HISTORY OF THE
TOWN OF GILSUM
NEW HAMPSHIRE,
FROM 1752 TO 1879,
WITH MAPS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

BY SILVANUS HAYWARD, A. M.

"The kindly spot, the friendly town, where every one is known,
And not a face in all the place but partly seems my own."

PREFACE.

This History has grown out of the Centennial Address of 1872, (Page 116.) Begun in 1875, it has occupied more than five busy years. At the annual meeting in 1876, the town voted $500 towards an edition of 250 copies, each tax-payer having the privilege of buying a copy at a corresponding reduction in price. The town afterwards voted $80 towards the expense of general views, and $50 to secure the portraits of Capt. Hurd, Elder Kilburn, and Gen. Mack. The views were selected by a Committee, consisting of Daniel Smith, Silvanus Hayward, William A. Wilder, J. Quincy Pickering, Josiah Guillow, William L. Isham, and Solomon Mack. It was intended to secure a view of the East part of the town, but much to the regret of the Committee, no satisfactory result was obtained. Private views and other portraits have been inserted at the expense of parties interested.

National and State affairs are not legitimate to a Town History, except such occasional brief statements as may be necessary to explain some town action. Primitive habits and customs have been so fully and vividly portrayed in other histories, as well as in the newspapers of almost every season, that it has not seemed wise to enter that beaten path wherein one could scarcely hope to overtake, much less surpass his predecessors. Hence, this work claims to be nothing more than a local record of events pertaining to this little town, during the century and a quarter of its existence.

Accuracy, completeness, brevity, and impartiality have been my aim; how nearly reached, others must judge.

The inaccuracy of traditions is surprising. Traced back to their source, a nucleus of fact will usually be found, but almost unrecognizable under the accretions of two or three generations.

It is much to be regretted that the town records for the first twenty-five years are not to be found; how lost, is uncertain. These were the most important and valuable of all our records, and the loss is irreparable.

Repetition could not be entirely avoided. For the sake of brevity, however, vital statistics are mostly omitted from Biographical sketches, and historical facts from the Genealogies. Consequently, to learn the history of any person, the name must be sought not only in the Genealogy, but also in every place referred to in the Index.

While abhorring that namby-pamby, jelly-fish goodness that cannot be classed as belonging anywhere, or having any opinions of its own, I have, nevertheless, carefully endeavored to avoid all such partizanship in politics or religion, as can give reasonable offense to any.

The stand-point of time is the year 1879, unless otherwise indicated.

It has been found impossible to arrange the chapters in logical order of sequence. Those who are fastidious in this respect can easily satisfy their more logical minds by reading the chapters in the order of their own choice.

Part II is believed to be hitherto unique in its design;—at least, I have met nothing similar in any town history. It is an attempt to give a brief mention of the several families residing upon every spot where has stood a dwelling. Only a few wood-choppers' shanties have been purposely omitted. The record is necessarily incomplete, and at the close of each list of residents, it will generally be safe to add the words, and others.

The maps locate every road, and every residence from the first settlement to the present time, so far as can be ascertained. They represent not less than a year of solid work, being the result of a minute survey by the author, assisted by Edwin D. Hayward of Winchendon, Mass.

Public invitation was given to all to furnish sketches and portraits of themselves and friends, and whatever was received in season, has been for substance inserted, so that none can complain of being slighted. Obituary notices and letters of friends and acquaintance have been freely used. Except in a few cases where I have peculiar facilities of a personal knowledge, the responsibility of estimates of character has been thrown upon others. It should be remembered also, that the length of a notice is no criterion of a person's relative worth or prominence. It only indicates that more particulars were communicated to the author. It would have been easy to have added a piquant flavor gratifying to many, by collecting the gossip and scandal of a century past, or by sharply sketching the prominent traits of peculiar characters. Except, however, in a few notable instances that could not well be left out, criminal records, and gross defects of character have been carefully omitted. In all cases, I have intended to make the record as I should wish it to be done, if each person were my own relative. Humani nihil a me alienum puto.

Part III from a small beginning, continually grew upon my hands to the last moment of going to press, and five years more of labor would hardly exhaust the field of research. It contains more than 10,000 names exclusive of ancestral records. As "king Ahasuerus laid a tribute upon the land, and the isles of the sea," so have I laid tribute upon all accessible resources, town records, family Bibles, family and town histories, gravestones, private diaries, the memory of the aged, &c. &c. Accuracy in dates is almost an impossibility. Records obtained from different branches of the same family, very rarely agree. Even dates sent by the same person at different times are frequently unlike. Add to these the cemetery and town records, and we sometimes have three different dates for the birth or death of the same person. To decide certainly between them is often impossible. I have generally taken what seemed to me to be the best authority, but in a few instances have given a double date. Honorary titles have been mostly omitted, except where needed for identification.

Out of more than a thousand letters, about fifty have failed to reach the persons addressed. A few have received no reply. Three or four persons have declined giving any information. One only sent an insulting answer. My first thought was to print it, for future generations to see and laugh at, but remembering Uncle Toby and the fly, I forbear.

My grateful acknowledgments are due for the courtesy and helpful kindness of both strangers and townsmen. Special mention should be made of John Ward Dean the accomplished Librarian of the Mass. Historical and Genealogical Society, George Hammond of Bennet's Corners, N. Y., and Isaac W. Hammond of Concord, N. H. My elder daughter has rendered invaluable service, especially in the preparation of the Genealogies.

My work is ended, but far from finished. None can be more sensible of its defects than the author. For those who may be surprised at its mistakes, which must be many, I can only wish a personal experience of the same kind of work.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

Few enterprises can be of greater importance or more absorbing interest than to trace the present condition of families or communities back to its sources, and record the various influences which have molded the character of individuals, or villages, or towns, or nations. To portray not only events, but the causes out of which they grew and the results to which they tend, is the office of the historian. Launching his canoe upon the wide stream of the present, he must urge it upward to the mountain ranges of the past, and under the shadows of its ancient forests, through tangled thickets and up rocky defiles, on foot and alone, he must press on, till he can bring back the story of each brook and rill, whether oozing from the mire of gloomy swamps, or crawling from stagnant pools, or springing in fresh beauty amid the moss of crystal springs. Thence returned, he must spread the sails of some larger craft, till, borne swiftly down the resistless river, he reaches the shoreless sea of the great humanity of the future. This were indeed a noble task. This, to the extent of his ability, the historian of state or nation is privileged to perform. But sundry limitations hedge about the town historian, not so much restraining his feet from the paths of exploration, as forbidding his lips to divulge the secrets he may have learned. The historian of New Hampshire may express his judgment of the character and influence of measures, or parties, or individuals, with the utmost freedom. He may be criticised and controverted, his opinions may not be accepted, but no one will accuse him of transcending the legitimate province of an historian. But not so in writing a town history. It is only in very general terms that opinions, or even facts, otherwise than favorable concerning individuals or families, can be recorded. Very many facts must be entirely suppressed by the town historian, or both himself and his book will be swept away in a storm of indignation. From the influence of a single individual, from the coming in of a certain family, from the preaching of a certain system of doctrines, from the circulation of certain books or newspapers, from the prevalence of certain political ideas, the character and real history of almost every town have been greatly controlled: its business prosperity, its tendencies to virtue or vice, its elevation or degradation, have been determined. But the circumstances of the case forbid the historian from making the record. He must nearly follow the old maxim, "Nil de mortuis nisi bonum." He cannot contribute to social science the true story of "The Jukes" of his native town, nor mount upon the pillory of disgrace the names of his neighbors deemed worthy of that bad eminence. He is often, also, restrained from expressing all his convictions in reference to the good accomplished by certain men, or measures, or principles. People are apt to be jealous of hearing others highly extolled. The state historian can compare both men and measures, and pass judgment upon each in the light of results and by the application of examples gathered from other states and from other times. But nowhere more than in town history is felt the force of the saying, "Comparisons are odious." Thus limited, the town historian cannot illuminate his work with philosophical speculations, or embellish it with poetical fancies, or even adorn it with the graces of rhetoric, but only rehearse, in plain language, the simple record of unvarnished facts.

CHAPTER II.

NATURAL HISTORY.

"To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language."

THE forty-third parallel of north latitude crosses the southern extremity of the town of Gilsum, and the seventy-second meridian west from Greenwich passes about twelve miles east of the village.

Gilsum is in form somewhat like a boot, or a carpenter's square, having the village at the instep of the boot, or the inner angle of the square. It is bounded north by Alstead and Marlow, east by Stoddard and Sullivan, south by Sullivan and Keene, and west by Surry. The Ashuelot* River flows through the town in a south-westerly course from Marlow to Surry. Into this river run many brooks from all parts of the town, as shown on the map.

Gilsum has two small natural ponds or lakes. Cranberry Pond, situated near Marlow line, is about twenty rods long and fifteen wide. Its outlet is the brook that enters the Ashuelot some forty rods above the residence of Josiah Guillow. The other pond contains only a few square rods, and is not known to many persons. It is, however, a permanent pond and contains some fish. It is situated on the south-west part of David A. Roundy's farm.

Geologically, Gilsum was formed in what Prof. Hitchcock calls the "Atlantic or Gneissic Period," and suffered no special change till the "Mica Schist Period," when its eastern half was covered with the new formation. The scratches of the "Glacial Period" lie in a south-easterly direction. They can be very plainly seen on the ledges east of the Deacon Mark place. The surface is hilly, or almost mountainous, the village being about 780 † feet above sea level. The lowest point is where the river enters Surry, about 162 feet ‡ lower than the village street. The highest point is probably near the east end of the town, next to Stoddard line, about 700 feet above the village. The summit of the hill east of the town line, near the south end of Surry Mountain, is nearly the same height, and the top of Mansfield hill and the height in C. B. Hayward's pasture, south-east of the Converse place, do not fall fifty feet below. The west line of the town, crossing the line near the foot-bridge below William Kingsbury's, runs along the eastern slope of Surry Mountain, passing a little west of the summit at the south end.

The early deeds speak of Surry Mountain as "a great Mountain." It extends about four miles in a north and south direction. Near its center there is a notch in which lies Lily Pond. This is west of the present Gilsum line, and is specially remarkable for its great depth, soundings of eighty feet having been tried without reaching bottom. Near the east line of the town, next to Sullivan, is a remarkable ledge facing the west, called "Bearden" in the earliest known records. From the perpendicular, and in some places overhanging, ledges at the summit, some tremendous force has rent huge masses of rock and thrown them one upon another in every conceivable form of disorder. Under and among these rocks are numberless holes and dens, some of considerable size, now populous with hedgehogs, but formerly furnishing shelter to wolves and bears, especially the latter. The rocks are mostly irregular in shape, as well as in size and position, but in some places are wedged together almost like masonry. One obelisk, some twenty feet long and three and a half square, and nearly as regular as if wrought by the stone-cutter, was apparently caught while falling, and remains with one end held fast by overlying rocks, while the other extends some twelve feet horizontally, almost like a beam projecting from the side of a building. Huge rocks, of hundreds or even thousands of tons, are found with the shelving under side hollowed into countless cavities, with the appearance of having been long subjected to the action of falling water. In these holes birds' nests are sometimes found. At the foot of Bearden lies a small swamp, the principal source of the Beaver Brook, which runs thence in a southerly direction through Keene. About forty rods south-west from the Bearden ledges, where precipitous rocks rise on either hand, it falls over beds of green moss, forming a cascade much smaller, but perhaps more beautiful, than the well-known "Beaver Falls" of Keene, five miles below on the same stream.

* This is the original Indian name, and is said to mean a collection of many waters. (Keene Annals.)

The Hemenway Brook furnishes another fine fall, just above the river road, half a mile from the village. It flows in an almost continuous cascade from the Hemenway place to the river.

Thirty or forty rods below the stone bridge, on the north side of the river, in the face of the perpendicular cliff, is an inaccessible notch or seat, called "The Devil's Chair." Though this has no great interest in itself, yet the narrow defile below, through which the river dashes and winds and twists among enormous bowlders, is, in picturesque beauty, scarcely inferior to the scenery of White Mountain glens.

Along the banks of Beaver Brook are many gravelly ridges of an artificial appearance. They are called "kames," and are supposed by geologists to have been deposited from melting ice.* The longest of these is below the old Bridge place in Keene, where the road runs along its top for more than a mile. Others similar to this, but of small extent, lie between the road and the Mark meadow. At the upper end of the meadow, on the east side of the brook, are found others of the same gravelly character, but, instead of lying parallel to the general course of the stream, they are arranged in a series of connected circles, or rather ovals, giving to the unscientific eye an almost irresistible impression that they were erected by the hand of man for purposes of defense. The largest extends about twelve rods from north to south, and six from east to west. On the north-west is an opening about three rods wide. The ridge itself is from two and a half to three rods wide at the base, and raised from eight to fifteen feet above the swamp on either side.

About a mile south-west of this, on the farm of Capt. David Bill, is a spot called "Cranberry Hole." This is a circular opening in the woods, about ten rods in diameter, apparently a bed of moss, but over which one cannot walk except in winter. It was doubtless once a pond, but gradually filled with moss, till no water is visible above the surface. Blueberry bushes and other shrubs crowd its edge, and the cranberries, which gave its name, have mostly disappeared. It may have been originally a beaver pond. (Page 15.) From it, on the east, flows a small stream, which, uniting with another from the south, forms what is known as the Fish Brook, one of the principal tributaries of Beaver Brook.

Like other hilly regions, Gilsum is not wanting in variety of minerals. The prevailing rock is a coarse granite, interspersed with smaller specimens of the stones common to such a formation. Crystals of tourmaline and quartz are frequently met with, and occasionally small specimens of beryl. Garnets are abundant. After a shower, the village street, as well as many other roads, is noticeably red with innumerable garnets of the finest quality, but so minute as to be unavailable for the jeweler. Mica has been extensively quarried a short distance north of the town line in Alstead, and abounds in many of the Gilsun rocks. Hornblende and actinolite are not rare. On the "minister lot" in the south part of the town is a large quartz ledge, whence fine specimens of rose quartz have been taken. Other smaller "white ledges" are found in several parts of the town.

Surry Mountain has always been thought to be rich in ore. There have been many traditions of finding pure lead there. It was said the Indians obtained bullets by simply cutting off pieces of lead from a ledge, of which they alone knew the locality. It is a family tradition that Capt. David Fuller, while crossing the mountain to his work, found lead which he cut off with his ax, and afterwards run into bullets, but that he never could find the place again. Nearly ninety years ago, after long-continued fires in the woods on the west side of the mountain, places were seen where little streams of molten lead had run down the rocks. Lead and silver are certainly to be found there in considerable quantities, and recent explorations have brought to light both gold and copper. Attempts at mining have been often made, but without profitable results. In 1878, a vein of silver mingled with lead and gold, was opened at the north end of the mountain. Specimens of the ore are said to compare favorably with those from Arizona.

At the top of the mountain, about west of the farm now occupied by Bradley Stone, plumbago of the very finest quality has been found. Large lumps of the same mineral have been dug up on the land of Luke Houghton, just above the village.

Iron is indicated in numerous places by the appearance of red oxide in the soil, about the springs, or on the rocks, and also by the deflection of the magnetic needle. On Surry Mountain, especially in the vicinity of Lily Pond, it is impossible to run lines by the needle, on account of the local attraction.

A little east of Mill Brook, on land belonging to F. A. Howard, is a cold spring strongly impregnated with iron and sulphur, and probably as valuable for medicinal use as many of famous resort. It is now covered with accumulations of soil. It is to be hoped the enterprise of the future will unseal and develop its salubrious powers.

On the farm of George H. Carpenter are large beds of ochre, or mineral paint. Similar beds are also found in the Hammond meadows farther south. In a letter to Mr. Carpenter, Prof. Hitchcock says: "It may not be quite equal to the best of the Brandon paint, but would do for most purposes."

Not only are the Gilsun hills filled with ledges, but the surface is greatly diversified with boulders. On the hill north-west of the old Ballard place are several of remarkable size. The largest of these is conspicuous for a long distance to one approaching from the east. Its extreme dimensions are 15 feet in length, by 13 in height and $13\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth.

"Vessel Rock" is another notable boulder, resting on a ledge of coarse granite very near the center of the town. This is 45 feet in length, by 32 in breadth and 25 in height. It received its name from its striking resemblance to a vessel under full sail. This resemblance has been much marred by the falling of a large piece from the west side, which represented the bow and jib-boom of the vessel. Before its fall the breadth of the rock was very nearly equal to the length. The fall was doubtless occasioned by the earthquake of October 5, 1817, as it occurred the night before Thanksgiving following. The fall was heard by the Church family, who supposed it to be another earthquake. Another smaller piece lies a little farther west, which apparently fell off long before. Other fragments have fallen from different sides. The north-east corner of the rock affords a shelter sufficient for several persons, and tradition says that Indians, and subsequently white hunters, often spent the night there. The best view to give the peculiar "vessel" form of the rock is now cut off by the school-house. The one here given is from the south-east.* Fifteen or twenty rods west of this are other large bowlders of the same rock.

The soil of Gilsun is mostly rocky and heavy, strong to produce grass-like crops, but not well adapted for corn and the higher kinds of cultivation. It abounds in the usual varieties of vegetation found in granite regions and damp soils. It is probable that the fauna and flora are quite rich in the number of species, as the limit of white oak touches the south-western corner, and the boundary between the Canadian and Alleghanian fauna passes through the town.

Gilsun was originally heavily timbered with hemlock, beech, maple, birch, spruce, ash, poplar, bass-wood or linden, and a sprinkling of red oaks and large white pines. The last were abundant on the hills east and west of the Hammond Hollow. But little of the old growth is now left. The narrow valley through which Beaver Brook flows was known as "The Gulf," being dark with a thick growth of spruce and black ash. The hackmatack or larch is not rare. A very few white oaks are found near the south end of Surry Mountain. Battonwood, otherwise called the plane-tree or sycamore, grows sparsely along the river in the west part of the town. Butternuts are plenty in some places, and seem to be indigenous. Hickory and chestnut are not native, but have been introduced in some places, especially on the "minister lot." Black poplar or "Balm of Gilead," and a few Lombardy poplars have been introduced near dwellings. Of smaller trees, the larch, leverwood, whistlewood or striped maple, and mountain ash, frequent the hills and forests, while ironwood, willows, hazel, witch-hazel, and alders throng the valleys and banks of streams.

As elsewhere in New England, old, scraggy, decaying orchards testify to the fondness of the early settlers for apple-sauce and cider. Hardly any mark is more sure, whereby to find an old cellar-hole, than one or two half-dead apple-trees. By the scattering of pomace and the feeding of cattle, they have become so widely spread that the edge of almost every thicket shows its white and pink masses in spring, and its knurly globes of vinegary pulp in autumn. Other smaller indigenous fruits are plenty. Blackberries, raspberries, (red, black, and white!) blueberries, and strawberries abound: also service-berries, black and red cherries, choke-cherries and currants, checkerberries, bunchberries, thorn-apples, pigeon-berries, and the beautiful creeping snowberry deck the knolls in the thickets and the mossy woods.

The diversified and beautiful scenery which may be viewed from every Gilsun hill is adorned with an almost endless variety of flowers.

"When beechen buds begin to swell,
And woods the bluebird's warble know,
The yellow violet's modest bell
Peeps from the last year's leaves below."

The trailing arbutus perfumes the spring air.

"The liver-leaf puts forth her sister blooms
Of faintest blue."

The spring beauty with its delicate shading, snowy patches of innocence, the pure white blood-root wrapped in gray-green blanket, the elegant corydalis, the odd Dutchman's breeches, the bishop's cap with its creamy spikes, bellflowers, the yellow adder's tongue, sturdy jack-in-the-pulpit, purple and snowy trilliums, ladies' slippers, and the spicy linnaea, beautify field and wood, while fragrant

"Violets lean
O'er wandering brooks and springs unseen,
And columbines, in purple dressed,
Nod o'er the ground-bird's hidden nest."

* In the summer of 1877 the school-boys, with some assistance from the girls, built a monument of stone on its highest point.

The shad-bush, the cherry, and the thorn, the hobble-bush, and rarely the wild snow-ball fringe our streams and thickets with white, the rhodora tinges the swamps with purple, while the pastures, a little later, grow rosy with the low kalmia, or sheep-laurel. The finest of all our shrubs is the fragrant azalea, native to our thickets, but now mostly transferred to gardens. One small locality, a tongue of land of a few square rods between the Thompson Brook and the river, is covered with the beautiful mountain laurel, or spoonwood. This is remarkable as being the only spot for many miles where this shrub is found. Later, the fields are speckled with buttercups, white daisies, and clover; while autumn brings the twisted orchids, the closed soapwort, the white snake's head, and the splendid fringed gentian, —

"Blossom bright with autumn dew
And colored with the heaven's own blue."

Then the roadsides, the thickets, and the brambly hedges are decked with the blue and gold of a multitude of asterworts, golden-rods, and wild sunflowers. (Appendix A.)

It would be vain to attempt to enumerate the forms of insect life that crawl the ground, or wriggle in the waters, or creep and sing among the grasses of the field and foliage of the forests, or flit about as "living blossoms of the air," or make night hideous with their blood-thirsty hum.

Nor will it be possible to name save a few of the more prominent species of higher animals that inhabit the town. Formerly the brooks were filled with beautiful trout, now rendered small and scarce by the wiles of the tireless and remorseless fisherman. The river, too, was filled in the spring with millions of shad, now driven away by the mills that infest the stream. Shiners, dace, perch, pouts, pickerel, roach, suckers, and eels are about all that now tempt or reward the fisher's toil, whether in stream or pond. Snapping turtles and land turtles, brown, spotted, and scarlet lizards, are not rare. The common varieties of snakes are abundant in the grassy meadows. Adders, also, and water-snakes, are plenty. Black snakes are very rarely found. In the spring the swamps, everywhere, resound with the voices of frogs and toads, and the rarely seen tree-toad gaily chirps amid the foliage and the showers of June.

Song-birds abound in great variety almost throughout the year. The blue-bird, and soon after the robin, welcome the first warm days with their cheery notes. The ground-bird or song-sparrow, and the hair-sparrow, fill the air with their melody, while their slaty-white cousin more quietly chirps among the shrubs and brambles. In the thickets, the cat-bird, and rarely his near kinsman, the mocking-bird (!) of the South, and the brown thrasher utter their mimic notes, while now and then the quaint cry of the cuckoo is supposed to tell of present or approaching rain. The chewink and the bridge-loving pewee, with sharply reiterated name, challenge the acquaintance of every passer. Rarely may be heard the chitter of querulous wren, while swallows of various kinds twitter on the barn-roofs, dive into chimneys, or sweep in graceful curves through the air. Occasionally a gray plover flutters from a field of grass or a black-bird whistles in the meadow, while merry bobolinks flood the air with their unique melody. Lovely greenlets and shy warblers throng the woods, and crested cherry-birds squeal amid the orchard-boughs, while noisy king-birds snap up the unfortunate bee or saucily pursue the passing crow. At evening the boo of the plunging night-hawk interrupts the rich melody of the wood-thrush, or nightingale. Flopping bats are sure to discover an open window in their search for flies, and not unfrequently the weird cry of whip-poor-will is heard in the deepening twilight.

Birds distinguished for beauty as well as song are not rare. The humming-bird, with ruby throat, darts among the lilacs and lilies; the oriole, with liquid note, flashes his brilliant plumage amid the blossoms of orchard and garden; flocks of thistle-loving gold-finches bedeck the air in their jerky flight : the indigo-bird whistles from the shrubbery ; and occasionally a tanager, or a summer red-bird, almost startles the eye with his fiery brilliance. The whicker of the richly-clad, golden-winged woodpecker is often heard from the tree-tops, while his red-headed cousin haunts the orchards and newly-cleared fields. Wild pigeons, formerly abundant, are now scarce.

In the winter, yellow-birds and a few robins remain in the swamps and thick woods, while flocks of snow-birds and grossbeaks frequently visit the fields. The lively chickadee, in forest and about our dwellings, even in the coldest weather, keeps up his chirp of cheer. In warmer days the merry hammering of woodpeckers, and the shrill scream of the dandy jay, enliven the forest, while as spring comes on the Canada grouse drums on every hill-side. "The ubiquitous crow" exhibits his black coat and harsh croak at all seasons, and in every place.

Of water-fowl, we have the stilt bowing, balancing, and peeping along the flat stones of the larger streams, and sometimes near the dwellings and barns. Wild ducks, grebes, and goosanders are frequently seen, and have been known to breed along the river. Every season is heard the ominous cry of the loon, and occasionally a blue heron has been captured, while the kingfisher haunts the river every day with his noisy chatter.

Birds of prey are not few in number or variety. Hawks abound, from the small sparrowhawk to the tawny and powerful hen-hawk. Owls, too, find here a congenial home. The snowy owl is rarely seen. The barn-owl and the larger cat-owl are numerous, while the saw-whet and screech-owl are nightly heard from the forest. The bald eagle, not often seen, has at times found a summer home in this vicinity. Less than forty years since a pair remained here for two seasons, probably having a nest on Surry Mountain.

The early settlers found bears and wolves very plenty, and they have been occasionally seen till within the last thirty years. The lynx and the wild cat still rarely molest the sheep in the mountain pastures. Deer also were a great dependence to the first settlers, both for the flesh for food, and the hides to bring money or to exchange for other necessities of life. Tradition says that moose were found, though rarely. Beavers, too, were then plenty, as the name Beaver Brook testifies. Evidence also of their work is still seen. Lately, in ditching from Cranberry Hole, gnawed sticks were dug up, which soon crumbled away on being brought to the air. Now we have about our homes rats and mice, with an occasional weasel to diminish their numbers. Along our streams are musk-rats and minks, with rarely an otter. In the fields are found moles, meadow-mice, the beautiful jumping or deer mouse, woodchucks and spicy skunks. Chipmunks along the fences, red, gray, and flying squirrels in the thickets, rabbits and hares entice the youthful Nimrod to leave his toil to pursue them to their haunts. In rocky woods hedgehogs are very numerous. Raccoons frequently infest the corn-fields, and their cry is often heard in the autumn woods. Red foxes are plenty, with some cross foxes, and very rarely a black or silver-gray fox. The presence of civilized inhabitants has thus cleared our territory of the larger and more dangerous animals, that could rouse the fear of the child, or the zeal of the courageous hunter. (Chapter 27.)

CHAPTER III.

INDIANS.

THE Indian history of this town is exceedingly meagre. Even tradition, which like a thin mist so often exaggerates the objects seen through its obscuring veil, fails to bring the dusky forms of skulking aborigines into any considerable prominence in the background of Gilsun history. As will be hereafter seen, the proprietors of Boyle failed to make a settlement on account of danger from the Indians. Peter Hayward, the first settler in "Westmoreland Leg," was obliged, in 1755, to hurry his family to the fort at Keene for protection, while himself with a company of men went in pursuit of the treacherous foe, who had already killed one woman near the gate of the fort. The Indians, however, escaped, having captured one man, whom they carried to Canada. This Peter Hayward was well known to the Indians as a dangerous foe. In later times of quiet, a friendly Indian said that he lay at one time concealed in the bushes where he saw Mr. Hayward and his dog pass by on a log. He aimed his gun first at one and then at the other, but dared not fire, knowing that if he killed either the other would certainly kill him. It is remembered, that, after the Revolutionary war, an Indian was lurking around for some time, who made inquiries for Col. Smith (the Jonathan Smith, Jr., of the proprietors), and it was understood at the time that Col. Smith killed him, as the only means of saving his own life. There is a dim tradition of relics of two Indians having been found under a log heap in the valley by the river, south of the place now occupied by Milton Stearns. An Indian trail is said to have been traced in early times from the south part of the town over the hill east of Hammond Hollow, crossing the river near the May Brook, and so on to Warren Pond in Alstead. There can be no doubt that they were well acquainted with all these hills and streams, hunting bears and wolves and deer from Surry Mountain to Bearden, and fishing up and down the Ashuelot River. A few arrow-heads and other relics have been occasionally found. A large spear-head was dug up in repairing the road just at the turn below the brook, at the south end of the village. This was for many years in the possession of Philip Howard, but has been lost. A stone pestle, found near Brake Hill, is also lost. At the south end of Brake Hill, next the river, was a cleared spot of about half an acre, when the first white settlers came here. It had evidently been used by the Indians as a camping-place, being near a hole in the river favorable for fishing. This is about all the Indian history (?) which can be now picked up. It is very vague and shadowy, with scarcely the flavor of authentic tradition or the glamour of fanciful romance to give it interest or to awaken confidence. But however faint the traces of their sojourn, however dark and misty the tale of their slight intercourse with the white settlers, —

"Though 'mid the forests where they roamed
There rings no hunter's shout;
Yet their name is on our waters,
We may not wash it out."

CHAPTER IV.

CHARTER AND PROPRIETORSHIP.

THE territory afterwards called Gilsun was first granted by the name of Boyle. At "a Council holden at Portsmouth by his Excellency's Summons on Tuesday December 21 1752," the following petition was presented:—

To His Excellency Benning Wentworth Esq Gov^t of the Province of New Hampshire &c.
Humbly Shews

Groton March 16. 1752

WILLIAM LAWRENCE
THOMAS READ

The council unanimously advised the governor to make the grant. No name is here given to the town, but the names of the two petitioners and the location identify it as Boyle.

The charter is in almost the same words as that of Gilsun. (Pages 19, 20.) On the back is the following:—

The names of the Grantees of Boyle—Viz—Joseph Osgood, Ebenezer Harris, Ephraim Stevens, Nathaniel Davis, Jacob Farmer, Daniel Colburne, Stephen Poyers, Thomas Parker, William Parker, Joel Dix, Josiah Brown, John French, Joseph Barnes, Joseph Blanchard, Joseph Blanchard Jun^r, William Lawrence, Nathaniel Butterfield, Andrew Betty, James Thompson, Andrew Spalding, James Dutton Jun^r, John Parry, Daniel Stickney, Daniel Foster, Benjamin Barrot, Ben^j Parker, Samuel Greele, Robert Nivins, Timothy Taylor, Sampson French, Sam^l French, Zacheus Lovewell, John Coombs, William Coombs, John Varnum, John Kendall, Abraham Kendall, Thomas Buxby, Charles Barron, Zebediah Keyes, John Chamberlain, Joseph Kidder, Ezekiel Chace Esq^r, Jonathan Snow, Jonathan Chamberlain, Nathaniel Merrill, James Minot, Jonathan Coombs, Archibald Starke, Samuel Gibson, John Goffe, Joseph Danforth, Abel Laurence, Benjamin French, James Whitney, William Spaulding, Jeremiah Lawrence, Thomas Read, Joseph Fitch, Jonathan Cummins, Jonathan Cummins Jun^r, John Usher, Robert Usher, Henry Sherburne, Theodore Atkinson, Richard Wibird, Samuel Smith, John Downing, Sam^l Solley, Sampson Sheaffe, John Wentworth Jun^r, His Excellency Benning Wentworth Esq^r. A Tract of land to contain five hundred Acres which is to be accounted two of the within Shares— One whole share for the Incorporated Society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign Parts, one whole share for the first settled Minister of the Gospel in the said town— One whole Share for a Glebe for the ministry of the Church of England as by law established—

Entred and Recorded from the back of the Charter of Boyle the 30th Day of December 1752—

P^r THEODORE ATKINSON Sec^y

There is also a plan of Boyle corresponding to the description, and precisely the same as hereafter given of the town of Gilsun.

No record is found of the meeting of the above grantees. None of them ever settled in Boyle or vicinity, so far as can now be ascertained, and, with the single exception of Theodore Atkinson, the colonial secretary, they all disappear from our history with this document. The principal reason of their failure to settle the town was the troubles with the Indians, who, at that period, harassed the early settlers in the neighboring towns by their frequent attacks, slaughtering and carrying captive whole families, and often compelling others to leave their homes and flee to the fort at Keene for safety.

In March, 1761, Benjamin Bellows (afterwards major and colonel, the ancestor of the well-known family of that name in Walpole,) bought of Rebecca Blanchard, widow of Joseph Blanchard of Dunstable, Mass., the "Rights he had in Boyle." for £67. 10 sh., "sterling money." The number of rights thus conveyed was twenty-six, and the names of the original owners are given in the deed. Four days after, March 28, 1761, he also bought of Theodore Atkinson of Portsmouth, for £60. 15sh., "sterling money of Great Britain," twenty-seven rights in Boyle. May 1, 1761, he sold "fifty nine Right or Share of land in the Township of Boyle In the Prov.ⁿ of New Hamp^s. which s^d fifty Nine Rights is to Contain Eighteen thousand acres" for "£1350 lawful money." The purchasers were, as stated in the deed, "Samuel Gilburd Esq^r. Josiah Kilburn Tanner Thomas Sumner Gent. all of Heburn in the County of Hartford & Jonathan Smith of Bolton Husbandman In the County afores^d & Joseph Mack of Lime in the County of Newton and all in the Collency of Connecticut." This deed was witnessed May 14, 1761, by Peter Hayward and T. Chandler, and acknowledged the same day before Josiah Willard, justice of the peace.

These five men doubtless sold shares to those who became associated with them as the proprietors of Gilsun, though no record is found of the sale. The following are the only records of the proprietors of Boyle:—

August 14, 1761, a warrant was issued by Benjamin Bellows, Esq., to Clement Sumner, directing him to call a meeting of the proprietors of Boyle. "at the house of M^r Peter Haywood [Hayward] of Westmoreland, on the sixteenth of October next, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon." No record of this meeting can be found. The only records of meeting are the following:—

At a Town meeting for Boyle holden in Hebron on March the 9th 1762: the following Persons were chosen, or voted for the present Year into the public Offices of the said Town of Boyle. — Josiah Kilburn, Moderator of Proprietor's Meeting.

Inasmuch as the charter of Boyle had been forfeited by a failure, on account of the Indian troubles, to fulfill the conditions therein named, a petition was sent to the governor and council, as follows : —

To His Excellency Benning Wentworth Esq. Governor and Commander in Chief in and over his Majestys Province of New Hamp^t and To the hon^{ble} his majestys Council for said Province. The memorial of Thomas Sumner in Behalf of himself and Other Prop^s in the Town of Boyle in said Province Shews That in the year 1752 your Excell^y & Honors Granted the Township of Boyle upon the conditions & under the restrictions as sd Charter Declared —

That by the Intervention of the Late Warr your memorialists Constituents have been (till very Lately) Prevented (for the reason aforesaid) from Doing the Duty, but Notwithstanding they have sever'd and Drawn by Lotts the Said Tract of Land to & among all the Prop^r that many of your Memorialists Constituents are now actually Living with their families on S^d Tract of Land & Many more Going on Early in the Spring & there are now Many acres of Wheat Sown there & In all Probability the Township Will be Intirely Settled according to the True & Intent & meaning of the Grant by Next Summer, but As the Time Prefixed in the Grant was Elapsed & that Before it Was Possible (for the reason afores^d) for 'em To Enter & Improve, they Conceive it absolutely Necessary that your Excell^y & Honors (if you think fit) Sho^d Grant a Suspension of the forfeiture & further Indulge 'em with Such a Term of time as they be enabled to fulfil the Duty aforesaid & are encouraged to ask the fav^r Because your Excell^y & honors are Wanted To Endulge Prop^m in the Like Circumstances & your Memorialist Shall ever pray—

THO^s. SUMNER.

Jan^y 24, 1763.

Tradition says there was a dispute whether the town should be called Gilbert or Sumner. Rev. Clement Sumner, of Keene, was the son of Thomas Sumner, and had married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Gilbert. Possibly this family connection led to the compromise by which the first syllable of each name was taken to form the unique name of Gil-Sum.

The original charter was, for many years, supposed to be lost. The substituted copy, signed by Philip Carrigain, secretary of state, bears date July 22, 1807. I have recently discovered the charter itself among the records of the town of Surry. The following is an exact copy : —

PROVINCE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Recorded in the Book of Charters Page 494

The figures annexed to the names are the numbers of the rights drawn, and were written afterwards by a different hand.

It will be observed that this charter not only grants the territory but incorporates a township. Mutatis mutandis it is almost identical with the charter of Boyle. The only important difference is the provision setting apart one share for school purposes, which is not found in the charter of Boyle.

A fac-simile of the plan on the back of the charter is herewith presented. The scale is very nearly two miles to an inch. The corner marked B W is Gov. Wentworth's share of 500 acres.

One thing manifest here, as in all ancient deeds and surveys, is the carelessness in estimating the number of acres. Land was of so little value, that a few acres more or less in a hundred was little regarded. It was intended that the land should never fall short of the estimate, and it generally overrun a large amount, as here. Thus the description and plan give 25,340 acres, instead of 23,000 named in the charter. The proprietors, however, lost more than the extra amount, by the Masonian claim, as seen hereafter.

The first record of the proprietors, after the second grant, is as follows : —

At a legal meeting of The Proprietors of the Town of Gilsun in the Province of Newhampshire. Holden at the House of Cap^t Ichabod Phelps inholder in Hebron in the County of Hartford and Colony of Conecticut, on Tuesday the 16 August 1763, Being met and duly formed,

- 1 Chose Tho^s Pitkin jr moderator of S^d meeting
- 2 Chose Clement Sumner Proprietors Clark,
- 3 Chose Tho^s Sumner Clark for S^d meeting to Transmitt the votes to S^d Clement Sumner,
- 4 Chose Samuel Gilbert, Esqr D^r W^m Sumner & Tho^s Pitkin Jr Cessors, for S^d Propriety
- 5 Chose Samuel Gilbert Treasurer
- 6 Chose Thomas Sumner, & Joshua Dart Collectors
- 7 Voted to raise a Rate of one Pound thirteen Shillings & Sixpence lawfull money of the Bay on each Right to defray the Charges of S^d Township that have already arisen and Shall arise
- 8 Voted that S^d Money Shall be paid to the Proprietors Treasurer in the Space of Six weeks from the dates hereof
- 9 Chose Samuel Gilbert Thomas Pitkin Joshua Dart, a Committe to ajust the accounts of S^d Propriety.
- 10 Voted to draw the money out of the Treasury by themselves or their order to Defray S^d Charges
- 11 Voted to adjurn S^d meeting to the House of mr Benj^m Buel inholder in S^d Hebron &c till the 30 day of August Instant 1763 at one of the Clock in the afternoon

At the adjourned meeting the subject of dividing the land was the principal topic. A committee consisting of Joseph Mack, Clement Sumner, and Ichabod Fisher, were chosen to rectify a mistake in the "Ranging Table" whereby "Some Rights have drawn more & Some less than their real proportion." Each share was to consist of 250 acres, and Jonathan Smith, Samuel Gilbert, Thomas Sumner, Thomas Pitkin, and Benjamin Sumner were a committee "to lay out the Common & undevided land." Samuel Gilbert, Esq., Thomas Pitkin, and Jonathan Smith were chosen "to Settle affairs with major Bellows."

From the records and deeds it becomes very evident that land speculation was extensively carried on. Many prominent names were of men who had no intention of settling on their lands, but bought only to sell again. Some, like Col. Bellows, owned whole townships. The Gilberts and the Sumners were not bona fide settlers, but leading land speculators. Capt. Gilbert, from whom the town was named, probably never came here at all; yet he took the management of affairs, at first, almost entirely into his own hands, and that the actual settlers were far from satisfied is plain from their records. In a warrant for a meeting at Jonathan Smith's house, July 16, 1764, appears the following article : —

2 To Chuse a Committee to Treet and Setel with Cap^t Samuel Gilbert of hebron aboute a Sum of money that was paid to the Rev^d Mr Clement Sumner of Keen which s^d proprietors think hath no Just Right to and that s^d Committee agree and Setel with S^d Gilbert about a man or men whose name or names were Sent to be put into the Charter whose name or names is soped that he the S^d Gilbert Struck out and put others in and that S^d Committee agree and Setel with S^d Gilbert about the overplus Rights that fall in what was Calld Masons patton ["the patent line,"] which S^d proprietors think they have a Just Right to have and further that S^d Committee Setel with the old Committee which Bought the Town of Gilsun about the Six overplush Rights which the S^d proprietors think they have a Right to have and make their Return of the Same.

Thomas Pitkin, Jr., Peter Olcott, and Jonathan Smith were chosen said committee. September 21, 1768, Obadiah Willecox, Jonathan Smith, and John Marvin were chosen "to Settle with Samuel Gilbert about the Lands he Laid out after the first Laying out." Also chose Obadiah Willecox and Joshua Dart "to go and take advice of Lawyer Olcott in the matter." This was Simeon Olcott, Esq., of Charlestown. A warrant for meeting January 9, 1769, "at the House of M^r. Jonathan Smiths," has the following article : —

"3^y: to See if the proprietors will Exsept of the Settelment made with Capt Samuel Gilbert about the money that was Given to M^r. Sumner of Keen and the five overplush Rights that the Committee that Bought S^d Town Resarved to themselves, 4^y to Chuse a Committee to Setel with Capt Gilbert about the Rights of Land he pretends to Clame in S^d town and Granted in the Charter."

It is evident they felt themselves much aggrieved, thinking that Capt. Gilbert had taken the lion's share for himself and his son-in-law, Rev. Mr. Sumner. They voted not to accept the committee's return of settlement with him, and, apparently thinking it of no use, declined to appoint any further committee. It seems, however, that the committee's settlement held good. The committee having been appointed for that purpose, their action probably was legally binding on the proprietors. Their settlement is recorded at length, and is signed, Peter Olcott, Jonathan Smith, Samuel Gilbert. Mr. Pitkin's name is omitted, and perhaps he did not concur. The date of the settlement is Dec. ye 4th, 1764, and clears Capt. Gilbert, throwing the responsibility as to the money paid to Clement Sumner on Mr. Sumner himself. About the names inserted in the charter, the committee say "Capt. Gilbert has Settled to our Satisfaction:" "as to the third article we find that he had a Right to take them Rights to himself which was chartered to him in the East End of s^d Township as to the fourth article we find their time and Trouble & Fateague that they hant more than to pay them Honourably &c."

It appears that all town business prior to 1769 was transacted by the proprietors without separate organization. The roads attracted their principal attention. March 13, 1764, Jonathan Smith, Woolston Brockway, and Joseph Mack were chosen "to lay out and Clear necessary Rodes or highways." In April of the same year a road was laid out by this committee. Other roads were laid out by the proprietors in 1764-65-66. (Chapter 13.)

August 26, 1766, Ebenezer Dewey, Abel Allen, and Joseph Spensor were chosen "to Lay out and Clear Hlghways." "Chose Ebenezer Dewe Obadiah Willeox Medad Thornton a Committee to Tret with the Town of Keen about a Highway Leeding from the Town of Gilsum to Keen Meeting house."

No subsequent action of the proprietors indicates any care of town affairs. Previous to this they had all along chosen assessors and collectors as they needed. March 13, 1764, Obadiah Willeox was chosen proprietors' clerk in place of Clement Sumner, who was not a Gilsum man, and had evidently fallen into disfavor about the transactions with Col. Bellows. Mr. Willeox remained clerk till December 20, 1798, when he "Resined," and "Lemuel Holmes, Esqr." was chosen in his place. November 6, 1810, Mr. Holmes "Resined," and "Capt Samuel Allen was chosen Clerk and remained in office till the close of the Records."

Assessments were made from time to time to defray various expenses. The first two, of 1762 and 1763, have already been noticed. (Pages 18, 22.) The next was July 16, 1764, "two Dollers on Each Right." August 26, 1766, "Eighteen Shillings on Each Proprietor," was assessed: May 6, 1771, "Six Shillings on Each Right"; June 9, 1772, "one Doller on Each Right," and the same amount March 18, 1805. September 7, 1807, "Voted to Rais 2 Dollers upon Each Proprietors Share." February 23, 1813, "Voted to Rais money by subscription." Thus the whole amount assessed on each proprietor for fifty years was less than nineteen dollars.

The principal business which occupied the proprietors, in early times, was the division of the land; and, in later times, the looking up and defending their claims as proprietors against claims of other settlers. The committee appointed in August, 1763, (p. 22) seem to have neglected, or not to have finished, laying out the land, for at a meeting July 16, 1764, "Chose Joseph Mack Nathanel Dart Job Gleson a Committee to Lay out to Each proprietors their Equal proportion in S^d Town." Something had already been done while the town was called Boyle, as appears by the numbers still claimed on the back of the charter, and the survey hereafter mentioned by Caleb Willard seems to have been made at that early date. But there was still great confusion, and the looseness with which surveys were then made caused continual trouble. In the call for the meeting of August 26, 1766, is an article "to Chuse a Standing Committee to Deside all Controverseys that may arise By the Lotts Enterfearing one on another and fienely Settlet the Same Between man and Man when aply'd to." It was, however, dismissed without action. The warrant for November 3, 1767, contains several articles referring to this subject, all of which were dismissed except the following: "to See if the proprietors will Vote to Establish the Lines on the west Side of the Mountain where they now are," which was voted.

This is only one of many points, showing that what is now Surry was settled much more rapidly than the more eastern parts of the town. The meadows along the river were more attractive to the settlers than the rough, hilly farms on the east of the mountain.

The most important of the proprietors' records is the following:—

At a meeting of the proprietors of the town of Gilsum Leagely warn'd and Holden at the house of Joshua Darts in Surry on monday the fifteenth Day of January Ad 1770 Being met and Duely formd the following Votes were then past 1th Chose John Marvin Moderator to Govern Said Meeting 2th at the Same meeting it was Voted to Exsept of the plan of Boyl now Gilsum in mauer and form as Surv'd and Returnd By Caleb Willard Surver of Lands, with an alowene of fore acres to Each Hundred acres for Highways: 3th at the Same meeting Voted that Each proprietor Shall hold two hundred and fifty acres to Each Right or Share of Land and the Same Be Recorded at Large on the proprietors Book 4th Voted to Exsept of the Survey of the Land Laid out By Breed Bachelor Surver of Lands and the Committee that asisted him: 5th Chose obadiah Willcox Joshua Dart and Ebenezer Killburn Lot Layers to Lay out to Each Share two Hundred and fifty acres: 6th Chose John Marvin to ascest the Clark in Recording: 7th Chose Thomas Hervey Johnathan Smith jr and Joshua Dart a Committee to treet with Westmore Land and walpool to measher their town Lines to See if hant got more that their Complement of Land.

att the sam meeting it was voted that Each Proprietors Shall Hoold their Number of Loots to the amount of two Hundred and fifty acrs to Each Right or Shear as was Lotted and Drawn (viz)

Then follows a description of sixty-four rights or shares, the substance of which will be found on the map, with reference to the table.

The spelling is given as in the earliest record of the "draw." In three different records, No. 41 is given to Joseph, John, and Josiah Mack. No. 45 in a later record is given to John Skinner.

The map has been constructed from four different sources. First, the record of the drawing just referred to. Second, a parchment map with the following inscription: —

A Plan of the Township of Boyle or Gilsom laid out according to the Charter of the same. By Caleb Willard. There are 4 Acres allowed to every 100 Acres for a Road and so in proportion to Every parcel of Land laid out.

JONATHAN SMITH,

Third, an ancient copy of the same on brown pasteboard with the numbers much more distinct than on the parchment; and, Fourth, a map of the same owned by Silvanus Hayward, who was surveyor in this town for so many years. This map bears the following inscription: —

A plan of Gilsom as drew by Caleb Willard a true Copy from the original & Contains Gilsom & Surry & part of Sullivan & is laid down at 160 rods to an Inch: this Copy taken Jan^y 14th 1796

This contains also the lots at the east end of the town, in the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth ranges, as surveyed by Breed Bachelor, October, 1763, and shows "the Gore" where the Willard and Bachelor surveys failed to meet. The river courses have not been verified, but are given as on the old map.

It cannot be expected that the map as here presented is entirely free from errors. The ancient data disagree in many particulars. In some cases these discrepancies have been reconciled, but in others no explanation has been found, save that there must be an error in the old records. For instance, half of the fifth lot in the ninth range was drawn to the "Minister Lot;" but, in 1794, a deed from Rev. Elisha Fish, as recorded, conveyed to Samuel Seward, for £48, the east half of the fourth lot, ninth range, "originally granted to the first minister."

The lots on the west of "the Mountain" were intended to contain fifty acres each, — those on the east, one hundred. As measured on the map, by the scale, those on the east are one hundred and sixty rods east and west, and one hundred and four north and south. But in measuring these old lines now, there is found a difference frequently of from ten to twenty rods. A lack of accuracy is also manifest upon the map itself. It will at once be noticed that the third lot on the east of the mountain is only about one-half as wide as the rest, and the second lot is wider. Of this no explanation is given. In old deeds the third lot is sometimes called fifty acres, and sometimes seventy-five. This inaccuracy occasioned trouble very early. In 1771, one article in the call for a meeting is : — to See if the proprietors will agree to make new Bounds and New Lines Between pertickelor Lotts where their is manifest Earor in the Lines Run by Caleb Willard.

The same year, Jeremiah Stiles, surveyor, was employed "to measure the Town of Gilsum exclusive of What Westmoreland takes off." He was also employed, two years later, to lay out the undivided land at the northeast corner of the town, including two hundred and fifty acres in "the Gore" to Samuel Wadsworth on the right of "Rubin Sumner." Nov. 5, 1771, Thomas Harvey, Stephen Griswold, and Ebenezer Kilburn were appointed "to Run Round those Lotts that are not Run and make Division between man and man." They employed William Russel as surveyor. Other committees for a like purpose were chosen from time to time as late as 1789, when Moses Hale was the surveyor.

It will be seen from the map, that Gilsum originally extended more than a hundred rods beyond the east line of Sullivan. At the northeast corner it was cut off by the "Curve" or "Patent Line," so called, which is the present boundary between Gilsum and Stoddard. This was the most western of the different lines run by the Masonian proprietors, and was intended to be run in a curve sixty miles from the sea. Parts of this line are still preserved in the west lines of Fitzwilliam, Marlborough, Stoddard, Washington, and other towns. It cut off from Gilsum a large tract, including the Governor's lot and the lot for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

This "Curve Line" evidently occasioned the proprietors considerable trouble. Though they laid out and drew lots east of this line, yet it seems doubtful whether they ever realized much profit therefrom.

July 13, 1768. Sampson Stoddard & Jonathan Blanchard for themselves and others, Propr^s of a Tract of Land Called Monad^k No. 7.

Petitioned, that as a considerable part of the land granted to Samuel Gilbert & others, by the name of Gilsum, in July 1763, was (as we apprehend By mistake) laid out within Masons Patent So Called Long Since granted to us & associates. That the Grantees of Said Gilsum have failed making any Settlement on any part So falling within Masons Claim, that to prevent Disputes Between his Majestys Good Subjects, We pray that we may allow^d to Improve our Lands as far West as the Patent Line aforesaid &c.

Jan. 9, 1772, Jonathan Smith was chosen to represent to the governor that certain shares had not been settled according to the provisions of the charter, and to ask that they might therefore be regranted. He was also instructed to "make application to his Excel^{ty} the Governor & Council to make up to the Proprietors the Compliment of Land which our Charter contains." That this application refers to the part cut off by the "Curve Line," is seen not only by the subsequent action of the proprietors, but in the fact that, otherwise, instead of less they had much more land than was specified in the charter. June 10, 1773, they voted "to Pay Samuel Gilbart and others that had Demands on the Proprietors in Common and undivided Lands East of the Ninth Range not yet Laid out as far as the Patten Line So Called," reserving certain rights to Samuel Wadsworth and John Byenton. That they received no satisfaction from the governor and council is apparent from the proposition in the warrant for a meeting May 16, 1774, "to write home also to his Majesty for the Confirmation of our Charter." The same thing is seen by the charter of Stoddard, which was granted in November, 1774, making "the Patten Line so called" its western boundary, beginning at the northwest corner of Packersfield, thence running seven miles to a stake and stones. This cut off not only the east part of Gilsun but of Marlow also, and occasioned considerable trouble between these towns. It is not strange that the proprietors were persistent in pressing their claims, as it involved the title to more than four thousand acres.

In May, 1788, it was voted to divide the common land at the east end of the town, "to Each Right their Equal Share," and Capt. Thomas Harvey, Col. Jonathan Smith, and Capt. Ebenezer Kilburn were appointed to lay out and make a plan of the same, for which service they were to receive fifty acres of land. Several adjourned meetings were held, at which nothing was done, apparently owing to the negligence or unwillingness of Col. Smith, as we find that on December 10th he was summarily dismissed from the committee, no cause being assigned, and Levi Fuller chosen in his place. At the next meeting, June 2, 1789, the committee reported, and the lots were drawn as shown on the map.

At the annual town meeting in 1794, Gilsun "Voted to Opose the Town of Stoddard in their Petition to the General Court that there jurisdiction Line may Exstend to the Curved Line." Opposition, however, was of no avail, and the present boundary between Gilsun and Stoddard is that same "Curved Line." This was established by an act of the legislature passed June 20, 1797, and approved the next day, giving to Stoddard —

All that strip of Land claimed by said Stoddard lying on the Easterly side of the curved line of Masons Patent as run by Major Joseph Blanchard which strip is included in the grants of said towns of Marlow and Gilsun (excepting what is included in the Corporation of Sullivan) with the inhabitants living thereon.

At a meeting of the proprietors Oct. 2, 1804, Lemuel Holmes, Esq., was chosen to attend the Gen^l Court and Examine the Records of the State Respecting the Mason Clame and the Settlement Between the Committies Chosen by the State and the Masonian Committee and there Report and the Gen^l Courts Proceedings thereon. The next March, 1805, they Chose John Chaberin agent to attend the Gen^l Court in June Next for which they promis to pay him thirty Dollars also Voted to Chuse a Committee of three to Procure the Necessary Evidence to Carry to the Gen^l Court Chose Ebenezer Kilburn Clement A Sumner * & Lemuel Holmes for Said Committee.

About the same date the town "Voted to rais $15 dollars to help the proprietors of Gilsun to Support their pition in the General Court respecting the Masonian Claims."

At a proprietors meeting in July of the same year, the committee chosen to "Look up and take Care of the unlocated Land" was "impowered to Commence a Suit at Law if Necessary against those that now Clame S^d Land." In June, 1806, "Voted to Carry on the action now pending in Court Respecting the Last Division in Gilsun Township." March 1, 1808, "Chose Col. Jon^d Smith to attend at Charleston at Court to assist Capt Killburn in Defending the Suit in favour of the Proprietors " Feb. 2, 1813, " Voted that Lie^r L Fuller be a Committee to defend the Lawsuit now pending."

* Son of Rev. Clement Sumner.

In December, 1782, it was voted to sell "all the undivided Land at the North End of the Mountain in Surry that is not already Drawn" This was estimated at 258 acres, and was sold for fifty pounds to "Elisha Briggs of Keene Millrite."

After "the last Division" of 1789, no meetings were held for nine years, when the only business was to choose a new clerk, and a committee "to Transcribe the Proprietors Book and Record what of the doings of the Proprietors that is not yet Recordid: Only Enterd on paper as minits:" At the next meeting, Feb. 18, 1799, Lemuel Holmes, the new clerk, was allowed "13 Dollers for Transcribing the Book & Other Servises." This copy is the one we now have. The original is in the town clerk's office at Surry.

The remaining history of the proprietors is mostly the looking-up of undivided lands, and prosecuting claims to such corners and gores as could be found left out of their former careless surveys. Men who supposed they had a clear title to the lands they had occupied, every now and then found themselves confronted by a claim of the proprietors to some strip not described in the deeds they held. The proprietors evidently took much pains to look up such cases. Some things seem to be easily read between the lines of the record. The meetings were generally held at some tavern; Robinson's or McCurdy's in Surry, or Grimes's, afterwards Smith's, in Gilsum. A frequent record after the organization is "adjourned one hour." Usually no business was transacted after this adjournment; but sometimes matters which had been hanging along for months or years before, were disposed of with great facility. Knowing the habits of the times, we can have no doubt of the festive nature of the recess taken, or the cause of the facility with which business was sometimes closed up after it. A man on whose land they levied a claim, if he understood how to manage the matter, could apparently settle without difficulty after an adjournment of this kind, during which he, of course, was the host. In short, if the man treated freely, he could settle easily; but if not, he would have to pay a round sum. These things are not, indeed, recorded, but the clue is given by which they may be fairly inferred. In 1814 their records come suddenly to a close. They had apparently made good and sold all the claims they could establish, and their "occupation was gone." Jan. 11, 1814, the committee reported having sold lands for $271. One item is, "Sold the Colpit lot So Cald to Calvin Lock for $100."

A meeting was held February 8th, at which various accounts were allowed, and a piece of land "that Esqr Robinson pretends to own under the mountain," was sold to Samuel Robinson by his "giving his Note to Edo Kilburn" for sixteen dollars. The meeting was adjourned to "the first tuesday in may Next to meet at L, L. Fullars." They seem to have failed to come to time, for the only subsequent record is as follows:—

1814 May 5 I the subscriber took ten Dollars of Lieu Calvin Lock of Sullivau and 6th of May paid it over to Lieu L. Fullar by Request of S^r Fuller & S^r Lock—

CHAPTER V.

FORMATION OF SURRY AND SULLIVAN.

THE natural features of the town, as originally chartered, were such as to render a division almost a necessity. Scarcely a year had elapsed from the giving of the charter, when in the call for a proprietors' meeting, July 16, 1764, was inserted an article "to See if Said Proprietors will Vote and Set off the west End of Said Town of Gilsun as far East as the top of the Mountain." It was, however, dismissed without action. The settlers in what was called "Westmoreland Leg" lying between the west end of Gilsun and Keene, were as anxious as any for the formation of a new town: and the next action of which we find record was that of Westmoreland, March 12, 1766, when it was "Voted to set of the people to Gilsun that Belong to the North East corner of this Town from Walpole Corner to Keen Line." This seems to have hastened the movement on the part of Gilsun people, as among the papers sent to the provincial assembly with the petition for the new town are the following:—

Most of these are recognized at once as original Surry names. Peter Hayward was the first settler in Westmoreland, near the northeast corner of "Westmoreland Leg." Samuel Hall, Benjamin Whitney, and Jonathan Parish probably belonged to "the Leg." Benjamin Whitney was at the battle of Bunker Hill.

Leave was granted "to bring in a Bill for incorporating said Town prayed for, the Bounds to be agreeable to the said Plan." The bill was enacted March 2, 1769, and from that date Gilsum included only what lies east of the division between the first and second ranges of hundred-acre lots.

The notch, 260 rods long and 80 wide, described in the petition, belonged to the Kilburns, and it is probable Joel Kilburn resided there. It was doubtless their wish to be included in Gilsum, according to the petition. It will be noticed, however, that the act of incorporation made the bounds agreeable to the plan and not to the petition. On the plan accompanying the papers, no such notch is found, but the line accords with the present town boundary.

INCORPORATION OF SULLIVAN.

Eighteen years after Surry was formed, Gilsum lost another large portion of territory out of the southeast corner of the town. At the time Surry was set off, there were probably no inhabitants east of the present Sullivan line. Afterwards, when the farms east and south of the Bearden hill began to be settled, the people found it burdensome to cross "the gulf" for Sabbath meetings and town gatherings. It was impossible to locate the meeting-house where all parties would be satisfied. The only solution of the difficulty seemed to be the formation of a new town. The following petition was sent to the legislature:—

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened.

Humbly shew, your Petitioners, the subscribers, Inhabitants of the Towns of Keene, Packersfield, Gilsum and Stoddard. That they live remote from the centres of their respective Towns and by reason of distance and bad roads are deprived * town privileges. That they cannot enjoy the conveniences of public worship—That some of their duties as members of their several towns are by their situation very burdensome—That if they might be incorporated into a separate and distinct township it would be highly advantageous to them, and no detriment to the towns to which they now belong—That they are encouraged to hope that no objections will be made to their being thus incorporated unless by the town of Gilsum, and that those objections may be easily obviated—

The prayer of this their humble Petition therefore is—That the tract of land marked out upon the plan herewith exhibited may be set off from the several towns aforesaid into a distinct township by the name of Orringe, and the Inhabitants of it incorporated as aforesaid — and your Petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

Other papers show that Gilsum made no objection to the division. Packersfield objected, as it "would be a means of removing the present centre and frustrate our Design in Building a House for Public Worship and thro the Town into the uttermost confusion imaginable." The legislature appointed a committee to view the premises, the chairman of which was Lemuel Holmes of Surry. They doubtless reported in favor, as the act of incorporation was passed Sept. 27, 1787.

This left Gilsum substantially in the same form as at present. A few acres, however, on the north side of the river were taken from Sullivan and annexed to Gilsum in 1873. The south bank of the Ashuelot now forms the town line, from a few rods below Collins's factory till it strikes the west line of Sullivan.

In 1846, an effort was made to annex the northeast part of the town to Marlow, but an article in favor of the project was dismissed.

In 1874, a portion of Alstead, including what is known as "South Woods," petitioned to be annexed to Gilsum. As Alstead was burdened with a large debt, and Gilsum would be obliged to assume a share of the same, the town dismissed the article.

CHAPTER VI.

THE VERMONT TROUBLES.

GILSUM, with other towns west of the "Curve Line," was drawn into the triple controversy between New York, New Hampshire, and Vermont. Both New York and New Hampshire laid claim to what is now Vermont. From 1749 to 1764, Gov. Wentworth granted the territory for more than one hundred and twenty-five towns west of the Connecticut River. When the royal decision was given against New Hampshire, New York refused to recognize the claims of the settlers to these lands. But the sturdy "Green Mountain Boys" would not be driven from their homes, and in 1777 published a declaration "that they would at all times consider themselves as a free and independent State," and petitioned Congress to receive them into the Union. Having adopted a constitution, representatives assembled for the first time at Windsor, Vt., in 1778. Sixteen towns from the east side of the river sent a committee to ask that they might be included in the new State of Vermont. They claimed that New Hampshire was originally a grant to Mason, and extended no farther west than the "Curve Line"; that all towns west of that line had been granted by authority of the royal governors, and, therefore, since the royal authority had been overthrown, they "were not connected with any State," and were "at perfect liberty to determine for themselves what jurisdiction they would be under."

The anticipated conflict with New Hampshire made the Vermont Assembly hesitate. They granted the request, but at the next session in October, though their representatives were admitted to seats, they nevertheless left these towns practically "out in the cold," by refusing them a County organization. On this, the members from these towns withdrew and called a convention which met at Cornish, Dec. 9, 1778. This convention determined to make proposals to New Hampshire, whereby the towns east of the Green Mountains should join that State. At its next session, in February, 1779, the Vermont Assembly dissolved all connection with towns east of the river. But this failed to settle matters, as New Hampshire was now in hopes to extend her territory farther west. The inhabitants in the southeast part of Vermont held a convention in October, 1780, in which it was proposed "to unite in one political body all the inhabitants from Mason's grant, on the east side of the Connecticut River, to the heights of land on the west side." This State was to be called New Connecticut. In the following November, a convention of towns in Cheshire County was held at Walpole, and appointed a committee to confer with others and "consider what is proper to be done." This committee consisted of Dr. William Page and Col. Samuel Hunt of Charlestown, Capt. Lemuel Holmes of Surry, Daniel Jones, Esq., of Hinsdale, and Col. Benjamin Bellows of Walpole. They recommended that a convention should be held at Charlestown the next January. Forty-three towns were represented in the Charlestown convention. They appointed a committee to confer with the Vermont Assembly in reference to terms of union, and adjourned to meet at Cornish, in February, when the Assembly would be in session at Windsor, Vt., only a few miles away. The Assembly accepted this proposition, on condition that two-thirds of the towns interested, on both sides of the river, should approve of it, and adjourned till April. They found on assembling that the necessary number of towns had given a favorable vote, and the union was therefore consummated. Representatives from thirty-five towns on the east side of the river took their seats as members. The towns south of the north line of Claremont and east of the river were organized into Washington County. After meeting at Bennington the following June, the Vermont Legislature assembled Oct. 11, 1781, at Charlestown. The Lieutenant Governor and one of the councilors were chosen from the east side of the river. Vermont had thus taken actual possession of nearly a third part of New Hampshire, and it was evidently impossible that such a state of affairs should long continue without some violent contention. Two Chesterfield men having been arrested and lodged in Charlestown jail by a Vermont sheriff, the New Hampshire Assembly authorized Col. Hale, the sheriff of Cheshire County, to release them, by force if necessary. Not succeeding in the attempt, he was himself arrested by the Vermont sheriff and committed to the same jail. In retaliation, Dr. William Page of Charlestown, who had accepted the office of sheriff under Vermont authority, was arrested by order of the New Hampshire House of Representatives and confined in Exeter jail. The danger of actual civil war between the two States was imminent. Vermont was making military preparations, and in January, 1782, New Hampshire ordered a thousand men to be raised and sent into Cheshire County to support the civil officers. But, largely through the influence of Gen. Washington and the inducements offered by Congress, Vermont was led to a wiser policy, and on the twenty-third of February, 1782, the Legislature at Bennington, Vt., passed resolutions dissolving their union with the towns east of the Connecticut, and accepting their present state lines. This ended the conflict, the disaffected towns returning quietly to their former state allegiance. For this concession, Vermont expected to be received into the Union at once, but was much disappointed by being kept out for nine years, during which period she was named, by the humorists of that day, "The Future State."

The loss of our records leaves us to other sources for the action of Gilsum in these troubles. It has already been seen that Surry was represented in the Walpole convention by Capt. Holmes. It seems probable that Gilsum sent a delegate to the Charlestown convention, but there are no records to determine the fact. Gilsum voted to join Vermont, and was represented in the Assembly at Windsor, and at Charlestown, by Ebenezer Dewey. Surry was represented by Woolston Brockway.

Surry records show, that, during the period of union, town meetings were called in the name of the State of Vermont and County of Washington, and there can be no doubt the same was done in Gilsum.

NOTE.—Those wishing to know more of this controversy are referred to Bouton's Provincial and State Papers, Vol. IX., in the town clerk's office, and Saunderson's History of Charlestown. From these sources the preceding account has mostly been taken.

CHAPTER VII.

GILSUM IN THE REVOLUTION.

"What heroes from the woodland sprung,
When, through the fresh awakened land,
The thrilling cry of Freedom rung,
And to the work of warfare strung
The yeoman's iron hand!

"As if the very earth again
Grew quick with God's creating breath,
And from the sods of grove and glen,
Rose ranks of lion-hearted men
To battle to the death."

THE attempt to construct a satisfactory history of Gilsum during the "times that tried men's souls" in the period of the Revolution, is much like "making bricks without straw." The early records of the town were in unbound manuscript. The marriages, births, and deaths were copied into the first and second bound volumes. The remaining records were subsequently lost, probably through some carelessness in the transfer from one town clerk to another. Consequently the votes of the town during the stormy period prior to 1789 are entirely missing. The only item in our town books, which seems to indicate that there was any Revolutionary war, is the following among the deaths: "Ido 4th Son of Elizabeth Church Diparted this life Sep^r. 19—1777 Kild in Battle." The records of almost any other twenty-five years could have been better spared. We know that the fathers of the town were thoroughly imbued with the spirit of liberty, and devoted their lives and their property to the sacred cause, with untiring zeal and self-denying heroism.

As already seen, that bloody conflict known as the "French and Indian War," occurred before the settlement of Gilsum. In it, however, were engaged some of those who afterwards settled in Gilsum, as, for instance, Solomon Mack and John Bingham, [Biog.] and doubtless many others. A curious letter relating to those times was written in 1813 by Abner Sanger, then residing in Gilsum. (Appendix B.)

The names and record of those who served in the Revolutionary army have been obtained from state documents. These, and a few family traditions of uncertain value, are the only sources from which this chapter has been compiled.

Aug. 25, 1775, the Provincial Congress "recommended to the Select Men of the several Towns, . . . to take an exact Number of the Inhabitants of their respective Districts, including every soul in the Same," . . . also to "return the Number of the Fire Arms in their respective Districts fit for use, and the Number wanting to compleat one for every person capable of using them, . . . adding there to the Quantity of Powder in each place; and where there is a Public Stock to return a separate Account thereof, & that the whole be returned to the Committee of Safety for this Colony."

In compliance with this recommendation, we find the following return from Gilsum:—

On enrollment list of March, 1777, Gilsun reports thirty-nine men from sixteen to fifty years old.

The Continental Congress having "recommended to the several . . . Committees of Safety of the United Colonies, immediately to cause all Persons to be disarmed, within their Respective Colonies, who are notoriously disaffected to the cause of AMERICA, or who have not associated, and refuse to associate, to defend by ARMS, the United Colonies, against the Hostile attempts of the British Fleets and Armies," the Committee of Safety for New Hampshire, under date of Ap. 12, 1776, sent to the selectmen of every town a request "to desire all Males above Twenty-one years of age (Lunaticks, Idiots, and Negroes excepted) to sign to the DECLARATION on this paper; and when so done, to make return thereof, together with the Name or Names of all who shall refuse to sign the same, to the GENERAL ASSEMBLY or Committee of Safety of this Colony.

The declaration or pledge was as follows: —

WE, THE SUBSCRIBERS, DO HEREBY SOLEMNLY ENGAGE AND PROMISE, THAT WE WILL, TO THE UTMOST OF OUR POWER, AT THE RISQUE OF OUR LIVES AND FORTUNES, WITH ARMS, OPPOSE THE HOSTILE PROCEEDINGS OF THE BRITISH FLEETS AND ARMIES AGAINST THE UNITED AMERICAN COLONIES.

Gilsun and Surry both have the honor of being in the list of towns who had no Tories to report, every man signing the above pledge. The signers in Gilsun were the following: —

Ebenezer Dewey	Stephen Griswold	Elisha Mack	Jonathan Bliss Jr
Justus Hurd	James Rowe	Obadiah Smith	Ebenezer Bill
Pelatah Pease	Elisha Pendell	John Boynton	Joel Kilbourn

PELETIAH PEASE

Prior to the Revolution, the militia of this part of the State, from Massachusetts line as far north as Claremont and including Newport, were in one regiment commanded by Col. Josiah Willard of Winchester. When the war came on, he was found on the Tory side, and in August, 1775, this regiment was divided into two. Gilsun was assigned to the first, and the command given to Samuel Ashley, Esq., of Winchester. Capt. Joseph Hammond of Swanzy was appointed Lieutenant Colonel, and Isaac Butterfield of Westmoreland, and Timothy Ellis of Keene, Majors. As afterwards appears, this was known as the Sixth New Hampshire Regiment. A regiment raised in July, 1776, for the defense of Portsmouth, was under command of Col. Isaac Wyman of Keene. The fifth company of this regiment had for its officers, Samuel Wetherbee of Charlestown, Captain; Ebenezer Kilburn, first Lieutenant; and Davis Howlet of Keene, second Lieutenant. In June, 1777, Cols. Bellows and Ashley were both summoned with their regiments to re-inforce the Continental army at Ticonderoga.

The following is the roll of Col. Ashley's seventh company, which was composed almost entirely of men from Gilsun and Surry: —

Elisha Mack, Captain.	Jonathan Smith.	Ichabod Smith.	Theody [Theodore] Preston.
Ebenezer Kilburn, Lieutenant.	Joshua Fuller.	Thomas Dart, 3d.	Justus Hurd.
Abner Skinner, 2d Lieutenant.	Justus Dart.	Moses Hale.	Ebenezer Dewey.
Timothy Dimock, Ensign.	Thomas Dart.	Charles Rice.	John Marks.
Shubal Hurd, Sergeant.	Samuel McCurdy.	Thomas Morse.	Moses Field.
Ichabod Young, Sergeant.	Thomas Dart, Jr.	Peter Beebe.	Jehiel Holdridge.
Samuel Smith, Sergeant.	Benjamin Carpenter.	Abner Bliss.	Jonathan Carpenter.
Delavarn [Delavan] Deleance, Serg.	Benjamin Carpenter, Jr.	Joel Kilburn.	Samuel Fuller.
Joseph Whitney, Corporal.	Nathan Howard [Hayward].	Joseph Ellis.	Peter Howard [Hayward].
Obadiah Smith, Corporal.	William Barnes [Barron].	Benjamin Ellis.	Josiah * Dart.
Obadiah Smith, Corporal.	John Rading [Redding].	John Roe.	Jesse Dart.
Henry White, Corporal.	Sylvanus Howard [Hayward].	Elisha Fendall.	Asa Wilcox.
John Boynton, Fifer.	Abel Allen.	Stephen Bond.	Daniel Wright.
Thomas Smith.	Jonathan Smith, Jr.	Levi Bliss.	Obadiah Wilcox.
			Ebenezer Bill.

They marched for the relief of Ticonderoga in the latter part of June, 1777, "to Black River, when they were ordered home, and arrived there July 3. On the next day they were ordered again for Ticonderoga, and went as far as Col. Mead's, at Otter Creek, when the army was met retreating, and they turned and arrived home July 10." Probably most of these men did not re-enlist, and these few days of marching was all the service they saw.

In another regiment, under Col. Moses Nichols of Amherst, the ninth company was about half from Gilsun and Surry, and the rest probably from Keene and Westmoreland. The roll is as follows :—

Elisha Mack, Captain.	Nathan Howard, Corporal.	Job Gleason.	Jonathan Smith.
Josiah Richardson, Lieut.	John Rowe, Drummer.	Benjamin Gutridge.	Jonathan Wheeler.
Moses Fields, 2d Lieutenant.	John Boyington, Fifer.	Samuel Hall.	Daniel Willson.
Samuel Fuller, Sergeant.	Nicholas Bragg.	John Royce.	Jonathan Dwinel.
Ebenezer Cook, Serg't Major.	Ebenezer Bragg.	Ezra Metcalf.	David Willson.
Aden Holbrook, Sergeant.	Peter Beebe.	Amos Puffer.	Zadock Wheeler.
Tilly How, Sergeant.	David Bond.	Gideon Packard.	David Harris, discharged Aug. 19.
Robert Worsley, Corporal.	Cephas Clark.	Timothy Rhodes.	Michael Metcalf, }
Asa Wilcox, Corporal.	Joshua Durant.	John Reding.	Joshua Fuller, } killed Aug. 16.
Jehial Holdridge, Corporal.	Matthew Dolf.	James Sawyer.	William Wood, }

This company marched from New Hampshire July 22, 1777, joined the Continental army at Saratoga, and was in the battle of Bennington, where three of their number were killed. They were discharged about Sept. 22, and were paid for two months and two days' service. Capt. Mack was paid for "a journey from Gilsun to Exeter to make return of the Roll, 9 days at 8/ — £3 — 12 — 0."

There are also papers sworn to by Capt. John Griggs, Elisha Pendell, and Ebenezer Church, selectmen of Gilsun for the year 1779, certifying that they had paid a bounty of £60 each to Frederick "Tubs" and Samuel White, for one year's enlistment in the Continental army, and also that they had paid Jesse Smith, enlisted in Col. Mooney's regiment for the defense of Rhode Island, bounty £30; travel to Providence, £12.

The following men are credited to Gilsun in the state archives:—

DAVID ABRAHAM was in Samuel Wetherbee's company, Wyman's regiment, enlisted from Gilsun July 12, 1776, and is on Wyman's roll at Mount Independence, Nov. 5, 1776, paid £9-19-7. He was in Stark's regiment in 1778, and in Cilley's in 1781, but in both cases credited to Alstead. Nothing further is known of this man. He was probably a substitute.

DAVID ADAMS was mustered at Cambridge, May 26, 1775, in Capt. Watson's company, and was doubtless in the battle of Bunker Hill. He was in Capt. Samuel Wetherbee's company, Col. Isaac Wyman's regiment, enlisted July 2, 1776, sent to join the Northern army, and is on a pay-roll of Wyman's regiment dated "Mount Independence Nov. 5, 1776," as "mustered August 20, 1776, and paid an advance for bounty and wages £9-18, and for twenty-six miles' travel, £0-2-2." He was in Capt. Josiah Brown's company, Col. Enoch Hale's regiment, which marched to Ticonderoga May 6, 1777, in service forty-nine days, paid wages, travel, etc. £7-16-8. He is on roll of men who were engaged under Capt. William Scott (Peterborough) and mustered by Abial Abbott, Dec. 17, 1777, for three years, and served in the First New Hampshire Regiment, under command of Joseph Cilley, was discharged Dec. 31, 1780, was corporal in first company Cilley's regiment in 1780, and was sergeant in same company as it was re-organized Jan. 1, 1781. Was in the army June 26, 1782, and probably served through 1783. He was allowed $167.50 for "Depreciation money" 1777, 1778, and 1779. He was reported absent from Camp Valley Forge Jan. 10, 1778. Cause—sick—age 18. [That is, at enlistment.] He is described as five feet and seven inches in stature, light "complexion," dark hair, and light eyes.

PETER BEEBE was in Capt. Jason Wait's company, Col. Bedel's regiment, mustered February, 1776, by John Bellows, Esq.; was with Capt. Mack at Saratoga, enlisted July 22, discharged Sept. 22, 1777; was in Capt. John Gregg's [Griggs] company, Scammell's regiment, mustered and paid by Thomas Sparhawk April 10, 1778; gives his age as 18 years. He re-enlisted Dec. 8, 1779, for the war, and was paid a bounty of £90 by Col. Nichols; was in the eighth company of Scammell's regiment, Capt. Wm. Ellis of Keene, and is reported as "Deserted May 20, 1780." If he did desert, he returned, as he is on roll of the First New Hampshire Regiment as it was re-organized in 1781.

Nothing further is known of this man. Was probably never a resident of Gilsun. May possibly have been a son or brother of Noah Beebe. (Chapter 30.)

DAVID BILL was in Capt. John Houghton's company, Col. Baldwin's regiment, mustered and paid by Lieut. Col. Jos. Hammond, Sept. 22, 1776,—for New York, wages, bounty, travel, £7-18-4. He was in Davis Howlet's company, Ashley's regiment, marched from Keene May, 1777, to re-inforce the Continental army at Ticonderoga; engaged May 7, discharged June 23, in service one month, seventeen days, paid total £7-18-4.

STEPHEN BOND was in Capt. Wetherbee's company, Wyman's regiment, enlisted July 12, 1776, mustered Aug. 2, and paid bounty, advance wages, and travel, twenty-five miles, £10-0-1, and was in the same at Mount

* This refers to some allowance made by the State, above the nominal wages, on account of the depreciation of paper money.

Independence Nov. 5, 1776. Is on Capt. Mack's roll on march to Black River June, 1777, and on roll of Davis Howlet's company, which marched from Keene May, 1777; engaged May 7, discharged June 17, in service one month eleven days, paid £7-1-4. He was in Capt. Nehemiah Houghton's company, Nichols's regiment, at West Point, as engaged July 13, and discharged Oct. 21, 1780.

IDDO CHURCH was first Sergeant in Capt. Ellis's company, the eighth of Scammel's regiment, enlisted in the Continental service for "three years or the war," Jan. 1, 1777; was killed in battle Sept. 19, 1777, at Saratoga; received a bounty of £20; depreciation money, $34.47.

THOMAS CHURCH, (brother to the preceding) was in Capt. Scott's company, Cilley's regiment, mustered by Abial Abbott Dec. 17, 1777; paid bounty, £20. He died June 21, 1778, probably on account of army service.

JOSIAH COMSTOCK was in Capt. William Ellis's company, in Scammel's regiment, enlisted Ap. 27, 1777, for three years, and died Jan. 8, 1779. He was from that part of Gilsium which is now Sullivan. Tradition says he was hired as a substitute by John Mark, and was killed in his first battle.

SAMUEL CRANE was one of the "new levies" which "joined the New Hampshire line," was mustered in camp by Major William Scott, June 29, 1780, discharged Dec. 6, 1780. Nothing further is known of him. Probably a substitute.

JOSEPH FRENCH was the other one of the two "new levies" furnished from Gilsium, mustered and discharged same dates as Crane. He was second Lieutenant in Capt. James Ford's company, Nichols's regiment, Stark's brigade, at Bennington and Stillwater; joined July 20, 1777, discharged Sept. 19, 1777. And also in Samuel Dearborn's company, Peabody's regiment, at Rhode Island, engaged Feb. 18, 1778, discharged Jan. 7, 1779. Probably a substitute.

ISAAC GRISWOLD was in Wetherbee's company, Wyman's regiment, Northern army, enlisted July 6, 1777, mustered Aug. 2, paid advance wages, bounty, and "twenty-nine miles" travel, £10-0-5; was in Davis Howlet's company, Ticonderoga, enlisted June 29, discharged July 3, 1777, and in Wyman's regiment as Sergeant at Mount Independence Nov. 5, 1776. He probably lived in that part of Gilsium which is now Sullivan, afterwards removed to Keene, and was prominent in the Vermont troubles, being deputy sheriff under Vermont authority.

BROOKS HUDSON, Drummer, on pay-roll of Capt. Nehemiah Houghton's company, Nichols's regiment, at West Point; engaged July 13, discharged Oct. 21, 1780.

ZADOC HURD was in the eighth company, Scammel's regiment, enlisted May 1, 1777, discharged Jan. 10, 1778, in service eight months and ten days; was in Capt. John Gregg's company, Scammel's regiment, mustered by Thomas Sparhawk May 26, 1778, age 16. He was paid £12 in 1782 for "Taking up and securing a deserter." The family tradition says that he was wounded, and received an invalid's pension.

EBENEZER KILBURN was Lieutenant in Mack's company June, 1777. Do. on roll of Capt. Samuel Wetherbee's company, sent to join the Continental army, mustered Aug. 20, 1776, paid £10-16-0. His name is on the staff roll of Col. Ashley's regiment, entered June 29, 1777, as "volunteer."

CAPT. ELISHA MACK was in Capt. Wetherbee's company, Wyman's regiment, as private, enlisted July 2, 1776, and was at Mount Independence Nov. 5, same year; was Lieutenant in Davis Howlet's company, Ticonderoga, engaged May 7, discharged June 17, 1777; was Captain of a company raised in Ashley's regiment June, 1777, to re-inforce the Continental army at Ticonderoga (see roll); and in command of a company in Col. Moses Nichols's regiment, Stark's brigade, at Saratoga, joined July 22, discharged Sept. 3, 1777. He was the hero of the Keene raid. (Chapter 28.)

THOMAS MORSE was with Capt. Mack on his march June, 1777; is on pay-roll of Capt. Daniel Reynolds's company, Peabody's regiment, at Rhode Island, as engaged June 15, 1778, discharged Jan. 6, 1779; was mustered at Winchester June 22, 1778, by Samuel Ashley. He lived in what is now Sullivan.

JESSE SMITH was in Capt. Brockway's company, which marched on the 6th and 13th days of July, 1777, for Ticonderoga, and on roll of Capt. Stephen Parker's company, Nichols's regiment, which joined the Continental army under Gates at Stillwater July 19, 1777, discharged Sept. 1777, and on roll of Capt. William Cary's company, Col. Benjamin Bellows's regiment, at Saratoga, as entered Sept. 21, and discharged Oct. 29, 1777. He was in Peabody's regiment at Rhode Island as engaged June 10, 1778, and discharged Jan. 5, 1779; was Corporal in Capt. Ephraim Stone's company, Col. Hercules Mooney's regiment, at Rhode Island, engaged July 13, 1779, and discharged Jan. 16, 1780; was Corporal in Capt. Benjamin Spaulding's company, Nichols's regiment, at West Point, engaged July 15, 1780, discharged Oct. 21, 1780. The name of Jesse Smith appears on a petition from inhabitants of Connecticut in 1763, for a grant of land at "Little Cowas." Nothing is known of him.

ANANIAS TUBBS was in Davis Howlet's company, sent to Ticonderoga June, 1777, and on pay-roll of Capt. Samuel Wright's company, Nichols's regiment, which joined the Continental army at Bennington and Stillwater July 23, 1777. He enlisted as from Swanzy, and gave his age as 45 years. At the battle of Bennington he was wounded in the hip, but was still "fit for garrison duty." A committee on pensions, etc., appointed by the New Hampshire Assembly, reported "Ananias Tibbs Nov. 13 1777 for expences in getting wounds cured at battle of Bennington £46-16." He was also put on the pension list, "pay 9/ per month" from Aug. 31, 1777.

FREDERICK TUBBS is on roll of Lieut. Col. Henry Dearborn's battalion, Scammel's command, as enlisted "for the war" June 26, 1777. He was evidently discharged, as he is on roll of recruits for Col. Hale's regiment as enlisted for one year, July 20, and mustered at Keene July 29, 1779, by Timothy Ellis. He was discharged June 26, 1780. Nothing is known of this man; may have been a brother of Ananias.

SAMUEL WHITE was Corporal in Capt. Jacob Hinds's company, Col. James Reed's regiment, at Bunker Hill, and was paid to Aug. 1, 1775, £5-0-3. His loss at Bunker Hill was one blanket, 12 s., one shirt, 6 s., one trousers, 5 s., one stockings, 6 s., shoes, 4 s.; probably lost a gun also, as his whole loss is placed at £3-4. He is on roll of Capt. Joseph Dearborn's company, Wyman's regiment, which was sent to Canada June, 1776, and on pay-roll of same at Mount Independence Nov. 5, 1776. He was in Capt. Jonathan Brockway's company, Col. Enocli Hale's regiment, which marched on the 6th of July, 1777, for Ticonderoga. "On the 8th they marched from Washington to Cavendish, forty miles, then ordered to return. Ordered to march again on the 13th. and met the army at Otter Creek on its retreat." He is on the roll of Capt. Ezekiel Worthen's company, Peabody's regiment, as engaged Ap. 5, 1778, and discharged Jan. 4, 1779. He was one of the men raised from the 6th regiment of militia for the Continental service, and mustered by Major Timothy Ellis July 20, 1779, for twelve months; was paid bounty, £60, and £6 for traveling fees to Springfield; was discharged June 26, 1780; was during this year in Lieut. Col. Henry Dearborn's battalion, Scammell's command. Nothing further is known of him. Probably a substitute.

The rest is but traditional. The Kilburn family relate that Capt. Ebenezer Kilburn went to the battle of Bennington, taking with him his hired man, (name forgotten,) and Brooks Hudson, then a youth of seventeen, living with him. Being suddenly ordered to start with his company, he notified them to meet at his house. Finding that many of them were destitute of the necessary provision, he hurried home, emptied a sack of two bushels of flour into kneading-troughs, set his two large brick ovens to heating, and kindled fires in all the fire-places. His wife prepared the bread in small loaves, filling the ovens and setting the rest around the fire-places. In two hours it was all ready on long tables set out in the door-yard for the men. Mrs. Kilburn had baked the day before enough for the family a week, which was added to the supply. The men hurriedly ate what they needed, and taking the rest in their knapsacks marched away. Such is the tradition. It is doubtless substantially correct, except in two points. From the records it seems most likely that the occasion was the relief of Ticonderoga, July 4, 1776, as stated on page 36, and that it occurred while Mr. Kilburn was Lieutenant, before he became Captain. In fact there is no evidence that he served as Captain, except in the militia after the war. [Biog.]

Another tradition is that Peter Hayward went to the battle of Bunker Hill, wearing a leather apron, and taking his dog with him; that, on charging bayonets after their ammunition failed, he was in the front rank with his dog, and that a brother of old Capt. David Fuller was shot by his side. I have not been able to verify the tradition. Joshua Fuller of Surry, brother of David, was killed at Bennington, and very likely this fact is mixed up with the tradition.

Ebenezer Hurd was waiter for Benedict Arnold, and got his horse for him when he fled. He was also in the battle of White Plains, and was hit three times, but not wounded. One ball went through his cartridge-box, and another through his coat and shirt.

Levi Blood, known as "Gen." Blood, told many stories of his service. At one time when on guard, he was directly exposed to the fire of the enemy. He, however, remained bolt upright at his post without seeking any protection, as he might have done. His general happened to see him, and directed him to get behind a rock for shelter. He did so, and holding up his hat on his bayonet let them shoot at that.

There were doubtless others as worthy of record as these, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to make a complete list. Some further items will be found in the Biography and Genealogy.

Eleven years after the close of the war of the Revolution, on account of serious troubles with the Western Indians, and the turbulent insurrections in Pennsylvania, Congress passed an act requiring each State to furnish a certain number of men, who were to be held in readiness to march at any time. New Hampshire voted four regiments of minute men, and the several towns were called on to furnish their proportion. June 24, 1794, Gilsum "Voted to Give the Men that turned out as Minutemen 40/ Pr Month Including what Congress has Granted if Called into Actual Service." The wages given by Congress was only $4 a month. None of these men were called into action, and their names are not known.

Probably no town can show a better record for bravery and self-denial, in proportion to its population, than Gilsum.

"Honor the brave and bold!
Long shall the tale be told,— Yea, when our babes are old"

CHAPTER VIII.

WAR OF 1812-15.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty."

FIRST and foremost in the Revolution, New Hampshire has always been ready to bear her part in every national struggle, and Gilsum has never been reluctant, when called on for the defense of the State or Nation.

No demand for soldiers from Gilsum was made till September, 1814, when Gov. Gilman ordered "the whole of the militia" to "hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning." A detachment from twenty-three Regiments was ordered to "march to Portsmouth immediately." Gilsum was called on to furnish seven men. The Captain of Gilsum Company was Benjamin Ware. Solomon Mack was Sergeant, and Obadiah Ware, Drummer. The Captain called his Company together, and proposed a draft. Fourteen men at once volunteered. The seven who went were —

Roswell Borden, enlisted for 3 months Sept. 20, 1814.

Iddo Kilburn, enlisted for 3 months Sept. 20, 1814.

John Raymond, enlisted for 3 months Sept. 20, 1814.

David Bill, enlisted for 60 days Sept. 25, 1814.

Jonas Brown, enlisted for 60 days Sept. 25, 1814.

David Dort, Serg't, enlisted for 60 days Sept. 25, 1814.

Ira Ellis, enlisted for 60 days Sept. 25, 1814.

The other seven were held as minute men. Their names cannot be ascertained. Capt. David Bill, now in his 84th year, is the only one of the seven, who is still living.

These troops marched to Portsmouth where they remained a short time as a coast guard, but were not engaged in battle.

Willard Carpenter of Surry, Jehiel Day of Keene, Jonathan Hall Jr. of Westmoreland, and Calvin Wilson of Stoddard enlisted under the same call. There are doubtless others whose names appear in the Genealogy, who served in this war, but these are all at present identified.

The only Town Record referring to the last War with England is March 14, 1815.

Voted to give those Soldiers who went from Gilsum to Portsmouth on military duty two dollars per month in addition to their other wages.

The wages paid by the Government was eight dollars a month. The State afterwards refunded all gratuities given by the towns.

In 1871, Congress granted a pension of $96 per annum to all who were sixty days in service. In 1878, this was made to include all who were out thirty days.

NOTE. — So far as known, there were no Gilsum men in the Mexican War, though it is probable some mentioned in the Genealogy were in service at that time.

CHAPTER IX.

MILITIA.

"Yankee Doodle came to town
 Riding on a pony,
 Stuck a feather in his hat
 And called it Macaroni."

IN the town records we have very little about military affairs. After the war of the Revolution, this State like others kept up a military system requiring all able-bodied men to appear "armed and equipped," twice a year in their own town, and once in regimental Muster, wherever summoned in the bounds of the Regiment. These gatherings were known as "May Training," "Fall Training," and "Muster." They were always occasions of great hilarity and more or less drunkenness. Less than fifty years have passed, since every man drew a gill of rum for the occasion. And still later, every new officer chosen was expected to "treat the company," and was insulted as "hoggish" if he declined to do so. The natural result was that not unfrequently there were fights and other disgraceful disorders, and sometimes dangerous accidents. It was largely these "training-day" disorders that stimulated the early temperance movement. One aged man, now living here, says that it was the fatal accident at the bridge (Chap. 26) that made him resolve to let liquor alone from that time. The first town action in reference to the militia is the vote in 1809, to raise $31 "to provide military stores" and to give each soldier that attends on muster day two shillings. Nothing more is found till 1827, when it was "voted to allow the troopers two shillings on muster day instead of a dinner and drink." This was probably through the influence of those who had become interested in the temperance cause. "The troopers" were a Cavalry Company organized out of Gilsum, Keene, Sullivan, and Surry. Those who joined it from Gilsum, as near as can now be told, were the following:—

Hartford Butler, Capt. Joseph Clark, John Hammond, Orlando Mack, Solomon Mack, Lieut. James M. Mark, Samuel Mark, William Mark, John Roundy, Dudley Smith, Almon Taylor, Alvin White, Danford White, and Joseph Whitney.

In 1835, the town voted to give bonds to procure U. S. arms for the use of the militia "at their lawful trainings." These arms were furnished by the State to such towns as would give sufficient bonds for their safe-keeping. Before this, each man furnished his own musket and other accouterments. Having procured the "arms," it became important to have an armory. An effort was made for several successive years to get an appropriation from the town for that purpose, but the articles were summarily dismissed. A subscription to build an Armory was circulated in 1837, and about sixty dollars subscribed. It was probably built the same year, and was located on a very narrow level place east of the road about half way from the Stone Bridge towards the Bond grave-yard. The land was owned by Stephen Day. After the militia disbanded and the arms were returned to the State, the building was taken down and sold by the owner of the land to Abram C. Wyman, who made it into a woodshed at the upper end of the village, where it now stands.

This town, though always ready to do its part in time of war, has not, at least in later days, been fired with any great military enthusiasm in time of peace. Some zealous military men have frequently endeavored to awaken the town to a sense of the importance of helping the militia, but with very poor success. The last record is in 1845, when an article to raise money to pay volunteers to make a company of forty-five, was dismissed without action.

Gilsum company was at one time, according to an established custom, entitled to carry the colors of the Regiment. In some way, Westmoreland company had possession of the colors on the muster ground, and refused to give them up. Gilsum company under command of their Captain "charged upon them at double quick" and recovered their rightful honors. The Captain was Robert Lane Hurd, probably the most of a military genius the Regiment could furnish. He was very popular with his men, who kept him in command for many years. He drilled them very thoroughly, and kept their enthusiasm constantly awake. He trained them to execute the most difficult maneuvers, and won the applause of bystanders whenever he paraded his men. At one time he marched upon the muster field, with his company apparently uninformed or in strange disorder, so that all wondered what fool was in command, when by a skilful maneuver in which he had drilled them, he suddenly by one order brought them almost instantly into proper position as they took their place upon the field, surprising the spectators at his exhibition of skill. According to usage he would have been promoted to the field, being the senior Captain in the Regiment, but the jealousy of other towns prevented. Gilsum people were for many years very indignant under the slight.

In 1806, a "muster" at Keene was appointed for October 9. Men started very early in the morning as usual, but a fearful snow-storm came on with violent wind. From what is now District No. 7, Solomon and Dudley Smith and Solomon Mack started and got as far as Iddo Kilburn's where they were forced to stop. Many suffered severely. The company were unable to get home till the next night, on account of the deep snow, and the many trees blown across the road. Antipas Maynard, at that time drummer in Sullivan company, nearly perished before he reached home.

In 1834, when E. K. Webster was Colonel of the Regiment, the annual muster was held in Gilsum. The broad flat on the hill east of the village is still often called "The Parade." Other towns were accustomed to despise Gilsum, and the men were indignant at being summoned here to muster. Many still remember the hootings with which Walpole and Westmoreland companies made "night hideous," and the fires which they built of the neighboring fences and trees. Large quantities of flannel from Upton and Fletcher's, which had been put up as a protection to the peddlers' stands were taken and destroyed in the fires. The amount of drunkenness and rowdism that prevailed cannot be recorded.

In 1850, the law requiring military duty was repealed, provision, however, being made for volunteer companies to organize and receive pay for training, if they chose. Under this law, the Third Company of Light Infantry was organized by the name of "Cheshire Invincibles," with Amasa May for Captain, Ezra Webster, Lieutenant, and Daniel Smith, Ensign. Most of those enrolled as liable to military duty joined the company. Their military enthusiasm, however, lasted only one year, when the company disbanded.

Joseph M. Chapin was Orderly Sergeant of the old company and made the following record in the Orderly Book:—

April 1850. The Officers having gone to reside without the limits of the Company it is not expected that we shall have any Military parade for the season.

In October he made record as follows:—

The members of the Fifth Company mostly volunteered in the fall, under the Law of this season for enlistments with some old Soldiers, training several times and mustering [for] drill according to the late Law, with the arms that the former Company used.

In March 1851, Solomon Mack, Jr., received a commission as Captain of the Fifth company, which office he held as long as the company had a nominal existence. It seems to have been a sinecure, kept up for form's sake, as there is no record of any assembling of the company from that time. The last annual return was made May 19, 1857, as follows.

One Captain, One Sergeant, One hundred nine Privates, One hundred eleven, Aggregate. Public Property One infantry Regulations, One Orderly Book, One Roll Book, one Militia Law.

The following list of Captains is not complete for the earlier days, but is as nearly correct as I have been able to make it.

Ebenezer Kilburn.	Ebenezer Bill, Jr.	Timothy Dort.	William S. Mansfield.
Zadok Hurd.	Berzeleel Lord Mack.	Willard Bill.	David Converse.
Jehiel Holdridge.	Justus Chapin, Jr.	Eliphalet K. Webster.	Calvin May, Jr.
Robert Lane Hurd.	Jonas Brown.	Calvin Mack.	Daniel W. Bill.
David Fuller.	David Bill.	Benjamin Hosmer.	Daniel Smith.
Joseph Taylor.	John Taylor.	John Horton.	George H. Gassett.
Benjamin Ware.

Gilsum furnished the following Field Officers in the 20th Regiment, and perhaps more. Only the highest office each man held is mentioned.

Ebenezer Bill, Major.	Benjamin Hosmer, Major.	George H. Gassett, Colonel.	Aaron H. Livermore, Adjt.
Eliphalet K. Webster, Col.	Daniel W. Bill, Brig. Gen.	Daniel Smith, Lieut. Colonel.	Joseph M. Chapin, Adjt.

CHAPTER X.

WAR OF THE REBELLION.

"The land is holy where they fought
And holy where they fell."

As seen by the last chapter, when the great rebellion came, New Hampshire had no organized militia, save a few companies in the large towns. But the first note of conflict called volunteers to the ranks from every quarter. Gilsum was not behind in furnishing her quota. The town records, however, give only a very meagre account of her part in the war.

In August 1862, the town voted to pay $100 to each volunteer. The next month, this was increased to $150. In September 1863, it was voted to pay each drafted man or his substitute $300. The following December, the Selectmen were instructed to fill the town's quota by giving such bounty as may be necessary in addition. In June 1864, the Selectmen were instructed to procure eight men and pay the bounties. At the annual meeting in 1875, an effort was made by some who had hired substitutes or paid commutation money, to have the same refunded by the town, but the article was dismissed by the decisive vote of 106 to 2. This is the substance of that could be learned from our town books, save that the Treasurer's account shows certain sums paid for bounties, — no names being given.

In 1870, the Legislature voted to re-imburse the towns who paid bounties, by giving them $100 for each soldier put in for three years, not including those who went in 1861. Gilsum received $5400. The following summary and list of names are from papers furnished by F. A. Howard, who was Selectman at the time of the re-imbursement. Other particulars are taken mainly from the Reports of the Adjutant-General for 1865-6, in which is given a minute history of each N. H. Regiment. Those desiring a fuller account can consult the same in the Town Clerk's office.

Under the first call in 1861, there were four volunteers, as follows.

Thomas W. Bignall, 1st Reg't, Co. G. This regiment was under Col. Mason W. Tappan, "and passed everywhere by the sobriquet of the 'New Hampshire Wild Cats.'" Mr. Bignall re-enlisted for three years in the 2d Reg't, Co. C, — was promoted to Corporal, and after having been in about fifteen battles, was killed at Gettysburg, Penn., July 2, 1863.

Joseph Collins, 1st Reg't, Co. G.

Sherman H. Howard, 1st Reg't, Co. C. In December 1861, he re-enlisted in 6th Reg't, Co. K, — was wounded at the second Bull Run battle, and died five days after, Sept. 3, 1862.

Horace H. Nash, 1st Reg't, Co. C, re-enlisted in September, 1862, and served till close of war in 14th Reg't, Co. C.

Under the second call in 1861, besides the two mentioned above, Gilsun furnished volunteers for three years as follows.

John A. Blake, 2d Reg't, Co. A, — was "wounded severely" at Gettysburg, Penn., July 2, 1863, and "discharged for disability, June 7, 1864."

Sterry W. Bridge, 2d Reg't, Co. I, — served three years.

James Leonard Davis, 6th Reg't, Co. G, — discharged Sept. 10, 1862, — re-enlisted December, 1863, in 9th Reg't, Co. I, — was taken prisoner at Poplar Grove, Va., Sept. 30, 1864. After being paroled, and reaching Annapolis, Md., he died from the starvation and cruel treatment received in the rebel prison.

John W. Everdon, 2d Reg't, Co. D. After twenty-one months' service, he was "discharged for disability, July 19, 1863."

Aaron R. Gleason enlisted as Hospital Attendant in 2d Reg't, Co. F, — was transferred to Invalid Corps, and afterwards to Volunteer Rifle Co. In 1864, he was appointed Assistant Surgeon in Campbell Hospital, Washington, D. C., — received also an appointment as Assistant Surgeon in the 14th Reg't, but declined, — was connected with the U. S. service four years.

Glencira J. Guillow served three years in 2d Reg't, Co. C.

Isaac W. Hammond enlisted in 2d Reg't, — was appointed Commissary Sergeant in 5th Reg't, and served in that capacity three years in the "Army of the Potomac."

Charles Henry Harris, 5th Reg't, Co. F, — was killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Franklin Nash, 2d Reg't, Co. A, — "discharged for disability, Feb. 9, 1863."

Stillman D. Nash, 6th Reg't, Co. F, — "discharged for disability, Aug. 26, 1863."

Calvin H. Wilcox, 2d Reg't, Co. G, — "discharged for disability, Oct. 12, 1862."

The following volunteers for 1862 each received $100 bounty from the town, $5 from George W. Foster, and $10 from F. A. Howard.

George C. H. Deets, 2d Reg't, Co. E, — "discharged for disability, March 2, 1863."

Asa E. Howe, 4th Reg't, Co. D, — killed in the attack on Fort Gilmer, Sept. 29, 1864.

John Howard, 9th Reg't, Co. I, — "died of disease, Feb. 20, 1864," — said to be buried in the Hospital Cemetery, David's Island, N. Y.

Merrill J. Howard, 9th Reg't, Co. I.

Edward G. McCoy, 9th Reg't, Co. I, — served till close of war.

Ansel A. Morse, 14th Reg't, Co. C, — served till close of war.

Horace H. Nash, mentioned above.

Orsamus Nash, 9th Reg't, Co. I, — "died of disease at DeCamp Hospital, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1864," — said to be buried in Hospital Cemetery, David's Island, N. Y.

Edwin E. Roundy, 14th Reg't, Co. B, — served till close of war.

Franklin W. Roundy, same Co. and same service.

Henry E. Wilcox, 14th Reg't, Co. C, — "died of disease at Gilsun, Jan. 24, 1865."

In September 1863, six men were drafted, as follows. These and all following received $300 each from the town.

Temple Baker, — got a substitute.

George W. Bancroft, — got a substitute.

Lowell White, — got a substitute.

Jotham Bates, — paid $300, commutation fee.

Calvin W. Spooner, 5th Reg't, Co. A, — served till close of war.

Albert H. Waldron, 5th Reg't, Co. F, — wounded at Chickahominy, June 16, 1864, and served till close of war.

The calls of October 1863, and February 1864, were filled by hired substitutes, except James Leonard Davis mentioned above.

Under the call of March 1864, Lucius Davis volunteered in 1st N. H. Cavalry, Troop B, and served till close of war; and five men were drafted as follows.

Isaac W. Hammond

Harvey L. Bates, — got a substitute.
 Joel Cowee, — got a substitute.
 Josiah Guillow, — got a substitute.
 George H. McCoy, — got a substitute.
 Charles E. Crouch, 9th Reg't, Co. I, — transferred to 6th Reg't, Co. I, and served till close of war.

In July 1864, the town furnished seven substitutes, and the following citizens, seven more : —

Jesse B. Isham, John J. Isham, Samuel L. Kingsbury, George A. Learoyd, Hans H. Mark, Leonard White, and William A. Wilder.

In December 1864, the town furnished three, and the following citizens, one each : —

Daniel W. Bill, Aaron D. Hammond, George N. Hayward, and Daniel Smith.

The Adjutant General's Report, under date of April 30, 1865, credits Gilsum with a surplus of ten men over her quota under all the calls. The number enrolled as liable to military duty was 79, and it was estimated that Gilsum had 40 men then in service, in Army and Navy. A large number more of Gilsum men served in the war from other towns, and from other States. Many of these are mentioned in the following Biographies and Genealogies, though the list is necessarily incomplete. The summary of the preceding record is as follows.

Whole number of men furnished for three months, 4.

“ “ “ “ for three years, 67.

Gilsum men included in the above, 29.

Eleven men were drafted, of whom three went into the service. Eleven citizens not drafted furnished substitutes, the town paying them $300 each, — the price of substitutes being from $500 to $1100 apiece. Two other citizens, as mentioned above, paid bounties, one $55, and the other $110. In 1864, most of the citizens liable to draft paid $20 apiece, as a fund towards furnishing substitutes. Those who procured substitutes, as named above, were obliged to pay from one to three hundred dollars each, in addition to the bounties from all other sources.

SOLDIERS' AID SOCIETY.

Though not privileged to bear arms in the field, the women of the land contributed their full share to the success of the Union armies. What they did in Gilsum is only a specimen, on a small scale, of what they accomplished all over the North.

In October 1861, Mrs. Eliza E. Howard and Miss Emily G. Hayward, assisted by a few others, prepared and forwarded a box for the Sanitary Commission. Through their influence a society was soon formed, called “ The Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society of Gilsum.” Through the untiring zeal of a few who would never allow the good work to cease, this Society maintained weekly meetings, with only slight interruptions, till the close of the war. From sixteen, at first, the membership soon increased to forty-six. Mrs. Howard was chosen Treasurer, and Emily G. Hayward, Secretary, which office she held to the last.

The product of the first month's effort was sent to the 6th N. H. Regiment, just then on the eve of departure from Keene. The following March, a still more valuable box was sent to the same Regiment at Hatteras Inlet, N. C. After this, everything was forwarded either to the Sanitary or the Christian Commission, to be distributed to the most needy.

The stores furnished by the Society consisted mainly of dried fruit, bedding, feeting and other articles of clothing. The record of such articles forwarded shows their value to have been more than $150. The Society also raised over $200 in money. On Sunday, Sept. 11, 1864, the congregation contributed $26, which was sent to the Christian Commission. It is also known that individuals sent money to the Cheshire Co. Soldiers' Aid Society, in addition to what they did at home. Those well acquainted with the circumstances, and competent to judge, estimate the contributions from these various sources, at not less than $500.

Besides many indirect expenses, the following statement gives, as nearly as can now be ascertained, the direct expenses incurred by the town of Gilsun to help put down the most infamous rebellion the world has ever seen.

Soldiers' Aid Society, etc.	$500
One Commutation Fee	$300
Bounties by individuals	$3140
Town bounties	$13256
Total	$17196
Refunded by the State	$5400
Net Total	$11796

These things were done "that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people should not perish from the earth."

CHAPTER XI.

FIRES AND FIRE COMPANY.

THE first fire of which we have any record, was on the place where George Wright now lives. A log house built by Daniel Peck and then owned by John Mark, was burned with considerable furniture, Oct. 8, 1793, while the residents had gone to a "dedication" in Alstead. It was afterwards known to have been set by a prominent citizen, because Mr. Mark opposed building the river road.

The house which Samuel Whitney first built in the orchard north of C. B. Hayward's, was burned on Sunday, probably about 1798. He had just got into his new house. It was supposed to have taken fire from ashes thrown out at the time of removing.

David Dean's house on the hill southwest of John Nash's was burned about 1800.

On Monday, the latter part of May 1803, the house of Joshua Isham, where George H. Carpenter now lives, was burned. Mrs. Isham was rinsing clothes at the spring under the hill, just east of the house, so that the fire got far advanced before it was discovered. The neighbors turned out and built him a new house, so that they moved into it before Saturday night.

The South School House, No. 3, was burned in the winter of 1815-6. The wooden mantle-tree above the large fire-place frequently caught fire, and the boys put it out with snow. Probably it was not entirely extinguished when they left Saturday night. It burned in the night, and no one knew of it, till Sunday morning. Capt. Lord Mack was teaching there, and had a trunk of books burned in the School House.

Luther Whitney's Clothing Shop on the brook south of his father's house, was burned about 1817. A new one built on the same spot was raised on Friday, much to the grief of his mother, who said it would certainly be burned. After it was moved to the village, the prophecy came true, and it was burned in February, 1822.

In 1822 or 1823, a hut in the northeast part of the town, beyond where George Bates lives, was torn down and burned one dark stormy night. This was done by connivance of the town authorities, who furnished a bottle of rum for the occasion. The purpose was to get rid of a disreputable family named Wolf or Dolph, who were harboring there. The family escaped to the neighbors, and what little furniture they had was carefully taken out, before the hut was burned, and covered with bark, to protect it from the rain. The family speedily left for parts unknown.

The Woolen Factory built by Luther Whitney, and then owned by David Brigham, was burned, Sunday afternoon, Dec. 5, 1830. The fire caught from ashes carelessly thrown into a cigar box.

In the summer of 1841, Luther Abbott's house was burned in the night. It was supposed to have been set, as it had been unoccupied for a considerable time. The place is still called "Burnt House Hill."

Dec. 2, 1841, Milan Towne's bobbin-shop, on the brook above Alpheus Chapin's, was burned, — cause unknown.

Luther W. Mark's barn was struck by lightning and burned, May 11, 1842.

Silsby's Woolen Factory was burned, Sunday morning, before day, June 14, 1846, — cause unknown. Jonathan Winch who slept there, barely escaped.

In 1850, the School House in District No. 1 was burned in the night, having caught from a pile of ashes carelessly left in a closet.

Daniel Converse's barn with all its contents was burned by lightning, October 1851, about eight o'clock in the evening.

Solomon Dean's Woolen Factory was burned March 28, 1858. Caught in the Picker, by what means is unknown.

The Tannery belonging to George B. Rawson was burned, Feb. 16, 1860, — cause unknown.

A Blacksmith's Shop back of Day's store was burned about 1861.

In 1863, the house of Perry Waldron, on the place where Jotham Bates lives, was burned. It was supposed by the family to have caught from a defect in the chimney.

Jesse Dart's Chair Factory by the Stone Bridge was burned in 1869. It was supposed to have taken from the funnel or chimney, as a fire had been built there by people who were repairing the highway, the day before.

The first action of the town in reference to protection from fires was the choice of Fire Wards, in 1834. An article to raise money for an Engine House, and to defray expenses already incurred, was dismissed. As in other towns, a jealousy has always existed between the village and the outside farming population, and as the latter are the more numerous, they can generally carry the vote against any expense that seems to be of special interest to the village. So in this matter, the farmers have a feeling that an engine and a fire company can help them very little in case of fire, and that the expense ought to be borne by the village people who are more particularly protected by such measures. In 1835, it was voted to raise $30 for the benefit of the Engine Company, and the Selectmen to appropriate the same as they deem most necessary. A part of this, $9.92, was paid to Lyman Gerould, for said company, the next March. Probably the rest had been expended in building an Engine House.

In 1836, portions of the Fire Law of 1828 were adopted by vote of the town, but in 1839, it was voted 51 to 45, the yeas and nays being recorded in full on the town book, to repeal the Fire Law. Two things are specially noticeable in the record, — no resident of the Factory Village voted in the affirmative, and with almost no exception the yeas were from one political party. There were three elements of opposition, that operated powerfully against a Fire Company. First, the general opposition to expense, on the part of the farming community who felt they would not be benefited by it. Second, the jealousy between the lower village and the Factory Village. Third, and probably the greatest, the military opposition, because members of a Fire Company were exempt from military duty. In October 1839, an effort was made, by calling a special meeting, to re-adopt the Fire Law, but every article in the warrant, except choosing a Moderator, was dismissed. No fire wards were chosen till after the fire of 1846. In 1854, an article to provide for the care of the Fire Engine was dismissed. In 1860, ten dollars was voted to repair the Fire Engine, on condition the citizens put it in good order, and provide a suitable place for the same. Nothing, however, was done. In 1871, the Selectmen were instructed to repair the old engine or purchase a new one, and $50 was raised for the purpose. The old engine was repaired, at an expense of $25.

The Fire Wards of 1836 adopted a set of Rules which are recorded on the town book. Also in 1847, after the Silsby fire, a long list of Rules and Regulations is recorded. That the Fire Wards really accomplished anything else, does not appear.

Col. Jehiel Day was the prime mover in getting a Fire Engine. In June 1833, a subscription paper was circulated for the purchase of "one of Hubbard's Fire Engines," "to be kept in the Factory Village." A little over $230 was collected, and the engine procured. On the following 4th of July, "Gilsum Fire Engine Company No. 1" was organized, with Harrison G. Howe, Captain, Jehiel Day, Second Captain, and David Brigham, Clerk. Jehiel Day, John Taylor and H. G. Howe were appointed a Committee to build an Engine House, to be "located on the brook south of Solon Eaton's house on the west side of the road, to be built 14 feet square with a cistern under the house sufficient for filling the Engine." The location is very near F. C. Minor's front yard. In April 1834,

Let out to the lowest bidder the finishing of the Engine House. H. G. Howe took it at \$10 to have what Lumber and nails there is on hand and to Board with $\frac{1}{2}$ inch boards and clapboard with planed clapboards Double Doors and hung with Iron hinges double floor and to be finished previous to next meeting.

That the members were not very prompt in attendance is seen from the fines collected, twenty-five cents for each absence. The first year, the fines were over six dollars, and very much the same afterwards.

The Constitution provided for a Festival at the annual meeting in January. In 1836, a receipt is on record, from Jehiel Day, of "eight dollars in full for the Festival Supper."

At the annual meeting in January 1838, the Constitution was revised and this provision omitted. At the next annual meeting, the money in the Treasury, not being needed for the usual supper, was divided, giving the members $12\frac{1}{2}$ cents each. In 1841, there was a re-organization of the Company with another revision of the Constitution. The Engine House was removed from the spot where Mr. Minor's house now stands and set on Mill Brook at the northeast corner of the lot belonging to the Congregational Society. In April 1846, it was voted to pay C. W. Bingham \$2.72 for repairing Engine House, which was probably at the time of removal. The house remained on that spot till it rotted down. In 1847, two incidents worthy of record occurred. The engine pole and wheels were carried off in the night. The wheels were afterwards found in the river below the Loveland Bridge. This trick was understood to be caused by the jealousy of the militia company.

At the meeting in September, we find the following record,—"paid A. W. Kingsbury four Dollars for damage done his house." At this time the excitement between the militia and the fire company was at its height, and it was proposed to go to the lower village and "wet down" the militia Captain. Daniel Smith then held the office, and lived where Willard Bill now does.

One of the company took a large dinner bell which he kept ringing along the way. Having finished their work by showering the Captain's house, they returned. Two members of the company, A. W. Kingsbury, and A. J. Howard, had gone home, and the others thought for a joke they would serve them, as they had Captain Smith. It was now dark, and they very quietly brought the Engine near Mr. Kingsbury's house and suddenly let the water with full force upon the windows where he was sitting. Much to their surprise, the power was sufficient to break the glass, and scattered the fragments mingled with water through the rooms and over the furniture. The family was much frightened by the sudden and unexpected shock. Very wisely for themselves, the company settled on the spot, as above recorded. This mishap prevented their visiting Mr. Howard, as they had intended.

The only fire recorded on the company book is that of June 14. 1846, as follows: "Engine Co. met at the Burning of Silsby factory." For the rest, they pursued the even tenor of their way, having two Oyster Suppers, one in 1848, and one in 1849, till the closing record July 6, 1850, "Voted to adjourn to the first Saturday in September at 6 o'clock P. M." The military law requiring annual training having been repealed, there was not interest enough to keep up the organization. The Engine is still in running order, though of an old style, and very hard to work. The village is evidently in very poor condition to encounter a fire. The Captains and Clerks of the Engine Co. were as follows: —

CAPTAINS.	CLERKS.	CAPTAINS.	CLERKS.
1833, Harrison G. Howe,	David Brigham.	1842, Solon W. Eaton,	Hartley Thurston.
1834, Joseph Upton,	" "	1843, Lyman Gerould,	Milan Towne.
1835, Loring Loveland,	Israel B. Loveland.	1844, Hartley Thurston,	George W. Newman.
1836, Lyman Gerould,	" "	1845-6, Roswell W. Silsby,	Milan Towne.
1837, Asa Cole,	" "	1847, Nahum O. Hayward,	George W. Newman.
1838, Enoch B. Mayo,	" "	1848, Kendall Nichols,	N. O. Hayward.
1839, Ezra Webster,	Abijah W. Kingsbury.	1849, R. W. Silsby,	Silvanus Hayward.
1840, Ezra Webster,	David Brigham.	1850, N. O. Hayward,	Amos Weeks.
1841, Lyman Gerould,	Hartley Thurston.

In 1877, the town voted to pay one half the expense of a new Fire Engine, provided the other half could be raised by subscription. The same vote was renewed in 1878, but nothing has yet come of it.

CHAPTER XII.

PAUPERS AND LAWSUITS.

"The poor ye have always with you."

THE first record that relates to the poor, is May 13, 1790,—

Voted to Allow Sam^l Whitney One pound Four Shilling For His Service in Warning Folks out of Town.

This was in most cases a mere form, for the purpose of preventing their gaining a legal residence, but with no desire that the warning should be obeyed. The ceremony seems to have been applied to almost every settler, as all were poor, and if allowed to gain a residence with increasing families, such as they had in those days, were very liable, in case of sickness or misfortune, to require public assistance. The early records being lost, no list of those warned out has been preserved. Though this practice has long ceased, other devices to accomplish the same result have been employed whenever occasion offered. In 1810, five dollars was voted to one man to move his family away, and in 1822, twenty dollars was voted to assist another to remove from town. Others have been more privately assisted out of town, for the same purpose. At the present, taxes are regularly abated to prevent any one from gaining a residence.

In 1797, three children of one family were disposed of to different citizens to keep "untell we Could have a trial with Swanzey." The price for keeping a small child at this time, was from 3 shillings to 3/6 per week. The oldest of the three mentioned was kept for "one Shill one Penny per week." At a special meeting in 1800,—

Voted to put out Phidelle Dolphs Child at the Lowest Bidder at Vandew S^d Child was struck of to Timothy Dart to keep till the Last Monday of August Next at three Shillings pr week.

This name will be recognized as the one known generally as "Dilly Wolf," who lived in what is now Sullivan, on the "Baker Lot," now Daniel Smith's pasture. The next year, the child referred to was "bound out" to Moses Farnsworth. In the writings, he is called "Henry Page as his mother hath named him." Mr. Farnsworth was to have fifty dollars for taking him. Many other children have been bound out by the town on similar terms, the town giving from fifty to seventy-five dollars, and the other party agreeing to give the child proper care and common schooling, and "two suits of apparel" at the age of eighteen, if a girl, or at twenty-one, if a boy.

In the early part of the century, the records show that sometimes the poor were individually provided for in different families, apparently by a kind of "boarding round" system. In 1801, the Selectmen were authorized to divide the town into three districts for the support of one poor family. In 1802, was the first setting up the poor to the lowest bidder. The poor then consisted of four persons, one being an infant, and were bid off by Iddo Kilburn for $105. This vote was reconsidered, and Mr. Kilburn received five dollars to "release his bargain." After this, in 1813, and subsequently, the support of individuals was often provided for by setting up to the lowest bidder. In 1830, the Selectmen were directed to receive proposals for the support of the poor, and for several years after, a similar vote was passed. In most cases, a choice was to be made between the five lowest bidders.

In the Council Records at Concord is found the following.

June 14, 1804. The Governor was advised to draw a warrant on Treas. for $75.64 in favor of the Town of Gilsum for support of State pauper.

No name is given, nor is it known who the pauper was.

Only two Overseers of the Poor apart from the Selectmen have been chosen by the town; Amherst Hayward in 1842, and Nahum O. Hayward in 1851. Expenses for the poor have generally been provided for under the general head of Town charges, but in some cases a specific sum has been raised for the purpose. In 1802, —

Voted to raise $26 for the support of Rubin Barron one year; also, to Allow Elisha Bond two Shilling for Cloth for A petty coat for Rubin Barron.

This "Rubin Barron" was afterwards known as John Barnes.

In 1818, it was — Voted to raise $75 for the maintenance of the Town's poor and for repairing burying yard fences.

In 1820, there was raised $175 "for the support of the Town's poor." These are the only records of money raised directly for the support of the poor.

In 1848, an effort was made to buy a Town Farm, but the article was dismissed. In 1850, —

Voted that Allen Butler and I. B. Loveland be a Committee with the Select Men to buy a Farm to keep the Poor on, also to furnish the same with Stock and Farming Tools.

Accordingly the Farm now owned by George C. Hubbard was bought for $1500, and Hartley Thurston was put in charge of the same. For some reason, the town was not satisfied with the movement, and an effort was made that same year, at a special meeting in October, to sell the Farm, but no action was taken. At the next annual meeting, 1851, it was voted to sell the Town Farm. There was so much opposition, that the Selectmen deemed it best to call another meeting March 29, when the vote was re-affirmed and they were instructed to sell the Farm "and all property belong to the Farm at Public Auction one week from to-day." The Farm was accordingly sold back to the widow Thompson for the same price paid her the year before.

Whether from their own experience or other causes, the town was at first, opposed to the plan of a County Farm. When the question of buying a County Farm was raised in 1860, this town went against it by a vote of 17 to 59. This opposition has been gradually diminishing, till probably now a majority are in favor of it. In 1868, an article proposing to instruct the Selectmen and Representative to oppose any further appropriations for the County Farm, and to use their influence to sell the same, was dismissed. Since the purchase of a County Farm, and the change in the law, by which a large portion of the poor become a County instead of a Town charge, there has been very little town action relative to the poor. The Selectmen and County Commissioners manage the whole matter.

LAWSUITS.

From time to time, the town has been engaged in lawsuits, almost entirely in regard to the maintenance of Paupers, and damages from defective highways. The records are very meagre in these matters, generally giving only the fact of a suit by appointing an agent or instructing the Selectmen to defend or carry it on. The result in any case cannot be determined from the town books, except that sometimes it may be inferred from some subsequent action. In 1789, it was —

Voted that if the Committee (which consisted of Zadok Hurd, Daniel Wright, and David Fuller,) Gets Evidence the Esqr Newcomb thinks proper to Carry the Case with Sullivan the Select Men Shall Make anote to rais the Money to Carry on the Same.

This was concerning the support of "Rubin Barron" and his mother. Gilsun was beaten and had to pay the bills.

In 1790, it was "Voted to stop the Lawsuit between David Bill and Daniel Newcomb By paying twenty Shilling For that purpose."

This was probably the same case.

In 1794, "Chose Saml Whitney, Capt. Kilborn Agents to Defend the town Against David Adams Demands that he Clames Against the town."

What this claim was, is not now known, but it was probably in connection with "minister taxes."

In 1797, a "Lawsute" with Swanzey was carried on "Concerning the widdo Davis Children." The result is not apparent.

In 1802, the town raised $100, and chose Jehiel Holdridge, David Blish, and Zadok Hurd to carry on "a law suit with Major Bill Concerning his minister tax." This is more fully explained in the Church History. (Chap. 20.) The town lost the case.

In 1804, R. L. Hurd and Samuel Whitney were chosen to defend the town against any claim of Sullivan "respecting Phidilla Dolph and her children." The probability is, Sullivan had to support them in the end.

In 1815, Samuel Whitney was appointed "to defend the cause brought against the town by the rev Clark Brown." This was for damages sustained on account of defective roads.

In 1824, Josiah Hammond was chosen agent to get the cost of supporting one Daniel Stratton on the County.

The town having persistently refused to build a bridge across the river between Mr. Randall's and Mr. Taylor's, in 1828 a suit was brought for the neglect. Luther Whitney and Dudley Smith were chosen to defend the town. Their efforts proved successful, and the bridge was not built.

In 1838, a pauper case against Keene, defended by Samuel Woodward, Jr., was successful in obliging Keene to support Abiah Ellis.

In 1840, Wm. Kingsbury conducted a pauper case against Surry. In 1844, Samuel Woodward managed another against Marlboro'. The results do not appear.

In 1845, the town was indicted for the bad condition of the new County Road, it being "rocky, rutty, broken, uneven, narrow, ruinous and in great decay in want of due reparation thereof." The town repaired it the next year, at an expense of $500.

In 1847, it was voted to borrow $230 "to defray expenses of Benton lawsuit and repairing new road near Philander Nash's." This suit was for injury on highway, and the town was compelled to pay damages.

In 1851, Samuel Woodward was chosen agent for the town in various road suits. No particulars are on record.

In 1854, Asa Cole was chosen "agent to defend suits now pending against the town." These were probably road suits also.

In 1857, D. W. Bill was agent in a pauper case against Sullivan, but was unsuccessful.

In 1859, Stephen Day, Jr., was chosen agent to defend the town against suit of George W. Tubbs, and was instructed to leave it out to three disinterested men. This was for injury from bad roads. Mr. Tubbs received about $100.

In 1860, the Selectmen were instructed "to see about suit of Kingsley Sawtell of Richmond." This was for injuries received on the highway, and was settled by paying him twenty dollars.

In 1874, D. W. Bill was agent to attend to the case of Nelson, Rice & Co., in relation to taxing hides. In this case the town was successful, and the tax was paid.

The experience of the town in lawsuits certainly tends to confirm the Scriptural advice, "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him."

CHAPTER XIII.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

"In the days of Shamgar the son of Anath, in the days of Jael, the highways were unoccupied, and the travelers walked through by-ways."

In early times, all travel was on foot or horseback, and the roads were mostly "bridle paths," sometimes to be followed only by "marked trees." Their location was fixed by the settlers' houses, running as nearly as possible in a direct line from house to house. These "old paths" determined the laying out of the first roads. The destruction of the early records leaves us without knowledge of the origin of most of the old roads. The first were laid by the Proprietors in 1764-5-6, after which they were laid by the Selectmen. It is to be noticed, in tracing these old roads, that they were often built or traveled with great variations from the record. Roads were often laid out that were not "worked," and were never more than "bridle paths."

The first road on record was laid out by Woolston Brockway, Joseph Mack, and Jonathan Smith, Proprietors' Committee, "April y^e 16th & 17th, 1764." As appears by the description, this was the principal road running from Keene to Alstead through what is now Surry, and was laid six rods wide. The Proprietors laid another road, June 1, 1765, nearer the river, running on the river bank part of the way, but as there is another record in November of the next year, of a road running nearly in the same place, it may be inferred the first one was not built. This road was to be two rods wide. The first road laid out in what is now Gilsun, was recorded as follows:—

November ye 14th 1764

Then Laid out by the Proprietors Committee a Certain Hhwy on the East Side the Mountain Beginning at the South Line of the Town of Gilsun a Little South of the Dweling house of Benajah Taylor in the third Range Leading North West wardly by trees marked with four Noches and Leading to & by the House of Josiah Kilburn in the Second Range thence Northwardly by trees Marked till it falls in the Divident Line of the Second & third Ranges and then to be one Moyety on the one Side and the other Moyety on the other Side S^d Line till it Comes to the North Side of the Sixty acre Lotts Said Hhwy is Laid four Rods Wide and to be and Remain an oppen & Publick Hhwy

Test

WOOLSTON BROCKWAY } Prop^r
JONATHAN SMITH } Comite

This is the old road running up the hollow east of Elijah Gunn's, passing a little west of the old Adams' place. The "Sixty acre Lotts" referred to, are evidently the Lots numbered three in the several Ranges. (See map.) This was part of the old County Road, and no record is found of its discontinuance. In the earliest town record of 1789, it is called the "Main rode in Gilsun."

After this we have no record till March, 1789, when the town—

Voted that the Select Men Shal lay out A rod from James McCurdy's land to the Main rode in gilsun in the Moste proper place.

This is the road from the Austin place in Surry by the old Hurd place. No record is found of its being thrown up. At the same meeting, it was "Voted to flingup arode that runs Acrost Samuel Whitney land" This was probably from C. B. Hayward's, north through the old orchard, to Joseph M. Chapin's. The remainder of the same road "from Justus Chapin's hows to Alsted Line" was thrown up in 1794.

In August 1789, roads were laid out "Beginning Near timothy Dartes South Line" and ending at "the Corner of the rode Between Zadok Hurd's and Ebenezer dartes." This last point is near the Brick School House, and the road went from the Hendee place over the top of the hill south of Dennis Keefe's. At the same time changes were made in the road near David Bliss's "turning westerly into David Blisses parster Between to white rocks." Location now unknown. In 1790-1-2, changes were made in the road from "Ebⁿ Darts to Jn^e Ellises," being from the Hendee place to Darius Porter's.

About this time, there was considerable excitement over the question whether the road from the "Mills to Surry Line" should go "Along by the House of John marks Formerly Bult By Daniel peck" or "Along by the River." Several contradictory votes are recorded, but the river road finally prevailed.

In 1790, the town "voted to fling up the Road that goes from Israel Lovelands House to Sullivan Line," but two years after it was voted to open the same road. This is the old Sullivan road from the Dea. Mark place by the Greenwood house.

In 1803, "Voted to allow Willim Mark to put up two Gates Convenient for A man to open and Shet on horse Back on the Road that Goes from w^m Marks to Sullivan."

In 1818, this road was discontinued.

In 1791, the road from Justus Hurd's to the County Road was straightened by the Selectmen.

The road from Chas. W. Rawson's to Geo. W. Newman's and over the hill to the Ballard place was laid out in 1792, three rods wide. From the top of the hill south of Mrs. Cram's, it was laid on the lot line to James Ballard's house, but as shown on the map, it was not built entirely on that line. In 1798, it was changed between John Dart's and James Ballard's to where the road now runs by Solomon Mack's.

In 1804, "Voted to trow up the road from the bars that goes in to M^r J. Clarks lot . . . to where David Bills old log house used to stand."

This is that part of the road from the top of the hill south of Mrs. Cram's to the garden in front of George W. Newman's. In 1825, that part from Chas. W. Rawson's to the old David Bill house was discontinued "on condition that there is good gates for people to pass and repass thro'." In 1877, an article for the discontinuance of this road from Geo. W. Newman's to Chas. W. Rawson's was dismissed.

Sept. 26, 1791, "Laid out a Highway Beginning at the Southeast Corner of the School hows a few Rods East of Jonathan Bliss Jun^r Running East South East tell it Coms to Samuel Whitney Barn."

This is the road from Geo. C. Hubbard's to C. B. Hayward's.

In September, 1793, a road was "Excepted" from Samuel Corey's to the "Curveline." This was probably the same that was laid out the preceding January, from "Joshua Cores North line . . . to M^r Jonathan Ramounts Lot . . . and from thence an Easterly point to the town line." This is the old road from Sullivan to "Leominster Corner." By votes passed in 1842 and 1845, that part of it beyond where George Bates now lives to the Raymond place was discontinued.

In 1794, "Voted to fling up the Rode thrue Sa^m Bill And John mark Land to the old meeting hous Spot."

This is probably the road marked on the map with a dotted line extending from Daniel W. Bill's by the old John Mark place to the Meeting House spot numbered 51.

In October, 1794, the road was laid out from James Ballard's by the Maynard place, "to the South line of lot No: 14: in the Eighth range." Four years later, this road was completed to Marlow line, "about 80 rods from M^r Downings's house, on a Dry Ridg Calculated for a Road."

The road between the Stone Bridge and the Village was at first only a "bridle path" cut through and used by Silvanus Hayward and his brother-in-law, Capt. Solomon Mack. They were laughed at for fools when they said it would be the most traveled road in town, a prophecy which they lived to see fulfilled. It was laid out two rods wide, "to be a bridle or pent road during the pleasure of the Town." The town voted to make it "an open road," March 10, 1795.

The old road from the Pickering place by the Stephen Foster place to the top of the hill where the old road goes by the Hosmer place to George C. Hubbard's, was laid out three rods wide, in January 1796. In 1830, that part of it west of the Foster place was discontinued "by there being good gates provided on said road."

In 1796, the road from the John Hammond place to Oscar J. Wilson's was laid out three rods wide. In 1874, it was discontinued "to the foot of Meadow hill," on account of the road having been opened the year before, from near T. T. Clark's to that point.

A road was laid out in 1796, "from the road that leads from John Marks to the Meeting house beginning . . . twelve or fourteen rods North of S^d Marks house at the North End of a Little Swamp yn runs north 52 D^e west 112 Rods to the mouth of the road that Leads from M^r Hammonds to L^r Rights.

This road evidently ran directly from the road north of the old Mark place to the road south of Edouard Loiselle's. It was laid three rods wide, but was probably never worked much. The road running north from the Stephen Foster place to the Samuel Isham place was opened in 1797, three rods wide.

The same year, a road three rods wide was laid out "from Sil^{tn} Hayward to Josh Coreys." This is the road from the village by Israel Loveland's and the Benjamin Thompson place, and was opened three rods wide to the Corey place. The eastern part was never worked much.

In 1798, a road was laid "from the South w. Corner of Jo^t Clarks house on the Line Between John Darts & Obed Darts to the South Side of S^d Lots . . . Down to the bridge a Crost ashawillet River between Sil^{tn} Haywards & Israel Loveland."

As frequently happened, it will be seen by the map that the road as actually traveled was considerably east of the recorded survey. When the road was laid out from the village by John Hammond's in 1804, it was called in exchange for this road.

In 1803, "Voted to make a road from Surry line to Sullivan line to meet a road from Boston through Peterborough to Sullivan and to Gilson . . . provided the above mention^d town Made A road to meet Our S^d road."

Probably the other towns failed to do their part, as no further account of this road appears in the records.

The road from Mason Guillow's by Alvin White's to Sullivan line was laid out in 1806, three rods wide.

The road from the Village by John Hammond's, was laid out three rods wide, in 1804. It began about two rods east of Silvanus Hayward's house, that is very near the ell part of George B. Rawson's present house. It ran up the brook near where the houses now stand on the east side of the street, crossing the brook and continuing up the hill, very nearly as at present. There is no record of the change in the street except at the north end. This was altered in 1814, so as to run west of the house built by Lemuel Bingham, where N. O. Hayward's house now stands.

About 1804, (date not given) a road was laid out "beginning ten rod East of the Corner of the road where the schoolhouse uso stand between Sam^l Whitneys and Jon^t Blissess on the South Side of the road that leads to S^d whitneys . . . to the South line of David bills lot on his East line to the Southeast Corner of S^d lot."

The School House referred to stood a few rods east of Geo. C. Hubbard's, and the road ran down the hollow through "Kansas" to the lot corner in the Street near K. D. Webster's. This road was never built, though it is very evident it was laid where the road towards Alstead ought to be. Efforts have since been made to open a road on this line, but without success.

In 1806, a road was laid "from Capt. Fullers Mill to the Meeting House." It was probably traveled some on horseback, but never built.

The road from near Chilion Mack's to the Converse place, was laid out three rods wide, in 1807, and there is no record of its discontinuance.

In 1808, the road was laid out three rods wide, as it now runs from Darius Porter's to Wm. Kingsbury's. Before this, it went over the hill by Daniel Wright's.

About 1810, a road was laid out three rods wide "from the School House in the north district to Samuel Whitney's cider-house," that is from the road south of Mrs. Cram's to C. B. Hayward's sugar-house. At the same time, a road three rods wide was opened "from Justus Chapin's land to the road . . . thro' Mr Websters land:" This is the road from Joseph M. Chapin's to Kendall Nichols's.

The original County Road from Alstead to Keene went a little west of Joseph M. Chapin's by George C. Hubbard's, the old Hosmer place, Charles W. Rawson's, and down the hill to the "great bridge." It also went directly over the hill from near the widow Gates's through Mason Guillow's pasture, following the present road by Edouard Loisele's, passing close to Daniel W. Bill's house, turning to the right near the ledge south of George S. Mansfield's, by the old Adams place down the hollow to Elijah Gunn's.

About 1806, a turnpike was started from Newport to Keene. This town, as usual, opposed it as long as possible. It was, however, laid out by "the Newport Turnpike corporation," and, in June 1811, the Selectmen laid out the road three rods wide from "Alstead south line to the north line of Keene." This was rather a straightening of the old road, than really building a new one. It is the road as now traveled from above Kendall Nichols's to below Elijah Gunn's.

About the same time, the road was amended to its present location from the old Wilcox place by the minister lot and the Mark place to meet the new County Road. This road was also three rods wide.

In 1812, that part of the old road from near the Adams place to the ledge south of George S. Mansfield's, was discontinued.

In 1815, a road was laid "in exchange for the old road from John Grimes's to the road that comes from Samuel Cory's, to be as wide as old road."

In 1817, a road was laid two rods wide "from the foot of the hill as you come from Zenas Bingham's . . . to the road that leads from Stephen White's to Jonathan Peases . . . in exchange for the old road which comes out south of Aaron Days." Aaron Day then lived where Mason Guillow now does, and the road south of his house was discontinued the next year. The road then opened, was the north part of the old road from Henry Bingham's and came out near Harriet Swinton's. After the new road was built in 1839, the whole of this road was thrown up.

In 1823, the road was laid out from Timothy Dart's house to Alstead line, two rods wide, where the road now is.

In 1830, it was "voted to discontinue the road north of Stephen Days." This road went through about where John J. Isham's barnyard is, and came out near the mill at the bridge.

The next year, a road was "laid out beginning 5 rods East of the bridge over the brook East of Calvin Mack's . . . to near the West end of Calvin May's house . . . to be made free of any expense to the town." This has sometimes been used as a winter road, but was never built.

In 1833, a road was opened from James Hudson's "to the old road; one rod and ten links north of John Nash's . . . to be two rods and one half wide."

In June of the same year, the road from Enos Cross's to the Polley Bridge was laid out two and a half rods wide.

That part of the old County Road from Geo. C. Hubbard's by the Hosmer place "to the Road leading from Calvin Mack's to Aaron Day's mills," was discontinued by vote of the town in 1834. Several efforts were afterwards made to re-open it, but failed. The same year, "Voted to alter the Road near John Nash's so that it be opened through south of his buildings to the old road near John Guillow's." It seems probable, however, that this change was not carried out. It was also "Voted to lay out a Road from Nathan Ellis Jr to the Village Should the Selectmen deem it necessary." The next year, the same road was voted without condition. But it was never built.

March 7, 1835, the Selectmen "widened and straightened" the Main street in the Village as follows:—

Beginning twenty three feet and two inches west from the north west corner of the house now owned by Jerome B. Aldrich thence south 11 deg west 33 rods & 11½ feet thence south 15 deg 30 min west 20 rods to the south end of factory village street, the above described line to be the middle of the highway and the same highway to be three & half rods wide.

The starting point of this survey is marked by an iron pin.

In 1837, the road from the County Road to the Hurd place was discontinued. But in 1839, it was opened "from Luna Foster's to Charles Grant's farm." In 1865, it was again discontinued "subject to bars and gates."

In 1838, "Voted to discontinue the road leading from John Livermore's to Calvin Randall's by the said Randall's keeping good Gates." This was the road from George H. Carpenter's across the old ford to Bradley Stone's.

About the year 1833, the plan began to be talked up of a new County Road from Newport to Keene. Col. Jehiel Day, who, with his brother Daniel, had recently opened a store and a hotel in the "Factory Village," was the most active leader in favor of the road through Gilsum. The majority of the town, as thirty years before, were bitterly opposed to the road, and fought it off as long as possible, Capt. David Bill being their agent in the matter. But they were at last compelled to yield, and in 1838, John Horton, Allen Butler and Asa Cole were chosen to superintend the building of the new road. John Horton having left town, Solomon Mack was chosen in his place. The road from Marlow to Keene was opened four rods wide, in the Fall of 1839.

In 1838, a short road was laid at the southwest corner of the town to connect Sullivan with the new County Road. This is part of the road that comes out near the old Bridge place below Keene line. The same year, the road from near Chilion Mack's to the Loveland Bridge was laid out two rods wide.

In 1840, the road "from Nathaniel Heaton's Barn on the plain, to the road leading from Cutler Knights' to Polly Blood's" was discontinued.

In 1842, the street between L. W. F. Mark's and Herbert Adams's new house was laid out two rods wide, to extend three rods east of the center of bridge across the brook. The town refusing to appropriate money, it was not opened till 1844. In 1861, that part east of the west bank of the brook was discontinued.

In 1846, on petition of F. W. Day and others, a road was laid out from the east side of the County Road in front of Day's store to Aaron Day's barn. This seems to have been open for use long before, but it was desired to have a more accurate record. It was laid three rods wide.

In 1850, the street between L. W. F. Mark's and the Meeting House, was laid out two rods wide. It begins "at the S. W. corner of land belonging to the Congregational Society" and runs a little south of east fifty and a half rods.

A road was laid out, about this time, by the County Commissioners, up the brook from near David A. Roundy's to Alstead line. The town refused to build it, and in 1851 voted its discontinuance.

On account of trouble from freshets, and especially river ice, the road "between George H. Nash's Mill and James P. Nash's" was amended in 1853.

In 1859, the road "from the late Capt. Benjamin Wares Farm" to the road from "Elisha S. Fish's to William Mark's" was made "Subject to Gates and Barrs."

The same year, a road one rod wide, subject to gates, was laid out from Jotham Bates's to the house of Benjamin F. Jeffs, "to be made by the petitioners and to remain a highway so long as said petitioners shall keep the same in repair and no longer."

Brake Hill Street running from Sullivan street to the old Sullivan line was laid out in 1873, two rods wide.

In 1875, the town voted that a road is needed from Wm. A. Wilder's to Keene road, and appointed a Committee to attend to the matter. The County Commissioners being called, refused to lay out such a road. But another petition in 1879 was successful, and the road is to be opened in 1880.

In 1876, the town

Voted to remove the Gates & Bars on the highway leading from Milton Stearns to Cha^e E Eveleth House & the Selectmen are to attend to the matter & Settle Damage on the Same.

The Selectmen accordingly laid out said road, but at the next Town Meeting in 1877, an article to raise money for the same was dismissed.

The same year, a road three rods wide was laid out by the Selectmen, to extend from "Burnt House Hill" to the road near the Centennial Cemetery, but the town refused to build it, and, in 1878, voted its discontinuance. The Commissioners being called, reported in favor of the road, and the Court ordered it built. The job was bid off by C. B. Hayward and E. D. Banks for $245. With some volunteer help from interested citizens, they completed it in the Fall of 1879.

In 1878, a road two rods wide was opened from the road leading to James L. Bates's to the river road south of Simeon Mason's.

In 1879, the road from George Wright's running southeast to the river road was discontinued.

BRIDGES.

Both the Ashuelot river and the many mountain brooks that flow into it, become so violent in the Spring freshets, that Gilsun has almost needed a "pontifex," like ancient Rome. In early times, for horseback travel, bridges were of comparatively small importance, and "fordways" were generally deemed sufficient. A bridge called "the great bridge" was built by Capt. Elisha Mack and his brothers, where the Stone Bridge now stands, in 1778 or 1779. In 1795, it is mentioned as "the Bridge that crosses the Ashawylot river in Gilsun," from which it appears to have been the only river bridge at that time. This bridge was so far above the water that it was not easily disturbed by freshets, but owing to spray from the dam just above, the timbers rotted so soon as to put the town to frequent expense for repairs. In 1798, a Committee appointed by the town "to view the Grate Bridg," reported that "a timber 14 inches Square be put under the Middle of S^d Bridge and three braces Each Side to Extend to the Roks Each Side the River." The following is the receipt for the work:—

Recd of the Town of Gilsun Ten Dollars in full for what I have Don to the grate Bridg by Baxters Mills in S^d Gilsun to this Date

Gilsun Feb. 20th 1799

ZADOK HURD

In September 1801, it was "voted to Give Robt. L. Hurd two Dollars and fifty Cents to put the brace under the Great brige by Baxters mills." In August 1804, a Committee was appointed to examine both bridges, and at an adjourned meeting in September, it was voted to repair "according to the Committees Report," which report is not given. These repairs were set up at "vandue" to the lowest bidder, and "the Bridge by Griswolds mills" was bid off by David Blish at sixteen dollars. In August 1806, "Esq Blish" was instructed by the town to "repair the Bridge by Griswolds Mills." The next March, it was voted to repair again "by putting a cap piece under the Bridge and three Braces on each side," and the job was struck off to Jonathan Pease for four dollars. In 1810, a Committee examined the Bridge and reported it needed repairs, — and one dollar was voted to Elisha Bond for the timber for that purpose. The labor was to be done by the surveyors, out of the "highway money," excepting the northwest district. In August of the same year, it was voted to build a bridge "by Pease's mills."

To be built like the old bridge only to be raised eighteen inches higher five string pieces 15 inches by 13 — to be built with good sound hemlock timber the plank to be 2½ inches thick. Struck off to William Baxter at $75.

In 1815, "Voted that Jonathan Pease new plank the bridge by his mills." Expense not recorded. In 1819, twenty dollars was raised "to repair the bridges across the Ashuelot river." The next year, $10 was raised for the same purpose, and in 1821, twenty dollars. In 1824, a new bridge was built. — "struck off to Belding Dort at $130.00." In 1832, Aaron Day, Amherst Hayward, and Jehiel Day, were chosen "to examine the Bridge near Aaron Days & near I B Lovelands and see what is necessary to be done." This Committee reported "in favour of building a stone arch bridge," but the town "voted to build a wooden bridge like the old one." It was to be completed by the first of July 1833, "with planke 3rd thick," and was struck off to Joseph Clark for $117. In 1843, a new bridge was built by Calvin C. Brigham — finished Sept. 7th. In 1851, the Selectmen were instructed to "examine the Bridge near A. D. Townes Mill, and make such repairs as may be considered necessary." A similar vote was passed the next year, and $125 raised for the purpose. In 1860, the Selectmen were instructed to contract for the building of a Stone Arch Bridge over the Ashuelot River near Andrew D. Townes Mill if in their opinion the same shall be for the interest of the Town.

A contract was made with one Otis Smith, and a bridge built at a cost of about $975. Owing to faulty construction, the contractor not understanding his business, the arch fell in, after a few months' use. In July 1862, it was voted that the Selectmen "build a Stone Arch Bridge near the place of the old one . . . in the best possible manner," and William L. Kingsbury was appointed "Agent to superintend the building of the Bridge and furnish the necessities for that purpose." In 1863, the Selectmen were instructed to borrow money and finish the Stone Bridge. The expense as near as can be now gathered from the Town Reports was $5,211.97. To this add the expense of the first Bridge, and we have $6,185.19, the whole cost. The County afterwards paid $500, so that the town has now invested in the Stone Bridge not less than $5,685.

The bridge known for so many years as "Loveland Bridge," was probably first built about 1797, when the road was laid out from Silvanus Hayward's to Joshua Corey's. The first record of its repair is in 1804, — bid off by Turner White for 23 dollars. In 1807, it was voted to "rebuild," and the job was struck off to Thomas Redding for eighty-six dollars. The next year, he was discharged from the contract, and the Selectmen were instructed to "do what is necessary to be done." In 1812, repairs on the "Loveland Bridge" were struck off to John Dart for four dollars. In 1814, "the planking" of this Bridge for three years was struck off to Stephen White for fourteen dollars. There is added to the vote evidence of the peculiar danger that has always attended this Bridge, viz.: —

If the said bridge should be carried off within the said three years, . . . the Town shall procure as many feet of new plank . . . as shall have been put on the old bridge by the said White.

In 1822, a new bridge was built, the old one having been probably carried off by a freshet. It was voted to build the bridge ten inches higher than the Committee reported, and "that those who build the stone butments . . . shall risk them to stand one year." The west "butment was struck off to belding Dart at forty four dollars," — "the east butment to Orlando Mack at fifty dollars," — and "the wood work to Berzeleel L. Mack at thirty five dollars." This bridge has been rebuilt and repaired several times since, but the records make no mention of it. The expenses have probably been "lumped" with highway repairs. It was destroyed by a freshet in 1842, and perhaps at other times. In 1862 it was broken down by Burnap's team. He received $50 damage from the town, and the bridge was rebuilt by N. O. Hayward for $80.

When the road was laid out from Capt. Fuller's Mill in 1806, it was to begin "at the North end of the Bridge below said mill." The town voted, however, to have it begin on the south side of the river, thus avoiding the necessity of keeping up a bridge. Probably the bridge spoken of as already there, was only for foot passengers.

Strenuous efforts were made by the inhabitants in the west part of the town, to have a bridge across the river, at the old ford near George H. Carpenter's. As early as 1806, the town sent a Committee "to examine the river between Simeon Taylors and Joshua Ishams in order to find the best place to build a bridge." No action followed, however, and in March 1826, it was voted not to build. In September following, another Committee was appointed "to examine the river." The next year, it was voted again not to build, and Luther Whitney was chosen agent apparently to resist any attempts that might be made to compel the town to build a bridge. In 1828, the applicants for a bridge were again repulsed (p. 52). They seem then to have commenced building, hoping the town would help them out. The abutments they built are still standing. In 1830, and again in 1832, articles asking the town "to complete building a Bridge across Ashuelot river between Ivory Randall's and John Livermore's" were dismissed, and nothing further has been done.

In 1833, the "Hammond Hollow Bridge" was built in accordance with the vote of the town to "build a bridge across the Ashuelot river at or near the fordway so called below Phillip Howard's on condition that the inhabitants that are most benefitted build the road to the bridge without expence to the town and clear the town from all expence except the bridge." This bridge has been several times rebuilt, but no records have been kept. It was so damaged in the great freshet of 1869, that it had to be rebuilt at a cost of about $100. In 1879, T. T. Clark rebuilt it for $80.

In 1871, an effort was made to have a bridge across the river "near Ephraim Howard's," but the article was dismissed. A foot-bridge is generally kept up there during the summer.

HIGHWAY TAXES.

At the first annual meeting of which we have the record, March 10, 1789, it was "Voted to Rais Sixty Pound to repair Highways" and that labor be "at three Shillings pr day." In November following, Justus Hurd was appointed "to petition the General Cort to tax The non-resident land in Gilsum for repairing highways." This petition was successful, for we find that in 1790,

The town of Gilsum was authorized by the Legislature to assess and collect a tax of one penny per acre upon all non-resident lands in the town, the money to be use solely for the purpose of repairing roads and building bridges, and that a mans labor should be reconed at three shillings per day.

In 1810, $250 of the amount raised for highways, was ordered to be laid out on the "County Road." This was the old road to Keenc.

The next year, at a special meeting in September, it was Voted to Lay out one hundre and Fifty Dollars At the South End of s^d road beginning at Keen Line and the Same Sum Nearly to the North line meaning at the road by Joseph Taylors, and that S^d Jobbs shall be Finished by the Last Day of June 1812.

In 1846, $500 of the amount raised, was to be laid out on the "County Road." This was the "New Road from Keene to Marlow."

In 1813, it was voted that the work on highways should "be jobbed out to the lowest bidders by the Surveyors of the several Districts." This method seems to have been unsatisfactory, as in September following, $120 extra was raised, and it was "Voted to lay out the above raised money in the antient method by the day."

The following table gives the amount raised each year for repairing roads, and the price allowed for labor. Where no price is given, it is understood to be the same as the next preceding vote.

1789, £60, 3 shillings per day.	1832, $550.
1790, £60, { 3 sh. & 6 d. from May to Sept., in Sept.	1833-4, $500.

1830, $400.	1877, $800, Do. Do. Do. 15 cents an hour.
1831, $500.	1878, $950, $150 Do. Do.
	1879, $1,000, $200 Do. Do. 12½ cents an hour.

It will be seen, by the table, that the largest sum nominally raised for highway repairs, was $1,200 in 1865, and the smallest was £30 equal to $100, which was the sum raised for five out of the first 20 years on record. To get the actual amount raised, however, the price of labor must be taken into account. By this comparison, the largest amount was in 1811, representing 1,000 days labor at 10 hours a day. Or leaving out those years in which special sums were raised for the County Road, the largest amount is 800 days labor, the present year, which is certainly an encouraging fact. The smallest amount is 167 days in 1809. The average for 91 years is 525 days annually. The average in dollars is $472, making the average wages per day of 10 hours, very nearly 90 cents. For the last thirty years the average amount has been $728 representing 577 days labor, making the average wages $1.26 per day.

The first guide board in town seems to have been put up in the year 1800, in accordance with the following record.

Voted to Build a post gide and Setit the North Side of Joseph Taylors Land at the Croch of the Rode to william Baxters mills S^d Post guide Struck of to Timothy Dart to Build at one Dollar and fifty Cents — This was where the road from Surry divided towards "Hammond Hollow" and "Baxter's Mills." In 1817, it was voted that the Selectmen "put up post guides where they think proper." And this has been the practice from that time.

It has been said, that one of the surest tests of civilization is the condition of public roads. If so, Gilsum cannot boast a high grade. It is but justice to say, however, that the heavy teams passing from Marlow to Keene cost the town hundreds of dollars in annual road repairs, without bringing a cent in return. This fact furnishes certainly a very substantial, if not wholly sufficient excuse. To get rid of these Marlow teams, Gilsum could well afford to give from five to ten thousand dollars towards building a railroad from Keene to Newport. Meanwhile the town needs a zealous prophet to cry, as of old,

"Prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones."

CHAPTER XIV.

CEMETERIES.

"Erewhile, on England's pleasant shores, our sires
Or blossoms. . . .

The pilgrim bands who passed the sea to keep Their Sabbaths in the eye of God alone,
In his wide temple of the wilderness,
Brought not these simple customs of the heart
With them. . . .

Naked rows of graves
And melancholy ranks of monuments
Are seen instead, where the coarse grass, between,
Shoots up its dull green spikes, and in the wind
Hisses, and the neglected bramble nigh,
Offers its berries to the schoolboy's hand."

THE first record in reference to Cemeteries is in 1798. "Chose Berzeleel Mack Jon^t Pease Saxtons." Two burying places were then in use: — the old one on the hill north of Mr. Gunn's, and the one still known as "the Bond grave-yard." The first known burial was that of Jemima, wife of Ebenezer Kilburn, who died June 24, 1765. She was buried in where her monument may still be seen. This was the first death of a white person within the present limits of Gilsum. One earlier death stands on the record, as follows: — "The aged John Brook Departed this life Nov. 24 — 1764." (Appendix C.) He doubtless belonged in what is now Surry, and was buried there. There are probably forty or fifty graves in this old Cemetery, but only eight can be identified. These have the old black slate headstones, most of them with a hideous winged head at the top, and bearing the following inscriptions.

1. In Memory of Mr^r Marah Kilbourn^e y^e Wife of Mr Josiah Kilbourn She Dec^d Dec^r y^e 26th 1782 in y^e 64th year of her Age.

2. MEMENTO MORI. In Memory of Revnd, Josiah Kilburn who was Minister of Chesterfield in y^e Bay State he Dec^d Sep^r y^e 24th 1781 in y^e 29th year of his Age.

Let me not forgotten lie
Lest you forgot that you must die

7. In Memory of Mrs Anna Pease, wife of Mr Pelatiah Pease, who died May 29th 1787 in the 46th year of her age.

Remember me as you pass by,
As you are now so once was I,
As I am now soon you must be,
Prepare for death & follow me.

[Below this inscription is the following in as large letters as the rest. Made by Moses Wright of Rockingham — Price 7 Dollars.]

8. In Memory of Mr Oliver Pease who died June 1st 1799 in the 22nd year of his age.

Friends nor physicians could not save,
My mortal body from the grave,
Nor can the grave confine me hear,
When Christ in glory shall appear.

This Cemetery has been sadly neglected. Lying in an open pasture for the past eighty years, many graves are obliterated, even the stones are broken down and defaced. There have been those who wished to have it cared for, but the town has never been willing. As far back as 1809, an article was put in the warrant to raise money "to fence the South burying yard," but it was summarily dismissed. The same thing was done in 1827. In 1874, it was voted to fence it with stone wall and to raise $75 for the purpose. But at a special meeting in September following, the vote was rescinded 35 to 33. An article for the same purpose was dismissed in 1875, and it was voted to take the $75 raised the year before, and use it to pay debts with. As the town is now free from debt, it is to be hoped there will be respect enough for the fathers who endured the hardships of the wilderness to prepare homes for their children and successors, to protect at least their graves from the trampling of cattle, otherwise the time will soon come when "The grassy hillocks are leveled again,

And the keenest eye shall search in vain,
'Mong briers, and ferns, and paths of sheep,
For the spot where these aged people sleep."

This "yard" was not probably used after the beginning of the present century. Of the "Saxtons" chosen in 1798, Jonathan Pease was doubtless in charge of this, and Berzeleel Mack of

THE BOND CEMETERY.

This is mentioned, in 1804, as "the Burying place that Stephen Bond has Given to the town Viz one half ackre." It was given before 1798, and the earliest burial was probably that of Mrs. Fisher, in December, 1785. The Deed, however, was not executed till 1807. A strip one rod wide at the south end was given by Solomon Woods. The steepness of the road has always been a serious objection to this locality, and many efforts have been made to have a more feasible road opened. In 1876, the Selectmen laid out Centennial Street which makes this Cemetery very accessible from the village. (Page 58.) Probably one half of all burials in town have been here. A large part of the graves are now unnamed and unknown. The following are the inscriptions —:

Return my friends
 Dry up your tears
 Here I must lie
 Till Christ appears.

CENTENNIAL CEMETERY.

In 1856, an article was put in the warrant to enlarge the "Bond grave-yard" but it was dismissed. In 1876, a lot of land lying directly south of the original yard was bought of Willard Bill for $150. This lot contains over four acres, and has been carefully laid out, with convenient avenues in both directions. From the year '76 it has been named Centennial Cemetery. Monuments with the following inscriptions have been removed from the old yard:—

- Lot 118. 1. HATTIE (Reverse.) HATTIE U. RAWSON DIED JUNE 15, 1867, AGED 22.
 2. HENRY N. DIED MAY 19, 1864 Æt. 23 Yrs. 8 Mos.
 MARYETT, DIED OCT. 24, 1856, Æt. 13 Yrs. 6 Mos.
 Children of James & Mary Rawson.

Lot 295. JANE ELSEA Daughter of Cha's W. & Limah S. Bingham, died Jan. 31, 1847 Æ. 5 mo. & 20 d's.

Burials in this Cemetery have been the following:—

- Lot 118. FATHER AND MOTHER (Reverse.) JAMES RAWSON DIED Dec. 24, 1878 Æ. 74 ys. 7 ms.
 MARY his wife Dec. 8, 1878, Æ. 72 ys. 2 ms.

 Lot 127. Thomas T. Clark.
 Lot 133. Mrs. Eliza A. Webster.
 Lot 271. Charles E. Crouch.
 Lot 312. Reuben Leander Jolly.
 Lot 313. Mrs. Louisa J. Bates.
 Lot 315. Caleb Hill.

VESSEL ROCK CEMETERY.

At a town meeting, Aug. 27, 1804, it was "Voted to buy one ackre of land that Jont. Pease purchase^d of Simon Baxter for the purpose of haveing it for A buriling Place." The Deed was given in 1810, and reserved the right "to pasture only sheep and calves." Though it was called at first "one ackre," it is evident only about half an acre was taken by the town. In 1820, it was enlarged by the purchase of 14 Rods of Land on the west side of the original lot. The first burial in this yard was that of Justus Hurd in 1804, and the second was three years later, Rev. Elisha Fish. The inscriptions in this Cemetery are as follows : —

In 1805 the town

Voted to fence the Burying yards in this town meaning one by W^m Baxters and the other on Stephen Bonds Land Voted that the Burying yards be fenced with Hemlock posts not less than ten inches through and Boards Spiked on to them three posts to one length of Boards the Boards to Be a foot wid three boards on a post. the posts to be put 2 feet in to the Ground to be boarded to the top of the posts two nails in a Board on Each post — to be four feet and a half high from the top of the Ground the boards to be Sixteen feet long or under the work to be don by the first of June 1806 — the pay to be made when the work is done there is to be a gate Eight feet wide hung with Iron hinges.

voted to Set up the fenceing of S^d yards to those that will do them the Ceapist accordingly Struck of the yard by W^m Baxters to John Ellis at 49 Cents p^r rod — and the other yard to Elisha Bond at 50 Cents p^r rod.

It was afterwards "voted to Give John Ellis liberty to get Black ash posts instid of Hemlock." These fences lasted about ten years, as we find the Selectmen instructed to repair them in 1816. In 1819 "Voted to fence the burying Yards with Stone wall" the Selectmen "to See to the making of s^d wall." These walls are still standing.

The first recorded purchase of undertaker's implements is in 1825, when it was "Voted that the town procure two palls and two satchels and cords." In 1836, the town "Voted that the Select Men furnish a Grave Cloth, with a bag to keep it in." In 1839, "Voted to procure a Hearse and build a Hearse house located at discretion of the Select Men." They placed it a few rods below the Stone Bridge, on the Surry road, where it now stands. An effort was made to buy a new Hearse as early as 1851. but it was not accomplished till 1870, when the Hearse now in use was purchased.

In 1867 the Selectmen were instructed to appoint some one to toll the bell and keep a record of deaths, also to go with the Hearse at Funerals, and keep it clean and in repair. Capt. Chandler held the appointment for about ten years, since which George H. McCoy has been chosen. Practically, his duties pertain only to the management of the Hearse.

TOMBS.

At a meeting called for that special purpose, in April, 1825, "Voted to have the town build a tomb in the center burying yard." Jonathan Pease, Luther Whitney, Aaron Day, and True Webster Jr. were the committee "to draw the plan and see the work well done." and sixty dollars was raised for the purpose. The building was struck off to Josiah Hendee, for $39.90.

About 1830, Samuel Isham Jr. and Nathan Ellis Jr. built a tomb at the Bond cemetery.

Within a few years the town has bought out their heirs, so that both tombs are now the property of the town.

The special anxiety to have a tomb, fifty years ago, was not mainly the convenience in winter, but rather the fear of "body snatchers," which prevailed at that time, not without cause. Medical Colleges then largely depended for "subjects" upon bodies surreptitiously obtained. A student could pay his full fees by furnishing a body, and no questions were asked. It was thought that bodies locked in the tomb were safer from these marauders, than in the grave. That this fear was no idle imagination is well known. Probably no grave-yard in the country was secure from these depredators. In the case of David Smith, watchers were stationed to guard the grave by night, and some of them still living testify that parties came from different directions, and drove hastily away on finding themselves discovered. The trouble of watching became so burdensome, that the body was taken up and buried under the wood-pile in the widow's door-yard, a log being left in the grave. A few months after, when the body was returned, it was found that the log had been turned over by the grave-robbers.

The Sextons appointed by the town have been as follows, so far as recorded:—

Berzeleel Mack, 1798, 1802,-25.	Otis G. Hammond, 1837 to 40,-2 to 48.	Samuel D. Bill, 1856,-7.

CHAPTER XV.

GENERAL FINANCES.

"The Almighty Dollar."

PRIOR to 1821, no money appears to have been raised except for specified objects, such as preaching, schools, and highways, but at the annual meeting in that year, it was "Voted to raise one hundred and seventy-five dollars to defray Town expenses." When, after spending a large amount in "fighting" the "new road" from Keene to Marlow, the town was at last obliged to build it, instead of raising the money by tax, the poor policy of borrowing was adopted. Then, instead of paying it up as fast as possible, there appeared a great reluctance to tax themselves for that purpose. Articles inserted in the warrant, to raise money for the debt, were repeatedly dismissed. Worse than this, when the Surplus Revenue was received from the United States in 1839, it was first voted to use it to pay for the "New Road," but the next day, that vote was rescinded, and the money divided equally among the tax-payers. After about ten years, however, there was an effort gradually to reduce the debt. In another ten years, the war came on, and the debts were largely increased. The great expense attendant upon building and re-building the Stone Bridge, came in at the same period. At the close of the war in 1865, the net indebtedness of the town was reported as $19,518.30. This, however, included the $5400, afterwards refunded by the State, (page 46,) so that the real debt was a little over Fourteen Thousand Dollars. By a wise persistence in high taxes, for the next decade, in 1876 the town found itself free from debt, for the first time in nearly forty years. It is to be hoped that the experience of that "forty years wandering in the wilderness" of debt, will be sufficient to establish in Gilsum, for all time to come, the wholesome motto, "Pay as you go."

Amounts raised for general town charges and the payment of debts:—

1822, $250.	1834, $375.	1847, $250 and $250.		1862-3, $800.
1823, $225.	1835, $325.	1848, $400.		1864 to 7, $2500.
1824, $360.	1836-7, $350.	1849, $300.		1868, $1950.
1825, $300.	1838, $500.	1850, $500.		1869 to 71, $2500.
1826, $100.	1839, $800.	1851, $500 and $200.		1872, $2200.
1827, $150.	1840, $500.	1852, $500 and $100.		1873 to 5, $2000.
1828, $75.	1841, $900.	1853, $500 and $113.		1876, $1000.
1829, $175.	1842, $600.	1854, $500 and $200.		1877, $100 and $200.†
1830, $150.	1843, $400.	1855, $500 and $100.		1878, $150.
1831, $300.	1844, $450.	1856-7, $600 and $200.	Debt.	1879, $0.50.
1832, $350.	1845, $250 and $150.	1858-60, $600 and $300.

The smallest sum raised any year before the present was $75 in 1828, and the largest $2500 for seven years while paying the debt. The average for the fifty-nine years on record is $867.

The following table gives the tax on each dollar of the grand levy, for each year, so far as we have the records. This includes all money taxes, both State and County, but not the highway tax.

1805, $1.00.	1817, $1.22.	1829, $1.22.	1829, $1.07.	1835, $0.99.	1841, $1.62.

The lowest tax recorded is $0.57 in 1807. The lowest in the last sixty-four years is $0.81 in 1836; and the highest is $4.75 in 1870. The average for sixty-four years is very nearly $1.94.

Financially, Gilsuam at the present time, is in a sound, healthy condition, able to take hold manfully and energetically, of all enterprises for the public good, such as schools, libraries, and highways. "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth: there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

CHAPTER XVI.

TOWN OFFICERS.

It has been observed that the Charter not only made a grant of land, but incorporated a Town. It is probable that the Proprietors did not organize as a town for two or three years after the Charter was given, as they certainly transacted business in those years, which properly belonged to the town. The loss of the records leaves us very much in the dark, as it is only by accident that we can pick up here and there the name of some town officers prior to 1789. The first Town Meeting of which we have any knowledge was held Aug. 26, 1766, at Jonathan Smith's. "Joseph Sponsor" was Moderator, and Obadiah Willecox, Clerk. From that time to 1789, no name of Moderator has been found. Moderators at the annual meetings since 1789, have been as follows:—

Justus Hurd, 1789,—93.	Obadiah Pease, 1817.	Otis G. Hammond, 1843.
Jonathan Adams, 1790.	Josiah Hammond, 1818 to 21 and 23.	Amasa May, 1845,—6,—58.
Aaron Hammond, 1791.	John Hammond, 1822,—5,—6,—9.	Daniel W. Bill, 1847,—65,—6,—7,—70,—1.
Daniel Wright, 1792.	Berzeel Lord Mack, 1824.	Francis A. Howard, 1848.
Jehiel Holdridge, 1794,—7, 1802.	Aaron Day, 1827,—8.	Calvin May, Jr., 1849,—50,—1,—5.
Zadok Hurd, 1795,—8,—9, 1801.	Luther Abbot, 1830,—2,—7,—40,—1,—2,—4.	David S. Ware, 1852.
Samuel Whitney, 1796, 1800,—6,—15.	Willard Bill, 1831.	Aaron H. Livermore, 1853.
Silvanus Hayward, 1803.	Charles H. Cummings, Jr., 1833,—4.	Charles F. Kingsbury, 1854,—6,—7.
David Adams, 1804.	George W. Hammond, 1835.	Aaron D. Hammond, 1859 to 64,
David Blish, 1805,—7,—8,—12,—3,—1,—6.	Allen Butler, 1836.	1863,—9,—72 to 79.
Robert Lane Hurd, 1809,—10,—1.	Samuel Woodward, Jr., 1838,—9.

In 1809, immediately after choice of Moderator is the following record:—

- 2—Voted to adjourn to Smiths Hall [the tavern.]
- 3—Voted to adjourn back to the meeting.

Evidently the new Moderator "treated." Probably this case was not an exception, save in the fact of its being put on record. Moderators have never received pay for their services.

As seen above, Obadiah Willecox of Surry was the first Town Clerk, and from all the writings of that day, now extant, he was evidently much better qualified for that office than any other of the actual settlers. He doubtless held the office till the setting off of Surry, in 1769. Who filled this office for the succeeding 20 years cannot now be told, save as in one instance found in State documents. In 1787, Timothy Dewey was Town Clerk. Since 1789, Town Clerks have been : —

Zadok Hurd, 1789.	David Brigham, 1834-5.	Calvin Chandler, appointed by Selectmen, 1864.
Robert Lane Hurd, 1790-1, 1801 to 5, 1811-2.	Israel B. Loveland, 1836 to 44, 1846 to 58.	George Henry McCoy, 1867 to 70-72 to 77.
David Blish, 1792 to 1800.	Allen Butler, 1845.	John Gould, 1871.
Josiah Hammond, 1806 to 10, 1815, -6, -24 to 31.	Martin L. Goddard, elected 1856, but left town.	John A. Smith, 1878.
Elisha S. Fish, 1813.	Hervey E. Rawson, 1859-65-6.	Benjamin H. Horton, 1879.
Obadiah Pease, 1814-7 to 23.	Ezra Webster, 1860 to 64, died in office.
Luther Abbot, 1832-3.

Town Treasurers since 1789 have been : —

Aaron Hammond, 1789-90.	Willard Bill, 1832.	Asa Cole, 1851-2-5.
David Blish, 1791 to 94.	Aaron Day, 1833-4-5.	N. O. Hayward, 1853.
Ebenezer Bill, 1795-6-7, 1802-3.	Calvin May, 1840-5, acted also in 1836-7-8.	Davis H. Wilson, 1854-6-9-60.
Zadok Hurd, 1798 to 1801.	David Bill, 1842.	George B. Rawson, 1857.
John Hammond, 1804 to 10.	Ezra Webster, 1843-4-58-61 to 64.	Calvin Chandler, 1864-5-8-9.
Obadiah Pease, 1811 to 19.	David Ware, 1846.	L. W. F. Mark, 1866.
Ebenezer Bill, Jr., 1820-1-2-41.	Sammel Isham, Jr., 1847.	Aaron D. Hammond, 1867-72 to 76, 1879.
Amherst Hayward, 1823 to 28-49.	Josiah Hendee, 1848.	John S. Collins, 1871.
Israel B. Loveland, 1829-39.	William Mark, elected 1850, but did not serve.	Allen Hayward, 1877-8.
Allen Butler, 1830-1-50.

In 1836-8, the town voted to dispense with the office of Treasurer, but Calvin May acted by appointment of the Selectmen. The first salary paid the Treasurer was three dollars, in 1809. Since then it has risen to 15 dollars at the present time.

At a town meeting for Boyle in March, 1762, the Proprietors chose for Selectmen, John Sterling, Josiah Kilburn, and Joseph Spencer ; and in September following, Joseph "Spensor," Joseph Mack, and Seth Haize. (Page 18.) The following list prior to 1789, has been made up from State documents : —

Ebenezer Dewey, [Sen.] 1773.	Silvanus Hayward, 1795-8, 1803.	Amherst Hayward, 1843.
Ebenezer Dewey Jr., 1776-7.	John Hammond, 1798, 1802-5-10, -1-6-9-20 to '23-6-7-9.	Otis G. Hammond, 1844.
Pelataiah Pease, 1773-5-6.	William Mark, 1802-5-7-9-12.	Stephen Foster, Jr., 1844.

It appears from old Deeds conveying Land sold for taxes, that Levi Bliss was Collector in 1781-2. In 1793, is the following record : —

Voted to Release Cap^t Holdridge from paying the Extent that Come a gainst the town on his Collection of taxes twenty tow pounds uppon Condition of his procuring a Note against Col Bruer of twenty tow pounds.

Whatever else this vote may mean, it plainly implies that Capt. Holdridge was Collector at some time previous. The same year, Thomas Dart was chosen "Constabel and Colector of taxes," for which he was paid $3.00. These two offices were for a long time held by the same person. The office of Constable was evidently regarded desirable in a pecuniary point of view. For some years the two offices were put up together to the lowest bidder. In 1798, they were struck off to Jesse Dart for Eleven Shillings. For three years previous to 1809, these offices were held by William Baxter, apparently without pay. In 1809, "the collector birth" (evidently including the office of constable,) was put up to the highest bidder, and William Baxter paid the town $3.00 for the office. The same course was pursned with one exception, for six years after. Since 1815, the Collector has been either chosen by the town, or, more usually, appointed by the Selectmen. Practically, however, the office has been given to the lowest bidder, if a suitable person. In 1817, Aaron Day having been chosen Collector, it was voted to give him "the constable's birth" for his services. The office of constable seems to have separated from that of collector about this time, and to have been still given to the highest bidder, as in 1825 we find Jonathan Pease paid $1.05 for "the privilege of being Constable." In later years the pay for collecting gradually increased till it reached $50 in war time. At the present, it is about $25.

The following list, before 1789, is made from old deeds and State documents. The first three are not absolutely certain : —

Ebenezer Kilburn ? 1775.
Obadiah Wilcox ? 1776.

Under date, Sept. 21, 1803, in an account of "A rate made For the Town of Gilsom" is an item of $44.00 "to purchase Weights and measures." At the next annual meeting, it was "Voted that the Seal in the weights and measures be G^e —" In 1805, it was "Voted to allow Sam^l. Bill twenty two Shilling for procuring necessaries for the weights and mesures."

The following list of those holding the office of Sealer shows a number of vacancies. Probably in such cases the old officer acted without formal appointment.

Roger Dart, 1789 to 92.
Robert Lane Hurd, 1794.
Samuel Bill, Jr., 1798, 1804.

The old office of Tithing-man, which was considered important and honorable in the early times, gradually fell into disuse, and has not been filled here, since 1831. Doubtless, interesting items might have been preserved, here as elsewhere, concerning adventures in keeping rude boys quiet in meeting, and arresting Sabbath travelers. None such have, however, been brought to my attention. It will be noticed that three were chosen for 1814, one more than had been customary. It was voted, the same year, "to enforce the sabbath act." Isaac Loveland is the only one of the following list of "Tything Men" in Gilsun, who is now living.

David Blish, 1789,-1806,-14,	Silvanus Hayward, 1794,-6,	Ziba Ware, 1803.	Daniel Converse, 1819.

The office of "Hog-reeve" was long continued as a source of amusement, by appointing all who had been married during the year. This practice was kept up till 1843, almost every man in town having held it, in his turn. That this office was formerly no sinecure is probable from votes passed in 1791, "that Hogs shall not Run at large Upon the Commons," — and again, as late as 1824, "that no swine be allowed to run in any of the Highways of the town." No restriction other than that of State law, by which cattle doing damage could be driven to pound, seems to have been laid upon any animals but swine, till 1830, when it was voted that "no swine or neat stock shall run at large in the highways." In 1833, a Committee consisting of Charles Cummings, George W. Hammond and Aaron Day was appointed to draft by-laws for the town, and reported that

No horse kind mules jacks neat cattle sheep or Swine Shall be permitted to run at large in any street highway or common or in any public place in the town.

The penalty annexed was one dollar for each offense. This by-law was renewed year by year for about ten years, when it gradually fell into disuse. In 1844, "voted that horses shall not run at large." In 1852, the old by-law was revived, and no action has since been taken.

That ancient institution of all New England towns, the Pound, is worthy of a place in our history. The first record is March 8, 1791, Chose Lieut. Daniel Wright pound Keeper and his Barn and Barn Yard For A Pound.

May 17, 1794, "Voted to Build around three Rods Squair Joining the highway about fifteen Rods North of Lev^t Wrights Barn Majah Bill Lev^t Hurd Capt Kilburn James Ballard Be a Committee to See that the pound is Built Voted to Build a wall Round the pound Six feet high with a timber on the top hewd Eight inches Square Voted to Build the pound the first week in june"

From the urgency of these votes, and the substantial fence deemed necessary, it seems probable they had a rather unruly breed of cattle. In 1814, it was "Voted that Jonathan Pease's barn-yard shall be used as a pound." Nothing further appears, not even the choice of a Pound Keeper, till 14 years later, when Aaron Day's barn-yard was voted for the same purpose. In 1830, it was moved to Stephen Day's barn-yard. In 1833, it went back to Aaron Day's barn-yard. In 1837, $19 was raised, and the Selectmen were instructed to buy land and build a Pound. Jacob Polley sold land to the town for a pound for $2.00, Jan. 1, 1838. The first pound was near Edouard Loïselle's residence. This second pound was near Jacob Polley's, just south of the river near the Hammond Hollow Bridge, where the walls are still standing. In 1845 and 1846, articles to take measures in regard to the Pound were ignominiously dismissed. Though it will be seen the office of Pound Keeper was kept filled for many years, yet it became a sinecure, and in 1875, after several had declined, it was voted to defer the choice of a Keeper till a Pound was built. Immediately following which action, it was voted to dismiss an article to build or repair. So ends the Pound. Pound Keepers have been as follows:—

Daniel Wright, 1791, 4-5.	Aaron Day, 1833, 5-6.	Enos Cross, 1856, 65-9.	Sidney C. Gates, 1868.
Turner White, 1797, 8-9.	Jacob Polley, 1838 to 45-7,	Varnum Polley, 1861-4.	George N. Hayward, 1871.
Jonathan Pease, 1814.	-50 to 54, 8-60, 2-3, 7.	Jacob Polley, Jr., 1866, 70,	Charles W. Bingham, 1874.
Stephen Day, 1828, 30.	Benjamin Foster, 1855, 7.	-2, 3.

REPRESENTATIVES.

The first evidence of any representation of Gilsum or Surry in the Legislature, is in the list of members of the "Fourth Provincial Congress," or "Convention of Deputies," which met at Exeter, May 17, 1775. "Keen & Surry" are classed together, and sent "Tim^{thy} Ellis" as their Delegate. Alstead and Marlow sent letters pledging their support to the acts of said "Congress," but pleading their poverty as an excuse for not sending Delegates. Probably Gilsum neglected to send for the same reason.

In November of the same year the Provincial Congress directed that one hundred freeholders should entitle a town to a Representative, and that towns having a less number should "couple with one or more other Towns or Parishes until they make up the number of such Freeholders." The Congress also voted "That every Legal Inhabitant Paying Taxes shall be a voter." * To be eligible to the office of Representative a man must be worth £200 in "Real Estate in this Colony."

The roll of the Fifth Provincial Congress of December, 1775, has the name of Capt. Robert Pollock of Camden as the Representative from Packersfield, [Nelson,] Limerick. [Stoddard,] Cambden, [Washington,] and Gilsum. At the next Congress in March, 1776, these towns neglected to send, probably on account of the expense, as each district sending a Representative was responsible for his pay. At the adjourned session, however, in the June following, "Mr. Joseph Rounseval of Cambden" was their Delegate. His pay for 85 miles travel and 9 days attendance was £4. 2s. 4d. He was re-elected the following year, also in 1780 and 1781. In 1778-9, and 1780 Dr. Nath'l Breed of Packersfield was the Representative.

Nov. 24, 1781, the "General Assembly" passed a "Vote for two precepts for Representatives to issue to the district of Stoddard, Washington, Packersfield & Gilsum, which heretofore have sent but one." Gilsum joined with Packersfield and sent Jonathan Adams for 1781-2.

In March, 1784, Surry voted to join with Gilsum in sending a Representative to the General Court, and chose Obadiah Willcox and Lemuel Holmes to go to Gilsum and consult them on the matter. Gilsum doubtless concurred, as we find in the Surry record that Lemuel Holmes was chosen Representative "with Gilsum," in 1784 and 1786. In 1788 Jonathan Read was sent.

From 1789 to 1793, Gilsum was joined with Surry and Sullivan, and elected the following Representatives:—

Lemuel Holmes of Surry, 1789 to 1792.

Roswell Hubbard of Sullivan, 1793.

For the next thirty years, Gilsum and Surry were classed together. Meetings for the choice of Representative were held alternately in each town, the person elected usually belonging to the town where the meeting was held, and the Moderator to the other. On this plan the following were the Representatives:—

David Blish, 1795-7, 1801,	Zadok Hurd, 1799.	Samuel Hills, 1810, 2, 4-6.	Sylvester Smith, 1820, 2-4.
-3, -13, -15.	Samuel Whitney, 1805-7,	Jonathan Pease, 1817.	Luther Whitney, 1825.
John McCurdy, 1794.	-11.	Elijah Fuller, 1818.	Francis Holbrook, 1826.
Jonathan Robinson, 1796,	Asa Willcox, 1806-8.	John Hammond, 1819, -21,
-8, 1800, 2-4.	Robert Lane Hurd, 1809.	-3.

* This is a very early precedent for Woman Suffrage. Whether any women availed themselves of the right thus granted is not known. Probably not.

On the day of the Presidential election, 1824, Gilsum "Voted to petition to the General Court for the privilege of sending a representative to the General Court unconnected with Surry and Chose John Hammond to attend to the business." The next Legislature granted the petition, and Gilsum has been entitled to one Representative since. The persons chosen to that office have been as follows : —

Luther Whitney, 1827.	Eliphalet K. Webster, 1843.	Ebenezer Jones, 1855.	Hervey E. Rawson, 1865,-6.
Aaron Day, 1828,-9,-31.	-4.	Francis A. Howard, 1858.	Aaron D. Hammond, 1868,
Josiah Hammond, 1830.	Franklin W. Day, 1845,-6.	Ezra Webster, 1859,-60.	-9.
Jehiel Day, 1832,-4.	John Hammond, 1847,-8.	Daniel W. Bill, 1861,-2.	Allen Hayward, 1870,-1.
Allen Butler, 1833,-5.	Samuel Isham, Jr., 1849,	-74,-6.	John S. Collins, 1872,-3.
John Horton, 1836,-7.	-50,-6,-7.	Joseph M. Chapin, 1863,	William L. Isham, 1875,-7.
David Bill, 1838,-9,-41.	Amasa May, 1851,-2.	-4,-7.	John J. Isham, 1878.
David M. Smith, 1840.	David Ware, 1853.
William Kingsbury, 1842.	John Livermore, 1854.

Under the amended Constitution of 1876, Gilsum is classed with Sullivan, and in November, 1878, elected Francis C. Minor, Representative for two years.

Gilsum was not represented in the First Constitutional Convention of 1778-83. In 1788, Gilsum and Surry sent Jonathan Smith, and in 1791, Lemuel Holmes. In the Convention of 1850, Gilsum was represented by George W. Hammond, and in 1876, by Daniel W. Bill.

The following list shows who have been appointed to the office of Justice of Peace in Gilsum : —

David Blish, 1790-1815.	David M. Smith, 1840-45.	George W. Newman, 1856-61.

CHAPTER XVII.

POLITICAL PARTIES.

AFTER the establishment of our general government, there was at first but little political excitement. The people were substantially agreed. This is plainly seen in the record of Gilsum. The first division into parties was under the names of Federalists and Republicans. But the vote of Gilsum for Governor, or President, as he was at first called, and for Representative to Congress, was unanimous on the Federalist side for the first twelve years after the adoption of the Constitution in 1789. The apparent exception in 1796, was evidently not political, but a personal dislike to Gov. Gilman. This is seen from the vote for Congressmen, the same year, which was unanimously Federalist. The first Democratic, or rather, as then called, Republican votes ever cast in Gilsum, were seven for John Langdon, in 1802. The Federalists retained their majority till 1806, when Gov. Langdon had 32 majority over Gov. Gilman. In the Congressional vote, however, the Republican majority was only four. It is plain that at this period the Governor vote fails to show the real political bias of the town. The vote for Representatives to Congress is the more correct test. In 1808, the Federalists had 15 majority in the Congressional vote, and 10 for President. They retained a strong majority for the next 11 years. The Presidential vote in 1820 and 1824 was unanimous for the Republican electors. An aggregate vote of only about half the voters, shows it to have been a period of little partisan interest. Their opposition to the war had killed the Federal party, and there was no clear division into parties, after the war, till Jackson's last term. About this time, the division was into Adams men, and Jackson men. In 1824, the Adams men had a plurality for Governor and continued to hold the vote of the town till 1827, when the Jackson men prevailed by a large majority, and in the Presidential election of 1828, Jackson had 63 votes against 51 for Adams. Since Jackson's time, Gilsum has had a strong Democratic majority with the exception of two elections. In 1855, the "Know Nothings" carried the Governor vote by seven majority, and the Congressional vote by 23 majority. In 1858, the Republican party carried the Governor vote by 10 majority. The largest Democratic vote ever cast in Gilsum was in 1872, 113 for Gov. Weston, giving him 51 majority. Their majority has been sometimes greater, but they have never cast so many votes in any other election. The largest aggregate vote ever cast in Gilsum was 176 in 1875.

Gilsum has been conservative rather than radical in all its political tendencies. This may be seen from the votes from time to time on revising the Constitution. With the exception of three years, 1834-42-50, these votes have been strongly against revision, sometimes unanimous. Hence, third party movements have usually met with little success in Gilsum. There has been occasionally a slight split from local causes, but generally parties have voted solid for the "regular" candidates. In 1869, one "Labor Reform" vote was cast by Charles W. Bingham, and in the two succeeding years the same party received four votes. Though there have been a good number of strict Teetotalers and Prohibitionists here, they have not generally thought it advisable to throw away their votes on the third party ticket. In 1873, however, there were 10 votes for the "Prohibition" candidate for Governor, and two in 1874. In the Fall election of 1878, the "Greenbackers" cast seven votes. The "Know Nothings" can hardly be called a third party, as they sprung up at once fully grown, carrying the town, as they did the State, by a sudden and irresistible impulse. But as Jonah's gourd withered at the rising sun, so this party melted away under the heat of the more vital issues of the Anti-slavery contest. The Anti-slavery record of Gilsum seems to be of sufficient importance to demand a separate chapter.

The following Tables give a synopsis of the votes for Governor, members of Congress, and Presidential Electors from 1789 to 1878. It is in some cases difficult to classify the vote exactly by party names, but it has been done as accurately as seemed possible :—

CHAPTER XVIII.

ANTI-SLAVERY.

THE first record of The Gilsum Anti-slavery Society is as follows :—

Gilsum June 6, 1838 — Pursuant to previous notice the Inhabitants of Gilsum & vicinity met at the meeting house in the Village, at which time an address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Brewster after which the Committee, [consisting of David Brigham, David M. Smith, and A. W. Kingsbury,] appointed at a previous meeting, to draft a Constitution to be presented at this meeting — reported the following preamble & Constitution which was adopted without amendment —

The Preamble quotes from the Declaration of Independence, showing how inconsistent therewith is the system of human slavery. The 3d Article of the Constitution is as follows :—

The objects of this Society shall be to obtain & diffuse intelligence on the subject of American Slavery, by encouraging free discussion, the circulation of publications on the subject, and in every way to promote & secure the object desired viz the speedy termination of Slavery in “boasted free America.”

The annual meeting was to be on the 4th of July of each year. At the organization, sixteen men and twenty-eight women became members. Thirty-eight afterwards joined making in all just forty-one of each sex. The names, in the order of signing, were the following :—

Lyman Gerould.	David Convers.	John Q. A. Ware.	William Hayward.

To those acquainted with Gilsun, it will be noticeable that nearly all the men were members of the Whig party, and that some of them became in later times bitter opponents of the Republican party which most of them joined.

The first President of the Society was William Hayward, who was one of the earliest and most radical of anti-slavery men, taking and circulating Garrison's "Liberator," and entering heartily into his extremest views. He soon, however, left Gilsun, so that his name is not found among the first voters of the Liberty party in this town. David Brigham was the first Secretary, and retained the office four years. His Report for the first year, presented July 4, 1839, is as follows :—

The Society during the past year have done but little — occasional meetings have been held — the concert of Prayer for the Slave has been sustained in part — 5 vols belong to the Library — being purchased by individuals belonging to the Society — the Society like many others among us seem to lose sight of the great object in view — & while we have a name to live we are dead —

When O! when will the professed friends of the poor Slave put forth their efforts and influence in union & tell their southern brethren in accents of kindness & the spirit of the Gospel to prepare the way of the Lord by breaking every Yoke & let the oppressed go free, by undoing the heavy burdens that are borne by the Slave & to fulfil the grand precept of doing unto others as we would that they should do unto us

In behalf of the Society

D. Brigham Sec

At the same meeting an Address was delivered by Rev. Moses Grosvenor of Marlboro'. The second President was A. W. Kingsbury. In 1840, A. P. Hemenway was chosen President, and an address was delivered in Dort's Hall by Rev. Mr. Brewster. No records are found of 1841. July 4, 1842, an address was delivered in the Meeting House, by Rev. James Tisdale. Stephen Foster was chosen President, and A. P. Hemenway, Secretary. The next year, John Q. A. Ware was elected President, and Rev. James Tisdale, Secretary, which office he held as long as the Society continued its existence. In November, an anti-slavery lecture was given by Lunsford Lane, an escaped slave. In 1844, Samuel Woodward became President, and a Report was presented, no copy of which is preserved. After the transaction of the annual business, "Considerable discussion followed particularly on the duty of the members in respect to voting for Slaveholders." In 1845, the same officers were continued, and it was voted to send the Secretary's Report to the "Granite Freeman," published at Concord, and it accordingly appeared in the number for July 24, of that year. In 1846, the annual meeting was adjourned from time to time, for lack of a quorum, until Oct. 21, which was the last meeting of the Society. The Secretary's Report states that "on Sabbath Evening Sept. 21, a Sermon was delivered on the subject of Anti-slavery by the Sec. from Pro. 31: 8 & 9, attended by a goodly number of persons." After congratulating the Society on the political changes in the State, by which John P. Hale was elected to the U. S. Senate, the Report continues :—

We have strong confidence that . . . he will show himself an able and unflinching advocate for the principles of liberty, the unyielding friend of the slave.

No officers were chosen, and the following entry closes the record :—

The meeting was adjourned till such time as some person could be provided to deliver a Lecture on the subject of Anti Slavery, of which due notice should be given, and after which the Society should be called to order, when such business as might come before the Society should be transacted.

Since then, the eyes of the Society have "failed with longing," while patiently waiting the advent of the Lecturer aforesaid, — but hitherto non est inventus.

The Anti-slavery record of Gilsum is, on a small scale, very much like that of the State and country. Beginning with the strong convictions of a few individuals who could neither be persuaded nor frightened into silence, it gradually extended its influence, till it merged into the powerful Republican party. Doubtless the Anti-slavery Society did something to awaken public interest and stimulate thought upon this subject, but far more effective was the private influence of individuals in conversation, and the circulation of documents from hand to hand. While others were true and earnest workers in the cause, yet no one familiar with the circumstances, can deem it invidious to name A. W. Kingsbury, as one of its earliest and most efficient advocates. At the very beginning, he took the papers that sided against Slavery, and his shop became a nucleus out of which quietly but persistently radiated influences that drew in one after another to the Anti-slavery movement. There the "Independent Democrat" and other radical documents were always found, and the walls were adorned with hand-bills and pithy sayings in reference to the Slavery question. Quietly he turned the thoughts of those who came on business or for loafing, to the great evil of Slavery. Firm to his own convictions of duty, however his best friends might differ, and meekly quiet under violent reproaches and abusive epithets of enemies to the cause, he accomplished far more than many a blatant "apostle of freedom."

The first Anti-slavery vote in Gilsum was in 1841, when the "Liberty Party" nominee for Governor received four votes. They are known to have been cast by A. W. Kingsbury, Stephen Foster, Jr., Luther White, and Solon W. Eaton. In justice to others, it should be here observed that there were many more, as heartily and conscientiously opposed to Slavery, and as decided and outspoken in their opposition as these, whose judgment led them still to act within the old party lines, rather than to fall into a third party movement. But when the Whig party perished through its opposition to the Mexican War, and the Know Nothing movement proved ephemeral; while a few of the Whigs joined their old Democratic foes, a large majority of them were swept into the new Republican party. The Know Nothing organization also became a bridge, over which many dissatisfied Democrats passed into the Republican ranks. The rapid growth of the Anti-slavery party in Gilsum may be seen by inspecting the Table at the close of the preceding Chapter. Springing suddenly from four to sixteen in the second year, it rose to 33 in 1854, and the largest vote ever cast by the Republican party in this town was the first, being 84 for the Presidential Electors in 1856. Anti-slavery men in Gilsum, as elsewhere, have always relied on the power of voting as the best means to accomplish their purpose, saying to their opponents, in the words of one of their own poets: —

"We have a weapon firmer set
And better than the bayonet, —
A weapon that comes down as still
As snowflakes fall upon the sod,
But executes a freeman's will
As lightning does the will of God,
And from its force nor bars nor locks
Can shield you: — 'tis the BALLOT BOX."

CHAPTER XIX.

TEMPERANCE.

“War hath slain his thousands, and Rum his ten thousands.”

THE Temperance cause everywhere runs back like the earth to a time “without form and void,” when “darkness was upon the face of the deep.” In public and private, alone and in social gatherings, spirit was used freely, and though to get drunk was a reproach, yet to drink freely was not esteemed of even doubtful propriety. Everybody drank. No time or place was considered inappropriate for the introduction of the social glass.

Religions as well as secular gatherings were always provided for, by laying in a store of New England rum. Ordinations, dedications, councils, weddings, births, and funerals were seasons of great hilarity in the consumption of large quantities of spirit and tobacco. Town meetings, and especially “trainings” and “raisings” carried the indulgence to a still greater extent. The tavern stood “hard by the synagogue,” where at “noon-time” on Sabbath days, both minister and people might repair, not only to seek external relief from the bitter cold of the fireless sanctuary, but internal warmth by sips of hot toddy. Every tavern, and almost every store sold liquor freely. To sell by the glass, it was necessary to have a license. Since 1793, the Selectmen of Gilsu^m have granted 99 unrestricted licenses to retail spirituous liquors, and seven to sell only for chemical, mechanical and medicinal purposes. These seven were appointed under the law for a Town Agency. One license, in 1843, was given to the tavern keeper “provided he shall not sell nor allow to be sold any spirituous or intoxicating liquors to any person belonging to the town.” Another was given the same year to the principal trader in town, “till he shall have disposed of his stock of liquors now on hand which time shall not extend beyond the 20th of Sept. next.” These two licenses were given five days before town meeting by two of the Selectmen privately, knowing that the temperance movement was likely to bring into office those who would refuse to license at all. The trader, who had thus secured his license for six months, was then active at town meeting in the effort to elect a Temperance Board of Selectmen, thus craftily securing the field to himself. The 99 licenses were given to forty different persons, including some of those who afterwards became foremost in the Temperance cause. Twenty-five of these licenses were for certain public occasions, running only from one to three days. The last unrestricted license on record was in 1842.

The results on such public occasions as “trainings,” and “raisings,” when extra licenses were needed to supply the thirsty crowds, were what first startled people into a sense of their peril, and to perceive the necessity of a change. The accidental death of one man as he returned from “training,” led some to resolve never to expose themselves to a like fate. The death also at the raising of “the plastered house,” not through drunkenness, but because all were unduly excited and rendered careless by the use of spirit, roused others to take a stand against the use of intoxicating liquors at “raisings.”

The first raising in Gilsu^m without rum was of the woodshed and ell that was built towards the street at the west end of Amherst Hayward’s house in 1827. Those who aided him were Aaron Day, Elisha S. Fish, Moses Fish, Eleazer Wilcox, and Israel B. Loveland. Some other help he hired, but these five were the only men in town, who were then willing to assist a neighbor to raise a building without liquor. A crowd of rum-lovers gathered on the opposite side of the street, during the raising, and greeted the workmen with hooting and jeers. This building is now the house owned by Harriet Pierce, and occupied by the widow Stevens, on the south side of Sullivan Street, a little beyond "the dug-way."

At this time, the first extensive Temperance movement had just got well started. Very few, however, had yet embraced the doctrine of Total Abstinence as now understood. It was thought that to abstain from distilled liquors would be sufficient, and that wine, beer, and cider might be freely used without injury. A curious illustration of this was given in Gilsum, at a Fourth of July celebration in 1834, when wine was provided expressly for the "Temperance men," and rum for the rest.

The first Temperance Society in Gilsum was organized about 1834, but its records are lost, and its origin and history mostly unknown. It professed Total Abstinence from distilled liquors only. This Society held a Temperance celebration July 4, 1835, with an address by a son of "Squire Hatch" of Alstead. The pledge was circulated that year with considerable success, and frequent meetings were held in different parts of the town. One exercise at these meetings was the reading of articles both original and selected. Washington's birth-day 1836, was celebrated in the evening with a Temperance address by Barton Skinner of Westmoreland. At the annual meeting, on the second of May following, an address was delivered by Elder Brewster of the Methodist Church. This Society did not confine itself to meetings and talk, but in 1837, circulated a petition to the Legislature, to have "the License laws abolished or so amended as not to promote intemperance." At the annual town meeting in 1838, they got an article into the warrant to instruct the Selectmen not to give licenses, but failed to carry the vote. At a special meeting in May, however, they succeeded. At the next annual town meeting in 1839, both parties made active exertions to carry the day. The vote was taken by each man's answering Yes or No, as his name was called from the check-list. The rum party prevailed by a very small majority, obtained in part, at least, through fraud, as some were known to have answered to other names than their own. On Fast Day, Ap. 12, 1838, and two or three times subsequently, Temperance addresses were delivered by a Rev. Mr. Morgan of the Methodist Church. Under the auspices of this Society, also, the well-known Dr. Charles Jewett gave several lectures illustrating the effects of drinking, upon the human stomach. These lectures were in the Congregational Meeting House and were largely attended. The exact date cannot be given, but it is known to have been before 1840. Feb. 25, 1840, an address was delivered before this Society by Elder Rollins. The meeting was held in F. W. Day's Hall, and the address was preceded by some remarks from Lemuel Bingham, who probably presided on the occasion. This Society had accomplished much in awakening public interest, and instructing people in regard to the real meaning and value of the Temperance pledge. It performed the office of a forerunner, preparing the way for

THE WASHINGTONIAN MOVEMENT.

This originated in a grog-shop at Baltimore, Md., Ap. 5, 1840; when six drunkards moved by some sudden impulse, drew up and signed a Total Abstinence Pledge. Their influence extended rapidly through the large cities, and thence to the smaller towns. The Gilsum Washington Temperance Society was organized about the first of November, 1840. The pledge is as follows:—

We the undersigned do agree that we will not use intoxicating liquors, nor traffic in them as a beverage. That we will not provide them as an article of entertainment, nor for persons in our employment, and that in all suitable ways we will discountenance their use in the community. And particularly will we use our individual exertions in all suitable ways to reclaim the intemperate.

This pledge was understood to include fermented as well as distilled liquors. It is much to be regretted that the first volume of records, containing the doings of six years, is missing. Among the most active in organizing this Society were Dr. George W. Hammond and his brother Otis G. Hammond. The former by his pen, and by his poetical talent, and both by frequent lectures, accomplished much for Temperance, in Gilsun and the neighboring towns. In October, 1843, the Temperance Society appointed a committee in each School District "to collect statistics in regard to the condition of every person in town as to the practice or habit of drinking intoxicating liquor." They reported as follows:—

Whole No. of inhabitants in town	645 *
Pledged to Total Abstinence	309
Others not known to drink intoxicating liquor	107
Moderate Drinkers	71
Frequent Drinkers	29
Drunkards	16

This report leaves over a hundred not classed—probably children. They also reported forty-eight farms out of eighty-two, "carried on the past season without the use of strong drink." Nov. 28, a temperance convention of the towns of Gilsun, Sullivan and Stoddard was held in this place, and was largely attended. Among the speakers were Dr. Hammond, who exhibited and explained Dr. Sewall's celebrated plates of the drunkard's stomach, John Prentiss, William Lamson and Benaiah Cooke from Keene. At the beginning of the year it was stated that "within the last year and a half 16 heads of families have risen up from a life of drunkenness and wo to a life of soberness—renewed health and happiness." Most of these maintained a temperate life ever after.

In the Annals for 1844, (Chap. 22,) we find the following:—

An effort was made . . . by a few persons who are opposed to the Temperance cause to bring together from this town & all the towns adjoining all the friends of true liberty—meaning as was understood all who wish to have liberty to sell & drink Spirituous liquors without any restraint.—It was said they would celebrate the day in the true Spirit of '76. The day was very fair & beautiful. The greatest number that could be induced to join at any time in the day was about 15—showing decidedly that no person of intelligence who wishes to maintain a respectable standing among his neighbors—will at this age of light & reformation on the subject of drinking strong liquors be willing to be seen in the ranks of rum drinkers on public occasions.

The names of the leaders in this rum celebration are well remembered, but it seems best to let them remain unrecorded.

Rev. S. S. Dudley of the Methodist Church and Rev. James Tisdale of the Congregational Church were among the most efficient laborers in the Temperance cause. At the outset, the pledge was circulated from house to house, and offered to every person in town. The second volume of records begins with the sixth annual meeting, Nov. 4, 1846. K. D. Webster was chosen President, and David S. Ware, Secretary. At that time, there were between four and five hundred names on the books, but the Directors estimated the real number of resident members "about 260," and recommended that the pledge be circulated "anew to every person in Town." The work of the Society can be judged of somewhat by the annual report. It is stated that twenty-one meetings were held, and thirty-one persons signed the pledge.

From out of town we have had the past year three Lectures, two sermons, four addresses, and one recitation. From persons in town, three Lectures, four manuscript papers, and one sermon, and two printed sermons have been read, while many of the members have taken part in the discussions.

One prosecution for unlawful sale is reported, which was settled before coming to trial, by the defendant's paying costs, and pledging himself not to sell in future. The Directors also report that so far as known, no person in town was then in the habit of selling liquor. At the annual meeting in November, 1847, twenty-three meetings were reported, at six of which a manuscript paper called the "Gilsun Temperance Banner" was read. Lectures were given by Dr. Charles Jewett, T. D. Bonner, Rev. Mr. Cresset of Alstead, George C. Hubbard then of Sullivan, and a sermon by Rev. Mr. Folsom of Marlow. Levi Leland, called "the honest Quaker," delivered five addresses in different parts of the town. Some clandestine sale is reported and the Society exhorted to take measures for its suppression. Seventy-five of the "Concord Temperance Banner" were taken in town that year. In accordance with a vote to circulate the pledge, the town was canvassed for that purpose except School districts Nos. 5 and 7, the persons appointed for those districts having neglected their duty. The Society numbered at that time 303. The report complains of too many "non-working members," "who are not disposed to attend our meetings unless some distinguished lecturer is to be present, or something special to be done." Hartley Thurston was chosen President and the Secretary re-elected. At the next March meeting, 1848, the town voted 80 to 31 not to have liquor sold in town. At the next annual meeting of the Society, November, 1848, the President was re-elected, and Roswell W. Silsby chosen Secretary. The Directors reported twenty-three meetings, four manuscript papers, and ten lectures, five from townsmen and five from abroad. One of these five was by Daniel Allen, known as "The Norfolk Farmer." Number of members 369. They announce that the sale has been almost entirely suppressed.

At the opening of the Village Hotel the last relic of bygone days disappeared and the Town of Gilsun may in this respect be called a Temperance Town. Thus after a long and severe struggle has the enemy been driven from his strong holds and one great object for which you have been struggling has been attained.

In conclusion we would say that the success that has attended our efforts during the seven years in which the Society has existed is such as leaves no doubt that we must soon completely succeed. The bitter opposition that characterized our opponent during the early stages of the Society has been almost entirely abandoned, and no candid man denies the justness of our cause.

Though the sanguine hopes here expressed were not fully realized, yet a victory was then won which will never cease to be felt in Gilsun. The next year nineteen meetings were held. There was one discussion by persons from abroad, and five lectures and addresses. From this point there is a break of two years in the record. The Society continued its organization, but was probably rather inactive.

The eleventh annual meeting was held Nov. 5, 1851, when Luther W. Mark was re-elected President, and Davis H. Wilson was chosen Secretary. The Maine Law had then just begun its course and caused a general revival among Temperance organizations. The pledge was again circulated, and 263 names reported. During the winter, meetings were held in every School House except in No. 5, the subject at each time being the Maine Law. This was a new idea then, and was discussed in all its bearings, by the principal men of the town. Two Lectures were delivered this winter, — one of which was on this same Maine Law. So far as the records show, only two meetings were subsequently held, which were the annual meetings in 1852 and 1853. In 1852, Andrew J. Howard was chosen President, and the Secretary was re-elected. In 1853, Amherst Hayward was chosen President, and Claudius B. Hayward, Secretary. Those who remember this Society in its most flourishing state, and even those who read its records must feel that it accomplished more for the cause of Temperance than all other means that have been used in Gilsun. One of its most efficient instrumentalities was in the singing conducted by Artemas P. Hemenway, who had a fine clear voice, and was an enthusiastic Temperance worker. Some of his most popular songs were written by Dr. Hammond. One of our former townsmen writes as follows : —

Those touching little songs so sweetly rendered by Artemas P. Hemenway, so plainly enunciated that every person in any part of the assemblage could perfectly understand every word, were a power in themselves. What Sankey's Songs are to Moody's Sermons, Hemenway's songs were to the able and faithful speakers of that philanthropic movement. Dr. Hammond's poetical talent and Hemenway's fine singing, and the sound reasoning of Hammond and Woodward and others did perhaps as much or more than the lecturers from abroad to accomplish the great good.

Soon after the formation of this Society, a Martha Washington Temperance Society was organized. Nothing is now known of its officers or members. It was short-lived and did very little while it lasted.

The immediate cause of the disbanding of the Washingtonians was the organization of a Division of the SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

"Upper Ashuelot Division No. 35, Sons of Temperance," was organized Sept. 4, 1851. The Charter members were Harvey C. Wood, N. O. Hayward, Roswell W. Silsby, Stephen L. Parker, John B. Otis, Hartley Thurston, Solomon Mack, Jr., John C. Guillow, Alexander O. Brown, and Calvin May, Jr., of whom all except Solomon Mack were then initiated for the first time. Calvin May, Jr., was elected Worthy Patriarch, and N. O. Hayward, Recording Scribe. The regular meetings were on Saturday evening, and a new board of officers was chosen every quarter. During the first years, the Division was well disciplined and prosperous. More than 100 male members were added, and nearly as many female visiting members. The last board of working officers was elected March 28, 1856, Amasa May being Worthy Patriarch, and Daniel Smith, Recording Scribe. After May of the same year no meetings were held till, by a special call of the Steward, the Division assembled Feb. 28, 1857. They adjourned till March 7, when they elected officers, Porter Cowce being chosen W. P. and Addison G. Gates R. S. The last meeting of the Division was one week later, and was mainly taken up by a settlement of their finances. Their furniture and other property was scattered, the Charter being left in the hands of N. O. Hayward.

The Division held several Festivals and Celebrations, the most notable of which was a formal Dedication of the Hall, Feb. 25, 1852, and a Celebration Sept. 21, of the same year. A large center cake used on the latter occasion was sold to N. O. Hayward for $2.25. Their appetites however growing urgent, it was bought back, and cut and divided to all the members present. The frosting on the top of the cake was sold to Josiah Guillow for twenty-one cents, and the sugar birds to Father Hemenway for twenty cents. They also held a Fair at the Methodist Meeting House, February, 1856, which was their last public demonstration.

This Division included a large part of the most active and influential citizens, and during the first years of its existence exerted a powerful influence for good. Many public meetings were held. Addresses were given by the clergymen and other townsmen, with occasional lecturers from abroad. Copies of the Maine Law were circulated, with petitions to the Legislature for a similar law in New Hampshire. Much was done to suppress the liquor traffic. Committees were appointed to procure evidence and prosecute the liquor dealers in Gilsun and Surry. Had it been purely a Gilsun society, with no "entangling alliances" without, there appears no good reason why it might not be living to-day, and still doing manly work for the cause. But being organically united to a State body at Concord, it became infected with the virus from that political cess-pool which insinuated its filth into every Division. It became evident that political aspirants had gained control of the order, and were running it to get themselves into office. Managed for political ends instead of moral reform, when a more mighty political power appeared in the Know Nothing order, it gobbled up the Division almost entire.

THE GILSUM YOUNG PEOPLE'S TEMPERANCE SOCIETY

was formed in 1866, through the earnest and persistent efforts of Elder Hemenway. It was formally organized Oct. 14, by adopting a Constitution, and choosing officers. George K. Nichols was elected President, and Theron Hayward, Secretary. The first volume of records has on its title page the following inscription : —

Presented to the Gilsum Young Peoples Temperance Society by Elder Hemenway he being in the 87th year of his age.

The pledge of the Society is as follows : —

We agree that we will neither buy or sell or use as a beverage any intoxicating drinks neither will we chew, smoke or snuff Tobacco or use profane language.

It began with fifteen members, but increased so rapidly, that in about one year and a half, there were 144 members. Meetings were held about once in two weeks through the year. These meetings were conducted with discussions, readings, recitations, and some manuscript papers, called "The Temperance Banner," with rarely a lecture from abroad. On the 4th of July, 1870, a Temperance Convention was held, music being furnished by the Acworth band, and an address by Rev. Mr. Babcock of Nashua.

The last regular meeting of the Society was Ap. 14, 1875, when Dan A. Hayward was President, and Mary E. Hayward, Secretary. Appointments were made for the next meeting, but a small-pox scare prevented their assembling, and the organization was not revived. A special meeting was called May 22, 1876, and it was unanimously voted to give the funds and other property of this Society to the Gilsum Reform Club.

The amount of good accomplished by this Society was very great. An extensive interest was manifest in well-attended meetings kept up for more than eight years. Its influence in the triple pledge has been great among the young people, many of whom have kept it strictly to this day. Some have gone out and carried its influence elsewhere. In Canada, in a small town where such a thing as Total Abstinence had never before been thought of, a member of this Society organized a similar one, with a membership of 150. It is much to be regretted that this Society has not continued to live and flourish, that it might still save the boys from the evil influence of not only rum, but also of tobacco, and profanity.

A new Division of the Sons of Temperance was organized Oct. 15, 1874, with nearly the old name, "Ashuelot Division, No. 35." The Charter members are : —

Adaline K. Mack, Solomon Mack, Mary L. Hayward, George H. McCoy, Charles W. Bingham, Miranda McCoy, Joseph S. Bingham, Osman McCoy, Frances A. Beckwith, Rufus E. Guillo, Claudius B. Hayward, Lillie J. McCoy, Louis N. Loisselle.

Solomon Mack was elected Worthy Patriarch and Mary L. Hayward R. S. This Division has held a few public meetings with lectures, and one exhibition. Steering clear of the rock of politics it has reclaimed and held up, for a time, at least, some who were before drunkards. The forms and methods of the Temperance movement are continually changing, and it has been found difficult to sustain the meetings of the Division, since the organization of

THE GILSUM TEMPERANCE REFORM CLUB.

May 9, 1876, a meeting of the citizens was held in the Methodist Meeting House, now the Town Hall, to listen to Mr. Creasy of Charlestown, Mass., and members of Keene Temperance Reform Club. The pledge was circulated, and 93 names subscribed. A temporary organization was effected with F. A. Howard, President, and H. E. Rawson, Secretary. The following week the organization was completed by adopting a Constitution and By-laws. L. Roscoe Guillo was chosen President, and Adolphe F. C. Laurent, Secretary. Meetings have since been held weekly, except in the summer, with various literary exercises, and have been well attended. The pledge has been circulated through the town, securing a membership of 265. It is now largely sustained by the younger people. One interesting feature of the meetings is singing, led at first by Robert Cuthbert, Jr., and more recently by Thomas Charnbury, Jr.

The Presidents of the Club, since the first, have been Edouard Loisel, Mason Guillo, Arthur Smith, and Fred A. Stevens. Much good has already been accomplished, and it is to be hoped this organization will long continue to exert a salutary influence in the community.

One thing is evident, a Temperance Society should be entirely free from outside entanglements. Any organization, paying tribute to a set of political "fuglers" and "bummers," will, in the long run, find confusion in its ranks, and defeat in its purposes of good.

At a special meeting Dec. 16, 1879, the town voted to adopt the law prohibiting the sale of lager-beer in small quantities.

CHAPTER XX.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

To understand the history of any people or town, nothing is more necessary than to study the religious sentiments which prevailed at its origin, and to trace their influence in molding the character of men, and directing the form and spirit of their institutions. A century of church history must be a most important element in the past record and present condition of any community. A professed church of Christ, claiming to teach men the truths that pertain to their higher nature, that shall guide them to the best paths not only for the fleeting hours of time, but for the ages of eternity, cannot exist without exercising an immense power over the hearts and lives, not only of those who accept and yield to its teachings, but of those who not accepting their authority do yet come under its influence both of precept and example.

It is difficult for us at the present day to realize or even fully to understand the circumstances of our fathers a hundred years ago. Nothing is now more fully established in the minds of most Americans than that the union of church and state in any form is disastrous to the highest welfare of both; but in the early history of New England that idea was scarcely understood at all. Men who came from the old country to avoid religious persecutions for themselves, thought no harm in incorporating their own religious views into their laws. They honestly supposed that as citizens, it was not only their duty to protect the religious interests of the people, but that they ought to compel them by law to serve God in public, and forbid all non-professors of religion from positions of trust and authority in the State. Their early training had been such that they supposed they could not be truly loyal to God, unless they did this. Nor at the first was anybody injured thereby. All were of one mind. No one thought of opposing the enactment of such laws, for all were agreed in believing them just and right. When the laws of the province of New Hampshire were enacted, no one thought of any other plan than that of requiring the people to support the preaching of the gospel by tax. It was supposed necessary to the idea of a Christian State that the services of the Christian religion should be maintained and supported in the same manner as civil offices. Nor was any wrong or injustice dreamed of in such enactments. So when towns were incorporated, reservations were made in the interests of the Christian religion. (Page 21.)

The charter coming from the King's government before the revolution, gave no distinct recognition of any church but the Church of England. No other church was established by law. But our fathers had even then so far broken away from her authority that they secured a lot "for the first settled minister of the gospel." And this form of expression should serve to correct the erroneous impression that the Congregational Church, as such, was established by law. It was only that the church first gaining possession of the ground was recognized as the existing church to receive whatever privileges the laws should grant. So in regard to the taxes collected for the support of the ministry. The law required every taxable person to pay for the support of the minister settled by the town. It did not designate a particular denomination. It only put into the hands of the town the business now usually transacted by religious societies, such as building meeting-houses, hiring and settling ministers, fixing the amount of salary, and the like. Nothing in the laws restricted towns to employ ministers of any particular denomination. Whatever Protestant sect had a majority vote in any town, settled and supported its own minister. The town of New London, for instance, settled a Baptist for their first minister. He consequently received the minister's lot, and was supported by a town tax. The same is doubtless true of other towns. Many people have an idea that the laws favored Congregationalism or Orthodoxy as it was called. But this is entirely a mistake. The law made no distinction in favor of any sect. All had the same rights and privileges under the law, only whichever had the majority vote in town, thereby secured the reserved lot for its first minister, and gained the legal right to assess a tax for his support. The town as a body corporate was independent in its religious affairs, save that the State authorized it to have some religion, and having made its own choice, to support that religion by due course of law. What particular form of Protestant Christianity should be supported, was left to the free choice of every town. It was only because the first settlers were almost unanimously in favor of the Congregational belief and form of church polity, that this became the prevalent system, so as to be called the standing order. That their ministry was supported by law, that taxes were assessed and collected by civil process, was not the fault of the church or of Congregationalism, or Orthodoxy, but a fault of the times. The odium which thereby became largely attached to the denomination is entirely unjust. Whatever hardships or oppressive acts may have been suffered under this system, were the result of the laws framed in accordance with public opinion. It was the ignorance of the times and not the fault of any church or denomination. The first movement against it was largely supported by those who had not arrived to the idea that all should be free to support preaching or not, but who admitting the right and duty of the State to require every one to be taxed for religious purposes, yet claimed the right for each to designate to what denomination his money should be paid. This system was evidently more absurd than the other. It was like allowing each voter in a school district to say what teacher should be supported by his money. This must, as it did, create inextricable confusion. The only tenable ground was that reached in 1819, when the support of religion was entirely separated from State authority, and left to the voluntary contributions of the people. And none more than Congregationalists would to-day oppose any semblance of return to the old system of supporting religion by law. Religion that is not voluntary is worthless.

In regard to alleged oppressions occurring under the old system, after diligent search and inquiry, I find the facts to be as follows. Some prominent men in town being dissatisfied with the doctrines taught in connection with this church, refused, on that ground, to pay the tax for the support of the minister. The officers whose duty it was to enforce the collection of taxes took their property in some few instances, as they would have taken it for any other town tax. Tradition says that one Peter Rice at the south end of the town had his only cow sold at auction to pay his minister tax. That this must have been unnecessary on his part, is evident from the Grand Levy, by which it appears that the year his tax was the lowest, twenty-five tax-payers out of eighty-six were poorer than he, and the next year his Levy rose to within the first third of the town.

Not only the nature of the law itself, but the town records show conclusively that the whole action in such matters was by the town, and the church and ministry had nothing to do with it. Thus in July, 1802, we find a Committee, consisting of Jehiel Holdridge, David Bliss and Zadok Hurd, was appointed to stand a law-suit with a prominent citizen, concerning his minister tax, and a hundred dollars was voted for the purpose. This was entirely a civil process, and a town, not a church affair. The whole system was no doubt a mistake. But the point to be insisted on is, that the responsibility rested not on the church or denomination, but on the whole people. The town had the control, and the odium of any forcible collection of church rates belongs not to church or ministry. It was simply the regular process of law, as ordered by town authority, and neither desired nor approved by the minister. It is certain that, in Gilsuim, the minister, whenever it came within his power, remitted the taxes of those unwilling to pay, and refused to retain possession of property forcibly taken for his support. In one case a horse was taken by the officer and put in the minister's yard. When he knew it, he told his son to let him out, and the horse went immediately home.

This method of supporting the gospel is well illustrated in the district school system. The school agent chosen by a majority vote, may put in a teacher that many in the district dislike. But no one dreams of calling it oppression and tyranny that he must pay his school tax. No other way is possible, if schools are to be supported by law. The majority must rule, however obnoxious their action may be to the minority. So in regard to "minister taxes." The mistake was in the underlying notion that religion requires a legal support. That idea granted, no other course is possible. The majority must rule. Nor should any reproach thereby be cast upon the sect to which that majority chanced for the time to belong. It was entirely a town affair. And no denomination had any advantage over another, save the advantage of being able to secure the largest number of votes.

The lands set apart by the charter, for religious purposes, were three whole shares, amounting to 750 acres. The land for a "Glebe" for the Church of England was the 3d, 4th and half the 5th Lots in the 12th Range, also half the 10th Lot, 3d Range in the "second division." In the Proprietors' record of May 16, 1774, is the following:—

Voted to Chuse an agent to treat with the Rev^d M^r Cosset Relative to the Right Belonging to the Church of England accordingly Chose M^r Abel Allen agent for that Purpose.

The result of this conference is not recorded. (Appendix D.)

The share for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was laid out in one Lot "two hundred and fifty acres South of S^d Governor's Lott," and is marked S. P. G. on the map, (page 24,) where it will be seen that this share, as well as the "Glebe," was cut off from Gilsuim in the final establishment of Stoddard line.

The share "for the first settled Minister of the Gospel" consisted of the 4th Lot 4th Range, the 6th Lot 8th Range, half of the 5th Lot 9th Range, and half the 2d Lot 3d Range of the "second division." Rev. Mr. Fish being the first settled minister, was entitled to these lots. He built his house on the one first named. He sold one to Samuel Seward Sullivan for £48, (page 26,) and in May, 1796, he sold the 6th Lot 8th Range to James Kingsbury of Surry for £94. "The second division" probably yielded him nothing, being beyond the "Patent Line."

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

was formed three years after Surry was set off, which was nine years after the charter was given. Previous to this, and indeed for more than twenty years later, the town depended upon neighboring ministers, especially from Keene, for preaching and other services.

The first record of the church is as follows :—

At a meeting of the brethren in full communion held at the house of Jonathan Adams in Gilsun on the 25th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand Seven hundred and Seventy-two: Chose Justus Hurd as Clerk. Appointed Josiah Kilburn, Deac. Ebenezer Dewey and Samuel Church as a Committee. Voted to apply to the Church of Christ in Northfield, [Mass.] in Winchester, in Swanzy, in Walpole, and in Charleston [Charlestown, N. H.] for assistance in collecting a church in s'd Gilsun. Also agreed that wednesday, the 27th of october next, be set apart for a day of fasting and prayer. Voted that the meeting be held on s'd day at the dwelling house of Ebenezer Dewey in s'd Gilsun.

Of the churches invited there were present Rev. Mr. Hubbard of Northfield, Mass., Rev. Edward Goddard of Swanzy, Rev. Micah Lawrence of Winchester, and two delegates whose names and churches are not given in the record. There was no minister at Charlestown at this time, and Rev. Thomas Fessenden of Walpole did not come. On that day, "the Church was collected in Gilsun and Ebenezer Dewey, Jr., Henry White and Sarah his wife were admitted as members in full communion." That is, these three persons were received on profession of their faith, while the others were collected from their previous church relations. This is all the record we have of the proceedings of that day, except the baptism of Ebenezer Kilburn's son Ebenezer. It would be interesting now to know the services of the occasion and by whom performed, and it is specially to be regretted that no list of members is given. Nor can that list be accurately reproduced. As near as can be ascertained the original members were as follows :—

Jonathan Adams and Hannah his wife, Stephen Bond and Molly his wife, Samuel Church and Elizabeth his wife, Dea. Ebenezer Dewey and Temperance his wife, Ebenezer Dewey, Jr., and his wife, Justus Hurd and Rachel his wife, Ebenezer Kilburn (afterwards Deacon.) Josiah Kilburn and Sarah his wife, Rev. Josiah Kilburn, Jr., Henry White and Sarah his wife.

It is not certain that these eighteen make the exact list of original members, but it is as nearly accurate as it can now be made. There are records of baptism of the children of some who are nowhere recorded as church members. But it is not safe to infer their membership from this alone. The practice largely prevailed in the New England churches of allowing persons to take the half-way covenant as it was called, not admitting them to full communion, but only thereby granting them the privilege of household baptism. It has been doubted whether this church ever fell into this practice, but the following record is conclusive :—

June 5, 1796, Received Jesse Dart into the church who had previously owned the covenant & had had his children baptized.

When Mr. Fish came, the practice was discontinued. Others too, who being members of churches elsewhere, had not transferred their relation to this, brought their children to receive baptism. This is known to have been the case with John and Ann Mark, who being members of the Presbyterian Church in the old country, had their children baptized here, but without joining this church. So doubtless with others.

What few records are now extant from the organization of the church till the settlement of the first pastor, a period of twenty-two years, consist mostly of dateless baptisms and admissions to the church. Those who are recorded as having become members, during this time, are as follows:—

Phineas Allen, Ebenezer Bill and Rachel his wife, Samuel Bill and Sarah his wife, John Bingham and Sibyl his wife, Jonathan Bliss, Jr. and Sarah his wife, Levi Bliss and Ann his wife, Sibyl the wife of Elisha Y. Bond, Gershom Crocker and Ann his wife, Thomas Dort and Sarah his wife, Irene the wife of Asa Davis, Temperance Dewey afterwards the wife of Rev. Josiah Kilburn, Timothy Dort, Joseph Ellis, Aaron Hammond and Rachel his wife, Shubael Hurd and Rachel his wife, "widow" Phebe Mack, Theodore Preston and Eunice his wife, Obadiah Smith and Martha his wife, Mary the wife of Eleazer Wilcox, and Margaret the wife of Joseph Young.

Others of whom no record is found but whose membership is well ascertained are as follows:—

David Blish (afterwards Deacon,) and Lucy his wife, Justus Chapin and Martha his wife, William Comstock, Silvanus Hayward and Olive his wife, John Row, Jr., Obadiah Wilcox and Lydia his wife.

Probably there were some others, but these are all whose membership can now be determined.

As the church was organized at a private house, there was probably no Meeting House then built. There can be no doubt, however, that the town built one, very soon after, on the height of land between William Mark's and David Bill's, where the foundation is still visible. (Map 43.) A lever-wood about two inches through and 15 feet high, now stands within six inches of the northeast corner-stone, and a red-oak and a hemlock each about 15 inches through, stand a little east of the center. Here the people gathered in time of the Revolution, to form patriotic plans, and to enlist for the defence of their country.

This house was built like an old-fashioned school-room with seats raised at the back and sides for the singers, and boards laid upon movable blocks below for the rest of the congregation. The men and women sat on opposite sides, facing each other. It remained on this spot till 1783, and perhaps longer. As the eastern part of the town began to be settled, the people there demanded its removal for their accommodation. It is a common tradition that this house was moved several times. Rev. Aaron Hall of Keene riding up one Sabbath morning to preach, was unable to find it, not knowing that it had been removed during the week. There is a faint tradition of there having been a Meeting House near the old Sullivan road, east of the Mark meadow. (Map 356.) It is not improbable that its first removal may have been to this spot. It was certainly moved to a spot a little west of the Keene road, about 20 rods southeast of the "wheel-pit," where the foundation still remains. (Map 51.) No proof has been found of its standing elsewhere. A foundation was prepared and the "sills leveled," on the hill southeast of Henry Bingham's, (Map 87,) but the house was never set there. It is well known that there was much excitement about its location, and an obscure tradition exists that, in 1788, about the time the last foundation was made ready, "king David" having seized an ax to knock off the first board, an opposing citizen was struck down by the blow.

In 1789, Sullivan having been set off, the quarrel about location seems to have been ended. There was a general agreement to set the Meeting House as near the center of the town as practicable. The exact center was then supposed to be Vessel Rock. The spot chosen was about a quarter of a mile further north, where the foundation still remains. (Map 78.) It is indicated by the white flag in the accompanying heliotype.

Nov. 5, 1789, twenty pounds to be paid in labor was voted for underpinning the house, and the work was to be done by the next June. The Committee for this work were Ebenezer Kilburn, Ebenezer Bill, Ebenezer Dart, Sam^l Whitney and David Blish. Some parts of the older house were used in the new one, as we find the next March the account of Eleazer Wileox allowed, "for moving the Old meeting House Boards and Streightening the Nails." It was voted at the same meeting to raise twenty pounds for carrying on the Meeting House "to be pay'd In Good potash Salts at markt price at Keen." The House was not finished till 1793, but a town meeting was held at the Meeting House Aug. 30, 1790. Sept. 2^d, 1791, it was voted to finish off the Meeting House. It was struck off to Thomas Redding to finish for 157 Pounds, paid in Neat Cattle at twenty shillings per hundred weight, "said Redding to procure a Bondsman to the Exceptance of the town." This he probably failed to do, for we find a meeting Oct. 20. when it was bid off by Aaron Hammond for 180 £. It was stipulated that the Outside of the meeting house is to be Conlourd A Bright Orring. Only the Doors which are to Be a Stone Gray the gets and Cornishes and windowds to Be white. The Inside to Be A Stone Gray only the Canopy to Be A Prusian Blue & Pews and Stairs with Banisters. The Pulpit and Canopy to Be made Like Surry's.

It was to be finished off complete by Nov. 20, 1793. If done sooner, the contractor was to be paid sooner. It was made like others of that day with high bird's-nest pulpit, with an overhanging sounding-board, and high galleries on three sides supported by fluted pillars. It was elegantly carved around the pulpit and ornamented with pilasters around the square pews. The seats were hung upon hinges, so they might be raised to furnish convenient standing place in prayer time. The Amen was the signal for a rapid succession of slams like the firing of musketry at old-fashioned trainings.

There is no record found of the dedication of this House. We are however able to fix the time very nearly, by an inscription on the manuscript outline of a sermon by the first pastor, which reads thus :—"Preached at Gilsun on the Sabbath after the dedication of their meeting house, Dec. 1, 1793." The text is Judges 11 : 35 : "I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back." As it is well known that in those times, Wednesday was almost uniformly selected for such occasions, there can be little doubt that the dedication occurred Wednesday, Nov. 27, 1793, just 19 years and one month after the organization of the Church. What ministers were present or who preached is unknown.

The House had been previously occupied for town purposes, but probably not for preaching. March 11, 1794, the town voted to give Jonathan Church 6 shillings for sweeping the Meeting House and keeping the "Kees." Next year a similar vote is recorded in favor of Turner White.

There is nothing further about the House for eighteen years. Sept. 15, 1813, it was voted to raise money to repair the Meeting House. Some idea of the extent of the repairs may be gathered from the next record, that "James M. Mark bid off the repairs for one dollar and fifty cents." After this there were votes repeated about once in three years instructing the Selectmen to repair the Meeting House. In 1824 it was voted to paint the Meeting House "except the roof."

As usual in those days, no means had been provided for warming the house. In 1826 and again in 1832, an article was in the warrant, to see if the town would furnish a stove, but in both cases it was dismissed without action. Many still remember meeting there in winter with no fire, and how the tavern opposite was crowded at noon by young and old, the women replenishing their little foot-stoves with coals from the large open fire-place, and the men "taking something" to keep the cold out.

There was a large Common surrounding the Meeting House, mainly on the south ; on the east and south sides of which were rows of horse-sheds. Trainings and public gatherings of almost every kind were held here. There was a tall "Liberty Pole" close by the road at the south-west corner of the Common.

During a period of fifteen years, commencing in 1837, frequent discussions were held in town meeting about moving or selling the "Old Meeting House." Various propositions were made, and Committees appointed, "to inquire into the ownership," "to purchase the Meeting House," (that is evidently the pews,) "for the benefit of the Town," "to consult with the Methodist Denomination," and the like. At one time it was almost decided to move it to the "Lower Village," and it was voted that "if the Old Meeting House be moved it be located within thirty rods of Towne's Mill," and A. J. Howard, David Bill, and Jacob Polley were chosen a Committee to attend to "all business respecting the moving of said house." But all these plans failed, and at the annual meeting, March 9, 1852, Voted that the Selectmen sell at public auction the old Meeting-house, and all the land where the Meeting house is now situated that the town own, the sale of the Meeting house to be separate from that of the land, and that the proceeds be applied to liquidate the old debts of the town.

The land was bought by Daniel Smith for twelve dollars. The house was bid off by N. O. Hayward for Dr. K. D. Webster at eighty dollars. The pulpit windows may be seen in the west end of C. B. Hayward's barn on Sullivan St., just above "the dug-way." The piazza of C. B. Hayward's residence, (the old Whitney place, Chap. 36.) is supported by several of the pillars that were under the gallery.

Of the ministers employed before 1794, very little can be ascertained. Rev. John Hubbard of Northfield, Mass., (Genealogy,) was among the first. He baptized Jenet Mark, now Mrs. Hathhorn, in May, 1783. He also married her sister Jean to Elijah Bond Sept. 10, 1789. Rev. Edward Goddard from Shrewsbury, Mass., then laboring in Swansey, often preached here, also Rev. Elias Fisher who afterwards settled in Lempster. He had a son Elias baptized here, probably by himself. Rev. Aaron Hall of Keene, and probably other neighboring ministers, often rode over from their own towns to preach to the destitute parish of Gilsuim. At almost every town meeting of which we have the record the subject of hiring preaching was discussed.

June 8, 1790 Voted to Join with Surry to Hire preach the Gospel with us

Voted to Rais Fifteen pounds to Be paid In wheat Rye Indian corn and Flax weat at 5/ — p^r. Bushel Rye at 3/6 — p^r. Bushel Indian Corn at 2/8 — p^r. Bushel and Flax at seven pence p^r. pound Likewise Chose Aaron Hammond Stephen Bond A Committee to Find A minester to preach with us.

Surry records show that on May 31, 1790, they appointed "Capt. Samuel Smith, Nathaniel Darte & Ely Darte a committee to hire preaching in connection with Gilsuim." July 19, 1790, Gilsuim "Voted to Give M^r. Newel Four Dollars and Half p^r. Day For preathing." Sept. 13, 1790, the vote of June 8, was reconsidered, the plan of union with Surry being abandoned. It was also "Voted to pay M^r. Newel out of the Salts rate," that is the Salts of Potash mentioned above.

Oct. 18, 1790 "Voted to give M^r. Gad Newel A Call Upon probation" and "Chose Justus Hurd Jonathan Adams & tho^r. Dart Committee to Consult with m^r. newel."

For some reason which is not now known, Mr. Newel was not finally called to a settlement here, but settled in Nelson in 1794, where he was pastor for forty-two years, and died aged 95.

Nov. 28, 1791. Voted to Have M^r. Colton Stay with us this winter then voted to Give m^r. Abisha Colton A Call for Nine months Upon trial In order for Settlement Voted to pay M^r. Sept. 10 1792 Voted to Hire m^r. Abisha Colton one year to preach the Gospill and Give him fifty pounds and bord him if Sullivan will forin a union with us and hire him one half the time

This Sullivan refused to do, and how long he remained is not known. He is remembered as a "good looking man with a fine voice." He settled for a time in Stoddard.

March 13, 1792, "Voted to Pay m^r. Eanock Bliss for his preaching with us." No further information of this man has been found.

Rev. Elisha Fish of Windsor, Mass., having been dismissed from his pastorate there, had been preaching at Bath, N. H., and on his way home stopped in Gilsuim. He was recommended by Rev. Aaron Hall of Keene. Mrs. Dea. Bond, by whom he was entertained, told him that the Lord had sent him. In September, 1793, he was hired three months on probation at twenty shillings per Sabbath. Feb. 15, 1794, the church voted to invite Rev. Elisha Fish to settle with them as their pastor and teacher, requesting the town to concenr. The same day the town voted 41 to 6 to give Mr. Fish a call, giving him "Fifty Pounds to rise with the Levy of s^d town to Sixty pounds lawful money for his annual salary." Samuel Whitney, Lev^t Daniel Wright, and Capt. Jehiel Holdridge were the Committee to act with a Committee of the Church. It was voted to give Robert L. Hurd nine shillings to notify Mr. Fish. In May following, a Committee was voted to make provision for the Council. Mr. Fish's reply to his call is recorded in the Town Book and is as follows:—

To the Church and Congregation in Gilsuim.

GENTLEMEN:— The invitation which you some time since gave me to settle with you in the work of the gospel ministry, I have seriously and I trust maturely considered. I have availed myself of the advice of friends and have frequently I hope with humble dependence on Divine illumination, applied to the throne of grace that I might be directed to give you a wise and right answer, and now considering the providential manner of my being introduced among you, the union which has since taken place and still appears to exist, and the place which you have given me reason to believe I hold in your affections, I am prone to think that your call is the call of GOD and that I am therefore bound in duty to accept, which I accordingly do. And now my friends you will readily agree with me, when I observe, that the office of a watchman on the walls of God's spiritual Jerusalem is an awful charge. If the watchman be unfaithful and the people of his charge perish on his account, as he has reason to expect they will, their blood will be required at his hand. But if he be faithful, and they refuse to hear and obey, his faithfulness will be a surprising aggravation of their final overthrow. The settlement therefore of a minister should be undertaken with the most deliberate and devout seriousness. When you and I think of a connection of this kind, we should consider that our contract if consummated will be attended with eternal consequences.

If God should see fit to settle me here in the work of the Gospel ministry, I pray him to give me instruction and grace to be both skillful and faithful, and give you hearts to receive the ingrafted word in love, and that he would enable us to be workers together with him in the building up of his kingdom, and hereby become helpers of each others joy. With these devout wishes in my heart I subscribe myself, Your Friend,

ELISHA FISH.

The Council met on the 29th of May at the house of Capt. Ebenezer Kilburn. It was composed of Rev. Edward Goddard and Dea. Thomas Applin from Swanzev, Rev. Elias Fisher and Dea. Elijah Bingham from Lempster, Rev. Aaron Hall and Dea. Abijah Wilder from Keene, Rev. James Briggs and Dea. Ebenezer Snell (father-in-law of Mr. Fish) from Cummington, Mass., and Rev. Holloway Fish (brother of the pastor elect) and Dea. Eliphalet Stone from Marlboro. Rev. Mr. Goddard was Moderator and Rev. Mr. Hall Scribe. The services were as follows:—Introductory Prayer, Rev. Mr. Fish; Sermon, Rev. Mr. Briggs; Installing Prayer, Rev. Mr. Fisher; Charge, Rev. Mr. Goddard; Right Hand, Rev. Mr. Hall; Concluding Prayer, Rev. Mr. Briggs. There is no record of the singing.

In the Town Book is the following record:—

Voted to allow Mr Hammonds Ac ^t . for Bording Re ^v . Mr Fish 21 weeks	£5: 5: 0: 0
more to keeping his horse—	2: 8: 0

Voted to pay Cap ^t Kilborn for keeping the Council that Reinstalled Mr Fish	£5: 0: 0: 0
Voted to have Rev ^d Mr Fish Salary Be paid to him the first of December annually.

Thus commenced the pastorate of Mr. Fish. The records of town or church give almost nothing further in reference to his ministry, till we come to his death. One page of the church records is thus inscribed:—

March 28th, 1807.

This day departed this life, much lamented, our beloved Pastor, The Rev^d. Elisha Fish, aged 51, having had the charge of us in the Lord

Twelve years and Ten months.

The only town record is a vote allowing $21.62 for his funeral expenses. They also voted to continue his salary nine Sabbaths after his death, the preaching being given by the members of the ministerial Association to which Mr. Fish belonged.

Rev. Elisha Fish graduated at Harvard University in 1779, and studied Theology with his father at Upton, Mass. He was ordained at Windsor, Mass., June 16, 1785, and was dismissed July 5, 1792. While here, he received an accidental injury, which resulted in the amputation of one leg. This may have been a remote cause of his comparatively early death. In 1806, there had been a revival in which between twenty and thirty were hopefully converted, and twelve heads of families united with the church. During this revival Mr. Fish was unwearied in his labors for their instruction, even beyond prudence, doubtless thereby hastening his premature decease. During his last sickness he prayed much for the people of Gilsun, but expressed a willingness to leave them, if they would only turn to the Lord. A short time before his death, he is remembered to have spoken earnestly for some minutes in a language unknown to the family, supposed to be Latin, and apparently in prayer.

The following particulars are from a journal kept by Mrs. Sibyl Bond :—

He began to fail in the Fall of 1806, and didn't preach for a number of Sabbaths. Jan. 11, he was present and assisted some. Jan. 18, he preached and administered the Sacrament. Jan. 25, he preached for the last time, after which he lived nine weeks, and died on Saturday, Mar. 28. He was buried Wednesday, Ap. 2, just after a very severe snow-storm. Rev. Aaron Hall of Keene preached the sermon from 2 Tim. 4: 6, 7, and 8th verses.

Few ministers were present on account of the great snow. Rev. Mr. Newell of Nelson started on snow-shoes, but was obliged to turn back.

Mr. Fish was called a Hopkinsian, and was firmly attached to what he believed to be God's truth. At one time, when on a council for ordination, he insisted on a thorough examination of the candidate's belief, and finding him lax in doctrine, he alone of the ministers present, refused to take part in his ordination, and with five lay delegates entered a protest against proceeding. For this he was severely rebuked by some of the members, but he valued the approbation of his own conscience more than the praise of man. Though thus fearless in defence of the truth when occasion seemed to require, he was no lover of controversy. He was decided and clear in his preaching, declaring what he believed to be the whole counsel of God, but when men came to the town preaching other views, he kept right on in his own course without turning aside to attack any. Definite in his own views of evangelical truth, his preaching was of no doubtful character. None could mistake his ideas of truth or duty. His style was simple, clear, and forcible. Heeding the injunction "Feed the flock of God," he aimed not merely or mainly to move the feelings, but rather to instruct his people. He once remarked, "If my people knew a hundred times as much as they do, it would be a great deal easier teaching them." None doubted his sincerity and piety. Even those who refused his doctrines, were for the most part friendly to the man. He was unusually social and genial in his intercourse with the people. Some one in Cummington, Mass., said of him, "He is the most agreeable man, I ever knew."

Doubtless many anecdotes might have been preserved illustrative of Mr. Fish's ministry and the peculiarities of the times. The following serves to indicate the terms of familiar intercourse between Mr. Fish and his people :—

One Sabbath he preached a very plain sermon against worldly-mindedness. Having occasion the next morning to borrow some farm tool of his neighbor, John Mark, he arrived at his house before Mr. Mark was up. After getting him the desired article, Mr. Mark said, "You preached yesterday against worldly-mindedness, but you are more worldly-minded than I am, for you are attending to your work before I get up."

On occasion of a severe drought, the church appointed a Fast to pray for rain. An ungodly man, in token of his unbelief, engaged an unusual number of hands, and cut down several acres of his best grass. A storm came on that very night and nearly ruined the whole. "Who hath hardened himself against God, and hath prospered?"

"Madam Fish," as it was then the custom to call her, was Abigail Snell, sister of Rev. Thomas Snell, D. D., of North Brookfield, Mass., and of Mrs. Bryant, the mother of the poet. She was an amiable and excellent woman. The portrait on the opposite page was taken in her 83^d year.

In giving the names of those who united with the church during Mr. Fish's ministry, it is proper to notice that he himself united by letter from Windsor, Mass., on the day of his Installation, and before the Installation services began. The following persons were added to the church during his pastorate :—

James Ballard and Molly his wife, Lucinda wife of Daniel Beverstock, Lydia the wife of Samuel Bill, Susanna wife of David Bill, Hannah Bingham, Jonathan Clark and Delilah his wife, Samuel Clark and Mercy his wife, Jesse Dart, John Davis, Elisheba wife of John Dort, Polly wife of Fortunatus Eager, Eunice wife of John Ellis, Martha wife of Moses Farnsworth, Orinda wife of David Fuller, Claudius Drusus Hayward, Luther Holmes and Mary his wife, Zadok Hurd and Mary his wife, Sarah wife of Ebenezer Kilburn, Rachel wife of Berzeleel Mack, Joseph Plumley and Rachel his wife, Sally Redding, Dudley Smith and Hannah his wife, David Thompson and Molly his wife, Hannah wife of Ananias Tubbs, and Hannah wife of Turner White.

Before the settlement of Mr. Fish no deacons had been chosen. Ebenezer Dewey and Stephen Bond had probably officiated in that capacity, as they were called by that title, and had perhaps held the office in the church from which they removed here. The first choice of Deacons in this church was Aug. 28, 1794, when David Blish and Ebenezer Kilburn were elected. They signified their acceptance of the office Oct. 2, 1795.

From the death of Mr. Fish to 1818 the records are very defective, the church remaining without a pastor till 1829. A prominent reason for this long vacancy in the pastorate was the great variety of religious opinions then prevailing. Probably few towns as small as Gilsuim, have had so great a variety of beliefs intermingled and confused together from before the beginning of the present century. We find in the town records, as far back as 1788, and for twenty years following, certificates from sixteen different citizens stating either their disbelief in, and consequent unwillingness to support the preaching provided by the town, or more frequently excusing themselves on the ground that they had become supporters of the Universalists, or Baptists, or Methodists mostly in Surry, Sullivan, and Alstead. (Appendix E.) Had they been united in any one of these beliefs, they might probably have carried the vote of the town, so as to have obtained and supported a minister of their own persuasion. But being so divided, they could only prevent the maintenance of the "Orthodox" preaching which they mutually disliked. In 1804, an article was inserted in the warrant "to see if the town would release the Universalists, the Methodists, and Baptists from paying Minister tax in this town," but it was dismissed without action. Similar efforts with the same result were made in 1805 and 1807. But in March, 1808, —

Voted to raise $120 for preaching on the following plan, that every individual shall have liberty to pay to which denomination he pleases, the money to be preached out in the meeting house, if they please.

Maj. Bill, Esqr. Blish, Daniel Converse, and Iddo Kilburn were the Committee to carry the vote into effect. This plan seems to have been pursued thereafter as long as the meeting house was used for religious purposes, the last Committee for dividing the house having been appointed in March, 1833, consisting of Iddo Kilburn, David Brigham, Daniel Day, Timothy Dort, and Simon Carpenter. The next year, the Congregationalists having built a Meeting House at the village, the other denominations no longer asked for a division of the old house.

The only money raised by the town for preaching, after Mr. Fish's death, was the $120 in 1808, $100 in 1810, and the same sum in 1814, making in all $320, in each case to be divided among the different denominations. In other years the subject was either left out entirely, or if named in the warrant, was dismissed without action, or in one case, in 1811, after voting to raise money for preaching it was reconsidered and nothing done. The only reference to a particular preacher, during this time, is an article in the warrant for Oct. 6, 1808, "to see if the town or any part of them will take any method to obtain the Rev. Sam'l Goddard to preach with them," on which no action was taken. Mr. Goddard was however employed some months, and regret was expressed that more effort was not made to retain him. He afterwards preached in Concord, now Lisbon. A Mr. Hutchins, who had been Preceptor in Chesterfield Academy, was next employed for two seasons, and after him Rev. Broughton White, for the same length of time. Mr. White preached here occasionally till 1819. He afterwards labored in various places, and died at Acworth in 1861, aged 88 years.

The church at this period was much discouraged and had but little preaching. Sometimes a neighboring church would let their pastor come a Sabbath and administer the ordinances, and occasionally a young man just commencing would happen along, and by taking up a contribution they would hire him a Sabbath or two. About the year 1814, Mary Wilcox, not then a member of the church, was moved to make an effort to secure preaching, and herself went to all the sisters of the church asking them to give something for that purpose. The women thus raised money enough to hire the Rev. Gideon Burt of Long Meadow, Mass., eight weeks. As a result of his preaching the church became more engaged and four persons united by profession, among them the one who started the movement.

In 1816, a change in the laws, more fully completed in 1819, freed the town from responsibility in reference to preaching, and left the support of religious institutions, as now, entirely voluntary. Though this change was undoubtedly wise, and on the whole better for the cause of religion, yet it was mainly brought about by the factious and ignorant opposition of those who hated the influence of the pure gospel, and wished to be free, not to support different forms of religions instruction, but no form at all, choosing utter ungodliness as their portion. Not all who favored the change were of this class, but the leaders and managers in the State were nearly all, men who hated any form of vital religion. Nor was it strange that good men should have been greatly discouraged, and doubtless gave utterance to unwise and unguarded expressions in reference to the enactment of such laws. They were mistaken in supposing that it would be the overthrow of evangelical religion. Both the hopes of one party and the fears of the other were unfounded. "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation." The more entirely distinct church and state become, the better will religion prosper. What was intended by the adversary as a blow at piety and godliness, proved, in the hands of a mightier than he, the very means to nurture and extend the influence of pure and undefiled religion. A religion maintained by law is comparatively worthless. It speedily becomes dead and corrupt. But that which springs voluntarily from an abiding principle in the soul, vitalized by the Spirit of God, has a self-propagating power, pouring out blessings in ceaseless and increasing flow upon the people where it once gains a footing.

An article in the warrant for a town meeting in September, 1815, to see who wish to form themselves into a Congregational Society, was passed by without notice. In the following year a successful effort was made to obtain a charter for a Corporate Body by the name of the Congregational Church and Society. It is dated June 28, 1816, and was granted to "Obadiah Pease, Elisha S. Fish, Dudley Smith, and Jonathan Pease, and their associates, and all such as may hereafter associate with them." There were forty signers to the petition, twenty-five of whom signed the charter. None of these forty are now living. The following are the names, C. signifying those who finally signed the Charter:—

James Ballard, C., David Bill, C., Lemuel Bingham, David Blish, C., David Bliss, Elisha Bond, William Bond, Justus Chapin, Jonathan Church, Jonathan Clarke, Jesse Dart, C., Jonathan E. Davis, C., Aaron Day, C., John Dort, C., Ira Ellis, C., Elisha S. Fish, C., Aaron Hammond, C., Amherst Hayward, C., Silvanus Hayward, C., Berzeleel Mack, C., Berzeleel Lord Mack, C., James M. Mark, William Mark, C., Waldo May, Jonathan Pease, C., Obadiah Pease, C., Israel Plumley, David Smith, Dudley Smith, C., Elijah Ware, C., Obadiah Ware, True Webster, C., True Webster, Jr., Nathan White, C., Stephen White, C., Luther Whitney, Edmund Wilcox, C., Eleazer Wilcox, Eleazer Wilcox, Jr., C., Solomon Woods, C.

That there was some preaching during the years from 1816 to 1819, is evident from the Society Records, which show a vote to raise money each year. But how much and by whom is not now known. Rev. Levi Lankton of Alstead, the brother-in-law of Mr. Fish, is known to have been employed during the summer of 1820. He died over 80 years of age at Marietta, Ohio, in 1843.

Under the influence of zealous opposition, the church at this period was made a by-word and reproach among the people. Some of its own members failed in the hour of trial, deserting its ranks to join others of different faith and practice. The few who continued steadfast were feeble and discouraged. But one Sabbath morning in the winter of 1819, the same Mary Wilcox, (then Mrs. Fish,) whose efforts had previously secured the preaching of Mr. Burt, proposed to repair to the house of Dea. Pease, and statedly hold a reading meeting, which had been only occasional before, until they should have a minister. The plan was adopted and proved successful. A weekly prayer meeting was also established. This movement seemed to be the turning point in the history of the church. Upon the persistent maintenance of these reading meetings the very life of the church seemed to depend. As an apparent result of this effort, the Society increased the sum voted for preaching from $\frac{1}{10}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ of one per cent on their taxable property.

In January, 1819, during the intermission one Sabbath, at "a reading meeting" at the house of Dea. Pease, Dudley Smith offered to give fifty dollars a year, if preaching could be secured all the time, or to give his proportion with any others. Acting on this suggestion, Elisha S. Fish, not then a member of the church, went round among the people and made strenuous efforts to get others to join in this movement. His journal kept at that time gives a minute account of his exertions and the varied reception he met.

Rev. Ezekiel Rich was employed the following season. He was a man of learning and strong mind: an able preacher, sound in doctrine, prudent in his measures, and very laborious in the cause of religion. He afterwards became insane, and died at the age of 70 years, somewhere in Connecticut. He resided at Troy, where he had been previously settled. He procured $25 aid for the church, from the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge. Through his influence also, assistance was obtained in 1820, from the New Hampshire Missionary Society, which was continued for more than thirty years, in sums varying from fifty to one hundred dollars.

Soon after Mr. Rich came here, June 3, 1819, after a prayer meeting, six Directors were chosen to provide the means for a system of Sabbath School instruction and regulate its management. The Committee consisted of Dea. Pease, Dea. Mark, Esq. Pease, Dr. Davis, Ildo Kilburn, and James M. Mark. June 7, these Directors chose two teachers, Esq. Pease and Anna Dort. What day the Sabbath School first met, I have found no distinct record, but in all probability it was June 13, 1819. June 29, Mr. Fish's journal states, "11 more scholars have united with the Sabbath School, making forty in the whole." Those above 16 years of age were organized into what was called a Christian Knowledge Society. The Sabbath School has been in operation ever since, save that it has sometimes been suspended during the winter.

Those who united with the church, during these 23 years after Mr. Fish's death, while they remained without a pastor, were as follows:—

David Bill, Susanna Bill, Lemuel Bingham, Lucy wife of Salmon Bixby, Betsey Bond, Mehetabel wife of Col. William Bond, David Brigham (afterwards Deacon,) and Sophia his wife, Abigail Fish, Sarah Fish, Widow Lois Gibbs, Amherst Hayward (afterwards Deacon,) and Polly his wife, Mary wife of Silvanus Hayward, Capt. Robert Lane Hurd and Lydia his wife, Dr. Benjamin Hosmer, Charles Livermore, Berzeleel Mack, William Mark (afterwards Deacon,) and Betsey his wife, Phineas G. Miller and Sally his wife, Jonathan Pease (afterwards Deacon,) and Anna his wife, Obadiah Pease and Lucy his wife, Oliver Pease, Hannah wife of Israel Plumley, Betsey wife of Dudley Smith, Betsey wife of Jesse Temple, Widow Olive Temple, Sophira Temple, Hannah wife of Eli Thayer, Harriet wife of Col. E. K. Webster, Mary Webster, Rebecca Whitcomb, Eleazer Wilcox Jr. and Esther his wife, Lumund Wilcox (afterwards Rev.), Mary Wilcox, and Betsey wife of Solomon Woods. Of these forty-two, only two are supposed to be now living; Sarah Fish, the widow of Dea. Amherst Hayward, and Hannah Locke the widow of Israel Plumley.

September, 1814, Jonathan Pease was chosen Deacon in place of Deacon Kilburn who died in 1810. July 8, 1819, William Mark was elected to fill the place of Dea. Blish who died in 1817.

For the next ten years, various preachers were employed, mostly in the Summer season. Rev. George Perkins preached here a few weeks, and was considered "a young man of more than ordinary promise." He gave the church six dollars towards a Sabbath School Library. Rev. Sylvester Cochran, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Antrim, was here one season, also Rev. George Freeman. Rev. Isaac Esty preached here two or three seasons. During his stay there were several added to the church. A Mr. Claggett, afterwards of Ludlow, Vt., was here about 1827. Rev. Moses Longley was a candidate for settlement in 1829.

Nov. 15, 1829, David Brigham was chosen Deacon in place of Jonathan Pease, who had died the January before.

In 1830, a parsonage was completed, the money being raised by subscription. It stood a few rods north of the old meeting house, (Map 82,) and is the same house that Daniel Smith now lives in. Dudley Smith gave three-quarters of an acre of land, and Amherst Hayward and David Brigham gave nearly the whole of the building material, while others subscribed liberally in money and labor.

March, 1830, the church voted to give a call to Rev. Ebenezer Chase from Enfield, in which the Society shortly concurred. The salary offered was "fifty dollars in the use of the parsonage, One hundred and fifty in produce and those articles of living Commonly wanted in a family, and one hundred dollars in money." It was also stipulated that if they could not make up the full sum, he should be allowed to obtain it by preaching for other societies a part of the time. Mr. Chase accepted this call and was installed Sept. 22, 1830. Lemuel Bingham, Eleazer Wilcox, and E. S. Fish were a Committee to provide for the Council. The ministers invited were Rev. Phineas Cooke of Lebanon, Rev. Isaac Robinson of Stoddard, Rev. S. S. Arnold of Alstead, Rev. Z. S. Barstow of Keene, Rev. Moses Gerould of East Alstead, and Rev. Job Cushman of Sullivan, none of whom are now living. Of the installation services there is no record. It is remembered however that Rev. Mr. Cooke preached the sermon, text Phil. 3: 18, and Rev. Mr. Cushman gave the Right Hand.

Rev. Ebenezer Chase "early became a Christian, having been led to anxiety for his own salvation, by seeing the anxiety of his mother concerning her eternal welfare, whom he had supposed had long been a Christian. In August, 1807, he began to preach under the care of the Free Will Baptist Church, and was ordained as an Evangelist in August, 1810. In 1809, he edited and published a monthly religious newspaper called the 'Religious Informer,' which was largely circulated in the Free Will Baptist connexion."

"The Christian courtesy of Rev. O. C. Whiton of Troy, N. Y., led to the removal of prejudices against Congregationalism; and after careful examination of the system, he united with the Windsor (Vt.) Association of Congregational ministers, Nov. 12, 1828."

April 26, 1833, he was dismissed from the church in Gilsun, at his own request, and labored with good success in Westmoreland for two years. He was pastor of the Congregational Church in West Tisbury, Mass., seven years, and subsequently four years in West Yarmouth, Mass., and several years in Eastham, Mass. "He was more than fifty years in the active duties of the ministry, preached more than eleven thousand sermons, and was blessed with many revivals."

The minister who gave him the charge at his ordination, said, "I charge you before God, when about to preach, never in any case put pen to paper, with a view to assist you in preaching, nor premeditate beforehand what you shall say; but trust entirely to God, who will teach you in the same hour what you shall speak."

Mr. Chase had an eminently spiritual mind, and was heartily devoted to his Master's service. His memory is fondly cherished by those who enjoyed his labors. His daughter writes:—

"Since my earliest recollection my father was an earnest student, always rising very early so as to have several hours for uninterrupted study before breakfast. He was also a faithful pastor, spending most of his afternoons in visiting his parishioners."

After the death of his first wife, his three boys, then aged 12, 10, and 8, "became much dissatisfied with the housekeeper. After consulting together the eldest went to his father as spokesman for the whole, and addressed him about as follows. 'Father, we want a mother. When other men lose their wife, they marry again, and we want to have you marry, for we want a mother.' Father replied, 'Well, my son, who would you like to have me marry?' 'We should like Eliza Patten for our mother,' was the reply, naming their school teacher." A few months later the marriage took place, "and she proved the wisdom of the children's choice. . . . At my father's death he left 7 children and 22 grandchildren. . . . Two of his sons have been editors of newspapers, one a preacher of the gospel, and the youngest is now a Professor of Music in New York. Two of his daughters have written poetry, some of which has been linked to music, and prose articles from the pen of one of them can be found in several religious papers and magazines."

This church had been so long without a pastor, that the coming of Mr. Chase was quite an event in their history. His labors here were productive of good resulting in considerable additions. During his pastorate the following persons, besides himself, united with the church:—

of Nathan Ellis, Eliza Gates, Laban Gates, William Hayward, Nancy wife of Hezro Hubbard, Ruthy wife of Ebenezer Isham, Electa wife of John Livermore, Lucy wife of Amasa Miller, Elisha H. Roundy, Hannah wife of John Roundy, Huldah widow of Jonathan Smith, David Sumner, Patty wife of Elijah Ware, Esther wife of Abijah Wetherbee, and Mary Ann wife of Oliver Wilson. Only four or five of these 23 are now living.

After the dismissal of Mr. Chase, Rev. S. S. Arnold from Alstead Center came to this church. Finding them much restrained in their usefulness, from the want of a place of worship of their own, inasmuch as the old house belonged equally to other denominations, he urgently advised to build in the village, and recommended the sale of the parsonage to assist in this enterprise. This was agreed to, and under his wise and efficient management the work went rapidly forward, and was completed in the Fall of 1834. The Committee for building were Rev. S. S. Arnold, Dudley Smith, Amherst Hayward, E. S. Fish, and Eleazer Wilcox, all of whom are now dead. A Committee from Keene consisting of Dr. Barstow, Dea. Jacquith, and Timothy Hall, located the Meeting House where it now stands. The cost was near $2000, and was paid through great struggles and self-denial, not only on the part of the larger subscribers, but of those who of their poverty cast in but little. Many contributions were received in small sums from those interested in the place, but resident elsewhere. Some also of the citizens, not members of the church or Society, kindly assisted in the enterprise. In 1820, Mrs. Mary Baker and her son James Ballard had presented the town with a large Bible to be kept in the desk of the old meeting house for the use of all denominations. This Bible is now in possession of Sidney Gates. When the new meeting house was built, Luther Ballard, adopted son of James Ballard, presented a Bible to this church, which remained in the pulpit, till becoming somewhat worn, it was taken for vestry use, and a new Bible for the pulpit was presented by Adam Brown of Wolfeboro, a personal friend of Rev. Mr. Wood.

This church owes a large debt of gratitude to Rev. Mr. Arnold. To his advice and leadership the present house of worship is almost entirely due. They would have been glad to have kept him as their pastor, and in November, 1835, gave him a formal call. But he declined to settle, thinking his duty called him elsewhere.

Rev. Seth S. Arnold spent his early life on the farm and in the business of tanning. He fitted for College largely under the instruction of his pastor, Rev. Sylvester Sage, but went to the Academy at Deerfield, Mass., a short time. He graduated at Middlebury College in 1812. The following year "he taught a select school at Bladensburg, Md., with the exception of the months of July and August, 1813, during which time he was first sergeant of a company of volunteers for the defence of Annapolis against British troops." Arms being scarce he carried a stick in place of a musket. This stick he had afterwards made into a cane which is now in possession of his only surviving daughter, Mrs. Gage of Ascutneyville, Vt. He studied Theology with Rev. J. Breckenridge of Washington, D. C., and with his pastor, Rev. S. Sage of Westminster, Vt. He was recommended as a candidate for the ministry by Windham Association, Sept. 27, 1814. He was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church in Alstead Center June 17, 1816. Here he continued for eighteen years and was blessed with three extensive revivals. During this period he was one of the Directors of the N. H. Missionary Society, and often engaged in missionary work among neighboring churches.

After leaving Alstead he came to Gilsun where he remained two years. His wise counsels and hearty assistance were of the greatest value to the church here.

In 1836 he returned to Westminster, Vt., to care for his aged father, now over ninety years of age. While here, he supplied the church in Walpole two years, and that in Westminster the same length of time. A powerful revival attended his labors.

After the death of his father, he preached four years in Halifax, Vt., from October 1852 to March 1856, two years in Roxbury, six years in West Townshend, Vt., from 1858 to 1864. At the age of 75, he retired from the ministry and removed to Ascutneyville, Vt., where he was "an active worker in the cause of Christ, in the Sabbath School, in prayer meeting, and visiting from house to house."

As a preacher, Mr. Arnold was instructive rather than sensational. His sermons were always prepared with care, in language simple, such as his hearers would readily understand. As a man he was of noble form, erect, and dignified in all his actions, courteous in his treatment of all men, a lover of hospitality, prudent of speech, a wise counselor, a true friend, in all respects a Christian gentleman. He was specially remarkable as a wise counselor and eminently skillful in adjusting and pacifying old difficulties and church quarrels. "Blessed are the peacemakers."

The new Meeting House was dedicated Nov. 11, 1834, and the occasion was made the beginning of a four days meeting. Rev. Mr. Arnold preached the sermon from 2 Chron. 6: 40, 41. The Hymns were the L. M. and C. M. versions of the 132^d Psalm. Rev. Z. S. Barstow offered the dedicatory prayer.

After Mr. Arnold left, Rev. William Hutchinson came in 1836, and in July, 1838, a call was extended to him, which he declined.

Rev. William Hutchinson was ordained at Bethlehem, Jan. 27, 1830. After three years he went to Dalton, where he remained two years before coming to Gilsum. While at Bethlehem and Dalton he also supplied the church at Whitefield. After leaving Gilsum, he went to Plainfield, where he was installed May 28, 1839, and where he died in 1842.

He was a godly, sincere man, of limited education, and very humble estimate of his own powers. He was a useful minister, not fearing to declare the whole counsel of God. He was in early life a successful teacher of music and had a fine voice both for speaking and singing.

He was unusually favored in his marriage relations. His first wife was "a very devoted self-sacrificing christian. In dying, she committed her four little ones to the care of a covenant keeping God, praying, that Nathaniel Merrill, a babe of six weeks, might 'become a vessel of mercy.'" It is worthy of notice that he is now a missionary. (Chap. 31.)

His second wife, Mrs. S. M. Bingham of Lempster, was a woman of rare gifts, and lovely christian character. She proved a mother indeed to the orphaned children. One of them testifies that she was "a faithful wife, a loving, conscientious mother to us all, a devoted christian woman, a bright light in society and church, an original thinker, born to lead. She was one in a hundred. With us she yet lives, her example will always be felt."

In 1839, a call was given to Rev. Henry White, which he accepted, but on assembling of the Council, unexpected opposition led him to take back his acceptance. He was a plain, practical man of sedate bearing, and apparently of very earnest piety; a sound preacher, but without the brilliant qualities which attract the multitude. He was the author of a valuable book called, "The Early History of New England." He labored here one year, and died somewhere in Maine, Dec. 8, 1858, aged 68 years.

In the following year several ministers preached for a short time. Rev. A. R. Livermore staid three months, and a call was given him which he declined. He is still living in Connecticut.

Rev. George Langdon preached here a year and a half but declined a call to settlement. He was a man of ability but feeble in health. It is not known whether he is now living or not. His name is not found in the list of Congregational ministers at the present time. He was a descendant of Capt. Samuel Gilbert.

Mr. Langdon's ministry closes a period of about ten years after Mr. Chase's dismissal, during which the meeting house had been built, and though there was no special revival, there had been some additions, and it was on the whole a season of prosperity and gradual increase of strength.

The following are the names of those who united with the church during this period:—

Mary Ann Arnold, Sophia Arnold, Elsea wife of Lemuel Bingham, Eliza Bragg, James Downing and Lydia his wife, James Downing, Jr., Susanna wife of John S. Farrar, Eunice Fish, Luna Foster, Rossa Gates, Lyman Gerould and Susan his wife, Elizabeth Hathhorn, Lydia Hodgkins, Lucy widow of Zachariah Howes, Arnold

Bryant Hutchinson and Martha his wife, Ebenezer Hutchinson and Thomasin his wife, Senah wife of Rev. William Hutchinson, Abijah Wilder Kingsbury (afterwards Deacon,) and Lovina his wife, Fanny Mark, Rachel wife of Dea. William Mark, Rachel Esther Mitchell, Ashbel Whitney Rouse, Nancy Smith, Orinda Smith, Mary Fiske wife of Capt. George W. F. Temple (afterwards Deacon,) Andrew Dexter Towne, Isaac Wallis and Susan his wife, Herriet L. Way, Eslier wife of Rev. Henry White, Hannah White, Julian Caroline White, Mary Emmons White, Edith wife of Joel Wilson, and Emeline Wood. Of these forty, sixteen are supposed to be living.

Soon after Mr. Langdon left, in the Spring of 1842, Rev. James Tisdale from Dublin was employed. Not wishing to settle, he was hired by the year and remained for seven years.

Rev. James Tisdale graduated at Brown University in 1821. He then taught an Academy at Darlington Court House, S. C., two years. He had embraced infidel views in College, but while teaching was converted "by reading the sermons of Dr. Emmons." He studied Theology with Rev. A. Cobb of West Taunton, Mass., and was approbated as a candidate for the ministry, Oct. 25, 1825. Sept. 29, 1830, he was ordained at Guildhall, Vt., where he remained six years. He next labored at Dublin for about the same length of time, till he came to Gilsun. After leaving Gilsun he went to Shutesbury, Mass., where he remained nearly eight years. He then removed to Tonica, Ill., where he preached two years. "His last labors were at Lowell, Ill., to the Congregational Church of Vermillion."

Mr. Tisdale was a man of learning and unusual ability. His preaching was not what would be called eloquent, perhaps, though sometimes well worthy the name, but it bore marks of deep thought, and careful research, and was eminently instructive. Few preachers impart so much instruction in a year as he. He was a man of strong passions, which he kept under such control that they were for the most part a power to increase his usefulness; while, if at any time his temper gave way for a moment, he was quick to apologize in the most satisfactory manner to whomever he might have offended. He won the good-will and respect of all who knew him. No one who lived near him could long remain his enemy. One neighbor who said in a passion, that Mr. Tisdale should not stay in town another year, tried the next year to have him sent to the Legislature.

Of intense radical convictions, he was an earnest reformer, embracing the causes of Anti-slavery and Total Abstinence in the days of their unpopularity. Very few men have done so much for the Temperance cause in Gilsun as Mr. Tisdale. He was also deeply interested in education, and held the office of Superintending School Committee four years. He had a very deep religious experience leading him to exalted views of God and his kingdom. His favorite Hymn was the 4th Select, commencing,

"Keep silence all created things,
And wait your Maker's nod,
My soul stands trembling while she sings
The honors of her God!"

He selected it to be sung at his funeral.

Many still remember the fervor with which he was accustomed to read this hymn, as also the 152^d Select, beginning,

"Now for a hymn of praise to God."

His heart was evidently set on the kingdom of Christ. He delighted to study the prophecies. In them he thought he found the richest food, the strong meat of the Bible, while the doctrines which many call strong and hard, he regarded as only "milk for babes in Christ." Remarkably clear and forcible in the presentation of the great doctrines, it was in the contemplation of the promised reign of Christ on the earth, that his heart warmed and his eye kindled, and he rose almost to ecstasy in view of the wonderful glories then to be revealed. He was accustomed in preaching and other instructions to speak much of entire submission to God, one of his most frequent expressions being, "We must make God all-in-all and ourselves nothing." His last days gave full evidence of this complete resignation to God's will. He thought much of the value and efficacy of prayer, and frequently referred to the "golden vials full of odors which are the prayers of saints." About a week before his death, the last time he was able to pray with his family, after praying individually for them, he prayed earnestly for each of the parishes where he had labored.

"A plain white marble slab marks his resting place, on the top of which is carved a hand holding a Bible open to the text, 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.'"

During Mr. Tisdale's ministry here, the debt of the society, $1,100, which had been incurred in building the meeting house, was paid up. There were also extensive repairs on the meeting house. The basement had been remodeled once or twice, and variously used for tenements. The town being without a Hall, an effort was made in 1849 to make arrangements to finish off rooms for their use in said basement. But the town declined to consider it. This period was as heretofore a time of self-denial and struggles to support the institutions of religion, yet, on the whole, it was a season of general prosperity to the church. The instructive preaching and private labors of Mr. Tisdale were by no means without effect. Though there was no marked revival, there was deep seriousness, an earnest religious thoughtfulness pervading the congregation, and eleven united with the church, whose names are as follows : —

Lydia Eveline Miller Abbott, Sarah Ann Church, Hannah More Fish, Martha Paige Fish, Mary Wilcox Fish, Anna Maria Temple, Mary the wife of True Webster, Charles Thomas Wetherby and Nancy his wife, Beulah Rizpah Wilcox, and Sally the wife of Eleazer Wilcox. Five of them are supposed to be still living.

June 1, 1846, Amherst Hayward was chosen Deacon in place of Dea. Brigham who had removed to Manchester.

Rev. Abraham Jackson from Walpole, supplied the pulpit one year, but did not care to reside here. He was an interesting and instructive preacher. He died in Connecticut, April, 1874, aged 82.

Rev. Ezra Adams, formerly of Surry, and afterwards of Roxbury, was then hired for a year, and in January, 1851, accepted a call on a salary of three hundred and twenty-five dollars. He was installed March 19, 1851. The services on the occasion were as follows: Scriptures and Prayer, Rev. Bezaleel Smith, Roxbury; Sermon and Installing Prayer, Rev. Dr. Barstow, Keene; Charge to Pastor, Rev. S. S. Arnold, Acworth; Right Hand, Rev. T. S. Norton, Sullivan; Address to People, Rev. J. Perkins, East Alstead; Concluding Prayer, Rev. Mr. Aspenwall of the Methodist Church, Gilsum.

Mr. Adams continued pastor till his death in 1864, having been settled 13 years, and having preached here nearly one year before. His death in the midst of life was one of those afflictive, and to us mysterious Providences, in which God seems to have forgotten the necessities of his people, and the interests of his own kingdom. A page in the church records is thus inscribed:

March 20th, 1864.

This day departed this life much lamented, our beloved Pastor, Rev. Ezra Adams, aged 54, having had this church under his charge Fourteen years.

There were present at his funeral six of the neighboring ministers. Rev. Dr. Barstow preached from Heb. 4: 9.

Rev. Ezra Adams graduated at Amherst College in 1835, and at East Windsor Theological Seminary in 1838. He was ordained pastor of the Church in Surry, Ap. 28, 1840. After three years he went to Roxbury where he labored seven years, and then removed to Gilsum.

In early life he was sickly, and he considered that his life was prolonged only by his strictly temperate habits. His schoolmates used to tell him, he would certainly be a drunkard because he refused to drink with the rest. But he answered that if he never tasted liquor, it would be impossible. He was a good scholar and a diligent student.

In a little volume which Mr. Adams wrote, entitled "Advice to an Enquirer, or Children led to Christ," we learn that he was early the subject of religious impressions, but being naturally diffident, he kept all to himself, and gave way to a self-righteous spirit; became opposed to God, and the humbling doctrines of his word. For some years he continued in that condition, when a pious friend spoke kindly to him of the interests of his soul, and the Holy Spirit enabled him to look to the Lamb of God. As a pastor and minister of Christ, all are ready to testify how faithfully and perseveringly he prosecuted his work: and how discreetly he demeaned himself in all things. The crowning excellence of this beloved man was self-denial and self-sacrifice. That the Missionary Society might be less burdened, he voluntarily relinquished its aid, and thus diminished the little pittance of a salary which he received.

His sermons were plain, practical presentations of the truth, clear and forcible, and especially free from any suspicion of cant or insincerity. Perhaps his most marked characteristic was a peculiarly unaffected simplicity, free from every semblance of sham. Of few men, in these days, could it as well be said, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." He was specially gifted in prayer, seeming to have a nearness and freedom of access to God, granted to but few. He was a wise and judicious counselor, prudent in worldly affairs, with a business tact rare among clergymen. He was beloved by his parish, and highly respected throughout the town for his sterling worth. He served thirteen years as Superintending School Committee.

Mr. Adams's ministry was one of marked usefulness. Through his efforts, and with no small self-denial on his part, as well as others, the aid received from the N. H. Missionary Society was given up, and the church has been self-sustaining ever since. The first year the aid was given up, it was found the tax would be a little more than $1\frac{3}{4}$ per cent on the taxable property. Mr Adams was unwilling the Society should be so burdened, and voluntarily reduced it to one per cent, thus giving up over forty dollars of his salary, and continued to give up from forty to seventy dollars annually till his death. Soon after his settlement, a revival occurred in which many additions were made to the church, including some of the most active present members. The number of elderly people then brought in was particularly noticeable.

The names besides his own were as follows: — Abigail the first wife of Rev. Ezra Adams, Alice Melissa the second wife of the same, William Bigelow Adams, Aaron Day and Jane his wife, Mary Louisa the wife of Franklin Downing, Elisha Snell Fish, Janette the wife of Moses Fish, Warren Foster and Jane his wife, Elmira the wife of Winsor Gleason, Claudius Buchanan Hayward and Mary Louisa his wife, Sarah Jane Hayward, Martha the wife of Philander Howland, John Livermore, Chilion Mack, Elbridge Smith (afterwards Deacon,) and Mary Ann his wife, Eunice Morse Smith, Rebecca the wife of Solomon Smith, George William Foster Temple (afterwards Deacon), Eliza Ann the wife of A. D. Towne, Sally the wife of Andrew Towne, Fanny the wife of Capt. Benjamin Ware, and Luther Abram Wilkins. Of these twenty-seven, 12 are now dead.

Nov. 3, 1864, Elbridge Smith was chosen to fill the office vacated by the death of Dea. Mark.

After Mr. Adams's death, the neighboring ministers supplied the pulpit for two months, for the benefit of the family. Having heard various candidates, it was finally agreed to hire Rev. E. B. Bassett, from Westmoreland. He remained here about two years, and removed to Washington, N. H., in 1866, and is now residing in Shutesbury, Mass. The following persons united with the church during his ministry: —

Lucy D. the wife of Daniel Downing, Emily Graham Hayward, Esther White Hayward, and Harriet Augusta the wife of Lyman G. Pierce, two of whom are still living.

In April, 1867, Rev. Horace Wood from Ossipee, who had been preaching here some months previous, was hired as stated supply, with a salary of three hundred and twenty-five dollars and the use of the parsonage, and continued here till August, 1875. At the beginning of his ministry a parsonage and lot was purchased, Dea. Hayward giving $500 for the purpose. Through the exertions of Mr. Wood $50 was obtained three successive years, from the Society for the promotion of Christian Knowledge, which was in part applied to help pay for the Parsonage. It cost $1,100, which has all been paid. The Meeting House was largely repaired, the basement remodeled into a comfortable vestry, and a new Cabinet Organ purchased, all involving an expense of something like $1,300. Mr. Wood obtained some assistance from abroad, and it should be specially noticed that many of those outside the church here generously aided in these important enterprises.

Rev. Horace Wood was converted in the great revival at East Alstead in 1827, when 80 united with the church, 7 of whom became ministers. His ancestry as far back as traced have been Christian people. On his mother's side the family is descended from the celebrated band of Waldenses who suffered the terrible persecutions of the 12th and 13th centuries.

Having chosen the ministry as his calling, in Sept. 1831 he set out on foot for Kimball Union Academy, at Meriden, intending to work his way through College. The first term he supported himself, using what he had earned during the Summer, and also continuing some manual labor at the school. He subsequently received aid from Funds given for the purpose of preparing young men for the ministry. After a little more than a year, his health failed from over-work, especially from studying by lamp-light. He was therefore obliged to suspend his studies for three years, and ultimately give up the idea of a Collegiate course. This, he terms the great trial of his life.

In 1836, his health had so far recovered that he was able to enter the Theological Seminary at Gilmanton, and was a member of the first class that graduated there.

He was ordained and installed over the Congregational Church in Dalton, July 10, 1839, where he remained six years, preaching also a part of the time in Whitefield. In 1845, he removed to Gilmanton, where he supplied the pulpit of the first Church for three years. In 1848, he began to preach for the Church at Center Ossipee, and was acting pastor there for fifteen years, having also supplied their pulpit in connection with Ossipee Corner one year more. Here he buried his first wife and their adopted daughter. He then resided two years at Ossipee Center, supplying the pulpit there and also at North Wolfeboro.

In August, 1866, he began at Gilsum, where he remained as acting pastor for nine years, six of which he served the town as Superintending School Committee, and where he still resides. His health having somewhat failed, he found himself obliged to give up preaching in the Spring of 1875, since which he has preached only rarely. For 36 years previous, he very seldom lost a Sabbath, and he frequently speaks of his great enjoyment in the work of the ministry, and his thankfulness to God for continuing him so long in it.

The Lord's Day, Oct. 27, 1872, being the Centennial Anniversary of the church, was commemorated by a discourse in the morning, by Rev. Mr. Wood. Text, — Ps. 48 : 12-14. Subject, — Zion's beauty, strength, and safety. The Lord's Supper was observed in the afternoon, and in the evening a manuscript sermon of the first pastor was read. It was preached by him Dec. 15, 1793. Text, — Exodus 3 : 14. On Monday following, Rev. Silvanus Hayward, then of South Berwick, Me., delivered an historical address which was published in pamphlet form, and from which a large part of the preceding church history has been taken.

During Mr. Wood's ministry the following persons besides himself united with the church : —

Ana Cuthbert, Margaret Cuthbert, Franklin Downing, William Hayward, Nancy Houston, George Learoyd and Ann his wife, Elmina wife of Chilion Mack, Vienna Dort Mack, Lydia Caroline wife of Chester Nichols, Lyman Gilbert Pierce, Mary wife of James Rawson, Hannah Theodosia Spaulding, Lucy widow of Asa Whittemore, Almira Wilder, Sarah Ann wife of Rev. Horace Wood, and Jane Elizabeth wife of George Wright, all but one of whom are still living.

In June, 1875, Rev. Silvanus Hayward supplied the pulpit for Mr. Wood. On the resignation of Mr. Wood he was invited to become the acting pastor of the church with a salary of a thousand dollars and the use of the parsonage. He continued to hold the office for four years. The most important action of the Church, during his ministry, was the adoption of new Rules, and the remodeling of the Creed and Covenant. None of the old doctrines were omitted, but were expressed more entirely in Scriptural language, and the conditions of membership were made such as to exclude no one who gives credible evidence of believing in the Lord Jesus Christ.

July 9, 1876, the Nation's Centennial was observed by the Church. The Meeting House was trimmed with evergreen and flowers. The pastor preached from Eccl. 7 : 10, and an interesting Centennial service was conducted by the Sabbath School.

The following persons besides himself, were received into the Church during Mr. Hayward's ministry. One has since died.

Sarah F. wife of Levi Barrett, Jane F. Crichton, Robert Cuthbert and Margaret H. his wife, Mason Guillow and Elizabeth C. his wife, Bell Hayward, Grace Hayward, H. Elvira wife of Rev. S. Hayward, Theron Hayward and Emilie E. his wife, A. J. Howard (now Deacon,) and Rizpah M. his wife, Francis C. Minor and Emily F. his wife, Gustave Polzer and Ardella R. his wife, Huldah B. wife of George B. Rawson, and Carrie H. wife of John A. Smith ; also Dea. Elbridge Smith and Mary A. his wife were received back from the church in Keene to which they had been dismissed.

METHODIST CHURCH.

The history of this church is necessarily imperfect, very few records having been found. For the following account I am largely indebted to Rev. S. E. Quimby, Clerk of the N. H. Conference, and President of the Seminary at Tilton.

Methodist preachers first came to Gilsum just about the beginning of the Century, possibly a year or two earlier. The first positive record is in 1801. Their meetings were first held in one of the private houses in the edge of Keene;—which house is not now known, perhaps in different places. Soon after, they came to Dea. Kilburn's, and held meetings in his house and barn. His daughter Jenima was the first person in Gilsum who joined their church. Afterwards they received many from different parts of the town. Some of their strongest supporters, as the Kilburns and the Blishes, came from the Congregational Church.

Rev. John Gove (Appendix E) was probably the first preacher. He was here in 1801, and it was through his influence that Elder Kilburn was converted. He was here also in 1803, and perhaps later. Rev. John or Joshua Crowel was here about the same time.

Rev. Martin Ruter, then only 16 years of age, preached here that year, and was considered "a prodigy." He was born in Charlton, Mass., Ap. 3, 1785. With no advantages for education, except the common school, his taste for study stimulated him to gather knowledge from every available source. Converted in 1799, the next year he was licensed to preach, and in 1801 was appointed on the Chesterfield circuit, during which appointment he preached in Gilsum. In 1803, he was ordained Deacon at the New York Conference, and the next year was stationed at Montreal. In 1805, at the age of 20, he was ordained Elder and appointed to Bridgewater circuit in N. H. The same year he married Sibyl Robertson of Chesterfield. He was afterwards stationed at Northfield, Portsmouth and Nottingham, and in 1808 at Boston, Mass. In 1809, he returned to N. H. and married Ruth Young of Concord. He was appointed to Portland, Me., in 1811, and afterwards resided at North Yarmouth, Me., "and preached in the vicinity." In 1815, he was at Salisbury, Mass., and two years following at Philadelphia, Penn. "In 1818, the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by Asbury College, Baltimore, Md., and he was appointed to take charge of New Market Wesleyan Academy. In 1820, he was elected Agent of the Cincinnati Book Concern and honored with the degree of D. D. by the University at Lexington, Ky." In 1828 he was appointed President of Augusta College, Ky. Four years later he resigned, and was stationed at Pittsburg, Penn. "In 1834 he was appointed President of Alleghany College, where he remained until, at his own request, he was sent a missionary to Texas in 1837, and was appointed by Bishop Hedding, Superintendent of the Texas Mission. Having accomplished the object of his mission, he started for home, but was taken sick and died at Washington, Tex., May 16, 1838. He was buried there, and a handsome monument erected by public subscription, marks the spot."

He was a man of rather feeble constitution, much devoted to God, more than ordinary preaching abilities, very studious;—a self-taught scholar, he was not only acquainted with his mother tongue, but had a good knowledge of the Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and French languages, and paid some attention to the Arabic and Persian.

Bishop Hedding, who knew him intimately, says, "He was never known, accused, or even suspected of having done a mean action."

Rev. Thomas Barlin preached here in 1802, and Rev. John Tinkham in 1804 and 1805.

Rev. Elijah Hedding preached here about 1806, and four years after, married a daughter of Dea. Blish "and took up his residence at Winchester." "As a boy he evinced more than ordinary physical and mental power, and an adventurous spirit. He led a somewhat wild life" till his conversion in 1798. Having preached two years under license, he was admitted to the N. Y. Conference in 1801. In 1803, he was on the Bridgewater circuit in N. H. In 1807–8, he was Presiding Elder on the N. H. District, and the following year on the New London District. He was stationed three times at Boston, Mass., also at Lynn, Mass., and Portland, Me. In 1821–2, he was Presiding Elder on the Boston District. "In 1824, contrary to his own strongly expressed wishes, he was elected Bishop, and brought to the position all that zeal, devotion, industry, and strength of purpose, which characterized his previous life."

"His family residence was in Lynn, Mass., from 1824 to 1837, when he removed to Lansingburg, N. Y., and in 1842 to Saratoga Springs, from there in 1844 to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he died."

David Kilburn says, "He was a man of commanding appearance, large and well-built frame, manners perfectly simple, and yet dignified, energetic, and a truly great and good man."

Almost nothing can now be told of the next thirty years of Methodism in Gilsum. There was preaching from time to time, in private houses, and at the old Meeting House, but we have no record of appointments here.

In August, 1829, a Camp Meeting in charge of Elder John W. Hardy was held in the woods south of the old Keene road, above the Kilburn place, very near the town line. The spring stoned up for their use, also several stone fire-places for cooking can still be seen. (See map.)

About 1834, meetings were held in Day's Hall at the Factory Village, and at the house of Capt. John Taylor. One of the more prominent Methodist preachers at that time was

Rev. William H. Brewster. — a native of Claremont, — "a self-made man," entering the ministry at the age of 21. Early espousing the cause of Anti-slavery, in the struggles which arose he was led to sever his connection with the Methodists, and joined the Congregationalists. "A greater part of his ministerial labor has been in cities, — twelve years in Lowell, Mass. : five years in Providence, R. I. ; eleven years in Cleveland, Ohio." Since 1868, he has labored in various fields in Illinois, and is now at Blue Island, near Chicago. "During 45 years of ministry, he has been absent from his pulpit only a few Sabbaths on account of ill health, has taken but four vacations, neither of which exceeded four weeks, is now able to preach twice on the Sabbath and attends S. School."

At a Quarterly Meeting held in Gilsum in November, 1835, Rev. Lorenzo D. Barrows first received a "local preacher's license," and is remembered to have preached here occasionally while located at Keene soon after. At the time of his death in 1878, he was President of Tilton Seminary, and had for many years held a prominent position in the M. E. Church.

In November, 1842, Rev. Samuel S. Dudley came to Gilsum and held meetings at the South School House. Quite a revival followed, bringing in the young people especially. The following year, he organized the Methodist Episcopal Church in Gilsum. Mr. Dudley was stationed here again in 1859, and after laboring in various fields, is now at Fitzwilliam.

In 1845, the meetings were held in Dort's Hall, and many conversions were reported, some of whom went to the Baptists. Very soon after, the movement for a Meeting House was taken hold of in earnest. The work was accomplished in 1848, at a cost of $1,450. The building Committee were Milton Silsby, Osman McCoy, and Justus Chapin. In 1876, this House was sold to the Town for $700.

The ministers stationed or laboring here after Mr. Dudley were as follows : —

Rev. Henry C. Henricus was here a short time in 1847. The next year Rev. Amos S. Tenney took his place. He was followed in 1849-50 by Rev. Nathaniel W. Aspenwall who subsequently removed to Vt., where he died. Rev. Joseph Hayes who joined the N. H. Conference in 1840 was stationed here in 1851-2, and after laboring in various places is now at North Charlestown. Rev. John M. Blake was stationed here the next two years. For the next six years Gilsum was classed with churches in the neighboring towns. In 1860-1, Elder Kilburn, then residing in Keene, supplied the church. Rev. A. K. Howard now at South Acworth began here in 1864, and continued his services about three years. Rev. James Fitch from Conn. preached here a year or two, returned to Conn., and is reported to have become a Congregationalist. Rev. A. J. Howard subsequently preached for this church some two or three years. In 1869, they were supplied by Rev. H. W. Merrill who afterwards became a Baptist. The last regular supply of this church was Rev. G. A. Tyrell in 1870-1.

The Conference reports give the membership here mostly in connection with some neighboring church. The largest number separately reported is 41 in 1861. The last report gives 25 in 1874. About this time, the church was disbanded, and its membership was transferred to the M. E. Church at Marlow.

The following list is as nearly complete as it can be made from memory of aged persons, and a few of the later records now in possession of F. A. Howard, Esq. : —

Mary A. Austin, Robert Austin, Thomas Austin and Lucy his wife, Wesley Austin and Emily his wife, Hiram Baldwin and Elvira his wife, Dimmis S. Banks, Eliza V. Banks, Charles M. Barrett, Mary Ella Barrett, Ebenezer Bill and Elsea his wife, Emily Bill, Anna Blish, David Blish, Jr., John Blish, Lucy Blish, Lucy wife of Dea. David Blish, Zeruah Blish, Lucinda wife of James Bolster, Ansel Borden, Mrs. Selden Borden, Sen., Reuben Brown and Sena his wife, Davis Carpenter and Livonia his wife, Jedediah Carpenter and Eunice B. his wife, Fanny Chapin, Martha Chapin, Charles Cobb and Louisa his wife, Dolly wife of Abram Converse, Loena Converse, Sophronia wife of Charles E. Gunn and Martha A. his wife, E. Nelson Gunn, Martha E. Gunn, Mary L. Gunn, widow Polly Gunn, Eunice Hall, Sarah H. wife of Rev. Joseph Hayes, Edith T. Hayward, Mary Hendee, Fanny Houghton, Daniel Howard and Sally his wife, Francis A. Howard (steward) and Eliza E. his wife, Francis C. Howe and Sarah his wife, Ebenezer Jones, Mary A. and Rhoda Elvira his wives, John Clark Kendrick and Rebecca his wife, Clarissa Kilburn, Rev. David Kilburn, Ildo Kilburn and Abigail his wife, Polly Kilburn, Dr. Timothy S. Lane and Mary his wife, Dr. I. Albert Loveland, Nabby Loveland, Sally Loveland, Sarah T. wife of Israel B. Loveland, Stephen Mansfield and Nancy his wife, Luther W. F. Mark (steward) and Emily Z. his wife, Elizabeth wife of George H. McCoy, Hattie E. McCoy, Osman McCoy (steward) and Miranda L. his wife, Francis C. Minor (steward) and Emily his wife, Abigail M. Nash, Elizabeth wife of Jacob D. Nash, Hannah Nash, John Nash and Ruth his wife, George K. Nichols (steward), John B. Otis and Mary C. his wife, Calvin Randall and Sarah his wife, Ivory Randall and Sally his wife, Peter Rice and Lucy his wife, Milton Silsby and Betsey his wife, John H. Sparhawk, Catherine H. Taylor, Caty L. wife of Capt. John Taylor, Elneline Taylor, Simeon Taylor and Eunice his wife, Fanny M. wife of Milan Towne, Charles T. Townsend, Martha wife of Capt. Benjamin Ware, Rachel S. wife of David Ware, Samuel B. Ware, Theoda Ware, Amos Weeks, Butler A. Whittemore and Julia A. his wife, Maria C. Whittemore, George W. Willis, Harriet C. Wilson, Mary wife of Calvin Wilson, Jonathan Winch, Oren Wyman and Robert P. Young. About sixty of these 137 are supposed to be still living.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

There seems to have been no preaching regularly by the Baptists in this town, till a comparatively recent date. Persons of that persuasion went to Alstead, at first, where Elder Higbee was pastor. Probably there was occasional preaching by him and others in some parts of Gilsun, but the principal Baptist influence that extended to Gilsun, was from meetings held in the north part of Sullivan by Elder Higbee, and others, about the beginning of the present century. Feb. 11, 1806, a "Baptist Society" was organized at Sullivan. There are 21 names signed to the Constitution, but there are no means of determining just how many joined at that time. Of these names the following seven will be recognized as Gilsun men : —

Antipas Maynard, Benjamin Thompson, Daniel Converse, Israel Loveland, John Borden, Selden Borden, John Withington.

As appears from the names in records of subsequent meetings there were others that afterwards joined, but their names are not signed to the Constitution. The first year, thirty dollars was raised for preaching, which was paid to seven different individuals for 15 days' preaching at the "north school house in Sullivan." Jan. 14, 1808, a Council was convened in Sullivan, (whether at the School House, or at a private house the records do not state,) "In pursuance to letters missive from the Baptist Brethren in Sullivan and Gilsun." The churches in Alstead, Dublin and Swanzey were the only ones represented. Elder William McCuller of Swanzey was chosen Moderator, and Brother Charles Cummings of Dublin, Clerk. The Council proceeded to organize the "Sullivan Baptist Church." The names of the original members cannot now be distinguished from those who afterwards joined. Almost no records were kept till 1831, or if kept, have not been preserved. Oct. 9, 1809, Daniel Converse was chosen Deacon. March 15, 1810, the Church gave a call to Charles Cummings, "to take upon you the office of Elder or Evangelist or an Itinerant Preacher but at the same time to take the care of this Chh." A Council was called to meet Oct. 23, and the ordination took place on the 24th. Elder Cummings seems to have supplied the church for nearly twenty years. The sum raised each year for the support of preaching was from $35 to $60, to secure preaching half the time. The services were in the north school house, the center school house, and the Meeting House, when they could get it. As in other places, the Meeting House belonged to the town, and was for a long period divided among the different denominations according to their proportion of taxes. The latter part of this period they also secured a Hall at Sullivan Center.

In 1840, the Constitution of the Society was revised, and of the twenty who became members from that time, the following belonged to Gilsum: —

Stephen Foster, Jr., Hartley Thurston, David Randall, Timothy Dort, Winsor Gleason, George W. Foster, and Jesse Dart.

In 1839 and 1840, the Society raised $150 on condition of having preaching all the time. The sums subsequently raised, varied from $30 to $85 till 1849, after which no money was raised by vote, only by subscription. There was a vote each year, however, appropriating "a part or all of our fund money for the support of the gospel." What this fund money was, I have been unable to find out. For the last few years the Society is called "the First Baptist Society of Sullivan and Gilsum," though there is no record of a vote to make the change. The last Society meeting was "at Jesse Dart's in Gilsum," Jan. 3, 1859, at which only ordinary routine business was recorded.

Sept. 14, 1836, the Church "Voted to give Brother Arnold Kingsbury a call to ordination & settlement over Sullivan & Nelson Church in connection." He was accordingly ordained by a Council Nov. 2, 1836, Rev. John Woodbury of Swanzy being Moderator, and Rev. Frederick Page of Hancock, Scribe.

Aug. 25, 1839, the Church "Voted to give Bro. D. P. French a call to ordination as an Evangelist." A Council representing fourteen churches was convened and the ordination took place Sept. 4, 1839. Rev. David Gage of Washington was Moderator and Rev. John Peacock of Keene, Scribe. The sermon was preached by Rev. John Woodbury of Hancock.

In 1841, Rev. Sem Pierce was employed and remained for about two years.

Somewhere about 1848, the records fail to show when, this Church and Society held its meetings in the Methodist Meeting House at Gilsum. Rev. Henry Archibald was their pastor. Rev. John Peacock, an evangelist, labored here in the winter of 1852-3. The Society became small and unable to sustain preaching. The last Church record is the following: —

Gilsum Aug. 15 — 61.

Met at Brother Goodhues [in Alstead] 2 Choes Bro. Rawson Moderator S Foster Clerk protem 3 Chose S Foster Committee to look after the Church property now belonging to the church and dispose of it at his discretion for any worthy Baptist Church or to the cause of domestic Missions

4 Voted to adopt the following Preamble and resolutions

Whereas in view of the changes in our circumstances & the many obstacles in the way of our further honorable & useful existence as a church, it has become our settled conviction that our organization should cease, therefore,

Resolved That, when proper letters of dismission shall have been provided all our members in regular standing upon which they may unite with neighboring sister churches, — this church be disbanded, its organised existence ceasing.

Resolved That the Clerk be directed to furnish such letters in behalf of the church.

The Gilsum members of this church, so far as the records show, have been the following, — in order of record : —

Daniel Converse, Selden Borden, Antipas Maynard, Stephen Foster, Jr., Luther Hemenway, Luther Hemenway, Jr., Solon W. Eaton, Otis Ammidon, Francis Bolster, Ephraim Howe, Francis Howe, Asbury Howe, Asa Howe, John Q. A. Ware, Jesse Dart, George W. Foster, Henry Archibald, David Randall, Elizabeth Maynard, Delliiah Converse, Finis Hemenway, Betsey Banks, Lucena G. Thompson, Nancy B. Foster, Cynthia Hemenway, Phila Corey, Susan Farrar, Julia H. Dort, Mrs. E. Howe, Mary Towne, Mary Ann Bolster, Olive Bolster, Maria T. Dart, Susanna Farrar, Mary Isham, Mary Farrar, Luthera P. Randall, David Randall, A. Jackson Thurston, Timothy Dort, Hartley Thurston, Windsor Gleason, Jr., Lydia Thompson, Fanny Livermore, Martha A. Livermore, Angela M. Gleason.

UNIVERSALISTS.

There has never been any church of this order in Gilsum. The doctrine was brought here about the beginning of the Century. Rev. Zebulon Streeter of Surry was one of the most prominent Universalist preachers in this and the neighboring towns. When the Meeting House was divided, the Universalists claimed their share of the time. There has been but little preaching, otherwise than occasional funerals in families devoted to this belief. The most active and efficient disseminator of this doctrine was the wife of Major Bill. Whatever Universalism has existed in Gilsum to this day, is probably due more to her influence than to all other causes combined. At the present time, though perhaps no member of a Universalist Church can be found here, yet many if asked of their belief would probably call themselves Universalists.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The entire lack of records renders the available history of this Church exceedingly meagre. The following sketch has been picked up here and there, but has been mainly furnished by Elder A. J. Howard : —

The doctrines of this Church were first introduced to Gilsum by Elders E. B. Rollins and John Smith, two young men who came to Gilsum in 1818, and held meetings in private dwellings and school houses. "A reformation followed their labors, the outgrowth of which was the organization of the Christian Church." The exact date of its organization is not known. Candidates for membership were expected to relate "their religious experience and give evidence of leading a new life." They were then baptized, "taking the Scriptures as their only creed, believing that 'all Scripture is given by inspiration of God,' being 'able to make wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.' There was not a uniformity of belief, each individual interpreting scripture according to his own understanding, fellowship being based on Christian character. This view was then deemed dangerous and unwise, and met with much opposition." The doctrines taught were looked upon by other denominations "as little less than heresy," and some "deemed it duty to discountenance their teachings in every form."

In 1835, and again in 1837, protracted meetings were held at the Old Meeting House, and in the Boarding House Hall. The principal speakers were Elder Rollins and Rachel Hosmer, daughter of Dr. Hosmer. Elder Rollins remained here several years and re-organized the church not entirely to the satisfaction of some of the old members.

"The history of this Church is about what must be expected of any feeble church without a house to worship in, and without means to support preaching, sometimes trying to live, and then so near dead that hardly any signs of life remained, one after another having passed away, till the Church lost its visibility." Of the surviving members a few remain without any particular church connection, but most have joined other churches, several coming to the Congregational Church, when they found the conditions of membership had become such as to involve no sacrifice of conscientious principle in so doing. (Page 116.)

The principal preachers of the Christian Church in Gilsuim have been the following : —

Elder Edward B. Rollins was originally from Andover. "He entered the Christian ministry in 1815, and traveled and preached in twenty-three States of the Union, also in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Canada, and delivered more than fourteen thousand public addresses. He was editor of 'The Vermont Luminary,' Randolph, Vt., 1826; and 'The Green Mountain Eagle,' Wilmington, Vt., 1850. He was also in the service of his country in the war of 1812."

He believed he was called to the gospel ministry and went forth into the world, and preached that men should repent and turn to God. He was a man of noble personal appearance, with strong intellectual powers, and a good voice, having much power in the gift of song. He was an able debater thoroughly versed in the scriptures, they being to him the foundation of all religious truth. His solemn appeals were made in scripture language, and being accompanied by the Spirit, moved the hearts of those that heard.

Elder John Smith was a son of Samuel Smith. (Chap. 36.) "He was spoken of as a devoted minister of Christ," and died somewhere in New York, leaving four sons. Elder Jacob B. Burnham lived in Walpole, where he married Betsey Dickey, — preached here at times, but never resided in Gilsuim. Elder Josiah Knight preached here for a time, when he was a young man residing at Dea. James Mark's. Elder Seth Allen resided in Marlow and preached here after Elder Knight left. Elder Ira R. Pettengill also resided in Marlow and supplied the Church here for a time. Elder Jared Greene lived at Dea. James Mark's, and his wife taught school. Elder Bennett Palmer lived here two or three years. He afterwards went to Marlow and was chosen Representative to the Legislature. Elder Amos Stevens was here when a young man and lived at Dea. Brigham's. He removed to Ohio. Elder Daniel Winchester was from Westmoreland. He lived here about four years, and removed to Vermont. He came back in 1842, and introduced the teachings of Elder Miller. Elder Charles E. Baker was a farmer here for about twelve years, and preached for this church, as opportunity offered. He removed to Concord and afterwards to Massachusetts, where he died. Elder John Spaulding was here with Elder Hendee, and worked at awl-making for Elder Hemenway.

Elder Jehiel P. Hendee was a native of Randolph, Vt., and a wheelwright by trade. He had only a common-school education, but having some natural gifts as a speaker, he was encouraged by his brethren in the Christian Church to enter the ministry. He accordingly became a preacher, and as such was a member of the Christian Conference but was never ordained. From 1831 to 1833 he resided in Stowe, Vt., where he published the "Christian Summary." He soon after went to Middlesex, Vt., and in 1835 came to Gilsuim and remained about three years. He then removed to Morrisville, Vt., and afterwards to Lowell, Mass., returning to Morrisville in 1845, where he died at the comparatively early age of 45.

Though never ordained or permanently located as pastor of a church, he frequently preached with acceptance in the various towns of his residence. "He was a very upright man, — had good abilities as a writer and minister, — was an excellent debater, and was an abolitionist from the start of that party, and was also a thorough and strong temperance man and advocate."

(For Elders Hudson, Hemenway, and Howard, see Chaps. 36-7-8.)

In the absence of records the following list of Gilsuim members of the Christian Church is as nearly complete as memory will admit : —

Aaron Brigham and Charlotte his wife, William Campbell and Nancy his wife, Simon Carpenter and Anna his wife, David Chapin, Fanny Chapin, Joseph M. Chapin and Dimmis his wife, Justus Chapin (afterwards Deacon) and Annis his wife, Martha Chapin, Rebecca Chapin, Huldah Clark, Jonathan Clark and Delilah his wife, Joseph Clark and Rizpah his wife, Mercy Clark, Polly Clark, Samuel Clark and Sally his wife, Ira Emerson Comstock, William E. Comstock, Abram Converse, Daniel Converse and Ruth his wife, Deliverance Converse, Polly Converse, Rosanna Converse, Sally Converse, David Dean, Moses Farnsworth, Mason Guillow and Ormaclinda his wife, Artemas P. Hemenway, Luther Hemenway and Finis his wife, Josiah Hendee, Andalusia Howard, Andrew J. Howard and Rizpah his wife, Harriet P. Howard, Mary Catherine Howard, Thomas Howard and Pamela his wife, Betsey Isham, Polly Isham, Rebecca Isham, Esther Loveland, Syrena E. Loveland, Chilion Mack, Capt. Solomon Mack and Esther his wife, Solomon Mack, Jr., and Adeline his wife, Betsey Mark, James Mark (afterwards Deacon) and Lois his wife, Louisa Mark, Luther W. Mark and Mary his wife, Orinda wife of Waldo May, Asa Nash (afterwards Deacon,) David Smith and Lucy his wife, Samuel Smith, Benjamin Thompson and Anna his wife, Hannah Thompson, John Thompson and Sally his wife, Julia Thompson, Lydia Thompson, Polly Thompson, Jonathan Twining and Eliza A. his wife, Elijah Ware, Mary wife of David Ware, Samuel White and Abigail his wife, Abigail White, and Lucy Whitney. Of these 84 about twenty are supposed to be living.

MORMONS, OR LATTER DAY SAINTS.

The fact that Lucy Mack, the mother of Joseph Smith, was a native of Gilsum, and that her brother and his family resided here, was undoubtedly the principal cause of the introduction of Mormonism into Gilsum. In 1836, Joseph Smith, Sen., father of "the prophet," and his brother John, visited their relatives in Gilsum, and vainly endeavored to convert them to their new doctrines. In 1841, Elders E. P. Maginn and Austin Cowles came and held a protracted meeting in the old Meeting House. They received 16 converts from this and the neighboring towns. A church was organized, called "Gilsum Branch of Latter Day Saints." The exact date of organization is not known. The first record is dated "Tuesday Morning 8 O'clock A. M. October 1842." Meetings were held in the following years at Dort's Hall and various other places, with considerable success. The Elders seem to have been itinerant. The following Elders are named in the records, as being here, during the history of "Gilsum Branch": E. P. Maginn, Austin Cowles, Ormus Bates, Luther Reed, Charles A. Adams, and Jesse C. Little. The records are evidently incomplete. The first recorded choice of President of the Gilsum Branch is that of Elder Adams, Ap. 30, 1843. Chilion Mack was the only Clerk. In August following, Elder Little was chosen President, and apparently continued in office as long as the "Gilsum Branch" retained its organization. After five or six years this Branch got into quarrels in matters of discipline. The cause is not clear in the record, but old members say it was connected mainly with the subject of intemperance. The records of the new Branch intimate that the trouble was an unwillingness on the part of some, to submit to the church authorities. In 1849, Elder Joseph Grover, recommended by the "Twelve Apostles," came to Gilsum, and after holding meetings and investigating the troubles, organized a new Branch, at the dwelling House of Solomon Mack, Jr., May 26, 1849. After some appropriate remarks by Elder Grover Showing the importance of saints being united and living in love and fellowship with each other that our faith may be strengthened, and that we instruct one another in principles of Righteousness as we shall obtain information through the means prepared of God for that purpose even through his Servants possessing the Priesthood and the Revelations which are or shall be given for the benefit of the Saints in the Last Days

That such Love and union does not exist in the Gilsum Branch is plain and obvious to every thinking mind and contention is calculated to destroy the Saints. Therefore it is not wisdom to introduce new members into a branch full of contention. And as there are members that do not belong to any Branch we will Organise a branch to be Called the Cheshire County Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

To be subject to the proper Authority of said Church at all times

The following persons were then Organised as a branch under the above name

Joseph Grover and his wife Rebecca D Grover Willard S Cady and wife Abigail M Cady by appointing Joseph Grover President and Willard S Cady Clerk

Recommended that we pray for the Constituted Authority of said Church uphold and sustain them for where the Priesthood and records with a majority of the Church goes there is the true Church Therefore we discontinue all Apostacy from the Presidency and Council of said Church

we will uphold the Chorum of the Twelve Apostles and all the Chorum of the church

We will hold ourselves ready at all times to Abide by the council and instruction of the above named Authority

And that all shall be united for union is our motto Peace our theme the Glory of God and Salvation of Man our object

May the Blessings of Heaven and Earth Attend us in our Prayer in the name of Jesus, Amen

A part of these original members, and some received soon after, were those who had been excluded from the Gilsum Branch. Having been duly organized, they speedily retaliated, at a Conference held in Dort's Hall, July 21 and 22, 1849, by cutting off the remaining members of Gilsum Branch. At this conference much was said about sustaining the authority of the church, and the ostensible reason for the exclusion of these members was for "rejecting authority, and quiriling. . . . for slander and abusing the authority of the church and for apostacy, &c. &c." Elder Solomon Mack was chosen President, which office he held as long as any organization was sustained. This Branch seems to have been very inactive as there are almost no records till Aug. 21, 1855, when the Branch was "ReOrganized by Martin H. and E. M. Peck." Solomon Mack was re-elected President, and John Young, Clerk. In 1856, Benjamin H. Horton was chosen Clerk and no other has since been chosen. In 1857, the Branch was visited by "Elder Wm. H. Branch on a Mission from Utah to the State of New Hampshire," who re-baptized most of the members. The remaining records consist mainly of visits by various messengers from Utah, and baptisms, re-baptisms, and ordinations.

The resident members of the Gilsum Branch as shown by the records in order of joining, were the following :—

The original members of the Cheshire Co. Branch were :—

Joseph Grover, Rebecca D. Grover, Willard S. Cady, Abigail M. Cady, Solomon Mack, Jr., and Adaline K. Mack.

Of those not members of the Gilsum Branch, the following are recorded :—

Lorena Howard, John H. A. Young, Elisha Nash, George S. Howard, Deliverance Nash, J. W. Pierce, Benj. H. Horton, Andrew I. Gates, Ellen Gates, Lucy Gates, and John Dustin.

Under the re-organization of 1857, there were only eight resident members, with no new names. Some other of our citizens are reported to have been baptized by Elder Mack, but these are all that the records show.

We find also the record of the following ordinations of Gilsum men :—

At Walpole Ap. 13, 1844, William Campbell and Luther S. Hemmenway. At Peterboro', July 13 or 14, 1844, "Under the hands of Elder's Brigham Young & Orson Pratt," Solomon Mack, Zenas D. Metcalf, Stephen Foster, Elisha Foster, Alvah Foster, Chilion Mack, and Asa Nash. July 1 1857, Heman Gates, by William Walker and Solomon Mack. At Philadelphia, Penn. Dec. 25, 1856 Solomon Mack was ordained to the High Priesthood, by Elders John Taylor and N. H. Felt.

No meetings have been held for a long time, and most of these members have apparently fallen away from Mormonism, some to other churches, and some to no church. It is impossible to say how many quietly retain their faith in the Mormon church. Elder Mack is the only one who openly maintains the doctrine at present. John H. A. Young and his wife Edna, William Campbell and his wife Nancy, Luther S. Hemmenway and his wife Elvira, went to join the body of the faithful at Utah. Several of them perished on the way. Elder Solomon Mack went as far as Kansas, but his family not being willing to go with him, he returned home.

MILLERISM.

The first preaching of this doctrine in Gilsum was in October, 1842, by Elder Daniel Winchester. As is well known, the day on which the world was to come to an end was set in April, 1843. Meetings were held almost every night through the winter. There was great excitement among a certain class in the community, and many baptisms took place. No list of those embracing this delusion can now be given. Nor would it be desirable. Finding themselves deceived, not many could be again cajoled by the fixing of another day. The excesses of disorder, and squandering of property authentically reported in many other places did not, however, reach Gilsum to any considerable extent. It is not known that any here continued their belief for more than a year or two. Alden Greene was a devoted Seventh Day Adventist.

SPIRITUALISTS.

There never has been any organization of this belief in Gilsum. There are, however, a few holding its doctrines, and there have been occasional sittings, and "spiritual manifestations," to the satisfaction of the believers.

CHAPTER XXI.

SCHOOLS.

"There stands in every country town
A school house and a church,
The parson with his awful frown,
And he who wields the birch."

Who was the first to "wield the birch" in Gilsum cannot now be told. All the school history prior to 1790, remains in oblivion. There can be no doubt, however, that schools were maintained here long before that time. They were at first held in private houses. The winter school was considered of principal importance, and was always taught by a man. The celebrity of a "master" depended largely on his being able to "thrash the big boys." Every boy went to school till he was of age, and sometimes longer: so that there were generally, in those days of large families, from six to twenty full grown young men in the school. Successfully to manage these was no light task. Only the younger children attended the summer school, all that were large enough being kept at work in the house and field.

Rachel Bill, the oldest child of Maj. Bill, and afterwards the wife of William Baxter, was a famous "school ma'am," having been employed with great success in Gilsum, Keene and Sullivan, nearly every summer from 1787 to 1800. The certificate of which the following is a copy, is in possession of her grand-nephew, George Hammond:—

These may certify whom it may concern That having examined Miss Rachel Bill concerning her qualifications for a Schooldame cannot but judge her a person qualified for that business and as such do hereby recommend her wherever a door shall be opened for her improvement

Gilsum may 30th 1794

Clement Sumner

Silvanus Hayward was a prominent teacher in this and the neighboring towns for many years. Obadiah Root, nephew of Mrs. Major Bill, was another of the early "school masters." "Squire Hammond" was eminent as a teacher for many years. Somewhat later, "Squire Pease," and "Capt. Lord Mack" were successful pedagogues. Others, perhaps equally prominent, are too numerous to mention. No doubt many anecdotes of those early school days might have been preserved that would add interest to this volume. But they are mostly forgotten now.

To read and spell and write, beginning with straight lines and "pot hooks" followed by "coarse hand" nearly half an inch in height, and to "cipher," were all the best masters thought of teaching. Geography came in soon, and Grammar worked its way slowly into the schools, in the first part of the present century. Now, there is scarcely a branch of study taught in our Colleges, but may be sometimes found in our district schools. Too many, however, only skim over the surface, and actually acquire less valuable knowledge than in those early days.

It has already been seen that the charter made provision for the support of schools, by granting one share of 250 acres for that purpose. This share was "No. 1 and No. 2 in the 12th Range and the East half of No. 2 in the 11th Range," also half of the 2nd Lot 3^d Range in "the second division." (Map, page 24.) In 1794, the town

Voted to sell the School Rite of Land Belongin to the town Mr Samuel Whitney John Mark Zadok Hurd David Blish Be a Committe to Sell S^d Land

No account of the sale is found. The only record referring to it is in 1798, as follows : —

Voted that David Blish Ceep the Notes Recd for the School Right Choose Cap^t Hurd Majah Bill David Blish a Committe to take Care of the Money Recd for the School Right.

It appears by the following records from the Treasurer's Book, that this Committee loaned it out in small sums : —

Intrests Money for 1799
		Cent
Samuel Mark	$3 — 45
Jonathan Clark	1 — 95
Jedidiah Carpenter	6 — 20
Elijah Bond	2 — 70
Elezer Willcox	3 — 70
James Nash	2 — 0
	$20 00

The records also show the same amount of "Interest Money for Schooling" nearly every year since. The principal changed hands many times. It will be seen that the amount received for the School Right must have been \$333.33 $\frac{1}{3}$, which sum is named in the report of the Selectmen for 1831. In war time, being obliged to borrow money at high rates of interest, the Selectmen called in these loans. The town therefore has in its possession a permanent School Fund yielding, at six per cent interest, twenty dollars per annum.

Another source of income for the support of schools is the Literary Fund. This is a tax laid by the State upon the capital stock of all Banking Institutions, and distributed to the towns according to their Levy, and by law devoted to the maintenance of schools. This Fund seems to have been first received in 1829, when the town

Voted that the money received from the Literary Fund be kept good as to the principal and to lay out the interest annually. In 1835, Voted that one third of the Principal of the Literary Fund be laid out yearly . . . also what is received hereafter be appropriated as fast as it may be [received.]

The amount of this Fund for 1829 is not on record. For 1830 it was $17.20, and for 1878 it was $55.04.

Had the original plan of reserving the principal been followed to this time, the town would have a large Fund yielding probably much more than the whole annual Fund now amounts to. The dog tax is another income for the aid of schools. The tax for the present year is $29. Last year it was $40.

In 1790, we find "Ten pound" raised for schooling. In 1792, the money raised "with what the State ordered" was "Twenty pound." Not far from the same amount, varying from seventy to one hundred dollars, was raised each year for about ten years. In 1802, there is no record of raising money for schools, and from that time till 1847, no money was raised above what the law required. Nearly every year, an article was in the warrant, but was either dismissed or the town voted "not to raise any school money." But in 1847, it was "Voted to raise $300 for support of schools including the sum required by law." In 1849, the sum was advanced to $400, and so continued till 1855, when the vote was to raise $175.23 in addition to the sum required by law, and the same was voted the next year. In 1857, $550 was raised in all, and the same each year till 1860, when $575 was raised, dropping to $500 in 1861. In 1864, the sum was increased to $600, continuing the same till 1869, when $700 was raised. In 1874, the amount was increased to $800, and so continued for three years. In 1877, it was raised to $900, but in 1878 went down to $850. The amount required by law is nearly $500. There ought to be enough raised and so managed as to secure to each child of suitable age and ordinary health, at least thirty-six weeks of schooling in the year.

In most country towns, the apathy on the subject of schools is amazing. Outside the family and the church, there are no influences so vital to the welfare of the community as those which emanate from public schools. And as in too many homes the family influence is far from elevating, and in our intense individualism and fear of priestcraft, church influence fails to reach directly only a fraction of the young, the public school comes to be the principal dependence for imbuing the youthful mind and heart with sentiments of patriotism and virtue. In the present state of society, it is mainly through schools, that children imbibe ideas of the beauty of morality, and are trained to habits of purity and manliness, whereby they may become useful citizens, a source of strength and protection instead of weakness and danger to our great republic. Since education is more important than all other enterprises, it becomes our duty, in ordinary circumstances, to place it foremost in the amount of money raised and expended.

In 1816, and several times after, the subject of dividing the school money was discussed but no action was taken. Till 1845, the division seems to have been entirely by the valuation of property, on the theory that each family was entitled to just the amount of their own taxes, in schooling for their children. In 1845, it was "voted to divide the School money one third equally among the seven first school districts, and the remainder according to the Levy." The same plan seems to have prevailed for the next twenty years. In 1866, it was voted to divide one half equally, and the remainder on the Levy. In 1868, it was divided one half equally, one fourth by the Levy, and one fourth by the number of pupils. In 1869, each district was given $100, and what was left was divided as the year before. This plan was followed for three years. In 1872, the same plan was adopted with this addition, that if the amount paid to any district should exceed $135, the excess should be divided equally among the other districts. In 1873, it was the same except that the limit was made $140 instead of $135. In 1875 and '76, $80 was voted to each district, one half the remainder to be divided by the Levy, and the other half by the number of scholars. In 1877, $100 was first given to each district and the remainder divided as before. In 1878, $200 was distributed according to valuation, and the remainder divided equally.

Between 1840 and 1850, there was a great school revival throughout Cheshire County, largely due to the efforts of Rev. Levi W. Leonard of Dublin. The clergy generally, of all sects, were nobly active in the cause. This was the day of Teachers' Institutes, — genuine schools for drill, — which stimulated and awakened many a before indifferent teacher to new life and energy. The influence was felt here. Some took hold of the matter in earnest. Such men as Rev. Mr. Tisdale, Samuel Woodward, Esq., Dr. Hammond, the Mays, and others were zealous leaders in endeavoring to awaken the town to such an appreciation of the value of Teachers' Institutes as would lead them to vote money for their assistance. Their success was small. In 1847, four dollars of the school money was granted in aid of a Teachers' Institute in the County. An attempt to reconsider this vote in July following failed of success, and the same amount was appropriated in 1848. In 1851, a motion to raise five dollars for the same purpose, was lost. About this time a law was passed requiring towns to pay a small per cent of their school money for Teachers' Institutes. In 1860, this town instructed their Representative to use his influence to have the law repealed, which was done soon after.

The first trace of any office like that of Superintending School Committee is in 1816, when the Selectmen were appointed "a committee to inspect the schools." Nothing further appears till 1822, when "Obadiah Pease, Berzeleel L. Mack, and Amherst Hayward" were "a Committee to inspect the schools." The next year, Josiah Hammond was substituted for Amherst Hayward.

In 1826, "Chose Willard Bill, David Chapin, & Amherst Hayward a Committee to examine Schools & make some arrangements concerning books to be used in schools."

The first Superintending School Committee, by that name, was appointed in 1843. The number has varied from one to three, and some years the record of their appointment is missing. The following list shows all that are on the records as having held that office. They have generally been appointed by the Selectmen, in a few instances by the town.

James Tisdale, 1843,-4,-6,-7.	Francis A. Howard, 1846,-7.	George W. Foster, 1856,-7.
Hartley Thurston, 1843,-4,-8.	Otis G. Hammond, 1848.	Andrew J. Howard, 1856,-7.
George W. Hammond, 1843,-54,-5,	Aaron H. Livermore, 1848,-9,-51.	William B. Adams, 1866.
-64,-5.	Samuel Woodward, 1849,-50,-2.	Herbert E. Adams, 1866,-75,-9.
Amasa May, 1844,-5.	David S. Ware, 1850,-1,-3.	Horace Wood, 1867 to 1872.
Calvin May, Jr., 1845,-9,-50,-2.	Ezra Adams, 1850,-1,-3, to 1863.	Oscar J. Wilson, 1873.
Daniel W. Bill, 1845,-6,-7,-72,-3,-4,	Joseph Hays, 1852.	George C. Hubbard, 1876,-7.
-5.	Harvey B. May, 1853,-4,-5.	Samuel W. Dart, 1878.

At first, the Superintending Committee received no pay for their services. The first report was made in 1845, when the town voted their thanks, and fifty-six cents for money paid out. In 1846, their report, written by Rev. Mr. Tisdale, awakened unusual interest, and it was voted to publish the same, and furnish each family with a copy. The Committee were thanked for their services, and allowed eighty-six cents for expenses. In 1847, voted thanks and 200 copies printed. Similar votes were passed the two following years. In 1850, it was voted not to print. The Committee brought in a bill of $4.25 which was allowed. The next year, the bill was referred to the Selectmen. In 1852, the bill allowed was five dollars. Since that time, the bill has varied from ten to sixteen dollars, generally being about twelve, till the last few years when it has risen to nearly forty. As the number of visits to the schools now required by law is at least twenty-eight, besides the examination of teachers, and all the other duties of the office, it is plain the compensation is not excessive.

Prior to 1830, the committee or agent for each district was chosen in town meeting, in the same manner as Highway Surveyors. The records frequently call them School Collectors, as they collected the school tax, each in his own district. There seems to have been at first no definitely bounded School Districts. There was a vaguely general division, each family paying their tax and sending their children where most convenient. In 1790, there were four men chosen as School Committee, indicating that there were already four districts. The men chosen were Eleazer Wilcox, Aaron Hammond, Samuel Whitney and Thomas Dart, Jr. The general location of the several districts can be inferred from their places of residence. These were known as the "South," "Middle," "North" and "Northwest" Districts. In other connections the last was generally known as "Dart Corner." Another called the "Northeast" District was established in 1796. This was otherwise known as "Nash Corner" or "Nash Town." In 1805, Samuel Whitney, Silvanus Hayward, John Nash, Samuel Bill, Benjamin Ware, and Jesse Dart were impowder to Call School meeting[s] in order [to] Establish Schools in the Several Districts in this town —

The year following, the town Chose Sam^l. Bill Dudley Smith Eben^r. Bill Berzeleel Mack David Blish a committee to divide the town into school districts.

This seems to have been the first definite bounding of the several districts. The following is the report of the Committee : —

The farms which the above named do now occupy is to contain the north district

Benjamin Thompson John Nash Paul Farnsworth Maturin Guillo Moses Farnsworth Samuel Cory Levi Blood.

The farms which the above named do now occupy is to contain the northeast district.

The town adopted the report, after transferring Robert L. Hurd from the south to the middle district. In 1807, Luther Holmes was transferred to the northeast district, and Levi Blood was allowed to lay out his school money "where he can be best benefited." Reference is here made to the "Union District" known as "Leominster Corner," to which in 1817 it was voted to set off Levi Blood and John Withington for ten years. In 1819, the widow Ames was allowed to pay her school money to the same district. Again in 1828, Levi Blood, Abner Raymond, and Franklin Barker were allowed "a district by themselves." In 1847, these farms were restored to No. 5, but on petition of inhabitants of both Marlow and Gilsum, the Selectmen in 1848, transferred the Blood farm from No. 5 in Gilsum to No. 5 in Marlow. In 1828, Dudley Smith, Israel B. Loveland, Ebenezer Bill, David Bill, and Asa Nash were appointed "to make any alterations which may be deemed expedient respecting the limits of the several school districts in said town and to define and establish the limits of the same." The only essential change made by this Committee was in the line between No. 2 and No. 5 which they established "by the line of Solomon Mack's and Daniel Converse farms." In 1835, Eseek T. Wilson, E. K. Webster, Samuel Woodward, Jr., Allen Butler, Benjamin Corey and Abner Raymond were a Committee to make alterations in School Districts. They reported the next year, making two new districts, by dividing Nos. 1 and 2. No. 6 was to consist of the farms occupied by John Livermore, Jacob Polley, George W. Hammond, John Hammond, Levi Isham, Eseek T. Wilson, and the widow Ruthy U. Isham, which is substantially the same as at present. The division which they made of No. 2 was unsatisfactory, and the following year a committee was chosen "to define the bounds of the several School Districts." This Committee consisted of Aaron Day, Eliphalet K. Webster, Iddo Kilburn, James Pickering, Israel B. Loveland, George W. Hammond, Luther Abbot, and Asa Nash. The only important part of their action was in establishing the bounds of District No. 7 as follows : —

Bounded on the west . . . on the east and south lines of James Bolster's farm until it strikes the road thence on the road until it strikes Luther Mark's north east corner, thence south on said Mark's and Amherst Hayward's east line to Sullivan line, . . . on the north by Astead line, on the east by the east line of land owned by David Convers Solomon Mack Andrew A [J] Howard Orlando Mack's home farm, and John Thompson, on the South by Sullivan line —

It was voted to give the old school house to No. 7. There was evidently considerable dissatisfaction, as the subject was brought before the town every year without success till 1840, when on petition of some of the inhabitants of No. 2, the Selectmen proceeded "to establish and define the boundaries . . . in the manner and form by law prescribed." They however made no essential changes, but only described the boundaries more exactly.

In 1844, a slight change was made in the line between Nos. 1 and 3, making it the south line of Lots No. 5 in the several ranges. In 1846, James Bolster's farm was transferred to No. 7, but in 1865, the same farm, now owned by C. B. Hayward, was restored to No. 2.

In 1852, on petition of several of the citizens, the Selectmen defined the districts by recording the exact boundaries, making no changes from the lines already given.

In 1856, James Rawson's farm was transferred from No. 4 to No. 2. Since then several efforts have been made to have the town re-districted but without effect. In 1874, a proposition to abolish the School Districts was rejected, and "all things continue as they were." Probably no one change could accomplish so much for our schools as the abolition of Districts, bringing the whole town under one efficient system of grading. The District system has been a curse to the schools of New Hampshire in many ways. One result is that the schools are frequently so small as to be very unprofitable. At present in Gilsum, one district has only seven pupils, and another only five, and as the last has the same number of old bachelors, the prospect is far from encouraging.

The first School Houses were probably built in 1794, when we find the following record:—

Voted to Raise one hundred and twenty to Build four School houses in the town one in Each District Chose Capt holdredg James Ballard timothy Dart Jesse Dart Capt kilburn David Adams David Blish Samuel Bill Capt Fuller a Comette to Sery the Destricks for Belding S^d houses

The first School House in District No. 1 stood on the east of the road very near where Mr. Loisel's shop now stands. (Map 52.) In 1819, another was built on the west of the road 10 or 15 rods further north. (Map 54.) In 1850, this was burned, and the next season the present house was built near Vessel Rock, being located by a committee from the other districts. (Map 76.) The first School House in District No. 2 was north of the road running towards C. B. Hayward's, and a few rods east of Geo. C. Hubbard's house. (Map 366.) In 1808, the Treasurer's book shows a tax of $224.61 assessed "on the north school Destrict," from which it seems a School House must have been built that year. This was the second one in this district, and stood on the north side of the road by the turn south of Mrs. Cram's. (Map 367.) It was probably about this time, that the school was kept by Elisheba Dort in her father's house, now occupied by Chilion Mack, who remembers going to school there, and that she had an hour-glass to mark the time. This School House was occupied till the district was divided in 1836. That winter, the chamber at the west end of Dea. Kingsbury's house was used for the school, which was taught by Aaron Day, Jr. (Chap. 31.) The same room was used for the school several terms, and afterwards a room in Capt. Taylor's old Tannery, till 1843, when the present house was built above the village, (Map 373,) where it was located by a committee from other parts of the town.

In District No. 3, the first School House stood near the spot now used for the same purpose. (Map 355.) This was burned about 1816, and the school was kept for a time in Major Bill's old house on the north of the road. (Chap. 32.) In 1820, another School House was built on the old spot. This remained till 1847, when the present house was built. Samuel Woodward was the prime mover in the enterprise, and it has been ever since the best School House in town.

In the tornado of 1877, it was lifted from the foundations and turned one quarter round without serious injury. (Chap. 26.)

In District No. 4, the School House stood on the small triangle between the roads in front of David A. Roundy's house. (Map 130.) In 1829, the present house known as "the Brick School House" was built, (Map 359,) the brick being made at Wm. Kingsbury's brick yard. (Chap. 23.)

District No. 5 had a large log School House, north of the road a little beyond A. B. Nash's present residence. (Map 375.) This was probably built about the beginning of the present century, and remained in use until 1846, when the present house was built. (Map 376.)

District No. 6 was set off from Nos. 1 and 4 in 1836. The school was kept for several years in the old Blish house, on the place where Enos Cross now resides. The School House now in use was built in 1841. (Map 67.)

District No. 7 was also set off in 1836. The school was kept for several seasons in the ell part of Chilion Mack's house, then running towards the west, instead of south as now. In 1844, they built the School House near Martin Bates's. (Map 374.)

Of school apparatus the town has almost none. A few outline maps, and perhaps in some districts, blocks to explain Cube Root are about all. But there are signs of progress. At the annual meeting in March, 1879, the town voted to purchase seven Unabridged Dictionaries, one for each district. No wiser or more honorable vote stands on our records.

In addition to the public schools, there have been occasional "select schools" in nearly every district. Several "High Schools" have also been held in the village. The list cannot be exactly given. The first was in the Fall of 1834, and the following Spring. It was kept in the Congregational Vestry by Jonathan Hall, then a student in Amherst College.

Four years after, George W. Ash kept a High School in what is now Chandler's Hall. He was afterwards pastor of the Congregational Church in Westmoreland. The next year a young man began a school, but gave it up on account of small attendance.

Rev. James Tisdale kept a High School in the Vestry in 1843-4, and perhaps afterwards. Mrs. Alice Adams also had a school in the same room for several terms.

A Gilman and also a Pratt taught still later in Chandler's Hall.

SINGING SCHOOLS.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

Singing in early times was much the same in Gilsun as elsewhere. At first, all who could sing, or thought they could, sang in the congregation as the "Psalm" was "lined out" by deacon or minister. Later, probably as early as the dedication of the Meeting House in 1794, the singing was conducted by a large choir led by a bass-viol. Everybody has been made familiar with the old tunes and style of singing through "Father Kemp" and his imitators. It must be confessed that modern church music, in small towns, is thin and meagre compared with the richness of those old tunes sung with genuine zeal, with all their marvelous fugues, and the peculiar sweetness of a good "counter." The bass-viol was played by Silvanus Hayward, and it is remembered Squire Hammond frequently exchanged with him, one playing in the forenoon, and the other in the afternoon. Amherst Hayward afterwards played the bass-viol in the choir for nearly or quite forty years.

Singing schools were early introduced. Benoni Wright, brother of Gen. Daniel Wright, was one of the first singing masters. He had a fine tenor voice of unusual sweetness, and taught many winters. Silvanus Hayward, Squire Hammond, Oliver Pease, David Brigham, Selim Frost of Sullivan, and a Mr. Warren from Dublin are also in the list of music teachers in Gil-sum. In 1813, and again in 1816, the town was asked to do something "to encourage and support a singing school," but dismissed the article.

The modern methods as taught in Mason's Manual were first introduced here by Sumner and Levi Rust of Alstead, in 1838 and 1839. Gilman C. Sanborn followed in 1842-3-4. Alfred Partridge of Alstead taught several winters about 1847-9. Moses Twitchell and a Mr. Hutchins were here soon after. George W. Foster taught several winters, before 1860. So much interest was awakened at this period that for a time two schools were sustained by rival parties, the other being in charge of a Mr. Houston. Subsequently, singing schools were kept here by a Mr. Gilpatrick, Sylvester Little of Antrim, Charles W. Bingham, and George K. Nichols. In the winter of 1876-7, Charles H. Scoville of Walpole was employed for a few weeks, and in 1878-9, S. F. Merrill of Keene had a large singing class in the Town Hall. In the Summer of 1879, Prof. David Batchellor, an Englishman residing in Boston, Mass., while spending his vacation in Gilsum, gave several free lessons in singing, introducing the "tonic sol-fa system." The class thus started was taken by Thomas Charnbury, Jr., and continued with much success through the Fall and Winter.

It is to be hoped the time is approaching when Vocal Music will have a place beside Geography and Grammar among the required studies in our public schools.

CHAPTER XXII.

LIBRARIES AND LYCEUMS.

In molding the character of any place, the influence of Libraries and Lyceums is second only to that of Churches and Schools. Libraries and Literary Societies properly managed serve to refine and elevate the tone of society. They are worth more than can be estimated in money. No man is worthy of more honor as a public benefactor, than he who founds a good Public Library. It purifies morals, restrains vice, refines the home, kindles honorable ambition, inspires hope, stimulates to activity, and broadens and develops true manhood. A good Debating Society strengthens the intellect, sharpens the logical powers, creates tact, and often awakens even the apparently dull and stupid to a fair amount of zeal and energy.

A Town Library was in existence here in the early part of the present century. It was probably begun about 1795. Shares were one dollar each. It consisted largely of the standard works of that day, such as Belknap's History of New Hampshire, Josephus's Works, Burditt's Sermons, Ossian's Poems, Goldsmith's Histories, and the like. About thirty years after its organization, it was decided to distribute the books among the shareholders. A few of them are still to be found in some of the older families of the place.

Nov. 30, 1831, a meeting was held at Stephen Day's to organize a "Gilsum Universalist Library Society." The organization was completed Dec. 6, by the adoption of a Constitution and By-Laws. The fee for membership was one dollar, with a provision for an annual tax of twenty-five cents on a share. Fifty-six volumes were obtained that year, of which nearly half were somewhat theological and religious, favoring the peculiar views indicated by the name adopted. A few volumes were added each year till the whole number reached 110. After the first, they were of a general character, consisting almost entirely of History, Biography, and Travels. The records show only the routine business of annual meetings till Dec. 6, 1845, when it was "Voted to strike out the word Universalist and substitute the word Union in the constitution of the society." This was doubtless done to enlarge the membership, but met with only slight success. In 1847, the Directors were "instructed to dispose of such Books now in the Library, as in their opinion are not beneficial to be kept in the Library." The last record is of the annual meeting Dec. 5, 1848, at which time sixty-four cents were reported in the Treasury. Subsequently, some of the leading members took away portions of the Library. The remaining volumes are in the hands of Mrs. Sarah T. Loveland, widow of the last Librarian. The whole number of different members of this Society was forty-three. Only six are supposed to be now living, viz.:—

Otis Ammidon, William Banks, Roswell G. Bennett, David Bill, John Hammond, Hartley Thurston, of whom three are now residents of Gilsun.

Presidents: Israel B. Loveland, George W. Hammond, Jesse Jaquith, Samuel Woodward, Jr., Calvin May, Stephen Foster, Jr., Aaron Day, Hartley Thurston, Nathan Ellis.

Librarians: Daniel Day, Jr., Franklin W. Day, Allen Butler, Levi Gates, Aaron Day, Israel B. Loveland.

About 1844, through the efforts of Rev. James Tisdale, "the Ministerial and Congregational Church Library" was started. It was kept at the Parsonage, for the use of the minister and the families connected with the Congregational Society. It consists of about one hundred volumes. The last addition was made in 1854, by a subscription of about fifteen dollars. It pertains almost entirely to theological and religious subjects, and has been very little used.

The Sabbath Schools here have had libraries such as are usually found in small country towns.

At present the town is almost entirely destitute of facilities of access to good reading. No opportunity exists to become acquainted with the standard literature of the day, save to those who are able to buy for themselves.

In 1812, a society designed especially for young men was organized, called a "Moral and Literary Society." The records have not been found. It required its members to abstain from drunkenness and profanity. Meetings were held monthly at Smith's Hall, and afterwards at Dea. Pease's. The fee for membership was a "ninepence." The exercises consisted of written essays and addresses, and probably some discussions. It is remembered that the list of original members was nearly as follows:—

Justus and Vestus Chapin, Elisha S. and Samuel Fish, Clark and James Hudson, Lyman and Russell Hurd, Obadiah Pease, Edmund, Eleazer, and Lumund Wilcox.

The first President was "Squire Pease," and the Secretary, Elisha S. Fish. The first annual report written by the Secretary has been found. There were then twenty-seven members. The report laments that a "dull heartless stupidity, a death-like apathy universally pervades the members. No life, enterprise or activity is to be found among us." How long this Society kept up its existence is not known. It gradually died out from neglect.

The first Literary Society or Lyceum in this town of which we have the records, was formed in 1833. The record begins, as follows:—

At a meeting of the citizens of Gilsun at Messrs Day's Hall (now Chandler's Hall) Nov. 16, 1833 to consider the expediency of forming a debating Society—voted that it is expedient, and made choice of Jehiel Day for Moderator and David Brigham Clerk. Appointed John Fletcher, David Brigham & H. G. Howe a Committee to draft bye-laws and present at next meeting—also to prepare an address on the utility of the debating system.

Made choice of John Fletcher for President of Jehiel Day for V. President & David Brigham Secretary.

as the officers of this

Voted to meet again next Saturday evening at 6 o'clock.

At the next meeting a Constitution was adopted providing for membership on payment of 25 cents and subscribing to the Constitution. The only exercise provided for was the discussion of some question previously chosen. This was soon found to be insufficient, as in about a month, it was voted to admit written compositions. Judges were at first appointed to "decide the debate according to the weight of the arguments." This plan probably failed to secure harmony, as it was soon abandoned. One rule forbade the admission of any but members to the meetings. This was soon amended so as to admit ladies once a month, and the public once a month. This Society had evidently a practical aim in the subjects introduced, for while there are occasionally the old stock questions of Bonaparte and Washington, the abolition of Capital Punishment, and the like, we find more having immediate reference to Gilsun affairs. The first question was.

Will the contemplated Road from Keene to Newport through this place be beneficial or detrimental to the Town at large? Another question was, Which would appear the most agreeable to a traveler, a clean, neat street through this village, or as it is at the present day?

This Society continued its meetings, except during the summer months, every week till Dec. 6, 1834, when it was "Voted that this Society be dissolved without day." The Presidents were John Fletcher, Jehiel Day, I. B. Loveland, C. H. Cummings, David M. Smith, Wm. Campbell, Ezra Webster, and H. G. Howe. The list of members includes most of the then active citizens who lived within convenient distance, besides some from the neighboring towns. More than forty of the 67 members have already deceased and only three are now residents of Gilsun, viz., Joseph M. Chapin, John C. Guillow, and Chilion Mack.

In the Fall of 1842, the "Gilsun Lyceum" was organized. The first record finds it already in operation, and is as follows:—

Dec. 23 1842 The members of the Gilsun Lyceum Met at D. H. Willson's agreeable to previous adjournment and was called to order by the President and the following business transacted

1st Voted to defer discussion until next meeting.

2^d Messrs Tisdale & Dr. Hammond introduced a plan whereby we might obtain the early history of this town Also that the annals of this town be kept hereafter.

It was resolved to carry the same into effect by choosing the following Officers Viz

Dr. Geo. W. Hammond, Historian.
Mr. Amherst Hayward Annalist

Messrs. Lemuel Bingham, J. Q. A. Ware, I. B. Loveland, O. G. Hammond, Samuel Isham Jr. Amherst Hayward and Davis H. Willson Were chosen a committee to gather Statistics &c.

Rev. Mr. Tisdale, Dr. Hammond, Mr. Amherst Hayward & Kimball Metcalf were requested to propose questions for the use of the aforesaid Committee on Statistics &c.

3^d Voted the historian have power to fill all vacancies that may occur.

4th Voted that Mr. A. Hayward present at the first meeting held in Jan. 1843 a picture (or description) of this town as it now is.

5th Voted the next meeting be held in the vestry of Congregational Meeting house Dec. 29th at six o'clock P. M.

D. H. Willson Sec'y.

The "picture" above spoken of was presented Jan. 5, 1843, and is given substantially in Chap. 24. Out of this historical movement came the verses by Dr. Hammond. (Appendix G.) He also collected some materials pertaining to the early history, which have been furnished by his son for use in writing this book.

There was more real work done by this Lyceum than by any that preceded or followed. There were prepared and read 20 numbers of a paper called first "The People's Organ." After three numbers, the name was changed to "The Gilsun Pioneer." It was also voted that these papers should be deposited for safe keeping in the hands of the Secretary. Most of them have thus been preserved and are in the hands of Joseph M. Chapin. Lectures were also given by some of the members. Rev. Mr. Tisdale gave two, and Joseph M. Chapin and Amherst Hayward one each. Kimball Metcalf gave two Lectures on Phrenology with practical illustrations from which he became generally known in town as "Bump Metcalf." Some Lectures from abroad were given. One on Phrenology by a Mr. Nichols, and one on Temperance by a Mr. Sanborn.

The editors of the paper so far as recorded were Kimball Metcalf, Rev. James Tisdale, Dr. G. W. Hammond, Geo. W. Newman, J. Q. A. Ware, Amherst Hayward, Lemuel Bingham, Hartley Thurston, Otis G. Hammond, Calvin May, Jr., David Brigham, Charles T. Wetherby, Samuel Woodward, and Joseph M. Chapin.

The Presidents, except the first who is not named, were Joseph M. Chapin, Charles T. Wetherby, William Campbell, J. Q. A. Ware, and Lemuel Bingham.

As in the old Debating Society, many of the questions discussed were of the most practical character such as the following: —

Is it advisable for the people of Gilsun to procure a town farm for the residence and support of paupers?

Would the prosperity of the inhabitants in Gilsun be promoted by the extension of a railroad to Keene?

A Lyceum conducted in this practical and laborious manner, by the most prominent citizens of the town, could not fail to exert a valuable influence in educating and stimulating the minds of old and young. Seventeen of the 24 members are already dead, and only two are now living in Gilsun, viz., Joseph M. Chapin and George W. Newman.

Nov. 27, 1844, there was a re-organization under the same name with a new Constitution, A. P. Hemenway being the first President, and Geo. W. Newman, Secretary. It was very much on the same basis as before, except that the fee for membership was reduced from 25 to 10 cents, and a new President was chosen each week. The paper was called "The Evening Star," of which there were issued five numbers by Asa Withington, A. P. Hemenway, J. Q. A. Ware, George Webster, and George W. Newman. For some reason, which does not appear, the Society failed to meet after Jan. 8, 1845. Of its 16 members, ten are dead and three still reside in town, viz., Joseph M. Chapin, A. J. Howard, and George W. Newman.

Nov. 11 1848 Agreeable to previous notice those interested in forming a Lyceum met at Ezra Webster's Hall. D. S. Ware in the chair.

A Constitution was adopted with the name "Gilsun Young People's Lyceum." George Hammond was chosen President, and Silvanus Hayward, Secretary. Meetings were held through the Winter, sometimes in the different School Houses, and latterly in the Methodist Hall.

March 15, 1849, it was voted to adjourn sine die. This was the first Lyceum that admitted ladies as active members. It was not however a great success in this respect. An effort was made to secure their services in editing "The Evening Star," but only one number was read by ladies. This was by Christiana A. Spaulding (then teaching here,) and Sarah E. Horton. All others, who were invited, declined the service, and the remaining editors were Benjamin Hitchcock, George W. Foster, Joseph M. Chapin, and A. P. Hemenway, making five numbers in all. The questions discussed were more general than formerly, the most practical question for immediate application being the following: —

Ought young Ladies to associate with young Gentlemen of intemperate habits?

The Presidents, after the first, were Benjamin Hitchcock, Harvey B. May, Roswell W. Silsby, and David S. Ware.

Of the 44 members 17 have died, and only eight now reside in Gilsun, viz.: —

Joseph M. Chapin, Mary L. Dort (now Mrs. C. B. Hayward,) Aaron D. Hammond, C. B. Hayward, Silvanus Hayward, James C. Isham, Solomon Mack, and Elbridge Smith.

This was the last Lyceum of which there is any record. Attention has since been given mainly to Temperance organizations. (Chap. 19.)

CHAPTER XXIII.

"In all labor there is profit."

GILSUM has no doubt had its share of shiftless loafers, but has always been free from that far more despicable class, who having gorged themselves with the fruit of others' toil, have settled down into luxurious ease to enjoy their ill-gotten gains. No one here has become so enervated by wealth, as to rest contented with no profitable employment.

Farming stands first among all the industries of the place, — first in order of time, and first in the number of persons engaged in it. Though the soil is for the most part, hard, heavy, cold and stubborn, yet persevering labor on our hills and along our valleys has rewarded four generations of diligent husbandmen, always with a comfortable living, frequently with easy competence, and occasionally with extensive wealth. The most valuable farm products are hay, apples, and maple sugar, — from five to ten tons of the latter being annually produced. Further particulars will be found in the Chapter on Census Returns.

In January, 1878, a Farmers' Club was organized and has sustained meetings about once in two weeks. A manuscript paper has been started, and much has been done through lectures and discussions to stimulate the members to greater zeal and better methods in the various operations of agriculture. Two very successful Town Fairs were held in 1878 and 1879. The Presidents of the Club have been Daniel W. Bill and George H. Carpenter; the Secretary, Oscar J. Wilson. For 1880 the President is George W. Newman; the Secretary, Charles W. Bingham.

The natural features of Gilsum have specially adapted it to manufacturing enterprises. The river falls some three hundred feet in its passage through the town, thus affording a mill privilege almost every quarter of a mile. Many of the brooks, also, are suitable to carry mills a part of the year. Hence it happens the whole life of the place depends upon its manufacturing.

First of all, the settlers needed

GRIST-MILLS.

The first one was built by Aaron Chapin, probably before 1765, where the mill now stands below Shaw's corner in Surry. The first within the present limits of Gilsum was built by Elisha Mack and his brother Solomon about 1776, near the Stone Bridge. (Map 100.) This soon became a place of great resort, people coming from the towns above as far as Camden, (now Washington,) often bringing their grists upon hand-sleds, or on their backs. This mill was kept running for about 75 years. The next grist-mill was built about half-a-mile down the river, (Map 104,) in 1802, by David Fuller and Stephen White. Mr. White sold out his share the next year, and in 1806, Capt. Fuller sold to Daniel Beverstock. Aaron Loveland afterwards owned it, from whom the hill is still named. He left in 1834, and the mill was no longer used.

About 1853, A. D. Towne put a small set of stones into the old Starch Factory, and Davis H. Wilson carried on grinding here, some three or four years. In 1857, A. B. Nash built a grist-mill on the Nash Brook, some twenty rods northeast of his house, (Map 371,) but never got it into running order. In 1871, Dart's mill, near "Burnt House Hill," was built, and is now the only grist-mill in Gilsum.

SAW-MILLS.

As in all new settlements, the first houses were built of logs. Very soon, however, there was a desire for something better. The skilful ax-men of those days could easily hew timbers for the frame, but for boards, saw-mills were necessary. The first boards were probably obtained at Chapin's Mill in Surry, from about 1765 till 1776, when Elisha Mack built at the Stone Bridge. These mills were sold by Capt. Mack to his brother-in-law Abishai Tubbs of Marlow in 1784. I have not been able to trace their ownership perfectly. They were owned for a time by Samuel McCurdy of Surry, Turner White, Benjamin Baxter of Alstead, and afterwards by his brother William Baxter, who sold to Stephen Griswold for $1500 in 1803. Mr. Griswold sold in 1808 to Jonathan Pease for $1700. Dea. Pease ran the mills for twenty years and sold to Aaron Day for $1500. Aaron and Stephen Day rebuilt and continued business here till 1843, when they sold to A. D. Towne. In 1845, Mr. Towne let the mills to Cheney Kilburn who established the chair business here. Mr. Kilburn was followed by Porter and Joel Cowee and afterwards by M'Key and Burbank in the same business. In 1868, Jesse Dart bought these mills, which were burned in 1869. (Page 47.) John S. Collins now owns the water privilege and has made liberal offers to induce manufacturers to build, but the place still remains vacant, after having been used for over ninety years.

Soon after the Revolution, Ebenezer and Thomas Dart had a saw-mill on the Dart Brook, near where it touches the road between Darius Porter's and William Kingsbury's. (Map 364.)

The next saw-mill was built by Silvanus Hayward, about 1795, on Mill Brook, a little above C. W. Bingham's shop, where remnants of the dam can still be seen. (Map 199.)

About 1820, Amherst Hayward built a saw-mill where the tannery now stands. The abutments of the old dam still remain. About fourteen years after, he sold to Dudley Smith, and he to Dalphon L. Gibbs, who ran it two years. George W. Newman then bought it, and ran it till 1849, when he sold to the Tannery Company by whom it was torn down.

In 1830, Orlando Mack assisted by his father built a saw-mill about a mile up the river. (Map 368.) In 1837, Jesse Hemenway bought it, and after four years sold to Charles Nash. In little over a year A. J. and F. A. Howard bought it, and continued business there for eight years. Then Mason Guillow bought a share, and soon after George W. Newman bought the remainder. They ran it in company for six years, when Mr. Guillow sold to Malone Norris who remained about a year. Since then it has been practically under the control of Mr. Newman, though nominally in different hands, at times. About 200,000 feet of lumber has been sawed there this year.

About 1836, Eleazer Wilcox built a saw-mill on the brook southwest of his house. (Map 354.) So far as known, this was the only saw-mill in Gilsum south of the river. It could be run only a short time in the Spring, and was soon given up.

In 1836, Capt. Timothy Dort built a saw-mill northwest of his house on the Dart Brook. (Map 363.) In 1842, it was destroyed by a freshet, and never rebuilt.

In 1848, Charles Nash built the saw-mill about a mile above Newman's for his son George. (Map 369.) Four years after, Charles Nash, Jr., bought it, and carried on the business for nearly twelve years. After passing through several hands, N. O. Hayward bought it in 1877.

In 1871, F. A. Howard, Allen Hayward, and Jesse Dart built the saw-mill near "Burnt House Hill." (Map 223.) For the sake of having a grist-mill attached, the citizens raised $800 to assist them in building. In 1872, they sold to Daniel Smith and he to Jesse Dart. A. D. Hammond and S. W. Dart then bought it, the latter being now the exclusive owner. This year's product has been about 275,000 feet of lumber.

CLOTH MANUFACTURE.

Several of the first settlers were weavers by trade in the old country, and almost every family, except the poorest, had not only "great wheel and little wheel" for spinning wool and flax, but "dye-tub," "quill wheel," "warping bars," and loom. Raising their own flax and wool, the men well understood the now forgotten arts of breaking and swingling and hatcheling, while the women plied their cards, or were busy at wheel and loom. They were thus able to furnish all their own clothing, from the tow shirt and breeches to the finest linen for bed or table, woolen blankets, linsey-woolsey gowns for the women and girls, and even "go-to-meeting" coats for the men and boys. Nabby Kilburn, afterwards Mrs. Daniel Day of Keene, was specially skilled in making damask linen. The fine figured linen still used for the Communion Table in the Congregational Church, is of her manufacture. Mrs. H. M. Nye of Marlboro' has table linen of the same pattern by the same hands. It was probably woven about 1790.

John Bingham was a clothier, or cloth-dresser by trade, and at first went from house to house with hand-brushes and shears preparing cloth for men's wear. About 1780, he built a fulling mill on the brook south of Mason Guillow's. It probably stood near where the brook crosses the Keene road. He afterwards had machinery for shearing and dressing cloth in the mill by the bridge.

In 1813, Luther Whitney built a clothing mill on the brook south of his father's house, on the east side of the road, near the bridge. (Map 387.) This mill was burned about 1816, and another built on the same spot. This second mill was moved in March, 1820, to near where the west end of the tannery now is. The moving took two days, and was a great occasion. "Almost everybody was there." Many women and children came from a long distance to see it. The mill was drawn through the pasture now owned by N. O. Hayward, and the hollow in the hill south-east of John Hammond's, coming out near where George N. Hayward's house stands. In passing over the hill the building had to be held up with ropes. This shop was burned about two years after. (Page 46.) Mr. Whitney rebuilt and continued the business till 1829, when he sold to David Brigham. Mr. Brigham took Thaddeus H. Flint into partnership, and they carried on the business about two years, when Mr. Flint sold out. In December, 1830, the mill was burned. (Page 47.) The citizens helped Mr. Brigham to build up again, and the next year he took Asa Cole as a partner. About the last of 1832, Harrison G. Howe bought out Mr. Cole. Brigham and Howe then enlarged the mill, and put in machinery for making cloth. They bought a fine bell, which hung under a tin-covered dome in the center of the building. Business revived and for a few years there was much activity and "great expectations" of the wealth and growth that were coming to Gilsun. Benjamin Hosmer was in company with them for a time, but withdrew on account of ill health. The company began to get into debt and Mr. Howe left. Dea. Brigham thought if he could get money for a time, he could run on and pay up. Times were good, and many people had an idea money could be made very fast in manufacturing. Twelve men were induced to form a company and loaned Dea. Brigham $500 each. These men became quite noted in this vicinity as "the twelve apostles." Two of them belonged in Alstead, and one in Sullivan. They were Aaron Brigham, Aaron Day, Jehiel Day, Francis Eveleth, William Eveleth, Dalphon Gibbs, Benjamin Hosmer, Enoch B. Mayo, Dudley Smith, Benjamin Thompson, Jr., Eliphalet K. Webster, and Alvin White. Only Mr. White is now living. Dea. Brigham agreed to pay them the interest and $1,000 on the principal every year. The first year he succeeded in doing so. The second year he could no more than pay his help, and gave the company fifty dollars to wait. The third year he couldn't even pay his help, and the twelve were forced to take the Factory into their own hands to secure their debt. Five of the number thought they had seen enough of it, but the other seven, Aaron Brigham, Aaron Day, Francis Eveleth, Dalphon Gibbs, Dudley Smith, Benjamin Thompson, Jr., and Eliphalet K. Webster, concluded to go on, being in high hopes that they should not only recover what they had put in, but make a large amount in addition. They employed Dea. Brigham as their agent, and agreed to meet once a quarter. The first quarter they seemed to be doing well, but the second quarter found them running behind. They however kept on about two years, lured by the ever-receding hope of gain, till they found themselves $7,500 in debt. They then closed up the business with a loss of about $2,000 each. The actors in these scenes have nearly all passed away, but many still vividly remember the excitement of those times, probably hitherto unequalled in the business history of the town. Some enthusiasts expected Gilsun to rival Lowell in a few years. The mortgage records of that time are a warning to such as live too fast for their earnings. Some are rather amusing. One spruce young man executed a mortgage of "One olive Green Coat, one skye blue pair of pantaloons, one silk Vest."

The Factory lay idle till 1844, when it was bought by Milton Silsby of Acworth, who continued to run it till 1852. During this time it was burned, and rebuilt. (Page 47.)

When the Silsbys came they bought an additional water privilege up the river, where they built the present dam, in 1844. In the first mill they manufactured about 600 yards of Cassimere per week. In the new one they doubled the amount. The first mill stood facing the north. The new one faced the west, having the tower in front of its center, with a small bell costing only $100. In 1855, the Silsbys sold to Solomon Dean who continued business till it was again burned in 1858. (Page 47.) He then sold to the Tannery company.

In 1833, Joseph Upton and Harrison G. Howe hired the Starch Factory of Luther Abbot, and putting in machinery began the manufacture of colored flannels. Mr. Howe sold the next year to John Fletcher, and went into company with David Brigham. Upton and Fletcher continued business till 1838. John Townsend then hired the Factory and carried on the same business till 1845, when George Learoyd and Thomas Townsend bought. They kept on making flannels till 1847. John Scribner and Jonathan Winch hired it in 1849, and made flannels for a little more than a year.

In 1865, Wright, Cornell and Lyman proposed to build a large woolen mill where Dart's saw-mill now stands, and induced the citizens to form a Stock Company for that purpose. Some of the timber was got out and the foundation partly laid, but as they neglected to give the security which the company required, the work stopped, the citizens who were engaged in it losing about three dollars on a share.

The same parties then took down the old Abbot Factory and built the present structure. They made flannel there about three months, when they failed and the work ceased.

In 1867, the firm of Cuthbert, Gould and Minor bought, and have carried on the flannel business here ever since. The firm is now Cuthbert and Minor, Mr. Gould having left in 1872. In the year ending June, 1873, they manufactured 127,125 yards of flannel. In 1878, they made extensive repairs, putting in new and improved machinery, and are now turning out about 50,000 yards of flannel per week, and employ from 15 to 20 hands. Since 1867, the establishment has been known as "The Granite Mill."

In 1836, John Thurston and Lyman Gerould hired a small mill where Collins's Factory now is, and set up the flannel business. About two years after, Isaac Wallis and Arnold B. Hutchinson were in the company. In 1840, it passed into the hands of Faulkner and Colony of Keene.

Charles S. Faulkner personally superintended the business for two years. Gerould and Wetherby began business there in 1842. In 1845, they removed the old mill to the river bank across the road, for a Boarding House, and built the mill now in use. In 1848, the company to whom their goods were consigned at Boston failed, and they were obliged to suspend business for about two months. Parks, Baldwin and Parks of Boston took the property, and employed Lyman Gerould and Kendall Nichols to work up the stock on hand. In 1849, Ebenezer Jones came from Acworth, and soon after bought the Factory, and continued the manufacture of woolens for nearly eight years. He employed from 16 to 20 hands. In the Census of 1850, he reported $15,000 capital invested, and a yearly production of 14,000 yards of Broad Cloth valued at $24,500.

In 1857, Joshua and Thomas Ward bought, and began business, but soon failed, and sold to Seth and William Ward, who kept on for about three years, under the name of the Ashuelot Manufacturing Co., when it fell into the hands of Henshaw Ward of Boston. During the war, army blankets were manufactured here by Lewis Wright.

In 1867, the Wards sold to Stephen Collins and Sons. They put in new machinery, and manufactured Doeskin, Beaver, and Tricot, to the amount of about $100,000 annually. Since 1872, it has been run by John S. Collins, producing Cassimeres, all wool and worsted suitings. He employs 35 hands, with a monthly pay-roll of about $1500, producing the present year the value of $125,000.

About 1830, Aaron Day put a carding machine into the upper part of his mill, where he did "custom work" for nearly ten years. The same set of cards was then put into Luther Abbot's old mill, and run by him till he removed to Stoddard in 1846.

TANNERIES.

The first tanning in town was done by Obadiah Wilcox, who had some vats near the brook southwest of his house. Having no means for grinding bark, he prepared it for use by threshing it with a flail.

In 1827, John Taylor set up the business on Mill Brook, a little northeast of the house now owned by the widow McCoy. In 1838, he sold out and went West. Eleazer M. Poor followed him in the same business, but failed and left in 1840.

In 1841, Jonathan Rawson of Alstead hired the place and carried on the business two years.

In 1849, George B. Rawson bought the saw-mill of George W. Newman, and established a Tannery. He and his brothers continued the business for about fifteen years, having bought out the whole privilege after the Factory was burned in 1857. Their Tannery was burned in 1860, (Page 47,) after which they rebuilt and enlarged the business. Nelson, Rice, and Rawson took the establishment in 1864. Mr. Nelson having died, the firm is now Rice and Rawson. When business is active, they employ about 15 hands, with a monthly pay-roll of $6700, and turning off about 13,000 hides yearly.

BRICK-YARDS.

At first, the chimneys were built of stone. Old cellars are now marked by a large pile of stones which formed the chimney. One such is still in use, in the house of John Davis. As they began to build framed houses, the early settlers sought out clay, and burned brick. The enormous size of the old chimneys warranted the setting up a brick-yard to build a single house.

It is altogether probable there were a number of such brick-yards of which all trace and remembrance is lost. John Bingham had one southeast of Mason Guillow's orchard. There was a brick-yard on the flat near the brook, southwest of Darius Porter's, probably owned by one of the Darts. There was another just south of Mrs. Dean's. About 1806, Silvanus Hayward made brick where Newman's store now stands. There was a brick-yard for many years on the flat south of the road just east of the Dart Brook, near Mr. Kingsbury's, where he made the brick for his own house and for the School House. The last brick made in town was about 1830, by David and Elijah Ware, Jr. Their yard was near where Herbert E. Adams's new house stands.

BLACKSMITHS.

The number of Blacksmiths in Gilsum has been very large, and it is not probable that the following list is complete. The first was probably Theodore Preston who settled on a five-acre lot near Dr. Hosmer's. The use of this lot was given by the Proprietors. A Boynton worked there a short time after Preston. Daniel Wright was one of the early blacksmiths and had his shop near where Edward Loisele lives.

Ziba Ware, Levi Hardy, Theophilus Eveleth and still later Silas Woods carried on the business at the same place. Ziba Ware afterwards lived where Milton J. Stearns now resides, and had a shop just north of the road to George Wright's. (Map 110.) Timothy Dort had a shop a little south of his house where he did a large business. (Map 362.) His son Timothy, known as Capt. Dort, followed the same business, both here and afterwards at the village.

Early in the present century, Solomon Woods carried on blacksmithing at the lower village, and afterwards on the old Pease place in the south part of the town. His shop stood west of Day's store, and he had a trip-hammer on the brook below Mrs. Gates's. I have found no tradition or remembrance of this trip-hammer, but the passage to and from it is reserved in deeds of 1806-7.

The Days built a shop near the same place, (Map 352,) which was used by many workmen, among whom were a Boynton, Thomas T. Wetherbee, John Parmenter, and Zenas D. Metcalf.

John Burroughs was a blacksmith in the Factory Village, about 1821-4. He had a shop near Mrs. McCoy's house, which he moved to where Jacob Nash's house is, and put in a wheel to blow the bellows. He had another shop a little north of the elm between the roads at the head of the street.

Thomas T. Chapin bought out Mr. Burroughs and employed Tower Spear, Benjamin Eaton, and perhaps others. Tower Spear made "potato diggers," being assisted by Thomas T. Wetherbee and others. Nathaniel Trask was a blacksmith here about the same time.

John Harris had a shop a few rods north of Smith's Tavern. (Map 80.) He was probably the most skilful of Gilsum blacksmiths, easily keeping time with another workman, while shifting his sledge so as to strike alternate blows with each hand. He employed Phinehas Moor and others.

John Borden made nails in a shop near number 391. Enoch B. Mayo built the shop (Map 348,) now owned by Capt. Chandler, and worked there for about six years. Marvin Bigelow and others worked with him.

David Dean made nails and edge-tools on the place where Harvey Bates lives.

Eleazer Wilcox had a shop near his house where he did his own blacksmithing. (Map 353.)

Chilion Mack built a shop where he made awls, about 1830. It stood a little northeast of Dea, Brigham's barn, and was afterwards moved, and made into the house now owned by the widow Beckwith.

Zenas D. Metcalf carried on blacksmithing at various places for many years. He had a shop for a time, just south of Mrs. Dean's. (Map 361.)

Luke Houghton had a shop near the maple tree by the road north of the old Hendee house. (Map 360.) He worked here from 1856 to 1866 when he removed to where he now resides.

Philip R. Howard was a blacksmith and worked in various places. He and his brother George had a shop where they made hammers, a little west of the house where Samuel W. Dart lives. (Map 196.)

George S. Howard also had a hammer shop near Collins's Factory. (Chap. 37.)

About 1840, Luther Abbot put up a shop below the road near the Learoyd Brook and let it to Philip R. Howard. (Map 372.) About 1858, Mr. Howard had a shop on Mill Brook, above Alpheus Chapin's, (Map 185,) and still later at the north end of Kansas. (Map 168.)

George Stevens worked for several years in Capt. Chandler's shop. In 1876, he built the shop opposite Brake Hill, now occupied by Eugene Carpenter. (Map 346.) Byron J. Mullins now carries on the business in Capt. Chandler's shop.

In 1876, George W. Newman built a shop. (Map 347,) where his son Dudley carried on blacksmithing and carriage-making for a year or two, and then let it to Byron Alexander and his son Frank. In 1879, Charles H. Lamphere hired the upper part for a wheelwright shop.

Among other blacksmiths have been Amos Weeks, Samuel Ham, Alvin A. Beckwith, and James Bates.

CARPENTERS. — Of carpenters and joiners there have been a large number. Many who never served any regular apprenticeship have worked at the trade. Only a very imperfect list can be given. Moses Belding is the first whose name has been mentioned to me as a carpenter. Daniel Day of Keene built a good many houses in Gilsnm before 1800. Others are Stephen White, Gilbert Carson, Stephen Mansfield, Stephen Cross, Abram C. Wyman, Joseph Clark, Calvin C. Bingham, Thomas Howard, F. A. Howard, David A. Roundy, Allen Hayward, James Pickering, J. Q. Pickering, Lucius R. Guillow, John J. Isham.

SHOEMAKERS. — The early shoemakers went from house to house, mending old shoes, and making up the year's stock of new ones. This was called "whipping the cat," and was kept up to considerable extent till within about forty years of the present time. It was not uncommon for men who owned farms, to make shoes in the Winter, both at their own homes and at their neighbors'. Of this class was Israel Loveland and probably many others. His brother Aaron Loveland was a shoemaker by trade. He had but one hand, and his wife did the sewing for him. Another still earlier shoemaker was William Lamb. The first shoe shop in Gilsnm was built about 1822, by William Banks, a little north of where Day's store stands. When the store was built about 1833, this shop was moved to the south side of the road opposite Stephen Day's. In 1877, it was again moved to the north side of the road near the barn, and turned into a carpenter shop.

In 1828, John Taylor built a two-story shoe shop in what is now S. W. Dart's garden, just south of Dr. Webster's house. (Map 194.) The lower part was used as a currier's shop by Samuel White from Alstead. It has been moved to the Marlow road and is now occupied as a dwelling house by Byron Alexander. (Map 269.) Willard Hassall was Taylor's foreman in shoemaking. Levi Gates was a well-known shoemaker here for many years. He worked in the Banks shop, when it stood south of the street. Loren Loveland worked at shoemaking in the chambers of what is now N. O. Hayward's store. A. W. Kingsbury came here from Sullivan in 1835, and Amherst Hayward built for him that year, the shop in which he and his son Samuel still carry on the shoe business. (Map 201.) This was long known as "the red shop." Its upper story has been occupied by various tenants.

There have been many transient shoemakers working for A. W. Kingsbury or others, the list of whom it is now difficult to give. Oliver B. Kent learned the trade of Loren Loveland in 1836-7. Charles Newman worked with Mr. Kingsbury in 1848.

TAILORS so far as ascertained, have been Mrs. Lucy Hammond, William Parker, Gideon W. Huntress, and Eliza Bragg.

STORES.—Probably the first "store" in Gilsun was kept by John Mark. (Chap. 32) The following extracts from his account books will be of interest. The first is the account of Pelatiah Pease, dated November, 1792:—

1 Book for to learn to fife	6s	8d
1 qt Cider		2d
3 needles		1d
4 quoir of paper		7d
1 glass of rum		2d
1 mug of toddy	1s	2d
1 bole of toddy		6d
1 pare of verses		6d

James Ballard, Dec. 1792

Suit of trooping clothes	£	1	4/
1 Coat			4/
1 Coat & breeches			6/6
3 jackets			6/

From other accounts about this time we find that Beef was £1 per hundred, "Turkeys, 2/6 pr Pease." West India Rum, 8s. per gallon, Brandy 1s. a quart, Tea 2/10 to 3/ a pound, "Ribing 1/8 a yard," "Codfish fresh /3" a pound, "Shugar 1/" a pound, Butter 7 a pound, &c. Salt varied from 1/4 to 8/6 a bushel.

One charge I have been able to find no explanation of. It is to Elijah Bond, Nov. 1792. "1 rate for the poor man 1/1/1 qr"

It is probable that a store was established very early at the "Mills," but the first of which any certain knowledge is now at hand, was by Stephen Griswold, early in the present century. His account books show that at least three-fourths of his trade was in rum.

He charged 20 cts for "a mug of flip or toddy." In 1809 half a yard of "Callico" is charged at 30 cts. Flour was 4½ cents a pound—"a Shall, 5/—"Maple sugar ninepence a pound. A glass of rum was 4 cents—a Gill, 8 cents—Wool 2/ a pound—"half an ounce of Camphire" 21 cents—Corn 50 cents a bushel,—Wheat 84 cents.

Jonathan Pease also had a store in the upper part of the Mill. Lemuel Bingham kept store for a time in Dea. Pease's house, and afterwards in the house where Dr. Webster lives. There were probably others of which we have no account.

About 1826, Samuel Woodward had a store in Smith's Tavern for a short time.

In 1829, Jehiel and Daniel Day opened a store in the Factory Village. They carried on an extensive business for several years, till they removed to the West.

In 1833, Franklin W. Day & Co. built the store at the Lower Village, and had a large amount of custom not only in Gilsun, but from the neighboring towns. At Mr. Day's death in 1849, this store was closed, and has not since been opened. These stores, as indeed all others, till as late as 1840, made their principal profit from the sale of New England Rum. This was the grand staple, and one of the greatest obstacles to the Temperance movement was that no merchant thought he could live by trade, without selling rum.

Amherst Hayward bought the stand of J. and D. Day, and in 1839, let it to Luther Abbot. About a year later, Ezra Webster hired it, and continued in trade here for seven years. The store remained closed for two years, when Dr. Webster and Ebenezer Jones took the business. After six years Mr. Jones sold to N. O. Hayward and F. A. Howard. This firm traded two years, when Dr. Webster withdrew, and the others continued the business six years. Then A. D.

Hammond bought out Mr. Howard. Since 1872, the firm has been N. O. Hayward and Son. In November, 1879, they sold out to John A. Smith.

Davis H. Wilson had a store at the upper end of the village, in the house built by Lemuel Bingham on the east side of the street, where N. O. Hayward now lives. He continued trade here from 1852 to 1857.

About 1841, Luther Abbot built the house where Mrs. Hathhorn now lives, opened a store, and continued business there till he went to Stoddard in 1846.

In 1864, L. W. F. Mark opened the store which he still occupies.

In 1870, George W. Newman built the store and house on the corner of Sullivan Street. His sons carried on business here till 1878, when A. D. Hammond began the trade which he still continues.

TAVERNS. — Formerly, taverns were much more numerous in country towns than at the present. One of the earliest was kept by John Mark. In 1792, his charge for lodging was 6d, for keeping a Horse over night, 9d. Samuel Bill also kept tavern about the beginning of the century, in the south part of the house now occupied by his son David. There was a tavern for many years, where Edouard Loiselee lives. It was first kept by Daniel Wright and afterwards by Fortunatus Eager. Ziba Ware and after him William Baxter kept it for a few years.

Ebenezer Dart was licensed to keep tavern in 1795. He lived on the Hendee place.

James Grimes had a tavern opposite the old Meeting House, as early as 1804. In 1806, he sold to Dudley Smith, who continued the business here for nearly thirty years.

Stephen Griswold kept tavern at "the Mills" for some years, and after him Jonathan Pease. Stephen Day, Jr., kept tavern at the same place from 1837 to 1840. Probably there were others here earlier.

In 1830, Jehiel Day opened the "Ashuelot Hotel" in the Factory Village. When he left in 1837, the tavern remained closed for about three years. In 1839, Timothy Dort bought the stand and kept public house there for eight years.

In 1848, Ezra Webster opened the "Village Hotel" which he managed till his death in 1864.

Hervey E. Rawson next took it for three years, after which he sold to Albert Hubbard who still owns it.

MISCELLANEOUS. — On May Brook, a little above the river road, (Map 106,) John Bingham, Jr., built a shop about 1800, the foundation of which can still be seen. Here he turned wooden bowls, plates, and like utensils.

On the same brook, (Map 365,) the Mays built a dam and put in a "lazy saw."

Thomas T. Chapin built a dam for a mill just below the Village in 1827. After his death, (Chap. 26,) Luther Abbot bought the privilege and built a Starch Factory. (Map 219,) which he ran about five years.

In 1861, A. D. Hammond and Milon Loveland hired the Abbot mill and put in machinery for manufacturing chair backs. They carried on the business about five years.

Luther Hemenway built the shop on the brook near his house in 1830. (Map 271.) Here he and his sons carried on the awl business for more than twenty years.

A few rods below on the same brook, (Map 272,) may be seen the ruins of an old dam and foundations for a mill. This was begun by Joseph Foster of Sullivan, 1830-1, but never finished.

About 1832, Solon W. Eaton built a shop where Collins's Factory stands, for wood-turning and making awls. Zenas D. Metcalf was in company with him for a time. The next year,

Alfred Beckwith put a shingle mill into the same building. In 1836 it was taken by Thurston & Co. for the flannel business. (Page 139.)

About 1836, Chilion Mack built a shop on the brook east of his house, where he carried on the awl business for several years.

About 1846, Linus and Jacob Nash built a turning shop on the brook near Josiah Guillow's. (Map 370.) Wishing to divide the property, they sawed it in two in the middle, and it was afterwards made into a house. (Chap. 38.)

In 1834-5, a wheelwright and paint shop was built a little south of where Taylor's Tannery stood. It was carried on by Jerome B. Aldrich, till 1841. After that it was used for various purposes.

About 1830, Chilion Mack built a wheelwright shop southwest of his house, where A. W. Kingsbury's garden now is. He carried on the business here only a few years. It was afterwards occupied as a tenement. (Chap. 36.)

Money being scarce, Potash and Pearlash were formerly used as a standard of exchange. (Page 102.) The manufacture was carried on in many places, a large part of which are now forgotten. One of the earliest was on the Fuller place a little west of Daniel Smith's house. Another was north of the road about 20 rods east of Harriet Swinton's, and still another at the upper end of the village near Henry McCoy's barn.

A man named Thompson, afterwards of Peterboro', kept a jeweler's shop in the room north of J. and D. Day's store, for a year or two about 1835.

CHAPTER XXIV.

CENSUS RETURNS.

The first Census of the State was taken in 1767. The returns from Gilsun were as follows.

Unmarried men from 16 to 60	7
Married Do. Do.	22
Boys from 16 years & under	36
Men 60 years & above	1
Females unmarried	39
Females married	23
Slaves	0

Total 128

In the "List of Rateable Estates of the Several Towns as settled by the General Assembly for a new Proportion which each Town pays to £1000," the following is set down to Gilsun:—

Amount of Rateable Estate	£800
Proportion to £1000	£1:18
Number of Polls	31

In a similar List for May, 1773, we find for Gilsun:—

Rateable Estates	£38
Proportion to £1000	£1:16
Number of Polls	37

At the same time Surry is reported as having 47 Polls and Rateable Estates, £55.

The "Rateable Estates" are evidently given on a reduced scale. The increase of population in these six years is very great, certainly not less than 100 per cent, and probably more.

By order of Gov. John Wentworth, a Census was taken in 1773. The returns from "Gilsom" were the following:—

Unmarried men 16 to 60		17
Married Do. Do.		21
Boys 16 years and under		32
Men 60 years and upwards		4
Females unmarried		37
Females married		22
Slaves		0
Total		139

Surry returned a total of 208.

In 1786, the Legislature ordered a new Census, and Gilsom made this return:—

The Number of the souls that are in Gilsom are as follows

females from 16 and under		113
females from 16 too 21		16
females from 21 and upward		72
males from 16 and under		78
males from 16 too 21		7
males from 21 and upward		78

JONATHAN ADAMS }
TIMOTHY DIMMUCK } Selectmen
EBENEZER BILL }

In 1767, Gilsom included all of Surry except "Westmoreland Leg," and the whole number of polls was 31, but in 1773, Gilsom alone had 37, and the two towns, including "Westmoreland Leg," 84. In 1775, Gilsom reported a total population of 178. (Page 34.) In 1777, Gilsom made return of "51 male polls eighteen years old & upward," 16 Horses, 32 Oxen, 47 Cows. In 1784, Gilsom reported 71 Ratable Polls. Surry made no return.

Sullivan having been set off in 1787, the first return from Gilsom in its present form, is 47 Ratable Polls, 18 Horses, 21 Oxen, and 86 Cows.

In 1790, the population was 298, males 134, females 164.

An Inventory of taxable property in Gilsom returned to the State 1793, is as follows.

Number of Polls between 18 and 70 years		59.
Orchard Land		0
Arable or tillage land		68 acres.
Mowing Land		252 acres.
Pasture Land		367 acres.
Horses & Mares		26.
Oxen		34.
Cows		94.
Horses & Cattle 2 [prob. 3,] years old		43.
2 years old		35.
1 year old		37.

Sum total of all buildings and real estate unimproved and owned by the inhabitants at half per cent, £9. 11 sh. 4 d.

Sum total of value of real estate not owned by inhabitants, £276. 10 sh.

This indicates a total value of buildings and unimproved Real Estate of nearly $7,300.

Census returns for 1800 have not been found. In 1810, there were 133 persons engaged in Agriculture and 18 in Manufacturing. The population was 267 males and 246 females, 513 in all, of whom 165 were under ten years of age.

In 1820, population 601, males 287, females 314, under ten 171.

In 1830, population 642, males 323, females 319, under ten 180, of whom 93 were under five. There were 14 persons over 70, of whom one is reported to be over 100. This was probably a mistake, as the oldest person at that time is said to have been Mrs. Nash, who died that year aged 95.

In 1840, population 656, males 323, females 333, over seventy 28, between five and ten 89, under five 106, pupils in schools 218. 172 persons engaged in Agriculture, and 41 in Manufacturing. There were 91 horses, 555 neat cattle, 1,529 sheep, 126 swine, and $161 worth of poultry. There were raised 578 bushels of wheat, 573 of barley, 4,076 of oats, 787 of rye, 2,288 of Indian corn, 15,858 of potatoes, 1,237 tons of hay, 3,602 pounds of wool, 90 of flax, 15,835 of sugar, $1,559 worth of dairy products, $451 worth of fruit, and 299 cords of wood sold. There were $1,427 worth of home manufactures, and $2,000 worth of hardware and cutlery.

In 1850, population 668, males 341, females 327, over ninety 1, between eighty and ninety 6, between seventy and eighty 24, between five and ten 70, under five 77, pupils in schools 230. There were 135 dwellings, and 141 families.

In 1860, population 678, males 334, females 344, between ninety and one hundred 1, between eighty and ninety 9, between seventy and eighty 28, between five and ten 77, under five 66. One is reported to be 100 which is a mistake. Stephen White was then in his hundredth year. There were 145 dwellings and 146 families.

In 1870, population 590, males 288, females 302, over ninety 1, between eighty and ninety 10, between seventy and eighty 28, between five and ten 50, under five 59. There were 136 dwellings and 153 families.

In an account of Manufactures in Gilsun, taken in 1832 by George W. Hammond, by request of Congress, to assist in revising the Tariff, we find the following.

Amount of business in Tannery	$1,601.16	Blacksmithing	$1,450.00
Spiral Gimblets	1,600.00	Shoes & Boots	800.00
Pegging Awls	1,500.00	Home-made Flannel, 2,433 yds.	1,216.00
Woolen Factory, Brigham & Cole	2,000.00	Linen Cloth, 1,364 yds.	227.33
Starch, 60,000 lbs.	2,100.00	Maple Sugar, 10,070 lbs.	805.60

Whole number of inhabitants 645, whole number of families 132. 10 families are under the care of widows, and 22 live in hired houses. There are 13 females in single life over 30 years of age, and only five males in the same state to match them; 24 widows, and 8 widowers. There are 67 persons over 60 years of age, of whom 7 or 8 are over 80. There are 118 dwelling houses, and one family now lives in "a snug new log house in true ancient style." The Factory Village contains 22 dwelling houses containing 28 families, one Meeting House, 2 Stores, one Tavern, 3 Blacksmith's Shops, 2 Turning Shops with water power, one Tannery, one Shoe Shop, one Wheelwright Shop, one Saw-mill. The other village contains one Store, one Grist-mill and Saw-mill with Shingle-mill attached and also a Carding machine, with only 5 dwelling houses containing 6 families. There are in town 6 Justices, 2 Physicians, 6 Carpenters, 5 Blacksmiths, 1 Millwright, 2 Coopers, and "one man makes shingles by boiling the timber and cutting them while hot with a large knife in a machine." There are 3 Woolen Factories, but only one in operation — 2 establishments for making Awls — 3 Saw-mills, 2 of which have Shingle-mills attached. There are 3 merchants, and one Tavern. "Most of the inhabitants of Gilsun are in comfortable circumstances at present as to the things of this life, being generally industrious they maintain themselves, but there are now 3 or 4 persons who the town has to support at an expense for the current year of about $220." The number of voters last March was 135. No. of rateable Polls 145, besides these are 7 Widows and 3 Single women who pay taxes. There were taken in town one daily, 122 weeklies, and 13 monthlies. During 1842 there were 19 Births, 6 Marriages and 5 Deaths.

In 1794 there were 67 houses with families; in 1800, 73; in 1815, 82; in 1820, 110; in 1862, 134; in 1864, 150; Jan. 1, 1866, 158. In 1864 there were 122 husbands with wives, 9 widowers, and 19 widows. There were 19 persons between 70 and 80, and 5 over 80. The greatest number of deaths reported in any one year was 24 in 1820, the next greatest was 19 in 1849; the least number was 4 in 1840.

At the present time, Dec. 31, 1879, there are 611 inhabitants, 310 males and 301 females.

There are 9 under one year, 41 between one and five, 53 between five and ten, 109 between 10 and 20, 94 between 20 and 30, 86 between 30 and 40, 65 between 40 and 50, 65 between 50 and 60, 45 between 60 and 70, 29 between 70 and 80, 14 between 80 and 90, and one 96 years of age. There are 31 widows, and 14 widowers; women over 20 who were never married, 30; men in the same state, 37. There are 161 dwellings not reckoning separate tenements in the same house, 22 of which are not inhabited, and containing 176 families. Births in 1879 were 8; deaths 11.

So far as can be readily ascertained the following periodicals were taken in Gilsum for the year 1879:—

Dailies:—Boston Journal, Boston Herald, Boston Post, one each.

Semi-weeklies:—Boston Journal, Inter Ocean, one each.

Weeklies:—Portland Transcript, New York Atlas, New Orleans Picayune, Springfield (Vt.) Reporter, New York Sun, Republican Observer, New York Express, L'Opinion Publique, Massachusetts Plowman, Deseret News, State Press, New York Ledger, Voice of Angels, Kansas Volks Freund, Family Herald & Weekly Star, Golden Censor, one each; New York Messenger, Wochenblatt der New York Zeitung, two each; Boston Pilot, Home Circle, Christian Union, three each; Boston Globe, Child's Paper, Herald of Gospel Liberty, four each; New York Times, Well Spring, Sunday School Times, five each; Christian at Work, six; Youth's Companion, Mirror and Farmer, Independent Statesman, seven each; New England Farmer, American Cultivator, eight each; Granite State Journal, nine; Boston Journal, twenty-two; People, twenty-three; New Hampshire Sentinel, thirty-three; Cheshire Republican, forty-nine.

Monthlies:—American Agriculturist, Atlantic, Scribner's, St. Nicholas, Potter's American Monthly, Journal of Chemistry, Granite Monthly, Life and Light, Scottish American Journal, Contributor, one each; Scientific American, Christian World, Bible Society Record, two each; Missionary Herald, four; American Missionary, Household, People's Illustrated Journal, five each; Peterson's Magazine, Home Missionary, six each; American Messenger, nine; Illustrated Family Monthly, twelve.

Quarterlies:—Ehrich's Fashion Quarterly, two; Smith's Bazar, five.

Total:—Three dailies, two semi-weeklies, two hundred and thirty-five weeklies, sixty-four monthlies, and seven quarterlies.

The following statistics are taken mainly from a record kept by Dea. Hayward, and continued after his death, by N. O. Hayward. The particular deaths are not on record previous to 1825. In ten years ending May 1, 1825, there were 80 deaths, including 29 over 50 years of age, 7 between 30 and 50, 16 between 10 and 30, and 28 under ten. The largest number of deaths in Gilsum in any one year, so far as known, is 24 in 1820. From 1825 to 1879, a period of 55 years, there have been 542 deaths in town, making an average death rate of a little less than ten, or about one in 60 of the population. The largest number was 19 in 1849; the smallest, four each in 1840, 1865, and 1873. Of these deaths, 72 were under one year of age; 88 between one and 10; 33 between 10 and 20; 52 between 20 and 30; 46 between 30 and 40; 29 between 40 and 50; 30 between 50 and 60; 56 between 60 and 70; 80 between 70 and 80; 47 between 80 and 90; and 9 over 90, five of which were over 95, and one within a few months of 100. The average age is very nearly 39 years, probably full that, if the months were taken into account. Not many towns, it is believed, can show a record so favorable as this, either in the average age, or in the ratio of deaths to the population.

The causes of death are not given prior to 1835. The great mortality in 1820 was from a fatal fever, then called typhus. The large number of deaths in 1849 was owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever among the children, seven of whom died of that disease. During these 45 years, 443 deaths are reported, and the cause is mentioned of 360. Among the more prominent causes are the following: — 15 or 20 can be traced directly to intemperance, and many more indirectly; heart diseases 11; cancer 13; apoplexy 15; accident 16; scarlet fever 22; bowel complaints 24; fevers 29; old age 45: lung diseases 114.

CHAPTER XXV.

CELEBRATIONS.

"Sound the fife and beat the drum,
Independence day has come!
Bring the banjo and the fiddle,
To-day we dance ter-diddle-diddle.
Jotham, git the great, big bottle,
Your teeth can pull the corn-cob stopple."

THESE ancient rhymes are doubtless a picture of the hilarious celebrations many of our grandfathers were wont to observe on the Fourth of July. Music, dancing, and drinking, with firing of cannon, and patriotic speeches, were probably rarely omitted on the return of that "glorious" anniversary. Only a few celebrations, however, have been sufficiently prominent to be remembered now. It is known that the first minister, Rev. Elisha Fish, delivered a Fourth of July Oration, but the year cannot now be ascertained. It was probably before 1800. There was also a celebration of the beginning of the Century in 1801, at which time he delivered a Poem. It is much to be regretted that neither of these manuscripts has been preserved.

In 1823, just after the cannon had been taken from Keene, it was thought best to make the Fourth of July an occasion to be remembered. The Meeting House with Smith's Tavern opposite, was of course the place of gathering. The cannon was brought out and four kegs of powder of 25 lbs. each, were burned. The Oration was in the Meeting House, but the festivities subsequent were on the Common, booths of boughs having been built there, under whose shade the women and children found shelter from the sun. Capt. Solomon Mack was Marshal, and Willard Bill, then just arrived at manhood, was the Orator. The following extracts and synopsis will give a general idea of the oration. It begins as follows: —

"Assembled together at this time for the celebration of the birthday of our national Independence, it is with the greatest satisfaction that we hail the auspicious moment for the now happy and flourishing state of the nation, that we are free from intestine commotions and outward foes, that we are in the midst of peace and plenty, that our liberties remain unmolested, unimpaired by time, and that we have a pleasing prospect of their future continuance. It is on no ordinary occasion that we have met. Worthy to be remembered by every American and grateful to his memory must be the commencement of his liberties and deliverance from the tyrannical grasp of a foreign power."

The value of such a celebration in its tendency to foster the love of Liberty, was next spoken of; after which the Declaration was read. Then followed a cursory review of the prominent events of the Revolution, and a comparison with the celebrated heroic actions of past history. "More true bravery cannot be found in the history of any country than was displayed by the undisciplined militia engaged in the different attacks . . . in the Revolutionary War." Attention is next called to the present state of the country, contrasted with what it would have been if the result of the war had been reversed. "Ten millions of freemen can attest to the present prosperity of our country, for there has been no time since the first settlement that a greater portion of happiness has been enjoyed than is enjoyed at the present time. . . . Although no human mind can look through the veil of futurity with certainty, yet we may infer from present appearances that Freedom's banner will in time be unfurled through all the habitable parts of the globe."

Other countries are then contrasted with our own and gratitude expressed to God for the superior blessings we enjoy. The oration closes as follows: "But in all our happiness let our fervent ejaculations ascend to Heaven that in all our prosperity we may be kept from those vices frequently attendant on prosperity, particularly that we may not pollute the sacred name of Liberty by the frenzy of licentious passions, but may our present glorious Constitution while it protects our freedom from the unhallowed ravages of Tyranny, remain an unshaken bulwark against the destructive fury of faction."

Tyrants, turn from the impious work of blood in which your hands are imbued and tremble at the desperation of your revolting subjects. Repent in sackcloth and ashes. For behold, ye, who have been exalted up to heaven shall ere long be cast down to hell. The final period of your crimes is rapidly approaching when the Spaniard, the Greek, and the Jew shall no longer be oppressed, nor feel the iron bondage of despotic sway. The grand political millennium is at hand, when Tyranny shall be buried in ruins, when all nations shall be united in one mighty Republic, when the four angels that stand on the four corners of the earth shall with one accord lift up their voices to heaven proclaiming peace on earth and good-will to men."

At another celebration, not long after, it is remembered that Dr. Jonathan E. Davis gave the oration.

About 1830, there was a Sabbath School Celebration at the Old Meeting House.

In 1832 or 1833, Day's Hall (now Chandler's) was dedicated with a Celebration of Independence. Dea. Brigham read the Declaration.

In 1834, there was a semi-military celebration, Sullivan Company joining the parade with Gilsum. Charles Cummings gave an oration on the Common near the Meeting House, the frame of which had just been raised.

July 4, 1835, there was a Temperance Celebration, with an oration by "a son of Squire Hatch of Alstead."

In 1838, the Anti-slavery Society, which had just been organized, celebrated the day with an address from Rev. Moses Grosvenor of Marlboro'.

In 1843, there was a Sabbath School Temperance Celebration of Independence in the village. A stand was built near the old Hay Scales, tables of food were provided, the seats and tables being shaded with green boughs. A procession largely composed of children marched up and down Main Street, music being furnished by Amherst Hayward with his bass-viol, assisted by Charles W. Bingham with a violin. A Temperance oration was delivered by William P. Wheeler, Esq., of Keene.

In 1844, a "rum celebration" was attempted, but proved "a fizzle." (Page 93.)

The Nation's Centennial was celebrated on the Sunday after July 4, 1876, by religious services in the Meeting House. (Page 116.)

In 1878, after bell-ringing and cannon during the day, Independence evening was observed by a torchlight procession in masquerade. The Captain of the Company was Uriah Bates. After parading the streets, they entertained the crowd with songs and a brief patriotic oration. The singing was by Timothy O'Leary and George Deets, disguised as "Aunt Deborah and Aunt Dinah." The orator was C. W. Bingham, Esq., in antique costume, represented as "Elder Hardy."

CHAPTER XXVI.

CASUALTIES.

BRIDGES, dams, and mills have been frequently destroyed by floods. (Chap. 13.) The mill by the Stone Bridge was washed away when William Baxter owned it, and Samuel Whitney rebuilt it. The same mill was nearly all swept away when Dea. Pease owned it, about 1810. Aaron Loveland's mill was carried away by a freshet in 1825, and the citizens helped him build. Oct. 4, 1869, occurred a very extensive flood doing great damage in many places. Charles W. Bingham's house was washed away that night. He had just built, and had moved in most of his household goods, but not his family. He was sleeping there himself, and barely escaped through the chamber window to the bank. Furniture, books, and provisions were scattered and largely destroyed. The neighbors helped him liberally in his time of need.

In June, 1787 or 1788, Abraham Griffin was chopping with his son Nathan, when a tree fell on him, injuring him so that he died in about a fortnight. Jonathan Adams took one of his boys to bring up, and changed his name from Lot to Erastus. About 1790, as Mr. Adams was chopping off the butt of a large tree, that had been blown over by the wind, the boy came up behind the root, which falling back, killed him instantly.

June 29, 1798, Jonathan Raymond, while at a chopping bee on the old Downing place in Marlow, was instantly killed by the fall of a tree.

Sept. 1, 1813, Thomas Redding, Jr., was returning home from "training." Coming to the bridge by Pease's mill, he apparently steadied himself by the side railing. About half way across, the top board was missing, and when he reached that place he pitched over and was drowned.

David Smith was killed, March 20, 1825, by the fall of timber, at the raising of "the plastered house," a little south of Vessel Rock. When the house was taken down, about fifty years after, spots of blood were found on the frame.

Oct. 10, 1827, Thomas T. Chapin was drowned at the dam where Cuthbert and Minor's Factory now is. There was a great freshet and he was trying to prevent the breaking away of the dam. His brother Justus caught hold of him, but the current was so powerful that both would have been swept away, had not others held him on the bank.

A child of Zenas D. Metcalf, named George Everett, was drowned in one of Taylor's tan-vats, Oct. 18, 1832.

Feb. 21, 1835, an infant child of Esek T. Greene was accidentally smothered while riding to a neighbor's in a cold day.

Oct. 5, 1835, Harriet E., a child of Enoch B. Mayo, was killed by the falling of a cart that was set up on end in the yard where she was playing.

John Thompson was killed Dec. 6, 1840, by some injury received while putting up his cattle in the evening. He came into the house, and sitting down, died almost instantly.

Stephen Foster, 3d, while returning from Surry late in the evening, Nov. 12, 1844, was killed by the upsetting of his wagon just where the road turns towards the house now occupied by Daniel Wright.

Aaron Hammond Nash, while bathing in the pond at Charles Nash's mill, was drowned June 3, 1849.

Ap. 23, 1851, while James Bolster was returning from Stoddard, he was thrown from his wagon, near Luther Abbot's, and died there two days after.

Phedrus Parker of Sullivan, while bathing in Silsby's pond, was drowned, May 23, 1852.

Oct. 21, 1856, Asa Nash went to the woods with his son to cut some wood. His son found the tree was about to fall, and called to his father to be out of the way. Somewhat startled and confused by the call, he jumped right under the tree. He lived only a few minutes.

July 20, 1857, while hastily running to the house, where they were haying in Walpole, Hollis and Franklin, sons of Marvin Gates, were struck down with lightning, and Hollis was instantly killed.

Dec. 3, 1857, Allen Nash was found dead by the road-side, where he had apparently fallen in a fit.

While returning from Keene, March 5, 1860, Truman Bill was thrown from his wagon and instantly killed, near the head of Beaver Falls.

Dec. 3, 1861, Philip R. Howard was choked to death with a piece of tough beef.

About the first of February, 1869, Temple Baker had his leg broken by a kick from a cow, and died in a few days.

Charles C., son of Francis C. Minor, was drowned in the flume near Cuthbert and Minor's mill, July 27, 1869.

Ap. 26, 1870, George Augustus Griggs, one of Mr. Burnap's teamsters, while driving a load up Bingham hill, was killed instantly by a blow on his head from a contrary horse. The spot is marked by the letter G cut in the rock on the east side of the road.

James Welsh was thrown from his horse near the "dug-way" on Sullivan Street, Nov. 24, 1870, and died the next day.

Dec. 21, 1875, a Frenchman named Coté was thrown from his sled, near Mr. Gunn's, and died two days after.

While examining a loaded pistol, July 23, 1877, George H. Dean was shot through the head, and lived only a few hours.

Charles E. Crouch in attempting to cross the dam near Newman's mill fell into the water below, and was drowned, Oct. 22, 1878.

Mrs. Matilda Nash was killed June 16, 1829, by Daniel H. Corey. He was certainly insane. In his boyhood he was naturally strange. His grandmother and sister were both insane, so that his affection was doubtless hereditary. This natural tendency, increased by the frequent use of strong drink, rendered him dangerous. He had wild notions about gold and silver on his farm, and dug a mine in which he worked for a long time. He was also afraid of witches, and thought his black cat was a witch. Every old woman he saw, he would call a witch. His wife and children had become more than usually alarmed and went to Daniel Nash's. Old Mrs. Nash thought perhaps she might quiet him, and took her granddaughter and a bundle of flax making it appear she was going to hatchel it. Corey was lying down when she came, and called out, "Go along off, you old witch." He then got up and took his gun. They started for home, and the girl got away, but he caught Mrs. Nash close by the town line, and struck her over the head with his gun several times, striking so hard that the barrel came out of the stock, and killing her almost instantly. When asked about it, he said he hadn't done anything but kill "an old witch." He was tried for murder, the jury disagreeing; and while lodged in Keene jail, made his escape by the assistance of friends, and, as was always believed, the connivance of the authorities. He went to New York, where his family afterwards joined him.

Alarming accidents not resulting in death have been frequent. A few are here given.

About 1796, Amherst Hayward, then a boy of eight years, while at play where his father had been digging sand from the bank just east of C. W. Bingham's house, was suddenly buried by the falling in of the bank. The screams of the other children brought his father to the spot, barely in season to save his life.

About 1820, Luke Hemenway, while bathing with others in the pond by the "Pease Mill," struck his head against a rock in diving, and would have drowned but for the energetic assistance of Justin Pease.

About 1836, John U. Weeks accidentally "turned his ankle." The sprain not being properly cared for, he was obliged to have his leg amputated.

One Fourth of July, David Brigham got into his water-wheel to repair it. It soon began to turn, and he had to step from one float to another, and kept going faster. He finally obtained help, and was taken out much frightened and exhausted.

Dec. 8, 1837, C. B. Hayward, while riding from Keene to Swanzey, was thrown from the Stone Bridge, about a mile below Keene Street, and taken up senseless. It was three days before he was able to be brought home.

Sept. 21, 1838, occurred one of those numerous accidents from carelessness with fire-arms supposed to be unloaded. A High School was at that time kept by Mr. Ash in what is now Chandler's Hall. At noon-time the girls were laughing and talking on the stairs and in the front entry. One of their number thinking to scare them, slipped into the next room where a gun stood in the corner. Having no suspicion it could be loaded, she procured a percussion cap, and putting the muzzle of the gun into the entry through the partially opened door, suddenly snapped it. It proved to be loaded, and two of the girls were seriously wounded with shot in side and shoulder. None of the actors in this almost tragedy are now living.

At the muster of Sept. 16, 1842, in Keene, Jesse Dart had his left hand badly injured by the explosion of his musket. He had, as he supposed, discharged his gun with the rest of the company. But unnoticed by him it had failed each time, till he got six cartridges in it together. Sanford Guillow had his leg injured by the same explosion.

In January, 1843, James Bolster, while returning from Marlow in the evening, upset his wagon and was very badly gashed in the face. So much blood flowed from it, that it extended "about a yard like a small stream or brook." He was supposed to have lain senseless for considerable time. By the assistance of Mr. Andrew Towne's family, he was enabled to reach home in safety.

Oct. 18, 1843, James Davis was thrown from his horse and taken up for dead, but recovered, having a shoulder and several ribs broken.

March 22, 1844, Benjamin Hosmer Horton, then about six years of age, while playing near the door of his grandfather, Stephen Day's house, was kicked on the head by a horse. He was taken up for dead, but came to in about three hours. The only permanent injury was a partial loss of hearing.

In 1845, Sylvester Nash had his leg cut off, on account of fever sores brought on by going into the water too frequently.

In 1851, Adelaide M. Townsend fell into the flume near Cuthbert and Minor's mill, and was barely brought to in several hours. She fell into the water again after the family went to Harrisville, but was rescued immediately.

In 1856, Israel B. Loveland lost a leg in consequence of an injury done to the knee, some years before.

Jesse Dart had one hand mostly destroyed by a circular saw, in March, 1857.

Elizabeth M. Howard lost one foot from an injury received at play in 1857.

March 31, 1872, Lawrence Brennan, a boy of about thirteen years, had his left arm crushed and torn off under a belt in Collins's Factory.

In 1874, Mrs. Sarah G. Wood had one leg amputated on account of a fever sore of long standing.

While Fred F. Willard was swinging in a barn at Keene, Nov. 13, 1879, a pistol in his pocket was accidentally discharged, wounding his left leg severely.

Jan. 21, 1880, Timothy O'Leary, in attempting to put a band on a drum of the main driving shaft in Collins's Factory, was caught by his arm, and whirled around the shaft several times, before it could be stopped. His arm was amputated below the elbow.

About 1781, a violent tornado passed over Gilsum. The principal effect now remembered was the sweeping down of the heavy growth of pines on Surry mountain and the hill east of Hammond Hollow. Many hundreds of those old pines rotted and were burned on the ground. Some still remember the huge logs which lay on these hills, and which would now be worth thousands of dollars for lumber. They have been mostly burned by hunters' fires.

On Sunday afternoon, July 1, 1877, between five and six o'clock, occurred another tornado or whirlwind. At the village there was a very black cloud with a great amount of sharp lightning and a heavy shower of rain, lasting about an hour. But the report of what had taken place in the south part of the town was hardly believed at first. Apparently beginning on the crown of the hill just south of where the original Pease house stood, it took a general course a little south of east. Striking the Webster barn on the east of the road it left a mass of ruins mingled with farm utensils broken under the falling timber. Tearing up part of the sugar and apple orchards of B. H. Britton and Calvin Wright, it lifted the School House from its foundation and turned the front from the south to east, scarcely disturbing even the plastering upon the walls. Crescit eundo. Rending from the ground nearly the whole of the Woodward orchard, it tore the barns and sheds into kindling wood, and partly unroofed the house. One building was swept clean from the foundations and shivered to splinters, scattered for many rods in the path of the whirlwind, while the grindstone and ploughs that were stored under it, were entirely undisturbed. Only the heavy oaken frame of the old Wilcox house on the hill, saved it from utter demolition. Standing in the path of the tempest, it was unroofed and rendered uninhabitable, while the barns and other buildings were mostly destroyed. Pouring over the hill with redoubled fury, large trees were twisted off like twigs in its path. Nearly the whole of the maples and apple-trees on Lansing Wilder's place were destroyed. His house was partially unroofed, the windows broken, the ell part ruined, and all but one of his out-buildings demolished. Heavy pieces of timber were carried long distances, boards were driven in some instances several feet into the ground, and left standing in the track. A shingle was observed driven into the bark of a maple-tree and standing firmly there. After destroying full twenty buildings in Gilsum it passed on through Sullivan, Nelson, and Hancock.

CHAPTER XXVII.

HUNTING STORIES.

BEARS, wolves and deer were frequently killed by the first settlers. Only a few anecdotes remain. Moose were very rarely seen. I remember hearing the story of a moose hunt somewhere in this vicinity, when the man who discovered him was so excited that he forgot to shoot, but cried out, "I see the moose! I see the moose!" who of course speedily got out of the way. At certain seasons of the year, deer were protected by law. Hence the early records of Surry show the appointment of "deer-rieves," who were officers to enforce the laws against the hunters.

Bears were often seen even by the children. Horace Hayward and his younger brother Amherst out berrying when quite small boys, saw a bear on a burnt log, picking blackberries. They shouted at him and he ran off. Benjamin Corey remembers going home from the neighbors, when he was about 12 years old, and running against a bear in the dark, felt him brush against him. He ran back and got some one to go home with him. That it was a bear was known from the tracks found there in the morning. He also remembers that Paul Farnsworth caught a bear in a log-trap. Another log-trap set for a bear caught Thomas Powell's "big hog."

Zenas Bingham and his two sisters were frightened home from berry-picking by a bear, about the beginning of the century.

A bear took a shote from Samuel Mark's pen. Mr. Mark pursued him with an ax, but the bear showing fight, he ran across to Capt. Holdridge's for a gun. When he got back, the bear had got so far away that pursuit was useless.

Capt. David Fuller had an encounter with a bear on Surry mountain. The versions of the story differ greatly. One says it was when he was a young man, and was going home from his clearing without any gun. The bear had been previously wounded and was lame, so that he thought he might overtake and dispatch her with his ax. Others say it was after his marriage, and while living with his first wife, that he had a gun and shot the bear who at once fell down. Thinking her dead, he neglected to reload, but on approaching the bear, she suddenly turned and attacked him. He fled for his life and climbed a tree, where the bear guarded him a long time before he could raise help by his cries. His brother Levi in Surry, and others in the Hammond Hollow, and some who were at work on the Hendee place, heard him and started to his assistance. Twenty or thirty came from Surry. Squire Blish was at work clearing, and had an ax in his hand. Seeing the bear close by, he absent-mindedly dropped his ax, and looked around for a club. It was just at night, and the bear got away. It was very dark, and the company lighted pine torches to get home by.

The rocky hill known from the earliest times as "Bearden," was evidently a great resort for bears, and was doubtless well-known to the Indian hunters. It is related of Peter Hayward that he and John Borden chased a bear into a den in this mountain. The place is well-known, under a projecting rock a little south of the overhanging cliff at the north end of the ledge. Mr. Hayward undauntedly followed the bear, leaving Mr. Borden to shoot him as he came out. Having come to a narrow place between two parts of the den, the bear was alarmed and squeezed out between his legs. Mr. Borden snapped his gun at the bear, but it flashed in the pan, and he got away. To the early settlers this would be quite a serious loss. They were often brought to very close straits for provisions, and had to depend almost entirely on success in hunting. It is related of this same Peter Hayward that one Friday noon he found their meat and meal were all used up, and they hadn't bread to last till Monday, nor had he any money with which to buy. About four o'clock, leaving his boys to go on with their work, he took his gun, (a very long one, now owned by N. O. Hayward,) and went over west on the hills about a mile. As he was looking about, he saw a fine buck rubbing his horns against a tree. The distance was thirty or forty rods, but he feared to try to get nearer, and putting an extra bullet in his gun, and in the extremity of his need, lifting a prayer for success, he fired and killed him. He hung up three of the quarters out of the way of wolves, and carried the hide and one quarter home. It was after dark, when he took his horse and started for Northfield, Mass., a distance of 30 miles; where he sold the Buckskin, (then in great demand for military uniforms,) bought three bushels of corn, and after getting it ground, started for home, where he arrived Saturday night. He was a great hunter of both wild beasts and Indians, by whom he was well-known, and greatly feared. (Page 16.)

Early in June, 1777, Eleazer Wilcox, Senior, had a noted fight with a bear. The story is told with many variations, and the exact truth is difficult to get at. The locality has been claimed for Keene, but the best authority asserts that it was very near the line in Gilsun, east of Lansing Wilder's meadow. Mr. Wilcox had previously wounded the bear, and sent for Joshua Osgood of Sullivan to come and help him. After hunting a good while, they were separated some thirty or forty rods, when the bear disturbed by the dog, suddenly came at Mr. Wilcox from behind the root of a tree. His gun missed fire, and the bear rising on her hind legs struck it with such force as to bend back the guard and made a heavy dent, still to be seen in the stock.* The man and bear then clinched. Mr. Wilcox was a large, powerful man, noted for his strength in wrestling. He seized the bear's tongue and held on with all his might. The dog kept attacking the bear from behind, and his barking and the shouts of Mr. Wilcox soon brought Mr. Osgood. He feared to fire at first, lest he should kill the man, but seeing that the bear would soon dispatch him, if let alone, he watched his chance and fired. The bear dropped her hold and ran away. She was found dead the next day near a little pool of water. Mr. Osgood went immediately for assistance and they carried Mr. Wilcox home on a litter of boughs. He had forty-two wounds on him, some say sixty. It was a wonder that he recovered. He said his worst hurt was in his back, by struggling to hold up against the bear, who, with her paws on his shoulders, was trying to push him over backwards. He was never as well as before, and occasionally had ill turns, that he called his "bear fits."

Moses Farnsworth going home through the woods one night was chased by a bear, and was obliged to climb a tree, where the bear watched him for some time. Finally she went off with her cubs, and he hurried home greatly frightened. A company gathered and went in pursuit, and at length shot her in the woods "up the river."

Capt. Solomon Mack with some of his neighbors went coon-hunting in the woods on the hill in what is now Smith's pasture, over east of the Stone Bridge. Having treed their game, they built a fire, and began chopping down the tree, when a huge bear came backing down the trunk. In their astonishment, they failed to use either ax or gun, and the bear "cleared out."

When Solomon Mack and his brother Daniel were boiling sap by night in the woods, the one whose turn it was to watch, got asleep. Solomon happening to awake, saw a large bear sitting up between him and the fire. In his fright he called out, "Dan, Dan, here's a moose!" The bear hastily made off.

* This gun is now in possession of Edwin C. Ware of Milford. It weighs 6 1-2 pounds, and is 5 feet in length. The barrel is 44 3-8 inches long, with 5-8 inch bore. The stock is cherry of an ancient pattern, trimmed with brass. Six marks of the bear's teeth are plainly visible near the breech.

Old Mr. Jesse Dart and Capt. David Fuller are said to have killed eight bears one Fall.

The last and most noted bear hunt in Gilsun, occurred in December, 1816. Authorities disagree so radically, that I have sometimes almost thought there must have been two. But they agree in many peculiar points that could have happened but once. Dates vary from 1815 to 1822, but investigation fixes the date as above. Belding Dart says that he and Levi Dort had been fishing at "Becket pond" in Alstead, and finding a bear track followed it down through the village across where the Cuthbert and Minor pond now is. It being then night, people were notified and had the hunt the next day. Alvin White says he followed the bear three days. First day tracked her to Bearden ledges, and got there just at night, and while talking about what they should do the next day, the bear all at once jumped out of a bunch of spruces near by, and leaped more than 20 feet down the ledges and escaped. The next day "five of us," Alvin White, Israel Plumley, Asa Bond, James Locke, and Truman Miller, followed her all day, going over Boynton Hill to Stoddard woods. There being some crust, her tracks were bloody. At sundown they came to the Stoddard woods, and concluded to go to Capt. Phelps of Stoddard who was a noted bear hunter. When he came to the door, he started back to see five men with guns and asked them what they were there for. After they told him, he kept them all night, and started early in the morning, telling them if it was a bear she would go right back on her track towards Bearden. When he examined the track he was excited and pleased as a boy, shouting, "It's a bear, it's a bear!" He sent as quickly as possible to notify men in Stoddard and Sullivan. Then mounting his horse he rode to Gilsun village and directed about forming a ring around the hill, the signal of a complete line to be given by blowing a horn, and then the ring was gradually to close up. Benjamin Thompson first saw the bear just escaping from the ring. Having no weapon, he jumped up and down and shouted till he drove her back. Edmund Wilcox first hit her, breaking her jaw. More than 100 shots were fired, some striking the trees 30 feet above the ground, the men were so excited. Hosea Foster says Jacob Spaulding first shot the bear. Belding Dart says three men were sent into the ring to shoot her, Capt. Solomon Mack, Joshua Osgood, and one other whose name is forgotten, and that she was hit with nine balls before she fell. Alvin White says only four balls hit her, and after that, as she was crawling over the ledges to get out of the ring, almost dead, two Proctors caught her by the hind legs and Samuel Locke stabbed her with a large butcher knife, the only weapon he had. Capt. Phelps ordered three cheers. They withed up her legs and carried her on a pole to Stephen White's. The men were tired and cold, hungry and dry. They eat up all Mrs. White had cooked, and sold the bear to Dudley Smith for eight gallons of rum. It was said as many as forty got more or less intoxicated. Some men were drunk then, who never were before or after. The bear was killed on the ledges southeast of Mr. White's. This was the last bear killed in this town or immediate vicinity. Bears have however been seen a few times since, on the hills in the neighborhood of Bearden.

Horace Hayward at the time Sullivan Meeting House was built, on which he was at work, came home Saturday night, and having been "sparking," was going back late Sunday night. When he got a short way into the woods, he saw a bear and two cubs. The cubs climbed a tree. He came back on the run and got Stephen White and Nathan. The cubs had come down when they got there, but quickly ran up again. Nathan White then went for help. Men came from the Hammond Hollow and Dart Corner. It was towards morning before they got there. Simon

Carpenter happened to catch his gun in the brush so that it went off, and the old bear became frightened and "cleared out." They thought they would take the cubs alive. Theophilus Eveleth undertook to catch them in a great coat, while Titus Dart climbed the tree to shake them down. When Eveleth started for the first one, he stepped on the coat and fell over the cub who bit his hand through; but after a time they were both captured, and led down to the house with cords. Mr. White took them into the old kitchen and his wife gave them some milk which they immediately "lapped up like dogs." One of the Darts took one cub, but it got away as he was going home. It was heard for some time after crying by night in the woods, and people fancied it said "ma'am" almost like a child. Lemuel Bingham took the other cub and kept it tied in his shop on the Bond place, where he made window sash. One Sunday when they were away at meeting, he got loose and tore and gnawed a whole week's work.

Alvin White says, "One Sunday night my father thought he heard something in the corn, and went out about nine o'clock with his little dog. The dog ran right against a bear who turned and chased them both most home."

"When I was 14 or 15 years old, the dog barked at something when I was stirring hay. I thought he had got a woodchuck, and went and found a bear and cubs. Ran for father, but when we came back they had gone. We followed them most to Stoddard woods."

"About 30 years ago my wife saw a bear and cubs when she went for the cows. Two of my children saw a bear when they went for the oxen to get in hay. I found next day where the bear lay all night."

When Squire Whitney lived at the old place he had an oven outdoors. One day when Mrs. Whitney was getting ready to bake a leg of mutton, she set the pan on the ground while she went into the house. When she came out, a bear was just carrying off the leg of mutton. Catching up the oven broom, she chased him away, and saved her dinner.

Of wolves there are not many stories extant. Capt. David Fuller returning from Surry one winter night, heard and saw a pack of wolves who followed him up the river as far as the Loveland mill, but kept on the other side all the way.

In March or April, 1828, occurred what is still remembered as "the wolf hunt." The first known of the wolf was in killing some early lambs close by Ebenezer Bill's barn. They thought it was a wild cat, but a man who saw the track said it was a wolf. Willard Bill followed the track till dark, into the woods southwest of the barn. The next morning he went after Amasa Miller and his hounds. Mr. Miller said the only way was to get men and surround the woods. They sent to Keene and through Gilsum. But for the lack of leadership everything went "haphazard," the ring was broke and the wolf escaped, having been seen once near Goose Pond by Marvin Gates. Some men kept after him for 3 or 4 days but didn't see him again. About ten days after, he killed some sheep for Stephen Foster in Sullivan. People rallied from Alstead and Sullivan and Gilsum, and formed a ring around the hills where he was supposed to be. Not long after it was found he had broken the ring. James Bolster, then belonging to Sullivan, saw him pass out, but didn't shoot, supposing him to be a great yellow dog. The company was called together to consult. Amasa Miller directed a part to take their stand across the Scripture pasture, and lines were formed on the north and east, to close in around by the west. He was seen not long after by James Osgood, and word went round that he was in the ring. No one saw him again, till they had nearly closed the ring and began to talk of giving him up. A. R. Livermore walking along on a log saw him crawl out of an old spruce top close by, and shot him. He was carried up to Dea. Mark's and bid off by Gilsum for $25. Aaron Loveland took him and carried him about for a show, giving the Gilsum company half the profits. He took $50. The hunters got 18 cts. apiece. The Sullivan men got each a pistareen. The skin of the wolf was made into the head of a bass-drum, now owned by A. B. Nash.

The last wolf seen in this town was in the winter of 1847-8. He was seen in various places and killed some sheep. He lay all night on a rock near where Mrs. S. F. Hayward now lives. Several persons saw him and thought it was a large dog. Old Mr. Huntoon then living in Herbert Adams's house by the river, saw him come to the river and drink. He recognized a wolf at once, and several persons started after him and chased him nearly over to Bearden. March 1, a large company were collected from Alstead and Gilsum and some from Marlow, and without much leadership went after him to Alstead and Marlow. He was tracked to the woods north of Daniel Downing's, which was surrounded, but the ring got broken, and when we came together no wolf was found. He was known however to be in the woods and his track out was found the next day, so that if the ring had been again more carefully formed he must have been captured, but the snow was deep and all were very tired and hurried home about the middle of the afternoon. He was afterwards shot in Washington.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SALMAGUNDI.

"And cooks us up on every Monday
A horrid dish of salmagundi."

In 1773, the Selectmen of Gilsum were appointed to take, and did take, an Inventory of the property in Limerick (or Limbrick as they call it, now Stoddard) for which they charged $2 each. It was done by Ebenezer Dewey, Jr., and Samuel Church, who express themselves as dissatisfied with the job, and recommend the appointment of "Isaac Temple & Oliver Parker of sd Limbrick" to do the business in the future.

In September, 1791, "Voted to Build A Sign post which David Fuler Undtook to make For one Dollar." It seems he failed to accomplish the undertaking, for in October following "Struck off the Signpost to Turner White to Build For ten Shillings." It was probably not built even then, for in December, 1794, "Voted to Reconsider the Vote for Building a Sign post," and in 1800 "Voted to discharge Ebenezer Bill as Bondsman for Building a Sine post." What this "Signpost" was for, or where to be placed, is not evident. No record or tradition serves to clear up the matter.

Before the establishment of Post Offices in the smaller towns, people could hear from their friends only at long intervals, by private means. Whenever a person took a journey, he carried letters and messages for all his neighbors who had friends in the parts to which he was traveling. Persons, now called tramps, were in those days among the most useful members of society. They were not generally ill-disposed, but simply shiftless vagabonds, who preferred roaming from place to place, living on the hospitality of the then open houses, rather than to live by the sweat of their brow. They were generally thoroughly trustworthy in the matter of letters and messages, and a letter intrusted to their care, was sure in time to reach its destination, and receive its reward in a comfortable lodging and the abundant though coarse fare of the times. Such persons were expected to return at nearly regular intervals, and seldom failed of punctuality. They frequently had beats, so to speak, of several hundred miles. Even after the establishment of postal facilities this ruder system continued its benign operations for many years. There are probably some families even now, who would take pains to send a letter in this way, in preference to the mail. In 1789, Uzzel Hurd advertised to supply Gilsum and other towns north to Plainfield, once a fortnight with the "New Hampshire Recorder," then published at Keene.

The first Post Office in Gilsum was established in 1828. The following is the list of Post Masters with dates of appointment:—

Chilion Mack, Dec. 20, 1828; Ezra Webster, Oct. 8, 1842; John B. Otis, July 6, 1852; Ezra Webster, Feb. 19, 1853; Davis H. Wilson, May 11, 1859; Aaron D. Hammond, Jan. 31, 1861; Francis A. Howard, June 19, 1861; John A. Smith, Nov. 14, 1877.

Before 1828, the mail was usually obtained from the Keene Post Office. At first the mail was brought only once a week, by John H. Priest of Alstead, who continued to carry the mail for 27 years. A large part of the time he went on horseback.

Before 1789, the annual meetings of the town were doubtless held at the Meeting House, when they had one, — at other times in some dwelling, generally a tavern. In 1789, the meeting was called "at the Dwelling house of Lieut Daniel Wright's." The next year, the special meetings were at the Meeting House, but the annual meetings were at "Lieut. Wright's" till 1793. From that time, the annual, and most of the special meetings were held at the old Meeting House near Dudley Smith's tavern, till 1849, when "Dort's Hall" became the place for assembling. This same Hall was used for this purpose for twenty-eight years. Efforts were made at various times to have some more suitable place provided, but articles on the subject were dismissed no less than six times. In 1876, the Meeting House belonging to the Methodist Society was bought for $700. It has since been fitted up at an expense of nearly $500, and the town, for the first time in its history, owns a good Hall.

Capt. Elisha Mack, who was building the first bridge across the Ashuelot where the Stone Bridge now stands, was the hero of the notorious Keene Raid, which took place May 31, 1779. Gilsum had no Tories, while Keene had a considerable number. Thirteen refused to sign the Association Test, and others fled for a season. But there were still enough left to excite the suspicion and wrath of the zealous patriots of that day. Capt. Mack assembled a company at "Partridge's Tavern near Wright's Mills," that is near the Holbrook mills of later times. He sent several men in the night to guard the houses where the Tories were known to reside. "At sunrise he rode into Keene at the head of his party with a drawn sword; and when he came to the house of a Tory, he ordered the sentinel, standing at the door, to 'turn out the prisoner.' The prisoner being brought out, and placed in the midst of his party, he proceeded onward." Their houses were searched for provisions and ammunition, as they were suspected of making collections of supplies for the British, but nothing of importance was found. He took the prisoners to Hall's tavern, which stood just below the railroad on the east side of Main Street, "and confined them in a chamber." Capt. Davis Howlett quickly summoned his company with "arms and ammunition," and "about the middle of the forenoon" had them drawn up facing the south across the Square "on a line with the north line of West Street," with their muskets loaded. Capt. Mack's company was drawn up opposite. An express had been sent to Winchester for Col. Alexander, the commander of the Regiment. Soon after the assembling of Howlett's company he arrived, and demanded of Mack "if he intended to pursue his object. 'I do,' replied he, 'at the hazard of my life.' 'Then,' said the Colonel, emphatically, 'you must prepare for eternity, for you shall not be permitted to take vengeance, in this irregular mode, on any men, even if they are Tories.' This resolute speech cooled the ardor of many. After deliberating awhile, Mack ordered his party to face about, and led them a short distance southward; and the militia then went into the meeting-house." Seeing the determination of his superior officer whose orders he was under obligations to obey, and no doubt beginning to realize that his proceeding was entirely unlawful, Capt. Mack soon after led his company back silently toward home. The women along the road, came out with tin-pans and warming-pans and other utensils, with which they gave them a lively tune, interspersed with hooting and jeers.

There is no doubt that Capt. Mack, who was a bold and honored officer in the service of his country, was stirred up to the expedition by some of the zealous Whigs of Keene, who were afraid to be seen in it themselves. He felt the great importance of breaking up the Tory bands, and his action, though rash, ill-considered, and futile in its immediate results, had without doubt a salutary influence. (Appendix F.)

A cannon provided by the King before the Revolution and kept at the fort in Walpole was long a source of contention among the towns of this vicinity. The rivalry between Keene and Walpole is related in the Annals of Keene. The finale of that history is not, however, given correctly there. William Banks relates the following incidents quorum pars fuit. About eight o'clock one evening in April, 1823, a party of 17 mounted on horseback met by appointment at Lieut. Samuel Bill's. There they got a cart, two yoke of oxen, ropes and skids. The cannon was known to be hid in Daniel Day's cellar, on the road from the Peter Hayward place to Keene street. Loren Loveland who had lived at Mr. Day's conducted the company. He went ahead and made friends with the dog and got the hatchway open. The cannon was taken and put on the cart, when they hurried away as quickly and quietly as possible till they got out of hearing, when they stopped and fastened it securely for coming up the long hills. One of the party went back through Surry and got eight pounds of powder which was fired in three charges; the first when they got back to Mr. Bill's, and the other two in front of Dudley Smith's tavern near the meeting house. The last charge contained nearly half the powder, and the report broke both windows and bottles in Smith's tavern. The difficulty now was to keep the cannon. It was first carried back and hid in Mr. Bill's cellar. It was then moved to Berzeleel Mack's cellar; but he got frightened, and said he wouldn't keep it, for he heard men around the house in the night. It was then buried in the path between Dea. Pease's house and the spring. But fearing lest Keene folks had got track of it, it was put under Dea. Pease's bed, where it was kept for a long time, except when brought out for use. Keene never got it again. Gilsom let Marlow take it, the Fourth of July after their own celebration, on condition of returning it when wanted. It was afterwards carried to Westmoreland to celebrate the first steamer's arrival, and was there purposely exploded, by being filled with an enormous charge of powder jammed down with brick-bats and stone. Exit Walpole cannon.

A certain citizen who was notorious in all the region for his mean tricks, became so obnoxious, that seven of his neighbors built a wooden horse and set it up against the fence in front of his house. After much threatening, he finally gave one of them ten dollars to bring out the rest. He then had the men arrested and taken before Esq. Hill at Holbrook's old tavern in Surry. They chose a captain and marched in regular order, with horns and all kinds of hideous noises for music. Mr. Holbrook came out, invited them in and gave them a treat. They had the sympathy of all the people, nearly 200 of whom assembled to hear the trial. It was proved that the horse neither injured the fence nor obstructed the highway, and the justice decided that the man had no ground of action. They then turned and demanded of him what had become of the horse, which they claimed as their private property. He owned that he had cut it up and burned it. They demanded pay, and he was actually obliged to pay them seventy-five cents apiece for the horse. Probably no other case can be found where a man paid for a wooden horse to be set at his own door.

Somewhere about 1790, three yoke of oxen were stolen out of Samuel Corey's barnyard in the night. They were found in the pine woods near Swanzev factory the next day. As they were all yoked up right, it was thought some one who was acquainted, must have been engaged in it. Besides, the thieves could find only two yokes, and one pair had a neighbor's yoke on. This neighbor came to Mr. Corey next morning inquiring after his yoke. Nothing, however, could be proved against him. The chain with which the oxen were fastened together, when they were driven away, was 16 feet long and was used at the moving of Whitney's clothing shop, and bore the strain of the whole draft more than half the way, when for some reason a change was made and the chain which was substituted broke. This chain was sold at auction in 1873, to John W. Hubbard of Sullivan for $1.55.

Few boys "raised" in Gilsum but have been admonished of fickleness of purpose by the story of John. When a boy, he was taken by his father, to Squire Hill's in Surry, to learn the tanners' trade. They went over afoot. The father left him, and then went to McCurdy's tavern and spent the night. When he came home the next morning, he found John had got back first. "Why, John, how came you here?" said the father. "I'm sorry I lar'n't the trade," whimpered John, "I never wanted to see Zene so in all my life."

Every community, not to say every family, has its superstitions, which no amount of reasoning can wholly eradicate. No doubt a whole chapter might be filled with anecdotes of such things firmly believed by many persons in Gilsum. Only a few can here be given.

On the last Sabbath that Rev. Mr. Fish preached, a partridge flew into the meeting house, during service. It was caught and killed. Many thought it should have been set free, and that the killing of it, was an omen of Mr. Fish's death, which occurred a few weeks after.

Though the horrors of witch-hanging seem to have been mainly confined to the eastern part of Massachusetts, yet the belief in witchcraft reached almost every household. An old Mrs. Rice, who lived in the south part of the town, was reputed to be a witch. Many were afraid of her power. Respectable citizens said they saw her pass along over the light snow and leave no tracks. It is related as an undeniable fact, that Dr. Munroe of Surry was called to attend a sick woman, and was much surprised to find his medicines had no effect. The neighbors said Mrs. Rice had bewitched her. The doctor bled his patient and threw the blood in the fire. Immediately the woman began to improve, and medicine had its usual effect, while Mrs. Rice was found to have her hands terribly burned just at that time. John Mark took a common-sense view of the matter, saying he didn't believe she was a witch, for he turned her out of his house once, and if she had the power, she would have bewitched him.

The history of all ages shows that fanaticism commits its greatest excesses under the guise of religion. Great truths are many-sided; and minds of much sincerity but little judgment, seizing only upon one aspect thereof, are often led by their zeal for truth itself, to the extremes of absurdity and folly. Gilsuim has furnished a few such examples. Some, in cases of dangerous sickness, have refused to call a physician, trusting to "gifts of healing" supposed to reside in the "elders of the church." Two persons even attempted to "raise the dead." One man placed stones in his heated oven, vainly hoping that by the power of faith, they would become bread. Another, in relating his religious experience, told of a terrible fight with the devil, and that he conquered at last by shooting him with a "fo'pence ha'penny." No doubt many others might have slain the devil of avariciousness in their souls by giving their silver pieces to the Lord.

Everybody rode horseback till some years after the present century came in. The women had their side-saddles to ride by themselves, or oftentimes the pillion on which to sit behind the saddle, and hold on with arm around husband, father, brother, or lover. Every dooryard had its horse-block from which more easily to mount. A fine specimen of this article may be seen just south of the first parsonage. It was doubtless placed there at the building of the house in 1794. Mrs. Hathhorn says the first wheeled carriage that ever came into town was Dr. Adams's of Keene, about 1810, and the first owned in town was old Mr. Hammond's, two or three years later. Dea. Blish got one about the same time. People ridiculed them, and thought it was very bad for the horses. It was a common remark that it was "like drawing a cat by the tail."

The first bell brought into town was put on Brigham's Factory in 1831. This was the heaviest and finest toned bell ever used in Gilsuim. It was broken by constant and violent ringing, July 4, 1834. Another smaller bell was put on the Factory in March, 1835. This was destroyed in the fire of 1846.

The first bell on the Congregational Meeting House was a very good one, though not equal to the first factory bell. It weighed 734 pounds. This was cracked in 1858, and the present bell weighing 505 pounds, was raised the next year.

In 1847, the Silsby's put a new bell, much smaller than the old one, on their new Factory. The bell at Collins's Factory is the same first raised by Gerould and Wetherby, October, 1844, and weighs 164 pounds.

On Sunday, Dec. 8, 1844, there were five preaching services in the village at the same hour, — Congregationalist, Methodist, Christian, Universalist, and Mormon.

About 1812, Mrs. Justus Chapin sold land in Connecticut and took a dozen clocks in payment. Her son, Joseph M. Chapin, has one of them; Israel Loveland bought one; and the others were sold to various families.

Orlando Mack relates that Squire Whitney came to his father's in the winter of 1806-7, (?) on horseback; put up his horse, and went across the river on foot, the snow being "boot top deep," to perform the marriage ceremony for some anxious couple. When he got back, he exhibited "a pair of nice birch peeled brooms," which he had received for his services, "and seemed as well pleased as ministers now do with a ten."

The "cold season" of 1816, is often spoken of by the older people. Frost and snow appeared every month in the year but August. No corn was raised except "pig corn," and most of it got "slimy and moldy" before it could be husked and dried. People were very much straitened for food to eat. Pigeons were unusually plenty and furnished most of their meat. One man speaking of the season says, "We lived poor I can tell ye!" Fodder was so scarce many were obliged to turn out the cattle as early as January, 1817, to live by browsing trees cut down for the purpose.

In the Spring of 1843, many farmers were obliged to do the same thing, as the preceding hay-crop was light, and the snow was very deep, so that on the first day of May, the drifts were over the fences in many places.

In March, 1844, the best hay was only $8.00 a ton. The same is true of 1879.

Aug. 4, 1835, there was frost in low ground. June 11, 1842, there was snow so that Monadnock was white. The next morning there was a very severe frost. Ice formed half an inch thick. Vegetation was almost entirely killed.

From the Annals of 1843. (page 134.) is taken the following record:—

April 25, 1843. A few of the citizens in the Factory Village spent most of the day transplanting trees for ornament & shade, 12 Maples were sett & one Elm about 8 inches through at the butt was sett in front of the Meeting house on the Street.

This elm was taken from the bank near Chas. W. Bingham's shop. April, 1879, it measured eight feet in circumference, at four inches from the ground. It is very properly called the Tisdale Elm, as it was owing to the constant care of Rev. James Tisdale, who watered it with his own hands every day through the summer, that it was kept alive.

A part of the maples mentioned are still standing near the brick house, and north of Newman's store and barn. Most of the maples on the street are somewhat younger. Those in front of Dea. Kingsbury's were set probably one year later. The elm in front of Fanny Mark's is of spontaneous growth. In 1846, it was less than two inches through.

The elm at the head of Main Street was set by K. D. Webster and N. O. Hayward, as a Centennial tree in 1876. A large number of citizens aided in planting another, in the square at the head of Sullivan Street. The attempt was renewed the next year, but both trees failed.

Two Centennial elms were set at the Lower Village by the citizens there,—one between the roads north of the Stone Bridge,—the other in the square in front of the old Store.

Several trees near C. W. Bingham's were set by him the same year. The elms near Collins's Factory were also set at that time by John S. Collins. There are other Centennial trees in different parts of the town, but these are all of which I have any definite information.

The coon is sometimes reported to "play possum" by feigning itself dead. When Silvanus Hayward was clearing a spot for his house, where the center of the village now is, he caught a coon one forenoon and laid it away in the shade for dead. When night came, he took it up by the hind legs and started for home. Soon, however, the coon bit him severely. He finally recaptured and killed him.

October, 1842. A fight took place on the Banks of the Ashuelot between 1 man & woman on one side & 2 men & 1 woman on the other side—the 2 women commenced the Battle—it was on account of drinking rum—no lives lost.

Suggestions which startle us in elaborate works of philosophers are sometimes more startling on the lips of childhood. A small boy in Gilsum went with his mother to visit a poor family, where one of the children was "a fool." When they came away, he said to his mother, with great earnestness, "Why don't they kill him?"

How much Ashuelot water, and soap, or other worse ingredients have been sold for rum, in Gilsum, no man living can tell. One man remembers, when a boy, happening to be sent to the store rather early in the morning where he found the merchant in his back room briskly stirring up a hogshead of rum with a broom handle. Another dealer was awakened early Monday morning by one of his best customers, who brought back a bottle of rum he had bought there Saturday night, demanding his money back, because, as he said, "It aint pally-ate-able."

Mr. Dimmock lived on the top of the hill near the Cannon place in Sullivan. At one time, becoming vexed with his farm and his neighbors, he declared he wouldn't live in Sullivan, or anywhere else, but would move to Keene.

John Chappell was an Irishman, and very poor. One Spring he went to Capt. Fuller's and asked for some hay for his cow. Capt. Fuller told him he would give him as much as he could carry home on his back. Anxious to get as much as possible, he tied up so large a bundle, that when he tried to go with it, he found he could hardly stagger under its weight. Throwing it down he said, "I don't feel very well to-day, and I can't carry as much as I can," and asked leave to take it at two loads, which was granted. He lived on the hill back of where Collins's Factory now stands, and often complained that the hill was so steep that it hit him in the face, when he went home at night.

Many a forlorn, love-sick swain has wondered whether the materia medica contained a cure for his pangs. The following discovery, not patented, may be of use in such cases: A young man, who afterwards became a citizen of this town, was deeply in love with a girl who treated him rather coldly, as he thought. It was the early part of Winter, and a barrel of apples, which had been badly frozen, stood in the large, open chamber where he slept. One night after he had gone to bed, he was overheard talking to himself, and uttering bitter complaints about the scornful fair one. After a while he said, "Now, I'll eat some of them frozen apples, and that'll give me the belly ache, so I shall forget all about it."

PART II.

TOPOGRAPHICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL.

“Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learned to stray;
Along the cool, sequestered vale of life
They kept the even tenor of their way.”

EXPLANATIONS.

Numbers in Part II. refer to the maps.

In Chapter 30, the names in small capitals are found on the back of the charter; those in italics are found in the "ranging table," but not in the charter.

In Chapters 32 to 38 names in small capitals are supposed to be the first settlers on the places mentioned.

CHAPTER XXIX.

FIRST SETTLER.

THE Kilburns have always claimed to have been the first settlers in Gilsun. So far as I know, every Gazetteer or similar work names Josiah Kilburn as the first settler. A counter tradition has been met in looking up materials for this history. It is believed the following record gives a full and fair statement of the case.

Josiah Kilburn was in company with a Mr. Ford, (grandfather of Jemima,) in a large Tannery and Shoe manufactory in Glastonbury, Conn. They were prosperous in business, and had accumulated considerable wealth for those times. Mr. Kilburn having the old English idea that real estate was the only property to give a man position, was very anxious to buy land. Hearing of this township for sale, he sent up men to look over the ground. When they got here, they were taken in hand by agents of Col. Bellows, who first bewildered them by wandering in the woods, and then kept them traveling three days in Surry meadows. Thinking they had gone over a large tract of country, they returned and reported that it was a very level town "without a stone large enough to throw at a bird." Encouraged by this report, Mr. Kilburn joined with Samuel Gilbert and others (page 18) in the purchase of 18,000 acres, May 1, 1761. In a deed given by him the same year, he calls himself of Hebron, Conn. In November, 1762, he writes himself Josiah Kilbourn of Keene. Before finding this deed, I had met the tradition that he supposed the log cabin that he first built was in Keene. It was within a few rods of the town line, on the spot marked 1 on the map. This deed fixes the time of his coming from Connecticut, in the Fall of 1762. His son Ebenezer came with him. They spent the Winter and the Summer following, in clearing the land, building a barn, and preparing their cabin to receive their families. They then returned to Connecticut, and in the Spring of 1764, brought up their families, with a large herd of cattle and sheep and several horses.

The following tradition of a still earlier settlement is from George Hammond, Esq., of Bennett's Corners, N. Y., who received it from his Aunt Rachel (Bill) Baxter, a niece of Dea. Kilburn's wife, and "an extremely particular and accurate person."

In that first winter of 1762-3, the Kilburns not having raised any crops the Summer before, came near starvation. "Guided only by the marked trees of the beaver hunter, they went through the heavy forest near where Ebenezer Isham settled, to a spot the beavers had cleared in the lowland known as the old Hammond Meadow, where they cut some swale grass for their oxen. Hearing afterwards that a settler in the northwest part had raised some rye, Mr. Kilburn started on snow shoes to visit his neighbor and purchase a bag of rye. He followed the Indian trail to near where Calvin May once lived, and then struck for the high land and tried to discern the smoke of the settler's cabin, but could see none, and became nearly discouraged. He finally halloed at the top of his voice, and great was his joy to hear an answer, and in a short time, hungry and fatigued, he found the cabin, got a bushel of rye, and after rest and food returned to his home."

This cabin was that of Jonathan Bliss, on the farm now owned by Dennis Keefe, supposed to be on the spot numbered 135. From this tradition the claim is made that Jonathan Bliss was the first settler in Gilsun. Careful examination involving much time, has been made to verify this statement. The name of Jonathan Bliss does not appear on the charter of either Boyle or Gilsum, nor is it found throughout the records of the Proprietors. The land he afterwards owned was "drawn" by Joshua and Nathaniel Dart, and their brother-in-law, Joseph Spencer. His name is not found among the Gilsum men of 1768. February, 1769, in a deed to Samuel Church, he calls himself of Bolton, Conn. In a deed of October, 1769, he calls himself of Gilsum. The deeds in which he is grantee have not been found. It has been suggested that "there were numerous settlers in Surry before Mr. Kilburn settled in Gilsum, and Jonathan Bliss was an extension up the river from the Surry settlement." All the deeds and Proprietors' records show, however, that there were no settlements north of "Westmoreland Leg" prior to 1762. Probably several families had settled in Surry before the Kilburns brought their families in 1764. But the first settlements along Surry meadows were not before 1762, when the Kilburns came to Gilsum. J. Homer Bliss, Esq., of Norwich, Conn., writes that he has items concerning the Bliss family, collected by Rev. Sylvester Bliss, in which Jonathan Bliss is said to have removed from Tolland, Conn., to Gilsum in 1752. Possibly he left Tolland at that time, and it being known that his life was mainly spent in Gilsum, it was inferred that he came immediately here. That it could not have been obtained from contemporary records is evident from the fact that the name Gilsum had no existence till more than ten years later. It seems more probable that it is a slip of the pen for 1762. All tradition and documentary evidence concur in making Peter Hayward in 1752-3 the first settler north of Keene. During ten years of the Indian troubles it would have been impossible for Mr. Bliss to have escaped their attacks. From five miles further north, he could not well have fled to the fort, as did Mr. Hayward. Situated within a short distance of the old Indian trail, he could not have escaped their notice, and must have been scalped or captured. The fact that no evidence, or trace of evidence, exists of his fleeing or being molested, is conclusive that he could not have been there at that time.

The conclusion I have reached, (of the substantial accuracy of which I have no doubt,) is the following. Mr. Bliss came early enough to get a crop of rye in 1762, while Mr. Kilburn came the Fall after. Jonathan Bliss was therefore the first settler by a few months; but returned to Connecticut, remaining there several years, and permanently located in Gilsum in 1769.

CHAPTER XXX.

PROPRIETORS.

OF a large part of the original proprietors of Gilsum very little is now known. The following names are those which are given on the back of the Charter, (page 21,) with such as afterwards appear in the proprietors' records.

Nothing has been learned respecting Elijah Owen, Jonathan Dart, William Dart, Ichabod Warner, Jonathan Burge, James Spencer, or Joseph Beakit. Noah Beebe, Jared Noltun, Nathanill Warner and Joseph Ransom, found in the "Ranging Table," (pages 24, 25,) are also unknown.

For the Kilburns, Abner Mack, and Stephen Griswold, of the original Grantees; and Ebenezer Bill, Ebenezer Dewey, Medad Thornton, and Eleazer Wilcox, named in the proprietors' records, see the following chapters.

SAMUEL GILBERT was of Hebron, Conn. He was a Captain, and probably served as such in the French and Indian war. At the time of his death he is called Colonel. He also held the office of Justice of the Peace. He was a land speculator on a large scale, and was one of the leaders in securing the grant of Newton, now Alstead. Though at one time the owner of a large part of Gilsum, no evidence has been found that he ever came to see it. He died in 1786, and his heirs were Samuel, Thomas, Elizabeth wife of Rev. Clement Sumner, John 2d, Sylvester, and Gardner.

JONATHAN SMITH was of Bolton, Conn., and was associated with Samuel Gilbert in the purchase of the township. (Page 21.) He settled about 1764, in what is now Surry, on the farm at present occupied by Frank Carpenter, and was among the petitioners for a new town. In 1776 he was on a committee to join with Alstead and Marlow to petition the Legislature for "a full and free election or representation of each of the individual towns above-mentioned." He also represented these three towns in the Legislature of 1779-80. He died October 4, 1786, in the 71st year of his age, and his heirs were THOMAS; ICHABOD m. Lydia dau. of Obadiah Wilcox of Gilsum; JONATHAN m. Huldah dau. of Peter Hayward, served in the Revolution, was Colonel in the militia, represented Gilsum and Surry in the Constitutional Convention of 1788, removed to Rockingham, Vt., where he died leaving no children: SAMUEL; PATIENCE, wife of Moses D. Field; EXPERIENCE, wife of Abia Crane; SARAH, wife of Nathan Hayward; and SUSANNA, wife of Abner Skinner; all of whom settled in Surry about the same time with their father.

THOMAS SUMNER was of Hebron, Conn., and is not known to have come to Gilsum. He was associated with Capt. Gilbert in other land enterprises, and was one of the leading grantees of Lyme. In the records, he is styled Lieutenant.

DANIEL PART was of Bolton, Conn., where he died before 1777. His dau. Lucy m. Joseph Spencer. Three of his sons settled in Surry: — NATHANIEL who came about 1765 and sold his residence, 2nd Lot 3rd Range, to Thomas Harvey in 1777; ELIPHALET who came about the same time and was Deacon in the Congregational Church in Surry for many years, and has left many descendants called Dort; and JOSHUA, who came about 1770, and after a little more than ten years removed to Weathersfield, Vt. Nathaniel and Eliphalet signed the petition for a new town.

In November, 1763, JOSEPH WELLS, SAMUEL GILBERT, JR., JAMES COX, WILLIAM COX, EDMUND WELLS, NATHAN ROWLEE, ABNER BROWN, ABNER WATERS, ROGER DEWEY, JOHN SKINNER, STEPHEN

HORTON, ABIJAH ROWLEE, LEVI POST, THOMAS BROWN, and JONATHAN BROWN, all of Hebron, Conn., sold their shares, "for and in consideration of the Love and Good will we Bear unto Samuel Gilbert, and other Valuable Species in hand." The name of THOMAS WELLS appears in the deed, but he did not sign it. He is probably the same who settled in Keene and sold his share in Gilsun to John Starling. The name is Wills on the charter. Stephen Horton is doubtless the same as Stephen Houghton. Which is the true name remains doubtful. This whole transaction appears to have been "a put-up job." Capt. Gilbert probably hired these fifteen men, for a sum so small he was ashamed to put it into the deed, to allow their names to be used in getting the Charter, and then transfer their rights to him.

CLEMENT SUMNER was the son of Thomas Sumner, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. Gilbert. He graduated at Yale College, 1758, was ordained and installed pastor of the First Church in Keene, June 11, 1761, where he remained eleven years. He was first Clerk of the Proprietors of Gilsun. His wife was a woman of marked peculiarities. On one occasion, either an ecclesiastical Council or other gathering of ministers, she entertained her guests with bean porridge. On being reminded that such provision was somewhat discourteous, she said it was "better than they deserved." The reply was made that it was indeed better than they deserved at the hands of the Lord, but not at her hands. Clement A. Sumner was their son, and in the later records represented his father's right among the proprietors.

SAMUEL PHELPS was of Lyme, Conn., and sold his right to Thomas Harvey of the same place in 1766.

JAMES NOBLE was of Pittsfield, Mass., and sold his right in 1767, to Simeon Dunham of Hebron, Conn., for £30.

WILLIAM SUMNER was a physician, and settled in Claremont before 1773.

BENJAMIN GRAVES was of East Haddam, Conn., and sold his right for £26 to Woolston Brockway in 1767.

Jonathan Mack died at Lyme, Conn., before November, 1774. He m. Aug. 24, 1727, Sarah Bennett, and had Joseph, Jonathan, Love d. inf., John, Elizabeth, Josiah, Samuel, Sarah, Abijah, Love, and "Lidia."

Joseph Mack b. Lyme, Conn., July 22, 1728, was associated with Capt. Gilbert in the purchase of Gilsun, (page 21.) and it is remarkable that his name does not appear on the charter. In the "Ranging Table" he drew No. 36, which is assigned to Abner Brown on the back of the charter. He was at Lyme, Conn., in 1766, but in 1769 is called of Gilsun, at which time he bought the 2d Lot, 6th Range in what is now Surry. His daughter Betty was born there, Sept. 16, 1770. In 1772, he sold to Abel Allen and removed to Alstead where he died about 1792. The inventory of his estate is dated Feb. 10, 1792. His "home farm" was bounded on Surry line. The name of his first wife was Lois, and of his second, Lydia. The children mentioned in the settlement of his estate were Nathan, Dorothy, Mary wife of John Slade, Jr., Renel, and Lois wife of Joseph Razor. He was the first Collector and one of the Selectmen appointed by the Proprietors in 1762.

Jonathan Mack, Jr., b. Lyme, Conn., July 1, 1730, is found in the Ranging Table in place of Abijah Rowlee, and probably sold his share to Capt. Gilbert before 1763.

JOHN MACK b. Lyme, Conn., Jan. 13, 1737, also sold his right to Capt. Gilbert about 1763.

JOSIAH MACK b. Lyme, Conn., July 25, 1740 or 1741, gave his right in Gilsun to his son-in-law John Marvin in 1766. He owned another share which he sold to his brother Joseph in 1771.

ABIJAH MACK b. Lyme, Conn., Sept. 3, 1746, sold all his right to lands in Gilsun, inherited from his father, to his brother Josiah in 1774, for £20. In the deed he calls himself "Clerk."

EZRA LOOMIS was of Bolton, Conn., perhaps the son of Serg't Thomas Loomis, and born about 1723. He sold a part of his right to Joseph Spencer in 1766.

JONATHAN WRIGHT was of East Windsor, Conn., and sold his right to Samuel Church of East Haddam, Conn., in 1768.

DURAN WADE was of Lyme, Conn., where he married Jan. 3, 174½, Phebe Ransom. Their children were Anna, Phébe, Thomas, and John. He settled in Surry before 1770, and in 1773, sold his place to Dr. Gideon Tiffany of Keene, and removed to Walpole.

JOSIAH BLODGETT was of Windsor, Conn., and sold his right to Job Gleason in 1767. He signs his name Bloggit.

ABEL ALLEN was born Windsor, Conn., Aug. 14, 1733 O. S. In November, 1762, he was still at Windsor, and bought of Josiah Kilburn "One Right in Boyle," which included the 6th Lot in the 5th Range of fifty-acre Lots west of the mountain, where he probably settled the next year. It is the place now occupied by the widow Abbot and formerly known as the "Humphrey Tavern." He married in 1756, Elizabeth, daughter of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Pease) Chapin of Enfield, Conn., by whom he had nine children. He died in Surry Nov. 13, 1820, and she in 1808. The family has been not only very numerous but of high standing and influence. Judge Wm. H. H. Allen of Claremont is his great-grandson. Abel Allen's name appears in the petition for the new town of Surry, and at the first town meeting in 1769, he was chosen Tithing Man. Capt. Samuel Allen, who afterwards appears among the Proprietors, was his son, was born at Surry in 1766, and was the last Clerk of the Proprietors.

"RUBEN" SUMNER was probably son of Lieut. Thomas Sumner who sold Reuben's right in 1770, to Samuel Wadsworth of Keene.

JOSEPH SPENCER of East Haddam, Conn., was a weaver by trade, and married Lucy the daughter of Daniel Dart. He settled in Surry in 1770, and removed to Charlestown about 1776-7. He was one of the first Selectmen appointed by the Proprietors. His children were Erastus, Luther, Elijah, Joseph, Jerusha, and one more.

THOMAS PITKIN, (frequently called Jr.) was of Bolton, Conn. He was Moderator of Proprietors' Meetings in 1762-3, but probably never settled in New Hampshire. He sold part of his right to Jonathan Smith in 1763, and the rest to John Boynton of East Windsor, Conn., in 1771. This Boynton was probably the ancestor of the Sullivan family of that name.

BENJAMIN SUMNER was of Hebron, Conn., in 1767, and removed to Claremont about that time. He sold his right to Stephen Griswold and others.

SAMUEL BANNING was of Hartland, Conn., and, in April, 1765, sold his share to Medad Thornton for £30.

JOSEPH LOTHROP was of Springfield, Mass., and sold his right for £40 to William Cumstock or Comstock of Lyme, Conn., Jan. 5, 1769. His wife's name was Elizabeth.

ICHABOD FISHER settled in Keene, where his name appears on the alarm list of 1773. He sold his right to Samuel Gilbert.

JONATHAN LEVET probably settled in Walpole, as the name is found there before 1765.

ELIPHALET YOUNG was of Hebron, Conn., and sold his share in 1770, to Stephen Taylor of Coventry, Conn., who soon after removed to Tyringham, Mass., and sold to Giles Crandall of Tolland, Conn. Ichabod and Joseph Young (Chap. 34.) may have been his sons.

JOHN STERLING, (frequently written Starling,) was of Lyme, Conn., where he died before 1769. He was probably son of Capt. Daniel and Mary (Ely) Starling, and born Oct. 28, 1704. At the first meeting of the Proprietors in 1762, he was chosen First Selectman.

DAVID TAYLOR was of Bolton, Conn., and gave part of his right to his nephew David Fuller. (Chap. 33.)

EBENEZER WHITE was from Westfield, Mass., and settled in Swanzev before 1779. He was also one of the original proprietors of Marlow. He presented the Congregational Church in Gilsum, with a pewter basin for baptismal service, which is now in possession of the writer. (Genealogy.)

JOHN HOOKER was of Northampton, Mass., and sold his right to Woolston Brookway in 1761.

SAMUEL LORD was of Lyme, Conn., and sold part of his share to Jonathan Adams in 1766. In one place he is called Samuel B. Lord.

SETH HALL was of Hebron, Conn., and sold his share in 1770, to John Rowe of the same place. He probably did not settle here. The name is found in Keene in 1778, but at Hebron, Conn., again in 1786, and may not refer to the same man.

Richard Hays (written also Hayes, Haze, or Haize.) was of Lyme, Conn., and m. Ap. 24, 1735, Patience Mack. Their children were the following : —

Silas; SETH b. Lyme, Conn., Dec. 26, 1737, was chosen Selectman by the proprietors in 1762, but probably never settled here, as he was of East Haddam, Conn., in February, 1764, when he sold his share to William Markham of the same place: Richard b. Lyme, Conn., June 30, 1740, appears in the "Ranging Table" in place of Eliphalet Dart; John; Catherine; Titus; Philemon b. Lyme, Conn., Feb. 26, 1748, settled in Surry: and Joseph.

LEMUEL WYLY [Willey] was of East Haddam, Conn., and sold his right to Allen Willey of the same place in 1769.

Allen Willey is afterwards called of Chatham, Conn. He was one of the proprietors of Lempster, and served as their Clerk. He settled in what is now Goshen before 1773. His wife Mary died Aug. 9, 1804.

ABNER SKINNER from Bolton, Conn., was son-in-law to Jonathan Smith, and settled in Surry about 1764. John Skinner (page 25.) was probably his brother.

THEODORE ATKINSON was the Colonial Secretary, and followed the example of the Governor in claiming a share in the Townships granted, as one of the perquisites of his office. THEODORE ATKINSON, JR., and NATHANIEL BARRELL were doubtless inserted in the same way. The lots drawn by Theodore Atkinson were the 7th and 8th in the 12th Range, and the south half of the 8th in the 11th Range. Theodore Atkinson, Jr., had the 6th and 7th and the north half of the 5th in the 12th Range. Nathaniel Barrell had the 7th and 8th in the 10th Range, and the north half of the 8th in the 11th Range. (Map page 24.)

Joseph Burt found in the "Ranging Table" in place of James Cox, settled in Westmoreland. He was a prominent opposer of Vermont in the contention between that State and New Hampshire, and was a delegate from ten towns in Cheshire County, including Gilsum, "to wait upon the Committee of Safety" in reference to the same. He was also a Captain in the Revolution, and represented Westmoreland in the New Hampshire Assembly for three years.

Benjamin "Mann" [Mann] was of Hardwick, Mass., in 1763. In the "Ranging Table" he drew No. 34, which is not assigned on the back of the charter. He may have been the same person who commanded a Company at Bunker Hill and was one of the most prominent of the early settlers of Mason.

Joseph "Wille" found in the "Ranging Table" in place of Joseph Beakit was probably the son of Joseph and Lucretia (Holmes) Willey of East Haddam, Conn., where he was b. March 22, 1734. He deeded his share, "in consideration of y^e Love Efection & good will I bare" to his son Barnabas, July 4, 1768. Barnabas and his wife "Marcy" settled in Surry before 1767, and removed to Walpole about 1775, when he sold the 2 Lots in the 1st and 2nd Ranges with buildings to Thomas Harvey.

Woolston Brockway was of Lyme, Conn., and settled in Surry about 1763, on the place now occupied by Joshua D. Blake. His first wife was Anna or Mary Brook of New London, Conn. At the time of his death his wife's name was Esther. His will was dated July 8, 1789, and proved Oct. 29 following. His children as therein mentioned were John, Rufus, William, Woolston, Bridget Hudson, Sarah Doolittle (then deceased,) Parnal Beckwith, Jane Gates, Jerusha Whitney, Phebe Chaffe, Esther Meriam, Mehetabel, and a grandchild Anna Alger. The inventory of his estate was £265-16-4. He represented Surry in the Vermont Legislature at Windsor in 1781. At the time of his death, he had 87 living descendants.

The following additional names are mentioned in the Proprietors' records, and there were doubtless others who bought or inherited shares, whose names are not found here:—

William Comstock of Lyme, Conn., bought the right of Joseph Lothrop and settled in 1769 on the farm now occupied by Alonzo Farrar in Sullivan. (Genealogy.)

John Dimmock was from Ashford, Conn., and settled on the hill near the Cannon place in Sullivan, about 1766. He owned a large amount of land which he divided to his children. Timothy Dimmock, his son, lived with him, and was Selectman in 1786.

Joshua Fuller was from Bolton, Conn., and settled in Surry in 1764-5. His wife was sister to David Taylor. Capt. David Fuller was their son. Another son, Joshua, Jr., was killed at the battle of Bennington. Lieut. Levi Fuller was another son, who lived on his father's place in Surry, now occupied by George K. Harvey, Esq.

Job Gleason first appears on a Committee to lay out land in 1764. He bought a share of Josiah Blodgett. In 1765 the County road from Keene is said to run between "Mr. Fuller and Mr. Gleason," and another road was laid out "Running North Between Job Gleason & Mr. Willcoxes."

Samuel Hall is found among the proprietors in 1766, and signed the petition for dividing the town in 1768. He probably settled in "Westmoreland Leg." The same name is prominent in Keene Annals, but is probably that of another man.

Thomas Harvey was of Lyme, Conn., and settled in Surry about 1766, on the farm now occupied by Edward H. Joslyn. He was the ancestor of the well-known family of that name in Surry. He served the town as Selectman and was a Captain in the militia. He was a Lieutenant in Capt. Reuben Alexander's Company at Ticonderoga in 1777. Asahel Harvey was his son, was Town Clerk of Surry for many years, and was otherwise prominent in town affairs.

Lemuel Holmes lived both in Keene and Surry. He was Proprietors' Clerk for many years, and was one of the most prominent men of those times. He had a Captain's commission from Gen. Washington in the Revolution, and was taken by the British and held prisoner at New York for a long time. He was on the Committee of the Walpole Convention concerning the Vermont troubles, and represented Gilsum with Surry and Sullivan six years in the New Hampshire Legislature. He was also Justice of the Peace, and Judge of the County Court. His farm was at the foot of Bald Hill, and is still known as the "Holmes place."

Lieut. Calvin Locke was son of Lieut. James Locke who came from Ashby, Mass., and settled in Sullivan about 1784, on the farm afterwards occupied by Dea. Charles P. Locke late of Marlboro'.

John Marvin was born at Lyme, Conn., Jan. 30, 1727, and settled near the northwest corner of Surry about 1766, where he died Dec. 24, 1792. He was among the petitioners for a new town, and was Moderator of the proprietors in 1768.

Samuel McCurdy was from Antrim County, Ireland, and settled in Surry about 1772. He kept tavern for many years on the place now occupied by Edmund Woodward. His descendants are numerous. (See Mark and Dart in Genealogy.)

Benjamin Olcott or Alcott was from East Haddam, Conn., and settled on the 4th Lot, 9th Range in what is now Sullivan, 1767-8. He was a cooper by trade, and in 1772, sold out to Capt. Gilbert, and removed to Swanzey.

Peter Olcott was of Bolton, Conn., and sold to Benoni Olcott of East Windsor, Conn., in 1772. Benoni sold to Thomas Wheelock of Alstead in 1790.

Samuel Wadsworth who owned the land marked S. W. on the map, (page 24.) was a blacksmith and settled just below the railroad in Keene. He was one of the Tories taken by Capt. Mack in 1779. (Page 160.)

Obadiah Wileox was from Guilford, Conn., and settled about 1764, on the farm now occupied by his grandson, Hollis Wilcox of Surry. He was for many years Proprietors' Clerk, and Town Clerk of Surry.

CHAPTER XXXI.

PROFESSIONAL AND LITERARY.

THIS list cannot be made complete. Whatever material has come to hand, is inserted here.

I have been somewhat surprised to find only three natives of Gilsum, who have graduated from College: — Aaron Day, Jr., Silvanus Hayward, and Harvey Woodward. There have been others, brought up here and identified with Gilsum history who have graduated, and others more distinguished who have not been graduates, but these three, so far as known, are the only graduates born here. Another, Myron W. Adams, is now in his Junior year in Dartmouth College, and bids fair to graduate with high honor.

CLERGYMEN.

JOSIAH KILBURN, JR., graduated at Dartmouth College 1778, received the degree of A. M. in course, studied divinity, and was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church at Chesterfield, Mass., Nov. 9. 1780. The following spring he married Temperance Dewey, the daughter of his nearest neighbor in Gilsum. While on a visit at his father's the next September, he died at the age of 28.

DAVID KILBURN was among those whose career has been an honor to his native town. The following sketch of his public life is condensed from "Zion's Herald."

In 1801, through the instrumentality of Rev. John Gove, he was converted, and received to the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1805, he was licensed to preach, and after three years' labor as a local preacher, was received into the New England Conference. He was first stationed at Union, Me., in 1808, was afterwards appointed to Readfield, Me.; Stanstead, Canada; Barnard and White River, Weathersfield and Barre, Vt. In 1815, he was made Presiding Elder of the N. H. District. He was afterwards stationed at Needham, and Boston, Mass.; Portland, Me.; and Danville and Barre, Vt. From 1825 to 1829, he was Presiding Elder on Portland District, Maine Conference, and the year following, on Springfield District, N. E. Conference. He was next stationed at Providence, R. I., then at Lowell, Lynn Common, Bridgewater and Northwest Bridgewater, Mass. He was then Presiding Elder on Providence District for three years, and the next four years on Boston District. He was next stationed at Waltham, Barre, Ashburnham, South Royalston, and Dudley, Mass. In 1851, he took a superannuated relation, but in 1852-3, was again able to be at work on Enfield Station. In 1854, he was made supernumerary; in 1856, was stationed at Southampton, Mass.; in 1858, supernumerary; and in 1859, took again the superannuated relation. He then moved to Keene, and continued to preach and labor in that vicinity as long as his health permitted. It was at this time he supplied the M. E. Church in Gilsum.

Few men have traveled more New England roads or formed acquaintance with more people than he. Inheriting a strong constitution and large physical frame, and being early accustomed to hardships, he was eminently qualified for the immense labor he performed. He possessed a sound judgment, clear understanding, strong will, and a great degree of conscientiousness, so that in all matters of truth and duty, he was earnest and decided. His sermons were argumentative, systematic, in language well-chosen, and delivered with a pathos that made the truth attractive and searching. In his earlier days, especially, he had great power in the pulpit. His administrative abilities were of a high order. He was born for a leader. His prudent foresight, his comprehensive views, his knowledge of men, his almost intuitive perception of character, his urbanity of manners, his elevated Christian character, all raised him to a high social and official position in the church.

In 1812, he married Lovisa Perkins of Barnard, Vt., who lived with him nearly 52 years, proving a devoted "helpmeet" in all his labors. She was a woman of saintly piety, — truly "a mother in Israel."

After her death in 1864, Mr. Kilburn having no children, removed to the residence of his nephew, Merrill I. Kilburn, at Hartford, Vt., where he died. His closing life was in keeping with that of his greater activity. His last appearance in public was at a meeting near by his home, about three weeks before his death. Sitting in his chair, extremely pale and feeble, he addressed the people, for about twenty minutes, in words of remarkable eloquence, causing the deepest sensation among those who listened as if to his dying utterances. The Sabbath evening before he died, he raised himself in bed, and in an extremely weak but clear voice united with the family in prayer, commending each separately to the Divine care and protection. This was his last vocal prayer.

He was buried beside his wife in the new Cemetery at Keene, where his monument bears the following words: "Rev. David Kilburn was for 60 years an eminent, faithful, and successful minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and for 57 years a beloved and honored member of the New England Conference. He finished his course with joy, and the Ministry he received of the Lord Jesus. His dying message was 'Tell my brethren that I greatly love the doctrine, discipline and membership of the church of my early choice.'"

SAMUEL CHAPMAN LOVELAND was one of the most distinguished of the natives of Gilsum. In his youth "he was a simple, honest boy, and everybody loved him." His early opportunities for education were very limited, and in his "search for knowledge" he was beset with difficulties unknown to the youth of the present day. His zeal and perseverance, however, triumphed over all obstacles. He had a special aptitude for the study of language, and eagerly embraced every opportunity for gratifying this taste. Through the preaching of the noted Elhanan Winchester his parents had accepted the doctrine of Universal Salvation. Early imbibing these views, he was impressed with the duty of devoting himself to their propagation in the work of the ministry.

To this end he first desired to be able to study the original Scriptures. His near neighbor, Silvanus Hayward, who had been three years a member of Dartmouth College, had a few Latin and Greek books, among them "part of an old Latin Bible, which he procured, and with a grammar and dictionary plodded through several chapters. He then commenced the Greek, with old Schrevelius, and a grammar, and tumbling back and forth in search of roots of words, changes, syncopations, and constructions of sentences, he was able, generally, to read out a whole verse in the space of half a day. Words that he could not trace were carefully noted down for further developments to bring to light. . . . This course he pursued with indefatigable industry, employing every moment that could be spared from the labors of the farm, till 1811, when he devoted a year exclusively to study in direct preparation for the ministry."

"He received a letter of fellowship from the General Convention at its session in Cavendish, Vt., 1812, . . . and was ordained by the same body at Westmoreland, N. H., in 1814. About this period he commenced the study of Hebrew with such facilities as he could get. . . . but was able to make but little advance till 1823, when he took hold of it in right earnest. A few years subsequently, he prepared and published a Greek and English Lexicon of the New Testament." This was highly commended, and considering the circumstances in which it was prepared, is truly a remarkable production. He studied also the Chaldee, the Syriac, and Arabic, the Anglo-Saxon, French, Spanish, German, Modern Greek, Danish, besides others to some extent. He wrote of himself "I have loved the study of languages on account of their relation to each other, and it seems I have some real specimens of what men have done, and thought, and are, when I know something of their forms of speech."

"In 1827 and onward, he became considerably interested in political matters. . . . He represented the town, where he then resided, (Reading, Vt.,) in the State Legislature; his County in the Council; was a judge of the County Court, and held several other offices of honor and respectability, in all of which he proved himself honest and honorable."

In 1821, he established "The Christian Repository" at Woodstock, Vt. He continued its publication for about six years, when it passed into other hands. "It was an out and out work on Universalism, connected with a belief in a future paternal, disciplinary punishment."

LUMUND WILCOX pursued his early studies with his brother-in-law, Elisha S. Fish, and afterwards with Rev. Perley Howe of Surry. He then went to the Academies at New Ipswich, and Chester, and afterwards graduated at Kimball Union Academy in 1819, and from Bangor Theological Seminary, three years later. Oct. 25, 1823, he was ordained and installed over the church in Copenhagen Village in the township of Denmark, N. Y. Here he remained two years, during which time he married Elizabeth, the daughter of Rev. Enos Bliss. In 1825, he went to Russia, N. Y., where he labored over five years, and in 1831, was settled in Hartwick, N. Y. In 1836, he removed to Lorraine, N. Y., to care for his aged father-in-law, laboring in various places with great success. In 1862, he went to Lyman, Ill., where he preached four years, when he was invited to take charge of the Church in Brenton, (now Thawville,) Ill., where he died in the 77th year of his age.

He was a man of ability and well versed in the Bible. An aged minister remarked that he had assisted at the examination of hundreds of young ministers, but had "never found one so thorough in Theology," as Mr. Wilcox. His preaching was earnest and effective, "somewhat in the style of Prof. Finney." His labors were remarkably blessed with revivals, some thousands having been converted under his ministry.

He was a fiery advocate of both the Anti-slavery and the Temperance reforms, entering upon them at an early day, and never relaxing his zeal in their behalf. He was the second minister in his County to take the ground of Total Abstinence, and was employed by the New York State Temperance Society, as a lecturer for many years. He was also one of the first agents sent out by the Anti-slavery Society. More than forty years ago he said to one of his friends, "if Slavery is not destroyed, the nation will be shivered like a potter's vessel." In the early times of the Anti-slavery excitement "more than once a sword was brandished over his head to intimidate him." Mobs often collected, but he would "throw himself among them," and by talking with them disarm their rage.

He was a very social companion, genial, "of pleasant aspect, animated, and cheerful." He was ardently attached to his friends.

The death of his youngest daughter was a blow from which he never fully rallied. "For two or three months previous to his death he seemed like a weaned child, so heavenly minded." To a friend who asked him how he felt in the near view of death he replied, "I have no anxiety. It has been the business of my whole life to prepare for this hour." After having "preached Christ for half a century with unusual health and vigor, and with singular devotion and success," "his spirit departed like an infant's dropping into a sweet slumber."

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS WARE was brought up to hard labor on the farm. At the age of sixteen he was converted under the ministry of Rev. Mark Carpenter of Keene, and almost at once devoted himself to the work of the ministry. He attended the Academy at Hancock one year, and then took the full course of the New Hampton Theological Institute. He was "licensed" Ap. 19, 1846, by the Baptist Church of Sullivan and Gilsum. He was ordained Pastor of the Baptist Church at Marlboro', where he remained two years. He then removed to Sanbornton Bay, where he preached four years, enjoying the special blessing of God's Spirit upon his labors. He was at Addison, Vt., the next two years. From thence he removed to Whiting, Vt., where he labored to the time of his death. He died suddenly, in his 43d year, while on a visit to his sister in Surry.

He was a man of large physical frame, over six feet in height, and of great power of endurance. In his early manhood he manifested his literary tastes and ability, by an active membership in Lyceum and Debating Societies, in his native town.

He was of a mechanical turn of mind, and his shop in which he spent his hours of recreation gave abundant proof of his skill in the use of tools. He was social and friendly in his manners and habits. But the intensity of his convictions, and the force with which he condemned what he thought to be wrong, made him sometimes dreaded by those of opposite views. He was "a man of more than ordinary ability, one whose air and mien made his mere presence an influence." He was naturally a leader. In Whiting he was several times chosen Moderator of Town Meetings, and wielded great influence in the stormy days of the war of the rebellion. In the Association of Baptist Churches, he was often chosen Moderator, and always exerted a great influence in its acts and deliberations. "His style of composition for the pulpit, was that of strength rather than the ornaments of rhetoric and the glosses of diction; his manner of speaking was open, earnest, and impressive." His death in the full strength of manhood, was not only a misfortune to his family, but a great loss to his church, and to the cause of Christ.

CALVIN MAY, JR., attended Mt. Cesar Seminary in Swanzy, where he stood highest in his class. After studying Theology with Rev. L. J. Fletcher of Brattleboro', Vt., he was ordained and settled as pastor of the Universalist Church in Hinsdale. Here he spent two years, and was "admired for his able discourses and genial life." "Being unable to preach on account of a throat difficulty," he entered Norwich University in 1846. He maintained a high standing in his class for two years, but did not continue his studies through the course. He returned to Gilsun where he "busied himself by farming in the Summer and teaching in the Fall and Winter." He served the town as Moderator and Superintending School Committee four years each, and as Selectman one. He was very active in educational and temperance reforms, being a leader in the Order of Sons of Temperance. He was appointed Clerk of the New Hampshire Senate four years, was Register of Probate for Cheshire County two years, and Register of Deeds three years. At the time of his death he held the office of Assessor of the Direct Taxes of the United States for the Third District of New Hampshire.

An obituary notice says: "He loved religious institutions, and was a punctual, faithful member of the Church and the Sunday School. He was a friend to moral reform, and ever gave his voice and vote on the side of humanity." Gilsun has produced few men of more brilliant natural gifts than he. He had also a peculiar power of winning personal friends even among those of different political and religious views. One of his former townsmen writes: "Few men at the age of thirty years could equal him as a finished orator,—so much power, and yet so smooth and so sweet."

SILVANUS HAYWARD received his early education at home, living with his uncle, Elisha S. Fish, from the age of 8 to 17. The only school he attended before entering College, was about two months in 1836-7, in the chamber of A. W. Kingsbury's house. The teacher was Aaron Day, Jr. He also attended two terms of Teachers' Institutes at Keene in 1847 and 1848. Having studied Latin and Greek under the private instruction of Rev. James Tisdale, he entered Dartmouth College in August, 1849, graduating July, 1853. He worked his way through College with but little assistance, by teaching winters, and by manual labor in the vacations. After graduating he taught the Academy at Frankestown three years; at Melndoe's Falls, Vt., two years; and at Pembroke one year. He was assistant at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, one year, and at Appleton Academy, New Ipswich, one year. He was approbated as a candidate for the ministry, by the Hollis Association, at Amherst, in May, 1860, and supplied the pulpit of the 2d Congregational Church at New Ipswich for nine months. Oct. 9, 1861, he was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church in Dunbarton, was dismissed May 1, 1866, and installed at South Berwick, Me., May 11, 1866, where he remained seven years. He was then called by the American Missionary Association to a Professorship of Mathematics in Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., where he remained two years. He then supplied the pulpit in his native town for four years, while engaged in writing the present volume. During his residence at Dunbarton, he was for two years Commissioner of Schools for Merrimack County, and held a Teachers' Institute at Contoocookville the second year. In July, 1870, he delivered before the Literary Societies of Dartmouth College a Poem entitled, "Brass and Brains," which he has since repeated in various places. He has also lectured in different places, and has published many transient articles in the papers. While at Dunbarton, he published, by request, a sermon entitled, "Liberty, of God." In 1872, he delivered an Address on the occasion of the Centennial Anniversary of the Congregational Church in Gilsum, which was published. (Chap. 20.)

CHARLES WETHERBY obtained his preparatory education at Meriden, and graduated from Middlebury College in 1856. After teaching two years at Lowell, Ohio, he was ordained as an evangelist, and gathered a church of eighty members at that place. He then entered Union Theological Seminary, where he remained some over a year, and then settled in Cornwall, Conn., laboring there about six years, with much success. His next settlement was in Winsted, Conn., where he remained five years and a half. In December, 1871, he was installed pastor of the Pearl Street Church, Nashua. His ministrations here were successful in largely increasing the church and congregation. During his stay in Nashua, he was "closely identified with every moral and religious enterprise of that city." In May, 1879, he was installed pastor of the Congregational Church at Clinton, Mass. He has lectured in various places with much acceptance.

NATHANIEL MERRILL HUTCHINSON, then a member of Western Reserve College, enlisted in the Fall of 1861, as color bearer in an Ohio Regiment. He afterwards served two years as Lieutenant and Captain. He was in the battle of Murfreesboro', and was thirty days under fire, but unharmed. After returning from the war, he read law, and was admitted to the Bar in New York City. Finding law practice disagreeable, he entered Union Theological Seminary, and after graduation was ordained at Olivet Chapel, a missionary enterprise in that city. After gathering a flourishing church, he settled at Dunellen, N. J., where, during his stay of one year, fifty were added to the church. He was then appointed Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions in the City of Mexico, where he is still laboring.

HARVEY WOODWARD received his preparatory education at Keene High School and New London Academy. In August, 1864, he enlisted in the 9th Regiment of New Hampshire Volunteers, and was on "detached service" at Concord, N. H., till the close of the war. He then spent a year in the Seminary at Tilton. In 1866, he entered the Sophomore Class in Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and graduated in 1869, "dividing the fourth class honor with Prof. C. T. Winchester" of that place. He was for one year "Professor of Mathematics and Latin in Falley Seminary, Fulton, Oswego County, N. Y.;" "joined the Central New York [M. E.] Conference at Syraense in 1870, and was ordained Deacon by Bishop Simpson; was ordained Elder by Bishop Foster at Carthage, N. Y., in 1874; and was appointed in New York to Jordanville, Deanesville, and New York Mills." "In 1875, he was transferred to the New Hampshire Conference and stationed at High Street, Great Falls;" and was subsequently appointed to Bristol and Fisherville, where he is now laboring.

PHYSICIANS.

ABNER BLISS was the first physician in Gilsum. He removed to Alstead about 1789. He previously lived at "Dart Corner," on the place now occupied by Dennis Keefe. He had an extensive and successful practice. He died in Alstead, but was buried in the Bond grave-yard. It is remembered that the burial was on Sunday, and that many of the people ran out of meeting to see the procession, as it was in plain sight from the old common. Rev. Zebulon Streeter of Surry was the preacher that day, and to stop the disturbance quoted the text, "Let the dead bury their dead."

His son, Abner Bliss, Jr., received the degree of M. D. at Hanover in 1820, and settled at Alstead, where, after a successful practice of over thirty years, he died at the age of 67.

His son, Abner F. Bliss, is also a physician, residing at Wardsboro', Vt. He received his degree from Castleton Medical College in 1851.

BENJAMIN HOSMER came from Amherst in 1793, and boarded at Dea. Bond's. He built a house the next year on what is still known as the "Hosmer place," and brought his wife there in 1795. Here he continued to reside till his death in 1826. Of his education, I have no information. As a physician he was particularly cautious and careful. His daughter Rachel, afterwards Mrs. Thompson, became a preacher of considerable note in the Christian denomination. (Page 121.)

HENRY KENDRICK settled here as a physician about 1805, boarding with Mr. Griswold at the lower village. He remained here only about two years. Nothing is known of him.

OBADIAH WILCOX studied with Dr. Amos Twitchell, who considered him one of the most promising students he ever had. Where he took his degree, I have been unable to learn. He was feeble from a child, having an organic defect in his heart, which caused his instantaneous death at the early age of 33.

JONATHAN EDWARDS DAVIS was a physician in Gilsun from 1816 to 1820. He removed to Nashua, but I have been unable to trace his history.

BENJAMIN PALMER came to Gilsun in 1819, and went to Cleveland, Ohio, 1822. It was during his stay that "typhus fever" prevailed so fatally, there being some 20 deaths in a few weeks. He had no family, and boarded with Dea. Pease at the lower village. He was considered "a very substantial young doctor." I have not been able to trace his history.

ISAAC HATCH was a native of Alstead. He studied his profession with old Dr. Adams of Keene, and attended lectures at Dartmouth Medical College, beginning practice in Gilsun, in 1822. After his marriage in 1824, he lived about two years in the house with Allen Butler, and then removed to Moriah, N. Y., where he remained about eleven years. In 1837, he went to Newport, where he died the next year, at the age of 43. He was a member of the Baptist church.

HUDLEY SMITH worked on his father's farm, teaching school in the Winter, till he became of age. He then entered the Academy at Alstead, remaining there about a year and a half. In 1822, he began his medical studies with Dr. Daniel Adams of Keene, and afterwards continued them under Dr. Warren of Boston, Mass. He attended lectures at Dartmouth Medical College where he took the degree of M. D. in 1825. He settled in practice at Concord, Mass., where he remained seven years, and where he was first married. In 1832, he removed to Lowell, Mass., and a few years later, returned to Keene and went into company with his fellow-student, Dr. Charles G. Adams, son of his first medical instructor. After about four years they dissolved partnership, and he continued in practice at Keene for sixteen years. "During this period he experienced religion, and made a profession of Christianity, which he maintained to the day of his death."

In 1856, he removed from Keene and settled in the practice of his profession at De Kalb, Ill. Here his first wife died, and in 1859, he married one of his former pupils at Keene. He died very suddenly in the 75th year of his age.

"The last evening of his life he spent in his usual cheerful manner; retired to rest, and rose between five and six next morning, and stepped into an adjoining room, and while warming his slippers on the stove fell, and instantly expired. A post mortem examination showed that death was caused by the rupture of the principal blood vessel of the heart."

He was one of the most efficient and valuable members of the Congregational Church in De Kalb. He held the offices of deacon, clerk and trustee. "He sought for no political office, but loved his books and his home. He was a well-read and intelligent man not only in his profession but generally; and was a most pleasant and genial companion. The principles which he adopted he held firmly, and could warmly defend them. He was impetuous and sharp in his utterances when provoked, and thereby was sometimes hurried into mistakes. But few who only knew this side of his character would suspect the affection and tenderness which were in his heart. He was sincerely interested in all his patients, and proved a ready and skilful operator in many difficult cases."

TIMOTHY S. LANE studied with Dr. James Batcheller of Marlboro', — received the degree of M. D. at Hanover in 1824, and settled at Sullivan the following year. In 1832, he removed to Lunenburg, Vt., and in 1834, to Gilsun, where he remained four years. In 1838, he went to Daysville, Ill., and three years later to Fillmore, Ill., where he died in 1849.

His son, Jonathan Bowers Lane, is a prominent merchant in Fillmore, Ill., where he has been postmaster for 28 years, and has served as County Judge.

GEORGE WASHINGTON HAMMOND was one of Gilsun's most distinguished citizens. A long and dangerous sickness from disease of the heart having rendered him, in early life, unable to endure the severe labor of the farm, he determined to fit himself for the medical profession. Unable to meet the expense of a collegiate course, which he much desired, he attended Alstead Academy a few terms, teaching District schools in the Winter to obtain the necessary funds. He then entered Dartmouth Medical College where "he graduated with more than average honor," Aug. 21, 1824. Prof. R. D. Mussey, one of his instructors, secured him the offer of an excellent position, with flattering recommendations. But not having the funds with which to purchase the Medical Library that he needed for the place, he felt obliged to decline the favorable opportunity.

He began the practice of his profession in Richmond, where he became acquainted with the family of Josiah Rawson, Esq., whose eldest daughter he married. Removing from Richmond, he settled at Proctorsville, Vt. At the urgent desire of his parents he returned to Gilsun in February, 1830, where he engaged in the practice of his profession for thirty-six years.

In February, 1866, he removed, with all his family, to Stockbridge, Madison Co., N. Y., where he died at the age of 70 years.

"He had a mind of more than common activity and his life was spent in study. His talents were versatile. In his chosen profession he deservedly occupied a high position for his scientific attainments, but this did not engross his entire attention. He had a taste for literary labors and wrote with beauty and force." He wrote many articles for the press, thereby wielding "a much greater influence in Political and Temperance Reforms of the day than was generally known at home." He was one of the leaders in the Washingtonian movement in this vicinity, and frequently lectured with good success in this cause. In Lyceums and Debating Societies he was one of the most active and useful members, both with tongue and pen. Historical matters connected with the town especially interested him. (Appendix G.) He was interested in education, using his influence in behalf of the improvement and enlargement of school privileges for the young. He served the town as Superintending School Committee five years. He was one of the founders and most efficient supporters of the Universalist Library.

"He was always an able and conscientious advocate of equal rights to all men of whatever color or creed. He was of the firm belief that it is the prerogative of the Eternal alone to judge man's motives and spiritual conduct and that one man was better than another, only so far as he behaved better."

He inherited from his father one of the best farms in Gilsun, and few professional men take as deep interest in Agriculture as he, or practice farming with better success. He was chosen to represent the town in the Constitutional Convention of 1850, and did "all in his power to protect the interests of the small towns." He served the district as State Senator in 1855 and 1856, and was Justice of the Peace for many years. "Pleasant in his intercourse, genial in his manners, he left many warm friends to mourn his death."

KIMBALL DAVID WEBSTER was brought up on his father's farm in Alstead, being the seventh in a family of ten children. Having a taste for the medical profession, he began his preparation by attending the Academy in his native town. He studied a short time with Drs. Smith and Adams of Keene, but mostly with Dr. Eber Carpenter of Alstead. He attended lectures at Woodstock, Vt., where he received the degree of M. D. in 1836. The next year, he settled in Gilsun, following Dr. Lane, and has had a successful local practice in this and the neighboring towns.

CALVIN CLARK BINGHAM followed the business of a mechanic in a variety of forms, till about thirty years of age, when he commenced the study of dentistry. He followed this profession "with a good degree of success" for ten years. Having studied medicine, he commenced practice in 1868. Desiring a more thorough acquaintance with the theory of his chosen profession, he entered the "American Health College," in Ohio, where he graduated with the degree "M. D. V. D." He is now in successful practice in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y.

C. D. Webster

CHARLES FRANKLIN KINGSBURY fitted for College at the Academies at Swanzev, Marlow, and Brattleboro', Vt. He entered Norwich University in 1848, and remained three years. He then attended three courses of Medical Lectures at Woodstock, Vt., and one at Hanover, N. H., where he took the degree of M. D. in 1855. The following year he settled in practice at Stoddard, where he remained four years. In 1860, he removed to Lyme, where he has a large and successful practice. He has been an active and efficient member of the Board of Agriculture for seven years.

AARON H. LIVERMORE spent about two years in Norwich University. He then returned to his father's, and assisted in carrying on the farm for a few years. During this time he served the town as Moderator, and Selectman, and three years as Superintending School Committee. About 1854, he removed to Boston, Mass., and having studied dentistry, has established a successful practice in that profession.

MILON ELLIOTT LOVELAND after having followed mechanical pursuits for some years, turned his attention to dentistry, and learned his profession in the office of Dr. S. L. Geer of Norwich, Conn. After a year or two of business in Winchendon, Mass., he settled in Keene in 1868, where he was in company with Dr. F. S. Stratton for some years. In 1878, Dr. Stratton having left, Dr. B. E. Olcott became his partner, and they enjoy an extensive patronage.

AARON R. GLEASON attended lectures at Georgetown Medical College and received the degree of M. D. there in 1864. After four years medical service in the army, (page 44,) he attended an additional course of lectures in New York City, and was for a time in the N. Y. General Hospital. He settled at Fitzwilliam where he has a large and successful practice.

ISRAEL ALBERT LOVELAND obtained his preliminary education at Marlow Academy, after which he taught school a few terms. He pursued his medical studies under the direction of Dr. G. C. Hill of Keene, and Prof. C. P. Frost of Hanover. Having attended lectures he received the degree of M. D. at Dartmouth Medical College in November, 1874. He began practice at Nelson, but in September, 1875, removed to Westmoreland, where he is physician to the County Alms House, and enjoys "a good and steadily increasing private practice." He has served four years as a member of the School Board, and has been Treasurer of the Westmoreland Insurance Association from its beginning. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church.

Among the descendants of Justus Hurd were the following.

WILLIAM HENRY HURD fitted for College at Meriden, and then entered upon the study of medicine with Dr. McQuestion of Washington. He attended medical lectures at Cincinnati, Ohio, and afterwards at Hanover, where he received the degree of M. D. in 1855. He commenced practice at Wells River, Vt., but soon removed to Canada, where he died.

WILLARD OTIS HURD (brother of the preceding,) studied medicine with him in Canada, and graduated at Albany Medical College in 1860. He went into practice in company with his brother at Carlton Place, C. W., for about three years. He then enlisted in the 83d N. Y. Regiment, — was appointed Assistant Surgeon, and afterwards transferred to the 97th N. Y. Regiment. At the close of the war, he settled in the practice of his profession at Grantham, where he still resides.

YORICK GORDON HURD, (second cousin of the preceding,) having only the usual advantages of a farmer's boy in the public schools, began to teach at the age of 17. By teaching winters and attending "Select Schools" in the Fall for several years, he fitted himself to take charge of Peterboro' Academy, which he managed successfully for three years. Meanwhile he began the study of medicine with Prof. Albert Smith, M. D., of that place. Having attended lectures at Woodstock, Vt., and Hanover, he received the degree of M. D. from Dartmouth Medical College in 1853. He settled in practice at Amesbury, Mass. In September, 1862, he was appointed Post Surgeon of the Camp at Wenham, Mass., and the December following was commissioned Surgeon of the 18th Regiment of Mass. Volunteers, which was ordered to the Department of the Gulf. He resumed practice at Amesbury in 1861. Three years after, he was appointed Medical Director of Division of Mass. Volunteer Militia, on the Staff of Maj. Gen. B. F. Butler, and held the position nearly ten years. He was a member of the School Committee of Amesbury for ten years. He was twice elected to the Mass. State Senate. He was appointed Superintendent of Essex Co. House of Correction, and Insane Asylum Jan. 1, 1866, and still holds the position. Under the law of 1877, relating to Coroners in Mass., he was appointed Medical Examiner for Essex District No. 2. He is also President of the Board of Trustees of Manning School, Ipswich. In 1876, Bowdoin College conferred on him the honorary degree of A. M.

George Clinton Fuller, grandson of Capt. David, (Genealogy,) attended two courses of lectures at Hanover, and one at Castleton, N. Y., where he took his degree; settled in practice at Sutton, and after four years was appointed Surgeon of the City Hospital at Utica, N. Y., where he resides.

LAWYERS.

HON. THERON HOWARD removed from Gilsum to Danville, Vt., at the age of 22, in September, 1821, at which place and at Peacham, Vt., he followed his trade of shoemaking for nearly three years. In June, 1824, he entered the office of George B. Shaw, a prominent lawyer in Danville, where he studied faithfully for three years, and was admitted to the bar in September, 1827. He resided at Cabot for a few years, when he returned to Danville, and entered into partnership with his fellow-student, George B. Chandler. He was elected State's Attorney for the County by the Democracy, of which party he was for many years an active member. He, however, early recognized the importance of the "irrepressible conflict," and became a zealous pioneer in the Anti-slavery movement, and never swerved from his fidelity to that cause. He was a delegate from Vermont to the National Convention of the Free Soil party, which nominated Van Buren and Adams, at Buffalo, in 1848. The same year he was elected Judge of Probate, which office he held four years. In 1854, he represented Danville in the Legislature. In 1862, the County seat having been removed from Danville, he followed it to St. Johnsbury, where he spent the remainder of his life, with the continued and increasing esteem and confidence of a large circle of acquaintances.

Judge Howard was a representative man of the people. With few early advantages, he worked his own way into a public life of honor and usefulness. Having experienced the trials, temptations, and struggles incident to a life of poverty and labor, he always warmly espoused the cause of the burdened and oppressed.

He was eminently social in his tastes, a delightful friend, fond of anecdote, of inexhaustible cheerfulness, spreading genial sunshine wherever he went. But his geniality never degenerated into weakness. His principles were established, and no influences could turn him from the path of duty. He united with the Methodist Church in early life, and remained till its close a faithful and consistent member, always throwing his influence by example, as well as words, on the side of the Master in whose cause he had enlisted. "An honest man, a true Christian, the value of his life is greater and more permanent than can be recorded in words. No more fitting tribute can be applied than the words of St. Paul, 'I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith.'—Caledonian."

HON. GEORGE WHITMAN HENDEE, son of Rev. Jehiel P. Hendee, (page 122,) was born in Stowe, Vt., and resided in Gilsum with his parents when a boy. His father was poor, and like most New England boys he was brought up to hard work. Having obtained a good academical education, he read law, and was admitted to the bar, in Lamoille Co., Vt., at the age of 22. Three years later, he was elected State's Attorney for the same County, and held the office two years. In 1861 and 1862, he was a member of the lower House in the Vermont Legislature. Two years following, he was deputy Provost Marshal of the 3d Vermont District, with his headquarters at Burlington. In 1866, he was chosen State Senator from his County and was twice re-elected. In 1869, he was chosen Lieut. Governor of Vermont, and by the death of Gov. Washburn in February, 1870, he became Governor. Declining a re-election, in 1872, he was chosen to represent his District in the 43d Congress, and has been twice re-elected.

He was an "industrious and faithful member" of the House, engaging frequently and skilfully in debate, and enjoying the confidence both of his associates in Congress, and his constituents at home. In his profession as a lawyer he stands high, being "a good speaker, and extra as a jury advocate." He is a man of commanding presence being six feet tall and weighing 250 pounds. His residence is Morrisville, Vt. In April, 1879, he was appointed a National Bank Examiner for the State of Vermont.

STEPHEN WARREN HORTON having obtained a fair Academy education at Marlow, went to Effingham, Ill., and read law. After being admitted to the bar, he removed to Louisville, Ky. Naturally gifted with energy and tact, and fluent in speech, he was rapidly rising into a first-class practice at the bar, when he died at about forty years of age.

Henry A. Rice

OSCAR MACK METCALF was in Dartmouth College three years, was a teacher in Maine for a few years, and then read law with Butler and Libby of Portland, Me., where he was admitted to the bar, and entered upon practice about 1875.

HENRY W. FULLER, grandson of Capt. David, (Genealogy,) graduated at Dartmouth College in 1857, at Harvard Law School in 1859, taking the first prize. Began the practice of law at Concord, but soon enlisted in the first N. H. Regiment. He is said to have been the first man in N. H. who enlisted as a private soldier. (Chap. 32.) He was promoted to 1st Lieut. and afterwards to Adjutant in the 1th Regiment. In 1862, he was commissioned as Lieut. Colonel in the 16th Regiment. He was afterwards Colonel of the 75th Regiment of colored troops, and was brevetted Brig. General. He is now a lawyer in Boston.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HON. ALVAN SMITH of Lempster, a grandson of Justus Hurd, was a tanner by trade. With only a common education, his business capacity and his sterling integrity won the confidence of his fellow-citizens. He served in both branches of the State Legislature, was also a member of the Council. He was Judge of Probate for eleven years, and was afterwards U. S. pension agent.

HARVEY ADAMS BILL was brought up on his father's farm, but having a taste for literary pursuits, " strove to fit himself by reading and study for an intelligent and useful citizenship." He learned the trade of a printer in the office of the "Farmer's Museum," afterwards the "Cheshire Republican," at Keene. By persevering diligence he rose to the position of business manager in the office, and eventually became the editor.

"His editorial labors extended over a period of ten years, during which time the paper maintained a high reputation for truth and honesty. Few editors have labored more faithfully than he, and fewer still are they who have written so little that upon a death-bed they might desire to blot out. Unswerving in his principles, a mind peculiarly disciplined to investigation and rigid criticism, his labors for the cause in which his heart was enlisted were acknowledged by all with whom he was engaged."

"There are very few men in our midst who command the universal respect that was awarded to Mr. Bill. In his dealings with his fellow-men he was guided by the strictest integrity; in his capacity as a public officer, no one ever had reason to complain of any unfaithfulness; as an editor, his ability and discretion were acknowledged as well by his patrons as by the editorial fraternity."

"While we remember the more public virtues of our friend, we would not be forgetful of

'That best portion of a good man's life —
His little, nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love,'

that were only witnessed and felt by those who were his most intimate acquaintance. Kind, affectionate, and genial in his disposition, it was in the inmost recesses of private life that his true nature was unfolded, and it is there that his loss will meet with the most heartfelt sorrow."

MARIA T. WARE sailed for Oregon from New York, Oct. 9, 1839, by way of Cape Horn with a large re-inforcement for the Methodist Mission to the Indians. They arrived at the Columbia River the 23d of May following. She shortly after married Rev. Daniel Lee.

He was the second of thirteen children of Elias Lee of Stanstead, C. E. He worked with his father on the farm till 21 years of age. He then went to the Academy at Peacham, Vt., and afterwards to Wilbraham, Mass., working his way by teaching school in the winter.

He received his first appointment as a minister of the M. E. Church at Gosben, in 1831. The next year he preached in Vt., and in 1833 was ordained by Bishop Hedding. He and his uncle, the Rev. Jason Lee, were the first missionaries to Oregon. They crossed the country with the American Fur Company taking with them two cows, the first ever introduced there. They arrived there Sept. 1, 1833.

In 1843 Rev. Daniel Lee and his wife returned by ship around the Cape. He was afterwards stationed at various places in N. H. and Mass., till 1857, when they removed to Hillsboro', Ill., and are now residing in Caldwell, Kansas. Two of their sons were given for the Union in the late war.

AARON DAY, JR., obtained his preparatory education at Chesterfield (?) Academy, and graduated from Dartmouth College in 1842. The following Autumn he taught a High School at Westmoreland, "then at Concord Academy to September, 1845: was next private Tutor in Prince George's Co., Md., fifteen months; after that taught in Upperville, Fauquier Co., Va., to 1849; was assistant at the Rittenhouse Academy, Washington, D. C., one term; then at Eldorado, Union Co., Ark., to 1852." He then taught at Marion, Union Parish, La., till, his health failing, he went to his brother's in Whitewater, Wis., in the Fall of 1854, and died there, at the age of 35. A friend writes: —

"He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and died in the triumphs of faith. Thus passed from earth one of the noblest of men,—one who was kept in almost constant pain by his weak and suffering body, but whose mind was clear and strong and well calculated to be one of the foremost men of his time, had his strength of body been equal to his aspirations. His fine mind, gentle and unassuming manners, and patient endurance of suffering, endeared him to all who knew him."

AMASA MAY resided on the farm with his father till 1858, teaching school with eminent success for fourteen winters. He then removed to Philadelphia, Penn., where he was employed by Lippincott & Co. in introducing their text books through the Middle States. In 1865, he went to Kansas, hoping to establish a home there. After a year's labor, he lost all he had gathered, by a prairie fire. He returned to his former employment at Philadelphia, traveling continuously through Pennsylvania and New York. In 1867, he settled at Haddonfield, N. J., where he remained for six years, when he removed to Stamford, Conn. While at New York on business, he was suddenly attacked with diphtheria and died in six hours, at the age of 53.

Wherever he resided he became an active and earnest advocate of good schools. It was to this branch of reform that he specially directed his attention, and in spite of great opposition he achieved much success. He was associated with Epes Sargent as joint author of a valuable series of readers. An obituary notice in the "West Jersey Press," from which the above facts are largely taken, says: "Mr. Amasa May was a man endowed with many excellent qualities of head and heart, interested in the advanced thought of the day, alive to the spirit of progress." He had already become one of the leading citizens in his native town, where he served three years as Moderator and two years as Selectman.

His only son Sidney H. May graduated from the Naval Academy in 1869, and received a Lieutenant's commission in 1879.

LYDIA E. M. ABBOTT graduated at Mount Holyoke Seminary in 1846. She engaged in teaching at Westfield, N. Y., where she died the year following.

OSCAR ADDISON MACK though not born in Gilsun, came here at a very early age. Here his ancestors for three generations had made their home. Considering the shortness of his life, it would be difficult to mention a name that brings more honor to Gilsun than his. He inherited from his father a natural aptitude for learning, and from his grandmother, Rachel Hurd, a taste for military life. His mother dying while he was yet an infant, and his father, when he was about five years of age, he was brought up in the family of Capt. True Webster. While yet a boy, in his eagerness to learn, he would spend a large portion of the night in study. Rev. James Tisdale seeing his aptitude for study took a great interest in his success, and it was largely due to his influence that he applied for and received an appointment as Cadet at West Point, where he graduated in 1850. He ranked No. 8 in a class of 48.

His Military Record, as taken from the Files of the War Department at Washington, is as follows:—
"Graduated from the U. S. Military Academy and appointed

Brevet 2nd Lieutenant, 3d Artillery	July 1, 1850.
2nd Lieutenant 4th Artillery	January 9, 1851.
1st Lieutenant " "	February 14, 1856.
Captain, 13th Infantry	May 14, 1861.
Major, 9th Infantry	June 19, 1866.
Assigned to 1st Infantry	Dec. 15, 1870.
Lieutenant Colonel, 21st Infantry	Dec. 15, 1874.

[Brevetted Major, U. S. Army, Sept. 10, 1861, for gallant services at the battle of Carnifex Ferry, Virginia; Lieut. Colonel, Dec. 31, 1862, for gallant and distinguished services at the battle of Murfreesboro', Tenn.; and Colonel, March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the War.]

Served as Major and Aide-de-Camp of Volunteers from April 16, 1863, until honorably mustered out of service, July 1, 1866.

Service: On graduating leave to Sept. 30, 1850. With regiment on duty to Sept. 7, 1852. On leave of absence to Oct. 2, 1852. With regiment to Sept. 13, 1853; on leave to Oct. 5, 1853; with regiment to Nov. 20, 1856; on detached service as Asst. Commissary Subsistence at Fort Myers, Fla., to Dec. 20, 1856; on duty with regiment in the field, Fla., to Jan. 18, 1857; on detached service as Asst. Commissary of Subsistence at Forts Brooke and Myers, Fla., to Jan. 6, 1858; on leave of absence to April 1, 1858, and absent sick to June 22, 1860. With regiment and commanding Co. "I" 4th Artillery in the field to May 1, 1862. On staff of General Geo. H. Thomas until wounded at battle of Stone River, Dec. 31, 1862; absent wounded to June 15, 1863; on duty as Asst. Provost Marshal General, at Concord, N. H., to Nov. 9, 1863, and on duty as Secretary and Treasurer U. S. Soldiers' Home, District of Columbia, to Nov.

George V. Munnick

30, 1867. Before Retiring Camp at N. Y. City; permission to delay joining regiment; on Court Martial duty at Washⁿ and Commanding Camp Gaston, Cal., to May 14, 1869, and on duty in War Department from June 11, 1869, in addition thereto engaged in inspection of National Cemeteries from January 16, 1871, to date of death.

Died (while on special duty to Santa Fe, New Mexico, and return) Oct. 22, 1876, on the cars at Brunswick, Missouri.

One of his most intimate friends writes: —

It was impossible for any one to know Col. Mack, without admiring him, he was so perfectly unselfish, and such a consistent Christian in every position in life, and such a true and loyal soldier to his country that he willingly gave up everything to advance the interest of the service he loved so dearly. He was a great lover of nature, and all of his leisure time for years he had devoted to the study of Botany, so he was peculiarly fitted for the care of the National Cemeteries, which he took unwearied pains to render beautiful. He was always very proud of his native State and glad to proclaim himself a native of New Hampshire. He was confirmed as a member of the Episcopal Church in Germantown, Penn., in 1857, and his whole life was full of good deeds, doing kindness without number, never letting his left hand know what his right was doing. His good example was felt by every one. Among his soldiers he was beloved and respected, and his own immediate family and friends were devoted to him. He was buried from the Church of the Epiphany of which he was a member, and sleeps in the Congressional Cemetery at Washington, D. C.

ALICE M. WARE, afterwards the wife of Rev. Ezra Adams, (page 114,) graduated at Mount Holyoke Seminary in 1858. Since her husband's death in 1864, she has been engaged in teaching. At present, she has charge of the Female Department in Wilberforce University, Xenia, Ohio.

CHARLES EDWIN HURD, great-grandson of Justus, is a newspaper man. He was two years editorially connected with a semi-weekly called "The Tribune," at Yarmouth, N. S. Was for a time connected with "The Leader" in Boston, Mass. In 1865 he became city editor of the "Erie Dispatch" at Erie, Penn. He now resides in Boston, Mass., and is the literary editor of the "Transcript."

SARAH JANE HAYWARD graduated at Mount Holyoke Seminary, July, 1858. She intended to make teaching her profession, but her hearing becoming somewhat impaired, she was obliged to relinquish the design. She resides with her mother in Gilsum.

ABRAM BROWN was in Gilsum with his brothers (Chap. 36.) about 1860. He enlisted, Aug. 19, 1862, in the 9th N. H. Reg't, Co. K, — was promoted to Corporal, — had three fingers shot off at Antietam, — "wounded severely Dec. 13, 1862, and discharged for disability March 4, 1863." He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1867, — taught for several years in Ohio, and is now agent for School Books in Chicago, Ill.

WILLIAM BIGELOW ADAMS, oldest son of Rev. Ezra Adams, fitted for College at Kimball Union Academy. He graduated at Amherst College in 1863, — then taught the Academy at Westminster, Mass., two years, and the High School at Edgartown, Mass., one year. In March, 1869, he went to Xenia, Ohio, where he became Professor in Wilberforce University. In the Spring of 1880 he returned to Gilsum and opened a High School.

WHITNEY D. FOSTER "entered the 'Herald' office in 1870 as a compositor, and afterwards went to Norwich, Conn., where he was employed on the 'Norwich Bulletin.' Subsequently he returned to this office and obtained a situation as proof-reader, which he held at the time of his death. He was possessed of a large share of those mental acquirements which gave promise of earning him a high rank in the profession which he had adopted and for which he seemed eminently fitted. His many good qualities of mind and heart had won for him a large place in the affections and respect of his associates, and the loss which they have sustained in his death is deeply felt." — Boston Herald.

CHAPTER XXXII.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER THREE.

1. JOSIAH KILBURN built a log house here in 1762. (Page 169.)

2. A few years later, Mr. Kilburn built the first framed house in Gilsun, on this spot. It is designated in the picture by the white flags a little in the background and to the left of the present buildings. This house was "an English Cottage with two parlors, two sleeping rooms, with a large cook-room, and large store-room and pantry on the lower floor."

Mr. Kilburn became infirm at an early age, probably owing to the exposures of the first years in a new country. At the time his son was in the army, he was unable to leave the house. He was Moderator of the first meeting of the proprietors, and was one of the first Selectmen in 1762.

3. EBENEZER KILBURN moved the house to this spot. He was a large man over six feet in height, weighing 230 pounds, and of great energy and courage. He served as Lieutenant in the army, (page 38.) and was afterwards Captain in the militia. He was Deacon of the Congregational Church for many years.

His first wife, Jenima Ford, belonged to "one of the wealthiest families in Connecticut." The hardships and exposures of those early times were too severe for her delicate constitution, and she died of consumption, about a year after marriage. (Page 62) Her daughter, Jenima, the first white child born in Gilsun, became blind in early childhood, and died in Plattsburg, N. Y., at the age of 96.

Dea. Kilburn's second wife was Sarah, sister of Maj. Bill. "She was a very handsome woman, amiable, kind to the poor, and beloved by all her acquaintance." She was of strong constitution, and a great amount of energy and determination. When her husband went to the war she was left with four children under ten years of age, one being an infant, a blind girl of about twelve, an old man so infirm as hardly to move from one room to another, besides a large stock of cattle and sheep. Her only help and protection were two large dogs, that had been trained to drive the cattle, and kept off the wild beasts. When Sunday came she went to meeting, where she was taunted by Tory women telling her that her husband was a fine mark for the British, and would never come home alive. She simply replied that he had the same keeper in battle as at home, and bore all with unflinching courage. Her characteristic energy was shown in later years, when the family having all left their former Church to attend the services of another sect, and the Communion season at the Congregational Church having arrived, she mounted her horse, and taking the bread and wine in a basket in her lap, brought it to the meeting at the appointed time.

Joel Kilburn, the second son of Josiah, owned the lot west of his father's, the first Lot in the first Range. He probably had a house there, though it is not certain. He sold the place to his brother Ebenezer in 1772. He also received from his father the Taylor lot in Hammond Hollow, and sold it to Moses Belding of Swansey in 1774. He was a millwright by trade, and removed to Royalton, Vt., before the Revolution, as it is known his family resided there while he was in the army. He afterwards returned to Surry, had several children born there, and went back to Vt. about 1793.

Iddo Kilburn, third son of Ebenezer, received the farm of his father. He enlarged the old house, building on what is now the ell part towards the east. In 1839, he sold the place and removed to Hartland, Vt., where he died, leaving two sons, one of whom has since died. The other, Francis A., is said to be a wealthy merchant in Iowa.

George W. Sturtevant, when a young man, lived at Dea. Kilburn's and married the daughter of his brother Jehiel. He settled in Keene where "for nearly fifty years he practiced surveying and performed the offices of a civil engineer," having "no equal in this section of the State." "His sound judgment, unswerving integrity and valuable experience in matters pertaining to the interests of the Town, served as passports to many important public positions, even when his political friends were largely in the minority." He served five years as Town Clerk, and was chairman of the Board of Selectmen for many years. He was also Register of Probate five years. "An entire generation must pass away before the community will cease to deplore the loss of his valuable services, his genial companionship, and his kindly sympathy for those in affliction and distress. (Keene paper.)"

Edward E. Sturtevant, a great-grandson of Capt. Kilburn, had the honor of being the first in N. H. to volunteer for service in the war of the rebellion. He was commissioned as Captain of Co. I in the First N. H. Regiment. In 1862, he was commissioned as Major in the Fifth Regiment and was killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.

Elijah Gunn came here from Winchester in 1839. In 1852, he took away the old house.

Elijah Green

(page 188.) and built the one in which he still lives with his son. Both himself and wife have been for a long lifetime earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Church.

Elisha W. Gunn lives with his father on this place, and manages the farm, which is one of the best in town, with great success. He has a large orchard, and raises much excellent fruit. One tree set there about 1764, still survives and yields a good amount of apples. He and his family are among the most constant attendants and liberal supporters of the Methodist Church in Keene.

E. Nelson Gunn resided here with his brother for about eight years. He then removed to Illinois where he remained five years. In 1870, he returned to Keene.

Both Mr. Kilburn and Mr. Gunn sometimes had tenants in part of the house.

Antipas Maynard, Jr., lived here from 1822 to 1826, when he removed to Keene, and soon after to Ashburnham, Mass., where he has "held many important offices, and is very prominent in the work of the Methodist Church."

Hiram Heflon came here from Vt. in 1835. He lived here about two years, and went from place to place in town till 1846, when he removed to Chesterfield. He afterwards went West.

Other residents:—George W. Willis now of Keene, Daniel Fairbanks, Jr., a mechanic; and Addison Bancroft.

4. This is one half of the original Kilburn house, which Mr. Gunn moved from number 3, and made into a sugar house. The frame of huge oak timbers can here be seen in its original form, showing the shape of the rooms, and the immense size of the chimney.

5. BENAJAH TAYLOR settled on this place about 1763, and built a log house. He was probably from Hebron, Conn., and left town in 1768. The place is still called "the Taylor lot," and is not known to have been inhabited since his removal.

6. This place is a few rods over the line, in Surry. Who first settled it, is not now known. James McCurdy bought it in 1787. In 1806, William Thompson lived there, and the house had the name of being haunted. It was, however, discovered to be only through the tricks of some of his roguish boys. It has long been known as the Austin place, from Thomas Austin who lived there many years.

7. PETER RICE built a house on this spot, about 1800. He was the son of Peter and Phebe Rice of Keene and lived in various places in the south part of the town. He was a Methodist and has become somewhat noted in Gilsun traditions by the cow story. (Page 99.)

8. This spot is a few rods west of the ancient burying place marked in the picture by a white flag in the background. Ebenezer Dewey of Hebron, Conn., bought this lot of Thomas Sumner in December, 1764. EBENEZER DEWEY, JR., came up and settled here the next Spring. The father did not come before 1767. It was at this house the Congregational Church was organized in 1772. (Page 100.) Mr. Dewey is supposed to have been Deacon of the church in Hebron, Conn., as he is called Deacon before the organization of the Gilsun church. He was Selectman in 1773, and Delegate to the Vermont Assembly at Windsor, Vt., and Charlestown, in 1781. Ebenezer Dewey, Jr., was also a prominent citizen, and served the town as Selectman in 1776-7. In May, 1786, he sold to Daniel Newcomb, Esq., of Keene, for £300, and removed to Royalton, Vt., and afterwards to Genesee Co., N. Y.

The Dewey family was one of more refinement and culture than was usual in those times and their removal was a great loss to the town. They were workers in wooden ware:—"turned wooden dishes, bowls, plates, bedsteads, and such."

Charles Rice who was a Revolutionary pensioner from Surry, (page 36,) lived here a few years after the Deweys left. The house was burned and Mr. Rice being helpless, was rescued with great difficulty.

Timothy Dewey was probably a son of Dea. Dewey, and married Jemima Griswold. He settled west of Sullivan Center in 1778. He signed the petition for the incorporation of Sullivan, and was Town Clerk of Gilsun in 1787. He sold his place to Abel Allen of Lancaster, Mass., the same year, and probably followed his relatives to Vermont.

9. MRS. JEAN BOND built a small house here about 1825, where she lived alone for more than twenty years. She was a very energetic, resolute woman. When she came to this house, young people thought to frighten her, but never succeeded.

10. SAMUEL CRANDALL lived here, and was probably the first settler. Afterwards Mrs. Eunice Hall, widow of Benjamin of Keene, resided here for some years.

11. DAVID SUMNER built this house about 1846. He removed to Keene in 1855, and afterwards to Manchester. He was a tall man of powerful voice, and fond of military service, in which he had been appointed Captain. While at work on his farm, he could sometimes be heard for a mile or more, rehearsing military orders.

Other residents:— William Bates, William Eastman, George W. Willis, and Theodore Boileau. After the death of Capt. Benjamin Ware, his widow came here to live. In 1863, she married Stephen C. Sweetzer, who remained here about two years. She now resides in Surry.

Benjamin H. Britton came here from Marlboro', Mass., in 1869. He served during the last ten months of the War of the Rebellion, in the 2d Mass. Regiment of Heavy Artillery, Co. C. Was in the battles of Kingston and Greensboro', remaining at the latter place on provost duty till July, 1865.

12. This was part of the original Pease place, and was given by Pelatiah Pease to his son Pelatiah, who built a barn in the orchard south of the road but never resided here. About 1812, he removed to Canada.

JOHN SUMNER first settled here about 1824, in a plastered house. His father lived here with him for some years. After his father's death, he removed to Keene in 1839.

Ephraim P. Everdon came here from Winchester in 1839. In 1852, he went back to Winchester for about five years, when he returned. In 1865, he removed to the Capt. Chapin place in Alstead, (142,) where he died. He was a mechanic, and introduced to this town the process of slicing shingles from blocks softened by steam. (Page 147.)

Cyrus W. Stanley was here in 1855. In 1856, he removed to Swanzy, where he still resides. He served three years as Corporal in the 6th N. H. Reg't, Co. F, — was severely wounded July 24, 1864, and draws a full invalid pension. He is a member of the Baptist Church in Swanzy.

Calvin Wright, formerly of Keene, bought this place and has resided here since 1867.

Other residents:— Daniel Allen, William Bates and Francis C. Howe.

388. School House. (Page 130.)

13. NABBY ANN SMITH bought the old School House in 1849, and set it on this spot. She lived here about two years and then went West, where she died. She was well known in all this vicinity as an experienced nurse. After she went away, E. P. Everdon moved her house which is now the front part of Calvin Wright's dwelling.

14. EBENEZER BILL bought this place of his father, Samuel Bill of Hebron, Conn., in February, 1772, and probably settled here that year. He is said to have been "a very neat farmer." He was Major in the militia, and served the town nine years as Selectman. He was one of the earliest opposers of the support of preaching by town tax. (Pages 52, 99.) He and his wife belonged to the Congregational Church, but having adopted "Restorationist" views, removed their membership to the church in Surry, which was less strict in doctrine. His wife, Rachel Root, was a woman of clear intellect and marked ability. She was very fond of argument, especially on religious subjects, expressing her ideas with great force and clearness. Few ministers could sustain an argument with her on Scriptural doctrines. Probably no woman has ever exerted so great an influence in Gilsum, as she, and the impress of her religious views has not yet passed away.

Samuel Maynard

15. EBENEZER BILL, only son of the preceding, succeeded to his father's homestead, and built the house now standing south of the road, in 1802. He was a careful, prudent man, diligent in business, and quiet in his tastes. He served as Captain in the militia.

Samuel Woodward, Jr., came from Westmoreland about 1826, and "kept store" in a room of Dudley Smith's tavern for a year. He afterwards lived with his father-in-law on this place from 1834 to 1852, when he removed to Keene, where he died in 1876.

In early life he acquired a good academic education, which with many natural qualifications enabled him to attain a high position as a teacher — a calling which he loved and followed many years.

He was eminently a man of progress. As a farmer he was enterprising and successful. He was specially interested in education, and it is largely due to his influence that this School District has won and maintained the reputation of having the "banner school" in Gilsun.

Few men have more decided opinions or are more earnest in their maintenance than he. He was a man of great zeal and energy in all matters of reform, — an ardent leader in Anti-Slavery and Temperance, "at a time when it required firmness and resolution to take a decided stand in favor of these movements." When he went to Keene, he took charge of a paper called the "American News," in which he boldly advocated the doctrines of free soil and liquor prohibition, in the face of a bitter opposition little realized at the present time. In 1855 this paper was merged in the "Sentinel" of which Mr. Woodward continued editor four years.

His ability and character were such that he necessarily occupied a conspicuous place in any society, where he happened to be. He served this town three years as Superintending School Committee, and six years as Selectman. In Keene he served as Selectman several times before the adoption of the City charter, and afterwards as Assessor in Ward 3. He was elected to the Legislature in 1872 and again in 1873. He was also President of the Keene Five Cent Savings Bank.

"His interest in religion, temperance, education, and the general welfare of the community, never flagged, and to the end of his days, he was a public-spirited, liberal, useful citizen. Beneath a rough exterior he concealed a heart as warm, tender, and sympathizing as a woman's, and no person in distress ever vainly applied to him for aid."

He became a member of the Baptist Church in early life, and was one of the most liberal contributors towards building the Baptist Meeting House in Keene. His widow still resides in Keene, and is a member of the First Congregational Church.

Warren Foster from Hillsboro' came here in 1854 and carried on the farm five years. In 1859 he removed to Sullivan, and afterwards to Keene.

David Wood formerly of Keene bought this place in 1859 and resided here fifteen years. His family is now living in the house of Willard Bill at the lower village.

Other tenants: — David Sumner; Joseph Paquin, known as Joe Palmer; Wm. A. Wilder; Abram C. Guyatt; and Alfred Bernard.

16. EDMUND WILCOX built here in 1816. His widow continued here nearly forty years after his death, when she removed to Swanzey. In 1870, Moses Fish bought the house and removed it to his place for a shop.

Other residents: — Hiram Jefflon; Edward R. Winchester; Wm. W. Powers; Wm. Eastman; John H. Sparhawk from Walpole, now at West Swanzey; and Charles Titraut.

17. OBADIAH WILCOX bought this place in October, 1765, and is called in the deed "of Guilford, Conn." He built a log house on this spot 1765-6. He was a tanner by trade, and probably an employe of the Kilburns and Fords in Connecticut. (Page 140.)

He was called "an odd man," — was a great hunter, and very fond of telling stories, acting them out, to the amusement of the young people. He owned considerable land, settling his oldest son on a farm near by, and leaving the homestead to his second son, Eleazer.

18. Mr. Wilcox built a house on this spot in 1772, and it was inhabited with but little alteration for 105 years, when it was unroofed by a tornado. (Page 154.)

ELEAZER WILCOX and his sister Lydia came from Connecticut with their father. After building the log house and getting them somewhat settled, their father returned home, leaving them to clear the farm and carry it on for a year, as best they could. During this time Eleazer broke his leg, and his sister brought him to the house, and laid him on the bed, though he was a full-grown man of six feet in height. The rest of the family came the next year. Like his father, he was a man of marked peculiarities, and often delighted children by rehearsing his great bear fight. (Page 156.) He was an active supporter of religion though he never joined the church on account of the opposition of one of his neighbors. He had unusual self-control. At one time a neighbor getting angry struck him on the side of his face. Mr. Wilcox remembering the Scriptural injunction, turned to him the other cheek. The man instantly apologized, saying, "I was wrong."

Mrs. Wilcox was a devoted and intelligent Christian, exerting a powerful influence over her family. Her youngest son Lunnud (page 178,) ascribed his conversion to his mother's "godly life."

Eleazer Wilcox, Jr., received this place at his father's death in 1823. He was always ready to do his part in sustaining the Gospel, and whatever expenditures were needed. When the new Meeting House was built he took hold heartily, although it was removed a mile and a half further from his residence. Living at a greater distance than any other member, he was yet very constant at meeting, especially in stormy weather. In the worst storms, when others failed, he was sure to be out. In 1842, he built the house now occupied by Lansing Wilder, to which he soon after removed with his family. He died very suddenly, as he sat in his chair.

Joseph Addison Wilder bought this place of Eleazer Wilcox, and removed here from Sullivan in the year 1842. He was an industrious, upright man — a thrifty farmer, a good neighbor, and respected as a citizen. He died at the age of 46, leaving the homestead to his oldest son.

19. WILLIAM ADDISON WILDER built the house on this spot in 1878, the tornado of 1877 having nearly demolished the old house. This is one of the most productive farms in town, and the new road of 1880 (page 58.) will add largely to its value.

20. ELEAZER WILCOX built here in 1842. After his death, the place was occupied by his oldest son, Moses Field Wilcox, for nine years. In 1865, Lansing William Wilder bought the place, where he still resides. The place suffered much from the tornado. (Page 154.)

Other residents: — Robert Alexander a Frenchman from Burlington, Vt.; Charles Titraut; William Wilbur; William Eastman; and Sumner Wellington now of Keene.

21. LEWIS BRIDGE formerly of Keene came to Gilsum in 1860, and lived on the Capt. Ware place (22,) fifteen years. He built the house on this spot in 1875. His widow still resides here with her sons Ora and John.

Reuben H. Newcomb, son-in-law of Mr. Bridge, enlisted from Keene, Feb. 1864, in 1st Reg't of N. H. Cavalry, Troop K. He was taken prisoner at Cedar Creek, Va., Nov. 13, 1864, and was confined in Libby and Salisbury prisons for about five months. His exposure and suffering while in prison were the cause of his death in 1875.

22. OBADIAH WILCOX, JR., built a house on this spot about 1773, and died here 1776. After his death, his widow married Thomas Redding, who lived here till her death in 1791. The next year, he married Pamela Rice of Keene, to which place he removed. He was the son of Thomas and Lucy Redding of Surry, and his father married in his old age the widow Phebe Rice, mother of Pamela. There is considerable confusion about the name Thomas Redding, but I think the above is correct.

Benjamin Ware having married Mrs. Redding's daughter Huldah Wilcox, who had inherited the place from her father, came here, in 1794, and remained till his death in 1858. He had 17 children, 13 of whom lived to adult age. He was a tall man, of strong voice, and served several years as Captain in the militia.

Three sons-in-law of Capt. Ware lived here with him at different times, — John C. Kendrick, Davis H. Carpenter, and Hiram Baldwin. Zenas D. Metcalf was here in 1851.

Obadiah Ware, son of Benjamin, removed in 1821 to a farm near St. Louis, Mo. After two years he settled with his brother Benjamin, in Butler, Montgomery Co., Ill., taking up a tract of U. S. land now called Ware's Grove, and was "one of the earliest pioneers of civilization" in that County.

Kennett and Leonard W. Wynn

1880-1881

Mr. Ware was a leading and influential member of the Lutheran Church for many years, and gave liberally of his means for the dissemination of gospel truths and for the upbuilding of houses dedicated to worship. He was ever active and generous in his assistance to every project looking to the advancement of educational facilities.

He was one of the substantial, solid men of Montgomery County and one who did as much in a humble and unpretentious way to advance its material interests as any man within its borders.

23. JAMES SAWYER built a log house on this spot and had several children born here. He removed to Keene before 1783. It is not known that any other family lived here.

24. DAVID ADAMS built here about 1785, and remained seventeen years, when he went to live with his father. After his father's death he lived with his son-in-law, Calvin May. He was a soldier in the Revolution. (Page 37.) He served the town as Moderator, and was Selectman three years.

Thomas Powell came from Sullivan about 1801, and lived in various places, till he settled here about 1815. In 1825, he removed to Mount Tabor, Vt., where he died leaving a large family.

Abiah Ellis lived here several years, and was the last occupant of the house. She was somewhat insane and kept several dozen cats. She was very deaf, and at one time, when sitting in her door, knitting, she dropped asleep. When she awoke, she found a large snake coiled up on her shoulder.

Other residents:— James Kingsbury, Samuel Crandall, David Thompson, Obadiah Root, John Bingham, Jr., and Antipas Maynard.

25. JOHN CHAPMAN built a log house here probably about 1767. His father-in-law, John Dimmock, deeded him the place "for love and good-will" in 1770.

John Griggs of Keene bought the place in 1777. He was at that time Captain in Col. Scammel's Regiment, but resigned "on account of sickness." Capt. Griggs lived here five or six years and returned to Keene. He was one of the Selectmen in 1779. (Page 37.) The name "Capt. John Grigg" appears on a petition from sundry inhabitants of Fairfield Co., Conn., for a grant of land at "Little Cowass" in 1763.

26. SOLOMON WOODS removed from Woburn, Mass., to Sullivan, and came to Gilsum about 1805. He was a blacksmith, and first settled where Mason Guillow lives. About 1810, he removed to the Pease place and soon after built on this spot east of the road. In 1817 he removed to Keene.

James Phillips came here from Keene and remained about three years. He served as Captain in the Keene militia.

Charles Sumner bought the place in 1820, and remained about ten years. His son-in-law, Hezekiah Webster, continued to occupy the place for twenty-five years, and the widow Webster remained till 1865, when she removed to Keene.

Other residents:— Abraham Stiles who removed to Keene; Calvin Wright; a Frenchman named Lapierre; and Mrs. Thomas Wheelock.

27. PELATIAH PEASE came from Hebron, Conn., and settled here in 1764. He was prominent among the first settlers of the town, and served as Selectman three years.

Jonathan Pease, son of the preceding, lived here till 1808, when he bought the mills at the Stone Bridge, and removed to the house now occupied by John J. Isham. In April, 1828, he sold out to Aaron Day, and died the next January at the house of John Livermore.

He was much respected and trusted, as an upright, conscientious man. He was Selectman for ten years, and represented Gilsum and Surry in the State Legislature in 1817. He was one of the pillars of the Congregational Church in its days of weakness, and in 1814 was chosen Deacon. In many respects he supplied the place of a pastor, being gifted in prayer and conference meetings, and a judicious counselor to religious inquirers. His sudden death at the age of fifty-four was a sad bereavement to the church, causing them great discouragement.

Oliver Pease, son of Dea. Jonathan, devoted himself to Music. He was an ingenious man, and invented a new system of musical notation said to be a great improvement on the old methods.

28. OSMAN MCCOY built here in 1837, where he resided till about 1850, when he went to the village for two years. He then lived on the Crocker place till 1869, when he bought the Taylor house, now occupied by his widow, and where he died instantly of heart disease, in October, 1875. He was a carpenter by trade, was a member of the Methodist Church, and during his last years an active and faithful member of the Sons of Temperance.

In 1864, Larkin Welch came to Gilsum from Sullivan, and resided with his father-in-law, Lewis Bridge, for a year and a half, and then went to the Dea. Mark place, (40,) where he remained two years and a half. In the Fall of 1868, he came to this place where he still resides.

Other residents:—Elder Charles E. Baker; Alonzo B. Cook; Harvey B. Mansfield who died here in 1857; and James Chapman for about ten years.

29. JONATHAN ADAMS from Hebron, Conn., came here soon after the Kilburns. He built the house now standing, before the Revolution. He was a great singer, and is remembered as having "lined out the hymn" at communion seasons. He served the town both as Moderator and Selectman, and was the Representative from Gilsum and Packersfield in 1781-2. His son David lived here about eight years.

Stephen Mansfield removed from Stoddard to Charlestown, and after a few years came to Gilsum. He lived on the Hurd place one season, and settled here in 1821. His father, William Mansfield, came to live with him. Mr. Mansfield was a carpenter by trade. His son George lived here with him for some years. In 1870, they removed to the Crocker place.

Edward H. Bates, a tin-peddler, resided with the Mansfields a year or two about 1843.

30. JUSTUS HURD came to Gilsum from East Haddam, Conn., and settled on this spot, in 1769. He resided here till his death in 1804. He and his wife were among the original members of the Congregational Church, and he was its first Clerk. He was one of the most valuable and respected citizens of the town, though somewhat noted for his violent temper. At one time before the settlement of the first minister, a black man came and offered himself to preach. He was sent to Mr. Hurd who was at work in the field. Whether thinking the proposal an insult to the people, or a sacrilege to the ministerial office, is not known, but in indignation at his presumption, he drove him out of the field with his cane. After Rev. Mr. Fish's death, David Thompson referred to this circumstance, and said he thought the church never would be prospered in their ministers on account of it. Mr. Hurd served the town as Selectman in 1781-2, and as Moderator in 1789 and 1793. Besides carrying on his farm, he was employed as a builder of "Stone Chimbleys." He had ten children, and the family was for many years among the most active and efficient in all public affairs. His descendants at the present time are very numerous.

Robert Lane Hurd lived here with his father, and remained till about 1814, when he removed to Chesterfield, and afterwards to the West. He was a man of great energy and marked executive ability. He was Captain in the militia for many years. (Page 42.) He served the town as Moderator three years, as Clerk nine years, as Selectman eight years, and represented Gilsum and Surry in the Legislature in 1809. The family tradition is that he served six months at the close of the Revolutionary War.

John Stevens came here from Alstead in 1818, and after a year or two removed to Surry.

Stephen Mansfield bought the place about 1820, and the next year swapped farms with his brother-in-law, David Adams, who removed here with his son-in-law Calvin May. In 1824 they went to the farm which is still known as the May place. (148.)

Robert L. Hard

About 1825, Robert Austin came here from Surry, and remained till 1835, when he removed to Massachusetts. In 1850, he came back to Gilsun, married the widow Ruthy Isham, and died at her home two years after. Since Mr. Austin's removal, the place has not been tenanted.

34. This was the lot set apart for the first settled minister. The old house was built in 1794 for REV. ELISHA FISH. (Page 105.) The carpenter employed was Daniel Day of Keene.

Elisha S. Fish, oldest son of the first minister, spent his life here. Perhaps no native of Gilsun had greater natural ability in a literary direction than he. He was first cousin to the celebrated William C. Bryant, and had poetical gifts of no mean order. (Appendix H.)

In 1814-5, he wrote a Poem entitled "The Retrospect," extending to some 2,500 lines. Its tone and spirit strongly resemble Cowper, and many passages are not inferior to his. He published many short poems in the papers, particularly the "Boston Recorder."

He was naturally a scholar and would have been a man of mark in either of the learned professions. But owing to his father's early death, he was obliged to give up seeking a liberal education. His life was spent in farming, and he was well known for his success in horticulture.

Positive in his own convictions, he was intolerant of the slightest laxity in life or doctrine. Hence those who knew him little were apt to think him austere and conceited. But to his intimate acquaintances he was known to be genial and large-hearted, quick in sympathy, and humble in his estimate of himself. With no sympathy for fanaticism, he practiced Total Abstinence, and wrote with strong feeling against Slavery, long before Teetotalers or Abolitionists had been heard of. Remarkable for simple-hearted truthfulness, even his enemies never doubted his integrity. Few men practice so much self-denial for the sake of the gospel. Even when a young man, the Church seemed to be dearer to him than all other interests. As has been said of another, "He was a pillar of the church many years before he became a member." His piety was of a reflective, quiet type, mingled with great self-distrust. His last days were marked with patience and resignation, and his end was one of peaceful rest.

Moses Fish, brother of the preceding, built a house adjoining the old parsonage, mostly with his own hands. He began it in 1848, and was several years in the work. He was a man of very decided, firm principles, a very genial friend, and highly esteemed by every one who knew him well. He was Superintendent of the Sabbath School for several years. He died instantly of heart disease, at the age of 68, and the place has not since been inhabited.

35. JESSE JOHNSON, a shoemaker, built a log house on this spot, about 1791, and after six years removed to number 57 below Edouard Loisele's. In 1801-2 he went to Vermont, where his son Jesse is said to be a merchant.

Claudius D. Hayward settled here in 1806. After two years he went to Concord, Vt., and about 1815 removed to Wrentham, Mass., and engaged in woolen manufacture. In later years he went to Newton, Mass. He was a man of devout Christian character, and for many years Deacon in the Congregational Church at Wrentham.

John Borden came to Gilsun about 1794, and lived awhile at the lower village, and on the place by the Loveland mill. (105.) In 1803 he came to this place, where he resided several years, and then removed to Pennsylvania. He was a blacksmith and made nails in a shop beside a large rock, near 391.

Other residents: — Samuel Shipman, Samuel Foster, Chester Coombs, and Anson Russell.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER ONE.

31. HENRY WHITE came from Lebanon, Conn., and built a log house here in 1769. In 1787, he sold to Joseph Wilson of Keene and removed to Vermont.

32. JOEL WILSON of Keene bought this farm of his father in 1790, and built a house on this spot, where he resided over thirty years.

Oliver Wilson, son of Joel, remained here after his father's death, till 1837, when he removed to New York.

Other residents: — Abram C. Wyman, John C. Kendrick, William Blanchard, David Holman, Salmon Winchester of Westmoreland, James Rawson, and George Mansfield.

33. GERSHOM CROCKER of East Haddam, Conn., bought the 5th Lot in the 3d Range of Jonathan Smith, in September, 1768. He probably came to Gilsum the next Spring and built a log house near this spot. One afternoon in April, 1791, he had engaged to work for his neighbor, Samuel Bill. As he was always "a prompt man," when he failed to come at the time, Mr. Bill went over to see about it. He was not at the house, having gone with his team to the woods, and had not got back. Mr. Bill started for the woods and found him dead in the road not far west of his house, where he had fallen apparently in a fit.

Truman Miller came here about 1810, remained about fifteen years, and returned to Marlow.

Reuben Brown bought the place in 1817 and twenty years after built the present house. In 1839, he went West, and afterwards returned to Westmoreland.

Luna Foster came here from Westmoreland in 1839. He was a member of the Congregational Church, and died here at the age of 83.

E. R. Winchester, son-in-law of Mr. Foster, came to live with him in 1842. After six years he returned to Westmoreland.

Osman McCoy lived here several years, and his son-in-law, Thomas D. Wheelock. Mr. Wheelock served in an Ohio regiment, was taken prisoner, and died from the barbarous cruelties of Andersonville.

George Mansfield settled here in 1870. His son, William S. Mansfield, lives with him.

Other residents: — Roger Dart, John Ellis, and Martin L. Goddard.

36. This house was built by GEORGE GREENWOOD, a Methodist preacher, for the accommodation of wood-choppers. Tenants: — Horace H. Nash, A. P. Wright, John R. Willard.

356. Possible Meeting House Spot. (Page 101.) 358. Millstones quarried here.

37. ISRAEL LOVELAND, who had previously removed from Glastonbury, Conn., to Keene, bought the 5th Lot in the 5th Range for £15, in January, 1778. He settled on this spot, probably the Spring following, and remained till 1787, when he sold the place to John McCurdy of Surry for £130. He afterward lived with his son Aaron.

Chester Coombs lived here a short time, and possibly some others.

38. This spot is on the same Lot as the preceding. A log house stood here, and was occupied for a time by Peter Rice. It is not known by whom or when it was built.

39. ISRAEL LOVELAND, JR., bought the east half of the 5th Lot, 4th Range, for £50, in 1782. He built a house on this spot about 1784, and lived here nine years, when he sold to John Mark, who gave the place to his son William.

40. WILLIAM MARK moved the house from 39 to this spot about 1799. It is the south half of the house still standing. In 1821-2, he built the north half, and continued to live here till 1858, when he removed to the village. He held the office of Deacon in the Congregational Church over forty years, and was always faithful to his trust. He served the town five years as Selectman.

David Bill

Hezro Hubbard lived here with his father-in-law, from 1829 till his death in 1831.

Ellsworth Hubbard, brother of the preceding, married his widow in 1835. They came to this place from Sullivan in 1845, remained five years, and then returned to Sullivan. After his death in 1859, his widow returned to Gilsun, and resides in the village with her younger sister.

Other residents : — Luther Richardson, Ariel Carpenter, John R. Willard, and John Dow. In 1875, this house was taken by the town for a pest-house, and the family of A. C. F. Laurent remained here, while several of them had the small-pox, one of whom died.

41. JOHN ROWE of Hebron, Conn., built a log house here about 1771. He served in the Revolution, (page 36,) and had a single-handed fight with a Hessian whom he killed, and whose coat he wore home for a trophy. His son James lived in Sullivan, owning the land on which the Meeting House stands.

42. JOHN ROWE, JR., built a house here, and his father lived with him for some years.

43. Original Meeting House. (Page 101.)

44. SHUBAEL HURD, oldest son of Justus, bought this place of John Dimmock in June, 1772. He had already been married about three years, his oldest child having been born in Connecticut, and probably put up a log house that year. In 1777, he had built a frame for a house on this spot, and enclosed it with boards running up and down. He then removed to Lempster, where he became a leading citizen for nearly fifty years. The family tradition is, that he served for a time in the Revolution. They had thirteen children, one of whom, Mrs. Candace Beckwith, is still living in Lempster at the age of 98.

Samuel Bill came from Hebron, Conn., 1775-6, and lived for a time with his son Ebenezer. (Page 190.) Sept. 27, 1777, he bought this place, half of the 6th Lot, 3d Range, for £140.

45. SAMUEL BILL, JR., inherited this place, and in 1800 built the south part of the house now standing. In 1802 and 1803 he kept tavern here. He was a "peculiar man," fond of inventing odd words and expressions, some of which are still remembered. He was often called Lieut. Bill, having held that office in the militia. He served the town as Selectman for ten years.

David Bill, son of the preceding, inherited the old homestead. In 1821, he built on the north half of the house. He has served the town three years as Representative, eight years as Selectman, and has been Justice of the Peace. He volunteered as a soldier in the war of 1812, served sixty days at Portsmouth, and has been a United States pensioner since 1871. He was commissioned as Captain in the militia, and is still living on the old place at the age of 84.

Daniel W. Bill, his second son, lives on the same place. He is one of the largest land-owners in this vicinity, a prosperous and intelligent farmer. Serving in the militia, he rose from Captain through the successive offices to that of Brigadier-General. He has served the town six years as Moderator, seven years as Superintending School Committee, four years in the Legislature, and as Selectman eighteen years, which is the longest term upon our records. He was also Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1877 and is Justice of the Peace.

This farm takes precedence of all others in Gilsun for permanency of occupation, having been in the same family for over a century.

The Bill family in all its branches has been one of the most extended and influential in the town, though not so prolific as the Hurds.

Tenants in Mr. Bill's chambers : — Edward O. Corey from Columbia, and Joseph W. Caldwell.

46. A house was built on this spot about 1825, for the widow of Samuel Bill, 3d. Four years after, she married Timothy Wyman, a shoemaker by trade, who lived here about twenty years. Abram Wilkins and Jonathan Mansfield also lived here for a time.

383. This was built for a barn in 1846. In 1865, it was made into a house, and Mrs. Wilkins lived here a few years. Merrill E. Flagg also resided here in 1872-3. Luther A. Wilkins lived here and at other places and now resides at Westminster, Vt.

47. In 1807, John Mark employed Stephen White to build the house now standing on this spot, for his son JAMES M. MARK, who removed to the Plumley place (183.) about 1816. He was Deacon in the Christian Church, and died while on a visit to Pepperell, Mass., in 1825.

Antipas Maynard was here in 1816-7 and cleared the lot near Sullivan line known as the Maynard lot, near where the millstones for the mill by the Stone Bridge were got out. (358.) James McCurdy from Surry lived here in 1818. Charles Cobb was a Methodist preacher who came here from Canada, and lived also at the Loisselle place.

Luther Richardson from Stoddard lived here in 1834, and the next year with Dea. William Mark. He now resides in Sullivan, and had five sons in the war of the rebellion.

David Luther Richardson enlisted from Keene and served three years in the 14th Reg't Co. A. Lyman Edward Richardson enlisted from Concord in the 6th Reg't Co. K,—was wounded at Antietam, and discharged on account of wounds the December following.

Edwin Richardson enlisted from Nelson in the 2^d Reg't in 1861. After serving three years he re-enlisted and was appointed Sergeant Major. He was afterwards promoted to First Lieutenant of Co. D, and was honorably discharged May 11, 1865. This Reg't was in a large number of the most noted battles of the war.

Frank Richardson enlisted from Stoddard in 1861, and served three years in the 6th Reg't Co. K,—re-enlisted and served till the close of the war. This Reg't was also in many of the severest battles of the war. James Harvey Richardson served in the 1st N. H. Cavalry.

In 1851 James M. Mark, Jr., bought the place and lived here nine years, when he removed to Peterboro' and afterwards to Keene.

Other residents :—Joshua D. Crane, Linus N. Beckwith, Hiram Hefflon. — Stamford, Levi Gates, Jonathan Wilbur, Henry Kingsbury, Jonathan Mansfield, and Luther A. Wilkins.

49. JOHN MARK came from Antrim Co., Ireland, in 1772, and built a log house here in 1773.

48. A few years after, Mr. Mark built on this spot. He was a weaver by trade, and knew nothing about farming. His next neighbor, Mr. Rowe, complained of his falling trees on to his land. Mr. Mark excused himself by saying he "chopped all around a tree, and let it fall which way it had a willing mind." When he first settled here, old Mr. Adams told him "nothing but blue-jays and the devil could live on such a farm." He, however, accumulated a large property for those times, settling his children on farms in different parts of the town. He gave each of his sons a farm, a yoke of oxen, a horse, and the necessary outfit to join "the troopers."

He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church in the old country. They were good examples of the sturdy energy of the "Scotch-Irish" emigrants. Their youngest daughter, Mrs. Hathhorn, now 96 years of age, relates many circumstances of her father's life.

In the Revolutionary war he hired a substitute by the name of Comstock from that part of the town afterwards Sullivan. (Page 38.) This Comstock boasted that no bullet could ever kill him, but he was shot in his first battle. Mr. Mark then hired another substitute, supposing he was obliged to do so.

He kept tavern here for many years. (Page 144.) He had also a country store, probably the first in Gilsum. (Page 143.) He was in the habit of going to Boston with a span of horses, with which he brought his goods to Charlestown, where his sons would take the loading and bring it to Gilsum with two yoke of oxen. One trip took about a fortnight. There was great fear of small-pox in those days, and he was not allowed to leave Boston, till he had been thoroughly smoked in a house provided for that purpose. At one time he went to New York and sold a horse, taking his pay all in ribbons. "The beautifullest ribbons you ever saw, and each of us girls had a sash."

Francis Hathhorn, his son-in-law, came to live with him in 1824. He was a blacksmith by trade, and had carried on the business in Surry for some years before his marriage. His widow removed to the village in 1852.

50. SAMUEL BILL, 3D, built on this spot about 1816, and remained here till his death in 1824. Jesse Temple came to Gilsnm from Marlboro' about 1823, and settled here soon after. He lived here about twenty years, and the place has since been vacant.

51. Old Meeting House. (Page 101.) 52. Original School House. (Page 130.)

SAMUEL CHURCH of East Haddam, Conn., bought one share in "Boyle" in 1768. He probably settled on the 7th Lot 4th Range the next year. Just where his house stood is uncertain, but probably a little north of the Loiselles place. He was Selectman two years.

The Inventory of his property taken Ap. 3, 1777, by Justus Hurd and Stephen Bond, amounts to £237, 16s. 4d. The Real Estate was appraised as follows:—

S. W. Lot of Highway taking House and Barn	£85
S. E. Lot as Highway goeth	£35
Vessel Rock Lot	£36
N. E. Lot	£10
100 Acres by Boynton's	£5

Among the Personal Property we find two Sermon Books valued at £2. It would be interesting to know just what these books were that were appraised so high. His son Ebenezer inherited this place of his father, and soon after removed to Vermont.

53. DANIEL WRIGHT came to this place from Hebron, Conn., about 1769. He is called in our records "Lev't Wright," and kept tavern here for many years. (Page 144.) He was a blacksmith by trade, and removed to Westport, N. Y., about 1796.

He afterwards became "a General in the N. Y. State Militia, was in command of the American land forces at the battle of Plattsburg, and won an enviable reputation as an officer." His brother, Benoni Wright, was a well-known music teacher in this and the neighboring towns.

Fortunatus Eager from Sullivan followed Gen. Wright, and kept "a large tavern stand" here for a few years.

Ziba Ware bought the place in 1800, and carried on blacksmithing and kept tavern here for about three years.

Silas Woods came here about 1806, and remained eight or nine years. He was also a blacksmith. He was brother of the Rev. John Woods of Newport, and was a member of a Baptist Church.

David Smith came to this place from Gardner, Mass., in 1815. After his accidental death (page 151,) his widow married Berzeleel Mack who died here in 1829. She then married Laban Gates from Nelson. She continued to reside here after his death, with her son Lewis Smith, till about 1850, when they removed to Sullivan.

Martin L. Goddard from Rindge lived here several years, and built the present house in 1852. About 1856, he returned to Rindge, where he has been Selectman eight years. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church there.

George W. Bancroft, also from Rindge, lived here about ten years, and removed to New York. In 1871, Edouard Loiselles from Canada bought the place, which he still occupies.

Other residents:—Levi Hardy, a blacksmith from Acworth; Theophilus Eveleth, a blacksmith; Charles Cobb; Waldo May; and Walker Gassett.

54. Second School House. (Page 130.)

55. SAMUEL BILL, 3D, settled here about 1810, and remained five or six years.

Jonathan Webster lived here a few years, and afterwards went West.

True Webster, Jr., came here about 1819. He afterwards lived on the Elijah Ware place, also where Henry Grant now lives, and died on the Horton place. He was Captain in the militia, and served the town as Selectman.

John Grimes came here from Roxbury about 1829. John Grimes, Jr., bought the place in 1831, but soon after removed to Wilmington, Vt.

Other residents: — Vimis Pierce, Daniel Mausfield, Otis Bill, Jeremiah L. Morse from Westmoreland, Hiram Hefflon, and Nahum T. Raymond.

75. ABRAM C. WYMAN built "the plastered house" here in 1825. Lemuel Bingham bought the place in 1833, and lived here about seven years.

Walker Gassett lived on this place about five years. He came from Townsend, Mass., in 1834. He was a carpenter and built the "Boarding House" for Maj. Hosmer. He lived in many different places till about 1850, when he removed to Walpole. He died at Westmoreland, at the age of 80.

Other residents: — David Porter, Marvin Gates, and Harvey B. Miller.

76. School House. (Page 130.)

77. JONATHAN CHURCH built here about 1782. He died in 1826, and his son, Iddo Church, inherited the place. He removed to Acworth in 1841.

Oren Wyman came here from Vermont, and remained about four years. He was afterwards miller for A. D. Towne. David Porter was here one year after Mr. Wyman left. Samuel D. Bill lived here from 1853 till about 1860, when he removed to Marlow.

Temple Baker came here from Nelson in 1859. Ten years after, he died from a broken leg. Isaac Knight from Langdon married the widow Baker and has resided here since 1871.

78. Old Meeting House. (Page 101.)

79. JUSTUS HURD, JR., bought two acres here of David Fuller for £8, in 1794. He probably built here at that time, but in a year or two removed to Chesterfield. He seems to have returned to Gilsun, as he was taxed here in 1801-2.

James Grimes from Swanzeay, established a tavern here in 1804. After about three years he sold out and returned to Swanzeay.

Dudley Smith came from Dracut Mass., and was of Scotch-Irish descent. His earliest remembrance of his father was of his coming home from the army on a furlough, in time of the Revolution. In 1795, he came to Sullivan and bought of Berzeleel Mack the place now occupied by Alexander Brown. A log house was already built there. He cleared land by day, and worked at his trade of cabinet making till eleven at night, and from four in the morning till daylight. His son Daniel has some of the furniture he then manufactured. After one year he returned to Dracut and remained a year. In 1798, he bought of Charles Carpenter of Surry the west part of the 13th and 14th Lots in the 8th Range for $200. He lived at first in a log house built by Ananias Tubbs. (282.) Here his oldest son, Dr. Dudley Smith, was born. About 1800, he built a house on the hill further east. (283.) In 1806, he bought the Grimes tavern and removed a building from the hill west of George C. Hubbard's, (157,) with which he enlarged the original house. Here he kept tavern for many years. He afterwards bought the Fuller place, and in 1844 removed there. In 1849 he went to his house in the village, where he died at the age of 83. He served as Selectman four years.

He was noted for the amount of hard work he could perform, rarely finding a man who could keep even with him in the field. By industry and economy he accumulated a large property, and was one of the most liberal supporters of the Congregational Church. He was especially fond of a fine horse, and understood horses, as well as any man in town.

Residents: — Samuel Woodward, Hiram Hefflon, and Jacob D. Nash.

80. John Harris's Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 141)

81. JOHN HARRIS lived here in a small house made for him out of the old School House. He was a Revolutionary pensioner. He was a blacksmith of unusual skill. (Page 141.) He came to Gilsun about 1812, and probably worked for a few years at the village, as we find that he owned a shop between the roads just above Dr. Webster's, which he sold to Dudley Smith for $20 in 1817. Probably Mr. Smith built him this house about that time. He died here in 1837, and no one has since occupied the place.

82. In 1830, the Congregational Church and Society built a Parsonage on this spot. It was occupied by Rev. Ebenezer Chase, during his short pastorate of three years. Rev. S. S. Arnold also lived in it a short time. When the Meeting House was built at the village in 1834, this spot was no longer available for a Parsonage. Luther White, a blacksmith, occupied it for a time, and perhaps others.

83. Dudley Smith having bought the old Parsonage, moved it to this spot in 1841. Three years after, he built on an ell, and came here to reside. His son, Daniel Smith, came to live with his father in 1849. Like his father, he is specially skilled in the management of horses, and is one of the most active and wealthy citizens of Gilsum. He was Selectman in 1852, and having a taste for military affairs rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

84. DAVID FULLER from Bolton, Conn., received this lot from his uncle David Taylor, in 1780. He lived at that time with his father in Surry, and came over the mountain every day to work at clearing a place for a home. He built a plank house near this spot, and came here with his bride in January, 1782. He was a very energetic, wilful man, served as Captain in the militia, and from his peculiarities was sometimes called "King David." He removed to Jay, N. Y., about 1810.

David Fuller, Jr., started at 20 years of age "to seek his fortune, as he always expressed it." All his father could furnish him was a pair of "corduroy pants, two tow and linen shirts and a frock." "He borrowed a silver dollar of a Mr. Brigham,* . . . and started for Boston." For some reason which is not apparent, he went by way of Hillsboro' and "came to the Tavern kept by Gen. Benj. Pierce, then standing beyond the present residence of Scott Moore. He had become so footsore that he stopped to rest." Gen. Pierce had a blunt way of asking the business of every one who stopped at his door. "So he says to the stripling, 'Young man, what is your name, sir?' 'David Fuller.' 'Where did you come from, sir?' 'Surry, N. H.,' (where he had worked the season before). 'Where are you going, sir?' 'Started for Boston to seek my fortune, but can go no further, I am so footsore. And now, landlord, can you tell me of any place, that I can find work till Fall?' 'Yes, sir, young man, Mrs. Major Andrews, whose husband is crazy, wants to hire.' He immediately went there to work on the farm, earned enough for comfortable clothing, and then concluded to learn the trade of shoemaking of a neighbor, Mr. Gay. In the Fall he went home to see his folks. Before going back he called on Mr. Brigham, and said, 'I've brought you back the same silver dollar you lent me, and thank you for the loan.' Mr. Brigham said, 'Well, David, how much did you earn?' 'I earned these clothes, and a little besides, and have been saving so that I might pay you.' Mr. Brigham said, 'Here, David, is the dollar, keep it as long as you live, for a pocket piece, and always remember it was your energy and enterprise that you received the dollar for.' Two days before his death at the age of 87, he gave the dollar to his son, Mark W. Fuller, with the injunction to keep it as long as he lived. He, in turn, directed the dollar to be given to Wirt X. Fuller of Boston, Mass., to be kept and transmitted to his son with the same injunction."

After learning the shoemaker's trade he went to Framcestown in 1806, where he carried on the business not only of shoemaking but tanning and currying for seven years. He then established the same business at Hillsboro' Lower Village, and carried on the same till his death.

*Probably Stephen Brigham of Alstead.

He was a tall man of commanding appearance, and inherited much of his father's determination and energy. He was a great singer, and very fond in his old age of finding some former acquaintance with whom he could sing the ancient fugue tunes. He frequently visited Gilsun, and was interested in all that pertained to his native town.

David G. Fuller, son of the preceding, was a well-known business man in Concord for many years. "In early life he was in the hotel business at Utica and Rome, N. Y., Washington, D. C., Richmond, Va., and other places." In Concord he had an extensive business as a druggist, supplying country stores for a long distance. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity for over fifty years.

"Mark W. Fuller removed with his father, David Fuller, from Francestown to Hillsboro' Lower Village, when six years of age. After serving an apprenticeship with his father, he commenced business at Hillsboro' Upper Village, about 1829. By strict attention to business, perfect integrity of character, and honesty of purpose, he became beloved by his townsmen and honored by all his business acquaintances.

He was eminently a self-made man, receiving only the limited educational advantages of the common schools of that period, — several terms of which were passed with the late ex-president Pierce and his brother Henry D., — also with the Cheney brothers, the well-known expressmen.

His social qualities and his well-known hospitality ever made his house a favorite place of resort for many of his large circle of honored friends. Nor did he forget his townsmen, for in his last will, he made a liberal bequest to the town, which has been used to found a library, and which to perpetuate his name, has been ordered by the citizens to be known as the Fuller Library of Hillsboro'.

Politically, he was largely conservative, originally acting with the Whigs. But on the disruption of that party he acted with the Democrats, and in 1852-3 represented the town in the Legislature. He was honored by his fellow citizens by being elected a member of the Board of Selectmen for four successive years — three of which he served as chairman — and for many years was much engaged in matters pertaining to the Probate Courts in Hillsboro' County.

At the breaking out of the rebellion he ceased to act with the Democratic party, and having all his life been a hard-working man, his sympathies were very strong for the working man, and approving of the principles of the Labor Reform party, he allowed his name to be used as a candidate for Senator in that district for two years.

He married in 1831, Sarah Conn, who still resides at Hillsboro' Upper Village in the same house they had so long made their home. They had one daughter who lived until 19 years of age, and whose death was a very severe shock to both the father and mother.

His funeral was attended by a large number of the citizens of the town, the church being crowded, notwithstanding a pouring rain. After an eloquent address by the Rev. Mr. Brickett, of Hillsboro' Bridge, many tears were shed, as his dear old friends and neighbors, — many of whom came long distances — took their last look of him they loved so well."

Other residents, some of whom occupied the house with Capt. Fuller: — Turner White; James Kingsbury; Abram C. Wyman; Daniel Beverstock; Phineas Moor, a blacksmith; Phineas G. Miller; Dr. Jonathan E. Davis; Anasa Miller; Don Carlos Griswold; Samuel Frost, and his son-in-law — Lewis; Warren Farrington, a house painter; and Jesse Temple.

86. JOHN BINGHAM came from Montague, Mass., about 1777 and lived a year or two at number 94. In April, 1778, he bought the farm now owned by Mason Guillow, and lived there for fifteen years. In 1792 he bought this place and built a log house on this spot soon after.

He was a clothier by trade, and went from house to house to shear and dress cloth by hand. He built a shop on the brook, and afterwards had his machinery in Dea. Pease's mill. (Page 138.) His grandson, Chas. W. Bingham, has papers showing his appointment, during the old French

Mark W. Fuller

War, March 22, 1760, to the office of Corporal, and his promotion at Crown Point, Aug. 20, 1761, to First Sergeant and Clerk.

85. ZENAS BINGHAM lived with his father, and built a house on this spot in 1815, where he remained till his death in 1857. His son-in-law, Rufus Guillow, lived with him for a time. Henry Bingham, his youngest son, still occupies the place.

Belding D. Bingham, a grandson of John, removed from Sharon, Vt., to Nashua. He was the originator of the Nashua Watch Company, now the Waltham Watch Company, and one of the founders of Odd Fellowship in New Hampshire. He was unquestionably the most skilled and inventive mechanic in the Granite State. He was a modest gentleman, who never sought places of prominence, and yet, so kind, gentle, and loyal was he to all that is good and true, his memory will be long and tearfully kept green by friends and acquaintances.—Boston Journal.

87. Old Meeting House foundation. (Page 101.)

88. JAMES KINGSBURY came with his brother John from Needham, Mass., and settled in Sullivan, where they are found as "Inn keepers" in 1796. In 1801-2 he put up a frame for a house on this spot, and in 1802 swapped farms with Stephen White and went to 94 below the Fuller place. Soon after, he went to the place in Surry, number 123, and then to where his son William now lives. About 1821 he returned to Needham.

Stephen White came from Swanzy about 1793, and lived below the Fuller place, at 94. In 1802, he bought with David Fuller the "Mill Spot," (104,) where they built a grist-mill. The same year he removed to this place, where he died in 1860, aged 99 years and 5 months, the oldest person that ever died in Gilsun. He was a carpenter, and many of the older houses in Gilsun are of his workmanship. In 1825 he added the second story to his house.

He was a sprightly man, specially fond of company and good jokes. At one time he was at "Holbrook's tavern" in Surry, when a man who had a sick horse inquired what was good for it. Mr. White told him bitter-sweet was the best remedy. The man then asked where he could get it. Mr. White, who had been seeking for a ride home, told him he had more than a hundred pounds at his house, and if he would carry him home, he would give him all he wanted. So the man carried him six miles in a cold day to get it. When they arrived, Mr. White pointed to his wife, and said that was the bundle of bitterness he spoke of.

Alvin White still occupies this place which was left him by his father.

89. NATHAN WHITE built here about 1808, and remained till 1821, when he went West.

Aaron Brigham, uncle to Dea. David. (Chap. 36,) lived here several years. He afterwards went to the "plastered house" in Surry. (121.)

Other residents:—James Hudson, Phineas G. Miller, Jonathan Twining, and Justin Pease.

390. LOUIS BOURRETT came to Gilsun from Canada in 1870. After living in various tenements, he built on this spot in the Fall of 1879.

90. JOHN HORTON came to Gilsun from Chester, Vt., in 1832, and lived about a year on the Clark place. In the Summer of 1833, he built this house, while residing in the house now occupied by Alpheus Chapin. He moved in the Fall, and continued to reside here till 1838, when he went to Daysville, Ill., where he died soon after. He was Captain in the militia, was elected to the Legislature two years, and commissioned as Justice of the Peace.

Aaron Day removed from Keene to Gilsun, 1815, and lived in the house now owned by Mason Guillow, till 1838, when he removed to this place, where he died in 1862. He and his brother Stephen owned the mills by the bridge for many years. He served the town as Moderator two years, as Selectman six, and as Representative three. He was also commissioned as Coroner for the County in 1830.

Ira Church Day, son of Aaron, removed to Whitewater, Wis., in 1852, and died there in 1861. A friend writes:—"As a friend, neighbor, and citizen he had few equals, and no superiors. A man of unimpeachable integrity and genuine courtesy—every one who became acquainted with him became a personal friend. His standard of morals was high, and his aim was to live up to it. No man has passed away from our midst in 20 years more sincerely regretted, or one whose memory is more tenderly cherished. The Golden Rule controlled him in all his intercourse with his fellow men. In every sense of the word he was a manly man."

Roswell G. Bennett, son-in-law of Aaron Day, lived with him a year or two, and removed to Nunda, N. Y. He is a millwright by trade.

Ira D. Gates came here with his father-in-law, Capt. True Webster, in 1868, and removed to Keene in 1871. He is a barber by trade.

Harriet Swinton emigrated from England to this country in 1864. Ten years after, she bought this place, where she still resides.

John Coy came from England with his father in 1853. After living in various tenements he came here in 1874, and remained three years. He is a spinner, and now resides at Marlboro.

Robert Cuthbert, Jr., came from Scotland with his father in 1852. He was in mercantile business at Mankato, Minn., a few years, and afterwards settled on a farm in Garden City, Minn. Owing to the "grasshopper plague," he removed to the East. In 1864 he enlisted in the First Vermont Cavalry, Troop A, and served to close of the war. He and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

Other residents: — John A. Blake of Surry, and Herbert E. Gates.

91. ELISHA MACK of Marlow bought the 9th and 10th Lots in the 5th Range of Joshua Dart of Surry in 1775. When he sold, there were houses on both lots. Whether he built them both cannot be certainly determined. The one on this spot was probably a log house. He with his brother Solomon, and perhaps also Samnel, built the first mills and the first bridge, where the Stone Bridge now stands. He was a Captain in the Revolution, and the hero of the Keene raid. (Page 160.) In 1784, he had removed to Montague, Mass., and sold the mills to his brother-in-law, Abishai Tubbs of Marlow, — "A Saw Mill and Grist Mill and Dwelling House."

John Bingham bought the place in 1778, and lived here 15 years. Abijah Wetherbee came from Sullivan, tended the grist-mill several years, and removed to Surry. Solomon Woods lived here while building Mason Guillow's house. John Parmenter, a blacksmith, came here from Leominster, Mass., and about 1815, removed to Monson, Mass. He was fond of reading, and quite active in a debating society of that period.

Other residents: — John Borden and Selden Borden.

92. SOLOMON WOODS built this house in 1806. Two years after, he swapped farms with Dea. Pease, who lived here a short time. In 1815, Aaron Day came from Keene to this place. He added the second story to the house, in 1830, and eight years after removed to the Horton place.

Asa Cole lived, when a boy, with his brother-in-law, Amherst Hayward. After his marriage in 1829, he lived at the Factory Village several years, and was in company with Dea. Brigham. (Page 138.) In 1833 he bought the Clark place, where he remained four years. He bought this place in the Spring of 1838, and after twenty-one years, removed to Keene. By prudence and hard labor, he has accumulated a large property. He served the town as Selectman in 1853. Daniel R. Cole, his son, has been a member of the city government at Keene, for several years.

Mason Guillow settled on the place now owned by Horace Howard, near Newman's mill, where he remained eleven years. In 1859 he bought this place of Mr. Cole, and still resides here.

The house has frequently been occupied by two families. About 1845, Cheney Kilburn came here from Gardner, Mass., and carried on the chair business for about five years. He is now an extensive furniture dealer in Philadelphia, Penn. Philander Howland was here for several years in the same business, and afterwards lived at the Factory Village. He now resides in Keene. Gardner W. Isham was here about two years, and afterwards at the Stephen Day house. (99.) In 1864 he went to Keene.

Other residents : — Oren A. Willard from Fitzwilliam, James Pierce, Leroy Gates, and Alexander Cuthbert.

93. In 1783, Elisha Clark bought 18 acres in the 9th and 10th Lots, 5th Range. This included the Store lot, and the place now owned by Willard Bill, and the widow Gates's place. No buildings are mentioned in the deed. The next year he sold the same, together with four acres just west of it, to Samuel Clark, who had come that year from Worcester, Mass., to Gilsun. In 1787 the same land was sold to Joseph Clark. It seems probable that the Clarks built on this place though it is not certain. There was an old house here before 1807. It was used as a school house one or more seasons.

Stephen Cross was a carpenter from Monson, Mass., and lived here in 1807, and for some years after. Other tenants are uncertain. Probably the blacksmiths, Boynton and Theophilus Eveleth, lived here for a time. Dr. Kendrick bought the place, but left town very soon after.

Zenas D. Metcalf, a blacksmith, came to Gilsun about 1830, and lived in many different places. In 1833, Aaron Day's shop, standing just south of Mason Guillow's house, was moved to this spot and fitted up for a house for Mr. Metcalf, who lived here several years, working in the shop on number 352. About 1852, he removed to Westminster, Vt.

Levi Gates was a shoemaker by trade, and formerly went from house to house to do up their year's work of making and mending. He lived, in 1832, in the house now occupied by Alpheus Chapin. He went to Alstead two years, and after that lived in different places till about 1844, when he bought this house, where his widow still resides, with her son Sidney.

Other residents : — Edward Gates, Leroy Gates, Herbert Gates, John Coy, Albert R. Corey, and Frank Smith.

94. JOHN BINGHAM built a log house on this spot when he first came from Montague, Mass., and lived here about a year. Stephen White bought of David Fuller in 1793, and sold to James Kingsbury in 1802. Probably there were others between Mr. Bingham and Mr. White.

Turner White came from Uxbridge, Mass., about 1780, and lived in Keene and afterwards in Alstead. He owned the mills by the Bridge for a short time, and lived in the Stephen Day house. (99.) He next lived in the house with Capt. Fuller for several years. About 1803; he bought this place and in 1807 removed to Chesterfield.

95. JOSEPH YOUNG or YOUNGS, perhaps son of Eliphalet, of Hebron, Conn., then living in Gilsun, (Chap. 34.) bought 60 acres of the south part of the 10th Lot, 4th Range, for £24, in December, 1781. He built a house on this spot, which is still known as the Young lot. He removed to Weathersfield, Vt., about 1793.

96. GEORGE W. F. TEMPLE built this house in 1835. Nine years after, he removed to the Holt place in Alstead. (393.) He was a very social man, and a popular Captain in the militia. His death in 1876, just after he had been chosen Deacon, was a serious loss to the Congregational Church. His brother, Isaac F. B. Temple, lived with him in this house for two years, and now resides at Boston, Mass.

George Henry Temple, son of Capt. Temple, enlisted November, 1861, and served three years in the 6th N. H. Reg't, Co. E, which was in many of the severest battles of the war, including Camden, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, The Wilderness, and Petersburg, where it was under fire for about nine weeks. He lived in various tenements in Gilsun, and now resides on his father's place in Alstead. (393.)

Andrew Dexter Towne removed here from Marlow, in 1843, and carried on the chair business. In 1856, his father, Andrew Towne, came to reside with him. His brothers Luke and John also lived with him for a time. In 1864, he removed to Keene where he still resides.

Willard Bill was noted in his youth for his aptness for learning. This taste was indulged and cultivated as he had opportunity till it "ripened into a thorough scholarship." He taught district schools for many years with excellent success. After marriage he lived one year with his parents, but in 1835 removed to Westmoreland, "where he applied himself closely and successfully to the pursuit of agriculture. Advancing years and failing health led him to leave his business to the care of his son, and in the year 1866 he returned to his native town where he has since resided," mostly on this place. He has always enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his townsmen. In Westmoreland he served as Superintending School Committee. In Gilsum he has served six years as Selectman, and, what is very unusual, there were 47 years between his first election to that office, 1827, and the last in 1874. He was also Captain in the militia and Justice of the Peace. (Page 149.)

Willard Bill, Jr., is a farmer in Westmoreland. He has been Selectman five years. He was also Commissioner for Cheshire County, 1873-4-5.

Other residents: — Charles Parker, Oren Wyman, Rev. James Tisdale, Jacob Polley, Jr., Porter and Joel Cowee, George H. McCoy, Leroy Gates, John R. Willard, Samuel Isham, Jr., and Mrs. David Wood.

97 and 98. Day's Hall and the upper part of the Store have been made into tenements, and have had many occupants, among whom are the following: — George Henry Temple, Joseph W. Pierce, Roswell C. Nourse, Joseph Dubé, Joseph Dupies, Herbert C. Gates, Edward O. Corey, Louis Bourrett, and Mrs. John L. Foss.

352. This is near where Solomon Woods had a Blacksmith's Shop. The Days also had a shop here, which was afterwards burned. (Page 47.) Thomas T. Wetherbee, Zenas D. Metcalf, and others worked here.

99. ELISHA MACK probably built here before 1779. All the residents cannot now be given. William Baxter lived here several years, and it is thought he built the lower story of the present house. Turner White lived here, perhaps before Mr. Baxter.

Stephen Griswold, both father and son, resided here for many years. They were from Beech Hill in Keene, and removed to New Keene, N. Y. The father was Selectman in 1775. Where they lived at that time cannot now be told, but probably in what is now Sullivan.

After Dea. Pease bought the mills, he first lived in the Solomon Woods house, (82,) but soon removed to this place, where he remained till 1828.

Stephen Day came here from Chester, Vt., about 1828, and remained till his death in 1860. He was in company with his brother Aaron, and run the grist-mill for many years. In 1838, he enlarged the house to its present form.

Stephen Day, Jr., lived with his father and kept tavern here for several years. He also kept tavern in Marlow for about five years, returning to this place in 1850.

Franklin W. Day, brother of the preceding, also lived here with his father. He was an enterprising business man, and accumulated a large property for a small country town. In 1833, he and his brother built the store on number 98, long known as Day's store. Here he carried on a large business. He died suddenly of brain fever in 1849. He was one of the leading politicians of the town, served as Representative two years, and was Justice of the Peace.

Benjamin Foster, son-in-law of Stephen Day, lived here several years. After the death of Mr. Day, Mrs. Foster and her sister Lucinda remained here till 1876.

John J. Isham is the present owner. He has served two years as Selectman, and represented the town in the Legislature of 1878.

Alexander Cuthbert came from Scotland with his father in 1852. He is a woolen manufacturer and has resided here since 1878.

Other residents: — Dr. Benjamin Palmer, Dr. Henry Kendrick, James Edwards, Gardner W. Isham, George S. G. Porter, Mrs. Charlotte Morrison, William H. Coy, and Louis Bourrett.

100. Elisha Mack's Mills. (Page 137.)

101. This building was put up by the Cowees (page 137,) for a dry shop.

John Kelley emigrated from Ireland to New York in 1851, soon after settled in Surry, and came to Gilsun in 1853. After residing two years on the Livermore place, he lived in this house four years. In 1859 he removed to Keene.

Other residents :— Asa E. Howe, Luke Parkhurst, Charles E. Crouch, Valire Langlois, Joseph Dubé, William Riley Kenney now of Surry, Lucius Milan Miller, William Chapin, Dr. James Plummer now of Lempster, and Joseph S. Bingham.

102. Arnory. (Page 41.)

103. SOLOMON MACK from Lyme, Conn., was one of the original proprietors of Marlow, where he settled in 1761. He came to Gilsun and built a log house on this spot, probably in 1773. Several of his children were born here, among whom was Lucy, who married Joseph Smith of Vermont and became the mother of the notorious Mormon prophet, Joseph Smith, Jr. He lived for a time in the old house on Mason Guillow's farm. (91.) He removed to Tunbridge, Vt., and in his old age returned to Gilsun and resided with his son. (260.) He published an autobiography, but very defective in dates, and giving almost nothing of his Gilsun history.

At the age of four years he was bound out to a farmer, by whom he was harshly treated, being "rather considered a slave than a member of the family."

"Soon after I left my master, I enlisted in the service of my country, under the command of Capt. Henry, and was annexed to a regiment commanded by Col. Whitney. I marched from Connecticut to Fort Edwards; there was a severe battle fought at the half-way brook, in the year 1755."

He was sick for nearly a year, then went back to Lyme and purchased a farm. In 1757-8, he was again in the King's service. While on his way from Fort Edward to Stillwater, he had the following encounter :—

"When I got about half way I espied at about thirty yards distance, four Indians coming out of the woods with their tomahawks, scalping-knives, and guns. I was alone, but about twenty rods behind me there was a man by the name of Webster. I saw no other way to save myself only to deceive them by stratagem. I exclaimed like this : ' Rush on ! rush on ! Brave Boys, we'll have the Devils ! we'll have the Devils ! ' I had no other weapon only a staff ; but I ran towards them, and the other man appearing in sight, gave them a terrible fright, and I saw them no more."

He was afterwards in the battle in which Lord Howe was killed, and "escaped very narrowly by a musket ball passing under my chin, perhaps within half an inch of my neck."

After various other adventures, he went to Crown Point where he kept a sutler's shop for two years. He "accumulated a handsome sum of silver and gold" with which he bought sixteen hundred acres of land in Granville, N. Y. Owing to sickness he was unable, however, to finish the clearing which was necessary to make good his claim, and therefore lost the whole. He served also in the Revolution, and with two of his sons, probably Jason and Stephen, went privateering. He was afterwards severely crippled by the fall of a tree, and is remembered as riding about town on a side-saddle. At the age of 76, he experienced a very remarkable religious conversion, and became very zealous, often visiting the schools and talking to the young on the subject of religion.

Jason Mack, oldest son of Solomon, became a Christian minister, and preached for many years in Vermont and New York.

Stephen Mack, second son of Solomon, enlisted in the Revolutionary army at the age of fourteen, and was promoted to Brigadier-General.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER SIX.

56. JESSE JOHNSON built a log house here in 1797, and remained about five years.

57. EBENEZER ISHAM from Bolton, Conn., built this house about 1800. Ebenezer Isham, Jr., continued here after his father's death. He served the town as Selectman, and died here at the age of 41. His widow continued to carry on the farm till 1850, when she married Robert Austin, who died here after about two years. James C. Isham, her son, occupied the place till 1879, when he sold to Daniel W. Bill. Edward O. Corey is the present occupant.

58. On this spot EBENEZER ISHAM built a log house, when he first settled here in 1794.

59. Jonathan Webster put up a barn and a frame for a house on this place about 1818.

LEVI ISHAM bought of Mr. Webster, finished the house, and settled here in 1820, where he lived for more than forty years. William L. Isham inherited the place from his father, and still resides here. He has served two years as Selectman, and two years in the Legislature.

60. JEDEDIAH CARPENTER, JR., came from Surry and settled on this place about 1794. Abram C. Wyman lived here with him several years.

Eseck T. Wilson settled here about 1815, and resided here 56 years. He had considerable skill as a veterinarian, and was frequently employed in that capacity. He served the town three years as Selectman. His son, Oscar J. Wilson, still occupies the place. He has served as Superintending School Committee, and holds the office of Selectman at the present time.

61 and 62. ICHABOD YOUNGS of Hebron, Conn., owned both these places, and doubtless built on one of them, and perhaps both. In 1779, he sold to Phinehas Allen of Hebron, Conn. Tradition connects Mr. Allen's name with both these dwellings. "He tended mill at the Bridge, was very poor, and wore wooden shoes." He removed to Surry before 1790.

63. JOSEPH YOUNGS, supposed to be a brother of Ichabod, bought this lot of Ebenezer Dewey in October, 1768, and probably settled on this spot.

John Clemens of Swansey bought the north half of this lot for £70 in May, 1780, and lived on this spot. He was a Frenchman by birth, and sold out in 1789.

64. JOHN HAMMOND, son of Aaron, built the house standing here, about 1796. He served the town four years as Moderator, was Selectman fourteen years, and represented Gilsum and Surry three years in the Legislature. He was Justice of the Peace, and Coroner for the County. He was a noted school-master for many years. He also taught singing, was leader in the choir, and played the bass-viol.

John Hammond, Jr., whose portrait is on the page opposite, remained here till 1871, when he removed to the Plumley place, above the village. (183.) He has served the town two years as Selectman, two years in the Legislature, and received a commission as Justice of the Peace. In 1874, his fellow citizens assembled at his house to celebrate his golden wedding, and presented him a fine gold-headed cane. Though past fourscore, he still retains the vivacity of youth, to a remarkable degree.

J. E. W. Hammond, son of John, after attending school at Marlow Academy, Mount Cesar in Swansey, and at Lebanon, entered Norwich University and remained to within three terms of graduation. He taught district schools with good success, beginning in Langdon at the age of seventeen, and ending with the Center District in Keene. He was desired to return there, but preferred to enter mercantile life. He was in business with his uncle, Stephen Day, Jr., at Perkinsville, Vt., for three years. In 1853, he removed to Chicago, Ill., where he "engaged in different lines of trade" for nine years. He then went to Omega, Ill., where he still resides. He has been highly successful as a merchant, and has of late given considerable attention to farming. He is also an active politician — has been township Supervisor three years, and in 1878 was elected to the Legislature, "by a large majority, in a very hotly contested election."

Aaron D. Hammond, brother of the preceding, resides with his father, and is at present engaged in trade at Newman's store. He is one of the political leaders of the town, and has served as Moderator sixteen years, as Selectman nine years, has represented the town two years in the Legislature, and is Justice of the Peace.

Other residents: — Phineas Wheelock, Albert R. Corey, and Edward O. Corey.

65. MOSES BELDING, a carpenter from Swanzey, probably built a log house on this spot, and lived here a few years before 1783, when he sold to Aaron Hammond, also of Swanzey.

66. AARON HAMMOND built here about 1785. He drew the boards for his house from Swanzey, and split and shaved his own shingles and clap-boards, some of which were found sound and bright seventy years after. This house was removed some years ago, and is now the Sugar House owned by Mrs. T. T. Clark. Mr. Hammond served the town as Moderator, and was Selectman four years. He was the ancestor of all the Gilsum Hammonds. This has always been one of the leading families of the place, and though mostly scattered at present; those who have gone to other places have maintained the reputation of the family elsewhere.

Aaron Hammond, Jr., lived here with his father till his death, at the early age of 34. His widow was well-known as a tailoress for many years, and was highly esteemed.

Rachel Hammond, daughter of Aaron, was the only child in Gilsum who was born blind. Her mother took unwearied pains to instruct her, so that she learned to knit and sew. Hearing others read, she would repeat the words after them, and called it reading. In this way she read the Bible through in course more than once. But for her blindness, she would have been a woman of more than common activity and influence.

Other residents: — Frazer A. Hodgman, a shoemaker from Troy, N. Y., who removed to Keene about 1828; Barnch Davis; Phineas Wheelock; Daniel Phillips, from Nelson; Abram C. Wyman, seven years; Jacob Polley; James L. Bates, and his brother-in-law, David Holman; Davis H. Wilson; John Foster, who removed to Westmoreland about 1842; and Kimball Metcalf.

67. School House. (Page 131.)

68. OTIS G. HAMMOND, son of Josiah, built this house about 1829. He was a successful school-teacher for many years, and served as Superintending School Committee. He was one of the first to join the Washingtonian movement, (page 92,) and was an earnest worker in the cause, being quite successful as a temperance lecturer, in this and neighboring towns. He served the town as Moderator and Selectman, and was commissioned Justice of the Peace.

Isaac Ware Hammond, son of Otis G., is an accountant and merchant in Concord. He served three years in the army. (Page 44.) He was one of the board of Selectmen in Manchester two years, and represented his Ward in Concord as member of the Constitutional Convention of 1876. He was Deputy U. S. Marshal for taking the census of 1870; was appointed Deputy Secretary of State in 1877, and re-appointed the following year. He is also a member of the N. H. Historical Society.

Albert Otis Hammond, son of Otis G., learned the printer's trade of H. A. Bill of Keene, and was for a time publisher of the "Claremont Eagle." He afterwards had a job office at St.

Louis, Mo. Returning East, he was engaged on "The Gazette," at Dedham, Mass., from which place he enlisted Jan. 4, 1864, in the 2d Reg't Mass. Cavalry, and "was taken prisoner by Mosby's Guerillas, Feb. 22, was kept a short time at Libby prison, thence removed to Andersonville, Ga., where he suffered inhuman and barbarous treatment until Sept. 9, when a mere skeleton, unable to walk, he was removed to Savannah, where without food after his arrival, he died Sept. 12, 1864."

Thomas Tyler Clark came here from Acworth in 1865. While walking beside his team at the town fair in 1879, he fell dead from disease of the heart. He was well-known as a road-builder, and was highly respected by all who knew him. He served the town as Selectman. His widow still occupies the place with her son-in-law, Henry H. Carter.

69. JOSIAH HAMMOND, son of Aaron, settled here on the north part of his father's farm. He served the town as Moderator five years, as Selectman four years, as Town Clerk fifteen years, and was in the Legislature one year. His son, Dr. George W. Hammond, (page 182,) followed his father on this place, and added the second story to the house.

George Hammond, son of the Doctor, lived here with his father till 1866, when the whole family removed to Stockbridge, N. Y. While in Gilsum, he was appointed Justice of the Peace. He now resides on a farm at Bennet's Corners, N. Y., where he has served as one of the Assessors of Madison Co.

Allen Hayward of Acworth came here in 1865, and died the following January. He had been a man of some prominence in his native town, and was Captain in the militia. His son, George Dayton Hayward, remained here till November, 1879, when he removed to Laconia, having served this town two years as Selectman.

Other residents:—Joshua D. Crane; Moses Cass, and Jonathan M. Cass, from Richmond.

70. DAVID BLISH from Glastonbury, Conn., settled on this place about 1783. He served the town as Moderator seven years, as Selectman twelve years, and Town Clerk nine years. He represented Gilsum and Surry in the Legislature six years, and was appointed Justice of the Peace. He was for many years Deacon of the Congregational Church. His wife afterwards joined the Methodists, with most of her children, one of whom married Bishop Hedding. (Page 117.) After Dea. Blish's death, the family removed to New York.

John Blish, son of Dea. David, settled in the tin-ware business at Woodstock, Vt., in 1829. He was in company with a Mr. Roby, and was an active member of the Methodist Church there.

Waldo May came to Gilsum with his brother Calvin, about 1815, and lived a short time on the Loisel place. (53.) He then removed to this place where he remained about seven years. He lost his left hand, when a boy, in a saw-mill. He was able, however, to do a good day's work at all kinds of farming. He removed to Pennsylvania about 1823, having only twenty-five cents left, when he got there. He built a small log cabin, and his wife taught the neighbors' children, while he worked on the farm.

Daniel Wade of Easton, Mass., married Dea. Blish's daughter, and lived here several years.

Jonas Brown from Alstead was here a few years. He was one of the volunteers in the war of 1812, and afterwards served as Captain in the militia. About 1830, he removed to Java, N. Y., where his widow still resides.

Barton Cooke from Surry was here about seven years and removed to Westmoreland.

Enos Cross came here from Swansey in 1848. He is fond of reading and debate, and raises a large number of fowls.

Other residents:—Thomas Powell, Joseph Thompson, Aaron Loveland and his son-in-law Milton Whitcomb, Jonathan Webster, Jacob Polley, Warren Farrington, and Hiram Hefflon.

Mount St. Helens, N. W. 1000 ft. 1000 ft. 1000 ft.

71. SIMEON and JOSEPH TAYLOR came from Swanzev and settled in a log house on this spot in 1781. They kept "bachelor's hall" for eight years, when Simeon married. Joseph continued to live with him for eleven years, when he also married and went to live with his father-in-law, where George C. Hubbard now resides.

72. SIMEON TAYLOR built the house on this spot, about 1813. After his death the family went West.

John Livermore from Alstead settled here about 1825, and lived here forty-four years, when he removed to the village. He was an upright, industrious man, somewhat noted for roughness of speech. He served the town five years as Selectman, and was one year in the Legislature.

Other residents: — James L. Pierce from Stoddard, Luke Parkhurst, Luther Stone, Nahum T. Raymond, George W. Emerson, William Riley Kenney, Lucius M. Miller, Edward O. Corey, and Eli Carpenter.

73. Mr. Livermore built this house about 1855 for his son Aaron, who lived here a few years. (Page 183.) Bradley Stone came from Milford in 1869, and still resides here.

74. JACOB POLLEY, JR., built this house about 1850, and remained four years. Benjamin Foster from Ashby, Mass., lived here about seven years. Whitney D. (page 187,) was his son. His second son, Leonard, is a druggist in Keene. Byron Alexander settled here in 1861. In 1879 he removed to the village. James C. Isham now resides here.

108. JACOB POLLEY removed from Alstead to Gilsum in 1831, and lived several years on the old Hammond place. (66.) After living a short time on the Blish place, he took down the old Blish house about 1835, and moved it to this spot, where he built the present house. In 1869 he went to Butler, Ill., and died there at the house of his daughter.

His son, Jacob Polley, Jr., after following the sea a few years, came here in 1863, and still occupies the place. He also lived eight years in Butler, Ill.

CHAPTER XXXV.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER FOUR.

104. Grist-mill built by Fuller and White. (Page 136.)

105. Who first settled here is uncertain. It seems probable that Capt. Fuller built and let the house to his millers. William Lamb, a shoemaker, lived here, and was the miller for a time. Selden Borden came to Gilsum about 1806. He lived here and at various other places, and about 1816 removed to Pennsylvania. John Borden lived here, perhaps with his brother.

Aaron Loveland lived here with his father and carried on the mill for some years. He was also a shoemaker. (Page 142.) He lived for a time on the Blish place and removed to Grafton, Vt.

Philip Howard came from Winchester to Gilsum about 1815, lived in various parts of the town, and was here several years. In his old age he went to Alstead to live with his daughter.

106. John Bingham's turning shop. (Page 144.)

107. JOHN BINGHAM, JR., built a log house here about 1800. About 1816 he removed to Granville, N. Y. He was a mechanic, and turned wooden bowls and plates.

109. DANIEL PECK probably came from Lyme, Conn. He built a log house here before 1784. (Page 46.) Nothing is known of the family.

John Mark bought the place, and Elijah Bond lived here a while. Mr. Mark gave the farm to his son-in-law, Simon Carpenter, who built the present house about 1817. John Heenan bought and lived here a few years after Mr. Carpenter's death. John R. Willard came here in 1871 and remained six years, when he went to the Foster place. (145.) George Wright came to Gilsum in 1862, and after living on several different farms, bought and settled here in 1876.

110. Ziba Ware's Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 141.)

111. ZADOK HURD settled here before 1793, and removed to Chesterfield in 1803. He was a Captain in the militia, served the town four years as Moderator, one year as Clerk, six years as Selectman, and represented Gilsum and Surry one year in the Legislature.

Ziba Ware was a blacksmith who came from Winchester, about 1799, and lived with his father-in-law on the Hendee place, a short time. After his marriage, he went to the Gen. Wright place, where he kept tavern two years. He then came to this place and remained till 1806, when he removed to Vermont.

William Baxter was grandson of the notorious Tory, Simon Baxter of Alstead, and came to Gilsum not far from 1795. He owned the mills at the Bridge, and lived where John J. Isham now does. In 1804, he went to the Gen. Wright place and stayed about two years. In 1806, he bought this place, and lived here ten years. He then went to what is now called Shaw's Corner in Surry, where he died in 1828.

William Bond removed from Watertown, Mass., to Surry in 1808. He bought this place about 1816, and remained till his death in 1819. He was Colonel in the militia.

Allen Butler, Jr., followed Col. Bond, and resided here till 1859, when he removed to Delmar, Penn. He served the town as Moderator and Clerk, was Selectman two years, represented the town twice in the Legislature, and was appointed Justice of the Peace.

George Hubbard from Westmoreland settled here in 1859. In 1867, he removed to Keene, and two years later to Sullivan, where he still resides.

Milton I. Stearns came here from Alstead in 1867, and still occupies the place.

112. The first known of this place is, that JOSHUA ISHAM settled here about 1800. The south part of the house now standing is the one put up by the neighbors in 1803. (Page 46.)

Ivory Randall came to this place about 1815. In 1837 he removed to Keene, just below the Kilburn place, leaving his sons here. Eleven years later, he came back to live with his sons, and in 1854 removed to Surry. Of his sons, Calvin removed to Surry in 1850, David went to Wisconsin in 1854, and Harry is a shoemaker at Alstead.

Winsor Gleason followed the Randalls and remained on this place till 1867, when he removed to Keene and afterwards to Canaan. His son-in-law, George H. Lathrop, and Francis C. Howe lived here with Mr. Gleason.

Willard Carpenter from Surry settled here in 1865. After his death, his son, George H. Carpenter, took the place. He is much interested in the theory and practice of Agriculture, and in 1878 was President of the Farmers' Club. He has served the town four years as Selectman.

113. THOMAS DART, JR., built a log house about 1778 and lived here a few years, before he went to live with his father. (120.) He and his wife were members of the Congregational Church in Surry.

114. EBENEZER DART built a log house on this place and lived here many years. In 1806, he moved away, and sold the place to Simon Baxter, brother of William.

Josiah Hendee with his father came from Ashford, Conn., and settled in Walpole in 1796. The next year, they bought the lot west of William Kingsbury's, and built a "plastered house" in the edge of Surry. (121.) In 1806, Josiah Hendee bought this farm, still known as the Hendee place, for $600. After two years, he removed to Chesterfield, and in 1810 bought back this farm for $580. While he was absent, William Baxter had built the north half of the house now standing, and a few years later, Mr. Hendee built on the rest.

William F. Cummings came from Keene in 1852, and lived here for two years. He then went to the Ballard place, and soon after returned to Keene.

Joseph W. Cummings, his son, enlisted from Keene in the 14th N. H. Reg't, Co. C, — was in the battles of Winchester, Fisher Hill, and Cedar Creek, in the first of which he was slightly wounded.

Luke N. Houghton, a blacksmith, came from Walpole and settled here in 1856. After ten years, he removed to the place where he now resides, above the village. (175.)

360. Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 142.) 359. Brick School House. (Page 131.)

115. C. W. Bingham states on the authority of his uncle David Fuller, that a son of Samuel Derby lived here, a few years, in a log house.

116. JOHN ROUNDY came from Surry about 1815, and built the house on this spot. His son John Elijah prepared himself for the ministry, but died just before completing his studies. Jonathan Houghton lived here a year or two about 1825, and returned to Keene.

John Dean of English birth lived here about fifteen years, and removed to Illinois. He is a woolen manufacturer. Mrs. Dean and her twin sister, Fanny Hendee, now occupy the place.

Other residents: — Iddo Randall, William Dean, Walker Gassett, Zenas D. Metcalf, and William L. Kingsbury.

361. Metcalf's Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 141.)

117. DAVID BLISS, son of Jonathan, built a log house here about 1783. His widow lived here till 1818.

118. EBENEZER HATHORN from Jaffrey settled here about 1798. Some sixteen years after, he returned to his former home. He was a blacksmith and made steelyards. Elijah Bond lived here a few years, and removed to Vermont. John Roundy first lived here before building Mrs. Dean's house.

119. William Kingsbury, son of James, bought this place of William Baxter, by whom he had been brought up, about 1818. In 1837 he built the brick house now standing here. He has served the town six years as Selectman, one year in the Legislature, and was commissioned as Justice of the Peace. Otis H. Kingsbury lives here with his father.

120. THOMAS DART came from Bolton, Conn., and settled in Surry in 1771. Ten years later, he bought this place for £50, and built a house on this spot. He served three years as Selectman. His son Thomas lived with him many years, and removed to New Keene, N. Y., in 1812.

William Baxter bought the place and let it to James Kingsbury, who resided here till about 1818. His son William lived in this house till 1837.

{121. Plastered house in Surry built by Mr. Hendee. 122. Dustin place in Surry.

123. David Reed place in Surry, where James Kingsbury lived about 1812.

124. MOSES WARE came from Wrentham, Mass., to Surry. His name appears among the signers of the Association Test in 1775. He came to Gilsum before 1793, with several of his boys. As they were coming near this place, where he was intending to make a clearing, he told them that the one who cut the first stick, would probably be the one who would have the farm. Elijah hurried forward and succeeded in winning the chance, and it so fell out that he afterwards owned the farm. Mr. Ware built a log house on this spot, where he and his son Moses lived till 1806, when they removed to New Keene, N. Y. He and his wife were members of the Congregational Church in Surry.

125. COMFORT WARE, his second son, was living on the Dustin place (122,) in 1789. The next year he and his older brother, Elijah, bought a large part of this farm, and built a log house on this spot. About 1800, Comfort sold out his share and removed to New Keene, N. Y.

ELIJAH WARE put up a framed house near the same spot, about 1811, where he lived till his death in 1847. The house he built is the north part of the one still standing. His father's old house was made into the cider mill.

Asa Wing, brother-in-law of Mr. Ware, a shoemaker by trade, lived here with him awhile, and at various other places, early in the present century. He afterwards lived in Surry, and removed to Vermont.

True Webster, Jr., lived here some years after the death of Mr. Ware.

William L. Kingsbury built the house now standing, in 1850. Fifteen years later he removed to Surry, having served the town three years as Selectman.

Ira L. Morse lived here several years. In 1860, he removed to Fitzwilliam.

Daniel Wright came from Keene in 1867, and has resided here ever since. His brother George lived here with him for a year or two.

364. Old Dart Saw Mill. (Page 137.)

126. JOHN ELLIS came from Winchester (?) and settled on this farm before 1790. He is supposed to have built this house prior to 1800. He afterwards lived on the Crocker place, (33,) and removed to Swanzy in 1810.

Jesse Jaquith, formerly from Jaffrey, came here from the Dustin place in Surry, (122,) about 1803. Some think he built this house, instead of Mr. Ellis. He was a shoemaker by trade, and his sons followed the same business. Jesse Jaquith, Jr., remained here till 1818, and removed to New York.

Collins H. Jaquith, son of Jesse, settled in Keene, where he was for many years a leading man, and Deacon in the Congregational Church. He had an extensive shoe business, but through the dishonesty of his agent at St. Louis, Mo., he lost all his property. He soon after removed to Java, N. Y.

Aaron Mansfield lived here several years and carried on the farm for Mr. Jaquith. He afterwards removed to Vermont.

John Farrar came to this place from Sullivan in 1837, and remained four years, when he removed to Keene.

Silas Morse came here in 1842 and remained three years, when he returned to Fitzwilliam. His son, James Morse, resided here till about 1866, and removed to Keene.

Joseph Thatcher and his sons came about 1867, and after six years removed to Massachusetts.

Darius Porter who had been living on his father's farm, (136,) settled here about 1873. He has served the town three years as Selectman. His father-in-law, Henry Hurd, a grandson of Justus Hurd, lives with him.

Other residents: — Simeon Ingalls from Alstead. Berzeleel Lord Mack, and John Babbitt.

127. WILLIAM DEAN moved the old Roundy house from 128 to this spot in 1850. He is an Englishman by birth. After living here a year or two, he removed to Delmar, Penn., and now resides in Illinois.

John Dustin came here from the old place in Surry, (122,) about 1852. Since the death of his widow in 1877, the place has remained vacant.

128. ELLIJAH ROUNDY came from Surry and built here in 1820. In 1828, Joshua Willard, a revolutionary pensioner, also from Surry, married the widow Roundy and came here to reside. The place has not been tenanted since her death in 1847.

129. DAVID A. ROUNDY, son of Elijah, built this house in 1845, where he still resides.

130. Original School House. (Page 131.)

131. Who built here is not positively certain. From old deeds, it seems probable that DR. ABNER BLISS was the first settler. He sold land near here with a dwelling on it, to Silvanus Hayward of Surry, in December, 1789. Mr Hayward lived here one year, and sold the place to David Bond.

Eli Thayer, a blacksmith, worked at the lower village, and lived here a part of the time between 1803 and 1815.

132. SAMUEL BORDEN BLISS with the assistance of his brother David, built a log house on this spot, about 1808. He lived here twelve years, and removed to Pennsylvania.

133. JOHN ELLIS built a log house here before 1790, and lived here some years.

134. EBENEZER HATHHORN, JR., is said to have lived in a log house near this place.

135. JONATHAN BLISS from Tolland, Conn., built a log house near this spot, 1761-2. (Page 169.) He had a large number of descendants, some of whom are still living in Alstead. He owned much land and settled his sons on farms in Gilsum. He was Selectman in 1777. Dr. Abner Bliss lived for a time with his father, and removed to Alstead about 1790.

136. DAVID BLISS, JR., after living with his brother Samuel B., for two years, built this house in 1810. He died here, unmarried, at the age of 29.

Bethuel Beckwith from Lempster lived here 1823-4, and removed to Alstead.

Stephen Foster, 3d, came here from Sullivan in 1837, and remained till his death in 1844.

David Porter came from Keene to the Church place in 1842. The next year he lived on the Pickering place, and in 1844 bought this farm, where he lived twenty-three years.

Dennis Keefe emigrated from Ireland to New York in 1856. In 1875 he came to Gilsum and bought this place the next year.

Other residents :— Jonas Brown and George Wright.

137. BELDING DART, son of Jesse, built a house here about 1810. Twenty years after, he took it down, and lived in his father's old house. (138.) Mr. Dart was a man of great endurance, and did more hard work than almost any other man who ever lived in Gilsum. He recently died in Keene, in his 91st year.

138. JESSE DART built a house on this spot about 1785, and resided here till his death. His son, Belding Dart, lived here eight or ten years. James Pickering, son-in-law of Belding Dart, lived here for a time.

139. JAMES PICKERING, a carpenter, came from Lowell, Mass., in 1834. About 1855 he built this house, where he still resides. John Quincy Pickering, also a carpenter, lived here several years with his father, and now resides in Holyoke, Mass.

140. MATTHEW DWOLF or DOLPH was the first settler here. Almost nothing is known of the family. "Dilly Wolf" (page 50,) was probably his daughter. His name appears on the Revolutionary rolls. (Page 36.) His wife's name was Sibil, and they went from here to Walpole.

Jesse Dart bought this place for £50, in 1780. When he came, he had nothing but an ax and a hoe, but by diligent labor, soon had a comfortable home. The family cooking was done in an oven on the large rock in the dooryard near this spot. He wrote his name Darte.

Ariel Carpenter lived here a year or two, and after residing in several other places returned to Surry in 1862.

Other residents : — Marvin Gates, Charles Billings now of Salem, Mass., Simon Whitney, David Porter, John N. Hodgkins, and Walter Scripture of Surry.

141. TIMOTHY DORT came from Bolton, Conn., and settled in Surry. He was probably cousin to old Thomas Dart, but it is not certain. He bought the north half of the 15th Lot, 3d Range, for £36, in January, 1785, and probably settled here that year. He built the house now standing, and being a blacksmith made the nails, door-latches, and hinges still in use. His shop stood near number 362.

Timothy Dort, Jr., succeeded his father on this farm. He also was a blacksmith, and about 1828, resided for a time in the village and worked at his trade. He, however, soon returned to the farm. In 1840, he bought the Day tavern-stand, and removed to the village, where he kept tavern, carried on a farm, and worked at his trade. In 1854, he removed to Butler, Ill. He served as Captain in the militia.

Levi Mansfield, son-in-law of the preceding, came here from Alstead in 1841, and still occupies the place. His son Clement lives with him, and has secured the view of the place.

Other residents : — Joshua D. Crane and George W. F. Temple.

363. Dart's Saw Mill. (Page 137.) 142. Capt. Chapin place in Alstead. (Page 220.)

143. David Isham from Bolton, Conn., built a log house here, about 1794. After a few years he removed to Vermont, and sold the place to his brother, Samuel Isham, who built the house now standing very near the same spot, about 1800.

Samuel Isham, Jr., lived here with his father. In 1867, he removed to the lower village. Besides carrying on his farm, he worked at the trade of a brick-mason. He served the town seven years as Selectman, was four years in the Legislature, and was appointed Justice of the Peace. In less than three years before his own death, he buried a son and two daughters. An obituary notice says : "He was a kind husband, father, and neighbor;" and referring to the children : "They leave a large circle of friends and relatives who will long feel the void their presence alone could fill."

"They have gone to Heaven before us,
But they turn and wave their hands,
Pointing to the glories o'er us
In that happy spirit-land."

Joseph W. Caldwell came from Walpole to this place in 1871, and has resided in different places. In 1879 he was on the Bond farm with Charles W. Rawson. In the Spring of 1880 he returned to Daniel W. Bill's. He enlisted in the 14th N. H. Regiment, Co. B, in 1862, and served till Ap. 4, 1864, when he was "discharged for disability."

Moses G. Wright from Reading, Vt., was here in 1873, and removed to Walpole.

144. JOHN DAVIS is supposed to have built a log house here about 1780. In 1787, he moved to Keene, but returned in about a year and settled on number 155, where he died about 1796, and the family were scattered.

Silvanus Hayward resided here one year, while building his log house near number 202.

145. SAMUEL MARK built this house in 1792. About 1810, he hired Abram C. Wyman to paint it white, for which he paid him "a nice horse and a yoke of steers." Mrs. Hathhorn says this was the first house painted in Gilsnm. In 1826, he removed to New York.

Calvin Mack next settled here, and remained ten years, when he went to Illinois. He served as Selectman, and was Captain in the militia.

Stephen Foster, Jr., from Sullivan settled here in 1838. He was one of the early abolitionists, and served the town as Selectman one year.

THE HOUSE AT WOODBURY

George W. Foster, his son, resides in Keene, and has distinguished himself as a composer and instructor in music. He served the town two years as Superintending School Committee.

Allen H. Giffin came here from Marlow in 1875, and two years after removed to the West.

Charles Eveleth bought the place in 1878, and resides here with his mother.

Other residents : — Albert Kingman of Roxbury and Moses E. Wright.

146. LEVI BLISS, then of Surry, received this place by gift from his father, Jonathan Bliss, in 1769. In 1787, he sold to John Mark for £100, and went to Bethel, Vt. Mr. Mark gave the farm to his son, Samuel Mark, who settled here about that time.

147. OBADIAH SMITH was the first settler on this farm, and probably built a log house on this spot. The family has not been traced.

148. BERZELEEL MACK came from Hebron, Conn., with his brother Abner, and settled in what is now Sullivan. In 1788, he bought this lot for £150. He afterwards built the house standing on this spot, and resided here till he married the widow Smith in 1827.

Calvin May came from Charlestown, Mass., and first lived on the Hurd place, but soon after settled here, where he spent most of his life, removing to Swanzey in his old age. He served the town seven years as Selectman.

Harvey B. May, son of Calvin, like the rest of the family, was naturally a scholar. He taught school many terms, and served the town as Superintending School Committee three years. He was for some time engaged in a school-book agency, and is now in the poultry business in Massachusetts.

Elbridge Smith came here from Keene in 1874. He formerly owned the Mills near the Towne place in Marlow. In 1862, he enlisted in the 14th Regiment, N. H. Volunteers, and was Corporal in Co. A. He served two years, and having contracted disease, was "discharged for disability, Oct. 10, 1864." He was chosen Deacon of the Congregational Church, and is at present Superintendent of the Sabbath School. He fitted for College at Meriden, but his health failing, he turned his attention to farming.

149. In 1843 AMASA MAY (page 186,) employed Calvin C. Bingham to build a house for him on this spot. After Mr. May left Gilsum, this house was occupied for a time by Isaiah Davis, who removed to Walpole.

Other residents : — James Chapman, Charles A. Britton of Surry, George Wright, and Joseph W. Caldwell. It is now used as a sugar-house.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER TWO.

150. STEPHEN BOND of Hebron, Conn., bought two lots here, the eleventh Lots in the fifth and sixth Ranges, in 1768-9, and settled here the next year. In 1798 he built a two-story house on this spot. He was known as Dea. Bond. (Page 106.) He was a soldier in the Revolution, and was a Lieutenant in the militia. (Page 37.) His wife was a very active Christian. In her old age, she became specially interested for the conversion of the Jews, and in her last sickness, remarked to Mr. Rich that she didn't feel satisfied with any prayer that left out the Jews. As he prayed with her in almost her last moments, he forgot to mention them, and when he ended, she exclaimed, "O, those blessed Jews!"

Elisha Y. Bond followed his father on this place, and remained here till his death in 1824.

Asa Bond, adopted son of the preceding, continued here about six years, and removed to Nashua, and afterwards to Antrim. He was a machinist by trade. At Antrim he was Deacon in the Presbyterian Church, and was "a pure and devoted man."

Nathan Ellis, Jr., came here from Sullivan about 1823, and resided on the place fifteen years. His father lived with him. He afterwards removed to the village.

151. On this spot DEA. BOND built a log house in 1770, and lived here 28 years.

152. NATHAN ELLIS, JR., built this house about 1835, and remained here three years.

Otis Ammidon came here in 1838, and returned to Westmoreland in 1851. He was for a time an ardent Millerite. He lived a part of the time, at least, in the old house.

Ephraim Howe came to this place in 1841, and resided three years. He then returned to Acworth, where he died at the age of 73

"He was a man of good sound judgment, of plain common sense, and unflinching integrity. His organ of mirthfulness was well developed. No man loved a joke better than he. . . . He was a man of calm temper, respected and beloved by all who knew him, more perhaps for his goodness than his greatness. People in speaking of him almost invariably called him 'Uncle Ephraim.' He was an earnest and devoted Christian and a consistent member of the Baptist Church. He died in the full exercise of Christian faith, and was gathered to his fathers, like a shock of corn fully ripe for the harvest."

James Rawson removed from Sullivan to the Joel Wilson place (32.) in 1851, and came here four years later. Charles W. Rawson, his son, still occupies the place, and has secured the accompanying heliotype of the premises.

Other tenants, some of which were in the old house:—Marvin Gates, Walker Gassett, Austin P. Howe, Charles E. Baker, Alonzo B. Cook, and Joseph W. Caldwell.

153. DAVID BILL owned the twelfth Lot in the fifth Range, and settled in a log house near this spot.

154. Tradition locates David Bill on this spot. But as he did not own this lot, but the next one on the east, the tradition is almost certainly incorrect. Who did live here is uncertain. The first settler on the lot was Obadiah Smith, and it is not unlikely that he had a house here.

155. THEODORE PRESTON was the first blacksmith in what is now Gilsuim, and settled here about 1776. It has been said that this lot was given him by the proprietors, for the purpose of having a blacksmith here. As the inventory of his property after his death includes no Real Estate, it is probable that they only gave the use of the land. He served as Selectman in 1782. After his death in 1788, the place was occupied by John Davis for about nine years. A blacksmith named Boynton also worked here for a time. No other tenants are now known.

VIEW OF THE HOUSE AT FORT MONROE

156. BENJAMIN HOSMER, M. D., built a house here in 1794. (Page 181.) After his death William Banks lived here till 1841. The place has since been vacant.

157. On this spot a house was erected about 1800, by whom is uncertain. It was bought by Dudley Smith and formed part of the tavern so long occupied by him. (79.) Tradition says that there is a charge of powder in a rock, somewhere near this place, which was put there before 1800.

158. JONATHAN BLISS, JR., bought this lot of his father in 1786, for £12. He is supposed to have been the first settler here. He died in 1799, and the family went to New Keene, N. Y.

Joseph Taylor lived here with his father-in-law, and received the place from him.

159. JOSEPH TAYLOR built a two-story house here about 1817. In the second story was a sort of hall, used for a ball-room. Joseph M. Chapin has a ticket dated Dec. 5, 1817, signed by J. E. Davis, D. Bliss, and J. Taylor, inviting Justus Chapin and Lady to a Christmas Ball at that place, at one o'clock Friday P. M. This is supposed to have been a sort of dedication of the new house. Mr. Taylor was Captain in the militia, and lived here till 1829, when he removed to Java Village, N. Y. He lived there for about twenty years, and then went with his oldest son to Warrenville, Ill., where he died at the advanced age of 94.

Alonzo Taylor, the fourth son of Joseph, started West on foot at the age of 18, accompanied by Selden Borden. He reached Wyoming Co., N. Y., as he writes, with but a sixpence in his pocket, and "went to work for a man to pay for an ax, (the first piece of property I ever owned,) and went to chopping." In 1850, he removed to Cook Co., Ill., and two years after to Carrol Co., of the same State, where he still resides. He remembers studying geography in "the old Clark School House," when the Mississippi River, which runs by his present farm, was the western boundary of the United States. He is a successful farmer on a large scale, raising 150 acres of wheat, and 100 acres of corn each year.

Joseph Whitney lived here about three years with his father-in-law.

Benjamin Thompson, Jr., settled here about 1830. He was a hard working, prudent man, and had by his industry paid for his farm and was in comfortable circumstances. By his connection with the Factory, (page 138,) he lost more than the whole value of his farm.

"Having a good constitution, he succeeded by persevering efforts, and the blessing of God, in paying for his farm a second time." By exposure and overwork his system became broken, so that "a severe cold terminated in a confirmed consumption." During his long sickness of more than two years, "he was brought to feel his need of salvation and found peace in believing. . . . 'It is this religion,' he often repeated, 'which disarms death of its terror, and enables me to rejoice in the hope of a glorious immortality.' Thus he continued to the last; and to human view, calmly fell asleep in Jesus."

In 1850 the town bought this farm, and Hartley Thurston was put in charge of it for one year. (Page 51.) Jesse Dart came here soon after and built the present house in 1858. In 1874 he removed to Keene.

George C. Hubbard came to this place from Marlow in 1874. He had previously lived in Sullivan and Surry, in both of which he served as Selectman, and represented Sullivan in the Legislature. He has served this town as Selectman and Superintending School Committee, has been County Commissioner for three years, and holds the office of Justice of the Peace and Quorum for the State.

Amos Huntley, Esq., the father-in-law of Mr. Hubbard, came here to live with his daughter. He came from New York to Marlow in 1805, at the age of 15, with only 42 cents in his pocket. He said he "wouldn't have given five cents for the whole town." By his diligence and upright character he gained property, and won a high position among his townsmen. He was a trusted business man, extensively employed to settle estates, and for County affairs. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church, and she was sister of the well-known Bishop Baker.

Other tenants: — Lewis A. Knight, Abram C. Wyman, and David Sawyer.

366. Original School House. (Page 130.)

160. JEHIEL HOLDRIDGE was probably from Connecticut. He is called of Gilsum in 1778, when he bought this Lot for £40. After living in a log house about two years, he built a plank house near this spot, where he lived till 1807, and removed to New York. He was Captain in the militia, and served the town as Moderator and Selectman. In 1806 he put up the frame for the present house, but sold before it was finished.

Benjamin Sawyer from Atkinson bought the place and finished off the house in 1807. Three years after, he swapped farms with his brother-in-law, and removed to Alstead.

True Webster came from Atkinson to Francestown, whence he removed to Alstead about 1796. In 1810, he came to this place, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was a man of strong will, not given to change. Many remember him as the last man in Gilsum who retained the old custom of wearing a queue. He was a member of the Congregational Church in Alstead.

Eliphalet K. Webster, son of the preceding, remained on this place till 1856, when he removed to Alstead, and afterwards to Walpole. He was one of the "Twelve Apostles." (Page 138.) He was Colonel in the militia, was Selectman three years, twice represented the town in the Legislature, and was commissioned Justice of the Peace.

An obituary notice says, "In his death the temperance cause lost a friend, the community a respected member, his children an affectionate father, and his wife a kind husband."

Henry M. Webster, a grandson of True, enlisted from Walpole and served three years in the 1st N. H. Cavalry, Troop I. He was in many battles, and was a prisoner five weeks at Belle Isle.

Kendall Nichols came from Stoddard to Gilsum about 1836, and worked in the Factory for Gerould and Thurston. He afterwards went into company with Gerould and Wetherby. He lived first at I. B. Loveland's, and then in various places till 1856, when he bought this farm, and has resided here ever since. George K. Nichols, his son, is a music teacher at Fort Edward, N. Y.

161. When Capt. Holdridge bought in 1778, there was a log house on this spot, where he lived about two years. It was built by a wood-chopper whose name has been forgotten.

162. House of Benjamin B. Beckwith in Alstead.

393. This house in the edge of Alstead was formerly occupied by David Holt, and at present by George Henry Temple.

163. JUSTUS CHAPIN came from Surry and built a log house on this spot in 1778, where he lived twenty-three years. He had a small still and made essences. His wife was somewhat noted as a skilful nurse and midwife.

164. JUSTUS CHAPIN built the house now standing here, in 1801.

Justus Chapin, Jr., lived here with his father till 1822, when he removed to Alstead (142,) where he died in 1869. He was Captain in the militia, and a Deacon in the Christian Church.

Joseph M. Chapin, brother of the preceding, has lived on this place since his birth. He is a man of literary tastes, and has been one of the most efficient supporters of Lyceums and Debating Societies. He was the last Adjutant of the 20th Regiment in the militia. He has served the town as Selectman, and has been three years in the Legislature. Allen Hayward lived here with Mr. Chapin several years.

165. ELISHA MACK built a log house here, about 1775. Old Mr. Plumley lived here a year or two and perhaps others.

166. SAMUEL WHITNEY came from Worcester, Mass., about 1780, and built a log house on this spot, where he lived about sixteen years.

167. SAMUEL WHITNEY built the house now standing here about 1796, and resided here till his death in 1831. He was one of the most respected citizens of the town. He served as Moderator four years, as Selectman fourteen, represented Gilsum and Surry in the Legislature three years, and was Justice of the Peace. When he came to Gilsun, all he had was a jack-knife and twenty-five cents in his jacket pocket. He hung his jacket on a bough, while he was at work clearing, and it got on fire and burned up. He paid for his place mainly by catching pigeons and raising fowls.

Daniel Whitney, son of Samuel, removed from Gilsun in the year 1819, and established himself in mercantile business near Camp Smith, two and a half miles from Green Bay, Wis. All this region was then a wilderness inhabited only by Indians, and he became one of the most efficient pioneers of civilization, exploring the Fox River to its source, and the Wisconsin from its rapids to the Mississippi. Many incidents might be related showing his intrepidity and indomitable perseverance. In the winter of 1822, he went on foot from Fort Snelling, on the St. Peter's River in Minnesota, (where he had been sutler for the U. S. troops,) to Detroit, with only an Indian for a companion, taking their provisions and bedding on a hand-sled. During the whole 1,000 miles they saw but one white man, and only two cabins. In crossing one of the many rivers, the ice was so poor as to alarm the Indian guide, and he refused to go on. Mr. Whitney crossed over and drew the sled. He then took a cudgel and compelled the Indian to lie down on the ice, when by the aid of a strong rope he drew him over in safety. Having established several trading posts on the Mississippi, his extensive business led him to traverse large unexplored sections of country on foot, in company with the many employes who transported his goods. Between 1825 and 1830, he built mills at Plover Portage, which was the first lumbering establishment on the Wisconsin river, and "probably the first on any tributary of the Mississippi." He also built a shot tower at Helena and inaugurated an extensive business at that place.

In 1828 or 1829, he laid out the town of Navarino since incorporated as Green Bay, and commenced building a city. By 1830, he had completed a wharf and spacious warehouse, a portion of a large Hotel, a School house and dwelling houses for his laborers. He afterwards continued to build, till he had erected eight or ten stores and a large number of dwelling houses. He also gave away many lots to laborers desiring to build homes for themselves. He contributed very largely towards the Episcopal Church edifice, which was "the first Protestant house of worship in the State."

Honest and upright in his dealings, he possessed the confidence of all who transacted business with him. The Stockbridge Indians, for whom he kept a supply store, had entire confidence in him, "as a strictly honest man, and a fair and liberal dealer," and to the time of his death regarded him as their "father and friend." "The poor, the unfortunate, and the afflicted, in his death lost a friend who never forgot them. Many is the time that such in their greatest want have found the needed supply in their door-way without ever knowing the hand that befriended them. Calmly he waited the approach of death, and spoke of it, as if he were expecting a friend to accompany him on a pleasant journey."—(Condensed from Green Bay Advocate.)

William Eveleth came here from Alstead about 1829 and remained seven years.

James Bolster removed here from Sullivan in 1836. In 1849 he went to the place now occupied by Mrs. Cram, (250,) and let out this farm. Jonathan Petts from Stoddard was here for a time, and some others.

Claudius B. Hayward learned the machinist's trade, and worked at the same for a couple of years at Lawrence, Mass. In 1851 he hired the Foster place in Sullivan, where he lived one year. He then lived on the old David Bill place west of the Village for two years. In 1854 he came to this place where he still resides.

387. Luther Whitney's Clothing Mill. (Page 138.)

168. Here Philip R. Howard had a Blacksmith's shop for a few years before his death.

169. Tenants here:—Philip R. Howard and Leonard J. Davis.

170. Orsamus Nash lived here for a time.

171. AMOS FRANKLIN KNIGHT came here from Alstead about 1855, and built all the houses in this settlement. He lived two or three years in this house, and then removed to Keene. He made persistent efforts to have a road built through this valley to Alstead. Special town meetings were held for this purpose, but without success. It being about the time of the Kansas troubles, this settlement acquired the nickname of "bleeding Kansas," which it retains to this day.

Harvey B. Miller after residing in various places settled here about 1864. He is somewhat noted for skill in hunting and trapping.

Other tenants:—George S. Howard, and John Howard.

172. Tenants here:—Horace H. Nash and John Howard; afterwards used for a shop.

173. Mr. Knight first lived here. Other tenants:—Philip Howard and his son Solomon, who moved it to 247.

174. James Hudson began putting up a house on this place in 1822, but before he had done much, sold it to MRS. SALLY (CLARK) CARPENTER for $70. She had her brother, Joseph Clark, finish off the house the next year. After about three years, she sold to Aaron Brigham for $200. She married Dea. John Burditt of Clinton, Mass., where she died.

The "Clinton Courant" says, "for half a century she had been a consistent professor of religion. . . . She was much esteemed and beloved, — was familiarly known as Aunt John to a whole generation. She had kept boarding house for many years, and was mourned by an unusually large number of acquaintances." Her husband, John Burditt, was a Baptist deacon, but became a strong second Adventist, and had Sunday meetings regularly in his house for many years.

Rufus Greene came to Gilsum in 1865, and after living in several places came here in 1869. In 1876, he removed to Alstead.

Henry Grant has since occupied the place with his wife's mother, now Mrs. Jonathan Howard, who came here from Marlow in 1878. Mr. Grant came to Gilsum from Rochester in 1866. He has been a seafaring man, and was three years in the naval service of the British East India Company, at the time of the great Sepoy rebellion. He afterwards served in the U. S. Navy, and in December, 1863, enlisted in the N. H. Heavy Artillery, Co. M, and remained till the close of the war.

Other tenants: — Aaron Brigham, uncle to David; Lemuel Bingham; Lyman Reed; Merit Winter; Joshua D. Crane; Solomon Smith; Capt. True Webster; and Ira D. Gates.

175. ISAAC LOVELAND built this house about 1826.

In 1830, Samuel White came here for a year or two. He was a currier and worked for Capt. Taylor. (Page 142.) After living in several places he removed to Walpole (?) about 1837.

Other tenants: — Elder E. B. Rollins; William Banks; Elder Bennett Palmer; Mrs. Anna Joslyn; Clement Stone; Elijah Mansfield; James Bates, a blacksmith, now residing at Winchester; Luke Houghton; and his son-in-law, Oren Jeffs, who died here.

381. Houghton's Blacksmith Shop.

344 Here are a few old apple trees just west of George C. Hubbard's sugar orchard. Tradition says there was a log house somewhere near this place, but the name of the man who built it is forgotten.

176. DAVID WARE after living eleven years in the old David Bill house (180,) built the house now standing here, in 1838. He was a strong friend of temperance, and was one of the Selectmen at the time when the question at issue was license or no license. (Page 91.) He served in that office four years, and one year in the Legislature.

The following account of Mr. Ware's father-in-law is taken mainly from an obituary notice.

Samuel Smith was a native of Goffstown. In April, 1775, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in the American army, for eight months. Like many others he literally left the plough in the furrow, to answer the call of his country. He was at Bunker Hill, under Gen. Stark, and remained in service near Boston during the summer. In July, 1776, he re-enlisted for five months, and went to Ticonderoga, where he suffered from the severe sickness which prevailed among the troops. In the spring of 1777, he enlisted for the war, in the Regiment that commenced the memorable battle of Stillwater. He passed the following winter amid the destitution and suffering at Valley Forge. Here a plan was discovered among Washington's Guard to destroy his life. The leaders were hung, the Guard disbanded, and a requisition was made upon the New England troops for men to form a new Guard. Mr. Smith was one of those selected. From this time he followed the fortunes of Washington, being on duty in his immediate vicinity, guarding his person, at all times, whether in his sleep, or in attendance on divine worship. The duties of this company did not often lead them to the field of battle, though occasionally they were called to the assistance of their fellow soldiers. They were present at the siege and capture of Yorktown, and from thence went to Newburg, N. Y., where they were disbanded, and returned to their homes in poverty. In 1789, Mr. Smith removed to Hartland, Vt., where he resided till 1829, when he came to live with his daughter at Gilsum. Here he died at the advanced age of 95. He used to relate many stories of his revolutionary experience, but they are mostly lost now. It is worthy of mention that, at the age of eighty he voluntarily abandoned ardent spirits and tobacco, after using them habitually for more than sixty years.

David S. Ware lived here with his father till 1855, when he removed to Butler, Ill. In his youth, he was one of the most active and efficient members of the Gilsum Lyceum, and Temperance Society. He served the town as Moderator and Selectman. He was specially interested in education, and held the office of Superintending Committee three years. He is a prominent citizen in the township where he resides.

Samuel B. Ware, youngest son of David, died here at the age of 21.

"He was a person of cultivated mind and unquestioned morals. Early in life he acquired a reputation that not even a breath of suspicion ever soiled. He became connected with the various reform movements of the day, and was ever found alive and active in every enterprise calculated to improve and bless. As a teacher he pursued his avocation with fidelity and success, as a member of the church he labored for its highest interests, and in his intercourse with mankind he has left an example worthy of all imitation."

George H. Towle lived here with his father-in-law about four years, when he returned to Newport, where he has served as Selectman.

George W. Newman bought this place in 1863. Beginning with nothing but his hands, by industry and good management he has acquired a large property, and has probably built more houses in Gilsun than any other man. He is well-known through the country as a dealer in lumber and farm produce. He is a radical temperance man, always active in debating societies, and is President of the Farmers' Club for 1880. He has served as Selectman and was commissioned as Justice of the Peace.

177. Here David Bill had a log house. (Page 54.)

178. ISAAC LOVELAND built this house not far from 1830, using part of his father's old house from 263, and has lived here ever since. He is a wheelwright by trade. In early life he spent some years in Canada. He has a remarkable memory, being able to repeat almost verbatim, sermons heard many years since. He has always been fond of stories and jokes, and has made many burlesque verses illustrating laughable incidents.

179. EDWARD WALDO built a house here about 1798, and removed to Alstead after four years.

180. DAVID BILL, brother of Maj. Bill, built a house on this spot, probably before 1800. He was a soldier in the Revolution. (Page 57.)

Israel K. Plumley lived here several years with Mr. Bill, and removed to Pennsylvania about 1824. James Locke came here in 1819, and after two years went to Pennsylvania. He was a gunsmith and silver-plater, and had a shop in Lemuel Bingham's house. "He was celebrated as a good shot with a long rifle."

Berzeleel Lord Mack lived here for a time, and at various other places. In 1827 he removed to Nashua, where he died in 1833, and his family returned to Gilsun. He was a successful school teacher, served the town as Moderator, and was Captain in the militia. Col. Oscar A. Mack (page 186,) was his son.

David Ware bought the place in 1827, and lived in this house eleven years. It was taken down in 1879.

Other residents:—Nathan Ellis, Jr., C. B. Hayward, Francis C. Howe, Harvey B. Miller, and Magloire Loisele.

181. ELIPHALET DART, afterwards of Surry, was probably the first settler on this place, and had a house near this spot. In 1803, his son Silas sold the place to Joseph Plumley for $200.

182. JOSEPH PLUMLEY built here, probably about 1805. His son Israel K. lived with him. Thomas Redding, Jr., followed Mr. Plumley, and his widow resided here some years after his death. James M. Mark bought the place in 1815, and lived here a short time.

183. JAMES M. MARK built here soon after 1815, and remained here till his death.

Luther W. Mark succeeded his father on this place. He served the town as Selectman.

Hans H. Mark remained here with his mother several years after his father's death. He now resides in Rockingham, Vt.

John Hammond and his son Aaron D. came here in 1871.

Other residents:—Jared L. Greene and Joshua D. Crane.

184. Here stood a log house, probably built by one of the Reddings. It is known that Amherst Hayward lived here in 1816. Other tenants are uncertain.

185. Philip R. Howard's Blacksmith's shop. (Page 142.) 373. School House. (Page 130.)

186. Isaac Loveland had a wheelwright shop near here, and in 1835 Benjamin Gerry built a Chair Shop on this spot. It was afterwards used as a turning shop by Dalphon L. Gibbs and others. Milan Towne used it for a Bobbin factory. (Page 47.) More recently it was finished into rooms and used for a tenement. Some of the tenants have been Jacob D. Nash, George F. Atwood now of Winchendon, Mass., John Laing, Lowell White, and Henry Beckwith.

187. WILLARD S. CADY from Langdon, came to Gilsun about 1847, and lived in several places. In 1850, he built a shop on this brook, and lived in it with his family two or three years. He now resides in Alstead.

188. ISAAC LOVELAND bought this place in 1819, and built the house on this spot.

Benjamin Gerry came here from Lowell, Mass., in the fall of 1835. Three years after, he removed to Nashua, where his widow is still living. They were members of the Congregational Church in Lowell, Mass.

Alpheus Chapin came here from Alstead in 1853. He followed teaming for some years, but having bought the Ballard place, has more recently turned his attention to farming.

Other residents : — Berzeleel L. Mack, Abram C. Wyman, Levi Gates, John Howard, Philip Howard, Alfred Beckwith, the widow Thompson now Mrs. Levi Barrett, Henry Morse, Henry A. Thompson, Samuel Bannister, Jacob H. Cornell, Henry Grant, James Welsh, James W. Russell, and Henry Beckwith.

189. The main body of this house was built by WILLIAM CAMPBELL in 1843.

James L. Wilson came to Gilsun in 1850 from Athol, Mass., and lived here several years. He built on the south ell, and afterwards moved the house from number 380, and added it to the north side.

Jacob D. Nash, after living in various places, bought this house and resided here five or six years. He afterwards removed to East Sullivan, and from there to Nelson.

The lower part of the house has been fitted up with a water-wheel, and used for various mechanical purposes.

Eugene P. Nash, son of Jacob, lived here for a time, and in various tenements. Ap. 9, 1864, he enlisted from Claremont in the First N. H. Cavalry, Troop C; was transferred to Troop M, and served till close of the war. He then enlisted in the regular army, and served three years in the 9th Regiment of U. S. Infantry.

Other residents : — Amos Weeks, Francois Cloutier, Eli Gosseau, Edward O'Keefe, Herbert D. Gates, John M. Hill, and Joseph S. Bingham.

190. This is the house built by Lemuel Bingham on the place next south. (192.) It was moved here in 1852. The widow Betsey Mack lived here some years with her son Byron Alexander. Josiah G. Rowell next occupied the place for two years.

George Henry McCoy came here in 1864. He is a mechanic, having a tray-shop under his house, and a blacksmith's shop close by. He keeps a livery stable, and raises fowls. He has served as Town Clerk ten years, and is Justice of the Peace.

191. Elder E. B. Rollins (page 122,) built this house about 1836. After putting up the first story he moved on the wheelwright shop from 381, for the second story, in which he had a small Hall for religious meetings, and other gatherings.

Edward Fay Rollins, son of Edward B., is a printer by trade, and published "The Winchendon Mirror" in 1851. He enlisted June 1, 1861, in the 13th Mass. Reg't Co. D, and was promoted through the several grades to First Lieutenant May 1, 1864, and mustered out the following August. He was with his Regiment in many battles, including Bull Run, Antietam, Gettysburg, and the Wilderness, and was acting Adjutant for a time. He now resides in Boston, Mass.

Abram C. Wyman from Rindge learned the trade of carpenter in Alstead, and came to Gilsun about 1810. After living in several places, he settled here about 1840, and remained till his death in 1866. He was a natural musician, and played the bass-viol.

N. C. Hayward

Other residents:—George K. Smith, a mechanic; Alvin A. Beckwith, a blacksmith, now of Drewsville; Charles W. Lyman; Edouard Guay; Edward O. Corey; Albert Bowen; Paul Langlois; and Lowell White.

192. LEMUEL BINGHAM built here in 1813. Ira Ellis of Sullivan dug the cellar after the frame was put up.

Luther Whitney came here in 1820, and remained about ten years. He was a clothier by trade. (Page 138.) He served the town six years as Selectman, was twice in the Legislature, and was Justice of the Peace. He removed to Massachusetts about 1830.

Jerome B. Aldrich, a wheelwright, came here about 1834, and remained six years. He built a shop near the brook back of the town house. He now resides in Boston, Mass.

Ambrose L. Farnam came here from Stoddard in 1836. Six years later he removed to Peterboro'. He served in the U. S. army at Portsmouth in 1812.

Davis H. Wilson, son of Joel, after living at various places settled here about 1848, and kept store in the north part. (Page 144.) He afterwards removed to the house now occupied by L. W. F. Mark, where he died in 1861.

Nahum O. Hayward resided in Boston when a young man, and was in the employ of Jesse Maynard in the bakery business for nine years. In 1846, he returned to Gilsun, and after living a few months with his father, settled here. In 1852 he had the old house removed to number 190, and built the house in which he still resides. He has been connected with the store for many years. (Page 143.) He is well known through the County as an auctioneer and dealer in lumber and cattle. He is frequently employed in the settlement of estates and similar business, and is a Director in the Five Cents Savings Bank of Keene. He owns a large amount of real estate, and has built several houses. He has served the town as Selectman four years, and is a Justice of the Peace.

Other residents:—Asa Cole, David Brigham, A. W. Kingsbury, Marvin Gates, Alfred Beckwith, Kimball Metcalf, Thomas Auty an Englishman, and William Cook.

193. LEMUEL BINGHAM built this house about 1814. He first lived in the house with Dea. Pease at the Lower Village, and after that on the Bond place. In 1813, he built where N. O. Hayward lives, and resided there for some time after building this house, in the east end of which he had a store. (Page 143.) In the lower part was a shop occupied by James Locke, a silver plater. After selling the other house, he remained here till 1832, when he went to where Henry Grant lives. The next year, he bought the "Plastered House," where he lived about eight years. In 1841, he came back to the village, and lived one year in the brick house, after which he returned to this house, where he resided for the most part till 1855, when he removed to Keene. He was well known throughout this and the neighboring Counties, as a publisher and dealer in Maps. He had a taste for the law, and acquired considerable legal knowledge. He held the office of Justice of the Peace for sixteen years, and transacted a good deal of business. In the war of 1812-5 he was employed to transport soldiers and Commissary Stores to Portsmouth. His son, Charles W., has a pass for him as Quartermaster, signed by "Nat Fisk," dated Sept. 21, 1814.

K. D. Webster (page 182,) bought the place in 1857. He built over and enlarged the house, where he still resides.

Other residents:—William Parker; Chilion Mack who had the Post Office here for a time; and Calvin C. Bingham.

194. About 1828 John Taylor built a two-story shop here for shoemaking and currying. George S. Howard lived in it for a time, also Philip R. Howard. About 1851, Nathan Ellis moved it back near the brook, and did a little blacksmithing in the lower part. (Page 142.)

195. JOHN BURROUGHS, JR., a blacksmith, came here from Alstead, and built a house near this place about 1821. He had a shop at first near Mrs. McCoy's, and afterwards on the brook above

Henry McCoy's. (Page 141.) After about five years, he sold to Thomas T. Chapin who built the shop now owned by Capt. Chandler, number 348, and employed men to do blacksmithing. After his death, (page 151,) Tower Spear, a blacksmith, lived here three years. Nathaniel Trask, a blacksmith, also lived here and employed Benjamin Eaton, Jr., 1818-9. Berzeleel L. Mack also lived here a short time.

Enoch B. Mayo, a blacksmith from Alstead, came here in 1831 and remained about seven years, when he removed to Nashua. Marvin Bigelow worked for him and lived in his house a year or two. After Mr. Mayo left, the house was occupied for a time by the widow of Ruel Ellis. William Cook married her daughter and lived here a year or two.

Nathan Ellis, Jr., bought the place and in 1851 built the house now standing here. Porter Cowee and perhaps others lived here for a time. John Cole, an industrious, prudent man after remaining single to the age of 63, married the widow Bolster, and lived on number 250, for three years. In 1863, he bought this house, and lived here for nine years. He now resides with his brother in Keene.

Capt. Chandler bought the place in 1873, and his son-in-law, A. D. Hammond, occupied it about a year.

Samuel W. Dart has resided here since 1876. He owns the mill number 223, (page 137,) and has a prosperous business. He is a member of the Baptist Church at Keene, and has served the town as Superintending School Committee.

196. Here was the Howard Hammer Shop. (Page 142.)

348. Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 141.)

351. Methodist Meeting House, now the Town House. (Pages 118, 160.)

197. JOHN TAYLOR bought this place for $38, and built the house here in 1827. He resided here eleven years, when he removed to Ogle Co., Illinois. He built a tannery on the brook northeast of his house, near number 199. He also carried on the shoe business, hiring hands who worked in the shop number 194. He and his family were active Methodists, and meetings were often held at his house. He served as Captain in the militia. George H. Taylor, his son, resides at Franklin Grove, Ill.,—owns a grain elevator, and is an extensive dealer in farm produce and machinery.

Eleazer M. Poor, a tanner from Nelson, settled here in 1838, but left in less than two years. He was afterwards in mercantile business at the West.

Osman McCoy came here in 1871, and his widow resides here still.

There have been many other owners and occupants of this place. Joseph Upton lived here with Capt. Taylor in 1833. Rev. Mr. Aspenwall owned the place for about two years. Charles W. Bingham owned it about seven years. Other residents:—Rev. John M. Blake, Rev. Joseph Hayes, Thomas Townsend, Lemuel Bingham, James Chapman, and Barton Cooke.

198. Capt. Taylor built this house in 1822.

Thaddeus H. Flint lived here a year or two. He came from Alstead as an apprentice to Luther Whitney, in 1816. After four years, he went to Billerica, Mass., to work at his trade. In 1826, he came back and worked for Mr. Whitney about a year, when he went into company with David Brigham and bought out Mr. Whitney. After three years, he went to Coventry, Vt. In 1834, he returned to Gilsum for a year or two, and then went to Keene, where he still resides.

Henry Flint, son of the preceding, enlisted from Keene in the 6th N. H. Reg't, Co. E, November, 1861. He was wounded at second Bull Run battle, and died of disease at the Georgetown General Hospital, Oct. 16, 1862.

Erastus Reed had this house for a time as a shoe-shop.

Other residents:—Luke Taylor, William Campbell, Francis Phillips, Thomas Auty, Thomas Townsend, George K. Smith, Barton Cooke, and Louisa Mark for the last ten years.

199. Sylvanus Hayward's Saw Mill. (Page 137.)

200. CHILION MACK built this house in 1832 and resided here four years, when he sold to

Amherst Heyward

Sarah F. Hayward.

A. W. Kingsbury, who still occupies it. Dea. Kingsbury first settled at his trade of shoemaking in Sullivan, but in 1835 removed to Gilsum, living that year in the Whitney house. (192.) In 1877 he was chosen Deacon of the Congregational Church.

Many tenants have occupied the chambers of this house. Harrison G. Howe lived here before Mr. Mack sold it. After selling, Mr. Mack lived a year in the chambers. In the winter of 1836-7 and two terms following the District School was held here. Sabbath meetings were also held here by the Christian Society. Other residents: — Jehiel P. Heudee, (page 122;) John Spaulding, (page 122;) Lyman Gerould; Franklin Bingham; David Converse; John C. Guillow; George W. Newman; Horace Carter; Calvin C. Bingham; Milton Silsby; Amos Weeks; John B. Odis; Allen Hayward; Charles P. Matthews a blacksmith, rem. to Nashua; F. A. Howard; Mrs. Whittemore; and Samuel L. Kingsbury.

382. Here Chilion Mack built a Wheelwright Shop about 1833. Carley Guillow lived in it several years, and Lemuel Bingham a short time.

201. In 1835, Amherst Hayward built this Shoe Shop for A. W. Kingsbury. He and his son Samuel L. still occupy it. The chambers have been used for a tenement.

Jonathan Hall came from Westmoreland, when a boy, and lived with Amherst Hayward. He had a taste for learning and entered Amherst College. For lack of means, however, he soon left. In 1835, having married, he lived in the chambers of this shop, and taught the first High School in Gilsum, that Fall, in the Vestry of the Congregational Meeting House. In the winter he taught District School. The next year he removed to Saratoga, N. Y. He is a machinist by trade, and afterwards went to Bridgeport, Conn., and was employed in the manufacture of Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machines. He is still residing there.

Other residents: — Eliza Bragg, (page 143;) E. S. Fish's daughters; Nancy and Orinda Smith; Charles W. Bingham; Walker Gassett, Jr.; George Porter; Richard Eagan, a Tannery workman; Alfred Hoyle; Ephraim Ashworth; George Henry Temple; and Alden Greene.

202. SILVANUS HAYWARD from Surry was the first settler here. He bought the west half of the 11th Lot, 6th Range, for £38, in April, 1791. It was then a thick, dark swamp and people laughed at his folly in selecting such a homestead. He afterwards bought a strip from the next Lot west, so that he owned all the village south of Dr. Webster's. He built a log house in 1791 very near the southwest corner of George B. Rawson's garden. Fourteen years after he built the house on the opposite page, on the spot where Mr. Rawson's house now stands. He moved into it in November, 1806. Having a taste for learning he managed to pick up sufficient education to enter Dartmouth College about 1780, being certainly a College mate, (and tradition says a class-mate?) of the notorious Stephen Burroughs. In his Junior year he found it impossible to keep on, his father being able to assist him but little. He received an honorable discharge from the College, written on parchment and signed by President Wheelock. He soon married and settled in Surry on the place where George A. Blake now resides. Here he lived for 8 or 9 years, when he removed to a lot of 60 acres which he had bought of Abner Bliss in the northwest part of Gilsum. He remained there only one year, when he sold to Elijah Bond and returned to Surry, but came back to Gilsum the next year and lived on the place now owned by Charles Eveleth, while clearing and building in what is now the village.

Having both a theoretical and practical acquaintance with the art of Surveying, he was extensively employed in that business. He was also a noted "school-master," teaching for many winters after he came to Gilsum. He also taught singing schools, and played the bass-viol in the choir for many years. He served the town as Moderator, and three years as Selectman.

He was tall and erect, very social, and especially fond of discussion, being ready to dispute with anybody upon almost any subject. He was a ready speaker, and often conducted religious meetings. His death was occasioned by being over-heated in fighting fire which caught in the woods from the "Sugar camp" south of the river. He lingered only a few months after the exertion.

Amherst Hayward was brought up by Col. Jonathan Smith who married his father's sister.

After his own marriage in 1811 he lived with Col. Smith in Rockingham, Vt., but in 1815 came to live in Gilsum. The first year he lived in the house with his father. The next year he lived just above the village, on the west of the road at the top of the hill below where John Hammond now lives. This was "the cold season" and food was very scarce. He managed to procure what it was necessary to buy, by peeling birch brooms at ninepence a piece. The next spring he went to the "Maynard place." The spring after his father's death he came to this place to live, where he spent his life.

By industry and prudent management he acquired a comfortable competence. "Diligent in business" he was also "fervent in spirit," and none who were acquainted with him doubted that the main purpose of his life was attained in "serving the Lord." He was a man of firm principles and sound judgment and his advice was often sought in business affairs. He served the town one year as Selectman. He was an earnest friend of Temperance, and was the first in town to raise a building without liquor. (Page 91.) He was also a decided anti-slavery man. He had considerable taste for public speaking and was active in Lyceums and the like. He was a natural musician, and played the bass-viol and led the choir most of the time for nearly fifty years. He was Deacon in the Congregational Church for over twenty years. No man in Gilsum has ever given so much for religious purposes both at home and abroad, as he. A short time before he died he said it was hard parting with the Church, and one of his last acts was to give them $500 towards buying a parsonage. "During his last sickness his faith never wavered. The promises were bright and sure. His hope was built upon a sure foundation, even the rock of ages. His end was peace."

Emily Graham Hayward, daughter of Amherst, received an Academic education at Meriden and New Ipswich. Being naturally of a kind and benevolent disposition, she was deeply interested in temperance and all enterprises to help the poor and suffering, and hence became a leader in the Soldiers' Aid Society. (Page 45.) A neighbor says, "She had a heart as large as Surry Mountain." "In the latter part of her life she abounded in labors for the spiritual welfare of others, and her latest breath was spent in entreating her friends to prepare to meet her in Heaven." She had a natural taste for music and drawing, and wrote many verses, some of which were published. (Appendix J.)

Horace Howard, son of Silvanus Hayward, early changed his name to correspond to the pronunciation then in almost universal use. He was a carpenter and joiner and learned the trade of millwright. After his marriage in 1812, he removed to Winchester where he resided about six years. He went to Ohio in 1818, where after a year of farming he worked at his trade and also in the manufacture of woollens. He was overseer in Cotton Mills at Cincinnati in 1832, at the time of the cholera visitation, with which he was attacked and barely escaped with his life. He kept Hotels in various places, and finally settled at Wooster, and was proprietor of the American House there for ten years. At 75 he retired from business, and died at Wooster, Ohio, at the advanced age of 82 years.

He was a man of great mechanical ingenuity and skill. As a landlord he was very popular. He had a remarkable memory, and could recite a large part of Burns's poems, as well as hymns and songs almost without number. He was very social and fond of story telling, and would entertain a company for hours, by reciting verses and telling stories. He was one of the earlier settlers of that region, and his memory was relied on to establish dates. His son, Harvey Howard, is a wealthy apothecary, and a leading citizen of Wooster.

George C. Hayward, son of Silvanus, left Gilsum in 1823 to learn the trade of shoemaking. In 1829 he removed to Honeoye Falls, N. Y., where he resided 16 years. He then removed to Dansville, N. Y., where he remained ten years. In 1857 he went to Landgrove, Vt., and remained two years. In 1860 he went to Cayuga Co., N. Y., where he remained till 1876, when he went to live with his daughter at Sherman, Mich. He has been a good musician, teaching singing schools for many years with good success. He is a spiritualist in belief, and has practised in later years as a healing medium.

George B. Rawson removed from Alstead to Gilsum, in 1850, and established the business of tanning, in which he is still engaged. He lived for some years in the house just east of the Tannery, but in 1870, bought the original Hayward place, and built a large house in which he still resides. He has been very successful in the accumulation of property. He has served the town as Selectman two years, and is at present one of the Supervisors of the Check List.

Monroe Brown, brother-in-law of George B. Rawson, came here from Canterbury in 1863, and remained four years, when he removed to Keene, and now resides in Winchester, Mass., — is a tanner by trade. He enlisted from Canterbury in the 15th N. H. Reg't, Co. G, — served nine months holding the office of Corporal, and was at the siege of Port Hudson under Gen. Banks. His brother, Cyrus Brown, resided here two years, and was employed in the tannery.

203. JEHIEL DAY came here from Keene and built the ell part of this house in 1829. In 1832 he built on the front part with the Hall, which was dedicated July 4, 1833. (Page 144.) He was a leading man in all public enterprises, was Colonel in the militia, served two years in the Legislature, and was Justice of the Peace. In 1837 he removed to Daysville, Ill.

Daniel Day, brother of the preceding, came here with him, and they were in company in business here for eight years. He lived in the house now occupied by Fanny Mark. (208.) He went with his brother to the place named from them, Daysville, Ill.

After the Days left, William Hayward resided here a year or two. In 1840, Capt. Dort (page 144,) came here, and remained till 1854.

Calvin Chandler of Alstead then bought the place. (Page 144.) He is known as Capt. Chandler, having served in that office in his native town. In 1864, he was appointed Town Clerk to fill out the unexpired term of Ezra Webster deceased. He has also served the town as Treasurer several years.

William Parker, a tailor by trade, came from England, and was here from 1834 to 1837. He removed to Stoddard and afterwards to Nashua, where he died at the age of 89. Hon. Wm. T. Parker of Merrimack is his son.

Byron James Mullins is a blacksmith who came to Gilsum in 1874, and resides here. He served the country in a N. Y. Regiment from June, 1864, to the end of the war. He was in the battle of Fort Fisher, and was slightly wounded in the shoulder.

Other residents:—George K. Smith; Porter Cowee; Cyrus Brown; Albert H. Wright from Londonderry, Vt.; and Timothy O'Leary a dyer in Collins's Factory.

204. This store and tenement above was built by Chilion Mack in 1828. He lived a while in the chambers, but sold out the next year to Jehiel and Daniel Day. The front chamber was used afterwards as a tailor's shop by Parker and Huntress, (page 143.) and still later by Loren Loveland as a shoemaker's shop. Other residents:—Rev. H. C. Henries, Dr. K. D. Webster, F. A. Howard, and George N. Hayward.

205. THERON HAYWARD built this house in 1876. He was the junior member of the firm of N. O. Hayward and Son. (Page 144.) In 1879 he sold to Daniel Smith, and removed to Keene, where he is clerk in the Citizens' Bank.

206. This house and store was built by George W. Newman in 1870. (Page 144.) I. B. Newman, his son, lived here a year or two, and removed to Langdon. Daniel W. Newman, another son, lived here about two years, and went into trade at Keene. Another son, George Elmore Newman, still resides here. He is a well-known trader in cattle, horses, lumber, and farm produce. Other tenants have been Lawrence A. Gravin and Franklin W. Roundy.

207. JOHN HENDEE bought this place in 1833 for $175, and built the "brick house" the next year. He is a carpenter by trade, and removed to Claremont in 1836. The number of families residing in this house has been large.

Harrison G. Howe, a woolen manufacturer, came to Gilsum in 1832, was in company with Dea. Brigham, and was the first tenant here.

Luke Taylor came from Sullivan about the same time, and lived here two years. He worked at awl-making with Solon Eaton, and removed to Springfield, Vt., where his widow still resides.

Charles T. Wetherby removed from Fitchburg, Mass., and settled in Walpole in 1831. In 1837 he went to Drewsville, in the north part of Walpole, where he remained five years. He was a woolen manufacturer by trade, and came to Gilsum in 1842, and carried on his business with Gerould and Nichols. In 1849 he removed to South Acworth where he was employed in the same business for two years. After residing a short time in Gilsum he removed to Lowell, Ohio, in 1852, where he remained till his death, nineteen years later. He was a man of firm principles and straight-forward character. His widow resides in Minnesota.

Solomon Dean lived here three years, while in the manufacturing business. (Page 139.) He removed to Newport where his widow still resides.

Franklin A. Rawson, son-in-law of Mr. Dean, lived here a short time and assisted his brother in the Tannery. In 1863, he removed to Newport where he still resides. He is engaged in the grocery business. He has served as Selectman and held other town offices, and is prominently active among the Odd Fellows.

Allen Hayward came from Acworth, when a young man, and worked for the Silsbys. He is a carpenter by trade. He lived many years with Joseph M. Chapin, but about 1868 came to this place. He has served the town four years as Selectman, and two years in the Legislature, and is one of the Supervisors of the Check List, under the revised Constitution.

Other residents:—Jehiel P. Hendee, (page 122;) Marvin Bigelow; Abijah Wetherbee; Rev. Henry White, (page 112;) Lemuel Bingham; Calvin C. Bingham; Franklin Bingham; Charles Parker; John Scribner now residing at Newport; Joshua Wedgewood a woolen manufacturer from Bethel, Vt., and his overseer, Stephen Russell, who returned to Bethel and was killed by falling from the roof of a building; John Carpenter; Henry Page; Mrs. Whittemore; Willard B. Tinker from Acworth; Lowell H. Stearns; Thomas Charnbury; and Thomas Charnbury, Jr.

208. DUDLEY SMITH built this house in 1833. He let it to various tenants for many years. In his old age he removed here from his farm, and remained till his death. Dea. Mark bought the place, and spent his last years here, leaving it to his daughter, Fanny Mark, who still resides here with her sister, Mrs. Nancy Hubbard.

The following sketch was received too late for insertion in its proper place. Rev. Aaron Russell Livermore was for a time in Amherst College; one year in Lane Seminary; graduated from the Theological Seminary at East Windsor, Conn., in 1839; was ordained and installed over the church at North Mansfield, Conn., Aug. 30, 1843, where he remained fifteen years; was installed pastor of the church in Goshen, Conn., Feb. 22, 1860, and remained eight years; was stated supply at Bozrahville, Conn., from 1870 to 1873, when he retired from the ministry on account of poor health, and is now residing at Fair Haven, Conn.

Rev. George Langdon resided here while in Gilsun. (Page 112.) The following items were received too late for insertion in their proper place. Mr. Langdon received his education in part at Yale College, but was obliged to leave on account of ill health. He graduated at East Windsor Theological Seminary in 1839. After preaching in Gilsun, he remained three years in Connecticut, and was ordained and installed as pastor at Downer's Grove, Ill., February, 1846, where he continued five years. He was next pastor at Crystal Lake, Ill., three years, and afterwards at Cincinnati, N. Y. In 1854 his health became so feeble that he was "obliged to desist from preaching altogether." He is now residing at Lakewood, N. J., and is able to preach occasionally.

Rev. James Tisdale lived here several years. (Page 113.)

James Tisdale, Jr., fitted for College in the Academy at New Salem, Mass., graduating there, at the head of his class, in 1854. Owing to a throat trouble he was forced to give up his studies. He afterwards engaged in mercantile pursuits at Tonica and Minonk, Ill., till the war broke out, when he enlisted in the 47th Illinois Regiment. He was commissioned First Lieutenant of Co. I. He served mainly in Missouri, was at the taking of Island No. 10, and suffered severely from exposure and hardships, so that he was obliged to resign on account of sickness in 1862. In the Spring of 1863, he resumed business in Minonk, but not succeeding to his mind, in the Fall of 1875, he took up a quarter of a section of government land in Austin, Kansas, where he still resides, unmarried. His mother is with him.

Eugene Tisdale, brother of the preceding, left Gilsun for Boston, Mass., and attended Chauncy Hall School for a time. In 1850 he became a clerk in the store of Kendall, Whitwell and Co., and remained there till the beginning of the war. In April, 1861, he enlisted in Co. B, 4th Battalion Mass. Volunteers. The same year he raised and recruited a Company for the 13th Regiment Conn. Volunteers at Hartford, and was commissioned Captain of Co. E, in which capacity he served till May 1, 1864, when he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel of the 1st Regiment, and was honorably discharged June 1, 1866. In May, 1867, he was appointed by Pres. Johnson

Ezra Webster

Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District of Louisiana, having his office at Monroe. He held this position till the close of Johnson's Administration, when he removed to New Orleans, La., where he still resides. He has held high offices in various Masonic bodies, and has received the 32d Degree, A. A. S. R.

Henry E. Hubbard, son of Ellsworth, lived here a year or two with his mother. He is a brick-mason by trade, and now resides in Keene. He enlisted in the 9th N. H. Regiment for three years, received a commission as First Lieutenant in Co. B, Jan. 1, 1864, and served till the close of the war. He was in the battles of South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and The Wilderness.

Other residents:—Daniel Day; Rev. William Hutchinson; Dr. K. D. Webster; John Livermore; Hervey E. Rawson; George Wardwell; Calvin W. Spooner; Henry Beckwith; John Laing; Henry Grant; Franklin W. Roundy; John M. Hill; and David Kenion.

350. Congregational Meeting House, built 1824. (Page 111.) The basement was used as a tenement for about fifteen years. Moses Fish and his sisters occupied it for a time. Abijah Wetherbee, now of Springfield, Vt., was the next tenant, and after him Jesse Temple lived here for several years.

209. BENJAMIN HOSMER, JR., bought this lot in 1832 for $80, and built the house in 1833-4. He died here in 1837. He was Major in the 20th Regiment of militia. The house was designed as a Factory Boarding House. Mrs. William Thomson kept boarders here several years. Mrs. Lucy Howes, sister of Rev. William Hutchinson, bought the place, and lived here three years.

In 1848, Ezra Webster bought and opened a tavern here. (Page 144.) He served the town as Clerk five years, as Representative two years, and was Justice of the Peace. He was Postmaster nearly sixteen years. His daughter is an accomplished teacher of Music, and resides with her mother in Keene.

After the death of Mr. Webster in 1864, Hervey E. Rawson bought the place, and remained here for nearly seven years.

Albert Hubbard, who had formerly kept tavern in Marlboro', came here from Alstead in 1871, and still resides here. In January, 1880, he let the place to L. Shaffner of Keene.

Other residents:—William Townsend, Dr. K. D. Webster, Luther Abbot, Henry W. Wakefield, Calvin C. Bingham, and John Little.

210. SOLON W. EATON built this house in 1832, lived in it a short time, and sold to Luther Abbot, who resided here several years.

George Learoyd bought the place in 1846, and still occupies it. He is a woolen manufacturer by trade. (Page 139.)

Other residents:—Samuel White; Harrison G. Howe; Joseph Clark; and Charles T. Townsend, better known as Thomas Townsend.

211. DAVIS H. WILSON and his son-in-law, EZRA WEBSTER, built this house and store in 1860. After Mr. Wilson's death, Mr. Webster removed to a farm in Alstead.

Luther W. F. Mark bought the place in 1864, and moved into it the next year, F. A. Howard having been a tenant here meanwhile. Mr. Mark was a photographer for some years previous. He has since kept a general country store here, and has been appointed Justice of the Peace. The Post Office was kept here during Mr. Howard's term of office.

212. DAVID BRIGHAM came from Alstead when a young man, about 1819, and learned the clothier's trade of Luther Whitney at the old shop on the brook near C. B. Hayward's. After the mill was moved he continued to work for Mr. Whitney, and afterwards bought the establishment in company with Thaddeus H. Flint. (Page 138.) He lived in the house that stood where N. O. Hayward now lives, till 1834, when he built on this spot, where he continued to reside till 1843, and then removed to Manchester. About 1862 he went to a farm in Auburn, where he died in 1867.

He was a man of agreeable qualities, which made him many friends. His pecuniary difficulties here turned some of his warmest friends into enemies for a time. But his reverses served in the end to show his Christian character : as in striking contrast to most men of the world, he reduced himself to absolute poverty, in the effort to meet the claims of his creditors. In 1829, he was chosen Deacon of the Congregational Church, and after removing to Manchester, was elected to the same office there. He served the town as Clerk and Selectman, and was ten years Justice of the Peace.

Rev. William Hutchinson lived here a year or two after Dea. Brigham left. (Page 112.)

Joseph Hutchinson, son of Rev. William, served three years in the 1st Regiment of Vermont Cavalry, and suffered much as a prisoner at Belle Isle. He is a farmer at Moretown, Vt.

Milton Silsby came from Acworth in 1844. He is a woolen manufacturer, and lived in this house five years. (Page 139.) He was one of the most liberal supporters of the Methodist Church, both in building their Meeting House, and in sustaining preaching. In 1852 he left Gilsum, and at present resides in Philadelphia. Joseph Huntoon, his father-in-law, lived here with him.

Rev. Ezra Adams bought this house in 1851, and resided here till his death in 1864. (Page 114.) The Adams family still own the house, and have occupied it till 1876. It has frequently been tenanted by two families.

John Little came here from Antrim in 1866 and remained three years. He was an overseer in the Tannery. He now resides in Waltham, Mass.

Other residents :— K. D. Webster, Rev. E. B. Bassett, Alden Green, Robert Cuthbert, Jr., Rev. Horace Wood, Thomas Charnbury, Jr., and Cyrus Judson Kingsbury.

213. HERBERT E. ADAMS fitted for college at Meriden, but was obliged to leave his studies on account of the death of his father. He was in the office of Dr. Brown at Hartford, Conn., a short time, after which he went into the business of tanning at Bondville, Vt., a year or two, and then returned to Gilsum. He built this house in 1876. He is now serving as Superintending School Committee for the third time.

Tenants :— Rev. Horace Wood, Gustave Polzer and John Laing.

214. Luther Abbot built a store adjoining the south side of his house in 1839. Mr. Learoyd had it moved to this spot and fitted up for a tenement. Since 1852, it has been occupied by Mrs. Jennett Hathorn.

215. This house was built by Calvin C. Bingham about 1850. Before it was finished he sold it to ROSWELL W. SILSEY, who lived here till he left town in 1852.

Hervey E. Rawson who was connected with his brother in the Tannery business then lived here for several years. George W. Tubbs followed him for a year or two, when Mr. Rawson returned and remained here till 1865 when he bought the hotel, which he occupied till 1871. He has since lived in various places. He has served the town three years as Clerk, and twice as Representative to the Legislature.

After Mr. Rawson, Charles Nash, Jr., resided here till about 1867, when it was sold to the firm of Gould, Cuthbert and Minor. John Gould is a woolen manufacturer especially skilled in buying wool. He came to Gilsum from Northfield, Vt., in 1867, and resided in this house. He carried on the manufacture of Flannels in company with Cuthbert and Minor for five years. In 1872, they dissolved partnership and he removed to Amesbury, Mass., where he still resides. He was Town Clerk for one year.

Francis C. Minor removed to Gilsum from Northfield, Vt., and carries on the flannel business in the firm of Cuthbert and Minor. In September, 1862, he enlisted in the 15th Vt. Regiment, Co. C, and served nine months. In November, 1878, he was chosen to represent Gilsum and Sullivan for two years in the Legislature.

Frank L. Minor, son of Francis C., died in early manhood. An obituary notice says: "It is with grief we chronicle the death of one of our model young men, beloved by all who knew him."

216. This house was originally a blacksmith's shop built by Chilion Mack. (Page 141.) Capt. Dort first moved it, and used it a short time for a shop, near where Capt. Chandler's shop now stands. About 1843, Mrs. Sarah G. Sumner had it moved to this spot and fitted up for a house, where she lived till 1875. After her death Frances A. Beckwith bought the place, where she lives with her mother.

217. LUTHER ABBOT came to Gilsum in 1828, and built the house on this spot that summer. He lived here till 1835, and then was three years in "the burnt house." In 1838, he went to the house now owned by George Learoyd, and remained seven years. He lived one year in the Hotel and then removed to Stoddard. He first established the Starch Factory, and afterwards did custom carding. (Pages 140, 144.) He was also in the mercantile business about seven years. (Page 144.) He served the town seven years as Moderator, and as Clerk and Selectman two years each.

John Fletcher, a woolen manufacturer, came to Gilsum in 1833, and lived about a year in this house. He afterwards lived in the Boarding House, and in 1836 removed to Massachusetts. Charles T. Townsend (best known as Thomas Townsend,) was here several years. He is a woolen manufacturer and was in company with George Learoyd. (Page 139.) He removed to Peterboro' and afterwards to Milton Mills.

Other residents:—John Townsend, Robert Cuthbert, F. C. Minor, Harvey B. Miller, Mrs. Wheelock, and Horace H. Nash. The house is now used as a store room.

218. This house was built but not finished at 220, by Wright, Cornell, and Lyman in 1866.

ROBERT CUTHBERT lived in it two years, on the old spot; but the falling of earth and stone from the bank above, sometimes with force enough to break the windows, led him to move the house to this place in 1869. Mr. Cuthbert emigrated from Scotland, landing in New York, Sept. 3, 1852. He is a woolen manufacturer and resided in Andover and Lawrence, Mass., and Quechee, Vt., before coming to Gilsum in 1867.

219. Granite Mill. (Page 139.)

220. On this spot the Cuthbert house first stood. (See 218.) It is now occupied by a waste house.

221. JOSEPH UPTON came from Dunstable, Mass., about 1832, and was the first resident in the house just built here by Luther Abbot. Mr. Upton hired Mr. Abbot's mill, and with John Fletcher as a partner engaged in the manufacture of colored flannels. Owing to poor sales, the company failed in 1835, and Mr. Upton removed to Watertown, N. Y. He afterwards went to Munsonville, N. Y., and thence to Clarksburg, Canada, where he still resides, and continues in the woolen manufacture. His younger brother, Peter Upton, then about 16 years of age, came to Gilsum to work for him, and left a little before he did. In 1836, he entered a store at New Ipswich as clerk, and the next year was employed in the same capacity in the store of Hiram Duncan at East Jaffrey, whose daughter he afterwards married. He became an equal partner in the business in 1840. Soon after this, Mr. Duncan died, and he continued the mercantile business with good success, till on the starting of a bank in that village he was chosen cashier which position he still holds. He is highly esteemed and trusted by his fellow citizens, having represented the town for three successive years in the Legislature.

Mr. Abbot, the owner of the house, lived here about three years, a part of the time with Mr. Upton and Mr. Townsend.

Joseph Townsend emigrated from England in 1824. He was a woolen manufacturer, and worked in several places in Massachusetts till November, 1835, when he came to Gilsum, and hired the Flannel Mill for five years. He lived here till 1839, when he returned to Massachusetts.

James Townsend, son of Joseph, sailed from Southampton, England, and arrived at Philadelphia in September, 1820. He is a woolen manufacturer by trade, and resided at Framingham, Mass., till 1826. In 1827 he put in operation the Troy Woolen Manufactory at Troy, N. Y. Two years later he started a Woolen Mill at North Brookfield, Mass. Afterwards was dyer and finisher in Flannel Mills at Lowell, Andover, and North Dighton, Mass. In 1836, he followed his father to Gilsum, and the next year removed to Marlboro' where he has carried on the woolen manufacture ever since. He is a member of the Congregational Church there. This house was burned in 1841. (Page 47.)

222. JONATHAN TWINING removed from Townsend, Mass., to Gilsum in 1819, and lived for a time on the Grimes place, and after that in various tenements. About 1826, he concluded to build his house, and went to work framing the timber in Dea. Pease's mill-yard. When asked where he was going to put it, he answered "out doors." Owning no land, he set it on this unoccupied spot near the road, the owner making no objections. Here he remained till 1832, when he removed to Shrewsbury, Vt. Very few men have so remarkable personal appearance as he, having very short legs with unusual length of body. He was "a character" not easily described. His business was teaming, taking produce to Boston, and bringing back merchandise in return. Being always in needy circumstances his team was noted for the harnesses mended with withes and strings. From this circumstance he acquired the sobriquet of "Twisty Twining" or "Twiney" as it was usually pronounced. He was a member of the Christian Church, and though of limited education had a remarkable gift of language, and preached a good deal, especially in Brookfield, Sherburne, and vicinity, in Vermont. His mind became so impaired in his old age, that it was necessary to remove him to the asylum at Brattleboro', Vt., where he died at the age of 74.

372. Abbot's Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 142.)

224. Rice and Rawson's Tannery. (Page 140.)

225. George W. Newman built this house in 1877, and his son, C. DUDLEY NEWMAN, has occupied it till the present time. He learned the trade of blacksmith and carried on the business of carriage-making a year or two. He is extensively engaged in raising fowls, rabbits, and other pets. Paul Langlois lives in the house with Mr. Newman.

347. Newman's Wheelwright and Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 142.) The heliotype opposite represents the buildings on numbers 206, 225, and 347.

226. CHARLES W. BINGHAM, after living in various tenements, built this house in 1869. (Page 151.) In digging the cellar he found a vein of very fine sand, valuable for polishing purposes. He is a mechanic, turning his hand readily to almost any kind of work with tools; has taught singing schools, and is Justice of the Peace. He is also a frequent correspondent of several newspapers.

349. C. W. Bingham's work-shop.

227. FRANCIS ASHLEY HOWARD, after living in various places, built this house in 1865. He is a carpenter, and was for some years in the lumber business. He was also in trade with N. O. Hayward for six years. He is Justice of the Peace, and was Postmaster for twelve years. He has served the town as Moderator, Selectman, and Superintending School Committee, and was Representative to the Legislature one year. He was a successful school teacher for many years, and is one of the strong supporters of the Temperance cause.

THE HOTEL AND CHURCH, ST. LOUIS, MO.

228. GEORGE W. NEWMAN built and settled here in 1845, and remained till 1849.

Roswell W. Silsby, a woolen manufacturer from Acworth, lived here for a time. In 1852, he left Gilsun, and is now engaged in the carpenters' trade at Claremont.

Wesley Austin came here from Marlow and was overseer in the tannery several years. In 1878, he removed to Keene.

Adolphe C. F. Laurent of French descent came from Canada to Gilsun in 1865. He is an overseer in the tannery, and resides here. He was educated for a priest, and can write the English language more correctly than many of our native born citizens.

Other residents : — George B. Rawson about twenty years, Alden Green, Henry Morse, Magloire Loiselle, and Gustave Polzer.

229. A. J. HOWARD built here in 1874. He came to Gilsun from Marlow when a young man, and has lived in various places. In early life he was converted under preaching of Elder Rollins. Having a natural gift for public speaking, and being zealous in the cause of religion, he was encouraged by his brethren to enter the ministry. He was ordained by Elders Abner Hall, O. J. Waite, and Jonathan Farnham Oct. 23, 1851, and joined the Merrimack Christian Conference. He preached in this and the neighboring towns some six or seven years. He has always been a strong friend of Total Abstinence. Having joined the Congregational Church, he was chosen Deacon in 1876. He was a successful school teacher for some years, and has served the town two years as Superintending School Committee.

230. GEORGE W. NEWMAN built this house in 1849, and resided here till 1863.

George S. G. Porter having resided for a time in Harrisville and Wilmot, returned to Gilsun in 1863, and lived in this house three years. He then removed to Lempster and died there.

Josiah G. Rowell, an overseer in the Tannery, was here a year or two, and removed to Claremont. He is now living on a farm in Cornish.

Alden Green was from Stoddard, worked in the Tannery, and lived here about five years. He is a very earnest worker in the Temperance cause, and a devoted Seventh Day Adventist. He now resides in Norfolk, Conn.

This house was designed for two families and has had many occupants, among whom were Stephen L. Parker, boss-finisher for the Silsbys, and James S. Carpenter who worked in Collins's Factory.

In 1869, it was purchased by the Congregational Church, and has since been occupied as a parsonage, by Revs. Horace Wood and Silvanus Hayward.

231. This house was built in 1868, by F. A. Howard and Allen Hayward. It now belongs to the Tannery Company.

PETER LAPHAM was the first resident here. He is of French descent and came from Canada in 1855. After living eleven years in Shrewsbury, Mass., he came to Gilsun, and was employed in the Tannery. In 1872 he set up business in Keene in company with Hervey E. Rawson. After two or three years the business was abandoned, and he still resides in Keene.

Valire Langlois of French descent came to Gilsun from Canada in 1869. Since 1872 he has occupied this house, and is employed in the Tannery.

232. This house was built by C. B. Hayward in 1868.

Albert R. Corey, the present occupant, is a shoemaker by trade, now employed in the Tannery. He came from Lempster to Gilsun in 1866, and has lived in various places. He served two years in the war, in the 1st N. H. Heavy Artillery, Co. B.

Other residents : — Francis C. Minor; William H. Coy; John Coy; George A. Stevens, a blacksmith from Surry; Julius A. Pletzer, now of Stoddard; J. Q. Pickering; Byron Alexander; and David Y. Kenion.

233. The ell and wood-shed from Amherst Hayward's house was moved here by N. O. Hayward, and fitted up for a dwelling, in 1870. George N. Hayward lived here six years. In 1877 Mrs. Hattie D. Pierce bought it and built on a kitchen. In 1878 she removed to Lawrence, Mass., and the place has since been occupied by the widow Stevens. Other residents : — Franklin W. Roundy and Gustave Polzer.

234. MRS. SARAH F. HAYWARD had this house built for her in 1869, and still resides here with her daughter and sister. Few persons have so familiar acquaintance with the Bible as she.

235. GEORGE N. HAYWARD built this house in 1876.

Tenants in the chambers:—Frederic Bowker, and Charles Hubbard.

236. GEORGE BARRETT built here in 1872. Seven years later he removed to Keene. The place is now owned by Solomon Mack.

Other residents:—A. F. C. Laurent, Louis Bourrett, Willard S. Tinker, Hervey E. Rawson, and Robert Polzer.

237. This house was built by N. O. Hayward in 1872. Tenants have been Frank L. Webster, Mrs. E. F. Downing, Eugene P. Nash, Joseph S. Bingham, Lawrence A. Gravin, James A. Nichols, Herbert E. Gates, John M. Hill, and Frederic Bowker.

238. EUGENE CARPENTER, a blacksmith, came to Gilsum from Surry in 1877. In 1879 he built this house, where he resides.

346. Blacksmith's Shop. (Page 142.)

CHAPTER XXXVII.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER SEVEN.

239. LEVI BARRETT built this house in 1867, and still resides here.

Tenants:—Rev. James Fitch, Mrs. Mary Mark, Eugene Carpenter, and Thomas Charnbury.

240. WILLIAM CAMPBELL came to Gilsum about 1831, and engaged in the awl business. He built this house in 1837. In 1847 he removed to Peterboro'. Having been converted to Mormonism, he started with his family for Salt Lake. He and his wife died of cholera at St. Louis, Mo., and his children were taken in charge and educated by the Free Masons, to which order he belonged.

Three sisters, Mrs. Hathhorn, Mrs. Miller, and Deborah Kidder, lived here about two years, worked in the Factory, and took boarders.

Stephen Collins, a woolen manufacturer, emigrated from Dublin, Ireland, in 1830, and settled in Worcester Co., Mass. In 1867, he began business here with his sons. (Page 140.) By industry and skill he has been successful in acquiring considerable property, and in 1872 left the business to his sons.

John S. Collins, son of Stephen, resides here and manages the Factory with much success. He enlisted in the U. S. Navy December, 1863, and served nine months on board the war steamer Neptune. He is fond of reading, and has served the town two years in the Legislature.

Michael Collins, brother of the preceding, was in business here seven years, and is now engaged in extensive manufacturing at Dracut, Mass. He served four months under Col. Devens in the 3d Battalion Mass. Rifles.

Other residents:—Solon W. Eaton; Rufus Guillow; Kimball Metcalf; Kendall Nichols; Ebenezer Jones; Edwin Birkenshaw, an Englishman, who went to Ashuelot; and Michael Wall.

241. SOLOMON MACK built this house about 1835, and took factory boarders for a year or two.

John Thurston removed from Fitchburg, Mass., to Walpole, where he engaged in farming.

Ebenezer Jones

In 1836, he came to Gilsum and entered into company with his brother-in-law, Lyman Gerould, in the woolen manufacture, and died here in 1838.

William Harnden was here five years. He was an Englishman employed in the Factory.

John C. Guillow came here in 1847; and, with the exception of three or four years, has lived here till the present. He has served the town three years as Selectman.

Other residents: — David M. Smith, Calvin C. Bingham, Stephen L. Parker, and Henry Morse.

242. SOLON W. EATON built this house about 1833. He came here from Sullivan in 1831, lived in several places and carried on the awl business. (Page 144.) He sold this house with his mill, and it has belonged to the Factory Company ever since.

Lyman Gerould came to Gilsum from Williamsburg, Mass., in 1835, and was in company with his brother-in-law, John Thurston, in the manufacture of woolens. He continued in the same business, either as partner or employe till 1850, when he removed to Cavendish, Vt. He is now engaged in mercantile business in Kasson, Minn. His two sons are Superintendents of Gas Works, one in Newton, Mass.; the other in Cairo, Ill.

Among the tenants here have been the following: — Kendall Nichols, George H. Temple, Alfred Hoyle, John Bahan, John Brennan, John Collins, Michael Dynan, Frank L. Webster, B. H. Horton, Thomas McEvoy, and Michael McCaffery.

243. This house, which is the Factory Boarding House, was the original mill put up by Solon Eaton. It was moved here and made over by Gerould and Wetherby in 1845, and has had many tenants.

Harvey Towne came from Stoddard in the Spring of 1855 and kept the Boarding House a year and a half, when he returned to Stoddard. He now resides in Marlow village.

In 1852, Butler A. Whittemore came here from Hancock and resided a little over two years. He then went to Dublin and afterwards to Marlow where he died. His widow and his mother returned to Gilsum in 1863. His widow afterwards married J. S. Partridge and resides in Alstead. His mother, after living in several places in Gilsum, removed to Claremont, where she lives with a daughter.

Ebenezer Jones, having received a common school education, served an apprenticeship of three years with Amasa Whitney, a Clothier at Winchendon, Mass. In 1825 he went into company with Henry Gray, and bought a Clothing Mill at Acworth. After seven years he went to South Antrim for one year. He then bought a Mill in Wilton, where he was quite successful, but lost all through the failure of his partner in 1836. He then went back to Acworth, where with the assistance of "six good farmers" he started business again. In the great financial crash of 1842, he was again reduced to poverty, but after a hard struggle succeeded in paying off the farmers and had the Mill in his own hands. He sold out in 1847, and the next year came to Gilsum, and was connected with Gerould and Wetherby in the woolen manufacture. In 1849 he went into company with K. D. Webster in the village store, which they managed for seven years, with good success. In 1850 he bought the Factory where he continued the woolen business, at the same time furnishing stock for the Silsbys. During this seven years he probably carried on a larger business than any other resident of Gilsum, before or since. In 1857 he sold to the Wards, and after traveling for a year, established business in the "Brick Store" at Harrisville. After two years he opened also a Clothing Store at Peterboro' to which place he removed. In 1865, he retired to "a small Village Farm," where he died at the age of 75. While at Winchendon, he united with the Congregational Church during an extensive revival. At South Acworth he joined the Methodists, and was steward and class-leader both there and at Gilsum. He represented Gilsum in the Legislature of 1855, and was appointed Justice of the Peace. In his later years was a Director of the Savings Bank at Peterboro'.

Charles Stearns Faulkner, son of Francis, of the firm "Faulkner and Colony," Keene, came to Gilsu in 1841, and rented the mill of Gerould and Nichols. He carried on the manufacture of flannels for about a year and a half, and had 15 to 20 thousand dollars of annual business. He was then a single man. In 1843 he returned to Keene where he settled in business with his father, and died in 1879. "He received an academic education in the schools of Keene and Walpole. In 1871 he visited Europe, where he spent two years. At the time of his death he was a director of the Cheshire National Bank, and a trustee of the Cheshire Provident Institution. He was for two terms a Representative in the Legislature of the State. He was a prominent and liberal member of the Unitarian Society in Keene, and a leader in business circles."

Other residents:— Francis Phillips, Kendall Nichols, John Carpenter, John R. Willard, Michael Bowen, William Barr, George B. Fiske, Mrs. Eugene Nash, and Silvanus Guillo.

244. In 1846, John C. Guillo removed a small hammer shop built by George S. Howard between the road and the canal, to this spot, fitted it up for a house and occupied it one year. Various factory hands have since lived here. In 1873, a small shanty temporarily occupied by George Barrett, near number 236, was moved here and fitted up for the west part of this house. Daniel Hickey lived here till 1879, when he removed to Connecticut, and George B. Fiske now occupies it.

245. Collins's Mill. (Page 140.)

345. LUCIUS R. GUILLO built this house in 1865. In 1878, he built the shop on the other side of the road. He is a carpenter by trade, and is now serving his third year as Selectman.

374. School House. (Page 131.)

246. ROSWELL NASH moved the wheelwright shop from A. W. Kingsbury's garden. (382,) and made it into a house on this spot. After three years he sold to Henry Grant who lived here a year or two. A Frenchman named Edward Coté was here a short time. Franklin W. Roundy hired the place one year. In 1870 James Chapman bought it and remained three years, when he sold to Martin Bates the present occupant.

247. SOLOMON M. HOWARD about 1856 removed the house from "Kansas" (173,) and rebuilt on this spot. After ten years, he sold to Varnum Polley, the present resident.

248. JOHN DORT from Surry settled here about 1787. In 1820, he went to Bainbridge, Penn. Obadiah Pease lived here several years. He was a noted school-master, and was appointed Justice of the Peace. He served the town as Moderator, and eight years as Clerk.

Daniel Winchester came here from Westmoreland in 1836, and remained about five years, when he removed to Pomfret, Vt., and afterwards to Springfield, Vt. He served as a soldier in the war of 1812. He was an elder in the Christian Church and preached here and in Vermont for many years. His daughter says, "A grander man in the noble simplicity of truth and goodness never lived."

Alfred Beckwith, a machinist, lived here a year or two, and removed to Stoddard.

Chilion Mack came to this place in 1840. He spent several years in the mines of California, where he had a varied experience. He is a wheelwright by trade, but has spent most of his life at farming. He was the first Postmaster in Gilsu, and held the office fourteen years.

Other residents:— James Kingsbury, Antipas Maynard, Merit Winter, Joseph Thompson, Solomon Mack, and Walker Gassett.

249. ELISHA CLARK bought the south half of the 14th Lot, 6th Range, of Stephen Bond in January, 1781. He came from Worcester, Mass., at the same time with Squire Whitney who bought the north half of the same lot. He probably built a log house near this spot and resided here about three years when he sold to Samuel Clark of Worcester, Mass. This Samuel Clark removed to Gilsu in 1784 and lived on this place, which he sold in 1786 to Jonathan and Joseph Clark who were probably his sons.

Jonathan Clark built the present house in 1791, and remained here till his death in 1830. It is remembered that Rev. Levi Lankton of Alstead preached at his funeral from Job 5: 26.

Joseph Clark, a carpenter, lived here after his father's death. About 1837, he removed to Vermont, and afterwards to Raymondsville, N. Y. He was Captain in the "Troopers."

Hartley Thurston removed from Alstead to this place in March, 1840. In June, 1854, he went to Manchester, Wis., where he engaged in farming. In May, 1868, he again removed, finding a home in Berlin, Wis. While on a visit at his brother's in Alstead, Feb. 13, 1880, he died instantly of heart disease.

He was a man of scholarly tastes and more than ordinary natural ability. With a common school and Academy education obtained in his native town, he became noted as a successful teacher, having begun at the early age of sixteen, and followed the profession for more than thirty years. His services were in such demand, that terms of schools were frequently fixed early or late as might be necessary for his accommodation. He taught forty-six terms of school about equally divided between Alstead and Gilsum. His wife was also an accomplished teacher, and first cousin to the celebrated Horace Greeley. He has been always an active, enterprising citizen, especially prominent in educational matters. He served as Superintending School Committee for ten years in Alstead, and three years in Gilsum. In Manchester he served in the same office, and also as Town Clerk several years.

His only son, Andrew Jackson Thurston, died in the U. S. army at Nashville, Tenn., at the age of 29. "He was an excellent young man, and his death cast a deep gloom over his family, and a large circle of friends."

Arnold B. Hutchinson, brother of Rev. William, resided here about two years. He is now living at Portsmouth.

A. J. Howard bought this place which he still owns, and lived here about fifteen years.

Other residents: — Asa Cole, Lyman Petts, Simon Wheeler, George A. Stevens, John Pletzner, William Chapin, Joseph Herrmann, and Silvanus Guilow.

360. Here Hartley Thurston built a small house about the year 1849 for John H. A. Young who married Edna Beckwith and lived here two years. They went to join the Mormons and died on the way to Utah. This house was moved to the village by James L. Wilcox and is the north ell of Jacob Nash's house. (189.)

367. Second School House in District number Two. (Page 130.)

250. POLLY CLARK had this house built in 1829. About three years after she married John U. Weeks, an Englishman, who remained here six years, and removed to Vermont. (Page 153.)

There have been many residents here, among whom are the following: — Isaac Wallis; James Bolster; John Cole; George K. Smith; John Graham an Englishman, who removed to Harrisville; Jacob D. Nash; George S. Howard; Alonzo B. Cook; Rev. Henry Archibald, (Page 120); Horace Howard; George H. Temple; William H. Coy; James W. Russell; James Chapman; and Mrs. Charlotte Cram.

251. CHARLES NASH moved a house to this spot, from 255, about 1826, and lived here fifteen years. He then lived a year or two at Newman's mill, (277,) and in 1844 removed to Sullivan, where John Locke now lives. He died at Niagara, N. Y., in 1878.

William Banks, a shoemaker, (page 142,) came from Marlboro' to Gilsum in 1820. He lived first at the lower village, and in 1828 went to the Dr. Hosmer place for ten years. In 1841, he came here, and has a shop across the road. He was brought up by his uncle William Banks who died here. He has served the town as Selectman.

Elmer D. Banks lives here with his father, and is now serving for the second time as Selectman.

252. Here Daniel Converse built a log house in 1795, and lived here fifteen years.

253. Here Daniel Converse had a temporary hut or shanty while building his log house.

254. DANIEL CONVERSE of Swanzev bought 60 acres here in December, 1794, for £40. The next Spring he came bringing a cow, a yoke of oxen and a pig, and found shelter in a sort of hut built against a large rock. (253.) The first night the dog barked constantly, and in the morning they found a path trod where a bear had walked back and forth trying to get the pig. Mr. Converse went to work clearing and built a log house near the present bar-way. (252.) In 1810, he built a house on this spot, where he resided till his death in 1852. He was for some years Deacon in the Baptist Church at Sullivan.

Daniel Converse, Jr., lived with his father till 1826, when he removed to Sherburne, Vt.

David Converse lived with his father a few years, and in 1844 removed to Alstead. He was Captain in the militia.

Abram Converse, the youngest son, continued to reside here till his death, which occurred just eight days before his father's. The widow soon moved away, and now resides with her sister in Surry.

Henry Howard lived here a year or two and the place has not been occupied since.

255. SAMUEL NASH built a house on this spot about 1816. He sold it to his brother Charles, who moved it to 251.

256. On this place, in Alstead, lived Barney Hill, half-brother to Dea. Converse.

257. JAMES BALLARD built the house now standing here, not far from 1800. He was Selectman in 1794. Luther Ballard, adopted son of James, lived here till about 1824, when he removed to Nashua.

Marvin Gates lived here five years after his marriage in 1831. He then went to the Bond place four years, and after that lived in various places, till he removed to Alstead in 1849.

Heman Gates came here from Putney, Vt., in 1855, remained about two years, and removed to Alstead. He was well-known as a very zealous Mormon.

Other residents:—Antipas Maynard, Merit Winter, Solomon Mack, Wm. F. Cummings, Luke Parkhurst, Joseph N. Taft of Richmond, Francois Bellisle, and Joseph W. Pierce now of Keene.

258. JAMES BALLARD built a log house here, probably about 1792. In 1804, it was used as a school house, and Polly Whitney taught there that year. Capt. Solomon Mack lived in it the next year, while building his house. David Clark and perhaps some others, also lived here.

259. DAVID THOMPSON from Alstead built a log house here about 1789, and lived here nearly fifteen years.

Joseph Razor came here about 1803, and remained a few years. He was a shoemaker, and returned to Walpole.

260. JOSEPH PLUMLEY built a log house here, probably about 1788, having lived before that on number 165, and also in Alstead. He afterwards moved to the place now occupied by John Hammond.

Solomon Mack, Jr., came here in 1796, and built the house now standing in 1805. His father lived here with him for some years. He was Captain in the militia, and served the town as Selectman.

Solomon Mack, 3d, lived here for a time with his father, and still occupies the old homestead. He was the last of the Captains under the militia law, and now, although far past the prime of life, he is exceedingly fond of the martial sound of life and drum, and still retains the spirit and witty geniality of his youthful days. He has been for many years an ardent and indefatigable worker in the Total Abstinence cause.

Merrill E. Mack, son of Solomon, Jr., removed to Pecatonic, Ill., in 1839, and died there in 1844. The local paper says of him:—

"In his death we lose one of our best citizens. As a christian, he was sincere; as a husband and father, all that we would seek in that sacred relation; as a citizen, honorable and upright in all his acts and dealings; as a neighbor, just and obliging; as a friend, steadfast and true. If indeed 'the memory of the just is blessed,' long and fondly will the remembrance of him be cherished. If 'the just should live,' then is he in the full enjoyment of that immortal reward, the anticipation of which soothed him on a bed of sickness and death, and sweetened the last moments of his existence."

261. JAMES CHAPMAN built this house in 1877.

262. CHARLES H. NICHOLS built this house and settled here in 1878. He had formerly been a merchant at Fitchburg, Mass., and he and his wife are members of the Rollstone Church in that city.

Solomon Mack

Israel B. Louland

263. ISRAEL LOVELAND, JR., built a house on this spot about 1800, and resided here till his death. He enlisted in the Revolutionary army, when under age, and served five months near Lake George.

264. JOHN CHAPPEL of Hebron, Conn., bought the east half of the 11th Lot, 6th Range, of Berzeleel Mack for £20 in October, 1785. He built a log house on this spot and lived here till 1794, when he sold to Israel Loveland. (Page 165.)

In January, 1795, Israel Loveland, Jr., came to this house and lived a short time before he bought the east part of his farm.

378. ANANIAS TUBBS had a log house on this spot. He was a brother of Abishai Tubbs of Marlow, and served in the Revolution. (Page 38.) About 1796, Israel Loveland, Jr., bought the place and lived here four or five years.

265. ISRAEL B. LOVELAND lived with his father on number 263 till about 1830, when he built this house, where his widow still resides. He was one of the early friends of Temperance, and a valuable citizen. He served the town as Selectman five years, and as Clerk twenty-two years. The records furnish lasting evidence of his peculiar fitness for that office. He was also Justice of the Peace.

Sidney Barrett bought the farm and lived here two years, when he removed to Sullivan.

Other residents : — Kendall Nichols, Samuel Bruce a tin-peddler from Lempster, and Gustave Polzer.

266. BENJAMIN H. HORTON built this house in 1877. He is Town Clerk the present year.

267. BENJAMIN COREY built this house in 1876, and still resides here.

268. Willard S. Cady put up the house on this spot about 1852, but did not finish it. TRUMAN BILL bought it and resided here till his death in 1860. His brother Otis lived here with him several years. John Bahan came to Gilsun in 1869, and lived here two years. After five years at Harrisville he returned to Gilsun, and now lives near the Loveland Bridge. (242.) He served nearly three years in the 14th N. H. Reg't, Co. G.

Charles E. Crouch and his family lived here till 1877. Lawrence A. Gravlin bought the place and settled here in 1879.

Other residents : — Joseph S. Bingham, and John Pletznier.

269. This was the shop number 194, and was moved here for OTIS BILL about 1861. He was crippled by an accident when a school-boy, and was helpless for many years. He died here in 1878.

Daniel Carley Guillow was a shoemaker, and after living in many places, came here to take care of Mr. Bill, and died here in 1876. John L. Foss next came here, and died in 1879. Byron Alexander now occupies the place.

270. LUTHER HEMENWAY came from Boylston, Mass., and settled in Sullivan in 1818, removed to Gilsun in 1830, and built this house in 1832. When he came, this was a thick alder swamp, and his daughter says, when she lived in Sullivan, she was always afraid to go by here, and "thought Gilsun was an awful place."

Mr. Hemenway was an ingenious mechanic, and in 1826 patented an awl handle. These handles had a large sale, and the principle involved is still in use. He and his wife were members of the Baptist Church in Sullivan, but under the influence of Elder Rollins joined the Christian Church in Gilsun. Having much zeal and a natural gift for public speaking, he became a preacher, and was ordained in his own house about 1835. The house was unfinished, and some of the partitions were taken down to accommodate the gathering. He preached in the vicinity, as opportunity offered, mostly in school-houses, and baptized many converts. When asked how he succeeded in a certain field that seemed very discouraging, he answered, "It is easy enough converting them, but the trouble is they won't stay converted." He was interested in "every good word and work," and especially zealous in the cause of temperance. (Page 96.) He lived to great age, and none could doubt the sincerity of his piety towards God, and good-will towards men. His descendants are numerous.

Luther S. Hemenway lived with his father and in the shop till 1844, when he removed to Daysville, Ill., and having become a Mormon went to Utah in 1847, where he still resides.

Artemas P. Hemenway resided here with his father several years. In 1852, he removed to Springfield, Mass., and was employed in the United States Arsenal, and afterwards by a private firm in the manufacture of arms. In 1875 his health was suddenly destroyed by "inhaling the oxide from red-hot lead with which he was experimenting in the interest of the firm in whose employ he had for years held an important position." He retired to a small farm in Douglas, Mass., where he died in 1879, at the age of sixty.

A brother writes:—"My brother, so full of life, how could he ever become old, and his enlivening song forever cease? In his gayest moments he would out rival the bob-o-link in love-time. Art. could put fitting words to the warbler's song, and the bird gallantly acknowledged his rival. Can his voice forever cease, and his intellect fade, and the light of it forever slumber, like the everlasting rocks? Let us hope not, but that he has a happy change to a life of greater enjoyment, and is now with kindred that passed before."

His friend, J. B. Sneed of Fitchburg, Mass., writes:—"I first met him in 1841, and our acquaintance rapidly ripened into a friendship that has continued uninterrupted; and when separated, a letter correspondence was maintained up to within a short time before his departure for the 'Beautiful land by the spoiler untrod.'"

"In all moral questions, he was ever on the side of right, and dearly as he prized the approbation of his friends, could not compromise conscience for any consideration. Deeply religious in his mental and moral constitution, he was far too progressive to be shackled by any system of creeds. He was an enthusiastic worker in the cause of temperance, in which field he did efficient service early and late, not only in the word spoken 'in the right time and in the right place,' but in the singing—as only he could sing—the most stirring temperance songs." (Page 94.)

"In the social circle his presence was ample security against dullness. While he was generous—the mere worldling would say 'to a fault'—he had too sacred a regard for the right in all things, to indulge his generosity at another's expense."

"He had a very receptive mind, grasping the truth at a glance, as by intuition. He was scrupulously honest, and open as the day.

'I trow that countenance cannot lie,
Whose thoughts are legible in the eye.'

In a close acquaintance of nearly forty years, I never saw in him the least prevarication; to dissemble was for him impossible."

"In politics, from his first vote to his last, he was for true Democracy, in the highest and best sense of the term. In the Fremont campaign, he was an indefatigable worker, and the political songs of that time were sung by him with 'telling effect.'"

"The combination of his highly religious and affectional nature constituted his most prominent characteristic. Up to the time of the failure of his health, at about fifty-six years of age, he had all the vivacity and buoyancy of youth; and though cut off in the midst of his years and usefulness, he had really lived a hundred years, if measured by the standard of average manhood. He did nothing at halves; for him to touch a subject was to lay hold of it."

"I can hardly refrain from giving the first stanza of a hymn that was an especial favorite with my dear Artemas, which he often sang, and with an unction, always repeating the last two lines of each stanza.

'Ye objects of sense, and enjoyments of time,
Which oft have delighted my heart,
I soon shall exchange you for joys more sublime,
For joys that will never depart.'"

"Alas!—

'That I should have to say I knew him,
And have not in possession still.'"

E. Perley Hemenway, son of Artemas P., was a graduate of the High School at Springfield, Mass., in 1867, and of the Scientific Department of Dartmouth College in 1870. He was then employed for a year in machinery drafting for Smith and Wesson at Springfield, Mass. The next year he went to Hartford, Conn., and engaged in drafting for the Connecticut Valley Railroad, and afterwards became their chief assistant engineer. He was employed one winter in the "State evening drafting schools." at Springfield, Mass., and had charge of the same schools for two winters at Northampton, Mass. The care of his father, during the first part of his protracted sickness, withdrew him from business for about two years. Since October, 1878, he has been Mechanical Engineer for the Washburn and Moen Manufacturing Co. of Worcester, Mass., and employed principally in drafting and conducting experiments.*

George W. Taylor, a grandson of Elder Hemenway, has resided here since 1872.

271. This was built for an awl shop by Elder Hemenway in 1830, and he lived in it two years before building the house.

David M. Smith, son-in-law of Elder Hemenway, lived here several years, and removed to Springfield, Vt. He was sent one year to the Legislature, and received the appointment of Justice of the Peace.

Charles H. Cummings was a son of Elder Charles Cummings of Sullivan, (page 120.) and lived here about three years. He served the town two years as Moderator.

Other residents:—Luther S. Hemenway; Artemas P. Hemenway; Joseph B. Smead, now of Fitchburg, Mass.; Lorenzo Rice from Woodstock, Vt.; Alexander Brown; Lorenzo Derby; George O. Dow; John E. Dow; Joseph S. Bingham; and John H. Boody, the present occupant.

272. Joseph Foster's mill. (Page 144.)

273. JACOB D. NASH moved this house from the hill near the old Guillow place, (294,) and lived here a few years.

Henry C. Lawton was here in 1865, and died here. In January, 1864, he enlisted from Acworth in Troop L of the 1st N. H. Cavalry, and served till the close of the war. He was reported missing at the battle of Winchester, but was "gained from missing," and promoted from Corporal to Sergeant, Ap. 30, 1865.

Simoon A. Mason from Keene bought this place in 1870. Seven years after he went to Marlow and let it to Daniel Nevers, who remained a year or two. Solomon M. Howard is the tenant at the present time.

274. BENJAMIN THOMPSON came from Alstead and settled here about 1798. When a boy he lost his right hand in a "corn mill," but could labor successfully at all kinds of farm-work. He was a man of great zeal and enthusiasm in religion and whatever else he engaged in. John Thompson lived here with his father till his death in 1840. (Page 151.)

Levi Barrett came here from Stoddard in 1841, and remained till 1867, when he removed to the village.

James L. Bates came from Keene in 1839, and hired the Squire Hammond place. After living in various places, fourteen years of the time in Sullivan, he settled here in 1871, and remained till 1879, when he removed to Acworth.

275. WARREN FARRINGTON, a house painter, built a log house on this spot. He afterwards built on number 280, and still later lived in the old Fuller house.

David Nash afterwards lived here. He and Philip R. Howard were married the same evening in Philip Howard's log house.

276. Here was a log house, with oiled paper in the windows instead of glass. Whether built by Philip Howard is uncertain, but he is the first resident now remembered here.

Michael Murphy, an Irishman, lived here a year or two, about 1847, and removed to Alstead.

277. ORLANDO MACK built this house in 1831. In the Spring of 1839, he removed to Illinois, and the next year settled in Butler, Montgomery County, where he spent his life.

He was a man of more than average energy and perseverance in business and achieved considerable success. He was known as a public-spirited citizen, having at heart the progress of the community and county in which he lived. He showed this spirit, not only in educational and religious matters, but took a great interest in all improvements calculated to benefit his neighbors, such as the establishment of mills, public roads, and was ever ready to help forward all public enterprises. His immediate neighbors feel that they have lost a kind and obliging neighbor and friend, the community a good man, and the county an honest, upright citizen. In all the relations of life he performed every part and every duty that devolved upon him faithfully and well. A good man full of years, an estimable citizen is gone. His death has left a void that cannot easily be filled. — Local paper.

* This sketch belongs in Chapter 31, but was received too late for insertion there.

Jesse Hemenway came from Marlboro' about 1837 and remained till 1842, when he swapped the place for a farm in New York to which he removed. Charles Nash took the place a few years. In 1848 Mason Guillow settled here and remained fourteen years.

Other residents : — Levi Gates, Jacob D. Nash, Charles Osgood, Joseph S. Bingham, Horace Howard, and Leander Pratt.

278. OTIS G. ISHAM built this house in 1856, where he died four years after. Daniel W. Bates has resided here for several years.

Other residents : — J. Dana Wyman, Francis C. Howe, Ariel Carpenter, Joseph N. Taft, William Smith, George Wright, William F. Bruce, James Bates, and Henry Grant.

368. Newman's Saw Mill. (Page 137.)

279. MRS. HARRIET H. DEETS built here in 1865. She was a woman of marked peculiarities, and was formerly well-known as a peddler of children's books and trinkets, at Worcester, Mass. After her death, her son George occupied it a year or two. Joseph S. Bingham was here a short time. In 1879 Francis F. Bates bought and settled here.

280. WARREN FARRINGTON built this house and lived in it a year, when it was only boarded up at one end. Esek T. Green from Taunton, Mass., lived here a short time.

Thomas Howard from Marlow settled here about 1836, and remained here till his death in 1857. In his later years he was very zealous and ready to speak in the cause of temperance and religion. His son, A. J. Howard, lived here with him several years.

Lyman G. Pierce came here in 1865, and resided here till 1878. He has been a sea-faring man, and has visited many parts of the world. He is very peculiar, and at times insane. He now resides at Worcester, Mass.

Clement Uriah Bates came here in 1878, and has bought the place. In April, 1864, he enlisted from Bradford in the 1st N. H. Cavalry, Troop B. and served till the close of the war. A fortnight before mustering out, he was promoted to Corporal.

281. LEVI NASH built a log house on this spot about 1815, and lived here many years.

282. ANANIAS TUBBS built a log house on this spot, probably about 1796. In 1798 Dudley Smith came here and lived about two years.

283. DUDLEY SMITH built a house on this spot about 1800, and lived here about six years.

Antipas Maynard removed from Bolton, Mass., and settled in Sullivan about 1797. Five years after, he came to Gilsum, and lived on this place about fourteen years. He lived afterwards on different farms till 1828, when he removed to Keene.

He was "highly esteemed as a citizen and a christian man." His wife "was an estimable lady and even in her advanced years was cheerful and made sunshine wherever she was." Lambert Maynard, their oldest son, was for many years proprietor of the New England House, Boston, Mass. Jesse Maynard, another son, a baker by trade, resided in Boston, Mass., many years, where he was a member of the Common Council, and now resides in Worcester, Mass.

Amberst Hayward lived here in 1817, and it was here N. O. Hayward was born.

William Hayward lived here about 1832. He afterwards lived in the house now occupied by Capt. Chandler, and at some other places. He removed to Manchester, and afterwards to Lawrence, Mass., working at his trade of machinist. He lived a short time with his brother George on a farm at Landgrove, Vt. He next went to Bridgeport, Conn., where he was employed for many years in the manufacture of Wheeler and Wilson's sewing machines. Becoming infirm with age, he returned to Gilsuim, where he still resides. He has been a very social man, and extremely radical in his views. He was a zealous follower of Garrison, and even left the church for a time on account of his anti-slavery zeal.

Other tenants : — John Bingham, Jr., Selden Borden, David Clark, and Joseph Clyde.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

RESIDENTS IN DISTRICT NUMBER FIVE.

284. JOHN GRIMES came from Maine about 1806 and lived on the Asa Nash place several years. He went to Roxbury in 1820, where he remained ten years. He then returned to Gilsuim, and after living a short time on the place south of Edouard Loiseille's (155,) he removed to this place where he built a house. Several of his children were notoriously non compotes.

Josiah Grimes continued here after his father's death till 1859, when he removed to Stoddard and afterwards to Marlow. About 1870, he went to Westmoreland, where he was killed by the falling of a bank under which he was at work. He was well-known for many years as an essence peddler, and was frequently called Dr. Grimes. His manner of speech sometimes tempted would-be wits to make sport of him, but he generally got the better of his assailants.

Perry H. Waldron, of Indian descent, removed from Dighton, Mass., in 1858, and came from Stoddard to this place in 1860. In 1863, the house built by Mr. Grimes was burned, and Mr. Waldron immediately built what is now the ell part of the house. Two years later, he built the rest of the house. In 1867, he removed to Nelson. Hiram N. Davis lived here with his father-in-law a year or two. James L. Bates was here a year or two. Jotham A. Bates settled here about 1870, and still occupies the place.

285. BROOKS HUDSON came from Connecticut with the Kilburns and went with Capt. Kilburn to the war. After the war, he settled on this place, where he died about 1800.

A family tradition says that at one time he was on guard over a fine peach orchard. Gen. Washington came along and asked him about the peaches, and took some to eat, and told him to eat. While they were eating, Arnold went by in flight. They saw him, but didn't mistrust who it was. He was near enough to have shot him, had they known. Gen. Washington was then on his way to the fort to look after Arnold's management there.

James Hudson lived here after his father's death till about 1833, when he removed to Surry, and about 1836 to Vermont. He was a preacher in the Christian Church.

Joseph Clyde, a carpenter, came from Hancock in 1827, and lived here two years, when he went to the Maynard place for a year. He next removed to Alstead, and then to Marlow.

Other residents : — Samuel Clark and Jonathan Twining.

286. This house was built in 1876 for James Davis and has not been occupied since his death.

287. JOSHUA ISHAM, of Bolton, Conn., (called "Isom" in the deed,) bought the east half of the 14th Lot, 8th Range, for £18, of Silvanus Hayward, Ap. 22, 1794. He probably began clearing about that time, and having built a log house came here with his bride in 1798. About 1800, he settled on the place where George H. Carpenter now lives, and in 1815 went to Alstead.

James F. Isham learned the trade of watchmaker and carried on the business at East Alstead. He was appointed Post Master under President Tyler in 1841, and held the office till his death in 1874. "He was for 45 years a deacon in the Congregational Church, beloved and respected by all, as an upright man and a devoted Christian."

Solomon Smith settled here about 1803. He was from Draent, Mass., and remained here about five years, when he returned to Massachusetts. In 1839, he came back to Gilsum, and lived where Henry Grant now does, where he died in 1859, aged 89.

384. On this spot appears to have been a log cabin. In searching records, I find that in October, 1789, Oliver Holman of Brookfield, Mass., sold this place for £35 to "Prince Gun, a Black Man." In the Census of 1786 "One Black" is reported. (Page 146.) Putting these facts together, it seems probable that Prince Gun, after having been in Gilsum for a few years, had saved a little money, and bought this place, and settled here. Nothing is known of him.

288. ELISHA PENDELL settled here before the Revolution, and in 1779 was one of the Selectmen. In some old deeds this place is mentioned as "the Pendell lot." In 1785, Irene Pendell, probably his widow, sold the place for £50. She was then of Montague, Mass.

Luther Holmes settled here about 1798, and the place is still called the Holmes lot.

After Mr. Holmes, a Mr. Whitcomb, the father of Mrs. Luther Ballard, is said to have lived here a short time, and the place has since remained vacant.

289. This house was built in 1848 by Charles Nash for his son, GEORGE H. NASH, who resided here four years and removed to Swanzey.

Charles Nash, Jr., was here a short time with his brother George, and then lived in the village. In 1867 he removed to Iowa.

Other residents: — Cyrus R. Bliss, Lucius L. Goodenough, Gleneira J. Guillo, Solomon M. Howard, and Leander Pratt.

290. This house was built about 1851 for CYRUS R. BLISS who lived here twelve years and removed to Massachusetts.

William H. Bates has lived here since 1870. He enlisted from Bradford, April, 1864, in the 1st N. H. Cavalry, Troop B, but soon left on account of sickness.

Other residents: — Amasa Barron, and J. William Bates.

369. N. O. Hayward's Saw Mill. (Page 137.)

291. SILAS DAVIS was brought up by John Nash and built this house about 1830. His uncle afterwards gave him a small farm in the edge of Sullivan, where he built a log house on number 299, and went there to live about 1841.

Other residents: — David Nash, Alonzo Cook, George Bates, B. F. Jeffs, and Lucius Davis the present occupant. (Page 44.)

292. PAUL FARNSWORTH came from Surry about 1799 and built a log house on this lot, probably a few rods east of this spot, in which he lived a few years. After him Daniel Nash was here a while.

John Guillo, of Italian descent, came from Gill, Mass., about 1806, and two years later settled on this place. In 1829, he built the house now here. He studied medicine with Dr. Palmer, (page 181,) and bought some of his books. He also attended some medical lectures, but never took a degree. He was known as Dr. Guillo, but never practiced much. His descendants are numerous.

Other residents: — Francis F. Bates, B. F. Nevers, Warren Howard, Joseph Dupies, and Luther Guillo.

293. JOHN NASH settled here in 1796. He lived here forty years, and having no children, left the place to his nephew, Cyrus Bliss, who remained here till his death in 1872. The well on this place is probably the deepest in town, and was dug for Mr. Nash by Silvannus Hayward. Alfred Bolton, brother-in-law of Mr. Nash, lived with him a few years, and returned to Taunton, Mass., in 1817. Jacob D. Nash lived here about a year.

294. JACOB D. NASH built a house here in 1851, and afterwards removed it to number 273.

295. Asa Nash built a log house here in 1809, where he lived about fifteen years. He afterwards built the house now standing, which has been occupied by various tenants, including the following: — Joseph Jolly and B. F. Nevers.

297. DAVID DEAN, a blacksmith from Taunton, Mass., settled here about 1801. He made board nails and edge tools.

296. DAVID DEAN, JR., built this house and resided here for many years.

Other residents: — Samuel Frost, Warren Farrington, J. Wm. Bates, and Harvey Bates the present occupant.

298. Here a man named Howe lived for some years, and one or two of his children were buried near by.

299. Here Silas Davis had a log house in Sullivan.

300. SAMUEL COREY came from Tewksbury, Mass., and bought this place of Ezra Loomis in 1781. While building a house, he boarded at Dea. Bond's. About that time he went on foot to Billerica, Mass., and brought home two dozen panes of glass on his back. His brothers Joshua and William settled near him in what is now Sullivan.

Benjamin Corey followed his father on this place, and built the house now standing, in 1823. In 1876 he removed to number 267 where he still resides.

Woodbury Corey, grandson of Benjamin, has lived on the old place since 1873.

301. SAMUEL DERBY was a cooper from Rehoboth, Mass., and settled here about 1795.

Samuel Lawrence came here from Swanzey in 1802. He moved an old school house from Sullivan and lived in it about three years. He returned to Swanzey and was drowned there. His brother, Isaac Lawrence, lived here with him in 1803.

John Grimes came here about 1806 and lived a year or two.

302. DANIEL STEELE married Samuel Derby's daughter and lived here from 1797 to 1803.

388 and 389. All that is known of these places is, that a Boynton lived on one, and a Rich on the other.

303. JOHN GRIMES bought this place in 1807, and built a log house, where he lived about twelve years.

Asa Nash settled here in 1824, and built the house now standing. He was for many years the leading man of this part of the town, and called himself "king of the hill." He joined the Christian Church, and was ordained Deacon by Elder Hemenway.

Sylvester Nash, son of Asa, still occupies the place, which he carries on with remarkable success, considering that he has but one leg. (Page 153.) His brother Joel lives with him.

304. The house on this spot was a shop built on number 370.

John Barron moved it here about 1850 and lived in it ten years, when he removed to Stoddard, where he still resides.

Harvey Bates next occupied it till 1873 when Adelbert Nash bought it and still lives here.

376. School House. (Page 131.)

305. ELIJAH DERBY, possibly a brother of Samuel, built a log house near this spot.

In 1799, Maturin Guillow from Gill, Mass., bought the place. He built the house now standing, soon after.

Asa Bradford Nash, son of Dea. Asa, is the present owner.

371. A. B. Nash's Grist Mill. (Page 136.)

306. JOHN DAVIS built a log house here in 1811 and lived in it six years.

307. JOHN DAVIS came with his mother from Shutesbury, Mass., in 1794, and lived for seventeen years on the "Eaton place" in the edge of Sullivan. In 1817 he built the house on this spot. He built the stone chimney himself, and hewed and framed the timber with a common ax. He still lives here at the age of 87, being the oldest man in town.

Lewis Davis, son of John, resided in Royalston, Mass., and afterwards in Underhill, Vt. In 1865 he returned to Gilsun and lives here with his father. Hiram H. Davis, his son, served three years in a Vermont Regiment, and was sun-struck. Another son, Willard Milan, died of wounds received in the battle of Cedar Creek, Va.

308. Levi Nash had a log house here. 375. Old Log School House. (Page 131.)

309. JAMES DAVIS built a log house here about 1797. The present house was built by James Morse about 1850. George W. Bates settled here about 1856.

Other residents :— John Barron, James L. Bates, Levi Nash, Gardner Nash, and Cyrus R. Bliss.

310. Levi Nash had a log house here. 311. Here Daniel Nash had a log house.

312. Thomas Powell had a hut here beside a great rock, about 1801-5.

313. JAMES DAVIS built a log house here in 1843. This was the last log house built in Gilsu. The road then went near the river. About three years after, the shop from number 370 was moved here and fitted up for a house. Jotham Bates lived here a while, also Charles E. Crouch.

314. LINUS NASH built a house on this spot about 1834. In 1839 he moved it to number 315.

315. Josiah Guillo. came here in 1849, and lived in this house about five years. It was afterwards moved and is now Adelbert Nash's barn, number 304.

316. JOSIAH GUILLOW built this house in 1854 and has resided here ever since. He has served the town as Selectman.

317. Martin Comstock settled here and built a house about 1856.

370. This was a turning mill built by Jacob and Linus Nash. (Page 145.) While standing here, it was used for a tenement and occupied by Harvey B. Miller, Willard S. Cady, and perhaps others.

379. ORSAMUS NASH built a house in 1859 and lived here about two years. (Page 44.)

318. J. PHILANDER NASH built this house about 1847. He served nine months in the 12th Vt. Regiment, Co. A, and was in the battle of Gettysburg. He now resides in Walpole.

Other residents :— James W. Due, Amos Nash uow Amos Wilbur, Charles E. Crouch, Gilbert Guillo, Henry Howard, and Mrs. Lucetta Cook.

319. EZRA HOWARD moved a blacksmith's shop from Marlow to this spot, and made it into a house in 1871. In 1877 he went to the Raymond place in Marlow, number 341.

320. EPHRAIM HOWARD built this house in 1870, and in 1878 Lucius M. Miller removed here.

321. ZEBEDEE WHITTEMORE from Marlow built a log house on this spot in 1822. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and his wife is remembered as "a very neat woman." His son, Prentiss Whittemore, and his son-in-law, Samuel Flagg Bryant, lived here with him. In 1826 they returned to Marlow.

392. Old Downing place in Marlow.

322. IRA EMERSON COMSTOCK built this house in 1854. He lived here eight years and removed to Sullivan.

Other residents :— Amasa Barron, B. F. Nevers, and Ephraim Howard.

323. WILLIAM E. COMSTOCK came from Sullivan in 1823, and built a small house near this spot. In 1849, he built the present house, where he died in 1876.

Other residents :— B. F. Nevers, Luther Guillo, and L. Milan Miller.

324. Near this spot was the hut where "Dilly Wolf" lived a year or two. (Page 47.)

325. DANIEL NASH had a log house here for several years.

326-7-8. JAMES DAVIS built these three houses, in which he and his mother lived at different times.

329. PHILIP HOWARD lived here a few years.

330. CHARLES NASH had a house here a short time.

Lydia Smith of Taunton, Mass., married Abram Nash and removed to Shutesbury, Mass. About 1794, she moved with seven children to Sullivan. In June of that year she bought of James Grimes of Swanze. what is known as the Eaton place. She was said to be of Indian descent and was the mother of all the families of the Nash name both here and at Chesterfield.

331. JAMES NASH, her oldest son, bought 84 acres in the 13th and 14th Lots of the 10th Range, of Ananias Tubbs for $150, in August, 1797. He built a house on this spot where he spent his life. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and his grand-daughter, Mrs. Rhoda Brown of Saxon-ville, Mass., has his powder horn, also a six dollar continental bill that he had. He set out the white-oak, and chestnut, and willow now growing here. His wife, Matilda Waters of Tannton, Mass., was the one afterwards murdered. (Page 152.) All that remain in Gilsum of the Nash name are his descendants.

332. CYRUS BLISS built a house on this spot, where he lived for many years.

333. CYRUS BLISS built a log house here about 1823.

334. DANIEL NASH settled here about 1818, and remained here till his death in 1830.

335. This is the house of Daniel H. Corey in the edge of Sullivan.

336. This is also in Sullivan, and is where Curtis Nourse lived for many years.

337. NATHAN WOODCOCK came to Gilsum from Swanzey in 1811, and lived for a short time in the Blood house. He built a log house on this spot, where he resided a few years, and returned to Swanzey.

338. DANIEL ISHAM was a goldsmith by trade, and lived somewhere near here 1800-2, when he returned to Bolton, Conn., and afterwards removed to Weathersfield, Vt.

Moses Farnsworth came to Gilsum from Swanzey in 1791, and settled on this place. Jacob Ames came from Keene in 1813, married the widow Farnsworth and resided here till his death in 1818. Moses Farnsworth, Jr., remained here till 1835 and removed to New York.

339. FRANKLIN BARKER settled on this spot about 1825, and removed to New York in 1836.

340. ABRAHAM GRIFFIN bought a part of the Samuel Wadsworth lot marked S. W. on the map, (page 24,) in July, 1776, and built a log house near this spot. Eleven years after, he was killed by the fall of a tree. (Page 151.) Samuel Farnsworth was administrator of the estate. The real estate was as follows: — "One acre improved land, £1. 10 sh.; one house, 10 sh.; 199 acres wild land, £58." In the Probate Records he is called Abraham Griffith.

Abner Raymond resided here ten or twelve years and removed to Keene in 1837. Calvin Wilson lived here in 1839-40.

341. JONATHAN RAYMOND settled here in Marlow about 1790, and was killed by the fall of a tree in 1798. (Page 151.) His son John lived here many years. The place is now occupied by Ezra Howard.

342. This house is also in Marlow and was the residence of Cutler Knight. Julius H. Pletzner has lived here since 1876.

386. Union School House. (Page 129.)

343. LEVI BLOOD, a soldier of the Revolution, (page 39,) built the house on this spot about 1793. The town line runs through the house leaving "the living part" of it in Gilsum. In 1798, he married Mrs. Betsey Downing of Marlow. Five years later she united with the Congregational Church in Stoddard. Being unable, on account of feeble health, to go to the Meeting House, a church meeting was held in the barn, she being carried thither in a chair. She was there baptized and received to the church, and the Lord's Supper was administered. Her son James, then thirteen years old, was baptized on her account. His son, Franklin Downing, of Swanzey, has the chair used on this occasion.

Mrs. Blood's first husband was Daniel Downing who removed from Antrim in 1794 and settled a little north of the town line in the edge of Marlow. (392.) Four years after, he died leaving an only son, James Downing, who was brought up at Gen. Blood's in Gilsum, but on coming of age settled on his father's farm in Marlow. He was an industrious farmer and accumulated considerable property. After the new road was opened from Keene to Marlow, he and his wife removed their church relation to Gilsum. For nearly thirty years following, they were among the most reliable and efficient supporters of the gospel here. Though their home was four miles distant, their seat was very rarely vacant on the Sabbath.

In 1861, their children and grandchildren, (then 28 in number,) met at the old homestead and celebrated their golden wedding. The day was spent in "cordial greetings, agreeable conversation," and appropriate festivities, with prayer and remarks by their pastor, Rev. Mr. Adams, and Rev. Mr. Smith of Alstead, interspersed with song and mutual presentation of gifts. (Appendix I.)

Mr. Downing married for his second wife the youngest daughter of the first minister of Gilsum.

"He was a man of strong physical powers, and mental energy, modest and unassuming, kind and obliging, charitable, liberal in his contributions to Christian enterprises, economical in his expenditures, never idle."

His children and grandchildren, now widely scattered, have been everywhere valuable citizens, and three of them for many years among the best supporters of the Congregational Society in Gilsum. The removal of Franklin Downing to Swansey in 1873 was a great loss to the place. Daniel and James Downing remain near the old homestead in Marlow, both families retaining their church connections in Gilsum.

Calvin Wilson, who had previously lived at the Abner Raymond place for two years, came here in 1841 and remained four years. He afterwards lived two years in Gilsum village, 1847-8, and some years in Stoddard. In 1863 he came back to this place, where he died in 1864. His widow remained here till 1877, when she went to live with her daughter in Marlow.

Other residents :— Walker Gassett, Almon P. Tyler, and Edward W. Moulton.

385. Jonathan Heaton removed from Keene to Gilsum about 1780 and settled in what is now the southeast part of Sullivan. His son Nathaniel in 1843 removed to the farm formerly owned by Rev. Dr. Robinson in Stoddard and soon after bought the Farnsworth place. (338.) He built a barn on spot numbered 385, known as the Heaton barn. His widow now resides in Keene.

PART III.

GENEALOGICAL.

"Once in the flight of ages past,
There lived a man: and who was he?
Mortal! howe'er thy lot be cast
That man resembled thee.

He suffered — but his pangs are o'er;
Enjoyed — but his delights are fled;
Had friends — his friends are now no more;
And foes — his foes are dead.

He saw whatever thou hast seen;
Encountered all that troubles thee;
He was — whatever thou has been;
He is — what thou shalt be.

The annals of the human race,
Their ruins, since the world began,
Of him afford no other trace
Than this — there lived a man!"

EXPLANATIONS.

Ancestral records are in small type at the beginning of each family. When the family enters Gilsum, the name of its head is in small capitals, followed by his personal record, and the family name is not afterwards repeated. Each generation of descendants is indented, but in smaller type than the preceding. Daughters' children not having the family name are in Italics, followed by the surname in parentheses.

The place of marriage is uniformly omitted. In ancestral records the omission of the place of births or deaths denotes that it is unknown to the writer; in other cases the omission of the place signifies Gilsum. Where no State is named, New Hampshire is to be understood.

Peculiarities in the spelling of names are taken from the person's own writing, or that of his near relatives. See also the Preface.

HAYWARD. In ancient records this name is spelled Hayward, Heyward, Heywarde, Haward, Hlawerd, Haeward, Halward and other ways, but never Howard which was originally a distinct name. A family tradition says that our early ancestors came from Deumark and settled in Ireland. Tradition also states that the founders of this branch of the family were, when children, enticed on board ship at Dublin, and brought to this country where they were bound out to a farmer to pay their passage. They afterwards married and settled probably in Dedham, Mass. The first established fact is that in the early settlement of Mendon, Mass., there came thither from Dedham, Jonathan Hayward and Trial his wife. Their ch. were William, Jonathan, David, and Elizabeth. William b. Mendon, Mass. Jan. 30, 1696; d. Westmoreland (now Surry) Aug. 10, 1768; m. Joanna — b. Mass. 1686; d. Their ch. were Martha, Peter, Joanna, Rachel, Daniel, and William. Joanna m. Benjamin Carpenter the first of that name in Surry. William also s. in Surry, on the Field place. Peter was the first settler (about 1752), in what is now Surry, but then a corner of Westmoreland. The mother came on horseback carrying three little children, one in her lap, and the others in baskets hung on each side of the horse. The house he built is still in good repair. He was b. Mendon, Mass. 1725; d. Surry Aug. 1, 1791; m. 1st Ruth Rutter of Mendon, Mass., who d. Surry Oct. 13, 1761. Her ch. were Peter; Deborah m. Nathaniel Dart; Huldah m. Jonathan Smith; Rachel m. NAHUM MACE in Kilburn's Chair Factory 1846.

MACK. This family is of Scotch origin. William P. Mack of Stanstead, Canada, a grandson of Silas Mack of Marlow, (who was brother or nephew of the first Solomon mentioned below), writes that "three brothers left Scotland; two emigrated to America, one to Ireland," and that "part of their 'Coat of Arms' was a 'Boar's Head.'" He also says, "I have heard my father say he never knew a Mack convicted of crime." On careful inquiry, I find "there is no family of the name of Mack who bore a Boar's head," but the Scotch families of McDougal and McTainish "bore a Boar's head erased." It is thought this family were of those who "dropped their original names, retaining the prefix only, thereby being better able to escape persecution on account of their religious belief." The first ascertained ancestor of this branch of the Mack family, was Ebenezer Mack r. Lyme, Conn. where he "dropped dead" as he was bringing in a "back log," in 1777. His wife was Hannah Gates d. 1796. Among their ch. were Elisha, Samuel, Solomon, and Hephzibeth m. Abishai Tubbs of Marlow.

MISCELLANEOUS ADDENDA.

Chap. II. Near the top of the hill directly west of Bearden are numerous "potholes" indicating a powerful current of water flowing for a long period towards the southwest and thence following the present course of Beaver Brook. The two largest of these holes are from six to seven feet in diameter. As they are mostly filled with earth, their depth has not been determined. One contains a stump about a foot and a half through.

Chap. VII. The following Petition was found in the State archives.

To the respectable Body of Delegates assembled in Provincial Congress at Exeter in New Hampshire—

The Petition of a considerable number of the Inhabitants of said Province Humbly Sheweth— That your Petitioners are strongly attached to the true interest, welfare and safety of this their native Country, and are willing to exert themselves to the utmost in the defence of their first and Constitutional rights and privileges and imagine that any man or Bodies of men who endeavor to wrest them from us ought to be anathematized— It is real anxiety and concern for our distressed Country which causes us thus to trouble you at this time; your Petitioners apprehend (not that we would Presume to Dictate) that all persons who have in any measure or Degree Discovered themselves inimical to those Persons, (who have from the first rise of the controversy Betwixt Great Britain and the Colonies, approved themselves to their fellow countrymen true and Disinterested Patriots, or those who have derided and set at nought the Proceedings and Resolutions of the united wisdom of the Colonies in the Late Continental Congress) ought not to sustain any office either Civil or Military in this critical conjuncture of affairs— Upon a review of these sentiments, we were not a little surprised to hear that James Reed Esq of Fitzwilliam was not only in nomination but actually appointed a Commander of a Regiment in the Army to be raised for Defending those rights and immunities which, by some past conduct we have reason to think were not very highly esteemed by him; it is truly painfull for us, thus to Impeach the Character of a reputed Gentleman, much more that of one who otherwise is really so; yet we imagine the exigency of our affairs will in a great measure, if not altogether, atone for such a measure of procedure— We Earnestly Desire that neither he or any other person (who have not approved themselves steady and real Friends to the Great and Glorious Cause in which we are engaged) should be Promoted either in the Civil or Military Lists. Gentlemen your Influence in this matter will oblige Thousands besides your Humble Servants.

Page 39. A fuller version of the story related by Levi Blood is the following.

"While he was stationed as a picket, a British light horseman rode up to within a short distance and fired at him, wheeled his horse, and rode off long enough to reload, and then rode up and fired again. After the third discharge his commanding officer came to him saying, 'Well, Blood, the British are taking considerable notice of you.' 'Yes,' he answered, 'Mayn't I fire at the d—d Redcoat?' 'No, that won't do: if you fire they will take it as a signal, and all rush upon us, and we are not strong enough to risk a battle here. But if he comes again, you may step behind that rock.' When the horseman rode up, Blood stepped behind the rock, putting his hat on his bayonet. The Redcoat fired at that four times, and then left him. In telling the story 'Gen. Blood' would say, 'I turned aidgwise so as to make just as small mark as I could.'"

"At another time, Mr. Blood's division had a holiday in camp, and, as was the custom, double rations of rum were provided. Although a man who never used liquor to excess, he then became quite merry, and shouldering his musket, marched down in front of the tents shouting 'Attention! the whole world! By kingdoms, to the right, wheel!' Amused by his pompous manner, and the magnitude of his command, his comrades in arms gave him the name of 'General,' which clung to him ever after." (See page 249.)

Chap. XIV. Page 68. Under Centennial Cemetery, add Lot 237. Mrs. Josepha Herrman.

Chap. XXIII. Under date "Gillsun May 24th, 1776," Joel Kilburne petitioned the Council & House of R., for encouragement to enable him to carry on the business of manufacturing Iron Wire, claiming that "he can make any size." He is recommended by "Stephen Griswold, Ebenezer Dewey Jr Pelatiah Pease, Selectmen" and by several men in Keene. (Page 188.)

Chap. XXVI. The following was received from Samuel Morrison Esq. of Alstead.

"I once heard the one handed Thompson say that his father lived in Gilsun, at the time his hand was hurt. His mother set him to drop the corn into the mill, a little at a time. Solomon Mack's boys came over the hill talking. He looked round to see them, and got his hand between the rollers. His mother stopped the horse, and his father pulled his hand out of the rollers and left the skin. The mill was an old cornstalk mill. They were grinding corn for a pudding for supper." (See page 243.)

Page 179. Silvanus Hayward removed to Keene in the Spring of 1880, and in December following to Globe Village in Southbridge Mass., and was installed Pastor of the "Evangelical Free Church" in that place, Dec. 28, 1880. The sermon on the occasion was by Charles Wetherby. (See page 180.)

Page 195. John Borden removed from Gilsun to Monson, Mass. about 1812, and in June 1814 to Lebanon, N. Y., where he cleared a spot and built a house. In 1818 he moved to Delmar, Penn., where he "took up a piece of land, and went to chopping and clearing again." Here he remained till his death in 1843.

Benjamin Butler Borden son of John, writes,—“I cut a little hole in the woods, built a log house, and moved into it March 23, 1820. Many big hemlocks did I cut by moonlight, the wolves howling all around the while.” “It is said that poverty is the mother of invention, and as we began poor in the world, we were compelled to do all within ourselves we could. My wife having children to care for, and spinning and churning to do, would spin on the little wheel, churn and rock the cradle at the same time.”

“All of my five sons enlisted and served well their country.”

Page 196. Joel Willson Jr. removed to Waterloo, N. Y. in 1828, where he died in 1880. “His trade was that of a chair maker and painter. He was not only of a mechanical and ingenious turn of mind, but was endowed with rare business faculties. For some time he carried on the manufacture of linseed oil, then a leading industry of this village. When afterward he engaged in mercantile pursuits, he was careful, watchful, and economical. Socially, he was friendly, although quiet and unobtrusive. His name is every way worthy to be enrolled upon the list of our worthy departed citizens.” [Local paper.]

Page 204. Samuel Mack was a very ingenious mechanic, and with his brothers, Solomon and Elisha, was noted as a bridge and dam builder. He was the first man to build dams across the Connecticut river, and was employed by an English company to build one at Bellows Falls, where he was assisted by his brother Solomon, and his son Solomon Jr. The water being deep, he made himself a water-proof leathern suit with a pipe to supply air, with which he went under the water to place the stone and timbers. He wore this suit at the first celebration of Independence at Montague, Mass. He also invented a machine for hulling wheat, but while at Washington to secure a patent, he became insane, and soon after died.

Page 212. George H. Carpenter has a musket used in the Revolution by his great uncle Jonathan:—also a drum used by a Benton or Benson at the time of the execution of Major Andre.

Page 213. It is remembered that Jonathan Kingsbury, the father of James, used to boast that "Jim was a wonderful smart boy, for he rode the horse to plow two years, before he was a year and a half old!"

Page 219. Isaac Griswold from Walpole built the house on 157, and lived there a short time before selling to Dudley Smith.

Mrs. Lucena G. widow of Benjamin Thompson Jr., removed with her three sons to Mason City, Iowa, in 1855. "She was a consistent member of the Baptist Church for many years, and was respected and beloved by her many friends."

Adelbert M. Thompson oldest son of Benjamin Jr., after farming for a time, kept Hotel for over three years, and since 1871 has been in the drug business. He held the appointment of sheriff for six years. His wife writes:—

"I taught the first school in Mason City, in a log cabin 10x15 ft., with shoke roof and punch-eon floor. Our first year's crop consisted of a few beans and some sod corn. Our city then comprised eight small log houses containing two or three families each. Our city to-day numbers over 2,500, and is a center for several railroads, a school building costing $5,000, several churches, &c." On the occasion of their silver wedding, Sept. 30, 1880, about seventy-five of their neighbors assembled, and presented them with a valuable and beautiful set of silver.

Page 225. Jerome B. Aldrich was for a time in the employ of the elder Governor Dinsmoor of Keene. He removed to Cambridge, Mass. where he was employed some three or four years by Harvard University "to guard the buildings, keep off intruders, look after unruly students, report misdemeanors to the President, see that repairs were quickly made, &c., and was on the most friendly terms with the students." In 1833 he bought out a trucking business from Cambridge to Boston, which he carried on two years. He came to Gilsum and bought this place (Map 192,) in 1835, and remained five years. He built a shop near the brook back of the town house, where he made chair frames. He now resides in Boston, Mass.

Page 228. Henry Martin Hayward son of Dea. Amherst, has been employed by Murdoch and Fairbanks for many years, as superintendent of the wooden ware manufactory at "the Captain's Mills" in Winchendon, Mass. He was for a long time one of the most efficient workers, and a prominent officer in the Fire Department of that town.

Page 229. William T. Parker son of William, is one of the prominent men of New Hampshire. He was a merchant in Nashua for ten years, but since 1860, has been engaged in farming. He represented his town several years in the legislature; was afterwards elected Senator, and was President of the N. H. Senate in 1867. A friend writes:—

"He is a highly honorable and talented gentleman. He filled the position of President of the N. H. Senate with honor to himself and to the State. For over thirty years he has been a very prominent member of the Universalist Society in Nashua, many years serving as chairman of the Prudential Committee, and superintendent of the Sabbath School. He has worked his way to distinction and wealth by his industry and indomitable will."

Edward Parker, another son of William, served in both branches of the city government at Nashua. He was 1st Lieut. Co. B. in the Governor's Horse Guards, and Adjutant in the 1st N. H. Militia under Col. Tappan. In the war of the Rebellion he was commissioned 2d Lieut. Co. H., 13th N. H. Reg't, and served several months as Adjutant; was in the battles of Fredericksburg, and Suffolk; and afterwards enlisted in the Reg't of Heavy Artillery. He has held prominent offices in Odd Fellowship and Free Masonry, and has attained to the 32d degree A. A. S. R. He now resides at Uxbridge, Mass.

March 1, 1880, Theron Hayward entered the hardware business at Keene; — firm of Jackson and Hayward.

Page 244. Asa Maynard son of Antipas, was for many years a popular landlord at Marlboro', and at Orange, Mass. He afterwards removed to Keene, where he was deacon in the First Congregational Church.

GILSUM MAY 27th AD. 1818.

On the 21st of [June] AD. 1760 The Day yt I was 21 years of Age in an expedition against Canada (not in Madisons War) in King Georg 2^d Reign I went out in one Kings Reign & came home in another there was no Wood-chucking of Soldires in them Days The same year our Muster Roles could be Made up I received my Pay in Gold & Silver Money and likewise my other two Brother Ezra & Eleazar who were in the Same Army In that year against Canada and was reduc'd to the British Empire 6 or 7 Campaigns previous to that year had been yearly & every year against Canada Britton to Join the American Provenels for 7 or 8 years successively. In the year 1789 Gen^l Wolf Took Quebec & Gen^l Amherst took Crownpoint & Ticondaroga. But there was a very strong Fortress 100 Miles down Lake Champlain where the Lake divided & made an small Island in the Lake met below the Fortress our Army pitched their Tents on the East sid of the Lake where they Canonaded & Bumbarged 6 Days and 7 Nights The French evacuated the Fortress in the dead of Night; I was upon Centy twice every Night but the last Night when the French was evacuating; their Cattle would bellow & their Dogs would bark the whole of the Time The next Morning our Army took Possession of the fortress 50 French Regulars were made Prisoners in the Fortriss that had not got away, — And the next Day we got all our Artillary on Board & all our Baggage we proceeded down the Lake 14 Miles we expected another Seige but we fond that the Frotriss of St Johns had been Burnt the same Day yt we arrived & all had [been] sent into ye Country of Canada the Timber smoking — Then we proceeded 3 Miles further to a Stone Fortriss they (the French) fired but 1 or 2 Cannon and gave up. Then we proceeded on to Montreal & when we got there Gen^l Amherst had arrived & pitched his Tents on the West side of the River St. Larrance above Montreal & Gen^l Murry from Quebec on the West Side of Said River below Mont Real & Montreal had given up except firing one or two Canon which was all over before our Army got to the River St. Larrance and all 3 of the Armies were pitched in a Triangular Form our Army on the East sid & Amherst and Murry on the West Side of the said River then our Army returned back to Crown-point & went to rebuilding Crownpoint Fourt anew — And in Novem^r following the American forces were Dismissed & returned home & spread the Small Pox all over the Country. . . . Thus the French war Ended no more Indians coming down kiling and Sculpting Men women and Children till the Americans rased the rebellion in the year AD. 1774 destroyed the ship-load of Tea belonging to the Brittish. Then the British blocked up Boston harbour Many of the Boston [people] Moved out into the Country Some Stayed The British kept Boston till April 1775 and then made a discant upon Lexington did considerable [d] amage & they were drove back into Boston & thare untill Americans Built Bunker Hill Rodoubt. — But I'm before my Story At the alarm of Peopel or [all?] were alarmed and all were in a Friscofrasco in Keene notice was given to meet at Keene Meeting House I was as big a Fool as any of them; I went to the gathering Many were for going down & many were willing to let their Guns go & Stay at home themselves I had no Gun I had Sold mine after the French War was over But a Gun was offered me immediately I set out along with the crowd & the Battle was over before the News had got far into the Country. And when I got down Men were as thick as Grasshoppers a great plenty indeed. There was a Plan projected to enlist Men to make up an Army but a great-Strife prevailed to have a Commision which every one wanted that enlisted Many got a Commision that was not fit for it and Many had to do without that was fit, and many returned home because they could not get a Commision A vast maney more Men had hovered down to Cambrige then was needed to enlist some Stayed without enlisting to Shew their Zeal for the glorious Cause in June 1775 the Battle of Bunker Hill took place The American Leaders sent over to France & got Forces from thare to help cuff Britton & after America [had lost] 2 or 3000 Thousand Men by sword Pestelence they obtained Independence & made Peace. — Thus I have given you a Narrative of my Soldiery And I feel happy that I never was found in the afful Crime of Rebellion which the Americans were obliged to owne when they were in the midst of it — And when the French got home too France they set out upon the same project & took off their King & Queens Heads Am & c your Ever affectionate Father Abner Sanger To M^r Abner Sanger and Family All & Singular."

C. (Page 62.)

The original record is wanting. There are two copies, and there has been some query whether the name was Brook or Brock. On the first investigation there was a strong suspicion that it should have been Brockway, and that he was the father of Woolston Brockway. The reasons were these. We find "the widow Mary Brockway wife of John Brockway Departed this life Sept. 5, 1767"; and it is very noticeable that the Brockway is written as if in two words, and that the y is so short that one would naturally read it Brock was. Hence the inference that the transcriber made a mistake. On further examination, however, it is found that Woolston Brockway's first wife was Anna or Mary Brook. Hence the more probable inference that this was her father.

D. (Page 99.)

In Dr. Bouton's Provincial Papers, Vol. VII, p. 706, is the following note.

"Rev. Ranna Cossit was the first minister of the Episcopal church in Claremont; he sailed for England to obtain holy orders in December 1772; was ordained by the Bishop of London, and returned next year and took charge of the church in Claremont. He was recalled by the Bishop to the island of Cape Breton 1785."

He was a Tory in the Revolution, and refused to sign the Association Test.

F. (Page 161.)

The following verses appeared in print at that time.

Upon the thirty-first of May,
Appeared in Keene at break of day,
A mob both bold and stont;
Great Captain Mack of Gilsum town
Had gathered them and brought them
To rout the Tories out.

A sentinel the night before,
Had been dispatched to every door,
That none should get away;
Then with his flashing sabre drawn,
He with his men came marching on,
At dawning of the day.

As through the street he proudly rode,
He paused at every marked abode,
And ordered with a shout,
The guard to make all proper haste,
As they had little time to waste,
And turn the prisoners out.

And so they marched the place all through
And searched each house and cellar too,
Where lurked a luckless Tory;
And then returned to Hall's to get
From secret friends the prom sed wet,
And gather up the glory.}

But when to Davis Howlett came
 This news, it set his soul aflame,
 And messengers most fleet
 Were hurried forth to call to arms,
 His men prepared for war's alarms,
 To meet him at the street.

And answering to their Captain's call,
 They haste with musket, powder, ball,
 And form in battle line;
 Prepared to give Mack's lawless crew
 Hot work, if they should still pursue
 Their villanous design.

Then gallant Mack no whit afraid,
 Drew up in turn with great parade;
 When Col. Alexander,
 From Winchester, on fiery steed,
 Came dashing in with furious speed,
 The regiment's Commander.

And riding up to Mack and men,
 With shout that made all ring again,
 He cried, "now tell me true,
 I put the question as a friend,
 If Captain Mack you still intend,
 Your object to pursue."

"I do," Mack with an oath replied,
 "My object will not be denied —
 I'm ready for the strife,
 For now I tell you as a friend
 To keep my prisoners I intend,
 At hazard of my life."

Then said the Colonel, "if this be
 Your purpose, for eternity
 You may as well prepare,
 For every man of you that's found,
 Five minutes hence, upon this ground,
 Assuredly will be there."

What got the mighty valor then,
 Of dauntless Mack and all his men,
 That none delayed to fight?
 That taking to their heels they fled,
 And such their horror of cold lead,
 That some near died of fright?

* * * * *

(A stanza here is lost.)

Then found the prisoners quick release,
 And in the streets of Keene was peace,
 And shouts of merry laughter
 Rung out to see the braggarts flee,
 As if they thought that certainly
 The Devil must be after.

The women, taking up the sport,
 Made music of fantastic sort,
 Their pantry timbrels beating;
 And dinner horns all round about
 Peeled curious blare and funny shout,
 To cheer them in retreating.

Very truly Yours
Geo. W. Hammond

Hurrah for Keene! Huzza for Keene!
 Which would not let a thing so mean,
 Within her bounds be done;
 And may I, should Mack's rabid train,
 E'er come to visit us again,
 Be here to see them run.

G. (Page 182.)

The following are the verses, by Dr. George W. Hammond, referred to on page 134.

THE FIRST SETTLERS OF GILSUM.

The worthy band who cleared our land,
 When Gilsun young was rated,
 The old first stock, a pious flock,
 Who hither emigrated
 From "old blue laws" for the same cause
 That bees have when a swarming;—
 The parent hive too full to thrive,
 New settlements thus forming.

First on the ground there then was found
 Our Kilburns, Bonds, and Adams,
 With housewives fair their toils to share,
 First rate industrious madams:
 Though neat as wax, in spinning flax
 Their fingers were quite nimble,
 And nothing loth made all their cloth
 O'er which they plied the thimble.

With right good wills, then came our Bills
 Which never were protested;
 Wilcox was there to fight the bear
 Which his sure aim molested;
 Hard was the scratch, he found his match
 In wrestling with old bruin,
 But Osgood's shot upon the spot,
 Alone saved him from ruin.

As brisk as larks, then came our Marks,
 Our Hurds, and Bliss, and Deweys,
 And numerous Darts to play their parts,
 And nothing, sure, more true is,
 Than that the rolls which proved men's souls,
 When liberty was pending,
 Found Gilsun men with courage then
 Their country's rights defending.

To wield the ax, then came our Macks,
 Our Hammonds and our Blishes;
 The pulpit, too, calls one to view,
 From whom sprung all our Fishes.
 From sacred page to youth and age
 The Christian virtues teaching,
 The town at large composed his charge;
 All listened to his preaching.

We next will write of Church, and White,
 Of Loveland, and of Pease,
 All worthy names with hardy frames
 To fell our forest trees.
 A Hayward, too, with compass true,
 Did up the town's surveying;

Upon our land his corners stand,
His science still displaying.

Well known to fame is Whitney's name,
And Hosmer, too, we'll mention,
Taylor and Ware must also share
A part of our attention.
Memory will claim a Ballard's name
With pious Mrs. Baker,
Nor in the dark will we leave Clark,
Nor Chapin, essence maker.

Our Carpenter, he made some stir,
His jokes they were so ready,
And close allied, each Isham's bride,
Frugal, sedate, and steady.
Binghams, and Fullers too, by turns,
Were hitched in Hymen's traces;—
So warm the flame of Cupid burns,
When lit between some races.

Then came our Smiths, as tough as withes,
From Scottish stock descending;
And many more we might name o'er,
To honest thrift attending;
Plain, honest folk with hearts of oak,
Unlike your modern dandy;
Inured to toil, to till the soil
These pioneers were handy.

Their sons inherit that lively spirit
Which stirred their sires to action;
The female race still hold their place,
In point of true attraction;
Though far away they're prone to stay,
Yet I'll engage to thank 'e,
If in the race, you ever trace
Aught but a true-born Yankee.

A POEM.

Delivered on several occasions at Temperance meetings by Geo. W. Hammond M. D. at the request of the Sons of Temperance. (See page 93.)

Worthy Patriarch and brothers,
I gladly would give way to others,
And silent be, but for the call
So kindly given in our hall,
That I in public should rehearse,
What I offered there in verse.
Somewhat amended and corrected
I'll give the substance as expected.
My muse, I own is some fantastic,
Its style is somewhat Hudibrastic;
And I must say that when I penn'd it,
I did not know how I should end it;
I wrote my thoughts just as they rose,
'Thout plan or plot unto the close.
I did not aim at witticism,
Nor smooth my verse for criticism;
I often write when I have leisure
A pastime 'tis for my own pleasure;
But lest you think I'm prone to ramble,
I now will close this long preamble.

The world 'tis said is but a stage,
And people all of every age,

Whate'er the color of their faces,
 Are merely actors in their places.
 Life is the tragedy they play,
 New scenes are acted out each day;
 Old Time each morn the curtain lifts,
 The Scenery and the actors shifts;
 He ushers those of tender age,
 And old ones shuffles off the stage;
 And what perhaps is something strange
 The players oft their parts do change.
 He who to-day rolls in his wealth,
 Obtained by fraud perhaps, or stealth,
 To-morrow may be counted poor,
 And beg his bread from door to door.
 The rich man's son with haughty brow,
 May scorn the lad who holds the plow;
 Yet time in his mysterious ways,
 The one may sink the other raise
 To highest honors in the nation
 And e'en the first may seek the station
 Of waiter to the lad he spurned
 And eat the bread he thus has earned.

But none meet this reverse much quicker
 Than he who sells the drunkard liquor;
 Nine times in ten before life closes,
 His face is decked with tipplers' roses;
 His fiery rum-bedizened nose,
 Oft like a heated poker glows;
 So luminous the end doth shine,
 That well 'twould serve him for his sign.
 His victims' fate his own resembles,
 He closes life with "Devils' Trembles."
 Fit judgment for the murderous knave,
 That he should fill a drunkard's grave,
 But others suffer for his shame,
 Who cannot share with him the blame;
 His wife for rum must be deserted,
 His children's morals be perverted,
 And worst of all to be bewailed,
 This direful curse is oft entailed;
 For none so oft make "drunken fellers,"
 As do the sons of liquor sellers.
 The sequel, brothers, thus we trace,
 Of one who wars against his race;
 To nothing does his trade contribute
 Except the prison and the gibbet,
 His wares he cares not to exhibit,
 Arrayed for show at county fair,
 And claim a premium for them there.
 No, of his work he is ashamed,
 And angry is to hear it named;
 When sober men do grace his floor
 He'll kick his drunkards out of door.
 He knows they will return again,
 Maugre the insult and the pain,
 Drawn by the poison of the still,
 To drop their coppers in his till.
 Though drunkard makers cry "fanatic"
 We will denounce their trade piratic,
 Nor will we cease while we have breath,
 Until they cease their work of death; —
 For drunkard making is a trade,
 And thus the modern sot is made;
 In blandest smiles and words most fair,
 For our young men they spread the snare;
 Under the guise of social cheer

They start the flame with filthy beer,
 Knowing well the time will come,
 Its place will be supplied with rum
 Or gin or liver-guawing brandy,
 Or even whiskey if 'tis handy.
 If beardless boys will drink their beer,
 They know the time is drawing near,
 When these same lads with bloated faces,
 Will be safe harnessed in their traces;
 And for the sake of filthy grog,
 Will do their bidding like a dog!
 No cringing cur will make speed faster,
 Or louder bark to please his master.
 Then let me say, young men beware,
 And shun the liquor seller's snare;
 What though he taunt or scoff or sneer,
 Touch not his filthy, poisonous beer. —

Our legislators so discreet,
 In general court do yearly meet,
 Their business, rightly understood
 Is framing laws for public good. —
 Laws that are wholesome and judicious,
 Protect the weak, restrain the vicious;
 And right it is laws should be made,
 Suppressing crime of every shade;
 And those are surely wholesome laws,
 Which wisely made do reach the cause;
 But legislators are but men,
 And so may err, no wonder then,
 If they sometimes mistake their mission
 Allured perhaps by false ambition,
 And mighty evils overlook
 To save the trout in "Fishers brook,"
 Or seek to stay our heaviest woes,
 By ten cent bounty on the crows:
 The rumseller with poison freighted,
 May cast his hook when thus 'tis baited,
 It matters not if these curmudgeons,
 Do catch our young men off like gudgeons.
 If we can make the villain crow,
 Just leave the tender corn to grow,
 In giving bounty to the killer,
 No matter if the base distiller,
 Should wrest that corn from true intent,
 Destroy its use for aliment,
 And through the process of the still,
 A poison make destined to kill
 A score of young men in each village,
 Provided they can reap the pillage.

'Tis strange in this enlightened age
 That men denominated sage,
 Should on such small things spend their time
 And overlook this monster crime;
 Or frame a weak law bad as none
 To act on men with hearts of stone.
 But gallant Maine the work has done,
 The traffic stopped, the victory won
 In spite of Boston's wicked bribes,
 Or her distillers' taunts and gibes;
 And well does she her law enforce,
 Cutting the stream off at its source;
 Gathering laurels on her brow,
 By aid of such men as Neal Dow.

Read her reports and be admonished,
 For every one must be astonished,
 Who carefully reads her reports,
 Of pauper bills and police courts,
The cost of both reduced full half!
 Tax paying men will surely laugh! —
 Our heavy taxes mostly come,
 By reason of the trade in rum;
 The poisonous product of the still,
 The poor house and the prison fill;
 It makes the murderer's conscience reel
 Then nerves his arm and points the steel,
 Nor need we, brothers, to enquire
 What lights so oft the midnight fire.
 These and a host of other crimes,
 Tried by our courts in modern times,
 Which swell so full their leughy dockets,
 Must all be paid for from our pockets.
 Just for the liquor sellers' gain
 Our farms are mortgaged to maintain
 The paupers that are yearly made
 By their nefarious wicked trade.
 Have we not then sufficient cause
 To strive with Zeal for better laws
 That will protect our hard earned gains,
 And free the drunkard from his chains?
 Must we sit down with folded hands
 And tolerate these rum brigands
 Who fill the earth with crime and wo,
 And merely say "why do ye so"?
No! let us say in thunder tone
 Ye foes to men! with hearts of stone!
 Ye vampires! and ye orphan makers!
 Of every crime ye are partakers,
 Ye pauper-making pirate crew,
 To your vile trade now bid adieu;
 No longer shall your loathsome shops,
 Where ye deal out your poison slops,
 Pollute the land which gave ye birth;
We'll hunt your traffic from the earth.
 O! what an Ishmaelitish calling
 It is to live by others falling,
 To live by dealing death to others,
 And breaking hearts of wives and mothers.
 Must we forever draw our purses
 To prop up this the worst of curses?
 Forbid it every worthy sou,
 Let justice in the case be done;
 Amend the law and give it force;
 And then will justice in its course
 Uncork the demijohn and flask,
 And knock in head the liquor cask,
 And let the poisonous fluid run;
 And brothers, we'll enjoy the fun.

Gilsum, N. H. Dec. 1851.

The following is one of the songs referred to on page 94.

THE PROSPECT.

A hundred years hence,
 What a change will be made
 In customs and morals,
 In taverns and trade,
 In landlords who fatten,
 Upon the fool's pence;

How things will be altered,
A hundred years hence.

A hundred years hence,
And less I am thinking,
Will no silly pretence,
Be made for rum-drinking;
Let the vender now revel,
All people of sense
Will think him a devil,
A hundred years hence.

Our laws they will then,
In my humble belief,
Place rumselling men,
Along with the thief,
And rumselling deem,
The greater offence;
Even so will it seem
A dozen years hence.

Rumsellers' attention,
They then may bestow,
On raising potatoes,
Or learning to mow,
Or some honest calling
They choose to commence,
For their trade will be ended,
A hundred years hence.

A hundred years hence,
What wonder 'twill give
That we ever suffered,
Rumsellers to live?
That they were not punished,
With vengeance intense,
All will be astonished,
A hundred years hence.

A hundred years hence,
When a Barnum comes round
Among his rare shows,
I presume may be found,
The last rumseller's skin,
Stuffed and dressed in his clothes,
And the monkeys will grin,
As they twig his red nose.

The following specimen will show something of the spirit and finish of Mr. Fish's poetry.

THE PASSAGE OF THE RED SEA.

The tribes of the Lord were encamped by the sea:
Their fetters had dropped: 'twas the host of the free.
With chariot and horse the Egyptians drew near,
Prepared for their slaughter, and hung in their rear.
But the chief of the chosen had lifted his rod,
And it fell on the waves in the name of his God.
The depths of the deep were all hardened and bare,
The way of salvation was laid for them there.
A light for their passage hung out in the sky,
And the waters stood sentry while Israel passed by.

Elisha J. Fish

But where is the foe in the height of his pride?
 He entered the waters, and vanished, and died.
 One sepulchre serves for the lord and the slave;
 One winding sheet wraps both the coward and brave.
 Their chariots are broken and sunk in the deep:
 Their horses and horsemen have found their last sleep.
 One frown from on high, — one flash of the wave,
 And the glory of Egypt was bowed to the grave.
 The Amorite lists to the sound of her cry,
 And his counsel shall fail, and his courage shall die;
 For Jeshurun's king, at the word of the Lord,
 Is marching to Canaan, the promised reward.

I. (Page 250.)

The following Hymn was sung at the Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. James Downing, Feb. 21, 1861. It was written for the occasion by Mrs. Alice M. Adams.

Our parents; 'tis of you,
 Kind, noble, just, and true,
 Of you we sing;
 Here, where your parents died,
 Home of your children's pride,
 From this much-loved hill-side,
Our voices ring.

Our parents; you we greet,
 As at this home we meet,
 On this glad day.
 From homes both far and near,
 With partners, children dear
 We've come; all, all are here,
Not one away.

Our parents' God we praise
 For lengthening out their days,
 This day to see.
 May He their best loved Friend,
 Cause blessings to descend
 On them till time shall end, —
 Eternally.

J. (Page 228.)

The following lines were written by Emily G. Hayward, in the third year of the war, in response to the taunting question: —

“ IS IT WORTH ALL THIS ? ”

Is it worth all this?
 Worth the treasure freely given,
 Worth the cries sent up to Heaven
 From the hearts so sadly riven; —
 Is it worth all this?

Is it worth all this?
 All the anguish and the aching,
 That such fearful wounds are making,
 All the tears from hearts so breaking; —
 Is it worth all this?

Is it worth all this?
 All the life-blood it is spilling,
 All the graves that now are filling
 With the brave who were so willing;—
Is it worth all this?

Is it worth all this?
 Aye! the wounded and the dying
 On the field of battle lying,
 While for them our hearts are sighing,
 Say " 'Tis worth all this."

Yes! and more than this!
 They will say they went most gladly,
 Though the conflict raged so madly,
 Tell you not to weep them sadly,
 For 'tis worth all this!

It is worth all this!
 For a holy cause they're fighting,
 Wrongs of past years they are righting,
Peace and Liberty uniting,—
 Yes! 'tis worth all this!

It is worth all this!
 For our Flag, each danger braving,
 With its colors o'er them waving,
 'Tis our Country they are saving,
 And 'tis worth all this!

SONNET.

On the Death of General Alex^r. Hamilton. [Published in the Cambridge Gazette in the Summer of 1804.]

On worth entomb'd, and honor's hallow'd bier,
 Let those who prize them, drop the sacred tear.
 Columbians, mourn your peerless Chieftain dead,
 And let immortal laurels deck his bed.
 Untimely death, by fate's mysterious hand,
 Hath cut off virtue from our weeping land;
 Despoil'd its fairest flower; perfection mourns—
 Her noblest model to the dust returns.
 The scholar's pattern, and the soldier's guide;
 The sage civilian, and the statesman's pride;—
 Friend to the worthy, to the base a rod;
 "An honest man—the noblest work of God."
 Columbia's genius mourns her fav'rite son;
 The friend of man, the matchless HAMILTON.

THE MILCH-BEAR.

In days of yore, a good old grannam,
 At fifty pounds, old ten.* per annum,
 Was hir'd to keep the village school;
 To learn the girls to knit—the boys to read,
 And teach the little children, all, the creed;
 To say their pray'rs,
 And such affairs,
 And each to practise well the Golden Rule.

* OLD TENOR—an antique currency.

So well this pious woman play'd her part,
 Each scholar got his catechism by heart;
 The Bible, too,
 (Though strange, 'tis true,)
 Was the sole book from which she taught 'em :
 It was their chief delight
 Some passage to recite,
 And by such gentle means, to love her, brought 'em.

One day, she call'd a pupil up to read,
 Who having found her place, did thus proceed —
 The little maid
 Was not afraid,
 But boldly read from Gen'sis twenty-four;
 And as she did rehearse
 The forty-seventh verse,
 She read these words, "whom Milcah bore" —

"Stop! stop!" the lady cried, in accents wild —
 "You've read the passage wrong. I'm sure, my child: —
 "Pray read that sentence o'er again."
 At which the girl began to stare,
 And stammered out "whom Milcah bore" —
 "Ay! ay!" replied the mistress, "now 'tis plain —
 For they might MILK A BEAR — I knew't before,
 But 'tis impossible to MILK A BOAR."

PROTEUS.

L. (Page 157.)

Since Chapter 27 was in press, still another version of "the Great Bear Hunt" has been received. Gilman Joslyn Esq. of Boston writes as follows.

"I lived in that part of Stoddard known as 'Leominster Corner,' and was at that time, December, 1816, twelve years old. As we children were returning from school, we found the neighborhood in commotion. The story was that Isaac Rowe of Marlow was out with his dogs and had started a bear, and had been following him all day; that the bear had gone into Gilsun, and had crossed the road near where Mr. Guillow lived. It had been decided to turn out the next morning, with all the force they could raise by giving notice during the evening to people in Gilsun and Sullivan. Boylike I wanted to go, but hardly dared to ask so great a privilege. Finally, with much strain of courage, I put the question to my father. He replied 'If you should go, and the bear should come at you, how will you defend yourself? He might kill you.' I pulled out of my pocket a large jackknife, the blade of which was of the butcher-knife type, which on that day, I had swapped for, with ninpence to boot, with Sam Buss of Marlow. I told father that would fix the bear if he should come at me. He looked at the knife, and at me, and said, 'You may go.' Most of the evening was spent in putting the best edge on that jackknife that my knowledge of the art would admit. Early in the morning we started to meet the company. Some were armed with guns, some with pitchforks, and others with axes and tin horns. My brother Luke had an ax. Our company, old men, young men, and boys, all eager for the hunt, and talking bear, proceeded to the place where the bear crossed the road. Here the method of procedure was decided. 1. No one should fire at the bear until the order was given by Col. William Wilson. 2. If any one saw the bear, a horn should be blown. 3. No one, in any event, was to fire until the bear was driven into a hollow, so that no one on the opposite side would be hit. Then the company spread out as far as they could and see one another. Capt. Edward Phelps, on his white-faced mare, took the road toward Gilsun, while Col. Wilson led the left wing toward Sullivan. We proceeded slowly and cautiously toward the west, the Gilsun and Sullivan people, on the other side of the circle to gather in and meet us. At length the blast of a horn was heard in the woods at a distance. That sound gave the company great joy, for by that they knew Bruin was in the ring. On we went with renewed zeal, over ledges, logs, and brush. Soon we heard the horn again. As the circle became smaller, the bear was very restless and ran from side to side or ring which now surrounded a hollow. Soon, and without any order, a gun was fired. Then I saw the bear heard two or three other guns. Wilder Knight, Enos Locke, and others who had no guns, went for the bear as he was climbing up a ledge, caught him by his hind legs, pulled him down, and held him as they would a hog. I ran and gave Wilder Knight my jackknife, with which he stuck the bear, and he soon bled to death. He was judged to weigh 300 lbs. or more." The rest of the story is substantially as told by all. How they ate Mrs. White's bread, and drank Mr. Smith's "New Run Toddy" is alike remembered by every one. Mr. Joslyn continues:—"It was now dark and we started for home, a jovial set, but somewhat crooked. We passed the high bridge at the Pease Mill. From that time my memory grew indistinct, but on its revival I was in Capt. Phelps's kitchen, before the fire, at ten o'clock in the morning. I was told that the Captain brought me on his horse before him. Capt. Phelps, brother Luke, and myself were all from our corner who arrived home that night."

M.

Mrs. Maria T. Dart, sister of George W. Foster, (page 217,) was a successful school teacher for some years. She had also much natural and acquired ability as a musician. "She was probably the first person to play a reed instrument in church, in Gilsum. It was a melodeon which she held in her lap, blowing with the left hand, and playing the bass with the same hand."
