INTRODUCTION

We, the Mecklenburg County Daughters of the American Revolution Chapters, Alexandriana, Gen. Robert Irwin and Jane Parks McDowell, have listed herein names of people buried in family plots and former church cemeteries, many of whom we believe to have been hitherto unlisted. We present this booklet with the sincere wish that it will awaken an interest in old cemeteries, and especially in their care and restoration. It is appalling to see the broken and fallen stones and unkept condition of some of these old graves of the people who helped in the founding of Mecklenburg County.

It is our desire to reset these fallen stones and give to these graves the care they deserve.

For further information contact Mrs. J. R. Miller, Pineville, N. C. or Mrs. R. E. McDowell, Route 2, Charlotte, N. C.

DINKINS CEMETERY

This cemetery is nine miles south of Charlotte on Nations Ford Road, to the right of highway before reaching the dwelling to Dinkins farm. This was a stage coach stop from Camden to Salisbury.

Within this cemetery are twenty headstones with inscriptions indicating names, births and deaths of the deceased. There are many rocks placed as to mark a grave some stones are so placed to be that of a child, others of an adult. These field stone markers have no inscriptions. At one time this cemetery was probably enclosed by a rock wall.

ASHCRAFT CEMETERY

The Ashcraft cemetery is located out of Mint Hill. It was behind the old Ashcraft School, therefore called "Ashcraft." To reach it, go out Highway #51, turn on #218 until reaching a paved crossroads with Brief Road bearing to the left. Mr. Walter Linker lives a very short distance up Brief Road on the right; a dirt road across the road leads to the cemetery which is located in a group of trees.

SPRATT CEMETERY

The Spratt Cemetery was on Spratt land some 400 yards back of the Spratt home at what is now the corner of Fourth and Caswell Road.

Tradition is that the cemetery was destroyed when Vail Avenue was opened for traffic. The stones were thrown into a gully and covered with 15 feet of dirt. When the nurses home for Mercy Hospital was being built and excavating done for the basement four of these stones were found. The hospital gave the stones to the city council. Mr.
Victor Shaw was mayor and with his consent of the council, the four stones were placed in a concrete base in the cemetery behind the First Presbyterian Church in Charlotte.
They can be found to the left on the first walk as you enter the iron gate.

Members of the Spratt family are thought to have been buried in the Spratt cemetery but no such stones were found.
