IT is not improbable that the pioneer German settlers of Alexandria and contiguous sections had a place for social worship, with an occasional preaching service in their own language, and at stated times at Mt. Pleasant previous to 1763. There is no record of their proceedings prior to that date. If any was kept, it has been lost. There were but few ministers in the Colonies at that period, and the infant Churches, struggling for existence, often waited several years before one could be obtained, even for a portion of his time, and a regular organization effected by the installation of a Pastor and Ruling Elders.

There was an English Presbyterian congregation at that place as early as 1752, as is shown by the Minutes of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, in which it is called "The Western Branch of Bethlehem;" and at a meeting held at Trenton, October 11, 1763, it was designated as "The Log Meeting House Congregation." It seems entirely probable that there was service in German in that "Meeting House" as early as there was in English. That the two congregations worshiped in the same house is evident from the language of the deed for the lot on which the succeeding edifice was built, which land was conveyed by Aaron Van Syckel and John Eckel to "The Trustees of the said Church and Congregation known as the Dutch (German) and English Presbyterian Church and Congregation of Alexandria." There was no occasion probably for disagreement between the two organizations relative to the occupancy of the pulpit. The Presbyterians and German and Dutch Reformed Protestants were so closely allied in doctrine as to cordially associate in worship and Christian fellowship in the sparsely settled localities of the pioneers, and the preaching services were too infrequent for any difficulty to arise about the use of the premises. The German pastor of the Alexandria Church became associated with the Churches of Rockaway (Lebanon), German Valley and Foxenburg (Fox Hill), and the Presbyterian with Bethlehem and Kingwood.

The old log Church stood about fifty yards from the site of the grist-mill on the road leading to the "Barrens," and near where Sylvester Martin's house stands. There was a graveyard near it, but no memorial stones remain. In digging the mill-race now in use, human bones were disinterred.

In 1795 a meeting of the two congregations was held, at which it was resolved that the old building was too much dilapidated for use, and that subscriptions should be solicited for money for a new house of worship. The business lingered and the new Church was not erected till 1802. It was located in the present cemetery, nearly opposite the site of the present Church. It was a frame structure and familiarly called the "New Frame," in distinction from the Bethlehem Presbyterian Church of that period, which was under the same pastorate and called the "Old Frame."

May 18, 1802, the German Reformed Synod, at the request of the congregation, transferred the Church to the care of the Presbytery of New Brunswick. The German language had become so much superseded by the English that the religious services thereafter were conducted in the latter tongue.

Many of the names in the register represent the lineal ancestors of families still living in this county. The variations which their orthography, in many cases, has undergone, is of interest to the genealogist as well as to the families to which they belong. The Abgerts have become Apgars; Bellesfeldt is now Bellis; Bickel is Pickel; Bohn is called Bunn; Blum is written Bloom; Hausschild is Housel; Holtzeiser, Hulsizer; Jung, Young; Ohlbach, Alpaugh; Schmid, Smith; Schneider, Snyder; Ziedler, Sigler; and Schlaut, Slout.

The pastors of the German Reformed organization were Rev. Joseph Dallicker, V.D.M., in 1763; Rev. Caspar Wack, V.D.M., in 1783; and Rev. John Jacob Wack in 1795.

During the pastorate of Rev. Joseph Dallicker, 256 baptisms are recorded; during that of Rev. Caspar Wack, 140; and during that of Rev. John Jacob Wack, 110; making 506.

Their services were conducted and Parish Register kept in the German language.
