PREFACE.

THE desire to know the history of one's ancestors, to perpetuate the heroism and noble deeds of his forefathers, is well nigh universal. This feeling is not limited to civilized society, it is not peculiar to people who have a written language. The wild Indian of the forest, knowing nothing of letters, in his own peculiar way recounts to his children the exploits of his fathers, and tradition does for him in part what the historian does for an enlightened people.

It has long been the feeling of many of the citizens of Swanzey, of those who love their home and revere the memory of those who have gone before them, of those whose interests are identified with the welfare of the town, that some measures should be taken to arrange, preserve, and put in a readable form the record of those events in our early history which could be obtained, and which were worthy of preservation.

In 1856, Joseph Hammond, jr., was employed to copy some of the ancient town records, many of which were almost obliterated and unintelligible.

In the warrant for the annual meeting in 1880 an article was inserted to see if the town would take measures to publish its early history and raise money for the same. At this meeting A. A. Ware, Benjamin Read, G. I. Cutler and H. H. Saunderson were chosen a committee to investigate in regard to cost, etc., and report at the next annual meeting. A similar article was inserted in 1881 and a verbal report made at the meeting by the committee. The town, on the plea of the existing indebtedness, voted to dismiss the article. In 1882 an attempt was again made but failed as before. In 1884 the town "voted to raise five hundred dollars to be expended by the selectmen towards writing and publishing the history of Swanzey."

During the season Benjamin Read was employed to commence the work and $226.52 was paid him for labor in collecting data for the genealogical part of the history.

In March, 1885, it was "voted to raise five hundred dollars for the completion of the town history in addition to what was raised last year for this purpose.

"Voted that Joseph Hammond, Alonzo A. Ware and George I. Cutler be the committee for the completion of the same."

As Mr. Read had commenced the work it was thought best to employ him to complete it, which they did, contracting as follows:—

"Said Read agrees to write said history containing about seven hundred pages and four hundred words to a page, dating from the earliest settlement of the township to the present time—to furnish all diagrams and plans—exclusive of engravings—necessary to illustrate the same, and to complete the whole in a workmanlike manner to the satisfaction of the committee and ready for the press by April 1, 1886. Said committee in behalf of said town agree to pay said Read for doing said work the sum of seven hundred dollars including the amount he has already received for the same from the town, to be paid in proportional instalments as the work progresses and is examined and approved by said committee. All material prepared by said Read for which he has or shall have received pay shall be the property of the town subject to the disposal of the committee."

This contract was dated March 30, 1885.

In consequence of Mr. Read's finding the work of greater magnitude than he supposed, and of other employments which claimed his attention, its completion has been delayed and the history brought down to the present date.

The township map has been prepared expressly for the book and gives the names of the resident population in 1890.

INTRODUCTION.

IN commencing to write the history of Swanzey, the compiler but partially realized the amount of labor to be performed or the difficulties to be surmounted in its execution.

More than one hundred and fifty years had elapsed since the town was first settled. During that time no attempt had been made by any one, to the writer's knowledge, to arrange and put in a connected form the events of the past.

The principal sources relied upon for data have been the public records of the proprietors and those of the town. Both of these are somewhat defective—a part of each being lost. The missing volume of the latter, and the most important, includes the years from 1794 to 1815. During this period the second meeting (town) house was built, and the war with Great Britain occurred. Information drawn from other sources partially fills these gaps. The records of the Congregational and Baptist churches have been very well kept and preserved—the former dating back to 1741, and the latter to the beginning of the year 1792. Valuable statistics have been obtained from both. Old family Bibles, the original owners of which have long since passed away, give the dates of births, marriages and deaths of many of former generations. The gravestones in our cemeteries likewise tell the story of the past. All these and many other relics have been consulted, together with state, county and army records. Histories of towns in this immediate vicinity, and also some of those whence the first settlers came, have been called into requisition. By careful inquiry, traditional information has been obtained and embodied in the work that might otherwise soon have passed into oblivion. Much credit is due the late Isaac W. Hammond (a native of this county and whose ancestors lived in this town), state historian and compiler of historical sketches, for the interest he has manifested in the success of this enterprise, and his readiness in furnishing data from the archives at Concord. It may be proper to add that the committee chosen by the town to supervise the writing and publication of this history, have generally acquiesced in the plan and general features of the work as outlined by the compiler, but in a few instances they have chosen to differ from him and take the responsibility of the changes they have caused to be made.

Although entire accuracy in statement has been aimed at, it is probable that many errors, especially in the genealogical part of the work, will be discovered. These, if properly noted and corrected, will enable the historian in after years to give a more reliable history to our children.

Swansey, 1892.

CHAPTER I.

Topography.

SITUATION — WATER-COURSES — MINERALS — SOIL — FOREST TREES — FRUITS
— WILD ANIMALS — BIRDS — FISH — SNAKES.

THE town of Swanzey lies some five miles to the south of Keene nearly in the central part of Cheshire county and in the valley of the Ashuelot upon what was once the bottom of a lake.

The following extract from Professor Hitchcock's Report of the Geological Survey of the State is illustrative of the character of this valley about Swanzey :

"The principal valley of Cheshire county has its widest development in Keene and Swanzey. When the ice melted here, this basin contained for a short time a body of water somewhat larger and probably deeper than Sunapee lake, which soon became filled by the alluvium of floods which the retreating ice-sheet sent down by every tributary from north, east and south. The Ashuelot river flows through this basin, lying near its east side above Keene, but crosses to its west side in the north part of Swanzey. Its west portion in Keene is drained by the last four miles of Ash Swamp brook. Three miles south from Keene the Ashuelot river finds an avenue westward, along which it is also bordered by low modified drift for several miles. The straight valley, however, continues to the south through Swanzey, being occupied by the South branch and Pond brook, with an alluvial area which decreases from one mile to one-third of a mile in width. We, thus here find a valley ten miles long from north to south, filled with nearly level deposits which are but slightly higher than the streams and bordered by steep and nearly continuous ranges of hills which rise from 400 to 600 feet upon each side. This alluvium consists, almost everywhere, of sand or fine gravel, perhaps extensively underlain by clay which is worked for brick-making near the south edge of the city of Keene. Its height is from 10 to 40 feet near the river, and the whole plain was originally of the same height with the highest proportions, which still occupy the greatest part of the alluvial area. These are generally separated from the lower interval by steep escarpments, which show that the difference in height is due to excavation by the river. In the south part of Swanzey we find occasional terraces, which are sometimes of coarse gravel, from sixty to seventy feet above South Branch, showing that much material at first deposited here was afterwards channelled out by this stream and carried northward to the broad, low plains."

Thus, it will be seen, that three general divisions characterize the surface of Swanzey. The first includes that which is elevated above the plains, the second the plains, the third the intervals and meadows.

The hills and mountains are of granitic formation, generally uneven, and some of them quite rough. Several of the highest elevations are designated mountains and are several hundred feet higher than the adjacent plains.

The mountains are Mount Huggins, which is in the northeast corner of the town; Mount Cresson, west of the Ashuelot river, about a mile from the Keene line; Mount Caesar near the central part of the town; Peaked mountain in the southwest corner and Franklin mountain at the northern base of which is "Westport;" "Pine Hill" in the northwestern part of the town, at the north spur of which "stood the home" of Joseph Cross, and "Cobble Hill," near the home of the late John Grimes. All are interesting places to visit.

Everywhere upon uplands, hills and mountains are to be seen the effects of the glacial period. In many places there are extensive drift formations, of which a most noticeable one is at East Swanzey. On many of the hills and mountains the loose rocks have been swept away, leaving the underlying rocks smoothed off by the moving glacier. Boulders are profusely distributed, large ones often lying upon the drift, having been rounded and smoothed. Many large ones are to be seen high up on the hills and mountains. A large one lies on the top of Mount Caesar. The most conspicuous boulder is near Charles Holbrook's house. It is of immense size and lies upon a solid granite surface, only a small central part touching the rock beneath, giving it a prominent appearance. It has sheltered many flocks of sheep from the summer's heat and winter's storm.

The boulders generally come from hills and mountains not far away, but some of them came from places evidently quite distant. They must have been distributed at a period previous to the time when the surface of the lowlands was formed and are not often to be seen above the surface, having been buried to the depth of many feet under clay and sand.

After the upheavals that raised our hills and mountains; after they had been ploughed and ground by the glacier; after the glacier had distributed the earths and rocks, leaving them profusely scattered from the lowest valley to the highest mountain; after heat and frost, rain and atmosphere had disintegrated the surface rocks; after an immense amount of movable material had by mighty floods been brought into the lake, and after this material had been levelled and smoothed by the ceaseless motion of its water, then the barrier which had kept the valley a lake for ages gradually wore away and the valley ceased to be a lake.

The formation of rivers and brooks followed the draining of the lake; and from that time to the present their currents have been moulding much of the surface into its present form.

Much the largest river in Swanzey is the Ashuelot. It enters the town nearly at the centre of the north line and flows in a south and southwesterly direction. It has cut down to the primitive rocks in three places,—at Westport, at West Swanzey, and at a place less than two miles above West Swanzey. Before it was obstructed by dams, it had a fall of some twenty-four feet in passing a distance of about six miles in the town; ten feet of this fall were at Westport, ten at West Swanzey and four feet above West Swanzey. Its channel is generally deep and its movement sluggish.

Much the largest of the other streams is the South branch which enters the town from the southwest corner of Marlborough, flows some three miles in a southwesterly direction and then runs about five miles west and north, entering the Ashuelot about a mile from Keene line. It has not apparently cut down to the primitive rocks at any place. For the first three miles it has considerable fall, and its bed most of the way is stony. The rest of the way the bed is sandy and the fall light. Its fall from the Marlborough line to the Ashuelot river is probably somewhat over a hundred feet.

Pond brook runs from Swanzey pond in an easterly direction to the South branch. Its fall is slight. Two small streams enter the town from Richmond and connect with Pond brook. The east one has a slow current without falls; the west one is smaller and more rapid.

Hyponeco brook, an Indian name, has its source upon the east side of the Ashuelot range of mountains and reaches the Ashuelot river by a circuitous route, a short distance above Westport.

California brook has its source in Chesterfield. Its direction is east of south and it enters the Ashuelot between West Swanzey and Westport.

Rixford brook runs some distance through the extreme west part of Swanzey. It rises in Chesterfield and flows into the Ashuelot in Winchester some distance below Swanzey line.

Swanzey pond is a natural body of water. It is about a mile and a half southwest of Swanzey Centre. It covers about one hundred acres and is fed by small brooks and springs. The water is quite clear and pure.

MINERALS.

Swanzey is not a mining town, yet magnetite and graphite exist in considerable quantities. Potstone is also found.

Magnetite is found in such quantities in some parts of the state that efforts have been made to mine it, especially at the Franconia mine in Lisbon. In Swanzey may be found very good specimens of the crystal, especially toward the Marlborough line.

Graphite or plumbago occurs in the rocks of Swanzey, but not to an extent to justify mining operations as at Nelson or Goshen.

From the northwest side of Franklin mountain, stone was quarried for the Episcopal church in Keene. The ridges of gneiss crop out in several places in Swanzey, especially east of Swanzey pond.

SOIL.

The State of New Hampshire is covered with soil of four kinds. The Connecticut valley is covered with a soil derived from calcareous rocks, and it is this soil which is the richest and most valuable of the four; but as we pass to the eastward we reach a basin composed of gneissic and granitic soils, which has the least value of all. It is in this basin that Swanzey lies.

The greater part of the state is underlain by gneiss,—practically the same as granite—but which produces a better soil than granite. The soluble element present is usually potash, from ten to twelve per cent, a valuable substance to be added to the soil.

When the land in Swanzey was first cleared, the soil, enriched by vegetation, produced excellent crops, but when subjected to the ordinary operations of farming soon became exhausted.

The inevitable result has been that lands once occupied as farms have been abandoned, and the cellar holes and other remains are all that exist to show where was once the home of a prosperous farmer.

There still remains, however, considerable land in the hills which produces good crops and upon which the owners still live, and there is no probability, with the improvements in farming now in vogue, that they will ever be abandoned.

The plains of the town are quite extensive, and it is upon these plains that most of the varied crops of rye, corn, beans and buckwheat have been raised, together with flax, oats and potatoes.

The quantity of hay cut upon the plains has always been comparatively small. The soil here has not sufficient clay in its composition to render it productive without constant enriching, and extended droughts, doubtless brought about by the destruction of our forests, affect the raising of good crops upon this land.

The extensive forests, especially upon hills, are the safeguard of the farmer. The rains are absorbed and held through their agency and the freshets are therefore avoided, while the evaporations take place at the spot where the rain fell, not from the lakes and ocean into which the streams, swollen by freshets pour; thus there is a more equal distribution of rain in the neighborhood of the hills.

It is a significant fact that, in the northern portion of the state which has less rain than the southern and central portions, the hay crops are often above the average the same years that the hay crops in the south are poor on account of drought. This is because the northern portions have extensive forests which hold the moisture during what would otherwise be periods of drought.

Farm buildings quite generally are located upon the plains and upon this land water may be obtained without excavating to a great depth, as there is a solid clay formation below the sand which insures a good and pure supply of water.

A mineral spring in the north part of the town on the border of Great meadow has obtained considerable notoriety.

The large amount of meadow upon the Ashuelot river, the South branch and numerous brooks, has been the foundation of most of the farming since the town was settled. Large quantities of hay are taken from these meadows annually, without the application of manure, their production being kept up by occasional overflowing of water. They generally have a clay soil, as they lie below the line which separates the clay earth from the sandy earth. They are adapted to high cultivation and are now much appreciated for this purpose.

FOREST TREES.

Swanзей, to-day, has but one-third of its surface covered with forest trees. Throughout this region the chestnut was once a common tree, although to-day comparatively scarce.

Before the denudation of the land of the primitive forest, the white pine was the most numerous of our forest trees, growing everywhere, but particularly adapted to the plains. This tree supplied the most excellent timber and was highly appreciated by the colonists before the British government caused the broad arrow to be affixed upon the choicest trees as a sign that they were to be used only for the King's navy.

Among other trees of this group the Norway and pitch pine were found in some quantity; the first particularly in the southeastern corner of the town.

Hemlock was, next to the pine, the most abundant and was found upon the hills and intervalles.

Red oak was more common than white, which was found more especially in the southwestern portions. The first of these varieties were often of good size.

Upon the clayey soils the elms flourished to a considerable extent, such a soil being particularly adapted for their growth.

Of hard wood trees, the beech was most numerous, while of the birches, the white was the most common growing on a lighter soil than either the black or yellow variety.

Rock maple occurs in considerable numbers upon the intervalles and hills, but is not to be considered as one of the principal forest trees.

Although not so stately as the rock maple, the red, and white, or river maple, occur to some extent, and the first, particularly, was perhaps more widely distributed than the red maple.

One of the trees, once common in the central and western portions of the town, yet rare in the eastern, was the walnut. The chestnut was most abundant in the southwest part.

Much of the sandy land of the town was congenial to the growth of the poplar, and next to the pine and hemlock was the most common tree.

The black and little red cherry were common trees, and to-day the choke cherry, which was but little known to the early settlers, is fast monopolizing the waysides and river banks.

Upon the rich moist upland the white ash thrived, and the black ash was common upon the swamps and meadows.

A limited number of basswood and butternuts were found upon the uplands, and spruces and buttonwood along the river bottoms and swamps.

The growth of white pine and grey birch is increasing, as much of the cleared land has been abandoned and has grown up to brush, which easily gives way to the pine and birch. The gradual reclothing of our hillsides with forest trees is a matter of great satisfaction to all interested in the farming interests of the state. A careful and systematic cutting of timber is conducive to the better and healthier growth of the remaining trees and at the same time does not injure the source from which the profit is derived. We may turn to many of the older communities in Europe and learn much in this regard; for there the stripping of forests is expressly forbidden, yet no complaints are heard, as the owners realize it is better to draw a small but assured income yearly from the ownership of their forests than to use the whole at once and obtain a comparatively small amount, besides destroying the great storehouse of moisture.

FRUITS.

The blackberry, raspberry, strawberry and blueberry are the principal native fruits and grow extensively upon land which has been burned over and partially cleared. The strawberry is most abundant upon mowing fields cleared within a few years.

The blueberry was not abundant in olden times, but is increasing especially in old, moist pastures long since deserted by the cattle.

The wild grape grows upon the intervalles and produces very good fruit, although the improvement of the land has not tended to better its quality.

WILD ANIMALS.

The native animals that were known to the early settlers and which became nearly extinct here many years since, were the wolf, bear, catamount, lynx, beaver, otter and deer. Those which caused the inhabitants the most annoyance were the wolf and bear. It is not known that any person in the town ever suffered personal harm by either of these animals, but their habits were known to be such that persons living in secluded places or travelling through forests remote from settlements, were in constant dread of encountering them; this was particularly the case with women and children.

The loss of sheep, caused by the depredations of these animals, was a constant annoyance, and the state awarded a bounty of six pounds for the killing of each wolf, and in 1787 Joseph Whitcomb, 3d, and in 1789, Thomas Greene and Jonathan Woodcock each obtained the reward.

The killing of wolves was considered of so much consequence that arrangements would be made for a wolf hunt which would draw out hundreds of persons, who would surround some dense forest, usually a swamp, which was supposed to be the wolves' haunt, and then close in from all sides and entrap the animals.

One of the noted places for these hunts was the swamp in the west part of what is now Troy. Some of these wolf hunts were made on so extensive a scale as to surround some part of Mt. Monadnock.

The bear, though less dreaded than the wolf, was not an animal for which the people had any particular affection. Night was the time for Bruin to take a look about the farm houses and appropriate such domestic animals as might have been left exposed to its depredations. Incidents have been related as having occurred from apprehension that a bear was around one's dwelling which were both laughable and provoking; one man having shot in the dark and killed a supposed bear prowling about his premises, carried the carcass into his house, only to be asked by a youngster, "Do bears have hoofs?" The bear became a black sheep. Another man, mistaking in the dark his black cow for a bear, shot and killed it.

Since the beginning of the present century but few bears or wolves have been seen in this vicinity.

Catamounts were not often encountered even by the first settlers, and when they were it was in some secluded place. John Whitcomb, 1st, and one of the Hammonds, while hunting upon Bear hill in the south part of the town, were attracted by the barking of their dog to a place where they found him in a deep, dark recess of a ledge. In their anxiety to ascertain what the dog was barking at, one of them crawled into the ledge and soon saw, through the dark, the glare of the eyeballs of an animal which he shot with deadly effect; the creature, afterward found to be a catamount, jumped and caught the dog in its mouth, both dying there together.

Lynxes and wild-cats were never common, but it may not be said that they have become entirely extinct, as occasionally reports are circulated that one of these animals has been seen or killed.

It is not probable that beavers were very plentiful here when the town was first settled, and the only place the writer has seen where they lived is on California brook. Some of the old conveyances of land upon that brook make mention that the land was above or below the beaver dam. It is probable they did live on other brooks, but the fact is not authenticated.

It is known that otters have lingered about some of the waters of the town nearly down to the present time.

Of all the native animals the deer was the favorite with the early settlers. Its value for food, its innocent nature and its sportive character made the people anxious that it should not become extinct. To protect them from wanton destruction, laws were made and deer-reeves chosen by the town to see that the laws were enforced. The effort was a vain one and but few have been seen in the town for the last ninety years.

The fox, woodchuck, skunk, hedgehog, raccoon, rabbit, musk-rat, mink, the grey, red, striped and flying squirrel are here and most of them quite as plentiful as they were in former years.

BIRDS.

The migration of flocks of wild geese going north in the spring and south in the fall is occasionally seen at the present time, but their number has been diminishing from year to year. It is not known that they ever had their haunts here during summer.

The wild turkey was a valuable bird in early times. Considerable numbers of them once lived where they could feed upon nuts and have the south side of a hill for their haunt in the winter. It was nearly a hundred years from the time the town was settled before they became entirely extinct.

The two birds which have furnished the principal sport for the gunner are the pigeon and partridge. The pigeons come north in the spring in flocks and return south in the fall. After their advent in the spring they separate into pairs and are found during summer more generally in dense forests than elsewhere. Late in the summer they begin to congregate into flocks. Fifty years ago they were so numerous that some men did quite a business in catching them with nets. They were attracted to particular places by having grain fed to them upon beds, and while eating a net was sprung over them. Often a number of dozens were caught at a time. Their numbers have been constantly diminishing. Partridges are much hunted, but they do not appear to decrease.

Robins, swallows, martins, wrens and whip-poor-wills are a privileged class of birds. Seldom have they been destroyed by the most reckless boy. Robins in the fields and swallows about the barn are more plentiful than in early years. Very few cages at farmhouses are now provided for martins and wrens, as their numbers have been constantly decreasing. Whip-poor-wills are likely to flock here in large numbers for a summer abode, and their peculiar notes will continue to be heard morning and evening.

Crows and hawks have maintained their existence against all efforts for their destruction. The depredations of crows in the corn fields and of the hawks in the poultry yards have made them the farmers' hated birds; although a decrease in the number of the latter have made them less annoying than formerly.

Our meadows still resound with the music of the bobolinks and the woods with that of the brown thrasher.

Wild ducks, fish hawks, eagles, owls, cranes, snipes and loons have all had their haunts here, but their numbers have been too limited to afford sportsmen more than an occasional opportunity to capture them.

FISH.

Before dams were constructed on the Connecticut and Ashuelot rivers, salmon, shad and lamprey eels frequented the large streams of the town in such numbers that they constituted an important article of food. Of the other fish, trout was the most valuable during the early years of the settlement. The South branch and some of the large brooks once contained many large trout. Refuse from mills has made the water uncongenial to this fish. In some streams, anglers have not been slow in their efforts to capture the shining beauties; consequently but few trout of good size are to be found in any of the streams in the town. Small-sized trout are still quite numerous in some of the small brooks. No great change has taken place in the size or number of the other native fishes.

SNAKES.

Of the snakes it is supposed that the black snake is the only one that made its advent here since the town was settled. Quite a sensation was created some sixty years ago by a report that a black snake had been seen in the southeast part of the town. Since then they have been increasing and are now quite common.

One of the annoyances to the inhabitants in early times was the flea. The primitive houses and their surroundings afforded means for their propagation in large numbers, and their bite was a torment especially to children. In recent years people have suffered but little from them.

CHAPTER II.

The Indians of the Connecticut and Ashuelot Valleys.

INDIAN WIGWAMS AND RELICS—STATEMENTS OF BLAKE AND WHEELOCK—IMPLEMENTS AT SAND BANK—INDIAN DAM—FRENCH AND INDIAN RAIDS AT SWANZEY, KEENE, WINCHESTER, HINSDALE, NORTHFIELD, CHARLESTOWN AND PUTNEY—MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN CAPTURED, SCALPED AND MURDERED—TOWNS ABANDONED—MUSTER ROLL AT FORTS.

THE name of the tribe of Indians formerly inhabiting the Ashuelot valley was Squakheag. The territory occupied by the tribe extended northward to the headwaters of the Ashuelot river, eastward to Mount Monadnock, south to Miller's river, and several miles west of the Connecticut river. This territory was abandoned by the Indians several years before it was granted by Massachusetts to the first white proprietors. It is not known that there is any deed in existence by which the Indians conveyed away these lands, neither is it known that they ever complained of having their possessions here wrongfully taken from them. It is not definitely known where the Indians went when they left here, but probably they mingled with those higher up on the Connecticut river, or went to the St. Francis' tribe in Canada. This tribe claimed the territory in the northern part of New Hampshire and Vermont. They had numerous settlements in different parts of their territory, usually near the banks of the larger streams, in locations favorable for hunting and fishing, raising corn and pumpkins. The wigwam was the Indians' habitation. Its common form was circular, made of sticks stuck in the ground, converging at the top, and leaving an aperture for the escape of smoke. Two low openings on opposite sides answered for doors. Boughs of trees and turf served for its covering, and skins of animals and mats for most of its furniture.

The Indians lived mostly on nuts, corn, pumpkins, the flesh of animals and fish. They had kettles made of soapstone in which they boiled vegetables, and other utensils that held water and were used in cooking. Hot stones were placed in vessels of water to heat it.

They used a kind of spit for cooking large pieces of meat. Fish were cooked just as they were taken from the water; birds were plucked but not otherwise dressed; small animals were roasted whole and eaten without having their entrails taken out. Corn was pounded into coarse meal and made into samp; it was sometimes parched and pounded fine, mixed with suet and made into balls and called nokake. Pumpkins were cut into strips and dried in the sun. They smoked and dried fish to preserve them. They were expert in killing game with arrows, and capturing it with traps and yank-ups. To kill the trees and burn the brush where they wished to raise their corn and pumpkins, fire was relied upon, as but a small part of the Indians' time was employed in cultivating land; they naturally incline to live by hunting and fishing.

That there was once a large settlement of Indians at the Sand Bank, on the southeast side of Ashmetot river near Sawyer's Crossing, is too evident to be doubted. Traces of an irregular fortification inclosing several acres of ground still exist. It must have been here that large quantities of implements were made for hunting and fishing. Fragments of hard white quartz, which were broken from the rocks from which they made their implements, are now to be seen in the sand. These relics were once too common to induce people to preserve them, and but few have been collected and they are in possession of Swanzev people. The drifting sand will soon obliterate and hide from our view all these mementos of the race of people that once roamed over these plains where we now securely dwell.

Messrs. Geo. A. Wheelock, Hiram Blake and F. K. Pratt of Keene have taken much interest in collecting and preserving these Indian relics. Mr. Blake has furnished the compiler with a schedule of these remains found at the Sand Bank, among which are the following:—

A stone pestle, fourteen and one-half inches long, well finished from a hard grey stone; a chisel, six inches long, well finished; a small gouge three and one-half inches long, well finished; an unfinished gouge five and one-half inches long, roughly worked into shape; a collection of ten arrowheads made of quartz and flint, varying from one inch to three inches in length, some of which are very fine specimens, several are broken at the points but most are perfect; a very fine small quartz arrowhead; three arrowheads made of the same stone as the chippings or fragments which are still found lying about on the Sand Bank—these fragments excepting the quartz, are of a stone foreign to this part of the country; numerous specimens or pieces of Indian pottery, some of which show evidence of ornamentation.

On the farm of Jonas L. Moore were found, by Mr. Pratt, a little below the Sand Bank, a large flint spearhead and four flint arrowheads of peculiar shape. On Asa Smith's farm a spearhead four and one-half inches long, the top part broken off; also an arrowhead with shank broken, made of flint.

An arrowhead of jasper, very fine, found by Benjamin Whitcomb on his farm at West Swanzey.

A few years ago as Charles L. Ball was ploughing on the side hill south of his house about five rods from the river his plough came in contact with what proved to be a human skull and exposed it in the furrow, and also twenty-four teeth, and on further examination of the ground he ascertained that a grave had been made in the sand about two and a half feet long, two feet wide and two feet deep when made, and was probably deeper as the surface appeared to have been washed or worn away: In the west end and facing the east, in a sitting posture was the skeleton of a human body; the hands, arms, chest, limbs, spinal column and feet, all, when the earth was removed settled in a mass, and was probably that of an Indian girl from fifteen to twenty years of age as determined by the size of the frame and position of the wisdom teeth. The sex was determined by hip bones and pelvis and the absence of such relics and implements in the grave as are usually buried with the opposite sex. He also found in the same land, arrowheads and two hatchets. The grave was in clear, white sand, and that the sand had been moved only within the limits of the grave, was distinctly to be seen. Near the river bank were some twenty places of from two and a half to three feet in diameter where fires seemed to have been kept burning for an indefinite period of time, and, from the surroundings and the situation it was an Indian camping ground for the winter.

Mr. Blake says:—"The sand bank, so called, is evidently the site of an Indian village, and bears strong evidence of having been fortified. A dark line of earth mixed with ashes and charcoal extends nearly around an enclosure of several acres. This may have been the line of a palisade or row of stakes stuck in the ground for the purpose of defence. The sand has drifted so much of late years that the line is very indistinct or nearly gone. Old residents of the locality state that when they were boys Indian relics were readily picked up on the spot, but few of them were preserved. The large quantity of chip-pings now found there as well as occasional pieces of pottery, indicate that these implements of war and domestic economy were made on the spot, and that for a time it was a permanent stopping place for the Indians."

Mr. Pratt states that he dug up, near this dark line of earth above mentioned, a clay vessel nearly entire, but that it soon crumbled in pieces when exposed to the air. Mr. Wheelock published in 1888, in the New England Observer, the following description of the Indian dam which is in the Ashuelot river between the Sand Bank and West Swanzey :

“ The low water in the Ashuelot, occasioned by the repairs at the Swanzey mill has exposed the old traditional Indian dam two miles above. Indians were lazy, and this work of theirs is the more surprising on this account ; perhaps there is nothing like it in the state. The river at this point is now almost a rapid and strewn with boulders for thirty rods or so. It is less than a hundred feet wide, but the dam being in the shape of a harrow pointing down stream is more than that distance. By skilful stepping it is possible to pass the point of the harrow, the apex of the dam, and somewhat farther. It is made of stones such as a man could lift, picked up in the stream above. It varies from six to twelve feet in thickness, according to the depth of water. It looks like a tumbled down wall mixed with gravel, but it must have cost weeks of labor. It is natural to suppose that the dam was made to aid in fishing for salmon with nets and spears. Below the dam is a flat boulder reached by stepping stones. Here stood the young brave and watched the silver-bellied salmon, and struck at him with his flint-pointed spear. Near by the old dam lives Jonas L. Moore. Here lived his father and grandfather before him. For one hundred and thirty years this has been called the Indian dam. Mr. Moore's father, in his boyhood, used to cross the river on the wall. The reason it is now so unknown is because the eel grass in the back water of the pond covers and conceals it. The Observer's representative was shown a beautiful spearpoint of Twin mountain flint. The elder Moore dug up a half peck of arrow and spearheads, all in one pocket. They were carelessly left on a stump and lost years ago. Some twenty Indian fire-places have been ploughed up here. These were simply circles in the middle of the wigwam, paved with stones from the river. The Swanzey Antiquarian Society should have a drawing of this dam showing the two eastern wings and the boulder.”

How much of the land in the vicinity of the Sand Bank had been subject to the rude cultivation practised by the Indians is not known. The fact that the first proprietors of Swanzey directed their attention to the meadow land on the Ashuelot above the Sand Bank and to the north part of the meadow on the South Branch, indicates that those meadows were found to be in condition to be easily brought under cultivation.

The year 1745 found settlements in Swanzey, Keene, Winchester, Hinsdale, Putney and Charlestown. The settlement in most of these towns commenced about ten years previous to this time. They had now a small population of hardy, industrious people. Meeting houses had been built in Keene and Winchester and a schoolhouse in Swanzey. Churches had been formed in Swanzey, Keene and Winchester, and ministers settled. Roads had been constructed between some of the towns, and in most of the towns a saw mill and a grist mill had been built. Much land had been cleared and numerous houses built. As already stated the Indians had left the locality before these settlements commenced and gave the settlers no trouble during these first few years. England and France were at war in 1745, and the war was transmitted to their colonies in America.

The St. Francis Indians instigated by the government of Canada, and with the Squakheags for allies, commenced the work of burning buildings, capturing, scalping and murdering the people of the English colonies.

March 26, 1745. The Indians burned the house of Rev. Timothy Harrington, of Swanzey. The house stood upon Meeting House Hill (on the Carpenter farm).

July 5. Two Indians took William Phips of Putney as he was hoeing corn. When they had carried him half a mile one of them went down a steep hill to fetch something which had been left. In his absence Phips, with his hoe, knocked down the Indian who was with him, and then seizing the Indian's gun shot the other as he ascended the hill. Phips was subsequently killed by three other Indians. The Indian whom Phips knocked down with his hoe died of his wound.

July 10. Deacon Josiah Fisher of Keene was killed as he was driving his cow to pasture. He was found dead and scalped in the road, near where the Lamson block now stands on Main street.

Oct. 12. The garrison at Putney was attacked by French and Indians. It was defended with so much bravery that they failed to capture it. The Indians had one of their number killed. At the time the fort was attacked Nehemiah How was cutting wood about eighty rods from the fort. He was discovered and captured and no attempt was made for his rescue. As the enemy were leading How up the West bank of Connecticut river David Rugg and Robert Baker were discovered crossing the river in a canoe. They were fired upon and Rugg was killed; Baker made for the opposite shore and escaped. Rugg was scalped and the scalp was placed on the top of a long pole and carried through Charlestown to Crown Point in triumph. How, the prisoner, was carried to Quebec where he died in prison. At the time How was captured the enemy killed some of the cattle and drove some away.

April 19, 1746. A party of about forty French and Indians, under command of Ensign De Neversville, appeared at Charlestown and captured Capt. John Spofford, Lieut. Isaac Parker and Steven Farnsworth. Captain Spofford had built a saw mill and a grist mill two years previous. He with the other men had been to the mill for boards with four oxen. As they were returning they were ambushed, captured and taken to Canada. After some time they were permitted to return to Boston under a flag of truce. Capt. Spofford's mills were burned, the oxen killed, and their tongues cut out.

April 23. A numerous band of Indians made their appearance in Keene. They were discovered by Ephraim Dorman early in the morning, in what was then a swamp east of the settlement. Mr. Dorman was out looking for his cow. He immediately gave an alarm by crying, Indians! Indians! and ran for the fort. Two Indians, who were concealed in bushes between him and the fort, sprang forward, aimed their pieces at him and fired, neither hitting him. Throwing away their arms, they then endeavored to capture him. Mr. Dorman, being a strong man, knocked one of them senseless; with the other he had a sharp contest, stripped him of his blanket, leaving him nearly naked. He made his escape and reached the fort in safety.

Most of the people were in the fort when the alarm was given; some were out attending to their cattle. Those who were out and in hearing distance rushed for the fort. A Mrs. Kinney had gone to a barn to milk her cow. She was aged and corpulent, and could walk only slowly. Before she reached the fort she was fatally stabbed in the back. John Bullard was at his barn. He endeavored to reach the fort, but was fatally shot in the back just before he reached it. He was carried in and expired in a few hours. A Mrs. Clark was at a barn about fifty rods from the fort. As she started for it, an Indian undertook to capture her. She gathered her clothes about her waist, and ran pursued by the Indian, who threw away his gun that he might outrun her. She, animated by the cheers of her friends, outran him and reached the fort in safety.

Nathan Blake was at his barn; hearing the cry of Indians, and presuming that his barn would be burned, he determined that his cattle should not be burned with it. Throwing open his stable door, he let them loose. Considering that his retreat to the fort was cut off, he went out at a back door, intending to secrete himself at the only place where the river could be crossed. He had gone but a few steps when he was hailed by a party of Indians concealed in a shop between him and the street. Looking back he saw several guns pointed at him, and at this instant several Indians started up from their place of concealment near him. Feeling himself in their power he gave himself up. They shook hands with him, and to the remark he made that he had not yet breakfasted, they smilingly replied that it must be a poor Englishman who could not go to Canada without his breakfast.

Mr. Blake was pinioned and conducted by an Indian into the woods and started for Canada. At Montreal he, with another person by the name of Warren, was compelled to run the gauntlet. Warren received a blow in the face for which he knocked down the Indian who gave it. For this he was assaulted by several Indians who beat him unmercifully, by which he was made a cripple for life. Blake exhibited more patience and fortitude and received no considerable injury. He was then conducted to Quebec, and from there to an Indian village several miles north.

Mr. Blake was a strong, athletic man. He could run with great speed, and was put to many tricks with Indians whom he beat. To have him beaten, a celebrated Indian runner was procured to run against him. At the time the race was to be run the whole tribe assembled. A Frenchman from Quebec was present, and, seeing the excitement, advised Blake to let the Indian beat, intimating that fatal consequences might ensue if he did not. Blake acted upon the Frenchman's advice and permitted his antagonist to reach the goal a moment before him.

In 1747, a Frenchman by the name of Raimbut was taken prisoner in Winchester. He held the rank of lieutenant. He was anxious to return to Canada. Considering his rank he agreed that if he could be taken to Canada he would procure the release of Blake and a prisoner by the name of Allen who was captured at Deerfield, Mass. To carry the arrangement into effect the governor of Massachusetts sent in February, 1748, John Hawks, Matthews Clesson and John Taylor, accompanied by Raimbout to Canada, under a flag of truce. The party went on snow shoes, and carried their provisions on their backs. They returned with Blake and Allen about the first of May.

Mr. Blake had married Elizabeth, a daughter of Abraham Graves of Swanzey, in 1741. She sent money by the men to buy the ransom of her husband if the negotiations failed.

The number of Indians in the party that made the attack upon Keene at the time of Blake's capture was estimated at about a hundred. They skulked around all sides of the fort during the forenoon and fired whenever they supposed their shot might be effectual. Whenever an Indian was seen by those in the fort he was fired at, and a number of them were seen to fall. It was supposed that as many as ten were killed, and their bodies consumed in a building which they burned. The Indians did not immediately leave the vicinity of the fort. Some three days after their first appearance they killed a number of cattle in the meadow, southeast of the fort.

When the attack was made upon Keene the firing was heard at the fort in Swanzev, the commander of which sent an express immediately to Winchester, with the information that the Indians had made an attack upon Keene. From Winchester the information was expressed from fort to fort to Colonel Pomroy, the military commander at Northampton. Colonel Pomroy, at the head of the military forces at that place, immediately started, and adding to his force as he proceeded by pressing horses and men into his service, he arrived at Keene with four hundred or five hundred men in a little more than forty-eight hours from the time the express left Swanzev, the distance down and back being at least ninety miles.

The military force after scouring the woods in the vicinity only found where the Indians encamped east of Beech hill.

May 2. At Charlestown, some women went to do their accustomed milking where the cows were kept, attended by a guard of soldiers. Eight Indians who had concealed themselves to await their arrival, fired and killed Seth Putnam. As the Indians were scalping him the soldiers fired and mortally wounded two of them, whom their companions carried off.

May 6. Deacon Timothy Brown and a soldier by the name of Robert Maffett left the fort in Swanzev to go to Keene. They were waylaid by a party of Indians that had been lying about the fort and captured. They were carried to Canada but subsequently released. Maffett belonged to Lunenburg, Mass., and was doing garrison duty at Swanzev. He shot and broke the Indian chief's arm before he surrendered.

At the same time that Brown and Maffett were taken, a party lay around the fort at Keene watching for an opportunity to plunder or take prisoners. One night the watch thought he heard some one trying the strength of the picket gate, when he fired. In the morning beads and blood were seen at the place where the fire was directed.

Massachusetts sent additional forces for the protection of these frontier New Hampshire towns, as no protection was being rendered them by the latter province. Captain Paine went with a force for the defence of Charlestown. About twenty of his soldiers went to view the place where Putnam had been killed a few days previous. A party of Indians lying in ambush fired upon them and then endeavored to cut off their retreat to the fort. Captain Stevens with a party rushed out for their assistance. In the conflict that ensued five were killed on each side, and the Indians took one prisoner. They retreated leaving some of their guns and blankets. This conflict occurred about May 24, 1746.

About a month later another conflict was had at the same place. Captain Stevens and Captain Brown went into the meadow to look for their horses. Their dogs gave indications that Indians were ambushed for them, when they put themselves into position and gave the first fire. After a short encounter the Indians were driven into a swamp taking with them several of their number who had been killed. They left, when they retreated, guns, spears, hatchets and blankets. Captain Stevens and Captain Brown lost but one of their men.

June 24. Some twenty Indians attacked a number of men who were at work in a meadow near Bridgman's fort, Hinsdale. They killed William Robins and Jonas Barker, captured Daniel How and John Beaman, wounded Michael Gilson and Patrick Ray.

July 24. Colonel Willard and a guard of twenty men went with a team from Fort Dummer to Hinsdale's mill and when near the mill were ambushed. None of Colonel Willard's men were killed or captured. One man was wounded.

Aug. 3. The enemy appeared again near the fort at Charlestown. Dogs were kept at the fort and they gave the first intimation to those within of the presence of the enemy by barking and by actions peculiar to them when Indians were in the vicinity. Captain Stevens, the commander, in order to satisfy himself that an enemy was in the vicinity, sent out scouts. The men were scarcely out of the fort when they were fired upon, and Ebenezer Phillips killed. He was so near the fort that a soldier crept carefully out at night and fastened a rope to him when he was drawn in and buried. No other one of the scouts was injured. The enemy, after they were discovered, put forth every effort to take the garrison. They fired their muskets against the walls and made other demonstrations in Indian fashion to effect their object. They hung around the fort two days, and burned all the buildings outside except one. Of the buildings burned were the mills that Captain Spofford was rebuilding where his had been previously burned. Before they left they killed most of the horses, cattle and hogs. A company of troops from Massachusetts was stationed at the fort at the time and sixteen of their horses were killed.

Aug. 6. Winchester was visited by thirty of these Indians. A number of men were passing in a road near which the Indians had concealed themselves, when the latter fired and killed Joseph Rawson and wounded Amasa Wright.

Oct. 22. Jonathan Sartwell was captured near Fort Hinsdale.

The year 1746 must have been one of extreme peril to these frontier towns. The settlers were few and widely scattered. Cultivation of their land was their main dependence for support. To go outside the forts to labor upon their farms was at all times extremely dangerous. The Indians were constantly moving from place to place. After they had inflicted some outrage upon the inhabitants of one place, off they would go to another settlement, and the first intimation of their coming would be the capture or killing of some unsuspecting person.

Late in the year Massachusetts appears to have decided not to continue her military protection to these New Hampshire towns, and the forces which she had kept at Charlestown were withdrawn and afterwards the settlement was abandoned.

The settlements at Keene and Swanzev were continued through the winter and it is not known that they were disturbed.

To show the condition of the New Hampshire towns in the Ashuelot and Connecticut valleys, we will quote the following from Rev. H. P. Saunderson's history of Charlestown. "During the winter, 1846-47, the Indians were so ice-bound in Canada, that the frontiers suffered only in apprehension, as no incursions were made upon them. In this interval, some gentlemen who had the wisdom to perceive that the protection of the Connecticut river settlements was required by the true interests of the country, fortunately prevailed on the assembly of Massachusetts to make the needful provision for the defence of the forts and garrisons which in consequence of the withdrawal of her troops had been deserted. They, moreover, sought to convince them, that this would require not only a sufficiency of men to afford garrisons for the places that would be able to resist such assaults as would be likely to be made upon them, but also an equal additional force to range the woods and watch the motions of the enemy, and prevent their depredations, by anticipating their designs, and by suddenly falling upon and surprising them in their encampments, when they had not the least expectation of an assault; thus practising upon them their own tactics.

The prime mover in this matter, we have reason to believe, was Captain Stevens; who, by the promptness and wisdom with which he had acted, had already gained no inconsiderable influence with the government. He had personally addressed a memorial to Governor

Shirley, setting forth his views of the situation, from which the following is an extract: 'No. 4 is situated upon Connecticut river, about 45 miles above Northfield; on which place (No. 4) the enemy have continually endeavored to do spoil; and many great advantages have been lost for want of a suitable number of soldiers at that garrison. Fort Massachusetts, that was, is situated about 34 miles from Deerfield, and is the proper road of an enemy coming upon our frontiers when they come by Wood Creek and the drowned lands, as No. 4 is when they come by Otter Creek. Now it appears to me if one hundred men were early sent to each of these posts, say by the latter end of March, and suitable encouragement was given to them to go and waylay the streams the enemy come upon when they issue out from Crown Point, they might be very much discouraged in coming in small parties as heretofore: which in my opinion will be of the greatest service to the public and the only effectual method to carry on the war. If anything be done it should be done early in the Spring, as it is evident from past experience that this enemy will be down by the first of April. There is one thing which I have observed while among the Indians; they are a people which are greatly elated and flushed up when they have success and as soon discouraged when they are disappointed.'

In their endeavours, these gentlemen, with Captain Stevens at their head, were only partially successful; for the assembly, at this time, could be induced to go no further than to detail such a number of men for garrisoning the forts as, in their estimation, would be sufficient to repel the enemy in case of attack; and the subject of taking the offensive was postponed, for some future consideration.

This being the state of affairs, in the latter part of March, 1747, Capt. Phineas Stevens, with thirty men, was ordered by Governor Shirley to march to No. 4 and take possession.

This post, for more than two months, had been entirely deserted and fears were entertained that, in case it should be left longer, it would either be burned or taken by the enemy. The movement was timely, and in every respect most fortunate. Stevens marched through the wilderness and arrived at No. 4 on the 27th of March, to find the fort in good condition; but what was his surprise, on entering it to find himself and company heartily welcomed by an old spaniel and a cat, which had been left behind at its desertion, and had remained in it during the winter, as its sole defenders and occupants.

Captain Stevens and company had been in possession of the fort only a few days before they were led to surmise the presence of an enemy. Their suspicions were first aroused by the uneasy appearance of the dogs, and their continued barking. These indications of something that was not right induced them to keep the gate closely barred. But here we must let Captain Stevens tell his own story. In his report to Governor Shirley, dated April 9, 1747, he says, 'Our dogs being very much disturbed, which gave us reason to think that the enemy were about, occasioned us not to open the gate at the usual time; but one of our men being desirous to know the certainty, ventured out privately to set on the dogs, about nine o'clock in the morning; and went about twenty rods from the fort firing off his gun and saying, choboy, to the dogs. Whereupon, the enemy, being within a few rods, immediately arose from behind a log and fired; but through the goodness of God, the man got into the fort with only a slight wound. The enemy being then discovered, immediately arose from their ambushments and attacked us on all sides. The wind being very high, and every thing exceedingly dry, they set fire to all the old fences and also to a log house about forty rods distant from the fort to the windward; so that within a few minutes we were entirely surrounded with fire all which was performed with the most hideous shouting and firing, from all quarters which they continued, in a very terrible manner, until the next day at ten o'clock at night, without intermission; during which time we had no opportunity to eat or sleep. But notwithstanding all their shouting and threatenings, our men seemed not to be in the least daunted, but fought with great resolution; which doubtless, gave the enemy reason to think we had determined to stand it out to the last degree. The enemy had provided themselves with a sort of fortification which they had determined to push before them and bring fuel to the side of the fort, in order to burn it down. But instead of performing what they threatened, and seemed to be immediately going to undertake, they called to us and desired a cessation of arms until sunrise the next morning which was granted; at which time they would come to a parley. Accordingly the French General Debeline came with about sixty of his men, with a flag of truce, and stuck it down within about twenty rods of the fort in plain sight of the same, and said if we would send three men to him he would send as many to us to which we complied. The General sent in a French lieutenant with a French soldier and an Indian.

Upon our men going to Monsieur, he made the following proposal; viz. :—that in case we would immediately resign up the fort, we should all have our lives and liberty to put on all the clothes we had, and also to take a sufficient quantity of provisions to carry us to Montreal, and bind up our provisions and blankets, lay down our arms and march out of the fort.

Upon our men returning, he desired that the Captain of the fort would meet him half way, and give an answer to the above proposal, which I did; and upon meeting the Monsieur he did not wait for me to give an answer, but went on in the following manner, viz. :—that what had been promised he was ready to perform; but upon refusal he would immediately set the fort on fire, and run over the top; for he had seven hundred men with him, and if we made any further resistance or should happen to kill one Indian, we might expect all to be put to the sword. ‘The fort,’ said he, ‘I am resolved to have, or die. Now do what you please; for I am as easy to have you fight as to give up.’ I told the General, that in case of extremity his proposal would do; but inasmuch as I was sent here by my master, the Captain General, to defend the fort, it would not be consistent with my orders to give it up unless I was better satisfied that he was able to perform what he had threatened; and, furthermore, I told him that it was poor encouragement to resign into the hands of the enemy, that upon one of their number being killed, they would put all to the sword, when it was probable that we had killed some of them already. ‘Well,’ said he, ‘go into the fort, and see whether your men dare fight any more or not, and give me an answer quick, for my men want to be fighting.’ Whereupon, I came into the fort and called all the men together, and informed them what the French General said: and then put it to vote which they chose, either to fight on or resign; and they voted to a man to stand it out as long as they had life. Upon this, I returned the answer that we were determined to fight it out. Upon which they gave a shout, and then fired and so continued firing and shouting until daylight the next morning.

About noon they called to us and said ‘good morning,’ and desired a cessation of arms for two hours that they might come to a parley; which was granted. The General did not come himself but sent two Indians, who came within about eight rods of the fort and stuck down their flag and desired that I would send out two men to them, which I did and the Indians made the following proposal, viz. :—That in case we would sell them provisions, they would leave and not fight any more; and desired my answer, which was, that selling them provisions for money was contrary to the laws of nations; but if they would send in a captive for every five bushels of corn I would supply them. Upon the Indians returning the General gave this answer, four or five guns were fired against the fort, and they withdrew, as we supposed, for we heard no more of them.’

Captain Stevens in writing to another person about this affair says : 'Those who were not employed in firing at the enemy were employed in digging trenches under the bottom of the fort. We dug no less than eleven of them, so deep that a man could go and stand upright on the outside and not endanger himself ; so that when these trenches were finished we could wet all the outside of the fort, which we did and kept it wet all night. We drew some hundreds of barrels of water, and to undergo all this hard service there were but thirty men. The enemy never had the courage to bring their fortification nor run over the fort but in lieu thereof, spent the night in shooting their fiery arrows, which were easily put out.

In all this time we had scarce opportunity to eat or sleep. The cessation of arms gave us no matter of rest, for we suspected they did it to obtain advantage against us. I believe men were never known to hold out with better resolution, for they did not seem to sit or lie still one moment. There were but thirty men in the fort, and although we had some thousands of guns fired at us, there were but two men slightly wounded.

By the above account you may form some idea of the distressed circumstances we were under, to have such an army of starved creatures around us, whose necessity obliged them to be the more earnest. They seemed every minute as if they were going to swallow us up ; using all the threatening language they could invent, with shouting and firing as if the heavens and the earth were coming together.

But notwithstanding all this, our courage held out to the last. We were informed by the French that came into the fort, that our captives were removed from Quebec to Montreal ; which, they say, are about three hundred in number by reason of sickness which is at Quebec, and that they were well and in good health, except three who were left sick, and that about three captives had died who were said to be Dutchmen. They also informed us that John Norton had liberty to preach to the captives, and that they have some thousands of French and Indians out and coming against our frontier.'

The mortification of Debeline in his failure to take the fort must have been extreme but, though baffled in the attack on No. 4 he did not return with his forces immediately to Canada, but, dividing them into small parties, sent them out to hover around various places on the frontier. A small number of them very soon after ventured to return and encamp secretly near the river at no great distance from the fort from which they had been so summarily repulsed.

But Captain Stevens observing a smoke, from which he was led to think that all was not right, went out after them and they precipitately retreated. Other parties of them hovered about Northfield, Winchester and Upper Ashuelot, but they had been taught too severe a lesson at No. 4, to allow them to return to its vicinity."

April 15, 1747. A party of Indians, or French and Indians, from up the Connecticut river, made a sudden descent upon Northfield, killed and scalped Nathaniel Dickinson and Asabel Burt as they were driving up cows just after sunset.

This party during the night of the 15th started for Winchester, Swanzev and Keene, and burned the three towns which had been abandoned a few days before. It is probable the inhabitants had learned before they left that the French and Indian forces had attacked Charlestown, and as no military forces had been provided to garrison the forts in these towns they resolved to abandon them immediately. The annals of Keene contain the following:—"The inhabitants remained in the fort until March or April, 1747. About that time they passed an informal vote releasing Mr. Bacon, their minister, from all his obligations to them, and resolved to abandon the settlement, which resolution was immediately executed. Soon after a party of Indians visited the place and burnt all the buildings except the mill on Beaver brook, and the house in which the miller had resided."

It is traditional that the inhabitants of Swanzev left very suddenly. They preserved some articles that they could not well take away by burying them. A revered bible is now in the hands of the Belding family that was saved by being buried under a brass kettle. The statement has been made that in one instance a babe was left in its cradle and was rescued in the night.

One can well imagine what must have been the feelings of the men, women and children as they left the settlement. The men's feelings alternated between sadness and hopefulness; they were sad when they thought of the homes they were leaving which were the result of years of hard labor; they were joyous when they thought that they should succeed in saving their families from the horrors of falling into the hands of the savages. The women thought more about the safety of their children than the homes they were leaving. The children felt a degree of mirthfulness when they were inspired by the thought that they were soon to see their grandfathers and grandmothers, uncles and aunts, at the old Massachusetts homes, about which they had heard their parents talk.

It is evident that some of the men returned to the settlement during the summer for the purpose of obtaining some income from their land. Between these men and the Indians there was some skirmishing in August, but without fatal results. The Indians succeeded in killing some cattle.

Oct. 16. Major Willard, Capt. Alexander and others went from here to Northfield, and when passing through Winchester they met a Frenchman coming towards them. When he saw the party he jumped behind a tree. Capt. Alexander, being foremost, shot and wounded him in the breast, which wound was supposed to be mortal. The party, presuming that Indians were near, immediately left. He was found by the Indians, but they left him, fearing that they would be pursued. He revived, and after a few days went to Northfield and delivered himself a prisoner to Capt. Alexander.

Oct. 22. Capt. Bridgman's fort, house and barn at Hinsdale were burned and Jonathan Sawtle captured.

Nov. 14. Twelve men left the garrison at Charlestown to go to places below. They had gone but half a mile when they were waylaid and Nathan Gould and Thomas Goodale killed and scalped, Oliver Avery was wounded and John Henderson captured.

Active military operations closed in November and the forts in New Hampshire were garrisoned by soldiers provided by Massachusetts. During the winter Capt. Phineas Stevens had a company of sixty men at Charlestown, and Capt. Josiah Willard, jr., had a company of twenty-six men at Ashuelots. Of Capt. Willard's men Thomas Cresson, Thomas Cresson, jr., William Grimes, Asahel Graves, James Heaton, Samuel Heaton and William Heaton had been residents of Lower Ashuelot before the place was burned.

In the year 1748 soldiers were early provided for the different posts, and companies were enlisted as rangers to be employed in scouting the trails which the enemy were accustomed to take when they made their raids upon the settlements. We insert the following muster-roll of the company stationed at the Ashuelots (Upper and Lower).

ROLL OF CAPT. JOSIAH WILLARD, JR.'S CO. AT ASHUELOTS, FEB. 10
TO OCT. 26, 1748.

The men for this company had been procured partly by enlistments. Massachusetts had offered a bounty of £5 for a year's service. A number of the men had been impressed. These had come mostly from Middlesex county, Mass. Many of the enlisted were New Hampshire men who had lived in some of the settlements before the war commenced.

March 29. Moses Cooper, Lient. Sargent and son, Joshua Wells and one other man went about a mile from Fort Dummer for timber. They were attacked by some twelve Indians. Cooper was mortally wounded the first fire, but made his escape to the fort, where he died the next night. The others fought on a retreat. Wells was soon killed. Sargent and son continued to fight, but the father was killed and the son captured.

Additional soldiers had been furnished by Massachusetts to Capt. Stevens at Charlestown in the spring, so that his command consisted of a hundred men. He sent eighteen of his men under Capt. Melvin to scout as far as Lake Champlain. After they reached this point they were discovered by the enemy and commenced a retreat. They were intercepted by the enemy which got in their front. Melvin eluded them and succeeded in reaching West river some thirty or forty miles northwest of Fort Dummer when he was again intercepted. A disastrous fight ensued. Six of Melvin's men were killed. The rest succeeded in reaching Fort Dummer at different times.

June 16. A squad of twelve of Capt. Willard's men left the Ashuelots for Fort Dummer by way of Hinsdale's fort having with them two rangers. They were ambushed by a large party of Indians between the two forts. Three were killed and scalped, viz., Joseph Richardson, John Frost and Jonathan French, all of Billerica, Mass.; seven were taken prisoners, one of whom, Wm. Bickford, was killed where the Indians camped the first night. Four escaped across the river to Fort Dummer, one of whom was a ranger who was severely wounded in the thigh. The prisoners at the first camping place were stripped of their arms and most of their clothing. They reached Canada about the first of July. Most of them were made to run the gauntlet. They returned in the fall feeble and emaciated. One of them died soon after his return from the effect of abuse. The prisoners were Mark Perkins, Concord; Matthew Wyman, Dorchester; Benjamin Osgood, Billerica; Wm. Blanchard, Dunstable; Henry Stevens, Chelmsford; Joel Johnson, Woburn.

Capt. Humphrey Hobbs was stationed at Charlestown with a company of rangers. He started June 24, in a southwest direction with forty men to scout the country between Charlestown and Fort Shirley. The second day after leaving Charlestown and while eating their lunch at noon, the sentinel in his rear discovered the enemy approaching. Hobbs ordered his men each to take a tree for cover. The Indians rushed forward with a shout and were received with a well directed fire and several fell. The Indians were led by a half-blood by the name of Sackett and he had a much larger number of men than Hobbs. The two leaders were well acquainted and Sackett could speak English. Sackett called to Hobbs to surrender. Hobbs dared him to come and take his men. After four hours of fighting, fortunately Sackett was wounded, when the enemy withdrew taking with them their dead and wounded. Hobbs had three men killed and four wounded. He reached Fort Dummer in the afternoon of the next day with his company and wounded men. The battle was fought about twelve miles west of Fort Dummer.

July 3. A party of Indians killed eleven cattle at Ashuelots and carried off the meat.

Sergt Taylor and six privates of Capt. Willard's company at the Ashuelots went down to Northfield for ten recruits to take the place of those lost in the encounter of June 16. July 14, Taylor started from Northfield for the Ashuelots by way of Hinsdale's fort and Fort Dummer with his six soldiers and ten recruits. When within about a mile of Fort Dummer they were attacked by a large number of Indians under command of a French officer. They were attacked in front and in their rear. Asahel Graves of Lower Ashuelot and Henry Chandler of Westford, Mass., were killed, stripped of their clothing and arms and then scalped. Two escaped across the river to Fort Dummer, two got back to Hinsdale's fort and eleven were captured. Two of the captives, Joseph Rose of Northfield and James Billings of Concord were severely wounded. After going about a mile the Indians knocked the wounded prisoners on the head with war-clubs. Sergt. Taylor was one of the captives. He subsequently resided in Hinsdale. Thomas Cresson, jr., a captive, belonged to Lower Ashuelot. The other captives were Daniel Farmer, Groton; Jona. Lawrence, Littleton; Daniel How, jr., Rutland; John Edghill, Framingham; Reuben Walker, Chelmsford; John Henry, Concord; Ephraim Powers, Littleton. The prisoners were taken to Canada by the way of West river, Otter creek and Crown Point. In travelling the Indians made frequent halts and went about twenty miles a day. The prisoners were sold to the French who retained them until September.

The French officer above referred to was ordered by the French governor at Montreal "to go to war upon the territories of New England, with a party of twenty-six Canadians and eighty Indians." The Northfield historian narrates the following:—"Sieur Raimbault, who had lately returned from a successful raid, was attached to this party, and as will appear, was of great service in selecting the right place for an ambuscade.

The equipment of the savages was as follows:—80 muskets; 80 breech-clouts; 80 pairs of mittens; 100 deer skins; 8 pounds of vermilion; 80 wood-cutters knives; 80 pounds of powder; 80 pounds of ball; 80 pounds of lead shot; 80 collars for carrying; 80 awls; 80 tomahawks; 400 flints; 80 powder horns; 100 needles; 3 pounds of thread; 80 war-clubs; 8 axes; 4 pairs of scissors; 80 pounds of tobacco; 8 iron cooking pots; 8 canoes; and 13 days provisions. This force made directly for the Connecticut valley and took a position on the highlands to the eastward of Fort Dummer."

Mr. Cresson used to say that the first meal offered him after reaching an Indian settlement was broth made from an old sow that had received no other dressing than the burning off of the bristles. He was almost starved, but he could not eat the broth.

The raids of the French and Indians were so far checked by formidable military operations, that there was comparative quiet the last part of 1748. The settlers were not disturbed when doing their harvesting.

Peace was made between England and France the last of the year, but this did not wholly restrain the Indians from committing some atrocities on the frontier in 1749. Their appearance at Charlestown and Hinsdale caused general alarm. Soldiers were immediately raised to garrison different forts. Ten were sent to the Ashuelots. A company of fifty-six men, commanded by Capt. John Catlin of Deerfield, was mustered July 13, 1749, and discharged Oct. 12. This company was stationed at Northfield half the time and at the Ashuelots the other half.

"A Dark Time.—These were dark days to our people on the frontier. The attacks made in such rapid succession, and the signs discovered on all sides showed that the Indians were abroad in great force. The full foliage of the underbrush gave them secure cover; and their uniform success gave them courage. And they had learned the peculiar tactics of each of our captains and commanders of forts. They knew where to look for carelessness, and recklessness, and cowardice, and want of foresight. They knew the condition of each garrison, and when they set an ambush, they knew whether a relief party might be expected promptly or tardily."

Of all the prominent men who had been engaged in protecting the settlements in New Hampshire on the Connecticut and Ashuelot rivers during this dark period was Col. Josiah Willard, the leading man in the settlement of Winchester. He was in command of the garrison at Fort Dummer, and his son, Josiah Willard, jr., at the Ashuelots. He was commissary for his own garrison, for supplying that at No. 4 and those at the Ashuelots. When the government of Massachusetts failed to provide him with funds he fell back upon his own resources. At one time he had advanced the large sum of ten thousand pounds. In writing to the governor of Massachusetts, April 5, 1748, he said "I have but six hundred pounds Province money in my hands to supply No. 4 for six months past, and to supply No. 4, the Ashuelots and Fort Dummer for the future."

It was probably for obtaining supplies at Fort Dummer that the two squads from the Ashuelot garrisons undertook to go to Fort Dummer; the first, June 16, 1748; the second July 14, 1748, and which was attended with such disastrous results.

Fort Dummer was on the west side of Connecticut River and in what is now the southeast corner of Brattleborough. Hinsdale's fort was on the east side of the river and in Hinsdale.

The writer's father was well acquainted with some of the men whose residence in Lower Ashuelot had given them a knowledge of the important events of this Indian and French war. The father obtained the statement that two men made their escape at one of the battles and came through during the following night to the Ashuelots. They did not come together although they were much of the time in hearing of each other and each was often alarmed by the other and secreted himself, fearing that he was in danger of falling into the hands of the enemy.

It has been generally understood that after the Ashuelots were abandoned in the spring of 1747, nothing was done here to rebuild or to occupy the land until after the close of the Old French and Indian War. This can hardly be accepted as probable from the preceding narrative of events. Soldiers were kept or sent here when danger was apprehended. That soldiers were stationed here makes it quite certain that some of the forts had been rebuilt. To have kept garrisons here must have been to protect the men who had returned to rebuild and prosecute their farming operations. It is not likely that the men generally had their families with them. Many of the men may have done the duty of soldiers and labored for themselves at the same time.

The forts were built generally of square hewed timber and built in a square form, often nearly or quite two hundred feet on a side. This gave room for a number of houses inside.

The years of 1750-51-52 and 53 were years of peace. In 1754 England and France were again engaged in war. The first place at which the Indians commenced their work about here was at Charlestown. Early in the morning August 29, 1754, they captured James Johnson and his wife, three children, a sister of Mrs. Johnson aged about fifteen and two men. The attack was made before the family had risen and they were all carried off to Canada without being opposed. A daughter was born to Mrs. Johnson the next day after she was captured, and it was named Captive. The party in charge of the captives stopped one day on Mrs. Johnson's account. They then carried her on a litter at first, and afterwards a horse was provided for her to ride. To provide food, the horse was killed and the child was nourished by sucking pieces of its flesh. Mrs. Johnson and two of her daughters and her sister obtained liberty to return in eighteen months. The eldest daughter was retained in a nunnery. It was three years when Mr. Johnson and a son returned.

A letter from Major Benjamin Bellows of Walpole to Colonel Blanchard written two days after the attack at Charlestown, vividly pictures the sufferings of the settlers. He says "The people are in great distress all down the River and at Keene and at Swanzey."

Lt. Col. Josiah Willard, also writing at the same time to Col. B.

and Gov. Wentworth, implores them "to help a poor distressed people, for almost every man is upon the move in this part of the country. I have had no sleep these three nights." "We have persuaded the Bigger part of the People to tarry a little while and see if we can have some help." "We also this day received intelligence that two women and three children belonging to Swanzev are missing, which after diligent search made, not being found, are supposed to be taken; and by the discoveries that are made, we are afraid of being invaded on every quarter."

It does not appear that the settlements about here were disturbed during the fall of 1754.

In 1755 Bridgman's fort at Hinsdale was occupied by Caleb How, Hilkiah Grout and Benjamin Garfield with their families. In the morning of June 27, the three men and two boys of Mr. How went to work in the meadow above the fort. They started to return about sunset. Mr. How was on horseback and had with him his two boys and was ahead of the other two men. They were fired upon by a concealed ambush and How brought to the ground from a wound in one of his thighs. He was immediately scalped by the Indians, had a hatchet struck into his head and left for dead. He was found the next morning and still alive, but soon died. The boys were captured. The other men attempted to escape by crossing the river, when Garfield was drowned, but Grout escaped. The Indians went to the fort and obtained admittance by the wives, they supposing their husbands had returned from work. The Indians had learned the proper signal for gaining admittance to the fort by watching secretly those that entered. The three wives and eleven children were captured and carried to Canada. The fort was burned by the Indians.

The last of June an unsuccessful attack was made upon the fort at Keene. Capt. William Syme was in command there at the time. A number of cattle were killed, several buildings burned and Benjamin Twitchel captured.

July 22, three men went from Hinsdale's fort in Hinsdale, about one hundred rods for timber, protected by a guard of four soldiers. The Indians got between the men and the fort and fired upon them. One citizen and one soldier were killed and scalped; one citizen and one soldier escaped to the fort. From the account of the affair it is probable the others were captured.

At the same date of the last Hinsdale affair two men went a mile and a half from the street in Walpole to cut timber. Both were shot; one was scalped; the other had his heart taken out and laid in pieces upon his breast.

This year, 1755, Col. Bellows of Walpole had a fort, and some distance from it a mill, and employed a number of men. Aug. 17, when Col. Bellows with thirty of his men were going from the mill to dinner they encountered a large number of Indians, but they succeeded in cutting their way through them and reaching the fort without loss.

In the neighborhood of Col. B. lived John Kilburn who had a wife, a son and a daughter; and he had living with him a man by the name of Peck, who also had a son. After the Indians' encounter with Col. Bellows they undertook to capture Kilburn and his family, but this family of six persons held the Indians at bay all the afternoon, when they gave up the undertaking. Mr. Peck received a wound from which he died five days after.

The Indians hovered about Swanzey in 1755. They rendezvoused on Mt. Caesar. From this mountain they would come down as near as they dared to the fort on Meeting-house hill and execute their war and scalp dances, and exhibit themselves in the most insulting attitudes to the people in the fort.

This year a number of armed men went to work in the Great meadow with a guard of soldiers. When they reached the meadow the soldiers were in front. A rustling in some bushes attracted their attention. It was thought a deer might be there. One of the soldiers fired at the spot where the rustling was heard which aroused a band of concealed Indians who fired upon the soldiers. The soldiers and laborers drove the Indians to the plain west of Swanzey factory. An express brought out fifteen men from Keene under Capt. Metcalf. The Indians fled up the south side of East Branch and then crossed the stream and made their escape over the hills east of Keene. This is understood to be the last appearance of hostile Indians in Swanzey.

But in other towns in the valley Indian raids were kept up during the three following years.

June 7, 1756, Josiah Fisher, wife and two children were captured in Winchester and taken to Quebec where they met Benjamin Twitchell who was captured in Keene the previous year. After months of captivity the Fisher family were released and returned to Winchester.

April 19, 1757, Charlestown was again attacked by a large party of French and Indians, and five men captured and taken to Canada of whom three died there and the others returned.

In 1758, at Hinsdale, they killed Captain Moore and his son, burned his house and made the rest of his family captives. At Charlestown they killed Asahel Stebbins and captured his wife, a soldier and Isaac Parker.

In 1759 it was determined to chastise the Indians who had committed such devastations upon the frontier settlements, and two hundred men were sent by General Amherst from Crown Point, under the command of Major Robert Rogers, to destroy the Indian village of St. Francis. After an eventful march of twenty-one days through the wilderness they reached the place and were entirely successful in the undertaking. At this date Quebec passed into the hands of the English and a quietus was given to the frontier settlements of the English colonies.

Swanzy was well provided with forts for the protection of its inhabitants and rendezvous for soldiers. The most important one was on Meeting-house hill. The old well that supplied the fort with water now supplies the premises of George Carpenter. Most of the soldiers that garrisoned the forts in Swanzy were from Massachusetts.

It must not be inferred, however, that all the soldiers employed in repelling the French and Indian invasions in the Connecticut and Ashuelot valleys were furnished by Massachusetts; New Hampshire did something—what she could perhaps, in defending her frontier settlements and outposts.

NOTE.—Much of the material for this chapter has been obtained from Temple and Sheldon's History of Northfield, Mass., Saunderson's History of Charlestown, Annals of Keene, Belknap's History of New Hampshire, and Provincial Papers of New Hampshire by Nathaniel Bouton, D.D.

PREVIOUS to 1732 the valley of the Ashuelot had not been the home of the white man.

The nearest place to this valley which had been settled by the colonists was Northfield, which at this time, included most of Hinsdale and a portion of Winchester. As Northfield was settled as early as 1685 it is probable that the trappers, hunters and explorers had obtained some general knowledge of the character of the valley previous to 1732. The name of the valley and the river flowing through it had undoubtedly been established. The boundary line between the colony of Massachusetts Bay and the colony of New Hampshire had not been settled, but the Massachusetts colonists assumed that it belonged to Massachusetts.

In June, 1732, Gov. Belcher, in his speech to the "Great and General Court" of Massachusetts recommended that "care be taken to settle the ungranted land."

In compliance with the Governor's recommendation the House of Representatives voted "That there be seven towns opened of the contents of six miles square, one west of the Naraganset town which is near Wachusett Hill; one between the equivalent land and Rutland, on or near the road lately laid from Swift river to Rutland; and one at Poquaug (Athol) on Miller's river; one west of the town called Northtown; two on the Ashuelot river above Northfield, and the other in the eastern county at the head of Berwick; that the committee be appointed to admit settlers and lay out house lots so that the settlements may be made in a defensible manner, and to direct in the drawing thereof, but not to lay out any further division without directions from this court; that there shall be sixty-three house lots laid out in each township: one for the first settled minister, one for the ministry, one for the school, and one for each of the sixty settlers who shall settle thereon, in his own person or by any of his children; the rest of the land to be allotted or divided equally into sixty-three parts; that one year from the survey be allowed for the admission of settlers, and that the committee be directed to demand and receive from each settler at his admission five pounds, part of which shall be employed for reimbursing the province, the money to be advanced for paying the committee and the charges of the surveys; and the remainder to be employed for building a house of public worship or otherwise as the General Court shall order; that each settler actually live on his land within three years after his admission, and continue there for the space of two years after, in person and with his family, if such he have; that he do within five years from his admission build a house on his land of eighteen feet square and seven feet stud, at the least, and within the same time do sufficiently fence and till, or fit for mowing eight acres of land; and in case any settler fail of performance his right to be forfeited; and the committee for admitting settlers are directed to take a bond of each settler at the time of admission for twenty pounds for the use and benefit of the settlers, in case he fails of performing the conditions mentioned; and the settlers in each town shall be obliged to build a suitable meeting house and settle a learned and orthodox minister in such town within five years from their admission."

On the first of July, 1733, this vote was concurred in by the council and "consented to" by the Governor, but the committee appointed to make the survey not attending to their duty it was, Oct. 19, 1733, voted that another committee consisting of Joseph Kellogg, Timothy Dwight and William Chandler be appointed with directions forthwith to lay out the townships at Poquaig and on the Ashuelot river "unless they find that by reason of laying out the township Winchester, granted to Col. Willard and others, the land remaining at Ashuelot river will not serve for two townships, in which case they are directed to lay out only one on that river.

In February, 1734, the committee made a return to the General Court of a "plat of two townships, each of the contents of six miles square situated on each side of Ashuelot river above the tract of land lately granted to Josiah Willard and others, beginning at a Spruce or White pine tree standing about midway between the south and east branches of said river about five perch east of the bank of the main river, and thence running each way as described on the plat." The plat was accepted and the lands contained in said townships were declared to lie in and constitute a part of the county of Hampshire.

It was soon found that the plan included land in the southwest corner of the township, which had been granted to Josiah Willard and others. As the grant to Mr. Willard and his associates was made prior to the grant to Lower Ashuelot proprietors, the land was conceded to belong rightfully to Mr. Willard and his associates.

Sixty-three houselots were laid out in Lower Ashuelot in May, 1734, by a committee acting under the authority of Massachusetts. Each of the lots was numbered, and each proprietor drew lots for his number.

The following are the names of the persons who were the first owners of sixty of these houselots; the other three being drawn, one each for the minister, the ministry and the school:

Lot No. 1, Josiah Divol; 2, Thomas Hapgood; 3, Thomas Kendall; 4, Samuel Bason; 5, James Heaton; 6, John Holden; 7, William Negers; 8, John Mead; 9, Joseph Lee; 10, Daniel Brown; 11, Joseph Hill; 12, James Wallis; 13, John Flint for his son Ephraim Flint; 14, Elnathan Jones; 15, Benjamin Reed; 16, School lot; 17, Benjamin Whitney; 18, Nathaniel Hammond for his son-in-law Chamberlain; 19, James Houghton, jr.; 20, John White; 21, John Muzzey; 22, Jonathan Prescott; 23, David Cutler; 24, John King; 25, Joseph Hill, jr.; 26, Robert Cummings; 27, Nathaniel Hammond; 28, James Henry; 29, Thomas Cutler; 30, Hezekiah Sprague; 31, Benjamin Haywood; 32, Jonathan Hammond by his father; 33, Joseph Haskell; 34, Eleazer Robbins; 35, William Whitaker; 36, Samuel Douglass; 37, Aaron Lyon; 38, Benjamin Thompson; 39, Nathaniel Whitmore; 40, Thomas Kendall; 41, Timothy Stearns; 42, John King; 43, John Sampson; 44, John Starr; 45, John King for his son; 46, John Mewharter; 47, Ministry lot; 48, Minister's lot; 49, Nathaniel Mattoon; 50, Ephraim Jones; 51, William Lyon; 52, Benjamin Farnsworth; 53, Oliver Wallis; 54, William Arms; 55, Charles Prescott; 56, Enos Goodale; 57, John Tyler; 58, Ebenezer Conant; 59, William Carr; 60, Thomas Heaton; 61, Thomas Kendall; 62, Samuel Doolittle; 63, Gardner Wilder.

It will be apparent to one who shall read the subsequent history of the township that the grantees generally did not act in accordance with the terms of the grant, by becoming residents themselves, or by their children settling in the township. Among the names of these grantees who were residents of the township previous to 1747 we find only Hammond, Heaton, Brown, Jones, Chamberlain, King and Carr; and then we find the names of Belding, Grimes, Gunn, Cresson, Hills, Graves, Evans and Loomis.

The inference is that the motive which prompted many of the grantees to take rights in the township was speculation; and that some of them very soon disposed of their interests therein.

The committee appointed by Massachusetts to lay out the sixty-three houselots, laid a road four rods wide from the south side of the south branch, north of the spot where No. 5 schoolhouse now stands, in a straight line on to the hill west of the George Carpenter residence, thence making an angle and bearing to the east to a point a little southeast of the residence of Sylvander Stone. Thirty-two house lots were laid on the west side of this road, and thirty-one on the east side. No. 1 was at the west side of the North end and No. 32 on the west side of the South end; No. 33 on the east side of the South end, and 63 on the east side at the North end. Some alteration of this plan was made soon after by the settlers. Nos. 33 and 34 were taken from the east side and laid out south of No. 32 on the west side. The lots between Nos. 42 and 53 were moved to the east. Nos. 33 and 34 were moved presumably because they included the moat. The others were moved so as to obtain a larger tract of common land upon what was called "Meeting House hill."

The proprietors' records commence as follows:—

"Concord June 27, 1734. At a meeting of the proprietors of the Lower Township on the Ashuelot river, Mr. Nathaniel Hammond of Littleton was chosen moderator; Ephraim Jones of Concord chosen clerk and sworn.

Voted that John Flint Esq. of Concord, Mr. Joseph Hill of Billerica, Mr. Thomas Cutler of Lexington, Mr. Eleazer Robbins of Harvard and Mr. Nathaniel Hammond of Littleton, be a committee to manage the prudential affairs of the said township. Voted that the meeting be adjourned to Wednesday the 18th day of September next, and then to meet at the said township of Lower Ashuelot at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

At a Meeting of the Proprietors of the Lower Ashawelock Township, Being Meet on the said Township on the Eighteenth Day of September, 1734. Voted that the Meeting be adjourned to To-morrow morning at Eight of the Clock being the Nineteenth Day of September Currant then to Meet on the Lot No. 1 in the said Township.

At a meeting of the Proprietors of the Lower Township on Ashawelock River being meet on the Lot No. 1 in the said Township the Nineteenth Day of September Anno Dom. 1734. The question being Put whether the Proprietors will Lay out any of the Common Land in said Township at Present, Passed in the Negative; and then the meeting adjourned to the Second Wednesday in October Next, and then to meet at the House of Ephraim Jones, Innholder at Concord at Twelve of the Clock at Noon."

Probably these proprietors of the two townships, Upper and Lower Ashuelot, who held the first meetings in the townships were all unacquainted with the location of them, and that they arrived in the evening of September 18, 1734. The Keene historian says: "None of them having previously visited it, they were accompanied by Deacon Alexander of Northfield as a pilot. They did not arrive at the line of the township until late in the evening of the 18th, the day to which the meeting was adjourned; and as soon as the pilot informed them that they had passed the line they opened the meeting and adjourned to the next day."

It does not appear that any business of importance was transacted at this meeting. The principal object of holding it in the township was doubtless to make such observations as would enable them to make arrangements for its settlement.

"At a meeting of the proprietors of the Lower Township of Ashawelock River being continued by several adjournments being meet at the House of Ephraim Jones of Concord the Nineteenth Day of October Anno Dom. 1734. Voted that a Division of Interval be laid out. Voted that the Interval between the Great River and the South Branch, and all the Interval upon the South Branch be laid out, and also so much on the South side of the Great River, Below the South Branch as the Committee which shall be Chosen to Lay out shall think Most Convenient. Voted that Mr. Eleazer Robbins of Harvard, Mr. Nathaniel Hammond of Littleton, Ephraim Jones of Concord, Mr. Benjamin Reed of Lexington and Mr. Nathaniel Mattoon of Northfield, or any three of them, be a committee to lay out the Interval before mentioned into Sixty Three Lots as equal as may be in Quantity and Quality. Voted that the Committee Before mentioned be Impowered to Employ a Surveyor to Lay out the Land before mentioned. Voted that the Committee before mentioned, forthwith or as soon as Conveniently may be, Lay out the Land before mentioned and Make a Return of their Doings to the Proprietors in order to have them Draw their Lots the 2^d Wednesday of June next. Voted that the sum of Sixty Pounds be Paid by the Proprietors to Defray the Necessary .

Charges. Voted that Mr. John Muzzey of Lexington and Mr. Benjamin Heywood of Worcester be Collectors to Collect the said sum of Sixty Pounds of the Proprietors and Pay it into the Treasury on or before the 2nd Tuesday in April next. Voted that John Flint Esq. be Treasurer and Receiver to Receive the said Sum of Sixty Pounds of the Collector for the use of the Propriety. Voted that the Meeting be adjourned to the second Wednesday of June next then to Meet at the House of Ephraim Jones Innholder at Concord in order to Draw their Lotts and to Treat of any other affairs which May then be thought Proper."

At this adjourned meeting held at Concord, June 11, 1735, it was voted that the report of the committee to lay out the second division be accepted: that said committee be allowed ten shillings a day for their services, and "that the Surveyors Bills Being fifteen Pounds Seven Shillings be allowed." It was also "voted that each Proprietor Pay Twenty Shillings before he shall Draw his Lott." The names of those who drew this second division are the same as those who drew the first. It includes the intervale lying on the east side of the Ashuelot river between Keene line and the South Branch, and the intervale on each side of the latter stream between the iron bridge and the Ashuelot river. There was a small tract of intervale lying on the south side of the South Branch and the east side of the Ashuelot river that was not included in this division.

The boundaries of a few of these lots will be sufficient to give an idea how they were laid out and the amount of land which each lot contained.

"No. 1 Bounds Northerly 125 rods on the upper Township, Northwesterly $17\frac{1}{2}$ Rods on Ashawelock River, South 135 on No. 2, Easterly 15 rods on undivided Land being upland: Said No. 1 contains Eleven acres, having 36 Rods Allowed for a Way besides."

"No. 16 Bounds Northerly 174 Rods with No. 15, Westerly $7\frac{1}{2}$ Rods & half a foot with the river, Southerly $173\frac{1}{2}$ Rods with No. 17, Easterly $7\frac{1}{2}$ Rods and half a foot with undivided upland: Said No. 16 Contains Eight acres besides 20 Rods for a way."

"No. 48 is Invironed on all sides with water: Bounds North east 34 Rods on the Great River, Northerly 7 Rods on the River: Northwesterly 3 Rods on said River: westerly 26 Rods on said River: Northwesterly 14 Rods on said River: westerly 12 Rods on the South Branch. Southwesterly 6 Rods on said South Branch. Said No. 48 Contains Four Acres and one hundred Rods, being without any incumbrances of way."

"No. 53 Bounds Northwesterly 122 Rods on No. 52: Northeasterly $9\frac{1}{2}$ Rods on undivided land : Southeast 6 Rods on undivided Land : Northeast 13 Rods on undivided Lands : Southeasterly 126 rods on No. 54 : Northwesterly 13 Rods on the House Lotts ; Said No. 53 Contains Eight acres besides 50 Rods for what the River takes out of the Same and Twenty Rods for a way."

"No. 63 Bounds North on No. 62 18 Rods : North Easterly 8 Rods on the River : North westerly 17 Rods on the River : Easterly 63 Rods on the River, Southwesterly 64 Rods on Common Land ; Northwest-erly 24 Rods on Common Land, Westerly 20 Rods on Common Land. Said No. 63 Contains Thirteen acres and one hundred and Four Rods without any Incumbrances of ways."

The committee who made this division consisted of Eleazer Robbins, Nath. Hammond and Benjamin Reed ; surveyor, Stephen Hosmer, jr.

Doubtless soon after, this work was began in the township, by a party of men coming by the way of Northfield, through the then almost untrodden wilderness, bringing their tools and provisions with them. Their first work must have been to build cabins of logs and boughs. Then commenced the clearing of the land, and the woodman's axe began to resound through the deep, dark pine forest. During many a night as these laborers lay in their cabins after their hard day's work was done, there came to their ears the hooting of the owl, the howling of the wolf and the roar of the distant waterfall. Before the snows of winter these laborers returned to their Massachusetts homes.

The proprietors held a meeting at Concord, March 31, 1736. The subjects taken into consideration were the enclosing of the meadow lots by a fence ; the building of a saw-mill, and the laying out and constructing a road to Arlington (Winchester). At a meeting in the township September 8, a committee was chosen to see that the meadow lots were fenced before the first of December, and a committee was chosen to make a third division of land of about twenty acres to each house lot. At an adjourned meeting October 27, this committee made its report, which was accepted and the lots drawn.

The twenty acre lots were laid out on the intervale and meadows, which took nearly all that remained in the township after the first division of intervale had been made. It does not appear that any of the lots were laid out in what is called "Mark Meadow." The committee commenced near where the Iron Bridge now stands over the South Branch and easterly of the town house, and laid lots in intervale land until they reached what was then the east line of the town. This line ran between the farms of Josiah Parsons and George W. Stanley, and further between the farms which were owned by the late

Amasa Aldrich and Carlton Parker. Several lots were laid out on the Pond Brook meadow and the Richmond Branch meadow. Several were laid out on the Great River above West Swanzey, which were called the "Mill Meadow lots." Others were laid on the Great River between West Swanzey and Westport, which were called the "Hyponeco Meadows." Two lots were laid on the west side of the "Great River" near Keene line.

The first proprietors' meeting in 1737 was held at Concord, February 9. This was adjourned to March 16, when it was voted to give Ephraim Jones 200 acres of land at the "Great Falls" if he would build at that place a saw-mill. It was voted also to make another, a fourth division of land, of about eighty acres to each owner of a house lot.

The proprietors came this year with their families, with the intention of remaining during the winter and making it their permanent home. Their meetings from this time were held in the township. June 22, a meeting was called to be holden September 7 at the house of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond. This was the first house named in the records and stood where Mrs. Virgil Woodcock now resides. At this meeting and at adjournments of the same during the autumn, the following business was transacted:—Voted to confirm to Ephraim Jones and his heirs the 200 acres of land that had been laid out at the "Great Falls" when he should have built the saw-mill. Voted to build a meeting house; to raise money to pay for preaching; to fine any person who should fall trees into the "South Branch" or into the "Great River," unless he removed them; to look out a road to where the saw-mill was to be built, and also to the intervale; that the eighty-acre lots which had been surveyed should be divided by lot, and that another, a fifth division of 100 acres in the undivided land be made to the owner of each house lot.

At the close of the year 1737 a right in the township consisted of a house lot, an eight-acre meadow lot, a twenty-acre meadow lot, an eighty-acre lot of upland and a one hundred-acre lot which had been or could be pitched.

The fourth division lots were laid out under the direction of a committee consisting of Nathaniel Hammond, Benjamin Reed, Samuel Chamberlain, Ephraim Jones and Nathaniel Mattoon. Although the proprietors voted that they should contain eighty acres each, many of them fell very much short of that amount. They consisted of upland, as the intervale and meadow lands had already been disposed of. They were laid out with a good degree of regularity (as were also the three former divisions) in ranges in various parts of the township. The lots were about 170 rods in length and 60 in width. Lot number 1 was laid west of the house lots and south of the Ashuelot river, near the sand bank ; the northwest corner being near the river bank, its length being from north to south. Numbers 2 and 3 were laid west of number 1, being numbered from east to west. A range of the lots was laid on the hill which lies between Swanzev Centre and West Swanzev ; the most northerly lot was number 4 which was located not far south of the road leading from the Centre to West Swanzev ; the most southerly was number 18, and at present is part of the farm of Sylvander L. Whitcomb. Numbers 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25 were on the hill southeast of West Swanzev extending to the north end of Swanzev Pond. Numbers 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 were laid on the east of the South Branch and on the present road which runs from the Iron Bridge, near the town house, to Keene, and passes through these lots. East of, and adjoining these lots was another range numbered 27, 29, 31, 33, 35, 37, 39, 41 and 43. Number 44 was northeast of said Iron Bridge. Numbers 45, 46, 47, 48, 49 and 50 were between West Swanzev and Westport on the east side of Ashuelot river. Numbers 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62 and 63 were on the west side of the road leading through the centre of the town. The southeast corner of lot number 51 was near Pond Brook Bridge. Number 63 was the minister lot, and the most northerly one in the range. The east line of these lots, south of the house lots, was where the road now runs ; and the east line of those west of the house lots was on the west line of the house lots.

The names of a few of the present owners of these lots are here given : number 26, Charles H. Rockwood ; 28, Phineas Gay ; 30, A. S. Blake ; 38, Leander Page ; 42, G. W. Eastman ; 53, W. C. Belding ; 54, R. Hovey ; 55, A. B. Cook ; 59, M. C. Stone ; 62, George Carpenter.

At a proprietors' meeting held at the house of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, October 26, 1737, "Voted that Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, Benjamin Heywood, Charles Lumis, Samuel Hills and Thomas Cresson be a committee to lay out the fifth division and qualify the lots. Voted that the committee shall pitch and lay out the lots for the minister and ministry.

Voted that each of the proprietors shall pitch his lot and shall draw lots for his pitch ; and he who draws No. 1 is to make his pitch on the sixth day of March next, and he who draws No. 2 shall pitch on seventh day of March and so on till they are all pitched." The understanding of the proprietors in voting to have the committee "lay out the lots and qualify them" was to add land to those lots of inferior quality to make the lots of equal value. Each proprietor in turn had the privilege of going anywhere into the undivided land, make his selection, and lay it out in just such shape as he chose. As may be supposed these lots were laid out in every conceivable shape, as the description and plans in the proprietors' records plainly show. The description of a few of these lots may serve as specimens.

"This plan describes a 5th division lot lying in Swanzev, pitched according to a vote of the proprietors and laid out to David Belding and to house lot No. 44, containing by estimation one hundred acres, and bounded as follows: Beginning at a Basswood tree on the brink of the river in line of the Old Mill Farm, then running easterly with said Mill Farm till it comes to a 4th division lot No. 24; then southwardly bounding on 4th division lot till it comes to lot No. 45 in the 4th division; then westwardly bounding on No. 45 till it comes to Hyponeco meadow, so-called; thence northwardly with said meadow till it comes to the river; then northwardly by said river till it comes to the bound first mentioned. Laid out October 21, 1758.

“This plan describes one division lot lying in Swanzey pitched agreeable to a vote of the proprietors to the Rev. Samuel Hopkins, June 5, 1759, and to house lot No. 55; said lot originally belonged to Charles Prescott, containing 100 acres and one rod in forty for swag of chain; and bounded as follows: Beginning at the N. E. corner at a hemlock tree in the town line marked (S. H.); then runs west and south with the third division of interval land 260 rods to a white pine which was the corner of a third division lot; then runs south 59° east 140 rods to a red oak tree marked S. H. in Richmond line; then runs N. 39° E. to the first mentioned bound.

The settlers, having spent their first winter in the township, appear to have been in a healthy condition in the spring of 1738, and took hold of the work of a public nature that lay before them, with vigor.

At a proprietors' meeting March 15, Nathaniel Hammond was chosen moderator, Jonathan Hammond and Thomas Cresson surveyors of highways; Nathaniel Hammond, Thomas Cresson and Samuel Hills, assessors; N. Hammond collector, and John Evens treasurer for the year ensuing.

Voted to raise two pounds ten shillings on each right to fence the intervals if each proprietor does not do his part of said fence.

Voted that Benjamin Brown, Jonathan Hammond and William Carr be a committee to run the lines between the second division lots.

A meeting was duly called to meet at the house of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, November 6. After Capt. Hammond was chosen moderator the meeting adjourned for a quarter of an hour to meet at the house of Jethro Eames.

Chose Benjamin Brown of Concord proprietors' clerk; and voted that the proprietors' book be kept in the town for the future.

“Voted to raise the sum of 40 shillings on each right, or the sum of 120 pounds for encouragement towards building a grist mill upon the ‘Great River’ near to where the saw mill now stands in said township, to him or them that shall appear to enter into bonds to build the same on or before the first day of September next ensuing.”

At a meeting held Dec. 28 it was voted, “That the piece of land be laid common for the use of the town forever that lies between the two tier of house lots for a burying place and training field, and for any other use the town shall think proper."

Voted, "That the committee that was chosen to see to the building of the meeting house be a committee likewise to see to the cutting down of the trees and clear a place to set the Meeting House on, and for a burying place."

Voted, "That each of the proprietors shall have liberty to work out his equal part in falling the trees and clearing the above-mentioned road and common land where the meeting house is to stand &c., between the first day of February next ensuing and the last day of February following."

Voted, "That the Proprietors will buy 18 lbs. of Powder & 36 lbs. of Lead for a proprietors' stock, and shall be left in the hands of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond for the use of said Propriety."

Voted, "That Nathaniel Gunn, Jonathan Hammond and Benjamin Brown be a committee to agree with all those men that have any land wanting in their second or third division Lots, and lay out to them an equivalent for the same in some of the undivided land in said Township, or in the equivalent land that is granted and is to be laid out for what this Township interfered upon Arlington."

Voted, "That the Proprietors will pay for building a windlass to draw logs out of the saw-mill pond on to the mill, and shall be kept for the use of the propriety."

Voted, "That Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, Messrs. Jethro Ames, William Carr, Ephraim Jones and Nathaniel Gunn be a committee to look out a convenient place to lay out the equivalent land that is granted by the Great and General Court for the land that was taken away by interfering upon Arlington."

It appears that the piece of land appropriated at this meeting for public uses was not large enough for the designed purpose and subsequent changes were made as is shown by the accompanying diagram and report.

BENJA BROWN,

A number of proprietors' meetings were held during the year 1739. The most important objects considered were to provide preaching, to settle a minister, to clear off the trees upon Meeting House Hill Common, to lay out and build a road from the saw mill to Arlington, to build a bridge over the South Branch and a road to Upper Ashuelot. The bridge over the Branch was necessary for going to Upper Ashuelot and to their meadow lots. Its location was nearly opposite the William Carr place.

Oct. 19 it was "Voted to build a pound 35 feet square and 7 feet high, to be set on the easterly side of Meeting House hill." Mr. Ephraim Jones was chosen "to go to the General Court to get confirmed a plan of the equivalent land laid out to said proprietors by order of a committee from the General Court on the easterly side of said Township." The "equivalent land" spoken of was ungranted land taken from outside the township to make up to the proprietors what they lost by the corner in the southwest part of the original township belonging to Arlington. In 1740 the proprietors were greatly disturbed when they ascertained that they were not inhabitants of Massachusetts. After a long contest the boundary line between the two provinces was now established, and found to be some six miles south of the southern line of the township. They had anticipated no such decision as this. They were all from Massachusetts and supposed they were building in a Massachusetts town. They knew Massachusetts, and felt that she would render them any assistance that might be needed for the protection of frontier towns. They knew but little about New Hampshire. They were strangers to her people and knew not what treatment they might receive from her government. The nearest towns that had been settled under the auspices of New Hampshire were in the Merrimaek valley. Though disappointed in finding themselves located in New Hampshire instead of Massachusetts they were not discouraged. They changed somewhat their contemplated plans, and gave their attention to building a schoolhouse instead of a meeting house as had been proposed. The Congregational Church was formed Nov. 4, 1741, and Rev. Timothy Harrington was settled as pastor.

In those towns in the Connecticut and Ashuelot valleys which had been settled under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts no particular change took place in their affairs for some years after the establishment of the boundary line in consequence of the change then made. Massachusetts continued to furnish soldiers for garrison duty in the forts which it had built, and New Hampshire gave no indication of her willingness to accept them and provide for their maintenance. Massachusetts at last became dissatisfied with the state of affairs and the settlements became alarmed in view of their situation and exposure to Indian raids.

Fort Dummer was situated on the west side of Connecticut river, about five miles north of Massachusetts line, and at this time within the bounds of New Hampshire. It was built by Massachusetts about 1724, for the protection of her frontier settlements, had been garrisoned and supported by her till 1744, when, finding it without her jurisdiction and within that of New Hampshire, she naturally thought the latter province should be at the expense of its support. An extended correspondence was entered into by Governors Shirley of Massachusetts and Wentworth of New Hampshire; action was taken by the legislative bodies of the two provinces and by the King's Council that had been petitioned to solve the difficulty. New Hampshire pleaded her poverty; that the fort would serve as a protection to only one or two of her towns, and those granted by Massachusetts; that Massachusetts was rich and able to support it and that its advantages were largely in her favor.

May 3, 1745, the New Hampshire Assembly by a large majority refused to make any grant for the support and maintenance of the fort. Soon after this Assembly was dissolved by the Governor, a new one chosen and qualified, and, June 5, reversed the action of the previous Assembly, and voted to receive and garrison the fort. During the controversy delegates were chosen from Winchester, Upper and Lower

LOOKING WEST.

Ashuelot and No. Two (Westmoreland) to meet at Fort Dummer, March 20, 1744, and see what might be done by petition or otherwise for "help and protection in this time of danger."

Nathaniel Hammond and Thomas Cresson were the delegates from this town.

This controversy about the fort should be regarded as having been a test question whether New Hampshire would or would not assume the responsibility of protecting the few settlements that had been made in the Connecticut and Ashuelot valleys.

It should be said in justice to New Hampshire for its reluctance that it was assuming a great responsibility to undertake their protection. The province was not strong and it gave her a very extended frontier to defend against the French and Indians, and it was relieving Massachusetts of a responsibility that really belonged to her as much as it did to New Hampshire.

At a legal meeting held October 3, 1740, it was unanimously voted to petition the "Kings Most Excellent Majesty" setting forth their disturbed condition and asking to be annexed to the province of Massachusetts Bay. It was also unanimously "voted that Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., be impowered to present the petition to His Majesty and to appear in behalf of the petitioners and act according to his best judgment."

"Nathaniel Hammond, Abraham Graves and John Evans were chosen a committee, December 22, 1740, to finish the fort which had been begun around Capt. Nathaniel Hammond's house, as soon as the season would allow, and to build two more forts when there should be occasion for them." The second fort was to be built around John Evans' house, and the third one upon Meeting House hill. Hammond's house was upon house lot No. 27, and Evans' was doubtless upon one of the most northerly house lots. The committee for building the forts were authorized to pay eight shillings a day for the labor performed upon them.

At a proprietors' meeting March 16, 1741, Abraham Graves and Samuel Hills were chosen surveyors of "heyaies;" Thomas Crison and William Carr "fence vewers;" Jonathan Hammond and David Belding field drivers and Samuel Hills and Charles Lumies "hog reaves."

Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, Ephraim Jones of Concord and Timothy Brown were chosen a committee to sell the equivalent land; John Chamberlain was allowed damages by reason of the "hey waiey" crossing his "meadow lott where the bridge now stands on the South Branch."

“Voted that the fence Round the Enterveal in the Great Meadow shall be done up according to Law by the fiveteenth day of April next and that the meadow be clear of Cattle by the first of May next.”

War was commenced between Great Britain and France in 1744, and the English and French colonies became involved in it. The French authorities in Canada incited the Canadian Indians to commit barbarous hostilities upon the English frontier settlements. It does not appear that any depredations were made in this vicinity in 1744, but in each of the four following years the inhabitants suffered greatly. (See Chapter II.)

A party of Indians that had been committing depredations in Northfield, April 15, 1747, left there the following night and came to Lower Ashuelot and burned the town, every building but one being destroyed. Immediately preceding this date the township had been abandoned. It appears that on account of the Indian war very few accessions were made to the settlement during the time that intervened between the establishment of the boundary line on the south of the province and the time when the township was abandoned.

Those who had made a settlement remained and made the best they could of the situation while those who contemplated coming deferred it until more prosperous times.

The following may be considered a nearly correct list of the names of the men who had a permanent residence in the town previous to its abandonment, together with the place from which each came and the time when the names first appear on the records :

Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, Littleton, Sept. 17, 1737.

Samuel Hills, Sunderland, Sept. 17, 1737.

Samuel Farnsworth, Sept. 17, 1737.

Thomas Cresson, Sunderland, Sept. 17, 1737.

Charles Lumis, Bolton, Sept. 17, 1737.

William Carr, Deerfield, Sept. 17, 1737.

Jethro Eames, Oct. 10, 1737.

Jonathan Hammond, Littleton, Oct. 10, 1737.

John Chamberlain, Oct. 10, 1737.

William Grimes, Lancaster, Oct. 10, 1737.

John Evens, Bolton, Oct. 26, 1737.

Samuel Gunn, Sunderland, Nov. 6, 1738.

Benjamin Brown, Concord, Nov. 6, 1738.

Nathaniel Gunn, Dec. 28, 1738.

Samuel Mitchel, Dec. 28, 1738.

William Scott, Oct. 9, 1739.

David Belding, Weathersfield, Conn., Dec. 28, 1738.

Andrew Gardner, Oct. 9, 1739.

Abraham Graves, Hatfield, Dec. 6, 1739.

Timothy Brown, Brookfield, Apr. 4, 1740.

Rev. Timothy Harrington, Cambridge, Nov. 4, 1741.

Nathaniel Hammond, Littleton, Nov. 4, 1741.

Thomas Hammond, Littleton, Nov. 4, 1741.

Eliakim King, 1743.

James Heaton, Wrentham, Nov., 1743.

Samuel Belding, Weathersfield, Conn., Dec. 12, 1743.

William Arms.

Charles Eames, Sept. 28, 1746.

Samuel Chamberlain, Sept. 28, 1746.

Samuel Hills, jr., Sept. 28, 1746.

Timothy Hammond, Littleton, Sept. 27, 1746.

Jonathan Frary, previous to 1747.

Of these thirty-three persons John Evens removed about 1743 to Hinsdale; Nathaniel Hammond, jr., died Oct. 9, 1743; Samuel Gunn died Nov. 7, 1743, and Timothy Hammond died Sept. 27, 1746. Deacon Timothy Brown buried two wives; Capt. Nathaniel Hammond and Thomas Hammond each buried his wife; William Carr buried five children; Jonathan Hammond buried three and a number of others buried one child each.

The plan facing page 46 may be regarded as a nearly correct representation of the house lots, roads, forts, burying ground and places where the settlers had located previous to its abandonment and destruction by fire at the hands of the Indians. Among those whose location is doubtful are Jethro Eames, Andrew Gardner and Samuel Mitchel. We infer that Joseph Hammond, Nathaniel Hammond, jr., Timothy Hammond, Charles Eames, Samuel Chamberlain and Samuel Hills, jr., were young men without families and we have given them no location presuming they had none separate from that of their fathers.

The main road as first laid out as represented on the plan of the house lots was where the road now is at the north and south ends, and the angle was on the hill. The road ran just west of the old cemetery. The northeast corner of house lot No. 18 was near the great surface rock on the Ezra Carpenter place. The road that was subsequently laid out on the east side of Meeting House hill as it diverged from the main road, passed through what is now the southeast corner of the cemetery and near the hearse house leaving the small hill on the east side of the road.

The brick church stands on house lot No. 24. Capt. Nathaniel Hammond's house lot was No. 27 on which was erected the first house and around which was built the first fort. At present it is the Virgil Woodcock place. The names of the owners and occupants of the several house lots, so far as is known, at the time the town was abandoned, are given on the plan, which with this exception is a facsimile from the proprietors' records.

It was about twelve years from the time that work was commenced in the township to the time it was abandoned. During this time much land had been brought under cultivation, many houses had been built, a saw and grist mill constructed, a schoolhouse erected, a church organized and a minister settled.

The settlers scattered among their friends in Massachusetts, thankful that they had escaped captivity, but sorrowful to leave their newly found homes and so much of the little property they possessed to be destroyed by the Indians.

During the years that intervened before their return some attempts were made to realize a little income from their lands they had left. It is said that cattle were killed at Upper Ashuelot in 1748, and it was this same year that Taylor's party were ambushed while on their way from Northfield to the places of the Ashuelot settlements. Of this party were Thomas Cresson who was captured; Asahel Graves who was killed, and perhaps others of the settlers who were anxious to view the desolations of their former homes.

In 1748 England and France made peace, but the Indians continued their raids upon the frontier settlements till 1749. Some families may have returned to Lower Ashuelot as early as 1751, but probably only a few came before 1752.

The township was chartered by New Hampshire, July 2, 1753, and took the name of Swanzev. It is not known by whose influence the town took this name. That it was the result of some connection that some of the early settlers had with Swansea in Wales is probable. It has been conjectured that some of the first settlers were from Swansea, Massachusetts, and that that supposition suggested the name. But there is no recorded evidence that any of them came from that town.

By the New Hampshire charter individuals had confirmed to them a title to the land which was granted by Massachusetts. Pine trees for masts and some of the undivided land was reserved for special uses as will be seen by the following Charter.

Prov: New Hampshire. Entered & Recorded Accordingly in the book of Charters this 2^d day of July 1753 on Page 167-168.

Pr THEODORE ATKINSON, Sec^{ry}.

Recorded from the back of the original Charter for the 2^d day of July, 1753.

The accompanying plans from the back of the charter give the bounds respectively after the territory belonging to Winchester in the southwest corner had been taken out, and after the Richmond gore on the east had been annexed in 1762. Subsequent changes in the easterly boundary have been as follows:—in 1812 the northeast corner of the town was annexed to Keene; in 1793 and 1842 portions adjoining Marlborough were annexed to that town, and in 1815 a part of Swanzeay was taken to help form the town of Troy.

It was about nineteen years from the time that Lower Ashuelot was granted by Massachusetts to the time the township was chartered by New Hampshire. Only four names appear, both among the Massachusetts and New Hampshire grantees. These are Nathaniel Hammond, Jonathan Hammond, William Carr and James Heaton.

The following New Hampshire grantees had resided in the township before it was abandoned, many of them coming before they had reached their majority: Abraham Graves, William Grimes, Thomas Cresson, Thomas Cresson, jr., William Hill, William Cresson, William Carr, Elijah Graves, Samuel Belding, Eliakim King, Joshua Graves, David Belding, Timothy Brown, Wm. Heaton, Samuel Hills, Nathaniel Hills, Ebenezer Hills, Joseph Hammond, Thomas Hammond, Daniel Armes, Ebenezer Armes, Nathaniel Gunn, Wyat Gunn, Daniel Gunn, Mark Ferry, Jonathan Armes, Oliver Hammond, Benjamin Brown. Other grantees who subsequently became inhabitants of the town and whose names appear on the records are Jonathan Woodcock, Jonathan Woodcock, jr., Ebenezer Sprague and Ebenezer Sprague, jr. Most of the other grantees never became residents of the town.

It appears that both Massachusetts and New Hampshire considered it indispensable when granting a new township that provision should be made for having a meeting-house built immediately when a settlement had been made. For this purpose Massachusetts required each grantee to pay five pounds for one share in the township. This money, after paying the expense of surveying the boundary of the town and laying out the house lots was for building a meeting-house. New Hampshire provided for a meeting-house by the penny tax.

A meeting-house would doubtless have been built during the first years of the settlement had there been no Indian war. After the resettlement the building was soon commenced, and was so far completed as to be used in 1755. It is not known whether it was built entirely by the penny tax or in part by the five-pound tax imposed upon the first grantees by Massachusetts.

When the settlers returned to the township they hoped for no more trouble from the Indians, but their hopes were soon dissipated. England and France were again at war and the French authorities in Canada encouraged the Indians to renew the war upon the frontier settlements. Swanzey was in constant danger. The people worked in their fields with a guard of soldiers to protect them. New Hampshire furnished some soldiers for this purpose but the number was insufficient to give them security.

On account of the unsettled state of affairs only a few persons came to the township to make a settlement between the years 1752 and 1762 except those who had previously resided here. Rev. Ezra Carpenter came in 1753; Israel Day's name appears soon after; William Wright's in 1758 and Joseph Whitcomb's in 1760.

Richmond was chartered February 28, 1752, and included within its bounds a piece of land lying between Swanzey on the west and Fitzwilliam and Marlborough on the east, and extending north to Keene line. This piece of land was disannexed from Richmond and annexed to Swanzey, Dec. 11, 1762. The following is a copy of the grant by which the transfer was made :

Deputy Secretary of State.

Previous to this transfer a large part of the gore had been surveyed and laid out in about one-hundred acre lots, but very few, if any, settlements had been made in it. Josiah Willard of Winchester was the owner of a large part of this territory. Daniel Warner and Isaac Applin were also owners. The proprietors of the old part of Swanzezy did not become owners of the new by annexation. The ownership came through the grant to the proprietors of Richmond. Feb. 6, 1760, the proprietors of the old part of Swanzezy voted fifty acres of the undivided lands to the owner of each house lot. This made the seventh division; the previous ones having been a house lot of four acres, a meadow lot of eight acres, and one of twenty acres, an upland lot of about sixty-eight acres, a one-hundred acre lot, and probably a Mark Meadow lot of about four acres,—all of which amounted to two-hundred and fifty-four acres. As some of the proprietors owned a number of house lots they must have been large land owners. The amount of undivided land that remained after this seventh division was made, and which was subsequently divided, was about seventy acres to each house lot, making all the divisions to each right about three-hundred and twenty-four acres.

The subsequent divisions of the undivided lands, together with the proceedings of the proprietors in distinction from those of the town, may here be given.

At a meeting of the proprietors held October 8, 1760, it was decided to open the Great Meadows on the following Saturday for turning in cattle; and a committee was chosen to judge of the interest which each proprietor had in the meadow, and decide the number of cattle that each might turn into it. In 1762, Oct. 13th, the proprietors voted that a tract or parcel of land, equal to one seventieth part of the land in the township should be laid out for a Glebe, and also a tract of equal size for the Incorporated Society for the propagation of the gospel in Foreign Parts as directed by the charter. These two lots containing 286 acres each were laid out Dec. 1, 1769, by David Belding, Elijah Graves and Thomas Cresson, jr., committee. They were located in the north or northwest part of the town, both bounding on Keene line. The Glebe was nearly a perfect square, while the bounds of the other lot located immediately east of the Glebe were somewhat irregular.

April 18, 1774, it was voted to make an eighth division of land, laying out to each house lot 50 acres. The committee chosen to superintend this laying out consisted of Capt. Jonathan Hammond, David Belding, Benjamin Brown, William Carr and Joseph Hammond. It was voted that when there was a piece of undivided land lying between lots which had been already laid out, of less than fifty acres, such pieces might be taken up as a part of a fifty acre division and then enough land could be selected in some other part of the undivided land to make up fifty acres. The making of the eighth division began the first day of September, 1774, and every proprietor was required to make his pitch on the day when his turn came. Any one making an eighth division pitch could not throw it up when once made and make a new selection.

After some forty years had passed from the time that the third and fourth divisions were made, the proprietors began to experience much difficulty about the bounds of their respective lots. These had not been well established, and the records pertaining to them were quite defective. It was not known in all cases when these lots were laid, nor just where the east line of the township ran. The consequence was that some of the lots were laid out in Richmond. There was also difficulty about the fifth and seventh divisions falling short when accurately measured. Some of the proprietors had never come to the township to reside; others had sold their rights to parties unknown to the proprietors living in the town. To effect a satisfactory settlement of the difficulty, proprietors' meetings were held, votes passed, and committees chosen.

March 10, 1780, Col. Joseph Hammond, Benjamin Brown, David Belding, Dea. Thomas Hammond and Maj. Elisha Whitcomb were chosen a committee to settle the bounds of the third and fourth division lots and make a return of their doings to the proprietors. This was done and their report recorded at length in their book of records.

Another committee, consisting of Joseph Hammond, David Belding and Benjamin Brown, was chosen soon after to make up to owners of the fifth and seventh division lots the amount of land wanting to make their one-hundred and fifty acres respectively. The owners of the third division lots which were found to have been laid out in Richmond were also compensated by having other lots laid out for them within the lawful bounds of the proprietors' land.

At a meeting held May 16, 1791, it was voted that those who had not received their quota of land already granted might have till the last Tuesday in November of that year to complete the laying out of their land in those divisions.

Col. Jonathan Whitcomb, Capt. Elijah Belding, Lieut. Roger Thompson, David Belding, jr., and Isaac Hammond were chosen a committee to finish the laying out of the land in all of the divisions which had been made.

November 11, 1803, it was voted to lay out a ninth division of the undivided land, each lot to contain ten acres. The committee chosen for the purpose consisted of Francis Goodhue, Elijah Belding, Jonathan Hammond, Elisha Whitcomb and Philemon Whitcomb. Elijah Belding, jr., was soon after added to this committee.

The location of the pitches was to commence the first Monday in May, 1804, and each proprietor had to make his pitch at his own cost. June 7, 1809, Jonathan Hammond, Elijah Belding and Elijah Belding, jr., were chosen a committee to survey the undivided lands. October ninth of the same year a division of nine acres of undivided land was made to each right. The proprietors drew for their pitches and the first Monday in the following November was decided upon to commence drawing for their pitches in the tenth division. Voted to assess each share in the undivided land equally to pay the expense of the committee for the survey of the undivided lands. The committee for laying out the tenth division consisted of Elijah Belding, jr., Elijah Belding and Jonathan Hammond. Abijah Sawyer was chosen collector of the tax to be assessed. This lay-out committee charged for fifty-one days' work.

May 7, 1833, the proprietors met at the old Meeting House and voted to make an eleventh division of the undivided land of three acres to each right or house lot.

Capt. Edward Goddard and William Wright were chosen to make the draft for the division, and the first of October was fixed as the time to commence the division.

The last meeting of the proprietors held for the choice of officers was on February 4, 1833, at which time John Stratton was chosen moderator; Luther Browne, proprietors' clerk; Luther Browne, Hubbard Williams and Elijah Carpenter, proprietors' committee. Some of the pitches in the eleventh division were not made for some years after this time. The following is the last record made in the proprietors' book.

Swanzey, June 8, 1861. This certifies that I, William P. Gunn, have bought three rights of common land in the Division No. 11 of the heirs of Philemon Whitcomb, three acres each, and have made a pitch on land called Picked Mountain, bounding on land of Bailey Corliss and common land.

HUBBARD WILLIAMS.

Proprietors' Clerk.

The first record made in the books was June 27, 1734, at Concord, Mass., being nineteen days less than one hundred and twenty-seven years from the period at which the last was made.

It will be perceived that in the early years of the settlement the proprietors had charge not only of the land, but of municipal matters in the township also. No records of the town as such, in distinction from those of the proprietors, are to be found previous to 1766, at which date they commence.

During the ten years which elapsed from the resettlement of the town in 1752 to the annexation of the Richmond gore in 1762 the settlements increased but slowly. The fact that the township proved to be in New Hampshire instead of Massachusetts, the fear of Indian raids and the peculiar manner in which the land in the township was laid out and divided, — all had a tendency to deter persons from coming hither to settle. It could not have been pleasant to go to the field or to church with gun in hand for protection, or with soldiers to guard them while worshipping or laboring. But this was the state of affairs much of the time during this period. As the land was laid out, first the meadows and then the upland, and all after the fourth divisions pitched anywhere and in all manners of shapes, it left between the pitches pieces of undivided land often very irregular in shape and poorly adapted for farms or settlement.

After the Richmond gore was annexed to Swanzev in 1762 the lots were purchased quite rapidly and settlements made upon them, and there was increased activity in settling the old part of the township. Previous to this time France had lost its Canadian possessions and there was no power to incite the Indians to continue depredations upon the settlement, and one could come and locate and commence making a home without danger of being molested by the Indians.

In June, 1765, a powerful hurricane passed over the town. The meeting house on the hill was turned one quarter around and considerably damaged. The repairing of these damages and some other repairs on the house were done nominally by the town, or by the proprietors, the leading and substantial men among them doing the work for which the sum of £214 was paid.

There was a large increase of inhabitants in the town between 1762 and 1777. This was largely made up of young men who came and established permanent homes, and many of whom eventually became prominent and influential citizens.

The following are names of persons who settled in the town during this period :

Thomas Applin, John Applin, Timothy Brown Applin (the first person on record in town with more than two names), Isaac Applin, Daniel Bishop, Timothy Bishop, Joseph Cummings, Ephraim Cummings, Thaddeus Cummings, Enoch Cummings, Nehemiah Cummings, Caleb Cook, Nathaniel Dickinson, Joseph Dickinson, Benjamin Day, Joshua Durant, Levi Durant, John Follett, jr., Benjamin Follett, Stoddard Frazy, Calvin Frink, John Frazy, Asa Freeman, Thomas Greene, Joseph Greene, Abraham Griffith, Moses Griffith, Edward Goddard, Edward Hazen, Benjamin Hazen, Michael Hefferon, Dennis Hefferon, Simeon Howes, Kimber Harvey, Timothy Harvey, Ephraim Harvey, Benjamin Hewes, Benjamin Hewes, jr., Charles Howe, Theodore Howe, Uriah Howe, Willard Hunt, Pelitia Kazey, Jethro Kimball, Eli Kimball, Elkanah Lane, Elkanah Lane, jr., Samuel Lane, Justus Lawrence, Henry Morse, Jonathan Nichols, jr., Andrew Nichols, Elijah Osgood, Aaron Parsons, Samuel Page, John Plane, Amasa Parker, Nathaniel Patten, Josiah Prime, Simeon Puffer, Amos Puffer, Josiah Read, Cornelius Roberts, John Rugg, Penticost Stanley, Benjamin Starkey, Enoch Starkey, Joseph Starkey, John Starkey, John Starkey, jr., John Thompson, Roger Thompson, Samuel Thompson, Ebenezer Thompson, Annanias Tubbs, Daniel Warner, James Wheelock, Ezekiel White, David White, John Whitcomb, Moses Boardman Williams, Joseph Whitcomb, jr., Jonathan Whitcomb, Elisha Whitecomb, Philemon Whitecomb, Abijah Whitecomb.

At the commencement of the Revolutionary war there were in the town a number of men able to do military duty who came to the town when lads with their parents, or who had been born in the town. Of this number were Elijah Belding, David Belding, 2^d, Moses Belding, Samuel Belding, 2^d, Eleazar Brown, Wright Brown, Thomas Cressen, 2^d, Nathan Cressen, Joseph Day, Amos Day, Jonathan Day, Daniel Day, Joshua Graves, Abner Graves, Elijah Graves, William Grimes, 2^d, James Grimes, Isaac Hammond, Benjamin Hammond, Joseph Hammond, 2^d, James Heaton, 2^d, Samuel Heaton, Nathaniel Heaton, Nathaniel Hills, Nathaniel Hills, 2^d, Samuel Hills, 2^d, Samuel Hills, 3^d, Ebenezer Hills, Nathan Woodcock, Samuel Wright.

March 4, 1766, the town "voted to build a good and sufficient pound thirty-five foot square in the highway at the end of John Frazy's house lot." This pound, or one that replaced it, is remembered by our older citizens as standing on the east side of the old road near the south-east corner of the present cemetery.

The following is the record of the annual March meeting in 1771 :

"At a meeting of the inhabitants of Swanzeý legally meet at the meeting house in said Swanzey on Tuesday the fifth day of March, 1771, the meeting being opened, Capt. Joseph Hammond was chosen moderator, then the meeting was adjourned for the space of half an hour to meet at the house of Lieut. Jonathan Whitcomb. Re-assembled at the time and place appointed. Thomas Applin was chosen Town Clerk. Thomas Applin, Samuel Hills, Benjamin Brown, David Belding and Elijah Graves chosen selectmen. Voted that the selectmen be assessors. Caleb Sawyer was chosen constable; Capt Joseph Hammond chosen Town Treasurer; Thomas Hammond and Amasa Parker chosen Tythingmen; Lient. Joseph Whitcomb, Joseph Cummings, Henry Morse, David Belding, Roger Thompson and Benjamin Brown chosen Surveyors of High Ways. Elisha Scott and Elijah Belding chosen Fence Viewers; John Starkey Sen. Dear Reef; Wyatt Gunn, Ebenezer Hills and Jonathan Woodeock jr. chosen Hog Reaves; Nathan Scott and Gardner Duston chosen Field Drivers; Samuel Belding chosen Sealer of Leather. Voted to accept of the settlement of accounts with Capt. Jonathan Hammond as Treasurer for the year 1768 and 1769 as presented to the town by the Selectmen.

Voted to raise forty pounds lawful money to make and repair roads.

Voted that labor at the roads be set at two shillings and eight pence per day from the first day of Apr. to the first day of Oct., and the rest of the year at two shillings per day.

Voted, that swine may go at large on the common yoked and ringed according to law, from the first of April to the last day of October.

JOSEPH HAMMOND, Moderator."

The common practice in those early days of adjourning for one-half or one-fourth of an hour from the meeting house to some dwelling house was doubtless occasioned by the fact that the meeting house was cold, there being in it neither stove nor fireplace nor any other apparatus for warming it. Some of the more uncharitable, however, think it was another kind of fire which our forefathers indulged in that was the occasion of these adjournments.

At a town meeting Nov. 8, 1771, it was "voted to allow Capt. Jonathan Hammond two pound eight shillings lawful money for going twice to Worcester to Mr. Putnam's on the town's business."

Nearly all the men in the town rendered some kind of service for the revolutionary cause during the years, 1775-76-77. Men that were too old for military service and had the means hired men for the army or loaned to the town to enable it to hire soldiers. The following votes passed at different times indicate the feeling in this town in regard to the impending struggle.

May 8, 1775. "Voted that Samuel Hills be appointed a Deputy to represent this town at the Convention of Deputies proposed to be held at Exeter on the 17th day of this instant, and that he be fully empowered and authorized in behalf of this town to join with Deputies of other towns in adopting and pursuing such measures as may be judged most expedient to pursue to restore the rights of this and the other colonies, and that he be empowered as aforesaid to act for the space of six months if the said Convention of Deputies shall judge it to be necessary."

Dec. 18. "Voted, That it is the opinion of the town that Col. Joseph Hammond, Maj. Elisha Whitecomb, Capt. Joseph Whitecomb, jr., Capt. Jonathan Whitecomb, Mr. Thomas Hammond, Mr. Benjamin Brown, and Lieut. Daniel Warner be chosen a Committee of Safety agreeable to the advice of the Continental Congress, and we acknowledge them a Committee of Safety for this town, and we approve of what they have acted in that capacity."

March 4, 1777. "Voted to dismiss the present Committee of Safety and choose a new one, and accordingly made choice of Samuel Day, Calvin Frink, Capt. Jonathan Whitecomb, Lieut. Elisha Whitecomb, and Lieut. Elijah Belding."

The Committee of Safety was composed of some of the most influential and enterprising men of the town, and to them were confided matters of great public interest.

The commencement of the year 1778 found the people of the American colonies, who had revolted from the British government, much encouraged for the success of their cause. Burgoyne with his splendid army had surrendered and become prisoners of war. Measures were being taken to unite the colonies in a general government, and to mature plans for state and local governments. The action of the voters of Swanzev, Jan. 22, 1778, was such as to show that the public sentiment of the town was in full sympathy with those who were engaged in planning systems of federal and state governments. At a special town meeting it was "voted that this town approves of the Articles of Confederation and perpetual union between the United States of America as proposed by the Continental Congress, and desire that the same may be ratified and confirmed."

"Voted, that our representative at the General Court be instructed to concur with the representatives of the other towns in this state for the sole purpose of forming and laying a permanent plan or system for the future government of this state agreeably to the vote of the General Court."

May 12, 1778. "Voted to send one man to meet with the Convention at Concord the tenth day of June next, and Calvin Frink Esq. was chosen."

Dec. 3, 1778, the legal voters of Swanzey and Fitzwilliam, which towns were classed together, having been duly notified, met at the house of Lieut. Henry Morse to choose a person having a real estate of two hundred pounds lawful money in this state, to represent them in the General Assembly to be held at Exeter on the third Wednesday of December, and "to empower such representative for the term of one year from this meeting to transact such business and pursue such measures as they may judge necessary for the public good, and particularly to empower such representative to vote in the choice of Delegates to the Continental Congress." Major Elisha Whitcomb was the person chosen, who was likewise authorized to vote for delegates to the Congress. Mr. Morse, at the time the foregoing meeting was held at his house, resided in that part of Swanzey which was subsequently disannexed to help form the town of Troy. At the time of the meeting much of the travel from Cheshire county and the Connecticut valley for Boston went down through Swanzey Centre and up over the hill where Mr. Morse kept a public house. An old cellar hole now marks the place where the meeting was held.

During the "Vermont Controversy," relative to the boundary and status of that territory, 1777-1783, the western part of New Hampshire was much agitated and public sentiment very much divided between those that wished to unite with Vermont and those that wished to continue their connection with New Hampshire. In many towns a majority of the voters were in favor of uniting with Vermont. Among them were Alstead, Charlestown, Claremont, Chesterfield, Gilsum, Hinsdale, Marlow, Richmond, Surry and Westmoreland.

Belknap in his history of New Hampshire says — "The state of society within the seceding towns at this time was very unhappy. The majorities attempted to control the minorities; and these were not disposed to submit, but to seek protection of the government with which they had been connected. At the same time and in the same place Justices, Sheriffs and Constables, appointed by the authority of both States, were exercising jurisdiction over the same persons. Party rage, high words and deep resentment, were the effects of these clashing interests."

Swanzey remained loyal to New Hampshire, but it will be seen by the following documents that it contained a disturbing secession element.

SELECTMEN'S STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS ADDRESSED TO THE GENERAL

"The Selectmen of the town of Swanzey, in behalf of themselves and the Town Humbly show—That under the Present unhappy Situation of our affairs in this part of the State, when most in many, and many in all the Towns have Revolted from under the Government and Jurisdiction of the State, bidding defiance to the Authority and Laws of the same; Absolutely Refusing to pay Taxes, or to contribute any thing in any way or manner towards Raising men for the Continental Army, or Providing Supplies for the same — We find it Extremely Difficult for us to Comply with the Requisitions of the State, for altho' the greatest part of the People in this Town, Remain firm in their Allegiance to the State; Utterly averse to the late and present factions and seditious conduct of a great (if not the greatest) part of the People in this Western part of the State, yet our affairs are extremely Embarrassed, for if Taxes are Assessed they cannot be Collected, as some will Refuse to pay, and if Constables or Collectors should Distrain such Delinquents for their Rates, Mobs would Arise, and perhaps the power of the State of Vermont would be employed for their protection. We have exerted ourselves as much as we could in order to Raise our Quota of Men for the Continental Army, and Also for Six months, but have not been able to complete the former nor to Raise any part of the latter, which Inability is owing principally if not Solely to the confused Situation of this part of the State; And unless Something can be done for our Assistance it will be Absolutely Impossible for us to Raise Men or money for the Service of the State. We consider ourselves as Subjects of the state of New Hampshire, and are firmly Resolved to persist in our Allegiance, and expect the protection of the State, without which we shall not be able to stand against the opposition that will be made. We humbly pray that your Honors would take the matter into your Wise consideration, and make such provision for our protection and Safety as that we may not be Obligated to Yield to unreasonable Men and Measures.

RELATIVE TO THE BEEF TAX, 1784.

FEBRUARY, 1785.

“The Petition of the Selectmen and Assessors of the Town of Swanzezy in said State for the year 1784; Humbly sheweth.

That whereas in the year 1781 the General Court of this State Ordered and directed the Selectmen of said Swanzezy, to Assess the Inhabitants of said Town, their Quota of Beef for the Continental Army, which was accordingly done, and the greatest part of said Beef was paid by said Inhabitants, Yet some were delinquent, Refusing to pay their State Tax, occasioned principally by the Union of the Grants (so called) with Vermont, by reason of which, agreeably to an Act of the General Court said Swanzezy was Ordered to pay the Deficiency of said Tax, and a fine for their Delinquency, both of which amounting to £137, which the Treasurer of this State by his Warrant directed to the Selectmen of said Town has ordered to be assessed, which has not yet been complied with, Because your petitioners think it very unjust to Assess, Levy and collect the aforesaid sum of those Persons who paid their Tax in due Time, and your Petitioners have no warrant to Assess said Sum on those that were Delinquent and dare not venture to Assess said Sum either on the whole or part of the Inhabitants, lest it should make great confusion, murmuring and Complaining among the People of Said Town. — Your Petitioners therefore most Humbly and earnestly pray that this Honorable Body would take the above stated Case into their Serious Consideration, and make such Order thereon, as in their Wisdom they shall think most Just and Equitable.

And as in Duty Bound shall ever pray :

RELATIVE TO THE BEEF TAX.

ADDRESSED TO THE GENERAL COURT, DEC. 13, 1786.

“The Selectmen of Swanzezy in the County of Cheshire humbly beg leave to lay before this Honorable Body their Embarrassments as to Assessing the Doomage for this Town’s Deficiency of Beef in the Year 1781. Your Petitioners immediately on Receiving Orders for collecting Said Beef, Assessed the Inhabitants of Swanzezy, Setting the Beef at twenty Seven Shillings pr. Hundred weight, and as your Petitioners were Sensible of the Importance of the Order of the Court being complied with, they exerted themselves and collected a considerable part of the Beef by the Set time; and would undoubtedly Collected the whole, had it not been for a number of Political Heretics in this and Adjacent Towns who by their Instigations and artful insinuations Shook the Allegiance of the ignorant and unprincipled part of the community from the State of New Hampshire and Attached them to the usurped State of Vermont; and the Imbecility of Government was so great at that Day that your Petitioners thought it not wise to compel or use Coercive measures with those who would not freely pay their proportion of Said tax; and since the energy of Government has increased, and this Town has been called upon to pay Said Tax with a Doomage, the Selectmen have taken up the Matter, and find it Difficult if not Impossible to make an Assessment for said Doomage in any way which will not blow up an unquenchable fire in this Town—for if we should Assess it on the Delinquents only, who in Justice ought to pay the Same, we should, in so doing, do injustice, for a number of said Delinquents are Removed out of the Town, and consequently out of the Reach of an Assessment and should an Assessment be made on the whole Town, it would be to make the Righteous be as the Wicked, which the Patriarch of the Hebrews Saith is far from the Almighty.

Your Petitioners therefore most Humbly pray this Honorable Body to take the Matter into their wise Consideration, and either accept of the twenty Seven Shillings on the Hundred weight which is already Assessed and which may be collected without Difficulty; or Direct your Petitioners in what manner to proceed that they may escape the Publick Odium. And as in Duty bound Shall ever Pray.

[In House of Representatives January 16, 1787, Voted that "as there is great difficulty respecting the assessment for the deficiency of Beef in the Town of Swanzy, the Treasurer be directed so far as respects said Beef Tax, to stay the Extent against said Town until the first Wednesday of June next."]

The paying taxes in beef was resorted to because there was not money with which to pay them. The Continental money had become worthless; the specie had been depleted in prosecuting the war, and no financial system had been devised by which the people could be relieved from their embarrassed circumstances. The people were heavily taxed to meet indebtedness occasioned by the war.

SCALE OF DEPRECIATION OF CONTINENTAL MONEY, 1777.

After the continental money had become worthless, and gold and silver had gone out of the country to pay for importations occasioned by the war, the people were without money. They were heavily taxed by the federal and state governments to meet the expenses of the war. Private debts had become embarrassing as money could not be obtained for meeting engagements. Many believed that relief could be obtained by the State emitting paper money and loaning it on land security. The Assembly called upon the towns for an expression of their views upon the subject. The following is Swanzeys instructions to its representative.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of Swanzeys in the County of Cheshire and State of New Hampshire, Aug. 28, 1786:—

“Voted to choose a Committee to give instructions to the Representative of said Town for the Rule of Conduct at the next Session of the General Court Respecting the Emission of paper money.”

To Mr. Abraham Randall, Representative of the Town of Swanzeys:

SIR:—Your constituents, Reposing confidence in your integrity, ability and zeal for the publick good, Chose you to Represent them in the General Assembly of this State the present year. This is a day we are sensible when the greatest Wisdom, patriotism, firmness, Unanimity, Publick Spirit and freedom be detached from selfish and Mercenary views, and when all the above-named virtues are requisite, and ought to be the governing principles in all our Publick Councils. We, therefore, having a Constitutional Right so to do, think it expedient to express our Sentiments to you respecting our distressed situation for want of a Circulating Medium. We therefore instruct you to use your influence in the Assembly that as soon as may be there be an Emission of paper Currency, as being in Our Opinion the best Remedy left us for Relief, and it is the minds of your Constituents that the Emission of paper Currency be applied Solely for the purpose of Redeeming the State Securities, which we conceive will be a great easement by stopping the interest of those securities; but we mean not to dictate the General Court, but only to hint our desires, confiding in the wisdom of the Legislature of this state if they shall see fit to Issue a paper Medium that it be Emitted on such foundation as they shall think best for the Community.

HENRY MORSE, } Committee in the name and DAVID BELDING, } behalf of the Town.

The returns of the actions of the towns showed that the public sentiment was opposed to emitting paper money, and the Assembly voted that it had not the constitutional right to do it.

Some of those in favor of having the state issue paper money were so determined that they organized an armed mob, marched to where the Assembly was in session at Exeter, and endeavored to gain their ends by coercive measures. They were unsuccessful; the militia were called out and a number of the leaders arrested.

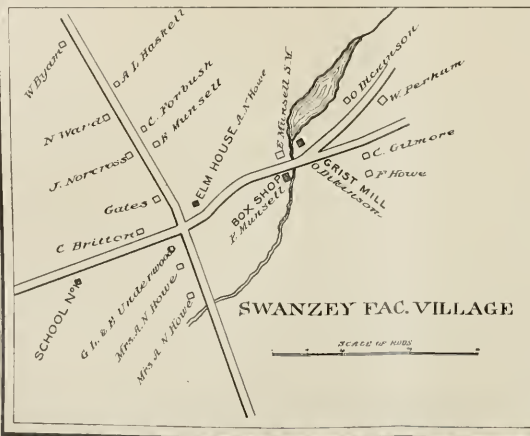

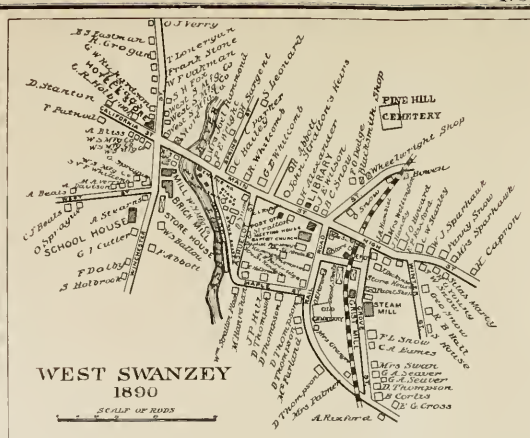

Going back to March 14, 1781, we find the town "voted to sell that part of the town Common lying west of the road now travelled from the Meeting-house to Mr. Goddard's dwelling-house, extending south to the land of Greenwood Carpenter, and north as far as the highway leading from said common to James Grimes'."

The meeting-house mentioned was that standing on the hill, and the road to James Grimes' went west from the common, by the David Parsons' place over the hill north of Mt. Cæsar. It was also voted that Maj. Elisha Whitecomb, David Belding and Dea. Thomas Hammond be a committee to make an exact survey of the land, appraise it at its just value, and offer it for sale to the Rev. Edward Goddard, who should have the privilege of purchasing it, but if he declined then it might be sold to any other person.

May 2^d, Rev. Edward Goddard was chosen a delegate to a Convention to be holden in Concord on the first Tuesday in June following, for the purpose of forming and laying a permanent plan or system of government for this State.

Dec. 31, at a meeting duly called to see if the town would accept of the constitution or plan of government agreed upon by the Convention at Concord the vote was as follows: "Thirty-one voted to accept it; five declined voting at all; two said they had not perused it sufficiently and did not know whether they belonged to the state of New Hampshire or to Vermont. One objected to one article respecting the Governor, that no man shall be eligible as Governor more than three years in any seven."

A town meeting was held May 28, 1783, at which seventy-three voters were present. They voted to reconsider the vote passed in regard to the adoption of the State Constitution, and, feeling their own inability to determine rightly in regard to the matter, they voted to "confide in the wisdom and justice of the Legislature of the State to act as they shall think most just and equitable." Thomas Applin, Calvin Frink and Aaron Parsons were chosen a committee to draft instructions to the delegate in the General Court.

The increase of inhabitants in Swanzezy during a number of years previous to 1784 must have been quite large as shown by the following certificate :

"SWANZEY, DEC. 10th, 1783.

We the Subscribers do hereby Certify that According to the Best of our knowledge there is in the town of Swanzezy one hundred and eighty-two Male Polls of twenty-one years of Age and upwards, paying for themselves a Poll Tax.

 of Swanzezy."

From 1784 to 1792 New Hampshire had a temporary constitution, and under it the chief executive of the state was styled President.

The first town meeting in Swanzezy under this Constitution was held March 2, 1784, at which time Samuel Hills was chosen moderator.

Votes for President of the State :—Meshech Weare, 10 ; George Atkinson, 21 ; John Sullivan, 2.

For two Senators for Cheshire County : Thomas Applin, 14 ; Daniel Newcomb, 2 ; Calvin Frink, 27 ; John Bellows, 5 ; Daniel Jones, 5 ; Simeon Olcott, 5 ; Benjamin Bellows, 1.

Voted to grant 48 shillings to the Rev. Mr. Goddard as a reward for his service as a member of the late Convention for forming a Constitution for this state.

Fifteen shillings were voted to Samuel Hills for a like service.

Salmon and shad ascended the Ashuelot river before dams were built across it. When the people found that their yearly supply of these fish was cut off by these dams there was much complaint, and doubtless there were those who were willing unlawfully to engage in making free passage-ways for the fish through the dams. The General Assembly was petitioned during several years for redress in this matter, and January 15, 1789, an act was passed requiring a sluice to be kept open in every dam on said river in the towns of Hinsdale, Winchester, Swanzev and Keene, between the 10th day of May and the 20th day of July in any year.

At the annual March meeting in 1785 it was "voted to raise 12 pounds for the purpose of trimming the burying ground."

March 7, 1786. "Voted to raise 4£., 13s., 1d. to complete the fencing of the burying ground."

"Voted to sell Lt. Dan Guild a piece of the common adjoining and lying south of the burying-yard between said yard and Mr. William Wright's."

At a legal meeting held Oct. 30, 1786, a plan for emitting paper money by the General Court was read. The vote was unanimous against approving the measure. A committee for suggesting alterations in the plan was chosen, consisting of Roger Thompson, William Grimes, Wyman Richardson, Abraham Randall, Elisha Whitecomb, David Belding, jr., and Ebenezer Hills.

Nov. 13, the committee made the following report:—"That twenty thousands be emitted on the same plan that the General Court proposed to emit the ten thousand pounds, with the addition to have it a tender for all debts due in this state; and in lieu of the forty thousand pounds that the General Court proposed to emit on land security; that the state notes be called in, and the holder in lieu of said notes to receive certificates of the same sum in lieu of the same, so that the interest of said notes may cease and the certificates to be received in all outstanding taxes. Dated at Swanzev the 13th day of November, 1786.

Signed in behalf of the Committee,

ROGER THOMPSON."

Seventeen persons voted in favor of this report and two against it.

Dec. 4 a meeting was called to see if the town would agree with some person to pay the last state tax by the first of January and repay such person in cattle or any other way agreed upon.

"Voted, That the Selectmen be impowered to agree with Mr. Nathan Capron who has undertaken to pay said tax for the town."

"Voted, That the Selectmen, together with Maj. Elisha Whitecomb, Maj. Jonathan Whitecomb, Lt. Samuel Wright and Mr. David Belding, jr., be a committee to examine into the requests of several constables respecting such assessments in their hands against such persons as they have not had opportunity to collect, and make such an adjustment and abatement to such constables as they shall judge equitable."

The foregoing votes show the financial condition of the town at that period. It was similar to that of other towns. The war for Independence had been successfully prosecuted, and their independence had been achieved; but there had been no well matured plans adopted for a state or a general government. The finances of the country were in a deplorable condition; taxes were heavy in consequence of the war; the people were without money, and to pay their taxes was almost an impossibility.

Jan. 8, 1788, Maj. Elisha Whitcomb was chosen a delegate to a convention to meet at Exeter, Feb. 2, to consider the federal constitution. He was also chosen in 1791 to a convention for the revision of the state constitution.

In 1793 it was voted to allow Mr. Moses B. Williams six shillings for warning sundry persons out of town; and the same year an allowance was made John Whitcomb, jr., for a similar service. This "warning out of town" was a common practice in those days. When persons came into a town to reside who were likely to become dependent upon the town for support it was customary for the selectmen to issue an order to a constable to force such persons to leave the town.

A constable was quite an important officer during this period of the town's history. When town meetings were called the legal voters were personally warned to attend by a constable who had received his orders from the selectmen. The collecting of the taxes was also a part of the constable's official duty.

At the annual meeting this year the following was passed: "Whereas Mr. John Harvey and others, inhabitants of Swanzy, have requested said town that they would vote that they and their lands may be annexed to the town of Marlborough, representing that they live much more convenient to Marlborough meeting-house than to Swanzy, etc., the town having considered the said request, think the same to be reasonable; therefore voted that Messrs. John Harvey, Kimber Harvey and Samuel Stearns, and the land whereon they dwell, and the land belonging to Mr. Timothy Harvey be set off from the town of Swanzy and annexed to the town of Marlborough; said tract of land lies in the northeastwardly part of said Swanzy, and is the most northwardly part of that gore of land which was set off from Richmond to Swanzy; and is bounded as follows: viz.: Beginning at a heap of stones, being the southeast corner of the town of Keene, then runs on said Keene west 8 degrees north, 32 rods to the old corner of Swanzy; then runs south 34 degrees west on Swanzy's old line, 418 rods to a white pine tree ; then runs east 20 degrees 30 minutes south on common land 212 rods to a stake and stones in the patent line ; then runs on the patent line north 9 degrees 30 minutes east 418 rods to the first mentioned corner ; containing three hundred and five acres." This vote was sanctioned the same year by the legislature. The following is the plan of the foregoing described piece of land :

In 1812 a small section on the N. E. part of the town was annexed to Keene ; and in 1842 another section, a part of the Richmond Gore, was annexed to Marlborough.

In 1815 a portion, about three miles south of the last-named section, was taken to form the new town of Troy, leaving the eastern boundary of Swanzev very irregular.

A movement was commenced as early as 1794 to have a new meeting house built, larger and more imposing than the old one on the hill. The population of the town had become too large, too wealthy and were too well united in supporting gospel ordinances that were in harmony with the Congregational creed to make it proper to continue to worship in the old house. The result of the movement was the erection of the meeting house on the plain, the same building which has since been remodelled into the present town house. The house was built nominally by the town, and a large part of the work was probably done in the year 1796.

It is not known how the building of the house was managed as the town's records during the period in which it was built are lost. A list of the taxes paid during these years for other purposes has been preserved but it does not show that anything was raised for building the meeting house. The inference is that a committee had the management of raising and applying the taxes for building the house. A large part of the cost was ultimately met from the sale of the pews. As a rule the most desirable pews were secured by the most prominent men in the town.

The raising of the meeting house was a great event for the times. To do the work men were picked in Swanzev and in the neighboring towns. The work of raising commenced in the morning. Previous to that time a whole broadside had been put together. When all was ready for raising the huge broadside, the master workman took his position upon the frame from which place he gave his orders until the structure had been raised to a considerable height. At the close of the first day the body of the house had been raised. When the men assembled the second morning one of them exhibited his nerve by passing from one side of the building to the other upon one of the suspended beams to which other timbers had not been connected. It took three days to raise the building including the belfry. For a description of the building see Chapter V.

Many men settled in town between the years 1777 and 1793. Had a list of the tax payers been preserved during these years it would have shown nearly the time when their settlement was made. The first tax list that is now found is of the year 1793.

The following list is intended to include such persons as settled in the town between 1777 and 1793 :

Abner Aldrich,	Amos Bailey,
Amasa Aldrich,	Nathan Capron,
Uriah Aldrich,	Otis Capron,
Jacob Bump,	Alpheus Capron,
Jeremiah Battles,	Joseph Cross,
Thomas Battles, jr.,	Thomas Cross,

The foregoing lists are names of persons that moved into the town and the year when they were first taxed therein.

Generally they came to the town the year before they were taxed. Thus we consider that those persons who were taxed for the first time in 1801 became residents in 1800. Young men who reached their majority in the town and were sons of fathers who had been taxed in the town are not included in the lists. What we have intended to show is the time when different families moved into the town.

But a small number of persons had settled in the town previous to 1800 except to engage in clearing up land for a farm. At this time nearly all the land in the township had passed into the hands of men who wanted it for such a purpose.

Probably there was as large a number of farms in the town in 1800 as there has been at any period in the town's history. Large numbers of cellar holes can be seen in different parts of the town where some one about this period or previously had built a house and cleared off some of the adjacent land, with the view of residing there permanently as a farmer.

Nearly all the land in the town when first cleared was quite productive. Fields that long since were abandoned for farming once produced stout grass, and upon many hills that are now covered with timber was once excellent pasturage.

The course of the settlements in the town was from the Centre (at which place they were mostly confined for the first twenty years), down the Ashuelot river and up the South Branch. Settlements were early made on the east side of the South Branch opposite the Centre and between there and the Keene line. Some were made upon the hills quite early; but most of the hills were not settled until nearly all the low lands had been appropriated.

In 1800 many of the farms were large and productive and the owners in affluent circumstances. Large houses had been built and were surrounded by commodious buildings. The oldest type of the best houses that were built in the town was a two-story house in front, and one story at the back part. The plan was to have two good-sized front rooms on the lower floor, and to have two good-sized chambers on the second floor. The centre of the rear part contained a large kitchen and at the ends of it bedrooms, pantry, cupboards, entries, etc. To accommodate the three large rooms on the lower floor and the two front chambers a very large chimney was built in the centre of the house. Another type, and from which a larger number was built than from the first, was to have the same construction upon the lower floor, but without the second story in front. A fashionable type for the best houses at a later date was to build with two stories and with a four-cornered flat roof. If it was built with two rooms upon each floor, it had usually a chimney at each end of the house. If it contained four rooms upon each floor the chimneys were built between the front and rear rooms.

A log house was common where a new settlement was made for a few years, but as there were saw mills in the town most of the time from the first settlement, and plenty of timber, these were soon replaced by framed houses as most of the settlers were enterprising men.

To feed a family one depended mostly upon the production of his land and the stock which he kept upon it. Very little dependence was made upon purchasing provisions outside of the town. Large quantities of rye were raised upon the newly cleared land, and upon the plains by cultivation. Indian corn was regarded as the most important crop of all that was cultivated. The principal bread used was brown bread made from rye and Indian meal. Hasty pudding was a standard family diet. Boiled Indian pudding frequently made with suet, was a common article upon the farmer's table. Johnny-cake often was substituted for brown bread. Wheat was cultivated to some extent, but it was too uncertain a crop to be relied upon to constitute the daily fare of most families. Beans were extensively raised, and used largely for making bean porridge. Potatoes, turnips, pumpkins, pease, cabbages and beets were all raised to help make a yearly stock of provisions for a family.

Farmers, as a rule, produced their own meat. In the fall of the year or early winter, enough fattened cattle and hogs were slaughtered to make a supply of fresh meat for the winter and salt meat for a year; veal was the principal fresh meat used in the summer, and mutton in the fall.

A much larger quantity of milk was used then than at present. In many large families of children brown bread and milk and Johnny-cake and milk constituted a large part of their food. Farmers who had any number of cows generally made a quantity of cheese for a year's stock, to be used daily in the family. Butter was perhaps less used than it is at present. Very little income was expected from the cows in the winter. The milk of one cow in the winter was all that most farmers cared to have.

The amount of fish obtained from the rivers was an important item in the supply of provisions for many families. Those fish which are now common to our rivers and brooks were then much larger and more abundant than they are at the present time. At the time the town was first settled salmon and shad made their annual visits to its rivers in large numbers.

The occasional killing of a deer furnished some venison; wild turkeys were frequently killed ; pigeons were more plentiful than they are at the present time ; partridges were as numerous as at present, and perhaps more so.

The principal article of food consumed, not produced upon the farm or obtained from the rivers or forests, was salt fish purchased in the Boston market.

The clothing of both men and women was almost entirely home-spun. Flax and wool were the principal materials from which it was made. For working flax, men were skilled in the process of rotting it, after it had been harvested. This was done by spreading it on the ground, exposed to rains and dews, until the woody part became brittle and could be cleaved from the fibre by the use of the break and swingle. After the men had done their part of the work upon the flax the fibre was handed over to the wives and daughters. They, by the use of the hatchel, the spinning-wheel and the loom, made it into cloth. When men had sheared the wool from the sheep, women, by the use of the hand cards, spinning-wheels and looms, made it into cloth. The art of dyeing yarn and cloth was confided to the women.

Grazing was depended upon almost entirely for keeping horses and cattle through the summer, and most of the hogs were kept in a pasture or run in the highway during the summer, and grass and roots constituted a large part of their feed.

A well arranged farm, to meet the requirements of a family, had pastures for cattle and horses, a sheep pasture, a hog pasture, hay fields, a field of corn, of rye, wheat, oats, buckwheat, potatoes, beans, turnips, pease, flax, and a good-sized garden.

The production of cider appears to have been regarded as an important part of farm operations. Seldom do we find an old cellar hole, where there was once a farm, that there are not to be seen more or less old apple trees.

The practices of the times were such that an ordinary farmer provided most of the food and clothing for his family from the production of his land and the labor of himself and family within the bounds of his own possessions.

To pay for such articles of food and clothing as could not be produced, to pay for work done by a carpenter, by a blacksmith, a tanner, a shoemaker, and to pay taxes required that a considerable amount of something should be disposed of to meet such payments. The mechanics, as a general thing, had farms and lands that they were clearing up. This enabled the mechanics and farmers to exchange labor for their mutual benefit. The income most relied upon to raise money was from the sale of cattle, horses, sheep and hogs. The land was new and productive, which enabled the farmers to dispose of a considerable amount of stock annually.

Large numbers of the farmers went once a year, at least, to Boston or some other place where there was a good market, with the surplus production of their farms and some goods of domestic manufacture, and made purchases of some of the principal articles that would be needed the coming year. The loads carried to market were largely made up of a few hundred pounds of pork, a few tubs of butter, a number of cheeses, a box or two of poultry, a web of frocking and a piece of flannel. The return load would consist of a few bushels of salt, several gallons of rum, a few gallons of molasses, a quantity of tea, a jack-knife for each of the boys, a piece of goods to make the wife a dress and some trinkets for the girls. Large numbers of these loads were drawn by a single horse, some by two horses, and in some cases, oxen were brought into requisition.

The farmers that went to market in this way had to exercise considerable economy that their expenses might not consume too large a portion of the products sold. A large part of the food eaten while gone was taken with them from home, and some of the grain to be fed to the team, was also carried from home. It was considered no impropriety in those times for a person going to market to eat his own lunch or to feed his own grain to his horses at a public house. The tavern keeper was satisfied if he furnished the hay, liquor and lodging.

Quite an amount of goods was transported upon horses by the use of panniers. These were a pair of baskets suspended one upon each side of a horse. Some men made a business of going to market with what could be carried in a pair of panniers. Mr. John Whitcomb came to the town about the year 1763 from Bolton, Mass., with a wife and three small children. He rode one horse and brought such articles as he could; his wife rode another which carried a pair of panniers. In each of the baskets a child was placed, the other the mother brought in her arms.

Wheeled carriages for people to ride in were but little used at the period of 1800. Riding horseback was the usual mode of travelling when people rode. It was common for two persons to ride upon one horse. Men took their wives and daughters to church upon their horses behind them. A young man would gallant a lady friend upon his horse behind him with as much pride as one does now in a nice carriage. A pillion was placed behind the saddle, and fastened to it for the person to sit upon that rode behind.

For a long time one of the most travelled thoroughfares in Cheshire county was the road that passed through the centre of Swanzey. The road passed south from the Centre and then turned to the southeast and passed up over the hill into what was then Fitzwilliam, now Troy. A large part of the teaming from Cheshire county, and much of that of Vermont going to Boston, passed over this road.

This travel made business for public houses at the Centre and for one on the hill in that part of Swanzey which is included in Troy. The one on the hill was a noted house. It was first kept by Henry Morse and then by Francis Goodhue.

A man fashionably dressed wore a ruffled shirt bosom, short breeches, long stockings, knee buckles, a powdered wig, and a cocked hat.

The women's clothing was mostly made from homespun, woollen and linen goods; but nice silk dresses were not uncommon. Most women in comfortable circumstances had a scarlet woollen cloak made with a hood. These cloaks were made from imported goods.

The following named persons became residents of Swanzey and were taxed in the town for the first time in the following years :

From the time of the first settlement of the town to the end of the century there was no necessity for common laborers to go from home to obtain work. Clearing and cultivating the land and the labors incident to a new settlement gave employment to all who wished to work. About the beginning of the present century many of the young men began to look to other places for temporary employment and permanent homes. Some went to Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and some to Canada. A few went to Maine and some drifted down to Massachusetts. For a limited time many went to the St. Lawrence river in Canada and worked at boating on that river. Others went down to Connecticut river towns and labored at farming, others went to Boston and vicinity and worked at gardening, trucking, drawing a hand cart, or found employment on board a fishing vessel. The expense of riding in a coach was too great for these men in going to and returning from these places of temporary abode. A common practice for a young man was to take a few articles of clothing, do them up in a bundle, swing it on his back and walk.

Between the years 1810 and 1820 a large number of the women in Swanzev were engaged in weaving cotton cloth in hand looms. Some men made a business of going to Rhode Island with a team for the yarn, distributing it to the weavers in the different families and gathering up the cloth after it was woven.

Next to farming the most important business in Swanzev from first to last has been the working of pine into building material and wooden ware. The large quantity of superior old growth pine, when sawed into lumber, has always been an article of export. Saw mills were early built not only on the larger but on the smaller streams. In 1830, the number of sites where one of these mills stood or had stood was not less than fifteen. All of them were the old-fashioned sash mills.

For many years about this date an extensive business was carried on in transporting lumber to Northfield where it was "rafted" down the Connecticut river, finding a market at Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.

The mills were heavily stocked during the winter with pine logs and were often run day and night during the spring in cutting out the lumber. This, when seasoned, was "carted" (usually in May and June, August and September) to Northfield. This work was mostly done by farmers with ox teams. The route from East Swanzev was by the B. F. Lombard and Atkinson places through Westport and Winchester and over the Northfield hills, making a long and laborious trip occupying the larger part of two days. A brake on the wagon was not then used, a temporary pole between the pairs of cattle being supplied to assist in holding back in going down the steep grades.

The teams ordinarily consisted of two pairs of oxen, sometimes only one pair and a horse, and sometimes three pairs. The teamsters expended but little money on the road, food for both themselves and teams being carried from their homes. But very little grain was fed by farmers to cattle in those days, hay being used almost exclusively for fodder.

Most farmers at this period kept an ox team, and most had more or less pine timber on their lands. The sale of this timber year by year and the money they received from the lumbermen for teaming gave them the means of paying their taxes and furnishing the necessary supplies for their families.

The making of split and shaved pine shingles was an important industry in the town for many years. The excellent pine timber was well adapted to this business.

Early in the present century machines for sawing pointed shingles were introduced. By a self-setting arrangement, they would saw from each end of a block first a butt end of a shingle then the pointed end. The block to be sawed was held in position by dogs. There were four or five of these machines in operation at the same time previous to the introduction of the pail business. The merchants in the town were generally dealers in shingles.

For a long time after the town was settled good pine timber was of but little value, and large, coarse and defective trees of no value. These worthless trees were generally left standing to avoid the labor of cutting. After a piece of timber land had been cut over it was generally burned, purposely or accidentally, and all the trees not previously dead would be killed. As late as 1830 large numbers of these trees could be seen in almost all directions, some of them retaining their bark and limbs and some entirely destitute of them, presenting nothing but a tall black stump. These old trees gave the town in many places a very disagreeable appearance and where they stood in mowing lands they were a constant annoyance by the falling of limbs and bark. For a long time the constant springing up of young pines was a great trouble to the farmers. It took but a few years for many of the pastures to become so much covered with them that they would be worthless for grazing purposes. No one appeared to think that any benefit would be derived by letting them grow. It was an indication of a shiftless farmer to see his pastures covered with small sapling pines. Many acres of pines of a larger growth, such as would now be very valuable for timber, were cut and burned on the ground merely to get them out of the way.

The farmers at this period endeavored to produce large quantities of corn, rye, potatoes, beef and pork. They bought but little flour, grain or wheat. They cultivated large areas of land and manured sparingly, generally in the hill, instead of spreading broadcast.

For the raising of money by the sale of grain, oats were relied upon more than corn or rye. They were always in demand by those who kept public houses. Oats were generally sown upon land when it was seeded to grass, and upon land which had previously been planted with potatoes and corn. The condition of the hay fields at this time (1830) and the tools used made haying a season of intensely hard labor. Most of the labor-saving machines now in use on the farm had never been heard of. Much of the mowing land, especially on the hills, was thickly set with stumps and sandwiched with stones. The first crops of grass and grain on this primitive soil were very stout, but continual cropping with slight manuring, had so diminished the fertility that much of the hay crop was very light—hardly worth gathering. Most farmers had then, as now, more or less meadow land, but this was often quite remote from the homestead. There was always winter rye to be harvested; extensive fields of which were upon new ground and had to be reaped. With all the help that could be obtained it took usually not less than six or seven weeks to finish the haying and the harvesting. Men went into the field at sunrise, and they were fortunate if their work was done before sundown. Men and boys did not do all the farm work during haying, some women and girls worked in the hay fields in the afternoon about as constantly as the men; and others that did not work in the field drove up the cows and milked them.

Quite a large quantity of cider was drank at this time. There were but few men that did not use it. There were probably as many as a dozen cider mills in the town that were kept constantly in use during the fall to make the annual supply of cider. The old-fashioned mill; the horse attached to the end of the sweep, slowly circling around, turning the fluted rollers, the jaws of which received the apples as they descended from the hopper; the peculiar squeak of these timbers as they revolved and received the apples in their embrace; the numerous barrels about the establishment; the loads of apples; the piles of straw and pumice; the boy with a straw in his mouth bending over the barrel sucking the newly made beverage;—this was the picture two generations ago. Some farmers placed yearly, from ten to thirty barrels of cider in their cellars.

Home-made woollen clothes for men and women, boys and girls, were made in the families of most farmers. For making the wool into rolls two sets of machinery were run by water power; one at East the other at West Swanzey. There were but few women that could not use the spinning wheel for making the rolls into yarn. For making stockings, flannels and frocking, the yarn was colored by the women. Cloth that was designed for men's and boys' clothing was woven from uncolored yarn. This cloth went to the clothier to be finished. The finishing consisted in fulling, coloring, shearing and pressing. The clothier's trade was one of the important trades of the time. Years of apprenticeship were required to learn it. There were clothiers' mills at East and West Swanzey, Factory Village, Westport and at Swanzey Pond. For an establishment it required a good-sized building, water power and expensive machinery. Men's and boys' woollen clothes were made mostly by women tailors, going from house to house to do the work.

Farmers would take the hides of their slaughtered cattle to the tanner and have them tanned for their own use. In payment they would be quite likely to sell some hemlock bark if such they had. Most of the tanning for the people of the town was done by Capt. Levi Blake. The making of boots and shoes gave employment to many men, whose shops were located in different parts of the town. Some of these men made a practice of going to the homes of the people and doing the family shoemaking. Many farmers had a few shoemakers' tools and did their own cobbling.

The raising and working of flax ceased previous to 1830. At this time but few persons rode horseback as their fathers and mothers had done fifty years before. Wheel carriages had been brought into general use. A common wagon and a nice chaise were the ordinary vehicles. The wagons were made with a framed body which was set solid on wooden axletrees. The seats rested on wooden arm-springs attached to timber sill springs. The wagons were made with skeaned wooden axletrees, and the wheels were fastened upon the axletrees with linch-pins. The chaise of those times was a nice well-made carriage. It was too expensive for most people to have. Of those persons in town who did have such a carriage were Rev. E. Colman, Hon. E. Bekling, Hon. E. Carpenter, Maj. E. Page, Capt. Levi Blake, Capt. Benj. Brown, Capt. David Holbrook, Amos Bailey, Esq., Israel Stanley, Alexander Perry and Alvah Thompson.

There were two meeting houses in town, the one at the Centre was what is now the town-house, and the one at West Swanzey was the present Baptist church. A very fair proportion of the people attended service at one or the other of these houses. Nearly all were farmers with their families. Many of these farmers kept mares from which they raised colts. During church hours on Sundays these animals might be seen hitched under the horse sheds, shade trees and to the fences. The invariable rule was to have two services and a long intermission between them. Sunday schools had not been established, so there was nothing better for the boys to do during intermission than to look at the colts and ascertain which was the most valuable. After the services were out, in bringing the teams to the doors, the colts would be full of frolic, get away from their mothers and go off with strange horses. Such scenes were annoying to the men but they made fun for the boys.

Wages were low compared with those of the present day. Men would work on a farm or teach school for ten or fifteen dollars a month; would work with a pair of oxen logging in the winter for a dollar and twenty-five cents a day; women at house work or school-teaching would receive a dollar and a half or two dollars per week.

As most of the important records of town affairs of the present century are more appropriately given in other chapters, but few will be inserted here.

In 1833, on the question of the revision of the State Constitution: 164 voted yes, and 24 no. Since then when the question has been before the people of the town they have generally voted no.

In 1836, on question of the State making an appropriation for an Insane Hospital: yes, 25; no, 76.

In 1837, town voted to receive its share of surplus money from U. S. government: yes, 112; no, 66. Elijah Carpenter was chosen agent to receive and loan said money in sums not exceeding $300 nor less than $50, giving the people of the town the preference in making the loans.

In 1844, vote on abolishing capital punishment: yes, 111; no, 184.

In 1854, a determined effort was made by the people in the north-east part of the town to have their territory, including the Factory Village and what is now Spragneville, disannexed from Swanzev and joined to Keene; but after a fair hearing before a committee of the legislature the project failed to be accomplished.

The following-named persons were taxed in Swanzev for the first time in the following years:

CHAPTER IV.

Military Affairs.

EARLY MILITARY MOVEMENTS DURING THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR—SOLDIERS AT BUNKER HILL—CAMBRIDGE—CANADA—TICONDEROGA, ETC.—COL. HAMMOND'S RIDE—BEEF FOR THE ARMY—BOUNTIES AND PAYMENTS TO SOLDIERS—WAR OF 1812—ACTION OF THE TOWN IN THE WAR OF THE REBELLION—ENLISTMENTS—DRAFT—BOUNTIES PAID—SOLDIER'S INDIVIDUAL RECORD—MILITARY LAWS—TRAININGS AND MUSTERS—SWANZEY'S MILITARY COMPANIES—CAVALRY—ARTILLERY—RIFLE CO.—OFFICERS OF EACH.

IN the early settlement of the town a military spirit pervaded all classes of people. To have a military title affixed to one's name was considered as a mark of honorable distinction. Soon after the first settlement a piece of land was laid common for a training field. This was situated north and northwest of the present town house. As long as it was supposed that Swanzey belonged to Massachusetts, the men were doubtless trained in accordance with the laws of that state; but when it was found that the town was within the jurisdiction of New Hampshire, and while the latter state hesitated in exercising its control over the people in this part of the state, it is probable that the people were not required by the force of law to perform any military service.

Swanzey suffered less during the French and Indian wars than most of the other towns in this vicinity; partly for the reason that it had strong forts garrisoned mostly by its own soldiers.

As there was a continual want of soldiers during this period to garrison the forts and protect the laborers in the fields, it is not likely that the men did much service except as members of those military organizations sent from Massachusetts for the protection of the settlements, or volunteering in cases of special emergencies.

In 1760 New Hampshire had organized the militia in this part of the state (Cheshire and Sullivan Counties) into one regiment. Josiah Willard was its colonel. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war three regiments had been organized in place of the first one.

That to which Swanzey belonged in 1777 was the thirteenth in the state. The towns composing it and the number of men enrolled in each town were as follows :

Winchester,	130	Chesterfield,	191
Keene,	171	Westmoreland,	165
Swanzey,	138	Surry,	44
Richmond,	169	Gilsum,	39
Hinsdale,	33
Total,			<hr/> 1080

The enrollment included those from sixteen to fifty years of age. Samuel Ashley of Winchester was colonel of the regiment. The experience which many of the men in the militia at the commencement of the Revolutionary war had had in the French and Indian wars qualified them for valuable officers in the Revolutionary war.

The history of Swanzey during this war shows that the public sentiment of the town was decidedly in favor of repelling the aggressions of the mother country. The following petition of Capt. Joseph Hammond shows the prompt action that was taken when it was learned that the battle of Lexington had been fought two days before :

[Petition of Joseph Hammond : addressed to the General Court Dec. 13, 1786.]

“The Petition of Joseph Hammond of Swanzey in the County of Cheshire, Gentleman, Humbly Sheweth—

That your Petitioner (on the Twenty-first Day of April, 1775) was Chosen Captain of the Company of Militia in Swanzey and on said Day Marched the Greater part of Said Company (viz) one Lieutenant one Ensign 4 Sergeants 4 Corporals and 52 Privates In Defence of the Country against the British Troops. Your Petitioner and his Company Marched to Cambridge where we were Stationed for one Week and untill properly discharged. Of Said Company there was 22 Men who Inlisted for Eight Months and drew pay from their first Marching, but the whole of Said Company who did not Inlist altho they ware in the Service of the State 13 Days and Cheaply on their own expence have never yet Received any Reward for said Service.

Your Petitioner therefore in behalf of himself and his Men Most Humbly prays his Hon^{bl} Body to take the Matter into their Wise consideration and Grant both him and them a Reward for their Service equal to what others have had for like Service.

and as in Duty bound shall ever pray.

JOSEPH HAMMOND, Capt.”

It has been said that Capt. Hammond's company assembled at his house and were ready to start at sunrise the twenty-first.

We make the following roll of Capt. Hammond's company from the town records of bounties paid to its Revolutionary soldiers for services performed at different times and places, which we think is nearly correct.

Capt. Joseph Hammond,	†*Abraham Griffith,
Lieutenant Daniel Warner,	†*Joseph Hammond, jr.,
Ensign Timothy Bishop,	Isaac Hammond,
John Applin,	Edward Hazen,
Elijah Belding,	Samuel Hills,
*Moses Belding,	†*Nathaniel Hills, sen.,

Elijah Graves, jr.,	Elisha Whitcomb,
*Joseph Greene,	†*Abijah Whitcomb,
*Thomas Greene,	John Whitcomb,
William Grimes, jr.,	Samuel Wright,
James Grimes,	*Jonathan Woodcock.
Charles Grimes,

The names of the twenty-two men of Capt. Hammond's company who enlisted for eight months are marked with a *.

Jonathan Whitcomb was commissioned captain of one of the New Hampshire companies that were raised immediately after the battles of Lexington and Concord, and attached to Col. Read's regiment. The names of Swanzey men in his company are marked with a †.

David Parsons

Capt. Whitecomb was in the battle of Bunker Hill with his company and he was commended for his "resolution."

Of the other ten of the twenty-two Capt. Hines of Chesterfield had in his company Moses Belding; Capt. Thomas of Rindge had Benjamin Parker, and Thomas Green was in Col. Stark's regiment.

To what regiments the remaining seven belonged, is not known, but probably to some in Massachusetts.

Capt. Oliver Capron of Richmond was in a Massachusetts regiment with a company and had in it, of Swanzey men, Joseph Starkey and Abner Day.

Dr. Calvin Frink was surgeon in Col. Stark's regiment at Cambridge.

Among those wounded at Bunker Hill were Thomas Green and Benjamin Parker of Swanzey. Parker was returned as mortally wounded but he recovered and continued in the service and was killed at Stillwater.

From the following petition we infer that Green's wound proved to be quite serious.

"The petition of Thomas Green of Swanzey in the County of Cheshire in said state—Humbly sheweth—

That your Petitioner in the Year 1775, at the Commencement of Hostilities between Great Britain and America Inlisted as a private soldier in defence of his Country, in Capt. Scott's Company and Col. Stark's Regiment; and that on the Memorable 17th of June 1775 your Petitioner was called to Action at Bunker Hill, in which Battle he Received a wound by a Musket Ball entering his left Shoulder, whereby he was for a long time totally Disabled from Labour, and having no other means of subsistance for himself and family but by Husbandry on a new tract of Land, renders his Worldly Circumstances very Indigent.

Your Petitioner some years since made Application to the General Court of this state, and was allowed Wages as a Garrison Soldier for one year, but being in Paper Currency and not received till some considerable Time afterwards was of very little Value by reason of Depreciation. Since that Time your Petitioner has been (as he is informed) struck out of the List of such Soldiers which Received pay as fit for Garrison Duty while others in like Circumstances still Receive something from the state, as a Compensation for past Sufferings.

Your Petitioner therefore Humbly prays that your Honors would take the matter into consideration and Grant him such Relief as in your Wisdom you shall think proper.

And as in Duty Bound shall ever pray.

THO^S GREEN."

Swanzey, June 11, 1785.

We the Subscribers, do hereby Certify that the above said Thomas Green was wounded at the Battle of Bunkers Hill in the year 1775, and that the wound he then Received is now broke open and become a Running Ulcer; and we would Humbly Recomend him as an Object Worthy of the Hon. the General Courts Attention.

Elkanah Lane } Selectmen
Elisha Scott } of Swanzey.
Calvin Frink, Surgeon."

[In H. of Rep. June 16, 1785, voted, that he be allowed eighteen shillings per month until further orders.]

Col. Joseph Hammond who went to Cambridge at the head of a company of Swanzey soldiers immediately after the battles of Lexington and Concord was at home when the battle of Bunker Hill was fought. He knew that a number of Swanzey men were in the army in that vicinity and among them his son Joseph. When he heard that the battle had been fought he prepared to start the following morning for the field of conflict, that he might know the result of the battle. In the morning he started and rode through in a day, a distance of about ninety miles and returned the next day. The following poem describes this famous ride.

" Says old Colo. Hammond I'd like to know
The fate on the morrow of my son Joe;
I learn by the herald that rode by to-night
The unwelcome news of the Bunker Hill fight.
Nor doubt I a moment my son Joe was there
In fighting our foe men to fight his full share;
And I have resolved and approved of the plan,
To off on the morrow and learn what I can.
So wife in the morning the breakfast prepare,
While I catch and curry the old red mare.
Till then let us sleep, 'tis needful we rest,
And dream what we may we will hope for the best.
The Colo rose early and early prepared
To start on his journey as he had declared;
And soon in the door-yard the old mare was tied,
All saddled, all bridled, all fit for a ride.

The Colonel's cocked hat he put on his head,
His spurs on the heels of his boots, as he said,
Wife, now my blue coat and my doublet of buff,
And I shall be rigged for the ride well enough.
The sun got up some minutes before
The Colonel was ready to step from the door,
And say to his lady good morn or good bye,
Then thinking of Joseph a tear in her eye,
He reached for the bridle when started the mare,
And snorted, the Colonel looked so militaire;
He patted her neck as he stood by her side,
To calm her a wee ere he got up to ride.
Then sprang to the saddle 'thout further delay,
And like a knight errant he galloped away.
From Swanzy, New Hampshire, thro' Fitzwilliam sped,
Swift strode the red mare and strong was her tread,
And onward and onward and onward she prest,
No sign that she was weary that she required rest.
Tho' sweltering the heat, and oppressive the dust,
She turned not; she stopped not to half quench her thirst,
And ere Sol his car to the zenith had run,
The Colonel's long journey was more than half done;
When looking ahead, lo! the Colonel espied
An inn-stand, inviting, close by the road side;
To this he reined up for a little respite,
And called for refreshments as would a bold knight;
'Some oats for my mare, and a drink at the spring
And as for myself, I'll a bumper of sling!'
(For all liquored up in those days, you will find,
To strengthen their courage and cheer up the mind.)
But short was his tarry, and proud of her load,
The old mare was prancing along the high-road;
On! on through old Concord she gallantly sped,
And onward she galloped through Lexington's town,
A place on the road of fame and renown,
And drew up at Charlestown, at Bunker Hill's side,
Before it was sunset, where ended his ride.
And glad was the Colonel when Joseph he found,
His limbs and his wind and his body all sound.
And early next morning the red mare was seen
Her head up, her tail up, just leaving the green;
Her strength like an engine with fleetness combined;
(The Colonel on forward and Joe on behind)
So lightly she cantered and turned up the road,
Not caring a 'flip' for the weight of the load,
She started for home with the Colo. and son,
And ere it was sundown her day's work was done.

And how felt the mother when meeting with Joe,
 There's none but a mother can feel or can know;
 And what think ye, reader, hadn't we here
 As goodly a rider as Paul Revere?"

In the fall of 1775 a plan was formed to capture Quebec by marching a force through the wilderness by the way of Kennebec river. The men for the expedition were detached from the army at Boston. Swanzev had one man among them—Amasa Parker. Of their expedition an historian wrote: "No pen can describe the horrors of their march. Making their way with infinite toil; carrying their boats, baggage, and ammunition past the rapids and marshy swamps; exposed to rain and storm; crossing swollen streams; barefooted and with clothes torn almost to nakedness; cold, wet, weary and sick; with the last ox killed; the last dog eaten; then roots, moose skin, moccasins devoured in the extremity of hunger, finally after two days of starvation, the famished troops emerged among the Canadian settlers."

The enlistments that were made in April and May for eight months for the army that encircled Boston and hemmed in the British forces in that place expired in December and January. To keep up the strength of the army new enlistments became necessary. It appears that the following persons re-enlisted or enlisted for duty through the winter of 1775 and 1776:—

Joshua Durant,	Charles Howe, by hire,
Daniel Gunn,	Theodore Howe, by hire,
Thomas Greene,	Uriah Howe,
Joseph Greene,	Eli Kimball,
Joseph Hammond, jr.,	Jonathan Woodcock.
Benjamin Hewes, jr.,

On the twentieth day of January, 1776, the House of Representatives "voted to raise one regiment of soldiers forthwith." This regiment consisting of eight companies was raised, placed under the command of Col. Timothy Bedel, and ordered to join the "Northern Continental Army."

The following persons were connected with this regiment from this town; and received from it a bounty for ten months' service "in army at Canada 1776."

Isaac Billings,	Michael Heffron,
Ebenezer Hills,	Timothy Harvey,
Nathaniel Hills, jr.,	Samuel Hills, jr.,
Dennis Heffron,	Andrew Nicols,

Simeon Puffer,
Amos Puffer,
John Rugg,
Amos Tubbs,

James Wheelock,
Elkanah Woodcock,
Lieut. Elisha Whitcomb.

In May a portion of this regiment was in Canada about forty-five miles southwest of Montreal at a place called the "Cedars." An attack upon it being threatened, Colonel Bedel went to Montreal for reinforcements, leaving the fort under the command of Major Isaac Butterfield, who on the nineteenth day of May surrendered his force to the British and Indians. "These prisoners were transported to an island in a lake near the two mountains and kept there nearly naked without shelter and with scant rations, for eight days, when they were released on a cartel agreed to between General Arnold and Captain Forster."

The treatment the soldiers received after the surrender may be inferred from the following petition of Timothy Harvey, one of the Swanzey soldiers.

"Whereas your Petitioner on the 5th Day of March 1776 Inlisted into the Continental service for the Expedition to Canada Under the Command of Capt. Wait, in Col. Bedel's Regiment and Marched to Canada and being ordered into a Company Commanded by Capt. Esterbrooks we March^d to the Cedars where Your Petitioner Among the rest was Deliv'd up to the Enemy by which means your Petitioner Suffered Greatly and had the following Articles taken from me by the Indians viz. a Gun & Bayonet, which then Cost me Three pounds; also a Belt and Bullet pouch 8^s/ a Cartridge Box 5^s/6 one Woolen Shirt 12^s/ 1 pr shoes 8^s/6 1 pr Leggins 5^s/ 1 Good Blanket 15^s/ a Large Powder horn 2^s/6^d 1 Tomahawk 2^s/5 Said Articles Amounting in the Whole to £5—18—11^d—0 and I would humbly pray your honours to make as much Allowance to your Pettitioner as you shall think Just also that the Above Articles would as Money now is Cost more than Three Times the Sum as Aforesaid—which if your Honours please to Grant your petitioner as in Duty bound shall Ever pray.

TIMOTHY HARVEY.

Swanzey Febr^y 5th 1778."

In June, 1776, the Continental Congress made a requisition for a battalion of troops from this State to be sent to reinforce the army in Canada. A regiment was raised and on the twentieth of June Col. Isaac Wyman of Keene was appointed its colonel and Dr. Calvin Frink of this town surgeon. The town paid a bounty in 1776 for one month's service to Ticonderoga to the following persons who were, we infer, in Colonel Wyman's regiment.

Capt. Joseph Whitcomb,	Joshua Graves,
Daniel Bishop,	Elijah Graves, jr.,
Levi Durant,	Elkanah Lane, jr.,
Thomas Cresson, jr.,	Samuel Lane,
Nathan Cresson,	Joseph Starkey,
Nathaniel Dickinson,	Roger Thompson,
John Follett, jr.,	Jonathan Woodcock, jr.,
Calvin Frink,	John Whitcomb.
William Grimes, jr.,

In July another regiment was raised in the state to reinforce the northern army and Joshua Wingate of Stratham was appointed its colonel. The bounties the town paid its soldiers in this regiment were for services at Ticonderoga. Some of them were paid for two months and a half, and some for five months. The following are the names of the Swanzey men in the regiment :

Ensign Moses Belding,	Wyat Gunn,
Enoch Cummings,	James Heaton,
William Carpenter,	Nathan Heaton,
Joseph Day,	Simson Hammond,
Benjamin Follett,	Josiah Prime,
Dan Freeman,	Amasa Parker,
Abraham Griffith,	Levi Rugg.

In September two regiments were raised in New Hampshire to reinforce the army in New York, and to be in the service until the first of December. Col. Nahum Baldwin of Amherst was appointed colonel of one of the regiments. The regiment was in the battle at White Plains, Oct. 28, 1776. One of the companies of the regiment was commanded by John Houghton of Keene. The company was mustered by Col. Joseph Hammond of Swanzey Sept. 22, 1776, and contained the following Swanzey men :

Wright Brown,	Pentecost Stanley,
Amaziah Curtis,	Samuel Wright,
Joseph Hammond, jr.,	Benedict Webster.
Benjamin Hammond,

In answer to a requisition from General Washington the legislature, on the fourth day of December, 1776, "voted that five hundred men be drafted from the several Regiments in this State as soon as possible, officered and sent to New York." On the day following, the legislature appointed the field officers as given below. The cause of this call was, that the terms of service of the troops in garrison at Forts George and Ticonderoga would expire on the last day of December, and if their places were not filled those posts would fall into the hands of General Guy Carlton. Col. David Gilman of Pembroke took the command of the regiment, and Capt. Francis Town of Rindge, one of the companies. Samuel Wright of this town was lieutenant in Captain Town's company. Samuel Heaton and Benjamin Hazen, corporals, and William Carpenter, John Whitcomb, and Levi Durant privates.

This regiment "participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton and did excellent service in both."

On the evening of the 2nd day of May, 1777, dispatches were received by the committee of safety of this state, informing them that the garrison at Ticonderoga was in danger of being taken by the enemy, and urging that the militia be sent forward at once to reinforce that important post. In accordance with that request Colonel Ashley of Winchester marched with one hundred and nine men. He had been entreated "by all that was sacred" to raise as many of the militia as possible and march them to Ticonderoga. Swanzev men belonged to Colonel Ashley's regiment but we have found no rolls that show how many of the one hundred and nine men went from this town.

Soon after the men returned that were called out by this alarm, "despatches came, stating that General Burgoyne was within a few miles of Ticonderoga with a large force, and that the American troops stationed there were not sufficient to hold the fortress. The alarm was general, as it was expected that if the enemy captured Ticonderoga he would invade the western part of this state and the New Hampshire grants." The militia was called to march at once, and responded with alacrity, as may be seen by the following rolls. Ticonderoga was, however, evacuated before they had time to get there, and they returned in about thirteen days. The men that went from Swanzev were :

Lient. Col. Joseph Hammond,
Lient. Elisha Whitcomb,	} On Colonel Ashley's staff.
Lient. Samuel Wright,

In Captain Howlet's company that marched from Keene :

Lient. Daniel Warner,	Fifer Benjamin Hazen,
Ensign James Heaton,	David Belding,
Sergeant William Grimes,	Timothy Bishop,
" Joseph Dickinson,	Solomon Boynton,
Corporal Daniel Bishop,	Eleazer Brown,
" Joseph Day,	Thomas Cresson,

Enoch Cummings,	Edward Hazen,
Ephraim Cummings,	Benjamin Hewes,
Joseph Cummings,	Andrew Nichols,
Nehemiah Cummings,	Benjamin Olcott,
Amos Day,	Elijah Osgood,
Levi Durant,	Ebenezer Parsons,
Nehemiah Foster,	Amos Puffer,
Joshua Graves,	Cornelius Roberts,
Charles Grimes,	Ebenezer Thompson,
James Grimes,	Ananias Tubbs,
Daniel Gunn,	John Whitcomb,
Isaac Hammond,	William Wright,
Uriah How,	Moses B. Williams.

In July of 1777 a great excitement was caused in New Hampshire from information that Ticonderoga had been evacuated and that Gen. Burgoyne, with an army was rapidly marching from Canada. The legislature was hastily called together and it decided to raise a brigade in the west part of the state, and place it under command of Gen. Stark, and have it forwarded immediately to Vermont to help check the movement of Burgoyne. A draft was relied upon for obtaining the men for the service, but volunteering was so prompt that a draft was unnecessary.

Stark's brigade met a portion of Burgoyne's army at Bennington and fought, in connection with some Vermont troops and a few from Massachusetts, the memorable battle of Bennington.

Capt. Samuel Wright of Swanzev marched from Winchester and joined Stark's command with a company which contained the following Swanzev men :

Ensign James Heaton,	Corporal Joseph Holmes,
Sergeant John Whitcomb,	Fifer Benjamin Hazen.

Privates :

John Applin,	Andrew Nichols,
Daniel Bishop,	Benjamin Olcott,
William Carpenter,	Peletiah Razey,
Ephraim Cummings,	Peter Starkey,
Benjamin Follett,	Samuel Scott,
Joseph Green,	Simeon Taylor,
Uriah How,	Ananias Tubbs.
Jonathan Nichols,

The town paid Josiah Read a bounty for two months at Bennington. His name is not found on the rolls.

George E. Whitcomb

In a letter from Joel Ware, whose boyhood was spent in Swanzey, but who now resides in Illinois, he says, "I recall to mind two incidents related by Grandma'am Gay, as she was called, whose death at over ninety years of age, occurred at your father's. She told us that she had visitors at her house (E. W. Handy's place) on the day the battle of Bennington was fought, and that they heard distinctly the booming of the British cannon, and the rattle of Stark's musketry. She also told me that during the Colonial war of 1755, she staid a long time in the fort near the foot of Mt. Cæsar; that Indians would come down from the top of the mountain as near the foot as they dared, and execute their war and scalp dances; and to show their contempt for the people in the fort would exhibit themselves in an insulting and shameful manner." Tradition informs us that other parties in Swanzey than that named above testified to hearing the war of artillery from the battlefield of Bennington.

Enlistments to the old or regular New Hampshire regiments commenced to be made as early as 1777.

The following persons enlisted in Capt. Grigg's company of Col. Alexander Scammel's regiment:

Kimber Harvey,	Sergt. Levi Durant,
Samuel Gunn,	Nathaniel Hills,
Benjamin Parker,	Elijah Graves,
Henry Stevens,	— Josiah Prime,
Daniel Day,	Simcon Howe,
Nathan Cresson,	Benjamin Day.
Samuel Lane,

July 12, 1779, the town paid 60£ to each of the following soldiers :
Solomon Hasseltine, Noah Parkhurst, Greenwood Carpenter, jr., and Andrew Nichols; and 40£ 10s, each to John Whitcomb and Eliphalet Hale.

"This may certify that the town of Swanzey have six men in the Continental army who have enlisted during the war, viz. :

Amasa Parker,	William Franklin,
Joseph Slack,	Dennis Heffron,
Solomon Hasseltine,	Jeremiah Satchwell.

The town has also procured this Spring to enlist for three years, viz. :
Samuel Kempton, Greenwood Carpenter, jr.

CALVIN FRINK,
ISAAC HAMMOND,

Swanzey, Jan. 12, 1781."

In the early part of 1781, New Hampshire was required to raise forthwith 1354 able-bodied, effective men to fill its quota for the Continental army. Of these Swanzey was required to furnish eleven.
For this purpose a town meeting was held Feb. 8, at which time a committee to raise the men was chosen, consisting of Capt. Samuel Hills, Lt. Samuel Wright, Ens. Eben Hills, Mr. Samuel Heaton and Capt. Jonathan Whitcomb. The meeting was adjourned for one week, when the committee reported as follows :

"That they have agreed with Greenwood Carpenter, jr., to serve three years for the sum of sixty-six pounds ten shillings, to be paid in the following manner, viz. : six pounds ten shillings at or before his passing muster, in money and clothing, as the said Greenwood shall need; and sixty pounds at the three years end, being twenty pounds per year; and at the end of each year his year's hire is to be on interest until paid ; and if the said Greenwood should be discharged before the three years end he is to receive his hire in proportion to the time of service. Said committee have hired Oliver Prime for three years on the same conditions as above, only the said Oliver is to receive but four pounds at his passing muster. They have also hired Francis Nichols for three years for sixty-six pounds ten shillings, to be paid as follows, viz. : six pounds ten shillings at his passing muster in money and clothes, and twenty pounds yearly for three years by the first of November each year during service. They have also hired Samuel Kempton for three years for sixty-six pounds ten shillings, to be paid in the following manner, viz. : six pounds ten shillings at his passing muster and the other sixty pounds to be paid to his wife from time to time if required, and if any remains due at his return, whether at or before the three years end, he is to receive the same according to the time of service."

It was voted to accept the above report of the committee, and the meeting adjourned from time to time until March 14th, when the following business was acted upon :—

"Whereas in a former vote of this meeting it is not expressly declared what money or how stated, the several sums therein mentioned which the committee agreed to pay the soldiers for the Continental army, therefore :

"Voted, That the sums therein mentioned shall be equal in value to rye at three shillings and four pence per bushel or grass-fed beef at twenty shillings per hundred weight."

A town meeting was held July 6, 1781, and it was "Voted, That Roger Thompson, Aaron Hammond and John Whitcomb be a committee to hire the remaining part of the men for the Continental army in behalf of the town, on the best terms they can and make report to the selectmen of their proceedings therein."

A town meeting was held April 16, 1782, at which time Ebenezer Hills, Elkanah Lane, jr., Joseph Cummings and Elijah Belding were chosen a committee to hire the town's quota of men for the Continental army, and make reports of their proceedings. The meeting was adjourned to the 30th instant. The committee reported that they had endeavored to hire the men for the Continental army, but had not procured any.

The meeting was adjourned to the 7th day of May, at which time Luther Fairbanks was joined to the committee. Again adjourned to the 13th and from the 13th to the 14th.

At this date the committee reported " that they had engaged Ephrain Stone of Westmoreland for three years for the sum of fifty-seven pounds, ten shillings; twelve pounds ten shillings of which sum to be paid at or before his passing muster, in money or cattle, and fifteen pounds the first of November next: and so annually fifteen pounds till the whole be paid. They have also hired Isaac Butterfield, jr., of said Westmoreland for the same terms.

"Voted, That the above report be accepted."

It appears to have been very difficult near the close of the war to find men that would enlist into the army. It is not to be supposed that the men of Swanzev were wanting in patriotism, or confidence in the ultimate success of the Revolution. Experience had demonstrated the propriety of enlisting soldiers for three years or during the war. The theatre of the war during the last years was hundreds of miles distant from New Hampshire. Most of the persons adapted for soldiers were young men with families, settled upon new land which they were clearing up for making their future homes. For such men to leave their families and their homes for the army was a sacrifice greater than most of them were disposed to make.

Of all the Swanzev men who took an active part in the Revolutionary cause, Lieut. Col. Joseph Hammond may be properly considered as having held the most prominent rank. Besides being in the actual service some of the time he was employed at other times as mustering officer, and at times in charge of the transportation of supplies to the army at Ticonderoga. From the following record it appears that he retired from active military service in 1779.

"SWANZEY JUNE 14th 1779.

During the last years of the war the town was called upon to furnish a certain quantity of beef for the Continental army.

July 26, 1780, the town “ Voted, That any person that shall sell any cattle for the use of the Continental army shall be paid by the town interest for the money at six per cent untill the principal shall be paid.”

May 2, 1781, “ Voted, That the selectmen shall divide the town into several districts, and each district shall provide their quota or proportion of beef for the Continental army according to the taxes each district pays, and if they shall neglect to procure said beef seasonably the selectmen shall provide said beef in the best manner they can and assess the inhabitants of the town for so much money as the whole of said beef shall cost, and give credit to such persons as have provided their proportion of said beef.”

The following is a copy of a bill for pasturing beef cattle :

The following records show that at the end of three years of the Revolution nearly every man had voluntarily shouldered the musket to maintain the rights of the states, or had paid out money to hire a substitute or furnished money to the town to enable it to hire soldiers.

At a legal town meeting held the 16th day of February, 1778, it was "voted to choose a committee of seven men to receive the accounts of such persons as have done or procured any service to be done in the present war, and to consider the same and make them such allowance therefor as they shall think proper and just."

The committee chosen consisted of Thomas Applin, Calvin Frink, Jonathan Whitcomb, Daniel Warner, Samuel Hills, Joseph Whitcomb and Henry Morse.

The committee made the following report at an adjourned meeting :

"SWANZEY, FEBRUARY 23, 1778.

We, the subscribers, being a committee appointed by the town to receive the accounts of such persons as have done, or procured any service to be done in the present war, and to consider the same and make them such allowance therefor as we shall think reasonable and just and having attended to the business whereunto we were appointed, do find and report to the town as follows, viz.: That we think it just and reasonable that there be allowed and paid as the town shall agree,—

Recorded pr. THO^s APPLIN, Clerk."

Many men settled in Swanzezy during the Revolution or soon after, who had previously been in the military service, but we have not their military record. In most instances they were in Massachusetts at the time they did the service. The following are names of such men :

Lient. James Brewer,	Amariah Partridge,
Capt. Oliver Capron,	Jonas Blodgett,
Capt. Amasa Aldrich,	-Ivory Snow,
Capt. Peter Holbrook,	Isaac Woodward,
Timothy Read,	Aquilla Ramsdell,
Asaph Lane,	Benjamin Parker,
Russel Ballou,	Barzillai Streeter.
Joseph Smead,

Swanzey furnished its full complement of soldiers for the war of 1812. Of those who enlisted William Carr Belding was killed at Chippewa Plains, July 5, 1814; Rufus Graves at Bridgewater, Canada, July 25, 1814; a son of John Guild in Upper Canada; Joshua Prime, a Lieutenant of marines, died at Sackett's Harbor, March 1, 1813, Gaius Cresson died at Burlington, Vt.

The following men were in the army and most of them belonged to Swanzey at the time. Some of them were volunteers, and were in the army on the northern border; but most of them were drafted men, or substitutes for drafted men, and went to Portsmouth: Elijah C. Belding, Ezra Emerson, Charles Howland, Charles Frost, Lient. Abijah Whitcomb, William Moore, William Stevenson, Richard Weeks, Ezekiel Graves, Samuel Stearns, Jonathan D. Ware, David Thompson, Cyrene Johnson, Otis Olcott, Joseph Snow, David Hill, Reuben Worcester, John Withington, Benedict Arnold. Arnold died at Portsmouth.

Chester Lyman, who lived many of the last years of his life in Swanzey, went into the army as captain of a company of volunteers from Massachusetts. His company was attached to the northern army and he was promoted to major.

New Hampshire has no army records of the war of 1812, in the state, which makes it impossible to give exact details.

The general government made the following calls for troops to suppress the Rebellion :

Apr. 15, 1861, 75,000 for three months.

May, 1861, 300,000 for three years.

July, 1861, 300,000 for three years.

May, 1862, 75,000 for three years.

July 1, 1862, 300,000 for three years.

Aug. 4, 1862, 300,000 for nine months, to be drafted if not furnished by volunteering.

Aug., 1863, 300,000 ordered to be drafted from towns and cities where quotas were not filled by volunteers.

Oct. 17, 1863, 300,000 for three years.

July 19, 1864, 500,000.

Dec. 19, 1864, 300,000.

The following is the record of the action of the town during the years of the Rebellion to encourage enlistments and induce men to enter the service when drafted or to voluntarily furnish substitutes.

Sept. 21, 1861. "Voted, That the selectmen be instructed to borrow from time to time such sums of money as may be wanted to pay the families or parents of soldiers who have enlisted, or may hereafter enlist, in the service of the United States, the sum of one dollar per week for the wife, and one dollar per week for each child or parent, agreeably to the act passed at the June session, 1861, entitled an act authorizing the towns and cities to aid the families of volunteers, and for other purposes; provided all such sums so borrowed shall not exceed two thousand dollars."

Aug. 11, 1862. "Resolved, That the town of Swanzev will pay two hundred dollars to each person who will enlist from the town to fill up her required quota of a draft ordered by the President Aug. 4, 1862, of 300,000 troops for nine months, immediately on the mustering into service of such volunteers, provided they receive no bounty from government, otherwise one hundred and twenty-five dollars."

Sept. 10, 1863. "Voted, To raise money to pay the soldiers that are already drafted and obliged to enter the service of the United States or their substitutes under the present call.

Voted, To raise $300.00 to pay to each of the soldiers or their substitutes ten days after they are mustered into the service of the United States."

Dec. 7, 1863, "Voted, To raise four hundred dollars to pay to each person that may enlist to fill the quota required of this town, in the call of October 17, 1863, by the President of the United States.

"Voted, That the same amount ($400.00) be paid to each person that may be required, if any, and does enlist to fill any previous calls.

"Voted, To choose an agent to procure volunteers to fill the quota of this town. Chose Jonathan G. Huntley as agent for the above purpose, who is to counsel with the selectmen and act agreeably to their requirements.

"Voted, To choose one person as enlisting officer. Chose Josiah Parsons as an enlisting officer for the town of Swanzev."

Dec. 30, 1863. "Voted, To instruct the selectmen to furnish substitutes or volunteers in such numbers as may be required to fill the quota of said town under the call of the President of Oct. 17, 1863, and do the same at the lowest rate possible.

“Voted, That the selectmen be and are hereby authorized to borrow money in addition to the four hundred dollars already raised to pay bounties to volunteers, sufficient to carry out the object expressed in the above vote.

“Voted, To assume the State and Government bounties, and pay the same to each volunteer as soon as it becomes his due or he is mustered into the service.”

May 30, 1864. “Voted, To pay drafted men or their substitutes $300.00 each, to fill all back quotas of said town under the last calls of the President of the United States.

“Voted, To instruct the selectmen to furnish volunteers to take the place of persons that would otherwise be drafted to fill the present call.”

June 16, 1864. “Voted, That the selectmen shall pay $300.00 each to such persons as may enlist, or their substitutes, and be accounted to the town of Swanzey on any future calls for three years' men.

“Voted, To pay such of the citizens as have re-enlisted as veterans in the field and been assigned upon the muster rolls to the credit of said town. $300.00 each.

“Voted, That the selectmen be and are hereby authorized to enlist volunteers for the service of the United States at such sums as in their judgment may be deemed proper and borrow money for that purpose.”

Aug. 13, 1864. “Voted, That the selectmen be instructed to pay volunteers, drafted men or their substitutes $100.00 for one year, $200.00 for two years, $300.00 for three years.

“Voted, To assume the State bounty and pay the same to volunteers, substitutes or drafted men upon their being duly mustered into the service of the United States.”

Aug. 29, 1864. “Voted, That the selectmen be and are hereby authorized to pay bounties to citizen volunteers who have resided in the town three months, as follows: $500.00 for one year, $750.00 for two years and $900.00 for three years, immediately on being mustered into the service of the United States.”

Dec. 22, 1864. “Voted, To pay bounties to citizen volunteers who have resided in town three months or more as $500.00 for one year, $750.00 for two years and $900.00 for three years.”

“Voted, To pay to those persons who have or may furnish an acceptable substitute to fill the quota of the town or any future call the sum of $100.00 for one year, $200.00 for two years, $300.00 for three years.”

The following persons enlisted and were credited to Swanzey previous to July 26, 1862. The pecuniary consideration for inducing them to enlist for three years was thirteen dollars a month each, and ten dollars bounty when mustered, from the General Government; and those dependent upon an enlisted soldier received from the town one dollar a week for their support, while he remained in the service.

The amount of bounties paid by Swanzey after July 26, 1862, for soldiers to fill its quotas amounted to forty-seven thousand dollars. The state and general government paid large bounties to encourage enlistments. These bounties were increased from time to time until, in 1864, the state paid $200 and the general government $100 for three years' men, and the state $100 to those who enlisted for one

George G. Welch mustered Aug. 30, 1864, into 5th N. H. Infantry ; died of disease in Field Hospital, City Point, Va., Dec. 5, 1864 ; substitute.

Joseph Woods mustered May 27, 1864, into 6th N. H. Infantry ; substitute.

James Williamson mustered July 30, 1864, into 14th N. H. Infantry ; not officially accounted for ; substitute.

Lucius Whitcomb mustered from Fitzwilliam, Nov. 28, 1861, into 6th N. H. Infantry ; killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862.

Leonard Whitcomb enlisted into 36th Mass. Volunteers in 1862 ; discharged after four months' service.

Andrew Whitcomb was in the Worcester Co. of the 6th Mass. regiment when it went through Baltimore ; enlisted into the 7th R. I. Infantry ; out over two years ; wounded in thigh.

Lyman Whitcomb enlisted into the 7th R. I. Infantry ; killed in the second battle of Bull Run.

Park E. Wright had three years' service in Doubleday's Battery.

Charles Henry Wyman was in the 10th Vermont regiment four and one-half years ; detailed as a mounted orderly ; had one horse shot under him and had his sword shot from his belt.

One of the first measures of the Lower Ashuelot proprietors was to provide a "training field." They felt that their main reliance for protection against the Indians was upon the citizen soldiery. The warlike attitude of the mother country towards France and some of the other European nations for years previous to this period could not but have firmly impressed them that all able-bodied young men should be trained for military service in order that they be prepared for such emergencies as were liable to occur at any time.

For a hundred years after the town was first settled most men performed the military duties required of them with alacrity. Such was the honor of a military title that the most aspiring sought the offices that conferred these titles. The early history of the town furnishes the best evidence that the men with military titles were the men upon whom were conferred most of the offices of civil administration.

In 1760 the militia of New Hampshire consisted of nine regiments of infantry and one of troops. At this time Cheshire county comprised what is now Cheshire and Sullivan, and the militia of the county was organized into one regiment. It was No. 6, and its colonel was Josiah Willard. Officers and men had experienced much military service the preceding years in the seven years' war.

No material change took place in the military organizations of New Hampshire from 1760 until after the declaration of independence. About this time important changes in the military system were made. The militia were divided into two classes: a training band and an alarm list.

"The Training Band was constituted of all the able-bodied male persons in the State from sixteen years old to fifty except certain persons in position and employment specified, and Negroes, Indians and Mulattoes."

"The Alarm List included all male persons from sixteen years of age to sixty-five not included in the Training Band and not exempted by the first section of the act. They were to serve in a separate corps, were subject to be called out of their towns by no officer under the rank of a colonel, and once in every six months they were to be called out by the captains of the companies belonging to the Training Band in the limits of which they resided, to have their arms and accouterments examined."

Each officer and private soldier was "to equip himself and be constantly provided with a good Fire Arm, good ramrod, a worm priming wire and brush, and a bayonet fitted to his gun, a scabbard and belt therefor and a cutting sword or a tomahawk or hatchet; a pouch containing a cartridge-box that will hold fifteen rounds of cartridges, at least a hundred buck-shot, a jack-knife and tow for wadding, six flints, one pound of powder, forty leaden balls fitted to his gun, a knapsack and blanket, a canteen or wooden bottle sufficient to hold one quart."

Each company was to muster eight times a year including the regimental muster. "Each town was to provide and deposit in some safe place for use in case of an alarm a specified number of spades or shovels, axes and picks, and to provide arms and equipments for those unable to provide them for themselves, and parents, masters or guardians were to provide for those under their care."

Up to this time the militia of Cheshire county was included in one regiment. It was now divided into three: The towns of Swanzev, Richmond, Winchester, Hinsdale, Chesterfield, Westmoreland, Keene, Surry and Gilsum constituted one regiment. It was No. 13, and Samuel Ashley of Winchester was its colonel. The number of men in the regiment was 1080.

When Colonel Ashley's regiment was called out in 1777, Joseph

THOMAS T. WETHERBEE.

Hammond of Swanzey was its lieutenant colonel and Lieut. Elisha Whitcomb and Lieut. Samuel Wright also of Swanzey were upon Col. Ashley's staff.

On the 5th of September, 1792, the new constitution was adopted. This contained important provisions as to the militia. In the bill of rights it announced the truth that "a well-regulated militia is the proper, natural and sure defence of a State;" and provided that the "general and field officers of the militia should be nominated and appointed by the governor and council; that the captains and subalterns in the respective regiments shall be nominated and recommended by the field officers to the governor, who is to issue their commission immediately on receipt of such recommendation; that "the governor of this State for the time being shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and all the military forces of the State by sea and land;" "that no officer duly commissioned to command in the militia, shall be removed from his office but by address of both houses to the governor, or by fair trial in court-martial, pursuant to the laws of the State for the time being;" that "the commanding officers of regiments shall appoint their adjutants and quartermasters; the brigadiers, their brigade majors; the major generals, their aids; the captains and subalterns, their non-commissioned officers;" and that the division of the militia into brigades, regiments and companies made in pursuance of the militia laws then in force should be considered as the proper division of the militia of the state until the same should be altered.

Under this constitution, new militia laws became necessary. By an act which was passed, the companies in the towns of Winchester, Richmond and Swanzey, formed a first battalion; and the companies in the towns of Hinsdale and Chesterfield a second battalion and the two battalions formed the sixth regiment; the sixth, fifteenth, sixteenth, twelfth and twentieth regiments formed the fifth brigade, and the fourth and fifth brigades formed the third division.

By this organization of the militia of the state there were twenty-seven regiments, six brigades and three divisions.

By an act passed Dec. 28, 1792, it was provided that all free able-bodied, white male citizens from eighteen to forty years of age should be enrolled; that each commanding officer of a company should call out the same twice every year for inspection of arms and instruction in military discipline, and at such other times as he should think best, and that each commander of a battalion should call out his battalion once every year for the same purpose; that there should be one standard and one suit of regimental colors for each regiment, with appropriate inscriptions at the expense of the state; that there should be a major general to each division, a brigadier to each brigade, a lieutenant colonel to each regiment, one major to each battalion, a captain, lieutenant, ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, one drummer and one fifer to each company; and the regimental staff was to consist of an adjutant and quartermaster with the rank of lieutenant; a paymaster, surgeon, surgeon's mate, sergeant major, drum major and fife major; that each battalion should have one company of grenadiers or light infantry, and each division should have one company of artillery.

The law required that important militia laws should be read at the head of each company at least once a year.

In 1795 the enrolment law was amended so as to include in the enrolment those between the ages of sixteen and forty.

It was unlawful for any non-commissioned officer or private to fire a gun on the day or evening of muster in or near any public road, or any house, or on or near the place of parade without permission of a commissioned officer.

In 1796 Elisha Whitcomb was lieutenant colonel of the sixth regiment and Philemon Whitcomb major of the first battalion in the same regiment, both of Swanzev.

It was enacted June 18, 1805, that the captain of each company of artillery organized according to law receive out of the treasury fifty dollars for erecting a gun-house, that one cannon with carriage, harness and apparatus should be furnished each company of artillery, also music-money and a color; that there should be at least a company of light infantry or grenadiers to each battalion; that there be not more than one company of cavalry to each regiment, and that such companies be furnished with music-money and colors; that each company in the state turn out for inspection of arms and military exercise on the last Wednesday of June annually, also annually in the month of August or September, and at such other times as the commanding officers of companies should think proper, not exceeding four times in each year; that each regiment should be called out annually in the months of September or October, unless by permission of the brigadiers they should parade in battalion; that suitable meats and drinks, or thirty-four cents in lieu thereof, should be furnished each non-commissioned officer and private within their several towns and places on regimental or battalion musters.

Philemon Whitcomb of Swanzev was major general of the third division of New Hampshire militia in 1810. That year the fifth brigade mustered in Swanzey, and was reviewed by General Whitcomb. Isaac Stratton, Esq., a number of years since, wrote the following article for publication in one of the local papers. Mr. Stratton at the time of this military display was but little more than three years old, but the muster was regarded by Swanzey people as an event of so much consequence that it was a theme of conversation for many succeeding years, and the little ones of that day in after years became familiar with all its details.

“In the year 1810 the fifth brigade of Major General Philemon Whitcomb’s division of New Hampshire militia mustered in Swanzey.

The people of Swanzey were much elated; fences were removed; fields leveled on either side of the old common, making a broad field nearly two miles long and very level. At that time there were four old-style taverns on Swanzey plains near the muster field; it was a nice location for a big muster. The occasion was blest with a beautiful autumn day. All of the regiments of the brigade were on the field promptly. There were several volunteer veteran companies on the parade, not a few of them were old Revolutionary soldiers. It was probably the greatest military display that ever took place in this part of the State. Not less than four thousand men bore arms. There were a greater number of spectators than troops. Muster was the people’s great holiday in those times. Every man, woman and child that was able to go must be there. Scores of booths were erected opposite the lines, and within them were fiddling and dancing; gingerbread and strong drink were sold from them quite freely. The right of the brigade was graced with several large companies of cavalry, their scarlet coats and bear-skin caps looked warlike. The officers of the various regiments were familiar with their duty. The vast line was kept in most perfect order. The inspectors reported to the General that almost every man was equipped as the law required. The General then reviewed the brigade (his two sons aids) with pride and admiration. The plan of the manœuvres and evolutions of the day was carried out in grand military style without mistakes or accidents.

The muster closed as was usual in those days with a grand sham fight. A large fort was thrown up at the base of Mt. Caesar, a short distance west of the muster field, the mountain at that time being covered with a dense forest. Several tribes of sham Indians lay in ambush there. Soon after the fight commenced they rushed out and participated in the battle, their faces painted, and long black hair hanging down their backs, and their horrid yells produced an excitement that is unknown in these modern times. It was a reminder of the trials of the first settlers of our country. The battle continued nearly an hour, both armies fought bravely, large numbers on either side were apparently killed and wounded. The Indians kept up their fiendish yells, apparently taking some scalps. For a time the issue seemed doubtful. The Americans held the fort and by a very ingenious flank movement overcame the pretended British and made prisoners of their entire force when the Indians fled to their native forest.

The physical forms of those stalwart men that made up this military display with their elastic limbs and martial steps have gradually gone down into the peaceful bosom of mother earth. The officers that rode their proud steeds have gone down into the shadowy ranks with their soldiers.

‘What is glory, what is fame?
A mere echo, a shadow, a name,
A flower that blossoms for a day,
A stream that hurries life away.’”

Samuel Dinsmore, sen., of Keene, was governor of New Hampshire in the years of 1831, 1832 and 1833.

When Mr. Dinsmore was governor there was a volunteer muster of the uniformed companies in the county at Keene.

There was at this time much interest taken in military displays by the people generally, and in nearly every town was a well-uniformed and well-drilled military company. Some of the large towns had two companies. In some of the small towns the whole militia of the town were uniformed and organized into one company.

The leading spirit in initiating the muster was James Wilson who at the time was captain of the Keene Light Infantry, and who subsequently became major general in the New Hampshire militia and member of congress.

Of the companies present there were two cavalry, four artillery, a large number of light infantry, some uniformed infantry, and a number of rifle companies. The acting colonel, lieutenant colonel, major and adjutant, were the commissioned colonels of four regiments. Amos Bennett of Richmond, colonel of the sixth regiment, was the senior officer in the commission and had the command.

Governor Dinsmore reviewed the line and Adjutant General Low of the state militia made the inspection.

The muster field was on the plain just north of Swanzeey line.

At this time the militia was organized into companies and regiments for performing the military duties required. The battalion drill and battalion officers had been dispensed with some years previous.

The duties required by law of commissioned officers were for captains or senior officers of companies to warn their men to meet in May at some central place to have their arms inspected, to have those militia laws read that were applicable for the performance of military duties and to instruct the men in military discipline. Previous to about 1830 the law required the May training to be on the first Tuesday in May. About that time it was changed to the second Tuesday in May. The companies were again warned out for drill by their commanding officers just before the annual muster. The colonels of regiments called the commissioned officers of their regiments together for one day's drill before muster.

The muster was usually held in September. It was expected that the regiments would be reviewed by either a major or a brigadier-general, and that a member of the reviewing officer's staff would inspect the arms of each soldier in the regiment. The day for a regiment to muster was appointed by a general and by such an arrangement as would be most convenient to go from regiment to regiment and review and inspect one a day. It was usual to have a muster only on the days of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The place for a regiment to muster was designated by the colonel.

The arms for performing military duty required by law were, for a mounted officer and cavalry man, a pair of pistols and a sword; an artillery man, a sword; an infantry man, a gun with a bayonet fitted to it; a rifleman, a rifle without a bayonet. When the old flint lock was used, each man was required to have two spare flints, a priming wire and brush, cartridge boxes attached to a belt, and to hold a certain number of cartridges. All soldiers, excepting commissioned officers, had to be furnished with a knapsack and canteen.

All commissioned officers when on duty had to wear military uniforms. The uniforms of field officers were a blue military swallow-tail coat, a felt cocked hat and white linen pants. The militia officers wore a blue swallow-tail military coat, white linen pants, and a leather military cap. The officers of the independent military companies wore uniforms to correspond with the style of uniform adopted by their company.

The rank of officers was indicated to some extent by the epaulette worn. Field officers wore a pair of silver epaulettes, captains an epaulette upon the right shoulder, lieutenants an epaulette upon the left shoulder.

Field officers, when upon parade, almost invariably rode nice horses with good equipage. It would have been considered a disgrace for an officer to appear otherwise. It was not usual for a field officer to own the horse or its equipage.

There were noted parade horses that were seen at musters year after year, and were seen at a number of musters the same year. The letting of a good parade horse with its equipage was a source of considerable income. The general who reviewed, and his staff, procured for the business an elegant set of horses corresponding in color and match.

The sixth regiment was in as good condition in 1840 as it had been at any previous time or has been subsequently. The independent companies were Swanzey Artillery ; Winchester, Chesterfield and Hinsdale Light Infantries ; Richmond Grenadiers and Swanzey and Chesterfield Rifle Companies. Most if not all these companies appeared at muster with full ranks, good music and were fairly well drilled.

At this time much pride was taken in most towns in having good uniformed military companies and have them make a good appearance on muster day. To prepare the companies for a creditable appearance required much time to be spent in drilling and much money for uniforms.

Good music was considered an indispensable part of military display. Most of the independent companies went to muster with a good band.

It was a point with most of these companies to be at the place of muster the day before in the afternoon, and to do some drilling. The time when companies expected to make their best display at manœuvring was at an intermission usually of about an hour after the companies had been inspected.

For the duties of muster day the men were warned to meet at some particular place as early as six o'clock. The companies were organized at once by its officers and the regiment by the adjutant, assisted by the quartermaster. The music of all the companies was consolidated into one band under the direction of the drum-major of the regiment. Then the field officers took the command of the regiment and marched it to the parade ground. Inspection was next in order by the general's inspector. The review by the general took place in the afternoon. If he was accustomed to making addresses he would make one to the regiment. If he was not so accustomed to this he would have a member of his staff, who was qualified, do it for him.

The closing duties of a regiment for the day under its commander consisted in battalion drill, firing in line, and often in a sham fight.

For a long time muster day was the people's great holiday of the year, and a time when showmen and peddlers went from muster to muster, the former giving exhibitions of great variety and the latter disposing of goods of varied qualities.

There are no rolls of New Hampshire militia in the adjutant general's office by which Swanzey's military history previous to 1815 can be known, except during the time of the Revolution. There can be no doubt but that it was an honorable one. It is certain that previous to this time many of its most prominent citizens had military titles which indicates their connection with the state militia.

There were probably no independent military companies in this part of the state till some years after the Revolutionary war, when a cavalry company was organized. Later still there were two cavalry companies in the sixth regiment. Swanzey furnished some of the men for the first company and most of them for the second.

The following Swanzey men were captains in the cavalry :

Jonathan Locke,	Henry R. Morse,
Phineas Stone,	David Aldrich,
Alva Whitcomb,	Jonathan Whitcomb.
William Wright,

The company was disbanded about 1830.

The Swanzey artillery was formed about 1808. Men required to do military duty in the sixth regiment had a right to enlist into the company. But few ever did duty in the company that did not reside in Swanzey. It was substantially a Swanzey company. The following men commanded the company. It is supposed the knowledge of the first five is obtained from traditional evidence, of others from the adjutant general's office.

Joseph Emerson,	Otis Whitcomb,
Nathan Whitcomb,	William Sebastian,
Levi Blake,	David Parsons,
Edward Goddard,	Thomas T. Wetherbee,
Joseph Woodward,	James M. Ramsdell,
Ahaz Howard,	Benjamin Read,
Calvin Page,	Horace Drewry,
Luther Dickinson,	Benjamin F. Lombard,
William Read,	Lyman Gates,
David Bennett,	Sylvander L. Whitcomb.
Jonathan W. Capron,

About 1824, at the time Luther Dickinson commanded the company, it was newly uniformed.

In 1840 these uniforms had become reduced in numbers and impaired by usage to such an extent that the company's appearance was not satisfactory to the members or to those who had been connected with it especially those who had been its officers. Early in the year measures were taken to see what could be done for obtaining new uniforms. As a preliminary step the officers then in commission resigned. A vote for officers resulted in the election of Benjamin Read, captain; Horace Drewry, first lieutenant, and Albert Bates, second lieutenant. Such was the encouragement for obtaining members for the company if new uniforms were to be procured that seventy-seven complete uniforms were purchased, and equipments for three commissioned officers, and for sixty-four non-commissioned officers and privates. Ten uniforms without equipments were for the music.

After the new uniforms were obtained, and previous to the fall muster, the ladies, to show their appreciation of the military spirit evinced in the company's re-organization, presented it with a splendid flag. The presentation was made in front of the old meeting-house, which is now the town house. It was one of Swanze's great days. The citizens were present in large numbers and there were many present from neighboring towns. We doubt if there have ever been so many good-looking, well-dressed ladies, brought together in Swanze at any other time as stood in front of the artillery company when the presentation was made.

This was done by Miss Thankful Carpenter, daughter of Hon. Elijah Carpenter, and received in behalf of the company by the captain.

After the presentation the parties repaired to a bower where refreshments were served, sentiments offered and responses made.

The state, in consideration of the improved condition of the company, furnished it with a new well mounted six pound cannon which was retained until after the company ceased to maintain its organization.

A rifle company was organized about 1830. mainly by persons living in West Swanze. It had its armory there. From the time of its organization to the time of its dissolution it had good numbers, a good uniform and was well drilled. It was a credit to the people of the west part of Swanze.

The following were the commanders of the company :

Rufus Thompson,	Charles Greene,
Joseph Hammond,	Elisha Hutchins,
Peter Holbrook, jr.,	Sylvanus Bartlett,
Erastus Dickinson,	Aaron A. Sumner.

The officers of the militia company previous to 1815 we will not undertake to name. Could they be given correctly the list would embrace a large number of the most prominent and influential men of the town. The men that did duty in a militia company did not have to procure a military uniform. They only had to furnish themselves with equipments.

Since 1815 the Swanzey militia company have had the following commanders :

Samuel Stearns,	Hosea Bishop,
Benjamin Hammond, 2d, jr.,	Phinehas Stone, jr.,
John Grimes, 2d,	Lyman Leach,
Jonathan D. Ware,	Edmund Stone,
Amos Richardson, 2d, jr.,	Orlando Page,
Horatio Black,	Edwin Snow,
David Read,	William Moore,
Amos F. Fish,	Josiah B. Kellogg.

The following are names of Swanzey men who have been field officers in the sixth regiment since 1815 :

COLONELS.

Phinehas Stone,	Thomas T. Trowbridge,
Amos Bennett,	Erastus Dickinson,
David Aldrich,	Jonathan Whitcomb.
Allen Hammond,

MAJORS.

David Parsons,	Elijah Hills.
----------------	---------------

Charles Morrill Hammond of Chicago (son of Capt. Benjamin Hammond of Swanzey), in the months of July and August, 1862, raised a company of infantry ; on Saturday was elected captain, and on the Tuesday following the company (Co. I) was joined with others constituting the 100th volunteer regiment of infantry of Illinois. On that same day he was elected major by the officers of the regiment, taking rank and mustered in August 30, 1862 ; after the battle of Chickamauga, September 20, 1863, he was in command of the regiment till September 4, 1864, when he was promoted to lieutenant colonel ; and on May 11, 1865, promoted to the rank of colonel. Twenty-three battles are recorded on the "Old 100th Ill. Flag," and Providence permitted him to be actively engaged in each one of them. The regiment under his command was mustered out at Chicago June 12, 1865.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

THE Congregational Church in Swanzev was organized November 4, 1741, eight years after the township (then called Lower Ashuelot) was granted to its sixty proprietors. Previous to this time, and probably from its first settlement, the ordinances of religion had not been neglected, as most of the men prominent in proprietary and municipal matters were also leaders in church affairs. The following are some of the earliest recorded votes of the proprietors at meetings duly called for the purpose, and held at the house of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond.

1737, Sept. 7. "Voted to raise a rate or tax of 240 pounds, or 4 pounds on each right to defray the charges of building a meeting House, mending ways, and other necessary charges.

"Voted, That they will build a meeting house in said township 46 feet long, 36 feet wide and 20 feet stud, to be set on the rock near the corner of the lot No. 18 or near thereabouts.

"Voted that the lot in No. 63 in the 4th division be for the first minister, and No. 7 for the ministry.

"Voted and chose Messrs. Nathaniel Hammond, Samuel Hills, Samuel Farnsworth, Charles Lummas and Thomas Cresson a committee to procure workmen to build the meeting-house or let it out to be done as shall be thought most proper.

"Voted and chose Mr. Samuel Hills to provide a minister to preach the Gospel in said township till the next proprietors' meeting."

Oct. 26. "Voted that the sum of three pounds on each right, or 180 pounds in the whole, be raised to pay for preaching and other necessary charges.

“Voted, That Capt. Nathaniel Hammond and Charles Lumas be a committee to provide a preacher.

“Voted, That the committee shall pitch and lay out the lots for the minister and ministry.”

1738, March 15. “Voted, That Capt. Nathaniel Hammond and Mr. Samuel Hills be a committee to employ a minister to preach in said town this 6 months ensuing.”

Dec. 28. “Voted, That there be 4 feet in the length, and 4 feet in the breadth, and two feet in the height added to the meeting-house, and build a decent steeple on one end of said meeting-house as the committee and carpenters shall think fit.”

1739, Sept. 18. “Voted, That Mr. Ephraim Jones, Nathaniel Hammond and Benjamin Brown be a committee to take the advice of some of the neighboring ministers concerning some suitable person to settle among us in the work of the Gospel ministry, and accordingly apply as soon as conveniently may be to some candidate in the ministry to preach upon probation in order for settling.”

Oct. 9. “Voted to raise a rate or tax of 240 pounds or 4 pounds on each right to defray the cost and charges of preaching the Gospel in said township in time past, and for the future with what remains so far as it will hold out.”

Dec. 28. The proprietors voted unanimously for Mr. Noah Mirick for their minister, offering to give him “200 pounds settlement in bills of credit (of old tenor) if he shall agree to settle in the work of the ministry among us; one half to be paid in 6 months after his ordination, and the other half in 12 months after said ordination.”

“Voted, also, 130 pounds the first year and to add to it 5 pounds every year until it comes to 180 pounds, in bills of credit (of the old tenor) as his yearly salary, if he shall agree to settle in the work of the ministry among us, and be made as good from year to year as the money is at the present time, and be continued so as long as he shall remain our minister.”

A committee consisting of Abraham Graves, Samuel Gunn, Thomas Crisson, William Scott and John Evans was chosen to treat with Mr. Mirick concerning his settlement, but no record is made of his accepting their proposals.

1740, April 4. In response to an article in their warrant to “choose and call a pious, learned and orthodox minister” the “worthy Mr. Thomas Goss” was chosen and invited to settle among them with substantially the same settlement and salary as that voted to Mr. Mirick—and with the same result. Probably both these men preached more or less in the township, as did also following them, a Mr. Gardner.

1741, April 13. The proprietors, at a meeting held at the house of Samuel Gunn, voted to call Rev. Timothy Harrington to be their minister with the salary above named, except it was to be 150 pounds instead of 130 the first year. Nathaniel Hammond, John Evans and Timothy Brown were chosen a committee to carry the proposals to Mr. Harrington—also to request him to supply them with preaching till he should give his answer.

May 4. It was "Voted to state Mr. Harrington's salary in case he should take up with our proposals at silver money at 28 shillings per ounce."

Aug. 3. "Voted, That the proprietors will give Mr. Timothy Harrington, his heirs and assigns forever, one acre and an half of land situate lying on the Meeting-House Hill where he shall choose to pitch it, so as not to discommode the setting of the Meeting-House, in case he shall settle in the work of the ministry amongst us."

"Voted also that the proprietors will exchange the school lot with Mr. Timothy Harrington, viz. the house lot belonging to the school right for the house lot which the General Court has granted to the first minister in Ashuelot."

Mr. Harrington in his letter of acceptance says, "Gentlemen, as you have given me an invitation to settle among you in the work of the ministry and have also laid your proposals before me, I must confess they are generous and you willing to exert yourselves for the honorable support of the Gospel. The unanimity of your choice, the repeated instances of your affection to my person, and your earnest desire for my continuance among you seem to declare your invitation to be the call of God himself; and that my accepting of it may be for the glory of God, the honor of Christ, the interest of religion and the mutual peace and comfort of you all."

Mr. Harrington was ordained and the church formed Nov. 4, 1741. There were at that time no settlements in what is now Sullivan County, and only two others in Cheshire County, viz.:—Upper Ashuelot (Keene) and Arlington (Winchester). There were present, and assisted in the ordination, elders and delegates from the churches in these two places, also from Sunderland and Northfield. The church covenant, which was in accordance with the Cambridge platform, was subscribed to by the pastor Timothy Harrington from the First church in Cambridge, and twelve other men, viz., Nathaniel Hammond from church in Littleton; Jonathan Hammond, Littleton; Abraham Graves, Hatfield; Samuel Gunn, Sunderland; Charles Lumis, Bolton; William Carr, Deerfield; David Belding, Upper Ashuelot, and Samuel Hills, Thomas Cresson, John Evans, Nathaniel Hammond, jr., and Thomas Hammond, who were never in full communion before.

Rev. Mr. Harrington was chosen church clerk, and, January 5, 1744, Timothy Brown and Jonathan Hammond were chosen deacons. At the same time "Voted, That any person belonging to another church and coming to reside among us be required within the space of one year to bring a letter of dismissal and recommendation from that church to this, or without an accepted reason for such failure, be debarred communion with us till done."

Rev. Mr. Harrington's house was burned by the Indians March 26, 1745, and with it the church records. But the important events and votes that could be recollected were confirmed by vote of the church, Oct. 2, 1745, and recorded. The inhabitants continued to suffer from the hostility of the Indians, and in 1747 they abandoned the town, and the members of the little church were scattered. Before leaving they buried many heavy articles of furniture in the ground, intending without doubt to return under more favorable circumstances. But though scattered, the church was not disbanded.

In 1748 their pastor requested of them "a testimonial of their acceptance of his doctrine and conversation among them, and their consent to his settling in the work of the ministry in some other place where God in his providence might call him." To consider and act upon this request a meeting of the church was called to meet at Brookfield, Sept. 14, but as only six of the eighteen male members were present it was deemed imprudent for so small a number to act upon the subject, and they adjourned to meet in Rutland, Oct. 11th. At this meeting his request was granted on condition that he relinquish all claim to any arrearages of salary due to Nov. 4, 1744, and his salary for the years 1747 and 1748, and also his claim to the first minister's right of land in Lower Ashuelot. At this meeting also Anna, his wife, and Rose, his maidservant, were dismissed and recommended with him to "the first Chh. in Lancaster or to any other regular Chh. wherever Providence shall cast their lott." Mr. H. was subsequently settled in Lancaster. As a token of his affectionate remembrance for the church in Swanzey he left it by will money for the purchase of a silver cup, costing $15.35. During his ministry, including the original members, forty-five were admitted to the church : twenty-three males and twenty-two females, of whom twenty-five were from other churches.

1753, Aug. 21. The churches in Swanzev and Keene met at the schoolhouse in Swanzev and mutually and unanimously agreed to be one religious society and worship together for the space of three years, the towns being at equal expense for the support of the Gospel during that time. The church covenant was then subscribed to by twenty-one persons, viz. : Ezra Carpenter, pastor ; Abraham Graves, Nathaniel Hammond, Jeremiah Hall, Thomas Cresson, David Foster, Timothy Brown, William Smead, Nathan Blake, William Carr, Jonathan Hammond, Joseph Ellis, Ebenezer Nimms, David Nimms, William Grimes, David Belding, Ebenezer Day, Samuel Hills, Joseph Hammond, Eliakim King and Thomas Hammond. Mr. Carpenter was installed over this united church Oct. 4, 1753 ; the churches represented at the installation, 1st in Hingham, 3d in Plymouth, Kingston ; 1st in Lancaster, Nichewong, Poquaig, Deerfield, Sunderland and Northfield. The union of these churches continued about seven years. When they separated Rev. Mr. Carpenter had his choice with which to remain, and chose Swanzev, continuing to be its minister till June, 1764, when at his own request he was dismissed by an ecclesiastical council convened for that purpose. Tradition says that the council had but just left the meeting-house when a tornado passed and turned the meeting-house one quarter round, so that it was made to face the east instead of the south. Several buildings also were unroofed or blown down and one member of the council had a horse killed at the time. During his ministry thirty-five were admitted to the church. His salary was 100 pounds. He was appointed chaplain of the Crown Point expedition in 1757.

It appears that at some time previous to Feb. 28, 1754, David Foster had been chosen deacon ; that at this date the three deacons, Brown, Hammond and Foster, were dropped and the two latter re-chosen.

In 1769, Sept. 27, Rev. Edward Goddard of Shrewsbury was ordained and settled over the church. Six churches by their pastors and delegates assisted at the ordination, viz., 1st in Lancaster, 1st in Shrewsbury, Holden, Keene, Warwick and Westmoreland. The town voted to pay him for a settlement 133 pounds 6 shillings and 8 pence lawful money, and for a salary 53 pounds 6 shillings and 8 pence the first two years, and after that time an annual increase of 40 shillings till his salary amounts to 66 pounds 13 shillings and 4 pence. In addition to the above they also voted to bring him annually thirty cords of fire wood.

Mr. Goddard continued to be minister of the church and town till July 5, 1798, at which time he was dismissed by an ecclesiastical council composed of pastors and delegates from churches in Montague, New Ipswich, New Salem, Walpole and Ashburnham. He also continued his connection with the church until the installation of his successor, Rev. Clark Brown, Sept. 5, 1810, at which time he was dismissed and recommended to the church in Warwick, with which he united becoming its pastor. At the time of his settlement in 1769 the church numbered forty-four members: twenty-two males and twenty-two females. In 1785 it numbered one hundred and twenty-five: fifty-seven males and sixty-eight females, besides sixteen non-residents. During his pastorate deacons were chosen as follows: Jan. 29, 1770, Thomas Applin; in 1777, Thomas Hammond and Daniel Warner; and in 1782 Samuel Hills and Calvin Frink.

The first part of Mr. Goddard's ministry was evidently pleasant and prosperous; the latter part was not so harmonious, although at a church meeting Feb. 13, 1798, it was voted unanimously in favor of his continuing their minister, but on account of his health voted to excuse him from preaching for a season. The church appeared to be ever friendly to him, but a growing feeling of discontent manifested itself on the part of the town, which compelled his resignation. During his ministry several members were disciplined; some for absenting themselves from church services and ordinances, and some for a too free use of that unruly member, the tongue, in slander. Most of the offenders confessed their faults and were continued in church fellowship.

Both Mr. Goddard and his predecessor were often troubled in obtaining their salaries, officiating as they did during the perilous and trying times of Indian wars and the war of the Revolution. The ministry of Mr. Goddard was longer than that of any other, nearly twenty-nine years. During that time one hundred and fifty-six members were received, of whom fifty-six were from other churches; forty baptisms were administered. The baptismal or half-way covenant, as it was called, was then in vogue. Mr. Goddard was church clerk during his ministry. Sept. 6, 1798, Calvin Frink was chosen clerk, and June 3, 1799, Joseph Cross was elected. April 2, 1806, Calvin Frink resigned the office of deacon.

"The Rev. Clark Brown, a graduate of Harvard 1797, and who had been dismissed from Brimfield, Mass., began to supply the pulpit in Swanzev, Aug. 21, 1808, and was installed Sept. 5, 1810. He professedly became an Episcopalian and attempted to render the church such, but failing in the attempt, his connection was dissolved by mutual council Oct. 1, 1815. During his ministry forty-nine were admitted to full communion and eighty-two were baptized. Salary $400. He was a man of popular talent but unstable. In the interim before the next ordination, seven were admitted and ten were baptized. The Rev. Joshua Chandler, a graduate of Harvard 1804, was ordained Jan. 20, 1819, and dismissed by council at his own request Nov. 26, 1822. During his ministry nine were admitted to communion and twenty-three baptized. His salary was $400. In the interval between his dismissal and the next installation two were admitted to church fellowship. The number of the church from the first is 417 and the baptisms 709."

The foregoing extract and some other items are taken from "New Hampshire Churches," and written by Rev. E. Rockwood.

The Rev. Ebenezer Colman was installed as pastor of the church May 23, 1827. He was a graduate of Brown University in 1815, a good scholar, an able preacher. Salary $300 and thirty cords of wood. The exercises at the installing council were conducted by the following ministers:—Introductory prayer by Salmon Bennett, Marlborough; sermon, Z. S. Barstow, Keene; consecrating prayer, John Walker, Chesterfield; charge to pastor, William Muzzy, Sullivan; right hand of fellowship, O. C. Whiton, Troy; address to people, John Sabin, Fitzwilliam; concluding prayer, A. B. Camp, Ashby, Mass.

The council when met passed the following:

"Whereas the free use of ardent spirits is doing much injury to the peace of families and to the good order of Society, as well as in destroying the souls of many, we deem it the duty of every friend of religion and human happiness to do all in his power to discontinue it; therefore resolved unanimously that this Council request the committee of the society to exclude all ardent spirits and wines from the entertainment provided for the Council." The necessity for such a resolution gives us an inkling of the practice in church circles previous to this date. May 27, 1827, the pastor was chosen church clerk. April 3, 1828, Joseph Dickinson was chosen deacon, and Aug. 13, 1830, Jona. D. Ware was chosen to the same office.

A constitution for a church library was adopted Dec. 5, 1828. Mr. Colman was appointed librarian and Asahel Shurtleff and Joseph

REV. ELISHA ROCKWOOD, D.D.

Smead a committee to examine, and receive or reject, all books which might be purchased for the library or presented to it.

Mr. Colman's pastorate continued till July 1, 1834, when, at his request, the pastoral relation was dissolved by a mutual council composed of pastors and delegates from Fitzwilliam, Westmoreland, Keene, Winchester and Walpole. Among the reasons he assigns for leaving were his small salary, not being sufficient for the support of his family, and being obliged frequently to worship in a hall or school-house, as the meeting-house was claimed a part of the time by the Universalists.

July 13, 1834, Luther Browne was chosen clerk of the church; and April 4, 1838, William Read accepted the office of deacon, to which he had previously been chosen. After the dismissal of Mr. Colman and before his successor was installed, the pulpit was occupied by several persons but principally by Rev. Roger C. Hatch, and twenty-two persons were admitted to the church.

Nov. 16, 1836, Rev. Elisha Rockwood was settled as minister of the church and people, and was soon after chosen church clerk. He was born in Chesterfield, May 9, 1778, a graduate of Dartmouth College 1802. Preceptor of Plymouth Academy two years, tutor in Dartmouth College two years, pastor of Congregational Church in Westborough, Mass., twenty-six and one-half years, and of the church in this town nearly twenty-two years, dying June 19, 1858, and preaching till the time of his death. He was a gentleman of the old school, highly respected by all who knew him, by those who believed the doctrines he faithfully preached, and by those who dissented from them. On the eightieth anniversary of his birth he preached a sermon from the text "I am this day four score years old" (ii Samuel 19 : 35), giving interesting reminiscences of his life and good advice to his people. This sermon was published after his death. He was twice married, first to Susan Parkman of Westborough, and second, to Mrs. Emily Wilder Herrick of Keene. The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Dartmouth College.

During his ministry in this town, fifty-eight persons were received to the church, twenty-eight were dismissed and recommended to other churches and twenty-eight of the members died.

June 3, 1843, the church confession of faith and church covenant were by unanimous vote of the church revised and made to conform to those of most other churches in connection with the Monadnock Association; and March 2, 1845, these were printed for distribution among the members. The church numbered at this time seventy-two, of whom twenty-one were males and fifty-one females.

Mr. R's salary was $400, of which $75 was annually relinquished by him for several of the last years of his life.

As ministerial changes became more frequent in New England the society followed the prevalent fashion and purchased a house for the use of its ministers. It was bought of Dr. Willard Adams for $1200, which amount was raised by subscription with the exception of $300 which was taken from Society funds. The parsonage was dedicated with appropriate services May 20, 1859.

Nov. 5, 1858, Mowry A. Thompson was chosen clerk, but soon after, removing from town, Josiah Parsons was chosen and has since retained the office.

The last minister that was "settled" over the church and society was John'G. Wilson, who was installed June 29, 1859. Salary $400 and use of parsonage. He was an earnest and acceptable preacher. He remained a little more than four years when at his request the pastoral relation was dissolved. He was born in Nelson, Sept. 18, 1820, studied theology and graduated at Bangor Theological Seminary in 1850; ordained at Bellows Falls, Vt., Dec. 12, 1851. Preached there and also at Saxton's river, Vt., and Charlestown, until he came to Swanzev. Since leaving here he has been City Missionary at Portland, Maine.

July 24, 1864, Rev. T. E. Roberts, who had been supplying the church in Troy, commenced preaching as stated supply, and continued till Oct., 1868. He was somewhat easy in his theological views as well as in his business relations. After closing his labors with the church in this place he preached about two years at East Swanzev, being engaged at the same time as a life insurance agent, in which business he did not succeed. He has not since been in the ministry.

Rev. W. H. Cutler succeeded Mr. Roberts and preached nearly two years. He was a young man, a fine speaker, interesting in the pulpit, but lacking in those qualities which are essential to success as pastor among the people of his parish. He has since been rector of the Episcopal church in Goffstown. At the close of Mr. Cutler's ministry Rev. A. B. Earle held a series of gospel meetings with the Baptist and Congregational churches, and on the first Sunday in January, 1871, fifteen persons united with the latter church.

The next minister was Rev. Charles Willey, a zealous preacher, untiring in his efforts to do good, who remained till July, 1873, when thinking he would be of more service in some other place went first to Wisconsin and preached two years, then to Newfield, N. J., where he has since resided, preaching a part of the time in connection with his labors on the farm. Mr. W. was born at Derby, Vermont, Sept. 9, 1815; married Miss Harriet Claggett of Newport, N. H., Sept. 24, 1843; studied theology at Andover, ordained at Chichester, Sept. 15, 1845, pastor of the church there six years; afterwards before coming to Swanzy preached at Kingston, London Mills, Epsom, Barrington, Center Harbor, Greenfield and Nelson, remaining from one to six years in each place.

The church was now without a resident minister till the following January, although as usual on such occasions, public religious services were observed on the Sabbath, sometimes conducted by a transient minister and at other times by members of the church.

At the beginning of the new year, Rev. E. I. Carpenter, formerly of Littleton, but more recently in the service of the Vermont Bible Society, commenced his labors among us and continued them till Feb. 10, 1877, when he was thrown from his sleigh and received injuries from which he died in a few hours. Mr. C. was an able preacher, in good repute among his ministerial brethren and highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was much interested in the people at East Swanzy and preached there more than had any of his predecessors. About three months before his death, his wife, a noble woman, was stricken with heart disease and died nearly as suddenly as he did. Mr. C's salary was $600 and use of parsonage.

The successor of Mr. Carpenter was Rev. H. H. Saunderson who for the twelve preceding years had been minister in Charlestown. His salary was $525 and parsonage. He was a good scholar and writer, having written the history of Charlestown when he was there. He was also a good sermonizer, but old age had weakened his powers, and by want of energy he failed to greatly interest and arouse his audience. He occupied the pulpit till May, 1882, and soon after removed to Manchester where he resided till his death in January, 1890. He was born in Hollis, Sept. 12, 1810, studied three years at Yale College, graduated at Andover Theological Seminary 1842; married Oct. 1, 1845, Miss Elizabeth Cummings of Hollis. He was minister at Ludlow, Vt., seven years and at Wallingford, nine years. He preached also at other places, taught music and was engaged in various literary pursuits. He was an ardent lover of nature, encouraged the planting of shade trees in our streets, and set with his own hand the graceful elm immediately in front of the brick church, April 18, 1878.

During the ministry of Mr. Saunderson (March 2, 1879) the church and congregation voted to have but one preaching service on the Sabbath, and that in the forenoon. This practice has been continued since. From time immemorial, in accordance with the prevalent custom, there had been two sermons, generally at 11 A. M. and 1 P. M. It has also been the custom to have a prayer meeting in the middle of the week, and likewise Sabbath evenings, especially when there has been but one preaching service. March 30, 1877, Alonzo A. Ware was chosen deacon.

Oct. 8, 1882, Rev. Benjamin Merrill commenced his ministerial labors in this place and faithfully performed them till his sudden death Nov. 19, 1888, receiving a salary of $700 and parsonage ($800 were paid him the first three years). He was born in Haverhill, March 25, 1835; learned the printer's trade when a boy; prepared for college at Haverhill and Kimball Union Academies; graduated from the scientific department of Dartmouth College in 1858; in business for some time in N. Y. City; studied Greek one year with his brother, Rev. J. L. Merrill; graduated at Princeton Theological Seminary 1864; ordained by the Presbytery of Carlisle, at Newville, Pa., June 7, 1864, missionary among the Scotch coal miners at Barton, Md., two years; pastor Congregational church, Pembroke, three and one-half years; Presbyterian church, Ansable Forks, N. Y., twelve years, when he was dismissed and came to Swanzev. He married April 28, 1864, Joanna W. Merrill of New York. They have had three children of whom only one, William K., survives. In May, 1889, Rev. Harvey Woodward of Keene, formerly a minister of the M. E. church, was engaged as pastor, in which capacity he still remains.

It thus appears that during the one hundred and forty-nine years since the formation of the church there have been fifteen ministers, of whom eight were settled pastors and seven stated supplies, the former averaging about twelve years and the latter four. There have been few if any controversies in the church or among its members upon theological points or forms of worship.

It was the only church in town till 1792, when the Baptist church was formed at West Swanzev. Its ministers were supported at first by a tax upon the proprietors and upon all tax payers in the town; and afterwards, partly by contributions and partly by taxation.

It was the church of the "standing order," so called. In 1819, the "toleration act" was passed by the New Hampshire legislature, requiring that no person should be taxed except voluntarily, in support of any religious denomination; but some years previous to this time any person had the privilege of having his minister tax abated provided he paid for the support of some other denomination.

CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETY.

The Congregational Society in Swanzey was formed Dec. 26, 1809, and incorporated by an act of the legislature June 16, 1810. Its object was to maintain the preaching of the gospel and to act jointly with the church in calling, settling and dismissing ministers. It was authorized to "assess and collect taxes for the support of a Gospel ministry and other necessary expenses of said Society," and to receive donations and hold funds to an amount not exceeding one thousand dollars. This charter was amended in 1867, authorizing the holding of funds to an amount, the income of which should not exceed $5,000 per year. There is a record of but few taxes ever being assessed after the formation of the society; and for many years past all expenses have been paid by voluntary contributions. Before the act of incorporation sixty-three persons joined the society, viz.: Ebenezer Hills, Aaron Parsons, Elijah Belding, Elkanah Lane, jr., Joseph Dickinson, James Brewer, Calvin Frink, William Wright, Samuel Hills, Asaph Lane, Henry Morse, Nehemiah Cummings, Amos Bailey, Thomas Applin, Joel Read, Ezekiel Thompson, Daniel Cummings, Elijah Graves, Joseph Smead, Amos Bailey, jr., James Pierce, John Thompson, Josiah Parsons, John Read, Gad Graves, Levi Blake, Silas Parsons, Luther Wright, Joseph Cross, Josiah P. Read, Benjamin Brown, Benjamin Hammond, Enoch Cummings, Joseph Hammond, jr., Joseph Kimball, James Cummings, John Applin, Paul Raymond, Samuel Belding, Isaac Butterfield, Ezekiel Osgood, Farnum Fish, Moses B. Williams, Zenas Ware, Samuel Lane, Timothy Thompson, Elijah Lane, Berial Day, Nicholas Howes, Elisha Lane, Elisha Osgood, Timothy Clark, Thaddeus Cummings, Thomas Cross, Peter Cross, Foster Emerson, William Durant, Azariah Dickinson, Edward Goddard, jr., Amariah Partridge, Nathaniel Dickinson, Seth Belding and Joseph Dickinson, jr.

The clerks of the society have been Joseph Cross, six years; Farnum Fish, five years; Asahel Shurtleff, three years; Thomas Applin, two years; William Read, fifty-six years; Alonzo A. Ware, eight years. The other officers were a board of three directors, treasurer and collector, all of whom were to be and have been chosen annually the first Monday in April. Those that have served as directors were Nehemiah Cummings, James Brewer, Luther Wright, Farnum Fish, Silas Parsons, Thomas Cross, Thomas Applin, Timothy Thompson, Daniel Cummings, Ezra Thayer, Ezekiel Osgood, Joseph Dickinson, jr., Foster Emerson, Ezekiel Thompson, Levi Blake, Seth Belding, Daniel Wetherbee, Abel Wilson, Abel Wilder, Silas Jones, Thomas Applin, Daniel Cummings, Amos Bailey, James Cummings, John Thompson, Benjamin Brown, Josiah P. Read, William Read, Eleazer Mason, Hubbard Williams, Jona. D. Ware, Josiah Parsons (father and son), Luther Browne, Phineas Stone, Alvah Thompson, Asa Healey, Samuel Stone, Mowry A. Thompson, M. Edwin Wright, John S. Sargeant, Franklin Downing, Alonzo A. Ware, Luther S. Lane and Lyman M. Stone. Those that served the longest in this capacity were William Read, forty years; J. D. Ware, thirty-eight years; and Alvah Thompson, sixteen years.

The treasurers of the society have been Henry Morse, four years; Asahel Shurtleff, one; Enoch Cummings, one; Daniel Cummings, one; Amos Bailey, forty-six; Enoch Howes, eighteen; and M. C. Stone, seven years.

The names of females appear upon the church records under the heads of baptisms, admissions to and dismissions from the church, marriages and deaths. With these exceptions they rarely appear in church history. Notwithstanding this, the influence of woman though silent and less demonstrative, is perhaps even greater than that of man. Numerically they far outnumber the men; and this has always been so except perhaps in the early settlement of the town.

As an auxiliary to the Congregational Society, and for the purpose of supporting the preaching of the Gospel, the Ladies' Benevolent Society was organized May 12, 1835, with fifty-two members. Its constitution directed that the annual meeting should be held on the second Tuesday of May, and regular monthly meetings on the second Tuesday of every month. These meetings, with few interruptions, have since been continued, sometimes meeting once in two weeks instead of four. The afternoon or evening has been spent in knitting, sewing, braiding palm leaf hats, reading, essays, and cultivating the social element. Every member was required to pay at least twenty-five cents a year. The avails of the society since its formation have been about $3,000. This has been applied principally towards the payment of the pastor's salary, but somewhat to missionary enterprises and helping the poor.

The presidents of the society have been Mrs. Samuel D. King, Mrs. E. Rockwood, Mrs. J. G. Wilson, Mrs. E. F. Read, Mrs. B. Read, Mrs. Charles Willey, Mrs. E. I. Carpenter, Mrs. A. M. Adams, Mrs. J. S. Sargeant, Mrs. A. S. Blake, Mrs. B. Merrill and Mrs. H. Woodward. Secretaries: Miss Lucy Browne, Mrs. S. D. King, Miss H. A. Rockwood, Miss P. Lane, Miss S. B. Wilder, Mrs. B. Read, Miss H. A. Thompson, Miss E. M. Williams, Miss E. R. Bailey and Miss E. A. Newell. Miss Bailey was secretary and treasurer twenty-five years, until her death.

Sunday School.

The records of the Sunday School in connection with the church are very incomplete, being entirely wanting in the earlier part of its history. A school was first organized probably about 1826, and has been continued nearly every Sunday since; having had for its superintendents in part, Joseph Dickinson, William Read, J. D. Ware, E. F. Read, Alfred Marble, M. A. Thompson, M. E. Wright, C. M. Lane, A. A. Ware and L. M. Stone.

Its sessions have usually been immediately after the morning church service, with an average attendance of between fifty and sixty, and a total yearly membership of about twice that number. Its library numbers about 600 volumes. Miss Mary W. Lane left by will a little more than $100 to replenish the library.

Music.

The church choir has been an harmonious one. Certainly this has been the case within the memory of living men, and previous to that time the records upon the subject are silent. The proverbial sensitiveness of singers has rarely, if ever, shown itself in bickerings and scramblings for the chief places. The chosen leaders of later years have been Ezekiel Thompson, Hubbard Williams, Philo Applin, E. F. Read, L. S. Lane, C. M. Lane and Harvey Sargeant. Geo. F. Lane, whom all have ever delighted to hear, was a member of the choir about fifty-five years. The long list of singing books that have been used is probably much the same as that used in other choirs. For many years previous to June 6, 1858, Watts' Psalms and Hymns, with a selection from other authors, was the principal hymn book used. At this date the "Congregational Hymn Book," by Elias Nason, was introduced and retained till 1880, when it gave place to "Spiritual Songs," containing both the hymns and music, by Charles S. Robinson. This book is still in use. The only early church records pertaining to music are these:—

May 4, 1797. "Voted that the pastor in the name and behalf of the Chh. the next Lord's day request the singers to assist the Chh. in singing after the celebration of the Lord's supper.

"Voted that the pastor, next Lord's day, after Divine service, propose to the Congregation a contribution to be had the next succeeding Sabbath for the purpose of raising money to purchase a bass viol for the use of the Congregational Society in Swanzev."

Church and Society Funds.

By the gifts and bequests of several individuals the church and society have a fund of $7,789, the income of which is to be applied to the support of Gospel preaching and other religious purposes. The contributors were Joseph Cross, $102.61; Nehemiah Cummings, $200.20; Zenas Ware, $34.61; Hannah Ware, $25.00; Enoch Cummings, $200.00; Hubbard Williams, $400.00; A. W. Bailey, $100.00; Elizabeth M. Williams, $50.00; J. D. Ware, $300.00; Sabrina Read, $6600.41; Malinda Sargent, $200.00; and about $100.00 was contributed by some person or persons previous to 1833 of which there is no definite record. From these funds $300 was applied towards the purchase of the parsonage and $550 was lost by the failure of the Ashuelot Savings Bank to pay in full its depositors.

Meeting-houses.

In addition to what has already been stated pertaining to locating and building a meeting-house, other votes were subsequently passed in regard to its construction. Taxes were voted, committees chosen, timbers prepared, etc., but for some reason the house was not built until the return of the inhabitants after having been driven away by the Indians. It is perhaps doubtful whether it was entirely completed before it was damaged by the hurricane in 1765, and the damages then caused were not wholly repaired till 1771. It was built on the rock or ledge just west of where Mr. George Carpenter now lives. It was 50 by 40 feet on the ground and 22 feet posts. A gallery was on three sides, a row of pews around the sides of the house, and back of the body seats; and likewise a row around in the gallery.

The "pew ground" was appraised and sold at auction, and each purchaser was required to build his own pew and finish up the walls adjacent to the same. This building was used as a church building and town house till about the year 1796, when a new building was erected by the town. There is no record when it was abandoned, taken down, or disposed of, but it probably stood and was used several years in the 19th century, as meetings were frequently warned to be held at the old meeting-house. The new structure was built where the present town-house now stands:—in fact it is the identical building remodeled. It was 45 by 62 feet on the ground, two sets of windows, one above the other; three doors, one each on the east, west and south sides; a porch at the east and west ends. The towering belfry and steeple with its lofty spire was at the west end. The huge gallery extended on three sides of the house, east, west and south, containing a row of pews next the walls and rows of long seats in front for the singers. The pulpit on the north side of the house—a large box with door to enclose the minister—was many feet above the floor; and above this on the wall were painted representations of seraphs or angelic beings. The floor was covered with rows of old-fashioned square pews, divided by broad aisles.

TOWN HOUSE, AND MT. CAESAR UNION LIBRARY, SWANZEY CENTRE.

FACING WEST,

The inside of the church was never painted. There was no bell in the belfry. For many years it contained no stove, fireplace, nor any other apparatus for heating, except foot-stoves and the like carried by the worshippers.

* In 1850 this building was remodeled into the present town-house. It was cut down in height, made a one story building; the porches, belfry, gallery, pulpit and pews were removed and the ante-rooms constructed as they now appear. For many years the use of this building was claimed in part both by the Congregational and Universalist societies. In 1836 the former society relinquished its claim and erected the brick meeting-house where it now stands. It was built by contract by Mr. Virgil Woodcock for about $2,000, and is 63 by 41 feet on the ground. In 1868 internal repairs were made costing about $600. The pulpit platform and gallery were lowered, the arms and railings of the slips were changed to those of the modern style, and the whole painted and grained. In 1884 the gallery was vacated by the singers and, at an expense of about $60, a platform was erected and suitably furnished for them in the southwest corner of the house at the right of the minister in the pulpit. Twenty-five dollars of this amount was contributed by Mrs. Lydia Griggs. In 1887 repairs were again made at an expense of more than $200. The audience and ante-rooms were mostly replastered, painted, etc. The pulpit desk was presented by Mrs. Julia A. Ware, the chairs and stand by Mrs. Mary A. Parker, the table by Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Fox, and the bible and hymn book for the pulpit, in 1869, by Mr. G. F. Lane, and the Sunday School organ by Mr. C. M. Lane. The gift of the silver cup by Rev. T. Harrington has already been noticed. Jan. 13, 1810, the house of William Wright, containing the sacramental vessels, was burned. A part of these vessels, including the cup, were saved, somewhat injured. This cup was repaired and has been in use until quite recently. The cups now in use were given by Mrs. J. A. Ware, and the baptismal basin in 1814 by Miss Hannah Ware.

In 1890 the chapel adjoining the church was built at an expense of about $1,100 raised by voluntary subscription. It contains a lecture room, ladies' parlor and kitchen.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Previous to the year 1800 the written history of the Baptist Church in Swanzev is very brief. What is now the Baptist Church was formed in the year 1792, composed of about twenty-five members, prominent among whom (as near as can be ascertained) were Arad Hall, Shubael Seaver, Wm. McCullor, Paddock Lawrence, Nathan Cross, Phineas Hamblet, Jotham Eames, Elisha Gunn, Nathaniel Hills and Jonathan Metcalf, residing in Keene, Winchester and Swanzev and called the Baptist Church of "Swanzev and Winchester."

The first meeting of the church, on record, was held at the "Corner School House," near where Benjamin C. Snow resides, on the 18th of April, 1800, and opened by prayer, but the names of the moderator and clerk do not appear on record. Sept. 14, 1801, the church met at the house of Shubael Seaver where Silas R. Marcy now resides; the meeting was opened by prayer, and Elder Nathaniel Bowles was chosen moderator.

Nov. 18, 1802. The church met for business and chose Bro. Enoch Stowell, moderator. Gave Brother Stowell a letter of license to improve his gift in Zion.

Oct. 13, 1803. The church united with the Leyden Baptist Association at Guilford, Mass.

Feb. 10, 1804. Benjamin Wilson conveyed to the church by deed of warranty, the south half of an acre of land which he bought of Salmon Richardson April 15, 1797, and which was a part of the "Old Mill Farm" formerly owned by James Heaton.

May 15, 1805. An annex to said land was conveyed to the church by deed of Richard Stratton, making in all about one acre.

In the year 1804 the meeting-house was erected, standing lengthwise north and south, thirty-six feet in width by sixty feet in length, with a porch on each end, a gallery on the two ends and a gallery on the east side—box pews on the floor and a line of pews on the walls in the rear of the gallery—the seats of the pews were hung with hinges and by custom were raised during the time of prayer, and the "Amen" was the signal for the falling of the seats, causing a clattering somewhat like that of heavy musketry.

June 20, 1804. The church became a body politic by an act of the legislature.

April 1, 1805. The church voted to raise $160 to pay for building the meeting-house, also to raise $150 by assessment, if necessary. Voted to hire Dea. Wm. McCullor to preach for one year for one hundred dollars, after which he preached during the years of 1806, 1807 and 1808.

Oct. 5, 1805. Deacon McCullor, Phineas Hamblet and Arad Hall represented the church to the Leyden Baptist Association in Massachusetts.

Dec. 14, 1805. At a meeting of the church to consider the subject of ordaining Dea. Wm. McCullor as a gospel minister, the following quaint phraseology of a vote occurs, copied verbatim :

“^{2^{ly}} Voted to Call on Deaⁿ McCullor to know whether he would Submit to ordanation deaⁿ MC. Cullar being Called upon after making Some Solemn observations and observing that as he had the matter for a considearabel time under serious considertion he should answer in the affirmative.”

Feb. 12, 1806. The church, by advice of council composed of the following elders and delegates, ordained Dea. Wm. McCullor to the work of the gospel ministry.

From Westmoreland—Elder Ebenezer Baily and Samuel Robbins.

From Templeton—Elder Elisha Andrews, Daniel Norcross and Samuel Symonds.

From Alstead—Elder Jeremiah Higbee, Oliver Shepherd and Moses Hale.

From Dublin—Elder Elijah Willard, Elias Hemmingway and William Banks.

From Richmond—Elder Nathaniel Bowles and Amos Gurnsey.

From Andover, Mass.—Samuel Manning and Joel Manning.

February 9, 1807. Nathaniel Hills died, aged 79 years.

April 30, 1809. Voted to release Dea. Arad Hall, at his request, as deacon and chose in his stead Bro. Nathan Cross.

May 21, 1809. The church voted to give Dea. Arad Hall a letter of license to improve his gift in preaching.

The church, at her request Oct. 26, 1809, was dismissed from the Leyden Baptist Association and united with the Dublin Baptist Association held at Greenfield, N. H., represented by Deacon Nathan Cross and Jonathan Bailey as delegates thereto, at which the name was changed from "Swanzey and Winchester," to "Swanzey" church.

May 10, 1810. Deacon Nathan Cross was chosen leader for all religious meetings for time indefinite.

June 6, 1810. Thomas Crisson united with the church by baptism, following which, June 13, 1810, Jonathan Bailey, also, and October 21, 1810, Joseph Hammond became members of the church by baptism.

January 3, 1812. Died Sister Lydia Crouch, wife of Amos Crouch, of Chesterfield, being the first recorded death in the church.

February — 1812. Granted a letter of dismission to brother Thomas Crisson. Membership of the church at this time was eighty-one.

April 2, 1812. Joseph Hammond was chosen deacon, and on April 13, 1812, was chosen church clerk.

November 4, 1812, Brother Levi Dunham was ordained as a gospel minister; Elder Joseph Elliot preached the sermon; Elder Charles Cummings made the consecrating prayer; Elijah Willard gave the charge to the candidate and Elder Joseph Elliot gave the hand of fellowship.

In the year 1814 the outside of the meeting-house was finished at the expense of about four hundred dollars.

September 9, 1816. At the request of Jonathan Metcalf and others, the church chose Elder Levi Dunham, Dea. Nathan Cross, Joseph Slate, Dea. Joseph Hammond and Jonathan Bailey to assist in forming a Baptist Church in Ash Swamp.

February 27, 1817. Received Elder Nathaniel Bowles and his wife, Thankful, by letter from the church in Bethlehem.

May, 1819. A letter of dismission was granted to Elder Levi Dunham to unite with the Baptist Church in Dummerston, Vt.

July 12, 1819. Elder Peter Rogers was received by letter from the church in Bernardston, Mass.

March 18, 1820. The church raised one hundred and fifty dollars to finish the inside of the meeting-house, and for that purpose chose Rufus Read, Benjamin Hammond and Jotham Eames.

Sept. 16, 1820. Bro. Jotham Eames was chosen clerk of the church.

January 23, 1823. The church voted to employ Dea. Tristan Aldrich to supply the pulpit for time indefinite.

June 12, 1823. Dea. Tristan Aldrich was ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, by the church, with the advice of council from the churches by their delegates from the towns following:

From Leverett—Dea. Isaac Woodbury and Nathan Ripley.

From Wendell—Elder Daniel Goddard and Dea. Elisha Osgood.

From New Salem—Elder Asa Niles, J. Hemmingway, S. Chamberlain and Dea. Farwell Thomas.

From Chesterfield—Elder Levi Dunham and Dea. Asa Thompson.

From Royalston—Elder Joseph M. Graves, James Kelton and James Forristall.

From Dublin—Elder Charles Cummings.

June 19, 1823. By advice of council, the church withdrew the hand of church fellowship from Elder Peter Rogers, Elder Nathaniel Bowles and about a dozen other members of the church for violation of church covenant and gave each a letter of exclusion; the withdrawal of the hand of fellowship publicly proclaimed in the pulpit.

The control of the meeting-house, obtained by the excluded members and other members of the society, obliged the church to worship many years, alternately, at a dwelling house where Darius E. Wright now resides and at the dwelling-house now owned by Marshall P. Rixford in Westport.

1832. The church voted to grant Brother Caleb Sawyer a license to improve his gift in preaching.

Feb. —, 1832. The church granted a letter of dismission to Elder Tristan Aldrich from the pastoral care of the church, and in 1833 renewed the license of Dea. Jonathan Bailey to preach the gospel.

March 16, 1835. The church employed Elder John Woodbury who was pastor two years when the church, at his request, granted him a letter of dismission.

Jan. 30, 1837. Employed Dea. Jonathan Bailey to preach for a time indefinite.

Aug. 1, 1837. The church employed Rev. Frederic Page.

March 5, 1838. Brother Caleb Sawyer was chosen church clerk.

March 24, 1839. Rev. Frederic Page made a public confession of a sin of which he was guilty and surrendered his ministerial credentials.

April 20, 1839. Rev. Charles Cummings from Marlboro became pastor of the church and labored about two years when he was followed by Rev. Henry Tonkin, May 1, 1841. He was succeeded by Rev. David P. French Jan. 3, 1842.

January 26, 1842. Died, Dea. Nathan Cross.

December 2, 1843. Died, Elder Nathaniel Bowles.

Aug. 11, 1843. Joseph Hammond, jr., was chosen church clerk.

Aug. 19, 1843. At the request of the Baptist Church in Nelson, the church sent Revs. David P. French and Tristan Aldrich and Dea. Joseph Hammond as delegates to sit in council with the view of ordaining Bro. Caleb Sawyer to the work of the gospel ministry.

In the year 1843 the church made extensive alterations in the meeting house by removing the box pews and placing slips therein.

Aug. 28, 1844. Died, Bro. Rufus Read.

December 5, 1844. Bro. Asa Withington received a license to preach.

Sept. 3, 1845. The membership of the church was 182.

Dec. 22, 1845. Died, Bro. Nathaniel Hills.

June 19, 1847. Rev. David G. Mason became successor to Rev. David P. French as pastor.

Oct. 4, 1849. Brethren Martin Thompson and John A. Hamblet were chosen deacons. Dea. Joseph Hammond and Dea. Jonathan Bailey being excused by their request from further official labor.

March 11, 1850. Died, Bro. Jotham Eames, jr., aged 56 years.

In the year 1851 the church purchased of John Stratton one-half of an acre of land bounded on the east by R. R. street, about eight rods and on the north about ten rods by Maple street, upon which was erected a parsonage, by a committee consisting of Martin Thompson, Solon W. Snow and Rev. David G. Mason, by funds largely raised by voluntary contribution by Rev. David G. Mason, who being a carpenter by trade, built the barn with some needful assistance, and after the completion of the parsonage, it was, occupied by him during the remainder of his pastorate when, in 1855, on account of failing health, he resigned the pastoral charge in the church and removed to Keene. Employed Rev. Tristan Aldrich for time indefinite. Aug. 31, 1856, Rev. Rufus Smith became his successor and pastor of the church until Feb. 19, 1859. At his request he was granted a letter of dismission and returned to the state of Vermont. Feb. 23, 1857, died, Dea. Jonathan Bailey, aged 68 yrs.

Dec. 11, 1859. Rev. James W. Searll began his ministerial labors. April 24, 1861, died, Dea. Joseph Hammond, aged 79 years. Died Dec. 19, 1863, Sister Sarah Draper of Chesterfield, aged 101 years, 5 months, 16 days.

April 30, 1863. Phineas A. Ware was chosen clerk of the church to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Joseph Hammond to Keene.

October 13, 1865. Ziba Ware was chosen deacon and successor to Dea. Martin Thompson.

December 1, 1868. Rev. D. S. Hawley, in the ministry, succeeded

Rev. James W. Searll, and by agreement between pastor and church his labors, Aug. 26, 1869, were to close three months after date.

September 9, 1869. A council of the church was called to consider and advise regarding certain grave charges relating to his domestic affairs, consisting of pastors and delegates from the following churches: Dublin, Keene, Troy, Fitzwilliam and East Jaffrey, who formed themselves into a council by choosing Rev. E. J. Emery, moderator, and Rev. A. V. Tilton, clerk.

January 6, 1870. The church, at a meeting held at their house of worship, in harmony with the advice of council and for reasons therein sufficiently stated and read before the meeting, voted unanimously, hereby, to declare as, in our judgment, unfit for the ministry and to exclude from our church fellowship our brother and late pastor Daniel S. Hawley.

CHARLES BALL, Moderator.

JOSEPH HAMMOND, Clerk.

February 5, 1870. Received by letter from the church in Troy, Rev. S. A. Blake who became minister and pastor.

Dec. 31, 1871. Died Rev. Tristan Aldrich, aged 89 years.

Feb., 1873. Rev. Enville J. Emery of East Jaffrey followed Rev. S. A. Blake in the ministry and in the same year April 26, the church chose Joseph Hammond, Phineas H. Snow and Obadiah Sprague a committee to remodel and repair the meeting-house which, when completed, was in June, 1874, dedicated to the worship of God in the usual form and manner, as it now is.

September 1, 1876. Died, Sister Betsey Aldrich, widow of Rev. Tristan Aldrich, deceased.

January 12, 1877. Membership of the church was 94.

January 11, 1879. Died Sister Calista Hamblet, aged 69, wife of Dea. John A. Hamblet.

Possibly, some individuals of future generations may be interested to know when and by whom the shade trees standing on the eastern arc, girting in part the enclosed ground on which the meeting-house stands, were set.

May, 1880. At the southeast entrance of the enclosure, at the right, stands:

No. 1, an elm tree, set by Joseph Hammond; No. 2, a rock maple tree, set by Joel Hammond; No. 3, an elm tree, set by Rev. Enville J. Emery; No. 4, a rock maple set by C. C. Brooks; No. 5, an elm tree set by Charles Ball; No. 6, a rock maple set by Mrs. Melissa Emery; No. 7, an elm tree set by Webster D. Derby; No. 8, a rock maple set by Abraham Hill; No. 9, an elm tree set by Mrs. Mary L. Wilson; No. 10, a rock maple set by Phinehas H. Snow; No. 11, a rock maple set by Solon W. Snow and stands at the right of the northeast entrance; No. 12, an elm tree set by Asa S. Kendall.

November 30, 1882. George W. Brooks was chosen clerk of the church.

May 29, 1883. Rev. S. G. Abbott of Hinsdale by invitation of the church to become their under Shepherd, accepted the same and entered upon his ministerial labor July 1, 1883.

Aug. 4, 1883. A letter of dismissal was granted to Rev. Enville J. Emery to unite with the church at Greenville, N. H.

Feb. 11, 1884. Died, sister Ardelia C. Hammond, aged 59, wife of Joseph Hammond.

January 21, 1885. Died, brother Joel Hammond, aged 73.

George W. Brooks, clerk of the church, died October 4, 1886. Joseph Hammond chosen clerk April 5, 1886.

In 1889, H. Denman Thompson, through his benevolence, donated and conveyed to the church about half an acre of land lying west of and adjoining the church land, being a portion of the "Old Tannery Lot," upon the condition that the church should remove the horse-sheds west to the west line of land thus conveyed by deed.

Early in 1890 the church sold their parsonage to H. Denman Thompson for $2000.

April, 1890. Joseph Hammond resigned the office of church clerk and Daniel Snow was chosen to fill the vacancy.

Rev. Stephen G. Abbott resigned the pastorate May 1, 1890, and removed to Keene. The church chose a committee consisting of Norris C. Carter, as contractor, and Ziba Ware, P. Atwood Ware, Daniel Snow and Solon W. Snow as advisory members, who during the season contracted and erected a new parsonage south of their house of worship.

The membership of the church at this date, Jan. 1, 1890, is eighty-five, eighteen of whom united with the church more than fifty years ago. Clarissa (Sawyer) Woodcock became a member December, 1824, and has retained her relation therein more than sixty-six years.

Kezia M. Eames united with the church Sept. 12, 1819, having been a member more than seventy-one years.

Rev. C. F. Clarke came here June, 1890, and is pastor at the present time.

Formation of the Sunday School connected with the Baptist Church in Swanzev.

When the Baptist Church in Swanzev worshipped in their parsonage which stood on the spot whereon now stands the residence of Darins E. Wright, Sunday School instruction in bible truths was deemed of so great importance to the rising generation and the growth and prosperity of the church that in 1827 a constitution was framed and adopted for their guide in action by the leading members of the church. No record of 1828.

HISTORY OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN SWANZEY.

Various attempts have been made by the early itinerant to establish Methodist preaching in Swanzev, but all efforts proved unavailing. About 1840 efforts were again made to establish preaching at Swanzev Factory and East Swanzev with but little success, although a class was formed at the latter place and connected with the Keene charge. In the fall and winter of 1860, religious services were held in the school-house at Westport by Rev. T. L. Fowler attended with some interest. In 1867, Mr. Fowler held Sunday service in Bartlett's Hall at Westport which was continued for three years, with so little success that it did not seem advisable to form a class, or take measures to organize a church, and preaching, at that time, was abandoned. In April, 1877, Mr. Fowler was employed to preach at West Swanzev and Westport on alternate Sundays in the Universalist meeting house, so generously tendered by the people of West Swanzev until the last Sunday in October after which the meetings were held in the school-house in Westport and the third service was held in the school-house in District No. 8 on Maple Hill.

As a result of these labors more than twenty persons made a profession of faith, and on the 19th day of September, 1877, a class was formed and on July 3, 1878, a church was formed in accordance with the usages of the M. E. church by the officiating pastor, composed of the following members: Alexander Cuthbert, Nelson R. Cuthbert, Lucy J. Smith, Lizzie Faulkner, Emma A. Faulkner, Israel H. Gunn, Lydia M. Gunn, Sarah Read, Anna L. Read, Sarah B. Stephenson, Mary L. Holbrook, Jennie M. Holbrook, Mary J. Holbrook, Fannie E. Holbrook, Emogene E. McClenning, Lucy C. Lakin, Nelson Collier and Susan Johnson.

The first report to the N. H. Annual Conference was submitted by Rev. T. L. Fowler April 9, 1879, at Plymouth, George J. Judkins, presiding elder. Statistics: number on probation, 12; members in full connection, 18; number of baptisms, 11; one Sunday School: teachers and officers, 8; scholars, 34. Mr. Fowler was appointed by the conference to supply for the ensuing year ending April 7, 1880.

During the year a good degree of interest was manifested, but no addition to the church. Sunday School numbered 40; average attendance 32.

During the year 1881 the church was without a pastor, but by a persevering effort of the members the Sunday School and social meetings were sustained. At some period in the year the Rev. George A. Tyrrell was secured as pastor, and was appointed the following year as supply.

During the year 1881 the church was equipped with a full board of officers and committees, and placed in good working order and was again supplied by Rev. George A. Tyrrell up to April, 1883. From Oct. 9, 1882 to May 25, 1885, there are no records to be found. From Sept. 20, 1885, Rev. S. C. Keeler of Keene held one service on Sunday for a time. The first quarterly conference ending April, 1887, reports the pulpit supplied by Rev. C. W. Dockerill and Rev. C. J. Chase on alternate Sundays. At this meeting Luman J. Crouch and Arthur B. Davison were appointed a committee to agitate the subject of building a chapel.

At the fourth quarterly conference held Oct. 8, 1886, voted to accept the report of the committee which was that the sum of $1232.70 had been raised and a chapel was erected and furnished: all this was done by a persevering effort on the part of pastor and people aided by friends of Westport and those who loved the prosperity of Zion leaving the little church free from debt. All this and more, it is reasonable to believe, might have been accomplished in 1880, had all the members been as zealous as they were in 1887. More money was then raised on subscription and as good feeling existed toward the little church then struggling for existence as when the chapel was built. The chapel was dedicated April 6, 1887, and supplied by Rev. C. W. Dockerill of Winchester with twenty members in full connection and five on probation. During the conference year ending April, 1889, the pulpit was supplied by Rev. William Woods of Winchester and ten members were received in full connection and four on probation. At the conference held Feb. 18, 1889, the preacher in charge reports that the chapel had been supplied with a bell by H. Denman Thompson, Esq., for which he was tendered a vote of thanks, while the church and people duly appreciate his generous gift as well as the clear mellow sound of the church-going bell to sacred service calling.

The conference year ending April, 1890, the pulpit was supplied by Rev. M. T. Cilley of Winchester. The Ladies' Society connected with the church felt the need of rooms annexed to the chapel in which to meet and serve them as a parlor, dining room and kitchen. Accordingly an addition to the chapel in the fall of 1889 was erected and completed in the spring at a cost of $314, and in less than one year they had money sufficient to pay all bills, leaving a surplus in the treasury.

Rev. M. T. Cilley was re-appointed to supply the pulpit the ensuing year ending April, 1891. There are at the present time thirty-seven members in full connection and three on probation; in all fifty-eight persons have been connected with the church. The cost of the chapel, parlor and furniture amounted to $1600. Through the generosity of S. Wilson Lawrence of Palmer, Mass., the church received a donation of $50 to be used for the benefit of the poor.

Report says that the late Nancy S. Howard left by will a legacy of $500 towards erecting a M. E. church in West Swanzey if built within ten years from her decease.

THE UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY.

Among the early settlers of this town there were those who religiously classed themselves as believers in the final restitution of all souls. In the cemetery at the Centre of the town is a granite monument with this inscription :

"Gaius Hills.
Died June 1, 1804.
Aged 31 years.

In life he was a Christian. He was the first in this town who died in the belief that all who die in Adam shall be made alive in Christ.

Priscilla Cummings,
Wife of Gaius Hills, died Feb. 3, 1815. Aged 41.

This monument is erected to their memory by their children, Luther, Clarissa and Albert."

We infer from this that, as a denomination, it dates its origin in Swanzey at about the beginning of the present century or a little before.

Hosea Ballou, the son of Elder Ballou of Richmond, after his conversion to Universalism, being a young man, was wont to hold meetings occasionally in school-houses in the south part of the town. After this Revs. Sebastian and Russell Streeter held frequent meetings in school-houses and barns. These brothers spent much of their youth in this town, their father's family residing on the east side of the road opposite the picnic grounds by Swanzey pond. The old house went to decay a score of years ago. Both these men became eminent ministers in their denomination. Following them Rev. Mr. Hudson of Massachusetts preached occasionally—one-fourth of the time or oftener—for several years. However, there was no organization till somewhere about 1836, when Rev. Joseph Barber was settled in town, preaching in the Old Meeting house at the Centre of the town, as did Mr. Hudson who preceded him. He was actively engaged in the temperance cause, and his earnest lectures on the subject produced a most salutary effect upon the community. He otherwise served the people most faithfully.

Upon his leaving town, his brother Rev. William N. Barber supplied his place for some time. Afterward Rev. James Bailey preached more or less.

When Mt. Cæsar Seminary was established in 1842, being in charge of Rev. L. J. Fletcher, he supplied the pulpit for several years, Rev. E. Davis preaching a portion of the time.

Mr. Fletcher was succeeded as principal of the seminary by Rev. J. S. Lee who preached for the society some two years. In 1853 Rev. S. H. M'Colleston took charge of the seminary, preaching every Sunday in the forenoon in the Assembly Room of the Seminary, and in the afternoon, at West Swanzey. This year the Universalist church edifice there was built and another society formed. During his ministry a church was organized at the Centre, consisting of thirty-three members, and the Parish numbered some fifty families, while at West Swanzey the Parish was still larger. A Sunday school was organized in each society, numbering more than sixty scholars. Mr. M'Colleston's ministry continued for five years when he was obliged to leave on account of his health.

For years these pulpits were not supplied with stated preaching. At length Rev. N. R. Wright was settled at West Swanzey.

The seminary at the centre of the town was now suspended and the Universalist meetings were held altogether at West Swanzey. On Mr. Wright's leaving, there were only occasional supplies till Rev. Emma E. Bailey revived the society and preached to it for two years. Miss Bailey was ordained here.

From 1883 to 1885 Rev. R. T. Polk, who was the settled Universalist minister at Marlboro, held meetings at East Swanzey in the afternoon of each Sunday.

Since Miss Bailey left there have been only occasional meetings at West Swanzey. Most of the former supporters of Universalism have either died or removed from town; still there are not a few who still incline to the faith.

The right to the use of the old meeting-house was claimed by both the Congregational and Universalist societies, and so far as is known this right was conceded each to the other; but the former society wishing for a place for continuous Sunday worship, in 1835 relinquished its claim and erected the brick edifice now in use. While there is no record that there was any attempt on the part of any denomination to infringe on the rights of others, or in any way injure them, it is a pleasant thought, that, in common with Christians everywhere there has been and is an increasing fraternal and Christ-like spirit manifested, a desire to work together and help instead of standing aloof and repelling each other.

THE early official records of the town pertaining to schools, school-houses and education in general are exceedingly fragmentary ; and even with the aid of tradition and other collateral helps, only an imperfect history can be written.

The first reference to the subject is the following in the warrant for a proprietors' meeting to be held on the 30th day of June, 1740.

"Art. 5. To choose a committee to hire a school dame to instruct our children in reading." It was voted at said meeting to dismiss the article.

"At a legal meeting of the Proprietors of Lower Ashuelot held by several adjournments on the twenty-ninth day of June, A. D. 1743, Voted to adjourn the meeting until the last Wednesday in July next at eight of the clock in the morning to meet at the school-house."

"At a meeting of Proprietors held the last Wednesday of September, 1743, at the house of Nathaniel Gunn, Timothy Brown, Eliakim King and Capt. Nathaniel Hammond were chosen a committee to finish the school-house forthwith so as to meet in."

It is probable that the words "to meet in" had reference to holding their religious meetings.

April 21, 1753, a meeting for the union of the churches in Keene and Swanzev was held at the school-house in Swanzev. This house probably stood on the school lot on Meeting-House hill, but when it was built, how long it remained, or of anything further pertaining to it, there is no record. It probably remained and was the only school-house in town, until after the Revolutionary war, and was emphatically a town house, used for both secular and religious purposes.

SCHOOL HOUSE, WEST SWANZEY, FACING EAST

March 5, 1771, the town "voted that the sum of eight pounds lawful money be granted and assigned to hire schooling."

Nov. 22. "Voted that there shall be a school kept this winter in four different places in town at different times, and that Thomas Applin, Joshua Graves, Lieut. Joseph Whitcomb, Capt. Joseph Hammond and Mr. William Carr be a committee to settle and appoint where the said school shall be kept this winter in such places as they shall judge most convenient for the inhabitants."

March 3, 1772. "Voted to raise twelve pounds lawful money to hire schooling."

"Voted, That the town be divided into five districts for keeping school this year."

"Voted, That Thomas Applin, Joshua Graves, Lieut. Jonathan Whitcomb, William Grimes, sen., and Thomas Cresson, jr., be a committee to divide the town into the several districts and make report to this meeting." The meeting was adjourned to May 2nd, at which time "Voted to accept the division of the town into five districts as presented to the town at this meeting by a committee appointed by the town. Voted, That each of the aforesaid districts shall have the money which they pay towards the school rate to pay for schooling in their districts as they shall agree among themselves, to lay out the same, provided they lay out the same within a year from this time for schools, and if not laid out within that time to be disposed of as the town shall think proper."

At an adjourned meeting June 1st, the committee reported as follows:—"We the subscribers being appointed a committee to divide the town into five districts for keeping school this year, having considered and consulted upon the affairs, are of the opinion that the following is a just and proper division as we can make, viz. :

That all between the East and South Branches shall belong to one division; all on the north side of the river and the upper end of the town street so far as to include Mr. Carpenter and Abner Graves shall belong to another division or district; and the south part of the town street, Mr. Benjamin Brown, Nathaniel Hills, Samuel Wright, Josiah Bramin, Elkanah Woodcock, Nathan Woodcock, Dr. Hammond, and Thomas Hammond to belong to another district; and all that part of the town which was taken off from Richmond (excepting Daniel Warner who belongs to the first-mentioned district) shall belong to another district; and all the town west of the aforementioned districts to belong to another division or district. Thomas Applin,

Joshua Graves, Jonathan Whitcomb, William Grimes, Thomas Cresson, jr., committee."

At an adjourned meeting, June 2, "Voted, That the above division of the town into districts for keeping a school be accepted."

June 1, 1773. "Voted to build two school-houses for the use of the town."

June 16. "Voted, That one school-house be built by the road as near David Belding's as a committee for building said houses shall think proper; and that the other be built as near the Pond Brook bridge on the north side of the brook as a committee as aforesaid shall think proper.

"Voted, That each of said houses be twenty foot square.

"Voted, That the aforesaid school-houses be built in sixteen months."

Dec. 29, 1773. "Voted, That a school shall be kept part of the time at David Belding's house, and part of the time at the house which was Dr. Nathaniel Hammond's."

"Voted, That such persons as live more than two miles from the place which the school is voted to be kept may have the privilege if they desire, of having the money which they pay to the school rate this year to lay out as they think proper with the approbation of the selectmen, provided they lay it out for schooling within a year from this time."

March 5, 1774. "Voted, That the former votes respecting stating the place for a school and building the school-houses be flung up and other measures come into.

"Voted, That the town be divided into six districts for keeping a school for the future, and that each district shall have the money that they pay to the school rate to lay out as they please, provided they lay it out for schooling within a year from the time the money is granted, but the school in each district shall be free for any person in the town to send their children to at any time.

"Voted, That Jonathan Hammond, Nathaniel Dickinson, Daniel Warner, Samuel Hills, Joseph Whitcomb and Samuel Wright be a committee to divide the town into these several districts and make report to this meeting."

March 31, 1774. "Voted to reconsider the former votes at this meeting in regard to schools. Voted to raise twenty pounds lawful money to provide schooling this year."

March 7, 1775. "Voted, That the town be divided into several districts for keeping a school for the future, as follows, viz. :—One district at the upper or north end of the town, including all on the north or northwest side of Ashuelot River as far down as to take Capt. Whitcomb's farm, and also on the other side of said river including Lieut. Joseph Whitcomb, John Frary, John Follett, jr., Jonathan Uran, Greenwood Carpenter, Wyat Gunn and Abner Graves; and up the town street so far as to take David Belding, and down the street so far as to take Deacon Hammond. And one district on the east side of the South Branch, including all between the South and East Branches."

The following-named petitioners resided in the southwest part of the town in what is now No. 8 and vicinity.

"We, the subscribers, living very remote from any district where we might be convenient with a school for our children, do humbly petition that the town would vote us off as a district and grant that the money which we pay towards maintaining a school in this town may be laid out for schooling in the said district as near the centre as may be with convenience.

Israel Day,	Samuel Thompson,
Joseph Day,	John Flemings,
Justus Lawrence,	Jonathan Day,
Samuel Ware,	Patrick Green,
Dennis Hafferon,	Mical Heffron."

At a legal meeting March 7, 1775, it was "Voted, That the above request be complied with during the town's pleasure."

At this meeting Samuel Page, Elijah Graves and Daniel Warner were chosen a committee "to bound out a district in the south part of the town and to state a place for a schoolhouse."

"Voted to raise 20 pounds for schooling."

Dec. 18, 1775. "Voted to apply the twenty pounds which was granted to hire schooling this year toward paying the province tax."

1776. "Voted not to raise any money for schooling."

Jan. 23, 1777. "It was voted that the town be divided into five districts for keeping school this present year, and a committee to make the division consisted of Samuel Page, Jonathan Hammond, David Belding, Henry Morse and William Grimes.

"Voted, That a school shall be kept in each district in proportion to the money assessed on them last year for schooling, and at such time or times and in such place or places, and by such master or masters, as the major part of such district shall agree to with the approbation of the selectmen."

March 4, 1777. At a legal meeting called at the meeting-house but adjourned to the school-house (probably because the latter was warmer and more comfortable), "Voted to raise forty pounds for schooling."

In 1778 fifty pounds were raised for the same purpose, and in 1779 one hundred pounds.

From the following petition from residents in the westerly part of the town we infer that the only school-house in town at that time was the one on Meeting-house hill.

"To the inhabitants of the town of Swanzev. Gentlemen—We the subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Swanzev, not being conveniently situated to attend school at the school-house, and being anxiously concerned for the education of our children, humbly request the favor of being formed into a school district by ourselves, with the liberty of building a school-house and appropriating our proportion of school money for the use and benefit of a school in said district.

Swanzev, March 1, 1779.

Clement Sumner, Joseph Whitcomb, Daniel Gunn, Benjamin Olcott, Levi Durant, William Hills, Thomas Greene, Abijah Whitcomb, Joseph Whitcomb, jr., John Frary, Joseph Rasey, John Follett, jr., William Carpenter, Benjamin Follett, John Pierce, Charles Grimes, Arthur Fairbanks, Samuel Heaton."

At a legal meeting of the inhabitants of Swanzev April 1, 1779, "Voted, That the above request be complied with during the town's pleasure."

1780. "Voted to raise six hundred pounds for schooling."

May 29, 1780. "Voted, That the setting up of schools in the town for the future be solely in the hands of the selectmen according to the directions of the law and likewise the disposal of all moneys raised for schooling, any vote of the town heretofore to the contrary notwithstanding."

In 1781, '82, '83, '84 and '85, "Voted not to raise any money for schooling."

"Voted to grant William Grimes, jr., 140 pounds for keeping school in the year 1775."

1785. "Voted to pay Sarah Woodcock twenty-two shillings for her services in schooling in the year past in this town."

"Voted to pay Daniel Bishop the sum of twenty-two shillings for boarding the said Sarah Woodcock when she kept school."

The foregoing are all the important records pertaining to school matters previous to the close of the Revolutionary war. It will be seen that our ancestors, while battling with forests, Indians and the mother country, and enduring the hardships incident to pioneer life, did not, and probably could not, give that attention to educational subjects which their descendants have done in more peaceful times and under more favorable circumstances.

Although previous to the close of the war votes had been passed for the formation of districts and the building of school-houses, yet it is probable that at this time only one school-house had been built—that on Meeting-house hill—and that the districts formed were only of temporary construction. Schools had been held in dwelling-houses in various parts of the town under the management of the selectmen and the supervision, perhaps, of the ministers who were well educated and adapted for the purpose. With the return of peace and the advent of more prosperous times, a degree of system and improvement in educational matters began to manifest itself, which has gradually grown and increased till the present time.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

In 1788 a committee, consisting of Samuel Hills, Joshua Graves, Daniel Warner, Dan Guild, Roger Thompson, William Grimes, James Heaton, Joseph Hammond, jr., and Joseph Cross, were instructed to divide the town into school districts. They reported as follows :

1. "First district to include Mr. Isaac Applin and all between said Applin and Marlborough line, and south of said Applin to Richmond line, and as far north as to take Amaziah Peck.

2. "To go as far south as to take John Starkey, and as far on Boston road as John Whitecomb's, and all on the southerly side of the Branch, and likewise Elijah Osgood and Amasa Aldrich.

3. "All northerly from Elijah Osgood's on the east side of the Branch as far north as Ebenezer Hills, excepting Levi Durant.

4. "All remaining on the east of the Branch to Keene line.

5. "On the west side of the river from Keene line as far south as to take Nehemiah Cummings.

6. "From Nehemiah Cummings bounding on the west side of the river as far south as to take Thomas Green.

7. "From Thomas Green's south bounding on the river to Winchester line, and all on Winchester road on the east side of the river, up the river northerly as far as to take Charles Grimes.

8. "From Samuel Hills, jr., southerly to take Josiah Prime, and as far south as Richmond line, and to adjoin the seventh district.

9. "From Samuel Hills, jr., westerly to go as far north as to take

Seth Gay and Aaron Parsons, and likewise to take George Hewes, Capt. Aldrich's farm now in possession of Aquilla Ramsdell; and from thence on Richmond line westerly till it comes to the eighth district.

10. "To take Mr. Nathan Woodcock and to take Charles How and Benjamin Brown, and then on the street as far north as to take Dan Guild's, and as far south on Boston Road as the Pond Brook.

11. "From Lt. Guild's on the town street northerly as far as David Belding's, including Esq. Frink, Mr. Wyat Gunn and Greenwood Carpenter.

12. "Beginning at Mr. William Carpenter's and taking all on Winchester road as far as Mr. John Pierce, including Capt. Joseph Whitecomb, jr., and Mr. Ephraim Cummings, Mr. James Grimes, James Green and the two Mr. Seavers."

This division is the basis of and corresponds largely with the modern numbering of districts, or with that of 1858, and previously, as laid down on the old Cheshire County map which was published that year. The variations are:—No. 1, which comprised the easterly part of the town, a portion of which has since been set off to Troy, and the remaining part of which is uninhabited and now embraced within the limits of No. 2. No. 11, as then described, is now that part of No. 5 which is on the east side of the Ashuelot river. No. 4 in the ancient numbering is now 1 and 4, the division having been made in 1817. In 1827 a committee decided on reuniting the same, but the records do not show that the reunion was ever accomplished. The ancient Nos. 7 and 12 probably embraced the modern Nos. 7, 11, 12 and 13. When the original change or division was made is not known, but probably soon after the beginning of the present century the old No. 11 was incorporated with No. 5, and the north part of No. 7 and the east part of No. 12 was changed to No. 11, leaving the extreme westerly section of the town as No. 12.

In 1827 District No. 11, embracing the territory on both sides of the Ashuelot river at West Swanzev was divided, making the river the division, and constituting No. 11 on the east side and No. 13 on the west side. In 1833 these districts were reunited and remained so till 1845 when they were again divided as before. They were again reunited in 1874 and have continued so since that time. In 1875 several families from No. 6 were by an act of the legislature annexed to the district, and the same year No. 12—"Hard Scrabble"—once a populous neighborhood, but now much reduced, was likewise joined to No. 11, by concurrent votes of the two districts. In 1885 the "district system," so called, was by law abolished, and the town system substituted for it.

SCHOOL-HOUSES.

It is probable that soon after the Revolutionary war, school-houses were built in the vicinity of those now standing in Nos. 5, 8 and 10, and about the beginning of the present century in most of the other districts in town. For many years schools were held in most of the districts in dwelling-houses. The first school-houses were generally small, low buildings plainly constructed with rows of long seats or benches on two sides, generally rising from the floor in the centre to the walls, a huge fire place at one end, and the teacher's chair or desk at the other end. They contained no apparatus, frequently not even a blackboard or map; in some cases there was no wood-shed or other out-building. They were generally crowded with scholars, some of the hill districts that are now nearly depopulated, having from forty to seventy each. This was occasioned in part by the large families of children then so common and their practice of attending school at an earlier age and continuing there till older than at present.

In later years these plain structures have gradually given place to those that are more inviting to the scholar, and attractive to the passer-by. The long, rough, unpainted, whittled seat and desk, with numerous inscriptions and hieroglyphics pencilled and pictured on them, have passed away and in their place we have the neat and finished single or double seat, and the trim and polished desk. Instead of the old fireplace are stove and the steam heater. Blackboards are in every school-room; nearly all have maps and charts; some have globes and other apparatus. In 1854 a set of Holbrook's common school apparatus was purchased for No. 2, which for several years did good service, and about the same time a like set was used in No. 10.

The first blackboard used in our schools was made by Capt. Ahaz Howard and introduced by Joseph Hammond, jr., teacher in district No. 6 about 1833. Mr. Hammond also first taught singing in the same school.

Of the nine school-houses now in use all but two, Nos. 1 and 5, have recreation or play rooms, with conveniences for warming for the comfort of the children; all are painted outside and inside except No. 1, which is of brick. All have blinds to the windows, and suitable wood rooms connected with the buildings. That in No. 1 was built in 1833; No. 2 in 1877; No. 4, 1850; No. 5, 1880; No. 7, 1870; No. 8, 1880; No. 9, 1877; No. 10, 1840, enlarged and remodelled, 1858, and again remodelled in 1883; No. 11, 1875; No. 12, "Hardserabble," 1821 and abandoned in 1875. The old school-house of a generation ago in No. 2, standing about one-fourth of a mile south of the present house, was abandoned in 1867, and a nice house built on the present site. This was burned in 1877, when the present two-story structure was erected. Its bell was donated by Geo. W. Oliver of Syracuse, N. Y. The house in No. 11, the largest in town, adapted for three or even four schools, was erected in 1875 and dedicated Nov. 12. The cost, including insurance was $5,843. It is 36 by 70 feet, two stories exclusive of basement, which is used for steam-heating purposes, storage of fuel, etc. The land on which it stands, a yard of about three-fourths of an acre, was a joint gift by Isaac Stratton, A. S. Kendall and O. Sprague.

For the purpose of equalizing taxation among the different districts, on changing from the "district" to the "town" system in 1886 the selectmen appraised the school-house property as follows:

No. 1,	$510.00	No. 7,	*715.00
" 2,	2,250.00	" 8,	615.00
" 3,	35.00		62.00
(money) 270.00	}	(water)	8.00
		(money)
No. 4,	258.00	No. 9,	540.00
" 5,	485.00	" 10,	702.00
" 6,	32.00	" 11,	4275.00
Total,		$1,0757.00

The school-house in No. 3 was abandoned in 1885, as being unsuitable for school purposes, and measures were adopted for building again on another location, but before the plans were executed, the town system came in vogue, and the scholars of the district have since attended at No. 2. The "money" in the district was that raised for rebuilding. The house in No. 6 also being somewhat dilapidated, on the advent of the present system it was decided to unite the school with No. 11.

SUPERVISION OF SCHOOLS.

The general management and supervision of the earlier schools were in the hands of the selectmen. In 1827 the legislature passed a law requiring the towns to choose, or the selectmen to appoint, both superintending and prudential committees. But previously to this time, in March, 1825, Farnum Fish, Henry Baxter and Luke Bennett were chosen a committee to inspect schools in the west part of the town, and Ephraim K. Frost, Daniel Wetherbee and Elijah Sawyer in the east part.

1826. Voted not to choose a superintending committee.

In 1827 the town was divided into two sections, and by-laws pertaining to schools were adopted. William Read, Samuel P. Applin and Reuben Porter were chosen a committee for the eastern section and Luke Bennett, Hiram Bennett and Clark Wilson for the western.

In 1828 it was "voted that the prudential committee be chosen by the respective districts."

1831. "Voted, That the prudential school committees be instructed in hiring teachers to bargain with them to teach 26 days for a month."

1833. Voted to dispense with committees visiting schools.

From 1827 to 1845 the town records fail to show the appointment of any superintending school committee; nevertheless, it is inferred that such appointments were made as there were sometimes articles in the town warrants "to hear the report of the superintending school committee."

1846. Voted that the selectmen take the statute for their guide in appointing superintending school committee; and D. P. French, Joseph Hammond, jr., and Benjamin Read were appointed.

1847. Jos. Hammond, jr., A. A. Ware and William Read were appointed.

1848. D. G. Mason and Jos. Hammond, jr., appointed for the west part of the town.

1849. Rev. E. Rockwood, W. Adams and Caleb Sawyer.

1850. Rev. D. G. Mason.

1851. Rev. E. Rockwood, D. G. Mason, W. Adams.

1852. Rev. E. Rockwood, W. Adams.

1853. A. A. Ware chosen by town, which has since been the method of electing.

1854. D. L. M. Comings.

1855. S. H. McCollester, D. L. M. Comings.

1856. D. L. M. Comings and A. A. Ware.

1857. A. A. Ware, S. H. McCollester.

1858 to 1862 inclusive, Dr. D. L. M. Comings.

In 1862, Dr. Comings, having enlisted as surgeon in the army, A. A. Ware was appointed to fill vacancy, and likewise chosen by town in 1863-4-5. In 1866 Dr. Geo. I. Cutler was chosen, and likewise every successive year till 1876, when A. A. Ware was chosen. In 1877 and '78 Dr. Cutler was again elected, and from that time till 1885 both Dr. Cutler and A. A. Ware were chosen, Dr. Cutler having the general supervision of the west part of the town and Mr. Ware of the east part.

In 1886, the district system having been superseded by the town system, and the office of both superintending and prudential committees having been abolished, and a board of education consisting of three persons substituted therefor, Dr. G. I. Cutler, A. A. Ware and Benjamin Read were elected the first members of the Board; Dr. Cutler being elected for three years, Mr. Ware for two and Mr. Read for one. Each one has since been reelected for three years, the time prescribed by law. In 1890 Rev. H. Woodward was elected.

Members of the school superintending committee are entitled to a reasonable compensation for their services. It was sometimes performed by the clergymen and others gratuitously. In 1830 the sum paid was $30.67; in 1831 it was $15.26. In 1846 Rev. D. P. French was paid $1.50, and William Read $2.50. For thirty years previous to 1886 the sum paid was about $50 per year whether the office was held by one or two persons. The Board of Education, performing the duties of both superintending and prudential committees have received some more than $100 per year.

For about thirteen years previous to abolishing the district plan the school money was divided by giving to each district twenty-five dollars, and of the remainder, one-half according to the valuation and the other half by the number of scholars.

In 1878, $400 was appropriated for a High School, and two terms were held, one in the fall of 1878 at the centre of the town taught by J. W. Cross, jr., and the other the following spring at West Swanzey, managed by D. W. Pike. The experiment was not entirely satisfactory and has not been repeated.

SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Very few of the citizens of Swanzey have ever made school teaching their principal vocation. It has been engaged in by many for a few months or years preparatory to entering upon some other business. Until within the last forty years the winter terms of school, of about ten weeks each, were generally taught by male teachers, and the summer terms of the same length by female teachers. It was quite common for teachers to "board around" among the different families of the district, the board being given for the purpose of lengthening the school. Since 1850 most of the schools, winter as well as summer, have been taught by female teachers. The wages paid for teaching is now more than double what it was forty or fifty years ago.

Among the earlier teachers in Swanzev are the names of William Grimes, Gains Cresson, Farnum Fish, Timothy Thompson, David Prince, Paul Wright, James Henry, Virgil Maxey, Samuel P. Applin, William Read, Joel Ware, Samuel Belding, Samuel Hills, Reuben Hills, Amos F. Fish, William Wright, Joel Eaton, Joseph Hammond, jr., Sarah Woodcock, Melinda Hale, Asenath Hills, Dolly Whitcomb, Prudence Lane, Susan Stanley, Arvilla Stanley, Mary Fish, Caroline Fish, Wealthy Belding, Chloe Holbrook, Eliza Parker, Prudence Hills, Malinda Read and Maria Aldrich.

TEXT-BOOKS.

Among the old text-books used were the old "Third Part" in reading, by Noah Webster, published in 1790; the "American Preeceptor" and "Columbian Orator," by Caleb Bingham published respectively in 1794 and 1797; the "English Reader" by Lindley Murray; the "American First Class Book" and "National Reader" by John Pierpont, and the "Easy Lessons" and "Sequel to Easy Lessons," by Joshua Leavitt; "The Scientific Class Book," "Webster's" and "Lee's" spelling books; "Pike's," "Adam's," "Colburn's" and "Emerson's" arithmetics; "Alexander's" and "Murray's" grammars.

In our primitive schools little attention was given to geography, and still less to grammar; the time of the pupils being devoted chiefly to reading, writing and arithmetic. There are those among our older citizens who claim that the scholars of those days left the public schools with a better practical knowledge for the ordinary duties of life than those of the present day with all our machinery and modern appliances which we praise so highly.

Notwithstanding the multiplicity of text-books in later years only three spellers have been used in our schools for more than sixty years: "Lee's," the "North American" and "Swinton's." The "North American" by Rev. L. W. Leonard, a citizen of our county, was in use nearly forty years. Adams written arithmetic (twice revised) by Daniel Adams, another resident of this county, was used without change nearly the whole of the first half of the present century. Since the exit of Adams', Burnham's, Greenleaf's, Robinson's and the Franklin's series have been used. Reading books have been oftener changed. Those of Pierpont were followed by Porter's Rhetorical, Russell and Goldsburys, Town's, Town and Holbrook's, Sargent's and the Franklin series.

The free text-book system by law came into operation in 1890. The old-fashioned evening spelling schools of one and two generations ago, were interesting if not profitable occasions. Though having no place in town records they are well remembered by our older citizens. The practice of "choosing sides" and "spelling down" and many of the incidents connected therewith were hugely enjoyed by the young people who wanted a "good time."

SCHOOL ASSOCIATIONS.

About the year 1855 a Town Common School Association was organized, which continued in successful operation for several years. Committees, teachers, scholars and friends of education generally combined their efforts and held weekly evening meetings during the winter months in most of the districts in town, at which gatherings there were discussions, lectures, essays, recitations, singing and such other exercises as were calculated to increase an interest in and promote the efficiency of the schools. The superintending school committee in his report of 1859 (the first printed by the town) says "The Town Association has been in successful operation during the past winter, adding greatly to the progress and elevation of the school system. We have, by agitating the most glaring evils in our schools, in those meetings, almost banished them from our midst, such as whispering, tardiness and getting excused from school duties on frivolous causes."

The Mt. Caesar Seminary and Swansey Academy was founded in 1843, and was largely under the control of the Universalist denomination. Suitable buildings for school and boarding purposes were erected, the former by a stock company, the shares of which were ten dollars each. It flourished for a few years, but the interest in its welfare soon waned, and it shared the fate of other similar institutions in Cheshire County, the high schools in the larger towns having to a great extent taken the place of the academies. The original trustees were Carter Whitcomb, David Parsons, Lyman Parker, Edward Goddard, Virgil A. Holbrook, Israel Applin, Leonard Whitcomb and John Stratton of Swansey; Jona. Robinson, Surry; Nicholas Cook, Richmond; Calvin May, Gilsum; Rev. J. Barber, Alstead; Rev. B. Smith, Stoddard; Rev. T. Barron, Winchester; Rev. E. Davis, Marlboro; Rev. Josiah Marvin, Westmoreland; Rev. S. Clark, Jaffrey; Thomas Little, Nelson; J. Stearns, Walpole; Mark Cook, Chesterfield; Ivah Newton, Hinsdale.

The school opened in September with Rev. L. J. Fletcher as principal and L. W. Blanchard, assistant. The next year, P. R. Kendall and competent teachers in music and drawing were added to the list. Among other instructors who succeeded these were H. A. Pratt, Rev.

J. S. Lee, F. A. March, A. M. Bennett, M. E. Wright, Rev. S. H. McCollester, L. F. Pierce and Burrill Porter. It ceased to be a denominational school several years before its final collapse. The seminary building is now owned by the Mt. Caesar Library Association, and the boarding house is now Butrick's hotel.

LIBRARIES.

In addition to the church and Sunday School libraries spoken of in Chapter V, there also have been libraries connected with neighborhood or branch Sunday Schools at East Swanzey, at Westport and in districts Nos. 1, 8 and 9. The books of these libraries were mostly of a religious character, suitable for Sunday reading and designed principally for children and youth.

In 1802 the "Swanzey Social Library" was chartered by the legislature. It contained standard works, biographical, historical, religious and miscellaneous. It is supposed to have flourished for many years, but the interest in it waning, the books were sold at auction in 1846. Amos Bailey was the last librarian.

In 1850 a village or district library, containing works similar to those last named, was formed at West Swanzey and about the same time another in district No. 9.

In 1873 a library of like nature was commenced at East Swanzey. All these were small and were sustained but a few years. The books of the E. Swanzey Library were purchased of the stockholders by Albert B. Read and given to the Mt. Caesar Union Library Association. This association projected and largely controlled by the ladies of the central and easterly parts of the town, adopted May 14, 1880, the following Constitution:

We, the undersigned, in accordance with Chapter 151 of the General Laws of New Hampshire, do form ourselves into a society to be known as the Mt. Caesar Union Library Association, whose object shall be the formation and perpetuation of a Public Library in Swanzey; for the purpose of promoting general intelligence, good morals and a pure literature among our citizens. We therefore agree to abide by the following regulations:

ARTICLE I. The officers of this Association shall consist of a President, two Vice Presidents, Secretary, Treasurer, Librarian, eight Directors and five Trustees, with the exception of the Librarian to be chosen in such manner as the society may direct.

The Trustees to consist of two gentlemen and three ladies, to hold their office one year, and the other officers six months, or until others may be chosen in their places.

ART. II. It shall be the duty of the Directors to devise ways and means for the purchase of books, to have in conjunction with the President, the general oversight of, and to make arrangements for all sociables, festivals and other public gatherings which may be had to raise funds for said Library; to direct how all money belonging to the society shall be deposited and used; and to make arrangements for the proper keeping of the books.

ART. III. It shall be the duty of the Trustees to have the general oversight of the Library; to carefully select and purchase the books; to examine all such as may be given to the society; to choose or elect a Librarian; and make all needed rules and regulations by which the Librarian is to be governed in the performance of her official duties; to personally examine the Library from time to time, and report its condition at each semi-annual meeting to the Directors, and make such suggestions as they think necessary; and to make and occasionally revise for the benefit of the society a well-arranged catalogue of the books.

ART. IV. No book shall be admitted to the Library without the concurrence of a majority of the Trustees; neither shall anything be received of a sectarian, political or immoral character.

ART. V. The Trustees shall at no time expend a greater sum than is in the treasury, and the sum may be limited by a vote of the President and Directors.

ART. VI. Each member of the Association shall be allowed to choose one book for the Library and if said selection be found to be in accordance with Art. IV, it shall be accepted and purchased.

ART. VII. No officer except the Librarian shall receive any compensation for his or her service; and the pay of the Librarian shall be determined by the Directors, subject to a vote of the society.

ART. VIII. Any person residing in School Districts, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9 and 10 shall, upon paying annually to the Treasurer or Librarian 25 cents, be a member of the Association and entitled to all the benefits of said Library.

Any person living outside said limits, if desiring to become a member of said Association, may upon application to the president or any director, and the president and directors by a majority vote shall admit such persons, subject to the same rules and regulations as other members.

ART. IX. No member shall be assessed for money to be used for any purpose whatever; and the directors shall limit the trustees to a sum less than that in the treasury.

ART. X. This Constitution may be altered or amended, or additions made to it, by a vote of two-thirds of the members present at any appointed meeting, provided the proposed change be submitted to the society in writing at least four weeks before action shall be taken upon the same.

Subsequent amendments to this constitution included school district No. 1 within the limits of the Association, and gave all school teachers within said limits while teaching, and all clergymen while stopping temporarily within said limits, the free use of the books. The words sectarian and political have been stricken from Art. iv, and all officers are to be chosen for one year instead of six months.

Since the formation of the Association it has been presided over by Mrs. R. H. Belding, Mrs. L. J. W. Carpenter, Mrs. K. R. Stanley, Mrs. J. W. Merrill, Mrs. Lucia Whitcomb, Mrs. A. G. Hills, Mrs. Clara M. Lane and Mrs. M. A. Haskell.

Continued prosperity has attended the efforts of its members. By means of voluntary donations, and a series of sociables, festivals and literary entertainments, funds have been raised for constant additions to the library. It now contains about 1000 volumes.

May 16, 1885, Mr. George Carpenter presented by deed of quitclaim to the Association the old Academy building subject to the following provisions:—"That it shall always remain where it now stands; that it shall never be sold or transferred under any circumstances whatever; that it shall never be used for a hotel or lodging house; that it shall never be used for the sale or use of any intoxicating liquors or drinks whatever; that it shall never be used for dancing, card playing, gambling or skating. It shall never be used for any immoral purpose whatever; but it shall always be kept for literary purposes and for the promotion of knowledge and intelligence among the inhabitants." The deed also gives, with certain limitations, the "Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle" now formed, or any other literary societies hereafter formed, also the "Ladies' Society" the use of the building; "and as long as the United States remain free and independent the boys in the neighborhood shall have the right unmolested, to ring the bell on each succeeding Fourth of July."

The gift was accepted by the Association and measures were promptly taken for remodelling and repairing the building adapting it to its designed purpose. Several of the former students of the Academy, and those that were once residents of Swanzey and now interested in her welfare, were invited to lend a helping hand in the enterprise. The cost of remodelling, etc., was about $1200 raised by voluntary contributions.

In October, 1886, the Association voted to take the hall in the third story of the building and convert it into an antiquarian room. Since that time a large number of relics, valuable for their antiquity and as mementos of the past, have been given by a multitude of donors, forming a collection already large and constantly increasing.

For "Stratton Free Library" see "George W. Stratton," Chap. X.

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle or People's College, is another agency in the interest of the education of the people, young and old, having its headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y. A branch of this institution, the "Ashuelot C. L. S. C.," was organized in this town in Oct., 1883. Its presidents have been A. A. Ware, Rev. B. Merrill and W. C. Belding; secretaries, Miss E. R. Bailey, Mrs. L. J. W. Carpenter and L. Lowell Belding. About 30 persons have availed themselves of its advantages, several having completed the prescribed four years' course. A similar organization, "The Crescent Circle," was formed in West Swanzev in 1887, with Dr. G. I. Cutler as president. Its secretaries have been Mrs. E. J. Cutler, Mrs. Mary Snow and Miss Cora B. Hubbard. Both circles have been prosperous.

Highways and Bridges.

BOSTON ROAD—EARLY LAYOUTS—SPECIMEN RECORD—SUNDRY ROADS, BUILT WHEN—OLD TURNPIKE—RATES OF TOLL—"CALIFORNIA" ROAD—"WILLIS" ROAD—BRIDGES, WHEN BUILT; COST OF CONSTRUCTION—HIGHWAY SURVEYORS—PRICES OF LABOR.

THE first highways of the town were little more than foot and bridle paths, gradually developed and adapted to the use of the rude vehicles of the early settlers.

June 11, 1735, the proprietors "Voted, That there be a man chosen to Joyn with the Committee Chosen by the Upper Township to look out a Convenient way to the Two Towns on the Ashawelot River. Voted that the man that shall be Chosen be allowed Ten shillings a Day for his Services in Looking Said way."

"Voted, That Mr. Jonathan Miles be the man to Joyn with the Committee of the Upper Township to Look out the way as above laid."

At a meeting held at the house of Ephraim Jones in Concord, March 31, 1736, "Voted, That Messrs. Nathaniel Mattoon of Northfield, Ephraim Jones of Concord, and James Houghton of Lancaster be a committee to lay out and clear a way through said township to Earlington" (Winchester).

Oct. 27, 1736. "Voted, That Mr. Jonathan Miles be allowed for his service in looking out and marking a way to Townshend the sum of twenty five pounds one shilling."

This road to Townshend was doubtless built about this time, and is what is referred to in later records as the "Boston road," extending from Upper to Lower Ashuelot, and through the southern and eastern parts of the town substantially where the old Troy Hill road now is; passing the J. W. Murphy farm, the old Clark place (now in Troy), which was for many years a hotel, through the western part of Troy, the entire length of Fitzwilliam, and through Winchendon to Townsend. It was built thus early for the reason that Massachusetts, then claiming a part of what is now New Hampshire and Vermont, had forts and settlements on the Connecticut river at Great Meadow (Westmoreland) and at No. 4 (Charlestown), and wished for avenues of communication to these places and the frontiers of Canada. During the Indian wars after this, the road was extended to Crown Point on Lake Champlain. The whole of it was a military road, built primarily for the transportation of munitions of war from settlement to settlement.

"At a meeting of the proprietors of the Lower Township on Ashuelot River being duly notified and met at the house of Capt. Nathaniel Hammond in said township Sept. 7, 1737, Voted To lay out a road four rods wide on the south side of William Carr's [Zina Taft's] lot to the South Branch."

At a meeting held Sept. 29, 1737, "Voted, That Messrs. Nathaniel Hammond, Samuel Hills and Charles Lumas be a committee to look out a way to the Intervale lots on the Great River, and also a way to the place where the saw mill is to be built (West Swanzev). The committee above named were requested to see that the roads are all cleared forthwith."

Dec. 28, 1738. "Voted, That the road to the saw-mill shall be four rods wide when it is cleared or near thereabout."

"Voted, That Messrs. Samuel Gunn, Thomas Cresson and Samuel Hills be a committee to treat with the proprietors of Upper Ashuelot and of Arlington to lay out a highway through this township from Upper Ashuelot to Arlington where it shall be agreed upon by a committee from each township;" and also "To lay out a highway four rods wide in the most convenient place to Hypponecho meadows."

Oct. 9, 1739. "Voted, That William Scott, Nathaniel Hammond and Andrew Gardner be a committee to lay out a highway to Pond Brook."

"Voted, That there shall be a highway laid out from the road down to the saw-mill down to Winchester, and that Benjamin Brown, William Grimes and John Evans be a committee to look out said highway."

March 16, 1740. "Voted to choose two Surveyors of hey waies. Voted and chose Abraham Graves and Samuel Hills for Surveyors of hey waies."

Sept. 29, 1742. "Voted and chose Capt. Nathaniel Hammond, Thomas Cresson and John Evans for a committee to lay out a hey waiey to accommodate the meadow lots on the Ashuelot River, South Branch and Pond Brook; mend the highways and bridges and secure the bridges what is necessary."

Highways were probably laid out and built, or cleared of trees, somewhat in accordance with the foregoing votes. The town street extending from where Mr. Charles Worcester now lives to Sylvander Stone's was laid out 4 rods in width and built in accordance with the plan on that facing page 46, making an angle on Meeting-house hill just west of the residence of Mr. George Carpenter; this was afterwards changed, the road being turned to the foot of the hill on the east nearly where it now is, and a part of it was made eight rods in width. That leading easterly to the South Branch intersected the main street at a point south of Zina Taft's, and extended easterly to the branch, crossing the stream, thence northerly through the meadows or at the easterly end of the meadow lots, to Keene, and southerly from the bridge to the intervale lots.

The road to Arlington doubtless struck off from the town street at the same point where it now turns off to West Swanzey, making four corners there and extended westerly and southwesterly, bearing up over the hill by the Greenleaf place, and continuing on east of West Swanzey village to the Hyponecho meadows and Arlington. The road to the mill intersected this road somewhere on the hill. Our fathers were not so much afraid of hills as their descendants now are.

Early in the history of the town a road was built from the David Parsons' place on the north side of Mt. Caesar to the settlement on the hill by the Greenleaf place, but this was discontinued in 1778. In 1770 a highway was laid out on the south side of Mt. Caesar extending from this same settlement on the hill to the town street where the brick church now stands, but probably was never built. In the same year a road was laid out from the south end of the town street where Sylvander Stone now lives to the north end of Swanzey pond, thence on the east side of the pond to its south end, thence westerly to Day hill, so called, where Marcus Bullard and Everett Holbrook now live. Parts of this road had been travelled many years before this layout. Leading from the present pond road by Charles Talbot's, north of his farm, there may now be seen two old roads with walls on either side leading towards the head of the pond; the more northerly of these is supposed to be a part of that last described.

The Ash Swamp road, so called, was laid out in 1772, and that in the south part of the town by C. H. Holbrook's, intersecting the Day hill road in 1778. The old road by Walter H. Perry's and the Curtis place to J. L. Starkey's was laid out in 1790, and the greater part of it was discontinued in 1839.

Between the years 1770 and 1785 not less than twenty-five roads were laid out by the selectmen.

The following may serve as specimens of the old lay-outs as recorded; the first being a highway east of East Swanzev village, and discontinued many years ago; the second being the road now leading by C. H. Holbrook's.

"A road laid out beginning at the spring upon the line between Mr. Read's and Mr. Peck's then west upon said Read's to a beech tree; then across a corner of said Peck's where it is now trod till it strikes Mr. Sherman's west where it is now trod to a red oak tree marked, west of the road leading from said Shermans to Mr. Thompson's north clearing; west to a white pine tree marked, near said Thompson's line; thence west with said line and on said Thompsons to the old road."

"SWANZEY, APRIL 30, 1778.

This day laid out a road in the southwesterly part of Swanzev, viz.: Beginning at the line of Moses B. Williams' lot, and proceeding northerly between Josiah and Joshua Prime's lots; then through Wyat Gunn's and Joshua Fleming's lots; then between James Heaton's lot and Amos Day's lot, out to the road leading to Benjamin Day's; the road to be two rods wide on the east side of the marked trees.

CALVIN FRINK	} Selectmen."
THOMAS HAMMOND

About the first lay-out described by courses and distances was in 1821.

There is no record of any road west of the river previous to 1770. The road from Chesterfield line by the Henry place to the intersection near Geo. O. Capron's was built in 1824; that from Tim Fitzgerald's north to Keene line in 1828.

That part of the highway from West Swanzev to Keene north of the intersection near Byron Porter's was built in 1833. Previous to that date the travel was by Sawyer's Crossing or by O. S. Eaton's. The "Rabbit Hollow" road, so called, was laid out in 1837. In 1838 the town voted to sell one rod in width on each side of the street through the middle of the town where it was 8 rods wide.

The "Branch Road and Bridge Corporation," or the old turnpike, as it was called, was chartered by the legislature in 1802 and built soon after. It is in the easterly part of the town by the side of the Cheshire railroad. Our older citizens remember the toll-gate by the bridge at the foot of Depot hill. Tolls were collected till 1842 when it was made a free road the town paying the corporation $2415.

The tolls were as follows: Sheep and hogs, one-half cent each; horses and cattle, one cent each; every horse and rider, or lead horse, seven cents; every sulky or chaise with one horse and two wheels, twelve and one-half cents; every chaise, coach, stage, wagon, phaeton, with two horses and four wheels, twenty-five cents; with four horses, thirty cents; for every other carriage of pleasure, the like sum according to the number of wheels and horses drawing the same; for each cart or carriage of burthen drawn by one beast, eight cents, for each wagon, cart or other carriage, or burthen, drawn by two beasts, twelve and one-half cents; if more than two beasts, seven and one-half cents for each additional pair of oxen or horses.

In 1846 the road commissioners laid the road from C. L. Lane's to the old turnpike by E. F. Lane's mill, giving a road nearly straight and level instead of the hilly and circuitous route previously travelled. Expense, including land damages, $1486.77.

In 1848 the selectmen, on petition of John Stratton, Oliver Capron and others laid out the "California" road, so called, extending from Michael Cantlin's, a little west of West Swanzy village, up the California brook to Chesterfield line, a distance of 579 rods; to be built when Chesterfield should lay out and build a road connecting with this and continuing up the valley intersecting with the Keene and Chesterfield highway.

During the following year, the town of Chesterfield, having taken no measures to build her part of the road the Court was petitioned to lay out the same which it did. Swanzy promptly built her part but Chesterfield, by building a substitute, was enabled to get her part discontinued, and it has never been built. The cost of the Swanzy part was $1254.75.

The road from G. F. Lane's to David Whitcomb's, called the "Willis road" was laid by the commissioners in 1855, and subsequently built by the town at an expense, including land damages, of $1569.36. The highway from William Ballou's up Hypponecho brook towards Lombard's mill was built in 1859.

Swanzy has always had a large number of bridges to build and maintain. There are three over the Ashuelot and five over the South Branch, besides many others over smaller streams. The three on the Ashuelot and two on the South Branch are covered bridges; that over the Branch by the town house is of iron. The first large bridges and those remembered by our older citizens were supported between the abutments by trestles.

The "Cresson" bridge by Sawyer's Crossing was built in 1771; the town voting to raise for the purpose fifty-three pounds, six shillings and eight pence. The present bridge was built in 1859, costing $1735.94. The West Swanzey bridge was built in 1774, twenty-nine pounds and fourteen shillings being voted for the purpose. The covered bridge was built in 1832 at an expense of $523.27, Zadoc Taft being the master workman. Repairs were made in 1859 costing $431.58, and again in 1888 on bridge and abutments to the amount of nearly $2000.

The records fail to tell us when the "Slate" bridge at Westport was first built. It was probably about the year 1800 or during the time of the missing records. In 1842 a section of this bridge, on which was Mr. William Wheelock and his team of four oxen fell into the river. The matter of damages was referred to Phinchas Handerson of Keene.

The existing bridge was built in 1862 at an expense of $1850.64. The bridge over the branch by the "Causeway" was constructed in 1779, and that at East Swanzey in 1789, fifteen pounds being raised for the purpose. The Iron bridge, east of the town house, was built in 1877.

The laying out, building and repairing of highways has ever been a subject of much interest to the people, and one on which there has been great diversity of opinion, especially as to the public need of new roads, and the best way of repairing old ones. The common method of repairing has been for each person to work out his own tax under the direction of surveyors appointed by the selectmen or chosen by the town. The number of highway surveyors has varied at different times from one to twenty. The town was formerly divided into nineteen districts, and a surveyor appointed for each. The selectmen or town fixed the prices of labor for men and teams, and for the use of implements employed on the roads. In 1780 the town "Voted to Grant 4000 Pounds for making and Repairing Highways; and to allow Thirty Dollars pr. Day pr. man from the first of April until the first of October, and Twenty Dollars pr. Day the Remainder of the year." In 1781 "Voted to Raise 7000 Pounds for making and Repairing Highways the present Year, and the Labour at the Roads be stated at Forty Dollars pr. Day pr. man until the first of October, and at 30 Dollars pr. Day for the Remainder of the year."

VOTES FOR GOVERNOR.

Under the Constitution of 1783, the chief magistrate of New Hampshire was styled President; and since the adoption of the Constitution of 1793 he has been called Governor. Although in the early days of the republic, party distinctions were little known, yet the politicians of those days are usually classed as belonging to the party with which they were subsequently allied. The general distinction of parties up to 1824 was Federal and Republican. At this time the Federal party ceased to exist, and for about ten years the political forces of the nation were known as Adams men or Jackson men, taking their names from their candidates for the presidential office. From 1834 to 1855 the rival parties were designated as Democratic and Whig; but in 1841 the Abolition or Free Soil party was organized, drawing voters from both the Whig and Democratic parties, but principally from the former. In 1855 the American or Know Nothing party suddenly appeared in New Hampshire, electing its Governor by the people, as it did the next year by the Legislature. Since 1856 the principal parties throughout the nation have been known as Republican and Democratic.

The following gives the votes in Swanzey for the principal candidates for the chief magistrate of New Hampshire. Those marked with a * were elected.

The political character of the town may be determined by its votes for Governor and Presidential Electors.

CHAPTER IX.

Swansey Industries.

INDUSTRIES OF WEST SWANSEY—FACTORY VILLAGE—EAST SWANSEY—WEST-PORT—SPRAGUEVILLE—SWANSEY CENTER—GRAVES' PLACE—WILCOX SHOP—LANE MILL—ON BRIDGE BROOK—OTHER MILLS—STORES—HOTELS—BRICK-MAKING—TANNERIES—PALM-LEAF HATS.

WHILE agriculture has always been the leading pursuit of the people in Swansey, the manufacturing interests, in some respects, have been hardly less important. The streams of water are well adapted to furnish the propelling power for machinery and the pine forests have always supplied abundant material for the manufacture of wooden ware.

This chapter is principally devoted to a detailed statement of manufacturing in the different localities in town.

WEST SWANSEY.

One of the first measures the proprietors of Lower Ashuelot took into consideration after the township had been organized was to have a saw-mill built at the Upper "Great Falls" at West Swansey. At a meeting of the proprietors held at Concord, Mass., March 16, 1736, the following vote was passed: "That two hundred acres of land adjoining to the Upper Great Falls in the Great River, to lay as convenient as may be to said falls, be laid out to Ephraim Jones his heirs and assigns at his or their cost, upon condition that he the said Ephraim Jones, his heirs or assigns shall build a good saw-mill at said falls on or before the 15th day of August next, and maintain it ten years at least, and to saw for and sell boards to the proprietors at the same price they generally are at other places. Said land to be laid out by the committee and surveyor which shall be chosen to lay out the next division of land, and to include said falls; reserving free liberty for the setting up a grist-mill at said place when the proprietors shall think it necessary. If he, the said Ephraim Jones, his heirs or assigns (who are to have the liberty before any other) shall decline it, and if at the end of said ten years or any time forward said Ephraim Jones, his heirs or assigns, shall neglect or refuse to keep up and maintain a saw-mill at said place, then the privilege conveyency for a saw-mill at said place to revert to the proprietors."

Mr. Jones built the saw-mill on the east side of the river, at the lower part of the falls. The dam was a number of rods below where the present one stands, and some part of the old structure can be seen at each bank of the river.

At a proprietors' meeting held the sixth day of November, 1738, the following votes were passed to encourage Mr. Jones to build a grist-mill near his saw-mill. "Voted to raise the sum of forty shillings on each right, or the sum of one hundred and twenty pounds for encouragement towards building a grist-mill upon the Great River near to where the saw-mill now stands in said township, to him or them that shall appear to enter into bonds to build the same, on or before the first day of Sept. next ensuing. Voted and chose three men to be a committee to agree with John Shepard who appears (in the name of Ephraim Jones of Concord) to enter into bonds to build a grist-mill as above mentioned.

Voted, That Samuel Gunn, Thomas Cresson and Benjamin Brown be a committee to give bonds to said John Shepard to pay him the money that was voted to be raised for encouragement towards building said grist-mill, and to take a bond of said John Shepard to oblige him to build said mills on or before the first day of September above said."

We have no knowledge how long it was before the mills were destroyed but probably they were burned in 1747 by the Indians at the same time they burned the buildings at the Center.

It is not known that any other buildings were erected at West Swanzey, besides the mills, before the township was abandoned. The fact that there is no evidence that the proprietors built a fort there for the protection of inhabitants, goes to show that none had established themselves there permanently. The laborers in the mills and such as had commenced to improve their land depended upon repairing to the forts at the Center for protection in case of danger.

Ephraim Jones, who built the first mills, never lived permanently in the township. Before the settlers commenced to rebuild where their buildings had been destroyed he had died, and his possessions reverted to the proprietors as he had not maintained his mills long enough to give his heirs a clear title.

After the abandonment of the township nearly thirteen years elapsed before successful efforts were made by the proprietors to rebuild the mills.

Joseph Whitecomb and his son Joseph had settled in the east part of Swanzev previous to 1760; probably they had obtained the right to the falls at West Swanzev previous to a meeting of the proprietors held March 4, 1760, to act upon the following article: "To see if they will grant to Capt. Joseph Whitecomb, and to any that shall join with him, four acres of land upon his or their own right for a mill yard."

The action of the proprietors upon the article was as follows: "Voted To Capt. Joseph Whitecomb and his partners four acres of land to lay out upon his or their right, on condition that he or they shall build a saw-mill within two or three years from this time."

The above grant may have been included in the land on each side of the falls, on the east side of which Capt. Joseph Whitecomb and his oldest son Joseph immediately erected a saw-mill and grist-mill.

Joseph Whitecomb, jr., was the most prominent business man at West Swanzev between the years 1760 and 1790. Previous to his removal to Grafton, Vt., he executed the following conveyances of his property at different times: To Joseph and Abigail Whitcomb all his interest in that part of the Mill Farm on the west side of Ashuelot river June 1, 1780; to Benjamin Wilson six and one-half acres of land on the east side of the river and one-half of the saw-mill thereon, March 1, 1785; to Otis Capron a piece of land on the east side of the river for erecting a fulling-mill with the privilege of taking water out of the grist-mill flume, March 1, 1786; to Abijah Whitecomb, one-half his grist-mill March 3, 1788; to his son Joseph Whitcomb, 3d, all the Mill Farm which he owned, March 23, 1789; to Philemon Whitcomb one acre of land upon which the forge stood and the water power connected with it Sept. 2, 1790. The forge was upon the west side of the river, and the deed was executed after Mr. Whitecomb had removed to Grafton, Vermont.

Capt. Joseph Whitecomb and his son Abijah were the first to build mills on the west side of the river. They commenced about 1771, and owned the property until 1790, when they sold to Philemon Whitcomb.

The operations of the Whitcombs at West Swanzev were confined a number of years to the four acres given them by the proprietors of the township, and to building mills on each side of the river.

One of the original proprietors of Lower Ashuelot was James Heaton of Wrentham, Mass. He did not settle in the township, but his son James Heaton, 2d, did. The senior James Heaton became the owner of the original Mill Farm after the proprietors had voted four acres of it to Capt. Joseph Whitcomb and his partners, and also of other lots of land adjoining the Mill Farm on the west side of the river, lying at the south and west of it. These lots and the original Mill Farm contained over four hundred acres and was known as the "Mill Farm," as had been the two hundred acres conveyed to Ephraim Jones conditionally.

James Heaton, 2d, died in the township Aug. 14, 1753, leaving four sons to whom he bequeathed the Mill Farm, which was ultimately all bought up by the Whitcombs.

Joseph Whitcomb, 1st, bought 200 acres on the west side of the river in Sept., 1770, and 33 acres in 1773. Joseph Whitcomb, 2nd, bought the 80 acres on the east side of the river in 1773. Abijah Whitcomb bought 100 acres June 10, 1773.

Otis Capron bought a plot of the Whitcombs for a fulling-mill on the east side of the river and the right to draw water from the flume of the grist-mill sufficient to operate the mill March 16, 1786. Mr. Capron, having erected a mill, sold it Dec. 11, 1789, to Richard Stratton.

Mr. Stratton carried on the cloth-dressing business down to the time he sold it to his son John, who continued the business by hiring an experienced journeyman and apprenticing his son Isaac to the business.

After Isaac reached his majority one-half the fulling-mill was conveyed to him and later the other half to his brother Alfred. About the year 1839 the brothers put a carding machine into their mill which for a time they operated in connection with cloth-dressing.

As early as 1842 cloth-dressing had been discontinued and making wooden ware commenced. At first, pails and sap-tubs were made, followed by changing the machinery for making covered buckets. To Isaac and Alfred Stratton belongs the credit of being the first persons to make covered buckets by machinery anywhere. They did not find encouraging sales for their ware. The trade had long been accustomed to hand-made goods; they closed up the business and sold the machinery. About 1848 wool carding was discontinued.

April 6, 1803, Benjamin Wilson sold his half of the saw-mill which he bought in 1785 to his son, John Wilson, who in August, 1807, sold it to Richard Stratton. John Stratton obtained this half of the saw-mill of his father. Philemon Whitcomb became the owner of his father's half of the old saw-mill and conveyed it to his son Abijah under date of Oct. 4, 1823. Samuel Stearns bought this half of the mill in 1827; Isaac Stratton bought Stearns' half and afterwards conveyed it to his father. After this conveyance John Stratton continued in possession of the property until he sold to the Stratton Mills Co. in 1866.

Probably Joseph Whitcomb and his son Abijah commenced to build a saw-mill on the west side of the river in 1770, and continued in possession of the property until 1790. At this time they owned a grist-mill on the same side of the river. Doubtless this grist-mill took the place of the one that was previously built on the east side.

In 1790, Philemon Whitcomb bought these mills of his father and his brother Abijah. He conveyed, June 4, 1819, three-fourths of the mills to his son Benjamin, and to his son Philemon, one-fourth, Oct. 3, 1823. Five days after Philemon Whitcomb, 2d, took a deed of one-fourth of the mills, he sold to his brother Benjamin.

Benjamin Whitcomb, 2d, became the owner of these mills and sold them July 30, 1853, to John Stratton, Alfred Stratton and John Stratton, jr.

One-half of the forge property which Philemon Whitcomb bought in 1789 of his brother Joseph he conveyed to his son Jotham in 1807; the other half was owned at one time by his daughter Damaris, Mrs. Frink. Nov. 19, 1821, Samuel Stearns bought of Jonathan Holbrook one-half of this property, and Jan. 13, 1824, Benjamin Whitcomb bought one-half of it of Philemon Whitcomb, 2d. It is presumed that Benjamin Whitcomb became ultimately the owner of the site upon which the forge was built, and the water power belonging to it.

In 1848 Alfred Stratton sold his half of the fulling-mill property to his brother John. In 1850 Isaac Stratton sold his half to his father and brother Alfred. Before 1850 the making of wooden ware and wool carding had been discontinued at this place, and Alfred and John Stratton, jr., were engaged here in the pelting business.

Isaac Stratton built a steam mill near the Baptist meeting-house in 1850 and sold it to Asa S. Kendall in 1867. Mr. Stratton used the mill mostly for manufacturing lumber, having a saw-mill and other fixtures necessary for such business. He had been engaged a few years previous to selling in hides.

Mr. Kendall made such changes and improvements as were necessary to enable him to do a large business at tanning and currying. He continued the business until 1882, and during these years employed a large number of hands.

For the purpose of carrying on the lumbering business, John Stratton, in 1849, took as a partner his son-in-law Amos F. Fish. Where the old saw-mill stood, they built a large shop to be used for a saw-mill and various other manufacturing purposes. Soon after the building was finished Elliot Hammond put in machinery for making doors, sash and blinds; George W. Alexander and Benjamin Marvin, machinery for manufacturing chair stock; E. F. Read, machinery for making boot forms. In a few years Alexander and Marvin discontinued manufacturing chair stock, and Alanson S. Whitcomb and Levi Cross leased the room and commenced making brush woods.

In 1852, Franklin Holman commenced making buckets in John Stratton's new mill. The next year E. F. Read entered into partnership with Holman for carrying on the same business. This partnership continued until 1855, when Holman sold to Read who continued the business alone.

In 1856, E. F. Read and Elliot W. Lane formed a partnership, and added manufacturing of pails to that of buckets. This partnership continued only a few months when Lane withdrew and Read continued alone until 1863, when he sold one-half of the business to Joseph L. Parker.

In 1865, Read and Parker dissolved their partnership and divided their business; Read took the bucket part of the business and Parker the pail part. Read sold the bucket business in 1867 to John Starkey and Oscar J. Howard; and Parker, at a later date, sold the pail business to Elisha Munsell, jr. Henry Abbott bought the bucket business of Starkey and Howard.

In the spring of 1873, a new company was formed for manufacturing wooden ware at West Swanzev, to be known as E. F. Read & Co. The partners were Stratton Mills Co., Charles L. Russell and E. F. Read. This company bought the pail business of Munsell and the bucket business of Abbott. At the expiration of three years Read sold his interest in the business to George E. Whitcomb and the firm name was changed to C. L. Russell and Co. In 1885 Russell & Whitcomb bought the interest of the Stratton Mills Co.

Russell & Whitcomb have had ample means, and have done a large and successful business. They have leased their mill of the West Swanzev Manf. Co. They have a large store house near the railroad. It takes about 2000 cords of pine saplings and a large quantity of hard wood timber to stock their mill annually. They employ forty hands.

Frank L. Snow built a steam mill in 1882 near the railroad, and commenced to manufacture lumber, and in 1882, Solon W. Snow & Sons began to make boxes in the mill. In 1883 the mill was burned and rebuilt in 1884. In 1884 Mr. Snow commenced to make pails in his mill ; he uses some 1500 cords of sapling pines a year for his pail business and employs twenty-five hands.

The grist-mill of Eames and Towne, the motive power of which is furnished from Snow's steam-mill, was built in 1884.

The first firm that made boxes at West Swanzey was John Stratton, 2d, Alfred Stratton and a Mr. Jaquith. They commenced the business about 1854 in the old fulling-mill building, which was owned at the time by John Stratton. The two brothers bought the building of their father in May, 1858, and sold it to Francis Morse, Daniel Snow, and Gilbert S. Howard Oct. 1, 1858, and also sold to them their box business. This firm continued until 1863, when Morse sold out to his partners, having been in company with the Strattons in the business some time before his partnership with Snow and Howard.

Since 1863 the following firms have carried on the box business at this place : Daniel Snow & Gilbert S. Howard ; Daniel Snow & Francis Morse ; Abner Thompson & Solon W. Snow ; Daniel Snow & Solon W. Snow ; Elisha Munsell & Frank L. Snow ; Obadiah Sprague & Solon W. Snow ; Obadiah Sprague & Orlow E. Parsons ; Orlow E. Parsons, George E. Whitecomb & Arthur H. Whitecomb. Fifteen hands are employed and 450 cords of timber used annually.

Since 1882 Solon W. Snow and his son E. H. Snow have been manufacturing boxes at Frank L. Snow's steam-mill. They employ seventeen hands and work up five hundred cords of pine timber annually.

After the Strattons bought the Whitecomb mill on the west side of the river in 1853 the old saw- and grist-mill was taken down and a large substantial building built at the same place. The lower part of the new mill was designed for a grist-mill and the upper part for manufacturing woollen goods. John Stratton, 2d, had the management of erecting the building and putting in a grist-mill which had a capacity for doing a large amount of milling. He formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Jotham W. Frink, for manufacturing woollen goods, the firm name being J. W. Frink & Co. This firm carried on the manufacturing a number of years previous to its sale to the Stratton Mills Co.

In 1866 Laton Martin, Obed G. Dort, John Bowker and Obadiah Sprague formed a copartnership for the purpose of purchasing all the mill and water power at West Swanzey, and for manufacturing woollen and cotton goods, lumber and wooden ware. John Stratton owned all the mills on each side of the river except the old fulling-mill, which was owned by Daniel Snow and Gilbert S. Howard. The company took deeds of all these mills Jan. 24, 1866, and also bought adjoining land of Abraham Stearns, and a blacksmith shop of Ira Hooper. The company adopted the name of Stratton Mills Co., and commenced business with a capital of forty thousand dollars. In 1868 a new mill was built of brick, seventy feet in length and thirty-five in breadth. The grist-mill was taken out about 1862. Building the new mill and taking out the grist-mill gave room for double the business that was had at the commencement. The old fulling-mill was rebuilt in 1876, and has been leased to different firms for making boxes. Firms engaged in making wooden ware have leased the mill since it was bought by the Stratton Mills Co. in 1866. Sprague and Martin bought Dort's interest.

March 16, 1887, the property of the Stratton Mills Co. was merged into a stock company and the name changed to West Swanzev Manufacturing Co. The capital of the stock company was made thirty-four thousand dollars, of which Ansel Dickinson of Winchester took fifteen thousand and was made president of the company.

Mr. Sprague has been the treasurer and manager of both companies, excepting some three years when he was building and operating the mills at Spragueville.

The goods that have been made have consisted of black and grey beaver cloth, cashmeretts and flannels. The company employ fifty hands.

The main buildings of the company are the woollen mill, 50 × 76 ft., three stories and basement; brick mill, 50 × 65 ft., two stories and basement; box shop, 50 × 50 ft., two stories; pail shop, 100 × 40 ft., two stories which was rebuilt in 1881 and a store house near the west end of the bridge.

The first store at West Swanzev was built in 1803 by Abraham Stearns where Mrs. Asa S. Kendall resides. In 1807 Mr. Stearns had as a partner in trade Abijah, his eldest son. In 1808 Asaph Stearns became a partner of his brother Abijah. Doubtless the senior Stearns carried on business here at a later date and had the assistance of his sons John, Abraham and Samuel. The last of the family that was in business here was Samuel Stearns and his brother-in-law Joel Eaton. Joseph Hammond, jr., carried on business in this store in 1850 and 1851.

John Stratton built a store about 1827 where the Universalist church now stands, and formed a partnership with Jonathan Whitcomb, 3rd, which continued about two years. Mr. Whitcomb was alone in business in 1829. The occupants during the years 1830-32 were Jonathan and Hiram Whitcomb. Everson Cook did business there from 1834 to 1838.

Mr. Cook built a store on the west side of the river in 1838, and occupied it until 1846. He connected a tailoring establishment with it and sold to Amos F. and Ezra T. Fish in 1846. They sold in 1849 to Jotham W. Frink who carried on business there until 1865. The subsequent occupants have been Paul F. Aldrich, jr., to 1871, and Salmon H. Fox to 1890.

Joseph Hammond, jr., built a store near the Baptist meeting-house in 1852 and was in business there until he sold it to Paul F. Aldrich, 3rd, in 1863, excepting the year 1857, when he leased it to D. G. Mason. Mr. Aldrich occupied the store until he sold it in 1865 to Joseph Ware, who after doing business about two years sold to Frank L. Snow, who, after being in business some three years exchanged it with A. S. Kendall for the old No. 11 school-house.

This building was moved by Mr. Snow to the east side of Railroad street and fitted up for a store in 1880. He continued in business until 1883, when he leased it to C. C. Brooks, later to J. L. Parker, and in 1885 sold to C. L. Russell and G. E. Whitcomb who sold to Salmon H. Fox in 1887.

The West Swanzey Manufacturing Co. fitted up a store in 1889 on the west side of the river, near the bridge which is now occupied by A. A. Emery for the sale of dry goods and groceries.

The house now owned by Mrs. Asa S. Kendall was built about 1810 by Abraham Stearns for a tavern, and was managed many years by him and his sons. John Grimes, 2nd, was in control of the property in 1825, and Silas Brewer in 1832; subsequent owners have been Josiah Woodward, Leonard Whitcomb, John Starkey and David Wilson. The last man that kept a public house here was a Mr. Richards.

Everson Cook and Joseph Hammond, jr., built the hotel on the west side of the river in 1840. Mr. Cook bought Hammond's interest in 1841 and managed the house until he sold to Amos F. and Ezra T. Fish in 1846. The following persons have been in possession of this hotel since it was bought by the Fish brothers: Francis Morse, 1847; Adoniram J. Aldrich, W. G. Owen, 1849; Moses Kinney, 1851; Samuel Mattoon, 1857; Albert G. Hill, 1860; Henry Starkey, jr., 1865; Homer Evans and family since the last date.

A FAMILY OF BLACKSMITHS.

Shubael Seaver, a blacksmith, bought lot No. 25 in the fourth range, Sept. 25, 1783. He settled upon this lot which was in the east part of West Swanzey. Of his descendants who have been blacksmiths are his sons Shubael, William Hyde and John ; his grandsons Shubael and Luman W., and his great-grandson Luman B.

Other blacksmiths at West Swanzev have been Zadock Taft, Lucius Taft, Moses Kenney, George Hamblet, Lorenzo R. Holbrook, Alfred Seaver, Ira Hooper, Amos H. Freeman and Frank O. Dodge. Dodge?

SWANZEY FACTORY VILLAGE.

The first mills in Swanzev, after the town was re-settled, were built at Swanzev Factory by David Belding, Joshua Graves, Elisha Scott and Abner Graves.

The proprietors of Keene encouraged the building of these mills by granting to the above-named men, May 29, 1759, as follows : "The liberty to turn the water of the stream known by the name of the East Branch, in the most convenient place for the use of a saw-mill and corn-mill, and shall have the liberty and privilege of said stream so much as to be sufficient to support said mills so long and upon these conditions hereafter named, viz. : That they will, in the space of two years time, build and fit a good saw-mill and corn-mill, and that the inhabitants and residents of the town of Keene shall have as good privileges both in sawing and grinding as the inhabitants of Swanzev —passable logs to be sawed for the value of the one-half of the boards from time to time and at all times ; and when the abovesaid gentlemen shall cease or neglect to keep mills there in good repair, to answer the necessity of this township for sawing and grinding, then said privilege to return to this propriety again."

The proprietors of Swanzev held a meeting at the meeting-house June 1, 1759, and, to encourage these men in the undertaking, voted to give them "fifty acres of land to be laid out to said undertakers so as to accommodate the mills they engage to build and keep in good repair for the space of ten years, to grind and saw as is the common custom at other mills, or otherwise the land to return to the proprietors again."

Abraham Graves, William Carr and Jonathan Hammond were chosen a committee to lay out the land. The layout was irregular in form, extending from Keene line southwesterly so as to include the entire privilege.

After the digging of the canal and the erection of the mills on the land thus conveyed, David Belding, on the 16th of September, 1761, conveyed one-fourth of the saw- and grist-mill to Joshua and Abner Graves ; later, having bought the fourth interest of Elisha Scott, they became sole proprietors of the mills, Feb. 28, 1765. In Feb. 16, 1767, Abner Graves sold his interest to David Griffith, who sold one-half of his right to William Griffith; Aug. 21, 1799, David Twitchell and Willard Aldrich purchased the half interest of Joshua Graves, and in October the same year, bought the other half of David and William Griffith. Later, Selah Sinead became an owner in said mills. Still later, Nathaniel Cummings, Aug. 22, 1805, became owner, and sold to Daniel Adams May 2, 1809; and Jan. 30, 1811, it came into possession of the Swanzev Factory Co. This company was chartered by the legislature June 16, 1810, with a capital of $40,000, for the purpose of "spinning cotton and woolen yarn or weaving the same into cloth."

The corporate members of the company were Samuel Dinsmore, Aquilla Ramsdell, Josiah Woodward, William C. Belding, John Thompson and associates.

At first only cotton yarn was made. At this time weaving cotton cloth by the power loom had not been successfully accomplished, and yarn was distributed among families to be woven with the hand-loom. Some years after the mill was built looms were put into it for weaving. William Ryder became a stockholder and a manager of the mill soon after it was built. It 1822 and later John Chamberlain had the management of it. Some of the men engaged in operating the mill at different times between 1830 and 1848, when the mill was burned, were Archer Campbell, 1832; George Oliver, 1835; Jarvis Bates and brothers, 1840; W. F. & A. P. Barnes, 1847-1848.

The saw-mill, with machinery for manufacturing pail stock, the grist-mill and the mechanical shop, while owned by the factory corporation, usually had a separate management from that of the factory. David Page was the occupant of the mechanical shop for a long time. Jonathan Martin was the chief miller from 1820 to the time of his death in 1832.

May 13, 1813, Jonathan Locke bought a water power of the proprietors of the cotton factory for a cloth-dressing establishment, and leased of them a piece of land upon which to erect the buildings. He built and carried on the business a number of years, when on account of some dissatisfaction he bought the property at what is now Spragueville and moved his building and machinery there.

After the cotton factory was burned, Abel Bowers of Leominster, Mass., bought, July 10, 1849, what was left of the corporation property, which consisted of a saw-mill, grist-mill, a shop and two dwelling houses, and which was in rather a dilapidated condition. The men who executed the deed were John Wood, A. & T. Hall, Levi Willard, Samuel Dinsmore, Aaron Appleton, John Elliot, Samuel Wood, Eliphalet Briggs, Samuel Cooper and Salma Hale.

Mr. Bowers engaged in making combs. He sold the shop and comb business Nov. 20, 1850, to Anson Low of Clinton, Mass., and the saw- and grist-mill, March 4, 1852, to Daniel Thompson and Elbridge G. Whitcomb of Keene.

After the mills were bought by Thompson and Whitcomb, they were for a time occupied by Alonzo and Benjamin Wilson.

Orren Dickinson bought the comb shop of Mr. Low, Nov. 5, 1851, and continued to own the plat during his life. He built a large substantial building where the comb shop stood, soon after making the purchase. He has used the building for a grist-mill and for a manufactory of doors, sash and blinds. In the grist-mill there has been done a large amount of milling, and in the shop a number of hands have been employed most of the time in manufacturing either doors, sash or blinds. Some of Mr. Dickinson's sons have been connected with him in the business a number of years past, and some of the time he has had Timothy Sherman also for a partner.

Daniel Thompson deeded his half of the saw- and grist-mill to Elbridge G. Whitcomb, May 23, 1853, and the next day Mr. Whitcomb deeded them to Lewis Carpenter and Benjamin Wilson. Sept. 14, 1853, Asa B. Clark bought the mills of Carpenter and Wilson and sold them to Carpenter Oct. 19, 1853.

While Mr. Carpenter owned the mills, they were burned and the site sold to Franklin Holman, Aug. 8, 1854.

Mr. Holman rebuilt where the mills had been burned and sold to Ephraim Murdock, June 27, 1856. There had been put into the building which Holman built, before he sold it, a saw-mill, a grist-mill with three sets of stones, machinery for manufacturing pail stock and pails. Soon after Mr. Murdock's purchase, the mill-stones were taken out and the making of pails was not continued here by Murdock.

Mr. Murdock's purchase included the site where the cotton factory stood, and he immediately built a shop here to be used for making pails exclusively, and using the old grist- and saw-mill place for manufacturing his pail stock. The making of pails here was continued by Mr. Murdock until a few years before his death, when he built a new shop on lower ground a few rods to the west, into which the pail machinery was placed, the old shop being used for painting and storing pails.

Mr. Murdock died in the spring of 1882, about twenty-six years from the time he bought here. During this time he seldom stopped his machinery unless it was to make necessary repairs, and the amount of goods manufactured was large. The men associated with him as partners or employed as foremen were William N. Nason, George W. Tenney, Joseph N. Foristall and Edwin Parks.

George W. Garfield bought of the Murdock estate the establishment in 1883 and sold it to Elisha Munsell in 1887. The amount of goods made by Mr. Garfield annually was much less than that made by Mr. Murdock.

Mr. Munsell has made such changes since he bought that a much larger amount of manufacturing can be done than was done by Murdock, but, in part, of different goods. The mill built by Murdock on the old factory site, has been moved and placed on the south end of the last one which Murdock built, and has been fitted up for making boxes. The machinery in what was the pail shop has been changed to machinery for making buckets and leased to George and Andrew Fuller. A room has been fitted up in the saw-mill building for making pails and has been leased to John P. Rust, who employs ten hands and uses 500 cords of timber a year.

H. J. Fowler is occupying the box shop. He employs fifteen hands and uses 700 cords of timber annually.

The most noted public house in Swanzev is in this village. It was known for a long time as the Underwood Tavern. It is probable that it was opened to the public by Joshua Graves, 2d, about the time the turnpike was built. Timothy Underwood, of Northboro', Mass., bought it of Graves in 1816 and sold it May 11, 1816, to his brother James Underwood, who owned it from this time until his death July 4, 1832. Subsequent owners or occupants have been Israel Brown, Daniel W. Kimball, 1840; George W. Holbrook, 1843; Franklin Goodnow, 1847; Lewis Carpenter, Robert Hamilton, Percy and Lampson, William I. Sawyer, 1859; Dana Fuller, 1872; George G. Bidwell, Henry T. Bidwell, Albert N. Howe and his heirs. Howe bought the stand in 1880 of Henry T. Bidwell.

The large house owned by Charles H. Forbush was a public house much of the time between 1800 and 1850. Jonathan Locke, Elisha Simonds, Israel Brown and others occupied it for this purpose.

EAST SWANZEY.

Oct. 25, 1763, John Whitecomb bought three lots in that part of Swanzev which was taken from Richmond. The lots were No. 32 in the third range, and Nos. 31 and 32 in the fourth range. Those in the fourth range were bounded on the west by the east line that bounded Swanzev as it was first laid out. Mr. Whitecomb established his homestead near the southwest corner of lot No. 31, on the spot where Henry Bowen's buildings now stand. All the mills in East Swanzev are on these Whitcomb lots.

The first dam on the South Branch was built by Mr. Whitcomb about 1780. It was located at the same place where that at Ramsdell's upper privilege now stands. Adjacent to it at the same period he built a saw-mill and a grist-mill. The mills were burned some years after this, and rebuilt by Mr. Whitcomb. In 1802 he conveyed them to his son Thomas, who, in 1803, sold them to Philo Sanford of Medway, Mass. Joel Mellen bought them in 1806 and retained possession of them till 1817, when he sold them to William Ryder and Phineas Stone. Ryder and Stone built a two-story mill and dug a canal for obtaining the water power. The mill was built where Ramsdell's now stands. The grist-mill was put into the lower part, and machinery for making cotton yarn into the upper part. In 1821 Mr. Ryder sold to Henry Cooper. After this sale the making of cotton yarn was discontinued. Mr. Cooper continued to own one-half of the mill nearly two years when he sold to Phineas Stone, Dec. 24, 1822. Mr. Stone, while he owned the mills, was engaged in manufacturing lumber for the market down the Connecticut river. April 18, 1825, Mr. Stone sold to Lyman and Roswell Parker.

The Parkers engaged quite extensively in manufacturing lumber for the Connecticut river trade. Into the room where cotton yarn had been made they put a carding machine. About 1829 the grist-mill building was burned and everything connected with it. The mill was immediately rebuilt but the business of wool carding was not resumed. In 1831 Lyman bought out his brother Roswell and owned the mills to March 14, 1840, when he sold to Benjamin Page and James Sibley Taft.

While Mr. Lyman Parker was the owner, he built, for manufacturing pail stock, a mill which was connected with the saw-mill. Messrs. Page and Taft built an addition to the grist-mill building.

After a short time Page obtained Taft's interest in the mills, and for several years various persons at different times had the management of the saw- and grist-mill. A Mr. Winzell made shoe pegs in the mill connected with the saw-mill, and Benjamin Read, for a few years, occupied a part of the grist-mill building for making boot forms. In 1847 C. G. Ramsdell was making chairs in the upper room of the grist-mill.

For some two years, including the year 1848, Martin Mason and Russell B. Hall had possession of the mills. During this time Elliot W. Lane and Moses D. Ballou commenced to make bailed boxes in the saw-mill shop. This business passed from Lane and Ballou to A. W. Banks, who continued the box business several years, after which, till 1859, he manufactured pail handles.

Soon after Mason and Hall's possession of the mills, Nathan Winch made a contract with Page to manufacture pails for him in the grist-mill building; and for obtaining the necessary room for the pail machinery the grist-mill was removed. Mr. Winch made pails here about three years, 1849-51. From the time that Winch gave up the business Benjamin Read had the management of the pail business until the mill was burned, April 26, 1855. During some of these years a small shop attached to the grist-mill building was occupied by A. W. Read for making various kinds of wooden ware.

After the fire in 1855 Page built what is now the west part of the mill owned by the Ramsdells. The principal business carried on previous to Mr. Page's death in January, 1859, was making clothes-pins by parties who hired the mill. These parties were Philo Applin and Daniel E. Woodward, Elkanah and Fred A. Lane and J. Mason Reed. Reed had been occupying the mill some two years at the time of Mr. Page's death.

June 30, 1859, Benjamin Read bought at auction all the mills and real estate which Mr. Page, at the time of his decease, owned in East Swanzev. He immediately conveyed the upper mill property to Alanson W. Banks and J. Mason Reed. During their ownership they manufactured pail handles, clothes-pins and chair stock. Sept. 20, 1866, they sold to Merrill C. Peavey. While Mr. Peavey owned the mill, Luther S. Lane, Elkanah Lane and Frederic A. Lane occupied a part of it for making wool mattresses, and Luther S. Lane a part for making pail handles.

After the purchase of Banks and Reed the saw-mill and the adjacent mill, not being much used, went to decay, and were washed away in the great freshet in September, 1869.

Nov. 9, 1871, Mr. Peavey sold to D. E. Woodward, who built the east part of the mill, run it several years, making pail stock and pails, and then conveyed it to E. Murdock, jr., of Winchendon, Mass.

After Mr. Murdock's death, the establishment was bought by J. M. Ramsdell in 1882. He has made different kinds of wooden ware, employs some twenty hands, and uses seven hundred cords of pine, hemlock and hard wood annually.

At the next mill-site down the river Elisha Whitcomb built a saw-mill and a mill for wool carding, about 1805. He died in 1814, and during the next twenty years the saw-mill was owned in various proportions and at different times by the heirs of Mr. Whitcomb, by Joel Mellen, Henry Cooper, Israel Applin, William Aldrich, Nathan Winch, Joseph Putney, Ezra Emerson and Ebenezer Howard.

Mr. Whitcomb and Mr. Cooper built an addition to the mill, into one part of which Mr. Whitcomb manufactured shingles, and into the other Mr. Cooper put a turning lathe.

For about twenty years after the death of Elisha Whitcomb the carding-mill was occupied by Joseph Whitcomb and was largely patronized by people from this and adjoining towns.

In 1821 Roswell Randall bought of the Whitcomb heirs some land on which he built a mill and carried on the business of custom cloth-dressing until he sold to Asahel Randall and Asahel Randall, 2d, in Nov., 1826. During the ownership by the Randalls the business was carried on some of the time by Calvin Bryant and after him by Nathaniel Poland.

The Randalls sold their mill to Benjamin Page in 1828. At this time Page was making flannels at the old homestead where Mrs. Alonzo Ballou now lives, with machinery propelled by hand. He moved the business to this mill and continued it some two years when he substituted for it the making of pails. These were the first pails made by machinery in Swanzev, and were nearly the first made anywhere. A few had been made at that time in South Keene, in Marlborough and Troy.

Mr. Page enlarged his mill, a part of the addition being used for a store; and in 1836 bought the adjoining mill, thus owning the entire privilege. In 1839 the mills, store and dwelling-house owned by Mr. Page were burned. A dwelling-house standing near the bridge, which he did not own, was also burned. The buildings burned formed a continuous line reaching from the bridge to the saw-mill. They were in good condition and made a creditable appearance. The main building was two stories high, had upon it a bell deck in which there was a bell. Mr. Page estimated his loss at seven thousand dollars, and he had no insurance.

He rebuilt the saw-mill and a small pail shop. Benjamin Read managed this mill most of the time till the death of Mr. Page. Levi M. Wellington made bailed boxes in the pail shop one or two years, about 1851.

Josiah M. Read bought this property in 1859 and sold it to C. G. and R. R. Ramsdell, Oct. 13, 1871. During these years Benjamin Read manufactured pails here, excepting the year 1868, when Harvey Sargent had the management of the pail business. After the Ramsdells bought the property, various kinds of wooden ware were made, until the mills were burned in February, 1883. They have not been rebuilt. The site is owned by James M. Ramsdell.

In August, 1831, Benjamin Page bought the land and water power of George Bucklin, where the pail shop of Wilder P. Clark stands. He immediately built a large pail shop here and fully equipped it for manufacturing pail stock and pails.

William and Samuel Tenney, Davis Wilson, Chester Lyman, Henry S. Applin and Benjamin Read made pails at this place for Mr. Page at different times.

Asa B. Clark bought the property in 1859 and manufactured pails till he sold to John S. Sargent in March, 1865. Mr. Sargent soon after sold to Jesse W. Murphy, Silas B. Partridge and Daniel E. Woodward, and, Jan. 11, 1866, Partridge conveyed his interest in the property to Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Murphy and Mr. Woodward continued the business till Mr. Woodward sold to Calvin Alexander in October, 1871, his third, and Mr. Murphy sold to Mr. Alexander at the same time one-sixth of his two-thirds.

Murphy and Alexander were in company from 1871 to Nov. 20, 1879, when Murphy sold to Alexander. During this time the old mill was burned and the present one built.

After Mr. Alexander became the owner of all the mill, his son-in-law, Herbert W. Mason, was associated with him in business several years. The property was sold to Wilder P. Clark of Winchendon, Mass., in September, 1884.

From that time to the present, Mr. Clark has been the owner, and the manufacturing business has been managed for him by Charles H. Applin. About 600 cords of pine timber are used annually and ten men employed.

In 1849 Nelson Howe of Fitzwilliam and his brother-in-law, G. G. Willis, of this town, built a large, substantial mill where that of G. F. Lane now stands. They made pails and wash-tubs. In 1853, Howe sold to Asa B. Clarke, another brother-in-law. Willis and Clarke were in company till Dec. 20, 1855, when Willis sold his interest to Clarke. The latter, in 1857, conveyed the property to Willis, who built an addition to the mill, added also the making of buckets, and for about ten years did a very flourishing business, making the best of goods, for which there was a ready market.

Oct. 5, 1868, Nathan Winch and George F. Bucklin bought the establishment and sold it to G. F. Lane, Oct. 20, 1869. In the spring of 1869 the mill was burned. Mr. Lane, soon after his purchase, rebuilt the main building now standing, and has at different times built the storehouse, the addition to the main building, and the connecting building. He with his son, C. M. Lane, as manager, employ twenty-five men and use annually about 1,200 cords of pine, 200 of hemlock and 100 of hard wood.

About 1831 Henry Cooper and Helon Holbrook built a store west of the bridge on the triangle between the three roads. Mr. Holbrook sold goods in it some six years. Subsequently it was occupied by Benjamin Page, and from 1842 to 1849 Benjamin Read did business here most of the time.

Mr. Read built the store east of the bridge in 1850 and occupied it till 1863, when Moses D. Ballou continued the business till the time of his death in November, 1865. Some parts of the years 1867-68 George Oliver was in business here. From 1873 to 1880 A. B. Read kept his stock of goods at this place. In 1883 Martin L. Lane bought the store and occupied it one or two years. From 1886 to 1888 George W. Willis was the owner and occupant. Willis sold to A. B. Read.

For a few years previous to 1873 a stock of goods was kept and sold by Murphy & Woodward and Murphy & Alexander in one of their dwelling-houses.

The store now occupied by A. B. Read was fitted up for him in 1881 by Alexander and Mason, and has been occupied by him since that time.

G. F. Lane's dwelling-house near the mill was built by G. G. Willis for a store, and a stock of goods was kept in it by him a number of years. Since Mr. Lane has owned it goods were sold from 1874 to 1878.

WESTPORT.

The Lower Falls, so-called, and the surrounding territory were laid out in 1774 to Capt. Samuel Brown and Moses Boardman Williams, it being a seventh division lot containing fifty acres.

The best record that has been found to indicate when mills were built on this site is the following vote of Swanzev, March 19, 1782.

"Voted, That the selectmen shall lay out a road from Richardson's mills to the great road that leads from Winchester to Swanzev in such place as they shall judge most convenient."

It is not known who built these mills, but from the fact that they were called Richardson's mills, and from the following conveyances, it is inferred they were built by John Richardson, Daniel Franklin and Abijah Brown. The descendants of Mr. Williams have no knowledge that he had anything to do in building the mills which makes it probable that he disposed of his right in the pitch before they were built. Capt. Samuel Brown, who made the pitch in connection with Mr. Williams, was the father of Abijah Brown, and lived in Paxton, Mass.

Abijah Brown sold one-half of a saw-mill and grist-mill Jan. 24, 1795, to Nicholas Trask and Daniel Franklin of Winchester; and John Richardson of Northfield sold one-half of a saw-mill and grist-mill to Moses Cadwell, June 16, 1795. Mr. Cadwell sold his half Dec. 5, 1796, to Mr. Trask.

Ephraim Taft of Winchester bought the mills of Mr. Trask Oct. 17, 1806, and sold them to David Wilson Dec. 22, 1815. Mr. Wilson sold to Jonathan Roberts and Ezra Emerson Oct. 18, 1817. Robert Emerson, a brother of Ezra, was connected with him in running the mills some six years.

Levi Willard was the financial backer of Roberts and Emerson and ultimately became the owner of the property which he sold to Clark Wilson May 20, 1826. A wool-carding mill was included with the saw- and grist-mill in the sale to Wilson. Wilson sold to John Chamberlain and Joshua Graves, jr., March 16, 1830. Chamberlain bought Graves' interest in the mills Apr. 24, 1830. The mills at this time consisted of a saw-mill, a grist-mill, a carding-mill and a shingle-mill. These mills were burnt Oct. 10, 1846, and owned by Chamberlain at the time.

In 1822, a Mr. Twitchell had a wheelwright shop south of the saw- and grist-mill. In 1827, Clark Wilson sold to Levi Willard the right to take water from his flume for operating a fulling-mill. The fulling-mill building was the same that had been the wheelwright shop. For a number of years Benjamin H. Carlton carried on cloth dressing in this mill. This was followed by the making of bobbins. The business was managed by Alva Keyes from 1836 to 1839. It was in this mill that Joseph Cummings, Mr. Eveleth and Franklin Holman commenced to make pails. After some two years Holman obtained the interest of Cummings and Eveleth in the business which he continued until the mill was burned in October, 1846.

Baxter Murdock built what was known as the belt saw-mill, the power for propelling which was obtained by running a belt to one of the other mills. John Chamberlain became the owner of this mill a few years before it was burned in 1846. Mr. Holman manufactured his pail stock in this mill.

Sylvanus Bartlett built a mill about 1842 south of the other mills. He immediately commenced to make shoe pegs in company with Abijah Woodward. One year before the mill was burned Bartlett made brush-woods in company with Alanson S. Whitcomb.

Oct. 10, 1846, all the mills in the village were burned.

The work of rebuilding was soon commenced and Chamberlain, Holman and Bartlett each built a mill. The one now standing is that which Chamberlain built. The others were burned Oct. 10, 1856, just ten years from the time of the previous fire.

During these ten years Holman manufactured pails and buckets, and Bartlett made pails, buckets and shoe pegs.

John Chamberlain sold his mill in 1856 to Sylvanus Bartlett and Jerome C. Fields. During the twenty-six years he had owned and operated it his principal business had been manufacturing lumber and grinding grain.

He had as associates in his business at different times Wetherbee Chamberlain, Alvah Holman, Moses Thayer, Jonas Temple, Alfred Spalding and Alanson Read.

A firm composed of Samuel E. Hartwell, Harvey Cooper and Elliot Hammond manufactured sash and doors in Chamberlain's old mill for a number of years before it was burned. Judson A. Read, Simeon Nelson and Alanson Read occupied a part of Chamberlain's new mill some years, including 1854, for making the same kind of goods.

Soon after Bartlett and Field bought the mill, machinery for making pails was put into it and Bartlett had the management of the pail business.

The owners of the mill who succeeded Bartlett and Field were Henry Holbrook, Stephen Faulkner, Marshall Rixford, Charles Foster, P. Atwood Ware, Ira W. Russell and Stephen Fay. They sold to James Marsh Dec. 5, 1865, and Marsh conveyed one-half the property to E. F. Read a few days after.

Marsh and Read manufactured pails and lumber till March 4, 1878, when Read sold his interest to his partner.

Since Marsh became the sole owner of the establishment he has annually made a large quantity of pails, employing now about fifty hands and using yearly some 1400 cords of sapling pines.

In the mill now owned by Marsh, William P. Coburn commenced to make boxes in 1863, continuing in business only a few years, when he sold to Henry Holbrook and George H. Jackson. Holbrook sold to J. Mason Reed in 1868, having previously bought Jackson's interest in the same. Reed removed the business to Keene in 1881.

Jerome C. Field built his steam-mill in 1881. It has been used for manufacturing pails, buckets and lumber. It has a capacity sufficient to work up 1000 cords of timber annually and give employment to twenty-five men.

STORES.

The first person known to have sold goods in Westport was Calvin Field in 1820. They were sold at his house which stood where Willard Field now resides. Mr. Field built a store where Sylvanus Bartlett now lives which was occupied several years previous to 1830 by Reuben Porter and Samuel Belding, jr.; from 1831 to 1834 by Caleb Sawyer, and from 1836 to 1842 by Mr. Bartlett.

Elisha Osgood opened a store on the south side of the road in the lower part of the village as early as 1826. He died in 1827, and his widow and Ezekiel his oldest son continued in trade one or two years. Mr. Bartlett bought this store in 1842 and carried on business there the next fifteen years. Jotham W. Frink was a partner in 1844 and '45. Benjamin L. Draper carried on business a few years after Mr. Bartlett, and then John Chamberlain some six years previous to 1867.

Mr. Bartlett fitted up a new store on the hill on the east side of the road, where he sold goods from 1857 to 1865. He was followed by Henry Abbott who remained till 1867, when he was succeeded by James Marsh and E. F. Read. They in turn after a few years gave place to Marsh and George W. Brooks. In 1879 Mr. Marsh built a new store which he has since occupied, a part of the time with Mr. Brooks, and later with one of his sons.

J. C. Field fitted up a store in the north part of the village in 1878, in which he did business several years.

Barnabas C. Peters established the tailoring business in the village about 1823, and continued it many years. He was succeeded in the same business by H. B. Murdock. From 1844 to 1847, S. Bartlett was likewise engaged in tailoring.

HOTELS.

B. C. Peters kept a popular hotel many years. It was in the lower part of the village on the south side of the road. He was followed by Jonathan Whitcomb, 3d, and Mr. Whitcomb by Elijah and Seth Willard.

Previous to 1826 Otis Cross kept a public house where Bartlett's lower store afterwards stood. The successors of Mr. Cross were Elisha Osgood in 1826; widow E. Osgood, 1827; Reuben Porter, 1828; Paul S. Wright, 1829; Wright and Horatio Black in 1830. Calvin Greenleaf kept the house at one time, and after him Norris Wheeler.

Yours truly
O. Sprague

BLACKSMITHS.

Aaron Lombard was a blacksmith here from 1822 to 1841; Alva Keyes from 1843 to 1851; Charles Kezer from 1854 to 1861. Since then there have been Luman Seaver, Orren Fowler, Albert French and others.

STONE QUARRYING.

Considerable business has been done in quarrying stone on Franklin mountain during the last thirty years by different parties. Jerome C. Field has been engaged much of the time in this business.

SPRAGUEVILLE.

Abijah Whitecomb sold to Philemon Whitcomb, Jan. 11, 1806, one-half the water privilege near Ezekiel Page's, for building a saw-mill which was probably soon erected. About 1824 Jonathan Locke bought the premises and moved on to them his buildings and cloth dressing machines from Swanzev Factory. Soon after this removal, by a break in the dam, the works were nearly demolished, except the old saw-mill which stood on the south bank of the stream. Dr. Ephraim K. Frost was involved with Mr. Locke in the loss and became the owner of what was left after the disaster. The saw-mill was run some years and then went to decay.

Aaron Wilson, backed by Gen. James Wilson of Keene, made the dam safe and substantial, and in 1846, obtained an act of incorporation to facilitate the formation of a company to engage extensively in manufacturing. This effort was not successful.

About 1853, David R. Marshall leased water power, built a small mill where the old saw-mill stood, and for twelve years manufactured successfully pail, tub and bucket stock.

After this the privilege remained unused till 1877, when it was purchased of the Wilson family by Obadiah Sprague, who immediately repaired the dam, built flumes and, in 1879, erected two large mills, two and three stories in height above the basements, one for the manufacture of woollen goods and the other wooden ware. After successfully operating them about eighteen months, employing some ninety hands, Mr. Sprague leased the woollen mill to Logan and Lindsey of Worcester, Mass. Instead of making heavers as Sprague had done, they manufactured satinets, producing about 1,500 yards per day.

After running it about nine months, the mills were both burned Jan. 16, 1882. The wooden-ware mill was at once rebuilt 50 x 80 feet, three stories and basement. It has since been occupied by the Cheshire Box Co. (O. Sprague, Charles L. Howes and James L. Wright), manufacturing boxes of all kinds, extension tables, etc., employing about 25 men, and using 700 cords of pine and 200 of hard wood annually.

In connection with the mills, Mr. Sprague erected three dwelling houses and a large boarding house.

SWANZEY CENTRE.

About 1836, Virgil Woodcock was taking contracts to build meeting houses and other large structures in this and neighboring towns. To prepare a portion of the building material, he erected a large steam shop south of J. A. Rand's present residence. His enterprise was not successful, and the large business which he followed for some years was discontinued, his shop being converted into the dwelling houses now owned by Mrs. E. Howes and Mrs. H. Chamberlain.

Mr. Woodcock went to California soon after gold was discovered, remained there a few years, returned with considerable capital, and, in company with Phineas Stone, Sylvander Stone and Giles Taft erected a large steam-mill where that of M. C. Stone's now stands. Before much progress had been made in building, Messrs. S. Stone and Taft sold their interest in the concern to the other partners. A considerable amount had been contributed by people in the vicinity to encourage the undertaking. A saw-mill, grist-mill, pail works and machinery for manufacturing chair stock were put in the building, and for several years it was one of the busiest places in Swanzev. The different branches of business were carried on by Woodcock and Stone except the making of pails which was done by Luther S. Lane and J. L. Parker. The capital of the firm being insufficient to run the business they had the assistance, during some of the last years that the mill was in operation, of Paul F. Aldrich and David Parsons, who were its principal managers. The enterprise did not prove to be a financial success. The mill was sold about 1864 to Osborne and Hale, of Keene, taken down, carried to South Keene and set up there, about ten years from the time it was built.

On the same spot, by the side of the old historic moat, Marcus C. Stone, in 1888, erected a smaller saw- and stave-mill, in which he is doing a good business.

GRAVES' PLACE.

It is supposed that Elijah Graves commenced to dig the canal at the Graves' place, on the South Branch, as early as 1801. He sold, Sept. 10, 1802, one-half the land and water power to Philemon Whitcomb for a saw-mill which was doubtless soon built. After several transfers of the Whitcomb part, Mr. Graves ultimately became the owner of the whole which he sold to his son Ezekiel.

Ira Taft, who married a sister of Ezekiel Graves, built an addition on the west end of the saw-mill for a shingle-mill. Abel W. Read became the owner of this shingle-mill after Taft. He made shingles and other kinds of wooden ware.

George F. Lane bought the saw-mill Dec. 5, 1842, and at a later date became the owner of the shingle-mill building. He commenced to make buckets in 1856, and was burnt out in 1861. He immediately rebuilt a much larger and more convenient mill. This mill was burned March 3, 1873. Mr. Lane then built the substantial mill now standing, and the stone flume at the mill.

Elisha F. Lane became the owner of this mill, June 10, 1878. He made substantial improvements; built the stone dam at the head of the canal and enlarged the canal by raising the embankment. Mr. Lane sold the mill to George E. and Andrew J. Fuller, near the last of 1890. During the time he owned the mill, his son Hubert E. was connected with him, manufacturing buckets and had the principal management of the business.

The Fuller brothers manufacture buckets, use 500 cords timber and employ ten men.

A public house was kept by the Graves's in the house near the mill.

WILCOX SHOP.

The Wilcox shop, the next down the stream, was built in 1859 by Elisha F. Lane, Stilman A. Bigelow and John A. Batchelder. Before the close of the year, Lane sold his interest to Bigelow and Batchelder, and in 1860, Bigelow bought out Batchelder. These firms manufactured chair stock.

Edward Wilcox bought the shop in 1861. From this time to 1874 he manufactured clothes pins, bucket hoops and chair stock. Since 1874 he has made packing boxes, bucket hoops, chair stock and pail stock. He recently put in a saw-mill and manufactures lumber to some extent. His son, Allen C. Wilcox, has been associated with his father for some years past in the business. They employ some six hands and require about 300 cords of timber annually for their business.

LANE MILL.

The third mill down the South Branch in Swanzev, about a mile from East Swanzev, was built in 1858 by Elkanah and Frederick A.

Lane. It was a well constructed two-story building, in which was placed a grist-mill and machinery for making pail stock and pails, which were used till 1864. At this date, the Lanes with D. H. Dickinson and J. Herbert Smith formed a copartnership for manufacturing horse blankets. They continued in this business till 1870, when the mill was burned. A portion of this time, Messrs. Blanding and Hill were partners in the business.

A company of which Luther S. Lane, E. and F. A. Lane and Ephraim Kendall were partners, made wool mattresses at this place a number of years after the fire; machinery for preparing the material being used in a building that escaped the fire. The company transferred this business to Cleveland, Ohio.

INDUSTRIES UPON BRIDGE BROOK.

Some years before the Revolutionary War, Timothy Bishop was located upon the old Swanzev and Boston road, a little west of the line that now divides Swanzev and Troy. Here he had a farm, made potash and probably sold goods. On the Bridge Brook, about a mile above the East Swanzev and Richmond road, he had a foundry in which were cast necessary household utensils. A large hewed stick of timber across the bed of the brook marks the place where the foundry stood.

Just above the East Swanzev and Richmond road, Josiah Wilson built a shop about 1840, for making window sash.

Nathan Whitecomb at one time and Jesse Thompson at another were subsequent owners of this property.

Above where Mr. Wilson built his shop, Samuel S. Farris built a mill about 1866 for manufacturing wooden ware stock. Mr. Farris died in 1878, and the mill was subsequently bought by Elkanah Lane. Mr. Lane used it only a few years, since which nothing has been done in it.

C. G. and R. R. Ramsdell built a mill in 1856, below the road, for manufacturing wooden ware. They followed the business here about fifteen years. The mill has gone to decay.

Zadock L. Taft and his son Farris, built a mill on the East Richmond Brook near the house of Frank E. Ballou. They owned it in 1843, and used it a number of years for doing various mechanical work. Mr. Farris Taft died in 1854, after which the mill was bought by Jeremiah Hale, and it subsequently went to decay.

OTHER MILLS IN SWANZEY.

At the foot of Swanzev pond, about 1780, a dam was built, a mill erected and sickles manufactured by Wyman Richardson. The mill was afterwards purchased by Stephen and John Potter and used as a cloth dressing or fulling mill. After this, about 1812, the Potters and Manning Hunt built a saw-mill on the same location, which soon after came into the possession of Ebenezer Hill. It was operated by him till about 1825, when it passed into the hands of Richard Crossett and George Darling; Elbridge Goodell being associated with them a part of the time while they owned it. From 1832 till 1865, Daniel H. Holbrook was the successful proprietor. He rebuilt the mill and built the stone dam, and annually cut out large quantities of boards and lumber. In 1865, Holbrook sold to Varus Stearns, who retained possession about two years, when it was purchased by B. F. Lombard, and operated by him (and his son F. F. Lombard a part of the time) till 1890, when John F. Ballou became the owner.

A few rods below this mill, on Pond Brook, about the year 1816, another saw-mill was built by John Hills and managed by him some ten years, when he took it down and rebuilt it on the west stream flowing from Richmond, about a half mile below the Perry mill. It was subsequently purchased, with territory adjacent by D. H. Holbrook, and soon after went to decay.

The Perry saw-mill, so called, in the extreme south part of the town was built by John Perry about the year 1806, and was managed and operated by the Perry family until it was burned a few years since.

On Hyponeco brook near where William Ballou now lives, a saw-mill was built about 1828 by Nathaniel Thompson. It was used only a few years; the ruins of the old dam now only mark the place where it stood.

On the same stream, near No. 8 schoolhouse, in 1853, Roswell Whitcomb built a saw- and a stave-mill propelled by an overshot wheel. It was operated very successfully till 1875, when it was sold to Simeon Holbrook and taken down a few years after.

Wyman Richardson had a mill on Pond Brook above the bridge near Lorenzo N. Hewes' house in 1800.

Ichabod Woodward had, in 1808, a mill in the southeast part of the town, that part now belonging to Troy.

Erastus Dickinson built a saw-mill on "New Run" Brook about 1826. It was owned in after years by Nathaniel and Asa Dickinson, 2d.

In 1862 Edmund Stone built the saw and stave-mill that stands near his house. It can be used only a small part of the year on account of the insufficiency of water. Lyman M. Stone has operated the mill for a number of years past.

Daniel Verry had a saw-mill on Rixford brook, near his house. He was taxed for it from 1826 to 1859.

Near the close of the last century a mill, probably owned and operated by Abel Wilson, stood on California brook just south of the house of John Fitzgerald. The highway then ran east of where the barn now stands.

About 1830 David and Luke Bennett erected a saw-mill on a small brook about half a mile west of their buildings, and which was removed in 1840 and sold to Benj. Whitecomb.

STORES, HOTELS, ETC., NOT BEFORE NAMED.

But little is known where goods were sold in Swanzev or who sold them previous to 1800. The old meeting house was built between 1753 and 1755, and William Grimes furnished the rum for the raising, from which it is inferred that he might have sold other goods at this early period. Jonathan Whitecomb was a merchant about Revolutionary times.

Francis Goodhue, 2d, bought in 1799, of William Wright, Wyat Gunn and Israel H. Gunn, the place where Mrs. Watson now resides, and commenced trading there. Some of these men may have been in trade there before Goodhue bought. Mr. Goodhue advertised in the N. H. Sentinel, English and West India goods, West India rum at 5s. 11 pence per gal., sugar, 7 pounds for 6s; Bohea tea at 3 s. per pound, and other articles in proportion. Would pay 1s. 6d. for good ashes. In 1803 Mr. Goodhue was taxed for $1500 in trade.

In 1804 he sold to Benjamin Barrett of Brattleborough, Vt. Calvin Farrar was in company with Goodhue for some time. Barrett traded some seven years, having as partner a portion of the time Joseph Emerson, who died in 1810. Jonas Blodgett traded at this place some three years after Emerson.

From 1814 to 1822 Abraham Stearns, 2nd, traded where A. H. Freeman now resides. Bela Chase and Benjamin Page succeeded Stearns. They traded some three years. Caleb Sawyer was in trade in this place in 1829.

Benjamin Page and Bela Chase bought the land where Buttrick's hotel now stands in March, 1825, and on it erected a store. The following persons have since been in trade here: B. Page and Joel Whitecomb in 1827; Reuben Porter and Silas Hills, 1829; Charles C. Pratt, 1831; Samuel Belding, 3d, 1832; Henry R. Morse, Hunt Brothers, Clark Gray, 1840; B. Page, 1843; Nathan Watkins, 1848; James M. Robb, Elijah Sawyer, Darwin D. Baxter, 1859 ; Amos Richardson, 1863 ; Henry H. Aldrich and Oliver C. Whitcomb, 1870.

The store now owned by Mrs. H. Chamberlain was bought by her husband John Chamberlain in 1867. He traded here till his death in 1870, since which time Mrs. C. and her sons have continued the business. Elijah Bullard at one time, and Edward Perry at another, sold goods here.

Elisha Osgood built the house now owned by Lyman N. Howes, and previous to 1825, occupied a part of it for a store. In 1825 and 1826, Otis and Alva Whitcomb traded at this place.

When the travel to the lower towns from Keene and places north passed over the "Boston" road, there was much business for hotels in the central part of Swanzev. Jonathan Hammond kept a public house at the place now owned by Sylvander Stone ; Elijah Belding at the Zina Taft place, and Dan Guild in the old red house on the Carter Whitcomb place. These houses were all kept at an early period of the town's history. From 1800 to 1812, there was a public house where Mrs. Watson resides. It was first kept by Francis Goodhue, next by Benjamin Barrett, and afterwards by Jonas Blodgett.

Henry Morse, 2d, for many years previous to 1825, kept a hotel where Levi Crouch now lives. A public house was kept for a long time at William C. Belding's place, the occupants from 1793 being Jacob Bump, Nah Arnold and David Holbrook.

Between 1830 and 1840, John L. Aldrich at one time, and Col. Phineas Stone at another, were keeping tavern at Mrs. P. Stone's place. William Hewes owned Asa Healey's several years and kept there a public house.

Buttrick's hotel has been opened to the public most of the time since 1861. Those that have been in possession of it have been Amos Richardson, George Howe, L. C. Whitney and W. H. Buttrick.

Brick-making to a considerable extent was carried on at different times for a long period by Solomon Matthews, J. H. Matthews and other former owners of the Timothy Fitzgerald place.

Jonathan Babbitt had a brick yard on the east side of the road near Frank E. Ballou's residence. The brick for the house of Aaron Holbrook and brothers (C. H. Holbrook's) was made a few rods west of Willard I. Ballou's.

Between the years 1830 and 1860, a large amount of the red oak timber in Swanzev was worked into shook. It was split into staves, shaved, bent, packed into bunches large enough to make a hogshead, and sent mostly to New Haven, Conn., and thence to the West Indies.

For a long time Levi Blake's tannery was one of the most important industries in town. Previous to 1800 Fisher Draper had been doing a small business at tanning, where Mr. Blake at this date commenced and continued nearly forty years. He carried on tanning and currying, did custom work, bought hides and sold leather. Benjamin C. Blake, the youngest son of Levi Blake, died in 1843. A few years before his death the business of the establishment had passed into his hands. Following him, William C. Belding carried on the business some three years. Henry Abbott was the last person doing business at the Blake tannery. Henry Hill is the present owner of the site. There were two tanneries in early times in the southeast part of the town. Benjamin Parsons had one on the place now owned by Anthony S. Whitcomb, located several rods west of where his buildings stand. Aquilla Ramsdell had the other on the place now occupied by the Ramsdell family. It was east of the buildings down near the meadow.

The making of palmleaf hats was an important industry in town from 1830 to 1870. By this occupation the women and children in many a family procured not only their groceries but also materials for clothing and many other articles for family use. At first the country merchants furnished the rough leaf to the braiders, who split it into strands, bleached, braided, pressed, completed the hat, and returned it to the merchants in exchange for their goods.

Later, the leaf was prepared ready for braiding before being distributed to the braiders, and the hats were sold before being pressed; the pressing and preparing the leaf being done in factories by machinery. Still later, hat peddlers to a large extent monopolized the trade, sold the leaf to their customers and bought the hats, paying in goods or cash.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.

THE following instances have been reported to the compiler:
While Samuel Hills was returning from a visit to friends in Keene, coming down the Ashuelot river in a boat, he had a child drowned.

Before there was a bridge at East Swanzey, Phineas Battles, a lad living with Samuel Lane, undertaking to cross the stream on a log, in the spring when the water was high, fell in and was drowned.

Silas Cresson, a son of Thomas Cresson, was scalded to death Dec. 31, 1759.

Caleb Sawyer, while frolicking when returning from town meeting March 10, 1772, fell from a sled and was killed.

Jan. 17, 1774, Benjamin Parsons fell down cellar and was killed.

Daniel Gunn, 2d, was drowned Nov. 22, 1786.

Moses Belding, 2nd, died from the effects of swallowing a bean, Feb. 6, 1788.

Abel Wilson had a child scalded to death in 1791.

Nathan Goddard was found dead in the woods Dec. 30, 1811, under a tree which he had felled while alone.

William Wright fell from a scaffold in the barn Jan. 14, 1812, and was instantly killed.

A child of Nathan Whitcomb, nearly two years old, died from a scald March 9, 1814.

Brown Taft was drowned at Westport July 21, 1815.

Enoch Kimball was drowned Jan. 18, 1816.

Amariah Peck removed from Swanzey to Vermont, and in digging a well, the air in it became insupportable of life during his absence, and when he went into it he died there; also a son of his who descended first into the well died from the same cause.

Calvin Bryant had a son Calvin born July 4, 1821, killed at East Swanzey when about six years old by a rail falling off the fence upon him.

Emery, son of Abijah Whitcomb, 2d, born in 1815, was drowned at West Swanzey when a young lad.

Feb. 18, 1826, Ziba W. Read, while chopping a log on which he was standing, fell backward on to a sprout stub which entered his body and caused his death.

Cynthia B. Sawyer, a daughter of Henry Sawyer, was scalded to death when a little over a year old, July 15, 1827.

Aaron Thayer, while driving a two-horse team in the night, got under one of the wagon wheels and was found dead July 26, 1829.

Joseph Bridge was killed by the kick of a horse about 1830.

Dr. E. K. Frost's twin daughter was burned to death in 1830, about four years of age.

While Amos Richardson (the giant), was driving his oxen drawing a cart, the right ox lifted him with one of its horns which entered the rectum, causing inflammation and death Nov. 6, 1831.

A son of the above named Richardson was killed by having his head crushed between a cart wheel and the side of the barn, when the father was backing the oxen and cart from the barn.

Seth Holbrook, while riding horseback, was thrown from his horse Dec. 11, 1833, and received an injury from which he died a few hours after.

Robert Ware was drowned at Albany, N. Y., July 5, 1835.

Two young men employed in a mill at East Swanzey were drowned while bathing about 1835.

Charles Moore was burned to death in a cabin while tending a coal pit, Nov. 30, 1843. Mowry A. Thompson, who was with him at the time, barely escaped with his life.

David Read went alone to Franklin mountain for a load of logs and was found dead under a log, Jan. 31, 1845.

Willard Watkins was drowned in Swanzey pond, falling out of a boat, August 10, 1845.

Artemas Richardson was wounded and bled to death at Swanzey Factory village, by accidentally sticking a jack knife into his thigh.

Julius Francis, a son of Moses Howard, was drowned in a watering rough Oct. 8, 1846, when nearly two years old.

John Park Henry was run over by an ox cart and fatally injured, dying August 14, 1847. The oxen ran away when he was attempting to detach them from the cart.

Dec. 30, 1848, Asa Jackson was found dead in the road east of Westport, at a point now intersected by the Ashuelot railroad.

Lewis Gunn was drowned in the Ashuelot river June 26, 1849.

Aaron Wheeler, when descending from a barn scaffold, fell upon a cart stake and died from the injury received, Feb. 27, 1850.

Elijah Starkey was killed June 24, 1850, by a tree falling upon him in the woods while peeling bark.

Virgil Verwell, son of Silas Whitcomb, 3d, was drowned in a tub of water when about a year and a half old, July 15, 1854.

David Woodward was struck and killed by a railroad train in 1856.

William W. Palmer and another man sawed off a tree, that had blown down, close to the roots; when sawed off the stump fell forward upon Mr. Palmer and killed him, Dec. 15, 1860.

Israel Applin was killed Nov. 1, 1861, by falling off the end of a building upon which he was at work laying shingles.

— Nugent, a blind man, was drowned in the Ashuelot river near Westport about 1861.

About the same time another man (supposed by some to have been murdered) was found dead in the river at Westport.

Charles M. Hills was killed by falling from a railroad car Feb. 1, 1862.

Lorin A. Britton, a railroad engineer, was killed in Tennessee in 1862.

George L. Black, a son of Orrin Black, was drowned in Lake Michigan, Oct. 20, 1865.

A daughter of Schuyler Seaver, nearly nine months old, was smothered in bed Dec. 21, 1868.

Mary Isabel, a daughter of Solon W. Snow, was scalded to death, Jan. 23, 1869, nearly two years old.

George W. Mason, a son of Hale Mason, was killed while living in Boston, Mass., by falling from a staging on which he was at work.

George H. Wilder, a resident of West Swanzey several years, went over the dam at Holyoke, Mass., while engaged upon work about the dam, and was drowned.

Mrs. Joshua Sawyer was killed by the kick of a horse.

Jotham Ballou died of a kick from a horse.

Benjamin Cross was killed in Peterborough by an engine explosion.

David A. Pomeroy was killed in a mill at Townshend, Vt.

Olive Prime, after her marriage, was burned to death in Illinois by her clothes taking fire.

Lurana, daughter of Elkanah Lane, was burned to death by her clothes taking fire, after her marriage and residence in Massachusetts.

Eber Carpenter died from a kick by a horse after he became a citizen of Northfield, Mass.

Joshua Bradley Sawyer, after he became a resident of Winchendon, Mass., was killed by a railroad train, when crossing a track in a carriage.

Lot Aldrich was drowned at Westport.

Elbridge G. Prentice, when walking upon a railroad track, was killed by a passing train.

— Leighton fell from the dam into the water at East Swanzev and was drowned.

Rev. E. I. Carpenter, in returning to his home from Keene, his horse becoming unmanageable, was thrown from his sleigh as he was turning into his yard and injured so severely that he died soon after, Feb. 10, 1877.

Jehiel White was found dead in the woods, Feb. 23, 1879, under a tree which he had felled.

Sarah L., daughter of John Rice, five years of age, was burned so severely by her clothes taking fire, that she died, Feb. 1, 1881.

John Naylor, as he was walking from Keene to Swanzev on the Ashuelot railroad, May 1, 1881, was struck by the train and instantly killed.

Lock M. Rixford, while in the employ of a railroad company, was killed April 26, 1883.

G. Bernard, a son of Oscar R. Farr, was scalded to death by the overturning of a coffee pot, and died Feb. 7, 1887, nearly seven months old.

David Parsons fell upon the railroad track at West Swanzev and received an injury from which he died July 13, 1888.

Fred. L. Iredale, a lad nearly fifteen years old, was drowned at West Swanzev, Aug. 3, 1888.

Frank A. Ballou died Feb. 11, 1890, from a fractured skull caused by a limb of a tree falling upon him that had been wrenched from another tree which he had cut.

Willard Trask inflicted in the right side of Joseph Austin a wound from which he died March 26, 1850. For this offence Trask was convicted and sentenced to State's Prison for life. But, after several years of confinement, his deportment in prison having been good, he was pardoned by the Governor and released.

Joseph Perry, a single man, fifty-six years old, who lived alone in a house in the south part of the town, was murdered about the first day of August, 1876. He was shot, but was alive when first found by a neighbor. No knowledge could be obtained from him who the murderer was. He lived about a day after he was found, unconscious. No clue to the murderer has yet been obtained.

SMALL-POX.

Jonathan Webster, a soldier, died with the small-pox Aug. 31, 1757.

Jan. 16, 1761, Isaac Clark died of this disease. Jan. 25, I. Harrington; Feb. 5, Mrs. Amos Foster; March 2, Mr. Amos Foster; Aug. 18, 1776, Widow Timothy Brown, and Oct. 24, Triphena Fairbanks.

In the winter of 1845 and '46 Mr. Philo Applin went from home to work. He became unwell and returned. His illness proved to have been varioloid of a mild type. His family consisted of a wife and nine children, all of whom had the small-pox except the oldest daughter, who, though remaining in the family through the sickness, did not have the disease. Mr. Applin lived on the Leonard A. Newell place, in a house near the spring, west of the road. In taking care of his family he had the assistance of his daughter and a man who had previously had the disease. Three of the children died and were carried out and buried by Mr. Applin and the man who assisted him in caring for his family. The burial was on the hill east of the road.

SWANZEY CEMETERIES.

The Mount Cesar cemetery at Swanzev Centre doubtless dates back to the first settlement of the town. Appearances indicate that the northwest part of the present cemetery was first used for burying purposes.

As stated in Chapter III the proprietors set apart a piece of land for a "burying place," and chose a committee to see to the cutting down the trees, etc. The records make no mention of any further lay out or any fencing of the old cemetery. There was evidently no general plan in the arrangement of the graves; though they are somewhat in ranges, these frequently overlap or pass by each other. The heads of the graves, as in most other ancient cemeteries, are uniformly towards the west. There are no stones or other monuments to mark the earliest graves. The thin slabs of slate of various sizes and adornments, many with quaint inscriptions, are the most ancient, unless it be the rough granite stones with no names attached. Many of the inscriptions are hardly legible. The oldest date back to about 1760. No marble was used till the beginning of the present century. The family tomb of Jonathan Hammond is evidently quite ancient, erected probably about 1820; that of the Dickinson family is more modern, built some twenty years later.

In 1858 it became necessary to enlarge this burying ground, and about three acres adjoining on the south side were purchased of Carter Whitecomb and enclosed by a stone wall. A committee consisting of Carter Whitcomb, Luther S. Lane and B. F. Lombard, was chosen to lay out this addition into lots, with avenues, etc., corresponding to the modern style. They appraised the lots at prices ranging from less than one dollar to three dollars and thirty-three cents. The lots were sold at the appraised prices till 1865, when the town voted to make them free, and refund the money to those that had then purchased. In 1859 a receiving tomb was built; Alfred Seaver doing the work for $118. In 1890 it was deemed necessary to again enlarge the cemetery or purchase land for a new one. Several acres were bought for this purpose from the Sylvander Stone farm, about three-fourths of a mile south from the old ground.

WEST SWANZEY BURYING GROUND.

The old burying ground at West Swanzev was probably used as such about 1798. No records pertaining to it appear till 1835, when at the annual meeting the town voted to sell the fencing of it. Like that at the Centre, it became nearly filled with graves, and in 1858 Henry Eames, Oliver Capron and Isaac Stratton were chosen a committee to purchase land for a new one. The following year Virgil A. Holbrook of district No. 11, Oliver Capron of No. 13, Henry Eames of No. 6, Edwin Snow of No. 12, Henry Holbrook of No. 7, and Daniel H. Holbrook of No. 8, were chosen a committee to assist in laying out and fitting up the new cemetery. The expense for land and fencing was $352.

In 1860 a receiving tomb was built by Alfred Seaver costing $125.

In 1890-'91 Henry D. Thompson gratuitously built the faced granite wall around the old cemetery.

The neat little burying ground at Westport is owned and cared for by individuals, and not by the town. The oldest head stone is at the grave of Jonathan Holbrook who died May 6, 1796.

EPIDEMIC IN WESTPORT.

In 1849 an epidemic of unusual proportions prevailed in town, but principally in the village of Westport. Between July 7, and Oct. 21, fifty-five persons in Swanzev died of dysentery; five in July, twenty in August, twenty-four in September, and six in October. Of this number thirty-five were within one mile of the schoolhouse in Westport.

SWANZEY'S PROFESSIONAL MEN.

Physicians.

Nathaniel Hammond, Wm. C. Belding place; died Oct. 11, 1773.

Calvin Frink, F. Downing place; died 1821.

Israel Sawyer, J. Handy place; born 1753, died Jan. 18, 1832.

Ezra Thayer, School District No. 8.

Abel Wilder, removed from town.

Paul Raymond, died 1814.

Ephraim K. Frost, Mrs. Watson's place; came 1819.

Henry Baxter, H. D. Thompson place; 1820-1853.

Daniel Linsey, removed from town 1828.

N. B. Barton, West Swanzey, died 1852.

Samuel D. King, Cong. Parsonage, 1835-1845.

John F. Jennison, Eclectic, Sylvander Stone place, 1844; died in Keene.

Willard Adams, Cong. Parsonage, 1845-1871.

D. L. M. Comings, West Swanzey, 1853-1863.

F. H. Underwood, Eclectic, West Swanzey, 1857; died in Boston.

Geo. I. Cutler, West Swanzey, since 1865.

In addition to the foregoing who have been the practising physicians in Swanzey, are the following who were born or bred in this town and have practised their profession elsewhere: Simeon Brown, Abner Stanley, Hiram Bennett, Joseph Streeter, Samuel Lane, Mellen R. Holbrook, Hiram O. Bolles, George W. Gay, Clarence W. Downing, and Charles H. Bailey.

The town has rarely deemed it necessary to maintain a lawyer within her borders, but it has raised up and sent to other localities more needy the following: Joseph Larnerd, Luther Chapman, Benjamin Kimball, David Thompson, Asahel H. Bennett, Farnum F. Lane, Daniel K. Healey, Lloyd D. Eaton, Milo Eaton.

Of Swanzey men who became clergymen or were licensed to preach are the names of Sebastian Streeter, Russell Streeter, Robert Crossett, Henry Woodcock, Caleb Sawyer, Tristan Aldrich, Jonathan Bailey, Asa Withington, Truman A. Jackson, Don Carlos Taft, Myron W. Adams.

MAIL CARRYING AND POST-MASTERS.

Many of our older inhabitants remember when the postage on a single letter was 6, 10, $12\frac{1}{2}$, $18\frac{3}{4}$ and 25 cents, according to the distance carried; 25 cents being the rate when the distance was over four hundred miles.

These were the rates from 1816 to 1845. In the early days of the country's history according to the established rates the postage on a one-half ounce letter from Boston to San Francisco would be $2.74. In 1845 the rates were changed to five cents on a half ounce letter for a distance not exceeding three hundred miles, and ten cents for any greater distance.

We have no authentic record of mail carrying to or from Swanzey in colonial and early days. As in other localities it was doubtless done on horseback, at infrequent and probably irregular periods. For many years previous to the advent of railroads through the town the mail was carried by stages, then quite numerous. One of these lines extended from Worcester through Richmond and Swanzey to Keene. Later a stage connected Greenfield, Mass., with Keene passing through Westport, West Swanzey and Swanzey Centre. After the Ashuelot railroad was built the mail for the Centre for many years was delivered at Sawyer's Crossing. More recently it has been carried by the Keene and Richmond stage.

The records fail to tell us when the first post-office was formed at the Centre or who was the first post-master. It was the only post-office in town till 1831 when that at Westport was formed. The post-office at West Swanzey was established in 1846, and that at East Swanzey in 1873. The following are the post-masters with dates of appointment:

Centre. Clark Brown, Jan. 17, 1815; Abel Wilder, Nov. 11, 1816; Abraham Stearns, March 29, 1819; Benjamin Page, Sept. 1, 1821; Amos Bailey, April 6, 1830; Elijah Sawyer, April 27, 1854; Willard Adams, 1861; Enoch Howes, May 28, 1872; Asa Healey, Nov. 23, 1881.

Westport. B. C. Peters, 1831; Sylvanus Bartlett, 1840; Benjamin L. Draper, 1858; Stephen Faulkner, 1859; Henry Holbrook, 1861; Sylvanus Bartlett, 1862; Edwin F. Read, 1868; George W. Brooks, 1870; Walter Marsh, 1882; Frank S. Faulkner, 1886.

West Swanzey. Jotham W. Frink, 1846; Joseph Hammond, 1861; Edwin F. Read, 1863; Salmon H. Fox, 1866; Obadiah Sprague, 1884; Addie J. Faulkner, 1889.

East Swanzey. Albert B. Read, 1873; George W. Willis, 1886; Albert B. Read, 1888.

THE WAR DEBT OF THE TOWN.

The debt of the town, principally caused by the war of the Rebellion, reached its highest figures according to the reports of the selectmen in 1866. The amount then due corporations and individuals was $63,921.86 with assets of $8,403.73; leaving the net indebtedness $55,518.13. Of $63,921.86, $11,000 was due the Savings Banks in Keene; $120 the Congregational Society; $800 the town officers; and the remaining $52,001.86 was due to seventy-one individuals, mostly citizens of Swanzey, and in sums varying from $50 to $10,000. This debt was gradually extinguished year by year, and in 1885 a balance in favor of the town was reported in the treasury.

TOWN PAUPERS.

How to care for the unfortunate poor by the public in the most humane, and at the same time in the most economical manner, has ever been a problem of difficult solution. The practice of selling at public auction to the lowest bidder, the maintenance of a person by the week or year, as was done sixty or eighty years ago, would hardly be tolerated now.

"In 1822, the maintenance of Adolphus Loveland was set up at public vendue, to be supported the term of one year with all necessities of life, clothing, doctoring, etc., and struck off to Joseph Long; and he is to receive $54, or in that proportion for a shorter time."

"March 13, 1821. The maintenance of Abigail Genney was set up at public auction to be supported the term of one year with all the necessities of life, in health and in sickness, and pay physicians if necessary, and struck off to John Perry, and he to receive $21, or in that proportion for a shorter time."

At the annual town meeting in 1835 it was voted that the selectmen contract with some person for the support of the poor for one or more years, not exceeding five years.

In 1837, the farm now occupied by L. J. Crouch was purchased for a "poor" farm, but used as such only a year or two when it was sold. After this, Moses Howard had the contract for many years for caring for all paupers in town, and following him, John Starkey had a similar contract.

In later years the number of town paupers has been relatively smaller than formerly,—the county assuming the support of those not having a residence in any town.

MARKING SHEEP.

The practice of marking or branding sheep, and having a description of the mark or brand recorded by the town clerk, as authorized by law was quite common in the early years of the town's history. A few specimens are as follows:—

"Calvin Frink's mark. A crop off the tips of both ears, and a slit lengthwise of the right ear."

"Jonathan Hammond's mark. A crop off the left ear and a slit in the same."

"Elijah Belding's mark. A swallow tail in both ears."

"Wyman Richardson's mark. A round hole about half an inch in diameter in the middle of the left ear."

A ROLLING STONE.

The large boulder that lies below the road a few rods west of the spring at E. Swanzey, rolled from the top of the hill over two roads about 1870, one afternoon just after the school children had passed beneath it on their way home from school. The rock supposed to be securely embedded had been undermined by the earth being removed for road repairing. The stone that lies on the west side of it was split off when it struck the lower road.

RAIN AND SNOW STORMS.

There were great freshets on the South Branch in August, 1826, and October, 1869. The bridge over the stream at E. Swanzey was taken away on both occasions. The storm which produced the last freshet was very extensive.

A remarkable storm occurred Oct. 9, 1804. It has been said that snow fell to the depth of two feet. The annual muster of the regiment to which Swanzey belonged was appointed to be held that day at Winchester. The storm prevented many of the soldiers from reaching the place, and no duty was performed by those that were enabled to get there. The great snow storm of March 12, 1888, prevented the annual town meeting from being held on the 13th. The roads were impassable for several days.

COLD YEAR.

The summer of the year 1816 has passed into history as the "cold season." The corn crop in this town was entirely destroyed. At that time corn constituted a large part of the food of the people, and the principal article for fattening their beef and pork. In such an emergency some supplies were obtained from Connecticut river towns.

GRASSHOPPER YEAR.

A severe drought prevailed in 1826 through the summer till late in August. The hay crop was very light and feed in pastures very scant. In some instances, farmers cut down trees for their cattle to browse upon. Grasshoppers were propagated in great numbers. It seemed for a time that they would destroy a large part of the crop that escaped the drought. At mid-day the air was full of them, and at the approach of evening the fences were covered by the devastating hordes.

TEMPERANCE.

The subject of temperance has probably received very much the same consideration and attention in this as in other towns of New Hampshire. The habits and social customs of the people here have been similar to those elsewhere. From the first settlement of the town to 1830 most people believed that no harm resulted from the moderate use of spirituous liquors, and their practice was in accordance with their belief. It was believed that a person could withstand severe cold or great heat better after having drank a limited quantity of liquor. It was used by all classes of people both on festive and mournful occasions, at the raising of buildings, at military parades, on the farm and in the shop.

The selling of liquor at retail constituted a large part of the business of the hotel keeper and the country merchant.

It appears, however, that public opinion did not concede to any one the right to sell without a license. The object of the license was to keep the business in respectable hands, and keep those out of it who would not manage it with discretion. The following are samples of the licenses that were given from time to time, and the character of the men that obtained them.

"May 28, 1821. We the subscribers do license Abraham Stearns, jr., to retail and mix liquors in the store lately occupied by Cyrus Brooks in Swanzey, for six months.

Amos Bailey,		of Swanzey.

People did not believe in drunkenness at the time when most of them drank intoxicating liquor. They were rather tolerant of one who might on some particular occasion when the temptation was great, drink to excess, but the habitual drunkard was execrated then as he is now.

The work of those who first commenced to bring about a temperance reformation was mainly directed against the use of distilled liquor, and obtaining pledges not to use it, but allowing the use of wine and cider. But the temperance reformer soon found out the necessity of including all intoxicating liquor in temperance pledges, for consistent temperance work. In the early days of the temperance movement, it received a stronger and more powerful support from the clergy than from any other class of people. Many of the most popular doctors very early gave the cause their hearty support. No man in this vicinity did more for it than Dr. James Batcheller of Marlboro, by his influence and lectures.

Whenever the voters of Swanzey have acted upon the liquor question, the vote has been against licensing the sale of liquor when that has been the issue, and in favor of suppressing the sale of it; but there has generally been liquor sold in the town in defiance of law and the public sentiment of the people.

BOATING ON THE ASHUELOT RIVER.

About the year 1800 a company was formed for the purpose of boating on the Ashuelot river, the design being to take heavy articles brought up the Connecticut river in boats, transfer them by teams past the rapids in Hinsdale and Winchester, and then boat them to Keene. Locks were built at the falls in Westport and West Swanzey, and one loaded boat only was propelled up the river and the enterprise was abandoned. "It didn't pay." The locks at Westport were utilized by the manufacturing interests of the place and served as flumes for properly conveying the water.

GREAT SNOWSTORM.

The greatest and most severe snowstorm ever known in Swanzev occurred on the 12th and 13th days of March, 1888, as realized by Edmund Stone, George A. Seaver and Charles R. Worcester, supervisors of the check list of the town. Agreeably to appointment they met at the town house on the 12th inst. at two o'clock P. M. for the correcting of the check list, and at four o'clock, having closed their session, on leaving the house, they found it almost impossible, on account of the driving storm and the depth of snow to reach the stable for their teams. Stone and Worcester, after consultation, finally started in the blinding storm for home; but when about twenty rods away the horse fell in the snow and was partially buried therein; they assisted it in rising, and were glad to return to the stable, on reaching which, Stone found both of his ears frozen.

Seaver with his team started for home at West Swanzev, three miles away, but was met by Stone and Worcester who told him that it was impossible to push through. Seaver replied that he must go home, as a man can always go home when he can go nowhere else, and moved on; but soon confronted by the fury of the storm, he returned, and all put up for the night.

The next day, the warrant calling for a town meeting remained in the box unmolested, as it was impossible for the people to get to the town house. In the meantime, Stone harnessed his team and started for home about a mile away. He was met by his son Lyman with a shovel and succeeded in reaching home in safety. Worcester, also living about three-fourths of a mile out wallowed through amid the drifts and driving wind to his home.

Seaver, leaving his team, started for his home at twenty minutes past two o'clock P. M., crossing the trackless plain and having reached the road by the Indian sandbank where, seemingly, the drift was twelve or fifteen feet deep, and utterly impassable, he crossed the road and went up the river to Worcester's, thinking to reach the railroad at the Swanzev depot and find an easier and quicker route home. Worcester thinking the trip would be a hazardous one, said he had better remain over with him. No, he said, he must go home. Worcester went with him to the railroad bridge and then returned to his home. After Seaver had crossed the bridge finding the snow so deep in the valley on the track that he could not make any advance, he climbed up on the east side of the bank to the wall, which was scarcely visible, using his umbrella as a support, and now at dark, he travelled on the wall to the end thereof; then, struggling to the track, notwithstanding he was very weary, he pushed forward till he reached the "Cut" on the road, near Eaton's burnt ruins, the snow being fully ten feet in depth here. He found himself unable to advance a foot; every effort to step dropped him lower in the snow. There in the darkness of night, strength nearly exhausted, clothes saturated with sweat, limbs badly cramped after a struggle of nearly half an hour, he felt that he could not get out, that there he must perish alone; but knowing that, ceasing his efforts, chills would come upon him, and his desire being so strong to get home, he exerted his utmost strength to reach the highway. In treading his way his foot struck a small birch tree standing on the bank, bent down towards the track, under the snow. This he seized and pulled himself up to the bars, his foot striking a board about twelve feet long which he pulled out of the snow and placed it forward of him, on which he walked its length, and thus utilized the board till he reached O. S. Eaton's. Then, being so exhausted, he left the board and wallowed on till, passing N. C. Carter's, he came near Greenleaf's gate when, with the aid of his umbrella, he climbed the wall on which he made advance, falling off, and climbing on again until he reached the Bailey brook, when he became so weak and badly cramped that he could travel no further. Here he discovered a light in the village; then with umbrella in hand laid horizontally on the snow he crawled on his hands and knees to the track (seemingly he could not move), for the first time in his life he became faint, and had not voice enough to call for help; but he must go home, and with a strong will power he was enabled to reach the house of B. F. Bowen, and aided by him he reached home at twenty minutes past eight o'clock in the evening. Not until the 17th inst. were the roads opened so that he could go after his team.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

There is no record of any organization of Free Masons or Odd Fellows in Swanzey; but at all times since near the first settlement there have been Masons in this town belonging to lodges in adjoining towns; and since the institution of Odd Fellowship in this country the same may be said of that order. Some of the early clergy and other prominent men were Masons. In later years a multitude of secret societies have sprung into existence, some of an ephemeral nature, designed to accomplish a certain object and then pass away, while others appear to be of a permanent character and have come to stay.

In 1856 the American or Know-nothing party, a secret political organization, suddenly appeared in the country and very soon vanished.

Swanzey, in common with other towns in New England, helped to swell the wave that swept over the land. It is not well known who were the principal managers in this movement as few of the leaders care to be recognized as such in history.

Good Templars.

About 1868 the "Ark of Safety" Lodge of Good Templars, No. 78, was formed at West Swanzey. This was an organization in the interest of the temperance movement. Under the inspiration of Hon. A. S. Kendall and his wife, S. C. Kendall, O. Sprague and other temperance workers it flourished some five or six years and exerted a salutary influence in training the youth in habits of sobriety and in restraining the illegal sale of liquor.

Golden Cross.

The United Order of the Golden Cross, Swanzey Commandery, No. 151, was instituted at East Swanzey, August 29, 1881. This is a benefit or life insurance association, designed also to advance social improvement, temperance, etc. The charter members were Edward Wilcox, Ellen A. Ramsdell, Alanson W. Banks, Albert B. Read, Thankful B. Read, William F. Read, Ella C. Read, Francis M. Taft, Sarah L. Taft, Nathan F. Newell, Emily B. Newell, Martin L. Lane, Flora E. Lane, Henry C. Lane, Lucy Mabel Lane, Joseph E. Long, Lois A. Long, James E. Handy, Arthur A. Woodward, Clara M. Lane, Ebenezer F. Lane, Hannah P. Lane, James M. Ramsdell, Hattie R. Ramsdell, Clara M. Lane, Dr. Geo. I. Cutler, Geo. E. Lane, S. Lizzie Lane.

Over sixty others have joined this commandery and it has been at all times and now is in a flourishing condition.

Its first officers were A. W. Banks, Past Noble Commander; Edward Wilcox, Noble Commander; Ellen A. Ramsdell, Vice Noble Commander; Martin L. Lane, Prelate; A. B. Read, W. Herald; Clara N. Lane, Keeper of Records; Geo. E. Lane, Financial Keeper of Records; Henry C. Lane, Treasurer; Ella C. Read, Warden Inner Gate; A. A. Woodward, Warden Outer Gate.

The Noble Commanders have been Edward Wilcox, Jas. M. Ramsdell, Geo. E. Lane, A. B. Read, C. M. Lane, A. W. Banks, W. C. Belding, C. H. Applin, C. G. Ramsdell, A. A. Woodward, C. A. Bouvier.

The Golden Star Commandery, No. 319, U. O. G. C., was instituted at West Swanzey, July 16, 1887, by Deputy Grand Commander A. B. Read, with fourteen charter members as follows: Park E. Wright, Mary E. Wright, Herbert O. Young, Carrie E. Young, Charles B. Sparhawk, Alice L. Sparhawk, Geo. B. Richardson, Ara L. Richardson, Ansel E. Bourn, Hattie E. Bourn, Edward H. Snow, Mary L. Handy, Albert M. Hardy, Calista Hill. The number of members January 1, 1892, is seventy-two. The Noble Commanders have been: Herbert O. Young, Charles B. Sparhawk, James E. Handy, Geo. W. Richardson, George C. Wright, Lester H. Towne.

Officers for the 1st term, 1892: N. C., P. E. Wright; V. N. C., Minnie Wright; W. P., James E. Handy; W. H., Joseph Rugg; F. R. of R., Archie Thompson; R. of R., Nellie Thompson; W. T., Carrie Young; W. I. G., Addie Eames; W. O. G., Ansel Bourn.

The Grange.

The organization called The Grange, for the especial benefit of farmers and their families, which has flourished for many years at the west, has only recently appeared in New Hampshire. Golden Rod Grange, No. 114, was instituted March 15, 1886, by general deputy E. C. Hutchinson of Milford, with the following charter members:—William C. Belding, Andrew B. Cook, Calvin E. Hills, Charles H. Rockwood, George Carpenter, Lyman M. Stone, Albert B. Read, Geo. L. Underwood, Zina G. Taft, William C. Belding, jr., Richard R. Ramsdell, jr., Marcus C. Stone, Benjamin F. Mead, Benjamin Read, Geo. I. Cutler, M.D., Mrs. E. H. G. Taft, Miss Nellie M. Belding, Mrs. L. J. W. Carpenter, Mrs. Leatlle J. Stone, Miss Alice A. Stanley, Mrs. Eva L. Ramsdell, Mrs. Anna G. Hills.

The following officers were elected:—Master, W. C. Belding; Overseer, C. E. Hills; Lecturer, B. Read; Steward, C. H. Rockwood; Assistant Steward Z. G. Taft; Chaplain, L. M. Stone; Treasurer, George Carpenter; Secretary, Mrs. Annie G. Hills; Gate-keeper, G. L. Underwood; Pomona, Mrs. E. L. Ramsdell; Flora, Mrs. L. J. Stone; Ceres, Mrs. E. H. G. Taft; Lady Assistant Steward, Miss Alice A. Stanley.

The following have been the leading officers of The Grange since 1886:

- 1887. Master, Chas. H. Rockwood; Overseer, C. E. Hills; Lecturer, B. Read.
- 1888. Master, C. H. Rockwood; Overseer, C. E. Hills; Lecturer, Mrs. E. H. G. Taft.
- 1889. Master, Zina G. Taft; Overseer, Marcus C. Stone; Lecturer, Mrs. E. H. G. Taft.
- 1890. Master, Marcus C. Stone; Overseer, G. L. Underwood; Lecturer, Geo. Carpenter.

1891. Master, M. C. Stone ; Overseer, G. L. Underwood ; Lecturer, G. Carpenter.
1892. Master, Henry W. Banks ; Overseer, L. Lowell Belding ; Lecturer, Mrs. L. A. Carlton.

The meetings of the Grange were held at the houses of the members and at the vestry of the Congregational Church until 1891, when the membership was so large it was deemed expedient to hold them at the town hall. The numbers at the close of each year have been as follows : 1887, 31 ; 1888, 40 ; 1889, 49 ; 1890, 91 ; 1891, 125. It is the largest Grange in the county except that at Keene.

Lincoln Grange, No. 159, was instituted at West Swanzey, Dec. 31, 1890, with sixteen charter members, viz. : Geo. O. Capron, Rose L. Capron, James E. Handy, Mary L. Handy, Herbert O. Young, Carrie E. Young, Albert M. Hardy, Oliver Capron, Park E. Wright, Mary E. Wright, Geo. C. Wright, Minnie A. Wright, Geo. W. Richardson, Ara L. Richardson, J. Byron Porter, Flora M. Porter.

The following are its officers, viz. : Worthy Master, P. E. Wright ; Worthy Overseer, C. J. Eames ; Worthy Lecturer, J. E. Handy ; Worthy Assistant Lecturer, Mrs. Woodward ; Worthy Steward, B. C. Snow ; Worthy Assistant Steward, G. C. Wright ; Worthy Chaplain, A. M. Hardy ; Worthy Secretary, Mrs. S. C. Kendall ; Worthy Treasurer, Mrs. Angie Woodward ; Ceres, Mrs. Wright ; Flora, Jennie Thorning ; Pomona, Addie Eames ; Lady Assistant Steward, M. A. Wright. Number of members Jan. 1, 1892, 61.

A BEAR STORY.

About the year 1800 as General Philemon Whitcomb and two sons, Benjamin and Abijah, were examining a large territory of old growth pine timber about one-fourth of a mile south from Mrs. Susan Johnson's, and near the "Ware Barn," their attention was attracted by the barking of their little dog, and on examination found that the dog had discovered some kind of an animal in a cave, under a huge boulder, now visible, which they thought might be a bear. They barricaded the entrance of the cave that he might not escape, and then sent for John Grimes, who being a hunter and trapper came with an axe, if need be, to kill the bear supposed to be therein, if he attempted to escape ; but the General, being a military man and fond of riding horseback, did not want the bear killed for he wanted to bridle her with a cod line and ride bear back, so Grimes told them to remove the obstruction from the entrance to the cave, while he with uplifted axe, stood ready to meet Bruin as she came out

After patient waiting for the disturbance of the intruders to cease, the rage of Bruin began to show itself, and she was determined to make her egress and eject her intruders or lay down her life in the conflict, and soon made her appearance when Grimes struck her on the head with the head of the axe. The blow staggered her back somewhat; but she soon rallied, and with increasing rage, made another attempt to come out, when Grimes plunged the bit of the axe into her head, but this did not stop her. Rage added to madness, she came out and the General, not having time to bridle her with cod line, sprang upon her back and rode away, not dismounting, until she fell dead under him, although not a great distance away.—E. A WOLF STORY.

Many years ago there lived a Mr. Fairbrother in West Swanzev, on a farm once owned by Clement Sumner, later by Arba Stearns, and now owned by Charles J. Hahrahan, whose house stood east of the now-standing barn, and the road passed between them. While Mr. Fairbrother was shingling the roof of his building, the weather being warm and fine, his child, having been at play there, fell asleep on a pile of shavings which came from the shingles, and while quietly sleeping a wolf came from the near forest probably scenting the child, covered it with shavings, hastened back to the forest and invited his friends to share with him the collation which he had secured. The father discovered the wolf before he had fully hidden the child, and probably thinking the safety of the child would be more sure did not molest him till after he returned to the forest; then he descended, aroused the little sleeper and took it on the roof with him. Soon the wolf returned with two or three companions with sharpened appetites to enjoy the repast; but when the wolf removed the shavings and found an empty table, and that the precious meal was gone, he appeared disappointed and troubled, whereupon the guests, greatly enraged at the imposition, pitched upon their host and killed him.—E. CHAPTER XII.

Biographical and Supplementary.

THE object of this chapter is to supplement Chapter XI by giving the residence, occupation, etc., as far as may be, of different individuals, and short biographical sketches of some of the more prominent citizens. The "places" named are those given on the township maps.

HENRY ABBOTT has lived in Swanzev nearly all his life; has held many important town offices; been engaged at different times and places in agricultural, mercantile and manufacturing pursuits, and is now proprietor of a livery establishment at West Swanzev. His son, George H. a store clerk, resides at Keene and Frank F., box-maker, at West Swanzev.

REV. STEPHEN G. ABBOTT was born in Bridgewater, Mass., Nov. 9, 1819, and became pastor of the Baptist church in West Swanzev, July, 1873. In his boyhood he removed with his father, Rev. Samuel Abbott, to Bedford, N. H., and afterwards to Antrim. He was educated at Hancock and New Hampton institutions; ordained to the gospel ministry at Campton, Feb. 7, 1849, and has since pursued his avocation in New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts. He was chaplain of the 1st Reg. N. H. Vols. in the war of the Rebellion, and has recently written a history of said regiment. He was also chaplain of the N. H. legislature in 1889. He represented the town of Windsor in the legislature of Vermont in 1863 and 1864. He received the honorary degree of A.M. from Bates College, in 1869. Mr. Abbott married Sarah B., a sister of ex-U. S. Senator P. C. Cheney, of Manchester, by whom he had one son, John T. Abbott, now U. S. minister to the Republic of Columbia.

MYRON W. ADAMS, son of Rev. Ezra and Alice M. (Ware) Adams, born in Gilsun, but having his home during most of his youthful years in Swanzev; a graduate of Dartmouth College and Hartford Theological Seminary, taking also a post graduate course at Andover ; pastor of Congregational church at Chatham, Conn., and Hopkinton, N. H., two years each ; and now professor of Greek in Atlanta (Ga.) University.

ALICE M. (WARE) ADAMS, born and reared in Swanzey ; graduated at Mt. Holyoke Seminary ; a teacher for many years in our public schools, and at Wilberforce University, Xenia, Ohio ; now a resident in Gilsum.

DR. WILLARD ADAMS was born in New Salem, Mass. ; studied medicine with Dr. James Batcheller two years ; spent one year at the medical school at Dartmouth College ; graduated at Bowdoin, Me. ; practised his profession in Wells, Me., Woburn, Mass., and in this town ; represented Swanzey in the legislature ; was county commissioner three years and postmaster ten years ; residence, Congregational parsonage at L. Crouch place.

His son, Joseph W., has for many years been in business in California ; Thomas, a farmer, in Illinois and Nebraska, and Everett in various employments in Keene and Swanzey.

JOHN B. ADAMS came from Rindge, lived on J. E. Long place, removed in 1890 to Hancock.

HARDIN ALBEE came from Westmoreland ; a farmer, a selectman ; lived on J. Conby place.

CAPT. AMASA ALDRICH came from Mendon, Mass., about 1783, and settled on what is now the J. E. Long farm, owning that and much adjoining territory. He was a prominent and influential man in town. Of his large family of children, Marmaduke early in life removed to Allegany Co., N. Y. Phineas occupied a part of his father's farm, now the P. P. Carlton place. Amasa, to the close of his long life, remained on the homestead of his father ; a leading citizen in town, of an accommodating disposition, a Democrat in politics, a liberal in religion. Paine lived awhile in Swanzey, then in Richmond, and afterwards in Worcester, becoming distinguished as a mechanic and the inventor of the railroad turn-table. Col. David Aldrich was a farmer and prominent in military affairs, living on F. Downing place. Paul Fisher lived at several places in town, a farmer and cattle-drover for Providence, Brighton, and Watertown markets. His second wife was from Watertown, and after his marriage he resided there till his death. John Langdon died comparatively young ; he kept a public house at the Jonathan Whitcomb place. William Aldrich learned the tanner's trade of Capt. L. Blake, lived awhile in this vicinity and then went to Girard, Pa.

Of the next generation of this branch of Aldriches, Nathaniel learned the printer's trade, went South, returned and soon died. Cyril resides at Spring Prairie, Wis., and is an extensive farmer. Harrison resides in Winchendon, Mass.; married there and was extensively engaged in manufacturing woodenware, but is now a farmer. Amasa for many years was a wooden ware manufacturer in Winchendon, Mass., and afterwards in Winchester, where he died. Simeon Cook, also in the same business, resides in Winchendon. Carlon C. acquired a good education in our public schools and academies; manufactured pails two years in New York State; lumber and grain dealer five years in Dubuque, Iowa, and since 1860 has continued the same business in McLean, Ill. He deals very largely in grain and flour, is engaged to some extent in farming, is a bank officer and a leading citizen in his section of the state. Phineas L. resides in Pennsylvania. George O. lived at different places and died several years ago unmarried. Paul Fisher, after being in trade at West Swanzey, removed to Somerville, Mass., where he now resides. John L. was in the mercantile business in Boston until his death. George Herman, for a few years after his marriage, lived a pioneer's life at the West, teaching school and farming. For many years previous to 1889 he lived in Troy, having an office and doing an extensive business in Keene as an insurance agent. Two of his sons are associated with him, and another son is a prosperous physician in Marlboro. Cyril R., a merchant in Boston. Henry Hubbard resides in Keene, and follows the occupation of his father, a drover to the Brighton and Watertown markets.

REV. TRISTAN ALDRICH came from New Salem, Mass., not a finished scholar, nor an eloquent sermonizer, but an acceptable preacher and a good man. For many years previous to his death he lived on the farm now owned by O. S. Eaton, the house of which stood close by the Ashuelot railroad, and was burned soon after his death. His son, Adoniram J., resides in Illinois, a dealer in grain and lumber.

SANDS ALDRICH, a member of the Society of Friends, came from Douglass, Mass., lived on J. M. Cole place. His son, Sands, resided on J. D. Hale place. David S. has lived in California as well as in Swanzey.

ELLERY K. ALDRICH came from Richmond late in life, lived on F. E. Ballou farm. His son, Frank S., resides in Somerville and does business in Boston.

ANDERSON ALDRICH, born in Richmond, a painter, resides at East Swanzy. His son, Geo. B., also a painter, lives in Winchester.

PHILIP D. ANGIER came from Fitzwilliam about 1865, a farmer; represented Swanzy in the legislature. His son, Walter E., educated at the N. H. Agricultural College, is a successful civil engineer at the South in U. S. Coast Survey.

GEORGE W. ALEXANDER, a farmer, came from Winchester when a young man and built the house in West Swanzy where his widow now resides.

CALVIN ALEXANDER and his two brothers, Luther and Charles, were born in Troy and came to East Swanzy where Luther still resides, the other two having died.

WALTER S. ALEXANDER resides at East Swanzy in the house built by V. A. Woodcock west of A. W. Banks', on the opposite side of the road. (Not on the map.)

ISAAC APPLIN, from Palmer, Mass., in 1762, bought the lot where O. T. Thomson now lives. He sold to Caleb Sawyer. None of his descendants have lived in Swanzy.

DEACON THOMAS APPLIN came from Palmer, Mass., in 1763, and was the first settler on the J. W. Murphy place, where he resided some forty years. He was both blacksmith and farmer, and one of the most prominent men in the town; deacon of the Congregational church, town clerk and selectman many years, and was often supported for other important positions by his townsmen. Of his four sons, John was a farmer and miller. He owned the E. W. Handy place, and afterward that of Mrs. N. F. Newell. Many of the last years of his life he lived with his son Israel and at different times was the miller at the East Swanzy grist-mill. Timothy B. had at one time a farm south of the J. D. Hale place. He removed from town about 1796 and settled in Cazenovia, N. Y. Deacon Thomas was a farmer living on the N. F. Newell place. Isaac had a homestead north of the old Boston road near the foot of Chimney Stone hill. Of the third generation of Applins, Thomas settled in Chelsea, Vermont: Ephraim in Sullivan and Benjamin R., in Sparta, N. Y. Israel built and occupied the house now owned by Geo. W. Willis, and afterwards lived in that now owned by J. M. Ramsdell. Samuel Page was always in delicate health and was never married. He taught school many years and was clerk in different stores in Swanzy. Benjamin, after reaching manhood, resided in Boston and Cambridge. He was a carpenter and made a specialty of stair building. Perrin was also a carpenter and lived most of his married life in Marlow. Philo worked a number of years in a foundry in Portland, Me., afterwards on his father's homestead in Swanzey. He now lives with his second wife in Fitchburg, Mass. Wesson worked some years with his brothers in Boston, afterwards was a farmer in Townsend, Mass., and for some twenty years past has resided in Swanzey. Of Israel's children, Sumner when young was a pail turner, afterwards with his relatives in Boston a stair builder, and still later one of the principal partners of one of the largest furniture houses in Boston. Benjamin F. has spent most of his life working in different pail shops in town. He is now employed with his son, Arthur F., in the box shop at Spragueville. Henry S. Applin, previous to enlisting in the army, was in the pail business either as employé or manufacturer most of his life, in East Swanzey and Fitzwilliam. John is a machinist in Newton, Mass. During the war he had an important position at the Watertown Arsenal. Of the sons of Philo, Charles R. lives in Troy, an employé in the wooden-ware business. William W. resides in Hinsdale, and Edgar M. in Brattleborough, Vt. They have a fish market in Hinsdale. Oscar P. is a furniture painter in Keene. Herbert L. lives in Nebraska. Charles H. Applin and Eugene E., sons of Henry, live at East Swanzey; the former is the manager of Clark's pail establishment: the latter, recently in the grocery business, is now an employé in a pail shop.

NOAH ARNOLD owned and occupied William C. Belding place from 1810 to 1822.

FRANK P. ATKINSON, recently from Brooklyn, N. Y., resides on Maple hill and does a successful business in keeping summer boarders. Arthur and Herbert Atwood came from Hinsdale a few years since and bought the Luther and Joseph Dickinson farms. Arthur has now removed to Keene.

BENONI AUSTIN became a resident in the west part of Swanzey as early as 1812.

HIRAM AVERY lived on the Gates' place at Factory Village; died in 1877. His son, Edward H., built a house on Keene and Swanzey road, and is employed in the pail shops.

JONATHAN BABBITT, a frugal and industrious man, from Dana, Mass., lived on J. W. Ballou place from about 1818 to 1838; a farmer and brick-maker. Of his sons, Roswell was a carpenter, being somewhat noted for his taste for scientific studies, particularly astronomy.

He afterwards settled in Iowa and became a man of distinction. Marcena was a school teacher. He went from this town to Girard, Pa. Jonathan returned with his father to the vicinity of Dana.

AMOS BAILEY in early manhood came from Pelham and located on the O. F. Oakman place. He was a prominent man in town, as was also each of his sons, Jonathan and Amos. Jonathan resided on the old homestead, was a farmer, preacher, and leader in the Baptist church. Amos was an extensive farmer and shoemaker, living where his daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. L. Bailey, now resides; an active member in the Congregational Society and a leading citizen in town affairs. Albert W. Bailey, a farmer, remained on the old homestead till his death. Clark Bailey resides at West Swanzey. His eldest son, Charles H., is a physician in Gardner, Mass., and his youngest son, Edward, a clerk in Keene.

CHARLES L. BALL, a farmer, came from Leverett, Mass.

SILAS BALLOU came from Richmond about fifty years ago and located on the farm now owned by his grandson, Willard I. Ballou. HELEN HOLBROOK was a merchant at East Swanzev, and Chiron, a farmer and butcher, where his widow now lives.

CLARK B. HOLBROOK, a farmer and carpenter, came with his father, Capt. Peter, from Bellingham, Mass. After his marriage he settled on the farm which has since remained in the Holbrook family, and there reared his large family of children, most of whom became eminently successful. Mellen R. was a student two years at Lawrence Academy, Groton, Mass., and one year at the academy in Keene; studied medicine with Dr. Hosea Pierce, of Winchester, and afterwards with Dr. Childs, of Pittsfield, Mass., and Dr. Palmer, of Woodstock, Vt., and graduated at the Vermont Medical College June 19, 1850. He practised his profession about ten years at Fulton, N. Y., and nearly twice that time at Poughkeepsie. He was studious, industrious, and deserving of the success he gained. Lyman lived on the Frank E. Ballou farm; afterwards went to Springfield, Mass., and engaged in the meat and provision business, from which he retired a few years since. Charles attended Mt. Caesar Seminary two years, and at the age of fifteen went to Springfield, Mass., where he attended the public school two years, and then learned the trade of machinist. In the spring of 1850, with other adventurers, he went to California, via Isthmus route, and worked in the mines for eighteen months. In the summer of 1853 Mr. Holbrook engaged in the lumber business in El Dorado county, since which he has been in the mercantile business, first at Sacramento and later at San Francisco. Though fire and flood have at several times made havoc with his property, Mr. Holbrook has surmounted every obstacle and steadily pressed his way onward and upward. He is president of the incorporated company of Holbrook, Merrill and Stetson, and its financial manager; he is owner of the block where their business is carried on, corner of Market and Beale streets, one of the most substantial and finest buildings on the Pacific coast. He has just completed an elegant residence in San Francisco, and has a pretty, country, summer residence at Menlo Park, about thirty miles south of the city. Until the trouble in Kansas Mr. Holbrook was a Democrat, but then became an advocate of the doctrine that no more slave states should be added to the American Union. In the war of the Rebellion his influence was exerted to the utmost to induce California to stand by the flag and the government. While doing business in Sacramento, a branch house was operated in Austin, Nevada, and Mr. Holbrook was its manager for two years. While in Austin, such was his popularity, that he was chosen the first mayor of the city, although his political party was largely in the minority. It was during his election canvass for mayor that the exciting incident occurred of selling the Gridley sack of flour over and over from town to town for the benefit of the government sanitary commission until more than $100,000 were realized, a detailed account of which sale can be seen in Harper's Magazine for June, 1866. "Mr. Holbrook's success from a poor boy to a leading merchant of the United States is due to a few rules adopted by him in early life, viz.: to be strictly temperate, of good habits, industrious, performing every duty faithfully, always striving to do his part in every station in life, economical, yet helping liberally the charitable, religious and public work of every community where he has resided." Clark B. is the owner of the old homestead where he was born, and which he delights to visit when he can get away from his business in Springfield, Mass. He is also owner of extensive real estate in his adopted city, where he has been a prominent meat and provision dealer for many years.

ISAAC W. HOLBROOK lived on the small farm east of G. W. Stanley's, from which he removed to Marlborough.

same farm. The latter, by his eccentricities, furnished one of the names and characters for Denman Thompson in his celebrated play of the "Old Homestead." John, a carpenter and farmer, reared his family on G. B. Holbrook farm. Daniel H., a farmer and lumberman, lived on B. F. Lombard place till his removal to Keene in 1865. His son, John J., was a graduate of New London L. & S. Institution, Brown University and Newton, Mass., Theological Institute. He fitted for a Baptist minister, but preached only occasionally, devoting his last years to civil engineering and surveying. He died March 24, 1884.

PETER² HOLBROOK lived on Sylvanus M. Cram place, succeeded by his son, Samuel, who later in life went to Westport, where his son, Henry, now lives. The place now occupied by Mrs. L. W. Holbrook and her son, Abijah, was formerly the residence of Peter³ and Leonard W. Holbrook. Peter was a hatter by trade.

William S., a laborer, has lived both in Swanzey and Winchester; George H., a butcher, in Keene, and now a resident in Walpole, and Charles D. has been an agent in various kinds of business in Swanzey and Winchester.

CYRENE JOHNSON lived where his widow now resides.

HON. ASA S. KENDALL was born in Burlington, Mass., April 27, 1814. In early life he taught school and learned the tanner and currier's trade. In 1840, with his brother Joel, he moved to Groton,

Mass., and pursued his avocations there till 1848, when he went to Medford, Mass., to superintend a large establishment; remained there till 1851, when he came to Fitzwilliam and carried on an extensive business in tanning and currying till 1867, when his property was destroyed by fire. In November of the same year he removed to West Swanzey, and with persistent zeal fitted up another establishment and successfully continued his business there till 1882, when there was a general revulsion in the tanning business in New England and it ceased to be profitable. The remainder of his life, after this, was spent in farming. Mr. Kendall was an active temperance man, and was several times the prohibition candidate for governor of New Hampshire, and also for representative to congress.

MOSES KINNEY was a blacksmith at West Swanzey.

H. L. KIBLIN is a painter in West Swanzey.

WILLIAM H. KNIGHT is a farmer and employé in pail shops.

ASAPH LANE lived on the road east of E. and L. Stone's.

ELKANAH LANE, the ancestor, lived on C. L. Lane place, which has ever since been the home of some of the family. His son, Elkanah, lived on E. Lane place by Bridge brook, and Samuel on the old homestead. Here also lived Elijah with his brothers Elisha and Ezekiel as neighbors on the north. Ezekiel built the house where E. Wilcox now lives, having previously lived on the old road a little west of this place. Dr. Samuel Lane practised his profession a short time at Swanzey Centre, with brilliant prospects before him, but he died in early manhood. In 1811, while travelling on horseback in the woods, on the road between Troy and Fitzwilliam, he had a savage encounter with a robber named Ryan, who snapped his pistol at him and rushed upon him with a dirk. Dr. Lane was stabbed in the shoulder but threw the robber and held him until help arrived. Elkanah went to Maine and Alziny to Massachusetts.

Passing to the next generation we find Luther S. with his family at Swanzey Centre, Lowell, Mass., and on the old homestead, a manufacturer and farmer. Elliot W. married Eleanor, daughter of John Stratton, and died about 1862. Ebenezer F., a farmer at East Swanzey.

FARNUM F. LANE fitted for college at Hancock and New Ipswich Academies, but was obliged to give up a collegiate education. He studied law with T. M. Edwards, of Keene; was admitted to the bar in 1843, practised law in Winchester from '43 to '46, in Walpole from '46 to '49, and in Keene the remainder of his life. He was a member of the state legislature in '47, '48, '62 and '63. He was county treasurer one year and county solicitor ten years. He was twice offered the position of justice of the supreme court of New Hampshire, but declined to accept. He was not a fluent speaker, but as a judge of law he probably had no superior in the state. As an illustration, he was referee in an important lumber case, in the northern part of the state, which lasted a month, and in which such men as Gilman Marston, Harry Bingham, Henry W. Blair, Ossian Ray and H. W. Parker were engaged as counsel. Twenty-two exceptions to Mr. Lane's rulings upon points of law were carried up to the full bench, and he was sustained upon every one, a record, it is said, without a parallel in New Hampshire.

GEO. F. LANE & SONS, pail and bucket makers, as already stated. Geo. E. died in 1888. Alonzo F. and Alpheus located in Vineland, N. J. Elisha F. has lived in Marlborough and Keene, engaged in various occupations and been successful in nearly all. MAJ. CHESTER LYMAN lived at East Swanzey on J. C. Bourn place. When the Whig party disbanded in 1855 and merged itself into the American or Republican party, he cast a solitary vote for his old party, and was proud of the distinction to vote the ticket on which was inscribed the motto "Don't give up the ship." He was a level-headed, well-read man. His son, Leonard, went to Grand Rapids, Mich., and is a pail maker.

REV. SULLIVAN HOLMAN M'COLLISTER, D.D., though a native and now a resident of Marlborough, has been for many years of his life closely identified with the people and interests of Swanzev; a student and teacher in her seminary, a supervisor of her schools, a minister and consoler to scores of her people in the hour of bereavement, being highly esteemed as a preacher by those of his own denomination, and, as a citizen, by all. He was born December 18, 1826; graduated 1851 from Vermont University, and completed a course in the divinity school of Harvard University, 1853. He taught two years in the Academy at Walpole; four years was principal of Mt. Caesar Seminary; school commissioner of Cheshire county three years, and president of the State Board of Education for the same time; was in charge of Westbrook Seminary (Me.) eight years, and president of Buchtel College (Ohio) six years. He has preached in Swanzev, Westmoreland, Nashua, Dover, Bellows Falls, Vt., and in Ohio; has visited Europe five times, sailed round the globe once, and spent more than four years in foreign lands. He has been an extensive correspondent for religious, educational and local papers, and is the author of several works on foreign travel. Mr. M'Collister married Miss Sophia F. Knight, of Dummerston, Vt. Of their four children only one survives, Rev. Lee S. M'Collister, a prominent Universalist clergyman; settled in Detroit, Mich.

EDWARD A. MCFARLAND is associated with his father-in-law, H. Denman Thompson, in the management of the "Old Homestead." His home is in Philadelphia, Pa.

JOEL MELLEN came from Fitzwilliam and became an extensive land owner and farmer in Swanzezy. His home was the Benjamin Read place, the house on which he built. One Saturday as he was riding from Keene towards home he overtook Rev. Z. S. Barstow, then a young man who had recently been settled in that town, and was walking with umbrella in hand to make an exchange with a neighboring minister on the morrow. Mr. Mellen, not knowing him, asked the stranger to ride, which invitation was gladly accepted. Learning that his companion was from Keene, Mr. M. referred to the fact that they had a new minister there. "Ah!" said the Reverend, "How do they like him? What kind of a man is he?" "Well," replied Mr. M., "I haven't heard him myself, but they say he is a regular spouter." The reply was interesting to the future D.D., and the story was often told by him in after years.

JONAS H. MERRIAM, a basket maker, came to this town from Athol, Mass., about 1836, and lived at several places in East Swanzev. He was five major nine months in the war of 1812, and stationed at Black Rock. His son William learned the tanner's trade in Swanzev and has since resided in Springfield and Palmer, Mass.

SETH POMEROY, son of Seth, lived on Mrs. McFarland place, and his son Benjamin, a laborer, on Mrs. B. Pomeroy place. Nathaniel B. has been a prosperous tanner in Townsend, Vt. David A. was killed in Vermont. Albert is a mechanic in Mass.

REUBEN PORTER was a school teacher, a merchant at the Centre and other localities. Removed to Chesterfield. Francis J. Porter lived at the Centre in steam-mill times and then at West Swanzev. J. Byron is a farmer.

STEPHEN and JOHN POTTER were cloth dressers and farmers at the outlet of Swanzev pond.

ELBRIDGE G. PRENTICE was a laborer in Westport. John M. is a farmer living on A. Ballou place.

JOSHUA J. PRIME was a farmer and lived on J. L. Winch place. His brother, Josiah, lived in a house that stood in the lot a little east of Joshua's.

JOSIAH PARSONS.

THOMAS PRIME, a farmer, lived on Frank H. Moore place and spent his last years in Maine.

JOSIAH PRIME, JR., was a carpenter, living in West Swanzey until his removal to Pennsylvania.

GEORGE H. PRIME lives at West Swanzey, an employé of H. D. Thompson.

The QUINNS are employés in the West Swanzey mills.

ABRAHAM RANDALL settled in the east part of Swanzey (now Troy) and then moved to J. W. Murphy place. Asahel, his son, lived there also, and built the house now standing. A large family of his sons remained unmarried with their father till about 1830, when most of them went to Oneida, New York. Roswell was a clothier at E. Swanzey when he removed to the West.

Dr. PAUL RAYMOND was a practising physician at the Centre and died young.

AQUILA RAMSDELL, the ancestor, lived first on Mrs. C. Holbrook place. He then removed to the farm which has since been successively occupied by his son Elisha, grandson Aquila and now by Mrs. Ramsdell and Henry A. They were farmers and carpenters. Capt. James M. Ramsdell removed to Penn.

CHARLES G. RAMSDELL and his son Eugene C. excel as musicians; the latter standing preëminently high. He resides at Music Hall, Boston, is a dealer in musical instruments and one of the most accomplished band leaders in New England. Richard R., James M., as well as Charles G., are all wooden-ware manufacturers at East Swanzey. Richard R., jr., is both farmer and brick mason. Edgar E. is a watch dealer at West Swanzey. Henry A. is a farmer and clock repairer.

TIMOTHY READ, a shoemaker, the first of the family in Swanzey, located first on Oscar Farr place, remained there a few years when he built a house on the hill about a mile east where he lived the rest of his life. His sons located as follows: Joel, a farmer, on Thomas Naylor's place. John, a shoemaker, on A. G. Read place. Josiah P., a farmer, on Oscar Farr place. Benjamin, a farmer, in Shrewsbury, Vt. Robert, a carpenter in Allegany Co., N. Y. Passing to the next generation, most of the daughters of Joel, as factory operatives, acquired a handsome fortune.

Of the sons of John, Abel W., a farmer and mechanic, lived on his father's homestead where also resides his son Albert G.

Timothy was an extensive farmer in Danby, Vt. A daughter of his was deaf, dumb and blind, but quite intelligent.

John was a hotel keeper in Fitzwilliam. Daniel accumulated quite a fortune as a stone mason, but losing it went to California where he died.

Charles, a cooper, located in Hartford, Conn. Rawson, a carpenter, also went to Hartford and became a dealer in furniture, but returned to the old homestead.

DEA. WILLIAM READ had his home and died on T. W. Parkinson place. He was a farmer, was fifty-six years clerk of the Congregational society; was actively engaged in town, church and educational matters. He was for many years a justice of the peace.

DEA. JOSIAH MILES READ has spent most of his manhood near Boston, doing successful business in that city, first as a patentee, manufacturer and dealer in boot forms, and later as a patentee and dealer in stoves and stove furniture. His home is now in Everett.

HON. BENJAMIN READ, popularly known as "Col. Read," or simply, "The Colonel," has been an extensive farmer, a merchant, lumber dealer, pail manufacturer, school officer and teacher, justice of the peace and town historian. He has, with the exception of a few years in early manhood, resided in East Swanzey and been identified with the interests of that village. He was one of the first, if not the first, in this town to ally himself with the interests of the Abolition or Liberty party, which at that time was anything but popular; and he has ever been actively engaged in political matters. Being a modest man and disliking to speak about himself, this paragraph is written by one of the committee on town history.

EDWIN F. READ, a manufacturer most of his life, has been at different times a resident of East and West Swanzey, Westport, Keene, Boston and vicinity. Wherever he has lived he has been public spirited, actively engaged in the interests of morality, education, temperance, etc. He has been too generous or too confiding in others to get or retain wealth. He now resides with his daughter, Mrs. I. A. Whitecomb, in Somerville, Mass.

GEORGE H. READ was in the sanitary commission during the war, and for many years afterwards in the pension office at Washington. He now resides in Baltimore.

JOEL READ, son of William, lived several years on G. W. Eastman place, then in Keene an employé on the railroad, and is now in a restaurant in Chicago.

ALBERT B. READ.

FRANCIS READ is an employé in the railroad shops and resides in Keene.

Of the sons of Benjamin, Albert B. has been merchant and post master in East Swanzey, but now (1892) has purchased a bakery in Winchendon, Mass., and removed thither. Willie F. was an employé in the mills till 1886, when he removed to Fitchburg, Mass., and went into a grocery store. Edwin M. is a grocer in Fitchburg, and Josiah Warren was a teamster but now is in a coal establishment in the same city.

RUFUS AND JOSIAH READ, farmers, lived respectively on Marshall W. Rixford and Mrs. A. Read places in Westport. Of the children of the former, David was a farmer on the old homestead, killed in the woods; Joel was a brick maker in Albany, N. Y.; Josiah an extensive farmer in Ill.; Alanson, a farmer and laborer in Westport; Henry P. has been pail maker and painter in Westport and Winchester.

ALLEN READ, son of Josiah, was a farmer on his father's place as is also his son George A.

ADONIRAM J. READ was an employé in the Westport Mills.

JOSEPH MASON READ has been an extensive box manufacturer in Westport and Keene. His sons, J. Carlon and George M., are now associated with him in the business.

PETER RICE was a farmer living on Alfred Talbot place.

NELSON W. RICE was a farmer at E. Swanzey; now resides in Troy.

JOHN S. RICE is a teamster at E. Swanzey.

JACOB E. RICH and J. OTIS RICH are pail turners at W. Swanzey.

WYMAN RICHARDSON, the ancestor, located on E. W. Handy place, a farmer, sickle maker, etc. His son Wyman was a blacksmith and lived on L. N. Hewes place. Elkanah was a school teacher and became a prominent man in Ohio.

The sons of Wyman were all mechanics and prosperous in business. Wyman, Nathaniel and Luna were machinists in Athol, Mass. Wyman afterwards removed to Fitchburg, Mass., and died there. Nathan Henry learned the machinist's trade in Athol where he worked about eight years when he was employed by the American Rattan Co. of Fitchburg as superintendent of their works at that place. He continued here during the existence of the company some twenty-five years, when he removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., being employed by the Union Rattan Co. of that city. He was very successful in both places, making many improvements, and patenting several inventions which have given him a competency. He now resides in Athol.

WILLIAM CARR BELDING RICHARDSON is now an extensive coal dealer in Chicago.

ERIE, son of Dr. Amos Richardson, lived in the southwest part of Keene on Swanzey line. His son Amos, "the Giant," lived on the adjoining farm in Swanzey. As an illustration of his great strength the following incident is vouched for as true. At the "raising" of the Baptist meeting house in 1804, on the frame about 20 feet from the ground a stick of timber was placed which was 36 feet long, 8 by 13 inches in the centre and tapering uniformly to each end where it was 8 by 8 inches. It was necessary to turn this stick so that the north end should be at the south. The "Giant" was asked by his companions to assist in the performance. He replied, "Gentlemen please stand aside and I will do it alone." Sampson-like, he bowed himself to the task and accomplished the feat amid the plaudits of the spectators.

His son Capt. Amos lived many years on the old homestead, but as the hill farms were being deserted he abandoned his and removed to the centre of the town there keeping a boarding house, running a store, etc. His son, Lloyd D., has been an employé and manager for railroad companies in New England, in Chicago and now in Arkansas. Most of his brothers, and in fact, many of the descendants of Dr. Amos Richardson were in business connected with railroads, and nearly all have been quite successful. As a family they have been strong and athletic, the sons knowing how to drive a spike with telling effect, or manage any business intrusted to them to the satisfaction of their employers. It is said that one of the daughters would readily take a barrel of cider from the ground and lift it into a cart.

BENJAMIN H. RICHARDSON lived many years on A. B. Dickinson farm, then at Spragueville, a dealer in ice for the Keene market.

GEO. W. RICHARDSON is a farmer, carpenter and ice dealer at W. Swanzey.

WILLIAM RIDER was a manufacturer at Swanzey Factory, and at E. Swanzey. His daughter, Jane C., a very noted somnambulist, was born in this town in 1816. In 1833, she performed in Worcester, Mass., some of the most remarkable somnambulistic feats known to the medical profession.

WILLIAM N. RIPLEY and Charles W., his son, are laborers at E. Swanzey.

N. HENRY RICHARDSON.

MARSHALL W. RIXFORD came from Winchester and is a farmer in Westport. His brother, Ephraim P., is a stone mason at W. Swanzey. Artemas W. is an employé in the West Swanzey mills.

PATRICK H. and GEORGE ROBBINS are stone masons and contractors at West Swanzey.

MATTHEW ROBLEY, a brick maker, was a deserter from the English army, into which service he had been impressed. He removed to Northfield, Mass.

NATHAN C. ROGERS was a shoemaker living at W. Swanzey. His son, Amasa S., was a farmer on P. Hare place.

JUSTICE ROGERS was a farmer on A. G. Bennett place, but for many years past has lived in Keene.

GEORGE W. ROBINSON, a laborer, lived at West Swanzey.

REV. ELISHA ROCKWOOD, D.D. (See Chap. V.)

SAMUEL ROCKWOOD came from Fitzwilliam, built the house marked G. H. Rockwood on the map, and which is now owned by G. F. Newell, a farmer and employé in the mills.

His son, Charles H., lived several years in Troy before locating as a farmer where he now resides. George H. is a school teacher, as were also all his sisters. He fitted for college at Bernardston, Mass., graduated at Dartmouth College, and has taught very successfully the higher grades of school in Jaffrey, Medway, Mass., Portsmouth, North Brookfield, Mass., Marlboro', Mass., and Chicago, Ill.

The RUGG family in Revolutionary times lived near Volney A. Macey place.

CHARLES L. RUSSELL, of the firm of C. L. Russell & Co., is one of the most extensive pail and bucket manufacturers in Swanzey, or in the county.

He was born in Keene, but the years of his manhood have been spent in West Swanzey, with which village his interests are closely identified. He owns and operates a brick yard in Keene, and is the owner of other real estate in that city. He was formerly an extensive dealer in wood and timber.

JOHN S. SARGEANT spent the first half of his life in Marlboro', the last half in E. Swanzey; a farmer, painter, paper hanger, clock repairer, etc. His son, Harvey, resides with his father; a farmer, musician, etc. Geo. H., son of Harvey, is a store clerk in Greenwich, R. I.

CALEB SAWYER, a farmer, lived on Ozro T. Thompson place. His son Abijah, a cooper, on E. Davis' place at Sawyer's Crossing.

Of the sons of the latter, Joshua and Caleb lived on their father's homestead, while Henry resided on G. W. Ellis place—all farmers. Caleb removed with his family to the west.

Joshua B., son of Henry, an able and influential man, was killed on the railroad at Winchendon, Mass.

AMOS SAWYER was an employé in the East Swanzey mills.

DR. ISRAEL SAWYER was a practising physician in town, living on Josephus Handy place.

His son Elijah was for many years a justice of the peace and clerk of the probate court for Cheshire county. He was also for a time postmaster, and was honored with most of the town offices. He was a leader in the Democratic party and a somewhat noted versifier and writer of poetry. It is supposed he was the author of "Col. Hammond's Ride." He resided at various places in town.

JOSIAH SAWYER was a hotel-keeper at West Keene.

As already stated the early SEEVERS were a race of blacksmiths, the family home being at West Swanzey, on High street, where generation after generation resided. Alfred Seaver was also a tanner and stone mason. Luman W. and Luman B. are wooden-ware manufacturers in Winchester. The latter has been a blacksmith in W. Swanzey and Winchester. George A. is a painter at W. Swanzey.

WILLIAM SEBASTIAN was a resident by Sprague's pond. His sons, William and Edward P., are hotel employés in Keene.

ANDREW SHERMAN lived on the hill east of E. Swanzey village. His son Andrew located in Keene. His grandson Timothy also resides there. The latter was formerly a sash and blind maker at Swanzey Factory, but now is in the same business at Marlboro' Depot.

EDWARD R. SIMONDS came from Langdon and lived on S. Davis place. Elmer P. is an employé in the mills.

The SLATES resided on Ashuelot river north of the bridge at Westport, hence the name, "Slate's farm" and "Slate's bridge."

JOSEPH SMEAD, a blacksmith, built a house and barn (the cellar only remains) north of Z. G. Tafts. He hammered out all the iron used in its construction, even the shingle nails. His son, Joseph B., formerly a peddler, is now a farmer in Fitchburg, Mass. Ephraim A. resides in Penn.

TIMOTHY SMITH, a farmer, lived near Alfred Talbot place.

HECTOR A. SMITH is a painter and an employé in the Westport mills.

IVORY SNOW was born in Mattapoisett, Mass., came to Richmond, thence to Swanzey, locating in the west part of the town near Chesterfield line. His sons Peter and Joseph settled in the same neighborhood; James, Joshua and Ivory in Winchester, all farmers. Joshua afterwards removed to P. Hare place where he remained till old age, when he married for his second wife the widow of Josiah Hamblet and lived with her on Mrs. Wellington place till his death, Edwin and Oramon in middle life followed the prevalent custom and left the old farms on the hill and removed to West Swanzey village. Daniel, Solon W. and Phineas H. all removed to W. Swanzey; the first two being box manufacturers, and the latter a carpenter.

BENJAMIN C. SNOW is the West Swanzey sexton, a farmer and teamster.

FRANK L. SNOW is the owner of the steam mill by the railroad in W. Swanzey, a manufacturer of pails, dealer in dry-goods and groceries, a miller and dealer in flour, grain and meal. His father is associated with him in the business.

GEORGE S. and EDWARD H. SNOW are engaged with their father in the box business. Charles T. is a graduate of a Boston University.

JOHN H. SPARHAWK lived in Richmond, on C. Marsh place, and at West Swanzey. He was a farmer, laborer and employé in the mills. His sons J. Willie and Charles B. also located at W. Swanzey.

ABRAM SPOFFORD lived several years after marriage on Amasa Ballou farm, whence he removed to Lowell, Mass.

OBADIAH SPRAGUE commenced his business career as a dealer in palm-leaf hats in Richmond. He has since been merchant in Keene, an associate with C. Bridgman, cashier of the Winchester National Bank; manager and prime mover in all the changes and moves of the Stratton Mills and West Swanzey Manufacturing Companies, and builder and owner of the mills at Spragueville. Though his life has been exceedingly busy he is ever interested in the good order, improvement and welfare of the village where he resides.

SIMEON A. SPRING is a brick-mason at West Swanzey.

PENTECOST STANLEY of Attleborough, Mass., located on the farm which has since been owned and occupied by his descendants, Israel, Alonzo A. and Geo. W.,—all farmers. Alonzo A., after the death of his wife, sold the farm and resides with his children. Geo. W. is an extensive farmer and lumberman in Langdon.

NATHANIEL STANLEY, son of Israel, lived in the small house east of the Stanley place. His son Cyrus W. lives at W. Swanzev.

DANIEL STANTON, a tanner, resided at W. Swanzev.

JOHN STARKEY came from Attleborough, Mass., and in 1771 bought four lots of land in the southeast part of the town; one lot of which and a part of the three others have since been set off to Troy. His son Peter settled in Fitzwilliam, and John, Enoch and Joseph on the original purchase. The Swanzev part of these lots is now owned principally by E. F. Lane and Mrs. A. L. Bailey. The east end of the four lots constitutes a large part of the Luther Whittemore farm. John Starkey was the ancestor of nearly all of the family name in Richmond, Swanzev and Troy. Of the next generation Peter lived near Graves' mills, Laban in E. Swanzev, John in Richmond, and Calvin and Luna in Troy.

COL. HENRY STARKEY came from Richmond and lived where his grandson J. Leroy now resides. He was a genial, prosperous farmer. A large number of his friends and townspeople called on him Sept. 1, 1885, to celebrate the 90th anniversary of his birth. Of his sons John W. was a well-to-do farmer in Richmond, and in Swanzev on the A. B. Cook farm, and afterwards proprietor of the City Hotel in Keene. Alvin spent much of his life in Winchester as a business man, but died in Buffalo, N. Y. He loaned the town a large sum during the war. Henry was a hotel-keeper at W. Swanzev, Brattleboro, Vt., and other places. Joseph lived in Richmond. William W. was a shoox maker and lumber dealer in Michigan and other places.

ISAAC STARKEY lived on the old turnpike road in the east part of the town; Horace at Factory Village, Cyrus in Shrewsbury, Vt., Miles in Wallingford, Vt., and Lemuel was a hotel-keeper in Brattleboro', Vt. Lewis Starkey lived at E. Swanzev. J. Leroy has been selectman for three successive years.

The STEARNS family has been prominent in Swanzev and wherever its branches have located.

Abraham was a resident of West Swanzev. Of his sons, Abijah, and Asaph went to Ohio; John was a merchant in Boston, and Abraham in Swanzev Centre and Woodstock, Vt. Samuel, a farmer, lived at West Swanzey where his son Abraham now resides. He was moderator at nearly all town meetings for many years. He was also a merchant and lumber dealer.

Arba was a successful farmer at W. Swanzey on C. Hanrahan place. He was popularly known as "Uncle Arba." Some of the children of these two families reside in Oregon, and have been highly prosperous.

Of the sons of WILLIAM STEVENSON (or Stephenson, as a part of the descendants spell the name), Enos was a shoemaker and lived at Swanzey Centre, died at John A. Rand place. William, a farmer on H. Stephenson place in the west part of the town. Ira lived many years on a now abandoned farm west of Everett Holbrook place, died in Chesterfield in 1891. Eli lived and died on J. L. Winch place.

Of the next generation Farnum Hiram is a shoemaker and resides in Brattleboro', Vt. Leonard L. removed to the west. Elias G. is a farmer and shoemaker, also an expert as a trapper and hunter of foxes. Sumner B. engaged in various employments in various places. He died in Keene a few years since. Hiram W. lived and died in Hinsdale. Charles E. resides in Massachusetts.

JACOB M. STODDARD was a laborer in Westport.

MARTIN and SAMUEL STONE, brothers and substantial farmers, came from Fitzwilliam and spent their lives respectively on the Edmund Stone and C. H. Rockwood places. Capt. Edmund Stone has been successful as a farmer, lumber dealer and in other occupations. He was town collector many years. Lyman M. resides on his father's homestead a farmer, teamster and lumber man. Seamon does business in Chicago.

Col. PHINEAS STONE came from Lancaster, Mass., and located on the farm since occupied by his son, Capt. Phineas and grandson Marcus C., all prominent farmers. Phineas, sen., was also a hotel keeper many years. Joseph and Henry were successful merchants in Boston. Marcus C. adds lumbering to his other employment. Solon H. runs a portable steam saw-mill in neighboring towns.

SYLVANDER STONE was a farmer most of his life in Swanzey Centre. He died Feb. 1, 1891. His son, Demeritt, died in the army. George D. is a farmer and owner of Mrs. C. Whitcomb place. He is one of the town sextons.

CHARLES N. STONE is an employé in the East Swanzey pail shops.

ROSWELL STOWELL was a farmer in Westport. Eles C. is a provision dealer in Keene (Bullard & Stowell).

No name is more prominently connected with West Swanzey Village than that of STRATTON. About 1790, Richard Stratton came to town and located on the spot which is now the residence of George E. Whitcomb. He was a dyer and dresser of cloth, and during his life was extensively engaged in that business. His son John inherited his father's homestead, and during nearly the whole of his long life was largely engaged as a manufacturer of and dealer in lumber. He was also an extensive farmer. In the latter part of his life he relinquished the "old mansion" to his daughter, Mrs. Frink, and built another house immediately east of it which, at his decease, he bequeathed to his daughters Mrs. Thayer and Mrs. Wardner.

HON. ISAAC STRATTON learned the trade of his grandfather and successfully managed that and other kinds of business as narrated in Chapter IX. He has been active in temperance and educational movements, and in promoting the interests of his native village. Since relinquishing his more active employments, he has resided much of the time in Keene. His son, Menzies, is a jeweller in Springfield, Mass. Emery W. was station agent at West Swanzey at the time of his death. William Stratton lived on Maple street and was noted as a player on musical instruments.

Alfred lived on C. L. Russell place, a farmer and manufacturer. John was not only an extensive manufacturer at West Swanzey, but in later life a hotel keeper at Boston. His house in West Swanzey was that now occupied by R. Whitcomb. His sons John and Byron, by untiring energy, have become very wealthy clothing dealers in New York City.

OSCAR STRATTON was a tanner in Sterling, Mass., but now resides with his son in Denver, Col.

GEORGE WILLIAM STRATTON, son of William and Mary F. Stratton, was born in West Swanzey, N. H., Aug. 1, 1830. At the age of seven he displayed a lively interest in music, and begged his father to allow him to learn the clarionet. In a few weeks he was able to play one or two airs with considerable correctness and he was encouraged to go on. With a steady perseverance he continued practising the next two years, at the expiration of which time he could perform all the popular melodies of the day in such a musician-like manner, that his father organized a little band, with George as leader with his E flat clarionet, his brother John F. with his trombone, and with one or two singers, to make up a respectable concert troupe, travelling during three years, nearly all the time in the N. E. states, giving concerts with continued success. At the age of nine the young clarionetist had studied the rudiments of music sufficiently to be able to read tolerably well, waltzes, quicksteps, marches, etc. At ten years of age he was seized with the idea of composing some music, and appealed for assistance in learning something about harmony, but with very poor success; from the wisest musicians within his reach he received only the information that a third above or a third below any given tone would be pretty sure always to chord! He experimented a little with this profound knowledge of harmony, but found it too monotonous and simple to be interesting. Then he tried his hand at writing a melody, filling out a few bars with properly timed notes, but without much calculation how they would sound,—a trial was to prove that; so after finishing he took his clarionet and read them off. He pronounced it a bad tune, and tried again in a similar manner; and after trying his second effort with the clarionet, took the sheet upon which experiments were written, tore them into pieces, saying, “Before a fellow can compose music I believe he’s got to learn how!” This ended his attempts at composition for a considerable time.

At twelve years of age, when he had been travelling giving concerts most of the time during three years, playing nearly the same pieces over and over again, George became very tired of the business and prevailed upon his father to discontinue travelling and so the concertizing was brought to an end and his clarionet packed away for quite a long time. He remained in his native village from twelve to fourteen; from fourteen to eighteen he was in Boston and Lowell most of the time, and it was at the age of sixteen that he heard for the first time, music of the great masters, which revealed a new world of happiness for him, and which, in his own words, “so stirred my soul that there seemed to be no possibility for argument about what I had better choose as my vocation for life—I must be a musician, an educated musician, a composer of operas!” He aimed high at the start, and went to work with a will and a tenacity which he well understood were necessary in order to accomplish what he had set his heart upon. He cut loose from all comrades, and for six years he could think of but little else than his studies, which comprised many things besides music—astronomy, geology, physiology, philosophy, the French language as well as English and other school studies, for his early education had been much neglected, and it was his determination to be a good scholar in other things as well as in music. It was, then, at the age of sixteen that he really commenced studying music; what he had before learned should go for merely a trifle, as it was only a trifling part of what one must learn to be an opera composer when he has to write for a large orchestra, at least from sixteen to twenty different parts (instruments) and solo voices and chorus combined. He took his clarionet in hand again, and in two years was a concert solo performer as a man, not as a boy. At the same time he began with the violin and practised it with great energy for five years, studying the other stringed and brass instruments of the orchestra a little; along with these went harmony and the theory of music, and very soon the piano and organ, and the higher branches of harmony, counterpoint and composition under some of the most able teachers in Boston. In Manchester, N. H., at the age of twenty, by advice of some good friends he had made there, he announced himself as "teacher of music," and held the position there during the next sixteen years. In this same year he was elected director of the orchestra of the Choral Society.

It was about 1852 that the young composer felt, not without reason, that he was able to strike out freely for himself in original compositions, and after producing quite a number of marches, waltzes, polkas, songs, duets and other light pieces, the most of which were published, and about a hundred pieces of church music, he composed his first piece of length and importance—Concert Overture No. 1, for full orchestra. During the four years, from 1852 to 1856, he was teaching a great deal, and was applying himself with renewed energy to study, so that much of the time his labors went far into the night. In the autumn of 1856 he got together an orchestra of twenty-two performers, quite a large orchestra for those times, and gave two orchestra concerts, the first of the kind ever given in the state. He had both vocal and instrumental assistants from Boston. It was at the first of these two concerts that his Concert Overture No. 1, for full orchestra, was first performed, and it was received with loud and prolonged applause by a very large audience, and had to be repeated. Its success was so decided that it was put upon the programme of the next concert, and again the audience would not relax in their applause until a repetition was granted. These orchestra concerts so delighted the music lovers of the city that in the following year, by subscription, funds were raised to insure the expenses of a series of four concerts on precisely the same scale, and they were given with the same success, the large hall always being packed, seats and standing. The flattering success with which his first Concert Overture had met inspired Mr. Stratton to compose another, which he did during the year, and at these concerts Concert Overture No. 2 was performed twice, and was well received. No. 1 was also given on two evenings, and, as before, loudly cheered, and repetitions always demanded. Following these came Concert Overtures No. 3 and No. 4.

In 1857 he felt ready to take in hand the large work which he had for over ten years been working for, a grand opera, and in four months it was completed covering a little less than five hundred large pages of music paper. It was entitled "The Buccaneer," a grand tragic opera in three acts. Soon after its completion, two public performances were given, with Boston solo singers for the difficult parts, of portions of the opera; and the Manchester papers spoke in high praise of the music. Because there were no American or English opera companies in the country to perform large operas, the opera entire has never been performed.

Mr. Stratton now said, he would compose some operatic music which could be sung in America, in the towns and small villages; they shall be little operas on the same plan as the large Italian operas, with a regular story carried through in detail, giving him an opportunity to exercise himself in writing graceful, well-formed melodies, and enabling him to produce dramatic effects, though in a somewhat limited form. The plan was entirely new, none similar having previously appeared, and the London (England) Morning Post said in a review of Mr. Stratton's operettas, as late as 1872, that no better works of the kind could be selected, because no others exist. So, in a few months after "The Buccaneer" had been laid aside, and his mind entirely free from it, he was at work upon an operetta for young people, entitled "The Fairy Grotto," and soon after its completion was brought out by a class of one hundred singers all belonging to the city. In the course of two weeks it was performed five times in the largest hall in Manchester, and on every occasion to a closely-packed enthusiastic audience. It was a great success. Everybody seemed astonished to see what beautiful and dramatic effects could be produced by a class of young folks who had never before appeared upon the operatic stage! Notwithstanding the decided success of this first operetta, the composer was not satisfied with it for one or two reasons. He knew that he could write some better ones, and decided to set "The Fairy Grotto" aside, and write a new one. In a short time, then, he had his new work in hand, and in three weeks' time it was finished. The actual time occupied in composing this operetta—"Lalla," was less than ten hours! It was written in pencil sketches at various times during the days and evenings of these three weeks, between music lessons, a melody sometimes being taken down on the way from one house to another.

For these, less than ten hours' work, the composer has received a clear profit, above all the expenses of making the books, advertising them and selling them, of fully $5,000. Over 20,000 books have been sold! On its completion it was performed with the expected success entertained by the composer, night after night, and, like "The Fairy Grotto," had to be discontinued, because many of the young singers became so tired out with excitement and fatigue.

After four or five more years of constant teaching, he began seriously to think that an end must come to it, and what must follow occupied his mind for a long time, being naturally rather cautious. He became restive; for many years he had longed for travel; he wished to go to Germany, not merely to see it, but to remain for a length of time in the land of the great artists, the great composers of music who had given him so much happiness through the study of their great masterpieces. The question came through this, must he forsake a professional life. Again we will give his own words:—"For months I was very unhappy. It was a struggle for me to make up my mind to tear myself from my art which I loved so well, and go into the miserable business of money getting! But to carry out my plans of life I must live in Europe several years, and to do it I must have money, and I must have a business to bring in money while I am away."

In 1866, Mr. Stratton moved to Boston and established himself in the general musical merchandise trade, as a wholesale house, which has been his principal business from that time to the summer of 1891, when he retired from business to enjoy a few years of rest.

For two years he was editor and proprietor of a Musical Journal, which added to his cares, and the labor on which was most entirely done at night. But when he went to Europe to remain for a time, this enterprise was thrown up because there was no one in his concern to take care of it.

Soon after he was fairly settled in business he published his operetta "Laila," the first edition being one thousand copies. Orders came in very rapidly from all directions, and in a few weeks the first edition was exhausted; and then followed the second and third editions, neither of which lasted so long as the first; and so it went on for a long time, the particulars of which it is not necessary to give. Every one knowing about the success of the little opera seemed surprised that it should get such a lively start without any apparent reason. Mr. Stratton says that he was probably the most astonished of any one at the manner in which the musical public took hold of it and managed it. It was written for children from five to fifteen years of age, and the heroine, Laila, intended to be a girl of about a dozen years. One of the first things he heard was that it was being brought out in academies and seminaries by grown-up young ladies, in churches by Sunday-school classes, in theatres and opera houses, married ladies sometimes taking the part of Laila!

In about a year after "Laila" had been published the composer began to receive letters from those who had brought it out, strongly urging him to give them another operetta of similar style. The appeals seemed to be so earnest that Mr. Stratton says he scarcely knew what to do. He was now a business man, overwhelmed with work and anxiety about his young musical-instrument establishment, had thought but little about musical composition for several years, and had no mind nor time for it, and very much feared he should not write so good a work as he ought if he should, under the unfavorable circumstances, make the attempt. But as the appeals continued to come in, he decided to write one, and in about a year "Genevieve" was completed and proved to be a success; like "Laila," it went from Maine to California, Texas and Florida, being played in all the states and some of the territories, and the opinions expressed almost invariably were, that the music was superior to that of "Laila."

No sooner had "Genevieve" gone the rounds, following "Laila," than letters began to come in almost as rapidly as two years before, which caused "Genevieve" to come into existence, saying, "We want another operetta, with fairies in it,—a fairy operetta!"

Mr. Stratton's business had been growing larger and larger all the time, and he was naturally enough of a business man to know that he must not allow his business to go to ruin from neglect by giving too much of his mind to operatic compositions; and again it was difficult to decide exactly what to do. "The Fairy Grotto" was a very pretty name, and that was the first thing decided upon—that it should be so named. An entirely new story was written, so the libretto was entirely new, and all that is in the book of "The Fairy Grotto," as it now stands, that was in the first work of the same title, is the name and six or seven of the best pieces of the music. Work was immediately commenced upon it, and when about in the middle of the second act, Mr. Stratton suddenly started for Europe, to remain quite a time, and the operetta was finished in Germany, printed there and sent to Boston for sale. It is in four acts, and considerably larger than "Genevieve," and requiring brilliant costumes and scenery.

"The Fairy Grotto" was considerable of an advance upon "Laila" and "Genevieve," being larger and more difficult in performance and therefore could not be brought out in every little town where the other operettas had been given, but it was a genuine success and has been given in all parts of the country.

The reader has seen by what has been recorded that Mr. Stratton for several years has been working very hard, much beyond his strength, and he was warned during the time by his friends, that it was dangerous for him to continue his labors day and night, and he had better be on his guard; but being a pretty strong, healthy man, of strict temperate habits, he thought there was no danger; but the crash came, and he had to bear the consequences, which were indeed very severe. His sensitive nervous organization, an indispensable requisite to an artist, but an obstacle to a business man who has to fight battles with the cold-hearted world, broke down. And here is the great misfortune of his life. He had a severe partial congestion of the brain and prostration of the nervous system, and nearly lost his life! For two years he was a very weak man, able to do scarcely anything, sleeping only one, two and three hours out of the twenty-four. These two years he spent mostly in Europe and rested all he thought he could, but having so much business on his hands, much instruction had continually to be sent to Boston. Could he have had something like unbroken rest for two or three years he thinks he could have become pretty strong again, but the busy world seemed determined to keep him at work about his business matters. But musical composition could no more be thought of! His head was so weak, nervous and excitable, that fifteen minutes study over a musical idea would entirely exhaust him and throw him into distress from which he could not recover for hours.

Since then (1874), he has resided most of the time in Europe, and has been under the care of several distinguished physicians who have allowed him even to practise the piano but very little on account of the excitement which it produces. His business house in Boston during all these years had, as before, gone on steadily and prosperously, no misfortune ever having happened to it; and, except one year when he had a partner, and about two years when he was a very sick man, he has been the chief manager, sending his orders every week to Boston from Europe or Africa or wherever he happened to be, and having detailed reports sent from the store to him also every week. He has resided and travelled most of the time in Europe; passing the summers in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, and winters in southern France, Italy, Sicily, and two winters in Egypt, for the benefit of his health, which required a warm, even and sunny climate.

G. W. Stratton

He went up the Nile 550 miles, to Luxor, Thebes and Karnak, where are the grandest ruins in Egypt. During these years he has partly recovered the strength he lost so suddenly in 1874, but is not yet strong enough to undertake a musical composition of any length.

It has been seen that he has been an extensive traveller, has crossed the Atlantic ocean twenty-six times.

In 1885 he established a Free Public Library and Art Gallery in his native village at a cost of little over ten thousand dollars. The building is not a large structure, but a very solid one built to last many hundred years. It is Roman architecture designed by Mr. Stratton from studies made by him of architecture in Italy; is 40 feet long, 25 feet wide with arched ceiling 22 feet high; has four large windows arranged to give the most perfect light for the pictures. The two pillars of the portico are of red granite, highly polished, made in Aberdeen, Scotland, especially for the building; the foundation is of large piece of squared stone sunk two feet below hard pan. It is thoroughly fire-proof, being almost entirely of brick, stone and iron; the walls are eighteen inches thick of brick of the best quality; the floor is of large slabs of marble resting upon piers which are sunk as deep as the foundation. At the opposite end of the room from the entrance, in a niche made for the purpose, is an excellent marble bust of Mr. Stratton, made by the distinguished American artist in Rome, Italy, Mr. Franklin Simmons, at a cost of over $550.00, including the pedestal.

The library contains over 2,400 volumes, most of them the best in the English language. Being an educational institution, care was taken to have good selections of works on the sciences, books of travel, biographies of great men, histories, several volumes in different languages; there are two large volumes, a German publication on art and architecture giving over two thousand illustrations, excellent engravings of celebrated paintings, statuary and architecture of every description, almost everything of importance back to the great temples and pyramids of Egypt 4,000 years ago. There are over two hundred pieces of sheet music, carefully selected as teaching pieces for young people, which are given out for two weeks, the same as books, and according to a Boston reviewer no other institution in our country has done this. The Art Gallery contains 220 pictures which Mr. Stratton collected during his travels in Europe and Africa.

They are most interesting and instructive, exhibiting the great cathedrals, palaces and towers of Europe ; the ruins of the old aqueducts, colossemn, baths, tombs, etc., of Rome ; the temples, mosques and pyramids of Egypt are among the collection.

On the 28th and 30th of Sept. and 2nd of Oct., 1886, Mr. Stratton gave three lectures on Europe and recitals of classical music for the piano in the Library building which were well attended and proved interesting and instructive. The following is the list of the music which Mr. Stratton played, without the assistance of notes, during the three evenings :

BEETHOVEN.—Grand Sonata Pathetique ; Andante from Symphony No. 5 ; Sonata in G, No. 10, Opus 14, No. 2, first and second movements.

MOZART.—Sonata in B flat, No. 4, Andante ; Gloria from 12th Mass.

SCHUBERT.—Serenade.

MENDELSSOHN.—Priest's March, from "Athalia ;" Rondo Capriccioso in E minor, Opus 14 ; Concerto in D minor, No. 2, second and third movements.

At the close of the last evening a unanimous vote of thanks was given Mr. Stratton for his interesting entertainments, and an earnest invitation given him to give another course as soon as his health and convenience would permit.

It has been said of large styles of musical compositions that to be known out of their own country they must possess real merit. Taking this as the severe test of an operetta, it must be conceded that those of Mr. Stratton's are musical compositions of a high order. They have been published by three different music houses in London, and have been extensively performed in England, Ireland and Scotland, and calls have been made for a German translation for Germany.

About Mr. Stratton's business career he does not give much information, as he considers it of little public interest. He says, however, that he thinks it will be a satisfaction to the people of Swanzev, at least, to know that not one dollar of the money which went to pay for this Library building and its contents, was made out of any "operations" in mining, real estate, railroad stocks or speculation, or in any sort of gambling whatever, of any kind ; but that the funds were earned from fair profits made in his legitimate business, through hard work and study and patient waiting.

JOHN FRANKLIN STRATTON, son of William and Mary F. Stratton, was born in West Swanzev, N. H., Sept. 13, 1832. At the age of six he displayed an earnest inclination to practise music, and begged his father to get him a trombone, not wishing his brother George, who had been practising the clarionet a year, to make all the music in the house. His wish was gratified and soon there were two young music students in the house. About a year later, both boys having made such unexpected progress on their instruments, the father organized a little band, and with a couple of singers, set out on a concert tour which was so successful that for nearly three years they continued to travel, giving concerts in nearly all the cities and towns of any considerable size in the New England states and some in New York state, with good success, many places being visited two or three times. In those days, 1839 to 1842, when prodigies were scarce, the two boys were considered quite wonders to perform so well upon their instruments. The monotony of playing the same pieces nearly, for such a long time night after night, even in a concert room, became wearisome and in the summer of 1842 the boys prevailed upon their father to give up the concert business and it ended here. From this time until he was seventeen he resided in his native village, in Lowell and North Chelmsford, Mass.; had become an expert performer on the E flat bugle and cornet, and before eighteen years of age was leader of the Worcester brass band and a year later was leader of the Hartford, Conn., cornet band. In Hartford, he had, for a time, a music store and some other business, but soon took up his residence in New York and became conductor of the Staten Island Philharmonic Society, an amateur orchestra, and had an orchestra of his own known as Stratton's Palace Garden Orchestra.

At the breaking out of our great war, 1861, he went into the manufacturing of band instruments which continued several years and he had little more to do with bands or orchestras or with the practice of music in any way. In 1867 he located in Maiden Lane and added to his business the general musical merchandise trade, importing from Europe where most of these goods are made. Soon after he began the manufacture of violins in Leipsic, Germany, and later built a factory in Gohlis, a suburb of Leipsic, which was visited by King John, of Saxony, on July 30, 1872. After a few years the factory was sold and was occupied by a manufacturer of other goods, and Mr. Stratton returned to New York taking the general management of his wholesale importing house of musical merchandise, to which he has continued to give his attention up to the present time.

BARZILLAI STREETER was born in Cumberland, R. I., in 1760; married when about nineteen years of age; moved with his family from place to place during the next twenty-five years twenty-five times, and came to Swanzev about 1805, purchasing a small farm and house near Swanzev Pond, on the east side of the road opposite the picnic grounds, where he lived the rest of his life, a farmer and shoemaker. His four sons all lived to old age and became eminent in their several professions, a remarkable example of self-made men. Barzillai was a lawyer. Joseph B., a physician in Hartford, Pa., lived to be ninety-six years of age. Sebastian and Russell were clergymen, pioneers and leaders in the Universalist denomination. A part of their education was obtained at the common schools and at Chesterfield Academy, but the larger part was wrought out as they labored on the farm or at the shoemaker's bench. The two clergymen (and perhaps the others) were eminent Latin and Greek scholars. They were the compilers of a hymn book extensively used in the denomination, writing many of the hymns themselves. In early life they were Baptists as were also their parents before them. Sebastian was a minister in Weare, Hopkinton and Portsmouth, N. H., also in Haverhill and Boston, Mass. In the latter place he was pastor of the church on Hanover street for forty years. During his ministry he united more than 4,000 couples in marriage.

Russell was a pastor in Portland, Maine, Watertown and Shirley, Mass., and Woodstock, Vt. He was the founder of the "Trumpet" newspaper, which afterwards became the great organ of the denomination.

JOHN H. STREETER is an employé in the mills of East Swanzev.

STEPHEN STREETER lived on Frank H. Moore's place, but has removed to Westmoreland.

REV. CLEMENT SUMNER was one of the early ministers in Keene, but afterwards removed to Arba Stearns' place in West Swanzev.

WILLIAM A. SUMNER lived at West Swanzev and worked in the mill.

AARON H. SUMNER works in a saw-mill and lives in Hinsdale.

The TAFT family have been noted carpenters and mechanics. Nathan Taft lived south of L. W. Holbrook place on a now discontinued road. James Sibley lived on Warren Harris place, removed to East Swanzev and went into the mill business. Zadoc L. lived on E. K. Aldrich place. He built the covered bridge at West Swanzev. T. J. Taft and James went to New York state.

IRA TAFT, a while at Graves' mills, went to Vermont.

A. R. TAFT, both carpenter and farmer, lived on H. Bowen place. Removed to Keene, then to Worcester, Mass., and then to the "West." Giles, Lovell, Farris and Bezaleel were all carpenters and mechanics. The first two were life-long residents of Swanzey. Farris lived on J. W. Ballou place and worked for the Colonys in their mill at Keene. Bezaleel lived in Alstead. Don Carlos was a graduate of Amherst College and Union Theological Seminary, N. Y., was licensed to preach, became a teacher and preacher, and later a successful banker in Kansas.

Of the sons of Lovell, Edward is foreman in Hayward's chair factory in Gardner, Mass. Fred has charge of a large carriage shop in Mass., and Don Carlos is a head carpenter for Bowdich in Framingham, Mass.

GEORGE W. TAFT is a teamster at East Swanzey.

ZADOC TAFT lived in this town, Keene and Richmond. He was a manufacturer of mill stones.

PELEG TAFT came from Richmond and bought the A. G. Bennett place where he died.

RUFUS TAFT, son of Rufus, resides at West Swanzey, an employé in the mills. He has represented the town in the legislature. Ephraim F. also lived at West Swanzey, but removed to Keene. Zina G. was for several years a farmer in Illinois previous to locating where he now resides.

JOHN W. TAGGARD was a farmer on the P. E. Gay place. Removed thence to Walpole.

The TALBOTS, Charles, Alfred, Wesley and Lewis, are farmers and laborers. Wesley resides with his father on the old "Brown" farm.

GEORGE TALBOT lived on Josephus Handy's place; went west several years previous to his death.

DAVID TAYLOR and family, laborers, lived in School District, No. 8.

CHARLES W. TAYLOR is a farmer at West Swanzey.

ELIAS THATCHER was a farmer on the hill near Marlborough line.

BENJAMIN THATCHER lived at East Swanzey and at Factory Village. His son George was a prominent lumber man at Factory Village. He now resides in Marlborough.

DR. EZRA THAYER, a practising physician, lived in a house a little east of No. 8 School house, which was torn down about 1840. His son Moses located on a now abandoned farm on Winchester line west of E. Holbrook place. Aaron lived in No. 8 and was killed by a wagon passing over his body. Alexander, son of Moses, was a jeweller in Winchester and Keene. Moses, jr., went to California.

JOHN S. THAYER was a tailor in West Swanzey.

BENJAMIN THOMPSON of Smithfield, R. I., had four sons who located in Swanzey: Samuel, John, Roger and Ebenezer. Samuel on C. H. Holbrook place; Roger on J. L. Starkey place, and Ebenezer on Oscar Farr place. Of the sons of Samuel, Timothy lived on C. S. Whitcomb place, and Jesse, a carpenter, at East Swanzey. John, son of John, located first at Factory village and was one of the corporate members of the Manufacturing Co., at that place, and then became an extensive farmer on H. Forbush place, where he was succeeded by his son Alvah and grandson Mowry A. The latter was a land surveyor and carpenter. Both he and his father removed to Marlboro', about 1860. Of the sons of Roger, David was a graduate of Dartmouth college, a noted school teacher and lawyer; went to the south. Ezekiel was a farmer on his father's homestead, and Moses a farmer where his son Thayer now resides. Ozro T., son of the latter, is also a farmer. Samuel Thompson, son of John, was a farmer on J. M. Cole place, as was also his son Samuel.

Capt. RUFUS, a carpenter, has lived in Girard, Pa., in West Swanzey, and other places.

Of the sons of Jesse, Russell F. removed to Iowa and became an extensive farmer. Jesse was a car builder, and died in Worcester about 1864. Joshua Chandler is a farmer in Girard, Pa. David F. resides in Spring Prairie, Iowa, a farmer and carpenter. Lysander, a master mechanic, died at South Boston, April 9, 1884.

HENRY DENMAN THOMPSON, son of Rufus, or as he is generally called, "Den Thompson," or "Uncle Josh," is probably more widely known than any other Swanzey man. Although he was born in Pennsylvania enough of his youth and riper years were spent in Swanzey and New England to enable him to study the yankee character and delineate the same as few other men have been able to do. His plays were written by himself and have been rehearsed in the principal cities of all parts of the country with remarkable success. His dwelling at West Swanzey and its surroundings are very attractive it being the homestead of his maternal grandfather, Dr. Henry Baxter. Mr. Thompson is genial as a companion and liberal in his benefactions.

Yours truly
Dennan Thompson

AMASA THOMPSON lived at Westport and was a shoemaker and lumberman.

DEA. MARTIN THOMPSON, a farmer, lived on the Martin Mason place and at Westport.

NATHANIEL THOMPSON lived on the William Ballou place. He was a noted ditcher. He built the saw-mill near his house. His son Albert was a merchant and prominent man in East Westmoreland; died in 1891.

SUSANNA THOMPSON was born in Boston, Mass.; spent many years of her early womanhood in Keene; was actively engaged in the sanitary commission during the War of the Rebellion; came to Swanzezy soon after that event and has since resided here, having been engaged in literary pursuits, writing for the press and preaching a part of the time.

WILLIAM H. THORNING is an employé in the mills at Factory village.

EPHRAIM F. TOWNE, a farmer, came from Keene and lived several years on G. W. Richardson place; removed to Rindge and died there.

NICHOLAS TRASK was a large land owner in the southwest part of the town.

EZRA TRASK lived near A. Talbot place in the west part of the town.

His sons Willard and David lived near him. The reputation of Ezra and his sons for honesty was not good.

THOMAS⁵ TROWBRIDGE a farmer lived on or near J. O. Gary place. His son Thomas⁶ lived on his father's homestead. Col. Thomas⁷ Trowbridge was a farmer and lived on C. E. Hill's place.

COL. JONAS TWITCHELL and his son David lived on A. G. Bennett farm and were prominent farmers. The family or descendants afterwards lived in Northfield, Mass.

DANIEL TWITCHELL came from Richmond and lived on J. M. Cole and other places. His sons Orison and William are laborers living at East Swanzezy.

JAMES UNDERWOOD was a hotel keeper and a leading man at Factory village, also an extensive drover. Hiram was a farmer living where his son, George L., now resides. James E. is a prominent man in Toronto, Canada. Elmer A. is a hotel employé at Factory village.

DANIEL VERRY was a mill owner and operator, also a farmer near Chesterfield, in the west part of the town. His son Horace lived near Mrs. Johnson's place. Oratus J. is a wheelwright at West Swanzey.

ITHAMER WARD before going to Westmoreland late in life, lived at Swanzey Centre and other places, a farmer. His son, Harrison R., lived at East Swanzey and Keene. George W. resides at West Swanzey.

NAHUM W. WARD for many years has lived at Factory village. His son, Henry, is a hotel keeper in Keene.

GEORGE P. WARD for many years at West Swanzey went to Troy. He is a pail maker.

ZENAS WARE, whose ancestors came to Winchester from Franklin, Mass., moved to the Marcus Bullard place in the southwest part of the town in 1796, where he remained till his death. His son, Dea. Jonathan D., remained on the same place as a farmer till 1848, when he removed to the Col. Elisha Whitcomb farm, where his son, Alonzo A., now resides. Joel, youngest son of Zenas, was a prominent school teacher in town in his early years, after which he was a farmer in New York, and later in Illinois.

ALONZO A. WARE has been school teacher, land surveyor and farmer; has been largely engaged in probate business; and in addition to the town and county offices he has held, which have been already named, has been a justice of the peace since 1860. He is now president of Security Savings bank, in Winchester.

ZIBA and PHINEAS A. WARE, farmers, though living in Winchester, are closely identified with West Swanzey by church and social relations. Joseph has been merchant and peddler; lives at West Swanzey.

DEA. DANIEL WARNER lived about midway between V. Marey and A. G. Read places. He was a prominent man in the early history of the town. His son, Daniel, went to Washington, N. H.

EDWARD WATSON, a brick mason, lived several years on F. A. Watson place, but left his family and went "West."

RICHARD WEEKS was a farmer the last of his life on J. L. Winch place. Charles R. is a laborer, living at Westport.

Elmore A. Ware

CAPT. THOMAS T. WETHERBEE was a farmer and blacksmith; lived on C. E. Hill's place. He was selectman, representative and justice of the peace. A few of his last years were spent with relatives in Vermont and in Westmoreland.

DANIEL WETHERBEE came from Stowe, Mass., and located on a farm, about a mile east of E. Swanzev Village; was a justice of the peace, land surveyor, and a leading man in town.

ELIJAH WETHERBEE, a mill-wright, lived and died in Marlow. Daniel lived in Marlborough. Calvin H. lived in Boston; went early to California and became a wealthy lumberman. John lives in Charlestown, and has been a furniture dealer in Boston.

AARON WHEELER lived on O. S. Eaton place, as did his father Silas before him. He was a farmer and a noted fox hunter.

JAMES WHEELOCK, a farmer, lived on the hill east of East Swanzev. Removed to Vermont.

WILLIAM WHEELOCK lived near H. W. Leonard place, a stirring farmer and actively engaged in temperance movements. All the family have died or removed from town. George D. lives in Keene and is associated with C. Gonyon in the marble business.

LINCOLN WHEELOCK has lived both at East and West Swanzev.

CAPT. JOSEPH WHITCOMB was at the head of a very numerous and intelligent branch of the Whitcomb family that settled in Swanzev. He first located on R. R. Ramsdell, jr., place, and then went to West Swanzev, and with his son, Joseph, built the saw and grist mill on the east side of the river. Joseph, the son, afterwards went to Grafton, Vt., where his descendants live. Of the sons of Capt. Joseph, Col. Jonathan located on M. C. Stone farm, in a house remembered by our oldest citizens as standing a little north of J. G. Huntley's. He was a farmer and merchant and active in military affairs. He was buried with military honors. His favorite horse which he had rode, being richly caparisoned, followed him to the grave, heading a procession of friends and citizens which extended the entire distance from his house to his grave in the northwest part of the old cemetery. Col. Elisha, a farmer and extensive land owner, lived on the farm now owned by A. A. Ware. He was state senator and an honored citizen; was likewise a manufacturer at East Swanzev. Gen. Philemon came later to town and occupied the Ramsdell farm, which his father vacated when he went to West Swanzev. About twenty years after he exchanged with his brother, Abijah, going himself to the mills at West Swanzev, while Abijah returned to the farm, remaining there a while and then removing to the Deacon Warner place.

JOSEPH WHITCOMB, of the next generation, inherited his father's mills at West Swanzey, which soon passed into the Strattons' hands. Jonathan, son of Jonathan, lived on Mrs. S. Davis place. He was a farmer, made lamp-black, etc. John moved to Rockingham, Vt. Nathan took his father's homestead and built the house now occupied by Mrs. P. Stone. He also resided awhile at Saxton's river, Vt. Ephraim lived in various localities, the last of his life at H. S. Whitney place. He was a harness maker. The youngest daughter of Col. Jonathan married Amos Bailey. Of the sons of Elisha, his namesake went to Vermont, but returned to his father's homestead, where he died. Here also his grandson, Elisha, lived and died. David, Solomon and Asa also went to Vermont. Joseph lived at East Swanzey, owning the saw and carding mills. Philemon's sons, Jotham, Abijah, Maj. Benjamin and Job all lived at West Swanzey, and all were millers. Philemon settled in Faystown, Vt. Benjamin, son of Maj. Benjamin, was a farmer on the old homestead; and his son, Charles S., is a farmer and teamster. Capt. Abijah Whitcomb, son of Abijah, lived on R. R. Ramsdell, jr., farm, and afterwards removed to Claremont, where he died. His son, Benjamin F., was an overseer in one of the factories at that place. Joseph lived on Dea. Warner farm till he bought the Watson place, where the remainder of his life was spent.

Of the sons of Jonathan, Willard located in Westfield, N. Y.; Col. Jonathan in Charlevoix, Mich., and Hiram at Sandy Creek, Mich. Roswell remained a few years at his father's homestead, then lived on F. P. Atkinson place, and for a score of years past has been at West Swanzey, a farmer, manufacturer of staves and lumber, and uniformly successful in all his ventures in business. His son, Hiram, is a wholesale dealer in clothes and furnishing goods in Lock Haven, Pa. George E. Whitcomb was associated with his father in farming, lumbering, and in the saw-mill till their removal to West Swanzey. Since that time he has been in the firm of C. L. Russell & Co. manufacturers of pails, with several others in the box business, by himself, and with C. L. Russell in buying and selling timber and other estate. He has had a busy life and by energy and determination has succeeded in the acquisition of wealth. He has been a member of the New Hampshire legislature and moderator at town meetings. Arthur is now in the box business at West Swanzey. Geo. E. Whitecomb, jr., is with his father in manufacturing.

Of the sons of Nathan, Leonard lived in Vermont, on the B. F.

Levine C. Whitcomb

Mead place, and at West Swanzey, keeping a hotel at the latter location. His son, Alanson S., has manufactured brush handles at Westport, West Swanzey and Keene. Col. Carter Whitcomb was a clothier and farmer. He lived at Rockingham, Vt., and on the R. Hovey and Mrs. C. Whitcomb places, building the house at the last-named place. He took an active part in political and municipal matters. Capt. Otis, with his large family, lived at various places, but the last years of his life with his son Leonard. He was a farmer and maker of axe handles. Nathan died in Fitchburg. Capt. Alva was brought up by Nehemiah Cummings on L. W. Leach place. He was a store keeper on L. N. Howe place. Lyman went to Worcester, Mass. Jarvis, son of Ephraim, went to Peterborough; George was a conductor on railroads. The last part of his life he lived in Swanzey on H. S. Whitney place. He was a farmer, and for many years town sexton. Ephraim lived and died in Rutland, Vt. Elmer and Joseph, sons of Joseph, went west. The latter was a musician. Calvin is a mechanic in Worcester, Mass.

JONAS WHITCOMB, son of Abijah, travelled extensively in Europe, and on his return went into the Tremont House in Boston, continuing there ten years. At the time of his death he was one of its proprietors. Elbridge was for many years a prosperous clothing dealer in Keene. He went to California but has now returned. His sons, J. F. and F. H., succeed their father in business in Keene. Charles A. is in New York city. Emery is in Idaho.

J. PAGE WHITCOMB, son of Joseph, remained on the old homestead several years after his marriage, but soon removed to Keene, where he has since lived, having been the principal clerk in some of the leading stores in that city.

IRVINE A. WHITCOMB in early life went into business in a book and variety store in Lawrence, Mass., but was not successful. He was soon after employed to conduct excursion parties from Boston to the White mountains and other points of interest in New England. Soon the firm of Raymond and Whitcomb was established which has continued to the present time, doing a large and constantly increasing business.

In this firm Mr. Whitcomb is the principal manager, giving his entire time and attention to the outlines and details of the business. Their "Vacation Excursions," as they are called, are sent out from Boston to all the principal points of interest in New England, New York and Canada; to the National Capital, Mt. Vernon and the bat-the fields of the South ; to Colorado, Texas and Mexico ; to California, Oregon and the Sandwich Islands ; to the National Park and the wonders of the northwest ; and now an excursion is planned, and soon to be carried into execution, to Europe. In these excursions all arrangements are previously made for the entertainment of the travelers, board, lodging, carriage drives, etc. Mr. Whitcomb is a man of great executive ability as he necessarily must be to manage so extensive a business. He is personally very popular in those expeditions which he occasionally conducts. He has a pleasant residence on Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass.

ALONZO WHITCOMB and CARTER, sons of Colonel Carter, have been very successful as machinists, and popular as citizens in Worcester, Mass. J. Baker is a dealer in real estate, in San Francisco, Cal., having a pleasant home across the bay in Berkeley. Byron is a farmer in the Flat-lands, Long Island. Clement has lived both in California and Nevada. H. Homer lives in New Haven, Conn.

NEHEMIAH C., son of Captain Alvah, lives in Pennsylvania.

SYLVANDER L. WHITCOMB, was the eldest son of Captain Otis. He commenced life as a peddler. Since his marriage he has resided continuously on the farm now occupied by him and his son Henry F. Thrift is pictured on their buildings, fences and surroundings generally. They are of the number of those that make a good living and some money besides by pure farming. Nathan was a painter and farmer. Otis died in South America. Lucius was killed in the war of the rebellion, went from Fitzwilliam. Charles was a laborer. Chauncey kept a livery stable at Saxton's river, Vt. Lyman located in Claremont, was killed in the army. Andrew was a painter. Sellick is a painter and keeper of a livery stable in Springfield, Mass. Leonard is a painter and farmer ; Clarence, and Otis, sons of Leonard, are likewise painters.

JOEL WHITCOMB was a farmer and merchant. Of his sons, Jotham lives in Saxton's river, Vt., and runs a saw mill. George lives in Pennsylvania. Ezekiel O. is a farmer, blacksmith, jobber, etc.

JOHN WHITCOMB was the Methuselah of Swanzev, living to be more than 103 years old. He came from Bolton, Mass. ; lived on Henry R. Bowen place, and built the first mills at East Swanzev. When quite old he imagined that silver could be found on Gardner's mountain, in Winchester, as tradition had it that the Indians had carried away large quantities from that place. He made annual pilgrimages to the mountain, searching for the coveted treasure. At one time he found, as he supposed, the place and the hidden silver, when his attention was diverted from the spot by a headless partridge hovering and circling around him. In watching the partridge he lost the place and was never able to find it again. His son, Thomas, succeeded his father as a farmer and miller. He removed to Richmond, Vt. John, a farmer, lived on J. W. Goodell place, and Silas on a farm south of John D. Hale place.

Of the sons of John, David lived where his son, David, now resides ; both farmers.

Of the sons of Silas, his namesake and also his grandson of the same name, were farmers and laborers, residing in various places. Calvin was a truckman in Boston ; Luther, a farmer and laborer in Swanzy ; Sylvester A., a farmer in Richmond (his son, Franklin C., went to Illinois, and George A. is a butcher in Framingham) ; Roswell went to Ohio ; Cyrel, a mechanic, resided in Marlboro and Swanzy, and died in Westmoreland.

ANTHONY S. WHITCOMB, a farmer, came in middle life from Richmond.

JEHIEL WHITE, a farmer, lived on Mrs. W. H. Knight place ; killed by a falling tree.

SANFORD S. WILBER, a blacksmith, came from Massachusetts and lived at the Centre. He died in the army.

EDWARD WILCOX, a farmer and wooden-ware manufacturer, was born and spent his youth in Gilsum. Since his marriage he has been at the easterly part of Swanzy. He has been representative and selectman. Allen C. is now associated with him in the box business.

DR. ABEL WILDER, as appears by the records, was a physician, and the second postmaster in Swanzy.

GEORGE H. WILDER, a carpenter, lived several years about 1850 at Westport and West Swanzy. He removed to Hinsdale and was drowned in the Connecticut river at Holyoke.

LEVI WILLARD came to Swanzy from Dublin in 1815 and located at Factory Village, building the house now occupied by ——— Gates. He was a shrewd business man, wealthy, but benevolent ; a justice of the peace, a leading member of the Baptist denomination in Cheshire county ; was treasurer of the Dublin Baptist Association for thirty years. He died with his daughter in Lynn, Mass., but was buried in the family vault on his homestead in Swanzy. His son, Curtis E., removed to Keene, where he lived and died. He was at one time assistant cashier in Cheshire bank, Keene.

The original home of the WILLIAMS family was the J. Prentice place, in the south part of the town. Here lived John and his son, Moses B., farmers. Of the children of the latter, John went to Richmond, Vt.; Benjamin lived and died on L. R. Ballou place; Hubbard remained till middle life on the old homestead, and then removed to J. W. Goodell farm; Boardman located in Charlestown, Mass., one of his sons becoming a distinguished civil engineer; Benjamin O. lived several years in Richmond, when he removed to Iowa; David, as a farmer and lumber manufacturer, lived at Warwick, Mass., Swanzev and North Richmond.

Of the sons of David, Benjamin and John live at South Ashburnham, Mass.; Hubbard lives on Josiah Parsons place; Willie and David in North Richmond.

GIDEON WILLIS came from Framingham and located in that part of Swanzev now in Troy, and died in early manhood. His widow married Daniel Osborne and lived where Mrs. J. D. Hale now lives. His son, William W., was a shoemaker where his son, Geo. W., now resides. Gideon G. was also a shoemaker, but abandoned the business, built the shop and houses where Geo. F. Lane & Son are now located and manufactured pails and buckets. He did more to build East Swanzev than any other man in recent years. Geo. W. Willis is a farmer and merchant, has been selectman, representative, and member of constitutional convention.

BENJAMIN WILSON came from Leeds, England, quite early in the history of the town and lived on the Cantlin farm. He was a dealer and broker in real estate in this and adjoining towns.

Of his sons, Abel was a prominent man at West Swanzev; William and John went to Vermont; David had a farm in Winchester, but sold it and bought the T. Hanrahan place, where he lived the last of his life. He was a shrewd and successful farmer and an extensive sheep raiser; Clark was a mechanic, quite an inventive genius, and lived in Westport. His tables for log measure were considered quite accurate, and were extensively used in those days when custom sawing was so generally practised. He was the inventor of Wilson's spiral water wheel, the first to operate under water.

DAVID WILSON, a farmer, etc., at West Swanzev. James died on his farm near Westport.

CHARLES WILSON, a farmer and brick mason, came from Marlboro and lived on William I. Sawyer place. His sons Horace, Dorson, Dan and Albert are extensive farmers in or near Gilroy, Cal. Most of them were also brick masons.

STILMAN WILSON was a mechanic and blacksmith living on B. H. Richardson place, and having a shop near the same. He afterwards removed to the east part of the town.

JOSIAH WILSON lived at East Swanzey and was a sash maker. His son Josiah is at Westmoreland.

JOHN WITHINGTON came from Fitzwilliam, located on the Charles Marsh place and spent the greater part of his life there. When old age crept upon him he sold his farm and lived awhile at the Centre and the last of his days in Richmond. He was a good farmer, a fair scholar, a decided utilitarian, homespun in his tastes, opposed to show and fashion, scrupulously honest and conscientious, odd and eccentric. He would in warm weather walk barefoot to church, carrying his shoes in his hand and put them on before entering. He disliked mats or rugs in his house, and would not enter a church where the aisles were carpeted. He was witty as illustrated by the following anecdote: While living at the Centre he had his milk of Rev. T. E. Roberts who was the minister at the time, and kept a cow. Going for his daily supply one morning, he found that Mr. R. was not up, and he was obliged to wait for his milk. When it was ready Mr. Roberts handed it to him accompanied with an apology, saying he was sorry to keep him waiting so long. Mr. W. replied with a peculiar twinkle in his eye as he edged towards the door in departing, "I don't mind waiting for the milk, but I do hate to have such shiftless neighbors." The story was related with much glee by Mr. Roberts. Mr. Withington accumulated several thousand dollars and bequeathed most of it to four indigent old ladies. Originally a stern democrat, he cast the first solitary vote in Swanzey in 1840, for James G. Birney, the abolition candidate for president. His son Asa, a fine scholar in boyhood at the common school, received his academical education at the Hancock Literary and Scientific Institution, and prepared for the Baptist ministry at the New Hampton Institution. He was licensed to preach but died soon after entering the ministry. He was a good writer of poetry.

JONATHAN WOODCOCK was one of the first to locate in Swanzey after its abandonment. He probably lived where Edgar Handy now resides. He came from Attleborough, Mass. His sons Elkanah and Jonathan lived with him awhile but went away.

NATHAN WOODCOCK from Attleborough, owned what are now the farms of S. L. Whitecomb and C. B. Holbrook. His son Nathan occupied the same place and he with his entire family, sons and daughters, at different times near 1835, removed to Allegany Co., N. Y., thence some of them to Pa. The sons were farmers and mechanics.

DAVID WOODCOCK also removed to western New York. His son Harry became a Presbyterian clergyman. Levi Woodcock lived at various places in town. His son Virgil was an enterprising carpenter, house builder and gold miner, both in California and Vermont. His home was at Swanzy Centre where his widow still lives. He built the City hotel in Keene, the Congregational meeting house at Swanzy and also that in Troy. Addison Woodcock was a carpenter in Keene. Virgil Woodcock, jr., died en route to California while crossing the plains in 1849 with his father and others. Volney Woodcock is a carpenter, newspaper correspondent and justice of the peace, living on his father's homestead.

ICHABOD WOODWARD, came from Sudbury, Mass., about 1780 and located south of the old Clark place now in Troy. His son Josiah remained there awhile, then went to Richmond and afterwards to B. F. Mead place. Isaac located in the southeast part of the town and Ichabod went to Dummerston, Vt.

Joseph, son of Josiah lived on Mrs. D. R. Marshall place and late in life on J. F. Hunt place. Daniel, son of Isaac lived on J. W. Murphy place; John, on M. Handy farm; Solomon went to Wallingford, Vt. William lived awhile in Richmond, but the latter part of his life on E. W. Handy place.

David, son of Daniel, lived at East Swanzy; was killed on the railroad. His son Daniel E. was a pail manufacturer at East Swanzy and afterwards in Michigan. Charles F. is salesman for a marble firm in Fitchburg. Ezekiel P., son of John, is a farmer and cobbler. His son Arthur A., a merchant at East Swanzy and the present postmaster. John Bradford, son of John, removed to Pennsylvania. Elisha has been a successful business man, merchant, postmaster, etc., in Marlborough.

DENNISON WOODWARD, son of William, went to Minnesota and died there.

T. NELSON WOODWARD, son of T. L. Woodward of Marlboro, has been for many years an employé on railroads.

REUBEN WORCESTER lived on a now abandoned farm near Chesterfield line. Of his sons, Moses lived awhile in a house east of Volney A. Marey place, which has since been burned, and afterwards near Graves' mills. His son Merrick M. is a laborer in the east part of the town. Emery lived at various places in town. Abel and Selim emigrated to the west.

CHARLES R. WORCESTER is a prominent farmer and teamster ; keeps a large number of cows and furnishes milk for the Keene market.

WILLIAM WRIGHT, one of the first to resettle the town after its abandonment, lived on Asa Healey place. Of his sons, Cyprian went to Pennsylvania, Alpha located on Lorenzo Ballou place, Luther on his father's homestead, and Calvin on G. W. Eastman place. Paul, son of Alpha, located in Old Marlborough, Mass. ; Elliot, son of Luther, on a now abandoned farm south of Edmund Stone's, and William in Richmond where for many years he was one of the leading citizens. Captain William, son of Calvin, lived on Geo. W. Eastman place and made pumps.

DARIUS E. and PARK E. WRIGHT are residents of West Swanzey, the former a farmer and the latter an employé in the shops.

MOSES E. WRIGHT came from Vermont, a graduate of Dartmouth College, teacher in Mt. Cæsar Seminary and other schools ; now resides in Marlborough.

REV. N. R. WRIGHT was for several years a Universalist minister at West Swanzey. His son Carroll D. Wright was a scholar and teacher in our schools, and is now perhaps the most eminent statistician in the country, having been for many years at the head of the Massachusetts statistical department, and now at the head of that of the United States.

FRED YOUNG was a resident of East Swanzey for several years, a laborer, and teacher in writing. His wife S. Lizzie Lane Young was a writer of poetry, several pieces of which may be found in the "Poets of New Hampshire."

HERBERT O. YOUNG is an employé in the West Swanzey mills.
