Preamble to the Constitution.

WHEREAS, It is desirable that there should be adequate celebrations commemorative of the events of Colonial history happening from the settlement of Jamestown, Va., May 13, 1607, to the Battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775:

THEREFORE, The Society of Colonial Wars has been instituted to perpetuate the memory of those events, and of the men who, in military, naval, and civil positions of high trust and responsibility, by their acts or counsel, assisted in the establishment, defense, and preservation of the American Colonies, and were in truth the founders of this nation. With this end in view, it seeks to collect and preserve manuscripts, rolls, relics, and records; to provide suitable commemorations or memorials relating to the American colonial period, and to inspire in its members the fraternal and patriotic spirit of their forefathers, and in the community, respect and reverence for those whose public services made our freedom and unity possible.

The Constitution of the General Society of Colonial Wars has been adopted by the Society of Colonial Wars in the state of New Hampshire except where modified by the By-Laws of the State Society.

By-Laws.

SECTION I.

Name.

The Society shall be known by the name, style, and title of "SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS IN THE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE."

SECTION II.

Officers.

The officers of the Society shall be a Governor, a Deputy-Governor, a Lieutenant-Governor, a Secretary, a Treasurer, a Registrar, an Historian, a Genealogist, a Chaplain, and a Chancellor; these shall be ex-officio members and constitute the Council, with five other members elected for that purpose and chosen annually.

The Deputy-Governor-General, the Society's representative in the General Society, shall also be ex-officio a member of the Council.

SECTION III.

Fees and Dues.

The initiation fee shall be five (5) dollars; the annual dues shall be two (2) dollars, payable the first day of January of each year. The payment at one time of fifty (50) dollars shall constitute a life membership, and exempt the member so paying from initiation fee and annual dues.

Any member, at his election to membership or subsequently, who may contribute one hundred (100) dollars to the "permanent fund" of the Society shall be exempt from payment of annual dues, and this exemption shall extend in perpetuity to his lineal successors in membership from the same propositus, one at a time, who may be selected for such exemption by the Society, said perpetual membership to be transmitted by the holder, subject to the approval of the Society.

The non-payment of an initiation fee within six months of the election of a candidate shall make such election null and void.

Any fees of the General Society of a special nature, such as fees for filing applications, shall be borne by the individual members to whom they may apply, and not by the Society.

Any member who shall be in arrears one year in payment of annual dues shall be liable to suspension or expulsion, and his name and ancestry shall be omitted by the Secretary from the Year Book of the Society.

SECTION IV.

The Governor, or in his absence the Deputy-Governor, or Lieutenant-Governor, or Chairman pro tempore, shall preside at all Courts of the Society, and shall exercise the duties of a presiding officer under parliamentary rules, subject to an appeal to the Society. at his discretion, or upon the written request of two members of the Council, or upon the like request of five members of the Society.

He shall notify all elected candidates of their admission, and perform such other duties as the Society or his office may require. He shall have charge of the seal, certificates of incorporation, by-laws, historical, and other documents and records of the Society other than those required to be deposited with the Registrar, and shall affix the seal to all properly authenticated certificates of membership, and transmit the same to the members to whom they may be issued. He shall notify the Registrar of all admissions to membership. He shall certify all acts of the Society, and when required authenticate them under seal. He shall have charge of printing and publications issued by the Society. He shall give due notice of the time and place of the holding of all Courts of the Society and of the Council. He shall keep fair and accurate records of all the proceedings and orders of the Society and of the Council, and shall give notice to each officer who may be affected by them of all votes, resolutions, and proceedings of the Society, or of the Council, and at the General Court, or oftener, shall report the names of those candidates who have been admitted to membership, and those whose resignations have been accepted, and of those members whose membership has ceased for other causes. In his absence from any meeting a Secretary pro tempore may be designated therefor.

SECTION VI.

The Treasurer shall collect and keep the funds and securities of the Society. Out of these funds he shall pay only such sums as may be ordered by the Society or Council, or his office or that of the Secretary may require. For the faithful performance of his duty he may be required to give such security as the Society may deem proper.

SECTION VII.

The Registrar shall receive from the Secretary and file all the proofs upon which membership has been granted, with a list of all diplomas countersigned by him, and all documents which the Society may obtain; and he, under the direction of the Council, shall make copies of such papers as the owners may not be willing to leave in the keeping of the Society.

SECTION VIII.

The Historian shall keep a detailed record of all historical and commemorative celebrations of the Society, and shall edit and prepare for publication such historical addresses, papers, and other documents as the Society may see fit to publish; also a necrological list for each year, with biographies of deceased members.

SECTION IX.

Genealogist.

The Genealogist shall investigate all applications for membership and shall pass upon all claims for supplementals. His approval on all applications shall be required before they are filed with the Registrar of the State or General Society. An appeal from his decision may be taken to the Committee on Membership and at their discretion to the Society. He shall be exempt from annual assessment and may receive such compensation as the Council shall decide.

SECTION X.

The Chancellor shall be a lawyer duly admitted to the bar, and it shall be his duty to give legal opinion on matters affecting the Society when called upon by any officer.

SECTION XI.

The Chaplain shall be an ordained minister of a Christian church, and it shall be his duty to officiate when called upon by the proper officers.

SECTION XII.

The Council shall have power to call special Courts of the Society and arrange for celebrations by the

BY-LAWS.

Society. They shall have control and management of the affairs and funds of the Society. They shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the Constitution and By-Laws, but they shall at no time be required to take any action or contract any debt for which they shall be liable. They may accept the resignation of any member of the Society. They may meet as often as required or at the call of the Governor. Five members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; at the General Court they shall submit to the Society a report of their proceedings during the past year. The Council shall have the power to drop from the roll the name of any member of the Society who shall be in arrears at least one year in payment of annual dues, and shall fail on proper notice to pay the same within sixty days, and on being dropped his membership shall cease; but he may be restored to membership at any time by the Council upon his written application and the payment of all such arrears from the date when he was dropped to the date of his restoration. The Council may suspend any officer for cause, which must be reported to the Society, and action taken on the same within thirty days. A careful record of all proceedings shall be kept and these records shall be the property of the Society.

SECTION XIII.

Vacancies and Terms of Office.

Whenever an officer of this Society shall die, resign, or neglect to serve, or be suspended, or be unable to perform his duties by reason of absence, sickness, or other cause, and whenever an office shall be vacant which the Society shall not have filled by an election, the Council shall have power to appoint a member to such office pro tempore, who shall act in such capacity until the Society shall elect a member to the vacant office, or until the inability due to said cause shall cease; provided, however, that the office of Governor shall not be filled by the Council when there shall be a Deputy or Lieutenant-Governor to enter on the duties.

The Council may supply vacancies among its members under the same conditions, and should any member, other than an officer, be absent from three consecutive Councils of the same, his place may be declared vacant by the Council and filled by appointment until a successor is elected.

Subject to these provisions, all officers and gentlemen of the Council shall, from the time of election, continue in their respective offices until the next General Court, or until their successors are chosen.

SECTION XIV.

Resignation.

No resignation of any member shall become effective unless consented to by the Council or by vote of the Society.

SECTION XV.

No person who may be enrolled as a member of this Society shall be permitted to continue in membership when his proofs of descent or eligibility shall be found to be defective. The Council, after thirty days' notice to such person to substantiate his claim, and upon his failure satisfactorily to do so, may require the Secretary to erase his name from the membership list. The said person shall have a right to appeal to the Society at its next Court, or at the General Court. If the said appeal be sustained by a two-thirds vote of the members present at such Court, the said person's name shall be restored to said membership list.

BY-LAWS.

SECTION XVI.

Applicants for membership must first make out a preliminary application endorsed by two members of the Society.

No application for membership will be accepted based only on traditional statements, nor unless such application be accompanied by a paged reference to public records or recognized authority, authenticating such service or rank, or when proof depends upon private documents, by copies duly authenticated of such documents.

The admission fee of five dollars, and the annual dues of two dollars must accompany the preliminary application.

SECTION XVII.

Any member for cause or conduct detrimental or antagonistic to the interest or purpose of the Society, may be suspended or expelled from the Society. But no member shall be expelled or suspended unless written charges be presented against such member to the Council.

The Council shall give reasonable notice of such charges, and afford such member reasonable opportunity to be heard and refute the same. The Council, after hearing such charges, may recommend to the Society the expulsion or suspension of such member, and if the recommendation of the Council be adopted by a majority vote of the members of the Society present at such Court, he shall be so expelled or suspended, and the insignia of said member shall thereupon be returned to the Treasurer of the Society, and his rights therein shall be extinguished or suspended.

The English and the Indian in New Hampshire.*

BY CAPT. GEORGE AUGUSTUS GORDON.

COMRADES OF THE SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS, AND LADIES :
It is to me a matter of pride in my native state that, despite the few forays of the Indian, her population have ever dwelt peacefully, and that the hostile foot of an armed foe never pressed her soil. Whatever participation the New Hampshire citizen has taken in war, its indulgence has been beyond her borders, and its horrors levied upon the industries and productions of other communities.

I appear before you, on this occasion, not as the apologist of the Indian or the accuser of the Englishman ; but to consider, very briefly, the conditions in which they were placed, and to recognize the lesson which history teaches in restraint of hasty condemnation. The native nobility of Passaconaway did not assist him in conforming to the white man's mode of life, or dispose him to exchange the mild religious rites of his race for the rigid discipline and self-abnegation of the standing order of New England churches. The humanity and devotion of Wheelock, as the almoner of English charity, did not avail to establish the half-converted Indian in ways of peaceful industry, or to content him with a life of frugality. In the entire domain of provincial New Hampshire, extending from the Piscataqua

* Read at the Fourth General Court, Portsmouth, June 15, 1897.

and the ocean tides to the gentle billows of Lake Champlain, not a solitary specimen of the red man dwells; and the college of Wheelock and Wentworth, located midway this princely territory, extends its bounteous blessings to the white man alone. Instead of the tomahawk and the scalping-knife, a thousand looms incessantly weave comfortable clothing for all, and the scythe gathers sweet hay and golden grain from a thousand fields. Instead of rude wigwams and powwows of superstition, temples of the unseen, beneficent God, and school-houses stand side by side, that "peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety, may be established among us for all generations."

Two thirds of a century ago, the poet-banker of Boston wrote the lines recited at the opening of the Portsmouth theatre,—

"Here as I gazed, in Nature's strength and grace
Roamed the red warriors of a nameless race;
Swift flew their barks along the rocky shore;
Bright blazed their fires, loud rose their battle roar;
Rude love and ruder hate controlled the spot,
Tribes conquered tribes, and were in turn forgot."

This territory, first named New Hampshire by John Mason, in memory of his native county in England, consisted then, as now,—when consideration is limited to so much as lies south of Lake Winnepesaukee—of three river valleys, the Piscataqua, the Merrimack, and the Connecticut. The two sections of upland forming the crest between these valleys were little known to the early white settlers, and were regarded chiefly as valuable for their store of timber, peltry, and furs. The main settlements were confined, two centuries ago, to the ample intervals of the Piscataqua and its tributaries. Here were the sawmills which gave employment to the hardy pioneers, and here came the shallops of the deep sea fisheries with their abundant freight. In the half century which had preceded, the Englishman and the Indian had dwelt together in general peacefulness and quiet. This period had just closed with the bloody drama at Cochecho, prior to which the only armed conflicts between the two races had been conducted by forces from the adjacent colony of Massachusetts Bay. The expiring embers of Philip's war flashed into a momentary blaze in the raid upon Durham, the earliest predatory incursion, excepting the haycock affair at Dover in 1666, in the history of New Hampshire. Without the events of the few preceding years in Massachusetts, the raid would have been impossible. The only actual battle between organized forces of the white man and the red man on New Hampshire soil was in 1693 at Wheelwright's pond, the head of the principal Durham river, in the present town of Lee. It is doubtful if a single New Hampshire man was engaged.

It will be found on inspection, that no oppression or coercion by the New Hampshire colonist was the active force that removed the red man from her soil. The small and insignificant scouts on her record were her police, directed only against the wayward, the wilful, and the wicked, of which the Indian furnished too many examples.

The Indian was no farmer and understood not the art of husbandry. On the most fertile river bottoms he cultivated rudely a few corn-fields. The success of the white man's agriculture raised no envy in his bosom; rather, he was gratified at the abundant plenty resulting. The apples and pears which the early colonists had planted on their plantations were an enlargement in the line of fruits to him, before which he knew only of the berries which he shared with the bear. The cider and the rum, produced by the same skill, opened a new world to his imagination, and gave him, in the stupor of intoxication, an enjoyment never before experienced, and of which he never got enough.

But as a hunter and trapper, the Indian was not only equal, but superior, to the Englishman. Fertile in expedient, adroit in strategy, patient and untiring in the chase, he possessed the most minute acquaintance with the habits and character of the beasts roaming the New Hampshire forests, and was unsurpassed in the success with which he secured their skins for his garments and their meat for his larder. The white man's gun, powder, and ball increased the red man's efficiency as a hunter. No keener, surer eye ever glanced down the glint of a gun-barrel, and no firmer, stouter arm ever held a stock. It was but natural that the two races should in this department work together. The Indian could not provide the equipments for an expedition; the Englishman could. The Indian possessed not the art of accounts, but well remembered the articles furnished him. To his credit, be it said, there is not on record a single instance of his denial of the stores and equipments furnished. He knew also the quantity and quality of the furs obtained. Here an issue immediately arose from the different standpoints of the parties at interest. The Indian regarded each expedition as a unit, independent of all previous or succeeding liabilities. Like the good Bishop Bass of Newburyport, affiliated with the lodge in Portsmouth in Masonic ties, who, when his people could not square up the salary account of a previous year, would say: "Well, I'll overlook that amount; it's very small. Never mind it. Let's rub out and begin anew." The Indian could not conceive, much less understand, the necessity of the success of an expedition being applied to offset and extinguish the losses of a predecessor. His colonist partner had a book account, duly debited the Indian with supplies furnished, and credited him with peltry and venison returned. Both were honest and both were sincere. The white man never accepted the red man's logic of the situation; the red man had no faith in the white man's book account, which to him was as deluding as legerdemain, as mysterious as magic. It had but one constant result—the Indian was always in debt.

Though unsatisfied and far from quiet, the Indian made no organized descent upon the New Hampshire towns till after the Massachusetts struggle, known as King Philip's war, when two of the officers of that colony, Sill and Hawthorn, came to Dover, and in connection with Major Waldern, who had been a member of the Massachusetts general court and speaker of its house, took advantage of the friendly feeling of the Indians toward Major Waldern and of the security and confidence they reposed in him. By a ruse they seized two hundred of the Indians, carried them to Boston, and punished them for alleged crimes. A few were hanged, a few—Passaconaway and his family—set at liberty, and the remainder sold as slaves. This deed the Indians could not forget. It was the earliest hostile act against them by enlisted white soldiers within the limits of New Hampshire, and has been regarded as the incitement to the massacre of Major Waldern in 1689.

An illuminating comprehension, however, of the incidents of this tragedy is furnished in a tradition, narrated to me by a son of Portsmouth, coming down from the lips of the very actors in the event. An English colonist, trafficking with the natives, had, by long residence among them, acquired not only their confidence, but an understanding of their language, as was not uncommon. This party met the chiefs on their return from the Cocheco foray. Their statement of the affair was to the effect that, after they had gained possession of the garrison house and secured the avenues of approach and departure, they brought Major Waldern into his great hall and demanded a settlement, then and there, of accounts between him and them. Willingly or otherwise, the Major produced his bulky ledger and read to each the statement of his account as therein entered. Explanations followed, and the Major was compelled or induced to cross off each account as settled. When this was concluded, each chief in turn gave Major Waldern a corresponding cross of settlement, by gashing with his knife upon the Major's breast; furnishing a permanent and ineradicable evidence of their satisfaction in the adjustment. They had no intention or desire of slaying him. Though they felt he had deeply wronged them in his dealings, had time and again defrauded them in business relations, had delivered their kinsmen and the warriors of their tribes into slavery, they had an abiding respect and regard for him, as altogether the most prominent and influential of the white men with whom they came in contact. We may say the deed was barbarous, but, so far as we may credit this their narrative of the occasion, it was destitute of the savage ferocity and malignity with which historical writers have portrayed and characterized it.

The Indian had no idea, much less comprehension, of individual proprietary interests in land. The territory occupied by a tribe and defended by its warriors was theirs by occupancy, as a tribal possession. It could be vacated and abandoned on the approach of a superior power; or, the whole tribe could alienate it and withdraw. So when temporary alienation was effected for small quantities and recorded by deed to the white man, the transaction was quite differently regarded by the two parties at interest. When the coats and blankets, exchanged for the land, were worn out, or the powder and ball expended, while the land remained in perpetuo to the whites, the Indian felt himself entitled to a renewal of the price paid him. The clothing or the ammunition was demanded over again; and he pointed out the, to him, remarkable fact that the white man possessed his end of the bargain, while the Indian had nothing. There was no reconciliation. There could be none. The white man's conscience was easy. He had honestly and faithfully paid for the land. His title had been established for years, his possession had been open and known to all and was capable of verification and proof by hundreds of witnesses. The white man was in power and could enforce and maintain his view of the situation. The Indian recognized the fact and withdrew deeper into the forest.

You and I may enjoy the contemplation of the bounteous creation, as shown in the orderly disposition of daily events, and gratefully recognize the gracious beneficence which has advanced our race, laden with innumerable blessings, till devout adoration, baffled in attempted comprehension of the universe, finds its highest expression in the great white throne of a new heaven and a new earth, and in the worship of Him that sitteth thereon. To this the American Indian was not equal. The Great Spirit, whom he worshiped, was purely an intellectual apprehension in no wise inferior in conception to a deity who could inspire the verdict of the witchcraft tribunals. Implicit confidence reposed in his wisdom, justice, and righteousness, and unhesitating acquiescence in his decrees. No mercy or compassion was expected. Yet nowhere appeared the Jugger-naut of India, the Molock of the Druid, or the persecution of the Christian. He was a heathen, but he was no idolater.

In the pride of our intelligence we term this condition of the red man, native on these shores, ignorance; and in the consciousness of intellectual superiority, we stamp him savage. By our standard, doubtless the award is just; but how by his?

The subject is a broad one, and the relations of the two races too extensive to be more than glanced at within the limits of this brief paper. The student of sociology can only lament that the New England white man did not manifest a larger capacity for dealing with the American Indian, that the best qualities and instincts of the child of the forest could not have been nurtured and developed into usefulness within the bounds of civilization. Unquestionably, he was too superior a being to be exterminated, as he has been. The verses of Mr. Longfellow may not be historically true; but they are worth recalling as a half truth, not destitute of justification, when the history of Passaconaway, a New Hampshire chief, is recalled:

“ Beautiful is the sun, O strangers,
When you come so far to see us!
All our town in peace awaits you,
All our doors stand open for you;
You shall enter all our wigwams
For the heart's right hand we give you.

Such a sweet and pleasant flavor,
Never the broad leaves of our corn-fields
Were so beautiful to look on,
As they seem to us, this morning,
When you come so far to see us."
