Brief Historical Sketch of the Town of New Gloucester

IN compiling these genealogical records of the descendants of Thomas Penney and Lydia Herring, it is deemed proper to preface them with a brief history of New Gloucester, Maine, the town to which this worthy couple emigrated immediately after their marriage in Cape Ann, it becoming their future home during the remainder of their life, and the birthplace of all their fourteen children.

New Gloucester had but just sundered the tie, by act of incorporation in 1774, that bound it to Gloucester, Massachusetts (Cape Ann), when they established their rude home on the little clearing in the virgin forest of the new town. The associations of their birthplace by the deep-sounding sea were ever fondly remembered and cherished, and appropriately are entitled to brief mention in these condensed notes. But to their descendants the town of New Gloucester will ever possess those peculiar charms that cluster around and make sweet the memories of home.

Home enshrined in the affections becomes the dearest spot on earth. The word home may include the whole town which is home's environment, with all its diversified beauty of hill and dale, forest and stream, and our love and admiration reaches out and embraces the whole. Hence it is true that

The hills are dearest which our childish feet
Have climbed the earliest; and the streams most sweet
Are ever those at which our young lips drank —
Stooped to their waters o'er the grassy bank.

Grand, picturesque Cape Ann enjoys the high distinction of being the birthplace of the Massachusetts Bay settlements. Here on its rugged soil,

Rockribbed and eternal as the sun, was planted the first colony of fishermen in 1623. A frame house built in England was shipped here in sections, and erected for the use of the colonists. The settlement was promoted by the Rev. John White of Dorchester, England, who is mentioned as the principal "instigator" of the scheme. The colony was governed by Roger Conant, whose sturdy virtues have immortalized his name.

In 1614, Capt. John Smith of the Virginia colony cruised around the headlands of Cape Ann, and so impressed was he with the beauty and grandeur of the place that he named it Tragabigzanda, in grateful remembrance of the Turkish maiden who is said to have saved his life by conniving at his escape from Turkish captivity. Soon after it was named by Prince Charles — probably at the suggestion of Smith — Cape Ann, in honor of his mother, Princess Anne of Denmark. Its Indian name was Wanashquomskgut.

Its incorporators in 1642 named it Gloucester, from the fact that a majority of the settlers were from the ancient city of Gloucester in England, and they desired to perpetuate the associations and fond memories of their home-land across the sea.

The Gloucester of England was the Caer Glow of the ancient Britons, the Colonia Glevum of the Romans, and Glean Caaster of the Saxons, whence its English name Gloucester, pronounced Gloster.

Emphatically, New Gloucester in Maine is the legitimate offspring of Gloucester in Massachusetts. In 1736 the Great and General Court of Massachusetts Bay granted to sixty of the inhabitants of Gloucester, Massachusetts, a township “of the contents of six miles square, on the back of North Yarmouth, in the eastern parts.” The conditions of the grant were “That the said New Town be laid out into sixty-three equal shares, one of which shall be for the first settled Minister, one for the Ministry, one for the School, and that on each of the other sixty shares the Petitioners do within five years from the confirmation of the Grant, have settled one good family, who shall have an House built on his house Lott of Eighteen feet square and seven feet stud, that on each Right or grant have Six acres of Land brought to and plowed, or brought to grass, and fitted for mowing, that they settle a Learned Orthodox Minister, and build and finish a convenient Meeting House for the Public Worship of God, and the Committee are hereby directed to take Bond of each Settler of Forty Pounds, for the faithful complying and performing the Conditions of Settlement and in case any of the said Settlers fail of Performing the afore-said condition then his or their Right, Share, or Interest in said Town to revert to and be at the Disposition of the Province.”

In the early settled towns of the Province of Maine, Gloucester furnished many immigrants, and the new township of New Gloucester — called simply “New Township” until 1738, when the proprietors officially named it New Gloucester — as doubtless anticipated by the incorporators, was principally settled by people from Gloucester (Cape Ann).

Following is appended a list of the names of the proprietors of New Gloucester, with the number of lot drawn in the first division, February 7, 1738 :

The primeval forest of New Gloucester first resounded to the ax of the settler, Jonas Mason, in 1739, on the easterly slope of beautiful Harris Hill, in the center of the town, the chosen locality for the initial settlement. It was an ideal spot, embellished by nature with a lavish hand, in exquisite beauty of landscape. The settler, from the door of his log house, looked out upon the vast sea of virgin forest, broken only by the great meadow which lay at his feet, on which waved the rich grasses waiting for the scythe of civilization, and through which wound its sinuous way the placid Wescustogo (Royall's River) ready to float the king's masts to tide water — Stevens' Brook — in close proximity to the chosen lot for the public building, which should turn the wheels of the saw- and grist-mill. The rich virgin soil that waited but the touch of intelligence to make it yield in munificent abundance the life-sustaining cereals, inspired and swelled with emotion the heart of the hardy and intrepid emigrant from the rockbound soil of Cape Ann, with a cheering and hopeful future for himself and family.

In 1738, John Millett was employed by the proprietors "to cut & make a good way from Northyarmouth to New Gloucester through the Town up to the spot made choice of for a Meetinghouse twelve feet wide, making causeways and fixing it fit for a cart and horse. Also to build a good bridge over the river and insure the same for one year. The proprietors paying said Millett one hundred and twenty pounds."

In 1739, the road and bridge was finished at a cost much exceeding the estimate, for which they voted the contractor several allowances, "considering he has a hard bargain."

At a meeting of the proprietors held February 26, 1739, they voted to pay to each proprietor who would "in the spring go forward with a settlement for three years thirty Pounds," and "twenty Pounds to those that would go the second year." "And all that will go the third shall have Ten Pounds." From this year until 1744, they employed energetic measures to settle the town, by building roads and bridges, and the erection of a sawmill on Stevens' Brook, with a few frame houses, all the while offering liberal bounties to settlers.

While these vigorous endeavors to found a township were being prosecuted with some gratifying degree of success — evidenced by the echoing strokes of the woodman's ax, that broke the solitude of the forest; the curling smoke of the settler's cabin; the "clearing," that let in the sunlight of heaven to kiss the virgin soil, shadowed for untold centuries by its leafy canopy, and fat for the hand of the husbandman—the French and Indian war, like a furious tempest, burst upon them, and the wild war-whoop of savagery resounded where civilization had begun its beneficent work.

New Gloucester was the furthest inland settlement of Maine. In but few places save on the narrow belt of coast settlement did the smoke of the log cabin of the intrepid settler ascend to tell the presence of a civilized family. This was the extreme point of inland settlement until the British banner floated over the citadel of Quebec.

The sawmill with the homes of the settlers were burnt they escaping as best they could to their former homes or other towns on the seaboard that were garrisoned, suffering the loss of all their hard-earned toil. For five years the new town lay waste—a desolation, a prey of the Indians and elements, for what the Indians could not destroy, kindly nature sought to restore to its original state, and thus was destroyed what they had so laboriously built.

Undaunted by these reverses the determined proprietors petitioned the General Court for longer time to comply with the grant conditions, which was granted, and they went on with an unbroken resolution to develop and settle their township by voting on the eleventh of April, 1753, to build a meeting-house, employing Mr. John Roberts (Mr. prefixed to a man's name at that date meant that he was held in high esteem), "to see it done by the last of November next." It was "to be 25x35x13 feet stud." They "warned delinquents that unless they paid their behindments their rights would be exposed for sale" and offered "fourteen Pounds old Tenor to any proprietor who would go down to New Gloucester and build on his lot a Loghouse." Attempts made to rebuild the "great bridge" which a freshet had carried away were thwarted by the Indians.

The meeting-house (blockhouse*), begun in the fall of 1753, was finished in the spring of 1754, under the supervision of Mr. John Roberts who had for workmen John Stinchfield, William McLane, — Huston and Benjamin Roberts.

They, like the builders of the walls of Jerusalem, labored with their weapons of defense by their side, while they erected what was for six long years the fort, the church, and the home, of the settlers of New Gloucester.

The armament of the blockhouse consisted of two swivel guns, twenty-five pounds of powder and seventy-five pounds of lead. Captain James Proctor of Woburn, Massachusetts, with a force of six soldiers constituted the garrison for this year. For the next four years, or until the fall of Quebec, an abstract from Col. Isaac Parsons' "Account of New Gloucester" will show with what perils a foothold was maintained in this fair town. He says :

The proprietors built in the center of the town a strong fort and garrison, and hired men (with such as intended to settle) sufficient to defend it against any force that could in any probability be brought against it. This they continued to do with the assistance of the Province, who put them upon half pay and allowance: they being obliged to assist in keeping a strong scouting party from Saco to Fort Weston, now Augusta, on the Kennebec; at which two places were strong forts, and soldiers kept by the Province, during the French war, or until the year 1760, when Canada was taken by the English. During this time two men

* The term blockhouse is derived, not from the construction of the garrison, usually built of hewn timber dovetailed at the angles, but from a heavy block, hung with hinges on the inside so as to be instantly swung into the opening that served for a window, upon indications of an attack by the Indians. The blockhouse at New Gloucester was constructed of hackmatack.

The cut on opposite page represents the typical blockhouse of Maine. It was built in 1754, the same year as the one at New Gloucester. It is yet standing at the junction of the Kennebec and Sebasticook rivers in Winslow, Maine.

were taken prisoners, belonging to the fort, and carried to Canada, and one was killed and scalped in the lower part of the town after which the Indians withdrew, and the settlers began to move out of the garri-on and build log houses on their lands, and clear the same with more expedition.

Before they had not been able to clear or raise anything, only as the men went altogether armed to their work, within reach of the shot of the large swivel guns of the fort; keeping good sentinells of men and large dogs, and leaving the women to keep the fort.

Of the men that kept the fort in said war time or part of the time, the following persons with their families became the first settlers,* viz.: John Stinchfield, David Millet, William Stevens, Humphry Woodbury, Samuel Worthley, Benjamin Hammon, John Megguire, John Stinchfield, Jr., Horton Mitchells, Capt. Nathaniel Eveleth, William McLane and William Stinchfield; all of whom were born in this country, except the first, making in the whole twelve families.

To add further to the perplexities of these persistent founders of New Gloucester, the ghost of an old Indian deed given by Robin Hoode, Derumquen, Abomhamman, Weroumby and Roben, Sagamores, in 1673 conveying "two miles in width on each side of the Wescustago River from the first fall to the head of the river every branch and creek thereunto belonging," to Thomas Stevens of Kennebec. Bartholomew Gedney, a magistrate and land speculator of Salem, Massachusetts, became possessor of this purchase and it descended to his heirs, who sold portions of it to people in Boston and London, England. A long litigation followed, commenced by the claimants in 1733 and fought by the proprietors of North Yarmouth and New Gloucester until 1748, when the claimants' titles, based on the old Indian deed of 1678, were declared invalid. The boundaries of this deed to Stevens contained "about a hundred thousand acres" and had the claimants established their title it seems very probable that New Gloucester would not have had so early and happy a settlement.

* First permanent settlers.

The fall of Quebec brought peace to the settlement, and the tide of emigration flowed strong and steady from the mother town to her daughter in the wilds of the Province of Maine, and roads, mills and frame houses began to be built and the "wilderness to blossom as the rose."

In 1763, November 22, the proprietors held their first business meeting at the blockhouse in New Gloucester, all their previous meetings having been held in Gloucester, Massachusetts. The records were removed here and the following new board of officers chosen: moderator and treasurer, Samuel Merrill clerk, Isaac Parsons; prudential committee, Jonathan Tyler, Daniel Merrill and William Harris; collector, Nathaniel Eveleth; survey of roads, William Harris.

The next year they built a schoolhouse in the center of the town and hired a schoolmaster "upon the proprietors' cost."

On the sixteenth day of January, 1765, the crowning act of the grant conditions was complied with by "settling a learned Orthodox minister," the Rev. Samuel Foxcroft of Boston, a graduate of Harvard College, son of Rev. Thomas Foxcroft, pastor of Chauncey Street church, Boston. This was a memorable event in the annals of the town. It was a joyful occasion. They had surmounted every obstacle, and founded a town on a sure foundation, which no legal technicality could overthrow. They could now convey the soil to the settler with an assurance, wanting in some towns in the province at that date, that they would not be "warned off" by some future "claimant," and thus lose what they had expended, or pay for their farm a second time.

Their estate and the occasion justified the liberal outlay of the proprietors for the ordination of the sum of "twenty-six Pounds thirteen shillings & four pence."

"A" — says Parson Smith of Portland, who assisted — "jolly ordination; we lost sight of decorum." The "we" implies a confession on the part of the ministers; nothing is said about the decorum of the little church which consisted of only eight male members, and whose house of worship was the blockhouse. Their names were John Tufts, Jabez True, Daniel Merrill, Moses Woodbury, William Stevens, Eben'r Mason, Peleg Chandler, and the pastor.

Mr. Foxcroft was the sole religious teacher for twenty-eight years, or until 1793, when he voluntarily laid down his charge. He was a minister of talent and education, honored and respected for his high moral characteristics. He died in New Gloucester, March 2, 1807, aged seventy-two years. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Jonathan Scott of Minot, Maine, March 9, from Isaiah 25: 8, and contains more than fourteen thousand words.*

In 1766, the third and fourth divisions of lots were drawn; in 1767, the fifth or intervale division; in 1773, the sixth division, and in 1790 the seventh and last.

In 1770, January 1, the proprietors held an important meeting at the blockhouse, from whence they "voted to adjourn to the house where Deacon William Stevens (called in other places Esquire Stevens) dwelleth by reason of the cold." Here they voted to build a meeting-house, raising by the subscriptions of sixty persons seven hundred and one pounds "old tenor." "A penalty of the sum of five Pounds of Lawful Money" was voted to be collected of delinquent subscribers. Subsequent records indicate that some subscribers paid neither subscription or penalty. The proprietary held their first business meeting in it January 7, 1773, elected a moderator, and immediately "adjourned to Col. Allens by reason of the cold."

* The sermon was written several months after delivery and published.

In 1798, it was still unfinished, owing probably to the heaven of religious toleration which had begun to strongly assert freedom of conscience in religious worship, which culminated in open rebellion before the close of the century. It is probable that it was not entirely completed until after the proprietors relinquished all their right and title to it in 1802, and it became the property of the First Parish, with the only reservation that the town should use it for town meetings, and the grounds around it for a "training field, Pound, Stocks, and a whipping post!"

In 1790, "The Baptist Religious Society of New Gloucester and Gray" was incorporated by an act of the General Court. This society was divided in 1803, and incorporated under the name of "The Baptist Society of New Gloucester."

In 1794, April 19, the "Society of Shakers" was organized, which has been continuous to the present time. They are people respected and esteemed for their integrity, quiet and industrious habits. They are agriculturists and manufacturers.

In 1805, the "First Universalists Society of Christians in New Gloucester" and the "Freewill Antipedo Baptists Society of New Gloucester" were incorporated.

In 1818, David Nelson, Isaac Cross and thirty others, certified to the town clerk that they were members of an "Unincorporated Particular Baptist Society" which had for a religious teacher Elder Robert Low of this town. This society was afterward known as the "Calvinist Baptist Society of New Gloucester."

In 1774, the proprietors made provision for a cemetery by voting "to give up the common that lays about the Block House" (containing six acres) to the owners of adjacent lots, "upon condition that Dea. William Stevens sell the Town an acre and a half for a burying yard in the most convenient place on his lot for the sum of four pounds L. M. as he now saith he will." The conveyance was made to the town in 1793, thus changing the original plan of having the church and churchyard contiguous, and on the public or "common" land. Here within hearing of the melody of Stevens' Brook, the "rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep," laid to rest, some of them, under the protecting guns of the blockhouse, with only a rough field-stone to mark their grave. Enlarged, this is yet the most attractive burying-place in the town.

The act incorporating the Plantation of New Gloucester into a town was passed by the General Court, March 8, 1774.

In 1792, New Gloucester became a half shire-town with Portland, and the Courts of General Sessions of the Peace and of Common Pleas sat regularly here on each year until 1805.

The old blockhouse, so intimately associated with the early settlement of the town, and around which clustered so many tender memories, having fallen into disuse, it was by the thrifty proprietors in 1778, "set up at auction and bid off by Capt. John Woodman for seven bushels of merchantable corn." He moved it to his place and converted it into a hog-house where for a great many years it served for this useful but ignoble purpose. During the long eight years of Revolutionary war "that tried men's souls" New Gloucester stood firm on the patriot side. No town in the province made greater sacrifices or was more true and loyal to the cause of liberty. Upon the first news of the battle of Lexington they called a town meeting by a personal notice by the selectmen in the forenoon, and assembled together in the afternoon and "determined to have twenty men in readiness for service at the shortest notice, and that those who go shall have their labor done every week faithfully, while they were gone, and their wages ; and be billited on the road free."

On May 21, 1776, they voted "That if the Honorable Congress should, for the safety of the Colonies, declare them independent of Great Britain they will solemnly engage, with their lives and their fortunes, to support the Congress in the measure." Two companies of infantry were organized, commanded respectively by Captains Isaac Parsons and William Harris.

In the war of 1812-15 the sentiment of the town was in opposition to the war, and they petitioned the Legislature "to interpose their influence with the General Government to raise the embargo and repeal the several laws relative to the same." Notwithstanding the preponderance of sentiment against the war they "discountenanced all rebellious opposition to government, relying on constitutional remedies for correcting the manifold and aggravated evils endured," and voted by a large majority, July 24, 1812, "to make the pay of soldiers equal to ten dollars a month."

The topography of New Gloucester presents a beautifully diversified surface of hill and vale, without any very lofty hills or deep valleys, Bald Hill in the northern corner of the town is the highest eminence. The view from Harris Hill is exceedingly beautiful and seldom equaled, overlooking the great meadow through which winds Royall's River, the principal stream of the town, having its source in the northwest corner of the town from Sabbath-day Pond, which is two miles long by half a mile wide, and flowing out of the town at its southwest corner. There is much good intervale land and the uplands are generally a rich, deep loam, producing large crops of hay, a product for which the town is especially noted.

Rev. Doctor Paul Coffin, first settled minister of Narraganset No. 1 (Buxton, Maine), passed through New Gloucester October 27, 1797. In his diary he says : "New Gloucester is a rich town. Here are good buildings and farms. Br. Foxcroft is employed in transcribing old authors, as 'Owen on Prayer' and 'Shepard on the Parable of the Ten Virgins,' etc."

I perhaps cannot better close this brief sketch of New Gloucester than by quoting from the speech of Hon. John J. Babson of Gloucester, Massachusetts—historian of Cape Ann—delivered at the centennial anniversary of the first town meeting after incorporation, celebrated September 7, 1874, on the site of the blockhouse—and a poem read on that occasion by Jabez H. Woodman, A. M., one of New Gloucester's most noted schoolmasters, descriptive of the first town meeting in 1774.* Mr. Babson says :

I hardly know where to begin in speaking of the early settlement of New Gloucester. I do not know as I can add anything to your knowledge regarding these hardy, worthy, wonderful men, brought up in the wild woods, about one hundred and thirty years ago. They were not ordinary men ; of that I am convinced from my investigations and my knowledge of families of my own town and other towns in New England. They were among the most influential and best families of the parent town, and they are worthy all the respect and regard we can show them.

THE FIRST TOWN MEETING.

In seventeen hundred and seventy-four,
On the seventh of September,
Our ancestors in council met ;
Their votes we well remember.

And first in order Simon Noyes
Was chosen moderator ;
Who knows but he presided well
As any legislator ?

* From T. H. Haskell's "Centennial History of New Gloucester."

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

Capt. Nathaniel Eveleth,
For town clerk was selected ;
No better choice from all the town
Could sure have been expected.

For two and forty years he served,
Deserving special honor ;
And this he had by vote of thanks,
Quite near New Glo'ster Corner.

Selectmen and assessors now
Squire Simon Noyes is chairman,
Moses and Samuel Merrill next,
And each no doubt a fair man.

Col. Isaac Parsons, treasurer,
Was a man of stern look, sir
I've seen him once ; I know 'tis so,
And have it not from book, sir.

For town collector, Woodman, John,
(A kind of rara avis)
Was pitched upon, but wouldn't accept ;
So whipt in Abel Davis.

Next comes the wardens, who preserve
Silence profound on Sunday,
In that big church whose belfry high,
Made us quite dizzy one day.

Josiah Smith and Peleg Chandler
Were wardens then appointed,
To flourish poles on Sabbath day,
And thus keep things well jointed.

Be it known to Merrills everywhere,
Whether they in earth or moon are ;
New Glo'sters tything-man the first Was Moses Merrill, Junior.

Three road surveyors greet our vision ;
And first is Jacob Haskell ;
Then Wm. Harris, Abel Davis.
But "nary one" a rascal.

And who's the sealer of weights and measures ?

'Tis Deacon Daniel Merrill,
Adjusting every scale in town,
And bushel, peck and barrel.

Does vane upon the steeple rod
Point out the wind and weather ?
And didn't Sam'l Parsons point
The way of scaling leather ?

Sir Robert Bailey o'er the hill
'Bout two miles from the river,
Did serve, that year, most faithfully
A loyal, good field driver.

Jeremiah Thoits and Payne Elwell
Were "hog reeves" duly chosen ;
They took the oath, and drove the swine,
I guess now, by the dozen.

The precious names here brought to view,
To History's page belonging,
Are mentioned with unfeigned respect,
With no intent of wronging.

Peace to their ashes — every one !
May their descendants flourish,
And children's children call them blest,
As long as earth shall nourish.

The spirit and enterprise of town-founding manifested itself in the next generation, when, in 1800, Col. Joseph E. Foxcroft, of New Gloucester, son of Rev. Samuel Foxcroft, bought of the Bowdoin College land grant a township of seventeen thousand nine hundred and fifteen acres in Piscataquis County, paying for it seven thousand nine hundred and forty dollars, about forty-five cents per acre. John Spaulding was the first settler, moving his family in 1806. To him was born a son April 16, 1806, the first birth in the new township, and named Joseph Foxcroft Spaulding. In 1812, the township was incorporated, and took the name Foxcroft in honor of its founder, who in return for the compliment presented the town with one hundred dollars' worth of books for a public library. He closed up his proprietorship in 1827 by selling at auction what land remained unsold. Some New Gloucester people settled here and in the adjoining town of Guilford.

Explanation.

THE children of Thomas Penney and Lydia Herring that arrived at maturity and married were twelve. They are each considered in the regular order of their birth, respectively ; beginning at the firstborn and carried down to the latest generation before the next in order of birth is taken up, making twelve sections.

All names are numbered on the margin consecutively, and a number enclosed in parenthesis, thus (2), denotes that further on the same number will be found in large figures placed in the middle of the line so as to strike the eye at a glance, and under these figures the history and children of the person are given.

Grandchildren are placed a little further in from the margin.

Lineal descendants have Christian names only given, all others have full name with surname in parenthesis. The small figures at the end of names indicate to what generation they belong.

Abbreviations are, b., born, m., married, unm., unmarried, d., died, do., ditto.

By observing these directions the scheme of the genealogy will be easily understood. All names in the book are indexed to facilitate the finding of any desired name.

Origin of the Name of Penney and Notices of Emigrant Settlers.

SURNAMES first began to be used at about the time of the Norman conquest in 1066. They became a necessity to distinguish one person from another of the same name. They are derived from animals, birds, fishes, minerals, plants, flowers, trees, costumes, seasons, trades, money, professions, names of places, colors, and from epithets of ridicule and nicknames, habits and qualities.

The name Penney, variously spelt in ancient documents as Pinny, Penne, Peney, Pinney, Penny, and lastly Penney, is undoubtedly of very ancient origin, possibly springing from one of the earliest of English coins, called by the Saxons a Penny. Both the names Penny and Herring are represented in English heraldry, and Long's "Royal Descents" is authority for the statement that "the English Penny family quarter the arms of the Black Prince (Edward Prince of Wales) rightfully, and that the royal family could not do this not being descended in the elder line."

The Christian name "Thomas" seems to have been a favorite with the English families who first emigrated to this country, bearing the name of Penney. In 1633, Thomas Penney* came to America with the Massachusetts colony. Descendants reside in New York.

A Thomas Penney† settled in Cape Ann in 1652, lived and died there in about 1692. York Deeds reveal the presence of a Thomas Penney in Barwick, Maine (Berwick), as witness to a receipt, November 14, 1702. (Book VI, Fol. 38.)

Thomas Penney, at a town meeting in Kittery, Maine, had a grant of land voted him in 1703, which he deeded in 1710 to Charles Frost. (Book VII, Fol. 162.) In Maine Wills, page 802, Thomas Penney is spoken of as having land adjoining Daniel Morrison of Wells. Date of will 1756.

There is a tradition that there was a Thomas Penney shipwrecked off the coast of Wells, who, escaping the wrath of the sea, settled here, becoming the progenitor of a numerous branch of the Penney family. There were six Revolutionary soldiers of this name who enlisted from this town, viz.: Allen, Pelatiah, George, Salathiel, Abraham and Benjamin. The town of Wells, Maine, was settled in 1640.

The Thomas Penney of Cape Ann who settled in New Gloucester, Maine, in 1778, and whose descendants only are the subject of this genealogy, probably had his ancestry in the Cape Ann descendants of the Thomas Penney who settled there in 1652, a tailor by trade. He was probably an emigrant from Gloucester, England, as many of the early settlers of Cape Ann were from that city.

He bought a house and three acres of land of Thomas Bray and a house and house lot of Thomas Jones. The first he sold back to Bray. In 1658, he bought land at Little River, and in 1679 had a grant next to William Haskell's land. These notices indicate that his residence was in the westerly part of the town. (His name appears on a map of Gloucester, showing location of early settlers.) His wife Ann died April 26, 1667. He next married Agnes Clark, (widow of Edmand Clark, who was town clerk for eight years), June 15, 1668, who died Feb. 23, 1682. He was again married, May 17, 1682, to Joan Braybrook. He died about 1692, leaving a daughter Joan, who married Thomas Kent, March 28, 1658, and is the only child mentioned in his will. Persons of this name lived in town early in the next century, between whom and the preceding it would be natural to suppose that a connection of blood existed.*

At a court for the Probate of wills held before the Honored Batholomew Gedney, Esqr., 3d Oct. 1692, The last Will & Testament of Thomas Pinney, late of Gloucester deceased, was proven and approved.†

[Envelope 21248, Essex Co. Probate Office, Salem, Mass.]

Real estate transactions recorded at Salem (then shire-town) show that he sold land to Joseph Eveleth in Gloucester in 1669. And to Rev. John Wise of Ipswich, fourteen acres of marsh land in 1685. He was made a Freeman May 15, 1672.

It seems very probable that this Thomas Pinney should have left descendants who perpetuated the name down into the next century, but records to make a continuous chain of descent have not been found. Town records show the marriage of Thomas Penny to Miriam Elwell in Gloucester, Massachusetts, February 15, 1721, and Thomas Penny, Jr., to widow Sarah Tucker, September 4, 1749. (Our Thomas Penney, who settled in New Gloucester, Maine, was born in 1750 in Gloucester, Massachusetts.) If Thomas Penney, Jr., was born in 1722, he at the time of his marriage with Sarah Tucker would have been twenty-seven years old, and it would be perfectly in order for him to be, the father of a son Thomas born in 1750, who it is supposed, was the progenitor of the New Gloucester families.

Thomas Penney of New Gloucester.

For obvious reasons this genealogical record will begin with the Thomas Penney, born in 1750 at Gloucester, Massachusetts (Cape Ann), with whom we are in touch, and know something positive of his history, leaving antecedent generations to some future gleaner, who will have the same field as myself with data here gathered.

The first historical notice of Thomas Penney¹ is his Revolutionary war record, which is as follows :

The next recorded notice we have is a deed of land bought in New Gloucester, Maine, dated June 4, 1778. It was conveyed by Thomas Dinsmore, "Taylor, of Northyar-mouth County of Cumberland & State of Massachusetts Bay" to Thomas Penny of New Gloucester, yeoman. The consideration was "two hundred & sixty-six Pounds & Thirteen Shillings and four Pence." It was a "One hundred acre Lot Number Twenty-five in the third Division of Lots in New Gloucester."

Deed is witnessed by Benjamin Herring and William Truc. Was acknowledged September 14, 1778, and recorded at Portland in book 10, page 272, February 17, 1779.

This lot is in the southerly corner of the town, the Maine Central Railroad passing over it at the Penney crossing, so called. New Gloucester records show that he "Intended" marriage with Lydia Herring, November 14, 1778, and an old family record gives the date of the marriage, December 10, 1778. It was probably consummated in Cape Ann, perhaps by Rev. Eli Forbes, D. D., who was at that date pastor of the First Parish church. It is current in the family that he transported his bride and household goods to their new log house home, in the wilderness of New Gloucester, on an ox-sled, guided by spotted trees on the long, toilsome journey from Cape Ann to New Gloucester, in the month of December. It seems probable that he made a clearing, and built a log house during the summer of 1778, returning to Cape Ann in the fall, marrying, and immediately moving back to his future home.

These events transpired, it will be noted, midway of the Revolutionary war. People were poor, terribly poor, traces of which still exist in Gloucester, in that locality known as "the deserted village." As a matter of history, Gloucester had, during the first campaign, upward of two hundred and twenty men in the field, and during the war there were twenty-three privateers fitted up and sailed from that port, ten of them prior to 1778. Privateering, notwithstanding its perils, was attractive.

Mr. Penney was twenty-five at the beginning of the war. The Herrings were mariners—sea captains. Privateering was largely a private enterprise, and hence little or no official records. It is known that the father-in-law of Mr. Penney, Benjamin Herring, lost his life in the service. From fragments of legendary history in the family, and the fact that our ancestor, Thomas Penney, had the cash to pay down for his farm (there is no record of a mortgage) leads to the conclusion that he was in the privateer service, and that the continental money he paid Mr. Dinsmore was “prize money.”

Tradition has it that the log house was occupied for about fifteen years for a dwelling, the major part of their children being born in it. In 1793, a frame house was finished, and into it moved the wide, twin cradle in which were the new-born twin innocents, Aaron and Mark. This house was taken down in 1838.

This cut represents the quaint “bull’s-eye” glass that was over the outside doors of the house, one pane of which, now in the possession of Mrs. M. A. Burnell of Sebago, Maine, is a cherished memento of our ancestor and the house he built.

This part of the town when they settled was a howling wilderness, in which roamed various kinds of wild beasts. Mrs. Penney once in passing through the dense forest on horseback, with two of her children, had the rude bridle path disputed by a large black bear. Dismounting, she made such warlike demonstrations that bruin beat a retreat, and she, in possession of the way, passed on. The saddle on which it is said she used to ride is now a prized relic in possession of Mr. Walter A. Penney of Brooks, Maine.

From town records it appears that Mr. Penney was a member of Rev. Mr. Foxcroft's church, and here, in accord with the custom of the times, it is probable that his children were baptized in infancy. As he appears in about 1790 as a member of the Baptist church, it is likely he was one of the seventy seceders from the Congregational church of that date. It is evident that he enjoyed the confidence and respect of his fellow townsmen in that he was elected to some places of trust in town affairs. The high regard in which the school committee was held is evidenced by the names of the men who composed it in 1808, viz., Joseph E. Foxcroft, Esq., Capt. Jabez Cushman, Silvanus Cobb, Thomas B. Stinchfield, David Woodman, Thomas Penney and Joshua Gower. In 1809, he was school agent for his district and highway surveyor, and again in 1811, school agent for his district.

While yet in the vigor of life he suddenly met an untimely death by falling under the loaded ox-sled he was teaming, and was crushed to death, at the age of sixty-two years, six months and five days. Dying intestate the estate was administered upon by his son Benjamin, who was appointed by "Samuel Freeman Esquire Judge of Probate of Cumberland Co., March 24, 1813. To be rendered at or before the 24th of March 1814."

These administration papers, I think, possess sufficient interest to be worthy a reproduction here, as they throw some light on the character of our ancestor and the usages of the times.

This inventory reveals his versatility as a mechanic. Planes, augers, chisels, gouges, gimlets and drawing-knives indicate the carpenter. Shoemaker's tools and a "side" of leather reveal the shoemaker. Tailor's shears indicate that he cut the cloth made on his "Looms & tackling." His books, though only five, are significant. These and a newspaper (he was a subscriber to the Eastern Argus) point to an appreciation of the advantages of literature in the family. His various mechanical tools and numerous farming implements emphatically imply that he was an energetic, busy, hard-working man, a characteristic bequeathed to his children.

Thomas Penney,¹ born in Gloucester (Cape Ann), Massachusetts, August 13, 1750, married Lydia Herring, daughter of Benjamin and Experience (Annis) Herring, December 10, 1778. She was born in Gloucester, Massachusetts, April 3, 1759, and died in New Gloucester, Maine, February 3, 1842. He died in New Gloucester, February 18, 1813.

* This appears to be a reasonable supposition. It makes the account balance.

Lydia Herring was a descendant of Edward Haraden, who first settled in Ipswich in about 1650. He was probably the first New Englander of this name. He died in Cape Ann—to which place he moved in 1657—May 17, 1683, leaving an estate inventoried at two hundred and eighty-five pounds. His numerous descendants were conspicuous in the war of the Revolution, especially in the privateer service as commanders.

His son Benjamin, born September 11, 1671, was married by Rev. John Emerson of Cape Ann to Deborah Norwood, January 15, 1696. She was a descendant of Francis Norwood, who fled from England, according to tradition, at the restoration of Charles the Second. He settled at Goose Cove, Cape Ann, in 1663, acquiring land by grant and purchase. He married Elizabeth Coldon. Descendants still reside in Gloucester. They (Benjamin and Deborah) had a daughter, Experience, born about 1710. She was married by Rev. Benjamin Bradstreet of Cape Ann, January 22, 1730, to Isaac Annis, who was a descendant of Charles Annis, who was born in Enniskellen, Ireland, in 1638, and emigrated to this country in 1674, settling in Newbury, Massachusetts. They had a daughter, Experience, born in 1731, who was married, by Rev. Samuel Chandler of Cape Ann, to Benjamin Herring,* at Freshwater Cove, Cape Ann, January 11, 1753. The Herring families are descendants of distinguished ancestry in England. They were among the early settlers of this country, represented in the ministry of colonial times and in the Revolutionary service.

* Benjamin Herring, son of Benjamin, a sea captain, who married Experience Annis, was born in Cape Ann about 1725. During the war of the Revolution he went into the service in a privateer and was never afterward heard of. She died in Norway, Maine, in 1817, aged eighty-six. Their children were :

Every remembrance of this estimable woman, Lydia Penney, is as a grateful perfume. But few of her grandchildren remain who remember the quiet, gentle old lady who used to draw them to her side when little children, and tell them stories about Cape Ann. She commenced her married life midway of the Revolutionary storm, which carried down her father to an unknown ocean grave as a privateersman. Six of her eight sons served in the war of 1812. Her husband met a sudden and shocking death thirty-five years after their marriage, leaving to her care a large family, and the management of affairs left in an unsettled condition. But amid her own cares and sorrows she found opportunity to administer to the wants of others, and at harvest time she "stretched out her hand to the poor" in liberal gifts to less fortunate neighbors. Her sister Sarah, who married Elder Ephraim Stinchfield, the first native minister of New Gloucester, was a noble woman, the mother of ten children, who were esteemed and loved for their many virtues.

She probably lived at the homestead, and managed the farm after her husband's death, until the marriage of her son Ephraim to her niece, Patience H. Stinchfield, in 1829, when she made her home with him, where she in her declining years was carefully and tenderly cared for until her death, which occurred on February 3, 1842, at the age of eighty-two years and ten months.

Descendants of Lydia Penney.²

Lydia Penney,² oldest daughter of Thomas ¹ and Lydia (Herring) Penney, born in New Gloucester, Maine, June 7, 1779; married, in 1815, Rogers Goodwin, born in Kittery, Maine, in 1771, and died in Lisbon, Maine, February, 1839. She died April 22, 1858.

He had previously married and had a family of five children, of whom none are now living. His first wife died about 1812. He undoubtedly was a descendant of Daniel Goodwin, whose name appears in real estate transactions in Kittery as early as 1667, and the name is variously spelled in old documents Goddine, Godine, Goddin, Goodine, Gooding, Goodin and Goodden.

Mr. Goodwin probably settled in Lisbon at about the time of its incorporation in 1799, and always lived in the town until his death. He was a thrifty and diligent man, looking well to the affairs of his farm, which he cultivated with much success. After his death his widow managed the farm for several years with the assistance of her sons, afterward lived with her daughter in Portland a few years. She died in Lisbon, April 22, 1858, aged eighty years.

Robert Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, April 11, 1781; married first, November 28, 1802, Dorcas Noble, born in New Gloucester, February 13, 1783. She died in Knox, Maine, April 22, 1821, and he married second, August 16, 1821, Deborah Hamblin of New Gloucester, born August 16, 1796, and died in Knox, May 18, 1850. He died in Knox, November 8, 1873.

The town of Knox will ever possess a charm of patriotic interest from its associations with the memories of the renowned patriot for whom it was named, Gen. Henry Knox of Revolutionary fame.

The territory of this town was included in the Gen. Waldo Patent, first called Muscongus Patent, and comprised about half a million acres originally, and became the property of Gen. Knox through his wife, Lucy Flucker, granddaughter of Gen. Waldo. Settlement commenced in about 1800. Gen. Knox died October 25, 1806, and at about this date Mr. Penney felled his clearing, and built his log house, the site of which is now pointed out, soon after moving with his family, which consisted at this time of wife and three children. The typical log house was built of round logs laid one above another to the required height, and "cobbled" together at the four angles. An occasional space was made for a window by cutting out a section of a log, and the door, usually in the center of the structure, was evolved by simply cutting out a sufficient number of logs to give the required height. The roof was covered with long shingles, rived from pine or cedar. The solid earth made a floor, and stone a huge fireplace, usually located at one end with the chimney outside, constructed of "cats" (split sticks laid in clay mortar and plastered inside and out with the same material. The interstices between the logs were "chinked" with moss and plastered with clay.

The log house and environs of the early settler might have been picturesque, but they cannot truthfully be said to be especially desirable for a residence. Nevertheless it is neither a sin nor a disgrace to be born in one.

Mr. Penney in a few years built a substantial frame house, now standing, and occupied by his son Isaac. He became a member and a deacon of the Freewill Baptist church. He was a thrifty farmer, building a large amount of stone wall around his farm and planting two large orchards, and otherwise developing and bringing the original wilderness into fields of beauty and productiveness. He was a man of fine and well-developed physique, athletic and strong, and able to perform a vast amount of hard labor without exhaustion. When a young man he followed the sea for several years as a coaster.

He was the first-born son of the family, and with one exception lived to be the oldest, dying at the advanced age of ninety-two years, six months and twenty-seven days.

Benjamin Penney and Descendants.

Benjamin Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ twin brother to Thomas, Jr., 1st, born in New Gloucester, Maine, June 13, 1782; married, in 1803, Miriam Tuttle, born June 28, 1782, and died in Knox, Maine, June 12, 1855. He died in Knox, January 31, 1818.

He and his brother Robert came to Knox in 1805, and together bought a one-hundred-acre lot, which they afterward equally divided. They made a clearing, built their respective log houses, and moved in their families in 1807 or 1808. Subsequently he bought an additional eighty-acre lot, which had been deeded to — Baker by Gen. Knox and surveyed by Philip Greely in 1805.

In 1818, while busily engaged in building his new frame house, he was suddenly stricken down with fever, and died in the full flush of life's high hopes and aspirations, being the first of the family who had arrived at maturity, to die. His life and environment is but a memory, faint and indistinct. All who knew him are passed over to the great majority. Only some leave a faint trace of his characteristics and the general trend of his brief life. These indicate a man of mind and intellectual endowment above the average; a man of character, energy and business qualification.

Footprints on the sands of time

He was selected as administrator on his father's estate, appointed by Samuel Freeman, Esq., judge of probate of Cumberland County, March 24, 1813, and the admirable manner of his service in this important duty is shown in his account rendered to the judge of probate. The modest charge of thirty-one dollars for this service, which involved several journeys from Knox to Portland in the winter, is certainly an evidence of disinterested and scrupulous integrity. To be an abstainer when New England rum was manufactured in one's own town,* was an exception, not the rule. His temperance principles, which were transmitted to his children, are now by later descendants cherished as an heirloom beyond price.

From his thrifty and temperate habits it is evident that if his span of threescore years and ten had been allotted, he would have acquired a competency, and a position of honor and trust among his fellow-townsmen. He identified himself with the religious people of the new town by membership with the Freewill Baptist church.

Mr. Shibles is an enthusiastic and successful farmer, coupling intelligence with energy in his farming operations. He first bought a farm in Morrill, Me., in 1864, sold it in 1866, and returned to Knox, where he has since prosecuted the business. In 1883, he took the grocery store connected with the R. R. Station, Knox Station, and acted as station agent and postmaster till 1886, when he was appointed postmaster and his son, Anson M., as assistant. Since 1891, he has given his attention exclusively to farming. He was represented in the late war by a substitute. Their children, all born in Knox, are :
- 174 I Anson M. (Shibles ⁵), b. May 31, 1868.
- 175 2 Mark L. (Shibles ⁵), b. June 15, 1871.
- 176 3 Burchard P. (Shibles ⁵), b. May 16, 1880; d. in Knox, May 26, 1885.

Elizabeth Ruggles of Boston, Mass. Mr. Mason went to Boston when eighteen years of age and remained there until 1880. In May, of that year, he went to Texas and engaged in the sheep and wool raising business in Throckmorton Co., where he now resides. They have a daughter :

- 178 I Ethel Ruggles (Mason ⁵), b. at Fort Griffin, Texas, Aug. 15, 1882.
- 179 V Paris Gilman (Mason ⁴), b. Nov. 2, 1846; m., Feb. 4, 1870, Laura Maria Clark, daughter of Nathaniel Rix and Lydia (Young) Clark. Mr. Mason was appointed on the police force of Boston by Mayor Cobb in 1876. He has continuously served until the present time, having been reappointed under the different administrations of municipal government of the city. They have a daughter :
- 180 I Mabel Carrie (Mason ⁵), b. in Liberty, Me., Mar. 5, 1871.
- 181 VI Anson E. (Mason ⁴), b. Aug. 2, 1848; d. in Montville, Me., Feb. 21, 1869.
- 182 VII Fred W. (Mason ⁴), b. Sept. 23, 1851.

Susan Penney,³ daughter of Benjamin and Miriam (Tuttle) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Knox, Maine, April 14, 1811; married, October 15, 1831, Mark Shibles, born November 17, 1810.

Mr. Shibles is of Scotch extraction; his ancestor, John Shibles, first comes into notice at Pemaquid, Maine, where he had a son John, born in 1732, who, with his mother, removed to Thomaston, Maine, in 1736, and married Mary Carney. They were attracted thither, undoubtedly, by the Scotch settlement made at this place at about this date, who emigrated from Ireland, and were known in history as Scotch-Irish.

Children of John and Mary Carney Shibles :

- I Thomas, b. Apr. 15, 1766.
- II Robert, b. Dec. 29, 1768.
- III John, b. . 3, 1770.
- IV James, b. May 22, 1773.
- V David, b. Feb. 4, 1776; m. Katy Buckland, published Oct. 6, 1796, who were the parents of the subject of this sketch.

His father David came from Thomaston and settled here in Knox in 1808, buying land of the Gen. Knox heirs at four dollars per acre. The nearest markets were Belfast and Camden, and the only mode of conveyance was horseback, by spotted trees. No frame houses were built until about 1817. Forged nails were used, made in Boston.

Mr. Shibbles' long life has been characterized by great business energy, public spirit and enterprise, and he may with justice be called one of the town's most successful farmers and business men. He first bought land in 1831, sold and bought where he now lives in 1835. At the time he sold to his sons in 1872 he had a farm of five hundred and thirty acres. Quick to discover a business opportunity, upon the completion of the Belfast railroad, he in 1873 erected a store at what is known as Knox Station, which he managed for twelve years, and was acting postmaster in connection therewith for twenty-two years. In the year 1865, he sold produce from his farm amounting to over twenty-two hundred dollars. He has served his town for seven terms as selectman, and in various other ways promoted its interests and prosperity. He now, in the evening of life, at the age of eighty-six, is vigorous in body and mind, remembering early events with remarkable accuracy.

Children, born in Knox :

Thomas Penney,³ son of Benjamin and Miriam (Tuttle) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Knox, Maine, October 17, 1814; married, May 25, 1841, Parmelia Lee, born March 8, 1818, daughter of Justin and Parna (Keith) Lee. He died in Brooks, Maine, August 18, 1894, aged eighty years.

Born on the homestead in Knox, he became its possessor, and lived here until 1863, when he sold, and in January, 1864, purchased another farm in Brooks, Maine, where he passed the remainder of his life. He engaged exclusively in farming with the exception of a few years in which he supplied the Brighton market with sheep and lambs, shipped alive by steamer from Belfast to Boston.

He was a modest, unassuming man, never aspiring to political honors, yet a man of excellent judgment and quick perception, whose counsel was held in esteem by his neighbors and townsmen. His unquestioned integrity and strict moral characteristics won the respect of all. His domestic relations were most pleasant.

Children, born in Knox :

ROBERT LOW, JR., ESQ.

Anna Penney and Descendants.

Anna Penney,² daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, April 20, 1784 ; married, July 12, 1811, Robert Low, Jr., Esq., born in New Boston, New Hampshire, March 1, 1781, son of Rev. Robert and Judith (Elwell) Low. He died in Guilford, Maine, July 6, 1869, aged eighty-seven years, five months, five days. She died in Guilford, November 6, 1826. She was a woman of more than ordinary intellectual endowment, vivacious in temperament, active and skilful in all the feminine employments of her time. To her painstaking hand and forethought we are undoubtedly indebted for a now much valued family record. She, it is said, was especially delegated to care for the twin brother Mark, while on her sister Rachel devolved the especial care of Aaron, his mate. She was baptized by Rev. Ephraim Stinchfield and joined the Freewill Baptist church in New Gloucester, September 24, 1809.

Mr. Low married first, in June, 1804, Rebecca Bradford, born in New Gloucester, Maine, September 1, 1782 ; she died February 12, 1811.

Children :

- I Isaac B. (Low), b. in New Gloucester, Mar. 2, 1805 ; m. Jan. 31, 1827, Rachel N. Wright ; d. June, 1831. Had a son :
- I Lewis H. (Low), b. Mar., 1832.
- II Polly Leach (Low), b. in Guilford, Me., Sept. 29, 1806 ; m. Dec. 2, 1830, Asa Harlow. She was the second child born in the town of Guilford.
- III Judith Moulton (Low), b. do., Apr. 4, 1809 ; m. Aug. 11, 1836, Jacob Wright.

Mr. Low married second, Anna Penney,² as stated above, and third, Rachel (Penney²) Wharff, widow of William Wharff, June 12, 1827, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, February 3, 1786, and died in Guilford, December 23, 1858, aged seventy-two years, ten months, twenty days.

The pedigree of the Low families is as follows: Thomas Low was a descendant of one of the two brothers, English sea captains, who were engaged in transporting immigrants to New England early in the establishment of the colonies of Massachusetts Bay. They settled in this country and were the progenitors of the Low families.

There must have been several generations prior to Thomas of which there is no known record. It is only recorded of him that he died aged seventy years, and his wife Abigail Knowlton, who died aged ninety-one years. His eldest son Aaron married Rachel ———, and died aged sixty-six. She died aged forty-eight. Their eldest son, Robert, married Judith Elwell. He died in 1848, aged eighty-eight. She died aged seventy-nine. He was a Calvinist Baptist minister and was pastor of the Baptist Society in New Gloucester in 1818. Prior to this, in 1804, he, with Dea. Robert Herring and Michael Webber of New Gloucester, purchased several Bowdoin College lots in the now town of Guilford. In 1813, he organized a Baptist church in Guilford, of thirteen members, most of them being from the New Gloucester church. His son Robert, Jr., the subject of this sketch, was the first settler of the town of Guilford, moving his family into his log house in February, 1806. He, with Robert Herring, Jr., in 1804, felled the first openings in the virgin forest of the new township in Piscataquis County. It required about a week to make the transit with a team from New Gloucester to "Lowstown" as the new settlement, in honor of its first settler, was called.

Mr. Low was a man of good native endowments, educated better than many school teachers of that day, a lover of good order and public improvement, of unflinching integrity and of stern morality, one that never disgraced his ministerial parentage. He was naturally looked to as a leader in public affairs, and was conspicuous in the formative period of the town. He taught the winter schools, and served his town for many years as selectman, town clerk, and on the superintending school committee, and was treasurer of Piscataquis County in 1839 and 1840. At the first Fourth of July celebration of Guilford and adjoining towns he was "orator of the day." He was for many years a justice of the peace, during which time he solemnized sixty-nine marriages, among them five of his own children.

He continued to reside on the farm, which he carved from the wilderness, until his death, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years, five months, five days, a man honored and esteemed by all with whom he was associated.

Children, by second marriage, born in Guilford :

- (222) I Rebecca Bradford (Low³), b. June 28, 1812 ; m. Apr. 30, 1843, Edwin Dean.
- (223) II Frederic Plummer (Low³), b. Sept. 21, 1814 ; m. May 17, 1840, Mary J. Robinson.

Rebecca Bradford Low,³ daughter of Robert and Anna (Penney²) Low, Jr., Esq., daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Guilford, Maine, June 28, 1812 ; married, April 30, 1843, Edwin Dean, born in Foxcroft, Maine, January 16, 1821, son of Ira Dean. She died in Flora, Boone County, Illinois, October 4, 1887.

Mr. Dean emigrated from Maine to the West in about 1843, and settled first in Flora, Boone County, Illinois, where he for many years followed his occupation of farming. He now resides in Belvidere, Illinois, having retired from active life some years ago, and now in its twilight enjoys the serene pleasure of an upright and conscientious life.

Rachel Penney and Descendants.

Rachel Penney,² daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, February 3, 1786; married first, in 1808, William Wharff of Litchfield, Maine, born October 12, 1787, son of Joseph and Susanna (Bennett) Wharff of Gloucester, Massachusetts. He sailed from Portland, aboard the sloop "Yankee," on the twelfth day of September, 1812. Supposed foundered at sea. She married second, June 12, 1827, Robert Low, Jr., Esq. (which see), and died in Guilford, Maine, December 23, 1858.

The pedigree of this branch of the Wharff families is traced to Joseph, son of Joseph, who was born in Gloucester, Massachusetts (Cape Ann), November 21, 1762, and married Susanna Bennett, June 21, 1779, who was born July 12, 1763. He sailed from North Yarmouth as mate on December 22, 1894, and is supposed to have been lost at sea January 2, 1795. Their children were :

- I Susanna, b. Aug. 10, 1780; m. — Steavens.
- II Sarah, b. Jan. 27, 1782; m. — Steavens.
- III Lydia, b. Nov. 26, 1783; m. Joseph Lunt.
- VI Joseph, b. Nov. 11, 1785.
- V William (and one stillborn), b. Oct. 12, 1787; m. Rachel Penney².
- VI Isaac B., b. Aug. 23, 1789; m. Sally Penney².
- VII Betsey, b. Mar. 9, 1792; m. William Robinson.
- VIII Abigail, b. Nov. 7, 1793; d. Nov. 8, 1794.
- IX Dorcas, b. July 18, 1795; m. 1st., David McIntire, 2d., Wilks Richardson.

Beyond Joseph the descent is not established. It may have been in the line of Nathaniel Wharff (Wharfe), who first appears in New England history at ancient Falmouth, Maine, in 1658, where he married Rebecca Macworth, and had a son Nathaniel, who went to Gloucester, Massachusetts (Cape Ann), married, settled and died there, leaving a large family. Or the descent may be from some later immigrant.

To William Wharff and Rachel Penney,² a son :

- 282 I Thomas (Wharff ³), b. in Litchfield, Me., Oct. 5, 1809; m. May 1, 1842, Desire Herring, daughter of Isaac and Betsy (Foster) Herring, who was born June 16, 1816. He died in Guilford, Me., Mar. 5, 1883. Mr. Wharff was a man of genial, sunny disposition, whose gentle, undemonstrative demeanor drew all toward him. His sterling uprightness and honesty of character commanded the respect and regard of those with whom he came in contact. In early life he followed the sea as a fisherman, and a portion of the time made his home with Ephraim and Mark Penney, his uncles, in New Gloucester. Subsequently moving to Guilford with his mother, he settled as a farmer and carpenter, a trade in which he was skilful. Widow resides with son Eugene in Guilford. Children :

THOMAS PENNEY, JR., 2nd.

Thomas Penney and Descendants.

8

Thomas Penney,² Jr., 2d, son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney, born in New Gloucester, Maine, February 22, 1788 ; married in New Gloucester, January 10, 1809, Susan Haskell of Harpswell, Maine, born February 25, 1790, and died in Freedom, May 6, 1866. He died in Freedom, February 22, 1872.

The dates indicate a man of energy, one who grappled with the great concerns and responsibilities of human life in the bloom of youth. While yet a minor he became a husband, and before he was twenty-two he was the possessor of a farm and the father of a son. Very soon after his marriage he migrated to that part of the state which offered, in its undeveloped townships, a favorable opportunity to acquire a farm, at once attractive and promising to a young, sturdy yeoman, with ambition and determination.

Freedom was a part of the Plymouth Patent, and the first opening made in its primeval forest, with a view to settlement, was made by Stephen Smith, a Revolutionary soldier, in 1794. In 1813, during the war with England, the town was incorporated under its present name, which was the choice of the inhabitants, and had a political signification.

Mr. Penney undoubtedly "felled an opening" the year before his marriage, built a small frame house in conjunction with his brother John, and thus had a lodge in the vast wilderness for his youthful bride when they commenced housekeeping.

The broad fields that now surround and adorn the homestead attest the struggle and the victory over the forces of nature in her virgin strength, and the competency that he enjoyed in the declining years of his life was the natural sequence of a life of well-directed endeavor, upright habits, industry and frugality. He was a member of the Freewill Baptist church of Freedom and one of the deacons. In the war of 1812 he was drafted into the United States service, and served at Belfast, Maine.

JOHN PENNEY.

John Penney² and Descendants.

John Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, March 20, 1789; married in 1814, Abigail Thompson of Bristol, Maine, born October 8, 1790, and died in Freedom, Maine, October 3, 1865. He died in Freedom, October 25, 1864.

John Penney, in company with his older brother Thomas, bought two hundred acres of land in Freedom, of Reuel Williams of Augusta, in about 1806. He was then about seventeen years of age. He did not marry until about twenty-five years of age. Then it appears that he moved into the small frame house that they together had previously built, and the two families lived together until they made a division of their land, when they built more commodious residences. Like all pioneer settlers he had to contend with nature in her rugged estate, and suffer many hardships before the comforts of life could be enjoyed. Belfast, twenty miles away, was the nearest market, and on horseback, by spotted trees, it only could be reached. The loom, spinning-wheel and cradle, were the three indispensable adjuncts of the home of the settler, and the combined melody of the three, if not harmonious, was full of life and inspiration, betokening the spirit of thrift that environed the little opening in the wilderness.

In the midst of his early struggle to establish a home he is called to the defense of home and country, to repel the threatened invasion of the whole fair coast of Maine by Great Britain, and he renders a whole year in that defense, stationed at Eastport under Gen. Cummings. Some remuneration for injuries received in this service was obtained in the waning years of life by way of a pension. The gun he carried is shown by his son, Orison A., himself a soldier in the war of 1861-65. Later in life he was severely wounded in the head by a falling tree, the effects of which were visible in the unnatural expression of his eyes.

He was a good man, much beloved by his family for his gentleness and even disposition; a member of the Methodist church, he adorned his profession by a well-ordered and conscientious life. He possessed those traits of character that won the confidence and esteem of all; a respected citizen and townsman, he died at his home in Freedom in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

Full records of descendants have been unobtainable.

ISAAC B. WHARFF.

SALLY (PENNEY) WHARFF.

Sally Penney² and Descendants.

10

Sally Penney,² daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ was born in New Gloucester, Maine, May 16, 1791 ; married in the autumn of 1809 in New Gloucester, by Rev. Ephraim Stinchfield, to Isaac B. Wharff,* son of Joseph and Susanna (Bennett) Wharff of Litchfield, Maine, born August 23, 1789, and died in Guilford, Maine, June 30, 1878, aged eighty-eight years, ten months, seven days. She died in Guilford, February 27, 1869, aged seventy-seven years, nine months, eleven days.

This noteworthy union was consummated in the bloom of life, he being but twenty and she but eighteen. Unquestionably it was an ideal marriage, verified by their long pilgrimage of sixty years together in harmony and love. From it has sprung much above the average in number of descendants, noted for their longevity, men and women of character and influence, respected and esteemed.

From a biographical sketch of this family, written by Mr. Joseph Wharff, one of the sons, in 1884, I quote as follows :

They removed from the town of Litchfield, Maine, to the town of Guilford, Maine, with three children, in the year 1813. The town then, with the exception of a few openings, was a wild wilderness, and they had to travel from Dexter on foot or horseback, following a line of spotted trees. It required no little nerve and energy to endure the labor and hardships that those early settlers had to endure, going as they did with but little save their hands to start with. They felled an opening, built a log house, and after a long, hard struggle with the woods and elements they conquered, and made themselves a comfortable home. I have heard it was said that when Mr. Wharff married Miss Penney he would never be out of money; as long as she lived he would always have a Penney. But in marrying his wife he got more than a Penney, for her price was above rubies. She was a helpmeet indeed, just what a man wanted to enable him to endure the hardships of a pioneer settler in those early times.

They were hardly settled before those memorable seasons, 1815-16, that were so cold that no corn, and very little wheat and potatoes, grew. They were without money, and wheat was three dollars a bushel, and other things in proportion. They, with their young family, knew what it was to suffer the pinchings of hunger and want.

The sufferings of those early settlers will never be told. Some were obliged to live on clover heads, stewed with a little milk and butter. But this family endured all with a courage that was truly wonderful, always cheerful, making the most of everything. Mrs. Wharff, in addition to cooking for her family with a tin baker before an open fire, did the carding, spinning and weaving of all the cloth they used in the family; also made all their clothes, milked the cows and cared for the children. This required a vast amount of work, but her strength and pluck were equal to the task, and she endured it all without a murmur. She was kind and loving in her disposition, always having a pleasant word and a helping hand for all in affliction, ready to visit the sick and minister to their wants.

One cold day Mr. Wharff was going out and wanted his comforter, and could not find it, and in a somewhat impatient way asked where it was, when one of the older girls, taking hold of her mother said, "Here is your comforter."

The taking care of so many children required no little care and labor, and the older girls tired of that kind of work; when the last one was born they inquired if it was the last; if it was, they would name it Thankful; if not, its name would be Patience.

Mrs. Wharff was a religious woman, and believed in Jesus as a Saviour. She taught her children early to read and obey the Word of God. Often she would take her children by her side, and with her hand on their head she would plead with them to be good and love God.

In the summer, I think of 1867, their house took fire. In the excitement and labor of trying to save some of the things that had cost her so much, she was prostrated — disease came on from which she never recovered.

An evidence of her thrift and resourceful ways is seen in her method of making windows for their log house. Taking some writing paper she saturated it with lard and tacked it over the holes in the wall, thus keeping out the cold and letting in a feeble light.

An excerpt from a letter written by her in November, 1810, to relatives in Knox, Maine, is historically worthy of note. She says : —

I have lately left my parents and come to Litchfield to live. Rachel has got a nice great son about six weeks old. His name is Thomas. There has been a greater work in New Gloucester than ever was before. I believe the Lord is in that town. There was 92 baptized there before I came away, and a great many more that have a hope that the Lord has taken their feet out of the horrible pit and miry clay. Don't forget me in your prayers.
(Signed) Sally Wharff.

This is the religious awakening referred to by Rev. Ephraim Stinchfield in his autobiography, and of which undoubtedly he was the chief promoter. Rev. Mr. A. Loring, in his history of Piscataquis County, says that Mr. Wharff was in Guilford, then called Lowstown, in 1807, engaged in raising corn and wheat, and preparing with others log cabins, in the employ of Isaac Bennett. He evidently had made a clearing, built a cabin, and had some land under cultivation a few years prior to moving his family into the new township.

Children :

- (392) I Christiana (Wharff ³), b. in Litchfield, Me., Apr. 7, 1810; m. Aug. 26, 1827, Simeon Lombard; d. in Guilford, Mar. 29, 1889.
- (393) II Isaac (Wharff ³), b. do., Aug. 27, 1811; m. Dec. 1, 1835, Hannah Hatch. Both died in Guilford, Feb. 4, 1874.
- (394) III Lydia Penney (Wharff ³), b. do., Feb. 26, 1813; m. Sept. 12, 1838, Benjamin N. Thoms.
- (395) IV Susan S. (Wharff ³), b. in Guilford, Oct. 15, 1814; m. Jan. 22, 1834, George W. Brett.
- 396 V Almira B. (Wharff ³), b. do., Sept. 4, 1816; m. in Augusta, Me., by Rev. W. A. Drew, Feb. 21, 1842, to Urial Huntington of Augusta, who was born in Litchfield, Sept., 1816. He died without issue, in Oakland, Cal., July 18, 1885, and she, in advanced life, continues to reside in the city of Oakland. Mr. Huntington first engaged in the blacksmithing business in Augusta. In 1851 he went to California, where he pursued the same business for several years. Returning to the East for a short time he went to California again and engaged in farming in Contra Costa Co. for twelve years. From thence he moved to Oakland, and was identified with its commercial and banking interests until his death. The following from a local paper voices the esteem in which he was held by its citizens: "In the death of Mr. Huntington Oakland has lost one of her most respected citizens. He came to California in early days, and endured the changing vicissitudes of pioneer life with heroism, never faltering in love for his adopted state. For the last thirteen years he has been an active citizen of Oakland, working for her best interests and enjoying her prosperity. He served the city as councilman with credit, and has always been noted for his zeal in advancing her political interests. In his business relations his integrity was unquestioned. His loss will be deeply regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and in the home he loved so well none but his most intimate friends can realize the great shadow which has forever darkened its doors."

Isaac Wharff,³ son of Isaac B. and Sally (Penney⁴) Wharff, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Litchfield, Maine, August 27, 1811; married, December 1, 1835, Hannah Hatch, daughter of William Hatch of New Gloucester, Maine, born in New Gloucester, April 3, 1810.

During the night of February 4, 1874, his house took fire and he with his wife and a nephew perished in the flames. Mr. Wharff always lived in Guilford, his native town, following the avocation of a farmer. In his youth he was noted for his unusual hardiness, industry, steady habits and cool temperament. These pertained to him in manhood, joined by honesty in dealings, kindness to the unfortunate, and generosity toward public improvements. He prospered in business, was happy in his domestic relations, and honored by a rising family. For several years prior to his death he suffered with an aberration of mind.

Children, born in Guilford :

- 421 I William H. (Wharf⁴), b. Sept. 23, 1836; m. Apr. 22, 1860, Lydia J. Paul of Foxcroft, Me., daughter of Col. Silas Paul, born Sept. 19, 1840. Mr. Wharff, by his inherent force of character and intuitive power to see and grasp a passing opportunity has raised himself to a business position, lucrative and honorable. Beginning as a farmer's boy, at the age of eighteen, disliking farm work he was permitted to learn a carpenter's trade with his Uncle Hiram E. Hatch, who subsequently in 1860, admitted him as a partner in business, their first contract being the building of Foxcroft Academy. For several winters he taught school. In 1864 and 1865, he was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, serving in Company C, Eleventh Maine Infantry, and was engaged in the battle at Hatcher's Run, the assault on Petersburg, April 2, 1865, and at the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, April 9, 1865. From the close of the war until 1871, he was engaged in contracting and building in Bangor. During this year he moved with his family to Martha's Vineyard and engaged in a lumbering and planing mill business with others, which proving unsuccessful was abandoned, and in 1874, he removed to New Bedford, N. J., and entered into the service of the Wamsutta Cotton Mill Co., as a carpenter. In February, 1875, he was induced to remove to California, arriving at San Francisco with his family in March, 1875. He first worked as journeyman, then as foreman, and in 1876, commenced contracting, which was followed with good results until 1888, since which time he has devoted his attention to architecture and superintending with gratifying results. Children :

Lydia Penney Wharff,³ daughter of Isaac B. and Sally (Penney ²) Wharff, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Litchfield, Maine, February 26, 1813 ; married, by Rev. John W. Chickering, September 12, 1838, Benjamin N. Thoms of Portland, Maine, born in Falmouth, Maine, January 5, 1816, son of Benjamin Thoms. He died in Bangor, Maine, February 16, 1895.

Mr. Thoms learned the carriagessmith trade in early life in the city of Portland, with Moses Freeman. In 1838, he removed to Augusta, Maine, and formed a partnership in the carriage manufacturing business with J. P. Wyman. In 1845, the partnership was dissolved, and he removed to Bangor, entering into a copartnership with a Mr. Clarrage, which continued for about seven years, their business being carriage ironing. In about 1852, he established a carriage manufacturing business, in copartnership with Mr. Joseph Wharff, which for a number of years was the most extensive of its kind in the city, embracing carriage making of every variety and in every detail. In 1855, Mr. Wharff retired from the firm, and in 1880, and later, his two sons were associated with him in business, and eventually became his successors. He engaged in business with enthusiasm and energy, and was a member of the city government for several terms. Greatly blessed in the family relation by a noble woman whose loyalty and devotion never waned, a helpmeet whose sympathy was ever in touch with the concerns of her husband in all the vicissitudes of life. She resides in Bangor, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Whitman.

Susan S. Wharff,³ daughter of Isaac and Sally (Penney ²) Wharff, who was the daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Guilford, Maine, October 15, 1814; married in Guilford, Maine, by Rev. Barnabas Bursely, January 22, 1834, to George W. Brett, son of Ezra and Alice (Robinson) Brett, of Paris, Maine. He was born in Paris, Maine, April 14, 1810, is a descendant of William Brett, who came from Kent, England, to Duxbury, Massachusetts, in 1640, and is of the eighth generation in descent from John Alden, the Pilgrim.

He learned the blacksmith trade with his brother and established himself in business in Sangerville in 1831, where he pursued the business until 1857, when attracted by the high prices paid to mechanics in California, went to that state and opened a shop in Oakland, carrying on the business there for four years. From there he went to Dayton, Nevada, in the employ of a quartz mill company, at which place, by the destruction of the works by a freshet, he barely escaped death, being one of the three survivors out of a company of eight. Returning to California, he established a business in San Francisco, which he carried on for six months, when he removed again to Nevada and located in Carson City, prosecuting his business here until 1863, when he returned home to his family in Sangerville, Maine. In 1864, he sold out his business in Sangerville and removed to Auburn, Maine, engaging in a general blacksmithing business, to which he admitted, as a partner, his son Ezra, in 1875. In 1879, he retired from active business. In 1884, he met with a severe accident by falling from an apple-tree but now, at the advanced age of about eighty-seven years, he is vigorous in body and mind.

At their golden wedding, held at their home in Auburn, January 22, 1884, a fine poem was read, composed for the occasion by their son-in-law, F. W. Hunton, Esq. Some excerpts will be of a general interest :

Goodness gracious ! what a crop they did raise
Down in Sangerville, in the olden days.
The air was bracing or the soil was rich,
We are now unable to tell you which,
But something surely will explain the cause
For the abundant harvest. Now let us pause
For a single moment and give the name
Of each little treasure, just as they came.
The first on whom the mother placed her eye
And to whom she sang her first lullaby,
Was Sarah, and following her a dear
Little sister came, whom they called Althea.
As the friends were waiting the next event,
There came a boy whom they named Edward Kent.
But that little fellow, while young and bright,
Was removed from earth and from mortal sight.
A short time after little Susan came,
The first to be given her mother's name.
Then Alice appeared with bright little eyes
And gave the father a complete surprise.
Then came a son to fill their hearts with joy,
And the mother gave to that darling boy
The father's name, " We'll call him George," she said,
As she placed her hand on his tender head.

Little she thought as he lay on her knee
Of what the future of her boy would be,
But watched him ever with a mother's pride,
And to his footsteps was a constant guide.
Through his youthful years he was good and true
To all his friends, and as he older grew
Became acquainted with his country dear;
And his friendship was so strong and sincere
That when the stars and stripes in the dust did wave,
Though a lad in his teens, his life he gave
For his country's good in the cause so grand,
Liberty and freedom throughout the land.
Next came Ezra who, of all the boys, made
A choice for himself of his father's trade,
And they worked together as father and son;
He tried to do as his father had done,
But his strength gave way, and to his surprise
He became enfeebled and could not rise,
And like the dew before the morning sun
He wasted away as life just begun;
And that dear good face so cheerful and bright,
We sadly miss from this circle to-night.
But have we the knowledge and can we say
His spirit is not here this wedding day?
Louisa was the next to come and share
In the dear mother's love and tender care,
But like a flower she faded away
And passed to the realms of eternal day.
They tell us when Pliny was ushered in
That he smiled all over from feet to chin,
And that same smile I think he will allow
Has followed him through life, till even now,
And John, why he was as funny a lad
As any of the boys his mother had.
One day, when one of the children was born,
John rushed into the house in early morn,
And espied the babe, and exclaimed, "Oh marm!
Where did you get it, raise it on the farm?"
"The doctor just brought it," the mother said.
John smiled, and shook his roguish little head,
For he had seen the doctor come and go,
And he always thought he would like to know
What the doctor had in the little bag.

"Well, I saw him with something in a rag!"
 Exclaimed John, and his mother had to smile,
 And tell him he could go and play awhile.
 Now comes Ella with all the rest,
 Who of eleven was of course the best.
 Eleven children! Just pause to think,
 But that was not all, for another link
 Was needed in that great family chain;
 So little Emma, who could not remain
 But a few short years, came to cheer the hearts
 Of these parents who were doing their part
 Toward populating that little town,
 And having a colony of their own.
 They tell us twelve was not a dozen then,
 But thirteen, a baker's dozen, so when
 They waved their magic wand and turned around,
 Edgar, a darling boy, was what they found.
 Now do you wonder that the father's dimes
 Were decidedly scarce at certain times,
 And do you wonder that he sought a land
 Where gold was plenty on every hand?
 But he'd scarcely landed on 'Frisco's shore,
 And begun to receive the golden ore,
 When across the water there came such news
 As to cause alarm and give him the blues.
 His situation the man did deplore
 As he read these lines: "Two more, George! Two more!!
 One is a girl and the other a boy;
 Now write me early and wish me much joy."
 He let fall his letter and grabbed his pen,
 And wrote, "Call one Jennie, the other Ben."

Rachel Ann Wharff,³ daughter of Isaac B. and Sally (Penney ²) Wharff, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Guilford, Maine, February 13, 1825; married, October 8, 1846, by Rev. W. A. Drew, Albert Folsom, born in Monmouth, Maine, November 29, 1822, son of Jonathan Folsom. She died in San Francisco, California, February 28, 1896, aged seventy-one years. Mr. Folsom lived with his parents on the home farm until eighteen, getting such an education as the common school afforded. He then served a three years' apprenticeship with Wyman & Thoms at Augusta, learning a blacksmith's trade, subsequently forming a partnership with his employer, Mr. Wyman, in 1846. In 1849, the partnership was dissolved, and he removed to Lewiston Falls and established a carriage manufacturing business, under the firm name of Folsom & Thayer. In 1853, he returned to Augusta, and assumed the management of the large carriage manufactory of B. F. Morse. Receiving from Wyman & Huntington the same year the remunerative offer of six dollars per day to work for them in their carriage manufactory at San Francisco, he removed there, and after a service with them for two years, bought out the business, which he successfully prosecuted until 1894, at which date he retired from business with the gratifying satisfaction of having done a quality of work second to none.

Joseph Wharff,³ son of Isaac B. and Sally (Penney²) Wharff, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Guilford, Maine, November 1, 1826; married by Rev. N. D. George, in Bangor, January 13, 1849, Sophia A. Norton, born September 18, 1828, daughter of John and Hannah Norton of Carmel, Maine. She was a woman of great energy and indefatigable will power, who through prudence and economy helped her husband to accumulate property sufficient to ease him from heavy burden-bearing during his later years; died in Bangor, Maine, January 8, 1894.

Mr. Wharff began his early life on the farm in his native town, assisting his brothers and sisters in farm work until nineteen years of age, receiving such limited school education as the town schools afforded. After nineteen years of farm life he went to Bangor to learn the blacksmith's trade of a brother-in-law, Mr. B. N. Thoms, with whom, after conquering a good deal of homesickness, he worked for three years, and with whom he stayed three years longer, as a partner in the manufacture of carriages. At this time the company was dissolved, and Mr. Wharff entered into business for himself, manufacturing team wagons, in which business he continued the greater part of his life, till the fall of 1895, winning the esteem and confidence of all who came into business relation with him, and establishing a reputation for upright dealing and strict integrity in business life.

During the early years of his business career his practical mind saw a much-needed improvement possible in that class of team wagons known as "jiggers," and he proceeded to make and put into practical use the first "crank" or "drop axle" ever used in the State of Maine, or probably New England, and thus became the inventor of one of the most useful devices of the modern team wagon. Later he invented and patented a boring machine, of great service in his own work.

In the fall of 1851, Mr. Wharff became converted and joined the Methodist church in Bangor, of which he is at present a devoted and active member, having filled the offices of class leader and steward for many years, and being always ready for any service in the church or out, among his friends or among strangers, if it be for the Master whom he loves to follow. In the absence of the pastor he often leads the social meeting, and his advice is eagerly sought in all matters of the church where his devotion to God and his good common sense commend him as a safe counselor.

The winter of 1895, Mr. Wharff spent in California among near relatives, being privileged to administer spiritual help and comfort to a dear sister in her last illness. He still makes his home in Bangor, where the most of his life has been spent. His youngest daughter, the only one of his six surviving children who is unmarried, cares for him.

Children, born in Bangor :

Mandana M. Wharff,³ youngest daughter of Isaac B. and Sally (Penney²) Wharff, daughter of Thomas Penney,¹ born in Guilford, Maine, March 16, 1831; married first, in Lewiston, Maine, January 1, 1852, William O. Wedgwood, born in Litchfield, Maine, December 17, 1826, son of William Wedgwood. He died in Oakland, California, February 29, 1876, and she married second, August 22, 1879, August Michel, in Oakland, where she now resides.

Mr. Wedgwood in early life manifested a commendable energy by fortifying himself for the vicissitudes of life by learning a carpenter's trade. Soon after his marriage, in 1854, he went to San Francisco, California. From there he moved to Oakland, in 1867, and pursued his business of architect and builder, erecting many dwellings and public buildings in West Oakland. He was a man of strict integrity, respected and loved by all; a member and trustee of the Second Congregational church. This union was the sequence of love at first sight, which never waned, but like the oak grew stronger and more beautiful until the end.

Aaron Penney² and Descendants.

Aaron Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ was born in New Gloucester, Maine, July 7, 1793, twin brother to Mark ²; married first, January 13, 1829, Priscilla Witham, daughter of Thomas and Sally Witham of New Gloucester, who was born in 1800, and died December 20, 1843, of consumption. After the death of his first wife, he next, in December, 1844, married Saloma Royall of Danville, Maine, who died May 24, 1847. He then married her sister, Naomi Royall, May 30, 1849, who died at North Yarmouth, Maine, March 6, 1879. No issue by last two wives. He died April 30, 1850.

There was a marked difference not only in resemblance, but in general characteristics, between these twin brothers. They, the second pair of twins in the family, both arrived at maturity, married and had families. He died at the age of fifty-seven, while his twin brother passed the nonogenarian point, dying at the greatest age of any of the family. He was thirty-six years of age when married to his first wife, and by thrift and economy had provided himself a home in close proximity to the old homestead, probably first owned by Ephraim Johnson, who had built a house and barn on the place. Subsequently he built a new and much larger and finer barn and remodeled the house and other buildings connected therewith. He was a neat, well-to-do farmer, methodical, though somewhat odd in his methods of doing things, and in his intercourse with others, with likes and dislikes pronounced. Inheriting some of his father's mechanical ability he enjoyed working with tools, of which he had quite a variety. He was emphatically a home child, always living within a few steps of the spot where he was born, and when drafted in 1814, to serve as a soldier in the defense of Portland, he soon became so homesick that he induced his younger brother Joseph, then a robust boy of fifteen, to take his place and serve out his time. He in early life became a member of the Freewill Baptist church, being baptized by Elder Ephraim Stinchfield, October 29, 1809. His first and second wives were also members of this denomination.

Children, born in New Gloucester :

- (595) I Sarah,³ b. Oct. 11, 1829; m. May 12, 1847, Seth Snow.
 (596) II Susan Annie,³ b. July 21, 1832; m. Nov. 27, 1856, Winthrop R. Sawyer.
 597 III Thomas,³ b. Sept. 30, 1835; d. in New Gloucester, Apr. 30, 1859. With his death the surname of Aaron's descendants became extinct.

595

Sarah Penney,³ daughter of Aaron and Priscilla (Witham) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, October 11, 1828; married, May 12, 1847, Seth Snow, born in New Gloucester, April 1, 1819, and died in New Gloucester, October 12, 1894. She died in New Gloucester, February 9, 1895. Mr. Snow was a very ingenious man and was skilful at various kinds of mechanical work. Though a farmer yet he pursued the business of house carpentry to a considerable extent, building his own house and farm buildings. After the death of his father, which occurred while he was young, the care and management of the farm devolved on him, and this duty he continued to perform until about the date of his marriage. He always resided in New Gloucester.

MARK PENNEY.

Mark Penney² and Descendants.

12

Mark Penney,^a son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ was born in New Gloucester, Maine, July 7, 1793. Was twin brother to Aaron. Married, in New Gloucester, by Charles Cobb, Esq., May 7, 1829, Sally Parsons Witham, born in Raymond, Maine, December 5, 1811, daughter of John and Hephzibah (Welch) Witham. She died in New Gloucester, January 11, 1855. Her father dying when she was two years of age, she was reared up in her grandfather Witham's family in New Gloucester. She was a woman of genuine piety, and held in high esteem by all for her many estimable qualities of character. "Her children rise up and call her blessed."

In 1814, when he was twenty-one years of age, he was drafted for service in the war with Great Britain, and served as private in Capt. Bailey Bodwell's company, Col. William Reyerson's regiment, from September 21, to November 7, 1814. Was stationed on the coast defense at Portland Maine, on Munjoy Hill. He received the usual bounty lands and for a number of years before he died, a pension of ninety-six dollars per year. Soon after the death of his father in 1813, he went away from home, finding employment in Brighton, Massachusetts. Returning to Maine, he worked for the celebrated but erratic Dr. Ezekiel G. Dodge, of Thomaston, on his farm, until his death in 1819. He then worked for a number of years for the O'Briens in the same town, in a marble mill. Returning to New Gloucester he settled down to his life occupation, a farmer, on the old homestead, inheriting in the division of the estate the house built by his father about 1793. In 1838, he built a brick house on his part of the estate, on the summit of the slope that overlooked the great meadow, taking down the old homestead house and utilizing such parts as were suitable in the construction of the new.

In 1855, he sold his farm in New Gloucester, buying another at West Poland, Maine, on to which he removed. This he sold in 1865, and lived for two years with his niece, Mrs. Winthrop Sawyer at Danville Junction, then alternately with his daughters, Maria A. and Hannah W., at East Weymouth, Massachusetts, and Mechanic Falls, Maine. Then for a few years he lived with his son Mark A., in Des Moines, Iowa. The last years of his life were spent with his daughter, Maria A., at East Sebago, Maine, where he died, January 8, 1889, aged ninety-six years, six months and one day, having lived to be the oldest and the last to die of all the fourteen children. He became a member of the Freewill Baptist society when sixteen years of age; was baptized by Rev. Ephraim Stinchfield, October 29, 1809. He was a man respected, a good farmer, hard working and industrious.

Children, born in New Gloucester :

- (620) I John Witham,³ b. May 22, 1831; m. Feb. 18, 1854, Aphia Jane Morse, daughter of Enoch and Ellen (Bradbury) Morse.
- (621) II Sarah Maria Antoinette,³ b. Dec. 31, 1833; m. 1st, July 31, 1864, William Stoddard; 2d, Osborn Burnell, Feb. 9, 1885.
- (622) III Hannah Wells,³ b. Mar. 24, 1835; m. Daniel J. Greene, Oct. 23, 1861.
- 623 IV Mark Alonzo,³ b. July 8, 1838. He m. 1st, Mrs. Mary J. (Greene) Brown, Aug. 11, 1865, who died without issue in Perris, Cal., Mar. 31, 1887. He married next, May 19, 1890, Ella Armstrong of Ohio, in Perris, Cal., where they now reside. He first learned a carriagesmith's trade in Bangor, Me., and subsequently that of machinist and iron-founder. Soon after the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion he enlisted in the Naval service at Boston, June 18, 1862, and was discharged at the same place, May 17, 1865. When first entering the service he was stationed on board the receiving ship, Ohio, at Boston, for about five weeks, receiving his discharge from the same vessel at the close of the war. From the Ohio he was transferred to the U. S. steamship, Canandaigua, which went on to the blockading squadron, off Charleston, South Carolina, remaining there, with the exception of a cruise to the Bahama group (Abaco Island) to rescue a shipwrecked crew, until the close of the war. His service was that of first-class fireman, doing occasionally some machine work. While in the service, during leisure hours, he built a small steam engine and boiler, making brass castings for the cylinder and flywheel, and the tubular boiler of sheet copper. After his service in the Navy he worked at the machinist business in Worcester, Massachusetts. Removing West, he worked several years for the Union Pacific R. R. Co., in their repair shops; also for the Douglass Barbed Wire Co., in Johnstown, Penn., and for several years carried on the machine and foundry business in Des Moines, Iowa. He is a very skilful mechanic and an inventor of more than ordinary ability, having taken out several patents, some of which he has disposed of at remunerative prices. His health failing, he removed to Perris, Cal., in 1883, and engaged in farming, where he now resides. No children.

John Witham Penney,³ son of Mark and Sally Parsons (Witham) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, May 22, 1831; married, February 18, 1854, by Rev. H. P. Osgood, in New Gloucester, Aphia Jane Morse, born in Gray, Maine, April 26, 1829, daughter of Enoch and Ellen (Bradbury) Morse.

Born with a taste for mechanism, farming offered no congenial employment, and at the age of eighteen years, having received a common school education, he went to Bangor, in 1850, walking from Waterville, the railroad from that place to Bangor, at that date, not having been built. He here, with Messrs. Thoms & Wharff, learned the carriagesmiths' trade, no opportunity offering for acquiring his ideal, that of a machinist. A machinist, he was advised by his employers, never to aspire to, saying that it cost a fortune to establish one in the machinist's business, and that rarely ever one who learned the trade would succeed in establishing themselves in business, but would always walk in the humble path of a journeyman. But the evolution of the years has brought about the dream of youth, and it is now apparent that the blacksmith trade, though not of choice, was the way that led to this more congenial field of pursuit, which, coupled with untiring energy and perseverance, has resulted in the establishment of the present extensive and well-known machine works of J. W. Penney & Sons, at Mechanic Falls, Maine.

In 1856, he removed from Bangor to West Poland, and engaged in the carriage-ironing business, giving some attention to farming, and built a house at that place in 1857. In 1859, he moved to Mechanic Falls, the place offering better facilities for his business, which he followed here in conjunction with mill repairing. He built the house here, in which he now resides, in 1863.

In 1865 he sold his tools and machinery to the Dennison Paper Manufacturing Company, and took charge of their machinery department until 1872, when he established the machinery business at Mechanic Falls, this year building his first steam engine. He has taken out several patents, among them a scroll-saw, which he manufactured and sold in large quantities, and which for its high merit he received a silver medal at the New England and Maine State Fair held at Portland in 1878. He also received a silver medal in 1884 from the New England and Maine State Fair, held at Bangor, for a meritorious exhibit of machinery.

In 1886, he admitted to partnership his two sons, S. R. and A. R. Penney, and the firm took the name of J. W. Penney & Sons, which it continues to hold. At the New England and Maine State Fair held at Lewiston in 1888, they, for a meritorious exhibit of steam engines and other machinery, were awarded a gold medal.

In 1887, their works were enlarged by the addition of an iron foundry and later by a brass foundry. In 1891, he retired from the firm and from active business, since which he has contributed some articles for the press. Soon after moving to Mechanic Falls he identified himself with the religious interests of the village by a membership with the Methodist Episcopal church. He has served the town on the board of selectmen and in other duties, promoting its growth and prosperity by the employment of skilled and intelligent labor.

CAPT. EPHRAIM PENNEY.

Capt. Ephraim Penney² and Descendants.

13

Capt. Ephraim Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ was born in New Gloucester, Maine, July 15, 1795; married first, by Rev. Ephraim Stinchfield, February 24, 1829, Patience Hewett Stinchfield of New Gloucester, born June 19, 1802, daughter of Rev. Ephraim and Sarah (Herring) Stinchfield. She died in New Gloucester, October 16, 1845.

Beautiful in person, attractive and winning in manner, royal in hospitality, she made her home a delight for her guests, and a joy for her husband and children. Gifted with a sweet voice, she sung the ballads and songs of "ye olden time" with an expression that charmed all hearers. She was known only to be loved and esteemed, and her memory is a most precious legacy. Her sudden death terminated sixteen years of most happy married life.

On November 12, 1860, he married second, Mrs. Sarah Jane Foster of Greenwood, Maine, who died in Pownal, Maine, November 10, 1878.

At the age of eighteen his father died, and upon him and a younger brother fell the care of the home in an unusual way, as most of the older children soon after left the home to care for themselves. Nearly all his life was spent in his native town and in the neighborhood of his birth — more than forty years of which were on the farm he cultivated, and to which he added many acres by his frugality and industry. The last few years of his life were spent in Pownal, where he died.

In 1814, he was drafted to serve three months, from July 1, to November 1, a private in Major Lemuel Weeks' detachment of artillery, and stationed at House Island and Fort Preble in Portland Harbor. In 1820, he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Battalion of Artillery in the First Brigade of Maine militia. His commission was signed by William King, first governor of Maine. In 1825, he was commissioned by Gov. Albion K. Parris as captain of the same battalion.

He was made a mason in the Cumberland Lodge of Free Masons in New Gloucester in 1819, taking his third degree in December of the same year. He remained a worthy and active member of this lodge — serving for several years as Master — till his decease, in Pownal, July 20, 1869, being at that date the oldest living member. He was laid to rest by his brethren with their impressive Masonic ritual.

He was a good man, leading an upright, conscientious life, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellowmen. This was shown in the various offices of town appointment, which from time to time he faithfully filled.

Children, by first marriage, born in New Gloucester :

- 650 I Charles J.,³ b. 1830; d. in New Gloucester, Apr. 30, 1831.
- (651) II Charles Fox,³ b. May 10, 1832; m. 1st, July 20, 1862, Angei Lewis; 2d, Mar. 11, 1884, Flora E. Wharff.
- 652 III Eliza Jane,³ b. June 29, 1834; d. in New Gloucester, May 21, 1860.
- (653) IV Abby Frances,³ b. Oct. 13, 1840; m. Mar. 13, 1862, Lewis C. Blake.

651

Rev. Charles Fox Penney,³ D. D., son of Capt. Ephraim and Patience Hewett (Stinchfield) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, May 10, 1832; married first, July 20, 1862, Angie Lewis, born November 4, 1834, daughter of Capt. Allen and Lucy H. (Briar)

C. F. Penney.

REV. CHARLES FOX PENNEY, D. D.

Lewis of Boothbay, Maine; marriage solemnized in Portland, Maine, by Rev. D. M. Craham, D. D. She died in Augusta, Maine, July 15, 1881. She greatly aided him in his work by the home she always made attractive and beautiful, and by her interest in the work of the church, to which she devoted much time. She was greatly loved and mourned by all classes alike.

He married second, March 11, 1884, at Augusta, Maine, by Rev. J. H. W. Wharff of Newport, Maine, Flora E. Wharff, born in Bangor, Maine, November 11, 1853, daughter of Joseph and Sophia A. (Norton) Wharff. She has proved an equal helpmeet, without whose aid and constant care he would not be able with his bodily infirmities to perform his pastoral duties.

All his early life was spent on the homestead and in the ordinary routine of farm work. When he was thirteen years of age his mother died, but his strong affection for her, and the influence of her life and teaching upon him have been potent factors for blessing till the present. His opportunities for school were limited to a few weeks in the summer and winter with most primitive methods of instruction. He early developed a taste for reading, which was fostered by the opportunity of a small circulating library in the town, to which his father was an annual subscriber. In the spring of 1850, at the age of eighteen years, during a series of revival services, conducted by Rev. William P. Nevens of Danville, in the Freewill Baptist church in New Gloucester, he professed conversion, was baptized in May of the same year and united with the church. This important step wrought a complete change in his life, giving a new impulse and aim. His first thought was to secure an education. In the fall of 1851, he attended school at the then Lewiston Falls Academy, Auburn, Maine. This he followed by teaching two terms of school in the winter; the first in his own school district, and the second in the town of Pownal. He continued to teach for eight successive winters, with one exception, in his native town. The springs and summers he spent at home, assisting in farm work, excepting two summers in which he was hired in the hay field in Yarmouth. In this way, teaching in the winter, attending school in the spring and fall, he prepared himself for college, graduating from the Lewiston Falls Academy in the summer of 1856, and entering the freshman class in Bowdoin College in the fall of the same year.

Not having the means to spend his first year in college, he canvassed in the fall, and taught in the winter, and in the spring went to New Hampton, New Hampshire, where in a term and a half he made up his freshman studies for the year. He passed the examinations to the sophomore class at Bowdoin in July, 1857. During the remaining three years in college, he taught each winter. He graduated in 1860, in the largest class the college ever sent out, numbering fifty-five. Rev. C. S. Perkins, Dr. J. L. Phillips, Hon. Thomas B. Reed, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Judge J. A. Symonds of the Supreme Court of Maine, Hon. W. W. Thomas, Jr., Consul to Norway and Sweden, and Gen. John M. Brown, were among the members of this remarkable class.

In the Class Day exercises, he had the parting address. His college graduating part was a literary disquisition, and was regarded by impartial judges as the "first part in the class" and otherwise denominated "A rare performance." The subject was "The Man for the Times." Its delivery was frequently interrupted by applause — a very rare circumstance on such an occasion. After graduating, he taught a very successful high school in the fall, in the town of Gray, and entered the Free Baptist Divinity School at New Hampton, New Hampshire. In the fall of 1861, he again taught a high school in Gray. He graduated from the Divinity school in July, 1862, and entered upon the pastorate of the Free Baptist church in Augusta, in August of the same year; having received a call to this pastorate in June preceding. He preached his first sermon in the Free Baptist church in New Gloucester, in April, 1858, during his sophomore year in college; and from that time till he entered upon his ministry in Augusta, he supplied many churches in Maine and New Hampshire. He was licensed to preach in June, 1862, and was ordained and installed pastor of the Augusta church in November of the same year. Rev. D. M. Graham, D. D., of Portland, preached the ordination sermon. Previous to entering upon his pastorate in Augusta, the church had been passing through a season of trial and discouragement. For a year the house of worship had been closed except for an occasional service; the society had become weakened in numbers. The Civil war had just commenced. On a salary of five hundred dollars, of which the Home Missionary Society contributed one hundred, he began his work. The first three years of his pastorate were during the period of fratricidal war. It was the absorbing interest. The Sabbath was again and again broken by the tramp of armed men going forth to or returning from the field of peril. It was with much effort that any progress was made. The congregation increased slowly but permanently. Revival followed, and in the spring of 1868, it became necessary to enlarge the house of worship. This was done at an expense of five thousand dollars. For twenty-four years he held the pastorate of this church, refusing again and again calls to the largest churches in his denomination, often at a large advance of salary. In consequence of overwork and exposure, he was taken suddenly ill in January of 1884, from which illness he has never fully recovered. For nearly ten months he was unable to occupy his pulpit.

This continued ill health made his resignation necessary in the summer of 1885. It was not accepted by the church, which gave him instead, a year's vacation. This he spent at Vinal Haven, Maine. Not being able to resume his work at the end of the year, the church reluctantly accepted his renewed resignation. During this pastorate of twenty-four years, four hundred and thirty-six persons were received into the church, three hundred and forty-six by baptism. The Editor of the "Morning Star," the organ of the Free Baptist denomination, in referring to this pastorate, said in its issue of July 22, 1886, "This has been one of the most remarkable pastorates in the history of the denomination; the means of incalculable good to human souls and many interests of the Redeemer's kingdom, and a thing for which vastly more hearts than are found in Augusta may gratefully thank God."

On retiring from the pastorate of the Augusta church, he spent another year at Vinal Haven, supplying the pulpit of the Union church. In the spring of 1887, he received a call to a mission church (Free Baptist) in Oakland, California. Hoping that a change in climate might result in improved health, he accepted the call, and in September entered upon the pastorate of this church. Here he labored till June, 1890. His health made his resignation again a necessity, and with his family he returned to Maine.

During his pastorate in Oakland fifty were added to the church, and its property was freed from an embarrassing debt. In September of 1890, his health had so far improved as to allow him to accept an invitation to supply the pulpit of the Court Street Free Baptist church in Auburn for six months, in the absence of the pastor. This he did, beginning October 1 and ending March 1, 1891. In April he received a call to his old church in Augusta, which he accepted. In November, 1893, he resigned, to accept a call to the Auburn Free Baptist church, whose pulpit he had supplied in 1890 and 1891. His pastorate with the Auburn church began in December, 1893, and he has now entered upon his fourth year. His work has been pleasant and successful, eighty persons having been added to the membership of the church in the last three years. Since his severe illness in 1884, his health has never been restored, and all his work has been performed under the embarrassment of bodily weakness and suffering. During his long pastorate in Augusta he served for eighteen successive years as chaplain of the Maine State Insane Hospital. He also served for many years as chaplain of the Maine State Senate and House of Representatives. For fifteen years he was a member of the School Committee and Board of Directors of schools of Augusta, and for several years acted as chairman of both boards.

He was for many years an editorial contributor to the "Morning Star," some years as many as forty articles appearing from his pen, many of them on the editorial page. He has also been an editorial contributor to the "Free Baptist" published in Minneapolis. For twenty-two years he has been a member of the Board of Corporators of the "Morning Star." He also served for many years as a member of the boards of Home Missions and Educational Societies of his denomination. He is a member of the Board of Overseers of Bates College, and was also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Maine Central Institute, and for several years president of the board. In 1882 and 1883, he greatly aided this institution in its successful struggle to free itself from debt. Six times consecutively he was a member of the General Conference (triennial) from the Yearly Meeting, of which he was a member. He has assisted in the ordination of a large number of ministers, often preaching the sermon. He has also preached many occasional sermons at Yearly Meetings and educational conventions and before educational and literary societies in the state. He has also delivered lectures on different occasions. In June, 1884, he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Bates College. During the thirty-four years of his ministry he has solemnized five hundred and eighty-three marriages, conducted not less than eight hundred funerals, and baptized five hundred persons. He is at present pastor of the Court Street Free Baptist church, Auburn.

Abby Frances Penney,³ daughter of Capt. Ephraim and Patience Hewett (Stinchfield) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, October 13, 1840; married, by Rev. Josiah Keene, March 13, 1862, Lewis C. Blake, born in New Gloucester, March 14, 1842, son of Isaac and Esther (Bennett) Blake.

Mr. Blake spent the early years of his life on the homestead farm, beginning at the age of twenty-four to work on the Grand Trunk Railway on the section included in New Gloucester. In 1867, he was foreman on a section of the Maine Central. Buying, in 1868, a farm in New Gloucester, he superintended its management and continued in the employment of the railroad. In 1878, he went into the employ of the Portland and Rumford Falls Railway and superintended the laying of the rails from Mechanic Falls to Canton, the then terminus of the road. In 1872, he began to suffer with a rheumatic malady which continued to increase in violence until he became entirely helpless, the last five years of his life being years of great physical suffering, but endured with Christian patience and fortitude.

Children, born in New Gloucester :

- 658 I Percival Augustus (Blake⁴), b. July 8, 1866 ; m. by Rev. Charles Fox Penney, D. D., at Auburn, Me., Dec. 31, 1896, May Etta Jordan of New Gloucester, born Nov. 11, 1866, daughter of James P. and Melinda F. (Larrabee) Jordan. Teacher. Mr. Blake is an enterprising farmer, progressive and up to date in his methods. Well versed by education and practise in the mysteries of nature's laboratory, he with skill and success pursues this, to him, congenial vocation, on the ancestral farm at New Gloucester.
- 659 II Charles Lewis (Blake⁴), b. Sept. 26, 1873. Mr. Blake when sixteen years of age, Feb. 22, 1890, left home and went to Lowell, Mass., to learn a trade. He worked at wood engraving for about nine months when failing health obliged him to return home. On June 4, 1892, he returned to Lowell and secured a position with the Merrimack Print Works, as a print engraver, where he is employed at the present time.

JOSEPH PENNEY.

Joseph Penney² and Descendants.

15

Joseph Penney,² son of Thomas and Lydia (Herring) Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, May 1, 1799; married, December 31, 1833, Betsey B. Blake, born March 28, 1811, daughter of Richard Blake of New Gloucester. She died in New Gloucester, September 23, 1864. He died in New Gloucester, January 27, 1885.

He was born in the closing year of the eighteenth century, and was the last born of the family, being but little over fourteen years of age at the time of his father's death. Unlike some of his brothers he was not hasty in entering into the married state, and did not assume that relation until about thirty-five years of age. Prior to this event he made his home at the homestead, working on the farm, and for a few years was employed as a seaman in the coasting business. During this service he had the misfortune to fracture one of his legs, which injury was always afterward manifest in his walk. In 1814, when less than sixteen years of age, he served as a soldier at Portland, as a substitute for his brother Aaron. Being of a frolicsome and fun-loving temperament, this to him was undoubtedly congenial employment, and a happy release from the drudgery of the farm. For some prank incompatible with military discipline he was by order of the captain of his company confined for the offense. The next day being Sunday, while the officers were at church, a comrade let him out, and they went off down the bay fishing. Returning at night they presented the captain with their largest fish, and nothing more was heard of the misdemeanor.

For his service in the army he, under the law of 1850, received a land warrant of forty acres, but under the act of 1855, the widow of his brother Aaron obtained the land bounty and also a pension.

In a few years after his marriage he built a house on the eastern side of Royalls River, where his land lay, and there passed the remaining years of his life, dying at the advanced age of eighty-six.

George B. Penney,³ son of Joseph and Betsey B. (Blake) Penney,² son of Thomas Penney,¹ born in New Gloucester, Maine, November 27, 1837; married, December 22, 1861, Sarah J. Weymouth, born in New Gloucester, September 17, 1843, daughter of David and Mary Angelia (Bailey) Weymouth.

He is now the only living male representative of this name in the town of New Gloucester, and the near locality where our ancestor, Thomas Penney,¹ established his home in the forest in 1778. A hundred and nineteen years have passed away ; the forest has given place to the broad, well-cultivated field. The log house is but an indistinct, traditional remembrance, to those now living, who know this as their picturesque birthplace, lovingly call it home, and

Remembrance wakes, with all her busy train, and fashions pictures of childhood and youth, such as only the scenes and memories of that stage of life can evoke.

The "Low lot," so called, perhaps, from John Low of Cape Ann, one of the original proprietors, he has by his industry and frugality developed into a fine farm with excellent farm buildings and residence. He is a member of the Free-will Baptist Society of New Gloucester, a townsman respected and esteemed.

Children, born in New Gloucester :

- | | | |
|-----|---|--|
| 671 | I | Herbert D., ⁴ b. Apr. 19, 1867; m. Mar. 29, 1890, Ella L. Whitman, daughter of William and Lois Whitman. Mr. Penney is a machinist by trade, resides in Westboro, Mass. Children: |
| 672 | 1 | Lester E., ⁵ b. in Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 20, 1891. |
| 673 | 2 | Lois G., ⁵ b. in New Gloucester, Nov. 13, 1894. |
| 674 | 3 | George William, ⁵ b. in Westboro, Mass., Apr. 18, 1896; d. do., Feb. 21, 1897. |

By an oversight the daughter of George B. and Sarah J. (Weymouth) Penney³—Gertrude Geneva⁴—was omitted. She was born in New Gloucester, Nov. 25, 1871. Teacher. She graduated from the Gorham, Me., Normal School, Jan. 17, 1895.
