantly watching and guarding there, in order that no warriors nor foreigners should unperceived enter into Ulster, without being challenged by him to battle; and the champion must answer for any such challenge on the part of the whole province.' 'Do you know who is at the ford to-day?' said Cuchulainn. 'I do, indeed; it is the valiant and victorious Conall Cearnach, the Royal Champion of Erin,' said Ibar. 'Well, then,' said Cuchulainn, 'you drive on until we reach that ford.'—Translated by Mr. O'Curry. "Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish," vol. ii., p. 365.

(d) The "dae"-person* is described as one "who for another goes to fight his battle, when he has no help of his family." The position of this person is determined by his relation with neither the family nor tribe, but with some third person or persons, whose quarrel he has espoused. His position resembles that of a patron with a client, or a chief to whom a poor and oppressed man commends himself. Perhaps the description is intended to apply to the leader of hired gallowglasses, the condottiere of the period, which interpretation is rendered probable by the phrase, "he is entitled to free feeding and that of his soldiers."† A character of this description, undoubtedly, never formed one of the normal ranks of the ancient tribe.

* Page 349.

† He, whose cause the "dae"-person asserted, can scarcely have been a private individual, if any system of tribe law whatsoever existed, nor again can we understand a private individual supplying free feeding to him and his soldiers. The employer of the "dae"-man and his mercenaries must have been at least a tribe chief, and the sentence, "when he has not the help of a family," expresses the independent position towards his tribesmen, which a chief enjoyed who had secured mercenary support. The "dae"-man would thus be the leader of the mercenary guard, or head of the housecarls of a chief. Such bodies of men were called "Lucht Tighe," or Household Troops. The Lucht Tighe of Tadhg O'Kelly, King of Hi Mainé, in Connacht, and of Ferghal O'Ruairc, King of Breefney, were conspicuous at the battle of Clontarf, A.D. 1014. In 1593 Hugh M'Guire, Lord of Fermanagh, marched to battle with the people of his own territory, and a body of "Ankhuis," or mercenary household troops drawn from other territories or countries. The regular organization of these household troops, or bodyguards of the chieftain, appears from the names of divers places; for example, we know that there was anciently a district in Monaghan called Lucht Tighe mhic Mathgamhna, that is, MacMahon's Household, because it was exclusively devoted to the maintenance of the chief's household troops, who thus "were entitled to free feeding on all sides."—O'Curry. "Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish," vol. ii., p. 391-2.

The three classes of the (e) "ogflaithem," (f) "lethflaithem," and (g) "flaithem of one vassal,"* are merely sub-divisions of the poorer "flaiths," with reference to their income, the amount of which naturally depended upon the number of their tenants; but there is no reason to believe that the rights of a flaith were measured in accordance exactly with the number of his tenants. Undoubtedly the "flaith," who had a large number of tenants who swelled the train of his retainers, and paid him food rent, which enabled him to support others, was a much more important person than the "flaith" with few tenants, and that poor broken-down "flaiths" with one, two, or three old tenants were very little, if at all, above, in public consideration, the cow-owning churl, who was rising into the noble class.

It appears from a passage in the last tract published in this volume that the descendant of "flaiths" might fall back, under certain circumstances, probably the want of qualifying wealth, into the non-noble class;† but there are no grounds for considering that the "flaith" below the aire-tuisi were legally divided into ranks in the exact ratio of their fortune. The differences as to this point between this list and that contained in the Crith Gabhlach are very instructive as to the mode in which these detailed enumerations were composed, and the reliance to be placed upon their numerical statements. In both lists the bo-aire takes the highest position among the non-noble classes; and the ranks above that are "flaiths" or noble; the entire body of the "flaiths" below the rank of the "aire-ard" (or that of aire-echta?) are included, according to the scheme of the Crith Gabhlach, in the rank of the "aire-desa"; if the four classes of the "aire-fine," "idhna"-person, "ansruth"-person, and "dae"-person, be struck out of this list as not representing classes properly so called, the three remaining classes of the "ogflaithem," "lethflaithem," and "flaithem" of one vassal remain, who must fall within the class of the "aire-desa," as defined by the Crith Gabhlach; but the qualification of an "aire-desa," as defined in the Crith Gabhlach, was eleven tenants, and he was entitled to feeding for ten couples. It is evident therefore that many of the "aire-desa" class cannot have had the wealth specified in the Crith Gabhlach as the qualification for that rank, and that, despite the diminution of their wealth, they still continued "flaiths," as long, if we rely on the statement in this tract, as they had a single vassal. This is perhaps what is implied in the definition in this tract of the "aire-desa," as "a man who had preserved the patrimony of his father and grandfather in the same condition as he had found it before him, and who accumulates."* The name in this tract of "flaithem" of one tenant may, probably, at the date of this tract have been equivalent to the French term of the last century, which described a very impecunious nobleman, as the seigneur of a duck pond, the smallest conceivable amount of real estate which enabled him to assert his position as a seigneur. The "uaitne" person, as described in this tract, might be supposed to represent an office, and not a class, but it is clear that there must be interposed between the "bo-aire" and the members of the unfree classes, a class representing the freeman without the full property qualification of the "bo-aire," and the amount of the honor-price of the "mbedboth" and the "uaitne" man being identical, there are sufficient grounds for considering the two names as different designations of the same class.

* Page 351.

† Page 381, l. 9.

It is important to submit the schemes of rank contained in these two tracts to close examination, as the apparently anomalous character of the Irish tribe has been chiefly produced by the assumption that the Crith Gabhlach should be admitted as an exact and historical document, and its numerical statements received without reserve as truthful representations of existing facts; so long as this mode of treating the Brehon Law tracts holds its ground, the ancient Irish tribe system must continue to be considered, as it has unfortunately too long been imagined, as an exception and an anomaly, a maze of technicalities incapable of disentanglement.

The tract next proceeds to deal with the ranks of the learned professions, before enumerating those of the church; the mode in which the various ranks in the several scales are considered equal to each other, and a harmony attempted to be established throughout, appears in the following introductory passage:—"The distinctions (or titles) of wisdom (literary professions) now are different from the titles of the laity, because it is a "cunhal" of increase of honor-price, which each grade of the church takes, from the lighter of candles up to the psalm singer. It is by seds, however, the increase of the "fine" grades and poets progress from low to high. Their proof and their denial too correspond; "a bishop and a king, the origin of all chiefs," &c.*

* Page 349.

The classification of both the Ollamhs and poets is plainly merely an exercise of the imagination; the epithets and ranks are founded upon conceits, analogies, and plays of words, and there is no practical information to be gleaned from them. Upon the other hand, the discussion as to the "dire"-fines of ecclesiastics is one of the most interesting passages of the Brehon Law tracts, as illustrating the period between the break up of the Columban system and the institution of a regular episcopal hierarchy. The discussion upon this subject commences with the following extraordinary passage:—

"What is the highest dignity on earth? The dignity of the Church. What is the highest dignity which is in the Church? The dignity of a bishop.

"The highest bishop of these is the Bishop of Peter's Church, because it is under his subjection the chiefs of Rome are; and they are not under the subjection of anyone who has not virginity, or repentance, or lawful espousal; and it is to him that seven cunhals are payable for every degree of the seven degrees (or orders) that are upon him, if there be eric-fine for him at all; if not 'eric'-fine, there is to be the death of a person for it.

"Where is this to be found? It is in the tract which Augustine wrote about the degrees of the Church, and of their dire fines; and of their non-feedings, and the particular law of the church of Peter, and the emperor of the whole world."

* Page 355.

The scheme upon which the cleric are arranged is a double gradation partly connected with the orders in the church, and partly in connexion with the religious condition of the individual. It is needless to observe that the moral and religious merit of the individual is referable solely to the one virtue of continence; but it is certainly surprising that the author arranges all classes of the church, inclusive of the recluses into the three classes of virgins, married, and repentant. Every fine must, therefore, be the result of three quantities:—the official position, the moral state of the injured cleric, and the nature of the injury inflicted. It is impossible to construct in a tabular form the amount of compensation payable in each case, as the results stated in the text do not all coincide with the theory on which they are professed to be calculated. The general principle, however, is clear, viz.:—that the full amount calculated upon the rank of the injured cleric, and the nature of the injury, is payable in the case only of the cleric being a virgin; this amount is reduced by one-third if the cleric be married, and again by another third if he be penitent;† and that between

* P. 363. Can the author of this passage have heard of the "De Civitati Dei," and conceived it to be a work of the character of the Crith Gabhlach?

† The penitence of the bishop may be referable to unchastity, either before or after his consecration. That charges of this description might be brought against a bishop, however eminent, appears from the Confession of St. Patrick: "Post annos triginta invenerunt me, et adversum verbum quod confessus fucram antequam essem diaconus. Propter anxietatem mesto animo insinuavi amicissimo meo que in pueritiâ meâ unâ die gesseram in uno in unâ horâ; quia nondum prevalebam nescio, deus seit; et habebam tunc annis quindecim et deum vivum non credebam, neque ex infantiâ meâ sed in morte et incredulitate mansi donec valde castigatus sum, et in veritate humiliatus sum a fame et nuditate et cotidie contra hiberione non sponte pergebam, &c.—"National MSS. of Ireland," Vol. II., Ap. III. r.

The Brehon lawyers evidently contemplated the case of a bishop falling into sin: "There are four dignitaries of a territory who may be degraded: a false-judging king, a stumbling bishop, a fraudulent poet, an unworthy chieftain who does not fulfil his duties. Dire-fine is not due to these" (ante, Vol. I., p. 55). See also the gloss upon this passage, the meaning of which is clear, although the translation is questionable. It may be inferred that the sinful and unrepentant bishop suffered a "diminutio capitis," as did the king when engaged in servile occupations.

the payments on account of injuries to clerics of various ranks, there is to be made a deduction of one cumhal for each grade in the ecclesiastical orders. It is very doubtful if the seven grades referred to in the text are the same as the usual ecclesiastical orders, as the clerical student and the recluse would seem to be included in the computation. The author appears to have considered that, in some cases of exceptional iniquity, the process of compensation by eric-fines was insufficient.

"What is the penalty (lit. debt) of wounding a virgin bishop? Three victims (eunidh) are to be hanged for every hand that wounded him; half the debt of wounding is paid for insulting him." "As to every person who sees, and who does not protect him by all his strength, by all his deeds, and that the guilty person escapes, it is seven cumhals that are to be paid for his sick maintenance and his eric fine."* Again—"So it is with every grade of virginity until it comes to the case of a virgin cleric, so that there are seven 'cumhals' for wounding him, or a victim."†

These passages prove that the author not only imagined that an aggravated injury of this class would entail the punishment of the guilty parties, but would also require "blood" expiation. These passages explain the expressions used in reference to the "midhlach" person in this treatise, viz., that he would naturally afford the material for a victim. Such a mode of punishing or avenging crime is inconsistent with the whole tenor of the Brehon law, and perhaps indicates that the author was a cleric, or of clerical sympathies, who enunciated principles for the benefit of the church which never formed portion of the customary law.‡

* Page 363.

† Page 365.

‡ The doctrine of the early Irish Church of the necessity of blood-shedding as an expiation for blood is fully set out in the poem of Dubhtach Mac ua Lugair, supposed to have been recited in the presence of St. Patrick, and under the immediate inspiration of the Holy Ghost:

"The truth of the Lord,
The testimony of the New Law,
Warrant that Nuada shall die; I decree it.
Divine knowledge, it is known, decides (To which veneration is due),

The following passage is remarkable as a proof of the religious ideas which existed at the date of the composition of this treatise:—

“There are three kinds of recluses in a church, i.e., a lay recluse, upon whom a soul-friend pronounces his character of approval, and who goes to the sacrament, who is in the true unity of the church, without power of foot or hand. It is as a grade of virginity he is paid *fin*es. He is of equal ‘dire’-value with a virgin clerical student; so that there are seven cumhals for wounding, and he is of equal ‘dire’-fine with him in every dignity besides, and shedding of blood, and white blow.

“A lay recluse upon he pronounces his character, who does not go to the sacrament, it is but two-thirds he reaches to the first lay recluse.

That each man for his crime Shall depart unto death.”——

“There was in the First Law of the men of Erin That which God has not vouchsafed in His New Law.
The Trinity did not vouchsafe mercy,
Through heavenly strength to save Adam,
For it was perpetual existence
God gave him of His mercy,
Until otherwise he merited
By deserving death.
Let every one who kills a human being;
Even the king who seeks a wreath with his hosts,
Who inflicts red wounds intentionally,
Of which any person dies;
Every powerless insignificant person,
Or noblest of the learned;
Yea, every living person who inflicts death,
Whose misdeeds are judged, shall suffer death.
He who lets a criminal escape is himself a culprit;
He shall suffer the death of a criminal.
In the judgment of the law, which I, as a poet, have received,
It is evil to kill by a foul deed;
I pronounce the judgment of death,
Of death for his crime to every one who kills.
Nuada is adjudged to Heaven,
And it is not to death he is adjudged.”

‘It was thus that the two laws were fulfilled; the culprit was put to death for his crime, and his soul was pardoned and sent to heaven. What was agreed upon by the men of Erin was, that every one should be given up for his crime, that sin might not otherwise increase in the island.’ Ante, Vol. III., pp. 11–13 & xx–xxiv.

"Another lay recluse is he who puts bounds to his passions, and who goes to the clergy this day, upon whom a soul-friend does not pronounce his character, or recommendation. To the extent of two-thirds he reaches unto the middle lay recluse."

"A person should not wonder that there should be an equal "dire"-fine for the lay recluses who are without virginity, if they be beloved of God, and their works great, if their miracles are as numerous, or if they are more numerous in the same way that Peter and Paul were to John, and in the same way that Anthony and Martin were; ut dixit Scriptura, "ubi habundabit dilectum, super habundabit gratia."*

The author manifestly regards St. Peter as having been a married man, and, with reference to Paul, puts a well-known construction upon the twelfth verse of the ninth chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

The peculiar views put forward in this tract as to the position and duties of the clerics are remarkable, and are of importance in fixing an approximate date for the composition of this tract. The bishop, not the abbot, is the highest known ecclesiastic, indeed of the abbot there is no mention whatsoever; the marriage of the clerics is assumed as permissible, although discountenanced, inasmuch as the married cleric thereby to a certain extent lost caste, as proved by the proportionate diminution of his "dire"-fine; the recluse is treated as an acknowledged order in the Church, and he is intimately connected, for the purpose of the amount of his "dire"-fine, with his soul-friend ("anmchara"); the Pope was recognized as the highest bishop of the Church, and as ruling over Rome; and in the reference to the imaginary work of St. Augustine, there is an allusion to "the emperor of the whole world." These indications point to the transitional and obscure state of the Celtic Church after the breaking up of the Columban monastic system, and before its complete reorganization under continental influence, to the latest period of the existence of the Culdees, a remarkable era in Celtic ecclesiastical history, which has been lately fully dealt with, so far as the scanty existing materials permit, by Mr. Skene.* The allusion to "the emperor of the whole world" may help in some degree in fixing the date of the work. A Celtic pilgrim returning from Rome would state the impressions which the existing state of facts produced upon him; he certainly would not be influenced by the legal theories of the civil lawyers; the abstract idea of the all-ruling emperor would not occur to him unless the power of an existing emperor were brought home to his mind by what he saw with his eyes and heard with his ears among the public of the city. A pilgrim to Rome during the interval between the disappearance of the influence of the Eastern emperors and the date at which the Culdees finally ceased to exist, could have his attention drawn to the imperial power, as a universal dominion, only at two distinct periods—either during the reigns of Karl the Great and his son Ludwig, that is, between A.D. 800 and A.D. 840, or after the resuscitation of the imperial power by the Emperor Otto in A.D. 951. The expression of the Bishop of Peter's Church "having under his subjection the chiefs of Rome" (unless this be merely a Celtic phrase expressing sovereignty), would exactly describe the position of the Popes after the later date. This would point to the end of the tenth or beginning of the eleventh century as the probable date of the composition of this tract.

From these, and the various remarkable points of difference between this tract and the Crith Gabhlach, already alluded to, it may be inferred that the present treatise is the more ancient of the two, and represents an older condition of Irish society. A considerable portion of it, so much as deals with ollamhs and poets, is purely fantastic, full of the false discussions and quibbling classification so much in vogue with Brehon lawyers, and valueless except as a monument of misspent time and ingenuity; another portion, so much as deals with the clerics, although most valuable from an historical point of view, cannot be considered as a practical statement of existing law, but rather as a covert attempt to introduce legal innovations in favour of the Church; the residue, which treats of the classes of the tribe, is most valuable in every respect, although in dealing with it, and discussing the principle of the scheme upon which the ranks of the tribe are classified, it cannot be forgotten that it was written by the author of, or at least has been combined into one production with, the two latter divisions of the work.

* "Celtic Scotland," vol. 2, chap. vi. and ix.

XIII.

SUCCESSION.

The last tract contained in the present has no heading or title in the original; it has been named, for the purpose of reference, as a treatise on "Succession," inasmuch as that is the subject which the author proposed to discuss. This work is of the fragmentary character, being nothing more than a collection of unconnected extracts or references, thrown together in a note-book as the materials for an intended work.

To this tract there is prefixed the following extraordinary head-note:—"By this book, if I can, in the name of God, I will bring the senior before the junior in every case, as these laws down here state. Beyond this I will make an intermixture of their law altogether."*

The object of the work was not to state what were the customary law upon the subject dealt with, but to collect authorities in support of an argument in favour of succession by descent and seniority, and, it may be gathered, in opposition to the rules regulating it by personal merit, property qualifications, or election. The author must, for the purpose of extract and reference, have had before him a considerable number of works, which it would be now difficult to ascertain or identify. As to the passage near the commencement of the tract, concerning the succession of an abbot,* it appears that the authority referred to is the concluding paragraphs of the Senchus Mor with the present annexed commentary.†

Although from its form, and the obvious intention of its composition, this work is unsatisfactory and of no authority, many of the extracts contained in it are both interesting and important. Many of them support the doctrine that the grade of an individual in the tribe was originally fixed with reference to property, and that the loss of the qualifying amount of property involved a diminutio capitis; e.g., "Qualification is nobler than age."*

* Page 375.

† Vol. 3, page 79.

"The senior does not go before the junior, unless he be wealthier."*

"'A king without property is no king,' i.e., as to tenants and kine."†

"'No unproductive person merits a share with the Feini,' i.e., the person who is barren, without property, without worthiness, does not merit a noble share of 'smacht'-fines or sick attendance, according to the 'Fenechus'-law."‡

"'Let no wandering men pass judgment,' i.e., there shall be no honor-price for the person who is wandering about without property."‡

"The inferior man with property is put into the land, or the chieftainship."

Other extracts accord more permanency to the status of a noble when once established. The "aire-forgaill" chief deserves a chieftainship or an abbey," even though he had but his arms or his raiment, he shall have the honor-price of a king, or of an "aire-forgaill chief"; to which statement the author prefixes the remark—"I wonder at this," and possibly considered it bad law.§ Other extracts prove that among the Celts, as elsewhere, the claim to the hereditary transmission of property and office was gradually assuming legal form:—

"The son of an abbot in the present church,

"A fact established by sense,

"The son of the husbandman in the territory,

"The son of the king to bind the hostages."§

This is obviously a verse of some composition intended to favour the hereditary succession to the coarbships of the

* Page 377.

† Page 381.

‡ Page 387.

§ Page 388.

greater monasteries, and even to inferior but profitable offices.*

* "In the monastery of Lnsk, in the list of the abbots, between the years 731 and 927, we find that the second and third abbots were brothers, and sons of the first abbot named in it; that the fourth abbot and the prior were brothers; that the son of the second abbot was 'economus,' or house-steward; that the fifth abbot was son of the third; that the eighth abbot was son of the sixth; and that the tenth abbot and the Bishop of Duleek and Lusk were brothers, and sons of the eighth abbot. Again, in the monastery of Gleann Uiscean, near Carlow, we find, between 874 and 1016, the names of eight abbots and one Aircinnech, or Erenagh. Of these, the second and third are brothers, and sons of the first; the fourth and fifth are brothers, and sons of the third; the sixth was foster-son to the second, while his son was Aircinnech, or Erenagh; the seventh abbot was son of the fourth, and the eighth grandson of the second. Here the whole are direct descendants of the abbot who died in 874. Thus we find that the office of 'economus,' or house-steward of Armagh, was hereditary from 779, when the death of Cearnach, son of Suibhne, who was bishop of Armagh, is recorded, when he is called economus of Armagh. He is succeeded by three sons, one after the other. His grandson, by the third son, is bishop and anchorite of Lann Leire. The son of the latter is abbot of Lann Leire, and 'economus' of Armagh, whose son again is abbot of Lann Leire. But, perhaps, the most instructive example is connected with the celebrated monastery of Clonmacnois. Torbach, abbot or primate of Armagh in 812, was the son of one abbot of Louth, and the father of another abbot of the same place, and from him descended a family who filled many offices connected with Clonmacnois, and among them we find that even anchorites married, and were succeeded by sons. The family were called the Cinel Torbaegh. Their connexion with Clonmacnois began with his son Aedhagan, who died on his pilgrimage at Clonmacnois in 834; and his son Eoghan, the anchorite, who died in 845. Eoghan's son, Luchairen, scribe and anchorite at Clonmacnois, died in 863; and in 893 his son, Egertach, the Aircinnech, or Erenach of Eaglais-Beg, or the little church of Clonmacnois, died. In 947, the son of the latter, Aenagan Erenach, of the little church, and bishop and pure virgin—that is, unmarried—died; and in 953 his brother, Dunadhach, bishop of Clonmacnois, whose son, Dunchadh, Ferleighbinn, or lector of Clonmacnois, and its anchorite, afterwards head of its rule and history, died in 1005. He was father of Joseph, who was anmchara, soul-friend or confessor of Clonmacnois. Joseph's son was Conn na-mbocht, or of the poor, who appears in the "Annals of the Four Masters," in 1031, as "Head of the Cele De, and anchorite of Clonmacnois, and who invited a party of the poor of Cluain at Isael Chiaran, and who presented twenty cows of his own to it. And Conn was father of Maolchiarain, Coarb of Ciaran, or abbot of Clonmacnois. It is unnecessary to follow this further; but it is obvious how prevalent at this time in Ireland was the marriage of the clergy of all classes, and the perpetuation of their ecclesiastical offices in the lines of their descendants, and that it had even broken down the asceticism of the anchorite, and the canonical rule of the Cele De in this respect. In Scotland we find that the territory of the old monasteries was called Abdaine, or Abbaey, a word represented in Latin by Abbatia or Abthania, and had, to a great extent, passed into the hands of laymen, who often retained for several

The most important extracts here contained have reference to the rule of three descents, before referred to, which determined the status of an individual with reference to that of his father and grandfather, viz. :—

“He is a disease of evils after three persons.”*

“He is a hill of chieftainship in the third person.”*

“For it gives a prescription of acknowledgment; three heirs have succeeded one another.”*

generations the name of abbot. The territory termed the Abthania of Dull, which was of great extent, and included the modern parishes of Dull and Fortingall, seems to have been in the hands of Crinan, the lay abbot of Dunkeld, and, along with the possessions of the latter abbacy, must have placed him on a par as to power and position with the great Mormaers of Alban.”—Skene: Celtic Scotland, Vol. II., p. 341.

The causes and the results of the marriage of clerics in Ireland and Scotland is thus stated by Mr. Skene:—

“In the early Monastic Church of Ireland celibacy was enforced upon at least one class of the monks, for the saints of the second order refused the services of women, separating them from the monasteries; but still there was a succession to the abbacy, the tribe or family in whom it was vested providing a fit person in Orders to fill the office; but when the stringency of the monastic rule was broken in upon, under the influence of the secular clergy, marriage was gradually permitted and connived at, and at length became general, the rebound toward a secular state being great in proportion to the enforced strictness of the previous system. The natural consequence was that a direct descent from the ecclesiastical persons themselves came in place of the older system of succession, and the Church offices became hereditary in their family. The next step in the downward process was that the Abbots and Superiors did not take Orders, and became virtually laymen, providing a fit person to perform the ecclesiastical functions, but retaining the name, and all the secular privileges and emoluments of the abbacy. The performance of the Church service was either intrusted to a secular priest, who was called the ‘sacerdos,’ or sagart, or it fell to the Cele De, when there was such a body connected with the monastery, or to both combined. The great ecclesiastical offices thus became hereditary in the persons of laymen in two ways—either by the usurpation of the benefice by the lay chieftains from whose family it had been supplied, or in the family of the abbot by whose direct descendants the office was filled. It must be borne in mind that prior to 1139, though celibacy was enforced upon the monks by the monastic rule, and upon the clergy generally as a matter of discipline, marriage, when it did take place, was not unlawful. It was not until the second great Council of Lateran, held in that year, declared all such marriages ipso facto null and void that they became so; and the effect of this, where the benefice had become hereditary in a particular family, was, instead of restoring the former clerical character of its possessor, to stereotype their condition of laymen, and to convert them into a purely lay family.”—“Celtic Scotland,” vol. ii., p. 338.

* Page 379.

"They were once noble, i.e., unless his father and grandfather were chiefs, though he may be of the same race; as to his origin, his chieftainship is lost to him."*

"'In which it is stated, that a chieftainship is lost,' i.e., during the ages of three persons."*

"'A plebeian chief,' i.e., one of plebeian race, whose father or grandfather was not a chief."*

"Question.—What is the 'ansruth'-poet? His father and his grandfather were 'ansruth'-poets; for every grade whatsoever, whether chief or poet, if he parts with his qualifications during the ages of three persons, his lot is not equal to those who are found in possession of their qualifications during the ages of three persons, until they double their qualification or their service."†

These extracts clearly prove the rule before referred to, that the possession of the necessary property, through three generations, was requisite to give the complete status of the rank to which the qualification was annexed; and that, taking a negative form, the rule was applied to the case of those who lost the qualifying property necessary for their rank, and that the third in descent in such a case lost his status absolutely, and fell into a lower grade.

But if a person acquired double the amount necessary to qualify him for a higher grade, he became a fully recognised member of that grade irrespective of descent. This explains the rule in page 317, which fixes the amount of stock requisite in the case of a "bo-aire," adjoining the rank of an "aire-desa," as double the qualification of the latter rank. The amount specified in this passage was that requisite to make the "bo-aire" a complete "aire-desa," and it may be inferred that if he acquired the amount of an "aire-desa's" qualification, he became an "aire-desa" sub modo. And in the same way if an "aire-desa" lost his qualification, the status of that rank was not absolutely lost until after the death of himself and his son, when his grandson absolutely passed into the lower grade. This partial acquisition of status in the first generation, and its completion in the third generation constantly appears in ancient laws. Thus among the Scandinavians there were the three gradations of the Frigiven man, his son, and his grandson, the Bondr.* In the Sachsen Spiegel, the rule is thus expressly laid down:—“Si qui in quatuor suis generationibus, hoc est ex duobus avis et duobus aviis, ac patre et matre indiffamati juris est, illum in jure nemo infamare potest.” The same principle is marked in Roman law by the specific names for each step in the progression toward complete citizenship, viz. :—Libertus, Libertinus, and Liber; and explains the passage in the speech of Appius Claudius Crassus, contrasting the full patrician with the ordinary Quirite:—“An hoc, si Claudiae familiae non sim nec ex patricio sanguine ortus sed unus Quiritium quilibet, qui modo me duobus ingenuus ortum et vivere in libera civitate sciam, reticere possim.”†

* Page 387.

† Page 383.

The first phrase quoted from this tract is remarkably expressive, “He is a disease of evils after three persons,” meaning that when the father and the grandfather have been evil, the fulness of the sins are developed in the grandson; this is precisely the expression of Demosthenes, πονηρός ἐκ τριγονίας,‡ and gives the full point to the line in Sophocles:—

*θάρσει. σὺ μὲν γὰρ οὐδ' εἰς τρίτης ἐγὼ
μητρὸς φανῶ τρίδουλος, ἐκφανεῖ κακίη.*§

To acquire the full rights of an “aire-des-a,” the “bo-aire” must have qualified himself by the possession of land held by his tenants, although he could acquire a qualified nobility founded upon the possession of cattle simply.

“The law styles that person a plebeian chief (a flaith-aithech) who desires to obtain a chieftainship in right of any other property, except in right of (other than) tenants; and by tenants is flesh meat supplied to the chief;” and again “that these kings are not entitled to anything in right of their property, i.e., their cattle.”||

* Robertson: “Scotland under her Early Kings,” Vol ii., p. 322.

† Livy: Lib. vi., c. 40.

‡ Dem. 1327. 3.

§ O. T. 1062. For the references the Editor is indebted to Mr. Hearn's work, “The Aryan Household.”

|| Page 388.

The qualification, therefore, of the chief, as founded upon the possession of land, had no reference, apparently, to the value of the land, or what would be now called his annual income, but was based upon the number of tenants upon his land, and the amount of their food rents; that is the number of his retainers made up of his tenants and the other followers, whom the food rents of his tenants enabled him to maintain.

The right of acquiring rank in the tribe founded upon the acquisition of property must, of course, be understood as applicable only to free members of the tribe themselves; as in all early communities the freedom of the tribe and the right to acquire or enjoy a portion of the tribe lands may be taken to have been practically identical.

The several tracts contained in the present volume have been collected from the following sources:—

(A.)

οἰν τεκτονισμοῦ ; or, Of taking Lawful Possession of Land. Translated by Dr. O'Donovan. Vol. I., pp. 91–123, of his official translation, and extracted by him from T.C.D., E 3, 5, and H 3, 17.

(B.)

βρεαθὰ κομαθκερὰ ἀνθρώπου ; or, the Judgments of Co-tenancy. This tract is described by Dr. O'Donovan as “Judgments of Co-tenancy,” and was translated by him. Vol. I., pp. 1–90, of his official translation, and extracted by him from Rawlinson, 487, and T.C.D., E 3, 5, and H 3, 18.

(C.)

βεχ βρεθὰ ; or, Bee Laws. Translated by Dr. O'Donovan. Vol. I., pp. 346–382, of his official translation, and extracted by him from H 2, 15, T.C.D.

(D.)

κοῖνῆς ὕδατος ; or, Right of Water. This tract is described by Dr. O'Donovan as “Of Water Mills, Mill Races,” &c., and was translated by him. Vol. I., pp. 383–399, of his official translation, and was extracted by him from H 2, 15, T.C.D.

(E.)

μαῖγνη ; or, Precincts. Described by Dr. O'Donovan as “Of the inviolable space which surrounded every man's residence, according to his rank or dignity," &c., and translated by him. Vol. VII., pp. 2777-2786 of his official translation, and extracted from Egerton, 88, 54, a.a.

(F.)

το βρεῖτεσινυρ, &c. ; or, "Of the Judgment of every crime," &c. Translated by Mr. O'Curry. Vol. VI., pp. 902-904, of his official translation, and extracted from H 3, 17, T.C.D.

(G.)

τέο αν ρεαρανν α κνταῖβ ; or, "The Land is forfeited for crimes." This was translated by Dr. O'Donovan. Vol. V., pp. 2320-2369, of his official translation, and extracted from Egerton, 88, 22, b.a.

(H.)

ρολα κνε ; or, "The Divisions of Land." This was translated by Dr. O'Donovan. Vol. IV., pp. 1251 to 1253, of his official translation, and was extracted by him from H 3, 18, T.C.D.

(I.)

νε ρολαῖβ κνεαῖ τιαῖτι ; or, Of the Divisions of the Tribe of a territory. This was translated by Dr. O'Donovan. Vol. I., pp. 268 to 277, of his official translation, and extracted by him from H 2, 15, T.C.D.

(J.)

κνιθ γαβλαῖ. The Crith Gabhlach. This was translated by Mr. O'Curry ; his first translation appears in Vol. I., pp. 1-76, of his official translation ; his revised translation is paged as pp. 2340-2400, and the text was extracted by him from H 3, 18, 252, T.C.D.

(K.)

The sequel to the Crith Gabhlach, described by Mr. O'Donovan as an unnamed tract of the different ranks of society and privileges translated by him. Vol. IV., pp. 1300 to 1314, and extracted by him from H 3, 18, T.C.D.

(L.)

An unnamed tract, entitled by the editors, "Succession." Described by Dr. O'Donovan as a Tract on the law of Succession, or paths of Judgment. Translated by him. Vol. V., pp. 2199-2220, of his official translation, and extracted by him from Egerton, 88.

SYNOPSIS OF INTRODUCTION.

I. The present volume of tracts selected as illustrating the land laws of the early Irish, and the constitution of the Celtic family and tribe, p. i. Whatever abstract legal propositions the Brehons possessed to be found in the tracts. First inquiry, whether there is an authentic archaic text, p. viii. Composition of original Brehon text, p. x. Principle on which a translation ought to be based, p. xi. Method adopted by editors in dealing with the text, p. xii.

II. ON TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.—A consecutive treatise dealing with the symbolic ceremonial by which an action for recovery of land was instituted, p. xiii. ; exhibits the mode in which the judicial authority of the Brehon arose, and the series of legal fictions necessary to bring a defendant into court. The authority of the Brehon the same as that of the judges in other Aryan tribes. The Brehon system an instance of archaic survival. The Celtic Irish never formed town communities, p. xiv. All judicial authority derived from a system of voluntary submission to arbitration. The origin and theory of judicial authority in primitive communities reconsidered. "Custom" defined as the acquired habits of any human community, p. xv. Jurisdiction of judges gradually established by a series of fictions. Quarrels begin to be submitted to arbitration of tribe, p. xvii. Method of bringing suit into court, p. xviii.

The case of the Romans considered, judicial customs of the Quirites described and compared, p. xx. The Roman procedure, symbol its characteristic, manuum consertio. The peculiar analogy to the Brehon procedure for recovery of land, which is identical with the Roman form up to a certain point, but modified to suit different cases, pp. xxi-xxiii.

The case of Ninne, the son of Matech, considered. The Brehon procedure for recovery of land described, p. xxiv.

First step towards the establishment of original judicial power was the publication of antique formulæ, p. xxviii. Inconsistency between the text and commentary as to the form pursued by a female claimant. The leading case of the woman Ciannacht. Seven exceptions to the ceremonial of laying claim to land, p. xxix. Highly improbable that the ancient ceremonial was exclusively applicable to lands let on rents, p. xxxi. The procedure further described. The system of counter-claim, p. xxxii. Amount of fine paid by unsuccessful claimant. Discussion of the term "coibhue," and the various classes of tribe lands, p. xxxiii. Definition of "raitech" persons divided into three classes, p. xxxvi. Horses used at first exclusively in the symbolical entry, cows afterward substituted from necessity. Forms of procedure ended with reference of dispute to arbitration, p. xxxvii. Allusion to the mode in which a dispute is decided in an Indian village community. Mr. Wallace's description of a meeting of a Russian Mir to assess taxation, and divide village lands referred to, p. xxxviii. Judicial development among the Irelandic Norse. The procedure detailed in two trials before the Althings, related in the Sagu Burnt Njal, p. xxxix. The foundation of the jurisdiction, the position and functions of the Celtic Brehon clearly stated, p. xl. An attempt to express in distinct terms the substance of two fragments of ancient dicta, pp. xli-iii. The case of Seither illustrative of the nature and the date of the Brehon law, p. xliv.

Passages indicative of the modern and equitable mode of viewing the essence of the transfer of property, p. xlv. Assertion of the doctrine of purchase for valuable consideration without notice. Passages laying down the ancient theory of society, p. xlvii. Explanation of the term "ternal covenants," p. xlviii.

III. THE "FINE" AND THE "GEILFINE" SYSTEM.—No distinct explanation of the system anywhere given in these tracts, p. xlix. A remarkable passage in a preceding volume reprinted, explanatory of the mode in which property was divisible among the members of a family, pp. l-liii. Three distinct theories published as to the origin and working of the Geilfine system since date of the last volume of Brehon Law Tracts, viz., those of Sir H. S. Maine, Dr. W. K. Sullivan, Mr. J. F. McLennan. The views of Sir H. Maine stated and explained, p. liv. Dr. W. K. Sullivan's theory quoted; adoption of it by Mr. W. E. Hearn. Welsh rule of inheritance cited, p. lviii. Mr. McLennan's theory stated, pp. lix-lxiv. Importance of the tract entitled "Of the Divisions of the Tribe of a Territory," p. lxvi. Deductions from the tract entitled "The Land is Forfeited for Crime," p. lxix. Welsh rules of inheritance, pp. lxxv-vi. Description of the "Geilfine" system, pp. lxxx-lxxxviii. The rules of succession laid down in the Book of Aicill considered, p. lxxxix. Conclusions arrived at, p. xciii.

IV. ON THE INCIDENCE OF FINES AND COMPENSATION FOR CRIMES.—The tract "Of the Judgment of every Crime which any Criminal Commits" considered, pp. xciv-ci. The tract "The Land Forfeited for Crime" considered, pp. ci-ciii.

V. THE SUCCESSION TO LAND, p. ciii. Description of the first land system, p. civ. The origin of succession appears to be co-ownership, p. cv. Illustration of the rules of succession, p. cvi. Distinctions between various classes of tribe lands explained, p. cvii. Three cases of liability and heirship stated, p. cviii. Liability to pay fines, and the custom of compensation explained, pp. cix-cx. The question of the nature of the interest taken by the sons in the lands of a deceased discussed, cxi-cxii. Hereditary succession and rules of descent, pp. cxii-cxv. Female succession, pp. cxvi-cxvii.

VI. JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY, p. cxix. The partition of lands, p. cxx. Fencing, p. cxxi. Trespass by cattle and damages, pp. cxxiii-cxxviii. Trespass by bees, hens, dogs, p. cxxix. Man trespass, p. cxxx. Existence of tenants in the modern sense of the term, p. cxxxviii. Rules laid down on the relation of landlord and tenant, pp. cxxxiii-cxxxviii. Several and individual ownership of land perfectly familiar to Irish lawyers, p. cxxxix. Value of this tract, p. cxl.

VII. BEE JUDGMENTS, p. cxli. The legend relative to introduction of bees into Ireland given, p. cxli. This tract valuable as illustrating modes of thought and logical abilities of Irish lawyers, p. cxliii. Possession of bees considered, p. cxliv. English and Roman law thereon, p. cxlv. The Brehon law of bees, pp. cxlvi-cli. Commentary thereon, p. clii. Welsh law, p. cliii. Norman law, p. cliv.

VIII. RIGHT OF WATER, p. clvi. Tracts of the right to construct watercourses and mills. Compensation, when payable, p. clvii. The question of ownership, p. clviii. Mr. O'Donovan's opinion, p. clix. Ditches divided into two classes, p. clxii. The reason why Brehon law is difficult and obscure, p. clxiii. Water mills, when first introduced into Ireland, p. clxiv.

IX. PRECINCTS, the extent of each determined by a national convention held at SLIATH FUAIDH, p. clxv. Damages for violation, p. clxvi. Protection must be legal, p. clxvii. Amount of damages, and number of fugitives allowed, p. clxviii. Mr. Hearn's description of the original position of the fugitive, p. clxix.

X. DIVISIONS OF LANDS, the tract an attempt to fix arithmetically the value of a cumhal of land, p. clxx. In ancient Ireland no currency or standard of value, p. clxxi. The difficulty of expressing the value of land obvious, p. clxxii. How attempted to be solved, p. clxxiii.

XI. CRITH GABHLACH, the date of its composition attributed by Dr. Sullivan to the seventh century, p. clxxiv; by the editors to the eighth century, p. clxxv. The early relations of Irish and Saxons discussed by Dr Sullivan, p. clxxvi.

Change in the organization of the Irish Church, p. clxxviii. Opinion of Mr. O'Curry on the then condition of society, p. clxxix. This tract a compendium of the rights and emoluments of the higher classes, p. clxxx. The proper grade determined by amount of property, p. clxxxi. List of classes, p. clxxxii. Analysis of necessary qualifications and rights of several classes, pp. clxxxiii. Mr. Hearn upon the subject, p. clxxxix. Extreme unreliable nature of classification contained in this tract shown, p. cxcv. Tabular analysis, p. cxlvi. Sequence of ranks shown in table, p. cxcvii. Scale of compensation for death given in book of Aicill, p. cxcviii. The Crith Gabhlach must be regarded, to a great extent, an imaginary work, though giving a definite picture of mode of life, p. cxcix. Duties and rights of kings, p. cc. The week, how portioned, p. cciv. Full description of a king in state, p. ccv. Condition of Irish people at the date of this tract very unfavourable, p. ccvi.

XI. SEQUEL TO THE CRITH GABHLACH, p. ccviii. Another classification given, p. ccix. Definitions of classes, p. ccix., compared with those in the Crith Gabhlach, and closely examined, p. ccxii. Discussion on "dire" fine of ecclesiastics a most interesting passage in Brehon law, p. ccxvii. Important views put forward in this tract as to position and duties of clerics, p. ccxxi.

XII. SUCCESSION, p. ccxxiii. Although of a fragmentary character this tract contains some interesting matter, p. ccxxiii. Most important extracts have reference to the rules of three descents, p. ccxxvi.

οἷν τετραγρο.

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

ms. A = E.3.5. p. 64-116 (O'D. 5, 29-67) Whole Text.
 B = H. 3.17, 311-327 (O'D. 409-427) Excerpts C = H. 3.18, p. 384b-389a (C. 845-861) " D = H. 3.17, 538-541 (O'D. 740-747) "

DINN TEĊTUGAÐ.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Tocombachtaiḃ realb pæppteallaiḡ | ^o modaiḡ maipe mbpugraite; bactaiḡ epicha coma comol; aitheam ḡarbear tuiniḡe maḡon teallach meḡonach; nī fīrteallach tuiniḡe.

O'D. 303. 126

5 Tocombachtaiḃ realb, .i. iḡ toich no iḡ luath toibḡit na fopir a pæpann tpeḡ in teċtugaḡ fo fīḡ do bpuḡ ino. Modaiḡ maipe mbpugraite, .i. iḡ tpe ḡmiparo a nech fīpænaigēḡ toibpium he. Bac-taiḡ epicha coma comol .i. coḡcæipoi .i. batap leir fiam na epia
.i. fēichim no mīpraigim co naaccomaiter a pæpann dōibpium amlaro fīn.
10 Aitheam ḡarbear tuiniḡe .i. iḡ aithiu aem, iḡ luathiu ḡabur nech tuiniḡi in pæpanno on techtugaḡ meḡonach ina on cēt techtugaḡ.
Maḡon teallach meḡonach .i. nocha lair in pēḡ bepeḡ techtuga iḡ in pæpann da cēt teċtuga tuiniḡe in pēpunn ap ai a cēt teċtaigē; aēt apuē cipe nama mibio. Ma pombē iḡ maḡ, manu be, anaro deāma 15 ocuḡ iḡ laipom tuiniḡe iḡuioiu. Mī fīrteallach tuiniḡe .i. noco leir in pēḡ bepuḡ teċtugaḡ iḡ in pæpanno tap clao in pæpanno da teċtugaḡ tuiniḡe in pæpanno ap ai in cēt teċtuigē, mana tabpa in tellac eile.

O'D. 1654 f.

.1. cīḡ fīḡ beipear in teċtaḡuḡ iḡ amlaro do bepaḡ é; abao
teopa deēmaḡ do tabaiḡt iman pæpann; abao caē lae do 20 tabaiḡt ime pē pē na cēt deēmaiḡe, no comaḡ ap in cēt ocuḡ iḡ in lo deḡanaē, ocuḡ iḡ in lo meḡonaē; ocuḡ munaḡ tinceao he fūḡ in pē fīn, iḡ dūl do anuno co hop in pæpanno ocuḡ da eaē ina lauiḡ, ocuḡ fiaḡne lair, a fopba na cēt deēmaiḡe; ocuḡ pō baḡ coirḡ dligēḡ do a fopba cuicē iḡ in cēt deēmaḡ, ocuḡ a 25 mīnoiteēt na deēmaiḡe meḡonci, ocuḡ beḡ do tāll pē la co naḡci; ocuḡ muna tinceap ē ann fīn, iḡ dūl do amach pē pē na deēmaiḡe meḡonci, ocuḡ pō ba coirḡ dligēḡ do a fopba cuicē iḡ in deēmaḡ meḡonaig; ocuḡ abao dō caē lae ap in mibḡbaḡ pē pē na

¹ Of taking lawful possession.—The Irish for this is taken from O'D, 409.
(H. 3, 17, col. 311.)

To combacht seflr saertella^{ug} | e modau mare mbpugsaite | baḡ tar
cīch comacomal (?) | aithem ḡaibes tuiniḡe | maḡ on tellug meḡonach |
nī fīrtellach tuiniḡi |

* Landed property has been enforced by means of high occupation through the labours of horses who extended [it], 4 it was a joining across the border (i.e. additional land acquired?). Over-sift (lit. 'keenest') is he who takes possession if it be from the 'middle' entry, this is not a true occupation giving (lit. 'of') possession.

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.¹

* NOBLE tribes quickly obtain possession of land ; ^{OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION} it is secured to them by the work of their horses ; lands are not taken possession of until proof is given ; he shall sooner get possession if from the middle entry ; it is not true possession. cf. O'Flah. 126

Quickly obtain, i.e. it is soon or quickly that the good men obtain actual possession of the land by bringing the ~~requisites for taking~~ possession into it. The work of their horses, i.e. it is through the work of their horses it is justified to them. Lands are not taken possession of, &c., i.e. equal 'cairde,' i.e. he had the territories before, i.e. I hold or I maintain that their land is not retained by them after that manner. He shall sooner get possession, i.e. quicker or sooner does one obtain possession of the land from the date of the middle possession-taking than from the first possession-taking. If from the middle entry, i.e. it is not to the man who brings the means of possession-taking into the land for its possession for the first time that the possession of the land belongs on account of its first possession-taking ; he has but an inception of right alone respecting it. If it is, it is well, if not, there is a stay of ten days and the possession is his then. It is not true possession, i.e. it is not to the man who brings the means of taking possession into the land and over the fence of the land for its possession that the possession of the land belongs on account of the first possession, unless he makes the second entry.

^a Ir. following form of These below

Whatever man brings the means of taking possession it is thus he shall bring it : he shall give notice for the space of thirty days upon the land ; he shall serve notice every day respecting it during the period of the first ten days, or according to others, on the first and the last day, and on the middle day ; and, unless he has been responded to during that time, he is to go over to the border of the land, having two horses in his hand (by the bridles), and having a witness, at the end of the first ten days ; and law is due to him at the end of five days in the first ten days, and at the beginning of the middle ten days, and he shall remain within for a day and a night ; and if he is not responded to then, he is to go out during the period of the middle ten days, and law is due to him at the end of five days of the middle ten days ; and he shall serve notice upon the defendant during the period of the middle ten days,

^b Ir. A notice by him.

OF TAKING ^{LAWFUL} POSSESSION. deómairde meonairge; no, comad ír in cét lo ocur ír in lo meonairde ocur ír in lo deigeanaí, ocur muna tincear é, dul do anunn a fupba na deómairí meonairgí, ocur a ninnatect na

(b' 1256) 5 deómairde deigeanaíge, co tpuan in fepaino, ocur ceiríu heic leir ocur da fíadone. Abad do cáe lae ne ne na deómairí meonairgí; no comad ír in cét lo ocur ír in lo meonairde ocur ír in lo deigeanaí; ocur muna tincear é, ír dul do amad, ocur abad do ar nimbobad cáe lae amuis ne ne na deómairí deigeanaíge; ocur muna tincear he, ír dul do anunn a fupba na 10 deómairí deigeanaíge, co puige let in fepainn, ocur oét neic leir ocur tpu fíadone leir, ocur a let do gnaoib platha, ocur a let do gnaoib fime; ocur muna damtup oligeo dó ne noul anōunn, noco ninnoligeo do gin co ti amad no co fínna in leir no naí leir; ocur damad cinnre leir na demta oligeo do ne noul 15 anōunn, noco ninnoligeo do gin co tuca abad aét techtugad do bpeit.

= fista

Teallach tap arta, cét teallach; aó na teéta tuinige; teallach da dechmad cian namar; aó do-coirleao tuiníde.

20 Teallach tap arta .i. tap clao; no capbut i tellach tpe ein fupproca. Aó na teéta tuinige .i. oligeo na teétan tuiní in fepaino dorom pin. Teallach da dechmad cian namar, .i. in techtugad berup mo a aithle in da dechmad cian nemup .i. in deómair meonach ocur in deómair deidenach. Cían namar, .i. cían atathar 35 ecco a nemup. Aó do coirleao tuiníde, .i. ír oligeo foxlar tuiní in fepaino dorom pin.

C845

O'D. 409.

[Hinne mac matech opeinib luis fo tuaró a epich nlluo, tpuur mapcach do fagis caput, ocur fcoirpet a neocho i tpu ba cerniul doais piam, na bo cumde choa mo: co neiript in ti ba 30 tpu, beiríó buu neochu ar in tpu. Arberit din in diaf baai la Hinne; ni mo dan tuine ciao cota in fcoir ar neoch punn; na bu ar cumde coa anō. Hi hupura fon po ba libri piam; ni biat anō einn aipe. Hi feputur cōrin naomias leo piam a tpu. Hi

armba C

* The last ten days.—The MS. here reads 'middle' instead 'of last;' but the sense clearly requires 'last.'

* cōntamar .i. caiti in cendarmad doib .i. a comaine doib ar na teband donahait dechmadait sin C846 or, according to others, it may be on the first day, and on the middle day, and on the last day, and unless he is responded to, he is to go over to the land at the end of the middle ten days, and at the beginning of the last ten days, into the third of the land, he having with him four horses and two witnesses. He is to serve notice^a during the period of the last ten days;¹ or according to others, it may be on the first day, and on the middle day, and on the last day; and unless he is responded to, he is to go out, and he is to serve notice^a on the defendant every day outside during the period of the ten last days; and unless he is responded to, he is to go over at the expiration of the last ten days until he arrives at half (middle point of) the land, having eight horses and three witnesses with him, one-half of them of the chieftain rank, and the other half of the Feini rank; and unless law is offered to him before going over, it is not unlawful for him not to come out until it is ascertained whether the land is or is not his; and if it be certain to him that law will not be given to him before going over, it is not unlawful for him that he has not given notice, provided that he has brought the means of taking possession.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

^a Ir.
A notice by him.

?? Half of those

Entry over a ^{moved in the} wall, a first entry; ^{a spare which} law does not legalize possession; an entry of twice ten days on land long tilled; ~~it is law that takes possession~~ (of the land for him from the other party).

long (?) & fat (?)
a spare that carries off!

Entry over a wall, i.e. over a fence; or, according to others, to bring a chariot in an entry upon land without forewarning. Law does not legalize possession, i.e. that is a law which does not justify possession of the land for him. Entry of twice ten days, &c., i.e. the means of possession-taking which he brings into it after the two ten days. 'Cian remur,' i.e. the middle ten days and the last ten days. Long tilled, i.e. long it has been with him under tillage. Law that takes possession, i.e. that is law which takes away the possession of the land for him.

Ninne, son of Matech, one of the Feini, went northwards into the country of the Uladh ~~with~~ three horsemen to visit friends, and they unharnessed their horses in a land which had previously belonged to their tribe, but it was not to demand a share therein; and the person whose land it was said to them, take away your horses from the land. Then the two who were with Ninne replied: it does not make our claim greater that we have ~~unharnessed~~ our horses here; it is not to claim a share therein. This is not easy for it was your own before; they shall not be left there for that reason. They did not know until then as one of /

of IV 14.16

got to unharnessing

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Leicret a neocha ar. Capta din in tí ba tír a neocha ar ar eicín.
Fogellrat iarium imbi Conóbar Mac Mera, ocuſ beirtíre fiach eairí techta forſ ar tí captur a neocha ar in tír, ocuſ comloſ in ní captar ar, ocuſ do éombí feilba doib a coine rin 5 dī tellaig.] doimbrair ſeib " " comair "

" telluch C (845)

r. do combráig?

r. ina^r

" q. O. 743 (D)

r. na h-éar?

read tech-da-boing?
(andus thurn)

fora mbid folla C

C (846)

'Atait recht realba la ſeine na garbteir athgabail, (O. B. 1257)
na beir ceathra ina teallach; it ſir in do loingad, (= inda loingad) Toich do boing a tobach ocuſ a teallach; dun cen feilb;
ceall gen ſaithce; tír for a mbai (id) foilais; bairleac 10 boair; muirunir mara ina beir ceathra; uracomol (air-ad-com-la) cīr neimīd; tír da randa flath iar necuīd in céile, a claetar poll, i curtar lia.

Atait recht realba .i. atait peēt ſeaind da nairneibenn in ſenechur, ocuſ noco ſlegar athgabail iſ inuile do bñth inuēib da 15 techtugad. Na beir ceathra .i. noco beirar cethra da techtugad.
It ſir .i. iſ ſir imſuigñteir no inuēigñteir inuēib, no do bñth da techtugad. Toich do boing, .i. iſ toich no iſ luath toibgñteir.
Atobach .i. athgabail. At teallach, .i. techtaigē. Dun cen feilb,
.i. cen ſeainn aici, amuī ata Dun apail. Ceall gen ſaithce .i.
20 amuī ata cell gabñin. Tír for a mbai foilais .i. ar nar marba na hinuile. Bairleac .i. loc bair imbi bo ar .i. bair loc .i. ina a mba-raigñteir iat tne ar na mbo, no loc bair imbi galap. Muirunir mara
.i. inir marſanach bīr ar muir, no ina marſanach muir, amuī ata inir cathais .i. omun a mbaīd cuice no uaiē .i. ar annſatſur a mbuē inuē.
25 Ina beir ceathra .i. noco beirar cethra da techtugad cen ethar,* Uracomol .i. in ní for a ſiraccomaibteir a cīr do neimeb, amuī ata tír mugan no ſot ſomair .i. tír bīr la neē, da ſolegſur cīr, ar ſocoir-

* Marginal note in O. B. 1257: ni coir tellach cethra ar ainmibin no flatha ída tír (printed p. 8.1)

¹ Inis Cathaigh.—Scattery Island in the Shannon, near Kilrush.

² Tir-Maghain.—In C., 846, the following note is given:—Secures the rent, i.e. land which one possesses of which rent is due, and the cattle of the entry are distrained for that rent alone, i.e. the thing by which his rent is secured to the 'Nemidh'-person, such as Tir-Mudhain in Eile to the King of Caisel, or Rot-Adamair, in Uí-Conaill-Gabhra to the Coarb of Lismor in the same way, i.e. According to the ancients all along everything which is found on Fiadh-Mudhain is that the land had been theirs before. They did not remove their horses from thence. The person whose land it was then drove their horses from it by force. They afterwards applied to Conchobhar Mae Nessa concerning it, and he awarded a fine for unlawful ~~expulsion~~ upon the person who drove the horses out of the land, and an equivalent of what was driven off it, and he gave them lands in proportion to their family.

1) Accordingly it wd. be absurd to put cattle into it, as he wd. slay them!

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

7

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

cf. Law p. 347

There are seven lands with the Feini into which distress is not taken, into which not cattle are brought for entry; it is men ^{who occupy them and their} that are required. ^{occupation} Quickly the ^{enforcement} exaction and the ^{enforcement} entry are seized upon; a 'dun'-fort without land; a church without a green; a land on which there are plunderers; a deadly place of murrain; an island in the sea to which cattle are brought; ^{not} land ^{which secures the rent of a 'Nemidh'-person}; land which the chief divides after the death of the tenant, where a hole is made, where a stone is put.

cf. Th. ZCP, 17, 100-1.

cf. Stokes Correction p. 41 (Curry!)

(Land on which a rent to a n. is a 1st charge.)
cf. IV. 20.3; IV. 442.23

There are seven lands, i.e. there are seven lands which the Feinechus mentions, and into which it is not lawful to bring distress in the shape of cattle into them, to take lawful possession. Not cattle are brought, i.e. cattle are not brought to take lawful possession of them (the lands). It is men, i.e. it is men that are suffered or required to be brought into them, or to be brought to take lawful possession of them. Quickly are seized upon, i.e. it is quickly or soon seizure is made. Exaction, i.e. distress (lawful seizure). Entry, i.e. ^{legalised}. A 'dun'-fort without land, i.e. without having land, such as Dun Araill. A church without a green, i.e. such as Cell Gabhrin. A land on which there are plunderers, i.e. on which the cattle have been killed. A deadly place, i.e. a place of death, where there is murrain of cows, i.e. 'bas-loc,' i.e. a place where they are carried off by death through cow-plague or a place of death where there is disease. An island in the sea, i.e. a deadly island which is situated in the sea, or at which the sea is destructive, such as Inis Cathaigh, i.e. there is fear of their being drowned going to it or coming from it, i.e. on account of the difficulty of bringing them thither. To which cattle are brought, i.e. cattle are not brought to take lawful possession of it without a boat. Secures the rent, i.e. the thing by which his rent is truly secured to a 'Nemidh'-person, such as Tir-Maghain,² or Rot-Adamairi, i.e. land which one has, of which rent is due, for the cattle brought to for appropriating

bestial? slay the cattle

permanent?? (i.e. not joined to the land as low-ride).

forfeited (due) to the King of Caisel the day on which he will assume the kingdom, because they had killed a king of Caisel. Rod-Adamair, too, there was a serpent there, and Mochtanta expelled it thence, and the reward that used to be given to him for having driven it thence was everything which the Coarb of Mochtanta of Lis-mor could find on it, the day on which he assumed the abbacy, should be his property, for it is forfeit.

Let him kill the cattle

OF TAKING ^{LAWFUL} ^{POSSESSION.} liēþr ceitra in teallan̄s la cir a neimō. Ni coir tellaē cetra inn ar armitin na plata ipa tir. Tir ða ran ða plath .i. in tir uppannur in plath, tir ðibad; no ip pæcra dathgabail inbleogan, .i. conðais plant a cuit and .i. cona ðan̄ar in a plathur e, ocyr o ponn̄per in 5 tir ðibad noch a negin ðo techtugad ðo b̄reit ino. A clæstar pol̄l
.i. clao .i. i clæroþer pol̄l i comprain̄ in ferain̄o. I cyp̄tar lia .i. cor-þe .i. iap̄ na clæroþe .i. in clōc cyche .i. bi pol̄l ocyr lia ocyr corþa plata ann co ferþar a cuit and.

Torombacht Clandacht cianmbouige D (08740)

= dian-da freca dagdliged

2) near a cedar (for metre).

Toíombais ciannacht .i. ír toich no ír luath no toibgeartaí
 Cianaí, ingen Feisgura Forghair, na feunna no bo cian uaithe curra-

¹ 'Neimeadh'-person.—C. 846, adds, "the chief retains his share there."

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

ῥα; no dono, comad i Ciannoét, ingen Connla, mic Tarog, mic Ailella Ulam. Tódombaig .i. do caom boing. Cianbhuige .i. cian mor no mbatar cin foḡurrao, no arar pot uairi pombui tḡr .i. o Femb co hulla. Da a i an tḡr ramaigay .i. iḡ amlaio do poine rin ramaigay ḡrin no in toprugad rin ocuy di cairig a coparo ma laim. Do luio tar peart .i. do cuaro ḡi tar clao in peartano da cet techtugad. Dach por fine .i. raigim no inoraigim conat ar peartan na fine beruy ḡi in ḡir accomalrain. Imana iarum .i. em anao ḡi iar rin meite rin.
Ar peineachay .i. do peir in penechay. Co hocht la .i. bith di ina upiraroi ne ré oét laíti, ocuy centri cairig do bḡith le a porba na cethramtan meonóci a haíli na cét cethramthan. Fiaonayre ban a ceteallac .i. da ban fiaonayre do bḡeith di le a porba na cethramtan meonóci a haíli na cét cethramtan; loḡ enech do ceḡtarpe di in peartano,
.i. gabal ingen Minn ocuy Eichne ingen éarpar mbin. Ma peanao, v .i. noco peacat einig a cetmuintipe. Ceathrumao la atharach
.i. no bo coir oligeo do damtan di iḡ in cethramao la don cethram-tan doiranao a aithli na cethramtan meonóci; aḡarac peḡtur aile aruy. Iḡeao techta .i. iḡet in ḡo oligeo caé teḡtaig banao. Do luio iarum .i. iaruy in aile déc, .i. do éuaro ḡi iarum do éino a laḡa, v do éino a peartano bodéin. Co noialao aipme, .i. co noialao na aipme pucuyar le peime a porba na cethramtan meonóci do bḡeith le aḡarac peḡtar aile aruy, .i. oét cairig. Lorao, criathay, .i.
a lorao ocuy a cuathay, ocuy in ní por a ceḡtaigenn a fuine leo .i. a loc fuine ar toḡac uile. Cuairt raigear a connarom .i. in ní por v a nintorogenn a cuma nareapneét iar cae uirto .i. a cuicéal ocuy a cipbolḡ. La peap poirgeall .i. la per bur inriatonayre aca poir-geall; uair iḡ ruy do éuaro menma in uḡoir conabu doilḡu tḡi ban riatonayre daḡbail na aen per riatonayre. Iḡ iaram atharach .i. iḡ iarum, aḡa aithli rin, atharach peḡtur aile; ar iḡ maotia pḡeacarter v hi do peir oligé comarth iḡ amlaio reo no bo coir a venam, .i. ma tindirín ber fupra po cétoir, no ar meotan, iḡ ar éaḡruime a oligé do ar tḡr, ocuy ic ḡairto ar ḡac inbairto caé moé do beir raḡtar fupra, a uide (?) oḡ 410

Fergus Foreraidh and Bri Anbui who was wife to Blai Briughaidh, but whom Conchobhar Mac Nessa bought after the death of her first husband, Fergus Foreraidh. The woman wished to come to her brethren to demand land of them, i.e. Connall Cernach and Ainrigin * *.

The daughter inquired of Sencha, son of Ailell, whether it was right for her to demand land. He said at first that it was not right for her to demand land; after which "the blotches"¹ were raised on his cheek in the night. He said on the next day that it was right for her to demand land; and he told her to bring man-possession-taking into it, so that grain-blotches were raised on his cheeks a second time. His mother then told him that the means of possession-taking which he should have decided should have been sheep, a kneading-trough, and a sieve.

She then took two worthy female witnesses with her, namely, Gabhal, daughter of Midhe Minn, and Cethra, daughter of Minn, and they took Minn'a chariot or, according to others, it was Ciannacht, the daughter of Connla, son of Tadhg, OF TAKING son of Cian, son of Ailell Olum. Took possession, i.e. fairly seized on. Dis- LAWFUL tant farm, i.e. they had been for a long time before in the possession of her POSSESSION. brethren, without good security; or, according to others, it was far away from her land was, i.e. from the Feini¹ to Uladh. Two ewes, &c., i.e. she settled or arranged them thus, she held two ewes yoked in her hand. She passed over the mound-fence, i.e. she went over the fence of the land to take first possession of it. She challenged the tribe, i.e. I hold or insist that it is on the land of the tribe (not of strangers) she brings this true claim. She afterwards remained, i.e. she remains quiet after doing thus much. The Feinechus, i.e. according to the Feinechus. For eight days, i.e. she is to be a petitioner for the space of eight days, and she is to bring four sheep with her at the end of the middle fourth day, after the expiration of the first four days. Women witness on the occasion of^a the first entry, i.e. two women witnesses to be brought by = Ir. In. her at the expiration of the middle four at the end of the first four days; the land is equal to the honor-price of either of them, viz., Gabhal, daughter of Menn, and Eichne, the base^b daughter of Menn. That she did not sell, i.e. she did = Ir. ?? not sell the honor of her first marriage. In four days after, i.e. it is right to grant Chariot. her the benefit of law on the fourth day of the last four after the expiration of the middle four; the time after that again. Is lawful, i.e. this is the law of every woman possession-taking. She went afterwards, i.e. after the twelfth day, i.e. she afterwards went to the head of her own property, to the head of her own land. With double stock, i.e. double the stock which she had brought with her before the expiration of the middle four, are to be brought by her another time again, i.e. eight sheep. A kneading-trough, a sieve, i.e. her kneading-trough and her sieve, and along with them the thing by which she adjusts her baking, i.e. her baking flag (griddle) first of all. In due order she claims her right, i.e. the thing by which she sues her security in proper order, i.e. her distaff, and her comb-bag. With a man witness, i.e. with a man who is qualified to bear witness, to give testimony; for according to the intention of the author of this law it would not be more difficult to find three female witnesses than one male witness. Is afterwards, i.e. it is afterwards, after this, one other time; for if she be responded to well according to law, this is the way it should be done, i.e. if she be responded to at first, or in the middle, it is after four days that law should be ceded, at the first entry, and it is shorter every time, the more she is put to trouble², until judgment with them. And she took two sheep on the first occasion, and four on the fourth day, and eight on the eighth day; and she went in this manner at once with two sheep and two female witnesses with her, and remains afterwards. She brought four sheep on the eighth day, and eight on the eighth day, and thus took the possession."

¹ The blotches.—These were said to appear on the face of Kings or Brehons who had given false judgments. Vide Senchas Mor, vol. i., p. 25.

¹ From the Feini. She had to come a long distance from the territory of the Feini, in the south, to the country of Uladh in the north.

² Put to trouble.—The following explanation is given of this passage in O'D. 410:—"If she is responded to at once or in the middle term it is in four days that her right is to be ceded to her in the first entry, and it is shorter every term the more trouble is brought upon her, so that it is "a judgment of precinct" to herself, i.e. that the term of its arrival to them, i.e. a pledge in the precinct, or five days to solicit the defendant, i.e. five others if at the middle notice her offer of law was responded to, or she is to remain for a time, for she is nearer to the actual possession each time."

OF TAKING COME FUISILL DÍ MAIGHIN PATHOIG IARUM. Dlígeo cethruimíte .i. no
LAWFUL bo coir dlígeó dí a porba na cethruimíte meonóí a haidéi na cet ceth-POSSESSION. ruimíte. Dlígeo aile a meonóí .i. no bo coir dlígeó dí a porba aile don cethramtan deirneair a aidéi na cethramtan meonóí. Tul-fuisgeall an deiganach, .i. tal ata a fuisgeall uili dí i porba na cethramtí deirneóí, .i. a cros uile do breith ino.

Mará cinóti lair na deimtar dlígeó do, irlan do tula anunn co na cros uile. Mará cinóti lair co ndeimtar, ir lan riach techtugad uat; cona de rin ata, apat teora ndeclimad, in inbaro 101f cunnatabairt lair i ndeimta no na deimta dlígeó do, .i. tall bir fir in re bio oc cuinnge pechemian in peét deiginad, oca tig muirio in peét tuiré ocuf meonóí.

1. caé uair ir abao teora ndeclimad do beirad na fir, ir abao teora ceathramtan do beirad na mna, ocuf cuthuma 15 deóir do beirad na fir ocuf do cairuib do beirad na mna; ocuf in comrat tiagad na fir ir in ferainn, ir in comrat rin tiagad na mna. Caé uair ir mna beirad in techtugad ir abao teora ceathramta do beirad ar in mbróbuir ann, ocuf ir amúar do beirad .i. abao do tabairt doib ar in mbróbuir caé lae re re 20 na ceathruimíte; no dono, ceana, comat ir in cet lo, ocuf ir in lo meonóí, ocuf ir an lo degeanóí; dul dí amad a porba na ceathramtan tuiríge, ocuf a nindóteet na ceathramtan meon-aige tar fear in ferainn, ocuf da cairuig le ocuf ban riadnair le, ocuf bet dí ann re la co naróí, ocuf muna tincar hí dul dia 25 tiig ocuf bet dí ann re re na ceathramtan meonóí, ocuf abao do tabairt caé l[a] ar in mbróbuir re re na ceathramtan meonóí; no, comat ar in cet lo, ocuf ir in lo meonóí, ocuf ir in lo deiganóí, ocuf dul dí amad ann rin co trian in ferainn, ocuf ceirí cairuig le ocuf da ban riadnair, ocuf bet dí annro 30 re la co naróí, ocuf muna damar dlígeó dí ir dul dí dia tiig ocuf bet dí ann rin re re na ceathramtan deiginóí; ocuf abao do tabairt caé lae dí ar in mbróbuir re re na ceath-ramtan deiginóí; no, comat ar in cet lo ocuf ir in lo deig-anóí dul dí amad co ruige let in ferainn, ocuf hoet cairuig le,

¹ For her last, to speedy judgment. O'D. 411, adds here, "i.e. yonder (within the land) all the decision is at the expiration of the last four days, unless law has been ceded to her until then. Ciannachta, daughter of Conula, son of Teige, son of Cian, sued for seven 'Cumhals' for the reward of her hand-labour."

So that it is an immediate judgment for her is passed for her; it is ex-precinct finally afterwards. She is entitled to OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION. four days, i.e. it is right to cede her law at the expiration of the middle four days after the first four. She is entitled to two for her middle, i.e. it is right to cede her law at the end of two days of the last four after the middle four had been attended to. For her last to speedy judgment,¹ i.e. within all the judgment lies for her at the end of the last four days, i.e. she is to bring all her cattle into it.

If it be certain to him* that law will not be ceded to him, it is guiltless in him to go over with all his cattle. If it be certain to him that it (law) will be ceded, it is full fine of ~~lawful actual possession~~ occupation that it is to be paid by him; whence is derived the rule of law, "let a notice of thrice ten days be given, when it is doubtful to him whether law will be ceded to him or not ceded," i.e. within the territory he is tarrying while he is supplicating the defendant suing an advocate on the last occasion, but at his own house on the first and middle occasion.

That is, every time that the men give notice of thrice ten days the women give notice of thrice four days, and whatever number of horses the men bring it is the same number of sheep which the women bring; and the extent to which the men enter into the land, is the same extent to which the women enter. Every time that it is women who bring the means of taking possession it is a notice of thrice four days they serve on the defendant, and it is thus they serve it, i.e. they serve notice on the defendant every day during the space of the four days; or, indeed, according to others, it is on the first day, and on the middle day, and on the last day; she is to go out at the expiration of the first four days, and in the beginning of the middle four days she is to go again over the mound-fence of the land, having two sheep with her and a female witness, and she is to remain* there for a day and a night, and unless she is responded ^{die but ?} ^{a Ir. Be.} to she is to go to her house, and to remain there during the space of the four middle days, and to serve notice every day on the defendant during the period of the four middle days; or, according to others, it may be on the first day, and on the middle day, and on the last day, and she is to go out then as far as the third of the land, having four sheep with her and two female witnesses, and she is to remain there for a day and a night, and unless law is ceded to her she is to go to her house and remain there during the space of the last four days; and she is to serve notice every day on the defendant during the space of the last four days; or, according to others, it may be on the first day and on the last day she is to go out as far as half the land, having eight sheep with

¹ To him. There is some error or defect in the context here.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

ocuf tpi banpiatonaire, ocuf bet vi ann pe|la co naidée. Ma damar dliged vi annreig, ir dliged do denam doib mun perann;
ocuf muna damar dliged ví, ir|lan ví gín co ti, acé a crio uili
do breit ino anuno a forba na teora ceathramta; ocuf gemaó
re noul anuno but chínóte na demta dliged ví|gín co tucá dliged do neac,) no dliged teétarigte íme, acé uil anuno ví cona crod ocuf co na muínnter po cétoir.

O'D. 410,
411.

[Acad naidé o mnaib teét ir tpi i foricenn na re laithe; ar a hocht famlaid, ocuf anad cetré la; teét anunn, iarfuioiuga, ir aile dec famlaid.

Acad treiri a ndechmuide do beruit na fir in a perannab;
uul doib anunn i forbuig na cet dechmarde dar clao in perunn, ocuf da ech leir, ocuf piatonuiri dia mbi logenech in perunn;
ocuf taidéet da tig re re na dechmuiri medonée, ocuf uil ann anunn ina forbaid co trian in perunn, ocuf ceithre heich lair, ocuf a rgar ir in peronn, ocuf da piatonuiri .i. cupub logenech gach per oib in perunn; taidéet do da tig re re na dechmarde deidénée, ocuf uil anunn inu forbad in comat bur aill leir, ocuf oet neich leir, ocuf triur piadun darab loz emech cach per doib in peruno; ocuf bit éall no co ncamtuir dliged do umun peruno.

Ir i deébir in baintellaig ocuf in feartellaig, .i. anur dechmuide dpir anur cétruime do mnaoi, anur per piatonuiri do fir anur ban piatonuiri do mnaoi .i. cur in cethruime deidénuig per piatonuiri inoet reir; anur eich dperuib ir caoio do mnaoi. In orba cruio no rliarta a maathar berur riri in teëtugad rin, ocuf ni fuil mac ann; no, ir a perunn athur ocuf renathur, ocuf ni fuil comorba perroa ann.]

[= Cartai]

Beartaid Senca cethrethach|bantellach ar perpel-lach,) comdar perba pulachta for-a gnuade iar cibreataib.

pret. pass. of following or part. (1)

read -it as in 16. 2

1 'Cruid'-land. Over the 'd' of the word 'cruid' is written the usual contraction for 'no,' 'or,' and the letter 'b,' suggesting that the word might be 'cupub,' 'a hand or fist.'

(1) It may be adverbial participles, but in prose copula is always immediately followed by predicate her and three female witnesses, and she is to remain there for a day and a night. If law be ceded to her then, they are to make regulations according to law concerning the land ; and if law be not ceded to her, it is safe for her though she should not come, but she is to bring all her cattle over at the expiration of the thrice four days ; and even though it should have been certain before going over that law would not be ceded to her, though law had not been given to anyone, or law of actual-possession touching it, but she is to go over with her cattle and with her people at once.

A notice of two days is to be given by women that they will enter* upon the land at the expiration of the six days ; it is accordingly in eight days, and a stay of four days ; they go over accordingly in twelve days.

The men give notice of thrice ten days touching their lands ; at the expiration of the first ten days they shall go over the mound-fence of the land, each having two horses with him, and a witness who has honor-price equal to the value of the land ; and he is to return to his house within the space of the middle ten days, and at the expiration thereof he is to go over as far as the third of the land, having four horses with him, and he unharnesses them in the land, and he has two witnesses ; i.e. each man of them has honor-price equal to the value of the land ; he is to return to his house and remain there during the period of the last ten days, and at the expiration thereof he is to go over into the land as far as he may think proper, having eight horses with him and three witnesses, each man of whom has honor-price equal to the value of the land ; and he shall remain there until law is ceded to him concerning the land.

The difference between a woman possession-taking and a man possession-taking is this, that which is ten days for the man is four for the woman, and what is man witness to the man is woman witness to the woman, i.e. until the last four days in which man witness is required for both ; what is horses for men is sheep for a woman. Into the 'cruid'-land¹ or 'sliasta'-land of her mother she brings this possession-taking, and there is no son ; or according to others, it is into the land of a father or a grandfather, and there is no male heir.

First judging Sencha adjudged in his first decision woman possession-taking as man possession-taking, so that there were blotches ^{suffered} raised on his cheek after having passed biased judgments.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

* Ir.
To come.

the first C 1878 OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Hicraí bñis a fírinne (a fírbreathairb); írí conmidair¹⁾ banteallach, comdar fearba fálguide for a ghuairtib iar fírbreathairb.

Deartair Senca .i. no breithnaisgair Senca ara cet breithemnuir in techtugad banta annul in techtugad fearba. Comdar fearba .i. co no imphlúisgair na bolga for a ghuairtib iar mbreith na claenbret .i.
iar claen breithib.

Hicraí bñis²⁾ .i. no icurair bñis ingen tSencha rin do neir fírinne a fírbreith. Írí conmidair .i. írí no meipemnaigear in techtugad banta. Comdar fearba .i. cor tulogreair .i. cor loigreair aca na bolga for a ghuairtib iar mbreith na fírbreith; ocur ír ar rin gabair co no neich tuine aer do neoch, no fogail aile rir, o na gena naé coibdealach do molaó conoisgair iar rin, no o gebur inan fogail rin, coma inano do ocur do neich bodem. Fálguide .i. fálgihi.

15 .i. ír i breith nucurair Seanca in techtug[ad] banta annul in techtug[ad] fearba, ocur no eirgeair bolga for a ghuairtib; ocur no icurair fírinne bñise epec. Ocur ír breith nuc, a teach-tug[ad] fein dona mnairb. Ocur ír ar rin ír pollur éio fogail no fuarbreath tuine do denam, o bur capa no coibdeileac do no 20 gebad uimpe, conat inann do ocur no gabad bndem ímpe.

7. 8. 6. 7
x. inlolaig (in-lolaig)
r. Seithir

Inlolaíó reichidair fearba techtair a conó a cenal.
bach be degabail, cinóir banachtaig crúce, coirreair ní dia o beairb moza na ponóir naite. Saerpa la fine a porcomol, po bith banóirba tairic.

rechtair C
O'Bar 969

condu C 849

read seithir (as in O'D. 1263) C 849

25 Inlolaíó .i. no eillegair .i. no ineillegair Síthir, ingen Míno, ocur gabair, ingen capair Míno na fearanna no teétagair coonair a

¹ Himself.—In O'D., 413, the reading runs somewhat differently, as follows:—

"So that the blotches disappeared from his cheeks after the passing of the true judgment by her, and from this is derived the custom; that if a man should pass a false sentence, whenever a friend or a relative of his should pass the true judgment after it, it is the same to him as if he himself had passed it, and it frees him from the fines of false judgment after it, i.e. as he is bound to pay fines for him to another creditor, so is he to have the benefit of the judgment delivered in this case.

² Seithir. For 'Seichidar' of O'D. 1263, O'D. 413, reads 'Seithir,' and C.
848, 'Sithir.'

Brigh cured him in truth. It was she who established female entry so that it was concealed or B's truth [Brigh's truth & gloss] blotches etc. false guide a) pret. pass. 3 pl. or 1 part. of to bludge special

Note that women are always introduced into texts to explain the extension of rights to women

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

17

Brigh in her truth by her true judgments cured him; it is she that established the woman possession-taking, so that the blotches on his cheeks were concealed after the true judgments were passed.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Sencha adjudged, i.e. Sencha adjudged in his first judgment that the female possession-taking should be the same as the male possession-taking. So that there were blotches, i.e., so that the blotches were raised on his cheeks after having passed the biased judgment, i.e. after partial judgments.

Brigh cured, i.e. Brigh, daughter of Sencha, cured him according to the truth of her true judgment. Is it she that established, i.e. it is she that concerted the female possession-taking. So that the blotches, i.e. that they sunk down, i.e. that the swelling of the blotches disappeared after the passing of the true judgment; and hence is derived the rule, that though a person may compose a satire, or do other injury to another, if any relative of his should compose a eulogium after that, the latter will nullify the satire; or if he should make good the injury, that is the same as if he had done so himself.¹ Concealed, i.e. hidden.

swellings or (no?)

That is, the judgment which Sencha passed was that the female possession-taking should be like the male possession-taking, and blotches did rise on his cheeks; and the truth of Brigh cured him. And the judgment she passed was that the women should have a possession-taking of their own. And from this it is evident that whatever damage a person attempts to do, if a friend or a relative should undo it, it is the same as if he himself should repair it.

Seithir² claimed the lands which the chiefs of her tribe had taken possession of. — She was a woman of two races, who was entitled to the land, and she sought that it should not be after the custom of slaves, or dispossessed persons. She was freed by her tribe from obligation, because female possession reverts.

occupies

her "heart" [her true possession]

ZCP 13, 300. 40 Nov. 1130

Her seizure was spoken for by her feud, because it was a habitation of (entailing) return (∴ reverts to the fine after death.)

Claimed, i.e. she challenged, i.e. Sithir,³ daughter of Menn and Gabhair, the base^a daughter of Menn, claimed the lands which the chiefs of her tribe had taken ^a Ir.

Chariot.

³ Sithir. — In C. 848, and in O'D. 413, the following note is given:—

"Sithir claimed the lands, i.e. the daughter of Fergus, son of Ledi, who was married to^b Anluan, son of Madach, one of the Feini, and she had a son by him, Nia MacAnluain. Sithir claimed a possession from her brothers, i.e. from Ailill Lethdberg and from Aengus Aigle, i.e. the face of that Ailell was half red, and it was in Aigle Aengus was fostered, i.e. Meitheas in the territory of Uladh."

^b Ir. 117th.

VOL. IV.

G

and she was a woman who sprang from (11 chinnes) 2 flocks. She was the ruler (read ~~to~~ ^{reign} of other MSS) of a territory long enduring in contract (12 r. cor-sir of variants + ZCP 8 300 ^{cursor for ferus forcomol}). She would not exist (read ^{re-bi-bi} with other MSS) according to (omit c with other MSS for metre) customs of a slave, nor would she exist (add ^{re-bi-bi} for metre!) according to a "chariot of the road"

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

roth h. col. 14
ceneoil. Techtugad .i. no coirpigeirtar, no rola corpa ino. Dach be degabail .i. reichiun no inoiraigin conat ben no cinuirtar o dighablaib, ir de a athair oulletair ocup a machair do feimib Tempach. Darachtair eirice .i. ba reoirpach ir ar in eirice no caruirtar, no no ba carpanach le, .i. nob inoirtar for in eirich no caruirtar. Ni bia o beirair moza .i. noco biat ro bairp gnae no aibin oc ruba ocup oc ruba da cino uile, .i. ni biatara aigi fine na nee itir, aet a ouirpae buidem, .i. ni biatara riu ocup tall i cinn tione .i. ni bia cir na consbail ruirra, na biatara aibid tuaiti na duna, aet tinotaitheir raeth. Na 10 rontair raito .i. noco ronnabeta ar no hi for in rot can a leet di cen ruba ocup cen ruba. Saerpa la fine .i. ropairter a rir accomol a reirano na fine amlao rin. Pobich banarba tairic .i. fon rath ir aoba dar corp apec in reirano hi iar rir, im a tabairt uile di co ruba ocup co ruba, no im a leet di cen ruba ocup cen ruba; no fon rath 15 ir aoba dar corp apec in reirano uaiti iar na re, .i. no bui trebuiru riu hapec.

Doigim aiafeirear beru tellair. 1 teopa deachmadair dliged, mað rirp gar comairper; o ta cumial co trichad, ad naen berena tellair cid diabal pot rorpe.

r. at

(= for-aisis)
read for-aisis in other MSS (subj. to for-ad-et-irative !!)
read 569
20 Da each a laim leath aer realba, piadnaire in-dric, rorpir dliged, cuice do dliged, dianad be peineachar. Muna be peineachar, tellair iarpuidiu imid raind in dechmad, ceithru heich ailiur, rucitair raer realba deige per piadan lat; pandta cormailir; 25 treire do dliged dia not be peineachar. Muna be peinecur, tellair iarpuidiu a ndige and dechmad, ocht neich ailear im treib toruma, treige per piadan lat do gradaib peine. Rannra cormailir. Tul ruigeall uadair, dianad be peineachar. Muna be peineachar read dichinn O'Don. 1504 Shall not feed.—The MS. here has only 'biat' which Dr. O'Donovan lengthened out into biatara; 'p' with the same mark of contraction elsewhere is lengthened out into 'por.'

At the border of the land.—For 'leath aer realba,' of the text, the fragments of this tract found in O'D. 414, 744; and in C. 850, have "leet rior realba, i.e. an half free possession." The different MSS. vary as usual in the spelling of the words.

¹⁾ await [thy] right, the fifth day is thy right if thou have the law (read dux not be as in the MSS) if thou have not the law (read munat be) you shall afterwards occupy in the middle division of the decade. There are 4 horses with it demands, they are to be unyoked; [full] freedom of possession; a couple (7. divide as other MSS) of witnesses with thee. ²² Share (read rannus or rann - other MSS) in the same way. (or read antai "it must be waited" ²) The 3rd day is thy right if thou have the law. If thou hast not the law then shalt occupy afterwards at the end of the decade. There are 8 horses which it requires; possession of. Taken possession of, i.e., erected boundaries, or they placed pillar-stones there. She was a woman of two races, i.e., I hold or insist that she was descended from two races, her father being of the Ulta, and her mother of the Feini of Teamhair. Entitled to the land, i.e., she was directly entitled to the land which she loved, or which was dear to her, i.e., she was entitled justly to the land which she loved. That it should not be after the custom of slaves, i.e., that she should not, according to the pleasant or delightful knowledge, be bound to perform the services of attack and defence for the entire of it, i.e., she shall not feed¹ the head of the tribe or any other person, but according to her own wish, i.e., she shall not feed here and there for the sake of the territory, i.e., there shall be neither rent nor keeping upon her, nor refection for the guests of the territory nor of the 'Dun'-fort, but every impost is removed from her. Or dispossessed persons, i.e., she was not removed from it upon the road without receiving the one-half thereof without being obliged to perform the services of attack and defence. She was freed by her tribe, i.e., she was freed from the true obligation of the lands of the tribe in that manner. Because female possession reverts, i.e., because it is a property of which the land is to be restored in truth, for giving it all to her with the obligation of performing the services of attack and defence, or of giving the half of it without performing the services of attack and defence; or because it is a property of which the land is to revert from her after the term, i.e., there was security for restoring it.

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

19

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Grice 11, 66. 3

^{thou shouldst}
Doighin, dost thou know the customs of an entry?
In thrice ten days law is due, if thou consult wisdom;
from land of the value of one 'cumhal' to thirty, ^{in the right}
it is one custom of entry, though the length of the ^{the custom of entry is one law (same)}
'Foinge'-measure should be doubled. g.g. of forrach

^{a property qualified}
Two horses in hand at the border of the land, ^{half freedom of possession} with ^{(1) see above} pure witness, he demands that his legal right^a be ceded to him, if there be 'Feinechus.' If there be not 'Feinechus,' he returns until the middle of the ten days, when he should bring four horses which are unharnessed in the free land in the presence of^b two male witnesses. There is a similar division; in three days afterwards his right law is to be ceded to him, ^{b Ir. Law.}
if there be 'Feinechus.' If there be not 'Feinechus,' ^{b Ir. With thee.}
he returns after this at the end of ten days with eight horses which he is obliged to have to relieve the house, with three man-witnesses of the 'Feini' grade.
There is a similar division. If there be 'Feinechus,' speedy judgment is passed in his favour. If there

VOL. IV.

C 2

attendance about the house (note this is the 1st time he goes to the house!); three witnesses w. thee from the premier rank. Share (² see supra) in the same way. Immediate judgment from them if thou have the law

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

note short dash
(N^o p. 194)

teicta tuinide¹ i los do airtrean co fear, conatog, co tein co naitreib, co toruime ceathra, acht tiri cuinn cetcorais, no imtelgad mbroga ndch ir nemead. Ir ar in teallach ro do bongar cae realb la feine.

P. of con 'hurdle'

di-rith² (other MSS)

< con fine

5 Cui tpe do tellach, inaenan main moaisgear i retair³ do purtar, ⁿⁱ la buar buire, cumal are rlaindter. Munab fo reilb techta tiri gen cunn gen coibne, dilti buair bepari. ^{magdair (H note: red from)} ^{rethaid other MSS}

brinech (other MSS)

-Sa?

Doigín ar a fear ar. i. a mac; ar Nin re Doigen, co fearer riu no co 10 roib acut barir gnae no aibin in teictaig⁴ do fear in penechar, .i. Nin do raio ann ro riu Doigín .i. riu mac riu gair⁵ dultair. I teora deach-marair, .i. ir na teora dechmaro ata dliged in teictaig⁶, no ar a aile na teora ndechmaro dlegair de a cros uilo do bneit ino. Ma rur gear, .i. maia comur a ruidgear fein, no dia nimcomaircter 15 re gearair, ir anlaio ro do dena. O ta cumal .i. o ta airer dam don tiri cumail co ruici in fearann ir riu truat cumal, ocur cinotec ar eicmotech riu, .i. cio tiri cumail cio tiri truat cumal, iped oen berena ann ro riu do tellach. Ad naen berena .i. ir inann do fear barra gnae no aibin dliged a teictaig⁷. Cio diabal ro roirge .i.
20 cio diabla roirge ar fear ber ann, ir anlaio riu biar.

Da each a laim .i. da ech i laim comici let eachar in fearann, ocur noco fear doib a fear anurro, ocur beir cuic fear dia fearar ro cetoir in tiri .i. leth riu na realb, no ir in fein [reilb] lethruir, in tomailt a fear nama, lanroer inurro in realb do melar fear ocur 25 arbur; lethar inurro in realb na tomelar act fear no arbur nama.
Leath aer .i. tiri a clao ocur ar. Piarraire ino riu .i. piarraire inoraie aca pitechan cona dligtech do euair ipin fearann. Cuice do dliged, dianar be feineachar .i. maia roib riar dliged in pene-

¹ Food.—'tein' may also mean 'fire.'

² Doighin.—A somewhat different commentary is given in O'D., 413, as follows:—

"Doidhin, said Nin to her son, to Doidhin, that thou mayest know the good or pleasant knowledge of the possession-taking; or Doidhin was the name of the Brehon. She was a female 'Coarb;' and she obtains all her land with obligation to perform services of attack and defence for a time, and the half of it without obligation to perform service of attack and service of defence." "Ar a fearar" means either, "dost thou know," or "that thou mayst know."

If thou have not law, lawful possession is proper as a reward for thy working along with sleeping (staying overnight) with kindling with fire (kindling of fire) with dwelling, with watching of cattle, save for the land of Conn Cetcorach (² A.L. 65 + ZCP) or mutual concession (cf. Irish x 117) of land [and under] rent to a named It is by this entry that every ownership of land is enforced by the f.

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

21

be not 'Feinechus,' lawful possession is given; its price is to be offered with sheds, cows, food,¹ habitation, with attendance of cattle, except in the case of the land of Conn Cetcorach, or of land devoted to the support of a mansion which is a 'Nemeadh'-person's. It is by means of* this kind of entry every land is seized on by the Feini. ^{see the gloss} OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION. ^{* Ir. Out of.}

In an entry on land which has fences, it is not equally the property increases in 'seds'; it is decided if it be with kine he takes the possession, it is a 'cūmhal' that is mentioned. Unless it be in a lawful possession in a land without a chief, without a tribe, the cows which are brought are forfeited.

meet with Doighin² dost thou know, i.e. her son; said Nin to Doighin, that thou mayest know, or that thou mayest have pleasant or delightful knowledge of lawful possession-taking according to the Feinechus; i.e., Nin said this to Doighin, i.e., to a son of a wise man of the 'Ulta'. In thrice ten days, i.e., in three times ten days the legal right of possession is to be conceded, or it is after the three ten days it is required of him to bring all his cattle there. If thou consult wisdom, i.e., if thou consult thy own wisdom, or if thou confer with wise men, it is thus thou wilt do. From land of one 'cūmhal,' i.e., as I am treating of land from the land of the value of one 'cūmhal' to the land which is worth thirty 'cūmhals, and this is a case of "certainty for uncertainty," i.e., whether it is a land of the value of one 'cūmhal,' or a land of the value of thirty 'cūmhals,' it is one custom that is for the entry. It is one custom, i.e. the law of the possession is the same according to the pleasant or delightful knowledge. Though the length of the 'foirge'-measure should be doubled, i.e., though the doubling of the 'foirge'-measure should take place throughout, it is so it will be.

forrach

define indefinite

Two horses in hand, i.e., he is to have two horses, held by the bridles, in his hand until he reaches the border of the land, and it is not free for them to unharness them there, and if they be unharnessed at once in the land there will be a fine of five 'seds,' i.e., half the freedom of the land, or it is the old land half free, for eating its grass alone, but fully free is the land of which the grass and the corn are eaten; but the land is half free of which the grass or corn alone is eaten. Border, i.e., between the mound and the tillage. Worthy witness, i.e., pure witness to see that he entered lawfully into the land. That his legal right be ceded to him, if there be Feinechus, i.e., if the usage of the law level

In C. 849, the reading is as follows:—"Dodin, dost thou know the customs of a making entry on land? Ninè said these words to his son. A wise man of the Ultonians said so to his son, i.e., Dodin, to teach wisdom unto him; so that he said, Dodin, said he, dost thou know the customs of the making entry on land with the Feini? What law does he mention here? Answer, the law of cattle possession. Query, what is the right form of this law, &c.?"

To occupy separate enclosures of land. It is not the same way that it ^{is extended} enters. It shall be paid for with seds; if it be with harrowing cattle a cūmal of six of them is mentioned (laid down) if it be not according to true ownership he possesses land without head without affinity, forfeiture of the cattle which are brought there.

OF TAKING ^{LAWFUL POSSESSION.} [—] chaip do damtáin do, no bo coip oligeo do porba cuicéi don deámaro meonaro a haichli na cet deámaro. Muná be peineachap .i. mana roib riap oligeo in penechay do damtáin do. Tellair iarpuiriu, .i. tall ata leir duit iar aníada rin a meo roinno in 5 da deámaro, .i. a porba na deámaro meonóci ocur i nindatáe na deámaro deirénche. Ceithri heich .i. ceithri eich aipilnigay no oligay do bñith leir ino i porba na deámaro meonóci, .i. ipær roib a pcoir ipin pèrann annpoe, ocur noco pær romaino. Deige pèr 10 pìadan .i. deirí opearb ipin pìadnaye do bñeith leat .i. tpeirí. Rannata cormailir .i. urpantair cormailir na pìunoi accu, no in pìunoi acu co cormail. Tpeirpe do oligeo dia nora be peineachap .i. maoria roib riap oligeo in penechay do damtáin dait, robu coip oligeo do i porba tpeirí don deámaro deirénas, a haichli na deámaro meonóci, 15 ut puppa .i. amail ata romaino, ocur teit a narpin apaió, muna tairtar por fuilleo rriuf supub deámaro.

techt (-5)

Apao naile o minaoi, ocur teryur ip tir a poirceno na haoile, ocur anad re la iarpuiriu, ocur teet ip tir i poircenn na re la. Ir a hoet famlaid ocur anad ceitri la, teet anuno iarpuiriu ip aile dec famlaid dona.

20 Tellair iar puiriu, .i. tall ata leay dait in adub einóio na tri noeámaro. Ac noige anó deámaro, .i. i porba na deámaro deirénóci. Ocht neich aileay, .i. oet neich ipe ní aipilnigay no oligeo do bñeith leir co tpeib no ino in pèrann do coipitín. Tpeige pèr pìadan, .i. tpeirí opearb ipin pìadnaye do bñeith anó. Lat do gñadab peine, 25 .i. let do na gñadab uileo do pèir in penechay. Rannata cormailir .i. ut puppa. Tul puigeall, .i. maoria roib riap oligeo in penechay do damtáin duit tall, ata puigeall uili dait i porba na deámaro deirénóci. Munao be peineachap, .i. ut puppa. Teeta tuiníoe, .i. teetaigter tuiníoi in pèrann dait log bié ata pìrdechpian co oligec 30 pìr in pè rin. Co pèir, .i. co lazi roib ann, .i. co mbíuo coitlo. Conaoz, .i. in tpeirpèr. Co tein, .i. a harpiathad na ppeirí rin. Co naitpèir, .i. co tpeirí anait do tigib do denam roib. Co topuime .i. cethra do bñeith lat ino do coipitín. Acht tir cuino cecorais .i. ipe ceta puc trian díba a neipe, .i. in pèrann ar ar laepetup na coonais 35 a cet cupu ceillpíne .i. tir díbad coitcino, uair noco neicen apao teora noeámaro imepín, na techtugao do bñeith ino, acé a pino fo cetoir, no comapum do bñeith ino; acé in pèrann do bèrann ar óin no ar pocharic, ip ino bèrann in techtugao. No imtelgao mbroza, .i. dun cen pèilb no cell cen paitéi oc na bi bñug dia nimtelgao, .i. in pèrann ac na bi paitéi 40 no bñeith cethra ino da techtugao, amuil ata Dún Apanll, uair ip daine

1 Two male witnesses. In O'D. 414, the following is added:—"The honor price of each of whom is equal to the value of the land."

2 Three. 'Tpeirpe' is an underlined gloss apparently by the same hand as that which wrote 'deirpe' over the line.

3 Twelve days. This paragraph is found in the lower margin of col. 2, page 7, of the MS. E. 3, 5, in the hand of one Donnchadh, dated at Moin na caorp, 1542.

4 The land of Conn Cet-Corach.—In C. 851, this is explained "Tir piz, the land of a king." In O'D. 415, it is called the 'dibadh'-land of the 'daer-stock tenant,' and it is there added, "the force of 'acé' 'except' here is, it is not cattle that are brought of O'D. 1267

tallalat (wrong!)

cf Glossary s.v. spred

cf I 138-34

cf 28 13
infra

of the Feinechus be granted to him, the benefit of law should be given to him at the end of five days of the middle ten after the first ten. If there be not Feinechus, & c., i.e., if the usage of the Feinechus law has not been ceded to him. He returns after that, i.e., within thy welfare lies after that point of time, ~~from the division~~ in the middle division of the two tens, i.e., from the end of the middle ten and the beginning of the last ten days. Four horses, i.e., he is bound or obliged by law to bring four horses with him into it, at the end of the middle ten days, i.e., it is free for them to unharness them in the land in this case, and it is not free in the former instance.^a Two male witnesses,¹ i.e., to bring with thee two men to bear testimony, i.e., three.² There is a similar division, i.e. they divide what seems like the truth, or they have the truth to all appearance.^b In three days to be conceded to him, if the Feinechus be submitted to, i.e., if the custom of the law of the Feinechus be ceded to by thee, it is right to give him the benefit of the law at the end of three days of the last ten, after the middle ten, ut supra, i.e., as it is before, and the notice goes into the reckoning, unless it is given as an addition mentioned in the notice to it that it is ten days.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

^a Ir. Before us.

^b Ir. Similarly.

A notice of two days is given by a woman, and she comes into the land at the end of the two days, and there is a stay of six days after this, so that she enters upon the land at the expiration of the six days. It is thus eight days and a stay of four days, she goes over after this, it is thus twelve days.³

He returns after this, i.e., within the territory thy welfare lies concerning the full determination of the three ten days. At the end of ten, i.e., at the expiration of the last ten days. Eight horses he is obliged to have, i.e., eight horses is what he is bound or obliged by law to bring with him to the house or end of the land to regain it. Three men witnesses, i.e., three men as testimony to be brought thither. With thee of the Feini grade, i.e., with thee, of the grades which are according to the Feinechus. There is a similar division, i.e., ut supra. Speedy judgment, i.e., if the custom of the law of the Feinechus be ceded to thee, within the territory, every decision lies for thee at the end of the last ten days. If there be not Feinechus, i.e., ut supra. Lawful possession, i.e., the possession of the land becomes legal for thee when thou hast been legally viewing it during that time. With sheds, i.e., for their lying there, i.e., that they may sleep. With cows, i.e., the cattle. With food, i.e., the feeding of that cattle. With habitation, i.e., to erect a habitation of houses for them in which they may remain. With attendance, i.e., to bring cattle with thee into it for relief. Except the land of Conn Cetcorach,⁴ i.e., he was the first that obtained the third of the 'dibadh'-land in Eirin, i.e., the land on which the sensible adults sent their first obligations of tenancy, i.e., a common 'dibadh'-land, for a notice of three ten days is not necessary concerning it, or to bring requisites for taking possession into it, but it is to be divided at once, or equal stock is to be brought into it; but as to the land which is lent or let for rent, it is into it the requisites for taking possession are brought. Support of a mansion, i.e., a 'dun'-fort without land, or a church without a green, which has no mansion to support it, i.e., the land which has no green into which cattle might be brought to take possession of it, here to take possession of it, but persons, i.e., a 'dun'-fort without land, or a church without a green." 'Conn Cet-Corach,' appears to mean, "Conn of the first contract," i.e., who put the first contract, or engagement ('cor') upon the tenant.

help

in

in a place

- * 1. acht tir forsa mbe cis do flaith no ead 527 747
 * 2. cin coibdelugad ngrann a rind asenada C 852

OF TAKING
 LAWFUL
 POSSESSION. bepar da tectugadpíre. Hoch ír nemeat. .i. na in peranto ara 1r ar in teallach ro, .i. ír ar in techtugad ra toibgíter each perann í mbepar cethra da techtugad do peir in peneáir.

5 Cpuí tpe, .i. tellach ír in tpe im atait cpuí. Inaenain main .i. ni hinant mogaíur maine do neoch tellach i tpe co cpuib ocup i tpe cen cpuí. .i. noco noen inant lín do beir mogaíur maine ar per in perann in íc pet rúr in techtugad in perant co cpuib ime aici ocup cen cpuib ime, aét ír mo do bepar co cpuib ime aici; no noco naenain inant lín do beir 10 mogaíur ar in per bepar techtugad do bpeith mo co cpuib ech aici ocup cen cpuib ech, aét ír mo do bepar co cpuib ech aici. Maí la buair, .i.
 maí leir in buair do ní in as boir bepar in techtugad. Cumal a re rlainnter, .i. airneoter cumal re mbo a techtugad tpe cen cunn cen coibne. Munab ro reib, .i. man abar íre a perant bodem ro 15 techtugad, he, ír ann ata rin. Gen cunn, .i. cen cunn coibialurra.
 Gen coibne, .i. cen coibintear, .i. naem ocup ríren. Dlíri buair bepar, .i. dlíri in buair bepar ír in techtugad nínoligéa re tael na cumale romann.

110A 74b, 416f. 1. Cumal re mbo ro, ocup ír cumal ata rin a techtugad tpe 20 co cunn co coibne, no cío a techtugad tpe gen cunn gen coibne;
 no dono, ír cumal re mbo i techtugad tpe cen cunn cen coibne, ocup cumal tpe mbo ír in techtugad aílí.

Maí tapí lan íme do na luairlíb, ocup ír tpe gen cunn gen coibne, ír cumal ocup dlíri naíume. Maí ar leir íme, ír tpe 25 cethruimíte cumale ocup tpe cethruimíte na haíume. Maí gen íme ítpe, ír leir cumal ocup leir naíume. Airéam namia do compogail, anníu ro parórium, do na luairlíb, ocup leir cumal maí a cain.
 Maí tpe co chunn co coibne, ír dlíre na haíume co cumal tapí lan íme, tpe ceathruimíte tapí leir íme ocup leir cen íme ítpe; 30 ocup ír mann ata ro do ílíb ocup do naíulaib.

Maí aníur do naíob tpe co cunn, ír leir maí uat, no anníu tpe co chunn.

1 Which is a 'Nemheadh'-person's. The reading in C. 851, is "no cūr nemíto, or the rent of a Neimidh, i.e., land of which it is due."

2 With fences around it. 'cpu íme,' may mean also "a fence, which is a paling."

3 Of horses. The word 'ech' was not translated by Dr. O'Donovan: it is here rendered "horses," its meaning in modern Irish, a meaning also found frequently in the Brehon Laws—vid. C. 1,248, 1,990; O'D. 2,085. That horses were required for taking possession in some cases is evident from this and several other passages in the present tract.

such as Dun Araill, for it is persons that are brought to take possession of it. Which is a 'Nem head h'-person's,¹ i.e., or the land by which the rent of the 'Neimhedh'-person is truly secured to him, such as Tir Mugbain or Rot Admairi. It is by means of this entry, i.e., it is by this form of taking possession every land is taken possession of into which cattle are brought to legalize the possession according to the Feinechus.

Land which has fences, i.e., an entry on the land about which there are fences. It is not equally the property increases, i.e., it is not equally property increases for one who has made entry into a land with fences and into a land without fences, i.e., I do not deem that thing the same which brings increase of wealth to the owner of the land as to paying 'seds' to him for taking lawful possession of the land with fences around it² and a land without fences around it, but more is given for land with fences around it; or, I do not deem that the same which brings increase to the man who brings means of taking possession into it with cattle of horses and without cattle of horses,³ but it is more when he has cattle of horses. If it be with kine, i.e., if it be with cows he enters to take lawful possession. It is a 'cumhal' that is mentioned, i.e., a 'cumhal' worth six cows is mentioned as brought to take possession of a land without chief or tribe alliance. Unless it be in a lawful possession, i.e., if he says it is his own land that he has taken possession of, it is in that case this is so. Without a chief, i.e., without a chief of the same tribe. Without a tribe, i.e., without agreement, i.e., of saints and just men. The cows which are brought are forfeited, i.e., the cows which are brought as unlawful means of taking possession are forfeited, together with the 'cumhal' aforesaid.^a

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

That is, this is a 'cumhal' of the value of six cows, and this is equally given as the fine for taking possession of land which has^b a chief and a tribe, or for taking possession of land which has not^c a chief and a tribe; or, according to others, it is a 'cumhal' of the value of six cows for the taking possession of land which has not a chief and a tribe, and a 'cumhal' worth three cows for the other possession-taking.

^a Ir. Before us.

^b Ir. With.

^c Ir. Without.

If the nobles have entered^d over a full fence, and it is a land which has not a chief and a tribe, it (the fine) is a 'cumhal,' and forfeiture of stock. If they have entered over a half fence, it (the fine) is three-quarters of a 'cumhal,' and three-fourths of the stock. If they have entered on land which has not any fence at all, it (the fine) is half a 'cumhal,' and half the stock. The stock only is to be equally divided as we have said, by the plebeians, and half a 'cumhal' is the fine if it be in 'Cain'-law. If it be land that has a chief and a tribe, it (the penalty) is forfeiture of the stock with a 'cumhal' fine, if entrance be made over a full fence, three-quarters if over a half fence, and one-half if there be no fence at all; and this is the same with respect to plebeians and nobles.

^d Ir. For the nobles.

If it be unknown to him who entered that it was not a land that had a chief, it is half fine that is paid by him, or, as in land that had a chief.

^e Ir. For.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Sne aile : Mað tiri co cunn co coibne, dia mbed cpaí, ír cumal; muna bed ír let cumal, ocuif ír coitceann inórin itiri íreal ocuif uafal. Dia mbera aip aín for aipim teaéta do dainab ocuif eaéab ocuif buab, ír dífir uile có po los cumailé dia mbed cpaí.

5 Muna bed, ír let cumal. Mað ba beineaf ocuif eich óga, ocuif ír luga nað los cumailé, ír dífir na hairme do trocaire, dia mbed cpaí; muna bed, ír let dífir hairme ocuif cumal a etrocaire, dia mbed cpaí. Muna bed cpaí, ír let cumal.

Tiri cen cunn cen coibne, dia mbed cpaí, ír cumal ocuif dífir hairme do uairlib, ocuif let cumal ocuif let dífir hairme, muna bed cpaí. Mað do írlib co croab, ír lan dífir hairme. Muna bed cpaí, ír leith dífir hairme.

O'D 417. [Munup po feilb techtaid. = 20.7-8

1. Munup a richt a peruinio fein techtur i techtuga tpe cen 15 conn cin coibne, itiri cain ocuif uirruóur, .i. munup do raige feibá aét for eicín.

cf O'Dav 468

Tiri cen conn cen coibne, dífir buair berup.

1. Tiri cen cunn compialura rir, .i. lera, .i. pine, .i. cin coibnefta, aét tetnuir ocuif buirba, .i. dífir in buair beruif irin 20 techtugad ninnoligtech pe taob na cumailé romuinn, cið írlir cið uairlib, .i. ír díler in buair uile, .i. in tan ír tiri cin cunn cin coibne, ír dífir hairme ocuif na tpi feoit a narthgin in féoir: no dono, ír tpi feoit nama in tan na telcter tpi iar nberurcc co naé lair in tpi, ocuif ír los éaige po dera ainnrin:
25 in tan imurpo it dífir hairme ocuif na tpi feoit, ime ninnuic i roóuin: mað leth ime imurpo, ír let dífir hairme i roóuin.]

na kílge ar tóisi
O'D 747

¹ If there be cattle. Owing to the ambiguity of the term "cpaí," or "cpai," it is very difficult to decide in some instances whether it should be rendered "cattle" or "a fence."

² Are forfeited. After "berup" in the MS. the words "incur nechtá" follow. They were not translated by Dr. O'Donovan, and their meaning is very obscure.

Another version—If it be a land that has^a a chief and a tribe, and if there are cattle, it (the fine) is a 'cumhal'; if there be not cattle, it (the fine) is a half 'cumhal,' and this is common in this case both to plebeian and noble. Should he ~~seize in one day upon~~ a lawful number of people, and horses, and cows, they are all forfeit as far as the value of a 'cumhal' if there be cattle¹ on the land.

If there be not cattle, it (the fine) is half a 'cumhal.' If it be cows he brings, and he has horses, and it is less than the value of a 'cumhal,' the forfeiture of the stock is the leniency of the case, if there be cattle; if there be not, it (the penalty) is half forfeiture of the stock and a 'cumhal' in severity of law, if there be cattle. If there be not cattle, it (the penalty) is a half 'cumhal.'

In the case of land that has not^b a chief and a tribe, if there be cattle, it (the penalty) is a 'cumhal'-fine and forfeiture of stock by nobles, and a half 'cumhal' and forfeiture of half the stock, if there be not cattle. If the entry was made by plebeians with stock, it (the penalty) is full forfeiture of the stock. If there be not cattle, it is forfeiture of one-half the stock.

Unless it be into lawful land.

That is, unless it be on the supposition of its being his own land he brings his requisites for taking possession of land that has not^b a chief and a tribe, both in 'Cain'-law and in 'Urradhus'-law, i.e., unless he seizes land by force only.

In the case of land that has not a chief and a tribe, the kine which are brought thither are forfeited.²

That is, land which has not a head of a tribe, i.e., well-wishes, i.e., of the tribe, i.e., without relatives, but fierce and lawless people, i.e., the forfeiture of the kine which are brought to take unlawful possession, together with the 'cumhal' aforesaid, whether they (the people) be plebeians or nobles, i.e., all the kine are forfeited, i.e., when it is a land without a chief without a tribe, it (the penalty) is forfeiture of stock and the three 'seds' as compensation for the grass; or, according to others, it is three 'seds' only when three days are not allowed after the proof being had that the land is not his (the claimant's), and the price of theft is the cause of this; but when it is forfeiture of cattle and the three 'seds,' there was a perfect fence then; if, however, there was only half fence, it (the penalty) is forfeiture of one-half of the stock then.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

^a Ir. With.

^b Ir. Without.

when he is not effective within 3 days
4th 28.2

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Tuinnide raictaig a triun realba co döl no deporc.

Teilgeard ar treire, munab lair pobraio co tein co naictreib, co piaca raictö. Ite peich raictöe pír tellaig moligaig; clithear pet, plainöte popgu na nuile; digu pet romaïne, la cornam con deithbire pír bea hai grian.

|| 0' 747
C 1016, C 267

jobrug H

aulanaile H
na nuile C 267

I 128.25; V 244.17
IV 30.7

1. co ructhar brett imini
C 852
* 1. manip jobrug bess lais
C 852

Tuinnide raictaig .i. raitech archama methair .i. in tenduioi beup

in ti dapa tes in not irin perann co nice a trian, ocuf trocaire do ponat pur in a leuro co trian in peranno. Co döl .i. co dölro uat,

.i. co dölro ar. Ho deporc .i. co deirbceinöio a aipyme and. Teil-geard ar treire .i. teitgicir he ar ar treir manab lair bodem in deispeann rin, .i. iar mbreithemnaet. Pobraio, .i. bpus pui pae.

Co tein .i. co teinö do denam ann pur in pe rin. Co naictreib .i.

co treabais inat do tigib do denam ann pur in pe rin. Co piaca raictöe, .i. cor na piacais bit aici for a raictöe uat, da noerna moligeo teictaigti. Ite peich raictöe .i. ir iat ro na peid uilet uat ar a raictö da noerna moligeo techtaigti. Clithear pet, .i. cleithe ar pet .i. loilgech. Popgu na nuile .i. in pet ir pirogairi bir ac na huilib, in trianairc. Digu pet romaïne .i. in pet ir pirogairi romaïne ann .i. daptaro da perepall. La cornam co deithbire .i. don raitech .i. la deithbire aici da cornam an peranno don pír bea hai he

.i. techtugad tpe cen cunn cen coibni rin, ocuf do éuaro nif irat na co nice trian in peranno. Pír bea hai grian .i. don pír bea ai in grian do beap na peich ro uile.

(C 1270)

if 22.32
supra

4 V 392.14

1. Ite aithne in raictaig; duine lair po bai pechtair fine amunich coitrapara, ocuf ni piroi nae raibi perann aige, ocuf tic

1 'Raitech' -person. That is literally 'a roadman.'

2 On the point. In C. 851, the gloss is "co döl .i. co. ructar brett imini, until judgment, i.e. until sentence is given respecting it."

3 Good land. Over the 'o' of the word 'pobraio' is written the contraction for 'no' 'or,' and 'g' intimating that the last letter might be g.

4 Under him. This gloss in the MS. seems rather to belong to the preceding clause. Dr. O'Donovan however placed it as here given.

5 The best sed: 'clithear pet' is explained in C. 852, ".i. lauigac, no daun timcella apatair, no buo mlaoge, a milch cow, a ploughing ox, or an incalf cow."

6 Had not land. O'D., 418, adds here: "he is to give notice of ten days, and to go with all his property over to the land at the expiration of those ten days; and as there are 2 cases: a) If the roadster has wittingly taken possession of land which is not his he must pay a clithar sit, b) if he has occupied land which he believes to be his & can only make an 'excusable' case, he need only pay the worst sed (Early declaration ^{in person of} bona fides!)

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

29

The possession of a 'raitech'-person¹ in the third of the land ^{holds} until judgment or decision is had. He is ejected after three days, unless he has good land with fire and habitation, with fines of a green. These are the fines of a green to be paid by the man who makes an unlawful entry: a 'sed' of the greatest value, styled the choicest of all 'seds'; the worst 'sed' for profits, with the costs of the necessary defence of the man whose property the ground is.

The possession of a 'raitech'-person, i.e. a 'raitech'-person suing lost property, i.e. the bold advance which a man whose house the road is, makes into the land until he reaches the third part of it, and it is mercy that has been extended to him in permitting him to enter as far as the third of the land. Until judgment, i.e. until judgment is given respecting him, i.e., until judgment is given on the point.² Or decision, i.e. a certain decision of his residence there. Ejected after three days, i.e. he is cast out after three days unless that good land belongs to himself, i.e. after judgment. Good land,³ i.e. the land which is under him.⁴ With fire, i.e. together with fire which has been made there during that time. And habitation, i.e. with habitations in place of houses which have been built there during that time. With fines of a green, i.e. with the fines which he has on his green to be paid by him, if he has made an illegal entry. These are the fines of a green, i.e. these are the fines which are recovered from him out of the green if he has made an illegal entry. The best 'sed,'⁵ i.e. the best among 'seds,' i.e. a milch cow. The choicest of all, i.e. the 'séd' which is most to be chosen by all, i.e. the 'samhaise'-heifer. The worst 'sed' for profits, i.e. the 'sed' which is least to be chosen for profits, i.e. the 'dartaidd'-heifer worth⁶ two screpalls. ^{a Ir. Of.} With the necessary defence, i.e. to be paid by the 'raitech'-person, i.e. he, the man whose property it is, is under the necessity of contesting the land against him (the 'raitech'-person), i.e. taking possession of land that had not^b a chief that had not^b a tribe, and he went farther than as far as the third part of the land. The man whose property the ground is, i.e. to the man whose property the ground is all these fines are given. ^{b Ir. With-out.}

Thus may the 'raitech'-person be known; a man who was up to this (the time of the action) abroad, living apart from the tribe, and who does not know that he had not land,⁸ and he comes with mercy is shown unto him at his going over, so mercy is likewise shown unto him by giving him three days for departing, when it is determined that the land is not his property according to law, and whatever part of his duty he neglects, there is no fine for actual-possession upon him, except these 'seds,' namely, an incalf cow, a milch cow, and a 'dartaidd'-heifer * * *

When it is cattle for taking possession the 'raitech'-person brings, mercy is extended unto him in permitting him to enter as far as the third of the land the first day; and when it the penalty) is a 'cumbal' and forfeiture of stock from another for

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

I 122.15, 128.25

King Set of Coom 209

in the case of contending with excusability (against?) the man whose land it may be.

storing control paper!

a Ir. Of.

b Ir. With-out.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

co na hindaib, ocuf adberad na comaidais ir lair in tir, co nabair breithe a dul co trian in fepaio. Do ocuf ramire ocuf dairtais irred icard a los a rogealta in tīre; ocuf teitgaid ar treiri iar ngaid eir a cirt; ocuf ir tir co coibne do, ar ir dois 5 lair ir lair; maō tir co coibne imurro, ir dīlri nairme, amuil ropaioium.

en is translated!

*asgnai methus C993
asgnai a methus O'227*

//C993-4

(O'21271)

Altat tri naitais ann; naitach arcnamza meathur, ocuf naitaō deirge a meathur, ocuf naitaō rīg; ocuf ir aīre a dēnā naitaō rēf in rī, uair ir leir a cur rīdē a roit, ocuf ar a 6 coitinnō. In tan ir athgabail ar ail do gabail do na naitaōaib, genmota in rīg, abad nair ar in naitach graid flatha, ocuf abad naen le ar in naitaō graid rēne, ut ruppā dīamur.

In tan ir dīear an aīrim o caē, ir tri rēit o na naitaōaib.
A eōtrocāire rīn; a tīrocāire immurro, inī dē ar lūga, dīlri na
7 hāirne no trī rēit, co nabeat bēf uadā. No, tri rēit o na naitaōaib, ocuf dīlri an aīrme o caē a teētugad co trian rēalba. 7 dīlri nairme o chach C994

O'D. 419. [Slan don naitach cia tēf co trian na rēalba a tīr co conō co coibne, cen co tucca apad, uair nach tā tīr dia fūlung rīr nē 20 napuō; tri rēit rāir dia tē nī ir rīa, no dia tairurī ēall tar treiri iar nōitēn dīgīdō dō. Ocuf ir tar ēro, ocuf ir lēth muna bēf cīrī.

Ma tīr cen conō cen coibne, ir dīlri nairme uad amuil ēach:
no dono, in gīem gāuitt na tri rēit rīn cumuil rē gīem 25 gāur a aīrēmōm i nāirēm. No dono, in bāil ir dīlri a aīrēm o ēach ir tri rēit on naitach. A eōtrocāire, a tīrocāire immurro, unlawful possession-taking it is three 'seds' that are paid by the 'raitech'-persons; or rather the proportion which the three 'seds' bears to the 'cumhal' is the same proportion which his stock bears to the stock of all others. Or, indeed, according to others, when it (the penalty) is forfeiture of stock from all others, it is three seds from the 'raitech'-persons; this is the severity of the case, but its clemency is his cattle, and his neighbours say the land is his, and judges tell him to go as far as the third of the land. He shall pay a cow and a 'samhaisé'-heifer and a 'dartaigh'-heifer as the price for grazing the land; and he shall be ejected after three days after failing to establish his claim; and it is a land to which he thinks he has a hereditary right,¹ for he thinks it is his; but if it be a land to which he has not a hereditary right it is forfeiture of stock², as we have said before.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

There are three sorts of 'raitech'-persons; a 'raitech'-person who gets into failure, and a 'raitech'-person who deserts at failure, and the king 'raitech'; and the reason that the king is called 'raitech' is because he owns his share of waifs of his road, and also from his generosity. When it is distress it is thought fit to take from the 'raitech'-persons, except the king, a notice of two days is served on the 'raitech'-person of the chieftain grade, and a notice of one day on the 'raitech'-person of the Feini grade, ut supra diximus.

When the stock is forfeited by all others, it is three 'seds' that are paid by the 'raitech'-persons. This is the severity of the case; but the leniency of it is, the part of it which is less, the forfeiture of the stock, or three 'seds,' it is it he shall pay. Or, according to others, three 'seds' are due from the 'raitech'-persons, and forfeiture of the stock from all others for having come to take possession as far as the third of the land.

It is safe for the 'raitech'-person though he goes as far as the third of the land in a territory that has^a a chief and a tribe, even though he may not have given notice, because the land is not supporting him during the period of the notice; there are three 'seds' fine upon him if he goes farther, or if he remains within beyond three days after attending to the requirements of law. And this is when he goes over a fence, and it (the fine) is one-half of three 'seds' if there be no fence.

^a Ir. With.

*he has not time to support
law being conceded to him*

If it be a land that has not a^b chief and a tribe, it is forfeiture of stock that is incurred by him as by everyone else; or, according to others, the proportion which the three 'seds' bear to the 'cumhal' is the proportion which his stock bears to the stock of all. Or, according to others, where the stock is forfeited by everyone else it is three 'seds' that are recovered from the 'raitech'-person. This is the severity of the case, but its clemency is the

^b Ir. Without.

that part of it which is less, the forfeiture of stock, or three 'seds,' is due from the 'raitech'-person for coming as far as one-third of the land, and forfeiture of the stock^c from all others."

¹ Hereditary right.—'Coibhne,' seems here to mean a right to the land by descent.

² Stock.—The stock necessary in making a legal entry.

C853. cumrech nich (3) etector 7ⁿⁱ bit cuir bel ind, no cia beth a chuir bel and dā .f. maine elad co indliglech, ni cōis a cumrech. (i.e. takes cumrech for conrōg)³

OF TAKING in tí de ír luḡa .i. dírlí náiríne; no, ná tṛí reoit; no dono, ít tṛí
 LAWFUL
 POSSESSION, reoit o raitec i tect co tṛian realba, ocuṛ dírlí náiríne ó các.]

= i seagat but Note n-frequently before 5
 in 03

[u] advb.

Atait teopa aimpepa inpreazair éidechta la peme :
 athgabail éidechta; tellach inolígtech, compus gen cupu bel, no gan éloó cu nolíged. So tuaithe, so bpeitheamān nāo beir pīacha cach ae.

i n sedat .f. in auidi C852
 Atait teopa aimpepa .i. am, ne, ocuṛ fīr pūcain; atait teopa ne pūcaine i nīnōpāigenn neē ní ír inolígtec do venam do reir in peneāchair. Athgabail .i. cuic reoit inoe. Tellach inolígtech .i.
 10 techtugad inolígtech do bṛith írīn repand .i. ba tap eir eoēu, ocuṛ no geba eoēu .i. cumal, no dírlí buair, no tṛí reoit ino. Compus gen cupu bel .i. compus do tṛíu do for nech cen tṛebuire co coir o belair aici ne aprec no ne olectin do in neic imarocair. No gan éloó .i.
 no can éloó do lecoo im a cān olíged, .i. apair nā tṛioirí ce do decharo 15 fīr. So tuaithe .i. ír so do tuaithe .i. nā moir tuaithe, ocuṛ don bpeitheamān nā beira eiric im các nāe im các nogae díb írīn, ero be díb cup a noirter. §V 476.18

tosach bescna so.

11# IV 270.11f
 of C1979

In tí do beir nā techta reilb/ar e do pon co pīacair = ren taige. In tí cṛeanar cen teol gen taigi, co nglaine cuibre, 20 díleair doṛuīde o díā ocuṛ duíne; díam pīan a cubur dío pīan a anum.

Eimíde dono díanad forgealltar, ara pēreap coir

¹ The third of land.—C. 852 reads, “i.e. the ninth, i.e. the third of the third of the tribe: he does not enter into the share of the chief or the church.”
² Forfeiture of stock.—The ‘airem’ is the stock of cattle brought into land to legalize the possession.
³ The beginning of ‘Bescna’ here.—In the MS. there seems to be no break between this passage and that immediately preceding, but on the margin the Irish for this heading is given. In other places in the same MS. similar marginal notes are found, where the original seems to be a continuous subject.
⁴ Right of covenants.—In C. 853, there is a gloss on this text, and it is

^{1) read as co nindlytech (so H²) or cundlyid 'without absconding fr. a mutual obligation'} (so gloss).

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

33

smaller of these, i.e. forfeiture of stock, or the three 'seds'; or, according to others, it is three 'seds' from a 'raitech'-person, for illegally coming as far as the third of the land,¹ and forfeiture of stock² from all others.

There are three occasions on which ^{it is said in an improper way} illegalities are prosecuted by the Feini: unlawful distress; illegal entry; combat without verbal ^{agreement} engagements, or ^{without absconding} departing according to law.³ ^{unlawfully} It is falsehood for the ^{truth} laity, it is falsehood for the judge who does not award fines for each.

There are three occasions, i.e. 'am', time, and 'sir' fixed; there are three fixed periods at which one sues the thing which is unlawful to do according to the Feinechus. Distress, i.e. five 'seds' are the fine for it. Illegal entry, i.e. to bring illegal means of taking possession into the land, i.e. cows after horses, when he could find horses, i.e. the fine for it is a 'cumhal,' or forfeiture of stock, or three 'seds.' Combat without verbal engagements, i.e. to proclaim a battle against^a one without proper security by word of mouth for restoring or righting the thing about which he gives the challenge. Or not departing, i.e. or without departure from the rule of law, i.e. warning or fasting though he was fairly met^b by an offer of arbitration. Falsehood for the laity, i.e. it is a lie for the country, i.e. the great territory, and for the judge who does not award 'eric'-fine for each and every one of these cases, whichever of them they come to decide upon.

^a Ir. Upon.

^b Ir. Though he was come against.

THE BEGINNING OF 'BESCNA' HERE.³ (^{"schon in alter zeit an den Text sin rechtzuegel"}) angehängter Abschnitt Buch p. 5

He who gives property which is not lawfully his own shall pay the fines for stealing. As to the person who buys without stealing or concealment, with purity of conscience, it (what he buys) is his lawful property according to God and man; if his conscience be free, his soul is free.

Thou deservest whatever is adjudged; that thou mayest know the right of covenants;⁴ that thou said that "apu pepen conu commatmann" was spoken by Fergus, the poet, as equally applicable for every Brehon.

VOL. IV.

D

^{diandat-} Observe (?), if thou has been made arbitrator,
(pf. pr. subj. of fo. gella)

|| C 853-4

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

comnaðma, ara puice fir píream raiste raer, raigad
in nunnisail coir C 853
in mearam cor comadair cach dhaircortear ara taebtanair; ar ní reatdar nað arisigear la peine do grier, daig píne ocur firgiall na maithri oilear; ar ate a tri ro puigto do impothais cor.

= imfochaid?

(mb-fo-saig)

not mb-fo-fich!

-main a g.i MS.
q. 20.7

1 In ti do beir na techta reibb, .i. in ti do beir ní do neoch, ocur noco na reibb bodéin techtur, aét o reibb gairi in gairde. Ar e do pon co riacaib, .i. ipe icur lie co riacaib gairi. In ti cneanar, .i.
in ti cennaise. Cen teol, .i. cen gairi .i. cen teol, toiblenann a gairi bunaro po ceton. Sen taigi, .i. cen vicelt, .i. vicelt a gairi iardain.
Co nglaine cuibre, .i. tri plan, gairter punn(a) in ret, no dia mbe trebuid, .i. cen eneclainn, cen rmaet cen aithgin maní tairpiter O dia, .i. na heclairi. Ocur duine, .i. na tuaiti. Diam plan a cubur, .i. can fir cubur bhraith aei.

ko!

(O's 1273)

15 Eimide dono, .i. poimdenas, no uppoichli ma dia tairtar a puigell do breithemnar. Ara reirear, .i. co reirear, no co roib a fir acut orugas na cuma narcarpetta do reir cor. Arpuice fir, .i. cor-ab e ni beira do neech dul a narcarpett ir oir do dul no los enech.
Píream raiste raer, .i. ir fir lim raigto a hinoraigti rin por na porarib; no ipreó irar oit dul fir los énech. In mearam, .i. ipe ní no meirennaise a hinre oib dul fir in ni po cotáirpigeo do réir cor, dul no losan enech. Anaircortear, .i. ipe ní ponarcear in cad rin ar in taeb no hucirce do dul, tair cenn a comgair. Ar ní reatdar, .i. uair no con inoraigti do neoch dogner do reir in penear in ní nar epaluaigeo do dul, no ní ip mo na re los enech. Daig píne, 25 .i. tiepar in fine po corab, uair ip michor do dul no ní ip mo na re los a enech, .i. ma mo na los a eneé, tairmug píne ocur maithre ocur plaeta.
Ocur firgiall na, .i. na firganarain giall no in ceillpime .i. na platha tiepar po corab. Ma maithri, .i. ip uillro in tpear no píne mathar, ac tairdeet po corab. Ar ate a tri, .i. ar ip iato in tpeir 30 no rmarigeo no ho rmarigeo demparcear na cor ninnoliged do dona nech. Mara inreidbir no nuc uar, no ní puigbeo cia no gell, ní gabar los uar mo itir. In tan narpetter in piac, ocur ip ois lair posebar, no no nuc deridbir uar, a los do ic mo.

l. dianad ada

= 38. 4f.

¹ Firgiall. — In C. 854, this term is glossed "ced-giallnai."

² The third. — In C. 854, "oltres" is explained "a maithre quod tertium est." The translation here given of the term is only conjectural; the text appears defective, and the gloss seems to be a mere etymological analysis of the word 'oilear.'

mayest reach the truth, thou shalt sue the nobles, ^{OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.} thou shalt sue for what is estimated in a meet covenant from all who are bound as sureties for their neighbours; for no one ^{can be sued who cannot be found} ~~ever sues for more than is allowed him as honor-price~~ by the Feini, for the tribe and the 'Fir-giallna,' ^{C.} and the mother's tribe shall interfere; for these are the three parties who are appointed to dissolve covenants.

He who gives property which is not lawfully his own, i.e. the person who gives a thing to any one which was not lawfully in his own possession, but in the possession of the thief by theft. Shall pay the fines, i.e. it is he shall pay for it with fines for stealing besides. Who buys, i.e. he who purchases. Without stealing, i.e. without thievery, i.e. without secrecy, i.e. ~~who produces, (i.e. discloses)~~ the original theft at once. Without concealment, i.e. without secrecy, i.e. concealing the theft afterwards. With purity of conscience, i.e. three sureties, ~~he~~ he takes here the 'sed,' or if there be security, i.e. without honor-price, without 'smacht'-fine, without compensation, unless he has taken it. God, i.e. of the church. And man, i.e. the laity. If his conscience be free, i.e. having no knowledge of a betraying conscience.

~~Thou deservest~~, i.e. thou meritest or thou earnest if they have come to the decision of the judgment. That thou mayest know, i.e. that thou mayest know, or have a knowledge of the order or form of covenants according to justice. That thou mayest reach the truth, i.e. that it is the thing which gives one the right to enter into covenant that should go as his honor-price. Thou shalt sue, i.e. I deem it true that thou followest up thy suit upon the goodly men; or what is free to thee is to go security as far as thy honor-price. What is estimated, i.e. the thing that was estimated originally for them is to go security for^a the thing which was fixed according to right, i.e. to go surety as far as his honor-price. Are bound, i.e. that is what all bind on the person who was permitted to go surety for his equal grade. For no one ever sues, i.e. for no one is to sue at any time according to the Feinechus for a thing which is not permitted him to go security for, i.e. for anything which is greater than his honor-price. For the tribe, i.e. the tribe shall impugn^b the compacts, for it is a false covenant for him to go security for anything which is greater than his honor-price, i.e. if it be greater than his honor-price, the tribe and mothers and chiefs dissolve it (the contract). And 'Fir-giallna', i.e. the men to whom is due the service or the vassalage, i.e. the chiefs shall oppose the compacts. The mother's^a, i.e. the third^a party are more numerous, i.e. the mother's tribe impugning^a the compacts. For these are the three, i.e. for these are the three who were appointed or ordained to disturb the unlawful contracts which one shall make. If it was without necessity he gave a thing away, or he does not procure a thing though he promised, no price is got from him for it at all. When the debt is fastened, and he thinks he will get it, or he gave it away of necessity, its price is paid then.

they be found?

take heed or beware

Y

^a Ir. To go with.

^b Ir. Come against.

^a Ir. Coming against.

O'D 420, 684

O'Dav. 1259.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

C 959

O'Dav. 1567

O'Dav. 1505

1389

* Ní naíř uma na hairgead na hop, aét *por mal; ¹ ní naíř buair ba chindia por neach lair na diao ba; ní naíř tior por imrimach, munaíř fotha realb; ní naíř eodach por nach noch, munaíř topma tlaét; íre gnethe 5 cen topad do gni no coll bñeth. Ite mearra ad gella a cumung do caé.

(O'D 1274)

| Ní naíř, .i. ní no ponaircú in airgead no in op no in uma aét por in nuair, uair ír aice bo doig a mbíth, no íre bo doich da pagbail. Ní naíř buair, .i. ní no ponaircú buair ainiú in mbuair do beirad ba 10 chindia cennadóe lair tairp ar in tí ac na biat ba, no na baó cuimgeé a pagbail co hupura. Ní naíř tior, .i. ní no ponaircú perann por in tí bñ por imrima a maó dínad, manaíř fothaíre perann aic, no manaíř perann aic da fothuagad. Por imrimach, .i. por poen-tlegach. Ní naíř eodach, .i. ní no ponaircú etach por in duine bñ 15 lomnaét, manaíř etach aice da toiruthín. Munaíř topma tlaét,
.i. maní toir etach co héim. Íre gnethe cen topad, .i. íre ní ata do per no ciallaíre na mbñeth; amuil ír etairbach gnet na cno raíř cen topad aic, ír amlaíř ír etairbach na neiche rín do denam. Ite mearra ad gella, .i. íre ní no meirinnairgead do gella do caé in ní 20 íma cumtar he inigill, in ní biar aice .i. írreó meirairgead bñethem a cumad do gill do caé.

seems to gl. toraimor im-homa?m. y. m. s.
= i. m. y.?

for reith O'D 420

.1. mar da ríř no da anrír .i. ríř ac feicheamain toicheoda, ocur
rír ac trebair, no anrír ac feicheamain toiceoda na rabadar na reilb na feoit notíngella ann, ír por raíř aqra anarira.
25 Marra anrír ac feicheamain toicheoda ocur ríř ac trebair, arfrenar dour arlicetep.

O'D. 420.

[.1. caé ríac in gellur duine ocur bró ma íaróbre, no ír doig lair a pagail o neoch cile, ocur dia tí deóbñ, no do mbeir uad iar rín, ír ann ír feiret aqra anarira, aét into caé do innlínhe.

V 420. 27 ff

30 Caé ríach in gellur na bró ma íaróbre, no naé doig lair a pagail, ír éiric amuil no gell .i. in tan na bí i reilb in feicheamain

¹ Cinnia, the merchant. In C. 854, the reading is buair baé Cinnia, and the gloss adds "Cinnia, for he was the first who brought cows into Erin."

² Blind nut. "enríře" is the reading in C. 854, and it is glossed "cnu caeé, ^x inrumach = carbāt ar inram III 142. 13 f. ?

Thou shalt not bind anyone to pay in copper, or silver, or gold, but a chief; thou shalt not bind anyone to pay in kine like those of Cinnia, who has not kine; thou shalt not bind anyone to pay in land, who is wandering, unless he possesses land; thou shalt not bind a naked person to pay in clothes, unless he has got raiment; it is as a nut without fruit to adjudicate in this manner. The promises of all should be adjusted to their ability.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

supports him

40 Bar 1389

4 I 154. 11

40 Bar 1389

Thou shalt not bind, i.e. thou shalt not impose the payment of silver, or gold, or copper, except upon the noble, for it is with him they are likely to be, or it is he that is likely to get them. Thou shalt not bind, &c., kine, i.e. thou shalt not impose the payment of kine like the kine which Cinnia the merchant¹ used to bring across with him, upon the person who has not got kine, or who cannot easily procure them. Thou shalt not bind land, i.e. thou shalt not fasten payment in land upon the person who is moving from place to place, unless it is found that he has land, or unless he has land to support him. Who is wandering, i.e. upon a wanderer. Thou shalt not bind clothes, i.e. thou shalt not bind payment in raiment upon the man who is bare naked, unless he has clothes to relieve him. Unless he has got raiment, i.e. unless he finds clothes quickly. It is as a nut without fruit, i.e. it is a thing which is according to the wisdom of judgments; as the shell of the blind nut² without fruit is profitless, it is likewise profitless to do these things. The promises should be adjusted, i.e. the thing by which the promises of all are to be estimated is the thing by which he is kept to his promise, i.e. the thing which he has, i.e. the Brehon estimates every one's promise by his power to fulfil it.

If by his knowledge, or by his ignorance, i.e. if the plaintiff have knowledge, and the surety have knowledge, or the plaintiff have not knowledge that the 'seds' which he promised on the occasion were not in his possession, it is upon the security of 'arra'-goods for 'anarra'-goods.³ If the plaintiff be ignorant, and the surety has knowledge of the fact, the thing which is pledged is paid.

4. III 152. 2. 17 (Pl.)

the rule is crenat, odar, airbheith

That is, every debt which a man promises when he is in his rich condition, or he thinks he will get it from another, and if necessity should arise, or if it should be afterwards taken from him, it is then it falls under "arra'-goods for 'anarra'-goods."

In every case of debt which one promises who is not in a rich condition, or which he does not expect to get, the 'eric'-fine is as he a blind nut; for it is of no profit to him who breaks it. It is so with a person who binds upon one a thing which he has not. For no one should promise a thing which he has not."

³ 'Anarru'-goods. Vid. vol. 3, p. 150, n. 'Arra' means the thing promised or a similar one, 'Anarra,' a different thing, as e.g. a 'cup' instead of a 'cow.'

cf. Bank p. 40

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION. ocur nochá doig a fásail do, ocur no fítip in naít, a ícc amuil no nárcair fear co lor ocur ar.

Maó no bui aige in tan do rinne in cunnraó, ocur do éuaó fíu deóbiruif, íf fopet árua anarua, .i. in tan nárceper in = 34, 32ff fíac, ocur íf doig laif foóebíó, no no nuc deóbiruif uaó, a loó oia chinó.

Maí inódeóbiruif nuc uaó, no ní fuigbeó cia no zell, ní zabur loó uaó inn ítip].

for the following 10 pages

see ELL pp.

In longad bandtaig bancora a coibne coir comaróda,
10 ara nairc fínnrpuith fíndtíga [manip re rei mbera.]
Do berp bpi ar bancora. Orba maíne mer coirce
o ta cach cínó compocair; fo lin maíne mórdear o ta híndua co híarpuia, inge cumal renorba; fo miao grian genithep. Fínnriu for cul cumáithep; tpenib fine 15 foglaigítear; gabul apta echtranda; maó dī cuicte torpola. Imta fíu cín compocair, maó don tellach depechtach; acht ceathruime do fíndpíne. O recht dec deilithear co nach duthaig do fíne. Fíuider ní beip cín compocair, muna cuic treaba toirdeanaódaí. Ma 20 cuic treabaí complanaí conpandaí a fínnteaóda.

see MS.; perhaps maó cuicte formolad ?

In longad bandtaig .i. eilígí a mic ocur a níngena in ní for ar
ápat cupu a maithpe, .i. inéilígíter na mna techtugad do breith íf

¹ 'Coibne'-property, vid. p. 31. Supra, n. 1.

² Unless he be the sixth. This clause in the Irish is supplied from the lower margin of the first column, in E. 3, 5, p. 9.

³ Bind. In the MS. the letters a and l of 'ápat' are marked in a way which seems to denote that they should be transposed.

promised, that is, when it is not in the possession of the debtor, and it is not likely to be got by him, and the security knew it, it is to be paid as it was bound upon him, with addition and increase. OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

If he had it (the property) when he made the contract, and it passed away from him by necessity, it (the case), is according to "~~'arra'-goods for 'anarra'-goods~~;" i.e., when the debt is fastened, and he thinks that he will procure it (the thing promised), or necessity has carried it from him, he is forgiven the value. "and keps arra" (86)

If it be not necessity that carried it away from him, or he cannot procure it though he promised, no value is taken from him for it at all.

Heirs of females claim on rightful covenants of equal value made with a female ancestor, relative to 'coibne'-property' for the fair-chief of the tribe confirms the subject matter, unless he be the sixth.² Brigh pronounced judgment on female covenants. Lands are estimated by their stock from every related head; they are estimated according to the amount of their property from the great-grandson to the great great-grandson, except in regard to the 'cumhal senorba'; according to the size of the land it (the 'cumhal-senorba') is produced. The tribe property is claimed backwards; it is divided between three tribes; an extern branch stops it, if the five persons of the 'Geilfine'-division perish. Except as regards the liability of relationship, if the family become extinct; except a fourth part to the 'Findfine.' From seventeen men out it is decided that they are not a tribe-community. The 'fuidhir'-tenant does not bear the liability of relationship, unless there be five houses to relieve each other. If there be five houses with complete stock, they share the property of the tribe. cf. BCF p. 70 Pl. V. 112

Heirs of females claim, i.e. their sons and their daughters claim the thing which the contracts of their mothers bind,³ i.e. the women claim to bring means

OF TAKING in fearann ar ar laeret na mna aili a rir éuru. C coibne coir LAWFUL comarba .i. amlaó no coibnóigeo a comarbugad for coraib do POSSESSION. rair éoir. Ara nairc rinnrruth .i. ir e in rruir tairnemach bir,
.i. platai geilpini ire ponairceir in trian mara orba cruib no rliarta she, no ire ponairceir in fearann uile mara fearann tucad. Manir re rei mbeia. i. manar e in réireó per ir é beup in díab .i. manab e in réireó per deó a geilpíne, in deirbpine ponairceir coimzi an geilpíne, aét neó do cuicper na geilpíne. Do beir é buri ar bancora .i. tel-lachino .i. do bneithmnaigeo do buri in fearann ar ar laeret na mna aile 10 a rir éura. Orba maíne meir coirce .i. in fearann ar ar meirer corach a mair a mathair, no mair a mathair, .i. Maer ingen Coúeas Caibneg .i. ruz eirno.

.i. Orba cruib ocu rliarta na mathair runn, ocu díbugad no díbaigi in mathair, ocu ní fuilic níe aét ingean na ma.
15 Ocu bearaó in ingean in fearann uili co ruba ocu co ruba, no a lét gan ruba gan ruba; ocu coimre fuirpe re aieac uate iarr na re.

O ta each cruib comfocair .i. o ta aineir tam do díabó each cruib tam comfoirceir in fearann; in geilpíne uili no díbóano, acur in fearann 20 uile do bneith don ingin a dualgur bancomarba; no o ta aineir tam do díabó in cruib tam comfoirceir in fearann, in ingin, ir ann comnoimóir in fearann fo na teora ríuib. Fo lín maíne .i. meirer-naigeir maíne in fearann fo imat na pine iarr noibó na híngíne. O ta hínoia .i. na geilpíne .i. ir iat no díbóano, no ir iat comnoimóir 25 in fearann. Co híarpuia, .i. na deirbpine. Inge cumal renorba
.i. ingi ar aét, ata aét lín ano, aét in cumal renarceir don orba rann, l. sainigheir?
reétiat tpe díbóano, ocu a bith reic a lami platai geilpíne ac urruaroi

¹ Of equal value.—In C. 854—the following explanation is given: “Comarba,
.i. dicunt alii ‘comorbe,’ i.e. the thing which was in the possession of the mother is what the daughter claims, or the thing which the mother gives and bequeaths to her.”

² The fair chief of the tribe confirms.—In C. 855—the following reading of this gloss is given. “Cúitper ar nairc, rinnrruth, i.e. the ‘Finnsruth Feinechuis,’ of the ‘Geilfine’-division, are as the five brothers, like as the five fingers of the hand, each of them obtains the ‘dibadh’-land of the other.

For it binds, i.e. no one shall take unto himself to make up the ‘Geilfine’- division any one of his tribe in general, although there should be but one man of the five brothers alive except himself, i.e. the son of the man who has the ‘dibadh’- land shall not obtain it, i.e. he is the sixth in relation to the five; he shall not alone obtain the ‘dibadh’-land which his father holds, but the sons of his brothers shall share it with him, but it shall be divided among all after the death of the man who obtains the lands of his extinct brother. The ‘dibadh’-land of the deceased shall be shared by the sons of his other brothers, for the right to it of taking possession into the land about which the other women made true contracts. OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION. Rightful covenants of equal value¹ relative to 'coibne'-property, &c., i.e. according as it was stipulated that it shall be adjusted by compacts according to justice. The fair chief of the tribe confirms,² i.e. it is the pleasant senior, i.e. the chief of the 'geilfine'-division is he that confirms the one-third, if it be 'cruibh'-land or 'sliasta'-land, or it is he that confirms all the land, if it be land that was given. Unless he be the sixth, i.e. unless he be the sixth man, it is he that will obtain the 'dibadh'-land, i.e. unless he be the sixteenth (sic) man removed from the 'geilfine'-division, it is not the 'deirbhfine'-division shall confirm the power of the 'geilfine'-division, but one of the five men of the 'geilfine'-division. Brigh pronounced on female covenants, i.e. there was an entry in the case, i.e. judgment was passed by Brigh touching the land about which the other women made their true contracts. Lands are estimated, i.e. the land about which contract was made by her mother Main, or her mother was Maer, i.e. Maer, the daughter of Cobhthach Caelbreg, i.e. King of Erin.

The 'cruidh' and 'sliasta'-land of the mother is here referred to, and the mother had died and left no sons, and there are no sons, but daughters only. And the daughters shall obtain all the land with obligation to perform service of attack and defence, or the half of it without obligation to perform service of attack and defence; and there is power over them to compel them to restore the land after their time.³

From every related head, i.e. as I am about to tell concerning the 'dibadh'-land of each chief to whom the land belonged; all the 'geilfine'-division here became extinct, and all the land is obtained by the daughter in right of her female 'coarb'-ship; or as I have to tell concerning the 'dibadh'-land of the head (chief) to whom the land belonged, i.e. the daughter, it is then the land is divided among the three tribes. To the amount of their property, i.e. the property on the land is estimated according to the number of the tribe after the extinction of the daughter. From the great grandson, i.e. of the 'geilfine'-division, i.e. it is they who have become extinct, or it is they shall divide the land. To the great great-grandson, i.e. of the 'deirbh-fine'-division. Except the 'cumhal senorba', i.e. 'inge' for 'except,' I make an exception here, but the 'cumhal' which is ^{separated from (?)} reserved of that land, the seventh of a ^{the family lineage} 'dibadh'-land, and this is in the possession of a 'geilfine'-chief is not more inherent in his son than in all, as is set forth in the 'Corus Fine'-law.

³ After their time.—O'D. 421, adds here, "ocur ip é plaic geirpeme naromere; and it is the chief of the 'geilfine'-division, who binds it" (obliges the daughter to give back the lands).

⁴ The cumhal senorba.—In C. 856, the following note is added, which is not found in any other of the copies:

Except a 'cumhal tsenorba,' i.e. a chief head of a family who sustains the companies attending the king and the bishop and who is substantial to bear liabilities. When the 'deirbhfine' obtains the 'dibadh'-land of the 'geilfine,' all their number present give the worth of a 'cumhal' of land to this man, and to every other head of a family whatever, one after another, who is not near enough to be one of the tribe. The reason that it is given to this man is because he is bound to pay for the liabilities of the family. See also C. 2183.

zum "Aushalten" des f. u. des gormac.

when petitioning 'fuidher'-tenants and 'gormacs.' And the force of 'except' OF TAKING here is, because there is no division of this cumhal, or it shall not exist at all ^{LAWFUL} until all the tribe shall have become extinct; and from this is derived the saying ^{POSSESSION.} that there shall be no 'cumal senorba' until all the tribe is extinct.

Seven persons obtain, with triumph,
The 'cumhal senorba,' not scanty;
The sons of the three first wives fair,
And the sons of the 'adaltrach'-woman likewise;
A 'fuidhir'-tenant and a fine 'gormac,'
And a 'daer-fuidhir'-tenant the seventh.*

According to the size of the land, i.e. this is produced according to the nobleness of the land as to greatness or smallness. The tribe-property is claimed backwards, i.e. the hereditary right of the 'geilfine'-division backwards to the 'deirbhfine'-division who have their share of it when it is divided among the three tribes.³ The three tribes, i.e. the 'dibadh'-land is divided between the three 'fine'-divisions, i.e. the 'deirbhfine'-division, and the 'iarfine'-division, and the 'innfine'-division. An external branch stops it, i.e. the branch by which the land is detained is a branch that is hitherto external to the 'geilfine'-division, i.e. the 'deirbhfine'-division. If the five, &c., i.e. in this case, if after the death of the five persons which are the 'geilfine'-division, the land is divided among the three 'fine'-divisions, and in this case there is no female heir. Except as regards the liability of relationship, i.e. it is thus they are as regards the paying for the crimes of their relatives, for as they share the 'dibadh'-land so they shall pay for their crimes. If the family, i.e. after the removal of the family of the 'geilfine'-division out of their land, i.e. out of their territory, it is then it, i.e. the land is divided among the three 'fine'-divisions. Except a fourth⁴ part to the 'find-fine'-division, i.e. there is nothing for the 'innfine'-division except the fourth of the 'dibadh' land of the 'geilfine'-division, i.e. the sixteenth part. From seventeen,⁵ i.e. from the seventeen men out, it is then they are distinguished, so that they are not a tribe community from that out, but a community of people. The 'fuidhir'-tenant does not bear the liability of relationship, i.e. the 'fuidhir gabhla'-tenant, &c., i.e. the 'fo-daer'-person, i.e. the natural bondman does not bear the crimes of his relatives. Unless there be five houses to relieve, i.e. unless he has five houses to relieve him, i.e. the five who have stock consisting of a hundred head of cattle, and unless they belong to one chief. If there be five houses with complete stock, i.e. if the five houses, the five who have stock consisting of a hundred head of cattle, of each 'daer'-man of them be complete; if there be five men of them each man having a hundred of cattle, every one of them obtains his share of the 'dibadh' land and pays for the crimes of the others, like every free native, i.e. when they have the five stocks of a hundred head of cattle and are under one chief; and they shall pay the one-fourth of the crime of the free native, and the fourth part of the 'dire'-fine of the native free-them of everything which is divided, both lands and 'seds.' In like manner are their crimes paid for.

* From seventeen.—From this out they do not obtain any share; for the 'geilfine'-division extends to five, the 'deirbhfine'-division to twelve, the 'innfine'-division to seventeen men.

OF TAKING icur, ocur cethramēu tīpe tula upraio do ina tūil. Conranuat a LAWFUL rinnteata .i. ī taitnemach upranouy ead tōb tuthas fine a ceile.
POSSESSION.

Ni mac bratay rinntiza fine fūi poð pūthmeara, munab neara fūi coibneay mathair athair in oība.

5 Hoība mathair muncoīrche a mic o flaithaib a arto-chimna. Do aīyic a leath imurpo do cum fine fūi gūian;
a leath anaill a fūi bīethaib fūl a feola foðlaigtear.
Fine o cīr cobrainne. Nīf tīc do ceīr comfocair achī ceīr oība mboīreac̄ dā fēcht cumal; comarīdā oība C1983 10 dīatāch mboīreach; oība fōr fēt nīmpaebair; ar dā panar leīth tīpe.

Ni mac bratay rinntiza .i. noco ne īn mac foðay tūēcur fine a mathair uīle, nī īf mo nā fēctmāo tīpe tūbað.

Mat oība cūib no fūiaīta, no tūlīgītī dathair dīa īngīn ar 15 tūthraēct, īf tūlēr o fine do macaib deorað ocur mīrcaīrēī, cem beītī oc fōgnam de, co a nōībað no a nōīrge o fine. Mat mac imurpo beīr cētminotīr do uprað, īf tūlēr dā tūian nā noība fā do, uair beīat mic nā nūīrāo cīaīd; mat mac imurpo aḡatīraīgī, īf lēct nā noība fō do.

20 Fūi poð pūthmeara, .i. o fūi mēīfemīnāīgter fine maēīr bect a fāīctīr fūī.

.1. bancomarība fūl fūnd ocur fēīann athair ocur fēīathair aīce fē fē, ocur gēmað aīl dī a tabaīr dīa macaib nī tībrea.

Munab neara fūi coibneay, .i. manīp nera a coībner īn fēīano 25 dā mathair īnna dathair, manīb oība cūib ocur fūiaīta don mathīr hē; uair mārreð, beīaīd īn mac fānn de fō aīcneð cētminotīrē upraoma no aḡatīraīge.

¹ The true judgments. In C. 859—the following note is added here:—

“A female heir is here referred to, and her tribe are not bound to restore to her.
It is after her death it is divided between sons and brothers, for if the tribe were man's beast shall be paid to each of them for his beast. They share the tribe property, i.e. it is delightfully each of them shall share the tribe property of each other. OF TAKING

LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

It is not a son that obtains the property of a tribe in ground to be valued, unless the title to the land be nearer to his mother than to his father.

As to a mother's land her sons shall divide it from the days of her public testament. But the half of it reverts to the tribe of the original owner of the land; the other half according to the true judgments,¹ the seed of her flesh divide. The tribe divide their portion by just partition. There comes not by right of relationship but the right land of a 'bo-aire'-chief to the extent of twice seven 'cumhals;'; similar are the 'biatach'-lands of the 'bo-aire'-chief: as to land given up for a road and respecting which there are obligations, it is to be restored; half 'dire'-fine is paid out of it.

It is not a son that obtains, i.e. it is not the son who takes the patrimony of the whole tribe of the mother, he takes no more than a seventh of 'dibadh'-land.

If it be 'eruib' or 'sliasta'-land, or land appropriated by the father for his daughter out of affection, it is forfeited by the tribe to the sons of the husbands, being exiles and foreigners, while they are doing good with it; they also have what the tribe leave vacant or desert. If it be a son that a first wife bears to a native freeman, the two-thirds of these lands are forfeit, because the sons of native freemen bear (pay for) liabilities; but if he be the son of an 'adaltrach'-woman, half these lands are due to him.

In ground to be valued, i.e. when it is truly estimated that the tribe of the mother are cognizant of it.

A female heir is here referred to who has had the father's and the grandfather's land for a time, and though she should desire to give it to her sons she shall not give it.

Unless the title to the land be nearer, &c., i.e. unless the claim to the land be nearer to the mother than to the father, unless it be 'crndh' and 'sliasta'-land of the mother; for, if it be such, the son shall take a share of it according to the nature of his mother's contract, i.e. whether she be a first wife of contract or an 'adaltrach'-woman.

bound to restore the land from her, no portion of it would be given to the sons afterwards."

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

C. 859.

Horba mathar muncoirche, .i. in ferann ar ar meirsem corach a main a mathar, y main do neach pny cuirethar cor. Amic o flaithaib a ar othimna .i. buile a macair a cuir de on lo do rigne a timna co haro, .i. y la a macu o lairab a hair .i. orba cruib ocuy rliarta panntair ipunn amuil panntair cimao romaino, .i. bancomarba dono anriu, ocuy ni ois [a fine tairic noi], ma neapa in pinotiu do mathar in mic ar bancomarbur ma dia athar, y an to marbenararao a fine o a cirt comprainde, ar ipre a ceirrom a pinotio do breith ar fine.
Do airic a leath, .i. airicir a let imurho in yir grian dia fine.
10 Ocuy y e cuir in imurho ann, uair ferann na fine reo, ocuy orba cruib ocuy rliarta romaino, .i. y e cuir in imurho, noco naircenn ni dferann a athar no bi ma laim, ocuy airic a ferann oisur pen. Al leath anail,
.i. a let ail do heir na rirbretha no na rirbretheman. Sil a reola roilaigear .i. roeiligear eiric do ril a reola, da elaino. Mac 15 aoleraigi urnaoma ocuy fine rin, ocuy a roino ar do eturru. Fio o cirt cobrainne, .i. in fine tic dia cumaroino do heir cirt, ocuy y rin a coibrainno o fine tir da reet cumal do ingin in boiarrech y perp. Hir tic do ceir comroair, .i. ni tic do comoiriguo de do heir dirt. Ach ceir orba mboairic .i. aet ma ferann in boairic, 20 .i. let norba an athar dia ingin ar noibad, cen rloigro, cen cyp, cen congbaib
.i. tir ceir reet cumal no bui oc an boairic y perp anro. Da reet
cumal comarba .i. do comarbaigro re da reet do cumalab conao he ferann da nrenann in boairic meonac, no in boairic y tairic a betugao. Let in orba in athar don ingin iay nec inn athar; cen ruba 25 cen ruba rin. Orba for ret nimraebair, .i. ferann do bepar for conair .i. ime aor paebur, poebra la fine a cuingro cucu, poebraic leiri a airic uaiti.

.1. Ferann do bepar ar canair airic, ocuy aemaebair lair in ti na geibeno for raet ruiric; ar aige eirurter leth enecclann 30 do neach, leath don ti do heir, ocuy tairic don ti da tabair.
Enecclann don ti rombeir cinnoia in reirid rano de ene-

¹ The crime, i.e. the 'eric'-fine for crime.

² A female heir.—This gloss is an addition by a later hand, and in smaller letters.

³ The half of it reverts.—In O'D. 422, the following somewhat different explanation of this is given:—

"But the one half of it is restored to the tribe whose property the land is by right, i.e. it is divided into two parts, like every other 'dibadli'-land, when there are sons in question, and if there were only daughters they take the one-half of it during their time (the term of their natural lives) with an obligation of restoring it after

A mother's land, &c., i.e. the land to which claim is estimated from the wealth of the mother, it is wealth to the person by whom the contract is made. Her sons from the days of her public testament, i.e. her sons shall own her share of it from the day that she made her will openly, i.e. her sons shall own it from the day of her death, i.e. 'crubh' and 'sliasta'-land is here divided as the crime¹ is divided before, i.e. a female heir² is here referred to, and her tribe is not obliged to restore to her, if the tribe property be nearer to the mother of the son in female succession than to the father, it is then the tribe claim by their right of partition, for it is her duty to bring her tribe-property to the tribe. But the half of it reverts,³ i.e. but the half belonging to the owner of the land is restored to his tribe. And the force of the particle 'but' here is, because this is the land of the tribe, and 'crudh' and 'sliasta'-land are referred to before, i.e. the force of 'but' is, that no part of the land of the father which was his possession reverts, but his own proper land doth revert. The other half, i.e. the other moiety according to the true judgment, or according to the true judges. The seed of her flesh divide, i.e. it is partitioned to the seed of her flesh, i.e. her children. The son of an 'adaltrach'-woman of contract and the tribe are here referred to, and it is divided into two equal parts between them. The tribe by just partition, i.e. the tribe come to make partition of it according to right, and in this partition the tribe gives a land of twice seven 'cumhals' to the daughter of the highest 'bo-airech'-chief. There comes not by right of relationship, i.e. there comes not of relationship according to what is right. But the right land of a 'boaire'-chief, i.e. except the land of the 'bo-aire'-chief, i.e. half the land of the father goes to his daughter after his decease, without the service of hostings, without rent, without refection; i.e. a land of twenty-eight 'cumhals' had been in the possession of the 'bo-aire'-chief of best rank, in this case. Twice seven 'cumhals,' &c., &c., i.e. it was adjusted by twice seven 'cumhals,' so that it is the land by which the middle 'bo-aire'-chief or the lowest 'bo-aire'-chief feeds her. Half the land of the father devolves to the daughter after the death of the father; this is without the services of attack and defence. Land given up for a road, and respecting which there are obligations, i.e. land which is given for a road, i.e. concerning which there are two obligations, an obligation upon the tribe to demand it back, and an obligation upon her to give it up.

That is, land⁴ which is given for a road is to be restored, and the obligation is on the person who does not receive it for the stock of the 'fuidhir'-tenant; it is by him half honor-price is paid to one, half to the person who gives, and one-third to the person to whom it is given. Honor-price to the person who gives it except the their time, i.e. the force of the 'but' here is, he does not restore the land of his father which he had in his hands (occupation) but he restores his own proper land; or, indeed, their true land is restored to its tribe, and the force of the 'but' here is, for this is the land of the tribe, and it was 'crudh' and 'sliasta'-land we spoke of before.

"A land of seven 'cumhals' she had here and the half of it goes to her sons, and the half to her tribe, and she is an 'adaltrach'-woman that is here treated of."

⁴ Land.—This commentary is found as a note on the lower margin of col. 2, p. 9, of the MS. E. 3. 5.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

a Ir. Of.

*.f. recht do bui tar tar 7 mairgi do cheile, ise mairgith inin la F.

comididín comaitches .i. amail ro gabsa[t] na fogla comaidheasa C859

OF TAKING CLAIMS DON TI DA TABAIR, CINMOETA PEIRIO .i. ní foruit a bpeit
LAWFUL occur a tabairt amuil ro gab tiri pochnaice no ariabata .i. oriba POSSESSION. zaibter o plait no oclair. Beirtimurro, munagabab cuir in bancomarba lairín fine; beirt fine man ro gabat cuir leo. 1r maebur rin ar da penar letoiric.

Ar da panar leithoiric .i. if appeic eirmiter let inech do poich don tiri beneclann tiri .i. let a tiri; a leat mail ar a toeur.

Cuir in maebur a deir ann? .i. faebur lairín ingin occur faebur lairín fine. Iyred a deir oligeo, faebur lairín fine in airic don ingin in uair na bi mac aro tarer in athar, occur faebur lairín ingin a airic ari don fine.

(O'D 1281)

C 673
|| C 859, (270, 1819)

Stán fairgre mbroga mbrogairechta ingraide tiri comdoidan cóimiteach. Ní dircanar iar mo bí bliadain, acht beaib pochnucta, ar nach cnead beylan pe mepaib
if dircangean la peine.

arccu C859

mairgith C(859)* ingrege SC (859)

Stán fairgre, .i. planti aithgen a peoir a peanin on ti bup ac pirtochrin in bpuis pui na coir tiri, da tair can acra co ro ara a puro por a peor. Ingraide tiri, .i. ingraio a hinio a comaitichin in comaitich in a tiri, .i. da aie no a tiri etarba itir do ceili. Ní dircanar, .i. noco naobul eirmiter eiric mo iar pirtic do i naicichin irin bliadain cen acra cor ara a puro por in tiri rin ari. Acht beaib pochnucta, .i. aet in tiri do beir ar pochnac do tiri bapera gnae no aibino, uair ce beir nech a naicichin a pochnac cen a acra cor para a puro por a peor, noco lugaic oligeur a pochnac cen a acra cor nach cnead .i. ar naicain haf peoir beylan pe mepamnaet a acra de aca buictar, conac coir cangin ime do tiri in peinechur, .i. itir cpecht occur tiri ni hietar an aithgin aet tiri na gona occur pmaet.

C .i. inretha .i.

Si adair etarba ro
thair huix de cheile.

Half 'dire'-fine.—In O'D. 422-3, the following note is added:—"That is, half the thing which pertains to the land, i.e. half the part which is given to her out of her land, by the tribe, or indeed it is half to her out of her land property, i.e. it is out of that the one-half is paid by the person who gives, and one-third by the person to whom honor-price is given, except one-eighth to the person who gives honor-price, and one-sixth to the person to whom it is given, so that it is two-thirds of one-fourth of honor-price that is wanting to the person to whom it is given, which is equal to the one-sixth of the whole.

"Full honor-price is given to one for purity and worthiness and property, i.e. one half for purity and worthiness, and one half for property, both live cattle and dead chattels. The one-half which is on account of live cattle, i.e. the one-fourth of of C 637: mar adeir Senchas . slau airciu mbroga briugaid 7rl. Ma ta in deir i naicichin a feoir oca catham ina fiadnaise cin fuaitir cin agra, is dilis aithgin a feoir uadh o rofas a tind fait.

sixteenth part of honor-price to the person to whom it is given, except one-sixth, i.e. its taking and its giving do not run like those of hired land, or refection land, i.e. land which is rented^a from a chief or from a church. He (the son) takes it, however, unless the covenants of the female heir affect the tribe; the tribe take it unless they have verbal covenants. That is the obligation out of which half 'dire'-fine is paid.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.
^a Ir. Taken.

Out of which half 'dire'-fine, is paid, i.e. it is out of this is paid half the part of the land which comes to her as honor-price, i.e. half her land; the other half out of her property.

What obligation is mentioned here? i.e. an obligation on the daughter and an obligation on the tribe. What the law says is, "let there be an obligation on the tribe as to restoring to the daughter when there is no son after the death of the father, and an obligation on the daughter to restore it (the land) again to the tribe.

In the 'Bruighrecht'-laws it is guiltless to look on cattle grazing on the jointly-fenced land of a co-occupant. Nothing shall be paid after the lapse of a year, but after the custom of hire, for every wound that is healed by arbitrators is not to be settled by the Feini.

20f 20, 360f.

It is guiltless to look on, i.e. restitution of the grass of his land need not be made by the person who is truly looking on the land, for whom it is not right to correct it, if it remain without being claimed until the top grows on the grass. Grazing on a farm, i.e. they graze the top of the grass in the land, the neighbour being cognizant of it, i.e. for two nights or three unprofitably on thy partner's land. Nothing shall be paid, i.e. 'eric'-fine shall not be paid for it after his being cognizant of it for a year without claiming, until its top grows upon that grass again. But after the custom of hire,² i.e. but the grass which he lets for hire according to the good or pleasant custom, for though one should be cognizant of the hire without claiming it until the top grows on the grass, he is not the less entitled to have his hire paid to him. For every wound, i.e. for every damage to grass that is repaired by arbitration cannot be further sued for; 'de' is a negative, so that there is no further claim for it, according to the 'Feinechus'-law,³ i.e. as regards^b wound and grass, compensation is not paid, but the 'dire'-fine of the wound and 'smacht'-fine.

for incursions
of C.

'fair suit' of

^b Ir. Between.

honor-price, one-fourth for land and dead chattels, the half of that for land alone, so that it is the one-half of this is given to her, i.e. the sixteenth part. Or, indeed, it is a balance that is struck between land and dead chattels, or the one-sixteenth for either unless they are equalized according to arbitration."

² But after the custom of hire. In C. 859, the following note is given:—"But after the manner of hire. The custom of this is, whatever is contracted is enforced, but if no contract has been made, no payment is made, so the trespasses in the case of co-occupancy, unless they are claimed for within the year after the trespass, shall not be enforced."

³ 'Feinechus'-law. That is, whatever is submitted to arbitration and decided by it must be considered as finally settled. There can be no further appeal to the 'Feinechus'-law.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

.1. na cneōa dono, munab acurur nua plainti, ocur ni po gab deitbire, ni hīcar aithgin aēt colonn epic nama.

edce 0/8423

Ma po pollaigeo in fear cin agna cur far in fear eile na inaō, īr dīlīr na hai aithgina, ocur tairic in pmaēta īr in ni rin;
ḡata epic a fogla do dūl a nuprāō o duine, ocur īr and ata aithgin do tuitim o duine tpe na faill.

(0/81282)

.1. 1reao fuil runn, duine po bai a naitaitan fogla comīceara do denam fup, ocur po bai a faill gen a tacra cor far a fer;
īctair meic fup, ocur ni hīctar aithgin, ocur īr e rin aen īneao 10 a nōilīrīgeann aithgin o duine a faill do denam, ocur nī hīctar othrur īr in faill.

(?) fir .i. suthain 689 "C 1043
q IV 240.10 "Sīr cach renōlīgeō^x cachā crīce condeals." In tan īr dīcoīnōelḡ cach crīch, īr and bepar cach dīgeand co rīḡ.

"0/8683

5 Sīr cach renōlīgeō, .i. īrūtān caē renōelīḡuō, caē dēlīḡuō dīb ro rīr pe ceile, no caē dīḡeō ren dīb pe ceile, no caē dīḡeō do rēir na ren. In tan īr dīcoīnōelḡ, .i. in tan na bī bpeithem ac in bīobuid no ac in rēichemūm tōicheōa. 1r and bepar cach dīgeand co rīḡ, .i. īr ann bepar cach dīcenn cīnōarī ocur bpeithemnar ar amur 20 in rīḡ, uair īr aei īr dōiḡ in tainceapach do bīth. Dīgeand, .i. na dāḡabār dā ḡleōō.

Nī rīḡ lair na bīao ḡeill 1 nḡlarāib, do na tābar chīr plātha, do na eīrēneōar rēich cana. In tan ḡeibīur in rīḡ ina mama ro, īr and do ranar dīpe rīḡ, 25 gen ḡae, gen earbpar, cen eīrīnōrīacur fup a thuatha.

(0/81283)

Nī rīḡ, .i. noco rīḡ īr rīarī nīr manī rabat ḡeill aice pe comallao a rīḡe no a ceillīrīne. Na tābar chīr plātha, .i. dāerāicillneēta,
.i. bparāch. Rēich cana, .i. rīmacht cana. In tan ḡeibīur in rīḡ,
.i. in tan ḡaibē in moamugao no in ḡneim a dūbramar rōmanō. 1r 30 and do ranar dīpe, .i. īr and eīrīnōrīer enēclann rīḡ do co comlan,
.i. na momōuō rā, .i. ḡaill, ocur cīr, ocur rīmaēt. Gen ḡae .i. in bpeithemnar, no in ḡuprāonarī, no in eīrīnōrīacur do denam do.

¹ The wounds. The Irish of these two paragraphs is found in the right margin of col. 2, p. 9, near the bottom.

² His people. See Vallancey Collect., vol. III., p. 89, for an attempt to translate this and other passages of the Brehon Laws.

That is, as to the wounds,¹ indeed, unless they are claimed for before they are healed, and no necessity interferes, no compensation is paid except body 'eric'-fine alone. OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

If it has been neglected to sue for the grass until other grass grew in its place, it is a case of forfeiture of the compensation, and a repayment of the 'smacht'-fine for that thing; the 'eric'-fine for the damage becomes obsolete to a person, and in this case compensation is lost to a person through his neglect.

^a Ir. Falls from.

That is, the case here is of a man who was cognizant of the commission of a trespass of co-occupancy against him, and he neglected suing for it until the grass grew; sacks are paid for it, and compensation is not paid, and this is the only instance in which compensation is forfeited by a person through his neglect, and sick-maintenance is not paid for the neglect.

Constant is every old law;⁴ of every territory of its covenants. When any territory is uncovenanted, it is then every disputed case is brought before the king.

Constant is every old law, i.e. perpetual is every old arrangement, every decision of those which follow with each other, or every old law of them with each other, or every law according to the ancients. When uncovenanted, i.e. when the defendant or the plaintiff has not a Brehon. It is then every disputed case is brought before the king, i.e. it is then every disputed case of crime and judgment is brought before the king, for it is with him the solution of every difficulty is likely to be. Disputed case, i.e. ~~the thing brought~~ to be settled. which cannot be

He is not a king who has not hostages in fetters, Eccl. p. 75 to whom the rent of a king is not given, to whom the fines of law are not paid. But when the king gets these submissions, it is then the 'dire'-fine of a king is paid, if he is free from^b falsehood, from betrayal of his nobles, from unworthy conduct towards his people.² ^b Ir. Without.

He is not a king, i.e. he is not to be styled king unless he has hostages for preserving his kingship or his tenancy. To whom the rent of a king is not given, i.e. the rent paid on 'daer'-stock tenancy, i.e. malt. Fines of law, i.e. the 'smacht'-fine of the law. When the king gets, i.e. when he receives the submission or allegiance which we have mentioned before. It is then the 'dire'-fine is paid, i.e. it is then the honor-price of a king is completely paid to him, i.e. these submissions, i.e. hostage, rent, and 'smacht'-fine. Free from falsehood, i.e. respecting judgment passed, or false witness borne, or impropriety

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Sen earbpat, .i. cen bpat na nuaral; ocup noco dligtecha do bpat na nireal. Cen eirir noprucup, .i. im supoirgeall a dligir, no im guin no im gair for a tuathab; uair da roib ní tob rin aice, noco biad enecclann ruz do co comlan.

gl. on 25 - ?

- 5 Atait recht piadnairc forgeallad gae cach ruz;
renad do rodad ar a nairliri; cen rir, cen dliged, dide airc, inge mad tar cept; maidm catha rair; nuna ina plathur; dirce mblecta; millead meara; reol neatha. 1te recht mbeocainde and ro forornad gae 10 cach ruz.

Atait recht piadnairc, .i. atait a recht amuil piadnairc forglep a gae for in cach ir ruz. Senad do rodad, .i. renad na heclayr timpoð ar a uaral lir. Cen rir .i. im piachab einoti .i. cen cept Cen dliged, .i. im piachab eiccinoti do dametan doib. Dide airc .i. co hindliged. Inge mad tar cept .i. inge ar aet, ata aet lim and, mad ar tarpirin dligir do, nocon indligtech eirum anorairc. Maidm catha rair, .i. re comlin a re dligir, .i. let los ened trethnair airc. Nuna .i. bec can ana, .i. gortad do bith ina plathur. Dirce mblecta .i. dirceae .i. bith can lacht .i. dircailar in lachta. Millead meara, 20 .i. iar na taibrim, ocup milltir. Seol neatha, .i. reolad ar in neatha, innariba, no ruail bec don arbur do bith and. 1te recht mbeocainde .i. iatad po anuar in rechta amuil cainnil mbi supranour no railirger a gae for in cach ir ruz.

- Teora gua ata moam da pich dia for cach tuath;
25 fuilleam gu nadma; forgeall supiadnairc; subreath ar pochrac.

Teora gua, .i. teora gua eim ir mera indechay dia for na tuathab. Fuilleam gu nadma .i. fuilleam loigrecht do gabail ar gunarcarpeet, ocup noco dlegar a gabail cir ar pirnarcarpeet .i. los 30 do ar a pad ata anadmam cin co be. Da pich dia, .i. do figlano dia forgeall supiadnairc, .i. in supiadnairc forgeall do. Subreath ar pochrac .i. na bretha gua do breith do ar deirene loigrecht, ocup noco dlegar cir a mbreith an airci.

¹ For hire.—Vide Vall. Collect., p. 90, vol. iii. (No. X.)

soul
OB 424 (865 ft.)
(H 517, 325)
CH 1150.22
(2346)

deitind
OB 424

.i. beth do co indligtech
a naititin a airc OB 424.
(OB 1284)

f V 1748

c.f. fri beocainde B. Arr. 3.
but of IV, 380. 3.

done by him. From betrayal, i.e. without betrayal of the nobles; and it is not more lawful for him to betray the plebeians. From unworthy conduct, i.e. with respect to false decision of his law, or with respect to wounding or robbing his people; for if he had been guilty of any of these, he shall not have the honor-price of a king completely.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

There are seven proofs which attest the falsehood of every king; to turn a synod out of their noble 'lis'-fort; ~~to be~~ without truth, without law, 'dide aire,' unless they (the demands of the parties) were beyond right; defeat in battle; dearth in his reign; dryness of cows; blight of fruit; scarcity of corn. These are the seven live candles which expose the falsehood of every king.

cf V 310.1

supporting a satire unless it be in spite of Law cf J 174

There are seven witnesses, i.e. there are seven things as it were witnesses which attest his falsehood against every king. To turn a synod out, i.e. to turn the synod of the church out of their noble 'lis'-fort (meeting-place). Without truth, i.e. respecting certain fines, i.e. without justice. Without law, i.e. respecting ceding to them uncertain debts. 'Dide-aire,' i.e. unlawfully. Unless, &c., beyond right, i.e. "unless" for 'but,' i.e. I make an exception here, if it is after offering of law by him, it is not unlawful for him then. Defeat in battle, i.e. by an equal number in a lawful battle ~~field~~ i.e. half his price of honor is taken away on account of it. Dearth, i.e. to be without wealth, i.e. that famine should be in his reign. Dryness of cows, i.e. failure, i.e. to be without milk, i.e. destruction of the milk. Blight of fruit, i.e. after its appearance, and it is afterwards destroyed in the bud. Scarcity of corn, i.e. the disappearance of the corn, the vanishing of it, or a small quantity of corn being in existence. These are the seven live candles, i.e. these above are the seven things, as if living candles, which expose or exhibit to view his falsehood against every one who is a king.

cf O'Law. 716

There are three falsehoods which God most avenges upon every territory; additional gain by a false ^{reward} contract; decision by false witness; false judgment ^{given} for hire.¹

Basch p. 61.

Three falsehoods, i.e. there are indeed three falsehoods for which God takes worst vengeance upon the territories. Additional gain by a false contract, i.e. to receive ^{being that is not obtaining any reward unless making a reward} additional reward for a false contract, when it is not lawful to receive it even for a true contract, i.e. to get reward by his saying that ^{he is a reward} there is a reward where ^{he is not} there is none. Which God avenges, i.e. for which God showers down his vengeance. Decision by false witness, i.e. to ^{approve} of false witness. False judgment for hire, i.e. false judgments to be passed by him for a payment or hire, when it is not lawful even to pass them gratis.

cf O'Law 561

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Atait ceithrí naom na^[ann] reardad^[9] ciad poircardear; bachroigster mud for a plait; mac for a athair; manach for a abaid; ulach for araidle maó an aenar. Ar foruairlaice plait, ocur fine, ocur eadair cach rochar, ocur cach
-t-? 5 nochair pocepd^{ce}car for a meamra, acht ní forcongrat;
ar ate teorá naóman^{ce} arpa innrin naircardear la peine: cor for meamra eadaira, cor for rognamte plaita, cor for faenteagachair fine. Ar do inn^{ce}ta^{ce} C 2456 plait, ocur fine, ocur eadair cach cor na toltairge; O 565 10 ar olegar doibrium na be lobtar^{ce} cor, ar dia mbad lobtar^{ce} geon cor, ir and ní tinnatrom curu a memoi.

Ar ir annrom i mbreitheamact cor la peine cuir trene. Ar ate cuir treineacha la peine cach la fear dia upgar, alail dia forngar, ar ar do ruide ata 15 forcongar na durgar inn ruio contair.

trenich C 860

// C 2370, C 511

erne C 2370

erne contrairi .i. iad na fine bess i nurtuachab C 511 .i. annid C 19. 114) recte?

Atait ceithrí naom, .i. atait a ceithrar do ní ponarom, ocur noco nintar^{ce}geon orpo ciad^{ce} ruide^{ce} into iat, .i. cor for memui i nec-mair a cenn; tathmigit na cinto na curu sein man bet tola doib, .i. ir amlar^{ce} fin ata, no iman rmaet die annro cen co hiar in ategin.
20 Cíad poircardear, .i. cia ro argeir^{ce} forpo. Mud for a plait
.i. penpar in plait maó aíl leir. Mac for a athair, .i. ric oc.
Manach for a abaid, .i. co ra icat a cenna, .i. air ir inora don memoi cachtar in cinto garb^{ce} ima polta oib condaragbat a ruipolta.
* Uíach for araidle, .i. dais penpar ime, .i. ulach bir cen rionu ero 25 maéaire beir ir amlar^{ce} fin biar^{ce}. Ar foruairlaice, .i. naó bat machtar cen tobach doib oib, uair foruairlaiceo caé cor do gnat.
Cach rochar, .i. cor comlois. Cach nochair, .i. diubarra. Po-cepd^{ce}car for a meamra .i. aó curtar for a momoiéneachab, for a memraib; ero dono ar natatmegeair no na penar^{ce}ir in cunorad 30 do denoir^{ce} riu bodéin. Acht ní forcongrat, .i. aet iní forcon-

There are four ^{nations} covenants which ^{do not enforce} are not binding ^{have been broken.} though they (the parties) are proceeded against; that

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

omitted in B. A. 2.

of a bondman ^{as against} with his chief; of a son ^{as against} with his father;

4 B. A. 21 Bochr. p. 59.

of a monk ^{as against} with his abbot; of an 'ulach'-person with another if alone. For the chief, and the tribe, and the church, will redeem (rescind) every good contract and every bad contract which are made with their subjects, except what they themselves order them; for these are the three ^{upshot} defective covenants ^{bindings which are bound} mentioned by the Feini; the covenant with a subject of a church, ^{with} the covenant of a servitor of a chief, a covenant with fugitives from a tribe. For the chief, and the tribe, and the church, may annul every covenant of this kind to which they ^{do} did not consent; for they are bound not to be remiss about covenants, because if they should be remiss about covenants, then they do not annul the covenants of their subjects.

Bochr. p. 33

For in the judgment of covenants with the Feini the covenants of three are difficult. The ternal covenants three parts?

with the Feini are where one man commands it (the covenant) and another forbids, for to him is the command who has not forbidden, what he has heard. ^{he grants (a-fuf) who}

Bochr. (without protest)?

There are four covenants, i.e. there are four persons who make a covenant, and proceedings cannot be maintained ^{broken} successfully against them though they are made for it, viz.:—a covenant with subjects in the absence of their chiefs; the chiefs dissolve these covenants ^{it's bound on them} unless they have given their consent to the making of them, i.e. it is thus it is, or 'smacht'-fine is paid in this case, though compensation is not paid. Though they are proceeded against, i.e. though they are sued. A bondman with his chief, i.e. the chief may repudiate it, if it so please him. A son with his father, i.e. sicoc. A monk with his abbot, i.e. until he pays for his crimes, for it is difficult for the subject to serve the chief who receives from him his property, until he receives his returns. An

'ulach'-person, i.e. because he will deny all about it, i.e. an 'ulach' who is without a witness, even though they be in the plain, it shall be so. Will redeem, i.e. it is no wonder that they should not distrain them, for they redeem every contract which they make. Every good contract, i.e. every contract of full value. Every bad contract, i.e. frauds. Which are made with their subjects, i.e. which are put upon their dependants, upon their subjects;

why then should they not dissolve or deny the contract which they should make with themselves (the chiefs). Except what they themselves order, i.e. but if they are not to their liking

OF TAKING ^{LAWFUL} ^{POSSESSION.} [—] gnat bodoin doib do denum pe nech aile, uair noco cuimgech a taitmechroie, aet amuil do genat a cunnrao pen. Ar ate teopa na-man, .i. ar ate tri naomann inrin ponairceir da nairnerdenn in penechar, ocur ip eghach a ba a maie on ti do ni iat. Cor por meamra eacalra, .i. inecmair. Cor por rognamthe plath, .i. cunnrao do denam pur in luét bir ac rognam don plath. Cor por raenleasachais, .i. corpurar arnarpannelosachais bir don pino. Ar do innéai plait h ocur pine, .i. uair impaisio in plath, ocur in eclair, ocur in pine cad cunnrao naé toltanach a memair, ocur ipe cuie in ar and, uair i subramar romaino ata tri naomanna epra, .i. reoit uil itir rochais do ano rin, ocur in ti no pec a cuie de ip uilur uao he, ocur in ti na no pec noco uilur uao he. Ar dlezaio doib, .i. uair dlezaio doibrium nar ab leutais no nar lietais ac tobach na cor nindistech do niat a memair, .i. narbat liuntais tobais iar pur cor. Ar diambao lobtais, .i. ar diambat laebtais rium no diambat lietais cen tairdeet po na corais. Ir and no tinnatayom, .i. ir ann rin ni tinnatayom, no noco tinnatayom ar na cuir do niat a memair in tairdeet pithais.

Ar ir annayom, .i. uair ip do na neichib ip doilgi a mbreithemur na cor do per in penechar. Cuir trene .i. cuir tri nech no tri nos.
Alai doia porugaire, .i. ac porcongair a denma .i. annupgair a nemdenma. Ar ip doiride ata porcongair, .i. ar ip do madairin ata conat man do neoc ocur do neic porcongair a denma mana deina upgair a nemdenma. = av ac?

1. cuir tri nech 1. tri cuir fair C860

|| C860

Atait tri naomanda la peime nao poithead ni anaicairceir. Oigais do los eneach eipeach no reazad.
naidm por neach no finntar por upocra; naidm corura gairde la gadaisge gin ni gada paderin; porcraio coibce fpu eachlaid; iar atait da achlaid cor la peime, dean fpu tabar coibce naidnaisgead, ocur per do beir coibche mor fpu baioisg por na pcaria uilri. Aia ate = for nascar a

C. 424

l. echlaid
w. h.

¹ The ternal covenants.—In C. 860, the following note is added:—

"Ternal covenants, i.e. of three persons, i.e. three contracts upon him, i.e. with a chief, with the church, and with an extern tribe, whichever it be his share is forfeit.

² Forbids. Dr. O'Donovan read as in the text the first syllable of the word 'annupgair'; in the MS. there is simply 'a' with two diagonal strokes over it; the usual contraction for 'n' being a horizontal stroke over the letter which 'n' should follow. The reading would thus be "ac upgair." The reading in C. 860 is "porupcongair."

H. 239 p. 151⁵⁻⁶ (C. 264)
q. 214. 29

what they themselves order them to make with another person, for they are not able to dissolve these, but as they would their own contract. For these are the three defective covenants, i.e. for these are the three covenants which are contracted of which the 'Fenechus'-law makes mention, and their 'ba' i.e. their good is defective from the persons who make them. The covenant with a subject of a church, i.e. in the absence of the heads. The covenant of a servitor of a chief, i.e. a covenant which is made with those people who are doing service to a chief. A covenant with fugitives from a tribe, i.e. a contract made with the fugitives who are of the tribe. For the chief and the tribe, &c., may annul, i.e. for the chief, and the church, and the tribe, abrogate every contract with which their subjects are not satisfied; and the force of the 'for' here is, for we said before there are three defective covenants, i.e. a 'sed' which is between (owned by) many persons is here referred to, and the person who sold his share of it, forfeits it, and as to the person who did not sell it, it is not forfeited by him. For they are bound, i.e. for it is right for them that they be not remiss or negligent in setting aside the unlawful contracts which their subjects make, i.e. that they be not remiss in setting them aside after knowledge of the contracts. Because if they should be remiss, i.e. for if they should be negligent, or if they should be remiss, and not impugn the covenants. Then they do not annul the covenants, i.e. it is then they do not set aside, or they do not ~~abrogate~~ the contracts which their subjects make, by opposing them.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

For they are difficult, i.e. for they are among the things that are most difficult in the judgment of the covenants according to the 'Fenechus'-law. The ternal covenants, i.e. the contracts of three persons or three parties. One man commands it, i.e. commands the doing of it, i.e. forbids the non-doing of it. For to him is the command, i.e. for it is from that principle is derived that it is the same to one to command its doing and to forbid its non-doing.

'strongly spill out'

There are three ^{naidms} covenants with the Feini, which do not amount to the thing stipulated. It takes from the honor price of a chief who ~~sues upon~~ a covenant with a person who is known to be proclaimed; a covenant concerning stolen property with a thief, although he did not steal it himself; to give too great a nuptial present to an 'eachlach'-person; for there are two 'achlaidh' covenants with the Feini, the case of a woman with whom the nuptial present of a married woman is given, and the case of a man who gives a large nuptial present to a harlot for her lawful divorce. For these are the covenants for mch. Muzare before dismissed

h/

OF TAKING cuir innrin naóroítead co tñian no ruidigeat aniu-
LAWFUL barraib cori la peine.
POSSESSION.

Acht upgaréa cori la peine, ní díleat ní gen aipulliud, ar nach cñaróe ip earlan iníat a coibche, díligi 5 rlan cñaróe a peir bñeitheaman, acht uair no upgaréa no egmaché.

Actait tñi naómanóa, .i. do ní penatón va naipneóen in pene-éur, ocup neco no inópaiget in in aipuceóe iat, no in naóca cōgar.
Dígaib do les eneacñ, .i. dígbat do les a neech in aipéñ inópaiget 10 iat co pír do naóa dígenn, no ip tñopacó tar dígéb, .i. in tñupacóacó; tícpait in pñe po ócpaib, .i. pír tñupacó ac tñebuir in upñatuir; no gñ tuillmíóéa a cain, ocup ní uil ac pñchemuin tñeicheóa; aichgñ oic do tñebuir, ocup neco níctar ní pñr in tñebuir no co tñupacó in cñacó. Naíom pñr neacñ .i. naíom do tñat do éñno inó aenóleagáó 15 co pñacann; dígbat día éñeclann in meit no díbartar día tñechur.
Naíom cñupra gáíóe, .i. ip éipñnacup a pír cori uil a tñebuir pñ uilr in tñeóit gáíó tar cenn in gáíatí cñ cob gáíatí he beóéñ.

.i. Ní aróann tñeabairé ní anó pñ, ocup ce tñupacótear gáíatí ní hñacann ní pñ pñr meóon gáíóe lan inódígacó, acé 20 muna pñr tñebairé do pñ dígbat a lanu oic pñr.

Pñpñat coibé .i. inapñat coibéí óen tí ar a neilgítep, aipñil aipé pñr each, uair ip pñpñat ní pñia itip acé les a cenbair no a caille.
Ar atait día achlaio cñr .i. atá óeíó ar a neilgítep cori, aipñil aipé pñr ech, día naipneóen in pñeacñp, .i. día cori pñeóatítep pñr 25 heclacha. Óean pñr tabar coibé .i. in tñupñat inóñatí gñl.
Pñr do beip coibche mñr, .i. bñapéñ acé be tñaróe, no acé ben óeipé lanp, .i. upñat cen inóéat ar a cenó. Pñr na pñara, .i. aipñat-cítep a dípí dí. Ará até cuir innrin, .i. ar íte cuir innrin ocup neco no inópaiget cñ co tñian na cñr nólígé. Re pñdígeat, .i.
30 pñ rñatígeat, no pñ hepñatígeat a nupñ eipñatí na cñr día naipneóenn in pñeacñp. Acht upgaréa .i. acé na cuir upgaréa pñ anuap día naipneóenn in pñeacñp, uair tñatñmítep uilé iatpñaróe, .i. acht na cñr upgaréa pñ, ní díleat cen ní óon aipñliud do pñacñ pñr cñr beí do pñr na peine .i. tñian. Gen aipñliud .i. neco díleat ní itip cen a

¹ In case of poverty. In C. 2, 742, 'uair,' as a degree of poverty, is distinguished from 'angbecht,' 'extreme poverty.'

² 'Eachlach-person.' In C. 860, 'heclagh' is glossed "'meropnech,' a woman to whom a 'nuptial'-present is given, .i. ip echluig cori innrin, she is an 'echlach' of engagements then," 'Meropnech' is the Latin 'meretrix.' Vide also, C. 264.

³ Forbidden contracts. In O'D. 425, these forbidden contracts are said to be:— that of the son of a living father, that of a person without property, &c.

11 C860

11 O'D 425

4V 428.5

gl on next item!

(O'D 1288)

cf Breh. p. 15 § 51 d.

i ndiaigh
O'D 425

OF TAKING LAWFUL POSSESSION.

59

which ^{do not} amount ~~only~~ to one-third of what has been ordained in fraudulent covenants by the Feini.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Except the covenants which are forbidden by the Feini, nothing is due without deserving it, for every property which is unsafe is entitled, after nuptial present, to be safe according to the Brehon, except in case of poverty¹ or prohibition or want of lawful power. ^{impossibility}

^{which is ill. at least} ^{after its critique is entered} ^{to ...}
q. V 428.5 (a continuation of this)

There are three covenants, i.e. there are three who make contracts mentioned by the Feini, and they do not attain to the thing which they agree for, or as to which they get a choice. It takes from the honor-price, i.e. it subtracts from the price of the honour of the chief who sues for them, knowing that he is not entitled to do so, or it is fasting in excess of what is legal,* i.e. the proclaimed person; the tribe will oppose his contracts, i.e. the surety in 'urradhus'-law having knowledge of the proclamation; or he being without merits in 'cain'-law, and the defendant has not knowledge thereof, compensation is to be paid by the surety, but nothing is to be paid by the surety until the guilty person is apprehended. A covenant with a person proclaimed, i.e. a covenant which is made for a fugitive until he pays; it lessens his 'eric'-claim as much as it subtracts from his wealth. A covenant with a thief, i.e. it is impropriety for one who has^b true knowledge to go security for the lawfulness of stolen property for a thief although he is not a thief himself.

^{for which they were} ^{involved as sureties *}

^{Ir. Beyond} ^{law.}

^{Ir. In.}

The surety does not bind anything here, and though the thief be apprehended, he does not pay to the fully unlawful middle theft man, unless he has security for the payment of the emptying of his hand to him.

Too great a nuptial present to an 'eachlach'-person,² i.e. too great a nuptial present by the person of whom it is demanded, as 'a load on a horse,' for anything given to her is overmuch, except the price of her head dress or cowl. For there are two 'achlaidh' covenants, i.e. there are two of whom contracts are sued, like 'a load on a horse,' which the Fenechus mentions, i.e. two contracts which are made with 'echlach'-persons. A woman with whom the nuptial present is given, i.e. the ~~unlawful~~ contract, &c. A man who gives a large nuptial present, i.e. every secret woman is a harlot, or every woman who deserts her ~~house~~ is a strumpet, i.e. there is a covenant without property concerning her. For her divorce, i.e. when her right is due to her by contract. For these are the covenants, i.e. for these are the compacts which do not extend but to one-third of the lawful contracts. What has been ordained, i.e. what has been settled or ordained in the scale of estimating covenants of which the Fenechus treats. Except the covenants which are forbidden, i.e. except the above forbidden contracts which the Fenechus mentions, for they are all dissolved, i.e. except these forbidden contracts,³ it is not lawful not to have a part of the thing deserved under expressed contracts according to the Feini, i.e. one-third. Without deserving it, i.e. nothing is lawful at all for which its full value has not been paid. For

cf V 216.15

cannot be enforced
even

union

(O'D. 1289)

OF TAKING ^{LAWFUL} ^{POSSESSION.} luad pōla lanloigi dar a ceno. Ar nach/craide, .i. each craoi ber erlan iniaio a coboigi cuir ocu cuntharēa. Olisio rlan craide, .i. olisio rlan tiugad a craoi amul i riar do breithemāin, no amul a dora in breithem ar a reir. Ach uair no urdairt, .i. tabairt, .i.
naom por nech no ritir porpōra, .i. naom coruza gaiti la gataide.
No egnach t, .i. porpōra coibēi rri heēlaig, uair naom in dligēē rri, ocu noco narat nī, .i. ar eicn, no pal rri crenur i mbecluaig, .i. cor da rochoth co rri co trebuiui, no dono, cor por memru.

(1)

donad nadm O'D. 1289
donad nadm C 860, 1

NB.

Atait tri dono nadm naircāidter la fine dicean-glad a peiceamna: bean rri tabar coibche, in dligēē reach a athair; mad ar dīeall an athar, ar athair aen dan in coibche rri; cor pocerōdar reach aza fine aza cora do beith oza; cor paeima pocerōdar reoch fine nurnaiige. Ar ate donadmanō inno dicean-glad a peicheamna nadad cora do nadmanōm.

int a O'D. 425
t?

= doathliffir?

Atait tri dono nadm, .i. tri nadmanōa ponaircēter ita da nairneidenn in penechur. Diceanglad, .i. di aca diultat, cona cen-glat na trebuiui na peicheamna darā tecait ceno, .i. cia pocerōdar a athair. Bean rri tabar coibche .i. manab comcēneol, no manab coibēi techta, cō comcēneol. Mad ar dīeall, .i. mad ar pach dīche in athar do neter rri. Ar athair aen, .i. i riar in athair a oenfer in coibēi rri, ocu i riar in ben dono on ti dia tabar.

(O'D. 1290) O'D. 425

O'D. 426.

.i. Mad po rri in ingean conad ar daigāin dīche an athar do gneter ponarōm a coibēe dī, cō urrūnnur no dleirēat in tathair don coibēe, tuillter rri do retab po dīrīb na mna reim, co raib coibēe comlan ann; ocu cia do gne in bean cinnat in dleirōda coibēe no urrūnnur do coibēe, nī hīcann in tathair nī de; muna rri imurro, in ingean com ar pat dīche do gnetēa, [i] rlan dī, ocu icad in dī do fine in turparōm.

1 Contract and covenant. In O'D. 425 "a coboigi cunnurēa" is glossed thus:
".i. ina dībuipt anpēra no trebuiue do tairēniuch amul i riar do breithemūin .i. in trian cor mbe, oc in rri crenur pacabar in trian.
Fraudulent contracts as regards ignorance or security are to be dissolved as is the rule with the Brehon, i.e. the third of express contracts, with the man who buys the third is left."

every property, i.e. every property which is unsafe after her perfect dower of contract and covenant.¹ Is entitled, &c., to be safe, i.e. her property is entitled to be made secure according to the sentence of the Brehon, or as the Brehon shall say respecting it. Except poverty or prohibition, i.e. as to giving, i.e. a covenant with one who knows the proclamation, i.e. a covenant concerning stolen property with a thief. Or want of power, i.e. giving overmuch nuptial present to a harlot, for that is an unlawful covenant, and nothing renders it binding, i.e. by violence, or the bar (barrier) of a man who purchases for small value, i.e. the covenant of two sane persons with knowledge and warranty, or according to others, a covenant with subjects.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

g. V 428
502.22

There are three covenants entered into by the Feini which the parties who have claims² dissolve—that of a woman to whom a nuptial present is given, if concealed from her father, (if concealed from the father, it is to the father alone this nuptial present is due); a covenant which is made without the knowledge of the chief of a tribe, who ought to be present with them; a contract of adoption which is made unknown to the petitioning tribe. For these are the bad covenants which the parties having claims dissolve, and which are not binding.

supporting family

There are three covenants, i.e. three covenants there are which are fastened, as mentioned in the 'Fenechus'-law. Dissolve, i.e. 'di' is a negative, i.e. the sureties do not bind the parties for whom they enter into security, i.e. although it may be cast upon them as a reproach. A woman to whom a nuptial present is given, i.e. unless she be of equal family, or unless it be a lawful nuptial present though she may be of equal family. If concealed, i.e. if it be for the purpose of defrauding the father this is done. It is to the father alone, i.e. it is to the father alone this nuptial present belongs, and the woman is forfeited by the person by whom it is given.

If the daughter knows that it is for the sake of defrauding the father the covenant of her nuptial present is made with her, whatever proportion of the nuptial present the father is entitled to, he is to be paid it in 'seds' out of the woman's own lawful property, until a complete nuptial present is made up; and though the woman should commit a crime for which her nuptial present, or a portion of her nuptial present is liable, the father pays no part of it; but if the daughter does not know that it was done for the purpose of defrauding, she is guiltless, and the person who makes the contract of marriage shall pay.

² The parties who have claims. The term 'peiceadh' means either creditor or debtor. It is found also in the sense of an advocate or pleader. Here it seems to mean the persons whose authority was necessary to render these contracts binding.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

= seised?

cf IV 40.27

Cop roceprdear reach aza fine, .i. in cop curtar reach in ogaé bir don fine, .i. plaith geilfine. Aza cora do beith oga, .i. ir cora a bith aca denam. Cop faerma .i. in cop curtar purin mac faerma an fine, ocur ní ar peiom saire o geilfine. Seoch fine nupnaise
.i. reach in fine bir ac upnaide a cinad. Ar ate donadman o innro diceanglad, .i. uair ir iat ro na nadmann ponairceir atai; ocur de aca duiltad, co na cenglad na trebuiur na peichemáin tar a teacat cent.
Nadad cora, .i. noco cora a ponadom.

1108426

cf III 316.15

do. essetan?
if. if. if. if. if.

Leath cacha cet coibche cacha mna dia haža fine, mao iar negaid a athar, mao he polo a chinad; trian don tanirde, ceathruime don trearr coibche. Mao cumraidec co ndeithbire o ta ruide, conroglaigear a complechtad feine; ar ita cuir a coibche cacha mna dia haža fine, amail ril a cuir a nabad baoride. Ir for runo do peiridear breata buain ocur ambuain la feine.

081291

Leath cacha cet coibche, .i. ní beair inro carab uilur don mna.
Ir aise ir lugu beair on mna o menchigear a leuro, corab lugaio leicteir imao a ainuile. Dia haža fine, .i. don ogaé bir don fine.

1. Mna marann in tathair a let altrum on aise fine, no leit iarrad le ocur upnadom do comchineol, ocur trian tinol le do cum cac fir sur a rača; ocur cio minic do nitear a hup-nadom ne haen per, noco olegar trian tinol le aet aen peact.
Ma iarrad imurro in tathair, a let iarrad no leat altrum on athair, ocur upnadom do comcinoil; ocur trian tinol le do cum cac fir sur a rača 7rl; ainuile at a mbreataib eirgto.

¹ To the head of the tribe.—The Irish gloss may also mean, 'to the most perfect person who is of the tribe.'

² 'Tinol'-marriage collection.—'Tinol' was the collection of gifts which the relatives and friends presented to the woman on her marriage. Vide vol. 2, page 346, n. 3.

³ But once. That is, if she was divorced and afterwards married to the same man. In O'D. 425, it is added that it is lawful to marry her to the seventh person; from that out, she is considered a 'gaibul baidbe.'

⁴ Judgments of 'Eidgedh.' Vid. vol. 3, pp. 88-97.

N.B.

III 314.5

A contract which is made without the knowledge of the chief of ^{OF TAKING} a tribe, i.e. the contract which is made without the knowledge of the head ^{LAWFUL} of the tribe, i.e. the 'geilfine'-chief. Who ought to be with them, i.e. it is right that he should be at the making of it. A contract of adoption, i.e. a covenant which is made with the adopted son of the tribe, and it is not ~~for the~~ ^{after failure of /} ~~use of future~~ maintenance from the 'geilfine'-division. Unknown to the petitioning tribe, i.e. without the tribe which is petitioning for the payment of his crimes. For these are the bad covenants, &c., i.e. for these are the covenants which being made are again dissolved; and 'de' is a negative, i.e. the sureties do not bind the debtors for whom they enter into security. Which are not binding, i.e. it is not right to fasten them.

Half of each first nuptial present of every woman is due to the head of her tribe, if married after the death of her father, if it be he that had sustained (paid for) his crimes; one-third of the second, and one-fourth of the third nuptial present. If she goes away of necessity from that out, it (the nuptial present) shall be distributed according to the arrangements of the Feini; for a share of the nuptial present of every woman is due to the head of her tribe, as he has his share in the 'abad'-gains of a harlot. It is by this the judgments of every proper and improper (woman) are known among the Feini.

Half of each first nuptial present, i.e. this is not given until it is lawfully due to the woman. The reason that less is taken from the woman because she has been put away frequently is that the quantity of her cattle is left fewer. To the head of her tribe, i.e. to the head of the tribe.¹

If the father is not living half the price of her fosterage is paid by the chief of the tribe, or, according to others, she shall bring^a one-half price of fosterage in marriage with one of the same tribe, and one-third of the 'tinol'-marriage-collection² to every man to whom she goes; and however often she may have been contracted to one man, it is not required by law that she should bring the third of the 'tinol'-marriage-collection with her but once.³ But if the father is living, her half fosterage-price, or half the expense of her fosterage is paid by^b the father, in case of^c marriage with one of equal family; and one-third of the 'tinol'-marriage-collection is^d brought by her to every man to whom she goes, &c., as it is set forth in the judgments of 'Eidgedh.'^e

^a Ir. With her.

^b Ir. From.
^c Ir. And.

cf. the so-called B. of Aicill'. III 3145

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

Mao iar negaib a athair, .i. in ti ip nera ip ann ata rin. Mao he polo a chinair, .i. mao he in taigi pine impuileger a cirta. Trian don tanirde, .i. ar in coibchi tanairte, .i. ip in coibche tanairte ip dá trian no beiread a athair ann; ocup ip aipe ip luğa beirear bpaéar odoar athair, uair ip luğa ip oíera lair upail na hingsine in trian tinol da ppeirci a tochur uairte. Mao cumrcairde. i. i mbar, no corpa nodaicapa, .i. uair ip e cuit in maétnaigti, damad trena hindeith-birur do neithean in timpair ná aircebad uatrum in eutruma do bepad don coibche. O ta ruide, .i. o ta airnir dam do niaoirin, .i. don inoircuad co ndeithir. Conpoglaigtear, .i. ip catn pdeiligter hi a cuma ploidic in penechar ina dul ip in roind ip nera. Ar ita cuit a coibche, .i. ar ata cuit i coibci caá mna don ogae bir don pine, amuil in cuit ata do a ndul cur in mnai mbarth cur a éiaar tap apad; ocup ip ar rin gabair, a bith do conici in aenmad rann pichit, uair ip eo rin ata do ip in meirpug a ndul cuici ar eicin, cto meirpocé aeep, cto meirpocch naó aeann; ocup potail eneclannu do po ained a coibche-lacair ina potlaib aili. A cuit, .i. do pmacht. Ip for puno do pcpiridair, .i. ip for punn tairpcter bpeá buain ocup ambuain na mban oligtech, ocup ambuain na mban nindligtech. Buain, .i. march, .i. tagban. Ambuain, .i. ole i. opochban.

no-
ascribed
cf O'B. 426

to odid.

oidus... na
huidheand O'B 427

O'Bav. 307

N.B.

In E.3.5 (O'B 1292), in H.3.17 (O'B 427), and in the excerpts in H.3.18 (C861) this tract is followed by the so-called do fastad cirt (V 426 ff), prefaced in all three cases by Hept. LXXVII (V 366)

If after the death of her father, i.e. in the case of him who is the next person to the chief this is so. If it be he that had sustained his crimes, i.e. if it be the head of the tribe that bears the weight of his crimes. One-third of the second, i.e. of the second nuptial present, it is of the second nuptial present her father, if living, would have had two-thirds; and a brother gets less than a father because he is less anxious to command the girl respecting the third of her 'tinol'-marriage-collection, ~~if her property is gone~~ from her. If she goes away of necessity, i.e. by death; ~~or is divorced~~; for the force of the doubt is, if it be without necessity she separates, it shall not take away from him the proportion of the nuptial present which he would get. From that out, i.e. as I am treating of this case, i.e. the going away with necessity. It shall be distributed, i.e. it is fairly distributed according to the arrangements of the 'Fenechus'-law with respect to its going to the nearest division. For a share of the nuptial present, i.e. for there is a share of the nuptial present of every woman due to the head of the tribe, as he has a share for going to the lewd woman, to whom approach is had notwithstanding notice; and from this is derived the custom that he has it (a share) to the twenty-first case, for this is his right in the case of the harlot, for going in unto her by force, whether she be a harlot who sells or a harlot who does not sell; and the honor-price is divided by him according to the nature of her relatives, into other distributions. His share, i.e. of the 'smacht'-fine. It is by this are known, i.e. it is by this the judgments of the good and bad women are passed, i.e. of the lawful and unlawful women. Proper, i.e. good, i.e. of good women. Improper, i.e. of bad, i.e. of bad women.

OF TAKING
LAWFUL
POSSESSION.

whether it be death or
div. that separates them

THE HISTORY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON
FROM THE FIRST SETTLEMENT TO THE PRESENT TIME
BY JOHN HUTCHINGS OF THE BOSTON BAR
IN TWO VOLUMES
VOL. II.
BOSTON: PUBLISHED BY J. B. ALLEN, 1825.

breatha comathcesa airoso.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY HERE.

- A. Rawl. B. 487, fol. 64^a + a - 67^r + a. (O'A. 2155-2188). to IV 152. 10. Stokes Acad. XXX, 58.
- B. E. 3. 5. p. 1^a - 6^t (O'A. 5, 1-29) IV 96. 17 - end. (followed here fr. IV 108. 8¹ 12^a 14).
- C. H. 3. 17, 304-311 (O'A. 400-408) Excerpto
- D. H. 3. 18. p. 10^t - 14^t. (C. 23-35) " , also p. 9^a (C 19-20), pp. 136-7 (C 241)
- E " p. 383^t - 384^a (C. 842-844) "
- F H. 5. 15 p. 2^a (O'A 1555 f.)

Brethru C
Brethra D uicheasa pl. c inso D breaththa comaitheasa an'oso.

A. fol. 64^a
JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

ms - O'Dow.

Ciò ar a neibenar comaithece? Cumagnair an'opin, ar'nin ni i' comaithe gnair caich dia'raibí do lompa' rma'cta ocu' cáiche; ar'ailí i' comaithece ar'nin ni i' cuma no do gaib aipe f'pí aithech, ocu' aipcin'dech f'pí 5 bachlaic.

q. V 268. 22

Breaththa comaithecepa .i. breicemnu' fo beap' umun cumaitecur, umun aitecur cumaróe, no umun cumagnair, umun gnair cumaróe, (.i. um an gna'cu'ga' cumaróe.)
Ciò ar a neibenar comaithece, .i. ciò ar a raitep' no ar a naipneitece in taitechur cumaróe. Cumagnair an'opin .i. gna'cu'ga' cumaróe ann'pin. Ar in ni i' comaithe gnair caich dia'raibí .i. ar i' comaithe gna'cu'ga' cáic' oib'pe céilí. Sma'cta .i. na méich. Cáiche .i. in riach uime caite¹ .i. muna p'ontar go ois'ce² in comaithece Ar'ailí i' comaithece .i. gne éile i' aitechur cumaróe. Ar in ni 15 i' cuma no do gaib .i. ar in pat i' comaithe, no i' eut'puna olesun don aipe gnaró pla'cta a gabail f'pí in aipe gnaró f'píme, ocu' aipcinnech na cillí a gabail pe ba'clach i' in éilí.

|| C 403, O'A 2405
(O'A 2156)

Cair,—can fopbeir coimaithece? Ail comarbur. Cia cputh'raige? Conpan'dat comarba cetamur a panda 20 ocu' a realba, ocu' impen cach oib' f'pí ar'ailí, ocu' do beir cach oib' oisuin dia'raile.

qaid e A

Cair,—can fopbeir coimaithece, .i. comarpeim canar a fopbpe² in taitechur cumaróe. Ail comarbur, .i. ar in caoin³ oib' uair, ar in 25 f'p'ann. Cia cputh'raige, .i. cia gne ríde. Conpan'dat comarba, .i. i' caoin up'annait na coim'et'aróe oib' in f'p'ann don cétna hamur lium aipneir no inn'pin de. Ar panda, .i. t'p' noiburó. Ar realba, .i. f'p'ann athar ocu' f'enathur. Impen cach oib' f'pí ar'ailí, .i. 30 oib' na'gíró á céilí. Do beir cach oib' oisuin, .i. gell da f'p'epall pe comall in comaithecepa, .i. oí f'ó ois'ce², conach f'p'ic cin ino'ia' cach do cum a céilí.

¹ Airchinnech.—The steward of the church lands, or the ecclesiastical holder of the church lands. He was a layman, but had primam tonsuram.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY HERE.

WHY is co-tenancy so called? That is equal customs ('cumagnais'), because the customs are equally good for all reciprocally to levy 'smacht'-fines and penalties; or, otherwise, it is co-tenancy, because it affects the chief equally ('cuma') with the plebeian ('aithech'), and the 'airchinnech'¹ the same as the shepherd.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY

q. O'Naw 524

cleric

Judgments of co-tenancy, i.e. these are judgments that are passed concerning the common tenancy, concerning the holding in common, or concerning the common custom, the common usage, i.e. concerning the common custom of holding land.

Why is co-tenancy so called? i.e. why is the holding in common so called or denominated. Equal customs, i.e. that is common usage. Because the customs are equally good for all, i.e. because the usage is equally good ('commaith') for all reciprocally. 'Smacht'-fines, i.e. the sacks. Penalties, i.e. the fine for man-trespass, i.e. which are imposed, unless the common custom ('comaithces') is lawfully observed. Or, otherwise it is co-tenancy, i.e. another reason why it is so called is, it is a common holding. Because it affects, &c., i.e. for the reason that it is in an equal degree, or in the same proportion that the chief of lordly grade and the chief of the Feini grade are bound to receive it, and the 'airchinnech' of the church is to receive it the same as a shepherd in the church.

Question—Whence does co-tenancy arise?—From several heirs. In what manner is this?—The heirs, in the first place, partition their shares and their possessions, and each of them ^{guards} against the other, and each of them gives a pledge of indemnification to the other.

inviolability

Question—Whence does co-tenancy arise? i.e. I ask whence does the common custom arise?—From several heirs, i.e. from the noble heirs encreasing on the land. In what manner is this? i.e. in what way is this?—The heirs partition, i.e. the landholders fairly divide the land in the first place, of which I shall relate or tell. Their shares, i.e. their 'dibadh'-land. Their possessions, i.e. the father's or the grand-father's lands. Each of them guards against the other, i.e. each of them against the other. Each of them gives a pledge of indemnification, i.e. a pledge of two 'screpalls' to observe the law of the co-tenancy; i.e. 'di' is a negative, that the fine for the injury done by the cattle of each would not fall upon the other.²

heritage, (i.e.) from

² To the other.—There seems to be some error or defect in the MS. here.

JUDG-
MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

aim i C(09400) —
Afol 64².

Cair—Cid dofet a comaiter? Dofet rando ime. Cach ime co na rma²taib, cach tairgill cona caiche; ar 1 mbia² rma²ta ni bia² caiche; 1 mbia² caiche ni bia² rma²ta. Imdingaib naidm naeraib. [nolva E] leg. undigabur (Thom. Bsch. p. 59).

indingaib naidm nolva E (C842)

- 5 Cair—Cid dofet a comaiter, .i. comaircim cid ip remte²ta²ch ipin aitechur cumare. Dofet rando ime, .i. ip remte²ta²ch² lium roinn in p²ra²no na ime do denam. Cach ime co na rma²taib, .i. cac ime sur in ni rma²ta²ch² aza denam, .i. namu rru clair, roc rru coraio, bia² rru duime, proba rru pelma. Cach tairgill cona caiche, 10 .i. na meic .i. cae² gell² toirp²nech² na in r²ia² duime²ta²te. Cona caiche .i. gell² da r²ep²all². Ar 1 mbia² rma²ta ni bia² caiche, .i. in uair bia² in² rma²ta²ch² ann, in r²ia²hu ocu² in roc rru coraio, no²ca bia² in² do be²ar ip² na cin²taib .i. na meic no in r²ia²ch duime caiche. 1 mbia² caiche ni bia² rma²ta, .i. in uair be² na meic no in r²ia²ch duime- 15 chaite no²ca bia² in² rma²ta² rru clair ocu² in roc rru coraio. 1 m²dingaib naidm naeraib, .i. ip eim dingba²ther do r²ia² nu²ara² cona² naidm naeraib uil re comalla² in comaitera, aet ma gell².

Afol 64².

(for in²ra²ntar ? n/s)

For of in²ra²ntar?

- Cair—Codentar coimaiter? Anra²ntar aile ar treiri; ingaibtar aile ime dia cuic²i; im²porcin²tar 20 aile dia dechma²de; in²comalla²tar og ime dia m²ir.

- Cair—Codentar comaiter, .i. comaircim cinnur do nie²her in taite²ur cumare. Anra²ntar aile ar treiri, .i. up²ra²ntar in p²ra²ann uma noentar in taile ar treiri. Ingaibtar aile ime dia cuic²i, .i. gabur aile do denam² i r²orbu cuic²i a²ime, ocu² da la doib²re buain 25² p²ra²da. Im²porcin²tar aile dia dechma²de, .i. r²ip²cin²ter in² noet aile do to²ra²et i r²orbu de²ma²de, cin²no²ta in e²ir o²ra²gin. Inco- malla²tar og ime dia m²ir, .i. com²la²na²g²ter in ime com²la²na² do to²ra²et an a r²orbu in m²ir.

¹ Pledge.—'Targille' here signifies a pledge of two 'scrapalls' lodged with a neighbour for the payment of damages.

² Completed in a month.—Dr. O'Donovan has made the following remark on this point:—"The language is here very rude and unsatisfactory. It could be im-

Question—What is the first thing in the co-tenancy?—The division precedes fences. Every fence is liable to^a legal conditions; every pledge¹ to damages; where the requisites commanded by law are observed there are no penalties; where there are fines, the things commanded by law are not observed. The new custom avoids security.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. With.

Thurneigen Burgschaff

P. 60.

com. d. 1271, 18, 399.

"binding" basisis near Kyelungen."

Question—What is the first thing, i.e. I ask what comes foremost in the common co-tenancy?—The division precedes fences, i.e. I deem it foremost that the division of the land should be made before the fences. Every fence, is liable to legal conditions, i.e. every fence should be made by what the law commands, i.e. a spade for making a trench, a bar for a stone fence, a hatchet for a strong fence, a billhook for a 'felma'-fence. Every pledge to damages, i.e. the sacks, every relieving pledge, or the fine for man-trespass. To damages, a pledge of two 'screpalls.' Where the requisites commanded by law are observed, i.e. where the thing commanded is observed, i.e. the spade for a trench, and the bar for a stone wall, the things to be paid in for the faults are not to be given, i.e. the sacks or the fines for man-trespass. Where there are fines the things commanded by law are not observed, i.e. when the sacks or the penalties for man-trespass are due, the spade has not been brought for making the trench, and the bar for the stone-fence. The new custom, i.e. it is well settled by (according to) new knowledge that it is not the variety of a surety that is given to observe the co-tenancy law, but a pledge.

etym gloss on
naesail

provided there be ?

Question—How is a co-tenancy made?—It is divided in three days for the stakes; the fencing is begun in five days; the fence is finished in ten days; the perfect fence is completed ^{in a month} ~~in a month~~.²

Question—How is a co-tenancy made, i.e. I ask how is the common tenancy made?—It is divided in three days, i.e. the land on which the stake (palisade) fence is to be made is divided in three days. The fencing is begun in five days, i.e. the fence is commenced to be made at the end of five days, and two days are allowed to them to cut its wood. The fence is finished in ten days, i.e. it is truly finished as to its reaching the condition of a naked palisading at the end of ten days, excepting the blackthorn crest at top. The perfect fence is completed in a month, i.e. the complete fence is brought to its completion at the expiration of the month.

proved thns: Quere—How is a farm of common occupancy formed?—In three days the land is marked out for fencing. The fencing must be commenced in five days (of which two days are allowed for cutting the timber). In ten days the fences must be set up and finished, with the exception of the blackthorn crest at top, which must be completed a month after the work has been commenced."

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

¹ = Car. 8².

Caip—Cadiat r¹machtaime oc¹ur comaitheara? Smachta ime, nama f¹u clair, roc f¹u coraid, biaid f¹u dairime, f¹obad f¹u f¹elmad. ² Dairt cach¹a t¹reiri na¹oimcoir ^{l. imcoe (Th.)} rainde ro¹ feola f¹air. ² Ceithre ime do¹ cuirin: clair 5 cora, dairime, f¹elmad. A¹raile, i¹ dairt cach¹a t¹reiri na¹oimcoir rainde f¹u cach nime. 15CZ 314 §8

and imcoir rainde f¹u (85)

Caip—Cadiat r¹machtaime? .i. comaitheara c¹ad¹ na ne¹te r¹ma¹etaig¹er ac venam na hime i¹ f¹in aitechur cumaid. Smachta ime, .i. i¹ e ni r¹ma¹et-aig¹er acu ac venum na hime. F¹obad f¹u f¹elmad, .i.
10 f¹u i¹ f¹al ma¹t, f¹u i¹ nochtail. F¹er oc¹ur a¹rlimanda co t¹ara¹ctam i¹ar ma¹oin, oc¹ur l¹ig¹i i¹ l¹o oc¹ur ru¹riu a¹o¹ci, r¹ia¹c f¹er i¹ mo¹tib u¹il, a¹rlim l¹ai oc¹ur ru¹riu l¹ai, oc¹ur t¹airce a¹o¹ci, oc¹ur a¹rlim a¹o¹ci, l¹et r¹ia¹c f¹er i¹ mo¹tib u¹il. Dairt cach¹a t¹reiri na¹oimcoir rainde ro¹ feola f¹air, .i. dairt ca¹a t¹reiri ro¹ me¹tar a¹ir, munub i¹ in ime 15 i¹ eim coir do¹ do¹ rinne um a¹ roinn. Ceithre ime do¹ cuirin, .i. ceithre hime d¹ircaig¹ther no¹ t¹airce¹ur. Clair, cora, .i. clair no cu¹ru i¹ f¹in no¹ctmachaire. Dairime, .i. i¹ f¹in ca¹ill, .i. no¹ctail, (no) i¹ f¹in l¹et ma¹aire. ^{no¹ F¹ u. A} f¹elmad. 1.

cf. 112. 11

[C 304 (D¹ 400) corughadh cachu cuaille pl. & give following as comment on foregoing:]

Ma¹o ro¹ a¹ deir an f¹er amu¹ig, i¹ cuaille cé¹tcintach, oc¹ur
20 i¹ ro¹ a¹ deir an f¹er tall ní deir na cin itir, i¹ nech dia m¹bi lo¹g

¹ 'Feis'-trespass, i.e. the lying down of a beast in a field after being filled to satiety. This was a definite trespass. All this is apparently misplaced. For definitions of trespasses, vide pp. 124, 126.

² 'Ruiriu'-trespass, i.e. passing over fields. See p. 124, et seq., infra.

³ The man outside, i.e. the suer or plaintiff. Dr. O'Donovan remarks here, "It is very difficult to express these ideas neatly in English. The following may convey to the English reader a fair idea of the meaning:—

"If the suer says, 'This stake has injured my beast once; it is unlawfully con-

cf Car. p 315

Question—What are the ^{anforderungen für Zaun u. nachbarschaft} requisites commanded by law^a of fences and co-tenancy?—The requisites for the fences are a spade for making a trench, a bar for a stone wall, a hatchet for a strong fence, a billhook for a 'felmadh'-fence. A ^{calt} 'dairt'-heifer is the fine for every three days that he (the co-tenant) ^{of it} has neglected to make the proper portion which had fallen to him. There are four kinds of fences which might be required—a trench, a stone wall, a strong fence, a 'felmadh'-fence; or else, according to others, it (the fine) is a 'dairt'-heifer for every three days during which he (the joint tenant), has not made the proper portion of every fence.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

^a Ir. 'Smacht'. fines.

does not enclose (from infer). Plummer IX. 41.

Question—What are the requisites commanded by law of fences? i.e. I ask what are the things which are commanded for making the hedge in the common usage. The requisites commanded for the fences, i.e. it is the thing which is peremptorily ordered for making the fence. A billhook for a 'felmadh'-fence, i.e. for making the good fence ('fal maith'), i.e. for the naked fence. ('Feis'-trespass' and leaping over fences, so that they are caught in the morning and lying in the day, 'ruiriu'-trespass by night, and the fine for 'feis'-trespass is paid for them all; as to 'airlim'-trespass by day and 'ruiriu'-trespass by day and 'tairsce'-trespass by night and 'airlim'-trespass by night, half the fine for 'feis'-trespass is due for them all.) A 'dairt'-heifer for every three days during which he has neglected to make the proper portion, &c., i.e. a 'dairt'-heifer for every three days that he fails, if it be not the fence which is ^{his share, for his own failure on him} ^{guilty party} ^{right} due for him he has made ^{around} ^{portion} upon his division. Four fences which might be required, i.e. four kinds of fences are prescribed or required. A trench, a stone wall, i.e. a trench or wall on the bare plain. A strong fence i.e. in the wood, i.e. a naked fence, or in the half-cleared plain.

Plummer p. 42. (very etymology!)

If what the man outside^a says is, it is a stake of first fault, and what the man within says is, it is not in fault at all, the com-cf C2331 f.

structed, and I demand satisfaction for the injury,' and if the defendant denies that his stake is unlawfully formed or fixed, or that it could have done any injury unless unlawfully meddled with, then any person who has sufficient honour-price to qualify him may settle the dispute, and decide the satisfaction to be made for the first injury done by the unlawful stake, or declare that the stake is lawful, and that no injury has occurred by means of it.

"If the suer says, 'The stake is unlawfully made and fixed, and has now injured my beast for the second time, or the third time,' and the defendant replies,

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

έμεχ αν αιθγιη πο βιαδ υαδὰ ινα cέτ' cινατο ; cona περνα cin ιτιρ, ιρλαν το.

Μαο, γεδ α περ αν περ αμυιζ, ιρ cυαλλε δεcιναδ no πεcιntach ηε, ocyr α περ in περ tall ιρ cυαλλε cέτ' cινατ, ιρ λειθ περ 5 no λαν, περ το ρεμ, λετ διρε no λαν διρε δε ; ocyr αιθγιη υαδ ινα cέτ' cινατ, ocyr noα γαβανθ γεμim ιμε διβ ταρ ειρ διιριμε, υαιρ λιναδ διλλεβυρ in cλαιρ, ocyr βυριτο cραινο αν cοραδ.

linaid dubur O'K 401

Cιντα το ιιαδ na cετρα in cέim βεταρ ca παρπερin, λετ α mβia ινα παρλιm ιπεδ διαρ ινα ταρπερ, ιρ ε αιρετ τετ in ριτθ co ρυιζι 10 τρι διαρτι, αμαλ ατα ρμαεταib.

(O'K 2159)

Αραιλε, ιρ διαρτ cαcα τρειρι naδιmcoιρ ραινοε ρυ cach nime, .i. gne eile, .i. ιρ διαρτ αρ cach τρειρι, munab i in ροινο ιρ eim coιρ το το ρυgne διμιθ.

Cιo παδα co po γαβυθ διιμε το λαιm ^{τινταm A} τινθραταin α cοδα το 15 denam don κομαίκερ, ηocha ηρυil ρμαετ παρ muna περνα ρογαλ, ocyr da noερna, ιca ειρic α ρογla. O γεβυρ imυρpo, αν διιμε το λαιm τινθραταin α cοδα don κομαίκερ το denam, ατά ρμαετ παρ, .i. διαρτ cαcα τρειρι, muna cαιmic ; no ce cαιmic, muna περνα ιμε ; no ce το ρινοι, muna be α ροιnn βοδεim po imγταρ A 20 imιγταρ ; no cιo hi α ρανθ βοδεim po imεrταρ, munab i in ιμε ιρ coιρ po imεrταρ ; no cιo hi in ιμε ιρ coιρ το ρινοε ιμε, ma po 3 A cuιρεrταρ ρen αιλι ocyr ρen αιρβεθ co ταβαιρ ταεβαθ ρυu.
Ocyρ in ρμαετ ρin διc το co cenθ μιρ, ocyr can ni διc o ρin amach co cenθ μιρ αιλι. Ocyρ γεall da ργερεall ó caδ comarō-25 tech αρ δελγαn τιζι α ceili po cοραib α λεpta ρe comallad διιζεθ αν comaiθκερα ; ocyr cin co comaille, noθo ne αν γεall ρin ταιτιρ ανθ, αετ αν ρμαετ α δυβραμυρ ρομανθ, no meich, of V 190!

'No, this is the first instance that it has caused any injury,' the neighbours will then decide by compurgation, which has the truth on his side. If they decide in favour of the defendant, he shall make compensation for the first injury which is technically called the first crime of the stake.

"Fines do not lie for injuries done by any of the other fences from the firm or close wooden fence up, 'because,' says the commentator, 'the foliage fills the trench, and the trees break the stone wall.'"

it is a person whose honor-price is = the amount of restitution that would have been due from him for its (the stake's) first offence (to swear) that it has been guilty of no offence (and if this is forthcoming) he is free

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY HERE.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

pensation that is obtained from him for its first fault is for one that has honor-price to decide; if no fault at all has been committed, he is free from blame.

If what the man outside says is, "it is a stake of two faults or three faults," and the man within says, "it is a stake of first fault," it is half proof or full proof that removes half 'dire'-fine or full 'dire'-fine from him; and compensation is obtained from him for its first fault, and none of these fences, ~~from the strong fence out, takes hold (claims damages),~~ for foliage fills the trench, and trees break the stone wall.

avails instead of a daime

i.e. on the wood!

As to the trespasses which the cattle commit while they are seen, half of that fine which lies for their 'airlim'-trespass shall be for their 'tairsi'-trespass, and the extent of its increase is to three 'dairt'-heifers, as it is in other 'smacht'-fines.

Or else, it is a 'dairt'-heifer for every three days during which he has not made the proper portion of every fence, i.e. another version, i.e. it is a 'dairt'-heifer for every three days, unless it be the division that is right for him, he has made of the fence.

However long a person may have delayed taking in hand to commence the performing of his share of the co-tenancy duties, there is no 'smacht'-fine upon him unless trespass has been committed, but if it has been committed, he shall pay the 'eric'-fine of the trespass. But, from the time that the man has taken in hand to begin to do his share of the co-tenancy duties, he is liable to 'smacht'-fine, i.e. a 'dairt'-heifer for every three days of delay, unless he has come; or, though he has come, if he has not made a fence; or though he has made it, unless it be his own portion he has fenced; or though it be his own share he has fenced, unless he has made the proper kind of fence; or though it be the proper fence he has made upon it, if he has put up old stakes or old poles, trusting to them for a fence. And he shall pay^a this 'smacht'-fine to ^{Ir. Pays.} the end of a month, but shall pay nothing afterwards till the expiration of another month. And each co-tenant^b shall place a pledge of the value of two 'serrepalls' on one of the rack pins of each other's houses at the feet of the bed as security for the fulfilment of the duties of co-tenancy; and though he should not fulfil them, this is not the pledge that shall be forfeited for it, but the 'smacht'-fine which we have mentioned before, or sacks, or fines for man-

i.e. fencing
it

¹ To decide. -- There is some defect in the MS. here. no!

² Co-tenant, 'comarótech' means also co-tiller, or co-grazier, or co-occupant.

JUDG-
MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

|| O. 2267

no fiach duinecaithe fo aicned na fogla, ma ro far fogail ann.
Ocur i²⁹ i^Ao airm b²⁹ir ac denam a cota don cómaicéir no an ime, raína f²⁹ri clair, roc f²⁹ri cora²⁹o, biaí f²⁹ri duirime, f²⁹roba f²⁹ri felma. Ocur a²⁹irnae caich oib a laim a ceili i²⁹ in aóde, co ro 5 cumm²⁹i²⁹í leir t²⁹iaétain ar maidin do denam a cota don comai-chéir; ocur in ti na t²⁹iue²⁹ra i²⁹rlan a a²⁹irnae do caithem, ocur oia caíteer a²⁹irnae neich, a²⁹ta fia²⁹e foim²⁹ime u²⁹o. Ocur i²⁹ e coir denma na clarae t²⁹ri t²⁹roi²⁹í in²⁹ a le²⁹et²⁹ i²⁹ar nua²⁹atar, ocur o²⁹a t²⁹roi²⁹í ar me²⁹on, ocur t²⁹roi²⁹í i²⁹ar ní²⁹atar, ocur t²⁹ri t²⁹roi²⁹í in²⁹a 10 t²⁹ar²⁹obe, ocur t²⁹ri t²⁹roi²⁹í a le²⁹et²⁹ an muir cur²⁹tar a²⁹ir i²⁹ar ní²⁹atar, ocur o²⁹a t²⁹roi²⁹í ar me²⁹on, ocur t²⁹roi²⁹í i²⁹ar nua²⁹atar, ocur t²⁹ri t²⁹roi²⁹í in a²⁹ir²⁹oi in muir, cona²⁹o f²⁹e t²⁹roi²⁹í in a²⁹ir²⁹oi na clara²⁹ch raim ocur in a²⁹ir²⁹de in muir. ar a c²⁹no.

(O. 2166)

1¹ cora imuir¹ro, t¹ri t¹roi¹te in¹u le¹et¹at i¹ar ní¹atar, ocur o¹a
15 t¹roi¹í ar me¹o¹an, ocur t¹roi¹í i¹ar nua¹atar, ocur f¹e t¹roi¹í in¹a ha¹ir¹oi.

1¹ o¹a¹irime imuir¹ro, i¹ aml¹u¹o o¹le¹tar a o¹en¹u¹m f¹í¹de; ba¹ir in c¹roim¹o ar bun in c¹roim¹o eile, ocur cona t¹ira in t¹ar¹c bec t¹ri¹ti ar o¹lu¹í, na in o¹am t¹ar¹ar ar a¹ir¹oi.

= ndeil (f. 112. 14)

20 1¹no¹et¹aili i¹ aml¹a o¹le¹tar i¹í¹de; t¹roi¹í co n¹o¹il n¹o¹ru¹m i¹ar í¹ac o¹a cuail¹le, ocur f¹e t¹roi¹í in¹a ha¹ir¹de, no o¹a o¹or¹u¹í¹ o¹é¹c, ma o¹a o¹or¹u¹ib o¹im¹itar; i¹ t¹ri b¹unchu¹ir f¹air, b¹unchu¹ir f¹air i¹ar ní¹atar, ocur a¹reil¹í ar me¹o¹on, ocur a¹raile i¹ar nua¹atar, ocur a¹o i¹ar í¹ach o¹a b¹unchu¹ir; ocur o¹or¹u¹í¹ fo¹t in chuail¹le o f¹ean amu¹in,* 25 ocur c¹ir o¹roigen f¹air i¹ar nua¹atar; ocur t¹ri be¹im¹no¹a¹ ceano¹ do f¹ar¹cha/A í¹acha cuail¹le con¹iar na í¹o¹a ar t¹ur ama¹il con¹ice¹ra.
[d.]

1¹no¹a¹ i¹ no¹le¹tar na ime¹o f¹in .i. clair no cora¹o i¹ in machaire, ocur no¹et¹aili i¹ in le¹t¹machaire, ocur o¹a¹irime i¹ in caill. Ocur cut¹ruma i¹ na¹ir¹oi uile.

¹ His victuals.—The word ‘a¹irnae,’ here translated, ‘victuals,’ occurs under the forms ‘eap¹anach,’ ‘e¹panach,’ and ‘e¹nae,’ in a paragraph on co-tenancy, in the “Finnsruth Fithil,” (O.D. 1556), where it is added, that if a man’s ‘e¹nae’ be used “he is not entitled to compensation, nor to a fine for over use.” The term may mean the metal implements each co-tenant was obliged to have for the work of fencing. As a term for the ploughshare and coulter together, it is still a living word in the south of Ireland.

* = os [f]enamion, cf 112.15, O.Dat. 868

trespass, according to the nature of the trespass, if trespass has taken place therefrom. And the implements which they shall have in making their shares of the co-tenancy work, or of the fence, are a spade for a trench, a bar for a stone wall, a hatchet for a strong fence, and a billhook for a 'felma'-hedge. And each of them shall give his ^{his iron implement of} ~~victuals~~ ^{fre. to use his iron} into the hand of the other at night, that he may remember to come in the morning to do his share of the co-tenancy work; and the ^{he who will not come it is} ~~victuals of the person that~~ ^{cf. Car. 8} ~~will not come~~ ^{q. p. 315-16} may be safely used, and if the ^{iron implement} ~~victuals~~ of any of them be used, he shall pay fine for over-use. And the true making of the trench is three feet in its breadth at the top, and two feet in the middle, and one foot at the bottom, and three feet in its depth, and three feet the thickness of the mound which is placed over it, at the bottom, and two feet in the middle, and one foot at the top, and three feet the height of the mound, so that the depth of that trench and the height of the wall over it make^a six feet.

Now as to the stone fence, there are three feet in its thickness at the bottom, and two feet in the middle, and a foot at the top, and six feet in its height.

But as to the ^{making} close-fence, it is thus it should be made: the top of the one tree shall be on the trunk of the other tree, and so as that the smallest suckling pig^b could not pass through it for its closeness, nor the ox pass over it for its height.

The naked fence should be thus made: the length of a foot to the articulation (or separation) of the big toe is to be between every two stakes, and six feet in its height, or twelve hands, if it be measured by hands; and three bands of interwoven twigs² upon it, a band on it at the bottom, another in the middle, and another at the top, and a certain space between every two bands; and a hand is the length of the pole (the interweaving) from that out,³ and a black-thorn crest upon it at the top; and every stake should be flattened at top by three blows ^{of a mallet} struck on its head, after being first thrust by the hand on the ground as well as you can.

The places where these fences should be are thus, i.e. a trench or a stone wall in the plain, and the naked fence in the half-plain, and the close fence in the wood. And the height of them all is equal.

^a Bands of interwoven twigs.—'Dunchop,' literally, 'butt-setting,' means a band of ozers interwoven between the standards or stakes.

^b For 'amun' here which seems to make no sense, Dr. O'Donovan conjectured 'anunn,' and translated accordingly. Professor O'Curry translated "o pean amun," "above the wickerwork." The MS. Rawlinson, 487, fol. 64 a, col. 2, has "amun." o'New. 365 recte?

11D (C842f)

A f. 64⁴JUDG-
MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

Smachta tairgillí cach raití itir rampaó ocu eturrcaraó ocu caomtaét; aht ní cuma cōimtiagait ocu eturrcaraat, randoar dono in bliadain 1 nōe fū rmachta, ar ní cormaíl rmaéta) cachā raithe, annrom 5 α rmahta gaimpuáéta ocu eirrach gūit, ar irruithe of 88. 26 beo bethu tortha. Treidib miach miter cach nethe-main, miach i nathlumpaire, leōmiach fū monai ar ailm; bea de dartaiz ar fēir, ar ir fēir cach lize caé tairraide, ailm aét na deilret naé tairraide, aét 10 tairraide anō iar naide. C. 304 (D. B. 400)

betar?

pfechir pr. subj. of laigid w. de-en-

Th² 534

awche?

A f. 64⁴

Smáéta tairgillí cach raití, .i. in ní rmaétaigter tar conn na ngell toirnéac cach raithe. Itir rampaó, .i. in epic. Eaturrcaraó
 .i. in eturrcaraur fū in gēimpe don eirrach. Caomtaét, .i. in bī ma choimidecht de. Ní cuma cōimtiagait ocu eturrcaraat, .i.
 15 aht ní cutpuma in bī a coimidecht in gēimpe don eirrach ocu in eturrcaraur fū de. Randoar dono in bliadain, .i. urrannatar dono in bliadain ar dō re hic rmaéta. Ar ní cormaíl rmaéta cachā raithe, .i. uair noā cormaíl in rmaétaigter anō in cach raithe.
 Annrom α rmahta gaimpuáéta, .i. ir dō na nēib ir innra no ir 20 annra ann in rmaétaigter α puact in gēimpe. Eirrach gūit, .i.
 in uair bī euit ar na hinnib ir in eirrach. Ar irruithe beo bethu .i. ar ir uairle in dō beir beata dō nā buab ir in gēimpe na

¹ Every quarter.—Upon this Dr. O'Donovan observes:—"A literal translation of this passage could not be understood by an English reader." The following is submitted as the closest that could be considered intelligible:--

"Relieving pledges are ordained for every quarter of the year, both in summer and in the parts separated from or added to it, but these parts are not equal, for the year is divided in two regulations for the 'smacht'-regulations of every quarter are not alike. The 'smacht'-regulations of the winter, and the cold portion of spring are more difficult, for living food is more noble than fruit.

"Three sacks are estimated as the fine for trespassing on all rich land, half a sack for pastured land, and half a sack for a mountain.

"Two 'dairt'-heifers are adjudged for lying down satiated after grazing, for every Additional pledges for 'smacht'-fines are payable every quarter¹ of a year, both in summer and in the parts of autumn and spring, subtracted from or added² to winter; but the parts added and subtracted are not equal, for the year is divided into two parts² for regulating 'smacht'-fines, for the 'smacht'-fines of each quarter are not alike, because it is difficult to regulate the 'smacht'-fines of the winter season, and of the spring cold,³ for saved provisions are more precious than growing grass. Three sacks are estimated for damage committed by trespass in cornland, a sack in pastured land, half a sack in a mountain field; two 'dairt'-heifers for 'feis'-trespass, for every lying down is called 'feis'-trespass when detected; every detection is 'airlim'-trespass if they (the cattle) have not lain down, but detection therein after a night.

JUDGMENTS OF
CO-TENANCY.

^a Ir. Separation and accompaniment.

for etham, athlumpane

9 months of C 2668

cf. mach each oen
monai C 1503

Additional pledges for 'smacht'-fines every quarter, i.e. the thing which is ~~ordained~~ for the relieving pledges every quarter of a year. In summer, i.e. the 'eric'-fine. Subtracted, i.e. the part of the spring which is detached from winter. Added to, i.e. that part of it which accompanies it. But the parts added and separated are not equal, i.e. but the part of spring which is added to the winter, and the part which is subtracted from it are not equal. For the year is divided, i.e. the year is divided into two parts for the regulation of payment of 'smacht'-fines. For the 'smacht'-fines of every quarter are not alike, i.e. for the thing ordained by law in each quarter is not alike. It is difficult to regulate the 'smacht'-fines of the winter season, i.e. the thing commanded to be given as fines during the cold of the winter is among the difficult things of law. Spring-cold,^b i.e. when the cattle are shivering in the spring. For saved provisions are ing. more precious, i.e. for more noble is the thing which gives food to the cows disputed in virtue of?

lying down when detected is a 'feis'-trespass. It is an 'airlim'-trespass if they did not lie down. No fine for lying-down lies for any detection, except their being caught in the morning."

¹ The year is divided into two parts.—According to C. 23, the year was divided into two unequal parts. The 'Samfucht,' or warm season, comprises five months, viz., the last month of spring, the three months of summer, and the first month of autumn; and the 'Gamfucht' comprised seven months, viz., the two last months of autumn, the three months of winter, and the two first months of spring.

³ Spring cold.—That is, during February and March, which were considered a part of the winter. See p. 89, infra.

^b Ir. Shivering.

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

(O'D 2162)
min tsamrara

iní do beir toru dóib i rin trampaó. Treisib miach miter cach nethemáin, .i. treise do miachab ír he ní meiremnaiscear 1 peir ocu in ariim diguin peoir etam. Miach i nathlumpaire, .i.
peir aélumpuire peoir etamuin trampaata. Let miach ppi monaí, 5 .i. i nariim aélumpuire mona geimpeata ne diguin mona rampata.
Dera de dartaig ar peir, .i. breitemnaiscear de dartaig da psepall ar ceitre miachab, .i. i peir diguin peoir etamuin geimpeata. 30 mp A Ar ír peir cach lise caó tarrpaióe, .i. eipe peir forru o tarrpaister an iat na lise. Ariim aét na deilret, .i. eipe 10 ariime orra aét na no laisat ann. Naó tarrpaióe aét tarrpaióe an o iar naióe, .i. noó tarrpaétain éile a deisum eipe peir orru ina ariim, aét a tarrpaétain an o iar maoin.

* .i. aiche C843

|| O'D 2376

Ceithre^e eirnaí comaró in comaícepa a níctar lanriac peir,
.i. peir lae, ocu peir aóe, ruire na haóe, ocu ariim na 15 haóe, cona torpaétain an ariim an o iar maoin. Ceire he-naile comaró an comaícepa a níctar let riac peir, .i. ruire an lae, ocu ariim an lae, tairce na haóe ocu ariim na haóe, cona torpaétain an ariim ann iar maoin. Let riach ariim in lae a tairce an lae, no let riac tairce na haóe a tairce 20 an lae, ocu ír í rin an aen heirnaí ceithraman.

Summary of following in H. 3. 18 p. 136-7 (C 241 E)

ceithre ních i feis ndiquinn feir etadh (? wrothly t.t.) O'D 1557

|| O'D 1557, C 241 E
C 990.

Ceire meic a peir diguin peoir etamuin geimpeata tar lan ime, da miac ina ariim, ocu miac ina tairce. Mar i aélumpaire peoir etamuin geimpeata no diguin mona geimpeata, no caille geimpeata, no aélumpaire geimpeata, no i ndiguin peoir etamuin 25 trampaó, da miac ina peir, ocu miach ina ariim, ocu let meic ina tairce. Mar i aélumpuire mona geimpeata, no caille geim-peata, no aélumpuire geimpeata, no aélumpuire peoir etamuin tram-pata, no a ndiguin mona rampata no caille rampata, miac ina peir, let meich ina ariim, ceathraime méich ina tairce. Mar i 30 aélumpuire mona rampata no caille rampata, no aélumpuire ram-pata, let meich ina peir, ocu ceithreime meich ina ariim, ocu

(O'D 2163)

¹ Enclosed field.—On the term “diguin,” Dr. O'Donovan, quoting an old gloss, says, it meant grass which was not to be violated, i.e. a meadow.

in winter than the thing which gives produce to them in the summer. Three sacks are estimated for trespass in cornland, i.e. three sacks is the fine estimated for 'feis'-trespass and 'airlim'-trespass in an inclosed meadow. A sack in a pastured field, i.e. for lying in a pastured field of grass land in the summer. Half a sack in a mountain field, i.e. for leaping into a pastured field of winter mountain land with an inclosed field of summer mountain land. Two 'dairt'-heifers shall be given for 'feis'-trespass, i.e. two, 'dairt'-heifers of the value of two 'screpalls' with four sacks are adjudged, i.e. for 'feis'-trespass in a properly fenced winter grass land. Every lying-down is called 'feis'-trespass, &c., i.e. 'eric'-fine for 'feis'-trespass is charged on them when they are caught there lying down. 'Airlim'-trespass if they have not lain down, i.e. 'eric'-fine for 'airlim'-trespass is charged on them if they have not lain down. Every detection, but detection therein after the night, i.e. it is not for any other detection I say that 'eric'-fine for 'feis'-trespass is charged on them for their 'airlim'-trespass, but for their being caught there in the morning.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

cf V 464.13

There are four equal cases in^a the co-tenancy in which full fine^a Ir. Of for lying down trespass is paid, i.e. lying down by day, and lying down by night, 'ruire'-trespass by night, and 'airlim'-trespass by night, and their being detected in their 'airlim'-trespass there in the morning. There are four equal cases in the co-tenancy for which half fine for 'feis'-trespass is paid, i.e. 'ruire'-trespass by day, and 'airlim'-trespass by day, 'tairsce'-trespass by night, and 'airlim'-trespass by night, if they are detected in their 'airlim'-trespass there in the morning. Half the fine for the 'airlim'-trespass by day is due in the case of 'tairsce'-trespass by day, or half the fine for 'tairsce'-trespass by night in the case of 'tairsce'-trespass by day, and this is the only case of a fourth (i.e. of fourth fine).

rather a fine of $\frac{1}{4}$.

Four sacks are due for 'feis'-trespass in a winter grass field over a full fence, two sacks for 'airlim'-trespass, and a sack for 'tairsce'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of winter grass land, or upon an inclosed field of winter mountain land, or winter wood, or an old winter milking place, or into an inclosed field of summer grass land, two sacks are due for 'feis'-trespass, and a sack for 'airlim'-trespass, and half a sack for 'tairsce'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of winter mountain, or winter wood, or an old winter milking place, or a pastured field of summer grass land, or into an inclosed field of summer mountain or summer wood, a sack is due for 'feis'-trespass, half a sack for 'airlim'-trespass, and a quarter of a sack for 'tairsce'-trespass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of summer mountain or summer wood, or summer old milking-place, half a sack is due for 'feis'-trespass, and a quarter of a sack for 'airlim'-trespass, and the

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

in seized and caecat
(b/2267?)

and/

οὐτμαὸ meich ἵνα ταῖρε. ^{vi. 7} Οὐτμαὸ ^{vi. 7} an οὐτμαὸ ar cach naen anmaño nangburo, uar angbarō caē mīl a comaiēp. Ταῖρε aen anmunto an aēlumpaire mona rampata, cto bē da poiēdō, in peiēdō pando leē aen meich. 1r e arēt ata in pīt rin co pūci 5 τῖ peēt nanmanōa do aen peib a noul anuno tar berndaiē raīne; ocuṛ maṛ tar aen bernei do cuatari, rmaēt ar in cēt anmua, ocuṛ aithgin peoiṛ no arbañ ar caē nanmann o ēa rin amach.

Ὅα βα in pīaē dūinecaīti cinniti tar lan ime, ocuṛ bo ocuṛ 10 pānairc tar leē ime; bo maṛ cin ime itir; a noīgoīn peoiṛ geim-piō ata rin. Maṛ i aēlompaire peoiṛ eṭamain geimpeō, no a noīgoīn mona geimpiō no caillē geimpiō, no aēbuaīlō geim-piō, no a noīgoīn peoiṛ eṭamain tramrata, bo ano tar lan ime, ocuṛ xτῖ cētramina tar leē ime; rampairc maṛ cin ime itir.

15 Maṛ i aēlompaire mona no caillē, no aēbuaīlō geimpeṭa, no aēlompaire peoiṛ eṭamain rampata, no a noīgoīn mona no caillē, no aēbuaīl rampata, rampairc ano tar lan ime, ocuṛ a teoria cētramime tar leē ime, colpac re rēripall maṛ cin ime itir.

20 Mara aēlompaire mona no caillē, no aēbuaīl rampata, colpac
.iii. rēripall ann tar lan ime, ocuṛ a teoria cētramina tar leē ime, dairc cētri rēripall maṛ gin ime itir.

Ὅ in pīach dūinecaīti conotabaritach dar lan ime, ocuṛ colpac pāi no pūire tar leē ime. Tar lan ime at na meich, 25 ocuṛ a leē tar leē ime, ocuṛ noōon pūil nī maṛ cin ime itir.
Tar lan ime ata in pīach dūine caite ocuṛ a teoria cētramime tar leē ime, ocuṛ leē, maṛ gin ime itir.

Canar i ngabur teoria cētramime in peich dūinecaīti tar leē

¹ Restitution.—That is, the owner must make good the grass or corn destroyed by the animal.

eighth of a sack for 'tairsce'-trespass. The eighth of the eighth is the fine upon every trespassing animal, for every beast is a trespasser in a co-tenancy. For the 'tairsce'-trespass of one animal upon a pastured field of summer mountain pasture, whatever animal commits it, a sixth part of the half of one sack is due. This extends^a to three times seven animals of one herd in their going over different gaps; and if it be over one gap they went, there is 'smacht'-fine upon the first animal, and compensation for grass or corn upon every animal from that out.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. The length to which this run is, till it reaches, &c.

Two cows is the fine for definite man-trespass over a full fence, and a cow and a 'samhaisc'-heifer if across a half fence; a cow is the fine if there be no fence at all. This is for trespass in a preserved field of winter-grass. If it be trespass upon a pastured field of winter-grass land, or upon a preserved field of winter mountain or winter wood, or old winter milking-place, or upon a preserved field of summer grass-land, a cow is the fine for it if across a full fence, and three-fourths of the value of a cow across a half fence; a 'samhaisc'-heifer, if there be no fence whatever.

If it be a pastured field of winter mountain or wood, or an old milking-place, or a pastured field of summer grass-land, or a preserved field of summer mountain or wood, or an old milking-place, a 'samhaisc'-heifer is the fine for trespass on it over a full fence, and three quarters of a cow over a half fence, a 'colpach'-heifer worth six 'screpalls,' if there be no fence at all.

If it (the trespass) be upon a pastured field of summer mountain or wood, or an old milking-place, a 'colpach'-heifer of the value of six 'screpalls' is the fine for it if across a full fence, and three quarters of a 'colpach'-heifer across a half fence, a 'dairt'-heifer of the value of four 'screpalls,' if there be no fence at all.

A cow is the fine for doubtful man-trespass³ if across a full fence, and a 'colpach'-heifer is the fine upon him or her (the trespassing beast) across a half fence. For trespass committed across a full fence 'the sacks'² are paid, and the half thereof (i.e. of the sacks), across a half-fence, and there is nothing to be paid as fine if there be no fence at all.

Whence is it (i.e. the rule or precedent,) derived that it is three-quarters of the fine for man-trespass that is paid for the trespass

² The sacks. The term is here technically used. It means four sacks of oats and barley. See infra, p. 119.

³ Man-trespass.—That is, trespass committed by cattle with the connivance of, or caused by the owner, or some person in charge of them.

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

ime, ocyr co na fuil aēt let na miach? 1r ar gabur, let in reich duinecaiti cin ime itir, ocyr in let eile de ar rḡat lan ime; mara let ime fuil and, cethraime ar rḡath let ime; tabur in toētmaō rin a fuilleō in lete fuil cin ime, co na teopa cēt-5 raim in reich duinecaiti tar let ime.

Aj 64⁶²

Mocon rḡabur nác ní do na miacab cin ime, coir¹ no deirōi in = dam?
tan ata let ime and, cémaō let na rḡach do beē ar a rḡath.

|| O'A 1560

10 Mochan fuil deēbir ruirō na aiplime na tairrḡi, na médaḡḡi na laḡḡiḡḡi dinnili a leith re duinecaithi; ocyr ata deēbir diḡoin ocyr aēlompairre, athaim ocyr anaēaim, ocyr ata deēbir ime ocyr can ime; Ata a noēdebir uili re miacab.

i /

(O'A 2165)

15 Cíō po depa in tan 1r meich vlegar irin rḡaḡat co na fuil ní cin ime itir; ocyr in tan 1r rḡac duinecaiti imurro, co fuil a let rḡde cin ime itir? 1r é in rḡat rḡodepa, in coimēt do orḡaḡ vliḡi ar na hinḡili āta ac fir na ninḡili orro, ocyr inḡiḡḡeē deir an rḡeainḡo ḡan ime aḡi; ocyr coir cin co beē ní do na miḡeab 20 dō in tan na biaō ime aḡi. Mocon fuil a coimēt vliḡḡeē imurro, ac fir na inḡili orḡa in tan ata rḡach duinecaiti uad, ocyr coir ce no beē a let uad cin ime itir, cíō inḡiḡḡeē deir an rḡeainḡo ḡan ime do beē aḡe, uair conḡainḡat baē baēḡal eturru.

III 162.5

Deēbir diḡoin ocyr aēlompur, ocyr athaim ocyr anaēthim, ocyr ime ocyr can ime a let re rḡac duinecaiti; ocyr nocon fuil deēbir rḡiri na aiplime, na ruirō, na tairrḡi a let re rḡach duinecaiti; ocyr ata an deēbir uili a let re miacab.

aj H.3.18 p.136 (c241c-4)

25 1r ann atait na meich orro in inbaō ro rḡaḡab duine iat
1 rḡeib no a noirainḡo, ocyr ro rḡaḡab buachaill coḡnac re coir;

¹ One-eighth.—This is wrong, it should be 'one-fourth.'

committed by going across a half hedge, and that it is only half 'the sacks?' It is derived from this, that it is half the fine for man-trespass is due when there is no fence at all, and the other half of it for trespass over full fence; if it be a half fence that is there, there is a fourth of 'the sacks' for half fence; carry that one-eighth,¹ and add it to^a the half which is for the case of no fence at all, and it makes^a three-fourths of the fine for man-trespass across a half fence.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

* 1r. In addition to.

No portion of 'the sacks' is obtained without the fence, it is proper for this reason, that when there is a half fence, it should be half the fines that are due for it.

There is no difference of 'ruiridh'-trespass, or 'airlim'-trespass, or 'tairsgi'-trespass, or increase or decrease of cattle with respect to man-trespass; but there is a difference of meadow and pastured land, of profitable land and unprofitable, and there is a difference of fence and non-fence. All these differences are observed with respect to 'the sacks.'

What is the reason, when it is 'sacks' that are due for the trespass, that there is nothing due where there is no fence at all; but when there is fine for man-trespass, that the half thereof is due where there is no fence whatever? The reason is, the herding which the law has ordered for the cattle is provided by the owner of the cattle for them, and it is unlawful for the owner of the land not to have a fence; and it is right that he should have no portion of 'the sacks' when he has not a fence. The owner of the cattle has not provided the lawful herding for them when he pays fines for man-trespass, and it is in such case right that he should pay the one-half when there is no fence at all, even though it is unlawful for the owner of the land not to have a fence, for "fools divide the neglect² between them."

There is a difference between preserved grass-land and pastured land, and between profitable and unprofitable land, and between fence and non-fence,³ with respect to fines for man-trespass; and there is no difference between 'feis'-trespass and 'airlim'-trespass, or 'ruiridh'-trespass, or 'tairsee'-trespass, with respect to fines for man-trespases; and there is a difference between them all with respect to sacks.

Where they are fined 'the sacks' is where a person has left them (the cattle) in a mountain or a wood, and left a sensible adult

² Vid. vol. 3, p. 305. "Every Judge is punishable for his neglect."

³ Non-fence.—The MS. here has 'ca' with a stroke over the 'a,' such as usually is employed to mark 'c.' The meaning requires that the word should be read as "can."

as herdsman with them, or the care-taking which the law requires^a over them; a yoke for the pigs; a hood for the hens; ties of leather for the goats; a spancel for the yearling calves; a shepherd with the sheep; a herdsman with the cows.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. Says.

The case where the fine for definite man-trespass is due is when he (the trespasser) left them (the cattle) near the field of grass or corn, and he is certain that they would go into it. The fine for doubtful man-trespass is due when he is doubtful whether they would go or would not go into it.

If they are within the field as long as that they might be driven^b out thrice, it (the penalty) is full fine for man-trespass; if they are within so long as that they might be driven out twice, it is two-thirds of the fine for man-trespass; if they were within the field so long as that they might be driven out once, it is one-third of the fine for man-trespass.

^b Ir.
Brought.

When it is a case of ^{they visit} the violation of a 'nemed'-person's church or sanctuary, it (the fine) is not the same, but an ounce of silver is the fine for their rooting there, and this is charged upon 3 × 7 × 4 (84) animals of the one herd (cattle belonging to one man) after they have gone over the fence different times by different gaps; or upon three times seven animals multiplied by four (84) of different herds (possessions) when they have gone over once by different gaps; and if it be by the one gap, the 'smacht'-fine shall be only upon the first beast, and compensation for grass or corn from the owners of them all.

ad. ella? yes.

When it is a king's 'dun'-fort,¹ or a 'lis martradh'-fort² that is trespassed upon, let every hole made in the place be filled with 'eric'-sod,³ so as to be tantamount with the clay of each hole that was made therein, viz., let it be pressed and stamped with the heel, and let fine clay of the same nature be placed there afterwards, and the extent to which it runs, is as far as seven animals of the same possession (herd).

The additional 'smacht'-fines for instigation are to be paid in five days after damage, for trespass without ^a 'Eric'-sod.—The Irish word which Dr. O'Donovan has thus translated is 'argat', the usual word for 'silver,' even in the spoken language of the present day. In O'D., 1674, the reading is 'argat,' which appears to have the same meaning, both terms being Celtic forms of the Latin 'argentum'.

prob. owing to the etymolog. gl. erice got?

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

α εαithe cen nairdm naeraib. Γαιμορζαίν [mbriug-rechta] da trian a rochruice ir e a rmaet.

Ταιρζιλλε ρμαετα .i. αναδ τρειρι οκυρ διέτιμ εүйετι ρορ in ρμαετ, .i. no na ρμαετα ρυρι τάρηδα na γελλα τοιυτένεχα do τοραεταιν 5 ar eүйeτι; no in nί ρμαεταγετερ ne heipic in eйнай ρυρι ταρταό na γελλα τοιυτένεχα do τοραεταιν uaird ar eүйeτι, in tan ir aүйил α eйнай ρέιν τό eίν α ρυιb.

.1. in uair ir aүйил α eйнай ρέιν τό he, ir αναδ τρειρι ρορ in ρμαετ, οκυρ διέτιμ eүйeτι. In tan ir aүйил eйнай nínbleogáin 10 imurro, ir αναδ eүйeτι ρορ in ρμαετ οκυρ διέτιμ τρειρι ρορ in ρμαετ. Οκυρ ir ann ir aүйил α eйнай [ταό] ρέιν do eίν α ρυιb, in tan ατα uil in eйнай ir in roob ρeín; οκυρ ir ann ir aүйил eйнай eйнай nínbleogáin τό, eαe uair na ρυιl.

Cen nairdm naeraib, .i. eín nairdm naeraib ρυρ do ρορ nuareara
15 re comall in comaithcepa. Γαιμορζαίν, .i. opáin in brega ρυρ na coir uigetare ipin geimre. Da trian na desceide, ρμαετα uil ina ρeir οκυρ ina aүйил, irpeb ρυιl ina ρeir nama.

Cen nairdm naeraib, .i. eín nairdm naeraib ρυρ do ρορ nuareara
15 re comall in comaithcepa. Γαιμορζαίν, .i. opáin in brega ρυρ na coir uigetare ipin geimre. Da trian na desceide, ρμαετα uil ina ρeir οκυρ ina aүйил, irpeb ρυιl ina ρeir nama.

ο C305 (00400) Smacht C
* Dp.10.6. Smacht D
acht DC Cumma D om. DC om. DC samhuacht DC
7 D samhuacht DC
20 Arberaigh donno recht mira diob fhu rampuaet, ocyr a eүйe fhu rampuaet; an mí deiridnach do eүйuuch, ocyr tri míri rampuaid, ocyr tri míri an rogmair fhu rampuaet; eүйe mira imurro, fhu rampuaet, tri mira in gaimrú, ocyr in da mí tairpecha do eүйuach fhu gaim-25 puaet. It truma ρμαετα γεimrú olóarí ρmachta ramuaid, ar ipuithé beo beatha na mbo olóar a

¹ Farm-Laws.—The word “mbriugrechta” has been written over the words “da trian” in the MS. by a much later hand than that of the original scribe.

² ‘Smacht’-fine.—See p. 31 (O’D., 2171), and compare with O’D., 402. “Question —How are land trespasses calculated?—From the rents, i.e. from the full rent given for the land itself, the profitable or unprofitable grass-land which is injured is estimated.

Two-thirds of the rent is the fine, i.e. two-thirds of the rent which is charged for a ‘tir cumhaile’ of the best land, for three-quarters is the fine for ‘feis’-trespass in a meadow of winter grass land over a full fence, i.e. three ‘screpalls’ upon it for the three-quarters, and two ‘screpalls’ for ‘feis’-trespass in winter, and one for ‘feis’- trespass in the summer, i.e. the one-third of the three ‘screpalls.’ (II. 3, 17, col. 306.)

A passage similar to this very obscure one occurs in C, 25.—treating of the tres-

4 N 78.5

(642167)

105401
C23
C257

A 65 65 65

giving further legal security. For winter trespass in the farm-laws¹ two-thirds of the rent is the 'smacht'-fine².

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

The additional 'smacht'-fines, i.e. there is a stay of three days, and a delay in pound of five days for the payment of the 'smacht'-fine, i.e. or the 'smacht'-fines with which are given the additional pledges are to be brought in five days; or the thing which is commanded by law as 'eric'-fine for the crime for which the additional pledges are given, is to be brought by him in five days, when the crime of his beast is as his own crime.

That is, when it is to him like his own crime, there is a stay of three days for the payment of the 'smacht'-fine, and a delay in pound of five days. When however, it is as the crime of a kinsman,³ there is a stay of five days, and a delay in pound of five days for the payment of the 'smacht'-fine. And the case in which his beast's crime is to him like his own crime is, when the beast itself is value sufficient to pay for the damage;⁴ and it is⁵ as the crime of his kinsman, whenever it is not of that value.

^a Ir. When the value of the crime is in the beast itself.

Without giving further legal security, .i. without the guaranty of a contract-binder, according to new knowledge for observing the laws of co-tenancy. Winter trespass, i.e. trespass upon the farm with the proper regulations in the winter. Two-thirds of the fair rent, the 'smacht'-fines which are paid for 'feis'-trespass and 'airlim'-trespass, is that which is due for 'feis'-trespass alone.

There are different 'smacht'-fines every quarter of a year, but the 'smacht'-fine in the hot season is not the same as that of the cold season; even every month of these seasons is not alike. *Seven months of them are included^b in the hot season, and five in the cold season; the last month of spring, and the three months of summer, and the three months of autumn, are called^c the hot season; but the five months of the cold season are, the three months of winter, and the two first months of spring. The 'smacht'-fines of winter are heavier than the 'smacht'-fines of summer, for passes committed by swine. It runs as follows:—"What was in the old judgments?—Every pit that was rooted by swine to be filled respectively with corn, others say with butter, for they deemed it lawful to make good the damage done to the earth by its own produce. But this was afterwards changed to compensation for the thing injured."

f IV 78

^b Ir. Are said for.

^c Ir. For.

³ A kinsman.—'Inbleoghan' means a man's son, grandson, relative, or any person for whose crimes he is responsible.

⁴ It is.—Literally "and where it is the same as the crime of the kinsman is whenever it is not."

* But in C 23f. 7 months are given to samfuacht & 5 to samfuacht

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.ngeairt, ar it geimitheir per i rampaí, ní ttha imurro
ní a ngeimpe.A 164⁴³

Smacta cada raithe, .i. ní rmaictaigter in gac raithe. Ni cum a bono rmaict, .i. noa eutruma ní rmaictaigter i rogal do denam 5 a tear in rampaí ocup a ruact in geimpe. Ni cum a bono cio cae in i r tairiuiou, .i. noa eutruma rampaigto cae mír do na hibaí hupín, hintaí
.i. ní teara in rampaí ocup ní ruacta in geimpe. It ruma rmaicta geimpe, .i. i r ruma ní rmaictaigter i r rogal do niat na hinnile
i r in geimpe odoite na neiche rmaictaigter i r rogal do niat na 10 hinnile i r in rampaí. Ar i r ruithe beo beatha na mbo odoar a ngeairt .i. i r uairle in do beir bea dona buab i r in geimpe inar in do beir laet doib i r in rampaí. Ar it geimitheir per i rampaí .i. i r lie ro in pae .i. aogeimpe per i r in rampaí. Ni ttha imurro ní a ngeimpe .i. noa neó a ruata lium in per do par i r in 15 geimpe.

A 165²¹

(082168)

A 165²¹

C843

aulgail MS

Ar beair rmaicta rampaí; miae cae aipime ar recht nanmān dāib^{cu} fpu etham nōigāin; let meich ma fpu athbiondāo; let meich fpu moir pūin dōir; let miach cae cūlgāib o dam co dārtāig fpu per. It da miach 20 imurro, fpu geampuaict.

* cited: lethan ('wrong est.?) each ulgāib o dam co dārtāig C 1563
q. f. IV 104. 13

Ar beair rmaicta rampaí, .i. rāoite no aipneite in rmaictaigter i r in rogal do niat na hinnile i r in rampaí. Miae cae aip-lime, .i. miach i r e ní aipneite in ar pect nanmān dāib dāon^{cu} reilb co na noul anunn aon pect tar aon beir^{cu} i nārlim dīgum peoir etāmum 25 rampaí. Let meich ma fpu athbiondāo, .i. maō fpu biondāo ga hāit, .i. aipim athlumpuie peoir etāmum rampaí. Let meich fpu moir pūin dōir, .i. i per athlumpuie mona rampaí, no caile rampaí. Let miach cae cūlgāib o dam co dārtāig, .i. ar pect nārlim dīgum a per dīgum peoir etāmum geimpe, ocup pectmaō let 30 meich do cūro gac anmūn dāig na tūg ar aipō aipō, It da miach imurro fpu geampuaict, .i. i per athlumpuie peoir etāmum geimpe, no i nārlim dīgum peoir etāmum geimpe.

(082169)

Ar cumal rmaict cae mīl i comāigter, ocup i toeal nathgabala, aīnāil i r beir i r in Finnruith Fithil; co ngeil in gen fpu rīacail, 35 ocup comōipe each naera i rogelāo, congelāo^{ad} da dārtāo^{ad} rech

¹ Food.—The word 'bea,' means also life.

² Finnruith Fithil-law.—A tract on the manner of passing judgments.

q II 74.10.22
C 722; 081563, 2409.
IV 100.20

that which supports the cows in winter is more precious than their produce, for grass is produced in summer, but none at all in winter.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

*Gross grain
(with panchar)*

There are 'smacht'-fines every quarter, i.e. the thing which is commanded to be paid as 'smacht'-fine in every quarter of a year. The 'smacht'-fine is not the same, i.e. the thing which is ordained to be paid as 'smacht'-fine for trespass committed in the heat of the summer and in the cold of the winter is not equal. Even every month of these is not alike, i.e. it is not alike that each of these months is regulated, i.e. a month of summer heat and a month of winter cold. The 'smacht'-fines of winter are heavier, i.e. the thing which is commanded to be paid as 'smacht'-fine, for the trespass which the cattle commit in the winter is heavier than the thing ordered to be paid for trespass which the cattle commit in the summer. For that which supports the cows, &c., i.e. more valuable is the thing which gives food to the cows in the winter than the thing which gives them milk in the summer. For grass is produced in summer, i.e. this is the reason, i.e. grass is produced in the summer. But none at all in winter, i.e. it is not that I say that grass grows in the winter.

Let the summer 'smacht'-fines be stated; a sack is charged for every 'airlim'-trespass upon seven animals into a profitable meadow; half a sack if into after-grass; half a sack if into a mountain; half a sack for the 'feis'-trespass of every sort of cow from an ox down to a 'dartaid'-heifer. There are, however, two sacks in the cold season.

Let the summer 'smacht'-fines be stated, i.e. the thing which is commanded as 'smacht'-fine for trespass which the cattle commit in the summer is to be told or related. A sack for every 'airlim'-trespass, i.e. a sack is the fine which is mentioned as imposed upon seven animals of one herd after going over by leaping once across one gap into a meadow of summer grass-land. Half a sack if into after-grass, i.e. if to trespass quickly, i.e. by leaping into a pastured field of summer grass-land. Half a sack if into a mountain, i.e. for 'feis'-trespass in a pastured field of summer mountain or summer wood. Half a sack, &c., from an ox to a 'dartaid'-heifer, i.e. upon seven animals for 'feis'-trespass in a meadow of winter grass-land, and the seventh of a half sack is the portion of the fine for each animal, which he ~~did not tender then~~ ^{has not mentioned before}. There are, however, two sacks in the cold season, i.e. for 'feis'-trespass in a pastured field of winter grass-land, or for 'airlim'-trespass into a meadow of winter grass-land.

^{It is equal} A 'cumhal' is the 'smacht'-fine for every beast in a co-tenancy, and in taking forcible distress, as is said in the 'Finnsruth Fithil'-law²—A nail ^{is equal} rates with a tooth, and equal 'dire'-fine is paid for cattle of every age for feeding, for two 'dartaid'-heifers ~~eat~~ beyond (more

° C306 (D'A 403)
° C307 (" ")

^{εδ} ας πο^ο ρηναρ^ο την co cen^οο mblia^οονα; ταπει^ον ηγε^ομ^ο ρια^οατα, no ας βερ^οι ρι^ου θα τριαν α ρο^οχρη^οα ταπει^ον, 5 ου^οαρ α την λαι^ορ in ρεαρ ορ^οστ^οαρ αν^οο.

[illegible]

-that C 257

25. ΑΤαῖς ἀπλῖμενδα ἰμαδῖchet ἱμαχῖτα; καὶ ἀπλῖμ ρια κοῖν no θυῖνε; no ἀπλῖμ ναῖδῖl no οἰνα, no ἀπλῖμ νεῖεne cῖρῖ.

¹ Joint-stocking.—That is putting an equal stock on the land.

² Rent.—‘Ρορηαίς’ is here used to denote the award or price, hire or compensation paid, or contracted to be given, for the use of the land for one year.

³ Against whom trespass is committed.—The following seems to be the meaning of this very obscure text:—"A calf is the rent payable for land taken until the end of the year; in the case of a trespass committed from the commencement of the cold season on to the end of the year, a calf is the fine payable, or a calf which is worth two-thirds of the value of such a calf as should be paid for the rent, (which would at that time be a 'samhaise'-heifer); and the land upon such payment becomes the property of the man against whom the trespass is committed, or of the man who pays the fine."

(Space left for initial!)

than) the largest ox. In a 'dibadh'-land this joint-stock¹ is made, and in a co-tenancy, or in joint-stock it is here.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

A calf is the rent which is paid for land taken till the end of the year; in the case of trespass committed after the commencement of the cold season to the end of the year, a calf is the fine, or a calf which is worth two-thirds of the rent afterwards; and the land remains with the man against whom trespass is committed in the case.

A calf, &c., which is paid for the land till the end of the year, i.e. a calf (the price of a calf) pays for the land which is let for hire (rent) to the end of the year, i.e. the 'samhaise'-heifer which is given as rent,² i.e. as the hire for the grass of a land of (worth) three 'cumbhals.' After the cold season, i.e. after the trespass which is committed in the cold of the winter, half the fine for this, i.e. that 'samhaise'-heifer is half the fine for doubtful man-trespass over a full fence, and the half thereof if there be³ no fence, i.e. into a pastured field of winter grass-land, or ^a Ir. With- into a meadow of winter mountain, or of winter wood, or a winter old milking-out. place. Or a calf which is worth two-thirds of the rent afterwards, i.e. a calf which is worth two-thirds of the rent, i.e. of the 'samhaise'-heifer which is paid for a land of three 'cumbhals,' i.e. the 'colpach'-heifer of the value of eight 'screpalls' which is to be paid for a land of two 'cumbhals' for its rent; or, a calf which is worth two-thirds of the 'samhaise'-heifer which is paid for the rent, it is it that is paid for the trespass which is committed on the same lands in the cold of the winter, i.e. it is given for three-quarters of the value of the 'samhaise'-heifer in this case, except one 'screpall' only which was not brought forward here; or indeed, according to others, although it (the calf) has but the age of a 'colpach'-heifer of eight 'screpalls' value, it is from the excess of the improvement or increase that is upon it that it is worth three-quarters of the 'samhaise'-heifer. And the land remains with the man against whom trespass is committed,³ i.e. the land remains with the man who is trespassed upon in this case, i.e. after the term of the rent, when it is for rent that it (the land) was given; or, according to others, the land belongs to the man who has committed the trespass, been damaged? i.e. after his paying the 'eric'-fine of his trespass.

There are three 'airlim'-trespasses for which ~~no~~ 'smacht'-fines are paid: every 'airlim'-trespass before a dog or a man; or an 'airlim'-trespass in consequence of heat or fear, or an 'airlim'-trespass owing to^b any ^b Ir. or kind of violence.

In O'D. 403, the following condition is added:—

"If it be winter grass that is trespassed upon, two-thirds of the rent shall be the fine, i.e. of the rent which is paid for a 'Tir-cumhaile' of the best land which is hired for three-quarters of a year. There are three heifers as rent upon it for the three quarters; and two heifers, i.e. the two-thirds of the three heifers are the fine for 'feis'-trespass in a meadow of summer grass over a full hedge."

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

Ταῖς αἰρλίμεντα, .i. αταῖς λειμεννα το ματαῖρ ἀρ ἢ περ no ἀρ in arbar ocup eimtoitireis iat can rmaēt opna anō. Cae aἰrλίm pua coin, .i. as teite pua coin. No duine, .i. as teite pua noamib.
Aἰrλίm naibil, .i. in tan bir aibell opna pe teafnēme. No omna
5 .i. pua cpeich, no pe coibōm. No aἰrλίm neicne ciprī, .i. cibeō eigen,
.i. torunn no tene fasnēn.

donat ar q m fep

Σμαῖτ δια κύετι ιαρ πογαῖλ cona pocal cona cruar ocup a lomdata. Tpeinib pmaēta caē/coir, trian pon di coirce aipe.

A f. 65^o

fo arail C 843

10 Ma per por aill arpenar anō a taeb no a nairecno, ma per po'arō, no per ramla, icar a caiche a peir na comaichid.)

C 305 (0'840)

caithe?

(0'8217)

Σμαῖτ δια κύετι, .i. in pmaētafēp uaō i porba κύετι ιαρ
| nēnam na poḡla, .i. na meic, .i. anao tpeiri por in pmaēt, ocup oitim
5 κύετι. Cona pocal, .i. namiaich, .i. narub fearb iat. Cona cruar,
.i. narub tar. Lomdata, .i. span loḡset lomconda pema pēpē, .i.
spanub data he ocup he lom, .i. ein colē. Tpeinib pmaēta caē coir, .i. tpeinuḡar ap in pmaēt do peir coir. Trian pon di coirce aipe, .i. trian a mbrō ap in coirce ocup ap in¹¹ eorḡas, ip reō 20 ata ap in coirce aonur, ocup do triun loḡa

Ma per por aill, .i. ma per do bepar ipin per¹¹ eile ap pon athsina, .i. ma per ethām pō bponḡar anō, diablaō do peor anethām tar a eip munab pail etham aḡi. C taeb, .i. paḡa. No a nairecno, .i.
ḡarpo. Ma per po'arō, .i. na caille. No per ramla, .i. na 25 mona, .i. in tpeibe. C peir na comaichid, .i. athsin an einaḡ pīn amul ip puar pūp na comaichib, .i. apomep do¹² upa na comaichid ap, muna pḡḡar per a commatth ino ap pon athsena, ocup neimbeḡ peor a comaicenta aḡi pōḡeḡa.

duchusa

docheu

q. C 662 ardmes comaighthech ora

Dp. 11^a (C 24)
C 306 (0'840)

* Cair—can miter caiche tpe? C a pochracaib; ma

caithe d

caithe c

1 Fear.—Dr. O'Donovan remarks upon this—"The gloss is here transposed, and should be restored to its proper order thus:—

"Fear, i.e. of thunder or lightning. Or an 'airlim'-trespass owing to any kind of violence, i.e. before a foray, or before plunderers, or any violence whatsoever."

donial-air whish
cadac cloughth?

There are three 'airlim'-trespasses, i.e. there are three leaps which are made upon the grass or upon the corn, and they are freed from paying 'smacht'-fine for them. Every 'airlim'-trespass before a dog, i.e. in running off before a hound. Or a man, i.e. in flying before men. An 'airlim'-trespass in consequence of heat, i.e. when they (the cattle), are running from the heat of the sun. Or fear,^a i.e. before a plundering party,^a or a band of depredators. Or an 'airlim'-trespass owing to any kind of violence, i.e. whatever violence it may be, i.e. thunder or lightning.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. Prey.

'Smacht'-fine is paid in five days after trespass with testing of the grain as to hardness and bareness. 'Smacht'-fines are three-fold by right, the third of which is set aside for oats.

If it be one kind of grass that is paid for another at the side or at the extremity of the field, whether it be hidden grass or coarse grass, let the fines be paid according to the arbitration of the co-tenants.

O'Dav. 964, 965

'Smacht'-fine is paid in five days, i.e. the thing which is commanded by law to be paid by him^b is to be rendered at the expiration of five days after the commission of the trespass, i.e. 'the sacks,' i.e. there is a stay² of three days upon (for the payment of) the 'smacht'-fine, and a delay in pound of five days. With testing, i.e. of 'the sacks,' i.e. that they are not bitter (foul or mawkish). As to hardness, i.e. that they be not moist. Bareness, i.e. the grain which they eat bare, that it be not dirty or chaff,[#] i.e. that it be well coloured and bare, i.e. without chaff. 'Smacht'-fines are threefold by right, i.e. there is a threefold division of the 'smacht'-fine by right. The third of which is set aside for oats, i.e. the third of what is for oats and for barley, is for the oats only, and its value is one-third.^c

^b Ir. From him.

* reading livinget, if Stokes O'Dav. 833

If it be one kind of grass that is paid for another, i.e. if it be grass that is given for another grass as compensation, i.e. if it be rich grass that has been spoiled in this case, let him (the trespasser) give twice the quantity of poor grass in return for it, if he has not rich grass. At the side, i.e. long. Or at the extremity, i.e. short. If it be hidden grass, i.e. of the wood. Or coarse grass, i.e. of the mountain, i.e. of the moor. According to the co-tenants, i.e. the compensation for that trespass is according to the opinion of the neighbours, i.e. the arbitration of the neighbours decides upon it, unless grass equally good is obtained for it as compensation, and his not having grass of the same nature is the reason of its being decided by arbitration.

^c Ir. For a third of its value.

probable estimate

Question—How are land trespasses estimated?—From its rents; if it be winter grass that is injured,

^a A stay, i.e. the period during which cattle distrained remain upon security in the hands of the owner; but the 'stay' comes first, then 'delay in pound' follows it, and then three days of grace called "Treibn uncommighe," in the Irish Laws: vide Senehus Mor, vol. 1, p. 79, et seq.

[#] so has the flail (?) . . . it ??

asin deigweic loigichta
tastad /
(O'D 2172)

5 Цар—can miter caiche tise? .i. comaircim canar a meir-nageser na citta do micheir iurin perant. Цра рохрпасаиб, .i. an in perant pem porinnatir mper echam no anecham miltzer ant. Ma samper, .i. maio he per in semprto oirgeser ant. Да ериан а рохрпаса ире а caiche, .i. да ериан на деісрпеі ата ма|рей, оур ма нарлм иррѣ ата ма арлм нама; uair ceirp meid ата nd рей, оур да miach на нарлм. Да ериан ропреса ата ар ери cumale do neham 10 и рейр co cenn ери рати иррѣ uil i рейр oigun peoir ethemam geim-
 15 переса та|лн me, .i. ери репрбулл ир на ери рати, .i. да репрбулл рей ngeimpe, оур репрбулл i рейр an ramparō, оур ире rin ериан на ери репрбулл. Мах ramper, .i. пер in еранпарō, и ериан а бул на рейр, оур на арлм ата на арлм нама, .i. да miach ма рейр, оур miach i нарлм.

Etymolog. dass on jochre (deq. y. jo).

¹ Fair rent.—‘Deisepeic’ is glossed ‘cendach’ in Rawlinson, 487 (O.D. 2115.)

^a 'Tir-cumhaile.' A piece of land measuring 12 'forrachs' in length, and 6 in breadth, Vide C. 252, and O'D. 1462. Vide also vol. 3, p. 335.

two-thirds of its rent is the fine for the trespass; if summer grass, it (the fine) is one-third.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Question—How are land trespasses regulated? i.e. I ask whence are estimated the trespasses that are committed upon the land. From its rents, i.e. ^{ascertained} from the land itself it is ~~known~~ whether it is profitable or unprofitable grass that is injured on the occasion. If it be winter grass, i.e. if it be the grass of the winter that is injured therein. Two-thirds of its rent is the fine for the trespass, i.e. two-thirds of the fair rent¹ or price that is paid for its 'feis'-trespass, and 'airlim'-trespass is what is paid for its 'airlim'-trespass only; for it is four sacks that are paid for its 'feis'-trespass and two sacks for its 'airlim'-trespass. Two-thirds of the rent which is paid for a 'Tir-cumhaile'² of the best land to the end of three-quarters of a year is what is due for 'feis'-trespass in a meadow of winter grass-land over a full fence, i.e. three 'screpalls' for the three-quarters, i.e. two 'screpalls' for 'feis'-trespass in winter and one 'screpall' for 'feis'-trespass in summer, and this is the third of the three 'screpalls.' If it be summer grass, i.e. the grass of the summer, it is one-third of what is due for its 'feis'-trespass and for its 'airlim'-trespass that is due for its 'airlim'-trespass only, i.e. two sacks for its 'feis'-trespass, and one sack for its 'airlim'-trespass.

fr. the fair purchase of price
wh. is given for

^{it is} The trespasses of swine. If they eat the grass, ~~they are trespassers~~ like other ^{verdict} grazing cattle in general. If they root up the land, other land shall ^{be given} until the proof of the restoration of the land is ^{declared} completed;³ that is, until two horses in yoke are brought and left there, and it is seen that no part of the earth stick to their teeth while grazing on it. Thus is it tested.³

the trespasses more likely for?

cf. CCF p. 79

^a Ir. Until its testing
is seen.

^{trespass} Half fine is due for 'tairsce'-trespass by day and full ~~fine~~ if it be trespass committed by night. For it is a maxim in the law of the Feini that every kind of cattle should have a herdsman by day and night; from which is derived the saying "the cow's sense carrier is her herdsman in the bright light;" that they should be in an enclosure at the fall of night; that the swine should be in their sty by night; that the cows should be in a cow-fastness; horses in their proper fetters or in a stable; sheep in their fold.

this addition fr. B seems wrong, tho' note the old use of gen. after sceo.

³ Thus it is tested.—The original seems to be defective here.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Caithe muc, .i. cainta na muc. Anmúil caithe cethra olcena, .i. aithiú cainta na cethra olcena úile cainta um piach dumeacaiti opnu. Ma rochlaib tpe, .i. ma tocaib in talman do ne. For aile, .i. tpe eile inn ar fon aithgna. Co ro dloimtar, .i. leu paratar no su

O'D., 1226. a corait [i. coraegat, .i. na heich ino, ipm ferano ianban]. Ocu leicair ano, .i. ipm ferano na heic. Cona toiglen ni a piacra ar oca gleit, .i. cona deslena ni don talman a piacra ar asa rogeit ip ano ip deapure, .i. ip ano ip deapure piacra do

[i. don deap]. Amara do A continue on p. 108.

[This comes before text 96.16 in MS!]

O'D., 1226. [CC deopre; ^xSaithir da echi ann a corait ianm cona toigleam ro tar in ugleit rin, ip ann dloimtar a deopre. Maó gleit no geit na muc, ip amail ceatra a caatig. Cia ro ba i rem bpeitib gacl clar no clareat do linao do aibam alail do imbim, ar ba head ba teeta leo ppeop ceille in talman dia torat patopin; do deocat tra ianm for aithgin neic bhonnair ann.
Dumeacait tra, imeatan tar tpe do céile .i. aiaó ocu aipeat
polliput ocu poela ocu toela ocu an ocu aipeitru.]

on top of B¹ corresponding mark w. elerose in text.

20 Miach ar muc moir, leit meich cachia ceiri, ceitru mam each bainb; no dōm leat meic ar cacl mne mōir, eethriamtu meich cachia ceiri, ocu da mam cacl bainm. Co ianm ceitru reet nanmanat atá in pith ro; pith for na muc moir ceitru bit
ann. Ir aia ip lugu for na bainb na for na aise, uair ip lugu a nutmail na ceathub.

o mairth-5' (rehe?)

25 Leath cathach a tairpe .i. leatrac aiplime in lae i tairpim lae;
lan piac aiplime lae no aroche i tairpce narache; cutruma pep ocu pup na harache. Cutruma aiplim ocu pup na in lae tar lan me cae nae; pep na aroche ocu a pup na cona tairpactan ian narache na lae, lan piac pep inoib; aiplim aroche ocu a tairpce, leatrac pep inoib;
30 pup na lae ocu aiplim lae it manat; lethpiach aiplime i tairpce lae.

¹ An equivalent.—'Caitgin' properly means a restoration of the same thing to the original owner, but it is frequently, as in this instance, applied to "the making good," or giving an equivalent for any loss, damage, or injury.

² Two horses in yoke.—The greater part of the remainder of this tract is taken from the MS. E. 35, in the library of Trinity College, Dublin. Rawlinson, 487, wants the glosses on the second part of the preceding text. They are taken from E. 35.

³ Carrying.—For 'imeatan' of the text, the meaning of which is doubtful, C. 32, reads 'impeactan,' which means 'drawing,' 'pulling,' &c.

The trespasses of swine, i.e. the crimes of the pigs. Like the trespasses of cattle in general, i.e. like the trespasses of every other description of cattle when the fine for man-trespass is charged upon them. If they root up the land, i.e. if rooting of the land be what they do. Other land, i.e. when other land is given for it by way of an equivalent¹ of the land which they rooted up. Until the proof of the restoration, &c., is completed, i.e. until the certain reclamation of the land which they rooted up is announced. Two horses in yoke,² i.e. they are yoked [?] i.e. the horses on it, on the land afterwards. And are left there, i.e. the horses on the land. That no part stick to their teeth, i.e. so that no part of the earth stick in their teeth in grazing on it. Thus it is tested, i.e. it is then it certainly is determined that it is restored to its healthy state, i.e. the land.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.
—

Its testing: let two horses be unharnessed and placed there yoked together to graze, when in grazing they do not pull up a sod, it is then the test is seen. If the swine have eaten the grass by grazing, their trespass is like that of other cattle. Although in the old judgments it is ordered that every furrow which they should root should be filled respectively with corn and butter, for they deemed it just that the land should receive for the injury done it an equivalent in its own produce; yet it afterwards was exchanged for restoration of the thing which was damaged therein. Man-trespasses are, carrying³ (loads) over your neighbour's land, i.e., 'aradh'-trespass, 'aitrebadh'-trespass, 'follseudh'-trespass, 'fothla'-trespass, 'tothla'-trespass; 'an'-trespass, and 'airgsiu'-trespass.⁴

of Mac N. Statute p. 310

A sack is the fine upon a large pig, half a sack upon every slip (young pig), four handfuls⁵ for a farrow pig; or, according to others, half a sack upon every large pig, a quarter of a sack upon each slip, and two handfuls upon every farrow pig.⁶ This addition extends to four times seven animals; but it extends to the entire number^a of the large pigs. The reason that it is less on the farrow pigs than upon the large pigs is, because their nimbleness is less than that of cattle.

^a Ir. While they are there.

Half fine is for 'tairsee'-trespass, i.e. half the fine of the 'airlim'-trespass by day for 'tairsee'-trespass by day; the full fine of 'airlim'-trespass by day or night for 'tairsee'-trespass by night; the 'feis'-trespass and 'ruirindh'-trespass by night are equal. The 'airlim'-trespass and 'ruirindh'-trespass by day over a full fence of any person are equal; for the 'feis'-trespass by night and the 'ruirindh'-trespass when the cattle are found after the night lying, there is full fine for 'feis'-trespass due for them; for 'airlim'-trespass by night and 'tairsee'-trespass there is half the fine for 'feis'-trespass; 'ruirindh'-trespass by day and 'airlim'-trespass by day are equal; half the fine for 'airlim'-trespass is due for 'tairsee'-trespass by day.

⁴ 'Airgsiu'-trespass.—This remark about man-trespasses appears to be quite out of place here. It is not easy to determine the different sorts of trespass mentioned.

⁵ Handfuls.—'Man' is as much as can be taken up between the two palms of the hands held together.

⁶ Farrow pig.—That is, a young sucking pig.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Odeathach ma catach aithe .i. ograich ahlime in lae tairge na haroche. Ar ata a n-oligeo na peine .i. ar ata a n-oligeo in peno-chair. Fui de .i. i'm lo. Scao aithe .i. uirpe botem.

01a

* D.F. 11⁴ (C. 25-b)

di ba D a lá D
c4 naig D

luznaso D
nodgereth D

*.1. Comingaire tra: eia cruithar de a huplainn ceatra ocur
5 realb? .i. dia ba dec for ala, ocur reet hgamina ocur reet muca ^{musce} D ocur reet cairis. Ni tiağad oir na huan a comingaire co lunara. Ni ro bhuatān la cae in ala ar coim ocur ceacair ocur ceatra, ocur aogentān uat dia ceille; ^{adriodma D} ^{madrianna} a comin- ^(3 BD) gaire pia riatnaib amuil do coireat for naom ann ocur rata.
10 aet ma ar conaib allta nama. Ronara a comingaire, ni teio cin ceatra na ceatra rairia iapum, aet do aipena in maire do riatnaib. ^{marc D} fiat

C. B. ~~ce~~ raph D

* allaug D^x

(0D 1228)

Cerc.—Cia lin raphar do comingaire? Nin: Per tpe nama, ar oligeoide la cae ceatra do ingaire do; eia bet dona 15 bo no^{caera D} allau^{caera D} rair, no cairiu, no^{caera D} dono gamain no allau, ^(ocur) D¹ ni tormaig la; cet rir baro de, ni oibar la. ^{alos t gait e D^c} cia theob de D

* ni cuipai D^x

* di ceig D^x

Comingaire dono, no aipum for mero realbia cae di oir mero airme .i. bo co colpac for maō dam; colpac o mero dairtar ^{de t D} ^{daich D} ir for maō bo tiağad; ci ar beirir aialle [dam] for maō noam, 20 bo for maō bo, aē for maō aige, ar gealar dia boim^{gealar D} reat noam. ^{daion D}
* Ni cuipar comiaē in perdam hui an aipre, ni dia ceatra raderin for a linfa an aipum oligeoide de; ar a da seō for maō cairic, ocur^{caira D} dia cuira^{cuira D} for maō dairta, di dairt for maō colpē D colpae, dia colpac for maō bo, bo co colpac for maō noam.
25 Ro-tarb, ruarbaumha, ocur damconchair, ni tiağad a comuano.
ruar sama D

Cio po dea for? Nin. In tarb cetamur, ir cuma dairi rde a ceatra raderin, ocur ceatra cae ain bir oca i mbuile.
Dam concaio^{da} ^{da} dōna, ir cuma imoideirde a ceatra ocur ceatra a concha D

¹ Common pasturage.—This commentary is not in H. 3, 17, nor in Rawlinson, 487.

² No engagement is given by one to the other. There is no contract between the parties ("commoners") as to ordinary accidents; they are in the same position as if

Full fine if the trespass has been committed by night, i.e. the full fine for 'airlim'-trespass by day for 'tairsce'-trespass by night. For it is a maxim in the law of the Feini, i.e. for it is in the law of the Feinechus. By day, i.e. in the day. And night, i.e. in the night itself.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

Common pasturage¹: what is its nature as to the green of cattle and flocks? i.e. twelve cows in a herd, and seven yearling calves, and seven pigs and seven sheep. Farrow pigs or lambs do not come into the common pasturage until Lammass-day. ~~No engagement is given by one to the other² with respect to protecting the herd from dogs, quagmires, or cattle gorings, or from what they may do to one another; their common pasturage was arranged before witnesses, as if upon securities and guarantees, excepting protection against wild dogs only. As to what is legally placed in the common pasturage, no trespass of cattle or quagmires is considered with respect to it afterwards, but the carcass of the animal which is killed shall be shown to witnesses.~~

Anything which may have been injured by each on his day (of the day) ?? ... is restored by him to his fellow

Question.—How many are freed from the responsibilities of the common pasturage? Answer.—The owner of the land only, for he is entitled to a day's herding for every head of cattle on his land; for although there should be a cow or its value (equivalent) due from him, or a sheep or a yearling calf or its equivalent, and it does not add a day; though these should be separated from him, it does not lessen a day.

Now, in a common pasturage there is a calculation made of the size of each person's cattle^a in Ireland. The extent of the calculation. to adjust his responsibility, i.e. a cow with a heifer in lieu of an ox; heifers from the size at which they are bulled pass in the place of cows; though others say it is an ox in place of an ox, a cow for a cow, a calf in place of a calf, for two cows graze more than^b the great ox. The equivalent of the bull is not put in this enumeration, there is not of his own species of cattle any even number that would fill up the number which would be required for him; for two geese are in lieu of a sheep, two sheep in lieu of a 'dairt'-heifer, two 'dairt'-heifers in lieu of a 'colpach'-heifer, two 'colpach'-heifers in lieu of a cow, one cow with a 'colpach'-heifer in lieu of an ox. The great bull, the 'suasdamha'-ox, and the 'damh-conchaidh'-ox do not come into the enumeration.

^aIr. Possession.

^bIr. Beyond. of 90.35 supra 9 no diff.

What is the reason of this? Answer.—The bull, in the first place, bulls equally his own cattle, and the cattle of all which are with him in the enclosure. The 'damh-conchaidh'-ox equally protects his own cattle and the cattle of his neighbours.

der Vater d. Dachsen steht ??
Car. p. 341

they had come to an agreement reciprocally to this effect, excepting always the case of wild dogs (the property of one of the parties).

D

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

comaiçeaç. 1r aipe rin ní tiazaro corlaizte a nairim, aipur cuma ponic caç a leay. OUligio caç buaçail a biataç. O D giro ao best!

Muca ^{da} dõa, nĩ tĩasat itĩr comapĩrĩe aẽt muca aĩr, ĩnge tĩr.
 probaĩge co mear. Compa dõa, ^{da} plan caẽ compa caẽ cumatĩ caẽ comĩngapĩrĩ, aẽt mĩpĩatĩ no mĩpĩatĩ no algũĩ.

Cia pōrai ceatēra cāicē pūi pailē act pūi pūi sōe nō sūmōe, nō cona a pūi pūi aicepūi cācē a chin pūi pūi uisab? Maō aō pō tōi^{toph} anail, opōar dono an aō nō pōi pō, ocū pūi pūi in dā pūi pūi nō pūi pūi i nōe, pōi pūi ber pūi pūi pōi pūi nō commāi an aō dā lailē; act nī etar a pōi pūi a pūi pūi nō pūi pūi.
 Nō, mā
 pūi pūi lail, pōi pūi pūi pūi in an aō inbeo dūi cī dā lina anpūi dō alailē aō. Ite a mūi pūi pūi pūi, mūi pūi pūi sūi pūi pūi in nāō pūi pūi; dā pūi pūi, pūi pūi in pūi pūi aō pūi pūi aō, ocū pūi pūi aō cūi aō pō lail dō; ocū māō pūi pō tōi^{toph} an aō, pō pūi pūi pūi pūi a pūi pūi pūi pūi dūi cī dā dō dō dō pūi pūi dō pūi pūi, ocū pūi pūi pūi in tī dā pūi pūi, ocū pūi pūi pūi aō cūi dō pūi pūi pūi pūi ocū pūi pūi.
 Dūi
 pūi pūi an aō pūi pūi, ocū pūi pūi pūi pūi an pūi pūi pūi pūi pūi pūi pūi pūi an aō pūi pūi. ✕

²⁶ Ար յօ տա Կոճ Բօ ա Խաչառւն . և իր յօ Կոճնաչ Ծօ նա Խաչ
 ա Խաչառւն . Ա Խ Խաչ ւ խ ւ յօ . և նա Խ Կ . և Դամբատ . *ՄԱՐԿՍ ԵՎԱՆԺԵԼԻՍ
 . և Դավ և Դեատ նա Խաչ իրին յարծի :

$D_{12}^a(C_{27})$

^x. 1. Mucca murro; muc orro caça feiri, ocur banb caç arlime, ocur aṣ a nōire feoir; ar oligō in rogeatō rīn a imcomēd co 25 léir. A feir a foil ro ceirib roirōib in aḋaṣ, ocur muicard ocaib rri de. Ir de ir beir irin Coir péme bíc; 'Dia mbeo muca moaḋter, arur cru cumair ar feir reḋaḋ beil mōbaḋ bḋui uaro mīnraḋ nāḋeranaḋ mīnḡair im cuca claire caḋ aen comarba coir coirner mīnḡer. ^x

30 Μαδ βα, βιθ ι μβοθαινγεαν ι. βιτ ανθαινγεν να μιθο, ι μβυα ι βιθ νο ι μβοτιγιβ.

¹ Commons.—The word 'compu' here translated 'commons,' may mean a 'litter of pigs.' If so, the whole passage would signify, "As to a litter of pigs, every

For this reason 'coslathie' cattle do not come into the enumeration, for all stand in need of them equally.* Every herdsman is required to feed them.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

cf. Car p 34

Pigs, too, do not come into the enumeration of land stock unless they be old pigs, excepting on wood land with masts. *As to commons,*¹ every commons is free to every grazier of the common pasturage, except for plunder, or trespass, or knowledge of crime.

Why are the cattle of all placed together, except gorers and fierce cattle, or ~~that it is from the wounding that everyone shall claim the fine for his attack from him?~~—If it be a calf that has ~~killed another, let the other that has killed it be slaughtered, and let them (the owners) divide the flesh of both between them into two equal parts, because of the killing by the former; or, let the flesh of the killed calf be divided between them; but this cannot be enforced between them.~~ Or, if it be preferred, let them cast lots for the live calf to know which of the two should pay the other for him. These are their judgments here, unless the calf had never been known before as a gorer; but if he had been known as such, let the man whose property he is take the flesh of the calf, and his neighbour shall give him another calf; and if he slaughters the calf, lots shall be cast upon them on the green of the cattle to know to which of them the guilty party by right should be given; and the man to whom it has fallen afterwards obtains him, and his neighbour gives him away in the green of the flocks and cattle. The flesh of the ~~killed calf shall be between them, and as they divide the 'eric' fine,~~ destroying dogs ("cf. airbaid") so they divide the flesh of the calf between them.

From which is derived the saying "the cow's sense is her herdsman," i.e. it is from this it is said that their herdsman is the sense-carrier to the cows. In an enclosure i.e. of the cows, i.e. in the summer. If pigs, i.e. into a sty ^{much} ~~the swine shall go~~ ^{at night} in the night.

That is, as to pigs: a pig is the fine upon them for every 'feis'-trespass, and a farrow pig for every 'airlim'-trespass, and a calf as 'dire'-fine for grass; for it is right that pasture should be wholly guarded. They should lie in a sty at four roads by night, and they should have a swineherd by day. From whence it is said in the law called 'Coir Feine Bec'; "If there be a swineherd, it (the fine) is increased, for their sty should be at the meeting of roads that lead into the middle of farms which are partitioned into small divisions, each 'coarb's' division being marked and divided by furrows."

If cows, let them be in a cow fastness, i.e. let them be in the fastness legally erected for the protection of the cows, in an inclosure or in cow-houses.

litter of pigs is free to graze on every commons, every common pasturage,* &c.

* Coir Feine Bec.—A tract not known now. The translation of the extract is only conjectural.

D (C24)

11 C257

MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

1. Για πο βάσαι γινάστα μαρία ανν, σεῖρη λα μπετο να λιν-τὴλε, οκυ καμνα ἰν τιρε αὐρῖοι, να ἡεῶ ἰριν έστ πειρ, α ταν-αιρε ἰρ τάλα πειρ, λεῖτοἴρε νεῖδ αῶτορεαῶτα ἰρ ἰν τρεαῖρ πειρ, οῖτοἴρε νεῖδ αῶτορεαῶτα ἰριν σεαῶτανῖα πειρ; αμῖρ αῖρῶ οκυ αῶταῦ ἰαρ ἰν. ἰρ αμῖνε τρια αῖρῖανῖοι γινάστα εῶτανῖρ, αῶτ να ἡεῖμῖεανῖα οῶτῖα οἴρε. asentais C24

$$= \arctan 98.17$$

na heplímeanthā dōrliā dīre. asrentais C24

dosliat C 24

Καταλαβαίνετε? Ήν—Επιλίμ νείγνε μια coin no twine; επιλίμ μια τοραιντο no αϊβεαλ, no επιλίμ αὐτ στορημιοταιρ α ποιατο μιανιυ no σπενζαο ταρις. Ιτέ επιλίμνεαννα ήν αο ίεαο γμαατα.

adms

Archard C 24

10 Co tucoo tria poro darta ocur dartaize la caemna in luic ocur meio in ne, conat e rmaot pora tucaio a peimeao. Ciar- And said D berao alante ir ogeirilin aot do coireao da naos dec ino. Let meic cae uizab o duin co dartaio riu peir, aot ir peir cae lize cae tarrage. Or maot bez in tria po liortar ann mibi ni bi 15 fearr miao no ^{capteach} caireac i toiraot bir ann, mitepi ani ber riu, ocur do beir diabul rocpaice tar a eise.

but said D

15 ^{κατακαύσει} φεαρρ μιὰς νο ^{κατακαύσει} καίρεας ἰ τοιαῦθ βίη ἀνή, μίτερ ἀνὶ βεφ ριυ, οκυρ το βειρ δίαβυλ ποῦραιε τὰν α εἰρε.

Dp. 11 a (C 24-5)
x

* Cere—Cio ar a miteri ron? Nin:—Tip po cpean boin co ceann mbliasta, idā miac dec dono poepeangto ron; oet meic ar seampuaet, ocyr a ceair ar ramfuaet. Maō seampuaet oē po horitar ann, arpeanitar a hoet ino, ocyr aē a noīre roin. Maō ramfuaet po horitor ann, arpeinidear ceitri meic inn, ocyr aē a noīre a roin. *

-at D

25 Ἀρεσπεύσας τρια να ῥμαῖα δια τρεῖς ιαρ ποζαῖ ο ταῖαταιρ. μυνα εἰρηλῖστερ τρια ι κοραῖβ βελ; αεν ῥμαῖα αρ καὶ σεαῖτρα(το ποζμα)φορ τίρ. Ιρε ἰν ῥμαῖα πλ αρ καὶ σεαῖτρα οῖβ, μιὰ καὶ σεα πεῖρι, οσυρ λετ μεῖς καὶ εἰρηλίμε αρ καὶ ρεῖτ μβυαῖβ.

$= \text{adv} \circ \text{dmat}^2$
Advocata

Eich i cuibneach techta no na ninde .i. na heich ina cuimpech dligte, in cenn ffu bac ina nechawlrib.

2012a (C27-8)

30 * 1. Eich, a ymaçta amail caê ceat'ra pozeal'tat p'ri na hup'za-bala dianai'ri per. Oçr. to çai'b na heoço ocup çuimn'ituy, ocup ata-dianai'zer?

(cf. dianaissead 130.13)

¹ The trespasser. 'Capeuc,' may possibly mean "a trespasser" or "criminal," but, from the context, it is hard to see how it can bear such a sense here.

* & the ... of the land off which they have taken (?) n.b. C257 has wordnada [for]
 fr. within ? (pl.)

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY HERE.

105

That is, though there were great 'smacht'-fines therein, four sacks with the increase of the cattle, and the protection of the country; JUDG-
MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.
~~these cases occurred~~ for the first 'feis'-trespass, a second in the case of a second 'feis'-trespass, forfeiture of half what arrived may have been
was caught (ad. ver. 14)
 in for the third 'feis'-trespass, entire forfeiture of what arrived for the fourth 'feis'-trespass; for it is tying and dwelling after that. cf 98.17, 146.16
 Thus they used to divide the 'smacht'-fines at first, except in case of the 'airlim'-trespasses, which do not deserve forfeiture. procure immunity?

What are these? Answer.—Forced leaping before a dog or a man; leaping on account of thunder or sultriness, or a leaping, but so as they are pursued before they could get over. Such are the leaping for which 'smacht'-fines do not lie. word off L caught up on
(ad. ver. 14)

Until it amounts to a 'dairt'-heifer and a yearling with the fine imposed by the protection of the place and length of the time, the 'smacht'-fine to which it amounts is to be proved. Though others say that full leaping-trespass is committed, if twelve calves have gone into it (the field). A half sack is the fine for every animal from the ox to the 'dartaidd'-heifer for 'feis'-trespass, but every lying down in which it (the animal) is caught is 'feis.' If the extent of land which had been damaged on the occasion be so small that the produce which is there is not better (more valuable) than a sack or the trespasser, let the value of it be estimated, and he shall obtain double the hire (rent) afterwards.

Question.—From what is that estimated? Answer.—Land which a cow pays for to the end of a year, it is twelve sacks that would purchase this; eight sacks for the cold season, and four sacks for the hot season. If the damage has been committed in full winter, eight sacks shall be paid for it, and a calf as 'dire'-fine for grass. If it be in the summer that the damage has been committed, four sacks shall be paid for it, and a calf as 'dire'-fine for its grass.

They shall pay the 'smacht'-fines in three days after the trespass has been committed, unless indeed by verbal engagements it is otherwise arranged; it is the same 'smacht'-fine that shall be paid for every kind of cattle that is caught upon the land. The 'smacht'-fine that is upon every cattle of them is a sack for every 'feis'-trespass, and a half sack for every 'airlim'-trespass upon every seven cows which he has admitted [to be]

Horses in their lawful fetters or in their stables, i.e. the horses in their lawful fetters, the head to the staple in their stables.

That is, as for horses, the 'smacht' fines are like those of any other cattle which consume fodder after their being taken in trespass. For the horses ~~are~~ taken and detained (i.e. impounded), and notice

(ad. ver. 14)
 an active!

A person who seizes the horse

0'A.1231 Cinus son dia cuic la dec . . . no mus. Os dean

B.D

106

Ḃreathā Comathcepa An̄dro.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

baino do fīr beḁe heic, dian fearḁar; muna fearḁar, atabaino ac don ^usepa ber ne^uom, ocu^r oc don breiteaman na tuaiti, ocu^r oc ce^upōca ^uobann, ocu^r oc p^umcill na tuaitē; ocu^r atabaino ramlaig fō na c^uica olceana ocu^r comnitu^r co^u,^u *

5* * * fōn dia cuic la dec, no fichit a^uōce, no mīr, o^r dian do ti fep bīde hēich pē naimpīr a nīma. ^uocu^r cia fōgealtāḁ fīl ^umit?

dianḁat D

cf. 1231, 32 §16.

doib? Nīn:—Mīa^c ca^ca mīr do buaib ocu^r eachaib, mīa^c ocu^r lēt meith do ḁam, muna cuibnigter; dia cuibnigter imupro, i^r mīa^c ca^c lai co nardēi. Teit in tiāpfaigē fō cominnpice fīr a fōare, i^rannaro a fōgealtāḁ atarpio i nōe; muna tī imupro, i^r o^u a fōgealtāḁ don fīr cuibnigter. Na po meāta a fāre fōp in fep ^uma nōmā D cuibnigter, ocu^r dia ḁi a ceile co nīarair teēta, ocu^r co fīatnairē inḁric, ocu^r co naētaib, fōpuaiflicea^r in comnōea^u, bepa^uō-rīde a ceātra, ocu^r appean fōgealtāḁ.

f. V 476. 23

15 Cīara fōgealtāḁ fōn? .1. mīa^c ca^ca mīr, ap ur fōgealtāḁ ceātra fīl doib apuigē, nī fōgealtāḁ athgabala.

(0'A 1232)

Maḁ on mī fīn in nonn, nī haclaig cia fōznaigter innair .1.
 a nḁamaib ocu^r ea^caib ocu^r ba bleēta do bleoḁan; a^ct nī teit fōgealtāḁ fōpīro in pē fōznaḁ.

20 Sma^cta pōtla ocu^r to^cla.
^uSmacht D

-at C 28 (D)

-arefa D

Pōtla ḁin, ḁam do ^uthig ocu^r fcuirpeaḁ ann a tīp a ceile, imcomipe doib cīara haipm in po fcuiprīro. Ro fcuiprīm i tīp inḁ fīr reḁ. Ma fōpcongragom a tabairt ap na^c faemagom, i^cē ^u-mat D appeanaḁ caicē a neach iapm. Nō apuile dono, a^ccīpīum na 25 fīpiana leo, ocu^r nī imcomiprōba doib, i^r tūpa appean in ca^caig fīn, maḁ aīnbīp dono ḁaīm in tīp in po fcuipreac a neo^co. ^udoncl?

Tothla dono; apbeiprīum fīp ḁaīm aīnpa fep in tīp; i^r

1 Are detained.—There is an erasure here in the M.S.
 2 The keeping.—That is, of the cattle out at grass under the care of proper herds-men.
 3 'Tothla'-trespass.—'Fothla' usually means 'eluding,' 'evading,' &c., and
 'Tothla,' 'demand,' 'claim,' 'request.'

is given to the man whose horses they are, if he be known ; if he is not known, notice is given at the 'dun'-fort of the nearest lord, and at the 'dun'-fort of the Brehon of the territory, and at the forge of the smith, and at the principal church of the territory ; and notice is likewise given throughout the neighbouring territories, and they (the horses) are detained¹ till the expiration of fifteen days or twenty nights, or a month, if the man whose horses they are does not arrive before that period which is that of their delay in pound. And what expense of feeding is due for them? Answer.—A sack every month for cows and horses, a sack and half a sack for an ox, unless he has been impounded ; but if he has been impounded, it is a sack for a day and night. The *keeping*² comes under the same estimation as the impounding ; they shall divide the expenses of feeding in two between them ; if he (the owner of the cattle) does not come, the expenses of feeding are entire to the person who has impounded. If the man who has impounded has failed to give the notice, and if his neighbour should come with the lawful following, and with worthy witnesses, and with oaths, ~~the lord shall relieve him~~, he shall obtain his cattle, and he shall pay the expenses of feeding.

the pound is placed

What are these expenses of feeding? A sack every month, for it is feeding for cattle that is due for them in this instance, not expense of feeding for distress.

If it be after this month ^{if he is not entered liability who he} ~~nothing is demanded~~ if service is obtained from them, i.e., from oxen, and horses, and milch cows ~~which are milked~~ ; but no expense of feeding is charged³ upon them while ^{Ir. Goes.} they render service, i.e., do work or give milk.

'Smacht'-fines for 'fothla'-trespass and 'tothla'-trespass.³

'Fothla'-trespass is committed when a party of people come and unharness their horses in the land of a neighbour, asking what place it is in which they have unharnessed. ~~Ye have unharnessed in the lands of this man.~~ ^{W} If he has ordered them to ~~take themselves~~ from thence, and ~~that~~ they do not comply, they shall pay for the trespasses of their horses afterwards committed. Or—it is otherwise, indeed, ^{how?} if ~~he~~ seest the bridles with them, and ~~he does not question them~~, it is thou who shalt pay for that trespass if the party are ignorant of what land they have unharnessed their horses in.

ask them nothing

As to 'tothla'-trespass, now ; ~~this is said of an unknown party who have unyoked their horses in the land ; and thou hast given~~

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

amine in coirce doib fcor ann, aét naó nheibne doo belairb nama ;
ar tura arpean in caóais rin iarum amuil bto a ceatpa faderm.
Po roirio imbed rmaéta paitci beiti a tpeib.
forroiset D amail bed (?) ber and D.

D¹² (C. 28.)

Cairis ina liap, .i. na cairis do bith ina cru.

5 [1. Cairis imorro, it rmaéta airilime do ruirib, ar ni ril pera doib, .i. damna peirte caó airilime fpu lom, damna cepte de diguin.]

A 565⁴,
(O'D. 2173)Bp. 2^a (Jullerius)

(O'D. 537)

Ala dono^{agc onc A} conpan^{nud. c. cintr. A}da cin^{cintr. A}da fpu tpe^{dc 7A}t, ocu^{C1904}r as conpan^{om A}da [cin^{onc pera A}da] fpu he^{is A}t; oir^{is A}cc peata bir a lip no a 10 pait^{faiche A}che, lingear eilim a ngor^{is A}te pait^{is A}che pa di, pa tpu, pa ceathair, an aen laithe; n^{is A} ling^{cintr. A} imorro, in tpe^{churru ~ nde A}t aét aen eilim; conpan^{is A}da^{cintr. A}o chin^{cintr. A}da iarum í nde.

cf O'D. 1671-4

O'D. 2268

C 574, 2044

C 506 (O'D. 403)

do conpanna A

SA

et A foirge A geir A gell C

Ala dono, conpanna cin^{dc}da fpu he^{dc}t, forp^{dc}isid gealear car geit^{is A} nín^{is A}duic, no car ime nín^{is A}duic.

nín^{is A}duic C nín^{is A}duic A

cf O'D. 966

5 Ala dono orcc .i. ata dono orc uppannar cin^{is A}da fpu in tpe^{is A}t fpu in nailbín i fuit^{is A}te peét nanman^{is A}na fpu tpe^{is A}t .i. in cutr^{is A}uma orro.
Ocu^{is A}r as .i. as uppannar cin^{is A}da fpu in tpe^{is A}t fpu in nailbín i fuit^{is A}te peét nanman^{is A}na for im cutr^{is A}uma. Oir^{is A}cc peata .i. in pet^{is A}a pob^{is A}i ina upc.

u?

(O'D. 1233)

1. in toirce peata bpu^{is A}gear ar du^{is A}r ocu^{is A}r be^{is A}gear eolu^{is A}r per in 2 tpe^{is A}t, cutr^{is A}uma fpu da nanman^{is A}na do rmaét^{is A} fpu, ocu^{is A}r fpu haen anman^{is A}na daithgin. In peét tanir^{is A}de teit, cutr^{is A}uma fpu ceit^{is A}ri hanman^{is A}naib fpu do rmaét, ocu^{is A}r cutr^{is A}uma fpu da anman^{is A}na daithgin. In tpe^{is A}ar peáét teit, cutr^{is A}uma fpu trí hanman^{is A}na daithgin, ocu^{is A}r fpu peét nanman^{is A}na do rmaét fpu. In ceat-3 pinte peét teit, cutr^{is A}uma fpu in tpe^{is A}t uile fpu do rmaét, ocu^{is A}r cutr^{is A}uma fpu ceit^{is A}ri hanman^{is A}na daithgin, ocu^{is A}r ar e in tpe^{is A}t be^{is A}gear caé peáét.

¹ Sheep in their fold.—The text here is from O'D., 1226 (E. 3. 5, p. 2, col. 1). The reading in O'D., 2172 (Rawlinson 487, fol. 65, p. 1, col. b), is "caíne a liap;" and that in C. 28 (Il. 3. 18, p. 12), is "cairig iliair;" the orthography varying as usual in the different MSS. in nearly every single word.

² The litter.—O'D., 2173, has here, "There is as large a fine upon the pet young pig, as upon seven animals, who goes into the garden the first time. . . There them to understand that it is allowable to unyoke there, although thou hast not said so by word of mouth; it is thou who payest for that trespass afterwards as if it were thy own cattle that had committed it. It may reach the amount of 'smacht' fine payable for trespass in a green adjoining a house. ?

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

fgl p. 408

as tho it were ?

Sheep in their fold,¹ i.e., the sheep to be in their fold.

The sheep have fines for 'airlim'-trespass imposed upon them, for there is no fine for 'feis'-trespass, i.e., the makings of a spindle (of wool) for every 'airlim'-trespass into bare grass, the makings of a ball into preserved grass.

There is a small pig that shares the fines with the herd, and a heifer which shares the fines with the herd; a pet young pig which is kept in an enclosure, or in a green, which makes 'airlim'-trespasses into the garden of the green twice, thrice, four times in one day, but the herd makes but one 'airlim'-trespass; they divide the liability afterwards between them into two equal parts.

of bar 1308

The calf, too, pays equal fine with that of the herd where he is a trespasser that passes over the lawful pasture, or over the lawful fence.

There is a small pig, i.e. there is a young pig which shares the fine with the herd, with the flock in which there are seven animals. With a herd, i.e. the same upon them. And a calf, i.e., a calf which shares the crime with the flock or the herd in which there are seven animals, in equal parts. Pet young pig, i.e., the pet of the litter.*

was a pig (in this case)

That is, the pet young pig which first breaks through the fence, and shows the way to the herd, there is a 'smacht'-fine² upon him equal to that upon two animals, and compensation equal to that of one animal. The second time that he goes, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that of four animals, and compensation equal to that of two animals. The third time that he goes, there is compensation upon him equal to that of three animals, and a 'smacht'-fine equal to that of seven animals. The fourth time that he goes, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that upon the whole flock, and compensation equal to that upon four animals. And he leads the herd each time.

is on him only the same fine as on every other animal the first time, the same as, on two, however, every time from that out."

* 'Smacht'-fine.—That is a fine for violating the law; 'aithghin' is compensation for the actual trespass committed in injuring the corn, grass, &c.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Ma do cuaid a aenur pa trí fia fiaonab, ocur po hícpead caé na, ocur ruc tpet in ceiruma peét, cutrúma fpi da nanmannab fap, do fmaét ocur fpi haen anmann daithgin.

Ma do cuaid na haenap po trí fia fiaonab ocur ní hícad
5 naé na, ocur ruc tpet iar fin, cutrúma fpi in tpet fap do fmaét, ocur cutrúma fpi ceitri hanmanna daithgin; no, ma do cuaid a aenur pa trí, ocur ní po hícad, ocur ruc tpet in tpeap peaét, cutrúma fpi re hanmanna fap do fmaét, ocur cutrúma fpi trí hanmanna daithgin.

10 Ma do cuaid co pa dí a aenur, ocur ní po hícad in cet peét, ocur po hícad in peét tanirde, cutrúma fpi da hanmanna fap do fmaét ocur fpi haen anmann daithgin.

Ma do cuaid co pa dí a aenur, ocur po hícad in cet peét, ocur ní po hícad in peét tanirde, cutrúma fpi peét nanmannab fap do fmaét, ocur cutrúma fpi da anmanna daithgin. Samlaíð dono in tað.

(081234)

1. Dír a lír, .i. tall. No a fathée, .i. amuich. Lingear eirlím,
.i. lingro feic ar a leim ap, ar in fep no ar in arbar. Pa dí, .i. co pa do.
Pa trí, .i. co pa trí. Pa ceathair, .i. co pa cethair. An aen laithe, 20 .i. naen lo teit munh he in tan ip cutrúma ap ocur aibín i fuit peét nanmanna. Ní ling imur po in tpet, .i. noco lingenn in taibín aét aen leim ap in tan ip cutrúma oppo. Conpandao chinota iarum
i nte, .i. ip cáin uppanat a cinto etarpu iarum ap do, in cutrúma airpium i nte anunn co pa cethair, ocur opporum i nte munh aenpeacht 25 Að dono, conpanna cinait, .i. ip euit in dono and, dona mucab po airneio romaino. Porpzig gealeap, .i. fep maí occi, ocur teit tar airbio do faigio feoir aibí; no dono, geit eirinnac oici, ocur teit tar ime nintorac.

1. Porpzig ar anim do o pachar ar a tað fep fein a noað 30 fep neic aile, cio ar ime cin co heð; no ar a troc fep fein a noað fep neic aile o bur tar ime deac, no gí tar imme gín co beato deac ar a tað fep fein a noað fep neich aile. Ní raite porpzig fua cia no dicreao ar a troch fep fein a noað fep neich aile, munab tar imme deac.

nodisi 082174

¹ Lawful.—The word 'inopuic' means 'worthy, pure, honest, perfect, complete
lawful.'

If he has gone alone thrice before witnesses, and he (his trespass) has been paid for each time, and that he has led the herd the fourth time, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that of two animals, and compensation equal to that of one animal.

If he has gone alone thrice before witnesses and has not been paid for each time, and he has led the herd afterwards, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that of the herd, and compensation equal to that upon four animals; or, according to others, if he has gone alone thrice, and has not been paid for, and has led the herd the third time, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that of six animals, and compensation equal to that of three animals.

If he has gone twice alone, and has not been paid for the first time, and has been paid for the second time, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that upon two animals, and compensation equal to that of one animal.

If he has gone twice alone, and has been paid for the first time, and he has not been paid for the second time, there is a 'smacht'-fine upon him equal to that of seven animals, and compensation equal to that of two animals. The calf indeed is similar as to fines.

Which is kept in an enclosure, i.e., within. Or in a green, i.e., outside. Makes 'airlim'-trespasses, i.e., he leaps a leap, a leap over upon the grass or upon the corn. Twice, i.e., two times. Thrice, i.e., three times. Four times, i.e., to four times. In one day, i.e., it is in the one day he goes over the fence when there is a fine upon him equal to that upon the herd in which there are seven animals. But the herd makes but one 'airlim'-trespass, i.e., the herd leaps but one over-leap when the fine on them is equal to that on the pet young pig. They divide the liability afterwards fairly between them into two equal parts, i.e., they divide the fines afterwards fairly between them into two equal parts, an equal share on him for having gone over four times, and on them for going over once. The calf too pays equal fine, i.e. the force of the particle 'too' here is, because it was of the pigs we have treated before. A trespasser that passes over the lawful pasture, i.e., he had good grass himself, and he goes over a palisade fence into other grass; or, indeed, he has unlawful pasturage, and he goes over a lawful fence.

y. O'Raw. 966

A trespasser is the name given to him (the calf) when he goes from his own good grass into the good grass of another, whether over a hedge or not; or from his own bad grass into the good grass of another over a good fence, or whether he has gone over a fence or not, he has gone from his own good grass into the good grass of another. He should not be styled a trespasser though he should have passed from his own bad grass into the good grass of another unless he has passed over a fence.

Bp. 26 followed

A 65⁴⁷JUDG-
MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Caip—caide in ime in droic?—Ma do cora, cora tu
 lias, tu traigte a leithead, da doinn deo dia hairde;
 ma do clar, tu traigte a leithead ocur a doimne;
 traig a leithead tu iar nictar, tu traig a leithead na maighe a curtar in muir, ocur tu traigte, a hairde in muir. Ma do noch aile, gabad ríde fíu dam fíu ríuiche; ní dicead ríuiche ar a dlúite, ocur [ní] díet dam ar a hairde, ocur a doingne; da doinn deo dia hairde; tu buncar iní, buncor for a hictar, ocur aile iníde aia medon, ocur aiaile fair iar nuach-tur, co-rugud cach cuaille iar nuachtur, ocur lamcur doib co nach urraema in talam; ocur tu beimeanna fair da [f]aríca [a ceand. Ocur] traig co ríge deil noirdan iar cae da cuaille; tu duiuno pot in cuaille uapa anamam, ocur éir traigam fair. Dia mbe fair [in ime reo], ír dithrogaíl ar ceatra.
 ír amne cíd in duiume iar [a] aird ocur [a] dlúithe, ocur [a] in droicur. Indracas A

(O'D 1235)

A 65⁴² O'D. 2174.

am 7 aa eilik
 O'D. 1556.

rough conseil ider each cuaille A x

O'D. 2175.

f IV 140-13

O'D. 2175.

O'D. 2175.

O'D. 2175.

O'D. 2175.

f O'D. 327

O'D 400

f IV 76.25

an A

A recte.

Caip—caide in ime in droic? .i. comaithicera caide aichne na hime doibigis iar. Ma do cora, .i. dia cloich éir ocur cloch forru annar.
 Ce leithead, .i. iar nictur. Ce leithead, .i. iar nuachtur. Ce doimne, .i. iar hairde. Iar nictar, .i. iar nictur éir. Ce leithead na maighe, .i. in maoid curtar in muir iar nictar a muir.
 Ce hairde in muir, .i. fíu. Gabad ríde fíu dam, ríuiche,
 .i. gabad ríde fíu dam ocur fíu in ríuiche mbe. Ní dicead ríuiche, .i. nocoit in ní ríuiche na ríuiche éir ar dlúithe. Díet dam ar a hairde, .i. nocoit in dam tair ar aird, .i. in da doinn deo. Ce traighe, .i. noco cumraigenn re ar a traighe. Da doinn deo, .i. na tu buncor. Co-rugud cach cuaille, .i. corab cruinn.
 Iar nuachtur, .i. napab cleit rama. Lamcur doib, .i. a cur doib

O'D. 1428

1) cora can cuaille f.
 arna rab clithann
 O'D. 1556

f Cath Finn Tr. 32

1 Bunchor-bands.—Bands of oziers interwoven between the standards, or stakes.

2 A mallet.—This was for the purpose of flattening the head or point of the stake to prevent it from hurting cattle. See O'D. 1556.

3 Interweaving wickerwork.—For 'uapa anamam,' of the text O'D. 2175 has 'uap penamam.'

4 'Bunchor'-bands.—There is something wrong here in the MS.

A 55 p. 2^o (O'D. 1556): cora tre liac, tre lica na hictur 7 da lic ar
 naon 7 liac na nuachtur

Question—What is the lawful fence?—If it be a stone wall, a wall of three stones, its dimensions are three feet in^a thickness, twelve hands in height; if a trench, three feet in width and in depth; its width one foot below at the bottom, three feet is the breadth at the place where the wall is placed, and three feet is^b the height of the wall. If it be a naked fence, it shall be a defence against oxen, and small cattle; the small cattle could not pass through it from its closeness, and an ox could not pass over it from its height and its firmness; twelve hands are its height; three 'bunchor'-bands^c in it, a 'bunchor'-band at the bottom, another in the middle, and another at the top; *in such-wise that each stake is rounded at the top, and they are pushed down by the hand in order that the ground may receive them, and they are each struck on the head with three blows of a mallet.*² The length of a foot as far as the joint of the big toe is to be between every two of the stakes; three hands the length of each stake, over the interweaving wicker-work, and a blackthorn crest upon it. If it be thus made,^d it is a defence against the trespasses of cattle. The 'duirime'-fence is similarly formed as to height, and closeness, and lawfulness.

JUDGMENTS OF
CO-TENANCY.

^a Ir. Its.

^b Ir. Its.

the respecting of each stake

hill!

^c Ir. If this be upon the fence.

Question—What is the lawful fence? i.e., I ask how is the lawful fence known. If a wall of three stones, i.e., two stones below and one stone over upon them. In thickness, i.e., at the bottom. In thickness, i.e., at the top. In depth, i.e., in height. At the bottom, i.e., below at the bottom. Is the breadth at the place where the wall is placed, i.e., of the place where the wall is placed at the bottom of the wall. The height of the wall, i.e., up. It shall be a defence against oxen, &c., i.e., it shall be a fence against the ox and the small cattle. The small cattle, &c., i.e., what crops the briars does not pass through it in consequence of its closeness. That an ox, &c., i.e., the ox does not go over it on account of its height, i.e., the twelve hands. Its firmness, i.e., it is not removed on account of its firmness. Twelve hands, i.e., the three 'bunchor'-bands.³ Each stake is rounded at the top, i.e., that they be round. At the top, i.e., that they be not like oars. Pushed down by the hand, i.e., thrust by the

* O'D 1536 en bair i ndelidenn in o'da risin troig

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

o laim, cona ríppaemáin fe dul ipm talmaín. Trais co ruise deil norpán, .i. co deoal na orpán, .i. trois co rici in inat, .i. co bun in deilgenn in orpá ríppáin traigis, itir caé da cuaille. Uapa anamain,
.i. uapa rígi min fo urcomair na cipu traigín. Cip traigáin, .i. iap nuachsur. Dia mbe rair, .i. ma dia roib in denam rin air ip dicit-laio do na cethraib he. Ip amne, .i. ip amlaio rin dono in dúirime.
Itir airde ocyr dluic he, .i. in dapa dorpá deo, ocyr co na vis in rúiche trit ar a dúithe. Inorpucur, .i. cen pleá, cen bepa, cen benna.

O'Daw. 715

D 124 (C28)

10 Smacht peata chuipre ocyr cipre, ocyr peata oir, ocyr peata mictipe, ocyr peata reimeóin, ocyr peata rindais. Tairgille nairais; ite indrin a cathice. ^{petae D} ^{cunor D} ^{circe D} ^{om A} ^{uis A} ^{petae A} ^{sinrin A} ^{petae A} ^{navir A} ^{cath A}

1. pechan no rebac
4 O'Daw 1414

Smacht peata chuipre, .i. na huile en uile amuil na ceipa, .i.
let rmaet porp na annanna ra. Peata oir, .i. amuil na bu.
15 Peata mictipe, .i. amuil na cona cennoda. Peata reimeóin,
.i. rebacc. Tairgille nairais, .i. do éno tairgille icaitir a rmaeta, .i. gell coirpthech airi, gell da rerepall; ocyr ip dapa a cenn icaitir rmaeta ma roglaib comaithcepa.

Ehände D

D 124
(C28-9)

* 1. Carthe athide tra, (coín, ocyr geoid, ocyr ceapca, ocyr pea- = loin 20 taða chuipre, ocyr beich; a tairgille aihuil caé ceatpa dia mbe tairgille nairais; muna be, a tairgille amuil caé ceathra olceana.

suidin i tairgille D (C29)

Carthe beach tra, ito carthe ril do rairais, ni tairgille.

nad navlengat D
avlemenna inain D

Cro fo deipa ron[?] aipe ad luamnaig, ocyr ní ril taircealla 25 forais, ocyr pobit na nairleangead uile i malle, ar ip do eirlimeann ann rin na tairle athgín na rmaeta la comitru? .i. eir-lin dia nairpáir a nepad ríppá fo pechadrum tra caratda, co naé urupa can hie a éinat. Dia catat ril doib, .i. catat dia torat.
loraid

tairgelledh D

di D

canhid D

30 Co hepanar in catat dia tora? Him - ampep a coilltep na beich, do beip in pep adgair compuc porp in mil rin, co teio a láim gabala, ocyr fo geallaó iarpum. Iri breac ip éoir iarpum ime, raio in meala doib i trí .i. trian do urgnam, ocyr trian do beacais, ocyr trian do tip. Al trian in tíre rannatar ron atri

1 If he detains all that will be told him.—This very obscure passage may possibly mean—"If he (the man injured by bees) retains in his mind all I shall tell him, in that case he may look after trespasses by bees in such manner that it will not be easy for the owner of the bees to escape paying him compensation." Per-hand, so that it cannot but enter into the ground. A foot as far as the joint of the big toe, i.e., to the articulation of the big toe, i.e., a foot till it reaches the place, i.e., the point where the big toe separates from the foot, between every two stakes.

JUDGMENTS OF
CO-TENANCY.

Older. 7.5

Over the interweaving, i.e., over the fine interweaving of oziars over ~~against~~ the blackthorn crest. Blackthorn crest, i.e., at the top. If it be thus made, i.e., if it be of this make it is impregnable to the cattle. Similarly, i.e., the 'duirime'-fence is also thus constructed. As to height and closeness, i.e., the twelve hands, and so as that the small cattle could not pass through it on account of its closeness. Lawfulness, i.e., without spikes, without spears, without points.

As to the 'smacht'-fine for pet herons and hens, and pet deer, and pet wolves, and pet old birds, and pet foxes; there is an additional pledge upon them; this is for their trespasses.

The 'smacht'-fine for pet herons, i.e. all kinds of birds are liable to fines like the hens, i.e. there is half 'smacht'-fine upon these animals. Pet deer, i.e. like the cows. Pet wolves, i.e. like the domestic dogs. Pet old birds, i.e. hawks. Additional pledge upon them, i.e. for addition their 'smacht'-fines are paid, i.e. there is a relieving pledge, a pledge of two 'screpalls;' and it is for this 'smacht'-fines are paid for their trespasses in co-occupancy.

As to the fines upon ^{wolf, chicken} 'aithids,' i.e. dogs, and geese, and hens, and pet herons and bees; their additional pledge is the same as that of all animals, if they are liable to additional pledge; if not, their additional pledge is like that of cattle in general.

birds

As for the trespasses of bees, it is trespass fines which are due for these, not additional pledge.

What is the reason of this, for they are swift, and there is no restraint upon them, and because they ~~fly~~ ^{are} not all together, for it is also IV 162. 14.

But 4. Car. 12 (p. 320) where a tairgille is given on bees.

for these 'airlim'-trespasses ^{which} they do not incur restitution or 'smacht'-fine in the co-occupancy? i.e. 'airlim'-trespass, if he detains ^{the rear of} all that will be told him, he shall now look to trespasses so that it is not easy to avoid paying for their damage. There are two fines for them, i.e. a fine of (consisting of) their produce.

How is the fine of their produce paid? Answer—At the time of smothering the bees, the man who sues makes a seizure of that honey, and it goes into the keeping of safe hands, and it is afterwards submitted to award. The decision which is right to make afterwards concerning it is, to divide the honey between them into three parts, i.e. a third for attendance, and a third for the bees, and a third for the owner of the land. The third allotted for the land

Ir. Hand of seizing.

they

haps, it should be rendered, i.e., "an 'airlim'-trespass in which they delay so long as to commit damage, it is not easy to avoid paying for their damage."

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.
—i meit biatt D

.1. trian de don fir bet a beich fo bith in tpe ar a noreangad, in trian naile pannatar fon iur na ceitre comaitaib beda neara do, .1. i mbeit biao. Ma p^{re}iath laur in tomar rin cae biatham fair, do beir fairce cae comaitaio beara n^{er}om. scith D

5 Tri cinaio do cipe .1. poxal, ocur dorpat, ocur corbat. Teora bairgina p^{er}fuine cona nannlann; ocur ipe meit in annlann rin comitgat cae bairgine oib, ocur a leat; ocur in tarbur i mo millio na ceile, i^r de icur na bairgina rin i^r in cinaio do n^{ia}t na cerca ar^{ti}g. Damna teora p^{er}ptar beta fu le^rrepeu^{ll} 10 ina cinaio i lir .1. maetrlucad be^c, ocur lot roioi ocur coioi, ocur nocon amuil fogal comait^{er} rin, aet a mbit amuil bithin^{ce}.
C tri cinaio .1. p^{er}ctar lir [.1. p^{er} h^{ath}aib ocur muilenn] supplis fo A
* * * * *

ocur p^{er} dairib arbar; ocur ar p^{er}ct cercaib beor ata in rith rin, 15 ocur noco teit tairir. Na petada en uil amuil na cerca ina foglaib comait^{er}pera; teora * *

[O'D. 2175.
only Afest²

11a hui^l en amuil na cerca in a fogla comcepa. 11a tri ce fogla a^{ti}g, poxal, ocur corbat, ocur dorpat. C tri ce fogla a lir, maetrlucad bech, ocur lot roioi ocur caininne. 012270 cinad celo - or rather celo-f

20 Teora bairgina ina fogal a^{ti}g, ocur le^rrepeu^{ll} a lir no a lubgor^{it}; ocur meit forpa a p^{er}ctur lir, amuil na ruba eile 11o dono dena, comu^ria^{ch} bithin^{ce} uatib i^r na becharb ocur i^r in aith. I^r ann ata a neiric a dubramur romainn o na cercaib an inba^{io} ata an coim^{et} a deir d^{li}ge^o orpa .1. co^oail impa, 25 ocur muna be^c, co mbiad p^{ia}c duine ca^{ti} orpa.

11a pet^a en uil amuil na cerca ina foglaib comait^{er}pera. Teora bairgina a cinaig, ~~no~~ p^{er}ct nannunn oib a^{ti}g, ocur le^rrepeu^{ll}

¹ 'Roidh'-plants.—Vide vol 2, p. 420 n, 421.

² And mills.—Twenty-five letters have been here cut away with part of the lower margin of E. 3, 5, page 3.

³ Of co-tenancy.—The MS. E. 3, 5, is here defective. What follows up to the article on hound trespasses, p. 120, is supplied from O'D., 2176 et seq., and C. 29. See Welsh Laws, p. 692, folio edition.

is itself divided into three parts, i.e. a third of it is given to the man who owns the bees on account of the land from which they come, the other two-thirds are divided between the four nearest neighbouring farms, i.e. where food (for the bees) is. If this distribution of it every year should be deemed tiresome, each nearest farm takes a swarm.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.
—

*There are three trespasses of the hen, i.e., snatching away, spilling, and wasting. The fine is three cakes of man-baking with their condiment; and the amount of this condiment is to equal the thickness and breadth of each cake of them; and the corn which is more injured than the rest, it is of it these cakes are made which are paid for the trespass the hens commit in a house. Three cakes for their trespass in the house. The makings of three spindles (full of wool,) which are worth half a 'screpall' is paid for their trespasses in an enclosure of a garden, i.e. the soft swallowing of bees, and the injury of 'roidh'-plants, and garlic, and this is not as trespass in the co-occupancy, but is regarded as viciousness. Their three trespasses outside the enclosure, i.e. in kilns and mills² * * * and on corn-stacks; and on seven hens this addition is, and it does not go beyond them (that number). All the petbirds are as the hens as regards their trespasses of co-tenancy;³ three * *  fouling ?

cf. O.S. 2270

All the birds are as the hens, with respect to their trespasses in the co-occupancy. The three hen-trespasses in a house are snatching away, wasting, and spilling. The three hen-trespasses in an enclosure are soft swallowing of bees, and injuring 'roidh'-plants and garlic.

Three cakes is the fine for their trespass in a house, and half a 'screpall' in an enclosure or herb-garden; and 'the sacks' are charged upon them outside the enclosure, like other trespassers. Or, indeed, according to others, it is fine for thievishness⁴ that is paid for their swallowing the bees, and for trespasses in the kiln. Where the 'eric'-fine which we have mentioned above is paid for the hens is when the restraint which the law orders is upon them, i.e. boots of rags! upon them, and if they be not upon them, a fine for man-trespass shall be upon them. woods

All pet birds are like the hens with respect to their trespasses in^a co-tenancy. Three cakes is the fine for the trespass of every^a fr. Of seven birds of them committed in a house, and half a 'screpall' in an

⁴ Thievishness.—The 'bithbinche' of an animal is his acquired habit of injuring or trespassing.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

α λirr, ocur lẽt meich α rẽctar λirr. Tap̃ lan ime ata rin, ocur α lẽt tap̃ lẽt ime, ocur cin ní mãr cín ime itir. Cu cochluib umpu rin; no dono, ro cuir α mbaile ar ro bu cínnti leir α nem̃tiãctain ar̃r; riach duine [^{K²A} caite] ^Aimurro, forru muna 5 fuidt cõla umpu, no munar lá iat conair ar̃r ro bu cínnti leir α nem̃tiãctain.

brechtain A

Teora bairgina per̃fume co na nannlunn brẽt̃ain cãa raithi ar ré bairgina bañfume, tri bairgina coir̃ci año, ocur an c̃et̃na deor̃na; uair̃ ĩr am̃lãõ íc̃tar meic̃ in comait̃cẽra, lẽt do
10 coir̃ci año ocur lẽt deor̃nain; ocur ní cuir̃mãõ α lõg, uair̃ in tõc̃t̃mãõ r̃ann õc̃t̃mõg̃at do r̃inginn lõg na tri mbairg̃in coir̃ce, ocur in rẽc̃t̃mãõ r̃ann r̃ẽr̃cat do r̃inginñõ ar̃ na tri bairgina eor̃nãõ. Ocur tabuir̃ na ré bairgina rin ar tri bairgina per̃fume, feor̃ling co lẽt ocur tri r̃anna d̃feor̃ling̃ ocur dechmãõ
15 in dechmãõ d̃feor̃ling̃ lõg ann, no na tri mbairg̃in ĩrin. Cín do mãt̃ na cẽar̃ca ĩr in tĩg̃ ata rin.

Domnãõ tri r̃er̃tur bẽda r̃iu lẽt r̃er̃epall ina ciñãõ α λir, lẽt meich ina ciñãõ [^{ciñãõ A} r̃õ] α rẽc̃tar λir. ^{ciñãõ A}

Al tri ciñãõ α tĩg̃, for̃al, ocur dõr̃ta ocur coir̃bu. Al tri 20 rõgla α λir, mãẽr̃luc̃ũõ bẽãc̃, ocur lot r̃õĩõ ocur com̃õenn, no r̃ri beochu ocur λur ocur cruacha. Al tri rõglãõ α rẽc̃tar λir,
.1. re h̃ãchaib ocur mũillenñ ocur re daĩrib ar̃ba; no r̃ri r̃abull ocur r̃ri h̃ãt̃uib ocur r̃ri for̃tuib; no dono, coñã bu r̃õgal comait̃cẽra doir̃r̃um na rõgla rin, ãc̃t α mbẽt amuil bĩt̃bing̃i, ocur co 25 rẽc̃t cẽr̃ca ata in r̃ĩth rin. M̃iach ar̃ ẽr̃e na bi ham̃r̃it̃, cumu lẽt meic̃ ar̃ cãilẽc̃; cuma cín cĩr̃ci r̃ri lub̃gõr̃t ocur bẽãchaib.

argellad

Dub (C. 29.)

[Cẽr̃ca; α daĩrg̃ille am̃ail cãc̃ cẽr̃a, ar̃ ñi ar̃g̃ill̃ad tap̃ im̃raic ocur im̃be im̃rõraic r̃ri; ocur cuat̃ do op̃ol̃ãc̃ dec, do gr̃án, ĩr r̃mãc̃t̃ r̃il doir̃ r̃ri cãc̃ nãrl̃im; ocur α com̃m̃ẽõ ar̃ na 30 dic̃cẽro tap̃ im̃rõraic rin, im̃õibe α nẽdãis̃ ocur ur̃com̃la for̃aib.] cf. 118.15

¹ Enclosure.—'Lis' means here, the enclosure of a garden where bees are kept.

² Condiment.—'Annalann' is any thing taken with bread, such as butter, sauce, bacon, &c. Butter and bacon are the kinds of 'annalann' usually referred to in these laws.

enclosure,¹ and half a sack for trespass outside an enclosure. This is when they have passed over a full fence, and it is half for trespass over a half fence, and nothing if there be no fence at all. This is when they have boots of rags upon them; or, indeed, according to others, he (the owner) put them in a place from which he felt certain they could not come; but fine for man-trespass lies against them unless rag-boots be upon them, or unless they have been sent by a way through which he was sure they could not come.^a

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. Their non-coming.

Three cakes of man-baking with their condiment³ of butter or bacon every quarter of a year, are the equivalent for six cakes of woman-baking, which consist of three cakes of oats, and the same number of barley; for the manner in which the sacks of the co-tenancy are paid, is one-half in oats and one-half in barley; and their price is not equal, for the eighty-eighth part of a 'pinginn' is the price of the three cakes of oats, and the sixty-seventh part of a 'pinginn' is that of the three cakes of barley. And taking these six cakes as equivalent to three cakes of man-baking, their price will amount to a farthing and a half, and three parts of a farthing, and the tenth of the tenth of a farthing is their price, or that of these three cakes. This is for the trespass which the hens commit in the house.

The makings of three spindles which are worth half a 'screpall' are due for their trespasses in an enclosure, half a sack for their trespass outside an enclosure.

foraging Their three trespasses in a house are *snatching away, spilling and wasting.*³ Their three trespasses in an enclosure are soft swallowing of bees, and the injuring of 'roidh' plants and garlic, or of bees, herbs; and corn ricks. Their three trespasses outside the enclosure, i.e., in kilns and mills and stacks of corn; or in a barn, in kilns and fields; or, according to others, these trespasses are not trespasses of the co-tenancy, but they are to be considered thieves,^b and this fine runs^c to seven hens. A sack for a hen that is not barren, and hence half a sack for a cock; equal is the fine for trespass of the hen in an herb-garden and for the injury which she does to bees.

^b Ir. As thievishness.

^c Ir. This run is upon seven hens.

a additional pledge would not be given As to hens: their additional pledge-fine is like that of every kind of cattle, for they shall not ~~pass~~ into a lawful place over a lawful fence; and a cup of twelve inches, of grain, is the 'smacht'-fine which is paid for them for every 'airlin'-trespass; and this when they are guarded so as that they may not pass over a lawful fence, their wings being clipped and spancels upon them.

?? of IV/38.5

³ Wasting.—'Corb' is glossed 'cartearn,' spending, wasting, or consuming 'Corbad' (another form of the word) means also, dirtying, defiling. prob. here

* At l. 15 of this p. the printer's text, without any editorial notice, begins to deviate so greatly from the Bodleian MS. that it must be taken for some corrupt Dublin codex (1.)" Stokes Ac. xxx, 58.

120 Breathla Comaitheara An Dro.

orig. April 66^{al}
JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.
—
Sic.

Ha com allta, ocur na rinnaigh, ocur na brian, no na bhuic ocur na doain amuil na conu cennu um a foglaib comaitheara. Ha ha s allta amuil na haighi ceannu um a fogla b comaitheara.
Ha muca allta da mbetir ar cumur neir, amuil na muca
s ceannu.

Ha riuu po amuil na ceannu ir cormuil riuu um rmaet; no ir let riach uaduib na nannann ir cormuil riuu, amail ir let riach inotib rin.

Teora bairgima a rmaet a tigh; cu riuigi rect letreiriuuill
10 rmaet a lir, ocur meich a rectar lir.

Sne eile. In coru ocur in penen, amuil atait a cinard nama.
Rit in comaitheara cu riuice tri rect nannannu, cio ile realba bet ann, acht su rabuio a comingaire cona mbeir ac denum na fogla; no rit for cae reib muna riuil a comingaire.

f IV 100.

HC 2783

0'Don. 525

~~B. fol. 100. r. 10. l. 10. v. 10. w. 10. x. 10. y. 10. z. 10.~~
cisi AD caithe D comaithe A 15 Cair—ciara cachaach po fich cu riuu tri in comicard?
beirid A beirid chin conlon.

1 sodain A 2 luain A 3 luain A a talmanu A Cio ril a rogann? Duaine in conluain 1 talam, ocur talman dar a eire; ocur a teora heimeide in chonluain, a haimeid do in, ocur a haimeid do gnuith, ocur a 20 heimeid do taer ina dipe? Toircead cae taerprecht conu chinnuaid do neach forairead, itir dipe ocur aithgin.

comaitheara caiti a cholund feich A Smachta comicheara carde coland a feich, ar ni bi O'D. 2178. rmaet acht la coland a feich? Per i taib no [in] airaircend A 25 ceand ite coland a feich.
is hi a column A

¹ Ownerships.—A 'seilbh' means a distinct possession, the stock of a particular person.
² Question.—The text in E. 3, 5, is defective here.
³ The feeding.—The term "conlon," or "conluain," means "dogs' excrement," and is so glossed in C. 2783, where this very paragraph is quoted, but in somewhat different language, thus:—"Cair—ciara caiti po fich in cu riuu tri in comaitheara, cio bepe cin conlon." It is evident, however, from the gloss on the passage in the text, that the author of that gloss understood it as "hound's

1108 1286, 2270
The wild dogs, and the foxes, ^{& the ravens} or the badgers, and the 'togans,' ^{messils? strats? or wealds?} are as the tame dogs with respect to their trespasses in the co-tenancy. The wild fawns are like the tame calves with respect to their trespasses in the co-tenancy. The wild swine, if they should be in one's power, are like the tame swine.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

The wild deer are like the tame deer which are like them, with respect to 'smacht'-fine; or, according to others, it is half the fine of the animals which are like them, that is paid for them, as it is half fine that is obtained for them.

Three cakes is their 'smacht'-fine for trespass in a house; their 'smacht'-fine for trespass in an enclosure may amount to seven half 'screpalls,' and sacks are due for trespass outside the enclosure.

Another version. As to the heron and the hawk, their trespasses are outside only. || And the fine in the case of co-occupancy extends^a as far as three times seven animals, even though there should be several distinct ownerships,¹ provided that they are under common herding at the time of committing the trespass; or it extends to each distinct ownership if they are not under common herding.

Now per. Selmo to belong to p. 100 f. supra.

Question²—What trespass does a hound commit on the land of a co-tenant? The feeding³ of him ^{involves^b a liability for his trespass.} ^{ordure}

Ir. The
run.
Ir. Bears.

What is done in this case?—To take away the hound's ordure from the land, and settle the land after it; and three times the bulk of the ordure is to be paid as its 'dire'-fine, its bulk of butter, and its bulk of curds, and its bulk of dough. The support of all pet animals and their trespasses fall on the person who owns them, both as regards 'dire'-fine and compensation.

Ir. In.
Let every one guard his pets hairlike for whatever they may have incurred

In the 'smacht'-fines of co-tenancy, what is the substance of the liability^d incurred by them (i.e., on their account), for there is no 'smacht'-fine unless there be a substantial liability.^d The destruction of the grass at the side or at the end of the field is the substance of the liability.^d

Ir. Body of the debt.

food," taking 'lon' to mean as it does in the modern language, 'food,' 'provision,' &c. "Crô bepe cin conlom," as quoted in the gloss C. 2783, means "who bears (or shall bear) the trespass of dogs' ordure," which is probably the true meaning of the clause in the text, though the glossarist understood it otherwise.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Οαιρ, .i. comartheim cia cin comartheφα puachtraisey in cu ne perann in comarthe. Deirio chin, .i. deirio cunta in con in ti tucurtaí lon bíd don coin.

*D126(C29)

cehair D

.1. Caire con .i. a ceacair, .i. duinecaite, ocur a urbach
5 ceactra, robaí naitreibe, ocur conlon i tir. Cair—ció i rogain?
Duaine in conluain rin i talam ocur pot ino daria eipe, ocur bo-éor fair co ceann mór. In cinaró aile o tá in cet chinaró .i. aithgin inéic ro bponna in cet cín, irin tanirde, a bar ino.*

Ciód po depa ron, ar ní teit ceacair a cét cín? *D126(C29) cehair cétcinad D

Cia do deachad O'D2269

only Afu^u O'b.
2177-8.

|| O'D2269

a/

10 [Cé ro éiríde in cu ar fearann in comarthe noán fúil ní uad aét muna deirinnat conluain fair; ocur ma do roime, in tinaró i noirinnaró do tochuil, ocur úir do buain ar in aipett ir léir balath in conluain, ocur úir mín a comartheinta ino.

in comat dacurthe (2)
O'D2269

11 Ipeo degeur buain in conlóin a talumun gein do gabur a rúg 15 ann, ocur a ronnaró ocur a rúaró, ocur úir mín a comartheinta ar ron aithgina. Ir deirre rúainti rin; aét co noichet da each um carpuet hi coruitt and ocur congleter and, ocur conaroglen a fiacla ní don feor oga gleit. Ocur^x a tri himett^x in eacha ar ron aithgina, ocur a mét dinn, ocur a mét do taer, ocur a mét do 20 gnuith; ocur in ní dib rin na rúaró, geibid gnuith in .ii. taréir.
Ocur maó i fiaonairi fir bunaró do nét in cu conluain ar in fer^{an} co mbet fiaé duinecaite uad and.]

* a tri coméit in chaca ina dire: a coméit do im, etc. O'D2269

8.

Ciód rúil a rogain? .i. ciód rúil irin níada irin, irin rogain comartheφα.
Duaine in conluain, .i. buain éaca in con ar in talman. Ocur 15 talam dar a eipe, .i. talam aib dar a eipe, .i. aponnaró ocur a rúaró.
C teopa heimeirde, .i. in conlon ino ar ron oipe. In a oipe, .i. ar ron rúaró. Toircead caé aer roecht .i. taipseo caé aipeáta ro uairi deirre cona deirnat rogain. Con a chinntaib, .i. oic, oia

(O'D1239)

l. aipeáta?
no.
dyndy. p.

¹ Four.—In C. 29, the reading is ceair, four; which seems to be the correct one. 'Ceair' usually means 'dirt, filth,' a sense which the context does not appear to warrant here.

² Four times.—The original is defective here. Taking 'ceair', 'four' or 'a quadrupled' to be the correct reading, the sentence may mean, "What is the reason of this, for a quadrupled does not go in payment for its first crime?" Taking

Question, i.e., I ask what trespass of co-tenancy does the hound commit in the neighbour's land? Involves a liability for his trespass, i.e., the person who has given store of food to the hound is accountable for the trespasses of the hound.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

That is, the trespasses of hounds, i.e., four¹, i.e., man-trespass, and mangling of cattle, breaking of dwellings, and committing nuisances on land. Question—What is done in this latter case?—To take that ordure out of the ground, and place asod thereon afterwards, and cowdung is to be left over it to the end of a month. As to the other trespasses from the first trespass out, i.e. compensation is to be made for the thing injured by the first trespass, for the second, the life of the hound is taken.^a

^a Ir. Its death in the for it. case.

What is the reason of this, for he does not repeat the first trespass four times? ^{? Because} a four-footed beast is not forfeited for a first offence (?)

Though the hound should come on the neighbour's land there is no fine^b upon him (the dog), unless he has committed nuisance upon it; and if he has, the spot on which he has done it, is to be dug up, and the clay to be removed therefrom as long as the smell of the ordure is perceived, and fine clay of the same nature with that taken away is to be placed thereon.

Ir. Nothing.

What is required by law is, to remove the dog's ordure out of the ground as far as its juice is found, and it (the ground) is to be pressed and stamped upon with the heel, and fine clay of the same nature is to be put there as compensation. This is the test of reparation; that two horses of a chariot in yoke come there and graze there, and if no part of the sod of grass stick to their teeth in grazing on it the reparation is complete. And three times the size of the ordure is due for compensation, and³ its size of butter, and its size of dough, and its size of curds; and the part of them that is not obtained in the one is to be claimed in the other afterwards.⁴ And if it be in the presence of the owner that the hound has committed nuisance on the grass, a fine for man-trespass shall be paid by him for it.

What is done in this case? What is the reparation in this case, for the damage in the co-occupancy? To take away the hound's ordure, i.e. to take away the hound's excrement out of the ground. And settle the land after it, i.e. to put other earth there after it, i.e. to press it and to trample it with the heel. Three times the bulk, i.e. of the hound's excrement is to be given for it as 'dire'-fine. As its 'dire'-fine, i.e. as 'smacht'-fine. The support of all pet animals, i.e. every valued toy-animal is restrained by it that they commit not trespass. And their trespasses, i.e. to pay, i.e. if they have committed 'ceacáin' to mean 'dirt,' or 'excrement,' the meaning would be for "excrement does not go as a first trespass."

very noble shape

¹ The 'ocuy' in the original seems superfluous, unless it is meant for .i.

⁴ Afterwards.—That is, if it be not obtained in butter, it shall be given in dough, &c.

trespass. To the person who owns them, i.e. to ~~the person to whom they~~ have done damage. Both as regards 'dire'-fine, i.e. the three equal hulks. Compensation, i.e. of the grass.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

The 'smacht'-fines of co-tenancy, i.e. the thing which is commanded in the common tenancy, the 'smacht'-fines, i.e. sacks. What is the substance of the liability, i.e. compensation for the thing which is damaged. For there is no 'smacht'-fine, &c., i.e. for the thing which is commanded for it is only for the sake of compensation for the substance of the liability, i.e. sacks. Grass at the side, i.e. lengthwise. Or at the end i.e. shortwise, or in breadth. Is the substance of the liability, i.e. compensation when it is it that has been injured.

Farm-law, why so called? That is the law of farms, that no one may injure the farm of his neighbour, that he may not cut down the wood of his land, that he break not, that he may not plough it, that he may not inhabit it; for every man shall give additional pledge for his cattle in respect of every passing over a fence, for every breach, for every rushing over.

Farm-law, i.e. the law for the farm, i.e. the farm, or the regulations which are required for it. Why so called? i.e. why is it so called or denominated? The law of farms, i.e. that is, this is the regulations of the land. That no one may injure the farm of his neighbour, i.e. either in its grass or corn, i.e. that no one may injure the land of his neighbour. That he may not cut down the wood of his land, i.e. that he may not cut the wood of his land. That he break not, i.e. the stakes or pales, i.e. of a house there. That he may not plough it, i.e. that he may not till it. That he may not inhabit it, i.e. that he may not fix upon it his houses, his kilns, or his mills. For every man shall give an additional pledge, i.e. that every one may give a relieving pledge (a pledge worth two 'scrapalls' to insure the payment of the fines imposed) for every trespass which his cattle commit by going over the fence. For every breach, i.e. for every crossway, for every passage which they make over it. For every rushing over, i.e. for every great running over it which they make.

That is, there are three lands in which ~~cows are not fined~~ for these trespasses, viz., ~~a trespass in~~ a wood, ~~a trespass in~~ a moor, and a 'foach-tuaithe' trespass. Their trespass is condoned here, for every kind of cattle may be in a wild place. get nothing

There are three trespasses of cattle; they are not equally paid for, viz., a trespass over a palisade, and a trespass by a breach, and a trespass by rushing over. If it be trespass over a ^{high} palisade, and that there is a bad² fence between every two neighbours, it is in the margin XXIII 425 say that the legal maxim on l. 4 is of considerable antiquity, even though it is ~~not~~ ^{not} ~~in the main text but~~ ^{in the main text but} ~~in the commentary~~ ^{in the commentary} (the so-called 'commentary' is, if anything, older than the 'main text'.)

* Bad.—For 'an' in the Irish of this line, and also of the next line, C. 30, reads 'an.'

126

Breathla Comaithcepa An Dro.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

fil anto, ar conlui an anime in catar. ^{caitheas naírop anile in fil a hae} Maírop ar aile in fil beto ^{docty D} a ai do dísir, ir oícaíar. ^{dena D} fil anto, ar pí roína laim a laim muna dóna ar píre, noítríomain, noítrí tígíur. ^{impia D} Ir de ar-rúbríar; iníra píreí aóíarí comíóíter iná eíse. ^{Wimndíster iná ege D} tiglonadus D = emb-fia, Hall,

Laplace XXIII 425

*D12+(C30)

*C308 (0'B 405)

5 Cair—caíre cairce? Cairacht tar peilb no tar a oi. Cairce dóna, dul tar roí, dul tar abíno ná be rnam doib. Cairce tar fas neirearí. ^{0'Bar 967} cul dar fagíerí fíerí (!) A

4 IV 124. 23

Cáir, .i. comaíreí caíre in taríur cae .i. cae cairí. Cairacht,
.i. t[airacht] dar da aircenn, no dar ceíre aircéno. Tar peilb 10 .i. dar perunn in boíre .i. teora píreí oíur upíar píreíar. No tar a oi, .i. tar da perano. Dul tar roí, .i. leíreíach cairce iníul tar leíclao in roí .i. co leí ime .i. pí lúme amúich. Dul tar abíno, .i. ar gíreí leí ime iní tar a neaíar ann. Na be rnam doib, .i. maí rnam doib ir píach aircíme no. Cairce tar fas 15 neirearí, .i. tar perann in tí eíreí ar a píre .i. in teireí.
Tar fas, .i. tar píe .i. tíre.

D (C30)

comairíerí D
cf II 232. 6

*.i. Cíatí dóno tí cairce .i. cairce tar roí, oíur cairce tar abíno, oíur cairce tar comíar. Maí cairce tar abíno domaí ná be treíre, ir óícaíar fil ann, aríur gíerí dar iníre 20 iní rín. Maí cairce tar beíra tar roí, do túe ceathríuíníe píreí rí talmaí, oíur aríreanarí an aíl, aríur leí do ralláib, an aíl do roebíarí; a leí ná ríleí ranníar ataru í noí. Maí cairce tar comíar aircí í mbíar da treabí in eíreíarí, iríreí in cetíra dóno; ranníar a ríleí ataru in dás 25 íme; ní leíar íme ríreí neíreíar. Ir píreí íaríota rín; fíreí oíur ir catarí ná píreíar póla, ar ní óíleíar ínuamí pólaí

(0'B 124)

treabí D

fíreí treabí D

¹ Ina eíge.—This phrase may possibly mean, "What exists before it is prohibited is maintained afterwards."

² Aircenn.—A piece of land containing 7,776 feet, or half a 'tir-cumhaile.'

³ Half fence.—In O'D., 2179—the gloss runs thus, "Dul tar roí .i. eíreí cairce tar leí ime iníul tar leathí clao in roí, &c. Going over a road, i.e. the 'erie'-fine for a breach over a half fence is due for going over one wall of the road. Going over a river which they have not to swim, i.e. the 'erie'-fine of a breach over a half fence is due for this also. What makes the breach here the same as passing over land is, the going across the road which has only half a fence, or across a river without swimming, and there is full estimated at half trespass, for the bad fence lessens the trespass. If they have come over the fence of the man whose property they are, it is full trespass, for "Hand is (hand does not profit, unless it has been done for love, or through fear, or through lordship." It is from—it was said: "Inpia resiu adgara coimdigther ina eithe."

Question—What is a breach? Passing over one land, or over two. A breach is also going across a road, going across a river which they (the cattle) do not swim. A breach is going over the land of a deserter.

Question, i.e. I ask what is 'tarthus-cae', i.e. the way over it. Passing over, i.e. passing over two 'aircenn'-lands,² or over four 'aircenn'-lands. Over one land, i.e. over the land of the 'Boaire'-chief, i.e. three 'forrach'-measures, and the cast of a ~~rod~~. Or over two, i.e. over two lands. Going across a road, i.e. half the fine for breach in going over one wall of the road, i.e. with half a fence, i.e. with a fence outside. Going across a river, i.e. what they have crossed in this case founds a claim of fine equal to that of half fence.³ Which they do not swim, i.e. if they have to swim it, it is (amounts to) fine for 'airlim'-trespass. A breach over the land of a fugitive, i.e. over the land of the person who has gone away from his land, i.e. the deserter. Over the land, i.e. over 'fich,' i.e. land.

Now, there are three kinds of breach, viz., a breach across a road, and a breach across a river, and a breach across a neighbourhood.⁴ If it be a breach across a deep river without guiding, there is full fine for it, for it is 'grazing beyond what is lawful' in that case. If it be a breach over a gap or across a road, the one-fourth of it (the fine) falls to the ground, and the rest is paid, for half is due for the neglects, the other for the claimants; the half for the neglect is divided between them in two. If it be a breach over a neighbourhood of co-tenants where there are two residents and one non-resident, it is the same thing: they divide the neglect between them, of the good fence. No fence is charged upon the non-resident. It is 'ruiriu'-trespass afterwards; and it is a trespass that does fence to the grass into which they go, or a half fence, for the river or the road is equal to half fence."

Dr. O'Donovan observes here.—"This gloss is also defective, and should run thus:—Crossing over a road which has only a half fence, to commit trespass, or over a shallow stream, which the animals can cross without swimming, is equal to a breach over a half fence; but if the river be so deep as not to be crossed without swimming, or the wall of the road a perfect fence, they are equal to full fence, and the breach over them is accordingly estimated."

⁴ A neighbourhood.—That is, a settlement of co-occupants, or co-tenants.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

(Stokes in note to O'Don 341 suggests condali "divides" ?)

at do so (?)

they (?) have done

see gloss 126.9

f. 17

not involve reciprocal duties as regards goods, for reciprocity of goods is not enforced by law in the case of neighbours exceeding eight persons, viz., the four co-tenants immediately round about, and the four non-co-tenants, who are nearest to them.¹

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

And in a place where there are two solvent landholders, and a deserter,² what is to be done with the deserter? Let him be distrained until he fences (makes his fence), and if he has not a habitable residence, let the next of kin to him of his family be distrained until they make the fence for him, or give up the right of the grass to the end of a year. If it be that the family give up the right of the grass, then let each of the two 'coarbs' of the families occupying the adjoining lands erect a perfect fence, and they shall bring equal stock upon it (the land), and afterwards each shall give the additional pledge to the other.

And if the deserter come ^{from} outside having with him his cattle-farmer's requisites, he goes to his family, and they sustain him to the end of a year, and the part of his farmer's requisites which ~~arrive~~ in the land are all his property.

Asht. p. 84

he gets ^{finds} ~~for~~ before him

And in a place, i.e., 'os,' for 'acus' (and), and 'airm,' means place or locality, i.e., where there are two solvent landholders in the land of the person who goes away from his land, or the deserter, i.e., there are two kinds of deserters, a deserter who deserts his land, and a deserter who ~~grades~~ ^{grades} responsibilities. What is done, i.e., what is done to the deserter. A deserter, i.e., 'as' (out of), 'a firt' (his land). Let him be distrained, i.e., let a distress be made upon him, and let his goods be distrained, until he makes a proper fence, i.e., until the fence is in the way that is legitimate for it to be. And if he has not, &c., i.e., if he has not a habitable residence. Let his next of kin be distrained, i.e., let seizure be made upon the next of kin to him of the family. Until they make the fence, i.e., until they make the legitimate fence. Or give up the right of the grass as the rent, i.e., the family. To the end of a year, i.e., for the term of the hire. If it be that the family give up the right of the grass, i.e., if it be the forfeiture of the land that the family consent to* for the hire to consume the grass. Let each of the two 'coarbs' erect a perfect fence, i.e., they fence, i.e., both of the two landholders who are adjoining it, shall make a fence, so that there shall be a perfect fence there. Shall bring equal stock, i.e., of cattle, i.e., they shall bring a common stock there into the deserter's land in equal proportions. Shall give the additional pledge, i.e., each of them gives the relieving

* Ir. Give.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

each oib gell toirneach da ceile, ar iaram, .i. gell da rerepall. Com-aiream, .i. do mbeil. Dia raire, .i. a tiri na eirera.

Oir ma do ti eirera, .i. or ar acur, ocur ma dia ti in teirer amuch dia nechda cor an i r trelar do leir do eirer. Teir do-5 cham a fine, .i. teir ar tic, tic do cum a fine boeim. Forlonga do ceano mbliatna, .i. inpoilngio a fine he ar rochraic co cenn mbliatna, .i. ar in ne bir in pearann ar rochraic, .i. tpeor ocur oure.

A66⁴

O'D. 2183. Hi dia treabair, .i. [do dentair] do arbeair ocur do aileair. For 10 ruis, .i. arreir ara em in pearann. Ir oilear do uile, .i. don eire; ocur ar ne na rochraic tainic amuch he ann rin, ocur in rochraic = -kairbeda?

O'D. 2183 don fine, ocur na dentair, [na harbunna ocur na tige], don eire.

only A

x D 32 (C 30-1)

.i. In tam biao da treabair in eotreabair, garbeair eire, dia nairreair; muna arreair, garbeair ar fine comhneair fhuu tiri = co n-imch a mbriat, ocur co garbeair oileir per glerthe co ceann mbliatna, 15 ocur oileir cae let eatarba fhu himme, ocur aaragair in da comitac iaram amuch brio leo raderin, ocur tairgealla cae fhu raire.
Arinaetara, ro gealla dofer, ro raire; .i. geall fhu himme, nama
(.i. a tiri buic) fhu clair, rerepall a fhu, ocur a leagair aen reair; roc fhu corair, rerepall a fhu, ocur a leagair fa tiri; bair 20 fhu ouirime, .i. a leagair fa ti, go na fhu rerepall; rigea fhu felmas, no fhu in nairle, rerepall a fhu, ocur a leagair fa ti, no ritaire no boeagair. Harreir na rinaetara ro iaram. *

nascailter D

O'D. 2183. [In teirer ir he a aine: duime rano bir itiri in da comorba tre na trebair; gabair athgabair de ma do tair reoir aice; 15 rogealla ocur bleit o' dul ina ceano, ocur ni teir lobu. Muna ruir reoir aigi, atgabair do gabair dia inbleogan, ocur rogeir ocur bleit do dul ina cenn, ocur ni cheir lobu.

o/

Ma tainic in teirer amuch iari rin, tabruir a fine pearann do ne re na rochraic, ocur beirir fine in rochraic, ocur ni dia 20 trebair roir ar a em do brieit don eirer. Ma do ta pearann acon fine, ocur ni tabruir doirun, a rochraic do brieit don luic amach, ocur in na ro oileir oileit do na dentair, cennair

¹ To each other.—The text is very defective here.

² Fused.—'Leagadh' means, literally, 'melting.' The instruments mentioned here were to be prepared by fusing the metal, the harder the material to be operated on, the more numerous were the fusions of the metal forming the implement, and consequently the more valuable the instrument.

³ Expense of tending.—The wages paid to shepherds, or caretakers of the cattle.

it gella dofedat side D

sith aili D

= * co nimchuat
co nimchuat D

20, 359

pledge to the other out of it afterwards, i.e., a pledge of the value of two 'screpalls.' Equal stock, i.e. of cattle. To the other, i.e. out of the land of the deserter.

And if the deserter come, i.e., 'os,' for 'acus,' (and), and if the deserter come outside the land with the number of cattle which renders him solvent. He goes to his family, i.e., 'he goes,' for 'he comes,' i.e. he comes to his own family. And they sustain him to the end of a year, i.e., his family supports him for pay to the end of a year, i.e., the term during which the land is let for hire, i.e., with grass and water. The part of his farmer's requisites, i.e., of erections, of stakes and of poles. Which arrive, i.e., which ~~are required~~ of him in the land. Are all his property, i.e., of the deserter; and after the term of the hire he came outside in this case, and the hire is given to the family, and the erections, the corn crops and the houses, go to the deserter.

is found
before him

Trans.
20, 359

When there are two men fulfilling their duty, and one who does not fulfil his duty, let them distrain him, if ~~he has~~ property; if ~~he has~~ not property, let them distrain his family until they fence their brother's land, or^a until they give the right of the grazing to the end of a year, and the right of every half separation respecting a fence, and the two co-tenants afterwards proceed as if it (the land) was their own, and they deliver pledges to each other.¹ The 'smacht'-fines now, which they pay, are the pledges which precede, i.e., they are these, i.e., a pledge for fence stakes, a spade, i.e., in soft land, for a trench, a 'screpall' is its worth, and it is to be fused² (melted) once; a 'soc' for a stone wall, a 'screpall' is its worth, and it is to be melted thrice; a bill-hook for a hard fence, i.e., it is to be fused (melted) twice, so that it is worth a 'screpall'; a wood axe for a 'felma'-fence, or for a palisade, its worth is a 'screpall,' and it is to be melted twice, or to undergo long-heating, or live-melting is to take place. These 'smacht' fines are made binding afterwards.

(arise)

they can get him

^aIr. And.

to fence each side of the boundary and it (adrig)

The deserter is thus known: a weak person, who is situated between the two 'coarbs' that do their duty; he is distrained if he has 'seds,' the grazing and the expense of tending³ shall be added, but forfeiture shall not be allowed. If he has not 'seds,' ^aIr. Goes not. distraint shall be made on his next of kin, and expense of grazing and tending shall be added, but forfeiture shall not.

If the deserter has come from outside into the territory after this, his family shall give him land during the term of the hire, and the family shall obtain the hire, and the part of his farm-buildings which he may have found on his coming back shall be obtained by the deserter. If the family have land, and they give not of it to him, the hire is to be obtained by those who are outside, and the portion of the erections which the law has not declared

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

rine dorum. Muna fúil fearaño itir ac ríne, compoinnuit itir re ocuf raotár don foéruic, ocuf centocadurum féin dó iní na ro díli díligeó do na dentairb. Má tá fearaño ac ríne, ocuf ní gabunurum, ír compoinn itir ré ocuf raotár don foéruic,
5 ocuf ní beirurum ní do na dentairb.

X. beirur

Már for óin do raatá in fearaño, ocuf ní cinneó ré airgíte fair, cío raatá beir fair, cío re deébirur cío re hindeébirur deáir, ír a denta do ragbair do. x.63 763

Mará fuasraó atá fair, cío re deébirur cío re hindeébirur 10 do gneit, ír a denta do breit do leir.

Má ro cinneó ré fair, ocuf táiníc in re, ír a denta do ragbair do. Mar hé féin do coiró arf re deébirur, ír compoinn itir re ocuf raotár. Mar a hindeébirur do coiró arf, ragbair na dénta. 3 eir

Mará fuasraó atá fair, cío ír in ló deidenach fuasurur 15 dó i níndeébirur, beir do leir a dénta.

Már re deébirur ro fuasraó dó, ír compoinn itir ré ocuf traotur. Mar do tuar ro dailich fair do raatá, ocuf maó ro cinneó ré fair, ír a beir for in ré.

Muna ro cinneó ré fair itir, ír airónier comaigtech fair.
20 Mar ré caitem a reoir ocuf ría trebuirre do raatá, ír trían cach míl for a mbi in fúit. forbhairt 2 ws.

cf. III 128 14.

Már re caitem réoir nama tuatá hé, ír per atais réit mbu
i tír a déir, for ragbair in réitmaó boin dia bliatúin, ocuf loí bó do éairuib ná taro for air do beir a roeiréit aigi.

cf. II 120. 18

25 Maó ro aétais cin ar, ocuf ro hairéó, ír díli in air co na fúil, ocuf cuic reoir. Munar aétaiséó cin ar, ír rían, act in ní dia trebuirr forruic ar a éin in a tír, ír díler dó.

Af. 66 b1

Quíne ro rir ná éirir rubu na rubu a fearaño do denam, no cío éirir noá aíl léir a denum; coníó eó do níther rir

¹ Increase.—That is, which increases in size, condition, &c.

forfeit, the family shall purchase for him (the deserter.) If the family have no land at all, they equally divide the hire between the time and the labour, and he himself purchases the portion of the erections which the law has not confiscated. If the family have land, and he (the deserter) would not accept of it, the hire shall be divided equally between time and labour, and he shall obtain no portion of the erections.

If the land has been let for hire,^a and no time has been specified, ^a Ir. Loan. whatever length of time he shall be upon it, whether with necessity or without necessity he goes, he shall leave behind his erections.

If he is noticed to quit, whether it is done with necessity or without necessity, he may carry away his erections with him.

If a term has been specified for him, and the term has expired, ^b Ir. Come. he shall leave his erections behind. If it is he himself that went away of his own accord with necessity, it (the value of the buildings) is to be divided between time and labour. If he has gone away without necessity, he shall leave behind the erections.

If he is noticed to quit, though he should be noticed on the last day of his term without necessity, he may carry off his erections.

If he has been noticed to quit by necessity, there is to be a division between time and labour. If it (the land) was given him for manure or dung, and if a time has been specified for it, it shall be according to the time.

If a time has not been specified at all, it shall be settled by the award of the neighbours. If it is to consume its grass only, and for forming erections it was given, it is one-third of every animal on which there is increase¹.

If it is to consume its grass only it (the land) was given, he is as "a man who has placed seven cows on the land of his neighbour," the seventh cow shall be left as payment at the end of the year, and he has in reserve the value of another cow in sheep, which he ~~does not bring into the account.~~ ^c has not mentioned.

^c Ir. Bring forward.

If he has stipulated not to plough, and it has been ploughed, the tillage and the seed are forfeited, and five 'seds'. If no condition has been made as to not ploughing, he is free, but the portion of his farm buildings, which he found on the land before him, becomes his by right.

A deserter. This is a person who is not able to perform service of attack and defence for his land, or though he may be able is not willing to perform them; what is done to him is to give him notice

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

7 ^{εἶρε}
ἀπαὸ οὐρ ^{εἶρε} τῷρεαὸ το ἑαβαίρτ αιρ, οὐρ αθηγαβὰίλ το ἑαβὰίλ το 10 ιαρ ριν ; οὐρ νοῦα νύιλ εἰννε αἰνιῖτῃ ρορ ἰν αθηγαβὰίλ ριν, ἀτ αθηγαβὰίλ το ραοίλτερ α τιαῖταῖν ρε οἰγεθ, οὐρ τέτ ρογείλτ οὐρ βλεῖτ ἰνα cenn, οὐρ νί τεῖτ λοβυ.

5 Μανα βυιλ εἰροὸ αἰγι ρέιν, ταβραὸ ἀπαὸ ρορ ἰνβλεογαν ἱρ νεαρά το, οὐρ αθηγαβὰίλ το ἑαβὰίλ το ιαρ ριν ; οὐρ νοῦα ἡθερῖννα ρυβυ οὐρ ρυβυ ἰν ρεραῖνν ; νοῦα οἰλρτε ἰν ρεραῖνν τον τι το τοναὸ ρυβυ οὐρ ρυβυ.

Μαρεθ το ρίντε ἰν ρίνε ἰν ρεραῖνν το ταβαίρτ αρ ροῦρνε,
10 μαὸ τάνις ἰν τεῖρετ ἀμύις ιαρ ρέ να ροῦρακα, οἰλρ να ρочрeca τον ρίνε, οὐρ νί οἰα ἑρεβυρε ρορνεῖ ἰνα ἑρ, ἱρ οἰλρ οῖραν .ι. το εἰρρετ.

Μαρ ρε ρέ να ροῦραῖε τάνις ἀμύις he, τονατ ἰν ρίνε α ἰμρυνλγ зу τί ἰν ρέ ; οὐρ μα το βερ ἰν ρίνε ρεραῖνν το, οὐρ 15 γεῖβροῖρμ ἰν ρεραῖνν, οἰλρ να ροῦρνε τον ρίνε, οὐρ οἰλρ να νοέντα τον εἰρρετ.

Μυνα ἑαβρατ ἰν ρίνε ἰν ρεραῖνν το, οὐρ ατα ρεραῖνν acu, οὐρ γεῖβρῖνν ρεραῖνν, αἰρεc να ροῦρακα ὅν ρίνε αμαῖ, οὐρ ρφαρλνιῖτ ἰν ρίνε α δέντα οὐρ α ρεοττα δορμ.

20 Μαὸ ταῖρετ ἰν ρίνε ρεραῖνν το, οὐρ νί ἡαίλ δορμ α ἑαβὰίλ, caḥ νί ρο οἰλρῖς ρε τον ροῦρνε βῖο αca ρίνε ; caḥ νί να ρο οἰλρῖς τον ροῦρνε ἱcarom ρῖρ ἰν ρεαρ αμαῖ, οὐρ βερῖο ἰν ρεαρ αμαῖ να δέντα, no ρφαρλνιῖτ ^{Fourty} δορμ ιατ. No τονο, ἑαῖνα, caḥ νί ρο οἰλρῖς ρε τον ροῦρνε βῖο αca ρίνε, caḥ νί να ρο οἰλρῖς ⁹⁵ ρέ τον 25 ροῦρνε, ἱρ α ναῖρῖc on ρίνε amach, οὐρ βερῖο ἰν ρεαρ amach να δέντα, no ρφαρλνιῖτ ιατ.

Μυνα ρυιλ ρεραῖνν ας ρίνε, οὐρ ρο γεβροῖρμ ρεραῖνν, caḥ νί ρο οἰλρῖς ρέ τον ροῦρνε βῖο oca ρίνε ; caḥ νί να ρο οἰλρῖς ρῖο τον ροῦρνε α αἰρεc o ρίνε amach ; caḥ νί να ρο οἰλρῖς ρέ 30 το να δένταῖβ, βερῖο ἰν ρεαρ αμαῖ, no ρφαρλνιῖτ ⁹⁵ ιατ.

Ρεραῖνν οἰνε ⁱⁱ εἰλε τυκυρταρ αρ ροῦρνε ανηῖν. Μαρ e α ρεραῖνν βοδῖν τυκυρταρ οἰνε αρ ροῦρνε, ἀτ μαὸ ρο εἰνδυρταρ

¹ Who is outside.—This seems to mean "the man who holds the land."

by warning and fasting, and make a distress upon him afterwards, and there is no certain restriction upon this distress, but that it shall be such a distress as that it may be thought sufficient to induce him to come (submit) to law, and expense of feeding and tending shall be added^a to it, but forfeiture is not added.^a

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

^a Ir. Goss.

If he has not cattle himself, let him give notice to his nearest of kin, and let distress be taken from him afterwards; and he has not performed the service of attack and defence due of the land; the land is not more the rightful property of him who should perform service of attack and defence.

If what the family has done is to let out the land on hire, and if the deserter has come outside after the term of the hire, the hire is due to the family, and that part of his farm requisites which he found on his land belongs to him, i.e., to the deserter.

If it is before the term of the hire he has come outside, the family shall support him until the expiration of the time;^b and if the family have given him land, and he accepts of the land, the family are entitled to the hire, and the deserter is entitled to the erections.

Ir. Until the time comes.

If the family do not give him the land, when they have land, and he gets land elsewhere, the family shall return the hire out, and the family shall redeem his erections and his 'seds' for him.

If the family have offered him land and he is unwilling to accept of it, every part of the hire which time has rendered forfeit shall belong to his family; every part of the hire which is not forfeit shall be paid to the man who is outside, and the man who is outside¹ shall bring away the erections, or they shall be redeemed for him. Or indeed, according to others, every part of the hire which time has rendered forfeit is due to his family, whatever part of the hire has not been forfeited by time shall be returned by the family out, and the man who is outside takes the erections,² or they (the others) redeem them.

If the family have not land, and he (the deserter) obtains land elsewhere, whatever part of the hire time has forfeited belongs to the family; whatever part of the hire time has not forfeited is to be returned by the family out; whatever part of the erections time has not forfeited the man outside takes; or he (the deserter) redeems them.

It is the land of another man that he has, in this case, let out on hire. If it be his own land a man has let out on hire, but so

^a Erections.—'Θέντα' means houses, folds, stalls, sheds.

Af. 66²

* 20107 63 A*

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

ré airtthe eatu^uru, cemu^o irin tana cé^tlá^l deir^oena^o don ré po ro^og^ura he a^on^ode^ob^uru^u don fearann, in fo^och^uraic ocu^u na denta do bre^ot dó léir, ocu^u ci^uara^u irin tana cé^tlá deir^oma^och don ré do dea^ocharu^u a n^ode^ob^uru^u de, in fo^och^uraic ocu^u na 5 denta dó. Ma éam^oic de^ob^uru^u do nea^octar de, i^u comp^ooinn itir ré ocu^u tra^oothu^u don fo^och^uraic ocu^u do na dentaib.

Ar fo^och^uraic tucu^urtar duine a fearann ann^uir, ocu^u mar do denam denta air tucu^urtar he, act má ro cin^unu^urtar ré airt^uthe air eatu^uru, ci^o ré de^ob^uru^u ci^o ré hin^ode^ob^uru^u fo^ocar^uta éir^uum 10 don fearann, i^u na denta uile do bre^ot dó^urum léir.

Ma^o ro cin^unu^urtar ré airt^uthe é^uru^u, act ma^o ta ar in fearann he r^uirín ré r^uin, i^u uil^uri na n^odenta d^uper bun^uo^u in fearann i fo^orbu na ré. Re dé^unum denta air tucu^urtar duine a fearann an^o r^uin. Mar ré denam tuair no aile^uo^u ar, act 15 ma^o ro ein^udeil^ug^urtar ré airt^uthe air, in fearann do be^ot ac on r^uir amu^uis r^uir in ré r^uin. Munar cin^une^urtar ré airt^uthe eatu^uru itir, in fearann do be^ot acon r^uir amu^uis, no su tuc^uo^u ré a tuair no a aile^uis ar^u.

Af. 66². B* D 13^u (C 31)
* C 307 (D 405)eC u^u D dono ACselba D u^u A selba Au^u A A

Ruiri^uo dono, r^uith tar teora realba, no ceir^uteora realba. O^uoathais an^o r^uin, a^uu^uir ó^u in pollug^uo.

Ruiri^uo [raite] dono, r^uith tar [r^uir] hair[c]eann teora realba; i^u ruiri^uo, ocu^u i^u pollug^uo, muna imge deir^ub^ure.

= Mani a-imbi deir^ub^ure

Ruiri^uo dono .i. i^ure cu^ut in dono ann, uair tar^uir^uce a du^ubramar 15 romano. Tar teora realba .i. tar teora fearanna .i. boair^uech.
No ceir^uteora realba .i. tar ceir^uri fearannaib. O^uoathais .i.
cin ó^u, cin comlan in ni hir^uin, .i. a^uir^uime. Ar^uur ó^u in pollug^uo,
.i. i^u comlan in pollug^uo r^uin do na buachaillib, i^u ime ata eir^uic comlan in^o. Ruiri^uo raite .i. r^uith ro pata do denam uoib dono, no reim-30 n^uis^uo uoib dono, co ro pata. R^uith tar r^uir hair[c]eann .i. r^uith tar r^uir cenn teora fearann. I^u ruiri^uo .i. i^u eir^uic ruir^uo^u in^o. I^u pollug^uo .i. i^u r^uail ó^u do na buachaillib. Muna imge deir^ub^ubire .i. mana uoib deir^ub^uir^u aca n^uim^uo^uir^u a mbuachaillib.

om. B

as he has specified a certain time between them, even though it should be on the second last day of the term he has been noticed of necessity to quit the land, he shall bring the rent and the erections with him, and though it should be on the second last day of the term that he was warned off ^a the land without necessity, the rent and the erections are his. If necessity has happened to either of them, the rent and erections are equally divided between time and labour.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-ANCY. without

^a Ir. Off the land.
^b Ir. Went off.

It was for hire a man let out his land in this case, and if he let it to erect buildings upon it, but in such a manner as that he has specified a certain time between them concerning it, whether it was of necessity or without necessity he (the tenant) has been warned off the land, he may take all the erections away with him.

If he has specified a certain time between them, but so as he has been on the land during that time, the erections are the property of the original owner of the land at the expiration of that time. It was to make buildings upon it a man has let his land in this instance. If it was for the purpose of making manure or dung upon it, but so as a certain time has been stipulated concerning it, the land shall belong to the "man without" during that time. If he has specified no particular time between them at all, the land shall belong to the "man without" until the time of his manure or of his dung has been taken out of it.

Running over now, means running over three holdings, or four holdings. There is full fine for this, for the neglect is complete. But a ~~very long running~~ names running over the three head-lands of three holdings; it is running over, and it is neglect, unless necessity excuses it.

Running over now, i.e. the force of the 'now' here is because it was of a 'tairsce'-trespass we spoke before. Three holdings, i.e., over the three lands (farms or holdings), i.e., of a 'bo-aire'-chief. Or four holdings, i.e., over four lands (holdings). Full fine, i.e., it is full crime, complete trespass, i.e., of 'airlim'-trespass. For the neglect is complete, i.e., this is complete neglect on the part of the shepherds, and it is therefore that complete 'eric'-fine lies for it. A very long running, i.e., a very long running is made by them, or a running by them to a great length. Running over the three head-lands, i.e., running over the very extremities of three lands. It is running over, i.e., it is 'eric'-fine for running over, that is paid for it. It is neglect, i.e., it is perfect neglect on the part of the shepherds. Unless necessity, &c., i.e., unless there was necessity which ~~well~~ screens the shepherds.

quickly

There are indeed three kinds of running over; running over three possessions, and ~~long~~ running over, and running over a strand.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Question—How are the strand running over and the road running over estimated?—Answer: When there are eighteen spear casts¹ of a youth on it. That is road running over and strand running over, for no one shall give additional pledge to the other for this, except over a lawful fence, or a deep river, or an inlet of the sea, or a cliff.

If the cattle² have gone over one headland, or over two headlands, 'eric'-fine for breach shall be paid for them therein; if over three headlands or over four headlands, there shall be 'eric'-fine for running over due from them for it; and they eat something in their 'feis'-trespass and in their 'airlim'-trespass, and they eat nothing in their running over or in their 'tairsee'-trespass. And if they have passed over the land of one of grade (a dignitary), or over two lands, the fine of 'tairsee'-trespass is charged upon them for it. There is the fine for winter 'feis'-trespass for a running over on a night in winter; and the fine of an 'airlim'-trespass by day for a running over by day.

(perhaps with the road & headland)

Question—What is the headland?—Three 'forrach'-measures,² and the shot of a rod cast by a youth, i.e., the spear-youth, the extent of that of the strand is equal to half the lawful fence to a road. They reckon the ditch on the one side and the other, so that it makes the full fence, and thus a lawful fence is sustained between them.

CCFP. 17 of C24) where they are distinguished each fences

Question—How many 'smacht'-fines are there in a co-occupancy?—Two; 'smacht'-fines of fence, and of cattle, besides the trespasses.

How many trespasses are there in a co-tenancy?—Three. Trespass of palisades, trespass of cattle, and trespass of men.

Question.—What is a headland, i.e. I ask how is the headland known? The shot of a rod cast by a youth, i.e., in addition to it. That is the spear-youth, i.e., it is the 'feascach'-youth, i.e., the boy who

² 'Forrach'-measures.—The 'forrach' was a measure of land containing 552 yards. (ll. 3, 18, p. 146.)

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

ῥαίξε, .i. ἵρε in ῥέρεαχ .i. mac dhubraicep in mbunḡraige. Ἄ com fáo
.i. a coimeḡ no a cūpuma in ní rin a tracht mara, cūo perann aili ar a mbi tectugaḡ dechraḡ na hinḡilli, biaro eipic ruíḡḡḡa inḡ. Leath in inḡruic imme, .i. ῥmaet leḡ ime inḡraice a noul tar leḡ clao in roit, 5 ἵr lan ime ῥorḡ in ḡara clao .i. ῥe ḡuirn ἵrin clao ocup ῥe ḡuirn ἵrin éuaille, .i. leḡ ime ῥor ceḡtar in ḡa clao. Imḡean, .i. aipimeḡ caḡ ḡon leḡ ῥeo ocup ḡon leḡ aili iman roḡ, co roib lan ime anḡ.
Imḡoingeaḡ ime inḡruic, .i. imḡoingieḡ ime ḡligḡech eḡarpu amlaḡo ῥin. Ἀḡarpu ῥamlaḡo .i. itir in ḡa clao.

10 Caip—cia meḡo ῥmachta? .i. ciameit ῥmaḡḡa uil ἵr in comaithcep, ἵr in naithaḡur cumarḡe, .i. cia lin ῥruḡ a ḡabar ῥmaḡḡa i comaithcep.
Smacht ime .i. in ní ῥmaḡḡaigḡeḡ ἵ noul tar an ime. Ceatḡra .i.
ceḡhra conboing ῥor ḡaingen, no ḡono ar a ḡumain .i. in ḡa ῥneḡall .i.
in ῥiaḡ ḡunacaiḡhe, no na meich. ḡenmoḡa caithḡe .i. cenmoḡa in 15 ῥmaḡḡe uil o na ḡaḡnib ḡo niaḡ ῥur in ῥerann .i. bḡipeḡ in aile.

Ca meḡo caithḡe .i. cia meit cinto ḡo niaḡ na ḡaine ῥur in ῥerann ἵr in aithcep cumarḡe. Caithḡe aile .i. ḡarḡaro a ḡri éuaille. Caithḡe ceatḡra .i. a ceḡhra ḡo cūp inḡ .i. na meich. ḡuine caithḡe .i.
na cinto aili ḡo niaḡ na ḡaine ῥur in ῥerann ina eḡmaḡ ῥin.

D(C31)

20 .1. Cerp—Caḡiao caithḡe ῥealḡa? .i. caithḡi alaile cetamur, ocup a caithḡi ῥadeḡin, aipḡin imbi ῥait caich a ḡipe ar loing-ῥeaḡaib ocup ar conaib aillḡaib, ocup caithḡi a roite.

*D 134 (C32)

*Cerp—Caḡiao caithḡe aile? Ἄ naḡḡaḡ it feilb cene ḡola aile a nup, ocup ḡathur a ḡime ῥorḡ iarpḡuḡiu, ocup ḡilḡi neic ḡo 25 oḡtar ῥorḡ ḡaipḡin; ocup inḡilḡi neich ḡo oḡtar uait ῥurpu.
Cin ḡo éuaili ῥorḡ, ocup ḡo liaḡ, ocup ḡo élaḡi, ocup ḡo cḡanḡe; oḡar cia ḡuibeḡ, ocup cia ḡo oḡar, cia ḡobḡaro.

Caite ceime ḡra; a leḡ caite ῥorḡ caḡ aḡḡ bliaroḡa, no oḡcaḡaig caḡ ara bliaroḡain. * ḡo baḡet caite lia nḡibaḡ ῥadeḡin.

D134 (C33)

30 *Cerp, ḡra,—cūo ῥruḡa naḡḡaithḡeḡ caite aile iap na nḡibuḡo?
Ἄḡaḡieḡ ῥu cumme ῥeancḡo inḡraice ḡḡ ḡḡ aipḡaithḡeḡ in ime, co clanoḡo leo in ime ῥa ḡri cen ῥena, * do laḡaḡaithḡeḡ

= fenamain q IV 112.15

.1. brúid aile/
021245

11C844

= cia totat
Zcl 22, 32

eacha D

lanime

casts the rod. The extent i.e. the same extent or the same proportion of the sea shore, if the cattle should pass over it into another land lawfully occupied, there shall be 'eric'-fine for the running over due for it. Half for the lawful fence, i.e. the 'smacht'-fine for half the lawful fence is due for going over the one mound¹ of the road, it is full fine for going over the second wall, i.e. six hands is the height of the mound and six hands is that of the palisade, i.e. half fence is reckoned for either of the two mounds. They ^{each fence} reckon, i.e. for they reckon each ^{there is} on this side and the other of the road, so that they ~~make~~ ^{amount to} a full fence ~~there~~. A lawful fence is sustained, i.e. a lawful fence is thus sustained between them. Between them thus, i.e. between the two mounds.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

Question—how many 'smacht'-fines? i.e. how many 'smacht'-fines are there in the co-tenancy, in the common tenancy, i.e. how many things are there for which 'smacht'-fines are paid in the co-tenancy. 'Smacht'-fine of fence i.e. the thing which is commanded to be paid for going over the fence. Of cattle, i.e. cattle which break through fastnesses, or indeed on being driven break fences, i.e. the two 'screpalls,' i.e. the fine for man-trespass, or the 'sacks.' Besides the trespasses, i.e. besides the 'smacht'-fine which is paid by men for the trespasses which they commit in the land, i.e. by breaking the palisades.

How many trespasses, i.e. how many damages do men do to the land in the common tenancy? Trespasses of palisades, breaking of stakes, i.e. a 'dartaidd'-heifer for three stakes. Cattle trespasses, i.e. to put cattle into it, i.e. 'the sacks'. Men trespasses, i.e. the other faults which men committed regarding the land besides these.

Question—What are the damages of possessions? i.e. the trespasses of another person, in the first instance, and his own trespasses, when every territory requires to defend itself against pirates and wild dogs, and the trespasses on his roads.

Question—What are the trespasses of stakes? ^{holding} To ^{retain} them in thy possession ^{without sticking them in the ground}, after which thou art responsible for the ^{thing} fence, and the right to the thing damaged is upon thee besides that; and the making good by thee of the thing which has been damaged is upon them. The default of thy stake is upon thee, and of thy flag-stone, and of thy trench, and of thy stake-fence; and whatever damages shall result therefrom by goring, or damaging, or wounding.

As to the trespasses in respect of a passage; half the fine upon thee every year, or full fine every second year. The trespasses are merged by the 'dibadh' of themselves.

Question—By whom are the trespasses of stakes established after the 'dibadh' of themselves? They are restored from the memory of a worthy antiquary ^{is} by whom the fence was witnessed, so that the fence was planted by them thrice without denial.

¹ Mound.—'Cladh' means a wall of earth, a dyke, but it is commonly translated 'a ditch,' as in the term, a 'furze ditch.'

45 una content
land

leg. seni solo (Pl. I. 12)

they may have cut, killed (?) or drowned.

is overlapped (I 36. 26)
objection [Plummer I 29]

x D 134-14² (C33)JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.luga 7 seicidhe
nindraire frada nimhmad

x Capr—Cio clannar aile? Noil ocur iual.

Capr—caíde iual? Aile in ime pa tri cen pena. Or mas penaigter cipe noail no clanna? ^x Luga reanca innrice fiaa a nimcu. Or muna bed reancaide, da bo-airne innrice do cup 5 crann, ocur ala hí dia luga, ocur aine toingear itir oir, ipreó clannar aile írin.

Or mas in cpié uile no laó inna reét naáa oirigter?
11n. Ar atait in da bla dec fupri cunioirigter cpié.

Capr bla; aíl bla, fíno bla, noer bla,
10 bla muchaige, ocur gno bla, bla impogla, ocur linn bla, rodaire bla, bla neapbaise, bla peime [clao bla].

Capr bla; cpié annrin nao nincoirceat^{noch} fiaa comarba, ocur na cunioirigter reancaid.

Cerc—co fuidaisgter? Ac himtomar i nde, (1) reilb ime biaa. om. D 15 Mas no bed da comarba, do rannar riam.

Aíl bla; cpié incoirce aíl adraa, no aíl annreuite, no crann, no lig, no aíl leaáta. Dia mbed reét comarba oib and in tuét rin, caé ae ír arailiu, íri cpié ann rin na cunioirigter.
uas D

Fíobla; cpié fon incoirce bile reata, no fíó comarba hé, (re 20 reáa comarba aé) caé ae uar araili, no aíl bog, no ren poil cudmaide do leiceat. Conioirigter dono cpiéa fuprin, a mbed reancaid co níroirceat poir in ír deirb. = mani conindoisceat D mani bet D

Noer bla; .1. cpié ina coirce ^{guairé D} guire noirce no rearpa i fíó no a muis. Aoruge cpié cadepin, munur gluaireat reancaid, ar 25 ro comarba cpié in rin.

Bla muchai; .1. cpié fon incoirce cet bona crann no cuaille i talam no dibill muilino, no reantpaiseat po tumo. 1r daí am cpié, muna bé poir con a noirce. ^{conindoisce D} ^{dictam D}
? 4 IV 144. 16 doe ??

Bla .1. gno bla cpié incoirce tumaé no bun nomna, no tumaé 30 crann; adpuidigter cpiéa fuprin.

¹ Shall thrust in the stick. The Irish may also mean, "Shall cast a lot."

² Disturbed. The text must be defective here.

Question—What settles the stake? An oath and prescription.

Question—What is prescription? The sticking of the fence thrice without denial. And if it be denied, by what oath shall it be settled? An oath of a worthy antiquary to be a witness of the fencing. And if there should not be an antiquary, two worthy 'bo-aire'-chiefs shall thrust in the stick,¹ and the one shall take his oath, and the ^{an}'airè'-chief who swears between two ~~is~~ ^{he who shall thrust in the stake} then.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

*This is what plants (?)
a stake*

And if the whole territory be divided into seven parts so that they (the antiquaries) cannot direct them? Answer—For there are the twelve marks by which a boundary is defined.

What are these? Answer—A flat mark, a stone mark, a tree mark, a deer mark, a stock mark, and a mound mark, a division mark, and a water mark, an eye mark, a defect mark, a way mark, a mound mark.

A flat mark: this is a land which is not distinguished by any land mark, and which antiquaries cannot define.

Question—How is it settled? It is measured into two, into the possession of those around it. If there be two 'coarbs,' they divide it first.

who divides it previously

A stone mark: i.e. a district which is marked by a stone of worship, or, an immovable stone, or a tree, or a flag, or a ~~monu-~~^{mental} stone. If there be seven land marks of them therein at that time, one over the other, it is a boundary that cannot be disturbed.²

grave -

a fallen oak
A wood mark: this is a district which is marked by an ancient tree or a tree mark, the one with the other, or an 'all bog' tree, or ~~ancient~~ oak³ which was allowed to ~~fall~~. The boundaries are defined by these, unless there be antiquaries to instruct as to the certain thing.

remain.

*cf Red II 618
who allow it to something (more) definite*

A deer mark: that is a district marked by the hair of deer or of dry cows in a wood or in a plain. These determine meers, unless the antiquaries remove them, for these are ~~meers~~ of a territory.

A stock mark: i.e. this is a district marked by the first trunks of trees, or a stake in the earth on the ruin of a mill, or an old bridge under the water. ~~These are land marks which define,~~ unless there be some other thing to explain.

A mound mark: i.e. a district marked by a mound or trunk of an oak, or mound of a tree; meers are defined by these.

³ Ancient oak. See Welsh Laws, p. 373, for meer-timber.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Ροδαριε βλα .i. επις ικοιςσε κομαρτα πεαδα νο μιριζε, ερανω νο διας, νο κομαρτα ταλμαν. Ιρι επις το μιριζεαρ πορς, ουρ ατορμυζατοτερ επιςε ημυριν, μα πο περσαρ ιν τα αριζε δεριβα βιςε ιμαν ηαινω ιριν. αηε D

Ուստի արարեալ է, որպէս ինքեւ արարեալ տալման .i. քան, ոչ քեր, ոչ տալ ճշեան, ոչ լաշրա՛ք քան իմոս. Եւ զորոյնքար զիսկա քրտին ծոռո, արտա զրեւո թանարեւ:

10) δια impossible; ἐπεὶ το τεῖο ἰσπε glaire αἱμ po leanao in τα comarba in τα χιασ πορ, ceetan in τα leithe. Αφουγαδότερ ἐρεα πορ ριν.

ὅλα πέιμε; ἐπεὶ σὸν ἰκοίτορ ποτὶ μῖξ νο τιαιτε, νο ποτὶ impedna D ἰμπεαгна, νο βοταρ. Ἰ βλα ἐπεὶ ἀνν σιν.

5. Clasó bla; cnié ron incoirce tuae, na urclaoe, no rač, no reapet, no recib tuae; ar iri cnié ann rin na idan do tuilur, cnié incoirce clasó no cora.

Αποφασίζετε, ενόκα τρε φορη να χαίρετε; ουρ παννα αν αλι ουρ πολονζαο εατλζι αν αλι ιαυμ. ^{3ms na An so D} x i

20 Կա՛րէջ տիւր զիւր .1. բնձ օսւր բնձ ար մաճաւ տիւր օսւր Լօղճբաճաւ, օսւր օսւր բն շաւտ, իւր ըօղճած օսւր օղճաւ, օսւր ըօղճա. Երբայք

Carthage paise .i. une pour a aenur, ocur a plaise ocur a nup-p'caritad, ocur a coclaro ocur glanar a nreallach an amirir 75 eua ocur aenariz, ocur doiz ar am puiro do cac cobair araili. H surli caite do runn, surli romaine. *

^{αδ} Someine αἰε; α τοῖα το νεοῦ το παλα τέ ιτη, ουρ τῆρε αυ υῖα.✠

Caip—co tipleana? Ion; uan mlot; cuallu do tipleail 10 ar taili, uan boimino ana do, daritais ana tri cona nintais; unduguel D dait ma ceatari, colhae ar a re, bo ana hoit, cuic reoit ana do de; aet fo reoit zabra, ara [#]commeto, ma tri neite po-15 peirear, [#]ocur aithgin an aile do ine inoipic, ocur best fo raetur co ceann inbliatona. ^{*}(Dada) Abolisher catha fra lin nialas fadism = 140.29

¹ The eye. The eye fixes the boundary, if two points of it remain, i.e. by running a straight line between these points.

² Are wanting. The letter which Dr. O'Donovan read as 'p' in the word 'pnebar,' seems the usual form of long i which precedes 'p' when that letter is doubled.

³ Roads. For the different kinds of road among the ancient Irish, vide Cormac's Glossary, edited by Whittey Stokes, Esq.; also C. 806-7, and Book of Rights, pp. lvi., et seq., Dublin, 1847. For rules as to the penalties incurred by persons injuring roads, vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. iii., pp. 305, 307, 309.

A water mark: i.e. a district defined by the water of a river, or of a lake, or of a well. Boundaries are defined by these if they run in a straight direction.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

An eye mark: i.e. a district defined by a mark of wood or of plain, of tree or of stone, or by a mark of earth. This is the district estimated by the eye¹, and boundaries are defined by these, if the two certain heads which are to this division be known.

A defect mark: i.e. a district defined by want of land, i.e. a declivity, or a sedgy place, or stony vale, or track of an old road. Boundaries are defined by these, if antiquaries are wanting.²

A mark of division: that is a district through which the water of a streamlet flows where the two 'coarbs' follow it, ~~they being on~~ either side of it. Boundaries are settled by this.

who about * on it

A way mark: that is a district marked by the road of a king or a people, or a road of carriage, or a cow-road. These are district marks.

A mound mark: this is a district marked by a mound, or ditch, or rath, or foss, or any mound whatever; for this is the kind of district into which it is not proper to enter, namely, a district bounded by a ditch or stone wall.

Boundaries are settled by these ^{cases [a, b, c]} ~~kinds~~ of land marks; and they divide the stakes and sustain the fines for stakes afterwards.

The liabilities of land now, i.e. service of attack and defence against wolves and pirates, and attendance to the law of the territory, both as to the hosting and feeding, and service of defence.

The liabilities as regards roads,³ i.e. a fence is required for it alone, and it is necessary to cut them and cleanse them, and remove their weeds and mire in the time of war and of a fair, and because it is expected that each should assist the other. ~~He (the owner of the road) does not deserve damages from that, but he merits profits.~~

what entails

The profits of stakes are; the produce which comes of them in the land, and the 'dire'-fine for cutting them.

→ On someone see C880.

Question—How is this paid for? Answer: a wether lamb for removing a stake from ~~its place~~, a she lamb for two, a 'dartaigh'-heifer for three stakes with their appendages; a 'dairt'-heifer for four, a 'colpach'-heifer for six, a cow for eight, five 'seds' for twelve; but they are 'seds' of graduation of the same value, ~~if it be known that they belonged to a dignitary~~, and a restoration of the stakes to a perfect fence, and to be security for its safety to the end of a year.

twice as many of them if it be against dignitaries (meimhin) that the injury be committed

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.Somaine tiple; itipe fíró, ocur per, ocur innair, ocur uirce, ocur muir, ocur mbéar, ocur tarcar, ocur fíuice 7it.Somaine raite; itipe ocur a puti ocur aigíó; ceiteora (bu fianna).D 13^{av} (C. 31.72)5 [Caité ceitra tra; tri caite píl do fíuib .i. caite a ningsine, ocur caite a naóaire, ocur caite a mbel; caithé a ningsine dó neó conraira, ocur conclair, ocur plaite; caithé a naóaire do nech 7uinte, ocur conrairatt; caithé a mbel do neó 7aibet do fíuib na comaithcech.10 Co mideoar tra ná caite ro, ocur co hepaimear? Beithar comaithcech innraic do mef na fogla, ocur pofepthar per pola [1] papaib na comaithcech tar a eirí. Ma fep pola [1] a pola la fep no no da noirg ocur fep uar i taeb aineinn bea fíu in fep noirger. Muna be fep, 7aibther diablaí pócraice uar diais, 15 no arbam, amail bir mef in fíuib in fampúet fa i ngenipúet.11 IV 98. 17, 104. 4 Duine caite tra .i. impeam tar tír do ceile .i. ariais, ocur aitheb, ocur pollreut, ocur foíla, ocur an, ocur aineiriu.]D 14^{av} (C 34)* Cair—cad iad duinecaithe? .i. beim feda, fíuib aigí feda ocur athaig feda, ocur fogla feda, ocur lora feda.* Cair feda: dair, coll, cuileand, ibur, iundur, ochtae, abail. Cuic reoit a ndipe cach ae; bo buimbeime, colpach ina ngablaib, dair ina craebaid.* Athaig feda: fepinn, rail, pceith, caepant, beithe, 25 leam, rída. Do a ndipe cach ae; dair ina craebu.* Fogla feda: draigeán, trom, fepur, fíncoll, cuthaic, caite, cranó fíu. Dair a ndipe cac ae.

1 Their joints. There is some defect in the MS. here.

2 Birch.—'Beithe' is found in some ancient glossaries as a gloss on 'Buxus,' the Box-tree. It is now applied only to the 'Birch.'3 Idha. Dr. O'Donovan does not give an English equivalent for this term.
Prof. O'Curry suggests 'Palm.' It is, under the form 'Iodha,' commonly trans-

Ogam word for wood. Comaith caput. edad (= e) (= epon?)

Is this the name for the wood of the birch?

Note difference between this but, which includes the scí, & that in p. 150, which

The profits of the land are: every produce which it bears, both wood, and grass, and ~~herbs~~ ^{herbs}, and water, and sea, and harbour, and what the sea casts ashore, and waifs, &c.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

!! The profits of ~~woods~~ ^{woods} are: their 'dire'-fines, their strays, their joints;¹ four cows they share.

The trespasses of cattle, now; there are three trespasses by them, i.e. the trespasses of their ~~nails~~ ^{nails}, and the trespasses of their horns, and the trespasses of their mouths; the trespasses of their ~~nails~~ ^{nails} by separating, and ~~tearing~~ ^{tearing up}, and plundering; the trespasses of their horns by goring and tearing; the trespasses of their mouths by what they eat of the grass of the neighbours (co-tenants).

How now are these trespasses estimated, and how are they paid for? A worthy neighbour is brought to appraise the trespass, and grass of equal value is given at the decision of the neighbours. If the man who has committed the trespass has grass of equal value, let him give grass in the side or head of a field to the amount of the grass which he has plundered. If he has not grass, let double the hire be given by him afterwards, or produce, according to the appraisement of the grass in the hot or in the cold season.

As to the man trespasses, now, i.e. passing over thy neighbour's land, i.e., ploughing, and residing, and burning, and casting him out, and driving, and examining.

Question—What are the man trespasses? Cutting trees, both chieftain trees and common trees, and shrub trees, and bramble trees.

The chieftain trees are; oak, hazel, holly, yew, ash, pine, apple. There are five 'seds' for the 'dire'-fine of each; a cow for cutting their trunks, a 'colpach'-heifer fine for their arms, a 'dairt'-heifer for their branches.

The common trees are; alder, willow, ~~haw~~ ^{white} hawthorn, (mountain ash), birch,² elm, 'idha.'³ A cow is the 'dire'-fine for each; a 'dairt'-heifer for their branches.

The shrub trees are; blackthorn, elder, spindle tree, (white hazel), aspen, arbutus, test-tree.⁴ A 'dairt'-heifer is the 'dire'-fine for each.

lated 'yew,' but that tree is named before as 'Ibur.' It may be a species of pine. The translations given for 'peopur,' 'epanopur,' and 'paur,' are only conjectural.

¹ Test-tree.—Some tree probably from which lots were made.

VOL. IV.

L 2

f. Manuscript 1156 ff.

4 seds

(what about the beech (cane or bird?) wych elm, cherry)

to prepare here under class sub-class

now only in SW Munster (mountain tree?)

common popular (sup common)

2nd element, of W collin (square) (tree?)

cf. rándióg, etc.

• C 310 (p. 406)

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

• Lora fear^{dar C}da; nait^{nd C}h, nait^{nd C}, aiteand^{nd C}, d^{nd C}uir, n^{nd C}raech, eideand^{nd C}, g^{nd C}ilcach, r^{nd C}pín. Cupa a n^{nd C}oirpe cach ae. •
gl. genita

Cair cad iad duinecaithe? .i. comaircim cad iad na cmta do níat na daine n^{nd C}ir in p^{nd C}erann in a écmair r^{nd C}in. Beim fear^{nd C}da .i. t^{nd C}er^{nd C}cat in 5 fear^{nd C}da co h^{nd C}in^{nd C}ol^{nd C}istech. Och^{nd C}ta^{nd C} .i. in c^{nd C}ran^{nd C}to g^{nd C}uir. Cuic fear^{nd C}oit .i. da tecat^{nd C} da ba. Do buin-beime .i. ma nait^{nd C}hgin. Col^{nd C}pach .i. o^{nd C}et fear^{nd C}epall in aithgin. Dair^{nd C}t .i. ceit^{nd C}ri fear^{nd C}upall .i. ar fear^{nd C}eo. Do a n^{nd C}oirpe cach ae .i. ocu^{nd C}r ní tuc a nait^{nd C}hgin ar a^{nd C}irto. Dair^{nd C}t .i. ceit^{nd C}ri fear^{nd C}epall i n^{nd C}oiru gab^{nd C}al na fear^{nd C}da .i. ar col^{nd C}pa^{nd C}c re fear^{nd C}epall, ocu^{nd C}r i^{nd C}r d^{nd C}oirpe ar aithgin .i. no 10 i^{nd C}r ar fear^{nd C}amairc. Eideand^{nd C} .i. le^{nd C}t d^{nd C}oiru c^{nd C}raeb in cuil^{nd C}in^{nd C}to i^{nd C}r é lan d^{nd C}oiru bunbeime in eigin^{nd C}to; no le^{nd C}t d^{nd C}oiru gab^{nd C}al in cuil^{nd C}in^{nd C}to i^{nd C}r é lan d^{nd C}oiru bun beime in eigin^{nd C}to. Cupa .i. t^{nd C}ri fear^{nd C}upall, no be^{nd C}r riu da fear^{nd C}epall ina d^{nd C}oirpe.

• p 19a (C 34-5)

• .i. Beim fear^{nd C}da no a lom^{nd C}rat, do ranar ca^{nd C}c na o d^{nd C}oiru .i. aithgin in^{nd C}oirpe in^{nd C}ei^{nd C}c ro b^{nd C}ronn^{nd C}tar d^{nd C}e, ocu^{nd C}r cuic fear^{nd C}oit ma d^{nd C}oirpe. A^{nd C}et ní 15 com^{nd C}pruit ca^{nd C}c r^{nd C}io r^{nd C}iu ar^{nd C}aib; ar itait fear^{nd C}et nair^{nd C}is fear^{nd C}da, ocu^{nd C}r fear^{nd C}et nait^{nd C}h^{nd C}is fear^{nd C}da, ocu^{nd C}r fear^{nd C}et fear^{nd C}da fear^{nd C}da, ocu^{nd C}r fear^{nd C}et lora fear^{nd C}da, ocu^{nd C}r ar^{nd C}am d^{nd C}oirpe ca^{nd C}c ae.

dar (?) og d^{nd C}oir D

Air^{nd C}is fear^{nd C}da; dair, coll, cuilenn, iun^{nd C}oiru, ibar, o^{nd C}et^{nd C}ac, aball.
D^{nd C}oirpe n^{nd C}oirpa^{nd C}c; bo fear^{nd C}ce i com^{nd C}pr^{nd C}eat da ban ar^{nd C}a, ocu^{nd C}r dam
20 fear^{nd C}ce i com^{nd C}pr^{nd C}eat da fear^{nd C} ar^{nd C}a, ocu^{nd C}r a fear^{nd C}da co n^{nd C}de^{nd C}or^{nd C}c a fear^{nd C}ame
.i. uir m^{nd C}inn ocu^{nd C}r bocor ocu^{nd C}r lem^{nd C}la^{nd C}c n^{nd C}airpe co t^{nd C}ias^{nd C}at da m^{nd C}er tar^{nd C} in fear^{nd C}et^{nd C} fear^{nd C}et le^{nd C}t do be^{nd C}t fear^{nd C} fear^{nd C}ab fear^{nd C}an. A mbunbeim, bo m^{nd C}o, ocu^{nd C}r cuic fear^{nd C}oit a d^{nd C}oirpe. Col^{nd C}pa^{nd C}c ma m^{nd C}or gab^{nd C}la, no ina dair^{nd C}b^{nd C}ri be^{nd C}ga, dair^{nd C}t ma fear^{nd C}ebair. I^{nd C}r amne d^{nd C}oirpe ca^{nd C}c air^{nd C}is 25 fear^{nd C}da d^{nd C}ib.

other d^{nd C} D

"Dair; r^{nd C}io dombeir nair^{nd C}echur h^{nd C}i? Hin—A mear ocu^{nd C}r a fear^{nd C}pe;

¹ A sixth. A cow was worth 24 'screpalls,' and the young heifer called a 'dairt,' was the sixth of the value of this cow.

² A cow-hide. Dr. O'Donovan remarks on this. The original is certainly incorrect here. It should be, "For the barking of the oak to the extent required for tanning a cow-hide, a pair of woman's shoes is the 'dire'-fine." See O'D. 1677.

* C 1026 masu chorted fosechert ro ben de, da banassa in^{nd C}l

HC 2434. cf. O'D 1675-8
Drech D (fear^{nd C}) mem D
do cach leth D

* list 150-9 for adheann 'woodmen'

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY HERE.

149

^{plants of the wood} The bramble trees ^{give} are; fern, bog-myrtle, furze, briar, heath, ivy, broom, gooseberry. A sheep is the 'dire'-fine for each. ^{& 2 spins (died)}

JUDGMENTS OF
CO-TENANCY.

Question—What are the man trespasses? i.e. I ask what are the crimes which people commit as regards the land besides these above mentioned. Cutting trees, i.e. cutting the timber unlawfully. Pine, i.e. the fir-tree. Five 'seds,' i.e. which amount to two cows.* A cow for cutting their trunks, i.e. for compensation. A Ir. Of which come two cows.
tion. A 'colpach'-heifer, i.e. of the value of eight 'screpalls' as compensation. A 'dairt'-heifer, i.e. of four 'screpalls,' i.e. for a sixth! A cow is the 'dire'-fine for each, i.e. for he did not bring their compensation forward. A 'dairt'-heifer, i.e. of four 'screpalls' as 'dire'-fine for the branches of the bramble trees, i.e. for a 'colpach'-heifer of the value of six 'screpalls' and 'dire'-fine is here put for compensation, i.e. or it is for a 'samhaise'-heifer. Ivy, i.e. half the 'dire'-fine of the branches of the holly is equal to the full 'dire'-fine for cutting the trunk of the ivy; or half the 'dire'-fine for the branches of the holly is the full 'dire'-fine for cutting the trunk of the ivy. A sheep, i.e. of the value of three 'screpalls,' or worth two 'screpalls' is due as its 'dire'-fine.

That is, for cutting of trees or stripping them, full 'dire'-fine is paid for each, i.e., a perfect compensation for the portion of them which is damaged, and five 'seds' as 'dire'-fine. But all trees are not equally noble; for there are seven chieftain trees, and seven common trees, and seven shrub trees, and seven bramble trees, and the 'dire'-fine for each is different.

The chieftain trees are; oak, hazel, holly, ash, yew, pine, apple.

The 'dire'-fine of the oak: a cow-hide² is due for stripping off it the barking of a pair of woman's shoes³; and an ox-hide for the barking of a pair of men's shoes; and also to ~~cover~~ it until the test of its recovery⁴ is had, i.e., smooth⁵ clay and cow-dung and new milk are to be put upon it until they extend two fingers beyond the wound on both sides, and half-fine shall be for it until it is whole. For cutting the trunk a cow is paid, and five 'seds' are its 'diro'-fine. A 'colpach'-heifer is the fine for their great arms, or for their small oaklings, a 'dairt'-heifer for their branches. The 'dire'-fine of every chieftain tree of them is such as we have now stated.

tend (othrad as in D)

Oak: what gives it dignity? Answer. Its acorns and its

* A pair of woman's shoes. That is, as much bark as would tan leather enough to make a pair of woman's shoes.

⁴ The test of its recovery. That is, until it is secured against the effects of the weather.

⁵ Smooth. The Irish word read as 'minn' may be 'imnn,' the original being doubtful.

uir min 'fine clay'

aiedi D

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

coll? a mear ocur a cael; aball? a mear ocur a purc; ibar? IV 94.10 a aise ræra; cuilenn? pep for araili inn rin, ocur peirre omit?
 carpaio; uinuiur? polac (ocur) rugliarua, ocur let arao airm. rif shiastu D oetach? a bi, a tuica. tuleuma

5 Aethaig feara; pepn, rail, bece, lem, cruthe, roao. cairtano.
 Do bunbuime cae ae, dairt ina ngabla, caera ina craeba, cuic peoit ar eapba.

Foela feara; rceith, draigean, trom, peorur, crann fir, eioleann, rincoll. Colpac bunbeime cae ae; cuic peoit ar eapba, dorenciter sidhe D ¹⁰ aet draigean, do panatuar, rannoe cuic peoit .i. draigneac bir

 i pal eatarba do foiricear, no draigean cubra.
dofoirithar D

Loa feara; tur, aiteano, rraec, rin, gilcach, raic. Leacla, i uilre an aen gar, ocur dairt ina neapba. Ir amne do panatuar uili, aet a noilri ocur rooilri. (r. D.) |

15 Deebir craino a pro comaitceera, ocur can deebir gnao.
 Deebir gnao a pro neimeo, ocur cin deebir craino. Smaet a pro neimeo no co mbentari uile, ocur enecclann mo o bentari.

Da ba ocur bo molaes ocur colpac oet rceipall tri uiri na nairac pea. Luigach ocur colpach oet rceipall ocur dairt 20 ceitri rceipall, a tri nathgina. Luigac ocur colpac oet rceipall, ocur dairt ceitri rceipall, tri uiri na nathac pea.
 Samairc ocur dairt ceitri rceipall, ocur dairtaro da rceipall a tri nathgina. Samairc ocur dairt ceitri rceipall ocur dairtaro da rceipall, tri uiri na foela pea. Colpach re 25 rceipall, ocur dairtaro da rceipall, ocur caera rceipull, a tri nathgina.

¹ Noble structures. That is, the highly prized pieces of furniture manufactured from it.

² Fer for araili inn sin. This phrase was left untranslated by Dr. O'Donovan. Professor O'Curry rendered it, "This is the same as inviolable grass"; a meaning which seems very doubtful. It may mean, "A man upon another in that," and refer to the use of holly sticks in fighting.

cf. Eriu 13, 73-§ 152
 Anraic. 1157.

fin. D.

cf O'K 2284

carpentry

nobleness; hazel? its nuts and its wattles; apple? its fruit and its bark; yew? its noble structures¹; holly? 'fer for araili inn sin,² and the axle-trees of chariots are made of it; ash? supporting of a king's thigh, and half furniture of his arms. Pine? its being in the puncheon.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.fine,

The common trees are; alder, willow, birch, elm, aspen, 'idhadh, mountain ash. A cow is the fine for cutting the trunk of each, a 'dairt'-heifer for their arms, a sheep for their branches. Five 'seds' is the fine for their lopping.

The shrub trees are; whitethorn, blackthorn, elder, spindle-tree, test-tree, ivy,³ white hazel. A 'colpach'-heifer is the fine for cutting the trunk of each; five 'seds' for their lopping, except the blackthorn, for which five 'seds' are paid, i.e. blackthorn which is in an ~~unprofitable fence~~ (broken down) which is passed over, or sweet-smelling blackthorn.

woodbine

The bramble trees are; briar, furze, heath, gooseberry, broom, fern. 'Leacla' is forfeited for one sprig, and a 'dairt'-heifer for their lopping. They are all thus paid for, except the right and the full right.

There is a difference of tree in a co-occupancy wood, without any difference of class. There is difference of class in a sacred wood, without difference of tree. There is 'smacht'-fine in a sacred wood until it is all cut down, and honour price is paid for it when it is cut.

Two cows and an in-calf cow and a 'colpach'-heifer of the value of eight 'screpalls' are the three 'dire'-fines of the chieftain trees. A milch cow and a 'colpach'-heifer of eight 'screpalls' value and a 'dairt'-heifer worth four 'screpalls,' are their three compensations. A milch cow and a 'colpach'-heifer of eight 'screpalls' value and a 'dairt'-heifer of four 'screpalls,' are the three 'dire'-fines of the common trees. A 'samhaisc'-heifer and a 'dairt'-heifer worth four 'screpalls,' and a 'dairtaidh'-heifer of two 'screpalls,' are their three compensations. A 'samhaisc'-heifer and a 'dairt'-heifer of four 'screpalls' value, and a 'dairtaidh'-heifer of two 'screpalls,' are the three 'dire'-fines of the shrub trees. A 'colpach'-heifer worth six 'screpalls,' and a 'dairtaidh'-heifer worth two 'screpalls,' and a sheep of the value of one 'screpall,' are their three compensations.

¹ Ivy. The Irish word here is 'eidleann,' whereas in the text before (line 2, p. 148) it is 'eideand.' Dr. O'Donovan regarded them as different forms of the same name; Professor O'Curry suggested 'woodbine' as the translation of 'eidleann.' (recte)

² An unprofitable fence. Pal earapba may possibly mean 'a fence between cows.'

(Cath. wryg pte to 1. intech 'scabbar', etc.) = indech (ind-fech) to figid 'wines' slm. 10, v. n. figo - lao (fals) - fech (pulas pte in ind))
 w. gwe (: *fech) cpd. in figh ? q. w. anwe 'wryg'.

152

Óreatha Comaithcepa Anro.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

Trí rcpurúill inoib itir aithgin ocuŕ tpe inoib rin in tan 1ŕ a pto comicheapa, ocuŕ ni ril ní na ngablaib, 7ŕt. Maŕo a pto neime berde inuŕpŕo, ceitŕi rcpurúill inoib ar tpe, ocuŕ da rcpereall ar aithgin, ocuŕ a tŕian ina ngabla, ocuŕ a reireatŕ 5 ina cŕaebaib. Anar aithgin do aŕpechaib ŕeŕa iŕeŕo 1ŕ tpe do aŕheŕaib ŕeŕaŕa; a naithgin rin iŕŕeŕo 1ŕ tpe do poŕlaib ŕeŕaŕa.

^{eA} ^{oA} ^{it duine chaithe A} ^{dA i A} Anrba tpe dona, idunacaite. ^{eA} ^{ina A} ^{eA}
 * cona nínŕteach, ⁿ ^{ina A} ^{eA} ^{7 A} cuic ŕeŕit ana doŕdec, [ocuŕ] aithgin la cach na; ocuŕ
 10 beith ŕo cinaŕo na berpaŕo co ceanaŕo mbliatŕna.]
^{beith A} ^{berpa A} ^{ceana A}

Anrba tpe dona .i. ŕíŕeibe in ŕepaŕo dono. 1dunacaite .i.
 1ŕ cinaŕa dona ŕaíŕib eŕŕe. ^{eA} ^{ina A} ^{eA} Daŕtaiz .i. 1ŕ ŕíu ŕa rcpereall. Co na nínŕteach .i. cuŕ aní 1ŕ toich no 1ŕ ŕuthaiz biŕ oŕpŕo a hinŕe, in cáelach.
 Daŕt ina cuic .i. ceitŕi rcpereall. Coŕpaé .i. oéŕ rcpereall.
 15 Cuic ŕeŕit .i. ŕa ŕeŕaŕt ŕa ba, .i. 1ar ŕúŕ. Aithgin la cach na
 .i. aithgin in aile la cáé ŕmaéŕ ŕib rin, ocuŕ ŕaine po biŕ ann rin he.
 Beith ŕo cinaŕo .i. coŕ poŕlaŕ comaithiz in aŕpe. Co ceanaŕo mbliatŕna .i. ar in ŕe co ŕoib ŕep bunaro 1 naŕitín a ŕeŕaizŕi.

C310
 (O'D. 406.)

[Daŕtaiz 1 tŕi cuailib] .i. ŕa rcpereall o muŕcopŕi ina lula; ^{eA}
 2ŕ daŕt ceitŕi rcpurúill ina cuic .i. lula in ŕeŕaŕo ocuŕ meŕon-20 tai lai in uppaŕo. Coŕpaé ocht rcpurúill a meŕontai lai in ŕeŕaŕo, ocuŕ bo inŕlaez o uppaŕo, ocuŕ lula in uppaŕo, uair hoéŕ rcpurúill o uppaŕo ina lula, ocuŕ bo inŕlaez ŕe rcpereall

¹ Of its being repaired. That is, acknowledges that it has been properly repaired.

² Smallest offence, i.e. cutting three stakes. Middle offence, i.e. cutting five or Three 'screpalls' both for compensation and 'dire'-fine are paid for them when it is in a co-occupancy wood they are, and there is nothing for their large branches, &c. If, however, it be in a sacred wood they are, there are four 'screpalls' for them as 'dire'-fine, and two 'screpalls' as compensation, and its one-third for their arms, and its one-sixth for their branches. The compensation for the chieftain trees is equal to the 'dire'-fine of the common trees; and the compensation for them (the common trees) is equal to the 'dire'-fine of the shrub trees.

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

But cutting of land is man-trespas. A 'dartaigh'-heifer is the fine for three stakes with their appendages, a 'dairt'-heifer for five, a 'colpach'-heifer for eight, five 'seds' for twelve, and compensation for every one of them; and he (the trespasser) shall be accountable for the injury of the gap to the end of a year.

subvenear

neary?

But cutting of land, i.e. but the real cutting of the land. Is man-trespas, i.e. this is trespasses by the people. A 'dairtaigh'-heifer for three, i.e. of the value of two 'screpalls.' With their appendages, i.e. with the thing which is natural or which is proper to be on them from the root, the slender twigs placed across. A 'dairt'-heifer for five, i.e. of four 'screpalls' value. A 'colpach'-heifer, i.e. of eight 'screpalls.' Five 'seds,' i.e. which amount to two cows, i.e. altogether. Compensation for every one of them, i.e. the restitution of the stake fence with every 'smacht'-fine of these, and it was persons that broke it in this case. Shall be accountable, i.e. until neighbours (co-tenants) appraise the stakes. To the end of a year, i.e. until the time that the original proprietor admits that it has been repaired.¹

neary? 12. 10. 11

A 'dairt'heifer is due for three stakes, i.e. two 'screpalls' are to be paid by a foreigner for the smallest injury;^a a 'dairt'-heifer of four 'screpalls' value for five stakes, i.e. the small offence of the stranger is the same as^a the middle offence of the native freeman. ^a Ir. And. A 'colpach'-heifer worth eight 'screpalls' is due for the middle offence of the stranger, and an in-calf cow from a native freeman, and it is a small offence of the native freeman, because the middle offence of the stranger is the same as^a the small offence of the native freeman, for eight 'screpalls' are due from the native freeman for his small offence, and an in-calf cow worth sixteen 'screpalls' for his middle eight stakes. Greatest or highest offence or trespass, i.e. cutting twelve stakes, and making by so doing a full gap in the fence.

(5' 1252)

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

dec ina meonntai lai, ocur bo molaes o deoraio ina cleiti lai;
cuic reoit da tecait da ba orpaio ina cleiti lai.

O'D. 406.

[Cia o fuil in eirice ro, ocur cinnur no regao in da rerepull ir na tri cuailib? .i. diaf do murchurtaib leth cinn ocur leith ceille, rerepull uathuib in da cuaille dib .i. leit rerepull
o cae fuir dib .i. aon murcurea coonais ocur rerepull uao irin tref cuaille .i. diaf do murchurta leth cinn ocur leit ceille ann, ocur rerepull uata in da cuaille, ocur triar do murchurta coonais, rerepull o cach fuir dib in cae cuaille do ona tri cuailib eile .i. oet murcurea coonais ano, ocur ocht rerepull uatha ir na hoet cuailib.]

= Acaat

38
(ant. sp. indie, Antre!)

neut!

C 311 (5' 407)

Ata orba nado aclairdeao; aurba neigne ria plog, ria lonaid, ria flaitaib cia bodé.

= uabat

Ata orba nado aclairdeao, .i. ata pipebea do beap ap in repand, ocur noco tabar aclairde riach ap in ti do ni iat. Aurba neigne, .i. buped ap eicin perin plog, .i. for teiceo ne plog. Ria lonaid, .i. na plog irin. Ria flaitaib, .i. riap na flaitib, eibe flaithe iat, mana uapatur conair aile.

C 311 (5' 407)

Ata aurba ceana nado aclairdeao: aurba nimpeadna raipe muilind, no duirchige, no membra, no raipe duini rig. Adcomarcar uile, apur rean farac la seine, no liancur zach guide; urba ria collaib, ria nailaiepaib. Duntar cae norba.

Don-ant

? 11 O'Dav. 1190, *
which has sic instead of no.
is lian reib fr. lénas (lénas)

Ata aurba ceana, .i. ata pipepea cena cenmoa rin, ocur noco tabar aclairde riach ap in ti do ni iat. Aurba nimpeadna, .i. in pipepe do niter perin neimpeadain do beap ap amur in muilind in tan biter ac denam a raipse. Duirchige, .i. moir. Membra,
.i. bicc. Saipse duini rig, .i. in tan biter ac a denam. Adcomarcar uile, .i. iarpairtir uile cae ni dib rin orir in repand, .i. iarpairtir cen dunad, no dunad cen iarpairtir.

¹ Cuttings. That is, breaches, or gaps.

* lianchar each guide (May 20 12) offence, and an in-calf ewe from the stranger for his highest offence ; five 'seds' which amount to two ewes are due from a native free-man for his highest offence.

JUDGMENTS OF CO-TENANCY.

By whom is this 'eric'-fine paid, and how do the two 'screpalls' proceed from the three stakes ? i.e. two of the foreigners being of half sense and half reason pay^a a 'screpall'^a for two of those stakes, i.e. half a 'screpall' from each man of them, i.e. one sound-minded foreigner who pays a 'screpall' for the third stake, i.e. two foreigners of half sense and half reason in this case, and a 'screpall' is paid by them for the two stakes, and three sound-minded foreigners, every man of them pays a 'screpall' for every stake of the other three stakes, i.e. there are eight sound-minded foreigners in this case,^b and eight 'screpalls' are paid by them for^b the eight stakes.

^a fr. From them.

^b fr. In it.

There are cuttings¹ which are not sued for ; a forcible cutting before a host, before provisions, before chieftains of any kind.

be of one's own body (of one's own body)

There are cuttings which are not sued for, i.e. there are real cuttings which are made in the land, and fines are not sued upon the person who makes them. A forcible cutting, i.e. a forcible breach before the host, i.e. in flying before a host. Before provisions, i.e. of these hosts. Before chieftains, i.e. before the chieftains, whatever chieftains they be, if they had found no other passage.

There are cuttings also which are not sued for ; a cutting for carriage at the construction of a mill, or of an oratory, or of a shrine, or at the building of a king's 'dun'-fort. Leave is asked about them all, for it is an old maxim with the Feini, "for every supplication is pleasant" ; a cutting before bodies, before pilgrims. Let every breach be closed.²

congratulate the mother

There are cuttings also, i.e. there are real cuttings also besides these, and they bring no claim of debts upon the person who makes them. A cutting for carriage, &c., i.e. the real cuttings which are made by the carriage of things brought towards the mill when the construction of it is being made. Of an oratory, i.e. of a large one. Of a shrine, i.e. of a small one. The building of a king's 'dun'-fort, i.e. when it is being done. Leave is asked about them all, i.e. permission to do every thing of these is asked for of the owner of the land, i.e. consent without closing, or closing without consent. (i.e. he must either get permission or for the speedy conducting

² Be closed. Or, let every gap or breach be closed, or every breach is to be closed.

close the breach; otherwise he is liable

JUDG-MENTS OF
CO-TEN-
ANCY.

1r cethramta in darta-da no na dairti ino 7hl, a cethar de. (08 1253)
Ma ce n ariaraet, ce n duna, 1r le. Ma ro eceptur, ocur ni comarleictear do, irlan dia nuna, mana duna, 1r cethramtha.

Arur rean parae la peine, .i. ar 1r fencindeo os do reir in 5 fenechar, .i. 1r cethramta in darta-da, no na dairti ino. No lian cur, .i. ailen, .i. 1r liancar caryeti he o beirir aca suidi. Urba ria colliab, .i. na marb, mana ragbar conar aile. Ria nai laierab, .i. reir in luic teit na aileir. Duntar cae norba .i. duntar cae rhipro dib rin, uar mana dentar noco rlan.

10 Dia naecomarcar in tan orlaictear rri deithbire, ocur duntar fon inour cetna, irlan do. Ma ro duna, ocur 1r meru anar amuil ro bui, a noisab air in droc ime icar uadrum. Mani ro dun itir, icar rmaet na oirgne uad. Mana aecomarcar itir, ocur duntar amuil ro bui, irlan do. Mara 15 olc, icar rmaet oirgne tairre. Muna duna itir, icar rmaet na oirgne, ocur le. cuic reit, ar ni athcomarc.

0C 311 (08 407)

o Comicheach doho bir itir da tir, .i. tir da perant, in tir o na 20 bir pot .i. uar noco nruil conar aic fein. Dligio lan imirce; bir reirar umpu, triar o fir tire, ocur araili o fir imirce.

20 Cuic reit anan ocur atain, ma dichmarc, acht ain eigne; ni haclaide ain bo do tarb.

Comicheach doho bir itir da tir, .i. tir da perant, in tir o na 25 bir pot .i. uar noco nruil conar aic fein. Dligio lan imirce, .i. do lecu do. O fir tire, .i. o fir in perant. Araili, .i. ar in comlin biar o fir bunar na noisab .i. uar noco nruil conar aic fein, ocur irlan do cae rosal do dena rir na comaitib, amuil comrith narume.

6. an na(a)claidh

1. Aa annat aclair dligear cae comaitheac dia rale .i. tir 30 cen beola, cen pot, cen boeur; dligio lan imirce tar cae tir a comitac ber nearam do, aet 1rre inour na dlig, rerur uimpe,

¹ Road. Or unless another road could be found.

² No road. In O'D. 407, it is called a district, "cin toin cin beolu," "without an opening at the front or the rear."

It is the fourth of the 'dartaiddh'-heifer or of the 'dairt'-heifer that is due for it, &c., for either of them. If without consent, without closing, it (the fine) is one-half. If he has given consent, and that he has not advised him to it, it (the penalty) is full fine if he closes, if he does not close the gap, it is one-fourth.

For it is an old maxim with the Feini, i.e. for it is a perfect old decision according to the 'Feinechas'-law, i.e. it (the fine) is a fourth of the 'dartaiddh'-heifer, or of the 'dairt'-heifer for it. Supplication, i.e. clement, i.e. he is the more clement for being supplicated. A cutting before bodies, i.e. of the dead, unless they find another road.¹ Before pilgrims, i.e. before the people who go on a pilgrimage. Let every cutting be closed, i.e. every true cutting of these is closed, for unless it is done (closed) it (the act) is not guiltless.

If leave be asked, when it is breached^a with necessity, and it is closed in the same way, it is guiltless. If it has been closed, and it is worse than it was at first, the damage done in consequence of the bad fence is paid by him. If it has not been closed at all, the 'smacht'-fine of the damage is paid for. If permission has not been asked at all, and it is closed as it had stood before,^b it is guiltless. If it be badly done, he shall pay fine for the damage done by it.^c If it be not closed at all, he shall pay the 'smacht'-fine of the damage, and half five 'seds', for he did not ask leave.

A co-tenant who is between two lands is entitled to full passage; six persons are to be about them (the cattle), three from the owner of the land, and three others from the man of the passage.

Five 'seds' are payable for driving in and out, if without asking leave, except in case of forcible driving; the driving of a cow to a bull is not sued for.

A co-tenant who is between two lands, i.e. between two farms, i.e. in the land from which there is no road,² i.e. for he has no passage himself. Is entitled to full passage, i.e. to be ceded to him. From the owner of the land, i.e. the owner of the farm. Others, i.e. for the proprietor shall have an equal number after (minding) them, i.e. for he (the co-tenant) has not a passage himself, and he is not amenable for any trespass which he may commit against the neighbours, as running of the whole stock or drove.

There is ~~one way~~ ^{driving which does not bring liability} which every co-tenant is entitled to from the other, i.e. in a land without an opening, without a road, without a way; he (the tenant) is entitled to full passage over every co-tenant's land that is next him, but the manner in which he is bound to pass is, with six persons about him, three persons

JUDGMENTS OF
CO-TENANCY.

f O'Law. 1190

^b Ir. As it was.
^c Ir. Over it.

or read not a?

R iter

f Mac N. Status p. 307

JUDG-MENTS OF
Co-TEN-
ANCY.

τριαρ ο ριρ τριε, οκυρ τριαρ ο ριρ ιμιρςε δια νόλυαδ ριρ ρελμαδ, αρ να ρολεαδ ρον τρι. Δια μβε βοταρδε, δο πολλαισεαρ ραδε; δια μβεο δα ελαδ ιμε, νο οί κοραδ, αοριτεαρ leo αρ αο ριαδαιν αηηρ. 1ρ δε αρρυβραδ, βριαδαι ριαδαιν; μυνα βεο 5 αετ τον δοριρρανν νί himtecar λα ριρταιβ; 1ρ δε αρρυβραδ, νί βριαταδ ριαδαιν.

Cuic ρεοιτ αναιν, .i. inuno .i. mo. Αταιν, .i. imach, .i. ap. Μα οιχμαιρς, .i. νί uair conair αιλι, νο νί coemnacair gabail ιμε. Αετ αιν ειγνε, .i. uair ιρλαν ειρδε. Αιν βο το ταρβ, .i. cuic ρεοιτ δα 10 decant δα βα main, οκυρ 1ρ ταρ λαν ιμε, οκυρ leth ιν ρειν mana be ιμε.
Μα δαρ λετ, 1ρ τεορα cethramēta να δα βο. Μά δαρ λαν ιμε ιν ath-lumrari, 1ρ βο. Μα δαρ λετ ιμε, 1ρ τεορα cethramēta να βο; μαδ cen ιμε ιτιρ, ιραμαρς.

(Finit B, which then gives the track Don Techtugad (p. 2 supra) without heading)

C311
(O'D. 407.)
Sic.

1. [Τιρ cin τοιν cin beolu bir ιτιρ δα ρερυνν cin conair. Μα
15 τιρ ρecht cumulu, δαιρτε cachā treimpe αρ conuir τοιβ δια ninnilb. Μα τιρ cumuile, νο τρι cumulu, 1ρ on cinn bliadna co raill beór. Μαδ αον conuir, 1ρ molt cachā treiri, οκυρ 1ρ τιρ δα ρετ cumula ιροδουν; μα τιρ δα cumul imurro, νο τρι cumulu, 1ρ ιριν cethrumad bliadun, οκυρ 1ρ το ectur ρινε ατα uile. 1η
20 ταν 1ρ το ρινε, 1ρ ανη 1ρ τριαρ ο ριρ τριε, οκυρ αραιλι ο ρερ imepce, οκυρ munu ταρδορ ριν, ιρλαν το α breith ταριρ; νο δono, να ρογλα το denuit chenu cen icc.

treimse?

C. Finit don comachē.

from the owner of the land, and three persons from the man who seeks the passage shall attend to keep them (the cattle) close to the fence, in order that they may not spread over the land. If he has a way, this may be omitted; if there be two mounds to it, or two stone walls, he is restrained by them for they are a kind of witnesses. From this it was said, "~~the witnesses are not to be removed~~;" unless they are but of the one side, they shall not be passed; and from this was said, "~~the witnesses are not to be removed~~."¹

Five 'seds' for driving in, i.e. over, i.e. into it. Out, i.e. out of it, i.e. from it. If without asking leave, i.e. he did not find another passage, or he was not able to pass along it. Except forcible driving, i.e. for that is guiltless. The driving of a cow to a bull, i.e. five 'seds' which amount to two cows for this driving in, and it is over a full fence, and the one-half for the same if there be not a fence. If it be over a half fence, it (the fine) is three quarters of the two cows. If over a full fence into bare grass, it is a cow. If over a half fence, it (the fine) is three quarters of the cow; if there be no fence at all^a it is a ^a Ir. Without fence.

This is a land without egress or ingress, which is between two lands without a passage. If it be a land of seven 'cumhals,' there is a 'dairt'-heifer every season due for allowing them a passage for their cattle. If it be a land of one 'cumhal,' or a land of three 'cumhals,' it is from one end of the year to the other. If it be one passage, it is a wether every ~~third year~~ that is due, and it is a quarter? land of twice seven 'cumhals' in that case; but if it be a land of two 'cumhals,' or of three 'cumhals,' it is in the fourth year, and all this is by (in the case of) an outside family. When it is by (in the case of) the family, then it is one-third from the owner of the land, and another third from the man of the passage, and if he does not concede this (right of way), it is guiltless for him (the owner of the cattle) to bring them over it; or, according to others, he is ^{to} not pay the damage which they may commit on the occasion.

¹ To be removed. The original is defective here.

Ends the subject of the co-tenancy.

bech brethæ.

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

- MS.
A. H. 2. 15 p. 12a - 26a. (OK. 4. 30 [1024] - 36) Full text. Only Ms used. (= C1H 444. 11 - 12)
B 9g. 88 fol. 87a - b. (C. 87, 61-66) Excerpts (= 1286.1 - 1286.2)
C. H. 3. 18 p. 397a - 398a. (C. 889 - 892) " (= C1H 923. 17 - 924. 25)

13. [bech bretha.] not in A

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

MS.

Annrom h1 tauirgillib tauirgille ar becharib; alioirde tauirgille nairub tap² t1r ber da nepom each leth, cia pa meit cia pa laiget; *ar 1r a tauirgillib berdaip² *C a mbretha a dtairpce, a ccinaid, *a lloige ar cethardoit t1re ber da nepom, dlegait peirde deolairh doib da lloigib iar naimrepaib ruire.

C ar is a tauirgille bertir .i. amail beo aicci fochara na kingeltha is amlaid meit 7 feir na tauirgille. Is a suidig iarum beirh breth for ni fofechat for tairpce .i. h1 tarail.

Annrom .i. annra em .i. doib. h1 tauirgillib .i. 1r do na geal-laib toirneaca 1r i dailgi do neac 1car pe geall toirneac da beir pe dar ceano na meac .i. geall da reneball. Alioirde .i. apitnigro reirde geall toirneac oirpo, 5ro annra, .i. geall da reneball. Tap t1r .i. do luat na reparaio 1r neapu doib do gac leir, pua da taeo ocup pua da nairceann in t1re. Cia pa meit .i. 5ro bes 5ro moir he .i. in reparaio no na beir. Ar 1r a tauirgillib .i. uair 1r ar tabairt gill toirneag dar a ceano bepar breiteinnar oirpo. A dtairpce .i. in an 5gleit. A ccinaid .i. in an caeac. A lloige .i. in an raite. Ar cethar-doit .i. do luat na ceathra reparaio 1r neapu doib i mun doir. Dlegait .i. dlegait p1re lo5 doib ar in deolair no lo5 deolair doib cin lo5 aet pomeit. Iar naimrepaib ruire .i. iarp an pe rucain inio beir i paeire.

¹ Two 'screpalls.' The following note on 'Cain Cuise' is found at the bottom of p. 21 of the MS. H. 2, 15. (OK 1026)

"Geill da reneball p1r diguin ocup ni uil p1r turgabar, ar in heigen ime pui fia da neo fogla comatgera, ocup ni h1ao na gealla po toirer and, aet can cuirs ocup mian galair ocup ollabruis na pe pe t1r mbliadan; no dan, 1r e geall 1r coir and 1r cutpuma p1r in can cuirs .i. pmaet comatgera do p1r p1u iar tabairt na ngeall po amail ceatra eile; no gumaio i in can cuirs ocup mian galair ocup ollabruis na; ocup a tabairt a t1ruir du gac t1r, no 5u na tucta aet einni doib do gac t1r ocup 5ro moir da fealbacair beap in gac t1r nuca deuine p15 a leap 1r an cuic 1r a b1eir deo, ocup 5ro poeario ita ina pmaetanar a leap 1r an cuic a neineact, no 5o nuil aet in cutpuma p1r doib uile.

There is a pledge of two 'screpalls' for meadow and there is not for raising a

C a lloge ma moir in tauirgille dobertha do neoch is suairhaid foglas co moir a h1ao is lo5 mbeo as coir and for sin arraithe clona beirh iarum.

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

Among additional pledges an additional pledge for bees is ^{the most difficult} difficult; additional pledge is required for them that they pass not beyond the land which is nearest to them on every side, whether it be much or little; for it is according to the additional pledges that judgments are passed respecting their 'tairsce'-trespass, their crime, their produce, ^{for} in the four lands which are nearest to them, ^{for} these are entitled to a share of their produce gratis after the periods of their exemption.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

It is difficult, i.e., ^{hard indeed} 'annsa em,' i.e. difficult. ^{indeed} Among additional pledges, i.e., of all the relieving pledges which one pays, the most difficult is the relieving pledge which he gives for the bees, i.e. a pledge of two 'screpalls.'¹ Is required, i.e., that demands a relieving-pledge for them, though difficult i.e. a pledge of two 'screpalls.' Beyond the land, i.e. to the owners of the lands which are nearest to them on each side, at both sides and both ends of the land. Whether it be much, i.e. whether it be big or little, i.e. the land, or the bees. For it is according to the additional pledges, i.e. for it is upon giving the relieving pledge for them that judgment is passed on them. Their 'tairsce'-trespass, i.e. with respect to the feeding. Their crime, i.e. with respect to the blinding of men or beasts. Their produce, i.e. with respect to the swarming. In the four lands, i.e. for the people of the four lands which are next hand to them. Are entitled, i.e. these are entitled to get value for their 'deolaidh'-right or the value of 'deolaidh'-right is due to them without any price except consuming. After the periods of their exemption, i.e. after the particular time during which bees are in freedom (exempt from fines).

fence, for no fence can be put against them though they may commit trespasses of co-tenancy, and these are not the pledges that are forfeited therein, but the 'Cain Cuisc,' 'the longing of disease' and the 'ollabruig nai' for a period of three years; or, the pledge that is right here is one equal to the 'Cain Cuisc,' i.e. that 'smacht-fines of co-tenancy' should accumulate upon them after giving these pledges for them as well as for other animals; or, the 'Cain Cuisc,' 'the longing of disease' and 'ollabruig nai;' and that the three should be given to every land, or that only one of them should be given to every land, and that though great may be the number of land-holders in each land, only this proportion is due to them all during the period of three years; and the first person who stands in need of them in the land is to get it, and though many in the land should stand in need of it at the same time, they can get only this proportion."

*C a tucten .i. in primo anno.
 a seol .i. is isan bliadain tanaisi is gachlenn seol 7 apaithe for bheant silach imorro in tres bliadain d'oil a ccaim cuise .i. a nollige cose do tabairt mar dligid in comairfech di arail, cose do mil do.*

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

Ar dlegait beich .iii. bliadain ruipe, cipe lar naitogenetar; bliadain a dtuirten, bliadain a peoil, bliadain a ril. Ní dlegait in cethardoit rin in doib acht a chain cuire, na allabrug naie, no miann ngalaip, 5 co teoria bliadain a ruipe, cipe lar a naitgheniteir, ar
 o zha na teoria bliadna ruipe rin, is for phind oirgne poceir na rmachta ro. Nóch^{is} ~~ach~~ na rois in oirgne, an na raig bo co etrud for ingilt, na raig in bech oc teclamao a thopaid. O ta na teoria 10 bliadna, dlegait in cethardoit rin tpe ber da neppom deolaid doib; airt a raithib a cobdailib cruch, ar in fulaing nech deolaid [deolaid] dia laithu la Feine; ar in trippintiu in ro confodlaiteir po chobdaili cruch.

o) kclan (< ksmall?)

Car. 12 ní fulaing nech na deolaith du araili

Ap. 21a

*C allabrig .i. ala brig .i. brig aile fris a tuisach aci .i. is ei ind ai a timgaire .i. ala brig timgaire is for ind ⁿⁱ oirgne .i. bid tairgille airriu coruice ni les arem oirgne.
 alith .i. deolaith d'oil asna saithib*

15 Ar dlegait beich .i. uair dlegait beic beich ne ne tri mbliadain i raipe. Cipe lar naitogenetar .i. cipe lar i ngeineno riao su ait no su eada. Bliadain .i. in bliadain i tuirgeneto riao .i. in co bliadain rin. Bliadain a peoil .i. bliadain i mi puall toib, in bliadain tanaire. Bliadain a ril .i. in bliadain a rilano riao, is an 20 tpeair bliadain. Ní dlegait in cethardoit rin .i. no go dlegait.

¹ Their breeding.—The age of the bee is estimated by German apiarians as one year, but Huish shows that a queen-bee lives sometimes four years. See Huish, "Nature, Economy, and Practical Management of Bees," 2nd edition, London, 1817, pp. 246, 248, 249.

² According to the division of the land.—Dr. O'Donovan remarks here:—

"From these texts and glosses it appears that the person who reared bees, was obliged after the third year to share their honey with the neighbours who resided in the four townlands lying around him in every direction, that during the first three years some of the honey was due to sick persons and to certain dignitaries, as an 'ollave'-poet, a bishop, a professor of literature, &c., who may live within or happen to be on a visit in any of the four townlands which were entitled to the produce of the bees.

The quantity of honey to be given out for these three classes of persons was proportioned to that produced by the bees. If the produce of the bees amounted to the full of a 'milch-cow vessel,' i.e. a vessel which when full a man of ordinary strength could raise to the height of his knee, they shall get half the full of an 'escra,' if they produce the full of a 'samhaic'-heifer vessel, which a

C cobdailib cruch .i. amail be oise na cruch foglad is amlaid aileth deolanis asna saithib. Confodlaiteir in deolar as sin.

For bees are entitled to three years' exemption, BEE-JUDG-MENTS. with whomsoever they are produced: the year of their production, the year when they are few, the year of their breeding.¹ The people of these four lands are not entitled to anything but according to the 'Cain Cuisc,' or 'allabrig naie,' or 'the longing of disease,' until the end of the three years of their exemption, with whomsoever they are produced, for from these three years of exemption out, it is according to the injury that these 'smacht'-fines are imposed.

(ind) minimum of bulling
It is only as the injury requires, ^{much} for as long as the cow requires grazing ^{do on the grazing} until milking time, so long ^{much} does the bee ^{do when} require to gather ⁱⁿ its produce.* From the three years out, the four lands that are next them are entitled to get a gratis share, they are entitled to a share of the swarms according to the divisions of the land, for no one ^{supports (i.e. nourishes) anything} entitled to a gratuity is liable to a gratuity to another ^{gratis for another among the F} with the Feini; for this is the third ^{tribe} tribe-property which is divided according to the divisions of the lands.²

For bees are entitled, i.e. for the owners of bees are entitled to be a period of three years in exemption. With whomsoever they are produced, i.e. with whomsoever they are generated quickly or lawfully. The year of their production, i.e. the year in which they generate, i.e. the first year. The year when they are few, i.e. the year in which there are but few of them, i.e. the second year. The year of their breeding, i.e. the year in which they breed,³ the third year. The people of the four lands, i.e. the people of man can raise to his navel, they shall get one-third of an 'escra;' if they produce the full of a 'colpthac'-heifer vessel, which a man can raise as high as his loins, they shall get one-fourth of an 'escra,' if they produce a 'dairt'-heifer vessel, which a man can raise over his head, they shall get the one-fifth of an 'escra.'

³ The year in which they breed, the third year. On this Dr. O'Donevan observes:—It is difficult now to determine what induced the author of this law to suppose that bees were three years old when they began to breed. The age of the bee is estimated by the German apiarians at one year, and they hold it as undoubted that the queen of the present year is not to be found in the hive the following year. The age of the common bee is estimated at one year, or one year and a half. But Illush shows that a queen-bee sometimes lives four years, and cites various writers who assert that they have seen hives which were ten, fifteen, and thirty years old; but he remarks that "it must not be supposed that in fixing the duration of a hive at fifteen or twenty

3CP 16, 267

(l. tocentar ?)

And so far extends the minimum of injury.

Car. p. 318-20.

one of first bee is few!
of J. Reub. p. 714

[* The 'minimum of damage' means little or no damage.]

these four lands which are next to hand to them are not entitled to get anything else. But according to the 'Cain Cuisc,' i.e. but the rule of 'the drink from the ~~hive~~,' i.e. the thing by which it is understood, and there is no limitation upon it, or, according to some, it is half a cup out of a milch-cow vessel. Half a cup is due to them out of a milch-cow vessel which a man can raise to his knee; one-third of a cup out of a 'samhaise'-heifer vessel, which a man can raise to his navel; one-fourth of a cup out of a 'colphach'-heifer vessel, which a man can raise to his loins; one-fifth of a cup out of a 'dairt'-heifer vessel which a man can lift over his head. Or 'allabrig naie,' i.e. a sufficiency for the chief of a party at a feast, or what is given to the person who is of great power in science, or 'brug' for steadiness and 'oll' for his depth, i.e. the 'ollav' of wisdom, i.e. to whom great force comes from full science, i.e. a king, or a bishop, or any noble dignitary whatever. Or the longing of disease, i.e. or the thing which is given to him to satisfy his longing when he is in a disease. Until the end of three years, i.e. till the termination of three years bees are in freedom, i.e. without being subject to anything else to be obtained out of them, but that before mentioned. Cip i.e. cid. From the three years, i.e. from these three years during which bees are in freedom. According to the injury, i.e. it is for the people to whom they go, according to their injuries. Are imposed, i.e. this 'smacht'-fine is imposed. As long as the cow requires, i.e. as long as she requires. So long does the bee require, i.e. require the same length. From the three years on, i.e. from the three years that bees are in freedom. Are entitled to a share of swarms, i.e. the people of the land are entitled to a division of the swarm. For no one is liable, i.e. for no one is liable to give anything in gratuity or of grace to another. Gratuity, i.e. it is deemed a gratuity by him on account of the 'cain cuisc,' or 'the longing of disease' or the 'allabruigh ne.' For this is the third tribe-property, i.e. for this is the third tribe-property which is fairly distributed according to the division of the lands.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.escra = $\frac{1}{3}$ of lowest land.
O'Donovan

, however, ?

The distribution of the swarms, and the judgments of top and trunk of trees, and drawing water across lands . . . for in respect of this 'geilfine' and 'derbh-fine,' 'iarfine' and 'innfine' are placed by the Feini had a particular establishment of her own independently of the mother hive, in which the young queens never possess the privilege of laying their eggs. She is, however, in a state qualified to place herself at the head of a colony disposed to share her fortunes. Such is the attachment of the bees for their queen."

"The first swarm that appears in the spring is always in part the produce of the eggs which were laid in the preceding year. These eggs have subsisted in the hive during the autumn and winter in the state of eggs fecundated by the drones. These eggs are not hatched until the return of the warm weather in April or May, and the drones which are the produce of these eggs as soon as they have quitted their nymphal state, fecundate the eggs, which the queen has already laid in the cells of the present year." Huish, 2nd Edition, pp. 190, 191.

1 A cup, 'escra.' "Quoddam argenteum vasculum unde potentibus personis potus hauriri solet, quod Hibernicâ linguâ vocatur escra," vita Darercae.—(Brussels, MS. quoted by Dr. O'Donovan.)

c. pobith snaid .i. arna rosnuidhe a hir ocu in ceth inborad is aini fegar (wr) in cethorad. (g of snaid 'protection' of nash foglaist... us gail- neid na snadh. C253) into mhogail is fair baid a an. Exp. 88 f 45^b

cf. the commenters in 2284

BEE-JUDO-MENTS.

Bimma torad

(890)

c. cacha uthramad bliadain .i. a lan dirgbail uan uthramad bliadain no a dilaingad aice cinn iarmoracht netis o fer on fasa a bunad.

5 Cobdaithe raithes .i. raithi do cobdaitheas doib .i. ir in cethumao bliadain. Bpetha baiyr .i. in bpeat ata itir fear bona in cethumao ocu fear a baiyr. Urci tuiridhe .i. ocu in tuirce tairgiteir tar na fearanraib. Air ipuise .i. uair ip po cormailur na dei eada ipin po purdiged. Selpine .i. in tobop. Derspine .i. in digne o tobop su lino. Iarppine .i. in lino. Inospine .i. o lino rir. Hi rinteadib .i. i fine dinoib in fearanraib da rir in eneair. Air ipi bpeth .i. uair ip i reo bpeat ata itir fear bona in cethumao ocu fear a baiyr do rir ino feneair. Alisopine .i. aipitnigis riridheis epa da dena in a torad. Pobith rnuad tpe .i. pon rat fearaith no ecoir in tpe, in fearanraib ina da cuiridhe fearaith. Air uirpighir .i. uair uirpighir fear bona in cethumao torad a baiyr gad ceatramad bliadain oir in fearanraib ina da cuiridhe. Incuiridheir .i. in baiyr.

cf. nech ad chompu a chile 7000 VII, 168 89.

im- 20 Inna teopa bliadna aile conpolaiteir i nbe eitir tpe inuichuipitheir ocu tpe ara nara; cipe dallina inuicoimge, dipenar leithdipe dia railiu a beaib pro bpeth, po riridhe cach a peda, amail po riridged la reime.

B. b. da lina in da comen

c. acht a saeras .i. e mo diri in craind bis i netatib a hite oldas in crann 7000 i polatid cid am fidh. ZCP 20, 389.

Ma do tairidhe, dipenar po tairidhe cach peda, co-ceniuil do, acht ni roepir nemed de.

Ata amper ar coimdipe tairidhe cach peda rira bunebe; ata ino amper aile ni aile acht trian dpe ina tairidhe.

b ^{d x} Ma do beich rogabat and, conpolaat a torad eturru

¹ The embankment. It is very difficult to decide whether the Irish word thus translated is 'oir' or 'one.' 4 p. 208. 18

c. ainal in ad comdip tairidhe .i. in ainsir samrid 7 fomaire daig in forail bis forail 7 daig na saithib dogabail uan saithib zin.

among the tribes of the land. For the judgment of BEE-JUDG
MENTS.
top and bottom, according to the Feini, is that a fold is required about his fruit, because of the appearance of the land in which the produce is sown, for the bottom is entitled to the fruit of the top every fourth year, ^{to} of the land ^{into} in which ^{which} the fruit is sown. ^{or} lyally fruit fruit

The distribution of the swarms, i.e. the swarms to be divided by them, i.e. in the fourth year. The judgments of top, i.e. the judgment that is passed between the owner of the bottom of the tree and the owner of its top. Drawing water, i.e. and the water which is drawn across the lands. For in this, i.e. for it is after the likeness of these they are placed. 'Gelfine,' i.e. the well. 'Derhfine,' i.e. the embankment' from the well to the pond. 'Iarfine,' i.e. the pond. 'Innfine,' i.e. from the pond down. Tribes of the land, i.e. the tribes of the land according to the 'Fenechus'-law. For the judgment, i.e. this is the judgment that is between the owner of the bottom of the tree and the owner of its top according to the 'Fenechus'-law. Is required, i.e. he ought to make an enclosure about his produce. Because of the appearance of the and, i.e. because of the surface or aspect of the land, of the farm in which he sows his produce. For the bottom is entitled, i.e. for the owner of the bottom of the tree becomes entitled to the fruit of its top every fourth year; i.e. it is due to owner of the land in which it (the tree) is planted. Is planted, i.e. the top.

In the other three years it is divided into two parts between the land in^t which it is planted and the land out of which it grows; whichever of the two parties ~~commits injury~~, he pays half 'dire'-fine to the other according to the customs of wood judgments, according to the rank of each tree, as it was established by the Feini.

If it be cutting, it is paid for according to the cutting of each tree, ~~according to its kind~~, except what the 'nemedh' frees of it.²

There is a time when the cutting of each tree is liable to the same 'dire'-fine as cutting the trunk; there is another time when it incurs but one-third 'dire'-fine for its cutting.

If it be bees that have taken up their abode there, they divide their produce between them into

² Frees of it. The words 'nemedh de,' may also mean, a 'nemedh' of God, 'an ecclesiastical dignitary.'

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

۲۲

legally converts the fruit
to fruit

'family rights'

projected ^S?

1. duren. 2. afloren.

of equal rank with it perfect pr. 2 by

na nasa bunad in toraid .i. in tior nasa nasaid na bích is bunad toraid ised bích leith on chrann garbthe .i. as ní húrúsa a imleith.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

1 nðe co cenn teopa bliadain; acht ip i tñpe ara napa in toraid.

Inna teopa .i. ina tñpe eile. Conpòblaiter .i. ip cásin fòdailtñp ar do itñ in fearaidn afa da cuipinno fe a toraid^{l in} bunad^{bunad} .i. in fear-5 anto ara napano fe; comhoinno toraid in cñoinno ar do so ceant tñp mbliadna, itñ fear bona in cñainno ocur fear a bairñ. .i. ocur a toraid gac ceathramad bliadain tñp a bairñ. Cñpe .i. cñpe don da imad rñ em cuinñger .i. a leatord. Dñpenar .i. eipñno rñde leitñpñe ant 10 da cñile. A bepaib .i. a bair gñae no aibno bñeicñinñar na fearð.
 20 Po rñpñe cacha feara .i. po uairñbñeicñar gaca feara .i. gño rñadain gño cumpñ. Ro rñuñbñeicñ .i. aññail po rñuñbñeicñ e do rñepñ inñe cñapñ.

(O'p 1628)

Mað tairñbe .i. mað arñtimcell do neñar. Dñpenar .i. eipñniter po arñbñeicñ gaca feara ip comait cenél rñp, ocur nñ leatardar uñle.
 15 Acht nñ rñepñer .i. aét mñí rñepñar tñpñ a bñit conat rñð nñññrñ e uairñ noñon po aigneb cñainno ita ina mñpñe, aét po aigneb gñainno in tñ gñe mñð.

Ata amñepñ .i. ita amñepñ ip comñpñe arñtñmceall gaca feara rñpñ beim da bun a lantñmcell, i mñp marbñatard. Ata inñ amñepñ
 .i. ta amñepñ eile, ocur noco nairñtñmñeicñ fe aét tñpñ tñpñ .i. da 20 tñpñ na lantñmceall i mñp beapñard, no tñpñ a lantñmceall i mñp marbñatard.

Ma beich .i. mað beic gabard ant. Conpòblat .i. ip cñan fòdailte a toraid na rñnteb atopñ ar do co ceann tñp bliadna. Acht ip i tñpñ
 .i. aét agum ip ñe fearañno.

15 Fearañno ar an fapano fe a bunno a toraid gac ceathramad bliadain, so rñoinno toraid na mbeac ar do gu ceant tñp mbliadain, itñ fear bona in cñainno ocur fear a bairñ; ocur a toraid gac ceathramad bliadain tñp a bona, amail bepñ fear in bairñ toraid in cñainno gaca ceathramad bliadain, ip amlaio rññ bepñ fear 20 bona in cñainno toraid na mbeac gac ceathramad bliadain. Co na

For mñsa beoñatad & mñsa marbñatad see C1026f.

¹ A dead month. That is, a month in which there is no vegetation.

² If it be bees.—See Huish on the rearing of bees in the trunks of trees. "In Poland the laws are particularly severe against robbers or destroyers of this property (bees reared in the trunks of trees), punishing the offender, when detected, by cutting out the navel, and drawing out his intestines round and round the very tree which he has robbed."

"Varro is the oldest who mentions hives as a receptacle for the bee; since his time the form, as well as the materials of them, has been much altered, and they are to be found of all sizes and forms in different parts of the world." Huish, 2nd Edition, p. 52. See also pp. 412, 413, 414.

There is a case in which the bees settle first mainly swarming in the tree
Accordingly there is no fee for transferring & the land belongs to the bees.
& called bee-hive (B.)

two parts to the end of three years; but the produce <sup>BEE-JUDG-MENTS.</sup> belongs to the land out of which it grows. (on the 4th year) Pro via pen.

In the other three, i.e. the other three years. It is divided, i.e. it is fairly divided into two parts between the land in which he ~~sows his produce~~ originally, i.e. the land from which it grows; the fruit of the tree is equally divided into two parts to the end of three years, between the owner of the bottom of the tree and the man who owns its top, i.e. and its fruit every fourth year to the owner of its top. Whichever of the two parties, i.e. whichever of the two has injured the tree, i.e. by cutting it. He pays, i.e. they pay half 'dire'-fine to each other. According to the customs, i.e. according to the good or pleasant knowledge of the judgment of the trees. According to the rank, i.e. according to the nobleness of each tree, i.e. whether wild or sweet. Was established by the Feini, i.e. as it was established according to the 'Feinechua'-law.

it pays for fruit & its 'origin'

'causally breaks'?
(to con. being?)

If it be cutting, i.e. if it (the cutting) be made all round. It is paid for, i.e. it is paid for according to the high cutting of each tree which is of equally good kind, but it is not cut all round. Except what the 'nemed' frees, i.e. but what is freed of it by its being a 'nemedh' tree, for it is not according to the nature of the tree that this is, but according to the nature of the grade of the person who possesses it.

There is a time, i.e. there is a time when equal 'dire'-fine is paid for high cutting the round of each tree, and for cutting it all round at the bottom in a dead month. There is a time, i.e. there is another time, and it (the cutting) does not incur but one-third 'dire'-fine, i.e. two-thirds for its full round in a living month, or one-third for its full round in a dead month.

the cutting?

If it be bees, i.e. if it be bees that have taken up their abode there. They divide, i.e. they fairly divide the produce of the swarms between them into two parts to the end of three years. But the produce belongs to the land, i.e. I make an exception as to the land.

It is to the land out of which it (tree) grows originally that its produce belongs every fourth year (until the produce of the bees is divided into two parts to the end of three years), between the owner of the bottom of the tree and the owner of its top; (and its produce every fourth year is due to the owner of the bottom, in the same way as the owner of the top gets the produce of the tree every fourth year), so the owner of the bottom of the tree obtains the produce of the bees every fourth year. This is when the

"When bees were first cultivated in Germany, the hives consisted of excavated trunks of trees, which were placed perpendicularly in a row. In Spain they are formed to this day of an excavated trunk of box."

"In Russia the swarms are placed in earthen vessels, and in Provence and different parts of Italy, they are made of four planks well fastened together. In the latter country they are also made of the trunks of trees." Id. pp. 52, 53.

¹ To watch them.—See Huish's Treatise on Bees, 2nd Edition, p. 192. "To guard against the fallacy of these signs, the most prudent method is to keep or appoint a regular watch, from the hours of 9 a.m., to 3 p.m. Many persons select children for this original owner of the bees is not known; or, according to others, BEE-JUDG- this division is of the share of the owner of the tree, the owner of MENTS.

the bottom having previously taken his share therefrom. that is

The tribe of the land in bee-judgments is like the 'deirbhfine,' for in the bee-judgments the land which is next to them and which supports them is the 'derbhfine.' It is entitled to the first swarm gratis after three years. Of the other three lands that land of them which is nearest, which is of best produce, shall get the second. If they are equally near and if the produce be equally good, lots shall be cast between them to know who shall obtain the second swarm and the 'meraighe'-swarm; the fourth land shall make its claim, and shall get the first swarm after one year; but these lands are bound in the bright times when the bees send out a swarm, to send a man to watch them,¹ that the swarm may not escape; for if it should escape, they shall not be entitled to profits, and they shall support the bees to the end of another year.

The tribe of the land, i.e. the tribe is entitled to a share in the bees, in right of the land according to the judgments. Is like i.e. it bears it away after the likeness of the 'deirbhfhine'-division from the 'geilfine'-division. For it is i.e. for it is like the 'deirbhfhine' over the 'geilfine' in the judgment as to bees. The land which is next to them, i.e. the land which is nearest to them, which sustains them. It is i.e. this is that which is entitled to the first swarm gratis at the end of three years. Gratis, i.e. the force of 'gratis' is that it is not compulsory to cast lots. Of the other three lands, i.e. the land of them which is nearest and of best produce. It is i.e. it is it shall get the second swarm. If they are equally near, i.e. if they are equally near, and if their produce be equally good. To know who shall obtain, i.e. to know who shall get the second swarm. 'Meraighe'-swarm, i.e. who shall obtain the 'smeraighe'-swarm. The fourth shall make its claim, i.e. the fourth land ^{shall} until it obtains the first swarm at the end of the year after three years, or at the end of that very year. Are bound, i.e. I make a condition that this is incumbent on the people of these lands in the bright times in which bees send out swarms. To send a purpose, who are often led away by trifles, and thus the swarm, the chief profit of the proprietor, is lost to him."

² Bright times.—The bees generally swarm from the hours of nine till three in May or June, in England. Huish, 2nd edition, p. 189.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

a m be p'ep .i. go n'ab p'ep uatib oga nímcoimeo. U'p na ep'lat .i. ar na po elat na p'atí. U'p oia n'ep'lat .i. uair oia n'elat .i. in p'atí. Co cenno mblíat'ona aite h'ip'uch .i. ar t'pí b'liat'naib a'tap'ac in p'atí.

5 Cio po t'epa conno don tuine p'ea t'leagar in p'atí do coimet p'uno, ocur conno t'pí c'p'aino t'leagar t'pí coimet in c'p'aino. I'p e p'atí po t'epa, p'ep in c'p'aino z'eiber t'pí na m'beachí t'pí a beichí do b'p'eit l'eir, ocur coir z'emad he do c'coim'etad do; p'uno inoip'p'u, noca z'abano in tuine p'ea t'pí in p'atíhe a p'atí do b'p'eit l'eir, 10 a't co po cuip'their he, ocur coir z'emad é p'ém do coim'etad do.

Tuine p'eim ocur beich a'ge, nochot uillit beich ic l'ucht na p'earano i'p n'epa do. Ocur i'p'eó t'leagar de cam cuip'e, ocur mian z'alair ocur allab'p'uz nae, do tabairt do l'ucht na ceit'pí p'earano i'p n'epa do p'e p'e t'pí m'blíat'an; ocur coim'p'aino 15 p'atíhe doib i'p in ceit'p'umad b'liat'an; ocur i'p i coim'p'aino t'leagar doib .i. cet p'atíhe ocur tanairt ocur p'mep'aige. Ocur in c'p'ic doib i'p n'epa ocur i'p p'ep'pí t'op'ad i'p i beip'ep cet p'atíhe z'an c'p'and'car; ocur tanairt ocur p'mep'aige do b'p'eit do na t'pí c'p'ic'naib aile; ocur ma ta t'p'ib'p'oe c'p'ic i'p n'epa no i'p p'earpí 20 t'op'ad a ceile, i'p tanairt do b'p'eit'í t'í cen c'p'and'cur; ocur c'p'and'cur do cur i't'pí na da c'p'uch aile, ocur in t'í doib da p'ia't beith cam in b'liat'an p'in i'p cet p'atíhe do b'p'eit t'í, ar i'p gen c'p'and'cur; ocur in cam cuip'e ocur in mian n'ga— 30 lair, ocur in allab'p'uz nae do tabairt do l'ucht na ceit'pí p'earano i'p n'epa doib'p'um in b'liat'an p'in; ocur ino uair ber aimp'ep cora p'atíhe doib i'p p'eo t'leagar t'pí na m'bech a poc'ra doib'p'um n'ec uatib aca coimet ar na p'a elat. Ma p'a poc'air'p'um doib i'p'eó t'leagar doib a tabairt, ocur maine t'uzad, da n'elat na beic, nocon p'ul coim'p'aino p'atí doib in b'liat'an p'in. 35 Maó inoip'c'ud do n'eat l'uct na p'atí, i'p'eó t'leagar cam cuip'e ocur mian n'galair ocur allab'p'uz nae do tabairt doib p'e p'e t'pí m'blíat'an; ocur aenp'eac't cach'a b'liat'an t'leagar na n'eic'e i'p'eim. Main'e t'ear'n'ó'rat inoip'c'ud, a't nocho n'uil n'í doib'p'um an'p'í'oe, ar i'p'p' uat'ac' conoip'z p'pí poc'har'oe ceo.

¹ The second.—“A second swarm in this country is very seldom worth preserving through the winter, as the stock of honey which it collects is not sufficient to maintain it through a wild season.” Huish, p. 210.

Many. There is a note by the scribe here, partly illegible; he appears to have been Aedh, son of Coneubar (Connor), son of Gilla na Naemh, probably, of the MacEgan family of Brehons.

f C992, 1055

(O'K 1030)

Can. 71

man, i.e. that a man is appointed by them to watch them. Tha it may BEE-JUDG-not escape, i.e. that the swarm may not escape. For if it should MENTS. escape, i.e. for if they should escape, i.e. the swarm. To the end of another year, i.e. the swarm for three other years.

What is the reason that it is incumbent on this person to watch the swarm in this instance, and that it is the owner of the tree that is bound to mind the tree in the case cited below? The reason is, the owner of the tree obtains leave for the owner of the bees to take away his bees in this case cited below, and it is right that he (the owner) should mind them; but in this case, this man does not obtain for the owner of the swarm leave to take away his swarm, but that it be set, and it is right that he himself should mind it.

This is the case of a man who has bees, and the people of the lands next to him have not bees. And what is due of him is to give the 'Cain Cuisc,' the 'longing of disease' and 'allabrug nae' to the people of the four lands next to him for a period of three years; and the swarms are to be equally divided by them in the fourth year; and they are bound to make an equal division, i.e. of the first swarm and the second¹ and the 'smeraighe'-swarm. And the land of them which is nearest and of best produce shall obtain the first swarm without casting lots; and the second swarm and the 'smeraighe'-swarm shall be obtained by the other three lands; and if there be one of these lands that is nearer or of better produce than the others, it shall get the second swarm without casting lots; and lots shall be cast between the other two lands, and the one of them which happens to get nothing that year shall get the first swarm, for it is without casting lots; and that year it shall give the 'cain cuisc' the 'longing of disease' and the 'allabrug nae' to the people of the four lands nearest to it; and when it is time for their sending out a swarm, the owner of the bees is bound to give them notice to send one from among them to watch them (the bees) that they may not escape. If he has given notice to them they are bound to comply,^a but if he has not been sent, and if the bees depart unobserved and are lost, there is no division of the swarms for them that year. If the owners of the swarms have gone away (removed), they are entitled to receive but 'cain cuisc,' 'longing of disease' and 'allabrig nae' for a period of three years; and once in each year these things are due. If they have not departed, there is nothing due to the others then, for it is a case of 'few prevailing over many.'

^aIr. To give him.

C ar isaid huathadh .i. a llistar do bheith sein seivadh do feth there to zebson friana liston aile.
mad inscuchadh .i. ni bi tola tart ann doib do gres^{ach} a ninnseuchadh do dia bhadain no ar dleagar doibsin .i. coltdaile saithe.
las mli aca tarigilli ar an nath risadh eitir.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

Cach cpuch poucca a techta ni dligar de taipgille na rmachta, ar ipeo uatath in rain conoirg fpu rocharo [e] la Feine. Maó inpcuchud, ni dlegar ni doib acht cain chuirce no miann ngalar no allabpuig nae, ar dlegar doibream iap naib teopai bliadnaib saipe;
 1p iap ren ruid for a techta, *cip dune lapain^{Thun 8420} 1a (uru taupgille naipu olldate rmachta; 1p roma do ^{V272.9.} cach pecht oca mbet.^{manus ms.}

(C smachta .i. fordicta clona .i. saithi 7 cain chiusec 7rl.
 Las mli aca tarigilli .i. annadh risadh eitir

Ar techta .i. in paiti. Ni dligar de taipgille .i. geall da peneball. Na rmachta .i. na paithe. Ar ipeo uatath .i. a den paithe paim i naigro paithe imda ino fip eile. Maó inpcuchud .i.
 maó peneactar iad .i. upglan 1p an ceathramao bliadain. Ni dlegar .i. noco dleagar ni eile doib do na cpuchab. Ar dlegar .i.
 uair dleagar doib pin uaitib iap na bliadnaib imro i saipe. 1p iap 15 ren ruid .i. iap an tpep bliadain. For a techta .i. for in inpcuchud, no for in paithe. Cip dune .i. gib duine ruf naó upu geall torpneac, orpo .i. geall da rgnoball. Smachta .i. na paithe. 1p roma .i.
 1p po a mait, no 1p poeinta du gaé puct duine 1ga mro, no 1p rogo.

(1p di ruidilrib i mbechbnechaib la Feine cipe
 20 porpa ruipet occa collud, occa cumpcuchud, occa ngabail, occa ndecrin dapu portau in am in tochumlat.
 Etechta doib dan, cipe inruipet oc dul peccu iap na
 chonair, do neoch na dene olce nach annpict fpu; ar 1p epede fuil ailep (ailep ruid ino fip di mil porpaib-25 thep and, la fip o ta ruidiu naó po mapib in bech podmbi; ar ma po mapbthar ruid, aptet a cinaid amal cach.

C nad romarb in mbech podmbi cia astela som imorro dia fachtal a
 471. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000. 1001. 1002. 1003. 1004. 1005. 1006. 1007. 1008. 1009. 1010. 1011. 1012. 1013. 1014. 1015. 1016. 1017. 1018. 1019. 1020. 1021. 1022. 1023. 1024. 1025. 1026. 1027. 1028. 1029. 1030. 1031. 1032. 1033. 1034. 1035. 1036. 1037. 1038. 1039. 1040. 1041. 1042. 1043. 1044. 1045. 1046. 1047. 1048. 1049. 1050. 1051. 1052. 1053. 1054. 1055. 1056. 1057. 1058. 1059. 1060. 1061. 1062. 1063. 1064. 1065. 1066. 1067. 1068. 1069. 1070. 1071. 1072. 1073. 1074. 1075. 1076. 1077. 1078. 1079. 1080. 1081. 1082. 1083. 1084. 1085. 1086. 1087. 1088. 1089. 1090. 1091. 1092. 1093. 1094. 1095. 1096. 1097. 1098. 1099. 1100. 1101. 1102. 1103. 1104. 1105. 1106. 1107. 1108. 1109. 1110. 1111. 1112. 1113. 1114. 1115. 1116. 1117. 1118. 1119. 1120. 1121. 1122. 1123. 1124. 1125. 1126. 1127. 1128. 1129. 1130. 1131. 1132. 1133. 1134. 1135. 1136. 1137. 1138. 1139. 1140. 1141. 1142. 1143. 1144. 1145. 1146. 1147. 1148. 1149. 1150. 1151. 1152. 1153. 1154. 1155. 1156. 1157. 1158. 1159. 1160. 1161. 1162. 1163. 1164. 1165. 1166. 1167. 1168. 1169. 1170. 1171. 1172. 1173. 1174. 1175. 1176. 1177. 1178. 1179. 1180. 1181. 1182. 1183. 1184. 1185. 1186. 1187. 1188. 1189. 1190. 1191. 1192. 1193. 1194. 1195. 1196. 1197. 1198. 1199. 1200. 1201. 1202. 1203. 1204. 1205. 1206. 1207. 1208. 1209. 1210. 1211. 1212. 1213. 1214. 1215. 1216. 1217. 1218. 1219. 1220. 1221. 1222. 1223. 1224. 1225. 1226. 1227. 1228. 1229. 1230. 1231. 1232. 1233. 1234. 1235. 1236. 1237. 1238. 1239. 1240. 1241. 1242. 1243. 1244. 1245. 1246. 1247. 1248. 1249. 1250. 1251. 1252. 1253. 1254. 1255. 1256. 1257. 1258. 1259. 1260. 1261. 1262. 1263. 1264. 1265. 1266. 1267. 1268. 1269. 1270. 1271. 1272. 1273. 1274. 1275. 1276. 1277. 1278. 1279. 1280. 1281. 1282. 1283. 1284. 1285. 1286. 1287. 1288. 1289. 1290. 1291. 1292. 1293. 1294. 1295. 1296. 1297. 1298. 1299. 1300. 1301. 1302. 1303. 1304. 1305. 1306. 1307. 1308. 1309. 1310. 1311. 1312. 1313. 1314. 1315. 1316. 1317. 1318. 1319. 1320. 1321. 1322. 1323. 1324. 1325. 1326. 1327. 1328. 1329. 1330. 1331. 1332. 1333. 1334. 1335. 1336. 1337. 1338. 1339. 1340. 1341. 1342. 1343. 1344. 1345. 1346. 1347. 1348. 1349. 1350. 1351. 1352. 1353. 1354. 1355. 1356. 1357. 1358. 1359. 1360. 1361. 1362. 1363. 1364. 1365. 1366. 1367. 1368. 1369. 1370. 1371. 1372. 1373. 1374. 1375. 1376. 1377. 1378. 1379. 1380. 1381. 1382. 1383. 1384. 1385. 1386. 1387. 1388. 1389. 1390. 1391. 1392. 1393. 1394. 1395. 1396. 1397. 1398. 1399. 1400. 1401. 1402. 1403. 1404. 1405. 1406. 1407. 1408. 1409. 1410. 1411. 1412. 1413. 1414. 1415. 1416. 1417. 1418. 1419. 1420. 1421. 1422. 1423. 1424. 1425. 1426. 1427. 1428. 1429. 1430. 1431. 1432. 1433. 1434. 1435. 1436. 1437. 1438. 1439. 1440. 1441. 1442. 1443. 1444. 1445. 1446. 1447. 1448. 1449. 1450. 1451. 1452. 1453. 1454. 1455. 1456. 1457. 1458. 1459. 1460. 1461. 1462. 1463. 1464. 1465. 1466. 1467. 1468. 1469. 1470. 1471. 1472. 1473. 1474. 1475. 1476. 1477. 1478. 1479. 1480. 1481. 1482. 1483. 1484. 1485. 1486. 1487. 1488. 1489. 1490. 1491. 1492. 1493. 1494. 1495. 1496. 1497. 1498. 1499. 1500. 1501. 1502. 1503. 1504. 1505. 1506. 1507. 1508. 1509. 1510. 1511. 1512. 1513. 1514. 1515. 1516. 1517. 1518. 1519. 1520. 1521. 1522. 1523. 1524. 1525. 1526. 1527. 1528. 1529. 1530. 1531. 1532. 1533. 1534. 1535. 1536. 1537. 1538. 1539. 1540. 1541. 1542. 1543. 1544. 1545. 1546. 1547. 1548. 1549. 1550. 1551. 1552. 1553. 1554. 1555. 1556. 1557. 1558. 1559. 1560. 1561. 1562. 1563. 1564. 1565. 1566. 1567. 1568. 1569. 1570. 1571. 1572. 1573. 1574. 1575. 1576. 1577. 1578. 1579. 1580. 1581. 1582. 1583. 1584. 1585. 1586. 1587. 1588. 1589. 1590. 1591. 1592. 1593. 1594. 1595. 1596. 1597. 1598. 1599. 1600. 1601. 1602. 1603. 1604. 1605. 1606. 1607. 1608. 1609. 1610. 1611. 1612. 1613. 1614. 1615. 1616. 1617. 1618. 1619. 1620. 1621. 1622. 1623. 1624. 1625. 1626. 1627. 1628. 1629. 1630. 1631. 1632. 1633. 1634. 1635. 1636. 1637. 1638. 1639. 1640. 1641. 1642. 1643. 1644. 1645. 1646. 1647. 1648. 1649. 1650. 1651. 1652. 1653. 1654. 1655. 1656. 1657. 1658. 1659. 1660. 1661. 1662. 1663. 1664. 1665. 1666. 1667. 1668. 1669. 1670. 1671. 1672. 1673. 1674. 1675. 1676. 1677. 1678. 1679. 1680. 1681. 1682. 1683. 1684. 1685. 1686. 1687. 1688. 1689. 1690. 1691. 1692. 1693. 1694. 1695. 1696. 1697. 1698. 1699. 1700. 1701. 1702. 1703. 1704. 1705. 1706. 1707. 1708. 1709. 1710. 1711. 1712. 1713. 1714. 1715. 1716. 1717. 1718. 1719. 1720. 1721. 1722. 1723. 1724. 1725. 1726. 1727. 1728. 1729. 1730. 1731. 1732. 1733. 1734. 1735. 1736. 1737. 1738. 1739. 1740. 1741. 1742. 1743. 1744. 1745. 1746. 1747. 1748. 1749. 1750. 1751. 1752. 1753. 1754. 1755. 1756. 1757. 1758. 1759. 1760. 1761. 1762. 1763. 1764. 1765. 1766. 1767. 1768. 1769. 1770. 1771. 1772. 1773. 1774. 1775. 1776. 1777. 1778. 1779. 1780. 1781. 1782. 1783. 1784. 1785. 1786. 1787. 1788. 1789. 1790. 1791. 1792. 1793. 1794. 1795. 1796. 1797. 1798. 1799. 1800. 1801. 1802. 1803. 1804. 1805. 1806. 1807. 1808. 1809. 1810. 1811. 1812. 1813. 1814. 1815. 1816. 1817. 1818. 1819. 1820. 1821. 1822. 1823. 1824. 1825. 1826. 1827. 1828. 1829. 1830. 1831. 1832. 1833. 1834. 1835. 1836. 1837. 1838. 1839. 1840. 1841. 1842. 1843. 1844. 1845. 1846. 1847. 1848. 1849. 1850. 1851. 1852. 1853. 1854. 1855. 1856. 1857. 1858. 1859. 1860. 1861. 1862. 1863. 1864. 1865. 1866. 1867. 1868. 1869. 1870. 1871. 1872. 1873. 1874. 1875. 1876. 1877. 1878. 1879. 1880. 1881. 1882. 1883. 1884. 1885. 1886. 1887. 1888. 1889. 1890. 1891. 1892. 1893. 1894. 1895. 1896. 1897. 1898. 1899. 1900. 1901. 1902. 1903. 1904. 1905. 1906. 1907. 1908. 1909. 1910. 1911. 1912. 1913. 1914. 1915. 1916. 1917. 1918. 1919. 1920. 1921. 1922. 1923. 1924. 1925. 1926. 1927. 1928. 1929. 1930. 1931. 1932. 1933. 1934. 1935. 1936. 1937. 1938. 1939. 1940. 1941. 1942. 1943. 1944. 1945. 1946. 1947. 1948. 1949. 1950. 1951. 1952. 1953. 1954. 1955. 1956. 1957. 1958. 1959. 1960. 1961. 1962. 1963. 1964. 1965. 1966. 1967. 1968. 1969. 1970. 1971. 1972. 1973. 1974. 1975. 1976. 1977. 1978. 1979. 1980. 1981. 1982. 1983. 1984. 1985. 1986. 1987. 1988. 1989. 1990. 1991. 1992. 1993. 1994. 1995. 1996. 1997. 1998. 1999. 2000. 2001. 2002. 2003. 2004. 2005. 2006. 2007. 2008. 2009. 2010. 2011. 2012. 2013. 2014. 2015. 2016. 2017. 2018. 2019. 2020. 2021. 2022. 2023. 2024. 2025. 2026. 2027. 2028. 2029. 2030. 2031. 2032. 2033. 2034. 2035. 2036. 2037. 2038. 2039. 2040. 2041. 2042. 2043. 2044. 2045. 2046. 2047. 2048. 2049. 2050. 2051. 2052. 2053. 2054. 2055. 2056. 2057. 2058. 2059. 2060. 2061. 2062. 2063. 2064. 2065. 2066. 2067. 2068. 2069. 2070. 2071. 2072. 2073. 2074. 2075. 2076. 2077. 2078. 2079. 2080. 2081. 2082. 2083. 2084. 2085. 2086. 2087. 2088. 2089. 2090. 2091. 2092. 2093. 2094. 2095. 2096. 2097. 2098. 2099. 210

Every land which has ^{got} ^{it due} given what is lawful is not ^{entitled} bound to give additional pledge or 'smacht'-fines, ^{BEE-JUDGMENTS.} for that would be ^{is} a case of 'the few prevailing over ^{one thing which fights against (balance) many things} the many' with the Feini. If they depart there is nothing due ^{for} to them ^(ie. to the new neighbours) but 'cain cuise,' or 'longing of disease,' or 'allabruig nae;' for ~~these are due to them~~ ^{for exemption for 3 years} after the three years of exemption: it is after ^{is then [again] due to them (ie. the bees)} this he ^{they turn on} sues for his right, whoever he be that deems it ^{more fitting [to receive?]} easier to give additional pledge than 'smacht'-fines; it is for the good of every kind of person who has them.

What is lawful i.e. the swarm bound to, and additional pledge, i.e. a pledge of two 'screpalls.' Or 'smacht'-fines, i.e. for the swarms. For that would be the few, &c., i.e. his one swarm against the many swarms of the other man. If they depart, i.e. if they dispose of them by sale, i.e. ^{utterly} in the fourth year. There is nothing due, i.e. nothing else is due to them from the lands. For ~~these are due~~, i.e. these are due to them from the others, after the years during which they are in freedom. It is after this he sues, i.e. after the third year. For his right, i.e. for the departure, or for the swarm. Whoever, i.e. whatsoever person it be to whom it is easier to give a relieving pledge for them, i.e. a pledge of two 'screpalls.' 'Smacht'-fines, i.e. for the swarms. It is for the good, i.e. it is for his good, or it is ceded to every kind of person who has them, or it is a choice.

Of the innate rights in bee-judgments with the Feini are the cases of those whom they may injure while they are being destroyed, or removed, or taken, or in being viewed over thy dwelling at the time of their swarming. It is unlawful for them if they sting ^{have attacked} anyone in passing by them on his path, who does not ^{ind. rth. ?} do them harm or any thing illegal; for this is the blood which is entitled to a full meal of honey for the man who was stung in this instance, with proof from him that he did not kill the bee which stung him; for if he has killed it, its crime will pass like that of every other animal.

Whom they may injure; inflict a wound in destroying or killing them. Or removed, i.e. from any one vessel (hive) to another. Or taken, i.e. from tops of trees or from precincts. In being viewed, i.e. in viewing them over his habitation. At the time of their swarming, i.e. at the particular time

+ tabairt ar be natural form. of Hesper

read conid. tabairt, conid. dubant

The first case will apply to men, the 2nd to animals only?

C. amail mar .i. in coirann foirtar fairsan lestar amail foirdhar coirann fairsan conu no fairsan mura dus cia dib do taot iain cinaid mana aicthas occa .i. do tair selba na sealt fortuit mat ilselbu .i. brethemnas for indert anneo. Similiter in lestar i cinad in oen beich.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

beic parte do cup gu toic no gu luat. E techta doib .i. ip móligeo doib gibe poib no inoiraigeo is uil peacu pop in conair. Inpuirer .i. in topbae gu nairn. Na bene olcc .i. a marbta. Ann peet .i. amoiptidegaro garoi puu .i. bualat na cep. Cip ip epeo .i. uair ip ipioe puil aile part pip do mil mti. [Puil, potuinn.] Forgaib thep .i. pop a tabar anto in forgoih. La pip .i. la pip luige o naei feara .i. luige a oenur] ipm co nar marbarta pe in beac no gonarta e .i. pip pola no papaiste. Marbtha ip ro .i. aihail in cae ip uilep in uair a fogla, no amail each nob cecintaé, ocur ata uil in cinad anto.

1589 [E]

collective lestre (stokus)
no time read lestar
sig. of do-huit

na E caocha E a ^{asuidhe} aile ^{ED} cogrand E 10 ma puil no chaecha, ip ipioiu aile co epann pop in letrai naile, cip letrai dia choth dib an tec a piach. Cip ip i cetna bpeth in po cet anaceo cetarugadh E im chinta bech pop conall caech caechrite bech. Dach pi tempach comidubart appa plant. Tobert a chin pop 15 in pep batap bech, noch ip i bpeth inro bpetha la ultu ocur finiu imbi. Cip ip ipioiu aptet rochard cinad noenfir nad popuch atata uile, la fene; amal mapt popiecar la cona no mucca no cethrae, no pep gonath
a acht pluarz mar, nachro la miter aupthuch na 20 porthuch pop nech painpedach, dipenar in pep uadab uile, no do rochriathar uile inoile. ^{7 dno}

2 pretense fo-fechas?
fo-echas??

no form w. artist them
as consuetudinal present??
not be do-rochra?

(u. es wird nicht gewagt) ein Hegschwören nach Zueschwoen nachd. lamiter und sie wagen es nicht collect examples

for worth

Ma puil .i. ma puil caechar riao. Ipp ipioiu .i. ip an aei eada ipm aipitnigro pe cup epaino pop na leartarib uile. .i. pop na cearab. Cip letrai .i. gibe leartaib uil toiter anto. Cip tet a piach .i. tuirto na piach .i. cep ipm caechar rin (na beic). Cip ip i cetna bpeth .i. uair ip i peo cet bpeat pugao pop conall do caech-tar. Dach pi tempach .i. peim no inoiraigim cona a ruge tulac naibno do bpe. Comidubart .i. gur cuipio he ar a laitemnar.
Tobert a chin .i. tugao a chin pop an peap as a nabarap beich ina

"I say"
Cechin (usually for arch)
also not understood + add no indecision "oh I see now"

Post. 5. Mail Loh.
Coralial (R.T. 642-644-645)

Terminus post quem?
d. 1405 234

1 Blood on the skin.—It is doubtful whether the word "potuinn," which is on the right hand margin of the page in the MS., was intended as a gloss on "puil."
2 Conall Caech.—For Congal's charges against Domhnall, King of Temhair, see Battle of Magh Rath, published by the Irish Archaeological Society, Dublin.
673 674-680. K. of Ulster AV. In saga he is called Congal daen. of III 88.
Acco saga, a bee had stung him as a child.

Confusion

e dorenar uadait uile .i. cin laimhe ind oenfir do erice ~~stapra~~ each chuicir inid rochra do-rochraib uile iain cinad. Similiter cano et uilo. no margin na beich

that the bees send forth 'swarms soon or quickly. It is unlawful for them, i.e. it is unlawful for them if they attack any one in passing by them on the way. They sting, i.e. the profitable worker with a weapon. Who does not do any harm, i.e. killing them. Or anything illegal, i.e. the illegality of stealing as regards them, i.e. to strike the hives. For this is the blood, i.e. for this is the blood which is entitled to as much honey as is sufficient for a man, i.e. blood on the skin.¹ Who is stung, i.e. on whom the stinging is indicted here. With proof, i.e. with proof by oath from that particular individual, (i.e. oath by him alone), that he did not kill the bee which had stung him, i.e. a test of bloodshed or violation. For if he has killed it, i.e. like every animal that is forfeited at the time of its crime, or like every vicious beast of first crime, which is itself a sufficient payment for its crime.^a

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

*with proof (see C.C.P.)
The gloss in brackets thinks he can swear alone*

^a Ir. And payment of its crime is in it.

If it be an eye ^{if} that has been blinded, it is then required that lots be cast upon all the hives, and on whichever of the hives it (the lot) falls, it shall pay the fine.^b For this was the first judgment passed first concerning the crime of a bee in respect of Conall Caech,² whom a bee had blinded. ~~The king of Temhair came and removed him from his kingship.~~ He charged the man who owned the bees with the injury, and this is the judgment which was passed by the Ulstermen and the Feini respecting it. For it is in this instance, the many become accountable for the crime of one, although they all have not attacked, according to the Feini; as a beef which is torn by dogs or pigs or cattle, or a man who is wounded in the van^c of a great army, when no test or proof is found against a particular person, the 'eric'-fine incurred by the one man is paid by them all, or they all are forfeited.

be forfeited

^b Ir. The fine goes upon it.

And he was King
The king of Temhair

torn by found by among

^c Ir. At the breast

If it be an eye, i.e. if it be an eye they have blinded. It is then required, i.e. in that particular case, it is required that lots be cast upon all the vessels, i.e. upon the hives. On whichever of the hives, i.e. whatever hive it (the lot) shall fall upon. It shall pay the fine,^b i.e. the fine shall fall on it, i.e. the hive of which the bees have caused the blinding. For this was the first judgment, i.e. for this was the first judgment which was passed in respect of Conall whom they had blinded. The king of Temhair came, i.e. I insist or maintain that he dwells on a royal delightful hill. Removed him from his kingship, i.e. that he was deposed from his chieftainship. He charged with the injury, i.e. the fine for his injury was charged against the man who had the bees in his possession. This in abatement for that bees

BEE-JUDG-ments. 11
 אַרְיִטוּ. Noch iſt i b'reth, .i. ſeid im conat i ſeo b'reat ruſat' as ultaib ime. Clari iſt i ruſitu, .i. uar iſ an a'eſat iſin, .i. don b'reat ocup don e'aeat tet itir pocharde, .i. in cer uil i cinat in aenſir, .i.
 in aen bech. Socharde, .i. in paſe no in cer. Noenſir, .i. in 5 beac do poim in cae'at. Hat poruchatatat, .i. ocup no'or ruatnageſat uil do reiſ ino ſene'at. Amal mart, .i. amal mart eirſtir go na conab. No cethrae, .i. co na ceatrab. No ſer ſonſir, .i. no in ſear ſontar a ucht pluas moir, im co'pant, no cumtabairt cia t'ib; no conit uilear a marbat itir pop ocup t'ime, iſr nelot cirt. La miter, .i. ocup no'ot laimtenach. Aupthuch, .i.
 10 uaral'ear tuſat' ſena nach uat'ib do ponat. Forthuch pop nech raino'pe'ach, .i. im'enanix por nec t'ib go ru'p'at'ach. T'ipenar
 .i. itar in ſear uat'ib uile on t'pluag, no o na ropat. Rochp'athar
 .i. in pa'it.

15 Ու արսն քօք Բրիթեմնաւ 1 մեծ Բրեթաւ Եւ
 Եւթեղա չափե քանն հարաւ_նեմիւ, յաի ու արս Եւմ ին քանիւ քօ Եւ ին նեմիւ, յա արս Եւթա Եւթ-իւրիւ.

20 Oligio per do daetet, ²ber bunadach doib, trian a doiraio co cenid teopa mbliadan, acht ir onid nemud
a nimcoimet; ocur ir deolaid a trian tic per mbunaid;
a trian naill do nemud i puidigthe; a trian naill do thir da melat. O tha na teopa bliada ni olig per mbunait cuir inoib aet imachta doheoch ma puatharat 25 orsgain a tpe. n saiy

11. ἄρῳ .ι. ποθὸν ὑπὸ λῆμ ἰ μὲρ τετταρ ἡ ἀ μὲα ἰ νὶ ρα παρ ἀνὶ ρωμαῖο. Ὑεχ τετεχτα .ι. βειε τετταρ ἀτ πο ἀνε ἰ μβυ κρῶο παρὰ νεμῖο πλάτα πο ελαρα. Ἠαχ ἡν ἄρῳ ἀ βειμ .ι. ποθὸν ὑπὸν βειμ ἰν κρῶον οἶα βυν. Ρο βιτ .ι. πο οἶσιν ἰν νεμῖο ἀρ ἀ κρῶο
 ε. Ἠα ἄρῳ .ι. ποθὸν ὑπὸ ἀ τυαρ λυγυο ἀρ ἡ ἀ μὲα.

¹ The tree. Huish remarks that bees kept in an apiary in the vicinity of the woods, when they send forth their swarms, have always a propensity to lodge themselves in a tree, which is in their vicinity, because it is their natural and primitive habitation—2nd edition, p. 194.

Crevecaur thus expresses himself:—

"One of the problems most difficult to solve, is to know when the bees will swarm, and whether the swarm will remain in the hive provided for them, or is the judgment, i.e. I maintain that this was the judgment which the Ulster-men passed concerning him. For in this instance, i.e. for it is in this particular case, i.e. concerning the judgment and the blinding, it goes among the many, i.e. all the hive for the crime of the one man, i.e. of the one bee. The many, i.e. the swarm or the hive. Of the one, i.e. the bee which caused the blinding. They all have not attacked, i.e. they all did not attack Conall according to the 'Fenechus'-law. As a beef, i.e. as a beef which is found with the hounds. Or cattle, i.e. with the cattle. Or a man who is wounded, i.e. or the man who is wounded at the van of a great host, as regards casting lots, ~~until it is determined~~ which of them; or it is lawful to kill them, whether vicious beast or man, after eluding justice. When no test or proof is found, i.e. and when there is no proof positive. Test, i.e. noble testimony denying that it was by them it was done. Or proof against a particular person, i.e. a proof against one of them in particular. Is paid, i.e. the crime of the one is paid for by them all, i.e. by the host, or by the vicious beasts. Or they are all forfeited, i.e. the swarm is forfeited for the crime of one bee.

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

or there is a doubt (?)

It is not easier for Brehons in bee-judgments to decide concerning ^{tricks} bees that have taken up their lodging in the tree¹ of a noble dignitary, with respect to which it is not easy to cut the tree on account of the 'nemedh,' nor is it easy to release them.

The man who ~~has watched~~ them, who is their original owner, is entitled to one-third of their produce to the end of three years, but they are to be minded by the 'nemedh'-person; and the third which reaches the original owner is as a gratuity; the other third is due to the 'nemedh'-person in whose tree^a they fix themselves; the other third is due to the land on which they feed. From the three years ^{whom.} out the original owner is not entitled to any share in them except 'smacht'-fines^{to him} if they should come to trespass on his land.

tricks
captives?^a Ir. With whom.
228 1/2, 271-2

It is not easier, i.e. I do not consider this easier in the judgments of the bees than what we have mentioned before.^b Bees that have taken up, i.e. bees which have taken possession of a place or lodging in the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' of a chief, or of a church. It is not easy to cut the tree, i.e. it is not easy to cut the tree at its base. On account, i.e. on account of the 'nemedh' whose tree it is. Nor is it easy, i.e. it is not easy to release the bees therefrom.

^b Ir. The thing before us.

escape to establish themselves in the cavity of some tree; for when, by means of their emissaries, they have chosen themselves a retreat, it is not possible to retain them in any hive which you may select for them"—ib., p. 194.

(who is able to keep up with them)

The man, &c., is entitled, i.e. the man who accompanied them in their flight and overtook them is entitled. Who is their original owner, i.e. who is their original possessor. One third of their produce, i.e. the third of their produce to the end of three years belongs to the owner of the bees. But by the 'nemedh,' i.e. I make a condition that it is by the 'nemedh,' by the owner of the tree, they are to be minded during this period. It is a gratuity, i.e. the third part which comes to the original proprietor is considered a gratuity; the force of the word 'gratuity' is, that he is not obliged to mind them. The other third, i.e. the other third is due to the 'nemedh'-person with whom they fix or settle themselves, i.e. the owner of the land. The other third, i.e. and it is not while they are known bees in the trunk of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person; although they are accounted for the land, it is not it that gets this third part but it is the 'nemedh'-person. The original owner, &c., i.e. the original owner is not entitled to any share in them, i.e. the owner of the bees. Except 'smacht'-fines, i.e. the swarms, or 'cain cnisc.' If they should come, i.e. this is so if they should come to trespass on his land, if they have bees to trespass on the other land.

BEE-JUDGMENTS.

J.S. 2516

As to known bees³ in the trunk of the tree of a noble 'nemedh' two-thirds of their produce are due to the owner of the tree, and one-third to the owner of the bees to the end of three years, and they (the bees), are the property of the owner of the tree⁴ from that out.

As to doubtful bees in the trunk of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' three-quarters of their produce are due to the owner of the tree, and one-fourth to the doubtful owner of the bees to the end of three years, and they belong to the owner of the tree from that out.

As to known bees in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' one-third of the produce is due to the owner of the tree, and two-thirds to the owner of the bees to the end of a year, and they belong exclusively to the original owner of the bees from that out.

As to doubtful bees in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh,' one-half their produce is due to the owner of the tree, and one-half to the owner of the bees to the end of a year, and they belong to the owner of the bees from that out; or according to others, it is to the owner of the tree they belong.

house, but the bees pursued it with so much acrimony, that it mounted the stairs of the first story, and burst into a room full of company, to whom it was no doubt an unwelcome visitor"—p. 191.

³ Known bees. This commentary is found on the lower margin of the MS., p. 23, and that which follows, on the top margin of same page.

⁴ Owner of the tree. Huish says that in Poland the inhabitants have no regular bee-hives; and he adds, "Every peasant who is desirous of rearing bees, goes into the forest or district belonging to his master, without even his leave, makes a longitudinal hollow aperture or apertures in the trunk of a tree, or in the collateral branches, about three feet long, one foot broad, and about a foot deep, into which he

c no maigin in neimud .i. argeit som sonnadh no lus.
inge mad nech na dama coirde .i. in mathair in ein no in tathair. cid eiseide .i. in fer aduat inngaire inna mathar yel.
duine oirghe .i. ma beith clann leo leis do ecail dochmu 7 jorta dia neis.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

Beic eagra i mbun crainto i rí nemiú, leat dír in crainto, ocur leat dír na mbeac su ceant tpi mbliadán, ocur i rí dír dír in in crainto iad o ta rin imac.

Beic cunta baptaá i mbun crainto i rí neimú, ocur leat ocur octinaó 15 rir in crainto, ocur leat genmoá octinaó 15 rir na mbeac su ceant tpi mbliadán, ocur i rí dír dír in crainto o ta rin amac.

Fer o nelat beic imais i rí dír tic reo. In tan atber, cin bech cin con, cin cethra, imoala in chranthachar rin nama, ocur naga nimtoala comcínat do beith doib fo chutrumma.

V 318. 12 f.

O'Dow. 7/13

p. 24

Ni aru araille bech tectechta gaibte bapn nemiú, no maigin, no bpat pcartha; ar cain dimet ind nemiú ni da darpet, Acht .u. neludais da chuirin la fene, na dim nemiú de na duine; bech do coirlet, ocur taio-cu poindil, ocur eolodais fine, fer airm deirg, ben arlu a cain lanamna, ocur ben no fer arlu gairi
 a mathar/no athar, inge mad nech na dama coir iad pta tairde; cid epide ni dim nemiú de na duine in neoch ma foraccba) duine oirngne dier rpi mbi coir do tinctuth.

l. arafoyna
(as in V)

f. 11 mbi

Beich tectechta gaibte bapn nemiú, no maigin, no deposits his bees, leaves them some food, but pays very little further attention to them, until late in the autumn. When after cutting out some of their honey, and leaving the remainder for their maintenance, he secures the aperture properly with clay and straw against the frost and inclemency of the approaching season. These tenements, if they may be so called, with their inhabitants, and the produce of their labour, then become his indisputable property: he may sell or transfer them; in short, he may do whatever he pleases with them; and never is it heard that any depredation is committed on them, except by the bear.—Vid. note², p. 170, supra.

As to known bees in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'- BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.
person one-half their produce is due to the owner of the tree, and one-half to the owner of the bees to the end of three years, and they belong to the owner of the tree from that out.

As to doubtful bees in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'- person, one-half their produce and one-eighth go to the owner of the tree, and one-half, except one-eighth to the owner of the bees to the end of three years, and they are the property of the owner of the tree from that out.

To the man from whom bees have escaped abroad this properly applies. When it (the law) says "the crime of bees, the crime of hounds, the crime of cattle," this has reference to the casting of lots only, and not to the co-balancing of crimes between them in equal proportion.

It is not easier in this other case to decide concerning bees that have taken up their lodging in the top of the tree of a 'nemedh'-person, or in the field, or on the spread sheet; for the 'nemedh'-person well protects what comes to him,² except seven fugitives, mentioned by the Feini, which the 'nemedh' of God¹ or man² does not protect: bees that have migrated, and a wandering thief, and a fugitive from the tribe, a man who has stained his weapon with blood,^a a woman who has fled from her matrimonial contract, and a woman or man who has fled from maintaining his mother or his father, unless he (the father) is a man who has not ceded justice after he has stolen goods;^b for with respect to this no 'nemedh'-person of God or man protects the man who has left plunder behind him which should have been returned.

*don't fairwind ?
do not nemedh
to-air-neh ?
or to-air-to-keh*

^a Ir. A man of a red weapon.

^b Ir. After 'reds' of theft. 2CP 16, 271
bathe

As to bees that have taken up their lodging in the top of the tree of a 'nemedh'-person, or in a field,

¹ 'Nemedh' of God, i.e. the ecclesiastical dignitary.

² Of man, i.e. the lay chieftain.

co cen mbliadna [4] rannat i euidiu eturru no marbaid madh flos le ne beth eturru dana beos.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

brat pcartha, ailid nemed tpuan topad co cen^o mbliadna, in da tpuan aile do ppr do^odaetec berr bunaidach doib, acht ip o puioiu a nimcomet, ap ip deolaid a tpuan tice an nemed.

mi chli

5 11 aru .i. no^oconfuru apale, gne eile, no ni hura in ni p^oeo, Teactae-chta .i. beic teactaro ait no arde(na in ni romaino. Darr nemed
.i. craino uapail neimio. No maigin .i. ap na muigib amuic. No brat pcartha .i. no brat do pgaileo ap a cino, ocur p^oair tairp^oit.
Dimet .i. airneio leat co noicheno in nemed in ni tic cuige por a 10 comarpe. Acht .uii. .i. na .uii. neici elaid and, do cain in^odeara no in^oipin into fenecharp. Dech do coiplet .i. poxlaid amac .i. tocharlaid uad. Taid cu poindil .i. in garaipe .i. in ti bip por pamelaid gin inoile, amail com, ap gac in^oad i ninao. Eolodaig .i. in ti elor co ninnle a oligeo corura fini. Per airp^o deirp^o .i. pear deapgar a 15 claidem ipin cuic iarp an marbad deirp^o. Den arlu .i. in bean elar a piagail in laniannair. Den .i. ingen. Per .i. mac. Mather
.i. don mnai. No athar .i. don ip.

in derge...

h

||C 2317

Ma ta teactugad ap a claido no ap caelac na caelle, ocur nocon uil por a beacairb, ip beic eap^o i mbun craino ipil 20 neimio do piagail p^ou. Ma ta teactugad por a beacairb ocur nocon uil ap a claido no por a caelac, ip beic cuntabartaia i mbarr craino ipil neimio da piagail pu.

(0.61035)

Ipad ip bun and, gac uair nae petar a neatarp^ogarad gen leapad in craino. Ipad ip barr and, gac uair na petar a 25 netarp^ogarad gen leapad in craino.

Comraino tri mbliadan por b[eaacairb] bona digref, ocur comraino bliadna por beacairb barr. Ceatpaimte a do^oda berer cuntabairt o p^oir beac do^ogref, g^oro i mbun g^oro i mbarr gabard.

30 Gaibte barr .i. gabat i mbarr craino uapail neimio. Ailid nemed .i. airp^oitigro in neimio, pear in craino, tpuan a topad go ceano mbliadna; co cen^o teora mbliadan cach topad imach in tan ip bun gabat; co ceano teora mbliadan cach topad amuich ocur ip do or on a spread sheet, the 'nemedh'-person is entitled to the third part of the produce to the end of a year, the other two thirds are due to the man who caught them and who is their original proprietor, but they are to be minded by him, for the one-third given to the 'nemedh'-person is a gratuity.

¹ By killing.—A word in the gloss here is illegible.

It is not easier, i.e. this other case is not easier; another version, or this thing is not easier. Their lodging, i.e. bees that have taken possession of a place or habitation; this is not easier than the case before ^{Top of the tree of a} 'nemedh'-person, i.e. of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person. Or in the field, i.e. in the fields abroad. Or the spread sheet, i.e. or a sheet which was spread out^a before them, and on ^{which} they rest. Protects, i.e. be it told by thee that the 'nemedh'-person protects the thing which comes to him under his protection. Except seven, i.e. the seven things which abscond, and which the 'Finechus'-law mentions or recites. Bees that have migrated, i.e. that have fled away, i.e. that have gone away from him. A wandering thief, i.e. the stealer, i.e. the person who is wandering without cattle, like a stray hound, from one place to another. A fugitive from the tribe, i.e. the person who absconds with cattle from the law of 'Cornu-fine.' A man of a red weapon, i.e. a man who reddens his sword in the territory ^{by killing.}^{b1} A woman who has fled, i.e. a woman who runs away from the rule of matrimony. A woman, i.e. a daughter. Man, i.e., a son. Mother, i.e. of the woman. Or father, i.e. of the man.

^a Ir.
Loosened.

It is red after the slaying?
^b Ir. After the red killing.

If his trunks or branches of the wood have been appropriated, and his bees have not, they are regulated by the case of "known bees" in the trunk of a tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person." If his bees have been appropriated, and his trunks or branches have not, they are regulated by the case of "doubtful bees in the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person."

"Trunk" means, whenever they cannot be separated without tearing the tree. "Top" means, whenever they can be separated without tearing the tree.

A division for three years is always made of "trunk" bees, and a division for one year of "top" bees. Doubt always deprives the possessor of the bees of one-fourth of his share, whether they take up their position in the trunk or in the top.

Bees that have taken up their lodging in the top, i.e. they take a position in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person. The 'nemedh'-person is entitled, i.e. the 'nemedh'-person, the owner of the tree, is entitled to one-third of the produce to the end of a year; when they take up in the trunk, he shall have the third of each produce till the end of three years; to the end of three years each produce

^a "Known bees."—See p. 183, supra.

(02: later istud etc. Verschlussener Raum)

² Are seen to come. The second gloss is by another scribe, and so are several more in the tract.

antāad is perhaps a technical term for the fee due to land or buildings for "enclosing", i.e. sheltering objects. (in case of antāne deposit also?)

(in case of antāne deposit also?) 4 Top 62.4 MS 125. 4th Nov. 7, 22

abroad, when it is in the tops they settle. The other two-thirds i.e. the other BEE-JUDGMENTS. two-thirds go to the man who has accompanied them. Original proprietor, i.e. the person who is their original owner. But they are to be minded by him, i.e. I make a condition that it is by this man they are to be minded during this period, i.e. by the original proprietor. For it is a gratuity, i.e. it is as a gratuity the third which becomes due to the place is considered, i.e. to the owner of the tree; the meaning of 'gratuity' is, that he is not obliged to mind them.

(OF THE INCREASES OF (interest on) PLEDGES.)

where there is following In judgments concerning tree-top and field to a Tr. of which they (bees) migrate, except in case of a high 'nemedh'-person; they (the owners) are entitled to this gives a claim to the fourth of their produce to the end of a year, unless they migrate from the territory, for every land in which they settled is entitled to a ~~share~~.

Judgments, i.e. this is a judgment which is passed between the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person, and the field of an humble 'nemedh'-person on the one side, and the owner of the bees on the other. Of top, i.e. on the tops of the trees of the humble 'nemedh'-persons, i.e. of the Feini grades. Of field, i.e. on the fields abroad. To which they migrate, i.e. to which a swarm of them migrates quickly, i.e. to whichever of them they are seen to come.² Migrate, i.e. to which they remove. Except of a high 'nemedh'-person, i.e. except the high 'nemedh'-person, it is not he that I mention. The force of the 'except' here is, because it is the fourth part these get, i.e. the humble 'nemedh'-person, i.e. what is given to the noble 'nemedh'-person for bees taking up in the top of his tree is the same that is given to the grades that are lower for their taking up in the trunk of a tree of theirs. This also applies to the field of the humble 'nemedh'-person, if they are doubtful bees, i.e. two-thirds go to the man outside (the claimant), because it is the field of an humble 'nemedh'-person it passes to the next division.

As to known bees in the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person, the fourth part of their produce belongs to the owner of the tree, and three-fourths to the original owner of the bees to the end of a year, and they are the property of the owner of the bees from that out.

As to doubtful bees² in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person, one-half of their produce less by one-sixteenth belongs to the owner of the tree, and one-half and one-sixteenth to the owner of the bees to the end of a year, and they are the property of the owner of the bees from that out; or, according to others, they belong to the owner of the tree.

² Doubtful bees, i.e. apes quorum de proprietate non satis constat.

a/ce cenn teora mbliadan .i. mar baid no rannait 7. bit eturra bees.

is coir bunad .i. is ann is coir domad na mbech do bith occlus

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

Cethramthain .i. muno roo ocur beic pera i mbarr crann ipil neimio. Neoch man ro oipcet .i. inni ipin, man ro inoipce pao i crie eile, no do cum a crie buoin; aet a mbe ipin crano, ap in crano, ip ann ata pin. Man ro oipcet .i. mana elat ap a tip rim gin a 5 tapraetain ann; dia nelat, ni olis rim ni. Cip do lisi .i. uair olisi gaet fearano oib pin¹ aoi roao² do do neoc fuioisep no pamaister illeat rip, .i. mann ro ocur beic pera a mbarr crann ipil neimio.

O'Juv 101

cf. Bre p. 64

Ferⁱⁿ metet paithe na bi laip co pinnathar maigin in puidgetar, trian di thip rip a puidgethar, trian do 10 rip do daetet, trian do letpur o at elat ber bunadach doib.

~ sanread in other ? alone

cf. in t. d. d. d. d. d. 192. 14

Fer a nelat bech rochlamechar^{inotol} poigull motat in paithe hi tip a chele inⁱⁿ iduithib cor a paithe, c Conpolaet eturru ih de in paithe ren, cach torao co 15 cenn teora mbliadan, acht ip in tipe inpuioisep ap coip bunad a tuipen.

? O. h. cuir?

Fer metet .i. fear meitcep no comaitcep paithe na bi laip buoin.
Co pinnathar maigin .i. su pinnan re in tinad i fuioisep pao.
Trian di thip .i. beic feara i mbarr crann uapal neimio pin, 20 ocur trian do pin in crann, ocur da trian do pin na mbeac, ocur leat a doach o pin na mbeac ap tobach ap in ceatramao crie nuntieps gen gabail mara; ocur gao leath e ip trian, ocur gao trian ip leat.
Trian do rip do daetet .i. trian don rip bir na comitcet, ocur in he in pat, aet ap a tobac .i. leat cota rip bunao do ap a lenman, 25 trian do letpur .i. trian do na leatpamb o nolan pao. Ber bunadach .i. vineoch ip fear bunao doib.

Fer o a nelat bech .i. peidim no inoipasim conao laimtinac leip poigell inoemha conao leip in paiti na maiteptar i fearano neic eile. In mbuithib .i. inobar do cuipetar a beic rium in paithe ap 30 ano rit in paithe amuic. Conpolaet .i. poailet eaturu an do in paiti pin, in nemeao ocur fear in bunao, uair ip cuintabairt. Cach torao .i. a torao su ceano tri mbliadan.

¹ Known-bees, i.e. identified bees.

² It is one-half. If the owner of the bees is entitled to half their produce when they fled away, the levyor is entitled to one-third of that half; but if the owner is only entitled to one-third, the levyor gets one-half of that third.

The fourth, i.e. this is the same as known bees in the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person. Unless they migrate, i.e. this is the case, unless they passed into another territory, or into their own territory; when they were in a tree, out of a tree, it is then this is the case. Unless they migrate, i.e. unless they escape out of his (the 'nemedh'-person's) territory without being overtaken; if they so escape, he (the nemedh-person) is entitled to nothing. Is entitled, i.e. for every land of those in which they fix themselves is entitled to whatever has been ordained or settled respecting it, i.e. this is the same as the case of "known bees in the top of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person."

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

As to a man who watches a swarm which is not his own, until he discovers the place where they settle, one-third of the produce is due to the land in which they settle, one-third to the man who ~~has~~ watched them, and one-third to the hive from which they have fled, and which is their original one.

A man from whom bees escape ~~can~~ offer proof that he observed the swarm in the land of his neighbour at the time of the departure of his own swarm. They divide that swarm in two between them as to every produce, until the end of three years, but the right to their young offspring belongs to the land in which they settle.

ZCP 13, 299

for the 2 centuries

A man who watches, i.e. a man who ~~has observed or watched~~ a swarm which is not his own. Until he discovers the place, i.e. until he learns the spot in which they settle. One-third to the land, i.e. these are known bees in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person, and one-third is due to the owner of the tree, and two-thirds to the owner of the bees, and one-half of his share is taken from the owner of the bees for levying in the fourth unfriendly territory, without an arm of the sea intervening; and though it be one-half that is due to the owner of the bees, it is one-third, and though one-third, it is one-half.² One-third to the man who ~~has watched~~ them, i.e. one-third to the man who has accompanied them, and this is not the cause, but he gets it for levying, i.e. half the share of the original owner is due to him for following them. One-third to the hive, i.e. one-third to the hives from which they escape. Which is their original one, i.e. which belongs to their original owner.

tracks (?) or accompanies

A man from whom bees escape, i.e. I maintain or insist that he can offer evidence of proof that the swarm is his, which he ~~watched~~ into the land of another person. At the time, i.e. it was at the time when his bees were sending forth their swarm that the other swarm ran away. They divide, i.e. the 'nemedh'-person, and the original owner divide that swarm between them into two parts, because there is a doubt. Every produce, i.e. its produce to the end of three years.

Tracked?

nach laimethar nech luga .i. ar is ainbli leis nech ni na bi fia sikel fei gheir nimmithar .i. ar ni fo cia saithi dib savoruth foriaht ann

BEE-JUDG- Meht ir in tpe .i. aetairim, ir oc fir ino fearaino i fuirigter no
 MENTS. ramairter iad ir coir in tuirir fin da beir; a bunuo fear in craino.

? R

.i. Ho laimether rað co noechatar a beich irin tpe, ocuf in laimethar forsell ar imtir na beich no euatar uad ramnerð;
 5 ir aipe ir leat irin, ocuf ir a mbun mbarr iril neimio, no ra mbarr uafal neimio, leat do dais irit beich chuntabairta; ir in ramn ir/neram do do euat la cunotabairt.

(0'01037)

Mað airim i mbi immed mbech noch ar pulla raithe
 cacha leartar, nach laimethar nech lui zu bed lair 10 motat raithe doeit hi thir comairich ber comoccur doib uile, conpotat eturru uile lethoruo in tairi ren co cenn teora mbliadan, a lethoruo naill hi tir
 i fuirigther, in na laimether forsell na airthiuch bid
 nech intairnpuadach. |

Sulz. 'which he follows'
 do-eit
 w-m-hag-
 Th 627.

15 Mað airim .i. imio beich imoa. Nochar pulla .i. peidim no imoraigim sup ela raithe ara gað leartar dib.

.i. Leartar ilarða do barar imuis and rin, ocuf no elo raithe ar gað leartar dib, ocuf ruit raithe dib i fearaino in comicis ir comairais doib, ocuf noco near coich dib he, ocuf 20 beich eara i mbun craino iril neimio iad, ir leath dir craino, ocuf a leat doibrium uile, ocuf comairnnet e po comairne.

Lui zu bed .i. a luii gonao leir in raiti no aitcepar a fearaino in comicis ir comogor doib uile. Conpotat .i. ir caein potailto na comairis aturru uile leat torað in raithe zu ceanp tri mbliadan.
 25 Lethoruo .i. leat torað eile. Hi tir i fuirigther .i. ir ne fear ino fearaino i fuirigter no ramairther he, .i. do barr nemio uafail, uair ir cuntabairt; ocuf ronn ar do a torað eturru co cenn tri mbliadan, ocuf a mbreit dir craino o ta rin amach. In na laimether
 .i. noco laimethac leo forsell imdenma na uafal teartufoð pena comio 30 ne neac dib e zu funpuad. Forsell .i. o na comichib. Na airthiuch .i. o fir barr.

(0'01038)

¹ By doubt.—If the man who claimed the bees could prove that they were his, he would be entitled to one-half their produce; but when he could only show a probable reason that they were his bees, he is only entitled to one-third of their produce; i.e. he goes from half to the next division, i.e. one-third in consequence of the doubt.

² Known bees; i.e. it is known to what apiary they belong, although the particular hives from which they migrated have not been identified.

But it is in the land, i.e. I make an exception, that it is the owner of the land in which they settle, or are arranged, it is right that these swarms should belong; the original (stock) belongs to the owner of the tree. BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

That is, he dares to say that his bees went into the land, but he dares not to offer evidence as to these being the particular bees which escaped from him; this is the reason that it is one-half (that is due to him), and it is in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person, or in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person, that one-half is due to him because they are doubtful bees. He goes to the next division to it by reason of the doubt.¹

and If it be ~~in~~ a place where many bee-hives^a are kept, ^{a Ir. Bees. 2CP 13, 299} that a swarm has flown from each hive, and he (the claimant) dares ~~not~~ swear that the swarm is his which he found in the land of the neighbour who is ~~nearest~~ ^{nobody} to them all, they (the neighbours) all divide between them half the produce of that swarm to the end of three years, the other half of the produce is due to the land in which it (the swarm) settles, in respect of which one dares not to give evidence or test that it belongs to any one in particular. ^{equally near}

If it be in a place, i.e. where many hives of bees (a large apiary) are kept. That a swarm has flown, i.e. I maintain or insist that a swarm has flown from each hive of them.

That is, there were many hives abroad then, and a swarm escaped from each hive of them, and a swarm of them was found in the land of the neighbour who is nearest to them, and he does not know to which of them it belongs, and they are known bees^a in the trunk of the tree of an humble 'nemedh'-person, one-half is due to the owner of the tree, and the other to all the others, who divide it in equal proportions.

Swear that it is his, i.e. to swear that the swarm is that which he ~~watched~~ ^{and} traced into the land of the neighbour who is equally near to them all. They all divide, i.e. the neighbours fairly divide between them all the produce of the swarm to the end of three years. The half produce, i.e. the other half of the produce. The land in which it settles, i.e. it belongs to the owner of the land in which it is fixed or settled, i.e. in the top of the tree of a noble 'nemedh'-person, for it is a case of doubt; and the produce is divided in two between them to the end of three years, and the owner of the tree shall have them (the bees) from that forth. In which one dares not, i.e. they do not presume to proffer evidence of proof or noble testimony of denial that it (the swarm) belongs to one of them in particular. Evidence, i.e. from the neighbours.^b Or test, i.e. from the owner of the top of the tree.

p.25

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

105.17
I 238.12

Fer fonguib fpuith mbech hi faithchi techta. 177
in faithchi techta la Feine ni no raig guth cluice no gairm caibiz cepte. Cluic cethramethaia a thopaio co cenn mbliadna do fir fonguib, na teopa cethramtaia 5 aile do faithchi hi fogbaithep.

Faithchi techta, .i. ind oipio no indraiger guth in cluic do eclair .i.
raice fpuite na mbech. Gairm caibiz .i. do bhuigao ocuf piteo.
Cluic .i. aipulnigro re ceatramte a thopaio gu ceant mbliadna don fir do geib he .i. maine mo na trebair bliadna ind acu, ir ceatramte 10 oip pite, ocuf mara mo, ir let. Do faithchi .i. do fir na raice .i.
fagabap he.

cf. C991=C347

Tri bhuige nuz, rot, ocuf dhrainn, ocuf muir. Trian do do nech do cuirtheap muir, ocuf nomao do a cuir pitha a cele doneoch fonguib a dhrainn. Dileap do dan do neac fogabap 15 for rot, aet cuir pitha do nech fonguib, man feartap fear bunao.

romuir C991

Fer fonguib fpuith mbech hi faithchi techta;
mao iapmota bliadain, leth do fir fonguib, leth naill do faithchi hi fogabap. (case to do 2r.) in comp. sometimes gab- means like beid

[C991, 882

[u]

20 Fer fonguib fpuith mbech in neoch mao fechtap faithchi co raice nuz mar, no ecmacht, no dhrainn, trian do fir fonguib, da trian do tir hi fogbaithep.

acc. (for inge)

Fer fonguib fpuith mbech hi nuz, no dhrainn, no 25 ecmacht, ir dilep dhrainn, ar ir oen nuzler la Feine, acht cuir nuz fine, ocuf cuir neclaire fpuir a mbi audacht, noch 177 a cuirpide trian ar cach triun, ar c trian do gairm triun .i. do flath a triun flatha; trian do eclair a trian eclair. do lais om trian fine fadheisin

Of a man who finds a stray swarm of^a bees in a lawful green. The lawful green with the Feini is the space as far as the sound of a bell or the crowing of a hen-cock is heard. The fourth of the produce to the end of a year is due to the man who finds them, the other three quarters to the green in which they are found.

Lawful green, i.e. the space which the voice of the bell reaches for a church, i.e. the green in which the bees are found. The crowing of a cock, i.e. for the 'Brughaidh'-farmer and the poet. Is due, i.e. one-fourth of the produce to the end of a year is due to the man who finds it, i.e. if they have not more than the security of a year, it is one-fourth that is due to the finder, and if they have more, it is one-half. To the green, i.e. to the owner of the green in which it is found.

The three commons of a king are, a ~~road~~^{wood land & waste land}, a mountain, and the sea. The third of what the sea casts ashore is due to him, and the ninth part is due to him, of his tenant's finding-share of what he gets on a wild place. Whatever is found on a road is his inherent right, unless the original owner is known, except the finding-share (reward) to the finder.

As to a man who finds bees in a tree^b in a lawful green; if it be after a year,¹ one-half is due to the man who has found them, the other half to the green in which they have been found.

If a man who has found a settlement of bees^c outside a green in a place that reaches as far as a great wood, or a lake, or a wild place, one-third is due to the man who has found them, and two-thirds to the land on which they are found.

If a man has found a hoard of bees^d in a wood, or a wild place, or a lake, it is his own lawful property, for it is one of the innate rights with the Feini, except the share of the head of the tribe, and the share of the church to which he makes his will,^d whose share is one-third out of every third, for

¹ After a year; i.e. when the bees have been lodged there for a year.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

new-plural

na conderbathar eclair na fine dineoch dopuillet a membur.

15 Hí faithechí .i. dár línó ip bílroa itao ip an faicéi pea. Maó iarmota .i. maó iarann a aicéi na bliatna do gabar he. Leth naill .i.
5 a leat eile do fip na faicéi i pagabar e, da éi anplogio air a beít bliatann ina [f]aicéi sen pagbail do, no gin a cuairt do cup.

10 In neoch .i. in ní rin maó faicéar aicéi do gabar e itip faicéi ocup dipainó. Ruó .i. na cailleat no fíó. Ecmacht .i. in laéa. Dipainn
.i. in fíeibe. Trian do fip foongab .i. trian don ip do gab e.
10 Da trian .i. da trian do ip ino epainó i pagar e.

Trian dip ríte ant, maine mo na trebairé bliatna, ocup da trian maó iar mbliaóain; no, go na beít aít trian ant* do gner, uair ní inoipeann leabur a deitbir, go pe mbliaóain go iar mbliaóain.

15 Hí ruó .i. a cáille. Dfipainn .i. in fíeibe. Ecmacht .i. in laéa
.i. loáa bel pet. Ip oilep .i. ip oilep don aei feaóá ipin. Ar ip oen
.i. uair ip oen do na heapnalib ip no oilep rein do rein ino fenecháir.
Ach euit naige fine .i. aít in curo beper in nogai bir donó fine
.i. plait geline a dualgur cennaéta .i. in daerpiat. Cuit neclaire 20 .i. in curo ata don eaglaip ip bir antopin pe uoáit. Noch ipri .i. reicím cona í curopíóe. Trian ar cach triun .i. trian a haen trian don caé rin, in nomaó. Ar na conderbathar .i. ar na cainoiubathar ino eglar no ino ine do neoó aipitnigio o mballab.

25 Trian a doóac fíuítí o daerpiat eagalra do an eclair, ocup
o daerpiatib plata do lait, gu ruó no ecmacht no dipainó, ocup
ix. maó maó aínopíóe; ceipainíte a doóac o faerpiat eagalra deaglaip gu ruó no egmaét no dipainó, ocup aili decmaó aínopíóe; ocup noóo nuil ní o faerpiatib plata do lait.

¹ A year's security.—That is, if the bees have been there for less than a year, undiscovered.

² No book; i.e. no original text.

³ Loch Belsed, now Lough Muskerry, in the Galty mountains, and on the south

a church or a tribe are not to be defrauded of what they merit from their subjects. they subjects may earn BEE-JUDGMENTS. —

In a lawful green, i.e. we think that they are ancient trees that are in this green. If after a year, i.e. if it is after the year it has been found. The other half, i.e. the other half goes to the owner of the green in which it is found, if it be legally proved against him that it has been a year in his green without his discovering it, or without his instituting a search for it. making an examination ('circuit') of it. He must to punish him for unlawful Englishness

In a place that it reaches as far as a great wood, i.e. this is the case when it is found outside a green between a green and a mountain. Wood, i.e. of the wood or forest. Lake, i.e. of the lough. Wild place, i.e. of the mountain. One-third to the man who has found them, i.e. one-third to the man who found it. Two-thirds, i.e. two-thirds to the owner of the land in which it is found.

One-third is due in this case to the finder, if there be not more than a year's security,¹ and two-thirds if after a year; or, according to others, there is never more than one-third, for no book² mentions any difference, whether it be before a year or after a year.

In a wood, i.e. of his forest. Wild place, i.e. of the mountain. Lake, i.e. of the lough, i.e. Loch Belsed.³ It is his own, i.e. it is lawfully the property of that particular person. For it is one of the innate rights, i.e. this is one of the class of things which are innate rights, according to the 'Fenechus'-law. Except the share of the head of the tribe, i.e. except the share which the chief of the tribe obtains, i.e. the 'geilfine'-chief in right of his headship, i.e. the 'daer'-stock. The share of the church, i.e. the share which is due to the church of the man who is making his will. Whose share is one-third, i.e. I maintain that this is its share. One-third out of every third, i.e. one-third out of every third to him, i.e. the one-ninth. Are not defrauded, i.e. for the church or the tribe should not be defrauded of what they are entitled to receive from their subjects.

One-third of his finding share is due from the 'daer'-tenant of a church to the church, and from the 'daer'-tenants of a chief to the chief, as far as a wood, or a lake, or a mountain, and one-ninth if it is in these places the swarm is found; one-fourth of his share is due from the 'saer'-tenant of a church to a church, of all things found in the green until it reaches to a wood, a lake, or a mountain, and it is entitled to one-twelfth of a swarm found in these; but there is nothing due from the 'saer'-tenant of a chief to a chief.

boundary of the parish of Templeineiry, barony of Clanwilliam, and county of Tipperary. It is locally believed to be bottomless. For a curious legend concerning it, see Leabhar Breac, fol. 111, col. b.

BEE-JUDG-
MENTS.

q II 332.25f

Canar a ngabar ino aile dec, uair nac inoirtio liubar?
1r ar gabar, amais ir e trian a cotaic ata o daermanac easala do eagla, ocur o daerpeilb plata do lair, su ruo no esmaic no diraino, ata uaitib i ruo, cubaid deirde gemaic 5 he trian na cotaic ita o foermanac easala da eagla su ruo no esmaic no diraino, do beic uaitib i ruo pon cumā cetna
.i. aile dec.

(O 1040)

Trian a triun dogra o daermanacib ocur o daerpeilb ar na rriuthib fogabait i necmaic; ar annaict doib in baile ara 10 tucrair ir aipe ir bec beara uaitib. Manir ruo no dirainn no ecmaic, ir trian rriuth na ndaermanach do eclair ocur na ndaerpeilb do laith. Maō daermanach imorru, ir ceathramuin rriuth fogabait dia neclair manib ruo no 15 cuiced rann dec do eclair, aic ri. Maō ri imorru, ir trian ar in treot ir uairle fogab, ocur ceathramu ar caic reot olcena.

Dech bite illugbair no i liur, aipe ^{cu}rodaiothla no rodaigatta, dirpen re amal bit a treb roinaicad, ar 20 roiruidigchi i comdipe la reine.

Dech bite illiur no lubur, it comdipe rri reotu trebe.

|| C 2201f.

masc!

Dech bite i rathche, aipe ^{ca}rodaiothla no ^{ca}rothla, dirpenar lan dipe. Ra ruidiged ron la reine hi 25 comdipe rri la huasal neimthiu cethra.

¹ As far as a wood. "Here, let it be remarked," says Dr. O'Donovan, "that the words 'gu rudh,' i.e. 'as far as a wood,' are technically used to express 'things found in the plain,' and 'i rudh,' things found in the wood (i.e. the wood at the extremity of the plain or green), a condensation of language not to be matched in any other language." The word 'ecmaic' may mean 'a difficult place,' though it is once glossed, 'a lake,' in p. 197.

Whence is the twelfth derived, as books do not mention it? It is derived from this, as it is one-third of his share that is due from the 'daer'-tenant of a church to the church, and from the 'daer'-tenant of a chief to the chief of a swarm found in the green as far as a wood,¹ or a lake, or a mountain, that is due from them (of a swarm found) in a wood, &c., it is right from this that it should be a third of the share that is due from the 'saer'-tenant of a church to his church of a swarm found in the green as far as a wood, or a ~~lake~~, or a mountain, that should be in like manner due from them of a swarm found in a wood alone, i.e. one-twelfth.

One-third of a third is always due from the 'daer'-tenants of church lands, and 'daer'-tenants out of the hoards^a which they get in a lake; it is on account of the difficulty of the place from which they brought them, that but little is taken from them. If it be not a wood, or a mountain, or a lake, one-third of the find of the 'daer'-tenants of church lands is due to the church, and of the 'daer'-tenants to the chief. But if they be 'saer'-tenants of church lands, it is one-fourth of the finds which they discover that is due to their church, if it (the place) be not a wood, or a lake, or a mountain. If it be a wood or a mountain, it is one-twelfth or one-sixteenth part that is due to the church, except from a king. But if it be a king, it is one-third out of the noblest 'sed' which he finds, and one-fourth out of every 'sed' in general.

As to bees that are kept in an herb garden, or in an enclosure, whoever takes away from or steals them, pays a fine as if he had ~~stolen~~^{brought} them from a house, for they are fixed to the same 'dire'-fine by the Feini.

Bees which are kept in an enclosure or herb garden, are of the same 'dire'-fine with the 'seds' of a house.

As to bees which are kept in a green, whoever takes away, or carries them off shall pay full 'dire'-fine. This has been fixed by the Feini to be the same² as for the noble 'nemedh' cattle.

^a The same as. Literally; "This has been fixed by the Feini as equal 'dire'-fine with the noble 'nemedh' cattle."

BEE-JUD-
MENTS.

Beich bite rechtaí raíche, cipe roðapoxla no roðogata dipenar lanðipe no ruioigeo i comðipe la feine
rri lu cethra.

Dech bite .i. muig. 1luir .i. tall. Cipe .i. im ní de. Rothla
5 .i. ní de cpiatpab. Ho roðagata .i. ime uile na ceta. Dipen re
.i. eipno reipnoic enecclann ant, amail bit ar in tis no gata. re iat, im lan ðipe, ocur im lan enecclann. Ar roþuioigethi .i. uair no ruioigeo cutpamap enecclainde to reip in eimechaf ip na beaib bite ip in lir tall.

10 Ho luburt .i. no ip in lubgort muig. It comðipe .i. it cutpuma rin im enecclann rir na reoib bir aige ina tíg, amail cleite na nect-pant i maigin co na gabail for paeram ip rir.

Dech bite i raíche .i. dia mbeaigat beapari amac a claithe no a muine .i. i maigin ðigona .i. leit enecclano innta la lan ðipe.
15 Rothla .i. im ní de cpiatpab. Roðapoxla .i. ime uile. Dipenar lan ðipe .i. iat re lan enecclann im cetaípa, a ceathar i naen ocur leiteimeclann. Lanðipe .i. cethepe a naen. Ro ruioigeo .i.
no ruioigeo iatpibe to reip in eimechaf i cutpumap enecclainde rir na ceatpab uairle no ip luga bir as a neihed uapal im leit enecclann. Ni 20 comðipe .i. lan inrib a maigin.

Sechtaí raíche .i. re ðetberap beap no cuipet amach iat roðapoxla .i. im ní de, no dia cpiatpab. Ho roðagata .i. ime uile. Dipenar lanðipe .i. iat re lan enecclano innta im cetaípa
.i. cethepe a naen. Ro ruioigeo .i. no ruioigeo iat i cutpumap 25 enecclainde to reip in eimechaf rir in ceatpa ip lu a maigin im leit-enecclano innta .i. caipus a tpi inrib, ocur .uui-mat neneclainnto .i. lan enecclann ip na beaib i lir, ocur i lubgort, ocur i raigéi, ocur leat i maigin, ocur .uui-mat reactar maigin.

(651041) | Mar a lir no a lubgort no gatait na beich, ip lan enecclann ;
30 mar a raichi, ip leit enecclann ; mar a reactar raíche, ip .uui-mat neneclainnto, gto maigin rin gto rechtaí maigin, gto cutpumap lui gto cutpumap clethe. Ho, ðan cena, acht mar a maigin, ocur ip cutpumap cleithi ip lan enecclano. Mar a chutpumap lui, ip leith enecclano. Mar a reactar maigin ocur ip cutpumap 35 cleite, ip leith enecclano. Mar a cutpumap lui, ip .uui-mat nenecllainnto, ocur ceithri ceta ðipi, ocur ceir aigean a in caé cetaí in caé innta ðib rin.

¹ Abroad. 'Imuig,' here and elsewhere may mean; 'in an open field,' as distinguished from an enclosed place.

As to bees which are kept outside a green, whoever carries them off or steals them shall pay the full 'dire'-fine, which has been fixed by the 'Feini' to be the same as for the small cattle.

BEE-JUDG-
 MENTS.
 —

Bees that are kept i.e. abroad.¹ In an enclosure, i.e. within. Whoever takes away, i.e. as to any part of it. Takes away, i.e. a part of their combs. Or steals, i.e. as to all the hives. He pays, i.e. he pays honor-price for it, as if it were from the house he had stolen them, as to full 'dire'-fine, and full honor-price. For they are fixed, i.e. for equal honor-price was fixed according to the 'Fenechus'-law for the bees which are in the enclosure within.

Or herb garden, i.e. or in the herb garden outside. Are of the same
 'dire'-fine, i.e. they are equal as to honor-price to the 'seds' which he has in his house, such as the prime beast of externs taken into a precinct under protection and with thy knowledge.

Bees which are kept in a green, i.e. which are brought out for feeding to a mound or a shrubbery, i.e. ~~an inviolable place~~, i.e. half honor-price is due for them with full 'dire'-fine. Takes away, i.e. as to any part of the combs. Carries off, i.e. as to them all. Shall pay full 'dire'-fine, i.e. he shall pay full honorprice as to four things, from four to one, and half honor-price. Full 'dire'- fine, i.e. four to one. Was fixed, i.e. these were fixed according to the 'Fenechus'-law to the same proportion of honor-price as the noble cattle or the smaller cattle belonging to the noble 'nemedh'-person with respect to half honorprice. The same, i.e. full 'dire'-fine for them in an ~~inviolable place~~.

Outside a green, i.e. these were also sent out through necessity. Whoever carries them off, i.e. as to any part of it, or of their combs. Or steals them, i.e. as to the whole. He shall pay full 'dire'-fine, i.e. he shall pay full honor-price for them as to four things, i.e. four to one. Which has been fixed, i.e. they were fixed in the proportion of honor-price according to the 'Fenechus'-law to the smallest cattle in a precinct with respect to half honorprice for them, i.e. sheep as far as three for them, and the seventh of honor-price, i.e. full honor-price for the bees in an enclosure, and in an herb garden, and in a green, and one-half in a precinct, and one-seventh outside a precinct.

If the bees are stolen from an enclosure or an herb garden, it (the penalty) is full honor-price; if it be from a green, it is half honorprice; if from a place outside a green it is one-seventh of honorprice, whether that be a precinct or outside a precinct, whether equal to small or equal to large cattle. Or indeed, according to others, if it be from a precinct and in proportion to large cattle, it (the penalty) is full honor-price; if in proportion to small cattle, it is half honorprice. If from outside a precinct and in proportion to large cattle, it (the penalty) is half honor-price. If in proportion to small cattle, it (the penalty) is a seventh of honor-price; and four hives as 'dire'-fine and one hive as compensation, are due for every hive in every instance of these.

BER-JUDG-
MENTS.

p. 26

Dech tetechta pep potacoirle di magin inruirige thar, po teol ocur tairde, rochpintar/fair, ni imdich cia beth cuir do indib; dipen re de po choibne co tabar techte di magin dian da foxlaitep.

read dian da foxla
or dia foxlaitep

5 If forpund no ruirigchi dech b'petha la peine.

Dech tetechta .i. beic teactant ar no ait. Pep potacoirle
.i. pep foxlar leir iad dan inat i ruirigter iad. Po teol .i. toigleámana garoi bunat. Tairde .i. uicelta iartain. Rochpintar .i.
ocur da pintar air e. Ni imdich .i. nocon eimironeno gein fiachu 10 garde uad ge beic cuir do indib, co na neqcaire, ma nac amach iat gan fir dir in peraino, go leir pen iat, no co tueta in noimo buo coir oppo.
Dipen re .i. eirno pde fiac garde ar po cobintur amail na beac cuir do indib, co na neqcaire. Co tabar techte .i. co tabar, re a uizgeó dir ino epaino o foxlaitep iad [.i. 5. nigeno re].

15 Ni nimdich ge beic cuir do indib; in aithgin ocur lan dir leo uile a etrocar. Maó troccar imorpo, ir uir a cota pen do, ocur do pen lan dir la cuir in fir aile; no gin dir uad la cuir pen, ocur ir lan dir uad la cuir ceili.

20 Duini fuaragair ppeti beac aró rin, ocur fiac garoi ata indib, uair na deapna a neqgaru, ocur da neqgarpo iad, da biad cuirig ppeti do.

¹ From which they have been taken away. The Irish enclosed in brackets, at the end of the words thus translated, is in the MS., but it is unintelligible.

As to a man who takes away settled bees from the ^{precinct} ^{where they are settled, by larceny and theft,} ^{health} ^{and} ^{when} it is found out against him, it shall not shelter him that he has a share in them; he pays in proportion until he has given what is lawfully due to the precinct from which they are taken away.

It is on this bee-judgments have been based by the Feini.

Settled bees, i.e. bees that have taken possession of a lodging or place. A man who takes away, i.e. a man who takes them away with him from the place in which they are fixed. Larceny, i.e. ~~this~~ ^{is} original theft. Theft, i.e. hidden afterwards. It is found out, i.e. if it be known respecting him. It shall not shelter him, i.e. it shall not shelter him from the payment of fines for theft, even though he should have a share in them or be the owner of them himself, and that he has made proclamation respecting them, if he has taken them out without the knowledge of the owner of the land, or until he shall have made the just division of them. He pays, i.e. he pays fines for theft at the same rate as if he had no share in them, and had not given notice. Until he has given, i.e. until he has given his due to the owner of the land from which they have been taken away.¹

It does not shelter him that he should have a share in them; restitution and full 'dire'-fine for them all² is the severity of the law in this case. But if leniency be allowed, he has full right to his own share, and he pays full 'dire'-fine with the other man's share; or, according to others, he pays no 'dire'-fine for his own share, and full 'dire'-fine with his neighbour's share.

This is the case of a man who has discovered a find of bees, and fines for theft are due for them, because he did not give notice, for if he had given notice of his having found them he would get a finder's share.³

² For them all; i.e. for all that he took away, for his own as well as for his neighbour's.

³ A finder's share.—The tract ends imperfect here. A fragment of a glossary on the subject of bees, supposed to be a part of the Senchus Mor, will be found in the appendix. For the mode of taking bees in distress, vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 2, p. 121, and for sundry regulations as to injuries done by and to bees, vide vol. 3 of the same work, pp. 433-439.

COLONIALS

RIGHT OF WATER.

A. H. 2.15. p. 1a-26a.

A. H. 2.15. p. 26a-28a. (O'D. 4, 47-58) Text

B. H. 3.18 p. 398a (C 892) 2 excerpts

B coibne .i. confine cach ced la .i. la tuisceh din cuairt 7 is co cenn sechtmiaine in cuairt muilinn sech cach crich .i. sech cach fir tara reth in tuisce. tar tri tise 7 immorro cid mo do thirib tara reth nis mbat acht tri la nama .i. confodhluthar abarrou in fuiscedar .i. in tuisce .i. is lind amail beo mblo fosesam .i. fosesithar nech inn 1 in orla .i. adrdaim nama o beuib 7 ni raod ratha fine aire 7 ni nataim aige fine immorro indio sin iaram coma dfeisthar 14. (coibnius uisc1, 7.) tri seotu isan cor mbel.

RIGHT OF WATER.

Coibnius uisc1 toiridne hi pinteab zruain arapa tairinidher; ar ipre coibnius uisce tairidne la peine 7 ipre ara toiridnicher; ar ipre on ailer cach cet la deolaid rech na cricha olchena; ar ni conper cat e bunad ind 5 uisce, aet a tip ara tairidnicher; ipr aruidiu fupr-
9 onpangatar na la aile dar tairidne berrod neppom; 2 rear beda
10 iarpuidiu, do cet indfine ar beolu deirbfine, ar ipr innfine 1 pinteab zruain a tip 1 fupritcher; ar iprui-15 thiu la peine in foeram andfen ol dar a tip ar a tair-
10 idnicher, ar ipre ailer tri la deolaid rech na cricha olchena, amal ber poerrma. Ar ata poerram la 20 peine nad aili 7 acht tri roctu ar a cupu bel, fo bith 4. 5. 1192 nandaru dichenlaid cor mbel iphneoch mapalatar 6. 10. 1192
21 cen1 do pacbail leo neoch mapalatar, acht noe cupu 6. 10. 1192
25 achatharchbecta la peine, cia raitep, hiteiride na dalet 6. 10. 1192
(pine) Fine potapoccap pouich fupr (na) dabruid rochaite, ar ni techta nach poerram ar na tegat patha fine, ocur nad popngara aige fine; ar dichenlaidet cach chop cen paith fine la peine.

(stuck in later!)

¹ The three nearest lands.—See O'D., 1025 and 1028, for a more distinct reference to these divisions of the tribe lands. The word translated three here, as the sense requires, was written originally in the M.S. 'tipr,' but the i has been obliterated.

² Nine contracts.—For the regulations on the subject of contracts, vide The 'Corus Bescna,' in vol. 3 of The Ancient Laws of Ireland.

* acc. to Red. II 236f. (8546) it was orig. a 'gemeinkeltische Regel' that in rel. clauses where the rel. particle represents the subj. (it always does w. the copula!) the vb. was in 3 sg. But the 3 pl. of copula always found in O.Ir. when the antecedent is pl. (indict's pronouns 1 & 2 pl.

RIGHT OF WATER.

Kinship on the basis of drawn water in the family relations of land

THERE is equal right to the water drawn through the tribe lands due to the lands out of which it is drawn; for thus the right of drawn water is adjusted^a by the Feini. The land out of which it is drawn is entitled to have each first day (i.e. Monday) gratis in preference to^b the other districts in general, for it is not known where the source of the water is, except that it is assumed to be the land from which it is drawn; after this the remaining days are distributed over the three nearest lands;¹ after this, the 'innfine'-land goes before the 'deirbhfine'-land, for in tribe lands the 'innfine'-land is the land in which it (the water) is detained in a pond; for the land in which it is detained is nobler with the Feini than the land out of which it is drawn, for it (the pond lot) is entitled to three days of gratuity in preference to^b the other lands, ~~like the custom of 'foessam.'~~ ^{as if it were} For there is a 'foessam' with the Feini that does not deserve but three 'seds' for his verbal engagement, on account of the ~~difficulty~~ ^{impropriety} of dissolving a verbal engagement by which, when perfected, anything was or was not left to them, except *in the case of nine contracts*² which are dissolved by the Feini, though it is said, these are they whom the tribe does not recognise. The tribe proclaims them because the many do not approve of them, for no 'foessam' is lawful which is not supported by sureties of the tribe, and which is not proclaimed by the head of the tribe; for every contract is dissolved by the Feini which has not^c surety of the tribe.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

^a Ir. This is the.

^b Ir. Beyond

abschrift

ZCP 16. 271

because it is not proper to dissolve contracts, if they have been concluded without leaving something to that for which they have been concluded

^c Ir. Without.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

Coibniur .i. ata coibníur no comtoicir don ine irin uirce cairngitir anto, a duallgur into eapáinto dān cairngitir e. Ar irpe coibniur .i.
 uair ipe coibníur no comtoicir into uirce cairngitir anto do neir into fenechair. Ar ipeo on ailer .i. uair iriríde apulnigir in ceto la oi 5 in deoladairne reat na fearanta oléana. Ipe curu in deolad, nocon eigan oi cranocur. Cach cet la deolad .i. cet los do ar tur .i.
 deolad leir ahaba in tuirce do tabairt ar, no, ipe curu a deolad, nocho necen a taéal. Ar ni conper .i. uair noco neap éat. íhí bunad eile 10 icon uirce aet in fearanta ara cairngitir e .i. ar in tobair. Ipp aruioiu
 .i. ir ara nai eada irin theimnigir na laici da luét na tri fearanta ip neir doib .i. iar tabairt laithe do tocur. Iarpuioiu .i. iar tabairt luath do tocur. Do cet in o fine .i. ar iapine .i. in lino. Ar beolu .i.
 15 rua tirub no in tir o tocur su lino. Deirb fine .i. in linn. Ar irri in fine .i. air ip íhí cormailiur na ínoini ar iapini i piníuirdéib into fearanta. Tir i fuirritheir .i. fearanta i fuirritheir .i. in lino, in tuirce. Ar irruithiu .i. uair ip uairi da neir into fenechair in fearanta i fuirritheir no i pothangir. In poerram auo pen .i. in lino. Oloar a tir .i. oloar in fearanta dān a cairngitir e in oir o tocur co lino.
 Ar irpeo ailer .i. uair ip in apulnigir tri la oi in deoladairne 20 reat na fearanna eile ceana. Ipe curu in deolad, Amal ber .i. amal ber in mic poerram. Ar ata poerram .i. uair ata mic poerram da nairnerento in fenechur, ocu noco nairulnigir se aet tri reocu .i.
 tri ba ar treabairt su coir o belaid o ruzaid co na comgradaib da mic poerram da zeilne no da deirbne dān bpaigir piní ocu dān poerram 25 reatba in fearanir .i. poerram gairt flatā dān bpaigir piní ocu dān ceann poerram reatba. Pobith .i. fon rat nocon upura sein ní da ceangal doñti riri tabair treabairt su coir o belaid. Inneoch .i. do neoch rin mar a cuiret e. Cen .i. gen ni dagbail acu co na magab poerram. Neoch .i. vigneo rin mar a cuiret e .i. (marā íru litiu.) 30 Ach noe curu .i. ar na hualib coraib ip taitmeat .i. cor moza, cor manais, cor mic beoathar, cobce do bāet, cor bairt rri gae, cor da bān gin a cele, cor doirce, cor merce, cor omnia. Cía raiteir .i.
 eia ímpaiteir iat. Niteiríde .i. ir iat rin ocu nocon aōa lenar in iní iat marpatā. Fine poapocair .i. bit into piní ga rirpogna.
 35 Pouith .i. fon rat bit in foairde ga rirpogna (coraite a taitmeat). Ar ni techta nach poerram .i. uair nocho oliged in in mac poerram da gabail muic maini decrat treabairt don iní rir in los na gairt do tabairt do. Nao forngara .i. mana rab in toga bir don iní ga porcongor. Ar tichenglaiteir .i. cin nar ceanglaiteir gae cunrat 40 sein treabairt anto da neir into fenechair.

¹ The force of gratis is. The remainder of this explanation is lost.

There is equal right, i.e. there is equality of right or inherent right due to the tribe in the water which is drawn, in right of the land over which it is drawn. For thus the right is adjusted, i.e. for it is the equality of right or inherent right to the water that is drawn that is here treated of, according to the 'Fenechus'-law. Is entitled to, i.e. for it is this land that deserves to have the first day gratis (i.e. by way of privilege) before the other lands in general. The force of 'gratis' is that it is not obliged to cast lots. Each first day gratis, i.e. it is entitled to every price first, i.e. it is gratis to it on account of the water being led from thence, or, the force of the 'gratis' is, it is not necessary to dig for it. For it is not known, i.e. for it is not known where there is another source for the water except in the land out of which it is drawn, i.e. from the well. From which, i.e. it is from this particular thing the other days are distributed to the people of the three lands that are nearest to them, i.e. after giving a day to the well. After this, i.e. after giving Monday to the well. The 'innfine'-land goes, i.e. before the 'iarfine'-land, i.e. the pond. Before, i.e. before the lands or the land extending from the well to the pond. 'Deirb-fine'-land, i.e. the pond. For the 'innfine'-land, i.e. for after the likeness of the 'innfine'-lands to the 'iarfine'-lands are the divisions of the tribe land with respect to the water. The land in which it is detained i.e. the land in which it is gathered, i.e. the pond, the water. Is nobler, i.e. for the land in which it is gathered or detained is nobler according to the Fenechus. Is detained, i.e. the pond. Than the land, i.e. than the land over which it is drawn, i.e. the land extending from the well to the pond. For it is entitled to, i.e. for it is this that deserves to have three days gratis before the other lands in general. The force of gratis is . . .¹ Like the custom of 'foesam', i.e. like the custom of the adopted son. For there is a 'foesam', i.e. for there are adopted sons of which the 'Fenechus'-law makes mention, and they^a Ir. He. do not deserve but three 'seds,' i.e. three cows, for proper security from kings and persons of the same grade with them, for the adopted sons of their 'gelfine'-division or 'derbhfine'-division in contravention of the tribe and of the increase of the old man's property, i.e. the 'foesam' of a chieftain grade in contravention of the tribe and for the increase of the property. On account of, i.e. because it is not easy not to fasten a thing upon the person to whom security is given properly by word of month. By which, i.e. by which according as it was put. Without any thing, i.e. without their leaving anything to their adopted sons. Which, i.e. according to that thing as it was put, i.e. if in the writing.^b Except nine contracts, i.e. all the contracts which are dissolved, i.e. the contract of a bondman, the contract of a 'manach'-person, the contract of a son whose father is alive, a nuptial-present to a harlot, the contract of an idiot with a sane person, the contract of a wife without her husband, a contract in the dark, a contract of drunkenness, a contract of fear. Though it is said, i.e. though they are mentioned. These are they, i.e. these are they which the tribe does not deem lawful to keep. The tribe proclaims, i.e. the tribe truly proclaims them. Because, i.e. because the many insist that it is proper to dissolve them. For no 'foesam' is lawful, i.e. for we do not deem it lawful to take any adopted son outside unless sureties of the tribe are given with him that the price of maintenance will be given for him. Not proclaimed, i.e. unless the head of the tribe proclaims him. For every contract is dissolved, i.e. that no contract is made binding without security for it, according to the sense of the 'Fenechus'-law.

VOL. IV.

P

RIGHT OF
WATER.

however?

which is not correct

and the fine

the old man has increased his property
spices.without leaving something to them or their^b Ir. Letter.the fine does not duly follow them in regard to holding them for as they are how

^a of Is astairthe (= astairthe) coribhe in da baith O'N. 300. C 1750 etc.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

1 Inge .iii. nuaral chupu nardat aru do thairthbiuch neoch ma polathar; tabert ruz, tabairt eprcop, aperi ar a[n]muin, tabairt pileth, commuin) athar ocur a meicc, comtur cacha lamna, ni do beir flatha dia scele, ret turchlaitha no rath darrairdis, no turcpeicc dian airbithar.

2 Ni meiccditer fir nime ocur porcela Cirt, ar dleagar do cach deorad de raigis a nardma forad; amal adrogeta ino, no do dicred a chelebrad aipe.

cf H 3.17 p. 71 (C 2375)
cf 85 f. 31 v. (C 2345)

10 Inge .i. ar act na-ii. cupu uairli ocur nocon uru a taitmead.
Ma polathar .i. maia polaiter iad. Aperi .i. in ni uobrar neac ar amain, Tabairt pileth .i. tabairt do beir don ilid.
Tabairt oligead riu. Commuin .i. na maene cumtar iur in mac ocur in aiar of comluigib. Comtur cacha lamna .i. in cumar do 15 comloisib uair bir iur in lanamain do comloisib. Set turchlaitha
.i. in ret do beir ar cloisib. Rath darrairdis .i. in rat da beir eir ein, raimis, ar ino imarparad biata ocur manaine. Tur-cpeicc .i. no in creic corineac rata dia nuaralbiatar in flath.

20 Ni meiccditer .i. ni ingeicetur. Fir nime .i. muinir nime. Ar do dleagar .i. uair dleagar do sac deorad de inoraigis a nardneacta rue. Amal adrogeta .i. amal do rogeta e fein ino, (r amlaro dleagar de a tobae, sin su habairter ruz. No do dicred .i. no do oigred a labra ciallade aipe.

30 Cain cach uirce thairidne la rime, Firorngar
25 a tir ar a thairidner, ocur inruidigithar. Ar atar
.iii. caine nard chumgar comarba do chumrcuchud dianar damat a nathair fua naimir; cain cach uirce thairidne, ocur cain inbir, ocur cain drochit;
air ithe teora trebuir in ren nardithrolat [ele, 30 no na cumgar comarba do cumrcugud] comarba

¹ Husband and Wife. The term, 'lamna' or 'lanamna' signifies in modern Irish "a married couple." In the ancient Irish Laws it had a much wider meaning. Vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 2, p. 843, et seq.

² Overplus food stock. Vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 2, p. 263, for explanations of this, and also of the terms "returnable 'seals,'" "proportionate stock."

p. 27^a

C. m. macedonit

cf B. Air 48.
a B. Air p. 59cf side sds in marg
of Ms.

I 262.7
cf Thron. II 162.393. IV 210
B. Air. 34

cf B. Air 1396.
nada [Irishrolat]
Munster pres. of fris-lacurithat
Th 2 f 762.

b. n. Ms.

Thurnepson has misunderstood the second part. It is really an eighth noble contract.
 Read ní in-aidediker 'a thing for which the truth (or 'men'?) of heaven &
 the gospel of Christ are spoken, cf AL V 212.15.

RIGHT OF WATER.

211

CCF pp. 47-49 (H31-94)

Propter ZCP 16 271

RIGHT OF
WATER.

^a Ir. Of.

Except seven noble contracts which it is not easy to dissolve, if they have been perfected: a gift to^a a king, a gift to^a a bishop, an offering for one's soul, a gift to^a a poet, the reciprocal gifts of a father and his son, the mutual gifts of each husband and wife,¹ the thing which a chief gives to his tenant, i.e. the returnable 'sed' or the overplus food stock, or the proportionate stock for which he is supplied with provisions.

* The men of heaven and of the gospel of Christ are not excepted, for every pilgrim is bound to oppose them (the contracts) as if he himself had made them, or his word of wisdom had passed about it.

Except, i.e. but except the seven noble contracts, which it is not easy to dissolve. If they have been perfected, i.e. if they have been actually made. An offering for one's soul, i.e. what one offers for his soul. A gift to a poet, i.e. a gift which is given to the poet. These are lawful gifts. Mutual gifts, i.e. the property mutually given between the son and the father as adjustments. Mutual gifts of each husband and wife, i.e. the equality of noble gifts which is between the married couple, as adjustments. The returnable 'sed,' i.e. the 'sed' which is given to be returned. Overplus food stock, i.e. the stock which is given for the increase, for the excess of food and labour. The proportionate stock, i.e. or the relieving fee of the stock for which the chief is nobly supplied with food.

Are not excepted, i.e. no exception is made. The men of heaven, i.e. the people belonging to heaven (churchmen). Is bound, i.e. for every pilgrim is bound to oppose their security. As if he himself had made them, i.e. as if he himself had made them, it is thus he is bound to levy, although it is not told him. Had passed about it, i.e. as if their speech ('labra') of wisdom ('cathartes') was concerned about it.

Of the 'cain'-law of each water which is drawn, according to the Feini. It is regulated according to the land out of which it is drawn, and that in which it is settled (ponded). For there are three 'cain'-laws which the 'cain' cannot alter³ if their fathers had consented to them in their time; the 'cain'-law of each water conducted, and the 'cain'-law of the dam, and the 'cain'-law of the bridge; for these are the three laws which the 'cain' cannot dianafu, damat aithir ocuf renathair fpu amfeir.

³ Cannot alter. The words in brackets in the Irish are found on the left-hand margin of the MS., and appear to be another mode of expressing the statement in the text.

 heoch, Ma^ono^omaitep, a mbith famlaio co b^orath, im deolaio fa log nach oligthir, a neir/b^orithemon.

noch delegat^a
p. 27^b

the illusions have only been before a mirror.

Cain each uirce .i. iuasail in nuirce tairngistir anó do neir in 5 eneáir. Fuirporengar .i. fuirporeimnigter da lucc na fearano dara tairngister e .i. (in topar) ~~ceir~~ (i. mir ó topar co lino.) In ~~for in fir~~ fuirgister .i. in lino, Ar atat .i. uair atat teora iuasla naó cuirigter na comorad oirba du cumrugasur (at co taratar luas doib.) ~~false?~~ 10 Dianar damat a nathair .i. dia rabao á nathair ocyr a fearnatair ina roairtoin fua naimir. Cain each uirce .i. iuasail inó uirce tairngistir anó. Cain inbip .i. iuasail inbip na corad, no iuasail inneic bip in inó bepa na corad. Cain orochit .i. iuasail in orochit. Ar ithe .i. uair ip iao rin tri neici treabara na 15 fearatcuirne na comorad oirba. Dianar damat .i. dia rabao a nathair ocyr a fearnatair ina roairtoin, ocyr re boiem. Fir ampeir
 .i. iubaile iar treabuirpe fo, ocyr na fearar cia cana cet nacha fir.
 Maó roomaiter .i. ina neici rin maia rabao ina roairtoin, neic oleagar. A mbich famlao .i. feicim no inopraigim su nolegar a mbeit ahlao rin. Im deolao .i. sió in aigis. Fa los .i. sió 20 los da bepar da cno. Nach oligthir .i. feicim no inopraigim su noleagar a mbeit ahlao rin, da neir in breiteaman.

glossed as if noch

2nd hand over line

Ma pa^{ba}ba^{ra} in^a aⁱti^{ti}tiⁿ rⁱn co tairⁿⁱs a nenaⁿⁱ aⁱr in^a fear^{na}s
(1. co^a eir^e), i^r a n^oi^li^r do^gne^r o reⁱn aⁱna^e, o^ur a m^{be}i^t amaⁱl ca^e r^uo^{ra}d i^ar t^{re}b^ui^re. I^lo oⁿa, ce^ana, i^r n^e r^uo^{ra}i^{ta} do rⁱa^gaⁱl rⁱu ; ma pa^{ba}ba^{ra} in^a aⁱti^{ti}tiⁿ n^e n^e t^{ri}r, i^r a n^oi^li^r o reⁱn amaⁱe. A^et maⁿi r^ai^b m^ac in^a t^{re}f^ar fear^{na} oⁱb n^e ma^r a^en n^e aⁱtaⁱr in^a aⁱti^{ti}tiⁿ, in^a e^eo^{na}e, o^ur ma r^o b^ai, n^oo^o b^a oⁱl^ea^r i^ao do^gne^r n^o co r^ai^b in^a coⁱna^t rⁱn in^a aⁱti^{ti}tiⁿ i^ar oⁱa^eta^m ceⁱlle co^onaⁱs.

This passage is written in margin of MS

• Oligio cach comaithech diapaile tuiridin urce thairidine tar a chuch; inoach ma pocrethcher, po ruirigeo a pochraicride fon reoit deich rpebul^o d'ap cach mbpuz do t'act. neoach. Ma'o eatam, geni gaba acht lethgabail'de, dipe nar in chpuch po. Ma'o ainmin

see MS

not ^{oppose} change, if their fathers and grandfathers had ^{acknowledged} consented to them ^{in this} for a time. If they have been so acknowledged, it is right that they should remain^a so for ^{Ir. Be.} ever, gratis or for payment, according to the Brehon.

Of the 'cain'-law of each water, i.e. the rule of the water which is drawn, according to the 'Fenechus'-law. It is regulated, i.e. it is proportioned on the people of the land over which it is drawn, i.e. the well. The land, i.e. the extent from the well to the pond. It is settled, i.e. the pond. For there are, i.e., for there are three rules which the heirs to the land^b cannot ^{Ir. Keepers} change, so as that value is given them. If their fathers had consented, ^{of the land.} i.e., if their father and grandfather were in acknowledgment of it in their time. The 'cain'-law of each water, i.e. the rule of the water which is drawn. The 'cain'-law of the weir, i.e. the rule of the river-mouth or of the weir, or the rule of the thing which is on the top of the stake of the weir. The 'cain'-law of the bridge, i.e. the rule of the bridge. For these are, i.e. for these are the three secure things, which the land-heirs^b cannot set aside. If their fathers consented, i.e. if their fathers and grandfathers were in full acknowledgment, so shall they themselves. For a time, i.e. this is a lapse of time after security, and it is not known what 'cain'-laws should be first applied to it. If they have been so acknowledged, i.e. if these things have been acknowledged, it is right, &c. They should remain so, i.e. I maintain or insist that it is right to have them so. Gratis, i.e., though for nothing. Or for payment, i.e. or whether price is given for them. It is right, i.e. I maintain or insist that it is lawful that they should remain so, according to the Brehon.

If these were recognised until the completion of their erection on the land, i.e. a fishing weir, &c., they are lawful over after from that out, and they shall be like every prescriptive right after security has ceased. Or else, according to others, they are to be regulated according to the period of prescription; if they were recognised during the lives of three persons, they are lawful from that forth. But if the son of the third man did not acknowledge them jointly with his father, he being an infant, and in case he was so, they shall not be lawful until he shall have acknowledged them for the same period after he has come to the age of reason.^c

Every cotenant is ^{entitled from} bound to permit the other (co-^{land} tenants) to conduct drawn water across his border, and ^{paid for} if it be purchased, its price is fixed to a 'sed' worth ten 'screpalls' for every farm over which it is carried. If it be arable land, though it (the water) should pass through only half a step of it, it shall be paid for after ^c The sense of a sensible adult.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

imorru, ir let ret inna los ríde; alaile ir la cacha típe do ret olegáir aipe.

effective pr. subj. of to-air-fed with -com- (to-air-com-weds-Thurn. 2 § 533.

Altair .iii. típe la peine tar nach arpa doaircearthar
uirce, nemed cille, no duin, no a maigen ríre.

emphatic form of
per. pron. 3 pl.

read nach?

Altair tpi típe aile la peine na olegat pochráicc, nach athepprom uirce tairidín tairriu; tpi iníó taríle muilenn, co tabair topaó; tpeb oc na bí urce ar-da fogna co tairidínitheir peicce, co mbí uirce neire arda-foga; clao bír par coníolína tóla níurce.

It is a very fine example

10 Oligio cach comaithech .i. oligio cad comaitheac da deirí tarpuó íno uirce tairingiteir ando dar in searano; (ocur ip e rin in darma hinaró ip in berla i nupairleann oligio ar duine a searano do peic cin cob aile leir.) Ineoch .i. iní rin mara doiceppnaisteir e gur an creic loige ita do neir oligio (ip ando ip eicean a neir a pochráic tecta) Ro fuirioiseo 15 .i. peicim no iníraigim no fuirioiseo a deirneic loigi ríde porí reo .x. repeball ead searaino darra tairíe. Neoch mar eátam .i. ip ando ata rin. Sení gaba .i. seim su gaba pe aet leatngabail de .i. in carceme tpois su ceatnaimíe tpoiseo, uairí da tpaigí su leiríe in ceim inraic. Uirce ar .i. eipnitéir e pon nse reo. Mar ainnin .i. mar 20 ainetam. Ir let ret .i. .u. repubail ma los ríde .i. let na noec repe-pall. Alaile .i. sne aile, ip la gaca searaino dar a tairíe do olegair aipe in tan ip cuairt muilino.

|| C240, 229
O2317

Tar nach arpa .i. dar nae upu in tairceí da tairnaing. Nemed cille .i. in peleg. No duin .i. lap duiní in ríe. No a maigen .i.
25 searac aibíní iní oenais, no aibinn, no ainnin.

Na olegat .i. na olegaro deirneic loige doib. Nach athepprom
.i. peicim no iníraigim gona íarum deicennaigepatar nainis tairru, ocur ip e ceannaic da beparí aip a legoí peocu sen los. Tpi iníó taríle muilenn .i. ceano muilino, co tabair a topaó .i. maró uirce.
30 Co tabair topaó .i. su tabair a topaó do uirce do legoí cuigi
(.i. do íarce) Tpeb oc na bí urce, .i. teach gur na bí uirce nam fognaí
(aca uaral fognam) Ar da fogna .i. co ruice rin .i. tpi i mbí muilenn

1 Rotation, i.e. every one getting his proper time to grind in his turn.

this manner. But if it be unprofitable* land, half a 'sed' is its price, otherwise it is a day at the mill for every land over which it passes that is due for it.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

* Ir. Rough.

There are three lands, according to the Feini, over which it is not easy to conduct water, the 'nemed'-land of a church, or of a 'dun'-fort, or in the precinct of a fair-green.

that water be conducted

There are three other lands, according to the Feini, which are not entitled to price, and for which nothing is paid for conducting water through them; land on which a mill stands, so that it yields produce; a house which has not water to serve it until it is led to it, so as that it has water to serve it; a trench which is empty until floods of water fill it.

Every co-tenant is bound, i.e. every person is bound to allow his co-tenant to draw the water which is required to be drawn across the land; and this is the second instance in the 'Berla'-speech, where the law commands a person to sell his land though he should not like to do so. If it be purchased, i.e. if this be purchased for the price which is prescribed according to law, it must then be sold for the lawful price. Is fixed, i.e. I maintain or insist that its price is fixed to a 'sed' worth ten 'scrapalls' for every land over which it passes. If it be arable land, i.e. it is then it is so. Though it should pass, i.e. though it should pass but across half a step of it, i.e. the step of a foot and a quarter of a foot, for the lawful step is two feet and a half. It shall be paid for, i.e. it is paid for after this manner. If unprofitable, i.e. if not arable land. It is half a 'sed,' i.e. of which the value is five 'scrapalls,' i.e. half the ten 'scrapalls.' Otherwise, i.e. another version, it is a day for every land across which it passes that is due for it when it is a rotation of a mill.

Over which it is not easy, i.e. over which it is not easy to draw the water. The 'nemed'-land of a church, i.e. the cemetery. Or of a 'dun'-fort, i.e. the area of the 'dun'-fort of a king. Or in a precinct, i.e. the delightful, or pleasant, or agreeable land of the fair.

Are not entitled, i.e. which are not entitled to fair price of value. For which, i.e., I maintain or insist that it is these that purchase what passes across them, and the purchase-price which they give for it is to let it (the water) pass over them without any price. Land on which a mill stands, i.e. the head of a mill, so that it yields its produce, i.e. much water. So that it yields produce, i.e. so that it yields its produce for letting the water be conducted to it, i.e. of fish. A house which has not water, i.e. a house to which no water flowed before to serve it nobly. To serve it, i.e. until then, i.e. land in which there is a mill

RIGHT OF
WATER.

can uirce co tairngitheir fea peir⁷ do. Co tairngitheir .i. co tairngitheir fea^u e. Co mbi uirce .i. conat he in tairce rin foghar .i.
Clao bir far .i. cein uirce ant. Conitolina .i. co linant imat uirce e.

Oet la dec comlana irin i cuairt muilinn. Luan do tobop, 5 maip⁷ do lino, cedain ir dardain do f⁷arab, denoiden ocuf ratarn⁷ do ri⁷enah. Luan [atherpae] do lino, maip⁷ o tobop zo lino, cedain ocuf dardain do f⁷arab, denoiden ocuf ratarn⁷ do ri⁷enah; Luan do lino, maip⁷ o lino rif, cedain ocuf dardain do f⁷arab, denoiden ocuf ratarn⁷ do ri⁷enah.
10 In tan ir cuairt rin. In tan ir loz imorru, ir r⁷ribail⁷ for tobop, ocuf a d⁷ec o tobop su lino, ocuf deic r⁷ribail⁷ r⁷chet for lino, ocuf a d⁷ec o lino rif, conat tri r⁷ic⁷o r⁷reaball uile rin, mat eatain; mat aneatain ir a leat .i. u. r⁷ribail⁷ for tobop, ocuf
a .u. o tobop su lino, ocuf a u. des for lino, ocuf a .u. o lino 15 rif, conat .x. r⁷ribail⁷ r⁷ic⁷o uile rin.

Cro fodepa conit⁷ cutr⁷uma for⁷na fearantab in tan ir cuairt, z⁷emota lino, ocuf no⁷u cutr⁷uma orp⁷ in tan ir loz.
Ir e in rat fodepa, a roza tugat⁷ deapab na fearant⁷ in cuairt da biat⁷ doib, no in loz, ocuf ir i roza ruzrat⁷ 20 cuairt: trian da tir ocuf zur na hearnailib bide malle ria, ocuf trian do eladain far, ocuf trian do biat⁷ ocuf do borbri⁷enah .i. a .u. e⁷o cectar de.

.vi. edh

Luan do tobop, torain ngrino,
1u maip⁷ ina diat⁷ don lino,
25 Cedain dardain, dail in rat
A tabairt da na f⁷arab.
Aine aguf ratarn⁷, reol nglan,
Ireat⁷ no ratz a r⁷ic⁷nam,
1r i rin, r⁷ic⁷ su mbail,
30 A cuio cor⁷ dan cet⁷react⁷main.

choir

Luan aguf maip⁷, meabair mbino,
Do na tirib zur rin lino,
Aguf o ta in lino amac,
Nir torain a natarach.

1 Eighteen days. This commentary and the verses following it are found on the top and bottom margins of page 26 of the MS. H. 2, 15. (T.C.D.)

without water until it is conducted to it for its good. Until it is led to it, i.e. until it is drawn past it. That it has water, i.e. that it is that water which serves it. A trench which is empty, i.e. without water in it. Until filled, i.e. until much water fills it.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

Eighteen days¹ complete are in the rotation at the mill. Monday is due to the well,² Tuesday to the pond, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisans, Friday and Saturday to attendance. The next Monday is due to the pond, Tuesday from the well to the pond, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisans, Friday and Saturday to attendance. Monday is due to the pond, Tuesday from the pond downwards, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisans, Friday and Saturday to attendance. This is when it is rotation. But when it is a case of price, it is ten 'screpalls' that are charged on the well, and ten on the land from the well to the pond, and thirty 'screpalls' on the pond, and ten on the land-pond downwards, all which amount to sixty 'screpalls,' if it be arable land; if it be not arable land it is one-half of this, i.e. five 'screpalls' on the well, and five from the well to the pond, and fifteen on the pond, and five from the pond downwards, all which amount to thirty 'screpalls.'

What is the reason that it is equal amount that is upon the lands when it is a rotation, excepting the pond, and that it is not equal amount when it is price (i.e. money that is paid)? The reason is, the men of the lands got their choice whether they would have rotation, or pay price, and the choice they took was rotation: one-third goes to the land and the things which belong to it, and one-third to the science of the artisans, and one-third to food and to rude labour, i.e. a sixth to each.³

Monday to the well, a pleasant deed,
Tuesday following to the pond,
Wednesday, Thursday, prosperous assignment,
Are given to the artisans;
Friday and Saturday, fine the arrangement,
Are assigned to the attendance,
This is the peaceable ordering, peace with prosperity,
The proper distribution of the first week.

Monday and Tuesday, sweet remembrance,
To the lands as far as the pond,
And from the pond out,

A different one does not occur. How shall not reckon them again?

¹ To the well. Here, and throughout this commentary, the definite article is used in the translation several times where it is not in the Irish.

² A sixth to each. The Irish has a fifth, which seems plainly wrong.

RIGHT OF
WATER.
—

Cedaín, dárdaín, dingsnaib ngal,
I^r in tectmainí seo do rucnaí,
Aéine, Satairín, rluín do lu,
Do íaerab a^rí íru. ordain

c/ 5 In t^rearí reáctmainí naí inill, Tuc luan a^rur maíre d^a lino; o
Cedaín, dárdaín, ní d^aerí clu, Tabairí don t^aerí in curí ru;
Aéine a^rur ía^rairín, írⁱ n^gnaí,
10 Do rⁱnaí a neípenaí. dh

c Oíe laíeí d^eg dⁱgnairí dal,
I^r íⁿ inⁱ cuairí c^amlan. o
Gen beí mⁱilén^o r^or a blen^o;
Ran^tarí am^aíl r^o r^and^aí,
15 A c^om^proín^o í^r amⁱlar^o r^o,
Maní r^ecar^t arí r^eo^o.

C^rurí g^u ní^g g^aí m^bea^tar^o m^bi,
Mac don íⁿgín Eab^rar^oi Síl A^damⁱ, ílar^oda in r^lua^g 20 Rí^cí^rí^o uí^li in noen luan.

d/ Cí^o r^o d^era g^o rⁱle^o t^ri ax. í^r r^ereball^o do loct na r^ear^ano
r^o lea^rar^o r^uno, oc^ur ma^ra mⁱilén^o c^umaíle t^ri m^bo na r^ag^ano a^ct r^amaí^rg cona lo^g í laím í^r bunar^o? Se in ía^t, d^a de d^aemí^b na r^ear^ano d^a lea^rar^o and d^a be^rarí a r^og^a ním- ní m 25 é^uairí mⁱilín^o d^a be^rtarí d^oib, n^o níat na r^euball^o; oc^ur ma^ra m^or leor^aí^o na d^ena^o mⁱilén^o arí r^ear^ano in^o í^r eíle.

v/ Oíe la d^ec c^omlana í^rí in cuairí .i. luan t^uí^reach do thop^ur, maíre do línⁱí^o, cetaín oc^ur dárdaín do r^aerí^b, aⁿd^oí^oí^oí^o oc^ur r^eatharí do r^ruc^hnum. Luan oc^ur maíre do thairí^oí^o 30 o línⁱí^o co top^ur oc^ur o mⁱilín^o rⁱr. Cetaín oc^ur dárdaín do r^ruc^hnam, aⁿ oc^ur r^atharí do t^ráer, luan oc^ur maíre do línⁱí^o, cetaín oc^ur dárdaín do r^aer, aⁿ oc^ur r^atharí d^a a r^ruc^hnam. T^or^rach cuairí in r^o do rⁱí^oí^o; luan do tob^ar oc^ur maíre do línⁱí^o, cetaín oc^ur dárdaín do r^aer, aⁿ oc^ur cet de

Wednesday, Thursday, of wonderful work,
 In this week go to attendance ;
 Friday and Saturday, of mention least,
 To the artisans who superintend.

RIGHT OF
 WATER.
 —

The third week for every work,
 Monday and Tuesday are given to the pond ;
 Wednesday and Thursday, not slavish their fame,
 Give the artisan this turn ;
 Friday and Saturday, constant custom,
 To attendance, give the last.

Eighteen days of fervid work,
 This is the extent of the entire rotation,
 Without mill-tribute for its grinding ;
 It is distributed as it was above distributed,
 The distribution is thus,
 Unless they sell it for 'seds.'

To Christ, who has power over every living life,
 The son of the Hebrew Virgin,
 The race of Adam, numerous the host,
 Shall all come on one Monday.

What is the reason that there are sixty 'screpalls' due to the people whose lands were cut up in this instance; and if it be a mill worth a 'cumhal' of three cows, that it gets only a 'samhaise'-heifer with its value into the hand of the owner? The reason is, the people whose lands were cut up in this instance are given their choice of having the rotation at the mill, or the 'screpalls'; and if they deem it too much, let them not make a mill on the other man's land.

Eighteen entire days is the extent of rotation, i.e. Monday first to the well, Tuesday to the pond, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisans, Friday and Saturday to attendance. Monday and Tuesday are for the embankment extending from the pond to the well, and from the mill downwards. Wednesday and Thursday go to attendance, Friday and Saturday to the artisan, Monday and Tuesday to the pond, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisan, Friday and Saturday to attendance. The commencement of the second rotation here again: Monday is due to the well, and Tuesday to the pond, Wednesday and Thursday to the artisan, Friday and ratharín do ríutsham. Da la do cach ae a reáctmáin, a .iiii.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

a coicigir do cáca, a uí, dia xx. it aróce, oét la cáe de dia mór .i.
.iii. a cetair do linní, a do do thopur, a do tairmóin i coicimí itir mus linnó ocu^r topu^r, ocu^r o mui^línó rí^r. Conpó^láirí^o eá^rru 5 uile.

Atair .iiii. claid la feine na dipenaiter cinait cia robdaiter inóib, ar adgeard cach di threbaire neoch maní dena ruidler de. Claid dune, claid cille, of C723 claid rí^r, claid uí^r tairmóne, claid linne mui^línó, oclaid potaig mona, claid b^r im thóichet; ar otha (4) ruidiu hiead cach cinait a claid di cach^a rime do pona nech ina t^r, do neoch rí^rroí, ocu^r do lina tola, nasalig^o rel^o (ar e cogairéad cach^a trebu^rne mana ro ramaisgea na na dí^rre ro) h^ruí^rce, cenmó^ota na .iiii. claid n- 15 reo. 1^r rí^r rí^rno ro ruidiged coibniur uí^rce tairmóne la feine.

The transcriber has been confused by the signs in the MS.

Atair .iiii. claid, .i. atair .iiii. claid da nairmóne in peneáir ocu^r noco neirmiter eiric ina cinait. Cia robdaiter .i. cia ro ba^r inóib. Ar adgeard .i. uair da uirgairé^o a trebaire in sa^r n^onni 20 maní ruidiged na neí^r reo a rí^rroí. Claid dune .i. in rí^r .i. do ní^rcher in dun na pláta da rí^rgní^rg^o. Claid cille .i. in rí^reg.
Claid rí^r .i. in oenais .i. do innoiged ro uile, rí^rlan. Claid uí^r tairmóne. .i. claid in uí^r tairmóne ar cum in mui^línó, in tan ata

1 They all divide these between them. Dr. O'Donovan remarks on this; "Whenever a mill was to be erected for the use of neighbours, it was left to the option of the persons concerned (who were generally the inhabitants of the three nearest lands), whether they would all join in constructing the works and conducting the water thereunto, or let all be done by one man, who was to pay his neighbours for conducting the water through their lands. If the neighbours had assisted in forming the mill-pond, mill-race, and other works, they were entitled to certain days' grinding at the mill, according to their respective positions on the land through which the water was conducted. They were technically distinguished, like the different branches of the family of a chieftain, by the terms 'gelfine,' 'derbbfine,' 'iarfine' and 'innfine.' The 'gelfine' were those in whose lands the source of the water was (which source was not always the actual fountain of the stream, but the point at which the water was turned off for the use of the mill;
the 'derbbfine' were those who dwelt on both sides of the mill-leat or embankment extending from the well or point where the water was turned off to the pond; the N.B. fact

2.

Saturday to attendance. Two days to each in the week, four in a fortnight to each; six in twenty nights, eight days to each in a month, i.e. four to the pond, two to the well, two to the embankment between the pond and the well, and from the mill downwards. They all divide these between them.¹

RIGHT OF
WATER.

There are seven ditches, according to the Feini, the injuries done by which are not paid for (though such should be done by them), for every person shall be corrected by his surety unless they have been made free; the ditch of a 'dun'-fort, the ditch of a 'cill'-church, the ditch of a fair-green, the ditch of a mill-race, the embankment of a mill-pond, the ditch of a turf bog, a ditch which is at a bridge; for from this out, each one pays for the injury sued for or caused by each ditch which one has made in his land, to him who has sustained the injury, for every surety shall be sued unless these exemptions have been established as regards water, except these seven ditches. It was thus that the common right to conducting water was established by the Feini.

There are seven ditches, i.e. there are seven ditches which are mentioned by the 'Fenechas'-law for the injuries of which no 'eric'-fine is paid. Though such should be done, i.e. though such have taken place. Shall be corrected, i.e. for his surety would forbid every man, unless these things had been established as exemption. The ditch of a 'dun'-fort, i.e. of the king, i.e. which is made around the 'dun'-fort of the chieftain to fortify it. The ditch of a 'cill'-church, i.e. the cemetery. The ditch of a fair-green, i.e. of the fair. Though all these are illegal, they are exempted. The ditch of a mill-race

'iarfine' were those around the pond; the innfine were those who resided on both sides of the stream below the mill, until it flows out of the land of the parties concerned. Each of the parties through whose lands the water was conducted was entitled to certain days' work at the mill in their turn, according to the above classification; but if they did not choose to be paid by the work of the mill in grinding their corn, the owner of the mill paid them to the amount of sixty 'screpalls' to indemnify them for the injury done their lands by the channel and embankments necessary to conduct the water to the mill. The price was paid to each in proportion to the value of his land, for the commentator says that ten 'screpalls' were paid for arable land, even if the water had been conducted only over a foot and a quarter of it. The mill was of such importance to the neighbours, that none of them could prevent the conducting of the water to it when the price was offered.

or every
bathubandman

Psalm p. 84

for them on the ground of his law

when such an exemption fall down defect of force

is many hours injured

the liability of his ditch in respect of every has been though destruction has taken place in them destroyed

H. tradition

these

Pl. 8 115

cf. 17 140. 23

if in chinald do eland
I 164. 21 (i. cinaid
0'10 73 reche

RIGHT OF
WATER.

dligthardi nr.

noo?

cf III. 284.4, 168.3
C 912, 917-8, 920, etc.

ina dligeo. Ar a coiteinne na clao ra su nae upara cin dagna for a tigeinnab; no ip dentata iao ar nap cno ugoar cinneo denha; ocuy ma da pona duini iao map ip dligteada conpauis, ip dentata digneat iao.
 Clao potaig .i. in clao ar a tabar potbae na mona .i. na canteo .i. oc na bi porcongnat, no acbeile. Clao bir im o poicheo .i. clao bir laim pe ceano in dnoio. Ar otha ruioiu .i. o ta mna eao ipin imac iao cinao a clao do cae ni ammaniger pe ina tin do neo b co mligeo. Di cachu nime .i. da ni neac ina fearano. Do neoch porpui .i. do neoch pur a rirpuactnageno pe .i. oi neoch linar imao uirici. Are cogaireao .i. no horpaigno in cachu trebairpe, mana samaighea na heppaile ro do po uirpe.

cf C 915

i.e. the ditch of the water which is drawn to the mill, when it is in its lawful condition. In consequence of the general nature of these embankments, it is not easy to sue their lords for trespasses; or they are erections concerning the construction of which authors have laid down no defined mode of construction;¹ and if a man has made them as lawfully as he was able, they are lawful erections. The ditch of a turf bog, i.e. the ditch out of which the sods of turf are taken, i.e. the pits, i.e. at which there is no warning notice of danger. The ditch at a bridge, i.e. a ditch which is close to the head of the bridge. For from this out, i.e. from these particular things out he shall pay ~~fine for every injury~~ ^{the damages to his ditch for respect of length in his land wh he fences} caused by every ditch in his land which is unlawfully made. By each ditch, i.e. which one makes in his land. Who has sustained injury, i.e. to the person who has been truly injured by it, i.e. who has been overwhelmed with water. For every surety, i.e. it was ordered upon every surety, unless these things were established as immunities.

RIGHT OF
WATER.

¹ Have decided nothing. Or it may mean, "have left nothing decisive in their writings as to the construction of them."

maigne. (not an old text. Thurn. IV 190).

PRECINCTS.

Only portion of Tract called Sāruḡhaṭh (O'C 2626-2636)

lg. 88, fol 54^b1 - 55^b1. cf O'Grady I 100-1.

15. maige.

PRECINCTS.

cf. cuil tamprai breig ? NS

A fol 55^a 1.

Ro bai turcompas per nepenn a rliab ruait, no cuilte, a maige breig .i. a nerpoic ocur a nollamain, ocur a plata, ocur filid, ocur a ruiti, ocur a reamori. Ocur po meirannai^g irin dal rin maigin ret do gac gnao 5 itir gnao ecalri ocur tuaiti; ocur po rpuibao ag peruib epenn a car mor na rean^{an} ro; ocur iri ro eirde .i. boaire laic innraic, meir a digona .i. po meirannai^g maigin digona cae gnao.

In cnairreac^{2 A}, da dopn de^g itir a hiarann ocur an 10 baile a n^gear^gtar a ha^gar^g cuirre a roair .i. a hup-lann. Ocur an turcar cuirre uada an boaire di rin ocur^{ae} na trui^g a ndorur a tigi, ocur ar^g rin maigin 15 digona in boaire um a retuib; ocur a da cutruma don aire^gdera; ocur a dubla^g rin do gac gnao o erin ruar go ri tuat .i. ce^gre hupcarr ocur tri p^git do ri thuat.
Ocur p^gur^gin p^gide meirannai^gtar na hupcarr ro do gac maigin digona. Ocur ir ar do leig^g iat, ar a ninat a n^gna^goair [beit] ana rui^g do^gper.

Ri p^gur^gec; acarrde bi^g r^gga .i. ri cuic^g, ocur ri
20 epenn, an airat po roic a rcor^g r^gde por gac leit, ocur

¹ Inviolable precinct. — 'Diguin' and 'maigin digona' seem to mean the same thing.

f. O'D 943, 2352 ff.

15 PRECINCTS.

There was a meeting of the men of Erin at Sliabh PRECINCTS.
Fuaid, or Cuilt, in Magh Bregh, i.e. their bishops, and their 'ollamhs,' and their chieftains, and their poets, and their sages (literary doctors), and their seniors. And at that meeting there was ordained a precinct of 'seds' for every grade, both church grades and lay grades; and this was written by the men of Erin in the great 'Cas' of the ancients (i.e. the Senchus Mór); and this is it, i.e. as to a worthy lay 'bo-aire'- chief, the estimation of his inviolable precinct,¹ i.e. the inviolable precinct of each grade was estimated as follows :—

The spear² measures twelve fists between its iron head and the place where the horn is put upon its extremity, i.e. the extremity of its handle. Now^a a Ir. And.
the shot of this which the 'bo-aire'-chief casts as he sits in the door of his house is the extent of the inviolable precinct of the 'bo-aire'-chief respecting his 'seds'; and the 'aire-desa'-chief has twice this extent; and every grade from that up to the king of a territory has double it, i.e. the king of a territory has sixty-four shots as the extent of his inviolable precinct. And it is by the 'green' these shots are measured for every inviolable precinct; and where they (the shots) are discharged from is, from the place where they (the parties) constantly sit.

A king of kings: it is he that has kings, i.e.
the king of a province, and the king of Erin, and also the 'coarb' of Patrick; as far as their 'scor'-lands³

² The spear.—'Cnarrrech' in other passages would appear to mean some sort of sledge or hammer.

³ Scor-lands.—'Scor' is glossed 'mağ'. i. 'Cluain'; that is, a plain, a meadow.

PRECINCTS. ^{do}for[^] comairda ^{do}patraic, ocur [^]arí rin a maigin ^{do}digona.
 Ocur [^]ir amlaio umóirio, do na ghradaib ocur ecailirí, ocur ecna, ocur filio, aet diablaio ^{do}d' eclair glain itir penhaic ocur eiric, gin go fuil diablaio maighe.

5 No araire : mile ceimenn maigin naím, no erpuic, no aibillteora, no deora ^{do}de, ció for[^] acaio béit, ocur ^{do}dá mile do gaic caoir acaig ^{do}cair. ^{do}I[^] mo díguin na ghrad necailirí in ghrad toilaigic cain im .uui. cumala doib .i.
 in deóbir eneclainne fuil itir in erpuic ocur na ghrad 10 ecailirí ^{do}fil raio, ghrad í rin deóbir ber eturra do maigin.

Egmaic, ainfir, ainfaitcer, ni foróirad tóire tar raot forair.

Ciú ir fir, ocur ciú ir ainfir, ocur ciú ir aincir, ocur 15 ciú ir aicgin, ocur ciú ir lan, a leic reir in comairce ?

Nin—Ireó ir fir ann, a beic ar comairce, ocur do fitir tairgim dligé aigi, ocur a breic a puic cruio in duine rin fein. Ocur ireó ir ainfir ann, a mbreic a puic cruio na raib for comairce. Ocur ireó ir aincer 20 ann, an tan narí fear cruio an díri [5] na raib for comairce no go ruig cruio no baí for comairce. Ocur ireó ir aicgin ann, a mbreic a puic a cruio fein.
 Ocur ireó ir lan ann, an tan ir ainfir, no ir dian trairuig, no ir comairce dorblaicir.

25 Na daíne ata ar comairce, ma no gabrat daíne aile

¹ Cathedral. In C. 194, 'catair acaig' is explained "a church in which there are the three grades, i.e. a bishop, a professor, and an 'airchinnech.'"

² In the shape of that very man's cattle. That is, supposing them to be that man's cattle.

³ In the shape of his own cattle. That is, supposing them to be his own cattle.

extend on every side, that is their inviolable precinct. And so also it is for the church grades, and those of wisdom, and the poets, but a pure church has double, both as^a penance and 'eric'-fine, though it^a Ir. Be-has not double the extent of precinct. PRECINCTS.
—
tween.

Or another version; one thousand paces is the extent of the precinct of a saint, or a bishop, or a hermit, or a pilgrim, if it be in the plain, and two thousand paces for the precinct of every noble cathedral.¹ The inviolable precinct of the ecclesiastical grades is greater when they demand law respecting seven 'cumhals' being due to them, i.e. the difference of honor-price which exists between the bishop and the ecclesiastical grades that are under him, is the difference that shall be between them as regards precinct.

Impotency, ignorance, inadvertence, do not increase the 'dire'-fine beyond 'faoth forais.'

What is knowledge, and what is ignorance, and what is difficulty, and what is compensation, and what is exempt, respecting the protection?

Answer—Knowledge means^b to know that he is^b Ir. Is.
 under protection, and to know that law was offered by him, and to take his cattle in the shape of that very man's cattle.² And ignorance means^a to take them in the shape of cattle which were not under protection. And difficulty means^b when he was not able to take the cattle of the culprit which were not under protection until he took cattle which were under protection. And compensation means^b when he took them in the shape of his own cattle.³ And the case of exemption arises^c when it is a case of ignorance, or^c Ir. Is.
 forcible violation, or unlawful protection.

If the persons who are under protection have taken other persons to them under protection, and if it is

PRECINCTS. ^{quc} cūcā ar comairce, aēt mar ar a nḡualgar fein do níat
 α comairce, iḡlan α rapuḡ, mar aḡdeir ro; ḡisuin ḡisona; ní rḡaigī deora ^{deor A} arailē; nī ḡlīs neē fīac α nḡis [uin] amur.
 An nḡis. Amg A

5 Mar α ḡualgar in ḡí ar α fuil comairce do ní ré α comairce, iḡ leē enecclann ḡó ina traruḡ; ocur leē enecclann ^{nēn A} do α rapuḡ α pḡimḡna ocur α mīc ḡor, ocur trīan nēnēclainne do α rapuḡ α mīc ^{saorleic A} rapleicī, ocur ḡac ḡuine dia muinntir aonḡī.
 Raorleic A

10 Ocur noḡa neirum ro earb pū an comairce do denam annir, ocur ḡa maḡ é, do beē lan enecclann ḡorom unnta rīde.

Ma ro airberḡaigērtair neē dia muinntir α comairce ina éḡmar; mara ḡuine naē fuil ^{en A} railaētair 15 umḡair pū, iḡ trīan enēclainne don pūḡ ina traruḡ, ocur ní fuil do fein ina traruḡ aon ní.

(C2633) | Cīḡ ro ^{en A} deora ḡo naē fuil ní do α rapuḡaḡ amair um
 α comairce ina éḡmar runn, ocur ḡona pep muinntir do é, ocur ḡo fuil trīan nēnēclainne do iḡin fut feinaēair 20 α rapuḡ α mīc ocur ḡac ḡuine dia muinntir ina éḡmar?

Iḡ é an raē; ḡaine naē ḡoic do ḡul uāḡa aēt le deēber; iḡ air ^{en A} aḡa ní ḡo ina rapuḡh.

A. 55a 2 Iḡ air na fuil ní do α rapuḡaḡ aḡair, uair iḡ ḡoic α ḡul uāḡa ḡin deēber.

25 An ḡuine tuḡ an ḡilpēc ón alḡoir iarr na pēairb

¹ Son under his control. This seems to be the meaning of 'mac-ḡor' here; elsewhere it means "a sister's son."

² For violating them. That is for violating their protection.

on their own account they afford the protection, it is PRECINCTS. lawful to violate it, as this rule states: "Sanctuary of sanctuary; one pilgrim does not protect another; no one is entitled to fines for the violation of the protection of his hired soldiers."

If it is on account of him under whose protection he is he affords the protection, it is half honor-price that is due to him for the violation of it; and it is half honor-price that is due to him for the violation of protection in case of his first wife and his son under his control,¹ and a third of honor-price for the violation of it in the case of his emancipated son, and of every person of his family in the same house.

And it was not he (the owner of the precinct) that ordered them to afford the protection in this case, and if it was, he would have full honor-price for them.

If any one of his people pleaded his protection in his absence; if he be a person who has no expectation of separation from him, it is one-third of honor-price that is due to the king for violation in his case, and he shall have nothing himself for the violation of his protection.

What is the reason that there is nothing due to him for the violating of the protection of his hired soldier, respecting his protection in his absence in such case," * Ir. Here. and because he is ~~a man of his family~~, and that he not a member of his household has one-third of honor-price in the extent of the 'Fenechus' law for violating the protection of his son and every one of his family in his absence?

The reason is: They are people who are not likely to go away from him except by necessity; it is for this reason that a fine^b is due to him for violating them.²

The reason that nothing is due to him for violating protection in case of a hired soldier is, because it is likely that he will go away from him without necessity.

The person who carried the culprit away from the ^b Ir.

A thing.

PRECINCTS. ^{tarargain} 7 ^{t4} Fail ^{Fağb} ^{anra} 11. ^f
 5 ΓΙΝ ΑΙΡΓΙΝ ΟΛΙΣΕ, ΟCΥΡ ΝΟΕΑΡ ΡΑΙΛ ΡΑΓΑ ΝΙΝΑ ΑΙΛΕ, ΙΡΕΘ ΡΟ ΔΕΡΑ Α ΕΡΛΑΙΝΤΙ ΔΟ.

Καίτι comairci α caemtect? .1. uair noc puil an comairce gin tairgrin olise .1. tairgrin olise α leit 5 pe creadaið ocur pe cneadaið, ocur pe puilidaið, ocur pe comairce, et ailia rimilia.

Sect cumala do рмаѳт, ocur lan eneclann do na huairi α marbad for α comairci, ocur α let do na hirli; ocur gell na coirpðire α lain na comairce.

cf III 352.23

10 Na huile cneða uiliði, oða bar go banbeim, go naṡṡabail an bar, ocur gin aṡṡabail an banbeim, α let рмаѳт buðein don comairce, fo aiene iril no uairail;
ocur in tainmṡrainne ða eneclann pein puil don ci ar
ar repa in cneð no in roṡail, fo aiene robaiz no eirce, 15 ṡurab e an tainmṡrainne rin ða eneclann pein ber don comairce ann. Ocur noða puil deṡbir roba na eirce pur in comairce uime in рмаѳт.

cf III 138.5

Cið biar irin nurṡabail ṡria eirce?

Ceṡraime eneclainne dona huairlib, ocur let enec 20 lann do na hirlib, ocur aṡṡin.

Cið biar irin beoguin ṡria eirce?

Mar uairail for comairce iril, no iral for comairce uairail, ða ṡrian α neneclainne pein* do na uairlib, ocur α let eneclann pein do na irlib, ocur airic na ret 25 ruṡað do main na comairce in ṡac ina[ð] ðið rin.
Mar iril for comairci iril, lan eneclann do ceṡtar de.

* ¹ Their own honor-price.—Nearly the remainder of the column in the MS. (about one-half of the whole), is in a different hand.

altar, after the terms (specified times), without offer ^{PRECINCTS.} of law, is exempt,^a because he could not expect to find ^{a Ir. It is the reason of his exemption.} him in any other place.

What is protection as to reciprocal rights? i.e., because there is no protection without offer of law, i.e. offer of law with regard to plunderings and wounds and blood-sheddings and protection, et alia similia.

Seven 'cumhals' of 'smacht'-fine, and full honor-price are due to the nobles for killing one under their protection, and half to the plebeians; and the pledge for the body-fine shall be placed in the hand of the protector.^b

For all wounds, from a death wound to a white blow, including the death wound, but not including the white blow, half his own 'smacht'-fine is due to the protector,^b according to the nature of plebeian or noble; and the proportion of his own honor-price, which is due to the person upon whom the wound or the injury was inflicted, according to its nature of ~~thrust or cut~~, is the proportion of his own honor-price which will be due to the protector^b for it. And there is no difference of thrust or cut in the protection with respect to the 'smacht'-fine.

What shall be due for the arresting by means of cutting (wounding)?

The fourth of honor-price to the nobles, and half honor-price to the plebeians, and compensation.

What shall be for the life-wound through cutting? If it be a noble that is under the protection of a plebeian, or a plebeian under the protection of a noble, two-thirds of their own honor-price¹ are due to the nobles, and half their own honor-price to the plebeians, and a restoration of the 'seds' which were given on account of the protection in each instance of them. If it be the case of a plebeian under the protection of a plebeian, full honor-price is due to each.

f. 05978

PRECINCTS.

Ciò b'iar denecclann ipin mbeoguin comcatais c'ach po mbithar mama? .1. an tainmhrainne ata don ti ar ar p'era in cneò, supab é in tainmhrainne c'edna d'a eneclann fein ber don comairce a p'etain cneòe for 5 a comairce.

Al fogla enecclainne a nupruður, maò cneò pobais
a cain.

Rit caird⁽¹⁾ ocur d'ligi d'igona go tpi nonbura .1. p'ect cumala gaça laime go tpi nonbura.

10 Rit caird⁹ .1. cumal gaça laime co tpi nonbura a n'oligi d'igona .1. ina rapugad im a comairce.

Rit na a'gina co cuicer³, ocur p'iet p'lois .1. ata p'ach p'lecta p'lois runo a n'oliged d'igona, ocur ipin poplorgad, ocur ni fail a cain ná a cairde.

||C 2649 d'wim

15 Deim p'ectac an eclair, co n'oligrit² e'ri r'aire d'aire amaul t'ed, ar ciò (i tan innzi mic maithair buirde dor nalla iarum po e'ri a'ct) .1. d'òne na c'ntaça, no d'ònithar na p'ectaca ip in neclair co n'oligrit e'ri, co ngadtar p'eich uad'a in baile a n'olegar bar .1. ip'lan di in di-20 de p'er na p'eib gin tairg'rin d'ligi a c'ctar de, ocur in d'idi iar' na p'eib go tairg'rin d'ligi, ocur in d'idi ar bar ocur ar innoligi p'ach dog'per. Ocur ip'lan di in lepu'gad ocur in comap'leigenn dog'per.

In t'ònacal, umop'ro, ocur in d'iten iar' na p'eib gin 25 tairg'rin d'ligi, ocur an d'ul ar cenò na mbib'a amac, ip p'ach d'itin in gaç ní d'ib rin on eclair. Ocur ip'iat

¹ In 'Cain'-law. There is some defect in the MS. here.

² For although.—The MS. is again defective in this place, and the portion of Irish enclosed in brackets has therefore been left untranslated.

05943

donartel songer

What shall be the amount of honor-price for the ^{PRECINCTS.} life-wound of a man of equal dignity who is in subjection to any person? I.e. whatever be the proportion which is due to the person upon whom the wound was inflicted, it is the same proportion of his own honour-price that is due to the protector for the inflicting of a wound upon the person under his protection.

His divisions of honor-price in 'urrudhus'-law, if it be a wound by thrusting in 'cain'-law.¹ . . .

The "running" of 'cairde'-law, and of the law of sanctuary is to thrice nine persons, i.e. seven 'cumhals' for every hand as far as thrice nine persons.

The "running" of 'cairde'-law, i.e. a 'cumhal' for every hand as far as thrice nine persons in the law of sanctuary, i.e. for violation to a person^a in regard of ^{Ir. His violation.}

The "running" of the compensation is as far as five persons, and the track of a host, i.e. the fine of the track of an army is here in the law of sanctuary, and for arson, and it is not in 'cain'-law, or in 'cairde'-law.

The church protects sinners,^b so that they come ^{Ir. A sin-} out of it free or bond, as they entered it, for although,^{2 ner.}

i.e. it shelters the trespassers, or the sinners are sheltered in the church until they come out of it, so that fines are accepted from them where death was deserved, i.e. it is safe for her (the church) to protect before the terms (specified times) without offer of law in either of them, and to protect after the terms with offer of law and to protect against death and unjust fines always. And she is exempt for entertaining and advising at all times.

As to the escorting and protecting, however, after the terms without offering law, and the going ~~out~~ for the ^{Security?} culprits (assuming their place?), fines for protecting are recoverable from the church in each case of these. And

PRECINCTS. Daine i¹rlan don eclair do leagan ar .i. ne²c do na ole³gan ní. No, i⁴r deo⁵ra na haicil⁶i nopleige⁷o ar, ocur ní ⁸bi a cin rí⁹de for lu¹⁰et na heca¹¹il¹²i. No d¹³no, i¹⁴r ana naona¹⁵r te¹⁶ga¹⁷it don neclair, ocur tia¹⁸ga¹⁹it a²⁰ir²¹te a naona²²r, ocur i²³r rlan don eclair rin, uair²⁴ ole²⁵gan do na g²⁶ra²⁷daib fla²⁸ta bia²⁹ta gin ímcomar³⁰c, ocur ní ole³¹gan do na g³²ra³³daib feine.

Ní obann d¹itan ar bar .i. ní obann, no ní d²u³ltann ne⁴c do d⁵itan ar bar, ocur ar inn⁶olige⁷ fia⁸c go tair⁹g¹⁰rin fia¹¹c, an¹² tan ole¹³gan bar.

Mana ti a¹o²b³pe⁴o, ocur ní uil⁵ bia⁶th⁷a, muna mo na aon a⁸o⁹che¹⁰ ata ar eir¹¹cept¹²ur don eclair, an baile a n¹³ole¹⁴gan bar o tua¹⁵i¹⁶t ga¹⁷bar fei¹⁸c o eclair, ocur ma fei¹⁹c o tua²⁰i²¹t, i²²rlan a²³g eclair.

15 fear¹ ce²rd³a, ma fi⁴t⁵i⁶r, ní ba rai⁷t fei⁸lmic mana bia⁹-th¹⁰a, no man eir¹¹da¹²r a cumat¹³ rin lei¹⁴ginn .i. in fe¹⁵r do ní an ce¹⁶rd¹⁷a ma¹⁸o fei¹⁹ga²⁰thair, ma aithair in fei²¹g a²²t, na hae, in foir²³ce²⁴daib, no aithair na ae, na ala²⁵rdan. Ocur no²⁶a mbepait einta na mac bir a²⁷g fogla²⁸im foil²⁹pe³⁰et 20 aca .i. fog¹nam fuid²ir³ no daor⁴ceile ua⁵taib pe⁶ na fogla⁷ma. Ocur ma mic uir⁸ra⁹da na haiaib ro, no mar ar dia do be¹⁰ra¹¹r dan doib, ní íca¹²it a naiaib a einta; ocur in tan i¹³r ar lo¹⁴g do g¹⁵ni¹⁶tar dan doib, íca¹⁷it aita¹⁸oib, a c¹⁹ra.

7 biath¹tar²g k³rf⁴o⁵ 7 na t⁶ga⁷i⁸t⁹ f¹⁰ fine
 7 biath¹thar² i³ar fog⁴nam 7 na tar⁵raigh⁶tar for fine, is ann.

¹ During the term of the learning, i.e. while they are serving their apprenticeship the pupils or apprentices were obliged to do all sorts of menial work for the master tradesman, such as to put out his dung, reap his corn, feed his pigs, or do any other kind of menial work, which was usually done by the 'fuidhir'-tenant, or the 'daer'-tenant. A good deal more on this subject will be found in the "Cain Lanamhna," Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. ii., p. 342, et seq.

the persons whom it is safe for the church to let PRECINCTS. escape, i.e. are persons of whom nothing is due. Or, according to others, it is pilgrims of the church she lets escape, and their crime is not upon the people of the church. Or indeed, according to others, it is alone they come to the church, and alone they go away, and that is safe for the church, for the chieftain grades are bound to entertain without asking questions, but the 'Feini' grades are not bound.

It refuses not shelter against death, i.e. it denies not, or it refuses not to shelter one against death, and from unlawful claims for debts so far as to offer to pay the debts when death is deserved.

Unless demand comes, and there is no refection, (unless more than one night is allowed as an exception to the church), where death is demanded of the laity, debts are accepted from the church, and if it be a case where debts would be accepted from the laity, the church is exempt.

A man of art, if a professor, cannot be surety for a pupil, unless he has fed him, or unless he has instructed him as long as a lecturer, i.e. the man who exercises the art, if he be a 'feigh-athair' ('the father of sharp art'), science, or teaching, or 'the father of art, or science.' And they do not sustain the liabilities of the sons who are learning their art with them, i.e. the service of a 'fuidhir'-tenant or a 'daer'-tenant is due from them during the term of the learning¹. And if these are the sons of native freemen, or, if they be taught the art for God's sake (i.e. gratis), their tutors shall not pay for their crimes; but when it is for a fee they are taught the art, their tutors shall pay² for their crimes.

*unless he feeds or unless he clothes him;
Similarly a f. l.*

¹ Their tutors shall pay. Before the word "icaire," in the MS., a few words occur which are very dim and seem to yield no intelligible meaning.

το breiteamius for κα huile cin το ní ζαc cιntαc, σιοcαcα.

OF THE JUDGMENT OF EVERY CRIME WHICH EVERY CRIMINAL COMMITS, DOWN HERE.

"Ein willkürlich herausgenommenes Stück aus der Sammlung H. 3. 17
 (besprochen p. 168 f.), welche Zitate (nebst Glossen) aus verschiedenen Rechtsgesetzen ^{festen} zusammenstellt, die sich auf dasselbe Rechtsgebiet beziehen.
 Dadurch dass die Randnoten, welche die Quellen angeben, in die
 Anmerkungen verwiesen sind (S. 240. 247. 252. 253), ist der ^{ein} einheitliche Charakter des Stücks etwas verdunkelt.

of also C 1595 & C 2294 for beginning.

16. DO BREITEACMNIUS FOR NA HUILE CİN DO NÍ 3AC CINTAC, SIOSANA.

OF EVERY
 CRIME.

Cir lır poðla for cıntaib caé cıntaı?
 Nın—a peét.

donach be son
 donach mbe son C. 2395

CADIAE PAIP PADEIRIN? MA NEPLA; MAP PULLA, TEIT FOR INNILE DO BEODILE NO DO MAIRBODILE. DO NACH BIR ON,
 5 A CINTFOR/ATHAIR. IR AUIODIU INA BI ATHAIR TEIT A CİN
 FOR A BRATHAIR OCUR A DEIRBINE. MAP PULLATRIDE
 CONA HURTAIR FORPA, A CİN FOR A PLATH. IR A UIODIU NA BI LAIR, BID A CİN FOR A LEUIOD, BRUIT, OCUR BIUD.
 IR A UIODIU, MANA ARURTAIR FOR A LEUIOD, BID A CİN
 10 FOR RIĞ. IR DE IRDEARAR, CAÉ DICENN CO RÍ, AR A CİN
 FENECHUR, DO UIOD CİNADH CACH CINTAIG.

Cir lır poðla, .i. cia lın ar a ninnlithen éiric cınad in cıntaig, .i.
 eiric a cınta. MA NEPLA, .i. maðia nêlôð cınte. MAP PULLA, TEIT
 FOR INNILE, .i. eirir tır ocır innile. DO NACH BIR ON, .i. mana poib 15 annro ón. A CİN FOR ATHAIR, .i. uair na bí mac, ar oia mbeiríðe ir PAIP NO RACHAD RÍARU TIRAD FOR ATHAIR, uair ata ir in coir péine, cén ber fine ar a cinn in for cula do raiğ. INA BI ATHAIR, .i. mana poib athair an. FOR A BRATHAIR, .i. ar a deapðbrátair. A DEIRBINE, .i. gelfine, in tan na bíð deapðbrátair. FOR A PLATH

¹ Which are they?—On the left-hand margin of the MS., opposite the words
 'CADIAE PAIP PADEIRIN,' is the remark 'urincect caol ro'; 'this is slender uraicecht,' or instruction—a reference to some law tract so called.

² 'Coir Feine'-law.—This was a law of adjustment by which the Feine, or agricultural classes, settled their cases of damage and trespass of cattle, &c. Vide
 C. 27.

OF THE JUDGMENT OF EVERY CRIME WHICH EVERY CRIMINAL COMMITS, DOWN HERE.

How many divisions are there of^a the crimes of OF EVERY CRIME. every criminal?

Answer—Seven.

Which are they? ^{Upon himself} ~~upon himself~~? If he absconds, ^{not} ~~has~~ absconded, it goes upon his chattels, of living chattels or of dead chattels. As to him who has them not, his crime goes upon his father. It is in the case of him who has not a father that his crime goes upon his brother, and his 'deirbhfhine'-relations. If they have absconded so that they cannot be caught, his crime goes upon his chief. It is in this case, if he has not a chief, that his crime is upon his bed, raiment, and food. It is then, if ~~his bed cannot be found~~, that his crime is to be upon the king. It is ~~from this~~ is said, "Every headless man (i.e. without a chief) to the king," as the 'Fenechus'-law says, of the incidence^b of the crime of every criminal.

^a Ir. Upon.

he be not caught on his bed (ad. reith)

^b Ir. ~~Law~~ forms, provides ~~never~~

How many divisions, i.e. how many are they upon whom the 'eric'-fine for the crime of the criminal is put, i.e. the 'eric'-fine for his crimes. If he absconds, i.e. if he absconds without paying. If he has absconded, it goes upon his chattels, i.e. both land and chattels. As to him who has them not, i.e. if he has them not here even. His crime goes upon his father, i.e. when he has no son; for if there was a son, it is upon him it (the crime) should go before it went upon the father. For there is in the 'Coir Feine'-law,² "As long as there is a family before him, it is not backwards he sues." It is in the case of him who has not a father, i.e. if there be not a father there. Upon his brother, i.e. upon his real brother. His 'deirbhfhine'-relations,³ i.e. upon his 'gelfine'-relations, when there is no brother. Upon ² 'Derbhfhine'-relations. For an explanation of this, and 'geilfine,' 'iarfine,' &c., vide C. 984, et seq., and n. p. 220, supra. Also, Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. iii., p. cxxxix., et seq.; and Maine's Early History of Institutions, p. 208, et seq.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

1. plaité b'p forpar ngeirine atarulla ann, ocuy ní hé ip plaité do deirb'pne, na do iar'pne. 1r éuca éinnegear in éin riariú co narurpar co deirb'pne a no gað a ngiallu. 1r aruioiu na bi lair, .i. ip do ni aóa ip'ín na bi plaité aige. Dúo a cin for a lepuio, .i. leir éin, nó lan éin, no trian éin. Mana arurpar for a lepuio, .i. ip don iadó ipin, mana tarurpar for a lepuio é. Dúo a cin for riú, .i. bió a cin for riú in cuicró. 1r de ipbeapap caé dicenn co ri, .i. ip de rapap caé in gur na bi ábal cenn cináó ip do éum in riú beapap é.

||C1595, 2295

x ||08.971

IV 268.1

10 Conbeir cináó cach brathair co taber deirb'pne.
x Saištech cach fine, Eiréntach cach fine^x iar nelot cintais; do na be deirb'pne foloinz taoib'pne, no iar'pne, a plaité, a riú, a pecht; conregeat, arpenat, do nimaircet cinto caé cintois.

a cin 7 add C1595

15 Nach deoraidó din cintoach arlai, na roich in etoil fir platha, na bi conarurpar, uair ip ditéctais, dítir, do potparad.

com-?

Conbeir, .i. commbeir, no canbeir caé brathair iar níc don mac ocuy don athair ocaí, no co na biat itir. Co taber deirb'pne, 20 .i. ip taréneiaé beirer geirine. Saištech cach fine, .i. apad ocuy troradó forai. Eiréntach cach fine, .i. eirnió caé fine riacha iar léco élaigte don cinto. Do na be deirb'pne, .i. mana roibe deirb'pne ar geirine aige. Foloinz taoib'pne, .i. impuilegit fine taoib a brathair. No iar'pne, .i. a mic, no aipe buoem. 1r aipe 25 potpar cin for deirb'pne, ocuy iar'pne riuto riariú teir for ar plaité, ar ip aon plaité riú forpar; plaité geirine imurro, tm té priur.
C plaité, .i. plaité na ceirne fine.

tantum fine?
famen??

Caé cenn no gað a ngiallu no conicpa a ngabail, caé ni no gað

¹ Prius. The contracted words here are unintelligible to the editors.

his chief, i.e. the chief who is over the 'geilfine'-division which happens to be there (in existence); and it is not the chief of the 'deirbhfine'-division, nor of the 'iarfine'-division. It is on them (the 'geilfine'-relations) the crime is charged by him before he brings it to the 'deirbhfine'-division from whom he has taken their pledges. It is in this case, if he has not a chief; i.e. it is in these cases where he has no chief. His crime is upon his bed, i.e. half-crime, or full crime, or a third of crime. If his bed cannot be found, i.e. in that case, if he is not caught upon his bed. His crime is upon the king, i.e. his crime is upon the king of the province. It is from this is said, "Every headless man to the king," i.e. it is from this is said, that everything that has not a great head for ^a sustaining liability for crime, it is to the king it is brought.

OF EVERY CRIME.

a Ir. Of.

^{brother} Every brother bears crimes, ~~until~~ the 'deirbhfine'-division bears them. Every family is suable. Every family is liable to pay after the evasion of a criminal; when he has no 'deirbhfine'-division, the 'taoibhfine'-division bears it (the liability), or an 'iarfine'-division, his chief, his king, his law; they bind, they pay, they bear the crimes of every criminal.

(N.B. Note adjs.)

restrain, compel

Every exile now who as a criminal absconds, who has not gone away in violation of his oath to a chief, who is not to be made amenable, because he is without possession, without land, is put upon the road.

Every brother bears crime equally, i.e. equally, or beautifully each brother bears it, after it has been paid by the son and by the father, with them (when they there are such), or when they have them not at all. The 'deirbhfine'-division bears, i.e. beautifully the 'geilfine'-division bears it. Every family is suable, i.e. notice and fasting ~~are to be enjoined~~ upon them. Every family is liable to pay, i.e. each family shall pay debts after the criminal has absconded. When he has no 'deirbhfine'-relations, i.e. if he has not 'deirbhfine'-relations in place of 'geilfine'-relations. The 'taoibhfine'-division bears it, i.e. his brother's side-family shall bear it. Or an 'iarfine'-division, i.e. the after family of his son, or upon the son himself if he exists. The reason why the crime goes upon the 'deirbhfine'-division and the 'iarfine'-division here, before it goes upon the chief is, because it is one chief that is over them; as to the 'geilfine'-chief, now ṛm̄cc prius.¹ His chief, i.e. the chief of the four families.

(may be used)

Every head (chief) who has taken their pledges or who is com-

OF EVERY
CRIME.

17 α cin fair, mana tarrairtar for α fine; caé aon imurro, na ro gaé ocuf na caoinnacair, ni biaó α cin fair cení tarrairtar for α fine.

recht .f. na huilke
C2295

Α riξ, .i. riξ na tuaité. Α recht, .i. riξ in cuicid. Conpexat, 5.1. cumpraiget. Αrpenat, .i. ícat mana cumpraiget. Do nimair-cet cirta caé cirtaig, .i. timaircther opra rin na cirta do ni gaé cirtaé.

Nach veoraió din cirtach arlai, .i. naé ar gaé; nach veora, no náé viurraió élar iar noenai cinaó Na roich in etoil rin 10 rlatha, .i. maó toil naime don toil rlaθra na rlaθa. Na bi conarurtar, .i. mana roib re co tarrairtar é. Uair 17 díteétaig, ditéir, .i. in tí na teétann innile [na tir]. Do rotraió, .i.
raióig in breiteín α óul for róe.

q III 68.8

Cach cin deébiré do ní duine cenmoθa marbaó, dia tarrair-15 tar fair, 17 éric uaóa buðein co ro tocaiter ór ocuf aigeó ocuf innile ocuf α éir inn; aní bir fair cin éric, 17 íc dia fine amuil cobrannat epó.

Mana tarrairtar fair, 17 íc dia fine iar tocaiteín α tire rin inn, amuil comrannat epó.

20 Maó marbaó deébiré, cenmoθa na ceithre gona duine deé-biré in corura fine, .i. guin in mic deirþine, guin daθa na fine, guin mic paorma, guin mic mna fine; cia tarrairtar fair gi ní tarrairtar, 17 íc dia fine amuil comrannat epó, ocuf ícaigroín cumal aithgea, ocuf eutpuma fpi mac no athair, 25 do na ré cumala oipe.

Ciό armaó fair aonar dechraó gaé cin do gni duine cenmoθa marbaó maó dia mbe oga α íc?

Nin:—Ar ció fpi aonar do gniter oic, cenmoθa marbaó, 17 fpi aonar ícpaithar. Gaé marbaó imurro do gni, ní hé petent to take them : for every thing which he has taken, his crime is upon him, if it cannot be charged upon his family ; as to everyone, however, from whom he has not taken a pledge and could not take it, his crime shall not be upon him, even though it be not charged upon his family.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

His king, i.e. the king of the territory. His law, i.e. the king of the province. They bind, i.e. who bind. They pay, i.e. they pay unless they bind. They bear the crimes of every criminal, i.e. the crimes which every criminal commits is visited upon these.

Every exile now who as a criminal absconds, i.e. every is for each, every exile, or every non-native, who absconds after committing a crime. Who has not gone away in violation of his oath to a chief, i.e. who has not consented to bonds, who is not willing to take the chain of the chief. Who is not to be made amenable, i.e. if he is not so placed as to be held accountable. Because he is without possession, without land, i.e. the person who does not possess chattels nor land. He is put upon the road, i.e. the judge orders him to go upon the road.

*cf. Lar. 29¹
268²* As to every crime of necessity which a person commits except killing, if it is visited on himself, the 'eric'-fine is raised from him until his gold, and silver, and chattels, and his land are exhausted for it ; what he owes^a besides 'eric'-fine is to be paid by his family, in the proportions in which they divide his property. ^a Ir. Is on him.

If it (the payment) is not found with himself, it is paid by his family, after his land has been spent in it, in the proportions in which they divide his property.

If it be a necessary killing, except the four necessary woundings of a person in the 'corus fine'-law (i.e. the wounding of a son of the 'deirbhfine'-division, the wounding of a foster son of the family, the wounding of an adopted son, the wounding of the son of a woman of the family) ; whether it (the means of payment) be found upon him, or be not found upon him, his family are to pay in the proportion in which^b they divide his property, and he pays a ^b Ir. As. 'cumhal' of compensation, and an equal share with father or son, of the six 'cumhals' of 'dire'-fine.

What is the reason that it is upon himself alone every crime that a person commits goes, except killing, provided he has the means of paying for it?

^a Ir. Its payment.

Answer : Because though it be against him alone evil is done, except killing, it is to himself alone it shall be paid. Every killing however which he commits, it is not he alone that shall pay for,

OF EVERY
CRIME.

áonaip iorup cia beit oga, áct teip fon fine; ocup ipe in ráé ón;
ap ció eipín no ció a mac nó marbta, ip fine uile nó beipáó coirpoipe neátaip de, ocup ní ba a mac no átaip tñ.

fan tñnn ?
= a census supra

Cáé ein inoeáipin imuppo, do gni duine itip marbáó ocup
5 anail[nofaill] ip eádeipin inn, ocup innile. Manataipupitap paip imuppo, mana be a íc ann, ip íc dia mac, co po tocaitep a innile, ocup a típ inn.

Mana be a íc ann beop, ip íc dia áthair fon coip cetna.

Mana be a íc ann beop, ip íc do gaó teallaó ip nera co
10 poip a mbe oca, co po lan íc in cinuáó uaáa; ocup ip aipe icup gaó tellaó ip nero, uair ip inoeáipin in cin rin buáem, uair naó é do ponpat in cinuáó.

dekhad (2)

|| IV 268.6f.

Maó oib deáipine; deáipin cia gelltap; gelltap gola, luíge realb petab; spuiche áaon oioáó; 15 fepf fep orba.

Maó oib deáipine, .i. maó oib aipneitep ann do na cinab deáipine. Deáipin cia gelltap, .i. ip deáipin cia gelltap a peponn de ma cinab deáipine. Gelltap gola, .i. gelltap de é on gola, on cuáe. Luíge realb petab, .i. tuáe peponn [ocup in-20 uile] ma cinab deáipine. Spuiche áaon oioáó, .i. ip uáile in áaon rin ináí a oiaó pet ocup maíne. Fepf fep orba, .i. ip fepf in fep rin inap in peponn in tan ip cin deáipine.

Á chináa inoeáipine uile itip marbáó ocup gan marbáó
a puaíé inn ap tap, ocup pé buáem ina deáipíó; ocup ma 25 á imapepaó ann, a ául ipin teallaó ip nero. Ocup a poáa don fine inné a oíluíuá fep do áenat ocup in peponn do beá acu, nó ine in peponn do beááó ip in cinuáó; ocup a poáa na fine áa rin.

1 Or neglect.—The Irish in brackets is written by another scribe over the word
'anail', implying the writer's opinion that the reading should be 'an paill, the neglect.' See, however, p. 268, infra, line 3.

though he has the means of paying for it, but it goes upon the family; and this now is the reason: because, though it were himself or his son that had been killed, it is the whole family that would take the body-fine of either of them, and not his son, or father, in the case.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

As to every unnecessary crime, however, which a person commits, whether killing and otherwise (or neglect),¹ it is himself that is accountable for it (in his person), and his chattels and his land. If it (means of payment) is not found with him, if he has not the payment for it, it is to be paid by his son, until his chattels and his land are exhausted for it.

If payment is not here even (in the son's power), it is to be paid by his father in the same manner.

If payment is not even here (in the father's power), it is to be paid by every next hearth until it ~~reach~~ what there is of them; until the full payment of the crime is made by them; and the reason why each nearest hearth pays is, because that itself is an unnecessary crime, since it was not they that committed the crime.

is exhausted?

If it is of cases of necessity,² it is necessity though pledged. There is a pledge as to prison, property and 'seds' go. This one man is nobler than 'dibadh'-property. A man is better than land.

If it is of cases of necessity, i.e. if it is of these mention is made in the case of the necessary (or unintentional) crimes. Necessity though pledged, i.e. it is necessary if his land be pledged on his account for his necessary crimes. There is a pledge as to prison, i.e. there is a pledge to redeem him from the prison, from the pit. Property and 'seds' go, i.e. his land and his chattels are forfeited for his necessary crimes. This one man is nobler than 'dibadh'-property, i.e. this man is nobler than his 'dibadh'-property in 'seds' and other goods. A man is better than land, i.e. this man is better than the land, when it is a case of a crime of necessity.

In all his unnecessary crimes, both killing and not killing, his movables go first for it (the crime), and himself afterwards; and if there is an excess (more than he can pay), it goes upon the next hearth. And the family have the choice whether to hand him over and have the land to themselves, or whether they will give the land for the crime; and it is within the choice of the family this lies.*

* Ir. Is.

² If it is of cases of necessity.—In the MS. on the right hand margin opposite this paragraph, occurs the note, 'Corus fine po.' This is "Corus Fine" (Family Law.) The paragraph, like many other fragments of text in the present volume, appears to have been originally in metre.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

Α δὲντα δεῖτβιρε μαρβτα, α ρευτε in αρ τυρ ουρ α αν-ρευτε inα δεγυρδ, ουρ ε ρειν inα δεγυρδ ριδε; ουρ μα τα inαρειραδ αν, α ουλ αρ εγυερ na γελρνε.

|| 17 268. 10f

Α cιnτα δεῖτβιρε ζαν μαρβαδ, α ρευτε inn αρ τυρ, ουρ α ανρευτε inα δεγυρδ, ουρ αρ e ρειν in α δεαγυρδ ρειγ;
ουρ μα τα inαρειραδ αν, α ουλ inη tellαc in νερο ρευτε αν.

10 Cιδ ρο δερα α cιnτα δεῖτβιρε cen μαρβαδ do ουλ inη tellαc in νερο, ουρ α cιnτα δεῖτβιρε μαρβτα do ουλ αρ ευγερ na γελρνε?

1r e in ραδ ρο δερα; da ρερτα beocneαd αρ, da mbeτ τηuαρη δειρic na beocneιde ριν ζαν εατεm ζαν τοδach in tan in μαρβ e, in e in τι in νερο no beραδ ε. Cοη no δειρde α cιnτα δεῖτβιρε ζαν μαρβαδ do ουλ inη tellαch in 15 νερο; ουρ da μαρβτα ε, do beραδ ζαδ ρερ do ευγερ na γελρνε ηρηannηρ da cοηρde. Cοη no δειρde in cin δεῖτβιρε μαρβτα do biaδ αιγi ciamaδ αρ ευγερ na γελρνε do dechραδ.

Cιδ ρο δερα α cιnτα inδεῖτβιρε inη μαρβαδ ουρ ζαν
20 μαρβαδ do ουλ inη tellαc in νερα?

1r e in ραδ ρο δερα; da mbeτ διβαδ αιγε, in e in τι in νερο do ρο beραδ ε; cοη no δειρde cia no dechρα α cιnτα inδε-ιτβιρε uile, inη μαρβαδ ουρ ζαν μαρβαδ, inη tellαch in νερο.

25 1ρεδ in cin inδεῖτβιρε ρunn cin cοηρατε. 1ρεδ in cin δεῖ-βιρε αν in in cορηρ ρνε cin ανροιτ, no inδεῖτβιρε τορδα.

max.
in chormaic so 7 is gaelmhut

1r 1op 1imra de 1oγ ρη in α ραλλ ραχα.

1. 1r 1op 1imra de ρη, α 1oγ do ριαcαib in ρη do ριγne in ραλλ.

¹ Necessary profit.—The Irish means "unnecessary profit," which is plainly a mistake of the scribe.

As to his necessary (or intentional) crimes of killing, his movable property goes for it (the crime) first, and his immovable property afterwards, and himself after that; and if there be more to be paid in the case, it (the excess) goes upon the five men of the 'geilfine'-division.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

In the case of his necessary crimes, except^a killing, his movable property goes for it (the crime) first, and his immovable property after it, and it is himself after this; and if there is more to be paid, it goes upon the nearest hearth that happens to be there.

^a Ir. Without.

What is the reason that his necessary crimes, except in case of killing, go upon the nearest hearth to him, and that his necessary crimes in case of killing go upon the five persons of the 'geilfine'-division?

The reason of it is: if a life-wound had been inflicted upon him, if a residue of the 'eric'-fine of the life-wound had remained unspent or not recovered at the time when he is dead, it is the person nearest to him of kin that would take it. It is proper accordingly that his necessary crimes, except^a killing, should go upon the nearest hearth; and if he had been killed, each man of the five men of the 'geilfine'-division would take a portion of his body-fine. It is proper accordingly that the crime of necessary killing which he might have incurred should go upon the five men of the 'geilfine'-division.

What is the reason that his unnecessary crimes, whether killing or not killing, go upon the nearest hearth?

The reason of it is: If he had 'dibadh'-property, it is the nearest person to him that would take it; it is proper accordingly, that the whole of his unnecessary crimes, both killing and not killing, should go to the nearest hearth to him.

What constitutes^b an unnecessary crime in this case is an intentional crime. What constitutes^b a necessary crime in the 'Corus fine'-law is an unintentional crime, or a crime of necessary profit.¹

^b Ir. Is.

unnecessary inadvertence

Sufficient with me² accordingly is the value of the man by whose neglect the debts are incurred.

That is, sufficient with me, accordingly, is value of the debts of the man who committed the neglect.

² Sufficient with me.—On the left-hand margin of the MS. opposite this fragment of text occurs the notice, "Cain Cormac ro, ocu r' gaol'man." "This is Cormac's 'Cain'-law, and it is akin" (related).

OF EVERY
CRIME.

Λορκαὶ ἀνφοῖτ, no inδειτβιρε τορβὰ ρο, οσυρ το mtheρ τροκαῖρε ριρ, ο ρο ρια λαν in μαρβτα, conά τέιτ ταῖριρ;
οσυρ nochα denταρ τροκαῖρε ριρ co ρο ρια λαν in μαρβτα.

Ἐὰν cin το γνω duine τρε inδειτβιρ τορβὰ, ciò mo, ciò lúg,
5 ciò cutpuma inna, ιρ α duλ πέιν inη mana βέ έιρuc oca, co nδερηνα λοg ρεετ cumail το ροgnum, ζ no co

Μαὶ mó inna, nó má cutpuma ρριρ, noα nδερηνα λοg in έιναιρὸ μαὶ luza inna. Ce beτ έιρuc oca ιτιρ, μαὶ mo inna πέιν in cin το gne, ιτ ρεετ cumala uaα inη α τροκαῖρε; α 10 etpocaipe imuppo, λαν ic in cinaδ, oia mbe oga.

Λα cpo tuilleδ naitpebhai

.1. Ιρ mo ειρεῖg na ρεετ cumala, λορκαὶ conpαιτε έ, οσυρ deopaiδ ppecair in duine, οσυρ ρο icτα α ρεετ cumala coirpδιρε πέ piaiτ, οσυρ α ρεετ cumala peinne ρε heclaiρ, οσυρ α τι cumail 15 cairde gαα λειτε το na ceitpe λειτε; οσυρ ρε το μαρβαὶ inα cinτα conpαιτε. Οσυρ α deir ιρ in corp, baααδ cach inα éinaiδ
.1. eibliδ cach inα cinταδ conpαιτε in tan na pαgαδ έιρuc.

Sect cumala ρορ nech loirceρ τρε anpot, no α λοg [ρognumα]
το dénaη, ma cutpama ρριρ λοg ρεετ cumala, no ma mó naρ 20 millteρ; ma luza imuppo innaic ρεετ cumala millteρ ann, ιρ α ceptlog dic.

Αρ τροκαῖρε ann ριη, οσυρ ni teit α éη ρορ fine in gcein ber in τί το ροιηηι αρ αιρδ, no ο ταρρυρταρ ραιρ. In tan na bi nectaρ de, ιρ ann τέιτ ρορ fine, οσυρ icait na ρεετ cumala.

This is a case of burning by inadvertence, or unnecessary profit, and leniency is exercised towards him, so that when it (the fine) reaches the full amount for the killing, it goes not beyond it; and leniency is not exercised towards him until it (the fine) reaches the full amount due for the killing.

As to every crime which a person commits ~~for~~ unnecessary profit, whether it be greater, whether it be less, whether it be equal, he himself goes for it, if he has not 'eric'-fine, until he has performed the value of seven 'cumhals' of service, ^{through}

If it is greater than, or if it is equal to him, he ~~does~~ ^{not} perform service equal to the amount due for the crime, if it is smaller than himself. Though he have the 'eric'-fine, however, if the crime which he commits be greater than himself, it is seven 'cumhals' that are due from him for it, in case leniency is shown; the severity of the case however, is, the full payment of the crime, if he has it.

To death dwellings add.

That is, this is more than seven 'cumhals,' it is a wilful burning, and the person is an outlawed stranger, and his seven 'cumhals' of body-fine have been paid to the chief, and his seven 'cumhals' for penance to the church, and his two 'cumhals' for 'cairde'-relations to each side of the four sides; and he is to be killed for his wilful crimes. And it says in the text^b: Every one dies for his crimes, i.e., every one dies for his wilful crimes, when he does not get 'eiric'-fine (is not allowed to compensate by paying 'eiric'-fine).

There is a fine of seven 'cumhals' imposed upon a person who burns by inadvertence, or he is to perform the value of it (the thing burned) in service, if what has been destroyed be equal to the value of seven 'cumhals,' or if it be greater; if what has been destroyed in the case be smaller than seven 'cumhals,' it is its exact value that is to be paid.

This is for leniency, and his crime does not go upon his family as long as the person who has done it is forthcoming, or when it (the fine) is found with him. When neither of these is the case, it is then that it (the fine) goes upon the family, and they pay the seven 'cumhals.'

^a An outlawed stranger.—For the meaning of this term, vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 3, pp. 381, 383, and note 1, p. 382.

arson, cf O'D 2278

OF EVERY
CRIME.

Ḥaé uair 17 loṛcaó coṁṁraite 17 clia nuó neét. Ḥaé uair 17 loṛcaó anṁoit 17 clia laṛraé naile. Caé uair 17 mo in aétgin na lan in maṛbta, do níṁar tṛócaire ne uṛraó im lan in maṛbaíó do ḡabail uadá; ocuṛ amuil do níṁer ne uṛraó, 17 aṁhluid do níṁer ne deoṛuid ocuṛ ne muṛcuṛta ocuṛ ne daoṛ.

Loṛcaó anṁoit no inṁeítbire toṛba ro; ocuṛ tṛocaire do rinne muṛ cin dul tar lan in maṛbta, tar feét cumala ann rin. 17 in tṛocaire uilḡaó, no timṁibe aneich dleḡar ann.

91? cf l. 12.

Deítbire 17 in uilḡaó ocuṛ timṁibe: uilḡaó .1. cin anṁoit no inṁeítbire toṛba muṛ fine; ocuṛ timṁibe cin anṁoit muṛ eétar fine.

Alṁgin 17 in loṛceter tṛe inṁeítbire toṛba, no mana talia fair ar méit na aétgina, uerbi ḡracia, arṁmachá do loṛca, 17 e peit inn no feét cumala. Máó tṛia coṁṁraite muṛro, 17 lan uṛne la aétgin inn; ocuṛ riṁh foṛ an uṛne co tṛí feotu beoṛ .1. lan uṛne ocuṛ leé uṛne ocuṛ tṛian uṛne.

cumae O'D
comae C2312
comaithe C389

Camaithe
C2312, 389
O'D 2392

Alcht cumae atait ceítṛe ḡona duine deítbire naó eillnet coimḡe laime, ḡrít.

with a beith at comorghi
mail each for don fine C389

.1. Alta aét lṁ ann, an aei, no ar aíde co fuilít ceítṛe duine 17 deítbire do ḡim; ocuṛ nochá tabuir eillneó cinuid ar nech cin co deṛna comorḡe no coimmarṁaine muṛ olcena o lamh.

1 noḡail muṛ deṛbṁine, coṛpṁine ocuṛ einedlann dleḡat in fine in a maṛbaó; aét maó do muáct an eṛic doib muṛiu do

¹ A new clean frame.—For 'clia' of the text, O'D., 590, reads 'cliaé,' 'a hurdle.' This was required when the building had to be restored, and upon new ground altogether. For sundry regulations on this subject, vide O'D., 590.

² Compensation is made.—On the right-hand margin of the MS. opposite this Whenever it is an intentional burning it must be a new clean frame.¹ Whenever it is a burning by inadvertence, it must be a frame upon the site of the former. Every time that the compensation is greater than the full fine for the killing, leniency is exercised towards the native freeman, as regards accepting the full fine for the killing from him; and as is done to the native freeman, so it is done to the stranger and the foreigner^a and the 'daor'-person.

OF EVERY
CRIME. ??

^a Ir. Sea-sent.

This is a burning by inadvertence or for unnecessary profit; and it was leniency that was exercised towards him in not going beyond the full (penalty) for the killing, beyond seven 'cumhals,' in the case. The leniency is forgiveness, or curtailment of what is due of him for it.

There is a difference between forgiveness and curtailment: Forgiveness, i.e. a crime of inadvertence or unnecessary profit against the family; and curtailment, i.e. an unintentional crime against an extern family.

Compensation is made^a for what is burned through an idea of unnecessary profit, or if it (the penalty) falls not on him according to the greatness of the compensation (verbi gracia, to burn Ardmacha), it is he himself that goes in lieu of it, or seven 'cumhals.' If it (the burning) is done intentionally, however, it is full 'dire'-fine, with compensation that is paid for it; and the 'dire'-fine is to advance to three 'seds' besides, i.e., full 'dire'-fine and half 'dire'-fine and a third of 'dire'-fine.

Burnt 17 times between 670 and 1511 (FM)!

But there are four necessary woundings of a person, which defile not the purity of the hand, &c.

That is, I make an exception^a in the case, for, or because that there are four people whom it is necessary (or justifiable) to wound; and it does not bring defilement of crime upon a person though he does not preserve purity or lenity towards them in general from his hand.

In avenging^a a man of the 'deirbh-fine'-division, it is body-fine and honour-price the family are entitled to for the killing of him; but if the 'eric'-fine has been paid^b to them before they effected the ^b Ir. Reached.

commentary, occurs the note, "uráicect caol mbec; slender little 'uraicecht' (instruction)." cf p. 240 supra

^a I make an exception.—On the right-hand margin of the MS., opposite this commentary, is found the note, "coruy fine": (family law.)

^a In avenging.—This was where the family of the slain man slew the slayer, or some one in his place.

OF EVERY CRIME. ¹ ² ³ ⁴ ⁵ ⁶ ⁷ ⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰ ¹¹ ¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰ ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵ ³⁵⁶ ³⁵⁷ ³⁵⁸ ³⁵⁹ ³⁶⁰ ³⁶¹ ³⁶² ³⁶³ ³⁶⁴ ³⁶⁵ ³⁶⁶ ³⁶⁷ ³⁶⁸ ³⁶⁹ ³⁷⁰ ³⁷¹ ³⁷² ³⁷³ ³⁷⁴ ³⁷⁵ ³⁷⁶ ³⁷⁷ ³⁷⁸ ³⁷⁹ ³⁸⁰ ³⁸¹ ³⁸² ³⁸³ ³⁸⁴ ³⁸⁵ ³⁸⁶ ³⁸⁷ ³⁸⁸ ³⁸⁹ ³⁹⁰ ³⁹¹ ³⁹² ³⁹³ ³⁹⁴ ³⁹⁵ ³⁹⁶ ³⁹⁷ ³⁹⁸ ³⁹⁹ ⁴⁰⁰ ⁴⁰¹ ⁴⁰² ⁴⁰³ ⁴⁰⁴ ⁴⁰⁵ ⁴⁰⁶ ⁴⁰⁷ ⁴⁰⁸ ⁴⁰⁹ ⁴¹⁰ ⁴¹¹ ⁴¹² ⁴¹³ ⁴¹⁴ ⁴¹⁵ ⁴¹⁶ ⁴¹⁷ ⁴¹⁸ ⁴¹⁹ ⁴²⁰ ⁴²¹ ⁴²² ⁴²³ ⁴²⁴ ⁴²⁵ ⁴²⁶ ⁴²⁷ ⁴²⁸ ⁴²⁹ ⁴³⁰ ⁴³¹ ⁴³² ⁴³³ ⁴³⁴ ⁴³⁵ ⁴³⁶ ⁴³⁷ ⁴³⁸ ⁴³⁹ ⁴⁴⁰ ⁴⁴¹ ⁴⁴² ⁴⁴³ ⁴⁴⁴ ⁴⁴⁵ ⁴⁴⁶ ⁴⁴⁷ ⁴⁴⁸ ⁴⁴⁹ ⁴⁵⁰ ⁴⁵¹ ⁴⁵² ⁴⁵³ ⁴⁵⁴ ⁴⁵⁵ ⁴⁵⁶ ⁴⁵⁷ ⁴⁵⁸ ⁴⁵⁹ ⁴⁶⁰ ⁴⁶¹ ⁴⁶² ⁴⁶³ ⁴⁶⁴ ⁴⁶⁵ ⁴⁶⁶ ⁴⁶⁷ ⁴⁶⁸ ⁴⁶⁹ ⁴⁷⁰ ⁴⁷¹ ⁴⁷² ⁴⁷³ ⁴⁷⁴ ⁴⁷⁵ ⁴⁷⁶ ⁴⁷⁷ ⁴⁷⁸ ⁴⁷⁹ ⁴⁸⁰ ⁴⁸¹ ⁴⁸² ⁴⁸³ ⁴⁸⁴ ⁴⁸⁵ ⁴⁸⁶ ⁴⁸⁷ ⁴⁸⁸ ⁴⁸⁹ ⁴⁹⁰ ⁴⁹¹ ⁴⁹² ⁴⁹³ ⁴⁹⁴ ⁴⁹⁵ ⁴⁹⁶ ⁴⁹⁷ ⁴⁹⁸ ⁴⁹⁹ ⁵⁰⁰ ⁵⁰¹ ⁵⁰² ⁵⁰³ ⁵⁰⁴ ⁵⁰⁵ ⁵⁰⁶ ⁵⁰⁷ ⁵⁰⁸ ⁵⁰⁹ ⁵¹⁰ ⁵¹¹ ⁵¹² ⁵¹³ ⁵¹⁴ ⁵¹⁵ ⁵¹⁶ ⁵¹⁷ ⁵¹⁸ ⁵¹⁹ ⁵²⁰ ⁵²¹ ⁵²² ⁵²³ ⁵²⁴ ⁵²⁵ ⁵²⁶ ⁵²⁷ ⁵²⁸ ⁵²⁹ ⁵³⁰ ⁵³¹ ⁵³² ⁵³³ ⁵³⁴ ⁵³⁵ ⁵³⁶ ⁵³⁷ ⁵³⁸ ⁵³⁹ ⁵⁴⁰ ⁵⁴¹ ⁵⁴² ⁵⁴³ ⁵⁴⁴ ⁵⁴⁵ ⁵⁴⁶ ⁵⁴⁷ ⁵⁴⁸ ⁵⁴⁹ ⁵⁵⁰ ⁵⁵¹ ⁵⁵² ⁵⁵³ ⁵⁵⁴ ⁵⁵⁵ ⁵⁵⁶ ⁵⁵⁷ ⁵⁵⁸ ⁵⁵⁹ ⁵⁶⁰ ⁵⁶¹ ⁵⁶² ⁵⁶³ ⁵⁶⁴ ⁵⁶⁵ ⁵⁶⁶ ⁵⁶⁷ ⁵⁶⁸ ⁵⁶⁹ ⁵⁷⁰ ⁵⁷¹ ⁵⁷² ⁵⁷³ ⁵⁷⁴ ⁵⁷⁵ ⁵⁷⁶ ⁵⁷⁷ ⁵⁷⁸ ⁵⁷⁹ ⁵⁸⁰ ⁵⁸¹ ⁵⁸² ⁵⁸³ ⁵⁸⁴ ⁵⁸⁵ ⁵⁸⁶ ⁵⁸⁷ ⁵⁸⁸ ⁵⁸⁹ ⁵⁹⁰ ⁵⁹¹ ⁵⁹² ⁵⁹³ ⁵⁹⁴ ⁵⁹⁵ ⁵⁹⁶ ⁵⁹⁷ ⁵⁹⁸ ⁵⁹⁹ ⁶⁰⁰ ⁶⁰¹ ⁶⁰² ⁶⁰³ ⁶⁰⁴ ⁶⁰⁵ ⁶⁰⁶ ⁶⁰⁷ ⁶⁰⁸ ⁶⁰⁹ ⁶¹⁰ ⁶¹¹ ⁶¹² ⁶¹³ ⁶¹⁴ ⁶¹⁵ ⁶¹⁶ ⁶¹⁷ ⁶¹⁸ ⁶¹⁹ ⁶²⁰ ⁶²¹ ⁶²² ⁶²³ ⁶²⁴ ⁶²⁵ ⁶²⁶ ⁶²⁷ ⁶²⁸ ⁶²⁹ ⁶³⁰ ⁶³¹ ⁶³² ⁶³³ ⁶³⁴ ⁶³⁵ ⁶³⁶ ⁶³⁷ ⁶³⁸ ⁶³⁹ ⁶⁴⁰ ⁶⁴¹ ⁶⁴² ⁶⁴³ ⁶⁴⁴ ⁶⁴⁵ ⁶⁴⁶ ⁶⁴⁷ ⁶⁴⁸ ⁶⁴⁹ ⁶⁵⁰ ⁶⁵¹ ⁶⁵² ⁶⁵³ ⁶⁵⁴ ⁶⁵⁵ ⁶⁵⁶ ⁶⁵⁷ ⁶⁵⁸ ⁶⁵⁹ ⁶⁶⁰ ⁶⁶¹ ⁶⁶² ⁶⁶³ ⁶⁶⁴ ⁶⁶⁵ ⁶⁶⁶ ⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁸ ⁶⁶⁹ ⁶⁷⁰ ⁶⁷¹ ⁶⁷² ⁶⁷³ ⁶⁷⁴ ⁶⁷⁵ ⁶⁷⁶ ⁶⁷⁷ ⁶⁷⁸ ⁶⁷⁹ ⁶⁸⁰ ⁶⁸¹ ⁶⁸² ⁶⁸³ ⁶⁸⁴ ⁶⁸⁵ ⁶⁸⁶ ⁶⁸⁷ ⁶⁸⁸ ⁶⁸⁹ ⁶⁹⁰ ⁶⁹¹ ⁶⁹² ⁶⁹³ ⁶⁹⁴ ⁶⁹⁵ ⁶⁹⁶ ⁶⁹⁷ ⁶⁹⁸ ⁶⁹⁹ ⁷⁰⁰ ⁷⁰¹ ⁷⁰² ⁷⁰³ ⁷⁰⁴ ⁷⁰⁵ ⁷⁰⁶ ⁷⁰⁷ ⁷⁰⁸ ⁷⁰⁹ ⁷¹⁰ ⁷¹¹ ⁷¹² ⁷¹³ ⁷¹⁴ ⁷¹⁵ ⁷¹⁶ ⁷¹⁷ ⁷¹⁸ ⁷¹⁹ ⁷²⁰ ⁷²¹ ⁷²² ⁷²³ ⁷²⁴ ⁷²⁵ ⁷²⁶ ⁷²⁷ ⁷²⁸ ⁷²⁹ ⁷³⁰ ⁷³¹ ⁷³² ⁷³³ ⁷³⁴ ⁷³⁵ ⁷³⁶ ⁷³⁷ ⁷³⁸ ⁷³⁹ ⁷⁴⁰ ⁷⁴¹ ⁷⁴² ⁷⁴³ ⁷⁴⁴ ⁷⁴⁵ ⁷⁴⁶ ⁷⁴⁷ ⁷⁴⁸ ⁷⁴⁹ ⁷⁵⁰ ⁷⁵¹ ⁷⁵² ⁷⁵³ ⁷⁵⁴ ⁷⁵⁵ ⁷⁵⁶ ⁷⁵⁷ ⁷⁵⁸ ⁷⁵⁹ ⁷⁶⁰ ⁷⁶¹ ⁷⁶² ⁷⁶³ ⁷⁶⁴ ⁷⁶⁵ ⁷⁶⁶ ⁷⁶⁷ ⁷⁶⁸ ⁷⁶⁹ ⁷⁷⁰ ⁷⁷¹ ⁷⁷² ⁷⁷³ ⁷⁷⁴ ⁷⁷⁵ ⁷⁷⁶ ⁷⁷⁷ ⁷⁷⁸ ⁷⁷⁹ ⁷⁸⁰ ⁷⁸¹ ⁷⁸² ⁷⁸³ ⁷⁸⁴ ⁷⁸⁵ ⁷⁸⁶ ⁷⁸⁷ ⁷⁸⁸ ⁷⁸⁹ ⁷⁹⁰ ⁷⁹¹ ⁷⁹² ⁷⁹³ ⁷⁹⁴ ⁷⁹⁵ ⁷⁹⁶ ⁷⁹⁷ ⁷⁹⁸ ⁷⁹⁹ ⁸⁰⁰ ⁸⁰¹ ⁸⁰² ⁸⁰³ ⁸⁰⁴ ⁸⁰⁵ ⁸⁰⁶ ⁸⁰⁷ ⁸⁰⁸ ⁸⁰⁹ ⁸¹⁰ ⁸¹¹ ⁸¹² ⁸¹³ ⁸¹⁴ ⁸¹⁵ ⁸¹⁶ ⁸¹⁷ ⁸¹⁸ ⁸¹⁹ ⁸²⁰ ⁸²¹ ⁸²² ⁸²³ ⁸²⁴ ⁸²⁵ ⁸²⁶ ⁸²⁷ ⁸²⁸ ⁸²⁹ ⁸³⁰ ⁸³¹ ⁸³² ⁸³³ ⁸³⁴ ⁸³⁵ ⁸³⁶ ⁸³⁷ ⁸³⁸ ⁸³⁹ ⁸⁴⁰ ⁸⁴¹ ⁸⁴² ⁸⁴³ ⁸⁴⁴ ⁸⁴⁵ ⁸⁴⁶ ⁸⁴⁷ ⁸⁴⁸ ⁸⁴⁹ ⁸⁵⁰ ⁸⁵¹ ⁸⁵² ⁸⁵³ ⁸⁵⁴ ⁸⁵⁵ ⁸⁵⁶ ⁸⁵⁷ ⁸⁵⁸ ⁸⁵⁹ ⁸⁶⁰ ⁸⁶¹ ⁸⁶² ⁸⁶³ ⁸⁶⁴ ⁸⁶⁵ ⁸⁶⁶ ⁸⁶⁷ ⁸⁶⁸ ⁸⁶⁹ ⁸⁷⁰ ⁸⁷¹ ⁸⁷² ⁸⁷³ ⁸⁷⁴ ⁸⁷⁵ ⁸⁷⁶ ⁸⁷⁷ ⁸⁷⁸ ⁸⁷⁹ ⁸⁸⁰ ⁸⁸¹ ⁸⁸² ⁸⁸³ ⁸⁸⁴ ⁸⁸⁵ ⁸⁸⁶ ⁸⁸⁷ ⁸⁸⁸ ⁸⁸⁹ ⁸⁹⁰ ⁸⁹¹ ⁸⁹² ⁸⁹³ ⁸⁹⁴ ⁸⁹⁵ ⁸⁹⁶ ⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁸ ⁸⁹⁹ ⁹⁰⁰ ⁹⁰¹ ⁹⁰² ⁹⁰³ ⁹⁰⁴ ⁹⁰⁵ ⁹⁰⁶ ⁹⁰⁷ ⁹⁰⁸ ⁹⁰⁹ ⁹¹⁰ ⁹¹¹ ⁹¹² ⁹¹³ ⁹¹⁴ ⁹¹⁵ ⁹¹⁶ ⁹¹⁷ ⁹¹⁸ ⁹¹⁹ ⁹²⁰ ⁹²¹ ⁹²² ⁹²³ ⁹²⁴ ⁹²⁵ ⁹²⁶ ⁹²⁷ ⁹²⁸ ⁹²⁹ ⁹³⁰ ⁹³¹ ⁹³² ⁹³³ ⁹³⁴ ⁹³⁵ ⁹³⁶ ⁹³⁷ ⁹³⁸ ⁹³⁹ ⁹⁴⁰ ⁹⁴¹ ⁹⁴² ⁹⁴³ ⁹⁴⁴ ⁹⁴⁵ ⁹⁴⁶ ⁹⁴⁷ ⁹⁴⁸ ⁹⁴⁹ ⁹⁵⁰ ⁹⁵¹ ⁹⁵² ⁹⁵³ ⁹⁵⁴ ⁹⁵⁵ ⁹⁵⁶ ⁹⁵⁷ ⁹⁵⁸ ⁹⁵⁹ ⁹⁶⁰ ⁹⁶¹ ⁹⁶² ⁹⁶³ ⁹⁶⁴ ⁹⁶⁵ ⁹⁶⁶ ⁹⁶⁷ ⁹⁶⁸ ⁹⁶⁹ ⁹⁷⁰ ⁹⁷¹ ⁹⁷² ⁹⁷³ ⁹⁷⁴ ⁹⁷⁵ ⁹⁷⁶ ⁹⁷⁷ ⁹⁷⁸ ⁹⁷⁹ ⁹⁸⁰ ⁹⁸¹ ⁹⁸² ⁹⁸³ ⁹⁸⁴ ⁹⁸⁵ ⁹⁸⁶ ⁹⁸⁷ ⁹⁸⁸ ⁹⁸⁹ ⁹⁹⁰ ⁹⁹¹ ⁹⁹² ⁹⁹³ ⁹⁹⁴ ⁹⁹⁵ ⁹⁹⁶ ⁹⁹⁷ ⁹⁹⁸ ⁹⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰⁰ ¹⁰⁰¹ ¹⁰⁰² ¹⁰⁰³ ¹⁰⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁰⁹ ¹⁰¹⁰ ¹⁰¹¹ ¹⁰¹² ¹⁰¹³ ¹⁰¹⁴ ¹⁰¹⁵ ¹⁰¹⁶ ¹⁰¹⁷ ¹⁰¹⁸ ¹⁰¹⁹ ¹⁰²⁰ ¹⁰²¹ ¹⁰²² ¹⁰²³ ¹⁰²⁴ ¹⁰²⁵ ¹⁰²⁶ ¹⁰²⁷ ¹⁰²⁸ ¹⁰²⁹ ¹⁰³⁰ ¹⁰³¹ ¹⁰³² ¹⁰³³ ¹⁰³⁴ ¹⁰³⁵ ¹⁰³⁶ ¹⁰³⁷ ¹⁰³⁸ ¹⁰³⁹ ¹⁰⁴⁰ ¹⁰⁴¹ ¹⁰⁴² ¹⁰⁴³ ¹⁰⁴⁴ ¹⁰⁴⁵ ¹⁰⁴⁶ ¹⁰⁴⁷ ¹⁰⁴⁸ ¹⁰⁴⁹ ¹⁰⁵⁰ ¹⁰⁵¹ ¹⁰⁵² ¹⁰⁵³ ¹⁰⁵⁴ ¹⁰⁵⁵ ¹⁰⁵⁶ ¹⁰⁵⁷ ¹⁰⁵⁸ ¹⁰⁵⁹ ¹⁰⁶⁰ ¹⁰⁶¹ ¹⁰⁶² ¹⁰⁶³ ¹⁰⁶⁴ ¹⁰⁶⁵ ¹⁰⁶⁶ ¹⁰⁶⁷ ¹⁰⁶⁸ ¹⁰⁶⁹ ¹⁰⁷⁰ ¹⁰⁷¹ ¹⁰⁷² ¹⁰⁷³ ¹⁰⁷⁴ ¹⁰⁷⁵ ¹⁰⁷⁶ ¹⁰⁷⁷ ¹⁰⁷⁸ ¹⁰⁷⁹ ¹⁰⁸⁰ ¹⁰⁸¹ ¹⁰⁸² ¹⁰⁸³ ¹⁰⁸⁴ ¹⁰⁸⁵ ¹⁰⁸⁶ ¹⁰⁸⁷ ¹⁰⁸⁸ ¹⁰⁸⁹ ¹⁰⁹⁰ ¹⁰⁹¹ ¹⁰⁹² ¹⁰⁹³ ¹⁰⁹⁴ ¹⁰⁹⁵ ¹⁰⁹⁶ ¹⁰⁹⁷ ¹⁰⁹⁸ ¹⁰⁹⁹ ¹¹⁰⁰ ¹¹⁰¹ ¹¹⁰² ¹¹⁰³ ¹¹⁰⁴ ¹¹⁰⁵ ¹¹⁰⁶ ¹¹⁰⁷ ¹¹⁰⁸ ¹¹⁰⁹ ¹¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹¹ ¹¹¹² ¹¹¹³ ¹¹¹⁴ ¹¹¹⁵ ¹¹¹⁶ ¹¹¹⁷ ¹¹¹⁸ ¹¹¹⁹ ¹¹²⁰ ¹¹²¹ ¹¹²² ¹¹²³ ¹¹²⁴ ¹¹²⁵ ¹¹²⁶ ¹¹²⁷ ¹¹²⁸ ¹¹²⁹ ¹¹³⁰ ¹¹³¹ ¹¹³² ¹¹³³ ¹¹³⁴ ¹¹³⁵ ¹¹³⁶ ¹¹³⁷ ¹¹³⁸ ¹¹³⁹ ¹¹⁴⁰ ¹¹⁴¹ ¹¹⁴² ¹¹⁴³ ¹¹⁴⁴ ¹¹⁴⁵ ¹¹⁴⁶ ¹¹⁴⁷ ¹¹⁴⁸ ¹¹⁴⁹ ¹¹⁵⁰ ¹¹⁵¹ ¹¹⁵² ¹¹⁵³ ¹¹⁵⁴ ¹¹⁵⁵ ¹¹⁵⁶ ¹¹⁵⁷ ¹¹⁵⁸ ¹¹⁵⁹ ¹¹⁶⁰ ¹¹⁶¹ ¹¹⁶² ¹¹⁶³ ¹¹⁶⁴ ¹¹⁶⁵ ¹¹⁶⁶ ¹¹⁶⁷ ¹¹⁶⁸ ¹¹⁶⁹ ¹¹⁷⁰ ¹¹⁷¹ ¹¹⁷² ¹¹⁷³ ¹¹⁷⁴ ¹¹⁷⁵ ¹¹⁷⁶ ¹¹⁷⁷ ¹¹⁷⁸ ¹¹⁷⁹ ¹¹⁸⁰ ¹¹⁸¹ ¹¹⁸² ¹¹⁸³ ¹¹⁸⁴ ¹¹⁸⁵ ¹¹⁸⁶ ¹¹⁸⁷ ¹¹⁸⁸ ¹¹⁸⁹ ¹¹⁹⁰ ¹¹⁹¹ ¹¹⁹² ¹¹⁹³ ¹¹⁹⁴ ¹¹⁹⁵ ¹¹⁹⁶ ¹¹⁹⁷ ¹¹⁹⁸ ¹¹⁹⁹ ¹²⁰⁰ ¹²⁰¹ ¹²⁰² ¹²⁰³ ¹²⁰⁴ ¹²⁰⁵ ¹²⁰⁶ ¹²⁰⁷ ¹²⁰⁸ ¹²⁰⁹ ¹²¹⁰ ¹²¹¹ ¹²¹² ¹²¹³ ¹²¹⁴ ¹²¹⁵ ¹²¹⁶ ¹²¹⁷ ¹²¹⁸ ¹²¹⁹ ¹²²⁰ ¹²²¹ ¹²²² ¹²²³ ¹²²⁴ ¹²²⁵ ¹²²⁶ ¹²²⁷ ¹²²⁸ ¹²²⁹ ¹²³⁰ ¹²³¹ ¹²³² ¹²³³ ¹²³⁴ ¹²³⁵ ¹²³⁶ ¹²³⁷ ¹²³⁸ ¹²³⁹ ¹²⁴⁰ ¹²⁴¹ ¹²⁴² ¹²⁴³ ¹²⁴⁴ ¹²⁴⁵ ¹²⁴⁶ ¹²⁴⁷ ¹²⁴⁸ ¹²⁴⁹ ¹²⁵⁰ ¹²⁵¹ ¹²⁵² ¹²⁵³ ¹²⁵⁴ ¹²⁵⁵ ¹²⁵⁶ ¹²⁵⁷ ¹²⁵⁸ ¹²⁵⁹ ¹²⁶⁰ ¹²⁶¹ ¹²⁶² ¹²⁶³ ¹²⁶⁴ ¹²⁶⁵ ¹²⁶⁶ ¹²⁶⁷ ¹²⁶⁸ ¹²⁶⁹ ¹²⁷⁰ ¹²⁷¹ ¹²⁷² ¹²⁷³ ¹²⁷⁴ ¹²⁷⁵ ¹²⁷⁶ ¹²⁷⁷ ¹²⁷⁸ ¹²⁷⁹ ¹²⁸⁰ ¹²⁸¹ ¹²⁸² ¹²⁸³ ¹²⁸⁴ ¹²⁸⁵ ¹²⁸⁶ ¹²⁸⁷ ¹²⁸⁸ ¹²⁸⁹ ¹²⁹⁰ ¹²⁹¹ ¹²⁹² ¹²⁹³ ¹²⁹⁴ ¹²⁹⁵ ¹²⁹⁶ ¹²⁹⁷ ¹²⁹⁸ ¹²⁹⁹ ¹³⁰⁰ ¹³⁰¹ ¹³⁰² ¹³⁰³ ¹³⁰⁴ ¹³⁰⁵ ¹³⁰⁶ ¹³⁰⁷ ¹³⁰⁸ ¹³⁰⁹ ¹³¹⁰ ¹³¹¹ ¹³¹² ¹³¹³ ¹³¹⁴ ¹³¹⁵ ¹³¹⁶ ¹³¹⁷ ¹³¹⁸ ¹³¹⁹ ¹³²⁰ ¹³²¹ ¹³²² ¹³²³ ¹³²⁴ ¹³²⁵ ¹³²⁶ ¹³²⁷ ¹³²⁸ ¹³²⁹ ¹³³⁰ ¹³³¹ ¹³³² ¹³³³ ¹³³⁴ ¹³³⁵ ¹³³⁶ ¹³³⁷ ¹³³⁸ avenging of the man of the 'deirbhfine'-division, the family pay body-fine and honor-price out equal to it.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

If the 'eric'-fine had not been forthcoming to them at all, before they took the vengeance, and law had been offered them, they levy body-fine and honour-price among themselves within equally; and they divide it between them unequally, i.e. father and son have one-half^a by right. immediately

^a Ir. One-half to them.

If law has not been given, has not been offered them at all, and the 'eric'-fine has not reached them either, before they took the vengeance, they are safe as regards it to a third, and they levy a third outside, and they levy two-thirds equally among themselves within; and it (the 'eric'-fine from outside) is divided between them unequally, i.e. father and son have half, &c.

And those to whom belong the avenging of a man of the 'deirbhfine'-division are the five men of the 'geilfine'-division. Or, indeed, according to others, that avenging was proper to every one who was entitled to ~~damages in the way~~ of honour-price for his being killed. a share)

Vengeance for the foster child of the family.

That is, the foster-child and the sister's son.¹ It is damages of honour-price the family are entitled to for the killing of these; and if the honour-price damages to which they are entitled reached them before they had taken the vengeance, they pay body-fine and honour-price out equally. shares 4 II 26.3

If the honour-price damages to which they were entitled had not reached them before they had taken the vengeance, and if law has been offered them, there is to be an adjustment without reprisal between the body-fine and the honour-price which is due from them, and the honour-price damages which are due to them; and whichever of them has the excess, let them pay to the others.

If law has not been offered them at all, and the honour-price damages to which they are entitled have not reached them before they have taken the vengeance, it is safe for them as far as a third, and there is to be an adjustment between the two-thirds of body-fine which is due from them, and the honour-price damages; and whichever of them has the excess, let them pay to the others.

This is a common foster-child of the whole family; or though he be the foster-child of any one of them, there are honour-price damages due to every man of the family for the killing of him. That is,

OF EVERY
CRIME.

marbhad .i. mac faorma do gelfine, no do deirbhfine rin, no cú mac faorma doirbhfine, co mbeith fogail emeclannú do gac fir don fine ina marbad, maó ro batar uile ar airo as a gabail.

||C391, O'D2393

5 Or dia cuindecertar cuige a eiric, forocairfreom dia fine eiric lair 7ht.

Or dia .i. or ar ocuf, maó dia cuinneithear a eiric cuige ar amuf in ti do ruíne in tugail fir deirbhfine. Forocairfreom .i. urfogair freom dia fine firic lair.

10 1 noigail fir deirbhfine, acé ma do[ε]airgenn fein a lan amach, ocuf ro fogair dia fine ic lair, íreó olegar a gabail uaó, ocuf rlan do tar éirí.

Maó ro elordairfúin ar a haíle, ocuf nír gabad uaó, ocuf ro írat in fine a cuir tar eirí; in tan tigréom re oligeó, 15 ícuirí aitéin a éota gan lof gan ar gan inorbarit.

Maó do [ε]arzaróin fein a lan amac, ocuf nír fogair dia fine ic lair, ocuf ro elordóin, ocuf ro írat in fine a cuir tar eirí, in tan tigréom re oligeó ícuirí aitéin a éota go lof, ocuf ar, ocuf inorbarit; ocuf ícuirí lan emeclann in 20 feicheman ír ferir don fine; ocuf roinnit eturru í ro comairre no ro leairre. Ocuf emeclann gan leirín éloróte rin; ocuf ír rí rin in daira emeclann i coruf fine gan leirín elaihte. No dono, ír éloró in feicheman ír ferir don fine ro leice ann, ocuf in áon emeclann rin óic rir, ocuf a breir 25 do aonar; ocuf bíad in dublad re taob, cin co tug ar airo, ocuf bíad emeclann do gac fir don fine ír a héloró ro leiceó ano.

C. 393.

Cairde deirbhí eturru[ró], ocuf in baile ata, 'Fal fine ícur a

O'D. 994. áiche [copo nícthar fa cach ret no nícc co na romaine] ní éirí
O'D. 994.30 a náirerí doib ferir gleit na mer[na íth in tíre].'

¹ Of his 'eric'-fine.—That is, the 'eric'-fine of the man who has been slain in avenging the man of the 'deirbhfine'-division.

this was an adopted son of a 'geilfine'-division, or of a 'deirbh-fine'-division, or though he be the adopted son of an 'fainfine'-division, it is the rule that there are honor-price damages due to every man of the family for the killing of him, if they were all present at (consenting to) the adopting of him.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

And if 'eric'-fine is demanded from him, he calls upon his family to pay 'eric'-fine to him, &c.

And if, that is, 'os' for 'ocus,' i.e. if his 'eric'-fine is demanded of him, of the person who has taken the vengeance for the man of the 'deirbhfine'-division. He calls upon, i.e. he calls upon his own family to pay him truly.

In avenging a man of the 'deirbhfine'-division, in case only he himself offer to pay the full penalty out, and he has given notice to his family to pay him, ~~what is due is to receive it from him,~~ and he is safe afterwards.

If he has absconded afterwards, and it (payment) has not been accepted from him, and the family have paid his share after him; when he submits^a to law, he pays compensation for his share, with-^a Ir. Comes out produce,² or growth, or increase.

If he himself has offered to pay the full amount out, and has not given notice to his family to repay him, and has absconded, and his family pay his share after him, when he submits^a to law he pays compensation for his share, with produce, and growth, and increase; and he pays the full honor-price of the best creditor of the family (the best man among those who paid for him?); and they divide it between them equally, or unequally. And this is honor-price without having absconded; and this is the second honor-price in the 'corus fine'-law where there is no evasion. Or, indeed, according to others, it was evasion from the best creditor of the family that occurred in the case; and this one honor-price is to be paid him, and he alone is to take it; and there shall be the double besides, though he ~~brought it forward~~; and there shall be honor-price for every man of the family from which he has absconded.

What is the difference between these, and where it is said, "The limit of the duty of the family which pays his (a kinsman's) trespasses, until they are paid back every 'sed' which they have paid, together with its profit, the grazing of the grass, nor the mast, nor the corn of the land do not go into account against^b them."

^b Ir. For.

^a Produce. 'Lop,' means produce in the way of calves, butter, &c., 'ar,' growth of the body of an animal in size, flesh, &c.; 'monbairc,' improvement in general.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

Ciò fodepa foimeilt in peiann do duí a naíais na eimeclainni annsin, ocuf naé teit ann feo?

1f e in faé fodepa; do éuaíó in duine ar in peiann ann sin, ocuf nochá decharó ann feo; ocuf ar eigin ro cuire in 5 duine don peiann ann sin, ocuf dá deoin fein do éuaíó de annsin.

Cer.—Cif úir corannat cpo ocuf díad? Nín—Cethrair; .i. athair ocuf mac, brathair ocuf fine.

Cer.—Cif úir, .i. ceptam no comaircim cia úir no cia úir itir a 40 nairpoinnter cpo, coirpóire, ocuf díad ret ocuf maime if in tellach if nero. Athair, .i. ar fein. Mac .i. a mac fein. Brathair, .i. in dearbhrathair. Fine, .i. in geirfine.

Maó tá mac as in duine if marb ann, if cumal aiténa do bpeit do aonar, ma mairenn; ocuf mana mairenn, if a bpeit 5 dia athair; mana mairenn rídein, if a bpeit dia deirbhra-thair; mana mairenn fein, if in tí if nero dia bpeit. If aithleó comrionntir in coirpóire; trí cumala díre do mac ocuf do athair. Tait trí cumala díre ann ar a haíle; cumal díre díó do deirbhra-thair, do taóib. Aitait dá cumal díre ann 10 ar a aithleiríde; cumal díre díríde do mac ocuf dathair. Aitá aon cumal díre ann ar a aíte sin. A rionto fein ó tá in pei-iaétaraé in geirfine co roige in pei íaétaraé, ocuf ó tá in pei íaétaraé co ruige in pei íaétaraé, 7rít.

Sné eile. Cach cin co cintach 7rít.

cf III 342.28

25 .i. cem ber cintac ar áiró i crích do snér, noco ndeac a cric cona rétarb, co ro leice elóó in feicheman toicheóá, nochá dir inbleó[ga] in brathair, no inbleóóin rathá dastra, aét toicheó ar fein fo aigne a snaró.

Maó ro éuaíó in cintac a crich (cona rétarb) no cíó i crich ata, 30 maó ro leicirtar elóó in feicheman toicheóá, aét maó tait reoit ar áiró aige i crich, if a roga in feicheman toicheóá ata in aítgabail gébur no in inbleóóin rathá aigerur.

1 The lowest man.—The original transcriber remarks here: do gébur mórán 7leét aígnera ar rin a córuir fine máó bionn gnoite asao rir, ocuf mar roib, cár bec rin—"You will find many kinds of argument upon this in the family laws ('corus fine'), if you have need of them, and if not, is not this enough?"

= man

11 C407
cf. 6. 6. 11

What is the reason that the use of the land goes (is set) against the honor-price in that case, and that it does not in this? OF EVERY CRIME.

The reason is; the person went upon the land in that case, and he did not go in this; and it was forcibly the person was put off the land in that case, and it was voluntarily he went off it in this.

Question.—How many are they who divide the chattels and ‘dibadh’-property? Answer.—Four; father and son, brother and family.

Question.—How many, i.e. I question or I ask how many or what is the number between whom is fairly divided the chattels, body-fine, and the ‘dibadh’-property, ‘seds’ and goods, in the nearest hearth? A father, i.e. on himself. A son, i.e. his own son. A brother, i.e. the real brother. A family, i.e. the ‘geilfine’-division.

If the man who is dead in this case has a son, he takes the ‘cumhal’ of compensation alone, if he be alive; and if he is not alive, his father is to take it; if he (the father) is not alive, his brother is to take it; if he (the brother) is not alive, it is the nearest person to him that takes it. It is thus the body-fine is divided: three ‘cumhals’ of ‘dire’-fine go to the son and to the father. There are three ‘cumhals’ of ‘dire’-fine remaining after that; a ‘cumhal’ of ‘dire’-fine of them goes to a brother, collaterally. There are two cumhals of ‘dire’-fine still after this; a ‘cumhal’ of ‘dire’-fine of these goes to son and to father. There is one ‘cumhal’ of ‘dire’-fine there after that. That is to be divided from the lowest man of the ‘geilfine’-division until it reaches the uppermost man; and from the uppermost man until it reaches the lowest man, &c.

Another version.—Every crime to the criminal, &c.

That is, as long as a criminal is ^{present} ~~openly~~ in the territory always, and has not gone out of the territory with his ‘seds,’ until he absconds from the suing creditor, it is not proper to ^{enforce the liability of his} sue a kinsman-brother, or a ^{the liability of the rath} kinsman-surety, but to sue himself according to ^{his} ~~his~~ ^{the nature} ~~grade~~ of his rank.

If the ^{defendant} ~~criminal~~ has gone out of the territory (with his ‘seds,’) or though it is in the territory he is, if he has absconded from the suing creditor, but if he has ^{properly, present} ~~‘seds’~~ ^{openly} in the territory, the ~~suing~~ creditor has the choice whether it is a distraint he shall make, or whether it is the ~~kinsman-surety~~ ^{he shall sue}.

OF EVERY
CRIME.

11o Dono, co na beṭ a roḡa dṑ aṭ aṭgabail dṑ gabail, uair ireḑ a deir: o cirtaḑ co folaid.

Maḑ no cuair cirtaḑ a crich co na retaib, no cṑ a crich
ata, maḑ no leigurtar éloḑ in feicheman toicheḑa, ocur ní 5 huilit reoit aige iṑin crich, iṑ a roḡa in feicheman toicheḑa ata, an imbleḡoin brathar no in imbleḡoin ratha aigerur.
Cṑ be dṑib aḡnar, iṑ leir a roḡa; aṭ ma re a roḡa imbleḡoin brathar ḡaḡra, ica in uiletaṑe uile iṑin iṑin; ocur ma re a roḡa imbleḡoin ratha ḡaḡra, nocha nicann aṭ ceir aṭḡin.

10 Cṑ fodeṑa gach uair iṑ é a roḡa imbleḡoin brathar ḡaḡra co nicar in uiletaṑi iṑ, ocur ḡaḑ uair iṑ e a roḡa imbleḡoin ratha ḡaḡra, co na iṑar iṑ aṭ ceir aṭḡin?

Iṑ e in raṭ fodeṑa; imbleḡoin ratha nochar ḡaburtar iṑe dṑ laim aṭ ic no tobach,* coir cin co ica aṭ ceir aṭḡin imeche iṑ 151 nṑecharṑ, no ḡor leigeḑ pen éloḑ. In tinbleḡoin brathar imurro, nochar ḡaburtar iṑe dṑ laim ic na tobach, aṭ amuil na iṑiri cúigeḡar ceimennaiḑ; ocur cóir cia ro ica in uiletaṑe uile; uair dubla cirtaḡ ireḑ aṭḡin imbleḡoin.

* cf. H. 3. 17, 442 (O'W. 572 f.) = Ig 88 f. 37 r. 1 (C2451)

Is coir [Molain E] dona rathair ani risanlechatar do dhiol no do tobach do rís mar do gelladar fein é. Bochr. p. 38. cf. Carabina II.

Or, indeed, according to others, he has not his choice, but he shall make a distraint, for what it (the law) says is, "from a criminal with property."¹ etc.

If a criminal has gone out of the territory with his 'seds,' or though he is in the territory, if he has absconded from the ~~suing~~ creditor, and he has not 'seds' in the territory, it is with the ~~suing~~ creditor the choice is whether it is the ~~kinsman~~ ^{liability of the} brother or the ~~kinsman-surety~~ ^{rather} he shall ~~sue~~ ^{enforce}. Whichever of them he ~~sees~~ ^{enforces}, the choice is his; but if it be his choice to ~~sue~~ ^{enforce} the ~~kinsman~~ ^{liability of the} brother, he pays the whole amount to him; and if it be his choice to ~~sue~~ ^{enforce} the ~~kinsman-surety~~ ^{liability of the rather only exact}, he pays but proper compensation.

Bsch. p. 39.

What is the reason that whenever it is his choice to ~~sue~~ ^{enforce} the ~~kinsman~~ ^{liability of the rather} brother, the whole amount is paid to him, and every time that he chooses to ~~sue~~ ^{enforce} the ~~kinsman-surety~~ ^{liability of the rather only exact}, proper compensation only is paid to him?

The reason is:—The ~~kinsman-surety~~ ^{liability of the rather} only ~~took in hand~~ ^{he pledged himself} to pay, or to ~~recover~~ ^{enforce}, it is therefore proper that he pays but the ~~proper~~ ^{exact} compensation for what he guaranteed, until he himself absconds. The ~~kinsman~~ ^{liability of the} brother, however, had not taken in hand to pay or recover, but as it has come to (or upon) him ~~in turn~~ ^{he would}, and it is proper that ^{after the degree (of relationship)} a Ir. After he should pay the complete whole; for double the criminal's ~~debt~~ ^{steps} is the compensation of the kinsman.

¹With property.—The Irish may mean, also, "From a criminal to property."

τέο αἱ περραῖαι αὐτῶν.

THE LAND IS FORFEITED FOR CRIMES.

Really 2 texts. 'oder besser Zitatensammlungen'.

(1) eg to IV 268.13.

(2) IV 268.14 - end. Tuiniad[e] innolligthech.

(1)

A. ^{23 & 6}ig. 88 fol. 22 va (C. 2298 - 2301)

B N. ~~35.5~~ p. 3 a² - 4 a. (C. 1598 - 1601) Part of another medley called:
Do ní lét in ferann acinta deithire 7 indeithire cintai [g] annas 7 a cin inbleogain fozs.

C 1926.35

17. tēo an fearann a cintuib.

Different collection, but w.
same title O'D 549-553.

|| C 1598

THE LAND
IS FORFEIT-ED FOR CRIMES.

IV 248.13

Uaíam da rað go tēo an fearann a cintuib deithire
ocur in deithire cintai[š], ocur for a cin in inbleogain, mar a deir an cumarc dlichte ro. Ocur a deirim na ruil do deithir itir cin deithir ocur in deithir ačt go 5 pēaíō an fine gan an fearonn do tabairt a cinta in deithir, no go curtar in cintač sein unnta ar túr;
ocur nae tualainš iat a cur a cinta deithir no go curtar an fearann ar tur inn, mar a deir; a cinta deithir marbtha, a reuithí inn ar túr, ocur a annreuthi 10 na deša, ocur é buōein na deša reis; ocur ma ta umarceair, ir a dul ar cuiser na seilpne.

O'D. 549. Ocur; Saoraō nime [cešra] fpu hinbleogan .i. in cintač, a nemnéime ría na nime, a nime ría na fearonn, a fearonn ría na braitšio, a braitš rā deoiš.

15 An tinbleogan umoppo, a nemnime ría na fearonn, a fearonn ría na nime, a nime ría na braitšio, a braitš[aiš] rā deoiš.

Ac neiric pošla rin, no a braitšuib cuir no connarēa.

Ocur ni gairter in cintach a cinaō an inbleošan 20 cein ber tir ac in cintač; gairter imoppa, ina cintuib sein no a cintuib a tigeairna, iar nembeit cešra nočo.

Ocur mar á deir; rithal rir gaoč mac aoengura mic muireoiš mic Reč arbert an breč ro iar čoll rula zorrait, curab inn do rochaír deircept mbreš a noilri 25 do corrae ocur dia ril.

Vene!

Ocur mar adeir; Nir deilb in dia truaile/načat rann-muo rairaišē; rogail fpu dia noilšeoč; /manab tpe

-edh C 1599

THE LAND IS FORFEITED FOR CRIMES.

I AM saying that the land goes for crimes of necessity,¹ and for unnecessary crimes;² and also for the crimes of the kinsman, as this medley of laws states. And I say that there is no difference between a crime of necessity and non-necessity, but that the tribe need not give the land for crimes of non-necessity, until the criminal himself is given for them first; and that they cannot give him up for crimes of necessity until the land is given for them first, as it (the law) says: "For his necessary crimes of killing, his movables ^{THE LAND IS FORFEITED FOR CRIMES.} shall go first, and his immovables afterwards, and himself ^{Ir. On Him.} after that; and if there be more after that to be paid, ^a it shall go upon the five persons of the 'geilfine'-division."

And "the 'neimhe'-cattle of the kinsman are exempt from seizure." That is; as to the criminal, his non-'neimhe'-cattle go before his 'neimhe'-cattle, his 'neimhe'-cattle before his land, and his land before his neck, his neck last.

But as to the kinsman, his non-'neimhe'-cattle go before his land, his land before his 'neimhe'-cattle, his 'neimhe'-cattle before his neck, his neck last.

This is in cases of 'eric'-fine for trespass, or in debts of bargain or contract.

And the culprit is not taken for the liability of the kinsman as long as the culprit has land; he is taken, however, for his own crimes, or the crimes of his lord, when he has not cattle.

And as it (the law) says: "Fithal, the truly wise, son of Aenghus, son of Muiredhach, son of Reth, pronounced this judgment after the destroying of Cormac's eye, that for it was forfeited the south of Bregia, to Cormac and his race."³

And as it says: "God has not formed corruption nor any particular species of violation, the merciful God deems such

¹ Crimes of necessity.—Such as killing a man in self-defence.

² Unnecessary crimes.—Such as killing a man to rob him.

³ To Cormac and his race.—Vide note, p. 267.

THE LAND
IS FORFEIT-ED FOR CRIMES.

տըքսար, | ^{read C 1599 (B)} ուր ւե՛ շո՛ բրմեձա՛ | .i. մանա ճատար տը ւր
in ւիր, ուր տըքսե՛ նա ւնտա՛ շո՛ բրմեձա՛ն թեխը բորթո, օր նի երա ճաւ. ^{unka B} ^{-ach B}

Բորաձեր տը նաօնցար | .i. բորաճեր աօնցըր օնա
5 էր ա ռօարաւցիլլե՛տ ; ո՞ բարաճեր աօնցըր ւմա տը, նէ.

Բօրուար բար բօր թօճաճ | .i. աօնցըր օւր ա երա՛ն.

2326, p. 34 (C 1599)

^{attrib d} Եօճրան աւիթե աւիճ | օլ օւլե ռօ բօհաւթ | .i. ռօնցըր.

10 Տւ՛տայն բա՛տ ըան բիճայ նիմ, | ա տօճար Լե՛ մեք
մուճ | .i. ա Լե՛ ա ռօարաւցիլլե՛տ, օւր ա Լե՛ ա բօր-աւցիլլե՛տ.

No բօր նի ըն ա՛ւմ ածա՛տար մար ծուլե՛, .i. ածա-՛տար շրքին ումարբըր ւիլ Եօրօ բարի՛ւար ար ա՛ւմ, 15 ածա՛տար ար աօնցըր ա էր.

Օւր մար ա ծըր. Կոքօլա ւնտա ւա յար նեճան ; նի բեճա՛ւ ուրի ռիւա՛ թօ յա՛ա ա ուրբա .i. նի Ե՛ բարաճեր ռօ թըր ոքերա ռիցե՛ ռիւա՛ ռօ ւնա՛ ճի՛ն ա ուլ բօրնա հօրբան բիլ ւր նա էր.

20 Օւր, ւա եա՛տ ւեննա, նի եա՛տ մեքաճ .i. ւա մար նի ւոմարբա, մարնո նա էր.

Օւր, ար ւօրիա՛ւա Լա րօմա՛ն րուճեր .i. ւր ւօն րուճեր բե՛ բօր նի երըր արիլլե ան մարբ.

Օւր : ար ռօ իլմաօնե մուճեր ւոմարբան .i. նա մաօ-25 նե իլարձա բարա՛ ար նի տը ռօ երըր արմի՛նուցա՛ բօր ւոմարբան նա ւնտա՛.

Օւր մար ա ծըր ; Լօճ ռօն Լեբար թօ աւիլլ ար աւե ւեմար, օւր արմըր ռօ արմըր ւօրքիլ Լիբ՛ար, օւր բերա ծօ ւօրմա, օւր տըքա՛ւ ա ծենմա ւօճա՛ շօրմա 30 ռեղօր ճաւա՛ծա՛.

Օւր. Բե՛ բօլա՛ ար բիլ.

= authenr ??

raot

nocho forfuich C 1600

iathib in ota

C 2085

= con. suiter

|| III 82. 2

things atrocious;^a unless land is given, no umpire can heal them,' i.e. unless land is obtained as the 'eric'-fine, the crimes cannot be taken away, though it be a righteous judge who ^{declares upon} estimates them, for he would pronounce no falsehood.

THE LAND
IS FORFEI-TED FOR CRIMES.

^a Ir. They are a trespass with.

*fr. Síchid
Car p 336.* "The land of Aengus is placed," i.e. Aengus with his land is placed in 'daor'-tenancy; or Aengus is stripped of his land, &c.

"He brought contempt on many," i.e. Aengus and his brethren.

"With the point¹ of the sharp lance he aimed at him, evil was it afterwards to many," i.e. to Aengus and his brethren.

"Perpetual the thing! to main a noble king, for which half the plain of Bregia was forfeited," i.e. one-half in 'daor'-tenancy, and the other in 'saor'-tenancy.

"For what old Adam did, great things were lost," i.e. as by the transgression all the fruits of Paradise were forfeited by Adam, so his lands were forfeited by Aengus.

And as it says: "Liabilities are distributed even after death; the new laws do not settle a 'dibhadh'-land in a territory, without dividing it in the small holdings," i.e. 'dibhadh'-lands are not settled according to the new knowledge without their going upon the small holdings which are in the territory.

And: "Though heads die, lands die not," i.e. though the 'coarbs' are dead, the lands live.

And: "For debts are proportioned to the profits," i.e. the debts are fairly fixed upon the person who gets the property of the deceased person.

earned ✓

And: "For it is various riches that magnify the 'coarbs,'" i.e. the various kinds of wealth which grow out of the earth give dignity to the 'coarbs' of the debtors.

And as it says: "The place of this book is Aicill, near to Teamhair, and its time is the time of Coirpri Lifechair, and its person (author) Cormac, and the cause of composing it was the blinding of Cormac by Aenghus Gaebuadhbtaich."

And: "see a word (judgment) on that."

¹ With the point.—This and other paragraphs of the present fragment refer to the blinding of King Cormac Mac Art by Aenghus of the poisoned spear. See Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 3, p. 83.

Ocup; Conbao cinaõ gač bpeč. brathur C 1600

cf. IV 242.10

Осир мап а теир; Заѣ еи инѣѣбурі до зно дуине ітир

maþað ocuþ aþaill, iþé þaðeiuþ iuu, ocuþ iuuile; ocuþ ma þaþþaþþaþ þaþ, iþ íc ðia mac ʒo þo ʒocaþeþ iuuile ocuþ a þiþ iuþ. [Ocuþ þaþþ þuillu aþ þiþ.] marg. note in C1600

11 IV 246.13

1. ԶԵԼԵԿԱՆ ԵՐԵՄՅԱՆ ԻՆԱՑԻՏԱԻՆ ԴԵՇԵԿԱՆ, || Խ 246.13-

C. 1601.

ლუიჭი რ[ea1b] რ[ea2]u .ა. ლუიჭერ ა პეოიი ტარ ა ცენი. ||
 სრუიტი ბაიი ბიბაი .ა. პეიი პეი ა ორბა.

cf IV 248.1

¹⁰ Οὐρ; Ἄ εἰτα δεῦρι μαρβῆα, α ῥουῖε ἰνν ἀρ τυρ, || "248.1f
οὐρ ἀννρϋιῖε ἀνα δεῖα, οὐρ εἰ βυῖειν να δεῖα ριῖει; || οὐρ μα τα ἰμαρερα ἀνν, ἱρ α οὐλ ἀρ ϋιῖερ να ῖειρνε
ῖρῖ. ριν.

Ms. Eg. 88 fol. 22v a-b. (C. 2301-2304).

(2) Τυριοῦ ιεροδιδάσκει, ὁ πῦρ, μαρ α θεῖρ: βερα αὐοβριυθ 15 ταῖοβι cor, αρθερρα πριυτ; cor τοβαιξ, cor τοτλαιξ, ο[ιηλι] cor.

ni/

Оуар; Аң җаң теңнар до рѣдат мичуир (.і. сор тобайҗ но еиҗ) nach cora 1 нѣнартар маиниб .і. ноҗа сорп 1ѣ-nacal maïne inn.

11C2470

C. 2470.

20 Οὐρ; ni hetaricapa realb paruḡa, na rena renmeirliḡ, na ruireḡ por eigin, na roxal tr[enliḡ, nirt], na cor so 4.V 496-5 porumal.

IV 382.17; C 2215

Օսր; առեալ ճա՛ն առ Բարսիմո՛ւ Բարթա՛ւայն .1. Իր արեալ Ե՛տ ճա՛ն առ Բարթա՛ւայն Ինձ Բարսիմո՛ւ ճօ հիմնովիցե՛ք.

110.1595

25 Окур; ^xḤell nuaṣḡar; ^xni ṭiler ni ṭo berar ar uaṣḡar.

11C 339, 713

Οὐκ; Νί τάβαιρ νέ να τινιῖθ πρι κυρα να περνιολρι, cia πορεπατ ταῖατ ιλαρ cor παρ ευρηρα ιμανιτερ, ιρ το ταιτιῖθ το πεναρ.

di C 339
not C 713

And; "Every judgment¹ shares the crime equally."

THE LAND
IS FORFEI-TED FOR
CRIMES.

And where it says; "For every crime of non-necessity which a man commits either by killing or otherwise, he himself shall go for it, and his cattle; and if he is not caught (shall be given up), it shall be paid by his son until his cattle and his land are spent respecting it." And seek more on that subject².

And where it says: "If it be a necessary 'dibadh' property, it is lawful though it is pledged, i.e. his land is pledged for his crimes of necessity.

"Property and 'seds' go," i.e. his land is forfeited for it.

He is nobler than any 'dibadh,' i.e. "a man is better than land."

And: "For his necessary crimes of manslaughter,^a his ^{a Ir. Kill-}movables shall go for it first, and his immovable property ^{ing.} afterwards, and himself after that; and if there be excess (more to pay), it shall go upon the five persons of the 'geilfine'-division, &c.

This is unlawful possession down here, as it says: "A suit will set aside an unfair contract, I say unto thee;" such as a 'force'-contract, a 'claim'-contract, a 'forfeit'-contract.

And: "whenever during violence unfair contracts, i.e. of force or violence, are made, it is not proper to give goods for them," i.e. it is not proper to deliver goods in the case.

And: "Violence, or the denial of an old thief, or the withholding by compulsion, or seizure by overwhelming strength, or forced contract, do not separate possession."

And: "It is monstrous for any one to be caught in unjust possession," i.e. it is a shameful thing for anyone to be caught in possession unlawfully.

And: "A pledge of terror;" nothing is lawful which is given out of terror. 4 ZCP 16, 224

And: "Neither time nor possession is equivalent to any contractorpre-right, though thieves may make many contracts as to it between themselves, it is the thieves that shall pay.

¹ Judgment. O'D. 726 and C. 1595, for 'bpet,' judgment, read 'bpatap,' (brother.)

² And seek more on that subject. This is a remark by the scribe.

= Hapt. 26 § 214.

THE LAND
IS FORFEI-TED FOR CRIMES.

Ocur; atait peēt tabarṭa i tuaiē ata hinṭilri la peime, cia ponarṭaiṣṭer por mac ocur raiē; cor ar eigin, sell mna diuēaiḃ, [cor tobaiṣ,] cpeic peoit ḡaite, ret ponuap-O'D. 2070. laigi nemi, coibche mna naō uṛnaiḃat a polṭaib teēta,
ṣ. i. m diḡlro na neēi rin o per bonaō an tan daiḡar oligeo umpti.

H3 r 232 (C 438)
C 2470

Ocur; m hacḡaō pelb tuuioḃ liā[n], no lobra, no aipir, no anpaiṭēer. 7ṛt rin.

Ocur; aipigī cona piach ḡaite an pelbuṣ inṭoligēē,
mar a deiṛo na olithe po:

Alu ^{deu} ^{no} tī do beir na teēta pelba/ir é do pen ḡo piachaiḃ taiḃe. i. an tī do beir m do neoē ocur noē o na pelb bu-ḃein teētar aēt ó pelb ḡaite an ḡaḡaioḃ, ipe ipren ḡach piacha taiḃe. i. ipe ocur ḡaē piāḡa ḡaite. i. m ḡaḡaioḃ no rin rin meḃongḡaite lan inṭoligēē.

TV 32. r f.
C 1979

II 376.17

Ocur; mar ar eigin no mar a ḡaio ruḡaḡo a peoit o neē, mara marḃoile iat, lan piachaiḃ ḡaio inṭitib po ceḡoir, amail do beḡoir por treḃairi aēṭranu. Ocur mara beooile iat, lan piāḡ ḡaite inṭitib po ceḡoir, ocur ar, ocur 20 lor, ocur ḡerṭ do piē rin poceḡoir, ocur aiēḡin laēḡa ocur ḡuṛma daiṛaṣ uaōaiḃ, ut diat leigem; qui aḡiteṛ in obilé inṭrat uiri i per optium pur eṛt. i. m tī tī conuip aile irin liar caeraḡ aēt tar a doṛur ip amail ḡaḡaio é.
Ocur ip amḡaro rin ata in tī tī a pelb ḡan oligeo ip uamail cpeāipe.

C 1452 (4 III 486.7)

gat 7 aucta 7 ^{no} ~~no~~ follus. i. brat follus C 1452

Ocur; ḡaḡa ocur aipcealla, ocur donṛpollur, ocur puataḡ ḡin taiṛurim, oipe ḡaite leo uile.

= II 374 10 f.

C 1452 953.

Ocur; ní porpoḡla taiḃo, no cnéio, no poḡuipre, no porcumal neighe, iprenar cona puillem, cona diablao

¹ Imbeciles. The word so translated is written in the MS. 'Liā,' which O'Curry lengthened as in the text, but in the margin of his transcript he wrote é with a note of interrogation, showing he was in doubt as to the word. C. 2470, reads 'Liāim.'

² Ut dixit Lex., C. 341, quotes this passage, which is taken from the Gospel of St.
John, c. 10, v. i., &c., and also another which is evidently from the Lex Civilis of

And: "There are seven gifts in a territory which are considered unlawful by the Feini, though they are confirmed by a son and a surety; a forced engagement, the pledge of a woman to save her honor, a pledge of distress, the purchase of a stolen 'sed,' a 'sed' which a 'neimhídh'-person redeems, the nuptial present of a woman who does not perform her lawful duties, i.e. these things are not forfeited by the true owner, when law is submitted to respecting them."

THE LAND
IS FORFEI-TED FOR CRIMES.

And: "Possession of land shall not be sued upon imbeciles,¹ or lepers, or ignorant or unwary persons."

but (ten)

And; ^{if aisee?} ~~hence fines~~ of theft are imposed for unlawful possession," as these laws state:—

"He who gives possession of what he does not own, it is he that shall pay, with fines for theft," i.e. he who gives a thing to another, and that he has it not of his own property but from the stolen possession of the thief, it is he that shall pay every fine of theft, i.e. it is he that shall pay all the fines for the theft, i.e. which shall be imposed upon the thief or the fully unlawful middle theft man.

And: "If it be by force or if it be by theft his 'seds' were carried off from a person, if they are dead chattels, full fine for theft shall be paid for them at once, as if they were upon the security of strangers. And if they are live chattels, full fine for theft shall be paid for them at once, and the growth, increase, and milk shall run with them at once, and compensation of the milk and the work shall be made by him (the thief) ut dixit lex²; 'Qui ailater in obile intrat nisi per ostium fur est, i.e. he who enters the sheepfold by any other way except through the door, is as a thief.' And it is thus that every one who goes into possession without legal right is as a plunderer."

And: "Thefts, and plunders, and robberies, and abductions without desisting,—all incur the 'dire'-fine of theft."

And, ~~"That which is taken away in theft, or openly, or by violence of force, shall be paid for with increase and Justinian, and which was left out by the transcriber of Egerton, 88. It runs thus:~~

"Non potest raptor sive invasor rem restituere nisi restituat ejus poenam," i.e. it is not enough for the robber or the invader, to restore the thing itself unless he restores the penalty for it.

THE LAND
IS FORFEI-TED FOR CRIMES.

[νατθγενα], μα μαρβοιλε. Μαθ βεοιλε .ι. μαθ co loy
ocur inporbairt.
Ocur; Cc mo Hape nuallignair, diamba brethem, ni
O'D. 1122. eturrcaraθ innatθ ppi hinnam. cf. V 362.12

5 Ocur; ni aθuil pola neime; ni oiguiθter tria amrepa;
ol innuθ pceo bliθt buan, mapa mapoipe de diabal .ι. mor paiter oipe θiabalta inn iap leigrin eloiθi; no, ip na peotatθ diabalta, ce toiprit θin θo toiprit; no, ip na beooile, dia toiprit apitθiri.

10 Ocur; Na porpetθ eigin na ilapnae .ι. naθ anpīr paθann rocharde uatθ e tre eigin anθpīr.

C. 2211.

* Ocur; Do pui cpitθ comptaθ omna [~~poθpaiti~~] .ι. umpuiθter
o neoch θo hobann a ni comairberinnatar uatθ tre eigin anpīr.

15 Oθoch poθpaitre .ι. nepc o poθgotha rocharde tug θo peitθ.

θuiθter nanθpīrinne .ι. ramiter θo neoθ a ni bepar uatθ tre anθpīrinne.

*

|| O'D. 540 do sai crib combrutt omna .ι. impoigthir o neoch co hobann ini
comairbernaigthir tre eigin anθhīr oθach sochaiti .ι. tre eigin na sochuidi
C. 2211 do sai crib combrutt omna oθach sochaiti.

with double compensation, if it be a case of dead chattels. THE LAND IS FORFEITED FOR CRIMES.
 If it be live chattels, i.e., with growth and increase.

And; O, my comely faced Naire, if thou be a Brehon, thou shalt not separate the increase from the cattle.

And; 'Neimhe'-property does not perish; it is not lessened by time, for the great increase and constant milk, double great 'dire'-fine shall be paid, i.e., it is said that double great 'dire'-fine shall be paid for it after absconding; or for the 'seds' of double, whether they are forthcoming or not; or for the living chattels, if they are forthcoming again.

And; "Let not violence nor the many prevail," i.e., whatever unrighteousness the many are guilty of forcing from him through unjust violence.

And; "Quickly is it set aside which was acquired by the pressure of the shouting multitude,"¹ i.e., Quickly is that thing taken from a person, which he wrested from another by unjust violence.

"The shouting of the multitude," i.e., it was the force of the evil voice of the multitude that gave it to him before.

"The injustice is righted," i.e., that thing which has been taken away from one by unrighteousness, shall be righted for him.

¹ The shouting multitude. For 'compacé' of the text, the reading in C. 2211 is ombputh.

ποῖλα τῆρε.

DIVISIONS OF LAND.

"als ganzes kein alter Text." Thurn. IV 191.

18. *FOOLA TIRE.*DIVISIONS
OF LAND.

Cirlir foola tire? Nin—dī foolail.

Cadeat? Eatham ocur aineatham.

temi-bi ethamnab

Cirlir [foolail] for eatham? Al teorā .i. eatham re a mbi eatham; ocur eatham tulcach; ocur eatham 5 ppiénama.

gl. m. gl. lize?

Eatham re a mbi eathamab cetamur: Tir forad a mbi maic caé maic, itir it, ocur blicht, ocur lin, ocur glaihrine, ocur mil, ocur roid, ocur cumpad; naé eicin do ppiénam tuair na rlize; na biat glama ann. Leicteir echall ina pínó, na toiglean 10 oir, na toirgean, na glerlizi (.i. luf lenar) a nedach, na homan a moing naéa lai. Alre innraic anoirin.

M. = hovan?= osé?

Etham taulchach imorro; Dīo uirí i ruiriuigad, ocur ir ruinn-ride caéla maigin anó. Ire maic do caé cloinn ocur da caé torad olcena.

15 Etham ppiénama; tir mbela rom i mbi maic caé clann.

for anethaim?

Cīo lir foola antpenni? Al tri. Cadeet? Nin—Antpenn ocur anmín, ocur andomain.

Anmin cotat tír raicén mas, ocur os mas. Antpenn .i. rliab ppaich ocur aiteann aruiruig. Andomain; duibtir ocur moir 20 fon.

Co. tomsithir?

Cerc—Cotoimrīb tír cumailé? Al ghranní: tri ghranne i noirlaé innraic; re oroláige i ndorin; ocur da dorin a traisid;
re traisí i ndeirceim; re deirceimeandó a ninntrit; re inntrit a lair; re lairí a forpraig; re forpraig i naiceandó. Tír cumailé 25 da forpraig .x. oia fot.

¹ 'Glaisin'-dye-plant. This was some kind of herb, or plant or shrub, which was used for giving wool, or flax yarn, a preparatory bluish, or greenish color probably 'woad.' Vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 2, pp. 370 n. 371, 375.

² 'Roid'-dye-plant. Some sort of plant used for dyeing crimson red. Vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 2, pp. 420, 421.

³ In a hand. In H. 3, 18 (C. 252), the Irish word is 'orolac,' an inch, which obviously a mistake. In E. 3, 5 (O.D. 1462), the word is 'bair,' the palm of the hand

DIVISIONS OF LAND.

How many are the divisions (in quality) of land? DIVISIONS
OF LAND.
Answer, two divisions.

Which are they? Arable land, and non-arable land.

How many divisions are there of arable land? Three, i.e. arable land which takes precedence of arable lands; and hilly arable land; and labour-requiring arable land.

As to arable land which precedes arable lands firstly: An inhabited land in which everything good is good; both corn, and milk, and flax, and 'glaisin'-dye-plant¹ and honey, and 'roid'-dye-plant,² and sweet herbs; which does not require the application of manure or shells; in which there are no sticking plants. If a ~~bridle-horse~~ be let into its top grass, no briar, no blackthorn, nor burdock, i.e. a plant that sticks in clothes, nor 'oman-plant' ~~will stick~~ in its mane or its tail. It is in its proper condition then.

As to hilly arable land, however: There is water upon this usually, and there are ash trees in every second field of it. And it is good for every plant, and for every produce in general.

As to labour-requiring arable land; this is axe-land, in which every plant grows freely.^a

How many divisions are there of ~~weak~~ ^{rough} land? Three. What are they? Answer—Weak, and coarse, and ~~deep~~.

Coarse, comprises land of fern fields, and of good fields. Weak, i.e. a heathy mountain and furze upon that. Deep: This is a black land and bog.

Question—How is a 'tir-cumaile' measured? By grains: three grains in a proper inch; six inches in a hand;³ and two hands in a foot; six feet in a pace; six paces in an 'inntrit'-measure; six 'inntrits' in a 'lait'-measure; six 'laits' in a 'forrach'-measure; six 'forrach'-measures is its breadth. A 'tir-cumaile' is twelve 'forrach'-measures in length.⁴

^a In ength. The measures here are somewhat different from those in O.D. 1492, here it is said that "12 feet are a 'fertach'-measure, and 12 'fertach'-measures forrach'-measure.

-ich-'all?
cf. KW §186
touchus?

Ir. Is
good.

lynt.

DIVISIONS
OF LAND.

Ἡα γε ποῦλα τίπι πο τῖα ἀρῖυαῖτα, κοῖμαῖ α τοῖμα, εκοῖμαῖ α λοῖσι. Ἐτάμ γε μῖ εἰταῖμαῖ, cumala .iii. bo pichit mblichit α λογ. Ἐτάμ ταυλεαῖ, cumala pichit mbo mblichit [α λογ]. Ἐτάμ πριένμα, cumala γε mbo ndec mblichit α λογ.
5 Ἀνμιν, cumala τα bo ndec γεῖρε ναιρε. Ἀντρηνό, cumala τα bo ndec γεῖρε ναιρι. Ἀντομαῖ, cumal οἷτ mbo γεῖρε ναιρε.

de formaget?

Κίτῖν το ποῖμαῖς οἷσι ποῖν να τίραῖ γεο?

Ἥν—Α οενδε. Καίτιατ παῖδε? Ρῦντο, ἀρῖετῖαῖ, λαθῖραχ μαῖλιντο, ρῖζε, ποτ, ρομῖν, [ρ]ῖντ, ροῖλλβε, ἰνβεῖ, γεῖρεταῖ, 10 βοῖταῖ.

Για μετ το ποῖμαῖς οἷσι καὶ αε?

Μα ρῦτο, εἰταῖμαῖ, βεῖρ ἰμε οἷεῖντο, no κοῖαῖ, ματ ac ἰνῖραῖ, το ποῖμαῖ .x. γεοῖτ; ματ ac [εῖρ]ἰνῖραῖ, το ποῖμαῖ .u.
γεοῖτ.

ZCP 14, 5

15 Ματ ἀρῖετῖαῖ το μέῖν ὑμα no ἱαῖαῖν, το ποῖμαῖς .u.
γεοῖτ.

Ματ λαῖραῖ ρενμῖλιντο το ποῖμαῖς .u. γεοῖτ.

Ματ ρῖσι ατοῖμαῖς το τίρ co πῖαῖ, no μαῖνῖταῖ, το ποῖμαῖς .iii. bu.

20 Μα ρομῖν contra εῖναῖο καῖραῖ τοῖραχ, α τίρ cumale το
ποῖμαῖς.

Ματ ρῖντ α τοῖβ no ἀρῖεῖντο combi οἷραῖο λαῖ, ἱρ cumal α το
ποῖμαῖς.

Ματ ροῖλλβε dono ατοῖμα, ἱρ cumal [ε] το ποῖμαῖς.

25 Μα ἰνβεῖ το necma, ἱτ .u. γεοῖτ το ποῖμαῖς.

Ματ γεῖρεταῖ nemῖταῖς, ἱτ let .u. γεοῖτ.

Ματ ποτ ναιρεαῖο ροῖαῖο ρῦτο, no ρομῖν, no ροῖλλβε, ἱρ bo το ποῖμαῖς.

Ματ βοῖταῖ ρῖζε το ἀρῖαῖ γεῖρεταῖ, no τίρε, no τίρ bῖρ
30 ἱτερεῖν, no ρῖζε μαῖρε, ἱρ colῖραχ το ποῖμαῖς.

Ἰτε ἀντοῖο comῖρετα mbῖροῖα πο α λῖβῖο οἷσι α γεοῖτα βῖρε;
ραῖ οἷσι οἷ ραῖ,

ῖνῖτ το τίρ cumale.

¹ Its herbs. Over the 'd' of the word 'λῖβῖο,' there is written in the MS. 'b,' intimating, probably, that the reading should be 'λῖβῖb,' the correct form of the dative and ablative plural.

cf. C 1027

(4C) contalma?

[in]?

so: a lῖβε

As to these six divisions of land now, which we have mentioned, their measurement is alike, their price is unlike. Arable land which precedes arable lands, 'cumals' of twenty-four milch cows is its price, i.e. of the above measure. Hilly arable land, 'cumals' of twenty milch cows is its price. Labour-requiring arable land, 'cumals' of sixteen milch cows is its price. Coarse land, 'cumals' of twelve dry cows are paid for it. Weak land, 'cumals' of twelve (? ten) dry cows are paid for it. Deep land, a 'cual' of eight dry cows are paid for it.

How many things add to the price of this land?

Answer—eleven. Which are they? A wood, a mine, the site of a mill, a highway, a road, a great sea, a river, a mountain, a river falling into the sea, a cooling pond for cattle, a road.

How much does each of these augment the value?

If it be a wood, firstly, around which there are two dykes, or a stone wall, it adds ten 'seds,' if in the possession of a worthy person; if in the possession of an unworthy person, it adds but five 'seds.'

If a mine, of copper, or of iron, it adds five 'seds.'

If the site of an old mill, it adds five 'seds.'

If it be a way which leads from a land to a chief, or to a monastery, it adds three cows.

If it be a great sea which has productive rocks (i.e. producing 'duileag'), 'it is a tir-cumaile' it adds . . .

If it be a river at its side or head, which has a waste place, it is a 'cual' it adds.

If it be a mountain now in the same condition, it is a 'cual' it adds.

If it be the mouth of a river that happens to be there, it is five 'seds' it adds.

If it be a cooling pond which does not become dry, it is half of five 'seds' it adds.

If it be a head-road which leads to a wood, or a great sea, or a mountain, it is a cow it adds.

If it be a road-way that leads to a pond, or land, or to a land that is far away, or to a highway, it is a 'colpach'-heifer it adds.

Such then, are the productions of land, with its herbs¹ and its yellow flowers . . . 'rath' and 'ograith.'²

'Finit' of 'tir-cumaile.'

¹ 'Rath' and 'ograith.' The MS. seems defective here.

ἡ τοῦ ποταμοῦ ἀνωρὴν τμήματα.

OF THE DIVISIONS OF THE TRIBE OF A TERRITORY.

- Neo.*
 A. H. 2. 15, p. 13 b - 15 a (O'D. 4, 11-14) whole text
 B. H. 3. 17, 349-350 (O'D. 454-456) Excerpt. Printed 292-4.
 C. H. 3. 18, p. 392 a-b (C. 873) "

19. de foðlaib cineoil tuaiti.

OF THE DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-
RITORY.

Ni tualaing brethemnachta fop fine na fuirp nað fapap a netapcapa, ocup a noipe, ocup a cain, ocup allog a nenech.

Ni tualaing .i. noco cumgeð brethemnachta do peip ino feneðap fop
5 fine na foðap. Nað fapap .i. pe pe tip, no eapapcapa na fine ocup na fuirp fpi a plath. A noipe .i. cia bepep oipe a noia.
A cain .i. trian a pmaeta cana. Allog a nenech .i. loð einað gaða fuirp aet doepfuirp, no loð eneð ap a tochup aet trian; fear pon cen peib cen tothchup 7 pl.

a redarscartha .i. na fine frian fuirp .c

4 II. 516. 3f

C2466. O'D 572

10 Cip lip foðla fine la peime?

Ite foðla fine cacha platha; a fuirp, a ciniað, a gabail foðapna, conio ainm doib uile plathe fine.
a ngabail .i. saorfeilir flatha C

Cip lip .i. cia leap no cia lin do na finib foðeigip anð. Ite
.i. iat fo na fine [fo]deigip anð. A fuirp .i. faepa pe pe 15 tip, .i. in doepboðac ap in cetranao tip; in fencleiti ipm .u. eð tip.

Cair—Cip lip fin tuaithe, ocup cið metapcapa?
Ite fine cacha tuaithe, geilfine, deirpfine, iarpfine, inðfine, deirpfine, duifine, finetaccup, glarpfine, inzen ap mepaib. Dufine, ip ann oiba finnteðaib.

4 IV 38. 18, 284. 12

¹ Three.—These three classes of persons are described in O'D., 999.

² Free.—See O'D., 1346 (E. 3, 5, p. 20, col. 2).

³ A 'sencleithe-person.—On the term 'Sencleithe,' Professor O'Curry remarks, 'Fuidhir'-tenants who were in the occupation of land during the reigns of four

OF THE DIVISIONS OF THE TRIBE OF A TERRITORY.

He cannot exercise judicature for the tribe of the 'fuidhir'-tenants unless he knows their separations, and 'dire'-fine, and their 'cain'-law, and their honor-price.

OF THE
DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-
RITORY.

He cannot, i.e. he cannot exercise brehonship, according to the 'Fenechus'-law, upon the tribe of the inferior bondsmen ('fo-daer'). Unless he knows their separation, i.e. during the time of three, or the separation of the family and members of his tribe, and the 'fuidhir'-tenants from the chief. 'Dire'-fine, i.e. who gets 'dire'-fine for injuries done to their cattle. 'Cain'-law, i.e. the third of their 'smacht'-fines in 'Cain'-law. Their honor-price, i.e. the honor-price of every 'fuidhir'-tenant except the 'daer-fuidher'-tenant, or honor-price in proportion to their property except three;¹ this is a man without land or property, &c.

How many are the divisions of a tribe (or family) with the Feini?

These are the divisions of the tribe of every chief; his 'fuidhir'-tenants, his kinsfolk, his 'gabhail fodagniat'-dependants, all of whom go by the name of 'flaithe-fine'-persons.

How many, i.e. how many or what number is there of the tribes who are divided. These are, i.e. these are the tribes who are divided therein (in the 'Fenechus'-law). His 'fuidhir'-tenants, i.e. they ~~become-free~~ during the time of three persons, the fourth man in succession is called a 'daer-bothach'-person; the fifth man a 'sencleithe'-person.²

Question. How many are the family divisions of a territory, and how do they separate?

These are the family divisions of each territory:— 'geilfine,' 'deirbhfine,' 'iarfine,' 'innfine,' 'deirgh-fine,' 'duibhfine,' to which are added 'finetacuir,' 'glasfine,' 'ingen ar meraibh.' These are of the tribe, it is here the tribe ends.

kings, or the chieftaincy of four chiefs, were so called; afterwards their descendants could never become free.— Vide C. 1212, 2184.

*Contract O.B.
735, which omits the geilfine*

(This is an older gl. or IV. 38. 17)

But C857 has: gelfine co cuicer, derbfine co da fer deg, inrfine co .vii. fine deg.
O'k. 735. Gelfine foahla fine la? Derbfine co noibor, earfine co tri firath(?) dec, inrfine co .vii. fine dec. (Note absence of gelfine!)

284

De Fodlaib cineoil tuaiti.

OF THE DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-
RITORY.

Gelfine co cuicer; ipiande gaiber dibad cach cinó comacuir dineoch dība uaid.

Derbfine co noibor; nī dāba haairde cobrainn fo lín cenn comocuir.

Earfine co tri fearaib dec; nī beirde acht cethramthain dī chin nā romane, dī orbu nā raetur.

Inrfine co .vii. fearu dec; conranna cadeirrin finteda dineoch dība uairde, amal ber choir. Duthaig duine otha ren, ipi ann rcarat finthea.

crus C873

// C 2249.
C873, 2264

¹⁰ Derffine iprede cruerr; nī dība huairde; nī cobrannairde finteda, iprech icaird cinnta comocuir.

// C 2234
¹⁵ Dubfine iprede dombeir fir noilleg nā fintar imbi fir fo anfir; nī cobrannairde finthea condatuice fir caine no cranncuir; ip iarum conranna cethramthain fir inrfinde.

Finetaccuir iprede domberat cuir bel a poerram;
nī cobrannairde dan finteda acht nī i fuirdear cuir bel.

// O'k 2294

²⁰ Glarfine mac mna dītrini berer do albanach; nī gaibrande acht orba nīad, no duthachta dedlaid fir fine.

¹ As 'dibadh'-land.—Land that devolves to them by the extinction of a kin family division.

Same divisions in CCF H69.

The 'geilfine' extends to five persons; it is they that get the 'dibadh'-property of every kindred chief who leaves 'dibadh'-property.

OF THE
DIVISIONS
OF THE
TRIBE
OF A TERRITORY.

The 'deirbhfine' extends to nine persons; their 'dibadh'-property is not divided according to the number of kindred heads.

The 'iarfine' extends to thirteen men; they get only the fourth part of fines, or of profits, of the ground, or of labour.

The 'innfine' extends to seventeen men; they divide among themselves, as is right, whatever part of the tribe lands is left as 'dibadh'-land.¹ From this forth it is a case of a community of people, it is then family relations cease.

The 'derggfine' is that which has shed blood; no 'dibadh'-property comes from them; they receive no share of^a the tribe-lands, although they pay for^a the crimes of their kinsfolk. Ir. They divide not

The 'dubhfine' is that which tenders the test of an ^{oath} ordeal whereby is known whether it be truth or falsehood concerning it; they receive no share of^a the family land until they have tendered the proof of the cauldron,² or of the lot; it is after this they receive the fourth of the share of the 'innfine'-division.

The 'fine-taccuir' ^{are} ~~are~~ ^{by} ~~they~~ who give verbal contracts in adoption; they receive no share of^a the tribe lands except what is acknowledged by verbal treaty. whom contracts bring into adoption
"ausairden für was Verträge [ein] anerkennen" ZCP, 18, 397.

The 'glasfine' is a son whom a woman of the family has borne for an 'Albanach'; he receives but the land of a champion, or of a 'duthracht'-person, of affection (cf. IV 44.1) that has separated from the family.

nephew

² The cauldron.—A sort of ordeal; vide O'D., 1324-25 (E. 3-5, p. 16, cols. 1, 2)

³ An Albanach.—A native of Alba, an ancient name for the modern Scotland.

1108548

OF THE
DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-
RITORY.

Ingen ar meraib; iuride dothononais cluair do cluair do comcenuil; dedlaid fri fine, conpanna-ride finniteda on med adomthep iurui.

4 IV 282.19

Duthais do fine ni cobpannaid eicir, iur ann dūba
s pittedaib.

Finte fuidir coṡapille fodail; ponennuin moigethar
mac fria athair, ocuf ni pen in tathair ni pech macu, rech ua, rech iurmu, rech indue.

4 C873

1108738 (copy)

Cair .i. comairim cia leir no cia lín d'fuidir bir iur tuait .i. o ta na
10 rect friu dec amad. ^ADeirgfine .i. moiríni pingala. ^ADuibfine .i. ino fíni taroe. Finetaccuir .i. na meic poerna. Glarfine .i. gabair tar glar na rairge. Duufine .i. duthais daime. Dūba finnitedaib
.i. conae ducar fine e aet ducur daime. Gelgine co cuicer .i. cuicer bir i ngeilfine. Iuraid .i. iurde gabar dūbaṡ gaṡ cno pocomaicrigeṡ 15 oi, no don chin dian ar comacri in dūbaṡ. Dineoch .i. do neoc dūbaṡ uaiti. Dūbaṡ gelgine cobpannait na cetheora fine po rír. Deirgfine
.i. co naṡgabail in cuicfir na fíni romaino .i. in ní dūbaṡ uaiti dan fíni.
Cobpaino .i. comairim a dūbaṡ ra deis po mao na cenno ra comairigeṡ, do in ninnbair iur en fear don fíni po dūbaṡano; no po mao 20 ceano na teora fíni, in ninnbair iur ino fíni mic po dūbaṡano. Iarfine
.i. co naṡgabail in da fine romaino. Cethramthain .i. ar teora ceatramta na ceatramti dūbaṡ gelgine. Di chin .i. laime. Soman
.i. innile. Di opbu .i. d'fearano. Saetup .i. da rcurtib, no do rputnam. Ino fine .i. co naṡgabail na tui fíni romaino. Conpanna 25 .i. uppanoair reig buoim iní iur duthais da fíni iní adā eiblerar uaiti.
Cmaṡ .i. ahanl dūgep. Ber choir .i. o ta na .uif. friu deis

¹ The 'ingen ar meraib;' Literally "the nail on the fingers."

² A territory.—According to Dr. O'Donovan, a 'Tuaith' is also called a 'cinnā-man' in the county Antrim.

³ Deirgfine.—They were those who were guilty of the murder of a brother family-man, i.e. any one of the seventeen men of the four principal divisions.

⁴ Of a people.—The seventeen men next in point of relationship by blood to the chief enjoyed peculiar privileges, but all outside these were considered the people, not the family, or tribe, or sept.

⁵ 'Geilfine,' i.e. white family. Dr. O'Donovan says:—These were the chief's immediate family, including himself, the seniors being always preferred to the juniors, as far as five persons, i.e. his uncles, his brothers, his sons. But vide Sir Henry Maine, Early History of Institutions, pp. 209-216.

The 'ingen ar meraib';¹ it has passed from ear to ear that it (this division) is of the family; it separates from the family, but it obtains a share of the family land, inasmuch as it is acknowledged as of the family.

OF THE
DIVISIONS
OF THE
TRIBE
OF A TERRITORY.

The land of the family is not at all divided; it is here the family (or tribe) ends.

The families of the 'fuidhir'-tenants are subject to manifold divisions. The son is enriched in the same ratio as the father, and the father does not sell anything to the prejudice of^a his sons, grandsons, great-grandsons, or great-great-grandsons.

^a 1r. Beyond.

Question, i.e. I ask how many or what number of families there are in a^a territory,² i.e. from the seventeen men out. 'Deirg-fine'³ (red family), i.e. the fratricidal family. 'Dubhfine' (black family), i.e. the uncertain family. 'Fine-taccuir,' i.e. the adopted sons. 'Glasfine' (green family), i.e. which is got over the azure surface of the sea. These are of the tribe, i.e. the community. The tribe ends, i.e. it is not the property of a family, but of a people.⁴ The 'geil-fine'⁵ to five persons, i.e. there are five persons in the 'geilfine'-division. They get, i.e. they receive the 'dibadh'-property of every chief or head of a family who is related to them, or the 'dibadh'-property of the chief to whom they are nearest of kin. Each who gives, i.e. who becomes extinct of them. The 'dibadh'-property of the 'geilfine' is divided among the four families down here.⁶ The 'deirbfine' to nine persons, i.e. with the inclusion of the five persons of the family division before mentioned, i.e. the thing which devolves from them to the family. Is divided, i.e. the 'dibadh'-property is distributed according to the dignity of the heads who are related to him, when it is one man of the family that has left the 'dibadh'-property; or, according to the dignity of the heads of the three families, when it is the young man of the family that leaves 'dibadh'-property. The 'iarfine' (after-family) to thirteen men, i.e. with the inclusion of the two families before mentioned. The fourth part, i.e. three quarters of the quarter of the property which devolves from the 'geilfine'-division. Fines, i.e. for crime of the hand. Profits, i.e. of cattle.⁷ Of the ground, i.e. of the land. The labour, i.e. of moveables, or of service. The innfine to seventeen men, i.e. with the inclusion of the three families before mentioned. Divide, i.e. they themselves divide what is due to the family of the person who died from among them. As is right, i.e. as the law directs. As is finally?

⁶ The four families down here.—The gloss is interlinear and appears to be incorrect.

⁷ Of cattle.—That is, the milk, butter, calves, hides, &c.

OF THE
DIVISIONS
OF THE
TRIBE
OF A TERRITORY.
O'D. 736.

amač. 1r ann rcarait .i. co nač fine duthais e ohein imac ačt duthais daéine; [no 1r ann rcarait cobrainn fepainn ocuf cinat; no 1r ann dibur in cairder; no 1r ann dibat na ceitpe fine.] Derz fine
.i. in nine fínzalač. 1rpeoe .i. 1rrirode marbar neac dono fine, zo noibda ano uaiti. 1i cobrainnais .i. nozo compraindono reis duthais na fíni. 1rpech .i. reidim no inozaism, su nicanó cinto in ti na cohaizisgeó do. Dubfine .i. ino fine tairde .i. fine contaibarach.
1rpeoe dombeir .i. 1rrirode da beir ipino fíni su bir luisi da farat.
Noilleg .i. in don fine iao no nač ead. Se da hiter ar nall, ni ranta 10 orba cona tuga fir cairne no crannchair. Mac lia duthfine, 1r ceirame in orbo doib; mac comlin, 1r ceathraime beor; mac uarte, 1r ceathraime choata cach fir thall do cach fir amuis. Fir cairne .i. da farat anuno. 1r iarum .i. 1r iar na faratd upunouy ceiraimi fir in ti bir ar a éno ipano fíni. Finetaccuir .i. na meic poerma. 1rpeoe 15 .i. 1r iarpairde paeironisgeir ar trebarne zo cor o belab. A poerpa
.i. no zo compraindono reis dibat ačt iní paeironisgeir e .i. in ní zelltar ooo.

Atat opozaizte inoa porr na macaib paorma .i. mac paorma do zeilfine, ocuf mac paorma do derbfine ocuf mac paorma do 20 ečtar fine. Mac paorma do zeilfine, beiruprode cur ipm fine itar brud ocuf pcarann, manab tar bragait fine. In mac paoram, inoipio, do derbfine, manar tar bragait fine, beiruo uili m pcarann ačt a cur inipm do brud iar noul anunn don zaire.
Manar por reom fine, ocuf ni rapuz doib ar ače, 1r ann 1r 25 paoram caih po mair. Seac cumala o ruzab, let reac cumala o zraoab plata, teora cumala o zač bancomarba, da cumail zač ocaire, ocuf zač boaire; ocuf co torunac relb inro uile. Manar toruna relb, ocuf 1r mac paorma ar pcar, ocuf ni tar bragait fine, 1r uii. mač zača raimne oib po uile .i. do na

= forfemdi
cf. V 262. 4

¹ Of a people.—All other persons inhabiting the territory are considered the people, and have not the same privileges as the four classes consisting of seventeen men already mentioned.

² The doubtful trile.—That is, of whose pedigree a doubt had arisen. Dr. O'Donovan here refers to the story of "Donall na geroicenn ('of the skins') O'Donovan;" also to that of "Teigue an eich bhain ('of the white horse,') O'Donovan" who returned to Carbery under the name of 'Burke,' and proved his being an O'Donovan, and got a share of the land of his sept.

³ To retain them.—Here the singular number is used by an error in the original right, i.e. from the seventeen men out. It is then they separate, i.e. so as that it is not the territory of a family, but the territory of a people; or it is here the subdivision of land and liability separates; or it is here the relationship becomes extinct; or it is here the four families become extinct. The 'derggfine' (red family), i.e. the fratricidal tribe. Is that which has shed blood, i.e. which has killed one of the family, so that their 'dibadh'-property is forfeited from them for it. They receive no share, i.e. these share not in the family inheritance. Although, i.e. even though this is the case, still I maintain and insist that they must pay for the crimes of the person who is related to them. 'Dnbhfine' (black-family), i.e. the tribe of secrecy, i.e. the doubtful tribe.^a Is that which tenders, it is this that offers to the family the test of an oath for its retention. The test of an ordeal, i.e. whether they are of the family or not. Though it should be allowed that they are of the family after an oath, still the lands are not divided until they give the proof of the cauldron or of the lot-casting. If the 'duibhfine' be more numerous than the tribe they claim to be of; the fourth part of the land is given to them; if they be of equal number, the fourth part is likewise theirs; if fewer, the fourth of what is the share of each man within the tribe is given to each man without. Proof of the cauldron, i.e. to retain them³ within the tribe. It is after this, i.e. after being retained they share one-fourth with the person who is at the head of the family. The 'finetaccuir,' i.e. the adopted sons. Are they who, i.e. these are they who are acknowledged by the proper guaranty of oral contract. In adoption, i.e. they do not share in the 'dibadh'-property, but as much as is acknowledged, i.e. the thing which was promised to them.

proved / by /

There are many regulations respecting the adopted sons, i.e. an adopted son of the 'geilfine,' an adopted son of the 'deirbhfine,' and an adopted son of an extern tribe. The adopted son of the 'geilfine' gets a share among the tribe, both in house and land, unless he has been adopted against the will^a of the tribe. But the adopted ^{a fr. Over} son of the 'deirbhfine' if he has not been adopted against the will^a ^{the neck of} of the tribe, shares in all the land, but he has his share of the house only after having gone over into the family to be taken care of. Unless adopted without the consent of the tribe, who are in consequence insulted, it is then the adoption of each is according to his dignity. Seven 'cumhals' are due from kings, half seven 'cumhals' from those of chieftain grade, three 'cumhals' from every female 'comharba,' two 'cumhals' from every 'ogaire'-chief, and 'bo-aire'-chief; and all this to be augmented with increase of stock. If there be no increase of stock, and the adopted son has been adopted from affection, and not to the prejudice of one of the tribe, it is the seventh of each of these divisions that is given to the adopted

The 'dubhfine' may consist of one man only, and when he is proved, by the tests of oath and ordeal, he gets one fourth the property of a man of the tribe as to whose membership no question had arisen.

OF THE VARIOUS DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-RITORY.

reét cumala, ocur do leé na .uif. cumala ocur do na teora cumala, ocur do na de cumala. Máo tar bpaíat imorpo, neic dib itir, in mac paorma do ainfine, ir iyrde gaiber in cíf nincir.
Ocur .uif. cumala a loíyrde do gney, manap tar bpaíat fine;
mao tar bpaíat fine, ni beir cío loí a paótar.

Slarppine .i. gabair tar slar na paíge .i. mac murcuirte .i. mac eiprde bepey bean don fine dalbanaé. Opba niao .i. fearanto soruneic .i. meic reatar, loí cumailé. Deolair .i. deligir ino fine do.
Iníen ar meirib .i. caé ga paóa ir oan fíni hi. Doononais .i.
ar a pot uait ata, ocur o do cuair. Cluair .i. gleíyr ino pír peo da gleíyr ino fír ele. Deolair .i. co nach acu po bui .i. delaisíó pír pír in fine, su mi na negmar, atáé. On meo .i. on uair aironisíro innuno hi ran fíni. Duthais do fine .i. oá na .uif. pír deí amac. Cobran-nais .i. in oibao. Pinte pír .i. ata potelíusuo pílletí por fíni na potaer. Pon enmuin .i. ir ponae innano líum da beir mouguó maimeac ar a natair pe pe buíen e, ocur ar in mac iar pe in natar.
Hi pen .i. noco paéta don atair he. Sech macu .i. na geilfíni. Sech in oue .i. na geilfine.

¹ Rackrent. Explained in C. 807 (II. 3, 18, p. 373 b.), as a milch cow worth a sack, every month to the end of a year.

² Of his labour. Following this commentary, on the right hand margin of the page is a remark by the scribe, which according to Dr. O'Donovan, is in the handwriting of Egan MacEgan, who says he wrote it in the mill of Duniry, in the county Galway, A.D. 1575, as an improvement on his own decayed old book.

³ The nail on the fingers. This last section of the tribe cannot be deprived of whatever property it is entitled to by its rank in the pedigree.

⁴ The sons, i.e. should the fourth generation be of age before the death of the progenitor, the latter cannot sell the property without their consent, nor they without his.

⁵ The geilfine. On the foregoing tract Dr. O'Donovan observes:—From the preceding account it is clear that there were in every tribe inhabiting a 'tuath' or territory seventeen persons who constituted the whole 'Fine,' or pure tribe, and who enjoyed certain privileges that none of the other inhabitants were entitled to; that these seventeen men were divided into four classes, which respectively exceeded each other in dignity, according to their place in the pedigree and their relationship to the reigning chief. These four classes were known by the following names:—

1. 'Geilfine,' which consisted of 5 men;
2. 'Deirbhfine,' consisting of 4 men;
3. 'Iarfine,' consisting of 4 men;
4. 'Innfine,' consisting of 4 men.

But it must be understood that the 'Geilfine' obtained their share of all legacies in land or chattels which devolved from any individual of their own class, as well as from any man, or number of men in the other classes beneath them. The

f III 52. 23

foinan .i. inand?
f V 52. 26

son, i.e. of the seven 'cumhals,' and of half the seven 'cumhals,' and of the three 'cumhals,' and of the two 'cumhals.' But if it be in preference to^a any one of them, the adopted son of an extern tribe is adopted, he then gets the rack-rent.¹ And his price is always seven 'cumhals,' unless adopted to the prejudice^a of the tribe; if adopted in prejudice^a of the tribe, he does not get even the price of his labour.²

OF THE VARIOUS DIVISIONS
OF THE TRIBE
OF A TER-RITORY.

^a Ir. Over the neck of.

'Glasfine,' i.e. that is, who comes over the azure surface of the sea, i.e. the son of a sea-sent person, i.e. he is a son who is borne by a woman of the tribe for a native of Alba.^b Land of a champion, i.e. the land of a 'gormhac,' i.e. of a sister's son. Separated, i.e. which the tribe have allotted to him. The nail on the fingers, i.e. when all are positive in asserting that he is one of the tribe. It has passed i.e. it is far from you it is, and it has gone. Ear, i.e. the clear knowledge ('gle fis') of one man added to the clear knowledge of the other. It separates, i.e. so as that it is not with them, i.e. it separates from the tribe, so that it is away from them for a while. In as much as, i.e. since they acknowledged and received it into the tribe. The land of the family, i.e. from the seventeen men out. Divided, i.e. the 'dibadh'-property. The families of the 'fuidhir'-tenants, i.e. there are manifold divisions as regards the tribe of the 'fo-daer'-persons. In the same ratio, i.e. I hold that it is the same thing which brings increase of wealth to the father in his own time, and to the son after the father's time. Does not sell, i.e. the father shall not sell it (the increased wealth). Of the sons,⁴ i.e. the 'geilfine' of the 'fuidhir'-class. The great grandsons, i.e. the 'geilfine.'⁵

^b Ir. An Albanach.

'Deirbhfine' obtained no share of the 'dibadh'-property left by any of the 'Geilfine,' but they shared in the 'dibadh'-property which devolved from any member of their own rank, and had their share also of all the 'dibadh'-property left by any members of the 'Iarfine' and 'Innfine.' The 'Iarfine' had no 'dibadh'-property from the 'Geilfine' or 'Deirbhfine,' but they shared all that was left by any of their own class, and also received dividend of all 'dibadh'-property left by the 'Innfine.' The 'Innfine' or lower class received no part of the 'dibadh'-property left by any of the three higher classes, but they shared in all the 'dibadh'-property left by any man of their own class. The commentator reverses the numbers. He should have explained them thus:—

1. The 'Geilfine' represented 17 persons, viz., 5 of their own rank, and 12 of the other classes.
 2. The 'Deirbhfine' represented 12 persons, viz., 4 of their own class, and 8 of the lower classes.
 3. The 'Iarfine' represented 8 persons, viz., 4 of their own class, and 4 of the 'Innfine.'
 4. The 'Innfine' represented their own class only, which consisted of 4 persons.
- The 'Dergfine,' 'Duibhfine,' 'Fine Tacuir,' 'Glasfine,' and harlots, were exceptions to the other four.

O'D. 454.

^{B.} Innfine co recht feru d[ec].

Innfine arí ír fine díb. Innua innfine, athuir iarfine; innua iarfine, athuir deirfine; inua deirfine, athuir gelfine. No, dono, iar cefuird, cumad cuicer a ngelfine, ocur cethruir in gac
 5 fine ot rin amad. Ma ro dibatur na ceithru fine, in ti ír nera i nouchair daine tuar do breit in dibair, ma ro dibad duthair daine, in ti ír nera i ninnfine do breit in dibair.

Deirfine.

||C2249, O's 738

In fingalach. Deiruit fine a dibairde, ocur ní beirait a cinuird.
 10 Deiruirin cin na fine, ocur ní beirinn a ndibad; no, o rinnfer, ocur o ércfuir iar cefuird, co mberad dibad athuir ocur mathuir ocur in dibad ar fut, ocur co na beirad do cul no do taib.

In fingalach, o do dena pennuit ocur eiric, no éric a migníma, beirid a cuit do dibad a athuir ocur a renathuir, ocur noch 15 mbeirinn a cuit a mbrud dibad na fine. Ocur mun deiruid pennuit ocur eiric, noch a beirinn a cuit do nechtur de.

Deirfine .i. in fingalach cia rinnuird, ocur cia eirfuir, noch a mbeirinn ní do dibad rguithi na annrguithi na fine; no, dono, noch a mbeirinn dibad a compocuir co ro pinne ocur co ro eirce;
 20 ocur o rinnfuir ocur o eirfuir, beirid dibad rguithi ocur annrguithi ar fut, ocur noia beirinn do taib; no dono cena, co rucaid dibad rguithi ocur annrguithi ar fut ocur do taib, o rinnfuir ocur o eirfuir, amuirl gac duine dligtech don fine.

The following Commentaries on some of the foregoing subdivisions are found in O'D. 454, &c.

The 'Innfine' to seventeen men.

'Innfine' is the remotest of them. When 'innua'¹ is 'innfine,' the father is 'iarfine;' when 'innua' is 'iarfine,' the father is 'deirbhfine;' when the 'innua' is 'deirbhfine,' the father is 'geilfine.' Or, according to the opinion of others, the 'geilfine' consists of five persons, and every family from that out of four persons. If the four families have become extinct, the person who is next to them in the community of the people upwards obtains their 'dibadh'-property. If the community of the people become extinct, the person next them in the 'innfine' shall obtain their 'dibadh'-property.

'Deirgfine.'

That is, the fratricidal. The tribe obtain their 'dibadh'-property, but are not responsible for their crimes. They are responsible for the crimes of the tribe, but do not obtain their 'dibadh'-property; or, according to the opinion of some, they are to get the 'dibadh'-property of their fathers and mothers, and 'dibadh'-property in the direct line, but not backwards or laterally, after they shall have done penance and paid 'eric'-fine.

if they pay penance & wergild

The fratricide, when he has done penance and paid 'eric'-fine, or 'eric'-fine for his evil deeds, shall obtain his share of the 'dibadh'-property of his father and of his grandfather, but he does not obtain a share of the house 'dibadh'-property of the tribe. And if he has not done penance or paid 'eric'-fine, he shall not obtain his share of either.

'Deirgfine,' i.e. the fratricide, though he should do penance and pay 'eric'-fine, shall not obtain any part of the 'dibadh'-property in moveable or immoveable property of the tribe; or according to others, he shall not obtain the 'dibadh'-property of his nearest of kin until he does penance and pays 'eric'-fine; and when he has done penance and paid 'eric'-fine, he shall obtain the moveable and immoveable 'dibadh'-property in the direct line, but not in the lateral line; or, according to others, he obtains the moveable and immoveable 'dibadh'-property in the direct and lateral line, like every lawful person of the tribe, after he has done penance and paid 'eric'-fine.

¹ *Innu*a.—This is the fourth generation from the original father, and therefore the 'innfine.'

O'D. 454.

Dúbríne ar 1 dombeir fiop noillez.

1. Fíne cunnatabarac 1. mic éaróe.

Ce dañtúr ar noill, ní ranna orba cun do taca fír caire no cranncúir. Mic na mban tairge, cé no gáta aoen no deóe 5 oib do cum na fíne co fír no co retuib faoerina, ma ro for-brúar co brúlet coimlín fíne, 17 ecim fír de anora dia faracó;
 no, dono, comat ann ro beč in fír dé ro lair, iar nempatobail fíre daoine; ocuf da bratobad fír daoine do geubta uada, ocuf 10 ocuf gac fep oligteč 17 in fíne.

Fír hinórine; acť iarum cunpanda cethruine.

1. 17 in cethruine fep inóine 1; no 17 cethruine cota cac mic oligteč do ar a deniú a tairiur. Ma lia dúbríne, 17 cet-ruine in orbu doib; ma coimlín 17 cethruine; ma uate 17 15 cethruine cota cac fír tall do cac fír amuiz; ro coimlín. Amuiz beiriur inóine cethruine do dibat gelfíne, beiriú [o]uibíne cethruine cota fír do dibat, ocuf tír a acúr uile.

Duine rin ata pe fíne amuiz co fuil coimlín fíne, ocuf dači 20 anoligto air beč pe fíne amuiz co na gabur anunn e can fír de lair.

Ció fír daoine do gabur, ocuf iar na faracó, cac ni do roínóe roíne, can ní doruú de; ocuf cac ní tairiuró gan roinn, co nac brúil acť cethruine cota cac mic oligteč do cac 25 na faruib fír daoine; ocuf coma[ó] and ro beč cethruine cotač cac mic oligteč do, aíninburó na fúair acť triur ar a činn éall 17 in fíne, ocuf gac ni ro roínóe roíne 17 auit do de; no, dono,
 17 cethruir ata 17 in fíne cur a tic, ocuf cethruina beiriur ocuf cach fep oligteč 17 in fíne cur a ticc.

¹ Over the 'in' at the beginning of this word there is written, apparently by another hand, ino, intimating probably that the word should have been 'inóine'.

The 'dubhfine' is that which offers the test of the o'd. 454.
ordeal oath.

That is the doubtful tribe, i.e. secret sons.

Though they are acknowledged by oath, they shall not get a share of land until the test of the cauldron or lot-casting is given. As to the sons of the secret women, though one or two of them may be taken into the tribe by a test or with 'seds' of adoption, if they have multiplied so as that they are as numerous as the tribe, the test of God is then necessary to retain them in the tribe, or, according to others, the time that this test of God is required is when the tests of men have not been procured; but if the tests of men have been procured, they shall be received through them, and to the fourth part of the lands of the tribe to which they come, they are entitled, and they shall obtain a proportion of it equal to that of every lawful man in the tribe.

bring them (into the fine)

As regards the 'innfine;' but afterwards they share in the fourth part of the possessions,

That is, it is the fourth man in the 'innfine;' or it is the fourth of the share of each legitimate son he (the son of secrecy) obtains when he has been begotten in secrecy. If the 'dubhfine' be more numerous than the whole tribe, they obtain the fourth part of the land; if they are of equal number it is one-fourth they get; if they are fewer, it is the equivalent of the fourth part of the property of every one within that is due to every man without according to equal number. In like manner, as the 'innfine' obtains the fourth of the 'dibadh'-property of the 'geilfine,' the 'dubhfine' obtains the fourth of a man's share of the 'dibadh'-property and all his father's land.

This is a person who has been with a tribe outside until he has become equal in number with the tribe, and it is to avenge his illegal act upon him for having been with a tribe outside that he is not received within (into the tribe) without his having the test of God.

Though it be the test of men that is accepted, and after he is retained by it, he shall not receive any part of what was divided before; and, of whatever remained without being divided, the illegitimate son gets but the one-fourth of the share of each legitimate son. Or, indeed, according to others, the test of God is required when the test of man has not been obtained; and it is then he gets the fourth of the share of each legitimate son, when he found but three persons before him in the tribe within, and of everything that was divided before, he shall get his share; or, according to others, if it be four persons that are in the tribe to which he comes, he shall then get an equal share with every legitimate man in the tribe to which he comes.

Ir. It is.

Did this belong to S.M.? cf. C 220. amail rogal isin crith gablach in taineusa mair. refer to 328.24 as explaining ri benn.

Oban 1012 ?

cf also section purporting to come fr CG. in O'S 659

CRITH ḡabhlac.

CRITH GABHLACH.

& Mac Neill. PRIA, XXXVI, C. no. 16

- A. H. 3. 18 p. 252-256 (C. 488-504) = IV 298-326. 20.
 B. " p. 1-7 (C. 1-17) = 308. 10-340.
 C. " p. 419 a-b. (C. 973-976) = 316. 11-320

All collated by Meyer. Eriu I 210-212.

4 C96 Crith gablach .i. aigech .i. arani conarta gabhla nua ngrad.

5 Halc 229

20. CRITH GABHLAC.

(1) CRITH ^{A1 p.256.}
 GABHLACH. ^{translating}

Crith ar n-^{hannsa}neiper crith gabhlac?
 Ní ^{hannsa}Ar indí crenar in ^{hannsa}peir tuaithe dia d'aspoilteab hí tuaithe co nairmítheip ina gna[d] teéta imbi i tuaithe. Ní, ar a lin do gabhlac i foilaitheip gna[d] tuaithe.
 r. foilaithe

" fonnaltu?
 read fonnaltu
 [grad is neut. pl.!]
 4 320.13

5 5 Cair.—Círlin foilaitheip? C. uin. ^{hannsa}Guann
 5(2) Círlin ar a foilaitheip gna[d] tuaithe? C. uilann gna[d] neclara; ar nach gna[d] b'ir a neclair ip coir cia b'et a uilann i tuaithe.
 | D'aspoilteab, no díteab, no fiaonaire, no bretemnaéta, o cach do alailiu.

(3) 10 Círlin.—Círlin gna[d] tuaithe?
 Féir m'ibba, boaire, aipe vera, aipe aró, aipe tuire, aipe forsaill, ocu[r] n. Maó a d'ibba feneclair, ip menbur runn foilaitheip ter na uin. n'gna[d] n'gna[d]

=manibad?
 But takes accusative!

* Círlin m'ibba boaire cona oét foilaitheip? Círlin vera, aipe eéta, 15 aipe aró, aipe tuire, aipe forsaill, tamhíre n, ocu[r] n.

(4) Círlin foilaitheip bo-airech?

airech ara t[h]reabha á-deich

Da féir m'ibba, ocu[r] occaire, ocu[r] aitéch ar aipeab aitéch, ocu[r] boaire febra, ocu[r] m'ibbaire, ocu[r] féir foilaitheip, ocu[r] aipe coirpung.

or read á-deich 4. 306.2

(5) 20 Cairde imtách, ocu[r] nairm, ocu[r] nait, ocu[r] fiaonaire, ocu[r] los nenéach, ocu[r] biaéta, ocu[r] oéru[r], ocu[r] gna[d] ocu[r] taupneic, ocu[r] beir tigi caé ae?
 sho. to enadhud

11m. —Círlin ar in cam feneclur;

Círlin féir gna[d] fene

Fu mer aipechta adumter.

25

4. 306.2

note

CRITH GABHLACH.

Why is 'Crith gabhlach' so called?

CRITH
GABHLACH.

Answer.—Because of the fact that the layman purchases by his good qualifications among the people (in the territory) that he be accounted in his proper grade among the grades that are in a territory. Or, according to others, because of the number of branches into which the grades of society are divided.

Question.—How many divisions are there of these? Seven.
What is the division of social grades^a derived from? From the similitude of ecclesiastical orders; for it is proper that for every order which is in the church there should be a corresponding one^b among the people. Good corroborative proof, or denial, or evidence, or judgment, is due from each of them to another.

^a Ir. Grades of a territory or people.

^b Ir. Similitude.

Question.—What are the grades of a people?

Answer.—A 'fer mbidboth'-man, a 'bo-aire'-chief,² an 'aire desa'-chief, an 'aire ard'-chief, an 'aire tuisse'-chief, an 'aire forgaill'-chief, and a king. If it be according to the right of the 'feinechus'-law, it is in such manner these seven grades are divided.

What is the division, if it be not the 'bo-aire' with his eight divisions? An 'aire desa'; an 'aire echta'; an 'aire ard'; an 'aire tuisse'; an 'aire forgaill'; a 'tanaise' of a king, and a king.

What are the divisions of the 'bo-aire's?

Two 'fer mbidba'-men an 'og-aire,' and an 'aitheeh'-person on the residence of an 'aitheeh'-person, and a 'bo-aire febhsa'-man and a 'mbruigh-fher'-man, and a 'fer-fothla'-man, and an 'aire coisring'-man.

What are the oath, and the binding contract,^c and the guarantee, and the evidence, and the price of honor, and the refectioⁿs, and the sick maintenance, and the protection, and the proportionate stock, and the food rent of the house of each?

^c Ir. Knot.

Answer.—As the 'feinechus'-law says, sings [proclaims] it "That you may know the grades of the Feine,

By the estimate of the assembly they are counted."

or which are reckoned by the estimate of the court

¹ A 'fer mbidboth'-person.—That is a man of mean condition.

² 'Bo-aire.' 'Aire' is a common name for a gentleman of any rank in society.

'Bo-aire' is the lowest rank, derived from the possession of cows.

*probably improves > church grades
of 354. 19f*

*or in introd?
om. mentred?
+ read said?*

= And

according to it

have the top grades been divided?

zusammen

abschöpfen

probably improves > church grades

of 354. 19f

ad citare cia crith?

those should know

arind chain

[a]

[illegible]

for ndecha (perfective pr subj)
or ndechet (ind)

Cto ara nepen ^{de} per mrobot don per jo? Arani do nicet ammaici adobis ^{ad} alturna, ocuy nro ^{or} pois ^{read} paptais. ^{certaid}

N.B. Meyer's correction is wrong. He has 2 fur

10 In porcmaitheⁿ aer rampetecl^a donghir mibbot^a maatuing rmaeta? Porcmaitheⁿ aer ceiteora mbliaⁿ oⁿ nⁿoeⁿ 5ac.

res. comethas?

many others

read manifest

[illegible]
$$= b_a$$

Comp. of -fEt- = iron
Helbrach § 808

(7) 5 In per mroboz ^{u. m.} ēle conoi muuḡi iḡ tpebe^{air}u iḡde; tecmatari a muḡi do in teoria briaḡari^{con} co de tpeḡi; co taci giu toḡmachi giu diḡbail, muuḡtoḡs andiaḡi naḡ aḡe, aḡi iḡpēit ḡluḡa. ^{read - u} Ocuḡ iḡtoḡm^u colpoḡs no a loḡ; iḡpēo loḡ euechi oia aḡi, oia diḡuḡi, oia eḡaiḡ, oia ḡap^auḡu^(a).

read saiges

26. Ἰππεὶο φαίδιρ α παίδιμ, α παῖτ, α πασιναρε, α αιτιρε. Ο βιατα ασηαρ, αρρ ουαρ ζηαρ, νο αρβιμ. Ἡ βιζιμ. Σηασιρ α comζηαὸ ταρ α τιατα, eo ταβιμ διαβιμ ιμβιρ οο.

[illegible][illegible]

¹ In lieu of fosterage.—If the correct reading were 'nōicer,' as Professor O'Curry suspected, not 'nicer,' he would translate the sentence, "because his sons (by his position) are exempt from the right of fosterage."

* No land.—O'Curry suggests another translation of this clause, viz., "Or that he is not entitled to a tomb."

^s Preserved.—That is, probably, considered legal evidence.

Shuron, Jr. R. p. 84 b), says read manu be comattech f. f. laio, 'winn nicht ein Mann der fer fene iat, mit ihm iat (mit ihm zeugt oder schwört). But read rather manu comatthar with Nbs. - depon. pr. subj. of con. oi of Eriu 11, 86.

CRITH GABHLACH.

301

*dishonouring Man N.

cf. Eriu p. 84 f.

There are two 'midboth'-men, i.e. the 'midboth'-man who swears to 'smacht'-fines, and swears from a needle to a 'dairt'-heifer.
It is his price of honor for satirizing him, for trespassing on him, for 'esain' to him, for violating his protection.^{shonbrankung} It is to that extent he may become a bond, a surety, a witness, and a pledge.
He is entitled to feeding for himself alone, milk, and (stirabout) or corn. He is not entitled to butter. He protects one of his own grade over his own territory, who^a is fed along with himself till he passes beyond the boundary.

Why is this man called a 'midboth'-man? Because of the fact that he pays his sons in lieu of fosterage¹ (gives them away), and that he has no land.² ^{he comes out of childhood, out of the law of} ^{fosterage & (will) has not reached manhood.}

Is there any particular age determined for the 'midboth'-man, at which he swears to 'smacht'-fines? There is determined the age of fourteen years.

The reason why the language of his evidence is not preserved³ is because he is not eligible as a witness except for all trifling things, before he is seventeen years old, unless he has taken possession, or succession before that, or a man of the 'Fene' grade⁴ (a co-occupant with him).^{he cannot preserve statement nor evidence}

It is then he swears to 'smacht'-fines in farm laws.
The other 'midboth'-man whose evidence⁵ is preserved, is of more weight; his evidence⁶ is confronted with him in three words for three days; and if it survives (stands good) without increase or diminution, he swears after (in support of) another person, because his oath takes precedence. And he swears up to a 'colpach'-heifer or its value; that is his honor price for satirizing him, for trespassing on him, for his hindrance for violating his protection.

It is to that extent⁷ he may become a bond, a surety, a witness, a pledge. He is entitled to feeding for himself only, milk and stirabout, or corn. He is not entitled to butter. He protects one of his own grade over his territory, until he gives double food to him, is given to him

The sick maintenance is not in existence at this day, in this time, but every one receives the value of his good qualifications, according to his dignity, both as to doctor's fees, and company, and food, and the compensation for a maim, if it extends to mutilation;^{blemish, is hurt} but it is the same right that all the grades of the territory have under the law of sick-maintenance.

⁴ If it extend to mutilation.—O'Curry was in doubt whether the translation of this clause should not be "according as it may happen to be."

CRITH
GABHLACH.

violating his present Man thus far reaches

wouldst cheer⁷ of dec. glo

^a Ir. Andhe.

The author takes the word
as gen. of mid-brith to be in the middle unless

ie. of full capacity

'nachbarrecht'

^b Ir. 'Language.

who takes precedence
of him in swearing self in 2nd year

^c Ir. It is it.

so that

cf. Eriu 12, 128 for transl.

cons. pr. of copula

CRITH
GABHLACH.

Tongar rri corur ocu^r anmain, ocu^r da test aithe ar per perur in fuil, i corur o^ruara, i mboin. Conais tar pot cruach³ in aronimed o^rite dienn ar dian tola rluais, ma ur³sell tapeire cu^r lepar^o ar cuile liais, itar^oso lego, co deopor^o in arplaine.
 5. in^a iayrlaine, 1r plan, lina lepta a rna^oao co forur tuate.

Cadeat a polai corai o cach rri^r a cur^rar aithe! rri^r bur^r = ^{1r}Frighth per^r lego?

O^rffuteet for na^aa, mana eta nech a rrepa^o o rri^r cina^ob;
 combi ar esin do bongar. 1r co no^ogine ocu^r eneclann po
 miao at^rgar^rter, cio tpe eongeo no totar. | Test ocu^r a matair for poluc. Uachtar ar leamlact do hi t^rur^r, a coic^ri, i nomao, a ndechmao, a ndomnac.

should one read as in 300.9 In foremaidhter aco sainnethech etc. ... Foremaidhter Describe has forgotten fraction

In for^rmar^ro^rter o ceteopais bliadnais des co rictis co cuairt ulcaro. 4V86.6

Cia bert ara no^ogbo boair^rechar maru na ba cuair^rois, ni ica a luga acht alluga rri^r mrobo^oa.

Cia bert gin gabail norbai dana^r co crine, ni test a luige o rri^r mrobo^oa beor.

Dit a t^rur^rpeicc coic r^retais. Molt cona forair ber a tige.

1rre ber oen cin^rieda m^rin, per na t^rreaba^ro r^rail na perann do r^rateir^rn.

Forair in muil^r; vi ba^rigin des, imb, neimbeorl, imglance canne co cennais, ian oil air, t^rur^r har^rais, ochtar ocu^r lem^rlaet ocu^r oraumce no bla^rtach.

Hi olis^ren potur a tige do neoch cem m^rbir ma^ria, co m^rbi tualais paintre^rita, ocu^r gabala r^railb. Do rri^r mrobo^oa cem

The bed-carrying party. Over the a of the word 'lina' there is written in the
 MS. the usual symbol for 'no,' 'or,' intimating that the word might be 'lino.'

C850 caidi molt cona fozais? di lairgin-x. imb tre duinn 7 hian oil lan de trib acuib 7 imglance H.3.18 p.394.

He (who sheds the blood) is sworn to both body and soul, and a pledge is given by the man who sheds the blood, ^{for (by, discharge of)} ~~in~~ the law ^{CRITH Trench Crith 12, 83 f.} of sick-maintenance, to the amount of a cow. He is conveyed over the bloody sod; the noble chiefs protect him quickly from the rapid rush of a crowd; and a new pledge is given afterwards not to put him into a bed¹ forbidden by a doctor, and to provide a doctor, ^{* Ir. With-} until his present health is decided, and his after health. As to his ^{out a bed.} bed¹-carrying party it is safe for them² to protect him to the territory house (hospital).

What are the proper duties of every person for whom a pledge has been ^{rescued} ~~given~~ ^{rescued} that it shall be according to the ^{objects} ~~directions~~ ^{as against} ~~of~~ the doctor?

The whole of the attendance falls upon the securities, if a person (the invalid), ^{expressed} does receive not his cure from the criminal; ^{so that} and it may be ~~obtained~~ ^{expressed} by force. It is to the amount of his full 'dire'-fine and honor-price, according to grade, he sues, though it be through a ^{unintentional} tongueless person³ he demands it. || He goes, and his mother, upon sick maintenance. Cream upon new milk is to be provided for him on third, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth days, and on Sundays. N.B. Is the fem. of the ordinal used to express a period.

Is there anything determined for him, from fourteen years to twenty, till the encircling of beard? It suggests crann-ul-chath,

Though he happened to take the rank of 'boaire'-ship before the encircling of a beard, his oath does not take more effect than his oath as a 'midboth'-man.

Though he remained till his old age, if he get not land, his oath does not pass from that of a 'midboth'-man still.

His proportionate stock is five 'seds.' A wether with its accompaniments is the food-rent of his house. (only in wether)

(This is the food-rent of a last survivor,⁴ a man who does not plough (or occupy) a possession or a farm for himself.) last of 304 25 when 2000 = 10 seds.

As to the accompaniment of the wether; it is twelve cakes, butter, 'nembeoil,' a handfull of leeks with their heads, a milk drinking mug of three hands in height, cream and new milk and 'draumche'-milk or buttermilk.

Refections at his house are not due to any person as long as he is in the condition of a son, until he is competent to have a separate residence, and to the taking of land. So with the 'midbaidh'-man as

² It is safe for them. That is, they have performed their duty, and are exempt from further liability.

³ A tongueless person. That is, not a professional pleader.

⁴ Last survivor.—That is, a person who has neither father nor mother living neither sister nor brother, or relative, none interested in him but the foster-father. He was somewhat in the position of a foundling.

c. 1982 cuit a mulind .i. bléith deolaidh air muinoidh 7 aighe do cin fochara do gabail de. cuit a saball .i. cu talla arbor and. (Fragment refer to the ocaine?)

no real feel?

imperative!

CRITH GABHLACH. ber noen ⁿcinn ⁿacht ma fpuarar a flait, na fuinge a ber tar molt cona forar.

new formach?
or forlach?

Ma forbera ^{lud}foled a tigi co mbi foled mboairach no ni ber arodu, torba corpa tuirreicca dorqm arudu. Torormas 5 caderm romaine co mbi ber a tige ann iar na miao, mana congla nae flait aile fpuir. Letorecht huao i ngort dia treire iar pocra; truan a duinn, ocuf a merca, ocuf a leuca, ocuf a epica do flait.

Good 201 14, 363

(10)

Ocaire ir ardu a aipecharuoi.

Cro ara neper ocaire? Ar oiru a aipechar; ceoh acht
10 fuaireir nue o po gab treabao

C. 505
jeo. C 505
omit?

Carde a toacht? Polod reeta lair; .uui. mbae cona tarb;
uui. muca co muic forair; uui. caire; capul ity rognum ocuf impuu; tih (ty).uui. cumal ler. Iredtir mbo la pene-impu, (ZCP 15, 325) poloing .uui. mhuu co cenn mbliadna .i. adagat 15 Paccaib in ^{ceh-e}reema mboim dia bliadna a pochnaie in tih.
Cethraime ariathair lair; dain, roc, bnot, cennofe, co mbi tualing coime. Cuit a flait, ^{comsa}imhuiln, i saball; reaball cocu.
= mulinn

et hramble [14]

Impid and C. 507 (only 7 feet!)

C. 507
the carl da fith

Met a tige; mou tiz incir ar it .uui. tihage .x. a met pde.
Fioti co forporur. Dit tih cae diti o fuiding co cleite. ^{reav o suid} 20 Da dorur ann. Comla ar alana, cliath ar alaile, of he gin cliatha cen tulgu. Uonocht coil mbi. Clar noraia ion cach di caomda.

Ir mo tech nocaimech. Hoi tihagi .x. a met pde. Tui troigi
x. a mcha, Ara porandathu ber a tigi i nti.

25 Oet mba a tihreker lte .x. reoit mpu. Ired diabal tauir.

¹ Last survivor.—See note (*), page 303.

² Third part of his theft.—That is, it would seem, the third part of the fine, &c., for anything stolen from him, for making him drunk, for wounding him so that he may be lame for life, &c. Seines Bestohlenwerdens (Dire p 76)

to make sure of it with carl eine Wunde die man ihm in der Trunkenheit beibringt

C. 507 Githi and carl's fortune. He the carl da fith co tuice cliath. He aduira and louta ar inda x x, cliath in alaile.

a grad n-i (unsupported diach partide of R248.52 n. 18102)

CRITH
GABHLACH.

crecca in gnaio píl riam; ar is di thir giallaio in gnaioin; is di thir, dono, los a .x. reoit dorom dia tynpreec; bir, dono, a tiri rin for pola rryr do. Darpaio inoi cona timtachi ber a tige. Tairr muca les ar tine iccar la boin, no tine opolaige, in na chumbu coir, ocur tiri meich in bracha, ocur let meich tarai. hardly not mischievous Ar amail noiaibul tynpreeaca in gnaio is irliu tynpreeic in gnaio is arpu, is diabul romaine, dono, ber a tige. Snaois a comgnaio, ar ni rnaois nae gnaio nech ber arpu. Diathao veiri do, di ar ocur gnyr, no arbanim. Hi olis imb. Cuao <com-fiel da opolaic .x. di draumeu ar lemiaet ceotar nai, ocur banysm inoime, no di banysm banysine. Al tiri for poluc. Imb iruidiu a tveiri, a coice, a nomio, a noechmaio, i noomnac. Tiri reoit los a enech, aet it reoit boylabry; tve naitye do.

(11)

Cio dia neipenat^{at}en dorom in treoit ro?
15 Hin—Dia aghir, dia erain, dia diguin, dia traryu^{sc!}ao, do loyca = -ud a tigi, dia tynporyu^{sc!}in, do gait ar, a let, do gait mo, di forp^{sc!}in a mna, a ingini. Aet ar bnet la pene let tyni zach gnaio tuaithe forp a mna, ocur a mac, ocur a ingin, aet ma^{sc!} doymaine, no mac ber elodach riu ngyari. cethraim i tha for suidit.

= -e

20 Cethra^{sic!}thia forpuidib-los a enec^{sc!} i iped imatoing, ocur tet forp a naioim, ocur a raith, ocur a aroip^{sc!}e, ocur a fiaonairi. Or in da fet terbanao aipe, huaple nao noy forpuga^{sc!} a tigi, ocur nao ninraith rriu, amail gae boairi, ar loiged a polao.

tesbanar is an OJ form as well as redoubt

cethra^{sc!}de? (ns)

(12) Alithech ar aetbea; a veich: veichoe a buaprio^{sc!}e .i. veich mba^{sc!} lair .x. muca .x. cairis, cethra^{sc!}me apathair .i. dam, ocur roc, ocur bnoo, ocur cennor .r. Tech pichet traiged les, co nairecha^{sc!} cethra traige noes. iiii. reoit a tve dia air, dia

¹ Woman's baking.--The woman's baking was half the man's baking.

² Of a hostage.--That is, if he is given in pledge, he is entitled to his own damages.

(1) v. difficult. read a [d]ir sin for folu fristo "then is that land as an object which he may renounce" ??

(2) Thurn. wd. read dire a there do 'he gets dire for his land tho he doesn't own it' ? read dire naite. i.e. his honour-price is paid in cattle, but his fuereic in land. ZCP 20, 212 (my suggestion) is before him; because it is for land ^{on the basis of that this become clients} the grades take service; ~~it is for land that he is entitled to~~ the value of his ten 'seds,' as his proportionate stock; he has his land given him according to qualifications.¹⁾ A 'dartaith'-heifer at shrovetide with its accompaniments is the food-rent of his house. A hog's belly in bacon he pays, along with a cow, or a whole hog in bacon, of an inch of fat, properly cured, and three sacks of malt, and half a sack of wheat.⁴⁾ Because in the same way that double the proportionate stock of the lower grade is the proportionate stock of the higher grade, so is the food-rent of his house double profit. He protects his co-grade, for no grade protects a person higher than itself. He has refectons for two men, in milk and stirabout, or in corn. He is not entitled to butter. A mug of twelve inches of sour milk ^{for (instead of)} upon new milk is due each time, and a lawful man's cake, or two cakes of woman's baking.¹ He has two attendants when on sick-attendance. They are to get^a butter on third, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth days, and on Sundays. Three 'seds' are the price of his honor, but they must be 'seds' of the cow kind; he is entitled to^b the 'dire'-fine of a hostage.² (2)

What are these 'seds' paid to him for?

Answer: For satirizing him, for his 'esain,' for insulting him, for violating his protection, for burning his house, for stealing from him, for stealing out of his house, ^{for (instead of)} for stealing anything into it, for forcing his wife, his daughter. But it is a decision with the Feine that half the 'dire'-fine due to a man of every grade in a territory is due for his wife, and his son, and his daughter, excepting the case of a 'dormuine'-woman, or a son who evades the supporting of his parents, ^{only} a fourth for these (Mach. note)

There are four things in which he acts to the extent of his honour-price; it is that which he swears to, and it goes on his security, his guarantee, his pledge, and his evidence. And the two 'seds' that are wanting to it (his price of honor), are wanting because the stability of his house is not perfect, and that he is not competent to undertake liabilities for them, like every other 'bo-aire,' for the smallness of his property. (i.e. ^{tenfold} ~~ten~~ seds) on ac of

As to a tenant-resident; ^{tenfold} ten of tens are his cattle, i.e. he has ten cows, ten pigs, ten sheep; a fourth part of ploughing apparatus, i.e. an ox, and a ploughshare, and a goad, and a bridle.⁴⁾ He has a house of twenty feet, with a kitchen of fourteen feet. Four 'seds' are his 'dire'-fine, for satirizing him; for his 'esain,' for in-

3) a churl who farms with his ten (Thurn.) 'vassal exceeding vassals in husbandry' Mach. reading anathreba aithechait ?

4) the corresponding to Chaf. §10. ZCP 14, 253 is from land that he gets which is salted

a cup of salt

which is salted

Esain

Eríst zu zveien

a Ir. Butter for them.

b Ir. For him.

i.e. giving stolen property into it.

here dire = honour-price

entertainment
?? Bewertung
cf. 302.25

suretyship

latter.

CRITH
GABILLACH.

erain, dia òiguin, dia parusud Imortoinis, ar naidom, is rath, is aithe, is pechem, is piadnairi pui. Deich mba a turepeice.
Forssu dune ocuf tine da meir ma òumbu coir ocuf (ceire (no) ceitir) meich bhrachia, ocuf pòlan airmeide di taru, is beir a 5 tige. Tincup coir, itir epna ocuf leirpai.

03. cethair

Is aitec baiteir^B mpo, dia mbe in a ennea, cin gait, cin braid, cin guin dune aet la a caeta, no nech doiraid a cenn pui; or he ^{8 recte} cona lanamnar coir, ocuf denmai in ainb, ocuf doinnachaid, ocuf corgaraid.

[H] < mraht

10 Cio nò mbur in puiro a boairachur? Ar beir brio ceirpai no coisur beir in comorbur boairach, conach ara boair ^{do} = di 4 M. 3 d 28 cach ae. ^{diathad} deir do di arf ocuf gpur no arbanm; ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15} imb in doinnachaid, seiccol tarfain lafodam, duilec, ^{412 d 19 (do)} cainnenn, paland, ^{KZ 35, 457-60.}

15 Oir do por polach. ^{alēē} ^{epinar A} ^{imim} do ala traid

(13) ^{epinar A} boairachur febra cio ara neiper?

(14) Ar is do buaid ata a airachur ocuf a eneclann. Tir da
.uif. gual leir. Tech .uif. traigeo xx. it, co nairchaid coic traigeo noéac; euit immuiliun co nairm^{epinar A} a muir, ocuf a a duma. Aith, raball, lias cairach, lias laes, mucpòl. It he nir in .uif. cleitir ó noipenar cae boair. ^{epinar A} ^{dec 4} ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15} 20 leir. ^{epinar A} ^{dec 4} ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15} ^{epinar A} ^{dec 4} ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15} ^{epinar A} ^{dec 4} ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15}
leir nairachur, capul poynuma ocuf ech immuime. ^{epinar A} ^{dec 4} ^{di 4 M. 8 L. 15} Di bai
.x. a tairachur. Colpoid pipent cona timthuz beir a tigi, in tairachur ocuf gairachur. Coic seoit ma òigun donoch is 25 gpur do dia eneclann.

Cio da bhr²³ (nd) coic réotu do eneclann in boairis? ^{[sch] but much confusion even at an early date (4 or 5 sig)}

Min—A guma; ret a naidma, ret a raidi, ret a piadnairi, ret a aithi; ret a poraigti, ocuf a bhrachnairi por mbuigret.
Imtoing coic réotu; tiasait por a naidm, ocuf a raid, ocuf a

Ap. 254

¹ Four.—'No ceitir' is an interlined aliter reading.

² A 'bo-aire.'—The portion of this tract taken from C. 488 ends here; the remainder is from the portion of the tract in C. 1-16 (II. 3, 18, 1-6).

- 1) baptisml wassal Mac N. 22 4 airhech bairte 352.24 bairteide O'law.
perhaps baptised 'harbor' in contrast to. b'aire gersa.
2) airneid = measure scales. of Corm 2553 earned 1. med tomals.

sulting him; for violating his protection. He swears, he is a security, he is a guarantor, he is a pledge, he is a suitor and witness for them (to the extent of four 'seds.') Ten cows are his proportionate stock. The choicest of a herd of cows and a bacon pig of two fingers depth properly ^{cut} cured, and four¹ sacks of malt, and a wooden ²vessel ^{of salt} is the food-rent of his house. He has proper furniture including iron and wooden vessels.

CRITH
GABHLACH.

This man is an immovable tenant, if he is blameless, has not robbed, ^{without robbery} has not wounded a man, except on the day of battle, or a person who ^{seeks} ^{to kill him} ^{for} his head from him; and he is in his lawful matrimonial union, and is ^{pure} as regards Fridays, and Sundays, and Lents.

'yearling stock' Mac N.
(4th generation)

the full of scales

What is it that ^{deprives} this man from being in the rank of a 'bo-^{perhaps} aire'? Because it may be that four or five such ^{may} occupy the land of a 'bo-^{to that} aire,' and it could not be easy for each of them to be a 'bo-^{to that} aire.'² He has refectations for two, of milk and stir-about, or corn; butter on Sundays, ^{salted} venison along with these, sea-grass, onions, salt.

^a Ir. Breaks or bears, property, i.e. his estate divided equally among his children.

searc-ol (4. hit bit')

He has two persons on sick attendance. He gets butter^c on alternate days.

^a Ir. Butter for him.

'Bo-^{of quality} aire fersa' why is he so called?

Because it is from cows his rank as an 'aire' and his honor-price are ^{derived}. He has land of the value of twice seven 'cumhals.' He has a house of twenty-seven feet, with a back-house, (kitchen) of fifteen feet; a share in a mill in which his family may grind, and his visitors. He has a kiln, a barn, a sheep-house, a calf-house, a pig-sty. These are the seven houses from which each 'bo-^{of quality} aire' is rated. He has twelve cows; half the means of ploughing, a working horse and a riding steed. Twelve cows are his proportionate stock. A male 'colpach'-heifer with its accompaniments is the food-rent of his house in summer food and in winter food. Five 'seds' are due to him as his 'dire'-fine which are permanent to him as his honor-price.

so that he can grind for his family (fir-mahlin)

and in 2nd year

for anything which is an offence to him

What is it that causes the honor-price of the 'bo-^{activities} aire' to be five 'seds'?

Answer: His deeds; a 'sed' for his binding,^d a 'sed' for his guarantee, a 'sed' for his evidence, a 'sed' for his pledge, a 'sed' for ^{stability}, and for his judgment upon land law. He swears to five 'seds,' they come on his binding,^d his guarantee, ^d Ir. Knot.

functions Mac N.

entertainment

CRITH
GABILLACH.

aitirí, ocur a ríadnairí. C biathad tríur; triur do for polad; 1mhm do 1 ndirri, 1 triurí, 1 cóicid, 1mhm nomaid, 1 ndechmaid, 1 ndomnach. Pír cáinnenn, no fáille do tarfun. 11í terban di poltaib in boairis terban di a díru.

14 r. moultier? moultier A moultier A
Míuríurper eio ara neiper? Dí lín a mpuize. Tir tri .uif. cumal larurde. Iré boaire peipe bpeite. Doaire zenra; co cách in chpuch a thige in na áttarib coraib. Caire cona mburib cona lorigaib; dabad in no mmdeltar bpué; caire rognuma polertra; itir epna ocur loirte ocur choru, cona heiretar; ammbur indolat, ocur long polte; drochta, canndelbra, reena buana aine, lomna, tal, tarachar, tuiper, diar, ptochpann eipit, acced rognama éacha parate. Cach ndelín de cen iarach; lia, roraio, proba, bíal, gá zona cethra, teime bithbeó. Canndel for canndelbra cen meth. Os 15 napatair cona huile comopair.

(15) 1te inpo tra snima boairis peipe bpuiche. Dúit dí iain in na éis do zner, ian aipr ocur ian chopma. Per tri rruba; rruab tuirc pochlaí rcoltar ainechpuice cach aiprín; rruab tine for epuic; rruaba apachair fo rínn; apmíuolans gabala 20 ruz, no erpuic, no ruad, no bpuichomun do ríout; rru tarpra cetha dama. Per tri mjach rrua tiz do zner ceth parai, mjach mbpacha, mjach mjuir luacha rru aithcumba naise dia ceithri, mjach guail rru epinna. Secht tize lair, aith, rabalo, muilenn, a cur rruiriu cono nairmil; tech .uif. trarzed pichit; ipchia 25 .uif. trarzed ndec, mupoil, liar loeg, liarr cairech. Pichu bo, da tarbb, re doim, pichu muc, pichu coirech, ceithri tuircc forair, di bpuir, each rliarta, rruan epuan. Sé méich talmain. Tatar caqu humai 1 tallai topec. Techruis parthet faiche A

¹ Salted meat.—O'Curry, in his second and revised translation of this tract, renders 'rúilti' 'a salted crooked bone,' it is not known on what authority. 'A crooked bone' (caménám) was the portion of the 'Aire-tuishi,' and of other persons of rank, at the banqueting house of Tara. Vide Petrie's 'Antiquities of Tara Hill,' p. 205, et seq.

² With its spits and its spindles.—Professor O'Curry in his second translation suggests "flesh-forks and lifting poles" as a better rendering for this obscure clause.

- 1) boaire der Verfügung (Bestimmung) eines Spruchs, e. des ein Urtheil spruch fällen kann. or boaire der Bestimmung u. des Urtheils. Mac N.

2) read intriur Erin 6, 48 + Br 55? Long Stork, Knittel? or intriur pl.

3) = conu eisidar < eisidar so that he does not [need to] ask [for them] cf. 310.13

4) see Stokes Criticism p. 39. die Gine Zweierheit von Baum hölzern? epit seipe < as ben?

5) read deim dim thing?

CRITH GABHLACH.

311

his pledge, and his evidence. His feeding is a feeding for three; three attendants are due for him on sick-maintenance. Butter is required for him on second day, third, fifth, ninth, tenth, and on Sunday. He is entitled to true onions, or salted meat¹ as condiment. Anything that is deficient of the qualifications of the 'bo-aire' shall be wanting to his 'dire'-fine. re. honours price?

'Mbruighfher,' why is he so called? From the extent of his grass-lands. He has land of the value of three times seven 'cumhals.' He is the 'bo-aire' for, obedience to, judgment.² He is a 'bo-aire-gensa,' he has every necessary furniture of his house all in their proper places. He has a caldron with its spits and its spindles; a vat into which a boiling of ale is poured; a serving pot with minor vessels, both irons, and troughs, and mugs, with which to eat out of it; a washing trough, and a bathing basin, tubs, candelabra, knives for reaping rushes, a rope, an adze, an auger, a saw, a shears, a wood-axe which cuts, implements for every quarter's work. Every item of these he shall have without borrowing; a grinding-stone, a mallet, an axe, a hatchet, a spear for killing cattle, ever-living fire; a candle upon a 'candelabra' without fail; a perfect plough with all its requirements (joint work).

These then are the deeds of the 'bo-airech' for obedience to judgment. There are two casks in his house constantly, a cask of milk and a cask of ale. He is a man who has³ three snouts; the snout of a rooting hog at all times to break the blushes of his face; the snout of a salted hog upon the hooks; and the snout of a plough pointed; for he is able to receive a king, or a bishop, or a poet, or a judge from off the road; and for the visit of all companies. He is a man who has⁴ three sacks in his house each quarter perpetually, i.e. a sack of malt, a sack of salt for euring the joints of his slaughtered cattle, a sack of charcoal for the irons. He has seven houses, a kiln, a barn, a mill, a share in it so that he can grind; a house of twenty-seven feet, a back-house of seventeen feet, a pig-stye, a calf-house, a sheep-house. He has twenty cows, two bulls, six bullocks, twenty hogs, twenty sheep, four housefed hogs, two sows, a riding⁵ steed, a bridle of 'cruan.' He has sixteen sacks of seed in the ground. He has a brass pot in which a hog fits. He has a lawn in which sheep stay at all times without

³ To break the blushes of his face.—That is, he should have always a hog fit to be killed to prevent his having cause to blush at his house being without flesh when strangers come into it.

6) read fo chland "ar rooting digging" der als paltet. amechruice 1) Röten 2) Teil eine Bauer

is in drin

Landman Mac N.

of chaekity?

el. of losat

implement Mac N. lit improvement!

reapiter Th.

Stomachen

in drin

CRITH GABHLACH.

fresh or salted onions Mac ?? harvey cf. Br. Coolie

2) Mac N. or im di ell ?? im ad ell weak vt. 2CP 17, 153

hiser?

He tools for use in every class Mac N.

f. the Irish practice

Ir. Of.

literally "gallows"

"in kehr aller gäste"

cutting up wounding

2) Mac N. 14, 26

Boars cf. V 304.12.

Ir. A thigh.

of detached description of the implements in C 883

CRITH
GABHLACH.

1 mibit^{imre A} biat^{imre A} cairis cen immirgi. Cetha^{imre A} rōa nōilla^{imre A} lēir ocu^{imre A} a ben. ^{imre A} Ce ben, inge^{imre A} a chomg^{imre A} rōa mna choir cetmuinte^{imre A} rair. Or he maith^{imre A} allu^{imre A} a, a nōm, a rait, a riat^{imre A} nair, a aithe, a ōn, a aith^{imre A} ead; gen^{imre A} gait, cen brait, cen guin dume. ^{imre A} Dī chumal a 5 thupre^{imre A} pécc. Dó cona timthuch^{imre A} bér a thige, itir^{imre A} gaimmbi^{imre A} a ocu^{imre A} raimbi^{imre A} a. Triar a dam^{imre A} i tuat^{imre A}. Triur^{imre A} do for^{imre A} polach.
Imb do co tarrunt^{imre A} do g^{imre A} rē. Snad^{imre A} rōa a chomg^{imre A} rōa. Sall^{imre A} dō i t^{imre A} rir, i coic^{imre A} tī, i nōmair, i nōechmair, i nōdomnach. Imtoing^{imre A} re reotu. Ir^{imre A} nōm, ir^{imre A} rait, ir^{imre A} riat^{imre A} nair, ir^{imre A} aithe, ir^{imre A} reiche^{imre A} m 10 riu. Ir^{imre A} a o^{imre A} gēneclann, aēt it^{imre A} .u. p^{imre A} rōa i nōul^{imre A} tair a lēir dichmair^{imre A} pécc. Oile^{imre A} r a o^{imre A} rōl^{imre A} g^{imre A} rōa dōmair. Coir^{imre A} reoit in o^{imre A} rōl^{imre A} g^{imre A} rōa a thige^{imre A} dichmair^{imre A} pécc, bo i nōech^{imre A} rōa ino. Dair^{imre A} tair i nōl^{imre A} a^{imre A} te, dair^{imre A} tair ina dō, col^{imre A} rōa dach i nair^{imre A} bhir, rama^{imre A} rōa illeith^{imre A} bhir, bo i mb^{imre A} bhir, ocu^{imre A} r aith^{imre A} g^{imre A} rōa tuigē. Coir^{imre A} reoit i nōul^{imre A} tair a tech^{imre A} tair a liar, 15 dī bhir^{imre A} u^{imre A} a cōmlai^{imre A}, dair^{imre A} tair i pleir^{imre A} tair, dair^{imre A} tair i pleir^{imre A} tair rama^{imre A} rōa i cleit^{imre A} tair, col^{imre A} rōa dach i cleit^{imre A} tair, dair^{imre A} tair i nair^{imre A} rōa air^{imre A} thir tige, dair^{imre A} tair i nair^{imre A} rōa air^{imre A} thir tige. Leth^{imre A} lōg enech^{imre A} cāc g^{imre A} rōa tair^{imre A} i n^{imre A} gait^{imre A} nōb^{imre A} lāi ar a air^{imre A} liri; .u. m^{imre A} a^{imre A} i n^{imre A} gait^{imre A} mte. Cuir^{imre A} chur^{imre A} rōa cāc leth^{imre A} rōa é cor^{imre A} r a air^{imre A} liri. Lē 20 dīe^{imre A} rōa rōa rōa rōa ino^{imre A} rōa. Oile^{imre A} r ocu^{imre A} r ino^{imre A} rōa dō b^{imre A} rōa rōa lāi tige. Oile^{imre A} r cāc nōch^{imre A} oēm, ino^{imre A} r cāc nōch^{imre A} oēm. Oile^{imre A} r or ocu^{imre A} r ar^{imre A} gait ocu^{imre A} r hūmair. Ino^{imre A} r cāc nōb^{imre A} r cāc rōa ar^{imre A} cor^{imre A} r rōa lāi. Dair^{imre A} tair i c^{imre A} rōa nair^{imre A} rōa tair, dair^{imre A} tair i c^{imre A} rōa nair^{imre A} rōa dā^{imre A} rōa ocu^{imre A} r dair^{imre A} tair, la^{imre A} hait^{imre A} g^{imre A} rōa cāc nāe, c^{imre A} rōa cōēm c^{imre A} rōa 25 dīcōēm; dair^{imre A} tair cāc rōa rōa co^{imre A} r rōa rōa.

A d. for the hindpart of a raised seat, a darts for x is reside O.B.

This applies only to damage to house of brave. Another tariff of penalties for similar damage to house of ave dīa, ave hūm & ave ari in C 810-11.

1 The cast of a 'snecl.'—This was probably some sort of spear, such as the 'channrech' mentioned, p. 226, supra, the cast of which measured the extent of the precinct of each grade.

2 Injury to its wall.—This is O'Curry's rendering of the phrase 'cācā rōa being driven off. ^{ye} He & his wife have four costumes (each Man N, betw. them, th.) He has four suits of clothes with him and his wife. His wife is the daughter of a man of his own grade, being his lawful first wife. And his oath is good, his binding,^a his ^{CRITH GABHLACH.} guarantee, his evidence, his pledge, his loan, his letting (out for hire); he is not guilty of^b theft, of robbery, or of wounding any person. ^a Ir. Knot. ^b Ir. With-out. Two 'cumlials' are his proportionate stock. A cow with its accompaniments is the food-rent of his house, both for winter food and summer food. Three are his company in the territory. Three are required for him in sick-maintenance. Butter, as a condiment, he is always entitled to. He protects his co-grades. He has salt flesh on third day, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, and on Sunday. He makes oath to the amount of six 'seds.' He is a binder, he is a guarantee, he is a witness, he is a pledge, he is qualified to be a suitor to that amount.^c That is his full honor-price, but he has five 'seds' fine for going over his 'lis'-fort unlawfully. It is lawful to open it for his good. Five 'seds' are the penalty for unlawfully opening his house; a cow for looking into it. A 'dartaidd'-heifer is due for a lock of thatch taken from it; a 'dairt'-heifer for taking two, a 'colpach'-heifer for an armful, a 'samaisc'-heifer for half a truss, a cow for a truss, and restitution of the straw. Five 'seds' are the penalty for going through his house or his 'lias'-house (cow or sheep-house) by breaking its door, a 'dartaidd'-heifer for a lower lath,^d a 'dairt'-heifer for an ^{upper} lath, a 'samaisc'-heifer for a lower wattle, a 'colpach'-heifer for an upper wattle, a 'dairt'-heifer for the front door-post of his house, a 'dartaidd'-heifer for the back door-post of his house. Half the honor-price of every (or any) grade of a territory is due for stealing what may be in it ^{is not his} out of his 'airlis'-enclosure (yard); a seventh for stealing in it. ^{Hausbereich garth Man N.} The cast of a 'sneid' in all directions from his house is the proper extent of his 'airlis'-enclosure. Half ^{dire} fine in addition is due for a ridge.² To break on the floor of his house is lawful and unlawful. All small breaking is lawful, all large breaking is unlawful. Gold, and silver, and bronze are lawful; all troughs and ranges which are more properly on the floor are unlawful. A 'dairt'-heifer is the penalty for injuring the front lintel, a 'dartaidd'-heifer for the tearing or notching the rere lintel, together with restitution of everything, be it ^{precious} small or not small; a 'dairt'-heifer for every injury to its wall.² piece of woodwork up to a wall.

co ppais, in his revised translation. In his first translation he was in doubt as to whether the meaning of 'ppais' was 'carpentry' or 'a litter of rushes.' The whole paragraph is extremely difficult, and there seems to be a defect in the MS.

^a Here is an adj. sneid 'klein, small, simple.' but here the word is sg. of sneid, v. n. of sneidid or sg. pass. sneidat?

^c "Halbe Hehnungsbuss für Ackerland." Acc. pl. of inair 'plowland' MacN. "for trespass therein" - thinking of indrud : O.D. 651 has indrud

^d airle = clau, ryth fr. as suicle 'Vordereit' before the imda odd must be some part of or object in the house; if TBF-L 71f close in target, sechtodd and ... v4. n-imdai.

Օրերս ունեցողքս զմարտի տօնին։ Օրերս ունեցողքս զմարտի տօնին։ Քոյսն խառն ա խառն ա միշտ նայում։ Ողորդես նա իմար։

Եզր A

^{nimda A} Dipech nimda; diam olai do chind adairt, ^{do A} dipenar dag-chepeall. ^{for} Diam olai doneoch bir fo furda, ^{said oach A} dipenar daggamun.
^A Diam olai di corraib, dipenar dagarraib. Diam olai do rrais, ain nua dia errair. Diam tuchur tap cent, péc min, ocur athgim.

^{read n. mndai}
 Oiler ocur ^{a swidhinder 7 fridig A} moller 1 nimmo. Oiler rorde ocur pperissi
 -ardda [x]² ¹⁰ mni, ocur cia brontar mni, co comaroda cinn ^{skan} prutiu; mller mni ber aptou cinn. ^{scot A} Oiloapigg dipenatere peot & mao partiu chua, let iarmota. ^{motex A} ^{dis natur}

(8) Mleth diemairce ^{diemairce A} mhuilinn mpuist, coic reot, ocu ^{scot A} d'ile mine melar ^{diemairce A} diemairce, ocu ^{inech A} loz aenech, dia ^{dham A} toichne a dham.
 = Diambr 5 Dia n'a bhronao, aineclann caich ^{as a har A} ara ai, ocu arthgin la tairgell mlethei.
 na tairgille

Mata aith^{om-8} no bryonntar tichmairec, bo co ndairre a daine ocur aithim. Oider ni no bryonntar inni, aet asoraimni tuagessar & prototone in
sc. arachin addre A sub-stem A = artaimn ? xs. or mod tammt. ?
fem. or neut. pl. s)
so Mac-Nirado

20 ^{tar A} Dine^{seit A} a^{tar A} rabail, coic peot ocu^{tar A} aithgin conneoc po b^{tar A} honntair
ann. Dine^{seit A} a^{tar A} mucpolach, coic peot mucab ocu^{tar A} aithgin.

Όπνε α βέλα, ^{col⁵ A} colποαί, α λετ δια προβα, για πέ ιμβι; ιρ colποαί ι γυρίφν. Unforn. - belongs to the person

9. ^{arripere A} ^{fol. 10v A}
 25. ^{di} ^{in Buch.} ^{r. mal'rie?} ^{fadein a las A} ^{inf. pron. + predicative acc. v.}
 1pé pemibi boapechab inrin, ap^{cebi A} in m^{cebi A} fótlen a boapechur do taupeceice ceilé. ^{chanez A} Porpechato a cethpai, a bo, a mucc, a caínes nat po chomlaing a chip padeipin, ocur nat éta peice ap chip, m^{cebi A} pic a lepp padeipin, tábeip^{cebi A} thaupceice ceilé. ^{a A, L B}

Caṭṭi romaine rēt inn fir rin?

¹ For breaking into his kitchen.—In his revised translation, Professor O'Curry translates (with a note of interrogation) 'the whole front,' as if he suspected that the reading should be, 'poanuch uile,' not 'poanu chuide'? 'Dipech nimroa' of the next paragraph he appears to have thought might mean 'many strippings.'

l. forran a chuille? volume of his kitchen, it is of all times: if forran a chuille

2) loarrq (f.) [laksr lārrach] gl. furca 'sabelung, sabel' & Corm. 2808 raitkin cua temporal dative = in the winter quarter. lit the meat quarter of aimser cua

CRITH GABHLACH.

315

It is lawful and unlawful to break limits. What is lower in position is lawful, what is higher in position is unlawful.¹⁾ For position is lawful, what is higher in position is unlawful. For breaking into his kitchen [the 'dine' fine is the same as] for the stripping of an easy chair. It (the kitchen) must be littered with new straw. 1) As to the 'dine' fine for a bed; should it be stripped of a lock of the pillow, there is paid a good pillow. If the part for sitting on is stripped of a lock, a good skin is to be paid; if it be a lock from the feet, good shoes (covering) are paid. If it be a lock from the roof (or back) that is taken, new ^{biggest} straw is to be given to cover it. If it (the offence) be an upsetting, a 'sed' is due for it, and compensation.

Of what is lawful and unlawful as regards a bed. It is lawful to sit and recline in it, and though ^{whatever} anything be ^{damaged} broken in it up to the level of the head, by sitting; anything above the level of the head is unlawful. Two 'loargs'; a 'sed' is paid, if totally ^{two} destroyed, half after that.² ^{Two forks (bedposts) are paid for with a net if during the winter quarter [only] half from that on.}

For grinding without leave in a 'Brugh'-man's mill, the penalty is five 'seds,' and the forfeiture of the meal that is ground without leave, and his honor-price, should it cause his visitors to fast. Should it (the mill) be damaged, ^{or it} the fine is the honor-price of the party whose it is, and compensation with a pledge for the grinding.

If it be a kiln that is used^a without leave, a cow with a 'dairt'-^a Ir. Damheifer is its 'dire'-fine, with compensation. The using of it is aged.
lawful, without further compensation, except so far as what is cast a drain? a dra?
on the floor, and as to injury to its own sets of implements.

As to the 'dire'-fine for his barn, it is five 'seds,' and compensation for every thing which is used^{in it} in it. The 'dire'-fine for his pig-stye is five 'seds' for the pigs, and compensation.

The 'dire'-fine for using his hachet is a 'colpach'-heifer, half that for his wood axe, before fencing time; it is a 'colpach'-heifer for that time.

A 'fer fothla'-chief, why is he so called? Ein Mann des Wegstehlens

He is the leader of the 'boaire' class, because his 'boaire'-ship extends to giving proportionate stock to tenants. The excess of his cattle, i.e. his cows, his hogs, his sheep, which his own lands cannot sustain, and which he cannot sell for land, and which he does not himself require, he gives as the proportionate stock of tenants.

What are the profits of that man's 'seeds'?

² After that.—The original of this paragraph is very obscure, and the translation, to a great extent, conjectural.

* This 'intermediate grade' betw. flaith & fer fene is called variously flaith aithig (4. 200) aire iho da aire passion of flaith faibh etc.

1) "Auf Grund des Einkommens von der Hiee" (i.e. from his loaned stock?). ~~the~~ indul 'because of, by, Wb. 25a37, 30b3; I 250. 15; Hib. Minora Flc 658e.

2) perhaps diabol nairech desa "the double of an a.d." is a technical term meaning that he has twice the property of the boaire. 4. 8. intan diabolus feid mboairech. Otherwise a complete contradiction.

CRITH GABHLACH.

317

Leibshagen

42CP 16, 211

A profit of grain is ~~got~~ ^{for} by them; the value of the milk of each cow in corn grain, he ~~gets~~ ^{for food} by them; for an 'aithen-tenant' is not entitled to malt, until he is a 'flaith'-chief.

CRITH GABHLACH.

* Question.—When does the 'aithen-tenant' become a chief leaving the 'bo-airech'-ship? Upon ~~going into a true green~~ ^{chief} when he has double as much as the 'aire desa,' it is then he is an 'aire-desa,' who is called a 'bo-aire' that takes precedence of 'bo-aire'-chiefs: he then excels by giving proportionate stock to the tenants & he is not ^{at any} 'aire desa'-chief, and this makes the difference, i.e. double what the 'aire desa' has. Eight 'seds' are his honor-price. ³⁾ It is not among brughaidh-men he is counted, when he doubles the property of a 'bo-aire,' it is then he is an 'aire-desa'; for the name of his grade does not change though his honor-price increases up to that. He swears to eight 'seds.' He is a binder, a guarantee, a pledge, a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent. Four 'cumhals' are his proportionate stock. A cow with its accompaniments is the food-rent of his house every second year; a male 'colpach'-heifer with her the other year. Twenty-seven feet are the dimensions of his house, seventeen feet of his luchhouse (kitchen). without Four is the number of his company; butter with condiment is due to him at all times. Four are due for attendance on him in sick maintenance. Food for four is required. Salt meat for him is due on third day, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, on Sundays. It is of this grade the 'Fenechus'-law says: "The true chiefs are entitled to the full in accordance with numbering. The 'anflaith'-chief receives but half compensation for property which accumulates; where ten 'seds' free, it is five 'seds' of contract he receives, which amount to a perfect faithful restitution; for one half dies in fault of the forcible rule (or lordship?) "2) until he have double income (de-faith)?

Nac N.

it does not change the name of rank for him

he sure of 'contract' CC 7 29 (p 32)

est. bergide

Why is the 'aire-coising'-chief so called? Because that he binds people, king, and synod in behalf of his tribe (kindred), in their rights of safety by verbal engagements. But they concede to him leadership, and a right to speak ~~before~~ ^{in favor} for them. He is the family-chief then; he gives a pledge for his family to king, and synod, and professional men, to restrain them in obedience to the law.

constrains Mac N.

no! death etc. is suff.

coisreng = contractul

coisreng = contractus

CC 7 p 81 (67)

What is amount of the pledge he gives? A pledge of five 'seds' of whatever kind it may be, of silver, or of bronze, or of yew.

law should consist of four fields at the four points around his house, whereas, in his rank of 'boaire,' his 'air-lis' (yard) extended but the cast of a wand all round.

2) A perfect faithful restitution.—The clause may mean "so that he be perfectly worthy of whole compensation."

3) The forcible rule.—"pauil neymacht" may also mean "unlawful neglect."

3) Professional men.—That is, literary professors, people of any trade or art, other than farmers of land.

2) True chiefs are entitled to excess over the Bestimmung which they calculate; "ein Herrscher erreicht 1/2 Brutz der Schätze die vermehrt, wenn ihm nicht 10 Sedid ad adeln, so sehen 5 seds auf seine Handelsgeschäfte (or so sehen den Handelsgeschäften 5 seds nach, or so sehen ihm 5 Handelseds vor)"? "ill there be a perfect fulness of equivalent (Nac N); for one half period of from strengthless negligence (reut comacht + Bnt of. Zweck for comacht) comacht (cc-com-smacht) = unregelmäßig regulirte Bestimmungswürdig."

a different statement of the chain of events of an eye fire in 1838 187

Entschädigung für
What is the security of his pledge?

CRITH
GABHLACH

A cow every night is given for every one for whom the pledge is given, as far as ten nights is the interest of the pledge and of the ~~erie~~ fine of his act, and his honor-price according to his dignity besides, if it is a proper pledge that is given. And if an excess of pledge has been given, it is his honor-price, and his pledge ~~safely~~ with its interest, that is to be restored to him in the same way.

entire

diff. betw de'ruit 'become forfeit' & do'ruit 'fall' 20 Ir. Fall.

Question.—When does his pledge become forfeit?

After a month.

What is his security then?

A cow ^{for} every night is given for what has been neglected to be given for every one for whom there is not a pledge or word (judgment), as we have said; five 'seds', ^{now}, as far as three ten nights, on this occasion, is the security of his pledge in this case. This, ^{also}, is the interest of his 'seds' if he has given them away in a cover (box). Nine 'seds' are his honor-price. He is a binder, he is a guarantee, he is a witness, he is a party to a suit, he is a pledge to that extent. Five 'cumhals' are his proportionate stock. A cow with its accompaniments, and a male 'colpach'-heifer with its proportion of other food in winter, together with summer food, is the food-rent of his house. He has a house of thirty feet, with a backhouse of nineteen feet. Five are his company. He is entitled to butter, ^d with salted venison. Salt meat is due for him on third day, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, on Sunday. The honor-price of every grade of these is perfect unless their qualifications diminish, i.e. if they have not fallen into any of the seven things by which the honor of each is forfeited.

to the 10th night

reflects on behalf of anyone, which it has spent (unredeemed) for the debt is deposited by the debtor Ir. Without to the 30th night replaced i.e. if he deposits them
May know $100
Ir. Knot.
Car 541

purish

dam-ann 30
Ir. Butter for him.
Ir. With-
out a pledge for his face.

What are they?

. Answer.—To be satirized, to be arrested and have no pledge to release him, ^(a) false evidence, false character, intentionally defective binding, evading guarantee, to break through his pledge for anything for which he went security, to be foul his honor.

on his behalf (i.e.)
Ir. With-
out a pledge for his face.

Buhipso

Question.—What is it that washes from a person's face (honour) these seven things?

Answer.—Every foulness that adheres to a person's honor, there are three things to wash off, viz., soap, and water, and linen cloth. What soap, is firstly, is a confession of the misdeeds in

2 'abreiben' of most sligeach 'smoothing' (Win) forfeited after a month, if not saved by the transgressor's depositing a new pledge, or by an offer to submit the case for legal judgment.

(1) His being satirized for becoming guilty without a pledge (i.e. thro not paying) ??

torgabail < to-ro-gab 'etwas begeben, sich etwas zuschulden kommen lassen'

the presence of people, and ^{a promise} giving the pledge not to return to them again. The water now, is the payment of compensation for what suffered through his misdeeds. The linen cloth is the penance for the misdeeds, according to books. CRITH GABHLACH.

These are the divisions of the 'bo-airechs.' Every higher grade takes precedence of the other.

It is after these, the grades of the 'flaith'-chiefs commence.

The ^{Reph. word} 'torus' of a 'flaith'-chief, viz., a 'flaith'-chief from a unim de zinalaurn hork 'deis'-chief to a king.

How many subdivisions are there of these? Seven.

Which are they? 'Aire desa,' 'aire echtaí,' 'aire ard,' 'aire tuisi,' 'aire forgaile,' a tanist of a king, and a king. usually only 5: aire echta & t. righ are added here.

What ennobles them? Their 'deis'-right, the ^{privileges} of each whether small or great.

Question.—What is the 'deis'-right of a chief? The goodly unbroken right right to protect his office or rank. There are four 'deis'-rights prescribed for 'flaith'-chiefs. ⁽¹⁾ The ancient recognition protection of the people (or territory), is his office in the territory, together with whether it be the office of leader or 'tanist'-leader of the army, whichever office it may be; ⁽²⁾ of his 'giallna'-tenants, his 'saer'-tenants, his ⁽³⁾ 'sen-cleithe'-tenants; the punishment of every imperfect service; ⁽⁴⁾ the following of cottier tenants and 'fuidhir'-tenants which he brings upon his land, because his wealth is the greater and better. 4. Aire p. 82. If there be service from them to 'flaith'-chiefs to nine times nine years, they are cottiers and 'fuidhir'-tenants; they are 'sen-cleithe'-tenants from that out. Transl. ZCP 14, 3.

Why is the 'aire desa'-chief so called?

Because of the fact that it is on account of his 'deis'-rights he is paid 'dire'-fine. Not so the 'bo-aire'-chief, it is in right of his cows he is paid 'dire'-fine.

What is the property of an 'aire desa'-chief?

He has ten tenants; five 'giallna'-tenants, and five 'saer'-tenants. As to his five 'giallna'-tenants, he is entitled to a fixed amount future of food from each of them. A cow with its accompaniments, and a male 'colpach'-heifer, and three 'dartaíd'-heifers, every winter, with his summer food, are due to him from each of (?) his five 'giallna'-tenants. Ten couples are his right company at feasting from the calends (beginning of the year) to Shrovetide. And he is the son of an 'aire,' and the grandson of an 'aire,' with the property of his house, both bed and supper and washing.² He has

² Bed and supper and washing.—This is O'Curry's revised translation of the terms, 'poipair,' 'supper,' and 'enncaí.' innocent 'rich' Mav N. ?

Ap. 256

CRITH
GABHLACH.

Teach .i.ii. tairged .xx. it, co naipéir coir, ocht nimmaid cona cinchup ann; ^{scrib A} eirí, cairn, cona lán ^{scrib A} Iertraí thús aipéir, im dabaig. Imoich dligte a cheiliu cintairb coir cáin, cairíod, con-neoch a tallen; ^{scrib A} lepardaltu comalttu, fup, mnaí, macc, ingin.

5 Ota' ruroiu por robur, ian corur sine ocu^{recta A} tuanti ocu^{curtain A} plata ocu^{recta A} eclara ocu^{recta A} recta^{recta A} ocu^{curtain A} chamuoi. Sé cumala a taupeice ó plant. Oi bai cona thintachai bér a thi^{curtain A}si; ngam, cona pambiuo. Ech plarta comatay, co^{curtain A} p^{curtain A}uan ap^{curtain A}ssat. Cetan

10 ech lair co nglar prianais, ocu^{ch} cloddel^{ch} nungsa. Cet-munter dligtech comcheniul conidat pon oen timtach; x. poit a enechclann. Immurtoing, ir naom, ir nath, ir aithu, ir

2 peichem, 17 piadnare puiú. Seirrep a dam 1 tuachl. 1mb d6 do gper co tairpuno pailti. 17ri plait incheithe mryn. Seirrip do por polach. ^{not}Porruas reirxin. 1mb ocup pall do 1 noirri, 15 17uppi, 1 coicir, 1 nomard, 1 ndechmard, 1 ndomnach.

Cito do ber^{na}na .x. reotú do diríu in nfr riu?

Cóic peoit a tige faderpinn cetamur; ocur a cóic ar in coic tige
 (C dno ngiall na cen ní) ^{meabha} ^{isla} (Arpua n) ar tía a aspechur di poltaib beccuib ocur mopam, ar ná dfa pecht naltar. (no sulr.)

[illegible]

Two tribes make a treaty (cairde). Then 1 of them sends 5 men to the airc e. of the other. These 5 remain 1 month to avenge any violation of the honour of their tribe, shd. anyone of the latter be slain or wounded after the making of the treaty. If they do not avenge within this time, they come within provisions of treaty.

If ^{on some form} the ~~tribe~~ people of the tribe where they are engaged slay or wound the five, the a.e. always pays for them, but not in land or copper cauldron (most valuable object)

- 1) 'mit dem was daraus folgt' at. (len of asa aithle (vt.m.) 'danach'
- 2) Thurn. wöl read ata suidin (= side) & takes solus as < so - febas (but must be so - bes ?)
Read ata suidi 'he binds them to good conduct' ?
- 3) which is subject to him. Everything more that he has (asid lice) of small & great objects [increases ?] his nobility so that he may not be cast out of his ~~territory~~ can rule.

a house of twenty-seven feet with a proper backhouse; he has eight beds with their furniture in it, water vessels, a cauldron with the full complement of vessels befitting^a an 'airech's' house, with a vat. He protects the rights of his tenants in all just suits of 'cain'-law, and 'cairde'-law, as far as he is able. ^(c) He has beds for a foster-child, a schoolfellow, man, woman, boy, girl. He is correctly ordered in the 'corus'-law of family, and of territory, of chief, and of church, and of general law, and of 'cairde'-regulations. Six 'cumhals' is his proportionate stock from his chief. Two cows with their accompaniment is the food-rent of his house in winter, with his summer food. He has a riding steed becoming his rank, with a silver bridle. Four steeds has he besides with green bridles, and a precious brooch worth an ounce. He has a lawful suitable first wife of equal family, and with the same clothes; ten 'seds' are his honor-price. He makes oath, he is a binder, he is a guarantee, he is a pledge, he is a party in a suit, and a witness to that extent.^b Six is his company or suite in the territory. He is entitled to butter at all times, with condiment of salt meat. He is the 'Mucleithe'-chief.¹ Six attendants for him are due in sick maintenance. He is entitled to support for six. Butter and salt (or fat) flesh are to be provided for him on second day, on third, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, and on Sunday.

What is it that gives ten 'seds' 'dire'-fine of this man?

There are five 'seds' for (in right of) his own house firstly; and five out of the five houses. * * *² Everything avails him which he purchases or which he adds to his 'airech'-ship of small property and great, provided it is not unlawfully they are acquired.

Why is the 'aire echta'-chief so called? Because it is as the chief of five men he is assigned to perform a deed in a place where interterritorial regulations exist to the end of a month, to avenge the insult offered to a territory in which a person was lately killed. If they do not perform it before the end of a month, they come under the interterritorial regulations, so that their beds follow them not over.⁴ Should they have killed a person under the interterritorial regulations, as to the same five men, the 'aire echta'-chief pays for them, ^(b) Land or ridge goes not for this, but only vessels, the value of a cow. They are now carried to be fed

¹ 'Mucleithe'-chief. That is (says Professor O'Curry), a man whose mother was the daughter of a 'Sen-cleithe' (old stander), and consequently of inferior degree.

² They are acquired.—This is Professor O'Curry's second and revised translation of this very obscure passage.

c) Shre Lager haften an ihm von jenseits [small] his dahin

5) If people of the cairde slay the same five, ? or if the same five slay people of the cairde ?

6) He brings them (the five) then out for their acceptance at the expiration of the treaty according to (with ?) the number of his protection & friends. of Burgschaft

CRITH
GABHLACH.

^a Ir. Of.

*reading obliged a shield
one perhaps accidentally
dat. without preposition*

He avows them

(?)

^b Ir. For them.

Sed. he lord of a pig's salt: he gets a pig!

con. this is compound & is shown like langille

Swallow

^c Ir. Till.

i.e. they may not kill copper caldron

6) read humachaire

con. valuable

1) He increases his tenants by contract & treaty every rank which is lower than him is wont to be in clientship to him.

outside to the end of the 'cairde'-regulations according to the number of their dependents and friends. His company and his sick-maintenance are by law like those of the 'aire desa.'

CRITH GABHLACH.

Why is the 'aire ard'-chief so called? Because of the fact that he is higher than the 'aire desa' and it is him he precedes. Twenty tenants has he; ten 'giallna'-tenants, and ten 'saer'-tenants. His ten 'giallna'-tenants are bound to give him two cows with their accompaniment and three male 'colpach'-heifers and five 'dartaid'-heifers every winter, together with his summer food. He binds his tenants as to the engagements and 'cairde'-regulations of every lower grade which he has in tenancy. Fifteen 'seds' is his honor-price. He is an oath, a binder, a guarantee, a pledge, a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent.

* Ir. To him from them.

he provides contracts of his vessels (R.)

What gives this man fifteen 'seds' as his honor-price?

Five 'seds' are due for him, firstly for the property of his own house; a 'sed' for every tenant from whom he is entitled to stipulated feeding. Seven is his full company in his territory, five men his half company.³ Butter with salt is always provided for them. Seven are his attendance in sick-maintenance. The maintenance of seven is due to him. Salt (or fat) meat and butter with salt are supplied to him on second day, on third, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, and on Sundays. Seven 'cumbhals' is his proportionate stock. Three cows with their accompaniment is the food-rent of his house. Twenty couples are his right on a feasting ('coshering') from Calends to Shrovetide.

privatim

Est Bewirkung (v. Br. Gröl.)

The 'aire tuisi'-chief why is he so called? Because his race has precedence and he takes precedence of the 'aire ard'-chief. He has twenty-seven tenants, fifteen 'giallna'-tenants and twelve 'saer'-tenants. As to his 'giallna'-tenants, four cows with their accompaniment are due to him from them, and five male 'colpach'-heifers and six 'dartaid'-heifers every winter, together with his summer food. Eight 'cumbhals' is his proportionate stock from a king. Four cows with their accompaniment are the food-rent of his house. Eight is his company in his territory; six his half company. Butter with salt is due to him at all times. Eight attendants upon sick-maintenance are due to

privatim

Vide, C. 1528. In his first translation he seemed to consider 'pöleith' as equivalent to 'pöpleö', and explained it as a 'feast to which the 'aire' was invited outside his own territory.' In C. 73-76, the word occurs in connexion with the term 'airecht', a 'court' or 'assembly,' and is explained as meaning 'a court that is by itself (apart) scrutinizing what is right.' "

1) In this as in other instances () Thurn. suggests reading toora (from to-ass-gais) if he wishes of note 2) on p. 334 infra doubtful!

fortsed - harrowing?)

326

Cuth Tablae.

CRITH no app, ^{art gall A} ar it gella, ^{indus A} i noirri, ^{indus A} i triirri, ^{indus A} i cóicir [i nomair], GABILACH, ^{indus A} i noechmaro, ^{indus A} i noomnach. ^{indus A} Píci ^{indus A} réo a eneclann. Immuirtoing, ^{indus A} i naíom, ^{indus A} i raithe, ^{indus A} i airtir, ^{indus A} i fechem, ^{indus A} i ríonairi púú. ^{indus A} At compen ma taíra, ^{indus A} cen aipech ^{indus A} cen aiplicuro. ^{indus A} Tricha lananna aice; ^{indus A} for cáí ó calaíro co hime; ^{indus A} ar ^{indus A} i r lín biaíra bír lín for cáí. ^{indus A} Noí ^{indus A} traíse .xx. a téch; ^{indus A} a nóí .x. a aipech. ^{indus A} Ocht nimíoi ^{indus A} i rí tís, ^{indus A} cona ^{indus A} nos tincap ^{indus A} tís ^{indus A} aipis ^{indus A} túir, ^{indus A} im ^{indus A} ré ^{indus A} bpoth-rach a cona ^{indus A} córuir ^{indus A} tincap ^{indus A} itir ^{indus A} corcaí ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} gamnu ^{indus A} ríoi.
 Sretha córai ^{indus A} i rí tís; ^{indus A} aipobor ^{indus A} each ^{indus A} méit, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} i rí each gnima, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} huna ^{indus A} lertar ^{indus A} im ^{indus A} chairi ^{indus A} i ^{indus A} talla ^{indus A} bóim ^{indus A} co ^{indus A} tinne.
 Céilí ^{indus A} coem [t]éctar ^{indus A} lair, ^{indus A} i réor ^{indus A} rachar ^{indus A} rís. ^{indus A} Da ^{indus A} echirían ^{indus A} .x. ^{indus A} im
 [r]ían ^{indus A} noir, ^{indus A} alair ^{indus A} aipíat. ^{indus A} Mí ^{indus A} aipre ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} traetli, ^{indus A} milchu, ^{indus A} ldech-ríar, ^{indus A} oícca, ^{indus A} lía ^{indus A} a ben. ^{indus A} Ditchi ^{indus A} accor ^{indus A} cecha ^{indus A} laubrai, ^{indus A} la ^{indus A} aipathar cona ^{indus A} ós ^{indus A} coru ^{indus A} olíro. ^{indus A} Da ^{indus A} éapal ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} for ^{indus A} tpeo. ^{indus A} Cetmuinter ^{indus A} co córuir ^{indus A} lín ^{indus A} pecta ^{indus A} lananna ^{indus A} comcenuil. ^{indus A} Combi ^{indus A} lan ^{indus A} conggnam ^{indus A} i tuat, ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} aipobdenaib, ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} noilleaib, ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} gill, ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} gíall ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} cairíu tar ^{indus A} cenn ^{indus A} cinnil ^{indus A} tar ^{indus A} cruch, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} i ^{indus A} tech ^{indus A} flata. ^{indus A} Aipneat ^{indus A} córuir
 i ríat ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} athar ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} fenathar. ^{indus A} Documbaiz ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} rlan ^{indus A} ara fornept. ^{indus A} Fortoing ^{indus A} for ^{indus A} gnad ^{indus A} aip ^{indus A} nírlu, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} porepinnat ^{indus A} a 20 ^{indus A} nóillí. ^{indus A} ~~exalt.~~

C1851

(t. has become extinct as in ar bail)

B.

(27)

Aíne forsgaill cro ara nepen? ^{indus A} Ar ^{indus A} i r ^{indus A} forsgella ^{indus A} for ^{indus A} na gnada ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} ríuríurim, ^{indus A} nach ^{indus A} aipm ^{indus A} mda ^{indus A} tochrathar ^{indus A} imíu ^{indus A} pena, huair ^{indus A} ar ^{indus A} nuair ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} febur ^{indus A} mda ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} celi. ^{indus A} Cethraí ^{indus A} a ^{indus A} céilí ^{indus A} la ^{indus A} ríde;
 píchí ^{indus A} celi ^{indus A} gíallna, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} píci ^{indus A} roepcéilí. ^{indus A} A ^{indus A} píchí ^{indus A} gíallna, ^{indus A} coic ^{indus A} bai
 25 cona ^{indus A} tímteú ^{indus A} do ^{indus A} huadaib, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} ré ^{indus A} colpdaíse ^{indus A} ríruim, ^{indus A} ocu ^{indus A} noi

1 Without delay.—The Irish ‘cen aipech’ might also mean, “without any one having to pay them for him.”

2 Thirty couples.—This does not hold good here. The number of his tenants is 27, and his number on the ‘coshering’ or visitation feeding should be the same.

to which they may happen to his Rahmonomy is superior

⁴ New vessels.—For 'αἰποβον' of the text, C. 503, reads 'αἰρίβον.'

2) Read individ. tochratar "where they sumown (self.) him for denial." ? id. from do'cu'men'tar ?

CRITH
GABHLACH.= teraid-iús ndairtarde cec gairiud cona rannbiud. Coic reot déac a enechclann. Immuirtoing, ir nairm, ir raé, ir aitiu, ir pechem, ir rianairi riu. Ferthor cen aipeé cen aiplicud cia thaccraí.

Nol cumala a thairceice o mar plait. Cóic bai cona thiméus
5 bér a thige. Nonbur a dam inna tuat; morreper fo lethe lunn do co tarpon, ocur raill, ocur cuiri no ar, ar it zellai, i noiri, i tiri, i coicid, in noim, i ndeémar, i ndonnach.
Tria traid a tē .xx. traid a irai. A rreatai tige, a folud a clete, a ec[h]rreim, a comopar caé raithie, a cetmuntur 10 a coru dligio.

(29)

Tanarri ruz ced ara neper? Ar moí rirairi tuath luidi do ruia cen cornum riu. Coic rendethe forraro lair pech airuz forrgail. Dechenbur a dam i tuat, oéar polerai, dechenbur fo[r] polach, co cetna éorur; co ninnucur clete, 15 collin eochraide, co comopar cec raithie, co cetmuntur dligio. Dech cumalai a thairceice; yé bai bér a tige. Tria ret a enechclann. Immuirtoing, ir nairm, ir raith, ir aitiu, ir pechem, ir rianairi riu. Ferthor cen aipeé, cen aiplicud, cia taccraí.

(30)

20 Rí cō ara neper? Ar moí ruzer chumaéttai cunnuruz for a tuatai.

(31)

Cair—Cuiríu fōdai for ruzar? Tōir fōdai. Cateat?
Ru benn, rí buéin, rí bunar caé cinn. Rí benn cetamur, ced ara neper? Ir he rí tuatli mrii lair mbiait .iii. ngraro fene 25 cona fōfōdai i céirine; ar it he benna plata do ruzmuriu.
.Iii. cumalai a enechclann, cumal cec rrimigrao bir fo a éumaéttai. Immuirtoing, ir nairm, ir raé, ir aitiu, ir pechem, ir rianairi riu. Ferthor cen aipeé cen aiplicud, cia taccraí. Da per déc a dam na tuath; nonbur, polerai. Dechenbur for 30 polach, for a éorur biait. Oi cumal .x. a thairceice; re ba bér a thige.

¹ The power of binding over his people.—O'Curry in his second translation renders this clause "The power of castigation over his territories."

² A king of hills.—The word 'beann' means "peaks, hills, horns, spears." It might mean here hills on which meetings or assemblies were held. Vide C. 229, where the 'Crith gabhlach' is referred to as a part of the 'Senchus Mor,' and where several explanations of 'Rí beann' are given.

with his summer-food. Fifteen 'seds' is his honor-price. He makes oath, he is a binder, a pledge, a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent. He pays, ^{the} when sued, without ~~any one~~ ^{forced loan} having to pay for him, without borrowing. Nine 'cumhals' are his proportionate stock from a great chief. Five cows with their accompaniment is the food-rent of his house. Nine is his company in his territory; seven his half company. ^{He is entitled to butter with salt, and salt meat, and ale or milk, for they are given to him, on second day, on third, on fifth, on ninth, on tenth, on Sunday.} Thirty feet is the length of his house, twenty feet that of his backhouse. ^{He has his house furniture in small things, or large things, his bridle steeds, his implements for every quarter, his first wife according to the propriety of law.}

The 'tanist' of a king, why is he so called? Because ~~he has a right to rule the whole territory~~ without opposition to him. He has five 'sencleithe'-tenants more than the 'aire forgaill'-chief. Ten is his company in the territory, eight his half company, ^{ten attendants} in case of sick maintenance, according to ^{former} regulations; with fitness of ^{furniture} in large articles, with his full complement of horses, with the implements for work of each quarter of the year, with a lawful first ^{wife}. Ten 'cumhals' is his proportionate stock; six cows are the food-rent of his house. Thirty 'seds' are his honor-price. He makes oath, is a binder, a guarantee, a pledge, a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent. He pays without ^{any one} paying for him, without borrowing, if he is sued.

A king, why so called? Because he possesses the power of binding over his people.¹

Question.—How many are the divisions of kings? Three divisions. Which are they? A king of hills² (or horns), a king of companies, a king the source of foundation of every head (chief). The king of hills first, why so called? He is the king of a territory (or tribe) who has the seven grades of Feine, with their divisions as tenants; for they are the hills of a chief which we have mentioned. Seven 'cumhals' is his honor-price; a 'cumhal' for every chief grade that is under his power. He makes oath, he is a binder, he is a guarantee, he is a pledge, he is a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent. He pays without any one paying for him, without borrowing, when sued. Twelve men are his company in his territory; nine are his half company. Ten are his attendants on sick maintenance, with proper feeding. Twelve 'cumhals' are his proportionate stock; six cows the food-rent of his house.

¹ Thurn. says read foolait but Mac N. "subdivisions" seems right. cf. to foolla.

- (32) CRITH
GABHLACH. Ríí burden, cío ará neperíróe? Ar míoí ar naupíraí da burden, no teopa mburden. Secht, c. cachá buríone. Íre pí teopa tuat, no cetheopa tuat mím. Oct cumala a enechclann, huairpe da foala iliallu, a dáo no a tpi, no cethair, amail 5 aréain [penechur].

new midchardda

Ríí mícuaríou merparíocht,
Na demogair merc maá, [m]
Óligio cumal for a recht
Do a dípiú dán.

- 10 Cethpi píet per a dám ina tuat, da per déacc polerthi.
Coic cumala décc a thairpeice; oct mbai bér a tigi. Ír dípolaig pí burden. Oct cumala ar asellat a polac, oct cumala a enechclann. Immuítoing, ír naíom, ír raith, ír aítirí, ír pechem, ír píadnairí. Perthor cen aipe cen aiplicio, cía thairpa.

- (33) 15 Ríí bunair cech cinn, ^{done} dno, cío ará neper?

Ar míoí ír fo cumactú a éunríg bíro cech cenn naí tim-maígg a coimíou; huairpe forpét céé cenn ber tpeíraí inní ber étreíra. Íre píí puprech mím; da .uíf. cumal a enechclanní; huairpe mbíte pí ocup tuatáí fo cumactú ocup a chupí-

- 20 díuig. Immuítoing, da .uíf. cumalaí. Ír naíom, ír raith, ír aítirí, ír pechem, ír píadnairí píí. Tríca a dám inna tuat; recht .c.
folethe; docunríuig la cach. [Dípolaig píí puprech, ocup pí

oí. bringu (34) eícíí, ocup brúgaí i ngradaib tuatí; leí polac céé gpaíó do a macc dígthe, do a mná; ar ír leí céé dígthig, cethramar

- 25 cach indígthig. Danamur a polac a incab maice nó céli. Rechtaíí, teétaíí polongtaíí leí polac a plathí. Sníit cumíla la canóm a ngnímó a polach fo a mbiathar la plar. new gried

new caton ogat

¹ Not to go on sick maintenance.—That is (says Professor O'Curry) if he is wounded he is not carried to the house of the man who inflicted the wound. The expense of his maintenance is paid him in his own house.

² Seventeen.—The MS. reads seven hundred (vii céí), but from the analogy of the other cases treated of, it is plain that the scribe must have written in mistake, céí a 'hundred,' for 'déé,' ten.

*every Mach.
by carri
(note 2)* A king of companies, why is he so called? Because of the fact CRITH GABHLACH. that he is ~~leader~~ of two companies, or three companies. There are seven hundred in each company. He is the king of three territories, or four territories then. Eight 'cumhals' is his honor-price. For he takes ^{off} many hostages—two, or three, or four, as it (the 'Fenechns'-law) says.

dr. drink hall
"The king of Michuairt who drinks but lawfully,
Whose intellect, is not obscure by inebriety,
Is entitled to a 'cumhal' over seven,
To be paid him as the 'dire'-fine of his rank."

Four score men is his company in his territory, twelve men ~~are his half company~~. Fifteen 'cumhals' is his proportionate stock; eight cows are the food-rent of his house. A king of companies is not to go on sick maintenance.¹ Eight 'cumhals' are given him in lieu of sick maintenance; eight 'cumhals' are his honor-price. He makes oath, he is a binder, he is a guarantee, he is a pledge, he is a party to a suit, and a witness. He pays without any one paying for him, without borrowing, if he is sued.

A king, the origin of every chief,^b why so named?

Because of the fact that it is under the power of his control every chief is who cannot be corrected by his own lord; for every chief who is more powerful ^{takes} ~~takes precedence of~~ him who is less powerful. He is the king of kings then; twice seven 'cumhals' are his honor price; for kings and peoples are under his power and his correction. He makes oath to the value of twice seven 'cumhals.' He is a binder, a guarantee, a pledge, a party to a suit, and a witness to that extent. Thirty is his company in his territory; seventeen² his half company. He is not coerced by any one. A king of kings, and a poet-king, and a 'brughaidh,' are not to go on sick maintenance among the grades of the people. Half the sick maintenance of a man of every grade is due for his lawful son, and for his wife; for it is half that is due for every lawful person, one fourth for every unlawful one. The wives of mercenary soldiers³ have sick maintenance in right of their sons or husbands. Stewards, and couriers are sustained with half the maintenance of their chief. They arrange that their share in the maintenance corresponds with their sustenance by their chief.

¹ Mercenary soldiers.—Cormac's Glossary derives the term 'amop' from 'ambos,' 'restless,' because he (the 'amos') is never at rest or stationary, but going from place to place, or from one lord to another.

substantive for his maintenance
^a Ir. Not maintainable.

^b Ir. Head.

Transl. Ériu 12, 85 f.

Bond men Mundervent & bondmen who who satisfy fulfil their duties, their maintenance is acc. to their obligation at their lord's hands.

* read either: condid brithem firiun doib 'that he be a just judge for them' surely shd be only condid (or condar brithemair firiun doib 'that they have just judges.) impossible

CRITH
 GABHLACH.

Cach dán da gni aicdi platha no eclaira polongar leé polach a míad caih ara aicdi do gni. Polach cech gnaid a eclair po comgnad tuaiti. Caé mathair lia mac for polae dia mapathar.
 1té polai plata do nuirniirem imabepat fullechta plaitthem-
 5 nair a romoinib réc.

2.c
 dipt.

MS.
 = ciata active in lib 33 c 1, 5
 etc.

(35) Cair—Ciaoe ar rruithiu, in píí fa thuat? 1r rruithiu in píí.
 Cia do compnuithé?; Ar 1r tuat oirniithé? ní, ní píí oirnithé? tuaiti.

diff.

Cateat polaió píí do tuaiti notnoirniithé?

10 Níall tar a cenn píí píí oirni crichi. 1r toing dúb, fortoing huaduib .iii. cumala. Téit i combreith, i comfionairi píí píí tar cenn a tuaiti. Oligit conda brithemair pííon doib.* Oligit sell tar a cenn. Oligit poluch amair polongar.
 Oligit nad ngellai oenach forru, nad tuimell tuath ule aco

pl. of tomall

= cammaiph

15 comaithe. +
 (37) Teora tomallu ata corai do píí for a tuaiti. Oenach, ocuf dal do cundrech, ocuf tocompac do crich. 1r tuaiti
 2 cammae comarssud oenais. 1r píí ní sellur ar oenoch; ac pop cóir ní sellur. as 2396

reaf for?

20 Cair—Círlir ata corai do píí do gíull for a tuata? Al trí.

read lea

Cateat? Sell rlogad, sell nechtge, sell cairdoí, ar it lieira tuaiti hui inrin.

(38) Cair—Círlir rlogad ata choorai do píí do gíull for a tuaiti? Al trí.

fem. refers to crich?

25 Cateat? Slogad hi crich a medon píí inthairde rlogio thairri; rlogud co hop crich píí forerim píí ocuf oligio, comit - = condid roib roib cath no cairdoe; rlogud tar crich píí tuait aratlú.

= asid' lui

¹ On behalf of the territory.—The Irish may also mean 'at the border of the territory.' It was (says O'Curry) the ancient custom in Ireland, when a new

- 1) Finnmell ca. be subj. to to-in-us-mel-mig nað Finnmell & Finnmell ZCP 16
 2) Difference betw. anach & däl ? beclomrac 'Versammlung nach der freize hin (to-).'

CRITH GABHLACH.

333

Every artisan who makes the manufactures of a chief, or a church is sustained with half maintenance according to the rank of each person whose manufactures he makes. The maintenance of every grade in the church is the same as that of its co-grade in the laity. Every mother goes with her son upon sick maintenance if she be living. These are the divisions of chieftainship which we have enumerated among which distinctions of chieftainship are produced from their rents in 'seds.

Question.—Which is the higher, the king or the people? The king is higher. What makes him higher? Because it is the people that ordain the king, not the king that ordains the people.

What are the benefits of a king to the people that ordain him?

He swears for them to the king on behalf of the territory.¹ He denies (or makes oath) on their behalf, he proves for them to the extent of seven 'cumlhals.' He goes into co-judgment, into co-evidence with the king for his people. They are entitled to righteous judges for them. They are entitled to a pledge on their part. They are entitled to sustenance as they sustain. They are entitled that he does not pledge them for a fair, that he assemble not the whole territory, but the neighbours (or co-occupants).

To three (spendings) is the king entitled from his people; a fair, and a meeting for correction, and accompaniment to the boundary. It is the people in common that assemble a fair. It is the king that pledges them to the fair; but he pledges them to what is proper.

Question.—How many things are proper for a king to pledge his people to? Three.

Which are they? A pledge for hosting, a pledge for right, a pledge for interterritorial regulations, for all these things are for the good of the people (or territory).

Question.—How many hostings is it right for a king to pledge his territory to? Three.

Which are they? A hosting within the territory for correcting another hosting over it; a hosting to the border of the territory to determine truth and right, so that it may be battle or relations of peace;² a hosting over the boundary against a territory that has revolted.

king succeeded, that he went all over the province or kingdom, and received the allegiance and the hostages of all the minor kings, and chiefs, and people.

² A meeting for correction.—The Irish thus translated may also mean "a meeting for making a contract."

Corruption of do'gva.

note archaic form of infix (sem. referring to rectalga(1)?)
cf. Trócaire co ndluthugud (dluthud LB) rector
Tes. Gorm. p. 2. 11. (of a King)

W. G. 8, 173

Cyril Tablac. cf. Rechtge la Halkh T. Conn. p. 8. 13
 comalnoh rechtge ib. 20. (of the truth's duties)

1. *Q*uaat tang eitheorai pechtgi zellur pijs for a tuatha.
 teat? Rechtgi penechari cetamur. It tuatha do egiur.
 pijs no de oluthai. na teorai pechtgi file, ir pi do de nimairtg. Rechtgi iari cath tomiommain purpu, co no olu-at a tuatha iariom ar namma conbba doib; ocur pechtgi n nonneba; ocur pechtgi pijs, amail iongab pechtgi pijs ipil la muiam. Ar ataat teorai pechtgi ata corai do pijs do ziull for a tuatha; pechtgi do mairbbu ehtariniul .i.
 u faranu, ocur pechtgi pu tuar toraid, ocur pecht cietme oanna, amail iongab pecht adainnam. Ite polaid fir aitheman imo for a tuatha, ocur mair forge goi na eim a forniur. Rop plan etariggarech firion iur lobru ocur uinu.

dat. shd be same as nom.

100

Ατασταντα την αλή τοσαρκατ το μίς. ²⁾ Ρορ περ καθ λειτ
 15 λανδίζιτ. Ρορ περ ημεμαρκετ περ. Ρορ πορμυ ανιμνετ.

4. basic

nom. santach

Ասա՛ւ շէտիւր տօբա՛ւ զօ Երատ Երբ յառից զօ յից. Կա՞տա? 14
 Ա ժօբա՛ւ քօր շօրա խօրհարա՛ւ առիւի; խօրհ քօրե՛ճա, խօրհ քամա՛րցի, խօրհ քամի՛ճա, ար շեն մօր քօրա՛ւ Իր ա՛րեճի; ա ժօբա՛ւ ա շօնսր, ար ու քօսր զօ յից մա՛րեճ ա շօնսր. Իքօ 20 Լա մօրն քօրե՛ճից Են ա շօնսր ամ մա՛ւ քօր յից, Լա յա տօրն յեիւ ա շօր ա՛ւ մա՛ւ.
nech? new na mna 24 gl. husham. M. 32. 230

+ cf. N.Y. 12032. 23639

Αὐτὰ μὴ νὰο νιμτέτ πὶ αὐτ' αὐτῆρα. Για αὐτῆρα? Ρὶ, οὐρ βριθὲμ, οὐρ διαρ 1 manchine. Για μὴ ἰν νιμτέτ ἰν ταὐτ ῖν? Μὴ πῖλα. Αὐ ζῆν ἰννα δὶβῦλαρ, ὅνα, οὐ τεχὲρ ἀρῖοι 25 ὁ βερ νῖνι ναιχλας ὁ, Αὐτ' μαρ τρέο ὁ κόι, ἀρ ἰρ ἀμῖα πὶ ὅν διπενάταρ δὶβῦλαρ πῖς ἀρ α' mcharb.

lat. septimanalis

5.

Alta, ^{ano} na^a, recht mōnaib i corur nīs .i. domnach do ól corua, ar ni plath teóta na^a ingella laíe ar each nooinich; luac do breithemnar, do choócceptad tuath; máire oic ptochil; ³⁰cétuin do déiciu milchaⁿ oic tóiponn; tapadóin do lánamnar; (Etar-daiⁿ) áin viden do rethaib ech; raatarn do breithaib.

2. C220f.

dat. & Rec. are interchangeable
even in lit.]

¹ Sowing of seed.—When his subjects (under-kings) were fighting and neglecting to sow the seed, he compelled them to change their course. Vide, O'D., 1778, et seq.

to-uss-gain

2) read pendulant to-d. berant < do-st berant w. inf. neut. prov. as in do-d'estra, meaning "they wish desire" & of Binann s.v. to grain lespore lives toora

1) read anna imma comtha diuib subj. to mon-con-bory so that they may not break up (impro. constr.?)

2) tuair toirail preparation of crops; vb. n. of do-ferai. The k must see that his subjects do this.

3) Cáin Adamnáin (AD 697)

4) read nísi foirge (= oirge, later simplified foirgeid wch wch give wch. form to 'orge!')

CRITH GABHLACH.

335

There are now four rights which a king pledges his people to observe.* What are they? The rights of 'Fenechus'-law firstly.

CRITH GABHLACH.

It is the people that proclaim it. It is the king that proclaims the

* Ir. Upon his people.

The other three rights, and it is the king that enforces them. A right

b Ir. After a battle has been broken upon them.

after they have been defeated in battle,^b and he consolidates his

Prof. a later insertion people afterwards so that they be not broken up; and a right after a mortality; and the right of a king, as is found the right of the king of Cashel in Munster. "For there are three rights which it is proper for a king to pledge his people to: a right to help him to drive out foreign races, i.e. against the Saxons, and a right for [first invasion of AD 685? more likely a gloss]

the sowing of seed,¹ and a right of lighting up religion, such as is found in the right (or law) of Adamnan.² These are the rights (claims) which a just sovereign has upon his peoples, and he exercises not falsehood, nor force, nor oppressive might. He is perfectly richtig entscheidend

recognisant and righteous to them all both weak and strong.

There are now three other things required from a king. He must be a man of full lawfulness in all respects. He must be a man die Erfüllung des Mors man that is consulted for knowledge. He must be learned and calm.

There are four actions³ (descending from his dignity) that bring the 'dire'-fine of a plebeian to a king. What are they? His action upon the three handles belonging to a plebeian; the handle of a clod-mallet the handle of a shovel, the handle of a spade; for as long as he is at them he is a plebeian; his action in going alone, for it is not proper for a king to travel alone; this might be the day upon which a woman alone (without any witnesses) might swear⁴ her child upon a king, a day upon which no one could give testimony but herself alone.

[The k. may not do these things without debasing himself to the rank of a plebeian; so that even a woman may over-swear him in regard to paternity of a son.]

There is a month in which a king goes forth four only. What four? A king, a judge, and two in attendance. In what month does he go forth in that manner? The month of seed-sowing.

To get wounded in the back, now, in retreating from a battle field, gives him the 'dire'-fine of a plebeian, ^{save} But if it is through him backward ^{he} (the weapon) has passed, it is not so, for 'dire'-fine is paid for the back of a king in right of his front. ^{in this case (lit. 'that is so')}

There are, now, seven occupations in the 'corus'-law of a king, viz.: Sunday for drinking ale, for he is not a lawful chief who does not distribute ale every Sunday; Monday for judgment, for the adjustment of the people; Tuesday at chess; Wednesday seeing greyhounds coursing; Thursday at marriage duties; Friday at horse racing; Saturday at giving judgments.

um die Stammes ins Ruchige zu bringen! C. L. A. p. 12.

* The law of Adamnan.—This is a curious law which had for its object the releasing of women from the obligation of going out to battle.

5) toraic = a) Beweis für Landbesitz f) Angabe eines mitschuldigen Nachbarn suit. ? Read torais torais (vb. n. of to-air-ic) "Betroffen-werden." This is neut. wch wch. explain why N. Sg + pl. Both end in ic. "There are 4 "discoveries (findings) wch bring the honourprice of a churl to a king."

(45)

Ατασ τρι τοιχνηδαυ επι νά ριυδε κοραυ (no τοκραυ) ρίς, || cia béth ρί imchoipe ιαρι νουλ τριυτ; τοιχνίυδ ιαρ νέλαιο αζε δια φολαυ, acht ní ρο ρύτ[ep] οίλλε δια ζυιν; τοιχνηυχ [d] ιαρ νετιυδ, αρ ιρ μό τορλί ολδάρ δόν, huape τορλίι λόζ α eneche.

read no further

(48) 5 Cair--Cia ir cóir ocu? ir teictai do denuní bíto nís?

^{[α] [αῖα ?]}
 Ρερδνίο τη φορδδαβ ?

Cateat ríoi? Fer forporrḡṣaib ~~forḡṣaib~~ for a comḡonn co trḡṣḡa in fer tria ríach; fer ḡaibef fer beḡḡabail, ocuf arirḡṣaib i ríoi. Fer benar dam oen beḡḡim naḡ ríúile; fer ¹⁰ forḡṣaib cimbir cen aurlú; fer forḡṣaib eclann ar belais ríuairḡ co tair ḡi aen forḡṣub.

= v.b.n. of arlier ².

(45)

Acaat ^{one} dñe trī auyrach nað acclavat rīs; eirpech ar tuath arlólú a connoruid; eppoch in tan mbí rí anechtair leirinna thuait pádeirín maní ríðá duiní; eirpech offeirceplabraí ^{le} nórthraib iar tuirvecht tar epich. Aogenedar huát do cach bepa cethraí na dá neirpech ndedenach nað arthgeimethar.
 hi tuirpech act mað inoruth nimoligthech.

Rad a (verb. referring to errata n.)

read dúne? or dúnaid?

read acc. lett².

20 Cati chopur dono rus hir hi popur dosnerf an chinn a tuati
 .Uu. pichit tpaiged oi tpaigib innraicib mett hi dune cach leth; .uu. tpaigio tpaiget a thalmacha; da tpaig .x. ona, a donna. Ir ann ir rus an tan dot nimcellat tpechta gialna.
 Cati in tpecht gialnai? Da tpaig .x. lethet a bel, ocuf a donna, ocuf i pot fu dún. Tricho tpaigi a pot i nechtaip. anechtar?
 Cleisus do denum itigi a thigi. Capu coil, capu óme cech 25 fu dia posba. Ino plath bachoib ní olis dénum a dúni aít a thech namma. .Uu. tpaigio tpuchoi i tech. Oi immoi .x.
 hir rusig.

* acc. to Meyer ZCP 12, 440 this is the vln. form.?

¹ Refused. Professor O'Curry refers here to the story of Felim Mac Crimthan and the Dalcassians.

² One thrust. The word "popgab," means sometimes 'a thrust of a spear,' sometimes 'arresting.'

Nahrungsvortheilungen für welche reddening of a kly was not put

There are three fastings which bring no offence to a king; fasting when^a the king be at (depending on) a boiler which has leaked; fasting after part^{non-offensive of a feast of his due; provided that} of his supplies has been withheld, but no men have been sent to wound him (the defaulter); fasting after being refused^{no unseemly penance} his supplies, for it is then he is entitled to it more than any one, because he is entitled to his honor-price. more it entails than his
'bleimich' (vioult), for it entails

Question.—Who is it that is a proper and lawful person to prepare the food of a king?

A man of deeds of three captures. thrusts

Which are they? A man who has made a capture, thrust he captures in single combat in which he pierced the man through his shield; a man who captures a man by living capture, and who or who can make a thrust?
 captures him on the battle-field; a man who fells an ox with one blow without leaving any part uncut^{so that}; a man who captures a criminal without having been ordered; a man who captures a champion in the front of an army, so that he falls by one thrust.^{holds him}

There are now three 'aurrach'-taxes which a king does not pay (is not held responsible for); an 'errech'-tax of a people (or territory) that has revolted, while he is reducing it; an 'errech'- tax when he has an extern king with him in his own territory, if some person does not relieve him; an 'errech'-tax of dry cows in a waste, after having come over the boundary. He restores the two last 'errech'-taxes (levies) to each person whose cattle they are; he does not restore in the first case unless it be an unlawful inroad.

What is the 'corus'-law^{of the fort of} as to the king who is always resident at the head of his people? Seven score feet, of lawful feet, are the dimensions of his 'dun'-fort every way; seven feet is the thickness of its mound at top; twelve feet is its thickness at bottom. It is then only is he a king, when he is encircled by the moat of servtude. What is the moat of servitude? Twelve feet is the breadth of its mouth, and of its bottom (or depth), and its length is the same as that of the 'dun'-fort. Thirty feet is its length on the outside. It is clerics that make the prayers of his house. A cart-load of firewood; and a cart-load of rushes to each man who so prayed. The 'pilgrim's staff'-chief^{is not} is not entitled to have his 'dun'-fort built for him, but only his house. Seven feet and thirty is the length of his house. Twelve beds are in the royal house.

^a'Aurrach'-taxes.—That is, extraordinary taxes, or levies, or exactions. 'errech' and 'aurrach' mean the same thing.

^bThe pilgrim's staff-chief.—That is, the chief or king who goes away on a pilgrimage as an absentee.

1) ? shd. one read éces, n. sing. ? hardly
 f. ansup dhi but this can be either!

what is nam. sg. of crúille ? crúid ?

crúille 15

This is the 'order of precedence' at a banquet, not the arrangement of the K's Court for adjudication (Mac N.) of ZCP 10, A similar order given for the Feast of Tara in Ex V 232.

f. Uallachan lide 21

formed by analogy
 av. cis lis

(or Calne) shet.

CRITH
 GABHLACH.

Co seinnar tech nís? Amuir nís hi foitriu. ^{dar < fo. dess}

Cair—Cinne amuir ata córaí la nís?

Per roepru di cru, ^{u u} per roepru di gabail, di cimmroecht; per roepru di fognum, di doerbothu, di doer-puiopey. Ní bí occaí 5 per roepru a rói, ar nach noimpe, no ar nach noimpe, no ar nach rubaí, a roethaib ar éonallbaí. condolbai

sub. of marraid 10 marraid

sing. agreeing w. lin.

Cia lin di amraib ar éoir la nís? Cethuair ^{reut - d} re.1. nísóis, ocur seirchith, ocur da taebtaio, ^u ite a nanman. ^u 1te ata choíraí do buich i foitriu taige nís ara choemtecht a taig immach, ^u imais i 10 tech. Per gill do gialonaib fhuu aníar.

Cia miao fíoi? Per laf mibi tyn .uui. cumal, forbí a fetaib ityn plait ocu andoin, ocur choíru ^u peni. Téet ^u fhu fuid iníar. ^u suide aníar Daama iarpuoiu. Eecur ^u iarpuoib; cruetti iarpuoi; cuplen-naig, corinaíru, cleamnaig a naipiuir foitri. 1r inn let eliu a 15 rochlu fénno; Pergnio fhu forngairu ndoíru. Al charu ar béluib cethuiri naí do gnér fhu cumarcc chupmúigi. Soépcéi na plata fhuu aníar. Oer inrin bíd coemtecht do plait. Séil iarpuoiu, bprthem iarpuoiu. 1 ben no a bprthem fhuirui inníar; iu iarpuoiu. Séil dithma i nglarib i naipiuir rochlaí.

rochla (<fo chlu)

for coemthecht
 or bide or lie ?

(49)

20 Ru tuaithe, di sepaib déacc do leppaib tuaithe folloing tuath padepin fhuu taircedi. Da per deac dha, dain erpuic di leirb ecelri ocur tuaithe imtéit cadepin. Ar ni macu tuath dainrao r. ruai nís ocur erpuic diami di gnerr forngelat. Dain ruao dha, di perub déac.

= dainb

(49)

25 Cia de irpuithiu, in nís ra erpué? Irpuithiu erpué, huaxhu arnéraig nís po bith creitme. Tuarhuib erpué, ^u dho, a glun ruu nís.

note broad.
 1/2 5159

1 In the hands of the chief and the 'andoin' church.—That is, pledged to them for the good conduct of himself and his family. The phrase, however, might mean,
 "whose paths are good between the chief and the 'andoin'-church, and his lawful family adjustments."

*ZCP, 18, 406. Thurn. wdt. transl. "der über ihren (der Genossen) Wertgegenständen (Kleider) steht sowohl in Betreff der Herrschaft der Kirche als der auf alle freien bezüglichen Rechtsordnung."

CRITH GABHLACH.

339

How is a king's house arranged?

What is the arrangement of a king's house? The body-guard of the king are on the south.

CRITH
GABHLACH.

Question. Who are the body-guard that a king ought to have?

ZCP 12, 441; 20, 372.

A man whom he frees from a ^{flood} dungeon, a man whom he frees from the gallows, from condemnation; a man whom he frees from servitude, from 'daer-bothus'-ship, and from 'daer-fuidher'-ship. He has not a man whom he saves on the battle-field, lest he may lay hands on him, or kill him, out of devotion to his own chief or people.

wegen (seiner) Zugeschicktheitsgefühl

How many body-guardsmen are proper for a king? Four, viz., a front man, and a rear man, and two sides men, these are their names. It is they that are proper to be in the southern part of a king's house to attend on him in going out of the house, and from without into the house. A pledged man of the pledged men (hostages) is to be with them behind.

"der Mann des Unterpfandes für die Anfreigehenden"
ZCP, 18, 405

What is his distinction? A man who has land of the value of seven 'cumhals,' whose property is in the hands of the chief,

"Ir. Between.

and the 'andoin'-church, and for lawful observance of the 'corus Feine'-law.*

He is seated by these, behind. The companies (the king's visitors) are behind these. Poets are behind these;

(Harper are higher among musicians)

harpers behind them; flute-players, horn-blowers, and jugglers are placed in the south-east part.

on the left

In the other side of the house is his champion's seat, A man of deeds is placed to guard the door.

No. of foreign fire

His spear is placed in front of each of the last two perpetually against the confusion of the ale-house. The chief's 'saer'-tenants are placed behind these. These are the parties who are the companions of the chief.

C. Donnelly p. 22. 7.

Hostages are placed behind these, judges behind them. His wife, or his judge is placed behind these; the king behind these. Unredeemed pledges (hostages) in locks (locked chains) are placed on the east side of the champion's seat.

ie not in chains

Bechp. 75

As regards a king of a tribe (or territory), twelve men are supported by the territory on his excursions for the good of the territory. Twelve men now are the retinue of a bishop, when he travels for the good of church and territory. For a territory could not bear the retinues of a king and of a bishop if they were constantly feeding on them. The company of the doctor in poetry, &c., now, is twelve men.

(ancient Ireland only.
inferior rose up. Equals simply raised their knee from their couch as a salute)

Which is higher, a king or a bishop? The bishop is higher, because the king stands up (to salute him) by reason of religion. A king, however, raises his knee to a king.

A similar mark of respect from K to Bp. Venodotian Code XII 6.

VOL. IV.

Z 2

1) Either this is a confusion in the text or it means that in the absence of his wife the judge took her place

CRITH
GABHLACH.

“Oligthir bpeithim la níg noda bo bñithim caoerim. — Cmail ar in can penechar. Mac N. PRIA xxxvi, C. 20. 6. p. 308-311.

*ma(a) be 259. pr. subj.
Th 8805.*

“Maó be níg, no ferrir
necht flaata fo thoth;
5 lair mbiaó merchar;
a rloíg rabair;
cuirmmteigi cuir merca;
merr tiri;
tomur forra;
10 forbera tiri;
oithle merrair;
mor muin mruigrechtai;
mrogaó coicrich;
cor cuathé;
15 córuir rinne;
rann itir comorbbo;
comairhig do garmmam;
gail comlaino caithigéi;
irtoó anagraitto níg;
20 raith comairigi chorur,
co feiriur réuab réib;
rlán cech comairheir curtar;
gellaib gelltar;
rmaétuib miach molauga;
25 luag nóiri;
óiri naubai ó daitair co dait
dochum colpóaisi;
co cóic rétu cingit.”

It is lawful for a king to have a judge though he is himself a judge. As the 'Fenechus'-law sings—

CRITH
GABHLACH.

"If he be a king, he knows
a chief's rights from the foundation;
He shall have ale paid him with food.
He shall have a brave army;
an inebriating ale-house;
the appraisement of land;
measurement by poles;
to award of 'dire'-fine;
an increase of fruits;
an increase of cattle on the land;
extension of boundaries;
a setting up of stakes;
adjustment of sub-divisions;
division among 'coarbs';
setting up of stakes;
invitation of co-occupants;
foreigners for combat and battle
are requisite for a king;
a guarantee of lawful protection for adjudication, until the owner of property shall be known he fulfills all duties of co-occupancy to which he is bound;
all promises promised:
sacks of damages he appraises;
the value of 'dire'-fine;
the 'dire'-fine of corn
from a 'dairtaid'-heifer to a 'dairt'-heifer, up to a 'colpach'-heifer;
to five 'seds' it progresses."¹

¹ It progresses. These sentences appear to be catchwords or mnemonics, probably in some kind of verse originally. In their present state, however, it is difficult, if not impossible, to arrange them according to any regular form of Irish metre, or to make any good sense of them.

CRITH GABHLACH.

SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH.

MacNeill, Stahs, p. 311. "quite indepot of C. G. in all respects & its original title was probably Mindlechtan (mind + slechta)... meaning 'classes of dignity'. It may be of the 8th cent."

Thurn. IV 191. Unter diesem Titel sind wohl zwei verschiedene Texte gedruckt.

- 1) Mindschlechtan to IV 362. 5.
- 2) Cia naimhead as naisele IV 362. 6 - 368.

(1) Mid (s) lectra down to TR 362.5.

- A. H. 3. 18, p. 15a-17a (C. 37-45) Collated by Meyer from I 212-213.
 B. " p. 148-149. = IV 344-350.3 (C. ~~117-119~~ ~~254-256~~)
 C. H. 4. 22, 676 f (C. 2070-2) = IV 356.28-362.5 (10. end of tract).

20. [CRITH ḡabhlaach.]

(1) Miad [i] techtas

A. B.
SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

Οι φίλοι το ξαπνάνο τεύτανε μια ζέστα?

CH. 11n—Ct pe ax. it. .i. tpuat, tu tu^{is} tpuat, aipe porgill, aipe apu, aipe tuire, aipe uera, aipi rine [iona, anruth], dae, oğlaitein, leđlaithem, płaitein oenercra, bo-aipe, tanuire bo-5 aipe tuiri, huaitne, feirchiuō, par raigve, aiteđ baatre, bogełtađ paiteche, omniu, nuōlađ, peim, piarcarpe, rinhach bpothlaige.

microbial analysis B

Cirrip α πολίτης^d για μια δαίσετ^A ἰδεολογία ὡς να μισολεῖται;

11m—Οc noi ; cορεϑταp cια meit i naρταιθεp caς τοib, ιτιp α λin ocυp α nuαιτε, ιτιp α mβιαθαc ocυp α nepain, ιτιp α ηguin 10 ocυp α noιguin, ιτιp α rap ocυp α paρiugυc, ιτιp α paepam ocυp α tuηiηcυcaς, ιτιp α neneclann ocυp α neneclhuce, ocυp α neneclhur.

Cirliu, to bepað miðð ocur enecðann to cað?

xc? idna. Cese cid notling a miast confa [E] as each rntoce. A tpu, ^ono, Ne a to ocur docero, ocur dotlandai
C254

15 Νῦν—Ἄττι : αἰρῶμεν, οὐρ ἰσχυρῶς, οὐρ ἐν τοῦ. Ἄττι, ὅλῳ, ἀτλεῖν τοὺς νόμους σου ἐν τῇ ἐκείνῃ. ἀνέστα, οὐρ τοῦ ἐν, οὐρ ἀνέστη.

Τριατ, .i. ρις, αμαρ̃ ιςβεν :

“Τριαθ τῖομ τρεμγέθα
Εῖντο τυατ οὔντο σο τυντο ;
Ταιρελλα τομυρ, κονο
λαρ να τυρη τοιμοιθεν.”

Kremi - etha?

20

Ολιγὸν α παερδιαθαὸ πο λιν, ^{timbe^A} cin timdeibe, pecib du timcella.
 Ολιγὸν .u. cumula deργόιρ, peelis logmoir, dia diguin, dia

¹ 'Esain.'—It is very difficult to fix the exact meaning of the terms 'eṛain,' 'oḡuin,' and 'ṛanugath,' which occur so frequently in this tract, and in other parts of the Ancient Laws of Ireland. No gloss on 'eṛain' is known to the Editors; in one place (C. 509) 'eṛain' (probably another form of the same word), is glossed 'innabath,' 'expulsion,' 'banishment.'

contfe (contfa), f. coinf gl. it hiesi no it coinf gl. dezi sunt morte 24-107 ba contine (coindne LU) a comae TBC 1588. Moys s.v. coindne

SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH.

How many are the legitimate titles of dignity?

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

Answer—Twenty-six, i.e. a 'triath'-king, a king of kings, a king of territories, an 'aire forgaill'-chief, an 'aire ard'-chief, an 'aire tuise'-chief, an 'aire desa'-chief, an 'aire fine'-chief, an 'idhna'-person, an 'ansruth'-person, a 'dae'-person, a full 'flaithem'-person, a half 'flaithem'-person, a 'flaithem' of one vessel, a 'bo aire'-chief, a 'second of a bo aire'-chief, an 'uitne'-chief, a henchman, a man who has lost his patrimony, a 'baitse'-tenant, a cow-grazer of a green, an 'oinmit'-man, a 'midhlach'-man, a 'reim'-man, a 'marsh'-man, ~~a crumb-fox~~. cf. Car p. 318.

How many are their legal rights according to ~~their rank~~ in the dignity laws?

*He ... of the man
veraw in the*

Answer—Nine; That it may be known to what extent each of them is confirmed in his rights, as regards their full number, and their smallest number, at refectious, &c., as regards their feeding and their 'esain',¹ as to their wounding and their being insulted, as to their being treated with contempt and their protection violated, their exemption before and during refectious;² as to their honor-price, and their blush-fine, and blister-fine.

How many are the things that give dignity and honor-price to every one?

Answer—Three: merit, and worthiness, and innocence. There are three things, too, that derogate from his proper honor to every one, i.e. misdeeds, and low profession, and non-innocence.

*defile defile or to as Hermin?
take away
yo || C 254 don't leandai*

A 'triath,' i.e. a king, as it is said:

"A mighty king who penetrates Erinn's lands from wave to wave;
He goes round its measurement,
So that by his hand it is guessed at." measured

He is entitled to be freely fed with his company, without curtailment, whatever place he goes round. He is entitled to five 'cumhals' of red gold, and a precious stone, for 'diguin'-trespass

¹ Refectious.—See, Progress of the King of Cashel when monarch of Ireland. Book of Rights, p. 30.

SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH. epan, no dia spireo spua. Coic coicid epenn tpeaetha a mamu uile, amail no cet do Concobar: ^{ut A} ur

Արժ մա՛ս րիճ,
 Բո մա՛ս Ներա,
 Նենա՛րս լա՛տս քըք բե՛նե.

Κι πιν.1. πι αργιαιλατ. uii. πiz τυατ. Cumal cae πiz το δια απ α εραιν, διατlu α θαλα no α ^{churnhige A} κυρητιζε, no α οενυρδ. Ολιγρ παρηδιαθατο πο λιν, ειν τιμωειβε. Τα uii. cumal δια παρυ υρ, δια εραιν, δια αινμεο; αμαλ ιρber Copmac: “bera το ρ cloca ^{α doorte A} κυρηβε λογ cimeo ^{α A} το cumalαιβ εανιυ; co α. uii.
 αγερ αθηρηε, icento caea κυνηρεν; coimoiuiv δια οισuin, no
 α παρυυρ, no ερυαρε ερυι.” if o bar 404

(Cortez Mud) Coirpre B
Sourire A (Cortez Mud?)

4. da cet
alin / C254
a enclann
h.

* dia digna B

R15 τιατῖ τοιμερ co α. uiii. ; ὁλιγὸ δια παρυγαὸ ρεο ζυιατε, cumal inruic co α ρεῖτ ραμουθερῖ ραερβρετῖὺς κορμαic.

15 Ὀκρε ἀπο .i. πορσίλλ .i. τὰρ cenn tuaíte compáera fhuir a cáin ocur ^{om. A} & cairde; ocur ní he ar do nairc congiallúna, na oligeo pláta; ocur atsuróetrom na tuata, ocur íf fús ar do nairc.
Óligró a raerbiathadó co ruice .xxx. oc lepuigú tuaíte. Óligró
.uif. leé cumal imraice dia dígum, dia rapugú, amail írberc 20 corpmac: “Ὀκρε ἀπο, αιρτο ^{plon. A} nlemje cona tuaíte τεραιρς; óligró dia rapugú rceó aígte epain .uif. lana leé cumal ar cáe nupconn co ruice .uif.”

20

25 *Αἶνε τῷρι ὁπερ πῖνε κομμενὸς τὸ κομῆς, οὐκ ἀποβλάβη.
 Ὁλὶγὸς παροβιάθητ' .xx. ἰν ταν βίῃ ἀε ληυγὺθ' τῷατε. Τεορὰ λεῖτ' αὐμὰλὰ ἰνα ἀγῖν οὐκ ἰνα παρῡγὺθ'. Ὡτ' οἰκίτῃρ κορμακ:
 "Cain βερά τὸ καθ' αἰνῆς τῷρι δια παρῡγὺθ' δια ἐγῖν, τεορὰ λειρε λεῖτ' αὐμὰλὰ λα διαβὺλ' πῡρῡμῡθ' εἰν ἀρβερῆσθ'."*

¹As Cormac says.—This quotation, and most of those that follow in the present fragment, appear to be portions of some ancient poem.

against him, for 'esain'-trespass against him, or for blistering his cheek by satire or abuse. The five provinces of Ireland he penetrates, receives the submission of all, as was sung for Concobar : SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

"The high son of a king,
The great son of Nesa,
Has bound (under his rule) the lands of the 'Feine'-men."

A king of kings, i.e. a king to whom seven kings of territories owe obedience. He is entitled to^a a 'cumhal' for each king, for satirizing him, for his 'esain,' for absenting from his assembly, or his ale-house, or his fair. He is entitled to his free maintenance with his company, without curtailment. Twice seven 'cumhals' are the fine for violating his protection, for his 'esain,' for making him blush, as Cormac says: "Adjudge thou to an illustrious king, O Coirbre, the value of a convict of beautiful 'cumhals'; to seven 'cumhals' the head of every beautiful face so blistered sues, with equal right for assaulting him, or for violating his protection, or for his cheek-blistering." ZCP 14, 339

The king of a territory is estimated to seven; he is entitled to it (the fine) for violating his protection and the blistering of his cheek; worthy 'cumhals' to the number of seven are adjudged him by the noble judgments of Cormac.

> An 'aire ard'-chief, i.e. an ^{of testimony} 'aire forgaill'-chief i.e. a ^{for a truth which is as free} man who ^{as himself} represents the territory, ^{the} whom they elect for that purpose, in ^{Ir. For} making 'cain'-law and 'cairde'-law; and it is not he that binds ^{him} in matters of ^{is common} 'gallm'-service, nor in the matter of the rights of the chief; and he ^{the truths bespeak him} prays the people, and it is a king that binds ^{them} them. He is entitled to his free feeding as far as thirty of retinue when engaged in benefiting the territory. He is entitled to seven worthy half 'cumhals' for assaulting him, for violating his protection, as Cormac says: "An 'aire ard'-chief, an high dignatary who protects his territory; he is entitled for violating his protection, and for the 'esain' of his face, to seven full half 'cumhals' upon (from) every sensible person as far as three." Transl. ZCP, 18, 352.

An 'aire tuise'-chief goes before the families of his own race to the king, and speaks for them. He is entitled to the free feeding of twenty persons when he is engaged in benefiting the territory. Three half 'cumhals' are due to him for his 'esain' and for violating his protection, ut dicitur Cormac: "Handsomely wilt thou adjudge to each 'aire tuise'-chief for violating his protection, and for insulting him, three distinct half 'cumhals' with double feeding, without diminution."

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

“Aire deṛa .i. fep conae deir nathar ocuṛ a tṛenathar, amail atcota riam, ocuṛ do tairchir. “Oligiṛ saepbiathadṛ deicnebuir do a tuait. “Oligiṛ cumal cae ain co moṛpeṛiur dia raruṛuṛ no dia erain. “Aire deṛa dicheṛi dia dṛiṛuṛ dia raruṛuṛ;
5 oligiṛ rlan cumal cae ain co moṛpeṛear la diablaṛ fūiririuṛ do toṛtaibh.”

dithe C 255

dia mbi ar do seb do (!) (C 255)
l. diamb erat a (Thum.)

“Aire fine fṛnṛathar .i. fep doet fine diamb iar da rṛta co rṛat. “Oligiṛ saepbiathadṛ .ii. ir a tuait; oligiṛ cumal cae laime co cethrur dia raruṛuṛ, no dia erain, ut dicitur cor-15 mac: “Aire fine fṛnṛathar a tṛṛta, dia raruṛuṛ, dia tṛomṛneṛaib, rṛeo air in oligiṛ, rṛeo aṛṛte erain, oligiṛ cumal cae laime co cethrur.”

1ṛna .i. fep oca mbi rochraiti do macuib berar do, ocuṛ do bratrib combi .xxx. ut gairgeat. “Oligiṛ saepbiathadṛ .u. ir oca fine. “Oligiṛ lṛt cumal co tṛiar dia raruṛuṛ dia erain, ut dicitur cormac. “1ṛna an dṛimṛac rṛomṛ coirṛpe lṛpṛair, cia oligiṛ dia raruṛuṛ, rṛeo ai erain an fṛr oligiṛ lṛir lṛt cumal co tṛi rṛiṛ; rṛir la diablaṛ fūiririuṛ, connma imṛarṛar cormac.” Seit A idan C 256

idan andiumneach
|| C 21056

and Bsch p 14

20 “Anrṛuth .i. fep imṛich a mennut ocuṛ a cṛic. Sum dṛine do in cae tṛeimṛi do ceṛrib rairṛuib na bliatna. Hi bi ber uaitiu
.xx. fṛr cṛich a neṛair. Saepbiathadṛ cethrair do (cae lṛte, no) gaṛa cleṛe ina tuait. “Oligiṛ tṛian cumailṛ dia raruṛuṛ,
ocuṛ dia erain; ocuṛ oligiṛ gairṛeo inraic ina enecṛann.
25 “Anrṛut an imṛich a cṛich cetharairṛ, coṛair gaile uat, co noṛiṛo dia erain an cumal ceirṛ tṛian, rṛeo gairṛeo nṛn-raic fṛr ruanna rṛr”

cetharda congaile
C 256

“Oae .i. fep imeṛta fṛr ar a laire, connac tairṛṛṛ a com-fir arailṛ conlairṛitṛ dṛtafich a goṛ C 256

An 'aire desa'-chief, i.e. a man who preserves the patrimony of his father and grandfather in the same condition that he found it before him, and who accumulates. He is entitled to the free feeding of ten in the territory. He is entitled to a 'cumhal' from everyone as far as seven, for violating his protection, or for his 'esain' as Cormac says: "An 'aire desa'-chief thou wilt protect; for assaulting him, for violating his protection, he is entitled to a full 'cumhal' from everyone as far as seven, with double feeding, and with fruits."

An 'aire fine'-chief be it known; i.e. a man who leads his family when they are on their way to the chief. He is entitled to the free feeding of six in a territory; he is entitled to a 'cumhal' from every hand to four persons for violating his protection, or for his 'esain,' ut dicitur Cormac: "An 'aire fine'-chief, let his rights be known, for violating his protection for his heavy blisterings, for unlawful satire, and 'esain' of his face, he is entitled to a 'cumhal' from every hand till it reaches four persons."

An 'idhna'-person, i.e. a man who has a number of sons who are born to him, and of male relatives (or brethern) to the number of thirty champions. He is entitled to the free feeding of five from his family (or tribe). He is entitled to an half 'cumhal' from each as far as three persons for violating his protection for his 'esain,' ut dixit Cormac: "An unambitious 'idna'-person; namè, O'Cairpre Lifeachair what he is entitled to for violating his protection, and untrue 'esain.' He is entitled to a clear half 'cumhal' as far as three men; broth with double food, to be inspected by Cormac."

An 'ansruth'-person, i.e. a man who protects his mansion and his land. He is allowed the wounding a person in each term of the four quarters of the year. He has not fewer than twenty attendants in an extern territory. He has free feeding for four on every side, or from every chief ('cleith') in his territory. He is entitled to a third part of a 'cumhal' for violating his protection, and for his 'esain'; and he is entitled to a trusty sword for his honor-price. "A noble 'ansruth'-person protects his territory to its four points; there is a path of valour from (after) him, so that he is entitled for his 'esain' to a noble 'cumhal' of a proper third part, and a trusty sword for the reddening of his face."

A 'dae'-person, i.e. a man who asserts the right of another; or a man who for another goes to fight his battle, when he has not

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

zcl, 18, 379.

or dia-mhri, arda-fet?

a Ir. To four.

improved

Ir. For

him.

one of the readings is the another

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

Ionn do rí a gheirra cen aóall fine aco. "Oligró a rærbiaithad ocur a amur o cá leite; ocur let trian cumailé dia erain no dia raruḡuó; ocur gairceó no timtác; Ut dieit¹ur Cormac: Finis B.
"Dae ar¹ ara r¹ém laime luiter, combi trelam tenn. "Oligró 5 cumal let¹trian r¹ia cumrre cuét ara óinrem, la tith clácta."

ZCP 16, 230

Ota rein tria, ní cumalaib a ndíre, aét a ré¹tuib bo ceth-ruib, no bo rlabra.

Og¹rlaithem .i. per tri reindleite cona comorbail teéta.
"Oligró rærbiaithad deichnebuir. "Oligró .x. reotu beoite
10 dia raruḡuó no dia erain.

Leth¹rlaithem .i. per da cleithe cona comorbail teétaib.
"Oligró rærbiaithad oétair, ocur .ii. reotu dia raruḡad ocur erain.

Plaithem oen epcra .i. per aen cleithe cona mur ocur a 15 com¹rbail techta. "Oligró rærbiaithad coicir, ocur .iiii. reotu beo rlabra, dia erain ocur dia raruḡad.

Bo aipe .i. per relba bunard, cona inuó (no inniuó) do tiri .x.
mba lair; ocur ní gom dúine aét a ló catha; ní éoinḡ luige aét fo aen a mbliadain. "Oligró rærbiaithad .iiii. a tuaiti;
20 ocur tri reotu bo rlabra dia raruḡuó, ocur a erain.

Tanuirí mbo aipe; oét mba lair a forur, cona inniuó do
tír. "Oligró rærbiaithad tiri i tuaiti, ocur da reoit bo rlabra ina díre.

ḡuaitne; fonluing ocur r¹irellaḡar in per .i. r¹ireillḡet 25 t¹rois ocur ardeilgen; per folomḡ einé ghepa cin imluat fine.
"Oligró rærbiaithad deiri, ocur boin letḡabala. .v. reotu dia¹ra
(sic) raruḡad, dia erain.

¹ Sen-cleithe'-tenants.—Literally, 'sencleithe,' means an old wattle, or as the popular phrase goes, "an old stander." He was a man who came from his natural chief to settle under another chief; and if he or his successors continued away the help of a family. He is entitled to his free feeding and that of his soldiers, from all sides; and to half the third part of a 'cumhal' for his 'esain,' or for violating his protection; and a sword, or a cloak, ut dicitur Cormac: "A noble 'dae'-person whose root of arm is exerted, so that it becomes a firm weapon of battle. He is entitled to a half third part of a 'cumhal,' for the beauty of his face being contemned, together with loss of clothes (of the offender?)"

From these out, now, 'cumhals' are not reckoned as their 'dire'-fine, but 'seds' of the cow quadruped kind, or of living cow kind.

An ogflaithem-person, i.e. a man who has* three 'senclethe'-tenants,¹ with their lawful successors. He is entitled to free feeding for ten. He is entitled to ten 'seds' of living chattels for violating his protection, or for his 'esain."

A 'lethflaithem'-person, i.e. a man who has* two 'cleithe'-tenants with their lawful successors. He is entitled to the free feeding of eight, and to five 'seds' for violating his protection, and for his 'esain.'

A 'flaithem' of one vessel, i.e. a man who has* one 'cleithe'-tenant with his house and his lawful successors. He is entitled to the free feeding of five attendants, and to four 'seds' of living cow cattle for his 'esain,' and for violating his protection.

A 'boaire'-chief, i.e. a man of original possession, with his profit, or place, having land of the value of ten cows; and he wounds no person but in a day of battle; he swears not an oath but once in a year. He is entitled to the free feeding of four, in a territory; and to three 'seds' of cow cattle for violating his protection, and for his 'esain.'

A 'second' of a 'bo aire'-chief.—He has eight cows in a house, with their place of land. He is entitled to the free feeding of three in a territory, and to two 'seds' of cow-cattle for his 'dire'-fine.

An 'uaitne'-person; ^{the} ~~the~~ man sustains and oversees, i.e. he ^{is . . .} ~~over-~~ ^{looks to him?} ~~sees~~ the wretched and the poor; a man who sustains attacks on his honor^b without the action of the family. He is entitled to free ^{b Ir. Elis-} feeding for two, and a cow of the second quality. Five 'seds' ^{are} ~~are~~ ^{ter-fine.} the fine for violating his protection, and for his 'esain."

during the time of three successive chiefs, with the knowledge of the former chief, and unclaimed by him or his successors, he or they, then became 'sencleithe' and could not go away of themselves, nor be claimed by the other.—Vide C., pp. 413, 1211.

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

^{Seirtheud}
Seirtheud .i. oclac do daſcenel, no fer forair, no mac táiriz
1. do nera do fer táiriz oc tairdeet annuail, no a nunaio; no, uair ro bo táiric a athair; no, daſ a cineil; no, ara ſair.
Dligiō raperbiathac i tuait ocuf a ben: ocuf rampairc pocail
5 ocuf colpoach ina enecclann, dia ar, dia annmed.

Na nai ngrada deiridnach ro ni teētair dliged dia mbreā a nairceuf, na damraio, na dipe rannruthach, māna narta realb, nā gae nā rochrairte. Ni caemthetā dipe di theētā, na di thir, na dochrair na hanpōta, uair natat inoiraice naōma na
10 raithe, na haitire, na naill, na rianairte.

Far faigōe .i. fer ro creca a dēir, ocuf a ferann, ocuf a relb, ocuf na techta ro tuait co leir na cleite, ocuf co freirce cuile caith; ocuf nitat diler do deoir fpi galan no freparō; ocuf ir far dno, cia poige, māna gata, no māna 15 ēreca a enech aipe am[ail] ^{com} Ir far do dno, a raithe fpi galan ocuf a ferparō māna tabra neā nī dō ar dia. Ir far dno, a raire, ocuf a dipe, ocuf a enecclann.

Do geltach raithe .i. fer meite coimre na teit tar criū, naā do aipiriz riſ, aēt bio ina mentat radeirir, ar imſairb 20 comlonn aenfir o ro bi cona ſairced fair; cona dāim cāim cin fēōam do ningairar. Do geltach .i. fer roſelta a bu a raithe ar cach nach dēir. Etar coin allta ime; conaōrī māin inreim. Ni dlig dipe na raire, ar ir ſnīm meic no mna do ſnī.

Alitheā baite .i. fer na ráera dan na trebat; ni fuile^t 25 ne dāim in fer rin ina fuil ~~gnimiu~~ laich lair. Ni téit a raithe, na i naitire fpi plait na eclair, ar ir gae ſreime do ſairter.

Oinmit; fer miter in droch mnai co ^(one written over con) ~~no dno~~ ndentar mear ocuf fonachtaíōe .i. forſeniz. Ni dlig dipe in fer rin.

30 Míolach .i. mílāiz .i. mídellach .i. fer na ra ſairb realb na mí-dhelbach ??

clp. gl.

A henchman ('seirthuid'), i.e. a soldier of a good race, or a householding man, or the son of a leader, i.e. he is the nearest ^{SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH.} to the ~~hip~~ of a leader when going to a meeting, or to a 'dun'-fort; or because his father had been a leader; or, good is his family; or for his talents. He is entitled to free feeding in the territory, and so is his wife; and a 'samseisc focail' . . . , and a colpdach-heifer are due for satirizing him, for abusing him. coming from?

These last nine grades do not possess the right to be taken to assemblies, nor companies at refectious, nor to particular 'dire'-fine if they do not possess a holding, or talents, or followers (a clan). They do not ~~get~~ 'dire'-fine ~~on account of stock, nor of land, nor for oppression, or misdeeds~~, because they are not worthy to enter into bonds or security, or to give pledges, or oath, or evidence.

A man who has lost his patrimony, i.e. a man who has sold his patrimony, and his land, and his stock, and who does not possess anything throughout the territory, visibly or invisibly, ~~and the supply of whose stores is chaff; and he is not entitled to be advised in~~ sickness or in cure; and his meals even are empty unless he steals, or unless he sells his honor in the same way; his green is empty to him too, as regards disease, and curing of cattle unless a person gives him something for God's sake. His freedom too is empty, and his 'dire'-fine, and his honor-price.¹ so that he has hopes of everyone's lands??
he has no property to support him?
mis ta diles?

A cow-grazier of a green, i.e. a man of small means who does not go beyond the boundary, nor to the enclosure of a king, but who remains in his own dwelling, because he has shunned a combat with a single man when he had^a his arms on him; so it is gentle ^{a Ir. Was} oxen that do not^b labour ~~he herds~~; or, according to others, a 'cow-grazier,' i.e. a man who grazes his cows upon a green on every ^{with.} ^{b Ir. With-} ^{out.} are herded property, between wolves all round him; and this is his wealth. He is not entitled to 'dire'-fine nor to freedom, because it is the deed of a child or a woman he performs.

A 'baitse'-tenant, i.e. a man who is not freed by profession or residence; that man does not belong to^a a company, ~~who~~ has not the ^{a Ir. Is not} deeds of a champion in him. He does not go security, nor is he a ^{with.} since he pledge with a chief or a church, because it is a sunbeam he is called.

An 'oinmit'-person; a man who is matched with a bad wife by whom or from whom he is rendered deranged and unsteady, i.e. 'starting.' That man is not entitled to 'dire'-fine.

A 'midhlach'-person,² i.e. not famed in battle, ('mi-li-aigh,') i.e.

¹ His honor price.—His rights are lost, that is, he has lost his municipal rights.

² A 'midhlach'-person.—The term 'midhlach' occurs in Cormac's Glossary (edited for the Archaeological Society, by Whitley Stokes, 1868), and is translated, 'an effeminate person not fit for war, a coward (p. 119), and 'an imbecile,' (p. 130)

SEQUEL TO CRITH ⁱⁿ GABHLACH. horba na trebad na trebtair do. No mroilach .i. meoñ ellach ⁱⁿ mrim, ar inni ir mellach o deilb ocuf cinnul, cona damna cimeba mrim tar cenò tuarte.

Reimm dno .i. fuirgeoir, no dpuith. Naé per do beir rem-mad fo corp ocuf a enech, ni dlig dñe uair teit ara rict ar béluib rluag ocuf rocharde.

Riarcaine .i. loingrech mrim arimzab a chenel ocuf a fine
caith can ocuf rechte; ocuf bið o riarc do riarc, no o rleib [do rleib]. No riarcaine .i. rathmarze daer do rlaith ocuf 10 eclair. Ni dliginn dñe.

Sinrach brothlaige .i. bruar caé bið do, itir dñir ocuf mroir; no cuma lair cið beoh bpuirde* no do meala. l. brouthles Th. R. 212.
Seachte ara mroithar duine, cruith, ocuf cenel, tñr, ocuf trebad, dñ ocuf mrobur ocuf mnpucuf.

15 Miaolecta ecna tra, it ecrania fpi mialecta^{it} tuarte; ar ir cuma forbad cineclann gnað neclara, o adannad co raimgeolaig.
saidmchelaig = adantaid

Al retab, mo^{muga}ro, forberat fene ocuf fild^{id}, ota ipel co huaral. Imurpnepat mo^{muga}ro, a portach ocuf a noithech; 20 erp^o ocuf pi bunurð caé cinn, ocuf ollam filid, racart ocuf rai, dño; ocuf per mrobad ocuf foélaé.

Seehc ngnað ecna dño, do cuirim .i. porai ocuf raið; anpuð ocuf rpuð do aill, ocuf fuprainid, ocuf fneirneid ocuf fealmac.

25 Rorai dño, tñr hanmanna teetar .i. porai, ocuf ollam, ocuf rai litre^{la flaithe/}. Ollam ma ruiße a tiß mrochuarta ar ipe bir a tiß fpi ruiß mrim. Rorai dno, ni upcompenð ní a cetheora panoair raiðe a dñe. Cethrair ar ^{fichit} .xx. a dam. Uii. mað eipce a bair ma toichneð. ocht scépuill for deich nuingit for deich cumalait.

30 Sai litre; ata tpeide conutab lair conid comdñe fpi pi not possessed of cattle ('midh-ellach') i.e. a man who does not hold stock, nor inheritance in land, who does not plough, for whom ploughing is not performed. Or, a 'midhlach'-person, i.e. he is of middling composition in this case, because that he is middling of face and of race, so that he is the material of a victim to be given on account of a territory.

A clown, now, i.e. a mountebank, or a buffoon. Every man who brings distortion upon his body and his face is not entitled to 'dire'-fine, because he goes out of his own shape before hosts and crowds.

A marsh-man, i.e. this is a robber whom his race and his family shun, a violator of 'cain'-law and of law; and who goes from marsh to marsh, and from mountain to mountain. Or a 'riascaire'-man, i.e. a 'rath'-builder who is enslaved to a chief and a church. He is not entitled to 'dire'-fine.

A ~~crumb-fox~~ ^{crumb-fox}, i.e. he gets the crumbs (or fragments) of all food, cf. Thurn IV 216, III 318. ~~both whether entitled or not~~ ^{crumbs} natural and unnatural; or whatever he ~~crunches~~ ^{crumbs} or eats is ~~his~~ ^{as in different to him}.

There are seven things out of which a person is estimated—form, and race, land, and tillage, profession, and property, and worthiness.

The distinctions (or titles) of wisdom (literary professions), now, are different from the titles of the laity; because it is a 'cunhal' of increase of honor-price that each grade of the church takes, from the lighter of the candles, &c., up to the psalmsinger.

It is by 'seds,' however, the increase of the 'fene'-grades and the poets progress, from low to high. Their proof and their denial, too, correspond: a bishop and a king the origin of all chiefs, and an 'ollamh'-poet, a priest, and a professor however, and a 'mbidbadh'-man, and a 'fochlach'-person.

The seven degrees (or grades) of wisdom as settled are, i.e. a great professor and a professor; a noble stream, and a stream from a cliff, and an illustrator, and an interrogator, and a pupil.

As to a great professor, now, three names he possesses—a great professor and an 'ollamh' (chief doctor); and a professor of written history.^a The 'ollamh' sits in the banquetting house, because it is ^{a Ir. Of the letter.} he that resides in his house with a king on that occasion. A great professor does not fail in any question in the four departments of knowledge; . . . his 'dire'-fine . . . Four and twenty are his company. A seventh part of the 'eric'-fine for his death is paid for denying him food.^b ? excuse himself?

A professor of written history.—There are three things which ^{Ir. Fast-ing.}

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

ruirpech. D:th do i nucht ocur i lár a ³decepol ac foglam uad.
1re per inro dona timoibenaí a díre cío raebratha robith ar neola ina pennat ocur ina dlígeo.

4 I 28. b

Anruth, dño; ar cethartha arberar .i. ar aine a porce^{er}ail;
; ar ilar a cetrada; ar ruidbuire a inirce; ar me^{er} a eoluir;
ar arecar in cae rann, itir filideet, ocur leiginn, ocur comgne;
aet na roigh co cleite nama. Da per .x. a dāmh.

Sai .i. per porcain cethramad ranno ruithe reicibí dib, ut cennraelad: "Sai caém canoine, conro iarumair an maith.
10 Oetar a lín; uir. cumala a díre."

Sruth do aill. 1re a bepparoe, baridó cac mbec nétruim naimit; do róala aille, conoirce gne traga la ter ríne. Inta ramlaíó in per ramailter rir; baridó droc leigiuída porabrairi co nailchib teremna ocur cepparó; ocur ir tualaing 15 a porcetail conoirce gne nairneirín, co ndilgúó in an aer mbecleigino indilghe^{er} traisit i ppeccarcur anrotha.

-sin?
Pupraino[tró] dno, porcuirín a aite i ceill ollomon. Teora let cumal a díre; acur cepparó cach nupcoimdeo uadrom ar róna a meppaigte, ocur ar aine a indliueta.

20 Pprieiridó .i. pp⁵romarc dia aite i ceill a olloman. Cumal a díre ocur cepparó cach nupcoimdeo uadrom do neoch ber androm do.

Pealmac .i. puilmac mic iar leigino a paln. Let cumal a díre.

25 Conro inand inuipreccrat gnaíó ecna ocur eclara ppi gnaíó píle ocur péne; aet ir ecna mathair cacha dona dib, conro ar a bar uile hebat.

incipit miadhlechte filidh C

Inc C, 674 (C2070)

Secht ngnaro píle .i. éce^{do}p, anrru^{er}, clí, cana, dor, mac puiumó rochlocc.

elevate him till he is of equal 'dire'-fine with a king of territories. To be in the bosom and in the midst of his disciples, learning from him. This is the man to whom his 'dire'-fine is not ~~restored~~ should he teach (or speak) silliness, because he is well versed in his penance and in his lawful rights.

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

diminished

A noble stream now; for four reasons he is so called, i.e. for the nobleness of his teaching; for the number of his intellectual qualities; for the eloquence of his language; for the greatness of his knowledge; because he composes in every department, both poetry, and literature and synchronism; but he does not reach to the top (of scholarship) only. Twelve men are his company.

for the adornment in each verse

A professor, i.e. a man who professes a ^{1 of the 4} fourth part of the scientific course, whichever of them it may be, as Cennfaeladh did: "A comely professor of the canon, with his noble, good wealth. Eight are his company; seven cumhals his 'dire'-fine."

A stream from a cliff.—The practice of that stream is, it drowns every little, light, weak thing; it carries off loose rocks, so that they acquire the appearance of the strand by reason of the heat of the weather. The same doth the man who is likened unto it; he drowns bad scholars whom he confounds with rocks of testament (evidence) and intellect; and he is able to modify his instructions to the complexion of simple information, in mercy to the people of little learning (below the average), who ebb in the presence of a noble stream.

An illustrator now: He ~~answers~~ his tutor with the sense of an 'ollamh.' Three half 'cumhals' are his 'dire'-fine; and he gives the sense of every difficulty on account of the clearness of his judgment, and the nobleness of his intellect.

*listens to
(fr. ar. huaisi)*

An interrogator, i.e. he interrogates his tutor with the sense of an 'ollamh.' A 'cumhal' is his 'dire'-fine, and he (the tutor) gives him the sense of everything which is difficult to him.

A pupil, i.e. a 'fuilmae'-pupil, a boy after reading his psalms. Half a 'cumhal' is his 'dire'-fine.

And so it is alike the degrees of wisdom and of the church correspond with the degrees (or grades) of the poets, and the 'feine'; but wisdom is the mother of each profession of them, and it is of her hand they all drink.

These are the seven degrees of the poets, i.e. the 'cees'-poet, the ansruth'-poet, tho 'cli'-poet, the 'cana'-poet, the 'dos'-poet, the macfuirmidh'-poet, and the 'fochloec'-poet.

SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH. Ecey .i. ecrmaéctcey .i. dona bi ceý na hancey do fártó rair; no ní fuil ní buý ceý dó ina dan, conaó eó a annu nemcey, no ecrmaéctcey.

if O'Don 409
 Aut. s.v. ainess

Pil³.i. rialrai .i. rai uat; ar a [ní ir] feal lairín filíó ir reir
 5 no foircetad irín ngnathbérla; cona de ata fealmac, ocur feallrub, ocur fili, ocur filídect. No fili .i. fí ocur lí .i. fí a omna rair, ocur lí a dána.

if Corm. 600

Ollam .i. oll do eim .i. forcam cetora ranna [ocur pobith ir lia bir]; for a ditenrom oluait na gnaó olcena. No ollam .i.
 C. 2070. 10 oll a dām, cethrar ar .xx. Ar atait tri hollamun and .i.
 ollam gairi, rai caó eoluir ina fuiglithe, ruycomarchar ni rrecharic; ni bepar aincey uat i mbrethab aithe ocu renaithe. No, ollam .i. uille in lin bir for a dínrom oluait na gnaó olcena. No, ollam aró imorpo, nairi ni naircar.
 15 Cairíroé? Nm.—Amal ri connaét; amal ar mbeap; Ni hollam nairó cuicéó nairla mic mata móra. No ollam .i.
 oll do eim .i. caó aen bir cinuairi fir na ngraó. Ollam eicri do, forcam cetheora ranna filídecta cin anfir ninnitioh.

ll. 19-20 come here

forcaín .iv. randa filidichtar, na forcanar som im o nuch C2071

Book page 14

as do nascid C 2071

Aruth .i. aróhairíó, ni naircar rair, amal ro gab rí 20 epenn.

Aruth .i. rruith can molta uat, ocur rruith inobair do.

Cli .i. ire a bér na cleithe, ir trén ocur ir díreé, ocur congairb ocur congairbter, diem ocur diemar; atcumung o cleitú co
 lar. Ir amlaio in gnaó iri a teaair na filídecta .i. ir tren 25 a ceptó, ocur ir díreé a mer a cuairt a dāna; congairb a feib diem ber írle, do neoó atcumung a dan o anruth co foóloc.

Door .i. ro cormairi feóa ro hachmúigeó .i. ar tri annain

¹ Without ignorance in them.—The Irish of this paragraph appears to be misplaced in the MS., where it follows the first paragraph explanatory of 'anruth.'

The 'eces'-poet, i.e. not meeting with difficulties, ('ecsmacht-ces'), i.e. one to whom there is not difficulty nor impossibility such as to arrest him; or there is nothing which can be difficult to him in his profession, so that his name is non-difficult ('nemees'), or who meets no difficulty ('ecsmachtces').

A 'file'-poet, i.e. 'fialshai,' knowledge ('fial') ^{a sort of poetry (ai, son. uad)} proceeds ~~from him~~; for that which is 'feal' with the 'file'-poet is knowledge, or instruction in the common language; and it is hence come a pupil ('fealmae'), a philosopher (fealsub), and poet ('fili'), and poetry ('filidecht'). Or 'fili,' i.e. 'fi' and 'li,' i.e. the venom ('fi' of his ~~satire~~, and the lustre ('li') of his art.

'Ollamh'-poet, i.e. much does he protect; i.e. he teaches the four departments of (poetry, &c.) ('filidecht'); and because the number is greater which is wont to be upon his protection than upon that of all the grades besides. Or, 'ollamh,' i.e. great ('oll') his company, ('damh,') four and twenty. For there are three 'ollamhs' in existence, i.e. an 'ollamh' of wisdom, a professor of every kind of knowledge for which he is appealed to; ~~what~~ he is asked for, ~~he refuses not~~; no difficulty is carried away from him unresolved in the judgments of fathers and grandfathers. Or, 'ollamh,' i.e. more numerous is the number that are wont to be upon his protection than the other grades. Or, a high 'ollamh,' he binds, he is not bound. How is that? Answer—Like the King of Connacht, as it is said: "He is not the high 'ollamh' of the province of Ailill, the son of Mata Mor." Or, 'ollamh,' i.e. much does he protect, i.e. every one who is without nobility in the knowledge of the grades. The 'ollamh' in poetry teaches the four departments of poetry without ignorance in them.

'Anruth'-poet, i.e. ~~because~~ he binds, he is not bound ~~in the same way~~ as the King of Ireland. he train

The noble stream, i.e. a stream of pleasing praise issuing from him, and a stream of wealth to him.

The 'cli'-poet, i.e. the nature of the post ('eleith') is, it is strong and straight, and it elevates and is elevated, it protects and is protected; it is powerful from the ridge to the floor. It is the same with this grade in the poetic house, i.e. his art is powerful, and his judgment is straight in the circuit of his profession; he elevates ~~his dignity above~~ those who are below him, ~~because his art embraces all from a noble stream to a 'fochlaoh person.'~~

The 'dos'-poet, i.e. from similitude to a tree he has been

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

sees upon him

questions, he asks them not and belongs to anruth

C 2071 is brand. here

protects

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH

peða popoiǵlenat a ndan. Imtha famlaio iſ a hanmam peða ocur a cormailen po hanmniðeð dor; ar iſ ann iſ dor in crann dia bliadam, ocur it cetheora duille bit fair. Cetheora, ono, dam in duir.

11C 2071. Cum 855

5 Mac fuirmito .i. mac fuirmithep re dan of mac .i. iſ mac dā a dan .i. ní maíð fograíðeðar fon, aet ar mac airbi iſ maith de.

4V 26. 28

Fochloc .i. fo cormailiur fochlocain co noib duillib. Dír no, dorām. No fochlaic .i. foili reca .i. cen fogboirt for a dan. No, cael a dan ar oige. for-airc

for/c

10 Dair, ono, cin oligeo fēgluime aet inoileacht fādeirín.
Fear cearda, imorpo, lan ceirto lauride.
Cainte, fear ara rogar a biad tpeñ . . . ann aipe.

Cefe^{ist}—In forcongariar turaicreic molta no aipe?

Mað iar nolige^{ad} na treibe deoda, ni forcongair aet molað 15 de nama, ocur iſ nem a loǵ. Mað iar nolige^{ad} na treibi domonða imorpo, forcongariar ut Salmon quo modo comprobator argentum in conplatona, et in ^{for}phanoce aurum, sic homo ora laudantir.

Connitithep arim coir comaduif cað duime dein oligchide, itir 20 mac cleirech rceo laech, itir fear ocur mnai; trepñren cach mac cleirig, no caembachall fpi hupclarde uad; cucael codat rodeo do cach mnai; da gaeim echluiric nairi^{la} cach laich ma laim; taball loig do fiteðarb, iar corur a gparoh;
ar iſeo a comadar coir connitidhar arim inoearb doib. nairid bgha

C 2072

25 Ro mīðarphar mōpano fep rāep, midir C co cummib; cumal ceactar a da pul, ar cruth, ocur deirín, cumalail C cumthach; cumal beil ar blairecht ocur labrad; co cumal tengad, tachtar, dina labra C dona labrad leicther; cumal tppona ar bith cluair ocur bolltnuǵaro; da cumal cluair ar éirtech, ocur imcomét; cumal briagset ar named, i.e. it is through (under) the name of a tree they learn their art. In like manner it is from the name and the similitude of a tree a 'dos'-poet has been named; because the time that a tree is a 'dos' is after a year of growth, and it is four leaves that are on it. Four now, are the company of the 'dos'-poet.

The 'mac-fuirmidh'-poet, i.e. a boy who is set to learn an art from his boyhood, i.e. his art is his son, i.e. it is not well he has graduated, but he becomes a good 'mac-airbe'.¹

The 'fochloc'-poet, i.e. he is named in similitude of a sprig of brooklime ('fochlachan') with two leaves. Two persons, therefore, are allowed for him as company; or 'fochloch,' i.e. a hard sub-tree ('fochli seca'), i.e. without increase (or expansion) of his art. Or, his art is slender because of his youth.

A bard, now, is one without lawful learning but his own intellect.

A man of art, now, he is one who has full art.

A satirist is a man who is deprived of his refectations² . . . the name of a satire.

Question.—Is payment for praise, or satire commanded in the laws?

If according to the law of the divine house, there is no command but for the praise of God alone, and heaven is its price. If according to the law of the worldly house, however, it is commanded, ut Salmon quo-modo comprobator argendum in conflatorum, et in furnace aurum, sic homo ora laudantis.

A proper, becoming weapon is estimated for every true, lawful person, both clerics and laity, both man and woman: a three-angled stave to every cleric, or a handsome crooked staff for the purpose of defence, &c.; a slender, smooth distaff for every woman; two spears with the horse switch of a chariot-driver for every layman in his hand; a tablet-stave for poets according to the propriety of their order; because it is their becoming propriety that estimates ~~an~~ ^{an} uncertain weapon for them.

Morann has estimated a free man, for remembrance³; a 'cumhal' for each of his two eyes, for beauty, and seeing, and ornament; a 'cumhal' for the mouth, for taste, and for speaking; a 'cumhal' for choking the tongue by which it is not permitted to speak; a 'cumhal' for the nose because of hearing and smelling; two 'cumhals' for the ear, for hearing and guarding; a 'cumhal' for the neck, for laughing and for voice; two 'cumhals' for the

² His refectations.—The MS. is defective here.

³ For remembrance.—That is as a mnemone.

rio

hand, not has been granted?

are you?

arm order?

fist (or wrist), for suppleness and for strength ; two 'cumhals' for the hand for catching and for working ; two 'cumhals' for the leg, for walking and supporting ; a 'cumhal' for the belly, for grace and swelling. As to this, however, though it was enacted, in the olden they are unrecognised by law at the present time.

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

What is the highest dignity on earth ? The dignity of the church. What is the highest dignity which is in the church ? The dignity of a bishop.

The highest bishop of these is the bishop of Peter's Church, because it is under his subjection the chiefs of Rome are ; and they are not under the subjection of anyone who has not virginity, or repentance, or lawful espousal ; and it is to him that seven 'cumhals' are payable for every degree of the seven degrees (or, orders) that are upon him, if there be 'eric'-fine for him at all ; if not 'eric'-fine, there is to be the death of a person for it (the crime).

Where is this to be found ? It is in the tract which Augustine wrote upon the degrees of the church and of their 'dire'-fines ; and of their non-feedings, and the particular law of the church of Peter, and the emperor of the whole world.

There are three crimes which a person commits, i.e. a crime smaller than himself which he pays with his property, a crime which is equal to himself, he himself is paid for it, as to a crime which is greater than his death, himself, is due for it and with 'eric'-fine from his family (or tribe).

And in Erinn, what is the highest 'dire'-fine therein ?

The 'dire'-fine of a virgin bishop, with his full attributes such as he is entitled to.

dukes as he is bound to observe

What is the penalty* of wounding a virgin bishop ?

* Ir. Debt.

Answer : Three victims to be hanged from every hand that wounded him ; half the debt of wounding is paid for insulting him.

As to every person who sees and who does not protect him by all his strength, by all his deeds,¹ and (that the guilty person escapes,) there are seven 'cumhals' due from each.

*(idly)
standing by as it & accompany the guilt party*

As to shedding his blood ; if it reaches the ground, as blood that requires a tent,² the guilty person is to be hanged for it ; or it is seven 'cumhals' that are to be paid for his sick maintenance and his 'eric'-fine.

If it (the wound) be in his face, the breadth of his face of silver is paid, and of the crown of his head of gold ; and he sues him for ² A tent.—Vide Book of Aicill.

SEQUEL TO muillaiḡ do or; ocuṛ aḡḡaiṛe naínme i rocharde co cenn teopa CRITH mbliadan; o ruidiud anunn, iṛ cumal ino, mena oíḡe.
GABHLACH.

Ma anpot, iṛ leṛ, .uii. cumala inn.

Danbeim ar aenlur, iṛ cethruime .uii. cumala ino.

5 Ma tálitap ní dia fult, reo cacha fuilte ino co fichit fuilte.

a sáughudh
Maṛa ruḡuḡ ar aenlur do gabail a laime, no a étaig, no do tircail a éluic aipe, iṛ leṛ fiach a gona ino. Arberat iṛ leṛ fiach a dígona aṛaile.

itirai thā
(apud ara) Th² §835.
In racapṛ oíḡe, ḡno, iṛ tanḡiṛi erpuic oíḡe. Iṛ cumal itir²atā 10 a noipe do cach roḡail ropechur rruu, ocuṛ do caḡ cata. = cathaig?
Imtha ramlaio cach gṛaio oíḡe co tice ma cleipech noíḡe, mac-conḡaḡ .uii. cumala ina guin, no cinio; aḡt ní cach cinio, aḡt
.uii. cumala ino inoia laimeo na noime no in bróbaio do roḡba in cinio; ocuṛ ma do buḡaio cinuul do, ocuṛ iṛaérlano, leṛ 15 fiach a gona ina díguin, ut rupa dia inur.

cf. I 56 Z.
cathaig?
Earpuc aenreice, ḡno, da trian raíḡer co heppuc noíḡe do caḡ cata, ocuṛ do éaḡtóipe conḡat da .uii. cumal ina guin, ocuṛ a leṛ ina díguin.

Imtha ramlaio racapṛ aenreice; iṛ cumal itir²atā caḡ see 9 above.
20 nae, con da trian .uii. cumala do mac cleipech aenreice.

m/Iṛ a trian ḡno, reḡoi na gṛaio aenreice rruṛ na gṛaio
oíḡe, do caḡ roḡail, itir² derḡbem ocuṛ banbénn/cnocbeim, ocuṛ rapuḡuḡ; ocuṛ imcheimṛ itir² ní ber ar aenlur ocuṛ na ba ar aenlur, amaíl iṛ rubraio a nḡraioib oíḡe.

25 Erpuic aithriḡe, ḡno, da trian raíḡer co heppuc naenreice;
.ix. cumala ocuṛ da bai ina guin; leṛ fiaḡ a gona ina díguin, ocuṛ ina rapuḡaio.

Imtha ramlaio racapṛ aithriḡe; iṛ cumal itir² aḡa ocuṛ erpuic aithriḡe.

every time that he is reproached with the blemish^a in a crowd, to the end of three years ; from that out, it is a 'cumhal' in public for it that is due, unless he forgives him.

If it be unintentional, it is half seven 'cumhals' that is paid ^{a Ir. Blemish.} for it (the wound).

If it be a white sudden blow, it is a fourth part of seven cumhals' that is paid for it.

If any of his hair is pulled off, there is a 'sed due for every hair of it to twenty hairs.

If ~~he be suddenly caught~~, to grasp his hand or his clothes, or to deprive him of his bell, half the fine for wounding him is to be paid for it. Others say that it (the penalty) is half the debt of insult to him.

To insult him deliberately

The virgin priest now is second to the virgin bishop. It is a 'cumhal' that is between their 'dire'-fines in every trespass that is committed against them, and in every case of distinction (separate case). It is so with every grade of virginity until it comes to be the case of a virgin cleric, so that there are seven 'cumhals' due for wounding him, or a victim ; but it is not any victim, but seven 'cumhals' a victim that is paid for it, to buy off the people or the guilty person who committed the crime ; and if he is one of the original race of the district and of a free family, half the fine for wounding him, is paid for insulting him, ut supra diximus.

As to a bishop of one wife, now ; he reaches to two-thirds of the fine to a virgin bishop in every case of distinction, and in every 'dire'-fine, so that it is seven that are due 'cumhals' for wounding him, and the half for insulting him.

It is the same with the priest of one wife ; it is a 'cumhal' also that is for each of them, so that it is two thirds of seven 'cumhals' that are paid for the cleric of one wife.

It is to the extent of a third now, the grades of one wife reach to the grades of virginity, in every trespass, whether^b a red blow and a lump blow, and violation ; and graduating between the thing that is sudden, and that is not sudden, as was said in the case of the virgin grades.

As to a penitent bishop now ; to the extent of two thirds he reaches to a bishop of one wife : nine 'cumhals' and two cows are the penalty for wounding him ; half the fine for wounding him is paid for insulting him, and for violating his protection.

It is the same with a penitent priest ; it is a 'cumhal' that is between him and the penitent bishop.

^b Ir. Between.

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

Imta ramlaio cach gnao arar dia paile co dia, ^[a] i^r cumal 1 i^r a^ta; conoat teopa cumala a nguim mic cleirig aithrige, ocur a le^t ina di^guin. ^{2c} Ec comoirne dno, ocur mac cleirig bitⁱ
i^r tuat ocur eclair, cin guin cin gait; ocur i^r da trian 5 fegda na gnao aithrige f^rur na gnao aenreitche do cach cata ocur do cac di^gne i^r telcoo pola ocur banbem ocur deargb^eim, amail i^r rubnao.

ad-cosna^h?

cf V 80.8

Actait tri haithlaich i neclair .i. a^thlaech ar a tabair anm-cara a teirt, ocur racarbuic bir a f^rin a^entaio eclara, cin comur 10 coire na laime. I^r o gnao oige do penaru. I^r comoirne f^ri = rim 3 mac cleirech noige; conoat .iii. cumala ina guin, ocur i^r comoirne do cach cata olchena, ocur telcoo pola ocur banbem.

Athlaech ara tabair a teirt nao nargna racarbuic, cad a^t = cedacht da trian roraig corin athlaech tuirech. Athlaech aile, do 15 beir crith f^ria tola, ocur do taet co cleirchiu miu, na tabair anmcara a teirt. Da trian raigear cur in athlaech meonach.

Na ba machtao la nech comoirne don[a] athlaechuib f^rar = fr ad?
noige, ma^t be^t dia f^rirc la dia, ocur di met a faethair, ma^t 20 comlina a pepta, no ma^t lia, amail do boi petar ocur pol f^ri heoin, ocur amail po boi antan oc^rur ^mhar^tan; Ut dicir f^reriptura, "ubi habundabit dilectum, super habundabit g^ratia."

Ocht cumala in di^gni raigear erpac oige, iii. cumala di racar^t oige. iii. cumala diⁿ ^{rad} tanuiriu. Imta ramlaio 25 cae gnao arar dia paile co dia; i^r cu^mal i^r cac nae; conat cumal i noige hreoi^t mic cleirig oige.

cf Reeves, Cuddus, p. 93

Da trian raigear erpac aenreitche co herpac noige; conoat
.ii. cumala ocur da bai i noige a reoit erpuic aenreitci. I^r da trian raigear maile.

It is the same with every grade that grows above another, ^{SEQUEL TO CRITH GABHLACH.} unto the end, it is a 'cumhal' that is between them; so that it is three 'cumhals' that are paid for wounding a penitent cleric (or clerical student), and half thereof for insulting him. He is of the same 'dire'-fine now with the clerics (or clerical students) who are between the laity and the church, not being guilty of wounding or theft; and it is to the extent of two thirds the penitent grades reach unto the grades of one wife, in every case of distinction, and in every 'dire'-fine between shedding of blood and a white blow and a red blow, as has been said.

There are three kinds of lay recluses in a church, i.e. a lay recluse upon whom a soul-friend pronounces his character of approval, gives him?? and who goes to the sacrament, who is in the true unity of a church, without power of foot or hand. It is as a grade of virginity he is paid finer. He is of equal 'dire'-fine with a virgin clerical student; so that there are seven cumhals for wounding him, and he is of equal 'dire'-fine with him in every dignity besides, and shedding of blood, and white blow.

A lay recluse upon whom he pronounces his character, who does not ^{yet} go to the sacrament, it is ~~but~~ two thirds he reaches to the first lay recluse. Another lay recluse is he who puts bounds to his passions, and who goes to the clergy at this day, upon whom a soul-friend does not pronounce his character (or recommendation). To the extent of two thirds he reaches unto the middle lay recluse.

A person should not wonder that there should be an equal 'dire'-fine for the lay recluses who are without virginity, if they be beloved of God, and their works great, if their miracles are as numerous, or if they are more numerous, in the same way that Peter and Paul were to John, and in the same way Anthony and Martin were; ut dixit Scriptura, "ubi habundavit dilectum ^{v/} super habundavit gratia." delictum

Eight 'cumhals' are paid as the 'dire'-fine of a virgin bishop, seven 'cumhals' to a priest, six 'cumhals' to the grade second to him. It is the same with every grade which grows above another to the last; it is a 'cumhal' that is between every two of them; so that it is a 'cumhal' that is paid as the 'dire'-fine for the 'sed' of a virgin clerical student.

To two thirds the bishop of one wife reaches unto a virgin bishop; so that two 'cumhals' and two cows are paid as the 'dire'-fine for the 'sed' of a bishop of one wife. It is to two thirds the rest advance.

SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

In a cumal rímthe, conda ceitri .l. at aóche do pennuit di mac cleinec aenreicce a nóire a reoit.

Imtha ramlaio eppuc aithrige; it dá trian ^s ~~raiser~~ co heppuc aenreicce do díre a reoit; condat teora cumala ocur ^{meta} ~~ma~~ bai a 5 nóiri reoit efbuic aithrige. It dá trian do each ^{gradh} ~~gru~~ arail co rice deaó. Ina cumal rímthe ^h ~~h~~, condat tri .l. at aóche do mac cleinec aithrige i nóire a reoit.

ai/ ¹⁰ Aélacé ara tabair anmcara ocur racair teirt comóire a reoit fhu mac cleinec noizi .i. cumal doib. Aélacé ^{ae} ~~ae~~ do no, comóire a reoit fhu mac cleinec noizi; .l. at aóche doib. ^{in choica} ~~in~~ ^{ait} Aélacé fle ono, comóire a reoit fhu mac cleinec naithrige, tri caecair aóche doib.

It is in 'cumhals' they are computed, so that it is four times fifty nights of penance that are due from a clerical student of one wife as 'dire'-fine for^a his sed. SEQUEL TO
CRITH
GABHLACH.

It is the same with the repentant bishop; it is to the extent of ^{aIr. In lieu of.} two thirds he reaches to a bishop of one wife as to 'dire'-fine for his 'sed'; so that it is three 'cumhals' and three cows that are paid as the 'dire'-fine of a repentant bishop. It is two thirds to each with the other till it comes to the last. It is in 'cumhals' they are computed, so that there are three times fifty nights of penance due by the repentant clerical student as the 'dire'-fine for his 'sed.'

As to a lay recluse of whom a soul-friend and a priest gave a character; his 'sed' is of equal 'dire'-fine with that of the virgin clerical student, i.e. a 'cumhal' for them. There is another lay recluse now; the 'dire'-fine for his 'sed' is equal to that of a virgin clerical student: four times fifty nights are due to them. There is another lay recluse now; the 'dire'-fine of his 'sed' is equal to that of a repentant clerical student; three times fifty nights are due for them.

SUCCESSION.

- ^a A somewhat late compilation on the subj. of the rt. of protection. It embodies many quotations fr. older writings", Mac N. Status p. 191.

Wieder ein Stück aus der grossen Zitatenammlung in Eg. 88 fol. ~~16~~

C 537 has a subin with this heading

11C 1854

SUC-
CESSION.

Sinnreap la pine, peabta la plauth, ecna la heclair.

110^W 121

0^W 122

11C 1876

* H. 3, 18, p. 18^m = ZCP 12, 365. 19.

cf III 78-20, ZCP 15, 317.

cf V 318. 10

immotto

Ocur, map awei^r "ar 1^r da^rgaltra^c be^ra b^ru^rga^rb^r pin pen-bretha, ara cae bo^rb^r ecna 1 no^rdaib^r eclaire ara cae a^rtech, pla^rt^r,^x ara cae o^ro^r pin^rni^rni^r;" .1. eir^rgi no ceimni^rga^r in ti 1^r o^r 5^rnoim in ti 1^r pine ar in pi^rgi, no ar an a^ro^raine, no 1^r in plauth^r ngeir^rpine. Map awei^r; "Fo^rchena aor la peime; ar in da aire do com^renel ber cut^ruma peib ocur to^rcur, ocur in ti ber pine 1^re do peo." Ocur; "o^rig^rio^r rean ro^rgaire, ocur o^rig^rio^r pin^rreap raor to^rga." Ocur; "do peo ae a^reaib, ocur do peo 10^r lia^rt (no lia^r) labra," .1. na pi^rgi map^r comae^r, comait^r iat, 1^r erann^ro^ror atur^ria um an pi^rgi; ocur ma pine nea^r pe^ra a ceile oib 1^r a o^rul inn. Ocur^x ta^rta^r lium da^rir lo^rg pin^rni^rni^r, tur^r na^ro^rbrina, tur na^rilabra, to^rgo do pannaib, do^r p^rath^raib^r do bua^r, do bi^rt tuir^rib, do tla^ret, do talmain. 1^r de at^ra, pannaib o^ro^r, 15^r ocur do^rgo^ra pin^rreap^x Ocur; ni cuir^rther cuair^r for gablaib pine mana tabra dia do neoch oib in trun^rna^ro^r; a^ret^ria^r peba^r do goathar ocur a do^rga^ro^r .1. deir^re ar na cuir^rther in cuair^r; ma la haon gabail no mana be do na gablaib damna aba bar fer^rni, ci^ro coitcenn oib. Deir^rgi o^rno, ar^r cur^rtar .1.
20^rcoitcennar ocur comat^rbu^r .1. ceall ia^r n^rgrian, ocur pine epluma ma le^rt; 1^r ia^r peib do gablaib imat^rbia^r .1. 1^r ia^r pe na gabla fir bir pin don gabail eile; ar 1^r ia^r na^rillu^ro do tia^rga^r ma com^rni, ocur 1^r ia^r peba^r 1^r na gabla pa^ro^rer^rni, ocur 1^r ia^r peaba^r in g^ria^ro imo^rro,

1 The following remark by the Scribe is prefixed to this short tract:—

"Dar in lebar ro ma^ro pe^roaim a naim dia be^rat in pin^rreap noim in ro^rar ann ga^re g^rne map a wei^ro na o^rig^rio^r ro pin. Tair^rni^r pin do o^ren tre^remure da no^rit^rib tre^r a ceile.

22. SUCCESSION.

"The senior with the family, dignity with the chief, wisdom with the church."

SUC-
CESSION

And, as it says: "For well fostered was vigorous life in the old judgments, for ignorance was set aside for wisdom in the orders of the church, a boor was set aside for a chief, the junior was set aside for the senior," i.e. the person who is junior shall rise or walk out of the kingship, or the abbacy, or the 'geilfine'-chieftainship before the person who is senior. As it says: "Age is rewarded by the Feini," for where there are two chiefs of the same family who are of equal dignity and property, the senior shall take precedence. And again: "The old man is entitled to good maintenance, and the senior is entitled to ^{free choice} noble election." And; "science takes precedence of age, and greyneess takes precedence in speaking," that is, if the kings be equally old and good, lots are to be cast between them respecting the kingship; but if one of them is older than the other, he shall go into it. And; "I have for age the price of the senior, ^{precedence} ^{beginning of speech, beginning} of utterance, choice of divisions, of stock, of kine, of 'bith'-tuise, of raiment, of land." From this is derived the maxim, "The junior ^{shares}, and the senior is elected." And; "there is no enquiry ^{by lot} among the branches of the family if God has endowed one of them in particular; but he is rejected or chosen according to his goodness, i.e. there are two things for which the enquiry is not made by lot; if it belongs to one branch, or if there be not of the different branches to whom it is in common a better 'materies' of an abbot. There are two reasons also for which the search is made, i.e. commonness and equal 'materies' i.e. a 'cill'-church to which the tribe of the land^a and the tribe of the patron saint succeed equally, they shall succeed in turns about, i.e. it is after the turn of the true branch the other branch shall have its turn; for it is according to desert they come into power, and it is according to the goodness of the branch itself,

J. CCF, H72 beridh
summaer saertoga 7th
Car. p 317.

CCF p 70

divides

^a Ir. After the land.

ultimately

By this book, if I can, in the name of God, I will bring the senior before the junior in every case, as these laws down here state. Beyond this I will make an intermixture of their laws altogether."

chosen

SUC-
CESSION.

don gabail berí e in riúgi ipe téro innu .i. in tí iſ fearr iſin gabail rin. Ocur; cenn caich iar n-dearab a fine, .i. iarium ſurab do réir na fine ber an caé iſ cenn.

11 II 278. 19-25
(not separate in Ms.!)
Sognimach

Deſa rruithe; beſa huairli; beſa tpebairi; beſa ſaiche; beſa ecna; beſa rochraiti co rior; beſa tpeiri rru himpoicheo; beſa ſoruſa rru hurnao romaine, ocur domaine. Ocur, imoiti ſach corp a memra, ma pocorp, po ſnimairb, roberac, ſlan, ſopoltae, ſocumar. Corp ca cruch a fine. 11: bí naé corp cen cenn.
= caich

10 Deſa rruithe .i. a naoir no a cenel. Deſa huairli .i. a nſrao. Deſa tpebairi .i. im ar ocur im buan. Deſa ſaiche .i. a necna no a naene. Deſa ecna .i. a leiſenn. Deſa rochraiti co rior .i. ber deſ áairtois go luét riora .i. caſa muinntir tar cruch a gabail lair. Deſa tpeiri rru himpoicheo .i. rru eimpuaitir do chaé oib. Deſa 15 ſoruſa rru hurnao romaine .i. oibaro. Ocur domaine .i. eina. Ocur imoiti ſach corp a memra .i. iſ eimioitna ſaé cenn a moſ ſoirneé. Ma pocorp .i. ma deſ éenel é ſin ſú ſoirgeall, ſin ſuratonair. Po ſnimairb .i. ſin ſuin ſin ſopoltae. Soberaé .i. ſin ſait ſin bſait. Slan .i. ſin einta. Sopoltae .i. um om ocur 20 im aithne ocur im airleca. Socumar .i. im echaib im rruanairb. Corp ca cruch a fine .i. iſeó iſ corp don caich iſ cenn a fine. 11: bí naé corp cen cenn .i. oib fein ſorua do réir oisio.

solupaid O'B 1007

Ocur mar adeir; finechur ſaé ſolebaé, ní ſorbhſurtar naé 4 C 1592 inſolera, tren ſaé ſaot; maíſ ſaé ben ſennmar do na bí ſoruth; 25 maíſ ſaé mac ber ſor dia aithair; maíſ ſaé mac ber ſor dia eclair; ní hinaibſurtar uaithe cia doſ necma ſorſ cornam; ar ní tuíſmenar cuir neime, ar innſamairter rru beſa capraio * C 875 naé tuíſmeno (.i. dia tarua do lam do, noé in capraio * *); naé 30 tuíſmen do nuíſmenar iſ tuarlucaó do nuairluicter uaó .i. naé innſairſio innſairſear neé cuir, iſ rra rra rra uaó é. Imta ſam- laíſ in tinnolizteé corſar riúgi no aboaine, iſ po rraſe uaó e. Ocur; ara ſeſer teéta riúſ ba romaineac (romaineac .i. roaſal- 4a lam ſin moſoatara. X Ba po raétmar .i. ſurab moſ a raé do ceirib. Ba po maot i macairb de .i. rru macairb eclair.

¹ That thou mayest know.—This seems part of the 'teagairſ ſuóſa,' or "Instruction of a King" ascribed to Cormac Mac Airt, King of Ireland, A.D. 250. It is somewhat in the manner of the first part of "The Book of Aicill." Vide Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 3, pp. 85, 107, &c.

11 C 1592

nach nundis

= manach

4 O'B 1006

11 O'Ban. 1511,

O'B 508, C 875

x Tec. Corm. I. 5

and it is according to the goodness of the grade also, and the most worthy person of the branch shall go into it, i.e. the best person of that branch. And "the head of all according to the 'dera' of the tribe," i.e. that every one who is a head should be afterwards according to the family.

Who is the noblest ; who is the highest ; who is the wealthiest ; the shrewdest ; the wisest ; who is popular as to compurgation ; who is most powerful to sue ; the most firm to sue for profits and losses. And ; every body defends its members, if a goodly body, well-deeded, well-moralled, affluent, capable. The body of each is his tribe. There is no body without a head.

Who is the noblest, i.e. in age or in family. Who is the highest, i.e. in grade. Who is the wealthiest, i.e. in ploughing and reaping. The shrewdest, i.e. in wisdom or in mind. The wisest, i.e. in learning. Who is popular as to compurgation, i.e. who has good friends with compurgators, i.e. good friends outside the territory adhering to him. Who is most powerful to sue, i.e. to prosecute for each of them. The most firm to sue for profits, i.e. of the 'dibadh'-property. And losses, i.e. liabilities. And, every body defends its members, i.e. every head quickly defends its relieving servitors. If a goodly body, i.e. if it be of a goodly race, without false decision, without false witness. Well-deeded, i.e. without wounding, without burning. Well-moralled, i.e. without thieving, without robbery. Sound, i.e. without crime. Affluent, i.e. as to lending and giving in charge and on pledge, or for interest. Capable, i.e. as to horses and bridles. The body of each is his tribe, i.e. the body of each person who is head is his tribe. There is no body without a head, i.e. of themselves (the tribe), over them according to law.

And as it says : "Every bedfellow is a tribesman ; nothing unlawful is a loss ; every wise man is mighty ; good is every chaste woman who is not lecherous ; good is every son who is obedient to his father ; good is every monk who is obedient to his church ; he shall not be expelled therefrom, though it should be contested with him ; for the contracts against the 'nemhedh'-person are not binding, for every binding is likened unto the manner of the chariot (i.e. if thou puttest thy hand to the wheel of the chariot it escapes thee) every closing up that is made is an escape from him ; i.e. every approach one makes towards it, the farther and the farther it is from him. And thus also is the unlawful person who contests a chieftainship or an abbacy, the nearer he comes to the law, the farther is it from him." And, "That thou mayest know,¹ the right qualifications of a king who is wealthy and affluent," i.e. affability without haughtiness. "Let him give much stock," i.e. let his stock to his tenants be great. "Let him be kind to the sons of God," i.e. to the sons of the church.

SUC-
CESSION.

Ocur; a ua cuinn, a coruaise, ol coirpui, cia ar ngebtar plaith for tuaithe? Nín—Cl feib cpocta ocur cenoi, ocur ceille ocur earingha, ocur orðain ocur uirabha; a maist ocur a ngair, ocur a nirt, ocur a rochraio ocur imghona gabthar.

5 Ocur; anmeaé caé moétair, .i. ir fir lium meremnu platainnara don tí do ní cach domožuž.

280
|| II 250. 29 = 20p 14. 370

= imuscumbaget
Ocur; umur cumdaist fine, .i. deaib ocur deaé ocur do gaé uile tabairtur.

V 52. 18

Ocur; bairr plaith uar cach, ocur tairech catcha fine ar doneétair feib ocur berena .i. na tri connairimib.

18-316-4 V 438. 25

Ocur; ba fir gnae no aibainn gan guin inoetbiru, ocur gan gair itir. No, ir dó ir coir tuirigeaé na fine, don tí ir ferir V 440. 10 toétur fir hupnaó mbiaata.

for

|| C 874
0'A 1006

Ocur ^{for} mar adeir, forga gaé fine a forguise a fallrtaó .i.
iré ir ferir ir fir togaio don fine in tí forcuchar uatha in tiamao innoisio rcuchar eucu, no rcuér fal doénaite tib.

Ocur adeir; cenn ^{for} trom cach main, .i. ir trom leir a cenn in tí gabar maime in raata.

Ocur; ailio zach rath a romaine.

C 732 St. p. 14
20p xvii (2) 410

20 Ocur mar adeir; ní piac for aic aor; ní haor conpožlatar finntiu; ní haor nennra nemtera. C 537

= iaoglus

Ocur; dopeo os iarengair ^{iat} .i. roiliri.

Ocur; rruithem ^{iu} feib aor.

f IV 386. 20

Ocur; ní tí rinnrean rua norar, muna foreraatar.

25 Ocur; na forpéo la raintt rluinti on ^a plaitear .i. cemaó ranntaé lair.

f IV 272. 12
7 N.H.

Ocur; do raii erib combputh omna oéoch forraiti.

Ocur; aogaiter na ^{Seagair J} reagar ^{for} naó aiccither corarar (coregar) co fuarar naíom ponaim for naíom. cf. B. Air. 30.

|| C 2211

adquidter na seghar, seaga [r] nael aic [d] icker B. Air. 33 seagair a nad aic [d] ither. 24

And ; "O grandson of Conn O'Cormac, said Coirpre, for what is a prince selected over a country ? Answer—From the goodness of his form and race, and sense and learning, and dignity, and utterance ; he is selected for his goodness, and for his wisdom, and strength, and forces, and valour in fighting."

SUC-
CESSION.

And ; every powerful man,¹ is to be estimated, i.e. I deem it right that chieftainship should be ceded to the person who is able to master all.

immoderate ?

And ; "~~He sustains the tribe,~~" i.e. with horses, and raiment, and every kind of gifts.

And ; "The chief overtops all," and, "he is the chief of every tribe who is ^{sustains it} constituted by his dignity and customary law," i.e. the having the three ^{realities} ~~immoveable~~ things. cf. CCF p. 69. 70. V 52. 17 etc.

And ; "his good knowledge ('ba rir') pleasant or delightful ('gnae') who has not committed any unnecessary killing nor any theft at all." Or, the person to whom the chieftainship of the tribe is due by right is he who has best property to ~~bestow~~ feed. sustain refreshment

And, where it says ; "The choice of each tribe who removes from ~~them the amount of their illegality,~~" i.e. he is the best man to be chosen by the tribe, who removes from them the great amount of illegality which came upon them, or who removes the barrier of oppression from them.

And, it says : "~~a~~ heavy each property," i.e. he deems his head heavy who receives the wealth of the stock. heavy-headed is ?

And ; "every stock deserves profit in return."

And, as it says : "~~It is not the tooth of old age that merits it ;~~ ^{Teeth are not the worth of old age} it is not age that shares the tribe-lands ; it is not the age of nettles that gives them venom."

St p. 14 CCF p. 73

And : "Youth takes precedence of dotage," i.e. when the old man loses the light of reason.

And : "Qualification is nobler than age."

And : "The senior does not go before the junior, unless he is wealthier."

And : "Let him not go, through covetousness of the name, into the chieftainship," i.e. though he should covet it.

And : "Quickly is he set aside who was elected by the pressure of the fear of shouting hosts."

And : "it is requested that his claim be not confirmed until he is sued, pursued, and prosecuted. Let the contract of an indigent surety be made firm."

¹ Powerful man. In H. 3, 18, p. 389 a, 'moctaro' is explained 'rep ir oec pon fine, the best man of the tribe (or family).'

(cf. V 54.1)

security is found ('created') & there is not enforcement ; there is enforcement & security is not found (cf. V 366.1)

* C 2459: doba flatha filltib heora selba iniazar digbail .i. dibathar a flathemoras uine o follaiht a forann amuich re re twir gin fuaidre

378

Succession.

SUC-
CESSION.

Et melior est puer sapiens quam senex stultus, .i. if ferr in toz eennaid na in ren borb a gnecaid

Ocur; Ciothe doglaib boairne deema ima let, cio rime nae ae oib araise, in gnao ber rruithe (.i. im tocur), ire dopeo.

|| C 448 (H)

(4.V 490.11)

^{lanair H} 5 Ocur; 11i beir ech lan enecclann tar ailechib in domann. Sic ^{-e H} flath gin tocur.

Ocur; ar if a loctair coirib inlongathar eathar; ric flath. ^{in/}

Ocur; claoen cae let aru.

Ocur; lengae gae nellae.

¹⁰ Ocur; do ba sola flath; fillter tri felba; inreagar digbat .i.
oibathar ae uair in fir o airnetar fir oibad a flathannar fir.

fidhaisi can ole O.V. 1958

cach iarnus triar C 2459

|| C 2459*

|| C 2459f.

O.V. 1958

Ocur; fithnair gae nolc iarnuobi triur.

Ocur; tulae digearnair i tarraatar triar. (IV 384.4; I 76.8)

Ocur; ar beirar iubar a comuoden; tri comarbar cenagar comuoden C 2460

cenagar C 2460

¹⁵ Ocur; domberar mer maine .i. tabair meramnuo do hoz for gae nduine ara main.

Ocur; do baide mair maca mincorthar meragha po ler-gair lana. Sic ife fir huaral.

el/

Ocur; ni firde oibad dal don aon mer.

²⁰ Ocur; nif necnairc moza mroiter oire .i. ni meramnuagann an bretem enecclann a flathannara do neoc a necnair a tocura.

maid nial?

Ocur; conroglatar oire iur min, ocur nin, ocur mainbizi, iur gnao, ocur gnao, ocur oruan, ocur aru (.i. in ru), iur maoz, ocur mear, ocur meirnece, ar nif minann crann conreteo

²⁶ faoirne .i. amail nae man can reatar oire i mbeim na crann iur airda feda ocur aada feda; ric flath gin tocur.

¹ Disease of evils. Unless his father and grandfather were good men his son is a 'fithisi uile' (the disease of evil) afterwards, H. 4, 22 (C. 2027).

² Hill of chieftainship. If his father and his grandfather were chiefs, and that he is a chief himself, he is "a hill of chieftainship" afterwards.

And ; "Melior est puer sapiens quam senex stultus," i.e. better is the wise youth than the old ignorant of wisdom. British & SUCCESSION.

And ; "Whatever number of the divisions of the 'bo-aires' happens to be contending for headship though one of them be older than the others, the grade that is most wealthy, i.e. in point of wealth, it is it that takes precedence."

And ; "A horse does not bear ~~his~~ burden over dreaded rocks. Thus the chief without wealth." a full (Translating H!)

And ; "For it is from proper parties the vessel is manned ;" so the chief.

And ; "Every thing uneven is biased."

And ; "Every wily person is unsteady."

And ; "The qualification of a chief are taken away ; three possessions turned off. The 'dibadh' is sought, i.e. the noble quality of the man is taken away, when it is ascertained that his chieftainship is truly separated from him." are devolved ?

And ; "He is the disease of evils¹ after three persons." endure is without evil (?)

And ; "He is a hill a chieftainship² in the third person."

And ; "For it gives prescription of acknowledgment ;³ three heirs have succeeded one another."

And ; "He is estimated according to his wealth," i.e. there is a perfect estimation made of every one by his wealth.

And ; "The sea overwhelmed the smooth bordered plain of 'Mesgaghra' under its full watery plains." Thus it is with a noble, he overwhelms all beneath him.

And ; "A meeting does not estimate the same 'dibadh' for every one."

And ; "It is not in the absence of property 'dire'-fine is estimated," i.e. the Brehon does not estimate the honor-price of his lordship for a person in the absence of his property.

And ; "The 'dire'-fine is distributed according to dignity, extent, and wealth, according to grade, and grade and order, and elevation (i.e. the king), according to foolishness, and lunacy, and whoredom, for "the trees which attain to nobleness are not all the same," i.e. as 'dire'-fine does not equally run for the cutting of the trees as regards the noble trees and the common trees ; so a chief without property.

³ Prescription of acknowledgment. It forms a period of prescription if the lordship has continued in the same family for three generations or successions.

SUC-
CESSION.

Ocur; feabta la flait̃ .i. ma tait̃ .u. ðaor boðaiḡ no .x. faor-boðaiḡ ðimaricra aḡ in tí ír oḡ, ír a ðul ír in flait̃euf po ceðóir.

cf. IV 52.9.21.
B. Arr. 3.

cainmill

Ocur; forat̃ n1 acair̃ ac̃t beo-cainneall a flait̃euf .i. noða nacair̃thar ðo teét̃ ír in flait̃euf po ceðóir, ac̃t an tí ðana 5 tait̃nemach é amail ~~seo~~ mbi .i. mac flait̃a, ocur ua aroile.

Ocur; ðo batar̃ ae uair̃ .i. mana flait̃ a athair̃ ocur a fenathair̃, cró comcenel a buna, ðibaró a flait̃ air̃e.

Ocur; ina pluint̃er flait̃ fuit̃ ðibaró .i. fpi faoḡal triair̃.

= athaig[✓]

Ocur; flait̃h athair̃ .i. aithẽ cineoil̃ na bi flait̃ athar̃ na
10 fenaathar̃. Ocur n1r or̃ða ðligeð ðo rin ac̃ ðerḡ car̃na ocur raill ḡin triaille, aḡuf ar̃bur̃ cruaró bró, ocur ði láa.

Ocur; f1r nanfir̃ .i. in tí ír anfir̃ in toét̃ur̃.

Ocur; n1 bi rí rí ḡin foḡa .i. ðo ceit̃ib ocur buaib̃.

cf LL 147^b 6. ^{or sim-} [✓] eile??
cana 7

Ocur; n1 rí tuath̃ oḡ na biat̃ ḡeill̃ .i. ceð manéame .i. a ðama 15 cana imcings ðo crich̃ .i. ee ceimnighuf̃ tar̃ an crich̃ ðo ðenam cair̃de; noð ðligeð boim co tiñe caé or̃ða tar̃ a cuinnḡell̃^u on cenn combi ceðar̃b, o bega co mior̃a. .xxx. triaḡeð a teé; tri riēt̃^e bo ina tiḡ; tri triaḡeð .xx. a ir̃cha. Ir̃é fer̃ iññiñ .i.
ri, ðligeḡ enec̃lann ocur ðipe ocur triebar̃i ocur loḡ-eneé, ocur 20 ðipe a triom ḡreḡa, ocur a ðuinñ.

Ocur; n1 ríḡ tuath̃ oḡ na biat̃ tri rí tuath̃i .i. noða rí tuath̃ ír raici r̃eir̃ muna tuḡa fe ucca toḡaróaéta ceit̃rine ðo tri rí tuath̃i.

cf II 30.23
gl. on tincor

Tri rí tuath̃i aḡ rí tuat̃; cuic rí tuat̃e (aḡ) aḡ rí cuicró;
25 cuic rí cuicró aḡ rí er̃enn, ar̃ a mbeð cir̃ ocur ðligeð for̃ar̃b, ocur tinéor̃ (iní teneacar̃tar̃ po tin po tar̃oð ðó; brec̃ána ocur cuilce.)

¹ 'Donn' is explained lordship or theft in C 2801; the chief was entitled to a certain

And ; "Qualification with the chief," i.e. if the person who is the most worthy of his family has five 'saor'-cottiers or ten 'daor'-cottiers of excess (over and above the rest), he is to enter into the chieftainship at once.

SUC-
CESSION

And ; "For none but a living candle seeks the chieftainship," i.e. it is sought by none to enter into the chieftainship at first, but the person for whom it shines like a candle, i.e. the son of a chief, and the grandson of another.

And ; "They were once noble," i.e. unless his father and grandfather were chiefs, though he may be of the same race as to his origin, his chieftainship is lost to him.

And ; "In which it is stated that a chieftainship is lost," i.e. during the ages of three persons.

And ; "A plebeian chief," i.e. one of plebeian race, whose father or grandfather was not a chief. And the law orders him but red fleshmeat and fat without being salted, and dried corn as food, and two days

And ; "Fir nanfir," i.e. the person who is not a fit witness as to property.

And ; "A king without property is no king," i.e. as to tenants and kine.

And ; "He is not a king of territories who has not hostages," unless three kings have given him hostages, i.e. one hundred 'manchaine,' i.e. his 'cain'-party, when going outside the territory, i.e. when he goes out of the territory to make 'cairde'-regulations; he is entitled to a cow and a salt pig from every townland for making a treaty for them, until he has one hundred both large and small. Thirty feet is the length of his house; he has sixty cows in his house; twenty-three feet is the length of his kitchen. This is the man, i.e. the king who is entitled to honor-price, and 'dire'-fine, and surety, and honor-price, and to 'dire'-fine for his heavy work and for his 'domn.'

give insults / theft

And, "He is not a king of territories who has not three kings of territories under him," i.e. he is not to be called a king of territories unless he has given choice selection of tenancy to three kings of territories.

Three kings of a territory are under* a king of territories ; five * Ir. With. kings of territories under* the king of a province ; five kings of a province under* the King of Erin, from whom he has tribute, and law, and furniture, besides i.e. plaids and quilts.

fine for any injury done to any rich article of furniture belonging to him, or for stealing of his property.

SUC-CESSION= rige
cf. I 48.30

supra

362346.20

Ar ingna lium rin, ocur ro ða rað; aipe forðill fpiraise ri no abðame; ðin ðo raib aigi acht arin no éðac ir enecclann ri no aipeð forðill dó. Ocur for, aipe arð arðnemirð cona tuað terairð .i. ði ðni a loð baið arð ðonað leiðann aninnraic do ecðrannairð.

Ocur; ni ðlegar muca la ðlaith.

Ocur; ðligið raill éean; ocur, corub ðlaith aithið ðaipear ðliged don neð leið baill riðacð ðaðbaill a ðualður cpiuð eile ach a ðualður ceile; ocur o na ceilið ata raill don ðlaith; ocur, ceilið torinaiðear do ðraðairð ðlaða; ocur reoit do ðac ðlaith;
 ocur for nað ðoligann na riði ro ní a loð a toðar .i. a cpiuð.

= I 358.1f

Alat reitð ðlaða la fime na ðlegait teitð fpaor ðiall na aicillne 7 pl.

Ocur; cpiuðar paor reitð .i. cpiuðar na forðir ðo toður ir in peronn no ir in ðlaðannar.

Ocur; fpiuðirer t[igirnar] do ced cor, ric mac ðlaða.

Ocur; ar ir anbað ðac aon ar tuine tarðiaðtair .i. ar ir anbað do ðac aon tarðiaðter ina tuinirð ðo innoligteð; ric ðlaith ðin toður.

Ocur; maine maine fira paðbaiter .i. do ceilið iar fira.

Ocur; manab a reota paora reirnaigter .i. uaða do ceilið.

// Iria IX 48 § 27

Ocur; Mac in abaird ir in cill ðrin,

Iní cunne for ciall,

Mac in tpebði ir in tuait,

Mac in ri do rinaird na nðiall.

Al mo naire nuallðairð .o. b. ðiamba bpeðam, ni bepa ðipe do neoch ro na bi bunaður bið. Ði col mor ma conceitð aipillten riac for poða ðia fpiuðirar la fime.

Pað fine fira nað nraða; arin na ðia poðla fpiuðir firo cam cin meca meir ina ðor ðecmaic .i. ir ðecmaic meir do beit ar ðor mana fuil fpiuðir aigi.

// O'K. 12.17f.

Cerc—Carde an tanrpuðh? .Min.—Anrpuð aðair ocur renath-

I wonder at this, and that it, this is said : "The 'aire-forgill'-chief deserves a chieftainship or an abbacy ; even though he had but his arms or his raiment he shall have the honor-price of a king or of an 'aire-forgill'-chief. And, also, the 'aire-ard'-chief saves the high 'nemhidh'-person with his territory, i.e. the price of his death shelters his king, and prevents them from being plundered by externs.

And : "It is not lawful for a chief to have swine."

And : "He is entitled to fat ;" and, "the law styles that person a plebeian-chief who wishes to obtain a chieftainship in right of any other property except in right of tenants ; and, by the tenants is fleshmeat supplied to the chie ;" and "it is tenants that advance the grades of chiefs ;" and "'seds' to every chief ;" and "that these kings are not entitled to anything in right of their property, i.e. their cattle."

"There are seven chiefs with the 'Feini' who are not entitled to 'saor-giallna'-service or 'daor-giallna'-service," &c.

And ; "scurthur ρορ ρελβα," i.e. the inferior men with property are put into the land, or the chieftainship.

And ; "lordship is compared to first contract ;" thus, the son of a chief, &c.

And : "For it is shameful to anyone to be caught in unjust possession," i.e. for it is shameful to anyone to be caught in unlawful possession ; thus, a chief without property.

And : "unless true property is obtained," by the tenants truly.

And : "unless they are noble 'seds' that are distributed, i.e. by him to the tenants."

And : "The son of the abbot in the pleasant church

"A fact established by sense,

"The son of the husbandman in the territory,

"The son of the king to bind the hostages."

O my Nairi of the beautiful aspect (o. b.) if thou be a judge, thou shouldest not give 'dire'-fine to one under whom there is no foundation of food tribute. It would be a great violation if ~~finer were adjudged upon a title not found according to the Feini.~~ then adjudged

The tribe of a man is waste where is no growth ; where there is no place for the root, where the fair tree wants a root, it is difficult to have fruit on its branches, i.e. it is difficult to have fruit on its branches unless it has a root.

Question—What is the 'ansruth'-poet ? Answer. His father and his grandfather were 'ansruth'-poets, for every grade whatever,

W 268. 23

SUC-
CESSION.

αἱρ αἱρ nach ἡραὸ το αἱρῖν ἰτην πλατὴ οαῦρ πῖλε οἶα ῥαῖα ῥῖα ρεῖβ ῥῖ ραοῖαλ τῖρ; οὐ ροῖβ οἶαβλαὸ ρεῖβε νο ῥῖχῖναμα λαῖρ, νῖ τῖ αὐοῖαο ῥῖ cach ῥῖρ ἰ ταῖρῖαῖτερ ῥῖ ραοῖαλ τῖρ.

|| I. 76.8. [V 378.13]
 fuirustat

Τυλαὶ τῖῖαῖρῖαῖρ α τῖ[ῖῖαῖρῖαῖρ] τῖαῖρ, οαῦρ ὑποῖαῖο ῖν ἰαῖρ 5 τῖν πλατὰ ρ[λαῖτεαῖνῖνῖρ].

(diff. in O. 1218)
 ε/

Αἱρῖαῖτῖ τῖαῖτῖ .1. αἱρῖαῖτῖ αῖαῖρ οαῦρ α ῥεαῖαῖαῖρ, οαῦρ αἱρῖαῖτῖ ρεῖρῖν. Αἱ α ἰρῖαῖαλ οαῦρ α ῥῖχῖναμ, οαῦρ ῥῖαῖρ οῖρε cach αῖρ α οἶα becc μορ νεαῖαῖαλ beῖρ αῖρ, οῖο μορ οῖο beῖρ .1. το βῖεῖαῖαῖρῖαῖρ eneclann το cach.

10 Οαῦρ; αῖαῖρ ροῖαῖρ μερ αῖρῖαλ αῖο .1. αῖαῖρ ἰμῖρῖαῖρ αῖρῖαλ ἰῖ ραοῖ μερεῖαῖαῖτερ eneclann οο.

Manab εῖρῖαῖαῖρ αῖρῖαλ, εῖρῖαλ τῖαῖτῖ αῖο ραῖεῖο βῖε-ῖα το μερ οῖρ ῖαα οἶα οεῖρ .1. ἰῖ το ρο ραῖεῖο ἰν βῖεῖα το μερεῖαῖαῖρ ἰν οῖρε ἰῖ οῖρ ἰν ῖαα οἶα.

|| O. 2.2210

16 Οαῦρ; α Μοῖαῖο, α μαοῖαῖρ, α μοῖαῖρ, ομοῖαῖρ. αῖτ οῖρε τεῖα ῖα nemῖαῖρ αῖρ.

" "
 (cf. Pearson, Et. 13. 64 § 40)

Οῖρεῖαῖρ ἰαα ααῖαῖρ .1. οῖρεῖαῖρ eneclann οοῖρ ρο αῖρῖα α τοῖρ οαῦρ α ῖαῖο.

Οαῦρ; cach nemῖ ἰαα ροῖαῖρ οῖα .1. ἰν τοῖρ οαῦρ ἰν ἰαῖρ-20 αῖρ.

|| O. 2.2210

Οαῦρ; α μοῖαῖο α μαοῖαῖρ, α μοῖαῖρ, μεῖαῖρ ῖαα αοῖ ἰαῖρ αῖρῖαῖρ, εῖρῖαῖρ cach ἰαῖρ ἰαα ἰαῖρ, ἰαῖο αῖα ἰαῖρ ἰαα αῖαῖο.

Οαῦρ; ροῖεῖαῖρ ῖρ ροαλ .1. ἰῖ μαῖτ ρεῖαῖρ ἰν ῖαῖρ ρο-αλ ρο.

25 Αἱρῖαῖρ ῖαα necῖαῖρ .1. αἱρῖαῖρ εὐ οἶα αῖα ῖα eccῖαῖρ, ἰν αοῖρ οαῦρ ἰν ἰαῖρ.

Οαῦρ; eῖαῖρ ῖαα naῖαῖρ .1. ἰῖ eῖαῖρ ἰῖ ἰν ῖαῖρ εὐ εὐ boῖ naῖαῖρ εὐ ῖν τοῖρ.

O. 2.2210

Οαῦρ; νῖ ῖαῖο ραῖαῖρ ῖαῖρ .1. νοῖα ῖαῖο α ῖαῖο το 30 ἰα ἰα ῖαῖρ, ο beῖαῖρ οῖρ ἰαῖρ; ῖα αῖο το ἰα, muna ῖαῖρ αοῖα νοῖα ρεῖα ῖα.

Οαῦρ; νῖ ραῖ ρεῖα ροῖρῖα ραῖαῖρ ραῖρ .1. νοῖα ἰαῖρῖαῖρ ῖρ neῖρ α ροῖρῖα ἰαῖρ οἶα ραῖρ .1. ἰαῖρ ραῖαῖρ ἰν τῖ beῖρ ῖν τοῖρ, νῖ ῖαῖρ ἰν τῖαῖρ.

¹After three Kings.—The text of this paragraph is very defective.

whether chief or poet, if he parts with his qualification during the ages of three persons, his lot is not equal to those who are found in possession of their qualification during the ages of three persons until they double their qualification or their service.

Hill of lordship is established after three have followed in succession, and the privilege of succeeding a king after three kings.¹

An 'Ansruth'-poet now, i.e. his father and his grandfather were 'ansruth'-poets, and he is an 'ansruth'-poet himself. Noble his ~~honor-price~~ ^{poetry} and his superintendence, and he gets 'dire'-fine out of every poem, small, large, or various which he has, whether large or small, i.e. honor-price has been adjudged to each of his poems.

And: "As he sustains the estimation of high wages," i.e. as he sustains the merit it is accordingly honor-price is estimated for him.

"Unless he is an unqualified wanton, ~~unworthy~~ of a territory, he may seek the Brehon to estimate the 'dire'-fine which is proper for each animal," i.e. it is he that seeks the Brehon to estimate the 'dire'-fine that is due for each animal.

And; "O Morann, O wealthy dignitary, let the lawful 'dire'-fine of each noble dignity be adjusted by thee."

"They advance into their dignities," i.e. honor-price is graduated for them according to the nobleness of their property and their grade.

And; "Every 'neimhedh'-person should be possessed of his proper qualifications," i.e. as to property and worthiness.

And; O morann, O wealthy dignitary, every one is estimated according to his desert, every one is placed at the court or banquet according to his dignity, every one's dignity is according to his grade.

And; "A constant word (by-word) is circulated," i.e. it is well this constant word is spread about.

And; "Every person complained of is reproached," i.e. he is reproached when all are complaining of him as to age and worthiness.

And; "Every blemished person is complained of," i.e. he is complained of for being in the chieftainship, when he is blemished, and without property.

And; "a hem does not follow mantles," i.e. their threads do not follow the mantles when they are cut off them; so, though a man has had means, if he has them not now, he is no better thereof.

And, "A waste cannot support its wandering tribe," i.e. it cannot support the weight of its colony, when it is waste, i.e. so also is the person who is without property. He is not the better of having had it before. The territory does (can?) not support him

Suc-
CESSION.

Ocur; riru na ruzlido zo rono .i. zin enecclann don tí búr ar raon elo zin tocur.

4I256.7

Ocur; aópenar maít maít mainib, aópenor olc anmainib .i.
aótaireter olc do na holcaib, dona hinndižeib na veim maít do 5 na mainib.

= I

I42.8f

Ocur; ir a renčar mor conamer ar na ručta maít do olc, ocur olc do maít .i. enecclann bez ocur enecclann mor. Ocur; ir ann do hairleó ri ocur aitheč, ruzan ocur amrizan, raor ocur daor, roitčech, ocur doitčec, rona ocur dona; ron[a] .i. ro ana 10 aži, in tocur ocur in clann. Ocur; do zabur an raor roitčec robaó ron, ocur do zabur an daor. Ocur; ir ann ro hairleó vire cach ro miaó.

Ocur; reim ainim ožnati mana ciaŕt ceiró. Ni aile nach reire urraim la peime .i. noča ndižann in tí búr reire žan 15 tocur žan inhracur, uaral roimn rmačta na žog ožruja do reir in penčar. Ocur; ar nač aon ož na bi a tocur a tuat ni aile ožruja na iardao la peime.

Cor .i. itir dir. Cunnrad .i. ni réir a diažat cunn ocur pačata ocur iri a ndižbir.

20 Ni tí rinnrear rja norar mana ruročraóter, ocur arale.

IV 376.24

Sinnrear ocur orar ocur enecclann do meŕ do cach.

And; "Let no wandering men pass judgment," i.e. there shall be no honor-price for the person who is wandering about without property. SUC-CESSION.
—

And; "It renders good for property well disposed of, it renders evil for ill-disposed of property," i.e. evil is rendered unto the wicked, i.e. to the unlawful persons who do not do good with their property. || I 256. 7, 14.

And, "It is in the 'Senchus Mór' it was enacted that good should not be given to bad, nor bad to good," i.e. small honor-price and large honor-price. And, "It is in it, it was enacted that there should be king and peasant, queen and non-queen, noble and ignoble, wealthy and not wealthy, prosperous and not prosperous." Prosperous, i.e. good ('so') property ('ana') i.e. he has goodly property, i.e. in property and children. And; "there is found the noble wealthy, rich and prosperous; and there is found the ignoble, there is found an daer, &c." And, "It is in it, it was ordained that the 'dire'-fine of each person should be according to his dignity."

And, "Seim ainim og naithi, mana ciast ceird": "No unproductive person merits a share with the Feini," i.e. the person who is barren, without property, without worthiness, does not merit a noble share of 'smacht'-fine nor sick maintenance, according to the 'Fenechus'-law. And "Because any one who has not his property in the territory does not merit sick maintenance or full peace with the Feini." || C 1138, 1823, 1842.

A contract, i.e. between two persons. A covenant, a thing ~~confirmed~~ by sane adults and guarantees, and this is difference¹ between them. for which adults & sureties guarantee

The senior goes not before the junior, unless he (the senior) is proclaimed, or otherwise disqualified.

Senior and junior, and honor-price are to be estimated for all.

¹ The difference. That is, this is the difference between the two terms: A 'cor' is a bargain made between two persons without bond or security; a 'cunradh' is a guaranteed contract.

INDEX.

- 'ABAD'-GAINS: 63.
ABBOT: covenant of a, with monk not binding, 55.
ABDUCTION: incurs 'dire' fine, 271.
ABSCONDER: 'eric'-fine for an, by whom paid, 241, 259, 261.
ACCIDENTS: protection of cattle against, 101
'ACHLAIDH'-COVENANT, 57.
'ACUS': 129.
'ADALTRAC'-WOMEN: 43, 45.
ADOPTION:
 contract of, when not binding, 61.
 regulations regarding, 289.
ADZE: in a chief's house, 311.
AFTERGRASS: trespass into, 91.
AGE: proverbs as to, 373, 377.
'AIRCENN'-LANDS: 127.
'AIRCHINNECH': steward of the church lands, 63, 69.
'AIRE': a common name for a gentleman of any rank in society, 299.
'AIRE-ARD'-CHIEF: description of, 299, 321, 323, 325, 345, 347, 383.
'AIRE-COISRING'-CHIEF: 299.
 why so called, 317.
 full description of, 319.
'AIRE-DESA'-CHIEF:
 the inviolable precinct of a, 227.
 description of, 299, 321, 345, 349.
'AIRE-ECHTA'-CHIEF:
 one of the social grades, 299.
 description of, 321, 323.
'AIRE-FINE'-CHIEF: 345.
 description of, 349.
'AIRE-FORGAILL'-CHIEF: description of, 299, 321, 327, 345, 347, 383.
'AIRE-TUISE'-CHIEF:
 one of the social grades, 299.
 description of, 321, 325, 345, 347.
'AIREM': 32.
'AIRGSIN'-TRESPASS: 99.
'AIRLIM'-TRESPASS:
 fines for, 81, 85, 91, 93, 103, 105, 109, 115, 139.
 not liable to fine in certain cases, 93, 95, 105.
 by sheep, 109.
 by pigs, 109.
 by bees, 115.

- ‘AIRLIS’-ENCLOSURE: i.e., a yard, 313.
 ‘AIRM’: 129.
 ‘AITHECH’-PERSON OR TENANT:
 the plebeian, 299.
 not entitled to malt, 317.
 full description of, 317.
 ‘AITHGIN’: i.e., compensation for trespass, 109.
 ‘AITREBADH’-TRESPASS, 99.
 ‘ALBANACH’: a native of Alba; an ancient name for the south of Scotland, 285.
 ALDER: a common tree, 147.
 ALE: cask of, in a chief’s house constantly, 311.
 ALE-HOUSE: part of a king’s establishment, 341.
 ‘ALLABRIG-NAIE’: i.e., a sufficiency for the chief at a feast, 165, 167, 175, 177.
 ‘AN’-TRESPASS: 99.
 ‘ANA’: 387.
 ‘ANARRA’-GOODS: definition of, 37.
 ‘AN DAER’: 387.
 ‘ANDOIN’-CHURCH: 339.
 ‘ANFLAITH’-CHIEF: 317.
 ‘ANNLANN’: anything taken with bread, viz., butter, sauce, bacon, 118.
 ‘ANSRUTH’-PERSON: 345.
 description of, 349.
 ‘ANSRUTH’-POET: 357, 359.
 description of, 383, 385.
 ANTIQUARY: stake-fences settled by oath of, 143.
 APPLE:
 a chieftain-tree, 147.
 what gives it dignity, 151.
 ARABLE LAND:
 three divisions of, 277.
 description and characteristic of good, 277.
 price of, 279.
 ‘ARADH’-TRESPASS: 99.
 ARBITRATORS: in unlawful grazing cases, 49, 95.
 ARBUTUS: a shrub-tree, 147.
 ARMY: case of a man wounded in the van of an, 179.
 ‘ARRA’-GOODS: definition of, 37.
 ARSON: fine for, 235.
 ARTISANS:
 certain days assigned to, for grinding, 217, 219.
 maintenance of, 333.
 ASH:
 a chieftain-tree, 147.
 what gives it dignity, 151.
 in arable lands, 277.

- ASPEN: a shrub-tree, 147.
 ATTACK: liability to service of defence and, 145.
 'AURRACH' TAXES: 337.
 AUTUMN: smacht fines payable in, 79, 89.
 AXE-LAND: in which everything grows freely, 277.
 AXLE-TREES: made of holly-wood, 151.
 BADGERS: 'smacht'-fines for, 121.
 'BAITSE'-TENANT: 345.
 description of, 353.
 BAKING IMPLEMENTS: used by woman in taking possession of land, 9.
 BAKING: woman's, equal to half man's, 306.
 BAR: requisite for making a stone wall, 73.
 'BAS-LOC':
 i.e., a deadly place of murrain, 7.
 distress not taken in, 7.
 BATHING-BASIN: in a chief's house, 311.
 BATTLE: defeat in, proof of king's falsehood, 53.
 BEARD: the encircling of a, necessary before an oath takes effect, 303.
 BED:
 pledge of co-tenancy to be placed at feet of the, 75.
 'eric'-fine of criminals upon his, 241.
 of what is lawful and unlawful as regards a, 315.
 BEES:
 'smacht'-fines for, 115.
 division of the honey of, 115.
 swallowing of, by hens, 117.
 additional pledges for, 163, 177.
 their trespass, crime, and produce, 163.
 produce of, how divided, 163.
 entitled to three years' exemption from fine, 165.
 swarms of, tribe-property, 165.
 the 'cain-cuisc,' 165, 167, 175.
 the 'allabrignaie,' 165, 167, 175.
 'the longing of disease,' 165, 167, 175.
 distribution of swarms of, 167, 173.
 'merrraighe'-swarm of, 173.
 the necessity of watching, 175.
 injury by, 177, 179.
 a particular bee-judgment, 179.
 in the tree of a noble dignitary, 181, 183, 185, 187.
 produce of, how divided, 181, 185, 195, 197.
 rights of original owner of, 183.
 that have migrated, not protected by 'nemedh,' 185.
 watching and dividing swarms of, 191, 193.
 in a lawful green, 195.
 kept in a herb-garden, 199.
 penalty for stealing, 199, 201, 203.
 BEE-JUDGMENTS: 163-203. See also BEES.
 'BESCNA': 33.
 'BIATACH'-LAND: 45.

BILL-HOOK : requisite for making a 'felmadh' fence, 73.

BIRCH : a common tree, 147.

BIRDS :

'smacht'-fines for pet, 115.
trespass by, 117.

BISHOP :

a gift to a, 211.
a meeting of, at Sliabh Fuaid, 227.
the precinct of a, 229.
retinue of a, 339.
penalty for wounding, 363.

'BITHBINCHE' : 117.

'BITHTUISI' : 373.

BLACKTHORN :

used in making fences, 113.
a shrub tree, 147.
absence of, sign of good arable land, 277.

BLIGHT : of fruit, proof of king's falsehood, 53.

BLISTER-FINE : 345, 347.

BLOTCHES :

the effect of biased judgment, 10, 15, 17
how cured, 17.

BLUSH-FINE : 345.

'BOAIRE'-CHIEF : 45.

settlement of stake fences left to, 143.
estimation of his inviolable precinct, 227.
one of the social grades, 289, 299, 309.
description of his property, etc., 311, 313.
general description of, 351.
the wealthiest takes precedence, 379.

'BOAIRECH' :

list of property of, 311.
divisions of, 321.

'BOAIRE-FEBHSA'-MAN :

a division of the 'boaires,' 299.
why so called, his position, etc., etc., 309.

'BOAIRE-GENSA' : 311.

BODIES : a cutting before dead, 155.

BODY-FINE :

for killing, 247, 253.
division of, 259.

BOG-MYRTLE : a bramble-tree, 149.

BONDMAN : covenant of a, with his chief not binding, 55, 209.

BOUNDARY-MARKS :

twelve, viz., flat-mark.
stone-mark.
tree-mark.
deer-mark.
stock-mark.

BOUNDARY-MARKS—continued.

mound-mark.
 division-mark.
 water-mark.
 eye-mark.
 deflet-mark.
 way-mark, 143, 145.

BRAMBLE-TREES :

list of, 149.
 'dire'-fine for, 149.

BREACHES :

definition of, 127.
 some, not sued for, 155.
 all, to be closed, 155.

BREHONSHIP : the exercise of, 283.

BRIAR :

a bramble-tree, 149.
 absence of, sign of good arable land, 277.

BRIDGE :

an old, under water, a boundary mark, 143.
 'cain' law of, 211.
 ditch at a, 221.

BROOCH : part of the insignia of a chief, 323.

BROOM : a bramble-tree, 149.

BROTHER :

bears crimes, how long, 243.
 divides chattels, 259.

'BRUGHAIÐH' : 331.

'BRUGHAIÐH'-FARMER : 195.

'BRUGHAIÐH'-MEN : 317.

BRUIGHRECHTA-LAWS : 49.

BULL :

common pasturage of, 101.
 trespass in driving a cow to, not sued for, 157.

'BUNCHOR'-BAND : i.e., bands of ozier interwoven between fluces, 112, 113.

BURDOCK : absence of, sign of good arable land, 277.

BURNING :

case of, by inadvertence, 251.
 intentional, 253.

BUTTER :

certain grades no entitled to, 301.
 part of sick-attendance, 307.

'CAIN CUISC' : i.e., the rule of 'the drink from the hive', 165, 167, 175, 177.

'CAIN'-LAW :

fine according to, 25.
 of water, 211.
 Brehon must know the, 285, 323.

'CAIN'-PARTY : of a king, 381.

'CAIRDE'-LAW : 3, 323.

"running" of, 235.

'CAIRDE'-REGULATIONS : of a king, 381.

CAKES : as fines for hens trespassing, 117.

CALF :

the rent for land taken till the end of the year, 91.

common pasturage of, 101.

when, gores calf, 103.

trespass of, 105, 109, 111.

'CANA'-POET : 357.

CANDELABRA : in a chief's house, 311.

CATHEDRAL : 2,000 paces the precinct of a noble, 229.

CATTLE :

trespass of, in co-tenancy, 75, 83, 85, 87, 105, 125, 139, 147.

herding of, 85, 97.

protection of, from accidents, 101.

common-pasturage of, 101, 103.

wounding of, by fierce cattle, 103.

feeding of, in pound, 107.

mangling of, by dogs, 123, 179.

subject to farm-law, 125.

crossing a river or road, 127.

threefold trespass of, 147.

trespass of, how estimated, 147.

stealing, 271.

CAULDRON :

test of, tendered by certain classes, 285, 295.

found in a chief's house, 311.

CHARCOAL : a sack of, always in a chief's house, 311.

CHARIOTS : axletrees of, made of holly, 151.

CHATTELS :

'eric'-fine falls first on the criminal's, 241.

division of, among father, son, brother, and family, 259.

theft of live and dead, 271.

CHIEFS :

covenant of, with bondman not binding, 55.

may rescind contracts and annual covenants, 55.

covenant of a servitor of, defective, 55.

honorprice of, how lessened, 57.

covenant made without knowledge of, 61.

bees swarming into the tree of, 181.

gift of, to the tenant, 211.

a meeting of, at Sliabh Fuaidh, 227.

'eric'-fine for absconding criminal falls on, 241.

how far chargeable for crimes, 245.

CHIEFTAINSHIP : succession of, 373-387.

CHIEFTAIN-TREES :

cutting, a man-trespass, 147.

list of, 147.

'dire'-fine for cutting, 147, 149.

CHRIST :

- men of the gospel of, 211.
- prophecy regarding, 219.

CHURCH :

- without a green, no distress on, 7.
- may rescind contracts and annul covenants, 55.
- covenant with a subject of a, defective, 55.
- violation of 'nemedh'-person's, by cattle, 87.
- notice to be given at the, when horses found trespassing, 107
- to have a share of a find of bees, 195.
- not to be defrauded of what it merits, 197.
- conducting water over 'nemedh' land of a, 215.
- grades, their inviolable precincts, 227.
- protects sinners, 235.
- power of, to allow culprits to escape, 237.

'CILL'-CHURCH : the ditch of a, 221, 373.

'CLEITH' : 349.

CLIFF : running-over a, 139.

'CLI'-POET : 357, 359.

'COARB' :

- i.e. heirs or keepers of the land, 103, 129.
- bound by the laws of their ancestors, 213.
- of Patrick, his inviolable precinct, 227.
- proverb as to, 267.

'COIBHUE'-PROPERTY : 31, 39.

'COIR-FEINE-BEC' : the law called, 103.

'COIR FEINE'-LAW : a law of adjustment by which the agricultural classes settled their cases of damage and trespass of cattle, 241.

COIRPRI LIFECHAIR : 267.

'COLPACH' HEIFER : 83 et passim.

COMBAT : without verbal engagements, illegal, 33.

'COMHARBA' : female, 289.

'COMMAITH' : 69.

COMMON PASTURAGE :

- the nature of, 101.
- how arranged, 101, 103.

COMMON-TREES :

- list of, 147.
- 'dire'-fines for, 147.

COMPENSATION :

- for damaged grass, 49, 83.
- when lost through neglect, 51.
- for injury done by fences and stakes, 73, 75.
- for trespass on grass and corn, 87.
- for pigs trespassing, 109, 111.
- for bees trespassing, 115.
- for dog-trespass, 123.
- for cutting trees, 149, 151.
- for cutting land, 153.

COMPENSATION—continued.

- meaning of, 229.
- in case of violated protection, 233.
- “running” of, 235.
- for necessary killing, 245.
- for burning, 253.
- how divided among a family, 259.
- for milk, when cattle are stolen, 271.
- double, for theft of chattels, 271.

CONTRACTS :

- good and bad, subject to be rescinded by chief, tribe, and church, 55
- of adoption, when not binding, 61.
- nine, dissolved by the Feini, 207, 209.
- must have surety of the tribe, 207.
- seven noble, not easy to dissolve, 211.
- distress on kinsman’s cattle, in cases of, 265.
- unfair, set aside, viz.—‘force,’ ‘claim,’ &c., ‘forfeit’ contracts, 269.
- verbal, in adoption, by whom given, 285.

COPPER : a mine of, how valued, 279.

‘COR’ : i.e. a bargain made without bond or security, 387

CORN : scarcity of, proof of king’s falsehood, 53.

CORNLAND : trespass in, 79, 83.

CORNSTACKS : trespass by hens in, 117.

‘CORUS’-ARRANGEMENTS, 327.

‘CORUS’-LAW, 335, 337.

COSHERING : i.e. feasting, 325, 327.

‘COSLAITHE’-CATTLE : common pasturage of, 103.

Co-TENANCY :

- why so called, 69, 75.
- whence does it arise, 69.
- what comes foremost in, 71.
- how made, 71.
- trespass of cattle in, 75.
- duties of, 75.
- pledges of, 75.
- trespass in, 79-159, see trespass.
- finer in a, 139.
- right of water in the, 213.

Co-TENANT :

- means also co-tiller, or co-grazier, or co-occupant, 75.
- entitled to right of way, 157.
- bound to permit other co-tenants to draw water, 213.

COVENANTS :

- the right of, 33.
- suing upon, 35.
- parties appointed to dissolve, 35.
- four, not binding, 55.
- three defective, 55.
- three difficult, 55.
- ternal, 55.
- three, not amounting to the thing stipulated, 57.
- ‘achlaidh,’ 57, 59.

COVENANTS—continued.

three bad, not binding, 61.
definition of, 387.

'COW-GRAZIER': description of, 353.

Cows:

to be offered in taking possession of land, 21, 25.
dryness of, proof of king's falsehood, 53.
a herdsman necessary for, 87.
should be in cow-fastness by night, 97.
common-pasturage of, 101.
trespass of, in common-pasturage, 105.
keeping of, in pound, 107.
may trespass in three places, 125.
hair of, boundary mark, 143.
trespass in driving of, to a bull not sued for, 157.
stealing, 271.
the price of arable land, 279.

CREAM: pure new milk, part of sick-maintenance, 303.

CRITH GABHLACH: 299-336.

CRIMES: see also 'ERIC'-FINE:

seven divisions of, 241.
'eric'-fine for, fall upon the family in certain cases, 241, 243.
of necessity, how paid for, 245, 247, 249, 265.
all except killing go upon the criminals, provided they have means of paying, 245.
unnecessary, accountable for first by criminal, 247, 269.
definition of necessary and unnecessary, 249.
every one dies for his wilful, 251.
the land is forfeited for, 265.

CRIMINAL:

'eric'-fine of, how levied, 241.
family of, when liable, 243.
liability of, shifts to chief, king, and law, 243.
every crime to the, 259.
leaving territory with 'seds,' 261.
land of, forfeited for crimes, 265.

'CRUAN': a bridle of, 311.

'CRUID'-LAND: 15, 45, 47.

CRUMB-FOX: 345.

description of, 335.

'CUMA': 69.

'CUMAIGNAIS': 69.

'CUMHAL': 25, 27, 91, 233, 235, 245, 251, 253, 259, 279, 289, 305, et passim.

'CUMHAL-SENORBA': 39.

'CUMRADH': i.e., a guaranteed contract, 387.

CUTTINGS:

i.e., breaches or gaps, 154.
certain, not sued for, 155.

'DAE'-PERSON: 345.

description of, 349.

- 'DAER-BOTHUS'-SHIP: 339.
- 'DAER-FUIDHER'-SHIP: 339.
- 'DAER-FUIDHER'-TENANT: 285, 339.
- 'DAER'-MAN: 43.
- 'DAER'-STOCK: 197.
- 'DAER'-TENANT: 197, 236, 237.
- 'DAIRT'-HEIFER: 91, et passim.
- DAM: 'cain' law of the, 211
- DAMAGES:
 - how neutralized, 17.
 - of possessions, 141.
- 'DAMH-CONCHAIDH' ox: 101.
- 'DAOR'-COTTIERS: 381.
- DAORGIALUNA-SERVICE: 383.
- DAOR'-PERSON: 253.
- 'DAOR'-TENANCY: 267.
- DARKNESS: a contract made in the, not binding, 209.
- DAUGHTER:
 - land appropriated to a, by father, 45.
 - obligation of, to rest on land to the tribe, 49.
- DEARTH: proof of king's falsehood, 53.
- DEATH: shelter afforded by the church against, 237.
- DEBT:
 - eric-fine for, 37.
 - promises to pay, when forgiven, 39.
 - shelter against unlawful claims for, 237.
- DEER: 'smacht'-fines for pet, 115, 121.
- DEER-MARK: description of, 143.
- DEFECT-MARK: definition of a, 145.
- DEFENCE: liability to service of attack and, 145.
- 'DEIRBHFINE':
 - a family division, 283.
 - receive no share of tribe-land, 285.
 - means red or fratricidal family, 287, 293.
 - commentary upon the, 293.
- 'DEIRBHFINE'-DIVISION:
 - i.e.*, a family division, 51, 167, 173, 243, 245, 283, 285, 289.
 - exact description of, 290.
- 'DEIRBHFINE'-RELATIONS: 241.
- 'DEIS'-CHIEF: 321.
- 'DEIS'-RIGHT: 321.
- 'DEOLAIDH'-RIGHT: 163.
- DESERTER:
 - i.e.*, a landless man, a fugitive or evader of his duties, 128.
 - treatment of, by the co-tenancy, 129, 131, 133.
 - further definition of, and liabilities of a, 135, 137.

'DIBADH'-LAND : 93, 141.
division of, 285, 291.

'DIBADH'-PROPERTY : 247, 259.
division of, among family, 285, 291, 293.

'DIDE AIRE' : 53.

DIFFICULTY : meaning of the term, in cases of protection, 229.

'DIGUIN'-TRESPASS : 345.

'DIRE'-FINE :
paid for cattle trespassing, 91, 103.
for dog-trespass, 121.
stake-trespass, 145.
for cutting chieftain-trees, 147.
for cutting timber, 149, 169.
for stealing bees, 199.
for killing, to whom paid, 259.
for theft, 271.
double-great-, when paid, 273.
must be known by the Brehon, 285.
of an 'ogaire,' 307.
of a tenant resident, 307.
of a 'boaire,' 309.
for breaking into a house, 311, 315.
for a bed, 315.
for grinding without leave, 315.
for a barn and pigstye, 315.
for using a hatchet, 315.
for wounding bishops, 363, 365.
for wounding priests and lay recluses, 367.
how distributed, 379.

DISEASE : the longing of, 165, 167.

DISTRESS :
when not leviable on the Feini, 7.
penalties in cases of unlawful, 9.
illegal, when prosecuted by the Feini, 33.
five 'seds' the fine for unlawful, 33.
maxim of 'Finnsruth Fithil' law in forcible, 91.
upon a deserter, 129, 135.
upon a kinsman-surety for 'eric'-fine, 259.
pledge of, illegal, 271.

DITCHES :
seven legal, 221.
injuries to, 221.

DIVISIONS OF LAND : 277-295. See LANDS.

DIVISION-MARK : definition of, 145.

DOCTOR : when provided and paid, 301, 303.

DOG :
'airlim' trespass before a, 93, 105.
protection of cattle from, 101.
'smacht'-fines for, 115, 121.
trespass by, on the land of co-tenancy, 121, 123.
feeding of, involves liability, 121.
wild, 141.
tearing cattle, 179.

- 'DONN': 381.
 'DORMUINE'-WOMAN: 307.
 'DOS'-POET, 357, 359.
 'DRAUMCHE'-MILK: 303.
 DRIPPING-BOARD: position of, in the 'ogaire's' house, 305.
 DRUNKENNESS: a contract of, not binding, 209.
 'DUIBHFINE':
 a family division, 283.
 that which tenders the test of ordeal, 285.
 means 'black family,' 287.
 commentary upon the, 295.
 'DUIRIME'-FENCE: formation of, 113.
 'DUN'-FORT:
 without land, no distress on, 7.
 trespass on a king's, 87.
 notice to be given at, when horses caught trespassing, 107.
 cuttings made at construction of, 155.
 conducting water over the land of a, 215.
 ditch of a, 221.
 dimensions of a king's, 337.
 'DUTHRACHT'-PERSON: 285.
 'EACHLACH'-PERSON, 57.
 'EAR': the clear knowledge, 291.
 'ECES'-POET: 357, 359.
 'ECSMACHT-CES': 359.
 ELDER-TREE: a shrub-tree, 147.
 ELM: a common tree, 147.
 ENGAGEMENT: a forced, unlawful, 271.
 ENTRY:
 with horses, 3, 5, 19.
 what is good, 5.
 men required for, 7.
 how a woman takes possession by, 9, 11.
 the customs of, 19, 21.
 upon fenced lands, 21, 25.
 illegal, when prosecuted by the Feini, 33.
 'ERIC'-FINE: 33, 37.
 when incurred by one, paid by all, 179.
 for a church, 229.
 for an absconding criminal, 241.
 for necessary crimes, how raised, 245.
 for life-wound, 249, 253, 255.
 leniency in levying, 251.
 for the foster-child of a family, 255, 257.
 land must be given as, 267.
 ERIC-SOD: 87.
 'ERRECH' TAXES: 337.
 'ESAIN': 301, 307, 345, 347, 349, 351.
 'ESCRA': a cup, 164, 165, 167.

- 'ESERT': 128.
- EVIDENCE:
 of an 'ogaire,' 307.
 of a 'boaire,' 309.
- EWES: use of, in a woman's entry on land, 9, 11, 13.
- EXEMPTION: where a case of, arises, 229.
- EXILE: (i.e., non-native) absconding as a criminal is put upon the road, 243.
- EYE: blinded by sting of a bee, 179.
- EYE-MARK:
 a boundary, 143.
 definition of, 145.
- FAIR: roads must be kept clean during a, 145.
- FAIR-GREEN:
 water free in the precinct of a, 215.
 ditch of a, 221.
- FALSE CHARACTER: forfeiture of honour by, 319.
- FALSE CONTRACT: gain by a, a falsehood avenged by God, 53.
- FALSE EVIDENCE: forfeiture of honour by, 319.
- FALSE JUDGMENT: given for hire, a falsehood avenged by God, 53.
- FALSE WITNESS: decision by, a falsehood avenged by God, 53.
- FALSEHOODS: of a king, 53.
 three, avenged by God on a territory, 53.
- FAMILY:
 a deserter's, duties of, 131, 133, 135.
 liable to pay after evasion of criminal, 243.
 liable for necessary crimes, 245.
 wounding the foster-son of a, 245.
 always liable for killing, 247.
 have choice of giving up the criminal or the land, 247.
 list of divisions of, 283, 285.
 at what point, relations cease, 285.
- FAMILY-DIVISIONS:
 list of, 283, 290.
 definitions of, 285, 293, 295.
- 'FAOTH-FORAI': 229.
- FARM-LAWS:
 trespass in the, 89.
 described, 125.
- FATHER:
 covenant of, with son not binding, 55.
 when nuptial present due to, 61.
 when responsible for son's 'eric'-fine, 241.
- FAWNS: trespass of wild, 121.
- FEAR:
 trespass in consequence of, 93.
 a contract of, not binding, 209, 269.
- 'FEIGH-ATHAIR': i.e., the father of sharp art, 237.
- VOL. IV.

FEINI:

- the grade of, 19, 165, 177, 183.
- rule of, as regards the crime of one, 179.

FEINICHUS: 19.

- i.e.*, the usage of the law of the, 21.

'FEIS' TRESPASS: fines for, 81, 91, 103, 105, 139.

'FELMADH-FENCE': a bill-hook requisite for making a, 73.

FEMALES:

- taking possession of land, 11, 13, 15.
- heirs of, claim on covenants, 39, 41, 45.

FENCES:

- making of, in co-tenancy, 71.
- liable to conditions, 71.
- law of, and requisites for, 73.
- hatchet necessary for making strong, 73.
- construction, dimensions, and situations of various, 77.
- trespass over, 81, 83, 85.
- owner of land must have, 85.
- description of, lawful, 113.
- dimensions of, naked, 113.
- bad, lessen trespass, 127.
- must be made by deserter's next-of-kin, 129.
- what are lawful, in co-tenancy, 139.
- stake-, 141.
- settlement of stake-, by oath and prescription, 143.
- required for roads, 145.

'FENE'-GRADES: 355.

'FERFOTHLA' CHIEF: why so called, 315.

'FERFOTHLA' MAN:

- a division of the 'boaires,' 299.
- why so called, 315.

'FER MBIDBOTH'-MAN: one of the social grades, 299.

FERN: a bramble-tree, 149.

'FIALSHAI': 359.

FIELD: bees settling in a, 185.

'FILE'-POET: 359.

'FINE' i.e., the pure tribe, 290.

FINES:

- for entry on fenced lands, 25, 27, 29.
- for unlawful distress, 33.
- for unlawful entry, 33.
- for combat without verbal engagements, 33.
- for giving away property not one's own, 33.
- payment of, to be adjusted to ability of provisions, 37.
- not necessarily in any particular kind, 37.
- in copper, silver, or gold, only paid by a chief, 37.
- of law to a king, 51.
- for neglect of fencing, 73.
- for trespass in the co-tenancy, 81, 83, 85, 87.
- for trespass by animals, 83.
- for cattle violating church or sanctuary, 87.

FINES—continued.

- none in certain 'airlim'-trespass, 93, 95.
- for spoilt grass, to be paid by arbitration, 95.
- for goring and wounding by cattle, 103.
- for 'feis'-trespass, 105, 139.
- for 'airlim'-trespass by sheep, 109.
- for trespass of pet animals, bees, hens, and all birds, 115, 117.
- for dog-trespass, 123.
- for stakes-trespass, 141, 145, 153.
- for cutting timber, 147, 149.
- accepted by church from sinners, 235.
- for theft and unlawful possession, 269, 271.

'FINDFINE': 39.

'FINETACUIR':

- a family division, 283, 285.
- i.e.*, the 'adopted sons,' 289.

'FINNSEUTH FITHIL'-LAW: maxim of, in taking for able distress, 91.

'FIR-GIALUNA': definition of, 35.

'FIR NANFIR': 381.

FIRE: ever living, in a chief's house, 311.

FISHING-WEIR: 213.

'FITHISI UILC': i.e., the disease of evil, 378.

FLAG: a boundary mark, 143.

FLAGSTONE: trespass of a, 141.

'FLAITH'-CHIEF:

- i.e.*, an original landowner, 316.
- the grades of, 321.

'FLAITHE-FINE'-PERSONS: i.e. tribe divisions, 283.

'FLAITHM'-PERSON: 346.

description of, 351.

FLAT-MARK: description of, 143.

FLAX: in good arable land, 277.

FLUTE PLAYERS: part of a king's distinction, 339.

'FOACH-TUAITHE'-TRESPASS: of cows, 125.

'FOCHLOCC'-POET: 357, 361.

'FODAER'-PERSON: 43, 285.

'FOESSAM': the custom of, i.e. of the adopted son, 207, 209.

'FOIRGE'-measure: 21, 127.

'FOLLSAIDH'-TRESPASS: 99.

FOOD: when 'eric'-fine falls on criminals, 241.

FOOD-RENT:

- of a last survivor, 303, 305.
- of an 'ogaire' chief, 307.

FOOLS: proverb as to, dividing neglect, 85.

FOOT: two hands in a, 277.

FORFEITURE:

- of cattle for illegal entry, 27.
- of stock by 'raitech' persons, 31, 33.

VOL. IV.

- FORGE: notice to be given at, when horses trespass, 107.
- 'FORRACH' MEASURE:
i.e., a measure of land containing about 552 yards, 139.
 six 'laits' in a, 277.
- 'FORUS': of a 'flaith' chief, 321.
- FOSTERAGE: of a woman, 63.
 half the price of, to be paid on marriage, 63.
- FOSTER-CHILD: wounding the, of a family, 245, 255.
- 'FOTHIA'-TRESPASS: 99.
 'smacht' fines for, 107.
- FOXES: 'smacht' fines for pet, 115, 121.
- FRATRICIDE: in the family, 293.
- FREEMAN: native, offences of, 153.
- FRIDAY:
 assigned for certain works, 217, 219.
 set aside by kings for horseracing, 335.
- FRUIT: blight of, proof of king's falsehood, 53.
 sowing and enjoyment of, how regulated, 169, 171.
- 'FUGITIVE: from the tribe not protected by 'nemedh,' 185.
- 'FUIDHER-GABHLA': 43.
- 'FUIDHIR'-TENANT:
 the tribe of inferior bondsmen, 39, 236, 237, 283.
 divisions of the, 287.
- 'FUILMAC'-PUPIL: 357.
- FURNITURE:
 of an 'ogaire,' 307.
 of a tenant resident, 307.
 of a 'boaire,' 309, 311.
- FURZE: a bramble-tree, 149.
- 'GABHAIL-FODAGNIAT'-DEFENDANTS: a tribe-division, 283, 285.
- GAP, see also CUTTING:
 trespass over a, by animals, 83, 87.
 breach over a, 127.
 every, to be closed, 155.
- GEESE:
 common pasturage of, 101.
 'smacht'-fine for, 115.
- 'GEILFINE'-CHIEF: 197.
- 'GEILFINE'-DIVISION:
i.e., a family division, 39, 167, 249, 259, 265, 283, 285.
 means 'white family,' 287.
 exact description of, 290, 291.
- 'GIALLNA'-SERVICE: 347.
- 'GIALLNA'-TENANTS: 321, 327.
- GIFTS:
 seven noble, 211.
 seven unlawful, 271.

- 'GLAISIN'-DYE-PLANT: probably woad, a characteristic of arable land, 276, 277.
- 'GLASFINE':
 a family division, 283, 285.
 means 'green family,' 287, 291.
- GOATS: ties of leather for, when herding, 87.
- GOODS: reciprocity of, not enforced by law in certain cases, 129.
- GOOSEBERRY-TREE: a bramble-tree, 149.
- 'GORMAC': a sister's son, 42, 291.
- GRADES:
 church and lay, 227.
 invisible precincts of various, 227, 229.
 difference between precincts of ecclesiastical, 229.
 chieftain, bound to entertain without asking questions, 237.
 seven divisions of social, 299.
 the oaths, binding contracts, guarantees, evidence, honor-price, reflections, etc., of social, 299, 336.
 take service for land, 307.
 proportionate stock of, 307.
 protect each other, 307.
- GRAINS:
 testing of, for smacht-fines, 95.
 three, to the inch, 277.
- GRASS:
 damage to, by cattle grazing, 49.
 injury to, decided by arbitrators, 49.
 compensation for damaged, 51.
 damaged, must be sued for before it grows again, 51.
 trespass by pigs, calves, etc., on, 109, 111.
- GREYHOUND: part of a chief's establishment, 327.
- GRINDING: the week days arranged for, 217.
- GRINDING-STONE: in a chief's house, 311.
- GUARANTEE:
 of an 'ogaire,' 307.
 of a 'boaire,' 309.
- HARLOT:
 nuptial present to a, 57, 209.
 'abad'-gains of a, shared by head of tribe, 63.
 contract of a, not binding, 209.
 a tribe-division, 291.
- HARPERS: part of a king's distinction, 339.
- HATCHET: requisite for making a strong fence, 73.
 in a chief's house, 311.
 'dire' fine for using, 315.
- HAWKS: 'smacht'-fines for, 115, 121.
- HAWTHORN: a common tree, 147.
- HAZEL:
 a chieftain tree, 147.
 white-, a shrub-tree, 147.
 what gives it dignity, 151.

HEADLANDS :

fine for running-over three, 137, 139.
definition of the, 139.

HEAT : i.e., sultriness, trespass in consequence of, 93, 105.

HEARTH : certain crimes go upon the nearest, 247, 249.

HEATH : a bramble tree, 149.

HEAVEN : men of, i.e., churchmen, 211.

HEIRS : proceedings of, in co-tenancy, 69.

HENCHMAN : description of a, 353.

HENS :

a hood necessary for, 87.
'smacht'-fine for pet, 115, 17, 119.
three trespasses by, 117.
rag-boots and spancels for, 119.

HERBS : sweet, characteristic of good arable lands, 277

HERB-GARDEN : regulations as to bees kept in a, 199.

HERD : trespass by a, how estimated, 109.

HERMIT : the inviolable precinct of a, 229.

HERONS : 'smacht'-fines for pet, 115, 121.

HIGHWAY : adds to the price of land, 279.

HIRE : land let out on, in case of a deserter, 135.

HIVES :

lots to be cast upon, in case of injury by bees, 179.
swarms from, how divided, 191.

HOG : the snout of a rooting, a dish at a chief's table, 311.

HOLLY :

a chieftain-tree, 147.
what gives it dignity, 151.

HONEY : found in good arable land, 277.

HONOR : how forfeited by a grade, 319.

HONOR-PRICE :

when given and by whom, 15, 47, 48, 49.
for bees, 201.
for violation of protection, 231.
for killing, wounding, 233, 235, 253, 255.
divisions of, in 'urrudhus'-law, 235.
without having absconded, 257.
Brehon must know tribe's, 285.
of a 'midboth'-man, 301.
of an 'ogaire' how estimated, 307.
of a 'boaire,' 309.
how graduated, 385, 387.

HORNBLOWERS : part of a king's distinction, 339.

HORSES :

the use of, in taking possession of land, 3, 5, 19.
the use of, in testing the trespass of swine, 97.
should be in stable at night, 97.
trespass of, 105, 107.
feeding of, in pound, 107.

- Host: cuttings made made in flying before a, 155.
- HOSTAGES: necessary for a king, 51.
- HOUND, see Dog.
- HOUSE:
- trespass by hens in, 117, 119.
 - description of an 'ogaire's', 305.
 - description of an 'boaire's', 309.
 - description of an 'mbruighfer's', 311.
- 'IARFINE':
- a family division, 43, 167, 243, 283, 285.
 - exact description of, 290.
 - commentary on the, 293.
- 'IDHA': a species of tree, conjectured to be a pine, 147.
- 'IDHNA'-PERSON: 345.
- description of, 349.
- IDIOT: contract of, with a sane person not binding, 209.
- IGNORANCE:
- does not increase 'dire' fine, 229.
 - meaning of, in cases of protection, 229.
- ILLEGALITIES: prosecuted by the Feini on three occasions, 33.
- IMBECILES: possession of land shall not be sued for by,
- IMPOTENCY: does not increase 'dire'-fine, 229.
- INADVERTENCE: does not increase 'dire'-fine, 229.
- INDEMNIFICATION: pledge of, by heirs in co-tenancy, 69.
- INCHES: six, in a hand,
- 'INCHIS': a house of, i.e., a house built for an aged man of the family, 305.
- 'INGEN AR MERAIBH':
- a family division, 283.
 - definition of, 285.
- INJURIES: to ditches, 221.
- INNATE RIGHTS: a hoard of bees, one of the, 195.
- 'INNFINE':
- a family division, 43, 167, 207, 283, 285.
 - exact description of, 290.
 - commentary upon the, 293, 295.
- 'INNTRIT'-MEASURE: six paces in a, 277.
- 'INNUA': a sub-division of family, 293.
- IRON: mine of, how valued, 279.
- ISLAND: no distress taken on, to which cattle are brought, 7.
- IVY: a bramble-tree, 149.
- JUDGMENTS:
- bee, 163.
 - of top and trunk of trees, 167, 189.
 - of drawing water across land, 167.
 - wood, 169.
- JUDGMENTS OF CRIMES: 241-273.
- JUGGLERS: part of a king's distinction, 339.

KILLING :

- necessary, 245.
- whole family liable for, 247.
- body-fine for, 247, 253.

KILNS :

- trespass of hens in, 117.
- using, without leave, an offence, 315.

KINGS :

- where no Brehon, every dispute is brought before the, 51.
- hostages, rent, smacht-fine necessary for a, 51.
- must be free from falsehood, betrayal, and unworth conduct, 51.
- falsehood of, 53.
- the three commons of a, 195.
- a gift to a, 211.
- extent of his inviolable precinct, 227.
- 'eric'-fine of a criminal on the, 241, 243.
- one of the social grades, 299.
- a 'tanaise' of a, 299.
- divisions of, 329, 331, 345.
- rights, benefits, spendings, pledging, actions, and hostings of, 333, 335.
- qualities necessary for, 335.
- seven weekly occupations of, 335.
- fastings of, 337.
- arrangements, etc., of houses of, 339.
- verses descriptive of, 341.
- the succession of, arranged by seniority, 373.
- for what qualifications selected, 377, 379.
- varieties and precedence of, 381.

KINSMAN :

- suing for 'eric'-fine, 261.
- seizure of cattle of, 265.
- liabilities of, for crimes, 265.

KITCHEN : breaking into a, 315.

KNEADING-TROUGH : used by a woman in taking possession, 9.

KNIVES : for reaping rushes, 311.

KNOWLEDGE : meaning of, in cases of protection, 229.

'LAIT'-MEASURE : six 'intrits' in a, 277.

LAKE :

- a boundary mark, 145.
- finding bees near a, 195.

LAMBS : common pasturage of, 101.

LANDS :

- on which there are plunderers, no distress, 7.
- estimated according to amount of stock and property, 39.
- title to, affects the descent to the son, 45.
- descent of, to sons from mothers, 45.
- division of, by tribe, 45.
- given up for roads, 45.
- 'cruib' or 'sliasta,' how dealt with, 45.
- refection, 49.
- division and fencing of, in co-tenancy, 71.
- trespass on, estimated by rent, 95.
- trespass by dogs on, 123.

LANDS—continued.

- subject to farm laws, 125.
- offer of, to a deserter, 137.
- profits of, 147.
- cutting of, a man-trespass, 151.
- certain cuttings of, not sued for, 155.
- trespass of bees on, 163.
- neighbouring, their rights as to bees, 165.
- swarms of bees go according to divisions of, 165, 173, 189.
- bees settling on, 191. See BEES.
- right of water in, 207, 211, 213.
- 'innfine' and 'deirbhfine,' 207.
- hard to conduct water over three, 215.
- price of water on certain, 213, 215.
- ditches made in, 221.
- a man is better than, 247.
- forfeited for crimes, 265, 269.
- shall not be sued for by imbeciles, lepers, 271.
- various divisions of, 277.
- characteristics of arable, 277.
- characteristics of weak, coarse, and deep, 277.
- measurement of, 277.
- price of various kinds of, 279.
- of an 'ogaire'-chief, 305.
- of a 'boaire'-chief, 309.
- of a 'mbruighfer,' 311.

LAWFUL GREEN:

- definition of, 195.
- finding a stray swarm of bees in a, 195.

LAWS:

- maxim as to constancy of old Brehon, 51.
- to be without, proof of king's falsehood, 53.

LAY-RECLUSE: three kinds of, 367.

'LEACLA': 151.

LEPERS: possession of land shall not be sued for by, 271.

'LETHFLAITHEM'-PERSON: description of, 351.

'LIAS'-HOUSE: i.e., a cow or sheep house, 313.

LINEN CLOTH: to wash foulness from a person's honour, 319.

LINTELS: the breaking of, 315.

'LIS'-FORT: fine for trespass on a, 313.

'LIS MARTRADH'-FORT:

- probably a churchyard, 86.
- trespass on a, 87.

LITERATURE: professors of, 355, 357.

'LOARG': 315.

'MAC AIRBE': 361.

'MACFUIMIDH'-POET: 357, 361.

MALLET:

- use of in making fences, 113.
- in a chief's house, 311.

MALT: a sack of, always in a chief's house, 311.

MAN:

who follows bees in their flight, his rights, 181, 183
 who has stained his weapon with blood, 185.
 who has fled from maintaining his father, 185.
 who has left plunder behind, 185.
 who watches a swarm of bees not his own, 191.
 who find bees in a tree in a lawful green, 195.
 who find bees in various other places, his share, 195
 'airlim'-trespass in flying from, 93, 95.
 trespass of, in co-tenancy, 139.
 is better than land, 247.

MAN-TRESPASS:

finer for, 83, 85, 87.
 various kinds of, 99.
 fine for, lies against hens, 117.
 by dogs, 123.
 description of, 147.

'MANACH'-PERSON: contract of a, not binding, 209.

'MANCHANE': 381.

'MANSLAUGHTER, see 'ERIC'-FINE:

necessary crime of, 245, 247, 249, 265, 269.
 treatment of one who has committed, 303.

MARRIAGE:

nuptial presents on, 61, 63.
 payments by women on, 63.

'MARSH'-MAN: 345.

description of, 355.

'MATERIES': 373.

MATRIMONIAL CONTRACT: a woman who has fled from, 185.

'MBRUGH-FHER'-MAN:

a division of the 'boaires,' 299.
 why so called, his position described, 311.

MEADOW: trespass into a profitable, 91.

MEASUREMENT: table of linear, 277.

MEERS, see BOUNDARY-MARKS.

'MERRAIGHE'-SWARM: of bees, 173.

'MIDBOTH'-MEN:

two kinds of, 301.
 description of, etc., 301, 303.

'MIDHLACH'-MAN: 345.

description of, 353.

MILK:

compensation for, where cattle are stolen, 271.
 forms part of food-rent, sick-maintenance, and reflections, 301, 307.
 a cask of, in a chief's house constantly, 311.

MILL:

trespass by hens in a, 117.
 ruin of a, a boundary mark, 143.
 cuttings made at the building of, 155.
 water free upon land near a, 215.

MILL—continued.

the rotation of work at the, 217, 219.
adds to the price of land, 279.

MILL-POND: ditch of a, 221.

MILL-RACE: ditch of a, 221.

MILL-TRIBUTE: 219.

MINE: adds to the price of land, 279.

MIRE: must be removed from roads in time of war and of a fair, 145.

MONASTERY: a way leading to a, how valued, 279.

MONDAY:

assigned for certain works, 217, 219.

set aside by kings for judgment, 335.

MONK: covenant of a, with abbot not binding, 55

MOOR: cows may trespass in a, 125.

MOTHER: lands of, how divided, 45, 47.

MOUND-MARK: description of, 143, 145.

MOUNTAIN:

one of the three commons of a king, 195.

adds to the price of land, 279.

MOUNTAIN-ASH: a common tree, 147.

MOUNTAIN-FIELD: trespass in, 79.

MOVABLES: liable first in payment of crimes, 247, 249, 265, 269.

'MUCLEITH' CHIEF: 323.

MUGS: in a chief's house, 311.

NECESSITY:

crimes of, such as killing a man in self-defence, 265.

excuses running-over headlands, 137.

excuses breaches, gaps, and cuttings, 155, 157.

crimes of, how paid for, 245, 247, 265.

NEEDLE: swearing from a, to a heifer, 301.

NEIGHBOUR: appraisement of cattle-trespass by a, 147.

'NEIMHE'-CATTLE: exempt from seizure, 265.

'NEIMHE'-PROPERTY: does not perish, 273.

'NEMBEOIL': 303.

'NEMCES': 359.

'NEMEDH'-PERSON: 7, 181, 183, 185.

of God, i.e., the ecclesiastical dignitary, 185.

of man, i.e., the lay chieftain, 185.

contracts against, not binding, 375.

shelter to, 383.

NOTICE:

service of, in taking possession of land, 3, 13, 15.

by women in taking possession of land, 3, 15, 23.

NOTICE TO QUIT: on a deserter, 133.

NUPTIAL PRESENTS:

to an 'eachlach'-person, 57.

NUPTIAL PRESENTS—continued.

- to a harlot for her divorce, 57, 209.
- to a woman, 57, 61.
- portions of, due to the head of tribe, 63.
- general distribution of, 63.

OAK:

- ancient, a boundary mark, 143.
- a chieftain tree, 147.
- what gives it dignity, 149, 151.

OATS: used for 'smacht'-fine.

OATHS:

- stake-fences settled by, 143.
- of various social grades, 301.

'OGAIRE'-CHIEF: 289, 299.

- why so named, 305.
- description of his property, his position, 305.
- his proportionate stock, and food-rent, 307.

'OGFLAITHEM'-PERSON: description of, 351.

'OGRATH': 279.

'OINMIT'-MAN: 345.

- description of, 353.

'OLLAMHS':

- a meeting of, 227.
- description of, 355.

'OLLAMH'-POET: description of, 359.

'OMAN'-PLANT: absence of, sign of good arable land, 277.

ONIONS: part of the food of a 'boaire,' 311.

ORATORY: cuttings made at the construction of, 155.

ORDEAL: test of, 285.

OXEN:

- common pasturage of, 101.
- feeding of, in pound, 107.

PACE: six feet in a, 277.

PALISADE:

- trespass by cattle over a, 125.
- trespass of, 139.

PASSAGE:

- trespasses and fines in respect of a, 141.
- co-tenant between two lands entitled to full, 157.

PASTURE LAND: trespass in, 79.

PENALTIES: see ERIC-FINE and SMACHT-FINE:

- in cases of unlawful distress, 9.
- in cases of entry on fenced lands, 25.
- for entering a chief's house, 313.

PENANCE: double precinct, a, 229.

PET ANIMALS: liability of owner for, and their trespasses, 121.

PIGS:

- a yoke necessary in herding, 87.
- trespasses of, 97, 99.

PIGS—continued.

- finer for trespass of, 99, 101.
- common pasturage of, 103.
- trespass by, 109, 111.

PILGRIMS:

- a cutting before, 155.
- bound to oppose certain contracts, 211.
- precinct of, 229.
- protection of, by the church, 235, 237.

PINE:

- a chieftain-tree, 147.
- what gives it dignity, 151.

'PINGINN': 119.PIRATES:

- a territory is required to defend itself against, 141.
- liability of service of attack and defence against, 145.

PLAIN: mark of, a boundary, 145.PLEBEIAN: protection of a, 233.PLEDGE:

- for bees, 163, 177.
- chief's, liable for crimes, 245.
- to redeem from prison, 247.
- of a woman to save her honor, illegal, 271.
- of distress illegal, 271.
- given by a man who sheds blood, 303.
- of an 'ogaire,' 307.
- of an 'boaire,' 309.

PLOUGH: in a chief's establishment, 311.PLUNDERINGS:

- 'smacht'-fines for, 233.
- incur 'dire'-fine, 271

POETS:

- a gift to a, 211.
- a meeting of, 227.
- precinct of a, 229.
- part of a king's distinction, 339.
- seven degrees of, 357, 359, 361.

POET-KING: 331.POND: see ROTATION AT THE MILL:

- Tuesday to the, 217, 219.
- a cooling, for cattle, adds to the price of land, 279.

POSSESSION:

- cases of unlawful, 269.
- violence does not separate, 269.
- finer for unlawful, 271.

POSSESSION OF LAND:

- means of taking lawful, 3.
- use of horses and witnesses in taking, 3, 5, 19.
- by women, 9, 11, 13, 15.
- rule of law in taking, 13.
- difference between a woman taking and a man taking, 15.

- POSSESSION OF LAND—continued. decision of Sencha as to woman taking, 15.
 notice by women before taking, 23.
 shall not be sued by imbeciles and others, 271.
- POUND: horses trespassing to be placed in, 107.
- PRECEDENCE: laws of, in family, tribe, and church, 373.
- PRECINCTS:
 the law of, 227-237.
 inviolable, how measured, 227.
 of various classes, 229.
- PRESCRIPTION:
 stake-fences settled by oath and, 143.
 period of, for a weir, 213.
- PRINCE: for what selected over a country, 377, 379.
- PRISON: a pledge as to, 247.
- PROFESSOR:
 when a, can be a surety for his pupil, 237.
 description of, 355, 357.
- PROMISES: to be estimated by power to fulfil, 37.
 security and collateral security for, 37.
 to pay debts, when forgiven, 39.
- PROPERTY:
 maxims as to giving away, 33.
 maxims as to buying, 33.
 of the tribe, how claimed and divided, 39.
 descent of, to a son, 45.
 when safe according to the Brehon, 59.
 movable, liable for certain crimes, 247, 249.
 division of, among the tribe, 285, 295.
- PROTECTION:
 the law of, 229.
 violation of, 231, 235.
 penalties for violation of, 231.
 as to reciprocal rights, 233.
 by the church, 235.
 by the church to culprits and pilgrims, 237.
 between co-grades, 307.
- PROPORTIONATE STOCK: 210, 211, 305.
 of an 'ogaire'-chief, 307.
 of a tenant-resident, 309, 315.
 of a 'boaire,' 313.
 given to tenants by chief, 315.
- PROVERBS:
 as to fools, 85.
 as to cows, 97.
 as to trespass, 127.
 as to paying of 'eric'-fine, 241.
 as to lands, 267.
 as to coarbs, 267.
- PUPIL:
 when a professor can be surety for his, 237.
 must perform certain services to his tutor, 236-7.

- QUAGMIRES : protection of cattle from, 101.
- RACK PINS : pledge of co-tenancy to be placed on, 75.
- RACK RENT : adopted son of a tribe gets, 291.
- RAIMENT : when 'eric'-fine falls on criminal's, 241.
- 'RAITECH'-PERSON :
 definition of, 29.
 possession of procedure and ejection of, 29.
 three sorts of, 31.
 forfeiture of stock by, 31, 33.
- 'RAITH'-RIGHT : 327.
- 'RATH' : 279.
- REFECTIONS :
 when due, 303.
 of an 'ogaire,' 307.
 of a tenant resident, 309.
 of a 'boaire,' 311.
- 'REIM'-MAN : 345.
- RENT : necessary for a king, 51.
 a calf the, for land taken till end of year, 93.
 land trespasses estimated by, 95.
- 'RIASCAIRE'-MAN : 355.
- RIGHT OF WATER : 207-223.
- RIVER :
 cattle going across a, a breach, 127.
 running-over a deep, 139.
 a boundary mark, 145.
 adds to the price of land, 279.
- ROAD :
 cattle going across a, a breach, 127.
 running-over a, 139.
 trespasses on, 141.
 liability as regards, 145.
 profits of, 147.
 one of the three commons of a king, 195.
 absconding criminal put upon the, 243.
 adds to the price of land, 279.
- ROBBERY : incurs 'dire'-fine, 271.
- 'ROIDH'-PLANTS :
 injury of, by hens, 117.
 used for dyeing crimson red, characteristic of arable land, 276.
- ROPE : in a chief's house, 311.
- ROTATION AT THE MILL :
 distribution of days of the week during, 217.
 verses setting forth, 217, 219.
- 'RUIRE'-TRESPASS : fines for, 81, 85, 127.
- RUNNING-OVER :
i.e., a species of trespass, 137.
 fine for, 137.
 three kinds of, 139.
 how estimated, fines for, 139.

SACK:

- a fine, 71, 85, 91, 105, 117.
- a measure, 107.
- of malt, charcoal, salt, 311.

'SAER'-STOCK: 327.

'SAER'-TENANTS: 197, 321, 327, 339.

SAGES: a meeting of, at Sliabh Fuaid, 227.

SAINT: the inviolable precinct of a, 229.

SALT: a sack of, always in a chief's house, 311.

SALTED MEAT: part of a chief's food, 311.

'SAMHAISC'-HEIFER: as a fine, 31, 83 (et passim).

'SAMSEISC FOCAIL': 353.

SANCTUARY:

- violation of, by cattle, 87.
- rule of, 231.
- law of, 235.
- of the church, 235, 237.

'SAOR'-COTTIERS: 381.

'SAOR-GIALUNA' SERVICE.

SATURDAY:

- assigned for certain works, 217, 219.
- assigned by kings for giving judgment, 335.

SAW: in a chief's house, 311.

SCARCITY: of corn, proof of king's falsehood, 53.

'SCOR'-LANDS: i.e., plain, or meadow lands, 227.'SCREPALL': 29, 75, 83, 163 (et passim).

'SCURTHUR': 383.

SEA:

- one of the three commons of a king, 195.
- adds to the price of land, 279.

SECURITY: or an 'ogaire,' 307.

'SEDS': 9.

- i.e.*, cattle, 29.
- as compensation for grass, 29.
- as compensation for stake-trespass, 145, 153.
- as compensation for cutting chieftain-trees, 147, 149.
- as compensation for cutting timber generally, 151.
- the returnable, 211.
- a precinct of, for every grade, 227.
- forfeited for crimes, 247, 259.
- purchase of stolen illegal, 271.
- value of eleven things expressed in, 279
- of an 'ogaire,' 305, 307.
- of a 'boaire,' 309.
- the various kinds of, 323, 325, 327.

'SENCLEITHE'-TENANTS: 321, 329, 351.

SERVING-POT: in a chief's house, 311.

SHEARS: in a chief's house, 311.

SHEEP :

- a shepherd necessary for, 87.
- should be in fold at night, 97.
- common pasturage of, 101.
- finer for 'airlim'-trespass on, 109

SHEET : Bees settling on a spread, 185.

SHELTER :

- against death, 237.
- against unlawful claim for debt, 237.

SHEPHERD : necessary for sheep, 87.

SHRINE : cuttings made at construction of, 155.

SHRUB-TREES :

- list of, 147.
- 'dire'-finer for, 147, 149, 151.

SICK-MAINTENANCE :

- the law of, 301, 303, 307, 311, 331, 333.
- what persons do not merit, 387.

SIEVE : used by a woman in taking possession, 9.

SINNERS : protected by the church, 235.

'SIR' : 33.

'SLIATA'-LAND, 15.

'SMACHT'-FINES :

- i.e.*, fine for violating the law, 109.
- pledges for, 79.
- paid quarterly, 79, 89.
- for trespass of animals, 83, 87, 89, 109, 111, 115, 117, 119, 121, 123,
- for instigation, 87.
- for winter trespass, 87, 89.
- statement of summer, 91.
- not paid in certain cases of trespass, 93, 95.
- testing of the, 95.
- oats used as, 95.
- for 'feis'-trespass, 105.
- for trespass of various kinds, 107.
- on co-tenants in the matter of a deserter, 131.
- for stake-trespass, 141, 145, 153.
- how many in a co-tenancy, 139.
- in a sacred wood, 151.
- for cuttings, 155.
- for swarms of bees, 177, 181.
- for plundering, wounds, killing, and cutting, 233, 235.
- sworn to, by 'midboth'-men, 301.
- what persons do not merit, 387.

'SNED' : i.e., probably a spear, 313.

'So' : 387.

SOAP : to wash foulness from a person's honour, 319.

'Soc' : 131.

SOCIAL GRADES : see GRADES, 299.

SOLDIERS : rule of protection in case of hired, 231.

VOL. IV.

SON:

- covenant of a, with father, not binding, 55, 209.
- reciprocal gifts of father and, 211.
- adopted, regulations respecting, 289.

SOUL: an offering for the, 211.

SPADE: requisite for making a trench, 73.

SPEAR:

- the cast of a, used as the measure of inviolable precincts, 227.
- for killing cattle, 311.

SPEAR-YOUTH: the shot of a rod cast by a, the measure of headland, 139.

SPINDLES:

- of wool, the fine for hen-trespass, 117, 119.
- in a chief's house, 311.

SPINDLE-TREE: a shrub-tree, 147.

SPITS: in a chief's house, 311.

SPRING: 'smacht'-fines payable in, 79, 89.

STAKES, i.e., fences:

- injury done by, 73, 75.
- how put into fences, 113.
- trespasses of, 141, 143.
- what settles the, 143.
- profit of, 145.
- 'dire'-fine for cutting, 145, 155, 157.

STEALING: (see also THEFT).

- bees kept in a herb garden or green, 199.
- bees kept outside a green, 201.
- bees from where they are settled, 203.
- in a chief's yard, 313.

STINGS: by bees, how paid for, 177, 179.

STIRABOUT: forms part of refectations, sick-maintenance, 301, 307.

STOCK-MARK: description of, 143.

STOLEN PROPERTY: covenant concerning, 57.

STONE:

- of worship, a boundary mark, 143.
- a monumental, a boundary mark, 143.

STONE-MARK: description of, 143.

STONE WALL:

- a bar requisite for making a, 73.
- dimensions of, 77, 113.

STRAND: running over a, 139.

STREAMLET: a boundary mark, 145.

'SUASDAMHA'-OX: 101.

SUCCESSION: laws of, 373-387.

SUMMER: smacht-fines payable in, 79, 89.

SUMMER GRASS LAND: trespass on, 81, 83, 97.

SUMMER MILKING PLACE: trespass on, 81, 83.

SUMMER MOUNTAIN:

- trespass on, 81.
- trespass on, by animals, 83.

SUMMER WOOD : trespass on, 81, 83.

SUNDAY : a king drinks ale on, 335.

SUPPLICATION : maxim of the Feini as to, 155.

SURETY :

liability of, 37, 39, 59.

'foessam' must be supported by, 207.

when a professor can be a, for his pupil, 237.

kinsman, when sued for 'eric'-fine, 259.

SWARMS : see BEES.

SWINE :

trespasses of, 87, 97, 99, 109, 111.

must be in sty at night, 97, 103.

finest for trespass of, 99, 109, 111, 121.

common pasturage of, 101, 103.

SWINEHERD : necessary in common pasturage, 103.

SYNOD : to turn a, out of his-fort proof of king's falsehood, 53.

'TAIRSCE'-TRESPASS :

finest for, 81, 85.

by animals, 83, 97, 139.

by bees, 163.

'TANAISE' : of a king, a social grade, 299.

TANIST : why so called, 321, 327.

'TAOIBHFINE'-DIVISION : 243.

'TARTHUSCAE' : i.e. the way over, 127.

TENANT RESIDENT :

description of a, 307.

proportionate stock of a, 309.

fixity of tenure for, on certain conditions, 309.

TERNAL COVENANTS : 55.

TERRITORY :

must defend itself, 141.

divided into seven parts, 143.

TERRITORY HOUSE : i.e. hospital, use of, 303.

TEST-TREE : a shrub-tree, 147.

THEFT :

finest for, 271.

receiver of stolen goods fined as for, 271.

incurs 'dire'-fine, 271.

THIEF :

a wandering, not protected, 189.

the denial of an old, does not separate possession, 269.

finest imposed on a middle, 271.

THUNDER : trespass in consequence of, 105.

THURSDAY :

assigned for certain works, 217, 219.

occupied by kings in marriage duties, 335.

TIMBER :

various classes of, 147, 149.

finest for cutting, 149.

'TINOL'-MARRIAGE-COLLECTION: one third of a woman's, necessary for marriage, 63.

'TIRCUMHAILE':

a piece of land, 96, 97.

how measured, 277.

six 'forrach' measures in breadth, twelve in length, 277.

TOOLS: list of, in a chief's house, 311

'TOTHLA'-TRESPASS: 99.

finer for, 107.

description of, 109.

TREES:

boundary marks, 143.

cutting, a man-trespass, 147.

list of common, 147.

list of chieftain, 147.

list of shrub, 147.

list of bramble, 149.

treatment of wounded, 149.

difference of, according to place, 151.

finer for cutting, 169.

the law of top and bottom of, 169, 171.

the swarming of bees into, 181, 183, 185.

TRENCH:

a spade requisite for making a, 73.

true dimensions of, 77, 113.

which is empty until floods of water fill it, 215.

TRESPASS:

of co-occupancy, 51.

of cattle, 75, 79, 81, 83, 85, 87.

'eric'-fine for, in co-tenancy, 75, 81.

'airlim' and 'feis', 79, 81, 85, 91, 93, 103, 105, 109.

lying down, 81.

of animals, 83, 85, 87.

without legal security, 89.

in consequence of a dog, man, heat, fear, or violence, 93.

on land, how estimated, 95.

of swine, 97, 109.

of calves and cattle, 111, 125.

of pet herons, deer, wolves, birds, and foxes, 115, 121.

of bees, 115, 117.

of hens, 115, 117.

how many, in a co-tenancy, 139.

of stakes, 141.

in respect of a passage, 141.

appraised by a worthy neighbour, 147.

'TRIATH'-KING: 345.

TRIBE:

fugitives from, cannot covenant, 55.

may rescind contracts and annul covenants, 55.

head of, nuptial presents due to, 63.

fugitive from, not protected by 'nemedh,' 185.

contracts dissolved by, 207, 209.

of the divisions of the, 285-295.

adoption by the, regulations, 289.

choice of a chief by, 377.

TRIBE-LANDS: see LANDS.

TRIBE PROPERTY:

- how claimed and divided, 39, 41, 45.
- descent of, to a son, 45.
- honour price, part of, 49.
- division of, 247, 259, 285-295.

TROUGHS: in a chief's house, 311.

TRUTH: to be without, proof of king's falsehood, 53.

'TUAITH': i.e., a territory, 287.

TUBS: in a chief's house, 311.

TUESDAY:

- assigned for certain works, 217, 219.
- kings play chess on, 335.

TURF-BOG: ditch of a, 221.

'UAITNE'-CHIEF: 345.

- description of, 351.

'ULACH'-PERSON: covenant of a, not binding, if alone, 55.

UNLAWFUL EXPULSION: case of, and fine, 7.

'URRADHUS' LAW: 27.

- divisions of honour-price according to, 235.

UTENSILS: list of, found in a chief's house, 311.

VENGEANCE:

- for the foster-child of the family, 255, 257.
- for a man of the 'deirbhfine'-division, 257.

VICTUALS: during co-tenancy work, 77.

VIOLENCE:

- trespass in consequence of, 93.
- does not separate possession, 269.
- engagement by, not lawful, 271.
- shall not prevail, 273.

VERBAL ENGAGEMENTS: keeping and dissolving, 207.

VESSEL:

- a milch cow, 164.
- a 'samhaise'-heifer, 164.
- a 'colpach'-heifer, 165.
- a 'dairt'-heifer, 165.

WAR: roads must be kept clean in time of, 145.

WATER:

- right of, in tribe lands, 207.
- 'cain'-law of, 211.
- price of, fixed, 213.
- free on certain lands, 215.

WAY-MARK: definition of, 145.

WEAPONS: carried by various persons, 361.

WEDNESDAY:

- assigned for certain works, 217, 219.
- assigned for greyhound coursing by kings, 335.

WEEDS: must be removed from roads in time of war and of a fair, 145.

- WEIR: 'cain'-law of the, 213.
- WELL, see ROTATION AT THE MILL:
 Monday to the, 217.
 a boundary mark, 145.
- WIFE:
 contract of a, without her husband not binding, 209.
 mutual gifts of husband and, 211.
 violation of protection in case of first, 231.
- WILD-PLACE:
 a finding-share in a, due to a king, 195.
 finding bees in a, 195.
- WILLOW: a common tree, 147.
- WINTER: 'smacht'-fines payable in, 79.
- WINTER-GRASS LAND: trespass on, 81, 83, 95, 97.
- WINTER MILKING-PLACE: trespass on, 81, 83
- WINTER MOUNTAIN-LAND: trespass on, 81, 83.
- WINTER WOOD: trespass on, 81, 83.
- WITNESSES:
 use of male, in taking possession of land, 5, 13, 15, 19.
 use of female, in taking possession of land, 9, 11, 13, 15.
- WOLVES:
 'smacht'-fines for pet, 115.
 service of attack and defence against, 145.
- WOMAN:
 taking possession of lands, 9.
 nuptial presents to a, 59, 61.
 fosterage of, 63.
 'tinol'-marriage collection of, 63.
 who has fled from matrimonial contract, 185.
 who has fled from maintaining her mother, 185.
 pledge of a, to save her honour, illegal, 271.
 nuptial present of a, who does not perform lawful duties, illegal, 271.
- WOOD:
 cutting down, a breach of farm-law, 125.
 cows may trespass in a, 125.
 sacred, 'smacht'-fine for cutting trees in a, 151.
 finding bees in a great, 195.
 adds to the price of land, 279.
- WOOD-AXE: in a chief's house, 311.
- WOOD-MARK: description of, 143.
- WORK: at the mill, 217, 219.
- WOUNDINGS: of cattle, 103.
 'smacht'-fines for, 233, 235.
 four necessary, 245, 253.
- YEAR: division of, for purposes of 'smacht'-fine, 79.
- YEARLING CALVES: spancel necessary for, 87.
- YEW:
 a chieftain-tree, 147.
 what gives it dignity, 151.

INDEX TO PROPER NAMES.

-
- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Adam, 267. | Cormac Mac Airt, 374 |
| Adamnan, 335. | Cuilt, 227. |
| Aengus Aigle, 17. | Dun Araill, 7. |
| Aengus Guabuadhbhtach, 267. | Doighin, 19. |
| Aicill, 267. | Eichne, 1. |
| Ailill, 359. | Eidgedh, 63. |
| Ailid Lethdherg, 17. | Eile, 6. |
| Aillel Olum, 10, 11. | Erin, 36, 227, 381. |
| Ainirgin, 10. | Feini, 5, 7 (et passim). |
| Albanach, 253. | Feinichus, 9. |
| Anluan, 17. | Felim Mac Crimthan, 336. |
| Ardmacha, 253. | Fergus Forcraidh, 9, 17. |
| Augustine, 363. | Fergus the Poet, 33. |
| Bri Anbui, 10. | Fiadh-Mudhain, 6. |
| Blai Brughaidh, 10. | Fithal, 265. |
| Brigh, 17, 39, 41. | Gabhal, 10. |
| Bregia, 265, 267. | Gabhair, 17. |
| Caisel, 6. | Inis Cathaig, 6, 7. |
| Cashel, 335. | Ledi, 17. |
| Cell Gabhrin, 7. | Madach, 17. |
| Cennfaeladh, 257. | Maer, 41. |
| Cethra, 10. | Magh Bregh, 227. |
| Cian, 11. | Main, 41. |
| Ciannacht, 9. | Mata Mor, 359. |
| Cinnia, 36. | Matech, 5. |
| Coarb of Lismore, 6. | Menn, 11, 17. |
| Cobhthach Caelbregh, 41. | Mesgaghra, 379. |
| Coirpre, 377. | Michuairt, 331. |
| Coirpri Lifechair, 267. | Midhe Minn, 10. |
| Conale Caech, 179. | Mochuta, 7. |
| Conall Cernach, 10. | Morann, 361, 385. |
| Conchobar Macnessa, 7. | Muredhach, 265. |
| Conn Ceteorach, 21. | Munster, 335. |
| Conn O'Cormac, 377 | Nairi, 383. |
| Connla, 11. | Nia Mac Anluan, 17. |
| Cormac, 265. | Ninne, 5. |

O'Cairpre Lifeachair, 349.
 Patrick, 227.
 Reth, 265.
 Rot-Adamairi.
 Seither, 17.
 Sencha, 10.
 Senchus Mor, 387.

Sliabh-Fnaidh, 227.
 Tadhg, 11.
 Teamhair, 19, 179, 267.
 Tir Maghain, 6, 7.
 Tir Mudhain, 6.
 Ui-Conail-Gabhra, 6.
 Uladh, 5, 19.

DUBLIN: Printed by ALEXANDER THOM, 87 & 88, Abbey-street, Printer to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.
 For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

[154.—750.—9/79.]

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

Thank you for your order !

This media compilation, our respective advertisements and marketing materials are protected under U.S. Copyright law. The Federal Digital Millennium Copyright Act and various International Copyright laws prohibit the unauthorized duplication and reselling of this media. Infringement of any of these written or electronic intellectual property rights can result in legal action in a U.S. court.

If you believe your disc is an unauthorized copy and not sold to you by Rockyguana or Ancestry Found please let us know by emailing at

<mailto:dclark4811@gmail.com>

It takes everyone's help to make the market a fair and safe place to buy and sell.