PREFACE.

It is the business of the local historian to collect and preserve such incidents relating to towns as would be overlooked by the writers of general history. His work is to gather from State and county archives, recorded facts relating to the foundation of municipalities, but more especially to preserve from destruction the contents of fugitive papers, and to glean from the weakening memories of aged citizens, the facts and traditions which, by their death, would soon be forever lost. A desire to do this for the town of Paris, prompted the compilers to gather up the scattered material relating to its history, and put it in a form to be preserved. Had the task been undertaken a few years ago, before all the first settlers died, it would have been easier of accomplishment, but it is much easier now than it would be a quarter of a century hence. Mercenary motives had no part in our undertaking, for no money is ever made in publishing a town history: it is generally a labor of love and quite frequently a thankless task. Of the compilers, one is a native born of Paris, and has ever lived in the town, and also his father before him, his grand parents being among the early settlers. The other, though born in a neighboring town, spent his boyhood days upon the banks of the Little Androscoggin river in Paris: his grand parents and great grand parents were early here, and his near kindred have always lived in town: so that while one is a native, the other is no stranger to Paris and its people. We bring therefore to this work, something more than a mere desire for gain: we bring to our self-imposed task, a love for this good old municipality, and an ardent desire to gather up and preserve all the fragments of her history, that little if anything may be lost.

For assistance in this undertaking, we are indebted to many, too many to refer to by name. We are under special obligations to those native-born citizens of the town who have left it and made for themselves homes elsewhere, and whose interest in this work has appeared to be not less than that of those whose homes have always been in Paris. Though long removed, their interest and love for the old town are unabated. The historians of a town have not much field for display. They have to do with ordinary events which to be satisfactory to the inhabitants and posterity, must be given in great detail. They are expected to prepare and present all the little incidents which go to make up the life and doings of a single municipi-pality, and if we, in our present undertaking, shall succeed in gathering up the fragments pertaining to the history of Paris, and in bringing them together in a compact form and in a condition to be preserved, we shall feel that our labor has not been in vain. We do not even hope to avoid all errors, but our constant effort has been and will be, in the preparation of this work, and in putting it through the press, to reduce them to the minimum. No town history was ever written that was absolutely free from inaccuracies; where there are so many names and dates to deal with, to prevent errors from creeping in, is next to impossible. Town historians are often accused of error when their statements do not correspond with family tradition, but it is the experience of all historical writers that family tradition, as a rule, is very unreliable evidence of fact, especially in relation to dates. In the preparation of these pages, family tradition has been allowed its due weight, but if cases occur where it has not been followed, let it be understood that it was because it was outweighed by other and more reliable testimony.

In carrying on our investigations, we have availed ourselves of every source of information within our reach. We have by ourselves or through the assistance of others, searched through the archives of Massachusetts to gather facts relating to the early grants, and for statistical returns from Paris before the separation; we have examined the archives of our own State for similar material of a later date; we have looked through the registry of deeds of Cumberland county for land titles of the early settlers, before Oxford county was erected; we have examined nearly every work that has been written bearing on the history of Maine and Massachusetts, including town histories, and a large number of genealogies; we have examined the county records at Paris, and the records of that and many other towns, and have interviewed a large number of persons who were supposed to be in possession of facts worth preserving in this connection. The result of all these examinations, is the volume herewith presented. Objections may be raised that we have gone too much into detail, especially in relation to recent occurrences, but it should be remembered, that we write for posterity as well as for the present generation and posterity always delights in details. With how much more satisfaction do we read accounts of happenings of fifty or a hundred years ago, than of those that recently took place: with posterity it will be the same, for mankind in this regard, are very much the same in all generations. In conclusion: to all who have assisted us in the prosecution of this work whether by imparting information, whether by words of encouragement and approval or by pledging material aid, we return our sincere and heartfelt thanks, and the volume itself is respectfully submitted to the charitable and discriminating consideration of the good people of Paris by

HISTORY OF MAINE.

CHAPTER I.

EPITOME OF EARLY MAINE HISTORY.

English and French Claims.—The Struggle for Empire—Crown and other Grants in Maine.—Boundary Question.—The Duke of York.—Charter of William and Mary.

The first European settlement in Maine was by the Popham Colony near the mouth of the Kennebec, in 1607, and this proved a failure. It was not till some fifteen years after that, that settlers came to stay, and it was more than a century before settlements extended back from the coast except scattering ones upon our navigable rivers. The causes which operated to retard the settlement of our State were the long and persistent contest between France and England, and the hostile attitude of the aboriginal inhabitants, and for more than a hundred and thirty years, the history of Maine and of New England, is made up largely of accounts of violence and bloodshed. With the Indians, it was a struggle for existence, with England and France, for empire. The latter had early sent missionaries among the Indians, who took kindly to the Roman Catholic faith, and most of the tribes became their faithful allies during the long and bloody struggle. The French held possession of the St. Lawrence river, and it was at Quebec that nearly all the raids upon the settlements in New England were planned: they were planned by the French and executed jointly by the French and Indians. England and France, each claimed this country by priority of discovery. The French claim was founded first, on the discovery of the coast of Maine by Verrazzano, in 1524, who named the country New France: second, on the discovery and occupancy of Canada in 1535, by Cartier: third, the grant of Henry IV to DeMonts in 1603: fourth, the voyage and occupation of the country under DeMonts and Champlain, and others who claimed under the same charter. The English defended their title on the following grounds: first the discovery of Cabot in 1497; second, the possession of Newfoundland by Gilbert in 1553; third, the voyages and landings of Gosnold, Pring, Weymouth and others, and fourth the charter of 1606, and the occupation of the country by the Popham Colony in 1607 and subsequently, and by Gorges and others claiming under it. The great question between the two powers, as to the right of possession, turned on the occupancy of the country under the charter. And as the French based their claim largely on the settlement under the charter of DeMonts in 1603, so the English claim was based upon the settlement in 1607, under the Virginia charter of 1606. But as the charter of DeMonts had been revoked in 1607, and its rights conveyed by a new charter to Madame DeGuerecheville, a strong advantage in the French claim was lost: for the English claimed with great force that the English settlement under the English charter now gave them absolute priority and indisputable right. But the French did not so readily abandon their title. On the contrary, they pushed their settlements and arms and their missions, to the western verge of their claims. When the Popham Colony broke up in 1608, it is said the French at once began to settle within their limits. The struggle, as already stated, was long and bitter, for both parties were impelled by self interest and pride, and by an assumed consciousness of right.

The Great Charter of New England was granted in 1620, while the pilgrims were on their passage to this country, and through the influence of Sir Ferdinando Gorges and his associates. The corporation was called the "Council of Plymouth" in the county of Devon, England, and the charter granted the territory from the fortieth to the forty-eighth degree of north latitude. The southern limit was in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and the northern the Bay of Chaleur, and the grant extended through the mainland from ocean to ocean. In 1621, the Council of Plymouth granted to the pilgrims the lands which they occupied, and upon this charter as enlarged in 1630, all the legal land titles of the Old Colony are based. In 1629, the same Council granted to Wm. Bradford and his associates that territory on Kennebec river long known as the Plymouth Patent, and subsequently as the Kennebec Purchase. Its bounds were somewhat indefinite, but as finally adjudicated, it embraced the land on each side of the river fifteen miles in breadth and extending from Merrymeeting bay, to the falls near Norridgewock. August 10, 1622, a patent was granted to Gorges and Mason, conveying to them the country between the Merrimac and Kennebec rivers, to their farthest head, and sixty-five miles inland, together with all the islands within five leagues of the shore, which the indenture states, "they intend to call the Province of Maine." In March 1628, a patent was granted to Governor Winthrop and his associates of the Massachusetts Bay, which was confirmed by royal charter, a year later. In 1629, Gorges and Mason divided their territory, Mason taking the western portion between the Piscataqua and Merrimac rivers, which he called New Hampshire, and Gorges from the Piscataqua to the Kennebec. The council of Plymouth in their eagerness to settle the country and build up cities and counties in the wilderness, were careless and even reckless in their grants of land, overlaying patents and ignoring boundaries of previous grants, and thereby sowing the seeds of controversies which were not settled for many years. Some of these grants are briefly summarized below:

1630. A deed to Thomas Lewis and Richard Bonython of a tract of land on the north side of Saco river, four miles along the coast and eight miles into the mainland. Also a deed of the same description to John Oldham and Richard Vines, on the south side of the river, the whole tract being eight miles square.

1630. The Muscongus grant, afterwards known as the Waldo patent. This was issued to Beauchamp and Leverett of England, and extended on the seaboard between the Muscongus and Penobscot rivers, and as far north as would embrace a territory equal to thirty miles square.

1630. Lygonia, or the Plow Patent, so called because the vessel which brought the colonists over was called the "Plow." This grant extended from Kennebunk to Harpswell, including right of soil and of government. In 1643, this patent was transferred to Col. Rigby, an English lawyer, whose contest with Gorges lasted forty years.

1631. Black Point to Thomas Canmock. This is the basis of land titles in Scarborough.

1631. Pejypscot patent to Richard Bradshaw, fifteen hundred acres on the north side of the river, "not granted previously to any other."

1631. Agamenticus, twelve thousand acres, to Edward Godfrey—the present town of York.

1631. Richmond's Island and fifteen hundred acres at Spurrwink, to Walter Bagnall.

1631. Cape Porpoise to John Stratton.

1632. The tract between Cammock's patent and the river and bay of Casco, to Trelawney and Goodyear.

1632. Pemaquid patent, twelve thousand acres along the coast, and the islands three leagues into the ocean, with right of government.

1632. Way and Purchase patent, a tract on the river Pejepscot, now the Androscoggin, now the town of Brunswick, &c.

The Great Council of Plymouth having encountered many vexations, in 1635, agreed to surrender their charter, and determined to divide their territory into eight provinces, two of which were within the present limits of Maine. The region between the Kennebec and the St. Croix was to be given to Sir William Alexander, Earl of Sterling, and was to be called the county of Canada. The coast from the Kennebec to the Piscataqua and extending sixty miles into the mainland, was assigned to Gorges, and named New Somersetshire. Efforts were made by Gorges to establish a government and he partially succeeded, but political dissensions in the old world unsettled everything, and the troubles which arose from the grants previously made within his patent, induced him in 1639, to apply for a new charter which was granted by Charles I. It confined all the territory within his old boundaries on the coast and extending twice as far into the mainland. He changed the name to the Province of Maine.

The terms of the Massachusetts charter, established their northern boundary three miles north of the Merrimac river, "and each and every part of it." To this line all had agreed. But when Massachusetts found it necessary to justify the seizure of Maine, her citizens conceived a new interpretation of the language describing the bounds. The river makes a right angle about thirty miles from its mouth, and from that point stretches almost due north; so instead of a line three miles north of the river at its mouth, they took a point three miles north of its head waters, and from that run a line easterly to the sea, which would give them all of New Hampshire, and a large part of Maine. In her aggressive movement for the capture of Maine, the government of the Massachusetts Bay proceeded cautiously, but with a manifest determination to win. In 1652, she was at York and Saco. Four years after she had reached Falmouth. The next year an action was brought against Thomas Purchas at Brunswick, but he resisted and won his case in the courts. Then a new line was run to White Head Island in Penobscot bay. There was then an English settlement at Pemaquid, which was older than Massachusetts or Plymouth, and the new boundary was made to embrace it. It seemed to have made no difference that the territory east of the Kennebec belonged to the Duke of York. The Duke had purchased it from the Earl of Sterling in 1663, including all his American possessions, and the next year received a royal charter from his brother Charles II. Massachusetts prepared to contest his title by occupation, and in 1674, set up a court and organized a local government at Pemaquid, naming the territory the county of Devonshire. The Duke contested until he ascended the throne as James II, when the territory was annexed to the Massachusetts Bay government. The eastern limit of Maine was first fixed at the Sagadahoc river, the name by which the Kennebec below Merrymeeting Bay was once called, then at the Penobscot and finally at the St. Croix, as at the present time. The contest for Acadia as this Eastern territory was once called, as being the door to Canada by way of the St. Lawrence, was long and bloody. Its importance as a vantage ground may be understood in the frequency with which it changed hands. It was in 1632 ceded to the French by the treaty of St. Germain; in 1655, it was repossessed by the English by conquest; in 1667, it was again ceded to the French by the treaty of Breda; in 1690, it was reconquered by the English under Sir William Phipps, a Maine man; in 1691, it was united to the Province of the Massachusetts Bay by the charter of William and Mary; in 1696, it was virtually repossessed by the French, and Massachusetts surrendered it back to the Crown of England; in 1697, it reverted to France by the treaty of Ryswick; in 1713, it was ceded to England by the treaty of Utrecht; in 1755, the Acadians who still maintained allegiance to France, were expelled; in 1759 it was confirmed to England at the capitulation of Louisburg and Quebec.

But the contest between Massachusetts and the Gorges interest grew so bitter, and attracted so much attention in England, that commissioners were sent over by the crown to investigate the matter. Arms had already been resorted to, and the courts established by the Massachusetts Bay Colony were protected by troops. The question before the High Court of Chancery, the King in Council in 1677, rendered the just and common sense decision that the north line of the Massachusetts Colony was three miles from the north bank of the Merrimac river at its mouth, and the Province of Maine both as to soil and government was the rightful property of the heirs of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. When this decision reached Boston, Massachusetts instructed her agent to make purchase of the title, and the heir of Gorges sold his interest in the Province of Maine for the paltry sum of twelve hundred and fifty pounds. But Massachusetts did not long enjoy her triumph, for in June 1684, the charter of the Massachusetts Bay was declared forfeited by the King, and a copy of the judgment was served a month after. King Charles died, and James succeeded him and then were renewed those commotions and oppressions which in this country were connected with the name of Sir Edmund Andros, and the attempt to consolidate and really subjugate all the northern colonies: and which in England resulted in the revolution of 1688, the flight of King James and the accession of William and Mary of the House of Orange. At the accession of William and Mary, Massachusetts had every reason to expect to be restored to her ancient rights, but there were now numerous interests to be harmonized: the sovereigns, though sympathizing with the Puritans, were unwilling to restore so liberal a charter, and one which had been so freely interpreted. There had come to be strong shades of difference in religious and political opinions among the colonists, but the late disturbances and common sufferings had the sentiment of a common cause and the need of unity. And so it happened, that in 1691, these elements whether harmonious or discordant, Pilgrim, Puritan or Episcopalian, were bound together by a royal charter which consolidated the colonies of Plymouth, the Massachusetts Bay, the District of Maine, Sagadahoc and all of Acadia into one Province and under one title, the Province of the Massachusetts Bay. A few years later, the Maritime Provinces were receded to the Crown. Maine was now in fact a part of Massachusetts, and the first governor of the consolidated Provinces, was Sir William Phipps, a distinguished son of Maine. This relation existed for a hundred and thirty years, till 1820, when a separation was made by mutual consent, and Maine became an independent State.

CHAPTER II.

SOLDIERS' LAND GRANTS.

*Phillips War.—Narragansett Townships.—Canada Townships.—
Conditions attached to the Grants.—Settling Duties, &c.*

The long and sanguinary conflict to control the destinies of this country between the two leading powers of Europe, has already been referred to, and also the conspicuous part which New England was early and constantly called upon to bear. Strange as it may seem, the Aborigines took kindly to the bigotry and superstitions of the Roman Catholic church, and were ever the faithful allies of the French, and it is a fact well authenticated that all the Indian raids upon our frontier settlements, were planned at Quebec, and, as a general thing, executed jointly by the French and Indians. The Narragansett war, however, was an exception and was brought on by the continued encroachments of the English upon the domain of the Indians, and the frequent grants of territory which the Indians claimed to be theirs. It was intended by King Phillip to be a war of utter extermination, and it was met by the whites in very much the same spirit. It was in 1675 that Phillip's war, called also the Narragansett war, broke out, and to carry it to a successful issue severely taxed the resources of the colonies. At its close, the war between France and England was resumed in the carrying on of which the Indians, as usual, were an important factor, and in which the colonists of New England were the greatest sufferers. In 1691, the new charter of the Massachusetts Bay was granted to include Plymouth, Maine and Acadia, which was a result highly gratifying to the Bay government, and which put the General Court in an excellent mood. The Government was poor and had naught with which to pay the soldiers for their arduous services except land, and of land they had an abundance. Seven townships were surveyed and granted for services in Phillip's war, of which two were in Maine. These were called Narragansett Townships. Another and still larger class of townships was granted to those who took part in the expedition against Canada in 1690, under Sir William Phipps. Several of these townships were located in Maine, and most of them were granted to the heirs of those who did the actual services. Some of these are Raymond, Bridgton, Waterford, Turner, Jay, Otisfield, Bethel and perhaps Poland. Eight of these Canada townships were originally laid out in New Hampshire, upon territory then claimed by Massachusetts: five of them were held by the grantees under a subsequent arrangement with the Masonian proprietors, and the proprietors of three of them, after many years, took new grants in Maine, in lieu of them. These three grants are now the towns of Bridgton, Waterford and Turner. So in Maine, we had five original Canada townships and three by substitution. Livermore was granted for services in the reduction of Port Royal, and Port Royal was the plantation name of the town.

Individuals were equally successful in obtaining grants of land, if there was the least foundation for their claim. Samuel Jordan of Biddeford and Christopher Baker, who had been captives to the Indians in Canada; Richard Cutts of Kittery, who was shot ten years before and lay sick of his wounds; Ruth Lee who had lost her husband in the attack upon Port Royal; the children of Major Converse who had lost their father in the Indian wars; and Richard Tozier of Berwick who had suffered much from the savages: all of these and many others obtained grants of land varying from one to two hundred acres, which they had a right to select from any of the unappropriated lands in Maine. Any person severely wounded, bereaved of husband or father, made captive or cripple, was, upon request, sure of receiving the legislative bounty.* The Canada grants were all made through the Committee of Lands, whose report at this period and subsequently, was considered a sufficient reason for a legislative grant, and was passed upon without question or delay. There was always a condition attached to each grant of a township, that a certain number of actual settlers should be upon the territory within a specified time, that a house of worship should be erected and a regularly ordained minister settled.

About the year 1735, numerous petitions were presented to the General Court for grants of land, some of them from old and thickly settled Massachusetts towns which wanted room to expand or colonize, but in most instances from persons or their descendants, who had done service in the Indian wars. Some were for specific service as in the invasion of Canada or at the reduction of Port Royal, while others were for general service in the colonial army. As the lands in Massachusetts proper had nearly all been granted, and as the continued hostilities of the Indians prevented settlements in the interior of Maine, the grants of this period were mostly made from lands which are now in the State of New Hampshire, and for further reasons which will be treated of more at length hereafter. Townships granted for settlement were proprieties or proprietaries, being corporate tenancies in common, and several acts were passed providing for calling proprietor's meetings, regulating their officers, enforcing their votes, making assessment and collecting taxes. The Massachusetts Bay Government was interested in the settlement of new towns, because it enlarged her borders, increased her wealth and population, and erected additional barriers against the attacks of hostile Indians. The Crown on the other hand, was opposed because the extension of new settlements opened up more convenient avenues to the King's forests of oak and pine, and other ship timber reserved in the grant to the Province.

CHAPTER III.

LAND GRANTS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Boundary Contest.—Massachusetts Defeated and her Grants declared Void.

The controversy between the proprietors of New Hampshire and the Massachusetts Bay government, respecting the northern boundary of the latter, was very similar to the one between Massachusetts and Maine, which has already been referred to. When the early grants were made, the country, except along the seacoast, was very little known. Some of the principal rivers had been examined so far as they were navigable, but beyond their navigable points, their direction was unknown, and the lands bordering upon them a terra incognita. It is no wonder, then, that grants bounded by rivers whose general direction was unknown, and extending to seas or oceans whose very existence was in dispute, should be subjects of dispute and of almost interminable litigation. The Hon. Rufus Choate, who was employed in a case growing out of a question of the boundary line between Massachusetts and Rhode Island, said, "I would as soon think of setting forth the boundaries between sovereign states as beginning at a blue-jay on the bough of a pine tree, thence easterly to a dandelion gone to seed, thence due south to three hundred foxes with fire-brands tied between their tails." The terms of the Massachusetts charter granted in 1629 and confirmed in 1691, established the northern boundary three miles north of the Merrimac river and each and every part of it, meaning of course, three miles beyond the river. It was then supposed as already stated, that the general course of the Merrimac was from west to east, whereas at a point about thirty miles from the sea, it makes a right angle and from that point stretches almost due north. There was no mistake as to the meaning and intent of the grant in fixing this northern boundary, but when Massachusetts wished to find a pretext for taking possession of a large proportion of the grants to Gorges and Mason, a new interpretation was given to the language describing the boundary, and instead of a line three miles across the river at its mouth, a point was taken three miles north of its headwaters, and from that a line easterly to the sea. If this interpretation had been sustained, nearly the whole territory of New Hampshire would have gone to Massachusetts. The Masonian proprietors stoutly resisted this encroachment, and in the settled towns on the disputed territory, there was constant trouble. Governor Belcher in a letter to the Lords of Trade in London, said: "the borderers on the lines, (if your Lordships will allow me so vulgar an expression), live like toads under a barrow, being run into jails, on the one side and the other, as often as they please to quarrel, such is the sad condition of his Majesty's subjects that live near the lines. They pull down one another's houses, often wound each other, and I fear it will end in bloodshed, unless his Majesty, in his goodness, gives some effectual order to have the bounds fixt." While this controversy was going on, the Massachusetts Bay government was annually making grants within the limits of the contested territory until no less than thirty-seven townships were granted. As stated elsewhere, some of these grants were for services in the invasion of Canada in 1690, some for services in the reduction of Port Royal, some for general military service without specification, and others for no military services at all. A large number of grants was made in 1735-6, partly doubtless with the view of occupying the disputed territory and with the hope of thereby influencing the decision of the boundary question, and partly for the purpose of encouraging the settlement of several northern towns to operate as a barrier against the incursions of hostile Indians from Canada. Among other townships ordered laid out in 1735, were two tiers of six each, extending from the Merrimac to the Connecticut rivers. Number four of this survey was granted to Samuel Jackson, and fifty-nine others of Newton, Watertown, Waltham and neighboring towns. Number one of this survey, between Merrimac and Connecticut rivers, was granted to Salisbury and Amesbury, and is the present town of Warner. In a History of the town recently published, by Gen. Walter Harriman, it is stated that it was not known that its grantees had rendered any particular service to the King. "They gave nothing for their township, but at the time this, and many other grants were made, the boundary was in controversy, and, to gain ground in the contest, Massachusetts used every effort to induce men to accept grants of land." This statement is corroborated by records contemporaneous with the grants. Meanwhile, the contest was sharply carried on, and after commissioners appointed for the purpose, had failed to come to a decision, the matter was referred directly to King George the second, whose royal decision promulgated on the 5th of March, 1740, was far better for New Hampshire than ever the Masonian proprietors claimed. It established a curved line, "following the course of the river Merrimac at the distance of three miles on the north side, beginning at the Atlantic ocean and ending at Pawtucket Falls (now Lowell), thence due west to His Majesty's other governments." This is the present line between the two States. By this decision, all the grants made north of this line by Massachusetts, were rendered null and void, including the grant to "Samuel Jackson and others." Some of the grantees made terms with the Masonian proprietors and retained their lands, but in most cases and the case of Samuel Jackson and others among them, the grants were abandoned.

CHAPTER IV.

The Greed for Land.—Grants of 1735-6.—Action of the Governor and Council.

Our New England ancestors were not only lovers of liberty, but they also early developed a passion for land, and soon after the first settlements in Plymouth and the Massachusetts Bay colonies, and the organization of colonial governments, the people began to clamor for grants of land, and that clamor did not cease until all the public lands had passed from government to private control. The town of Duxbury was settled from Plymouth about the year 1632, or twelve years after the landing, and in 1644, on the petition of Duxbury men, the court ordered a survey of territory, and in the following year granted the petitioners that large tract of land which was called Bridgewater, and from which several good sized towns have since been formed. Other territorial grants were made, and settlements began in Marshfield, Middleboro, Rochester, and at various other places, and in a few years the whole of Plymouth Colony was dotted over with settlements, though no town had anything like the population which its soil, if well cultivated, was capable of supporting. The same is equally true of the early settlers of the Massachusetts Bay. Salem was settled in 1628, Charlestown in 1629, Dorchester in 1630, and Boston and Watertown the same year, and hardly had a beginning been made in these towns, before the settlers were seized with a desire to colonize still farther, and outlying tracts were quickly taken up and occupied. So anxious were they to possess all the land that joined them, that they did not even wait for the extinguishment of the Indian titles by the government, but individuals often purchased lands of the Indian sachems for a mere trifle, and made no little troublesome litigation for themselves and their posterity, thereby. This mania for landed property was doubtless due to the fact that most of the first New England settlers were men of moderate means, had never owned real estate, but had been tenants upon the large estates of the landed gentry of Old England. Hence, to become possessed of land, and lords of the soil, was to them a novel and most interesting change, and not satisfied with the small areas allotted to them in the first settled towns, they wished to go where they could spread out and extend their boundaries in imitation of their landlords in the country from which they came. The complaint of being "straitened for want of more land," was put forth by the first settlers, and was repeated by their descendants for more than a century and a half. Rev. Thomas Hooker with his company, came to Dorchester in 1633, and because towns had been begun so near Cambridge as Charlestown, Roxbury and Watertown, he went through the wilderness and commenced a settlement at Hartford, Connecticut, in order that he might not be crowded. After the extinguishment of the Indian titles, or the most of them, by the government of the Massachusetts colony, they very freely made grants of farms and townships to individuals and to companies on certain prescribed conditions to be complied with. For the grant of a township, the usual conditions were, that the number of grantees should not be less than sixty, that sixty families should be settled upon the grant within seven years, and an orthodox minister be settled. Reservations were made of lands for ministerial purposes and for schools. It by no means followed that a person who applied for a grant, intended ever to settle upon it himself, and it was often the case that only a small per cent of the grantees ever saw the territory granted them, or any part of it. It was frequently a matter of speculation, and became a passion which pervaded all classes of the community. Professional men, doctors, lawyers and ministers of the gospel, government officers from the chief magistrate down, as well as the merchants, mechanics, farmers and common laborers were more or less affected with this mania for wild lands, nor has it by any means died out even in our own times. The lands of the Massachusetts Bay and of the Plymouth Colony had all or nearly all been granted prior to 1691, when by the royal charter of William and Mary, the two colonies were consolidated and with the Province of Maine, placed under the government of the Massachusetts Bay. There were still extensive tracts of land embracing the entire interior of Maine, which had not been granted nor settled on account of continued Indian hostilities.

In 1735, quite a number of petitions for grants of land had accumulated, and at a meeting of the Great and General Court holden in Boston on the 15th day of January, 1735 (O. S.), Edmund Quincy, Esq., from the committee on Petitions for townships of land, etc., reported in substance as follows: "That there be a careful view and survey of the lands between Merrimac and

Connecticut rivers from the northwest corner of Rumford (now Concord, N. H.) on Merrimac river to the Great Falls on the Connecticut, of twelve miles at least in breadth, or north and south, by a committee of eleven able and suitable persons to be appointed by this court, who shall, after a due knowledge of the nature and the circumstances thereof, lay out the same into as many townships of the contents of six miles square as the land in width as aforesaid will allow of; no township to be more than six miles east and west, and also lay out the land on the east side of Connecticut river from said Falls to the township laid out to Josiah Williard and others, into as many townships of the contents of six miles square, as the same will allow of; and also the land on the west side of the river Connecticut from said Falls to the equivalent land, into one or two townships of the contents of six miles square, if the same will allow thereof; and that the said committee make report of their doings to the Court at their session in May next, or as soon as they conveniently can, that so the persons whose names are contained in the several petitions hereafter mentioned, viz.: In the Petition of Hopkinton: in that of Salisbury and Amesbury: in that of Cambridge: in that of Bradford and Wenham: in that of Haverhill: in that of Milton and Brookline: in that of Samuel Chamberlain and Jonathan Jewett: in that of Nathaniel Harris et als.: in that of Stephens, Goulder et als.: in that of Jonathan Wells et als.: in that of Lyscom and Johnson et als.: in that of Isaac Little et als.: in that of Jonathan Powers et als.: in that of John Whitman, Esq., et als.: in that of Samuel Haywood et als.: in that of Josiah Fossett et als.: in that of John Flynt et als.: in that of John Harvard and others of Bridgewater, that have not heretofore been admitted grantees or settlers within the space of seven years last past, or in any former or other grant of a township or particular grant on condition of settling; and that shall appear and give security to the value of forty pounds to perform the conditions that shall be enjoined by the court, may by the major part of the committee, be admitted grantees into one of the said townships: the committee to give public notice of the time and place of their meeting to admit the grantees: which committee shall be empowered to employ surveyors and chainmen to assist them in surveying and laying out said township: the Province to bear the charge, and be repaid by the grantees who may be admitted, the whole charge they shall advance: which committee we apprehend, ought to be directed and empowered to admit sixty settlers in each township, and take their bonds payable to the committee and their successors in the said trust, to the use of the Province for the performance of the conditions of their grant, viz. : that each grant build a dwelling house of eighteen feet square and seven feet stud at the least, on their respective home-lots : and fence in and break up for plowing, or clear and stock with English grass, five acres of land within three years next after their admittance, and cause their respective lots to be inhabited : and that the grantees do within the space of three years from the time of their being admitted, build and finish a convenient meeting house for the public worship of God, and settle a learned Orthodox Minister : and in case any of the grantees shall fail or neglect to perform what is enjoined as above, the committee shall be obliged to put the bond in suit and take possession of the lands and rights that shall become forfeit, and proceed to grant them to other persons that will appear to fulfil the conditions within one year next after the said last mentioned grant. And if sufficient number of petitioners that have had no grant within seven years as aforesaid, viz. : sixty to each township, do not appear, others may be admitted, provided they have fulfilled the conditions of their former grant : the committee to take care that there be sixty-three house-lots laid out in as regular, compact and defensible a manner as the land will allow of, one of which lots shall be for the first settled minister, one for the second settled minister, and one for the schools : to each of which an equal proportion of lands shall accrue in all future divisions.

The report of the committee received favorable consideration and on the day following, the Court ordered : "That Joseph Gerrish, Benjamin Prescott, Josiah Willard, Job May, Esquires, Mr. Moses Pierson and Capt. Joseph Gould, with such as the Honorable Board shall join, be a committee to all intents and purposes to effect the business projected by the report of the committee of both Houses, to consider the petitions for townships which passed this day, viz. : on the proposed line between Merrimac and Connecticut rivers, and on both sides of the Connecticut river, and that there be granted and allowed to be paid out of the public treasury after the rate of fifteen shillings per diem for every day he is in the service in the woods, and subsistence, and ten shillings per diem for every day to each one of the said committee while in the service, in admitting settlers into the said townships, and subsistence, to be paid as aforesaid."

“In Council, Read and concurred, and Wm. Dudley, Samuel Welles, Thomas Berry, Joseph Wilder, and John Chandler, Jr., Esquires, are joined with the committee of the House, for the line between Merrimac and Connecticut rivers, &c.”

CHAPTER V.

TITLES TO THE SOIL.

Original Land Titles in Maine.—Land Titles in Oxford County, with Areas of Territory Granted and Sold prior to 1820.

A brief sketch of the land titles in Maine upon which all our rights in real estate are based, though not belonging especially to the history of Paris, may not be without interest in this connection. These titles are of four kinds, viz.: Crown grants and grants from Lords proprietors, Indian grants or titles, Province grants and Province sales. The titles in York, Cumberland and Lincoln counties with a considerable portion of Kennebec, are almost wholly of the two former classes; those in Oxford county are entirely of the two latter. The following are the Province grants in this county, as originally organized, made either for military service in the French and Indian wars, or in lieu of grants made of what proved to be New Hampshire lands, either for military or other service, or to insure their settlement:

TOWN.	ACRES.	GRANTEES, &c.
Bethel,	24,278	Canada Township.
Gilead,	14,345	Peabody's Patent.
Fryeburg,	26,549	grant to Gen. Joseph Frye for military services.
Hebron & Oxford,	36,221	to Alex Shepard, Jr., for surveying pub. lands.
Jay & Canton,	20,905	Phipps Canada: in lieu of a former grant.
Livermore,	27,430	military service at Port Royal.
Lovell & Sweden,	37,430	Capt. Lovewell and company.
Paris,	23,971	Joshua Fuller et als., in lieu of former grant.
Turner,	31,359	Sylvester Canada: in lieu of former grant.
Rumford,	19,170	grant to citizens of Concord, N. H.
Waterford,	21,192	Canada township, in lieu of former grant.

The following are the Province sales of townships and parts of townships in Oxford county, and the grants to academies which soon came into proprietors hands:

Sundry small grants,	8,200	Various Persons.

The areas of towns in acres as here given, are taken from the returns of surveys, in the office of the Secretary of State in Boston, for all the transfers here mentioned were made prior to the separation of Maine from Massachusetts in 1820. In many cases, the actual number of acres is considerably greater than these returns show. In the case of Paris, for instance, the area in acres as returned, was 23,971, while the town as originally laid out contained more than 30,000 acres. An important allowance was always made in surveying for ponds and rivers, often for poor land, and for the "swag" of the four rod chain. A township of six miles square, the usually limited size of early grants, would contain 23,040 acres, but grantees were always greedy and sometimes unscrupulous, while the government was generally lenient where the prescribed limits were not exceeded by more than one-fourth or one-third. The grant of Sudbury, Canada (Bethel) was for a township six and one-half miles square, but to take in as much of the Androscoggin as possible with its choice bottom lands, the length of the town was made twelve or more miles.

CHAPTER VI.

GRANT OF 1736.

Samuel Jackson and others.—No. 4 Surveyed and Lotted, and Proprietors Draw their Rights.—Preparations for settlement briskly going on.—A sudden suspension.—No. 4 Proves to be in New Hampshire and the Grant is Void.

At a Great and General Court held in Boston on the 24th day of November, 1736. the following vote passed the two Houses and was consented to by the Governor :

“Voted, that Capt. Samuel Jackson be and hereby is fully authorized and empowered to assemble and convene the grantees or proprietors of the township No. 4, lying in the line of towns between the rivers of Connecticut and Merrimac, to assemble in such place as they shall be notified and warned to convene and assemble at, in order to choose a moderator and clerk, and a committee to allot and divide their lands, and to dispose of the same, and to pass such votes and orders as by them may be thought conducive to the speedy fulfillment of the conditions of their grants, and also to agree upon methods for calling of meetings for the future. Provided none of their votes concerning the dividing or disposing of their lands that shall be passed while they are under the direction of the committee of this court, shall be offered before they are allowed of by said committee.”

In pursuance of this order, Mr. Jackson in due time, proceeded to notify the grantees of the time and place of meeting, by posting and publishing notices, of which the following is a copy :

“Pursuant to an order of the Great and General Court or Assembly of His Majesty’s Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England: These are to notify the proprietors or grantees of the township No. 4, lying in the line of towns between the rivers of Connecticut and Merrimac, that they assemble and meet at the house of Mr. John Brown in Watertown, on Thursday the twenty-fourth day of February current, at ten of the clock in the forenoon of said day, to choose a moderator and a proprietor’s clerk, and also to consider and conclude when and how the house lots shall be laid out, and to choose a committee to complete the same, and to agree and determine how the meetings of the proprietors shall be called for the future: and to grant such sum or sums of money as shall be thought needful for laying out the house lots, and other necessary charges: and to choose a collector and proprietors’ treasurer, and to consider how the charges of the proprietors' meetings shall be defrayed: and to know whether the proprietors will renew the bounds of said township, and also to consider and conclude upon any other thing or things that may be thought proper to act upon at said meeting." Dated at Newton, February 8th. 1736-7."

The following is a list of the grantees, sixty in number, in the order in which they appear upon the petition :

Samuel Jackson.	Richard Park.	Nathaniel Stone.
John Spring.	William Park.	Josiah Mixer.
Thomas Greenwood.	David Whitney.	Daniel Robbins.
Ebenezar Stearns.	John Stowell.	Richard Coolidge.
Oaks Angier.	Benjamin Bond.	Joseph Coolidge.
Isaac Jackson.	James Dix.	Josiah Fuller.
William Trowbridge.	George Harrington.	Joseph Mason.
William Williams.	George Harrington, Jr.	Daniel Bond.
Thomas Quiner.	Thomas Bisco.	John Whitney.
Thomas Harris.	Samuel Stowell.	Thaddeus Coolidge.
David Sanger.	Ebenezar Brown.	David Learned.
John Burrledge.	Jonas Coolidge.	Samuel Randall.
Joshua Fuller.	Nathaniel Spring.	Richard King.
Peter Durell.	Christopher Grant.	Joseph Allen.
Samuel Shattuck.	Isaac Fuller.	John Coolidge.
Nathaniel Smith.	Ebenezar Goddard.	Thomas Frost.
William Coolidge.	William Dana.	Mr. Caleb Trowbridge.
Oliver Livermore.	Jonathan Learned.	Mr. Edward Jackson.
William Brown.	Jonathan Bemis.	David Coolidge.
Josiah Goddard.	Moses Hastings.	David Livermore.

The proprietors held their first meeting pursuant to the call of Mr. Jackson, and proceeded to organize by the choice of Capt. Samuel Jackson as moderator, and Joseph Mason, Esq., clerk. It would seem that some of the grantees were minors, for it was voted that such of the proprietors as were under age, if present, should be allowed to act and vote in the proprietors' meetings. It was also declared as the sense of the meeting, that the legal representatives of any of the absent proprietors should be permitted to act and vote in their behalf. The proprietors voted that the sixty-three house lots required by the terms of the grant to be laid out in township No. 4, should be laid out by the first of June following; that they should contain thirty acres at least, to the lot, and the committee was directed in laying out the lots, to have regard as to quantity and quality, and where the land is poorer, to make allowance in quantity so as to give to each lot, thirty acres of good land.

William Brown, Oliver Livermore, Isaac Jackson, Joshua Fuller, John Burridge, Jonas Coolidge and Richard Park were chosen a committee to lay out the house lots, and were authorized to employ a surveyor and two chainmen to assist them. A standing committee to call future meetings was chosen, consisting of Capt. Samuel Jackson, William Williams and Joseph Mason. It was voted that future meetings should be called by posting notices in Watertown and Newton, fourteen days before the time appointed therein for holding the same. It was also voted that a meeting of the proprietors should be called at any time, on application, in writing to the committee, of ten or more of the proprietors. It was voted to raise and assess the sum of forty shillings on each proprietor's lot or right, to defray the charge of laying out the lots as above, and other necessary expenses, and that twenty shillings on each lot or right of the above forty shillings, be collected and paid into the treasurer by the first of April following, and the balance by the first of June. Daniel Robbins, Ebenezer Brown, and Christopher Grant were chosen collectors, and Joseph Mason was chosen proprietors' treasurer. By a vote of the proprietors, the committee chosen to lay out the house lots, were empowered to renew the boundaries of their township. The votes passed at this meeting were approved by the committee of the General Court at Boston, July 1, 1737.

The next meeting of the proprietors was holden at the house of John Brown of Watertown, on Monday, the fourth day of July, 1737, and Capt. Samuel Jackson was chosen moderator. Nathaniel Stone produced qualifications to act in behalf of Moses Hastings. It was voted to allow each member of the committee to lay out the house lots, ten pounds each for their services. At this meeting paper lots were prepared by a committee chosen for that purpose, and the proprietors proceeded to draw. No. 13 containing 40 acres, was reserved as the first minister's lot, No. 41, containing 31 acres, as the second, and number 42, of 40 acres, for the use of schools. It was voted that if a proprietor should be dissatisfied with the lot he should draw, he might at any time within two years, lay out another at his own expense, not exceeding thirty-one acres, and present a plan thereof to the committee for confirmation and approval. Fifty-five of the proprietors then drew their house lots, fifty-three of whom were original grantees. Samuel Hastings drew on the right of Ebenezer Stearns, and Rev. Seth Storer on the right of Jonathan Bemis. The proprietors not present to draw their lots, were permitted to draw at the clerk's office, on condition that they should first pay their dues.

The next meeting was holden at the dwelling house of Widow Mary Learned, in Watertown, on Tuesday, the eighth day of February, A. D., 1739. It was voted first that "the charge of the meeting be borne by the whole Society," and second, that "there shall be no lickers brought to the society that they shall be charged for, but what is ordered by the committee." It was voted "to choose a committee to find out a convenient way to our township, and work out the same." Isaac Jackson, Joshua Fuller and Samuel Randall were appointed such committee. The same committee were directed to find out the southwest corner of their township. It was voted to build a house on their township for the use of the proprietors in common, whose dimensions should be twenty-three feet in length, eighteen in width, and eight feet stud, and John Spring, Isaac Jackson and Joshua Fuller were constituted a committee to build the house. A motion to give encouragement to those proprietors who should first settle in the township, was negatived. It was voted to raise and collect thirty shillings on each proprietor's lot, and assessors and a collector were chosen for this purpose.

The next meeting of the proprietors was held nearly thirty years after the one just mentioned. There is no evidence going to show that the house provided for at the last meeting, was ever built, or that any of the proprietors who drew house-lots ever occupied, or ever saw them. There had long been a sharp contest between the Massachusetts Bay colony and the proprietors of the Province of New Hampshire, respecting the line between the two Provinces. For a period of forty years prior to 1741, Massachusetts and New Hampshire had the same governor, though each State had its own council, its own assembly and its own laws. Massachusetts, with characteristic greediness, laid claim to a large portion of New Hampshire, and a strip of what is now Vermont. Her General Court granted Pennacook, afterwards incorporated as Rumford, and now Concord, in 1725, and continued to grant townships of New Hampshire territory for years afterwards. In 1727, grants were made by Massachusetts to Massachusetts men, of Pembroke to Capt. John Lovewell and others, of Bow, Epsom, Canterbury and Chichester, of Amherst in 1728, of Hopkinton to Hopkinton, Mass., in 1735, and of Warner to Salisbury and Amesbury the same year. The two last were granted on petitions referred to in the proceedings of the General Court when a committee was appointed to locate and grant the lands between Connecticut and Merrimac rivers already spoken of. The "Great Falls" referred to in the Court proceedings just named, are now known as Bellows Falls on the Connecticut river, and are nearly in the same parallel with Concord, N. H. Massachusetts not only claimed the territory south of this line except a narrow strip on the east, but directed the committee to cross the Connecticut river and lay out one or two townships in what is now Vermont. But after a long and excited controversy covering a period of many years, on the fifth day of March, 1740, His Majesty, George the second, to whom the subject had been referred, fixed the boundary substantially as at present. The territory claimed by Massachusetts and which by this decision passed to the control and ownership of New Hampshire, was fourteen miles wide by fifty long, and included twenty-eight townships. Massachusetts grants of this territory became void, and those townships which were already settled were obliged to make terms with the Masonian proprietors of New Hampshire, or those acting under them. Township No. 4, in this territory, granted to Capt. Samuel Jackson and others, had not been settled, and probably no effort was ever made on the part of the grantees to retain it.

CHAPTER VII.

THE CLAIM REVIVED.

Activity after Thirty years.—Close of the French and Indian Wars, and the Interior of Maine Opened up for Settlement.—Reorganization of the Proprietors.—Grant to Joshua Fuller and Associates.—Plan of the new "No. 4" made and Confirmed.—Mistake Discovered, and a new Plan Ordered.—Lotted out and the Rights Drawn.—Further Extracts from the Proprietors Records.

Thus matters stood for about thirty years, and in the meantime, great changes had taken place in the condition and affairs of the country. By the fall of Quebec, the power of the French was broken, and the Maritime Provinces as well as the Canadas became subject to the control of Great Britain. This put an end to the long struggle for empire in this country between France and England, in which the Indians had borne a conspicuous part, a struggle which had cost New England many valuable lives and a vast amount of money, and which had prevented colonization in the interior of Maine for more than a century. But now the struggle had closed, and there being no further danger from the late savage allies of the French, the attention of Massachusetts was turned anew to her eastern possessions. At this time the settlements in Maine were confined largely to the seacoast and the navigable rivers, the great interior being unsurveyed and unexplored save by the hunters, and by the soldiers who had gone to fight the Indians upon their own grounds. Between 1760 and the breaking out of the war of the Revolution, many grants of land had been made in Maine and several in Oxford county. Fryeburg was granted to Gen. Joseph Frye for services in the French and Indian wars, Bethel to the descendants of those of Sudbury and other towns who had served in the expedition against Canada in 1690, Livermore to those of Watertown, Waltham and the neighboring towns who, either by themselves or their ancestors, had taken a part in the reduction of Port Royal, Turner and Jay to the descendants of "Canada" soldiers, and Rumford to Concord, N. H., to compensate those of her grantees who had suffered loss by the settlement of the northern boundary of Massachusetts, which had left that town in New Hampshire. The grantees of Livermore had been petitioners for land in 1735, and had received a grant of township No. 2, on the east side of, and adjoining to the Connecticut river in the same tract where No. 4 granted to Capt. Samuel Jackson and others, was situated, and which proved on the settlement of the boundary to be within the limits of New Hampshire. The Livermore grantees based their claim for a renewal of their grant upon the fact that their "No. 2 had been thrown into New Hampshire by an adjustment of the boundary lines."

The changed condition of things, and the general movement for eastern land grants, stimulated the grantees of No. 4 on Connecticut river to move for an adjustment of their claims, a preliminary step to which was the reorganization of their company. These grantees were mostly from Watertown, Waltham and Newton, towns from which hailed most of the grantees of Livermore and Jay. The grantees of Bethel were also largely from Newton. These two towns, Watertown and Newton, formed the rallying points for several Massachusetts towns, Marlboro', Shrewsbury and Groton being notable among the number.

The next meeting of the proprietors of township No. 4, "lying between the rivers Connecticut and Merrimac," after an interval of nearly thirty years, was held at the house of Mr. Nathaniel Coolidge, innkeeper in Watertown, on the 26th day of December, 1769. Several of the original proprietors had deceased, and their rights were represented by heirs or assigns, while others had disposed of their claims, so that only twenty-nine of the original claimants petitioned for a renewal of the grant. At this meeting, Joshua Fuller was elected moderator, and Nehemiah Mason, clerk. Capt. Joshua Fuller, Capt. William Coolidge and Ebenezer Brown were constituted a committee to draft a petition to the General Court for a new grant of land in lieu of the one they had lost. The following is a copy of the petition prepared and presented:

PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS BAY.

"To the Honorable Thomas Hutchinson, Governor and Commander in Chief of his Majesty's said Province, the Hon. Council and House of Representatives in General Court Assembled:

The petition of the subscribers humbly sheweth that some of your petitioners and the predecessors of the others obtained a grant from the Great and General Court, of a township of land several years since, which was then laid out between the rivers of Connecticut and Merrimac with line of towns; that the house lots in said town were allotted to the proprietors, and some further orders relative to the settlement of said township were by said proprietors performed to the satisfaction of a committee from said Honorable Court, as may appear by the proprietors' book of records signed by the Honorable William Dudley, Esq., chairman of said committee, and that said proprietors were resolutely pursuing all other proper measures in order for the speedy settlement; but very soon after, to their great damage and disappointment, and after the payment of one hundred and eighty pounds to the committee aforesaid, and a further expense of more than double that sum, besides expense of time, they were deprived of said township by its being set off to the Province of New Hampshire, by the determination of his Majesty, King George the second, in the settlement of the boundaries of the Provinces aforesaid: and your petitioners must remain remediless in the premises, without the interposition of this most Honorable Court: they therefore most humbly pray that your Honors would be pleased to take the same into consideration and according to your known justice and clemency to grant them another township in lieu of that which they were deprived of, as a retaliation for their great loss, and your most humble suppliants as in duty bound shall ever pray."

JOSHUA FULLER and 59 others.

At a meeting holden at the place of the former one, on the 8th day of January, A. D., 1770. it was voted to accept the report of the committee. At an adjourned meeting at the same place, on the last Monday in February following the other, a committee consisting of Capt. Joshua Fuller, William Coolidge and Mr. Ebenezer Brown, were chosen to present the above petition to the General Court. An assessment of one shilling on each right, was made to defray the expenses of the committee. Several adjourned meetings were subsequently held without the transaction of any business.

At a meeting at Coolidge's tavern on the first day of July, 1771, the petition to the General Court having been favorably considered, a committee consisting of Capt. Joshua Fuller, Nathaniel Coolidge and Stephen Harris, was chosen to take a view and plan of the township granted, and it was also voted to assess two dollars on each right to defray the charges of the committee. At an adjourned meeting on the 12th day of August, Alexander Shepard, Jr., was elected clerk, and the committee appointed to view and take a plan of the township were authorized to hire money sufficient to defray their expenses in so doing, and to be allowed interest on the same until paid by the committee. It would be interesting to know the history of the journey of this committee into the interior of Maine, seeking land suitable for settling, and to answer the purposes of their grant, of the hardships they endured and the discouragements they encountered, but we are not aware that any journal of their daily doings was kept, or that any report was made by means of which this information can be gained. From the records of the proprietors' meetings, farther extracts from which will follow, it appears that this committee went in company, and acted in conjunction with a committee of the grantees of Phipps Canada, with the understanding that the two grants should be situated side by side, and that the expenses should be divided between the two committees. But after the townships had been located and bounded, some disagreement arose the nature of which is not explained, and the committee on the part of the proprietors of No. 4, assumed the whole of the expense of the survey, and the committee of the Phipps Canada proprietors went to the great Androscoggin, and surveyed a township north of Livermore, territory which now comprises the towns of Jay and Canton.

The following appears in the proprietors' records :

“The following meeting called by the committee chosen to take a view and plan of a township, on a dispute arising between said committee and the committee of Phipps Canada (so called) relative to the dividing the two townships by said committee jointly viewed and planned." At this meeting, a committee of nine was chosen to meet the proprietors of Phipps Canada or their committee, at the house of Capt. Brewer, in Waltham, on the 12th day of November, 1771, in order to make a division of the two townships of land the committees of the two sets of proprietors had viewed and taken plans of. The two committees met, and the action of the proprietors of No. 4, at its next meeting would indicate that a division of the two townships could not be agreed upon.

At a meeting holden on the 19th day of November, 1771, it was voted that this Proprietary bear the whole expense of viewing and taking a plan of two townships of land on Little Amariscoggin river, except the time and expense which Messrs. Brown, Whittemore and Kimball were at in said view and planning, provided the Canada proprietors give up all their claims to the interest of said view and planning. At an adjourned meeting on the 19th of December, among other proceedings of minor importance, it was voted that Alexander Shepard, Jr., be a committee to prepare a petition to the General Court for a confirmation of the grant of a township on Little Amariscoggin river, in lieu of No. 4, (so called). An adjourned meeting was held on the 31st of March, 1772, when it was voted that the vote passed by the Canada Proprietors at the house of Capt. Ebenezer Steadman, innholder in Cambridge, on the 19th day of November last, relinquishing their interest in two townships on Little Amariscoggin river, be recorded in this Proprietary's book of records. This vote was as follows :

"At a meeting of the proprietors (or grantees) of a township of land granted by the Great and General Court, on the 11th day of June, 1771, to David Phipps, Esq., and others, at their meeting on Tuesday, the 19th day of November, 1771, at the house of Ebenezer Steadman in Cambridge, it was voted that this Proprietary relinquish all their right in the two townships of land that were laid out by a committee of this Proprietary, in conjunction with a committee of the No. 4 Proprietary (so called), at Little Amariscoggin river, to the said No. 4 proprietors, provided they pay all the charges that have arisen in viewing and laying out said township, except the charges of Messrs. Abijah Brown and Israel Whittemore for their services and expenses in said service, and except six days and a half of Capt. Kimball."

The committee appointed to petition the court for a confirmation of the grant on the Little Androscoggin, were successful in their efforts, and the following resolve of the General Court was issued thereon :

“In the House of Representatives, April 22, 1772.

Resolved that the plan of the township hereunto annexed, containing the contents of six miles and one-quarter square, exclusive of the allowance of one thousand and nine hundred acres for the rivers and ponds in said township, and eight hundred and forty acres for swag of chain, being one-third thereof, bounded as follows : ‘Beginning at a heap of stones at the southwest corner, running north 73 degrees, east, fifty-one chains and thirty links, to Little Amariscoggin river ; thence by said river one hundred and fourteen chains to a white pine tree on the easterly side of the river ; thence north 43 degrees east, three hundred and forty chains to a spruce tree on Sylvester Canada line ; thence north 4 degrees west, five hundred and forty-two chains to a stake and stones ; thence south $68\frac{1}{2}$ degrees and 30 minutes west, five hundred and twenty-seven chains ; thence south 14 degrees east, six hundred and eighty-eight chains to the heap of stones first mentioned,’ granted in June, 1771, to Joshua Fuller and others, be accepted and hereby is confirmed, to the said petitioners, their heirs and assigns forever, they complying with the following conditions, viz : The grantees within seven years shall settle sixty families in said township, build a house for the public worship of God, and settle a learned protestant minister, and lay out one-sixty-fourth part for the first settled minister, one-sixty-fourth part for the use of the ministry, one-sixty-fourth part for the use of schools, and one-sixty-fourth part for the use of Harvard College forever. Provided it doth not exceed the quantity aforenamed, nor interfere with any former grant.”

Upon a warrant issued by Samuel Danforth, Justice of the Peace, a meeting was called and held at the house of Nathaniel Coolidge, innholder, in Watertown, on the 21st day of July, 1772, and provision was made for calling future meetings, and a committee consisting of Capt. Joshua Fuller, Capt. Nathaniel Coolidge and Alexander Shepard, Jr., was chosen and authorized and empowered to lot out the whole or a part of the township of the grantees. A committee consisting of Nathaniel Stone, Nehemiah Mason and William Coolidge, was chosen to prosecute or defend any action or actions wherein the interests of the Proprietary might be concerned, with full power of substitution. Josiah Bisco was one of the party who went to lot out the township, and his journal beginning August 22, 1772, will be found in the appendix.

The township granted to Joshua Fuller and others, June 11, 1771, in lieu of the township granted in 1736, had now been viewed and a plan made of it, and the grant had been confirmed by the General Court in accordance with the plan presented. Those familiar with the boundaries of Paris at the present time, will hardly recognize the town by the metes and bounds described in the plan presented to the court. The fact was, the committee appointed by the proprietors to view and make a plan of the land, had made a grave mistake which was soon detected by the later committee appointed to divide the township into lots, as will be seen by their report which was as follows :

"We a committee chosen by the proprietors of No. 4 to lot out part or the whole of said township, do report as followeth, viz. : After having lotted out part of said township, we found that we did not adjoin to Sylvester Canada, (Turner), nor any former grant as was the order of court, therefore we have not proceeded to finish the whole until the proprietors knew the situation of the township as it now lieth."

Thereupon another committee was appointed consisting of Alexander Shepard, Alexander Shepard, Jr., and Capt. Wm. Coolidge, to prepare a plan of the township with such alterations as they should think proper, to be submitted to the Great and General Court for confirmation and approval. The memorial presented by this committee to the Court, stated that the committee to view and make a plan of the grant, as also the pilot, had been deceived by taking a hunter's line to be the bounds of Sylvester Canada, by which means the grantees were again frustrated in their desire to come into possession of their lands. They asked the Court therefore, to annul the former plan, in order that a township might be laid out to them which should be square instead of angular to correspond with the line which was supposed to be that of Sylvester Canada, which would not only make a more convenient town, but would be vastly more commodious for other townships which hereafter might be laid out adjoining thereto. The prayer of the petition was granted by the patient and indulgent General Court, and a plan adopted which described the metes and bounds as follows:

“Beginning at a Hemlock tree two hundred and fifty-two chains from the southwest corner of Sylvester Canada: thence north 14 degrees west seven hundred and seventy-seven chains to a stake and stones: thence south sixty-eight degrees and thirty minutes west three hundred and sixty chains to a stake and stones: thence south fourteen degrees east seven hundred and seventy-seven chains to a stake and stones: thence north 68 degrees and thirty minutes east three hundred and (sixty) eight chains to the Hemlock tree first mentioned.”

The same conditions were imposed that were contained in the former grant. The matter passed the council and was consented to by the Governor on the 11th day of February, 1773.

At a meeting on the last Tuesday in March following, it was voted to lot out the township and run out and mark the town bounds. The committee for this purpose, were Josiah Bisco, Josiah Brown and Elijah Livermore. Mr. Bisco afterwards settled in the grant, and Mr. Livermore settled in Port Royal and gave his name to the town when incorporated. Provision was also made at this meeting to dispose of delinquent rights, and an assessment was made of twenty shillings on each proprietor's right.

August 5th, it was voted to dismiss the committee appointed to lot out the township, and Alexander Shepard, Jr., was chosen a surveyor for that purpose. At the same time a committee of five was chosen to assist in the work and to run the township's lines. The committee so chosen was made up of Joshua Fuller, Elijah Livermore, Isaac Gleason, Josiah Bisco and Alexander Shepard, Jr., and they were instructed to make report of their doings on the first Tuesday in November following. The committee were also directed to prepare the lots ready to be drawn.

August 10th, 1773, it was voted to assess ninety pounds on the several proprietors' rights, and that the committee for sale of delinquent rights, make sale of the rights of those who are delinquent in their taxes on the first of October following, or as soon as may be agreeably to law. It was also voted that the taxes of delinquent proprietors whose rights had been sold, be refunded to them.

November 4th, it was voted to accept the report of the committee chosen to finish lotting out the township, and that there be reserved for the use of the proprietors, their heirs and assigns forever, two rods in width on the eastward side of every range line through the length of the township for the convenience of ways, if it should be needed. It was voted to draw the lots for a division of the township, among the proprietors at this meeting, and Nathaniel Harrington and Jonas Coolidge were chosen a committee for drawing the lots. Lots were drawn in the name of the grantees of 1771, and with results as follows :

CHAPTER VIII.

ABSTRACTS OF PROPRIETORS' RECORDS.

The Breaking out of the Revolutionary War Retards Settlement of No. 4.—The Proprietors Offer Rewards for Building Mills, and Bounties to Settlers.—A Committee Chosen to Procure Settlers — They are Successful.—Committee Meetings in No. 4.—Act of Incorporation Desired.—Statistics of No. 4.

The next meeting of the proprietors was on the 5th day of January, 1774. It was voted that right 53 should be for the first settled minister, number 40 for the use of the ministry, and that whenever a second parish should be formed and a learned protestant minister should be settled, he should improve and enjoy one-half of this right. It was voted to clear a road to their township, to lot number seven in the third range, known as the mill lot, and a committee of three consisting of Wm. Coolidge, Benjamin Stowell and John Bond, was chosen for that purpose, with instruction to perform that service before the last day of June following. It was also voted to petition the Great and General Court for an additional grant of the unappropriated lands lying between Bakerstown (Poland) Sylvester Canada (Turner) Parkertown, so called, and their own township, now called No. 4, and Nathaniel Stone, Alexander Shepard and Josiah Capen, were made a committee to prepare and present the petition. It was voted that the present names of the proprietors be recorded in the several lots in the plan of the township.

At a meeting of the proprietors at the house of Isaac Gleason in Waltham, April 20, 1774, it was voted to grant the mill lot in No. 4, and one hundred dollars to any person or persons who would undertake to build a saw and grist mill thereon, the saw mill to be built by the last of October following, and the grist mill in twelve months from that time; and keep both mills in repair ten years, and be obliged to saw for the proprietors at the rate of nine shillings and four pence per thousand for boards, and in proportion thereto for other stuffs, or to accept half the stuff, which is to be at the election of the owners; and to be paid the proportionable part of said one hundred dollars for each of such mills when they are completed to the acceptance of a committee that shall be chosen to view the same, and to give security for the performance thereof. It was also voted to grant ten pounds lawful money to each of the first ten settlers in the township who would build a house sixteen feet square, clear ten acres of land and seed the same to grain or grass. John Foxcroft, Esq., Capt. Wm. Coolidge and Nathaniel Stone were chosen a committee to make sale of delinquent rights, and also to audit the accounts of the treasurer.

At a meeting held at the inn of Bezaleel Learned in Watertown, June 22d, 1774, Benjamin Stowell and John Bond, the committee to clear a road to the township reported that they had performed the service, and had cleared a road from New Gloucester to the mill lot in No. 4. The report was accepted, and the accounts of the committee allowed. It was also voted to pay John Bond of the committee, forty-eight shillings as a gratuity "for his extraordinary service and charges in clearing the road."

The prospect for building mills in the township, on the terms offered were evidently not satisfactory, for at the meeting held the 11th day of August, a committee consisting of Dea. Elijah Livermore, Josiah Capen and Capt. Joshua Fuller, Alexander Shepard, Jr., and Peter Ball, was chosen "to see on what terms a mill could be built in the township No. 4, lying in the late District of Maine." At an adjourned meeting holden August 31st, it was voted to give further encouragement for persons to build the much desired mills, and still another committee was chosen to take action in the matter and report.

Several meetings were subsequently held but no business of importance was transacted until a meeting holden at the Inn of Mrs. Dorothy Coolidge in Watertown, on the first day of March, 1775, when a committee consisting of Alexander Shepard, Jr., Capt. Wm. Coolidge and Josiah Bisco was chosen to confer with a committee of the proprietors of Sudbury Canada (Bethel) relative to clearing a road between the two townships. The proprietors of the townships could not agree upon the division of labor and expense, and nothing further came of the movement at this time. The proprietors of No. 4 proposed to clear the road through their township, provided Sudbury Canada would continue it to theirs.

It was over two years before the next proprietors' meeting was held. The war of the revolution had broken out; the affair at Lexington and Concord, places near by Watertown, had come off, the battle of Bunker Hill still nearer, had been fought, and every loyal citizen was expected to do his duty. Some of the older proprietors had a part in the engagements above named, and others whose age and strength would admit of it, had enlisted for the whole war. Several of the proprietors of 1771, had deceased, and others had taken their places, so that after this time, new names were constantly appearing in the records of their proceedings.

The next meeting was held at the Inn of widow Dorothy Coolidge in Watertown, on the 19th day of September, 1777. Josiah Bisco was chosen a committee to take a view of the land between No. 4 and Sudbury Canada, and also through No. 4, looking to clearing out the road already referred to. It was now very hard to get a quorum together, and several meetings were held when no business could be transacted.

The next meeting at which business was transacted, was on the 23d day of March, 1779. A committee consisting of Lt. Aaron Richardson, Alexander Shepard, Jr., and James Stinchfield, was chosen to look out and make a road between the mill lot in No. 4 and New Gloucester. At an adjourned meeting holden on the 30th of June, 1779, a committee was chosen to clear out a road from or near the easterly corner of the township to the north westerly corner of the same, provided Sudbury Canada would clear a road from their township to connect with it. The committee was made up of Capt. Israel Whittemore, Josiah Bisco and Stephen Ham; at an adjourned meeting, James Stinchfield and Christopher Grant, Jr., were added to the committee which was instructed to proceed with the road as soon as convenient. The doings at the adjourned meeting on the 23d of December, in the large sums paid the committee, indicate the great depreciation of the currency since the beginning of the war. It was voted to pay the expense of clearing the road through the township, amounting to £1499, 6. 10, as follows: Israel Whittemore, £317. 10; Josiah Bisco, £342. 10; Christopher Grant, Jr., £360, and James Stinchfield, balance due, £130.

At a meeting holden on the 18th day of April, 1780, it was voted to give the mill lot, so called, with lots number 17 and 18 in the 3d range, and lot number 8 in the second range, to any person or persons who would build a saw and grist mill in the township within twenty months from date, with conditions the same or similar to those in former offers for building mills in the township, and a committee was chosen to contract the building of the mills, consisting of Alexander Shepard, David Sanger and Aaron Richardson. This committee was authorized to contract with parties who would build the desired mills, on other terms than those specified, as they should think proper, and in addition to the lots before specified, to deed lot number 5 in the sixth range if they should think it for the interest of the proprietors.

More than nine years had now elapsed since the grant to Joshua Fuller and associates was made, and the terms of the grant were still far from being complied with. At the same time, the whole energies of the country and of individuals, were directed to achieving independence from the mother country, and all minor matters were, in a great measure, left to take care of themselves. It is not probable that the government of Massachusetts, absorbed as it was in raising men and means for prosecuting the war, even thought of the previous land grants, or would have given a moment's time to them, if their attention had been called to the subject. But the proprietors evidently felt that unless more energetic measures were adopted to get settlers into No. 4, they might be liable to forfeit their rights, for at an adjourned meeting holden on the 5th of September, 1780, it was voted that ten of the first settlers who should go into No. 4 and perform the settling duties required by the terms of the grant of the proprietors, and continue the same, should receive one hundred and eighty pounds out of the treasury, current money of the time. A committee was chosen to look out and spot a road from New Gloucester through Mr. Shepard's Grant (Hebron) to the mill brook (so called) in No. 4, and from thence to the road now laid through No. 4, consisting of James Stinchfield, Lt. Aaron Richardson, Daniel Clark, Jonathan Clark and Capt. Isaac Bolster.

At a meeting holden December 1st, 1780, the following votes were passed :

"That Alexander Shepard, Alexander Shepard, Jr., and Lt. Aaron Richardson be, and they hereby are appointed and empowered agents for and in behalf of this proprietary, to transact any matter or thing relative to the settlement of this township of No. 4, with the number of families required by the General Court to be settled therein: And whereas the whole of this township No. 4 being lotted out into lots and allotted to each proprietor, by which they, holding their lands in severalty, the settlement is greatly retarded by reason of several proprietors neglecting and even refusing to dispose of their lands to those that would willingly become settlers: It is therefore voted, that the agents aforesaid be and they hereby are required, directed and empowered in behalf of this Proprietary; to prefer a petition to the Great and General Court of this Commonwealth as soon as may be, praying that said court would be pleased to grant to and fully authorize and empower said agents, to dispose of one hundred acres out of each and every right in said township for the sole purpose of, and upon condition of said agent's settling one family on each of said hundred acres, they may be thus empowered to dispose of, on such term or terms as said Court shall please to appoint for said service."

At a meeting held on the 6th of June, 1781, it was voted that the collectors should receive the old emission of Continental Currency for taxes, in the nominal sum, as assessed for said taxes: also that the collector should receive the new emission for taxes at the rate of one dollar for forty of the old emission, or silver at the rate of one dollar for seventy-five. This shows the terrible financial condition of the country at that time. At the meeting on the 13th of September following, the above votes relating to currency were reconsidered, and farther modified to meet the changes that had taken place since the last meeting.

At a meeting on the 2d of January, 1782, it was voted to assess thirty pounds in silver on each right in the township, to be devoted solely to settling purposes, to be paid to the agents appointed for procuring settlers, within four months. It was also voted that the agents be directed and obliged to settle one family for each and every lot of land that shall be given them, and also one family for every thirty pounds which they shall receive of the assessment just made, all to be settled within the time specified in the agent's bonds given to the proprietors as a guaranty for the performance of their obligation relative to settling the township. There seems to have been more or less lack of harmony in the proceedings of the proprietors, for at a meeting on the 7th of March, the vote to raise thirty pounds in silver was declared null and void; but at a meeting on the 20th of March, the last vote was reconsidered, and the former vote for raising the money declared to be in force. At a meeting on the 17th of April, another effort was made to prevent the collection of the tax, but it was defeated by a vote of $29\frac{1}{2}$ to one of $15\frac{1}{2}$. At this last meeting, the committee were directed to sell delinquent rights for taxes due, after advertising the sale in the Boston Gazette. It was voted that the new emission money now in the hands of the treasurer be immediately sold at public auction, and accordingly, there were sold, the twenty-seven new emission dollars bringing £2, 4, hard money. Mr. Lemuel Jackson, now a resident of No. 4, was authorized to expend twelve pounds in silver money in repairing roads within the township, and exhibit his account to the proprietors for settlement.

At a meeting on the 5th of March, 1783, it was voted to give Mr. Lemuel Jackson the four proprietors' lots containing five hundred acres, and one hundred and fifty dollars in silver, for building a saw and grist mill in No. 4, on such conditions as the committee might think best and for the interest of the proprietors, one-half of the silver to be paid when the saw mill was completed and the balance when he should have finished the grist mill.

The next meeting was September 15th, 1784, at which an assessment of thirty shillings per right was ordered, and a committee consisting of Seth Nelson, Lemuel Jackson and Dudley Pike, was chosen to clear and mend roads in the township. At a meeting on the 9th of January, 1785, this committee made the following report:

"An account where we the subscribers looked out a road in No. 4 township: Beginning at the westerly line of lot numbered 17-18, in the 8th range, near to Nathan Nelson's now dwelling house, and from thence across the southeasterly corner of lot number 17-18 in the 7th range, to the northerly line of lot number 15-16 and lot 15-16 in the 6th range, about 18 or 20 poles northerly of the southeast corner of said lot, and from thence across a small brook just upstream of a pair of falls; and from thence westerly to the northerly line of lot number 14, and by said line until it comes near to the road leading to Bisco's Falls; and from thence near to the north westerly corner of lot number 12, in the 5th range; and from thence crossing lot number 11 in the 4th range, near a hill going by the name of Oak Hill, and from thence to the mill, crossing stony brook just down stream of the mill; and from the brook upon a ridge of upland lying to the southerly side of said brook, and to the southerly end of said township, nearly betwixt the third and fourth ranges of lots."

The mill here referred to was the one which the committee were authorized to contract with Mr. Lemuel Jackson to build. Mr. Jackson had built the mill, and an account of their acceptance will be seen farther along.

The committee on accounts consisting of Christopher Grant, Daniel Clark and Aaron Richardson, male, at this meeting, a detailed statement of the finances of the Proprietary which was accepted and ordered spread upon the records. This report will be found in the appendix.

A second committee consisting of Nathaniel Stone, David Bemis, Jonathan Clark, Alexander Shepard and David Sanger, also made a report which will be found following the other.

At a meeting Jan'y 25, 1786, it was voted to allow Lemuel Jackson and others for twenty-seven days in repairing ways in No. 4.

It was also voted that Mr. Lemuel Jackson by his again signing the bond to the Proprietary, dated March 7, 1783, with regard to building mills in the township, that the mills were accepted and the treasurer was directed to pay him forty-five pounds in full for a grant for building the mills. It was voted that the persons who have settled or are settling on this township, who are delinquent in their taxes, have liberty to work them out in clearing and mending roads, if done before the first of November following. A report was put upon record at this meeting indicating the value of rights in No. 4 at this time. The committee on delinquent rights reported that they had sold the right of Capt. Nathaniel Coolidge, deceased, for eighteen pounds; the right of Daniel Robbins for seventeen pounds, and the half right of Stephen Harris for nine pounds, all to Capt. Aaron Richardson.

The next meeting marks an important era in the history of the Proprietary, as it was the first session holden in No. 4. It occurred on the 21st day of June, and at the house of Reuben Hubbard. Daniel Stowell was chosen clerk pro tempore. A committee to lay out roads in the township, was chosen consisting of Dudley Pike, Capt. Isaac Bolster, Daniel Staples, Nathan Nelson and Nathan Pierce. Thirty pounds were assessed for purposes of roads. At an adjourned meeting the following day, Jonathan Shurtleff was allowed twelve shillings for work on the road, and Barachias Morse and Benjamin Stowell were added to the committee on the sale of rights, to fill vacancies.

The next meeting was at Mrs. Coolidge's in Watertown, January 7, 1787. Reuben Hubbard was voted three pounds, seventeen shillings and eight pence, it being the expense incurred at the last meeting. A committee of three was chosen to take a view of the land in No. 4, and locate such roads in such places as they shall think best for the public, and report their doings at the next meeting. Christopher Grant, Barachias Morse and Isaac Bolster made up the committee. It was voted that at future meetings, each person should bear his own expenses.

A meeting was had at the house of Mrs. Coolidge on the 29th day of January, 1788. It was voted that Alexander Shepard be clerk in place of Alexander Shepard, Jr.,* deceased. It was voted to

*Alexander Shepard, Jr., son of Alexander and Mary (Willard) was born in Newton, Sept. 9, 1741. He married Oct. 25, Elizabeth (Jackson) Greenwood. He was much employed in surveying the public lands in Maine and for his services obtained a grant which was called Shepard's field, now Hebron. He moved upon his grant with John Green-accept a road laid out by the committee beginning at the road between the grist and saw mill; thence to and over the bridge lately built across the river; thence to the northwest corner of the mill lot so called; thence as near to the line between the second and third ranges of lots as the land will admit of, till it comes to the road leading to Bisco's Falls. Peter Durell of Newton was added to the committee on accounts.

April 3, 1788, Wm. Clark Whitney and Nathan Nelson were added to the committee for building a bridge at Bisco's Falls.

The next meeting was June 4th, 1788, at the residence of Isaac Bolster in No. 4. It was voted to accept and pay the account of Israel Whittemore for work done on the roads. A committee was chosen to take a view of the land on each side of the line between the second and third number of lots at the south end of the township, in order to find the most convenient place for a road, with the view of discontinuing the road leading near the house of Capt. Isaac Bolster to the land of Daniel Whitney and Seth Morse. On the committee were Lemuel Jackson, Reuben Hubbard and Thomas Stevens.

The next meeting was called at the house of Samuel Wellington in Watertown, on the 11th of May, 1791, on the petition of S. Jackson, David Sanger, Lemuel Jackson, Isaac Bolster, Christopher Grant, Israel Whittemore, Josiah Bisco, Nathaniel Bemis and Luke Bemis. The attendance was so thin that no business was transacted, and the meeting was adjourned to June 8th, following. Daniel Stowell, Lemuel Jackson and Seth Morse were made a committee of sale. Jonathan Stone was chosen clerk and was authorized to call on Alexander Shepard, the former clerk, for the book of records. Alexander Shepard* had become interested in the township known as Phipps Canada, now the towns of Jay and Canton, and had wood, Jr., Dr. Goddard and other men from Newton. His only son dying, he adopted Thomas, the son of John and Elizabeth Greenwood, whose name became Alexander Shepard, but he died at Harvard College in 1783, aged 26. Alexander Shepard died early in 1788. He was a useful man and of much service to the grantees of new townships in Maine.

*Alexander Shepard was of Newton, where he was one of the most prominent and valuable citizens. He was a man of education and unquestioned ability. He was prominent among the patriots in the struggle for independence. He was the first of the name in Newton and his ancestry has not been traced. He married Mary, daughter of Jonathan Willard and had nine children, of which Alexander, Jr., was the oldest. John, his youngest son, was the founder of the Baptist Church in Newton, its first deacon and treasurer. Alexander Shepard had deceased in Jay previous to 1796, probably the year previous, at an advanced age.

moved there prior to the time of this meeting which probably accounts for his absence. Jonathan Stone having been chosen clerk of the proprietors, the oath of office was administered to him at Middleboro, June 8, 1791, by John Remington, Justice of the Peace.

Several adjourned meetings were next held at the Inn of Samuel Wellington in Watertown, but no business of importance was transacted, there being but few present. At a meeting holden at that place the 31st day of January, 1793, it was voted that Isaac Bolster of No. 4, gentleman, and German Brimmer of Boston, merchant, the representative of Ralph Inman deceased, formerly a proprietor of the township, be a committee to go before the committee of the General Court to whom had been referred the cross petitions for and against the incorporation of No. 4 into a town. This committee was instructed to signify the unanimous disapproval by the meeting, of an act of incorporation, more especially at that time, and to ask for a dismissal of the case, or at any rate, for a postponement to the next term of the court. The following vote was also passed: "That the interest of the Proprietary had been much neglected for some years, and that it had become necessary for all persons who had filled any office (except the treasurer) to be called upon to render an account of their doings." It was voted that the treasurer inform himself as to a bond given by Alexander Shepard, Alexander Shepard, Jr., and Aaron Richardson, and if the conditions should be found to have been broken, to put the same in suit; also that a committee examine into the conduct of the committees of sale since 1782, and to search and report the state of the records at Portland, so that the rights of the proprietors and occupants may be ascertained. At an adjourned meeting the above vote was revoked, and the duties imposed by it, were placed upon the treasurer.

What the precise condition of the township was when certain of the inhabitants asked for an act of incorporation, we have no means of knowing; no records save those of the proprietors, covering the years previous to this are in existence, if indeed any were made. But a return of Plantation No. 4 was made to the General Court in 1791, the year before the act of incorporation was prayed for, from which we glean the following statistics of polls and property:

Whole number of polls.....	60.
Dwelling houses	20.	Total Tax, 9£
Barns	20.	"	9£

Grist Mills	1.	} total tax, 3£
Saw Mills.....	1.
Acres of tillage land	70.	" 21£
" English Mowing ...	200.	" 75£
" Fresh Meadow.....	20.	" 5£
" Pasturage	200.	" 20£
" Unimproved lands .	4000.	" 24£
No. of horses	6.	" 1£ 16s
" oxen.....	30.	" 8£
" steers and cows	40.	" 7£ 3s 4d
" swine.....	60.	" 2£ 5s

The valuation of the property is not given, only the tax, though there must have been a valuation as the basis of the taxes. This is probably the first tax the township was called upon to pay.

CHAPTER IX.

CONTEST FOR INCORPORATION.

Petitions and Remonstrances.—Prayer for Incorporation Granted.

Township No. 4 had now been settled upwards of ten years, and probably had a population of from three to four hundred. There is no evidence that there was ever any plantation organization, and hitherto the management of affairs was with a few persons who had become the possessors of entire rights. For reasons set forth in the petition which were doubtless well founded, quite a number of the land owners of less than a right, desired an act of incorporation. They wanted better roads, public schools and a public ministry, and, what probably influenced their action as much as either of these, they desired a part in the management of the affairs of the township. The non-resident proprietors especially, and some of the resident, resisted the movement mainly on account of the increased taxation which they well knew must follow. But the petitioners seem to have had everything easily their own way. The General Court had adopted the policy of incorporating plantations into towns so soon as their population and wealth would render them capable of managing their affairs in a proper manner, and the opposition of non-resident proprietors was always met with, and the reasons well understood. The movement for incorporation and the opposition to it, belong to the history of the town, and the petitions and remonstrances are given in full.

The petition for the incorporation of the town read as follows :

“To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled :

May it please your Honors to hear the petition of a number of the inhabitants of a township known by the name of No. 4, in the county of Cumberland and Commonwealth of Massachusetts. We your petitioners finding ourselves greatly embarrassed, and under very difficult circumstances in regard to regulations both of a civil and religious nature, viz: We are at present destitute of the preached Gospel and schools of learning; our roads and bridges are exceedingly bad, your petitioners finding no way to redress said grievances but to have recourse to the Honorable Legislature of the commonwealth for assistance. We therefore, your petitioners, humbly pray that your Honors would grant us the privileges of incorporation of the above said town by the name of PARIS, and exempt us from paying State and county taxes for the term of five or six years, until we are under circumstances to be more serviceable to the Commonwealth, and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

The remonstrance, or rather the first one is given below :

“To the Whole Court :

The memorial of a number of the inhabitants of township or plantation known by the name of No. 4, in the county of Cumberland and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Humbly Showeth, That whereas your memorialists are apprehensive that some of the inhabitants of said township without considering the inability of the inhabitants about petitioning to the Honorable Court to incorporate said township into a town which without some better information might incline the Honorable Court to think that the inhabitants of said township in general, are wealthy and are able to bear the burdens of a tax, which your memorialists hereby presume to say is not the case with them, but quite the reverse, many of us being new beginners and laboring under many embarrassments, are hardly able to support ourselves and families, being yet involved in debt for our land and have no resource but the subduing of the rough and uncultivated wilderness, which will afford us no surplus after our real necessities are supplied: add to it our hard labor and uncomfortable cottages, the cost of transportation, being fifty miles from market and rough roads, the charge of which to them that hire them there transported, is nearly one-half the value of the produce; which puts it out of the power of many to procure clothing to screen themselves and their families from the severity of the inclement winters. While the greater part of the inhabitants of said township labor under the aforesaid disadvantages, and the additional burden of clearing and marking roads in said township, any supplies drawn from them by taxes, would deprive them of some part of the scanty means of their subsistence, and to be incorporated into a town in our present condition, we conceive would not serve to relieve us from any of our present burdens nor assist us to avoid any future evils. We therefore accordingly wish that our present vigorous exertions to place ourselves in a situation equal with our fellow citizens in wealth and ability, may not be interfered with by any burdens laid on us that our infant state cannot support, and that the Honorable Court will take our case into wise consideration, and let us remain in our present state, until the period of wealth may arrive, your memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

A second remonstrance was placed on file a short time after the first and a few weeks before the passage of the act of incorporation, of which the following is a copy:

“To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled:

The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the plantation of No. 4, in the county of Cumberland, humbly sheweth that your petitioners at a meeting on the 18th of May inst., voted to petition your Honors that the Plantation then called No. 4, be not incorporated in the present situation of the inhabitants, and made choice of a committee to wait on your Honors to offer their reasons against the incorporation of said plantation—also voted if an incorporation should take place that your Honors would be pleased to incorporate plantation No. 4 by the name of Lebanon, and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray."

The prayer of the petitioners was favorably answered and quite promptly, notwithstanding the remonstrants outnumbered the petitioners more than two to one, and notwithstanding the action of the proprietors at the meeting in Watertown, in unanimously instructing its committee to oppose the bill. The name of Lebanon proposed by the remonstrants, in case an incorporation should be granted, could not consistently have been adopted for the new town, because there was already one town by that name in the State, Lebanon in York county, having been incorporated in 1767.

CHAPTER X.

END OF THE PROPRIETARY.

Extracts from the Records.—Assessors Chosen and Rights Assessed.
—Roads Provided for.—The Proprietary Closes up its Affairs.

Feb. 6, 1793, at a meeting in Watertown, Isaac Bolster was directed to receive a bond from Lemuel Jackson in behalf of the Proprietary. The clerk of the Proprietary was also directed to deliver the books and papers to Capt. Isaac Bolster. This meeting was adjourned to the house of Lemuel Jackson in No. 4. The adjourned meeting was holden at No. 4, on the 3d of April, 1793; Daniel Stowell was chosen moderator pro tem, and Josiah Bisco. Daniel Stowell and Nathan Nelson were made a committee to settle with Capt. Isaac Bolster, a former treasurer. Daniel Stowell was chosen collector and treasurer. A committee of five was appointed

“to make enquiry and see if Mr. Lemuel Jackson has kept his mills in repair agreeably to his obligation with the proprietors,” consisting of Seth Morse, William Stowe”, Thomas Stevens, Levi Hubbard and Nathan Nelson. The meeting adjourned to the house of Daniel Stowell on the 10th of April, inst., at which the committee appointed to settle with Mr. Bolster, was directed to settle also with Lemuel Jackson, a former treasurer. The proprietors chose as assessors, Josiah Bisco, Levi Hubbard and Daniel Stowell. A committee consisting of Thomas Stevens, Seth Morse and Reuben Hubbard, was chosen and directed to prosecute the bond of Mr. Lemuel Jackson for failure to keep his mills in repair, but not to commence the suit under seven months; afterwards this vote was modified so as to leave it discretionary with the committee. An adjourned meeting was held at the house of Daniel Stowell, when the committee on accounts made a report which was read and accepted. The committee to settle with former treasurers also made reports which were accepted. It was voted to raise a sum of money to discharge the proprietors’ debts, and a tax of ten shillings was voted on each one hundred acre lot and one of twenty shillings on each two hundred acres, public lots excepted.

The next meeting was held at the house of Nathan Nelson on the 18th of September, 1793. Daniel Whitney, Israel Whittemore and Seth Morse were made a committee on accounts. A committee was also chosen to settle with the Agents appointed to settle the township, and the committee last chosen was made the committee for this duty. The next adjourned meeting was holden January 1, 1794, at the house of Reuben Hubbard. The committee appointed to correct the lines of the town made a report which was accepted. There was now a manifest lack of interest at the meetings, indicating that the work of the Proprietary was well nigh done. About the only business transacted at several adjourned meetings was the reception of the reports of the committees on accounts for labor on the roads, and for other services. At a meeting June 10th, it was voted that a further tax of seven shillings and six pence on each single lot, and twice this sum on each double lot, be raised to meet expenses. Dec. 10, 1794, a vote was passed directing the committee on sales to defend the Proprietary in certain suits which had been brought by parties whose lands had been sold for delinquent taxes. Several adjourned meetings were now held, but no business was transacted, either because they had none to transact or because no quorum was present. At a meeting, March 31, 1795, the vote raising a tax of seven and sixpence on each single lot and fifteen shillings on each double lot, was reconsidered and declared null and void.

The next and last meeting of the proprietors of which any record was left, was called by the committee chosen for calling meetings, and was holden at the dwelling house of Capt. Daniel Stowell on the second Wednesday of June, 1795. Daniel Stowell was chosen moderator, and Josiah Bisco, clerk. An article in the warrant looking to a final division of the property of the proprietors and closing up the affairs of the company, was not acted upon at the meeting which was adjourned to the 25th day of August following. Another meeting or two may have been held and the proceedings not recorded in the book of records, but whether such was the case or not, we have no means of knowing. The town had now been incorporated two years, and the business which it had heretofore been the duty of the proprietors through their officers and committees to perform, such as the opening and repair of ways, &c., now devolved upon the municipal officers of the town. There was therefore no longer any need of the Proprietary except to close up its affairs as a corporation, with the details of which the public are not specially interested.

CHAPTER XI.

The Grantees of No. 4, of 1771, with Brief References to the Grantees of 1735-6.

A brief sketch of the grantees of 1771, at the close of their records, seems appropriate in this connection. About half of these were also grantees of the township between the Connecticut and Merrimac rivers, petitioned for in 1735 and granted the year following. In the following sketches, brief mention is also made of most of the original proprietors who had either deceased, become superannuated or assigned their rights prior to the grant of 1771. These grantees were among the most substantial citizens of Watertown, Newton and Cambridge, and also of Worcester. They included ministers, lawyers, physicians, merchants, farmers, mechanics and gentlemen of leisure, but as only one of them ever settled upon the grant, it is probable they became grantees rather as a matter of speculation, than from any desire to leave their comfortable homes for the hardships and privations incident to pioneer life.

CAPT. JOSHUA FULLER was the son of Lt. Jeremiah and Mary Fuller of Newton, Mass., and was born there April 12, 1703. His grandfather John Fuller born 1611, was at Cambridge Village now Newton, in 1644, and among the first settlers. It is not known that he was any relation to the Plymouth county families of this name. Joshua Fuller married Anna Stevens of Waltham for a second wife in 1746, by whom he had five children. His name is on the petition for a grant of land in 1735, and heads the petition for a renewal of the grant in 1771. He was also interested in other land grants. Twenty-one of the descendants of John Fuller served in the war of the Revolution. He (Joshua) died August 23, 1777.

JONATHAN WILLIAMS, JR., was a grantee on the right of his grandfather Ensign John Spring. He was the son of Jonathan and Deborah (Spring) Williams, and was born Nov. 5, 1744. He married Mrs. Sarah Spring in 1767, and took the homestead. He died in 1776, aged 39 years. His father Jonathan Sen., also a grantee named elsewhere, was the son of Isaac and Martha (Whitman) Spring and grandson of Capt. Isaac and Martha (Park) Spring whose father was Robert of Roxbury, the emigrant ancestor of a very distinguished family.

THOMAS GREENWOOD was born to John and Hannah (Trowbridge) Greenwood, January 28, 1696. His grandfather, Thomas, a weaver, settled in Newton in 1667, then aged 24 years. Dea. Thomas Greenwood, the grantee of Paris, was a prominent citizen; was Deacon, Captain, Justice of the Peace, town clerk, selectman, and for several terms a member of the General Court. By wife Lydia, he had five children and deceased at Newton in 1774. His name appears among the grantees in 1735.

EBENEZER STEARNS was a descendant of Isaac who early came to Watertown and is the common ancestor of the Stearns family of New England. Ebenezer, the grantee, was the son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Dix), and was born in Watertown, July 24, 1704. He was by trade a clothier and moved to Worcester. He married Apr. 12, 1737, Mary Spring of Newton. He died in Worcester in Sept. 1777. He was a grantee of 1735.

OAKES ANGLIER, son of Ephraim and grandson of Rev. Samuel Angier of Watertown, married Abigail Coolidge of Watertown in 1730. He purchased the public house of Samuel Jackson, Esq., in 1731, at Newton Corner which afterwards became "Angier Corner." He had no children and died in 1782, aged 85 years.

THOMAS QUINER was of Watertown where he married Sarah Warren in January, 1736-7. He was a grantee in 1735 and also in 1771.

STEPHEN HARRIS was a grantee on the right of his father Thomas Harris of Dorchester, who married Lucy Pierce of Watertown in 1745. Stephen was born May 24, 1762, and was consequently only nine years of age when he became a grantee of No. 4.

DAVID SANGER became a grantee in 1771, on the right of his father, David Sanger son of John and Rebecca (Parks) Sanger and grandson of Richard Sanger of Hingham, Sudbury and Watertown, a blacksmith who married Mary Runnels. David, Jr., was born May 23, 1756, and married Grace Sanger in 1788.

PETER DURELL of French descent was a grantee in 1771. His descendants are in Paris and are given at length in Family Sketches.

SAMUEL JACKSON was a grantee in 1771, on the right of Capt. Samuel Jackson whose name headed the list of grantees of 1735. Capt. Samuel was probably the son of Deacon Edward, and married Borodell, daughter of Capt. John and Hannah (Staunton) Jackson. He deceased prior to 1755. The later grantee may have been his son. They were of the Newton family of Jacksons and not known to be related to Lemuel Jackson, our early settler.

LIEUT. ISAAC JACKSON who was a grantee of 1771, on the right of his father, who died in 1769, was the son of Isaac and Ruth (Greenwood) Jackson, and was born May 9, 1732. He married Jemima Jones in 1758, who died in 1767; he afterwards married Sarah Cheney, and in 1777, Mary Hammond. He was a soldier in the French war and in the Revolution. He died in 1795.

THADDEUS TROWBRIDGE who became a grantee in 1771, on the right of his father Dea. William Trowbridge, who was a grantee of 1735, and died in 1744, aged 60 years. Thaddeus, above, married Mary Craft, Nov. 20, 1749, and took the old homestead. He died in 1777, aged 49. His father, Dea. William was a large slave holder.

JOSIAH BROWN was a proprietor of No. 4, on the right, of his father Dea. William Brown, who was a grantee in 1735. Wm.

Brown was the youngest son of Jonathan and Mary (Shattuck) Brown, and grandson of Capt. Abraham Brown or Browne, one of the first settlers in Watertown. Wm. Brown ante, married Hannah Pease of Cambridge, and second, Sarah Bond. His son Josiah, the grantee, born Aug. 2, 1724, was of Waltham, where he was a prominent citizen. His wife was Hannah Flagg. He died March 16, 1776.

JOSIAH GODDARD born July 12, 1701, in Watertown, was the son of Josiah and Rachel (Davis) Goddard, and married in 1730, Mary Bigelow. He moved to Newton and had a family there. He was the grandson of Wm. Goddard, a former citizen and grocer of London and an early resident of Watertown.

WILLIAM PARK appears to have been a grantee in his own right and also on the right of his father, Richard Park, who married Sarah Fuller in 1717. William, the grantee, was born Feb. 16, 1718, and his wife was Lucy Fuller. The name was very common in Newton a hundred years ago.

THOMAS FROST was an original grantee and also in 1771. He was probably of Waltham, but we have not been able to trace his lineage.

THADDEUS TROWBRIDGE who became a grantee in the right of his father Dea. William, had a second right, that of his uncle, Rev. Caleb Trowbridge, who graduated at Harvard College in 1710, married Sarah Oliver and the same year was ordained at Groton. He was the son of Dea. James and Margaret (Atherton) Trowbridge, was born Nov. 7, 1692, and died in 1760.

SAMUEL JACKSON became a grantee in the right of his father Edward and Mary (Gale) Jackson. He was born April 16, 1737, and married Lois Woodward in 1763. He died in July, 1801. Edward Jackson, the father, who had the right in 1735, was the son of Edward and Mary Jackson, was born Oct. 1, 1698, and died in 1738.

DAVID COOLIDGE, an innholder who married Mary Mixer, was born to Thomas and Sarah (Eddy) Coolidge, January 25, 1705. He was a grantee 1735 and 1771.

EZEKIEL WHITNEY became a grantee in the right of his uncle David Whitney, who was born to John and Abigail (Hagar) Whitney, June 16, 1697, and who had died prior to 1745. Ezekiel was the son of John and Susan Whitney, and was baptized April 12, 1741. He married April 13, 1768, Catharine Draper of Roxbury, and lived in Watertown.

JOHN STOWELL was of Newton and bought land there of James Barton in 1722. By wife Sarah, he had Sarah, James, Benjamin, Hezekiah who went to Worcester, Jerusha and David. He moved to Watertown and several of the younger children were born there. He was a constable in Watertown in 1737. He probably had brothers Daniel, David, Israel and Isaac. They were probably from Charlestown. Our Stowells are of the same race.

EPHRAIM BURRIDGE (or Burrage) was a proprietor in the right of his father John, who married Lydia Ward in 1718, and died in 1745. John, Jr., lived in Newton, and by wife Sarah had seven children born there. Ephraim, the grantee married Elizabeth Sever in 1767.

WILLIAM PARK who was a grantee in his own right, was the son of Lient. Richard and Sarah (Cutter) Park. The date of his birth is unknown, nor have we any record of his family.

DAVID LIVERMORE who appears to have been an original grantee and again in 1771, cannot readily be traced. There was a David in Watertown, a blacksmith, born 1714-15, but he is said to have died in 1756. It is possible that the grantee may have been Daniel instead of David, who was the son of Daniel and Mehitable, born in 1707, and a resident of Weston.

JONATHAN WILLIAMS was a grantee in the right of William Williams who was the son of Capt. Isaac Williams, Jr., and was born in 1690. Jonathan Williams married Deborah, daughter of Ensign John Spring, who was the son of Isaac and Martha Whitman Spring, and was born in 1711. His son Jonathan Williams, Jr., was also a grantee in the right of John Spring, as stated elsewhere.

JOSIAH MIXER was of Waltham. He was born Nov. 16, 1716, and married first Mary Garfield, and second Mrs. Sarah Mead. He was the son of Joseph and Anna (Jones) Mixer, and grandson of Isaac who took the oath of fidelity at Watertown in 1652; his wife was Mary Coolidge to whom he was married in 1655. This Isaac was the son of Isaac the emigrant who came from Ipswich, England, in 1634, and was a proprietor of Watertown.

JONATHAN LEARNED, Sen., who married Hannah White, was born in Watertown, Sept. 15, 1708, and was the son of Thomas who married Mary Mason. His son Jonathan, was a proprietor in 1771, on the right of Ebenezer Goddard, as stated elsewhere.

SAMUEL HYDE or Hide, was the son of Nehemiah and Hannah (Murdock) Hyde of Newton, and was born Oct. 8, 1731. He married Mary King of Cambridge in 1765, and died in 1790. He became a grantee on the right of Richard King, who was a grantee in 1735. Richard King was a carpenter in Watertown in 1740. Six years subsequently, he moved to Scarboro, Me., and became a wealthy lumber exporter. He married first, Isabella Blagden of York, and second, Mary Black of the same town. He was the father of Rufus King, the eminent statesman, of William King, the first governor of Maine, and of Cyrus King, an eminent lawyer formerly of Saco. The wife of Samuel Hyde was doubtless a relative of Richard King.

WILLIAM COOLIDGE, JR., was born Oct. 2, 1749, and married Mary Bridge. He was a grantee in the right of Joseph Allen, and died in 1779. His grandfather was Dea. John Coolidge who married Margaret Bond in 1699. Joseph Allen was probably the son of John Allen of Sudbury, who married Abigail, daughter of John Myrick of Charlestown, at Watertown, May 5, 1687.

CAPT. WILLIAM COOLIDGE was a grantee on the right of his father Dea. John Coolidge. He was born March 13, 1712-13, and married Elizabeth Brown in 1743.

BENJAMIN BOND was a grantee in 1735 and also in 1771, was probably the son of William and Mary (Learned) Bond of Watertown. He was born in 1715, and if he is the grantee of 1735, he was then but 22 years of age. He married Abigail Mixer and resided in Weston. His father died in 1745, and he administered on the estate. His brother William was a soldier in the old French and Indian wars.

JAMES DIX, son of John and Mary (Lawrence) Dix, was born Oct. 13, 1716, and died Apr. 19, 1801. He married in 1743, Sarah Bond, and was a trader in Watertown. He afterwards lived in Milford, Grafton, Northboro, Holden, Marlboro, and died in Sudbury. He was the father of Dr. Elijah Dix of Worcester in 1770, and of Boston in 1795, born August 14, 1747, who was much interested in Eastern lands, was chief proprietor and gave his name to two of our Maine towns, Dixfield and Dixmont. Dr. Dix married Mary Lynde and had eight children, all born in Worcester. The grandfather of James Dix was Edward who embarked at Gravesend, in 1635, aged 19 years, and came to Watertown among the earliest settlers.

DANIEL ROBBINS was probably the son of Daniel Robbins of Cambridge whose wife was Hannah Trowbridge. If so, he was born January 10, 1733. His father was an original grantee.

JAMES HAY who represented the right of Richard Coolidge, was a leather dresser of Watertown, and his wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Richard and Mary (Trowbridge) Coolidge.

CAPT. JOSEPH COOLIDGE, son of Isaac and Hannah (Morse) Coolidge, born Apr. 22, 1726, married January 26, 1745, Elizabeth Frost. He was of Sherburne, Mass.

JOSIAH FULLER, son of Josiah, born Oct. 24, 1739, married Anna Priest of Waltham in 1761, and second Eunice, daughter of Capt. Joshua Fuller. He died in 1825, aged 84 years. Capt. Joshua, his second wife's father was the person whose name appears at the head of the grantees of 1771.

SAMUEL SHATTUCK was the son of Dr. Joseph and Mary (Ladd) Shattuck and was born in Watertown, May 29, 1716. His grandfather, William Shattuck, was an early settler of Watertown.

NATHANIEL SMITH, son of Nathaniel and Lydia (Church) Smith, born Oct. 22, 1723, was probably afterwards of Groton and then of Marlboro'.

WILLIAM COOLIDGE. He was of Waltham and married Mary Brown of Watertown, in 1743. His son William, Jr., was an early settler in Livermore. Several of this family settled in Jay and Dixfield but none came to Paris. They all descended from John Coolidge, who was made a freeman in Watertown in 1636.

AMOS LIVERMORE was a proprietor of Number Four on the right of his father, Oliver Livermore, son of Daniel and Mary (Coolidge) Livermore, born March 11, 1697-8. Oliver Livermore married Ruth, daughter of Samuel Stearns, and Amos the 7th child was born July 28, 1737. He was a descendant of John Livermore, who came to New England from Ipswich, England, in 1634, aged 28 years. Of this descent was Dea. Elijah Livermore, who was an early settler in Livermore and gave his name to the town.

NATHANIEL COOLIDGE became a proprietor on the right of his uncle Thaddens, who was the son of Richard and Mary (Bond)

Coolidge, born Oct. 6, 1710 and died Aug. 3, 1744. Nathaniel, above-named, an innholder, was the son of Nathaniel, who was born in March, 1701-2, married Grace Bowman and died in 1766. Nathaniel, Jr., was born Dec. 7, 1728, married Dorothy Whitney and was also an innkeeper at Watertown Bridge from 1764 to 1770.

ELISHA LEARNED became a proprietor in 1771, on the right of his father, David Learned, an original grantee, who was the son of Thomas and Mary (Mason) Learned, and born Feb. 10, 1710-11, a miller in Watertown, married Sarah Mixer July 22, 1730. Elisha was born Aug. 12, 1737 and in 1763, married Mary Bemis.

SAMUEL RANDALL, born Nov. 12, 1711, was the grandson of Serg't John Randall, by wife Susanna, and son of Samuel, born March 20, 1668-9, who married Elizabeth Gleason of Cambridge, in 1708. Serj. John above-named, was probably the son of Widow Elizabeth Randall, who died in Watertown, Dec. 24, 1672, aged 80 years. Our grantee perhaps moved to Waltham.

GEORGE HARRINGTON was the son of John and Hannah (Winter) Harrington and his wife was a Parker, daughter of James of Groton. He was of Watertown. His son George, born March 16, 1717-18, married Rebecca Allen in 1740 and lived in Weston. Both were grantees in 1735 and again in 1771. Their ancestor was Robert Harrington, supposed to have been a relative of Dea. Thomas Hastings, the emigrant.

JOSIAH BISCOE was our early settler. He was a grantee in the right of his father, Thomas Biscoe, whose wife was Abigail Mason. Josiah Biscoe was the only one of the sixty original grantees who came to Paris. The final e in this name is often dropped. An account of him is given in Family Sketches.

EDMUND BARNARD was the son of Jonathan and Hannah (Stowell) Barnard, and was baptized July 3, 1743. He was a grantee in the right of his grandfather, Samuel Stowell.

GEORGE HARRINGTON, JR., was the son of George, Sen., above-named and was born March 16, 1717-18. He married Rebecca Allen and lived in Brookfield. For second wife, he married Betsey Smith of Waltham.

NEHEMIAH MASON was born June 14, 1721, and died Aug. 6, 1776. His father, Joseph Mason, Esq., who married Mary Monk, was a tanner in Watertown. He was a Justice of the Peace and town clerk and a useful man in the town. He died July 6, 1755. He was the son of Joseph and Mary (Fiske) Mason, and grandson of Capt. Hugh Mason, the emigrant, a tanner and one of the first residents of Watertown.

DANIEL BOND, who represented the right of his father of the same name, was born Nov. 25, 1723 and died in 1782. He married Sarah Gray, widow of James, and daughter of Henry Spring. They had twelve children.

ABRAHAM WHITNEY, whose father John Whitney was a grantee of 1735, was born Aug. 8, 1716, and married Tabitha Allen. He descended from John and Elinor Whitney who came from Ipswich, England, 1635, and was then aged 35 years. He settled in Watertown, and his descendants are very numerous.

JONATHAN LEARNED was a grantee in 1771, on the right of Ebenezer Goddard who was one of the grantees of 1735. He was the son of Jonathan Learned who married Hannah White. He was born Oct. 12, 1731, and married Apr. 29, 1762, Susan Willis. Ebenezer Goddard was born Oct. 30, 1696, and was son of William the emigrant. He married Abigail White. His family intermarried with the Learned family which may account for the transfer of the claim.

WILLIAM DANA was a grantee in 1735 and 1771. He was a descendant of Richard Dana of Cambridge, who was the common ancestor of all the New England Danas. William probably was of Cambridge.

REV. SETH STORER was the son of Col. Joseph and Hannah Storer of Wells, Me., where he was born May 26, 1702. He graduated at Harvard College and was ordained in Watertown in 1724. He died Nov. 27, 1774. Jonathan Bemis whose right he represented was the son of John and Mary (Harrington) Bemis, and grandson of Joseph the emigrant. He was born Nov. 17, 1701 and married Anna, daughter of Daniel and Mary Livermore.

EBENEZER BROWN of Waltham, was a grantee in 1735 and in 1771. His wife was Abigail Adams, perhaps of Lexington. He was the son of Dea. William and brother of Josiah already mentioned.

JONAS COOLIDGE who became a proprietor on the right of his father Jonas Coolidge, whose wife was Elizabeth Thornton of Watertown, was born in Newton Feb. 1, 1744.

NATHANIEL SPRING, son of William and Abigail (Coolidge) Spring of Watertown, was born Aug. 26, 1715. He was a grantee in 1735 and in 1771. He married Martha, daughter of Isaac and Martha Williams, and moved to Worcester.

CHRISTOPHER GRANT, Jr., was a grantee in the right of his father who was probably the son of Joseph and Mary (Grafton) Grant. Christopher Jr., was born Feb. 4, 1743-4, and by wife Sarah had five children, all born in Watertown.

SAMUEL FULLER was a grantee on the right of his father, Isaac Fuller who was the son of John Fuller Jr., whose wife was Abigail Boylston. Isaac Fuller died in 1755, aged 61 years. Samuel was born Nov. 26, 1724, and in 1746 married Lydia Stearns.

NATHANIEL STONE, who was a grantee in 1735 and again in 1771, may have been that Nathaniel, one of the children of "Goodman" Stone who was baptized in the second church in Watertown, Nov. 20, 1709. No other traces of him are found in Watertown or Newton, and quite probably he resided elsewhere. There were two grantees in 1771 by the name of Nathaniel Stone. One of them was an officer of the organization, and the oath of office was administered to him in Middleboro, where he probably resided.

NATHANIEL STONE who was a grantee on the right of Moses Hastings, was probably the son of Lt. Isaac Stone of Framingham who married Elizabeth Brown of Sudbury in 1722, and moved to Shrewsbury where Nathaniel was born in 1732. Nathaniel married Thankful, daughter of Jonathan Morse, and second the widow of Wm. Goddard of Westmoreland, N. H. Moses Hastings was born to Samuel Hastings of Watertown in 1715, and was married to Elizabeth Taylor in 1739. He moved from Brookfield to Shrewsbury, and died there June 10, 1767; his widow married Samuel Bigelow in 1770.

CHAPTER XII.

A BRIEF RESUME.

In the preceding pages, after giving an epitome of early Maine History, the origin of our land titles and a sketch of Provincial grants, extracts from the Proprietor's records were given, showing that a grant of land was made in 1735-6 to Samuel Jackson and fifty-nine others, most of whom were residents of Watertown, Newton and Waltham. The records do not show that this grant was a compensation for military services, and there is nothing in the original papers which indicate that it was made for any service either military or civil. The action of the General Court goes to show that it was simply a grant of land between the Merrimac and Connecticut rivers made to certain applicants, with certain specified conditions as to settlement and improvements: this and nothing more. It has already been stated that the grant was made at a time when the boundary question between Massachusetts and New Hampshire was being agitated, and that the former hoped by occupying the territory before the question was decided, to hold a fee in the soil if not the territory as a part of her commonwealth. It has been shown that other townships were granted at the same time and in the same region for no other purpose than to secure their settlement, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is fair to presume that the grant to Samuel Jackson and his associates was made in the same way. Not only do the original grant and proprietors' records show this to have been the case, but in deeding their rights to settlers and others, the grantees made no reference whatever to military service as the basis of or reason for the grant, while the grantees of the Canada townships and others made for military services, almost invariably referred to it in their conveyances.

The records show that Samuel Jackson called his associates together and that they organized and held several meetings. Assessments were made on the rights from time to time, to meet the expenses of the committee appointed by the General Court for locating the township, and for lotting it out and doing the necessary work preliminary to a settlement. That the original grantees or many of them, intended to settle upon "township No. 4, located between Merrimac and Connecticut rivers," there can be no doubt. It has been shown that while they were making commendable efforts for complying with the conditions of their grant, the long contested boundary question was settled against Massachusetts, and "No. 4," with thirty-six other townships granted by that Province were declared to be in New Hampshire. The grantees of No. 4 either could not or did not care to make terms with the Masonian proprietors, and so the matter of their grant was allowed to slumber for the space of thirty years.

It has been shown how, after the close of the French and Indian wars, and the interior of the then Province of Maine had been opened up for settlement, the surviving grantees of several of the New Hampshire townships, petitioned the General Court for eastern lands in lieu of those they had lost. The surviving grantees of No. 4 met in 1769, and reorganized. A committee headed by Joshua Fuller, was chosen to petition the General Court for a renewal of their grant, and their petition met with a favorable response. Whatever may have been the foundation of the original grant, there can be no doubt that that of 1771 was in lieu of the one lost by the settlement of the boundary question, for it was so stated in the petition, and in every official document that emanated from the General Court relating to it, and no reference was made in any paper which would throw any light upon the cause of the original concession. It has been shown that a committee was chosen to locate and make a plan of the township granted, and that this having been done, the grant was confirmed by act of the Legislature. Then a committee was sent down to lot out the new No. 4, but before they had proceeded far with their work, it was discovered that the plan was all wrong and the surveyors were obliged to return with their task unaccomplished. A new plan was made and a new confirmation obtained from the General Court, and it was not till 1773, that a new committee accompanied by a surveyor, visited the township and lotted it out in accordance with the new and correct plan. The following year a road was cleared out between No. 4 and New Gloucester and arrangements were being made for securing settlers, when the war of the Revolution burst upon the country, and all minor matters were for the time being laid aside. No meeting of the proprietors was held between April, 1775, and September, 1777, and none at which any important business was transacted until March, 1779. Then the importance of hastening to comply with the terms of the grant was appreciated; measures were taken for making roads and building mills in the township, a committee was chosen and made responsible by bonds and sureties, for procuring the requisite number of settlers, bounties were offered to the first families, and a tax of thirty pounds in silver money was assessed upon each right, to be used for the sole purpose of forwarding the settlement of the township. The committee obtained quite a number of settlers in Worcester county, but appear to have met with better success in the Old Colony, in the early settled towns of Plymouth, Middleboro', Bridgewater and Plympton, with a few from Taunton, Raynham and Wareham. Lemuel Jackson of Middleboro', was a forehanded man for his time, and had a family of grown-up sons. He and his son-in-law, Dea. John Willis, made the first settlers' purchase in December, 1779. They doubtless felled trees in 1780, burned them and raised a crop of corn in 1781, and moved in with their families in 1782.

CHAPTER XIII.

SETTLED AT LAST.

Probably no Plantation Organization in No. 4.—The Records of the Proprietary Meager.—The First Settlers.—The Jacksons, John Willis and John Daniels.—Mrs. Marshall's Story.—Early Purchasers of Land.

Whether No. 4 ever had a plantation organization or not, we have no means of knowing; if it had, no records of proceedings are now in existence, and it is quite probable that no such organization was ever had. The roads and bridges appear to have been looked after by the proprietors up to the date of incorporation, and assessments were from time to time made to defray the expenses, and the only other necessary functions of a plantation would have been the assessment and collection of State and county taxes. A tax was assessed on the polls and estates of No. 4 by order of the Great and General Court in 1791, as the record elsewhere goes to show, but it was probably assessed and collected by a committee of the Proprietary. We have no evidence that any other tax was ever called for previous to the incorporation of the town, when the functions of the Proprietary except for the sale of lands and the collection of debts, ceased. We shall therefore assume, in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, that no plantation organization existed, and that the proprietors' records convey the only intelligence of the public doings within the township, from its settlements until the question of incorporation began to be agitated in 1792, and these records, upon topics of general interest, are very meager. They are valuable so far as they go, but they do not supply the place of plantation records.

Had a plantation organization been effected in No. 4, its records would have been valuable as showing the number of persons taxed from year to year, and the financial standing of the early settlers. But in the absence of such records, we must rely for information as to when different early settlers came in, upon family tradition and upon the records of their titles to real estate. The early settlers have long since been dead and, in most instances, their children have followed them. The term "early settlers" in this history will generally be restricted to those who came in prior to the incorporation of the town, though those who came subsequent to the incorporation and prior to the year eighteen hundred, might perhaps, with propriety be reckoned with this class of citizens.

The most reliable information we have as to the number of settlers a few months prior to the incorporation, is contained in the petition for an act of incorporation and the two remonstrances thereto. These may not contain the names of all the adult males in the township, but as there appears to have been considerable excitement over the subject, it is fair to presume that nearly all signed one or the other of these petitions, and if so there were not far from eighty male inhabitants of the plantation of twenty-one years of age and upwards, in the autumn of 1792.

A hundred years or thereabouts, after the first settlement of any town, in the absence of positive information such as can be gained only by journals, diaries or other contemporaneous records, it is always a matter of some difficulty to ascertain precisely when the first settler or family came in, and it is so in the case of Paris. There is little if any doubt that New Gloucester was the rallying point of the first settlers, as it was of several other towns in central and eastern Oxford county. New Gloucester with the exception of a few straggling settlers in Poland, was a border town, had been settled for forty or more years, and was incorporated in 1774. The early settlers of several interior Maine towns, came down from Massachusetts, left their families at New Gloucester then penetrated the wilderness to the place designed to be their future homes, felled trees, burned them, and then returned to New Gloucester to spend the winter. In the following spring, they again visited their clearings, put in crops, built log huts and then returned for their families. It has been stated by Elder James Hooper who came to Paris in 1794, that the first trees were felled in this town in 1779, by John Daniels. This, to say the least, is exceedingly doubtful. The first road was cleared through the plantation from New Gloucester in 1774, and the same was again recut and cleared, in the fall of 1779. It is not probable that trees were felled for a clearing before this road was again cleared, though they may have been. Probably as stated elsewhere, the first sale of proprietors' land to persons who intended to settle in No. 4, was in December 24, 1779, to Lemuel Jackson and John Willis, both of Middleborough, Mass., who purchased jointly of Josiah Capen of Cambridge, two entire rights formerly belonging to Ebenezer Stearns and David Livermore, and embracing one-thirty-second part of the entire township. It has been said, and we doubt not truly, that the following summer Isaac, Lemuel, Jr., and perhaps Levi Jackson, sons of Lemuel, visited No. 4, felled trees and then returned either to New Gloucester or Middleborough. It is also said that John Daniels felled trees here at the same time or previously,* and that the land upon which he made his clearing not being his own, he sold his betterments for an iron kettle. This may or may not be true. January 19, 1781, Lemuel Jackson was still in Middleboro', for on that day, he bought of Joshua and David Fuller an entire right, that of their late father Capt. Joshua Fuller, and May 4th, 1781, "Lemuel Jackson of Middleboro'," bought of "Ebenezer Brown of Waltham," another right, which, together with his other purchases made him the owner of more than one-eighth of the township.

Tradition informs us, and other evidence goes to corroborate it, that having felled trees in 1780, in 1781, Lemuel Jackson, his sons and John Willis, came to New Gloucester, and from thence to No. 4, to burn their trees and try for a crop of corn. In August of this year, the Jacksons were certainly here and had a camp where Moses Marshall and wife stopped on their way from Bethel which the

*In an article published in the Jeffersonian at Paris, Dec. 4, 1830, which may be found in another part of this volume, Elder James Hooper says the first trees felled in Paris were cut by John Daniels in 1779. Mr. Daniels was living at that date and probably furnished the information to Mr. Hooper. He says the lot on which this opening was made included most of the village of Paris Hill. He further stated that "the first corn raised in town was by Isaac Jackson and Lemuel Jackson, Jr., and that soon after, Lemuel Jackson, Senior, came &c," most of which may be true, but we incline to the opinion that the date as given is a year too early.

Indians had raided upon, to Hebron. Probably John Daniels was with them, and as stated elsewhere on the authority of Elder Hooper written fifty years after, he may have preceded them. The descendants of John Willis in the third generation, now living in this town, well remember their grandmother, the first white woman who settled here, and have often heard her say that she was drawn here from New Gloucester on a moose-sled, in March, 1782. The time seems to have been fixed by the birth of her oldest child who was born in 1778, and was four years old when she came to No. 4. Her statement was that she brought one child with her and that her father's family came in later but the same year, bringing with them her other child. This fixes the time of Lemuel Jackson's family coming here either in the summer or autumn of 1782, and all this is consistent with dates of title deeds, and other evidence. Mrs. Marshall's statement is so definite that it must be taken as conclusive upon the matters to which she refers. As to the date of her escape from Bethel, there can be no doubt of the correctness of her statement. It was at the time of the Indian raid on Bethel, the date of which is as well authenticated as any fact in American History.

Mr. Marshall and wife whose maiden name was Lucy Mason, daughter of Moses Mason, an early settler in Bethel, were living in Bethel or Sudbury, Canada, in August 5th, 1781, two days after Segar and Clark had been captured, on a farm on the south side of the river some three miles from Bethel Hill towards Middle Interval. On the morning of the 5th, Mr. Marshall being absent, his wife was informed by a neighbor that there were seven Indians on the opposite side of the river who had taken three women captive and who said if they (Marshall's family) would remain at home they would not be molested, but if they should try to escape they would certainly be put to death as there were five hundred Indians in the vicinity. From this point Mrs. Marshall has told her own story and it is here given in her own words: "At this moment I exclaimed, what shall I do? 'Hide in the woods' said my informant. While I was hastening to the woods with my children, I saw my husband coming home. I beckoned to him to hasten and on his coming up, I hastily related what I had heard. He ran to the house and took such provisions as he could readily seize and throw into a sack, and then started with his little store and family into the woods. We traveled lightly and looked cautiously around, expecting every moment to see the face of the Indians, but after a few hours, our fears considerably subsided, and we sat down to rest. I found myself very much fatigued, and without my ordinary dress, for during the morning I had slipped off my shoes, having nothing on except a thin skirt and a handkerchief over my shoulders. This caused my heart to ache, for we had resolved not to turn back, but to pursue our way which lay through the wilderness. After a short halt, we set out again, and traveled till dark. We did not dare to strike a light for fear of being discovered by the Indians. We sat there impatiently waiting the morning of the 6th, when we renewed our journey, but much slower than the day previously. During the afternoon, we were overtaken by a Mr. Dodge who had been sent from Bethel to New Gloucester for help. We requested him to inform the first inhabitants he met, of our situation, and give him the course as nearly as he could, and ask them to meet us. Mr. Dodge missed his course to Jackson's camp in No. 4, which he expected first to reach, and came out at Lieut. Bearce's in Hebron. He informed Bearce who immediately set out for Jackson's camp, and on his arrival he obtained two men who went with him as far as the river in the north part of the township, and there struck up a fire and prepared some food, while Mr. Bearce continued in search of us. He first found my son David, whom his father had carried a short distance ahead, and left on a log, telling him to be quiet, while he went back after me. We arrived in a short time at the river, took some refreshment, and then proceeded to Jackson's camp where we arrived on the 9th of August. We remained at this camp three or four days, consequently I was the first white woman who took lodgings in what is now the town of Paris."

Mr. Marshall and family continued on to New Gloucester where they resided a few months, then went to Minot and subsequently to Hebron where he lived to his decease which took place Nov. 20, 1828. His wife died August 25, 1824. They were the parents of David and Nathan Marshall formerly well known residents of this town and some of whose sons and daughters are still with us, and of Moses Marshall who lived and died in Hebron. The account of their retreat from Bethel was given by her when in the full possession of her faculties, and is presumably entirely authentic. Such an episode in a person's life is not likely to be forgotten in any of its details. It need hardly be stated that the story of their neighbor which hastened their escape, was entirely without foundation. The Indians had left town as suddenly as they came, and in great haste, fearing pursuit, so that the danger had passed before Mr. Marshall left his house. Still they were liable to return and commit further depredations, and Mr. Marshall doubtless thought it the part of prudence to take his helpless family out of harm's way.

This statement of Mrs. Marshall preserved by her son, the late Moses Marshall, Esq., of Hebron, is valuable in that it settles several points beyond a reasonable doubt. It shows that the Jacksons had a well-known camp in No. 4, in the summer of 1781; that there were several men here, two of whom could be spared to go and render needed assistance to the Marshall family. It shows farther that no family had yet moved here, that none of the wives of the early settlers had yet been here, for she states explicitly that she was the first white woman who lodged in No. 4. Doubtless the Jacksons, Willis and Daniels were here looking after their growing corn, felling more trees, clearing land, and fitting up camps or log houses for the reception of their families the following year. This was in August, and as the evidence is quite conclusive that the first white woman settler, came in March, the entire testimony except the statement of Elder Hooper, points to March 1782, as the time of the advent of Mrs. Willis in this town, and there is no very great discrepancy between this idea and Elder Hooper's account. In 1779, Jackson and Willis bought settling lands in No. 4, the road was recut, and perhaps a piece of trees was felled by Mr. Daniels; in 1780, the Jacksons felled trees; in 1781, they raised a crop of corn and in 1782, moved in with their families, and at last the settlement was made permanent.

Concerning the precise year when other early settlers came it is not so easy to determine, nor does it much matter. Many of them became residents of No. 4, before purchasing their lands, at any rate, before receiving their title deeds, consequently, the registry of deeds, while it shows when they received the titles to their lands, does not indicate when they settled upon them. It is quite common in new settlements for men of moderate means, to purchase lands and take bonds or obligations for deeds at some future time, when they are in a condition to pay for them. It is quite probable that such may have been the case in No. 4. Genealogical sketches of the early and some of the later settlers will be found under their proper heading, so that only the merest mention will be made of those who were here prior to the incorporation, or soon after, and in connection with their land titles.

LEMUEL JACKSON of Middleboro and John Willis, Dec. 24, 1779, bought of Josiah Capen the rights of Ebenezer Stearns and David Livermore. April 4th, 1781, Lemuel Jackson of Middleboro bought of Ebenezer Brown of Waltham, his entire Right. January 19, 1781, he bought of Joshua and David Fuller of Newton, the right of Ephraim Burrage. Nov. 22, 1782, Lemuel Jackson of No. 4 bought of Thomas Learned of Watertown, the north half of lot number 15-16 in the 7th range. Oct. 16, 1787, he bought of Israel Whittemore of Weston, lots 9 and 10 in the 2d range, and double lot 19-20 in the 4th range. MOSES TWITCHELL of Paris, bought of Levi Hubbard, Dec. 24, 1804, the easterly half of lot No. 11 in the 4th range.

JOHN DANIELS, January 18, 1783, bought of Lemuel Jackson, lot No. 10 in the 6th range.

EBENEZER HUTCHINSON of Walton's Plantation, (east part of Woodstock), bought of Stephen Robinson, Apr. 2, 1799, the southerly part of lot 27-28 in the 6th range. This man built the mills in the northeast part of the town, and subsequently moved to Ohio.

EPHRAIM FIELD of Bridgewater, June 1, 1794, bought of Luke Bemis of Watertown, No. 19-20 in the 2d range. January 28th, 1795, he bought of Wm. and Josiah Brown of Boston, lot No. 15-16 in the 4th, and March 7, 1796, he bought of Reuben Hubbard, lot No. 8 in the 4th.

JAMES BROOK, Tailor, Hebron, Oct. 15, 1789, bought of Israel Whittemore of Weston, lot No. 14 in the 2d range. This man's name in the town records, is variously spelled, "Broke," "Lebroke," "Le Brook" and "Brook." The earliest and best authenticated orthography, is "Le Brook." In 1784, James Le Brook of Pembroke, Mass., bought of Alexander Shepard, Jr., a lot of land in Hebron. For some reason, no deed was given of the land at the time, and in 1791, after the death of Shepard, a deed of the land was given "Le Brook," by his executor.

GEORGE BERRY bought of Samuel Briggs of Sumner, in 1810, the northerly half of lot 27-28 in the 2d range. In 1811, Berry sold to Daniel Cummings of Norway, and two years later Cummings sold it to Levi Berry, who settled upon it and lived there many years. Briggs sold the southerly half of this lot to John Robinson in 1803. Levi Berry sold that part of the northerly half lying south of the river, to Alexander Hill, in 1819.

TILDEN BARTLETT, in 1805, bought of John Willis, lot No. 28 in the 1st range, and settled upon it.

WM. BERRY about 1810, bought No. 27-28 in the 3d range, and spent his life there. He sold a part to Foxwell Swan, and Swan a part of his to Elijah Swan.

In the list of more than one hundred purchasers of real estate, are doubtless the names of many who did not settle upon the lands they bought. Indeed some of the lots changed hands several times before they were settled, and in quite a number of cases the same lands were sold to different parties, to be accounted for probably in the fact that the first purchasers failed to pay. It was not intended by this list to locate the early settlers: that will be done in another place. This list is made merely to show who the early real estate owners in Paris were, when they first purchased as appears of record, and their place of residence at the time. Doubtless a few early purchasers neglected to have their deeds put upon record which accounts for the fact that some persons sold lands where no other evidence can be found that they ever owned them. Only such persons are contained in this list whose deeds are recorded in the Cumberland county records. The Registry in Oxford county was established in 1806. Possibly some of the old deeds may be found recorded in the Oxford County Registry.

CHAPTER XIV.

"TOWN OF PARIS."

Act of Incorporation.—Warrant for the First Town Meeting.—The Return.—The Meeting and its Doings.—Subsequent meetings of the year.

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three.

An Act to incorporate the inhabitants of a plantation known by the name of No. 4. into a town by the name of Paris.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, that plantation known by the name of No. 4. in the county of Cumberland, bounded on all the parts by the Commonwealth's land, as follows, viz.: Beginning at a hemlock tree two hundred and fifty-two chains from the south corner of Sylvester Canada, thence north fourteen degrees west, seven hundred and seventy-seven chains to a stake and stones, thence south sixty-eight degrees and thirty minutes west, three hundred and sixty chains to a stake and stones, thence south fourteen degrees east seven hundred and seventy-seven chains to a stake and stones: thence north sixty-eight degrees and thirty minutes east three hundred and eight chains to the hemlock tree first mentioned, with the inhabitants thereon, be and hereby is incorporated into a town by the name of Paris, with all the powers, privileges and immunities that towns within this commonwealth do or may enjoy. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid that Isaac Parsons, Esquire, be and hereby is empowered to issue his warrant directed to some principal inhabitant of said town, qualified as the law directs, to assemble and meet at some suitable time and place in said town, and choose such officer or officers as towns by law are empowered to choose at their annual meeting in the month of March or April.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES }
June 19, 1793. }

Third. To choose all other town officers required by law for towns to choose at their annual meeting in the month of March or April.

Given under my hand and seal at New Gloucester the second day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three.

ISAAC PARSONS } Justice of the Peace for the county of Cumberland, and pursuant to an act of the General Court.

RETURN.

Pursuant to the foregoing warrant to me directed, I have notified and warned all the inhabitants of said town to meet and assemble together, at the time and place and for the purposes mentioned in the foregoing warrant.

JONATHAN HALL.

Paris, July 16, 1793.

THE FIRST TOWN MEETING.

At a meeting of the freeholders and other inhabitants of the town of Paris, regularly assembled at the dwelling house of Mr. Reuben Hubbard of said town, on the sixteenth day of July 1793, to act on the articles set forth in the warrant for calling said meeting, the meeting being opened, they made choice of Mr. Lemuel Jackson for Moderator, and made choice of the following persons for town officers, viz. :

Josiah Bisco for town clerk, who was duly sworn by the moderator.

MESSRS. ISAAC BOLSTER.	}	Selectmen.
LEMUEL JACKSON.
NATHAN NELSON.
MESSRS. JOSIAH BISCO.	}	Assessors.
JOHN BESSEE.
JOHN WILLIS.

Mr. Daniel Stowell, town treasurer.

Then the town voted to let out the collection of taxes at vendue, to the lowest bidder, and being put up were struck off to Mr. John Daniels for three pence half penny upon the pound, he being the lowest bidder.

Voted to choose nine surveyors of highways and made choice of Robert Wightman, Abijah Hall, Stephen Robertson, Thomas Stevens, Nicholas Chesley, Lemuel Jackson, Merodach B. Smith, Elias Chase and Levi Hubbard.

Surveyor of lumber, Solomon Bryant.

Surveyor of shingles and clapboards, Merodach B. Smith.

Fence viewers, Thomas Stevens and Caleb Cushman.

Tythingmen, Jonathan Hall, Nathaniel Haskell, Wm. Swan, Benj. Hammond and Seth Carpenter.

Sealer of Leather, Daniel Stowell.

Deer Reeve, Benj. Hammond.

Hogreeves, Phillip Donohue, John Daniels, Samuel Durell and Henry Hill.

Field Driver, Daniel Whitney.

School Committee, Isaac Bolster, Abner Shaw, John Willis, Seth Carpenter and Merodach B. Smith.

Constable, John Daniels.

A true Record.

JOSIAH BISCO, Clerk.

The next meeting was held at the dwelling house of Lemuel Jackson, on the 21st day of October. Lemuel Jackson presided and it was voted to raise thirty pounds for the support of preaching, fifty pounds for the support of schools, one hundred pounds for the repair of highways and ten pounds for defraying town charges.

At a meeting at the same place, on the 18th of November, the town voted not to send a representative or delegate to sit in a convention in Portland, to consider the subject of separation from Massachusetts. It was voted to accept the road and school districts, agreeably to the report of the selectmen, and that each school district should have the benefit of the money raised in it for the support of schools; also that each district should build a school-house or otherwise provide a place for keeping the school. It was voted not to assess the money raised for the support of preaching until the next annual meeting.

CHAPTER XV.

DESCRIPTION OF PARIS.

Its Metes and Bounds.—Changes in its Lines.—Its Hills, Streams and Ponds.—Its Geology and Mineralogy —Its Flora and Fauna, and its Agricultural Capacities.

The town of Paris as originally laid out, was seven hundred and seventy-seven chains of four rods in length, by three hundred and sixty chains in breadth. In the act of incorporation, there is a manifest error which gives the southerly line on Hebron and Oxford lines only three hundred and eight chains. According to this measurement, the town is four and one-half miles wide by nine and three-fourths long, (a small fraction omitted) and contains a little short of forty-four square miles. But the allowance for the "swag" of the chain is not probably all included in the above, nor the allowance for ponds and rivers, and the dimensions of the town are probably considerably larger than they are here given. In fact, the evidence goes to show that this tract was laid out for two townships in the first instance, but trouble arising about the division, No. 4 proprietors bought out the other parties who located elsewhere. Changes have been made in the lines on each side of the town since the tract was first surveyed. In some instances land has been set off and in others added, but on the whole, Paris has more than held her own. In 1817, lots one in the eighth range and one in the ninth were set off to Hebron. In 1825, the estates of John Gray, Jr., and John Starbird, being lots numbered six and seven in the east part of Woodstock, according to Smith's survey, were set off to Paris. In 1838, the westerly half of lot number one in the first range, was set off from Paris and annexed to Oxford. In 1841, lots number twenty-nine in the second, and twenty-nine in the third range, were set off from Paris and annexed to Woodstock. In 1828, Benj. Woodbury, Asa Thayer, Caleb Cushman, Jr., Bela Farrar and Ziba Thayer, with their estates, were set off from Buckfield and annexed to Paris. This set-on included five lots of land and the road leading from America Thayer's to Summer line. In 1859, lots numbered six, seven and eight in the first range, were set off from Paris and annexed to Norway. In 1861, all that part of lots numbered six, seven and eight in the westerly range of lots belonging to Paris before the set off in 1859, which lay easterly and southerly of the following described line, were taken from Norway and reannexed to Paris: "beginning in the northerly line of said lot number eight, and at the center of the old Rumford road, so called; thence following said center southerly till it intersects the road from South Paris to Norway; thence in a straight line through the agricultural grounds to the southeast corner thereof; thence in a straight line to the northeasterly corner of Titus O. Brown's homestead farm, so called; thence to the easterly line of his said farm to the Little Androscoggin river, and thence by said river westerly to the original line between Paris and Norway." By an act approved March 9, 1880, the estate of Caleb Fuller was set off from Woodstock and annexed to Paris. This was part of the two lots, number twenty-nine in the second range and twenty-nine in the third taken from Paris in 1841.

Paris is bounded north by Woodstock, east by Hebron, Buckfield, and Sumner, south by Hebron and Oxford, and west by Oxford, Norway and Greenwood. Paris abounds in steep hills and the surface is generally very uneven. There are no high mountains, and in fact no elevation that hardly deserves the name of mountain within its limits. Streaked mountain near the southeast corner, is in Hebron and Buckfield, though a small portion of its western slope and foot-hills are in Paris. No. 4 Hill near the southeast corner of the town and westerly from Streaked mountain, was formerly all in Paris and named from the Plantation or Grant, but its southerly side was set off into Hebron in 1817. Northwest of this is "Singepole," and near this is another considerable elevation without name. Along or near the eastern border are Crocker's Hill, Ones Hill and the Spruce Hills, while along through the center of the town from North to South, are Jump off Hill, Stearns Hill and Paris Hill. Mount Mica with its rare minerals is easterly from Paris Hill. Berry's Ledge which was once called "Old Bluff" is on the northern border next to Woodstock, and west of that is another cropping out of the same ledge which was once called The "Belfry." This was set off into Woodstock in 1841, but was set back in 1880. Then near West Paris is Robinson's Hill, and east of High street is a considerable Hill without name. Cobble Hill, so called from the early settlement of the town, is near the westerly side of the town near the northeast part of Norway. Besides those mentioned, there are two hills west of the North Paris mineral spring, and various others of lesser note scattered through the town, that never have received specific names. Of course, where there are so many hills there must be corresponding valleys, and as might be expected, most of the roads in town lead "up hill and down hill," and are hard to build and expensive to keep in repair.

The Little Androscoggin is the only river in town, and this of small size. To this all the small streams in town except at the extreme southerly part, are tributary. The "Little Amariscoggin" was so called quite early for it is named in connection with the confirmation of the grant to Joshua Fuller and others in 1772. Its head-waters are the Bryant Pond in Woodstock and Twitchell, Sheepskin, Oversett and other small ponds in Greenwood. It enters Paris from Greenwood near the northwest corner of the town, and flowing southeasterly it approaches nearest to the center of the town from east to west, when at or near Snow's Falls. Then it curves gradually to the west and passes into Oxford about two miles from the southwest corner of Paris. After passing into Oxford and running about a mile, it makes a sharp curve and again enters Paris, but reenters Oxford as abruptly as it leaves it. Its first important tributary after entering Paris is the East Branch, which comes down from Woodstock and unites with the west branch or river below West Paris. Farther down it receives the brook from High street and next the outlet of Moose Pond from North Paris. Below Bisco's Falls, it receives Stone's and Smith's brooks, and at South Paris, Stony brook, which is its last tributary received in Paris. Below South Paris, where the Androscoggin is the boundary between the two towns, the river receives from the Norway side an important tributary, the outlet of the great pond in Norway. There are several falls on the river and its tributaries which have been utilized, and which will be more particularly described in another place. On the main river are water privileges above, and at West Paris, at Snow's and Bisco's Falls, at Jackson's and at South Paris. The mills at North Paris are on the Moose Pond branch. The falls on Stony Brook, near South Paris, were the first utilized and here Lemuel Jackson built the first saw and grist mills in town. The bed of the Little Androscoggin made it possible for a railroad to be constructed through the town. The Grand Trunk road enters Paris from the south, near where the river goes out, and crossing it below South Paris, it follows its curve all the way to the northwest corner of the town, going out into Greenwood through the channel worn out by the river on its way into Paris. For ages, had this little stream once much larger and probably marking the course of a large arctic river, been lowering its channel, making cuts through the hills and filling up the valleys and preparing the way for this great international thoroughfare of travel and traffic. There is in town a number of gravelly ridges formed by glacial or Kame rivers. The waters of the upper Androscoggin lake region once united in one grand stream which flowed from Lake Welokennebacook southward through a very low pass and down the valley of Black Brook and Ellis River. From Rumford Point, the course of the Kame is up the valley of the West branch of the Concord River, thence through a part of Bethel, and through a low pass in Woodstock to Bryants Pond.* The Kame through Bethel and through a part of Woodstock has been called the "Whale's Back" for a hundred years. It passes down the Little Androscoggin, enters the town at the northwest corner passes through it, and keeping straight on southwardly passes through Poland, New Gloucester and Gray, at the latter point forming a series of reticulated Kame-plains. In its passage through Paris, it does not have that regularity of form that it does farther toward the north, being frequently broken and divergent from a right line, yet sufficiently well defined for the practiced eye to trace it.

The only ponds, are Moose Pond near North Paris, and Hall's near the southeast part of the town. The former is the larger, and besides receiving a supply from the watersheds formed by the hills in the vicinity, it has an inlet which rises in the Spruce Hills on the east line of the town, and which before reaching the pond, unites with one from Sumner and another from Woodstock. The watershed formed by No. 4 Hill, Singepole and the hill north of it, supplies Hall's Pond, and its surplus waters flow southerly into Oxford. Near North Paris, is a chalybeate spring having a strong sulphurous taste and smell, and whose waters are quite popular with some for their supposed medicinal qualities.

The Geology and Mineralogy of Paris are much the same as those of the entire region of northern Maine west of Penobscot river. The rocks are the primary or azoic series above which the other series are wanting till we arrive at the tertiary clay, diluvium and alluvium. Some coarse limestone may be found upon the hillsides alternating in strata with gneiss. Granite is abundant both as a bed rock and in the form of boulders; some of it is suitable for rifting and cutting for building purposes, but the great proportion of it is not. Dr. Jackson thus describes the geology of Streaked mountain: "It is composed of a coarse variety of granite which has burst through the surrounding gneiss that recline upon its sides, and form a large proportion of its mass. The granite appears in huge veins which run east-north-east and west-south-west. The gneiss alternates with granular limestone suitable for agricultural purposes. The granite veins are rich in large and beautiful crystals of beryl, black tourmaline and large plates of mica; common garnets also abound, and quartz crystals line cavities in the rock. It will be observed by the geologist who may visit this mountain, that the strata of gneiss have evidently been forced up by a sudden and violent eruption of the granite; for not only are the strata turned up and contorted, but fragments of gneiss have been torn off by the intruding rock, and are seen imbedded in its mass. The strata also recline upon the granite through which passes the anticlinal axis of the strata." He thus speaks of the mountain itself: "Streaked mountain is an important landmark for the country around, owing to its commanding situation. From its summit a most interesting panoramic view may be seen of the towns, lakes and mountains around, and it has justly become a place of resort on account of its picturesque scenery." He found the height of the mountain to be 925 feet above Paris Hill and 1756 above highwater at Portland. This gives Paris Hill a height of 831 feet above the sea level. He found the bearings of several points from the top of Streaked mountain to be as follows: Pleasant Mountain in Denmark, north peak south 65 degrees west; southern peak, south 60 degrees west and the central peak, south 64 degrees west. Kearsarge Mountain in New Hampshire, south 82 degrees west; Paris church, north 68 degrees west; center of Norway village, south 77 degrees west; Hebron Peak, south 30 degrees east; Singepole Hill, south 54 degrees west; Norway pond was found to be two degrees and fifteen minutes below the horizontal line from the mountain. Bog iron ore exists in town: Dr. Jackson speaks of finding it on the estate of Dea. Porter near Greenwood, but not in sufficient abundance to supply a furnace. There is a tradition that bog iron ore taken from Ripley's hill, was taken to Boston on horseback, there smelted and a set of harrow teeth made from the proceeds, but this needs authentication. The rare and valuable group of minerals found at Mount Mica by Elijah L. Hamlin, have a reputation among mineralogists

the world over. Dr. Jackson speaks of them as "plates of crystal mica from six to ten inches square, beryl of various shades of green, limpid and smoky quartz, black, green, blue and red tourmaline, rose quartz, feldspar, garnets, &c." Dr. Jackson was able to obtain a set of these minerals for the State cabinet. Speaking of these rare tourmalines in a later report, Dr. Jackson said: "They are green tourmaline, of a rich pistachio, olive and emerald green color, frequently transparent, and equalling the emerald in beauty." Since that time, many of these stones have been cut and are used for ornamental purposes. The Mount Mica tourmalines are in many respects unique, as admitted by all good judges. Besides these remarkable stones, the deposit has yielded many other minerals, some of which are interesting and rare. Among them may be mentioned Cassiterite, Amblygonite, Lepidolite, Clevelandite, Spodumene, Zircon, Brookite, Cooksite, Beryl, Leucopysite, Garnet, Apatite, Smoky and Rose quartz, and other minerals of lesser note. Dr. Jackson also described a considerable deposit of the black oxide of manganese which he found near Abiathar Tnell's place. One more extract from this same report is of interest: "As we descend from Paris Hill, we come to a small stream on which there is a saw mill. At the level with its waters, the barometer stood (Sept. 20), 29.87; temperature 65. Ascending from this point to the summit of a hill over which the road crosses, barometer stood at 29.351, temperature 69: this indicated the rise of the hill above the stream to be 560 feet. Paris Hill is seen to the southeast nearly on a level with this place. Above it to the eastward is Streaked mountain, and further to the left, the mountains of Hebron. Speckled mountain in Peru, presents its lofty and abrupt escarpment to the north, northeast. Indeed, the whole landscape to the eastward is truly magnificent, composed of heaving masses of lofty mountains of granite, with richly wooded valleys, and here and there scattering houses relieve the wildness of the scene."

The Flora of Paris presents no points of special interest. The original growth was composed largely of hard wood of the various kinds usually found in this latitude. The beech, yellow birch and the sugar maple, were always conspicuous among forest trees, the white ash upon the hills and the yellow and brown ash and the elm in the lowlands. Along the Androscoggin, the white pine grew luxuriantly and also the white maple and fir, while in some localities upon the high hills, the spruce and hemlock predominated. Among the smaller growths, were found the alder, the wild pear and cherry, the white birch, poplar, moosewood, dogwood, and upon the sunny slopes, the sumach. The American linden or basswood was a valuable forest tree, and in the swamps was found the fragrant white cedar. The long list of noxious weeds so damaging to the farmer, was unknown to the early settlers, except so far as they had obtained knowledge of them before coming here. Many of them have found their way across the sea, from the old country, since Paris was settled. Here in the spring time, blossomed the Benjamin, both the white and scarlet varieties, the Solomon's seal, the Sanguinaria, and scores of other indigenous plants which for ages, had "wasted their sweetness on the desert air;" around the ponds and along the bottom lands of the river, blossomed in beauty, the rhodora, the hardhack and the laurel. The flowering shrubs were the wild pear, wild cherry, the dogwood, the wickopy, the mountain ash and the elder. All along the Androscoggin, in early spring, the scarlet blossoms of the white maple were conspicuous, while the curious fronds of the many varieties of fern then as now, found their way out of the cold, damp earth, in a most mysterious manner. Brambles then grew in open glades, and in their season blossomed and bore delicious raspberries and blackberries which bird and beast appropriated; the mild eyed violet looked up from its lowly bed by the stream, and even the wild strawberry was growing, blossoming and bearing its fruit here, with all the others, long before the advent of man. The fireweed too, must have been indigenous here, for it readily sprang up on the margin of every burnt piece, and the growing crop was, ere long enclosed in a border of pinky bloom. Such was the flora of Paris when a committee of the grantees first came to this region in 1771 for the purpose of locating a township for settlement. It is doubtful however, if their attention was as much directed to these forms of beauty, as to the strength and richness of the soil as indicated by the luxuriant growth of the trees, the size of the streams and their capacity for propelling machinery, and the outlook generally for a good agricultural town. And a noble primeval forest growth doubtless covered the entire township at the time. All the evidence which has come down to us, goes to show that the view of this region from the top of Streaked mountain, as Josiah Bisco and his party saw it in 1772, was grand and beautiful. The density of the forest hid the inequalities of the land, and on that leafy June day, the explorers might well think themselves looking down upon an emerald sea.

All accounts agree that wild animals were very plenty here before the settlers came to disturb them ; this was a favorite hunting ground for the Indians, and later for the settlers in the border towns. Here Snow had a camp and hunted with his companion, Stinchfield, and it was near Snow's Falls that he met his tragic death at the hands of the enraged Indians whose chief he had slain. Moose and deer were plenty and also bears and wolves. Of fur-bearing animals, foxes and sable were found in the woods, and mink, otter and beaver around the ponds and on the river and larger brooks. The most formidable wild animal was the American panther, but fortunately they were only occasionally met with. After the settlers came, one of these animals chased a man named Macomber from the north part of Woodstock to Paris, and was seen prowling around the house where his intended victim had taken refuge. Then there were wild cats, loupcevriers, raccoons, and several varieties of the squirrel, including the black, gray, red and striped, or chipmunk. Partridges were in plenty and easily secured, as they were but little acquainted with man and his wicked ways. Ducks were also abundant in the ponds, and pigeons in their season. Trout could be taken from the brooks at any time with the proper appliances. The memory of the writer goes back to the time, fifty years ago, when speckled beauties weighing from one to two pounds, were quite abundant at the "rips" and in the "deep holes" of the Little Androscoggin at West Paris, and the patient angler with baited hook, rarely went home disappointed. Fly-fishing was then unknown in that region. The Hammonds had hunted here before they came to settle, and probably others whose names in this connection, have not come down to us. Many of the early settlers were experienced and expert woodsmen, and as the settlement grew and the surrounding towns became dotted with clearings, as their foes increased, the larger game retired before the advancing civilization to the northern wilderness in the lake region, and hunting as a business in the settled towns became profitless and was abandoned except by the thriftless.

From what has been said of the character of the rocks, it will be readily understood that Paris has a granitic soil. In other words, that the basis of the soil was formed by the disintegration of granite and that the constituents of the granite which are quartz, feldspar and mica, form the bulk of the soil. Lime has been spoken of as existing in connection with gneiss, and small quantities of lime will be found mixed with the other constituents. This soil had been “gathering fertility from the repose of ages,” and every year’s crop of forest leaves which had drawn nutrition largely from the atmosphere, added fresh fertility to the land. Vegetable mould was therefore, mixed with the granite constituents, forming a strong and fertile soil, all ready as soon as the trees were cut and removed and the land subdued, to produce heavy crops of corn, potatoes, the cereal grains and the best grasses. Such a soil when boulders and cobbles abound, is hard to subdue and bring into cultivation, and hard to cultivate, but when once subdued and when well treated, it will always respond in bountiful harvests. Paris is a good town for stock husbandry, and this industry should be made more of a specialty. The hills afford the best of grazing, and a large proportion of the arable lands of the town is excellent for grass. The town is well watered: some localities are springy, and such places would be greatly improved by drainage. On the river are belts of bottom land composed of alluvium, narrow generally but occasionally widening into broad and fertile fields. Above Snow’s Falls is quite a large area of low ground, known years ago as the “Bemis Meadow:” this has been found very profitable to the owners, yielding large crops of grass year after year without expense in dressing or tillage. The southwest part of the town is more level, it being the beginning of that broad plain which takes in the south part of Norway, and extends far into Oxford. The soil here is a sandy loam, easily cultivated and excellent for corn-culture and truck-farming.

As a whole, Paris is above the average of Oxford county towns for purposes of agriculture, and cultivated to its full capacity, it would support a much larger population than it ever has. The time will doubtless come when the tide of emigration toward the cities and toward the far west will be staid. Let us hope that the day is not far distant when the hill-side farms of Paris will be reoccupied, the worn out lands be recuperated, the now waste places be made productive, and the young men and women of the town seeking and finding useful and remunerative employment at home, instead of going to the west, to the land of inundations, blizzards and cyclones, or rushing off to the cities where the whirlpools of dissipation and crime are even more dangerous and destructive. The committee of the grantees who selected and mapped out this township, were men of judgment and foresight. They intended it as a farming town, to be occupied by a people who would engage in agricultural and pastoral pursuits. The first settlers, generally men of intelligence and of the strictest integrity, came here to subdue and cultivate the soil, and we have no evidence that any one of them put his hand to the plow and longingly looked back to the exhausted farm and overpopulated town he had left in the old Bay State. They desired to make homes for themselves and their posterity, but how many of the names of the early settlers have become extinct in Paris! And how many of those found here, have tired of the farm, and are trying to get a living in some easier way!

CHAPTER XVI.

ANNALS OF PARIS.

Town Officers to 1800.—Town Proceedings.—Accidents and Incidents.—Direct Tax of 1798. Showing Persons and Property Taxed, and amount of Tax assessed.

1794.

The meeting this year occurred on the last day of March at the house of Lemuel Jackson. Jonathan Hall presided and Daniel Stowell was chosen clerk. The following town officers were elected:

For Selectmen, Isaac Bolster, Daniel Staples and Jonathan Hall.

For Treasurer, William Stowell.

For Assessors, David Andrews, Abijah Hall, and Thomas Stevens.

Abijah Hall was chosen Collector and Constable, agreeing to collect for sixpence the pound.

For Tythingmen, Isaac Bolster, Daniel Staples, Abner Shaw, Lemuel Jackson, Nathan Pierce and Merodach Smith.

Highway Surveyors, Isaac Bolster, Joseph Swift, Seth Morse, Thomas Stevens, Nathan Pierce, Lemuel Perham, Joshua Besse, Jr., Caleb Cushman and John Gray.

For Fence Viewers, Thomas Stevens and William Stowell.

For Deer Reeves, Benjamin Hammond, Abner Rawson.

For Hog Reeves, James Morse, John Daniels, Levi Jackson and Eleazer Cole.

Solomon Bryant was chosen surveyor of lumber, Merodach B. Smith, surveyor of short lumber, and Isaac Jackson poundkeeper.

Twelve roads laid out by the selectmen were accepted at this meeting.

At a meeting the 7th of April, it was voted to accept the cross roads as agreed upon by the proprietors of the town, and then the vote was reconsidered and the subject referred to the selectmen.

Fifty pounds were raised for the repair of roads, fifty pounds for the support of schools in addition to that raised the year previous, and the several districts were allowed to have the unexpended balances of last year. It was voted to raise no money for preaching.

A large number of bills for services in various directions were allowed, largely for laying out roads. Jacob Twitchell was allowed nine shillings for keeping Mehitable Honeyfoot, Dr. Cyprian Stearns the same sum for doctoring her and Nathan Nelson two pounds and seventeen shillings for caring for her and running her out of town.

The next meeting occurred on the seventh day of April for the purpose of voting for State and county officers. The qualifications for voting as expressed in the call, were that they must be male inhabitants, twenty-one years of age and upward, having a freehold estate within the Commonwealth, of the annual income of three pounds, or any estate to the value of sixty pounds. The voting showed the following results :

For Governor,	Samuel Adams.	32.
For Lt. Governor,	Moses Gill.	37.
For Senators.	William Widgery.	42.
	Joseph Noyes.	28.
	Josiah Thatcher.	8.

Another meeting was held June 16th, when several roads were accepted and the selectmen were instructed to make alterations in school district limits when requested by the inhabitants. This meeting was adjourned to September 1st, when Jonathan Hall was chosen agent of the town to attend the General Court on account of taxes. A committee of five was chosen to survey and measure the town and make a plan of it, the same to be returned to the secretary's office in Boston, on or before the first day of June following. Isaac Bolster, Nathan Pierce, Daniel Stowell, Josiah Bisco and Joshua Besse, Jr., were chosen as the committee. The committee was allowed each four shillings a day for services, except Daniel Stowell, surveyor, who was allowed five shillings. A proposition to send a delegate to Portland convention, was again negatived.

The first Monday in November, a meeting was held to vote for a member of Congress: William Widgery had 14 votes and Peleg Wadsworth 8.

At a meeting on the 17th of the same month, it was voted that each school district should be entitled to receive the money for school purposes which such district should pay into the treasury. Thirty pounds were raised for defraying the expenses of the town. Another effort was made to choose a member of Congress, at a meeting at the house of Levi Jackson, January 12, 1795. The vote stood, William Widgery 34, Peleg Wadsworth 20. It was voted to have Mr. James Hooper preach upon probation until the next March meeting, and a committee consisting of Thomas Stevens, David Andrews, Levi Hubbard, Josiah Bisco and John Willis, was chosen to see how Mr. Hooper would settle as a minister in the town.

It was voted to have five burying places in the town and Abijah Hall, Levi Hubbard, Josiah Bisco, David Andrews and Nathan Pierce were made a committee to lay them out.

The annual meeting was held on the sixth day of April. David Andrews was made moderator and Josiah Bisco clerk.

Town Officers :

Selectmen, Lemuel Jackson,
Levi Hubbard,
Nicholas Chesley.

The selectmen were also chosen assessors of taxes.

Tythingmen, Daniel Whitney, Nathan Nelson, Japheth Washburn, Lemuel Jackson, Jr., John Besse and Joseph Swift.

Surveyors of highways, Isaac Bolster, Luther Pratt, Jonathan Hall, Peter Durell, James Bowker, John Willis, Benjamin Hammond, Daniel Staples and Edward Andrews.

Fence viewers, Asa Barrows, Isaac Bolster.

Deer reeves, Winslow Rickard, Caleb Cushman.

Hog reeves, Wm. Stowell, Joseph Hammond, Lemuel Perlham and Timothy Smith.

Surveyors of lumber, Solomon Bryant and Merodach Smith.

Constable and collector, Abiezar Andrews.

Poundkeeper, Isaac Jackson.

School committee, Daniel Stowell, Thomas Stevens, Nathan Pierce, Caleb Cushman, Lemuel Jackson, Josiah Bisco, Abner Rawson and David Andrews.

It was voted that all roads laid out by the town up to this date, might remain unfenced, provided the owners of the land should place no obstruction across them except good gates or bars.

The report of the committee to confer with Mr. James Hooper was accepted, and the town made choice of Mr. Hooper as its minister. A hundred pounds were raised for the repair of ways, fifty pounds for schools and sixty to defray town charges.

On the question of separating Maine from Massachusetts, the votes stood 19 in favor, and 20 opposed.

On the same day votes were thrown for Governor and Senators as follows :

For Governor,	Samuel Adams.	56.
For Lt. Governor,	Moses Gill,	33.
For Senators,	Wm. Widgery,	20.
	Joseph Noyes.	24.
	Stephen Longfellow,	16.
	William Martin.	11.

On the 6th day of May, a meeting was held when a unanimous vote was passed in favor of a revision of the constitution of the commonwealth.

On the 30th of November, at a meeting called for that purpose, Lemuel Jackson was chosen delegate to a convention in Waterford, called to consider the question of erecting a new county from the northerly portions of York and Cumberland. The meeting was adjourned to Dec. 7, when Mr. Jackson made a report. A committee was chosen to confer with the towns in the northern part of Cumberland and York, with reference to the formation of a new county, and Josiah Bisco, Daniel Stowell and Jonathan Hall were selected as the committee. Josiah Bisco was chosen a delegate to the second Waterford meeting, which was to assemble at the house of Nathaniel Chamberlain.

The annual meeting took place March 31. David Andrews was chosen Moderator and Josiah Bisco Clerk.

Selectmen, Isaac Bolster, Levi Hubbard and Nathan Nelson.

Assessors, Daniel Stowell, Abijah Hall and Jairus Shaw.

Treasurer, John Willis.

Collector and constable, Lemuel Jackson, Jr.

Tythingmen, Seth Morse, Timothy Smith, Edward Andrews, James Bowker, Samuel Durell and Levi Jackson.

Surveyors of roads, Jonathan Hall, Isaac Bolster, Lemuel Holmes, Abijah Warren, Nathan Pierce, Samuel Durell, Daniel Staples, Asa Perry, Jacob Twitchell, Abner Rawson, Jairus Shaw and Asa Barrows.

Fence viewers, William Stowell and Seth Carpenter.

Hog reeves, Allen Dwelley, Isaac Bolster, Jr., Solomon Bryant, Jr., John Nason, Benj. Hammond, and James Lebroke.

Field drivers, John Daniels, Jr., Allen Dwelley and Sylvanus Robbins.

Surveyors of lumber, Solomon Bryant and Merodach B. Smith.

Poundkeeper, Lemuel Perham.

School committee, Abijah Hall, Joel Robinson, Joshua Besse, Jr., Nathan Pierce, John Willis, Joseph Swift, Ebenezer Rawson, David Andrews and Abner Rawson.

A committee on accounts was chosen, which was also directed to hear complaints concerning over-taxation. Joel Robinson, Jonathan Hall and Seth Carpenter were chosen.

It was voted to raise fifty pounds for the support of schools, and twenty pounds to purchase a stock of ammunition for the town. One hundred pounds were raised for the repair of ways, and thirty pounds to be laid out in clearing out the new county road through the town. This road was laid out from the southeast corner of the town of Paris, diagonally through the town, through No. 3 (Woodstock) and a part of Bethel, to Rumford. It was "voted to choose a suitable person for a magistrate," and the choice fell upon Josiah Bisco. The committee on accounts, reported that John Caldwell was overtaxed for the year 1794, and recommended a reduction. At an adjourned meeting, an abatement was made to Seth Morse and Peter Durell. The votes this year stood :

Governor,	Samuel Adams,	54.
Lt. Governor,	Moses Gill,	27.
	Increase Sumner,	13.
Senators,	John K. Smith,	31.
	Daniel Hsley,	20.
	Daniel Davis,	5.
	Stephen Longfellow,	4.
	Jonathan Hall,	1.

It was voted to choose a committee to join any towns in any proper measure respecting the proposed new county, and Isaac Bolster, Josiah Bisco and Daniel Stowell were chosen.

It was voted to allow the accounts of the several persons, who worked on the county road, amounting in the whole to thirty-one pounds, one shilling and sixpence. Among those who worked are the following whose names had not before appeared in the records: John Tuell, Stephen Warren, David Dudley, James Brooks and Jacob Gurney.

John Greenwood was allowed $4.27 as the part of Paris, for his services in attending the General Court relating to the proposed new county. This is the first time in the records that dollars and cents are used to express the currency.

Rev. Paul Coffin visited the town June 25th, and in his Journal, says: "T'is a good place: the clover and herdsgrass were headed in the road." He adds: "26th. Sabbath. Preached all day from John 15:14, to about three hundred hearers, very attentive, decently dressed and well behaved; making the largest and most hopeful assembly to which I have as yet spoken. We met in a barn of Capt. Bolster's. He is sociable and hospitable."

1797.

The annual meeting was at Lemuel Jackson's, March 30th. David Andrews was made moderator and Abijah Hall, clerk. The following were chosen:

For Selectmen, Lemuel Jackson, Isaac Bolster and Levi Hubbard.

For assessors, John Willis, Daniel Stowell and Jairus Shaw.

For treasurer, John Willis.

For collector and constable, Lemuel Jackson, Jr.

For Tythingmen, Isaac Bolster, Jr., Sylvanus Robbins.

For Highway surveyors, Jonathan Hall, Isaac Bolster, David Dudley, Abiezar Andrews, James Bowker, Jonathan Shurtliff, Abner Rawson, Asa Perry, Jacob Twitchell, William Stearns, Josiah Biseo, Thomas Stevens and Solomon Shaw.

For Fence viewers, Daniel Staples and Daniel Whitney.

For Hoggreeves, Nathaniel Pratt, Eleazer Cole, Daniel Whitney, John Billings, John Daniels and Edward Andrews.

For Field drivers, Daniel Whitney, Samuel Hammond and Lemuel Perham.

For Surveyors of lumber, Solomon Bryant and Merodach Smith.

For School Committee, Jonathan Hall, Caleb Prentiss, Nathan Pierce, Joshua Besse, Jr., Lemuel Jackson, Lemuel Holmes, Abner Rawson, David Andrews and Simeon Pond. Sixty-five pounds were raised for schools, and it was voted to "annex the inhabitants on the county road in the Perry district, to the Solomon Shaw district." It was voted to abate Samuel Bennet's taxes, and the poll tax of Merodach B. Smith, Joshua Besse and Abiezar Andrews. A committee was chosen to regulate the road and school districts. Voted to build a bridge across the river at Bisco's Falls. A road was accepted from between the house and barn of John Rickard upon lot No. 1 in the 9th range, and ending at a point described between Paris and Hebron. Two hundred pounds were raised for repair of roads and one hundred dollars to defray town charges. The town was gradually adopting the decimal currency system, though seemingly attached to the old method of pounds, shillings and pence. The bridge to be built at Bisco's Falls, was put up at auction, and bid off by Josiah Bisco at sixty-seven dollars.

Politics does not seem to have run very high in Paris in those early years of the town, for though there were more than a hundred voters in town at this time, less than half that number voted for Governor, at a meeting on the 3d day of April. Moses Gill had 35. Increase Sumner 7 and Elbridge Gerry 3. At a meeting on the 10th of May, the town voted on the question of separation from Massachusetts, 27 in favor and 17 opposed. A committee was chosen consisting of Abner Shaw, William Stowell and Jonathan Bemis to settle a contested road case, between David Andrews and Abijah Warren. Rev. Paul Coffin came again and preached here Sept. 3d. He says: "The Baptists heard Mr. Hooper and the Methodists heard a Stoneman so that I had only about one hundred hearers, very attentive and respectful. Paris would make a fine Parish, if united."

Isaac Bolster, Levi Hubbard and Jonathan Bemis were made selectmen, and Daniel Stowell, Jairus Shaw and Abijah Hall, assessors. Lemuel Jackson, Jr., again bid off the taxes and was chosen collector and constable. For surveyors, Jonathan Hall, Isaac Bolster, Timothy Smith, Edward Andrews, James Bowker, Elias Partridge, Asa Perry, Lemuel Jackson, Jr., Jonathan Bemis, Asa Barrows and Samuel King. For Fence viewers, Nathan Pierce, Isaac Bolster and Ebenezer Rawson. For Hogsreeves, Caleb Prentiss, Abraham Bolster, David Ring, Jacob Gurney, Joseph Hammond, Wm. Faunce and Job Lurvey. For Field drivers, Robert Wightman, Daniel Whitney and Lemuel Perham. Simeon Pond, Samuel King, Thomas Stevens and Jairus Shaw, were chosen surveyors of lumber. For School committee, Lemuel Jackson, Jonathan Hall, Caleb Prentiss, John Besse, Lemuel Holmes, Caleb Cushman, David Andrews and Simeon Pond. Surveyors of brick moulds, Thomas Stevens and Job French.

Simeon Pond, Wm. Stearns, Jonathan Bemis, Job French, Aaron and Caleb Fuller were declared organized into a school district. "Voted that the inhabitants to the north and northeast corner of the town from Mr. Gurney's, be a separate school district." At an adjourned meeting at the house of Lemuel Jackson, April 2d, a move to adjourn to Mr. Jackson's barn was voted upon and carried. The report of the committee to regulate the road and school districts was not accepted. Only twenty-eight votes were thrown for Governor this year, twenty-seven being for Increase Sumner. For Senators Stephen Longfellow had twenty-five votes and Daniel Davis twenty-five.

Mr. Coffin, the Missionary, preached here at the house of David Andrews. "With him, a good man, I had much religious discourse. Called at Seth Carpenter's and gave counsel to his wife and Taylor's sermons. Visited the wife of John Nason and gave her Hemmenway's sermons. Counsell'd the wife of Abraham Bolster and gave her Taylor's sermons."

A direct tax was assessed upon the real estate of the county this year, and as showing the land owners in Paris, and showing their financial standing at this time, it is here given in full. A large proportion of the inhabitants were not taxed for houses, indicating that the log cabin having but little money value, was still the abode of many.

"Valuation of Houses and Out-buildings in Paris, and house-lots not exceeding two acres, as a basis for the direct tax of 1798. Daniel Stowell was Assistant Assessor.

Forty persons in Paris at this time, occupied houses, and probably frame houses which, with their lots, were considered worth one hundred dollars each, and were therefore taxable. The two best houses in town were those of Seth Morse and Daniel Stowell, but these could hardly be regarded as extravagant, their value being put down at only five hundred and fifty dollars each. A large majority of the houses assessed, must have been of small dimensions and cheaply built.

Valuation of Lands, Lots and Buildings, the latter of less value than one hundred dollars, and not included in the preceding list.

The whole number of resident tax payers at this time, was one hundred and eighteen. Samuel Stephens who had purchased the center lot and was taxed for it, had not yet come. The number is considerably greater than of those who signed the petitions and remonstrances relating to the incorporation of the town six years before, showing that the gain in population had been as rapid as could reasonably have been expected. After the close of the Revolutionary war in 1783, a large number of patriot soldiers sought homes upon our eastern lands and of these the town of Paris had its full share: and they continued to come until after the close of the century. Probably at the time the above tax was assessed, there were more or less residents of Paris not owners of real estate and so not taxable.

The meeting was at Lemuel Jackson's, on the 4th of March. Seth Morse, Levi Hubbard and Ebenezer Rawson, were chosen selectmen, and Jairus Shaw, Daniel Stowell and Abijah Hall assessors. Abijah Warren bid off the taxes and was chosen collector and constable. The road surveyors this year, were James Morse, Isaac Bolster, Joseph Holmes, Jacob Gurney, Nathan Pierce, Daniel Staples, Benj. Hammond, Lemuel Jackson, Simeon Pond, John Robinson and Thomas Stevens. Tythingmen, John Willis and Job Lurvey. Fence viewers, Nicholas Chesley, Simeon Pond and Isaac Bolster. Hogsreeves, Samuel King, John Robinson, Caleb Swift, (Seth Benson,) Barzillai Dwelley, Henry Hill, Philip Caldwell and Samuel Bryant. For School committee, Lemuel Jackson, Seth Morse, Daniel Stowell, Solomon Jordan, Lemuel Holmes, Edmund Dean, David Andrews and William Stearns. For Field Drivers, Daniel Whitney, Edmund Dean, Caleb Swift and Aaron Fuller. For Surveyors of Lumber, Solomon Bryant, Samuel King, Jairus Shaw and Jacob Twitchell. Voted three hundred dollars for the support of Schools, and two hundred pounds for the repair of roads. The accounts against the town this year were rendered in dollars, dimes and cents. Forty dollars were raised for town charges. Forty-eight votes were thrown for Governor, forty-seven being for Gov. Sumner. Seventy votes were thrown for senators, Stephen Longfellow 30, Daniel Hsley 24, and Daniel Davis 16. The assessors were directed to go to each person's house in the discharge of their duty. The committee on the contested road before referred to, reported that in their judgment the inhabitants in the northeast part of the town would be better accommodated by the location that led by Caleb Fuller's house and to Bemis' Mills. The report was accepted.

Jonathan Bemis, moderator, and Abijah Hall, clerk. The old board of selectmen was reelected, and Jonathan Bemis was chosen assessor in place of Jairus Shaw. Road surveyors, James Morse, Isaac Bolster, David Dudley, Abiezar Andrews, Nathan Pierce, Daniel Staples, Benj. Hammond, John Willis, Jonathan Bemis, Luther Pratt and Solomon Shaw. For Tythingmen, Alfred Gates and Jeremiah Rolf. Fence viewers, Barnabee Faunce, Joseph Hammond and Ebenezer Rawson. Hogreeves, Alfred Gates, Samuel Smith, Asa Robinson, Joseph H. Hall, Ezra Brett, Job French and George Ryerson. School Committee, Lemuel Jackson, Solomon Shaw, Joel Robinson, John Besse, Jairus Shaw, Edmund Dean, Abijah Warren and Wm. Stearns. For treasurer, Wm. Stowell. Field drivers, Daniel Whitney, Asa Robinson, Abner Shaw and Caleb Fuller. Surveyors of Lumber, Job French, Thomas Stevens, Samuel King and Jairus Shaw. Viewers of brick moulds, Job French and Thomas Stevens. Voted to raise four hundred dollars for the support of schools and seven hundred dollars for the repair of roads. A report was made on five surveys for roads and accepted. The selectmen were instructed to petition the General Court for permission to sell the public lots in town. Abner Rawson bid off the taxes and was made collector and constable. At an adjourned meeting, April 2d, one hundred and fifty dollars were raised to defray town charges. A committee of three was chosen to treat with Elder Hooper, the minister of the town. Forty-six votes were polled for Governor this year, at the meeting in April. Those only were permitted to vote who had a freehold estate yielding three pounds income, or any estate valued at sixty pounds. At an adjourned meeting April 28, a committee was chosen to locate the bridge across the river, below Jackson's mill. The committee appointed to settle with Elder Hooper, reported :

“That in behalf of the town, your committee have received from Mr. James Hooper, a quitclaim deed of the lots of land number five in the seventh range, and one hundred acres of the north part of lot number eighteen in the ninth range, said lands belonging to the right of land granted to the first settled minister; also the said James Hooper agrees to relinquish all the right of improvement that he has in the right of land in Paris which was granted for the use of the ministry, and for the security of the said Mr. James Hooper his heirs and assigns, against the claims of any minister that may hereafter be settled: your (committee) are of the opinion that the town of Paris should pass a vote that they will never hereafter settle a minister in said town of any denomination whatever unless the minister or ministers which are settled, shall agree to and relinquish all the right or title that he or they might claim or challenge, in the right of land granted in said Paris for the first settled minister, and that this report with the doings of the town thereon, be recorded in the town records. The foregoing is humbly submitted by your committee."

Paris, April 28, 1800.

This report was accepted, and at an adjourned meeting it was voted to sell the land released by Mr. Hooper. A committee of eight was chosen to revise and recommend alterations in the school districts if any should be considered necessary. Forty-eight votes were thrown for member of Congress at the meeting Nov. 3d, of which Peleg Wadsworth had 34 and William Widgery 14.

This brings the abstracts of the town records down to and including the year 1800. Full lists of town officers have been given to show the introduction of new names, but hereafter this will be omitted. Full lists of the municipal officers from the first will appear in the appendix, and hereafter the abstracts of records will be confined to matters of general importance. It is to be regretted that reports of committees were not more generally spread upon the records. Reports of committees to divide the town into school districts with bounds and names of heads of families in each district, would be of special interest, as giving the names of all the families in town. But none of them were recorded and most probably none of them are in existence.

CHAPTER XVII.

EFFORTS TO DIVIDE THE TOWN.

Statistics of Paris.—Division Proposed.—Voted Down in Town-Meeting.—Petitions and Remonstrances.—The Project Fails.—Annals Continued.

The following Statistics of the improvements and resources of the town are from a return made this year to the Massachusetts Secretary of State :

Polls, 16 years of age and not over 21, 29.

Polls ratable, 21 years of age and upwards, 141.

Polls not ratable and not supported by the town, 8.

Polls not ratable and supported by the town, 2.

Dwelling houses, 61 ; barns, 78 ; Potash works, 1.

Grist mills, 2 ; saw mills, 2.

Tillage lands including orchards, 93 ; doomed for 100 acres more.

Wheat, 46 bushels ; rye, 64 ; oats, 25 ; corn, 985 ; peas and beans, 19.

Acres upland mowing, 456 ; doomed 500 acres more.

Tons hay (1 year's product), 458.

Acres pasturage, 416 ; doomed for 700 acres more.

Cows, 473 ; horses 3 years and upward, 107 ; oxen 4 years and upward, 188 ; steers and cows, 4 years and upward, 403 ; swine 6 months old and over, 243.

Acres unimproved lands, 11,752 ; acres unimprovable lands, 4857 ; acres used for roads, 373 ; acres covered with water, 880.

Six hundred dollars were raised for roads and four hundred for schools. Ebenezer Hutchinson and Jeremiah Rolf were made a separate highway and school district. Jonathan Shurtleff was allowed fifteen dollars for keeping his brother Thomas. This amount per year was allowed for several years. An adjourned meeting was held April 6th at the Center School District. All the previous meetings had been held at private houses. The north end of the school district where Thomas Stevens lived, was set off into a separate district. The question of a new county was again agitated, and Seth Carpenter and Ebenezer Rawson were chosen a committee to visit the towns in northern Cumberland and York, and arrange for a convention to meet at Paris, to consider the subject. The convention was appointed for the second Wednesday of October following, and Josiah Bisco was authorized to represent Paris in the same.

The meeting was called at the Center School House. Five hundred dollars for schools and one thousand for roads. Rev. James Hooper was voted the interest on seven hundred dollars due for ministerial land sold. At the April meeting, several new roads were accepted and others discontinued. A meeting was called at the South School house September 22, among other things, "to know the minds of the town, whether they will petition the General Court for a division of the town:" also "to see if the town will choose an agent to present such petition and to act thereon as they may think proper." At this meeting, the town voted not to be divided, the vote standing forty-one in favor of division, and fifty-one opposed. An adjourned meeting was called at the Center School house, Nov. 1, to vote for member of Congress: Gen. Peleg Wadsworth had twenty-two votes, all that were thrown. The committee appointed to sell the north side of lot 18 in the 9th range, reported that they had advertised and sold the same to Alexander Thayer of Buckfield, for $701. The next record is a warrant for a school meeting in the 9th school district, issued to Edward Andrews, "to see if the district will agree to build a school house."

The movement for a division of Paris made this year, was a very strong one, the petition bearing the names of some of the leading men in town, and it probably might have succeeded had there not been an equal array of strength against it. The real animus of the movement is not indicated by any of the papers employed in the case, and at this distant day it can only be a matter of conjecture. The petitions and remonstrances belong to the history of the town, and are given verbatim in full. The original orthography is also preserved.

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled.

We the Subscribers Inhabitants of the Town of Paris in the County of Cumberland and Commonwealth of Massachusetts humbly Sheweth: Whereas the Town of Paris aforesaid is Twice as long as it is wide, that is nine miles long and four and a half wide, your Petitioners pray your Honours to divide said Town and Incorporate —— half of said Town into a Town by the name of —— with the privileges of other Towns in the Commonwealth: divide the privileges of said Town: also the reasons of our prayers are, we wish to be preparing for publick buildings

STATEMENT OF MUNICIPAL OFFICERS.

A number of the inhabitants of the town of Paris having Petitioned the Honorable Gen. Court for a Division of sd. Town, and the Honorable Court having directed the Town to be notified to shew cause if any they have why the prayer of sd. petition should not be granted. The Greatest part of the Inhabitants of the town having expressed their minds upon the subject by signing a Remonstrance against dividing sd. town, it was thought to be most for the interest of the town that a Representative should be chosen to Represent the town in the Gen. Court, for that purpose the inhabitants were warned to meet on the ninth day of May inst., to choose a Representative. The town being convened some objections were made by those persons who were for dividing the town against the legality of the warning of sd. meeting and against sending a Representative because the cost would be burdensome to the town they further objected because that a list of voters was not posted up previous to the meeting. The Selectmen then informed the town that they had searched all the Laws in the possession of the Town Clerk and no law was in his possession was found which directed the assessors or selectmen to post a list of voters for Governors and Senators and Representatives. Then a motion was made to take the sense of the town by a vote whether they would proceed to the choice of a Representative and it passed in the affirmative by a great majority. After sd. vote a newspaper was produced, containing a Law directing a list of voters should be posted up by the Assessors &c previous to the meetings for Governor &c &c, but the town viewing their interest to be at stake could not conceive that they were deprived of a Constitutional Right merely for want of information contained in a Law they were not possessed of, nor had any knowledge of, and being sensible that the interest and Reputation of the Town would suffer if they were not Represented, they therefore proceeded and choose a person to Represent them, and we are confi-ident that no persons voted that were not qualified according to the Constitution to vote. The opposite party did not dispute any person when they presented their vote, and the choice was unanimous, not a Dissenting vote, and we presume to say that if a list of voters had been posted up the Result of the meeting would have been as it now is, as to the Choice, the foregoing is a true Representation of the proceedings of the town at their meeting for the choice of their Representative.

REMONSTRANCE.

To the Hon. Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court Assembled. Whereas a Number of the inhabitants of the Town of Paris have presented a Petition to the Hon. General Court praying for a Division of said Town, and said Petitioners having Delivered an Attested copy of their Petition with the Order of the Hon. Court thereon to the Town Clerk of Paris. The Subscribers Inhabitants of the said Town Most Respectfully Represent to your Honors, that a Considerable number of the inhabitants who Signed the Petition aforesaid were incautiously drawn in to set their names to it, by Persons who in Our Opinion are seeking their own Interest more than that of the Town, and we beg leave to State to your Honor that a Considerable number of the Signers of said Petition, Perceiving their Error were willing that an act of indescrction, should give place to sounder judgment, therefore they Gave their voices against a Division in a Public Town Meeting, Called to take the sense of the town upon the subject at which meeting out off upwards of ninety voters there were only forty-one in favor of a Division. Thus the promoters of the Petition with as full evidence as they could have, that a Considerable Number of the persons who had unwarily signed their Petition together with a very Considerable Majority of the Town were against a Division, have nevertheless presumed to present said Petition to the Hon. General Court; and their Petition, contains some Reasons as groundless as their conduct in some instances is exceptionable viz, their Representation that the Proprietors, always, Designed the Town, for two Towns, is without any Shadow of Proof, for no act of the Proprietors will Discover the least Design of any such intention, and we can upon good authority say that the only reason why the Town was laid in its present form was to avoid as much bad and include as much good land as possible, another Reason is that a large River runs through the Town, which is said to Discommode the laying of Roads, we here Observe to your Honors that the River runs length ways of the Town, and would be as great an obstruction to Roads if the Town was Divided as it now is; but the River being not more than four or five Rods wide is no great Obstruction, and we humbly conceive that if there were no River in the Town, and the land was of the same Quality that it now is the Roads would have been laid but little if any Different from what they now are, being laid out to accommodate the first Settlers and Generally lead to the Centre of the Town and now serve the greatest part of the Inhabitants better than if the Town was Divided; and with Regard to public Building a Division could make no material Difference there being already four School Houses already erected in Town, and as to houses for public worship the inhabitants having a variety of Opinions in Regard to Religious matters, none are likely to be Built except it be by Subscription, and as soon as the Town gave their voice against a Division, a number of the inhabitants entered into an agreement to build a Meeting House and have contracted with workmen to build said House which is to be set in the most central place to accommodate the inhabitants. As to the Companies of Militia, the Inhabitants being chiefly young and middle aged persons few are exempt from Military Duty which may account for their being two Companies which are not large; as for other Reasons not named, we can Conceive of none Except it be to advance the interest of a few individuals who if the Town is Divided will be near the Centre of each Town. Thus having Represented to your Honors a state of facts both with Regard to the Petitioners and the Town, We Humbly Offer our Reasons Against the Division of said Town: First because much the greatest part of the inhabitants are against it: Secondly because we think it would Depreciate both the Interest and character of the town and prevent its population as no person would incline to Settle in a Town whose Interest and character was Sinking. Thirdly because we should be Divested of some privileges we now have: in particular that of being Represented in the General Court, and also excluded from future privileges which we think are Sufficient Reasons for a humble Remonstrance against a Division of said Town. We therefore Humbly Submit the Consideration of the foregoing to your Honor and if Consistent with your Wisdom Still let us Remain undivided which as in Duty bound ever pray, your Petitioners

REMONSTRANCE NO. 2.

The Honorable General Court may hereby be informed that the Subscribers were signers to a Petition for a Division of the Town of Paris, which Petition was Presented to us before we had any previous knowledge of any Such design and being much Importuned and urged on by Suggestions, which now appear to us groundless and calculated to mislead those whom the promoters of sd. Petition could find unprepared either by a fore thought upon the Subject themselves and unassisted by the advice or opinion of others. In the foregoing Situation the Subscribers were inadvertently led into an Error of Signing, but after the promotion of Said Petition, were convinced that a decided majority of the Inhabitants in Public Town Meeting were against a Division, also knowing that a number of the Subscribers acted in Said meeting against sd. Division and others of us withheld our votes from being in favor of Said Division, we then flattered ourselves that our Names would not have been made use of by them to accomplish a purpose which they then knew that we were opposed to, but to our Surprise they have done it. Therefore having now no other way to withhold our consent to Said Petition, We Pray the Honorable General Court to Consider us not as Petitioners for, but against a division of sd. Town as we are in Duty bound.

It will be noticed that the petitions for a division of the town bear the names of 88 persons, while the remonstrance has 85. The town in the first instance therefore, was very evenly divided, but ‘remonstrance number two." bears the names of twenty-five of those who signed the petition for a division, and set forth that they did so under a misapprehension of the facts which had been misrepresented to them. If there had been any chance for a division before, this would naturally have put a stop to the proceedings, and doubtless the matter was disposed of in much the best way.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE EARLY SETTLERS.

*Their Habits and Customs.—Their Dwellings and Surroundings.—
Their Mode of Living.—Their Devotion to Things Sacred.—
Their Rude Farm Utensils.—Their Toils and Hardships.*

There are quite a number of people now living in this town whose memory goes back to the days of small things, so to speak, to the time when rigid economy must be practiced in all the affairs of the household, and when industry and frugality were among the first lessons impressed upon the minds of the young. But the generation now upon the stage of life knows little of these things, and it is for their benefit and for the information of those who will come after them, that this chapter is written.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot, and never brought to mind?

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot, and the days of auld lang syne?"

No; we should never forget our ancestors, the dangers to which they were exposed, their enforced economy, their privations and hardships endured, that they might leave comfortable homes to their posterity.

A saw and grist mill were built on Stony Brook in 1783, the year after the first settlers came. Previous to that, the settlers were obliged to go to New Gloucester to mill, pound their corn by hand, or grind it in a hand mill. Some did one way and some another. The hand mill used by the Willis family is still in existence. Very little flour was used by the first settlers. If a small quantity was obtained at any time, it was put away for "company." The first houses were built of logs and covered either with hemlock bark, peeled off in June, or with strips split from cedar or pine. The single room below was used for kitchen, dining room, sitting room and sleeping room. Over this was a room reached by a ladder where the children slept. The doors were made of planks hewed out with an axe, were hung on wooden hinges and fastened by a wooden latch. There were no glass windows, but light was admitted by means of oiled paper. Oftentimes families moved in before chimneys or even fireplaces were constructed, the fire being built upon the ground, and the smoke escaping through holes in the roof. Chimneys when built, were made of rough stones cemented by clay, and from the chamber through the roof, sticks of wood split out the right size, were laid up cob-house fashion, the interstices being filled with clay. The chinks between the logs in the walls of the house, were also filled up with clay or mud, which when it became hard, made everything snug and warm. There was no floor save the earth and this soon became hard and smooth under the constant tread of busy feet. The primitive crane was of wood hung horizontally over the fire from which were suspended "hooks and trammels" upon which the kettles were hung. After the saw mill was built, as timber was everywhere plenty, boards began to be used for covering houses and for laying floors, though it was eight years after the Jacksons came before the first frame house was built.

The first frame houses were small, of one story, and very low in the walls, generally not over seven feet between the upper and the lower floors. Afterwards additions were made, as the families became larger, or the means for doing so became available. Fireplaces were very large, taking in wood from four to six feet in length. In building a fire, the first thing in order was a backlog, a section cut from a large birch, beech or maple; upon this was placed a log a little smaller called the "back-stick;" in front and elevated above the hearth, at first upon stones selected with reference to shape and size, and later upon andirons, was placed the forestick, and upon this was piled the cleft wood sufficient for the purpose. It made a splendid fire, and in the cold winter evenings, its genial warmth and pleasant light reached the remotest corner of the room, and made everything cheerful. Wooden stools were used for seats, or chairs bottomed with strips pounded from the black ash. Against the wall were the shelves called "the dressers" upon which were placed the tin and wooden dishes, and perhaps a few pieces of crockery ware. Near by hung the knife basket. In this single room were also a cradle, a spinning wheel, a linen wheel, and at certain seasons of the year, a loom. These were the musical instruments with which our great-grandmothers amused themselves. This description is of the primitive house and its adornments. As additions were made to the house, or new and more commodious houses built, the household furniture was appropriately distributed to the various apartments.

The diet of our ancestors was by no means varied, nor composed of the choicest viands. Bean porridge was a staple article, because cheaply and easily made. Bread and milk and mush and milk or molasses, formed a standard diet for the young who were taught to believe that it was next to their natural pabulum. Stewed peas sometimes took the place of beans. Rye could be easily grown on new land, and rye bread, either unmixed or mixed with corn meal, was a very common article of food. Molasses was indulged in but sugar was rarely used. A single sugar loaf weighing five or six pounds, would last a family for a whole year, being brought out only when the minister or some other honored guest happened to come in. Ardent spirits were regarded as indispensable and were found in every house. Families who were able to indulge in it, bought brandy and West India rum, while those whose means were more limited, contented themselves with New England rum or potato whiskey which after a short time, they manufactured for their own use. Fat pork was the meat generally eaten, though in the early times, wild meat, fish and wild fowl, were by no means scarce in their season. They lived on coarse food, but good health and active employment gave them an appetite and relish for what they had.

Very little pride was shown by our ancestors in the matter of dress. The clothing of the first settlers was largely if not entirely of home manufacture, and made from wool and flax. Every farmer raised a field of flax, a very rare sight in these days; but to them it was indispensable. Cotton cloth and calico cost more than ten times as much as now, and were beyond the reach of the majority. After being pulled, the flax was spread out and exposed to sun and rain until the woody portion was well rotted, then it was broken, that is, the woody stalk was broken into fragments, after which they were whipped from the fiber by means of a wooden knife called a swingle. Lastly the swingled fibre was drawn through a hatchel formed by long iron teeth set in a board. The flax was then spun on a small tread-wheel, while the tow, or that portion separated from the flax by drawing it through the hatchel, was carded into rolls and spun on the large or spinning wheel. In making cloth, the linen thread was used for warp and the tow yarn for filling, and the woof or web was called "tow and linen cloth." This was used for everyday wear in summer by both sexes, for towels and also for bed-clothes. When used to make clothing, it was generally colored with the bark of certain trees or shrubs, or with coloring substances extracted by boiling, from certain plants. Wool was picked and oiled by hand, carded by hand and then spun the same as the tow. It was sometime after the settlement, before a carding mill was built in Paris, and machine rolls made. But they came in time, and also fulling mills in which homemade cloth was fulled and dressed, and were regarded as great improvements as indeed they were, over the old methods. The men wore cloth breeches, and yarn stockings which came to the knees and were confined to the breeches by iron or brass buckles, sometimes but rarely, of silver. Buckles were also worn on the shoes. Women wore long-waisted dresses, aprons, vandykes and coolers. Cloaks with hoods attached were common. Men wore wigs made of human or goat's hair, but later it became the fashion to wear the hair long, comb it back from the forehead and fasten it with a ribbon or string.

The method of going from place to place for quite a number of years after the town was settled was either on foot or on horseback. The husband in riding to church, sat in front, and his wife behind him on a pillion. Blocks were placed at the church and at the house, the top reached by steps, from which the ladies could mount the horses. The roads at best were rough, and often parties in going to church were obliged to travel quite a long distance through the woods, through paths marked by spotted trees. The first wagons were large and clumsy, the bodies resting directly upon the axles, and the seats upon the bodies, without springs or anything to relieve or mitigate the jolting over our rough roads; there was little if any pleasure in riding in them, but they were found highly useful upon the farm and for going to mill or to market. The first chaise created a sensation in town, almost equal to that made by the coming of the cars many years later. In winter, sleds were early used, and people often went to church or to visit their neighbors, upon a sled drawn by a pair of oxen. The story has come down to us of one man who, in times of scarcity of hay, would visit his friends quite often, and always with two pairs of oxen.

Attending church on the Sabbath, and observing the sacredness of that day, was the constant practice of our early settlers, and a duty, the importance of which they did their best to impress upon the minds of their children. They were the descendants of the Pilgrims and Puritans, and the faithful observance of the Sabbath was a highly prized legacy received from their ancestors. The masses went to meeting, none but the sick ever thinking of staying at home. Mothers took their babes in their arms, and the aged were also there, the two extremes meeting to honor the sacred day. No person staid away on account of poor clothes, for pride had not the power then that it has now. Six days they toiled with all their might, rising early and often prolonging their labor till late at night, but on the Sabbath they rested. In the early times, churches were never warmed, and even when the first church was built on Paris Hill, the means for warming were very inadequate. Fortunately, Elder Hooper's sermons were brief, rarely occupying more than half an hour, so that his hearers did not suffer as they did in many places, where the prosy discourse would occupy two hours in its delivery. Strict attention was always paid to the minister, and sleeping in church was a thing unknown. The utmost decorum was also observed in going to and from the church, and also at home, during the entire day. Children were not allowed to indulge in play of any kind, and every outburst of youthful feeling in this direction, was checked and forbidden. They may have carried their notions a little too far, but certainly not as far as modern practices are carried, in the opposite direction.

They were hospitable and neighborly. When a neighbor called, he was not permitted to leave until friendship had been pledged in something that was "warming and exhilarating." If one fell sick, all turned out and put in his crops, or harvested them, as the case might be, cut his fire-wood and looked after his comfort and that of his family, in various ways. Politeness was taught to children, obedience to parents, and respect to old age. Scholars on entering the school-room, always made their manners, and the same when the school was visited by the parents, by the minister or by the committee. These practices, trifling perhaps in themselves, tended to the decorum and general good appearance of the school, and also reacted upon the scholars themselves, making them more gentlemanly and lady-like in their deportment, in school and out, and doing them good in a variety of ways. Girls in the days of which we are speaking, helped their mothers and did not consider it a degradation to do housework of every kind. In cases of emergency too, they often worked in the field, in planting time, dropping corn and other seed, raking hay in its season, pulling flax, picking up potatoes, gathering fruit and husking corn. But carding, spinning, weaving, making clothes for the family, making butter and cheese, doing the housework and taking care of the large families that were fashionable in those days, kept the mother and her daughters pretty busy without out-door labor.

The loss of fire by the early settlers, was often attended with considerable inconvenience. In the winter season it was easily kept, because it was kept burning nearly all the time, and when not burning, it could be covered or "raked up," but in summer it would often go out. When this happened, various means were resorted to for restoring it. Sometimes powder would be flashed in the pan of the old flint-lock gun, sometimes flint, steel and decayed wood were resorted to, but oftener, some one would be sent to the nearest neighbor and bring the fire in a dish, or rolling a piece of old cotton cloth tightly and lighting one end, it would burn very slowly and could in this way be carried quite a long distance.

The farming utensils used by our ancestors were very rude when compared with those now in use. Plows were made of wood covered with strips of iron, and had straight handles. Of course good plowing was out of the question with such an implement. Hoes, shovels, and hay and manure forks, were made of iron, rudely constructed and very heavy and unwieldy. Scythe snaths were nearly straight, and the scythe bore little resemblance to the one now in use. They had no such implements as pulverizing harrow, horse hoe and rake, mowing machine, harvester, manure spreader, etc. No labor-saving machines at all had they, and the few simple tools they had were forged by the common blacksmith. Yet with all these disadvantages, they raised good crops and cultivated large areas, though of course, they labored much harder than farmers do in our day. Oxen were used to do the farm labor, and for many other purposes for which a horse is now employed. Hay and other crops for some years, were hauled to the barn on sleds.

The early settlers were not without their superstitions. They believed in the signs of the zodiac, and did not put in their seed, harvest their crops or kill their meat without consulting the "almanack," to see if the sign was right. Many of them believed in witchcraft, and the belief in ghosts and hobgoblins was almost universal. To see the new moon first over the left shoulder, portended bad luck, and Friday was an unlucky day, anyway. It was regarded as a misfortune to be born on that day and nobody ever thought of being married, starting on a journey or commencing any important work or business on Friday. Some people claimed to have the power or faculty of "charming" wounds or bruises, and thus easing pain. The sight of a comet foreboded war or some great national calamity, and an unusually bright northern aurora, or a meteoric shower portended the speedy coming of the "Judgment Day." Traces of these superstitions still exist in some families and localities, but as a general thing, they have disappeared. An old Almanac-maker ventured to say many years ago, that there was "neither sense nor reason in these things," and some people believed him, though others clung to their superstitions until the light of knowledge showed up their inconsistencies and fallacies.

CHAPTER XIX.

ANNALS CONTINUED.

Abstracts from the Town Records.—Stirring Resolutions with Regard to the Direct Tax.—A Cold Season.—Accidents and Incidents.

1803.

Five hundred dollars for schools and eight hundred for roads. "Voted to divide the school district where Nicholas Chesley lives, between Nos. 10 and 11." Josiah Bisco was chosen a committee to represent the town in the General Court.

There were three accidental deaths this year which cast a gloom over the entire settlement. March 20th a son of Caleb Cushman, aged 6 years, run under the axe of an older brother who was chopping wood, and his head was cleft in twain, killing him instantly. June 23, Oliver, son of Gen. Levi Hubbard was killed by a falling tree, and July 25th, John, son of Abijah Warren, met with his death from a limb falling upon him while he was felling trees.

The question of a division of the town which was agitated last year was passed over in silence so far as the records show, this year.

One thousand dollars for roads were raised, and five hundred for schools, and the usual vote was passed "to divide the school money by the estate in each district." The selectmen were directed to petition the General Court for permission to sell the school and ministerial lands in Paris. At a meeting to vote for representative, Levi Hubbard had 43 votes, and Josiah Bisco 10. It was voted that the interest money due the town be devoted to town purposes. It was voted to build two new bridges across the river this year, one at Bisco's Falls, and the other near the northwest corner of the town. Jacob Twitchell contracted to build the bridge at Bisco's Falls for ninety-nine dollars. Permission having been received to sell the public lots, a committee consisting of Ebenezer Rawson, Josiah Bisco and Levi Hubbard, was chosen to sell and convey the same. Nineteen electors of President were voted for this year, and fifty-four votes were thrown for them. Hon. James Sullivan headed the list. The opposition list was headed by Hons. David Cobb and Oliver Wendell at large, and eighteen votes were cast for this ticket. Seventy-two votes, in all, were polled, more than were thrown at any previous election. The meetings were first called at the "Meeting House," this year.

At this meeting, Dr. Samuel P. Croswell was elected clerk. He was a physician and trader. The usual amount was voted for town purposes; also one hundred and twenty dollars interest money. Six roads laid out by the selectmen were accepted. A petition was presented from the school districts on the westerly side of the river asking that the lines of the districts might be readjusted. The petition bears the following names which shows some of the persons then living in that part of the town: David Dudley, Caleb Swift, Joseph Churchill, James Lebaron, Lemuel Holmes, Morton Curtis, Samuel Briggs, Ephraim Rowe, Joseph Willis, Luther Pratt, Sylvanus Robbins, Nathaniel Pratt, Josiah Bisco, Josiah Bartlett, Jr., John Robinson, Jonas Bisco, James LeBroke, Timothy Smith, Eleazer Cole, Lemuel Perham, Joseph Holmes and Lazarus Hathaway. Levi Hubbard was elected representative. The committee appointed to dispose of the public lots reported the following:

"Lot 19-20 sold in three divisions, the first to Daniel Pond and David Bemis, for $603; the second and third to Jeremiah Rolf for $1122; number 2 in the 9th range to Stephen Blake for $330; number 8 in the 5th to James Daniels for $307. These were the ministry rights, and the amount received was $2362. The two lots in the school right were sold, the first, number 3 in the 8th, to Enoch Shaw for $700, and the second, number 3 in the 9th to Jacob Gurney for $768; total school fund, $1568." The selectmen were instructed to write to the town of Raynham, asking that town to take care of Job French. The town treasurer was instructed to procure a pall for the use of the town, and deposit the same with the town's minister. At a meeting in July, the support of Job French was set up at auction and bid off by James Hooper at ten shillings per week. The town voted for Register of Deeds for the new county of Oxford: Josiah Bisco had 8, Isaac Sturtevant, 28, Joseph Rust, 8, and Eleazer Hamlin 3. At a meeting the 18th of November, a committee was chosen to memorialize the General Court against making Fryeburg a half shire town. An agent was appointed to go to Taunton and Raynham to ascertain the legal residence of Job French.

Oxford county was established this year and Paris became the shire town. The first term of the court of Common Pleas was held on the second Tuesday of June. Samuel Frye of Fryeburg presided, with Samuel Parris of Hebron and Luther Cary of Turner as associates. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin was clerk.

Twelve hundred dollars for roads and five hundred for schools. It seems that Rev. James Hooper contemplated leaving town, for a committee was raised "to treat with Mr. James Hooper and see upon what terms he will tarry in town." The committee reported at the same meeting in substance as follows:

"Said Hooper saith if said town will give him the interest of the money for which the ministry land was sold, from the time of the sale of said land annually, so long as said Hooper shall supply the pulpit in this town, as minister of said town, it will give him full satisfaction."

ISAAC BOLSTER,	} Committee.
EBEN'R. RAWSON,
SAML. STEPHENS,
JOEL ROBINSON,

The report was accepted. It was voted to take off Joseph Cole and Peter Chase from their present school district and annex them to the Bemis district. Eleazer Hamlin received 50 votes for county Register to 21 for Joseph Rust. Three hundred dollars were raised for the support of poor and to defray town charges. This was the first pauper money raised as such. Jonathan Shurtleff's annual sum for keeping his brother Thomas was increased to forty dollars. An action was authorized against any town where Job French belonged, for his support. Levi Hubbard received 80 votes for county treasurer. Elias Stowell was elected representative, receiving 81 votes to 15 for Jonathan Bemis. It was voted to give a bounty of five cents per head for killing crows. The town clerk, Samuel P. Crosswell was absent from several meetings and Zachariah Soule acted as clerk pro tem, except the two last when Alanson Mellen acted as clerk. Several roads were accepted this year.

1807.

Alanson Mellen was elected clerk. Five hundred dollars exclusive of interest money, were raised for schools and twelve hundred for roads. A committee reported:

"Your committee have agreed with Cyrus Hamlin, Esq., to fence 21 rods on the west side of the Meeting House corner, for the sum of seventy-one cents per rod, and forever after to indemnify the town of Paris from any expense in fencing the same." The vote on the question of separation from Massachusetts stood 38 in favor, 43 opposed. Abraham Bolster was allowed sixty-seven cents for bringing up the town's weights and measures from Portland. Lemuel Jackson, Josiah Bisco and Ebenezer Rawson were made a committee "to wait on the location committee appointed by the Legislature to establish county buildings in this county."

The following new names appear in town: Hector Fuller, Geo. Edwards, James Noyes, Thos. Carver, Daniel Knight, Luther Dudley and Charles Reniff, all of whose taxes for 1806 were in part abated. Voted to choose an agent to defend the town against an action brought for the support of Job French while he was in Portland jail. An agent was also chosen to defend the town against suits commenced for not keeping the roads in repair: another agent to procure the town a stock of powder: he was instructed to purchase one hundred and fifty pounds of powder and fifty pounds of lead.

Fifteen hundred dollars were raised for roads and five hundred for schools. Bartholomew Cushman was permitted to draw his proportion of school money and pay it over to Buckfield. At the annual election James Sullivan for Governor had 114 votes and Christopher Gore 67. This was much the largest vote ever before polled, and was a very good showing considering that the property qualification was still in force. For Lt. Governor, Levi Lincoln had 111, David Cobb 59, Amasa Fobes 3 and "Little" Amasa Fobes 3. For Senators, Levi Hubbard and James Means had 101 each and Ammi R. Mitchell and Lothrop Lewis each 60. Levi Hubbard had 72 votes for county treasurer. Job French again appears, in the choice of an agent to defend the town against the suit of Mr. March brought for his support.

The following new names appear this year in the doings at the several meetings: Abner Blake, George Doughty, Daniel Haney, Thomas Crocker, Levi Crockett, Isaac Ham, John Packard, Asa Ricker and Patrick House. At the December meeting, voted to raise seven hundred dollars for the support of poor and other town expenses. The selectmen were instructed to assist Job French in obtaining some useful employment. Among the accounts allowed was one of seventy dollars to Jonathan Bemis for boarding Job French 35 weeks, and one of $34.50 to Josiah Bisco for expense in going to Portland to defend the town in the suit of Edmund March for the support of French. John True was set off from the Center school district and annexed to the first.

Among the new town officers this year, were John G. Crawford, Amariah Harris, Moses Hodgdon, Geo. Ryerson, Abraham Hutchinson, Benj. Cooper, Amos Amsbury, Ichabod Bryant, Nathaniel Howe, John Braily, Alvan Boyden and Noah Deane. Sixteen hundred dollars were raised for roads and five hundred for schools. Jonathan Shurtleff, for keeping his brother, was allowed sixty dollars. Caleb Benson was chosen collector and was excused. Nathaniel Howe's account of $24.00, as an attorney, was allowed. Voted that Elias Tubbs, Isaac Record, John Record, Benj. Churchill, Caleb Benson, Seth Gurney, Arodus Bryant, Ichabod Bryant, Winslow Record and James Dunham be made into a separate school district. Elias Stowell was unanimously elected representative. Sixty dollars were raised to bridge over the river at Bemis' Mills. Joshua Glover's tax was abated.

1810.

Gustavus Adolphus Goss was one of the selectmen and also treasurer. Other new names mentioned were Alfred Gates, Elias Partridge and Simeon Walton. The usual amount of money was raised. Another generation had come to the stage of action, for Ebenezer Hutchinson, Jr., Edward Deane, Jr., Asa Deane, Jr., and James Broke, Jr., were among the Hoggreeves; also Albion K. Parris. Daniel Fobes, Jr., was surveyor and John Record, Jr., was school committee. Henry Rust, Jr., received 120 votes for county treasurer. Rev. James Hooper was allowed the interest on the ministerial fund. At an adjourned meeting, Joseph Rust was chosen clerk pro tem. Jacob Twitchell was chosen sexton. Seven hundred dollars were raised for town charges. "Voted to choose a committee to advise with the selectmen respecting poor prisoners who hath been committed to jail in this town and hath taken the benefit of law and whose expenses hath become chargeable to the town." A committee to number the school districts, reported as follows:

Daniel Stowell's,	1	Samuel Hammond's,	8
Lemuel Holmes',	2	John Record's,	9
Jairus Shaw's,	3	Samuel King's,	10
John Robinson's,	4	Caleb Prentiss',	11
Jonathan Shurtleff's,	5	Benj. Cooper's,	12
Benj. Hammond's,	6	Geo. Ryerson's,	13
Job Lurvey's,	7	Simeon Walton's,	14

January 19, there was a violent northern gale, which unroofed several buildings and blew down Joseph Bessey's barn. Feb. 15, Lawyer Howe was attacked by Benaiah Dow and badly injured. (see account elsewhere.)

1811.

Among the new names in the list of town officers, are Stephen Blake, Jr., Micah Walker, Rufus Brett, Thomas Farrar, Isaac Cummings, Jr., Haven Hall, Isaiah Whittemore and Isaac Knight. Albion K. Parris was chosen agent for the town "to transact business under the direction of the selectmen." Voted to receive lots 2, 3, 4 and 5, in the first range in the town of Buckfield, into Paris. Voted to build a powder house, and the selectmen were made a committee for that purpose, the house to be built within one hundred rods of the meeting-house. Jairus Shaw was directed to look up the old plan of the town which showed the division into school districts. Jonathan Shurtleff was allowed seven shillings per week for the support of his brother. The town declined to abate the taxes of Dennis Haskell and Mamasseh Powers. Four hundred dollars, in addition to the regular appropriations, were raised to be expended on roads, under special agents. The overseers were directed to provide for the support of James Churchill.

The following statistics of the town, compiled from returns made to the General Court at Boston, this year, are of interest: Number of polls between 16 and 21 years, 48; ratable polls over 21, 196; number of polls not ratable and not supported by town, 8; number not ratable, supported by the town, 2; number of dwelling houses, 142; shops, 3; distill houses, 2; potash, 1; grist mills, 3; saw mills, 2; barns, 173; other buildings, 27; money on hand, $1,600; ounces plate, 75; acres tillage, 384; wheat crop, 1,384 bushels; corn crop, 137; peas and beans, 53; acres upland mowing, 984; tons of hay, 984; acres of pasturing, 1,160; unimproved lands, 18,373; acres used for roads, 640; covered with water, 530; horses, 174; oxen, 260; steers and cows, 633; swine, 393.

The new names among the town officers were, Caleb Besse, Reuben Favor, David Bolster, John Whitehead, Ebenezer Tuell, David Marshall, Jr., Benaiah Hanson and William Beals. The Rev. John Willis was chosen Pound keeper. Alanson Mellen was allowed $17.24 for recording births and deaths. Capt. Samuel Stephens, $4.50, for casting balls. Among the abated taxes were those of Darius Andrews, Daniel Brett, Oliver Colburn, Jeremiah Howe, Nathaniel Hutchinson, John Knight, Micah Thomas and Abner Foster. Among the accounts, Hannah Walton was allowed $16.82, for boarding and nursing Hannah Littlehale, and Dr. Benj. Chandler, $3.30, for medical treatment for same; also $4.50 to Abraham Walton for cash paid to Dr. Seth Chandler for treating same. This year the town chose Levi Hubbard and Elias Stowell, representatives. Benj. Chesley was allowed $6.25, for warning twenty-five town meetings from March 20, 1810 to May 4, 1812. The next item savors of the war: "Voted that the wages of the detached troops of this town be made equal to ten dollars per month per man, for the time they shall be in actual service, provided government does not make it equal to that." A committee to report resolves in favor of the General Government, consisting of Albion K. Parris, Josiah Bisco and Elias Stowell, submitted the following, which was accepted:

PREAMBLE.

"Whereas, our departed Washington, in his last address to his fellow citizens, declared: That the constancy of their support was the essential prop of his efforts and guarantee of his plans; that respect for the authority, compliance with the laws and acquiescence in the measures of Government are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty; that all obstructions to the executing of the laws, all combinations and associations under whatever plausible character with a design to direct, counteract or control the deliberations, and action of the constituted authorities, are of fatal consequences, serving to organize faction and to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of a party; that party spirit serves always to distrust the public councils, enfeeble the public administration, foment riot and insurrection, and open the door to foreign influence and corruption.

"It is therefore by the inhabitants of the town of Paris, in public town meeting assembled,

"Resolved, That being sensibly impressed with the importance of the advice of our political father, and considering the very important situation of our public concerns, that we are now in open hostilities with a powerful nation, and have already just cause for a similar declaration with another not less powerful, we view it as the duty of all the friends of our common country, by whatever party they may be classed, to support the Government under which we live, comply with its laws and acquiesce in its measures.

"Resolved, That common and continued mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of all wise people to discourage and restrain it, particularly at this crisis when the rage and violence of political dissension are kindling the animosity of one part of our citizens against another, and fomenting those collisions that subvert the order, destroy the peace and endanger the liberty of a Republican government.

“Resolved, That we highly estimate the immense value of our national union, considering it as the palladium of our political safety, and as it was the opinion of our Washington that against this union, the batteries of internal and external enemies would be most constantly and actively, though often secretly directed, so we with him consider it the duty of every man to watch for its preservation with jealous anxiety; to discountenance whatever may suggest even a suspicion, that it can in any event be abandoned, and to frown indignantly upon the first dawning of every attempt to sever or weaken that chain by which we are united.”

“And whereas, under the order of the commander-in-chief of this commonwealth of the 25th of April last, certain persons were detached from the companies of the militia in this town, and were ordered to hold themselves constantly in readiness to march at a moment’s warning, and whereas their compensation allowed by Government is inadequate, Therefore

Resolved, That the selectmen of the town of Paris be and they are hereby authorized and directed to draw on the treasurer of said town in favor of each person detached under and by virtue of the order aforesaid, to the amount of a sum which together with what each person so detached shall receive from Government, will be equal to ten dollars per month each of the persons aforesaid, so long as they shall be held in actual service in consequence of said detachment.”

The action of the town upon this report was as follows: “Voted that the foregoing preamble and resolves be signed by the moderator of said meeting and the town clerk, and forwarded to the editors of the Eastern Argus and Portland Gazette for publication.” The poll taxes of Dea. John Willis and of Jacob Twitchell and Jacob Twitchell, Jr., were abated. In April of this year, James Lebroke fell from a building and was killed. He was a native of Paris, France, and came to this country in the French fleet, after which he served three years in the Continental army. Dea. John Willis died in July of this year, aged 56. He was one of the very first settlers.

Benj. Chandler was chosen clerk, Thomas F. Chase, Collector, and among the other new officers were Daniel Cole, Moses Allen, Moses Marshall, Isaac Allen and James Putnam. The usual amount of money was voted. Seth Carpenter and Alfred Gates were two new selectmen. Two hundred and twenty-three votes were thrown for Governor. James Churchill was put up at auction, or rather his support, and was struck off to Stephen Robinson at $1.08 per week. Among the taxes abated were those of Jonathan Brown, Joel Fuller, Jeremiah Winslow, John Nason, Jr., Charles Hale, Joseph Wing, Jonathan Johnson and Adoniram Blake. A committee was chosen to petition the General Court to make valid the doings of the town. At a meeting January 1, 1814, it was "voted to instruct our representatives to use their influence in General Court to have this commonwealth assume its proportion of the direct tax and pay the same into the treasury of the United States agreeably to the provisions of the act laying said tax, and petition the Legislature for that purpose." This certainly shows commendable loyalty to the General Government, on the part of the voters of Paris.

Five hundred dollars was still the amount raised for educational purposes, and fifteen hundred for highways. It was voted to discontinue the road between Edward Andrews' and William Lethbridge's. Two hundred and sixty-six votes were thrown for Lt. Governor. Among the bills allowed was one to the town of Sidney for the support of Robert Wightman's family. The half-shire town question was again agitated, and a committee was chosen to remonstrate against it. Seventy-five dollars were raised for building a bridge across the river to Little's Grant, (Woodstock) by John Robinson's. A committee of three consisting of Joseph Rust, Benj. Chandler and Henry Prentiss was chosen to draft an address to the Legislature, and also to take into consideration the expediency of passing resolves on the political situation of the United States, the State of Massachusetts and the District of Maine.

The following draft of an address was presented and accepted :

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled in Boston, in January, 1815.

The inhabitants of Paris in the county of Oxford in legal town meeting assembled the twenty-first day of January, 1815, to take into consideration the very critical and alarming situation of our country and particularly the District of Maine, on account of the enemy being permitted to occupy a part of said District—deem it one of their inalienable privileges in common with the other citizens of this commonwealth, in an orderly and peaceable manner to assemble to consult upon the common good; give instructions to their representatives, and to request of the Legislative body, by way of address, petition or remonstrance, redress of the wrong done them and of the grievances they suffer.

We view with regret the opposition of the government of this State to the United States: believing it has a most pernicious effect and will, if persisted in, ultimately end in our total discomfiture and recolonization. We feel it a duty incumbent upon us to declare that we believe the General Government acted prudently and wisely in making war against the British Nation: that had they continued to attempt to treat with them till the present time, not only our commerce would have been captured and condemned, but that a larger number of our seamen would have been prisoners and deprived of employment.

We are sensible that it is the duty of every citizen of the union, to submit to privations which result from a state of war, and cheerfully contribute towards its support, but on reflecting on the suffering, and difficulties with which the necessities and comforts of life are obtained, we view with astonishment the conduct of the Executive and Legislature of this State, in the waste of public money at this time of calamity and general distress.

We humbly beg leave to ask, why has this State not assumed the direct tax? Why the expense of the Hartford convention? Are we not fully represented in the Legislature? Have not the northern states a full and respectable number of representatives in the Congress of the United States? Is this a proper time to alter the constitution or even intimate a dissolution of the union? Or have we been deceived and elected men unable to legislate and do honor to themselves and country, and justice to their constituents? We are of opinion that the enemy could not have obtained and kept quiet and peaceable possession of a portion of the District of Maine, had it not been for the opposition of the government of this State to the government of the United States—and that a speedy termination ought to be put to the frequent correspondence, trade and commerce now carried on between our internal and external enemies, and that if a force of militia which is in the power of this State to call into operation were embodied and stationed near the posts of the enemy, it would discourage them from holding any of our territory they now possess in this district, and prevent their merchandize from being smuggled into any other part of this State, and the disgrace of those citizens who are tempted by the prospect of gain, to visit and traffic with them.

We therefore request the Honorable Legislature of the State aforesaid, to unite with the general government, and support such measures as they recommend to free the seacoast from every invasion of the enemy, and show to the world that notwithstanding party divisions about the administration of the general government, the people in this State are determined to support their rights and liberties as freemen, against every foreign invader."

The same committee reported on the "Political Situation" the following preamble and resolves:

"Whereas it is the opinion of the inhabitants of Paris aforesaid that the war declared by the United States against Great Britain was just and right in the sight of God and our country, and deserves the unanimous support of every American belonging to the union and the approbation of all neutral nations—

Therefore, Resolved, That as citizens of the United States we will no longer consider ourselves bound by the commands and orders of the State of Massachusetts, than the State shall comply with the constitution and the laws, and support the government administered by the congress of the United States chosen by the people.

Resolved, That in case of an open rebellion of the State of Massachusetts or the New England States in general or any of them, against the United States, we will support with all the means in our power the General Government of our country.

Resolved, That measures ought immediately to be taken to expose to contempt all persons who may be known to communicate directly or indirectly with our hostile enemy except by command or permission of the United States Government.

Resolved, That we will not trade directly or indirectly with any merchant, trader, or other person for goods or merchandize of any name, nature or quality when we have sufficient reason to believe that he was knowing to said goods or merchandize being brought into this State contrary to the laws of the United States.

Resolved, That should the federal towns in this commonwealth prevent the collection of the direct taxes and internal duties, as some of them have threatened, it will become the duty of republican towns to suspend the payment of the State taxes, till they can ascertain whether the money is to be made use of for the public good, or in support of rebellion."

This report was accepted, and it was voted that the resolutions be adopted and a copy furnished the Eastern Argus for publication.

An article in the warrant was "to see if the town will vote to petition the County commissioners to discontinue the road begining in Rumford, leading through No. 3 and entering the north end of Paris near Samuel Hammond's to Capt. Jonathan Bemis' farm, and Mr. Simeon Pond's to the guide board leading to Rumford, or at anything thereof." It was voted so to petition. It was also voted to build two bridges, one across the cove east of Stowell's mills so called; this with earth; and one across the river below Stowell's mills. The width of each was to be 24 feet. At a meeting holden January 16, a petition to the Legislature was presented and adopted, asking for the separation of the District of Maine from Massachusetts, as follows:

"To the Honorable, the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, January, 1816.

"The inhabitants of Paris in the county of Oxford in legal town meeting assembled, beg leave in their corporate capacity, to represent that the time has now arrived when the District of Maine ought to assume the management of its own affairs; when the citizens of the District ought to exercise those rights secured to them by the constitution of the United States, and be erected into an independent State; that right we now claim. We now respectfully ask your honorable body, to dissolve our political connection with Massachusetts proper; we do it from a sincere conviction that our interests most imperiously demand it; we do it from the belief that you will most cheerfully grant our request when satisfied that it is the wish of the people; that wish we now express to you, and this expression of our opinion we are confident coincides with that of the District in general; one sentiment now prevails on this subject without regard to party politics; there exists with all classes, an unusual degree of interest; those sectional objections which have heretofore existed, are in a great measure done away, and a most zealous determination is manifested to persevere until the great object is effected.

We have long been sensible that however desirous Massachusetts may be of administering our affairs for our best good, it is beyond her power; it is utterly impossible for any legislature to manage so distant and extensive a territory so advantageously as could be done by itself. Our local situation requires a different policy. We know of no reason why this right should be denied us; we in vain seek some cause why a District separated by the ocean and an independent State, from Massachusetts, having an extent of territory equal to all the rest of New England, a population exceeding two hundred and seventy thousand, and resources equal to any State this side of the Hudson, should be denied the privilege of governing itself; it is inconsistent with the spirit of our republic.

We are therefore called by a sense of equity and justice, by a sentiment of honor and independence, by a solemn duty we owe ourselves and our posterity, to pray your honorable body for immediate separation. It has ever been held as a self-evident proposition, "that the District of Maine ought to become a State whenever its population and property should be sufficient to render its government respectable." Again we say, that time has arrived. We have the population, the means and the talents to make Maine one of the most "respectable" States in the union.

And we humbly pray that you will take the subject into serious deliberation, that you will, at your present session, adopt some measure which will effect the object of your petitioners and which will the most promptly secure to us the establishment of a separate and independent State."

Four inches of snow fell this year, the 19th of May.

Job Lurvey was permitted to draw his school money and pay it out at such place as he could best be accommodated. The interest of the ministerial fund was voted to Elder Hooper, as usual. A vote on the question of separation stood 129 in favor and 55 opposed. At a meeting September 1st, delegates were chosen to attend the convention called at the church near the college in Brunswick, agreeable to an act of the Legislature, to consider the subject of separation. Rev. James Hooper and Hon. Albion K. Parris were chosen. Another vote on the question of separation stood 157 to 59. Several roads were accepted and others discontinued but the town business as a whole was of minor importance. The direct tax prayed for by the town came upon them this year, and the names of the tax payers, amount of taxable property and amount of tax are given in the next chapter.

This was a cold year, still well remembered by elderly people. The following monthly journal of the weather during that memorable year, is worth being preserved. Fires ran in the forests of this and the adjoining towns during the late summer months, destroying a large amount of wood and timber, and in some localities nearly ruining the soil. The peculiarities of the season were not confined to New England, but extended throughout the middle and what were then called the western States. There was great suffering among the poor and especially in places newly settled.

January was mild, so much so as to render fires almost needless in sitting rooms. December, the month immediately preceding this was very cold.

February was not very cold: with the exception of a few days, it was mild, like its predecessor.

March was cold and boisterous, the first half of it, the remainder was mild. A great freshet on the Ohio and Kentucky rivers caused great loss of property.

April began warm, and grew colder as the month advanced and ended with snow and ice with a temperature more like Winter than Spring.

May was more remarkable for frowns than smiles. Buds and fruits were frozen—ice formed half an inch in thickness—corn killed and the fields were again and again replanted until deemed too late.

June was the coldest ever known in this latitude. Frost and ice and snow were common. Almost every green herb was killed. Fruit nearly all destroyed. Snow fell to the depth of ten inches in Maine, several inches in Vermont, and it fell to the depth of three inches in the interior of New York; it fell also in Massachusetts.

July was accompanied by frost and ice. On the morning after the fourth, ice formed of the thickness of common window glass, throughout New England and New York, and some parts of Pennsylvania. Indian corn was nearly all killed; some favorably situated fields escaped. This was true of some of the hill farms.

August was more cheerless if possible, than the summer months already passed. Ice was formed half an inch in thickness. Indian corn was so frozen that the greater part of it was cut down and dried as fodder. Almost every green thing was destroyed both in this country and in Europe. Papers received from England said, "It will be remembered by the present generation that the year 1816 was a year in which there was no summer." Very little corn in the New England and Middle States ripened. Farmers supplied themselves from the corn produced in 1815 for seed in the Spring of 1817. It sold for from four to five dollars a bushel.

September furnished about two weeks of the mildest weather of the season. Soon after the middle, it became very cold and frosty, ice forming a quarter of an inch in thickness.

October produced more than a usual share of cold weather; frost and ice common.

November was cold and blustering. Snow fell so as to make sleighing.

December was mild and comfortable.

We have thus given a brief summary of the "cold summer of 1816," as it was called, in order to distinguish it from other cold seasons. The winter was mild. Frost and ice were common in every month of the year. Very little vegetation matured in the Eastern and Middle States. The sun's rays seemed to be destitute of heat throughout the summer; all nature seemed clad in sable hue, and men exhibited no little anxiety concerning the future of this life."

The late Rev. Rawson Dunham of Woodstock, a resident of Paris in 1816, in a communication to the Oxford Democrat in 1873, said of the cold summer:

"In 1816, June 7th, snow fell 2 inches. I rode from Hebron to Livermore that day on horseback and came very near freezing. It was so cold that it killed the birds: English robins were picked up as well as all kinds of birds, frozen to death. Frost every month that year. In 1817 corn was worth $2.00 and $2.50; wheat from $2.00 to $3.00 per bushel."

CHAPTER XX.

DIRECT TAX OF 1816.

Following is a list of the inhabitants of Paris in 1816, liable to be taxed, and the amount assessed against each. This tax was provided by an act of Congress passed the 5th day of March, 1816, and was assessed upon lands, lots, dwelling houses, shops, &c. Joseph Howard of Brownfield was collector for this county, and Ebenezer Poor of Andover, for the sub-District including Paris. The total tax assessed on the whole country was $3,000,000, and the proportion of Oxford county which then included Turner, Livermore, Jay, Weld and Carthage was $5,585.31, or one six hundred and fifty-fourth part of the whole. The tax list is given in full here to show the number of tax-payers residing in the town at the time, and also to convey some idea of the financial standing of each, but as personal property was not taxed, it only shows each approximately, for the names of those not possessed of real estate do not appear, while those whose property consisted mainly of personal property were taxed for only a small part of their real possessions. The names of several non-resident owners are omitted from the list.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE ABORIGINES.

We are not aware that the Indians ever had a village or encampment within the limits of this town, but that they were often here, there is no doubt. They hunted the moose and deer in our forests, set traps for the beaver and other game on the river and larger brooks, and caught an abundance of speckled trout in all our streams. The course of the Little Androscoggin formed one of their thoroughfares between the ocean and the lakes. In going to the northern lakes from the sea-coast, they often left the Great Androscoggin at Pejypscot Falls, (Lewiston,) and passing up the Little Androscoggin to Bryant's Pond, they either struck across to the Great Androscoggin at Rumford and by way of Ellis river to Andover, and so up Black brook to the middle lake, or they crossed from Bryant's Pond to the head-waters of Alder river and down this to its mouth near Bethel Hill, then across to Bear river following up which they reached Umbagog lake at the mouth of the Cambridge. The fact that no deposit of Indian relics and no signs of an Indian burying place have ever been discovered in this vicinity, indicate that they never had a fixed abiding place here, yet the finding of an occasional stone implement, an arrow or spear head, a chisel or gouge or stone axe, proves that they were once here, though probably only temporarily.

When Europeans first visited the coast of Maine, they found numerous tribes of Indians inhabiting our forests, and wherever fish and game did most abound, there the Indians were the most numerous. They had their own well-defined limits which all understood, and no tribe overstepped the boundaries of another except to provoke a war or to carry one on. The great tribes that inhabited Maine were the Abenakis and the Etechemins. The former inhabited from New Hampshire to the Penobscot and the latter from the Penobscot eastward. The Abenakis were divided into four smaller tribes, as follows: The Sokokis inhabited the valley of the Saco; the Anasagunticooks, the Androscoggin and its tributaries; the Wawenocs, the country east of Merrymeeting Bay, and the Canibas or Kennebees, from Merrymeeting Bay to Moosehead Lake, on each side of the river. These tribes were again subdivided into smaller bodies, according to locality. The Pigwakets or Pequakets were at Fryeburg until nearly destroyed by Lovewell and his party, in 1725. There was no doubt a sub-tribe of the Anasagunticooks at Bethel, perhaps one in Rumford, and certainly one in Canton, called the Rockomekos. The Indians occupied the fertile intervals on all our principal rivers. Here they raised their corn, the lands, when the country was first settled by the English giving evidence of having been cleared at a very remote period. The squaws cultivated the corn, using the rudest of implements, and when the soil became exhausted, dressing it with the offal of animals and fish. Perhaps the most intractable tribe of Indians in the State was the one inhabiting the valley of the Androscoggin. There was an "irrepressible conflict" between them and the whites, as long as they had the means to carry on war. But like all the other tribes within our limits, their decimation and utter extermination were only questions of time. The Pequakets were destroyed by Lovewell: the Norridgewocks by Captains Harmon and Moulton, other tribes fell in a similar manner, and finally, the scattered remnants of several hostile tribes went to Canada and settled on the St. Francis river, where in 1759 they were nearly annihilated by Col. Rogers of New Hampshire and his brave companions in arms.*

There is a tradition that the Rockomekos or Rockemegos, as they have been called by some, were destroyed by being decoyed over the Falls at Lewiston. We do not avouch for the truth of the story, although we have heard it from our earliest childhood, and told by those who claimed to have learned it of the first settlers. The story as told was briefly as follows: The Rockomekos had planned an attack upon the feeble settlement at Brunswick, and after celebrating according to their ancient custom, the rites to propitiate the malignant deities they worshipped, they embarked themselves and their families in their canoes. The shadows of evening fell upon the river before they arrived at the Falls, and they sent two of their number forward to kindle fires upon the banks of the river just above the cataract.* From some reason never made clear, the fires were kindled below and the blaze gleamed up among the pines at the foot of the descent. The little fleet bearing the dusky warriors and their wives and children, came on, and, deceived by the signal, they were speedily carried into the swift current where no human power could save them. They had scarcely time to raise the death song before they were hurled over the cataract and perished. None escaped to tell the tale of ruin, save the two who occasioned the disaster. The date of this occurrence is fixed by tradition at the year 1688. It has been said that the two Indians who were sent forward to light the signal fires, came across some white hunters near the Falls from whom they obtained some ardent spirits, and becoming partially intoxicated, they told their business, learning which, the white hunters dispatched them, and then built the fires below the Falls to decoy the marauding party to ruin. This, too, rests entirely upon tradition.*

Among the prominent Indians of the Anasagunticook tribe, was Worombo, who in 1684, sold and gave a deed of the territory on the Androscoggin to the "Upper Falls." It has always been a matter of doubt what falls were meant here, whether Pejypscot, (Lewiston,) or Rumford. The Indians always claimed that they never deeded away the lands on the Androscoggin, through Bethel and above. The last of the once powerful and warlike tribe of Anasagunticooks was Matalluck, known in cheap literature as "the lone Indian of the Magalloway." He lived for many years at the narrows of Umbagog lake, and is well remembered by many people now living. He died about forty years ago. Several places in the lake region perpetuate his name. Another Indian, supposed to have been of the Anasagunticooks, was Molly Ockett. She came from Canada to *Another account attributes the destruction of the Indians of the Rockomeko tribe, to the small pox, with which it has been said they were attacked about the year 1755, and nearly the whole tribe swept away.

Fryeburg and from thence to Bethel, where she claimed ownership of the soil in the right of her ancestors. She often passed through this town, and many old people remember her. A mountain in Woodstock bears her name and also a rock in the lake region. She visited Andover when Ezekiel Merrill, the first settler was first there, and was a frequent resident in that town where she died many years ago, and her remains were committed to the earth in the cemetery near the village. The Little Androscoggin as a tributary to the larger river, was claimed by the Anasagunticooks, and parties of this long extinct tribe, were those who once had a thoroughfare through this town and whose rude implements are still occasionally turned up by the plow.

“They wasted like the April snow
In the warm noon; they shrank away;
And fast are followed as they go Toward the setting day.”

CHAPTER XXII.

CHARACTER OF THE EARLY SETTLERS.

The prosperity of a town and its standing among other towns depends largely on the character of its founders, and in this respect, the town of Paris was uncommonly fortunate. The first comers, though not men of culture, were well educated for their times, and were men of honor, integrity and business capacity. Lemuel Jackson, who was somewhat advanced in years when he came, had been a successful man of business and accumulated quite a fortune. He purchased several entire rights, paying cash for them, and when he came to Paris he brought quite a sum in silver money and representing a much larger sum in the depreciated currency of Revolutionary times. In some respects, he was the father of the town, and his influence was almost unbounded. John Willis, the son-in-law of Jackson, was a valuable citizen, Deacon of the church and a licensed preacher, a man of excellent character and leading a life which even at this distant day is fragrant of good deeds. Gen. Levi Hubbard was in some respects, the foremost man in town. He had seen much public service before he came to Paris, and was well qualified to lead off in the business of the new town and county. The three Stowell brothers were well-trained to business, and the record left by Daniel Stowell when town clerk, shows him a man of superior intelligence and well educated. He was early, a Justice of the Peace. Capt. Isaac Bolster was the pioneer trader, a man well acquainted with business and always kept in town office. Josiah Bisco, the only one of the grantees who settled in Paris, stood high in the esteem of the Proprietary, served on the most important committees, and helped in lotting out the township. He was the first one selected by the town to be appointed a civil magistrate, and was much in town office. The Nelson brothers and Nathan Pierce were men of superior intelligence in business affairs.

Jonathan Bemis was a go-ahead, business man, built mills, cleared up land and made improvements in every direction. The Robinsons were great farmers, clearing up large areas of land and raising luxuriant crops of grain and grass. One of these brothers, one year, raised fifty acres of rye on new land. Daniel Staples had a large farm, cut large crops of hay and kept the largest herd of cattle in town. The three Rawson brothers were men of energy and enterprise, men of judgment, shrewd in business, and successful in the accumulation of property. The Cummings family which came a little later, were valuable acquisitions and have ever since held their prominence in town.

Then there were the Chases, the Hammonds, the Prentisses, the Shaws, the Kings, the Carpenters, the Stevenses, the Stearnses, the Halls, the Morses, the Fullers, the Shurtleff's, the Hathaways, the Fobeses, the Fieldses, the Mellens, the Andrews, Thomas Crocker, the Cushman's, and others of those who came prior to 1800, or near that time, all of whom were men of character and just the right material for planting and rearing a new town in the wilderness. Some of them had been well educated in the schools, while others had been schooled in active military service, a service which, while it well fitted them for pioneer life, taught them, at the same time, the great value of American citizenship. Every hive has its drones, and every community its sluggards, and the records show that Paris was no exception, but such characters were uncommonly rare. The great majority of the early settlers were industrious, enterprising and economical, and very soon after their first clearings were made, they had comfortable homes and pleasant surroundings. They were religious men, members of the church, and encouraged their minister by being constant in their attendance upon his ministrations. They were not without their faults, but their failings were greatly overbalanced by their good qualities. They left their impress upon the town which has ever given it a prominent position in affairs of county and State.

When in 1806, Paris became the shire town, and the county offices were established here, there was a re-enforcement of talent which soon became an element of strength in town and county. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin came as Clerk of the Courts and took up a permanent residence on the Hill. He at once became a leading citizen and retained that position to the time of his death. The legal men that gathered here when the Oxford bar was organized and became residents of the town, were men of culture, learned in the law, and became distinguished in their profession, and some of them in politics. Such names as Enoch Lincoln, Albion K. Parris, Joseph G. Cole and Stephen Emery, need only to be mentioned in this connection. The first two became governors, the last two Judges, and all are too well known to require any farther notice from us. Their coming into town was marked by better management of municipal affairs, by more attention to educational matters, by a higher patriotism which found expression in resolutions passed and spread upon the town records, by temperance effort and by greater care in looking after the morals of the community generally. They were good lawyers, but they were something more; they were men of character, of broad and expansive views; statesmen in the highest sense of the term, and their influence was powerful for good, and lasting. Though long since dead, by their precepts still remembered, and by the example of their lives, they yet speak to the people of this town in words of unmistakable import.

1817.

The support of the town's poor was sold at auction. James Churchill was struck off to Perez Churchill, Miss Walton to Jonathan Shurtleff, at seventy-five cents per week for "board and tobacco," and Widow Statira Wightman with her youngest child, to Moses Marshall. Five hundred dollars were still raised for schools, and fifteen hundred for roads. The town voted to grant the request of Andrew Record and others, to be set off with their estates from Paris to Hebron. This set off was from the southeast corner of the town. One thousand dollars were raised for defraying town charges. The town voted not to send a representative to the General Court.

1818.

Renel Washburn was chosen town agent. One hundred and fifty dollars were raised for the repair of the meeting house, and Levi Hubbard, Elias Stowell and Samuel King were made a committee to expend the same. It was voted to "suspend the law prohibiting the destruction of useful birds, passed Feb. 12, 1818." It was voted to build a bridge across the river, on the road leading from Caleb Swift's to the county road near Thomas F. Chase's. "Voted to set off Levi Berry and others into a school district, beginning at the town line on the western side of said town of Paris on the late line which separates double lot 25 and 26 from double lot 27 and 28, and to continue on said lot line easterly as far as their present district extends, and including all to the northward of said line within the said town of Paris;" also voted to annex William Berry and Stephens Drake to this district. This road was discontinued from land of John G. Crawford to Woodstock line, and the selectmen were instructed to view all the roads in town and repair all such as needed it. Voted to discontinue a road leading from Samuel Hammond's to Woodstock line, and one by Asa Thurlo's in said Woodstock.

1819.

Seven hundred and fifty dollars were voted for schools. Molly Walton's support was bid off by Abiezer Andrews at 92 cents per week, tobacco to be furnished her to the amount of six pounds.

Mrs. Statira Wightman was struck off to Joshua Carpenter at seventeen cents per week for board, and her daughter to Joseph Penley at nineteen. The bird law was again suspended. A committee of three, Seth Morse, Simeon Cummings and Stephen Emery, was chosen to draft a code of by-laws for the town of Paris. The Selectmen were made a committee to build a stone pound. A committee to view the timber of the old pound, reported that "they found but three sticks and they good for nothing." Moses Marshall's bill, a dollar a day was allowed and forty cents for spirit $9.40, and for the second item "including spirit," $25.63. The town again voted to petition the Legislature for a separation of the District of Maine from Massachusetts. The vote this year stood 171 in favor and 40 opposed. Dec. 6, the town voted on the new constitution for the State of Maine, 89 in favor and 17 opposed. The first steel axles ever made in town and perhaps in the county, were manufactured on the Hill this year. The Andrews House at South Paris was built during the summer; it has been much enlarged since.

A committee to make rules and regulations concerning schools was chosen, consisting of Cyrus Hamlin, Benj. Chandler and Stephen Emery. This committee reported that a committee of three be annually chosen by the town whose duty it should be to examine into the qualification of teachers and direct the general course of study in the public schools. This was a new departure. Heretofore agents, one for each district, had been chosen, who acted not only as agents but committeemen. The report was accepted and its recommendations adopted. Stephen Emery, Jairus S. Keith and Henry Prentiss were accordingly chosen the first school committee of Paris. The town this year voted that from and after the first day of December to the first day of April, no neat cattle should be suffered to go at large under a penalty of twenty-five cents for each beast at any one time, and that horses and swine be restricted from going at large during the whole year, under a like penalty. This vote was in accordance with the report of the committee on by-laws, and was the first of the kind passed. William King received the unanimous vote, 180 votes being polled, for governor of Maine. The property qualification for the right of suffrage, does not appear in the warrant of this year. It was voted to complete the deck and door of the meeting house, and Dea Joseph Lindsey was chosen to take care of the house. Col. Ebenezer Rawson was chosen agent to rebuild the bridge near Bisco's Falls, and it was voted that he take all of the timber that "comes down from above," for that purpose.

Voted to discontinue the road leading from Wm. C. Witham's by Levi Berry's to the county road. Witham lived on part of double lot 27 and 28 in the third range, and Berry on part of 27 and 28 in the second. One thousand dollars were raised for defraying town charges. The town agent was instructed to oppose the acceptance of the road prayed for by Amos Town and others. It was voted to build a bridge over the river on the road leading to Wm. C. Witham's. This was probably at or near the site of the present bridge at West Paris. It was voted to choose a committee "to examine school masters and inspect schools agreeably to a law of the State." Three families were put up at auction and bid off by Abraham Bolster, "a cow to go with each family which is to be well supported as well as the families, till next March meeting, he, said Bolster, to have the benefit of their labor."

The first term of the Supreme Judicial Court was held here commencing on the second Tuesday of June. Prentiss Mellen was Chief Justice, and Wm. P. Preble and Nathan Weston, Jr., associates. Rufus K. Goodenow moved here this year, to fill the position of Clerk of Courts. A bell was purchased this year, the story of which is told in the following record of the court of sessions. It is the same bell that now swings in the belfry of the Baptist church, and has called the citizens of Paris to church and to court, since that time—over sixty years ago.

OCTOBER TERM,)
Court of Sessions, 1821.)

"Subscription for the Bell :

Whereas the Court of Sessions for the County of Oxford have passed an order for the appropriation of one hundred and thirty dollars to be paid out of the Treasury of said County, to be applied, with such other sums as may be procured by private subscription to defray the expense of a bell for the use of said County and the persons who may become interested therein, in such manner that the use of the same by the County may never be interfered with :

We, the subscribers, therefore, in consideration thereof, and for our personal convenience and benefit, and for divers other considerations thereunto moving us, hereby constitute and appoint Cyrus Hamlin, Levi Hubbard, Simeon Cummings, Benjamin Chandler, Thomas Crocker, Ebenezer

Rawson, John Daniels, Jr., Moses Hammond, Jacob Jackson and Enoch Lincoln our agents and attorneys to procure and cause to be swung in the centre meeting house in Paris, in said County, a bell as aforesaid, by means of the sum so appropriated and the sums severally set by us against our respective names, and in our names to make any contract or contracts for and on account of said Bell and to bind us respectively to the payment of the sum by each of us below subscribed—and we severally promise and agree to and with our aforesaid agents and attorneys to hold them harmless and indemnified against such contract or contracts to the amount by us severally set against our respective names and to pay over to them the said amount on or before the first day of January next.

And the said Hamlin, Hubbard, Cummings, Rawson, Chandler, Crocker, Hammond, Daniels, Jackson and Lincoln on their part severally promise and agree to and with the subscribers that they will on or before the first day of January next pay for the use and purpose aforesaid the sums by them set against their respective names and that they will appropriate all the proceeds of said appropriation from the County Treasury and the subscriptions of individuals to that object to procuring a bell as aforesaid and causing the same to be swung in said meeting house.

Daniel Stowell was allowed five dollars for counterfeit money received while town treasurer. The school committeemen this year were Enoch Lincoln, Stephen Emery and Elijah L. Hamlin. Joseph Morse asked for compensation for having his horse lamed by a hole in the highway. June 16th Jairus Shaw's buildings all destroyed by fire.

1823.

It was voted that the selectmen be assessors and also overseers of the poor. Twenty-three hundred dollars were raised for roads, nine hundred for town expenses and seven hundred for schools. The agent was instructed to oppose the petitions of Henry Rust and others, Peter C. Virgin and others and Simeon Cummings and others, for roads through Paris. The town voted to assume the defence in the case of Jeduthan Wellington against Aaron Fuller, Jr.

1824.

Five hundred dollars were raised for military and contingent expenses. The commanding officers of companies were authorized to draw from the treasurer twenty cents for each soldier in the town who should actually attend the muster. The Jeduthan Wellington case came up again, and a committee was appointed to enquire into the nature of his claims. July 25. David Twitchell's barn was struck by lightning, but by prompt action the fire was extinguished before much damage was done. In July of this year, Mr. Asa Barton who kept the Oxford county Bookstore, started a weekly paper called the Oxford Observer. This was the first paper printed in the town, and the second in the county. Its appearance was hailed with delight by all classes and it received a good local patronage. Two mails per week from Portland began to be received, and one from Waterford. Benj. Woodbury and others, petitioned to be set off from Buckfield and annexed to Paris.

1825.

The overseers of the poor were instructed to put out Hector Fuller's children, "if they do not support themselves." The representative of Paris was instructed to oppose the petition of Levi Whitman and others, praying that land may be set off from Paris and annexed to Norway. The third Wednesday in September was held the first meeting of the Oxford County Society for the Improvement of Morals, at the Baptist meeting house. The Oxford County Bible Society, James Hooper, President, held a meeting at Paris. Levi Whitman, Joseph Shackley, Moses Ames and Daniel Young, all of Norway, petitioned the Legislature to set off certain lands from Paris and annex them to Norway. Cyrus B. Norris opened a blacksmith shop in town, Jairus S. Keith was admitted to practice law. Simeon Pond died in April, aged 91. He had been a soldier in the French and Indians wars and also in the war of the Revolution. Mrs. Mary Pond died aged 80. Amos Fuller took the hotel at the hill, formerly occupied by Simeon Norris.

CHAPTER XXIV.

*Early Oxford County.—The Early Neighbors of No. 4 People.—
Some Statistics of Oxford County Towns.*

Paris being the shire town of Oxford county since the county was erected in 1805, a brief chapter on the settlement and progress of the towns in this vicinity may not be devoid of interest in this connection. The grant to Gen. Joseph Frye, was the first made within what is now or was formerly Oxford county. This grant was made March 3d, 1762, and in the following year the first settlers came from Concord, N. H. The first four were Samuel Osgood, Moses Ames, John Evans and Jedediah Spring. The town grew quite rapidly, and had a sufficient population in 1777, to justify an act of incorporation. Capt. Henry Y. Brown of Haverhill, Mass., having received a grant of a tract lying next to and south of Fryeburg, was about the same time energetically pushing a settlement in that direction, and in 1768 had a dozen or more families located. This town was not incorporated until nine years after Paris. A settlement was first made in Lovell in 1779; Denmark in 1788; Hiram, 1774; Porter, 1781; David McWaine came to Waterford in 1775, and other settlers came a few years after. Bethel, one of the original Canada townships, was granted in June, 1768, a clearing began in 1774, but not much was done toward a settlement till 1780. There were ten families in Bethel in 1781. The first settler went into Rumford in 1780, but he with two or three others who were there at the time of the Indian raid on Bethel in August, 1781, fled to New Gloucester and did not return for a year. Benj. Spaulding felled the first trees in Buckfield in 1776, and Thomas Allen and the Buck brothers moved in a year later. Hebron, including Oxford, was granted to Alexander Shepard, Jr., March 8, 1777, and settlements were made two years later. The first settlers came to Norway in 1786, and the town was incorporated in 1797. A settlement was commenced in Newry, previously called Sunday River Plantation and Bostwick, in 1781. Among the early settlers were several from Newry in Ireland, who gave name to the town. Ezekiel Merrill from Andover, Mass., found his way to Andover, Maine in 1786, and for two years was the sole settler. Livermore, formerly in this county, previously called Port Royal and Liverton, was first settled in 1779. Turner was granted to Joseph Sylvester and associates, and called Sylvester Canada. Its settlement was begun the year 1771 or 1772. Canton then including Jay, granted to David Phipps and associates, was settled about the same time as Paris, as were also Sumner and Hartford, previously called West and East Butterfield. Dixfield once called Holmantown and named for Dr. James Dix, was settled by the Holmans and others in 1795. Gilead, once called Peabody's Patent, was settled soon after Bethel. Woodstock was settled in 1798, Albany in 1800 and Greenwood in 1802. The minor towns in the county came along later. Weld formerly in Oxford county, was settled in 1800 and Carthage in 1803.

When the first settlers came to Paris, their nearest neighbors on the east were in Buckfield, eight miles distant; on the north were a few families in Rumford and still more in Bethel, but more than twenty miles away; on the west was McWaine at Waterford, some twelve or fifteen miles distant who was troubled at the near approach of neighbors. Southwardly from Paris, a beginning had probably been made in Hebron, and there had been a settlement in Poland which then included Minot and Auburn, for several years. In 1768, eight years after the conquest of Canada, the first settler, Nathaniel Bailey, came to Poland, then called Bakerstown. When Paris was first settled, therefore, the wilderness had been invaded all along the line, on the Saco and on the Great Androscoggin from Gilead to Turner, and at many points within these limits. The comparative growth in population and wealth of the principal towns in Oxford county is shown in the following tables compiled from the census returns of 1790, 1800, 1810 and 1820. No returns were made from No. 4 in 1790, probably because there was no plantation organization. The same is true of several other towns and perhaps for the same reason.

CHAPTER XXV.

ANNALS CONTINUED.

Esq. Stowell's Certificate.—Redistricting for Schools.—Resignation of Elder Hooper as Minister of the Town.

1826.

Thomas Webster was chosen town clerk. The town's poor were all struck off to John Daniels, Jr., for four hundred and thirty-five dollars for one year. It was voted that the cows belonging to the town now in the hands of the town's poor, be sold by the selectmen. Among the returns of qualifications of officers this year, the following is recorded :

"To Thomas Webster, Esq., clerk of the town of Paris, &c. Be it known unto you and I hereby make it known as aforesaid, that on this fifteenth day of April, A. D., 1826, Capt. John Millett of said town residing in and near the city or village of Cape Ann, appeared on the day aforesaid, with his head uncovered, his naked arm uplifted in High street, to wit in Mechanic's Row, and under no other covering than the blue arch of the celestial canopy, made solemn oath before me the subscriber, one of the Justices assigned to keep the Peace within and for the county of Oxford, that he being duly chosen one of the Hogsreeves of, in and for said town during the current year, that he would well and faithfully execute the duties of said office according to the best of his ability and understanding.

Before me,

LEVI STOWELL, Justice of the Peace."

The town voted to oppose by all fair means the location or opening of a road leading from Fuller's Corner in Norway to the guide board near Capt. Samuel Rawson's, and a committee was appointed to carry out the wishes of the town, which at an adjourned meeting reported it inexpedient to continue any further resistance to the road, and that measures ought to be taken to open the same. The report was accepted, and five hundred dollars raised to be expended on the road under the direction of the selectmen. This vote was reconsidered at a subsequent meeting, and the job of building the road, and bridge across the river, was let to Moses Hammond for six hundred and fifty dollars. A meeting was called Nov. 27th, to choose a representative in place of Enoch Lincoln, resigned. While celebrating the fourth of July by firing a cannon, the charge prematurely caught fire and Henry Young, Hannibal Hamlin, John Willis and a son of Robert Wightman were more or less injured. One morning the citizens at the Hill awoke and found that the local paper office, the Observer, had disappeared during the night, and were much chagrined to learn that Barton had moved it to Norway. By means of an ox-cart and in the still hours of the night, the entire establishment, press, types and paper had been smuggled away. April 19. Dr. Levi Willis of this town, died in Pearlington, Miss. A campmeeting was held in town in September, the managers of which publicly expressed their thanks to those who attended "for their good decorum, religious regard and polite behavior."

An article in the warrant was to see what action the town would take with regard to a road proposed to be built from Rumford to Paris. The matter was left with the town agent and a committee who were instructed to attend the court and also to show the different routes to the viewing committee of the court.

1828.

The committee on defining the limits of the several school Districts in town, consisting of the Selectmen and Stephen Emery, submitted an extended report which was spread upon the records. Leaving out the boundaries as specified in the report, the following are the lots embraced in each district:

Accepted by a vote of the town March 31, 1828.

Nov. 3, the town voted for electors of President and Vice President for the Oxford District: Cornelius Holland had 155 votes, and Levi Hubbard 132. For Delegates at large, Isaac Lane and Daniel Rose had 149 votes, and Simon Nowell and Thomas Fillebrown 118.

The selectmen as a committee were requested to report what amount should be paid the proprietors of the Paris meeting house for the privilege of holding the town meetings in it. “It was voted to set the paupers up at auction to be struck off to the lowest bidder.” Eight hundred dollars were raised for the support of the poor. Samuel Stearns was allowed ten dollars for a counterfeit bill received of the town treasurer. A road was accepted from Foxwell Swan’s to Woodstock line, more especially to accommodate Job Lurvey. The suit commenced by Stephen Emery in behalf of the town, against Joseph Matthews of Buckfield, relating to the poor on the territory set off from Buckfield to Paris was approved. The committee on paying rent for meeting house recommended that the town pay fourteen dollars per year hereafter, and one hundred and forty dollars for the past ten years. The following list of jurors was accepted, the first recorded on the town records: Micah Walker, Isaac Cummings, Jr., Wm. Walker, Frederic N. Hall, Thomas N. Stowell, Rufus Stowell, Lewis B. Stowell, Thomas Clark, Charles M. Jones, Dan'l Stowell, Thos. Hill, Jr., Abijah Hall, Jr., Galen Field, Lazarus Hathaway, Dan'l Cummings, Joseph McAllister, Adna Tribon, James Deering, Seneca Brett, Hezekiah Pike, Stephen Blake, John Deering, Dan'l Noble, Samuel King, Cyprian Hall, Samuel Deering, Lewis Follet, James Daniels, Noah Curtis, Austin Partridge, Francis Bemis, Benj. F. Crawford, America Thayer, Phineas Stearns, Simon S. Stevens, Ezra Tubbs and Stephen Robinson. The saw mill at Bisco's Falls was carried off this year by a freshet. Elder Hooper sent in his resignation as minister of the town to take effect after April first. The resignation was accepted and the interest on the ministerial fund was voted him, up to April first, 1833, and the following resolutions passed:

"The town of Paris having received from the Rev. James Hooper his resignation as the settled minister of said town and deeming it to be a suitable occasion to express their sentiment in relation to the subject, therefore

Resolved, that while they regret the ill health of the Rev. James Hooper and his consequent inability to attend to further pastoral duties, they entertain a grateful recollection of his early and lasting attachment to this people, his fidelity to them in his ministerial relations and the deep interest which he has always manifested in their welfare.

Resolved, that the affectionate regard of his people attend him in his old age and their ardent wishes that peace and happiness may crown his decline of life, and that he may enjoy the consciousness and the reward of having faithfully discharged his duty."

Voted, on motion of R. K. Goodenow, that the interest which has arisen on the ministerial fund for the last year be given to Rev. James Hooper with a full reliance that he will make such a disposition of it after remunerating himself for his ministerial services, as shall be just and proper. That equal and exact justice will be done by him so far as it relates to all sects and denominations who may have any legal or moral right to any part of said sum.

Timothy J. Carter, Esq., presided at the March meeting. An extended report was made by the committee concerning the town's poor, and the best and cheapest method of caring for them. The year past had been an unfortunate one, and quite a number required help who had maintained themselves before, the cause being sickness or accident.

CHAPTER XXVI.

ELDER HOOPER'S "A SHORT HISTORY OF PARIS."

The First Clearing and Settlement.—Who were Early Settlers.—Historical Incidents.—Brief Address to the People of Paris.

December 14, 1830, Elder Hooper wrote a short sketch for the "Jeffersonian," which he called "A Short History of Paris," and which appeared in the columns of that paper. Paris had been settled half a century, and most of those who came in first were dead. But a few were living, and among them was Patience Willis, said to have been the first white woman in town. John Daniels was also alive, who was said to have felled the first piece of trees. Elder Hooper had been in town thirty-five years, was familiarly acquainted with all the early settlers and also had living and intelligent witnesses to consult at the time he wrote the article. Under the circumstances, it would be strange if his data were not in the main correct, and doubtless they were; the doubtful authenticity and correctness of some of his statements, has been expressed elsewhere. The letter is introduced because it is worth preserving in connection with the history of the town, and is probably its first written history. It is introduced in this place, because in the chronological arrangement of the volume, it belongs here. Its statements are to be taken and weighed in connection with statements and evidence upon the same topics presented in another part of this volume, and for what they may be considered worth. The article referred to is as follows:

"The town of Paris was granted in the year 1771, to Capt. Joshua Fuller of Watertown, Mass., and his company, for their services in the old French war, when they were under the King of England. The first trees that were felled in town, were cut by Mr. John Daniels, who is yet alive. The lot on which the clearing was first commenced is the same on which the Meeting house, Court House and other public buildings now stand and includes almost all the village on Paris Hill and was sold at that time for an iron kettle. Corn was first raised in Paris in the year 1780 by Isaac Jackson and Lemuel Jackson, Jr. Soon after this time, old Mr. Lemuel Jackson came to Paris and brought with him about fourteen hundred dollars and greatly helped the settlement of the town. With him came his son, Levi, and his son-in-law, Deacon John Willis. I shall now give a list of those whom I consider the first inhabitants of this town: John Daniels and his son John, Asa Barrows and Malachi, Abner Shaw, Thomas Stevens, Benjamin Hammond, Josiah Smith, Joseph Hammond, Nicholas Chesley, John Besse and his son John, Asa Dean, Joseph Perry, Asa Perry, Uriah Ripley, Seth Morse, James Morse, Isaac Bolster and his son Isaac, Jonathan Hall, Abijah Hall, Jonathan Shurtleff and his son Jonathan, Peter Durell, Reuben Hubbard, Levi Hubbard, Wm. Stowell, Daniel Stowell, Elias Stowell, Elijah Robinson, Stephen Robinson, Daniel Staples, Seth Carpenter, Elias Partridge, Eben Nelson, Abner Rawson, Ebenezer Rawson, Caleb Cushman, Aaron Fuller, Simeon Pond, Jonathan Bemis, William Stearns, Abijah Warren, Sylvanus Robbins, Barnabee Faunce, John Tuell, David Andrews, Edward Andrews, Abiezer Andrews, John Gray, Edmund Dean, Nathan Nelson, Solomon Jordan, Merodach Smith, Timothy Smith, Joseph Swift, Caleb Swift, William C. Whitney, (made a beginning with the first settlers, but soon after removed,) Lemuel and Joseph Holmes, James Lebroke, Josiah Riscoe, Jairus Shaw, Samuel King, George King, Solomon Bryant, Eleazer Cole, William Swan, Jacob Twitchell, Jesse Briggs, Nathan Pierce, Asa Robinson, Silas Maxim. The first white male child born in Paris was Joseph Daniels. The wife of Deacon John Willis was the first woman who came to Paris and it is yet alive. This town was at first called Number Four. It was incorporated by the name of Paris in 1793.

The first Physician that came to this town was Dr. Barnett, but he did not stay long. Dr. Cyprian Stevens was the first doctor who settled in Paris. He died in 1806. Dr. Brooks lived in this town several years, also Dr. Croswell, Dr. Dean and Dr. Hammond. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin afterwards settled here, who died in 1829 and Dr. Benj. Chandler, who died in April, 1827. The now practicing physicians are Asaph Kitteridge and Job Holmes. The first minister settled in Paris was James Hooper, who was ordained in 1795: John Willis was ordained as an Evangelist in 1812, and Joseph Walker in 1821. Elder Witham has been ordained since. Aaron Fuller, Jr., was also a minister, but was not ordained in Paris. Daniel Stowell was the first person commissioned as a justice in town. The meeting-house on Paris Hill was built in 1803. The County of Oxford was formerly a part of Cumberland and York, and was organized into a district County in 1805. The first Judges of the Common Pleas were Simon Frye, Samuel Parris of Hebron, and Luther Cary of Turner. The first Clerk of the Courts was Cyrus Hamlin, who served in that office many years. Benj. Chandler was Clerk one year. Thomas Clark succeeded Cyrus Hamlin and was succeeded by Rufus K. Goodenow, the present clerk. The second bench of Judges were Benjamin Greenleaf of Berwick, Judah Dana of Fryeburg, and William Widgery of Portland. The Courts of Common Pleas are now held by Ezekiel Whitman. The first Judge of Probate was Rev. Mr. Fessenden. He soon died and Judah Dana was appointed to that office. When Maine became a State, Dr. Benjamin Chandler was appointed Judge of Probate and so continued till his death. Stephen Emery was then appointed and still continues Judge of Probate. The following persons and in the following order, have been Registers of Probate, viz.: Samuel A. Bradley and Timothy Osgood of Fryeburg, Renel Washburn of Livermore, Thomas Webster of Fryeburg and Thomas Clark of Paris, the present Register. The following persons have been Sheriffs of the County of Oxford: Gen. Learned of Livermore, who ran away and injured his bondsmen about six thousand dollars, Hannibal Hamlin of Waterford, Gen. McMillan of Fryeburg, Cyrus Hamlin of Paris, and William C. Whitney of Oxford, the present Sheriff. Levi Hubbard was the first County Treasurer. Henry Rust, Jr., was the second, and Manson Mellen is the third and present Treasurer. A printing press was established in Paris by Asa Barton, in 1824. The first lawyer who made a stand in town was Z. Soule. Since that time there has been Nathaniel Howe, Albion K. Parris, Enoch Lincoln, Stephen Emery, Timothy J. Carter and Joseph G. Cole. The three last now live in Paris. Levi Stowell also made a stand as a lawyer in Paris, for a short time. There never have been but two ordained ministers in Paris, whose labors have been confined to this town, viz.: James Hooper and Joseph Walker.

The first person who was killed in Paris was Oliver Hubbard by the fall of a tree. The second was a young man by the name of Warren who was killed by the limb from a tree. Three persons have been drowned here. The first was a man by the name of Frost from Bethel. He and another man went out to slide on the ice on the Lord's day: both broke through, but one was saved. Before the settlement of the town a man by the name of Snow, was killed by the Indians at a place on the Little Androscoggin River, in this town, which has since been called Snow's Falls. When the town was first settled a boy was lost and no vestige of him or clothes was ever found. He was a brother to Daniel Macomber who now lives in Paris. About 1815 two men were drowned. They washed sheep in a cold day and after they had done they plunged themselves into the river and were drowned. Their names were Allan and Strout. Caleb Cushman had a son killed by falling under the axe of his brother when cutting wood at the door. The following persons have committed suicide: Mrs. Carpenter, Nathaniel Stearns and Benjamin Pratt. Two men have perished in the cold supposed by intoxication. The Congregational meeting house in this town was built in 1817. The Baptist Meeting house was built in 1803, by a committee of the following persons: Ebenezer Rawson, Jairus Shaw, Lemuel Jackson, Jr., Benjamin Hammond, and Nathaniel Woodbury. Jonathan Bemis, John Daniels, Jr., and Samuel Stephens have since joined the committee. The committee have lost considerable money by building said house unless there is generosity enough in those who attend meeting to relieve them. If the subject is taken into serious consideration by them, they would soon relieve the proprietors from their burden and indemnify them in full. If there was no meeting house on Paris Hill, one must be built which would be attended with great expense. If the rising generation who are soon to be and some who already are, in possession of their fathers' property, would come forward and relieve the committee, they would do honor to their fathers and to themselves. Young men of Paris, what is more disagreeable than to pass through a rich town and see no meeting house, or to see one shattered and decaying for the want of care and attention? What is more honorable to a town than to see a good meeting house kept in good repair—a minister of the everlasting gospel comfortably supported, and the people attending on the public worship of God on the Lord's day? My young friends, we are too apt to think that whatever relates to the worship of God and our eternal salvation, may be neglected until we have attended to everything else; not considering that God has enjoined it upon us "to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." I have this opinion of you, young men, that if you should seriously consider upon this subject, you would not let the labors of your fathers fall to the ground to the dishonor of your fathers and yourselves. If you do, what will those who travel through the town say of you? Will they not say that the spirits of the fathers have not descended to the sons? If I was a young man inheriting my father's estate or expecting to, one of two things I would do: I would do my part towards the meeting and for the support of the public worship of God, or I would move out of town, where they would not have a meeting house or a minister. You know young men, that I am not writing to you on my own account but on yours and for your good. I have preached the gospel to you from your infancy, without charge or expense to you, and but very little to your fathers. I must soon leave you and the meeting house. Soon you will see me no more ascend the pulpit—you will soon be deprived of seeing my bald head and hear my faltering voice. The doctrine I have preached to you I am willing to live and die by.

I have written this short history to revive in the minds of the old, the things which they have seen and to inform the rising generation of what has taken place. The first settlers of Paris were principally from the counties of Plymouth and Worcester in Mass. They were healthy, strong and enterprising. They had to suffer many privations, and endure much hardship, but the Lord prospered their labors and they soon became wealthy and independent farmers. They have given to their children a good English education, and if the children maintain the honor of their fathers, they will do well. The town of Paris has never been very litigious. There has never been a lawsuit on the subject of religion in this town. The number of inhabitants at present is 2307. There are between two and three hundred who are professors of religion. If half of them be found with oil in their vessels at the last day, it will be well for them. There are many I hope who have the oil of grace who have not yet made a profession of religion. The religious denominations in Paris are Baptist, Freewill Baptist, Methodist, Congregationalist and Universalist. The number of those who profess religion is small compared with the whole. It is high time for the inhabitants of this town, to seek the Lord while he may be found for we shall many of us soon exchange time for eternity, and appear before the judgment seat of Christ; and if we live and die neglecting the Son of God and the only Savior of sinners, where he is gone we cannot come. May God grant that you may all receive Christ, that you may receive power to become the sons of God. As for myself, I can say of you who are and those who have been inhabitants of Paris, you have treated me well and I hope that what few days I have to live with you I shall be faithful to God, to you and to myself."

JAMES HOOPER.

Paris, Dec. 1830.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1831.

Job Holmes was elected clerk in place of Alanson Mellen who had held the office for many years. Twenty-five hundred dollars were raised for roads and one thousand for schools. A committee was chosen "to investigate the subject relative to Rev. James Hooper; to search the record to see if he is legally dismissed as to his ministerial labors in the town of Paris." Several roads were under indictment at this time, notwithstanding the large sums raised for road purposes each year. A new road was accepted around the Robinson Hill, so called, and Samuel Deering was chosen agent to expend two hundred dollars raised for cutting it out.

1832.

$2500 for roads, and $1000 for schools. Rev. James Hooper was voted the interest on the ministerial funds for his services the past year. Each man in town was permitted to allow one cow to run in the road; all other neat stock prohibited. $300 in money additional, raised for roads. The selectmen reported the limits of the two companies of infantry in Paris as follows: "Beginning on the east part of said town between lots 14 and 15, crossing the town on said line to the west. The foregoing line to be the limits between the north and south companies of infantry in the town of Paris, excepting lots 15 and 16 in the first range and lots number 15 and 16 in the second range; these lots to belong to the south company; all the town south of this line to belong to the south company and all north to the north company.

1833.

Simeon Walton was chosen clerk. Rufus K. Goodenow, Luke Chase and Joseph G. Cole, school committee. Seven poor persons were disposed at auction for one year at prices ranging from five dollars to fifty-three dollars. The ministerial interest was again voted Elder Hooper. The town business this year was entirely routine. The Jeffersonian newspaper was moved to Portland in the spring of this year, and August 20th, Geo. W. Millett of Norway and Octavus King of Paris issued the first number of the Oxford Democrat, a paper that came to stay. The annual meeting of the Oxford County Temperance Society was holden at Paris Hill, August 12th. Total abstinence from intoxicating drinks was urged at this meeting as the only safe and tenable ground. Isaac Knight late of Paris died in Bethel. Mrs. Mary, wife of James Perry, died in Montville, aged 72.

1834.

It was voted to authorize the licensing by the proper officers, of persons to sell wine, rum and other spirituous liquors at their stores or shops. Benj. Hawkins was allowed to draw his school money and expend the same in Oxford. A meeting was called Sept. 8, to vote on an amendment to the constitution; only seven votes were thrown, all in favor of the amendment. The selectmen in the months of October and November, perambulated and renewed the lines between Paris and the several adjoining towns, and their several reports are duly recorded. The fence viewers settled division fences between Abigail Rawson and Patience Willis, and between Henry Rust of Paris and Moses Ames of Norway. Hon. Stephen Emery, delivered a temperance address on the Hill New Year's day. Mrs. Huldah, wife of Thomas Chase died, aged 70. Job Holmes left town this year and was succeeded by James M. Buck. Miss Hamlin commenced a select school for Misses, April 28. Mrs. Nancy, wife of Simon Stevens drowned herself in a fit of mental derangement, Aug. 8, aged 36. Mrs. Susan Jackson died Dec. 2, aged 73. The Democrat says that Ebenezer Cary of Paris was married in Minot after a tedious courtship of one hour, to Mrs. Hannah Davis of Salem, Mass. Simeon Cummings advertized his carding and fulling mill for sale in February. Alfred Andrews, Sullivan Andrews and Isaac Butterfield formed a co-partnership May 26.

1835.

$3500 were raised for roads; also $150 to repair indicted roads.

Daniel Curtis was permitted to draw his school money and expend it in Woodstock. Neat cattle were prohibited from running in the highways of the town. Sewall Crockett and Godfrey G. Waterhouse bought out Thomas Crocker and went into trade at the Hill. The project of a railway from Portland to Quebec was talked up considerably this year. The 59th anniversary of our National Independence was celebrated at Paris Hill. An appropriate ode to the American Flag was read by Miss A. A. Rawson. The Rifle company was paraded and a standard delivered by Miss H. L. Hamlin, in a very excellent speech. Ensign David R. Ripley responded. Appropriate exercises were then held at the meeting house; an oration by Hon. Timothy J. Carter, a collation served, and then regular toasts. It was a very interesting and enjoyable occasion, and in striking contrast with some of the early celebrations. July 9th, the United States engineer passed through the town on his way to Quebec, exploring for a suitable place for a railway. Hon. Stephen Emery delivered the Fourth of July oration at Turner. Dea. Isaac Bolster died July 9, aged 66. Jesse Cummings died Oct. 9th. Micah Allen came from Norway and set up the tailoring business at the Hill.

$4500, raised for roads, "to be expended in the usual mode." The treasurer of the town was directed to collect the interest on the ministerial funds and place the same at interest, allowing it to accumulate, until otherwise ordered by the town. Henry Hawkins was set off from District one in Paris, and allowed to join the nearest district in Oxford. The Democratic electors for President polled 157 votes, and the opposition 34. Maj. Russell Hubbard died Feb. 15, aged 49. Hon. Levi Hubbard died Feb. 18th. He came into the town early and was ever among the foremost citizens. He was a civil magistrate, representative, councillor, &c. Mr. John Daniels died March 29, aged 92 years. He is said to have felled the first trees for a clearing in this town, and was here with his family among the first. Charlotte, wife of Abiather Tuell died Oct. 9, aged 50. Dr. James M. Buck died Nov. 6th. He was the son of Moses Buck of Sumner, greatly beloved as a physician and respected as a man. He was aged 28 years, and "filled the measure of his short life with usefulness and honor." John Butterfield was found suspended by the neck in his chaise house, Nov. 7; life was extinct. He was an honest and industrious man but subject to periods of great despondency. Seth Morse, Jr., died Nov. 24, and a jury returned a verdict of "died from intemperate habits." The Oxford Democrat office took fire Nov. 21; damage about $100.

Isaac Harlow was made town clerk, and Timothy J. Carter was moderator. Action was taken at this meeting with regard to a road by Snow's Falls, and a committee appointed to examine the different routes. $4000 for roads. Five hundred dollars additional were raised to be expended on the new county road from Barnabee Faunce's house to Ebenezer Rawson's, and the branch road from the same to Washburn's mills. It was voted that the town receive its proportion of the public funds known as the "surplus revenue." A committee of three was raised to buy or bargain for a town farm. At the usual April meeting Elder Hooper moved "that the surplus money received by the town of Paris shall be disposed of by dividing it per capita among the inhabitants of the town, each head of a family to give his note for the amount his family shall receive, the note to be left with the town treasurer and paid, should the payment ever be demanded by the United States: provided that town paupers shall not receive any part of the revenue, but that their proportion shall go to the town." This motion was amended by R. K. Goodenow so far as to dispense with notes, the recipients only being required to give receipts, and as amended, was passed, 126 to 83. At a subsequent meeting a set of several resolutions was offered by Elder Hooper providing rules for the distribution of the surplus revenue, and were passed 136 to 112. Rufus Stowell, Micah Walker and Isaiah Whittemore were chosen a committee to receive the money from the State. The subject was up at the next meeting. Mr. Goodenow's amendment was reconsidered and a note with sufficient sureties was required of every recipient of the surplus revenue. The question as it came before the several meetings, was quite sharply discussed, some wishing the money appropriated to the use of schools, some for general town purposes, but a majority wished to have it divided per capita, and it was so distributed. It was voted that future town meetings should be notified by posting a notice at Paris Hill, one at South Paris and one at Washburn's Mills. Voted to authorize the selectmen to contract with John Porter and George King to build a town house under the new meeting house for the sum of five hundred and fifty dollars. It was voted to repair the bridge over the Androscoggin river at the South Paris factory. Moses Dudley died in February. He was the son of the late Luther Dudley. Dr. Asaph Kittredge moved from North Paris to the Hill in January. Dr. Thomas H. Brown succeeded to the practice of the late Dr. Buck. He first took rooms at the house of Simeon Norris. Levi Stowell, Esq., Attorney at Law, moved from Dixfield to Paris this year.

The committee appointed to purchase a town farm reported that they had purchased the farm of Joel B. Thayer, including the services of himself and wife. The report was accepted and the doings of the committee ratified, 103 to 64. Voted to choose a committee of one from each religious society who shall ascertain where each man will have his money expended. Chose Luke Chase, James Deering, Ebenezer Drake, Sibley Chase, Luther Washburn and James Perry. Voted also that the committee receive the money now due from the town treasurer, and pay the same to their respective societies for the support of preaching. The governor vote this year stood for John Fairfield 367; for Edward Kent, 132. At the September meeting, it was voted to accept the town house and to allow John Porter $137.50, for brick which was not contained in his original contract. Mr. James Perry died Feb. 13th. He was a revolutionary soldier. Benj. Hammond died Feb. 28, aged 77. Josiah Smith formerly of Paris, died in Lincoln March 11, aged 71. Col. Wm. Ryerson died March 18, aged 68. The Union House was opened at the Hill by Nathan M. Marble. The 4th was celebrated this year. Prayer and remarks by Elder Hooper. Declaration of Independence read by Isaac Harlow, and oration by Charles Andrews. Dea. Caleb Prentiss died in October, aged 67. The Oxford County Temperance Association met at the Hill in October. Levi Whitman, Esq., presided and an address was delivered by Rev. Caleb B. Davis.

1839.

Eleazer Shaw was elected town clerk. He had previously lived in Woodstock and been clerk of that town. Among the highway surveyors was Wm. Swan, Jr., who had returned to this town after many years' residence in Woodstock. Rev. Caleb B. Davis had assumed the pastorate of the Baptist church and was chosen chairman of the school committee. The several town lines were perambulated and renewed this year by the selectmen. The Paris Hill Temperance Society met at the meeting house January 10th, and was addressed by Rev. M. Stockman. On the 26th of January there was a severe freshet. The saw mill owned by Simeon Cummings was carried away by the ice; the bridge near by also carried away. Mrs. Hannah (Standish) wife of Dea. Daniel Fobes died early this year. She was born in Duxbury, Mass., on Captain's Hill, and was a descendant of Miles Standish. Adam Turner died May 12, aged 70, and Col. Ebenezer Rawson, July 26, aged 77. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin of Calais, formerly of Paris, died in Texas, June 16.

$3000 were raised for roads, $2000 for town charges and $900 for schools. It was voted to petition the county commissioners for an alteration of the Snow's Falls road so that the location below the Falls may be on the east instead of the west side of the river. For Governor, John Fairfield, 378 votes; Edward Kent 136. For electors of President: the Democratic ticket 386 votes; the Whig ticket, 141. Lydia, widow of John Tuell, died Feb. 26, aged 90. Mrs. Charity, wife of Capt. Chandler Cushman, was killed by a horse August 11. She was returning from a lecture on Paris Hill and drove into a shed to get out of the rain. The shed was too low for her to sit upon the seat as she drove in, and she seated herself in the bottom of the wagon, in front of the seat, having her umbrella in her hand. The horse was frightened and kicked, she receiving the blow in her head. She died instantly. Joseph Besse died Aug. 18, aged 80.

Luther Washburn was allowed fifty-six dollars for money paid out in a suit against John Dean. The town refused to take measures to prevent Daniel Curtis from being set off from Paris to Woodstock; also half a lot of number 29 in the 4th range, that Thomas T. Lurvey owned. $3000 dollars were raised for roads, an extra $1000 for the Snow's Falls road, $1000 for town charges, $900 for schools and $300 for outstanding bills. A constitutional amendment providing for biennial elections and biennial sessions of the Legislature, was voted on this year, and resulted yeas 46, nays 246. On the question fixing the number of members of the Legislature at 151, the vote stood yeas 253, nays 14. At the meeting Sept. 20, the selectmen reported the building of 575 rods of the Snow's Falls road, and a bridge across Moose Pond stream; also that the road was nearly completed. For governor, John Fairfield had 370 votes.

Edward Kent 98 and Jeremiah Curtis 18. The latter was the candidate of the Liberty or anti-slavery party. John Gray died Aug. 30, aged 77. He had a family of 15 children, all of whom lived until the youngest was 30 years old. Mrs. John Gray died Oct. 30, aged 78. Mrs. Mary, wife of Jonathan Bemis, died Nov. 14, aged 78. A Washingtonian Total Abstinence Society was organized at the Hill with Benj. Walton as Secretary.

Voted that the income of the ministerial fund be distributed among the various religious societies according to the wishes of the legal voters. For Governor, John Fairfield had 309 votes, Edward Robinson 50, and James Appleton 14. Sept. 25th, Gilman Tuell's horse became frightened at the crossing of the east branch, above Elijah Swan's, and ran off the end of the bridge with the wagon, severely injuring Mr. Tuell and his sister who was with him, and killing his child. March 29, Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of Col. Ebenezer Rawson, died, aged 78. July 4th, the Washingtonian and Martha Washington Societies of South Paris and Norway met with those at the Hill and had a grand celebration. Two thousand people were addressed by Geo. F. Emery, Esq. The Washingtonian Society at North Paris was addressed by Hon. Charles Andrews. Dec. 17, died Elder James Hooper, aged 73.

1843.

Mr. Gilman Tuell having notified the town of the injuries he sustained on account of a defective bridge, the whole matter was left with a special committee consisting of Rufus K. Goodenow, Geo. F. Emery and Joseph G. Cole, and this committee was to report at the adjourned meeting. No report is on record. It was decided to rebuild the bridge near the woolen factory at South Paris, and the matter was left with the selectmen. The doctrine of Miller, predicting the second advent and the winding up of all earthly affairs was preached in town this year and created considerable excitement. A few people neglected to put in crops and others to harvest them, and the town authorities felt called upon to interfere. The delusion continued throughout the year and in some neighborhoods did much harm. Day after day was set for the second advent, ascension robes in some cases were prepared and many ridiculous performances were gone through with by those who embraced this creed. Mrs. Wm. Pidgin, late of Paris, died in Portland. She was the widow of Rev. Wm. Pidgin and was born in Draeut, Mass. Mrs. Sarah Twitchell died, aged 90 years. Gilbert Shaw died June 6, aged 71. Luther Brett died suddenly June 23, aged 72. Samuel Hammond died Oct. 19, aged 73.

At a meeting on the sixth day of May of the municipal officers, Nathan M. Marble and Geo. Bridgham were licensed as innholders and retailers of strong liquors, and Ansel Field and Jarvis C. Marble were licensed to retail strong liquors from their shops in Paris. At the annual election James Appleton had twenty-one votes, a slight gain for the anti-slavery party; Hugh J. Anderson had 352 and Edward Robinson 91. The treasurer of the town at the November town meeting, was directed to hire a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars to pay an execution held against the town by Gilman Tuell for damages growing out of accident before mentioned. The selectmen were made a committee to try and effect a settlement with Gilman Tuell, and also with Ebenezer Tuell for injury received by his daughter. The vote for electors of President stood, for the democratic ticket, 315 votes; for the whig, 92 and for the anti-slavery ticket, headed by Samuel Fessenden, 16 votes. The town lines were again perambulated and renewed.

Asa Perry, an early settler, died June 18, aged 88 years, and March 6th, died Mary, widow of Gen. Levi Hubbard, aged 80. Rebecca, relict of Benj. Hammond, died Feb. 12, aged 81. She was of Gloucester, Mass. Edmund Dean, formerly of Taunton and a Revolutionary soldier died Oct. 24th. Nov. 17th, Rachel, widow of Jonathan Shurtleff, aged 79.

At the annual meeting, Stephen Emery, Esq., moved as the sense of the town, that persons not exceeding three in number, be licensed by the selectmen, treasurer and clerk, to sell wine, brandy, rum and other strong liquors, who shall give satisfactory bonds as required by law, and that they shall not sell to any person for other than medicinal and mechanical purposes, and that said municipal officers be instructed to prosecute all violations of the license law; that such licensed persons shall keep a record of the names of persons to whom spirituous liquors are sold, with the date, kind of liquor and quantity sold, and that in licensing innholders and victuallers, it be especially stipulated in such license, that they shall not sell any rum, brandy, wine or other strong liquors for any purpose whatsoever. The motion prevailed. It was voted that the school committee be instructed not to visit any school in town at the expense of the town, unless requested to do so by the districts to settle difficulties, and if there should prove to be no difficulties to settle, the expense to be paid by the district. "Voted that the selectmen be requested, in behalf of the town, to take such measures as they shall deem legal and expedient to arrest the evils which attend some of our citizens professing a belief in Millerism, so called, and to avert the danger of such persons becoming a town charge." John Deering died July 26th, aged 84. Oct. 21st of this year, the house of Joseph Penley was entered in the night-time, and quite a large sum of money taken. Mr. Penley advertised his loss and addressed the burglar and thief through the columns of the Norway Advertiser, in a characteristic and unique manner. There was a mass temperance meeting at the Hill January 8th. Hon. Samuel F. Brown of Buckfield presided, and resolutions against the traffic in ardent spirits were introduced by R. K. Goodenow, discussed and passed. A railroad meeting was held at Bridgham's Hotel, South Paris, March 7th. Noah Lunt was arrested and taken before Judge Cole Apr. 2, charged with disturbing the peace by calling at persons' houses in the night time and preaching that "the church and the world were rejected of God." A severe hail storm about a mile in width passed through Paris, July 22, doing a great amount of damage to crops. Mrs. Abraham Pray died Dec. 11, aged 70.

The town passed the same vote with reference to the sale of liquors in town as was passed the previous year. The vote of the previous year relating to visiting schools by the committee, was rescinded. Voted to raise forty cents on each inhabitant for the support of schools, to be computed according to the last census. Repairs on the poor-farm buildings were provided for, to be conducted with "rigid economy." Voted that the selectmen and agent be a committee to settle or not to settle with Dr. Kittridge and Oliver H. Dyer, for injuries from defective ways, and with Gilman Tuell for the loss of his child. At a meeting in November, an agent was chosen to superintend the building of the bridge at Snow's Falls.

Asa Robinson died January 12th of this year: also January 18th, Benj. Cooper, aged 76. In January, the express carrying the English mails went through from Boston to Montreal, by the way of Portland, in 26 hours. The time required the previous year was 32 hours. Alfred Gates, formerly of Paris, died in Carroll, January 22, aged 81 years. A daily line of stages to Portland, was run by G. G. Waterhouse. Hannah, relict of Jacob Paine, died in Greenwood, aged 93. The farm buildings of Sullivan Andrews were burned Sept. 4th: loss $2,000. Daniel Cummings died Feb. 4, aged 66 years. Feb. 6th. Mrs. Tabitha Pearson died, aged 74.

The choice of school agents was referred to the several districts. At a subsequent meeting this vote was rescinded and school agents chosen for each district in town. $4000 were raised for the repair of roads, $2000 for the support of the poor and other town charges, and $1200 to pay outstanding debts against the town. The Governor vote this year stood, for John W. Dana, 297; for David Bronson, 54; for Samuel Fessenden, 65. The proposed constitutional amendments for electing governor, senators and representatives by a plurality instead of a majority vote, was defeated by about four to one. James Bowker, Esq., died May 16, aged 58 years. Elijah, son of Luther Washburn was killed in Boston by being run over by a team, aged 22. Mrs. Sally Brett died Oct. 16, aged 78 years. Abiezer Andrews died Dec. 21, aged 77.

Four thousand dollars were raised for highways, and voted that persons might pay their road taxes into the treasury within a time specified at the rate of fifty cents on the dollar. Joseph G. Cole was chosen a committee to investigate the finances of the town. The making of the Snow's Falls road was left in the care of the selectmen. The vote for Governor stood Dana (Dem.) 305; E. L. Hamlin (Whig) 62; Samuel Fessenden, (Free Soil) 67. For electors of President, the Democrats polled 281 votes; Whigs 72 and the Free soilers 95. The railroad leading towards Paris was completed during the year to Mechanic Falls. G. G. Waterhouse, proprietor of the stage house on Paris Hill was appointed conductor on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad. He had been a stage man for a long time, beginning as driver and afterwards becoming contractor. His appointment to the Railroad gave great satisfaction to his numerous friends in this vicinity. The discovery of gold in California created considerable excitement in Paris and vicinity and many were talking of making the long and dangerous journey round Cape Horn in search of the root of all evil. The political campaign this year was unusually exciting, and the election of Gen. Taylor to the presidency, a surprise to many. Sylvanus Robbins formerly of Plymouth, died Nov. 8, aged 85 years. Asa Thayer died Dec. 1, aged 81. The frame of the Oxford Normal Institute was raised Apr. 8. The question of the removal of the county buildings from Paris was agitated in the local papers during the summer largely growing out of the location of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad. Naomi, wife of Jesse Briggs, died May 9th, aged 80, and May 4, Mrs. Martha Bartlett, aged 93. Hannibal Hamlin was elected United States Senator in May, to fill out the term of John Fairfield, deceased, and in place of Wyman B. S. Moore, who had been appointed during the recess of the Legislature, by Gov. Dana. The vote in the House stood 93 to 45, and in the Senate, 23 to 4. News of peace with Mexico, reported in Paris in June, was received with satisfaction. Daniel Fobes died June 20, aged 75. Barn of Silas Maxim struck by lightning and burned July 13th. The Oxford Normal Institute met and chose a Board of Trustees of whom Hon. Stephen Emery stood first on the list, Oct. 7. The Buckfield Branch Railroad Company was organized in November. The body of Joseph Pratt was found in the river a short distance below Snow's Falls, Nov. 3d; supposed case of suicide. He was 67 years of age and had no relatives in Paris. The Oxford Normal Institute commenced its first term November 6, with Ebenezer P. Hinds as Principal.

Town voted to pay Aretas Mixer fifteen dollars for injury to his steer; to annex Benaiah Moody to District 17; chose the following a committee to investigate the town's finances: John Dennett, Charles Andrews and John Porter. Elbridge Gray obligated himself to collect the taxes in one year, at the rate of three cents on the dollar. The selectmen perambulated and renewed the town lines in the month of November. Among the deaths this year were the following of quite elderly people: January 4, Levi Rawson, aged 64. In January, Mary, wife of John Whitehead, aged 72. Feb., Hannah, wife of Silas Maxim, aged nearly 79 years. March 8th, Betsey Perry, aged 86. Dr. Aaron Young was this year appointed to teach the natural sciences, in the Normal Institute. James Hooper, formerly of Madbury, N. H., died May 29th, aged 65. August 2d, Polly B., widow of Elias Stowell, aged 77 years. Oct. 1, died John Daniels, aged 78. He was the son of John Daniels and a lad of twelve years when his father moved into this town.

The selectmen were empowered to divide school district number 25, if they thought best. $5000 raised for roads, $1100 for support of poor and other town charges and 40 cents per capita for schools. The treasurer was directed to collect all the interest due on the ministerial and school funds. The cars run to South Paris January 1st. Thursday May the 15th, the jail was broken open and three prisoners confined therein escaped. They were Otis Walker, John Reily and Aaron Fuller. They evidently had help from the outside as the solid granite which held the bolt was broken. Jesse Drew was jailor and offered a reward of one hundred dollars for their capture. Walker and Reily were retaken in Denmark the same week, but Fuller was never captured. Years afterward he returned to the county traveling as a clock repairer. He had formerly been a preacher. Among the deaths of people this year, were, July 4, Lucy Swift, aged 89; Mrs. Jane Dunham, wife of Eleazer Dunham, died in September, aged 76. She was a Bryant of Plympton, a niece of Solomon Bryant, our early settler. W. Huey was killed Sept. 13, while blasting on the line of the Railroad at Snow's Falls. The house of John A. Holmes ("Swearing John") was burned at South Paris, Oct. 28. The Rochester rappings began to excite some attention in town late in the year. Wm. Stearns died Nov. 25, aged 86, and Dec. 29th, John Whitehead, aged 71. The Insane Hospital and Maine State Prison were both burned during the year.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

ANOTHER BRIEF RETROSPECT.

In a former brief resume the subjects most referred to were "land grants," "surveys," "roads," "clearings," and other matters pertaining to pioneer life in the wilderness. But everything is now changed, and how changed! Only those who have passed through the transition period in a town's history, can fully realize it, although some idea can be formed by visiting our border settlements where new towns are yet springing up and are in every stage of development. Such new settlements may be found along much of our northern frontier and more especially in the great county of Aroostook. It is 1850, and pioneer life in Paris has long since ceased, and the sturdy woodsmen who broke the wilderness for us, and their faithful wives who shared their toils, their privations and hardships, have passed away. The second generation from the first settlers, sons and daughters who came with their parents into this wilderness, have also deceased, save here and there one who has lived beyond the period usually allotted to man, for the town has now been settled about seventy years. The active business men and women of Paris are now either of the third generation from the early settlers, the sons and daughters of those who came in later, or else they themselves have recently moved here from other places. There are many of this latter class, as the new names in the census of this year go to show.

While we should never forget the toils and privations endured by our forefathers in hewing out for us these pleasant homes, because should we forget their cost, they might be less valuable in our eyes, yet it is pleasant to turn from a contemplation of the rough scenes through which our history has hitherto necessarily taken us, to those pertaining more to civilized life; from the wide stretches of forest broken only here and there by a settler's little clearing, to the broad fields and meadows teeming with their rich harvests of grass and grain; from the few rough paths cut through the dark woods, to our broad and easy thoroughfares forming a net-work all over the town; from the low, log cabins and hovels of the settlers, to the well arranged and neatly painted homes of our farmers; from that condition of isolation if not of penury, that only the bare necessities of life could be obtained or afforded, to plenty and even luxurious living; from limited means of education and religious instruction, to conveniently constructed school houses, and funds and teachers in plenty, and in each quarter of the town, temples consecrated to the worship of God: in short, from all those conditions of danger, of drudgery, of exposure and want which all those must suffer who open up a new settlement in the wilderness and which render such an undertaking under the most favorable circumstances, so much to be dreaded and so hard to be endured, to those other and far different conditions that surround and embellish, and go to make up civilized life.

In the reception and transmission of intelligence, there has been a marked change. The post rider's horn has not been heard for many years: that was succeeded by the mail wagon, a veritable lumber cart, but a necessity when the mail matter had increased so that it could no longer be carried upon horse-back; following this, we had the larger and more commodious carriage resting upon thoroughbraces, and this was a most decided improvement over the old wagon, the body of which rested directly upon the axles: and lastly we had the coach, roomy, comfortable and even elegant, and with its frequent relays of horse, the journey to Portland or Augusta was no longer a very great hardship. These coaches came here from Portland three times a week, and we really felt that our connection with the outside world was quite complete. But in the year 1850, a greater change has taken place: the cars are running twice daily from Portland to South Paris and back, and the journey to the seaboard which had previously taken the best part of a day, can now be accomplished in a couple of hours. Almost since the first settlement of the town, our farmers have been in the habit of hauling their farm truck to Portland and exchanging it for family supplies: now the market has been brought as it were, to their very doors. The prices of farm products has thereby been greatly enhanced, and the cost of groceries and other supplies not produced on the farm, materially lessened. And with the cars, more wonderful still, came the electric telegraph. The cars have reached Paris and the road bed is being constructed through the town, and three years later, railway traffic will be opened the entire distance between the Atlantic ocean and the St. Lawrence River. The business of the country through which it passes has been completely revolutionized, and in all its branches must be adjusted to new conditions. Flourishing villages on the old stage lines will be deserted and speedily go to decay, while hamlets as if by magic, wil spring up at the stations of the railway. If the first settlers could only come back and revisit the scenes of former days, how would they open their eyes in astonishment at the gigantic changes which the inventive genius of man has wrought! Not one of them, not even Daniel Staples, once one of the greatest farmers in early Paris, cultivating a hundred or more broad acres, and wintering a hundred head of horned cattle, but who spent all his substance in experiments to perfect perpetual motion and died a town pauper, in his wildest flights of fancy, ever dreamed of coaches propelled by steam or intelligence transmitted by lightning. Yet in 1850, this is an accomplished fact, and right here in Paris too.

How different the journey between Watertown, Worcester, Sutton, Bridgewater, Middleboro', Plymouth, and Paris now, as compared with what it was when the first settlers came. They first journeyed to Boston and thence by sailing packet, to Falmouth or Yarmouth; or else they took the long and tedious overland journey, occupying several days. From Falmouth, they found passable roads to New Gloucester, but from that point to No. 4, the way lay through the wilderness, and the journey could only be made on foot or on horseback. Now the journey from any of the towns named, can be made in ease and comfort, in less than a day. These are indeed great improvements, but it cannot be denied that with them have come some things not so desirable. The acceleration of speed by the utilization of steam, has so diminished the distance between city and country, that they are placed, as it were, side by side, and the vices peculiar to the former are extended in a greater or less degree, to the latter. It brings among us also, to a greater extent than before, the fashions and follies of city life, more extravagant practices in dress and modes of living, so that the simple tastes and frugal habits of the early settlers, are in danger of being entirely abandoned and forgotten. But it is always so: the good never comes to us unmixed with evil:

Our duty in all such cases is plain; we must not be “overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.” We cannot if we would, stop the wheels of progress and the only way left for us is to try and adjust ourselves to whatever new conditions life’s changes may impose.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1851.

The selectmen were instructed to investigate the Snow's Falls road damaged by the railroad and see that the legal rights of the town were maintained. Ezekiel Jackson was allowed forty dollars for the loss of his horse from a defect in the Rawson bridge. Polla Rawson was permitted to pay fifty cents on the dollar in full for her highway tax for 1850. January 3, died Sarah Howe, aged 85, and March 22, in Lincoln, Deborah, widow of Dea. Josiah Smith, aged 81. They were among the early settlers of this town. Rev. Joseph Walker died April 11. He was a graduate of Bowdoin College and long the able and faithful minister at South Paris. April 15th occurred a very severe storm of snow and rain, doing considerable damage in town, and much more in other places. Jane, wife of Alva Shurtleff, died June 4, aged 64. Abraham Pray died June 21, aged 74. September 23d, there was a destructive fire at Norway village. Bennett's hotel, Dennison's store and other property to the amount of $15,000 were burned. It was very smoky on that and the following days. The fire was supposed to have been purposely set, and arrests were made.

1852.

Geo. L. Mellen was elected town clerk in place of Hiram Hubbard who had served for several years. The selectmen were instructed to require the town liquor agent to keep a list of all persons to whom he should sell liquors, the kind and quality sold and the price paid, and that he sell to no person not an inhabitant of the town: it was voted that no trader or tavern keeper should be licensed to sell liquor. For electors, the Democratic ticket polled 294 votes, the Whig 93, and the Free Soil 40. Thomas Clark died Feb. 12th, aged 72. He was formerly a bookseller in Portland, and had lived in Lisbon and Hebron before coming here. Silence, widow of Gilbert Shaw, and daughter of the late Eleazer Cole, died July 24th, aged 77. Mrs. Anna, widow of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin and daughter of Elijah Livermore, Esq., of Livermore, died August 25, aged 77 years. Hon. Sidney Perham was nominated for Clerk of the Courts, but declined to run. The son of Wm. M. Barton, formerly of Paris, was drowned at Oxford, Oct. 9. Another exciting political campaign came off this year, resulting in the defeat of the Whigs who had been in power four years.

Voted to build the newly laid road between Rufus Stowell's and the Brick store, and five hundred dollars were raised to be expended in material for a bridge; a committee was chosen to draft a plan for a bridge. John Cummings was set off from school district number six and annexed to the Bacon district in Greenwood. The whole number of votes for representative to the Legislature was 494, and Mark H. Dunnell had 297, and Geo. P. Hooper 197. April 1st, Mrs. Betsey, widow of the late Elder James Hooper died, aged 89 years. She was the daughter of Benj. Stowell, Esq., of Worcester, and her first husband was Reuben Hubbard, one of our early settlers. She was married to Mr. Hooper in 1802. June 3d, the dwelling house of Mrs. Nancy Packard on Paris Hill was struck by lightning and badly damaged. Several persons were in the house at the time but no one was seriously hurt.

The choice of school agents was left with the several districts, and 50 cents per capita were raised for the support of schools. Five hundred dollars were raised and placed in the hands of the bridge committee of last year. For Representative to Congress, John J. Perry had 284 votes, and Wm. K. Kimball 243. The lines of the town were again perambulated and renewed, in the month of October. Capt. Seth Morse died May 8, aged 90 years, 5 months. Sept. died Geo. King, aged 75. The dwelling house of Tristram Hersey of South Paris was burned Oct. 9th, under such circumstances as to leave no doubt that it was incendiary. Mr. Hersey had been a strong advocate of temperance and prohibition, and had taken an active part in the enforcement of the law. A call for a public meeting was issued, signed by Rufus S. Stevens, and others, over which Henry R. Parsons presided, and at which resolutions of sympathy for Mr. Hersey were passed, and denunciatory of the rascals who had caused his buildings to be fired. A committee was chosen to solicit subscriptions who pledged themselves to give one entire day each to the work. December 25, at 8 o'clock in the afternoon, a ball was fired into a room in the house of Moses Hammond, passing very near the head of Seth Sampson for whom it was no doubt intended. He had been making a vigorous war on the rum-sellers, and was attending court for that purpose, at the time he was fired upon. December 27th, the store of Stevens and Shurtleff at South Paris was broken into and property to the amount of two hundred dollars carried away. In the early part of the winter, Charles Davis sold the Stage House, on Paris Hill, to Ambrose Buck of Buckfield. Mr. John Kilbourne died aged 64. No one knew anything of his relatives or of his former place of residence. Benj. Chesley died in Lincoln, in December. He went from this town with others to open up a settlement there, when that region was a wilderness.

The business transacted at the March meeting was entirely routine. Asa Woodbury was chosen collector of taxes at $2\frac{1}{4}$ cents on the dollar. Elbridge Gray had been collector for a number of years. The selectmen were instructed to exercise their judgment with regard to a change in the location of the newly laid out road between Elias Stowell's and the Brick store. For Governor, Anson P. Morrill had 337 votes, and Samuel Wells 261. Several proposed amendments to the constitution were voted upon relating to electing certain officers by the people, and generally in the negative. This was the first time in its history, that the town voted otherwise than democratic in the election of Governor, and it has never voted democratic at the September election since. The Sons and Daughters of Freedom had a fair and levee at South Paris, January 9th and 10th. Rev. Caleb B. Davis died in Portland, January 12th, aged 47. He succeeded Elder Hooper in the pastorate of the Baptist church at the Hill, and was an able and efficient man. He did good work in the temperance field. May 20th, the dwelling house of Elbert Clifford was burned. Whitney Cummings of Sumner took charge of the jail in June. The great rum riot took place in Portland, June 4th and 5th, under Neal Dow's administration. One man was killed whose name was John Robbins. July 4th, South Paris had a grand temperance celebration. Mrs. Jenette Loring, wife of Hon. Stephen Emery, died Sept. 29, aged 55. A severe rain-storm occurred the first week in October. The Androscoggin rose seven feet, and all the low lands along its course were covered. Considerable damage was done to roads and bridges. Nov. 4th, Mrs. L. D. Moore was fatally burned at Norway. David Bolster, son of our early settler died at Mechanic Falls, aged 73.

Henry E. Hammond was elected clerk in the place of Charles T.

Mellen. Benaiah Dow, for school purposes, was set on to Woodstock. Charles Bemis took the taxes to collect at 2 per cent. Five hundred dollars were raised to repair bridges, and four hundred to open the road from the King school house to Paris Cape. For Governor, Hannibal Hamlin had 394 votes, and Samuel Wells 227. For electors of President, the Republican ticket polled 398 votes, and the Democratic, 174. Widow Jemima Robinson died January 30th, aged 81. She was a Haskell of New Gloucester, and the widow of Stephen Robinson who died many years before. In February, Mrs. Isabel Woodward died at South Paris, aged 90. April 29th, Samuel King aged 85. He came quite early into town and had been a prominent citizen. Widow Hannah Conn died at the north part of the town, in April, aged over 90 years. She was a sister of Asa Barrows, early in this town, and widow of Jonathan Conn of New Hampshire, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and who died at Hamlin's Gore some sixteen years before. In June, A. J. Blake, formerly of Paris, was murdered in California. His age was 26. Bartholomew Cushman, formerly of this town, died in Woodstock March 17, aged 80. Simon Fickett was drowned at West Paris, the first of October. He owned a mill there, and there having been a heavy fall of rain, he stood by the river and was stooping forward trying to measure the depth of the water, when he lost his balance and fell in. He floated down the stream for several rods in sight of persons who were on the bank, but all efforts to reach him were unavailing. He moved into town a few years before, from Woodstock, and was an enterprising and energetic citizen. The dwelling house of Darius Fobes was burned Nov. 23d. The political campaign this year was unusually exciting. The newly organized republican party run John C. Fremont and the democrats James Buchanan. The democrats were triumphant.

Five thousand dollars raised for the repair of roads, tax payers to have the privilege of paying 58 cents on the dollar in cash, if they prefer. Voted to have the reports of the selectmen and overseers printed together and distributed among the taxpayers. Raised $800 to open the road from Hebron to South Paris, and $300 to repair the bridge at North Paris. A meeting of the county commissioners was held in Buckfield in August, to consider the matter of a new road from Buckfield to South Paris. Lot M. Morrill for Governor had 368 votes, and Mannasseh H. Smith, 220. A new jailor's house was built by the county commissioners and finished early in the year. The first term of Paris Hill Academy was commenced in March by Oscar D. Grover, A. B., of Bethel as principal. Elias Partridge died March 6th, aged 91 years: Abigail, wife of Stephen Paine, died Feb. 14, aged 76. March 26th, Mrs. Keziah, widow of Luke Ryerson died, aged 86. March 24, Mrs. Joseph Sturtevant, aged 88. In April, the body of Anthony Smith of Norway was found in an out of the way place near South Paris, where it was supposed to have lain for two weeks. Mrs. Sarah, wife of Samuel Bryant of Woodstock, died from the effects of burns, May 14th. She was formerly Sarah Jordan of Paris, and Mr. Bryant was her fourth husband. The following additional deaths of old people occurred this year: June 21, the widow of Benj. Cooper aged 88: David Marshall, aged 80. He was the son of Moses Marshall, and was with his parents when they made their escape from the Indians in Bethel, in 1781, and on their way, spent several days at Jackson's camp in Paris. Polly, widow of Geo. King died, aged 76. Aug. 17, died Caleb Fuller, aged 86½ years. He was one of the early settlers and came from Plymouth County, Mass. The Congregational Society at South Paris, built a parsonage this year. Eben Thayer fell from a barn and died from the effects of his injuries, Sept. 25. His age was 60. Dec. 6th, Deborah Drake, widow of Dea. William Berry, died near West Paris, aged 72. Dec. 24, Algernon Sidney, son of Hon. Rufus K. Goodenow, died at Buenos Ayres.

It was voted to dispense with a superintending school committee and elect a supervisor of schools. Seventy-five cents on the dollar, cash, was permitted to be paid as an equivalent for the highway tax. Voted not to accept the report of the selectmen. Five hundred dollars raised for the repair of the bridge at South Paris. A meeting was held in June to vote upon the act of the Legislature approved April 7, 1856, relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors, and upon the act approved March 25, 1858, for the suppression of drinking houses and tippling shops. The vote stood for the prohibitory law of 1858, 260; for the license law of 1856, 6. Collector's sales of land for non-payment of taxes, was recorded this year for the first time. Died Feb. 4th, Wm. Warren, aged 88 years. March 4th, Mehitable, widow of the late Samuel Perkins formerly of Middleboro', aged 88. The woolen factory at South Paris was taken out during the season, and a first class flour mill put in, in its place. Isaac Mann formerly of Randolph, Mass., died March 22, aged 74. May 21, Silas Maxim, one of the pioneers of the town, aged 92 years. April 24, Wm. Bent, another early settler aged 91 years. Job French died Sept. 9th, aged nearly 86. Alvah Hersey rebuilt the house burned last year, a fine building and finished late in the year. The editors of Maine made an excursion to Aroostook in September of this year, with the view of spreading before the people such information regarding that remote region as might conduce to its settlement. Dea. Cornelius Perkins died, aged 83.

Action was taken at a special meeting in February, with regard to the petition of Titus O. Brown and others of Norway, asking the Legislature to set off certain territory from Paris and annex the same to Norway, and strong resolutions were passed against it. A committee of three was chosen to remonstrate in the name of and in behalf of the town, against the proposed measure, and adopt such measures at the expense of the town to prevent the consummation of the project, as the exigencies of the town might require. $5,000 raised for roads, $2,000 for town expenses, $900 to complete the road from North Paris to Sumner, and $200 to commence the new road from South Paris to Buckfield. Resolutions were passed relating to the contest with Norway, and a committee, consisting of Alvah Black, R. S. Stevens and Richard T. Lurvey, appointed to resist the passage of the bill through the House, it having already passed the Senate, and in case it should become a law, to take measures for having the wrong redressed by the next Legislature. The selectmen and school committee were instructed to have their annual reports printed and ready for distribution, one week before the annual meeting. A meeting was held in June to vote on the act to aid the Aroostook railroad company. Approved April 4, 1859. The vote stood, for the act, 8; against the act, 163.

Hon. Sidney Perham having been elected, was sworn in as Clerk of the Courts, January 1. The deaths of aged people in the early part of this year were, Feb. 14, Mrs. Peter Chase, aged 80; May 15, Gershom Cole, aged 79; June 7, at South Paris, Capt. Stephen Pratt, born in Middleboro', Mass., aged 80. A Mount Vernon Association was formed by the ladies this year, the object being to raise funds for the purchase and care of the Washington place at Mount Vernon, Va. Mrs. Arabella Carter was at the head of the organization here, and many of the ladies in the town became members. John Hart, son of Henry E. Prentiss of Bangor, formerly of this town, died at the Insane Hospital, Augusta, July 3, aged 21. He was a medical student, and was there assisting the superintendent and studying the special treatment required there. He was a graduate of Union College, and a young man of great promise. Moses Twitchell died Sept. 9, aged 80. James Daniels died in Bethel, Sept. 23, aged 81. He was a son of our early settler, John Daniels. Sept. 11, Stephen Paine died, aged 82. Oct. 6, Wm. Clark Whitney died at Norway. He came to Paris from Worcester with the early settlers, but soon moved to Norway. The Universalist Chapel at Paris Hill was dedicated Oct. 9.

Eighteen hundred dollars were raised for schools, $2,500 for poor and other town charges, $4,000 for roads, $500 for the road at West Paris, and $500 for the mountain road. The proprietors of the Baptist meeting house were permitted to put a furnace in the east end of the town house. John Bird of Norway, was permitted to be annexed to school district Number 3. Another series of resolutions was passed with regard to the Norway "land grab," the bill having become a law in 1859, and the Legislature of 1860 having refused to restore the territory to Paris, and a committee consisting of Alvah Black, Rufus S. Stevens and Wm. A. Rust, was appointed to prepare and present the petition of the town to the Legislature of 1861, asking that justice might be done them, and to take such measures relating thereto, as might be considered necessary. At a meeting in June, it was voted to discontinue the new road laid out near Locke's Mill at West Paris, and repair the old road and bridge at that place. Israel Washburn, Jr., received 410 votes and Ephraim K. Smart, 252. Republican electoral ticket polled 413 votes and the Democratic, 175. January 17, died Merrill Chase, aged 87. He was the father of Alden Chase, Register of Deeds, and formerly of Woodstock. Dea. Isaac Mann, formerly of Randolph, died March 21, aged 74. He had been a Deacon of the Baptist Church over 25 years. Timothy Chase died Feb. 15, aged 76. A saw mill was put in operation by Woodbury, Phelps & Co., at South Paris, this season. Mrs. Mary, widow of Col. Simeon Cummings, died Sept. 25, aged 71. Politics ran very high this year, and in the national election the Republican party was victorious.

1861.

The Legislature of this year adjusted by compromise the law case between Paris and Norway, so that Paris was fairly satisfied. At the March meeting, a resolve was passed asking the selectmen for a statement of the expenses involved in the case, to be made at the next annual meeting, and also for a particular statement of the town's liquor agency. A series of resolutions was adopted, "hailing with hearty satisfaction the act of the Legislature in restoring the territory set off in 1859," and tendering the thanks of the town to those members especially who, by their speeches contributed so largely to the success which had attended the efforts of the town's committee. A meeting was held in June to see what action would be taken for the support of the families of those who had enlisted and gone to the war. The selectmen were fully empowered to furnish necessary supplies to such families, and also to the families of those who should enlist within the year. Widow Lydia Briggs died at No. Paris, March 8, aged 84. She was the widow of Luther Briggs, formerly of Paris, and daughter of Solomon Bryant, our early settler. Jonas Cummings died, aged 80, and Phineas Stearns, aged 68. The breaking out of the war of the rebellion created intense excitement here and elsewhere, and the loyal spirit developed in Paris was such as her sons will have reason to be proud of in all time to come. Public meetings, flag-raising and recruiting were the order of the day, and the highly satisfactory result may be found in the chapter devoted to the subject. Sept. 5, Victoria Dunn, daughter of David Dunn of Oxford, was run over and killed by the cars, at South Paris. Supposed suicide. Wm. Walker died Nov. 2, aged 85.

Six thousand dollars were raised for roads, $1,700 for schools and $1,500 for poor, etc. The selectmen were authorized to continue assistance to the families of soldiers. Voted to pay the Moderator $3.00, and David Jordan and Elbridge Gray $1.00 each for keeping order as constables. A special meeting was called in March to take action upon a project of Francis Whitman, to have certain Paris territory annexed to Norway, and Alvah Black was chosen a committee to resist the attempt, should it be made, and it was voted as the sense of the meeting, that should the project be pressed, the committee should give Norway legal notice and petition the Legislature for a restoration of the old line between the two towns. A special meeting was held in July to see about raising money for bounties for soldiers that should enlist on the quota of Paris. Voted to instruct the selectmen to raise $3,100 for the purposes indicated in the call, and that one hundred dollars be paid to each soldier who shall enlist on the Paris quota under the last call, and the three Captains of the Militia in town be appointed a recruiting committee. At a meeting in August, it was voted to pay $100 to each volunteer, and in case a draft should be resorted to, to pay $100 to each drafted man: it was also voted to pay $100 to each enlisted man for nine months, under the last call. At a meeting Sept. 1, twenty dollars additional bounty was voted to each man that would enlist on the quota of Paris, under the last call for troops, and the selectmen and treasurer were instructed to issue town scrip to the amount of $5,100, in notes of $100 each, payable in one, two and three years, with interest annually, to be sold at its face value. A committee of ten was chosen to warn out the several companies of Militia and notify the inhabitants of Paris to meet at South Paris, Saturday, Sept. 6, at 1 o'clock P. M. The following were the committee: E. P. Chase, A. C. Russell, B. W. Bryant, Alvah Black, A. W. Stearns, Thos. C. Cushman, S. R. Carter, Wm. A. Rust and Geo. F. Hammond. Among the deaths were Simeon Walton, March 9, aged 83; in Lincoln, May 18, Mary P. Chesley, formerly of Paris. May 25, Cushman Ryerson. James Dennett's stable at South Paris was burned in November. February 25 of this year, there was a very severe gale, which unroofed many buildings: the court house chimney was blown down, crushing through the roof and doing considerable damage.

The proceedings of the spring meeting were of the usual character. At a meeting in July it was voted to pay drafted men or their substitutes three hundred dollars when mustered into the United States' service. At a meeting in November, it was voted that the town pay three hundred dollars to each person who would volunteer on the quota of Paris, under the last call for troops, to be paid either in money or town scrip. The terrible war was the all absorbing topic. The year previous, with its second Bull Run defeat, the loss of many men and several excellent officers, the nearly drawn battle of Antietam, the loss at Aldie, and numerous reverses in the west, had been one of discouragement, but at the close of this year affairs were looking brighter. The highest wave of the rebellion had been met by the union forces at Gettysburg, and the tide turned back never to return. The Mississippi had been opened to the sea, and the western conqueror who had the confidence of the country, was coming to lead the old army of the Potomac to victory. Among the deaths of elderly people this year, was that of Hon. Rufus K. Goodenow, March 24th, aged 73; Caleb Cushman, Feb. 13th, aged 79; Ezra Hammond, March 22, aged 66; and Caleb Perry, August 25, aged 70. January 19, Stephen Chandler was found dead in his barn-yard; supposed heart disease; October Henry E. Prentiss presented School District No. 16, a library; this was the district in which he attended school.

Voted to raise $1300 to pay the interest on the town debt. Voted that the law reports belonging to the town be deposited in the Oxford county law library for safe keeping. At a meeting August 22, the municipal officers were authorized to issue the scrip or notes of the town to an amount not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, and that the selectmen with one from each school district, be a committee to solicit the inhabitants to cash the same at par. At an adjourned meeting Aug. 25th, voted to raised $1375, for the purpose of enlisting soldiers to fill the quota of the town under the last call. This meeting was adjourned to Aug. 27th, when it was voted to pay $500 to any citizen of Paris who would enlist for three years. At this meeting the vote passed at a previous meeting with regard to issuing town scrip was reconsidered, and another and a similar one was passed. At the September meeting upon a resolve amending the constitution so as to allow soldiers of the volunteer service to vote wherever they might be, the vote stood 413 in favor and 150 opposed. The Republican electors of President received 421 votes, and the Democratic, 216. At a meeting in December, a committee consisting of H. N. Bolster, Hiram Hubbard and Peter C. Fickett, was chosen to canvas the town and see how much of the town scrip the inhabitants would take. Dec. 24th, a meeting was held and $900 raised for the purpose of enlisting men. The selectmen were authorized to procure forthwith soldiers enough to fill the present call, and for that purpose, to use all the money in their hands raised for the purpose, and to borrow a further sum not exceeding twelve thousand dollars; voted that it is the sense of this meeting that the selectmen give the enrolled men of the town a chance to put in substitutes, provided the town shall not thereby be subjected to any additional expense.

A heavy rain storm the last of November caused a sudden rise in the river, and resulted in considerable damage. The mill yard of F. L. Willis was swept entirely of lumber. At the annual meeting this year, Hiram Chase, Geo. O. Chase and Ezekiel Dammon with their estates were set off from School District No. 11, and annexed to No. 12. The selectmen were instructed not to license a liquor agent. Jonathan Starbird was set off from School District No. 15 and annexed to 8. Dr. Isaac Rounds having refused to qualify as school committee, F. T. Crommet was appointed in his place. Selectmen of Paris and Norway made a division of the Rumford road for the purpose of keeping it in repair. A special meeting was called Nov. 24th, to see what action the town would take in relation to the proposed removal of the county buildings. The selectmen were authorized to send an agent or agents to Augusta to oppose the removal.

Wm. Bent of South Paris died December 12, aged 79. March 19, Mary D., wife of F. C. Merrill, aged 46. In May, Oliver P. Cummings of Paris obtained a verdict of $15,708.33 against the Grand Trunk Railway, for injuries received March 6, 1875, while in the employ of the company as an engineer upon the train going from Lewiston to Portland. Mrs. Paulina Fobes died May 30, aged 77. Mrs. Cynthia Swift aged 77, died at South Paris, and June 17th, Mrs. Huldah Cummings, aged 74. Sunday evening July 21, a severe thunder shower passed over Paris Hill. The stable of Dr. T. H. Brown was struck, and that, with the house and other buildings, was consumed. Most of the personal property saved. The spire of the Universalist church was struck at the same time, and the south end of the church badly shattered. While Dr. Brown's house was burning, three other fires could be plainly seen in different directions, probably kindled by the electric bolts. Died in North Paris, July 31, Mrs. Thankful (Briggs), wife of Benaiah Moody, aged nearly 88; Aug. 13, Abigail, wife of Luther Stone, aged 64. The Odd Fellow's Hall at South Paris was built this year. Sept. 28, Austin Buck committed suicide at South Paris, by taking arsenic. Oct. 9th, a whirlwind passed through the town doing considerable damage to fruit trees. Oct. 11, the old Parsons barn at South Paris was burned, containing about 30 tons of hay belonging to different parties. Nov. 14, a Union Farmers' Club organized at Grange Hall, South Paris. Oct. 18, died Lucy B., widow of the late Cyprian Hall, aged 82; Dec. 22, Martha Greene, daughter of the late Joseph G. Cole, aged 42; Dec. 29, Eunice, wife of David Jordan, aged 72.

At its annual March meeting the town voted that the liquor agent be instructed to sell liquors to no one out of town, and to no one except on physician's prescriptions, during the year to come.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Elaborate Preparations.—Pleasant Weather and a Great Day for Paris.—Address of Welcome by Governor Perham.—Addresses on Various Subjects, Poems and Music.—Dinner in the Mammoth Tent.—Six to Eight Thousand People Fed.—Toasts and Responses.—Antiquarian Display.—Annals Closed.

Sunrise on Sept. 11th. was announced by the firing of a Paris centennial gun. From the first announcement to the close of daylight, the town was a scene of constant activity. Citizens of Paris and visitors from neighboring towns began to arrive on "the Hill" shortly after six o'clock, A. M., and before noon the crowd numbered about six thousand persons. The earliest visitors had the good fortune to note particularly the preparations which had been so carefully made for their reception. At the north end of the village, a streamer was drawn above and across the street, from Mr. Carter's to the Parris stand. Above Madame Carter's gate was the following inscription:

"The first frame house built in Paris. Erected April, 1789. The first 4th of July ever celebrated in Oxford county was upon these grounds, in 1789."*

Mr. S. R. Carter's house bore the inscription "erected in 1808." Over the entrance to the old grave yard, one read "Ancestors and friends, though dead, are not forgotten." Streamers floated across the streets from Miss C. C. Cummings's to the residence of Elbridge Fobes, and from Hawkes & Garland's store to the cottage of Mrs. Ann Brown. Mrs. Brown's house was elegantly decorated with flags and national emblems. The Baptist church was decorated with flags. Mr. L. B. Smith of Portland, a relative of Mrs. Wm. Chase, brought a large quantity of bunting to assist in decorating the Hamlin homestead, now the property of Mrs. Chase. In one line he placed English, French, Spanish, and German ensigns, which he had procured from vessels in Portland harbor. A large elm tree, in front of the house, was entwined with red, white and blue. This tree was marked, "The Hamlin Tree." It was planted by Hon.

*It is said that Dr. Samuel Taylor delivered the oration on this occasion and that he spoke from the head of a run-hog's-head.

Hannibal Hamlin, in 1820. A large United States flag was hung from the Union House to the old Bemis stand, and another floated from the Oxford Democrat Office. The hotels were both elaborately decorated, as were also the buildings of Mr. J. H. Rawson, and the Court House. Again, streamers crossed the head of Lincoln street, from Dr. Brown's to the Crocker homestead, and from Hon. Alvah Black's to Mr. J. T. Clark's. Ex-Governor Perham's buildings displayed a large number of beautiful flags, and the patriotic colors were also exhibited here, by illuminations in the evening. J. C. Marble's buildings were also finely decorated. At the new cemetery was the inscription, "We do not forget our honored dead." The "Common" and the tent were radiant with bright colored streamers and flags, while such mottoes as "Paris welcomes her sons and daughters," "1779. Paris. 1879." &c., were to be seen in every appropriate nook and corner. The decorations were very elaborate, and would have done credit to any city.

The veterans of the late war, met at South Paris, early in the morning, and there received the Portland Cadets and Ripley's Band. After marching through the village of South Paris, the companies broke ranks, and took carriages for Paris Hill. At the new cemetery, the military formed again, and marched to the village. Near the house of Jacob A. Daniels the militia was formed to receive the visiting company and the veterans. From this point, the whole military marched to the center of the village where the citizens were invited to "fall in" behind the militia. The invitation was accepted by but a small number, after which the company marched around "the square," with Ripley's Band playing inspiring airs during the march. The Portland Cadets acted as a guard of honor to the President of the day, who with other distinguished guests took part in the parade. The parade terminated before the tent, where the band, cadets, speakers and invited guests took positions upon the platform, while the seats were quickly filled by town's people and visitors.

Gov. Perham called the assembly to order in the following brief and appropriate address of welcome:

*"Ladies and Gentlemen; Native and adopted sons and daughters of Paris;
Brothers and sisters of a common parentage:*

In compliance with the request of a committee representing the citizens of the town, it becomes my pleasant duty to express their sentiments of welcome and congratulation.

We turn aside from our ordinary vocations to-day, to mark an epoch in the history of this grand old town. She has called home her sons and daughters and invited her friends to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of her settlement. We have come to recall the events of the past, and review the labors and sacrifices, the heroic virtue and the indomitable energy that characterized the early settlers of this town: to pay a fitting tribute of respect and affection to their memory: to express our gratitude for that firm, steady discipline and guidance by which they sought to prepare us for life's great duties, and our obligations for the wisdom and intelligent forethought that planted the institutions under which we are blessed to-day. In short, we come to recount the toils and achievements of a hundred years.

The town of Paris points with pride to a long list of sons and daughters who have gone out from us, and who by virtuous lives and noble deeds have honored the town that gave them birth, and added imperishable lustre to her name. Many of these have gone to their reward in the better land, and to many others we now have the pleasure of extending a cordial greeting and most hearty welcome to the scenes of their childhood, to our homes and our hearts, and the festivities of this occasion. Welcome, one and all! Thrice welcome to this joyous reunion of kindred spirits. And may the emotions that stir our hearts to-day inspire us to purer lives, to a more ardent patriotism and nobler endeavor."

Rev. Caleb Fuller of Hallowell, who had been invited to perform the duties of chaplain, did not arrive in season, and Dr. H. C. Estes of the village, in his stead, made a fervent prayer.

The President then introduced Hon. Horatio King of Washington, D. C., who delivered the opening historical address as follows:*

Friends and Fellow Citizens:

In the "History of the District of Maine," by James Sullivan, published in 1795, there is an interesting map, showing the location of the principal lakes and courses of the rivers in Maine, and giving the names of towns in those parts of the district then settled. Except along the coast and bays from the St. John to the Penobscot, there were less than half a dozen townships designated by name, and only comparatively few, marked and numbered, east of the Penobscot river. The portions which appeared then to be most thickly settled, lie on and between the Kennebec river and New Hampshire, and on the coast eastward from the Kennebec. There is a line indicating "those parts of the country most famous for being harrassed by the Indians, on and long after their first settlement." It runs from the coast a little west of Portsmouth, N. H., northerly to the source of Salmon river, thence northeasterly, taking in Newfield, Limerick, Limington, Gray, New Gloucester, Durham, Bowdoin and the section east of the Kennebec to the Damariscotta, thence southerly to the ocean. Our own town of Paris, whose oblong square is indicated by dotted lines, is not only nameless, but is not even numbered on the map. A winding line, showing the course of the Little Androscoggin, is all that appears upon its blank face. Directly at the north was "No. 3," lying next east of which was "Butterfield Slip," while the names of the two sections or townships adjoining what is now Paris on the northeast, were Butterfield, now Sumner, I think, and Bucktown, now Buckfield. Hebron, Otisfield and Bridgetown had been respectively so named but there was no Norway nor Waterford. Like Paris, whose name is believed to have been borrowed from the capital city of France, the territory of Norway stood waiting to be christened, while that of Waterford was known only as "old No. 5."

*Some portions of Mr. King's address will hereafter appear under their appropriate headings and are omitted here.

So much for the map. However, we know that Paris, which has been called Plantation No. 4, was incorporated on the 20th of June, 1793, and that white settlers made their appearance here as early as 1779, when, according to Williamson's History of Maine, the first trees were felled in town, and crops were taken from the land the ensuing year. He states that the town was granted by the government, in 1771, to Joshua Fuller and his associates. In his "Short History of the Town of Paris," published in my newspaper, the Jeffersonian, December 4th, 1830, Elder James Hooper, who was the first minister settled in this town, and who was ordained in 1795, states that this grant of June 11th, 1771, to "Joshua Fuller, of Watertown, Massachusetts, and his company," was "for services in the old French war."

On reference to the records of the original proprietors of the town, however, I have discovered that this date of June 11, 1771, is not strictly correct. While that is the date at which the grant of a township was made "to Capt. Joshua Fuller and his associates," the grant to them of the actual territory of Paris bears date February 11, 1773, and it expressly annuls the former grant, which, through a misconception of the pilot and committee sent to lay out the township, did not embrace the desired section. It also appears that, yet much further back, in February, 1735, the grant in the first instance, was made to Capt. Samuel Jackson and others, and that, owing to the fact that the township thus granted fell within the line of New Hampshire, it became necessary to change that grant for another to

Capt. Joshua Fuller and others, who acted either in their own right or as the representatives of the original grantees. Where Elder Hooper found his authority for saying the grant to them was for services in the old French war, I have not been able to ascertain. Nothing of the kind appears in the grant, to which are attached the following conditions, viz :

"The grantees (shall) within seven years settle Sixty Families in said Township, Build a House for the Publick Worship of God, and settle a Learned Protestant Minister, and Lay out one Sixty Fourth part of said Township for the first settled Minister, one sixty-fourth part for the use of the Ministry, one Sixty-fourth part for the use of Schools, and one Sixty-fourth part for the use of Harvard College forever: Provided it doth not exceed the Quantity aforementioned nor interfere with any former Grant."

Elder Hooper says the first trees that were felled in town, were cut by Mr. John Daniels, who was still living at the date of his history, and that the lot on which the first clearing was commenced included nearly all the village of Paris Hill, and was sold for an iron kettle. He says that the first corn raised in town was by Isaac Jackson and Lemuel Jackson, Jr., and that soon after this, the elder Lemuel Jackson came with his son Levi and his son-in-law, deacon John Willis, bringing what was then considered a handsome little fortune, about fourteen hundred dollars, which "greatly helped the settlement of the town."

Now, there is great doubt in respect to nearly every one of these statements. I have ascertained, I think, beyond question, that Lemuel Jackson was the first settler and made the first clearing in this town. The spot thus cleared lies just westerly of the old burying ground, a few rods south of which he built a log house, which was the first house built in town. It is very probable that Mr. Daniels assisted in making this clearing: and in respect to the story of the iron kettle, it is suggested that Mr. Daniels was in modern phrase a "squatter" on some lot here—that he was obliged to relinquish it, and that he received and accepted an iron kettle for the labor he had bestowed on the lot. Patience Willis, wife of deacon John Willis, was the first woman who came into this town, and Joseph Daniels was the first child born here. The first framed house erected in town was built in 1789 by Lemuel Jackson, and it is the same now occupied by Mrs. T. J. Carter. In this house three generations of the same family have been born: and what is most remarkable, in all this period of ninety years, there never has been but one death in the house, and that was of a hired woman, who came there out of health and died five days only after her arrival. Equally remarkable is it, perhaps, that only one couple have been married in that house, and they both came there to have the ceremony performed.

In my searches in the Congressional Library, I found in the records of the Maine Historical Society (to which I am indebted for many of the facts in this address), a diary kept by the Rev. Paul Coffin, a Congregational minister, who graduated at Harvard in 1759, and was ordained in 1763. It contains a brief account of missionary tours which he made through various parts of this State including the town of Paris, in the years 1796, 1797, 1798 and 1800. The interest of the items relating to this town induced me to transcribe them as follows:

1796, June 25. Paris. From Rustfield to this we crossed Little Androscoggin. Here is a predestinarian society of Baptists under a Mr. Hooper. 'Tis a good place. The clover and herdsgrass were headed in the road.

26th. Sabbath. Preached all day from John xv:14. to about three hundred hearers, very attentive, decently dressed and well behaved, making the largest and most hopeful assembly to which I had yet spoken. We met in a barn of Capt. Bolster's. He is sociable and very hospitable. Rode after meeting to Hebron, and put up with a Mr. Bass [Bearce]. This place like all the rest, has some Baptists. Mr. Bass [Bearce] would give two hundred dollars with all his heart to see the town united under a Congregational minister. No hopes of it! Just so [he distressingly adds] in the rich township of Paris.

1797, Sept. 2. Rustfield, alias Norway. Grasshoppers here and at Philips' Gore and Paris, hurtful. Rode to Paris, and found all friends well, particularly merchant Prentiss and Capt. Bolster.

1st Sabbath, September 3. Norway and Paris. Preached at Paris from Matt. i:21 and Mark xv:15, 16; and then at Norway, from Jeremiah vii:22, 23. At Paris the Baptists heard their minister Hooper, and the Methodists heard a Stoneham. So that I had only about one hundred hearers, very attentive and respectful. Paris would make a fine parish if united. Rustfield, Cummings' Gore and Lee's Grant are incorporated or made a town, called Norway. Capt. Rust and his lady rode to Paris in a chaise, and heard two sermons.

1798, Aug. 19. 1st Sabbath. Preached at Paris, two sermons from Psalm lxxiv:10 and two texts more; and one sermon at Norway, from Prov. v:22, 23.

Aug. 26. Preached at the house of David Andrews in Paris. With him, a good man, I had much religious discourse. My text was 2d Timothy, iii:14, 15.

21. Called at Seth Carpenter's and gave counsel to his wife, and Taylor's sermons. Visited the wife of John Nason, and gave her Hemmenway's sermons. Counseled Abraham Bolster's wife and gave her Taylor's sermons. [It is gratifying to see that the husbands did not appear to need counsel! or, are we to infer that they were sin-hardened?]

1800, Aug. 29. Norway. Paris. Rode to Paris, the weather still dry and warm. Went to David Andrews' and preached to a serious audience from Acts xxiv:25.

Aug. 30. Saturday. Paris. Rode back to the centre of Paris and put up with Daniel Stowell, Esq.

Aug. 31. 2d Sabbath. Paris. Preached at the house of the Squire, from Luke xvi:29-31. The audience was small by reason of rain, which fell with small intermission from 5 A. M. to 4 P. M., a most seasonable and refreshing shower. Three weeks before this exactly, it rained all day at Buxton. The Squire has a beautiful situation, very central, of five hundred acres of rich land. His house has a stoop and appears well. Hooper, the Baptist minister of the place, heard me in the afternoon, and conversed some time, with some judgment and apparent candor.

The following from the proprietors' records may be of interest :

A particular account of the Necessarys the Committee Purchased for clearing the Road through No. 4 Township and their expenses upon the road to and from said Township, (viz:)

To 200 lbs. of Pork at 15s.,	£150, 0

The amount of expenses, on the road to and from the township, is stated at £302, 11s. Among the items are the following :

Paid at Davises, New Gloucester,	£5, 2
“ for a lamb,	6, 6
“ Keeping our horses,	15, 18

The explanation of the apparently fabulous prices of the various articles in this account may be found, doubtless, in the fact that it was stated in continental money, and at a time, when one dollar of that money was worth only three cents eight mills—this being its current value in December, 1779, when the account was presented. Thus one peck of salt, for instance, at £2, 14s., continental currency, reckoned at five dollars to the pound, cost about fifty-four cents in gold : tea, at £5, 16s. per pound, cost about one dollar and ten cents in gold : rum, at £4, 16s., brought in gold about ninety-five cents a gallon—and so on.

According to a statement obtained at the U. S. Statistical bureau, a one dollar continental bill was worth, in October, 1777, ninety-one cents, one mill ; in December, 1777, seventy-five cents, four mills ; but in March, 1779, it had depreciated to ten cents, in April to nine cents, in June to seven cents, three mills, in September to five cents, five mills, in November to four cents, three mills, and in December to three cents, eight mills.

What Williamson says of the early settlers in Maine generally is undoubtedly true of those who fixed their location in this town. "To clear woodlands of their rugged incumbrances, and render them smooth for the plough and scythe and fit for human habitation, required a fortitude and persevering industry, which are never permitted to abate. The first settlers possessed these qualities in an eminent degree. Nor were their felicities all in prospect. Rough as the log house may appear to the eye of luxury, it was usually the sanctuary of virtue, of health, of character, and the birth place of many such as the world calls good and great. Even the merest wood cutter amidst his solitude, breathes a nectarine atmosphere and exults in his freedom, as he sees field added to field and cottage after cottage rise, until, the wilderness changes and brightens into towns, the products of honest adventure, and productive toil—the prospective dwelling place of prosperity in successive generations."

In an interesting paper, read by Mr. William Allen, before the Maine Historical Society, in 1855, on the early Sandy River Settlements in Franklin County, he said : "The common course of proceeding with beginners, was, first to cut down the trees on five or six acres the first year, burn the ground over and plant with corn the next year and build a log house ; cut down more trees, remove the family in before harvest time ; live on corn meal one year, raise wheat the third year and build a small barn ; raise English hay, wheat, rye, and corn the fourth year, and then they were in a way to live comfortably. After living seven years in a log house, every one had a right to build a framed house, if he could; they were then called old settlers. All who had nothing better than a log house, were by common consent bound to give one new settler two weeks' accommodation and board when moving in." Whether similar practices and rules prevailed in the early days of Paris, I am not advised.

* * * * *

This town is favored with a good number of water privileges, of more or less power, the larger being at South Paris, West Paris, Snow's Falls, and at two or three other points on the Little Androscoggin; and Stony brook, Smith's brook, and Moose pond stream are also utilized for mill purposes at several places. In his history of Norway, Mr. David Noyes says that during the early settlement of that town there was no grist mill in the place, and that settlers were obliged to go to Jackson's mill, in Paris, on the Stony brook, which he says was but a poor apology for a mill; or to what has been since called Ray's mill in what is now Otisfield, where they sometimes, in the winter, went on snow shoes with a bushel or two of grain on a hand sled.

Jackson's grist mill and a saw mill, the first in this town, were located on the Stony brook, and were built by Lemuel Jackson about 1783, prior to which the settlers were obliged to go for these accommodations to New Gloucester. Taking a bushel of corn or grain on his back, the sturdy pioneer made his way by a spotted line twenty-five or thirty miles through the forest to that town, had it ground, and in like manner, returned with his grist to his family. On one occasion when Mr. Peter Durell was proceeding through the woods on this errand, he was suddenly confronted by a huge bear, which disputed his passage until clubbed off by force of arms. I have this fact from my brother Alonzo, to whom it was related by Mr. Durell himself. In these days there were few roads in this section to admit of the passage of a horse, much less a wagon. Boards for a table-leaf or shelf, were lugged many miles upon the back; and it was long before horses, even for horseback riding, could be availed of to any great extent. Then, the women used often to ride behind the men, or they would take one or more of their children and travel long distances on horseback to visit their friends.

The population of this town appears to have been steadily on the increase, probably from its first settlement up to 1850; but the census of 1860 shows a decrease of fifty-five in the preceding ten years, and the falling off in the next decade was sixty-five, doubtless partly owing to the war of the rebellion. *By the census, the number of inhabitants of Paris was, in 1800, eight hundred and forty-four; in 1810, thirteen hundred and twenty; in 1820, eighteen hundred and ninety-four; in 1830, two thousand three hundred and seven; in 1840, two thousand four hundred and fifty-four; in 1850, two thousand eight hundred and eighty-two; in 1860, two thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven; and in 1870, two thousand seven hundred and sixty-five. We have not time to investigate the causes of this decrease; but I venture the opinion that a majority, at least, of our native citizens, who have left town to seek their fortunes in other places, would have been happier and better off, probably, in nearly every other respect, had they settled down contentedly at home.

History tells us that the earliest people of whom we have any record regarded everything ancient as venerable and sacred. When a Greek or Roman wished to say that anything was dear to him, he said, "That is ancient for me." We read also, that the ancient cities clung strongly to their past, because they found in the past all the motives as well as all the rules of their religion. "A city did not believe it had the right to allow anything to be forgotten, for everything in its history was connected with its worship." So, in founding a city, religious ceremonies of a marked character were observed. First, a sacrifice was offered, then a fire of brushwood was lighted, and as an act of purification, the companions of the chief each leaped through the flames. Next, in a small trench of a circular form, each person deposited a little earth brought from the country from which he had come, and in which he believed the souls of his ancestors were inclosed. On this spot an altar was set up and a fire lighted upon it. This was the holy fire of the city, the bounds of which were next marked by a furrow made with a copper plough-share, the plough being held by the founder in priestly robes and veiled head, chanting prayers, while his companions followed him, observing a religious silence.†

Although the first inhabitants of our town found its boundaries

*When the census of 1850 was taken, the railroad was under process of construction through this town, and nearly two hundred workmen were enumerated who had only a temporary residence here; this accounts for the apparent falling off in population in 1860.

†"The Ancient City," by Fustel de Coulanges.

traced to their hands and therefore had no need of special ceremonies to fix its limits, like the ancients, they gave heed to all the sacred memories of the past; and if they did not bring deposits of consecrated soil and kindle thereon their altar fires, many of them knelt in daily worship around the domestic hearth, and joined in the erection of temples to the living God. We, too, who are here to-day, entertain for our predecessors who have passed from us, feelings of respect not unmixed with brotherly friendship, and a love that can never cease. We, too, would gather up as far as in our power, the leading incidents attending the origin and progress of our town, as a portion of the history of our common country, interesting alike to ourselves and to our successors. At the close of this one hundred years, we come together with mutual greetings, thankful that our lot has been cast in a land of liberty, and in one of the most remarkable epochs of the world's history, fraught as it is with extraordinary developments in all the domain of human knowledge. What revolutions, what important changes in the affairs of nations, what wonderful discoveries, what ingenious and startling inventions have taken place within the recollection of many here present! Fortunate are we to have been so situated, and happy in having been spared to join in this celebration here in our native town. With one of our favorite authors, may we not truly say:

“There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born,
Where we lifted up our eyes on the splendors of the morn!
From the milk-white breast that warmed us; from the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o’er us, that will look on us no more.
There is no friend like the old friend who has shared our morning days!
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise!
Fame is the scentless flower, with gaudy crown of gold;
But Friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.”

And now, dear friends, ere we separate, let us swear allegiance anew, not only to our native town but to our whole beloved country. Resting on the constitution, let us see to it that only the worthy are allowed either to make or to administer our laws. Our only safety is in the virtue, integrity and constant watchfulness of the people, who should guard the ballot, the palladium of our liberties, with unceasing care, and hold as a traitor every person who shall in any manner attempt to abuse or corrupt it. Thus, with able, honest and patriotic statesmen for our rulers, we have everything to hope for, and nothing to fear.

Mr. King's address was followed by the singing of the following hymn, written by Miss Alice E. Maxim. The music for this hymn was composed by W. S. Ripley of Boston.

"GOD BLESS OUR NATIVE HILLS."

God bless our native hills!
We pray to Him who fills
Our souls with trust.
Our fathers' God! Thou hast
Our thanks for mercies past,
For good in years to be,
We humbly trust in Thee:
Thy ways are just.

God bless our native hills!
Green woods and sparkling rills,
This glorious day.
Wherever we may roam,
We find no place like home;
No other skies so fair,
Nor sweeter summer air,
Than here to-day.

Dear old hills! We love thee!
Each rock and flow'r and tree,
To us are dear.
When spring and song-birds come,
When summer roses bloom,
When autumn tints are seen,
Or winter reigns supreme,
Thou'rt ever dear.

God bless our native town!
Sweet mem'ries cluster round
Each hearth and home!
With willing hearts and hands
Our fathers tilled these lands,
Our mothers loved us here;
They lived to bless and cheer
In days ago.

God bless our native town!
Her sons with honors crown,
And blessings rare;
For centuries to come,
Make this the happy home
Of daughters good and pure,
In ways of virtue sure,
As true as fair.

God bless the dear old town!
 While angels looking down
 Send thoughts of love—
 From ancestors long gone
 To a bright heavenly home—
 From friends and kindred dear,
 Who once dwelt with us here
 In peace and love.

Hon. Geo. F. Emery of the Boston Post, then read a poem entitled,

OUR FAMOUS MEN.

As Time with wing unfettered flies
 Beneath these smiling, native skies,
 And ushers in th' centennial year,
 Recalling scenes to memory dear,
 And treading soil our fathers trod,
 We've gladly sung, thanks to our God—
 He, though unseen, their pathway made
 When first foundations here were laid;
 To doubtful step he showed the way,
 And by his grace we meet to-day.

Our love for country knows no bound,
 With all her varied riches crowned;
 New England has a special charm.
 For her our hearts are ever warm.
 But whereso'er our footsteps range,
 To points remote or regions strange,
 Our thoughts will linger near the hearth
 Associated with our birth.

When foreign footsteps reach our shore,
 Our country's wonders to explore,
 What well arrests th' observing mind
 Are commonwealths which here they find,
 Our towns well governed by the choice
 Of rulers by the public voice.
 These, scattered thick on every hand,
 Embrace the glory of our land.
 Of these, none have a better claim
 To share the honors of such fame,
 Than Paris, where to-day we stand,
 One of the noblest of the land.

Could we retrace a hundred years,
 Though freely mingling smiles with tears,
 We gladly would the path pursue,
 And Seventeen Seventy Nine renew.

Not that we now would substitute
The year of sowing for its fruit,
But rather better try to draw
The picture which our Jacksons saw.
We can conceive enough of this
To say 'twas drear enough for Willis.
Men of rare pluck they were, we know,
For all traditions tell us so;
Nor are we left alone to these,
For in our day there have been pleas,
Which demonstrate beyond a doubt
The Willis race was hard to rout.

But facts of earliest times I waive,
These from our orator we have;
My muse prefers just now to show,
What all Parisians ought to know,
That, as to men of large renown,
Ours is no doubt, the banner town;
The fact, I think, is very clear,
That Paris has, in this, no peer.
Not natives all were these I name,
For this is not what here I claim;
But what I do intend to say,
And can be proved on any day,
Embracing with our native sons
Those who have been adopted ones,
More men of note have issued here
Than can be seen or found elsewhere;
That is to say, remembering size,
And census of the town likewise.

By one consent our foremost son,
Who highest honors well has won,
Is he whose name need not be told—
To young 'tis known as well as old.
He little thought in school where sent,
He would become Vice-President,
Nor did he dream while sticking type,
For what he then was growing ripe—
Yet step by step, from day to day,
He onward pressed his upward way,
Until, save one, their highest prize
Awarded those bound high to rise,
Was by the sovereigns of the land
Placed cordially in Hamlin's hand.
How well this nation's gift was borne,
And all the laurels he has worn,

The muse of history will relate
 Much fuller at a later date,
 And justice done to you as well,
 When we shall hear from M. & L.

Proceeding now with rapid wing,
 Next on the roll is Mr. King;
 Horatio, too, played well his part,
 Since here he learned the printer's art.
 His mind while handling printer's sticks
 Quite freely ran to politics.
 His genius could not well be spanned
 By any town this side Portland;
 Hence there he flew with type and press,
 And left his townsmen in distress.
 But what then brought regret and pain,
 Proved for himself and them great gain;
 The path to honor it laid bare
 And in it all Parisians share.
 To Washington at last he goes,
 And honest skill and merit shows,
 Until, well worthy, there we see
 Horatio King our P. M. G.

Still passing on, the next we see
 A Senator in A. K. P.
 Of him, perhaps, it may be said,
 Among the living or the dead,
 More babies have for him been called
 Than any other in the world.
 This is enough to fix his place,
 And shows how well he ran his race.
 The highest place he went to fill,
 Was where he watched the Nation's Till;
 This well he did for many a year,
 As many know who listen here.

From Forty Eight to Fifty One
 H. Hamlin Senatorial honors won.
 From Fifty One for six years more,
 He similar honors likewise bore.
 From Fifty Seven to Sixty One,
 Another Senatorial race he run.
 And, as by use pure metals shine,
 In Eighteen Hundred Sixty Nine,
 The people served him in that way,
 And have so done down to this day.
 His Senatorial life, I ween,
 Has been the longest ever seen.

Next, passing on, th' observer sees
A roll unusual of M. C's.
The first in time if not in fame,
Was Hubbard Levi—a great name.
His father in the deadly fight
Fell on Quebec's embattled height,
A Captain brave, a loyal son,
As ever fame immortal won.
All old Parisians used to boast
The General was alone a host.
A man of pluck and nervous force,
No obstacle could block his course.
With generous heart and open hand
His operations all were planned.
Good cheer around a game of Loo,

Our fathers did not all eschew.
Tradition says he used to sip
Success inspired around his Flip:
That in his day 'twas understood
'Twas part of man's essential food,
Or, if not so, all men of note
Knew how it helped a major vote.
He in the year Eighteen Thirteen
Was in the national Congress seen.
He seldom spoke and never wrote,
But always was on hand to vote.
He fought the "Feds" with such a zest,
That you can well surmise the rest.
In Nation, State, or in the Town,
He always earned a just renown.

Next Enoch Lincoln, honored name,
And always worthy of his fame,
Stepped to the front by one consent,
And to the seventeenth Congress went:
Three times the people placed him there,
But he preferred the Governor's chair.
His race, though brief, was nobly run,
And brilliant as the mid-day sun.

Next Mr. Carter, Timothy J.,
And well remembered in our day,
Our people chose with great applause,
To help enact the nation's laws.
But this bright sun death's cloud obscured,
Though with an honored name assured.

Next on this list was Virgil D.,

As crisp and crank as e'er need be,
A Democrat from head to foot,
And hardest of the hard to boot.
His views he would not if he could Conceal, or shape to modern mould.
His friends he loved, his foes he fought,
But compromise his soul would not ;
He never learned how to recede,
But lived and died true to his creed.

In Eighteen Hundred Forty Three
Our Hamlin in the House we see.
In Forty Five again he goes,
And Forty Six until its close.

In Eighteen Forty Nine or so,
You sent to Congress Goodenow.
For planning well, and party skill,
None on the stage could him excel ;
A gallant Captain too he was,
And early served his country's cause.
Few of our townsmen better knew
On all occasions what to do.

Near by his side E. Gerry sat,
With whom we students used to spat
When poring over legal lore,
Until in zeal we almost swore.
Of course, when Bull his dogs set on,
His voice was loud for Oregon.
True to his faith E. G. still sticks,
Especially in politics.

In Eighteen Hundred Fifty One
We find another native son
In Congress, full of life and zeal,
And anxious differences to heal
"Tween North and South which then arose.
The plan of "Compromise" he chose.
No man deplored the Nation's snarls
More truly than our Andrews Charles.
His genial nature all esteemed ;
Indeed, he always rather seemed
Too winning for his party foes,
And that his major ballot shows.

Near sat by him another man
Who early was a young townsman,
One of the lucky, pushing sort
Which seldom from the goal come short ;

This need I not now stop to show,
 His name was Robert Goodenow.
 With Lincoln here he studied law,
 And learned of him how writs to draw.
 In all the paths of life he trod,
 He loved the race, and served his God.

In Eighteen Hundred Sixty One
 We there espy another son.
 He hailed, by birth, from Mexico,
 His name was Walton, Charles, you know,
 In starting off to play his part.
 He too learned here the printer's art.
 When weary of the printer's stick,
 He handled well his fiddle stick.
 For precedent for such relief
 If one's demanded in this brief,
 Examples many I could cite,
 Which clearly show that he was right.
 Thom. Jefferson will do for one.
 Of whom the world has said, "Well Done;"
 If one is sought beyond the sea,
 The name of Gladstone well serves me;
 I think the Judge if here about,
 Would say this case is well made out.
 But printing was not to his mind,
 To law he soon became inclined.
 And that turned out to be his forte,
 As all of learned when in his court.

Last on this list was Sidney Perham,
 The mortal enemy of rum.
 Although the boys nick-named him "Sid,"
 His sterling worth could not be hid.
 By his own merit he arose,
 And for three terms you gladly chose
 To send him to the Nation's seat.
 To speak and act as he thought meet.
 This, I believe, completes the roll,
 And now we'll take another stroll.

And yet before this point we leave,
 You'll all agree, as I believe,
 'Twould be unjust to them and you,
 Some candidates to shut from view.
 It often happens that the saint,
 Free from alloy and without taint,
 Is left far in the rear behind,

Though not from lack of worth or mind.
In fact, all saints, as you well know,
With the majority seldom go,
A doctrine in a day of need
Perhaps some here would like to plead.

While still we claim for our loved town
The highest prizes for renown,
And asking are there any more,
Our eyes stray off to Livermore.
The reason you can well divine,
For there we strike the Washburne line;
A race unequalled, so they say,
For push and pluck in any day.
If by good chance one we can claim,
Who bore that famous, honored name,
The game is up, and we have won,
The contest ended, and well done.
Well, Paris has a right to boast
Of one from this gigantic host.
Judge Ruel here once studied law,
And in the distance thought he saw
Congressional honors beckoning him.
He tries the course, and runs with vim—
But all in vain—they rule him out,
The Democrats for Ripley shout.

Then there was Vinton, full of fight,
For what he thought was just and right.
Of Free-soil troops he led the van,
Nor did his gun flash in the pan.
'Twas not his fault that he then failed,
For he from foes has never quailed.
What was the reason, ask you then?
His ranks were found too short of men.

Another worthy high to rise,
Though failing to attain the prize,
I think was Andrews, Sullivan.
By all consent a handsome man.
But this was not the only merit
Which from this town he did inherit;
His energy and enterprise
I need not stop to emphasize;
These are so well and largely known.
Success some day his head must crown.

Here, too, was Black, with record white,
And almost always in the right.

But he, like many a sainted one,
In Eighteen Seventy was outrun.
Almost eight thousand him stood by,
Though not enough to conquer Frye.
If others on this list should go,
I'll thank my friends to tell me so.
All names like these may well go down
To grace the annals of our town.

Of Marshals we have furnished two,
O'er whom there is so much ado,
By some thought dangerous at the polls,
By some required to watch the rolls.
But this is neither here nor there,
From politics I must forbear:
Enough, I think, we've had of late,
The appetite of all to sate.
Our first was Parris, Virgil D.,
Whose gay, blue coat we almost see.
The last was Kimball, William K.,
A gallant Colonel of our day.

But here we leave those high in station,
Who in their times have served the Nation,
And next, though briefly, I'll relate
The story of our men of State.
Yet, being still somewhat in doubt
Where some come in or should go out,
First I will mention among these,
Electors, if my hearers please.
These officers of high repute
Hold a position in dispute.
Some claim them to be national,
But this is thought irrational
By those who clamor for State Rights,
When needful in our party fights.
We'll compromise, my friends, to-day,
And let each man have his own way.
Electors Presidential three,
From Paris you and I can see.
The first was Chandler, Dr. Ben,
Who voted with the Adams men.
The next was Hubbard, Levi, General,
Who ran against the ticket Federal.
He cast his vote for Andrew J.,
And helped him well to win the day.
The last was Rufus Goodenow,
When "Tippecanoe and Tyler too,"

Became his party's rallying cry,
And had "hard cider" for the dry.
For Harrison, the records note,
He helped to throw Maine's first Whig vote.

Of Governors, we've furnished four,
And candidates for several more.
The first was Parris, Albion K.,
How popular I need not say;
In Eighteen Twenty Two he served,
The honor too he well deserved.
Then Lincoln graced the chair of State
From Twenty Six past Twenty Eight;
So famous was this noted son,
None ventured by his side to run.
In Fifty Seven succeeded him,
Our most distinguished H. Hamlin.
From Seventy One to Seventy Three,
Our worthy Perham next you see.

Two others ran without success,
Whose names were worthy, you'll confess,
For highest honors of the State,
And would have graced the Governor's seat.
First on this list, I think, was he,
Who, were he living, here would be.
He fondly loved his native town,

As his whole record well has shown,
He helped Mount Mica to explore,
And treasures found unknown before;
He for the Paris Tourmaline
Prepared the way its fame to win.
Elijah Hamlin led the Whigs
As well as when a youth the Jigs.
The only reason of his bluff,
Was that he gained not votes enough.
A fault not his, but of the folk
Who then adhered to J. K. Polk.
Democracy in this man's day,
Was always sure to have its way.
One other of our sons was run,
Tho' Governor's honors never won,
Ezekiel Holmes, the candidate
Selected for the chair of State.
By men who set a ball in motion,
Which set the Nation in commotion.
For Liberty they sang and shouted,
Until, at last, all foes were routed.

He and his friends led off the chase,
 But others closed and gained the race.
 Though ne'er pretending to be able
 To immortalize the "Breakfast Table,"
 He taught all how to reap and sow,
 In th' "Maine Farmer," years ago.

Pursuing still this fruitful theme,
 We next approach the Court Supreme.
 Our first grave Judge was A. K. P.,
 Whose name our townsmen often see.
 The next was Walton of our day,
 Of whom we all are proud to say.
 At least, such is my firm belief.
 He well deserves to be the chief.
 The last is Virgin, full of mirth,
 By one consent of solid worth.
 Once on the Hill, some years ago,
 As Academic records show,
 He taught the young and fresh idea
 How safely through the world to steer.
 His wife was kin to Stowell blood,
 As good as any since the flood.
 And, by the way, did you e'er know
 Judge Virgin the trombone did blow?
 Pray, are there any special laws,
 Which to the Bench a fiddler draws?
 Or any which, by dint of wind,
 A place upon it one can find?
 Then Paris might with truth well boast
 Of Judges sound, and quite a host,
 For fiddling, some were heard to say,
 Was all we did both night and day,
 And as to winds which always blow,
 This Hill beats all the world, we know.
 Judge Virgin once Reporter was,
 And made a Digest of our laws.

Two others of a lower sphere
 Resided most their lifetime here.
 The first was Cole, the late J. G.,
 A man of merit, too, was he:
 To him the public did concede
 The name of pattern Judge indeed.
 Succeeded him our Stephen E.,
 A man of precious memory
 To those, at least, who knew him best
 Before he reached his sacred rest.

His name is linked with many a cause,
Which, not securing wide applause,
Does aid and highly elevate
All that is noble in a State.
Among the first to well sustain
The cause so potent throughout Maine,
He gave his effort and his heart,
And acted well a brother's part.
The widows and the orphans too,
When Probate Judge, he kept in view.
From early life down to its end,
Sound learning found in him a friend.
To sacred song and art divine
His cultured taste did oft incline.
But I must cease these filial strains,
And pass to what for me remains.
Besides judicial honors borne,
(Let others say how nobly won.)
My honored sire, our annals say,
Attorney General was one day.

Next at the Senate Board step in,
And see who Presidents have been,
Presided once did Virgil D.,
And acting Governor, too, was he.
Judge Virgin also held that place,
Presiding well and with much grace.
The third and last found in this seat,
Whose merits need I not repeat,
Was Vinton, who in point of date,
Was President in seventy-eight.
Three Speakers too, I think, all told
Were chosen from our famous fold.
The first was Hamlin, Hannibal,
Who, all admit, presided well.
The next was Andrews, Charles by name,
Already mentioned in this roll of fame.
The next and last was Sidney P.,
Our worthy President whom we see.

Next, now descending one step more,
The Council Chamber we'll explore.
In Council of this noble State
Three of our townsmen had a seat.
The first we notice in this line
Was Hubbard, L., in twenty-nine.
The next was one for wealth renowned
And on hard money always sound.

His name was Crocker, T., for short,
 Who ready was to hold the fort,
 When men opposed his will or way
 Or sought to lead his friends astray.
 A useful man he was to State,
 From early morn till evening late
 He kept the Treasury in his eye
 And watched all comers "on the sly."
 One other filled a Council chair
 Whose name by his consent I bear.
 Of him suffice it now to say
 He in good faith well served his day.
 And still one more I call to mind,
 Whom on this list you all can find.
 'Tis Washburn, Reuel, named before,
 Who generally hailed from Livermore.
 His life was pure, and record fair
 Because he measured by the "square."

Thus far, my friends, you will have seen,
 Attention here has wholly been Confined to ranks of civil life—
 Not heroes of the bloody strife.
 Not many, as occurs to me,
 In gilded epaulets we see,
 And yet we ought not to ignore
 Our brave and gallant Commodore,
 Who in connection with his birth
 And service joined with solid worth,
 Both for himself and for our town
 Has justly earned a wide renown.
 His name is Phelps, our Thomas S.,
 Whose mother's, too, you now can guess.

S. stands for Stowell—name historic—
 Suggesting also the heroic.
 His mother sprang from Uncle Bill,
 Who lived and died below the Hill.
 In eighteen forty Phelps first learned
 How naval laurels could be earned,
 And from that year down to this day
 Has mingled in many a bloody fray.
 The Chiefs in Eighteen Sixty One,
 Foreseeing what must well be done,
 To organize with skill and care
 For what turned out no light affair,
 Chose him by ballot from the rest,
 Because of all they thought him best

To make a thorough, broad survey,
 That we might early win the day.
 Throughout the war, in bloody fight,
 He nobly battled for the right;
 The stars and stripes he proudly bore
 Until secession was no more.
 For details of the well-earned fame
 Which gathers o'er his honored name,
 I must refer you to the roll
 Found at our Nation's capital.

If others for this turgid rhyme
 Escape me at the present time,
 Whose gallant deeds deserve our thanks,
 And well might swell our honored ranks,
 Their names must for the nonce give way,
 To be rehearsed some other day.
 Just here, however, we see one
 Who also was a naval son.
 A surgeon whom most here have known,
 And long a doctor of our town.
 As justly famous for his wit,
 As for his skill, was Dr. Kit.
 Tho' when need be of quite stern mien,
 The Doctor was a joker keen.
 As such, he always was most ripe,
 When puffing from his lighted pipe.
 Besides conferring common fame,
 He gave us many a historic name.
 Why, he immortalized the Cape.
 The reasons now from me escape.
 He called the North our "Taunton Green,"
 Because the Thells there were seen.
 Why "Sucker Harbor" is so famed,
 To some of us need not be named.
 For when up there we fished for trout,
 'Twas naught but sucker and hornpout.
 Among those who this town well served,
 The Doctor's fame was well deserved.

Were not my time exhausted quite,
 And I at liberty to write
 What truly is within my heart,
 Of others who have played their part
 In paths well trod of high repute,
 While of life's honors in pursuit,
 I'd speak of many a worthy son
 Who County honors well have won.

Those of them born within this town
Or chosen from it for renown
By your kind leave I will point out,
While wandering briefly here about.

Of Sheriffs, Hamlin led the van,
A doctor skilled, a noble man,
Whose gates and doors were all ajar
To welcome strangers from afar;
The children's friend, as known by many,
For whom he always had a penny.
The memory of his virtues still
Is full of fragrance on the "Hill."

Of County Clerks, nine of thirteen Selected from this town have been.
Their names were Hamlin, Chandler, Clark,
And every one a man of mark.
Succeeding these was Goodenow,
Then Cole, who sometimes went by name of "Jo,"
Then Andrews, Charles, then Kimball Bill,
And last, not least, Black, with us still.

Of eight Recorders, only one
'Tis hardly fair to call our son,
But he, for thirty years and more
The office of Recorder bore,
A service never paralleled
By any who that office held.
Our Mellen was a genial soul
Whose merits all might well extol.

Of Probate Judges, four of ten
Have been selected from our men.
The first was Chandler, Benjamin,
Whose name already we have seen,
Then Emery S., then Rawson, L.,
Whose qualities I need not tell.
Last on this roll, drawn from this town,
Was worthy Doctor T. H. Brown.

Of Registers, six of fifteen,
In Probate desks from us you've seen.
The first was Clark, next J. G. Cole,
Found also on another roll.
Succeeded these, a man of skill,
The accurate and courteous Stowell.
Next comes my friend, John Goodenow,
A classmate, as perhaps you know.
The next one's name I choose to skip,

That hardly will escape my lip.
 The last, I think, was S. R. Carter.
 And none than him was ever smarter.

Of County Treasurers half almost,
 This town may be allowed to boast.
 First in this line was Hubbard, Levi,
 Whom none could skip if they should try.
 Then Major Mellen kept the purse,
 And County treasures did disburse.
 Then followed Stowell, "Squire" Levi,
 Whose name, of course, none will pass by.
 Another still who kept your treasure,
 And always did things by square measure,
 Was Marble N., who always fished
 A trout from any hole he wished.
 Then there was Pidgin, William A.,
 A journalist who ranks O. K.
 The sixth and last, who followed then,
 Was Shaw, now fishing after men.
 But I should be adjudged disloyal
 To overlook our Solon Royal,
 Who now just in from heated chase,
 Comes out ahead, and wins the race.

Of worthies many who in town
 In offices secured renown,
 I must omit for want of time
 To mention in familiar rhyme.
 Did that permit, I'd name D. D.'s
 Like Davis, Wilson and Estes.
 And King, whose life work and whose end
 Are famous as the Freedman's friend;
 And learned professors, at least three,
 Our Lyford, Vose, and Stephen E.,
 And Flora Barry, queen of song,
 And Dennett's name I would prolong.
 And Ripley, now near at your hand,
 The famous teacher of a band.
 Of men quite famous, let me say,
 Was Father Hooper, in his day.
 Few men of all of early days
 Had traits more worthy of our praise.
 The unbefriended and the poor
 Were always welcomed at his door.
 He also preached just what he thought,
 And by his hands his living wrought.
 Although not of the modern school

And never bound by iron rule,
He said and did what he deemed best,
And never cared to please the rest.
He always made his sermons short,
And best of nags he also bought,
A little wine for stomach's sake,
Like Timothy he used to take;
Nor was it done behind the door,
But often in the old red store,
To make him change or bend his will,
Was past the power of human skill.
Though in derision schools he held,
In native strength few him excelled.
He loved, and labored, for the town,
And in his day gained wide renown.

Of characters quite odd and rare,
Our native town had its full share.
Old Hector Fuller, grim and black,
Of timid children cleared the track.
Then there was witty Calvin Cole,
By right divine a jolly soul.
And Colburn, too, whose funny ways
Remind us of our boyhood days.
Among the queer ones we may note,
Ben. Walton of the "anecdote."
The man whose laugh might well be sung,
Was that strange fellow called Bill Young.
Old Uncle Job, the hermit, too,
Here naturally comes into view.
Were naked history my delight,
The names of many I could write,
Who when town-meeting day came round,
Were always early on the ground—
Some were the last to leave it, too,
As many a roguish boy well knew.
But those peculiar days are fled
And now are numbered with the dead.

The merchants who their marks have made,
And won success in marts of trade,
Such as our Shurtleff, Ambrose K.,
And several others of his day,
Like Deerings, Shaws, and many more,
Might worthily enlarge this score.
Of those who of this famous town,
For wealth have earned a wide renown,
Three names just now I can recall,

Perhaps the richest of them all,
First in this rank, a native son,
A million strong has fairly won,
Our Deering William, in the West,
And, of our men, one of the best,
It could not well be otherwise,
The "Judge's" son was sure to rise,
The second on this gilded roll,
Whom next we meet while on this stroll,
Though not a native, years ago,
Lived on the farm we call "Bisco,"
His name is Parker, Harvey D.,
Whom at the "Hub" you often see;
A prince of landlords, hard to beat,
Whose marble halls are on School Street,
The next in order, native son,
Who also other honors won,
Was Prentiss Henry, son of Harry,
Whom Abby Rawson here did marry,
Both names may well excite applause,
For generous aid to virtue's cause,
For lawyers, doctors, ministers,
And authors, teachers, editors,
And landlords, traders, and the rest,
Our town is noted for the best,
Mechanics skilled, and farmers famed,
Might also well to-day be named,
But I forbear—my time is gone,
And possibly your patience worn,
Yet I should be adjudged remiss,
On an occasion such as this,
Our mothers to exclude from view,
Of such rare gifts and graces too,
The matrons who this soil have trod,
Were of a genuine, royal blood,
They to society gave tone,
And here their queenly virtues shone,
All honor to their precious worth!
They to these famous sons gave birth,
Here maidens fair and sisters sweet
We were accustomed oft to greet,
While scenes so hallowed we recall,
Blessed be the memory of them all,
Now closing this my grateful task,
May not I one thing humbly ask?
Is there no duty to be done,

Before our race is fully run?
 A town whose scenery is so grand,
 Whose fathers, nobles of the land,
 With gifts by nature strong and rare
 Combined with wise, sagacious care,
 Impressed their stamp on all we've seen,
 And benefactors true have been,
 Deserves to have its history told
 And on immortal page enrolled.
 All that is worthy to be read
 Of both the living and the dead.

Rev. Dr. H. C. Estes read a paper giving a brief sketch of the churches and ministers in Paris, but as this will appear under the general head of Ecclesiastical History, it is omitted here.

EDUCATIONAL HISTORY.

Geo. A. Wilson, Esq., of South Paris, read the Educational History of Paris, as follows :

Ladies and Gentlemen :

I was requested by your centennial committee to prepare a brief address giving a History of Education in the town of Paris. I consented so to do, but at once found on attempting the same, that the history of education in this town from its earliest settlement to the present time, was a subject of such breadth and extent, and so intimately connected with all the religious and material growth and prosperity of the town, and required so much research and patient investigation, that it could not be fully treated in the few moments allotted to me in the exercises of the day. Therefore I shall but briefly touch upon a few of the most marked incidents, and in a general manner indicate the vast influence which the system of education adopted by our fathers has had, not only upon the fortunes of the individual citizens, but also upon the very life and growth of the town itself. In order to rightly understand the planting of that seed, which fell into such fruitful ground, and bore such a bountiful harvest, we ought to take a short glance at the first settlers of the town, see who they were, from whence they came, and what impress they left upon the lives and characters of those who have succeeded them; but we can only briefly say that they came from Watertown and adjacent towns in the State of Massachusetts, and were men of integrity, honesty, native ability and acquired education. It is rarely that any new country has such men for its founders. Coming in the prime of life and in the full strength of a sturdy manhood from the parent State of Massachusetts, they brought with them into the midst of this primeval forest, and then unbroken wilderness, that spirit of culture and patriotism and strong faith in the God given principles of freedom and religious liberty, which were the distinguishing characteristics of the citizens of that State. Descendants of those who had willingly exiled themselves from fatherland for conscience sake, descendants of those who had heroically endured dangers and privations, the mere mention of which to-day, might well cause the cheek of strong manhood to pale—to secure freedom for each man to worship God after the dictates of his own heart—themselves, many of them, fresh from that great conflict in which our nation was born, and in whose ears were still ringing the echoes of those glad bells which proclaimed Freedom and Independence over this broad land, they came with strong hands and brave hearts to their great enterprise,—and it is mainly to their forethought, sagacity and earnestness in building up the free school system in this town, that we owe our past success and present prosperity.

As we open the old record books and shake off from their leaves the dust of nearly a century and a half, (for the Proprietors' records begin in 1735) we are struck with the beauty of the penmanship, and the force and correctness of the language. Few records of the present day can at all compare with them, and as we further look and see the quaint expressions, strange to the ears of us to-day—such as "His most sacred Majesty," and "His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay," we are forcibly reminded of the flight of time, and strange thoughts and visions of the startling events which have occurred since the hand guided the pen over the smooth surface of this page, and the generations which have come and gone like the leaves of the forest, come thronging upon us; but we must press forward with our task. As I have said, the first grant of Plantation No. 4, as it was then termed, was made in 1735; but that location failed on account of its being found to be within the limits of New Hampshire, and it was not until 1773 that the Plantation was finally located where is now the town of Paris, and in 1779 the proprietors' road was cut through from near the easterly corner to the northwesterly corner, the centennial of which occurrence we celebrate to-day.

The Grant was on condition that the proprietors should within seven years settle sixty families, build a house for the public worship of God, and settle a Protestant minister, and lay out one-sixty-fourth part for the first settled minister, one-sixty-fourth part for the use of the ministry, one-sixty-fourth part for the use of a school, and one-sixty-fourth part for the use of Harvard College. These conditions were fulfilled except so far as the question of time entered into them, and when the grant was lotted out certain lots were set aside for the minister and ministry, and certain lots for a school. These remained unimproved for some years, until in 1799, we find an article in the warrant, to see if the town will devise some method to make the school land profitable. No action was taken under this article at the time, but at a subsequent meeting in 1804, the Selectmen were appointed a Committee to petition the General Court for leave to sell said lands. License was granted June 13, 1804, upon condition "that the net proceeds of the said sale be and shall forever continue to be vested in some of the public funds of the United States or of this commonwealth or mortgage of real estate, and the interest arising from the sale of the said school right, shall be applied towards the support of schools, and the interest arising from the sale of the ministerial right shall be applied towards the support of the ministry."

Previous to this, the Rev. James Hooper, the first settled minister of the town, had relinquished all his rights in two of said lots to the town. Under the above license, Ebenezer Rawson, Josiah Bisco and Levi Hubbard were appointed a committee of the town to make sale of the lands, and they were sold for $4530. This amount was invested, and the interest of about $3000 of this was applied generally by vote of town for the support of preaching, up to the year 1843, when John Porter, James Deering and Joseph G. Cole were appointed a committee to investigate the matter, and on their report, the whole amount was carried to the School Fund, and from that time to the present, the interest has been annually devoted to the support of schools. This was the origin of our present School Fund, and it constitutes a permanent fund for that purpose, with the exception that by some means unexplained by the records, the principal has been reduced to $3815.

The Plantation was settled quite rapidly after 1782, and in 1793 was incorporated as a town under the name of Paris. What were the advantages for schools during the 11 years prior to the incorporation is not recorded, and we are forced to rely upon tradition, which simply informs us that private schools were held at various houses and taught by some of the settlers. At the incorporation of the town, it was quite extensively settled, and it was divided into five school districts, although there were as yet no school houses in any of the districts. At the first town meeting, the clerk clearly records that it was voted to accept the School Districts as divided by the Selectmen in their report. He however fails to record what that report was, so that we are left somewhat in the dark as to what were the original limits of the districts. This record reminds me of a story which they tell of Dr. True of Bethel. They say the Dr. was riding through Paris, and on passing in the road by the house where Maj. Rufus Stowell used to reside, was looking about, (the Dr. always has his scientific eye open when traveling) when his attention was attracted by the huge bowlder still to be seen in the field to the northeast of the road. His curiosity was excited and he left his team and went up to examine it. On inspection he pronounced it one of the largest bowlders in this section of the country, and at once determined to write to the papers giving an account of this wonderful bowlder. Wishing to be very precise as to its height, he informed the public that it was about half as high as the white birch tree growing beside it, without giving the height of the tree. As white birch trees vary somewhat in their height, his description gave about the same idea of the height of the bowlder as the clerk's here gave of the boundaries of the district.

The record, however, gives the names of the five persons who were then elected School Agents, or Committee, as they were then termed. They were as follows:

Isaac Bolster, Abner Shaw, John Willis, Seth Carpenter, and M. B. Smith. As these were all well known citizens, we can easily decide the general location of the districts.

Gen. Isaac Bolster, who was the grandfather of the late Gideon Bolster, resided where Jos. G. Penley now lives, and his district must have embraced what is now No. 1, the Bolster District and also what is now the South Paris District. Abner Shaw lived in the Shaw neighborhood, and his district embraced the King District and the southeastern portion of the town. M. B. Smith, who was the great grandfather of Geo. S. Titcomb, resided on the farm where Freeland Swan now lives, and his district must have included all north of what is now South Paris and west of the river. John Willis resided on the Hill, in what was then called the Centre District, and Seth Carpenter in what is called now the Partridge District, including then all north of it. Up to 1800, the town raised fifty pounds a year for the support of schools. In 1800 they raised it to $400, and it increased gradually from that time forward. The $400 raised in 1800 must have been as large a sum, in proportion, as we raise now, for in 1801 and 1802 the question of dividing the town was seriously agitated, and was voted down twice. The last time, at a town meeting called for that purpose, and held Sept. 22d, 1802, when there was a large attendance, the vote stood 41 in favor, and 51 against a division of the town. We should judge from this, that there were about one hundred qualified voters in town then.

For the first twenty years, the question came up annually as to how the school money should be divided, and was very earnestly contested, as to whether it should be divided according to the sum paid by each district, or according to the number of families in each district. The parties seem to have been very nearly equally divided, as for a number of years they alternated—one party gaining the victory one year and the other the next. We can see that human nature was much the same in those days as it is now, for frequently the defeated party were not satisfied with their defeat and attempted a reconsideration of the vote, so that some years they voted on it four times before the matter was finally settled. It reminds one of the fierce struggles we often have over the momentous question whether the owner of a dog shall contribute one dollar towards the public Revenue or not. It was not until 1813 that the town finally settled down on dividing the money as now done according to the number of scholars between 4 and 21.

For the first ten years there were no well defined school districts, but they were changed from year to year as circumstances seemed to require. This state of affairs did not seem to work well, and in 1800, Capt. Daniel Stowell, Capt. Jairus Shaw, Abijah Hall, John Besse, Seth Carpenter, Abijah Warren, Col. Levi Hubbard, and Lieut. Jona. Bemis were appointed a committee to make a new division of the School Districts which when agreed upon should be decisive.

In those days they rarely trusted a committee to take any decisive steps without consulting and reporting to the town, and here they incorporated in the vote the declaration that their report should be agreed upon by the town before it should be binding. From some reason this committee did not make any report, but they seem to have attended to their duty, as in 1802, the districts were ten in number, but still without any recorded boundaries. The different agents were, for the Centre District, now the Hill—Benj. Hammond, the grandfather of Geo. F., and H. E. Hammond, who lived where H. E. Hammond now lives; for the southeast section of the town, Thomas Stevens, who lived where Elbert Clifford now resides; for the southwest part of the town, including South Paris, Joel Robinson, who lived on what is now the town farm; for the Hall neighborhood, Jonathan Shurtleff; for that part lying north of South Paris and west of the river, Joseph Swift, who lived in the house where John Stevens now resides; for the Partridge District, Seth Carpenter, who lived at the four corners, where E. E. Hanson formerly resided; for the section north of that, John Gray, father of Robert and Elbridge Gray, who lived where Sylvester Dean now lives; for the Stearns District—then called the Bemis District—Jonathan Bemis, the grandfather of Charles and David Bemis, who then lived on the place where the late Asaph Bird lived, but afterwards removed to the Hill; for the Harbor District, Seth Benson, the grandfather of our present Seth Benson, who lived just out of what is now the village of North Paris.

Thus matters went on until 1810, when the number of districts had increased to 14, and for the first time the numbers were recorded. They were as follows, still without any recorded bounds:

- Daniel Stowell, No. 1. He lived on the old Stowell farm.
- Lemuel Holmes, No. 2. This was the Whitehead District.
- Jairus Shaw, No. 3. Lived where Emmor Rawson lives.
- John Robinson, No. 4. On the Preston Robinson place.
- Jon'n Shurtleff, No. 5. Hall District, near where J. Churchill lives.
- Benj. Hammond, No. 6. Centre District.
- Job Lurvey, No. 7. Tuell District.
- Samuel Hammond, No. 8. No Paris.
- John Records, No. 9. S. E. corner. This District was nearly all afterwards set off into Hebron.
- Samuel King, No. 10. King District.
- Caleb Prentiss, No. 11. Mountain District, where Julius A. King lives.
- Benj. Cooper, No. 12. Whittemore District.
- Geo. Ryerson, No. 13. Partridge District.
- Simeon Walton, No. 14. Dean District.

I have been obliged to give the names thus at length, as the only means by which the districts could be identified. Still they do not seem to get the matter settled, for the very next year, 1811, the town voted for Capt. Jairus Shaw to look up the old plan of the town whereon the school districts have been divided, and fetch the same before the town at their next meeting. Thus matters remained generally until 1818, when No. 1 was divided, and the present No. 2 formed from a part thereof. From that time up to 1828, no great changes were made, but in that year a committee was again appointed to investigate the bounds of the districts, and they made their report, giving the limits and bounds of the 16 districts into which the town was then divided, which was entered upon the records, and the numbers given to the districts which they still retain, and now for the first time one could go to the records and ascertain the bounds of the districts. Only four districts have been added to that number up to the present time, and we now have twenty districts in town. At the first town meeting in 1793, it was voted that the inhabitants of each district shall build a school house, or otherwise provide a place for keeping their schools. No houses were however built for a number of years, and a variety of places were used for school rooms. In general, in summer, some convenient barn or other out-building was selected.

Thus, schools were held in Isaac Bolster's corn barn, also in a barn over in the Robinson neighborhood; also Wm. Swan, who is now 87, informs me that in his early youth he attended school in the barn on the Smith farm, now occupied by Freeland Swan. This barn was taken down and forms part of the stable connected with the residence of T. J. Whitehead, Esq. Caleb Swift, who is now 82, informs me that he attended school in a little shoemaker's shop, built by his brother, Joseph Swift on the Churchill farm, and that in winter the schools were sometimes kept in Smith's house, this house was removed to South Paris afterwards, and is the house where J. Curtis now lives; and sometimes in the house where Jos. Libby now resides. A school was kept for a number of years by Abijah Hall, father of Mrs. Charlotte Bolster, in his house, where John S. Barrows now lives. Schools were also held in various other parts of the town, and if we understand the matter rightly, children in those days considered it a great thing to have even such poor privileges as these, and did not have to be coaxed and driven to fine school houses with all the modern conveniences of books, maps, globes, &c. If any scholar within the sound of my voice thinks he or she is having a hard time of it, let him think of the poor advantages our fathers had, and the manner in which they used those advantages, and the great results which flowed therefrom, and take heart and courage and press forward.

During the first years of the town, an attempt was made on several occasions to have the town build some school houses as a town, but it always failed.

In 1800, the first school house in town was built in the Centre District, on the lot of land where the house of the late Thos. Crocker stands. Through the neglect of the committee to take a deed, the title failed, and the building was removed some years after to the lot where the brick school house now stands, on Lincoln street, the lot having been given by Lemuel Jackson. The old school house must have been completed in the Fall of 1800, for the town meetings which up to this time had been held at the house of Lemuel Jackson, in the Spring of 1801, were called at the Center school house. They continued to be held here up to Aug. 14, 1804, when the first town meeting was held in the meeting house just beside us. In August, 1801, the Selectmen issued a warrant to Edward Andrews to call a meeting of School District No. 9, (as then numbered) to meet at the house of Job Lurvey to see if they would build a school house. There is no record of any action under this warrant, and we conclude no action was taken under it.

The first reliable intelligence of any other school house after this, is mention made in 1805, in laying out a road; that it starts nearly opposite the school house near Lieut. Samuel King's. This is in the King District, and the present house there, stands on nearly the same location as the original house. In the same year, 1805, a school house was built in the Bemis District, now the Stearns District, as we find in 1806, at both the March and September meetings of the town, Lemuel Jackson applied to the town to see what they would do about relieving him on account of his having been taxed in the Bemis District for a school house. The record does not state the grounds of his application, but on both occasions the town gave him leave to retire. School houses were erected quite rapidly after this, District No. 1 building one at the fork of the road where the old meeting house afterwards stood. The school house was removed near to the Knight road, so-called, afterwards nearly back to its first position, and then to its present location. The old school house in the Hall District, sat on the Hall farm, and was afterwards removed to its present location. In the Whitehead District, the school house was built where it now stands, and the frame of the present house is the frame of the first house. In No. 4, or the Bisco District, the first school house was on the old county road, now discontinued about 80 rods north of Lemuel Jackson's house. It stood there for a number of years, and many within the sound of my voice can remember attending school there. It was burnt down, and rebuilt on the spot where it now stands. In the Partridge District, the first school house stood at the four corners near the Hanson house, but was finally changed to its present location. Other houses were built, so that in 1815, every organized district had a school house, such as it was. They were not all of the nicest construction, but they were comfortable. They most all had the large, generous, open fire-place and huge chimney which was a feature in all buildings of that day; some of them had a wide projection over the fire-place; and the old folks record that one of the teachers used to utilize that, when the scholars were restless, by posting one of them up there, whom he termed a crow, to watch and report the roguishness of the others. In most of the houses, as they were repaired or rebuilt, the old open fire-place gave way to the more modern stove; though in the Whittemore District, as late as 1840, the warming apparatus consisted of an old potash kettle inverted and set up on bricks with a hole knocked through the bottom for the funnel; and it was in the ashes under this old kettle that Master Bailey used to warm his beech rods previous to warming the scholars. In 1818, District No. 2 was formed, and the Free Masons united with the district and built the old school house on the lot where F. C. Merrill's storehouse now stands. The masons used the upper part as their hall. This served the district until they purchased the Oxford Normal Institute, when it was torn down, and put up again as the frame work of the house owned by Z. C. Perry. In 1805, there was an article inserted in the town warrant, to see if the town would raise a sum of money to hire a master to instruct the youth in the art of singing. I am sorry to say, however, that the town ignominiously passed over the article. In 1820, the town chose its first regular school committee, viz: Stephen Emery, Jairus S. Keith and Henry Prentiss, and at the same time prescribed their duties, as follows:

"1st. To examine all candidates for school masters and school mistresses, before they enter upon the important duty of school instruction; and give certificates of approbation to such of them as shall be found properly qualified—the certificate of the chairman to be absolutely necessary in all cases.

2d. That it shall be the duty of the chairman of the committee aforesaid, to visit all schools in the town taught by masters, once near the commencement, and again at the close of each school—to ascertain the kind of books used in the school, recommend such as he may approve; to examine into the methods of instruction, and give such advice as he may think necessary. The chairman of said committee previously giving notice to the school agent and master of the time appointed for the examination.

3d. That the chairman of the committee make an annual report to the town at their first meeting, after the examination of the schools, of the number of scholars in each school, the amount of money appropriated and expended, and the time of its continuance.

4th. That it shall be the duty of said committee, without compensation, except to the chairman, together with the several school agents, to attend the chairman in his examinations of the several schools at the last examination, unless necessarily prevented."

These were the duties enjoined upon the committee, and a strict adherence to them at the present day will serve to increase the efficiency of our schools. We have had for teachers in past years many men who were celebrated in their profession in their day. There was Jacob Bradbury, who was called one of the best teachers of his day. Lewis Follet, who was considered somewhat tyrannical, as he marched about the room with his two foot ruler in his hand. I fancy one of my hearers can still remember his feelings, when the old man, after punishing two or three, turned around to him and said, "Luther, I will settle with you in the morning." Also, Ezra Tubbs, known as Schoolmaster Tubbs, who always had a nickname for every scholar. He was a strict disciplinarian, and when he shouted, "John, you blockhead, sit up straighter!" John was apt to stiffen his backbone immediately. Dea. Joel B. Thayer, who is still living, and some of my hearers can still remember, without doubt, how foolish they felt, when, after they were men-grown, and came in late, he made them stand in the floor and read aloud the story of the bad boy who, climbing the tree after birds' nests, got hung from one of the branches by a hole in his garments. Then there were W. W. Virgin, now Judge Virgin, Hannibal Hamlin, who taught his first and only school in this town, and hosts of others whom I have not space to mention.

Time also forbids any mention of the Oxford Normal Institute, and Paris Hill Academy, both institutions which have honored the town and left their impress upon many of the public men of our State. We can hardly conceive of a greater calamity which could befall this town than that, by indifference or neglect, it should allow the system of free common schools to fall into disuse, and the foul and degrading spirit of ignorance to undermine and destroy the fair edifice which our fathers have so nobly erected.

Then came the dinner. This exercise was one of the most gigantic, and at the same time, one of the best conducted feasts of which history (town history) has spoken. It is no easy task to feed five or six thousand hungry people; but the committee had made such systematic arrangements that there was no jar, and but the minimum of confusion. Most of the young men and maidens of Paris were enlisted as waiters. At a private waiters' meeting in the town house, that building was completely filled; and yet this host was only sufficient to supply the demands of the hungry multitude. The invited guests of each district were furnished with cards, and took their seats at the first table. The tables were arranged in the mammoth tent, and numbered according to the School Districts in town. Before anything was disturbed, the tent presented a fine appearance. The tables were covered with fine white cloths, were laid with china, and flowers adorned every available spot. Notwithstanding many were fearful, the provisions were ample for all, and none went away unsatisfied on account of lack of food. There were bushels remaining after the feast was ended.

When the company had been called together, after dinner, by Ripley's band, Mr. S. A. Bolster of Boston, read a history of the military men of Paris, which is omitted here to avoid repetition, as the complete military history of the town appears elsewhere.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bolster's address, Hon. S. C. Andrews of Portland was introduced, and assumed the duties of Toast Master.

He first called, "Paris—past and present." Response by Hon. Hannibal Hamlin.

Mr. Hamlin's response was extemporaneous, and cannot be reproduced. He spoke of the progress of the world and of Paris for one hundred years, from the time when this territory was an unbroken wilderness until now, when it is filled with the happy homes of thrifty and intelligent men and women. He then narrated several anecdotes of the early settlers of Paris, to illustrate their character and customs, and closed with a description of the surpassing beauty of the outlook from Paris Hill.

The following hymn written by Hon. Geo. F. Emery, was sung by the whole audience, led by Ripley's band.

CENTENNIAL HYMN.

(Tune Old Hundred.)

O God, Most High! bow down thine ear.

Our swelling song, deign thou to hear;

And while to thee the voice we raise,

Inspire each heart with joyful praise.

Thy Providence our Fathers led,

When here their tents at first were spread;

Their lives and labors thou didst bless

With mercies rich and numberless.

These hills and vales, this rugged soil,

Attest the nature of their toil;

The wilderness which here they found,

Now smiles with blossoms all around.

The varied fruitage of their care,

We, their descendants, largely share:

The debt we own—their gifts we take—

Their virtues, too, we'll ne'er forsake.

As future years shall run their round,

Let grace and mercy still abound:

Crown thou our sons, of every age,

With heaven's choicest heritage.

“The Legal Fraternity,” was responded to by Hon. Alvah Black.

I feel honored in being permitted on this occasion to speak for the law, and for the lawyers of Paris, past and present. It is an honor to be allowed to represent the law and the profession on any occasion, great or small. The greatness of the subject magnifies its representative, and what earthly subject can be greater than the law? constituting, as it does, the rules established, whether by legislation, the decision of the courts or the decrees of rulers, for the preservation of order and the protection of life, liberty and property. Coming down to us through the ages from different sources, expanded, improved and purified by the experience and wisdom of the learned and able men of all times, it has well been pronounced the perfection of human wisdom. It adapts itself to all the changes of times, places, circumstances and conditions, and ever casts its sheltering arm about us, and interposes its protecting shield when danger assails.

In the ordinary pursuits of life we little realize how entirely dependent we ever are upon the law for the safety of our lives, liberty and property, and for the happiness of home and all its blessings. Take away the law and chaos would come again, anarchy and violence would usurp the place of order and peace, the law of the strongest would universally prevail, and savageness and desolation would settle down on the land.

This is no exaggeration. The experience and observation of every man furnish convincing proof of its truth to ordinary intelligence. How important, then, that the laws shall be wisely administered! The State has done its part. It has provided us with judges eminent and learned, and all the requisite officers, and has furnished us with suitable and necessary buildings, and all the paraphernalia needful to the Courts. But all the learning of the law, all the wisdom of the Courts would be of little avail to the wants of the public, without the intervening agency of the lawyer. His learning, experience, and skill, are absolutely essential to the proper presentation in Court, of the rights and the wrongs of the community, and for securing the ends of justice. The agency of the lawyer cannot be dispensed with in the administration of justice. Ages of experience have taught this. Ignorance and inexperience cannot with safety enter the Courts. Paris has been fortunate in its lawyers. Three-quarters of a century it has been the shire town of Oxford county, from the time of its establishment in 1805, and early became the headquarters of the legal profession for the county, and held that position till a comparatively recent date. Many lawyers have lived here, many who have been an ornament to the bar, and some who have adorned the bench. We have had our Parris, our Lincoln, our Emery, our Cole, and others too numerous to mention here, whom the State and the nation have delighted to honor, and in whom as members of the profession, we may justly take pride, and none for whom we are called to blush. I would be glad to give a sketch of all, and a more extended notice of the more prominent of our earlier lawyers: but time forbids. I will do what I can in noticing a part of them in their life as lawyers and citizens here. (The personal sketches of the lawyers may be found in another place.)

"The Medical Profession," was responded to by Dr. T. H. Brown of Paris, whose sketches of Paris physicians with additions, are given in another place.

Dr. Brown closed his remarks as follows:

"Many reflections are naturally suggested by the foregoing facts, concerning the settlement, character and services of the medical profession for the hundred years just ended, during which the town of Paris has emerged from a wilderness, to fertile fields, busy workshops and pleasant dwellings. The contrast between now and then is difficult to estimate, and almost incomprehensible. It required enterprise, courage and faith in the pioneers of this region, who first felled the trees in town, and prepared the way for civilization. It also required courage, faith and self-sacrifice to undertake the practice of medicine, when the visiting must be done over new and rough roads, over streams without bridges, and over the snow with snow shoes, through the deep forest and everywhere that men might choose to make a clearing or erect a cabin. Accidents and diseases, involving life, were as liable to occur in a new as in an old settlement: and the necessity for the surgeon and the physician was often urgent and pressing. Cases often arose to test the ability of physicians in those days. Many years ago, a hardy pioneer, Capt. Abner Rawson, rose early in the morning, and as he passed out of his dwelling in the dark, he slipped upon the doorstep and fell to the ground, striking his hand upon a sharp axe, and severing the largest artery at the wrist. He bled profusely. The physician came, but could not find and secure the artery. Pressure was made over the artery to stop the bleeding till the hand was ready to mortify. He had lost so much blood that his friends gave him up to die. The postman who carried the mail across the country from Bridgton, heard some one relating the case, and said he believed that if they would send for Dr. Farnsworth, he could stop the bleeding. The Dr. was sent for and came and tied the artery and saved the valuable life, on the point of perishing. The profession of medicine in Paris, as we look backward, has illustrated the common fate of all classes. Some have entered upon the stage of service and remained only a few months or years, while others have kept in harness, toiling up the steep ascent of life during a half or a quarter of a century. Some, after learning the hardships and responsibilities of surgery, have abandoned the practice, and sought more profitable or more congenial employment in other business or professions. Some have been the beneficiaries of popular favor, and been elected as State Representatives or county officers—in this respect, vying with the farmers, mechanics and traders—the professions of law and theology, in their love of fame and their care of the State. Others still have labored steadily, resolutely and perseveringly in the practice of their profession, among the rich and the poor, in storm and sunshine, in heat and cold—ambitious only to honor their calling, fulfil a sacred mission, and benefit their fellow men.

But notwithstanding the versatility of tastes, and the direction of the talents of the physicians of this town, it will be conceded on all hands, and everywhere, that the members of the profession in Paris, almost without exception, have been worthy, reliable men, upright and honorable in every relation of life. The inhabitants of Paris can therefore look back over the past century with pride and satisfaction, as they read the names, the lives and services of those who have passed away, while a grateful posterity will embalm their memory, and preserve its fragrance for future generations. Let us hope that those now living may, at the close of the next century, gain as fair a record and as just an appreciation. And what will another century bring forth? We would fain hope that our land would remain the great Western Republic, preserved in its integrity, with many added states—all prospering in the arts of peace and plenty—all developing into a higher civilization, a broader intelligence, a godlier christianity. This shall be our hope to-day, and this the fruition of all the toils of genius and the creative power of mental and muscular force. But with the mutations of the past century before us—with the fall of dynasties here—the changes in the form of government there—with the moral and mental attrition everywhere busy evolving new methods in science, morals and law, what may not be the possibilities in the way of change, in another century? If we can judge the future by the past, revolution will touch and modify the profession of medicine, as it has touched and modified commerce, transportation, business, law and theology; and it is a somewhat melancholy thought, that what we view with pride and satisfaction in all these things to-day, may, in one hundred years, aye will, be forgotten and buried in oblivion.

"So sleeps the pride of former years;
So glory's thrill is o'er;
And hearts that once beat high for praise,
Now feel that pulse no more."

"The State of Maine," was represented by Hon. Warren H. Vinton of Gray.

"The Daughters of Paris," were represented by Mrs. H. E. Prentiss of Bangor, who spoke as follows :

Mr. President :

It gives me much pleasure to answer for the daughters of Paris, of whom nearly half of this vast assembly is composed. By their works ye shall know them. To-day we have partaken of their bounty, and we owe them our thanks.

I take pleasure in again possessing my birthright by which I become a citizen if not a resident of Paris. My home feeling has never left me, though sad the changes and long the absence. I can as easily remember the events of the last sixty years as I can recall the last ten.

Of those of my age are Hamlins, Rawsons, Clarks, Emerys, Cummings's, and Marbles, Hubbards and Hammonds, Coles and Browns, of the Hill, and Prentisses, Kings, Stowells, Maxims and Thayers, of other parts of the town.

Miss Eliza Hamlin and Miss Sarah Jane Prentiss, long residents here, and both distinguished for their patriotism, would proudly float the stars and stripes from their houses, if their valuable lives had reached this first centennial anniversary.

My first appearance on a stage was Feb. 5th, 1823, the day I was twelve years old, fifty-three years ago. I have seen six of that company here to-day. Another time, nearly on this spot, I assisted in the ceremonies of presenting a flag to the Paris Rifle Company: some of that company march with the "ancients" to-day: how many, I do not know.

I am in full sympathy with reminiscences of Hon. Hannibal Hamlin—the cold meeting house in the days of Rev. James Hooper, and the impatience we felt with all sermons longer than the twenty minutes used by him. The story is told of Mr. Hooper saying that "man went abroad doing business and looking out for his family, with his dog following him: the women and cats staid at home." There is some change now. Some men sit in the corner with the cats, and smoke. Women and dogs are subject to taxation but neither can vote.

Another anniversary may mark as great changes. What can they be?

In this connection, the following poem written by Mrs. Hannah (Maxim) Allen of Michigan, was presented :

Mrs. Abigail A. Prentiss.

A GREETING TO MY NATIVE HILLS.

Ye grand old hills that round my childhood's home
Keep watch and ward in solemn majesty,
To-day, my spirit spurns the bounds of space,
And stands once more upon your sunny slopes
And greets you, hail, all hail! I love you still
With love as steadfast as your own calm strength.
To-day, I gaze on your familiar forms,
And drink the airs that fan your lofty brows,
And trace, with kindling eye, the first faint sign,
Of autumn with his slow, transfiguring touch,
The charm and pathos of his mellow days,
On your broad uplands, and your fair, sweet vales,
Where Androsoggin winds, a silver chain
With jewelled links of murmuring waterfalls.
Anon my eyes grow dim, for while I gaze,
The memories of long bygone years sweep in,
A full flood-tide upon my soul, and lo!
The gray-haired woman is a child again.
I see my father with the thoughtful brow
That hid a life-long hunger of the soul;
My gentle mother with her patient eyes,
Treading her household ways with tireless feet,
A cheerful burden-bearer through the years;
The brother, in whose whitening locks to-day
The frosts of more than fifty winters lie,
Sits in the winter fireside's genial glow,
A youthful student delving patiently,
For the rich ores of knowledge; by his side,
The fair, blue-eyed child-sister, bending low,
With her rapt face above the thrilling page.
I see the humble cot that sheltered us:
The hill-slope, smooth and fair whereon it stood;
The moss-grown ledge, and the old apple trees,
Where sang the bobolinks, the long June days;
Again I sit by the west window small,
Where I was wont, "a dreamer born," to watch
The sunset's crimson banners streaming wide
Above Mount Washington's sky-piercing peak,
Or muse away the balmy summer eve,
With crowding thoughts too deep for utterance—
Strange, haunting visions of those radiant heights,
Where Fame flung wide her gilded temple-doors,
And beckoned from afar. Ah, idle dreams
That vainly mocked the eager heart of youth,
And left behind a long unrest and pain.

To-day I smile a tranquil smile above
 Their buried ashes, saying, it is well.
 Another face beloved comes back to me—
 Oh, Sarah! friend of youth! inspirer, thou
 Of all high thoughts and gentle charities;
 Martyr to that pure zeal to bless thy kind
 That burned within thy soul, a vestal flame;
 To-day I seek thy grave to lay thereon
 The late thank offering of grateful love.
 Long live thy name, a rich inheritance,
 As some rare melody that, though it cease
 Upon the outward ear, the soul still keeps,
 A haunting sweetness that can never die.
 Still other forms and faces, loved of old, ●
 I see again in memory's magic glass;
 Some whose warm hands might clasp my own to-day;
 And some to whom the sunset gates have open'd,
 Whose eyes, no longer holden, penetrate
 The mystery our souls stand dumb before.
 Once more, all hail, my own loved native hills!
 The inspiration of our majesty,
 The charm of every changeful tint and tone
 The shifting seasons shed from year to year.
 Still glow within my soul, a sacred fire;
 And if the humble flower of poesy
 I bring to-day, some transient sweetness breathe,
 Your wandering child would ne'er forget it sprang
 Within the shadow of your granite walls,
 And blossomed in your fostering suns and dews.

"The Press," was responded to by the following letter from Rev.
 Geo. K. Shaw of Biddeford:

S. P. Mason, Corresponding Secretary of the Committee of the Centennial Anniversary of Paris:

"Permit me to thank you, and through you, the committee for the invitation to be present at the Paris Centennial Anniversary, and "respond for the Press." Nothing could afford me greater pleasure than to comply with your request; but for reasons I need not mention here, I am obliged to decline, so I must be content to respond only by letter. Whoever may be selected to respond in my stead, will of course give special attention to the history of the press in the town of Paris, interspersed with such remarks, incidents and anecdotes as may occur. I need then simply to speculate a little on the press generally—its power and influence, including those associated with it. Being a native of Paris, and having many relatives there, I have always had a very high appreciation of the people of that town. No town in the county, if in the State, ever had a better class of citizens than were the early settlers of Paris. Most of them became independent farmers; and what added greatly to their success, the women, wives and daughters were their equals in mental capacity and energy. The press is indebted to some of them for many very superior literary contributions. Paris people have not been unmindful of the importance of the press, and have done much to sustain it for many years; and a long time ago furnished typesetters and journalists. Some of them since that time have attained to high positions under the government, and will probably honor your anniversary with their presence.

A learned philosopher once defined man to be an animal that laughs. And the press sometimes developes the mirthful powers, and makes merry its readers. But nobody has yet discovered how animals communicate their feelings or information from one to another, and yet we all know that in some way they do it. The language of flowers is laid open to us, at least, it is so far known to the young botanists of both sexes, that they can readily convey to whom they will, the deepest impressions, and the most ardent sentiments, in a vocabulary whose words are flowers. The poets, however, decried they may be by hard, practical people, who pride themselves upon taking only common-sense views of things—people who think they are wisest when driest and dullest—the poets, I insist, frequently get at the truth, and tell it, when acutest logicians and reasoners fail to catch a glimpse of it. And these poets, with the knowledge that comes from intuition, speak everywhere, and all of them, of laughing eyes and laughing hair, and laughing breezes, and laughing meadows, and laughing plains, rills, fields, hills and skies: all of which means that these various objects, animate and inanimate, convey by some sign or movement, or expression, the same idea of laughter which man evinces by cachinatory sounds. The press announces the beautiful poetic sentiments, and they are telegraphed to the uttermost parts of the earth, and the whole universe resounds in one grand song of praise. The philosopher was wrong when he thought that his characterization of man as “the animal that laughs” was just or precise. A better definition would be, the animal that gives dinners. Men are social beings, as the school philosophers say. They believe in having a good time together. This is perfectly natural. A large portion of animals like to go in herds, droves or flocks, and live in company: and man is not an exception. He is the only animal that deliberately goes to work, and collects a lot of good things, desirable and delightful to eat and drink, and then calls to himself a lot of his kind to help him devour them. This has been characteristic of the citizens of Paris from the beginning. I can remember when more than sixty years ago the Paris people were noted for giving dinners, tea-parties and social gatherings for amusement. Grand old times were these. Even the good minister, if he only made a call, was expected to take a social glass. Perhaps he suffered no apparent inconvenience from the practice: yet the evil consequences extended to those who came after him. But the tongue and the press has done much to avert the evil.

These social gatherings inspire conversation which embraces the range of communication between intellect and intellect. Through the medium of speech, the interchange of our ideas, knowledge and emotions are improved. Conversation propelled by truth and wafted on the waves of virtue and good will to man, is one of the most charming and happyfying blessings with which human nature is endowed. The press, that potent engine of thought, receives its tone and general tendency from the current of conversation. In vain we attempt to push its influence beyond the channels or away from the direction opened and pursued by its pioneer, the more potent and lordly energy of the tongue! Yes, there would lie the treasures of the press, in unbroken neglect, did not the spirit of inquiry, awakened by conversation, recall them to life. Let conversation demand a change in the character of the press, and the press will prove itself subservient. Let common talk consign a portion of it to contempt, and that portion ceases to live. The man who can talk well need not fear the press. But to talk well he must be well read. He can engage living books to speak his merits, and lipping newspapers to publish his fame. He can exclude the unsavory gazette from the circle of his influence, or make the printed herald welcome where it was once a stranger. Let it then be understood, that we who talk, and not they who print, are responsible for the character of the press. The press must ascertain the will of the public voice, in most instances, before it can speak with safety or success: and it generally does. Then it provides something for its readers to talk about; and then conversation and the press become mutual helps in society. As our domestic animals prove unprofitable unless well fed, so if the press is not well provided with the sinews of enterprise, it will die.

No doubt every citizen in Paris will admit that the products of the press, so far as he has been favored with the reading, has done him good, has enlarged his views, has brought him in nearer relation to his fellows, and to appreciate the printer and journalist whose existence and growing power and prosperity is not the least amazing of the great facts of the great century during which Paris has lived. The press is the great unifier, the great centralizer. Lightning and steam have so nearly annihilated time and space that those two things which have heretofore prevented intercourse among men and so kept them in everything apart and unlike, can hardly be counted in estimating the elements which will work henceforward to change the ways and the political force of the world. To-day Maine is nearer to the centipedes than she was to the capital of our nation when she became one of the States of the Union. To-day any citizen of your town can get a message from a friend in India as quick as he can from Portland. The daily newspaper lays before you, fresh every morning, the events of the preceding day in every quarter of the Globe. Even your local weekly paper can furnish you with all the news and events from abroad as readily as it does the items and incidents from the several towns in your county. Moved by the sympathy enlisted by the press, which facility and intercommunication making the whole world a neighborhood, inevitably produces the same tendency to united action which has brought your sons and daughters together in honor of the Centennial Anniversary of Paris. It promotes international action, and moves local and State and National societies to form connection and work together with similar societies abroad in international Unions—as do your union societies in town for reform. And it is a good thing that it is so. The better nations and people know one another, the more individuals of each are united in familiar relations with individuals of the other the less inclined they are to war. The more people know the less apt they are to fight. Intelligent business nations do not go to war if they can find any other way to settle the difference. Had the people of the several States of our Union known each other better, we should have had no war. But that event has past. Let it rest. And so has our late annual election past. All, no doubt, did their best, not excepting the press. Now it is well for us to see what manner of men we ought to be, and know what clever fellows in the main all of us are.

All of these tendencies will grow. The world of the printing press, the steam engine and the telegraph can never retrograde. We must go with it. We must recognize and appreciate our position on the very pinnacle of the greatest time in the history of the world. We must be true to the duties of our wide and widening citizenship. We must work together.

Then we may live more in one year, so far as our mental and spiritual powers are concerned, which is alone of ultimate value to ourselves and the world, than Methuselah did in the nine hundred and sixty-nine years of his tedious life. When the last of Arthur's knights, the bold Sir Bedivere, bore the wounded King from the fatal field in Lyonesse, where all save he had fallen, man by man, about their lord, on that fatal day whose sequel unsoldered "all the goodliest fellowship of famous knights whereof the world holds record," he, not having insight into the future, and not aware that Merlin had sworn that Arthur should come again to rule once more, lamented that the whole Round Table was dissolved, "which was an image of the mighty world," and moaned:

"Now I see the good old times are dead,
When every morning brought a noble chance,
And every chance brought out a noble knight."

But in our day Merlin's oath has been fulfilled. King Arthur has come again. His throne is the Press and we are the Round Table. His warfare is a more glorious one than he ever waged against a lawless subject or invading Dane: and every morning again brings to us a noble chance, and every chance brings out a noble knight. May none of those corruptions which wrought the dissolution of the first Round Table find place among the men of the press or other citizens, and that they may not, let each of us strive to wear

———"Without abuse,
The grand old name of gentleman,
Defamed by every charlatan,
And soiled with all ignoble use."

As you will get up a history of Paris at an early day, I would suggest that the citizens, to make a better history of the future, collect all the copies they can of the older papers, and let every member of the community be requested to give as complete files as he can of his own paper. It won't take you long to make a valuable library. Some time you will get rich and powerful, and you can have a permanent abiding place for your archives, to which you can refer for any document contained in them; and also, when at your leisure, find it pleasant to roam around and have a good time together.

G. K. SHAW.

Mr. George W. Hammond's response to the toast, "Agriculture, —though pinioned to earth may she prove in future, as in the past, the bulwark and real foundation of all industries," was as follows:

Mr. President, and Fellow Citizens of the United States:

"We are members of the same family, children of a common parent; then let us cast off undue restraint and make this, Paris' first centennial, a social season. Should we picture our fields more verdant, gardens more abundant, trees more fruitful and their rich offerings more delicious, deem us not vain in our imaginings, but bear in mind that this is our centennial; when you, our esteemed neighbors, invite us on a like occasion we will grant you the same latitude. Some three days since I was invited by the committee to respond in the interest of agriculture: this compliment was more valued because unsought. This genii so fraught with meaning laid at the feet of agriculture, thanks to the author, comes clad with the inspiration of prayer, it beats in unison with the instruction given in the good Book, "Give us this day our daily bread."

We would not speak disparagingly of any of the industries: the mechanic, the artist, the merchant, gentlemen of the learned professions and numerous other pursuits, calculated to make us a free and happy people, receive our hearty approbation and applause.

Agriculture, horticulture, floraculture and the whole family of cultures are only nicknames: tilling the earth is our real occupation, our calling is time-honored. He who said "Go out and till the ground," also said "In the sweat of the face shalt thou eat bread." God's laws are immutable and can never change. The moon is a satellite and borrows its pale light from the great luminary of day: you too are satellites to the tillers of the soil and are dependant on their labor for your daily support. The Prince, though a millionaire, answers to the same tribunal as does the tramp who begs bread from door to door. Palsy the arm of the earth laborer, and down comes the whole superstructure; you cannot run a train nor float a ship. We have listened to Literature, History and Poetry, to Gospel, Law and Medicine, heard eulogies on statesmen, clergymen, and others, but very little about the poor laboring man, and not one word about the generous hearted sailor who plows the rough main. One year at sea behind the mast taught me what those brave fellows endure for our comfort and support. Cheer up then my brave tars, you are waiters, transporting our rich bounties to starving garrisons; without your aid our boasted castles would be but a defenseless mass of ruins; you are waiters at the great banquets of the world. Then cheer up, my jolly fellow.

Fit out your ship from the Forest City, let her crew be picked men, place her under the command of as stern a Captain as ever trod a quarter-deck, doubly armed, fortified by the strong arm of the law, her clearance from the seat of customs A 1, spread her sails to the breeze, course due East, booked for Liverpool. Four bells, "Aye, aye, sir." The ship moves on. Eight bells, "Aye, aye, sir." Eight bells changes the watch and stands for twelve o'clock, when the craft should be called from labor to refreshments. The stewards inform the craft that by mishap the supplies are left behind; the stevedore has been through the cargo, no rations on board; there is but one course for the Captain, take back tracks or find a watery grave. "Tack ship, tack ship." "Aye, aye, sir." The ship is safe, all's well.

Our calling is so cheering to the tired and over-taxed that many throw down the chisel, brush or quill, and, taking up the spade, become for a time tillers of the soil. In this way, many who hold one acre, produce more luxuries for the table than small, lazy farmers. Horace Greeley, not content to tell us what he knew about farming, thought to put his philosophy to a test, and, as a result, produced oats at the cost of only 87 cents per bushel. Mr. Beecher, standing at the head of his class, thought to bring his theology to bear, and by hiring men who could live on bread and water, raised oats at $1.12½ cents per bushel. But, fellows, this is not your style; you prefer to live on profit rather than die on loss. I would have said more to the toiling husbandman, but you are weary.

Good news! Good news! My grandfather is dead and has left his vast estate to his heirs, and I am one of them. This is no hoax or hocus pocus report, but it stands on the record. My grand-sire was the first man who tilled the ground, and, when quite young, was well set up in business by his father, who was able and willing to give his eldest son a good chance, in the world, and who settled him on a rich and beautiful tract of land. Like a wise parent, he did not give the boy a warrantee deed but a life lease based on conditions of obedience. Gave him dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air and over every living thing that moved upon the earth; grass and herbs were at his disposal. He soon conceived an idea to marry, to which his father raised no objection, but rather helped the match by looking him out a wife, and even legalized the marriage, as there was no minister to tie the knot. Ministers had not then appeared and the people were moral. We generally like to see a chap do his own courting, but under all the circumstances it would have been a severe operation for the young man. Soon after marriage he showed Yankee traits of character; went into the manufacture of cloth without machinery, dabbled with the tailors' trade, and finally he was so disobedient that his father actually drove him out of the garden, and forced him to cultivate among thorns and thistles and put him under a constitution made by the Father.

Article 1st. Go out and till the ground.

Article 2d. Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth.

Article 3d. Thou shalt surely die.

Man has no power to resist one of these decrees even if he had the inclination. The institution of death proved the salvation of the race and saved them from a worse fate. Strike death from the trio, and such are the laws of increase compounded that ere 1,000 years had passed, the people would have been packed on the face of the whole earth deeper than the height of the Tower of Babel. A serious trouble came upon the family which nearly broke their hearts, though kept a family secret; blood was found upon the elder sons hands, but no quarrel ensued. Lawyers had not been admitted to the bar. The old gentleman made a good living, but like many of you farmers, found himself land poor; with all of his domain, controlling all the land which joined him, he could not hire one day's labor outside of his own family.

He died at the age of 930 years, never saw a sick day, died for want of breath, no disease. Doctors were not then invented.

Fellow laborers, your commission comes from Him who rules in Heaven and does his pleasure on earth. This inheritance is for you and me; there is enough for all and it can never be wrested from us. You who cultivate the soil look upward, do not look down to your cowhide boots, they will protect your feet. Place your mark high then aim above the mark.

Man may erect land marks, pile up serids of musty paper and call them records, boys too build mud cakes and houses after the shower. Our title is recorded in heaven, and can never, never fail. Ye tillers of the earth who guide the plough or wield the scythe, wiping great drops of sweat from your weary brow, when called to refreshments eat of the bounty of your own toil and be satisfied, but with all these rich gifts do not lose sight of the giver and remember that "Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God and God alone giveth the increase."

We differ in surroundings as in complexion and habits, but listen to a few personal reflections, and then tell me are not the facts in my case substantially true in yours? There was a striking occupational likeness between my father and grandfather, the latter tilled the earth and made aprons, the former was an agriculturalist and manufactured shoes. When first introduced to my father he was bowed with years; that impressive representation of old age given in Ecclesiastes was well-nigh fulfilled in him, by no means the first but among the early settlers of Paris, coming here about 88 years since. He settled on a farm, one generous mile south-east of this beautiful village, was content to till the soil by summer and shoe-make in winter. His work was sewed with thread made by my mother from flax grown and prepared on the farm; the soles never seceded from the body of the shoes; he looked upon pegged boots as a Yankee cheat, and it was only after years of experience that he adopted the change and used wood where his boss taught him to use flax. The trees planted by his own hand still produce fruit to make glad the third and fourth generations. The same door-way where my dear old mother passed out and in for more than thirty years, still stands, the old latch, forged by the rustic blacksmith, pressed by her hand so many thousand times, sends a thrill to my heart which stirs the deepest depths of the soul. Many incidents of the deprivations of our forefathers were related by my father of which we took no note, we still retain some of the most impressive, such as raising corn and carrying it on the back 25 miles to mill, following a spotted line.

My mother related how she took her babe in her arms and, seating herself on a shy, three-year-old colt, rode alone, by a bridle road twenty-five miles to present her first-born to her parents, then living in New Gloucester, District of Maine under Massachusetts; how she returned, with the addition of a side of sole leather fastened to the pillion of her saddle. But times have changed; even the old pumpkin pine church has passed into history. Many of us remember the wood colored pews, the pulpit elevated far above the common level, made accessible by a flight of steps much like a fruit-ladder, over which hung an inclining board, called the sounding board, carved from the trunk of a mammoth pine.

The little wheel has been marked obsolete; the spinning wheel branded superannuated, and laid away; the loom removed to make way for the piano, and the old house, even, would be overhauled were it not secured by a mortgage. In those days bean porridge could be handled with a spoon, now it must be transported on a fork.

My father was the youngest of a large family; my mother the youngest of thirteen, and I stand here to-day the sixteenth representative of my parents. This is no honor nor disgrace to me, as I had nothing to say about when I should be born. Had my eldest sister, who sleeps in yonder church-yard, lived to this present season, she would have been 82 years old. My first cousins, like Moses Hammond and Henry R. Parsons, two well known citizens of Paris, have nearly all passed away. I am a young sprout of an old generation, and can enumerate more kinsmen than most of the boys of my age, when I recall the Hammonds, Parsonses, Stenchfields, Eveleths, Milletts, Witts, Chesleys, Jacksons, and 29 or 30 other like races to which I belong. They are legions, scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Were I to turn tramp, and tramp, tramp, tramp from Eastport, Maine, to Portland, Oregon, begging my bread from door to door, and the urchins should insult me in the street, I should not dare to raise my hand, lest I should strike down a cousin.

The following hymn was sung. It was composed for the occasion by Mrs. Rose McKenney Rawson :

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Come Friends from all old Paris' hills,
And all the vales below,
Come let us sing the memories of
A hundred years ago.

CHORUS: Oh! these years, these hundred years
Of blessings, joys, and tears.
How tender are the memories
Of all these hundred years.

To Thee, our fathers' God and ours,
 From whom all blessings flow,
 We raise our thanks for mercies of
 These hundred years ago.

CHORUS.

Our dear old fathers and their brides,
 Who for us made the way,
 We bless them in remembrance of
 A hundred years to-day.

CHORUS.

We thank them for their legacies,
 These homes and trees so dear,
 Whose loving arms have sheltered us
 Through many a long, long year.

CHORUS.

And when another century,
 With them shall lay us low,
 May children's children sing of us
 And a hundred years ago.

CHORUS.

Ex Gov. Perham delivered the following farewell address, and then closed the regular exercises by inviting Dr. H. C. Estes to deliver a benediction. Mr. Perham said :

"Ladies and Gentlemen :

In closing the exercises of this happy occasion, it is fitting that I should express a few words of congratulation and thanks.

This has been, in many respects, a remarkable celebration—remarkable in the beauty of the scenery that surrounds us, and the charming day with which we have been blessed—remarkable in the grand achievements of the town and its citizens, as they have been briefly recounted by the speakers—remarkable in the ability and careful research that have characterized the exercises upon this stand—remarkable in the numbers that have come from far and near to enjoy this pleasant reunion, and in the quiet and good order that have marked the conduct of this immense gathering.

The poet of the day did your president the honor to refer to him as the "uncompromising enemy of rum." It is evident that the compliment applies to a large portion of those present. Certainly there have been few, if any, here who have not shown their regard for sobriety and good order. No indications of drunkenness or rowdyism have appeared. This, when contrasted with the appearance of gatherings of equal numbers, thirty or forty years ago, furnishes occasion for mutual congratulation.

I should be false to the promptings of my own heart, and faithless to the citizens of Paris, for whom I speak, if I did not express our heartfelt thanks to those who have especially contributed to the success of this celebration. To the General Committee of Arrangements for their arduous and successful labors, and the several sub-committees, for the faithfulness and efficiency with which they have performed their duties—to the ladies and gentlemen for the labor performed and the good taste displayed in the arrangement of these tables, which present a view of rare beauty and attraction, and for the rapid and orderly manner with which they fed the vast multitude—to the speakers and poets, who have given us an intellectual treat seldom equalled on any similar occasion—to the leader and members of the band, for the enjoyment which their excellent music has given us—to the "continentals," representing a generation fast passing away—to the "veterans" of the recent war, reminding us of a class of men who loved their country better than life—to the Grand Trunk Railway Company and the Portland Steam Packet Company, for excellent accommodations and low fare—and, if there are others to whom acknowledgements are due—to them also, I tender the most cordial thanks of a grateful people.

And, when our next centennial shall occur, may there be men and women as true, hearts as willing and hands as ready to execute, orators and poets as felicitous and able, musicians as skillful, and whose performances shall be as fascinating, a record of material prosperity and moral development as grand, a gathering as large and orderly, and the smiles of Heaven as benignant as those that have made this occasion so joyous and happy."

After this, Ripley's band gave us a number of selections, and several songs were sung by local talent. Capt. H. N. Bolster, as Marshal of the Day, with a large police force under deputy sheriff Douglass, kept the most perfect order. There was no disturbance of any kind during the day. In the evening there was an old folks' concert at South Paris, led by Ripley and his band. The attendance was large, and the affair was successful, as all else had been during the day. Miss Eliza Longley and Mrs. Myra Crocker Snow had charge of a fine display of antique articles displayed at the Court House. The exhibition was an impromptu affair, but was very successful in drawing together, as it did, a large number of ancient articles, and in showing what treasures our towns-people held in their possession. The following is nearly a complete list of the articles on exhibition, with the names of the owners:

Principal among the articles were three wedding dresses. One of these, a full, embroidered silk, was worn by Mrs. John Hart of Wakefield, Mass., and the costume, donned by Mrs. Snow in rehearsal, showed that Mrs. John Hart's wedding was worth attending. The dress belongs to Mrs. H. F. Morton of Paris.

The second was an ashes-of-roses silk, as close as the present style, and made perfectly plain. It was the dress of Polly Bisco, (Mrs.

Alanson Mellen) and was exhibited by Mrs. Charles T. Mellen. The third was a dark silk, of very old style.

Other interesting articles were as follows :

Skirt and apron, woven by hand. Mrs. Alvah Black.

Whiskey mug, used by Maj. Libby, Scarboro, 200 years old. Robert Smith.

Side saddle on which Mrs. Gen. Levi Hubbard made two trips to Worcester.

An elaborate shell comb of the largest pattern. Mrs. Alvah Black.

Birch bark sugar bowl, labeled 200 years old.

Brass candlestick. Mrs. Henry Forbes.

Masonic certificate and apron, Alanson Mellen made a Mason in 1812. C. T. Mellen.

Masonic apron. Gen. Levi Hubbard.

A short gown, 90 years old, attracted great attention as being the only one of the kind the visitors had ever seen. It was about $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet long. Mrs. M. B. Cummings.

Book printed in 1764, also part of the hub and a spoke of the first wagon used in Paris, by Parson Hooper: a trunk said to have been dragged on a sled from Bridgewater, by Jacob Howe, and in which were packed all his household goods. D. L. Humphrey.

Pocket book carried through the revolutionary war by Jonathan Conn. Oliver L. Pratt.

Chair, made by Eb. Cobb, for Asa Barrows, early settler of Paris. Oscar P. Ellingwood.

Work table and adjustable candle-stick. O. L. Pratt.

Quilt 130 years old, worsted, embroidered with silk. Mrs. Henry Forbes.

Napkin ring made from wood of first apple tree planted in Paris. Fanny I. Marble.

Sampler, containing names of Hamlin family, worked by Ann Hamlin, (Mrs. Brown,) in 1822.

Flint pouch worn by Capt. Seth Morse in Revolutionary war. Mrs. Webber.

ANNALS CONCLUDED.

1879.

Died at South Paris, January 11, Mrs. Laurinda Twitchell, aged 87. Mrs. Martha Abbott committed suicide in the Daniels neighborhood, Wednesday, January 30, by hanging herself; she was supposed to be temporarily insane. Odd Fellows Hall at South Paris dedicated Feb. 6. Mrs. Mary (Locke), widow of Moses Swan, died in California, January 29. Wm. S. Crawford died at North Paris, April 9, aged 71. Capt. Benj. F. Crawford, a native of Worcester county, Mass., but for many years a resident of Paris, died at Bryant's Pond, April 4, aged nearly 79. Sylvanus Dunham died at North Paris, May 4, aged 81 years. April 17, Milo Hathaway, son of Lazarus Hathaway, and grandson of our early settler Lazarus, died, aged 72. Polly Curtis died in Woodstock, April 27, aged 93; she was the daughter of Asa Barrows, one of our early settlers, and was among the first children born in town. Sept. 11, the Centennial celebration took place on Paris Hill, and was attended by a large number of people. Dr. S. B. Morse came to the Hill to practice medicine, in October; a native of Buckfield and graduate of the Maine Medical School. The year closed with intense excitement here and elsewhere throughout the State, occasioned by the action of the Governor and Council in counting the votes for members of the Legislature, familiarly known as the "Count Out." Emmor Rawson died at West Paris, Sept. 27, aged 57, and Ebenezer Harnden Goss Marshall, Dec. 29, aged 67. The selectmen were instructed to reconvey lands forfeited for taxes. A committee of five was appointed to take into consideration the propriety of having a centennial celebration of the settlement of the town. Made choice of S. P. Maxim, Geo. F. Hammond, Seth Benson, James Deering and Hiram Hubbard.

The new year opened as the old year closed, with great excitement over the count out. An immense meeting was held in Paris, which was addressed by leading citizens, denouncing the action of the Governor and Council as revolutionary and liable to lead to civil war. The excitement was continued for several weeks. Ambrose K. Shurtleff, a leading business man of Portland, and a native of Paris, died January 3: he was born Aug. 12, 1815. March 7, the house, ell and stable of Elmer H. Marble on Paris Hill, were burned to the ground: the ell of Cyrus Perkins' house situated near, was torn down, and by that means the house was saved. Dea. Seneca Landers died March 24, aged 85. He came to this town and married here, after which he moved to Woodstock where he lived more than forty years and then returned here. Deacon Joel B. Thayer died June 14, aged 81 years. Lyman Bird died June 8: he was the son of John Bird, an early settler here, but who soon moved to Norway. Sunday, June 27, the Baptist Sunday school at the Hill celebrated its 43d anniversary. Dr. Thomas H. Brown died very suddenly, August 4; the community was much shocked thereat, as he was enjoying his usual health the night before. He died about 7 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Ruth Hammond, formerly of Paris, died in Lincoln, aged 85 years. Dec. 17, William Parlin, one of the selectmen of the town died very suddenly. Voted that the selectmen settle with the Centennial committee and draw their warrant for balance of expenses incurred. Three thousand dollars were raised for the support of poor and for other town charges, and fifteen hundred dollars on town debt: also fifteen hundred dollars in money to be expended in the repair of roads and bridges. Four thousand dollars were raised for a highway tax.

CHAPTER XXXI.

SURNAMES IN PARIS AND THEIR ORIGIN.

Among the settlers of Paris, there have been the usual variety of surnames, though in quite a number of instances several persons have come bearing the same names. Surnames are of comparatively recent origin, and their introduction arose from the necessity of the case. After the introduction of Christianity into Europe, Pagan names were laid aside, and the adoption of Hebrew names became quite general; and as families increased, there would be many persons bearing the same names, and such names as Moses, David, Solomon, John, James and Peter, etc., soon became numerous. Then it became necessary to have some distinguishing name, and for some time, soubriquets and nicknames were appended to distinguish those bearing the same Christian names. Precisely when surnames or additional names become hereditary in England, it is impossible to state. They began to be so used in France about the year. A. D., 1000, and in England probably at the time of the Norman conquest in 1066, or perhaps a little before, under Edward the Confessor. The origin of surnames is a very interesting study, but it cannot be entered upon to any great extent here. They are derived from animals, birds, fishes, minerals, plants, shrubs, flowers and trees; from armor, costume, from the seasons, and the other subdivisions of time; from trades, professions, colors, and from names of places; many have originated from epithets of contempt, ridicule and from nicknames imposed for personal peculiarities, habits and qualities, or from accidents or incidents connected with or which happened to the bearers. Among these may be mentioned Doolittle, Hearsay, Timeslow, Houseless, Steptoe, Bragg, Trollope, Lawless, Silliman, Crookshanks, Longshanks, &c. The origin of some of the surnames of the families which have settled in Paris are given below:

ABBOT, the head or chief of an Abbey.

ANDREWS or Andrew, from a Greek work which signifies manly or courageous.

AYER, (Scotch) and local.

ARNOLD, (German) "faithful to his honor."

Many of our surnames have undergone such changes in this country, as to be hardly recognizable. The emigrant ancestor of the Bisbee family, spelled his name Besbedge. The name of Bumpus or Bump is of French origin, and the first of this name in this country wrote his name Bonpasse. So Delano comes from De La Noye. Cary from Carew, Hamblen and Hamlen from Hamlin. Caswell from Kearswell, Dunham and Donham, from Downham, Hada-way from Hathaway. Lufkin from Lovekin. Stanley from Standlake. Trueworthy from Treworpy. Atwood from Wood, and Chandler from Chaundler. Many others might be mentioned, but these are sufficient to illustrate the point.

CHAPTER XXXII.

POST ROUTES AND POST OFFICES.

The old Methods.—Post-riders.—Mails once a Week.—The March of Improvement.—Single Wagons.—Two and then Four Horse Coaches.—Character of the Old Drivers.—Opening of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad.—List of Post Officers and Postmasters in Paris.—Postal Receipts 1826.

The march of progress is nowhere more strikingly shown than in the improved facilities for traveling and for the transmission of intelligence. The first settlers of Paris travelled on foot, making the journeys to New Gloucester, Turner, Waterford, Bethel and Rumford through the woods, and guided by, where practicable, the course of the principal streams, and by spotted trees. In time, roads were cut out and then journeys could be made on horseback in summer, and on sleds in winter. It was quite a number of years before four wheeled carriages were used, and the first of these were of the rudest and clumsiest kind. Paris had been settled about twenty years before a Post Office was established in town, and previous to that time the small amount of mail matter for the inhabitants, was left at the nearest office to be brought in by any person who happened to be in the vicinity of the office. For some years New Gloucester was the nearest office, and after that, Poland received the mail intended for Paris and the surrounding towns. An office was established in Fryeburg, January 1, 1798; in Waterford, Sept. 29, 1800; Buckfield, January 1, 1801; Paris, April 1, 1801; Norway, April 1, 1801; Sumner, June 21, 1811; Hebron, April 15, 1815; Albany, April 1, 1815, and in other towns in the county, offices were established somewhat later.

The first mail-carrier or post-rider through this region, was Jacob Howe. He was of Ipswich, Mass., and the ancestor of the Howes in this town, in Sumner and in Norway. In a notice in an issue of Jenk's Portland Gazette, published in 1801, in which he asks his patrons to pay up, he stated that he had been on the route from Portland to Bridgton for two years. The next year, he extended his route to Waterford, and the year following he commenced going weekly rounds, starting from Portland and traveling through Gorham, Raymond, Standish, &c., to Bridgton and Waterford, and returning by way of Norway, Paris, Hebron, Poland, New Gloucester and Gray. Waterford was for some years the distributing office for western and central Oxford. The trip was made on horseback, the post-rider carrying, besides the mail pouch, a pair of saddlebags, in which he carried papers to be delivered on the route. He was armed with a tin horn or trumpet, upon which he always blew a blast before reaching a Post office or a house where a paper was to be left, in order that parties might be ready, and his business despatched with as little delay as possible. He did not advertise to be at a given place at a given time, and so time-tables would have been of little account. He was often delayed by bad weather and bad roads, and sometimes on account of sickness, but he was an energetic man, and was always sure to come round, if not exactly on time. The Portland Gazette was the paper generally taken in this region prior to 1803. Then the Eastern Argus was started and was generally patronized by the Republicans, the Gazette being Federalistic in politics. Letter postage was then high, and but few letters came through the mails into the several districts in those days, or went out. The settlers had something to do, besides attending to correspondents. Mr. Howe carried the mails for quite a number of years. After him Seba Smith, (father of the poet), William Sawin of Waterford, and Joshua Pool of Norway, each in succession became post-rider, carrying the mails and distributing papers, the same as Howe. In 1815, Post offices had been established in towns north of Waterford, and that year, the mails reached Waterford from Portland Friday night. Saturday the postman made a circuit through the towns in western Oxford and back to Waterford, and Monday came through Norway to Paris, and from here through Woodstock to Rumford. In 1812, William, son of Gen. Benj. Sawin of Waterford, bought the line from Portland to Waterford. He generally traveled on horseback, but if any one desired, he would take a wagon and carry him. In 1820, the business had so increased that he drove a four horse coach. He was the father of Jabez Sawin, long the popular driver between Augusta and Portland.

It was about the same time (1812), that a Mr. Brown of Waterford contracted to carry the mail from Waterford by the way of Norway and Paris to Portland, and he used a one horse wagon for that purpose, and would sometimes take on a passenger or two. Brown was succeeded by James Longley who was the first to drive direct from Portland to Paris and Norway and return. He was the son of Jonathan Longley of Waterford, and lived on Paris Hill. He run a double sleigh in winter and a two horse wagon in summer, and built up quite a business. John B. Stowell succeeded Longley, and after a few years he was in turn, succeeded by G. G. Waterhouse. The latter drove direct to Paris, where he connected with two tri-weeklies, one running through Norway, Greenwood, Bethel and Gilead to Shelburne and Lancaster, N. H., and the other through Woodstock and Rumford to Andover or Dixfield. The popular drivers on these last-named routes, all of whom are now dead, were Waterhouse himself, A. A. Latham, Orren Hobbs and William Gallison. The three former became conductors on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad.

A long and interesting chapter might be written upon the old stage lines which centered at Bridgton, Waterford and afterwards at Paris, and the drivers, but space cannot be spared here. The old drivers were men of ability and integrity, and it was necessary that they should be so, for they had great responsibilities. They not only had to look out for the welfare and safety of their passengers, and were the custodians of the United States mails, but valuable packages, and oftentimes large remittances of money were entrusted to them, and important business given them to transact. In the latter years of staging over the routes here named, the express business was of no small account, either in the amount of care and labor it required, or the additional revenue it produced. It was wonderful, the way these drivers without memoranda, would remember the almost numberless errands they were asked to do, and how few mistakes they made. They were kind-hearted and obliging, ever anticipating the wants of their patrons, and putting forth every effort to make them comfortable. They were a jolly set, full of anecdotes, and great lovers of fun, an important qualification in helping the passengers to while away what would otherwise have been the tedious hours of the long journey. But they are all gone now, and a generation has grown up which knows nothing of them, or of the modes of travel of those days.

The question of railway communication between the Atlantic ocean at Portland, and the St. Lawrence river at Montreal, a subject of deep interest to Paris and entire central Oxford, began to be seriously agitated in Portland during the summer of 1844. Frequent meetings to discuss the subject were held, and in Oxford county the matter was discussed at great length through the columns of the Norway Advertiser and Oxford Democrat. At a meeting at City Hall, Portland, Oct. 18, 1844, the report of Judge Preble and Josiah S. Little, who had previously been sent to Montreal to represent the interests of Portland in the great enterprise, was read, and was highly favorable and very favorably received. At this meeting, James Hall in connection with John M. Wilson, was directed to examine the route by the way of Andover and the lake region. The charter for the road was granted by the Legislature, February 10, 1845. The latter part of June 1845, a meeting was held at South Paris, and the following week one at Norway, to discuss the railway question and receive subscriptions to the stock. It was stated in the South Paris meeting, that the town of Paris had taken stock to the amount of nearly thirty-five thousand dollars. The Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad Company was organized at Portland, September 25, 1845; Hon. Josiah S. Little was chosen President, and Thomas Crocker, Esq., of Paris, was made a director. The preliminary survey of the road had already been commenced, and it was continued through the summer and fall. In January, 1846, an express went through from Portland to Montreal and a rival one from Boston to the same place, carrying the mails and dispatches received by the last European steamer. It was taken from Portland to Norway by Orren Hobbs in two hours and forty-five minutes, and from thence to Canaan, Vt., by G. G. Waterhouse in eleven hours; from that point it was taken by another messenger, and reached Montreal in twenty-six hours from Portland.

Ground was broken for the road at Portland, July 4, 1845, the road was opened to North Yarmouth, twelve miles from Portland, in 1848, and the cars were running to Meehanic Falls in the early part of the summer of 1849. The road was opened to South Paris and the first train arrived January 1st, 1850. The location was made and the road bed constructed through from Paris to New Hampshire line in 1850, and in March of 1851, the first train reached Bethel. In July of the same year, the road was opened to Gorham, N. H. During the year of 1852, it was opened to the Connecticut river, and early in 1853 the cars commenced running through from Portland to Montreal, a distance of three hundred miles. The opening of traffic by this railway, revolutionized the whole business of the region through which it passed, but this will be spoken of in another connection.

In the days of the early settlers and for quite a number of years afterwards, the rates of postage were high and were graduated according to the distance the mail matter passed over. The postage for letters was twenty-five cents for four hundred miles and over, eighteen and two-thirds for one hundred and fifty miles and not exceeding four hundred, twelve and one-half cents (ninepence) between eighty and one hundred and fifty miles, ten cents between thirty and eighty miles and six and one-fourth cents (fourpence half-penny) for any distance under thirty miles. The above were the rates on a single sheet of paper of any size, and consequently large sheets were generally used in the epistolary correspondence of our grand-parents. There were then no self-sealing envelopes and letters were secured by means of wafers or wax. Postage on letters might be prepaid or not at the option of the writer. These fractional letter rates made it quite a difficult task to make up the quarterly accounts at the Post Office, and they were very often returned for correction. Newspaper postage was one cent per copy within the State, or if published one hundred and fifty miles beyond the State limits. Beyond that distance, the postage was a cent and a half each. The Post-rider generally claimed the newspaper postage as part of his compensation, and was permitted to collect it. The following compiled from the archives of the Post Office Department, shows the number and names of the offices in Paris, the time when each was established, and the changes of administration in each, up to the present time :

Paris. Caleb Prentiss, April 1, 1801 ; Levi Hubbard, Feb. 10, 1807 ; Russell Hubbard, Jan. 12, 1813 ; Joseph G. Cole, Dec. 14, 1829 ; Geo. W. CHAPTER XXXIII.

PARIS CHURCHES AND MINISTERS.

It is but justice to say in the outset that many of the facts embraced in this Ecclesiastical History of the town, were compiled by Rev. Hiram C. Estes, D. D., and contained in a paper read by him at the Centennial Celebration. We have been able to glean some additional facts and have rearranged the whole matter in accordance with the general plan and scope of other portions of our work. We have given brief biographical sketches of ministers so far as we have been able to obtain them, and regret that in this particular, our history is not more nearly complete. Where ministers remained long in the town, we have found no trouble in getting at the leading facts in their career, but many of them, especially in case of the Methodists, were here only a short time, and of their previous history in many cases, we have been able to learn but little. The inhabitants of Paris have ever been a church-going people. The early settlers of the town were not far enough removed from their Puritan and Pilgrim ancestors to have forgotten or neglected their duties in providing for religious worship, and their pious example and veneration for things sacred, have been transmitted as a priceless legacy to their posterity.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Baptist church on Paris Hill, was the first organized, and this has ever been the leading organization in town. Among the first settlers were seven from the third Baptist church in Middleborough, Mass., who were dismissed from that church to join here. The elder Lemuel Jackson and Deacon John Willis, the latter of whom became a licensed preacher, were of this number. At an early period they opened and maintained a Baptist meeting, and when they were visited by Rev. James Potter in 1790, they enjoyed their first revival, and several were added to their number. Mr. Potter continued his visits at intervals, during the years 1791 and 1792, and laid the foundations of the church, which was subsequently organized.* Paris was also visited by Rev. Elisha Snow† while travelling

*Miller's "Maine Baptists."

†Rev. or Elder Elisha Snow, was born in Brunswick, Me., March 26, 1739, (O. S.), married Betsey Jordan of Cape Elizabeth, December 6, 1759, and settled at South Thomaston, where he died January 30, 1832, aged 93 years. He labored much with destitute churches, and was well known in many portions of the State three-quarters of a century ago.

as a missionary among destitute churches, who united the Baptists here in a church relation, November 18, 1791. Elder Hooper states the number of members to be twenty-eight, twelve males, and sixteen females, but the minutes of the Bowdoinham Association of 1792, which are probably correct, give the number as twenty-one. From the time of its organization until 1795, the church was aided by the labors of several visiting ministers, besides those already named. Rev. James Hooper first visited the town November 6, 1794, and on the 25th of June of the following year, he was ordained as pastor of the church*: he was elected minister of the town on the 6th day of April, 1795, and was the only Paris minister who ever enjoyed that distinction. He continued as pastor of the church until the ordination of his successor in 1838. He was not only pastor of the church and minister of the town, but he was an influential and much respected citizen in all that the term implies, and a more complete sketch of his life and services is given with other ministers of Paris.

The first Baptist church or meeting house on the Hill, was built in 1803, as our extracts from the town records have shown. Pews had previously been sold to the amount of two thousand dollars. The building committee consisted of five persons, viz: Ebenezer Rawson, Jairus Shaw, Lemuel Jackson, Jr., Benjamin Hammond and Nathan Woodbury. The frame was raised in June, 1803, and the house was dedicated on the 30th of May, 1804. The first meeting-house in Paris was a large house, in the old style of New England architecture, with two tiers of windows, a lofty, massive tower, three entrance doors, one in front, the others on the south and north sides of the tower, though only the south door was ordinarily used: square pews, with seats on two sides, the one facing the pulpit and the other the door of the pew: a high pulpit with sounding board above, and galleries running round three sides of the house. Thus built of immensely heavy timbers, one must have thought that it would stand a century: but in the space of a single generation, it became dilapidated and unfit for use, and, like the old dispensation when Christ came, was ready to vanish away and give place to another.

In 1838 this old meeting-house was removed, and another was erected in its place, on very nearly the same spot, only a little further removed from the main street and like the other facing the east.

*The occasional sermon was preached by his brother, Rev. William Hooper, the charge given by Rev. Isaac Chase, and the right hand of fellowship by Rev. James Potter.

The old house had been used for town meetings as well as for religious purposes as was the custom of the time: the new house was built with a basement story, which was finished for a town-house, and has served this purpose to the present day. This new house of worship was completed and dedicated on the 6th of December, 1838. The dedication sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. C. B. Davis, from the text, Gen. 28: 17, "This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." Twice this house has been repaired: once in 1860, when the style of the pews was changed, and the pulpit lowered to a convenient platform, and again in 1875. At this latter date, the total expense of repairing and refurnishing was $622.16. In 1864, a convenient vestry was built in the rear of the church to which there is access by a stairway and door at the right of the pulpit. The vestry was finished and formally opened with religious services on the 5th of November, in that year. In 1883, Hon. Hannibal Hamlin presented the church with a fine clock, which has been put in place, and while the old bell calls the people of the village to church, the new clock furnishes them with the standard time.

The successor of Elder Hooper was Rev. Caleb B. Davis, a native of Methuen, Mass., born July 3, 1807, and ordained June 27th, 1838. He was a graduate of Newton Theological Seminary, class of 1837, a man of culture and refinement, and in many respects the opposite of his predecessor. He was an able preacher and distinguished for the purity of his life. During the first three years of his ministry, eighty new names were added to the roll of members of the church. In marked contrast to Elder Hooper, he was an ardent worker in the temperance cause, a strictly total abstinence man himself and an advocate for it with respect to all others. He labored in this field not only in Paris, but in the surrounding towns, and several town temperance societies were formed as the result of his efforts. He resigned the pastorate of the church Aug. 23d, 1852, on account of declining health, and died January 12, 1855, in Portland. His death in middle life and with natural and acquired abilities capable of doing so much good, was universally regretted. Mr. Davis was succeeded by Rev. Adam Wilson, D. D., who assumed the pastorate of the church in 1852, and remained until 1855. For a further notice of this distinguished minister, the reader is referred to sketches of Paris ministers. Rev. W. H. S. Ventres was pastor eight years, from his ordination July 8th, 1858, till his resignation Oct. 28th, 1866. Rev. Wm. H. H. Walker three years, from 1867 till 1870, and Rev. A. A. Ford from his ordination on the 2d of November, 1870, till his resignation on the 2d of October, 1872. Rev. Hiram C. Estes, D. D., entered upon his work as pastor of this Church, January 1st, 1873, and resigned to take effect in July, 1883. The present pastor, J. E. Cochrane, commenced his labors with the Church, August 1, 1883.

In 1792, the Baptist church of Paris was united with the Bowdoinham Association, then the only association of Baptist churches in the State. The missionaries designated by the association to visit No. 4, during the year 1793, were Elder Potter, Elder Stinson and Elder Macomber. The Cumberland association was formed in 1811, and included the church in Paris. The first Deacon of the church was John Willis, who was ordained as an evangelist, March 7, 1810, and who died July 23d, 1812, aged 56. The following have been Deacons since the church was first organized :

Statistics of the church from the date of its organization to 1876, doubtless approximately correct, are as follows : Whole number of members, 651. Of these, 253 had been dismissed, 71 excluded, 151 had died, while 46 had been dropped for causes unknown. The membership at that time was 129. The number in 1884 was 114. The first known mention of a Sunday school connected with the church, was in the letter to the association in 1837, and since that time it has been sustained constantly.

*Of him his pastor, Elder Hooper said: "Dea. John Willis and his wife were the first family that came into the town of Paris. He had great knowledge of the Bible, and was a sound predestinarian, and was able to vindicate the cause of God, and would not yield a hair's breadth to any man. He was meek and humble, and bore the infirmities of his brethren beyond any man I ever saw. Brother Willis was the most like his Master Jesus Christ of any man I ever saw."

REV. JAMES HOOPER.

As the first and only minister settled by the town of Paris, and one whose ministry began soon after the town was incorporated, and extended over a period of nearly forty years, Rev. James Hooper is entitled to something more than an ordinary notice. He was born in Berwick, Maine, in 1769. His father was William, and his mother Elizabeth Emery. His brother William was the first ordained minister of the Baptist denomination in the State; he was ordained in 1776. Elder Hooper's parents were Congregationalists. He commenced preaching on New Year's day, 1791, when twenty-two years of age. As an itinerant preacher, he travelled sometime in New Hampshire with Rev. Joshua Smith. He came to Cumberland county in 1793, first preaching in Minot. Then he preached three Sabbaths in Hebron, and from there went to New Gloucester and preached several Sundays for two dollars per week and board, which was all he asked. He first came to Paris and preached, November 6, 1794. In March, 1795, the church and town invited him to become their pastor and minister, and he was soon after ordained in Lemuel Jackson's barn. In 1795, he was united in marriage with Miss Sally Merrill of New Gloucester, who bore him two daughters, Polly and Eliza, but both died of scarlet fever in 1806, within a few days of each other. His wife had already died of consumption, April 19, 1802, aged 24 years. Before the end of the year, he had been married to the widow of Reuben Hubbard, who was the daughter of Benj. Stowell, Esq., of Worcester, Mass. The following notice of Elder Hooper is from the paper read by Rev. Dr. H. C. Estes, at the centennial celebration of the town:

"Elder Hooper was the first and only minister settled by the town. His ministry was longer than any other in our history, and it was nearly all spent here from its beginning to its close. He was a young man of twenty-five when he came here; he was an old man of 73 when he died. He was a man of mark, eminent and influential among the eminent men of the town throughout his generation. He was a man of great energy and force of character, rare powers of mind, quick perception, clear conception, deep insight, long foresight, strong will, indomitable persistency and courage, absolute fearlessness and independence, complete self-possession and self-control, and self-confidence ; a magnetic power of influence and control over others ; a man to lead and to command anywhere, a very Andrew Jackson in his sphere. Besides his work as a minister of the gospel, he was much engaged in business, and he mingled much with public men, lawyers and sagacious statesmen, and he always had their respect. He was a member of the convention that formed the constitution of this State, and he was a member of the committee appointed by that body on the constitution. He served several times as a member of the legislature, and was always a leader in his political party. He was a democrat, decided and thorough going, as shown in his communications to the Paris papers, and especially in his controversy with Henry Prentiss : he was never afraid that it would hurt his fingers to handle hard money. He used to say that there were two things in which he was established—one was religion, and the other was politics : and when he was established in anything, it was as Hooper's Ledge or Streaked Mountain is established. When he was settled as the minister of the town, he became entitled to four lots of ministerial land ; but he soon relinquished two of them to the town, and one of them was sold at auction for $701 : while of the other two he made his farm. Late in life he said in his autobiography, 'I have had dealings with very many men, and I have had but little difficulty with any, but I should not advise any minister to buy and sell so much as I have.' During the first ten years of his ministry, he received no salary from his people only 'occasionally some presents :' and afterwards he received but little more than $100 a year from the ministerial fund that had accrued from the land which he had given back to the town : still he said—'The Lord has so prospered me that I was as able to help the people as they were to help me.' Late in life, however, he said, 'If I had my life to live over again, I would do differently in the matter of salary.' In everything he was a man of strict punctuality, integrity and justice : and whatever he said the people received as if they had read it in the Bible, or as if it were the law of the land. His preaching was plain, direct, positive, strong. His words were short, sharp and incisive as rifle shots. His sermons were of thought and energy 'all compact,' and, very short,—hardly more than twenty or twenty-five minutes in length,—for he had the rare ability to know precisely what he had to say, to say it, and be done. He was not the man to pay two dollars, or to use two words when one was enough. His preaching was as sincere as it was plain. In it, as in everything else, he was honest. He believed what he preached, and he preached what he believed. His convictions were his own; they were positive; and they appeared in his utterance as plain as lightning in the night. Of every point of his faith and preaching he could say as he did of Election, 'If no man on earth believed it but myself, I should still believe as I now do; but as a man, I am as willing that any other man should enjoy his religion as I am to enjoy mine.' It is often said that he was stern and severe, rough and rugged; and he was: but still he had his gentle moods, and his soft inside, for the difference between him and others was that he was made up rough side out. He had the tender sympathies of a true, human heart; his spirit, bowed in humble and adoring reverence before his God; he honored man because he honored and exalted God; and he loved little children though often they did not know it.

It is not given to many men to exert such an influence as that of Elder Hooper in Paris; but that influence was no accident. There was something in him to account for it, and to produce it. Take him for all in all, he was no common man. Notwithstanding his limitations and his faults, he was one of those men who in church and state are pillars."

Elder Hooper was a friend of education, and had great faith in the common schools. In the early times, in districts where there were but few scholars and no school houses, he insisted on their having schools either in barns, blacksmith shops, or in private houses, if there was more than one room. In this way, he accomplished much in the way of educating the children of the early settlers. He had his peculiarities, his austere side, but his kind-heartedness and earnest desire for the good of the people of the town, made him very popular with all classes.

One who was well acquainted with Elder Hooper says of his personal appearance, that he was rather tall and spare, had large lips, and was very plain looking. His redeeming feature was his eyes, which were large, intelligent, penetrating, and indicated great strength of character. He had a very harsh, unpleasant voice, but in the pulpit, after the introduction of his subject, his hearers forgot all about this, in their interest in the subject and his method of presenting it. He never wrote out his sermons in full, but sometimes had a few notes or reminders upon slips of paper. Though tenacious of his own religious views, he was liberal toward others, and on one occasion invited Rev. Sebastian Streeter, the distinguished Universalist preacher, to occupy his pulpit. Elder Hooper died December 24, 1842. In 1834, he published a pamphlet containing a brief sketch of his life, and an exposition of his theological views.

CALEB B. DAVIS.

Rev. Caleb B. Davis, the second pastor of the Baptist church on Paris Hill, was born in Methuen, Mass., July 3, 1807. His father was Capt. Bailey Davis of Methuen, and his mother was Miss Hannah Swan of the same town. Having completed his preparatory course, he entered Newton Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1837. He married Oct. 29, 1837, Miss Louisa, daughter of Thomas and Mary Griffin of Derry, N. H. He commenced his ministry with the church in Paris in Oct. 1837, and remained until, on account of failing health, he was compelled to resign the pastoral office Aug. 23, 1852. He died in Portland, January 12, 1855. Of his qualities as a man and minister, Rev. Dr. Estes thus speaks :

“He was singularly adapted to his place and to this work. Calm, deliberate, thoughtful, patient and persistent; gentle and firm; endowed by nature with much good sense and sensibility; well trained and cultivated in the schools; never rash or in haste to act, but straightforward and tenacious of his purpose, when once he had decided upon his course; wise to see what needed to be done, and skilful in adapting means to ends to secure his object; always devout and reverent, but not wanting in the grace of a genial humor; kind, courteous, and in nearly all his intercourse with men, a singular sense of propriety, decorum and order showing itself in whatever he said and did; he seemed to have been specially raised up, called, and qualified for the work that needed to be done in Paris, to take up the work into which he entered when Elder Hooper left it; to set in order the things that were wanting; to change what needed to be changed; to lead the church into a true and hearty sympathy with the Christian spirit of the age, and the various enterprises of education, temperance, missions and all that pertains to Christian benevolence, reform and progress; and all this so quietly, silently, and imperceptibly, as to cause no jar or discord, but make the change seem more like growth than change. Very delicate, difficult and important was the work which he had to do; but in the good providence of God, when the hour came the man was ready.”

His temperance work in this and other Oxford county towns, deserves special mention. When he came into the county, there were many towns in which scarcely any temperance work had been done, and in none of them had the cause become established. In Paris, the powerful influence of Elder Hooper had always been in an opposite direction, and it required tact as well as courage on the part of Mr. Davis, to combat the deeply rooted prejudices of many of the elderly members of the parish. But having the co-operation of some of the leading citizens of the village and town, he went bravely to the work and marvelous was the change in public opinion which was wrought in a few years. His success in the ministry is shown in the fact that 151 persons united with the church during his pastorate. During these years, he solemnized 69 marriages and attended 201 funerals. "His influence was felt for good not only in his own church and town, but in all the churches of the association with which he was connected, in the counsels of the convention and the Missionary Society of the State, and in the Board of Waterville College, of which he was a trustee, from 1842 till his death." His widow became the wife of Joel B. Thayer, long one of the faithful Deacons of the church.

ADAM WILSON.

Rev. Adam Wilson, D. D., was born in Topsham, February 10, 1794, was baptized and joined the Baptist church in July, 1816, and graduated from Bowdoin College in the class of 1819. From the college he went to Philadelphia and studied theology under Rev. Dr. Stoughton and Rev. Alvah Chase. He was ordained an evangelist at Topsham, Dec. 20, 1820, and first supplied a pulpit at New Haven, Conn., at the same time continuing his theological studies under Dr. Fitch of Yale College. His first regular charge was at Wiscasset, where he stayed four years, and during the next four years, was at Turner and New Gloucester. In 1828, he established in Portland, a denominational paper, the Zion's Advocate, of which he was both owner and editor. He continued in charge of the paper, at the same time, preaching on the Sabbath, nine years. He then removed to Bangor and took charge of the Baptist church there, where he remained three and one-half years. He was then at Turner two years, and then returned to Portland and to the charge of the Zion's Advocate, where he remained until 1848, when he disposed of the paper and moved to Hebron, where he was pastor three years. In 1851, he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Waterville College, and the following year came to Paris. Dr. Wilson remained here from 1852 to 1857, five years. After his removal from here, he labored with various churches in the State, residing near the college at Waterville, where he died January 16, 1871. Dr. Wilson was a man of decided ability, and as a preacher, pastor and editor, took rank among the ablest of the clergy in his denomination in this State. He was a warm friend of education, and an efficient worker in the cause of temperance and other moral reforms. Few men have commanded more respect in the communities where he has lived, than Dr. Wilson, not only by the members of his denomination, but by the people generally. Calm, dignified and self-possessed, a man of commanding presence, yet always affable and kind, he at the same time won the respect and esteem of those with whom he came in contact. January 23, 1833, Dr. Wilson married Sally H., daughter of Dominicus and Susanna (Perkins) Ricker of Parsonsfield, and a sister of Rev. Joseph Ricker, D. D., of Augusta, by whom he had four children, among whom was John B., born Feb. 24, 1834, graduated at Waterville College, class of 1854, also in medicine, was surgeon of one of the Maine regiments during the late war, settled in Dexter, where he married Semanthe T. Perkins, and died March 15, 1866, and Geo. A. Wilson, now an Attorney at Law at South Paris, and Judge of Probate for Oxford county. Dr. Wilson was a trustee of Waterville College, now Colby University, for many years, and by his industry and perseverance in its behalf, he did much in bringing about results which have placed it upon its present substantial foundation.

REV. ADAM WILSON, D.D.

WM. H. S. VENTRES.

Rev. Wm. H. S. Ventres was born in Haddam, Conn., Oct. 3, 1832. His father was Sluman Ventres, and his mother Mary W. Shailer, sister of the late Dr. Wm. H. Shailer of Portland. He graduated at Harvard College in 1855, and at Newton Theological Seminary in 1858. He was ordained at Portland in 1858, and came to Paris the same year. He remained here until 1866, and his subsequent settlements have been as follows: Hyde Park, Mass., 1866 to 1870; Hudson, Mass., 1871 to 1878; he is now settled over the church in North Livermore. He married Nov. 23, 1858, Eliza Murdock of Brookline, Mass., and has seven children as follows: Wm. R., b. Aug. 28, 1859; Mary E., b. Nov. 26, 1861; J. Warren, b. May 16, 1864; Edward C., b. Sept. 15, 1866; Albert S., b.

Sept. 12, 1868; Henry W., b. Oct. 16, 1871; Ernest E., b. April 7, 1874.

WM. H. WALKER.

Rev. Wm. H. Walker was the son of John and Elizabeth (Pratt) Walker, and was born at Lexington, Mass., in 1824. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, studied at Brown University, and studied theology at Newton Theological Seminary. He commenced preaching in 1855, was at Webster, Mass., three years, at Natick two years and seven months, at Hampton Falls, N. H., three years, and then came to the church on Paris Hill, where he remained three years. From here, he went to Greenville, N. H., where he remained three years, at Warner eight years, then went to Edgarton, Martha's Vineyard, where he yet resides, and is on his fourth year at that place. He was married July 11, 1855, to Miss Martha R. Cram of Medford, Mass., and has two children, Lillie J., and William Henry.

ALBERT A. FORD.

Rev. Albert Aaron Ford was born in Boston, August 27, 1840. His father, John Ford, was a newspaper-man, publishing at one time, the Boston Journal, and subsequently the Cambridge Chronicle. Albert A., was educated in the public schools of Cambridge, at Phillips Academy, and at Newton Theological Seminary. He was ordained as pastor of the church here, Nov. 2, 1870, having previously been preaching with the church about a month. He married Estella O., daughter of Alden and Lucy (Cole) Chase, then of Paris, now of Woodstock. Mr. Ford resigned his pastorate of the church in October, 1872, on account of failing health. He has since had settlements at Belfast, Auburn and Waldoborough. In June of 1879, he received the complimentary degree of Master of Arts from Colby University. His health being much impaired, by the advice of physicians, he has temporarily retired from active work.

HIRAM C. ESTES.

Rev. Hiram Cushman Estes, D. D., is the son of John and Sarah (Andrews) Estes,* and was born in Bethel, July 27, 1823. He was

*The grandfather of Dr. Estes was Stephen Estes, who came from Shapleigh to Bethel quite early, and married Relief, daughter of Enoch and Elizabeth Bartlett. The father of Stephen was Daniel, who formerly lived in Berwick, afterwards in Shapleigh, and when quite aged came with his four sons, Stephen, Benjamin, John and Richard to Bethel. The father of Daniel was probably Joseph of Dover, N. H., who married in 1719, Mary, daughter of Timothy Robinson. The father of Joseph was Matthew Estes, born to Robert brought up on a farm, but early developed a love of learning and a passion for books. Like many other New England youths, he was obliged to depend mainly upon his own efforts for the means necessary to a course of study, and in his case as in many others, the fact was demonstrated that a determined will is quite sure to open a way. After leaving the town school, he attended Bethel Academy, the Turner High School and at Hebron Academy, working upon the farm portions of each year, and teaching in winter to meet his expenses. He entered Waterville College, now Colby University, in 1843, and graduated with honor in 1847. He studied Theology at the Cambridge (Mass.) Divinity School, and was ordained to the work of the ministry at Auburn, in this State, in 1850. For three years, from 1852 to 1855, he was agent for the American Baptist Union in the State of Maine; settled over the church in Trenton from 1855 to 1860; at Leicester, Mass., from 1860 to 1862; at Jericho, Vermont, from 1862 to 1872; over the Baptist church in Paris, from January 1, 1873 to July 1, 1883, and since September 1, 1883, at Winchenden, Mass. While at Trenton, he was elected to the Legislature in 1858, and served as chairman of the committee on Education on the part of the House, to which position he was admirably adapted. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater in 1872, and never has this important degree been more fitly bestowed by that institution. Dr. Estes is a profound scholar, a forcible and interesting writer, and whatever he undertakes to do, he does well. He has written and delivered several lectures which have been highly spoken of by those best qualified to judge. His only published volume is an essay entitled "The Christian Doctrine of the Soul," which appeared in 1873, from the press of Noyes, Holmes and Company of Boston. It is a duodecimo of 163 pages, and a model of concise and logical writing. It was well received by all denominations of Christians. Several of his occasional sermons have been printed and widely read. Dr. Estes married Sophia B., second daughter of Dea. Eli and Dorcas (Bartlett) Foster of Bethel, and has had three children. The oldest, David Foster Estes, graduated from the University of Vermont, studied Theology at Newton, and was an able and popular and Dorothy Estes in Dover, England, in 1645, came to Dover, N. H., and married, April 14, 1676, Philadelphia, daughter of Ronald and Ann Jenkins, and widow of Edward Hawes of Kittery. The early families of this name in this country belonged to the Society of Friends. The maternal grandfather of Dr. Estes was Jeremiah Andrews, who came from Temple, N. H., to Bethel, and whose wife was Elizabeth Sawtelle.

preacher until he accepted a position as teacher in the Baptist Seminary at Atlanta, Ga. The second, Walter Hatch Estes, a young man of great promise, while reading law at Richford, Vt., drank water from a poisoned well and thereby lost his life. His remains repose in this town, and the spot is marked by a beautiful marble monument erected by his family. The third, a daughter, is yet with her parents.

J. E. COCHRANE.

Rev. J. E. Cochrane was born in Monmouth, Maine, July 4, 1854. His father, also J. E. Cochrane, was the son of Dr. James Cochrane, a descendant of the Scotch-Irish immigration from the north of Ireland to Londonderry, N. H., and late a well-known physician in Monmouth. The parents of the subject of this sketch, moved to Aroostook county and lived there quite a number of years. The son fitted for college at the Waterville Classical Institute, graduated at Colby University, studied Theology at Rochester, N. Y., and commenced his first regular pastorate with the Baptist church in Paris, August 1, 1883. He preached some every year during his educational course, a portion of three years in Mariaville, Hancock county, where he was ordained as an evangelist, August 6, 1879. He was married Sept. 3, 1877, to Miss Hattie M. Chick of Waterville. He is earnest, energetic and devoted to his profession, and good results have followed his ministrations wherever he has preached. He is yet a young man, and his reputation as a pastor is yet to be made, but the indications are that he will prove a worthy successor to the distinguished ministers who have been settled over this church.

SECOND BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Baptist church at North Paris is known as Paris and Woodstock church, because its members live in each town. It was organized March 11, 1828, with twenty-one members, many of whom were dismissed to join here, from the Baptist church on the Hill. This church first sent delegates to the association in 1828, and the names of those representing the church for a series of years are given below. The names of ordained ministers are in small capitals, the licensed preachers in italics, and the figures at the end represent the number of members that year.

- The falling off in membership in 1856, is due to the fact that a church was that year organized at Bryant's Pond, which took away most of the members from Woodstock.
- The pastors of this church with the length of their pastorates have been as follows :
- Rev. Luther Perkins, 2 years, 1836-7.
 Rev. Addison Abbott, 7 years, 1846-52.

Rev. Charles Perkins, 4 years, 1855-8.

Rev. M. Lawrence, 2 years, 1859-60.

Rev. R. B. Andrews, 1 year, 1861.

Rev. O. Richardson, 1 year, 1862.

Rev. Wm. Beavins, 2 years, 1863-4.

Rev. G. W. Fuller, 2 years, 1870-71.

Rev. T. G. Lyons, 3 years, 1875-77.

Of the above, Rev. Luther Perkins was the son of Cornelius Perkins of Woodstock. He was born Dec. 10, 1797, and married first, Sally Durell, by whom he had six children. He married for his second wife Miss Brown of Weld, and died in that town when but little past middle life. Rev. Addison Abbott is spoken of elsewhere. Rev. Charles Perkins was brother of Luther. He married Amazina Cushman of Bethel, and went west many years ago. Rev. Manasseh Lawrence was born in Wayne, and his ancestors came from Sandwich, Mass. He resided many years in Sumner and elsewhere, was a faithful and devoted Christian and an able preacher. He died about twenty years ago. Rev. Russell B. Andrews was a young man, preached occasionally as a supply, but had no permanent settlement in this vicinity. Rev. Oren Richardson, who was here in 1862, was then of Buckfield, but previously of Rumford and Milton. Rev. Wm. Beavins was born in England, and had settlements at Bethel and Bryant's Pond. Afterwards he was at Bowdoinham, and then went South. Rev. G. W. Fuller was ordained by this church; Rev. T. G. Lyons was at Bryant's Pond before coming here, and Rev. Seth Benson is a native of Paris. The church here was built by the Baptists and Methodists in 1833, and has since been repaired and much improved.

ADDISON ABBOTT.

Rev. Addison Abbott for several years pastor of the Baptist church at North Paris, was the oldest son and second child of Jonathan and Betsey (Batchelder) Abbott of Bethel, and was born July 25, 1803. He spent his early years with his father upon the farm, attended school at Rumford under the tutorship of Rev. Daniel Gould, also at the High schools at Bethel and in Brunswick. He began to preach when about twenty-five years old at school houses in Bethel and in the adjoining towns. He also taught schools in winter and sometimes in spring and autumn. About the year 1840, he went to Rhode Island, remaining there several years, teaching and occasionally preaching. He was ordained at North Paris in 1846, this being his first and only regular settlement. He married Rebekah, daughter of Luke Chase of this town, and had two children. He never enjoyed good health, and in the language of the centennial paper before referred to, "he lived a life of quiet usefulness, wisely adapting himself to his people's wants." We may add from our own personal knowledge, that he was a man respected and revered by all, and most by those who knew him best.

UNIVERSALISTS.

Only a few of the early settlers of Paris became Universalists, and this denomination has never been especially strong in point of numbers. The names of those of our citizens of the olden time who inclined to this form of religious faith, may be inferred from the following list of persons, part of whom were residents of Paris, but a majority of Norway, who petitioned the Great and General Court for an act of incorporation as the Paris and Norway First Universalist Society. The act of incorporation was passed March 4, 1805, and the following were the incorporators:

Samuel Ames, Levi Bartlett, Josiah Bartlett, Anthony Bennett, Nathaniel Bennett, Josiah Bisco, Jonas Bisco, Peter Buck, James Buck, Ebenezer Cobb, Elisha Cummings, Isaac Cummings, Noah Curtis, Jr., Jacob Frost, Jr., Joseph Gallison, Benjamin Herring, Benjamin Herring, Jr., Levi Hubbard, John Knight, Daniel Knight, Dudley Pike, John Robinson, Joseph Rust, Henry Rust, Jr., Samuel Smith, Daniel Staples, Elias Stowell, Daniel Stowell, William Stowell, Jacob Tubbs, Benjamin Witt and Charles Young.

Of the above, Gen. Levi Hubbard, John Robinson, Daniel Staples the three Stowell brothers and Josiah and Jonas Bisco, were of Paris, and Dudley Pike, Daniel Knight, Elisha Cummings and Isaac Cummings, were residents of Paris either before or after this event took place. No minister was settled by this society for many years, but itinerants sometimes visited this region and preached both in Norway and Paris, either in private residences or in school houses. The attendance at such meetings was generally very light, every effort being made by the clergymen of other denominations to keep their people away.

About the year 1840, Rev. D. T. Stevens who is still living, and the oldest Universalist minister in the State, preached in this region, and the following year an organization was effected. A list of those who assisted in this movement, we have not been able to obtain.

Mr. Stevens was succeeded by Rev. Norris Coleman Hodgdon, who was ordained as pastor in the early part of 1844. The sermon on the occasion was preached by Rev. J. G. Adams, who also composed the opening hymn : another hymn for the occasion was composed by Miss S. C. Edgarton, and was as follows :

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH, PARIS HILL.

“Father Divine, thy holy seal
Bestow upon thy servant’s head;
And to his visioned faith reveal
Thy Path wherein his feet must tread.

Give truth's great power to every word
 That falls perceptive, from his tongue,—
 And let each chord by love be stirred,
 That Thou within his heart hast strung.

Thy grace, distilling from his lips,
 Shall give to every soul repose:
 Sweet as the fragrant dew that dips
 From Sharon's meek, unfolding Rose.

Oh! aid him by the weary bed
 Of pain and want, of doubt and woe;
 That he in every breast may shed
 The hopes that from thy mercy flow.

Grant him rich grace when o'er the dead
 He utters forth the truth sublime,
 That Thou hast made the spirit fled,
 A victor over Death and Time.

And when his own warm pulse grows cold,
 When death-mists cloud his drooping eye,
 May he through faith his home behold,
 And feel that it is gain to die!"

Mr. Hodgdon remained here only a short time, and after he severed his connection with the society, there was no settled minister and only occasional preaching by Rev. Geo. K. Shaw and others, until Rev. J. C. Snow came in 1859. Mr. Snow was settled in Norway, but preached here a part of each Sabbath, until the church was built, occupying the Court house. The church edifice was erected during Mr. Snow's ministry, and was dedicated Oct. 9, 1859. He continued to preach here until he was appointed chaplain of the 23d Regiment of Maine Volunteers in September, 1862.

Mr. Snow was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Hayward who resided in town, but remained only one year. He was a young man and has since had settlements at Plymouth, Mass., and elsewhere. Rev. Selden Gilbert was the next minister. He also lived in Paris and remained here two years. He was a native of Greene, and subsequent to his settlement here, he went to Chicago and was for a time associated with Dr. Hanson in the publication of the New Covenant. Rev. N. Gunnison came next. Like Mr. Snow he was pastor of the Norway society, resided in Norway and preached on the Hill a portion of each Sabbath. He was an elderly man and had been in the ministry many years. Previous to his coming to Norway, he had preached in Halifax; was there during our late war. He supplied the Paris Hill pulpit three years. After him, came Rev. Zenas Thompson who moved his family to the Hill and preached here one year.

After Mr. Thompson went away, the society was for some time without a minister, but in 1872, Rev. L. H. Tabor, who was settled at Norway, commenced preaching here, and continued his labors for two years. He was succeeded by Rev. J. C. Church who left at the end of a year, and was in turn succeeded by Mr. Tabor, who remained another two years. He, too, was an elderly man and had been long in the ministry. He was an able preacher and the church and society prospered under his ministrations. Mr. Tabor was succeeded in Norway and also in Paris by Rev. J. A. Seitz, who preached here a year or two, started a denominational paper at Norway called the "New Religion," and subsequently drifted into politics. W. W. Hooper came next, and supplied both societies to good acceptance. He went from here to Mechanic Falls in 1883, and since that time until recently, the society has been without a minister. A Universalist church was first organized at Paris Hill in 1864. Among the leading men of this society are Ex-Governor Perham, Jarvis C. Marble, Elbridge Fobes, and Hiram Hubbard.

ZENAS THOMPSON.

Rev. Zenas Thompson, pastor of the Universalist church in 1869, and a resident of the town, was born in Auburn, Dec. 4, 1804. He was of Scotch-Irish lineage, his first American ancestor, Archibald Thompson, coming from the north of Ireland to America in 1724, and settling at Bridgewater. Capt. John Thompson, the grandfather of Zenas, married Jeanette Allen and moved to Buckfield. Archibald Thompson was a wheel-maker, and made the first spinning-wheel ever made in New England. John Thompson of Buckfield, followed the same trade. The father of Zenas was Hannibal, son of John before-named, and his mother was a Dillingham of Auburn. Mr. Thompson early embraced the Universalist faith, and began to preach when quite young. He had settlements in various parts of the State, in Farmington, Bridgton, Yarmouth, Augusta, Bethel, Bryant's Pond, Mechanic Falls, West Waterville and Paris, and in several places in Massachusetts. He was among the ablest and best known of the ministers of his denomination in the State, a profound thinker, a logical reasoner and gifted as a pulpit orator. He was among the first in Maine to suggest the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and one of its most eloquent advocates. He was chaplain of the 6th Maine Regiment in the war of the rebellion, and malaria contracted in the Chickahominy swamps in the Peninsula campaign of 1862, was the remote cause of his death. He inherited the mechanical genius of his ancestors. He could make an elegant fly-rod or a rifle, and was skilful in the use of both. He had marvelous skill in wood-carving, and seemed to have an intuitive knowledge of almost everything in the department of the useful and ornamental arts. He had social qualities of a high order, and was a most agreeable friend and companion. He married Leonora Leavitt of Turner and reared a large family. One of his sons, Geo. W., was killed in action during the war, and the other two are engaged in manufacturing in Portland. One of the daughters, now deceased, was the first wife of Prof. Geo. L. Vose, formerly a resident here, and another, Mrs. Julia Schayer of Washington, D. C., is a magazine writer of repute. Mr. Thompson died at his home in Deering, Nov. 17, 1882.

JOSEPH C. SNOW.

Rev. Joseph C. Snow, as stated elsewhere, supplied the pulpit here while settled over the church in Norway. He was born in Whitewater township, Franklin county, Indiana, September 12, 1833. His father was Crocker Snow of New England ancestry, and his mother Narcissa Marvin. He graduated at Tuft's College in 1858; had preached more or less during the last year of his college course, and had his first settlement in Norway and Paris, commencing September 1, 1858. He remained in Norway to July, 1863, except that he was chaplain of the 23d Maine Regiment from Sept. 1862, to July, 1863. He was settled over the church at Auburn, Me., from July, 1863, to Oct. 1869, when he moved to Deering and had charge of Westbrook Seminary to 1872, three school years. He then returned to Auburn and remained until Dec. 1879. He then went to Newark, N. J., and was pastor of the church there, from January, 1880, to Feb. 1883; then was settled at Haverhill, Mass., where he now resides. He was married in Boston, Aug. 11, 1863, by Rev. Dr. Miner, to Miss Sarah J., daughter of Jeremiah Howe, Esq., formerly of Norway, since of Portland. They have had two children, Frederick Elmer, born Sept. 12, 1864, and Charles Joseph, born April 21, 1871. Mr. Snow is a scholarly man, a vigorous writer, a pleasing speaker, and a most excellent pastor. He is a good organizer, and the parishes where he has labored have been strong and prosperous.

SELDEN GILBERT.

Rev. Selden Gilbert was born in Greene, Androscoggin county, Maine, December 9, 1839. His father was Lewis Gilbert, and his mother Eunice Alden. He fitted for college at Westbrook Seminary and entered Tuft's College in 1859. He graduated from the St. Lawrence University in 1864, the year after he was ordained. He came to Paris and Norway in September, 1863, and was ordained the October following. He remained here nearly two years, and was then called to Melrose, Mass. Since then he has had settlements at Bridgeport, Conn., then went to Illinois and was connected with a denominational paper in Chicago. From there he came to East Boston and subsequently was called to Little Falls, New York, where he still resides. He married Sarah Louisa Whitmore of Bowdoinham, and has one child, Louis Whitmore, born June 3, 1871. On the mother's side, Mr. Gilbert descended from John Alden, the Mayflower Pilgrim; he is also a lineal descendant from Governor Bradford of Plymouth.

WM. W. HAYWARD.

Rev. Wm. Willis Hayward was born in Hancock, N. H., Oct. 17, 1834; his father was Charles Hayward, and his mother Ann Lakin. He was educated in the common schools in Hancock, at Hancock Academy, at Petersham and Francestown Academies, at the New England Normal School in Lancaster, Mass., and at Tuft's Divinity School. He preached his first sermon in Hancock, in May, 1857. Since leaving Paris, he has had settlements in Fairfield, Me., in Wakefield, Acton, Foxboro, Plymouth and Methuen, Mass., in Keene, N. H., and is now at South Framingham, Mass. He has also had brief engagements at St. Johnsbury, Vt., and at other places. He was for a time, chaplain of the 13th Maine Regiment. He married E. Ellen Chase of Keene, N. H.

CONGREGATIONALISTS.

The Congregationalist church was organized at South Paris, Nov. 4, 1812. There were fourteen original members whose names were as follows: Ezra Carey, Rufus Brett, Cynthia Carey, Susanna Brett, Lydia Hall, Lydia House, Joanna Durell, Eunice Robinson, Lucy Robinson, Mary Durell, Anna Durell, Amelia Haven, Mary Holmes Boyden, Phebe Brett. Two males and twelve females. The last member of the organization, Mary Durell, died Dec. 9, 1851.

On the 4th day of December, 1816, four years after the church organization, the bill passed the Senate and House of Representatives, Mass., incorporating the First Congregationalist society in Paris, in the county of Oxford.

CONGREGATIONALIST CHURCH, SOUTH PARIS.

The following were the corporate members of the society or parish :
Abraham Bolster, Jacob Tewksbury, Isaac Bolster, Jr., Luther Brett, Amzi Brett, Ezra Carey, Rufus Brett, David Durell, David

Clifford, Cyprian Hall, Abijah Hall, Caleb Prentiss, Haven Hall, Joel Robinson, Asa Robinson, Daniel Stowell, Jonathan Shurtleff, Daniel Stowell, Jr., and Charles Whitman.

The first meeting of the society for organization was held March 24, 1817, of which Daniel Stowell was Moderator, and Abijah Hall was chosen first Clerk of the society, and the first Prudential Committee was Ezra Carey, Abijah Hall and Dr. Jacob Tewksbury.

At the second meeting of the society—a special meeting called by request of five members, and held on Monday, Sept. 8, 1817, at one o'clock. P. M.—among the articles to be acted on, we find the following: “To hear the minds of the people respecting the building of a meeting-house, and to act on the subject as they shall think fit.”

Hitherto their meetings had been held in what was known as the south school-house, a good sized, unpainted building, which stood at the junction of the Robinson road, with the county road leading to Isaac Bolster's, and being nearly opposite to the burying ground in the Bolster neighborhood.

At the meeting above named, it was voted “to build a meeting-house, to choose a committee to exhibit a plan of said house, and to see what terms land can be procured to build upon.” The following were chosen: Maj. Joel Robinson, Wm. C. Whitney, Capt. Thomas Hill and Dr. Jacob Tewksbury. At an adjourned meeting it was voted to accept the plan presented by the committee.

The location of the house seemed to be the bone of contention, although the records are silent in regard to the discussions that arose. Some of the society were in favor of one place and some of another, and it seemed impossible to come to an agreement. Finally, as proposition after proposition was rejected, one of the brethren somewhat discouraged and desperate, proposed that it should be built directly on top of the school-house. It was decided, however, at last, to move the school-house a little, and build the church on its site.

Wm. C. Whitney being chosen auctioneer, the pews were sold as follows:

1st choice,	Cyprian Hall, No. 9,	$85.00
2d	Daniel Stowell, No. 4,	84.00
3d	Maj. Joel Robinson, No. 12,	80.00

28th	Benjamin Churchill, No. 40,	50.00
29th	Alfred Gates, No. 33,	50.00
30th	David Durell, No. 39,	50.00
31st	Asa Robinson, No. 31,	50.00

The remainder of the pews were sold by Thomas Crocker, auctioneer, June 12, 1819. The purchasers were Capt. George King, Stephen Robinson, David Clifford, James Holmes, Stephen Robinson, Philip Caldwell, Daniel Stowell, Esq., Barzilla Dwelley, Abraham Bolster, Simeon Perkins and Daniel Stowell. There were fourteen pews in the gallery that sold for $5.00 to $17.00 per pew.

At a meeting of the society held Oct. 6, 1817, it was voted to accept the land offered by Thomas N. Stowell in exchange for his pew. The land was eight rods on the county road, and sixteen on the Robinson road. It was also voted that the porch of the house should front on the Robinson road. The frame was of hewn timber. The clapboards were rived, and nearly all from one tree. Capt. George King was the carpenter. The raising was a notable occasion. Parson Hooper was present and opened the exercises with prayer. The raising was accomplished without accident, and as was customary in those days, it must have a name, usually proclaimed in rhyme by some volunteer, from the ridge-pole.

Martin Brett, then a young man, was the poet of the occasion, he answering to the question proposed by Giles Shurtleff, they standing on the frame. "What shall we call it?"

My friends, here is a noble frame,
And what say you shall be the name?
If you and I alike can see,
It shall be called the Unity.

Now friends and brethren will this do?
Will such a name as this suit you?
And if it will, then let us see
We live in peace and Unity.

And may our children worship here
When we from time shall disappear,
Unless like us they can agree
To build in peace and Unity.

To our surprise we have ascertained that no liquor was used at the "raising." The church was completed in 1818, at a cost of $2000, and May 26, 1819, it was dedicated.

The exercises on that occasion we find chronicled in the diary of Dea. Caleb Prentiss. First prayer by Rev. Mr. Hilliard. Sermon, by Mr. Creey, text, "Except the Lord build the house, we labor in vain that build it." The dedicatory prayer by Mr. Merrill, and an address to the church and society by Mr. Hilliard. A dedicatory poem was sung as an introduction to the exercise, and after the last prayer, a hymn written for the occasion by Abijah Hall. At the dedication, the treble singers were Apphia and Pauline Robinson, Charlotte Hall, Levina and Polly Caldwell and Ruth Durell. Rachel Shurtleff sang counter, Haven Hall, Frederic N. Hall, Martin Brett, Dr. Jacob Tewksbury and Zadoc Gates, bass. Giles Shurtleff and Luther Brett sang tenor.

It was a plain, substantial structure, two rows of small windows, 24 lights, no steeple, no chimney, lathed and plastered inside. The pulpit was of box-like construction, perched away up on the wall as was the custom, with a flight of stairs on one side, and directly underneath were the communion table and deacons' seat. Here the deacons sat on the morning of communion Sabbaths, facing the entire congregation. The pews were high and straight backed, built like oblong boxes. The pew doors were fastened with wooden buttons. When once in, you were a prisoner for the time being. The foot stoves were filled at the house of Abraham Bolster, near by, being now the homestead of Capt. G. C. Pratt. It was not long, however, after the house was built before a stove was put in, which we may judge produced sufficient warmth to take the chill off. The records show that a chimney was built in Oct. 1831, the job being struck off to Luther Brett for $7.70. Rev. Joseph Walker was the first settled pastor of this church. He was installed Dec. 19, 1821, at a salary of $400.

The house at one time narrowly escaped being destroyed by fire. Mr. Williams of Poland, who had exchanged with Mr. Walker, conducted the exercises of the evening. In snuffing the candle, the snuff was thrown down, and unnoticed fell into a box of sawdust. One of the singers, after his return home, remembered that he had noticed a smokey smell on leaving the house. He returned and found the sawdust nearly consumed, and doubtless this saved the building.

One of the most constant attendants upon Mr. Walker's ministry, was a man living in the eastern section of the town, who, from his habit of going to church very regularly, was known as "go-to-meeting Merrill" or "seven-mile Merrill." He used to ride to meeting seven miles every Sabbath, and was so prompt, that people going to meeting on Paris Hill, judged whether they were late or early by the place in the road where they met William Merrill. It is still within the recollection of some now living, a novel spectacle that was often seen at church. Mr. Ezekiel Merrill and Mrs. Moore were both hard of hearing, but rather than lose the preaching, they took their places in the pulpit, each with a tin ear trumpet, and so they stood during the long sermons, each with a trumpet pointed toward the minister.

On Saturday, June 20, 1835, it was voted that the "house be removed," and "that a committee of five be chosen to procure a situation, take subscriptions, and ascertain the cost and report at the next meeting," the committee being Thomas Hill, Maj. Cyprian Hall, Elisha Morse, David Clifford and Martin Brett. It was also "voted, if the house be removed, it be put up in its present form, and also that a belfry be put on so that a bell may be put in if wanted." The lot since known as the Academy lot was selected, it then being owned by Maj. Dennett. The price, however, was deemed too exorbitant, and the society accepted the donation of a lot from Abijah

Hall, it being his garden, and now the site of the present church. By the location of the house so near the homestead of the Major, it was judged that the society were entirely willing that he should sit under the "droppings of the sanctuary," although unwilling to aid them as they desired in their church enterprise. Mr. Geo. King, who built the house, took it down, and rebuilt in the fall of 1835. The form was retained with the exception that a belfry was built upon it. The cost of removal was about $900. Capt. Seth Morse donated the bell. A new bell was purchased in 1845, the old one having become unfit for use. The house remained unchanged until the fall of 1851, when the pulpit and galleries were lowered from their original positions, the windows enlarged, the pews taken up and made modern in shape and replaced. The work was done under the supervision of Mr. Charles Porter.

The organ was purchased in 1855, at a cost of $450. The building was materially altered and improved in 1859, being provided with a vestry and an extension, furnishing twenty-four new pews to the audience room. The stoves were taken out and their place supplied with a furnace, the gift of Messrs. Chase of Portland. The repairs were made by Messrs. Augustus and Erastus King, costing about $800. In Aug. 1877, a new bell was purchased, and in the summer of 1878, extensive repairs were commenced, and completed the following year, at a cost of over $2000, rendering the house convenient and attractive, alike creditable to the village and society. This was during the pastorate of Rev. C. D. Crane, whose active efforts had much to do in pushing it to completion. To his Historical Sketch, given at the closing exercises in the old meeting-house, Sabbath evening, July 14, 1878, we are indebted for portions of this article. The first service in the new house was held Aug. 17, 1879.

The following have been the pastors and acting pastors of the church :

Rev. Joseph Walker ; settled pastor Dec. 31, 1821, to his death, Apr. 8, 1851. Salary, $400.

Rev. Horatio Merrill ; stated supply for a few months in 1851.

Rev. Francis Dyer ; settled pastor from his ordination, Dec. 31, 1852, to Oct. 3, 1854. Salary, $500.

Rev. Daniel Sewall ; settled pastor from installation, Jan. 4, 1855 to Aug. 31, 1858. Salary, $500 and wood.

Rev. Alanson Southworth ; settled pastor, Jan. 13, 1859, till his death, on the 25th of March, 1864. Salary, $600 and four Sabbaths vacation.

Rev. Francis Southworth : part of the year 1865. Stated supply.

Rev. Jacob Chapman : stated supply, one year, from Sept. 1, 1865.

Rev. Francis B. Knowlton : acting pastor, Sept. 1, 1866, one year to Sept. 1, 1867. Salary, $750.

Rev. J. B. Wheelwright : nearly ten years. Settled pastor from installation, Dec. 4, 1868, till June 11, 1877. Salary, $800.

Rev. C. D. Crane ; acting pastor from Sept. 3, 1877, till January, 1880. Salary, $1,000.

Rev. E. E. Bacon ; acting pastor for the year 1880.

Rev. E. C. Ingalls : acting pastor for the year 1881 and 1882. Installed Aug. 1883, and is the present pastor. He was born in Glenville, N. Y., June 19, 1849, fitted for college at Andover Academy, graduated at Harvard College in 1873, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1876 : was ordained in 1877. He married, Feb. 13, 1884, Ella J., daughter of Josiah and Huldah (Estes) Cloudman of Saccarappa.

JOSEPH WALKER.

Rev. Joseph Walker, the first pastor of the Congregationalist church, at South Paris, was born in Townsend, Mass., February 19, 1792. His father was also Joseph and his mother Ruth Jenkins. He received but little assistance in obtaining an education, like many New England youth, working his own way along and teaching school to replenish his oft depleted purse. He graduated from Bowdoin College in 1818. He had previously studied medicine and fully intended to practice it, but changed his purpose, which led him to seek a college education. He studied theology with Rev. Mr. Coggs-well of Saco, and Dr. Payson of Portland, and made his first settlement in Paris, where he remained nearly thirty years, and until his death, which occurred in 1851. Prof. Packard of Bowdoin College, thus writes of Mr. Walker as a student : "He was a good student and held a good reputation for diligence and for a sound and discriminating mind. He was greatly respected both as a student and man. During the most active part of Mr. Walker's ministry, strong and heated religious controversies were going on among the clergy. The Unitarians as such, had just acquired "a local habitation and a name," and the Universalists were marshalling their forces under the able leadership of such ministers as Ballou, Whittemore, Deane, Cobb and others. The difference of opinion concerning the proper mode of baptism, was another much-discussed topic. Mr. Walker entered into the discussion with much spirit, and besides his pulpit labors, he wrote and printed two important pamphlets, bearing upon the questions at issue. His sermons were ably and logically written, his ideas being expressed in chaste and often in elegant diction, but his manner and delivery were not attractive. Dr. Estes, in his Centennial paper, thus speaks of him: "He had been educated in the schools; was studious in his habits; careful and elaborate in his preparation for the pulpit; exhaustive in his treatment of his themes; protracted in his pulpit services; sound and instructive in the matter of his discourses; impressive in his bearing in the pulpit and everywhere; always a clergyman; always a faithful shepherd of his flock, keeping it well together; a strict and thorough disciplinarian; ever on the alert that no root of bitterness should spring up within his church; and no foe assail it from without. If Elder Hooper kept the denominational watchfires burning on the hill, Mr. Walker did not allow them to go out in the valley; and their not unfrequent theological warfare was carried on by both those leaders from one and the same sentiment of loyalty to a common Lord." Mr. Walker was married in 1822, to Clarissa, daughter of Stephen and Jemimah Robinson, who died in 1828, and in 1829 to Elinor Hopkins. By the last wife he had five sons and one daughter. Joseph, his oldest son, entered Bowdoin College in 1850.

THE METHODISTS.

Under the direction of Rev. John Adams, a Methodist class was formed at South Paris in 1815. The class consisted of John Wolcott, class leader, and wife, Solomon Cloudman, who had been licensed as a preacher, and Betsey Morse Cloudman, his wife, Mrs. Jordan and her daughter Lucretia, and Philip Caldwell and wife. Mr. Adams was then in charge of the Poland circuit, of which Paris was a part. He was the first Methodist minister who labored in this vicinity. The interest in this form of religious faith which was first awakened at that time, was cherished and strengthened in subsequent years under the preaching of Wishworth Ayer, Isaac Moore, Abel Alton, who commenced to preach in 1828 at Waterford, David Copeland, who commenced his ministerial labors at Danville in 1824, Isaac Downing, who was at Bethel in 1829, Moses Davis, who was at Waterford in 1829, and here in 1830 and 1831, Henry Butler, who was here in 1832 : Dudley Greeley, who commenced to preach in Vienna in 1832, and was located here in 1835 ; Benj. Bryant, who preached first in Unity in 1826, and was afterward two years here, and James Warren, who joined the New England conference in

METHODIST CHURCH, SOUTH PARIS.

1827, and came to South Paris in 1836. The Methodist chapel at South Paris was erected in 1836 and 1837, while Rev. W. F. Farrington was in charge. Mr. Farrington commenced preaching in Durham in 1829, and went from Maine to Rhode Island in 1861. Since that time, the preachers in charge have been as follows :

- Rev. Levi S. Stockman, 3 years, 1838-40.
- Rev. Wm. Brown, 2 years, 1841-2.
- Rev. Benjamin Foster, 1 year, 1843.
- Rev. James Thwing, 1 year, 1844.
- Rev. Daniel Waterhouse, 2 years, 1845-6.
- Rev. Rufus H. Stinchfield, 2 years, 1847-8.
- Rev. Joseph Colby, 2 years, 1849-50.
- Rev. Chas. Andrews, 1 year, 1851.
- Rev. Joseph Hawkes, 2 years, 1852-3.
- Rev. F. A. Crafts, 2 years, 1854-5.
- Rev. Alvah Hatch, 2 years, 1856-7.
- Rev. Alpheus B. Lovewell, 1 year, 1858.
- Rev. Rufus H. Stinchfield, 2 years, 1859-60.
- Rev. Paschal E. Brown, 1 year, 1861.
- Rev. Parker Jacquith, 1 year, 1862.
- Rev. A. F. Barnard, 2 years, 1863-4.
- Rev. Willard Bartlett, 3 years, 1865-7.
- Rev. John C. Perry, 1 year, 1868.
- Rev. G. F. Cobb, 2 years, 1869-70.
- Rev. Alvah Hatch, 2 years, 1871-2.
- Rev. Ira G. Sprague, 1 year, 1874.
- Rev. J. B. Lapham, 2 years, 1875-6.
- Rev. F. C. Rogers, 3 years, 1877-9.
- Rev. E. W. Simons, 1880-2.
- Rev. Geo. L. Burbank, 1883.
- Rev. Hobart Foss, 1884.

Mr. Stockman first preached in Kittery in 1836, and died June 25, 1844 ; Mr. Brown commenced preaching in Kennebunkport in 1834 ; Mr. Foster is a native of Newry, in this State, was superannuated several years ago and resides in Bethel : James Thwing first preached at Bristol in 1828, and died at East Vassalboro', July 8, 1848 ; Daniel Waterhouse preached at Alfred in 1840, and was stationed at North Conway in 1880 ; R. H. Stinchfield was at Norway in 1838, and was transferred to the Wisconsin conference in 1864 ; Joseph Colby at Bartlett, N. H., in 1844, and at Hollis in 1880 ; Charles Andrews was at Argyle in 1838, and at Falmouth in 1880 ; Joseph Hawkes was at South Paris in 1840, and again in 1852-3, and at Strong in 1880; F. A. Crafts was at Bluehill in 1844, and joined the Providence, R. I. conference in 1862; Alvah Hatch commenced at Calais in 1836, was twice here, and had his last charge at Newfield in 1878; A. B. Lovewell was at Danville in 1849, now resides in Otisfield; Paschal Brown preached at Penobscot in 1818, and joined the East Maine Conference in 1848; Parker Jaquith was at Dixfield in 1837, was presiding Elder at Readfield in 1875-6, and in the Portland District in 1879-80. A. F. Barnard preached at Cooper in 1832, and died March 27, 1867; W. B. Bartlett was at Fairfield in 1859, and at Cornish in 1880; John C. Perry commenced preaching at Norway in 1837, and died March 20, 1880; G. F. Cobb was at Bridgton in 1860, and at South Berwick in 1880; Alvah Hatch commenced at Calais in 1836, and was at Newfield in 1878; Ira G. Spragne, a printer by trade, preached at Andover in 1870, and was in charge at North Auburn in 1880; J. B. Lapham, a native of Burrillville, R. I., was at Kennebunkport in 1861, at Elliot in 1880, and since then at Readfield; F. C. Rogers, formerly a printer in Augusta, at South Paris in 1877, next in Brunswick, and since then in Lewiston; E. W. Simons at Phillips in 1879, and at South Paris in 1880. In 1848, the church edifice at South Paris was burned, and another was built in its place, costing $2000, which was repaired in 1860 and enlarged, and a vestry built under it in 1877.

During 1857, the parsonage was built, the meeting-house lot being extended by purchase of land of John B. Stowell, and deeded to the society by Wm. Deering. Two hundred and seventy dollars willed to the society by Eleazer Bryant, were used in the construction of the parsonage, and the balance raised by sale of shares. These shares were subsequently bought up by a friend of the society, who also added five hundred dollars to the invested funds, so that the society is now out of debt, and has a fund of one thousand dollars.

The interest in Methodism at North Paris, began about the same time. Sometimes with South Paris, it formed one circuit, and at others not, but some forty years ago, they separated. Their meeting-house was built in connection with the Baptists in 1833, and was repaired in 1869. Since 1874 their preachers have been the same as at West Paris, and have divided their time between the two places. Randall Mitchell was here and in Woodstock in 1839, and afterwards joined the East Maine Conference; Richard H. Ford was at Columbia in 1836, at North Paris in 1842, and located in 1877;.

Jonathan Fairbanks, a native of Winthrop, was at North Paris in 1843, and died May 16, 1877; Thomas Hillman was at Bartlett, N. H., in 1849, and at North Paris in 1852; Levi Eldridge was here in 1857, and at Norway in 1861; Joseph Mooar was here in 1858, and at South Auburn in 1878; George Briggs was here in 1861, subsequently settled near West Paris, and died there; Alpheus Turner, a native of New Brunswick, formerly a sailor, was at West Newfield in 1849, and on Chebeague Island in Casco Bay, in 1880. At other times the North Paris church has been supplied by ministers residing elsewhere.

The class at West Paris was formed in 1866, by Rev. W. C. Stevens and three members. They now have a neat house of worship, built in 1878, and a class respectable in numbers. Their ministers preach also at North Paris, and since 1873 have been as follows:

Rev. S. C. Brown, 1 year, 1874.

Rev. J. Hillman, 2 years, 1874-5.

Rev. Benjamin F. Pease, 1 year, 1877.

Rev. M. C. Pendexter, 1 year, 1878.

Rev. Elbridge Gerry, Jr., 1 year, 1879.

Rev. S. C. Brown was at Newry in 1869-70, and at Rumford in 1880; of Rev. J. Hillman I knew nothing before or after his settlement here; B. F. Pease was of Standish in 1874, and at Naples in 1880; M. C. Pendexter was at Naples in 1877, and at Richmond in 1880; Elbridge Gerry, Jr., was at Mercer in 1869, and here in 1879 and 1880; he was followed by Rev. G. B. Hannaford, a native of Winthrop, whose parents were originally of New Gloucester.

CALEB FULLER.

Rev. Caleb Fuller, son of our early settler of the same name, was born in Paris, November 12, 1805. He early developed a love for knowledge, and though means of obtaining it in those days were very limited he persevered and became a teacher of the public schools when only eighteen years of age. As a teacher, he met with marked success. He united with the Methodist Episcopal church in 1826 and commenced to preach the following year. In 1828, he became a member of the Maine Methodist Conference, and during his more than 50 years of service, he has had settlements in the leading societies of his denomination in the State, among them, at Bath, Augusta, Hallowell, Farmington, Belfast, Rockland, Gardiner and Portland.

He has frequently served on School Boards, and in many ways has evinced a deep interest in the education of youth. He was a Chaplain of the House of Representatives in 1843, and a member in 1848, when besides other committees, he served on the Committee on Education. Mr. Fuller has been twice married and has one surviving daughter by each marriage. His first wife was Luda Monroe of Livermore, and the second, Elizabeth B. Swift of Wayne. The daughter of the first marriage married E. K. Boyle, a lawyer of Belfast, and the one by his second, to Albert H. Davis, a merchant of Bridgeport, Conn. Two children died while young. Though strongly attached to the denomination to which he belongs, he has always shown a liberal spirit towards others, and manifested a fraternal regard for all Christian people. As to his abilities as a preacher and Christian worker, the places to which his superiors have assigned him, sufficiently indicate. He has been a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity and frequently elected to the Chaplaincy of the Grand Lodge of Maine. He has now retired from active service and resides at his own house in Augusta.

FREE BAPTISTS.

A Free Baptist church was organized at West Paris, July 7, 1829. The first members had belonged to a church in Sumner. Rev. William C. Witham was its first pastor and really the founder of the church. He was a native of Gloucester, Mass., and an account of him is contained in Family Sketches. He was ordained the day following the forming of the church, and continued its pastor until 1839. The church was then without a pastor for many years, until 1851, when Rev. Robert Hayes was settled, who remained nearly nine years and was succeeded by Rev. Alexander Hill. Mr. Hill was a native of the town and neighborhood, being the son of Alexander Hill, who lived on the south bank of the Little Androscoggin, about a mile from West Paris Village. Mr. Hill resigned Dec. 16, 1876, and became a Universalist. He was succeeded by Rev. Geo. W. Gould, who resigned Dec. 30, 1878. A neat little church edifice was built by the society in 1866, and dedicated February 6, 1867. The church was ever small in point of numbers, but included in its membership many of our best citizens in the north part of the town.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Drinking Habits of the Early Settlers.—Intoxicants Regarded as Necessary in the Family Supply.—Early Reformatory Movements.—The First Temperance Societies in Town.—The Washingtonians.—The Sons of Temperance, Good Templars and the Reform Clubs.

The free use of intoxicating drinks by the early settlers of this town, has frequently been referred to in this volume. It has not been spoken of to their disparagement, nor to convey the idea that they differed in their habits in this respect, from the inhabitants of other towns, for they did not. The free use of intoxicants was one of the great vices of the period, and general throughout the country; and people of all classes had come to regard them as essential to health. The universal demand for spirits created a supply, and for years after the first settlers came to Paris, they constituted a part of the stock in trade in every general store. They were dispensed both by the glass, to be drank on the premises, and by the quart or gallon to be carried away. As a family supply, they were considered as essential as tea, sugar or molasses, and on all the old account books of that period, charges of rum, gin, brandy, wine and toddy are sandwiched in with other family supplies, and make up half, and in some cases more than half of the entire account. Elder Hooper, though a very good man and an able preacher, was in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors both in public and in private, and his example could not have been otherwise than injurious to a people who followed the guidance of the minister, not only in spiritual, but in temporal affairs, with much more faith and confidence than is the habit in our day. Elder Hooper did not drink to intoxication, and there were probably comparatively few in town who did, but in a community where rum was freely sold and drank by all classes, the crime of intoxication could not be regarded as a very grave one, and a reprimand from a minister who walked up side by side and took his drinks with the one against whom it was directed, could not have had great weight, even if administered. Capt. Isaac Bolster, who came here from Hebron in the spring of 1784, is said to have been the first trader in town and so the first liquor seller. The testimony concerning this man, is that he was energetic and enterprising in business, conscientious in the discharge of every duty, both public and private, a religious man, and one that enjoyed the fullest confidence of his fellow citizens. But he was deluded as were the people of his day and generation generally, in the belief that intoxicants were essential to health, and he probably thought it no more harm to sell rum than molasses. His minister who was also the minister of the town, patronized him, and certainly he should not hesitate to follow where the good Elder Hooper took the lead! There is no doubt that if these two men had lived in our day, with all the light that has been shed abroad upon this subject, they would have been temperance men in principle and in practice, and would with us look with amazement upon the delusions and practices of a hundred years ago. In vindication of the truth of what has been stated, several pages from Capt. Bolster's account book are introduced here, a transcript of his account with his minister, and a few others:

These five accounts are taken promiscuously from Mr. Bolster's Day Book, and a hundred others of similar character might be taken, but these are sufficient for the present purpose of illustrating the habits of our grandfathers, in respect to the use of intoxicating drinks. Compare this with the accounts at our grocery stores at the present time, and a correct idea can be formed of the progress which the temperance cause has made in fifty years, since the first State temperance organization was formed in Maine.

But Capt. Bolster was not the only one who dispensed the liquid poison to our early towns-people. Dea. Caleb Prentiss opened a store at South Paris, near the beginning of the century, and a page from his account book is given as further illustrating this subject.

The condition of things here described continued without material change for many years. The Massachusetts Society for the suppression of intemperance was organized in 1812, but its influence never extended to the interior of Maine. The American Temperance Society was organized in 1826, and this was the result of many years' agitation of the subject; how many, it is impossible to say. The proceedings of the second meeting held in Boston, January 28, 1829, were printed. At this time, there were two hundred and twenty-two temperance societies, of which five, exclusive of Massachusetts, were State societies. Thirteen of these societies were in Maine, though Maine then had no State organization. Two of the Maine societies, viz.: East Machias and Prospect, made reports. The former reported ninety members, and only two grog shops in the place, and after the following September, there was to be no retailer in town. The society at Prospect, organized in April, 1827, with five members, now had one hundred and one, of whom forty-six were females. One retailer had struck ardent spirits from his list of merchandise, and in one ship yard, it was no longer used. The following members of the American Society were reported as belonging in Maine: Bath, Rev. John W. Ellingwood; Portland, Rev. Charles Jenkins, Rev. Bennet Tyler, D. D., Hon. Albion K. Parris and Hon. Wm. P. Preble: Saco, Ether Shepley, Esq. The East Machias Society organized in January, 1827, may have been the first temperance society in the State. The other societies in Maine were in Brunswick, Gorham, Portland, Gardiner, Buckfield, New Sharon, Saco, Livermore, Norway, Windsor and Brewer Village. The Livermore Society, then in Oxford County, was organized July 4, 1828, with Rev. Geo. Bates as Secretary. The first temperance pledge drawn up in Paris, was by Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, some years before there was any organized movement in town. It was very mild, only pledging the signers to abstain from the use of the stronger liquors as a beverage, yet only a few signed it. It was presented to Elder Hooper who most emphatically refused his signature, remarking that he gave his little boys some rum and molasses that morning, and said he, "how their eyes sparkled after they had drank it." (These were adopted children.)

The first annual meeting of the Maine Temperance Society was holden at Augusta, January 23d, 1833. The printed proceedings do not show that Oxford County was represented by delegates. Governor Samuel E. Smith was elected President, Hon. Samuel Pond of Bucksport, Secretary; Elisha Robinson, Augusta, Treasurer, and Charles Williams of Augusta, Auditor. Judge Ether Shepley presided. Oxford County Society was reported as having been organized July 1, 1829, with Hon. Luther Cary of Turner, President, and Samuel F. Brown, Esq., of Buckfield, as Secretary. Buckfield reported: "opposition great to temperance reform, by political demagogues, followed by their supporters half drunk." Fryeburg reported: "much opposition from temperate drinkers, drunkards and sellers of rum." Hebron reported: "opposition by several classes and various characters." Andover, "opposition by the intemperate." Sweden, "opposition is composed of men of every class—two men, however, who are rival candidates for office, have more influence than all others." Sumner, "opposition by intemperate and moderate drinker, and by some who are professors of religion." Thirteen societies are reported in Oxford county, but many towns, including Paris, make no report. The Buckfield society is reported defunct. Previous to the organization of the Maine State Society, the "Union Temperance Society of Oxford county," was organized, presumably at Paris, and originated among the members of the Oxford bar. The following is the constitution adopted, and the names of the first signers:

"The undersigned being desirous of exerting their influence in the cause of temperance, and recognizing and adopting the principle of total abstinence from the use of ardent spirits, hereby form ourselves into an association, to be called the Union Temperance Society of the county of Oxford.

ART. 1. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice President and Secretary, to be chosen annually, by the members at the June term of the Court of Common Pleas.

ART. 2. There shall be a meeting of this association on some day during each term of the Court of Common Pleas, at the Court House, of which meeting it shall be the duty of the Secretary to give seasonable notice—and it shall be the duty of the President to request some gentleman to deliver an address at each meeting.

ART. 3. Every person signing this constitution shall become a member of this society thereby engaging to adopt a total abstinence in reference to the use of “ardent spirits as a drink.”

Turner, David Gerry, Ephraim Bass, Erastus P. Poor, Stephen Chase, Ebenezer Jewett, Abraham Andrews, Jr., Daniel Chaplin, John S. Barrows, Josiah Blake, Simeon Walton.

At a meeting of the Society, January 22, 1833, it was voted that a committee of one or more gentlemen in every town in the county be appointed to take a copy of this constitution and procure subscribers, and the following gentlemen were appointed for the service, viz: Fryeburg, Benjamin Wyman, Ebenezer Fessenden, Jr., Henry C. Buswell; Brownfield, James Steele, Samuel Stickney, George Bean; Hiram, Peleg Wadsworth, Alpheus Spring; Denmark, Samuel Gibson, Amos Poor; Lovell, Abraham Andrews; Sweden, Chas. Nevers, Nathan Bradbury; Fryeburg Addition, Samuel Farrington; Waterford, Charles Whitman, Daniel Brown, Esq., Dr. Leander Gage; Albany, Aaron Cummings; Livermore, Reuel Washburn; Jay, Jas. Starr; Canton, John Hearsey; Hartford, Cyrus Thompson; Sumner, Samuel Sewall; Peru, Levi Ludden; Dixfield, Henry Farewell; Mexico, Joseph Eastis; Hartford, Elder Hutchinson, Joseph Tobin, Edward Blake; Buckfield, Seth Stetson, Zadock Long, Lucius Loring; Paris, Abijah Hall, Jr., Simeon Walton, Asaph Kittredge; Hebron, Wm. Barrows, Dr. Carr; Oxford, J. S.

Keith, S. H. King; Rumford, Henry Martin; Andover, Sylvanus Poor, Jr.; Bethel, Jedediah Burbank; Newry, Josiah Black; Woodstock, Elder Jacob Whitman.

At the second annual meeting of the Maine Temperance Society, held at Augusta, Feb. 5, 1834, Hon. Prentiss Mellen was made president, and the other officers of the previous year were re-elected. There were more reports made from Oxford county towns, than the year previous, showing an increase of interest in the cause. The officers of the Oxford county society were the same as before. Many new towns had formed associations, and Buckfield was the only town where the association had become defunct. The report from Buckfield showed much opposition to the cause. "One deacon both drinks and sells rum," says the report.

The following table shows at a glance the extent of the organized temperance reform in Oxford county, in 1834.

The report from Paris to the State Society was, that 4963 gallons of spirits were sold in 1833, against 7221 gallons sold in 1832. Expense of the poor, from $300 to $350, one-third caused by intemperance. Three dram selling taverns reported, and five other retailers. Eight dealers in spirits had become intemperate. Fifty-four copies of the Temperance Advocate taken in town. Thirty families had been made poor and miserable on account of intemperance. Six intemperate heads of families reported in Paris, who would by the expenditure of fifty dollars in sickness, be thrown upon the town. There was then a license law in Maine, but it was not enforced. In 1829, two indictments for violation of the license law, were found in Oxford county, but both were dropped on the payment of costs, before trial. In 1830 and 1831, no indictments were found. In 1832, the county attorney filed four indictments; three of them were nol. pros. on payment of costs, and the other without costs, he having shown that he had a license. Members of the State society in Oxford county were: Buckfield, Samnel F. Brown, Virgil D. Parris, Albert D. White; Norway, Jacob Bradbury, Wm. Cox, Jr., James Flint, Hiram Millett, Jeremiah Mitchell; Paris, Stephen Emery; Peru, Joseph H. Jenne; Sumner, Ira Hersey, Daniel Robinson, Rev. Samuel Sewall; Turner, Luther Cary, John Turner; Weld, Jacob Abbott, Joshua Eaton, Ephraim Houghton, Charles Houghton. The foregoing probably conveys a very good idea of the beginning of temperance work in Paris and in Oxford county. The society in South Paris, formed in 1832, was probably the first organized effort in town. The Society on Paris Hill, was organized the same year. This was called the Union Temperance Society, and was composed chiefly of members of the bar. On the tenth day of June, 1834, William Withington delivered a very able temperance address before this society, at the Court House. This address was printed in pamphlet form. About this time, or a little later, a third society was organized at North Paris. This society, also, did an excellent work. Quite a number from Woodstock joined it, some of whom had been intemperate for years, and were permanently reformed through its instrumentality. These three organizations were in active operation for quite a number of years, and accomplished much. Rev. Caleb B. Davis, who succeeded Elder Hooper in the pastorate of the Baptist church, was an able advocate of temperance reform, and became a pillar of strength to the cause in Paris. Nor did he confine his labors to this town, but went to other towns and lectured, stirred up the people and organized societies. He organized the first society ever formed in Woodstock, and was a pioneer worker in several other Oxford county towns.

The next great temperance reformatory movement was that called the Washingtonian. This began in a small way in Baltimore among a few reformed drunkards, but it spread like wildfire throughout the middle and eastern States. It came into Maine about the year 1842 like a tornado, and seemed likely to sweep everything before it. An Oxford county Washingtonian society was formed, holding its meetings in different parts of the county, and there were subordinate societies in almost every town. The proceedings as given in the papers of those years, show the great interest manifested in the good work, and that leading men and women were everywhere in the movement. Thousands of inebriates not only reformed themselves, but used every effort to bring others into the organization. Hundreds all over the country were in the field battling against the common enemy, and everywhere the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. About the year 1842, or perhaps a little later, the movement reached Oxford county, and its effect here was the same as elsewhere. Everybody was awakened, almost everybody took the pledge, and many kept it inviolate ever after. It did a vast amount of good. But the history of all great moral movements plainly indicated what the fate of this must be. Human passions, however noble the cause, have their metes and their bounds beyond which they cannot pass, and the great success of a movement is often the first step towards reaction. In the excess of zeal in the Washingtonian movement, there was wanting that concert of action to give it permanency. The cause was like a rudderless bark upon the sea, without compass or pilot, and freighted with the materials of its own destruction.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

It was when the excitement was at its height that thoughtful men in New York conceived the idea of an organization that would combine and consolidate the discordant elements of the movement, invest it with a social character, and leave lasting impressions of affection and interest on the mind, in connection with the great cause and its objects. The outcome of this was, the Order of the Sons of Temperance, an organization which has doubtless accomplished more than any other, in giving permanence to the temperance cause, after the enthusiasm awakened by the Washingtonian movement could no longer be maintained. The first Division of the Sons of Temperance was organized in New York city, at Teetotaler's Hall, No. 71. Division Street, on Thursday evening, Sept. 29, 1842. The order had a steady growth and reached the State of Maine in December, 1844. A Grand Lodge for Maine was organized at Augusta, in April, 1845, and three years later, there were 110 Divisions in the State with a membership of over 7000. In 1850, the movement had reached Oxford county.

Acadia Division, No. 145, was organized at South Paris, March 4th, 1850. The charter members were as follows: F. C. Buck, Robert Skillings, Dr. Byron Coy, Aaron Young, Wm. Dearing, F. C. Morton, Thomas J. Whitehead, J. D. Gilkey, L. T. Boothby, Dr. Wm. A. Rust, Isaiah Knight, Henry O. Thayer and Jefferson Hall. The first officers chosen and duly installed were, F. C. Buck, Worthy Patriarch; Robert Skillings, Worthy Associate; Byron Coy, Recording Scribe; Aaron Young, Assistant Recording Scribe; William Deering, Financial Secretary; F. C. Morton, Treasurer; Thomas J. Whitehead, Conductor; J. D. Gilkey, Assistant Conductor; A. L. Hersey, Inside Sentinel; Hiram T. Cummings, Outside Sentinel. The meetings were held on Thursday evening of each week. The following are among those who soon after became members: James Anderson, J. G. Rounds, Daniel C. Merrill, David B. Silsby, Rev. Joseph Colby, Milton Morton, E. W. Simmons, John Caldwell, David Jordan, C. E. Bradford, W. H. Lincoln, Henry R. Parsons, James Deering, Sylvan Shurtleff, Elisha Morse, Jr., Charles McFadden and Eben Morton. April 14, 1850, the Division met at Millett's Hall in Norway, and assisted in forming Aqua Division No. 147. New members, Horatio G. Russ, Cyrus Morse, F. C. Merrill, Joseph Morton, Wm. H. Shurtleff and Wm. Yates. July 4th, 1850, a banner was presented to the Division by the ladies, with appropriate ceremonies and remarks. The exercises took place at Academy Hall. New members, Timothy Jordan, Sidney Perham, Daniel Fobes, Joseph H. King and James Abbott. Dec. 3, 1850, a Bible was presented on behalf of the ladies, by Laura N. Thayer. New members: Jonathan Clark, Dea. Elisha Morse, Samuel Stowe and Dr. Samuel Sawyer. In February, 1851, the Division assisted in instituting Snow's Falls Division. The following new members were added: Anson Jordan, Charles Andrews, Wm. W. Barton, Edwin P. Grant, Augustus Morse, Wm. B. Royal, Charles H. Clifford, Samuel Record, Hanson Tarbox, H. C. Clark, Elias Chase, Samuel Hsley, Charles Jordan, Isaiah Dunn, James Irving, Cyrenus King, Oliver L. Andrews, Daniel Stowell, Albert G. Barbour, Solon Royal, Solyman Pratt, Luther P. Winslow, Wm. D. Brett, Ziba Thayer, Augustus King, Isaac Cummings, Orra Hall, Edwin R. Knight, Samuel Yates, Simon S. Stowell, Billings Fobes, Nathan Hodgdon, Francis A. Cummings, Henry Fobes, Richard Morton, Austin Chase, Joseph Burbank, Elbridge Bicknell, Ivory Tarbox, S. Sturtevant, Alva Hersey, Hiram Chase, Abijah C. Hall, John G. Barrows, George C. Rich, Elijah Tarbox, Eli Fernald, John Valentine and John G. Getchell. In May, 1852, the Division assisted in organizing a new Division at Paris Hill. New members at this time : E. P. Hinds, John G. Drake, Rev. J. Hawkes, H. O. Thayer, Geo. W. Sturtevant, J. R. Irving, D. C. Merrill, Charles Hall, Joel S. Crooker, John B. Crooker, Charles H. Burbank and Seth Morse. In November, 1854, lady visitors were first received, and Mrs. Crafts, Mrs. Shackley, Mrs. Nancy Mitchell, Miss Sarah E. Fobes, Miss Maria Sturtevant and Miss Eliza Ryerson were duly initiated.

The report of June 14, 1854, showed a membership of 151. After the feature of initiating lady visitors had been adopted, weekly meetings were held and literary exercises introduced. The organization was disbanded in 1866, after an existence of sixteen years. The report of Apr. 3, 1865, showed the number of members 86 : initiated last quarter, 1 ; in the army, 14 ; number of lady visitors, 185. This was one of the strongest and best Divisions of the order in the county, and accomplished a great amount of good. But during the war, public attention was diverted to other subjects, and the Division began to lose its interest, and its membership began to diminish ; and finally, like all such organizations, the novelty no longer existed, and the Good Templars had already displaced the order in many places ; so Acadia Division became a thing of the past. The members that joined this Division, in addition to those already named, were : Simeon H. Perkins, Daniel Stowell, Jarvis C. Stevens, Edwin Townsend, Daniel Brett, Harlon Page Shurtleff, Charles H. Durell, Rev. Frederic Crafts, Henry M. Brett, Wm. J. Perkins, Albion K. P. Dunham, Wm. Swett, Welcome A. Crafts, Charles N. Porter, Isaac D. Cummings, Benson Swett, W. H. Swett, Z. E. Sawtelle, Stephen Mitchell, James A. Dennett and C. W. Rowe.

The Paris Hill Division organized in May, 1852, elected as its first board of officers, the following : Col. Ebenezer Thayer, Worthy Patriarch ; Col. Orison Ripley, Worthy Associate ; Silas P. Maxim, Recording Secretary ; Rufus S. Stevens, Assistant Recording Secretary ; Col. Simon H. Cummings, Financial Secretary ; A. S. Thayer, Conductor ; B. F. Twitchell, Assistant Conductor ; Julius A. King, Inside Guard ; William Curtis, Outside Guard ; Rev. Nathaniel Butler, Chaplain. The weekly meetings were held at the Court House, and at the houses of the members. It did not increase in numbers as did the Division at South Paris, but it kept up its organization for some time, chiefly through the efforts of Col. Cummings, Rufus S. Stevens and others.

Besides the organizations named, there have been Temperance Watchmen's Clubs, Good Templars, branches of the State League and other auxilliary Societies, which have kept the ball rolling and the good work constantly going on. May 24, 1876, a Reform Club was organized at South Paris, with eighty-five members, a movement which brought to the front a new class of workers, and accomplished a great amount of good. Paris has for many years been a temperance town, and her leading citizens have been among the foremost most temperance workers in the State.

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE PRESS OF PARIS.

THE OXFORD OBSERVER.

The first newspaper printed in Paris and the second in the county, was the Oxford Observer. The first was Russell's Echo, started at Fryeburg in 1798, and died when less than a year old, so that when the Observer was started, the county had been without a paper for nearly thirty years. The paper was a folio in form having five columns to the page, but they were much broader than ordinary newspaper columns now are, so that it was of very respectable size for a country newspaper of that day. Mr. Barton was not a practical printer, and in connection with the publication of the Observer, he kept what he called the "Oxford County Bookstore." He continued the publication of the paper in Paris for two years with moderate success, and then moved the concern to Norway. The removal was made by means of an ox-cart in the night time, and without the knowledge of the citizens of Paris.

THE JEFFERSONIAN.

After the removal of the Observer to Norway, Paris was without a paper only a few months, for in March of the following year (1827), a number of prominent democrats on Paris Hill, among whom were Rufus K. Goodenow, Alanson Mellen, Moses Hammond, Stephen Emery, Alfred Andrews, Thomas Crocker and Joseph G. Cole, started the Jeffersonian, a weekly paper about the size of the Observer, and a democratic party organ. Mr. Joseph G. Cole was editor, and Charles Dingley, and subsequently Thomas Witt were foremen. The issue of May 4th, 1830, instead of the imprint "Published for the Proprietors," which the paper had hitherto borne, had that of Hamlin and King, the establishment having been purchased by Hon. Hannibal Hamlin and Hon. Horatio King, then young men, and just upon the threshold of active life. Mr. King, who had been in the office about a year, soon after took the position of foreman. Mr. Hamlin being new to the business, took the place of an apprentice, and to assist them they had Henry Carter, who had served a short term in the Portland Advertiser office, and who, years afterward, was the able editor of the same paper. The paper was published by Hamlin and King until Oct. 26, 1830, when Mr. Hamlin retired, and Mr. King became sole proprietor. In May, 1833, Mr. King purchased "The Politician," a whig paper then published at Norway for the purpose of discontinuing it, and moved its material with the Jeffersonian establishment to Portland. The last issue of the Jeffersonian printed in Paris, was that of April 30, and the first number issued in Portland, bore date May 8th. Mr. King continued to publish the paper in Portland until January, 1838, when he sold out, and the paper was consolidated with the Standard. Mr. Cole edited the Jeffersonian until November 27, 1832, when he retired, and Mr. King became editor as well as owner. Mr. Cole's compensation for editing the paper was one dollar and fifty cents per week.

OXFORD DEMOCRAT.

In August, 1833, George W. Millett of Norway, and Octavius King of Paris, both young men and practical printers, purchased of Asa Barton of Norway, the Oxford Oracle establishment, and having moved it to Paris Hill on the 20th of August, they issued the first number of the Oxford Democrat. Though the immediate successor of the Oracle, the Democrat was a new paper to all intents and purposes. It was started as a party organ and as an exponent of the views of the Democratic party. Joseph G. Cole, a young and promising lawyer, assumed editorial charge, and became responsible for its political articles, although his name never appeared in the paper as editor. It was begun as a five column paper, but the columns were broad and the sheet of respectable size. Good paper was used, and the mechanical work was very neatly done. Mr. King retired from the paper with number 38, of Vol. 1. Mr. Cole continued to edit the paper for seven years, when he retired, and Col. Millett became editor and proprietor. There was a suspension of the publication of the paper from Oct. 27, 1840, to May 11, 1841. The number issued on the last named date was called Vol. 1, No. 1, new series, and Vol. 8, No. 12, old series. The office was destroyed by fire in 1849.

An extra, printed at the Norway Advertiser Office, under date of December 18, 1849, has the following notice which sufficiently explains itself:

"About 1 o'clock on Sunday morning last, we were aroused from our slumber by the startling cry of fire! The fire proved to be in the building occupied by us for the Democrat office, by Col. Charles Andrews, as a law office, and by the Post Office. The citizens of the village and vicinity rallied nobly to the rescue, but without avail. The building and the contents of the Democrat office were utterly destroyed. Our loss is a heavy one, and will not fall short of $3000—being our all. The fire is supposed to have originated from some defect in the machinery. We are not disheartened nor discouraged, but we shall, as soon as we can make arrangements, commence the Democrat again," etc.

The next issue of the paper appeared on the 12th of February, 1850. New and elegant type had been procured, the size increased to seven columns, the length proportionately, and a new head procured, the same that was used until within a few years. The price was then reduced to $1.50 per annum. Persons holding prospectuses were requested to return them with their lists of names. During these years, the Democrat was a good family paper. Special pains were taken in the selection of stories and other reprints. The editorials were generally brief, not often occupying more than a column or a column and a half. The political news was given in brief, and considerable space was generally left for miscellaneous reading matter. Local, and even State news was scarce, for be it remembered there was then no telegraph, no railway facilities in the interior of Maine, and the rates of letter postage were high. Considerable care was taken in the publication of marriages and deaths, and the old volumes of the Democrat are especially valuable in this direction. The first issue after the fire began a new series (Vol. 1, No. 1,) and the firm name was Millett & Mellen. With new series, No. 28 of Vol. 1, Oct. 25, 1850, Mr. Millett sold out and retired from the paper, when the imprint became Geo. L. Mellen & Co. The parties who bought into the concern with Mr. Mellen, were Gen. Wm. K. Kimball, Clerk of the Courts, S. D. Hutchinson, Register of Deeds, and Nathan M. Marble. In Vol. 2, (new series) No. 47, issued January 2, 1852, it is announced that Geo. L. Mellen has become sole proprietor: also Geo. F. Emery is announced as editor. With the May 27, 1853, number, Mr. Emery announces his retirement from the paper, and Dr. Thomas H. Brown became his successor. In the number for July 15, 1853, Geo. L. Mellen, who had been appointed by President Pierce, route agent between Portland and Bangor, and had been filling that position for more than a year, announced that he had sold the paper to Hon. Noah Prince of Buckfield. From this date, the Democrat opposed the principles and policy of the democratic party.

Mr. Prince continued to publish the paper, or rather it continued to be published in his name, until March, 1855, when he sold out, and the other shares having been purchased by Rufus S. Stevens and Wm. A. Pidgin, the firm name became W. A. Pidgin & Co. Mr. Pidgin had been in charge of the office since Mr. Mellen took the position of route agent, and had also been local editor. Dr. Brown continued to act in the capacity of political editor. Under the new management, an Agricultural Department was added, with the motto, "Speed the Plow," and with Darius Fobes as editor. His name first appears as such in the issue of March 2, 1855. He sustained this relation to the paper until 1859, when the department was discontinued. In the issue of Dec. 12, 1856, Darius Fobes appears as proprietor, with John J. Perry as political editor. There was, however, no real change in the management of the paper, and in April, 1857, the firm name again appears as W. A. Pidgin & Co. Mr. Stevens had then sold out his shares, and Mr. Pidgin had become sole owner. He continued to publish and edit the paper with John J. Perry as political editor, until November 15, 1867, when the establishment was sold to Col. Fred E. Shaw, who in the issue of that date announces himself editor and proprietor. In January, 1874, Mr. Shaw sold one-third of the concern to Geo. H. Watkins, who had been foreman in the office. The firm name was now F. E. Shaw & Co. October 20th, of the same year, Shaw sold out his remaining interest to Watkins, and retired from the concern. Dr. Thomas H. Brown's name reappears as political editor from this date, until April 26, 1876, when it disappears, and Geo. H. Watkins is announced as editor and proprietor. Since that time, there has been no change in the management of the establishment. During his editorial career, Dr. Brown managed the Democrat with peculiar adroitness, and with distinguished ability. He was ably succeeded, 1856 to 1874, by Gen. Perry.

The following tables indicate the management of the Democrat, both editorially and otherwise, from the beginning; the dates indicate when the persons opposite began their labors, either as proprietor or editor:

OXFORD REGISTER.

The first number of the Oxford Register was issued in December, 1869. Its outside and also its political matter were a reprint of the Maine Democrat, then published at Biddeford, by Watson Brothers. Samuel R. Carter, Esq., of Paris, furnished two columns per week of local matter, which was all there was about the paper to give it a local character. It need not be said that the Register was a Democratic paper, since it was made up from the Maine Democrat, of which George K. Shaw was editor. In April of 1871, Watson Brothers removed a portion of their type and material from Biddeford to Paris, and the inside of the Register was afterwards set up at Paris and printed at the Oxford Democrat office, the outside still being the same as the Maine Democrat. At this time, Mr. Clarence Watson succeeded Carter as local editor. This went on for six months, when in October Mr. Carter bought the concern and became editor and proprietor, though still using the Maine Democrat outside. Mr. Carter was very industrious in gleaning local news, and the Register under his management became a live, local paper. The Register was sold by Carter to Drake & Whitman of Norway, Nov. 13, 1875, and consolidated with the Norway Advertiser. February following, the consolidated paper was leased to Parris & Mason of Paris, and published as the Oxford Register under the firm name of Parris, Mason & Co., until November 17, 1876. It was intended as a campaign paper, but the elections that year having gone adverse to the democrats, and the lease having expired, the company was dissolved, and C. F. Whitman sold the list and good-will to the Lewiston Gazette.

MAINE EVANGELIST.

This paper was started in Andover, January 1, 1879, by Rev. Ira G. Sprague. Its name sufficiently indicates what was its character. It was a religious paper, and devoted specially to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal church of Maine. Mr. Sprague was a printer before entering the ministry, and so was able to do a large share of the work required on his paper. The Evangelist was a folio in form, size 13 1-2 by 20 inches, and had four columns to the page. It was ably conducted. In June, 1880, the Evangelist was moved from Andover to South Paris, and enlarged to twice its former size. In the January following, it was discontinued and its list transferred to the New York Witness.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

PARIS NEWSPAPER MEN.

ASA BARTON.

The pioneer newspaper man of Paris, was Asa Barton, who was born in that part of Bethel now called Hanover, on the farm since occupied by Orson Powers, October 13, 1793. His father, Aaron Barton, son of Asa Barton of Needham, and Mercy Bartlett of Newton, Mass., came to Bethel with Jonathan Bartlett, his uncle, and Nathaniel Segar, his cousin, in 1780. The wife of Aaron and the mother of Asa, was Sarah Smith, daughter of Ithiel, born in Cape Elizabeth, but coming with her parents to Bethel. Aaron Barton moved from Bethel to Jay, and thence in 1807, to Livermore. Asa Barton married Lydia, daughter of Thomas Chase of Martha's Vineyard, afterwards of Livermore. He kept a store in Livermore for a few years, and about 1820, came to Paris. He then moved to Portland, but in 1821, was back at Paris and started the Oxford county bookstore. In 1824, he started the first paper ever printed in Paris, and called the Oxford Observer. In 1826, he moved the paper to Norway in the night time, and it is said without the knowledge of the people of Paris. In 1828, Wm. P. Phelps was associated with him, but in 1830, Mr. Goodenow purchased Barton's interest, and the paper was then published by Goodenow & Phelps. In 1830, he started the Village Spy at Norway, but it was short-lived, and in the summer of 1833, Mr. Barton commenced the publication at Norway, of the Oxford Oracle, but after issuing seven numbers, he sold out to Millett & King and moved to Bangor. He was there in trade with Emory Livermore, then he studied law and settled in Garland. In 1844, he returned to Norway and remained there until he died in the winter of 1847. The births of four of his children are recorded on Paris records between 1819 and 1825.

GEORGE W. MILLETT.

Col. Geo. W. Millett was the son of Nathaniel Millett of Norway, one of the three Millett brothers who came originally from Gloucester, Mass., to Minot, and subsequently to Norway. Col. Millett was born in Norway, July 27, 1813; his mother was Martha, daughter of Enoch Merrill of Andover. He entered the office of the Oxford Observer as an apprentice, in the fall of 1830, that paper then being published by Wm. E. Goodenow. He was also with the Jeffersonian, and went with it to Portland in April, 1833. He returned to Norway in August, and in company with Octavius King, who had been his fellow apprentice, he purchased the Oxford Oracle establishment, which he moved to Paris Hill, and began the publication of the Oxford Democrat. At the end of a few months, he purchased Mr. King's interest in the concern, and continued to publish the paper until the latter part of 1849, when the entire establishment was consumed by fire. In the following February, the paper was again started by Mr. Millett and Geo. L. Mellen, and so published for about ten months, when Mr. Millett sold out his interest and bought the Norway Advertiser, which had been revived by Moses B. Bartlett, and continued its publication with Rev. Geo. K. Shaw as editor for a portion of the time at least, till 1861, when the paper was discontinued, and in 1865, Mr. Millett went to Worcester, Mass. He subsequently moved to Westboro, and in 1877, he removed to Cambridgeport, and since that time has been in the Riverside Press. He married, in 1858, Emma G. Ames of Norway. While a resident at Paris Hill, he was fourteen years Postmaster, member of the Legislature in 1850, also Colonel in the State militia, having been regularly promoted to that position through the various subordinate grades.

OCTAVIUS KING.

Octavius King was the son of George and Miranda (Hall) King, and a native of Paris. He learned his trade in the Jeffersonian office when the paper was conducted by Hon. Hannibal Hamlin and Hon. Horatio King. When in 1833, the Jeffersonian was moved to Portland, Mr. King went with it. After a few months he returned to Norway, and in August, 1833, in company with Geo. W. Millett, he purchased the Oxford Oracle, then printed at Norway by Asa Barton, and commenced the publication of the Oxford Democrat, and remained in the concern about nine months when he sold out and moved to Boston. He worked as a carpenter for a while, and then set up a drug store on Washington street, and for many years was a practitioner of eclectic medicine. He married Miss Arvilla Curtis of Dixfield, and left a son and daughter. He was born July 21, 1816, and died Nov. 11, 1868.

WILLIAM A. PIDGIN.

William Abner Pidgin was born in Litchfield, Maine, March 25, 1833. His father was Dr. Joseph N. Pidgin, son of Rev. William,* and his mother was Diantha J. A. Rawson, daughter of Capt. Abner, a prominent early citizen of Paris, formerly of Sutton, Mass. Mr. Pidgin entered the Zion's Advocate office as an apprentice, in 1848, when the paper was published by Rev. Dr. Smith, since then a Professor in Colby University. In March, 1851, the Advocate having changed hands, Mr. Pidgin went to Augusta and was employed on the Kennebec Journal. In May, 1853, Geo. L. Mellen having entered upon his duties as mail agent, Mr. Pidgin came to Paris and was placed in charge of the Oxford Democrat office. He continued in charge after Mr. Mellen sold out to a company, and until the shares were bought up by him and R. S. Stevens of Paris. The paper was then published under the firm name of W. A. Pidgin & Co. until 1867, when Mr. Pidgin sold out to Fred E. Shaw, to accept a position as business manager of the Lewiston Journal. During Mr. Pidgin's administration, the Democrat was much improved as a local and county paper, he having organized a corps of correspondents to insure intelligence from each town. This feature of a local paper, now so generally followed, originated with Mr. Pidgin. Mr. Pidgin still retains his position on the Lewiston Journal, and is most efficient help. He married Miss Martha, daughter of Thomas Little, Esq., of Augusta.

DARIUS FOBES.

Darius Fobes was a native of Paris, and the son of Daniel and Elsie (Hathaway) Fobes, formerly of Middleborough, Mass. He became a Universalist preacher when quite a young man, and had a settlement in Vermont. He was also much interested in agriculture, and was a charter member of the Maine State Agricultural Society, and from 1855 to 1860, conducted an Agricultural Department in the Oxford Democrat. In 1856, he was announced as proprietor, but his name was dropped as such in 1857. He was also connected with a temperance paper in Portland. He married Elizabeth Pottle of Norway. During the war he held a clerkship in Washington, and was afterwards connected with the Sanitary Commission; he has not

*Rev. Wm. Pidgin was born in Newbury, Mass., March 1, 1771, graduated at Dartmouth, College in 1794, ordained at Hampton, N. H., January 27, 1796, and subsequently came to Maine. He married Miss Noyes. He was a man of culture and author of a work on English Grammar. His father was Moses Pidgin, who was quite early at Newbury.

since resided in Maine. He was a man of varied acquirements, and an agricultural writer of ability. He died in Kentucky three or four years ago; his wife has also deceased, and a daughter is all that remains of the family.

FRED E. SHAW.

Rev. Fred E. Shaw was born in Portland, May 18, 1825. His father was Elias Shaw, and his mother Eliza Phillips. He learned the printer's art in Portland, subsequently studied law and went into practice in Bangor. At the breaking out of the war, he recruited a company, of which he was elected Captain, and which was assigned as Company D, of the 18th Maine Regiment (1st Maine Heavy Artillery). He did honorable service in the Regiment, and remained with it to the close of the war. In 1864, he purchased the Oxford Democrat of Wm. A. Pidgin, and conducted it both as editor and publisher until 1874, when he sold out, bought the Christian Mirror, and, after a while, moved to Portland. This proved a poor investment and after running it about two years, he sold out and subsequently bought and published for a time, the Coos Republican at Lancaster, N. H. His success here was not satisfactory, and he sold out and moved back to Portland. He then canvassed the State in the interest of the Young Men's Christian Association, and was very successful. He was ordained to the ministry of the Congregationalist church, June 13, 1878, and was soon after called to the church in East Machias, where he yet remains. He was at one time president of the Maine Press Association. He married Miss Sarah Ellen Benson, a native of Boston, but then residing in Bangor, and has several children, some of whom are married.

ZINA E. STONE.

Mr. Stone was never connected with the press of Paris except as an apprentice, but his father has resided in this town and several of his family are still residents. He was the son of Luther Stone, and his mother was Hadassah Kimball of Bridgton. Born in Bethel, March 30, 1824, at the age of fourteen years, in 1837, he entered the Oxford Democrat office as an apprentice, and as the successor of Chas. W. Walton. He remained in the office four years. He then went to Lowell and worked as a "jour." on the Lowell Advertiser, and soon became foreman. In 1854, he started the American Citizen in Lowell, run it two years, and during that time begun a daily. He then went to Chicago and remained a year. In 1857, he started the Tri-weekly, published at Haverhill, and made it a success. In 1860, he bought a half interest in the Vox Populi, published at Lowell, and was connected with it 18 years. In July, 1879, he started the Mail, which is now both a daily and weekly. This establishment is now owned by a company, of which Mr. Stone is president. He was half owner of the Lowell Courier and conducted it from 1861 to 1866. He was married Dec. 31, 1846, to Miss Charlotte A. Shaw, formerly of Norridgewock. As a whole, Mr. Stone has made the publishing business a success, and has been able to retire from active service on a competency. Accompanied by his wife, he spent some time in Europe, and has visited the chief points of interest in our own country. He is connected with the Historical and other literary societies of Lowell, and is a contributing and valuable member.

SAMUEL R. CARTER.

Samuel Rawson Carter was born in Paris, June 22, 1829. He was the son of Hon. Timothy J. Carter, who was a member of Congress from this district, and died in Washington, March 14, 1838, while filling that position; his mother was Arabella, daughter of Capt. Samuel and Polla (Freeland) Rawson, quite early and prominent citizens of Paris. Mr. Carter fitted himself for the legal profession, and was admitted to the Oxford bar. He served one term as Register of Probate for Oxford county, and has also served as town clerk. His connection with the press was with the Oxford Register, which was started in 1869. At first, it was printed in Biddeford, by Watson Brothers, Mr. Carter furnishing weekly, two columns of local matter. In October, 1871, Mr. Carter purchased the paper and became sole owner and editor. He made of it a live, local paper, being very successful as a news gatherer. He was also a ready and interesting writer, and had he chosen to have remained in journalism, might have made it a success. In Oct. 1875, he sold the paper, and it was moved to Norway and united with the Advertiser. Mr. Carter is interested in chemistry, has a laboratory fitted up by himself, and has uncommon attainments in that bewitching science for an amateur. He is also interested in mineralogy, and has studied carefully and successfully the deposits of rare minerals in Paris. He married Feb. 26, 1857, Miss Julia, daughter of Hon. Elijah L. Hamlin of Bangor, formerly of Paris.

GEO. H. WATKINS.

George H. Watkins, the present proprietor of the Oxford Democrat, was born in New York city, August 6, 1854. His father, Henry M. Watkins, was born in Bristol, England, and his mother was Hannah B., daughter of John Besse of this town, whose wife was a daughter of Elder Tripp of Hebron. George H. attended the public schools in New York city until fourteen years of age. This embraced all his regular schooling, but while a clerk two years in New York, and while learning his trade as a printer, he continued his studies and recited to private teachers. He entered the Democrat office as an apprentice, Oct. 12, 1870, and served three full years. He purchased the paper in 1874, and has published it since, and has been successful. He was married April 15, 1879, to Annah Russell Cole, youngest daughter of the late Joseph G. Cole. Mr. Watkins has shown much enterprise and push in the management of the Democrat. He is editor as well as publisher, and makes a paper that is highly satisfactory to the party in the county whose interest it subserves.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

PARIS PHYSICIANS.

Mr. Hooper in his communication to the Jeffersonian, which has been before referred to, says the first physician in Paris was Dr. Barnet. Others say that his name was Barnard, which is doubtless correct. Isaac Barnard of Sutton studied medicine with Dr. James Freeland, and quite probably he came to Paris where so many Sutton people lived, to look the ground over. But he evidently did not settle here, but went to Union, Maine, where we find him in 1787. He afterwards moved to Thomaston and was prominent there, representing the town for several years in the General Court of Massachusetts. This chapter is made up mainly from the paper of Dr. Thomas H. Brown read at the Paris Centennial in 1879.

DR. CYPRIAN STEVENS.

Dr. Stevens was the first physician who settled in the town of Paris. He probably came into town about 1789. This conclusion is formed from the facts that he came into town unmarried, that he then married Sally Robinson and had three children before the birth of Mrs. Sally Stowell, widow of Rufus Stowell, who was living in 1879, at the age of 82 years. He commenced boarding at the house of Reuben Hubbard, then located not far from the residence of Daniel Fobes, in a pasture, one mile south of Paris Hill. Dr. Stevens died July 3d, 1806, aged 38 years. His wife died in 1830, aged 66 years. After the decease of her husband, she continued to practice one branch of the profession until her health compelled her to desist. The Doctor, as well as his wife, traveled on horseback over new and rough roads for many years. At length, when he had bought and improved a farm, pleasure wagons began to make their appearance, and he became the possessor of one. It was nothing more or less than a baggage wagon of the present day, without springs. It was then thought to be a great acquisition; and Mrs. Stowell says her aunt exclaimed: "Why, you have come visiting in a pleasure wagon!" Physicians were scarce in this region during the doctor's lifetime. The Dr. was popular, and had business from all quarters and from great distances. The roads were few and bad, and the people scattered. He was often called to attend patients in Hebron, Minot and New Gloucester. It is said that he labored beyond his strength, undermined his health and consequently died young. A very few aged people can remember Dr. Stevens; but many of the middle-aged people of Paris have heard about him, his character, his social and professional standing, and his services; and they all, without exception, refer to him as a man and physician whose memory is worthy of high honors.

DR. EBENEZER HARNDEN GOSS.

Dr. Ebenezer H. Goss was the son of Rev. Thomas Goss of Bolton, Mass. He married a sister of the wife of Sir Benjamin Thompson, (Count Rumford) and was one of the original proprietors of New Pennacook, now Rumford, Me. Dr. Goss resided at Bolton and at Concord, N. H., but settled in Brunswick soon after the close of the Revolutionary war. About 1804, he moved to Paris, where in a limited degree he practiced medicine for several years. He had two children, Gustavus Adolphus and Sarah. The former lived in Paris, and was known as "Squire Goss," and was at one time a candidate for Congress. The daughter married David Marshall, the descendants of whom are now living in Paris. Dr. Goss was a talented, well-educated and eccentric man, and many anecdotes are told of his peculiarities and habits. It is said that a party of young men, students and scholars, went to see him and pay him their respects. He saluted them cordially in a foreign language, and the conversation continued and ended in the same.

DR. CROSWELL.

Not far from 1803, a young man of this name, unmarried, came to Paris, with a view to settlement as a physician. He remained in Paris but a short time, and there is no account of where he came from or where he went. He was also a trader and town clerk.

DR. CYRUS HAMLIN.

The county of Oxford was incorporated in 1805. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, then a practicing physician of Livermore, was appointed Clerk of the Courts, and removed from Livermore to Paris. He was the son of Eleazer Hamlin and Lydia Bonney, and was born in Pembroke, Mass., July 21, 1767. He prepared himself for the practice of medicine, emigrated to Livermore, commenced practice in that town, and was there married to Anne Livermore, daughter of Dea. Elijah Livermore. Several of his brothers settled in Waterford. As before stated, Dr Hamlin removed to Paris in 1806. Although he was appointed Clerk of the Courts, he did not relinquish the practice of medicine in so far as it was compatible with the duties of his office. The Dr. continued in practice till near the close of life, which took place in February, 1829, aged 62 years and 7 months. He was a gentleman, universally respected, a member of the Baptist church, and very much esteemed for his kindness of heart, and genial, social qualities. The Dr. was highly blessed in his family, having had eight children who attained adult age, four male and four female, among the former of whom may be reckoned a distinguished physician, a distinguished lawyer, and a distinguished statesman.

DR. BENJAMIN CHANDLER.

Dr. Chandler was the son of Perez and Rhoda (Wadsworth) Chandler of Duxbury, and a descendant of Edmund Chandler or Chaundler, who was in that town in 1633. Dr. Chandler was born in 1782. His brother Seth, also a physician, came to Maine. His sister Asenath, was the mother of Hon. Ezekiel Holmes. Peleg Chandler, an early settler in New Gloucester, was his uncle. Dr. Chandler commenced practice in New Gloucester, then moved to Hebron, and about the year 1811, came to Paris and continued to practice his profession till his decease. In 1818 and 1819, he was elected a Representative to the Legislature, and went to Boston to discharge his duties, before the State was divided. He was appointed Assistant Surgeon in Col. Ryerson's regiment, in the war of 1812-15; but whether he left town to accompany the regiment is not known. He was appointed Judge of Probate immediately after the separation of Maine from Massachusetts, and entered upon the duties of his office June 6, 1820, the successor of Judah Dana, and continued in that office until 1827. Dr. Chandler was twice married, first to Wealthy, daughter of Ichabod Benson, and second to Miss Sarah Barker of Portland, but left no children. His decease took place in 1827, aged 45 years. His remains were deposited in a tomb on the old road to South Paris. The character of Dr. Chandler is often referred to by the oldest inhabitants of Paris, who knew him well. He is represented as a member of the church, as a moral, upright man, amiable in his disposition, unobtrusive in his manners, respected and beloved as a physician, and honored as an able, intelligent and useful citizen by all his contemporaries. Dr. Ezekiel Holmes studied medicine with Dr. Chandler, and married a sister of his wife.

DR. DEAN.

A young unmarried man came to settle in Paris, as a physician, about the time of Dr. Stevens's decease, by the name of Dr. Dean. Even his specific name is not remembered by the oldest inhabitants. He practiced his profession but a brief period in this town. The data for his biography are wholly wanting.

DR. BENJAMIN HANSON.

Dr. Hanson was a son of Ichabod and Abigail (Hayes) Hanson, born in Windham, Me., Oct. 18, 1781. He attended Fryeburg Academy; studied medicine with Dr. Converse of Durham; was commissioned Lieutenant in the 33d U. S. Infantry in 1812, but never entered active service. He married Abigail Woodman of Buxton, and moved to Paris in 1810 or 1811, where his first child was born in 1811. His second child was born in Hollis, Me., 1813, his third at Waybridge, Vt., 1818, and his fourth at Fowlerville, N. Y., 1829. He died in York, Medina, Co., Ohio, in 1858. In 1821, Dr. Hanson was a Preceptor of an Academy in Stroudsbury, Penn., and in 1822, he was in New York city. He remained in Paris but a short time, but perhaps as long as he ever did anywhere. He was a moving planet.

DR. ASAPH KITTREDGE.

Dr. Kittredge's father was of Scotch descent, and first settled in Tewksbury, Mass., and soon after moved to North Brookfield. He married Miss Fletcher, and practiced medicine and surgery many years. He had a family of nine children, four of whom were physicians and surgeons, the subject of this sketch being one of them. Dr. Asaph Kittredge was born at Brookfield in 1793, and studied medicine under his father's tuition, and completed his course of study in Boston in 1812. Soon after, he was assistant surgeon on board a privateer, where he found his first experience as a surgeon. In 1815, he rode from Boston to Paris on horseback, where he stopped, in order to ascertain whether he had better remain or retrace his steps and go to Ohio. While waiting, as tradition records it, "his mind in a quandary, he was called to attend an old lady in Paris in a severe illness. She recovered under his treatment, and told him his mission for good was to remain in Paris; and that decided his mind." He remained on Paris Hill a short time, then moved to North Paris, where he bought a farm and continued the practice of his profession till the fall of 1836. He then moved to Paris Hill and continued in active and successful practice till 1866, in all about fifty years. He was twice married, marrying first Miss Eliza Stowell of Paris, and second Miss Janette Young of North Yarmouth. Two children were the result of each marriage. A son of each is now living; Charles F., in New Haven, Conn., and George, in St. Louis, Mo. Dr. Kittredge was ill and suffered much from spinal disease some two years before his decease. His wife having died, he moved to New Haven in 1867, where he continued to sink, and died Feb. 6, 1868, aged 75 years. He was a large, well proportioned man physically, weighing some 300 pounds, strong, vigorous and resolute. His practice of fifty years, in storm and sunshine, in heat and cold and night and day, proved him to be a man of great endurance. He was a man of good common sense, of sound judgment, of social and cheerful disposition, abstemious habits, an able and useful physician and surgeon. A near and dear friend of his says: "He was a practical man, held clear and pronounced opinions on most subjects, a great smoker, was in his most amiable mood after a good dinner and a pipe smoke, and enjoyed life as well as most people of his temperament."

DR. JOB HOLMES.

Dr. Holmes was a native of Oxford, formerly Hebron, the son of James Holmes and Jerusha (Rawson) Holmes. He was one of nine children, all of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. He chose the profession of medicine, attended lectures at the Maine Medical School, where he graduated in 1825-6. He commenced the practice of his profession in Paris, in 1826, where he continued till 1834, when he removed to Calais. While in Paris, he served as town clerk. At Calais he was an active practitioner of medicine and surgery, till 1864, when he died suddenly from heart disease, in the midst of his usefulness, honored and lamented by the whole community. He married Miss Vesta Hamlin, daughter of Dr. Hamlin, in 1833, and had a family of five children. Dr. Holmes was of medium height, with a physical system finely knit, of great physical endurance, of unconquerable resolution, good habits, agreeable address and manners. He honored his profession and practiced it with great zeal, success and ability.

DR. JAMES MADISON BUCK.

In the year 1833-4, Dr. Buck settled as a physician on Paris Hill, the successor of Dr. Holmes. He was a native of Sumner, and the son of Moses Buck, a successful farmer. He studied medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. Tewksbury of Oxford, and was a graduate of Maine Medical School. He practiced his profession only about three years, and came to his death by hemorrhage of the lungs, in Nov. 1836. He was never married. Dr. Buck was of medium height, fragile constitution, possessed a kind heart and quiet manners. He knew what excellence was, in his profession; and in a quiet, unostentatious manner, sought to be useful to his patients rather than brilliant. He had a great taste for music, and was exquisitely sensitive to its harmony and correct performance. A discord was a wound. With Judge Emery, a man of similar taste, he could enjoy all the charms and consolation, which for many hours, sweet sounds could afford.

THOMAS HUNTINGTON BROWN.

Dr. Brown was born in Minot, in Cumberland county, Me., now Androscoggin county, on the 27th day of August, 1813. His father was Thomas Brown of Newbury, Mass., who married Mary Rawson Bridgham in 1811, and resided in Minot. Dr. Brown obtained his education at the district school in Oxford, at the Buckfield and Readfield Academies, and also under the private instruction of the late Judge Joseph G. Cole. He commenced the study of medicine in 1833, under the preceptorship of Dr. Levi Rawson of Grafton, Mass. He attended his first course of lectures at Brunswick, then a course at Pittsfield, Mass., and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, March, 1837. He commenced the practice of medicine in Paris, May 15, 1837, and continued till his death in 1880, over 43 years. He was a member of the Maine Medical Association, of which he was at one time President. He was surgeon of the 1st Regiment 1st Division of Maine Militia for seven years, and received an honorable discharge. He was Examining Surgeon for the Pension Department, some eleven years; and Judge of Probate during five years. He was political editor of the Oxford Democrat, from 1853 to 1856, and again from 1874 to 1876. He was an able writer. He had been twice married, marrying first Miss Maria M. King, daughter of the late Samuel King of Paris, Nov. 12, 1838, who had three children, all of whom died in infancy, the wife dying also in November, 1846. His second marriage was in December, 1847, to Miss Juliette Hammond, daughter of the late Moses Hammond of Paris, by whom he had three children, all of whom are living at the present time. Dr. Brown was an excellent physician, and no practitioner in Paris ever enjoyed the confidence of her citizens in a greater degree. Both in the science and art of his profession in all its branches, he was far above the average Doctor of Medicine.

DR. LEANDER S. TRIPP.

Dr. Tripp, now the Rev. Leander S. Tripp of Surry, Me., was born in Hebron in 1805, and is the son of Rev. John Tripp of Hebron. He graduated at Waterville, Me., in 1829, and as Doctor of Medicine at the Maine Medical School in 1834. He settled first in Eden, Me., where he remained six months, then removed to Parkman in 1835, then to East Dixfield the same winter. He came to North Paris in 1837, and remained one year; and in 1838 settled in North Norway, remaining there two years. He evidently did not find the practice of medicine congenial, and after trying various fields, betook himself to a profession more in accordance with his talents and wishes.

DR. GILMAN ROWE.

Dr. Rowe came to Woodstock in 1838, where he commenced the practice of medicine. He moved to North Paris in 1839, and practiced his profession till May, 1841, the time of his decease, aged 26 years. His native place was Campton, Grafton Co., N. H., but he came here from Canada. He married Cynthia Buck, daughter of Moses Buck of Sumner, while at North Paris. He was an active, energetic practitioner, and sickness was very prevalent during the years he resided in Woodstock and Paris. His widow became the wife of America Bisbee.

DR. ALMON TWITCHELL.

Dr. Twitchell practiced his profession in North Paris for a period of about three years, from 1841 to 1844. He was a native of Bethel, Me., where he was born Sept. 14, 1811. Joseph Twitchell, Esq., his great grandfather, was one of the prominent and original proprietors of Bethel, his grandfather was Capt. Eleazer Twitchell, the first settler in the village of Bethel Hill, and his father was Joseph Twitchell, the first child born in that village. There are abundant facts and dates for a biography of Dr. Twitchell, only a brief allusion to which is appropriate on the present occasion. He was married in 1843 to Miss Phebe M. Buxton, daughter of Capt. Jeremiah Buxton of North Yarmouth, and had five children. On leaving Paris, he removed to Bethel, where he continued the practice of his profession until his decease in Oct. 1859, aged 48 years. He graduated as Doctor of Medicine at the Medical School, Brunswick, in 1840. Dr. Twitchell did not seek politics or office; but office sought him, and he twice represented the people of Oxford county as Senator in 1856-7. He was esteemed for his candor, sobriety and conscientiousness. His early death is attributed to overwork, to hardship and exposure. As a cotemporary, it is only justice to say: he was simple and refined in his intercourse, careful and candid in his judgments, and prudent and discriminating in the discharge of every duty. His excellent wife survived him until Dec. 25, 1883. Dr. Geo. M. Twitchell, late of Fairfield, is his only surviving son, and Alice G., the Matron of the Maine Insane Hospital, his oldest daughter.

DR. WM. APPLETON RUST.

Dr. Rust is a native of Gorham, Me., where he was born June 22, 1823, and prepared for college at Gorham Academy. He gradnated as M. D. at the University of the City of New York, in 1846. He was Principal of Edlingham Academy and Biddeford High School, and came to South Paris and commenced the practice of his profession in April, 1847. In Oct., 1848, he married Frances, eldest daughter of Hon. Rufus K. Goodenow. She died Oct. 18, 1849, and June 5th, 1851, he married her sister Sarah, who now survives. During his residence here, he was one of the School Committee for many years, a Trustee of the State Reform School, and an active practitioner of his profession. He was appointed by the Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, Inspector of Internal Revenue for the State in 1864, and removed to Portland in March, 1865, being succeeded by Dr. D. B. Sawyer—having been in this town about 18 years. He resigned his office in 1866, and entered the firm of Rust Brothers & Bird, wholesale druggists, of Boston, Mass., where he now resides. Since his residence in Boston he has been a Member of the School Board, Trustee of the City Hospital, Mercantile Library Association, and Penny Savings Bank; also a Director of the Metropolitan Railroad, Collateral Loan Company, and Blackstone National Bank. Dr. Rust was a successful and highly respected physician while in Paris, and his Parisian experience must have laid the foundation for that larger prosperity and trustworthiness which has followed him in the Metropolis of New England.

DR. CHARLES RUSSELL.

Dr. Russell was a son of James and Dolly Russell, then of North Waterford, afterwards of Bethel, Me., where he was born July 19, 1820. He received his education from the district school of his native town, at Gould's Academy, Bethel, North Bridgton Academy, and entered Bowdoin College Sept. 20, 1844, and soon after commenced the study of medicine and graduated March, 1848, at the Maryland University, Baltimore, Md. He commenced his professional practice in Conway, New Hampshire, remaining there two years. He removed to West Paris in September, 1850, where he continued in the active practice of his profession about 15 years—till Feb., 1865, and then moved to Fayette, Me., where he now resides. He married Asenath H. Willis of Hanover, and has had eleven children: one is a graduate of the Wesleyan University, and two others are teachers in Connecticut. Dr. Russell was a useful and prudent physician, practical and sound in his views, and gave good satisfaction in his field of practice while in Paris.

DR. EDWIN GREEN.

Dr. Green, born in 1817, was a native of Paris and the son of Nathaniel W. Green of Leicester, Mass., and Polly W., daughter of Dea. John Willis of Paris. The Doctor graduated at the Maine Medical School in 1841. He then commenced the practice of his profession in Albany, where he remained but a short time. He then moved to Milan, N. H., and remained about three years; thence he moved to Woodstock, where he practiced about five years. He then moved to Sumner, bought a farm and carried it on, practicing his profession in a limited degree till 1865. He then sold his farm and moved to North Paris, where he continued in active practice eleven years. In 1876 he moved from North Paris to Milan, N. H., again, where he remained till 1878. He then moved to Athol, Mass., where he is at the present time. The Doctor married Permelia Kendall of Shelburn, N. H., and has four children.

DR. D. B. SAWYER.

Dr. Sawyer is a native of Durham, Me. He received his education mostly at Foxcroft Academy. He graduated at the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, and commenced the practice of his profession in Minot. He moved to South Paris in 1865 and left in 1875—having practiced in town ten years. He subsequently went to Portland, and soon after to Lewiston, Me., where he now resides. He was the successor of Dr. Rust, and during the ten years of his practice in Paris he gave good satisfaction. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and was universally esteemed for his morality and integrity in his business and in his professional intercourse.

DR. SEWELL HENRY WEBBER.

Dr. Webber was the son of Henry R. and Nancy (Whitehead) Webber, and was born in Oxford, April 21, 1840. He studied medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. W. A. Rust, at South Paris, attended medical lectures at Pittsfield, Mass., and at New York City, and graduated at the Maine Medical School, August, 1865. He commenced practice at West Paris in 1865, and in 1867 moved to South Paris, where he continued till 1873, at which time he died of heart disease, aged 33 years. He was interred with Masonic honors. Dr. Webber was a careful physician, and had many ardent friends. He married Miss Nettie W. Stowell of South Paris, but had no children.

DR. OCTAVUS K. YATES.

Dr. Yates was the son of James and Emma (Cole) Yates, and was born in Greenwood, Me., Sept. 25, 1833. He obtained his education at the district schools of his native town, and at Bethel Academy. He studied medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. S. H. Tewkesbury and graduated at the Maine Medical School in 1870 and commenced the practice of his profession the same year at West Paris, where he now remains. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Artemas and Desire (Stephens) Felt of Greenwood. He has been very successful in practice.

DR. ISAAC ROUNDS.

Dr. Isaac Rounds is a native of Danville—the son of Nathaniel and Susan (Libby) Rounds. He graduated at the Maine Medical School in May, 1873. He commenced practice of medicine in Lewiston, where he did not remain long, but the same year moved to South Paris, where he still remains in the active practice of his profession. The patriotism of Dr. Rounds was placed beyond all doubt. In the late war he felt the call for him personally to go to the defense of his country. His patriotism and bravery were tested on the field of battle—the marks of which he will always carry while life remains.

DRS. NORRIS AND PALMER.

Dr. Norris—a young physician—unmarried, came to Paris Hill about 1867; the precise time or how long he remained is not known. He did not stop long, but removed to Peru. Dr. Palmer—another young physician—came to Paris Hill in 1869; but left in a short time. It is impossible to state why he left or where he went. No data for the biography of either of these physicians are at hand.

DR. BUCK.

Dr. Buck was a native of Buckfield, born Aug. 17, 1841. He studied medicine in Washington, D. C., where he graduated during the war. He came to Norway in 1867, where he remained one year. He then moved to West Paris for the same length of time. He then moved to Kansas, where he is now in the active practice of his profession.

DR. FRANCIS H. PACKARD.

Dr. Francis Henry Packard is the son of Stephen Packard, Jr., and was born in Woodstock July 23d, 1848. His mother was Louisa B., daughter of Joseph Penley of this town. His grandfather, Stephen Packard, born in Buckfield, was among the early settlers of Woodstock. Francis H. was brought up on the farm, attended the common schools of Woodstock and Paris, at Paris Hill and Gould's Academies, attended medical lectures at Brunswick, Hanover, N. H., and in New York City, graduated at the Maine Medical School in 1878 and commenced practice at West Paris in the winter of 1879-80. He married, in August, 1878, Mary Agnes Young. He has been quite successful in practice, although obliged to compete with older physicians.

GEORGE BURRILL RAWSON.

Dr. Geo. Burrill Rawson, son of Abner, studied the medical profession and graduated at the Maine Medical School. In 1838 he married Eunice Fitch, daughter of Alanson Mellen, Esq., and settled in practice in New Portland. He died in 1857.

The profession of medicine in Paris has illustrated the common fate of all classes. Some have entered upon the stage of service and remained only a few months or years, while others have kept in harness, toiling up the steep ascent of life, during a half or a quarter of a century. Some, after learning the hardships and responsibilities of surgery, have abandoned the practice and sought more profitable or more congenial employment in other business or professions. Some have been the beneficiaries of popular favor and been elected as State Representatives or County Officers—in this respect vying, with the farmers, mechanics and traders, the professions of law and theology, in their love of fame and their care of the State. Others still have labored steadily, resolutely and perseveringly, in the practice of their profession, among the rich and the poor, in storm and sunshine, in heat and cold—ambitious only to honor their calling, fulfil a sacred mission and benefit their fellow-men. But, notwithstanding the versatility of tastes and the direction of the talents of the physicians of this town, it will be conceded on all hands, and everywhere, that the members of the profession in Paris, almost without exception, have been worthy, reliable men, upright and honorable in every relation of life. The inhabitants of Paris can, therefore, look back over the past century with pride and satisfaction as they read the names, the lives and services of those who have passed away, while a grateful posterity will embalm their memory and preserve its fragrance for future generations. Let us hope that those now living may, at the close of the next century, gain as fair a record and as just an appreciation."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

PARIS LAWYERS.

This town, being the shire town of the county, has had many able members of the legal profession. Two of them became governors of the State, several were sent to Congress and many others have held high and responsible positions in county and State, and under the general government. The chapter on this subject contains many facts from the paper prepared and read by Alvah Black, Esq., at the Centennial Celebration of the settlement of the town.

ZACHARIAH SOULE.

He was familiarly known as "Zach. Soule," and was the first lawyer in town. He was a man of fine promise and brilliant wit. He came here from the town of Halifax, Plymouth county, Mass., and was a graduate of Brown University, in the class of 1799. While in Paris he served as town clerk. In 1806 he went to Farmington, but in 1812 returned to Massachusetts, where he ended a brief legal career in the poor-house. He also served a term in the Charleston Penitentiary. Strong drink was his ruin.

NATHANIEL HOWE.

The second lawyer here was Nathaniel Howe. He was the son of Otis and Lucy (Goodale) Howe of Henniker, N. H., formerly of Marlboro', Mass., and a cousin of Hon. Timothy O. Howe, late Postmaster General. He came here in 1808 and soon after married Polly, daughter of Thomas Follansbee Chase, who then lived on the Goodenow place, since occupied by Wallace H. Cummings. He was a good lawyer and faithful to his clients. This rendered him very unpopular with a class whose neglect to pay their debts frequently gave occasion for the law to lay its heavy hand upon them, and by this class he was commonly called "Gouge Howe." Some of his enemies, getting merry over their potations, one day put forward one of their number, Benaiah Dow, to give the lawyer a whipping, which he proceeded to do in a most brutal manner. But several of them were obliged to go to Portland and stand trial for conspiracy, so that their drunken frolic cost them very dear. Mr. Howe left Paris in 1810 or 1811, and went to Bridgton. One of his daughters, now deceased, was the wife of Rev. Jacob Chapman of Exeter, N. H.; of his other children, only a son now survives, who resides in Waterford.

ALBION KEITH PARRIS.

The next lawyer was Albion K. Parris, who became the second Governor of Maine. He was the only child of Judge Samuel Parris of Hebron, whose father was Benjamin Parris, and whose mother was Millicent, daughter of Josiah and Ruth (Manly) Keith of Easton. The mother of Governor Parris was Sarah Pratt of Middleborough. He was born in Hebron, January 19, 1788, graduated with distinction at Dartmouth in 1806, and was admitted to the bar at Paris, in September, 1809. He soon after settled in practice here, and married Sarah, a daughter of Rev. Levi Whitman of Wellfleet, and sister of the late Levi Whitman, Esq., of Norway. He lived in the south part of the building now Horace Cummings' Hotel as it then was, the north part being occupied by Dr. Benj. Chandler. Soon after he came here, he built the office now owned and occupied by Samuel R. Carter, Esq., between the hotels of Messrs. Cummings and Hubbard, which he occupied while he remained here. Gov. Parris was a man of commanding and dignified appearance and popular manners. Able and learned in the law, he soon gained the confidence of the people, a high position in public life and a large practice in the courts, which he held till he left Paris, called to move in a higher sphere at Portland late in 1817, or early in 1818. While here he was appointed County Attorney, elected a member of the Legislature, Senator from Oxford and Somerset counties and Representative to Congress. While serving his second term, he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court. He was a member of the convention that framed our State Constitution, elected Governor of the State in 1821 and re-elected four times. In 1828 he was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Maine, and in 1836, by Mr. Van Buren, Second Comptroller of the Treasury of the United States, which office he held for thirteen years, and then returned to Portland where, as his last public office, he served as Mayor in 1852. He died in 1857, aged 69.

years. His wife survived him many years, and died recently in Washington.

ENOCH LINCOLN.

Enoch Lincoln, our third lawyer, was the son of Levi Lincoln of Worcester, where he was born Dec. 28, 1788. He entered the Sophomore class of Harvard College in 1806 and left it during his senior year without graduating. He received the degree of Master of Arts from Bowdoin College in 1821. He pursued his professional studies in the office of his brother, Levi Lincoln, Jr., and was admitted to practice at Salem in 1811. The year following he returned to Worcester, and in the spring of 1813 he settled in Fryeburg. While there he published a poem entitled "The Village," descriptive of the charming scenery on Saco river in the vicinity of his adopted town. In 1815 Hon. Wm. P. Preble, District Attorney for Maine, appointed Mr. Lincoln his deputy. In 1819 he was elected to Congress and moved to Paris. He was continued in Congress, residing in Paris during the recess, until 1826, when he was elected the third Governor of Maine. He was re-elected twice, and, in 1829, declined a re-election, intending to retire from public life at the close of that term. In the autumn of that year he was present, by invitation, at the opening of the Cony Female Academy in Augusta, where he delivered the occasional address. He was suffering from severe indisposition while obliged to perform these duties. At the house of a friend he grew worse and finally expired Oct. 11, 1829, at the age of 41. His death was mourned throughout the State and Country. His remains repose in a tomb erected on the State domain in front of the Capitol in Augusta, and a plain granite shaft marks the last resting-place of the scholar, poet and statesman. He was a scholarly man of varied attainments, a ready writer, and his composition was marked by purity and felicity of expression. His contributions to the press, which were quite numerous, were characterized by elegance of style and energy of thought. He began a work on the History and Resources of Maine, which he intended to make exhaustive of these subjects, but it was incomplete at the time of his death and was never published. While in Paris he occupied the office built by his predecessor, both in the practice of law here and in the gubernatorial chair. His memory is still revered here by our older citizens who had the pleasure of his acquaintance and friendship. He was never married. His brother, Levi Lincoln, Jr., was Governor of Massachusetts contemporaneous with Enoch Lincoln in Maine.

STEPHEN EMERY.

Hon. Stephen Emery began practice in Paris not long after Gov. Lincoln came here. He taught the academy at Hallowell one year and a year at Portland; studied law with Governors Parris and Lincoln and was admitted to the bar in June, 1819. He was born to Moses Emery, at Minot, April 29, 1790, fitted for college by his own efforts, aided by the fruits of a sympathising elder sister's labor, and graduated at Bowdoin in 1814. He studied law as he had opportunity while teaching. January 15, 1815, he married Sarah Stowell, daughter of Squire Daniel of this town, and sister of Levi Stowell, Esq. For a while after he settled here, he had his office in his house and taught a school over the Bemis store. He was devotedly fond of music, and while pursuing his studies used to teach singing schools. In this way he broke his health and was ever after a partial invalid. Soon after his admission to the bar he went to Columbia, Washington county, but in about a year returned to Paris, where he lived till he retired from practice. He was a learned and successful lawyer, an honorable, honest man and always a gentleman. He was Judge of Probate for Oxford county for several years; was Attorney General of the State under Governor Fairfield, and chairman of the State Board of Education. By appointment of Governor Hubbard, he held the office of District Judge until the court was abolished by act of the Legislature. For second wife he married, in 1825, Miss Jeanette Loring of Buckfield. Judge Emery died in 1863. He was among the pioneer temperance men of the State.

JOSEPH G. COLE.

Hon. Joseph Greene Cole was born in Lincoln, Mass., March 16, 1801, and came to Paris in 1825. He commenced the study of law with Hon. Levi Lincoln of Worcester and finished with Governor Enoch Lincoln of Paris. He was admitted to the bar in 1826, and immediately opened a law office in Paris, where he continued to practice as long as he lived. He served respectively as Secretary of the State Senate, member of the Maine Legislature for two terms—1830 and 1831, Register of Probate, Clerk of Courts and Judge of the District Court, to which office he was appointed in 1848. He was a man of distinguished ability, of great industry and of excellent character. He died November 12, 1851, while holding the position of Judge, and no death in Oxford county was ever more generally regretted. As a lawyer he was fair and candid, never seeking advantage by mis-statement of either law or fact; as a Judge he was impartial, and his private life was above reproach. He was editor of the Jeffersonian, and of the Oxford Democrat seven years. He married, February 12, 1834, Melitable Marble, who survived him quite a number of years.

LEVI STOWELL.

Levi Stowell was a native of this town, son of Daniel Stowell, Esq., and was born January 14, 1794. He graduated at Bowdoin in 1815, was admitted to the bar in October, 1818, at Paris, practiced a while at Lisbon and afterwards at Dixfield and finally came to Paris, where he pursued his profession nearly all the remainder of his life, a part of the time at the Hill and a part at South Paris. He was a very worthy man and a respectable lawyer. He was Register of Probate and County Treasurer. Being in poor health, with a tendency to pulmonary disease, he went to the banks of the Wabash in 1853, where his cough was relieved, but was replaced by fever and ague. From Vincennes he moved to Mazeppa, Minnesota, where he was Postmaster, Magistrate and School Officer. He died of a paralytic shock at Mazeppa, Sept. 8, 1865, after an illness of four days. While at Dixfield he united with the Orthodox church.

TIMOTHY J. CARTER.

Hon. Timothy Jarvis Carter was the son of Dr. Timothy and Frances (Freeland) Carter of Bethel, and was born in that town. He attended the town schools, took an academic course and studied law at Northampton, Mass. He was admitted to the bar in 1826, and located first at Rumford, but soon after came to Paris. He was married September 11, 1828, to Arabella, daughter of Samuel and Polla (Freeland) Rawson of Paris. He was often in town office in Paris, served as County Attorney and was elected to Congress in 1836. He died in Washington before the close of his term. High tributes of respect were paid to him, in the House by Hon. Geo. Evans, and in the Senate by Hon. John Ruggles, reported in the Washington Globe of March 15, 1838. The issue of the Oxford Democrat published the week of his death, is dressed in mourning, and gives a lengthy account of the life and public services of the deceased. Mr. Carter, both as a lawyer and politician, was able, popular and successful, and achieved a high position. Early in his public life he died, when the world was all bright before him.

RUFUS K. GOODENOW.

Hon. Rufus King Goodenow was born in Henniker, N. H., April, 1790, moved to Brownfield with his father's family when 12 years of age, and made several voyages in merchant ships before his majority. He served as Captain of the 33d U. S. Infantry through the war of 1812. He came to Paris in 1821, as first Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court here, which office he held 16 years. He spent the remainder of his life here, chiefly as farmer and lawyer, giving considerable attention to politics. He held various minor positions and served one term in Congress. He was a brother of the late Judge Goodenow of Alfred, and of the late Robert Goodenow, M. C., of Farmington. He died March, 1863. He did not enter the profession till late in life (1845), and never gave much of his time to it. He was a worthy man, of great natural ability, honored and respected. He married Jane, daughter of Captain Thomas Bean of Brownfield, who was born July 25, 1792, and died in Paris in October, 1864.

CHARLES ANDREWS.

Charles Andrews, a native of Paris, was the son of Edward and Elizabeth (Nevens) Andrews and was born Feb. 11, 1814; read law with Hon. H. Hamlin, was admitted and began practice in Turner, removed to Dixfield in 1842, and thence to Paris, January, 1846, to assume the duties of Clerk of Courts, to which he had been elected. He afterwards lived here, practicing law, after the expiration of his term of office. He died April 30, 1852, while a member of Congress from this District. Colonel Andrews was a brilliant and able lawyer, an eloquent and successful advocate, having great power with the jury. Much of his life was given to politics, which had great attraction for him and in which he was very successful, being possessed of that singular personal charm which drew multitudes of friends to him. He was taken away at the commencement of what promised to be a brilliant career. He married Persis, daughter of William Sibley, Esq., of Freedom, who after his death, became the wife of Alvah Black.

Mr. Kimball

GEORGE F. EMERY.

George F. Emery was the second son of Judge Stephen and Sarah (Stowell) Emery, and was born in Paris, Nov. 15, 1817. His father was a native of Minot, Me., and his mother a daughter of Daniel Stowell, Esq., of Paris. He graduated at Bowdoin College, class of 1836, and studied law with his father. He begun the practice of law in Waterford, his printed card appearing in the Oxford Democrat in 1838. He afterwards formed a co-partnership with his father and continued in practice, besides filling the position of Register of Probate until 1848, when he moved to Portland. He was clerk of the United States Circuit Court for many years until 1876, when he moved to Boston to take general supervision of the Boston Post. He has since returned to Portland. When Geo. L. Mellen became part owner of the Oxford Democrat, Mr. Emery became political editor, though then residing in Portland. He conducted the paper with marked success, and retired therefrom as soon as the object in which he was interested, was accomplished. He married Miss Eliza Appleton of Portland. He is much interested in the history of this, his native town, and delivered a fine poem Centennial day, which may be found in another part of this volume.

WM. K. KIMBALL.

Gen. Wm. K. Kimball was the son of Moses and Mary (Bean) Kimball, and was born in Rumford, June 7, 1820. He attended the academies at Bethel and at Bridgton, studied law at Cambridge, was admitted to the bar and commenced practice first at Dixfield. In 1844, he came to Paris and resided here until his death, which occurred in 1875. He was County Attorney four years, and Clerk of the Courts, ten.

He was United States Marshal for Maine, from 1857 to 1861. He was Lt. Colonel and Colonel of the 12th Maine Regiment and brevetted Brigadier General for meritorious services. He married July 29, 1842, Frances Freeland, daughter of Samuel and Polla (Free-land) Rawson of Paris. Gen. Kimball was a good and talented lawyer, but gave most of his efforts to politics for which he was peculiarly fitted, being one of the most attractive, fascinating and popular of men. He was a patriot and soldier, and during the whole war of the Rebellion, served faithfully and well, ever ready to lay down his life for the good of his country. At the close of the war, he retired from the service with a record of which any man might be proud, and which conferred honor upon the town and upon all connected with him.

ALVAN BLACK.

Alvah Black was born in Limington, York County, Maine, Dec. 3, 1817; was educated at Yarmouth Academy, and graduated at Bowdoin, class of 1845. He read law in the office of Augustine Haines, Esq., at Portland, and was admitted to Cumberland Bar in 1848. He commenced practice at Gorham, where he remained about a year, from whence he removed to South Paris and practiced about two years, after which he removed to Paris Hill, where he afterwards resided and formed a copartnership with Hon. Charles Andrews. He was Clerk of Courts from January 1856 to 1859, and represented the town of Paris in the Legislature in 1860. Mr. Black was President of the Bar Association, and a leading member of the Bar. He was a well-read lawyer and a strong advocate, and his practice, which was quite extensive, came from litigated cases all over the county. He stood high for integrity and honor, and for faithfulness to the interests of his clients. He was married in 1855, to Persis S., daughter of Wm. Sibley, Esq., of Freedom, and widow of his former partner, Hon. Charles Andrews. Mr. Black died very suddenly, January 24, 1882. A few years before his death, he formed a law partnership with Charles E. Holt of Norway, and spent a portion of his time each week at their office in Norway Village. Mr. Black practiced in both the State and United States Courts. He was the Democratic candidate for Congress, for the second district, in 1870; he was always a Democrat.

BENJ. C. CUMMINGS.

Benjamin Chandler Cummings, son of Simeon, was born June 6, 1820. He was educated to the profession of the law, but engaged quite extensively in other business. He was at one time interested in manufacturing woolen goods at Locke's Mills, and operated quite largely in real estate. After practicing in Paris for a few years, he moved to Portland and engaged in practice there. He married a daughter of the late ex-Governor Samuel Wells, and died Dec. 18, 1857.

ENOCH L. CUMMINGS.

Enoch Lincoln Cummings, son of Simeon and brother of Benj. C. Cummings, was also educated to the legal profession, was admitted to the bar and engaged in practice in Portland. He was born May 23d, 1827, and died January 22, 1859. He married a daughter of the late Judge Nathan Clifford.

Geo. A. Wilson

JAMES F. RAWSON.

James Freeland Rawson, son of Samuel Rawson, entered Waterville College, graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., in 1844, and went into practice in Bangor with Henry E. Prentiss. He served a term as Register of Probate and was for a time Deputy Collector of Customs. He was for many years a member of the City Government of Bangor, and member of the Legislature in 1871. He married Sarah D., daughter of Thomas Jenness of Bangor.

LYMAN RAWSON.

Lyman Rawson, son of Abner, born in Paris, May 6, 1799, graduated at Waterville College, now Colby University, in 1827, studied law with Stephen Emery and, after being admitted, settled at Rumford Point, where he continued in the practice for many years. He was also much in political life; served several terms in the Legislature, and one as Judge of Probate for Oxford county. He also did much business outside of the legal profession in the way of buying and letting out stock, and in farming. He was very fond of agriculture and of rural affairs generally. He married, May 20, 1832, Jerusha, daughter of Capt. James and Jerusha (Rawson) Holmes of Hebron. Judge Rawson died of heart disease, in Rumford, several years ago.

GEORGE E. WILSON.

George E. Wilson is the son of Rev. Adam Wilson, D. D., formerly pastor of the Baptist Church at the Hill, and was born in Turner, July 21, 1842. He was educated at Paris Hill Academy, Waterville Classical Institute, and graduated from Colby University in the class of 1862. He enlisted in 1862, in Company B. of the 21st Maine Regiment, and served out his term. He then returned to Waterville and read law in the office of Hon. Reuben Foster, and was admitted to the Kennebec bar in 1864. He came to South Paris and opened a law office in July, 1865, and the following August 24, he married Miss Annie L., daughter of David Blake of Belgrade. He was elected Town Clerk soon after he came here, and has served in that capacity since his first election. He was elected to the Legislature in 1882, and took high rank in that body. In 1884 he was appointed Judge of Probate to fill out a vacancy caused by a change from annual to biennial elections. He is a good lawyer and a safe counsellor.

HERRICK C. DAVIS.

Herrick Chase Davis is the son of Benjamin and Ruhamah (Chase) Davis, and was born in Woodstock, November 5, 1825. He was engaged in business pursuits for several years after he came to his majority, but finally studied law with Hon. John J. Perry and was admitted to the bar. He opened an office at Bryant's Pond and was there until 1872, when he was elected Register of Probate, and soon after moved to Paris Hill. He has filled the office by re-elections since that time. Before coming here he was elected to the Maine Legislature and held various town offices. He married Lucy M., daughter of Jeremiah Felt of Woodstock.

JAMES S. WRIGHT.

James S. Wright was born in Jay, July 17, 1845. His father is Reuben Wright, and his mother, Sarah Putnam. He attended the town schools and the high schools at Wilton and Dixfield, studied law with Hon. Wm. W. Bolster at Dixfield, and was admitted to the Oxford bar at the September term of 1868. He was elected Clerk of the Courts in 1872, and moved to Paris Hill, January 1, 1873. He was re-elected twice and was then elected County Attorney, which position he is now filling. He married, May 2d, 1869, Miss Hannah E. Woodbury. He has been among the most respected and valuable of our citizens who have come here on account of election to office.

OTHER LAWYERS.

The other Paris lawyers, the data for sketches of whom are not at hand, are John Goodenow of Baltimore; Benjamin W. Bryant, who was the son of John S. Bryant of Chatham, N. H., came here to teach, studied law with Gen. Wm. K. Kimball, was in active practice here for several years, was Postmaster at South Paris, and who died suddenly of diphtheria, as stated in the Annals; Peter C. Ficket, son of Simon Ficket of Woodstock, afterwards of Paris, who first opened an office at South Paris, but for many years has been at West Paris; and Charles B. Benson, also located at West Paris.

“These are the lawyers of Paris ; and well may the town point to them with satisfaction and pride, and as an example to those coming after them ; for well have they performed their parts in their day and generation. Many have conferred high distinction upon it ; none, thank God, have brought discredit. Long may their memory live !”

CHAPTER XXXIX.

FREE MASONRY AND ODD FELLOWSHIP.

MASONS.

OXFORD LODGE No. 18. The charter for Oxford Lodge No. 18, Free and Accepted Masons, was granted by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Sept. 14, 1807, to the following petitioners :

Henry Farwell, Elias Stowell, Seth Morse, Alfred Gates, Abraham Dean, Levi Hubbard, Joseph Gallison, Luther Farrar, Joseph Rust, Wm. Bridgham, Jr., Oren Record, Daniel Stowell, Learned Swallow, Benjamin Heald, Abijah Buck, Barnabas Perry, Daniel Young, Stephen Blake and Samuel Robinson.

The first meeting under the charter was held at Hubbard's Hall, Paris Hill, Nov. 12, 1807, and organized with the following officers :

Henry Farwell, Worshipful Master ; Elias Stowell, Senior Warden ; Seth Morse, Junior Warden ; Levi Hubbard, Treasurer ; Joseph Rust, Secretary ; Learned Swallow, Senior Deacon ; Daniel Young, Junior Deacon ; Joseph Gallison, Senior Steward ; Stephen Blake, Junior Steward ; Barnabas Perry, Tyler.

The following were made Masons during the year 1808 : Russell Hubbard, Alanson Mellen, Simeon Cummings and Daniel Stowell, Jr. September 21, 1808, there was a public installation of officers at the meeting-house, Paris Hill, by the Deputy Grand Master* when the following programme was carried out :

*The number of Jenk's Portland Gazette for September 26, had the following notice :
 “On Wednesday last, Oxford Lodge, at Paris, was consecrated, and its officers installed in

First, installation of the officers elect as follows: Henry Farwell, W. M.; Elias Stowell, S. W.; Levi Hubbard, T.; Joseph Rust, Sec.; Alanson Mellen, S. D.; Daniel Young, J. D.; Russell Hubbard, S. S.; Stephen Blake, J. S.; Barnabas Perry, Tyler; 2d, Music; 3d, Oration by Gen. Samuel Fessenden; 4th, Procession to Hubbard's Hall, and 5th, dinner.

More than three-fourths of a century have passed since the occasion here noted, and the prominent actors in those festivities have long since been called from labor. It was doubtless a red letter day in the history of the lodge.

“OXFORD LODGE, MASON'S HALL, June 22, 1821.

Whereas, Brother Orren Shaw of Paris, in the County of Oxford, on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1822, by a sudden and desolating fire, had his house and other buildings reduced to ashes, together with almost all his furniture, provisions and clothing, by which calamity, he, his wife and two small children, with the prospect of an increasing family, are brought to absolute want and thrown upon the mercy of benevolent men in general and of the fraternity in a special manner, and whereas, from a long acquaintance with our said brother, Orrin Shaw, we know him to be a Mason in heart as well as in name and a useful and highly respected citizen. Therefore,

Resolved, That in addition to the actual relief which we can afford, the Secretary be directed to communicate with the Grand Lodge and the Lodges in this vicinity, and request such assistance for our aforesaid brother as they may feel able and disposed to grant."

1822. Rufus Stowell, W. M. ; Henry W. Millett, Sec. New members, Henry Millett, John Millett, Amos Millett, John Robinson.

1825. Abijah Hall, Jr., W. M. ; Thomas Clark, Sec. May 26, voted that a committee of two be chosen to wait on brother — endeavor to reclaim him for his immoral and unmasonic conduct and report at the next meeting. New member, Samuel McAllister.

1826. March 6, the Lodge was incorporated, and the members accepted the Act Apr. 20, 1826 : signed, Levi Stowell, Abijah Hall, Jr., Rufus Stowell, Simeon Chipman, Levi Rawson, John Millett and Emmor Rawson. Stephen Emery, W. M. ; Thomas Clark, Sec. New member, Benjamin McAllister.

1827. John R. Briggs, W. M. ; Thomas Clark, Sec. New member, Jonathan Millett. March 9, 1827. "Voted that the Secretary of this Lodge pay or remit to Brother Alfred Gates, formerly a worthy member of this Lodge, the sum of fifteen dollars as an expression of the deep regret the members entertain for the loss he recently sustained by having his property consumed by fire." (Two children were consumed in the buildings in Lincoln, to which place he removed from this town). New members, Daniel R. Parsons, Richard Blake, George Hathaway.

Voted May 18, 1830, "That there shall be no ardent spirits brought within the walls of this Lodge for the use of its members."

1830. Festival of St. John at Norway, June 24, 1830. Address by Brother Benjamin B. Murray, at the Universalist church. Here follows a blank of twenty-three years, when there was a special communication of Oxford Lodge at the dwelling-house of Abijah Hall, South Paris, and the following named brethren were chosen as officers, pro tem : Abijah Hall, W. M. ; Rufus Stowell, S. W. ; Emmor Rawson, J. W. ; Stephen Emery, Sec. ; Zenas Maxim, Treasurer ; Stephen Blake, S. D. ; Wm. Stearns, J. D. ; Benjamin Bacon, Tyler. Brethren present, Samuel Stowell, Daniel Town and Amos Winslow. Voted to re-establish the Oxford Lodge.

June 22, 1853, the Lodge assembled at the Academy building. The D. D. G. M., Joseph Covell, installed the officers-elect, for the remainder of the year : Abijah Hall, W. M. ; Rufus Stowell, S. W. ; Stephen Blake, J. W. ; Henry Millett, Treasurer ; Emmor Rawson, S. D. ; Zenas Maxim, J. D. ; Amos Winslow, Tyler.

1853. Raised June 27, Otis True, Wm. Wirt Virgin and Geo. W. Millett.

March 17, 1854, voted to petition the Grand Lodge for a dispensation to hold their meetings in the town of Norway.

Petition to the M. W. Grand Lodge: Humbly sheweth, the W. M., Officers and Brethren of Oxford Lodge No. 18, that the Lodge is now located at Paris, at which place there is no convenient hall in which to work, that a large majority of the members of said Lodge reside in Norway, where a good, safe and convenient hall, owned by a member of the Lodge, can be obtained, disconnected with any other building or for other purpose. Therefore, we pray your Honorable Body to grant a dispensation, authorizing said Lodge to meet and work in Norway. The petition was signed by Alden Palmer, Master. May 5, 1854, permission was granted and the Lodge was moved to Norway, where they held their first communication May 11, 1854.

This in brief is the history of Oxford Lodge No. 18, so far as its chief work was done in Paris. It occupied Hubbard's Hall (the second story of the Hubbard House, Paris Hill,) until 1819, and then for one year Lincoln Hall, Paris Hill, and sometimes the Court House. In 1820 it occupied "Mason's Hall," South Paris. This was the second story of the School House, and built by the masons jointly with the School District. It stood near the Grange Hall, on the site of the salesroom of F. C. Merrill. This they occupied till 1830, at which time and place they held their last election of officers. Then follows a blank of twenty-three years—from 1830 to 1853. The blight that fell upon this Lodge was shared in by most of the lodges of the country. It was a dark period in Free Masonry.

PARIS LODGE NO. 94. By consent of Oxford Lodge, and on the petition of several masons who resided in Paris, a dispensation was granted in 1858, by Grand Master Hiram Chase, for a Masonic Lodge at South Paris. July 19th of that year, the first meeting under this dispensation was held at Academy Hall, and was opened with the following officers: L. B. Weeks, Master; Abraham T. Moses, Senior Warden; Samuel R. Carter, Junior Warden; Horatio G. Russ, Treasurer; Alden Chase, Secretary; Darius Fobes, Senior Deacon, and William Foster, Tyler. At the next meeting, August 23d, John Bicknell, Jr., was appointed Junior Deacon and Alden Chase, Historian. The first work was done in the Lodge January 17, 1859.

A charter for the Lodge was issued May 5, 1859, to the following persons: Rufus Stowell, Abijah Hall, Stephen Blake, Richard T. Lurvey, Joseph Gallison, Henry R. Parsons, Horatio G. Russ, Abraham T. Moses, Lewis B. Weeks, Rufus K. Goodenow, Alden Chase, Samuel R. Carter, Darius Fobes and Wm. K. Kimball. May 31, 1859, the first stated communication was held, when the following officers were installed by Augustus Callahan of Lewiston : Lewis B. Weeks, Master ; John Bicknell, Jr., Senior Warden ; Wm. A. Rust, Junior Warden ; Horatio G. Russ, Treasurer ; Alden Chase, Secretary ; R. H. Stinchfield, Chaplain ; John C. McArdle, Senior Deacon ; Wm. R. Howe, Junior Deacon ; Wm. CHAPTER XL.

MILITARY HISTORY.

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

Several of the soldiers that took part in the struggle for independence became early settlers in this town, and are the ancestors of a large number of our residents, and a brief statement of some of the causes that led to the conflict in which they were engaged, is as follows:

The first great controversy between Great Britain and the American Colonies arose in regard to the right of Parliament to tax the Colonies, while they were not allowed the privilege of representation in that body. "The Acts of Trade" were the first of a series of oppressive measures. Then followed the act requiring a duty to be paid into the English Treasury on all sugar, molasses, coffee and wines that came into the Colonies. This act was passed April 5, 1764, and was called the "Sugar Act." At the time of its passage it was resolved to quarter ten thousand soldiers somewhere in America. Both of these acts were strongly opposed by the Colonies, and laid the foundation for a still greater breach between this and the mother country. Trade in the Colonies soon became principally confined to home production, for the people determined not to import anything that it was possible to do without. Parliament, finding the revenues diminished, sought another way to raise funds. The famous Stamp Act, similar to the measure adopted by our Government during the Rebellion, was passed, requiring all bonds, notes and deeds to be written on stamped paper, and to bear the Royal seal, or be of no value. Then the people began to wear cloth of their own manufacture, and denied themselves all foreign luxuries. Economy became the order of the day, the effect of which was soon felt in England, and the resolves in regard to taxation were repealed, reserving a tax on tea of three pence per pound. The landing of tea in Boston was resisted, and a ship-load was thrown into the sea. This was followed by a retaliatory measure called the Boston Port Bill, forbidding the landing or loading of goods in the harbor. This act was passed March 25, 1774, and to enforce it fortifications were thrown up in Boston by Gen. Gage, who had been appointed Provincial Governor.

The Provincial Congress met at Concord in October following, when measures were taken for arming the whole Province. Twelve thousand men were ordered to be raised and to hold themselves in readiness at a moment's warning, and were called "Minute men." These preliminary steps of the Provincial Congress were followed by the organization of companies throughout the country, and accounts for the rapid movements of the soldiers on the "Lexington alarm." This brings us down to the patriot band who participated in the war for independence, and, after its accomplishment, exchanged the musket for the axe, and hewed themselves homes in this and other Maine towns.

CAPT. ISAAC BOLSTER of Sutton, was a Lieutenant at Concord, and a Captain in 1775 in Col. Larnard's regiment, and served in and around Boston. Capt. Bolster was also in the military service at various times between 1755 and 1760.

JESSE BRIGGS of Wareham, Mass., enlisted first December 7, 1776—three days service and sixty miles travel; enlisted again

September 5, 1777—service to October 9, 1777, secret expedition; enlisted September 5, 1778—seven days' service in defence of Elizabeth Island; enlisted again July 10, 1780, to December 31, 1780—200 miles travel—pay, twelve pounds.

EDMOND DEAN of Taunton, Mass, drafted April, 1777, in Capt. Joshua Wilber's company; enlisted July 10, 1780—six months—discharged 200 miles from home; enlisted in Capt. Daniel Drake's company, Col. Downy's regiment, which marched to North river; time of marching from home, August 23, 1781; arrived at camp September 21, and arrived home December 31, 1781; allowance, one penny per mile.

ABRAHAM WARREN. Pay-roll of Capt. Benjamin Richardson's company and Col. Nicholas Dyke's regiment. At Dorchester Heights, 1776, 72 miles travel. Pay-roll of Capt. Samuel Meigs' company, 1778, in Roxbury lines. Pay-roll of Capt. Samuel Heald's company, 1779. Time of service, two months, six days; due in paper money, 11£, 10s, 10d; due in specie, 12s, 9d, 3f.

ELEAZER COLE of Bridgewater. Drummer in Capt. Josiah Hayden's company, that marched on the 19th of April, 1775, on the occasion of the Lexington alarm. By an arrangement previously made, the Committee of Safety despatched messengers on horse in every direction. The news of the Lexington fight arrived in Bridgewater early in the day, and before sunset the company was formed and ready to march. He was again enrolled in Capt. Josiah Hayden's company, August 1, 1775, as Sergeant.

EPHRAIM FIELD of Bridgewater, was in Capt. David Packard's company, which marched to Rhode Island on the alarm July 22, 1780. He was also among those called to suppress the Shay rebellion, as per muster and pay-roll of "ye 7th company of militia in ye County of Plymouth."

AMZI BRETT of Bridgewater, served in Capt. Nathan Packard's company, in Col. Thomas Carter's regiment, 1778, to Rhode Island.

ASA BARROWS of Middleboro' was a Minute man. He was drafted April 1, 1778, and served eight months in Plympton's quota.

Among the other early Paris men who took a part in this war, were : William Swan of Woburn, who was at Bunker Hill ; Samuel Perkins of Middleboro' ; Peter Durell of Newton ; Thomas Stevens of Worcester, whose musket, with carvings made by himself while in camp, is still in the family ; Isaac Jackson of Newton, and Joseph Besse of Wareham.

THE WAR OF 1812.

The war of 1812 is as memorable as the opening of a second struggle with England. The impressment of seamen and the depredations upon our commerce, together with the frequent insults to the American flag, were among the causes that led to this war. On the fourth of April an embargo was placed upon all vessels within the jurisdiction of the United States for ninety days, and on the 18th of June, war was formally declared by the President. There was strong opposition to the war by the Federalists, but the patriotism of the country was aroused and the administration strongly sustained. The stirring resolutions on page 124 of this volume, indicate the sentiments of our people upon the subject. The following were in the regular service from this town :

Rufus K. Goodenow, Captain in 33d regiment United States Infantry.

James Bowker, Sergeant in Capt. Robert Douglass' company, 34th regiment.

Anson Bowker, Reuben Hill and Ebenezer Irish, in Capt. Robert Small's company of the 45th regiment of infantry.

In Capt. Stephen Blake's company of Col. Wm. Ryerson's regiment, in service at Portland from August 14th to September 24th, 1814, were the following :

Stephen Blake, Captain ; Thomas Hill, Lieutenant ; Thomas Crocker, Ensign.

Caleb B. Barrows and Williams and Solomon Cummings also served in this war and participated in the above engagements.

THE AROOSTOOK WAR.

Early in 1839, a deputy of the Land Agent of Maine reported that a large number of lumbermen from New Brunswick were robbing the disputed territory about the Aroostook river of its best timber, whereupon Sheriff Strickland of Penobscot county was ordered to dislodge the trespassers. He went to Aroostook with a posse of about 200 men, the trespassers retiring before him into New Brunswick. At Woodstock they broke into the Government Arsenal and armed themselves, then turned to meet the Sheriff. They captured the Maine Land Agent, and Strickland, seeing that a meeting of these forces would be likely to lead to bloodshed, if not to a general war, set out for Augusta and laid the matter before the Governor. The Legislature immediately appropriated $800,000 to defend the public lands, and the Governor called out 10,000 militia.

The draft was made February 26th in this town. the enrolled soldiers of the several companies meeting on the Common at Paris Hill. A second draft was ordered, as appears from the following record of Company B:

STATE OF MAINE.

PARIS, March 3, 1839. Regimental Orders. First Regiment, First Brigade, Sixth Division.

"In compliance with Brigade Order of March 1st and 2d, and General Orders Nos. 12 and 15, Capt. Sampson Dunham will make a draft of six privates from those drafted on the 26th day of February last, and notify and warn them to appear at Nathan M. Marble's Tavern in Paris on Monday, the fourth day of March inst., at one o'clock in the afternoon, with arms and equipments, including knapsacks and blankets, required by law for actual service, together with three days' provisions,—that the Selectmen may furnish suitable carriages to carry their baggage to the Court House in Augusta, at which place you will warn those drafted to appear on Wednesday, the sixth day of March, inst., at nine o'clock in the forenoon, and report themselves to yourself, who is to be their commander.

You will make a return of the names drafted, to Nathan M. Marble, Adjutant, before Sunday night, inst. You can make a draft without calling your company together, if you choose."

*ORISON RIPLEY, Col. 1st Regt., 1st B., 6th D.

NATHAN M. MARBLE, Adjutant.

"Captain Sampson Dunham is hereby notified that he is detached and that he must appear at the Court House in Augusta, on Wednesday, the sixth day of March, inst., at nine o'clock in the morning, armed and equipped according to law, and report himself to the Adjutant General at Headquarters."

"You will return the roll that I sent you to make a draft from."

Names of drafted men of February 26th: Ichabod C. Faunce, Sibley Chase, Jabez Buck, Benjamin Bird, John W. Deming, Harvey Berry, Ezekiel L. Porter, Albert W. Dolloff, Peter Knight and Nathan Fogg; from whom were drafted March 3d, Sibley Chase, Jabez Buck, Benjamin Bird, John W. Deming, Harver Berry and Ezekiel L. Porter.

SAMUEL F. RAWSON, Clerk.

When the messenger from Maine laid the facts before the National House of Representatives, that body appropriated ten millions of dollars to meet the probable expenses, and authorized the President, in case Governor Harvey of New Brunswick should persist in his purpose, to raise fifty thousand volunteers for a term of six months. On the sixth of March, General Scott and his Staff arrived in Augusta and opened communication with Governor Harvey. The matter was soon settled on the basis of a withdrawal of the troops of both parties, and the protection of the region by a civil posse of Maine men. The question of boundary was settled in 1842, and the State of Maine in due time received two hundred thousand dollars from the National Government as a reimbursement for the expenses she had incurred in defending the integrity of American territory.

This bloodless affray is within the memory of many, but the larger proportion of our town's people have come upon the stage of action since the flaming Proclamation of Governor Fairfield, "Our State is invaded," was issued. Many will call to mind the hurried meeting of the enrolled soldiers on Paris Common, and the trembling line as it stretched out past the Jail, shivering in the northern blast, or shaking from some other cause, yet the sharp repartee that occasionally shot out from the ranks, served to keep their courage up. The troops were pushed forward at once to the Capital, being hastily gathered from the farm, the work-shop and the school-room.

THE WAR WITH MEXICO.

This war was variously viewed from the different political stand-points. While all rejoiced in the brilliant achievements of the American arms, some could see but little justice in the dismemberment of a sister Republic. Only two from this town entered the army operating against Mexico, viz: Daniel S. Hubbard, who volunteered from a Western State, and John Cooper, who, after following the varied fortunes of General Cushing's regiment of Massachusetts volunteers, came home to die, worn out by the exhaustive marches.

WAR OF THE REBELLION.

The War of the Rebellion, or the war of 1861-5, is still fresh in the minds of many, and the causes which led to it are too well remembered to need a rehearsal here. Suffice it to say, that the grand uprising of the loyal States was to prevent a dismemberment of the Union by misguided rebels in arms, and nobly was the work accomplished. The State of Maine, in respect to the number of soldiers raised and sent to the front, and also in respect to their bravery and loyalty, has a record second to no other, and the record of the town of Paris may well be pointed to with patriotic pride, by all her loyal sons and daughters. The following list embraces them all, and their names here first enrolled together, will be held in grateful remembrance by the future inhabitants of this town, long after their ashes shall have mingled with the dust. "We live in deeds, not years," and those who went into the service at the call of the country and performed faithfully their part in the great struggle, cannot be said to have lived in vain, even if their lives have been barren of results before and since, and those of our soldiers who perished in the flower of their youth, whether in the hospital, prison or on the field of strife, may be said to have lived long, because "that life is long that answers life's great end."

JOHN LELAND TUBBS. Mustered May 3, 1861. Co. F, 1st Reg't; three months. Re-enlisted Aug. 18, 1862, Co. I, 17th Reg't, for the term of three years; was killed in action.

CHAPTER XLI.

SNOW'S FALLS.

This curious waterfall was seen and spoken of by those who came to lay out the township, and was a subject of much speculation among the early settlers. The tragic scene which occurred in the vicinity and which gave name to the Falls, appears to be as well authenticated as any event connected with the early history of this region; and yet, strange as it may appear, scarcely anything is known concerning one of the principal actors in the tragedy. His name was Snow, and he was a hunter and trapper, but of his Christian name, his former place of residence and his family, nothing is known in Paris. His companion was a man named Stinchfield, who came early from Windham to New Gloucester and was one of the soldiers who manned the fort at New Gloucester during the last French and Indian war. There were three Stinchfields in the fort: John, James and William—the two latter probably being sons of the former. It is difficult at this day to determine which of these three was Snow's companion, but it was probably James, who is spoken of in Williamson's History of Maine, as "a mighty hunter, and well acquainted with the woods and with the Indian manner of warfare. He helped build the first fort (in New Gloucester), and was a principal man in the town for some years." Another of the fort defenders was Benjamin Hammond, father of our early settlers of this name. Mr. Hammond and James Stinchfield were of the party sent to Canada after the breaking out of the war for independence, to ascertain the bias of the people and the attitude of the Indians. They were made prisoners, but succeeded in making their escape through the aid of a Mrs. Forbes, with whom they had stopped, and who was friendly to the American cause. The tragedy enacted at Snow's Falls was not recorded in contemporaneous history, nor has any account of it appeared in any history of the Indian wars. The early settlers of Paris, some of whom had lived in New Gloucester and probably knew the Stinchfield family, were familiar with the story and transmitted it to posterity through their children. In 1824, the late Honorable Elijah L. Hamlin communicated to the first issue of the Oxford Observer, a description of the Falls and an account of the tragedy by which Snow met his death. Some of the very first settlers, including John Daniels and Patience

Willis, were then living, and it is but fair to presume that Mr. Hamlin conferred with them in the preparation of this sketch, and it is probably as authentic an account of the affair as we shall ever have. It has since been told differently by others, but in all the essential facts there is no great disagreement, except in the instance mentioned hereafter. Mr. Hamlin's sketch is here given in full :

"Snow's Falls, on the Little Androscoggin River, about four miles north from the Court House in Paris, possess some considerable notoriety, and are well worth a visit from the curious. The country circumjacent to the Falls, is rocky, uneven, and almost mountainous. Two hills, one upon either side of the stream, seem heretofore to have met and to have inteposed a barrier to a passage of the river through which it finally burst its way, strewing the valley beneath with ruins and fashioning out a multitude of circular cavities in the ledge of granite which was now laid bare at the base of these Falls, and over which the water rushed with deafening uproar. There was probably a fissure in this ledge, traversing it in a direction with the river, which, in process of time, has been so deepened and widened that now the whole body of the stream is precipitated through a channel so narrow that one may easily step across it.

Standing upon this smooth and solid bed of granite, you hear the water rushing and roaring beneath you, and sending up spray in its angular passage, to be colored by the golden beams of the sun, and to be drank in by the thirsty verdure on the banks. Looking through this zig-zag channel from either extremity, it presents a profile drawn analogous to artificial fortifications, and the eye hastily searches for the bristling bayonet and the cannon, as it sees the numerous bastions and curtains extending themselves at great length with almost the regular disposition of engineer construction. Above you the river spreads itself out in ample dimensions, and approaches peaceably and silently, until it is forced to find vent in this narrow channel, where it lashes itself into fury and pours itself along in a roar that is heard for miles around. Standing in perfect security on the very edge of this chasm, you may look down into it,

'Through which foam globes in eddies ride,
Thick as the schemes of human pride,
That down life's current drive amain,
As frail, as frothy and as vain.'

Below you the country spreads itself out in a rich landscape; you see the silver stream threading itself along through occasional woodland and opening on both sides of its rich bank, exhibiting the monuments of industry and art. At a distance the village spire rises itself up proudly above the buildings that surround it, and divers roads are seen traversing the adjacent country, converging to the village like radii from circumference to center.

These falls take their name from the circumstance of a hunter named Captain Snow being killed there by the Indians as far back as the year 1762. This country was then a wilderness—New Gloucester, the nearest settlement, was just commencing, and Captain Snow and a Mr. Stinchfield were engaged in hunting and trapping on this stream. Their camp was pitched on the east side of the river, near by the Falls, and tradition points to the very spot. Indian depredations at that time were very frequent. A party of warriors had descended from Canada, and scattering themselves upon our frontier settlements, were carrying with them devastation and terror.* One party, having laden themselves with booty, in returning discovered these traps of the hunters, and evidently traced them to their camp. Stinchfield, who happened to be on the outside, discovered them when within a few rods of it; he uttered a scream of terror and conjured Snow, who was within, to surrender, as resistance would be useless. Snow, who was aware of the horrible sufferings to which they doomed their prisoners, replied that he never would surrender himself alive; that it was better to perish

* There is certainly an anachronism in fixing the date of the tragedy at 1762; it is stated that New Gloucester was just commencing, and that the Indians were devastating the frontier settlements. It is a fact that New Gloucester was begun in 1754, and that the settlement has been continuous since, although for a portion of the time the people lived in the fort. It is also a well known fact in history, that after the fall of Quebec, which forever put an end to French domination in this country, and the subsequent treaty made with the Indians at Halifax, February 23, 1760, there were no further depredations by the Indians upon the settlements in New England for many years, and none at all, except the small raid upon Bethel and the New Hampshire border, near the close of the Revolutionary War. There is one version of this story which differs quite materially from the one here related by Mr. Hamlin, and which, if the true one, would obviate the necessity of looking for a different date when the circumstances took place. The writer of this, when a small boy, heard it from his grandfather, who was an early settler in Paris, and it was as follows: That Snow and Stinchfield were hunting and had their camp near the Falls; that, getting short of provisions, Stinchfield went to New Gloucester for a supply, leaving Snow in charge of the camp; that he was delayed in New Gloucester and did not return until Snow was nearly helpless from starvation; that he had crawled from the camp to the spring near by for water, and was returning when Stinchfield came in sight, and seeing some one crawling upon the ground, he thought it was an Indian and tired, mortally wounding Snow, who soon after died. This is given here only to show how different versions of the same story sometimes materially differ. It is likely that the fate of Whitney, near the pond that bears his name in Hartford, had something to do in perpetuating this version of the Snow tragedy.

there than at the stake. The Indians finding themselves discovered, with a yell precipitated themselves upon the camp. Snow appeared at the door with his musket in his hand and made a demonstration of surrender; but he only did this to single out his victim. The Indian who covered the file in its approach was of ferocious appearance and uncommon stature. His head was adorned with the plumage of the eagle taken entire, its wings depending over either shoulder, and talons and beak so arranged that it still seemed to have life and conscious of its kingly power. When within a few steps of Snow, and signifying to him good quarter, Snow suddenly elevated the muzzle of his piece, and saying that he neither asked or gave quarter, discharged it into the bosom of the Indian sachem, who rolled upon the ground in the mortal agonies of death. Before Snow could recover the camp or make another movement of offence, he himself was slain and cut in pieces by the whole party, who had flung themselves at once in fury upon him. They then betook themselves to lamentations and howlings for the loss of their chief, and having performed all the funeral rites due to his rank, and significant of their consideration of his loss, they sank him in a neighboring bog and continued their march northward, taking Stinchfield along with them, calculating to offer him up as a sacrifice for the death of their chief.

On the borders of Lake Umbagog, they were joined by the Indians who had been spoiling in other directions, and here they feasted several days, holding their orgies both for the success of their campaign and the loss of their sachem. They afterwards went to Canada, and Stinchfield, watching every opportunity to escape, at length ventured, and traveling the wilderness alone, finally reached his friends in safety and informed them of the tragical death of his comrade. The remains of Snow were subsequently interred by a party that went from New Gloucester, and a mound of stones loosely thrown together still marks the spot where sleeps the valiant hunter whose name is perpetuated by identifying it with the name of the Falls.

A curious circular hole has recently been discovered on the west side of the river, about half a mile from the Falls, on the summit of a hill, in a ledge of solid granite. It is between two and three feet in depth and about eighteen inches in diameter, resembling those that are found on the Falls, only vastly more perfect in its construction. There is much speculation as to the cause and manner of its formation. It seems hardly possible that it could have been formed by a current of water passing over the rocks, as the hill is so high, this being the only cavity and there not existing the least appearance of the smallest rill ever having run in that direction. That it was hollowed out by the Indians, is still more improbable. It is in a place where they would be the least likely to congregate for any purpose, and, if made by them, must have been done at an immense expense of time and labor, and for ought we see, to no possible advantage, and, in fact, the smooth and rounded appearance of the hole on its outer surface seems rather to indicate water as the agent in its formation. We have examined it a number of times, and can only add with the poet :

‘The thing is neither strange nor rare,
But how the devil came it there?’ ”

The writer was then a young man and doubtless drew somewhat on his imagination, though the main facts may doubtless be relied upon as correct. From the well known character of Stinchfield as a brave hunter and Indian fighter, it is doubtful if he “screamed in terror” when he saw the approach of the Indians, though he might have counselled surrender, knowing that resistance was useless, and preferring to take the chances of subsequent escape, to certain death upon the spot. In so doing there was no impeachment of his courage, and subsequent events showed that he acted the part of wisdom.

The body of water which passed through the rocky gorge was probably much greater sixty years ago than now, as many important tributaries of the river and of the ponds which form its headwaters have become dry, or nearly so, since the land was cleared along their banks. Geologists tell us that ages ago, during the glacial period, an immense arctic river flowed through the valley of the Little Androscoggin, and this may account not only for the “pot holes” which Mr. Hamlin describes as being near the Falls, but also for the one above the Falls and considerably above the bed of the river. The “two hills” spoken of by Mr. Hamlin, “one upon either side of the stream,” were once joined together, as he suggests, when the lowlands above, including the Bemis meadow, the high interval east, west and north of it, the William Berry farm, and all the territory west and south of it to Robinson’s hill and Greenwood line, must have been inundated. The Falls then must have been something grand, but in time the barrier was broken through, and since then the river has been constantly lowering its bed and cutting for itself a channel through the solid rock. There is abundant evidence to show that the surface soils of hundreds of acres of the lowlands above the Falls were formed under water, and that for a very long period the subsidence has been gradual.

CHAPTER XLII.

EARLY INDUSTRIES OF PARIS.

MILLS.

The portable mill of Dea. John Willis, or it may have been Willis & Jackson, stood in the field now owned by Asa Woodbury, about twenty rods from the road. The stones were removed to the Hamlin residence, and on the sale of that in 1860, they passed into the possession of S. R. Carter, where they may now be seen as a relic of "ye-ancient time." No living witness remains to describe the mill, but we conjecture it was run in the style of the old time bark-mill. It may have been more properly called a hominy-mill, as hominy, samp and bean porridge, were ever recurring articles of diet in the culinary department of that day. This, however, seemed to be only an ad interim arrangement to the completion of Jackson's mill, on Stony Brook, in 1784. Like the mills of the gods, it ground slowly, but answered its turn.

The first saw-mill in this town was built on Stony Brook by Lemuel Jackson, in the summer of 1783. The dam was just up stream from the bridge that crosses Royal's mill pond near the point of ledge that extends nearly across the stream. The location of the county road in 1793, and the deed of Elias Stowell in 1805, to Rouse Bisbee, determine the exact location. This mill furnished boards to the earliest settlers of Norway and was a great convenience to the pioneers of this town. Solomon Bryant was probably the first mill-man. The reader can picture it, as it stood in the forest shade until it cut its way to the sunlight—that the saw went up and the saw went down, awakening only the echoes of the wildwood. The generation has passed away that saw the last of the crumbling timbers of this rude structure.

The grist-mill—the first in this section of the country—was built the following year (1784) on the site of the mill owned and occupied by Wm. B. Royal. The dam was midway between the present dam and the bridge, some portion of which may still be seen at low water, on the southern bank of the pond. The wheel was overshot, the water being conveyed in a spout from the dam. It was put in motion contemporaneous with the wheels of government a century ago, and the first grist was ground by Miller Ames. This was owned by Lemuel Jackson until Sept. 7, 1802, when it passed into the possession of Elias Stowell—being included in the mill lot. January 2, 1813, Elias Stowell sold to John Bennett, who sold, in November following, to John Valentine and Austin Buck. They conveyed the premises to Jonathan Cummings, carpenter, who sold, May 26, 1817, to Seth Morse, bounded by the roads and the brook, containing about two acres, together with the grist-mill thereon with two run of stones: consideration, $375. Morse sold, April 16, 1820, to George King and Simeon Perkins for one thousand dollars. King sold his undivided half to Samuel Perkins. While in the possession of Simeon Perkins, the house now the residence of Wm. B. Royal was built. Benjamin Royal became the owner, and after his decease it passed into the possession of Wm. B. Royal, the present owner, who has done away with the grist-mill and substituted the manufacture of wheel-barrows, and has also added a saw-mill.

The saw-mill of Reuben Hubbard and John Daniels, was built on Stony Brook, near the residence of Henry Fobes. It was probably built soon after Jackson's mill, but had been destroyed by fire previous to 1796. In the deed of Reuben Hubbard to Ephraim Field, March 9, 1796, reserve is made to John Daniels of the privilege of one half of the stream and two acres of land where the saw-mill lately stood. Tradition gives the only explanation of its destruction. Slabs had accumulated at the mill and the proprietors were removing them, when they became tired and sat down to rest and refresh themselves. The project of burning the slabs was hit upon as a labor saving process, which they at once proceeded to put in execution. The slabs disappeared very much to their gratification, and, doubtless much to their surprise, the mill also.

A small grist-mill was built near where the Daniels road intersects with the Stony Brook road. We find mention of it in the diary of Dea. Prentiss. The raising is also remembered by Alonzo King and Luther Brett, our oldest citizens. It was "tended" at one time by Simeon Briggs. The miller's house stood in the pasture owned by O. W. Bent, just north of the road.

The saw-mill opposite Samuel M. King's mill, was built by Capt. Jairus H. King. It was operated at one time in the manufacture of dead eyes. It has been succeeded by the mill built by Samuel M. King, on the south side of the stream. It combines a saw and shingle mill, and is owned and operated by the proprietor.

A shingle-mill, built by Mr. Chase, was located still higher up the stream, near the bridge crossing the brook on the road leading to Solon Royal's. This was soon abandoned and the building taken down.

Lemuel Jackson built the dam on the Little Androscoggin river, and erected the saw and grist mills, the former on the west side of the stream and the latter on the east side, above the bridge. In Jackson's sale of land to Elias Stowell in 1802, these mills were included. The place seems to have taken the name of Stowell's Mills, after this. December 26, 1805, Wm. Stowell became the purchaser of all the estate between the road and Stony Brook, and from the center of the river on the west to the county road on the east. In this sale was the grist-mill, "including two runs of stones and all the utensils belonging to the mill." His son William, while "tending" the mill, fell through the floor and went through the wheel; the ladle boards, being rotten, gave way, and he was landed on a rock at the tail of the mill, where he was able to call for assistance. This was June 6, 1806, at seven o'clock and forty minutes A. M., his watch having stopped at this hour. This grist-mill was taken down this season and a frame put up for a saw and grist mill, under one roof. The grist-mill was completed, and the saw-mill in the spring following. Hattel Bailey was the master workman, assisted by Wm. Twombly of Norway. The grist-mill was in the end next the road, and the saw-mill in the rear.

Solomon Cloudman and Ebenezer Morton have been millers here. It was long the custom to grind salt two days in the year and malt two days. This mill passed into the possession of his son, Thomas N. Stowell, and when the Factory Company was formed he conveyed it to them, and took shares, as referred to elsewhere. When the flouring-mill of Woodman, True & Company was established, it was taken down.

PARIS FLOURING-MILL.

Elias Stowell, soon after his purchase in 1802 of Jackson, sold all of the real estate east of the river and south of the road to Seth Morse, Joseph Haven Hall and George King. There were eighty acres of land, the Rouse Bisbee store or shop (Stowell having purchased the one-fourth acre and building of Bisbee) being included in the sale; also a privilege to take water from the east end of the dam, sufficient for a trip hammer. It seems that Howland & Page had erected a carding-mill next to the bridge previous to Oct. 13, 1813, at which time Henry R. Parsons of Waterford bought of Seth Morse, his privilege lower down the stream. On this purchase, Mr. Parsons built a fulling-mill, in which he did a very prosperous business. He subsequently bought the carding-mill. The fulling-mill was burned Nov. 19, 1834. He rebuilt at once and continued the business until the formation of the Factory Company, in 1836, when he sold out his mills to the Factory Company. They also bought of Thomas N. Stowell, his mill and privilege on the north side of the road, he taking stock in the new company. These mills were all taken down and the woolen-mill built the same season. The company was composed of Abijah Hall, who took 20 shares, or $2000, the shares being $100; Col. Parsons, $2000; Ansel Field, $1000; Thomas N. Stowell, $1000; and Cyprian Stevens, Charles Porter, James Deering, Col. Wm. Parsons, Samuel Deering, Elisha Morse and John Morse, $500 each; Thomas Clark took $700, and Orren Jones $300, making the capital stock $10,500. This money was invested in the land, buildings and machinery. Ten thousand dollars were hired to purchase wool, and the machines put in operation. But before they were able to put their goods upon the market the protective tariff had been taken off, and their cloth would not sell for the cost of the wool. The result of their first year's operation was a dead loss of ten thousand dollars. One half of the property was sold to Samuel Thomas of Saccarappa, at a discount of fifty per cent. He was soon after burned out at Saccarappa, and this was another draw-back. The business was continued and Thomas failed, and his shares went into Hewett Chandler's hands. They finally sold the other half to Moses Hammond. The old company lost the original shares and one dollar and fifty cents besides, on every dollar put in. The business was continued by Moses Hammond until 1858, when it was purchased by Woodman, True &

SOUTH PARIS.

Phelps, the machinery taken out, the mill enlarged and a first-class flouring-mill established. The flouring-mill is now owned and occupied by David N. True, a son of one of the former proprietors.

OTHER MILLS.

Isaac Durell bought the lot on which he erected the paper-mill and on the same lot the house now occupied by Rodney N. Hall. This was run to manufacture brown wrapping paper. He sold one-half to Samuel J. Durell, who sold one-half his interest to John Flavel Durell. It was subsequently burned. The site of this mill was purchased, in 1880, by S. P. Maxim, who erected a mill for the manufacture of mouldings, house finish and job work, which is still in operation by S. P. Maxim & Son.

The saw-mill at South Paris, on the west side of the river, was doubtless built by Jackson previous to his sale to Elias Stowell. It has had many owners and many repairs. It is now run successfully by L. S. Billings, proprietor, in the manufacture of lumber, crates, &c.

BISCO'S FALLS.

In 1822, a dam was built and a grist-mill erected by Sylvanus Jackson and Simeon Cummings at Bisco's Falls. Luke Hastings, a clothier, and Alden Fuller, built a fulling-mill the same season at the same place. A carding-mill was erected in 1824, by Simeon Cummings and Enoch Lincoln. The following year Simeon Cummings, Sen., and Alfred Andrews built a saw-mill. This mill was carried away by an ice freshet in 1829, together with the dam. In 1840, Jairus H. Jackson purchased the property and erected a mill, which was in his possession until 1872, when he sold out to D. N. True, Geo. A. Wilson and Charles M. Morgan. They erected a mill for the manufacture of wood pulp or card board. It was in successful operation until burned in 1883.

THE BEMIS MILLS.

The Bemis grist-mill, on the privilege below Snow's Falls, was built soon after the incorporation of the town, by Seth and Luke Bemis of Watertown. They also established a store at the place and employed as clerk Alanson Mellen, who also "tended" the mill. Eleazer Dunham became the miller after the removal of Major Mellen to Paris Hill. The mill and the bridge were carried away by a freshet about 1822. The floating wreck is well remembered by daughters of Eleazer Dunham—Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Jairus Cummings. Mr. Dunham narrowly escaped, having left the mill but a moment before it was carried away. The house, barn and store were purchased by David Bemis and moved to the David Bemis farm, since owned by David R. Ripley and now by Mr. Jackson. The elm now growing on the river bank stood between the house and store, and is all there is left to mark the spot. Associated with this locality, is the drowning of Allen and Strout, referred to in another place. Also it calls to mind the perilous ride of Doctor Goss. The planking of the bridge had been removed for repairs, and the Doctor, returning late at night, did not take in the situation, and his faithful, sure-footed Maggie walked the stringer of the bridge, and the safe arrival of the doctor at Mr. Dunham's, created much surprise and caused the inquiry of how he came. His positive assertion that he rode across the bridge, induced Mr. Dunham to make an examination the next morning, and the tracks leading on and off the stringer substantiated the old doctor's statement.

The Bemis saw-mill was built by James and Francis Bemis, midway between Snow's Falls and West Paris. This was purchased by Simon Ficket, who was drowned here soon after. It was operated for a while by his son, who erected the commodious buildings in which the family resided until their removal to West Paris village. It has since been owned and occupied by Mr. Childs in the manufacture of spools and bobbins.

SNOW'S FALLS MILLS.

The romantic locality at Snow's Falls, the admiration of the tourist, was finally seized upon by the restless spirit of enterprise, and while being shorn of its time honored attractions, its rushing waters were made to turn the busy wheels of industry. The extensive chair manufactory of Messrs. Stearns was erected previous to the building of the railroad. It was burned November 25, 1855. A new building was at once erected on the same site and the manufacture of chairs continued under different firms until about 1875, when it was purchased by William Chase and converted into a manufactory of brown paper. After the decease of Mr. Chase, it passed into the hands of John Kerslake. This was also consumed by fire June 5, 1877. A mill for the manufacture of wood pulp by the Exeter Wood Pulp Company, has since been erected.

WEST PARIS MILLS.

The grist-mill at West Paris village was built by Samuel B. Locke soon after the building of the railroad, and was operated by him until his decease in 1870. It has since been operated by his son, Samuel B., and A. P. Andrews, and now by Samuel W. Dunham.

The Willis saw-mill, on the most northern privilege on the Androscoggin in the town of Paris, was built by John Willis, and has been operated by his son, F. L. Willis, in the manufacture of boards, shingles and small lumber, up to the present time.

NORTH PARIS MILLS.

About the beginning of the present century, Ebenezer Hutchinson came here from Fayette, and built the first mills at North Paris. These were situated on the outlet of the Moose pond—the grist-mill on the west side, on the site of the present mill, and the saw-mill on the east side, on the site of the present manufactory of chairs. Stephen Chase, in his diary, speaks of his purchase of boards of Hutchinson, January 8, 1802. These mills were operated by Hutchinson and his sons until about 1812, when he, with his sons' families—the Waltons, Colburns and the Jordans, who had all intermarried with the Hutchinsons—emigrated to Ohio, where he died in 1828. Stephen Washburn of Hebron, became the purchaser, and this locality then took the name of Washburn's Mills. The village was of slow growth, for in April, 1819, when Asa Dunham, Jr., moved in, the Drake store was just being finished. Stephen Washburn occupied the house on the knoll west of the bridge; Stephen, Jr., on the site of the Bartlett stand; Joseph Chandler occupied a house on the site of the residence of Solomon Chase, and Galen Field was just commencing on the lot, afterwards his homestead farm, now owned by Samuel W. Dunham. The lower privilege was purchased by Horatio G. Russ—the east side of the stream of Samuel H. Houghton, in April, 1834, and the west side of Samuel Hammond in 1835. A mill was erected and machinery put in for cleansing clover seed, in the summer of 1834. It was operated by Mr. Russ, and afterward by Eben Drake. It is now owned and operated by N. J. Cushman, in the manufacture of boards and shingles. The west side of the stream was conveyed to James Russ, in 1837, and a saw-mill was here built. It has since been owned by Moses Hammond, Phineus B. Warner and others.

MILLS ON SMITH AND STONE'S BROOKS.

The Smith grist mill, on the Smith brook, was built by Nicholas Smith and Captain Samuel Stephens. Smith then lived in the house now owned and occupied by James Edwin Cole, and Stephens on the center lot. Smith worked the mill and Stephens shared in the toll. It is in the recollection of the writer that it ground very slowly. It was of convenience to the neighbors, who could leave their grists and economise the time by getting their horses shod at at Blacksmith Davis', near Gen. Hubbard's. Smith afterwards exchanged his homestead with Gen. Hubbard, for the one the General first settled on, in the Andrews neighborhood. Samuel Rawson built a carding-mill just below the grist-mill. It was run but a short time. The cards were taken out and sold and the building removed to his homestead, where it is now standing.

Hammond's saw-mill, on the Smith brook, was built by Mr. Rawson and Moses Hammond became the purchaser: he operated it for several years. It is now owned by J. K. Hammond and Geo. W. Cole, who have provided first-class machinery.

A saw-mill on Stone's brook was built a few years since by Geo. R. Hammond, near the homestead of Peleg Hammond. It was a credit to his ingenuity and industry, but it failed to remunerate him for the outlay. It was only operated during the spring of each year. It was carried off by a freshet.

The Simon H. Cummings mill was built on the Smith brook, east of Paris Hill, and at the nearest point to which water would run. It was built about 1840, and was used by Col. Cummings in sawing material for carriage work, turning, &c. It was long since removed.

STEAM MILLS.

In 1870, the citizens of Paris Hill raised nearly three thousand dollars to purchase an engine to be placed in a steam-mill built by John Willis. They also erected a building for a sled factory, in 1871, which was occupied by Henry F. Morton and George B. Crockett. O. A. Maxim subsequently became a member of the firm. The power for driving the machinery was furnished by the steam mill. A stock company was afterwards formed under the firm name of Paris Hill Manufacturing Company. This was a varied industry, and included the manufacture of sleds, carts, wagons, and children's carriages; drag-rakes, step-ladders, and tables —the sales some years amounting to sixty thousand dollars. In 1883, buildings on the line of the railroad, South Paris, were erected, and the business the following winter was transferred to the new location.

The furniture shop on Paris Hill was built by Silas P. Maxim and Theron F. Hathaway, in 1871, and the manufacture of furniture was commenced under the firm name of Hathaway, Davis & Company. This was sold to the Paris Hill Manufacturing Company, and the furniture shop at South Paris was built by S. P. Maxim in the winter of 1874, to which the business was removed. It was owned and occupied by F. A. Thayer until recently, when it was consumed by fire. The steam-mill at West Paris was built in 1871, by a stock company of citizens, and has since been occupied by Messrs. Hannibal G. Brown and James H. Barrows in the manufacture of chairs. It is still in successful operation.

NAIL-MAKING.

Nail-making may well be classed among the early industries, for the blacksmith was as surely called in requisition in the construction of the buildings of the early settlers, as the joiner with his axe and plane. The cost of nails was then an item of more consideration in the cash account of the dwellings than now, when quick-running machinery turns them out by the thousand almost in the time the diligent blacksmith was hammering out one. Improvements, or helps, in making the wrought nail, were early adopted by John Valentine of South Paris, who had a shop on Stony brook. He used a treadle and clamp for holding the nail while he headed it with a hammer. The motion thus acquired by using his foot on the treadle while striking with the hammer, became noticeable in his walk, and adhered to him through life. He moved to Mechanic Falls and died there May 28, 1862.

TANNERIES.

This industry that has had its day in the enterprises of the town, was first established by Elder James Hooper, who was a tanner by trade. During the first years of his residence in town, he boarded with Benjamin Hammond, and while there put in some pits near the foot of the hill on the west line of the lot. It was a small affair, doubtless, yet it may have been sufficient to accommodate the wants of the settlers at that date. Tradition reports that the water-pit was used for immersion purposes, but there are none now living to dispute or vouch for it. After Mr. Hooper's settlement on his lot, he built a house for Moses Hodgdon, a tanner and cordwainer from Berwick. The tan-yard was near these buildings, and portions of the old bark-mill were stored, till quite recently, in the barn. Mr. Hodgdon was employed for some years in the varied capacity of tanner, shoe-maker and farmer. On the decease of Mr. Hooper, his wardrobe and old chaise, by his request, were given to Tanner Hodgdon, who had moved to some eastern town. The tannery at South Paris was established by Dea. Ezra Cary, and carried on by him several years. Charles McFadden has been known in our day as the tanner, the business having ceased at the time of his death. The Whittimore tannery was built by Isaiah Whittimore, near his residence on his homestead farm. He gained the sobriquet of the "Old Tanner."

A small tannery was established at Paris Hill, and Cyrus Hutchins from Kennebunkport, came here March 1, 1833. He continued the business for over twenty years. He lived in what was the old Bemis store adjoining the tan-yard, but moved to Canton and died there in 1883.

The tannery buildings were afterwards all burned. The tannery at North Paris was established by a man named Osgood, who continued the business for some years. The yard was on the east side of the outlet of Moose pond, and nearly opposite the residence of Solomon Chase. It long since disappeared.

LIME.

Lime is found in portions of the town, but only one kiln was ever burned, of which we have any knowledge. This was near the Stony Brook road, and near the junction with the Daniels road.

MALT.

The old malt-house in the Hall neighborhood, referred to in the early records of the town, stood near the residence of John S. Barrows, at the junction of the road leading to the pond. It was built by Abijah Hall, who manufactured malt for himself and neighbors, enabling them to provide themselves with malt liquors, ale and porter. Two days in each year were set apart by the miller in which to grind malt.

HAT-MAKING.

The first hatter's shop in Paris was built by Nathan Woodbury, "Hatter." It was on the site of the present store of Stephen D. Hutchinson. Major Dennett's mother and step-father moved into this shop in 1804, and lived here. The second shop was built by Moses Perry in 1815, between the Simeon Cummings stand and the house of Miss Calista Cummings. This building has been removed.

POTATO WHISKEY.

The distilleries were among the early institutions of the town—almost every school district being provided with one. There was one at Stephen Robinson's, one at Gustavus A. Goss', one at Seth Carpenter's, and others at Samuel Chesley's, John Robinson's, and Jairus Shaw's, besides two others, making eight in all, as stated by John Dennett, William Stowell and Edmund Dean. It made a large demand for potatoes, the farmers often exchanging a bushel of potatoes for a quart of whiskey. Stephen Robinson at one time had between twenty and twenty-five acres in potatoes, raising nearly five thousand bushels.

POTASH.

Potash was quite extensively manufactured in previous years. Daniel Stowell was engaged in its manufacture at an early date. The Potash stood near the barn of William Rice. There was one also near the north-west corner of the old cemetery on Paris Hill. Its location is pointed out by Samuel R. Carter as being a few rods below the cemetery and on the southern slope of the bank across the run. Simeon Cummings also entered into the manufacture. The site is now occupied by the stand of Stephen D. Hutchinson. In later years, Francis Bemis operated a potash on the site of the Elmer H. Marble stand. There were probably others.

PLOW-MAKING.

Among the early industries of this town, was the manufacture of plows. David Durell seems to have been the pioneer, followed at a later day by Moses Hammond and Richard Morton. Specimens that have been preserved as curiosities or heir-looms, show them to have been of rude manufacture, yet in keeping with farming utensils of that day. The mould-boards were of wood, plated with thin strips of iron. The plow-share and point were of one piece and were held in place by the coulter being hooked in the point and keyed into the beam. The first innovation from the wooden plow in its manufacture in this town, was attempted by Simeon Hersey and Perez Record, who came here from Sumner in 1835, and in company with Richard Morton, built a small foundry near his house in South Paris, the same now occupied by Mrs. Dudley. A cast-iron mould-board was substituted for the clumsy wooden one, Richard Morton doing the wood-work in the manufacture of these plows. The business was soon moved to the Stony Brook. Mr. Hersey having built the dam. Alvah Hersey, a brother of Simeon, came here in 1837, and went into company with him under the firm of S. & A. Hersey. Buildings, consisting of a foundry, blacksmith-shop and wood-shop, were erected on what is now Merrill's upper dam, new patterns made, and the Hersey Plow had its beginning. The buildings were all burned in 1842. The dam on which the present foundry is situated, was at once commenced and buildings erected. Simeon Hersey withdrew from the firm and his place was filled by another brother, Tristram, under the firm name of Hersey & Brother. Then Warren Hersey united with the company, under the firm name of Hersey Brothers, in 1846. Warren Hersey died in 1848, and Alvah retired from the firm. The business was continued by Tristram Hersey, until its purchase by F. C. Merrill, the present proprietor. The Hersey plow became widely known and justly celebrated. The exact surface of a perfect mould-board has long been a mathematical problem. Thomas Jefferson attempted to solve it, in a paper read before the French Institute. F. C. Merrill, by patient study and repeated trials has come as near and perhaps nearer its true solution than has ever been obtained. His patent is based on diagonal lines crossing horizontal straight lines, and as a result, he has placed in the hands of the farmers the O. K. Plow.

CHAPTER XLIII.

MUSICAL CELEBRITIES.

Musical talent of a high order has often manifested itself among the people of our town, and we have had many "sweet singers," but comparatively few have had that severe training and the long, patient practice so essential to the full development of their musical powers. Our several church choirs have always been creditably supplied with native talent, and it has never been difficult to organize a band, while in many of our homes the piano and organ are played with taste and precision. Indeed, quite a number of our citizens have successfully taught the musical art during the long winter evenings when "going to singing school" was among the most enjoyable pastimes of the youth of both sexes, but only a passing notice can be given of those who have only practiced music as a pastime, or taught singing school for the pleasure and the small compensation it afforded; while a few who have made music a profession and have become distinguished in the divine art, are entitled to the same notice that is accorded to those engaged in other departments of professional life. Foremost among those of our town's people who have distinguished themselves in vocal music is Mrs.

FLORA E. BARRY.

She is the daughter of Isaac Harlow, and was born in Paris, September 19, 1836. When eleven years of age, she removed with her parents to Boston. She early developed a love of music, and when very young she had a voice of wonderful compass and sweetness. She secured her musical education by persevering effort, and became the leading artiste of the Mahm English Opera Company. Many were the flattering notices published of her while connected with this company, in the leading journals of this country and in Europe. The Albany Argus pronounced her "one of the best contraltos on the operatic stage." The Brooklyn Times spoke of her "prepossessing and winning manner; of her sweet, sympathetic voice, her easy and graceful gesture, and of her way of imparting sunny brightness to passages that in other hands might lack that important quality." The Boston Transcript said of her, that "she delivered the alto arias (Messiah) with rare power and genuine feeling, showing a conception adequate to the lofty work in hand, greatly and profoundly moving the audience." L' Italia, of Florence, Italy, said "she interpreted her role with great dignity and grandeur," and another journal published in the same city, declared that "she performed her part exquisitely." After leaving this company, she purchased a fine residence in Boston, and since then has received pupils in vocal music, giving particular attention to the preparation of artistes for the concert and operatic stage.

WINFIELD SCOTT RIPLEY.

He was born in Paris, February 3d, 1839, the son of Orison and Hannab (Maxim) Ripley. He was a natural musician and easily learned to play all the various instruments employed in a band. At the breaking out of the war of 1861-5, he enlisted as a musician on board of a receiving-ship at Charlestown, Mass., and at the termination of his enlistment he resolved to adopt music as his life-work. He is an instructor in band music and has probably had more bands under his instruction than any other person in this country. He can play with proficiency on all the instruments used, and is also an extensive composer of band music. At the band tournaments at Maranocook the past two years, he has been one of the judges. He has also composed the music for several of the patriotic songs, among them, "Dip the Flag Reverently;" words by Mrs. Alice E. Maxim of Sumner. Of his memorial march, "We Honor the Brave," over four thousand copies have been sold. Mr. Ripley resides in Wakefield, Mass., but his place of business is in Boston, where he is yet in the full tide of success. He married Mary J., the widow of Nehemiah Davis, and daughter of Joshua Perham of Woodstock. She has a son, Richard Davis, by her former husband, who, under the instruction of his step-father, has become very proficient in band music, and, with the same practice, may yet become his equal.

WILLIAM HENRY DENNETT.

He is the son of the late Major John Dennett of South Paris, where he was born. He has fine natural gifts and has received a thorough musical education, partly in this country and partly in Europe. It was more than thirty years ago, that at a little entertainment at which we were present, he drew such exquisite sounds from his violin, that they linger in memory even to this hour. He resides in Portland, is a fine singer, and has made one of several distinguished quartettes. He is an instructor of music and makes this his profession.

STEPHEN EMERY, JR.

The musical taste and talent of Hon. Stephen Emery, have already been spoken of, and these qualities were transmitted to his son, Stephen Emery, Jr. He resides in Boston, makes music a profession and has composed several fine and popular pieces. He is the son of Stephen and Sarah (Stowell) Emery, and was born in Paris, November 16, 1822.

HENRY NEWELL HALL.

He was the son of Haven and Rachel (Shurtleff) Hall, and was born in Paris, June 5, 1830. He had a fine, well-trained voice, and was passionately fond of music. He was also a good performer on stringed instruments and on the organ. His work and reputation were limited to this and the neighboring towns, but as one of the best of our local musicians, and one who introduced musical instruments in a good many families, he is entitled to this brief notice. He led the choirs in several of our churches, and taught vocal music in various neighborhoods and towns during the winter season, for several years before his death. He died of consumption, January 17, 1870, when but little past middle life. He married Mary P., daughter of America and Caroline (Prentiss) Thayer.

CHAPTER XLIV.

ANECDOTES AND INCIDENTS.

"THE OLD MAN IN THE CORNER."

Henry Prentiss was a well-educated and well-read man for his times, but never showed off his knowledge in a pedantic manner. At one time when he was going to Boston, it happened that two literary gentlemen were his fellow-passengers. They talked of books and authors, and finally fell to quoting poetry. After a while one of them turned to the quiet old gentleman in the corner of the coach and asked his opinion of the verses he had repeated. After expressing it in a manner that surprised his hearers, he asked them if they knew the author. They frankly replied that they did not. Mr. Prentiss then began where they had left off, and repeated the rest of the poem and also the portion preceding their quotation, closing by giving the name of the author and informing them where the poem might be found. The literary gentleman were more circumspect in their conversation during the rest of the journey, and treated the old man in the corner with marked respect.

“SPEAKING IN MEETING.”

Patience, the good wife of Dea. John Willis, whose home was near the meeting-house, usually took a nap at home between the sermons, two services a day being held in those early days. Elder Hooper's sermons were an exception to the rule of long discourses in which ministers generally indulged, and one Sunday, Mrs. Willis, being tired out with household cares and duties, slept too long and stepped into the meeting-house door as the Elder was pronouncing the benediction. Using her favorite expression, she exclaimed aloud, “Of a truth I have got here.”

NEIGHBORHOOD JUSTICE.

Eleazer Cole, from Bridgewater, settled on a lot in the Swift neighborhood. He was rather undersized, but active and of uncommon strength. One day he had trouble with Joseph Swift, one of his neighbors, and, as was too frequently the case in those days, from words they came to a trial of strength. Swift was much the larger of the two, but Cole was quickest and soon got the better of his antagonist. Instead of carrying the matter into court, they agreed to leave it to their neighbors, who doomed Cole to two days' work hoeing corn for Swift. The corn-field was by the side of the public road, and Cole, while performing his enforced labor, hailed everyone that passed and explained that he was paying for giving Swift a whipping. The latter, who was hoeing with Cole, was much annoyed by these frequent explanations, and was no doubt glad when justice was satisfied and Cole had gone home.

THE LOST BOY.

Job Macomber, an early settler, is said to have lived on the farm since occupied by Soranus Shaw. After Macomber died, the family was broken up. The widow, whose maiden name was Catherine Pratt of Middleboro,' married Dea. William Barrows of Hebron. Daniel, one of the sons, learned the blacksmith trade, and had a shop in the Partridge district. Isaac, the youngest son, went to live with his uncle Gorham. On one occasion, this boy was sent to Stephen Robinson's, who lived on the farm since the homestead of Dea. Stephen R. Parsons, to get an iron wedge. The boy not returning when expected, Mr. Gorham became uneasy and went to find out the reason of delay, and was surprised when told by Robinson that the boy had taken the wedge and gone toward home. A general alarm was given, and Robinson started for Hebron, calling on the people by the way to turn out and assist in the search for the missing boy. The search was protracted and careful; woods and fields for miles around were travelled over and over again, and no nook or corner left unexplored. But it was all to no purpose; no vestige of the boy was ever found, and his mysterious disappearance became the subject of conversation at the firesides of the inhabitants for years afterwards. Various theories were suggested, but the mystery was never satisfactorily explained.

“IN A DESTITUTE CONDITION.”

“Aunt Katy Macomber,” as she was familiarly called, the widow of Job Macomber, was engaged to be married to Joseph Cole, but Seba Smith advised her not to marry Cole, but to go to Hebron and keep house for Dea. William Barrows, who had lost his wife and wanted a housekeeper. She heeded Smith's advice and went to Hebron, and in process of time became the wife of Barrows. Under the law of that day, the husband was liable for the debts of the wife contracted previous to marriage, unless she came to him in a destitute condition. In order to evade the conditions of the law and relieve her proposed husband from the responsibility of paying her debts, Aunt Katy, on the day of her marriage, repaired to the barn opposite the Deacon's house, and, disrobing herself, ran back across the road clothed only in her underwear.

A QUEER TEAM.

It is related of Gen. Levi Hubbard, that during his pioneer farming on the Andrews lot, he had ten acres of ground ready to sow to grain when one of his oxen became lame. But, with true Yankee expediency, he made a single yoke with a lever end some ten feet long, which he carried himself, and in this way succeeded in harrowing in his grain.

CALLING TOGETHER THE COURT.

In the early times, before the court-house was built, the terms of the court were held in the Baptist meeting-house. The judge always stopped at Dr. Cyrus Hamlin's, and court was called together by the beating of a drum, the drummer standing at the south-west corner of the meeting-house.

THE SPIRIT MOVED.

Two Quaker women came to Paris on a certain occasion, to hold a meeting on a week day, and a large audience turned out to hear them. But the spirit did not move and there was no talking. After waiting a full hour, the patience of the audience being well nigh exhausted, Lemuel Jackson, Jr., arose and said the people had come together to hear the women speak, and if they had anything to say, they desired them to begin or the audience would disperse. This decided action seemed to give the spirit a jog, for first one woman spoke and then the other.

FIRST WAGON, AND CLOCK.

The first wagon in Paris, it is said, was owned by Abijah Hall. It was brought here from Massachusetts by Hall's wife's father, whose name was Matthews. Though it had no springs, the body being bolted to the wooden axle, and was large and unwieldy, yet it was very convenient and was considered a great luxury for the times. Mr. Matthews also brought to town at the same time, a clock, which was doubtless the first one here. It has been preserved and is now in the possession of Capt. H. N. Bolster, a grandson of Abijah Hall.

A FALSE ALARM.

Eleazer Cole was fond of playing practical jokes upon his neighbors—John Billings was one of them. Billings had commenced a clearing, built him a log hut and was keeping "old bachelor's hall." He had a field of corn near his hut, and one day while at dinner he heard a cow-bell in his field, and thinking a neighbor's cow might be trespassing, and rushing out he was surprised to find no animal in sight. A second alarm caused him to make a more thorough search, when the disturbance was explained by finding Cole seated upon a log and hidden from view by the growing corn, with an old cow-bell in his hand. Billings afterward married Cole's daughter, Phebe.

PROPRIETORS OF LINCOLN.

Citizens of Paris became proprietors of the town of Lincoln on Penobscot river, and its first settlers were from this section. The proprietors were Simeon Cummings, Gov. Enoch Lincoln, Moses Hammond and Jacob Jackson. Among the early settlers there who went from here, were Dea. Smith, Alfred Gates, Mr. Wyman and some of the Hammonds and Chesleys. Dea. Stephen Chase of Woodstock was there with the first. The town was named for Gov. Lincoln.

TOWN CLERK'S DILEMMA.

For years after Paris became a town, intentions of marriage were published either by posting notice thereof in the church, or by oral notice in church given by the town clerk. At one time Dr. Benj. Chandler, who was then town clerk, undertook to "cry" a couple, and after announcing the name of the male of the contracting parties, he stopped suddenly, being unable to recall the name of the female. But Lemuel Jackson, Jr., who was present, and knowing the parties, came to the rescue of the clerk and announced the name of the lady, when the clerk finished his duty and sat down. This was but a trifling incident, but such trifles in those days, in a new and interior town, where happenings were few, created no little merriment at the expense of the clerk, and furnished food for the gossipers for a whole week.

BEARS.

Bears were quite plentiful for some time after the first settlers came, and it was no uncommon thing for a person to come across one when out exploring in the woods. But bruin was generally much the more frightened of the two, and rarely manifested a desire to interview the other party. When meeting children, however, the case was sometimes different. Harvey and Orison Ripley, sons of Uriah, aged ten and eight years, were one evening sent by their mother to the house of Daniel Macomber, carrying some meat and a flat-iron done up in a package. When passing through a piece of woods, they saw an animal approaching them, and as it was bright moonlight they saw him when some distance off. The boys, to whom the sight of bruin was a stranger, thought it was a black hornless cow, and kept on until within a few feet of him and then stopped. The confronting parties looked at each other for a moment, when the bear stepped out of the road, and the boys passed on. Beech nuts were plenty, and probably the bear was not hungry, otherwise he would probably have investigated the boys' bundle, if indeed he had left them unharmed.

FIRST SETTLERS' CAMP.

There were hunters' camps in Paris several years before the first settlers came, and the parties who surveyed and lotted out the town, had a camping-place on Stony brook, but the first settlers' camp, beyond a reasonable doubt, was built by the Jacksons, and was located near the site of the old burying-place on the Hill.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

A Fourth of July celebration was had at Isaac Bolster's, probably about the year 1800. Bolster furnished dinner and all the liquor wanted at one dollar each. Tradition comes down to us through this long vista of years, that it was a very hilarious occasion: that there were five doctors there and all became intoxicated, three of them together in one bed. This may seem almost incredible to the youth of to-day, but those of us whose memory covers a period of fifty years, have witnessed similar scenes and almost as bad as the one here related. When ministers drank daily and openly, and physicians became helpless from intoxication, what could be expected from the masses of the people? It is said that many young men got intoxicated on that occasion, and the girls whom they carried there were obliged to go home alone.

A MOCK TRIAL.

Lemuel Jackson, 3d, had a dog named "Slugar," against which charges had been preferred for depredations on the Bisco farm. Jackson, who was something of a wag, decided that the dog should be tried in regular court style. Accordingly counsel were assigned, a jury empaneled, the dog arraigned, and a scene followed so ridiculous that it is difficult to describe it. Liquor was freely passed between judge, jury and counsel, and in a short time the defendant dog was the soberest one in the crowd. "Slugar" was brought in guilty and sentenced to be hanged. He was placed in a wagon, escorted to a tree, and a rope placed around his neck. He was then reminded that if he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be executed, he had an opportunity. The culprit was silent, the wagon moved on and poor Slugar was left suspended in mid-air.

DR. LEVI WILLIS.

Dr. Levi Willis, whose early death was mourned by a very large circle of friends, had a remarkable memory, inheriting this trait from his mother whose memory of dates was almost phenomenal. While attending lectures at the Maine Medical School at Brunswick, in the early days of that institution, after delivering his lecture, it was the custom of the professor to question the class upon the topics embraced in it. On this occasion he asked young Willis a very hard question, and in a manner that conveyed the idea that he did not expect a correct answer: but to his surprise and that of the class, it was answered promptly and in a way that indicated that he thoroughly understood the subject. This led to another question and then another, until the whole time was spent in questioning young Willis. After closing his catechism, the professor asked him how long he had been studying medicine, and was surprised to learn that he had just commenced, and still more surprised when Willis informed him that all the knowledge he had of the subject upon which he had been questioned, he had gained by hearing the professor's lecture. He had, in fact, taken in the whole of it; not an idea had been overlooked or forgotten.

ELDER WITHAM'S ADVENTURE.

The Little Androscoggin river, in its passage through Paris, on ordinary occasions, except at Snow's Falls, is a very sedate and quiet stream, meandering through green meadows or rippling along its rocky bed: but it quickly feels the influence of rain and is often transformed into a roaring, seething torrent, its banks and barriers over-run, and its surface covered with foam and the debris of overturned fences and dismantled bridges. At such times it is very dangerous crossing with a boat, though many years ago, when bridges were farther apart than now, the settlers found it necessary to do so. At one time, before the Witham bridge was built, Elder Witham and an Irishman named Dennis O'Brien, had occasion to cross the river to go to mill. They crossed over in a rude boat, called a "dug-out," but while they were absent there came a sudden and violent rain, which caused a rapid rise in the river and rendered it hazardous crossing. But the Elder was anxious to get home, and placing his bag of meal, an axe, and a few necessities which he had purchased, in the boat, he and O'Brien embarked. Before they were half over the boat capsized and floated down the river, leaving its late occupants floundering in the water. O'Brien could swim and boldly struck out for the land, but the Elder could not. He had on, however, an overcoat, which spread out and buoyed him up, and he floated down to a point of land where parties who had witnessed the catastrophe were ready with poles to drag him ashore. His bag of meal and "store" things were lost, but the axe was recovered by Levi Berry, Jr., who floated in the boat down over the spot where it sank, and having previously tied a steel trap to the end of a pole and set it, he sprang it over the end of the upright helve and drew the axe up. By this ingenious process and with considerable risk of a ducking, he earned twenty-five cents.

A WOMAN'S PLUCK.

At one time within the recollection of the writer, though more than half a century ago, after a severe rain, when the river had overflowed its banks and was many times its ordinary width and running with great violence, it became necessary for some one to cross to the opposite side, and the only means was a small dug-out, but little better than a trough. There were two or three men present, and some grown-up boys, and the calls from the opposite side were loud and persistent, but not one of them dared to launch the frail bark and undertake to cross the seething flood. But, after a little while, a woman coming out of the house near by and learning what was wanted, without a word or a moment's hesitation, walked to the boat, pushed it off, jumped in, and with a single oar began to pull out into the stream. Then the men on the shore, with a bedlam of tongues, began to instruct her how to manage the boat, and had she listened to what they said she would probably have become confused and frightened and perhaps lost her life; but heedless of their advice and standing up, she continued to paddle on the same side, keeping the head of the boat up stream, and finally succeeded in landing nearly opposite where we stood. Having attended to the wants of the opposite neighbor, she re-crossed in the same way and landed in safety. Three children, of which the writer was the youngest, watched the performance with the deepest solicitude, and when the boat struck the bank on the return trip, and their mother sprang ashore, they felt that she was indeed a hero, and the better man of all those that stood there and did not offer to go.

MORE THAN HE BARGAINED FOR.

During the war there was a certain soldier's wife living near the Hill who was said to be in destitute circumstances. Gilman Tuell, who happened to be in one of the stores one day when the matter was spoken of, offered to take all the ten-cent donations to her that would be offered, taking only one at a time and returning to the store after each trip to the woman's house. This was early in the afternoon, and the offer was accepted by a few who happened to be present and Mr. Tuell began his charitable work. Meantime, others came in, and, hearing what was going on, were ready and eager to take part in the sport; and Mr. Tuell, though rushing back and forth at double-quick, could not begin to keep up with the donations, and the ten-cent scrip was literally piled up awaiting transportation. It was late in the night before he got through, and the donors had long since retired, but he pluckily fulfilled his engagement though nearly exhausted with his exertion. A calculation showed that he had travelled over twenty miles, and the soldier's wife found herself richer by quite a number of dollars.

CHAPTER XLV.

ANECDOTES OF ELDER HOOPER.

The character of this, our first settled minister, as a pastor and preacher, a man of business and as a citizen, has been fully set forth in another place; but he was also a man of strong convictions, of decided views, a despiser of shams and a persistent defender of his opinions. He was not only argumentative, but he could be terribly sarcastic, and sarcasm was a weapon which he never hesitated to use when occasion required, whether against preacher or layman. After having preached to the society fifty years, Mr. Hooper notified its members that he should preach no longer. Before another minister was engaged, preachers from neighboring towns were called in to supply, and Mr. Hooper always attended church. At one time a minister from Hebron was supplying the pulpit and in the forenoon preached a very long, rambling and prosy sermon, occupying an hour and a half in its delivery. Elder Hooper was noted for his short sermons, rarely exceeding half an hour, and often not more than twenty minutes, and being present on this occasion he became very restive and impatient, and as soon as the "amen" was uttered from the pulpit, he arose and said in his inimitable way, "I give notice that there will be preaching in this church this afternoon by myself."

It happened on one occasion that Mr. Hooper had an appointment for an evening lecture at the house of Ezra Cary, who then owned and lived in the Phineas Morse stand and was himself a Congregationalist, though his son Shepard was a Baptist. A Mr. Hillard, a missionary of the Congregationalist church, was present at Mr. Cary's, and Mr. Hooper, on his arrival, noticing him in the room, asked: "Won't you preach this evening, Mr. Hillard?" accompanying the question with the characteristic remark: "My wife says she likes to go a visiting sometimes, even if she don't get any better victuals than her own."

Mr. Hooper was a practical man. During the haying season, if there were signs of a shower, he often told his people from the pulpit, that "if they had hay out, they had better go home and see to it:" sometimes he would accompany these words with the remark that he "had hay out which needed his attention," and would at once close the service and start for his home and farm.

After performing the marriage ceremony on a certain occasion where the prospects of the contracting parties were particularly promising, Elder Hooper said: "This is as it should be; first the house, then the wife and then the children; the order is too often reversed."

Elder Hooper was in no wise in advance of his generation upon the temperance question, and though a "watchman upon the walls," it is doubtful if he saw and realized the evils of intemperance as early as did some of his people. Believing ardent spirits to be among the good things of this life, he was a frequent partaker, though never drinking to excess. It is said by those who knew him, that he would frequently seek inspiration for his afternoon sermon by going to a friend's house near the church at noon, and asking for a glass of brandy, which he always drank with great relish. On one occasion, during a week-day, he was sitting by a fire in the village store warming himself, when several of his parishioners dropped in, one at a time, and called for ardent spirits. This must have been after temperance began to be talked, for each one felt called upon to give some excuse as he called for his drink. One had a severe cold, one had the toothache, and another rheumatism, and so on. Mr. Hooper bore it for some time, and then stepping to the counter, he said aloud and with peculiar emphasis, "I want a glass of brandy because I love it."

Elder Hooper's first wife was a Merrill, from New Gloucester. They lost their two children from canker-rash, and soon Mrs. Hooper was attacked with consumption and all hopes of her recovery were abandoned. Reuben Hubbard had died, and his widow, who was the daughter of Benj. Stowell of Worcester, had returned to her father's. In view of his threatened bereavement, the Elder wrote to Mrs. Hubbard, and, stating the case, expressed the hope that she would not get married as he desired her for himself. She waited, and subsequently became the wife of Elder Hooper.

Elder Hooper had a black cur dog which always went to meeting with him, and during the services lay quietly on the steps of the pulpit. One Sunday the Elder was too unwell to preach and did not leave his house for the day. A supply was obtained, but the dog came alone to the meeting-house at the usual time, took his accustomed place on the steps, and at the close of the services quietly returned home.

Daniel Macomber, the smithy, thought he had a call to preach, and asked permission from the Baptist church, the members of which were generally favorable to him, but he was opposed by Elder Hooper. Macomber, meeting Mr. Hooper, asked him what he had against him. "I haven't anything against you personally," said the plain-spoken parson, "but you know, Daniel, you are n't fit." There is no doubt he was right.

A Mr. Eveleth was preceptor of Hebron Academy, and being on a visit at Dr. Hamlin's, he was introduced to Elder Hooper, who chanced to drop in. Mr. Hooper asked him if he was preceptor of Hebron Academy, to which he responded, "I am." He answered several other questions in a similar manner, when Mr. Hooper became impatient and said: "Well, Mr. Eveleth, you have turned those good old words 'yes' and 'no' out of doors at Hebron Academy, haven't you?"

CHAPTER XLVI.

PERSONAL NOTICES.

It is not claimed that these personal notices embrace all who are entitled to such distinction, but as much space is devoted to this chapter as can be spared for the purpose. Brief notices have already been given of the grantees of the town, of the ministers, lawyers, doctors and other professional men, and the design of this chapter is to include those prominent citizens of Paris not embraced in any of the preceding lists, and natives of Paris who have been engaged in professional life, or who have achieved success in business after their removal from the town. These notices are so numerous that they are necessarily brief—mere outline sketches—but they are sufficient to identify the persons named. For convenience in referring to them, the sketches are arranged in alphabetical order.

SULLIVAN C. ANDREWS.

He was born in this town June 18, 1828: received an academic education, graduated from the Harvard University Law School and practiced the legal profession for many years in Buckfield. He then moved to Portland, where he yet resides. While in Buckfield, he was elected to the Legislature and also as County Attorney. He has engaged in various branches of business outside of the legal profession, and is now one of the directors of the Buckfield and Rumford Falls Railroad.

HORACE ARMSBY.

Deacon Horace Armsby was born in Paris, his parents being among the early settlers. He went away from this town when quite young, and in 1849 became a resident of Millbury, Mass. While there he held many offices of responsibility and trust. He was Representative to the General Court in 1861 and 1862, and was a number of times a member of the Board of Selectmen and Assessors, and for several years President of the Millbury Savings Bank, which office he held at the time of his death. He was a prominent member of the Second Congregational Church, having served the church as deacon twelve years. He died in Millbury, aged 70 years.

S. A. Bolster

DAVID P. BOLSTER.

Dr. David Porter Bolster was the son of David and Sarah (Cushman) Bolster, and grandson of Captain Isaac, our early settler. He was born in Paris Aug. 11, 1827; attended the public schools and at Hebron Academy. He then studied medicine and graduated at the Maine Medical School. He has practiced in Leeds, at Washington Mills, at Weeks' Mills in China, and now resides in Augusta. He was Assistant Surgeon of the 21st (9 months) Maine Regiment, and subsequently of the 16th Maine. He married Faustina M. Bartlett of Union, and has one child—a daughter.

SOLOMON A. BOLSTER.

He is a son of Gideon and Charlotte (Hall) Bolster, and a native of Paris: born December 10, 1835. He received an academic education and attended two terms at the Chandler Scientific School connected with Dartmouth College. He then studied law with Wm. W. Bolster and attended the Law School of Harvard University, where he graduated in 1859. He was admitted to the Oxford County Bar in 1858 and at Boston in 1862. He enlisted in the 23d Maine Regiment, in his brother's company, F, and was appointed Orderly Sergeant and subsequently was commissioned Second Lieutenant. After his regiment returned and was mustered out, he moved to Roxbury, Mass., now a precinct of Boston. He has been successful in his business, has held various positions of trust and profit, and is a highly respected citizen. Since his removal to Massachusetts he has served on the Governor's staff. He married, Oct. 30, 1864, Sarah Jane Gardiner of Dixfield.

WILLIAM H. BOLSTER.

Rev. Wm. H. Bolster is the oldest son of Otis C. and Caroline (Virgin) Bolster, and born April 17, 1844. He graduated at Bates College, Lewiston, studied theology and was ordained at Wiscasset. He is now (1884) settled in Everett, Mass.

SYLVESTER BESSE.

Rev. Sylvester Besse was the son of John Besse, Jr., whose wife was Betsey, daughter of Elder John Tripp of Hebron. He was born in this town June 25, 1815. He was educated in the town schools and at Hebron Academy. He became a Baptist minister and has been pastor of the Baptist church at Lincoln Center for nearly thirty years. He also served in various places under the patronage of the Maine Baptist Missionary Convention. He has held various town offices, especially on the school boards, and in 1877 he was elected to the Maine Legislature.

FRED E. BOOTHBY.

Fred E. Boothby, the popular General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the Maine Central Railroad Company, was born in Norway, Dec. 3d, 1845. When quite young, his father, Levi T. Boothby, moved to South Paris, where Fred attended the town schools and also at the Normal Institute. After his father moved to Waterville in 1857, he attended the High School there and at the Classical Institute, and when he was old enough his father took him in to assist him in taking charge of the railroad station at that place. From this position he worked his way up, being Acting Paymaster from 1871 to 1874, until he was appointed General Passenger and Ticket Agent, which position he now holds. The position has grown in importance by the consolidation of other roads with the Maine Central, until it now ranks among the first of like railway situations in New England. Mr. Boothby is a faithful and efficient officer, and is deservedly popular with the Railroad Company and with the traveling public. He married, October 25, 1871, Adelaide E., daughter of Charles H. and Vesta B. Smith of Waterville. Mr. Boothby's mother was Sophia P., daughter of Martin and Ruth (Durell) Brett, all of Paris.

GRANVILLE M. CHASE.

Granville M. Chase was the son of Timothy and Lucy (Porter) Chase of Paris, and a native of this town. He married a daughter of Dea. Elisha Morse of South Paris. He resided many years in Portland, and carried on a large business as contractor and builder, accumulating a large property, which by unfortunate contracts and investments he subsequently lost. He was a leading man among the mechanics of Portland and at one time President of the Mechanics' Association. He was filling that position at the time Mechanics' Hall on Congress street was dedicated. He built Payson Memorial Church, and had about $10,000 in that building, which he could not realize, and which embarrassed him to such a degree that he had to suspend payment. He moved to Chicago after the fire, and helped build up that city, but he contracted fever and ague, which hastened his death. He died at Fall River, Mass., and left a wife and three daughters. He was a large-hearted man of enterprise, and represented Portland twice in the Legislature.

WILLIAM CHASE.

William Chase was the son of Timothy and Lucy (Porter) Chase, and a native of this town, where he was born Nov. 1, 1820. When four years of age, his parents moved to Portland, and when a boy he entered a West India goods store as clerk. Becoming of age, he engaged for himself in the same kind of trade and continued with marked success, till 1871, when he moved to Dedham, Mass. He had purchased the Hamlin homestead at Paris, in 1861, and after being at Dedham about fifteen months he came to Paris, where he devoted his time to farming and stock breeding. He was a director in the Paris Hill Manufacturing Company, and was interested in other local enterprises. In 1875 he purchased the water-power at Snow's Falls, where he erected and put into operation a mill for the manufacture of wall-paper. His death was the result of an injury. He had been to Portland, and on arriving home at South Paris, when attempting to get from the train, he stepped upon some ice, which formed an inclined plane toward the road, which forced him beneath the wheels; one truck passed over the left foot and also over the right leg, crushing both fearfully. Both legs were amputated—one at the ankle, the other above the knee—but he died four days after the operation. He was an enterprising business man, and his sudden death when but little past middle life, was a great loss to the town.

ALDEN CHASE.

Alden Chase, Esq., came here from Woodstock early in 1857, having been chosen Register of Deeds at the previous election. He was re-elected and at the end of his second term he returned to his farm in Woodstock. He was the son of Merrill and Lucy (Felt) Chase, and was born June 15, 1819. He married Lucy, daughter of Jonathan Cole, and grand-daughter of Eleazer Cole, an early resident in Paris. He served in the Maine Legislature before he came here and also after his return to Woodstock. He has also held various other positions of trust. He has had three children. The oldest, Alden Fitzroy, graduated at Middletown (Conn.) University, was Professor at Kent's Hill several years, and is now at the head of the East Maine Conference Seminary at Bucksport. Aquilla Montrose, the second son, is a printer at Bryant's Pond and the proprietor of the first printing office in that town. The only daughter, Estella Ophelia, is the wife of Rev. Albert A. Ford.

THOMAS CROCKER.

Hon. Thomas Crocker died in Paris, August 22, 1872, aged 84 years. He was the second son of Roland Crocker of Conway, N. H., and was born there April 14, 1788. While young, he chose the occupation of merchant, and first came to Norway, where he was clerk in the store of Mr. Increase Robinson. As a clerk he gave promise of his future, by his promptitude, energy and fidelity. Subsequently he came to Paris Hill, while the county was new, and in the midst of the thriving, active pioneer population, laid the foundation of his character and fortune. During some thirty or thirty-five years, his store was a place of trade and business—not only of Paris, but also of the adjoining towns. He was one of those rare men financially, that whatever he touched prospered. He took a comprehensive view of business, and having great foresight and enterprise as well as executive and financial ability, could and did command success. He married for his first wife Miss Clarissa Stowell, daughter of Thomas Stowell, Esq., of Paris. After her decease in 1843, he married Miss Almira Davis of Methuen, Mass. Mr. Crocker was not wholly occupied in his own private affairs. His discretion and financial ability called him into public life. When the property of minors required a trusty guardian, his services were sought and his management approved. He was also a member of the Governor's Council in 1835. But the public capacity in which he served longest and where his financial ability shone most conspicuously, was as a director of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railway Company. This post he filled during several years with great satisfaction, while that road was being located and constructed. He had been an invalid since 1854. Prior to that time, cataracts had formed in both eyes, and had rendered his vision very imperfect, so that in May of that year he submitted to an operation. One eye only was operated upon, which, instead of improving, took on severe inflammation, resulting in great suffering during the subsequent six months, and the total disorganization of the eye. He would not consent to have the other eye operated upon, and was, therefore, totally blind from that time to his decease. In his will he left a thousand dollars to the poor of the town, on condition that the names of the beneficiaries be read in town-meeting every year.

SIMEON CUMMINGS.

Simeon Cummings, Jr., was born in Paris, April 17, 1812. In early life he commenced the study of medicine, but not feeling satisfied with the prospects which the profession at that time offered, he abandoned it and went into trade, for a time in the store formerly occupied by his father. He afterwards enlarged the building and fitted it up for a dwelling-house, and ever afterwards occupied it. He served as Deputy Sheriff for quite a number of years, and also in the Legislature. As a business man, he was very successful, amassing one of the largest private fortunes ever accumulated in town. This success was achieved in trade, in operations in real estate and in loaning money. He was a man of plain and simple habits, and no one who saw him in his everyday dress, would have any idea that he was the wealthiest person in town. He was never afraid to work, was frugal in his habits, economical in his expenditures, and left his large property to his family. He married 1834, Lucy C. Bent of Paris, who died, and for second wife he married Emeline S. Thayer. His family record may be found elsewhere.

JOHN DENNETT.

John Dennett, or "Squire Dennett" and "Major Dennett," as he was frequently called, was born in the ancient town of Kittery, where several generations of his ancestors had lived. August 4, 1795. With his mother and step-father, named Pray, he came to Paris in 1804, and moved into the building that Nathan Woodbury occupied as a store. They afterwards moved to a house which stood near General Hubbard's house, and which is still known as the Pray place. He was clerk for Russell Hubbard, and afterwards partner.

About the year 1820, he moved to South Paris and bought a lot of Elias Stowell, whose daughter Polly he married, August 6, 1820. She died in 1822, and he then married Hannah, daughter of Nathan Noble of Norway. She also died in 1825, and he married her sister. He had three children, all by the last marriage. He was early a Justice of the Peace, and was much employed in the execution of deeds and other similar documents.

JAMES DEERING.

James Deering who still resides at South Paris and is enjoying a green old age, was born at Old Orchard Nov. 2, 1798. He was the ninth child of Joseph and Hannah (Jameson) Deering and a descendant of a family of this name which early settled in York county. He is a distant relative on both the paternal and maternal sides, of the Deerings who lived on High Street. He served an apprenticeship in a furniture establishment in Saco, and came to this town in 1820. The first chairs he manufactured here were from timber which he cut in the woods and split out by hand ready for turning. Some of these early made chairs are still in existence in this town. He has always been a public spirited man, and has been closely identified with all the material interests of the village of South Paris, since it first began to be called a village. He has been a liberal contributor and a pillar of strength to the Methodist Church here, and a warm friend of education. Besides doing cabinet work, he has often turned his attention to building, and several dwelling houses in the village are of his construction. He married in March, 1824, Eliza, daughter of Elisha and Elizabeth (Morse) Moore of this town and has three children. Few, if any of our citizens are held in higher esteem than James Deering. He and his wife celebrated the 60th anniversary of their marriage in March, 1884.

WILLIAM DEERING.

Probably no son of Paris has been more successful in business than the subject of this notice. He was born in this town April 25, 1825. His father is James Deering a sketch of whom precedes this. He attended the town schools and several terms at the Maine Wesleyan Seminary at Kent's Hill. After leaving school, he was for four or five years connected with the South Paris Manufacturing Company, chiefly as clerk, and in 1849 and 1850, he was agent of the Company. He then went into trade at South Paris and remained until 1861, when he moved to Portland and became the senior partner in the firm of Deering, Milliken & Company. This firm was engaged in handling the products of several woolen and cotton mills on commission, and the firm established a commission-house in New York, which is still in successful operation in the name of Deering, Milliken & Company, under the management of S. M. Milliken. They also became part owners of several woolen-mills during this time in various parts of the State. Mr. Deering retired from the firm on account of ill health, and invested some money in the manufacture of grain and grass harvesting machinery with a gentleman engaged in that business at Chicago, without any expectations of moving his residence from Portland, but the health of his partner having failed made it necessary for him to go west and superintend the business personally. In 1869, he purchased the interest of his partner, since which time he has run the business alone until January, 1884, when the business was incorporated in the name of Wm. Deering & Company. His two sons, Charles and James, and nephew, Wm. D. Porter, were then admitted to an interest in the business. The present business of this concern is the manufacture of grain and grass harvesting machinery, and its specialty the manufacture of automatic twine binders. Of these machines they probably manufacture more largely than any other concern in the world. Mr. Deering married first, Miss Abbie Reed, who died January 10, 1856, aged 28 years.

William Peckham

EBENEZER DRAKE.

Ebenezer Drake was in trade many years at North Paris, was a man of honor and integrity, respected and confided in by the community, and successful in business. He was modest even to diffidence, yet a man of sound judgment and every way reliable. He was a member of the Baptist church at North Paris, and one of its strong supports. He was probably the son of Ebenezer and Martha (Gurney) Drake of Bridgewater, Mass. His wife was also a Gurney, a daughter of Jacob, who was an early settler in this town. He had two children—Horace, who died some years ago, and Eliza. He moved from this town to Mechanic Falls, and engaged there in the manufacture of paper, and died there several years ago.

DR. ANDREW J. FULLER.

Among the native born sons of Paris who have achieved success in professional life, is Dr. Andrew J. Fuller of Bath. He was born to Caleb and Hannah (Perkins) Fuller, September 15, 1822, being the youngest of a large family. He attended the town schools in Paris and at the academy in Hebron. Early showing a leaning toward the medical profession, he pursued his studies at the Maine Medical School, at the University of New York and at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. He graduated from the Maine Medical School in the class of 1841, and settled in Searsmont. In 1847 he moved to Bath, and has remained there in practice ever since. He has enjoyed there and still enjoys the respect and confidence of the people, and has had an extensive practice, not only in common medicine and minor surgery, but in the higher grades of both. Among his successful major operations have been amputations at the hip joint and resection of the humerus. He is a member of the American Medical Association and Vice President, member of the Maine Medical Association and its President in 1871. Among his published papers is an essay on "Cholera Infantum," and "Prognosis on Fractures," the former to the American Medical Association in 1856, and the latter to the Maine Association.

Previous to the war, he served seven years as Surgeon of the Second Maine Infantry, and was Post Surgeon at Bath during the war. He has been a good business man, as shown in the fact that he has served as President of the Bath Board of Trade twelve years, and as President of the Lincoln County Fire Insurance Company five years. He has served one term as Trustee of the Maine Insane Hospital, and is one of the consulting physicians and surgeons of the Maine General Hospital. His practice is not confined to Bath, but he is frequently called in consultation in difficult cases, especially in surgery, and often from places far remote from his home. In July, 1843, he married Miss Harriet, daughter of George Marston of Bath, and had three children, one of whom, a daughter, is living. She married Sammel C. Barker and has one child, a son, Byron F. Barker. Dr. Fuller has ever manifested a strong attachment to his native town, and a lively interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of her people. He is one of the many strong men who left Paris in early manhood, to develop and win respect and success elsewhere.

EMILY A. GOODENOW.

Miss Emily A. Goodenow died at Washington, D. C., May 15, 1872. She had been a clerk in the Treasury Department since 1865. She had been somewhat indisposed for some time, but had been out every day and was out walking on the day of her death. She had a sudden attack of hemorrhage of the lungs and lived only about three hours after. She was 42 years of age, a lady of fine culture. When the war broke out she was governess in the family of Hon. Humphrey Marshall of Virginia, afterwards Gen. Marshall of the confederate army. With much difficulty she succeeded in coming north, leaving her pay for her service and much of her wardrobe behind. Reaching Washington, she became a teacher in the freedmen's school, depending for her compensation on voluntary contributions. She was a very graceful and ready writer. She was the youngest child of Hon. Rufus K. and Jane (Bean) Goodenow of this town.

W. J. Fuller M.D.

MOSES HAMMOND.

Moses, son of Benjamin Hammond, was born in Paris, June 20, 1791, and died April 10, 1871. When he became of age he selected the spot and built the buildings where he ever afterwards lived. He early developed a taste for mechanics and was often employed by the town in drafting plans for bridges, &c. He was many years in trade, and also a large lumber operator, owning mills, at one time and timber lands, not only in Oxford but in Penobscot county. He was active and energetic, possessed of a robust constitution, and was not afraid to "put his own hand to the plow." He was often in town office, and had the confidence of his fellow-citizens in the fullest degree. He was social, genial, and confiding, careful in the selection of friends, but true to those he had tried. He married Mary Keith, a native of Bridgewater. He was buried in the new cemetery, in a spot selected by himself for a family lot. The granite monument placed in his cemetery lot was cut and lettered by himself, and is a good exhibition of his skill and handiwork.

ELIJAH L. HAMLIN.

Hon. Elijah L. Hamlin was the son of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, and was born in Livermore, March 29, 1800. When six years of age, his father moved to Paris. Elijah fitted for college and graduated from Brown University in 1819, studied the legal profession and opened an office at Bangor. Here he spent the remainder of his years. He was a man of marked ability, a good lawyer and well up in other departments of knowledge. It was he, in connection with Dr. Ezekiel Holmes, who discovered the deposit of rare minerals at Mount Mica, and he was much interested in mineralogy, especially in the rarer varieties of minerals and gems. In politics he adopted the Whig side and was the candidate of his party for Governor, but the Whigs never had much of a show in Maine, and he was not successful in being elected to office like his younger brother who took the opposite side. But the organization of the Republican party brought them upon the same platform, and Elijah was elected as such from Bangor to both branches of the Legislature, where he served with distinguished ability. His social qualities were of the highest order, and he was a most interesting and valued member of society. He was always strongly attached to Paris, especially to the old homestead on the Hill, and among his regrets late in life was, that it had been allowed to pass out of the family. He married Eliza Choate of Salem, Mass., and had three children who are further spoken of in the Genealogical Register.

HANNIBAL HAMLIN.

Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, one of the foremost citizens of our State and country, was born in Paris, August 27, 1809. On the paternal side he descended from the Hamlins, who early settled at Barnstable on Cape Cod, and from whom the different New England families of this name sprang. His grandfather, then of Pembroke, Mass., and a prominent citizen, was an officer in the Revolutionary war and did much to fire the patriotic heart in the Old Colony during the days that tried men's souls. On the maternal side, Mr. Hamlin's Puritan ancestry were no less distinguished than were the Hamlins in the Old Colony. His mother was Anna, daughter of Dea. Elijah Livermore who was one of the proprietors and first settlers of the town, formerly in this county, which bears his name, and whose first American ancestor was an early settler and prominent citizen of Watertown, Mass. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, the father of the subject of this notice, born in Pembroke, Mass., after graduating in medicine, settled in practice in Livermore, but on the formation of the County of Oxford, in 1805, he came to Paris to officiate as Clerk of the Courts. A collegiate education was intended for Hannibal, and he was prepared to enter college when his father died. Duties then devolved upon him which prevented him from carrying out his previous plans, and he remained at home until he became of age. In company with Horatio King, he purchased the paper started at Paris a year or two previous, called the Jeffersonian, in 1829, and worked at the case for about six months, when he sold out his interest to Mr. King. He then read law, was admitted to the bar, and in the spring of 1833 moved to Hampden. He continued in active practice for about fifteen years.

He was elected to the Maine Legislature in 1836 and re-elected three times, serving his last three terms as Speaker of the House. He was elected a member of the XXVIII Congress and re-elected to the XXIX. He was again elected to the Maine Legislature in 1847, and May 26, 1848, was elected to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. John Fairfield. In 1851 he was re-elected for the full term of six years. In 1856 he was nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Maine, and elected by an overwhelming majority. He resigned his seat in the Senate, but January 16th he was re-elected to the United States Senate for a full term of six years, resigning his position as Governor to accept it. He was a prominent member of the Senate, serving on important committees, among others on the Committee on Commerce, and District of Columbia. In 1860 he was nominated by the Republican Convention as candidate for Vice President on the ticket with Abraham Lincoln, and was elected. His position as presiding officer of the Senate during the dark days of the rebellion, was difficult in the extreme, but he filled it with distinguished ability and to great acceptance. At the close of his term he was appointed Collector of the Port of Boston, but resigned before the end of the year, not being satisfied with the policy of the acting President from whom he had received his appointment. In 1869 he was again elected to the United States Senate and re-elected in 1875. In 1881 he was appointed by President Garfield, Minister to Spain, which position he resigned at the end of the year and returned to his home in Bangor.

Mr. Hamlin married first, Sarah, daughter of Hon. Stephen Emery, and had by this marriage three children who grew up to man and womanhood—two sons and a daughter. Both of the sons served creditably in the war of the rebellion, and after the war was over, the youngest, Cyrus, settled in New Orleans, but soon died. The daughter was married, and died some years ago; and Gen. Charles Hamlin, the oldest son, is a practicing attorney in Bangor. Mr. Hamlin married second, Ellen Emery, half sister of his former wife, and they have two sons, both of whom have graduated from college, and one of them is engaged in professional life as a lawyer.

During his long public career, Mr. Hamlin has constantly held the esteem and confidence of the people of Maine, and has richly deserved it, for his attention to business, his untiring efforts in behalf of liberty and human progress and his spotless record as a public man. Genial and kind-hearted by nature, he has cultivated the acquaintance of men in the humbler as well as in the higher walks of life, and has had a personal following such as few public men have ever enjoyed. In the exalted positions to which he has attained, he has never lost sight of the fact that he owed his elevation to the original source of power, the people, and in his official capacity he has never gone counter to the public will. He probably has a larger personal acquaintance with the yeomanry of the State than was ever had by any of our public men, and the fact that, meet them where he may, he always recognizes them and has a pleasant and cordial word of greeting for them, accounts in some degree for his popularity. Although over fifty years have elapsed since he left his native hills and took up his residence on the Penobscot, his attachment to Paris and its people remains unabated, and his visits here, when his public duties would admit it, have been frequent and apparently enjoyable. Though somewhat advanced in years, he is still vigorous both in mind and body; and at his pleasant home in the city of Bangor, surrounded by warm personal friends, and having in his retirement the profound respect of the people of the State and country, and the consciousness of having been faithful to the many trusts which have been imposed upon him, he has every prospect of a green old age and years of grateful rest.

JOSIAH S. HOBBS.

Josiah S. Hobbs is the son of James Hobbs, Jr., of Lovell, where he was born, June 27, 1828. He received a thorough academical education and was for several years engaged in teaching in Watford. He finally read law and was admitted to the bar. He was elected Register of Probate and moved to Paris Hill. He was re-elected twice, serving three full terms of four years each. At the end of his third term he was appointed by Governor Perham, State Librarian, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Joseph T. Woodward, and moved to Augusta, where he has since resided. He has held the position of State Librarian by re-appointment, with the exception of one year, since his removal to Augusta. He married Emeline, daughter of Stevens and Sophia (Chadbourne) Smith of Gorham, and has no children.

Hon. Horatio King.

HIRAM HUBBARD.

Hon. Hiram Hubbard was the son of Russell, and grandson of Gen. Levi Hubbard. His mother was Emma, daughter of Daniel Stowell, Esq., and he was born in Paris, September 28, 1811. He has been one of our most active and substantial business men. For many years he was in trade, either by himself or in company with others. He was commissioned Lieutenant in the Paris Rifle Company, May 15, 1835, and promoted to Aide-de-Camp in 1837. He has served in both branches of the Legislature, and as County Treasurer. He was also for some years connected with the Portland Custom House. A few years ago, in response to the popular wish, he fitted up his house as a hotel, now the well-known "Hubbard House." This has been a favorite resort for city people who like a pleasant house and family in which, with pure air and pleasant surroundings, to spend the summer months. Mr. Hubbard married first, Elizabeth, daughter of Nathan Marble; and second, Nancy J., sister of his former wife. He has had eight children, five by the first marriage and three by the second; six are now living.

HORATIO KING.

Hon. Horatio King was the son of Samuel and Sarah (Hall) King, and was born in Paris, June 21, 1811. His father was quite early here, and his mother was a daughter of Jonathan Hall, an early settler here from Hopkinton, Mass. The grandfather of Horatio King was George King of Raynham, Mass., and he and three of his brothers served in the war for independence. Like most of the country-reared young men of the period, the subject of this notice was brought up on the farm and had a personal knowledge of what life upon the farm is, or rather what it was at that time, for it is somewhat different now. He received such an education as the common schools afforded, and, in the spring of 1829, entered the office of the Jeffersonian, a paper then printed in Paris, to learn the printers' art. One year afterwards he became part owner, and six months thereafter sole owner, and, in 1832, editor of the paper, and in May, 1833, moved it to Portland. On the first of January, 1838, he sold out to the Standard, and that paper was finally merged with the Eastern Argus. In March, 1839, he was appointed by Postmaster General Amos Kendall, to a position in the Post Office Department at Washington, D. C., where he has ever since resided. He received promotions from time to time until 1850, when he became connected with the foreign mail service, in which capacity he originated and perfected certain postal arrangements of great importance to the service. In March, 1854, he was appointed by President Pierce, First Assistant Postmaster General, an office of great responsibility, but for which his long experience well fitted him. He held this position until the 1st January, 1861, when he became Acting Postmaster General, and on the 12th February he was nominated by President Buchanan and confirmed by the Senate, as Postmaster General, serving in that capacity until the inauguration of President Lincoln and the appointment of his successor, March 7, 1861. He filled all these important places with fidelity and distinguished ability. He was Postmaster General during the latter part of Mr. Buchanan's administration, when treason stalked with a bold front through the streets of the National Capital. Though a life-long democrat, Mr. King was loyal to the core, and remained so during the entire struggle. Though exempted by law from the performance of military duty, he furnished a representative recruit who was duly mustered in and served in the Union army. This exhibition of patriotism and public spirit received official acknowledgment from the government. After retiring from the Post office Department, he was appointed, in April, 1862, one of a Board of Commissioners to carry out the emancipation proclamation in the District of Columbia. This position was tendered him by President Lincoln, unsolicited, and doubtless on account of his valuable services near the close of the previous administration. The service of this commission was limited to nine months, and on finally leaving office, Mr. King went into a quiet business as an attorney before the executive departments and international commissions, which he followed until about ten years ago, when he retired as far as practicable from active business. Mr. King has twice made the tour of Europe, first in 1867 and again in 1875-6. The last one was somewhat more extended than the first, and on his return he published a book entitled "Sketches of Travel, or Twelve Months in Europe." He has written much and upon a great variety of topics, and has also lectured on various occasions. He delivered an oration before the Union Literary Society of Washington in 1841, which was published. He also originated a series of Saturday evening literary entertainments at his private residence, which became very popular. February 2, 1884, the hundredth meeting of this kind was held, and the proceedings were printed in a neat pamphlet of 48 pages. He has for many years been a contributor to newspapers and magazines, on historical and literary subjects, sometimes translating articles from the French. He spends his winters in Washington, but about six months each season are spent at his summer home at West Newton, Mass.

Mr. King married May 25, 1835, Ann Collins of Portland, by whom he had seven children, only three of whom—one daughter and two sons—survive. The others died young. His first wife died September 22, 1869, and he married, February 8, 1875, Isabella G. Osborne of Auburn, N. Y. Mr. King's somewhat eventful life has been one of usefulness. In all the positions he has filled, he has inaugurated important improvements, including, within the last few years, that of the official "Penalty Envelope"—a convenient, economical device; and by his literary efforts he has contributed much to elevate the tone of society at the National Capital. During all the years since he left Paris, he has shown in various ways that his devotion to the dear old town is unwavering; and now, as he grows older and the cares and duties of life have become lessened, his heart is drawn still oftener and with greater force toward the home of his childhood, youth and early manhood.

FRANCIS LANE.

Captain Francis Lane was born in Gloucester, Mass., in 1756, and in 1775 enlisted in Capt. Rowe's company and marched to Bunker Hill in season to take part in the engagement which took place there June 17. Returning to Gloucester, he entered the navy on board a privateer, and at the close of the war received his share in several prizes which he had aided in capturing. He subsequently became master of a ship and made voyages to various parts of the world. He was once shipwrecked and spent the winter in Greenland. He married, February 25, 1779, Miss Esther Griffin of Gloucester. Later in life he moved to North Yarmouth, when he continued to follow the seas for many years. He subsequently moved to Minot, and in 1818 to South Paris, where he died November 30, 1829. His first wife died of yellow fever in 1799, leaving five children. He married next, Widow Hannah Wyman of North Yarmouth, July 8, 1800. His second wife died in this town, and for his third wife he married Mrs. Betsey Gammon, December 5, 1822. His only son, Ammi R., served in the war of 1812, and came with his father to South Paris in 1818, and died there June 16, 1863, leaving a family. His widow died October 18, 1884. Mary, daughter of Francis Lane, married Samuel Richards of Oxford, and Samuel Richards, Jr., of South Paris, is their son.

AUGUSTUS G. LEBROKE.

Hon. Augustus G. Lebroke was the son of Jacob and Martha (Foster) Lebroke and was born here Feb. 9, 1823. His grandfather, James Lebroke (or "Le Brook," as it is in the early records,) came from France in the French fleet that came over to assist in our struggle for independence. After the war, he settled in Pembroke, Mass., and from there came to Hebron and finally to Paris with the early settlers, and died here. Jacob Lebroke early moved to Foxcroft, where in his youth the subject of this notice worked upon his father's farm and for others in the vicinity. He was educated in the common schools in Foxcroft and at Foxcroft Academy, at which he fitted for college. He taught common and high schools three terms a year for several years, with marked success: had experience as Assistant Postmaster at Dover Village and East Corinth, and read law while teaching, in the office of the late J. S. Holmes, Esq., in Foxcroft. He was in the California mines one and a half years: read law after his return in the office of the late Hon. C. P. Chandler, in Foxcroft, and in the office of Hon. A. W. Paine, in Bangor. He was for the most of the time for fifteen years a member of the S. S. Committee, or Supervisor of Schools, in Foxcroft, till he declined to serve longer. He served as Town Agent of Foxcroft for 24 years, with the interruption of a single year in two instances. He also held other town offices. In 1859 and also in 1872 he was a member of the Maine Legislature and one of the most distinguished debaters in that day. He was County Attorney for Piscataquis from 1860 to 1870. In 1882 he was elected a member of the Maine Senate and was made Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He is an able lawyer and a natural born orator, having a wonderful command of language and a remarkably pleasing address. He has been much on the stump in Maine and elsewhere, and is regarded as one of the most efficient speakers in his party. He is now practicing his profession in Foxcroft and is doing a large and lucrative business.

JARVIS C. MARBLE.

Jarvis C. Marble was the son of Nathan and Mehitabel (Freeland) Marble of Sutton and Bethel, and was born in the latter town.

When seventeen years of age, he went to New York and served as clerk for his cousin, Lawson C. Carter, for three years. His health being impaired, he returned to Maine and entered into partnership with Hiram Hubbard as soon as he was of age. Afterwards he purchased Mr. Hubbard's interest in the store, and continued in trade alone. In 1845 he bought of Lorenzo Swett, the Buckfield Powder Mills, located at Basin Falls on Twenty-Mile river, and soon after disposed of his store at Paris. About 1847 he purchased of Emery Allen, the powder-mills at Hale's Mills; built mills at Plattville, Wisconsin, and also bought a half interest in the mills at Camden. In 1852-3, in company with A. P. Waterhouse, he built mills in Portsmouth, Ohio. Subsequently, having disposed of his Plattville and Portsmouth mills to New York parties, he built others at Windsor, in the Province of Quebec; also engaged largely in lumbering, and to a limited extent in mining. In January, 1878, he sold out his entire interest in the powder manufacture, but has continued his Canada operations in other directions, in the lumber, bark and wood business. Mr. Marble was elected a member of the Legislature in 1880, and re-elected in 1881. He was a useful and influential member of that body.

SILAS P. MAXIM.

Silas P. Maxim is the son of the late Silas Maxim, Jr., and grandson of Silas Maxim, our early settler. He was born Feb. 21, 1827, attended the town schools and at Hebron Academy. He worked upon the farm summers and taught school winters for a few years, and finally learned the carpenter's trade. He carried on the manufacture of sash, blinds and doors on the Hill for some years, and then moved his business to South Paris, where, much enlarged, it is still carried on by him and his son. Mr. Maxim was Clerk in the Enrolling Board of the Second Congressional District during the war, and has been one of the Board of Selectmen in Paris during the period of seven years. He was early interested in the history of his native town, and much of the material for this history was gathered up by him. He began to collect this material many years ago when some of the early settlers were living, and by jotting down their recollections he saved important facts bearing upon the subject, which but for his forethought must have been forever lost. He has erected some of the best buildings in town, among which are the Odd-Fellows' Block, the school-house in South

Paris and the sled-factory. He was enumerator of the census of 1870, for the town of Paris. He married Augusta M. Prentiss, a grand-daughter of Dea. Caleb, early trader at South Paris.

VIRGIL D. PARRIS.

Hon. Virgil Delphini Parris was the son of Capt. Josiah and Experience (Lowden) Parris, and a first cousin of Hon. Albion K. Parris. He was born in Buckfield, Feb. 8, 1807, and graduated at Union College, N. Y., in 1827. Among his class-mates were Leonard Wood, D. D., ex-President of Bowdoin College. Hon. E. G. Rawson of Bangor, Gov. Bowie of Maryland, Hon. Preston King and Judges W. W. Campbell and Rufus W. Peckham of New York, the latter of whom was lost in the steam-ship Ville de Harve. Adopting the law as his profession, he was admitted to the bar in 1830. Entering upon active life at a period of high political excitement and inheriting an ardent temperament from his patriotic ancestors, he zealously espoused the cause of Gen. Jackson, and in 1827, before he became a voter, organized in his native town the first Jackson Club in Maine. In 1831 he was chosen Assistant Secretary of the Maine Senate. From 1833 to 1838 he represented Buckfield in the Legislature, and in 1838 he was elected to fill the vacancy in the XXV Congress occasioned by the death of Hon. Timothy J. Carter of Paris, and in 1839 was re-elected. In 1842 and 1843 he served as State Senator from Oxford county, and in the latter year, when Edward Kavanagh became, by the death of Governor Fairfield, Acting Governor of the State, Mr. Parris was chosen his successor as President of the Senate. In 1844 he was appointed by President Tyler, United States Marshal for the District of Maine, which position he held during the administration of President Polk till 1849. In 1853 President Pierce appointed him Special Mail Agent for New England, and in 1856 he was appointed Naval Store-keeper at the Kittery navy yard. With the inauguration of President Lincoln, Mr. Parris retired from office, although he still continued to take an active part in politics until precluded by disease. Mr. Paris had a decided taste for scientific pursuits. He was interested in all branches of natural history and was a collector of antiquities; but he took especial pleasure in astronomy and numismatics. To the latter subject he was a devotee and possessed one of the finest collections of coins in the country, which he took much pride in exhibiting.

Mr. Parris was a man of iron will, with great energy of character ; his integrity was unquestioned, his impulses were generous, most genial in his companionship. As a man, a citizen and a friend, he was esteemed the most by the those who knew him best. Before stricken with disease he possessed great physical vigor, strength and activity. He married in 1833, Miss Columbia, daughter of Capt. Samuel and Polla (Freeland) Rawson, who survives at this time (1884). He died in Paris, where he had resided quite a number of years, Saturday morning, June 13, 1874. Mr. Parris did not resume the practice of law after retiring from politics. He was one of the originators and prime movers in building the Buckfield railroad, and was interested in all the projects for the advancement of his native town and county.

EDWARD L. PARRIS.

Edward Loudon Parris is the son of Virgil D. and Columbia (Rawson) Parris and was born in Buckfield, September 3, 1837. He came to Paris with his parents and spent several years here. He graduated at Union College, Schenectady, New York, studied law, and, having been admitted to the bar, settled in the practice in New York City, where he has been very successful. He is now holding the important office of Assistant District Attorney for the City and County of New York.

HENRY R. PARSONS.

He was born in New Gloucester in September, 1794, and died at South Paris, October 3, 1874. His ancestors were from Gloucester, Mass. In 1813 he came to Paris and ever after resided here ; after that time up to his decease, he was largely identified with the history of the town and a prominent actor in most of the important business enterprises therein. He was an earnest advocate of the cause of temperance and secretary of the first temperance society in Paris, which was organized in 1832, and an ardent supporter of any step which, in his view, tended to improve the morals or ameliorate the condition of his fellow-men. Although never seeking political preferment for himself, he took a deep interest in the great political questions that agitated and divided the country, and was ever solicitous for the success of that party to which his convictions of right and justice caused him to ally himself. He held many offices of trust in the town and was always regarded by his fellow-citizens as one eminently qualified to advise and manage in difficult affairs. His proverbial honesty and strict integrity of character gained for him the respect and confidence of his associates. He was married in 1814 to Miss Betsey Gross of New Gloucester, with whom he lived for more than 57 years. They raised a large family of children, of whom seven were then living. The three sons are prominent business men in the west; and of his daughters, one, Mrs. Hewett, resided with her father, one was the wife of Dea. Elisha Morse of South Paris, one resided at North Yarmouth and one at the West. Col. Parsons, at the time of his death, was almost the only living representative of those who were prominent in the early history of the town, and by his death almost the last link was broken that connected the town with that early period.

SIDNEY PERHAM.

Hon. Sidney Perham first came to this town from Woodstock as Clerk of the Courts, to which position he was elected in 1859. But his ancestors were connected with the early settlement of the town, his grandfather, Lemuel Perham, Jr., being upon the Center lot on Paris Hill in 1791. Lemuel Perham, Jr., came to Paris from Upton, Mass., where his father had kept a public house for more than forty years, and where his grandfather, Benjamin Perham, also resided. Benjamin Perham was the son of John, of Chelmsford, Mass., and grandson of John the emigrant, who settled in Chelmsford in 1664, and that year married Sarah Shepley. The father of Sidney Perham was Joel, who was born on the Center lot, now occupied by Col. C. H. Ripley, March 31, 1797, and whose wife, Sophronia Bisbee, was born at South Paris, April 1, 1801. When twelve years of age, Joel Perham moved with his father's family to Woodstock, where he after resided and where Sidney was born March 17, 1819. Sidney Perham was brought up on a farm, and, on becoming of age, he purchased the homestead of his father, where he continued to reside until his removal to Paris to fill the position as above stated. He was re-elected to the same position, but before the close of his second term he received the nomination of Member of Congress for the Second Maine Congressional District, and he was elected. He was re-elected twice to the same position, his service covering a large portion of the period of our civil war. In 1871, he was elected Governor of Maine and was re-elected twice. While living in Woodstock he was elected a member of the Maine

Hon. Sidney Perham.

Legislature in 1855, and was chosen Speaker. He had previously been much in town office and was well versed in public affairs. After his third term as governor had expired, he was in private life until the appointment of Hon. Lot M. Morrill as Collector of the port of Portland, when, on his recommendation, Governor Perham was appointed Appraiser of Merchandise for the same port, which position he still holds. In all the public positions he has filled, he has enjoyed the fullest confidence of his fellow-citizens. He early enlisted in the cause of temperance, and no citizen of the State has done more good, honest, square temperance work than he. He began to lecture on the subject when a minor, and there are few places in the State where his voice has not been heard. He has belonged to the leading temperance organizations in the State, and been at the head of two of them. He has been President of the Trustees of the Maine Industrial School for Girls since the School was founded, and has also served for several years as President of the Trustees of Westbrook Seminary. He married Almena J., daughter of Lazarus and Lucy (Cole) Hathaway of Paris, and has had five children, four of whom are living. He was President of the Directors of the Paris Hill Manufacturing Company, and has served as a Director of the Norway National Bank. His attachment to his early vocation, that of agriculture, is still strong, and he has frequently been called upon to address the farmers at their annual festivals, which he has always been able to do to great acceptance. For several years, while engaged in farming in summer, he taught schools in winter, and always with marked success. His life has been busy and his occupations varied, but he is still vigorous, and, to all appearance, years of usefulness are yet before him.

HENRY E. PRENTISS.

Henry E. Prentiss, son of Henry and Mary (Hart) Prentiss of Paris, graduated at West Point, the fourth in his class, in 1831, and was Assistant Teacher of Mathematics in the Military Academy for two subsequent years. He was then commissioned and sent with troops to Fort Morgan, Alabama. Being commissioned in the artillery instead of the engineers, he, in 1835, resigned his commission and commenced the study of law with Messrs. Kent and Cutting of Bangor. In 1836 he formed a co-partnership with Hon. Israel Washburn, Jr., at Orono, and in 1837 opened an office in Bangor, where he remained for several years and until he engaged largely in land and lumber operations, which proved more lucrative and congenial than the practice of law. Possessing engineering skill, energy and great physical endurance, he became familiar with all the timber lands of the State from actual observation, and was thus enabled to purchase understandingly. He was connected with many large lumbering operations and was for many years Clerk of the Penobscot Boom Company. He amassed a comfortable fortune. He was a strict temperance man, and upon the temperance issue he was elected Mayor of Bangor in 1870 and the year following. In 1858 and 1859 he was a member of the State Legislature and among the ablest in that body. He was public spirited and a friend to education. He donated no less than four public libraries and left funds to support them, one of which was to his native school district in Paris. He was a man of culture and refinement, fond of literature and very agreeable in conversation. Though possessed of abundant means, he was ever a plain man, never exalting himself, and ever living an honest, frugal and industrious life. He married Abigail A., daughter of Samuel Rawson of Paris, September 30, 1836, who survives him. Mr. Prentiss, after retiring from active business, made an extended European voyage, accompanied by his wife and children, which he enjoyed very much. He died July 1, 1873.

SARAH J. PRENTISS.

She was the daughter of Henry Prentiss and was born in Paris in 1823. She was a lady of literary tastes and many accomplishments. She was not only a writer, but an artist as well, and many of her landscape sketches done in oil have been greatly admired. Many of the productions of her pen, both in prose and poetry, have found their way into print. During the war of the Rebellion, when nurses were wanted to take charge of the loyal sick in Southern hospitals, Miss Prentiss volunteered her services, and was there until near the close of the war. After her return from the South with impaired health, she went to Europe and was absent three years. She returned with health still more impaired, and finally she was obliged to give up her home in Paris and go to live with her brother in Bangor. She died Oct. 21, 1877, aged 54 years. She is gratefully remembered by many wounded and sick Maine soldiers who were fortunate enough to come under her kind care during her hospital service. She attributed her impaired health and early death to malaria contracted while in the Southern hospitals. She was kind-hearted, a friend to the poor, and the benefactor of many families in her native town who will ever remember her with gratitude.

Henry E. Prutts

AMBROSE K. SHURTLEFF.

Ambrose K. Shurtleff, son of Alva Shurtleff, was born in Paris, August 12, 1815. In 1829 he went to Portland and into the employment of Eleazer McKenney, and afterwards was book-keeper for Abner Shaw, also a native of Paris. About the year 1834, he formed a co-partnership with John G. Warren, under the firm name of Shurtleff & Warren, and for the next eight years carried on a wholesale grocery business. At that time a new firm was formed, Mr. Warren retiring and Mr. Charles Leach taking his place, which continued for a few years, when Mr. Leach went out and Mr. Shurtleff carried on the business alone until 1860, when he retired from active mercantile business on a competency. He was for many years a Director in the National Traders' Bank and for fifteen years its President. He was for several years a member of the Portland City Government, a Director of the Portland and Rochester Railway, Trustee of the Maine Savings Bank and Vice President of the Board of Trade. He married Lorenda, daughter of the late Seth Curtis of Paris, whose death preceded his by several years. He died in Portland, January 3, 1880. He left no children, and his estate, after liberal bequests to several Portland charitable institutions, was left to his brothers and other near kindred.

GEORGE K. SHAW.

Rev. George K. Shaw was born in this town June 1, 1805. He graduated at Gorham Academy, and at eighteen years of age he began to teach in the public schools in Cumberland and York counties. While engaged in teaching he pursued theological studies and occasionally preached. In 1838 he took charge of the Universalist society of Dixfield. Here he labored as pastor and preacher for eight years. Feeling the need of a larger income, he accepted the position of Register of Probate of Oxford county. In 1846 he removed to Paris Hill. The labors of the ministry he continued to perform, preaching in several towns in Oxford county. During his residence in Paris he gave a large number of addresses on education and temperance, and for two years edited a monthly religious periodical, and was political editor of the Norway Advertiser. In the summer and autumn of 1855 he resided in Alfred and wrote the editorials of the Maine Democrat, which was then published in Saco by Alpheus Hanscomb. Late in the autumn he received an appointment as Clerk in the Interior Department at Washington. This position was held for about six years. In 1874 he obtained a place in the General Post Office Department in Washington. During his fourteen years residence in that city he was a regular editorial contributor to democratic newspapers. He moved to Biddeford in July of 1869, and assumed the editorial management of the Maine Democrat, then published in Biddeford by the Watson Brothers. He continued to edit the paper till it became financially embarrassed. After its change to the State Democrat and removal to Saco, he was a regular contributor to its editorial columns. Socially, Mr. Shaw was a genial and pleasant gentleman. For several years prior to his death, his health was poor. He kept about till within a few weeks of his death, when he took his bed. His sufferings were at times intense, but he was sustained by a strong and clear Christian faith. He died in Biddeford.

EATON SHAW.

Eaton Shaw was the son of Gilbert and Silence (Cole) Shaw, and was born in Paris in 1803. At the age of 17 years he became quite successful as a teacher in the public schools, and soon after studied architecture in Boston. After remaining in Boston six years he removed to Portland, at which time he gave up the study of architecture and studied for the ministry. For many years he was an effective and popular preacher in the Methodist church. He originated the Congress street Methodist church in Portland, and was its first preacher. His health had been injured by study in the beginning of his ministry, and in 1852 he was compelled to retire permanently from the pulpit. He was for several years State Liquor Agent. He was married in 1828 to Miss Mary Roberts of Portland and had a family of three sons and five daughters. All of his sons served in the Union army in the war of the rebellion. Mr. Shaw died at his home in Portland, August 9, 1884.

RUFUS S. STEVENS.

Among the successful businessmen of Paris, who began at the foot of the ladder and worked their way up, was Rufus S. Stevens. He was the son of Simon and Naney (French) Stevens, and grandson of Dr. Cyprian, our first settled physician. He was born October 21, 1821; attended school and worked upon the farm in his youth and entered a store on the Hill as clerk when he came to his majority. He was in trade at the Hill in partnership and alone, and in company at South Paris. He was a shrewd business man and rapidly accumulated property. He was also an active politician and served a term in the House of Representatives in 1855, and in the Senate in 1864. He was an earnest worker in the cause of temperance and identified with the leading temperance organizations in town. Soon after the close of the war he moved to Minneapolis and went into business there, but died a few years later. He married Sarah, daughter of Deacon Elisha Morse of South Paris, who survives him.

DAVID P. STOWELL.

David Porter Stowell was the son of Elias and Polly (Barnard) Stowell, and was born in Paris, October 22, 1816. He was the youngest of ten children. He received an academical education, studied law, and, on being admitted to the bar, settled in Dixfield and afterwards in Canton. He entered the volunteer service October 31, 1861, as major of the First Maine Cavalry, and was discharged for disability in 1863. He was a man of fine physique, over six feet in height and well proportioned. After his return from the army he again went into practice at Canton, but his health was permanently impaired by the exposures incident to the service, and he continued to fail until death came to his relief, July 26, 1884. Major Stowell was a kind-hearted, genial and companionable man and a general favorite. He married Miss Sophronia, daughter of Capt. Isaac N. Stanley of Dixfield.

AUGUSTUS S. THAYER.

Dr. Augustus S. Thayer is the son of America and Caroline (Prentiss) Thayer, and was born in Paris, March 18, 1835. He attended the town schools, also at Paris Hill Academy and at Gould's Academy in Bethel. He studied medicine, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, March 12, 1864, and commenced practice in Portland the May following. He has been very successful in the practice of medicine and has worked up a large and profitable business, although the competition has always been sharp and the profession in Portland largely represented by older physicians. He was appointed physician on the staff of the Maine General Hospital at its opening in October, 1874, and teacher of Theory and Practice in the Portland School for Medical Instruction, in the spring of 1881. Dr. Thayer was married January 1st, 1867, to Mary, daughter of Jarvis C. Marble of Paris, who died after a few years; and for his second wife he married Annie L. Soule of Groveton, N. H.

HENRY O. THAYER.

Rev. Henry O. Thayer, second child of Ziba and Almira (Fobes) Thayer, was born at South Paris, December 2, 1832. He graduated at Bowdoin College in the class of 1862, and taught successively in Yarmouth and Limerick academies nearly a year after graduation, and then entered upon a course of theology, graduating from the Bangor Institution in 1865. He was ordained in 1866, had settlements in Solon and Bingham, and in 1867 he settled at Woolwich, where he yet remains. Besides successful work in the ministry, he has given much time to investigations into the history of the early settlements on the lower Kennebec, and has furnished several valuable articles to the press. He is a member of the Maine Historical Society and an active worker in the field of local history. He was married November 7, 1865, to Miss Sarah E. Hewitt, and has several children.

WARREN H. VINTON.

Hon. Warren Howard Vinton was born in this town in 1825. His family name was Besse, but when he became of age he changed his own to Vinton. He was educated in the common schools and at Hebron and other academies, studied the profession of law and settled in Gray. He is a fluent and interesting speaker, and able in debate. He has been much in office, having served as Supervisor of Schools and Selectman in Gray; Commissioner on the publication of the Revised Statutes of 1857; Trustee of the Reform School; member of the House of Representatives in 1857 and 1873, and of the Senate in 1854, 1862, 1877 and 1878, the last term as President. In his legislative experience he has taken part in many stormy debates and has always acquitted himself to the satisfaction of his friends.

CHAPTER XLVII.

PARIS VILLAGES.

PARIS HILL.

“Beautiful for situation,” in borrowed phrase from the psalmist; “Grand for observation,” in the language of the tourist, are terms briefly descriptive of the village of Paris Hill. Yet to no other village in Maine can they so truthfully be applied. Situated as this village is, at an altitude of 831 feet above the sea level—the highest but one in the State—its extended views at once attract the notice of the traveler. Henry Tudor, Barrister at Law, in his Tour of North America, published in London in 1834, says that “Paris Hill is a place as little resembling its original as a cottage does a palace; at the same time it may be said that to the extent in which it falls short of its great prototype as to architectural beauty, does it exceed it in the beauties of nature, being surrounded by a circle of mountains of the most imposing and romantic features.” It is not unfitting that we scan the broad stretch of horizon and the conspicuous land-marks so familiar to every resident, although

The Ossipee is noticed first to the southward in the western line of mountains; then the whole ridge of Mount Pleasant attracts the attention, and next, though farther in the distance, Chocoma may be seen. Whiteface, Passaconaway, Trypyramid and Moat are outlined against the horizon. Then Kiersarge, like some bold sentinel, stands out alone, as watch and ward, while next, as we sweep northward, are Carrigain, Double-Head, Giant's Stairs, and Bold-Face. Then the White Mountain group, or Presidential range, among which “the eye catches the rounded swell of Madison, the sharp spurs of Adams, Jefferson and Clay, and then the supreme head of Washington.” Carter appears in the foreground, and further to the north the Moriah range: then Barker's, Lincoln Peak*, Saddleback, and Puzzle, which is last in the broad sweep of vision.

The village of Paris Hill is chiefly built on lot 13, in the fifth range, the southern line of the lot being on Lincoln street and the northern line passing between the residences of Mrs. Arabella Carter and Samuel R. Carter. This was one of four lots in the draught No. 9, that fell to Ezekiel Whitney, the original grantee, and remained in his possession until Nov. 13, 1793, when it was sold by a committee of the proprietors, for delinquent taxes, to Isaac Jackson. The two county roads had been located the May previous, crossing this lot—one from Gray meeting-house passing over Paris Hill to the center lot, as referred to elsewhere; the other passing diagonally across the town, from south-east to north-west. So much of the last named road as was laid across lot 13, was discontinued. The record of its location is as follows: "From a point opposite Benjamin Hammond's barn, thence north 40 deg., west 249 rods; thence south 89 deg., west 53 rods to the center of the road, intersecting said road near the barn of Lemuel Jackson, Jr." The course of this road from Benjamin Hammond's to the south line of lot 13 was changed, and from the point near the residence of Hiram Jackson the road was laid out on the lot line, and is now known as Lincoln street. At the time of the location of these roads, Lemuel Jackson, Sr., was living on "Granny Jackson Hill," on lot 14, and Lemuel, Jr., in the house now the residence of Mrs. Carter. Isaac Jackson may or may not have occupied a log house near by, for no record points to a local habitation. Levi Jackson was settled on the lot west of Lemuel, Sr., now known as the Goodenow farm, and his brother-in-law, John Willis, on the lot north. The lot east of lot No. 13, being lot 13 in the sixth range, has been claimed as constituting part of the "kettle purchase." It was in draught 42, and was in the right of Ephraim Burrage. This was deeded to Joshua Fuller, July 10, 1772, and by him to Lemuel Jackson, Sr., January 19, 1781. The Jacksons and Willisses had owned the land on all sides of lot 13, in the fifth range, for a dozen years or more, and it is a matter of some surprise that it remained so long intact.

Isaac Jackson purchased of his father, lot 13, in the sixth range, April 22, 1794, thus extending his land from John Willis' on the west to Asa Perry's on the east. This he continued to hold until July 1, 1802, when he deeded to Nathan Woodbury one-half an acre on "Jackson's Hill," being sixteen rods on the road and five rods back, for $20.00. In September following, he sold the two above named lots to Jonathan Cummings, reserving one-half acre of land to accommodate Mr. Nathan Woodbury, being sixteen rods on the road and five wide, westerly of the county road and being on lot 13 in the fifth range, his store standing in the center of the half-acre on this road. Also three-fourths of an acre on said lot 13, "where the dead are now buried," "provided, the said Jonathan Cummings, his heirs, and executors, pay the said Isaac Jackson two thousand dollars on or before April 1, next, and one thousand six hundred in three years from the first day of April next, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and six, with lawful interest." The mortgage was discharged February 20, 1806. For over twenty years, therefore, it had remained, virtually, "Jackson's Hill." April 6, 1803, Jonathan Cummings deeded the Meeting-house Common to the building committee of the Baptist church. On the sale of the pews the committee gave deeds, including joint ownership in the land to purchasers, February 16, 1804, and the ownership of the Common is still vested in the pew-holders of the Baptist church. The balance of Jonathan Cummings' purchase then passed into the hands of his father, Jesse Cummings, on March 12, 1804, and to him hereafter are traced the title deeds of the greater portion of Paris Hill. The County Common, on which the court house, jail, county office building, and the jailer's residence were located, was deeded by Jesse Cummings to the county, October 8, 1805, for the consideration of one dollar. May 20, 1813, it was widened four rods on the street, by a deed from Jonathan Bemis, the stable standing thereon being removed to the rear of the Bemis buildings. The Nathan Woodbury stand referred to in the above deeds, was built by Woodbury. This stand, lot and store, together with three other lots of land, he sold to Daniel Hanney for $4,200, April 27, 1804.

The stand and store was set off on execution to Thomas F Chase, who sold the same to Jonathan Bemis, Aug. 14, 1806, for $500.00, who opened the first tavern in the place. The Bemis store was built by James and Francis Bemis. It has been materially improved, and is now owned and occupied by Stephen D Hutchinson and Edwin Newell. The Nathan Woodbury store that stood in the center of the lot, was moved to Lincoln street, and was long the residence of Tanner Hutchins. One-half of the main house—doubtless the addition erected by Jonathan Bemis—has been removed and located on a lot next south of the residence of Elbridge Fobes, and is now owned and occupied by Joseph Cole. The Bemis stand is now owned and occupied by George W. Cole, Jr. From the corner of this lot, Frank Bemis sold the site on which the Universalist Church was erected.

Dr. Cyrus Hamlin purchased the tract on which he built his homestead, Nov. 4, 1806, for $450.00. This sale included all the land south of the County Common, being twelve rods and twenty links in width, between the Common and the farm of Lemuel Jackson on the south, and extending from the County road on the east, to the lot line on the west—31 rods;—also all the land west of the County Common and the Meeting-house Common, to within five rods of the northwest corner, containing seven acres. Some of the noble elms that now ornament the grounds were planted by Vice-President Hamlin in his early boyhood. This stand remained in possession of the family until 1860, when it was purchased by William Chase, Esq., who improved the grounds and buildings.

Dec. 10, 1811, Dr. Hamlin sold the store lot, about five rods on the County road and six rods on the County Common, for $75.00, to Increase Robinson and William Cox, of Norway, traders, one undivided half, and also to Thomas Crocker of Paris Hill, the other undivided half part. They at once erected the store and opened trade, under the firm name of Cox & Robinson. April 16, 1818, Cox & Robinson deeded their undivided half to Thomas Crocker, who was then occupying it. This store was burned at the time Emery's stable was burned; Moses Hammond's shop and the hotel stable were also destroyed. It was rebuilt and occupied as a store for many years. It finally passed into the hands of Sampson Andrews, who sold the building to Benjamin S. Doe, who removed it to its present location,—now the residence of Jacob Daniels.

The lot on which Hon. Stephen Emery erected his stand, he purchased of Thomas Crocker, being the west end of the store lot. July 1, 1818—"beginning at a poplar tree, which is the first in a row of poplars on the southern line of the County Common, this tree being twelve feet from the corner of Crocker's store," &c. The elms that now add so much to this homestead, were planted by Hon. Stephen Emery. Sampson Andrews became the purchaser and incorporated all the land into his house-lot, and otherwise improved it. This place is now owned and occupied by his widow.

The lot on which Moses Hammond built his house was purchased of Dr. Hamlin, November 3, 1815. It was south of the County Common. The homestead is still owned and occupied by his heirs.

Isaiah Fuller purchased the lot, afterwards the Mellen homestead, of Dr. Hamlin, and built part of the house. He then sold it to Enoch Burnham, clock-maker. This lot was the balance of the Hamlin lot lying between the lot sold Robinson & Company and the line of Lemuel Jackson's farm, and extends west to the lot line. Burnham built his shop on the south-east corner of the lot, next to the road on the south line. November 4, 1815, he sold the opposite corner, next to the lot of Robinson & Company, to Moses Hammond, for a shop. It was three rods and four links on the county road, and contained one-eighth of an acre. It is the site of the Oxford Democrat and Post Office, owned by Geo. H. Watkins. February 12, 1816, Burnham sold to Nathaniel W. Greene, for $650, who conveyed the same to Dr. Asaph Kittredge, June 5, 1818. Alanson Mellen became the purchaser and occupied it through life. It subsequently passed into the hands of his son, Charles T. Mellen, who has made extensive repairs and improvements.

THE HAMLIN HOMESTEAD, PARIS HILL.

The first lot Jesse Cummings sold on the east side of the County road, was conveyed to Levi and Russell Hubbard, Dec. 31, 1806. It was ten rods on the road and eight rods back. The store had been built previously, and stood next to the north line of the lot. The Hubbard house was built in 1807, and "Hubbard's Hall," in the second story, was occupied by the Masons Nov. 12, 1807. Nov. 22, 1808, an addition was made to the lot on the south end. After the decease of Russell Hubbard it came into the possession of his son, Hiram Hubbard, who made extensive repairs and additions, and opened it as a public house.

Jacob Daniels, cordwainer, purchased the lot next the Hubbard stand Feb. 8, 1808, and built a house containing two rooms and a porch. This lot was five rods on the road and eight rods back. After the decease of Daniels, it was occupied by Gov. Albion K. Parris, and afterwards by Thomas Clark, Esq. While Gov. Parris occupied the house he built the little office on the corner of the Hubbard lot, which was afterwards occupied by Gov. Lincoln, and by Judge J. G. Cole, who owned it at the time of his death. It afterwards passed into the possession of Samuel R. Carter, the present owner. Nathan M. Marble purchased the stand of the Daniels heirs, enlarged it and opened it as the "Union House." It subsequently came into the possession of Horace Cummings by exchange, who enlarged it to its present state, and continues it as a hotel. On this lot was located the first school-house, with the understanding that the school-house lot should be given to the district. The committee neglected to take a deed, and after the purchase of the land by "Charles Dean, Physician," April 13, 1803, the school-house was removed to the site of the present house, Lemuel Jackson giving the lot. Dr. Dean's purchase was an acre for $150—eight rods on the county road and twenty rods on Lincoln street. May 20, 1808, he conveyed the lot to Jonathan Bemis for $350. Bemis sold the corner—four rods by ten—to Thomas Crocker, who built the brick house and out-buildings, which still remain in the family.

The north half-acre was sold to Solomon Hall, April 20, 1816, for $200, who built thereon the old Stage House. He worked for Lemuel Jackson and married Susan Cole, a daughter of the second wife of Lemuel Jackson by her first husband. On April 15, 1817, he sold the stand to Thomas Crocker for $1,000, who opened it—the second tavern on the Hill. Zachariah Stephens came here in 1829 and occupied it for the same purpose a few years. Simeon Norris then bought it and put on the addition since cut off to make Gov. Perham's house, kept it some years, when it again went into the hands of Mr. Crocker, who rented it to G. G. Waterhouse.

Simeon Cummings, Sr., bought of his father the lot between the Stage House and Union House, and for many years carried on the potash business here. He sold to Asa Robinson, who removed to it the present house from the spot where it was first built by Benjamin Hammond opposite H. E. Hammond's dwelling. It was purchased by Stephen D. Hutchinson, and is still owned and occupied by him.

The Job Rawson stand is on the site of the old printing office, which was built by Geo. W. Millett and soon after burned. This lot was originally partly included in the potash lot and partly in the acre purchase.

The Gov. Perham Stand is located on the site of the old tan-yard and was included in the acre purchase. The house was the addition built to the Stage House, and after the tannery buildings were destroyed by fire, it was moved to its present location and repaired and out-buildings erected. It was purchased by Gov. Perham when he came to the Hill, and is still owned and occupied by him.

The site on which the Hutchins house is located is the east end of the Dr. Dean purchase, which became the property of Jonathan Bemis in May, 1808. It has been called the Old Bemis Store. At least, Jonathan Bemis moved it from the lot he purchased of Nathan Woodbury. If it was the Woodbury store, it was built between July 1, 1802, and the September following. It was long the residence of Tanner Hutchins.

Isaiah Fuller, carpenter, purchased a lot of one acre of Jesse Cummings, April 17, 1810. It adjoined the Dean purchase and was the second lot sold on the north side of Lincoln street. Fuller built on it a small house and sold the same to Dr. Benjamin Chandler, who built the present ell and stable, just before he died in 1827. Judge Cole then became the purchaser. He took down the front—a square hip-roofed house—and erected the commodious dwelling which he occupied through life. It is now in the possession of the heirs.

The next acre, east of the Cole homestead, was purchased by Rufus K. Goodenow, Jan. 1, 1825, and by him sold to Dea. Joel B. Thayer, who built the buildings thereon. He sold to Alden Chase, who occupied it during his three terms of office as Register of Deeds, and sold it to his successor in that office, Sumner R. Newell. It is now owned by his heirs.

The next acre east was purchased by Nathan Ryerson, Oct. 24, 1825, who built a small house thereon. He sold to Dr. Asaph Kittredge, who enlarged the house and occupied it until his removal to Connecticut. His back field adjoining was a subsequent purchase. It passed into the hands of Cyrus Perkins, who occupied it through life. His family remain the occupants.

Francis Bemis purchased the next lot, being one-half an acre, for a potash. Hiram Hubbard became the owner and built on the west end of the lot, the house he since sold to S. D. Weeks. Hubbard took down the potash, and removed the building known as the John Merrill shop, to the premises, and finished it into a dwelling-house, which he sold to Josiah S. Hobbs. Elmer H. Marble became the owner and when occupied by him it was destroyed by fire March 7, 1880. This was originally the corn-barn of Dr. Hamlin and stood near the jail. The house of S. D. Weeks, after his decease, was purchased by Wm. T. Perkins, who removed it to the south side of the street, and the half-acre lot went into the hands of J. C. Marble, who erected thereon, for his son, one of the most attractive residences in the village.

The Harlow stand stood on the lot the next easterly of the potash lot. It was purchased by Isaac Harlow in 1834, of Jonathan Cummings. All lots on the street, heretofore sold, had been deeded by Jesse Cummings. Harlow built the house which he occupied until his removal to Boston, Mass. Stephen Emery became the purchaser, who extended the grounds and improved the buildings for a residence for his son-in-law, Rev. Nathaniel Butler. G. B. Crockett became the owner, who subsequently raised the main house to two stories. The fine shade trees that ornament the grounds were planted by Judge Emery. The corner lot was purchased by Emerson Colburn, who built a house thereon, but afterwards moved it to the site of his father's residence. The lot is now owned by Mrs. Angeline Mason, buildings having been erected on the same.

The buildings on Beech Hill were erected by Horace Cummings, on land deeded to him by his father. He occupied the farm until its exchange with Nathan M. Marble for the Union House. Joseph Holt became the purchaser, who occupied it until his decease. The present owner is Mr. A. S. Austin, Clerk of Courts.

The settlement on the north line of the Common may be traced as follows :

The Simeon Cummings, Jr., lot was nine rods on the Common and six on the county road, and was conveyed by Jesse Cummings to his son, Simeon, June 11, 1807. He soon erected a store upon it, in which he traded until his decease. This was converted into a dwelling and was occupied by Simeon, Jr. After his decease his widow refinished it and occupied it through life. It is still in the possession of her heirs.

August 10, 1815, Simeon Cummings, Sr., sold a lot 18 by 20 feet, off the north-east corner of his lot, to Moses Perry, on which he built a shop for the manufacture of hats. This has been removed.

April 13, 1818, Simeon Cummings, Sr., bought of his father, Jesse, the land between the Hatter's shop and land sold to Jonas Cummings, and extending back on the line of the Common 21 rods. On this extension fronting the Common, he built his house. This was occupied by him through life, then by his widow. It afterwards passed into the hands of Job H. Rawson, who moved the barn from the western end of the lot to the opposite of the house, and otherwise improved the premises. He sold to Dea. Joel B. Thayer, who died there. It is now owned and occupied by his widow.

The Benjamin S. Doe stand is located on a portion of the lot which Jesse Cummings deeded to his son Simeon, Sept. 17, 1829, extending westward to the lot line. Benjamin S. Doe became the purchaser of this lot, on which he erected a two-story French-roofed house, this being his present homestead.

The Willis house, standing at the north-west corner of the Common, was built by Dea. John Willis on the lot he bought of Jesse Cummings, April 11, 1810. This was the balance of the land west of the Common, adjoining land before sold to Dr. Cyrus Hamlin. Dea. Willis, from his first settlement up to this time, had lived on his farm adjoining this purchase, on which his buildings stood. The site may still be seen. Previous to the location of the county road over the Hill, the travel was westward of the cemetery, passing by Willis' and coming out near Levi Jackson's, and thence by Dr. Stevens' and Elder Hooper's to the south of the town. After the decease of Dea. Willis, it passed into the hands of Levi Rawson, and is now owned jointly by John Garland and B. C. Rawson.

June 15, 1816, Jesse Cummings deeded to his son, Jonas, "Blacksmith," the lot on which he built the house now owned and occupied by his daughter, Calista. This lot contains one and one half acres.

The residence of the late Hon. V. D. Parris is the lot purchased by George Ryerson, May 20, 1818. It was next the north line of the town lot No. 13, and was six rods on the road and eight back. He built the house. It passed into the hands of Alfred Andrews April 4, 1829, with an additional strip of two rods and six feet, who occupied it until he sold to Hon. V. D. Parris, who resided here through life. It yet remains in the possession of the family.

April 4, 1829, George Ryerson purchased of Jesse Cummings a lot next south of the strip sold to Alfred Andrews of the same date. This was six rods and fourteen links on the road, and cost forty-one dollars. He built the house now owned and occupied by the widow of John Demming, and known as the Demming stand.

Jerathmel Colburn purchased a lot of Jonas Cummings, he having been deeded by his father, Jesse, April 17, 1832, "all the land, remaining unsold, on the west side of the County road." The house which Colburn built gave place to the house moved from the corner of Lincoln and Tremont streets, by his son, Emerson. Father and son have both deceased and the property is now in the possession of Emerson's widow.

Jonas Cummings deeded the Asa Woodbury place, it being next north of his homestead, to his son, Col. Simon H., who built the stand thereon, and occupied it until his decease. The blacksmith-shop was used by him for a carriage-shop. The stand is now owned and occupied by Asa Woodbury.

The Hilborn stand was built by Col. Simon H. Cummings, on part of his lot, and sold to Thomas J. Hilborn, who still remains in possession.

The balance of estate titles on the east side of the County road may be traced as follows :

As heretofore stated, lot 13, came into the possession of Isaac Jackson, Nov. 13, 1793, at which time no improvements had been made on this hundred acres, except the opening of roads. At this time mills had been built, so that the house that Isaac Jackson proceeded to build, although the first on this hundred acres, was comparatively a modern house. It is described as a long, narrow building, and stood on the road north of the well originally dug on the premises and now used by Elbridge Fobes. The township had already been incorporated. This house was occupied by Jackson until 1802, when it passed into the possession of Jonathan Cummings, who deeded it to his father, Jesse, in 1804, who occupied it until he had built the house now owned by Elbridge Fobes, since which time it has been torn down.

The Elbridge Fobes stand, as referred to above, was built by Jesse Cummings, and by him deeded to his daughter "Anna, single woman," April 30, 1827. It comprised the orchard, being about twenty-nine rods on the road and extending back about thirty rods. The southerly line was on the south line of the orchard, being five rods distant from the dwelling of Jonathan Cummings, afterwards known as "Tremont." He reserved the improvements during his natural life, and the life of his wife, Mary Cummings. After the decease of Anna this passed into the possession of Daroma Bates, who sold it to Elbridge Fobes, the present occupant.

May 6, 1820, Jonathan Cummings bought of his father, Jesse, the tract on which he built the "Tremont." It extended from the Nathaniel How lot, northerly, ten rods and ten feet, and fifteen rods back from the County road. This was occupied by him until the location of the new street, in 1855, when it was torn down.

The lot on which the old red store was built was purchased by Nathaniel How, "Attorney," of Jesse Cummings, Jan. 29, 1810. It passed into the hands of Joseph Rust, April 17, 1810, and afterward into the hands of George Ryerson. It has since been owned by Alfred Andrews, who moved it to the opposite corner of Tremont street, and has lately been known as the Bates store.

The Samuel R. Carter lot adjoins the north line of lot 13, and was deeded by Jesse Cummings to Amos Armsby, house-wright, March 10, 1812, who built the house now standing. He occupied it until 1815, when Dea. Joseph Lindsey, cabinet-maker, became the occupant. Rufus K. Goodenow became the purchaser May 2, 1825, and it was occupied by him until May 20, 1837, when he sold it to Levi Stowell, Esq. Through other hands it has passed into the possession of the present proprietor.

The Butterfield house-lot was purchased of Jesse Cummings by Rufus K. Goodenow. It has since been owned by Joseph H. King and others, and is now in the possession of the Benson family.

April 17, 1832, Jesse Cummings deeded to Jonas all of his remaining land easterly of the county road and northerly of the wall on the south side of the orchard. This came into the possession of his son Charles, who erected the buildings and occupied them until his decease. The place is now owned and occupied by his widow.

The Cushman stand was built by Charles Cummings, on part of his lot, and occupied by the heirs of Caleb Cushman. After the decease of the Widow Cushman, it was sold to Geo. W. Cook, who sold to Mrs. Charles Cummings. This completes the record of the sales of the estate that passed into the possession of Jonas Cummings.

The Benjamin Walton house-lot was purchased by Harrison Tuttle and fitted up as a dwelling for his mother. It came into the hands of Benjamin Walton, who occupied it during his life. It is now owned by E. I. Spofford, who occupies it.

At the same date that Jesse Cummings deeded to Jonas a portion of his estate, viz: April 17, 1832, he also deeded to his son Jonathan all the remaining land unsold south of the orchard wall and extending from the county road easterly to the Packard field. Jonathan deeded his share to Horace Cummings, who built the buildings on Beech Hill, as stated heretofore. Hiram Hubbard became the purchaser of a portion of this, and opened the street known as Tremont, through it.

We now come to Tremont street:

Mrs. Anna Brown's residence was built by Alfred Andrews and Benjamin F. Bates in 1853, and completed in 1854. After the decease of Alfred Andrews, Dec. 14, 1864, it was purchased by Geo.

L. Vose, who settled here in 1866. It is now owned and occupied by Mrs. Anna Brown.

The Chipman Stand was built by Hiram Hubbard and sold to Cyrus Chipman, May 13, 1858. He subsequently built his blacksmith-shop on the same premises and is still the resident proprietor.

The next lot on the same side of Tremont street, was bought by Geo. B. Shaw, who built the stand thereon. It is now owned by Mr. Proctor.

The Mrs. Hardy stand was built by Thomas M. Crocker. Since the decease of Mrs. Hardy it has passed into the hands of her heirs.

The Thomas M. Crocker stand was the carriage-shop of Simon H. Cummings, which was moved from his lot, and occupied by Thomas Chase until his decease.

The W. A. Barrows stand was the blacksmith-shop of Charles Perry and was moved by Hiram Hubbard and finished into a dwelling. W. A. Barrows is now the owner and occupant.

The Austin Partridge stand was built by Mr. Jackson and sold to Austin Partridge about 1871, and is now owned and occupied by him.

The Garland stand. The lot on which this stand was built was sold to Gilman Garland in 1862. It is now owned and occupied by George Garland.

The Hawks store-lot was purchased by Alfred Andrews, who removed the old red store, made it two-story and finished the upper story into a dwelling. It is now owned and occupied by S. U. Hawks, who continues trade in the store.

The Wm. K. Green stand was built by Benjamin F. Bates, on the lot he purchased of Hiram Hubbard, Aug. 23, 1854. Sarah J. Prentiss became the purchaser, who occupied it until her absence in Hospital service. After the close of the war she returned and made a trip to Europe. After her return, failing health compelled her to abandon her much prized home for a residence in Bangor. After her decease, the property was sold to Wm. K. Green, who is the present occupant and owner.

The York stand lot was purchased by Russell A. Cummings, in August, 1854, who fitted up a house for his parents. It is now occupied by S. L. York.

The next stand on the street was built by H. R. Hubbard, in 1882. It is now owned by James Andrews.

The J. Conwell stand was built by Hiram Hubbard and is now owned by J. Conwell, the occupant.

RESIDENCE OF MRS. ANNETTA CARTER PARIS HILL

The Stephen B. Rawson stand was built by Benjamin S. Doe, who sold to the present proprietor.

The Morton stand was built by Silas P. Maxim, in 1871. It was purchased by Henry F. Morton, who has improved the premises and is now the proprietor.

The Mrs. Carter stand was on lot No. 14, in the fifth range, and was in the right of Nathaniel Stone. Lemuel Jackson became the owner, and sold the lot to his son, Lemuel, Jr., March 9, 1787. It remained in his possession until Oct. 5, 1805, when he sold it, together with one-half of lot 14, in the fourth range, being west of the homestead farm and adjoining, for \$3,600. The portion of the burying-ground, heretofore deeded, was excepted in the sale, as also the point near the guide-board, containing $4\frac{3}{4}$ acres, which had been sold to Nathan Woodbury. The house, at the time of sale, had been standing fifteen years. The following description and reminiscence is furnished by Mrs. Carter :

“The house on the north side of Paris Hill, owned and occupied by Mrs. Arabella Carter, was built by Lemuel Jackson, Jr. The frame was raised in April, 1789, and the house was so nearly finished by the following fourth of July, that the first celebration of the anniversary ever held in this vicinity (then the County of York), was at this house on July fourth, A. D. 1789. Dr. Ebenezer Taylor was the orator, and the rostrum from which he spoke was a rum-hogshead placed on end in the door-yard. Dr. Taylor was a physician settled in what is now Buckfield. Mr. Jackson provided punch and dinner! Old and young, from all the settlements within the circuit of twenty miles, were present. The writer of this paper has entire and authentic certainty in relation to that celebration, has heard the doings of that festival related by eye-witnesses, who said that for earnest, zealous patriotism, it had never been surpassed by any celebration in later years, and likewise has entire proof that the house was built A. D. 1789. After Samuel Rawson built his brick house now the residence of Mrs. Frances F. Kimball, the old house was rented a number of years, thirty-five families having resided in it. There have been twelve births in it, and only one death, and that a young woman who was taken sick the day she arrived and died on the fifth day afterwards; and only one marriage, and that of a couple who never resided in the town, but came especially to have the ceremony performed. It has been declared by some of the Jackson family, and also by Mr. Job French, to have been the first frame house built in Paris, but this cannot be proved beyond a doubt. Mr. French worked on the house as an assistant to Mr. Bryant, the carpenter and builder. All the panneling, made ninety years ago, has been preserved and remains the chief ornament of the old house. It has been the birth-place of three generations—mother, son and grandson. Probably there are few houses in Paris with a history so unique.”

The Rawson homestead was built by Capt. Samuel Rawson and still remains in the possession of his heirs. The engraving accompanying this sketch shows it to be one of the most attractive residences in town.

The portion of Paris Hill south of the line of Lincoln street, is on lot 12 in the 5th range, which was included in the right of Edmund Barnard. It came into the possession of Lemuel Jackson, senior, as also lot 11 in the 5th range, which was in the right of William Dana. Previous to the sale of lot 13, in 1802, the Jacksons held the four lots extending from the farm of Frank Twitchell on the south, to the farm of Capt. Cyrus H. Ripley on the north. A portion of these two lots remained in his possession until his decease. The Jackson house, which was built by Lemuel, stood south of the old county road of 1793, and near the well which is now under the corner of the piazza built by J. K. Hammond. The old house was taken down in 1853, and portions of the timber used in the construction of the new house. The barn stood on the opposite side of the road, and was standing at the time of the location of the road in 1793. It became historical, on account of the ordination services of Elder Hooper being held within its walls. One end of the barn is now the stable, on the premises of the late James T. Clark.

The Dr. Brown lot appears to have been the first sale made by Lemuel Jackson to Lemuel, Jr., in which he deeded, Oct. 28, 1806, “two acres on lot 12, in ye 5th range, beginning on ye easterly side of ye county road where ye town road comes into it on ye corner near to ye schoolhouse.” &c., on which he erected the house which he occupied until his decease in 1816. It then came into the possession of his son Jacob, June 3, 1818, who occupied it for many years. It then passed into the hands of Dr. Thomas H. Brown. With this house is associated the destruction of the parchment plan of the town, giving the draft of lots, and number of rights of each grantee. By Lemuel Jackson, senior, it was christened the "Colt's-skin," and familiarly known as such, by the early settlers of the town. Some errors had crept in, doubtless, in the sale of lots and land-owners, who had trafficked largely in lands of the town, foresaw that litigation might arise as to ownership of lots, and in consultation at this house, decided to destroy the record. There were no witnesses, however, to its destruction, as the one that laid it behind the back-log in the old fireplace, was alone. This stand was struck by lightning and destroyed, July 21, 1878. The present buildings were erected the same season. It is still owned and occupied by the heirs of Dr. Brown.

January 7, 1815, Lemuel deeded to Jacob Jackson, blacksmith, a lot on the west side of the county road, next Enoch Burnham's shop, now the site of Mrs. Jairus A. Jackson's buildings. He erected a blacksmith shop thereon, and occupied it until his removal to High street.

The next lot to the blacksmith shop, on the west side of the county road, was occupied by Asa Barton, trader, who kept the Oxford county bookstore. The building was the corn barn of Dr. Hamlin, which had been moved to this lot. It was also the first printing office. It was afterward purchased by Calvin Crooker, who built an addition to it, and opened it as a tavern. His stable stood next on the street. This subsequently passed into the possession of John R. Merrill, and the store was used by him for a carriage shop. The porch, built by Crooker, was moved down on the new road, and became the Micah Allen house. After the decease of the owner, the shop was moved out on Lincoln street, as stated in another place.

The Academy or High School building, was erected on land purchased of Moses Hammond in 1856.

The Albert M. Hammond stand, now the residence of J. K. Hammond, was built by Moses Hammond for his son, A. M., who occupied it until he sold out to his brother.

The homestead buildings of Jairus K. Hammond, were built by him in the summer of 1853, near the site of the old Jackson house. It is now occupied by his son, Herbert Hammond.

The Alvah Black residence was built by Moses Hammond on his land, for his son-in-law, John Calvin Prince. It was purchased afterward, by Col. Charles Andrews, and the property conveyed to his wife, who still retains it in her possession. The "Anecdote" stood next this lot, and was occupied at one time by Charles Walton. It was bought by Benjamin Walton, and moved out on what has since become Tremont street, and was used by him for a jeweler's shop. Hannah Allen, a sister of Micah, lived here for some years. After her decease, it was moved farther along, and become part of the stand of George Garland.

"Mechanic's corner" also included the shoe shop of Alvah Shurtleff, the small store of E. C. Shaw, now part of the house of J. H. Rawson, and the shop of Mr. Wharf, the blacksmith.

The residence of the late James T. Clark, was built by Henry Howe. The stable is a part of the Jackson barn, memorable as associated with the ordination of Elder Hooper.

The Austin stand is now owned and occupied by Mrs. S. S. Giles. It was built by Alvah Shurtleff while he was a resident in this village.

The residence of Joseph Cummings was built by Edward Chase, who sold to B. W. Bryant, and after his decease, it passed into the hands of Chas. P. Knight, then of Fred E. Shaw, and then of the present occupant.

The present printing office was built by Moses Hammond for a shop, on the site of the one burned at the time the other buildings adjoining were burned. The shop that was burned was of the same size as the present building, and a part of it was used by him for a dwelling while he was building his house. The addition for a Post Office was built by J. K., and A. M. Hammond.

The parsonage lot was purchased of Jairus K. Hammond, by Henry Howe, who removed the "Pray house," and finished it for a dwelling. It passed into the hands of Thomas Crocker, who donated it to the Baptist society for a parsonage.

The Jacob Daniels stand (lot) was purchased by Benjamin S. Doe, who moved to this location, the Crocker store, as before stated, and finished it for a two tenement house. It passed into the hands of R. S. Stevens, by exchange, who sold to Jacob Daniels, the present owner.

October, 1821, Joseph Jackson deeded to Ransom Dunham, blacksmith, eight rods on Lincoln street, and ten rods back, on which he erected a house. His shop was built on the western part of the lot. He sold the premises, Nov. 22, 1823, to Benjamin F. Crawford, "Cordwainer," who occupied it until his removal to the north part of the town. Since it has passed into the possession of Thomas M. Crocker, its present owner, and has been refinished and improved.

The Jarvis C. Marble homestead is a part of the Jackson lot. The buildings have all been erected by Mr. Marble since the purchase.

The schoolhouse is located on land given by Lemuel Jackson. The old schoolhouse was moved from the Dr. Dean corner to this location, and afterward destroyed by fire. The brick house was built on its site.

The Orlando Thayer stand, was built by Jarvis C. Marble, and is one of the finest private residences in the county.

O. A. Maxim purchased the Francis Bemis orchard, and erected the buildings, now owned and occupied by him.

The Wm. I. Perkins lot, on which the stand is located, was purchased of Mrs. Brown. The house was moved from the opposite side of the street.

The lot of the George Shaw stand has passed through several hands since it was detached from the homestead farm. It was purchased of Horatio Austin by Geo. Shaw, who erected the buildings and is the present owner.

The following estates are outside the village limits, but are included within the boundaries of the school district:

The homestead of Henry E. Hammond was one of the four lots in the right of Thaddeus Trowbridge, who conveyed it to Josiah Smith, who sold to Benjamin Hammond of New Gloucester, June 6, 1787, who was the first settled on the lot. This is one of the homesteads that have descended from father to son, and still remain in the family.

Thomas Greenwood was the grantee of the George F. Hammond lot, who sold to Israel Whittemore. Josiah Smith became the purchaser in 1785, and was the first settler on the lot. He came here in 1791. It passed into the possession of Thomas Hilborn, who married a daughter. Peter Newbert became an owner at a late date, and sold to the present occupant, who has erected a new set of buildings, and otherwise improved the premises.

Orren Daniels erected the buildings on the Colburn homestead lot. It has had several owners. It was purchased by P. Mellen Colburn, who owns and occupies it at the present time.

The Abbott homestead was a portion of the John Daniels lot, and was purchased by Joseph Blake, who married a daughter of Daniels.

It came into the possession of Jacob Daniels, who sold it to Gilbert Abbott, who is the present proprietor.

The Mason homestead was originally the farm of John Daniels, Jr. The house which he built was burned since his decease. Wm. Noyes, who married a daughter, become an owner and built the present house. After his decease, it was purchased by Philip Mason, who is the present owner.

The lot forming the John Daniels homestead, was in the grant to Josiah Fuller. Lemuel Jackson became the owner, and sold to John Daniels, Jan. 18, 1783, who doubtless commenced on his lot at once. This long remained in the family, he having lived fifty-three years after the purchase. Afterward Dea. Joel B. Thayer became the owner. While in his possession the barn was struck by lightning and destroyed. He sold to Wallace J. Everett, whose house took fire May, 1880, and the buildings were all destroyed. Everett erected new buildings and is the present occupant.

The homestead of Capt. C. H. Ripley is the center lot in town, and next north of the Samuel Rawson lot. It was in the draft of Nathaniel Stone who sold to Jacob Gurney, who sold to Lemuel Perham one-half of the lot March 26, 1793. He subsequently bought the other half. Samuel Stephens became an owner April 3, 1798. It has had several proprietors, among whom was Thomas Clark. The present house was erected by Capt. C. H. Ripley, who is still the owner of the premises.

The lot of the Hubbard homestead was in the draft of Josiah Bisco, who sold to Isaac Bolster. Feb. 5, 1783, who sold to Levi Hubbard. He was the first settler on the lot. The brick house was built from brick made on the intervalle at the south end of the lot. After his decease it came into the possession of Oliver Hubbard, his grandson, and after his decease it was purchased by Enoch Jordan, who in June, 1851, subdivided the farm and disposed of it. It has had several owners. Later, it came into the possession of Horatio Eastman, and passed into the hands of S. P. Stearns. His son, Austin P., is the occupant at the present time.

The Henry Davis stand was a small lot purchased of Gen. Hubbard. Davis built the buildings and worked at blacksmithing. After his decease, it was sold and passed through different hands, and was finally bought by Mr. Brown, who has made additional purchases, and is now the owner and occupant.

The Edwin Cole homestead was a portion of the Center lot.

Nicholas Smith purchased it, and in company with Samuel Stephens built the mill on Smith brook, at the falls below the road. Samuel Rawson had a carding mill near by. After Smith's mill ran down he exchanged with Levi Hubbard for the farm where Hubbard first began. Rawson moved his mill to his home, and the same is now standing on the premises. Then Caleb Cushman became the owner, and finally Edwin Cole purchased it and remains the owner and occupant.

The Goodenow homestead was lot 12 in the fourth range, and was in the draft of William Coolidge, who sold to Levi Jackson, who settled here. He sold to Thomas F. Chase, and moved to Belfast about 1802. Chase remained in possession until about 1837, when R. K. Goodenow became the owner. He remained here through life, and after his decease it was sold to Horace Cummings, and by him conveyed to his son, Wallace R., who is the present owner.

The lot of the Stevens homestead was in the right of Samuel Fuller, and came into the possession of Alexander Shepard, who sold to Elias Stowell Jan. 3, 1785. Dr. Cyprian Stevens became the owner and remained here through life. After his decease it came into the possession of his son, Simon, who also spent his life here.

The Hooper homestead was one of the four lots in the right granted to the first settled minister. Elder James Hooper settled here soon after he was ordained, in 1795. After his decease George P. Hooper became the owner, who late in life deeded the same to his son-in-law, Andrew Hall, who is now the owner and occupant. On a portion of the lot west of the road, Elder Hooper had erected buildings for Moses Hodgdon; after Hodgdon moved away the last years of Elder Hooper's life were spent here. James E. Hooper afterwards owned it; after his decease in the army, it was bought by Mr. Rowe, who is the occupant at the present time.

The homestead of B. F. Twitchell is the westerly half of lot No. 10, in the fifth range, and was purchased of Job Cushman of Hebron, by Jacob Twitchell of Gray, Sept. 16, 1794. This came into the possession of David Twitchell, and after his decease his son, B. F. Twitchell, became the owner.

The half lot, western part of No. 9, adjoining, was deeded to Moses Twitchell, and passed into the hands of Capt. Benj. C. Cummings, and after his decease remained in possession of his heirs. Mr. Andrews is now the owner and occupant.

SOUTH PARIS.

The village of South Paris is built on portions of four lots, which corner together at a point near the Odd Fellows' block. The mill lot, No. 7, in the third range, on which the mills are located, was deeded to Lemuel Jackson in 1783. This was the remaining lot after the division had been made, as shown on pages 85 and 86. That division disposed of 260 lots, and the township had been lotted into 261 lots.

The lot west of the mill lot, lot 7 in the 2d range, was in the right of Nehemiah Mason, who had sold to Daniel Clark, and he to Lemuel Jackson, Jan. 12, 1788. The lot north of the mill lot and extending up the river and cornering also at the block, was in the right of Isaac Jackson, who had sold to Lemuel. The other lot, No. 8, in the 2d range, and extending north-westerly from the block, was included in the proprietors' right, as seen on page 36, and was deeded to Jackson at the same time they deeded him the mill lot. These remained in the possession of Jackson until Sept. 7, 1802, when Elias Stowell became the purchaser of this entire tract, together with other lands, excepting one-fourth acre that had been sold to Rouse Bisbee, and so much of lot 8, in the 3d range as lay east of the river; this sale amounted to $5000. June 2, 1803, Elias Stowell purchased the one-fourth acre of Rouse Bisbee, and the building standing thereon, and then sold all of the mill lot east of the river, and south of the road, containing 80 acres, to Capt. Seth Morse, Joseph Haven Hall, and George King; this sale amounted to $2040. Dec. 26, 1805, all the land east of the river, and between the road and Stony Brook, was sold to William Stowell. This sale included the grist mill, then standing, as referred to under the head of mills. Sales of building lots on the west side of the river, were made by Elias Stowell as settlers came in. The village was of slow growth, however, for in 1820, the time that James Deering came to South Paris, the neighbors were hardly in hailing distance. From his recollections, corroborated by others, we are enabled to present the village as it was at that day.

Maj. Cyprian Hall occupied the house at the western extremity of "Stowell's Mills," being the John B. Stowell house, which was then but one story. The next was occupied by Austin Buck, and the same is now the residence of W. J. Wheeler. Mr. Buck was a carriage-maker, and his shop was the next building, and stood on the site of the N. Mason house. This shop is now the well known paint shop of Robert Skillings.

SOUTH PARIS VILLAGE, FROM STOWELL HILL

John Millett's cooper shop stood next, and is the present house of Mrs. Tuell.

Daniel Noble's cabinet shop stood on the site of D. N. True's store.

Simeon Chipman's blacksmith shop stood on the corner, now occupied by the block.

The house farthest west on the south side of the street, was Daniel Noble's, opposite his shop above named, and since known as the Gallison house.

The next house was Isaac Smith's, a one story building, now the residence of Robert Smith

The house of Col. Henry R. Parsons stood next, and was the last on that side of the street toward the river. Opposite Chipman's shop, stood his house. He afterward built an addition to it, and kept tavern. It has since been divided, and moved out on Cemetery street.

The next house toward the river was Esquire Stowell's. The third story was added in 1849, by James Deering, and this is now the hotel. On the site of the residence of S. T. Beaman, stood the first frame house of the village. It was built by Lemuel Jackson. The Hamlin house, now the property of Capt. H. N. Bolster, was built out of materials used in the construction of this old Jackson house. The saw mill stood on its present location, now Billings' mill. There were two "fifty foot" barns between the Elias Stowell house and this old house—one was burned with Newhall's buildings, and the other, which had been moved to Deering street, was burned at the time John Holmes' buildings were destroyed.

On the Rumford road on the east side, the first, last, and only house was James Lebaron's, which stood near the oaks at Jacob Nichols.

On the west side of the road was the house of Hiram Richardson, on the site of the brick house now owned by Jeremiah H. Winslow.

This makes a total of only eight houses on the west side of the river, at that time, although the town had been settled nearly forty years.

On the east side of the river, and north of the road, was the grist and saw mill, both under one roof. Major Dennett's store stood next.

On the south side of the road was the carding mill, occupied by Howland of Brunswick, and next below, the fulling mill of H. R. Parsons.

Morse's inn stood next and back from the street. This had been built by Morse, soon after his purchase of Stowell, in 1803. The sign was an Indian in full dress and moccasins, with a bow and arrow, and underneath, "Morse's Inn."

There was a small building standing on the site of the Rouse Bisbee building, which had been built for a nail shop, and was then occupied by Isaac Knight as a shoe-maker's shop.

Morse and Hall's store of that date, is now the dwelling house of A. C. Barrows. This was built in 1817, for Capt. Seth Morse, by Major Hall, carpenter, he having for apprentices at that time, Silas Maxim and Francis Shaw.

The Perkins house was a one story building, occupied by Solomon Cloudman, miller. This was the Rouse Bisbee building, and after its purchase by Morse in 1803, it was occupied by him as a store until the completion of his store above named.

The next house was on the Alonzo Shurtleff lot, and was occupied by Abijah Hall.

Solomon Bryant lived in the house now owned by Wm. L. Blood. This was the old Prentiss store and post office, and was moved from the Rice place. Bryant moved here from Gray, and his sons were the first settlers in Woodstock and gave the name to Bryant's Pond.

On the road leading from the Stony Brook to the Hill, was the schoolhouse.

The blacksmith shop of Phineas Morse stood on the site of the boundary.

The house of Wm. B. Royal was then owned by Simeon Perkins, who also owned the mill.

The next house was the Morse house, occupied by Nathaniel Green, who owned the tannery. The little shop on the side hill was the finishing shop. The last house on the west side of the road was John Valentine's—now the stand of Isaac D. Faunce.

On the east side of the road, on the knoll near John Martin's, was the house of Isaac Knight. This was torn down by Cornelius Knight, who built the house now owned by John Martin.

The last house on the east side of the road was Capt. George King's. It is now owned and occupied by O. W. Bent. The east side of the river at this time had nine dwelling-houses, the whole village numbering but seventeen. The somber shades of wood color constituted the whole line of exterior decorations. Paint came in later, in the order of yellow, red, and white. The esthetic taste of a later day has led to the blending of all colors.

Since 1820 the village has steadily increased. The greatest detriment to its prosperity was the failure of the woolen factory. The money lost here was the frugal accumulations of industrious citizens and was a blow from which many never fully recovered.

The titles to some of the estates may be traced as follows: The tract of land on the south side of the street, and extending from the Gallison lot to the John Dennett lot, was purchased of Elias Stowell by Joseph Rust, May 8, 1809, for $100. He sold to Seth Morse Dec. 28, 1813, who sold to Col. H. R. Parsons, Aug. 9, 1814. After this date all the titles to lots on this purchase passed from Col. Parsons.

Abijah Hall bought the lot next to Dennett's and built what is now the residence of Mrs. Haskell. From the east end of his purchase he gave the lot on which the Congregational Meeting-house now stands.

Ziba Thayer purchased the lot between the residence of Col. Parsons and the house of Abijah Hall. He built his house in 1851, and occupied it thirty years. He then sold to Augustus M. Whitman, and after his decease it passed to his heirs.

The Gerry stand was built by William A. Rust, M. D., on land purchased of Col. Parsons. It is now the residence of Henry Gerry.

The John Dennett house was built on land purchased of Elias Stowell, April 14, 1820. After Dennett's decease it was sold to Samuel Stowe, the present owner.

Odd Fellows Block was built on the site of the blacksmith shop of Amasa Fobes, recollected by few, as Chipman's shop, but generally remembered as the location of the brick store. The brick store was built by James Longley, in 1834. It was while building this store that he had a yoke of cattle killed by lightning. He occupied the barn near the Isaac Smith place, across the street from his store, and the cattle were standing at the corner of the building. A rafter was torn from the building and thrown some distance. The horses in the building were blindfolded and led out, but most of his robes, harnesses and carriages were burned.

The Robert Skillings stand was built by him in 1834. He purchased the lot containing nearly three acres, Dec. 5, 1833, on which he had commenced building his house in the November previous. His shop was moved from the site of the N. Mason house to its present location, the year following. His house, at that time, was the farthest out on the street. This purchase was made of James Longley who had recently bought of Elias Stowell the tract of land extending from the Cyprian Hall house to the Norway line, containing about 200 acres, the price being $9.25 per acre. Longley reserved two acres between the lot sold Skillings and Cyprian Hall, on which now stands the residence of Arba Thayer, built by Manning of Portland, who was then a dealer in hardware in the brick store. The residence of D. N. True, built by Wm. Newhall, and since remodeled, refinished and enlarged, as also the residences of Alvah Shurtleff and Mrs. Angie Jordan, stand on this reserved two acres.

In 1834, Benjamin Sturtevant built on the lot next on the street to Mr. Skillings'. This passed into the hands of Wm. R. Howe, and was since burned. His present residence has been erected in its place.

The James Curtis house was the Smith house that stood in the Whitehead district, and was removed to its present location by David Jordan.

The lot of the Newhall stand was purchased by Samuel M. Newhall of D. P. Stowell, March 19, 1839. The house had been raised to two stories and the buildings thoroughly repaired, when they were burned at the time the hotel stable was destroyed.

The Leonard Shurtleff house was built by James Deering. He used in its construction the John Deering house that stood on the Eleazer Marshall farm. Simeon Chipman's shop was also used in the porch. The shade trees that make this location so attractive, were transplanted by Mr. Deering in 1850. This stand was exchanged with Mr. Shurtleff for a part of the Gen. Bolster farm.

The Deering residence was soon after built on the site of the John Holmes buildings, which had been destroyed by fire, and in which he has continued to reside.

The Edgerly house now occupied by Horace Edgerly, was built by James Deering, and occupied by him for some years. His cabinet shop stood across the street. It now constitutes a portion of the store of D. N. True.

The house and jewelers shop of Samuel Richards was built out of the materials of the old Dennett Store. It originally stood on the east side of the river. It was moved to the site of the Phelps stand, and after Maj. Dennett retired from business, it was purchased by David Riggs, who took it down and rebuilt it. It was afterward purchased by Sammel Richards, who remains the owner. The store was built by Samuel and Lewis Stowell, and was occupied by them until they sold to Major Dennett.

NORTH PARIS.

In the sketches of mills, it is stated that Ebenezer Hutchinson built a grist mill on Moose Pond stream about the beginning of the present century. In the list of early purchasers of land, on page seventy-six, it is stated "April 2, 1799. Ebenezer Hutchinson of Walton's Plantation, bought of Stephen Robinson of Paris, the southerly part of lot numbered 27-28 in the 6th range." Walton's Plantation now constitutes a part of the town of Woodstock, and consisted of a few lots run out on the south end of what was afterwards the grant to Gorham Academy, and known as "Smith's Survey." Several Walton families were among the first settlers here, and hence the name. Hutchinson came to this section from Fayette, and he, the Waltons and several other neighboring families emigrated to Ohio. This emigration occurred about the year 1812. The mills were a great convenience to the surrounding region, and did a profitable business. Mr. Hutchinson sold the mills to Stephen Washburn, a Bridgewater man, but who came here from Hebron. The mills then took the name of Washburn's mills. For a long time, the only buildings here were the mills and the house of the miller. Stephen Washburn and his son Stephen, Joseph Chandler and a few others had houses here in 1820. Ebenezer Drake came here and went into trade in 1819, with Ozen Gurney. They were the first traders. The other traders here have been Daniel Brock, Alanson Briggs, Lewis Stowell, Samuel Hammond, Charles Goss, Samuel H. Houghton, America Bisbee, Isaac Washburn, John Gardner, and Sullivan Andrews, William Benson, and Israel Fletcher, Luther Washburn, Eliab Murdock, Calvin Washburn, Alfred Andrews, Levi Hersey, Ira Bartlett, Geo. Drake, William Drake, C. W. Chase, Lewis C. Bates and Geo. Walker. Bates and Hezekiah Stetson, Calvin Bisbee, Sammel W. Dunham and James Bird.

The oldest house at North Paris was built by Israel and Perez Record, and is now occupied by C. W. Chase; the other old houses were built by Asa Dunham, Daniel Brock, Benj. Washburn, Sammel

H. Houghton and Otis Washburn, and are now respectively occupied by Sullivan Andrews, Oscar P. Ellingwood, Geo. Adams, Levi Washburn and Edwin B. Richardson. The village is situated on part of lot number twenty-seven in the sixth range. The place has sometimes been called the "Harbor," and also "Sucker Harbor." The species of fish known as "suckers" were formerly very abundant here in the spring, and hence the name.

THE MINERAL SPRING.

The mineral spring at North Paris was discovered soon after that part of the town was settled, and its water has always had the reputation of possessing healing qualities. Its peculiar odor when first taken from the spring, is due to the presence of sulphuretted hydrogen, which is constantly escaping until after a time the water becomes odorless. Its peculiar taste, so disagreeable at first, is due to the presence of several salts. A gallon of the water submitted to Mr. F. P. Pearson, chemist to one of the largest corporations in Lowell, Mass., was found by analysis to contain the following ingredients:

Chloride of Sodium (common salt)	0.225 grains.
Sulphate of Soda (Glauber's salts)	0.780 "
Carbonate of Lime,	0.975 "
Carbonic Acid,	0.400 "
Oxide of Iron,	a trace.
Organic matter, a very small amount.

When first taken from the spring, there is doubtless much more carbonic acid than is given above, as this, too, is constantly escaping. Except its mineral ingredients, therefore, the water of this spring is nearly pure, being much more free from organic matter than brook water, and about as pure as the best spring water. Its medicinal properties are due to the mineral matter which it contains and which exists in sufficient quantity to produce an effect upon the system by a constant use of the water. The small quantity of iron found, renders it of no account as a chalybeate, but it is properly a muriated or saline spring, in which is an excess of soda and carbonic acid gas. This water is diuretic, aperient and in a certain degree tonic, and is effective in scrofulous and abdominal diseases, chronic rheumatism, kidney complaints, and cutaneous diseases. Its effect is more satisfactory when drank directly from the spring, but its gasses can be kept from going off by bottling it at the spring and corking it tightly, in bottles containing about a draught each. The water in the North Paris spring is not as rich in mineral ingredients as that of the Congress, Hathorn and Geyser springs at Saratoga, but it is richer and better than that of many springs that have a wide reputation, and would doubtless become as popular if as well advertized.

WEST PARK.

WEST PARIS.

The thriving village of West Paris, owes its origin very largely if not entirely, to the opening of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad, and the establishment of a station here for the accommodation of the north part of Paris, the south part of Woodstock, and the west part of Sumner. Previous to the opening of this road in 1850-1, there was only one house here, and that occupied by George Berry. John Willis had previously owned the land upon which the village is situated, built a small house, and had a few acres cleared up, but he sold out to Ebenezer Drake. Willis subsequently purchased the place west of the village, and still owns it. Fifty years ago when going to school from the place formerly owned by Samuel D. Marshall, now by John Willis, the most of the way to the school-house, which then stood on the south side of the road, a short distance east of the Leonard Swan place, was through the woods. The building of the railway station here began quickly to attract settlers. Leonard Berry moved his house here from Trap Corner and other houses were erected. When a little later, Samuel B. Locke, Esq., came here from Locke's Mills in Greenwood, and erected a set of first class mills just below the old Witham Bridge, a new impulse was given to the settlement, and its future permanent growth was assured. After the removal of his father from town, Elijah S. Berry, who was long station agent here, occupied the homestead, but he finally sold it to Hannibal G. Brown, and built another. Francis A. Young went into trade here quite early, was appointed Postmaster in 1857, and has held the office most of the time since. Elijah S. Berry was the first Postmaster, having been appointed, February 27, 1854. Jeremiah Howe was also an early trader here, and was followed by John Locke, Samuel B. Locke, Jr., and others. The manufacture of chairs here has been an important industry, and while new industries have been added, the village has made a steady and satisfactory growth. Cyrus Howe from Sumner, was an early hotel keeper, followed by John Bicknell and others. The village is mostly situated upon the south-westerly part of double lot numbered 27-28 in the third range, owned respectively by Rev. Wm. C. Witham, Stillman Berry, Dr. Charles Russell and Leonard B. Swan. This double lot contained originally, nearly three hundred acres.

SNOW'S FALLS VILLAGE.

Phineas Stearns and one or two of his sons first utilized the water power of the Falls here, in the manufacture of chairs, and built the two story house still standing a short distance above. They also did considerable farming here. They began here a short time before the railroad was completed through the town. The few houses below the Falls were mostly built by workmen employed in the mill, among whom was James H. Barrows, now of West Paris. George W. Hammond has kept a small store, a short distance above the Stearns house, for quite a number of years. He is also farmer and Postmaster. The little scattered village is built up mainly on parts of lots twenty-two and twenty-three in the fourth range, the river dividing these two lots nearly in the center. The business carried on at the Falls has been changed several times, and owners have suffered severely from fire.

TRAP CORNER.

This little hamlet is mainly built upon that part of double lot number 27-28 in the fourth range, which William Berry sold to Foxwell Swan. The first house erected here was that of Swan, who cultivated the farm. Afterwards he turned his house into a hotel. Ebenezer Drake came from North Paris to the farm now owned and occupied by Nathan L. Marshall, and built the store still standing in the corner, where he sold goods for several years. It was at this time and from the circumstance of building a store where there was no village for the purpose of taking the trade that would otherwise go to North or South Paris or the Hill, that the name of "Trap Corner" was given it. Several persons have traded in this store since Mr. Drake left it, among others, Ezra Stephens, who was here several years. After Foxwell Swan left the hotel, it was kept by Jared L. Young, but it ceased to be a tavern many years ago. The first house on the opposite side of the East Branch was built by James Swan, son of Foxwell, who was living in it half a century ago. Several houses have been built on each side of the Branch since that time, but the place was never much of a village, and not much more now than formerly. James C. Perry has granite and marble works here, and Oliver L. Pratt and son a carpenter's shop. Ebenezer Humphrey occupies the James Swan place. Jeremiah Howe from Sumner, built up a place on the west side of the Branch a few years ago, and died there. He was the son of Jacob Howe, our first mail carrier.

RESIDENCE OF GEO. W. HAMMOND.

SNOW'S FALLS.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

PARIS POETS.

Some of the early settlers, and quite a number of the native born citizens of Paris, developed a talent for literature, specimens of which have occasionally been given in this volume. At the Centennial Celebration of the town, the literary exercises were of an exceptionally high order, and most of the parts were prepared by natives of Paris. Of the earlier contributions to the literary press we have no means of knowing, but when a newspaper, the Oxford Observer, was started on Paris Hill in 1824, its columns were at once filled with articles both in prose and poetry, and upon a great variety of topics, the productions mainly of Paris people. Doubtless many young writers were gratified at a sight of their first printed composition in this paper, and the columns of the Observer and of its successors, for many years, continued to be filled from week to week with the productions of home talent. Elijah L. Hamlin wrote under the nom de plume of "Viator;" Dr. Ezekiel Holmes under that of "Libertas," "Selim," and "Veritas;" Henry Prentiss adopted that of "Cimon," and Caleb Prentiss that of "Cincinnatus;" Polly Prentiss signed "M." and Mary Prentiss "Oithona;" by "M. D.," Levi Willis was understood, and by "Theodosia," Rebecca Hamlin; John Otis wrote over the signature of "Don Alonzo," and C. Rawson over the letter "S." The early volumes of the Observer, Jeffersonian and Oxford Democrat, give other signatures such as "Decius," "Oxford," "Quarles," "Cato," "Yeoman," &c., whose real names we are unable to give. It is not possible in this brief chapter to pass in review the literary productions of all the above and give examples of their work, nor to refer, except in passing, to the literary work of our professional men, our ministers, editors, lawyers and doctors, many of whom have been men of fine literary taste and ready and graceful writers, for all these have been duly noticed, in their several professions, in other parts of the volume. It is only proposed here to make brief mention of a few who have excelled in literature, more especially in poetical composition, and some of whose fugitive pieces are within our reach. In some instances the best of their productions may not be given, but it is because they are not at hand.

HENRY PRENTISS.

He was born in 1779, and was the son of Rev. Caleb and Pamela (Mellen) Prentiss, of Reading, Mass. He married Mary, daughter of Dr. John Hart, of Reading, and came to Paris quite early, though not among the first settlers. He was a frequent contributor to the columns of the early Paris papers, and a forcible writer. In his newspaper tilt with Elder Hooper, on the currency question, he displayed great tact as a controvertialist. He also occasionally wrote poetry, which seems to have been a strong family trait. He died in Paris in 1843. From his contributions to the Oxford Observer, over the signature of "Cimon," the following is selected, which appeared in the first issue of the paper :

POWER OF THE PRESS.

Young genius of Oxford come carol your lay,
Your Press is awaiting—your herald's away;
For Oxford demands (her aspiring caress,)
A Press for her freedom and freedom of Press.
Ye sons of her mountains, ye sages combine,
Ye fair of her valleys your garlands entwine;
Your services proffer, your bounties bestow,
Make a land of renown of your mountains of snow:
For bleak are your hills, and the long winter's blast
Her mantle of frost o'er your glaciers does cast.
Breathe on balmy gales; let a spirit of fire
Awake in the hearts of the son and the sire.
Bid Oxford arise in the strength of her might,
And drive from her brow the dim vapors of night.
The Press, with a Majesty boundless as sea,
And a voice loud as thunder, bids Oxford be free;
With a stride from the ocean she measures the plain,
And swears on the mountains of Oxford she'll reign.
She seeks a retreat in the land of the brave;

She shrinks at the tyrant, and weeps o'er the slave.
 The Land of the Hills to the brave is a home,
 For the hills of the Swiss to their foes are a tomb.
 Fair daughter of heaven, O virtue, inspire
 The soul of the Press with thine own sacred fire!
 If on the escutcheon of Oxford remain
 A vice or a crime to en crimson her name,
 The foul crimson blot in oblivion wipe,
 By the flash of thy frown or the lash of the type.
 E'en hallowed on earth; O, Justice, preside
 O'er the fate of our counsels, our destinies guide!
 Hang high o'er our homes, thy bright balance in Heaven,
 And by thy red bolt be iniquity riven.
 O palsy the hand by extortion corroded,
 Doom peaceless the soul by its infamy goaded;
 If guilt, with her train of dark vassals arrayed,
 The quiet dominions of Oxford invade,
 The Press thy artillery, the type be thy bow,
 To lay the base miscreant lifeless and low.
 His corse be the carrion where ravens shall feed,
 His bones bleach the turf on which tramples the steed.
 But when the oppressed in their anguish shall cry,
 Their cheek pale with sorrow, grief-smitten their eye,
 Then deal out they mercy, the victim oppress,
 From the gripe of the ruthless extortioner wrest.
 The Press be thine angel, our faults to record,
 Our vices to punish, our virtues reward;
 Our morals to chasten, our follies expose,
 To gladden the bosom though pregnant with woes.
 Our minds to enlighten, our wanderings correct,
 To rescue our youth who in vices are wrecked,
 Our tastes to improve and our manners refine,
 And point the bold sinner to piety's shrine.
 A light to the blind, to the darkling a guide;
 A bride to the groom and a groom to the bride.
 A home to the stranger, a guest to the host,
 Who brings him glad news of a heritage lost.
 A pillar of fire to enlighten our way,
 A mirror, the scenery of life to display.
 The yeomanry chart which shall point out the soil
 Whose bounties shall gladden the culturer's toil.
 An eye that shall ken the rich secrets of earth,
 And drag them reluctant to being and birth.

CIMON.

CALEB PRENTISS.

Deacon Caleb Prentiss moved from Gorham, Me., to South Paris, about the beginning of the present century. He was a native of Reading, Mass., a son of Rev. Caleb Prentiss, and brother of the preceding. He was in trade some years at South Paris, and then purchased of Asa Sturtevant lot number six in the ninth range, where he moved and engaged in agriculture. He was deacon of the Congregationalist church, a man of marked ability, a magistrate before whom cases of breach of the peace were frequently brought, and highly respected in town. He was also a contributor to the columns of the Observer, and the following scraps are selected from among his poetical compositions :

DECEMBER DAYS.

Ruthless winter's rude career,
Comes to close the parting year;
Fleecy flakes of snow descend,
Boreal winds the welkin rend.
Reflect, oh man! and well remember
That dull old age is dark December;
For soon the year of life is gone,
When hoary hairs like snow come on.

RESIGNATION.

How pleasing the sound of the church going bell,
How dismal the tone of the funeral knell;
Thus life is a scene that is checkered with ill.
Though pleasure oftentimes procures us a rill
Of comfort to cheer us while passing the night
Of this wilderness world, to the regions of light.
Then let us enjoy the blessings here given,
And wait the fruition provided in Heaven.

MARY PRENTISS.

Mary Prentiss was a daughter of Dea. Caleb Prentiss, and was born in Paris, Dec. 27, 1798. For several years preceding her death, which took place Nov. 16, 1836, she had resided in Bangor. A brief, but appreciative obituary notice of her, appeared in a Bangor paper shortly after her death, from the pen of Hon. Edward Kent, a reproduction of which will be sufficient for the present occasion. The stanzas referred to in the notice are appended thereto. Judge Kent wrote as follows: "You may remember that soon after the dedication of Mount Hope Cemetery in July last, I informed you that I had in my possession some stanzas composed by a young lady of this city, which I intended to have published. I am forcibly and sadly reminded of that promise by the death of the author. Miss Mary Prentiss, daughter of Dea. Caleb Prentiss of Paris, who died in Bangor on the 16th inst. I will not attempt a formal newspaper eulogium on her character; to those who had known her, had witnessed her life of unobtrusive usefulness and conscientious discharge of duty, and had been blessed with her friendship and love, such an eulogium would be useless. Her friends will long remember her as one who without adventitious and accidental advantages, had won her way to their hearts and affections, by the vigor and discipline of her mind, by the gentle kindness and disinterestedness of her life, by an almost excessive sensibility, tempered and subdued, that she might never shrink from duty, and an expansive benevolence that embraced the whole human family, and a remarkable absence of that selfishness which regulates and calculates not its actions, without a reference to present comfort. At the time above alluded to, the dedication of Mount Hope, she was deeply interested in the object and the occasion, and in a note to a friend, enclosing the annexed, she says: 'Ever since I heard of the arrangements for the dedication of Mount Hope, I have imagined myself dead and buried there. I send you the fruit of my strange imaginings.' At that period, and until a short time before her death, her health was excellent. There is something in the lines and thought of that mysterious and indefinable presentiment, that far reaching vision, dim and indistinct, and yet almost real, which we sometimes fancy is vouchsafed to the pure in heart as they approach near the spirit land." The stanzas are entitled

A SPIRIT AT MOUNT HOPE.

I am no more a child of earth,
 My spirit from its clay hath fled;
 And yet I linger round the spot,
 Where they have made my low, last bed.
 The strong, deep wish to be beloved,
 Has not departed with my breath;
 It had its origin in Heaven,
 And was too pure to yield to death.
 I see the tears the mourners shed,
 I catch the murmur of their sighs;
 And through their long and weary days,
 I watch them with my spirit-eyes.

My home is in a better world
 Of ceaseless bloom and cloudless light;
 And the soiled robe I wore below,
 Is changed for one of spotless white.

Deck then my grave with earth's frail flowers,
 And teach the mourning trees to bend;
 But do not water them with tears,
 Plume the soul's pinions to ascend.

If it is bliss e'en here to mount,
 When we must bear the heavy chain
 Which checks us in our highest flight,
 And drags us to the earth again,

Think of the soul with nought to clog,
 With nought to dim its eagle sight;
 Forever drinking in new joy,
 Forever catching some new light.

If this dark stream is beautiful,
 Which waters but an earthly clod,
 Think what must be that purer one
 Which sparkles from the throne of God.

Oh, dry your tears, no longer weep,
 The grave is not a gloomy place;
 Religion sheds a radiance
 Which every lingering cloud should chase.

HANNAH E. (MAXIM) ALLEN.

Mrs. Allen is the daughter of Silas and Hannah (Packard) Maxim, and was born in Paris, Oct. 6, 1831. She began when quite young to contribute to the local papers, both in prose and verse, and her productions attracted considerable notice. Since then she has written more or less for the Oxford Democrat, Portland Transcript, Boston Museum, Olive Branch, &c., under the nom de plume of "Rose Sanborn." She has written quite a number of stories, but much more of poetry. Her poem "Greeting to my Native Hills," read at the Centennial Celebration and printed elsewhere with the proceedings, is a fine specimen of blank verse and highly poetical. She married J. W. Allen, and moved to Michigan, but has since removed to Nebraska. She has written but little since her marriage, being engrossed with family cares and duties, a fact to be regretted; one who can write so well should write more. Among her earlier productions, the following is copied from the Monthly Literary Miscellany, published in Detroit, Michigan, and was written in Paris in August, 1850. It is entitled

THE DAUGHTER OF JAIRUS.

The daughter of the ruler lay
Upon the couch of death ;
Her snowy bosom cold and still,
Heaved by no fluttering breath ;
A mother's joy, a father's pride,
With that young gentle girl had died.
The dark curls swept like raven plumes
On her clear marble brow,
And the fringed lash pressed softly down
Upon her cheek of snow,
Hiding the eye whose melting blue
Seemed borrowed from the heaven's own hue.
Beside the couch stood they whose hearts
By deepest grief were torn,
They who had watched her early years,
Her girlhood's radiant morn,—
Who long had fasted, wept and prayed,
That Death's sharp arrow might be stayed.
Another stood beside her there,
In that still room of death,
In all his saintly majesty—
Jesus of Nazareth !
His eyes unwet, his brow serene,
A holy calmness on his mien.
The master clasped his hands :
“ Weep not,” he mildly said,
“ For this is but a living sleep.
Thy daughter is not dead.
Weep not,—the maiden shall awake
And live again, for thy faith's sake.”
And as he spoke he gently took
Her white hand from her breast,
Then paused, as loth to break a sleep
So deep, so sweet, so blest ;
To call a soul once freed from pain,
Back to a sinful world again.
He spake :—those lovely lids were raised
From their deep orbs of blue,
Back came the flush of glowing life,
Her pale cheek melting through ;
She lived again—she breathed—she smiled ;
The wondering parents clasped their child.

The following four sonnets on the death of her friend, are perhaps among the best of Mrs. Allen's productions. They first appeared in the columns of the Oxford Democrat :

IN MEMORY

OF MISS SARAH J. PRENTISS, WHO DIED AT BANGOR, OCTOBER 22, 1877.

Dear friend, the days of mellow tone and tint,
The ripe, rare days that thou so well didst love
Have laid once more their glorious imprint
On field and wood, and even the blue above
That nearer bends with its soft mantling haze.
In these charmed hours, oh! friend, or so I dream,
The veil 'twixt me and thee doth thinner seem;
I feel thy presence in this tender calm,
And in these airs, still rife with summer balm,
The touch that smoothed my hair in other days.
Ah! were mine eyes not holden I might see,
Perhaps, thy radiant face lean close to me;
And looking in thy deep, true eyes, should know
Death had not touched with frost, the love of long ago.

'Twas fitting thou shouldst gain the Master's feet
When the ripe year its crown of glory wore;
Well might he smile at thy full sheaves of wheat,
The gathered gold of years, a precious store;
The faith that to a Father's hand could cling,
Though darkness veiled His face; the zeal that burned
To bless thy brother man; love that discerned
Christ in the lowly and the suffering,
And when the war-cloud darkened all the land,
Drew thee with eager haste to join the band
Who, where the battle tempest spent its wrath,
And left its wreck of anguish and of death,
Hovered with sweet and gentle ministries,
As God's own messengers sent in human guise.

The Poet's soul shone clear upon thy brow;
Thine, too, the Artist's loving touch, the skill
To bid the canvas blossom at thy will;
For, priestess at the shrine of Beauty, thou,
Oh, friend beloved, to duller ears and eyes,
Interpreted her choicest mysteries.
Yet 'twas not given thee to win and wear
The crown Fame held aloft. A coronet
Of brighter lustre on thy brow was set;
The glory of a womanhood most rare,
And rich and rounded into full completeness,

In whose calm strength was interblent all sweetness,
As on thy native hills, the rock's scarred face
Is beautiful with mosses and the harebell's grace.

"Perfect through suffering." Oh, heart sore tried,
Through all the long, long anguish, by thy side,
The angel Patience walked with calm, sad eyes:
While on thy brow, the saint's white aureole
Grew large, till as a star in dawn's red skies
Fades from our sight, so passed thy chastened soul
Into God's rest ineffable. And now,
After one golden year of Paradise,
One year of seeing with unclouded eyes,
Companion of pure spirits, dost not thou
Behold even thy sorrows glorified,
As one who on a lofty mountain's side,
Sees the cold mists that drench the vales below,
A bank of pearl and opal in the sunlight glow?

ROSE SANBORN.

AN APRIL SNOW-STORM.

All day against the window pane,
The April storm has fiercely beat;
The naked trees have writhed in pain,
Whitened with driving snow and sleet.

And many a proud old tree, o'erthrown
With sudden crash and deafening roar,
A wreck of kingly pride lies prone,
To wear his kingly crown no more.

The tender shoots of grass are hid;
The crocus-cups are filled with snow;
And under icy coverlid,
The snowdrop's fearless head lies low.

I think the violets, half awake,
Shut their sweet lids in sad surprise;
So treacherously the south wind spake
Of greening woods and sunny skies!

But ah! most piteous sight to me,
In all this dreary waste of storm,
Beneath the whitening lilac-tree,
A hapless robin's shivering form.

The cruel cold has pierced beneath
His vest of flame and warm, brown coat;
Dulled his bright eye—maybe with death—
And shut the music in his throat.

Poor bird! I wonder if he grieves
 For the old home in southern bowers,
 Where soft bright days and balmy eves
 Crown even Winter's brow with flowers!

ROSE SANBORN.

A WINTER PANSY.

Once in the morning twilight of our love,
 When Hope's first red had scarcely tinged the gray,
 I plucked a pansy from its winter bed
 And gave it you. In its fresh face, perchance,
 You read a vague, sweet prophecy of good,
 Of love surviving life's autumnal chill,
 And blossoming even in its winter days.
 After long years, once more I pluck for you
 A pansy that has braved a frosty sky
 And worn a snow-wreath on its purple brows,
 For a sweet sign that in our hearts to-day
 We find the old time prophecy come true.

MARY H. (PRENTISS) CUMMINGS.

Mary Hart Prentiss was the daughter of Henry and Mary (Hart) Prentiss, formerly of Reading, Mass., but early settlers here, and was born in Paris, January 7, 1807. She married Whitney Cummings of West Sumner, afterwards of Buckfield, and died in the latter town in the spring of 1878. She was a frequent contributor to the Oxford Democrat, Portland Transcript and Zion's Advocate, over the signature of "Oithona." From a number of her short poems, the following are selected for this chapter:

REVERIES.

My child will come no more
 My ministries of love
 Are changed for those above—
 The little journey of his life is o'er.

I see his garments hang
 In many a spot—
 How can he be forgot,
 Tho' every mem'ry brings the heart a pang!

'Tis vain to change the scene—
 From each sequester'd nook
 His little treasures look;
 I cannot wander where he has not been.

Spring's glorious sunbeams stream,
 And brightly do they fall,
 Alike on floor and wall:
 But my lost boy looks out on every beam.
 I turn my eyes above,
 But tears will force their way
 E'en when I strive to pray—
 Is there no place of rest for earthly love?
 My young and happy boy—
 I see his glad step springing,
 I hear his sweet voice singing,
 And yet these mem'ries bring no thrill of joy.
 But why these restless days?
 The promises are mine;
 I hear a voice Divine
 Call on my soul a sovereign God to praise.
 Why spend my hours in gloom,
 Or weep for treasures gone,
 When I am hurrying on
 To join them in a world beyond the tomb.
 My cherish'd one is there,
 He spends his glorious days
 In songs of holy praise
 To Him who heard on earth his daily prayer.
 Then let my heart arise
 To his bright home above,
 * And to the God of love
 Look for a blessing on "earth's broken ties."

OUR SCHOOLHOUSE.

As I sit in my room alone to-day,
 My tho'ts are wandering far away;
 Through many a year they are looking back
 Over childhood's many-color'd track;
 And the schoolhouse, with its batter'd door,
 Stands upon the hillside as of yore.
 How often we ran a merry race
 Over piles of snow to reach the place!
 How we carefully plac'd the dinner pail,
 And hung our wrappings on peg or nail;
 Then turn'd in haste to such wealth of blaze
 As is seldom seen in our modern days.
 How the wood was piled on the heavy stones
 Till the fire sent out unconscious groans!

How "the boys" climb'd up on the roof, and flung Baskets of chips the logs among!
And we push'd it and crowded around the flame,
Intent on warmth ere the teacher came.

Few were the studies of childhood then;
Reading and spelling and use of pen;
Slight use of figures and parts of speech,
But all that the spelling book could teach;
And we spelt for the head with such warmth and zeal
As few, save politicians, feel.

Oh, little we tho't as we frolick'd then,
What sort of women, what sort of men,
Would soon go out from that humble place,
As help or burden to the race.
Yet in looking back on those days, I see
That each was then what he grew to be.

From that humble shelter of early days
We soon went out into broader ways;
We went with joy thro' its open door,
To look back with sighs, but return no more.
We scatter'd like leaves in October day,
And like leaves have the many pass'd away.

Long years ago on a stormy night,
When earth was clad in a robe of white,
A flame stole out on the schoolhouse floor,
Stealthily crept over wall and door:
Mounted the roof—and at rise of sun
The whole sad work of the night was done.

That primitive building in its day,
Did a useful work in a quiet way.
Would I could see it as of old,
With the scholars gather'd in its fold!
But most, with the house, have to dust gone down
And I am musing here alone.

LINES SUGGESTED BY A DREAM.

Who e'er has thank'd the Lord with heartfelt sense
Of all His goodness to a fallen world,
And has not blest Him for the gift of dreams?
Oh, those sweet evidences that the mind
Is ever wakeful; that the soul within
Is indestructible; that we shall live,
And feel, and think when death itself is past!
When the exhausted, wearied frame must rest,

And seek in sleep those fresh supplies of strength
To-morrow will demand, how would the mind,
The active spirit, grudge the wasted hours,
Were it not certain that the hand of God
Would paint some picture of the fading past,
Or the uncertain future, on the mind,
While the veil'd eye sees not the outer world !
Our sleeping visions may, perchance, be sad,
But who, oh who would lose them ?

I saw in dreams last night a favorite spot,
One I have seldom seen in latter years.
It was a farm upon a mountain's side,
Rough in appearance, and yet beautiful,
With all its trees and vines, its rocks and streams,
'Twas there a relative I lov'd in life
And mourn'd in death, liv'd out his threescore years.
I ever lov'd to see the tall, gray house,
It look'd so like its owner, firm, upright,
As tho' 'twere fortified by praise and prayer.
I saw it in my dream, with just the look
It wore of old : the same vine-shaded porch,
And spreading trees around the open door ;
But of the numerous smiling faces there
In days gone by, but one arose to view.
It was a youthful cousin, who had grown
To man's estate beneath that sheltering roof ;
But, thinking that the world had greener spots
And lovelier scenes, had wandered far away,
Long, long ago, from his paternal home.
In my night vision he was blithe and young,
As when I saw him ere he bade adieu
To beautiful New England. Just the same
Were the dark locks around his ample brow ;
And in his flashing eye were mingled deep
The energy, the softness and the pride
Which blended in his character. No word
Was said between us, yet I feel to-day
As tho' departed years had come again,
And I was living still the hours of youth.
I bless the giver of that happy dream,
For long has been the time since I have seen
That well-remembered relative and friend,
And we, perchance, may never meet again.
I have a sprig of wither'd laurel leaves
He sent me from his Pennsylvania home
In token of remembrance, and I oft

Look at it now, with question in my thoughts,
 Whether that home is dearer to his heart,
 Than the rough mountain one he left behind.

ROSE (McKENNEY) RAWSON.

She was the daughter of William and Mary (Besse) McKenney, and was born July 18, 1845. Her mother was a sister of Hon. Warren H. Vinton, whose name was formerly Besse, as stated in Personal Notices. Mrs. Rawson before her marriage, was a successful teacher in the public schools, having been employed in the schools in town, at Bryant's Pond and elsewhere. She has been an occasional contributor to the papers for a number of years, and generally in poetry. The two following selections fairly exhibit her talent as a poetical writer. She married Otis Bent Rawson of this town, who is a Baptist preacher, and has been settled over the church in Bethel, but is now settled out of the State.

THE OLD HOME IN THE LANE.

There's something in the air this morn, that carries me away,
 Back many a year of toil and care, back many a weary day.
 Once more I seem a careless child, I'll fling away care's chain,
 And visit with my heart to-day, the old home in the lane.

Oh, let my father just this once lay off his silv'ring hair,
 And put away those spectacles, and then those lines of care;
 Do take away those signs of age; oh, make him young again,
 To visit with his child to-day, the old home in the lane.

Oh let my mother once again, I beg with aching heart,
 Have just a score of age's cares from off her life depart,
 Then will she not so feebly step, but free from grief and pain
 Again go happy, singing in the old home in the lane.

And now I look across the hill, and see the self-same grass
 Roll off in waves 'way down the vale, and flee as on I pass.
 Just as I've watched it many a time sweep off across the plain,
 When I regretfully would seek the old home in the lane.

The path across the orchard lot we hourly used to pass,
 Has been fenced up by stranger hands, they say, to save the grass;
 And then the Balm-of-Gilead trees will never bloom again,
 A stranger's axe has sadly robbed the old home in the lane.

The brook in which we fished for frogs, and bare feet waded through,
 And all the unbatched polliwogs and toads we thoughtless slew
 To make a fertile field they say, he's spoiled it with a drain,
 Ah, sadly changed are you to-day, dear old home in the lane.

Ah, stop—where are the dearly loved, the old home held so long,
The dear, unbroken household band, that cheered its hearth with song?
Then let me lay aside my pen, and hear again that strain,
Just as it cheered in years ago, the old home in the lane.

The noblest boy, the father's pride, to-day his heart so true
Lies still and silent 'neath his coat of undimmed army blue;
Beneath the sun of distant skies, upon a southern plain,
There lies the pride and treasure of the old home in the lane.

The old church yard upon the hill, of dear ones has its share,
Two brothers dear lie side by side, a sister too, is there;
So sadly changed is now the flock, 'twould be less joy than pain,
E'en if I could go back and see the old home in the lane.

The dear old neighbors, though to them must needs have been the lot
Of human frailties; still they seem as though they had them not,
And dear to me as precious links in memory's golden chain
Are these old friends united with the old home in the lane.

I have had many kindly friends, God bless them all and each,
But there's a tender tie of old that these can never reach;
Perhaps 'tis wrong and childish weak, I know it's all in vain,
But how my heart is yearning for the old home in the lane.

But now 'tis time I dried my tears, and closed the portals up,
That's filled with recollections sweet, from memory's brimming cup;
I draw the curtain to the world—go back to work again,
But treasured next to Heaven, shall be the old home in the lane.

Fort Kent, Aug. 1868.

PARTING ODE.

(OXFORD NORMAL INSTITUTE.)

How short the time in fleeting days, since early in the spring,
We first were all assembled by the old bell's cheerful ring,
But long, how long and pleasant, if we reckon thoughts and deeds,
If time may be computed by the sowing of good seeds.

In life's day-book for each of us,

How great is the amount

That's credited to pleasure's side

In memory's account;

And every kind and noble act we have received or given
With interest, is registered, to be returned by Heaven.

As time rolls by its heavy freight of happiness and cares,
May richest harvests fall to us exempt from weeds and tares;
And though the golden ball we seek, be held beyond our reach,
Yet much that's good and beautiful shall be the lot of each.

Fate loans from out her treasures vast,

To each some costly gem;

To some gives beauty, talent, wit,
To some the diadem.

A tender heart, a patient soul, or love the best of all,
We each shall be remembered, if our portion be but small.

Though oftentimes the highest hopes, unrealized, must fade,
And castles built for happiness, must in the dust be laid.
Yet saved by actions good and wise, we'll stand each storm and shock
Secure from harm and danger if we've built on wisdom's rock.

Then let us keep our treasure pure,

Undimmed with stain or dust,

Where thief can never enter,

And gold can never rust :

And if no more on earth we meet, a dear unbroken band,
May we sing at last together, far beyond the golden strand.

WILLIAM W. MAXIM.

Wm. Wallace Maxim has contributed more or less to the public journals, sometimes in the form of rhyme and sometimes in prose. He has written some articles upon agriculture which have been valuable. Among several of his contributions to the Oxford Democrat, the following is selected for this chapter :

STRANGERS.

We are living and toiling as strangers,

In a land that we call our own ;

We are passing like priest and Levite,

The road to the great unknown.

We talk of the golden city,

Of friends in that home so dear,

But scarcely a word of pity

For those who are starving here.

Starving for love and devotion,

And the graces that round them fall ;

Starving for pure religion

In a country of churches tall.

These shadows and baubles are empty,

Though decked with the treasures of art,

And the light of a life burns dimly

When love has gone out of the heart.

We read in the legends of heroes,

Who, labors of love to bestow,

Put self in the misty background

And built up the kingdom below.

May we ask with a patience enduring
 Like the servants and seekers of yore,
 That the faith of the ancient martyrs
 Might visit the earth once more.
 Might come like the splendors of sunlight
 To a shadowy groping band;
 Might come like the rain in summer
 To the arid and dusty land.
 For the same old passions bind us,
 And the same afflictions bow,
 And we know that the God of the Bible
 Is the God of His children now.

Paris, Me., July 9, 1881.

MARY (HATHAWAY) ROWE.

She is the daughter of the late Lazarus and Lucy (Cole) Hathaway, and was born in Paris, January 6, 1829. She was educated in the town schools, taught school before her marriage, and has sometimes written brief articles for reunions, family gatherings and other special occasions, but not for the press. She married Ellery W. Rowe of Woodstock, and has resided many years in Portland. Her life has been saddened by the loss of several children, one of whom, Carrie M. Rowe, was a graduate of the Portland High School, a young lady distinguished for her amiability of character and her scholarly attainments, and who was held in the highest esteem by a wide circle of friends. The following fugitive lines which came into our hands, were composed on the occasion of revisiting the old homestead in Paris which had passed from the family into the hands of strangers.

MY CHILDHOOD'S HOME.

Home of my childhood, the last link is severed,
 That bound me to that spot I loved so well;
 No more shall voice of kindred there recall me,
 No more entice by friendship's magic spell.
 The voice that soothed the early griefs of childhood,
 The willing hands that toil for me no more,
 A mother's love, a father's kindly greetings;
 All, all have crossed to yonder happy shore.
 The weight of years is stamped upon my forehead,
 The weight of grief, sometimes too heavy seems;
 But in my heart the home and joys of childhood,
 Are oft recalled by sweet and happy dreams.

The rock that stood beneath the apple blossoms,
 The brook that murmurs 'neath its shadows yet;
 The tree our brother planted by the roses,
 Are memories dear that I would ne'er forget.

The dear old woods that crowned the western hillside
 Whose sunset shadows waved around our home;
 In schooldays, warm and tired, oft have I rested
 Beneath the spread of nature's emerald dome.

The woods are gone; a stranger's hand hath laid them;
 We rest no more beneath their grateful shade,
 But all the hills are there, as in our childhood,
 On one more dear, a sister's grave was made.

As in a dream I hear the distant church bells,
 Resounding where my youthful feet have trod;
 In all besides, a sacred stillness reigneth;
 Those Sabbath days so dear, so near to God!

I see the brook and hear the river's murmur,
 Mingling with songs of birds and matin chimes;
 But list in vain for loved and kindred voices,
 For they who walked with me now live in brighter climes.

Beyond the hills and woods, beyond their shadows,
 Beyond the clouds, tinted by sunset skies,
 We there shall see our loved ones and be with them,
 In brighter homes unseen by mortal eyes.

ALICE E. (RIPLEY) MAXIM.

Mrs. Alice E. Maxim, by mistake in the Centennial Proceedings called "Miss," is the daughter of Orison and Hannah Ripley of Paris, and was born January 7, 1847. "God Bless our Native Hills," sang at the Centennial, was written by her, and the music was composed by W. Scott Ripley, her brother. She is the wife of Henry H. Maxim of Paris. The Memorial Hymn which follows, was composed by her, and was set to music by her brother, Winfield S. Ripley of Boston.

"DIP THE FLAG REV'RENTLY."

Strew flowers lovingly over each grave,
 Where lies the dust of the patriot brave;
 Salute with the flag, each mound were they rest,
 They died at their duty, each doing his best;
 And their spirits arisen, are marching to-day
 In the Great Grand army, just over the way.

CHORUS. Dip the flag rev'rently over each grave,
 Comrades, they died our lov'd country to save.

With us they trod the red fields of the south,
 And with us they faced the cannon's dread mouth;
 Suffer'd with sickness, with hunger and cold,
 Can we forget them, our comrades of old?
 Never! our hearts beat as warmly to-day
 As when, side by side, we join'd in the fray.

CHORUS.

God bless the soldiers who fought in the blue,
 'Neath heaven's own color beat hearts warm and true;
 Wherever they are, be they living or dead,
 Time weaves fresh laurels for each honor'd head.
 Yearly they're passing to heaven's bright bowers,
 And yearly love covers their new graves with flow'rs.

CHORUS.

God bless the soldiers who fought in the gray,
 Whatever we've been, we are brothers to-day;
 Cast out of our hearts all hardness and pride,
 For one common country, we work side by side,
 Whatever their faults, we forgive them to-day,
 Strewing sweet flow'rs o'er the blue and the gray.

CHORUS.

HISTORY OF PARIS.

PART II.

GENEALOGICAL REGISTERS.

It is not claimed by the compilers that the following notices of Paris Families constitute a complete family record. The scope of the work would not admit of it, even if the materials for it were at hand. It has been our aim to begin as far back as our means of information would permit, to trace briefly the line of descent to the family or individual who came to this town and while they may have remained in town, dropping them out, except in a very few instances, when they went away from here. Our personal notices have been so numerous in the preceding pages, and our space for this department of the work is so limited, that we have felt obliged to omit historical events connected with individuals except in a few exceptional instances, and confine ourselves mainly to records of births, marriages and deaths. Nor is it practicable in these few pages to bring down the records of families to the present time in all cases. Paris is a large town and is over a century old, and to print a complete register for all the families that have lived here, would require more space than is afforded by this entire volume. Our aim has been to take cognizance of every family that has lived here, and if we have failed to do so, it is because the records could not be obtained. The records of some families will be found quite complete, while of others, the account will be meager. This is due to the fact that some families have taken great pains to furnish us with data from which to make up their records, while others have taken little or no interest in the matter. The records of Paris with regard to births, marriages and deaths, like those of most other towns, are very incomplete, and have been of but little value in making up these sketches. Otherwise, the work would have been much easier of accomplishment. While we have taken great pains to be accurate, we have not the vanity to suppose that we have avoided all errors. Such a thing is next to impossible, and has probably never happened in a genealogical register of any extent. The town records are not always correct, and the records of births furnished by families, often contain errors in spelling and errors in dates. Then errors are liable to occur in copying and in putting the records in type, and errors will often escape the most careful and experienced proof readers.

The arrangement which we have adopted, we trust will not be found hard to understand. It will be seen that the head of the family is expressed in small capitals, and the children in Italics. Against the first in a family, the figure one is placed, and a brief sketch follows the name. By family here, we do not mean simply the members of one household, but we include all the descendants of the one first mentioned, as belonging to the family. The first named being numbered one, the others are numbered consecutively from that, and in referring back to any one in the list, he or she is referred to by number as well as by name; this is necessary to avoid mistakes in identity where persons have the same Christian names. Where only three or four families are named, it is obvious that no numbering is necessary. The abbreviations used here are as follows: b. signifies born; m. married, d. died and s. settled; bap. stands for baptized, dau. for daughter, wid. for widow and r. for resides; W. P. stands for West Paris, N. P. stands for North Paris, S. P. for South Paris, G. for Greenwood, W. for Woodstock, S. for Sumner, B. for Buckfield, H. for Hebron, O. for Oxford and N. for Norway. All towns mentioned are understood as being in Maine, unless otherwise designated.

HAMLIN.

The ancestor of the distinguished Paris family of this name, was probably James Hamlin¹, (variously spelled Hamblen, Hamlen, Hamlin and Hamlyn) who came from England and settled at Barnstable, on Cape Cod. It has been said by some, that he first came to Scituate, and from thence, moved to Barnstable with Rev. John Lothrop and that portion of his church which went there in 1639-40. This theory has been disproved by the researches of Prof. Charles E. Hamlin of Harvard College, who shows that he came from London to Barnstable. Several generations of his descendants lived in Barnstable, and persons bearing this name are now scattered throughout the country. He had by wife Anna, 9 children, some of the oldest having been born in England. He died in Barnstable in 1690.

The father of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, our first Clerk of the Courts, was Eleazer, and the line of descent between James¹ the emigrant, and Eleazer, though a subject of much careful investigation by Prof. Hamlin and others, is still in doubt. Mr. Talcott, in his "Notes on New York and New England Families," makes Eleazer the son of Benjamin³, and his second wife, Anna Mayo, and grandson of John² and Sarah Bearee. But further investigation shows that this Benjamin never had a second wife; that he married Hope Huckins and had deceased in Barnstable, prior to 1718, and that he had no Eleazer among his children.

JAMES HAMLIN, JR.², married Mary Dunham and had a son Benjamin³, bap. 1685, who went to Eastham and married there Anna Mayo. This Benjamin³ had a son Eleazer⁴, who may have been the father of Dr. Cyrus, etc., but we are obliged to say that it lacks confirmation, and may be entirely set aside by farther examination. Investigation is still going on, and we regret that the facts could not have been brought out in season for this volume. The trouble consists in the fact that three Eleazers were born in different branches of the family about the same time, rendering it difficult in the absence of family records, to determine which is the one whose sons settled in Waterford and Paris.

ELEAZER HAMLIN⁴, perhaps son of Benjamin³ and Anna (Mayo) Hamlin, (date of birth not known, but probably about the year 1730) was the father of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, who came to Paris from Livermore. The marriages of Isaac and Eleazer Hamlin, (supposed brothers) are given in Mitchell's History of Bridgewater, the former to Sarah Shaw of Abington, and the latter to Lydia Bonney of Pembroke in 1752. Eleazer Hamlin settled in Pembroke, and was prominent there during the war of the Revolution, serving as Captain in the patriot army. He moved from Pembroke to Harvard, and from thence to Westford, where he died. The children of Eleazer and Lydia (Bonney) Hamlin, as recorded on Pembroke Records, were as follows :

- I *Asia*², b. March 9, 1753, d. Aged 17.
- II *Betty*⁵, b. Oct. 27, 1754, m. Seth Phillips.
- III *Alice*⁵, b. Feb. 17, 1756, probably died young.
- IV *Africa*⁵, b. Jan. 27, 1758, m. Susanna Stone of Groton.
- V *Europe*⁵, b. Nov. 20, 1759, moved to Hillsboro, N. H.
- VI *America*⁵, b. Oct. 20, 1761, m. Sally Parkhurst of Harvard.
- VII *Lydia*⁵, b. Nov. 5, 1763, m. John Park of Groton.
- VIII *Eleazer*⁵, b. Sept. 23, 1765, m. Sally Bancroft of Groton.
- IX *Molly*⁵, b. Aug. 3, 1767, m. Moses Stone of Groton.
- X *Cyrus*⁵, } m. Anna Livermore of Livermore.
- XI *Hannibal*⁵, } b. July 21, 1769.
- XI *Hannibal*⁵, } m. Susanna Faulkner of Acton.

Lydia, the mother, died Aug. 12, 1769, and after the father removed to Harvard, he remarried, and had other children. He d. in Westford, Mass.

Four of the above sons, viz.: Africa, America, Eleazer and Hannibal, settled in Waterford, Maine, where their father had a landed interest, and the last named, at one time, sheriff of Oxford county, was the father of Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, D. D.

Dr. CYRUS HAMLIN⁵, the tenth child of Eleazer and Lydia (Bonney) Hamlin, studied medicine and settled in practice at Livermore, Me., where he married Anna, daughter of Dea. Elijah Livermore, one of the founders of the town. When the county of Oxford was formed in 1805, Dr. Cyrus Hamlin was appointed Clerk of Courts, and moved to Paris Hill, where he lived many years, and until his death, which occurred Feb. 2, 1829. His wife Anna, died August 25, 1852. Their children were :

MORSE.

SAMUEL MORSE, the emigrant ancestor of the Paris families of this name, is named in a manuscript record in Rolls Court, Westminster Hall, London. The following extract shows the laws of church and State to which the early emigrants were obliged to conform. "April 15, 1635. Theis parties hereafter expressed are to be transported to New England, imbarqued in the Increase, Robert Lee, Master, having taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy as being conformable to the orders and discipline of the church of England, whereof they brought testimony, per certificate, from the Justices and ministers where their abodes have lately been." The family consisted of Samuel Morse, aged 50, Elizabeth Morse, aged 48, and Joseph Morse, aged 20. On arriving in this country, he first settled in Watertown, Mass., and soon after joined a company and received a grant from the General Court, of a tract of land now included in Dedham. NASON.

JOHN NASON's name appears quite early on our records, but little is known of his family. His daughter Polly was the wife of Enoch Hammond, who also resided in this town a few years. Both families moved to Woodstock, John Nason being one of the early settlers of that town.

NELSON.

NATHAN NELSON of Milford, Mass., m. Jerusha Chapin, and settled in No. 4, now Paris, on the lot now the farm of Ransom Ripley in 1784. He was here at that date, as shown by the records. He remained on this lot until May 23, 1796, at which date, he sold to Abner Rawson and moved to Oxford. Children:

Other families of this name were quite early here, but did not remain long enough to be much identified with the town. John Noyes, with a large family was here when the census of 1821 was taken.

OWENS.

LUKE OWENS, said to have been a deserter from an English ship, came into this town about the year 1800, from Woodstock, and m. a dau. of Elisha Cummings. He was taxed here in 1816, but was not here when the census was taken in 1821. He was a jolly son of "Erin," and many stories are told of his wild pranks.

O'BRIEN.

DENNIS O'BRIEN, an Irishman, was perhaps, with the exception of Philip Donahoe, the first of that nationality who settled in Paris. He bought land in the northwest part of the town, but did not remain here long, and where he went is unknown to the writer. His Irish brogue was a curiosity to the young people of that day, much more so than it would be now.

SWAN.

WILLIAM SWAN was quite early in this town. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 4, 1737, and was the son of John and Elizabeth his wife, grandson of Gershom and Sarah Holden, and great-grandson of John Swan, who came from England as a servant in the family of Mr. Thomas Bittlestone, in whose recorded will it is provided that his wife, Elizabeth, shall have the services of his boy, John Swan, and shall pay him five pounds. John Swan, the emigrant, married Rebecca Palfrey, and had a grant of land in Cambridge, of twenty acres. Some of his descendants settled in Woburn, and among them was William. He was a soldier in the war for independence, and a pensioner. He came to Paris with a large family, and lived here several years. About the year 1802, having sold out here to Lazarus Hathaway, he moved to Woodstock, accompanied by his son William, Jr., who was then married, and his grandson, Gideon, who was then fifteen years old. APPENDIX.

JOSIAH BISCOE'S DIARY, WHILE ASSISTING IN SURVEYING No. 4.

This Journal is preserved in the family of Charles T. Mellen, a grandson of Josiah Biscoe, who kindly permitted it to be copied for this work.

Saturday, Aug. 22. 1772. Set sail from Boston.

Sunday, 23. Under moderate sail.

Monday, 24. Arrived at Casco Bay about an hour before sunrise.

Tuesday, 25. Still at Casco Bay, and at about 5 o'clock, we set out for Gorham town with our stores. Lodged with Mr. Herscalls, who bought our stores.

Wednesday, 26. Set out from Gorham town for Sebago Pond; arrived there about sunset, and camped at the end of the pond.

Thursday, 27. In the morning still at the pond, and about twelve o'clock, Capt. Fuller and Capt. Coolidge arrived at the pond; had fish for dinner. I went out fishing in the afternoon, and we had fish for supper. Camped at the pond.

Friday, 28. In the morning still at the pond, and at about half after eleven, set out for Sungo river. Good weather to Frye's Island, thence the wind blows at the west, we were obliged to put to the shore; with difficulty, about three-fourths of the way over the pond. Staid and refreshed ourselves; struck up a fire. Supposed to be in Ramingtoun. (Raymondtown.)

Saturday, 29. Fair morning. Set out for Sungo river about sunrise; arrived there about sun an hour high. Had fine breakfast of fish and chocolate, with a wood duck; proceeded up Sungo river to the Riplings, about eleven o'clock. I and four others went up Crooked river to discover the passage, but returned after going about four miles to the Riplings. There camped.

Sunday, 30. A fair morning. Fish for breakfast. Disappointed as to our surveying instruments. Shepard and Stenchfield return to Falmouth.

We proceed for Kimball's; killed four duck going up. Whitney and Barnard stay at the Riplings at Ramingtown. We return to them at about ten o'clock at night. Camp at the Riplings.

Monday, 31. A pleasant morning; put our stores on board, all proceed for Kimball's; arrived there, sun about an hour high; carried our stores to Kimball's house, lodged there.

Tuesday, Sept. 1. At about eleven o'clock, set out for Androscoggin; had a tedious march through the woods as far as Crooked river in Yonkers-town; there camped.

Wednesday, 2. Set out from the camp at Crooked river for Androscoggin; a very tedious day's travel; arrived at the camp at Stony Brook, after sunset, very much fatigued; had a very rainy night.

Thursday, 3. Very rainy in the morning. Killed two ducks by the camp. Continues a rainy day—one more duck. Camp again.

Friday, 4. Pleasant in the morning. Began our survey upon the southeast part of the town; run two and three-fourths miles the first day; camped upon this line.

Saturday, 5. Run upon the line to ———, then upon the east line, three miles and one hundred rods; then camp.

Sunday, 6. Still at the camp.

Monday, 7. Proceeded upon the line to the northeast corner. The contents of the second line, 6 and 3-4 miles, 8 rods to the northeast corner, and from thence, two miles and one hundred rods upon the north line. There camp.

Tuesday, 8. Still upon the north line. There take a range line three miles from the northeast corner, proceed from the north line upon the range line, ten lots and two talies; there camp.

Wednesday, 9. Proceed upon the line to the town line, twenty-four lots and forty-six rods, the length of the 8th range line; from the end of the 8th range, we go to our old camp at Stony Brook. Camp there a rainy night.

Thursday, 10. Still at the camp.

Friday, 11. Still at the camp. Likely for a fair day. Sett out from the camp for the 4th range line, and I saw a bear up on a tree. Shoot at it, but did not kill. We run from the line at the southeast part of the town to the eleventh lot northward. There camp; a rainy night; felt very poorly.

Saturday, 12. Still at the camp; foul morning and a rainy day. Still at our camp; night comes on; still rainy; camp as before.

Sunday, 13. A very pleasant day. Remain still at our camp on the 7th range, and eleventh lot; felt something poorly; feel a little better at evening. Camp as before.

Monday, 14. A pleasant day. Proceed upon our 7th range to the head of our town. Brought up our head line and turned upon our sixth range, two lots; there camp.

Tuesday, 15. Proceed upon our sixth range to the 19th lot, and there camp.

Wednesday, 16. Proceed to the southeast line, and to our old camp, arrive there at about ten o'clock; a fine dinner of trout cooked; hazy; conclude to camp as before.

Thursday, 17. Ushered in by smart rain, and continues a rainy day. Still at the camp.

Friday, 18. Sett out upon 4th range line, run to 17th lot.

Saturday, 19. To the upper end of the township, and turned upon the 5th range and run over to the 13th lot, and there camp.

Sunday, 20. Sett out for our old camp: arrived there about three o'clock in the afternoon, when one of our company had just arrived there and had killed a moose. We went and brought it in: had moose steak for supper.

Monday, 21. Pleasant; still at the camp. I take a tour to the southward: see very good land: return and camp as before. (Johnson tanned his moose hide.)

Tuesday, 22. Pleasant morning. Sett out on our north range line, went as far as the 11th lott, and camped there.

Wednesday, 23. It began to rain about an hour before sunrise, and continued a very rainy day.

Thursday, 24. Set out on our range as before. Got to the head of the Ct's lott, turned on our 10th range. Came down to the 16th lott and camp.

Friday, 25. Pursued our range and return to our old camp about twelve o'clock. Continued at the camp the remainder of the day: camp.

Saturday, 26. Pleasant in the morning. Set out for a view of the interval. (one remark on the preceding night): a very frosty night: camp at our old camp.

Sunday, 27. Set out to traverse the river to the southward of our township: returned to the old camp a little before sunset: camp as before.

Monday, 28. Pleasant in the morning: sett out for Sylvester, Canada: went to miles upon our southeast line, then took a course south 68 east, two miles, which brought us to the foot of Streaked mountain, where we dined. Went to the top of the mountain for a view, had a very pleasant prospect from the mountain over the country each way. Came down and continued our course a little different from the above, about three miles, and there camped near what is called Bogg Brook.

Tuesday, 29. Pleasant in the morning, proceed for the corner. Clouds up-looks like rain: we find the corner about noon: begins to rain: we set out from the corner for New Gloucester: find the road: travel as far as into Bakerstown: there camp: a rainy night.

Wednesday, 30. A rainy, dull day: pursued our journey from Bakerstown to New Gloucester, as far as Mr. Stenchfield's: arrived there about one o'clock: continued there the afternoon: lodged at night: set out in the morning of the first of October. Dull weather: pursued our journey from Gloucester to Falmouth, as far as ———. Disappointed as to meeting the rest of our company: tarry there the night.

Friday, Oct. 2. Set forward on our journey: dined at the Milliken's in Scarborough: from thence we arriv at Jefford at Wells, there lodged.

Saturday, 3. Set out about an hour before sunrise: breakfast at Littlefield's in Wells: pursued our journey: arrive at Portsmouth Ferry about half after three o'clock: pass the ferry and travel as far as Greenlands at Pickering's, sup and lodge there.

Sunday, 4. Set off before sunrise: travel as far as Exeter: breakfast at Folsom's near the bridge: travel to King's just as service was over for the forenoon. Called at Abbott, from thence to Haverhill, pass the ferry a little before sunset: to Bradford: lodged at Chandler's by the river side.

VOTES FOR GOVERNOR AND REPRESENTATIVE, 1794 TO 1884.

The left hand column gives the votes thrown for Governor, and the right hand, for members of the Legislature. Until the time of the separation from Massachusetts in 1820, there was a property qualification to the enjoyment of the right of suffrage, which debarred many from going to the polls. For the years 1812, 13, 14 and 19, Paris sent two Representatives.

LOCATION OF ROADS.

Among the first things to be provided in the settlement of a new township are roads. Roads must be constructed to connect the township with places already settled and also to enable the settlers to go from one part of the town to another. The proprietors of No. 4 cut out a road from New Gloucester to lot number seven, known as the mill lot, in 1774, and reopened it in 1779. Roads were also built in town at the expense of the Proprietary before the town was incorporated, and after the settlement in 1782, to the date of incorporation in 1793, more or less amounts were raised every year for cutting out new roads and keeping others in repair. The building and repair of roads in an uneven town like Paris, absorb no small part of its revenues, and the records show that notwithstanding the large sums annually collected and expended for road purposes, the town was not unfrequently indicted on account of bad roads. In the absence of the minutes of the surveys, it is not easy at this distant day to trace the roads laid out by the Proprietary, though a general idea of the principal thoroughfares may be gathered from references made to them in the location of the town and county roads. As most of them were either early discontinued or became absorbed in the town or county roads, no further mention of them will be made except as reference is made to them in the surveys.

COURT OF SESSIONS' ROADS.

The first road located by order of the Court of Sessions was on the petition of Isaac Bolster and others, at a session held on the last Tuesday of May, 1793, to accommodate the settlers of Range Ponds, Bakerstown, Hebron and No. 4. The Court appointed as a committee to look out and locate the road, Isaac Parsons, Enoch Fogg, Nathaniel Coit Allen, Jedediah Cobb and Asa Lewis. This committee submitted their report to the Court in December of that year, and the proposed location through No. 4 was as follows:

“From No. 4, at the first lot in the 4th range where the old road now is, north 15° west, 96 rods; thence north 2° west, 66 rods; thence north $17\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 17 rods, to two rods and 19 links from the southerly corner of Captain Bolster's house, on a line straight with the front; thence north 41° west, 101 rods and 10 links; thence north $53\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 44 rods and 10 links; thence north $38\ 2\text{-}3^{\circ}$ west, $27\frac{1}{2}$ rods; thence north 60° west, 31 rods; thence north 75° , west 30 rods; thence north $48\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$, west — rods; thence north 25° west, 35 rods to a beech tree; thence north 28° west, 38 rods to a beech tree; thence north 19° west, 170 rods to opposite the middle of Daniel Stowell's barn, 3 rods and 18 links therefrom; thence north 9° east, $66\frac{1}{2}$ rods; thence north 16° east, 20 rods; thence north $24\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ east, 44 rods; thence north $6\ 2\text{-}3^{\circ}$ east, 21 rods; thence north $11\ 2\text{-}3^{\circ}$ west, 16 rods; thence north 45° west, $22\frac{1}{2}$ rods; thence north $37\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 31 rods, 5 links; thence north $53\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, $17\frac{1}{2}$ rods; thence north $35\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 46 rods, 20 links, crossing Stony brook below Jackson's saw mill; thence north $7\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west 86 rods to a white pine tree; thence north $3\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 24 rods; thence north 7° west, 20 rods; thence north $15\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 214 rods; thence north $9\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west 37 rods and 15 links; thence north 9° east, 28 rods; thence north 5° west, 18 rods and 17 links; thence north 19° east, 56 rods and 8 links; thence north 35° east, 28 rods; thence north $24\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ east, $11\frac{1}{2}$ rods; thence north 48° east, 95 rods and 8 links to opposite the northerly corner of old Mr. Jackson's house, 2 rods and 4 links therefrom and one rod beyond 30 miles from the beginning of this road; thence north 20° east, 34 rods; thence north 2° east, 68 rods, 20 links; to against about the middle of the barn of Lemuel Jackson, Jr.; thence north $9\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ west, 156 rods to a stake and pile of stones in lot number 15 of the 5th range, and about the center of No. 4, now Paris.”

On the first day of January, 1793, John Greenwood and others of Shepardfield, (Hebron) petitioned for a road from Emery's Bridge in Bakerstown (Poland), through Bakerstown and Shepardfield, to the south-east corner of No. 4, thence diagonally through No. 4 to the northwest corner of same, and from thence through No. 3 (Woodstock), and Sudbury, Canada (Bethel), to New Pennacook (Rumford). The petition was favorably received, and a location of the road ordered. Asa Lewis, John Woodman, Nathaniel C. Allen, Enoch Fogg and John Merrill were appointed for a locating committee. This road was only located to No. 4 line. At a court holden at Portland, in October of 1795, on the petition of citizens of New Pennacook, the balance of the above named road, that is, from the southeast corner of Paris to New Pennacook, was ordered located, and for locating committee, the court appointed John Greenwood, Nathaniel C. Allen, Isaac Parsons, Ichabod Bonney and Peleg Chandler. The location through Paris is given in order to show the natural difficulties in the way of road building in this town, as indicated by the frequent changes of direction made necessary by obstructions which could not be easily overcome. The location was made in the autumn of 1795.
