PREFATORY

PRINTED AND BOUND AT THE ECONOMY PRINTING HOUSE
—OF—
JAMES B. SAVAGE,

65 & 67 FRANKFORT ST.

PREFATORY.

In issuing this, the eighth Annual Directory of the "Forest City," the publishers may be pardoned a show of vanity for having accomplished so important a work in the extraordinarily short space of eleven weeks.

The canvassing, compiling and printing of a Directory for a city of the magnitude and importance of Cleveland is a most difficult and complicated undertaking at best; much more so than is generally understood by those who are not initiated into all the details by which the work is surrounded; hence the vexations attendant in procuring the information from our mixed and largely foreign population, and the tedious task of compiling the same to make the book valuable, is sometimes too little considered by those for whom it is especially intended. In the present issue, the publishers have taken extraordinary pains in canvassing, etc.—in many instances sending back as often as three and four times for a single individual—and if omissions occur at all, the publishers can scarcely be blamed, as many refuse giving information, or give it wrongly, for reasons obvious—importunate creditors, unpaid wash-bills, etc.

We hope, however, that, after bestowing so much care and capital upon the work, it will bear the test of critical examination, and be found in every respect worthy, and even superior to any prior publication.

The names have been carefully counted; on the following page will be found a tabular statement showing the rate of increase of population, which, though slight, is a matter of gratulation.

Especially attention is called to the new and accurate STREET AND AVENUE GUIDE, prepared for and original with this issue—see page 33 of Miscellaneous Directory, back part of book. For accuracy, simplicity of arrangement and ready reference, this list cannot be surpassed.

Commencing with this issue, the Directory will be published by the Cleveland Directory Co., under the same management as heretofore. At their office—Nos. 65 and 67 Frankfort Street—may be found the latest Directory publications of the principal cities of the United States and Canadas—kept for the accommodation of the public, who are cordially invited to examine them.

In conclusion, we desire to express to our patrons our acknowledgments for the support accorded us, which we accept as gratifying evidence of the acceptability of our previous efforts to make a trustworthy Directory.

Respectfully,

CLEVELAND DIRECTORY CO.,

Publishers.

1. The first of these is the question of the origin of the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is of African origin, and that it has spread from Africa to all other parts of the world. The second question is the question of the development of the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race has developed from a primitive state to a more advanced state, and that this development has been the result of natural selection. The third question is the question of the influence of environment on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its environment, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The fourth question is the question of the influence of culture on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its culture, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The fifth question is the question of the influence of heredity on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its heredity, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The sixth question is the question of the influence of education on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its education, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The seventh question is the question of the influence of religion on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its religion, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The eighth question is the question of the influence of politics on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its politics, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The ninth question is the question of the influence of economics on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its economics, and that this influence is the result of natural selection. The tenth question is the question of the influence of science on the human race. It is generally admitted that the human race is influenced by its science, and that this influence is the result of natural selection.

A NEW INVENTION WHICH CONCERNS EVERYBODY.

BUHRER'S
INFALLIBLE
Sewer Gas Trap.

PATENTED AUG. 21, 1877, AND DEC. 11 1877.

Fig. 1.

[Sectional view of No. 5 Trap with connections, showing the position of valve and back-pressure attachment. Total length, 2 feet 2 inches; width, 11 inches; size of inlet and outlet, 6 inches. This Trap can be used upright or horizontal by changing the connections, and with iron or sewer pipe.]

A Sure and Effective Seal against Sewer Gas.

SIMPLE, ECONOMICAL, AND DURABLE.

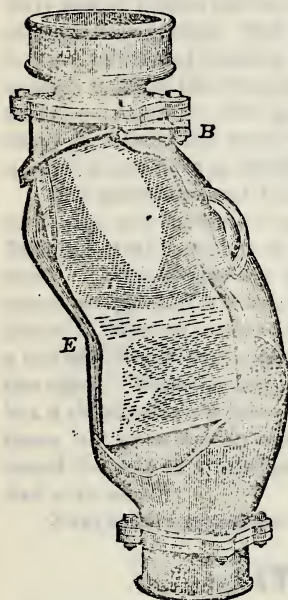

The only Perfect Anti-Freezing, Gas and Back-Water Trap.

NOTICE.—This Trap does not depend on water for its seal—therefore, unlike all others, it cannot freeze and burst; or clog with sediment and require cleaning; or lose its seal by evaporation or syphonage. Whether in use or unused for months, and at all temperatures, the seal is never broken.

CONSTRUCTION OF

Buhrer's Infallible Sewer Gas Trap.

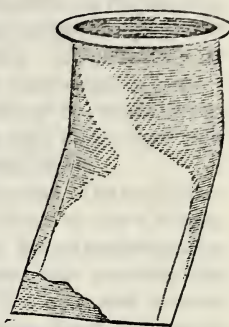

Fig. 2.

Sec. view of No. 4 Trap with connections for iron pipe. Length, with-out connections, 14 inches; width, 8 inches; size of inlet and outlet, 4 inches.

The essential feature of Buhrer's Sewer Gas Trap is the Valve (D), which is made of the very best and purest rubber, well vulcanized and constructed on an entirely new principle, viz: Two sheets of rubber, varying in length and width according to the size of the Trap, are placed one upon the other and their edges firmly united together forming a flat hose. The upper end of this hose has a collar formed around it which is firmly fastened between the iron flanges (B) of the case at the top, and hangs loosely suspended in the case.

Shows the shape and construction of the valve and its position in the Trap.

The second important feature is the Case or Vessel (A) containing the valve. This is made of cast iron enameled on its inner surface, or of lead, and is constructed so as to form a rest for the valve which will insure an easy and rapid passage of waste and water through the valve, and at the same time facilitate the instant closing of the sides of the valve. The angle (E) is for the purpose of making such seal more sure and perfect. The removable disk (C) in front is for the purpose of removing any obstructions that may get into the Trap through the carelessness of servants and others, and to adjust the valve in case of such accident.

ADVANTAGES.

Water Seal Traps.—The objectionable features of all Water Seal Traps are numerous and known to nearly everybody. That the water in them rapidly absorbs the gases from the sewer, and through evaporation carries them through the outlets of wash-basins, sinks, bath tubs and water closets into our houses, aided by more or less pressure generated in the sewer by floods, wind storms and tide water. That they lose their seal through evaporation and syphonage. That they will resist no pressure whatever coming from the sewer, either of gas or water, are established facts. Furthermore, if exposed to frost they become a source of continual annoyance and expense. Various devices have been resorted to to overcome these radical defects of the Water Trap—such as ventilating the pipes to relieve the pressure, protecting the outlets with float-balls, or by check valves or gates, all of which, while they may partially remedy the defects of the water trap, are in no instance a perfect seal against sewer gas.

Buhrer's Infallible Sewer Gas Trap

unlike all others, does not depend on water for its seal, and is therefore an entire "new departure," and overcomes all the objectionable features of the water seal, and other traps. The valve as it lies on the back of the case presents a closed area of over forty square inches (in the larger traps) through which it is impossible for the subtlest of gases to penetrate. The valve differs from all others in being self-adjusting, and it is these important features which place the trap ahead of all others. It opens only far enough to allow the free passage of waste and water through it—be it small or large—and closes instantly after it. Should sediment collect in any part of it, (which is not likely to occur if the water pipes are in good order), the valve will close over and around it and form as perfect a seal as if the obstruction were not there.

The experiments of Mr. Wm. Genung with the trap, a gentleman of extended information and experience on the subject of sewer gas, and an officer of the Chicago Board of Health, will go to verify the above. In his report of his experiments he says: "After connecting the trap with an ordinary pan-closet and securing the joints, we put half a dozen or more corks of assorted sizes into the pan and several pieces of paper to imitate as nearly as possible the action of a water closet—we placed a vial of Ether at the mouth of the trap and dumped the contents of the pan through the valve. With the first operation some of the corks and paper lodged in the valve but it closed above and below the obstruction. This operation was repeated a number of times, but in no instance could we detect the smell of Ether above the valve." He severely tested the trap in a number of other ways, and pronounced it "the best gas trap he had ever seen."

Next to its importance as a perfect gas trap is that

IT IS ECONOMICAL.

One of the No. 4 or No. 5 traps placed in the cellar of an ordinary sized house will effectually confine all the odors and gases of the sewer below it, (provided all connections to the sewer are made above the trap), thus performing the work that a dozen of any other kind of traps have failed to perform. Then again they can be connected with any water-closet, sink, bath tub or wash basin, whether old or new, and effect an immediate and perfect seal against sewer gas.

The trap can be detached and the valve renewed by anyone at a trifling expense and made as good as new. For this reason the trap should always be set where it will be easily accessible.

The inventor has had one of these traps in use in his house since early in 1877, during which time he has not detected the presence of sewer gas in the smallest degree, though previous to putting in the trap he was afflicted to almost an insufferable extent. He has examined the valve very recently and finds it as perfect as when first put in—not the least sign of any wear can be detected, which shows that

IT IS DURABLE.

The valve is made of the purest and best rubber, and is subjected to an "acid cure," and is impervious to the action of oils and acids, such as would be likely to come in contact with it, and will not corrode. Experts say that the valve will wear at least five years, and may be ten; but it can be renewed at a nominal expense by any one. It cannot clog or get out of order like hinge valves, and other frictional mechanism sometimes used in traps. The case which contains and protects the valve is made of cast iron, well enameled on its inner surface, and will last for years and always remain clean and free from rust or corrosion. Furthermore, no water remains either in the chamber or in the valve, and it cannot be injured or its use impaired by exposure to frost; and even should the rubber become congealed by frost, hot water will loosen it again without injury to the rubber.

The attention of ship and boat builders and owners is particularly called to this trap, as it supplies a want long felt by them. These traps can be attached to the water-closets of vessels and prevent the swell or flow of water from splashing the seat or entering the water closet, as well as prevent the disagreeable odors from coming up through the pipes.

It has been the good fortune of the inventor to succeed in combining in his gas trap a perfect arrangement whereby the valve will withstand a very heavy back-pressure of gas or water, (see fig. 1, letter G). The combination is very simple and cannot get out of order. This is an additional recommendation for the trap, and one that will place it in the foremost rank of modern inventions. It is the only perfect anti-freezing, gas and back pressure trap ever invented.

Shows the shape and construction of the trap used in connection with wash-basins, sinks and bath tubs.

Length of each trap, 8 inches; width, 2, 3, and 4 inches.

Buhrer's trap for wash-basins, sinks and bath-tubs are marvels of perfection and cleanliness. No water or sediment of any kind can collect in the trap to burst or clog it, and the periodical cleaning out process is a thing no more to be dreaded by neat housewives. Each trap is furnished with a brass coupling at the top and bottom for the purpose aforesaid of detaching the trap easily in case the valve needs renewing. By removing the disk in front parties can at any time assure themselves that the valve is in good order and performing its proper functions.

These Traps can be set at any angle with the perpendicular—that is used as RUNNING TRAPS at any angle, provided always that the outlet is enough lower than the inlet to prevent water remaining in the trap. These desirable qualities recommend it as the most complete trap ever offered to the trade.

The prices of these traps are within the reach of everybody, and considering the perfect security they give against the escape of the deadly sewer vapors into our sleeping and living apartments, no house should be without them. They will save many times their cost in doctors' bills alone.

In short, this trap supplies a want long felt in the community. That the necessity exists for some better method of protecting ourselves from the injurious effects of sewer gas is a fact that is becoming more dangerously apparent every day. That this trap, if properly set, will positively and effectually confine these deadly gases to the sewer where they emanate from, is a fact which is being daily acknowledged by all who have seen it. The inventor invites the public to thoroughly examine and try it on its own merits.

TO THE TRADE.

The principle on which this Trap is constructed being now conceded and recognized as a correct one by the leading houses in the trade, witnessed by an already active demand for the Traps, I purpose here, in view of the new departure it takes from the established principles of the Water-Trap (all recent inventions being but modifications of them, and retaining most of their essential features), to state a few additional facts bearing more directly on the larger sizes, to hasten the already growing confidence in them. I am not insensible to the fact, that while there is no longer any doubt as to their efficiency in checking effectually the escape of sewer-gas, there seems to be a doubt in the minds of some, that the Trap when used in connection with the Water-Closet, will choke up by the paper and waste which must pass through it. Now, if such parties will consider for a moment the fact that the valve is nothing more nor less than a Hose, and as free therefore, to conduct waste and water as the pipes themselves, it seems to me their doubts will be dispelled.

Early in 1877, after I had exhausted every known means to rid my house of the insufferable stench which escaped from the sewer through the closets and sinks (all well trapped with S-traps), I conceived this idea of a trap, and immediately put it to a practical test. The capacity of the valve in this case was only 3½ inches diameter, but it has served its purpose most effectually; not a sign of sewer-gas has been detected in the house since this Trap was put in, and though this ONE TRAP effectually traps three water-closets, six wash-basins and two bath-tubs, it has in no instance, imperfect as it is compared with the Traps now being sold, shown any sign of choking up; I regard such a thing as impossible by any fair means.

Respectfully,

SEWER GAS.

Its Nature and Effects.

That sewer gas is present, to a more or less extent in every private and public building, and that it exerts an injurious effect on the health of its occupants is a fact no longer to be questioned; but the exact nature and extent of this influence has until recently received but an indifferent consideration. In our large cities however, where vast numbers of individuals are yearly prostrated with disease, and fall upon the public for support, the inquiry as to the cause has rapidly been pushed by competent authorities, and by this means it has been demonstrated that by far the greater portion of the cases can be traced almost directly to the condition of the sewerage in the city. That is, that the sanitary condition of any ward or district of a large city is almost in direct proportion to the condition of its sewerage. The facts taken from the various reports of Health Boards are appalling. Prof. Chas. F. Chandler in his address before the New York Board of Health takes occasion to say:

"More preventable diseases are due to the entrance of sewer gas into houses than from any other cause. The evil is so great that its importance cannot be exaggerated."

In speaking of the nature of sewer gas, he says:

"Sewer gas is composed of the products of putrefaction. * * In addition to the chemical gases thus produced, there exist in sewer gas the germs of fungoid plants and animals, which are endowed with a power of infinite reproduction. The refuse animal and vegetable matter in soil pipes and sewers is the most favorable soil for the development of these fungi. * * A few hours is sufficient for their reproduction on a large scale, * * in this reproduction of the fungoid germs lies the great danger to health from sewer gases."

The effects of these emanations from the sewer on the human body are varied. The same address says further:

"Sewer gas when inhaled in small quantities for a length of time produces the condition known as malaise. The symptoms of the disease are not well defined, but the subjects complain of lassitude, headache and an indisposition to exertion. People never suspect the cause of this malaise; hence they neglect to have their plumbing attended to, and go on week after week without ever knowing what a thoroughly healthy, active state of the body is. * * Sewer gas aggravates all diseases, and may produce cerebro spinal-meningitis, or spotted and typhoid fever.

From a report of Dr. DeWolff's on the sanitary condition of the city of Chicago, made last November, the facts would seem to warrant the statement that "Diphtheria is generally due to unsanitary conditions of soil and domicile. Out of 92 cases of Diphtheria in 76 houses,"—the report goes on to say—"only 4 houses were in a good sanitary condition."

There are houses in which sewer gas is present, and in which it cannot be detected by any offensive odor. Witness the following taken from the same report:

"A terrible case of diphtheria (happily not fatal) occurred in the family of a gentleman living in the West division of the city. The house was substantial and well built, in a good neighborhood, and the surroundings were unexceptionable. No odor of escaping sewer gas had ever been detected. The occupant lighted his cigar in the bath-room and tossed the burning match into the basin of the water closet, when a flame of burning gas shot up several feet. An odorless, but poisonous gas was escaping from the sewer through the water closet trap."

Furthermore,

"Our experience with diphtheria for the past four months, therefore, furnishes ADDITIONAL AND CUMULATIVE TESTIMONY to the correctness of the opinion entertained by eminent sanitarians, both in Europe and this country, that typhoid fever and diphtheria are particularly and pre-eminently filth diseases, and should be properly classified as preventable."

We have no reason to doubt that the facts as contained in these and other reports of experienced authorities are lamentably true, and the question next arises as to the best methods of prevention. The best methods of preventing sewer gas from escaping into houses, so far as known can be reduced to only two:

1st. Ventilation, by relieving the pressure in the sewer by ventilating pipes, and carrying the gases into the open air.

2d. By confining the gases to the sewer where they emanate from by suitable traps.

The foregoing briefly describes one of the most effective ones.
