

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

Gc
974.801
L52r
v.1
114068€

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

GENEALOGY COLLECTION

ALLEN COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2016

<https://archive.org/details/historyoflehighc01robe>

Frederick C. Tarkus

Date. July. 20, 1920

Edward T. ...

...

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY
PENNSYLVANIA

AND A GENEALOGICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL RECORD OF ITS FAMILIES

BY

CHARLES RHOADS ROBERTS,

Member of Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Lehigh County Historical Society, Pennsylvania German Society, Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution, Historian Newhard Family.

REV. JOHN BAER STOUDT,

Member of Pennsylvania German Society, Society of American Folklore, Historical Society of Berks County, Lehigh County Historical Society, Northampton County Historical and Genealogical Society, Historian of the Baer Family, Author of History of the Western Salisbury Reformed Congregation, Fifteen Years of Grace, Life and Times of Col. John Siegfried, The Riddles and Nursery Rhymes of the Pennsylvania Germans.

REV. THOMAS H. KRICK,

Member of Pennsylvania German Society, Historical Society of Berks County, Lehigh County Historical Society, Historian of the Krick, High and Overholtzer Family Associations.

WILLIAM J. DIETRICH,

Member of Pennsylvania German Society, Historical Society of Berks County, Lehigh County Historical Society, Bucks County Historical Society, and Author of Dietrich Families in America.

IN TWO VOLUMES—illustrated

VOL. I.

LEHIGH VALLEY PUBLISHING COMPANY, LTD.
ALLENTOWN, PA.
1914

COPYRIGHT, 1914,
BY
LEHIGH VALLEY PUBLISHING CO.

PRESS OF UNITED EVANGELICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,
HARRISBURG, PA.

1140686

RESOLUTIONS BY THE LEHIGH COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

WHEREAS, The year 1912 marks the close of the first century of Lehigh's existence as a separate county, and

WHEREAS, Lehigh county embraces one of the most historic sections of the state of Pennsylvania, and

WHEREAS, No separate and complete history of the county has ever been published, and

WHEREAS, It is the sense of the Lehigh County Historical Society and the county in general that such a publication would fittingly commemorate this event; therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the society to compile and arrange for the publication of the same.

The following constitutes the committee:

Charles R. Roberts, Rev. John B. Stoudt, Rev. Thomas K. Krick, William J. Dietrich, and Miss Minnie F. Mickley.

RESOLUTION BY THE ALLENTOWN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Lehigh County Historical Society having appointed a Historical Committee to compile the history of the county for 1912; the Chamber of Commerce of Allentown hereby endorses the publication of such a history and approves of the plan of publishing such history by the Historical Society.

January 9, 1911.

FOREWORD.

The first History of Lehigh County appeared in a volume issued by Prof. I. D. Rupp, in 1845, containing histories of Northampton, Lehigh, Carbon, Monroe, and Schuylkill counties. In 1860 Mathew S. Henry's History of The Lehigh Valley, containing a history of the county, was published; and in 1884 Mathew and Hungerford's History of Lehigh and Carbon counties appeared. Besides these, two biographical publications, containing portraits and biographies of some of the Lehigh county families, were issued—Portraits and Biographical Records of Lehigh, Northampton, and Carbon counties, by the Chapman Pub. Co., in 1894, and The Lehigh Valley, by the Lewis Pub. Co., in 1905.

No separate history of the county and its people having been issued and there being a general desire for such a work the Lehigh County Historical Society appointed the committee whose names appear on the preceding page to compile and publish a history of the county and to include genealogical data and biographical sketches as a fitting memorial to mark the centennial of the county.

The committee immediately after their appointment organized a staff of assistants, and now, after four years of united efforts present this work. Owing to unavoidable circumstances Miss Minnie F. Mickley was unable to assist in the editorial work; nevertheless she co-operated with the committee in the compiling of the genealogies of some of the early and prominent families. Chapters not specially denoted were prepared by the committee.

The chapter on Geology was prepared by Prof. Benj. L. Miller, Ph.D.; on Flora, by Harold W. Pretz, A.M.; The German Pioneers, by Rev. George W. Richards, D.D.; The Delaware Indians, by Alfred F. Berlin; The History of the Borough of Alburty, by Rev. Frank P. Laros; Catasauqua, by William H. Glase, Esq.; Coopersburg, by Hon. Frank B. Heller; Fountain Hill and West Bethlehem, by Clarence E. Beckel; Macungie, by O. P. Knauss. Of the histories of the townships Wilbur L. King compiled Hanover; Adam P. Frey, Esq., Lowhill; Hon. James A. Miller, Lynn; Rev. M. B. Schmoyer, Lower Macungie; Rev. Frank P. Laros, Upper Macungie; Hon. Frank B. Heller, Upper Saucon; Ralph T. Sowden, M.D., Washington, and Sol. Rupp, Esq., Weissenberg.

In addition to the above named contributors the committee is indebted to the following:

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the publishers of the Republikaner and the Friedenbote, for the use of their files, and to Morton L. Montgomery, Benj. F. Trexler, Prof. W. J. Hincke, D.D., Col. S. D. Lehr, Andrew Keck, Hon. James L. Schaadt, Charles Ziegenfuss, Sr., Major Frank D. Beary, Lewis Balliet, M.D., Prof. J. O. Knauss, Prof. J. P. Deibert, Henry D. Gross, William Grosscup, Tilghman Neimeyer, Prof. H. J. Reinhard, Rev. J. F. Lambert, Rev. A. O. Ebert, Wm. L. Hartman, James Hausman, Capt. H. C. Wagner, F. C. Seiberling, M.D., C. D. Weirbach, Wilson A. Wert, Esq., Elmer C. Kistler, Esq., Thos. P. Wenner, Samuel B. Lewis, James G. Rausch, Wilson K. Peter, E. M. Handwerk, Edward Randall, Nathan Bartholomew, E. J. Guth, T. L. Wieand, William H. Henninger, W. H. Reitz, H. H. Romig, John S. Matchette, C. D. Schaeffer, M.D., H. I. Klopp, M.D., Lewis B. Erdman, Sarah Brobst, and many others whose courtesies, valuable assistance and support has made this Centennial History possible.

Confident that its value will be more and more appreciated as the years go by, this work is entrusted to its subscribers and readers.

COMMITTEE.

October 1, 1914.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGES.		PAGES.
CHAPTER I.		CHAPTER XIX.
Geology,	1-14	Allentown from 1762-1811,	388-416
CHAPTER II.		CHAPTER XX.
Flora,	15-17	Allentown as a Borough, 1811-1867, .	417-446
CHAPTER III.		CHAPTER XXI.
Delaware Indians,	18-40	Allentown as a City, 1867-1914,	447-494
CHAPTER IV.		CHAPTER XXII.
German Pioneers,	41-53	Churches,	495-556
CHAPTER V.		CHAPTER XXIII.
First Settlement as Part of Bucks County,	54-74	Borough of Alburts,	557-564
CHAPTER VI.		CHAPTER XXIV.
French and Indian War,	75-99	Borough of Catasauqua,	565-630
CHAPTER VII.		CHAPTER XXV.
Indian Massacre of 1763,	100-113	Borough of Coplay,	631-634
CHAPTER VIII.		CHAPTER XXVI.
Revolutionary War,	114-165	Borough of Coopersburg,	635-640
CHAPTER IX.		CHAPTER XXVII.
Fries Rebellion,	166-211	Borough of Emaus,	641-655
CHAPTER X.		CHAPTER XXVIII.
Organization of Lehigh County,	212-223	Borough of Fountain Hill,	656-658
CHAPTER XI.		CHAPTER XXIX.
Bench and Bar,	224-247	Borough of Macungie,	659-672
CHAPTER XII.		CHAPTER XXX.
Education in the County,	248-276	Borough of Slatington,	673-695
CHAPTER XIII.		CHAPTER XXXI.
Newspapers,	277-283	Borough of South Allentown,	696-697
CHAPTER XIV.		CHAPTER XXXII.
Medical Profession,	284-297	Borough of Bethlehem (West Side), .	698-704
CHAPTER XV.		CHAPTER XXXIII.
War Periods,	298-357	Hanover Township,	705-716
CHAPTER XVI.		CHAPTER XXXIV.
Charitable Institutions,	358-372	Heidelberg Township,	717-737
CHAPTER XVII.		CHAPTER XXXV.
Internal Improvements,	373-384	Lowhill Township,	738-751
CHAPTER XVIII.		CHAPTER XXXVI.
Census of the County,	385-387	Lower Macungie Township,	752-765

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGES.		PAGES.
CHAPTER XXXVII.		CHAPTER XLIV.
Upper Milford Township,	766-794	Upper Saucon Township,	922-948
CHAPTER XXXVIII.		CHAPTER XLV.
Lower Milford Township,	795-809	Washington Township,	949-966
CHAPTER XXXIX.		CHAPTER XLVI.
Lynn Township,	810-840	Weissenberg Township,	967-999
CHAPTER XL.		CHAPTER XLVII.
North Whitehall,	841-866	Whitehall Township,	1000-1032
CHAPTER XLI.		CHAPTER XLVIII.
Salisbury Township,	867-881	Industries,	1033-1089
CHAPTER XLII.		CHAPTER XLIX.
South Whitehall Township,	882-903	Family Reunions,	1090-1093
CHAPTER XLIII.
Upper Macungie Township,	904-921

INDEX OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Map of Lehigh County,.....	Frontispiece	St. John's Lutheran Church,	510
Indian Implements,	29	St. Peter's Lutheran Church,	512
Indian Ornaments,	34-35	St. Michael's Lutheran Church,	513
Zeisloff House, Lynn Township,	80	St. Luke's Lutheran Church,	516
Sechler House, Lynn Township,	90	Group of Churches,	518
Map Showing Indian Trails and Kern's Mill, Slatington,	94	Calvary M. E. Church,	522
Map of Massacre of 1763,	106	Bet-Hügel,	526
Fort Deshler (1860), (1910),	112	Grove House,	527
Muhlenberg College,	267	Churches of Evangelical Association, Allentown,	529
Allentown College for Women,	270	Trinity U. E. Church,	534
Bishopthorpe Manor,	272	United Evangelical Churches, Allen- town,	536
Bethlehem Preparatory School,	274	Rev. John Schell,	540
Facsimile Jugend Freund,	283	Rev. Solomon Neitz,	541
Phœbe Deaconess and Old Folks Home, .	365	Rev. Jos. M. Saylor,	541
Good Shepherd Home,	366	Rev. Moses Dissinger,	542
Allentown Hospital, 1898-1902,	368	Rev. B. J. Smoyer,	543
Allentown Hospital, 1912,	369	Rev. David Mertz,	544
ALLENTOWN—		Waldheim Park,	544
Rhoads House,	389	Ebenezer Holiness Church,	545
Deshler's Mill,	394	Grace U. B. Church,	546
Allen Tract,	397	Zion U. B. Church,	547
Original Plan of Allentown, 1762,....		Immaculate Church,	552
Allen Coat of Arms,	398	Sacred Heart Church,	554
William Allen (Chief Justice),	399	St. John's Baptist Church,	555
James Allen,	404	ALBURTIS—
Anne Penn Allen,	407	Christ Chapel,	561
James Greenleaf,	407	Memorial Presbyterian Church,	563
Trout Hall,	410	CATASAUQUA—
Allentown in (1830),	419	Catasauqua (1852),	567
Allentown in (1845),	429	Early Fire Engine,	571
Allentown in (1853),	436	Eagle Brewery,	574
Old School House,	438	Crane Iron Works,	576
View from Square (1862),	442	Mauser and Cressman Mill,	579
Views of Allentown,	450	Wahnetah Silk Mill,	580
View of Center Square (1876),	452	Goldsmith Planing Mill,	582
Fire of Center Square (1876),	452	Dery Silk Mill,	584
Fire Engine Houses,	455	Wahnetah Silk Mill and West Catasau- qua,	585
School Buildings,	460	Pine Street Bridge,	587
Views of Dorney and Central Parks, .	470	Post Office,	592
Eighth Street Bridge,	471	George Taylor House (1768),	603
Picturesque Scenes,	473	First Church,	605
Allentown Band,	484	First Presbyterian Church,	607
Fraternal Houses,	490	Grace M. E. Church,	609
Zion's Church (1773),	496	St. Paul's Lutheran Church,	610
Rev. Abraham Blumer,	497	St. Paul's, Interior View, Church, ...	611
Zion's Reformed Church,	498	Trinity Lutheran Church,	612
St. John's Reformed Church,	501	Soldiers' Monument,	618
Christ Reformed Church,	504	Lincoln School House,	621
St. Andrew's Reformed Church,	505	Bank Notes,	627
Brick Church (1856),	508
St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Ch'ch,	509

INDEX OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

	PAGE.		PAGE.
National Bank,	628	First Public House, New Tripoli,
Lehigh National Bank,	629	Ebenezer Church,	830
COPLAY—
Washington School Building,	631	NORTH WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP—
Schreiber Homestead,	632	Paul Gross Homestead,	842
National Bank,	634	George Remeli Springhouse,	844
COOPERSBURG—
Boyè Residence,	639	Hollenbach Mill, Sand Spring,	856
EMAUS—
Everett Home (1763),	644	Kern Mill (1806),	857
Moravian Church (1748),	647	Daniel Gross Home,	859
Jacob Ehrenhardt Home,	649	John Siegler Home,	861
St. John's Union Church,	652	SALISBURY TOWNSHIP—
MACUNGIE—
Grandy Miller,	660	Rev. Daniel Zellers,	867
Nescoe Meeting House,	661	Western Salisbury Union C'h (1819),	868
Grace Lutheran Church,	662	Western Salisbury Church,	869
Singmaster Homestead,	665	Congregational Vessels and Schlatter
Sallade Home,	667	Bible,	870
Singmaster Tannery,	668	Eastern Salisbury Union Church,	873
Keystone Roller Mills,	669	Nunnermacher Homestead,	878
SLATINGTON—
Kern's Mill,	673	SOUTH WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP—
Lehigh Gap,	675	Jordan Reformed Church,	885
Lower Main Street,	678	Leibelsperger Homestead,	890
Firemen Fountain,	680	Lorentz Guth Homestead (1745), ...	892
National Bank,	681	Troxell Homestead (1800),	894
Slate Quarry,	686	Henry Guth Home,	897
North Main Street,	692	Sieger Homestead,	899
Firemen Monument,	694	Peter Troxell Homestead (1744), ...	902
SOUTH ALLENTOWN—
Stuyvesant Silk Mill,	697	Troxell Barn (1806),	903
HANOVER TOWNSHIP—
Christ Union Church,	712	UPPER SAUCON TOWNSHIP—
St. Peter's Union Church,	713	Map of Township,	924
Beulah Park,	714	Blue Church,	932
T. L. Wieand Cottage,	715	Owen's Hotel (1748),	938
HEIDELBERG TOWNSHIP—
Bernhard Heff Homestead (1767), ...	722	Fiedensville Zinc Mines,	939
Fritzingner Home,	729	Frank B. Heller,	942
Handwerk Homestead (1769),	769	WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP—
Bear Rocks,	737	Frederick Kern Homestead (1786), ..	951
LOWER MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP—
Romig Homestead (1805),	753	House built in 1797,	953
Old Lehigh Church,	762	Old House at Slatedale,	954
UPPER MILFORD TOWNSHIP—
Milestone,	778	Henritzy Homestead (1790),	955
Shimer Homestead,	784	Residence of John F. Peters (1799), .	957
Zionsville Reformed Church,	789	Devil's Pulpit,	959
LOWER MILFORD TOWNSHIP—
Milestone (1773),	795	WEISSENBERG TOWNSHIP—
Great Swamp Reformed Church,	805	Rupp Barn (1794),	971
LYNN TOWNSHIP—
Kistler Homestead,	813	Bleiler Homestead,	972
Heinrich Fink Homestead,	814	Ziegel Church,	977-980-983
Straub Homestead,	815	Helfrich Homestead,	985
		WHITEHALL—
		Map Showing Early Settlers,	1004
		View of 180,000,000 Gallon Dam, ...	1011
		Winter Scene of 3,000,000 Gallon Reservoir,	1012
		West Catasauqua High School Building,	1020
		Fullerton School Building,	1021
		Stone Church at Egypt, 1785,	1023
		Egypt Church,	1024
		Mickley's Church,	1026

INDEX OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Hokendauqua Presbyterian Church, ..	1027	Queen City Silk Mill,	1060
Butz School House,	1028	H. J. Feldhege Silk Co., Egypt,	1061
School Building, Egypt,	1030	McBride Bros. Silk Mill, Fullerton,..	1062
INDUSTRIES—		National Silk Dyeing Co.,	1064
Bryden Horse-shoe Works, Catasauqua,	1047	Views of Cement Mills,	1068
Dent Hardware Company, Fullerton,..	1049	Establishment of Lewis D. Clauss, ...	1075
Kurtz Furniture Works, Fullerton, ...	1052	Keystone Barrel Works, Allentown, ...	1076
Erich Establishment, Allentown,	1054	Allentown Flint Bottle Company,	1077
Interior of G. F. Erich Company's		Schlafer Bakery,	1083
Office,	1055	H. Ray Haas & Company, Allentown,.	1087
		Geo. L. Weisel, Marble Works,	1089

Map of
LEHIGH COUNTY
 PENNSYLVANIA
 1914

L. J. GROSSART, C.E.
 COMMONWEALTH BLDG.
 ALLENTOWN, PA.

Scale

- LEGEND -
 Railroads
 Trolley Lines
 State Highways

CHAPTER I.

GEOLOGY

BENJAMIN LEROY MILLER, PH.D.

Professor of Geology in Lehigh University

INTRODUCTION

Ever since man began to exercise his reasoning powers he has been seeking information concerning the existence of the various objects in Nature by which he is surrounded.

The sun, the moon, the stars, and the planets seem to have exercised the greatest attractions for primitive man and he early sought for explanations of their movements, their characteristics, and their origin. Many of the attempts to solve these problems now appear very crude to us and yet no doubt every effort put forth by honest and sincere investigators had some useful effect upon the development of the science of astronomy, in that each investigation probably resulted in the acquisition of some new scientific fact and each new theory proposed contained some truth. Further, each investigation acted as a stimulus to other men who may have had the same innate desire to learn the ways of Nature and to clear away her mysteries.

It seems strange that the science that deals with objects which we can never study except at long range should have first gained recognition, but it seems that astronomy long antedates the other natural sciences. Biology apparently developed later when man began to observe the multiplicity of animals and plants and to note their resemblances and differences. Aristotle and others initiated the study by their attempts to classify living forms of life and by so doing laid the foundations for the modern sciences of Botany and Zoology. Gradually these have developed during succeeding centuries and with each advance the keen insight of the leaders has discovered ever more and more problems awaiting solution.

As is so frequently the case, the commonplace objects that are ever with us were the ones longest ignored. The soils which yielded the mineral matter for plants necessary for existence, the rocks which were used in the building of structures for shelter and protection, the streams which aided or interfered with man's work, the hills and mountains which protected or menaced early man were long disregarded, judging by our earliest records. The unusual spectacular phenomena of Nature such as earthquakes and violent volcanic eruptions received much attention and aroused the interests of all beholders, but the ordinary geologic phenomena were overlooked.

The political history of almost any country shows the same tendencies, for most historians have ignored those periods when conditions were stable or have treated them lightly as of little consequence, while entering into detail in the descriptions of the wars and revolutions, the catastrophes that have befallen the peoples, and the cataclysms by which governments have been overthrown. Of far greater importance are the slow gradual changes that have ever been taking place, and these brief periods of turmoil should be regarded as merely incidents in the progressive development of men and nations.

Perhaps the chief reason for the rocks, soils, and other geologic phenomena so long escaping attention was the prevailing belief in the unchangeableness of the earth and its constituents. The earth was believed to have been brought into existence in the form which it at present possesses and to represent the ideas of the Creator whose plans it would be useless to attempt to fathom. Under such conditions of belief little more could be done than to tabulate some of the various kinds of minerals and rocks that were observed.

It is usually impossible to determine the date of the beginning of any great idea that has had far-reaching results. In regard to the time when the modern conception of Geology first began it is extremely difficult to fix any approximate date. It has, however, not been much more than one hundred years since the general recognition of the changing character of the constituents of the earth and the topographic features of the earth's surface. With the recognition of this fundamental principle the rocks and hills acquired new interest. Each particle and collection of particles of the earth was seen to have had a past history both in regard to their constitution and their arrangement with respect to other bodies. Each pebble and grain of sand, each mountain range and expansive plain, each continent and ocean basin assumed new importance, and investigators everywhere were stimulated to search for the criteria for the determination of past changes and for the means to forecast future conditions.

In this search Sir John Lyell demands especial mention as it was he who, in the forefront of the last century, most clearly emphasized the proposition that the earth had ever been changing from the beginning of its existence and that all these modifications had been accomplished by the operations of exactly the same forces of Nature that are still at work. It thus became necessary for the geologist to study with extreme care the work that is continually going on, by which rocks are being decomposed and disintegrated by the work of the active components of the atmosphere, the rain, the frost, the winds, the waves, the streams; the work of transportation by which particles are moved from one portion of the earth to another; the forms assumed by the transported particles when finally deposited, and the resultant topographic shapes of those places from whence the materials were removed; and, in general, all the forces that are ever at work in different parts of the world.

Only when data had been secured showing the results of changes now going on did it become possible to interpret the Past. But so ably have the past generations of geologists performed their work that we now generally recognize the criteria for deciphering the records of the past written indelibly in the rocks and hills that all may read who are willing to put forth the necessary efforts. To be sure, the geologic record, even as human records, is broken and sometimes so nearly illegible that there may be a variety of interpretations. But with a multitude of investigators continually seeking new facts in all parts of the world the record is becoming more clear, so that in most places it is possible to determine the great events through which the particular region has passed.

In human history it is convenient to make divisions which we designate as eras, epochs, etc., and measure by years. In geologic history it is not possible to measure time by units as definite as years. Human history dates back only a few thousand years while the earth has been in existence for millions of years. For this reason we divide geologic time into periods which may be of extreme variation so far as intervals of time are concerned, but each of which over some large portion of the globe represents the beginning and culmination of some active process, and is separated by some great change from earlier and later periods.

The divisions of the geologic time scale that are recognized the world over are given in the table which follows. The oldest rocks are given at the base of the table.

GEOLOGICAL TIME SCALE.

Era	System	Series	Duration in years (approximately)
Cenozoic	Quaternary...	Recent	20,000
		Pleistocene or Glacial	280,000
	Tertiary.....	Pliocene	3,400,000
		Miocene
		Oligocene
Mesozoic	Cretaceous	3,700,000
	Jurassic
	Triassic
Paleozoic	Carboniferous	Permian	5,550,000
		Pennsylvanian
	Devonian.....	5,550,000

.....	?

Length of time in years since Archean period—62,950,000

In the above table the figures given for the duration of each period in years are admittedly merely estimates in which the margin of error is probably large, yet in a general way the table shows the approximate time intervals for each period. The names in italics show the periods represented by the surface rocks of Lehigh county.

PHYSIOGRAPHY OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

Lehigh county presents four types of topography that are so distinct that they are recognized by even the most casual observer. These are the South mountain hills, the limestone valleys through which the Saucon, Little Lehigh, and Jordan creeks flow, the slate hills of the north-western portion of the county, and finally Blue mountain, which separates Lehigh from Carbon and Schuylkill counties.

South Mountain Region.—The term, "South Mountain," notwithstanding its general use, is scarcely an appropriate name for the hills that occupy the southeastern portion of the county. Instead of a single mountain it is a range of hills with a general northeast-southwest trend but with many divergent spurs extending into the limestone valleys. The region is much higher than the immediate surrounding country and extremely rugged. The highest elevation of these hills within Lehigh county is about one and one-half miles southeast of Alburts where one prominence rises to the height of 1,080 feet above sea level. There are several points near Mountainville also with an elevation somewhat more than 1,000 feet. The crests of these hills in most places, however, are from 800 to 900 feet above sea level.

Many small streams originate in these hills and join the larger creeks in the limestone valleys but none of them cut entirely through the ridge. The hills therefore form the watershed between two drainage systems. With few exceptions all the streams which head in the southeastern slopes of these hills belong to the Schuylkill river drainage system, while the streams on the northwestern slopes constitute a portion of the Lehigh river drainage system.

The South mountain hills owe their height and their rugged character to the fact that the rocks composing them resist the destructive agents of the atmosphere and water much better than the rocks underlying most of the county. Their rocky slopes bear evidence to the wearing action which they are now undergoing, but the process of disintegration of such firm rocks is a slow one.

Limestone Valleys.—In striking contrast topographically to the South mountain hills are the limestone valleys. In comparison the latter are almost flat. The Little Lehigh, the lower course of the Jordan, and the upper part of the Saucon creeks drain the principal limestone areas of the county. These creeks flow slowly because of the slight differences in elevation, and have extremely crooked courses. Meandering streams are characteristic of flat regions.

The surfaces of the limestone valleys might be characterized as rolling. The hills are low, well-rounded, and in the main so covered with soil that few rocks are seen. The elevations of the uplands in these broad valleys range from 300 to 400 feet above sea level, but along some of the larger streams the elevations are considerably less than 300 feet. The Jordan and Little Lehigh creeks have an elevation of only about 220 feet at their junction with the Lehigh River.

The low elevations of the limestone valleys and their characteristic features are due entirely to the fact that the limestones are worn away readily by water due to their ease of solubility.

Slate Hills—The Slate Hills tract comprises practically all of the townships of North Whitehall, Washington, Lowhill, Heidelberg, Lynn, and Weisenberg. The region is rugged in comparison with the limestone valley to the south and greatly dissected by streams. Most of the hills are flat-topped, attain an elevation of 600 to 800 feet above sea level, and are surrounded by narrow steep-sided valleys. The streams have cut their valleys about 200 feet below the tops of the hills. On account of the steep slopes nearly all the main roads follow the streams or the sinuous flat-topped stream divides. On the flat uplands there is a clayey-soil covering several feet in depth, while along the steep slopes the soil is well-filled with fragments of disintegrated slate.

The slate hills owe their characteristics to the fact that the rock composing them is only slightly soluble and disintegrates mainly by frost action. The streams have cut their valleys almost as deep as they can at present, but have done very little work in widening them.

Blue Mountain.—Blue mountain, the crest of which forms the northwestern boundary line of Lehigh county, is the most striking topographic feature of the region. On a clear day this mountain can be seen from almost all parts of the county, and is greatly admired because of its rugged character, and its even sky-line unbroken for many miles. Its greatest elevation in Lehigh county is in the extreme northwestern corner of the county where the three counties of Berks, Lehigh, and Schuylkill join. Here the ridge has an elevation of 1,642 feet above sea level. Bake Oven Knob, about eight miles farther northeast, between Lehigh and Carbon counties, is another prominent point in the ridge. It has an elevation of 1,560 feet above sea level. The greater portion of the ridge rises to the height of 1,400 to 1,500.

Blue mountain is a narrow ridge with northeast-southwest trend, and is composed of extremely resistant siliceous sandstones and conglomerates dipping steeply to the northwest. The top of the ridge owes its even sky-line to the fact that erosion at one time planed the entire region, regardless of the kind of rocks, to base level. Later the region was elevated and the weaker rocks have now been extensively worn away leaving the hard rocks of Blue mountain the only remnants of the former plain.

At Lehigh Gap the Lehigh river breaks through Blue mountain in a narrow valley which is called a "water gap." Some early writers believed that the gaps in the Blue mountain through which the Delaware, Lehigh, and Schuylkill rivers flow, were produced by an earthquake shock which had split the rocks. This is plainly not the case. The gaps have been cut by the rivers themselves during long ages. Their narrow character is due to the fact that the rocks are so resistant that the streams have accomplished little in widening their valleys. However, the rocks of Blue mountain are gradually going to pieces, as is plainly shown by the numerous blocks of loose rock that cover the slopes.

RELATION OF THE PHYSIOGRAPHY TO THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

It is generally recognized among geographers that the physiography of a region is of the greatest importance in the determination of the occupations of the people and in its industrial development. Certainly in Lehigh county we have many examples of its effects.

When the first settlers entered Lehigh county they found the entire region covered with forests which they at once began to remove in order that they might cultivate the soil. Naturally they first cleared the lower-lying more level portions of the county and these were found in the limestone valleys where agriculture was alone followed for many years. Later the slate hills were brought under cultivation but the steeper slopes there retarded the development of that district for many years. Much later some portions of South mountain were cleared but the steep slopes that permit the soil to be removed as fast as it forms are so unfavorable for agricultural purposes that the greater portion of these hills are still covered with timber. Lastly, Blue Mountain in this section is so rugged that no attempts have ever been made to farm it. Agriculture, therefore, is confined to the limestone valleys and the slate hills of the county.

The original forests of Lehigh county were at first regarded as a hindrance in the development of the region and in the regions best suited for agriculture, the timber was destroyed before its value was appreciated.

Consequently, for many years almost all the timber furnished by the county has come from the South mountain hills and Blue mountain. But since a timbered country cannot furnish a livelihood permanently for many people the more elevated and rugged portions of the county have always been thinly populated. Some mining operations that have been carried on at various times in the South mountain hills have slightly increased the population but to no great extent.

In the settlement of the region the main roads followed the limestone valleys where the grades were gentle, and there is where the first towns were built, and that is where we still have the largest towns and cities. A few towns have later been built in the slate hills on account of the slate and cement industries, but no towns are found in the more rugged portions of the county.

When railroads were built the easiest paths were naturally sought and the result is shown by the number of railroads in the limestone valleys compared with those in the other physiographic districts. The Perkiomen Railroad is the only line that crosses South Mountain in Lehigh county and it passes through the highest part of the mountain by means of a tunnel. The only railroad lines that cross Blue Mountain do so in the narrow gaps cut by the streams. Trolley lines are not so dependent upon gentle slopes as are steam railroad lines and yet they too are mainly confined to the limestone valleys.

In the present stage when agriculture is being replaced in importance by manufacturing, we again see the influence of the physiography. The establishments must be within easy reach of the railroads and so the various manufacturing industries are almost all confined to the limestone valleys. The question of supplies of water has also determined the location of the largest industrial plants and since the streams of any consequence are found in the lower-lying portions of the county, there alone is where most of them could carry on their operations.

Other illustrations of the same character might be cited, but it is not considered necessary to multiply examples. Man justly prides himself upon his ability to overcome obstacles in Nature but in the last analysis it is apparent that he is guided and controlled in his various activities by Nature at every turn.

DESCRIPTIONS OF THE GEOLOGICAL FORMATIONS OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

The rocks appearing at the surface in Lehigh County belong to five of the great geologic periods named in the table given on a preceding page. Since the rocks of some of these periods are of quite different character, we further divide them into various formations to which geographic names have been applied.

The geologic column of Lehigh county, is given in the following table arranged with the oldest rocks at the base. In the descriptions which follow each series will be described, beginning with the oldest.

Period.	Formation.
Recent	River Alluvium.
Pleistocene	Glacial Drift.
Triassic	{ Brunswick Shale.
	{ Brunswick Conglomerate.
Silurian	Shawangunk Conglomerate.
	{ Martinsburg Shales.
Ordovician	{ Nazareth Cement Limestone.
	{ Jacksonburg Limestone.
	{ Beekmantown Limestone.
	{ Allentown Limestone.
Cambrian	{ Leithsville Limestone.
	{ Hardyston Quartzite.
Pre-Cambrian	Gneisses and schists.

PRE-CAMBRIAN ROCKS.

The pre-Cambrian rocks of Lehigh county occur in the southeastern corner of the county in the townships of Hanover, Salisbury, Upper Saucon, Upper Milford, Lower Milford, and Lower Macungie. They constitute the highest elevations in this section of the county. South mountain which extends from South Bethlehem to Shimersville and beyond owes its present elevation to the fact that it is composed of these rocks which have resisted the wearing action of the atmosphere and water better than the adjoining rocks.

In the absence of any fossils it is not possible to determine whether these rocks belong to the Algonkian or Archean, so they are usually grouped under the more general term of pre-Cambrian.

The rocks are completely crystalline, are varied in their mineralogical composition, and present many different phases in different localities. They belong to the class of rocks called gneisses and have been formed by the metamorphism of rocks that were originally for the greater part igneous but in part sedimentary. Most of them consist primarily of feldspar, quartz, hornblende, mica and pyroxene with subordinate amounts of epidote, magnetite, pyrite, ilmenite, allanite, molybdenite, graphite, corundum. As the rocks decompose the minerals, kaolin, limonite, pyrolusite, hematite are formed. In some places the dark-colored minerals predominate while in other localities the rocks consist almost entirely of the light-colored minerals. In most of the rocks, however, both light and dark-colored constituents are present and roughly arranged in light and dark bands. During the process of metamorphism there was a tendency for like minerals to segregate which is responsible for the banding which is very prominent in many places.

The size of the mineral particles varies from about 1-16 to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch in diameter in most of the rocks. Here and there one encounters dikes of pegmatite that have cut through the other crystalline rocks and are extremely coarse. The individual crystals of the pegmatite may be several inches in diameter.

In two places in the county gneisses containing considerable graphite occur. These localities are in the top of South mountain about one mile east of Emaus and about one mile east of Vera Cruz Station. These graphite bearing gneisses were undoubtedly sedimentary deposits originally.

The crystalline rocks of the county have been divided into five formations which have received names of Pochuck Gneiss, Byram Gneiss, Losee Gneiss, Pickering Gneiss, and Franklin Formation, but lack of space does not permit individual descriptions of each of these varieties.

The economic deposits of the pre-Cambrian gneisses in order of importance are iron ore, building stone, paving and ballast stone, kaolin, sand, pyrite, manganese ore, corundum, mica, and graphite. These have been found in many places and the numerous abandoned mines and prospect pits on South mountain bear evidence of the active search made for economic deposits. These will be described more fully on a later page.

CAMBRIAN ROCKS.

The rocks of Cambrian age of Lehigh county represent two distinct types—quartzites and limestones. The quartzites belong to the formation that has received the name of Hardyston; while the limestones belong to two formations—Leithsville shaly limestone, and the Allentown dolomitic limestone.

HARDYSTON QUARTZITE.

The Hardyston formation overlies the gneisses of South mountain, and is composed of varied materials. In many places the basal portions consist of an indurated soil formed from the decayed portion of the underlying gneiss, in which are angular pieces of quartzite with an occasional rounded quartz pebble. The indurated kaolin is of a light green color in most places resembling serpentine but in a few places it is stained by iron oxide to such an extent that it resembles red jasper. This old soil bed is seldom more than four feet in thickness. It forms a gradation between the gneiss and the overlying sandstone or quartzite and may equally well be classified with either.

Above the indurated soil stratum occur beds of siliceous rocks ranging from conglomerates with pebbles an inch or more in diameter to quartzites in which the individual grains of quartz cannot be distinguished. The basal beds are stained with iron, a rusty brown in most places, but the upper strata are so white that they furnish excellent building stone. In some places kaolin derived from the adjacent gneiss forms a prominent constituent of the lower strata.

The most unusual phase of the formation occurs along the northwest flank of South Mountain near Emaus where secondary changes have converted the rock into a ferruginous chert, chert breccia, or brown iron ore. In the alteration which has been produced by ascending and descending waters along a fractured zone all traces of bedding planes have been obliterated. Great masses of this rock occur a short distance northeast of Emaus where broken blocks cover extensive areas. The Indians made use of this rock in the manufacture of their arrow heads, and several of their old work shops have been located in the vicinity of Emaus.

The Hardyston formation has yielded few fossils in this region, the only ones being a few spines of the trilobite Olenellus about one-half mile southwest of Old Zionsville, and specimens of the borings of a marine worm called Scolithus linearis. The latter are abundant in Lock Ridge near Alburdis.

The formation is about 150 feet thick in the region of Bethlehem, but increases slightly in thickness toward Macungie.

LEITHSVILLE SHALY LIMESTONE.

Overlying the quartzite and sandstones of the Hardyston formation is a considerable thickness of shales and shaly limestones with occasional strata of compact thick-bedded dolomitic limestones, in which there are many nodules of black to gray chert. They outcrop at the base of the South mountain hills and are in many places entirely concealed from view by the talus of the more resistant gneiss and quartzite which outcrop at higher levels. Fossils seem to be entirely absent, suggesting a chemical origin for the limestones. The thickness of the strata of this formation is about 1,500 feet.

ALLENTOWN LIMESTONE.

The Allentown formation is composed of massive beds of dolomitic limestones, white to gray in color. Outcropping to the north of the Leithsville strata and farther from the steep slopes of South mountain there are many excellent exposures of the formation in the southern portion of the great limestone valley. The rocks of this formation are well exposed along the little Lehigh and Jordan creeks in the vicinity of Allentown, and extend from there in a broad belt in a southwesterly direction beyond the borders of the county.

The limestones are so soluble that caverns are common in the regions where these rocks occur, and many houses and even towns make use of these underground passages in the disposal of their sewerage.

The only abundant fossil thus far recognized in this formation is Cryptozoon proliferum. It occurs in rounded heads varying in diameter from 1 inch to 1½ feet. Closely associated with these fossils are layers of oölite. In most cases a band of oölitic limestone several inches in thickness underlies the stratum containing the colonies of Cryptozoon proliferum.

The thickness of the Allentown limestone is apparently about 3,000 feet, but the absence of any continuous section across the entire formation, and the presence of several strike faults, render the exact determination of the thickness impossible.

ORDOVICIAN ROCKS.

The rocks of Ordovician age in Lehigh county consist of limestones and shales or slates. The limestones belong to three formations—Beekmantown Limestone, the Jacksonburg Limestone, and the Nazareth Cement Limestone. The shales constitute the Martinsburg formation, which is so extensively developed in the northwestern portion of the country.

BEEKMANTOWN LIMESTONE.

The lowest member of the Ordovician period in this region is the Beekmantown formation that is well exposed in several places along the Lehigh river in the vicinity of Coplay. Lithologically it is a heterogeneous limestone composed of small irregular bodies of light and dark material. Some shaly layers are also present. Some of the layers consist of almost pure CaCO₃ and have been used in the manufacture of cement while interbedded strata are dolomitic. In general, the dolomitic layers are whiter than the others and can be readily detected in quarry openings.

Fossils have been found in the rocks of this formation at many points in the vicinity of Bethlehem and Coplay. They are not very well preserved, but yet it has been found possible to determine the following forms:

Helicotoma sp.

Liospira (?) sp.

Syntrophia lateralis.

Protowarthia rossi.

Ophileta complanata.

Eccylopterus volutatus.

Dr. E. O. Ulrich, who made the determinations, considers the formation to be the equivalent of the Beekmantown of New York. The thickness of the formation is about 1,500 feet.

JACKSONBURG LIMESTONE.

Gray shaly limestones immediately underlying the cement rock constitute the Jacksonburg formation. The formation, although only about 100 feet thick, is of great economic importance because of the extensive use made of these limestones in the manufacture of Portland cement. Magnesium is either very low, or altogether lacking, and the rock is therefore well suited for mixing with those shales that are deficient in lime in order to get the correct composition for the best grade of cement. Fossils are not abundant although they have been found in several places. The following species have been determined from quarries near Nazareth, Northampton county:

Receptaculites occidentalis,

Plectambonites sp.

Pachydictya sp.

Fragments of crinoids.

Dr. E. O. Ulrich considers the fauna the approximate equivalent of the Black River of New York.

The formation is well developed along the Lehigh river a short distance northwest of Coplay.

NAZARETH CEMENT LIMESTONES.

The Nazareth formation, consisting of a gray to black shaly limestone that has been so extensively utilized in the manufacture of cement in the Lehigh Cement District, outcrops along the north side of the limestone valley extending from the Delaware river to the Schuylkill river. In this narrow belt are located many of the largest cement mills of the country and only a few years ago 90 per cent. of the cement product of the United States was manufactured here, while at present the district contributes about one-third of the total product.

The Nazareth limestone is not continuous and its absence in certain localities is explained by its passage into shales that are not separable from the overlying Martinsburg shales. The maximum thickness is probably about 500 feet. The crumpling which it has undergone by which bedding planes have been obliterated in many places render the determination of the thickness somewhat indefinite. Mesotrypa quebecensis has been found in several places in this formation together with fragments of other fossils.

MARTINSBURG SHALES.

The difficultly soluble black shales of the Martinsburg formation bound the limestone valley on the north as do the slightly soluble gneisses and quartzites on the south side. Near the base of the formation the shales have become sufficiently metamorphosed to permit certain strata to be used for roofing slates, and several slate quarries were formerly worked in this part of the Martinsburg shales in the vicinity of Nazareth and Bath, in Northampton county, and near Laurys in Lehigh county. The middle portion of the formation contains many interbedded layers of dark-colored sandstones and no workable slate, while the upper part consists of shales alone and contains many extensive slate quarries in the vicinity of Slatington.

These shales contain considerable pyrite in certain places and where the shales have weathered they are colored a rusty brown by iron oxide that was probably derived from pyrite. The presence of small quantities of pyrite is of interest in the determination of the origin of the brown iron ores of the limestone valley.

SILURIAN ROCKS.

Rocks of the Silurian period are sparingly represented in Lehigh county. All that do occur are present in Blue mountain and belong to a single formation termed the Shawangunk formation.

SHAWANGUNK CONGLOMERATE.

The Shawangunk formation consists of quartzites and siliceous conglomerates that form the Blue mountain of Pennsylvania and its continuation, the Kittatinny mountain of New Jersey, and Shawangunk mountain of New York. These names have been used in the different states for the continuations of the same range. The formation receives its name from the last named portion of the range. The strata now included in this formation were formerly classified as the Oneida and Medina formations and as such they are described in the various reports of the Second Pennsylvania Geological Survey. Recent investigations in New York have shown the presence of an eurypterid fauna of Salina age thus proving the much more recent age of the beds. Although few fossils have thus far been reported from this formation in Pennsylvania there is no doubt of its stratigraphic continuation with similar strata carrying the Salina fossils at Otisville, New York.

The Shawangunk formation consists primarily of a conglomerate in which small quartz pebbles are cemented together by siliceous material. Certain layers are very fine-grained, passing into a quartzite while occasionally strata are observed in which the pebbles are fully an inch in diameter. The resistant character of the rocks of this formation are shown by the high ridge formed by the outcropping beds. This formation is well exposed in Lehigh Gap where it has a thickness of about 1,125 feet. It dips steeply to the north beneath younger beds and does not reappear at the surface.

TRIASSIC ROCKS.*

The rocks deposited during the Triassic period in eastern North America are characterized by their intense red color, which appears prominent—ly in fields, roads, and railroad cuts. These beds cross the southern end of Lehigh county, and comprise both shale and conglomerate, together with diabase or trap rock, which is to be regarded as an igneous intrusion.

*The description of the Triassic Rocks has been written by Edgar T. Wherry.

BRUNSWICK SHALE.

The bulk of the Triassic in the region under consideration is a thinly laminated, dull-red mud rock, usually classed as a shale, although frequently containing enough sand grains to deserve the name sandstone. The surfaces of some layers are marked with ripple-marks, sun-cracks, and rain-drop impressions, proving the deposition of the beds in shallow water. The absence of marine fossils indicates that the water was fresh, and it is believed that the deposits were formed by rivers which periodically overflowed their banks, as did the Nile, Mississippi, and Ganges until civilized man got them under control.

BRUNSWICK CONGLOMERATE.

Toward the border of the Triassic belt the shales give way to pebble rocks, breccias, and conglomerates. The soil of this type of material is somewhat paler red than that of the shales, and is strewn with numerous well rounded hard pink quartzite pebbles, left behind on the weathering away of the solid rock. Locally also ledges of the conglomerate are exposed on hillsides, and present a peculiar porous appearance, owing to the removal of limestone pebbles by the action of the weather, leaving the red mud cement and the pebbles of the harder rocks standing out in relief.

These pebble-bearing beds have evidently been deposited at the mouths of rivers flowing into the valley where the muds were accumulating in Triassic times. But the size of the pebbles—many over 3 inches, and occasional 2-foot boulders, together with their well-rounded condition and arrangement in definite strata, interleaved with fine sandy mud, makes their transportation by simple water action seem improbable, and it is not unlikely that they were carried down the streams by cakes of floating ice, broken from glaciers which perhaps occupied the upper ends of the valleys of the Appalachian mountains, which were then much higher than at present. But since these high mountains collected most of the moisture from the winds blowing in from the west, the climate of the plain below must have been comparatively dry—in fact, many geologists have regarded it as practically like that of a desert,—which is also in agreement with the evidence of the fossils which are found in the beds.

The fossils of the Triassic of this region comprise reptiles known both from their footprints preserved in many strata, as well as from actual bones and teeth (and it should be noted at this point that one of the first finds of these remains in this country was made in Lehigh county, at a point about one mile southwest of Hosensack, by a Dr. Shelley about 1850, the animal being named by Isaac Lea Clepsyaurus pennsylvanicus); fishes of types at present inhabiting shallow fresh water lakes; small crustaceans, also shallow water forms; and fossil plants, chiefly cycads and conifers, found both as leaf and stem impressions and in the form of petrified wood.

DIABASE OR TRAP ROCK.

Some time after the Triassic sediments had been deposited igneous activity began to assert itself, and basic magmas found their way between the beds and along fissures in the strata, rendering these harder and changing their red color to a dull gray, and ultimately solidifying into the form of trap. This rock, being very resistant, forms several ridges near the south border of the county, on which however, there are but few ledges of solid rock, but instead great quantities of enormous rounded boulders. These boulders have been formed by the action of rain water, penetrating downwards along cracks in the rocks, and gradually decomposing the blocks, the corners being rounded off the most rapidly because exposed to the water on several sides at once.

PLEISTOCENE ROCKS.

The rocks of Pleistocene age are neither widespread nor thick in Lehigh county and belong entirely to the Glacial Drift.

GLACIAL DRIFT.

Although the main ice sheet that so profoundly changed the topography of northeastern Pennsylvania failed to reach Lehigh county, there is evidence, however, of an earlier ice-sheet to be found in the many places in the limestone valley west of Allentown and occasionally glacial boulders are found on the tops of the slate hills.

The glacial drift consists of quartzite and sandstone boulders of variable size up to a foot or more in diameter that are found in the fields at many points. Nowhere is the deposit thick and the evidence of the former ice-sheets are the numerous boulders of foreign material, entirely unlike any of the rocks of the immediate region, that are found in the soils. These boulders and cobbles seem from their composition to have been derived entirely from the rocks of Blue mountain and beyond. Some of them show glacial striae well developed.

RECENT ROCKS.

The deposits of the Recent age consist of the soils, the talus that has been collected at the foot of the steep slopes of Blue mountain and other less rugged hills, and the alluvium deposited by the larger streams in their flood plains. The latter are worthy of more than passing mention.

RECENT ALLUVIUM.

Along the Lehigh river and in a few of the smaller streams there are deposits of sand, gravel, and boulders brought down in times of floods and deposited by the streams along their valleys. The areas covered by them are in some places, as much as one-half mile wide but in most instances considerably less. Some of the deposits seem to be as much as 30 or 40 feet in thickness.

GEOLOGICAL STRUCTURE OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

The structure of the rocks of the great limestone valley and the hills bounding it on either side is far from simple. In general the strata dip to the north so that in crossing the valley from south to north one successively encounters younger rocks ranging from the pre-Cambrian gneisses on the south to the Ordovician Martinsburg shales on the north. Folds and faults interfere with this general order in many places and the true structure is only determined with difficulty.

Several systems of folds occur with their axes running in different directions. Most of the major and many of the minor folds have a northeast-southwest direction but some have their axes at almost right angles to the general trend. Some of the larger folds involve thicknesses of 3,000 to 4,000 feet of strata although most are of much less magnitude. Near Hokendauqua many complicated folds involving 50 to 100 feet of strata are well exposed, while small crumplings are numerous. In that region many of the folds are overturned and some have passed into thrust faults.

The faults of the region are likewise numerous and complicate the structure considerably. They are mainly normal strike faults although thrust strike faults and normal dip faults are also present. The throw is sometimes several thousand feet. Faults are the cause of certain areas of slates that extend into the limestones. The largest of such slate areas is Huckleberry Ridge, a few miles west of Allentown, that has been caused by a fault of considerable displacement that has brought the slate into the belt of limestone.

HISTORICAL GEOLOGY.

As stated on a previous page the science of Geology has at the present time made such progress that it is now possible for us to read the history of past geologic ages by correctly interpreting the phenomena observed in the rocks themselves. In the following pages an attempt is made to unravel the geologic history of the region now included within Lehigh county. Naturally, some of the explanations given are based upon observations that have been made in other places in the State and adjoining states.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF PRE-CAMBRIAN TIME.

The record of pre-Cambrian geology is extremely complicated and also somewhat obscure in most places. For these reasons it is necessary to deal mainly in generalizations.

The rocks of this age are the crystalline rocks composing the South mountain of the southeastern portion of the county. As stated in a preceding page they are largely of igneous origin but mixed with them are many sediments that accumulated beneath the waters of the ocean. The abundance of igneous rocks might seem to indicate a period of great volcanic activity although not necessarily so because of the great length of time involved in the period. However, the crust of the earth in the eastern portion of the United States seems to have been weaker then than now, thus permitting more igneous material to be extruded.

All of the igneous material did not come to the surface at the same time because we find many places where one igneous rock has cut through another older igneous rock. If volcanic cones through which the igneous matter issued ever existed they have long since been destroyed by erosion.

The sedimentary rocks of pre-Cambrian time consist of graphite, schists, garnetiferous gneisses, and marbles. They were originally mud, sand, and calcareous deposits formed in the bottom of the ocean near the shore of a continental land mass that furnished the detritus which was carried by streams to the ocean. They were laid down in horizontal beds but at the present time have been so greatly disturbed, altered, and eroded that it is impossible to determine the actual conditions that prevail during their formation.

Subsequent to the deposition of the sediments above described and the extrusion of igneous rocks in the area now constituting the southeastern part of the county, these rocks were subjected to intense squeezing which resulted in the rocks being broken and displaced in certain places and elsewhere thrown into folds. In this compression and resulting movements so much heat was generated that many of the mineral particles became plastic and moved in such a way as to bring their long diameters perpendicular to the direction of the compressive force while other minerals broke down and their atoms united to form new minerals. The cause of this compression was primarily the result of shrinkage of the earth's crust.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF CAMBRIAN TIME.

At the beginning of the Cambrian period a continental land mass lay to the southeast of the Lehigh county district, and probably included extensive areas now beneath the waters of the Atlantic Ocean. This region formed a part of a great inland sea that extended over the entire Appalachian mountain district and a considerable part of the region lying to the west. Into this sea the rivers from the continent brought sediment of all kinds which they dropped near the margin.

The first materials formed on top of the pre-Cambrian rocks were deposits of sand and gravel which now constitute the Hardyston formation. The coarse pebbles present in some layers indicate that the edge of the continent was close and some swift streams emptied into the sea near where we now find this formation. Since swift streams mean steep slopes, we may conclude that the continent near its northwest margin was fairly steep. In the places where the deposits consisted of fine sand, such as are seen on Lock Ridge, boring worms seems to have been abundant.

Soon the streams seem to have lost their ability to carry coarse materials into the sea as is shown by the deposits of shaly limestones (Leithville formation) overlying the sandstone. This checking of the stream velocity was caused in one of several ways, but which way cannot be determined. The land adjacent to the sea may have been worn low by the streams; the land may have sunk with respect to the sea; or the streams may have shrunk in size due to climatic conditions. All that we can determine is that fine mud and calcareous oozes were the only materials deposited during this period in the region now included in Lehigh county.

The same change continued and finally practically no mud from the land was carried into the region. The deposits formed were entirely calcareous and constitute the Allentown limestone. The water was shallow as is shown by wave marks observed in many places near Allentown and Bethlehem. The water was evidently not adapted for many forms of life but one form, Cryptozoon proliferum, seems to have thrived and its remains are abundant in the limestones near Allentown. It resembles a coral in many respects.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF ORDOVICIAN TIME.

During the first part of the Ordovician the sea covering this region continued much the same as during the close of the Cambrian except probably the water was deeper. Limestones were formed either by chemical precipitation of calcium carbonate from the sea water or from the calcareous shells and skeletons of animals. The Beekmantown and Jacksonburg limestones represent this period. Fossils of several kinds indicate that conditions were favorable for marine life.

Somewhat later, probably through an uplift of the region by which the streams were given greater slope and velocity, mud from the land was carried in to be mixed with the calcareous oozes. These conditions gave rise to the Nazareth cement limestone. Through a continuation of the same movements, soon mud from the land increased to such an extent as to mask all calcareous deposits. The Martinsburg shales were formed at this time.

The close of the Ordovician was marked by great folding of the rocks previously formed. Strata originally horizontal were folded as though they were paper, in many places, while in other regions the rocks were broken. The complicated folds seen near Coplay and elsewhere owe their form mainly to these compressive forces that were so active at the close of the Ordovician, although these rocks were at a still later period again squeezed and made to assume new positions.

As a result of these compressive forces the rocks themselves, were changed; one of the greatest changes being the formation of slate from the mud shales of the Martinsburg deposits.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF SILURIAN TIME.

The Silurian rocks of Lehigh county consist of the coarse conglomerates and sandstones of Blue mountain. Their coarse character indicate that the adjacent continent again had swift streams emptying into the inland sea carrying pebbles of large size. In all probability these deposits were formed over the entire county but have been removed by stream action over all but the extreme northwestern margin.

Following the deposition of the Shawangunk formation deposits of shales and limestones were formed but no traces of these now occur in Lehigh county. To the northwest of Blue mountain they are well represented.

GEOLOGICAL EVENTS OF POST-SILURIAN AND PRE-TRIASSIC TIME.

A long interval of time, from the Silurian to the Triassic period is not represented by any rocks in Lehigh county. This is probably due to the fact that the region was above the sea during the time and constituted a part of the continental land mass.

To the northwest of this region the sea continued for a long time and great deposits of shale, limestone, and sandstone were formed during the Devonian period. Later during the Carboniferous period sandstone, shale, and coal were formed over great areas in the region now known as the Anthracite Coal Fields.

Following the Carboniferous period of deposition the region again became unstable and yielding to the intense strains to which it had been subjected, the originally horizontal rock strata were thrown into folds. The Appalachian mountains were formed as the result of this action in the place where the inland sea had existed for such a long time previously.

In Lehigh county the movements accompanying the formation threw the Shawangunk rocks into the steeply dipping position they now have and further folded the Ordovician, Cambrian, and pre-Cambrian rocks which had previously been deformed.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF TRIASSIC TIME.

During the Triassic period a portion of the continent lying to the southeast of the Appalachian mountains was depressed to such an extent that it was covered with water at intervals, forming a series of bays, low-lying valleys, or estuaries extending from the Connecticut river valley to North Carolina. In these bodies of fresh water, deposits of shales, sandstones, and occasional limestones were formed. The red shales and sandstones of the extreme southeastern corner of the county were formed at this time.

For millions of years, ever since the pre-Cambrian, there had been no igneous actions in the eastern part of the United States. Near the close of the Triassic period, or soon after, however, much igneous matter pushed its way to the surface in or near the region where the Triassic deposits had accumulated and dikes and sheets of lava were formed from New England to North Carolina. These lavas are all dark in color and are mainly diabase. They are commonly called "trap rock." These rocks are present in several places in the southeastern corner of the county.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF POST-TRIASSIC AND PRE-PLEISTOCENE TIME.

Triassic deposition ended in this region by an uplift and again the entire area embraced within Lehigh county became land. Since all land masses lying above sea-level are constantly being worn away, following this uplift the region began to be lowered by erosion. This continued until during the Cretaceous period the whole Appalachian region had been reduced practically to sea-level. Across this plain the streams meandered powerless to cut their channels deeper or to remove the decomposed rocks.

Toward the close of the Cretaceous period the Appalachian mountain region again was uplifted and the streams again renewed their work of destruction and transportation. They deepened their valleys and transported the loosened waste rock to the ocean. In this process the softer rocks were worn away first and at the present time the only remnants of this Cretaceous plain in Lehigh county are seen in the flat-topped ridge of Blue mountain. The South mountain hills have been reduced in elevation only slightly but enough to destroy the flat tops which they formerly had.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF PLEISTOCENE TIME.

During the Pleistocene or Glacial period a great change in climate took place in the northeastern part of the North American continent resulting in the accumulation of an immense ice sheet that covered all of the northeastern portions of the United States and Canada. The ice sheet advanced and retreated several times depending upon the climate. At one time it advanced to a point in the limestone valley several miles west of Allentown while at a later time it advanced to within a few miles of the present county. During the first advance the ice carried boulders of various kinds which were strewn over the surface as the ice melted and during the secand advance the water resulting from the melting of the ice swelled the streams to such proportions that they overflowed their banks and deposited much clay, sand and gravel in many places. Many of these deposits are present in Lehigh county especially near Ironton and Slatington.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS OF RECENT TIME.

Since the final disappearance of the North American ice sheet the ever-present forces of Nature have been at work and have accomplished much in the disintegration and transportation of materials from higher to lower regions. The hills are wasting away, the valleys of the streams are being cut deeper and wider, and the whole region is being lowered. If the land remains stationary with respect to the sea, it is only a question of time until the present hills will be destroyed and the region again reduced to a plain as it was during the Cretaceous period.

MINERAL RESOURCES OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

Within the limits of Lehigh county are both varied and valuable mineral deposits that have contributed much to its development. Some of them have been exhausted or for various reasons cannot at the present time be utilized but others are now being exploited to a greater degree than ever before. These will be described briefly below.

BUILDING STONE, CRUSHED STONE, ETC.

In all probability the first of the natural resources to be used was stone for building purposes and before the advent of railroads all the stone used for construction was obtained in the region. The gneisses, quartzites, and limestones were all used and quarries of small size were opened in many places. At the present time little stone is quarried within the county for building purposes but instead numerous quarries in the gneisses and limestones furnish great amounts of crushed rock for ballast and for paving.

LIME.

In the early history of the county when agriculture was almost the sole occupation, those regions where the soils were richest were most thickly populated. It soon developed that the limestone soils were fertile for only a few years after clearing them of timber, and their fertility could only be restored by permitting fields to lie fallow for several years. But even this method of farming did not suffice for many years and eventually the limestone soils produced so small a yield of grain that they were almost useless. The farmers in the limestone valley near Allentown were called "Drylanders" which term implied their poverty.

Toward the close of the eighteenth century, the farmers of eastern Pennsylvania began to experiment with lime as a fertilizer and soon proved its value for the limestone soils. Limestone was abundant and kilns were erected in great number throughout the region. The ruins of many of these can still be seen. Farmers erected kilns and hauled limestone for miles to their farms where they burned it and spread the lime over the fields.

Within recent years the use of lime as a fertilizer has again declined, owing to the introduction of other kinds of fertilizers and new methods of farming, yet nevertheless considerable limestone is still burned in the county. Most of it is used for plastering purposes but some is still sold for fertilizing purposes.

Limestone has been also extensively quarried in many places for use as a flux in local iron furnaces.

CEMENT.

The cement industry of Lehigh county which has grown to such proportions as to make it the most valuable manufacturing industry of the region owes its growth to the presence of the Nazareth Cement Limestone described on a previous page. Quarries and mills are located near Coplay, Cementon, Egypt, Ormrod and Fogelsville.

The first Portland Cement made in the county was made by the Coplay Cement Company which was organized in 1867. This was the predecessor of the Coplay Cement Manufacturing Company and some of the first kilns constructed can still be seen in the latter company's property on the right bank of the Lehigh River a short distance above Coplay.

Several other companies were organized between 1870 and 1880 and with a few exceptions the cement production of Lehigh county has shown an increase each year. The product has also greatly increased in quality while the price has rapidly fallen.

The supply of cement rock in the county is so great that the industry will doubtless continue to be of the greatest importance for many years to come.

SLATE.

The slate industry of Lehigh county has long been one of the most important industries of the region. The almost universal use of slate for roofing purposes all through the county is evidence of the activity of the local quarries situated near Slatington, as is also the continuous line of slate quarries extending from the Lehigh river westward for several miles. The slate constitutes a part of the Martinsburg formation previously described.

The first slate quarried in the county is said to have been taken out in 1828, but not until 1849 was any considerable quarrying started. The Washington quarry of Slatington was opened in the latter year and in 1851 the town of Slatington was laid out by the Lehigh Slate Company.

CLAY AND KAOLIN.

Clay deposits formed by the disintegration of the limestones and gneisses or transported by the ice sheet which formerly covered part of the region has been worked in many places. The material is mainly used in the manufacture of common brick. At the present time several brick yards are in operation in or near Allentown.

Clay of good quality has also been found in connection with many of the deposits of iron ore but seldom has it been utilized.

Kaolin, formed by the decomposition of the feldspar of the gneisses, occurs in many places in the South mountain hills but always mixed with impurities, which can only be removed by washing. On the south side of Lock Ridge a company has for several years been engaged in the mining and washing of the kaolin. The product is fine and white and adapted to many uses.

SAND AND GRAVEL.

The ice sheet which covered part of the region during the Pleistocene period brought down great quantities of sand and gravel which were dropped when the ice melted. Deposits formed in this manner have long been worked between Bethlehem and Allentown.

Along the Lehigh river and some of the minor streams deposits of sand dropped by the streams during seasons of flood have also been utilized. A good deposit of this character that has been extensively worked is located along the left bank of the Lehigh river a short distance below Slatington.

In the disintegration of the gneiss of South mountain kaolin and quartz have been formed. The quartz occurs in the form of angular fragments mixed with the kaolin. The rotten rock is dug in several places, screened to remove the undecomposed fragments of rock, and hauled to many points for use in plastering or for moulding purposes. There are many deep sand pits in the south slope of South mountain between Allentown and South Bethlehem.

IRON ORE.

During a period of about 75 years iron mining was carried on extensively in Lehigh county and many iron furnaces were supplied entirely by local ore. With the discovery of vast beds of iron ore in the Lake Superior district and elsewhere and the improvement in railroad transportation, iron mining in Lehigh county has declined rapidly during the last two decades. The numerous abandoned open-cut iron mines in the limestone valley southwest and northwest of Allentown remind one of the former activity in this line.

Evidence is not at hand regarding the first iron mine opened in Lehigh county but it was probably in the vicinity of Shimersville as there is where the first furnace was erected in 1809. Since that time it is probable that some ore has been mined in the county every year up to the present. Although much ore has been removed there is much evidence that great bodies of ore still remain and no doubt will eventually be utilized.

The iron ore of Lehigh county occurs in two forms. In the gneisses of South mountain there are beds and veins of magnetite iron ore that have been extensively worked near Emaus and Vera Cruz Station, while in the quartzite northeast of Emaus on the north slope of South mountain and in the limestone valleys on both sides of South mountain limonite iron ore occurs in bodies. The largest production of iron ore has probably come from the vicinity of Ironton, Guth's Station, and the Saucon Valley.

Most of the limonite ore seems to have been worked by open pit, although underground mining was carried on in many places, while the magnetite ore was entirely worked by means of shafts.

ZINC ORE.

In 1845 Mr. T. H. Roepper, of Bethlehem, discovered a deposit of zinc ore near Friedensville in the Saucon Valley but it was not until 1853 that plans for working it were prepared. A plant was then built and operations started in the fall of the latter year. Both spelter and zinc oxide was made, the ore being especially well adapted for the latter purpose.

From 1853 to 1876 the Ueberroth mine was worked almost continuously and a great amount of ore removed. It was again re-opened in 1886 and in 1891 but only a small amount of ore was produced. Other mines opened were the Hartman, New Hartman, Correll, and Three-Cornered Lot.

The ore consisted of calamine and smithsonite at the surface and zinc blende below 150 feet. With depth the amount of water encountered became so great that it became necessary to install the largest pump that had been constructed up to that time. It had a capacity of 17,000 gallons per minute from the 300-foot level.

The zinc mines have now been idle for more than 20 years but at some time will undoubtedly be re-opened as the ore body has not been exhausted.

COPPER ORE.

In certain places throughout the southeastern part of the county copper stains, consisting of the green mineral malachite, have been observed in the Brunswick conglomerate. Just east of the Lehigh county boundary line attempts have been made to find a body of copper ore of sufficient value to work but without success.

GOLD ORE.

A few miles west of Coopersburg in the Brunswick Conglomerate gold was reported to have been found several years ago and considerable money expended in development work but, if any gold was actually found, it occurred in such small amount that the project was abandoned. It is extremely improbable that gold in commercial quantities exists in Lehigh county.

PYRITE ORE.

Iron pyrite has been noted in many places in the South mountain hills in association with magnetite iron ore but has never been worked. The largest deposits seem to be near Emaus and about 2 miles northwest of Breinigsville.

MANGANESE ORE.

Manganese oxide occurs in many places in small amounts associated with the brown iron ore. In one place between Mountainville and Emaus the ore was worked at one time.

OCHER.

Ocher is found in almost every brown iron ore deposit in the county but has been used in only a few places. In most operations the ocher was washed from the ore and thrown away as useless. Near Trexlertown and Breinigsville some of these washings caught by dams have recently been worked as they were found to be of value for paints. In a few places in the vicinity of Alburts and Wescoesville deposits of iron ore and ocher have been worked primarily for the ocher, the iron ore being regarded as the by-product.

GRAPHITE.

Graphite gneisses occur in two places in Lehigh county, about 1 mile east of Vera Cruz Station and on the top of South Mountain about 1 mile east of Emaus. Considerable development work has been done at both places, especially the former locality, but no concentrating mill has ever been constructed.

CORUNDUM.

Corundum in the form of large barrel-shaped crystals has been found $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of Shimersville where a trench has been dug along the vein for a considerable distance. It is questionable whether the corundum occurs in commercial quantities.

MICA.

Pegmatite veins carrying large crystals of mica are occasionally found cutting the gneiss in the South mountain hills. At one time an attempt was made to mine the mica in one of these veins between South Bethlehem and Allentown but apparently the project was unsuccessful.

MOLYBDENITE.

Thin flakes of molybdenite are common in the rock quarried for ballast about $\frac{3}{4}$ mile east of Vera Cruz. The locality is of interest only from a mineralogical standpoint as there is too small an amount to ever be utilized commercially.

CHAPTER II.

FLORA OF LEHIGH COUNTY

HAROLD W. PRETZ

In general the flora of Lehigh county is that of the Middle Atlantic states. In so far as there are included within the county a number of species of wide distribution that it shares in common with this general region, this statement is correct; but if a clear understanding of the character of its flora is desired, an inquiry into the relation of its flora with that of the general region of which it is a part, is not only desirable but necessary. The flora of any given area consists of all the plant species within that area, collectively and systematically considered, including this inquiry into its relations. It is manifestly impossible within the scope of so brief a space as a chapter to treat adequately these relations, but a few considerations of interest with reference to the flora of the county may be briefly indicated.

Various factors combine to give a flora its peculiar character. Those having to do with the general distribution of plant life may be grouped under historical (including geologic and physiographic) factors, and climatic, of which temperature is the most important.

Since earliest times temperature has been recognized as a chief factor in the distribution of organic life, and the surface of the earth has been divided into characteristic areas of organic life called "zones." The lines bounding these areas are inaccurate to a large degree, nevertheless the areas that they bound are well characterized. There are subdivisions based on the same factor, and this country has been thus divided by various writers according to their different conceptions. The investigations along these lines by C. Hart Merriam, Chief of the United States Biological Survey and his associates are perhaps best known.*

According to the latest revision of these zonal lines, Lehigh county as far as its flora is concerned should probably be included entirely within the Alleghenian area of the Transition.

The Transition zone is the ground upon which the species of the great Boreal and Austral zones meet and is characterized according to Merriam "as a whole by comparatively few distinctive animals and plants, but rather by the occurrence together of southern species which here find their northern limit, and northern species which here find their southern limit."

Adjoining the Transition zone is a zonal area called Upper Austral, known in the east as Carolinian. In this latitude the limit of the Carolinian area coincides very closely with the Fall line of the so-called Coastal Plain. In Bucks county, just south of Lehigh, and in the counties thence westward there occur areas where typical Carolinian species occur in association. These areas trend rather definitely eastward and westward, roughly paralleling the mountains, and mark the extension northward in that direction of typical Carolinian association. There are no such areas of characteristic Carolinian association within Lehigh county. However, owing to its position with reference to this zonal division, it can be readily seen why certain species frequent in such associations are found to occur in isolated localities within Lehigh county.

In close relation to the changes affecting the flora of this general region during successive geologic periods is the influence of the Pleistocene or Glacial Period, the geological period immediately preceding the present.

In this immediate region, the Terminal Moraine of the last ice invasion crosses the upper end of Northampton county, and continues westward across the Pocono plateau as well as eastward across the state of New Jersey. The influence of glaciation on the topography of the region in which it occurs is very marked. Besides such evidences as erosion and the occurrence of deposits of drift, extensive marshes, bogs, swamps and small lakes abound as is well illustrated for instance in northern New Jersey. Marshes, etc., of this character are absent from Lehigh county and many of the species normally of more northern distribution found in association in such habitats do not occur here.

The effect of the advance of the great ice sheets was to cause the flora of the regions invaded to migrate southward and the flora in the south in turn to move further southward. The result was an intermingling of forms. Upon the recession of the ice, the movement was reversed and the flora again migrated with changing conditions. The northern species thus followed the receding ice sheet and were gradually replaced by the southern species migrating northward except in such congenial habitats within the glaciated region as the marshes, etc., and the tops of the higher mountains. Here they are still to be found in an association peculiar to such regions and habitats. In congenial habitats further south not due to glaciation some of these species still exist as outposts of this retreating flora. Some such examples occur in Lehigh county though many of the species that occur within the glaciated area of Northampton county are not represented here.

*Laws of temperature control the geographic distribution of terrestrial animals and plants. "Nat'l Geogr. Mag., vol. 6, pp. 229 to 238, 3 col. maps, 1894"; The geographic distribution of animals and plants in North America, Yearbook Dept. Agr. for 1894, pp. 203 to 214; Life Zones and Crop Zones of the United States, Bull. No. 10, Div. Biol. Surv., U. S. Dept. Agr.

These larger considerations do not include many factors which determine not only the local distribution of the many species within any area but also not infrequently their occurrence or absence. Congenial habitats for different species are the result of several factors among which are the agencies recognized in geology that have to do with the physiographic features that surround us. These habitats vary with the different geological formations in which they occur.

Of these factors perhaps of greatest importance are the physical and chemical characteristics of the soils resulting from the geological formations. Thus the soil of the limestone region is characterized by greater fertility than the colder, moister soil of the shale region. The rather frequent occurrence, often in abundance, of the Walking Leaf [Camptosorus rhizophyllus (L.) Link.] and the Purple Cliff Brake [Pellaea atropurpurea (L.) Link.] on the outcrops of shale and limestone in the county is an illustration of preference as to rock formation. The Wall Rue (Asplenium Ruta-muraria L.), relatively less frequent and abundant on our limestone outcrops, is another. None of these ferns are quoted as occurring exclusively on calcareous rocks but all and especially the last two are often either absent or rare in regions of other formations within the range of their general distribution.

Indication of such soil preferences are becoming more frequent in current botanical literature. Downy Golden Rod (Solidago puberula Nutt.) for instance is said to grow "In dry or sandy soil * * * mainly near the coast" and "near the coast and on sandstone rocks in the Appalachian mountain system." This beautiful Goldenrod is abundant along the base of the Kittatinny mountains in the county but the writer has never seen it anywhere on the South mountains or elsewhere in the county excepting in sandy soil east of Wescoesville, an occurrence perhaps explained by a local geological factor. The lovely Trailing Arbutus (Epigaea repens L.) is a frequent species of the South and Kittatinny mountains and is not rare on the shale slopes along the Jordan. Like some other members of the Heath family it does not like limestone and at least in the county has never been recorded, as far as the writer knows, on soil of this formation.

The forest cover of the South mountains, and southward in the county, is practically purely deciduous in character; but Conifers become mixed with the cover northward principally along the streams, until along the Kittatinny mountains and on its slopes they are well represented. Only in relatively few places locally do Conifers predominate. On some of the steep shale slopes along the Jordan creek practically pure stands of Hemlock occur, which give a peculiar beauty and character to the scenery of this stream. This species and the White Pine (Pinus Strobus L.), which is not rare locally especially northward near the Kittatinny mountains, are both northern forms that become relatively less abundant away from the mountains in this latitude. Our woodlands are frequently denuded and when this mixed cover is removed the succeeding cover is usually purely deciduous in character. The deciduous type is the more accurately adjusted to conditions except perhaps in a few situations and is therefore the dominant type of arborescent vegetation in the county.

What has just been said of a dominant type of arborescent vegetation is true of herbaceous and all other vegetation as well, though probably to a lesser extent. Many of our rarer species are found only in the marshy or boggy lowlands, the mountain bogs, the richer woods, etc. Many of these habitats are destroyed by man, or through natural causes and the rarer species disappear with them. Denudation of a woodland bog will often so change conditions that an invading host of species more accurately adjusted to the changed conditions will almost entirely replace the species dependent on the tree cover for protection. These invading species in turn retreat before the growing tree cover, and original conditions are apparently restored. This is in a measure true but many of the original species have perished in the meanwhile and are absent. This is the inevitable result when the equilibrium of a plant association is disturbed.

Some changes have occurred within the history of the white man's occupancy in the county. When the first settlers crossed the South mountains into the Great or Kittatinny valley, forests covered the land. Now this forest is mostly confined to the more precipitous slopes of our mountains and along our streams or is scattered in small pieces among the cultivated fields. A large proportion of the county is given over to agriculture, and low meadows normally rich in native species are in pasture or under cultivation. With the white man has come a host of invading species that in many cases enrich our flora only by name and give it no distinction. More often than not these introduced species represent an organic factor that disturbs the adjustment of native plant associations.

"It would appear to a certain extent from its position that Lehigh county is so placed as to include within its boundaries many normally 'southern' and 'northern' plants. It is true that on account of these extensions the flora of the county is rich and that some species apparently have their limit of extension within the county, but it is doubtful whether Lehigh county equals in number of species any of the counties that bound it, with the possible exception of those to the north. This is an inference due to a review of some of the factors influencing the flora of this region, which have been briefly sketched. Thus, Berks, Montgomery, Bucks, and Northampton counties include within their boundaries many of the species of typical association in the mountains to the northwest, principally along the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers. All of these counties, excepting Northampton, are rich in extensions of Carolinian flora, which extends well up the river valleys. Northampton county shares with Lehigh the Lehigh river, and in addition its flora is enriched by the addition of a number of species associated with the glaciated region, besides such species as find their way into that county along the Delaware river. Whether the position of Lehigh county is unique with reference to the flora of the region when compared with these bounding counties will best be proven by future records. It has seemed sufficient to the writer merely to indicate such a possibility."^{*}

Like the forests, many of the species that give to our flora its peculiar character are scattered. Though the region is rich in species, it is only by constant search that many of the now rarer ones are detected in isolated habitats that have preserved their original character. These habitats are constantly threatened and in the no distant future the occurrence of many of our present species within the county will be chiefly historical.

The general region of which Lehigh county is a part is thus gradually being occupied by a climax vegetation, that is, by forms of plant life that are most accurately adjusted to the conditions. Change is the very essence of evolution, and if we can conceive of a flora as a living thing continually changing through or by innumerable influences, we can in a measure realize the difficulty of presenting any characterization that will outlive the immediate present. Within the limited space here allotted the writer, even such a presentation is impossible. It has seemed best therefore to touch briefly on certain controlling influences with respect to local flora, rather than to note the names of a few of the many species necessary to characterize properly the present status of the flora, and omit the necessary critical comment that should accompany such mention. By thus defining the position of the county through its relation to some of these controlling influences, the character of the flora may be sufficiently well indicated, excepting perhaps for some species of rare occurrence and also for those at the limit of their range in a certain direction.

^{*}Flora of Lehigh County, Pennsylvania. Introduction. Harold W. Pretz. Bulletin of the Torrey Botanical Club 38: 45-78. 1911.

CHAPTER III.

THE LENNI LENAPE OR DELAWARE INDIANS

ALFRED FRANKLIN BERLIN

Corr. Member, Anthropological Society, Washington, D. C.; Corr. Member, Archæological Association University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.; Hon. Member Royal Italian Didactic Society, Rome, Italy, with Gold Medal. Hon. Member Alabama Historical Society, Montgomery, Alabama; Corr. Member Wyoming Historical and Geological Society, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Charter Member Lehigh County Historical Society, Allentown, Pennsylvania, etc.

Between the years 1500-1600 the Algonkin Nation, then at the height of its prosperity occupied the Atlantic Coast from the Savannah River on the South to the Strait of Belle Isle on the North. The whole of New Foundland was in their possession, and in Labrador they were neighbors to the Eskimo. Some of the sub-tribes of this great nation to which linguistically belonged the Lenni Lenapé, wandered as far west as the Rocky Mountains. They surrounded on all sides that ferocious, crafty and diplomatic people called the Iroquois, who with the Hurons, it is said, presented the finest type of the North American Indian. In state-craft and diplomacy the more peaceful Delawares, of whom we are about to write, were not equal to the Iroquois, and often later on did they have reason to regret having listened to their blandishments.

The name Lenni Lenapé, we are told by the Moravian Missionary, Heckewelder, is the national and proper one of this tribe and signifies "original people," a race of human beings who are the same that they were in the beginning. The late eminent anthropological authority, Dr. D. G. Brinton, combats this and believes that the word means a "male of our kind" or "one more." He came to this conclusion after a careful examination, as he says, in all its parts of the word.

Living in greatest numbers on both banks of the Delaware river, they were given this name by the Europeans then assembling here. Thinking the title thus given them was one of derision, they objected to it until they were told it was a complimentary one: that it was the name of a great white chief, Lord De la War, and that the river, on the banks of which they lived, and from which they derived their sustenance was given the same name. After this explanation they were greatly pleased. According to traditions handed down to them by their ancestors the Lenni Lenapé people lived many hundred years ago in a distant country, in the Western part of the American continent. For some unaccountable reason they determined to migrate eastward, and in a body set out together in that direction. After a very long journey, and many nights' encampments by the way—this meaning a halt of one year at a place—they at length reached the Namaesi Sipu, or now the Mississippi river. The Lenapé spies were told that the country toward which their people were emigrating was occupied by a very powerful nation, who had many large towns which were built on the great rivers flowing in every direction through their land.

When the Lenapé reached the banks of the great river above mentioned, they sent a message to the Alligewi, the people occupying the country, asking permission to settle there. This request was refused, but they were given permission to pass through the land and seek a settlement further on. The Alligewi changing their mind on seeing the great numbers crossing the river made a furious attack on those who had reached their side, and threatened with destruction all of the others still remaining on the other side if they persisted in crossing. The Lenapé, aided by the Iroquois, who were also at the same time going eastward, declared war against their opponents. After many hard fought battles, in which many warriors fell on both sides, the Alligewi finding their destruction inevitable if they persisted in their obstinacy, abandoned the country to their conquerors, and fled southward from whence they never returned. This war, so they say, lasted many years and the brunt of it always fell upon the Lenapé, the crafty Iroquois hanging back in the rear, while the battles were fought. Through intrigue and craft they, the Iroquois, however, gained the land they desired, which was that bordering on the Great Lakes and their tributary streams. The Lenapé took possession of the country to the South, and at last reached the large river upon which they lived when found by the Whites.

They say that the whole of their nation did not reach this country; but that part of it remained on the other side of the Mississippi on being informed of the reception met with by those who had crossed.

Another ethnological writer notes that this tribe whose traditional history reaches farther back in the past than that of any other native group east of the Rocky mountains appears to have been one of the oldest and, at some former period, one of the most powerful organizations of the Algonkin stock, being looked upon by other members of the family as ancestor or "grandfather" as they designated the tribe. According to their tradition, preserved orally, and also scratched or painted on bark or wood, as interpreted by Dr. Horatio Hale, an eminent ethnological authority, they came from some point north of the Great Lakes in Canada, crossed the Straits of Mackinaw into Michigan, thence southward into Ohio, where they turned eastward, keeping on their march over the Alleghanies to their historic seat, which they say they reached three hundred and seventy years ago, or about the closing of the Sixteenth century. It is a fact well known to the student of American anthropology, that before the Indian occupation of this geographical section, the Eskimo, now the most northern tribe of Aborigines roamed over it as far south as North Carolina. We are told in a tradition of the Tuscarora Indians, who claimed that they came to the Virginia coast about the year 1300, that they there met a race who knew nothing of the cultivation of maize but were eaters of raw flesh.

In the year 1000 the Northmen, who landed somewhere on the coast of Massachusetts or Rhode Island, found the natives of Vineland, as they called the country, of the same race as those they were familiar with in bleak Labrador. Such implements of stone as those Arctic people even now use are frequently found far south from the cold country in which they now live. A fine, perfect lunar shaped knife of slate was picked up in Northampton county several years ago, only a few miles from the boundary line of Lehigh county. Similar knives of stone are to-day used by these people. This magnificent relic of a long ago departed race is now in the collection of the National Museum, at Washington, D. C., given to it by the writer.

The Lenapé nation—the writer believes in adhering in the production of this paper to their original name,—was divided into three sub-tribes.

1. The Minsi, often corrupted into Monseys. Montheys, Mursees or Minisinks, lived in the mountainous country at the head of the waters of the Delaware river, and back of the other two tribes, forming a sort of protection against the Iroquois, who they heartily hated. They were considered the most active and warlike of the Lenapé nation. Their totem or symbol was a picture of the Wolf, who is a rambler by nature, running in every direction in search for food. Yet is he considered as their benefactor, because he led them out of the centre of the Earth, where they say they once lived, and by the appointment of the Great Spirit, killed the deer found by the Minsi when they came out of their dark and damp abode. They paint this animal, sometimes at large, with one foot and leg raised to serve as a hand, in which it also carries a gun with the muzzle forward.

Generally, when speaking of their tribe, they do not use the word "wolf"; but call themselves P'duk-sit, which means roundfoot, that animal having a round foot like a dog. Naturally so, for the dog is simply a domesticated wolf.

2. The Unami, or Wonameys, meaning "people down the river." They occupied the right bank of the Delaware southward from the Lehigh Valley. It was with them and the Unalachtigos, their southern neighbors, that William Penn dealt with for lands ceded to him at treaties held at various times in Philadelphia.

Their totem or symbol was the Turtle or Tortoise. This reptile, according to the Lenapé, claims a superiority and ascendancy above the other totems, because their relation the great "Tortoise," the Atlas of their mythology, bears, according to their traditions, this great Island on his back, and also because he is amphibious, and can live both on land and in the water, which neither of the heads of the other tribes can do.

3. The Unalachtigo, meaning people who live near the ocean. Their principal seat was on tributaries of the Delaware near where Wilmington, Delaware, now is situated. They chose for their totem the Turkey, because it is stationary and always remains with them. They only painted as a "Coat of Arms" one of its feet.

Metaphorical expressions were only used in speaking of their totems. The wolf was called the roundfoot; the turtle the crawler, and the turkey was Pulleau, because he does not chew his food but only swallows it. These symbols the Indians in their hours of leisure painted upon the doors of their houses, so those who passed by might know to which tribe the owner belonged. They also served for signatures to treaties and other documents. They are proud of their origin from the animals noted, and when children are born from intermarriages between different tribes their genealogy is carefully preserved by tradition in the family, that they may know to which tribe they belong.

They consider the Earth as their universal mother, and that they were created within its bosom, where they lived for a long time before coming to the surface, when the all powerful Spirit would in good time allow them to enjoy the good things which were prepared for them on its surface. It is contended by some Indian mythologists that while living in the bowels of the Earth they were of animal shape, such as the rabbit, tortoise and groundhog, until they came to the surface.

The Minsi or Wolf tribe had a tradition that their abode while in the Earth, was under a lake, and that one of their number fortunately discovered a hole through which they crawled to the surface. The Unamis and Unalachtigos reject this story.

They refused to eat the rabbit and groundhog for fear they might be related to them, and for a similar reason greatly respected the rattlesnake, which reptile they called their grandfather, and would on no account destroy it.

I have often reflected, says Heckewelder, on the curious connection which appears to exist in the mind of an Indian between man and the brute creation, and found much matter in it for curious observation. Although they consider themselves superior to all other animals, and are very proud of that superiority; although they believe that the beasts of the forest, the birds of the air, and the fishes in the waters were created by the Almighty Being for the use of man; yet it seems as if they ascribe the difference between themselves and the brute kind, and the dominion which they have over them, more to their superior bodily strength and dexterity than to their immortal souls. All beings endowed by the Creator with the power of volition and self-motion they view in a manner as a great society of which they are the head, whom they are appointed, indeed, to govern, but between whom and themselves intimate ties of connection and relationship may exist, or at least did exist in the beginning of time. They are, in fact, according to their opinions, only the first among equals, the legitimate hereditary sovereigns of the whole animated race, of which they are themselves a constituent part. Indeed, they go so far as to include trees and plants within the first of these descriptions.

All animated nature in whatever degree is in their eyes a great whole, from which they have not yet ventured to separate themselves. They do not exclude other animals from their world of spirits, the place to which they expect to go after death. I find it difficult to express myself clearly on this abstruse subject, which, perhaps, the Indians themselves do not very well understand.

Dr. Charles Alexander Eastman, a full blooded Algonkin, of the Sioux nation, in an interesting manner tells us of the religion of the Aborigine. "The original attitude of the American Indian toward the Eternal, the "Great Mystery" that surrounds and embraces us, was as simple as it was exalted. To him it was the supreme conception, bringing with it the fullest measure of joy and satisfaction possible in this life. Its worship was silent, solitary, free from all self-seeking. It was silent because all speech is of necessity feeble and imperfect. It was solitary, because they believed that He is nearer to us in solitude. No priest was allowed to come between a man and his Maker. None might exhort or confess or in any way meddle with the religious experience of another. All men among the red people were created sons of God and stood erect as conscious of their divinity. Their faith might not be formulated in creeds, nor forced upon any who were unwilling to receive it; hence there was no preaching, proselyting nor persecution, neither were there any scoffers or atheists.

"Among them there were no temples or shrines save those of nature. Being a natural man the Indian was intensely poetical. He would deem it sacrilege to build a house for Him who may be met face to face in the mysterious, shadowy aisles of the primeval forest, or in the sunlit bosom of virgin prairies, upon dizzy spires and pinnacles of naked rocks, and yonder in the jeweled vault of the night sky!" That solitary communion with the great Unseen was the highest expression of his solitary life.

The first religious retreat marked an epoch in the life of the youth, and may be compared to confirmation in Christian experience. Having first prepared himself by means of the purifying vapor bath, and cast off as far as possible all human or fleshly influences, the young man sought out the noblest height in all the surrounding region. Knowing that God sets no value upon material things, he took with him no offerings or sacrifices other than symbolic objects, such as paints and tobacco. Wishing to appear before Him in all humility, he wore no clothing save his moccasins and breech clout. At the solemn hour of sunrise or sunset he took up his position overlooking the glories of earth, and facing the "Great Mystery" he there remained naked, erect, silent and motionless, exposed to the elements and forces of His arming for a night and a day, sometimes two days and two nights, but rarely longer. In this holy trance or ecstasy the Indian mystic found his highest happiness and the motive power of his existence."

The aborigine was generally despised by his white conquerors because of simplicity, and his failure to accumulate property. His religion forbade this, but it taught him at the same time to share the fruits of his skill and success with his less fortunate brothers, thus freeing him from pride, cupidity or envy, and carrying out as he believed the divine decree, a matter of great importance to him.

He failed to establish permanent towns, and to develop a material civilization, because the concentration of population was the prolific mother of all evils, moral no less than physical.

He argued that food is good, while surfeit kills; that love is good, but lust destroys; and not less dreaded than the pestilence following upon crowded and unsanitary dwellings was the loss of spiritual power inseparable from too close contact with his fellowman.

The Indian adored, but did not worship the Sun and the Earth, because in his view they were the parents of all organic life. From the Sun as the universal father, proceeds the quickening principle in nature, and in the fruitful and patient womb of our mother, the Earth, are hidden embryos of plants and men.

Having but limited knowledge of cause and effect he saw miracles everywhere—the process of life in seed and egg, the miracle of death in lightning flash, and in the swelling deep, creation was to him a thing of wonder and past understanding.

The aboriginal people amongst themselves were just and generous, and loathed to see the sick and aged suffer for the want of anything. What was needed was cheerfully given to those in want, for they believed that everything was given in common to all men, and not for the benefit of a few. Whatever liveth on the land, whatsoever groweth out of the Earth, and all that is in the rivers and waters flowing through the same, was given jointly to all, and every one is entitled to his share. Believing that all are descended from one parent they look upon themselves as one great family, and should at all times be kind and serviceable to each other.

An example of this is noted by the missionary, Heckewelder: "Some travelling Indians having in 1777 put their horses over night to pasture in my little meadow at Gnadenhütten, Ohio, on the Muskingum, I called on them in the morning to learn why they had done so. I endeavored to make them sensible of the injury they had done me, especially as I intended to mow the meadow in a day or two. Having finished my complaint, one of them replied: 'My friend, it seems you lay claim to the grass my horses have eaten, because you had enclosed it with a fence: now tell me who caused the grass to grow? Can you make the grass grow? I think not, and nobody can except the great Mannitto. He it is who causes it to grow both for my horses and for yours! See, friend! the grass which grows out of the earth is common to all: the game in the woods is common to all. Be not then disturbed because my horses ate only once of what you call your grass, though the grass was given to us all by the Great Spirit. Besides, if you will but consider, you will find that my horses did not eat all your grass. For friendship's sake, however, I shall never put my horses in your meadow again.'"

They treat each other with civility, even so the children. They are not quarrelsome and are always on their guard so as not to offend each other.

No nation in the World, says the Moravian missionary, pays greater respect to old age than this great Indian nation: "From their infancy they are taught to be kind and attentive to aged persons, and never to let them suffer for want of necessaries or comforts." Heckewelder speaks for the Lenni Lenapé people with whom he was best acquainted. "I am free to declare," he says, "that if any one should kill an old man or woman because of having become burdensome, it would cause such indignation and horror that the murderer would immediately be put to death.

Each totem of the Delawares recognized a chieftain who found little trouble in governing them. The head chief was selected from the Turtle totem. Such heads were called "peace chiefs," who neither could go to war nor send or receive the war belt.

The people declared war back of whom were the "war captains," men who had distinguished themselves in battles with other tribes.

The first lesson taught Indian children is that of impressing upon their tender minds that they owe their existence to a great, good and kind Spirit who gave them life, and who watches all their actions as they pass through life. They are told of the actions that are good as well as of those which are wicked. This is not an hour or day procedure; but is a long course rather more of practice than theory, the whole community even taking part in it. This instruction is given in a gentle and persuasive manner, which plan of education tends to elevate rather than to depress and by these means grow up good men and women.

A marriage contract amongst the Lenni Lenapé was not one for life. One could part from the other at any time. The male took the female, as it were on trial, determined, however, in his mind not to forsake her during good behavior, and particularly if children came to bless their union. The husband's duty was to build a home for them to live in; to procure such implements as were necessary for housekeeping, and to do the hunting and trapping. The woman as his helpmate took upon her the labors of the field and the house, which was neither hard nor difficult, and it was always performed in a cheerful manner. "Mothers taught their daughters those duties which common sense would otherwise point out to them when grown up." As master of the family the husband considers himself bound to support it by hunting and trapping. The wife cultivated the ground, harvested in season that which grew, pounded the grain in mortars for flour, and saw also to the cutting and gathering of firewood. This part of the household duties is often performed as do the whites in the manner of frolics.

The husband likes to see his wife well dressed, while she in turn will buy for him an article which she believes will be suitable for him, telling him at the same time it is her choice, and he is never dissatisfied. The better care he takes of her the more is he esteemed by the other women, who say, "This man surely loves his wife." If a wife is sick and longs for any article of food the husband will make every effort to procure it. Heckewelder, who I have so often quoted in this paper, tells us that he knew of an Indian who travelled between forty and fifty miles to obtain a mess of cranberries longed for by his wife. He witnessed in 1762 a remarkable instance of an Indian who wished to indulge his sick wife. Famine was abroad in the land, and she longed for Indian corn. Her husband learning that a trader one hundred miles away had a little he set out on horseback to procure as much as he could get. He brought back as much as filled the crown of his hat, for which he exchanged his horse. This devotion to his loved one was certainly worthy of comment. Marriages are negotiated by the mothers on both sides, and presents of meat or cereals are exchanged between the two families. The friendship between them increases daily, they do their domestic and field work jointly, and when the young people have agreed to live together they are presented with utensils of the house and for the field.

A male without parents, who wishes to gain his object, will step up to the woman he wishes to marry and say to her: "If you are willing I will take you as wife." If agreeable to her she will immediately go with him, or meet him at some appointed place.

The Lenni Lenapé were proud but not boastful. They considered vanity as degrading and unworthy the character of man. Whatever heroic action or meritorious service they performed was allowed to speak for itself. Knowing all this they were content. They never warred with other tribes for conquest, but only to protect their hunting grounds, and to punish such as had murdered their people or robbed them of their property. The whites have gone farther than this: they stole their land from them and when they protested murdered them.

The original character of the better tribes of the American Aborigines as found by the first white people who met them, and substantiated by numerous historical accounts was kind, hospitable and generous, so long as they were treated with justice and humanity. The European, however, failed to develop this fine trait in him. He robbed him: then outlawed him and when he retorted as a savage his character was blackened with unrestrained calumny.

Christopher Columbus, all of us know who he was, wrote this in letters to his king: "There are not a better people in the world than these, more affectionate, affable or mild. They love their neighbors as themselves." The navigator spoke for the Southern Indians, who were then an agricultural and stationary people. Of the New England Red people, who were Algonkins, and to which family, as before stated, belonged the Lenapés of whom we write, the Rev. Mr. Cushman, in a sermon delivered in Plymouth, Mass., in 1620, said: "The Indians are said to be the most cruel and treacherous people in all these parts, even like lions; but to us they have been like lambs, so kind, so submissive and trusty, as a man may truly say, many Christians are not so kind and sincere." Heckewelder, and no man knew the red people better than he, passed on them similar praise. William Penn in 1683 said of them: "If a European comes to see them or calls for lodgings at their house or wigwam, they give him the best place and the first cut. If they come to visit us they salute us, 'Good be to you.' If you give them anything to eat or drink, well, for they will not ask; and, be it little or much, if it be with kindness they are well pleased. In liberality they excel. Nothing is too good for their friends. Wealth circulateth like the blood; all parts partake; and though none shall want what another has, yet are they exact observers of property. Likewise, are the praises from other historical authorities. A few whites, who had an interest in swindling them, were their slanderers.

The principal food of the Lenapés consisted of game killed or taken in the forests, fish from streams near by and the products of the field, which were maize or indian corn, potatoes, beans, pumpkins, cabbages and turnips. They also ate fruits, nuts, berries and edible roots. Indian corn, Zea mais, which they raised in enormous quantities was found in cultivation by the whites upon their arrival here as far north as the St.

Lawrence river. It originated in the highlands of southern and central Mexico, where the Mayas, the oldest civilized American Indians cultivated it. The Northmen who came to the coast of Massachusetts about the years 1000-1006, saw young corn stalks and full grown ears of corn later.

This now much used grain, given to them by kind hearted red people, saved from starvation many early settlers. Harvested by natives and procured from them by Miles Standish, it saved him and fifteen of his men from starvation during the long and dreary winter of 1620-21. The Frenchman, de Nouville, in his expedition in July, 1685, against the Seneca Indians, then living in the State of New York, destroyed in ten days 1,200,000 bushels of their corn. The writer Kalm tells us that the Swedish settlements of New Jersey and Pennsylvania were obliged to buy maize from their Indian neighbors for planting and eating.

They prepare this grain in different manners. A very durable and nourishing food which they call Tassmanane is made by parching their blue, sweetish kind in clean, hot ashes until it bursts, after which it is sifted until clean and then pounded in a mortar into a kind of flour. Wishing to give it an extra good taste they mix a little sugar with it. When they wish to use it they take about a tablespoonful in their mouths, drinking water with it. Wishing to boil it they put a small portion into a kettle, adding water and letting it boil down until thickened. With this food the warrior or traveller will set out on long journeys and expeditions, and as little will daily satisfy him in the matter of provisions, he will have but little to carry. Taking more than two spoonful at any one time was considered dangerous, for it was apt to swell. Another very palatable dish was a mixture of boiled corn and the washed kernel of the shell-bark. It had a rich and agreeable flavor.

A variety of dishes were also prepared by the Indian women from the pumpkin, squash and kidney beans. Great care was used in the selection of these articles and the manner of their preparation. In the way of cooking they used but little water, declaring that if prepared in their own sap they would be more delicious. In preparing food they cover the vessels with large leaves. They made also an excellent preserve from the cranberry and crabapple, to which they added sugar.

They made two kinds of bread, one of green corn still in the milk, and the other of the same grain when fully ripe and quite dry. The last was pounded as fine as possible, then sifted and kneaded into dough, after which the preparation was formed into cakes about six inches in diameter, about one inch thick, with edges rounded off. Great care was taken in baking the cakes. The ashes must be clean and hot, and, if possible, be of dry oak bark, because this gave a brisk and durable heat. In this pasty mass they frequently mixed boiled pumpkins, green or dried, dried beans, or well pared chestnuts, similarly boiled, dried venison, well pounded, huckle berries, green or dry, but not boiled, sugar and other toothsome ingredients. In the preparation of the other kind of bread the green corn was either pounded or mashed, then placed in broad green corn blades well wrapped and baked in ashes. They considered this preparation a very delicate morsel; Heckewelder considered it too sweet.

Their meat they either boil, roast or broil. They are fond of dried venison, powdered and dipped in bear's oil. They are not only cleanly in their eating, but even delicate, and will not eat animals which they consider improper food.

Fish were exceedingly abundant in the streams of our county, and the red inhabitants knew very well how to take them from the waters. So practiced were they in this occupation that they excited the astonishment of the early Europeans. They took them with hook and line; shooting with arrows, which required a nice calculation as to the position of the finny victim, as well as in spearing them, and with nets. They constructed traps, weirs, fish-pens and fish preserves. It is safe to assert that nets were used in this occupation by our Indians. This is proven by the fact of the presence of sinkers which are very often flat oval stones, of various sizes, notched on two opposite sides, and found in abundance along the banks of creeks and rivers. To this occupation the Delawares devoted much of their time.

Loskiel, the Moravian missionary, describes in an interesting manner the taking of shad. "When the shadfish come up the rivers the Indians run a dam of stones across the stream, where its depth will admit of it, not in a straight line, but in two parts verging towards each other in an angle. An opening is left in the middle for the water to run off. At this opening they place a large box, the bottom of which is full of holes. They then make a rope of the twigs of the wild vine, reaching across the stream, upon which boughs of about six feet in length are fastened at the distance of about two fathoms from each other. A party is detached about a mile above the dam with this rope and its appendages, who begin to move gently down the current, some guiding one some the opposite end, whilst others keep the branches from sinking by supporting the rope with wooden forks. Thus they proceed, frightening the fishes into the opening left in the middle of the dam, where a number of Indians are placed on each side, who, standing upon two legs of the angles, drive the fishes with poles, and an hideous noise, through the opening into the above mentioned box or chest. Here they lie, the water running off through the holes in the bottom, and the other Indians stationed on each side of the chest, take them out, kill them, and fill their canoes. By this contrivance they sometimes catch above a thousand shad and other fish in half a day."

Immediately back of Lehigh Gap, emptying into the Lehigh river, is Aquashicola creek. This is a Lenapé word which, translated into English, means "brush-net fishing."

They make use in fishing at times of neat and light birch-bark canoes, with which they not only go into large rivers, but venture into broad, open waters. In the making of birch-bark canoes the Indians exercised considerable taste and skill. This material was considered best for it retained its place without warping. Boats of this class were made as follows: Having taken off a bark of the requisite length and width it was shaped in the canoe form. Rim pieces of white ash, or other elastic wood, of the width of the hand, were then run around the edge, outside and in, and stitched through and through with the bark itself. In stitching they used bark thread or twine and splints. The ribs consisted of narrow strips of ash, which were set about a foot apart along the bottom of the canoe, and having been turned up the sides, were secured under the rim. Each end of the canoe was fashioned alike, the two side pieces inclining towards each other until they united and formed a sharp and vertical prow. These boats were from twelve to forty feet long and had sufficient capacity to carry from two to thirty persons. They caulked these canoes with the resinous bark of a species of elm, which they first pounded to prepare for use.

In making their dug-outs they fell a thick, strong tree, not with their stone axes, however, but with the aid of fire. They set fire to a great quantity of wood at the roots of the tree, and make it fall by that means. But that the fire might not reach higher than they would have it, they fastened some rags to a pole, dipped them into water, and kept continually washing the tree a little above the fire. When felled the limb end of the tree was also burned away in a similar manner. Whenever they intended to hollow out a thick tree for a canoe, they laid dry branches all along the trunk as far as it must be hollowed out. They then put fire to those dry branches, and, as soon as they were burnt, they were replaced by others. Whilst these branches were burning, the Indians were very busy with wet rags, and pouring water upon the tree, to prevent the fire from spreading too far on the sides and at the ends. The trunk being burnt hollow, as far as they found it sufficient, or as far as they could without damaging the boat, they took stone axes, or sharp flints and quartzes or sharp shells, and scraped off the burnt part of the wood, and smoothed the boat within. By this means they likewise gave it what shape they pleased. A dugout of this kind was commonly thirty to forty feet long.

De Bry, an early writer on the Aborigines of North America, tells his readers in the following manner, how fish were prepared for eating: "After a capture of plenty of fish, they proceed to the chosen place suitable for the preparation of victuals: having here fixed in the ground four forks marking a quadrangular space, they put on them four sticks and cross these others, thus forming a hurdle of sufficient height. When the fish have been placed upon the hurdle, they build a fire underneath it, in order to roast them. In the meantime, when the hurdle can not hold all the fishes, they suspend the remaining ones by the gills on little rods which they have stuck in the ground near the fire, and thus cook them: they also pay close attention that they are not burned. When the first are roasted, they place fresh supplies on the hurdle, and repeat the cooking until they think they have a sufficiency of eatables."

Before the advent of the European, the clothing of the natives consisted of dressed skins and feathers. The older women made blankets of feathers, generally those taken from the wild turkey and the wild goose, curiously interwoven with thread or twine, which were warm and durable. They showed equal skill in the making of other wearing apparel which they tattooed and painted for any occasion.

Before the Red Man came into contact with the so-called civilization of his conquerors he was constitutionally a strong man. He carried with ease the largest deer. Heckewelder mentions an instance of strength in which an Indian named Samuel once took the flour which was ground from a bushel of wheat upon his back at sunrise within two miles from Nazareth, in Northampton county, and arrived with it in the evening of the same day at his camp at Wyoming, a distance of about 75 miles. When they built their houses they carried large logs on their shoulders from the place where the tree was felled to where the home was to be erected.

Taking up when brought into contact with civilization its vices and then living a vicious and dissolute life, there came upon them diseases and disorders not before known. Their blood became corrupted, and their before strong constitutions were weakened by a shameful European complaint. They began to drink the fiery alcoholic liquors manufactured by the whites, which more or less brutalized them. When they lived a natural life, they attained an age reaching up to from seventy to ninety years. The females lived longer than the males.

Reflecting Indians, and there were such in their tribes, even as we have men in our communities who abhor the vicious tendencies of many of our own, remarked, "that it was strange that a people who professed themselves believers in a religion revealed to them by the Great Spirit himself, who say that they have in their houses the Word of God, and his laws, and commandments, textually written, could think of making a liquor calculated to bewitch people and make them destroy one another."

Here appears the tradition as given by the Indians, telling when and where they first drank the fiery liquor: This occurred in September of 1609, when the Dutch, under the voyager Henry Hudson, then anchored in New York Bay, met by appointment, the Mohicans, a tribe of the Lenapés, and induced them to partake of their drink. Meanwhile, a large bottle is brought by one of the servants of the white officer, from which an unknown substance is poured out into a small cup or glass and handed to the white officer. He drinks—has the glass filled again and hands it to the chief standing next to him. The chief receives it, but only smells the contents and passes it on to the next chief who does the same. The glass or cup thus passes through the circle without the liquor being tasted by anyone, and is upon the point of being returned to the red-clothed white officer, when one of the Indians, a brave man and a great warrior, suddenly jumps up and harangues the assembly on the impropriety of returning the cup with its contents. It was handed to them, says he, by the white officer, that they should drink out of it as he himself had done. To follow his example would be pleasing to him, but to return what he had given them might provoke his wrath and bring destruction on them, and since the orator believed it for the good of the nation that the contents offered them should be drunk, and as no one else would do it, he would drink it himself, let the consequence be what it might; it was better for one man to die than that a whole nation should be destroyed. He then took the glass and bidding the assembly a solemn farewell, at once drank up its whole contents. Every eye was fixed on the resolute chief, to see what effect the unknown liquor would produce. He soon began to stagger and at last fell prostrate to the ground. His companions now bemoan his fate; he falls into a sound sleep and they think he has expired. He wakes again, jumps up and declares that he has enjoyed the most delicious sensations and that he never before felt himself so happy as after he drank the cup. He asks for more, his wish is granted. The whole assembly then imitate him, and all become intoxicated. In this manner was introduced into this country that which has brought about such horror and sorrows impossible to describe. The voyager Hudson's life came to an end in Hudson's Bay while seeking a western passage to China. Failing, his miserable crew, ignorant and frightened at the arctic cold, mutinied, and put him, with his son, seven years old, and a few invalid sailors adrift in a boat, and left them to perish, a punishment, perhaps, for the unjust act done to the Indians.

Their only domestic animal was a small species of dog with pointed ears, sometimes used for food, for hunting, for protection, and, at times, for ceremonial purposes.

Their houses were not communal, as were those of their neighbors, the Iroquois. Each family lived separate in a hut made of rods or twigs woven together with a rounded top, thatched with mats made of long leaves of Indian corn, or of tree bark. These were built in groups and surrounded with a palisade for protection. For a place of observation a mound was sometimes in the centre. Remains of these circular ramparts enclosing a central mound were seen by the early settlers at the Falls of the Delaware, and up the Lehigh Valley.

They sing and dance for different purposes, and, we are told that when intended for innocent amusement the action is a pleasing spectacle to look at. They sing in chorus harmonious songs, first the men, then the women; which causes one to think two parties were singing in questions and answers. This performance is upon the whole very agreeable and enlivening, and is concluded with a loud yell. One person begins the singing, others joining in until all are in action, while a drum beats to mark the time. The voices of the women are clear and full, and their intonations generally correct.

Before going to war they perform, bedaubed all over with paint, either in the open air or in an enclosure around a painted post the war dance. They paint themselves as hideous as possible so as to cause terror to those looking at them. Armed with murderous weapons they imitate in their dance such attitudes as are usual in a fight with the enemy. They strive to excel each other by their terrific looks and gestures. Returning from a successful expedition they perform the thanksgiving dance, which partakes of the character of a religious ceremony. Singing, in which the women join, also takes place.

The Delaware warriors sing the following song before going against the enemy. They sing it in short lines or sentences as time permits or as the occasion or their feelings prompt them. Their manner of singing it is pathetic, and considerable feeling is produced.

"O poor me!

Whom am going out to fight the enemy.
And know not whether I shall return again.
To enjoy the embraces of my children
And my wife.

O poor creature!

Whose life is not in his own hands.
Who has no power over his own body.
But tries to do his duty
For the welfare of his nation.

O then Great Spirit above!

Take pity on my children

And on my wife!

Prevent their mourning on my account!

Grant that I may be successful in this attempt

That I may slay my enemy.

And bring home the trophies of war

To my dear family and friends.

That we may rejoice together.

O take pity on me!

Give me courage and strength to meet my enemy.

Suffer me to return again to my children

To my wife,

And to my relations!

Take pity on me and preserve my life

And I will make to thee a sacrifice."

This is Heckewelder's translation, who spoke the language of the Lenapés fluently.

The coming home of the victorious Indians from a successful foray with their prisoners and scalps, is, so we are told, an awful spectacle. While they are kind and generous to strangers, those taken in war are sometimes doomed to horrible torture. Happily this does not often occur. The prisoners are generally adopted by the families of their conquerors in the place of lost or deceased relations or friends, where they soon become domesticated, and are so kindly treated that they never wish themselves away again.

The Lenni Lenapé people believed that their primitive age was one of peace and happiness. A golden age in which the killing of man was unknown. None died until their eyes became dim, the teeth worn away and their hair turned white. This happy time was brought to a close by the advent of certain evil beings who taught men how to kill each other by sorcery. They were very proud of the memory of their ancient heroes and of their ancestral traditions. The missionary Brainerd mentions this as one of the great difficulties in converting them to the Christian religion.

Loskiel writes that the Delawares "love to relate what great warriors their ancestors had been, and how many heroic deeds they had performed. It is a pleasure to them to rehearse their genealogies. They are so skilled at it that they can repeat the chief and collateral lines with the utmost readiness. At the same time they characterize their ancestors by describing them in their different great characters.

The mild mannered Lenapé had a well developed creation myth, and their legends were found in more or less completeness. Their early traditional history is contained in their Walam Olum, a book of chants accompanied by pictographs, sixty in number, which was brought before the scientific public by a person named Rafinesque about 1833. He claimed to have copied these pictures or signs from wooden tablets procured in Kentucky in 1822. The production is, however, considered by some to be a forgery. The Rev. Albert Anthony, a well educated native Delaware, who speaks English fluently, was called to consider the subject. After a scientific examination of the matter he expressed the positive opinion that the text as given was a genuine oral composition of a Delaware Indian, not exactly in the true native tongue, but in a clipped language, an admixture of the language of the Indian and European.

Their Creator, who made the earth and all that is on it, who taught them the arts of war and the chase and gave them the Indian corn, beans and squashes, was generally called Michabo—The Great Light.

This Light myth, says the late learned antiquarian, Dr. Brinton, "is one of noble proportion and circumstance quite worthy of comparison with those of the Oriental world. The Great Light was the son of a maiden who descended from heaven, conceiving, without the knowledge of man, and having given birth to twins she disappeared. One of these twins was the Great Light, who, after having created all things, disappeared toward the east where he still dwells beyond the sunrise." This interesting traditional story may be explained in the following manner, the virgin is the Dawn, who brings forth the Day, which assures safety and knowledge, and the Night, which departs with her. The Day leaves us, and in its personified form never returns, though always expected. The Lenapé told the missionary Ettwein that they directed their children to turn their faces toward the east when praying to the spirits; and that amongst them it was an ancient belief that from that quarter some one would come to benefit them. Therefore when their ancestors saw the first white men, they looked upon them as divine and adored them.

They also had a myth in which the tortoise played a principal part. From it came all things. It brought forth the world, and from the middle of its back grew a tree, upon the branches of which grew men. The tortoise, however, could only perform this work when directed to do so by the primal divinity, the eternally active, hidden spirit of the Universe, which was the first and great beginning of all things.

The creation story as told by the Delawares is of interest because of its similarity to the Deluge of the Bible, as well as to those of other oriental lands. "The whole earth was submerged and but a few persons survived. They took refuge on the back of a turtle, who had reached so great an age that his shell was mossy, like the bank of a stream. In this forlorn condition a loon flew that way, which they asked to dive and bring up land. He complied, but found no bottom. Then he flew far away and returned with a small quantity of earth in his bill. Guided by him, the turtle swam to the place where a spot of dry land was found. There the survivors settled and repopled the land."

A very curious legend of the Delawares was that of the Great Naked or Hairless Bear. It was said to be of enormous size and a most ferocious animal. Its skin was bare, except a tuft of white hair on its back. Although defective in sight, its sense of smell was keen. It attacked and ate the natives. Having a very small heart it was difficult to kill.

Fortunately there were but few of these terrible beasts. The last in the east was killed somewhere on the left bank of the now Hudson river. The Indian women often frightened their children into obedience when told that "The Naked Bear" would eat them.

The Envy of Manitou. This legend, because of its nearness to our vicinity, may be interesting to those reading my essay, "Behind the mountains that gloom around the romantic town of Mauch Chunk, was once a lake of clear, bright water, its winding loops and bays extending back for several miles. On one of its prettiest bits of shore stood a village of the Lenni Lenapé, and the largest of its wigwams, most richly pictured without, most luxurious in its couching of furs within, was that of the young chief Onoko. This Indian was a man of great size, strength and daring. Single handed he had slain the bear on Mauch Chunk—Bear mountain—and it was no wonder that Wenonah, the fairest of her tribe was flattered when he sued for her hand, and promptly consented to be his wife. It was Onoko's fortune in war, the chase and love that roused the envy of Mitche Manitou.

"One day as the couple were floating in their shallop of bark on the calm lake, idly enjoying the sunshine and saying pretty things to each other the Manitou rose among the mountains. Terrible was his aspect, for the scowl of hatred was upon his face. Thunder crashed about his head and fire snapped from his eyes. Covering his right hand with his invincible magic mitten, he dealt a blow on the hills that made the earth shake, and rived them to a depth of a thousand feet. Through the chasm thus created the lake poured a foaming deluge, and born with it was the canoe of Onoko and Wenonah. One glance at the wrathful face in the clouds above them and they knew that escape was hopeless, so, clasping each other in a close embrace, they were whirled away to death. Manitou strode away moodily among the hills, and ever since that time the Lehigh has rolled through the chasm that he made. Onoko's memory is preserved in the name of a glen and cascade a short distance above Mauch Chunk on the Lehigh river."

Funeral Customs. The Missionary Heckewelder tells us that it is well known that the Indians committed their dead to the earth with becoming ceremonies. Mourners, generally women, were hired for the purpose and paid for. Those who could afford it hired many, while others not so well off in this world's goods engaged but few. If the deceased was without property the duty was performed by near relatives and friends. The loud lamentations of the female mourners resounded from one end of the village to the other, and continued day and night until the body was buried. When the deceased was placed in its coffin articles owned by the person while living were given it, so that the occupant could have them when wanted. Even a bottle of whiskey was placed at the coffin head so that it could take some when fatigued on its journey to the world of spirits. They never, when they can help it, allow their dead to be eaten by wild beasts.

"They never mention the name of a deceased person fearing they would renew the grief of the family or friends. This remarkable delicacy certainly does honor to their hearts, and shows that they are naturally accessible to the most tender feelings of humanity."

Religion. Little was done in the way of introducing the religion of the European to the Lenapé. The whites liked better to degrade them, and steal from them their belongings. Little wonder then that so very few embraced the Christian religion. What little was done can here be told in a very few words. The Rev. Thomas Companius, of Stockholm, a Lutheran clergyman, attached to the Swedish settlement from 1642 to 1649, made a creditable effort to acquire the native tongue and preach Christianity to the savages around him. So very religious a body as the early Quakers or Friends did nothing. William Penn offered in 1699 to provide interpreters for the Friends' Meeting, at Philadelphia to convey religious instruction to them, but without avail. For nearly half a century nothing was done, and when young David Brainerd began his mission in 1742 he distinctly states that there was not another missionary in the province of New Jersey. The little society of Christian Indians which he gathered in Burlington county, New Jersey, was even reported as a congregation of rioters and enemies of the state. Penn's province was inclined to no greater favors toward the Christianized natives. Brainerd, however, knew nothing of the seeds of a Christian harvest which the ardent Moravian leader, Count Nicholas Lewis Zinzendorf, had in 1742 sown in the wilderness of Pennsylvania. The pious Rauch had gathered a small but earnest congregation of Mohicans at Shekomego, who soon removed to the valley of the Lehigh to Gnadenhütten, now Lehigh, Carbon county. Zeisberger had registered himself an appointed missionary to the natives in 1744, but when in 1808, after 62 years of missionary labor, he closed his eyes in death, the huts of barely a score of converted Indians clustered around his little chapel. After the murder for revenge of the Conestoga Indians in 1755, in Lancaster county, by the men of Paxton, led by a man named Matthew Smith, the Lenni Lenapé first withdrew into the Susquehanna wilderness and settled at Wyalusing, about 100 miles from the frontier settlers beyond or south of the Blue mountains. After living at this place about five years they moved away in a body directly for the Muskingum river in Ohio. From there part of them emigrated to Upper Louisiana in 1789. Others went to Canada, while a few remained in Ohio. These attempted to live a peaceful and agricultural life. Some of them lived a few years in Indiana. These afterward moved to near the mouth of the Kansas river. In 1850 they were reported as owning 375,000 acres of land and numbering 1,500 souls. Four years later they "ceded" their land and most of them were moved to various reservations in Indian Territory. In 1885 these lived in Kansas about 60 of these unfortunate people, and in Ontario, Canada, 300.

The Stone Tools of the Indian. The ground which is now embraced in the limits of our county of Lehigh was an attractive section to the Aborigine. Forests in which game was plentiful covered it for miles. Large and small streams flowed through it in every direction, and copious springs dotted the surface everywhere. The remains of their encampments and work-shops are found in every section.

With few exceptions the materials out of which they fashioned their stone tools were found in places in this county. Jasper of many colors, which played so important a part in the manufacture of their flaked implements was taken in great quantities from the quarries near Macungie and Vera Cruz. In company with Mr. H. C. Mercer, of Doylestown, Pa., a learned archæological writer, the author of this essay, who had for some time known of the 60 depressions at Vera Cruz, and the 138 at Macungie, made a scientific examination of a number of them. An old stump of a tree, with 195 rings at the side of a pit at Vera Cruz, and a tree nearly four feet in diameter in a depression at Macungie indicate that work in these two shafts was abandoned about 1680-90. In excavating one of the depressions so plentiful at Macungie, Mr. Mercer found lying on the unworked clay, at a depth of 18½ feet a large disc-shaped implement of limestone, a foot in diameter, and well worn along its cutting edge. At the fourteenth foot, mixed with refuse, a smaller tool of quartzite, similarly worn, and a rude limestone arrow point were found. At the bottom, along one of the sides of the pit in the clay two holes were discovered. Into these was poured plaster of paris. When solidified the plaster was dug out and proved to be the facsimiles of two sharpened wooden billets, which had long since rotted away and left only their mould. One of the pieces was about six inches in diameter and of unknown length. The other with a diameter of about two inches was about three feet long. They were sharpened with the aid of fire and sharp stones. These casts of unique digging implements are now to be seen in the Museum of Archæology belonging to the University of Pennsylvania.

Every other material from which the Indians made their stone tools is found in the Lehigh Hills, south of Allentown, which are nearly one-half pure quartz.

The so-called arrow-head was the most plentiful of the Indian's implements. It is found where in deadly feud one hostile tribe was arrayed against another, in plowed fields situated on the banks of streams or lakes, around springs on their encampments, and wherever the Indian hunter wandered in quest of sustenance. Quickly made and continually lost one can easily understand why they are found in such great quantities. Very often they are picked up artistically chipped, and of graceful form. Not every Indian was an adept in the making of flaked tools, for they are often found very rudely made. It is said that with some tribes were men who devoted their whole time to the manufacture of implements. As from time to time they accumulated a supply they would leave their mountain homes and visit intermediate regions for the purpose of exchanging these implements for shells and various other articles not readily obtainable in the localities where they resided. These were usually old men or persons who did not mingle in the excitement of war or the chase. To them while engaged in these commercial pursuits free passage was at all times granted. Their avocation was deemed honorable, and they were welcomed wherever they appeared. The Indian propelled his arrow-tipped shaft with wonderful force and exactness. The traveller Carver tells us that so strong were these red people, and so dexterous in the manipulation of their bows, which were as thick as a man's arm, about eleven or twelve spans in length, that they could project their arrows a distance of two hundred paces.

INDIAN IMPLEMENTS.

The Spaniards, under the adventurer, De Soto, experienced this to their sorrow while arrayed in battle against them. Their armor was pierced by these small points, and many of them were wounded and killed, the arrows often passing completely through their bodies. Cabeza de Vaca, a Spanish historian, writes that he saw the butt of an elm tree which had been penetrated by an arrow to the depth of a span. He also mentions another instance in which an Indian shot an arrow through the saddle and housings and penetrated one-third of its length into the body of a Spaniard's horse.

Clavigero, in his history of Mexico, tells us that at the time of the invasion of that country by the Spanish adventurer, Cortes, it was usual for a number of Aztec archers to assemble and for one of them to throw up into the air an ear of corn at which the others immediately shot with such quickness and dexterity that before it reached the ground it was stripped of every grain. The chevalier Tonti who travelled in what is now the United States two hundred years ago, says: "That which is wonderful in this is the havoc which the shot sent by the savages makes; for, besides the exactness and swiftness of the stroke, the force of it is very surprising, and so much the rarer because it is nothing else but a stone, or a bone, or sometimes a piece of very hard wood, pointed and fastened to the end of an arrow with some fishes glue that causes this terrible effect."

Wahnatah, a Dakota chief, on one occasion, it is said, sent an arrow with such force after a female buffalo that it passed entirely through her body killing her calf on the other side.

The late Dr. Walter J. Hoffman an anthropological writer of note, a native of our county, and during his life an intimate friend of the writer of this chapter while in 1873 a surgeon with General Custer saw a Sioux Indian shoot an arrow clear through a buffalo. He also asserted that in the command there was not a man who was strong enough to draw to its full length an Indian's bow.

Chipped or flaked implements, such as spear and arrow heads, knives, awls, or drills and scrapers were made both by percussion and pressure. In their manufacture the Indian used hard wood, bone and other stones. Many interesting accounts of their manipulation are given in various works by writers who saw the Indians make them. While numerous tools of this class clearly indicate their use it is impossible to classify correctly the greater part of them. Many small objects, classed as arrow heads, may have served as cutting tools. Up to within a few years so-called arrow heads were fastened by western Indians into wooden handles about eight inches long, which served very well as knives. The arrowheads made by the Delawares were of different forms. First and the oldest of its kind is the lanceolate or leaf form, next those of triangular shape, those which have stems, and those barbed. Spearheads were also made in these forms. The idea that the leaf shaped is the oldest form is combated by other archaeological writers, who claim that the triangular stands first in this classification and no matter how various other forms are they are but modifications of the triangular idea; thus if the lower corners of the triangular arrowpoint are rounded we have the leaf shaped implement. Still preserving the triangular form and merely chipping away a small portion on each side of its base to facilitate its attachment to the shaft we have the stemmed point. See plate. Hollowed out at the base of the triangle the indented or shark-tooth form is produced. Add a minute notch on each side and you will see a likeness of the beautiful forms found on the Pacific Coast. In making this so-called primary form the Indians may have taken his cue from the leaf of the birch tree which is triangular. Many curious superstitious beliefs are attached in both hemispheres to the stone implements made by prehistoric races.

Peasants in Ireland and Scotland call these little darts, elf-arrows which fall from the clouds, and when their cattle are sick believe that the sickness is caused by fairies who shot them with arrows. The witch doctor upon being sent for, manages to find upon the sick animal one or more of these little poisoned points which with a few coins are placed in water. This preparation when given to the animal to drink is said to effect a cure. It appears they are never found when searching for them, but are come upon accidentally. A well-known Scotch geographer named Robert Gordon, living about 200 years ago mentions an instance related to him by a man and woman of credit, each of whom while riding found a so-called elf-arrow in their clothes, never knowing how they got there. Similar beliefs prevailed in Scandinavia.

Arrowheads of stone were supposed to contain virtues not to be found in those of metal. In Italy they were kept in houses to prevent lightning strokes, the people believing that lightning struck with a similar stone. They are also carried on the person as a preventive against such strokes and a countryman upon finding one devoutly kneels down, picks it up with his tongue and jealously preserves it as a most potent amulet. Many of the small pretty implements were mounted in gold or silver and worn as charms. The finding in an ancient Etruscan grave of a necklace of gold to which was attached a flint arrowhead seems to show that a belief in their supernatural power was of ancient date. The writer of this essay in his collecting tours in Eastern Pennsylvania met people who kept in their possession flaked implements as well as chips of flint which were used for pow wowing purposes.

The general idea prevailing with our present people that each tribe of Indians made its own peculiar form of arrow or spearhead is a mistaken one. In possession of the writer are three similar leaf shaped flaked forms, one of which is shown as number nine on accompanying plate. One of them, a prettily made translucent specimen of true flint was found on the surface near Belfast, Ireland. Number nine, a black object of Hornstone, was picked up on Kline's Island, Allentown, and the third, a fine pellucid point of agatized wood, was taken from the sand on the west bank of the Willamette river near Oregon City, Oregon, thousands of miles apart. The same may be said of other flaked forms on the plate.

This plate shows a number of the typical forms of stone implements used by the Delawares in this section before they came into contact with the whites. Numbers 1, 3, 6, 13, 15, 16, 17, some of them artistically wrought, may have served their owners either as spearheads or knives. Numbers 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 were used either as knives or arrowpoints. Numbers 16, 3 and 6 were made from jasper and were formed by Indians who understood how to manipulate that material. The material of No. 3 is a lead colored jasper, and is found in place in Tennessee. The writer picked up the specimen near Virginsville, Berks county, this state. Many other fine objects have been found near this village. Here, then, we have evidence that in prehistoric times there was carried on an extensive aboriginal trade, if not one of peace, then by the more forcible one of conquest, in which the victor took from the vanquished that which appeared to him the most useful or ornamental. The subject of primitive commerce is of particular interest because it sheds additional light on the conditions of life of our aboriginal people. In many cases, however, these artifacts may have been brought as booty, and not through trade to the places where they are found in our days. The modern Indians, it is well known, sometimes undertook expeditions of 1,000 or 1,200 miles in order to attack their enemies. The warlike Iroquois, for example, who inhabited the present state of New York frequently followed the warpath as far west as the Mississippi river. The traveller Carver was told by the Winnebago Indians, who then lived in that section of country now embraced in Wisconsin, that they sometimes made war excursions to the southwestern parts—then Spanish possessions—and that it took months to get there. No. 6, a finely made implement of yellow jasper is barbed and has partly serrated or sawlike edges. It was found on Kline's Island.

Nos. 2, 5 and 7 were used as tools to perforate the ceremonial objects and ornaments of slate, such as the writer has figured further on in this paper. The forms exceedingly rare are 17, lozenge shaped and 10 leaf shaped with a stem. Nos. 22 and 23 are fish spears. The first is 3 7-8 inches long and 7-16 of an inch thick. The other has a length of 4 5-8 inches and is 5-16 of an inch thick. Both were found on Kline's Island by the writer.

Scrapers are simple forms of stone implements easily changed from flint chips or broken spear or arrow heads into serviceable tools. They are so called because they were used principally in scraping skins and other surfaces. Or, in other words, a typical scraper may be defined as a broad flake, the point of which has been chipped to a semicircular bevelled edge, similar in character to a round nosed turning chisel. Nos. 18 and 20, of jasper, found on Lehigh Island by the writer, are of this form. When in use they were held between the thumb and fingers, and for this reason are often called "thumbflints." They are perfect. No. 21, viewing it stem downward, is called a "sheaf of wheat scraper." Unlike those just described as bevelled, this is chipped to an edge from both sides. The scraping edge, which is polished, shows signs of considerable wear. It was found on the surface in New Jersey, opposite Riegelsville, this state. It is a very fine implement, and was made either from a broken knife or spear head. Both Nos. 19, which is also a scraper, and 21, were fastened to short handles.

No. 4 is an ungrooved axe or celt of greenstone, very tough and hard. It is also often called a handaxe or chisel. It was originally a much longer tool. Often it was used with the hand when scraping skins, or when the Indian scraped the charcoal from the inside of his boat or dugout. They were hafted in various ways.

1. A hole was bored through a stick and the celt was inserted so that it projected from both sides.

2. The hole was cut partly through the handle and the celt was pushed in as far as it would go.

3. The top of the celt was set in a socket of deerhorn, then fastened in a handle as in 2.

4. A stick was split its entire length and a single turn taken around the tool, the ends being brought together and tied, forming a round handle.

5. A stick was split part way, one fork cut off and the other wrapped once or twice and tied, thus forming a round handle of solid wood. They are at times found simply chipped into form, and again partly flaked and polished. The celt, which is figured on plate has a truncated top. Others found have rounded and also pointed tops. They are found varying in length from two to nine inches, sometimes even longer. In section they approach an oval with sides more or less straight. The cutting edge is always broader than the top.

Interesting superstitious beliefs as to their nature and origin are attached to them. An Allentonian who owned a fine black polished implement of this kind, or a thunderstone, as he called it, wished the writer to understand that it fell from the sky during a thunderstorm; that he picked it up at the foot of a tree which had been shattered by a lightning bolt during this same shower. He would have it no other way. This same belief is found current in many European countries, the greater part of Asia, western Africa, and parts of South America. Medicinal virtue has been assigned to them. Water in which a celt was boiled was believed by the people of Cornwall, England, to be a specific for rheumatism. In Ireland a celt was lent among neighbors to place in the trough from which cattle drank on account of its healing powers. In Brittany it is often thrown into the well to purify the water, or for a continual supply. In Savoy this relic is often found wrapped in sheep's wool or hair of a goat for good luck or the prevention of rot or putrid decay.

They are kept in the home in Germany and Ireland to preserve it from lightning. They sweat when a storm approaches; they are good for diseases of man and beast; they increase the milk of cows; they assist the birth of children. Powder scraped from them may advantageously be taken for various childish disorders. It is usually nine days after their fall from the sky that they are found on the surface. In Burmah and Assam they are found where lightning has thrown them, provided they are dug for after three years.

The ancient Greeks attached a sacred importance to them; and attention has been called to the fact that the Egyptian hieroglyph for God is simply the figure of this implement. These beliefs suggest the idea that in nearly all, if not indeed in all parts of the globe which are now civilized, there was a period when the use of stone implements prevailed; and secondly, that this period is so remote that what were then the common implements of every day life have now for centuries been regarded by the unlearned with superstitious awe, or as being in a certain sense of celestial origin, and not made by human beings.

No. 14 is one of the finest polished and grooved greenstone axes ever found in this section. It is $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches long, $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches broad at its groove, and weighs 2 pounds and $6\frac{1}{2}$ ounces. When found on the surface, about a mile east of Cherryville, Northampton county, this state, it was perfect in every part. The lower part of the cutting edge, for the implement is shown on the plate upside down, was marred by careless handling. They are found in abundance in this section, and a general use was made of them by the Indians. Many of them are found showing rough usage. Their edges were so often reground or sharpened at times that nearly the entire blade has been worn away. Cleverly hafted, they would, in stalwart hands, and at close quarters, constitute a formidable offensive weapon, whether the blow be delivered from the edge or the head. They vary greatly in size, the smallest being not more than a few inches long and weighing but a few ounces, while the largest often are more than a foot long and weigh as much as twenty-six pounds. An axe of this weight was recently found in this state. La-fitau, the French explorer, writes that "They are made of a kind of very hard and tough stone and it requires much labor to make them fit for use. They are prepared by the process of grinding on a sandstone, and finally assume, at the sacrifice of much time and labor, nearly the shape of our axes. The life of a savage is often insufficient for accomplishing the work, and hence such an implement, however rude and imperfect it may be, is considered a precious heirloom for the children. When the stone is finished the difficulty of providing it with a handle arises. They select a young tree, of which they make a handle without cutting it by splitting one end and inserting the stone. The tree grows, tightens around it, and incloses it so firmly that it can hardly be torn out." Again, a withe of proper length perhaps two feet, was bent around the groove, or a forked sapling served the same purpose, which is firmly bound where both ends met with strings of rawhide or material of some other kind.

When they wished to cut down a tree they, with this implement, bruised the bark close to the ground so that fire placed there might more readily destroy the crushed fibre. In his account of a journey which he took with a party of Algonkians in 1609, the explorer Champlain mentions several times that stone axes were used for felling trees, and the account shows that the cutting must have been done expeditiously. So well did they understand the felling of trees with their grooved stone tools that in a few hours a sufficient number of trees were leveled to form a barricade when necessary.

The medium and smaller sized specimens were no doubt used as battleaxes or tomahawks.

With reference to their grooves they may be classified as follows: 1 those in which the groove, which is invariably near one end, completely encircles the implement: 2 in which the groove appears only on the two broad sides: 3 those which have three sides grooved like No. 14: 4 those having two parallel grooves surrounding the specimen, and 5 those simply notched, which are always rudely made. Sometimes are here found axes coarsely made of cobblestones in which the groove is in almost every instance placed in the centre.

Smoking Pipes. The Indian was an inveterate smoker, and this habit he taught the European. The tobacco plant which he used most in the function of smoking and for a long time before the advent of the whites, was, we are told by reliable writers, indigenous to the North American continent. The first reference to the use of this plant, although not by name, was that reported to Columbus by two of his men while on his first voyage to the Coast of Cuba. The Genoese mariner believed he had landed on a part of the mainland of Asia. Assured of this he sent with two native guides two of his men, Rodrigo de Jerez of Agramonte, and a learned Jew named Luis de Torras, who spake Chaldee, Hebrew and a little Arabic, one or other of which languages he thought must be known to the Oriental potentate then ruling. The ambassadors penetrated twelve leagues into the interior when they came to a village of fifty houses and about one thousand inhabitants. Finding no traces of the city and court they expected to see, they returned to their ships. On the way back they saw several of the natives going about with firebrands in their hands, and certain dried herbs which they rolled up in a leaf, and lighting one end, put the other in their mouths and continued inhaling and puffing out the smoke. A roll of this kind they called a "tobacos," which name changed to tobacco, has since been transferred to the weed.

Mixed with tobacco were an almost endless variety of barks, twigs, leaves and roots of plants having narcotic properties. Red sumac leaves and willow bark were used to almost as great an extent as was tobacco. The above mentioned herbs often mixed were at times smoked in preference to tobacco as a prerequisite to the introduction of some ceremonial dance or other function. However, when wishing to become stupefied or intoxicated they smoked only tobacco. The narcotic influences of this plant gave a certain amount of solace to the smoker when resting in his home. He even carried it with him when on the chase or at war. The Indian believed that tobacco was of divine origin, which came as a direct gift for his especial benefit from the Great Spirit, who also was addicted to the habit of smoking. The pipe therefore came to be regarded as a sacred object, and smoking partook of the character of a moral, if not of a religious, act. The incense of tobacco was deemed pleasing to the Father of Life, and the ascending smoke was selected as the most suitable medium of communication with the world of spirits. Without the presence of the pipe, filled with lighted tobacco, there was made no declaration of war nor a treaty of peace. We are told by Catlin, who spent much of his time with the Red people, that "There is no custom more uniformly in constant use among the poor Indians than that of smoking. Nor any other more highly valued. His pipe is his constant companion through life—his messenger of peace; he pledges his friends through its stem and its bowl, and when its care-drowning fumes cease to flow, it takes a place with him in his solitary grave, with his other implements, companions to his long-fancied mild and beautiful hunting-grounds."

Originating somewhere in the torrid zone, near the equator, its cultivation was carried on as far north as the St. Lawrence river. To so change its form that it can no longer be identified with the wild species must have taken ages. Still more protracted must be the artificial propagation causing it to lose its power of independent life, and to rely wholly on man to preserve it from extinction. What numberless ages does this suggest. When and how did the Aborigine first discover its narcotic properties, and then begin to cultivate it? How many centuries passed away before it spread over the great extent of territory, nearly a hundred degrees of latitude, and lost all resemblance to its original form? Who can answer these questions?

The Delawares made their pipes out of different kinds of stone and of clay, which they shaped into various forms. They seem however to be rare in this section, which rarity is commented upon by Dr. Abbott, who says: "The comparative rarity of Aboriginal smoking pipes is easily explained by the fact that they were not discarded as were weapons, when those by whom they were fashioned entered upon the iron age. The advances of the whites in no way lessened the demand for pipes, nor did the whites substitute a better made implement, therefore the pipes were retained and used until worn out or broken, excepting such as were buried with their deceased owners." Others believe that on account of the scarcity of these smoking implements smoking here was only practiced to a limited extent.

The pipe of the Indians of New Sweden, otherwise Pennsylvania, says Holm, appears to have had a stem equal in length to any on the Continent. They make tobacco pipes out of reeds about a man's length; the bowl is made of horn, and to contain a great quantity of tobacco; they generally present these pipes to their good friends when they come to visit them at their houses and wish them to stay sometime longer; then the friend can not go away without having a smoke out of the pipe. They make them of red, yellow and blue clay, of which there is great quantity in the country; also of white, gray, green, brown and black and blue stone, which material is so soft that it can be cut with a knife. The long stem stone pipes, a few of which have been picked up in the country inhabited by the Lenapé were drilled by being continually rolled with the right hand on the thigh of the maker, the left hand holding a piece of shell until drilled through, a tedious bit of work.

Our knowledge of the making of the tools of stone by the American Indians is very limited. The historian Lawson remarks: "Tis a great misfortune that most of our travellers who go to this vast continent of America are persons of the meaner sort and generally of a very slender education, who, being hired by the merchants to trade amongst the Indians, in which voyages they often spend several years, are yet at their return incapable of giving any reasonable account of what they met withal in those remote parts; though the country abounds with curiosities worthy of a nice observation."

The primitive form of the pipe, we are told, was a straight tube, shaped often like the present cigar holders.

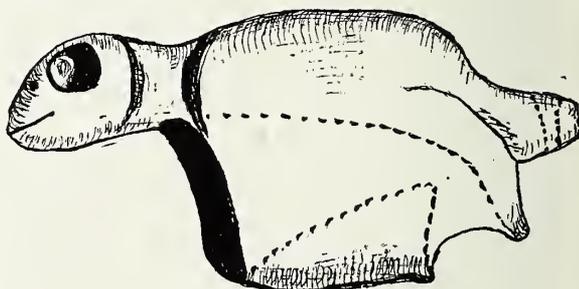

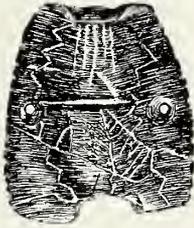

Fig. of Pipe

An interesting animal pipe, natural size, is here shown. It was found in Lehigh township, Northampton county, this state. The funnel shaped bowl is placed in front of the effigy. It is three inches long, one inch thick, and weighs three ounces. The tail as the drawing shows, was perforated for suspension. This is the case with many of the pipes found in sections where deep snow lies.

Their so-called ceremonial weapons, made in most instances of a soft stone, and gracefully formed, are found quite often in this section. Because of their shape they are often called "butterfly" stones. They are perforated through their centre, which is always the thickest part of the implement. We do not for a certainty know how or why they were used. They may have been brought into play during a ceremonial occurrence of some kind. They were perhaps looked upon as having the power to bring good fortune to the owner, especially when marching against an enemy or when hunting for game. A verification of this theory may be cited in the fact that there is now resting in the magnificent A. F. Berlin collection, in the museum of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society, at Wilkes-Barre, Penna., a butterfly shaped object of this kind, once owned by a Delaware Indian who about 150 years ago gave it to one of the early settlers of this section for a small quantity of tobacco. The Aborigine, loaded with skins and furs, which he had taken in the mountains toward the north, was then on his way to the frontier trading post of Bethlehem, twelve miles away. He could not while on this mission use the implement for attack because it is made of soapstone. The slightest blow would have shattered it into atoms. Why then did he carry it? Because he believed that possession of it would bring him good luck while on the hunt.

Butterfly Ceremonial.

1140686

Here is figured, one-half natural size, one of the most interesting of perforated butterfly objects. Into it have been bored two extra lateral holes, a feature never before seen in a perfect specimen by the writer. On both sides of the object occur many notches, and upon its faces have been engraved zig-zag and tree-like parallel lines. It is made of a gray soapstone and was found near Kutztown, this state.

Gorget

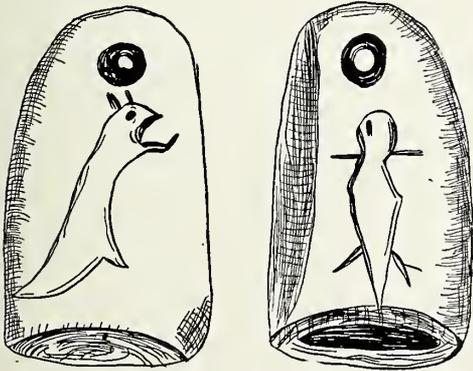

This full size and twice perforated implement is called a gorget. It is nicely polished and bevelled and its edges have a very sawlike appearance. Its use is unknown.

They made pottery of clay, which was at times nicely ornamented, often holding several gallons. Perfect specimens are exceedingly rare; but fragments are often picked up where were once their villages.

Beads of stone are now and then found. Those of shell, of which they made great numbers, have all gone to decay. Their wampum or shell money is seldom found. Only a few of their pretty shell belts which they used in their treaties are in existence. The writer knows of but one which is in possession of an individual at Nazareth, this state. These belts often attained a great length.

Cylinders of stone, often twenty inches long, used in making flour, are now and then found. Their stationary mortars pecked into large boulders are not very plentiful in this section.

Ignorant of the relative worth of metal, which they treated only as malleable stone, it was necessary that they in their commercial intercourse with each other should agree upon something which by common consent would be regarded and accepted as the representative of fixed values.

Pendants

The exceedingly interesting pendant shown here, full size, was picked up at Laury's Station, this county. On each side of it, as shown, is engraved the figure of an unknown animal. The holes at the upper end were made by the drill-like specimens shown on plate as numbers 5 and 7.

They agreed upon shell money or wampum, which is said to be an Algonkin word meaning a mussel, or as some others will have it "white," which was the prevailing color of the beads. The ordinary wampum beads are cylindrical in form, having a length of one-sixth to one-quarter of an inch and about one-eighth of an inch in diameter. The more valuable color was a blue or purplish black.

This curious money was extensively manufactured by the Northern Indians, and for a considerable time circulated freely in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and elsewhere. Several interesting accounts of the use of this money in early colonial days have been preserved. It may be asserted with safety that this shell money was made on the Atlantic coast from Maine to Florida, if not as far south as Central America.

Many implements, ground, pecked and chipped, are found which cannot be classified. Their form is perhaps due to the whims of the maker, and because of this are not mentioned here.

This interesting science is still in its infancy. On every hand are many inviting fields in which the student devoted to the fascinating science of archæology may reap rich harvests.

In conclusion the writer wishes to note that if his efforts have ministered to the entertainment of the general reader or the careful student, he will feel that that which he has tried to tell will not have been entirely in vain.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

From the following works the writer has gleaned the interesting matter found in the foregoing papers. Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain, by John Evans; Antiquities of the Southern Indians, by C. C. Jones, Jr.; Report of the Bureau of Ethnology, Vol. 13, Washington, D. C.; Prehistoric Fishing, by Charles Rau; Smithsonian Contributions to Knowledge; The Lenni Lenapé and their Legends; The Myths of the New World, and The Essays of an Americanist, by D. G. Brinton; Indian Nations, by John Heckevelder; Myths and Legends of Our Own Land, Vol. 1, by C. M. Skinner; A History of Bethlehem, by Joseph Mortimer Levering; The History of North America, Vol. 4, Young People's Edition; The History of the Lehigh Valley, by M. S. Henry; The Soul of the Indian, by Charles Eastman; Annual Report of the Smithsonian Institution, 1897, Vol. I; History of Northampton County, 1877; Annual Reports of the Smithsonian Institution for 1875, 1877; Maize, by John Harshberger; Prehistoric Smoking Implements and other papers by A. F. Berlin.

THE WALKING PURCHASE.

Very little can be said against William Penn the founder of the Province of Pennsylvania. His mistakes were few, and, no doubt, innocently made. He tried at least to hold the good will of the Aboriginal people then in possession of the lands upon which they were roaming. History attests this fact as my readers well know. This, however, cannot be said of his son, Thomas Penn, who was as great a cheat as ever disgraced the Province founded by his illustrious father. One of his several shady real estate transactions was the famous WALKING PURCHASE, brought about in September, 1737. This cheating, land grabbing offspring of an honorable father claimed that certain Lenni Lenapé chieftians had on August 30th, 1686, given a deed to William Penn for territory extending in a northerly direction as far as a man could walk in a day and a half, and thence eastwardly to the Delaware river. It was a paper without signature of any kind, and marked as a copy. The original document was never seen nor heard of. It was designed to cover that part of country embraced in the then so-called Forks of the Delaware, and as occurrences afterward proved, a large section of the best lands in the Minisink country on the other side of the Kittatinny or Blue mountains. The exact direction of the line from the end of the walk to the Delaware river was significantly left blank. An experimental walk was made in April, 1735, by whites to ascertain how much ground this paper so mysteriously produced, after being forgotten almost fifty years, would cover.

It made its appearance at a so-called treaty which was only a form at Durham, Bucks county, this state, on August 25th, 1737, and the chiefs then present were asked to ratify it. The Indians doubted the authenticity of the document; but, as the alleged parties to the contract were dead, they could not disprove the marks or signatures. They then gave dubious consent, and asked that if the lines must be run to do so at once and make an end of the matter.

The Forks of the Delaware, above mentioned, meant then that section of ground just within the confluence of the Delaware and Lehigh rivers, and a few miles up both streams. The name was, however, sometimes applied to the whole section of country extending from the mouth of the Lehigh river, between the courses of both rivers with the Lehigh Water Gap,—or as the Indians called it in their idiom, "Buchka-Buchka," which translated into our language means "Two mountains butting against each other,"— as the western extremity, and the Delaware Water Gap the eastern end.

Hanover, one of the townships contained in Lehigh county was a part of this tract. This very desirable section of land to the whites remained nominally in the hands of the Delaware Indians until 1737 the year of the walk. After the so-called treaty at Durham, the proprietaries who were Thomas and John Penn, sons of the Founder, immediately advertised for the most expert woodmen and walkers, and from those who made application were taken Solomon Jennings, James Yeates and Edward Marshall.

On a bright September morning at sunrise of the nineteenth, 1737, the appointed walkers accompanied by officials and other whites on horseback on their side, and three Aborigines on the part of the red inhabitants started from a marked chestnut tree of great size, situated near Wrightstown, Bucks county, Pa. On the first day at sunset Marshall and Yeates greatly exhausted, reached a creek near the northern base of the Blue mountains, where they passed the night. This mountain was originally called Kitochtanemin, and this name is mentioned in deeds given to William Penn. Kit meaning very large or highest, Wachtu or Aschtshu, a mountain. Guneu, long or endless mountain. The usual translation given to the word is "endless mountain." We read of it now as the Kittatinny or Blue mountains. It was expected by the Indians who had collected there from the village, a short distance away, that the walkers would go no further; but upon seeing that they intended to proceed became very angry. Marshall reached at noon of the twentieth the Tobihanna creek, near the banks of which he struck his hatchet into a tree.

Marshall's family, which consisted of a wife and two children was killed by the Indians at the commencement of the Indian Wars. The murder was caused, no doubt, because of the Indians he did away with and also his questionable action in the walk. He then lived where Stroudsburg is situated. He married a second time and died on Marshall's Island in the Delaware river, Nov. 7th, 1789, aged 79 years.

Solomon Jennings gave out the first day. He reached with the Indians, who cared not to keep up the fraud and the pace of the others, the Lehigh river, a short distance below Bethlehem. He was a pioneer settler upon land on the south bank of the Lehigh river, where now are situated the Geissingers farms, midway between Allentown and Bethlehem. He died Feb. 15th, 1757, and lies in an unknown grave at the eastern end of the lower farm.

Yeates reached the northern base of the Blue mountains on the first day. Next morning after going but a short distance he gave out and fell into a creek totally blind. On account of the terrible strain imposed upon him he lived but three days longer. He was born in New England, and at this time lived in Newtown, Bucks county, Pa. The walk took place on an old Indian path, then called the old Durham road, to Durham creek, veering then westward across the Lehigh river, then over an island in the river, now called Jones' Island, a short distance east of Bethlehem, then across ground upon which that town now stands, in a nearly north-western course, through the present Hanover township of Lehigh county, then across Allen township of Northampton county, to Smith's Gap in Moore Township, and thence on through that depression to the Pocono Hills. The distance traveled was about 62 miles.

The Indian path upon which this walk took place was one of the principal thoroughfares from the Delaware river, near Burlington, New Jersey, to the aboriginal hunting grounds on the Susquehanna river, and for the occasion it is said was cleared of obstructions.

Thomas Furniss, a young saddler of Newtown, hearing of the contemplated walk, made up his mind to accompany the Walkers, which he did on horseback. He describes in a very interesting manner the incidents of the occurrence. "At the time of the walk I lived at Newtown, and was a neighbor of James Yeates. My situation gave me an easy opportunity of acquainting me with the time of setting out, as it did me of hearing the different sentiments of the neighborhood concerning the walk; some alleging it was to be made by the river, others that it was to be gone upon a straight line from somewhere in Wrightstown, opposite to a spruce tree, on the river bank, said to be a boundary to a former purchase. When the walkers started I was a little behind, but was informed they proceeded from a chestnut tree, near the turning out of the road, from Durham road to John Chapman's, and being on horseback overtook them before they reached Buckingham, and kept company for some distance beyond the Blue Mountains, though not quite to the end of the journey.

"Two Indians attended, whom I considered as deputies appointed by the Delaware nation to see the walk honestly performed, one of them repeatedly expressing his dissatisfaction therewith.

"The first day of the walk before we reached Durham creek where we dined in the meadow of one Wilson, an Indian trader, the Indian said the walk was to have been made up the river, and complaining of the unfitness of his shoe-packs for traveling, said he expected Thomas Penn would have made him a present of some shoes. After this, some of us that had horses walked, and let the Indians ride by turns; yet in the afternoon of the same day, and some hours before sunset, the Indians left us, having often called to Marshall that afternoon and forbid him to run. At parting they appeared dissatisfied and said they would go no further with us, for as they saw the walkers would pass all the good land, they did not care how far or where we went to. It was said we traveled 12 hours the first day, and it being the latter end of September, or beginning of October, to complete the time were obliged to walk in the twilight. Timothy Smith, then Sheriff of Bucks, held his watch for some minutes before we stopped and the walkers having a piece of rising ground to ascend, he called out to them, telling the minutes behind, and bid them pull up; which they did so briskly that immediately upon his saying the time was up Marshall clasped his arms about a sapling to support himself. Thereupon the sheriff asked him what was the matter. He said he was almost gone, and that if he had proceeded a few poles further he would have fallen. We lodged in the woods that night, and heard the shouting of the Indians at a cantico, which they were said to hold that evening in a town hard by. Next morning the Indians were sent for to know if they would accompany us any further; but they declined it although I believe some of them came to us before we started and drank a dram in company, and then straggled off about their hunting or some other amusement.

"In our return we came through this Indian town or plantation—Timothy Smith and myself riding some forty yards, more or less, before the company—and as we approached within about one hundred and fifty paces of the town, the woods being open, we saw an Indian take a gun in his hand and advance towards us some distance, placed himself behind a log that laid in our way.

"Timothy observed his motions and being somewhat surprised, as I apprehended, looked at me and asked what I supposed the Indian meant. I said I hoped no harm, and that I thought it best to keep on; which the Indian seeing he arose and walked before us into the settlement. I think Smith was surprised, as I well remember I was through a consciousness that the Indians were dissatisfied with the walk, a thing the whole company seem to be sensible of, and upon the way in our return home frequently expressed themselves to that purpose.

"And indeed, the unfairness practiced in the walk, both in regard to the way where, and the manner how it was performed, and the dissatisfaction of the Indians concerning it, were the common subjects of conversation in our neighborhood for some considerable time after it was done. When the walk was performed I was a young man in the prime of life. The novelty of the thing inclined me to be a spectator, and as I had been brought up most of my time in Burlington, the whole transaction to me was a series of occurrences almost entirely new, and which, therefore, I suppose made the more strong and lasting impressions on my memory."

Conrad Weiser, the celebrated Indian frontier diplomat, came into the service of the Province of Pennsylvania in 1738. Previous to this he lived in the province of New York with the Iroquois so justly hated by the Delawares. The Indian he lived with for many years, was a prominent chief named Quagnant, and with him suffered many hardships. His feelings were ever with the Nation with whom he once lived, and against the Lenni Lenapé and Shawano tribes. Had he shown the same good will toward these two tribes many difficulties might have been avoided. The Shawanos, sometimes termed the Ishmaelites of the Indians, a wandering and fierce tribe of red people, came from the South into the province of Pennsylvania about 1699. They wished to incorporate themselves with the Delawares, who refused; but after many pledges and promises for their good behavior given by the Conestoga Indians, they were at last allowed to connect themselves with that nation.

Weiser was ever active in policies favoring the Six Nations which always rudely forced the Delawares into the background, and gave the Iroquois the power which they eventually gained over them at least for awhile.

The Iroquois chieftain Canassatego, at the meeting in Philadelphia in 1742, and at which gathering representatives of the Delawares tried to defend their nation from untrue charges, and which they were not allowed to do, rebuked them harshly saying that they had seen a deed signed by their ancestors fifty years before for this very land, and a release signed by their chiefs and others numbering about fifteen, not many years past. He asked, "How came you to sell land at all? We conquered you and we made women of you. You know you are women and can no more sell land than women. Nor is it fit that you should have the power of selling land since you would abuse it. This land that you claim is gone through your guts." After telling them that they were well paid for the land claimed by them, and were acting dishonestly, and glorifying in the wise actions of his own people he further said, "We charge you to remove instantly, and not to think about the matter, to Wyoming or Shamokin then we shall have you more under our eyes."

The charge of this wiley Iroquois chief was made too much of by the whites and in consequence all good feeling and respect was lost for the Delawares. They were even refused their own version of the occurrence, and in no way was a chance given them to defend themselves. This denial of common justice says Heckewelder is one of the principal complaints of the Lenni Lenapé people against the English and makes a part of the tradition or history which they preserve for posterity. Again he writes, "This complaint indeed bears hard upon us, and should at least operate as a solemn call to rectify the errors, if such they are found to be; that we in our history may not record and transmit erroneous statements of these aborigines from whom we have received the country we now so happily inhabit. We are bound in honor to acquit ourselves of all charges of the kind which those people may have against us, who in the beginning welcomed us to their shores, in hopes that "they and we would set beside each other as brothers;" and it should not be said, that now when they have surrendered their whole country to us, and retired to the wilds of a distant country we turn our backs upon them with contempt."

Being compelled to submit to one gross insult after another by both whites and the Iroquois, and seeing none of their grievances corrected, and they knowing of the differences then existing between the French and English when war was declared between these two nations, they espoused the cause of France, and began to murder in great numbers the defenceless settlers on the then frontier of Pennsylvania, including our now Lehigh county, in which foray many persons, old and young, male and female, many of them innocent, were horribly slain, and much other property destroyed.

The Minsis resented the walk saying that they were not parties to the transaction and were not liable to any agreement made by the Lenni Lenapés living on the south side of the Kittatinny mountains. The land south of these mountains was held of little value by them. They were hunters and they did not want any invasion of the land upon which they hunted, which was the Minisink country extending from the Wind Gap into the province of New York, almost to the Hudson river. There they wanted no intrusion.

At a treaty with Indians held at Easton in the latter part of October, 1756, Governor

Denny urged Teedyuscong, a noted Delaware chief, to tell why his people went to war with the English. In answer to this question he stamped upon the earth and said: "This very ground was my land and inheritance, and is taken from me by fraud."

Upon being asked by the Governor what he meant by the word fraud, he replied "that after William Penn's death his children forged a deed and took lands never sold by the Indians, this is fraud." That the Penns by the "Walking Purchase" had taken more than double the quantity of land intended to be sold, "I have spoken at your request not that I wish you now to buy these lands but that you should look into your own hearts and consider what is right and do."

Always, until up to a certain time, did this Delaware chief declare the "walk" a glaring fraud, and charge Thomas Penn as the originator of the transaction. When asked again later on the cause of the alienation of the Indians, he declared it was on account of the land. "The complaint I made last fall I still continue. I think some lands have been bought by the proprietors or their agents from Indians who had not a right to sell. I think also, where some lands have been sold to the proprietors by Indians, who had a right to sell a certain place whether that purchase was to be measured by miles or hours walk, that the proprietors have contrary to agreement or bargain taken in more lands than they ought to have done, and lands that belonged to others. I therefore now desire that you will produce the writings and deeds by which you hold the land, and let them be read in public, and examined that it may be fully known from what Indians you have bought the lands you hold, and how far your purchases extend; that copies of the whole may be laid before King George, and published to all the provinces under his government. What is fairly bought and paid for I make no further demands about. But if any lands have been bought of Indians to whom these lands did not belong, and who had no right to sell them, I expect a satisfaction for those lands; and if the proprietors have taken no more lands than they bought of true owners I expect likewise to be paid for that."

Thomas Penn smarting under the charges brought against him by this great Indian chief, determined in some manner to persuade him to deny that any fraud had been perpetrated in the land purchases, and when in May, 1762, he came to an Indian treaty in Philadelphia, he was approached by one of Penn's agents, who told him that if he would withdraw his charges of fraud against the proprietors in the Walking Purchase, four hundred pounds sterling would be given him.

Being in needy circumstances and wanting the money badly, he declared that he never at any of the Indian treaties charged the Penns with fraudulent practices; but had only said what the French had told him about the English cheating them out of their lands. At the request of Penns adherents he made at Easton, in June of the same year, a statement acknowledging his error in the forgery charge. Later at Lancaster in August was given him two hundred Spanish dollars and the value of two hundred pounds of goods.

Five years after the occurrence of the walk the last of the Delaware Indians reluctantly removed from the Forks westward and at the time of this writing, are, as a nation extinct.

CHAPTER IV.

THE GERMAN PIONEERS IN PENNSYLVANIA

REV. GEORGE WARREN RICHARDS, D.D.

Professor of Church History in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in the United States at Lancaster, Penna.

National Elements in America in the Eighteenth Century

It is not my purpose to take the part of a eulogist, an apologist or a satirist, in the discussion of this subject. A plain, unvarnished tale of their character, conflicts and achievements is the best vindication of a people. Of the Germans in Pennsylvania, Hildreth, the historian, has said: "The result of their labors is eulogy enough; their best apology is to tell their story exactly as it was."

To understand the significance of the German emigration to America and to estimate its contribution to Republic and Commonwealth, we must view it in its relation to the larger historic movements of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

A prophet in the middle of the eighteenth century would have confidently predicted that North America was destined to be a Catholic country. The French had built their trading posts from Nova Scotia to the headwaters of the Mississippi. They had the key to the two great water courses of our country. The Spaniards had established a line of towns and missions from Florida to California. True, England had begun her work of colonization, but it was overshadowed by the continental powers and the papal missionaries on the north and on the south. After thirteen years of the second half of the eighteenth century had elapsed the map of America had to be reconstructed. In the Treaty of Paris, signed February 10th, 1763, France ceded to England Nova Scotia, Canada and the country east of the Mississippi as far as Iberville. A line drawn through the Mississippi, from its source to its mouth, was henceforth to form the boundary between French and English territory in the West. The town and island of New Orleans were not included in this cession. Spain ceded to Great Britain Florida and all districts east of the Mississippi, recovering the Havana and all other British conquests. An appeal to Providence is usually satisfactory to the appellant only, and not to the plaintiff. But the enthusiastic protestant or the champion of Anglo-Saxondom can hardly pass by the Paris treaty without pointing to the hand of God in history.

From the St. Lawrence to the Gulf the New World was now in Anglo-Saxon hands and under Protestant influence. Though the Swedes and the Dutch experimented in colonization and left permanent marks on our national history, Great Britain was the dominant power in the colonial period. The Teuton found his Canaan in the lands discovered by the romance explorers. Far be it from us to undervalue the greatness of brave little Holland, and the heroism and chivalry of Sweden; yet no one will deny that the two nations which were the bone and sinew of the Teutonic stock were those which speak the German and the English languages. These two to-day, more than any others, shape the destinies of two continents. These two are the leading elements in our national history.

After Hengst and Horsa had led their warlike bands across the English Channel, they drove the Highlanders from England; but, after the manner of Englishmen, they remained masters of the country. They became the nucleus and formative principle of the British nation. Cut through the national strata of Britain and you will find Celtic, Roman, Anglo-Saxon, Norman and Danish layers. Out of this congeries of tribes the English people have sprung. The controlling element in the development of the nation was Anglo-Saxon, though the tribes which preceded and followed wielded no small influence. The English Channel did not flow in vain between Britain and the continent. From the earliest times a distinct civilization and religion flourished on the Isles. Among Europeans their people represented a distinct national genius. Continental Protestantism passed through the British people, and became a distinct product in Cavalier and Puritan, Catholic and Quaker. Located on the borders of the Western ocean, Britain became naturally a leader in colonization, an empire on whose dominions the sun never sets.

But, while the tribes of the Isles crystalized into a homogeneous nationality, the heterogeneous hordes on the continent also assumed national forms. About the close of the third century a multitude of tribal names disappeared from history, absorbed by four dominant nations: the Alemanni, the Franks, the Saxons and the Goths. Many kindred characteristics still bound them together, chief of which was that of language. But in the course of centuries, under the influence of natural environment, of molding personalities, and of the intermixture of blood, they became distinct nations, representing various types of the Teutonic stock. The Franks overran Gaul and became the ancestors of the French. The Goths dwelt in the regions north of the Danube and were a menace to decadent Rome. The Saxons settled northward on both sides of the Elbe and westward as far as the Lower Rhine. Their name is perpetuated in modern Saxony. The Alemanni, chiefly of Suevic origin, with an admixture of smaller tribes, occupied the territory extending from the Main to the Danube. They enlarged their borders westward beyond the Upper Rhine into Alsace and Lorraine, and southward into the adjacent sections of Switzerland. The Alemanni became the progenitors of many of the Germans who eventually settled in Pennsylvania. They repeatedly repulsed the Roman legions. When the latter had spent their force, the former became conquerors, and in German history maintained an influential and independent political existence. In the twelfth century the political State of the Palatinate was founded under the royal house of Hohenstaufen. Prince Conrad was invested with the electoral dignity by his brother, the Emperor Frederick I. For seven hundred years, until 1801, it remained a distinct realm. By the Treaty of Luneville, dictated by Napoleon, the Rhenish Palatinate was parcelled out between Hesse-Darmstadt, Baden, Leiningen-Dachsburg and Nassau, while the Rhine itself became the eastern boundary of France until the downfall of the Man of Destiny.

Thus the Teutonic tribes were differentiated by the intricate process of history into the nations from which were destined to come the founders of the United States. The leaders among them were the English and the Germans. The English received valuable recruits in the colonies from the Scotch the Irish and the Welsh. With the Germans we must associate their kinsmen, the Swiss, the Dutch and the Swedes. We observe that they all belong to the Aryan family, and were therefore sufficiently related to Greece and Rome to become the heirs of their civilization and culture. They were Teutons, and therefore of such kinship that they might be welded into a united republic. They were distinct nationalities, and could therefore contribute specific ideals for a new nation—the child of them all.

It is beyond our scope to follow the migration of the English into the New World. Suffice it to say that they preceded the Germans by almost a century. They had precedence not only in the order of time, but they were supported also by a mother country and a mother Church. They did not come into a foreign land, but into a land of their own possession. They occupied the Atlantic border from Maine to Georgia. They differed in creed, but were largely of British blood.

The German came as a stranger into a strange land. He had to take an oath of allegiance to a foreign government. He settled in the provinces by the grace of God and the English proprietors. Though there were German groups in a number of the colonies, Pennsylvania seems to have been the goal of their pilgrimage and the circle of their influence. We read of German glass-blowers sent to the Virginia colony as early as 1608 for the glass works which were there established. A small band was led to New York by the German Joshua Kocherthal. About the same time a company of 700 was sent to North Carolina. Both in Virginia and in New Jersey there were German settlers. Yet, if we would understand the way in which the German nation entered the territory of the Union and found the earliest center of influence in this country, we must follow the Pennsylvania pioneers. Dr. Seidensticker says: "Should it be asked when the German immigration in America had its beginning, the answer must be in the year 1683, the year of the Crefelders' arrival in Germantown." Whether the German landed on the coast of Massachusetts or New York, Virginia or Georgia, he gravitated to the land of Penn. When the lands beyond the Blue Ridge and the Alleghanies invited the more restless and adventurous spirits of the coast, Pennsylvania again was the distributing center for the Germans in the United States. John Fiske says: "But for Virginia, Maryland and the Carolinas, Pennsylvania was the door for immigrants. Pennsylvania was the temporary tarrying place and distributing center for so much that we now call characteristically American." The key, therefore, to the history of the German life in the Union is the history of the German pioneers in the Keystone State. What they have done in a small way in the building of a single commonwealth they have done in a large way in the construction of a nation. Though they came without form and comeliness, despised and rejected, men of sorrows and acquainted with grief, they were none the less the slender thread drawing after it the stronger bonds which bind us inseparably to a German Fatherland. They were the bearers of a spirit and a message which were to aid in the nurture and culture of unborn millions. Dr. Rush, in his booklet on the "Manners of the German Inhabitants of Pennsylvania," in 1789, exhorts the legislators as follows: "Do not contend with their prejudice in favor of their language. It will be the channel through which the knowledge and discoveries of the wisest nations in Europe may be conveyed into one country. . . . Invite them to share in the power and offices of the government; it will be the means of producing a union in principle and conduct between them and all those enlightened fellow citizens who are descended from the other nations." These words were prophetic then; they are actual history of the contribution of the Germans to the nation now. Through them we, their descendants and followers, have received an invaluable heritage in philosophy, science, art, and domestic economy. Through them has been effected an organic union of the two great branches of Teutonism in the New World which are separated by a stubborn and unruly channel in the Old.

To define the character of the German pioneers and their relation to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, we shall briefly answer three questions, viz: Why did they come? What did they bring? What have they done?

EARLY GERMAN MIGRATIONS TO AMERICA

We are told that colonies are planted by the uneasy. In a general way poverty and financial reverses, political changes and religious troubles, a thirst for novelty and a love for adventure, all these combined, are the causes for the great migrations in history. The motives in individuals and groups vary according to circumstances. Now the dominant cause may be religious persecutions, again political tyranny, and then economic distress. The general unrest and discontent in Germany were the cumulative product of centuries. Since the Reformation Europe was in a state of religious, political, and social ferment. The Protestant was arrayed against the Catholic, the Lutheran against the Calvinist, Protestant and Catholic against the Anabaptist, the Humanist against the Reformer, and the peasant against the noble. The reason for it all was that the principles of Protestantism, which had been discerned in a German monastery and practiced in a Swiss pastorate, had to be fought out on fields of blood before they could become the common possession of mankind.

In the name of religion, though for anything but for the good of religion, Germany became the seat of devastating wars. For thirty years hostile armies, some foreign and some native, ravaged the provinces, turned the Rhinelands into a desert, and decimated the population. At the close of that inhuman struggle two-thirds of the German nation had perished. The Palatinate was reduced from 500,000 citizens to 50,000. University halls became army barracks. Fields ripening for harvest, blossoming orchards, vine-clad hills, towering castles, happy hamlets and busy cities fell before the ruthless blows of the invader. It is said that "the Elector Palatine beheld from his castle at Manheim six cities and twenty-five towns in flames where lust and rapine walked hand in hand with fire and sword." The treaty of Westphalia, in 1648, was only a temporary respite from the desolation of armies. Scarcely had the industrious peasants and burghers of the Rhine healed some of the wounds of a generation of war and recovered some of the former glory of their country, when the armies of Louis XIV. began their work of destruction. That most Christian king said to his marshal, Melac, "Ravage the Palatinate!" In obedience to orders, 1,200 towns and villages went up in smoke and fell in ashes. The former scenes of horror and crime were re-enacted, and with an occasional intermission they continued through the war of the Spanish succession, ending with the peace of Utrecht in 1713.

The effect of these disasters was not only to impoverish Germany's resources, but also her manhood. Peasants in their desperation became robbers, murderers, cannibals. "Freemen became serfs; rich burghers became narrow-minded shopkeepers; noblemen, servile courtiers; princes, shameless oppressors." The internal political and social conditions of Southwest Germany were as ruinous as foreign foes. "The provinces were full of misgovernment and of sectarianism, filled with tiny principalities, old religious foundations, secularized or still remaining, free cities of the moribund empire, and even free villages; courts, princes and lords of all kinds, who caricatured Louis XIV., sometimes by the dozen to the square mile, and kept the fruitful land in an artificial condition of perpetual exhaustion."

The general conditions were at hand for the operation of specific causes which brought about a German exodus into America. To understand the immediate reasons for early German immigration, it is necessary to study the history of the several groups which composed it. For our purpose the popular division into sects and church people is most satisfactory. We might add a third class and call it the nondescripts. In each of these groups there was a dominant motive, not, however, to the exclusion of the other motives mentioned above.

The sects who came to Pennsylvania were the Mennonites, the Tunkers, the Schwenkfelders, and a number of lesser bodies, such as the Solitaries at Ephrata, the Woman in the Wilderness on the banks of the Wissahickon, and the Labadists. Baron von Reck, who visited Philadelphia in 1734, wrote: "It is the abode of all religions and sects: Lutherans, Reformed, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Seventh-day Baptists, Separatists, Boehmists, Schwenkfeldians, Tuchfelders, Wohlwuencher, Jews, heathen, etc."

Their relation to the Church and the State in Europe was one of dissent. They were the oppressed people of Christ. By the provisions of the Treaty of Westphalia, 1648, Roman Catholics, Lutherans, and Reformed were given legal recognition. They were known as the Churches by law established. But the Anabaptistic and Quietistic sects were equally obnoxious to Catholics and Protestants. Princes and bishops, priests and preachers, united in destroying these supposed children of perdition. They were accordingly driven from one country to another, finding a temporary asylum here and there until they had to flee elsewhere from the wrath of a capricious prince. A company of Mennonites had settled in peace in Crefeld, Germany, where they were employed as linen-weavers. While not in immediate danger, these children of persecution always had the sword of Damocles suspended overhead. They therefore welcomed the offer of an asylum beyond the seas, where they might worship God without further molestation. On the ship Concord, October 6th, 1683, came thirteen Mennonite families who became the founders not only of Germantown, but of German colonization in Pennsylvania. Until 1710 the German immigrants came as individuals or in small groups; "partly for conscience' sake and partly for temporal interests," says Proud. Dieffenderfer estimates that there were about three or four thousand Germans in Pennsylvania in the year 1709, making an average of about one hundred immigrants a year since 1683. The Quakers, Schwenkfelders, and the lesser groups came after the Mennonites, migrating largely for religious reasons, and attracted to Pennsylvania by the tolerant policy of Penn.

The second period of German immigration began with the arrival of the Lutherans and the Reformed, who were accompanied by a third class, the nondescripts. They did not leave their homeland because of religious persecutions at the time of their departure, for among them, especially in the Palatine band in England, were representatives of the three Established Churches. The chief reason for their discontent at home was the economic distress resulting from continuous wars, from a desolating winter, and financial reverses. The first company of Palatines came by way of London, whither they went in large multitudes. They reached Pennsylvania after sore hardships and cruel treatment by way of the Schoharie Valley in New York. In an address to the English people in 1710, the Palatines plead their own case. They say: "We, the Poor, Distressed Palatines, whose utter ruin was occasioned by the merciless cruelty of a Bloody Enemy, the French, whose prevailing power, some years past, like a torrent, rushed into our country and overwhelmed us at once; and being not content with money and food necessary for their occasions, not only dispossessed us of all support, but inhumanly burnt our houses to the ground, whereby being deprived of all shelter, we were turned into open fields, there with our families to seek what shelter we could find, were obliged to make the earth our repository for rest and the clouds our canopy or covering." These were the conditions, not only of the Palatines who came to London, but doubtless of a large proportion of those who went directly to Pennsylvania. The winter of 1708-09 was so severe throughout Europe that hundreds died of cold and starvation. Birds froze in mid-air, beasts in their lairs and men fell dead on the way. Of their financial troubles an eye-witness wrote: "Nobody could pay any more because nobody was paid. The people of the country, in consequence of exactions, had to become insolvent. Commerce dried up and brought no returns. Good faith and confidence were abolished."

Thus gradually the ties of home, country, and society were loosened, and the newly established colony of Penn became a refuge for the distressed Germans, called, regardless of their provincial origin, Palatines.

The nondescripts fled prison rather than religious persecutions or social troubles. They were criminals and felons and the scum of the population, which the mother country dumped upon the new province. The jails were emptied of their inmates and sent to the colonies. So threatening did this element become that the Provincial Assembly, in 1722, imposed a tax upon every criminal landed in the province, and held the ship-owner responsible for the future good conduct of his passengers. A promiscuous element was gathered also by the Newlanders, or soul-sellers, who went over Germany enticing men, women, and children to the paradise of a new world.

The Moravians alone profess to have come to America for purely missionary purposes. One of their historians, Paul De Schweinitz, writes: "Their sole object was to provide the red men and the white men with gospel privileges. The Indians they endeavored to make Christians. The Lutherans they endeavored to gather together in Lutheran congregations and provide them with pastors of their own mode of thought. They tried to do the same for the Reformed; and the Germans scattered about, who would acknowledge neither of these faiths, they tried to gather into free congregations, served by an awakened pastor, without defining church connections." We do not question this high motive of what has proven itself one of the greatest missionary churches in the kingdom. Though coming comparatively late, about 1740-41, from Georgia to Bethlehem, they added a strong German element during the formative period of the Commonwealth.

While these various causes constrained the Palatine to leave his fatherland, there was a specific reason for his entrance into Pennsylvania. One of the first pamphlets published by the German Pastor Kocherthal, and circulated in two editions, 1706 and 1709, among his kinsmen, was entitled, "Full and Circumstantial Report Concerning the Renowned District of Carolina in English America." He advocated the Carolinian region as the most favorable district for the German. But his plea for the South was not recognized. Other American provinces held out tempting inducements on the continent for settlers within their bounds. But none of these made a favorable impression. The man who gave direction to the tiny rivulet, which later became a stream and almost a torrent of German pioneers into Pennsylvania, was William Penn. He, too, was a dissenter, a sectarian, and a martyr. His religious views were so nearly like those of the German sects that Barclay said: "So closely do these views (referring to the Mennonites) correspond with those of George Fox, that we are compelled to view him as an unconscious exponent of the doctrines, practices, and discipline of the ancient and stricter party of the Dutch Mennonites." He was half a Hollander through his mother, could speak the German language, and found the Dutch and German sects good ground for Quaker missions. After he received the Province of Pennsylvania he at once sent his agent, Benjamin Furly, into the Rhineland, who organized land companies, one at Crefeld, the other at Frankfort-on-the-Main. Pamphlets were circulated recounting the advantages of the new Province, and in a short time the sectaries were convinced that Penn's land was the haven of peace for them.

But he was not limited to the Quakers in England or to the sects in Holland and Germany in his benevolent designs. The spirit of the man and of the religious policy of his province is expressed in his own words when he says: "I went thither to lay the foundation of a free colony for all mankind that should go thither, more especially those of my own profession; not that I would lessen the civil liberties of others because of their persuasion, but screen and defend our own from any infringement on that account." The Great Law, as the modified code was called, not only established religious liberty, but "extended the suffrage, reduced the death penalty to a minimum, secured the people against oppression, simplified all legal processes, and made an attempt to establish a perfectly moral State." Sharpless says: "Peace, liberty, and fertile soil were the great arguments which brought in the English of the Quaker counties, the Germans of the central belt, and the Scotch-Irish of the frontiers in unprecedented numbers." With the way opened by the tolerant Penn, with the ground broken by the earliest German settlers, and with the land companies active in the heart of the Palatinate, it was a comparatively easy matter to turn the tide of future immigrants to the land of their prosperous kinsmen. It also explains the reason why, in three years after its settlement, Philadelphia gained more than New York in half a century.

Had Pastorius and his little band been stranded on a New England coast, what would have been their fate? Who can foretell the Mennonites' fate in the land of the Pilgrim and Puritan, where Quakers were called "fit instruments to propagate the kingdom of Satan," where the crime of bringing one of that sect into the colony was punishable with a fine of one hundred pounds, and where the victim himself was whipped with twenty stripes? Had he come before 1656, when these comparatively mild restrictions prevailed, he might have borne the unfavorable surroundings. But in 1683, when he came to Philadelphia, the New Englanders had so thoroughly convinced themselves that the world belonged to the saints and that they were the saints, that the fine for harboring a Quaker was increased to forty shillings an hour. The male Quaker was to lose one ear on his first conviction; on the second the other, and both male and female on the third conviction were to have their tongues bored through with red-hot iron. The distinguished Governor of Massachusetts gave vent to his feeling, when he was foiled in his effort to expel Roger Williams, in verse:

"Let men of God in courts and churches watch,
O'er such as do a toleration hatch,
Lest that ill egg bring forth a cockatrice,
To poison all with heresy and vice.
If men be left and otherwise combine,
My epitaph's I die no libertine."

Had they sought refuge in the Carolinas among the more genial cavaliers, the English gentry of the South, they might have been received as hewers of wood and drawers of water, but as freemen, never. The proprietors had almost absolute authority. Eight men were to be sovereigns, no more and no less. The interest of the proprietors, "a government most agreeable to monarchy," and the dread of a "numerous aristocracy" were the inspiring principles. Leetmen, or tenants renting a few acres on large estates, possessed no political franchises, and, what was still worse, the law prescribed "all children of leetmen shall be leetmen, and so to all generations." These contrasts, so strikingly presented by Diefenderfer in "The Palatine and Quaker as Commonwealth Builders," are at least a grain of comfort when the Pennsylvanian is inclined to grieve over the fact that he was not rocked in a New England cradle, or did not romp as a child in a Virginia mansion.

THE CHARACTER AND RESOURCES OF THE GERMAN PIONEERS

What did they bring? The next point for consideration is the character of the German pioneers, or what they brought into the Quaker province. Colonies do not represent actualities so much as possibilities. States and nations lie dormant in early settlers. They can be developed only by long historic struggles. We idealize the band of Pilgrims, but a prophet would hardly have foreseen, in the stern realities of their first winter and in the travail of the first generation, the future glory of New England. One of the members of the first colony on the James river described it as composed of poor gentlemen, tradesmen, libertines, and such like. Captain Smith said of them: "A hundred good workmen were better than a thousand such gallants." Probably with these men in view, Bacon declared it "a shameful and unblessed thing," to settle a colony with "the scum of the people." It is not our purpose to make a comparison of the relative worth of the early colonists, but to emphasize a principle illustrated by all. Therefore we may cite the statement of Dr. Rush concerning the Germans in Pennsylvania: "The principal part of them were farmers, but there were many mechanics, who brought with them a knowledge of those arts which are necessary and useful in all countries. These mechanics were chiefly weavers, tailors, tanners, shoemakers, combmakers, smiths of all kinds, butchers, papermakers, watchmakers, sugarbakers." Probably no better material ever crossed the Atlantic to break the virgin soil, to build hamlets, to begin commerce, and to practice religious and social virtues than these German pioneers.

Yet behind and in all of the colonies, Northern, Middle and Southern, there was more than the eye could see and statistics could enumerate. They were the representatives of distinct na-tionalties, cutting from a mother vine laid in new ground to bear in time their own rich clusters of grape. They came with little property, but they had great ideals. Earlier or later in our history the blood of their sires would have to tell. Bancroft says of the American fathers in general: "That the wildest theories of the human reason were reduced to practice by a community so humble that no statesman condescended to notice it, and a legislation without precedent was produced off-hand by the instincts of the people." Wordsworth, always keen to see greatness in littleness, the eternal in the temporal, enshrined this idea in verse, saying:

"A few strong instincts and a few plain rules
Among the herdsmen of the Alps, have wrought
More for mankind at this unhappy day,
Than all the pride of intellect and thought."

It may be well to define the period of the coming of the colonial Germans, their number and their place or habitation. Early German immigration was confined to the century between 1683 and 1783. After the Revolution began the Germans ceased to come, and in the last decade of the century the increase from abroad was reduced to a minimum. From 1783 to 1789 only 1,893 persons, about 315 per year, arrived. Out of 2,176, landed at the Philadelphia port in 1789, only 114 were Germans. Woodrow Wilson estimates that there were not more than 400,000 German immigrants in the increase of the nine million inhabitants in the United States from 1790 to 1830. According to these figures neither America nor Pennsylvania drew largely on the German nation for its citizenship in the first generation of the Republic.

Historians differ widely respecting the number of Germans in Pennsylvania at different stages of the eighteenth century. So far as figures are concerned we can do no better than to accept the careful estimates of Diefenderfer. He concludes that in 1727 there were about 15,000 Germans in the province; in 1750, 47,000, and in 1776, 90,000. If Dr. Franklin was not exact in his figures, he was probably correct in the proportion which he assigned to the Germans. In 1776 he claimed that there were 160,000 colonists, of whom one-third were Germans, one-third Quakers, and the rest of other nationalities.

In the study of a people's influence, so far as numbers are concerned, the relative proportion is of more value than exact figures. There is a remarkable unanimity in the conclusion of the authorities that the proportion of Germans was one-third of the whole number.

The habitations of the German pioneers were determined largely by their occupations. They were in the main farmers and mechanics. Differing in language from the Quakers, they built up communities of their kind in fertile valleys along the banks of the Perkiomen, Delaware, Lehigh, Schuylkill, Conestoga and Susquehanna. In course of time they became the virtual possessors of the now prosperous counties of Bucks, Montgomery, Lancaster, York, Lebanon, Berks, Lehigh, and Northampton. If one were to draw three semi-circles with Philadelphia as center, the Quakers resided in the space of the shortest radius, the Germans in the belt beyond, and the Scotch-Irish in the frontiers. In each of these districts, however, there were small groups of the other classes.

We may group them also according to their religious predilections. The Mennonites settled first in Germantown and spread over the contiguous territory, now Montgomery county. Later another group of this faith became the pioneers in Lancaster county, when a little colony of eight families built homes on the Pequea creek. The Tunkers, arriving in 1719, scattered among the Germans along the Schuylkill, in Falkner's Swamp, Oley and Lancaster. Some of them came under the influence of Conrad Beissel, who was the leader of the cloister at Ephrata. The Schwenkfelders, in 1735, settled along the Perkiomen in Montgomery county, where their descendants still reside. The Lutherans and Reformed occupied the counties named above, and became the most aggressive of the German element. The Moravians, coming by way of Georgia, located at Nazareth, Bethlehem, Emaus and Lititz. The Solitaries of Ephrata and the Woman in the Wilderness in the region of the Wissahickon were only temporary religious groups which passed away with the colonial period.

When we come to take an estimate of the contributions of the Germans to the Commonwealth, we shall have to consider their means and their men; these together were the capital which they brought abroad. A citizen of a state becomes valuable to it by what he adds to the wealth of the community, for his obedience to law, for his fidelity to family, for his educational zeal and his religious practices. In the light of these contributions a people's worth to a nation must be determined.

A general survey of a century's immigration shows a diversified condition among the immigrants both in regard to material resources and intellectual and moral conditions. Considering the causes for their departure from the homeland, we may safely presume that they came without wealth and without a high degree of social culture. As a rule they were poor peasants or humble burghers. Yet there were degrees of poverty among them. The colonists who came from 1683 to 1717 were well-to-do. They had the means to pay their passage down the Rhine and across the Atlantic. They had money left to buy lands and to pay for them in part or altogether. Loehner says: "Prior to 1727 most of the Germans commigrated and were persons of means." Many of the Palatines, however, were so poor that they consumed their scant means in the journey across the ocean. Numbers of them, who had converted their property into money, were robbed on ship board by the ship owners, captains, and Newlanders. The only resort of such unfortunates upon their arrival at Philadelphia was to sell themselves and their children into servitude to pay their passage money. Another class, who had not enough money to leave their homes and to purchase a passage on the vessels, sold themselves before they embarked as redemptioners for a certain number of years to the ship owners, who conducted a traffic of souls between the Old World and the New. The redemptioners came in large numbers from 1728 to 1751. They naturally were poor and for years were at the mercy of their masters. "Yet," says Gordon, "from this class have sprung some of the most reputable and wealthy inhabitants of the province."

We need not sing the praises of the German farmer and mechanic. Their pre-eminence was recognized in colonial times and their fame is world-wide now. In 1774 Governor Thomas wrote to England of the Germans: "They have by their industry been the principal instruments of raising the State to its present flourishing condition, beyond any of his Majesty's colonies in North America." The exports from the colony, in 1751, exceeded one million dollars, due largely to the thrift of the Germans. Wherever they located in the rural districts they rapidly supplanted the farmers of other nationalities, notably the Scotch-Irish. Proud thus contrasts these two races: "The Germans seem more adapted to agriculture and improvement of a wilderness, and the Irish for trade. The Germans soon get estates in the country, where industry and economy are the chief requisites to procure them." If "agriculture may be regarded as the breasts from which the State derives its supports and nourishment," the German farmer will always hold a high place in the development and support of our Commonwealth.

When men cultivate the soil they cultivate also the domestic virtues. These of course belong to all nations, yet the German from time immemorial has attracted special attention of annalist and eulogist in regard to his home life. Tacitus, in his De Moribus Germanorum, says: "The matrimonial bond is strict and severe among them; nor is there anything in their manners more commendable than this." The Roman historian was naturally impressed by the fact, which he records, that "every mother suckles her own children and does not deliver them into the hands of nurses." He adds, further on, that "hospitality and convivial pleasures are nowhere so liberally enjoyed." The traveler and casual observer in Germany will at once be impressed with its domestic simplicity and yet real culture. The untranslatable word Gemuthlichkeit conveys the spirit of their social life. The American traveler, who can in any measure understand the German language, will agree with Goldsmith, who said: "The most liberal hospitality and disinterestedness mark the character of the Germans in Europe." These virtues were not only prominent in colonial pioneers but may be traced in our generation. Pennsylvania-German hospitality has its crudities and informalities which may grate upon the urbane guest, but it is the outflow of a generous and deeply social nature. If I should seek for a single passage which describes the subtle and indefinable contributions of the German to the growth of our State and at the same time throws light on the life in his home, it is the one in which Dr. Rush grows most eloquent: "The favorable influence of agriculture, as conducted by the Germans in extending human happiness, is manifested by the joy they express upon the birth of a child. No dread of poverty, nor distrust of Providence from an increasing family depresses the spirits of these industrious and frugal people. . . . Happy state of human society! What blessings can civilization confer that can atone for the extinction of the ancient and patriarchal pleasure of raising up a numerous and healthy family of children, to labor for their parents, for themselves, and for their country, and finally to partake of the knowledge and happiness which are annexed to existence! The joy of parents upon the birth of a child is the grateful echo of creating goodness. May the mountains of Pennsylvania be forever vocal with songs of joy upon these occasions! They will be the infallible signs of innocence, industry, wealth, and happiness in the State."

One of the most serious charges brought against the German pioneers was their ignorance and want of interest in education. A citation of views expressed by our historians will show a wide difference of opinions. Mrs. Lamb writes: "These earlier German settlers were mostly hewers of wood and drawers of water, differing materially from the class of Germans who have since come among us, and bearing about the same relation to the English, Dutch, and French settlers of their time as the Chinese of to-day bear to the American population on the Pacific coast." Parkman calls them "dull and ignorant boors, which character their descendants for the most part retain."

Historians equally as great have taken directly opposite positions. Macaulay calls the same people "honest, laborious men, who have once been thriving burghers of Manheim and Heidelberg, or who had cultivated the vine on the banks of the Neckar and the Rhine. Their ingenuity and their diligence could not fail to enrich any land which should afford them asylum." These diverse conclusions are due to several reasons. It was not prejudice in the historians, but want of knowledge of the conditions which led them to make such unwarranted statements. It is only latterly that men of Pennsylvania have written up their own history and that the various elements in the Commonwealth have received their due.

It may be freely admitted that the culture and education of the German colonists were not of a high order; but of what colonists may this not be said? The missionaries who came from Germany bore testimony to the ignorance and boorishness of many of the people. Yet, on the other hand, there are undeniable facts which show that there was a proportion of German citizens of more than average culture and at times of great learning.

The members of the sects were an eccentric people, but far from ignorant. The churchmen would regard them as heretics and schismatics; the English citizens, as ignorant fanatics. Pastorius was a learned man. Although he once lived in a dug-out, he enjoyed the society of Thomas Lloyd, the president of the Provincial Council, and died, having been a school teacher, a land agent and a member of the Provincial Assembly. William Rittenhouse was the builder of the first paper mill and the progenitor of David Rittenhouse, the self-taught genius, surveyor, philosopher, astronomer and patriot. Even Kelpius had been a favorite student of Dr. Fabricius at the University of Altdorf. From his little cave on the banks of the Wissahickon he kept up an extensive correspondence with kindred spirits in Europe and America. He received a delegation from the Seventh-day Baptists of New England, who consulted him on religious questions. Koester, also of this community, composed the first Latin work written in Pennsylvania. Under Conrad Beissel a printing press was established at Ephrata in 1745, and in the fifty years which followed one hundred and fifty publications were printed and mostly written in that forest cloister. The largest book printed in America, up to that time, with 1,512 pages, entitled the Martyrer Spiegel, came from Ephrata. Christopher Dock was one of the first school teachers, whose little treatise on pedagogy has been honored by a translation by Governor Pennypacker. From Saur's press came the first German newspaper in America, called the Geschichts Schreiber. It had 4,000 subscribers scattered throughout Pennsylvania, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas. In 1743, he published a German Bible, the first Bible printed in any European language in North America. Father and son issued 340 different publications probably consisting of half a million copies.

Whatever else we may say of the quaint and quiet secretaries that found an asylum in America, we cannot charge them with illiteracy. But they were not in sympathy with the so-called higher education nor with the English charity schools.

The German educational spirit was mainly found in the Lutherans, Reformed, and Moravians, though among the members of these Churches there were many who had grown indifferent to culture in their separation from the fatherland and in their struggle with the wilderness and adverse elements of a new world. There may have been enough ignorance and boorishness to give ground for Franklin's now famous letter in 1753, in which he said: "Those who came hither are generally the most stupid of their nation. . . . Their clergy have little influence on the people, who seem to take pleasure in abusing and discharging the minister on every trivial occasion." Yet, in the same letter, almost in the very next sentence, the learned philosopher contradicts himself and proves that his charge of ignorance must have been too sweeping. "They import many books from Germany," he continues, "and of the six printing houses in the province, two are entirely German, two half German, half English, and but two are entirely English." Both Schlatter and Muhlenberg were distressed at the illiteracy of their people. The former felt constrained to report the untoward conditions in Holland and Germany and became the indirect cause for the English charity schools. The latter wrote in his diary in 1743: "It seems to me as if the time had come for God to visit us here in Pennsylvania with special favor. Indeed it is high time. If affairs had continued a few years longer as they have been, our poor Lutheran people would have wandered off completely into heathenism. . . . So sad, so degraded is the condition of the poor Lutheran people, that you could hardly bewail it enough with tears."

In spite of these signs of intellectual decay the traditions and ideals of the church people were favorable to education. After the erection of a cabin in the wilderness they built a church and a school-house. They brought with them their Bibles, catechisms, hymn-books, and devotional literature. Many of the immigrants were accompanied by preachers and teachers who began their ministry upon their arrival. Probably at no time since was the education of the ministers of the German Churches in Pennsylvania of a higher grade than during the colonial period. Muhlenberg, Schlatter, and Zinzendorf were university men and were ardent supporters of higher education. In the Reformed Coetus, from 1747 to 1793, there were sixty-four ministers; of these, twenty-nine were educated in Pennsylvania, and thirty-five in the universities of Germany and Switzerland. Dr. Weiser says that between 1745 and 1770, in the space of twenty-five years, no less than fifty graduates of German universities labored in the Lutheran and Reformed Churches. The students of Harvard University were astonished at their fluency in foreign tongues. Some of them were called to chairs of ancient languages. A Latin letter from the Reformed clergy to Governor Morris, in 1754, not only is proof of their ability to use the language of scholarship, but of their culture and dignity in addressing an officer of the State.

The founding of Franklin College in Lancaster, 1787, bears testimony to the educational enthusiasm of Drs. Weyberg and Hendel of the Reformed Church, Drs. Helmuth and Muhlenberg of the Lutheran Church. The provision that a certain number of trustees were to be chosen "from any other society of Christians" besides that of the Lutheran and Reformed, is proof that the institution was to serve the German element in general. The colleges and seminaries which have since been built by the German Churches in the Eastern and Western parts of the State are an additional evidence of the regard which the truly representative Germans held higher learning. The Moravians became pioneers of education for young women in this country. Nazareth Hall, the Moravian Seminary for ladies, and Linden Hall count among their alumni members of the most prominent families of New England and the South.

In every department of knowledge German scholars in our colony became noted. Dr. Rush wrote about the faculty of Franklin College in 1787: "A cluster of more learned or better-qualified masters I believe have not met in any university." Muhlenberg was a botanist of national reputation. Melsheimer was called the father of American entomology. Reichenbach was a distinguished author. Casper Wistar was a celebrated physician, adjunct professor in surgery and author of a system of anatomy in two volumes. The mention of these names will suggest many other men of prominence to whom space will not permit us to allude. Enough has been said, however, to illustrate the attitude of the German pioneer toward education, and to show the intellectual attainments of their representative men. Then already, not to speak of the century which followed, they contributed a very commendable portion to the literary, scientific, theological, and pedagogical life of the future Commonwealth.

In civil and political affairs the Germans could not at first play an aggressive part. They suffered the disadvantage of being foreigners who were acquainted with neither the customs nor the language of the proprietors and inhabitants of the province. Their rapidly increasing numbers aroused the jealousy and enmity of the English settlers. In a message to the General Assembly Governor Thomas, in 1741, writes: "I am not insensible that some look with jealous eyes upon the yearly concourse of Germans to this province." In the letter (1753) already referred to, Franklin says: "They behave, however, submissively enough at present to the civil government, which I wish they may continue to do, for I remember when they modestly declined intermeddling with our elections; but now they come in droves and carry all before them, except in one or two counties. . . . In short, unless the stream of importation could be turned from this to other colonies, as you very judiciously propose, they will soon out-number us, that all the advantage we will have, will, in my opinion, be not able to preserve our language and even our government will become precarious." The anti-foreign feeling manifested itself very early, not so much in the cry "America for Americans," as in the cry "America for Englishmen." It was due to economic and political fears; German labor was crowding English labor, and German votes were deciding elections. But, in spite of the act of Assembly imposing a tax of forty shillings on every alien coming into the province, in spite of the law's delays in granting the privileges of citizenship, the German pioneer continued to come and build his home in the forests of Penn.

Having been naturalized they proved themselves worthy of their calling. Dr. Rush says: "As members of the civil government the Germans are peaceable and exact in the payment of their taxes. Since they have participated in the power of the State many of them have become sensible and enlightened in the science of legislation. Pennsylvania has had the Speaker's chair of her Assembly and the Vice-President's office filled with dignity by gentlemen of German families. The same gentlemen have since been advanced to seats in the House of Representatives under the Constitution of the United States. In the great controversy about national government a large majority of the Germans in Pennsylvania decided in favor of its adoption, notwithstanding the most popular arts were used to prejudice them against it." In the pre-Revolutionary period, however, the Germans were more influential by their loyal performance of the duties of citizenship than by their direct part in the Provincial Assemblies. The governing bodies were largely composed of English-speaking members. While the sectarian influence was dominant among the Germans, they naturally affiliated with the Quakers in politics as well as in religion. But the church people found men of their own type in the Scotch-Irish, both of whom were Calvinists by profession. These two elements united in politics and controlled the colony during the Revolution and in the organization of a State government. In the Constitutional Convention of 1789-90 the German element was in the majority. They voted unanimously to make the Legislature a Senate and a House, and to have the Governor elected by the people and not by the Assembly and Supreme Council, as under the Constitution of 1776. In the line of distinguished Governors from Snyder to Pennypacker, we count nine of German blood. For more than forty years the executive authority of the Keystone State was vested in sons of German ancestors.

In times of war the German was no less patriotic than in times of peace. Bancroft pays them a high tribute when he says: "The Germans, who composed a large part of the inhabitants of the province of Pennsylvania, were all on the side of liberty." Many of them, for conscience' sake, were non-combatants, but none the less loyal. Historian and poet have given due credit to the simple petition against slavery, signed by the Op Den Graeffs, Hendricks, and Pastorius of Germantown. Their protest was only a voice in the wilderness, but its echo never died away. Governor Pennypacker, in whose veins flows the blood of those early Abolitionists, says: "A little rill there started which further on became an immense torrent, and whenever hereafter men traced the causes which led to Shiloh, Gettysburg and Appomattox, they begin with the tender consciences of the linen weavers and husbandmen of Germantown."

While the sects, including the Moravians, did not as a rule carry arms on the battlefield, they rendered invaluable service in furnishing supplies for soldiers, ministering to the sick in hospitals, and paying enormous revenues to the Continental Army. The Moravian missionaries kept powerful Indian tribes neutral, notably the Delawares. The silken banner of Count Pulaski's regiment was made by the Moravian Sisters of Nazareth and Bethlehem.

The more aggressive Lutherans and Reformed won for themselves an honorable place in the Revolution. German names are found on all the committees and in the conventions which preceded or organized for the conflict. They became members of the militia, raised rifle corps, and subscribed money. Of the nine Pennsylvania companies four had German captains. Captain Hendricks led the Cumberland county company in the siege of Quebec. He fell mortally wounded in an assault, and his body lies buried by the side of General Montgomery. The pulpit and press of the Germans joined in inculcating the spirit of patriotism. Pastor Gobrecht was one of many who preached farewell sermons to the soldiers leaving home for the field of battle. Helfenstein incurred the enmity of the Hessians when he announced his text in their presence: "Ye have sold yourselves for naught; and ye shall be redeemed without money." Weyberg was cast into prison, and Schlatter's house was plundered. The sons of the patriarch Muhlenberg had to flee from their congregations—Fredrick from New York, Ernst from Philadelphia. Nor should we fail to mention the dramatic incident in the life of their brother, Peter Muhlenberg, then in Virginia. He ended his sermon by saying: "In the language of holy writ there is a time for all things—a time to pray and a time to preach—but those times have passed away; there is a time to fight, and the time to fight is here." He threw off his gown, buckled on his sword, ordered the drums to beat at the church door, and marched at the head of 300 Germans, who became a part of his regiment in the army.

There were doubtless traitors and Tories among the Germans, as there were in all the colonies, but the race which gave a Herkimer and a Kichlein, a Rittenhouse and a Ludwig, a Hillegass and a Hambright, and a host of greater and lesser lights to the cause of American independence, cannot be charged with disloyalty to the land of its adoption. Nor does their record end with the Revolution. The Germans of Pennsylvania were represented in the War of 1812. Two regiments fought in the Mexican War; and at least eighty-five monuments stand on the field of Gettysburg to commemorate their heroes and martyrs who died for the Union their fathers helped to found.

The church life of the German colonists was different in form and spirit from that of the English settlers. Though the sects were naturally allied to the Quakers, they differed so much in language and in the manner of living that they could not coalesce. The Anabaptistic and Quietistic spirit in the German mind took a different form from what it assumed in the English mind. By conviction separatistic and non-resistant, neither the English Quaker nor the German sects wielded a far-reaching influence in the religious life of the Commonwealth. For want of the aggressive qualities, which are so essential to progress in a young nation, they became comparatively small bodies in Eastern Pennsylvania.

The German Lutherans and Reformed were trained in Europe to take part in the affairs of State. With them the service of God and the service of country were two aspects of religion. The Reformed, being Calvinists, were in religious sympathy with the Scotch-Irish. But here again the Calvinism of Germany was different in spirit from that of Scotland. Probably ties of blood and nationality, in spite of difference of creed, brought the Lutherans and Reformed into closer fellowship than the Reformed and Presbyterians. The union churches of Eastern Pennsylvania bear witness to this fact. In the early part of the nineteenth century the process of Americanizing the Churches began. It was nothing more or less than puritanizing or methodizing them. Many of the Germans fell in with the new tendency. But on account of the firm stand taken by the prominent men in two of the German Churches, a reaction followed, and they preserved their original character sufficiently to become the medium for bringing German philosophy and theology into American Christianity. In this fact again appears the purpose of Providence in sending a comparatively small group of Germans into the colonies in order that they might be the means of introducing the rich heritage of the universities of the Fatherland into the United States. If American Christianity and institutions had been previously puritanized and methodized, they were now Germanized. In the third and fourth decades of the last century the aggressive and often offensive young blood of Germany found refuge on our shores. Dr. Thompson, the Presbyterian historian says: "A Charles Follen, flying from the Holy Alliance and finding a tutor's place at Harvard, not only brought us the gymnastic of the German Burschenschaft, but infused a wider interest in Germany and its thought. So men like Rauch, Schaff and Kapp brought us an atmosphere of German philosophy." The Congregationalist historian, Dr. Leonard Bacon, writes of Marshall College at Mercersburg: "At this institution was effected a fruitful union of Americans and German theology; the result was to commend to the general attention aspects of truth philosophical, theological, and historical, not previously current among American Protestants." In speaking of the lack of appreciation of Kant's philosophy in America in the eighteenth, and the early part of the nineteenth century Dr. I. Woodbridge Riley, in his American Philosophy, says: "Moreover it illustrates the philistine attitude of one born and bred in the British Schools towards a continental system, and this serves to explain the difficulties which the critical philosophy had to contend with in the United States until its first sympathetic interpretation among certain Pennsylvanians of German origin. It is in the light of these now recognized broader influences that we can understand the value of the comparatively obscure German Churches in the Pennsylvania colony.

We have hastily and inadequately sketched the character and contribution of the German pioneer to the Commonwealth. Among the three leading elements, the English, Scotch-Irish and the German, the last had a specific mission to accomplish. Their lot fell in rural districts; their heritage was of the Teutonic type. Counting the qualities which go toward the making of a strong community, a powerful Commonwealth, and a permanent citizenship, one will not find them combined in fairer proportions in any other element than in the Germans. They did their part in the colony well. Their sons have grown in influence from the opening of the nineteenth century to the present hour.

THEIR ACHIEVEMENTS.

Their mission, according to the dispensation of history, was not that of the Puritan or of the Cavalier. Pennsylvania could not become the mother of Presidents nor the founder of an Athens in America. The excellency of the men in Virginia and Massachusetts, the glory of their achievements and their institutions, no one admires more than the intelligent German of Pennsylvania. He has a glory of his own. He, too, is a scion of a noble race. He is the disseminator of the principles of a Luther and a Melancthon, of a Zwingli and a Calvin. Martyr blood flows in his veins. His greatness in America is in the performance of the work which Providence, working mysteriously in ages past, has assigned him. Though he came comparatively late into the New World, his numbers small and his influence limited by a strange language and a foreign government, he has reared for himself an indestructible monument in the Keystone of the States, which he has helped to hew into shape.

In the history of the Germans in Pennsylvania we find three distinct periods. The first was that of the German in Pennsylvania; the second, that of the Pennsylvania-German; the third, that of the German-American. In the last period he attained the summit of his influence. In the colonial German there was an originality and freshness which gave him color and character. He spoke the language of his fatherland, read its literature, sang its songs, and worshiped in its spirit. He was rough and impetuous at times, but always real. He brought with him a certain dignity and culture to the farm, the pulpit, and the offices of the State, which bespoke an older race. The glory of the Rhine beamed beneath his rugged brows.

The generations which followed brought forth men of another type. After the Revolution the influx of fresh blood from Germany ceased. Only 400,000 out of a 10,000,000 increase from 1790 to 1830, came to the United States from Germany. They were cut off from the fellowship of the fatherland. They no longer had preachers or teachers who spoke the mother tongue. They ceased to read German books. Nor did they enter the larger life of America. They were hemmed in by a strange language, social customs, and racial prejudices. By a gradual transformation the German in Pennsylvania became the Pennsylvania-German. In the rural districts the latter was almost as much estranged from the former as from the Irish or the English. They degenerated into a clan. That was the dark age of the Pennsylvania-German. He opposed education, became stagnant in religion, and kept aloof from social movements. We cannot glory in his weakness, nor do we believe that his tribe should be perpetuated.

But the Pennsylvania-German recovered himself and proved himself worthy of his noble ancestry when he passed into the American stage of his history. He broke the bonds of provincialism. He built schools, educated his sons and daughters, enlarged the scope of his church life, and entered American society. He became conversant with its literature and shared in the industrial affairs of the country. What he has become for our generation a brief citation of facts will reveal.

There are over three million German-born citizens in the United States. Ten millions are said to have German ancestry. In every department of American life the hour of the Germans seems to have come. Of this nationality no group is wielding a greater influence in our country than the Pennsylvania-German.

The merchant prince of the world is John Wanamaker. He alone could revive the establishment of A. T. Stewart, in New York, and conduct it with financial success. One of the most significant banquets at the Waldorf-Astoria in recent years was given in honor of the founder of the Bethlehem Iron Works, John Fritz. The man who is acknowledged to be the greatest living expert in the manufacture of steel is Charles M. Schwab. When Speyer & Co., of New York, were in search of a man to whom they could entrust their interest of millions in the Consolidated Lake Superior Company, they found him in the village of Riegelsville, Pa., in B. F. Fackenthal, the president of the Thomas Iron Company. One of the men who is shaping the economic movements of this generation in the United States is a Pennsylvania-German. He is president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company and a natural leader among men. These men of national distinction in the industrial world are examples of the spirit which has given wide reputation to the practical ability, the sound judgment, and the keen foresight of the Pennsylvania-German business man.

In the professions they have won distinction. In law, whether on the bench or at the bar, the array of talent is so brilliant that it is hard to specify individuals. Many of the famous judges of the Supreme Court of the State and of the county courts have been sons of German parents. One of the foremost lawyers and orators of the State, whose eloquence has swayed national conventions and determined the issues of national elections, is William U. Hensel, a Pennsylvania-German and a citizen of Lancaster, Pa. When the State of Colorado sent a counsel to defend its interest before the Supreme Court of the United States, is selected Henry Dubbs, a young Pennsylvania-German lawyer and an alumnus of Franklin and Marshall College.

In medicine the German is no less prominent. The names of Wistar and Gross, Leidy and Pepper will be forever associated with the history of that science in this country.

In education he has made for himself an enviable reputation. Massachusetts sent us a Higbee, whose educational work has won for him a permanent place in our history. But I heard it said by a Boston lecturer at an institute of teachers that they never had an educational revival in Massachusetts like that which followed the lectures of the present Superintendent of Public Instruction in Pennsylvania. Among the men who took a foremost part in the National Teachers' Convention in Boston and sat on the same platform with President Eliot, was Thomas N. Ballick, who spent his boyhood on a Carbon county farm forty years ago.

A mere allusion to the distinguished educators of the Reformed, Lutheran, and Moravian institutions will suffice. Among the dead stand out prominently a Krauth and a Schmucker, a Rauch and a Harbaugh, a Schaff and an Apple. Among the living there are men whose theological, scientific, and philosophical works have given them not only a national, but even an international, reputation.

The German giant is awakening and shaking his locks. The Pennsylvania-German is rapidly passing into the broader life of America. His mission will be accomplished when he and his German kinsmen unite with the English stock. Then each will contribute his own unique life—social, intellectual and religious—toward the making, not of a New England nor of a New Germany, but of a new nation, whose members find their chief pride in being American citizens.

February 15, 1913, Lancaster, Penna.

CHAPTER V.

FIRST SETTLEMENT AS PART OF BUCKS COUNTY

Pennsylvania, named by King Charles II in honor of William Penn's father, Sir William Penn, was granted to Penn by the King in consideration of the claims against the crown for his father's services, amounting to £16,000. The charter was dated March 4, 1681, and the extent of the province was three degrees of latitude in breadth, by five degrees of longitude in length, the eastern boundary being the Delaware river (named for Lord Delaware and called by the Dutch "South River or Sud Revier") and the northern boundary the line of the forty-second degree of northern latitude. William Penn left England in the ship Welcome on the 30th of August, 1682, accompanied by about one hundred colonists and after a long voyage arrived in December at Newcastle. Soon after his arrival he divided his province into three counties, Philadelphia, Bucks, and Chester.

Before his arrival his deputy governor, Markham, had purchased from the Indians a considerable tract of country and in 1683 and 1684 he himself purchased other tracts. In 1686 the Indians granted to him an extent of land commencing on a line of the former purchases and from thence northwestwardly, as far as a man could ride on horseback in two days.

William Penn was born in London, Oct. 14, 1644, and died at Ruscombe, in Berkshire, July 30, 1718. His sons by his second wife, John, Thomas, and Richard Penn became the owners of the province of Pennsylvania. John Penn, who was born Jan. 29, 1700, died without issue Oct. 29, 1746, bequeathing his share of the province to his brother Thomas. Thomas Penn born in 1702, married in 1751, Lady Juliana Fermor, daughter of the Earl of Pomfret, and died March 21, 1775. His children who reached maturity were: Juliana, wife of William Baker, Esq.; John Penn, born Feb. 23, 1760, died 1834; Sophia, who married in 1796, Dr. William Stuart, Archbishop of Armagh, and Granville Penn, Esq., born 1761, died 1844, heir to his brother John, of Stoke Park. Granville Penn married Isabella, daughter of General Gordon Forbes, and was the father of Granville John Penn, born 1802, died March 29, 1867, who visited Pennsylvania in 1851.

Richard Penn, youngest son of William, died in 1771. He married Hannah Lardner and had four children: Hannah, who married James Clayton, Esq.; William; John, born in 1728, and died Feb. 19, 1795, who married, May 31, 1766, Ann Allen, daughter of Chief Justice William Allen, but had no children, and Richard, born in 1734, and died May 27, 1811. He married in 1772, Mary Masters, of Philadelphia, and had children: William, born June 23, 1776, married Aug. 7, 1809, Juliet Catharine Balahega; Richard, who died without issue: Hannah, and Mary.

The greater part of Lehigh county, lying between the Lehigh mountains and the Blue mountains, was deeded to John, Thomas, and Richard Penn, sons of William Penn, by twenty-three Indian chiefs on Oct. 11, 1736. The consideration was 500 pounds of powder, 600 pounds of lead, 45 guns, 60 Strowd water match coats, 100 blankets, 100 duffle match coats, 200 yards of half-thick, 100 shirts, 40 hats, 40 pairs of shoes and buckles, 40 pairs of stockings, 100 hatchets, 500 knives, 100 hoes, 60 kettles, 100 tobacco tongs, 100 scissors, 500 awl blades, 120 combs, 2,000 needles, 1,000 flints, 24 looking glasses, two pounds of vermilion, 100 tin pots, 25 gallons of rum, 200 pounds of tobacco, 1,000 pipes and 24 dozen of gartering. The chiefs signing this deed, all of whom made their marks, were representatives of the Onondago, Seneca, Oneida, Tuscarora, and Cayuga tribes of the five nations, by whom the Delawares were held in vassalage or subjection. The most famous of these chiefs was Shekallamy, of the Oneida tribe.

On the 25th of October, following, twenty-one chiefs executed a release in behalf of the Six Nations, including the Mohawks, by which they declared that the true intent of the deed, signed on Oct. 11th, was to release all claim to the lands lying within the limits of Pennsylvania, beginning eastward on the river Delaware, as far northward as the ridge of hills or mountains called the Tyannuntasacta, or Endless Hills, and by the Delaware Indians, the Kekkachtanin Hills (Kittatinny Hills or Blue Mountains).

Another deed covering part of Lehigh county was executed by Sassoonan, King of the Delawares and others, on Sept. 7, 1732, at Stenton, for all the lands on the river Schuylkill, or branches thereof, or on any streams which flowed into or towards the Schuylkill, between the Lechay Hills and the Kittatinny Hills, which cross the Schuylkill about thirty miles above the Lechay Hills, and all lands lying within the said bounds, and between the branches of the Delaware river on the eastern side of the land and the branches of the river Susquehannah on the western side of the land.

That part of Lehigh county south of the Lehigh mountains was deeded in 1718. The deed reads as follows:

"We, Sassoonan, King of the Delaware Indians, & Pokehais, Metaschichay, Aiyamakan, Pepawmamen, Gheltypeneemam & Opekasset, Chiefs of the said Indians, do acknowledge, that we have seen & heard divers Deeds of Sale read unto us, under the hands & seals of the former Kings, & Chiefs of the Delaware Indians, our Ancestors & Predecessors, who were owners of Lands between the Delaware & Sasquehannah Rivers, by which Deeds they have granted & Conveyed unto William Penn, Proprietor and Governor in chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, & to his Heirs & Assigns, all & singular their Lands, Islands, Woods, & Waters, situate between the said two Rivers of Delaware and Sasquehannah, & had received full satisfaction for the same. And We do further acknowledge that we are fully content & satisfied with the said Grant. And Whereas, the Commissioners or Agents of the said William Penn have been pleased, upon our Visit to this Government to bestow on us, as a free Gift, in the name of the said William Penn, these following goods, viz.: Two Guns, six Stroved water Coats, six Blankets, six Duffell match-coats & four Kettles. We therefore, in Gratitude for the said Presents, as well in Consideration of the several Grants made by our Ancestors & Predecessors, as of the said several Goods herein before mentioned, the Receipt whereof we do hereby acknowledge, Do by these presents for us, Our Heirs & Successors, Grant, Remise, Release, & forever Quitt claim unto the said William Penn, his Heirs and Assigns, all the said Lands situate between the said two Rivers of Delaware & Sasquehannah, from Duck Creek to the mountains on this side Lechay, and all our Estate, Right, Title, Interest, Property, Claim & Demand whatsoever in & to the same, or any part thereof, so that neither We, nor any of us, nor any Person or Persons in the Behalf of any of us, shall or may hereafter lay any claim to any of the said Lands, or in any wise molest the said William Penn, his Heirs or Assigns, or any Person claiming by, from or under them, them or any of them, in the peaceable and quiet Enjoyment of the same. In Witness whereof We have hereunto sett our Hands &

Seals at Philadelphia, the Seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighteen.

Sassoonan x his mark (S)

Pokehais x his mark. (S)

Metashichay x his mark. (S)

Aiyamackan x his mark. (S)

Gheltypeneeman x his mark (S)

Opekasset x his mark (S)

Pepawmamen x his mark (S)

Sealed and Delivered (by all but Pokehais & Pepawmamen who were absent) in the presence of W. Keith.

Jonathan Dickinson,

Samuel Preston.

Robert Assheton,

Anthony Palmer.

Indian Sam, son of Essepenaïke,

Indian Peter, Pokehais's Nephew or Aweaykoman.

Kachguesconk or Toby,

Tussoigheenan,

Neeshallapy or Andrew,

Sealed and delivered by Pokehais & Pepawmamen, in the presence of

James Logan,

Neeshallapy or Andrew,

Nedawayay or Oliver,

Robert Assheton,

Clement Plumsted,

David Evans.

The minutes of the Provincial Council, on the day the deed was signed, read as follows:

"The deed being fully explained to the Indians in their own Language, Sassoonan & Opekasset, two of those who had executed it being present, viewed their Marks and acknowledged that it was true, and that they had been paid for all the lands therein mentioned; but Sassoonan said the Lands beyond these Bounds had never been paid for, that these reached no further than a few miles beyond Oley, but that their Lands on Tulpyhocken were seated by the Christians.

"Mr. Logan answered, that he understood at the Time that Deed was drawn, and ever since that Lechay Hills or Mountains stretched away from a little below Lechay or the Forks of Delaware to those Hills on Sasquehannah that lie about ten miles above Pextan. Mr. Farmer said those Hills passed from Lechay a few Miles above Oley, and reached no further, and that Tulpyhocken lay beyond them."

Sassoonan, or Allumapees, became chief sachem of the Delawares of the Turtle tribe, about 1715. He visited the Governor at Philadelphia twice during the year 1728, and at other times in the years 1734, 1736, 1738, 1740 and 1742. Bishop Spangenberg wrote, on June 4, 1745: "We also visited Allumapees, the hereditary King of the Indians. He is very old, almost blind, and very poor; but withal has still power over and is beloved by his people; and he is a friend of the English."

Conrad Weiser wrote, on Oct. 15, 1747, that Allumapees had died. Nettawatwees afterwards succeeded to the chieftainship of the Turtle tribe. Most of the Indians of the Turtle and Turkey tribes had crossed the Blue Hills, and settled along the north branch of the Susquehanna before William Penn's death. Their chief town, called Shamokin, was where is now Sunbury. From Shamokin, the greater part of the Delawares, about 1724, settled on the Allegheny river, building a town they named Kittanning. The residue of the Delawares remained in the vicinity of Shamokin under their old chief, Sassoonan, or Allumapees.

The Delawares who were ordered to leave their lands between the Forks of the Lehigh and Delaware by the Six Nations in 1742, settled with their chief, Nutimus, on the site of Wilkes-Barre, and above the mouth of Nescopeck creek. "Old King Nutimus' Town" is marked on Scull's 1757 map of Pennsylvania.

Shamokin, a Delaware town before 1728, was in 1743 the seat of Shekallamy, an Oneida chief, who for twenty-one years after 1728, appears on the official records of Pennsylvania as the overlord, deputy, or vice-regent in Pennsylvania of the Iroquois Confederacy. After Shekallamy's death in 1749, some of the Shamokin Delawares also settled at Tioga (now Athens, Bradford county), where, in 1756, they and the Delawares of the Minsi tribe, who had formerly been under the chiefs Mahawkyhickon and Kindassowa, and were then under Eghohowen, chose as their "king" Teedyuscung. The greater part of Allumapees' tribe removed to the Ohio country, between the years 1724 and 1749.

After his death, in 1747, three brothers, of the Turkey Tribe, probably his nephews, sons of his sister, succeeded him as sachems of the Ohio Delawares. Their names were Shingas, Tamaque or King Beaver, and Pisquetomen, of whom Shingas was made Chief Sachem in 1752, and held that position until 1763. A memorandum made by Joseph Yeates at Fort Pitt in 1776, states that "there are three tribes among the Delawares, the Wolf, the Turkey, and the Turtle. Beaver (or Tamaque) was chief of the Turkey tribe, and was succeeded by Captain Johnny, or Straight Arm, White Eyes ruling it. Custaloga was chief of the Wolf (Minsi) tribe, and succeeded by Captain Pipe; and New Comer (Netawatwees) was chief of the Turtle tribe, and succeeded by Captain John Kilbuck." A few bands of Minsis or Minnisinks settled in Canada.

The following extract from an article by Wm. J. Heller, traces the history of the Delawares to the present day:

"About the year 1772 all the Delawares, including the Christian Indians then living within the confines of the present state of Pennsylvania, moved further into the Indian country, settling on the Muskingom river, now the Tuscarawas, in the present state of Ohio. Here the Moravian Indians occupied a settlement called Schoenbrun or Gnadenhütten and at Newcomerstown and Coshocton were two capitals of the Delaware nation, Turtle and Minsi, and here the advance in civilization which had been made by the entire nation was always a matter of favorable comment, and in many diaries of travelers through these sections, are expressions of surprise at what was found. Here the various forces became united as one nation under the following rules promulgated by the Grand Council of the Nation in 1773:

"1. Liberty is given to the Christian religion which the council advises the entire nation to adopt.

"2. The Christian Indians and their teachers are on an absolute equality with other Delawares, all of them together constituting one people.

"3. The national territory is alike the property of the Christian Indians and of the native Delawares.

"4. Converts only, and no other Indians, shall settle near the Christian town; such as are not converts, but are now living near such towns, shall move away.

"5. In order to give more room to the Christian Indians, Gekel-Emuk-Pe-Chung is to be abandoned, and a new capital founded farther down the river.

"6. The Christian Indians are invited to build a third town. Netawatwes, the then ruling king of the nation, expected to see the entire population converted within five years and the Christian settlements became famed throughout the entire west. They were built on a new order and were conveniently governed without the aid of Colonial magistrates by a complete code of laws. On questions of great import decisions were made by vote of all the people.

"These people raised grain, cattle and poultry. Their plantations covered hundreds of acres and few farm yards in Pennsylvania had poultry in greater variety. Politics was represented by two parties, the principal one was for peace, under the leadership of Captain White Eyes, a Turtle, and the other was the war party under Captain Pipe, a Minnisink. During the Revolutionary War, Captain White Eyes was a firm ally of the American Government, under which he held a commission of colonel, and was very desirous of having the new congress elect his lands and his people as the fourteenth state in the new union. Unfortunately he died at a period when the British were putting forth great effort to win over the Delawares. The other Indian nations of the west sent emissaries to condole with the Delawares in the loss of their famous chief-tain. To these, Captain Pipe of the war party made overtures and successfully created sympathy for the British cause.

"In 1782, ninety-six of these Christian Indians, about sixty of them women and children, were murdered by a band of Scotch-Irish bordermen, under the command of one Williamson at their settlement, Gnadenhütten, Ohio.

"After this event the remnant of the Moravian Indians located at Fairfield, Canada, while all the other tribes of the nation retreated to what is now Indiana. In the War of 1812 General Harrison was sent with an army to invade Canada and Fairfield, becoming a battlefield, was laid waste and for the third time the Moravian settlement was destroyed. Again a new town was started near the scene of the old but on account of certain conditions it did not prosper and they later joined the main body. In the year 1818, the Delaware nation ceded to the United States all of their lands in the state of Indiana, the Government promising to provide a country for them; which they did, by giving less than 2,000,000 acres of Kansas land for their 4 1-2 million acres of Indiana land. Finally in 1829 they began locating in the forks of the Kansas and Missouri rivers, and by the year 1833 all of them had reached their new homes. Here they became very industrious; the Indian girls spun and wove excellent cloth, made shirts and other clothing; while on more than 2,000 acres of land there was cultivated grain and vegetables. Great quantities of hogs, cattle and horses were also produced.

"Hardly had they become accustomed to their surroundings, when they became encompassed on every side by settlers, and the history of their difficulties and discouragements was again repeated. Their lands were trespassed upon, their timber cut down and destroyed, and they were denied the protection of the law to either their property or persons. In the year 1854 the Government compelled them to relinquish their 600,000 acres of land for $1,000,000 and defrauded them out of 1,000,000 acres more for $10,000. The railroad then made its appearance and this also proved to be a menace to the poor Lenni

Lenapé. This new enemy demanded of the politician at home and the administration at Washington the removal of the Delawares to some other and more remote place, in order that it might have the benefit of their possessions for speculative purposes. The railroad and the settler pressed the politician, the politician pressed the administration and the administration pressed the Indian. The government did not pay over the purchase money until many years afterward, but gave the railroad company the land gratis. The railroad company sold it for, from twenty to fifty dollars per acre, realizing over $5,000,000 on the Indians' land without a cent of investment. Thus harassed and irritated beyond further endurance, the Delawares determined to again put themselves, if possible, out of the reach of their tormentors. In May, 1863, the Commissioner was requested to grant permission to withdraw $800 of their invested funds with which to defray the expenses of a delegation of their people to the Rocky Mountains, in the forlorn hope that in those wild and rugged fastnesses they might succeed in finding a harbor of refuge. At this time, out of a fighting force of 217 men they furnished 185 for the United States army in the rebellion. Finally on the 4th day of July, 1866, the Government removed the Delawares from the state of Kansas to the Cherokee Reservation in the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, and with their purchase money of $1,000,000 and the other paltry sum of $10,000, they purchased a small tract of land, sufficient to give 160 acres to each Delaware. When the contract of purchase between the Delawares and the Cherokees came to be made, the exact location of the lands was left subject to future determination. However, as always, their rights were guaranteed by the government, but, unfortunately, the government, as in every other contract with the Delawares, became a defaulter, and the poor Delawares to-day are minus their money and minus their lands.

"Here on a narrow strip of land in the Cherokee Reservation in the state of Oklahoma, there is living to-day the last remnant of this once numerous people, their numbers reduced to less than two thousands. Out of this population four-fifths can read and write, one-third are full-bloods, and half of these adhere to the old faith, while about one-third of the nation profess the Christian religion. This is remarkable considering the two hundred years of persecution they received at the hands of the race that taught them that faith.

"In a recent conversation with one of their prominent men, a leader of the old faith, he accounted for this by the reason of missionary work done by Christians, while the adherents of the ancient religion do no soliciting whatever. The reluctance of the Indian to give the world a full view of his religion and faith is, perhaps, one of the reasons why he is greatly misunderstood. He holds these things so sacred that he will say but little about them outside of his place of worship, and less to one not of his own blood. If you should ask for an explanation you would likely be told that the white man's religion appeals more to the selfish interests of the individual, and suits many of the young people better, and by following the white man's faith you can do as you please until you are ready to die, then by repenting can escape all responsibility for your acts, and so go to Heaven without any efforts of your own. According to the ancient faith you must follow the dictates of your guardian spirit of conscience, which is the connecting link with the Great Spirit and thus improve yourself in each sphere you pass through until you have finally reached the Happy Hunting Ground and have in some manner merited a reward yourself.

"The Delaware Indians have kept no written records, but have from time immemorial trained certain young men as teachers, who are to succeed the older men as they die, and at the annual meetings these young men assist in conducting the ceremonies and finally take their places as leaders themselves. One of these bright young men and the first of whom we have any facts of record was Charles Killbuck, who, at the age of eight years began the course of instruction, and when ten years old could relate from memory the legends of the history of their nation for several hundred years previous. He became the head counselor; the custodian of the papers, documents and treaties; and also treasures of the nation, and as such, passed through the period of the Revolutionary War, while yet in his teens. He and his brother John, the hereditary chief of the nation, were among those Moravian Indians whom the government authorities at Pittsburgh shortly after the massacre on the Muskingham had placed on Killbuck's Island above the fort as a means of protecting them from their white enemy. But even this proved a very insecure place as the government's offer of sixty dollars for an Indian scalp was still in force and those Indians on the island were attacked one day by their old Presbyterian foe. Charles and John, in attempting to escape, upset the boat. Charles, to save his life, was compelled to relinquish his hold on the precious treaty bag, which dropped to the bottom of the river, and was never recovered. Thus was lost forever all records, documents and treaty belts of the Delaware nation.

"John Killbuck graduated from Princeton College prior to the Revolution and Charles some few years after the close of that war, graduated from the same institution. Charles, about the year 1848, then an old man, reduced to writing all that he could remember of the history of his people. The Delaware nation produced many men of prominence and these are on record in all the published archives of the Government. Today, among their principal men is one who enjoys the greatest distinction ever accorded any American Indian. This is Richard Connor Adams, son of Rev. William Adams, son of Mut-tee-tut-teese, son of Pa-mar-ting, son of Pa-kan-kee, son of Win-ge-non, Chief of the Minnisinks. Mr. Adams' paternal grandmother was Nancy Connor, daughter of Elizabeth Connor, daughter of Ak-ke-long-un-a-qua, a daughter of Captain White Eyes, alias Ko-qua-hag-ech-ton, a grandson of Tammanend, alias St. Tammany. Mr. Adams was unanimously elected great sachem of the recently established Indian Brotherhood. Certainly an honor most worthily bestowed—a prince of the Lenni Lenapé—King of all Indians of the North American continent."

The territory included in Lehigh county was a part of the neutral ground, crossed by several main trails, used by all tribes of Indians in going from point to point, and an Indian found away from one of these trails was considered an enemy and dealt with accordingly. There does not appear to have been any large Indian town within the boundaries of the present county.

There was an Indian village along the Coplay creek in North Whitehall, the last resident of which was Kolapechka, son of Paxinosa. The Indian town of Hockyondocquay was located in Northampton county, east of the Lehigh, on the creek of the same name, between Howell's Mill and the mouth of the creek. Here lived Lappowinzo, the Delaware chief, one of the signers of the deed of Aug. 25, 1737, on which was based the Walking Purchase. The line of this walk passed through Hanover township, Lehigh county, between Catasauqua and Shoenersville and the walkers spent the night about half a mile from the Indian town.

Lappowinzo's portrait was painted by a Swedish artist, Hesselius, by order of John Penn. He is represented as a stout Indian of about forty years of age. A few black marks are painted on his forehead and cheeks. His hair is long and brought to the back part of his head, with a blue blanket thrown around him and a pouch on his breast fastened to his neck. James Logan, in 1741, mentions him "as an honest old Indian."

The Lehigh Gap, called Pochkapochka, was a favorite place with the Indians. Here a noted Indian chief was born and another noted Indian called Captain Harrison lived near the Gap. About 1735, an Indian family lived at Egypt, near the home of Jacob Kohler. For some reason he was exiled from the town across the river and the children of the two families frequently played together.

On the Grim farm in Weisenberg, was a spot frequented by Indians and the famous jasper pits in Macungie attracted them frequently. Several points in Upper Milford are pointed out where Indians formerly lived and along the Saucon creek was another favorite stopping place.

Indian names which the Delawares gave to streams and localities in and near Lehigh county are as follows, as given by the missionary, Heckewelder:

Aquanschicola, meaning, where we fish with the bush-net.

Catasauqua, corrupted from Gattoshacki, signifying, the earth thirsts. The name is written Calisuk and Caladaqua in old deeds.

Hockendauqua, corrupted from Hackiundochwe, searching for land.

Lehigh river, called by the Delaware, Lechaweki, Lechawiechink, or Lechawekink, signifying, where there are forks. This name was given to the river, because it struck an Indian path or thoroughfare coming from the lower parts of the Delaware country, which thoroughfare, on the left bank of the river, (below Bethlehem) forked off into various trails, leading north and west. The word Lechawekink, was shortened into Lecha, the name still in use among the descendants of German settlers, of which abbreviation Lehigh is a corruption.

Lechauhanne, a forked stream, was the name applied by the Delawares to the land between the Delaware and its west branch, the Lehigh, called the Forks of the Delaware.

Lechawitank, the place at or within the forks, was the name given by the Delawares to the site of Easton and then to the town.

Macungy, corrupted from Machk-unschi, the feeding place of bears.

Maxatawny, corrupted from Machsit-hanne, meaning bear's path stream,—the stream along which bears have beaten a path.

Monocasy, corrupted from Menagassi, or Menakessi, a stream with several large bends. Menagaschsink was the name given to the site of Bethlehem at the mouth of the Monocasy.

Perkiomen, from Pakiomink, where there are cranberries.

Saucon, from Sakunk, meaning, where a smaller stream empties into a larger, hence, its place of outlet.

Tuppeckhanna, (one of the sources of the Little Lehigh at Trexlertown, in Upper Macungie).

The word signifies, the stream that flows from a large spring.

David Schultze, in his journal, says that in the Indian tongue, brother is issimus; friend, netap; bread, poon; eat, meree; fish, lamiess; mother, ana; cow, murs; pig, keeshkush; I am hungry, husco lallaculla; give me bread, langund agboon; what is your name, gecho luensi; where do you come from, tankomi. Indian names do not contain the letter "r" as they could not pronounce that letter.

The Indian method of catching shad, which formerly came up the Lehigh as far north as Lehighton, as described by Loskiel, is interesting.

"As soon as the shad come from the south to deposit their spawn, running up the rivers from the sea, the Indians assemble for the annual fishery. First they build a stone dam across the stream, the two wings or walls of which converge into a pound or wooden box, perforated with holes. This is the trap. A wild grape-vine of sufficient length to reach from shore to shore is then cut, and loaded down with brush, secured at intervals of from ten to fifteen feet. This barrier is stretched across the river, perhaps a mile above the pound, and being held in position by Indians in canoes, is slowly towed down stream. The frightened fish are driven before it back into the dam, and thence by the Indians, posted on its walls, into the pound, where they are caught by hand. As many as a thousand are known to have been taken in this way in a morning. The Delawares called March the shad-month."

The earliest mention of the Lehigh Region yet found is in 1701, when the goods of Hans Stielman, of Maryland, were confiscated for attempting to trade with the Indians without a license. William Penn, in a letter to Stielman dated 12, 2 mo. (Apr.), 1701, says: "Thou has often promised to visit this place in order to treat with me about thy Indian Trade, but hast as often disappointed me. Thy present management thereof amongst us is directly contrary to our Laws, I have yefore Stopt thy Goods intended for Lechay, till according to thy frequent engagements thou come hither thyself and give further Satisfaction than thou hast yet been to Thy frd. W. P."

Subsequently the Provincial Council restored Stielman's goods, but ordered him to give a bond of £1,000 to observe the laws of the province, and on account of his father, who was a native of the province, dealt leniently with him, but, as the Indians complained against him for defrauding them, ordered him not to trade with them until he had regularly obtained a license for that purpose.

In the month of May, 1701, the Lehigh Region is again mentioned in the following manner: "A certain young Swede arriving from Lechay, brought advice that on 5th. day last some young men of that place, going out a hunting, being but a little while gone, several Shotts were heard to go off very thick, which was suspected to have been some of the Sinnecaes coming down upon them, and that thereupon he had sent two Messengers, viz: Edw. Farmer and Jno. Sotcher, who returning bro't advice that the alarm was false, and that the Shott was only at some Swans, and the whole reports groundless."

Again in the same year we find that "the Governor ordered Oppemenynook, the chief of the Indians on Lechay, to be sent for to consult with him about passing a law prohibiting all use of rum to the Indians of his nation."

NATIONALITY OF SETTLERS.

The first settlers of the territory now Lehigh county were Germans who found their way into this rich valley through the earlier settlements along the Perkiomen Creek and in the Oley Valley. It is probable that one or two adventurous settlers had located at an early date along the southern slope of the Lehigh Hills, but not prior to 1727 were there any settlements north of these mountains. The course followed by the greater part of the early settlers was through Maxetawny and Milford in Berks and Bucks, into Milford and Macungie in the present Lehigh county.

Intermingled with the Germans, principally from the Palatinate, were many Swiss, who, coming down the Rhine from the mountain cantons, joined the stream of emigrants to the new land, America. There were also a number of Huguenots, descendants of those, who, exiled from France by the Edict of Nantes, sought refuge in the German states or in Switzerland.

In the lower section of the county, through the Saucon valley, a few English and Welsh from Philadelphia or vicinity settled at an early date. Here and there were also to be found a few Hollanders.

The emigration of the Germans and natives of other European countries to Pennsylvania, was in a great measure due to the efforts of William Penn and his agent, Benjamin Furley, as well as other of his agents. Religious persecution and numerous wars had carried desolation and devastation into millions of homes in the Palatinate, and the poverty-stricken inhabitants heard eagerly the news of a land to which they were invited, where they could share in making the laws, and where there were no wars or persecutions. Penn's mother, Margaret Jasper, was a Dutch woman, and his travels through Germany in 1677, strengthened the bonds between him and the inhabitants of the Rhine provinces. Between the years 1681, when Penn acquired Pennsylvania, and 1704, Penn and others published many pamphlets in English, German, Dutch, and French, giving information concerning his province, which were scattered broadcast throughout the Low Countries, Germany and Switzerland.

The Crefeld Colony under Pastorius settled in Germantown in 1683. Johannes Kelpius with forty pietists came in 1694. In 1704 Daniel Falkner brought a number with him on his return trip after a visit to the Fatherland. In 1708 and 1709 thousands emigrated. In the latter year the following list gives the number of persons and the country from which they came, as given by an unknown writer in a pamphlet published in 1711.

Aus der Pfaltz,	8,589
Aus dem Darmstaettischen, . . .	2,334
Aus dem Hanauischen,	1,113
Aus dem Francken Land,	653
Aus dem Mayntzischen,	63
Aus dem Trierischen,	58
Aus dem Speyerischen, Worms-ischen und Graffschaftlichen,	490
Aus dem Hessenland,	81
Aus dem Zweybrückischen, . . .	125
Aus dem Nassauischen,	203
Aus dem Elsass,	413
Aus dem Badischen,	320
Aus Allerhand Landschaften
ledige Handwercks Leute, . .	871
<hr/>
Total,	15,313

From 1710 to 1727 the number that arrived is unknown, but it ran into the thousands, who settled principally in Montgomery, Berks and Lancaster counties. In 1719, we learn from a letter, that six or seven thousand were expected.

The passage of a registration act in 1727 required every arrival to sign allegiance to the King of England and from this time until 1775 all emigrants names are recorded. The following is the number of immigrant ships which arrived at Philadelphia from 1727 to 1775, of which records have been preserved:

1727	5	1739	8	1751	15
1728	3	1740	6	1752	19
1729	2	1741	9	1753	19
1730	3	1742	5	1754	17
1731	4	1743	9	1755	2
1732	11	1744	5	1756	1
1733	7	1745	none	1757	none
1734	2	1746	2	1758	none
1735	3	1747	5	1759	none
1736	3	1748	8	1760	none
1737	7	1749	21	1761	1
1738	16	1750	14	1762	none

1763	4	1768	4	1773	15
1764	11	1769	4	1774	6
1765	5	1770	7	1775	2
1766	5	1771	9
1767	7	1772	8

In all, 321 ships in forty-four years. In 1727, there were 1,240 arrivals, while in 1728 there were only 390, and 243 in 1729. In 1730, 458 arrived and in 1731 the number increased to 631. In 1732 there were 2,093 arrivals and in 1738 the number was 3,115.

The number of Germans in Pennsylvania was estimated by Governor Thomas in 1747 as 72,000. Michael Schlatter in 1751 gave the total population of Pennsylvania as 190,000, of whom one-third or 63,000 were Germans. In 1731 the Lutherans are supposed to have numbered 17,000 and the German Reformed 15,000. They came from the Palatinate chiefly, from Alsace, Swabia, Saxony and Switzerland; and as given in the records, from Wittemberg, and Zweibruecken, from Erbach, Nassau, Hanau, Darmstadt, Eisenberg, Basel, Mannheim, Durlach, Rittenheim, inhabitants of Lorraine, Mentz, Franconia, Hesse and Hamburg.

The first ship recorded is the William and Sarah, which arrived Sept. 18, 1727. Alexander Diefenderfer, a passenger on this ship, settled in the southwestern part of the county, part of his land lying in Bucks county and part in the present Lehigh county.

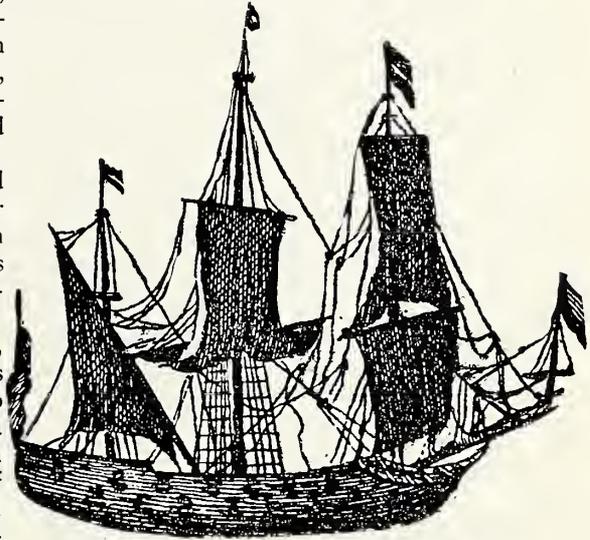

The size of these ships varied from 63 feet long, with 21 feet in breadth and 9 feet 7 1-2 inches as the depth of hold, with a tonnage of 108 tons, to 99 feet in length, with 26 feet of breadth and a tonnage of 311 tons. They sailed principally from Rotterdam, and thence to Cowes, on the Isle of Wight. Few carried over 300 passengers, and many only half that number. The passage required usually from six to nine weeks. Sometimes, if the weather was stormy, it required as much as four months.

The trip down the Rhine lasted from four to six weeks and the passengers were packed densely in the vessels. The passage from Rotterdam to Philadelphia was £10 for all over ten years: children, half price, except those under five years of age, who were carried free. The other costs, including the trip down the Rhine, amounted to at least $35.00, according to a writer who described a trip in the year 1750.

Many spent $176.00 on the trip from home to Philadelphia. Those who were unable to pay their passage money were bound out to the highest bidder on their arrival at Philadelphia, to serve three, four, five or six years for the amount due by them, according to their age and strength. Large numbers of Redemptioners, or those who bound themselves, arrived in Pennsylvania in the years 1728, 1729, 1737, 1741, 1750, and 1751. Children from ten to fifteen were required to serve until twenty-one. When the term of service was over, a thrifty servant had saved quite a sum and could take up a tract of land. Many Germans began life in this way and their descendants are now among the prominent citizens of the country. As early as 1722, one hundred Palatines were advertised for disposal for terms of five years at £10 a head.

Joseph Shippen, Jr., wrote from Lancaster, Sept. 16, 1769, to a friend: "Give my love to your brother and desire him to buy a young man, a Palatine, such as he bought before for Mr. Burd, who wants another and I will send down £20 the next Post to pay for him."

Passenger Ship of the Period of 1750

Among the earliest settlers in the section now Lehigh county were George Bachman and Philip Geisinger, Mennonites, who settled in Upper Saucon and were naturalized as early as 1729; Peter Trexler, who was naturalized in 1729 and purchased a tract of land in Macungie from Caspar Wistar in the same year and Jost Henrich Sasmanhausen, who settled on the line between Berks and Lehigh and who was also naturalized in 1729 or 1730.

The early settlers of Lehigh county came from no particular section, but from all parts of Germany and adjoining countries. Occasionally a colony of friends and relatives from one community settled in the same neighborhood, as the Swiss settlement at Egypt and a colony of Palatines in Weisenberg.*

Large numbers came from the Palatinate, among whom were the Brauss, Clader, Dillinger, Egner, Mechlin, Meckell, Schall, Shankweiler, Stahler, Strauss and Wint families.

From Zweibruecken came the Guth, Gross, Keiper, Knerr, Newhard, Mickley, Baer, Hunsicker, Eckert, Spaengler and Schneider families.

From Wurtemberg came the Koehler, Jacobs, Christman, Grim, Seiberling and Weiler families. From Alsace, the Balliet, Graff, Ruch, Rupp, Henninger and Stettler families; from Bavaria, the Keck and Saeger families; from Lorraine, the Wotrings; from Nassau, the Cooper and Gies families and from Schlesien the Schultzes and Yeakels.

From Switzerland came the Burkhalter, Kohler, Deshler, Roth, Kern, Troxell, Biery, Blumer, Showalter, Flickinger, Grob, Dubs, Eberhard, Frey, Giesy, Schwander, Bertsch, Peter, Neff and Huber families.

From Ansbach came the ancestor of the Kurtz family; from Ittlingen, the Romigs; from Niederbronn, the Kuntz and Schreiber families; from Titelsheim, the Knausses; from Neresheim, the Diefenderfers; from Hildeberg Hause, the Leisenrings; from Frankfurt-on-Main, the Semmels; from Pfungstadt, the Erdmans; from Kolmberg, the Lichtenwalners; from Dauenheim, the Wints, and from Odenwald, the Holbens.

Among the Huguenots were the Balliet, Vesqueau, Voturin or Wotring, Verly, La Roche, Jacquet, Riebelet and Tournet families.

The Knepply, Kookon and Van Buskerck families were from Holland.

The English families were the Jennings, Mory, Jarrett, Everett, Hyneman, Mayberry, Warner, Pugh, Blackledge, Thomas, Williams and Tool families.

The Welsh were the Owen and Samuels families, and in 1774, Griffith Griffith settled in Heidelberg township.

From the following places in Germany came families of the same names as many of the settlers in Lehigh, some of whom may have been of the same stock. Sander from Ixheim; Vollweiler from Mittelbach; Merkel from Schoenborn;

Hunsinger from Bussweiler; Bischof from Katzweiler; Metzger from Kriegsheim and Offstein; Kratz from Desloch; Schmoll from Zweibruecken; Shick from Heddesheim; Koehler from Gross Karlbach; Hartmann from Alsenbrueck; Jung from Kollweiler; Beck from Mannheim; Frick from Duchroth; Hofman from Duchroth; Boeber from Elsweiler; Eberle from Landau; Weiss from Edigheim; Schirardin from Rauweiler and Jirardin from Neustadt.

The following is a translation of a passport issued to an emigrant who settled here in 1733. Similar passports were given to many of the early Palatines. It is written in German on sheepskin and was issued to the ancestor of the Lichtenwaller family.

"In the day of the reign of the most illustrious Prince and Lord, Carl William Frederick, Margrave of Brandenburg, Duke in Prussia of Magdeburg, Stettin, Pomerania, of Cassuben and Wenden, of Mecklenburg, also in Schlesien of Crossen, Burgrave of Nuernburg, Prince of Halberstadt, Minden, Kamin, Wenden, Schwerin and Katzenburg, Count of Hohenzollern and Schwerin, Lord of the Lands of Rostock and Stargard, our most gracious Prince and Lord.

"The time-ordained Captain and Treasurer, and Beadle of the illustrious superior bailiwick of Kolmberg, I, John William Barchewitz, and I, John George Samuel Donner, do hereby publicly and to everybody testify and acknowledge, that the bearer of this, Johann Liechtenwaller, having been for four years a servant and master of the blacksmith trade at Kreuth, in the office most graciously entrusted to us, personally appeared before us and expressed the desire to emigrate to Pennsylvania with his wife Barbara and a son one year of age; this he wished to do for the improvement of his temporal welfare, after the sale of the goods belonging to his occupation and the adjustment of his revenue and taxes. In a becoming manner he requested us not only to release him from the duties which he had hitherto faithfully discharged, and to grant him an unimpeded departure, but also to give him a credible testimonium and a respectful passport of his former relations in order that he might therewith make himself known in an honorable way.

"Since it is not otherwise known than that the above-named Liechtenwaller, during the four years in which he was in our employ, showed himself at all times submissive and obedient, as becomes a faithful subject, subjected himself to the public commands and prohibitions, discharged the public obligations in an orderly way and at the proper time, and also conducted himself peacefully and harmoniously with everyone, so that there never appeared any complaint or grievance

*The following dialogue between a farmer, a resident of a city and a Swiss, illustrates the confusion of speech between speakers of different dialects, caused by difference of pronunciation.

BAUER.—Wie is de Suppe so hasz!
STADTER.—Man sagt ja nicht hasz, sondern heisz. Has nennt man das Thier.

BAUER.—Dos haszt bei uns Hos!
STADTER.—Das ist wieder falsch. Hos bedeutet jenes Kleidungsstück, womit Eure langen Beine bedeckt sind.

BAUER.—Dos haszt in Hus!
SCHWEITZER.—Aber mer sind jezt in Huus.
BAUER.—Dos iss'n Haus!

against him; therefore we should gladly have retained him as a subject, if circumstances had permitted. Yet we have borne him no scruple in the gratification of his request, but knowingly release him of his servile duties, and grant him unmolested departure; moreover, we also entreat everyone of whatever station or dignity they may be, to manifest toward the above-mentioned Liechtenwaller, because of his good behavior, all well-wishing, and to lend him a helping hand in the promotion of his success; also to pass him and his at all places securely and unmolested, and to allow him to enjoy this testimony in very deed.

"In witness whereof this passport is executed by us above-named officers personally subscribed to, corroborated with the greater seals of our office and voluntarily granted to Liechtenwaller for his legitimate use. Granted at Kolmberg, April 25th, in the year 1733 after the birth of Christ, our only Redeemer and Saviour.

"JOHN WILLIAM BACHEWITZ,

"JOHN GEORGE SAMUEL DONNER."

MANNERS AND CUSTOMS.

These hardy pioneers, after their arrival at Philadelphia, at once sought land suitable for cultivation. Finding that the land in what is now Bucks and Montgomery counties was already taken up by earlier arrivals, they pushed on into the interior, then almost an unknown country, across the Lehigh Hills, some by the Goshenhoppen route, others through Oley and Maxetawny, travelling over the Indian trails and in the primeval forest made their stand. Some were attracted by the similarity of the hills and valleys to their homes in the mountains of Bavaria and Switzerland; some by the flowing springs and well watered meadows, while others sought the level country covered with heavy timber.

If the pioneer brought his goods in a wagon, that was the family's home until a suitable tract was selected, upon which, usually, was a spring or through which a creek flowed. Everything was of the crudest sort, until by aiding each other, they erected log cabins, often of only one room, with an earthen floor. The next step was to clear land for agriculture. Each year a little more was cleared and every foot was utilized in planting.

In clearing the land two methods were used. One was the process of girdling, or belting, which consisted in chopping a ring out of the bark entirely around the tree, three or four inches wide. In this way the sap taken up through the roots was checked and the upper part of the tree gradually died. The pine died the quickest while oaks often lived two or three years after having been girdled. This method saved the labor of chopping down, which was also done in some sections, after which considerable was burned. When the deadened tree fell, the roots were taken out with the trees. After many trees had fallen, the broken limbs and smaller trees were removed. When the logs were reduced to lengths of 12 or 15 feet, so they could be handled, the owner had a log-rolling. In destroying underwood and bushes, they were generally "grubbed," after which a field was fit for cultivation in the second year after it was cleared.

The log cabin is one of the earliest forms of dwellings known in well-wooded countries. The Teutonic tribes, in the time of Tacitus, built "with unhewn timber" and certain Indian tribes had winter houses of logs. The hut of round logs, notched at the corners, with open cracks and without floor or loft, was the rudest form known to the American settler. This was gradually improved by the addition of a floor of rough punchcons hewn out with an ax; then by the chinking of the cracks with bits of wood and the daubing of these with clay. There were many cabins without chinking or daubing; one man had his head bitten by a hungry wolf, which thrust its nozzle through the open cracks of his dwelling while he was asleep. Some lightly covered the cracks by attaching long, rough shingles, called clap-boards, by pegs to the outside of the logs. On the frontier, the house of logs, from which the bark had been peeled, was a mark of gentility and a second story was a luxury, though often reached by steps from the outside or a perpendicular ladder inside the house. The dwelling of logs hewn and squared distinguished its owner as a man of wealth and dignity.

Nails were scarce and wrought by hand. Many houses were built without iron; the hinges and latches were of wood and the shingles or clapboards of the roof were held in place by "weight timbers." The fire places were necessarily large for a huge fire was required to heat the house. The chimneys were, in earlier days, built of sticks of wood, well plastered on the inside with clay, which often took fire. Oiled paper was used for windows before window glass came into use. In some sections sheets of mica were used. The more prosperous farmer built his house of stone.

In Pennsylvania invariably the barns were larger, the smoke houses smaller than in the south. There was often no shade. With the Pennsylvania German farmers, the bake oven invariably stood by the house, often a part of it, and the spring house of log or stone near-by. Many a house was built directly over a spring. Some can be seen today with walls two feet or more thick, where, by custom crocks of milk and butter have been kept for one hundred and fifty years or more.

The sleeping accommodations were usually very crude. In some sections the family and guests slept in a row upon the floor; some had deer or bear skins upon which to rest. As late as 1788, in an inn on the New York frontier, everybody slept about a central post that upheld the roof, heads outward and feet toward the center. Among the Pennsylvania settlers the trundle bed was much used, pushed under the standing beds in the day time. Pillows and bed sacks were often filled with mistletoe or down from the cat-tail flag; or with cotton from the milkweed, called "silk grass." The more prosperous used feather and down beds. These were universally used among the Pennsylvania Germans, who often slept between two feather beds, even in summer time. Floors were swept with brooms of birch or hemlock twigs, with Indian brooms of shaved wood or of corn husks, or with imported brooms of hair; sometimes the floor was dry-rubbed with sand; sometimes the parlor floor was strewn with sand laid off in ornamental figures.

Clocks and watches were exceedingly rare. Hour glasses and sun-dials were not plenty. Time was computed by the sun's altitude or by guess. Furniture was from Germany or bought in Philadelphia, which was their market place.

Church bells were necessary to announce services, but rarely could the early settlers hear a sermon. Almost every family had a psalter or "Gebetbuch," some Bibles, and usually the most intelligent among them read from these to others. As a rule they were very pious, the majority having felt religious persecution in Europe.

The characteristic feature of the earlier houses was the fire place, sometimes large enough to drive a cart and horse between the jambs and often the logs were drawn to the hearth by a horse.

The Germans used a stove called by some "a box with one side out." Sometimes the open side of this stove was outside of the room, or even of the house, and the fire was fed from without. A traveler could tell at sight that a house with a single chimney in the middle was inhabited by Germans and furnished with stoves; the smoke from each led into one flue and was so taken off; or if two chimneys, one at each gable end, without fire places, after the English plan. In the open fire place was a crane or chain with pot-hooks to hold kettles, sometimes a small oven in the side of the chimney. The fire in the hearth was rarely allowed to die out; if so, coals were brought from a neighbor's house. For light, the pitch-pine torch was used.

Dishes were of wood and pewter. Plates were sometimes mere square blocks of wood but often rounded on a lathe. Pewter superseded wood and was universally used. People drank from mugs of pewter, ate from pewter basins and plates and used spoons of pewter.

As an illustration of the domestic life of the early settlers the following appraisement of the household goods of Gottfried Knauss, who died in Whitehall township in 1777, which his widow Regina Louisa Knauss took at the appraisement, is given. The appraisement was made May 17, 1777.

	£	s.	d.
A stove and pipe, (Rohrofen),	5
A bed,	8
A cow,	4
Three iron pots,		15
A teakettle and a coffee-mill,		12	6
Two pewter platters,		12	6
Two pewter dishes,		10	6
Six pewter plates,		12
A pewter pot,		6
Six pewter spoons,		2	6
Three spoons, a meat-fork and a candlestick,		6
A bucket, a small bucket (Shopfkuebel) and a butter tub, (Butterkuebel),		3
Two table cloths and two towels,		15
A hymnbook,		6
A baking-trough, (Backmuld),		2
Ten bushels wheat,
A corn hoe, (Welshkorn hack),		1
A spinning-wheel,		5
A chest,	1	0	0
	£	23.	8. 6

Meat was broiled on the live coals. Potatoes and green corn were roasted in the Indian way on the hot ashes. Cakes of corn meal, buckwheat or rye were baked on a stone, an oak board or a pewter plate, before the fire. A good baking stone was a valuable thing. In 1750 one was sold at public sale.

Dried peaches were cooked with meat when vegetables were scarce. Sassafras flowers made a "curious preserve" and pokeleaves were boiled for spinach. Small beer was made by mixing a decoction from spruce and birch or sassafras twigs with molasses and water. Drinking was universal. The birth of a child, the moving into a new house, an election, a wedding, a funeral, an auction, and even religious meetings, were occasions for drinking. In 1744 an effort was made to persuade men to abstain from "unseasonable tipping in the forenoon."

Tea drinking became general after 1730, but was violently opposed by many as fatal to health and injurious to the mind. In 1756, a writer says: "Our people have shamefully gone into tea drinking." Snuff was used universally.

Clothes were a badge of rank. To dress above one's station was an affront to superiors. The wig was a mark of a gentleman. Deer skin or sheep skin and leather breeches, jacket and coat were worn. Often they were made of raccoon or deer skin. The hunting skirt of linsey-woolsey or buckskin was worn in winter and of tow linen in summer.

Wood was the universal fuel, lighted by the aid of the tinder box with flint, steel and punk, as matches were unknown. Powder flashed in the pan of a gun often lit the fire, which was preserved with great care, carefully covered with ashes at night, so that embers remained in the morning.

To make clothing, flax was raised and sheep were kept for a supply of wool. Flaxseed was sown at the same time as oats.

From the sowing of the flax seed to the completion of the tow or linen garment there was work for men and women. Men prepared the soil and selected the best part of a field for sowing flax seed. It was sown at the time oats were sown—and usually in the same field. It was gathered a few weeks before oats harvest. It was drawn with the roots in bunches, which were tied separately and shocked. Ten to twelve bunches formed a shock. It was allowed to stand on the field until the tops became dry and brown. Straw-binders were laid on the ground, the flax placed on the same, and larger bundles formed, which were taken to the barn floor. Here the seed end of the flax was beaten on an elevated plank or on a barrel, to remove the seed, which was separated from the chaff by means of a fan and at a later period by a wind mill. The flax seed was carefully stored, as it was a valuable product to supply an oil which commanded a high price. The flax was rebound and taken to a clean part of the field, where it was spread on the ground and allowed to remain a few weeks until rain and sunshine had made the inner part of the flax brittle and the outer part tough. It was rebound and removed to the barn or other building where it could be kept. Then followed the breaking of the flax. The first requirement was a fireplace and a fire, over which, on elevated bars or rails, the flax was laid and dried to become more brittle. The flax breakers, often four or five in number, surrounded the fireplace and broke the flax as best they could and in time on a flax break. When this process was ended, the flax was rebound in bundles containing twenty-five handfuls and again taken to the barn. Then followed the first hackling to separate the boll of the flax. This was done on a coarse hackle. The flax was then swungled on a board or plank by means of a wand or wooden knife, and in later years on a break wheel. After the swungling followed hackling on a hackle screwed to the top of a bench. The hackle consisted of a board about ten inches long and three or four inches wide, into which wrought-iron nails about five inches long had been driven. The hackling separated the tow from the fine flax and thus yielded tow and flax. The tow was placed in boxes or barrels and the flax was formed into switches, the ends of which were joined, and a number of such switches were united by a cord and kept in bundles.

The spinning of tow and flax, the work of mothers and daughters, who rose early and often retired late, required much time and labor. The spinning wheel and reel were not wanting. The spinning of tow was first in order. The tow was placed on the fork of the wheel and spun. The spinning of flax, which was wound on a specially made holder, was done on the same wheel on which tow was spun. The reel (haspel) was used for winding the spun tow and flax. One hundred and forty-four revolutions of the reel marked by the indicator were required for a cut. These were formed into skeins, a skein of tow containing four cuts and one of flax six cuts. The skeins of spun tow and flax were boiled in a mixture of ash and water—to make the same soft and tender, and were subsequently laid on the grass or hung on bars to dry and to be bleached.

In weaving the same loom was used for making tow cloth and linen with different gearing for each. The woven material was usually one yard wide. After the web had been made ready a part of it was glued (geschlicht). While time was given for drying the weaver was busy in spooling, and thus there was a constant change from weaving to spooling. Tow cloth was often of different stripes. The wool for the same was colored yellow by means of the bark of hickory trees or peach leaves and blue with indigo. After weaving, plain tow cloth and linen were washed, spread on grass, sprinkled regularly and given time to bleach. The proper bleaching often required several weeks of time. The materials thus obtained and linen thread of various thicknesses, also spun at home, were now ready for use.

The tow cloth was used for clothing, bedding, table cloths, towels, bags, coverings and other articles. Linen cloth of various degrees of fineness was used for shirts, summer clothing, bedding, table cloths, towels and many other purposes.

Linen goods were often checked goods—made of linen colored differently.

In the course of years the pioneer and his descendants raised sheep. A husbandman would have from ten to twelve—but frequently also from twenty to twenty-five or more sheep. Sheep shearing was in order in May of each year. The wool secured was washed and then dried on grass. It was then carefully cleaned and picked so that no impurities might remain. It was taken to the carding mill, where it was first carded on rollers, on which there were strips of leather filled with fine wires and fine nails and then passed between rollers on which there were ribs which formed the rolls of wool, which dropped from the cylinders. The wool, after being thus formed into rolls, was taken home, where it was spun on the large and small spinning wheels. The weaving of the wool was the same as that of tow and flax. When the supply of wool was yet limited, in weaving, the web was often the product of flax and the woof of wool. The material obtained was known as the linsey-woolsey. It was a much better material for winter clothing than tow cloth and linen cloth, and extensively used for such purposes. Cloth woven entirely of wool was for best clothing for wear on Sunday and special occasions. The woolen cloth was taken to the fulling-mill. Here it was placed in large receptacles, in which soap and water were used. The material was beaten and turned and when it was removed from the receptacles to be washed it was found narrower and thicker than before. It was then colored black, brown, gray, deep yellow, or red. After being dried, trimmed and rolled it was ready to be taken to the owner's home and was ready for use. Flannels were of different colors and were used for dresses and undergarments.

In those primitive years and in many years that followed garments were made at home without any directions given by fashion books and without the aid of sewing machines. In later years tailors were engaged to come to the homes of families to make garments for men. The primitive mothers and daughters had an abundance of work in making garments for members of the household. They were also frequently engaged in knitting to supply the family with stockings, socks, mittens, scarfs and caps. They likewise spent much time in making from tow, linen and woolen materials a variety of articles for use and ornament in the home.

Shoes were not constantly worn. In summer many persons wore no shoes. In winter they were worn by all. During the summer they were, however, worn on special occasions. Tradition informs us that shoes were carried by hand by church-goers until the vicinity of the church was reached, when they were put on and removed again soon after the worshippers had left the church building. Shoemakers traveled and did not only mend shoes, but often also remained with a family to make shoes for all its members.

Hats and caps worn by men were made in this country at a very early period. An abundance of materials for making the same was found here. Mothers and daughters made hoods at home. A bonnet of large dimensions was a desirable acquisition, to be made only by purchase in towns.

With the increase of wealth and opportunities to secure wearing apparel from the country store, the ancestors were also able to purchase other materials for various uses. There was a marked difference between clothing made of domestic materials and clothing made of store goods. People in the country began to follow the customs of the people dwelling in towns, and in the course of years people in the country also had fine clothing for their appearance on special occasions.

In earlier periods there was no constant change of fashions as in our day. The good clothing worn by parents was handed down to their children, who were not ashamed to wear the same. Garments were worn for a much longer time than in our day. When journeys were made great care was taken of extra apparel, if made on foot the knapsack was carefully packed, if made on horseback then saddle bags were of great service, when made later on in wagons and coaches the requisites for the journey were placed in wallets, in strong paper and leathern boxes of varied style and in trunks covered with skins of animals.

Such was the life of the ancestors of the majority of the present inhabitants of Lehigh county. Far from the land in which their forbears had lived for generations, in a wilderness, which, cultivated under their skilful hands and by their descendants, has developed into a rich and fruitful region, they founded a new race, the Pennsylvania Germans. The characteristics of the early German settlers which are most to be admired are their strong religious tendencies, their energy and thrift and their honesty and uprightness. The character of the Swiss emigrants who settled here gave a higher moral tone to the community, as these families were noted for their high ideals and good citizenship, which has ever characterized the inhabitants of the Swiss Republic.

It is to be hoped that their descendants will cultivate these praiseworthy characteristics and give to the world a race of high-minded, moral citizens, which shall add lustre to Pennsylvania's history.

Dr. Benjamin Rush, the noted physician of Philadelphia, wrote, in 1789, an account of the manners of the German inhabitants of Pennsylvania which is one of the best descriptions of the early Germans that has ever been written. In it, in writing of their customs and habits, he says:

"They feed their horses and cows well, of which they keep only a small number, in such a manner, that the former perform twice the labor of those horses, and the latter yield twice the quantity of milk of those cows, that are less plentifully fed. There is a great economy in this practice, especially in a country where so much of the labor of a farmer is necessary to support his domestic animals. A German horse is known in every part of the state; indeed, the horse seems to 'feel with his lord, the pleasure and the pride of his extraordinary size or fat.'

"The fences of a German farm are generally high, and well built, so that his fields seldom suffer from the inroads of his own, or his neighbors' horses, cattle, hogs, or sheep.

"The German farmers are great economists of their wood. Hence, they burn it only in stoves, in which they consume but a fourth or fifth part of what is commonly burnt in ordinary open fire places; besides, their horses are saved by means of this economy, from that immense labour, in hauling wood in the middle of winter, which frequently unfits the horses of their neighbors for the toils of the ensuing spring. Their houses are, moreover, rendered so comfortable, at all times, by large closed stoves that twice the business is done by every branch of the family, in knitting, spinning and mending farming utensils, that is done in houses where every member in the family crowds near a common fire-place, or shivers at a distance from it, with hands and fingers that move, by reason of the cold, with only half their usual quickness.

"They discover economy in the preservation and increase of their wood, in several other ways. They sometimes defend it, by high fences, from their cattle; by which means, the young forest trees are suffered to grow, to replace those that are cut down for the necessary use of the farm. But where this cannot be conveniently done, they surround the stump of that tree which is most useful for fences, viz: the chestnut, with a small triangular fence. From this stump, a number of suckers shoot out in a few years; two or three of which in the course of five and twenty years, grow into trees of the same size as the tree from whose roots they derived their origin.

"They keep their horses and cattle as warm as possible, in winter, by which means, they save a great deal of their hay and grain; for those animals when cold, eat much more than when they are in a more comfortable situation.

"The German farmers live frugally in their families, with respect to diet, furniture and apparel. They sell their most profitable grain, which is wheat, and eat that which is less profitable, that is rye, or Indian corn. The profit of a farmer, from this single article of economy, is equal, in the course of a life time, to the price of a farm for one of his children.

"They eat sparingly of boiled animal food, with large quantities of vegetables, particularly sallad, turnips, onions and cabbage, the last of which, they make into sourcroust. They likewise use a large quantity of milk and cheese in their diet. Perhaps the Germans do not proportion the quantity of animal food to the degrees of their labour; hence, it has been thought, by some people, that they decline in strength sooner than their English or Irish neighbors. Very few of them use distilled spirits in their families; their common drinks are cider, beer, wine and simple water. The furniture of their houses is plain and useful. They cover themselves in winter with light feather beds; instead of blankets; in this contrivance there is both convenience and economy, for the beds are warmer than blankets, and they are made by themselves. The apparel of the German farmers is usually homespun. When they use European articles of dress, they prefer those of the best quality, and of the highest prices. They are afraid of debt, and seldom purchase anything without paying cash for it.

"The German farmers have large or profitable gardens near their houses. These contain little else but useful vegetables. Pennsylvania is indebted to the Germans for the principal part of her knowledge in horticulture. Since the settlement of a number of German gardeners, in the neighborhood of Philadelphia, the tables of all classes of citizens have been covered with a variety of vegetables, in every season of the year; and to the use of these vegetables, in diet, may be ascribed the general exemption of the citizens of Philadelphia from diseases of the skin.

"The Germans seldom hire men to work upon their farms. The feebleness of that authority which masters possess over hired servants, is such, that their wages are seldom procured from their labor, except in harvest, when they work in the presence of their masters. The wives and daughters of the German farmers frequently forsake, for a while, their dairy and spinning-wheel, and join their husbands and brothers in their labor of cutting down, collecting and bringing home, the fruits of the fields and orchards. The work of the gardens is generally done by the women of the family.

"As members of civil government, the Germans are peaceable, and exact in the payment of their taxes. Since they have participated in the power of the state, many of them have become sensible and enlightened in the science of legislation. Pennsylvania has had the speaker's chair of her assembly, and the Vice-president's office of her council filled with dignity, by gentlemen of German families. The same gentlemen have since been advanced to seats in the House of Representatives, under the new constitution of the United States. In the great controversy about the national government, a large majority of the Germans in Pennsylvania decided in favor of its adoption, notwithstanding the most popular arts were used to prejudice them against it.

"The intercourse of the Germans with each other, is kept up chiefly in their own language; but most of their men who visit the capital, and trading or country towns of the state, speak the English language. A certain number of the laws are now printed in German, for the benefit of those of them who cannot read English. A large number of German newspapers are likewise circulated through the State, through which knowledge and intelligence have been conveyed, much to the advantage of the government. There is scarcely an instance of a German, of either sex, in Pennsylvania, that cannot read; but many of the wives and daughters of the German farmers cannot write. The present state of society among them renders this accomplishment of little consequence to their improvement or happiness.

"If it were possible, to determine the amount of all the property brought into Pennsylvania, by the present German inhabitants of the state and their ancestors, and then compare it with the present amount of their property, the contrast would form such a monument of human industry and economy, as has seldom been contemplated in any age or country.

"I have been informed that there was an ancient prophecy which foretold, that 'God would bless the Germans in foreign countries.' This prediction has been faithfully verified in Pennsylvania. They enjoy here every blessing that liberty, toleration, independence, affluence, virtue, and reputation, can confer upon them.

"How different is their situation here, from what it was in Germany. Could the subjects of the prince of Germany, who now groan away their lives in slavery and unprofitable labour, view from an eminence, in the month of June, the German settlements of Strasburg or Manheim, in Lancaster county, or of Lebanon, in Dauphin county, or Bethlehem, in Northampton county—could they be accompanied on this eminence, by a venerable German farmer, and be told by him that many of those extensive fields of grain, full fed herds luxuriant meadows, orchards promising loads of fruit, together with the spacious barns and commodious stone-dwelling houses, which compose prospects that have been mentioned, were all the product of the labour of a single family, and of one generation; and they were all secured to the owners of them by certain laws; I am persuaded, that no chains would be able to detain them from sharing in the freedom of their Pennsylvania friends and former fellow subjects.

"We will assert our dignity (would be their language)—Will be men—we will be free—we will enjoy the fruits of our own labour—we will no longer be bought and sold to fight battles in which we have neither interest nor resentment—we will inherit a portion of that blessing which God has promised to the Germans in foreign countries—we will be Pennsylvanians."

"I shall conclude this Account of the Manners of the German inhabitants of Pennsylvania, by remarking that if I have failed in doing them justice, it has not been the fault of my subject. The German character once employed the pen of one of the first Historians of antiquity. I mean the elegant and enlightened Tacitus. It is very remarkable that the Germans in Pennsylvania retain, in a great degree, all the virtues which Tacitus ascribes to their ancestors in his treatise, De Moribus Germanorum. They inherit their integrity, fidelity and chastity, but Christianity has banished from them, their drunkenness, idleness and love of military glory. There is a singular trait in the features of the German character in Pennsylvania, which shows how long the most trifling custom may exist among a people who have not been mixed with other nations.

"Tacitus describes, in the following words, the way in which the ancient Germans built their villages:

"Suum quisque domum circumdat sive adversus casus ignis remedium, sive inscitia aedificandi." (Each man leaves a space between his house, and those of his neighbors, either to avoid the danger from fire, or from unskillfulness in architecture).

"Many of the German villages in Pennsylvania, are constructed in the same manner. The small houses are composed of a mixture of wood, brick and clay, neatly united. The large houses are built of stone, and many of them after the English fashion. Very few of the houses in Germantown are connected together. Where the Germans connect their houses in their villages, they appear to have deviated from one of the customs they imported from Germany."

Another account by Prof. John David Schoepf, who travelled through Pennsylvania in 1783 and 1784, says:

"The German nation forms a considerable part, probably more than a third, of the state of Pennsylvania. The Quakers, who at first gave the tone in political affairs, strove for that reason to win to their side the Germans, who were scattered about the country and commended themselves by their retired, industrious, and frugal manner of life. The Quakers have never gone very far from Philadelphia, individual members of the sect not liking to settle far from the rest, but preferring to draw together in little colonies. It was therefore a policy with them to be on good terms with the outlying inhabitants and they found it easier to come by their ends through a good understanding with the Germans, since these together outnumbered any one of the other nationalities among the colonists, English, Scottish, Irish, and Swedish. The ancestors of these Germans came to America all in similar circumstances, as indeed many have come during and since the war. That is to say, they left the fatherland out of poverty or in the hope at least of finding better fortune, able to grow rich with less trouble. Many of them, indeed very many of them, have seen their desires fulfilled, although at first they were obliged to bind themselves out for a term of years so as to pay the cost of the voyage, if, as it often happened, they did not bring with them property in that amount. From very insignificant beginnings the most of them have come to good circumstances, and many have grown rich. For here the poor man who is industrious finds opportunities enough for gain, and there is no excuse for the slothful. Where a German settles, there commonly are seen industry and economy, more than with others, all things equal—his house is better-built and warmer, his land is better fenced, he has a better garden, and his stabling is especially superior; everything about his farm shows order and good management in all that concerns the care of the land. The Germans are known throughout America as an industrious people, but particularly those of them that come over from Europe, and in all the provinces it is desired that their numbers increase, they being everywhere valued as good citizens, and I dare say that Pennsylvania is envied for the greater number of them settled there, since it is universally allowed that without them Pennsylvania would not be what it is. The greater part of the German emigrants were originally of humble origin and meagre education, nor have they or their descendants greatly changed in their principles of action. On the whole they show little or no zeal to bring themselves up in any way except by small trade or handicrafts or farming. To use their gains for allowable pleasures, augmenting the agreeableness of life, this very few of them have learned to do, and others with a bad grace. The lucre is stuck away in old stockings or puncheon chests until opportunity offers to buy more land which is the chief object of their desires. In their houses, in the country especially, they live thriftily, often badly. There is wanting among them the simple unaffected neatness of the English settlers, who make it a point, as far as they are able, to live seemly, in a well-furnished house, in every way as comports with the gentleman. The economy of the German farmer in Pennsylvania, is precisely the same as that customary in Germany—even when his next neighbor every day sets him a better example. A great four-cornered stove, a table in the corner with benches fastened to the wall, everything daubed with red, and above, a shelf with the universal German farmer's library; the Almanack, and Song-book, a small 'Garden of Paradise,' Habermann, and the Bible. It is in vain to look for other books, whereas in the cabins of the English there are not seldom seen, at the least, fragments of the Spectator, journals, magazines, or dictionaries."

FIRST ROAD LAID OUT IN 1735.

The first road laid out in what is now Lehigh county, then a part of Bucks county, was in 1735. It began at a black oak tree situated at a corner where the lands of Peter Trexler and Henry Shade adjoined, about a quarter of a mile northwest of Breinigsville, in Upper Macungie, where John Smith now lives. At or near this point Jeremiah Trexler had a tavern already at this early date, his father, Peter Trexler, having purchased the land in 1729.

The road passed through the present site of Breinigsville and Weiler's Store, crossed the Little Lehigh, and passed through what is now Macungie, Shimersville, Old and New Zionsville, over the hills through Hosensack, Krausdale, and Geryville, into Montgomery county to North Wales, where it joined the road leading from New Goshenhoppen to Philadelphia. The district of New Goshenhoppen extended from Treichlersville to Sumneytown, north and south and from the Bucks county line to the Perkomen, east and west, and was so called to distinguish it from Old Goshenhoppen, further south. The name is derived from Enschockhoppa and Shakahoppa, two Indian chiefs who owned tracts of land in the vicinity. Hoppenville is a name derived from it. The survey of the road, and the proceedings of the Provincial Council regarding it were as follows:

"A Return of the Road laid out from Maconsie to the Road leading from New Quessohoppen thro' North Wales to Philadelphia, pursuant to an Order of this Board, bearing date the 27th day of March last, being this day read in these Words:

"To the Honble the Governor and Council.

"In Pursuance of an Order from the Honble Board of the 27th March, 1735, having viewed the Road leading from Maquenusie to the Road leading from New Cosshoppa, thro' North Wales to Philadia, we do find there is great Occasion for the said Road, and accordingly have caused the same to be laid out. The Courses and Distances whereof are as followeth, vizt: Beginning at a marked black Oak Tree, at a Corner of the Lands of Peter Traxler and Henry Sheat, in Maquenusie aforesaid, Thence extending South Sixty seven Degrees, East fifty six perches, to a Post, Thence along the Line dividing Peter Traxler and Jeremiah Traxler's Lands, South twenty seven Degrees, East one hundred perches, to a marked Hickory, Thence by vacant Land crossing a Branch of Lehy Creek, South seventy one Degrees, East eight hundred and fifty four perches, to a marked Hickory and White Oak Standing together on a barren Hill; Thence South sixty two Degs. 30 Mints., East, Crossing another Branch of Lehy, Four hundred and eighty four pchs to a marked black Oak; Thence South fifty three Degrees, East crossing another Branch of the same Creek, two hundred & forty pchs to a marked black Oak; Thence South fifty six Degrees 30 Mints, East crossing another Branch of the same Creek, Eighty pchs to marked White Oak; Thence South sixty one Degrees 30 mints, East eighty six pchs to a Post; Thence South fourteen Degs, East one hundred and forty two pchs to a marked Hickory; Thence along the land of Derick Jansen, South twenty nine Degs, East Sixty two pchs to a Post South one Deg. West twenty six pchs, to a marked Chestnut, South nineteen Degs, East eighty six pchs, to a marked black Oak; Thence along the Land of Christian Crawl & vacant Land, South twenty eight Degs, East one hundred & eighty pchs to a marked Chestnut, South East eighty four pchs, to a Post, South eighty nine Degs, East forty four pchs to a Post, South sixty nine Degs, East along Vacant Land and John Myer's Land, & crossing a Branch of Perkiomy Creek two hundred & one pchs to a Post, Thence South thirty six Degrees, East forty eight Perches, to a small Hickory marked, South two Degs, East Seventy four pchs to a Post, South eighteen Degs, East fifty four Perches to a marked Hickory, South three Degs, East forty perches, (part along Dewaldt Maighling's Land,) Thence along the same Land South one Deg. East ninety seven perches, to a marked black Oak, Thence South twenty nine Degs, West sixty six pchs to a marked Chestnut, Thence South three Degs, East twenty six pchs to a marked Hickory, Thence South twenty one Degs, East forty pchs, part along Henry Geb-er's Land, South fifteen Degs, West thirty two pchs to a marked Hickory, South forty nine Degs, East twenty pchs, to a marked Hickory, South nine Degs, East thirty eight pchs, to a marked white Oak, South ni e Degs, West twelve pchs to a Post, South thirty eight Degs, (crossing another Branch of Perkeomy Creek,) sixty four pchs to a Post, South four Degs, West along vacant Land fifty four Perches to a Post, South thirty eight Degrees, East twenty pchs to a Post, South fifty nine Degs, East one hundred & two pchs to a Post, South five Degs, West one hundred & two pchs to a marked Chestnut, South twenty five Degs, East twenty pchs to a Post, South forty, East fifty two pchs to a marked Red Oak, Thence along Peter Walber's Land, South nine Degs, West forty perches to a marked Red Oak, South twenty three Degs, West thirty six pchs to a marked Hickory in the Line dividing between Walber and Ulrich Ries, Thence along the same Line South, crossing two small swamps eighty pchs to a Post, Thence along sd Walber's Land South fourteen Degs, East sixty pchs to a Post, in a Line leading near sd Walber's house; Thence along the same Lane South fifteen Degs, East crossing a Small branch sixty pchs to a marked White Oak, Thence by the Land of Alexr. Tippen, South twenty seven Degs, East eighty two pchs to a Post, Thence by Land of Leonard Knup, South forty one Degs, East Sixty eight pchs to a post, (all the above Courses in Burks County.) Thence by the Lands of sd Knup & George Smitt, and of Robert Thomas, in the German Tract, South nine Degs, East (crossing the line dividing between the Counties of Bucks and Philadia, at the Distance of one hundred and sixty pchs,) Six hundred and forty perches to a marked Tree, Thence along Robert Thomas' Lands, South ten Degs thirty Minutes, West sixty pchs, to a small black Oak marked near sd Roberts Lane, Thence North sixty five Degs, East crossing another Branch of Perkeomy sixteen pchs, to a marked white Oak South twenty Degs, East one hundred and fifty four perches to a marked white Oak, South sixty one Degs, East sixty pchs, to a Post, Thence along the Lands of the sd Robert Thomas & Danl. Levar South seven Degs, East one hundred & thirty two pchs to a Post, Thence along Levar's Land South twenty three Degs, East one hundred & sixty pchs to a marked white Oak, thence South one Deg, East sixty pchs to a marked white Oak, thence South nineteen Degs, West thirty six pchs to a marked white Oak, Thence along Bartell Kuchar's Land, South fifty five Degs, West fourteen pchs to a Post, South twelve Degs, East fifty six pches to a marked Hickery, South one Deg, 30 Mints, West seventy eight pchs to a Post, Thence South twenty Degs, West one hundred and twenty four pchs to a marked white Oak, Thence along the land of Christopher Newman, South Six Degs, 30 Mints, East forty pchs to a Post, South thirty Degs, East forty pches to a marked black Oak, Thence along vacant Land South twenty eight Degs, 30 Mints, East thirty four pches to a marked white Oak, Thence South nine Degs, East eighty perches, to a marked black Oak, Thence South thirty six Degs, West forty six pches to a marked Hickery, Thence along Martin Ter's Land, South twenty five Degs, West twenty six pches to a Post, South five Degs, East thirty six pches to a Post, Thence South ten Degs, East seventy two pches to a marked white Oak, South twenty one Degs, East forty four pches to a Post on the North West side of the said road leading from Cossheoppa, thro' North Wales to Philadia, opposite to a marked white Oak, near a great Rock on the South East side of the same Road, Laid out the 16th day of August, Ao. Di., 1735.

his
 "ROBERT X. THOMAS,
 Mark
 "JOHN ROBERTS,
 "HUGH EVANS,
 "JAN. JANSEN."

The Board on Due Consideration had of the said Return, and of the Draught accompanying it, doth approve and Confirm the Road, laid out as in the said Return mentioned, which is hereby declared to be the King's Highway or Public Road, and It is ordered that the same be forthwith cleared & rendered commodious for the Public Service."

UPPER MILFORD TOWNSHIP ORGANIZED.

The first township organized in the territory now Lehigh county was that of Upper Milford, embracing the present townships of Upper and Lower Milford. On June 10, 1737, Peter Walber, Ulrich Reaser, Mathias Ochs, Johannes Meyer, Joseph Henckel, Daniel Rausch, Heinrich Wilhelm Dillinger, Heinrich Riesz, Christian Biegel, William Bitz, Jacob Wetzel, Johannes Beltzart, Theobald Mechlin, Johannes Post, Melchior Stecher, Michael Koehler, Felix Brunner, Jacob Derry, Michael Zimmerman, William Langhorst, Martin Weitknecht, Johannes Baumgaertner and Hannes Ord presented a petition to the Bucks county court, then sitting at Newtown, asking for the section of country in which they lived to be laid out in a township. The new township was surveyed by John Chapman and named Upper Milford. The present township of Milford in Bucks county was then called Lower Milford. The surveyor's report to the court was as follows:

"By virtue of an order of last court to me directed, and at the request of the inhabitants, these may certify that I have surveyed and laid out the said township, beginning at the northeast corner of Milford township at a chestnut, being the corner of the said township and then running northwest over Lawick hills, six miles from the said corner of said township to a marked white oak, then south west along the back side 300 chains, then to the top and over the hill to five miles and a half to the county line to a heap of stones, then down the county line southeast six miles to the other corner of Milford township, then along the said township line northeast five miles and a half to the place of beginning. Surveyed the 13th day of the first month, (March) 1738.

JOHN CHAPMAN, Surveyor".

The territory, according to Chapman's survey, contained thirty-three square miles, or 21, 120 acres.

SAUCON TOWNSHIP ORGANIZED.

A number of the inhabitants of Upper Saucun petitioned the Bucks county court for the establishment of a township, as follows:

"To the Worshipful the Justices of the Court of Quarter Sessions, held at Newtown the Seventeenth day of June, 1742.

"Several of the Inhabitants on and near Saucun, Humbly Sheweth, That we were desirous that a township might be laid out and last April the surveyor being here, conveniently sitting, we got him to lay out a township and we the subscribers humbly crave that your Honours would be pleased to confirm the same, and we the Inhabitants in the said place unanimously agree to call the township Saucun. And we, the Subscribers, as in duty bound shall ever acknowledge."

Christian Newcomb	John Yoder
Philip Kisinger	John Reeser
George Sobus	Christian Smith
Henry Rinkard	Henry Bowman
Samuel Newcomb	Joseph Samuel
Benidick Koman	William Murry
Felty Staymetz	Michael Weber
Henry Rinkard, Jur.	John Apple
George Troon	Jacob Gongwer
Adam Wanner	Henry Keiber
Owen Owen	George Bachman
Thos. Owen	George Marksteler
John Williams	Henry Rumpfled
John Tool	Isaac Samuel
John Thomas

The petition is endorsed, "Petition from Saukunk, 1742," and in March, 1743, the township was ordered to be erected.

MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP ORGANIZED.

Macungie township was the next to be organized. Edward Scull surveyed the proposed township at the request of the inhabitants on Jan. 28, 1742, and on June 16, 1743, they presented their petition to the Bucks county court, as follows:

"To the Honourable Justices of the Peace holding Court at Newtown, the Sixteenth day of June, 1743:

"The humble petition of us, the Inhabitants of Macongy, humbly sheweth that your Petitioners lived this many years without any Township layd out but have been at the charge of having it surveyed. We desire that you in your goodness would be pleased to confirm the same unto us, your Petitioners, according to this Draught annexed, and your Petitioners as per Duty bound, shall ever Pray."

Peter Tracksler	Melchor Smith
Henry Shoeth	George Stininger
Jere, Tracksler	Jacob Mier
Jere Tracksler	George Hayn
Frederick Romig	Adam Koch
Peter Walbert, Jun.	Casper Mier
Philip Smier	Kayde Grim
Joseph Allbright	John Clymer
Jacob Wagner	Adam Brous

The court records state: "Petition read June, 1743, from Macungie for a township. Ordered that the Prayer of the Petitioners be granted unless some reasons be offered to the Court against it.

"Boundaries of Macungie township, 1743. The Petition of Divers Inhabitants was read shewing that the Petitioners have lived many years without a township, but have now been at the charge of surveying and they pray that it may be confirmed, according to ye Draft annexed, that is, Beginning at a White Oak at the upper corner of Milford township, thence by ye same township, southwest 1920 perches to a post in ye County line, thence by ye said line northwest 2600 perches to a post, thence by vacant land, northeast 320 perches to a post, southeast 200 perches to a post, northeast 1600 perches to a chestnut oak and southeast 2400 perches to the beginning. 21, 200 acres. Ordered that the prayer be granted unless it may be shewn to the contrary."

In this year, 1743, the township contained six hundred and fifty inhabitants. These three townships were the only ones erected while Lehigh county was a part of Bucks county.

NORTHAMPTON COUNTY ORGANIZED, 1752.

Northampton county, at the time of its division from Bucks, embraced all the land contained in the counties of Northampton, Lehigh, Carbon, Monroe, Pike, Wayne, and Susquehanna, and parts of Wyoming, Luzerne, Schuylkill, Bradford and Columbia. The project of a division of Bucks county had been discussed as early as 1745. The upper portion of the county was inhabited by Germans who affiliated politically with the Quakers. The proprietary party therefore planned the erection of a new county, and, by setting off the Germans in a new county, deprive the Quakers of their support, and thus restore the control of old Bucks to the government party. The Quakers were inclined to make a strong and determined opposition to the project, but the Germans, who objected to the remoteness of the county-seat, Newtown, and who believed they could control the affairs of the new county as easily as they had those of the old one, were in favor of the proposition.

Thomas Penn wrote to Governor Hamilton on Feb. 25, 1750: "I am greatly alarmed to find that the Germans behave so insolently at the elections; they must, no doubt, do so from the numbers given them at the back counties. The taking of counties from Bucks and Philadelphia will take off our settlements, and leave them only two members of eight, and prevent them, for many years, from having a majority."

The first petition, which was signed by a great number of the inhabitants of the upper part of Bucks county, was presented to the Assembly by William Craig, on May 11, 1751. It was read the second time on June 16th, and on the 5th, 6th, 11th, 18th, 20th, 21st and 22nd of February, 1752, it was the subject of debate. It finally passed on March 6th, and was signed by Governor James Hamilton on March 11, 1752. The act read as follows:

"Whereas, a great number of the inhabitants of the upper parts of the county of Bucks, by their petition, have hereby represented to the Governor and the Assembly of this province, the great hardships they lay under, by being so remote from the present seat of judicature and the public offices; that the necessary means to be used for obtaining justice is attended with so much difficulty and expense, that many forego their right, rather than attempt the recovery of it under such circumstances; while others, sensible of these difficulties, commit great villainies with impunity. For remedying whereof, and for the relief of the inhabitants, Be it enacted by the Hon. James Hamilton, Lieutenant-Governor, under the Hon. Thomas Penn and Richard Penn, true and solvent Proprietaries of the province of Pennsylvania, and of the counties of New Castle, Kent, and Sussex, upon Delaware, by and with the advice and consent of the representatives of the freemen of the said province, in General Assembly met, and by authority of the same, that all and singular the lands, lying within the province of Pennsylvania aforesaid, be erected into a county; and the same is hereby erected into a county, named and hereinafter to be called Northampton; to be divided from the county of Bucks by the upper, or northwestern line of Durham tract, to the upper corner thereof; thence to be run by a straight line southwestwardly to the line dividing the township of Upper and Lower Milford; thence along the said line to the line dividing Philadelphia and Bucks counties; and thence by a line to the extremities of the said province."

The Assembly did not name the new county, but Thomas Penn, in a letter to Governor Hamilton, dated London, Sept. 3, 1751, wrote: "Whenever there is a new county, it shall be called Northampton." The seat of Lord Pomfret, whose daughter Thomas Penn had married, was in Northamptonshire, in England.

William Craig was very active in this matter, and was paid £30, in 1754, out of the county funds, for remuneration for loss of time and expense. By the provisions of the act, Easton was made the county seat and Thomas Craig, Hugh Wilson, John Jones, Thomas Armstrong and James Martin, were all, or any of them, empowered as trustees to purchase a site for and build a court house and prison and a sum of money, not to exceed £300, was to be raised, by tax, for that purpose. The influence of the Penns procured the selection of Easton as the seat of justice, and many of the residents of the western portion were greatly dissatisfied, claiming that Easton was even more inaccessible to them than Newtown.

The population of the county at that time, 1752, was about as follows:

Smithfield, formed in 1742,	500
Milford, " " 1742,	700
Upper Saucon, " " 1743,	650
Lower Saucon, " " 1743,	700
Macungie, " " 1746,	650
Bethlehem, " " 1746,	600
Allen, " " 1748,	300
Williams, " " 1750,	200

The territory subsequently formed into the townships of Lynn, Weisenberg, Heidelberg, Lowhill, Whitehall and Salisbury, about,

Other parts of the county, including Easton, 800
 Total, 5,900

Of these, there were about 600 Scotch-Irish in Allen and Mount Bethel townships and 300 Dutch in Smithfield, while the remainder were nearly all Germans.

The first session of court in the county was held at Easton on June 16, 1752, and in the docket is thus recorded:

"At a court of record of our Lord the King, held at Easton, for the county of Northampton, the 16th day of June, in the 26th year of our sovereign Lord George the Second, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, &c., A. D. 1752, before Thomas Craig, Timothy Horsefield, Hugh Wilson, James Martin and William Craig, justices of the Lord the King, the peace in the said county to keep, as also divers trespasses and felonies, and other offences in the said county committed, to hear and determine assigned."

The second court was held Oct. 3, 1752, and at this session the first grand jury was empanelled, consisting of Samuel Depui, foreman; James Ralston, William Casselbury, Robert Gregg, James Horner, John Atkinson, and John Walker, of Allen township; Robert Lyle, Alexander Miller and Michael Moore, of Mount Bethel; Charles Broadhead, Garret Brink, Issac Van Campen and Benjamin Shoemaker, of Smithfield; David Owen and John Cooken, of Upper Saucon; Lewis Merkle, of Macungie and Nathaniel Vernon, of Easton.

The first election was held at Easton on Oct. 1, 1752, when James Burnsides was elected member of the Assembly, William Craig, Sheriff, and Robert Gregg, Peter Trexler and Benjamin Shoemaker, Commissioners.

ORGANIZATION OF OTHER TOWNSHIPS.

At the first court a petition, presented for the erection of Whitehall township, read:

"To the Worshipful the Justices of the County Court of Quarter Sessions held at Easton for the County of Northampton, the 16th June, 1752.

The humble Petition of divers of the Inhabitants of the said county situate in the back parts of Hydeberg and Macongy, sheweth.

That there being a considerable number of Inhabitants settled in the back parts of Hydelberg and Macongy to a large extent and have not yet been formed into a Township. Your Petitioners therefore pray that a line may be run dividing your Petitioners from Hydelberg and Macongy to form a Township.

And your Petitioners shall pray.

Jacob Yont	John Shett
George Kern	Jacob Wirth
Lohrentz Guth	Reynard Benny
John Troxell

Petition for a new Township allowed and Mr. Scull, Surveyor, to run out the lines."

On March 20, 1753, the court records state, "Now, March 20, 1753, Whitehall township is returned and allowed." Heidelberg township was established at the same time.

Weisenberg township was established in 1753, in response to a petition presented to the court on March 20th, by Daniel Knauss, Conrad Grimm and Philip Wendel Klein.

Salisbury township was established by the court on June 9, 1753, and on the same day Lynn township was erected. Lowhill township was erected by the court on Dec. 18, 1753, in compliance with a petition presented by Peter Derr.

Hanover township was erected in 1798 out of the lower part of Allen township.

CHAPTER VI.

THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR. 1754-1758.

The French and Indian War, begun in 1754, was the fourth inter-colonial war between the English and French colonists in America. The English population in the colonies then slightly exceeded one million, while the French, who had, as traders, great influence over many of the Indian tribes, numbered one hundred thousand, inhabiting the regions of Nova Scotia, the St. Lawrence, and a line of trading posts in the valley of the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico. Outwardly there was peace, but inward war, between the colonists and it needed only a small matter to kindle the flame of hostilities. After the capture of Louisburg in 1745, the French had taken measures to extend and strengthen their dominion in America. They built, in 1753, Fort Presque Isle, on the site of the present city of Erie; Fort Le Boeuf, where the village of Waterford, Erie county, is located; and in April, 1754, Fort Machault, usually called Venango or French creek. These encroachments alarmed the English, and late in 1753, Lieutenant Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia, sent George Washington, then a young man of twenty-one, to the French commander of these forts to demand an explanation of their designs, and he was told that the matter would be laid before the Governor General of Canada for reply but that the country would be held as ordered.

In January, 1754, a company of militia was authorized to co-operate with the Ohio company, an association formed in 1748, in their occupancy of the territory. Under Captain William Trent they arrived at the Forks of the Ohio on February 19, 1754, and proceeded to lay out the ground and erect a fort, but on April 16, 1754, were surprised by a large force of French under Contrecoeur and compelled to surrender. The fortification was completed by the French and named Fort Duquesne in honor of the then Governor General of Canada, Marquis du Quesne.

Orders were immediately dispatched by the British cabinet to the various Governors of the Provinces, directing them to resort to force in defense of their rights and to drive the French from their station on the Ohio. Unsuccessful in their attempt the colonists appealed to the British government, and Major General Edward Braddock was sent with the Forty-fourth and Forty-eighth regiments of Royal troops, each consisting of five hundred men, arriving at Alexandria, Va., on February 20th, 1755. With the addition of Virginia, Maryland, and New York companies of provincial troops, he crossed the Alleghany mountains at the head of twenty-two hundred men, with a train of artillery accompanied by some two hundred Indians. One of the New York companies was commanded by Captain Gates, afterwards the hero of Saratoga. Through the exertions of Dr. Benjamin Franklin, principally, one hundred and fifty wagons and two thousand horses from Pennsylvania were added to Braddock's produce train. Scaroodaya, successor to the Half-King* of the Senecas and Monacatootha, with about one hundred and fifty Senecas and Delawares accompanied him. George Croghan, the Indian agent of Pennsylvania, and Susquehanna Jack, a friendly Indian of great value were also with him. On the morning of July 9, 1755, the little army forded the Monongahela river and advanced in solid platoons along the southern shores of that stream. Colonel Washington, who was an Aid-de-camp to General Braddock, advised him to disperse his army in open order and employ the Indian method of fighting in the forests, but his advice was unheeded. The army marched in fancied security until about noon, when they were suddenly assailed by volleys of bullets and clouds of arrows on their front and flanks. They had fallen into an ambush, against which Washington had vainly warned Braddock. The assailants were French regulars, Canadians and Indians, numbering about one hundred thousand under De Beaujeu, who had been sent from Fort Duquesne by Contrecoeur. The sudden attack and the blood-curdling war-whoop of the Indians, which the British regulars had never heard before, disconcerted them and they fell into great confusion. Braddock took the front and encouraged the men by his voice and example. For more than two hours the battle raged fearfully. Seven hundred and fourteen were killed, and out of eighty-five officers, sixty-four were either killed or wounded. Every field officer, and every one on horseback, except Colonel Washington, was either slain or wounded. Colonel Sir Peter Halket, commanding the Forty-fourth Regiment was killed and Braddock's secretary, Mr. Shirley, was also killed. Washington wrote to his mother: "I luckily escaped unhurt, though I had four bullets through my coat, and two horses shot under me." To his brother he wrote: "By the all powerful dispensation of Providence I have been protected beyond all human probability or expectation. Death was levelling my companions on every side." Braddock had five horses shot under him, and finally fell mortally wounded. Washington, who was left in chief command, rallied the few provincial troops and gallantly covered the retreat. Three days after the battle, July 13, 1755, Braddock died and was buried in the road, for the purpose of concealing his body from the Indians. Washington read the funeral service of the Church of England by torch light at his grave. The loss on the side of the French and their allies was three officers and twenty-five soldiers, with about as many wounded.

*The Half-King died at Paxtang, October 4th, 1754.

By ignoring the conditions of warfare as they then existed on the frontiers, what might have been a victory which would have prevented the loss of thousands of innocent lives, taken by the savages all along the frontiers of the country, became a dreadful defeat. Braddock's defeat on the Monongahela became a by-word in the mouth of every American school child. In 1758, General Forbes led an expedition to Fort Duquesne and the garrison, reduced to five hundred men, set it on fire and fled down the Ohio in boats with such haste and confusion that they left every thing behind them. The name was then changed to Fort Pitt in honor of the great English statesman, and was the beginning of the city of Pittsburgh. The defeat of Braddock left the frontiers of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia in unutterable gloom. With one accord the Indian tribes rose against the English. From now on until late in 1758, when the French departed, there was one continuous series of surprises, attacks, of killings and of captivity. From the abstract of dispatches received from Canada, officially, from the Governor General, we learn that the Governor General remained at Montreal, in order to be in a more convenient position to harass the English during the winter, and to make preparations for the next campaign. With this double object he directed his efforts principally to gaining the Indians, and flattered himself that he generally succeeded. One dispatch read: "All the nations of the Beautiful River have taken up the hatchet against the English." A party of two hundred and fifty Indians, which sub-divided into four squads, fell on the settlements of Pennsylvania. One of these parties was composed of one hundred and twelve Delawares. They struck in separate divisions. Thirteen returned first, with twenty-one scalps and six prisoners. The remainder of the party took such a considerable number of scalps and prisoners that these Indians sent some to all the nations to replace their dead. Some had actually been on the war path as far as Virginia. It was in all probability one or more bands of these Indians that harassed the settlers in the northern part of Lehigh county.

The first savage outbreak, after the defeat of Braddock, occurred in the month of October, 1755, described as in the Shamokin road over the Kittatinny hill.

On October 30, 1755, Henry Hartman was killed and scalped at his home on the north-side of the mountains.

In the Provincial Council, the following account of Indian outrages up to that time, Dec. 29, 1755, was read by the Secretary:

A BRIEF NARRATIVE OF THE INCURSIONS AND RAVAGES OF THE FRENCH AND INDIANS IN THE PROVINCE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

"Oct. 18th, 1755, a party of Indians fell upon the inhabitants on Mahanahy Creek that runs into the river Sasquehannah about five Miles Lower than the Great Fork made by the Junction of the two main Branches of that river, killed and carried off twenty-five persons, and burnt and destroyed their Buildings and Improvements, and the whole settlement was deserted.

"23rd. Forty-six of the Inhabitants on Sasquehannah went to Shamokin to enquire of the Indians there who they were who had so cruelly fallen upon and ruined the Settlements on Mahanahy Creek, but as they were repassing Mahanahy Creek on their return from Shamokin they were fired upon by some Indians who lay in Ambush, and four were killed, four drowned, and the rest put to flight, on which all the Settlements between Shamokin and Hunter's mill for the space of 50 Miles along the River Sasquehannah were deserted.

"31st. An Indian Trader and two other men in the Tuscarora Valley were killed by Indians, and their Houses, &c., burnt, on which most of the Settlers fled and abandoned their Plantations.

"November 2nd. The Settlement in the Great Cove attacked, their Houses burnt, six Persons murdered and seventeen carried away, and the whole broke up and destroy'd.

"3rd. Two women are carried away from Conegochege by the Indians and the same day the Canalaways and the little Cove, two other considerable settlements were attacked by them, their Houses burnt, and the whole Settlements deserted.

"16th. A party of Indians crossed the Sasquehannah and fell upon the County of Berks, murdered 13 Persons, burnt a great number of Houses, destroyed vast quantities of Cattle, Grain, and Fodder, and laid waste a large extent of Country.

"21st. A fine Settlement of Moravians, called Gnadenhütten, situate in Northampton County, on the West Branch of the river Delaware, was attack'd, six of them killed, and their Dwelling Houses, Meeting house, and all their Outhouses burnt to Ashes, with all the Grain, Hay, Horses, and upwards of forty head of fat Cattle that were under Cover.

"December. During all this Month the Indians have been burning and destroying all before them in the County of Northampton, and have already burnt fifty Houses here, murdered above one hundred Persons, and are still continuing their Ravages, Murders, and Devastations, and have actually overrun and laid waste a great part of that County, even as far as within twenty miles of Easton, its chief Town. And a large Body of Indians, under the Direction of French Officers have fixed their head quarters within the borders of that County for the better security of their Prisoners and Plunder.

"This is a brief account of the progress of these Savages since the Eighteenth day of October, on which day was committed the first Inroad ever made by Indians upon this Province since its first Settlement and in consequence here of all our Frontier Country, which extends from the River Patowmac to the River Delaware, not less than one hundred and fifty miles in length and between twenty and thirty in breadth, but not fully settled, has been entirely deserted, the Houses and improvements reduced to Ashes, the Cattle, Horses, Grain, Goods & Effects of the Inhabitants either destroyed, burned, or carried off by the Indians. Whilst the poor Planters, with their Wives, Children, and servants who could get away, being without arms or any kind of Defence, have been obliged in this severe season of the Year to abandon their Habitations naked and without any support, and threw themselves on the Charity of the other Inhabitants within the interior Parts of the Province, upon whom they are a very heavy Burthen.

"Such shocking Descriptions are given by those who have escaped of the horrid Cruelties and indecencies committed by these merciless Savages on the Bodies of the unhappy wretches who fell into their Barbarous hands, especially the Women, without regard to Sex or Age as far exceeds those related of the most abandoned Pirates; Which has occasioned a general Consternation and has struck so great a Pannick and Damp upon the Spirits of the people, that hitherto they have not been able to make any considerable resistance or stand against the Indians.

"All our accounts agree in this that the French, since the defeat of General Braddock, have gained over to their Interest the Delawares, Shawonese, and many other Indian Nations formerly in our Alliance, and on whom, thro' fear and their large promises of Rewards for Scalps and assurances of re-instating them in the Possession of the Lands they have sold to the English, they have prevailed to take up Arms against us, and to join heartily with them in the execution of the ground they have been long meditating of obtaining, the possession of all the Country between the river Ohio and the river Sasquehannah, and to secure that possession by building a strong Fort at Shamokin, which by its so advantageous situation at the Conflux of the two main Branches of Sasquehannah (one whereof interlocks with the waters of the Ohio, and the other heads in the Center of the Country of the Six Nations) will command and make the French entire Masters of all that extensive, rich and fertile Country and of all the Trade with the Indians. And from whence they can at pleasure enter and annoy our Territories, and put an effectual stop to the future extension of our Settlements on that Quarter, not to mention the many other obvious Mischiefs and fatal consequences that must attend their having a Fort at Shamokin.

"Note.—Some Fachines have been lately discovered floating down the River Sasquehannah a little below Shamokin, by which, as the Indians were never known to use Fachines, it is conjectured the French have begun and are actually building a Fort at that most important place.

"Philada., 29th December, 1755."

INDIAN MASSACRES.

In this year, 1755, Heidelberg township suffered from Indian forays. In Captain Wetherhold's list of persons killed in the townships of Lynn, Heidelberg and Albany, which he made December 21, 1757, occur the names of fifty-six persons killed by Indians in these townships and ten taken prisoners. In the year 1755, John Rood, his servant, George Gorm, Christobel Stoll, John Stoll, Lecock's wife, Richard Lecock, John Sensinger and his mother, Melchior Dinke and his daughter and two other persons were killed.

John Sensinger was the son of Ulrich Sensinger, one of the pioneer settlers of Heidelberg township. He had a family consisting of his wife and four small children, Margaret, Magdalena, Andrew and Barbara, a child of only a few months. For four years after the massacre of Sensinger and his mother, whose name was Mary Catharine, the place where he had lived was deserted, the family having been compelled to live with relatives and the buildings were in bad condition.

Casper Schnerr, who had married the widow, Magdalena Sensinger, then settled upon the place and reared the children of the murdered father.

Melchior Dinke, who had settled in Heidelberg township in 1750, and his wife Catharine, were the parents of four children. The father and one daughter fell victims to Indian brutality, leaving surviving the widow, Catharine Dinke, who afterwards married John Wassum, and Mary, Margaret and Jacob Dinke. This massacre occurred about a mile west of Slatington, in what is now Washington township. The son, Jacob, was two years of age at the time.

A Moravian station had been established in Lynn township and in 1751 a school and meeting-house was erected. On November 1, 1755, George Biebinghausen, of Lynn, stated at Bethlehem that thirty persons had taken refuge in the school house, fearing an attack by Indians.

(George Biebinghausen, or Biwighausen, was born in Elshof, Wittgenstein, in 1708. He came to America in 1739 and married, in 1740, Margaret Hunsicker. He was a wheelright by profession and was reared in the Reformed faith, but upon settling in Lynn township, became a member of the Moravian church.)

In December, 1755, two men named Kauffman and Hanover were killed in Lynn township. On January 4, 1756, according to one account, a battle with the Indians occurred beyond John Everett's, near the Blue mountains, in which John Bonsinger, Frederick Erb, Peter Puss and Valentine R  ther were killed. Another account which no doubt refers to the same engagement, says that a battle with the Indians occurred in Albany township, on January 8, 1756, in which three men were killed.

In February, 1756, fifteen or sixteen persons were killed in Albany and Lynn townships and several captured. Capt. Wetherhold's list states that on February 7, 1756, "Old Gerhorn was killed and two women and six children were burned in the house by the Indians and Frederick Richelsdorfer his two daughters killed—eleven killed."

David Schultz in his diary says that on the 14th of February fifteen persons were killed by twelve Indians in Allemaengel; one man was Jacob Geer, and that three or four plantations were burned.

Wetherhold's list says further that in February, 1756, "John Groushor his wife William Yet was killed and his son taken prisoner and Boldes Saislove and George Saislove his two sons killed one taken prisoner. Five Killed—2 Prisoner."

In a letter written by Valentine Probst to Jacob Levan, of Maxatawney, dated February 15, 1756, he gives the following account of the murder which Wetherhold dates the 7th of February:

MR. LEVAN:—I cannot omit writing about the dreadful circumstances of our township, Albany. The Indians came yesterday morning, about eight o'clock, to Frederick Reichelderfer's house, as he was feeding his horses, and two of the Indians ran upon him, and followed him into a field ten or twelve perches off; but he escaped and ran towards Jacob Gerhart's house, with a design to fetch some arms. When he came near Gerhart's, he heard a lamentable cry, Lord Jesus, Lord Jesus!—which made him run back towards his own house; but before he got quite home, he saw his house and stable in flames; and heard all the cattle bellowing, and thereupon ran away again.

Two of his children were shot, one of them was found dead in his field, the other was found alive and brought to Hakenbrook's house, but died three hours after. All his grain and cattle are burnt up. At Jacob Gerhart's they have killed one man, two women, and six children. Two children slipped under the bed; one of which was burned; the other escaped, and ran a mile to get to people. We desire help, or we must leave our homes.

Yours,

VALENTINE PROBST.

Mr. Levan immediately repaired to Albany township, but before he reached the scene of horror, additional intelligence was received by him of other murders. In a letter from him to James Read and Jonas Seely, of Reading, he says: "When I had got ready to go with my neighbors from Maxatawny, to see what damage was done in Albany, three men that had seen the shocking affair, came and told me, that eleven were killed, eight of them burnt, and the other three found dead out of the fire. An old man was scalped, the two others, little girls, were not scalped."

The Rev. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, D.D., in the Hallische Nachrichten, tells the soul-stirring story of Frederick Reichelsdorfer, whose two grown daughters had attended a course of instruction, under him, in the Catechism, and been solemnly admitted by confirmation to the communion of the Ev. Lutheran Church, in New Hanover, Montgomery county.

"This man afterwards went with his family some distance into the interior, to a tract of land which he had purchased in Albany township, Berks county. When the war with the Indians broke out, he removed his family to his former residence, and occasionally returned to his farm, to attend to his grain and cattle. On one occasion he went, accompanied by his two daughters, to spend a few days there, and bring away some wheat. On Friday evening, after the wagon had been loaded, and everything was ready for their return on the morrow, his daughters complained that they felt anxious and dejected, and were impressed with the idea that they were soon to die. They requested their father to unite with them in singing the familiar German funeral hymn,

"Wer weiss wie nahe mein Ende?"
(Who knows how near my end may be?)

after which they commended themselves to God in prayer, and retired to rest.

The light of the succeeding morn beamed upon them, and all was yet well. Whilst the daughters were attending to the dairy, cheered with the joyful hope of soon meeting their friends, and being out of danger, the father went to the field for the horses, to prepare for their departure home. As he was passing through the field, he suddenly saw two Indians, armed with rifles, tomahawks and scalping knives, making towards him at full speed. The sight so terrified him that he lost all-self command, and stood motionless and silent. When they were about twenty yards from him, he suddenly, and with all his strength, exclaimed "Lord Jesus, living and dying, I am thine!" Scarcely had the Indians heard the words "Lord Jesus" (which they probably knew as the white man's name of the Great Spirit), when they stopped short, and uttered a hideous yell.

The man ran with almost supernatural strength into the dense forest, and by taking a serpentine course, the Indians lost sight of him, and relinquished the pursuit. He hastened to an adjoining farm, where two German families resided, for assistance, but on approaching near it, he heard the dying groans of the families, who were falling beneath the murderous tomahawks of some other Indians.

Having providentially not been observed by them, he hastened back to learn the fate of his daughters. But, alas! on arriving within sight, he found his home and barn enveloped with flames. Finding that the Indians had possession here too, he hastened to another adjoining farm for help. Returning, armed with several men, he found the house reduced to ashes, and the Indians gone. His eldest daughter had been almost entirely burnt up, a few remains only of her body being found. And, awful to relate, the younger daughter, though the scalp had been cut from her head, and her body horribly mangled from head to foot with the tomahawk, was yet living. "The poor worm," says Muhlenberg, "was able to state all the circumstances of the dreadful scene." After having done so she requested her father to stoop down to her that she might give him a parting kiss, and then go to her dear Saviour: and after she had impressed her dying lips upon his cheek, she yielded her spirit into the hands of that Redeemer, who, though His judgments are often unsearchable, and His ways past finding out, has nevertheless said, "I am the resurrection and the life, if any man believe in me, though he die yet shall he live."

Frederick Reichelderfer's name occurs in the tax list of Albany township, Berks county, in the year 1752. Jacob Gerhart also lived in Albany township. The name Groushor should probably be Kraushar and Yet should be Yeth. From indications it appears that they lived in Lynn township. The Seislove family lived in Lynn, where the father, George, took up a warrant for 200 acres of land on Aug. 16, 1738. He had arrived from Germany on Sept. 1, 1736, and spelled his name Zeisloff. He had two brothers, Balthazar and Nicholas, and the three brothers secured warrants for land on the same day.

On May 18, 1755, George "Zeislof" and his wife Catharine were received into the Moravian congregation of Lynn township. His home was located about one mile west of the present village of New Tripoli. The one-story log house, built by Seislove still stands. The building is now weather-boarded but inside can be seen the old, rude shaped logs and in the attic, over the door, is cut a loop hole at an angle to command the entrance. A large fireplace still remains as a relic of the days when wood was the only fuel.

The Moravian records state under date of Feb. 14, 1756: "Two children of George Zeisloff were murdered by the Indians, and a third carried into captivity." Wetherhold's account is ambiguous, but both accounts agree in the number killed. One of the sons killed was named Balthazar Seislove. The Moravian account continues, viz: "On March 24, following, while Zeisloff was fleeing with the remainder of his family, they were set upon by the savages, and he, his wife and four children were killed. They had been advised to flee for safety to Bethlehem, but chose to seek a place of safety elsewhere."

Wetherhold in his list states that in March, 1756, "George Seislove and his Wife and three children were killed the Wife of David Bialmen and two of his children Killed—eight Killed."

woods, and the horses frightened at the firing and terrible yelling of the Indians ran down a hill and brake one of the wagons to pieces. That the enemy killed George Zeisloff and his wife, a lad of twenty, a boy of twelve, also a girl of fourteen years old, four of whom they scalped. That another girl was shot in the neck and through the mouth and scalped, notwithstanding all of which she got off. That a boy was stabbed in three places, but the wounds were not thought to be mortal. That they killed two of the horses, and five are missing, with which it is thought the Indians carried off the most valuable goods that were in the wagon."

The two surviving children of George Seislove were Erhart, aged about 16, and George, aged 4 years.

Zeisloff House in Lynn, Built Prior to 1755

David Schultz in his diary writes that on the 6th of March David Bielman's wife and two children were killed in Allemængle; that on the 22nd William Yeth and his wife were killed and on the 24th George Zeisloff and his wife and three children were murdered.

The Pennsylvania Gazette of April 1, 1756, had the following account of the massacre:

"On the 24th of March following, ten wagons went to Allemængle (Albany) to bring down a family with their effects, and as they were returning, about three miles below George Zeisloff's were fired upon by a number of Indians from both sides of the road; upon which the wagoners left their wagons and ran into the

The estate of Seislove was administered by Peter Trexler, Esq., who petitioned the Court in 1764 for the appointment of a guardian for George, then aged 12 years, when Frederick Romig was appointed. Erhart Seislove was then over 21 and married. In 1768 Erhart Seislove is mentioned in the Lynn tax list as the owner of 150 acres of land. On December 13, 1785, Ehrhart and George Seisloff sold to Burkhard Mosser for £550 the tract of 184 acres. In the deed is stated the fact that they are the only surviving heirs of George Seisloff, who with his wife and five or six children were killed by Indians. The deed was witnessed by Peter Kohler, Esq., and Burkhard Moser, Junior.

David Billman, whose wife and two children were killed, had settled on a tract of 150 acres in Lynn in 1744. Others of the family were Conrad Billman and Jacob Billman, who died in 1779.

In the spring of 1756 a company of volunteers was formed by the frontier inhabitants of Berks and Northampton counties, and contributions were made by the people more safely situated for the support of the soldiers. It was called the Maxetani and Allemänge Freyen Wacht Companies—the Maxatawney and Allemänge Independent Guard. It consisted of 24 men, who served 39 days from April 3 to May 11th. The names of these soldiers were:

Johannes Hergerder, Captain
Casper Schmick, Serg't.

Jacob Tholand	George Jorgon
Georg Bruner	David Mussgenug
Fridrich Zirn	Solomon Bacher
Johannes Klein	Martin Unangst
Peter Münch	Carl Weinmüller
Adam Schnebely	Peter Kiern
Conrad Bauer	George Kuir
Nicholas Dehof	Michael Kraul
Henrich Schweitzer	Nicolaus Arnhold
Conrad Frey	George Sauselin
Johannes N——	Stephen Gooss.
Henrich Fullweiler

The captain was paid five shillings per day; the sergeant two shillings six pence; and the privates sixteen pence. Six pence per day was allowed for rations, and a gill of rum, costing eight pence per quart, was served daily to each man. The total outlay was £104 11 4, the items being as follows, as published in Saur's Germantown paper December 25, 1756:

Dem Captain vor 39 Tage zu 5 Schilling,	£9	15	0
Vor 20 Mann 39 Tage jedem 52 Schilling Lohnung	52	0	0
Dem Sergeant jeden Tag 2 S. 6, Vor 2 mann nur 36 Tag zu 16 Pens des Tages	4	17	6
Vor 1 Mann nur 20 Tag	4	16	0
Vor Kostgeld jeden 6 Pens des tages	1	6	8
Vor jeden ein Tschill Rum des Tages zu 8 P. die Quart	23	15	0
20 Pfund Pulver zu 2 Schilling das Pfund	3	19	2
84 Pfund Bley zu 6 Pens das Pfund	2	0	0
	2	2	0

Summa der Unkosten .. £104 11 0
To meet this expense, collections were made in the spring of 1756, amounting to £96 19 10 as officially published.

Aus dem Township:

Maxetawny	£40	11	0
Towamensing	10	10	11
Solford	10	0	0
Francony	0	7	6
Hetfield	4	11	0
Worcester	8	3	4
Upper Solford	7	13	3
Albany in Berks Co.	8	0	0
Nord Wales	6	8	10
Upper Hanover	0	14	0

Die Summa der Einnahm £96 19 10

Jacob Levan, who engaged the men, advanced the deficiency of £7 11 6. He, with David Schultze, was one of the trustees to receive and disburse the moneys. They rendered the above accounts, made a statement of the character of the work performed by the Guard, and asked for further contributions, on the 17th of November, 1756, all of which was published in the Germantown paper of December 25th. They said:

“Also fehlen noch £7 11 6, welche summa Jacob Levan, weil er die Companie gedigen, bisher von seinem eigenem Geld hat zu setzen müssen, und auch verlieren muss, so nicht noch einige Freunde etwas beytragen.

“Diese Wacht Companie ist diè obgamelte Zeit sorgfältig an den Grentzen postirt gewesen, um die Gegend von Albany Taunschip, in Bercks County, und haben biss weilen gestreift biss in Linn Taunschip, Northampton Country; sonst aber sind sie sonderlich nachtzeit in Theil vertheilt gewesen, so dass nur 3 Mann in einem Hauss postiret waren, damit sie einen desto grossern Bezirck bewachen, und so viel mehr Leuten dienen konten, weil dazumal die Einwohner mit einern solchen vorlich nahmen, und es damit wagten, dass sie auf ihren Plätzen aushilten und also die Sommer-Frucht aussähen konten; also auch ihre Fensen repariren, woran die Companie auch selbst behüfflich gewesen.

“JACOB LEVAN

“DAVID SCHULTZE .

“als Trustees.

“Maxetany, den 17 November, Anno 1756.”

These outrages on the frontier aroused the authorities to action and Governor Morris sent Benjamin Franklin, one of the Commissioners, to direct the building of a chain of forts, along the Blue mountains, reaching from the Delaware to the Susquehanna, at distances of from ten to fifteen miles apart. Sometimes the chain of defenses ran on the south side of the range, then again on the north side, and frequently both sides of the mountains were occupied, as the needs of the population demanded. Some of these forts consisted of the defenses previously erected by the settlers, which were available for the purpose, and of which the government took possession, while others were newly erected. Almost without exception they were composed of a stockade of heavy planks, inclosing a space of ground more or less extensive, on which were built from one to four blockhouses, pierced with loop holes for musketry, and occupied as quarters by the soldiers and refugee settlers. In addition to these regular forts it became necessary at various points, where depredations were most frequent, to have subsidiary places of defense and refuge, which were also garrisoned by soldiers and which generally comprised farm houses, selected because of their superior strength and convenient location, around which the usual stockade was thrown, or occasionally block houses erected for the purpose. The soldiers who garrisoned these forts were Provincial troops, which almost without exception were details from the First Battalion of the Pennsylvania Regiment, under the command of that brave and energetic officer, Lieut. Colonel Conrad Weiser.

The ravages of the Indians excited the whole population and in their alarm and terror many unreasonable demands were made of the Government. Governor Morris apparently became somewhat discouraged as appears from a letter written by him at Reading to the Council at Philadelphia on January 5, 1756, saying:

"Gentlemen:

"I have only Time by the Return of the Express to acknowledge the receipt of your Favour, and to approve of what you have done since I left you.

"I beg you wou'd open all Letters that come to me upon his Majesty's Service, and in every case do what you think most for his Majesty's Service and the good of the Public, of which you are very good Judges. The Commissioners have done everything that was proper in the County of Northampton, but the People are not satisfied, nor, by what I can learn from the Commissioner, would they be unless every Man's House was protected by a Fort and a Company of Soldiers, and themselves paid for staying at home and doing nothing. There are in that County at this Time three hundred Men in Pay of the Government, and yet from Disposition of the Inhabitants, the Want of Conduct in the Officers and of Courage and Discipline in the Men, I am fearful that whole County will fall into the Enemy's Hands.

"Yesterday and the Day before I received the melancholy News of the Destruction of the Town of Gnadenhütten, and of the greatest part of the Guard of forty Men placed there in order to erect a Fort. The particulars you will see by the inclosed Papers, so far as they are yet come to hand, but I am in hourly Expectation of further Intelligence by two Men that I dispatched for that Purpose upon the first News of the Affair, whose long stay makes me apprehend some mischief has befallen them.

"Last night an Express brought me an acct. that seven Farm Houses between Gnadenhütten and Nazareth were on the First Instant burnt, about the same time that Gnadenhütten was, and some of the People destroyed, and the accounts are this day confirmed.

"Upon this fresh alarm it is proposed that one of the Commissioners return to Bethlehem and Easton, and there give fresh Directions to the Troops and post them in the best Manner for the Protection of the remaining Inhabitants.

"I am very busy in preparing the necessary Orders and Instructions upon this new Turn in the Affairs, and can therefore only wish you all Health and Happiness.

"And am, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble Servant,

"ROBT. H. MORRIS."

Franklin and James Hamilton arrived at Easton on December 29, 1755, and William Parsons was appointed Major of the troops raised in Northampton county, as is shown by the following letter:

ORDERS TO CAPTS. MARTIN & CRAIG

1755.

Easton, 29 December, 1755.

"SIR:

"As I think it will be for the Good of the Service in general that the Troops raised in the County of Northampton, should be under the Care and Superintendence of a Field Officer, I have with that View in virtue of the power granted me, appointed William Parsons, Esquire, to be Major of the said Troops. You are therefore to observe and follow all such orders and directions as you shall from time to time receive from him, touching the Marches or other Service of the Company, under your immediate Command. Anything in your Commission or Instructions to the contrary notwithstanding.

"I am, Sir,

"Your most h. s.

"J. HAMILTON."

Franklin was selected to direct the erection of a fort above the gap in the Lehigh and left for Bethlehem, from which place he wrote to the Governor, as follows:

BENJ. FRANKLIN TO GOV. 1756.

Bethlehem, Jany. 14, 1756.

"SIR:

"As we drew near this Place we met a Number of Waggons, and many People moving off with their Effects and Families from the Irish Settlement and Lehi Township, being terrified by the Defeat of Hay's Company, and the Burnings & Murders committed in the Township on New Year's Day. We found this Place fill'd with Refugees, the Workmen's Shops and even Cellars being crowded with Women & Children; and we learnt that Lehi Township is almost entirely abandoned by the Inhabitants. Soon after my arrival here, the principal People of the Irish Settlement, as Wilson, elder Craig, &c, came to me and demanded an Addition of 30 Men to Craig's Company, or threaten'd they would immediately one and all leave that Country to the Enemy. Hay's Company was reduc'd to 18 Men, (and those without Shoes, Stockings, Blankets or Arms,) partly by the Loss at Gnadenhütten, and partly by Desertion. Trump and Aston had made but slow Progress in building the First Fort, complaining for want of Tools, which it was thought the People in these Parts might have Supply'd them with. Wayne's Company we found posted at Nazareth agreeable to your Honour's Orders. I immediately directed Hays to compleat his Company, and he went down to Bucks County with Mr. Beatty, who promised to assist him in Recruiting. His Lieutenant lies here lame with frozen Feet, and unfit for Action; But the Ensign with the 18 Men is posted among the Present Frontier Inhabitants to give some Satisfaction to the Settlement People, as I refus'd to increase Craig's Company. In my turn, I have threaten'd to disband or remove the companies already posted for the Security of particular Townships, if the People would not stay on their Places, behave like Men, do something for themselves, and assist the Province Soldiers. The Day after my Arrival here, I sent off 2 Waggons loaded with Bread, and some Axes for Trump & Aston, to Nazareth, escorted by Lieut. Davis, and the 20 Men of McLaughlin's that came with me; I ordered him to remain at Nazareth to guard that Place while Capt. Wayne whose Men were fresh proceeded with the Convoy. To secure Lyn and Heidelberg Township, whose Inhabitants were just on the Wing, I took Trexler's Company into Pay, (he had been before commission'd by Mr. Hamilton) and I commission'd Wetterholt, who commanded a Watch of 44 Men before in the Pay of the Province, ordering him to compleat his Company. I have also allow'd 30 Men to secure the Township of Upper Smithfield, and commission'd Van Etten and Hinshaw as Captain and Lieutenant. And in order to execute more speedily the first Design of erecting a Fort near Gnadenhütten to compleat the Line and get the Rangers in Motion, I have rais'd another Company under Capt. Charles Foulk, to join with Wayne in that Service; and as Hays I hear is not likely soon to recruit his Company, I have ordered Orndt to come up from Rockland in Bucks County to strengthen this Part of the Province, convoy Provisions, &c. to the Company, who are and will be at work over the Mountains, and quiet the Inhabitants who seem terrified out of their Senses.

"The Arms & Blankets wrote for to New York are not yet arriv'd; but I hear that 100 Guns & 150 Blankets are on the Road, sent me by Mr. Colden; those of Mr. Walton's being sold before. I have consulted Mr. Parsons, and if the Waggons come to-Day, it is proposed that I proceed to-morrow with Wayne's Company, which is return'd, Foulk's, and the 20 Men of McLaughlin's to Gnadenhütten, to lay out the intended Fort, and endeavor to get it dispatch'd. Capt. Wayne tells me that Trump expects the first Fort will be finished next Week; I hope to get this done as soon, having more Tools, tho' at this Season it seems to be fighting against Nature. But I imagine 'tis absolutely necessary to get the Ranging Line of Forts compleated that the People may be secur'd as soon as possible in their Habitations, and the internal Guards and Companies dismissed, otherwise the Expence & Loss to the Province will be intolerable.

"I want much to hear the Event of the proposed Treaty, and the Determination your Honour and the Commissioners may have come to, for the Encouragement of Volunteer Scalping Parties.

"I am, with dutiful Respect, Sir,

"BENJAMIN FRANKLIN."

"Govr. Morris.

"P. S.—If you should think fit to pass the Regulars at Easton & in Smithfield Township, I think they would be of use there, & so far on their Way to Albany, when they are to return in the Spring."

In addition to the official report made by Franklin, showing how he was gradually bringing order out of chaos, we have also his private account in his autobiography of what took place at Bethlehem and how, in person, he went to Gnadenhütten and superintended the erection of Fort Allen. In his usual modest way he says:

"While the several companies in the city and country were forming, and learning their exercise, the Governor prevailed with me to take charge of the northwestern frontier, which was infested by the enemy, and provide for the defence of the inhabitants by raising troops, and building a line of forts. I undertook this military business, though I did not conceive myself well qualified for it. He gave me a commission with full powers, and a parcel of blank commissions for officers, to be given to whom I thought fit. I had but little difficulty in raising men, having soon five hundred and sixty under my command. My son, who had in the preceding war been an officer in the army raised against Canada, was my aid-de-camp and of great use to me. The Indians had burned Gnadenhütten, a village settled by the Moravians, and massacred the inhabitants; but the place was thought a good situation for one of the forts. In order to march thither, I assembled the companies at Bethlehem, the chief establishment of those people. I was surprised to find it in so good a posture of defence; the destruction of Gnadenhütten had made them apprehend danger. The principal buildings were defended by a stockade; they had purchased a quantity of arms and ammunition from New York, and had even placed quantities of small paving stones between the windows of their high stone houses, for their women to throw them down upon the heads of any Indians that should attempt to force their way into them. The armed brethren too kept watch, and relieved each other on guard methodically as in any garrison town. In conversation with the bishop, Spangenberg, I mentioned my surprise; for knowing they had obtained an act of parliament exempting them from military duties in the colonies, I had supposed they were conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms. He answered me, 'That it was not one of their established principles; but at the time of their obtaining that act it was thought to be a principle with many of their people. On this occasion, however, they, to their surprise, found it adopted by but few.' It seems they were either deceived in themselves, or deceived the parliament; but common sense, aided by present danger, will sometimes be too strong for whimsical opinions.

"It was the beginning of January, 1756, when we set out upon this business of building forts.

I sent one detachment towards the Minisink, with instructions to erect one for the security of that upper part of the country; and another to the lower part with similar instructions; and I concluded to go myself with the rest of my forces to Gnadenhütten, where a fort was thought more immediately necessary. The Moravians procured me five wagons for our tools, stores, baggage, &c. Just before we left Bethlehem, eleven farmers, who had been driven from their plantations by the Indians, came to me requesting a supply of fire arms, that they might go back and bring off their cattle. I gave them each a gun with suitable ammunition. We had not marched many miles before it began to rain, and it continued raining all day. There were no habitations on the road to shelter us, till we arrived near night at the house of a German, where, and in his barn, we were all huddled together as wet as water could make us. It was well we were not attacked in our march for our arms were of the most ordinary sort, and the men could not keep the locks of their guns dry. The Indians are dextrous in their contrivances for that purpose, which we had not. They met that day the eleven poor farmers above mentioned, and killed ten of them; the one that escaped informed us that his and his companions' guns would not go off, the priming being wet with the rain. The next day being fair, we continued our march, and arrived at the desolate Gnadenhütten; there was a mill near, round which were left several pine boards, with which we soon hutted ourselves; an operation the more necessary at that inclement season, as we had no tents. Our first work was to bury more effectually the dead we found there, who had been half interred by the country people; the next morning our fort was planned and marked out, the circumference measuring four hundred and fifty-five feet, which would require as many palisades to be made, one with another of a foot diameter each. Each pine made three palisades of eighteen feet long, pointed at one end. When they were set up, our carpenters built a platform of boards all round within, about six feet high, for the men to stand on when to fire through the loop holes. We had one swivel gun, which we mentioned on one of the angles, and fired it as soon as fixed, to let the Indians know, if any were within hearing, that we had such pieces; and thus our fort (if that name may be given to so miserable a stockade) was finished in a week, though it rained so hard every other day that the men could not well work.

"This kind of fort, however contemptible, is a sufficient defence against Indians who had no cannon. Finding ourselves now posted securely, and having a place to retreat to on occasion, we ventured out in parties to scour the adjacent country."

Franklin's official report of January 26th, and personal letter to Gov. Morris of January 25th, which give more minute details of the fort, were as follows:

"Fort Allen, at Gnadenhütten, Jan. 25, 1756.
"Dear Sir:

"We got to Hays' the same Evening we left you, and reviewed Craig's Company by the Way. Much of the next morning was spent in exchanging the bad arms for good—Wayne's Company having joined us. We reached, however, that night to Uplinger's, where we got into good Quarters.

"Saturday morning we began to march towards Gnadenhütten, and proceeded near two miles; but it seeming to set in for a rainy day, the Men unprovided with great Coats, and many unable to secure, effectually, their Arms from the wet, we thought it most advisable to face about and return to our former Quarters, where the Men might dry themselves and lie warm; whereas, had they proceeded they would have come in wet to Gnadenhütten where Shelter and Opportunity of drying themselves that night was uncertain. In fact it rain'd all day and we were all pleased that we had not proceeded. The next Day being Sunday, we march'd hither, where we arrived about 2 in the afternoon, and before 5 had inclosed our Camp with a Strong Breast work, Musket Proof, and with the Boards brought here before by my Order from Drucker's mill, got ourselves under some shelter from the Weather. Monday was so dark with a thick Fog all day, that we cou'd neither look out for a Place to build or see where Materials were to be had. Tuesday morning we looked round us, Pitched on a Place, mark'd out our Fort on the Ground, and by 10 o'clock began to cut Timber for Stockades and to dig the Ground. By 3 in the afternoon the Logs were all cut and many of them halled to the Spot, the Ditch dug to Set them in 3 Feet deep, and that Evening many were pointed and set up. The next Day we were hinder'd by Rain most of the Day. Thursday we resum'd our Work and before night were pretty well enclosed, and on Friday morning the Stockade was finished and part of the Platform within erected, which was completed the next morning, when we dismissed Foulk's and Wetterholt's Companies, and sent Hay's down for a Convoy of Provisions. This Day we hoisted your Flag, made a general Discharge of our Pieces, which had been long loaded, and of our two Swivels, and nam'd the Place Fort Allen, in Honour of our old Friend. It is 125 Feet long, 50 wide, the Stockadoes most of them a Foot thick; they are 3 Foot in the Ground and 12 Feet out, pointed at the Top.

"This is an Account of our Week's Work which I thought might give you some satisfaction.

"Foulk is gone to build another, between this and Schuylkill Fort, which I hope will be finished (as Trexler is to Join him) in a Week or 10 Days. As soon as Hays returns I shall detach another Party to erect another at Surfas' which I hope may be finished in the same Time and then I purpose to end my Campaign, God willing, and do myself the Pleasure of seeing you on my Return. I can now add no more than that I am, with great Esteem and affection, Dr. Friend,

"Yours, affectionately,

"B. FRANKLIN.

"The Honorable Robert Hunter Morris, Esquire."

"Fort Allen, At Gnadenhutt.,
"Jany. 26, 1756.

"Sir:

"We left Bethlehem the 10th Instant with Foulk's Company, 46 Men, the Detachment of McLaughlin's, 20, and 7 Waggons laden with Stores and Provisions. We got that night to Hays' Quarters, where Wayne's Company joined us from Nazareth.

"The next Day we marched cautiously thro the Gap of the Mountain, a very dangerous Pass, and got to Uplinger's, but twenty-one Miles from Bethlehem, the Roads being bad and the Waggons moving slowly."

(After giving an account of the week's work almost verbatim as in the foregoing, he proceeds):

"This present Monday we are erecting a third House in the Fort to accommodate the Garrison.

"As soon as Capt Hays returns with the Convoy of Stores and Provisions, which I hope may be to-morrow, I purpose to send Orndt and Haeds to Join Capt. Trump in erecting the middle Fort there, and supply both as occasion may require, and hope in a week or ten Days, weather favouring, those two Forts may be finished and the Line of Forts completed and garrisoned, the Rangers in Motion, and the internal Guards and Watches disbanded, as well as some other Companies, unless they are permitted and encouraged to go after the Enemy to Sasquehannah.

"At present the Expencc in this County is prodigious. We have on Foot, and in Pay, the following Companies:

Trump.....	50	Men.
Aston.....	50
Wayne.....	55
Foulke.....	46	} Without the Forks.
Trexler.....	48
Wetherhold.....	44
Orndt.....	50
Craig.....	30	} in the Irish Settlements.
Martin.....	30
Van Etten.....	30	Minisinks.
Hays.....	45
Detachment of M'Laughlin..	20
Parsons.....	54	at Easton.

522

"This, Sir, is a particular Account of our Transactions and the present State of Affairs in this County. I am glad to learn by your Favour of the 21st Just received, that you have Thoughts of coming to Bethlehem, as I may hope an Opportunity of waiting upon your Honour there after our Works are finished, and communicating every thing more fully. I now only add that I am, with dutiful Respect,

"Sir, Your Honour's most obedient humble Servant,

"B. FRANKLIN.

"To Govr. Morris."

The northern border of Northampton county, having suffered so severely from Indian rapacities, it was deemed advisable to erect forts or blockhouses at or near the gap in the mountains and at some commanding point to the westward. Two of the most prominent of the residents of that section of the county west of the Lehigh river, which now constitutes Lehigh county, recommended two sites in the following communication:

"We whose Names are hereunto subscribed do give this as our Opinion; That if a Fort was to be built on this side of the Blue Mountains it would be of the most service on this side of Lechai on Daniel Schneider's Land from whence it would command up to Lechai so far as beyond the Mountain and across the River to the other Shore. Or, if our Superiors should not like this Place then on the other side of Drucker's Mill on the blue Mountains there being a good spring and an eminence which commands on all its Sides a large extent of Land.

"JOHN PETER TREXLER,

"Justice in the County of Northampton.

"GEORGE REX."

FORT EVERETT.

Fort Everett, the only fort erected within the territory now included in Lehigh county, was located in Lynn township. It stood in what is now a level, ploughed field, about one fourth of a mile north of Lynnport, about 150 feet from the house of M. K. Henry, a tenant of Mrs. David Stein, eastward, and about 250 feet from the creek, which flows past the slate works on the west and empties into Ontelaunee creek. A spring, but a few feet south of where the fort was erected, marks the position of what was then a well of water. It was a blockhouse, about 25 feet by 30 feet, and stood on the property of John Everett, a man of prominence in the township at the time.

It was in all probability built early in the year 1756. Franklin in his letter of January 25th, written at Fort Allen, says:

"Foulk is gone to build another, between this and Schuylkill Fort, which I hope will be finished (as Trexler is to join him) in a week or 10 days." This evidently refers to Fort Everett, as Foulk was a resident of Lynn township, and it is reasonable to suppose that he saw that his friends and neighbors were protected.

Captain Charles Foulk, or Volck, who was commander at Fort Allen from April 19th to the last of June, 1756, was born November 18, 1709. He was baptized in New York, Sept. 10, 1710, reared in the Lutheran faith, and married, in 1730, Catharine Harzy. They had ten children.

Franklin in his letter of January 14th states that he had raised a company under Capt. Charles Foulk, and in January 26th he states that Foulk commanded 46 men, stationed without the Forks.

In a document giving the position of troops in Northampton county, without date, but supposed to be 1758, Captain Foulk is mentioned as in command of 63 men, at the new fort, not named, between Fort Allen and Fort Lebanon. The officers under Capt. Foulk were Lieut. Michael Beltz, Sergeants John White and Dewalt Bossing and Corporal Christian Weirick.

The territory included within the boundaries of Albany township, Berks county, and Lynn township, then Northampton and now Lehigh county, was known at the period now under consideration, as Allemängel, meaning "All-want," from the fact that the land was not as productive as the country further to the south.

The district was well settled and Fort Everett occupied an important position, but, unfortunately, but little is recorded concerning it.

The garrison frequently ranged around the country between the Schuylkill and the Lehigh and were under the command of Captain Nicholas Wetherhold.

While many occurrences were continually taking place, the first actual mention of the station is by Colonel Weiser, on November 24, 1756. He had just visited Fort Franklin and seen its poor condition; he also saw that most of the inhabitants lived south of the mountain, and concluded that its condition was of but little value. He accordingly says, "I ordered Lieu't Engel to Evacuate it, and come to the South side of the Hills himself with Nineteen men, at John Eberts, Esq'r, and the Rest being Sixteen men more, at John Eckenroad, both places being about three miles distant from each other, and both in the Township of Linn, Northampton County, untill otherways ordered."

We do not know definitely whether Lieut. Engel did actually proceed as directed, or not, but it is altogether likely he did, for while Fort Franklin was not entirely abandoned until the Fall of 1757, we have no reason to doubt that during the latter part of 1757 it was certainly in charge of Capt. Wetherhold, and it is therefore possible that he may have garrisoned it even previous to that time, and that Lieut. Engel occupied Fort Everett as originally ordered. Even if such were the case Lieut. Engel was ordered away in the latter part of May, 1757, to take command of Fort Norris, and Fort Everett once more resumed its former status.

During this period the following petition was forwarded to the Governor. Whilst emanating from Lynn township, it was intended to apply, in a general sense, to the whole of Northampton county, south of the mountains, as far east as the Delaware:

"NORTHAMPTON COUNTY, LYNN TOWNSHIP,

May 4 Day, 1757.

"To his Onner, the Governor and Commander in Cheaf of the Provine of Pennsylvania:

"YOURE MOST HUMBLY S'VANT—

"These is to Acquaint youre Honner of the Difficultyes, Hardships and Dangers that youre Poore Pertitioners Ly Under at this Present Time, Being the Frunteairs, and being yesterday A Cobby of an Express Sent to us and others from Mr. Parsons, Major, Which he re-seaved from Cornel Wiser, that He was Credibly Informed by A friend Indian that a Great Body of French and Indians Was one there march from Ohio Fort, Designed against Some Parts of Pennsylvania, Minnesink, Patter Co. and som Murder Has Lately ben Don at the Minnesinks in this County, and Like Wise at Schoolkill in Barks County, and this is what wee was Desired and Warned to be one our Gards, and to associate our Selves and others Immediately into Companies under Discreet officers of oure one Choice, But as youre Honner Vere well knows the Natour and Mis Manegment of the Generaty Part of the People, when that these are at thaire one freedom, without Some Parsens in Shap Authority to Compel them, and further wee Do Think it a Great Hard Ship that wee the Fron-tears, that is Almost Already Ruend By being Cep So much out of oure Laboure, Being the Poorer Sort of People at the Beginning, and the Loer Inhabentance the mean time Lyes Quiat and Ease and out of Danger, and wee Desire and Humbly Beg that your Honner Will Take our Case Into Consideration, and Cause Us to be Better Guarded by Soldiers, at the expence of the Provence, while the Loer Inhabitance will be obliged to Baire Part of the Burden as Well as wee Do think that if the Gerresens that is now Lying over the Blue Mountaine in the Forts was all Removed to This side of the Mountaine and Laid 4, 6, 8 or 10 men in a Good House at Not a grate Distance apart, and a Road Cut from one Plantation to the other, of About 3 or 4 Perches Broad, as the Plantations is Prete Neaire to Gether, on this Side of the Mountaine. We do think that it would Cause the Indians to be Afraid to Com in small Companies over the Road, as theaire yousel way is to Goo, for faire of Being taken agoing Back, for when Ever there is Murder Don within the Road there must be a Good Watch Cept on that Road to Take them as they Pas Back, and by Larem Guns there Can be many People Cald to Gether in Short Space of Time Besides the Soldiers, and further, the people in General is Removed from the other Sid of the Mountain and Dayre Not Goo to Live on theaire Plantations til Better times Excepting 2 or 3 famelyes Round Each Fort, and from the other Settlers on this Side of the Mountaine to the Forts is som 10, Som 16 miles to Fort Franklen, is to Fort Allen 10, to Fort Norres 16, to Fort Hambelton 16 miles. So that in Case of Nesety the Soldiers Can't Com to oure Assistance, nor Wee to Theairs Not in any Resenable Time, Til the Eneme wold Be Gone Againe, for Wheaire they fal in They make No Long Stay, and Besides the Hills and Hallows is so bad over the Mountaine that the Indians might Destroy all the Wagens and Provisiens Coming to the Fort, if they take Care to Wayley them in Som Deep Hallows, and the Soldiers as they are Scouting and marching from one Fort to the other, and are Present Leftenant Wetherhols Lyes in our Township with About 40 men Against Fort Franklin, which is Now Empty of Soldiers, and he Expects Every Day to Receive order to March from us, there will then Ly open without any Sholders abot 28 M'lds that there will be no Soldiers, and youre Patissioners Do umbly Beg that youre Honner Would Take oure Case Into Consideration, and not Let these Soldiers be Removed But Rather order more in these Parts, as in Dute Bound Wee shall Ever Pray."

(Signed by 41 persons, whose names appear chiefly in German.)

From this we see that Lieut. Wetterholt was then in Lynn Township "against Fort Franklin," that is south of Fort Franklin. The petition of the people, urging the retention of soldiers with them, was successful. In February, 1758, Adjutant Kern reports Capt. Wetterholt still on duty at Fort Everett with 41 men, distant from Fort William 12 miles, and having 12 men stationed at "A Block House," 10 miles from Fort Everett and 20 miles from Fort Allen. The detailed report shows at Fort Everett, Capt. Wetterholt, 41 men, 22 Province arms, 21 Private guns, 4 months provisions, 10 cartridges, and at the Block House, 10 miles from Fort Everett, Lieut. Geiger (absent), who had relieved Lieut. Hyndshaw then at duty at Dietz Block House, below Wind Gap, 12 men, 8 Province Arms, 5 Private Guns, 4 mos. provisions, 8 cartridges. Jacob Levan, Esq'r, was their Commissary.

Fort Everett was visited by Jas. Burd during his tour of inspection, in February, 1758. His journal gives the following record:

"26th Sunday

"Marched from hence (Fort William) at 10 A.M., went over the Mountains to Mr. Everett's, where Captain Weatherholt is stationed, the snow exceedingly deep could make little way, at 3 P.M. arrived at Valentine Phileprots, 20 miles, here I stay all night.

"27th Monday.

"Marched this morning at 8 A.M. for Mr. Everett's, arrived at 9 A.M., 4 miles, ordered a Review of that part of the Company that is here, found Cap't Weatherholt, Lieut. Geiger & 24 men, 3 being sick & absent, 3 months' provisions, 5 pounds powder, no lead, each man has a pound of powder in his Cartouch box & lead in proportion, no Kettles, nor blankets, 25 Province Arms.

"Ordered to Cap't Weatherholt 56 blankets, 25 lb of powder & 50 bars of lead & 400 flints, Cap't Weatherholt to Scout to the Westward 10 miles & to the eastward 10 miles, Lieut. Geiger from thence to his post in Coll. Armstrong's Battalion.

"Marched from hence to Fort Allen at 11 A.M. gott to the top of the Blue Mountain at 2 P.M., from hence saw Allamingle, it is a fine Country, but the Country on the North side of the Mountain is an entire barren wilderness, not capable of Improvements.

"Arrived at Fort Allen at ½ after 2 P.M. a prodigious Hilly place, and poor land, 15 miles from Mr. Everett's. Ordered a review of this Garrison tomorrow at 8 A.M."

Captain John Nicholas Wetterholt, who was in command at Fort Everett the major portion of the time it was garrisoned, was born in Germany in 1724. He sailed from Rotterdam with his brother Jacob in the ship Halifax, and arrived at Philadelphia October 22, 1754.

He entered the military service soon after his arrival, as he was commissioned Captain in the First Battalion of the Second Pennsylvania Regiment on December 21, 1755.

Records of the colonial period show that different sums of money were paid to him for his company's services, and for provisions, viz:

1756—April 29—To Captain John Nicholaus Wetterholt, for his Company's pay, . . . £332 3s 0d

1756—May 28—To Captain John Nicholaus Wetterholt, for pay for himself and Company and allowance for thirty-six guns furnished by his men, £166 rs 6d

1756—June 21—Samuel Depuy, in full, for his account for purchasing provisions for a detachment of Captain Wetterholt's Company, £33 1s 8d

1756—Dec'r 15—Samuel Depuy's order for victualing Captain Wetterholt's Company,
&c., £108 1s 8d

In the year 1762 Captain Nicholas Wetherholt resided in Heidelberg Township, Northampton County, now Lehigh, and his name is on the tax list of 1764, at the same place as the owner of 75 acres.

In the Pennsylvania Archives is found the following:

"Muster Roll of all the men who have enlisted for the space of three years of the company under the command of Captain John Nicholas Weatherholt, stationed in Heydelberg township, Northampton county, for the months of March and April, 1758."

[Name, age, where born, date of enlistment and occupation.]

Captain—John Nicholas Weatherholt, 34, Ger., Dec. 16, 1755.

Lieutenant—James Laughrey, Dec. 20, 1757.

Ensign—John Lytle, Dec. 11, 1757.

Surgeon—Jacob Streader, 33, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.

Drummer—Leonard Hayshell, 36, Ger., Dec. 4, 1757.

Fifer—John Kaup, 25, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Sergeants—Cass, Peter, 26, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, shipper; Wassum, Conrad, 39, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Corporals—Acre, Henry, 23, Pa., Sept. 1, 1757;
 Lutz, John, 25, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, tailor.

Privates:

Althain, Nicholas, 24, Ger., Jan. 1, 1758.
 Billik, Frederick, 19, Penn'a, Sept. 1, 1757.
 Bowman, Christian, 22, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Brining, Philip, 27, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Brown, George, 23, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, butcher.
 Buckhamer, John, 25, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Crantlemeyer, Philip, 21, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Dadson, Richard, 24, Pa., Nov. 28, 1757.
 Deatenberger, Henry, 36, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Deatry, Nicholas, 18, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Dormeyer, Jacob, 23, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Everhart, Conrad, 23, Ger., Oct. 13, 1757, weaver.
 Flack, John, 25, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Fisher, Matthias, 20, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Frydel, Christopher, 24, Ger., Feb. 7, 1758.
 George, Adam, 17, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Gips, Nicholas, 20, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Granshaar, John, 21, Ger., Dec. 5, 1757, house carpenter.
 Gregory, George, 16, Penn'a, Sept. 1, 1757.
 Henry, George, 35, Ger., Oct. 25, 1757.
 Husley, Jacob, 23, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Kline, John, 24, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Kline, Philip, 34, Ger., June 14, 1757.
 Koch, William, 25, Penn'a., Sept. 6, 1757.
 Laughry, Dennis, 20, Ireland, Feb. 1, 1758.
 Lieser, Frederick, 19, Ger., June 21, 1757.
 Miller, Nicholas, 17, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Miller, Peter, 22, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Neifert, Jacob, 21, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Paul, Nicholas, 21, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Preis, John George, 21, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Reag, Peter, 37, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, baker.
 Reifel, Jacob, 23, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, carpenter.
 Road, Godfried, 26, Ger., Sept. 6, 1757, blue-dyer.
 Road, Jacob, 23, Pa., Sept. 6, 1757.
 Rost, Henry, 23, Ger., Feb. 15, 1758.
 Sealner, John, 35, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Shenk, Jacob, 20, Ger., Nov. 6, 1757.
 Shmaus, Conrad, 22, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Stahl, George, 23, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Steap, Peter, 22, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757.
 Stouter, Casper, 25, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, fiddler.
 Weyerbacher, John, 30, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, tailor.
 Wurtenberg, Michael, 22, Ger., Dec. 1, 1757.
 Yoder, Jacob, 22, Pa., Nov. 6, 1757, saddler.
 Zips, Joseph, 20, Ger., Sept. 1, 1757, tailor.

John Jacob Wetterholt came to this country in the same vessel with his brother Nicholaus. He was commissioned Lieutenant in Major Parson's Town Guard, December 21st, 1755; in April, 1756, as Lieutenant, stationed at Dietz's; and as Captain, in September 21st, of the same year; 1757, September, 2d, he was paid, for enlisting 53 men in the Provincial services, £88 6s 6d.

Captain Jacob Wetterholt possessed undaunted courage, which was accounted for in his firmly believing he had the power of making himself invulnerable (kugelfest); that is that he could not be killed by a gun shot;

he was therefore well suited for the military service on the frontier. (He bravely met his death, however, in 1763, as will appear later.)

In 1762 he resided in Lynn Township, now Lehigh county; his widow still resided there in 1764.

It so chances that the two brothers, both eventually of the same rank, operated in the same general territory. They practically had charge of the country along the southern base of the Blue Range from Fort Everett to the Delaware river, and both reported to the same superior officer, Timothy Horsfield. Unfortunately, in the records of the time, the last name only is given in most cases, so that it becomes difficult in many instances to know which is meant. It may be generally taken for granted, in the case of Fort Everett, that wherever Captain Wetterholt is mentioned it refers to Nicholaus, and where the term "Lieutenant" is used it refers to Jacob.

Captain Wetherhold made a list on Dec. 27, 1757, of all the people killed and taken prisoner by the Indians west of the Lehigh river, in the townships of Lynn, Heidelberg and Albany, which totaled 56 persons killed and 10 taken prisoners. In this list under date of November, 1756, is given the name of Jacob Staynbruck as killed and Boldis Yeager's daughter taken prisoner.

The name Steinbruch is found in the vicinity about this period but the name Yeager is not found.

An account of this occurrence was brought to Bethlehem by John Holder, who stated that it took place on the evening of Sunday, November 28th. Holder was a member of the Moravian church and was born in London, England, March 12, 1694, the son of Rem Holter. He came to America in 1710 and married in 1722, Barbara, daughter of Andreas Volck.

Timothy Horsfield writes to Gov. Denny from Bethlehem, November 30th, 1756, that "John Holder came here this Evening from Allemangle, and Informed me that last Sunday Evening, ye 28th Inst. three Indians Came to the House of a Certain Man Named Schloser, and Nockt at the Door, the People within called who is there? Answer was made, A good Friend; they within not Opening the Door, they Nockt Again, they within Answer'd Who is there? No Answer being made from Without, Then one of the Men Named Stonebrook, Lookt Out of the window, when an Indian Discharged a gun and kill'd him on the Spot. They then Open'd the Door, the Woman & two children Endeavoring to Escape, and the Indians pursued & took Both the Children; One of the Men Fired at the Indians, and Saw One of them fall, when one of the Girls he had possession of, made her Escape from him, but the other they took away; the Indian y't was fired at which fell Cryed Out Very much, but in a Short time he got up & made off.

"The above said Holder Informs me he had this Acco't from good Authority, said Schloser's House is situated in Allemangle."

In Albany township in November, 1756, the wife of Adam Buss and four of his children were taken prisoners by Indians. On April 28, 1757, occurred the next incursion of the savages in Lynn township, when John Eckroth was killed and one of his children taken prisoner. His widow and seven small children were left his body. This murder happened in a violent thunderstorm, which a letter of that date says was the most serious in twenty years. On July 9, 1757, occurred the last invasion of Lynn township by Indians that is recorded. On this day ten persons were killed at the house of Adam Clauss, in Lynn township. They were Martin or Adam Yeager and his wife (one account gives the name as Martin and another as Adam) Abraham Sechler's wife and one child, John Krauhaar's wife and three children, a child of Adam Clauss and a child of Philip Anthony. The house in which the Sechler family resided is still standing and is now owned by Senator Miller. It has been reproduced on this page, showing the yard, in which tradition says that Mrs. Sechler was killed. Philip Anthony lived to mourn the father's loss. It was at Eckroth's house, about three miles from Fort Everett, that sixteen men were stationed by order of Colonel Conrad Weiser in November, 1756, when the name was written Eckenroth. The eldest son of Eckroth was Henry and his other sons were George and Christopher.

Sechler House, Lynn Township.

On June 22, 1757, Adam Drum, of Albany township was killed. His wife and his son, aged 19, were taken prisoners. His wife escaped, but she was so closely pursued by one of the Indians, of whom there were seven, that he threw his tomahawk at her, and wounded her badly in the neck. After scalping Drum, or Trump, the Indians left a knife and a halbert, or spear, fixed to a pole of four feet, in in Lynn township and was the owner of 150 acres of land. It was his wife that brought the alarm to her husband, who at once hastened to where Lieut. Jacob Wetherhold was stationed and informed him of the attack. Wetherhold on the same day wrote the following letter to Major Parsons at Easton, which is reproduced verbatim.

"Northampton County, Lynn Township,

July 9, 1757.

"Honored Sir:

"These are to Acquaint you of A murder hapened this Day at the Houce of Adam Clauce, in said Township of Lynn, whaire three or fore Nabors was Cutting said man's Corn; as they Was Eating theaire Dinner they waire fell one By A Perty of Saviges, Indians, and Five of the Whits Took to there Heals, two men, two Women, and one Gerl, and Got saf out of theire hands. Was killed and Scalped, Martin Yager and his Wife, and John Croushore wife and one Child, and the Wife of Abraham Secler and one Child of one Adam Clauce and the Wife of John Coucehere, and the wife of Abraham Secler was Sculpt and is yet Alive, But Badly wounded, one Shot Thro' the Sid and the other in the Thy, and two Children kild Belonging to said Croushere, and one to said Secler, and one Belonging to Philip Antone Not Sculpt, and this Was Don at Least three Miles within the out side Settlers, and 4 miles from John Everett's, and Philip Antone's wife was one that Took her Tilit and came hom and acquainted her husband, and he came and Acquainted me, and I went Emeaditly to the Place With Seven men Besides my Self and Saw the Murder, But the Indians was Gon and I Derectly Purs'ed them about 4 Miles and Came Up with them in the thick Groves weaire Wee met with Nine Indians, and one Sprung Behind a Tree and took Site at me and I run Direct at him, and another one the sid Flast at me, and then Both took to there Heals, and I shot one as I Goge Thro' the Body, as he fell on his face, But I Loaded and after another that was Leding A maire, and ye meane time he Got up and Run away and I fired on the other, and I think I shot him in ye Buttux, and my Soldiers had oppertunity to shot three times, and then they Got out of oure Site in the thick Groves, and Wee Cold Not find them No more, But I Got from them one maire and two Saddels, one Bridel and Halter, & one Bag with a Cag of Stil Licker in it, and Cloths and one Brace Cittel and fore Indian Cake Baked in the ashes of wheat meal and to Aquat you further, that I have several New Soldiers that has No Guns, and were Little Powder and Led, and I have sent this Express to you Hoping that you Wold Help me with Arms and Ammenishan, and so I Remaine yours friend and humble Servent

"JACOB WETHERHOLD."

Referring to this sad occurrence, Col. Weiser writes Gov. Denny from Easton on July 15th:

"In coming thro' the Maxitawny, I heard a melancholly Account of Ten People being killed by the Enemy Indians. They passed by two or three Plantations on this side of the mountain before they attacked. A certain woman ran off towards her Place and told her Husband of the attack, who cut the Gears off his Horses then in the Plow, and rid as fast as he could to Lieut. Wetherholts, about three miles off. Lieut. Wetherholt, with a small Detachment,

I am told Seven in number, came away immediately, and came to the Place where the murder was committed, where, by that time, a number of people had gathered. Wetherholt proposed to pursue the Enemy but none would go with him, so he took his Seven men & pursued the Enemy a few miles from the House & found the Place where they rested themselves, and in ab't three miles He overtook them in thick Brushes, at a very little Distance. It seems they saw one another at once. One of the Indians was before hand with Whetherholt & aimed at him, but his Gun flashed. Wetherholt, a moment after, fired at the Indians, and thinks he hit him, but is not sure. Several Guns were fired by our People but did no Execution, and the Indians Guns missing Fire they ran off & left two Horses behind them, one belonging to the man they killed, laden with the best of his Household Goods."

About the same time the Indians carried off a young lad named John Schoep, about nine years old, whom they took by night, seven miles beyond the Blue mountain; where, according to the statement of the lad, the Indians kindled a fire, tied him to a tree, took off his shoes and put moccasins on his feet; that they prepared themselves some mush, but gave him none. After supper they marched on further. The same Indians took him and another lad between them, and went beyond the second mountain, having gone six times through streams of water; and always carried him across. The second evening they again struck up fire, took off his moccasins, and gave him a blanket to cover himself; but at midnight, when all the Indians were fast asleep, he made his escape, and by daybreak had traveled about six miles. He passed on that day, sometimes wading streams neck-deep, in the direction of the Blue mountain. That night he stayed in the woods. The next day, exhausted and hungry, he arrived by noon at Uly Meyer's plantation, where Charles Folk's company lay (probably at or near Fort Franklin), where they wished him to remain till he had regained strength, when they would have conducted him to his father. He was accordingly sent home. (C. Sauer's German Paper, March, 1756.)

In September, 1757, occurred one of the boldest forays of the Indians that is recorded. A party of redskins crossed the Blue mountains and passing through Heidelberg township came to a creek where two young girls were washing flax (or another account, says, cleaning an apple butter kettle). Tradition has it that they were guarded by a man with a gun near by. An Indian snatched one of the girls, named Margaret Frantz, aged 12 years, and the guard was unable to fire for fear of hitting the girl. The other girl is said to have been named Solt.

Margaret Frantz was the daughter of Henry Frantz, and was born in Lorraine, May 8, 1745. Henry Frantz, arrived at Philadelphia on October 20th, 1747, together with Abraham and Peter Frantz. On December 4th, 1749, a warrant was granted to Henry Frantz for 50 acres "behind the land of one Silby in a hollow over the Blue mountains." He paid at the rate of £15 10 s per 100 acres and ½ penny quit-rent per acre. Henry Frantz settled in Heidelberg township where he took out a warrant for land on Nov. 14th, 1758. In 1762 he was taxed ten pounds in Heidelberg township, and in the tax list of 1764 we find his name written "Henry France, 200 acres," with no amount of tax stated, and these words, "Killed by Indians." From the most reliable account obtainable, he was killed and scalped by Indians in the year 1764, while butchering hogs. It is said that the Indians pricked a mark resembling a hen's foot, or, as some say, leaves, on the right wrist, rubbing it in with powder.

Letters of administration on his estate were taken out by his brother Peter Frantz, and in the proceedings of the Orphans' Court of June 19, 1764, we find that Henry France, deceased, left two children, Barbara, aged about 16 years, and Peter, aged 12 years. Barbara chose Abraham Frantz as her guardian and the Court appointed him also guardian of Peter Frantz. No mention is made here of Margaret, the eldest daughter, of whom we shall speak later. Peter Frantz, the son, was born May 4, 1752, and died May 25, 1832. He married Anna Catherine Buchman, and is buried in the old Allentown Cemetery.

Years after her return from captivity Margaret Frantz related to Peter Hecker that the Indians placed her on a horse and crossed a big water (probably the Lehigh river near Weissport), on the way towards Stroudsburg, and turned into the famous hunting grounds through the Delaware Water Gap. Here we lose all trace of her until her return after seven years in 1764. Of the manner of her return we have no information. Five years after her return from captivity, on May 9, 1769, she was married to Nicholas Wotring. She became noted far and wide for her knowledge of herbs and simples, which she acquired from the Indians, and her services in curing the sick were in great demand. Her journeys while on these errands, she always accomplished on horseback. She died June 29, 1823, aged 78 years, 1 month and 21 days, and is buried in the old cemetery at Unionville.

Nicholas Wotring, her husband, was born in Pistorf, Lorraine, in April, 1745, and died July 15, 1818. They had six children: Samuel, born Sept. 9, 1772; John Peter, born Sept. 17, 1774, died in infancy; John Nicholas, born June 24, 1776, died Jan. 16, 1827; John Peter, born June 24, 1776, twin, died Feb. 25, 1833; John Henry, born Nov. 9, 1778, died March 25, 1850, married Maria B. Heintzleman and had two children, and Mary Susanna Wotring, born Nov. 15, 1780.

John Peter Wotring, one of the twins, born in 1776, married Elizabeth Deshler, daughter of Adam Deshler, Jr., and his wife, Mary Catherine Balliet, and had nine children.

For some reason the Frantz family suffered severely from the Indians, as in June, 1758, John Frantz's wife was killed and three children captured in Tulpehocken township, Berks county.

At Lehigh Gap, on the north side of the mountain, a blockhouse was erected in the latter part of the year 1755, by various families of the neighborhood, in which they sought refuge when in danger of Indian attacks. It was a position of importance, but was never occupied by a large force of soldiers. Franklin, in his letter of January 26, 1756, from Fort Allen, to the Governor, says:

"Sir:

"We left Bethlehem the 10th instant with Foulk's Company, 46 men, the Detachment of McLaughlin's 20, and 7 waggons laden with Stores and Provisions. We got that night to Hays' Quarters, where Wayne's Company, joined us from Nazareth.

"The next day we marched cautiously thro' the Gap of the Mountain, a very dangerous Pass, and got to Uplinger's but twenty-one miles from Bethlehem, the Roads being bad and the Waggons moving slowly."

The only other record we have is from the Journal of Jas. Young, when inspecting the various forts in June, 1756, viz:

"June 22—At 4 P. M. Sett out (from Fort Allen), at 6 came to Leahy Gap where I found a Serjeant and 8 men Stationed at a Farm house with a small Staccade Round it, from Fort Allen here the Road is very hilly and Swampy, only one Plantation ab't a mile from the Gap. I found the People here were a Detachment from Cap't (Nicholas) Weatherholts Comp'y, he is Station'd on the other side of the Gap, 3 miles from this with 12 men, the rest of his Comp'y are at Depues and another Gapp 15 miles from this. I dispatch'd a messenger to Capt'n Weatherholt, desiring him to Come here in the morning, with the men under his Com'd, to be muster'd the People Stationed here and on the other side the Gapp I think may be of great service, as it is a good road thro' the mountain and very steep and high on each side, so may in a great measure prevent any Indians to pass thro' undiscovered if they kept a good guard, here the River Leahy Passes thro' the mountain in a very Rapid Stream.

"23 June—Leahy Gapp, North Side.—At 7 in the morning, I mustered the men here, the Serjeant inform'd me that Capt'n Weatherholt was gone 12 miles from this and he believed on his way to Philad'a for there pay, which was the reason the people did not come here, and I finding this Comp'y so much dispers'd at different Stations in small parties, I could not regularly Muster them therefore at 8 A. M. I sett out for Fort Norris."

On February 5, 1758, Adjutant Kern reports Lieut. Engel in command of Fort Lehigh, with 30 men, 16 provincial arms, 14 private guns, 40 lbs. of powder, 80 lbs. of lead, 4 months provisions, 10 cartridges, Jacob Levan, Commissary, the distance from Fort Allen 10 miles, and from P. Doll's Block-house 8 miles.

We see from this that it was considered a position of sufficient importance to be not only retained, but to have its garrison increased.

Its distance from Craig's store, at which is the Lehigh Gap Post Office, is about one-half mile. It stood on property originally belonging to Nathaniel Irish, adjoining that of Nicholas Opplinger, where Benjamin Franklin stayed all night, when on his way to Fort Allen. The fort was on slightly elevated ground, at the foot of which a small run of water flows down to the Aquashicola creek. The importance of its position is easily seen. It commanded the entrance to Lehigh Gap, and was at the junction of the road to Fort Allen, at Weissport, on the north, and the road to Fort Norris, on the East. Its site is now included in the town of Palmer-ton.

STATION AT KERN'S MILL, SLATINGTON.

On June 22, 1756, James Young, on his visit to the fort at Lehigh Gap wrote in his Journal that Captain Wetherhold was stationed on the other side of the gap, three miles away, with twelve men. This station was at William Kern's mill, now in Slatington.

Nicholas Kern, father of William, had secured 500 acres of land in the years 1737 and 1738 along the Lehigh, to which he removed from Whitehall township about 1741. On this tract, he erected a grist mill and a saw mill, which he mentions in his will, dated Dec. 28, 1748. He died in 1749, leaving surviving his widow and nine children, seven sons and two daughters. William Kern, the third son of Nicholas, was born in 1725, and died August 18, 1800. He was of a jovial disposition, and given somewhat to joking. Because of this he was called "Trockener," in German signifying a joker or wit. This, in time, became corrupted to "Trucker," so that on the Evans map of 1755, as well as that of Edward Scull of 1770, one of the Kern mills, that in which we are interested, was called "Trucker's Mill."

Franklin secured from Kern's mill lumber which was used at Fort Allen, as he states in his letter of Jan 25, 1756. William Kern occasionally conveyed stores and provisions from Bethlehem to Fort Allen, and a receipt dated April 1, 1756, at Bethlehem, reads: "Received of Province Stores, of Timothy Horsfield, one Barrel of Rum, containing 30 gallons, which I promise to deliver to Capt. Charles Folck, at Fort Allen. Wilhelmus Kern." His house, built of logs, stood where the residences of Benjamin Kern and the late Henry Kuntz now stand. It was torn down about 1858.

The map on next page shows the house occupying the site of the original homestead. The small log building attached to it, now weather-boarded, is said to be the original house. The stone barn, built in 1807, is also given, but the original barn stood as shown, on the other side of the road, just beyond. All these properties, including the mill, were on or near the only road then existing, which was made and used by the Indians. It crossed the Lehigh at a ford, some 500 feet above the bridge leading to Walnutport, then followed along the Trout creek, as shown, past sundry wigwams and villages, to the north. Because of that fact it was called the "Warriors' Path," and the ford denominated the "Warriors' Crossing." In 1761 a road was laid out, following its line, which still exists in Slatington.

The following letter from Gov. Morris to Capt. Weatherholt (Nicholas) mentions the Kern mill:

"PHILADA., 8th April, 1756.

"As there are Eleven of your men stationed at Trucker's Mill, I think it for the publick safety that they should be employ'd in ranging the woods, when the people of that township are inclinable to Joyn them and assist in such service: I do, therefore, order that the said men stationed at Trucker's Mill, when they are not employ'd in escorting Provisions or Stores, shall employ themselves in scouring and ranging the woods; and I recommend it to the inhabitants to Joyn them from time to time for that purpose, and you are to take care that this, my order, be carry'd into full Execution."

Draft of Indian Road and Kern Mill, now Slatington

"In a letter from Major Parsons to Capt. Orndt, of August 15th, 1756, he says, "Capt. Reynolds has powder and lead, and can spare 6 lb of powder & 20 lb of lead to the forces at Trucker's Mill, and if you order anybody for it they may show this letter."

The date of the Governor's letter was April, 1756, whilst Jas. Young's visit of inspection was in June, 1756, almost exactly the same time. In his letter the Governor even speaks of eleven men being stationed there, which agrees almost literally with the number (twelve) given by Mr. Young.

The old, original saw mill stood on the site of the present saw mill, on Trout creek, some 175 feet north of the bridge at Main street. It was subsequently removed to the place now occupied by the Slate (Mantel) Factory.

Kern's mill was an important point and one of great importance to the neighborhood, not only as a supply for much needed lumber, but from a military point of view also, as it commanded the routes of intercourse between Albany township on the west to Nazareth and Easton on the east, as well as Bethlehem and vicinity on the south and Forts Lehigh and Allen on the north.

Among the soldiers who served the province at this period was Lieut. Henry Geiger, a resident of Heidelberg township. He was commissioned an Ensign in the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, First Battalion, commanded by Lieut. Colonel Conrad Weiser, on December 20, 1755.

In 1756 he was stationed at Dietz' blockhouse, where on November 20th he had eight men. On May 14, 1756, he wrote to Timothy Horsfield that he had no meat or provisions and requested some to be sent him immediately. In June, 1756, he was stationed at Fort Allen and agreed to remain there with 21 men until further orders were received from the Governor. His record as an officer is very good and on December 21, 1757, he was commissioned Lieutenant in Capt. Edward Ward's company stationed west of the Susquehanna river. On February 5, 1758, he was in command of twelve men at a blockhouse situated between Forts Allen and Everett, twenty miles from the former and ten miles from the latter, and was furnished by his commissary, Jacob Levan, Esq., with four months provisions. Geiger was an important figure for many years in the upper end of the county and subsequently became a Colonel in the Revolutionary War.

Conrad Wassum, another resident of Heidelberg, was born in Germany in 1718. He enlisted as a Sergeant in Capt. John Nicholas Wetherhold's company of the First Battalion, Pennsylvania Regiment, on September 1, 1757. He died in 1759, leaving his widow, Anna Margaret, and three brothers John, Leonard and George. Among the privates were Michael Laury, in 1756; Frederick Lieser, aged 19, a native of Germany, who enlisted June 21, 1757, in Capt. Wetherhold's company; Godfried Roth, aged 26, from Germany, blue dyer, and Jacob Roth, aged 23, a native of Pennsylvania, both of whom enlisted in Wetherhold's company, on September 6, 1757.

A number of local residents were employed by the Province to convey supplies to Gnadenhütten and to Fort Allen. In an account of carriage of Indian corn from Gnadenhütten to Bethlehem by Jacob Ehrenhardt, dated November 30, 1755, occurs the following:

"To Michael Helfrich, 3 days with his team and an armed man for defense, £1 13 0
 To Peter Trexler, 3 days with his team and an armed man for defense, 1 13 0
 To Danl. Dorney, 3 days, being alone, 1 7 0
 To Geo. Shoemaker, 3 days, having no hired man, 1 10 0
 On Jan. 19, 1756, John George Clauss, went to Gnadenhütten:

3 days with 6 horses, at 11 shillings,
 14 days with 4 horses at 12 shillings, £10 13 0
 Rudolph Oberly, 13 days.
 Jacob Scheimer, 23 days.
 Feb. 20, 1756, Nichs. Oblinger, 9 days, 3 waggons to Ft. Allen.
 Hans Peter Bauman, 7 days.
 Frantz Roth, 7 days.

A list of owners of wagons and horses was made in 1758 and May 4, 1759, Brigadier General Stanwix, commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Southern Provinces of North America, issued an advertisement for wagons, as follows:

"That a number of waggons will be wanted for His Majesty's Service, and in order to avoid impressing, and all other severe methods, I have thought proper to make the following very advantageous proposals. The number of waggons now demanded from each county is as follows: From Philadelphia county, 80; Chester, 66; Bucks, 64; Berks, 60; Northampton, 30; Lancaster, 200; York, 50; Cumberland, 30. Each waggon to load at the Grand Magazine at Carlisle; and for every Gross Hundred weight, carried from thence to Pittsburg, (formerly Fort Duquesne) to receive forty-two shillings and sixpence.

"For each Hundred Gross Weight, carried from Carlisle to Fort Ligonier to receive Thirty shillings.

"For each Hundred Gross Weight, carried from Carlisle to Fort Bedford for the supply of the Garrison there, Seventeen shillings and sixpence.

“Provender for the Horses to be provided by the Owners. The Drivers to be furnished with Provisions as the King’s Troops.

“The Waggons entering into the Service to be appraised and paid for, if taken or destroyed by the Enemy; and to have Fifteen Shillings for every twenty miles from the place of their abode to Carlisle; and Fifteen Shilling a Day, unto the day they set off from thence; and the same for every twenty miles on returning home. Proper and sufficient Escorts will be ordered with every Brigade of Waggons that goes from Fort Bedford.

“After the Waggons have made one trip, they are to be discharged, if the owners require it, and are to be immediately paid for their Loading, according to their Certificate of Delivery.

“The Counties of York, Lancaster, Cumberland and Berks, to be paid at Lancaster, and the Counties of Philadelphia, Chester, Bucks and Northampton, to be paid at Philadelphia.

“The Waggons of Bucks and Northampton Counties to be at Carlisle on the Second of July.

“For the convenience of the Townships proper Persons, living in each County, will be appointed to contract with the Owners of the Waggons, and have them appraised.

“Each Waggon is to be provided with Forage sufficient to maintain the Horses to Pittsburg and back; and such as are ordered to unload at any of the other Posts, their surplus of Forage will be purchased for the King’s Use.

“Each Waggon to be fitted in the following manner, viz: With four good strong horses, properly harnessed; the Waggon to be complete in everything, large and strong, having a Drag Chain, eleven feet in Length, with a hook at each end, a knife for cutting grass, Falling Axe and Shovel, two Setts of Clouts, and five Setts of Nails, an Iron Hoop to the End of every Axletree, A Linen Mangoe, a two Gallon Keg of Tar and oil mixed together, a Slip Bell, Hopples, two Setts of Shoes, and four Setts of Shoe Nails for each Horse, eight Setts of Spare Hames, and five Setts of Hamestrings, a Bag to receive their Provisions, a spare Sett of Linch Pins, and a Handscrew for every three Waggons. The Drivers to be able bodied Men capable of loading and unloading, and of assisting each other, in case of Accidents.

“The same Price by the Hundred will be paid to those who carry Provisions or Stores on Pack Horses to any of the Posts between Carlisle and Pittsburgh, and they shall also receive Eighteen Pence per Horse for every Twenty Miles from the Places of their Abode to Carlisle.

“JOHN STANWIX.”

In the archives of the State is preserved the following list of owners of wagons and horses:

“A List of the Number of Waggons, Draught and Pack Horses from the several townships from the County of Northampton returned to me by the Constables for his Honour, the Governor.

“June 10th, 1758

“JOHN RINKER, SHERIFF.”

WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP.
	Waggons.	Draught Horses.	Pack Horses.	Waggons.	Draught Horses.	Pack Horses.
Jacob Kohler,	I	2	Adam Haberly,
Peter Traxel,	I	2	Paul Tousing,	3
Samuel & Christian Saeger,	I	I	Godfried Knaus,	2
Paul Balliet,	I	2	Leonard Steininger,	2
Samuel Wotring,	I	William Plumstead, Esq.,	I	2
Peter Slosser,	2	George Knaus,	I	2
Felix Arnert,	I	2	Peter Herr,	I
Jacob Heffelfinger,	2	Jacob Shner,	I
Daniel Shnyder,	I	John Griessemer,	2
Conrad Grob,	2	Conrad Kolb,	2
Michael Nyhart,	I	Peter Traxel, Senior,	I	2
Arnold Eberhard,	I	Peter Traxel, Junior,	2
Philip Leibengood,	I	Daniel Traxel,	I
Ulrich Flickinger,	I	Daniel Road,	I
Jacob Mickly,	2	John Rynard Benny,	I
John Schnyder,	2	Daniel Harlacker,	I
Michael Traxel,	I	2	John Yound,	2
Nicholas Traxel, ...	I	2	Christoph. Blanck,	I
John Shad,	2	Frederick Nyhart,	2
Peter Steckel,	2	Jacob Yound,	2
Christopher Bar,	2	Adam Deshler,	I	3
Lawrence Good, ...	I	4	I	Peter Basler,	I
Henry Bergy,	I	Jacob Showalder,	I
Jacob Schreiber,	I	John Showalder,	I
				Joseph Showalder,	I

	Waggon.	Draught Horses.	Pack Horses.
Michael Hoffinan,	2
Peter Burckholder,	3
Jacob Kern,	2
Total,	II	73	17

JACOB RAWN, Constable.

	Waggon.	Draught Horses.	Pack Horses.
John Handwerk,	2
Jacob Fetter,	2
Philip Fideler,		I
Total,	II	37	30

NICHOLAS HANDWERK, Constable.

WEISENBERG TOWNSHIP.

Conrad Grimm,	I
Jacob Greenewald,	I
Michael Braucher, ..	I	I
Christian Seiberling, ..	I	I
Lawrence Holby, ...	I	I
Jacob Holby,	I	I
John Scharer,			I
Joseph Graver,			I
Abraham Knerr,	I
Daniel Knows,	I
Philip Smith,	I
Philip Kleinart,	I
Peter Weise,	I
Nicholas Kampe, ...		I
Total,	4	II	3

ANDREAS REASS, Constable.

HEIDELBERG TOWNSHIP.

George Rex,	I	2
Jacob Rex,	I	2
Michael Ohl,	I	4
Andreas Moyer, ...	I	3
France Guldner,		2
Daniel Burger,	I	2
Frederick Snyder, ..	I	2	I
Conrad Rader,	I	I
Jacob Aleden,	I
Christian Smith, ...			I
Conrad Lutz,	I
Peter Mesemer,	I	2
George Shelhamer, ..		2
Leonard Fur,			I
Jacob Bender,	I	I
Jacob Ferber,	I	2
Henry Ferber,		3
Casper Peter,	I
Tobias Ebert,	I	2
Henry Rader,		3
John Kraus,			2
Michael Moser,			2
Nicholas Handwerk, ..			I
Anna Maria Stiner, ..			I
Charles Ross,	I
Henry Priner,	I
William Rex,	I
Michael Leh,	I
Peter Urich,	I
John Kungel,		2
Jacob Guldner,	I
John Moser,	I
Frederick Kern, ...	I
George Remely,	I
Samuel Mill,		2
John Miller,	I
Peter Miller,	I
John Keck,	I
John Fieller,	I
Philip Mertz,	I
Melchoir Seidel,			I

LYNN TOWNSHIP.

John Everett,	I	I
George Breiner, ...	I	I
David Bilman,			I
Mathias Joron,	I
Charles Folck,			I
Philip Antony,			I
Peter Beisel,			I
Philip Holpy,	I	I
Philip Miller,			I
John Martin Romig, ..			I
Samuel Fries,			I
George Kistler,	I	I
Peter Ecrot,			I
Andreas Volck,			I
Henry Romig,			I
John Brown,			I
Nicholas Harman, .	I	I
Christian Christ, ...			I
Christian Miller, ...			I
Total,	6	12	6

JOHN HOLDER, Constable.

MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP.

Jacob Kapple, Con- stable,			I
Peter Trexler, Esq., ..	I	4
Herman More,		2
George Ruch,	I	I
Jacob Fogel,			I
John Lechtenwalder, ..	I	I
Christopher Stettler, ..	I	4
John Berrett,	I	2
George Gorr,	I	I	I
Melchior Smith, ...		4
Peter Keiser,		2
Peter Trexler, Jun- ior,			I
Balser Yeckel,			I
Frederick Seitz, ...		2	I
John Fogel,			I
John Merckel,		2
Nicholas Moyer, ...			I
Barnet Smith,		2
Henry Steininger, ..			I
Michael Kechele, ...			I
Philip Hamel,		3
Michael Spiegle, ...			I
Jacob Slough,			I
Melcher Barr,	I	2
Jacob Danner,			2
William Fegel,			I
John Nicholas Moyer, ..	I	2
Jacob Harmon, ...	I	2
Jacob Steven,			I
Bartel Miller,			I
Jacob Waggoner, ..		2
Lorance Kenly,			I
The Widow Cune, .			I

	Waggons.	Draught Horses.	Pack Horses.
Peter Walvert,		2
Frederick Romig, ..		2
Michael Helfrich, ..	I	2
John Wetzel,	I	2
Michael Resbel,	I	2
George Shoemaker, ..		I
Philip Tresher,		I	I
John Maxler,			I
John Albright,			I
Christian Ruth,			2
Henry Grim,	I	I
Jacob Grim,		I	I
Conrad Culp,		I
Joseph Albright, ..		I
George Steininger, ..		I
Total,	13	47	18

	Waggons.	Horses.
Villatin Young,		I
Jacob Yoder,		2
Philip Geissinger,	I	2
Yost. Seewitz,		I
John Appel,	I	3
John Musselman,	I	I
Henry Seaner,		2
Villatin Buchacker,		2
Jacob Gongenwer,		2
Martin Appel,	I	2
Henry Weeber,	I	I
Anthony Beam,		2
Baltzer Beil,		2
Jacob Moory,	I
William Morry,		2
John Tool,		I
George Blanck,	I	2
Henry Brunner,		3
Total,	18	80

SALISBURY TOWNSHIP.

Michael Hettler, ..			I
Philip Cunius,			I
Elizabeth Roth,	I	2
Henry Ritter,			3
Melcher Fetter,			I
Jacob Mohr,			I
Henry Cune,	I		2
Henry Keck,	I
Christian Cassel, ...		2
Peter Boger,		2
George Stout,	I	I
Vallendine Dull, ...	I	I
Bernhard Stroub, ..			I
Adam Weder,			I
Richard Freeman, ..			I
John Jennings,			2
Total,	5	10	13

HENRY RITTER, Constable.

UPPER SAUCON TOWNSHIP.

	Waggons.	Horses.
Andrew Erdman,	I	2
Michael Seider,		2
Henry Sell,	I	2
John Joder,		2
Jacob Meyer,		2
Abraham Tonnohoer, ..	I	2
David Owen,	I	I
Thomas Owen,		I
George Kershner,		I
Andrew Ohlewein,	I	I
George Reinhart,		I
Philip Geissinger,	I	3
John Newkomer,	I	3
John Bachman,	I	I
George Bachman,		2
Philip Seller,	I	I
George Passel,		2
Nicholas France,	I	I
Peter Fuchs,		I
Henry Bachman,	I	3
John Reeser,		2
John Shleyver,		I
Conrad Fuchs,		I
Peter Gill,		I
Towias Pole,		2
Jacob Esherman,		I
Philip Trap,	I	2
Isaac Sammel,		2

UPPER MILFORD TOWNSHIP.

Lewis Klotz,		2
Frederick Shoemaker,	I	2
Christian Stringer,		I
Michael Kister,		I
Henry Reass,		I
Peter Rithl,	I	2
David Geesey,	I	2
Frederick Kemerer,		I
Bastian Truckenmiller,		I
George Shombach,		I
John Hiestand,		I
Stevan Bobenmyer,		I
Philip Hertzog,	I	2
Frederick Kern,	I	2
Christian Crall,	I	I
Adam Grames,	I
Nicholas Stahler,	I	2
Jacob Christman,	I	I
Nicholas Roteuberger,	I	I
Francis Wasgo,		I
George Wise,	I	2
Christopher Heisler,		I
Henry Shliffer,	I	I
Adam Stackler,		2
John Myer,	I	I
John Shantz,		1
Benjamin Moyer,		I
Dewald Mechlin,		I
David Straip,		2
Jacob Shifferd,	I	2
Felix Brunner,	I	2
Jacob Car,	I	2
John Derr,	I	I
Samuel Mechlin,	I	2
Casper Alshouser,	I	2
Balser Krauss,	I	I
John Stooferd,	I	I
Ulrich Reaser,		I
Daniel Stoufer,	I	I
John Reiswig,		2
Joseph Eberhard,	I	5
Michel Kehler,		I
Henry Ox,		I
Jacob Wetzel,	I	2
Jacob Dubs,		2
Peter Long,	I
Michel Flores,	I	I

	Waggons.	Horses.		Waggons.	Horses.
Jacob Dillinger,	1	2	Jacob Billshaus,	1	1
Mathias Ox,	1	1	John Ard,	1	2
Adam Trump,	1	1	John Ohlwine,	1	1
Henry Koken,	2	2	George Stalnacker,	1	1
Casper Strom,	1	1	Jacob Smith,	1	1
John Godwofel,	2	2	Benedick Gemon,	1	1
Jacob Hoover,	1	1	Christopher Guthman,	1	1
John Shoemaker,	1	1
Peter Shlosser,	2	2	Total,	37	94
Jacob Kamrer,	1	1
Christian Miller,	1
Michel Smith,	1	2
Stoffel Heller,	1	2
Andrew Grauer,	1
Adam Shooler,	1
John Helfrich,	1	2

The year 1758 closes the record of Indian atrocities in old Northampton county, for a period of five years, when occurred a brief invasion by scattered bands which deserves separate treatment.

[Colonial Records—Pennsylvania Archives—Frontier Forts of Pennsylvania—Manuscript Collections of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania—Northampton County Court Records—The Perkiomen Region—Moravian Records—Lehigh County Historical Society Proceedings, Vol. II.—David Schultz Diary.]

CHAPTER VII.

THE INDIAN MASSACRE OF 1763.

For the space of five years after the Indian atrocities of 1758 there followed a period of peace with the savages, after which the short and bloody outbreak called Pontiac's War, again brought an invasion of the peaceful farming community along the Lehigh river. Heckewelder's Account of the Indian Nations, gives the following explanation of one of the causes of the Indian outbreak in the valley of the Lehigh.

"In the summer of the year 1763, some friendly Indians from a distant place came to Bethlehem to dispose of their peltry for manufactured goods and necessary implements of husbandry. Returning home well satisfied, they put up the first night at a tavern,¹ eight miles distant from Bethlehem. The landlord not being at home, his wife took the liberty of encouraging the people who frequented her house for the sake of drinking, to abuse those Indians, adding, 'that she would freely give a gallon of rum to any one of them that would kill one of these black devils.' Other white people from the neighborhood came in during the night, who also drank freely, made a great deal of noise, and increased the fears of those poor Indians, who,—for the greatest part understood English,—could not but suspect something bad was intended against their persons. They were, however, not otherwise disturbed; but in the morning, when after a restless night they were prepared to set off, they found themselves robbed of some of the most valuable articles they had purchased, and on mentioning this to a man who appeared to be the bar-keeper, they were ordered to leave the house. Not being willing to lose so much property, they retired to some distance into the woods, when, some of them remaining with what was left them, the others returned to Bethlehem and lodged their complaint with a justice of the peace. The magistrate gave them a letter to the landlord, pressing him without delay to restore to the Indians the goods that had been taken from them. But, behold! when they delivered that letter to the people of the inn, they were told in answer, that if they set any value on their lives they must make off with themselves immediately. They well understood that they had no other alternative and prudently departed without having received back any of their goods.

¹John Stenton's tavern.

Arrived at Nescopeck, on the Susquehanna, they fell in with some other Delaware Indians, who had been treated much in the same manner, one of them having his rifle stolen from him. Here the two parties agreed to take revenge in their own way for those insults and robberies for which they could obtain no redress, and this they determined to do, so soon as war should be again declared by their nation against the English."²

Scarcely had these Indians left, when, in another place, about fourteen miles distant from Stenton's, another outrage was committed, of which the following account is given in Loskiel's History of the Missions of the Indians in America:—

"In August, 1763, Zachary and his wife, who had left the congregation in Wechquetank³ (where they had belonged, but left some time previous), came on a visit, and did all in their power to disquiet the minds of the brethren respecting the intentions of the white people. A woman called Zippora was persuaded to follow them. On their return they stayed at the Buchkabuchka⁴ over night, where Captain Wetterholt lay with a company of soldiers, and went unconcerned to sleep in a hayloft. But in the night they were surprised by the soldiers. Zippora was thrown down upon the threshing floor and killed; Zachary escaped out of the house, but was pursued, and with his wife and little child put to the sword, although the mother begged for their lives upon her knees."

To these outrageous acts the conduct of Jonathan Dodge, a lieutenant in Captain Nicholas Wetterholt's company, added greatly to exasperate the Indians. This person, who had been sent by Richard Hockley, of Philadelphia, with ²Note by Heckewelder: "This relation is authentic. I have received it from the mouth of the chief of the injured party, and his statement was confirmed by communications made at the time by two respectable magistrates of the county. Justice Geiger's letter to Tim. Horsfield proves this fact."

³The Rev. John Heckewelder was born in Bedford, England, March 12, 1743. He came to America, with his parents, when quite young; during forty years was a missionary among the Indians in different parts of this country, exposed to many hardships and perils. He wrote several interesting works on the Indians, which are instructive and interesting on account of his having been familiar with their languages, manners and customs. He died at Bethlehem, January 21st, 1823.

⁴Wechquetank was on Poca-peca (Head's) Creek, north of the Blue Mountain; settled by Moravian Indians.

⁵Buchkabuchka. Heckewelder gives the following explanation of this word: "This is the name the Munseys have for the Lehigh Water Gap. The word implies: 'Mountains butting opposite each other.' At this place the Lehigh River runs through the Blue Mountains."

a letter to Timothy Horsfield,⁵ dated July 14, 1763, recommending him as "very necessary for the service," proved to be very troublesome soon after he entered the same. He committed many atrocious acts against his fellow-soldiers and the inhabitants of Northampton county, and particularly the Indians, which is proved by witnesses and his own statements, viz:—

In a letter to Timothy Horsfield, dated Aug. 4th, 1763, Dodge writes:—"Yesterday there were four Indians came to Ensign Kern's. I took four rifles and fourteen deer-skins from them, weighed them, and there was thirty-one pounds." After the Indians left him, he continues:—"I took twenty men, and pursued them, then I ordered my men to fire, upon which I fired a volley on them, . . . could find none dead or alive."

Those happened to be friendly Indians, who had come from Shamokin (Sunbury), on their way to Bethlehem. Jacob Warner, a soldier in Nicholas Wetterholt's company, made the following statement, September 9th:—"That he and Dodge were searching for a lost gun, when, about two miles above Fort Allen, they saw three Indians painted black. Dodge fired upon them, and killed one; Warner also fired upon them, and thinks he wounded another; but two escaped; the Indians had not fired at them. The Indian was scalped; and, on the 24th, Dodge sent Warner with the scalp to a person in Philadelphia, who gave him eight dollars for it. These were also friendly Indians.

In a letter from Capt. Nicholas Wetterholt to Timothy Horsfield, Bethlehem, dated Oct. 3, 1763, at Nicholas Oplinger's, he says:

"HONORED SIR:

"This is to acquaint you that according to your Directions I sent Lieut. Dodge to take his station at John Rhoads and to range from the River Lehay to Berks County line and other places."

On the 4th of October, Dodge was charged with disahling Peter Frantz, a soldier; for striking him with a gun, and ordering his men to lay down their arms if the Captain should blame him about the scalp. In a letter of this date, Captain Wetterholt wrote to Timothy Horsfield: "If he (Dodge) is to remain in the company, not one man will remain. I never had so much trouble and uneasiness as I have had these few weeks; and if he continues in the service any longer, I don't purpose to stay any longer. I intend to confine him only for this crime."

On the 5th of October, Captain Nicholas Wetterholt put Lieutenant Jonathan Dodge under arrest "for striking and abusing Peter Frantz," and sent him in charge of Captain Jacob Wetterholt, Sergeant Lawrence McGuire, and some soldiers, to Timothy Horsfield, at Bethlehem. On the 6th of October, Dodge was taken before Timothy Horsfield. We are not informed of what took place there, but he was no doubt examined, reprimanded, and released from arrest, for he was with Captain Jacob Wetterholt and party on the 7th, at the house of John Stenton, on their return to Fort Allen. At that time many of the Indians were peaceably and friendly disposed toward the whites, particularly those who had adopted a civilized life under the instructions of the Moravian missionaries: it was therefore necessary that the officers and others should have been particularly cautious in their dealings and intercourse with them, as the war feeling was then strong against the whites, so that the least provocation would excite them to hostilities. It may have been difficult to discriminate between the friendly and hostile Indians, but the true policy would have been, to treat all in such a manner as to dispose them to peace. Unfortunately, a serious cause of complaint of the Indians then was, that the white people would too often act dishonestly in their dealings and intercourse with them. When, in addition to this pernicious practice, officers and others having influence or power, and whose duty it is to establish peaceable relations with the Indians, set a bad example by abusing, robbing, and murdering them, for which they have no prospect of obtaining redress, it is not at all surprising that the injured party should become exasperated, and be determined on taking revenge on the first opportunity.

On the 7th day of October, Captain Jacob Wetterholt, with his party, left Bethlehem, on their way to Fort Allen; arrived at and lodged the following night at the house of John Stenton, who kept a store and tavern, situated in the Irish settlement, on the main road from Bethlehem to Mauch Chunk, about a mile north of Howertown, in Allen township, Northampton county.⁶ Against this house the Indians burned with revenge, on account of injuries received there: they may also have had information that Lieutenant Dodge, an object of their hatred, was with the Wetterholt party, and thought there ⁵Timothy Horsfield was born in Liverpool, England, in April, 1708. He emigrated to America, and settled on Long Island, in 1725; moved to Bethlehem in 1749; was appointed justice of the peace for Northampton county in May, 1752; commissioned lieutenant and colonel, and as such had the superintendence and direction of the two military companies commanded by the two Captains Wetterholt, which were ranging along the frontier; they sent their reports to him, and he corresponded with the government, as well as to the frontier inhabitants. He resigned both offices in December, 1763, and died at Bethlehem, March 9, 1773.

⁶The house stood on property lately owned by Mrs. Thomas Fatzinger.

would now be an opportunity to take revenge on him as well as on the Stentons. However that may have been, Captain Wetterholt must certainly have known that the Indians were highly exasperated against that house; it is therefore, unaccountable why he did not have a guard stationed outside of it (which appears was not done), as the greatest vigilance was required against a surprise by them. The Indians approached the house, unperceived and undiscovered, during the night; and then when the door was opened before day, on the morning of the memorable 8th of October, by the servant of Captain Wetterholt, he was shot at and instantly killed. Captain Wetterholt and Sergeant McGuire were also shot at and dangerously wounded. John Stenton was shot dead. The wounded were taken to Bethlehem, where Captain Wetterholt died the next day.

The redoubtable Lieutenant Dodge felt himself in a critical situation, as is evidenced by his letter to Timothy Horsfield. The original letter owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, reads thus:

“JOHN STINONE, Oct. 8, 1763.

“Mr. Horsfield. Pray send me help for all my men are killed But one and Capt. Wetterholt is amost Dead. Every for gods sake send me help. These from me to serve my country and King so long as I live. Send me help or I am a Dead man, this from me.

“He is shot threw the Body.

“LIEUT. DODGE.

Sergt. Meguier is shot threw the Body, Pray send up the Doctor for gods sake.”

Timothy Horsfield sent an express to Daniel Hunsicker, Lieutenant in Captain Jacob Wetterholt's company, with the following letter, to inform him of this disaster:—

BETHLEHEM, Oct. 8, 1763.

“Sir:—This morning, at about break of day, a number of Indians attacked the inhabitants of Allen's Township; have killed several, and wounded many more. Your Captain, who was here yesterday, lays at the house of John Stenton, at Allen's Township, wounded. Several of the soldiers have been killed. I send to Simon Heller, and request him to send a safe hand with it, that you may receive it as quick as possible. Now is the time for you and the men to exert yourselves in defence of the frontier, which I doubt not you will do. I expect to hear from you when you have any news of importance. Send one of your worst men; as it will be dangerous in the day time, send him in the night. The enclosed letter to Mr. Grube⁷ I desire you to send as soon as possible. I am, &c.,

“TIMOTHY HORSFIELD.

“TO LIEUTENANT HUNSICKER, Lower Smithfield.”

A detailed account of the different murders was sent by Horsfield, with a messenger,⁸ to the Governor, at Philadelphia. It was published in the Pennsylvania Gazette of Oct. 13, 1763, printed by Benjamin Franklin, of which a copy is here annexed:

“On Sunday night last an express arrived from Northampton County with the following melancholy account, viz:—That on Saturday morning, the 8th. inst., the house of John Stenton, about eight miles from Bethlehem, was attacked by Indians, as follows: Captain Wetterholt, with a party belonging to Fort Allen, being in that house, and intending to set out early for the fort, ordered a servant to get his horse ready, who was immediately shot down by the enemy; upon which the captain, going to the door, was also fired at, and mortally wounded; that then a sergeant attempted to pull in the Captain and to shut the door, but he was likewise dangerously wounded; that the Lieutenant next advanced, when an Indian jumped upon the bodies of the two others and presented a pistol to his breast, which he put a little aside, and it went off over his shoulder, whereby he got the Indian out of the house and shut the door; that the Indians after this went round to a window, and as Stenton was getting out of bed shot him, but not dead, and he breaking out of the house ran about a mile, when he dropped and died; that his wife and two children ran down into the cellar, where they were shot at three times, but escaped; that Captain Wetterholt, finding himself growing weak, crawled to a window, and shot an Indian dead, it was thought, as he was in the act of setting fire to the house with a match, and that upon this the other Indians carried him away with them, and went off. Captain Wetterholt died soon after.”⁹

The attack on Stenton's house occurred before daybreak, and before reaching it the band of Indians met Jean Horner, the wife of James Horner, who was on her way to a neighbor's for coals to light her morning fire. Fearing that she might raise an alarm they killed her with their tomahawks. Her tombstone, in the cemetery of the Allen township Presbyterian Church reads:

⁷The Rev. B. D. Grube was a Moravian missionary at Wechquetank.

⁸John Bacher, who was paid for this service, Oct. 12, £2 10s. 4d.

⁹A similar account also appeared in the Philadelphische Staatsbote of October 17, 1763, printed by Heinrich Miller, in the German language.

"In Memory of Jean, wife of James Horner, who suffered Death by the Hands of Savage Indians, October 8, 1763, aged 50 years." Mrs. Horner, whose maiden name was Kerr, was born in Ireland in 1713. Her husband survived her thirty years. Their farm was on the high road near Howertown, recently owned by Thomas Laubach. In consequence of the trouble and excitement at that time, Mrs. Horner was buried without a coffin. Her husband took her body to the Presbyterian meeting house and then sat up with it, alone, on the night following the massacre, and the interment took place the following day. Mr. and Mrs. Horner had seven children: Hugh, John, Thomas, Sarah, Mary, James and Jean.

Adam Clendinen, then twenty-four years of age, came near being a victim of the Stenton massacre. He was present at a corn husking frolic at the house of Mr. Stenton on the night preceding the massacre, and staying until late in the night, he was about leaving for home, but being prevailed to remain until morning, he consented to do so. After staying awhile, it seemed to him that something prompted him to leave, and in obeying it he escaped being present at the massacre. Mr. Clendinen died in 1817. His youngest son, Thomas, who related these facts, was born in 1799 and died in 1879.

After leaving Stenton's house, the Indians plundered James Allen's house, a short distance off; after which they attacked Andrew Hazlet's house, half a mile from Allen's, where they shot and scalped a man. Hazlet attempted to fire on the Indians, but missed, and he was shot himself, which his wife, some distance off, saw. She ran off with two children, but was pursued and overtaken by the Indians, who caught and tomahawked her and the children in a dreadful manner; yet she and one of the children lived until four days after, and the other child recovered. Hazlet's house was plundered. About a quarter of a mile from there, the Indians burned down Frederick Kratzer's house, probably after having plundered it.

News of the outrage reached Bethlehem a few hours after its occurrence, whereupon a small armed force was sent to the spot to bring the wounded men to town for surgical treatment. Captain Wetterholt breathed his last at the Crown Inn on the 9th of October and was buried the next day in the graveyard near by. The Crown Inn stood where the South Bethlehem railroad station now stands, and the graveyard was located near the intersection of Second and Ottawa streets, South Bethlehem. At least 22 interments were made in it between 1747 and 1769.

On the day-book of the Crown Inn under date of Oct. 10, 1763, is the following charge:

Captain Jacob Wetherhold, Dr.
	£.	s. d.
To 1 pint wine,		1. 2.
For 1 pint of beer, .		2½.
" eating and drinking for his attend- ants,		2. 0.
" oats and pasture for 2 horses,		3. 0.
" a shroud,		6. 0.
" ferriage for his at- tendants ten times,		2. 0.
	0.	14. 4½.

Sergeant McGuire's charges at the Crown Inn weeks at the Inn under the care of Dr. Otto. It is stated that the body of the Captain's servant who was the first to fall at Stenton's, was also brought to Bethlehem, and along with another victim was interred on what was then known as "the Burnside Farm," later William Lerch's, on the west side of the Monocacy.

Sergeant McGuire's charge at the Crown Inn dated Nov. 8, 1763, are as follows:

"Sergeant L. McGuire, Dr.
	£.	s. d.
For 4 half pints wine,		2. 4.
" beer and cider royal, . . .		9.
" Cash,		7. 6.
" his wife's diet for 8 days,		10. 0.
" 2 breakfasts,		1. 0.
" 1 horse at hay,		8.
" 25 days diet and attend- ance, 1s. 9d per day, . .		2. 3. 9.
	£3.	6. 0.

Refugees from Allen and Lehigh townships crowded the Crown Inn during the next few days. The inhabitants of the Saucon Valley also became panic stricken and crowded into the inn. Lieut. Daniel Hunsicker then in Smithfield township, on Oct. 14th, wrote to Horsfield, "I heard that there was murder committed in Sockern, and I desire to know if it be true or not." It was late in December before the last of the fugitives had returned to their homes from the Inn.

Then a party of Indians proceeded to a place on the Lehigh, a short distance above Siegfried's Bridge, to this day known as the "Indian Fall" or Rapids, where twelve Indians were seen wading across the river by Ulrich Schowalter, who then lived on the place owned later by Peter Troxel. Schowalter was at that time working on the roof of a building, the site of which being considerably elevated above the river Lehigh, he had a good opportunity to see and count the Indians who, after having crossed the river, landed near Leisenring's mountain, now Laurel Hill. The greater part of this township was at that time still covered with dense forests, so that the Indians could go from one place to another almost in a straight line, through the woods, without being seen. It is not known that they were seen by any one but Schowalter, until they reached the farm of John Jacob Mickley, where they encountered three of his children, two boys and a girl, in a field under a chestnut tree, gathering chestnuts. The children's ages were Peter, eleven; Henry, nine; and Barbara, seven; who, on seeing the Indians, began to run away. The little girl was overtaken not far from the tree by an Indian, who knocked her down with a tomahawk. Henry had reached the fence, and, while in the act of climbing it, an Indian threw a tomahawk at his back, which, it is supposed, instantly killed him. Both of these children were scalped. The little girl, in an insensible state, lived until the following morning. Peter, having reached the woods, hid himself between two large trees which were standing near together, and, surrounded by brushwood, he remained quietly concealed there, not daring to move for fear of being discovered, until he was sure that the Indians had left. He was, however, not long confined there; for, when he heard the screams of the Schneider family, he knew that the Indians were at that place, and that his way was clear. He escaped unhurt, and ran with all his might, by way of Adam Deshler's, to his brother, John Jacob Mickley, to whom he communicated the melancholy intelligence. From this time Peter lived a number of years with his brother John Jacob, after which he settled in Bucks county, where he died in the year 1827, at the age of 75. One of his daughters, widow of Henry Statzel, mentioned a remarkable fact related by her father, that the Mickley family owned at that time a very large and ferocious dog, which had a particular antipathy to Indians; and it was believed by the family that it was owing to the dog the Indians did not make an attack on their house, and thus the destruction of their lives was prevented.

After killing the Mickley children the Indians came to Nicholas Mark's and John Schneider's homes. An excellent account of what occurred is given in an extract of a letter from Bethlehem, dated Oct. 9th, from the Pennsylvania Gazette, viz:

"Early this morning came Nicholas Marks, of Whitehall township, and brought the following account, viz: That yesterday, just after dinner, as he opened his door, he saw an Indian standing about two poles from the house, who endeavored to shoot at him; but Marks shutting the door immediately, the fellow slipped into a cellar, close to the house. After this, said Marks went out of the house, with his wife and an apprentice boy,¹⁰ in order to make their escape, and saw another Indian standing behind a tree, who tried also to shoot at them, but his gun missed fire. They then saw the third Indian running through the orchard; upon which they made the best of their way, about two miles off, to Adam Deshler's place, where twenty men in arms were assembled, who went first to the house of John Jacob Mickley, where they found a boy and a girl lying dead, and the girl scalped. From thence they went to Hans Schneider's and said Mark's plantations, and found both houses on fire, and a horse tied to the bushes. They also found said Schneider, his wife and three children, dead in the field, the man and woman scalped; and, on going farther, they found two others wounded, one of whom was scalped. After this they returned with the two wounded girls to Adam Deshler's, and saw a woman, Jacob Alleman's wife, with a child, lying dead in the road, and scalped. The number of Indians, they think, was about fifteen or twenty. I cannot describe the deplorable condition this poor country is in; most of the inhabitants of Allen's township and other places are fled from their habitations. Many are in Bethlehem, and other places of the Brethern, and others farther down the country. I cannot ascertain the number killed, but think it exceeds twenty. The people of Nazareth, and other places belonging to the Brethern, have put themselves in the best posture of defence they can; they keep a strong watch every night, and hope, by the blessing of God, if they are attacked, to make a good stand."

¹⁰This apprentice boy was George Graff, of Allentown, then fifteen years of age. He ran to Philip Jacob Schreiber with the news of these murders. He was captain of a company in the Revolutionary War. In 1786 he resigned as collector of the excise, and was sheriff of Northampton County in the years 1787, '88 and '89. For three years he was a member of the legislature, then holding its sessions in Philadelphia, from December 3, 1793, to December, 1796. He lived many years in Allentown, where he died in 1835 in the eighty-eighth year of his age.

In a letter from the same county, of the 10th inst., the number is said to be twenty-three, besides a great many dangerously wounded: "that the inhabitants are in the utmost distress and confusion, flying from their places, some of them with hardly sufficient to cover themselves, and that it was to be feared there were many houses, etc., burned, and lives lost that were not then known. And by a gentleman from the same quarter we are informed, that it was reported, when he came away, that Yost's mill, about eleven miles from Bethlehem, was destroyed, and all the people that belonged to it, excepting a young man, cut off."

John Schneider and Nicholas Marks lived on the road from Egypt to Scheidy's, where James Frantz now lives. Schneider's wife was Anna Margaretha Wotring, a daughter of Abraham Wotring. She was born in 1726 and accompanied her parents to America in 1733. She married John Schneider about 1745 and they settled on a portion of her father's land, which he had warranted in 1738. Their eldest daughter, Eva, married John Nicholas Marks, and lived near her parents. A daughter, Sara, born August 16, 1752, and the youngest child, a daughter, Susanna, born in April, 1763, with another child, whose name is not known, were murdered by the Indians, with both the parents, on this memorable 8th of October. Another child was missing and was supposed to have been carried off by the Indians, and was never heard of. Two other daughters, Magdalena and Dorothea, were wounded and left for dead. They were attended by Doctor John Matthew Otto, of Bethlehem, Dr. Jacob Reiss, and Dr. Frederick Spiegel, of Macungie, and Magdalena entirely recovered. Dorothea, who had been scalped, also recovered, but was subject to fits for many years after.

Marks and his wife ran to Fort Deshler, and the apprentice boy, George Graff (great-great-grandfather of the writer), ran two miles to Philip Jacob Schreiber's, where is now Coplay. He related to his grandson, the late William Leisenring, that when he arrived there he had only one trouser leg remaining, the other having been torn off by the bushes, he ran in such haste. The cellar of a new house was being constructed at the Schneider and Marks houses, and a few years ago traces of the mortar could still be seen.

The dead were buried on the Schneider farm. The site of the graves is near a tree in a field west of the garden at James Frantz's home. One of the houses stood where is now the garden.

The wife of Nicholas Marks and her sister, Magdalena, who married Nicholas Allimang, the only surviving issue of John Schneider, became entitled to the land, and September 25, 1773, Marks became the owner. On July 24, 1780, Marks and his wife, Eva, sold to George Remeli, of Heidelberg township a total of 226 acres and 68 perches for £959 specie. Remely built in 1784 a spring house, which still stands. He died in October, 1800, and his executors, his son Ambrose Remely and Peter Roth, a son-in-law, sold a tract of 164 acres to two of his sons, George and Henry Frantz, for £1455, who divided it on December 27, 1805.

The screams of the Schneiders' attracted John Jacob Mickley and Ulrich Flickinger, on their way to Stenton's, and they hastened to the place, where, a short time before, all was peace and quietness and saw the mangled bodies of the dead and wounded, and the houses of Marks and Schneider in flames. The twenty soldiers stationed at Adam Deshler's, pursued the Indians but could not overtake them. The Schneider girls were taken to Adam Deshler's and on the way they found Jacob Alliman's wife, with a child, lying dead in the road and scalped.

It is well known that, when the Indians become exasperated through real or imaginary injuries, they consider themselves bound to take revenge on their enemies, without regard to age or sex; it therefore frequently happens that the innocent suffer equally with the guilty.

It may perhaps be proper to state in this place that the Mickley family, as well as that of Schneider's, were among those who suffered innocently, not a single instance being known of their ever having been guilty of molesting the Indians. Heckewelder says: "The Indians, after leaving this house (Stenton's), murdered by accident an innocent family, having mistaken the house¹¹ they meant to attack; after which they returned to their homes."

In Squire Edward Kohler's account of Egypt he states that the Indians next visited the farm of one Bock, near Unionville, who with his sons, were threshing. He and his wife fled to the woods. The two boys hid in the straw in the barn, and the Indians set fire to the barn, when the boys were burned to death.

The following letter written by E. D. Leisenring, editor of the Friedensbote, gives another version. The letter speaks first of the Frantz capture which took place in 1757. It is possible that Henry Frantz, father of Margaret, was killed by this same band of Indians in 1763, ¹¹It was generally believed that the Indians mistook this house for that of Paulus Balliet, which they intended to attack. Mr. Balliet lived at the place now Ballietsville, and kept a store and tavern, similar to that of John Stenton's.

as opposite his name in the tax list of 1764 is written "Killed by Indians."

"ALLENTOWN, Jan. 13, 1876.

Dr. L. B. Balliet:

DEAR SIR: As you live amongst her kin, accessible to old papers and Bibles, can you give me an authentic history of Margaret Frantz, who was captured by the Indians and held for a number of years, after liberation and return married Johann Nikolas Wootring, on the 9th of May, 1769? I think she was taken captive at or near the place now occupied by Solomon Hoffman. How old was she when captured? How long did she remain with the Indians? When and where was she born? (Presume her gravestone at Union Church will tell). Where was she taken to, and in what year was she captured?

"Also, what do you know or how much can you ascertain of the history of the murder of the Jung Family. The family lived in the neighborhood of Union Church; the mother and two children were killed at the house, one child and the father, hidden under straw in the barn, were burned alive, and one man (Knecht) by the name of Bock escaped with one little girl. In what year was this murder committed? Was it at the same time when Margaret Frantz was taken? I think it must have been previous to October 8, 1763, when the Stentons' and others about Kreidersville, also Mickleys', and Schneiders' in Whitehall were murdered.

"If you could obtain the facts above mentioned, it would fill out an important link and be a great acquisition to the history pertaining to our section of country.

"With high regards, &c.,
"E. D. LEISENRING."

That these affairs also alarmed the Government of the Province of Pennsylvania, is evident from the fact that when Governor James Hamilton had received information of the murders in Northampton county he took the matter immediately in hand, called the attention of the Assembly to the subject, and recommended to it, in the strongest terms, to devise means for the protection of the frontier inhabitants, in the following message to the Assembly;

"To the Assembly Recommending measures for the protection and relief of the inhabitants of Northampton County suffering from Indian attacks:

"Observing by the returns which have been made to me, that your House, consists, for the most part, of the same Members that have served in Assembly for several Years past, I cannot but express my Satisfaction, that in the present Critical Situation of Affairs, the Business to be transacted by me, is with Gentlemen whose long Experience in publick Concerns has rendered them so equal to the Task they have undertaken.

"I am sensible it is very unusual to enter upon Business of weight at your first meeting, that being set apart for, and employed in preparing the House for the better Reception & dispatch of it at some future time; yet, I flatter myself you will readily dispense with a Custom by no means essential, in favour of the measure I have recommended to you, which is of as great importance as can come under your Consideration, no less indeed, than the Safety and preservation of the Country.

"You will be pained, then to know that within a few days past, I have received well attested Accounts of many barbarous and shocking Murders, and other Depredations, having been committed by Indians on the Inhabitants of Northampton County, in Consequence whereof, great numbers of those who escaped the rage of the Enemy, have already deserted, and are daily deserting their Habitations; so, that unless some effectual aid can be speedily granted them, to induce them to stand their Ground, it is difficult to say where these desertions will stop, or to how small a distance from the Capitol our Frontier be reduced.

"The Provincial Commissioners and I, have, in consequence of the Resolve of the Assembly of the 6th of July last, done every thing in our Power for the protection of the Province, pursuant to the Trust reposed in us; But as our funds are entirely exhausted, and even a considerable Arrear become due to the Soldiers and others employed by the Government, for their pay, which we have it not in our power to discharge, it seems impossible that the Forces now on foot can be no longer kept together, without a Supply be speedily granted for that purpose.

"I do, therefore, Gentlemen, in the most earnest manner, recommend to your immediate Consideration the distressed State of our unfortunate Inhabitants on the Frontiers, who are continually exposed to the Savage cruelty of a merciless Enemy; and request that you will in your present Session, grant such a Supply as, with God's assistance, may enable us, not only to protect our People, but to take a severe Revenge on our perfidious Foes, by pursuing them into their own Countries, for which purpose there prevails at present a noble ardour among our Frontier people, which in my opinion, ought by all means to be cherished and improved.

"I have, Gentlemen, only one thing more to recommend and request of you which is that, in contriving the ways and means for raising the Supply to be granted, you will carefully avoid whatever may occasion a Disagreement in Opinion between you and me, by means whereof your good Intentions may be frustrated and defeated, as has unfortunately happened on more than one Occasion before, and particularly in the last session of the late Assembly.

“JAMES HAMILTON.

“October 15th, 1763.”

The Assembly acted promptly in furnishing the proper means for defence, by passing a bill on the 22d of October, 1763, viz: “That the sum of twenty-four thousand pounds be granted to his majesty, for raising, paying, and victualing eight hundred men (officers included), to be employed in the most effectual manner for the defence of this Province.”

The Assembly also acted immediately on the following petitions, presented by Nicholas Marks praying for the relief of the daughters of John Schneider:—

“1765, May 15th.—A petition from Nicholas Marks, next friend and brother-in-law to Magdalena and Dorothy Schneider, daughters of John Schneider, of Whitehall township, in the county of Northampton, deceased, being both minors, was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that on the eighth day of October, in the year one thousand and seven hundred and sixty-three, the said John Schneider, his wife, and three children, were most cruelly murdered by the Indians, at their dwelling house in Whitehall township aforesaid, one of the children being supposed to be taken captive, having ever since been missing and never heard of; and the aforesaid girls barbarously wounded, one scalped, and left for dead upon the spot by the said enemy, whereby the whole remaining part of the family hath been left utterly impoverished. That one of the aforesaid girls, namely, Magdalena, through the mercy of God, and skill of the surgeons who attended her, has happily recovered of her wounds; but the other, named Dorothy, is still in a languishing condition; and subject to fits, whereof she has frequent returns. That the accounts annexed to the petition have been brought by the surgeons against the said Magdalena and Dorothy, and amount, together, to forty-four pounds, three shillings and eight pence, which the estate of their deceased father (after just debts are discharged) is insufficient to pay; neither is it in the power of the said sufferers to make any compensation to the surgeons. Wherefore the petitioner prays the House to take the premises into consideration, and give orders to the Provincial Treasurer to pay off the said accounts as a public debt, or take such other method to discharge the same, and relieve a distressed and helpless family, as the House shall think proper.”

“May 16th.—The House resumed the consideration of the petition of Nicholas Marks, in behalf of Magdalene and Dorothy Snyder, sisters-in-law to the petitioner, and after some debate thereon, ordered: That Mr. Samuel Foulke, from Bucks, and Mr. George Taylor, from Northampton be a committee to take the opinion of some Physician in town upon the reasonableness of the surgeon’s accounts annexed to said petition, and report the same to the House.”

“May 18th.—The members appointed to take the opinion of some Physician in town, on the accounts of certain surgeons, for the cure of Magdalena and Dorothy Schneider, wounded by the Indians, delivered the said account at the table, with a certificate under the hands of Doctor Thomas Cadwalader and Doctor Phineas Bond, that they had examined the same and do not find any of the charges therein contained exorbitant or unreasonable. Whereupon certificates were drawn at the table to John Matthew Otto, the Estate of Jacob Rein, deceased, and to Frederick Spiegel, amounting in the whole to £44 3s 8d, which, being signed by the Speaker, were delivered to Mr. Taylor, of the County of Northampton.”

In M. Joseph J. Mickley’s valuable pamphlet on this massacre, published in 1875, he makes this comment:

“When the condition of this part of the country is considered, in which, one hundred years ago, a few families were living, without protection, in a wilderness, deprived of almost every comfort, exposed to attacks from wild beasts and reptiles, and the danger of being murdered, and have their property destroyed by hostile Indians, who kept them constantly in such fear that the members of the families bade each other farewell in the evening before retiring, being under the impression that they might not meet again on the next morning; when such a melancholy state of affairs is compared with the present flourishing condition, where now the people are living in peace, themselves and property protected, and where are seen numerous finely cultivated farms, with convenient habitations, furnaces, manufactories, canals, railroads, improvements in every branch of industry, and the comforts of a numerous population; when all this is considered, we are impelled to profound gratitude. If any person exists who is unable to appreciate these advantages and blessings, he must be a heartless and ungrateful being, unworthy of living in this community."

The stray band of Indians did not remain long in this region, but soon made their way back to their camps in the mountains. In a letter written by Rev. John Elder to Governor Hamilton, from Paxtang on Oct. 25th, he says:

"Sir: In a letter I wrote to your Honor the 17th inst., I acquainted you, that it was then impossible to suspend the Wyoming expedition. The party is now returned, and I shall not trouble your Honor with any account of their proceedings, as Major Clayton informs, that he transmitted to you, from Fort Augusta, a particular journal of their transactions from their leaving Hunter's till they returned to Augusta. The mangled carcasses of these unhappy people presented to our troops a melancholly scene, which had been acted not above two days before their arrival; and by the way the savages came into the town, it appears they were the same party that committed the ravages in Northampton county, and as they set off from Wyoming, up the same branch of the river towards Wihilusing, and from several other circumstances, it's evident that till that branch is cleared of the enemy, the frontier settlements will be in no safety."

The following letters, written November 23rd and 24th, mention fifteen warriors who were probably the band that committed the murders in Whitehall and Allen townships:

"Ensign Kern's, near Fort Allen,
Nov. 23rd, 1763.

"Sir: On the 16th inst., Job Chillaway arrived here, being sent by Papunchay to inform that he and about twenty-five Indians, (women and children included) were on their way from Weyhelusing. The day after Job's arrival he delivered a string of Wampum, and the following message in behalf of himself, Papunchay, John Curtis, &c., which he desired might be transmitted to your honour, viz.:

"Brother,

"We are very glad that you have taken pity on us, according to the promises you made us since we had any correspondence together.

"Brother, we are glad to hear you have pointed out two ways to us, one to our brother Sir William Johnson, the other to you. Our hearts inclineth towards you, the Governor of Philadelphia.

"Brother, take pity on us, and keep the road open that we may pass without hurt by your young men.

"Brother, point out the place where you intend to settle us, and we shall be glad, let that be where it will.'

"Job informed us that there were fifteen Munsey warriors, who, for three nights before he left Papunchay had encamped close by their encampment, how far they intended to proceed, or what was their intentions, he could not find out. As it was expected that Papunchay was near the frontiers, Colonel Clayton marched with fifty men (mostly volunteers) on the 20th inst. with Job Chillaway, in hopes of surprising the warriors; We were out three days without discovering either them or Papunchay, what hath detained the latter we know not. Job hath desired me to wait for them at this place a few days longer. On their arrival here I purpose to conduct them to Philadelphia, unless I receive orders to the contrary from your Honour.

"I am, sir

"Your Humble Servant,
"JAMES IRVINE.

"Directed.—(On his Majestie's Service.)

"For the Honorable John Penn, Esquire,
"Governor of the Province of Pennsylvania."

"BETHLEHEM, November 24th, 1763.

"Sir: On the 18th inst. I arrived at Ensign Kern's, where I found Job Chillaway, who informed me that there were fifteen warriors that for three nights before he left Papunchay had incamped close by them. As there were but two officers and seven men of Capt. Wetterholt's company there at the time, I applied to Capt. James Haes to raise his company of volunteers. He joined me on the 20th with two officers and 22 men; I then marched to Fort Allen, and in the evening was joined by Capt. Craig and 15 of his men. We sett off the next morning at day-break and marched 'till night, over an excessive bad road, covered with snow two feet deep, without discovering anything of the Indians. Job Chillaway set off next morning to see what had detained Papunchay, &c., and promised if the warriors still followed them, to give me immediate notice. I returned the same day to Ensign Kern's, where I found Capt. Nicholas Wetterholt. I cannot help taking notice to your Honour of the alertness of Captain Haes and his officers on the occasion, and as there is a Lieutenant and Ensign wanted in these parts, I would recommend Captain James Haes and Ensign Alexander Boyd as gentlemen very suitable to act in those stations, Mr. Haes as Lieutenant and Mr. Boyd as Ensign; they have already recruited twelve men fit for the service. I arrived here last night, and shall set off immediately towards the Minisinks.

"At present I cannot form a judgment in what manner I shall station the troops under my command, but from what I have seen and by the reports of others, think that three Companies will not be sufficient to defend so extensive a frontier. I am informed there is a certain Christopher Truby, who deserted in the year 1758 from the Pennsylvania troops, at present an Ensign in Captain Web's company, as it will be a hurt to the service to keep a person of his character any longer in commission, I hope your Honour will strike his name out of the list of officers for the future. Inclosed is a return of Captain Wetterholt's company.

"I am, Sir,

"Your Humble Servant,

"ASHER CLAYTON.

"Directed.—(On his Majesty's Service.)

"For the Honourable John Penn, Esquire,

"Governor of the Province of Pennsylvania."

The unexpected attack of the Indians upon the inhabitants of Whitehall township alarmed the whole township and the people gathered together at the houses of those settlers best qualified for defense. As the alarm spread, hundreds of men, women and children crowded into the little town of Allentown, then only a year old, with about fifteen houses. Colonel James Burd had arrived there on the evening before, Friday, and had sent to Mr. Gordon at Easton to come to Allentown the next morning, Saturday, to consult with him regarding the town. On Saturday morning, when the people began to crowd the town, saying that the Indians were a few miles away, killing and burning all before them, Colonel Burd gathered the men of the town together and organized a company of 25 men for the defence of the town. Mr. Burd waited until three o'clock for Mr. Gordon and then rode to Bethlehem. There he found the town also crowded with fugitives and wounded people and that Mr. Gordon had been there, but on hearing the news of the massacre did not alight from his horse, but returned at once to Easton. Col. Burd was compelled to leave Allentown Sunday morning by the Governor's orders for Fort Augusta, at Sunbury, where he was in command.

The murders by the Indians inflamed popular opinion against the Moravian Indians at Nain, in what is now Hanover township, and many threats were made against them and the Moravians at Bethlehem. Stenton's widow claimed to identify a young Indian of Nain, named Rénatus, the son of Jacob, one of the first three converts of the Moravians in Oley in 1742, as one of the band who shot her husband. Rénatus was arrested by a legal warrant from Philadelphia on October 29, 1763, by George Klein, of Bethlehem, a deputy of Sheriff Jennings. John Dickinson was engaged for his defence and after seven months in prison in Philadelphia, his final trial took place at Easton, in June, 1764, and he was acquitted June 21st. He was taken back to Philadelphia under guard, for safety, as his life was threatened. November 5, 1763, an order reached Bethlehem for the removal of all the Indians at Nain to Philadelphia, 121 in number. They arrived at Philadelphia guarded by a sheriff and deputies, on November 11. They were first placed in the barracks in the Northern Liberties, but the attitude of the people was so menacing that they were removed to Province Island. Peace with the Indians was declared in December, 1764. In March, 1765, the Moravian Indians were released from the barracks at Philadelphia. They arrived at Bethlehem on March 22, 1765, 83 in number, and were taken to Nain to rest a few days. On March 31st a farewell service was held at Nain, preparatory to their journey to the Wyoming Valley, where the Government had ordered them removed. They arrived at Wyalusing on May 9th, 1765. Here they remained for seven years, when they were removed to Ohio. William Allen, Jr., as the representative of the Governor, gave personal attention to their secure passage through the country between Bethlehem and the mountains. With the departure of the Indians on April 3, 1765, Moravian Indian Missions in the Lehigh Valley came to an end. The houses at Nain were sold at auction to citizens of Bethlehem and were taken down and removed. Six of them were set up again in Bethlehem and one is still standing on Cedar street.

The following roll of one of the companies in service appears in the Archives:

Muster Roll of Captain Jacob Wetterholt's company, enlisted for three months, stationed in Lower Smithfield township, Northampton county, July, 1763.

[No., men's names, enlistment, born, age, height, ft. and in., face, eyes, hair, qualified.]

1. Capt. Jacob Wetterholt, July 19, Germany, 36, 5-7, round, brown, brown, Aug. 25.
2. Lieut. Dan. Hunsicker, July 19, Germany, 27, 5-9, long, gray, brown, Aug. 25.
3. Ens. Chr. Truby, July 19, Pennsylvania, 27, 5-9, long, brown, brown, Aug. 25.
4. Serg. Fr. Delius, July 20, Germany, 53, 5-10, round, brown, blonde, July 29.
5. Serg. Jacob Seckler, July 20, Penna., 23, 5-10, round, brown, brown, July 29.
6. Corp. George Breis, July 19, Germany, 25, 5-11, long, brown, brown, July 22.
7. Corp. Seb'ast. Werner, July 20, Germany, 25, 5-3, long, brown, brown, July 29.
8. Nickolaus Silvius, July 19, Penna., 21, 5-10, long, gray, blonde, July 29.
9. Michael Heidt, July 20, Germany, 25, 5-9, round, gray, blonde, July 29.

10. John Claudius, July 20, Germany, 29, 5-6, round, gray, brown, a baker, July 20.
 11. Adam Geis, July 20, Germany, 22, 5-9, long, gray, blonde, a tailor, July 29.
 12. Valathin Hack, July 20, Germany, 23, 5-6, round, brown, brown, July 29.
 13. Stoffel Miller, July 21, Germany, 18, 5-7, long, brown, brown, a tailor, July 29.
 14. George Kunckel, July 21, Germany, 20, 5-11, round, gray, brown, July 29.
 15. Solomon Leckenton, July 21, Penna., 24, 5-8, long, brown, brown, July 29.
 16. John Steed, July 22, New Jersey, 17, 5-5, long, brown, brown, July 22.
 17. Nick. Sheirer, July 22, Penna., 21, 5-5, long, brown, blonde, a mason, July 29.
 18. Reichert Prosser July 23, New Jersey, 18, 5-5, round, gray, brown, July 27.
 19. Peter Ladig, July 25, Penna., 20, 5-6, long, brown, black, a smith, July 29.
 20. Daniel Kell, July 26, Penna., 21, 5-6, round, brown, brown, a smith, July 29.
 21. Barthol Huber, July 26, Penna., 29, 5-11, long, brown, black, a shoemaker, July 29.
 22. John Schwartz, July 26, Penna., 19, 5-7, long, gray, black, a carpenter, July 29.
 23. Samuel Coofe, July 27, Penna., 30, 5-8, long, brown, brown, July 29.
 24. Cornelius Stack, July 28, New Jersey, 30, 5-10, round, gray, blonde, July 29.
 25. Daniel Hill, July 29, Penna., 21, 5-2, round, brown, brown, July 29.
 26. Jo. Geo. Kunckel, July 30, Germany, 21, 6-0, long, gray, blonde, Aug. 8.
 27. Martin Meyer, July 30, Penna., 20, 5-8, round, gray, brown, Aug. 8.
 28. Edward Williams, July 30, Penna., 21, 5-5, long, brown, blonde, Aug. 8.
 29. Nickol Diehl, July 31, Penna., 28, 5-7, round, gray, black, Aug. 9.
 30. Ulrich Housser, July 31, Penna., 21, 5-5, long, brown, brown, Aug. 4.
 31. Herman Stoltz, July 31, Penna., 20, 5-7, long, brown, brown, Aug. 4.
 32. John Rosel, Aug. 1, Penna., 26, 5-7, round, gray, black, Aug. 4.
 33. Uriah Clerck, Aug. 1, New Jersey, 28, 5-9, long, gray, brown, Aug. 4.
 34. Adam Shauers, Aug 1, New England, 20, 5-9, long, gray, brown, Aug. 2.
 35. Ferd. Miller, Aug. 2, Penna., 21, 5-6, round, brown, black, Aug. 4.
 36. Thos. Bird, Aug. 2, Old England, 25, 5-6, round, gray, blonde, Aug. 8.
 37. Samuel Vandermerck, Aug. 2, Sooter, 17, 5-6, long, gray, brown, Aug. 4.
 38. Michael Meyer, Aug. 8, Penna., 18, 5-5, round, gray, brown, Aug. 4.
 39. Jacob Buss, Aug. 6, Penna., 18, 5-8, long, gray, black, Aug. 12.
 40. Jost Kocker, Aug. 5, Penna., 18, 5-10, long, gray, black, Aug. 12.
 41. Joseph Kuss, Aug. 7, Germany, 24, 5-10, round, brown, black.
 42. Michael Ropi, Aug. 7, Penna., 24, 5-10, round, brown, black.
 43. James Stuart, Aug. 7, New England, 28, 5-11, long, gray, black.
 44. Benjamin Chambers, Aug. 8, Penna., 21, 5-0, round, gray, black, a shoemaker.
 45. Will Chambers, Aug. 8, Penna., 23, 5-7, round, gray, brown, Aug. 12.

46. James Borck, Aug. 8, New Jersey, 21, 5-5, round, gray, brown, Aug. 12.
 47. John Johnson, Aug. 11, New Jersey, 24, 5-10, long, gray, brown, Aug. 12.
 48. Rut. Holben, Aug. 17, New Jersey, 15, 5-6, long, brown, brown.
 49. Rot'er. Frescher, Aug. 18, New Jersey, 35, 5-10, long, gray, blonde.
 50. John Sorter, Sept. 2, Penna., 24, 5-9, round, gray, black.

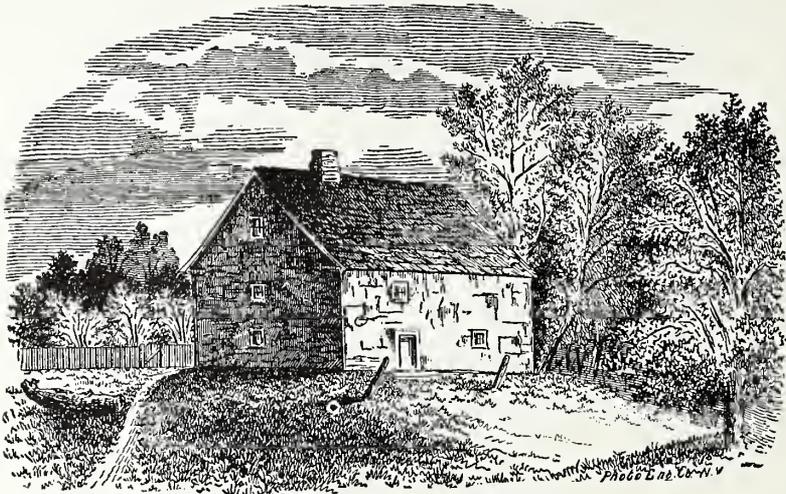

Deshler's Fort.

Adam Deshler's house, to which the settlers fled when threatened by Indian attacks, stands on the north bank of the Coplay creek, near the Ironton railroad, between Coplay and Egypt. It was built by Adam Deshler in 1760. It is a substantially built stone structure, forty feet long and thirty feet in width, two and a half stories high, with walls two feet thick. There were originally but a few small windows, each with four panes of glass, and one door, but more have since been added. In the gable ends were square loopholes through which the occupants could fire without exposing themselves to the enemy. A large hearth or chimney occupies the center of the house and divides the lower and upper stories into two apartments. The oaken beams in one of the rooms are smoothly finished and grooved. Two of the original walnut doors, with Dutch locks, still remain. The house was built to withstand any attacks, and it is said there was a well within the walls.

Adjoining the house on the north was a large frame building, sufficiently large for quartering twenty soldiers and for military stores. The ruins of this building were seen in 1815 by the antiquary, Jos. J. Mickley. Here a number of soldiers were stationed at the time of the Indian troubles in 1763.

Adam Deshler, a native of Switzerland, purchased the land on which he later built this house, a tract of 203½ acres, from Frederick Newhard. The history of the tract dates from October 28, 1737, when a warrant was issued to John Reinberry for "a tract of land situated on Indian Conelin's creek, in the county of Bucks, containing 400 acres and allowance." It was surveyed November 14, 1737. The adjoining land-owners were William Allen on the east, and Jacob Colar (Kohler) on the north. By warrant of February 1, 1743, George Kern and Frederick Newhard became the possessors of the tract, each having a moiety of 203 acres, the tract being divided November 30, 1744. Frederick Newhard conveyed his right to the 203½ acres to Adam Deshler in 1746, who received a patent for the land on February 9, 1750.

Adam Deshler was employed, during the French and Indian war, to furnish provisions for the provincial forces, as shown in his account with the province of Pennsylvania, viz:

FORT DESHLER IN 1860.

FORT DESHLER IN 1910.

- 1756 Feb. 26 To Adam Deshler, for provisions furnished to Captain Wetterholt's Company,£59 18s. 11½d.
- 1756 May 28 To Adam Deshler, for provisions furnished to Captain Wetterholt's Company,£47 11s. 2d.
- 1756 Oct. 29 To Adam Deshler, for provisions furnished to Captain Wetterholt's Company, and the Provincial forces,£259 18s. 7d.
- 1757 April 16 To Balliet and Deshler, for provisions supplied the forces at Forts Allen, Norris, and Hamilton,£807 4s. 11½d.
- 1757 Aug. 26 To Deshler and Balliet, for provisions supplied Provincial forces and Indians,£996 9s. 11d.
- 1757 Nov. 8 To Deshler and Balliet, for provisions supplied Provincial forces and Indians,£550 19s. 5d.
- 1758 June 9 To Levan and Deshler, for provisions delivered sundry Companies, £1,354 4s. 4d.

He died in 1781, when his son, Adam Deshler, Jr., became the owner of the property. Adam Deshler, Jr., died in 1790. His only son, David, became the owner and after his death in 1827, his son, James Deshler acquired it. The property passed from the heirs of James Deshler into other hands and on November 20, 1899, the old building and 151 acres of land were sold by Thomas Schaadt to the Coplay Cement Company for $100,000. The building is now occupied by foreigners who are in the employ of the owners.

This old stone mansion, the only building standing in Lehigh county which was used as a fort in the colonial period, should by all means be preserved and marked as a historic spot, not only as a memorial to the pioneers of this locality but also as a reminder to the coming generations of the hardships which their staunch and sturdy ancestors were compelled to undergo.

The illustrations show the fort as it appeared in the years 1860 and 1910.

Pennsylvania Archives—Mickley's Murders by the Indians—Frontier Forts of Pennsylvania—Heckewelder's Indian Nations—Loskiel's History of the Missions of the Indians in America—Pennsylvania Gazette—Votes of the Assembly—Reichel's Crown Inn—Fatzinger's First Settlers of the Irish Settlement—Historic Buildings of the Lehigh Valley—Skizzen aus dem Lecha Thal—Egypt Reformed church records—Manuscript collections of Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

For several years after the subsidence of the Indian troubles, the colonies quietly pursued the even tenor of their way, until the passage of the stamp act on March 22, 1765, by the British Parliament. This law required that for every skin or piece of vellum, or parchment, or declaration, plea, rejoinder, demurrer, or other pleading, or any copy thereof, in any court of law or any certificate of any degree taken in any college, any inventory, bill of lading, appointment, franchise, license, probate of will, bond, warrant of survey, lease, indenture, bill of sale, newspaper, pamphlet or almanac, a stamp duty should be imposed. The stamps were printed in embossed letters, sometimes directly upon the paper used, but more generally, for the colonies, on course blue paper, such as is known as "tobacco paper." The value of each stamp was indicated upon it, and varied from three pence to two pounds. The kinds of documents and other papers to be stamped to make them legal numbered fifty-four. To the blue-paper stamps was attached a narrow strip of tin-foil. The ends of the foil were passed through the parchment or paper, flattened on the opposite side, and a piece of paper with a rough device and number, with a crown and the initials of the King pasted over to secure it.

While the avowed purpose of the act was the raising of revenue for defending and protecting the American colonies, its real meaning, clearly perceived by the colonists, was to replenish the British treasury, which had been exhausted, not by defending the colonies, but by wars in Europe.

This measure met with general opposition throughout the colonies. The people in cities and villages gathered in excited groups and loudly expressed their indignation. "Taxation without representation is tyranny" became the cry (an idea borrowed from the Dutch), which was boldly enunciated in a pamphlet by James Otis, of Boston. A general congress of delegates was called and met in New York in October, 1765, and sent out documents asserting the rights of the people. October 31, 1765, Jacob Hiltzheimer, of Philadelphia, wrote in his diary: "My newspaper was delivered in the morning, being the last before the Stamp Act goes into force." November 1st was observed as a day of fasting and mourning. Funeral processions paraded city streets and bells tolled funeral knells. The colors of sailing vessels were trailed at half-mast, and the columns of newspapers exhibited broad black lines. The courts were closed, legal marriages ceased, ships remained in port, and for a while all business was suspended.

Merchants entered into agreements not to import goods from Great Britain, and very soon remonstrances from all classes in America reached the British ministry, as well as from merchants and manufacturers of London, so that the question of repealing the act was raised.

On March 18, 1766, the act was repealed by the provisions of a bill introduced in Parliament by William Pitt. In the bill was a clause declaring the right of Parliament to tax the colonies, which was not acceptable to the colonists. Pitt said the repealing bill could not have passed but for this clause, so of two evils he chose the least. The American colonists were so pleased with the repeal of the obnoxious act that, in gratitude to the King and to Pitt, an equestrian statue of the King was erected in Bowling Green, New York, and a statue of Pitt in the attitude of speaking was set up at the intersection of Wall and William streets.

The news of the repeal of the act was received in Philadelphia on April 7, 1766, for which the bells rang all day and houses were illuminated and a large number of citizens had a dinner at the State House.

In 1767 an act was passed imposing a tax on tea, glass, paper and painters' colors imported into the colonies. April 2, 1770, Lord North, the British prime minister, offered a bill in Parliament repealing duties on all articles except tea, which became a law. The colonists regarded this as a violation of their rights, objecting not so much to the amount of duty imposed, as to the principle involved, which lay at the foundation of their liberties. Merchants in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Annapolis and other places, agreed not to import tea. Three hundred ladies in Boston formed a league, agreeing not to drink any tea until the revenue act should be repealed. Theophilus Lillie was one of the six merchants in Boston who refused to sign association papers not to import merchandize from Great Britain and openly sold tea. One night an effigy was placed near his door with a finger upon it, pointing to his store. In the morning all laughed at the image except Ebenezer Richardson, who attempted to remove it, and was pelted with snow balls. Becoming angered, he rushed into the house, seized a gun and fired it into the crowd, wounding Samuel Gore slightly and killing Christopher Snyder, a German school boy about nine years old, the only son of a widow residing in Frog Lane. The affair produced intense excitement throughout the colonies. "No other incident," said John Adams, "has so stirred the people as the shooting of this boy." Never had there been such a funeral in Boston as that of the little German boy, on February 26th, 1770. The schools were closed to allow the scholars to march in procession, of whom more than six hundred were present. Merchants and mechanics, professional men and citizens of all classes, in number over three thousand, followed his bier, uniting in a common protest against the enforcement of law by show of force.

Shiploads of tea were refused and poured into the harbors at Boston and New York and at Philadelphia. On October 2, 1773, a public meeting was held protesting against taxation by Parliament and denouncing as an enemy to his country whoever should "aid or abet in unloading, receiving, or sending the tea." In December, 1773, a tea ship was stopped four miles below Philadelphia and sent back to England.

Parliament upon hearing of these actions by the colonists, adopted measures contemplating their submission, among them the "Boston Port Bill," by which the port of Boston was closed. June 1, 1774, the day in which this bill was to take effect, was adopted as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer throughout the colonies, on resolution of the Assembly of Virginia.

At this time the terms "Whigs" and "Tories" came into general use,—the former to describe those in sympathy with the cause of Boston and on the side of the Colonies against Parliament; the latter to designate those whose sympathies were with Great Britain against the colonies.

Early in June a circular was sent to the principal citizens of the different counties in Pennsylvania by the Philadelphia committee of correspondence, calling a meeting at the State House to take the sentiments of the inhabitants of the city and the several counties, the Governor having declined to call the Assembly. Each county chose its deputies who assembled at Philadelphia on July 15, 1774. The deputies from Northampton County were William Edmonds, Peter Kichline, John Okely, and Jacob Arndt. At this meeting a resolution was adopted requesting the Assembly to appoint persons to attend a Congress of Deputies from the several colonies.

The Assembly appointed Joseph Galloway, Samuel Rhoads, Thomas Mifflin, John Morton, Charles Humphreys, George Ross, Edward Biddle and John Dickinson, delegates from Pennsylvania to the First Continental Congress, which met in Carpenters' Hall, Philadelphia, from September 5 to October 26, 1774, and adopted the articles of confederation, which should be regarded as the commencement of the American Union. On December 8, 1774, the Assembly again appointed the same men delegates to Congress, excepting Mr. Rhoads, who was then Mayor of Philadelphia. Later Benjamin Franklin, James Wilson and Thomas Willing were added to the delegation, and Mr. Galloway resigned.

On December 21, 1774, the freeholders of Northampton county met at Easton and elected the following Committee of Observation for the county: Lewis Gordon, Peter Kachlein, Jacob Arndt, Michael Messinger, Melchoir Hay, George Taylor, John Hays, Jr., John Okely, Anthony Lerch, Jacob Morey, John Wetzel, Andrew Engelman, John Griesemer, Henry Kooken, David Deshler, Casper Doll, Joseph Gaston, Philip Drum, Yost Dreisbach, Daniel Knauss, Thomas Everett, Michael Ohl, John Hartman, Nicholas Kern, George Gilbert, Abraham Miller, Nicholas Dupui, Sen., Manuel Gonsales and Abraham Westbrook.

Of this committee Messrs. Morey, Wetzel, Engelman, Griesemer, Kooken, Deshler, Knauss, Everett, Ohl, and Hartman were residents of what is now Lehigh county.

This committee then chose as a standing Committee of Correspondence for this county, George Taylor, Lewis Gordon, Peter Kachlein, Jacob Arndt, John Okely and Henry Kooken, Esqrs.

The county Committee of Observation met again on January 9, 1775, and chose George Taylor, Peter Kachlein, Jacob Arndt and John Okely to represent Northampton county in the Provincial Convention held at Philadelphia from January 23rd to 28th, 1775, who were instructed to concur in all things with the delegates from their sister counties.

The county Committee of Correspondence, consisting of six members, held a meeting at Easton, on May 6, 1775, at which four members were present and unanimously resolved in consequence of a letter received from the Philadelphia committee, which made a deep impression on the local committee: "That the several townships in this county should associate and form themselves into Companies, choose their proper officers and provide for each man one good fire lock, one pound powder, four pounds of lead, a sufficient quantity of flints and a cartridge box." The committee then directed the clerk, Mr. Robert Traill, to write letters to the several committeemen of the townships giving them notice of the resolution.

The Committee of Observation held a meeting at the Court House in Easton on May 22, 1775, at which they endorsed the actions of the Continental Congress and recommended that all free-men in the county provide themselves with arms and ammunition and muster as often as possible to make themselves expert in the military art. At this meeting a return was made of 26 companies of Associators formed in the various townships of the county, giving the names of the officers chosen and the number of men.

The following was the return from the townships that now constitute Lehigh county.

Upper Saucon Company.
 Captain.
 Henry Alshouse, Jr.
 Lieutenant.
 George Kern.
 Total rank and file, 105 men.
 Macungie Company.
 Captain.
 Peter Trexler.
 Lieutenant.
 Henry Felker.
 Total rank and file, 120 men.
 Upper Milford Company.
 Captain.
 Christian Fisher.
 Lieutenant.
 Philip Walter.
 Total rank and file, 64 men.
 Whitehall Company.
 Captain.
 Peter Burkhalter.
 Lieutenant.
 Philip Knappenberger.
 Total rank and file, 100 men.
 Salisbury Company.
 Captain.
 Nicholas Fox.
 Lieutenant.
 Henry Hagenbuch.
 Total rank and file, 100 men.

(This company included inhabitants of Allentown.)

Weisenburg Company.
 Captain.
 Michael Bobst.
 Lieutenant.

Philip Benninghoff.
 Total rank and file, 32 men.
 Lynn Company.
 Captain.
 Matthias Probst.
 Lieutenant.
 John Stine.
 Total rank and file, 70 men.
 Heidelberg Company.
 Captain.
 Michael Ohl.
 Lieutenant.
 Jacob Ziegler.
 Total rank and file, 100 men.
 Lowhill Company.
 Captain.
 Nicholas Michael.
 Lieutenant.
 Jacob Horner.
 Total rank and file, 35 men.

The company from Allen township, of which the present Hanover then formed a part was commanded by Captain Neigal Gray and Lieutenant John Siegfried, and mustered 120 men.

The general committee met again June 20, 1775, when a letter was read from the county's delegates in Congress requesting that the county immediately raise half a company of riflemen to go to Boston. The committee acted at once and chose Abraham Miller of Mount Bethel, as recruiting officer with Captain's pay. At this meeting Jacob Miller and George Kribel of Upper Milford township were appointed committeemen to assist Mr. Engelman from the same township, and Burkhart Moser, of Lynn township, was appointed an additional member to assist his fellow committeeman Mr. Everett.

As Congress desired two additional companies of riflemen to be raised in Pennsylvania, the quota of Northampton county was increased to a full company. The Captain was authorized to purchase nineteen good rifles, the price of each not to exceed five pounds, and nineteen pouches and powder horns, which was needed to complete the equipment of the company.

This company, the first raised in Northampton county for active service, was one of eight raised in Pennsylvania, two in Maryland and two in Virginia, under the command of Colonel William Thompson, which were called "Colonel Thompson's Battalion of Riflemen." Each company was to consist of one captain, three lieutenants, four sergeants, four corporals, a drummer or trumpeter, and sixty-eight privates.

The pay was as follows: Captain, $20.00 per month; Lieutenant, $13 1-3; Sergeant, $8.00; Corporal, $7 1-3; drummer or trumpeter, $7 1-3;

Private, $6 2-3. The term of enlistment was for one year.

On July 20, 1775, the company was called together and chose as officers:

Captain, Abraham Miller.

First Lieutenant, Charles Craig.

Second Lieutenant, William Kramer.

Third Lieutenant, Samuel Craig.

The muster roll of the company as it appears in the Pennsylvania Archives is as follows:

Captains.

Miller, Abraham, June 25, 1775; resigned November 9, 1775. (Born Southport, N. Y., 1735, died 1815.)

Craig, Charles, from First Lieutenant, November, 1775. (Wounded at Brandywine; shot himself in 1782.)

First Lieutenants.

Craig, Charles, promoted to Captain, November, 1775.

Craig, Thomas, from Second Lieutenant, November, 1775.

Second Lieutenants.

Craig, Thomas, promoted First Lieutenant November, 1775.

Craig, Samuel, (promoted Captain 1st Penna. Oct. 1, 1776; retired from service July 1, 1781.)

Third Lieutenants.

Harris, David, promoted First Lieutenant of Nagel's Company, January 5, 1776. Captain First Penna.; resigned October 20, 1777.

Sergeants.

Holmes, Christian.

Norcross, Aaron, promoted Lieutenant.

Brodhead, Luke, afterwards Captain Sixth Penna.

Anderson, Enoch.

Corporals.

Hains, Daniel.

James, David.

Armitage, Shubert.

Sawyer, John.

Drummer.

Adams, Peter, ill in Philadelphia, in December, 1776.

Privates.

Bennett, Jacob.

Bowman, Michael.

Boyd, Daniel.

Brunner, Rhinehart, (a resident of Upper Saucon).

Buckly, Christopher.

Berger, Jost, (drafted into Morgan's rifle corps; served at taking of Burgoyne; discharged January, 1781, at Trenton; resided in Muncie township, 1816).

Carter, Thomas.

Carey, Martin.

Clifton, Robert.

Clemms, Thomas.

Cooker, Nicholas. Killed in action.

Concklin, Richard.

Curtis, Marmaduke.

Dailey, Elias.

Dean, Samuel, of Bucks county; appointed lieutenant of Col. Hart's Battalion, Flying Camp in 1776; subsequently Lieutenant of Eleventh Penna.

Deats, Chris.

Decker, Benjamin, died Dec. 7, 1827, in Luzerne County, aged 81.

Engle, Wendle.

Ferguson, William.

Frantz, Henry.

Frantz, Peter.

Fritzman, Elias.

Galbraith, Thomas.

Gaston, Hugh.

Hartney, Chris.

Harvey, John.

Hayward, John.

Hegerman, James.

Hernichon, John, wounded in the jaw at Long Island; in 1810, lived in Bucks county.

Horner, Samuel.

Hoster, Peter.

Jacobs, Cornelius.

Johnson, James.

Johnston, Robert.

Karich, William.

Kehrer, Martin, died in hospital at Princeton.

Kline, Bernhard.

Koken, Peter.

Kaup, Michael.

Ledger, Peter.

Ledlie, James.

Levy, Nathan.

Lonker, Henry.

McCarty, Daniel.

McElise, James.

McFerrin, John, killed by Indians at Piper's Fort in 1782.

Marshall, Robert.

Matthias, Henry.

Miller, Jacob.

Miller, John.

Moeser, John.

Moyer, Jacob.

Nousted, Peter.

Orr, Joseph.

Price, Rees.

Richart, Thomas.

Rishell, George.

Robertson, Robert.

Roy, Patrick.

Snyder, John.

Sonn, David, served three years, nine months; died in Whitehall township, October 5, 1826, aged 72.

Wagner, Adam.

Watson, John.

Weill, Andrew.

White, John.

Wighouse, Anthony.

Colonel Thompson's rifle battalion became the First Regiment after the 1st of January, 1776, under the command of Colonel Edward Hand.

Captain Miller's company arrived at Boston early in August and rendered valuable service in and about the city. The men of the battalion were expert riflemen and their endurance and marksmanship made them Washington's favorite troops during the war. Thatcher, in his Military Journal of the Revolution, in August, 1775, says: "They are remarkably stout and hardy men; many of them exceeding six feet in height. They are dressed in white frocks or rifle shirts and round hats. These men are remarkable for the accuracy of their aim; striking a mark with great certainty at two hundred yards distance. At a review, a company of them while on a quick advance, fired their balls into objects of seven inches diameter, at the distance of two hundred and fifty yards."

They carried a green flag, with a crimson field in the center containing the device of a tiger, partly inclosed by coils, attempting the pass defended by a hunter, clad in white, and armed with a spear. The motto on the field was "Domari Nolo."

Two of the companies were ordered to Quebec, under Colonel Arnold, and endured great hardship and suffering.

On November 9, 1775, occurred the skirmish at Lechmere's Point, for their alacrity in which Col. Thompson and his battalion were publicly thanked by General Washington in general orders dated the 10th of November.

Having become the First Regiment of the Continental army, on the evacuation of Boston by the British, the riflemen left Boston on March 14, 1776, commanded by Colonel Hand (who was promoted to Brigadier General April 1, 1777) and arrived at New York March 28th, where it was part of Gen. Sullivan's brigade and participated in the battle of Long Island. In 1777, it was placed in Gen. Wayne's division and rendered distinguished service in the battle of Brandywine, where Captain Craig, of the Northampton county company, was wounded.

At the annual election on September 27, 1775, each township chose committee men, who met at Easton October 2, 1775. The committee men from the territory now Lehigh county were as follows:

Upper Saucon, Jacob Morey.

Salisbury, David Deshler and Peter Rhoads.

Whitehall, John Griesemer.

Macungie, John Wetzel.

Upper Milford, Andrew Engleman.

Weisenburg, Daniel Knauss.

Lowhill, John Hartman.

Lynn, Thomas Everett.

Heidelberg, John Hunsicker.

A Committee of Correspondence, consisting of Lewis Gordon, Christopher Wagner, Jacob Morey, Thomas Sillyman and Henry Lawalt was chosen from the general committee.

The next day, October 3rd, at a meeting of the majority of the committee and a majority of the officers in the county, the county was divided into four districts or battalions, when Col. Peter Kachlein was placed in command of the First Battalion; Col. Henry Geiger, of the Second; Col. Yost Driesbach, of the Third, and Col. Jacob Stroud, of the Fourth.

The Second Battalion, commanded by Col. Henry Geiger, of Heidelberg township, a veteran of the French and Indian war, was composed of the companies from Upper Saucon, Upper Milford, Macungie, Salisbury, Whitehall, Lowhill, Heidelberg, Weisenburg, Lynn and Penn townships. The other battalions were formed from the companies raised in the townships now composing Northampton and Monroe counties and part of Carbon county.

The Continental Congress having recommended the appointment of a Committee of Safety to superintend and direct all matters necessary for the security and defense of the colony on June 30, 1775, a Committee of Safety was appointed of 25 persons, in which Northampton county was represented by William Edmunds, who served until October 20th, 1775, when George Taylor succeeded him. Benjamin Franklin was chosen President of the body and Michael Hillegas, Treasurer. Among the first actions of this committee was to draw up rules and regulations for the Associators, two thousand of which were ordered printed and five hundred in the German language. The rules were as follows:

Rules for establishing Rank or Precedence amongst the Pennsylvania Associators.

The committee of safety, appointed by the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania being desirous of performing the important duties of their station in the most satisfactory manner to the Public, beg leave to lay before them certain resolves of the Honorable Continental Congress, dated the 18th of July, which have already been published, but it is apprehended have not come to the knowledge of many able-bodied effective Men, aged from 16 to 50 years, that may be desirous of serving their Country in the present Glorious struggle for Liberty, in the mode pointed out by said resolves, which are in the following words:

In Congress, 18th July, 1775.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of the united English Colonies in North America, that all able-bodied effective men, between 16 and 50 years of age, in each Colony, immediately form themselves into regular Companies of Militia, to consist of one Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, one Clerk, one Drummer, one Fifer, and about sixty-eight Privates.

That the Officers of each Company be chosen by the respective Companies.

That each soldier be furnished with a good musket that will carry an ounce ball, with a bayonet, steel ramrod, worm, priming wire, and brush fitted thereto, a cutting sword or tomahawk, a cartridge box that will contain twenty-three rounds of cartridges, twelve flints, and a knapsack.

That the Companies be formed into Regiments or Battalions, Officer'd with a Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel, two Majors, and Adjutant or Quarter Master.

That all Officers above the rank of a Captain be appointed by their respective Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, or in their recess by the Committees of Safety appointed by said Assemblies or Conventions.

That all the Militia take proper care to acquire Military Skill, and be well prepared for defence, by being each man provided with one pound of good Gun Powder, and four pounds of Ball fitted to his gun.

That one fourth of the Militia in every Colony be selected for Minute Men, of such persons as are willing to enter this necessary Service, formed into Companies and Battalions, and their Officers chosen and Commissioned as aforesaid, to be ready at the shortest notice, to march to any place where their assistance may be required for the defence of their own or a neighboring Colony, and as these Minute Men may eventually be called to action before the whole Body of the Militia are sufficiently trained, it is recommended that a more particular and diligent attention be paid to their instruction in Military discipline.

That such of the Minute Men as desire it be relieved by new draughts, as aforesaid, from the whole Body of the Militia, relieved once in four Months.

As there are some people, who, from religious principles, cannot bear arms in any case, this Congress intend no violence to their consciences, but earnestly recommend it to them to contribute liberally to the relief of their distressed brethren, in their several colonies, and to do all other service to their oppressed Country which they can consistently with their religious principles.

That it be recommended to the Assemblies or Conventions in the respective Colonies to provide, as soon as possible, sufficient Stores of ammunition for their Colonies; also, that they devise proper means for furnishing with arms such effective men as are poor and unable to furnish themselves.

That it be recommended to each Colony to appoint a Committee of Safety, to superintend and direct all matters necessary for the Security and defence of their respective Colonies in the recess of their Assemblies and Conventions.

That each Colony, at their own expense, make such provision by armed vessels, or otherwise, as their respective Assemblies, Conventions or Committees of Safety shall judge expedient and suitable to their Circumstances and situations, for the protection of their Harbours and Navigation on their Sea Coasts, against all unlawful invasion, attacks and depredations from Cutters and Ships of War.

That it be recommended to the makers of Arms for the use of the Militia, that they make good substantial Muskets, with barrels three feet and a half in length, that will carry an ounce ball, and fitted with a good bayonet, and steel ramrod, and that the making of such arms be encouraged in the United Colonies.

Where in any Colony, Militia is already formed under regulations approved by the Convention of such Colony, or by such Assemblies as are annually elective, we refer to the discretion of such Convention or Assembly either to adopt the foregoing regulations in whole or in part, or to continue their former, as they on consideration of all circumstances shall think best.

A true Copy from the Minutes,

CHARLES THOMPSON, Sec'y.

And in order that all persons of every rank, degree and station may be truly informed of the Premises, and none hereafter plead ignorance, this Board do earnestly recommend to all Committees of Inspection and observation in this Province to cause this publication to be dispersed, read and explained within their respective districts, in such manner that every person capable of associating for mutual defence, may be made sensible it is a duty they owe to themselves and Country, to do it without further loss of time, and as it is necessary that this Board be speedily informed of the number of Associators in the several counties or districts, the said Committees are requested to make returns as soon as possible: First, of the several Battalions already formed, Secondly, of the several new associators not yet formed into Battalions, Thirdly, of all such Persons from 16 to 50, their names and places of abode, as may refuse to associate, not having any conscientious objections if such there be, and lastly, of the number of men in their respective districts who conscientiously decline bearing arms, with their names and places of abode.

The several Committees of Inspection and Observation having been desired to make returns to this Board as soon as conveniently could be, of the several Battalions of Associators already formed in their districts, are now informed that it will be necessary to mention in said returns the rank of every Battalion of a county, in regard to others in the same county, and to prevent uncertainty among the Officers of the General Association, respecting Rank or Command, and to ascertain the same with precision.

This Committee, in forming the following plan (which they propose to observe strictly in granting Commissions, and which they recommend to the general acquiescence of all the associators) have had a regard to the Seniority or priority of establishment of the several counties, viz:

1st. All Officers already chosen or appointed in the city and districts of Philadelphia, to take rank or precedence of all other Officers of equal dignity, chosen or appointed in any other part of the Province.

2nd. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Philadelphia county to take rank of all Officers of equal dignity chosen or appointed in any other county.

3rd. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Bucks county, to take rank of all officers of equal dignity, chosen or appointed in any other than the city and district and county of Philadelphia.

4th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Chester county, to take rank of all officers of equal dignity, chosen or appointed in any other than Bucks, Philadelphia county and Philadelphia city and districts.

5th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Lancaster county, to take rank of all Officers of equal dignity, chosen or appointed in any other than Chester, Bucks and Philadelphia county, and Philadelphia city and districts.

6th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in York county, to rank before Officers of equal dignity in any other than Lancaster, Chester, Bucks and Philadelphia county, Philadelphia city and districts.

7th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Cumberland county, to rank before Officers of equal dignity in the junior counties of Berks, Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland and Westmoreland.

8th. All officers already chosen or appointed in Berks county, to rank before Officers of equal dignity in the counties of Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland and Westmoreland.

9th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Northampton county to rank before Officers of equal dignity in Bedford, Northumberland and Westmoreland counties.

10th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Bedford county to rank before Officers of equal dignity in Northumberland and Westmoreland counties.

11th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Northumberland county to rank before Officers of equal dignity in Westmoreland county.

12th. All Officers already chosen or appointed in Westmoreland, the youngest or last made county in this province, yield up rank or precedence to all officers of equal dignity already chosen or appointed in every other county in this Province.

13th. Where Commissions of equal dignity in different counties bear the same date, precedence to be determined by Seniority of counties, but where they are in the same county by the rank of the Battalion.

14th. The Colonels already chosen or appointed in the city and districts, having determined their ranks, with respect to each other, by lot, their and the other field officers' commissions will be dated according to the Lot so drawn.

15th. The Colonels already chosen or appointed in every county, are to determine their rank, with respect to each other, by Lot, and Commissions for them and their respective field Officers will be dated accordingly.

16th. The Captains in every Battalion to determine their rank in Battalion by Lot, and their commissions, with those of their lieutenants and ensigns, will be dated accordingly.

17th. All Officers hereafter chosen or appointed, to have their Commissions dated at the time of such choice or appointment, and to take rank according to said dates.

18th. All Battalions now raised to be completed as soon as possible and to consist of eight companies of about sixty-eight privates each, and one company of Light Infantry, and to have for Officers, a Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel, two Majors, a Standard Bearer, Adjutant, Sergeant Major, Drum and Fife Major; and the officers of each company to consist of a Captain, two Lieutenants, one or two Ensigns, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a Drummer and Fifer, except the Light Infantry Company, which, instead of two Lieutenants and two Ensigns, are to have four Lieutenants, the two youngest of which are to rank as Ensigns.

19th. The Standard Bearer of each Battalion to rank as eldest Lieutenant of the Battalion.

20th. All National distinctions in dress or name to be avoided, it being proper that we should now be united in this general association for defending our liberties and properties under the sole denomination of Americans.

21st. Companies to take post in their Battalions according to the date of their Captains' Commissions, if the Captains be present, but if absent such Companies to take post as youngest in the Battalions.

22nd. No Field Officers to have Companies.

23rd. For the order and Government of Companies which may be raised after the completion of the several Battalions already formed in the city and counties, such companies are not to be admitted as independent, but are to be annexed to the most convenient battalion, after nine Companies are raised to form a new Battalion, and no number of associators are to be considered a Company unless they consist of at least Forty Men, but it is recommended that until that number be completed, the associators join the most convenient Battalion, exercise and do duty with such Battalion.

24th. All Battalions now formed, as well as those hereafter to be formed, are desired to make the necessary returns of their numbers and officers, with their respective ranks, to the committee of their county, and the committees are desired to certify such returns, with the respective rank of each Battalion in their county, to this Board, that Commissions may be issued immediately for every officer, in conformity with these rules.

25th. And as there may happen occasions where in it may be necessary to call out a part of the Associators to actual though temporary service, and not the whole body, and it would be extremely inconvenient and burthensome if upon every alarm where the assistance of part only may be wanted, the whole should come together, or any much greater number than the occasion required, and it would be therefore, necessary to have such division made of the Associators, so that parts smaller or greater, may be distinctly called for, and the service as equally and fairly allotted, and divided as the nature thereof will admit, it is recommended not only the Battalions of each county, but also that the Companies of each Battalion be by lot numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., so that orders may issue from the Commander-in-Chief to the Colonels, either to march their whole Battalions, or to send to an appointed rendezvous the first, or second, or any number of Companies that shall be wanted, each Company serving on such calls in its turn, and for such proportion of time as shall make the burthen nearly equal, and if the associators who are called forth are not called out, to lend the same for that occasion, at the risque of the public.

Lastly. This Board having drawn up thirty-two articles of agreement for the due regulation and Government of all the Associators in the Province, which is published herewith, they do recommend the same to be adopted, Signed and agreed to by all the said Associators, in order that one general system may prevail in Pennsylvania.

Aug. 5, 1775.

The Committee of Safety on February 20, 1776, recommended the raising of two thousand men for the defence of the Province. Fifteen hundred men were authorized, one thousand of whom were to be riflemen, constituting one regiment of two Battalions. Colonel Samuel Miles was appointed to command the regiment on March 13, 1776, which was raised in about six weeks and rendezvoused at Marcus Hook. The regiment participated in the battle of Long Island, where it suffered severely, and many officers and men were captured, including Colonel Miles. General Washington then ordered that the two rifle battalions and the one musketry battalion, commanded by Colonel Atlee, who was also taken prisoner, be considered a regiment, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Daniel Brodhead, until further orders. Attached to various brigades it was engaged in the battles of Princeton, Trenton, Brandywine, Paoli and Germantown.

One company of this regiment was commanded for seven months by Captain Henry Shade of Macungie township and contained many men from Northampton county. Seventeen of the company, including two lieutenants, were missing after the battle of Long Island. Many of these were taken prisoners by the British and died in captivity. The muster roll of this company, from existing records, is as follows:

COL. MILES' RIFLE REGIMENT.

First Battalion.

Roll of Captain Henry Shade's Company.

CAPTAINS.

Shade, Henry, appointed from Northampton county, Pa., March 9, 1776; promoted captain in Tenth Penna. Regiment, December 5, 1776; cashiered by general court martial October 17, 1777.

McGowan, John, appointed October 25, 1776; captain Fourth Penna., January 3, 1777; brigade major, October, 1777; wounded at Germantown; transferred to Invalid corps, Feb. 3, 1781.

FIRST LIEUTENANT.

Wert, George, taken August 27, 1776; (muster roll states that he died in captivity, leaving a widow, Mary). In March, 1777, the Board of War paid him £9 15s. pay while a prisoner, including value of a rifle lost, and he applied for his place in the regiment.

SECOND LIEUTENANT.

Dreisbach, Yost, appointed March 10, 1776, captured August 27, 1776.

THIRD LIEUTENANTS.

Boyd, Thomas, appointed March 19, 1776; promoted second lieutenant in Capt. Brown's company, Aug. 9, 1776; taken at Fort Washington; resided in Indiana county in 1817.

McGowan, John, commissioned August 9, 1776.

SERGEANTS.

Weaver, Casper, First; March 26, 1776; in command of the company, Feb. 13, 1777; killed in skirmish in March, 1777.

Walsh, Jacob, second; April 13, 1776.

Miller, Isaac, third; March 20, 1776.

Gruber, Isaac, fourth; April 29, 1776; missing since the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776.

Tennis, William.

DRUM AND FIFE.

Webster, Hugh, April 11, 1776.

Ammore, Gottlieb, April 11, 1776.

PRIVATEs.

Alshouse, David, April 11, 1776.

Beaver, Christopher, April 5, 1776.

Bebehouse, John, May 19, 1776.

Baker, Henry, March 17, 1776; missing since the battle, Aug. 27, 1776.

Bernhart, Peter, March 21, 1776.

Black, Daniel, June 3, 1776.

Blyley, John, April 6, 1776.

Bollabaker, Henry, May 16, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Bower, John, March 25, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Biever, John.

Boyd, Andrew, "Volunteer."

Brown, Benjamin, June 5, 1776

Burd, Thomas, May 12, 1776.

Delb, Jacob, April 6, 1776.

Deal, George, April 3, 1776.

Dennis, Jacob, May 22, 1776.

Dull, Henry, April 1, 1776; resided in York county in 1818, aged 71.

Dull, Martin, April 17, 1776.

Dunn, Peter.

Edinger, Jacob, March 26, 1776.

Erb, Jacob, April 3, 1776.

Faussel, John Christopher, April 29, 1776.

Frederick, Jacob, May 15, 1776.

Fry, John, March 21, 1776.

Fry, Philip, May 19, 1776.

Godshalk, Henry, May 20, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Greenmier, Casimer, March 15, 1776.

Greenawalt, Nicholas, May 29, 1776; transferred to Capt. Moore's company; re-enlisted in Col. Stewart's regiment; resided in Franklin county in 1819.

Hainey, Philip, April 12, 1776.

Heaslet, Andrew, April 2, 1776.

Hicker, Adam, March 20, 1776.

Hine, Conrad, June 3, 1776.

Hughs, Cornelius, March 15, 1776.

Hutmacher, Jacob, May 19, 1776.

Isenhardt, Jacob, April 17, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

James, Elias.

Kahn, Michael, May 8, 1776.

Kave, Thomas, discharged August 16, 1776.

Kear, Martin.

Keibler, George, April 9, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776; carried to Halifax; released in 1778; resided in Northampton county 1822.

Kensel, John, April 9, 1776.

Kerchner, Adam, June 3, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Koch, Christian, April 18, 1776.

Kuntz, John, March 29, 1776.

Lee, John, May 14, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Litchard, Joseph, April 14, 1776.

McCary, John, April 28, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

McBride, John.

McRight, John, May 22, 1776.

Miller, Henry, May 8, 1776.

Miller, Isaac.

Miller, Lorentz, April 3, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Mill, Andrew.

Moody, Adam, April 18, 1776.

Mosteller, Michael, April 25, 1776.

Mosteller, Nicholas, March 27, 1776.

Myer, Conrad, April 18, 1776.

Neff, Thomas.

Neihard, Christopher, April 14, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776. (Eldest son of Frederick Newhard, of Whitehall township; left one child, a daughter, Elizabeth, m. George Shick.)

Picket, John, May 29, 1776.

Plyley, John.

Potts, Jonathan.

Roahr, Martin, May 20, 1776.

Roahr, Nicholas, May 20, 1776.

Robinson, John, June 5, 1776.

Simmons, John, April 26, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Schwab, George, April 29, 1776.

Schwartz, Elias, May 26, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Schlough, Barnett, April 19, 1776.

Sebold, Leonard, May 8, 1776.

Sloan, James, April 1, 1776.

Swink, Frederick, April 24, 1776.

Swartz, Andrew, April 3, 1776.

Tennis, William, April 12, 1776; promoted sergeant.

Tickard, Frederick, April 1, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Travis, Joseph, April 4, 1776.

Treasy, John.

Treeve, John, April 20, 1776; resided in Huntingdon county in May, 1818.

Warner, Henry, May 6, 1776.

Weaver, Henry, April 6, 1776; missing since the battle, August 27, 1776.

Weaver, John, May 24, 1776.

Weeble, George, April 18, 1776.

Weis, Henry, May 19, 1776.

Wright, William, April 19, 1776.

The Second Pennsylvania Battalion, commanded by Colonel Arthur St. Clair, was in an expedition to Canada, having been ordered there by Congress on Feb. 16, 1776. May 6, 1776, Lieutenant Colonel William Allen (son of Judge William Allen) in command of the second Battalion, was within three miles of Quebec, where he met General Thomas with the army retreating from Quebec. At a council of war, it was determined to continue the retreat as far as the Sorel. Thomas, with the army, left Deschambault on the 13th and was at Three Rivers on the 15th with about 800 men. On the 2nd of June Gen. Thompson sent Col. St. Clair from Sorel with over 600 men to attack the camp of Colonel McLean, who had advanced as far as Three Rivers, with 800 British regulars and Canadians. General Sullivan was at Chambly on the 3rd and reached Sorel on the 4th and assumed command (Gen. Thomas having died on the 2nd.) On the 8th occurred the battle at Three Rivers, where about fifty were killed and over one hundred, worn out with fatigue and hunger, were captured. Lieutenant Col. Hartley, in a letter giving details of the battle, wrote: "Col. Wayne, (who commanded the Fourth Battalion) behaved exceedingly well, and showed himself the man of courage and the soldier. Lieutenant Col. Allen exerted himself and is a fine fellow. Col. Maxwell was often in the midst of danger."

The Army reached Isle Aux Noix on the 18th and was ordered to Ticonderoga, where the Second Battalion remained until Jan. 24, 1777, when they left for their homes.

One company of the Second was enlisted principally in Northampton county, commanded by Captain Thomas Craig.

ROLL OF CAPTAIN THOMAS CRAIG'S COMPANY.

From January 5th to November 25, 1776.

CAPTAINS.

Craig, Thomas, commissioned January 5, 1776; promoted Lieutenant Colonel September 7, 1776; promoted Colonel Third Penna. Aug. 1, 1777; retired Jan. 1, 1783; died at Allentown, Jan. 20, 1832, aged 92.

Bunner, Rudolph, commissioned January 5, 1776; promoted to Captain Craig's company; Captain Third Penna. March 17, 1777; Major June 6, 1777; Lieutenant Colonel August 1, 1777; killed at Monmouth, June 28, 1778.

FIRST LIEUTENANTS.

Kachlein, Andrew, commissioned Jan. 5, 1776; discharged June 21, 1776.

Dunn, Isaac Budd, commissioned July 4, 1776.

SECOND LIEUTENANTS.

Craig, John, commissioned January 5, 1776; promoted Nov. 11, 1776; subsequently Captain in Light Dragoons, Fourth Cavalry.

Armstrong, James, commissioned Nov. 11, 1776.

ENSIGNS.

Parke, Thomas, commissioned Jan. 5, 1776; discharged June 20, 1776.

Dull, Abraham, commissioned October 25, 1776.

SERGEANTS.

Marshall, Robert, appointed Jan. 7, 1776; discharged July 13, 1776.

Smith, Peter, appointed Jan. 15, 1776; promoted Nov. 11, 1776.

Horn, Abraham, appointed January 5, 1776.

Dull, Abraham, appointed Jan. 19, 1776; promoted Oct. 25, 1776.

Shouse, Christian, appointed July 13, 1776.

Carey, John, appointed Oct. 25, 1776; discharged Nov. 21, 1776.

McMichael, John, appointed Nov. 21, 1776.

Minor, John, appointed Jan. 13, 1776; drummer. Gangwer, George, appointed Jan. 13, 1776, fifer; reduced Oct. 11, 1776. (Died in South Whitehall, March 2, 1852, aged 95).

Fuller, Stephen, appointed Oct. 11, 1776, fifer.

CORPORALS.

Shouse, Christian, appointed Jan. 15, 1776, promoted July 13, 1776.

Carey, John, appointed Jan. 5, 1776, promoted October 25, 1776.

Byel, Peter, appointed Jan. 17, 1776, deserted April 8, 1776.

Powelson, Henry, appointed Feb. 11, 1776, deserted April 12, 1776.

McMichael, John, appointed April 8, 1776; promoted June 21, 1776.

Shearer, Robert, appointed April 12, 1776.

Sweeney, James, appointed November 21, 1776.

Mon, Samuel, appointed July 12, 1776.

PRIVATEs.

Ackert, John, enlisted Jan. 29, 1776.

Assur, Anthony, enlisted Jan. 14, 1776.

Byel, Jacob, enlisted, Feb. 2, 1776.

Bowerman, Peter, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.

Boyer, John, enlisted Sept. 1, 1776.

Branthuwer, Adam, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.

Crane, Josiah, enlisted Jan. 12, 1776.

Crist, Butler, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.

Cunningham, Alexander, enlisted Jan. 15, 1776.

Daily, Peter, enlisted Jan. 10, 1776, deserted Mar. 12, 1776.

Darling, John, enlisted Feb. 3, 1776, deserted Mar. 12, 1776.

Darling, David, enlisted Feb. 3, 1776.

- Davenport, Jacob, enlisted Feb. 17, 1776.
 Davis, Evan, enlisted Jan. 7, 1776; missing since battle at Three Rivers, June 8; paroled Aug. 9, 1776; l. Cookstown, county Tyrone, Ireland.
 Davis, John, enlisted Feb. 3, 1776; missing since battle at Three Rivers, June 8th.
 Deili, Daniel, enlisted Jan. 22, 1776; re-enlisted Third Penna.; resided in Lehigh county in 1814.
 Dobbs, Thomas, enlisted Jan. 12, 1776; deserted April 12, 1776.
 Docker, John, enlisted Feb. 14, 1776.
 Evans, Evan, enlisted Jan. 10th, 1776.
 Fleek, Peter, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776, wounded; resided in Huntingdon county in May, 1818, aged 65.
 Foulk, Daniel, enlisted Jan. 17, 1776.
 Freedley, Henry, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.
 Gangwer, George, enlisted, October 4, 1776.
 Grimes, Samuel, enlisted March 13, 1776; missing since the battle of Three Rivers, June 8, 1776.
 Groob, Philip, enlisted Jan. 24, 1776.
 Hans, Leonard, enlisted Jan. 18, 1776.
 Hindman, John, enlisted Jan. 22, 1776.
 Hirkie, William, enlisted Feb. 28, 1776.
 Hoofman, Ludwig, enlisted Feb. 21, 1776.
 Horn, Frederick, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.
 Hubler, John, enlisted Jan. 17, 1776.
 Huntsman, George, enlisted Jan. 29, 1776.
 Jost, Martin, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.
 Kautsman, Nicholas, enlisted Feb. 10th, 1776.
 King, Chas., enlisted Jan. 17, 1776; deserted March 12, 1776.
 Kuns, George, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776; died Aug. 6, 1776.
 Kuns, Michael, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 Labar, Leonard, enlisted March 12, 1776.
 Labar, Melchoir, enlisted March 12, 1776.
 Man, John, enlisted Jan. 22, 1776.
 Man, Lawrence, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 McMichael, John, enlisted Jan. 27, 1776; promoted April 8, 1776.
 Miller, Christian, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.
 Miller, Matthias, enlisted March 22, 1776.
 Mengas, Conrad, enlisted Jan. 10, 1776.
 Minon, David, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776.
 Mock, John, enlisted Jan. 22, 1776.
 Morey, Robert, enlisted Jan. 19, 1776.
 Mon, Samuel, enlisted Jan. 8, 1776; promoted July 13, 1776.
 Nagle, Leonard, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776; died at Allentown, Oct. 17, 1830.
 Ney, Samuel, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 Phass, George, enlisted Feb. 10, 1776.
 Powels, Jacob, enlisted Feb. 14, 1776.
 Prang, Stophel, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 Ramsey, Thomas, enlisted, Jan. 27, 1776.
 Rusarch, Conrad, enlisted Feb. 2, 1776.
 Reyley, Daniel, enlisted Feb. 18, 1776.
 Richards, Jonathan, enlisted Feb. 2, 1776; deserted Feb. 25, 1776.
 Rinker, Abraham, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776; died at Allentown, Oct. 27, 1820.
 Rogers, Timothy, enlisted Jan. 11, 1776.
 Shaffer, Thomas, enlisted Jan. 28, 1776.
 Shannon, John, enlisted Jan. 28, 1776.
 Shearer, Henry, enlisted Jan. 24, 1776.
 Shearer, Robert, enlisted Jan. 31, 1776; promoted April 12, 1776.
 Smith, Peter, enlisted Jan. 10, 1776.
 Smith, Philip, enlisted March 5, 1776.
 Standly, Peter, enlisted Jan. 15, 1776.
 Stinson, David, enlisted Jan. 15, 1776.
 Sterner, George, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 Sweeney, James, enlisted Feb. 8, 1776; promoted Nov. 21, 1776.
 Thompson, James, enlisted Jan. 15, 1776.
 Wilson, Robert, enlisted Feb. 26, 1776.
 Wise, Jacob, enlisted Jan. 13, 1776.
 Yiesly, Felty, enlisted Jan. 14, 1776.
- Other residents of the county who saw active service were:
 Philip Jacobs, who enlisted in the Third Penna. Regiment in 1781; was discharged 1783; resided in Lehigh county in 1813.
 George Granger, enlisted in Fourth Penna., Jan. 2, 1780; resided in Lehigh county in 1833, aged 75.
 George Jacobson, enlisted 1776, in Capt. Seeley's company, Fifth Penna.; served five years; resided in North Whitehall in 1818.
 George Mosser, a private in Col. Armand's Partisan Legion; died in Lehigh county, Jan. 19, 1826, aged 78.
 John Shuler, teamster in Count Pulaski's Legion; resided in Lehigh county in 1826.
 Daniel Roth, enlisted as a private April 10, 1777, in Capt. Jost Dreisbach's company of Von Ottendorff's Corps; killed at Germantown, aged 18. (Son of Daniel Roth, of Whitehall township).
 John Koehler, enlisted in Von Ottendorff's Corps, March 1, 1777; discharged at Wyoming Sept. 1, 1780; resided in Whitehall township.
- Up to this time the government of Pennsylvania had been in the hands of the various committees. On May 15, 1776, Congress recommended the adoption of such government "as shall, in the opinion of the representatives of the people, best conduce to the happiness and safety of their constituents in particular, and America in general." Public meetings discussing the question were held in every county. On May 27, 1776, a meeting of the Associators belonging to the Second Battalion, and others, all inhabitants of Northampton county, consisting of about 900 men, was held near Lawrence Good's plantation, in Whitehall township and Major Philip Boehm was unanimously chosen Chairman. The proceedings of this interesting meeting are preserved and are here given:
- "The Resolve of Congress on the 15th inst. being read, was unanimously approved of. The Protest of the 20th instant, of divers inhabitants of this Province in behalf of themselves and others, to the honorable the Representatives of Pennsylvania, being read, was unanimously approved. It being moved and the question thereupon put, whether the present Government is competent to the exigencies of our affairs? The same was carried in the negative unanimously.
- "Resolved, unanimously, that a Provincial Convention ought to be chosen by the people, for the express purpose of carrying the said Resolve of Congress into execution.
- "Resolved, unanimously, that a reasonable number of the Committee of Northampton county be appointed (by the Committee) to meet a number from the other county Committees at Philadelphia, the 18th day of next month, to hold a Provincial conference, in order to determine upon the number of which the Convention for framing a new Government shall be composed, and the manner in which they shall be elected.

“Resolved, unanimously, that the Chairman be directed to sign these Resolves on behalf of this present assembly.

“Resolved, unanimously, that we will support the measures now adopted at all hazards, be the consequences what they may.

“PHILIP BOEHM, Chairman.”

This large and enthusiastic gathering of patriots was followed three days later by a meeting of the General Committee of the county on May 30th, at Easton, when the members from the present Lehigh county territory, some of whom were newly elected, were:

Upper Saucon—George Blank and Jacob Morey.

Salisbury—David Deshler and John Gerhart.

Whitehall—John Griesemer and Peter Kohler.

Macungie—John Wetzel, George Breinig and John Fogel.

Upper Milford—Andrew Engelman and Frederick Limbach.

Weisenburg—Daniel Knauss.

Lowhill—Abraham Knerr and George Knadler.

Lynn—Thomas Everett, George Harmony and Anthony Opp.

Heidelberg—John Hunsicker and William Kern.

Peter Beisel, one of the three committee men from Allen township, lived in that part of Allen which is now Hanover township:

Robert Levers, Esq., of Hamilton township, was chosen Chairman. The same resolves of Congress which were read at the meeting of May 27th were read and after mature consideration it was unanimously resolved that six members of the committee be nominated to meet deputies from the other counties to agree upon a mode of electing members for a Provincial Convention, “for the express purpose of forming and establishing a new Government, under the authority of the people only, for the preservation of internal peace, virtue and good order, as well as for the defence of their lives, liberties and properties.”

Robert Levers, John Wetzel, Nicholas Dupui, Neigal Gray, David Deshler and Benjamin Dupui were appointed the six members to represent Northampton county at the Provincial Conference of Committees held at Carpenters’ Hall, Philadelphia, on June 18th and in session until June 25, 1776. Col. Thomas McKean was chosen President.

This Conference passed a resolution that every associator of the age of twenty-one years or over, who shall have lived one year in the province and paid either provincial or county tax should be entitled to vote for members of the convention. It was also resolved that every person qualified to vote for representatives in assembly, be entitled to vote for members of the convention, provided he shall first take the following test oath:

“I, _____, do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain, &c., and that I will not, by any means, directly or indirectly, oppose the establishment of a free government in this province, by the convention now to be chosen; nor the measures adopted by the congress, against the tyranny attempted to be established in these colonies by the court of Great Britain.”

It was further resolved by the conference, that the city of Philadelphia and each county should be represented in the convention by eight representatives, the election for whom to be held on Monday, July 8, 1776. Each county was divided into election districts. Northampton County was divided into four districts, the second of which included “Northampton, Saltsburg, Upper Saucon, Upper Milford, Maccongy, Weisenberg, Lynn, Whitehall and Heidelberg,” the election to be held at Allen’s town. The judges of election of the second district were John Gerhart, David Deshler and George Breinig.

On the eighth of July, the day on which the Declaration of Independence was first read in the State House yard in Philadelphia by John Nixon in the presence of a large body of people, the members of the first Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania were elected. It was on this same day, July 8th, 1776, that the Declaration of Independence was read at the Court House at Easton by Robert Levers, while the town was filled with companies of soldiers, marching to the music of drum and fife to join General Washington. The men elected in Northampton county were Simon Dreisbach, Jacob Arndt, Peter Rhoads, Peter Burkhalter, Jacob Stroud, Neigal Gray, Abraham Miller and John Ralston. Of these Peter Rhoads was a resident of Allentown and Peter Burkhalter of Whitehall township.

The delegates to this convention were representative men of the state,—men selected for their ability, patriotism and personal popularity. They met at the State House in Philadelphia on July 15, 1776, and were in session until September 28th.

In June, 1776, Continental Congress requested the province of Pennsylvania to raise 6,000 militia to be a part of a flying camp of 10,000 men. These men were to be engaged until the 1st of December, and when in service were to be regularly paid and victualled in the same manner as the continental troops. Their pay was to commence from the day of their marching from home and they were allowed one penny a mile, in lieu of rations, for travelling expenses.

The Provincial conference, on June 14, 1776, recommended that 4,500 of the militia be formed into six battalions, which, with the 1,500 men already in the service of the province, would be the quota of 6,000 required by Congress.

The number of militia required from Northampton county out of the 4,500 was 346 men. Major John Bayard, Dr. Benjamin Rush and Capt. Jonathan B. Smith, were appointed a committee to prepare an address to the associators on the subject of raising 4,500 men. They prepared the following admirable address, which was unanimously agreed to by the conference on June 25, 1776, on which day their session ended.

THE ADDRESS OF THE DEPUTIES OF THE COMMITTEES OF PENNSYLVANIA, ASSEMBLED IN PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 25, 1776.

“To the Associators of Pennsylvania:

“Gentlemen: The only design of our meeting together was to put an end to our own power in the province, by fixing upon a plan for calling a convention to form a government under the authority of the people. But the sudden and unexpected separation of the late assembly has compelled us to undertake the execution of a resolve of congress, for calling forth 4,500 of the militia of the province to join the militia of the neighboring colonies, to form a camp for our immediate protection. We presume only to recommend the plan we have formed to you, trusting that in case of so much consequence your love of virtue, and zeal for liberty will supply the want of authority delegated to us expressly for that purpose.

“We need not remind you that you are now furnished with new motives to animate and support your courage. You are not about to contend against the power of Great Britain in order to displace one set of villians, to make room for another. Your arms will not be enervated in the day of battle, with the reflection that you are to risk your lives, or shed your blood for a British tyrant, or that your posterity will have your work to do over again. You are about to contend for permanent freedom, to be supported by a government which will be derived from yourselves, and which will have for its object, not the emolument of one man, or class of men only, but the safety, liberty and happiness of every individual in the community.

“We call upon you therefore by the respect and obedience which are due to the authority of the United Colonies, to concur in this important measure. The present campaign will probably decide the fate of America. It is now in your power to immortalize your names, by mingling your achievements with the events of the year 1776—a year which we hope will be famed in the annals of history to the end of time, for establishing upon a lasting foundation the liberties of one-quarter of the globe.

“Remember the honor of our Colony is at stake. Should you desert the common cause at the present juncture, the glory you have acquired by your former exertions of strength and virtue will be tarnished, and our friends and brethern who are now acquiring laurels in the most remote parts of America will reproach us and blush to own themselves natives or inhabitants of Pennsylvania.

“But there are other motives before you—your houses, your fields, the legacies of your ancestors, or the dear bought fruits of your own industry and your liberty—now urge you to the field. These cannot plead with you in vain, or we might point out to you further, your wives, your children, your aged fathers and mothers, who now look up to you for aid, and hope for salvation in this day of calamity only from the instrumentality of your swords. Remember the name of Pennsylvania. Think of your ancestors and of your posterity.

“Signed by unanimous order of the Conference,
“THOMAS MCKEAN, President.”

This urgent appeal aroused the people and the work of recruiting went on rapidly. Four companies of men, forming the First Battalion of Northampton county, the company officers of which were commissioned July 9, 1776, were formed from the associators of the county and put under command of Colonel Hart, with Peter Kichline of Easton, as Lieutenant Colonel and Michael Bobst of Weisenburg township, who had served under General Stanwix in 1758-59 as Major.

The Battalion marched to New Jersey and was stationed at Perth Amboy. Colonel Baxter appears to have been in command, but in the battle of Long Island, Lieutenant Colonel Kichlein was in command.

The Captains in command of the four companies were John Arndt, from near Easton, Henry Hagenbuch, Nicholas Kern of Towamensing township, and Timothy Jayne.

Captain Henry Hagenbuch was a resident of Allentown, where he died April 20, 1805. His company left Allentown on July 30, 1776, and the Bethlehem Moravian Diary of that date says: "One hundred and twenty recruits from Allentown and vicinity passed through, on their way to the Flying Camp in the Jerseys, to which our county has been called on to contribute 346 men. Every volunteer is entitled to a bounty of three pounds."

The First Lieutenant was John Moritz, of Whitehall and the Second Lieutenant, Godfrey Meyer, who was taken prisoner at Fort Washington, November 16, 1776. Jacob Mummey, the ensign, was also captured at Fort Washington.

Hagenbuch's company was at Perth Amboy on August 6, 1776, when the muster of the company was as follows:

MUSTER ROLL IN THE SECOND BATTALION OF ASSOCIATORS IN THE COUNTY OF NORTHAMPTON AND PROVINCE OF PENNSYLVANIA, WHICH IS TO COMPOSE PART OF THE FLYING CAMP OF TEN THOUSAND MEN, COMMANDED BY COLONEL HART AND IN CAPTAIN HENRY HAGENBUCH'S COMPANY, AUGUST 6TH, 1776. AMBOY.

CAPTAIN.

Henry Hagenbuch.

LIEUTENANTS.

John Moritz. Godfrey Meyer.

ENSIGN.

Jacob Mummey.

SERGEANTS.

James Preston. Peter France.
Christopher Harndon. Abraham Woodring.

CORPORALS.

Nicholas Grossman. August Essinger.
Jacob Kern. Michael Hearts.

DRUMMER.

Michael Nagel.

PRIVATES.

George Shave. Philip Briner.
Jacob Miller. Abraham Servitz.
Peter Treax. Philip Geres.
John Hutvey. Barnet Miller.
George Brong. Frederick Tittle.
Conrad Knouse. Valentine Shoemaker.
Peter Sheatz. Enrick Numamaker.
Jacob Knar. Peter Caubel.

John Young. Jacob Stickel.
Michael Bowman. Andres Doremine.
John Sneider. Stuffel Neikart.
Frederick Rupar. Peter Buck.
William Waggoner. Peter Headmyer.
David Eccor. Jacob Yeagle.
Barnet Hillabird. Daniel Boger.
John Rough. George Grove.
John Cup. Joseph Linkenhouse.
David Wyan. William Kitchen.
John Michael. Valentine Bear.
Peter Frawley. Christian Hagenger.
Michael Shaller. Peter Miller.
Jacob Yencer. William Worthington.
Jacob Sheap. Michael Kelkner.
Peter Poaixter. Leonard Foore.
Peter Ward. Adam Boger.
Lutwick Eddinger. William Litsenbarer.
John Donkel. Nicholas Kline.
John Miller. Daniel Sneider.
Dewald Miller. John Mace.
William Coleman. Nicholas Morets.
Antony Swartwood. John Shivenstine.
Frederick Shull. George Christ.
Andres Cupp. Christian Briner.
George Cupp. Stuffel Beacle.
John Mier. Matthias Licer.
Michael Grove. George Bower.
Henry Eiler. Ludwick Cup.
Henry Reinhard. Peter Morets.
Henry Luts (taken prisoner at Long Island). William Rees.
Lawrence Cranovel. Martin Greaves.
Stuffel Neihart. James Dean.
Andres Brunner. Jacob Swab.
Conrad Fried. Peter Shul.
Henry Deal. Reinhart Brunner.
Paul Boyer. George Briner.
William Lougner. John Tittle.
Dewalt Frank. Barnet Stroup.
George Bash. Adam Thomas.
Henry Brinicke. Samuel Wert.
Henry Fogel. Martin Andres.
John Blackmore. Martin Myer.
Henry France. Henry Sneider.

HENRY HAGENBUCH, Capt.
GODFREY MYER, Lieut.

Mustered then in Capt. Hagenbuch's Company: One captain, two lieutenants, one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, one drummer, one hundred and four privates.

The above is a true copy of the original Muster Roll in my hands.

JON'A B. SMITH.

Lieutenant Colonel Kichlein's Battalion was stationed on the extreme right of the American forces on August 26, 1776, with a part of Colonel Lutz's Battalion, of Berks county. Colonel Miles' Riflemen formed the extreme left, in front of the village of Flatbush, Long Island. The centre was composed of Colonel Atlee's Musketry battalion, and the Delaware and Maryland troops. The corps numbered less than 5,000 men under Gen. Sullivan. The British forces consisted of 2,000 men under Gen. Grant, 8,000 Hessians under Gen. DeHiester and 8,000 men under Clinton, Cornwallis and Percy.

Early on the morning of August 27, 1776, the battle of Long Island was begun by a force of British troops who surrounded and captured the outpost after a short fight. The British General Grant then attacked the American right and the Hessians and Grant's Highlanders engaged the front. Part of Col. Miles' troops were surrounded and compelled to surrender, and in the sudden onslaught of the British, numbering four times the American forces, there was great danger of the annihilation of the greater part of the American forces, when Kichline's men, with part of Lutz's and Atlee's commands stemmed the tide sufficiently to allow the demoralized troops to rally under the guns of General Putnam's fortifications.

In this critical moment the men from Northampton, the majority sons of the hardy German pioneers, were true to their Teuton stock and stood fast.

General Washington said of them: "The readiness with which the militia of Pennsylvania have shown in engaging in the service of their country at an inclement season of the year, when my army was reduced to a handful of men, and our affairs were in the most critical situation, does great honor to them."

The same troops were in the engagement at Fort Washington on Nov. 16th, and out of ninety-two men commanded by Capt. Arndt before the battle of Long Island, but thirty-three rallied at Elizabethtown, N. J., on Nov. 17th. The records of the losses of Capt. Hagenbuch's company have not been preserved.

John Hancock, President of Congress, sent a letter to the Convention on July 22nd, requesting an increase of the quota of the state in the Flying Camp of four battalions. On August 12, 1776, the Convention approved of the report of the committee to which the matter had been referred and 2,984 additional men were ordered to be enlisted, of which Northampton county's quota was 278 men, the bounty for whom amounting to £834, was paid by Michael Hillegas, the treasurer, to Col. Gray and Major Arndt.

In the meantime, the frontier of Northampton county was threatened by and exposed to Indian incursions, and the convention ordered the militia of Northampton not to march into Jersey, as then the county would be unprotected.

Several companies for the second quota were formed and went into service. The local committee of the county recommended John Santee, Christian Fisher, Stephen Balliet and Peter Rundio for the captaincies of the several companies.

Captain Rundio's company went into service and was in the battle of Fort Washington on November 16th, when Ensign Isaac Shimer, commissioned July 9, 1776, was taken prisoner. He was promoted to Third Lieutenant in Captain Arndt's company and in a muster roll of the company his death on January 14, 1777, is noted. Others in Rundio's company were Jacob Moritz, died Dec. 28, 1776; John Diffenderfer, died Dec. 29, 1776; John Frantz, Jacob Neyhart, and Michael Clase.

Few of the muster rolls of this period can be found and those in existence are not complete. Captain George Graff, of Allentown, was in command of a company of the Flying Camp from June to December, 1776, as the United States records show, but his muster roll is missing. Captain Adam Stahler was also in command of a company of the Flying Camp.

The Constitutional Convention on Sept. 14, 1776, passed an ordinance ordaining that every non-associator, or person who did not enroll in the militia, between the ages of sixteen and fifty, pay the sum of twenty shillings every month, as long as he so continued, and at the rate of four shillings per month on the annual value of his estate. This money was to be used for the support of the families of poor associators or for assisting the widows and children of such as were killed. All persons over fifty years of age, who were exempt from military duty, were required to pay the four shillings tax likewise. Any person over fifty years who had one or more unmarried sons as associators, or who volunteered for duty, although over fifty and judged fit for duty by the commanding officer, was exempted from paying the tax.

Three commissioners were appointed, one of whom was Peter Burkhalter, and six assessors, among whom were Peter Kohler and Peter Haas. These men were appointed to assess, levy and collect the sums mentioned in the ordinance.

General Washington began his memorable retreat through New Jersey on November 28th, when he left Newark with scarcely four thousand men. Many battalions left the army at New Brunswick, their term of enlistment having expired. The situation was at this time most critical. In Europe the cause of the colonies was thought to be lost. New York was in possession of the British, who gloried in the anticipated defeat of the patriots. Twenty-seven hundred men accepted the protection of the British in New Jersey. But Washington, surrounded by all these difficulties, wrote to William Livingston on November 30th, "I will not despair." The historian, Bancroft, says of him at this period: "Hope and zeal illuminated his grief. His emotions come to us across the century like strains from that eternity which repairs all losses and rights all wrongs: in his untold sorrows his trust in Providence kept up in his heart an under-song of wonderful sweetness."

Washington reached Trenton, with the main body of the army, weary, ragged, in sad need of tents, shoes and blankets, on the morning of December 3d. They were here re-inforced by a German battalion, three Philadelphia battalions and a troop of light horse, a battery of artillery and two New Jersey militia regiments. Arrangements had been made in advance for the collection of all boats along the river, and the entire army reached the west bank of the Delaware by December 8th, crossing a short distance below the present railroad bridge, and at Beatty's ferry, a few yards above the present bridge at Calhoun street.

At about eleven o'clock the same morning, a brigade of the British army came marching down the river, with music and much display, expecting to cross, but found no boats, and were received with a shower of grape-shot from a battery posted on the high ground opposite. The two armies now faced each other across the Delaware, but Washington was master of the situation, for he had secured all the boats from Easton to Philadelphia. On December 10th Washington wrote from Bogert's tavern, now Centreville, Bucks county, to General Ewing, above New Hope, to send sixteen Durham boats and four flats down to McKonkey's ferry, as soon as possible. The boats which could not be secured were destroyed.

At this time the first Assembly of the state under the new constitution, which met and organized November 28th, offered bounties of ten dollars to all volunteers who should join Washington by the 20th of December; seven dollars to all joining between the 20th and 25th, and five dollars to those joining between the 25th and the 30th. Each volunteer was to be well armed and remain in the service six weeks. They were urged not to wait to be formed into companies but to march with the utmost speed to join the army on the Delaware.

The Council of Safety, on Dec. 26, 1776, commissioned Capt. John Siegfried, a Lieutenant Colonel in the Third Battalion of Northampton county militia, and Rev. John Rosbrugh, who was cruelly slain by a company of Hessians at Trenton, on Jan. 2d, a chaplain in the same battalion. Subsequently Siegfried was advanced to the rank of Colonel, and in a diary left by him he stated that he was in the battles of Trenton, Germantown, Brandywine, Red Bank, and Monmouth. In response to the following letter from General Washington, Colonel Siegfried and the other Colonels of the militia promptly gathered together the local companies, some of whom arrived in time to participate in the battle of Trenton, three days after the date of the letter. The letter read:

"Head-quarters, Bucks Co., Dec. 22, 1776.

"To Colonel John Siegfried:

"Sir: The Council of Safety of this State, by their resolves of the 17th inst. empowered me to call out the militia of Northampton county to the assistance of the Continental army under my command, that, by our joint endeavors, we may put a stop to the progress of the enemy, who are making preparations to advance to Philadelphia, as soon as they cross the Delaware, either by boats, or on the ice. As I am unacquainted with the names of the colonels of your militia, I have taken the liberty to inclose you six letters, in which you will please to insert the names of the proper officers, and send them immediately to them, by persons in whom you can confide for their delivery.

"If there are not as many colonels as letters, you may destroy the balance not wanted.

"I most earnestly entreat those who are so far lost to a love of their country, as to refuse to lend a hand to its support at this critical time, they may depend upon being treated as their baseness and want of public spirit will most justly deserve.

"I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

"GEORGE WASHINGTON."

The prompt response of the Pennsylvania militia and the addition of Sullivan's men with Arnold's force from the Northern Army, increased Washington's army to about 6,000 effective troops. Something had to be attempted, or as Washington wrote to his brother, "if every nerve is not strained, I think the game is pretty nearly up."

General Washington had divided his army into three separate corps. One stationed at Bristol, under Colonel John Cadwalader, including Colonel Hitchcock's brigade of the Continental line, and three battalions of the Philadelphia Associates. The second corps had headquarters at Collin's ferry, now Morrisville, and consisted of the Pennsylvania militia of the Flying Camp and the New Jersey militia under General Dickinson. This force reached from Bond's Ferry, nearly opposite Bordentown, to Yardley's ferry, near Yardleyville, and was under the command of Brigadier General James Ewing. Many men from Allentown and vicinity were in this corps. The third and largest corps extended from Yardley's ferry northward seven miles on the Delaware River and the contiguous region, and back some six miles from the river, under Lord Stirling, Mercer, Stephen and DeFermoy.

The British troops in Trenton numbered about 1,400 men under command of the Hessian Colonel Rahl, composed of three regiments of Hessian infantry, a small detachment of artillery, fifty Hessian jagers and twenty dragoons of the 16th British regiment. At Bordentown were three battalions of Hessian grenadiers and a British regiment in charge of Colonel Von Donop, and at Princeton was General Leslie with a detachment of British troops.

Washington now prepared for a simultaneous attack upon the commands of Von Donop and Rahl. At a council of war held in the evening of December 24th, it was ordered that Colonel Cadwalader should cross the river from Dunk's ferry to Burlington on Christmas night and attack the posts at Mt. Holly, Black Horse, and Bordentown; that General Ewing should cross at Trenton landing and take position south of Assunpink creek, so that Rahl's men could not escape to Von Donop, and that General Washington, the same night, with a detachment of the main army, 2,400 strong, with eighteen pieces of artillery, should make a direct attack on Trenton. The river was as yet free from ice and the boats had been hidden behind the thick woods on Malta island. By noon of Wednesday, the 25th, it was filled with moving cakes of ice, and the current became swift and dangerous. By three in the afternoon of Christmas all the troops detailed for this service were on the march. Major Wilkinson, who joined the troops on the bank of the river on his return from a mission, tracked the men by their bloody footprints in the snow. Each man had three days cooked rations and forty rounds of ammunition. Durham boats, row galleys, and every kind of craft was used in crossing the Delaware. Men were stationed in the bows, with boat-hooks, to keep off the cakes of ice and the snow and hail after eleven o'clock, made the passage of the river at McKonkey's ferry, commenced about sunset, difficult and dangerous. Washington was one of the first to cross, and he stood on the bank of the river—one account says seated on a bee-hive—wrapped in his cloak, eagerly watching the crossing. He had expected to have all his force across by twelve, but it was three o'clock in the morning before the guns were all over, and four before the troops took up the line of march. Silence was enjoined upon all by Washington, who said, "I hope you will all fight like men." The password of the day was "Victory or Death." The column was formed into two divisions, one under Major General Sullivan, to go by the river road, and the other under Major General Greene, with whom Washington rode. Greene's column first came within sight of the Hessian picket, who shouted: "Der Feind! Der Feind! Heraus! Heraus!" and giving the Americans a volley, retired. Without going into the details of the battle, a detailed account of which has been published by General Stryker, suffice to say that the Hessians were defeated with the loss of only two American officers and two enlisted men wounded. None were killed. The Hessians lost five officers killed and six wounded; seventeen enlisted men killed and seventy-eight wounded, nine hundred and eighteen were made prisoners of war, and six brass three-pounders, forty horses, 1,000 stand of arms and fifteen colors were taken. Colonel Rahl, the Hessian commander, was wounded and died the next day. The evening before Rahl and other officers were at the house of the rich merchant, Abraham Hunt, when a Bucks county tory, who had crossed the river at the risk of his life to warn Rahl of the expected attack, brought a note conveying this intelligence. Rahl, probably annoyed at the interruption of his game of cards and wine drinking, thrust it unopened into his vest pocket, where it was found the next morning after his death.

General Ewing, with his Pennsylvania militia was unable to cross the river at Trenton landing. It was perhaps, fortunate that he did not, for if he had been seen, the alarm would have been sounded, and the excitement would probably have sobered Rahl, and with his veterans, he would have whipped Ewing and his militia before breakfast and the results might have been different.

The Hessian prisoners were taken to Philadelphia. Some joined the patriot army; many never took up arms again, and the rest were exchanged in 1778.

The Americans recrossed the river into Pennsylvania, but on the 29th again crossed into New Jersey and occupied Trenton. On the last of December the time of enlistment of many of the men had expired, and worn down with fatigue and privations, they longed for the comforts of home. General Washington in a personal appeal to the men, said: "If you will consent to stay only one month longer you will render that service to the cause of liberty, and to your country, which you probably never can do under any other circumstances. The present is emphatically the crisis, which is to decide our destiny." Many responded to these patriotic sentiments, and participated in the battle of Princeton on January 3, 1777, when General Mercer was killed by a British bayonet.

Cornwallis, with a force of about 5,000 British regulars, encamped south of Trenton, on the 2nd. It was evident that a battle must be fought the next day, and the chances were in favor of Cornwallis. Washington lighted numerous camp fires along the front of his army, and Cornwallis, taking these for evidence that the Americans were encamped for the night, assured Sir Wm. Erskine, that he would "catch the fox in the morning." At one o'clock in the morning, Washington quietly withdrew his army and marched toward Princeton.

In the morning the booming of cannon in that direction told the British that Washington had out-generaled them. Many of the Pennsylvania militia participated in the battle of Princeton, when the American loss was about one hundred. The Americans, who had marched all night before the battle, and had fought for two days, without sleep for thirty-six hours, were completely exhausted. Many laid down and slept on the frozen ground, on the march to Morristown, where Washington established his winter quarters.

The brilliant victories achieved in so short a space of time raised the spirits of the American colonies, and Washington was by unanimous consent declared the savior of his country. Frederick the Great of Prussia declared that the achievements of Washington between the 25th of December and the 4th of January, were the most brilliant of any record in the annals of military achievements.

The cannonading at the battle of Princeton was heard at Bethlehem, as is mentioned in the Moravian diary.

The approach of the British army compelled the removal of the General Hospital to a point more in the interior, and General Washington selected Bethlehem, which, from its healthy location proved to be a wise selection. Accordingly, the following letter was sent to Bethlehem:

"To the Committee of the Town of Bethlehem, or others whom it may concern:

"Gentlemen: According to his Excellency General Washington's orders, the General Hospital of the Army is removed to Bethlehem, and you will do the greatest act of humanity by immediately providing proper buildings for their reception, the largest and most capacious will be the most convenient. I doubt not, Gentlemen, but you will act upon this occasion as becomes Men and Christians; Doctor Baldwin, the Gentleman who waits upon you with this, is sent upon the Business of Providing proper Accommodations for the sick; begging therefore that you will afford him all possible Assistance,

"I am, Gentlemen,

"Your most obedient humble servant,

"JOHN WARREN,

"Gen'l Hospital Surgeon and P. T. Director.

"Hanover General Hospital, Dec. 1, 1776."

Another letter was received the same day, in the afternoon of December 3rd.

"Easton, December 3, 1776.

"Gentlemen: You will see by the letter herewith sent, that the General Hospital of the Army is ordered to be at Bethlehem. We therefore request you that you would be aiding and assisting to Doctor Baldwin who waits upon you with this, and who is come for the purpose of procuring suitable accommodations for the sick, to furnish him with such proper accommodations as Bethlehem can afford.

"By order of the Committee,

"ABRAHAM BERLIN, Chairman."

"To the Rev. Nath. Seidel, Bethlehem."

About two hundred and fifty sick and wounded soldiers were brought in wagons to Bethlehem in the next few days and as many more men were taken to Easton and Allentown.

The last inmates were removed on March 27, 1777, at which time the number of deaths amounted to 110, who were all buried on the hill across the Monocacy, in what is now West Bethlehem, in Lehigh county.

In February, 1777, a battalion of militia, numbering 600 men, assembled at Allentown, where they remained two weeks, and marched off February 15th.

The continental troops at this time were greatly in need of blankets and the Pennsylvania War Office issued a circular* directing that 4,000 blankets be collected in the state and paid for at the full value, according to an appraisal. Northampton county was directed to furnish 167 blankets, and John Wetzel, Jacob Shoemaker, David Deshler, Arthur Lattimore, John Chambers, Colonel Labar, Abraham Berlin, Simon Dreisbach, Peter Rhoads, Robert Lettis Hooper and Jacob Stroud were appointed Commissioners to collect them.

The Assembly had on March 12, 1777, appointed John Wetzel, Esq., Lieutenant, and Jacob Shoemaker, David Deshler, Arthur Lattimore, and John Chambers, Sub-Lieutenants of the county, who had supervision over the militia of the county, and they were empowered to furnish the commissioners with a sufficient force to carry into execution the order, if necessary.

*One of the original circulars is in the possession of the writer.

General Howe, commander of the British forces at New York, on June 14, 1777, advanced by two columns through New Jersey, intending to draw Washington from his strong position and threatening Philadelphia by a land attack. Congress then directed the second class of militia to march and the third class to be held in readiness to march. The militia was divided into eight classes. When a class was called out, many belonging to it, could not or would not go. The deficiency was made up by the employment of substitutes, either taken from the other classes, or from those not subject by law to the performance of military duty. These substitutes were procured by means of a bounty, which was paid by the State, to be remunerated by the fines imposed on delinquents, and varied from £15 to £50 for two months service. In some regiments the number of substitutes nearly equaled the number of those regularly drafted.

The following muster roll of the First Battalion of Northampton county militia appears in the Pennsylvania Archives, certified to by the Lieutenant of the County, John Wetzel.

A GENERAL MUSTER ROLL OF THE FIRST BATTALION OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY MILITIA. JUNE 18, 1777.

No. 1.

Field Officers.

COLONEL.

George Hubner.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL.

Peter Saylor.

MAJOR.

Philip Mixell.

ADJUTANT.

John Ludwick.

CAPTAIN.

Joseph Fry.

LIEUTENANTS.

1st, Henry Bachman. 2nd, George Kunsman.

ENSIGN.

Jacob Bittenbender.

SERGEANTS.

Anthony Lerch. George Frible.
Frederick Frutshe. John Kessler.

CORPORALS.

Michael Lightcap. Peter Grub.
Melchoir Edinger. Henry Miller.

DRUM AND FIFE.

John Eoesley. George Shibley.

CLASS 1ST.

Christian Shum. (Missing).
Jacob Zeiner. Andrew Fisher.
Paul Broad. Daniel Zeimer.

CLASS 2ND.

Philip Cuhnsman. Israel Cooper.
Abraham Transue, Jur. Melchoir Bander.
Henry Pearshing. George Engel.

CLASS 3RD.

Adam Hartman. Edward Rank.
Benedict Lutz. William Cooper.
(Missing) Kahly. George Lawbagh.

CLASS 4TH.

Peter Lerch. Jacob Juncker.
Conrad Eighly. Peter Unangst.
Transue. (Name Missing).

CLASS 5TH.

Michael Reighard. Abraham Howk.
George Einer. John Unangst.
Elias Frareuse. Valentine Miller.

CLASS 6TH.

George Reighard. John Nicum.
Frederick Largh. Walter Fields.
Conrad Vogleman. Christopher Elias.

CLASS 7TH.

Abraham Bassinger. Jacob Transue.
Bernhard Sickman. Simon Howk.
Christian Reigh. Isaac Snyder.

CLASS 8TH.

Anthony Ficht. Jacob Drinkler.
William Baker. Geo. Henry Unangst.
John Shrantz. Conrad Roesley.

No. 2.

CAPTAIN.

Christopher Johnson.

LIEUTENANTS.

1st, Peter Wearst. 2nd, George Adam Weisler.

ENSIGN.

Jacob Heyle.

CLASS 1ST.

Henry Guysinger. John Apple.
Michael Weaver. Martin Apple.
Henry Weaver. Nicholas Kurtz.
(Name mutilated).

CLASS 2ND.

Augustus Sheats. Valentine Yeager.
Christian Young. David Heistand.
Philip Tutterer. Abraham Yeotter.
George Bowman.

CLASS 3RD.

Francis Hartman. Adam Romich.
John Haldiman. Jacob Bachman.
Christian Weickel. Jacob Mayer, Junr.
Adam Kurtz.

CLASS 4TH.

Garret Seisloff. Caspar Yeotter.
Adam Keipper. (Names mutilated).
Philip Snakmyster. Balser Buchecker.
Michael Knepley.

CLASS 5TH.

Michael Flexer. Jacob Lantz.
Jacob Dearsame. Frederick Koucpenhafer.
George Swanger. Peter Knepley.
George Franck. George Shoall.

CLASS 6TH.
 Leonard Reynhart. George Ruff.
 Divis Kouch. Jacob Yeotter.
 Simon Jacob Deall. Jacob Copies.
 William Robert. Peter Mayer.

CLASS 7TH.
 John Seisloff. Matthias Gangwer.
 John Kouch. Michael Shelley.
 Philip Gysinger. John Easselman.
 Philip Buchecker. Peter Fox.

CLASS 8TH.
 William Boyl. Jacob Dearshame, Jur.
 Peter Bush. Frederick Huff.
 Philip Ball. Daniel Johnson.

No. 3.*
 CAPTAIN.
 George Graff.
 LIEUTENANTS.
 2nd, Andrew Gongware. 1st, John Horn.
 ENSIGN.
 Matthias Ringel.
 CLERK.
 Peter Rhoads.
 SERGEANTS.
 James Preston. Jacob Houck.
 Michael Hertz. Henry Keiper.

CORPORALS.
 Martin Froelich. Philip Klotz.
 Michael Kelkner. Thomas Ward.

DRUM AND FIFE.
 Leonard Nagle. Peter Houck.

CLASS 1ST.
 Conrad Hertzell. Peter Keipper.
 Nicholas Jacobey. Caspar Weaver.
 Casper Smith. Peter Horsebush.
 Godleb Bolteus. Frederick Dull.

CLASS 2ND.
 Michael Jacoby. Nicholas Morritz.
 Peter Miller. Peter Hertz.
 Peter Lynn. Theobald Young.
 Philip Deily.

CLASS 3RD.
 Conrad Crumbach. Andrew Ehrhard.
 Joseph Derr. George Resner.
 Abraham Derr. Peter Gerress.
 Henry Kooken. Frederick Geibbel.

CLASS 4TH.
 Peter Birkey. Abraham Rinker.
 Philip Koogler. Jacob Gansser.
 John Keiper. Jacob Morriner.
 Bartholomew Hoover. George Strauss.

CLASS 5TH.
 Henry Hagebuch. George Blanck.
 Jacob Newhart. Thomas Mowhorter.
 Michael Shroeter. Peter Nagle.
 Henry Hoover. Felix Griesmer.

CLASS 6TH.
 Francis Cooper. Michael Kuntz.
 Jacob Gongwear. Jacob Weiss.
 James Allen. Godleb Amon.
 Peter Young. Lawrence Hauck.

CLASS 7TH.
 John Miller. Joseph Sweitz.
 Philip Retter. John Jennings.
 Jacob Backman. Michael Streiby.
 Henry Gross.

CLASS 8TH.
 John Mull. Henry Nunemaker.
 Nicholas Fox. Andrew Rueb.
 John Mohr. William Tills.
 George Shriver. Solomon Jennings.

No. 4.
 CAPTAIN.
 Edward Sheimer.
 LIEUTENANTS.
 1st, John Overlee. 2nd, George Stuber.
 ENSIGN.
 Frederick Laubach.
 SERGEANTS.
 George Edleman. Michael Stuber.
 Henry Krotzer. Dieter Heller.
 CORPORALS.
 Anthony Krotzer. Peter Knight.
 Rudolph Overling. Jacob Larch.
 DRUM AND FIFE.
 John Santee. George Gross.
 CLASS 1ST.
 John Beil. John Boyer.
 Ulrick Brinker. George Miller.
 Samuel Caeffman. John Stout.
 CLASS 2ND.
 Richard Lee. Conrad Loudenberger.
 Conrad Omensitter. Matthias Getter.
 Valintine Furer. Matthias Gurt.
 James Gruickshank.
 CLASS 3RD.
 Abraham Rothrock. Moses Baldwin.
 Jacob Gross. Joseph Heller.
 Philip Gross. Philip Larch.
 CLASS 4TH.
 Matthias Garret. Augustus H. Frank.
 George Dorry. Jesse Jones.
 Nicholas Ueberoth. David Ashenbach.
 CLASS 5TH.
 Robert Hooper, Esq. Balzer Reich.
 Jacob Freeman. Christopher Heller.
 Robert Newton. Henry Rentzheimer.
 CLASS 6TH.
 John Bush. Jacob Christman.
 John Ashbach. Edward Freeman.
 Jacob Kram. Abraham Mosely.
 CLASS 7TH.
 Conrad Ernest. Isaac Rothrock.
 Isaac Freeman. Benjamin Reagel.
 Peter Geiss. John Reagel.
 CLASS 8TH.
 William Freeman. Henry Miller.
 Daniel Deal. John Teller.
 John Currie. Reinhard Laubach.
 Jacob Schlauch.

*This company was from Allentown and Salisbury township.

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

No. 5.
CAPTAIN.
John Roberts.
LIEUTENANTS.
1st, George Bachman. 2nd, John Stall.
ENSIGN.
Jacob Rumpfelt.
SERGEANTS.
Peter Gooman. Elias Weaver.
Casper Rumpfelt. William Murry.
CORPORALS.
George Stodler. Michael Ott.
Yost Walp. Philip Eckle.
DRUM AND FIFE.
Conrad Miller. Philip Wind.
CLASS 1ST.
Thomas Owen. Jacob Lantis.
Jacob Peetle. Abraham Gisinger.
Peter Sell. Henry Allise.
George Seavids. Peter Lowenstone.
CLASS 2ND.
Michael Huddle. Abraham Peckman.
Jacob Mullick. John Rumpfelt.
Conrad Deedle. William Grotenhouse.
George Helpy. John Helpy.
CLASS 3RD.
Henry Rinehart. John Beneset.
Conrad Rinehart. George Segefoose.
John Lookinbock. Nathan Dolby.
Michael Sigler. Yost Eartman.
CLASS 4TH.
John Emerhart. Daniel Hurlocker.
Abel Dolby. Michael Rudolph.
George Kinhart. Peter Sheaffer.
John Gisinger.
CLASS 5TH.
Nicholas Hooker. Henry Bitts.
Simon Water. Samuel Lester.
Aquillah Toole. George Kern.
David Owen. James Smith.
CLASS 6TH.
Jacob Murry, Esq. George Plank.
Peter Murry. John Packman.
Elijah Lester. David Taylor.
Frederick Seegley. Andrew Rinehart.
CLASS 7TH.
John Nucomer. George Rumpfelt.
George Bringerd. Jacob Philip.
John Kooken. Godhart Murry.
Andrew Pruner. Andrew Eartman.
Felix Lynn.
CLASS 8TH.
Michael Hillegas. George Eartman.
Philip Cherry. Joseph Packman.
William Strowbe. John Pruner.
Abraham Syder. Matthias Egner.
George Packman.

No. 6.

CAPTAIN.
Frederick Kleinhantz.
LIEUTENANTS.
William Keller. George Kleinhantz.

ENSIGN.

John Egle.
SERGEANTS.
John Eckert. Conrad Huth.
Jacob Wallheim. Christian Best.
CORPORALS.
William Mannim. Adam Many.
Bernard Unangst. John Miller.
DRUM AND FIFE.
Jacob Miller. Peter Hay.
CLASS 1ST.
Michael Zaub. Martin Lahr.
Peter Zaub. John Heartzel.
Philip Wuthering. Jacob Depery.
CLASS 2ND.
Conrad Miller. Henry Cress.
John Hess. Elias Haerter.
Melchoir Hay. Abraham Shoemaker.
CLASS 3RD.
John Voight. Nicholas Koch.
Abraham Bidleman. Wandle Teller.
Michael Cress. John Dyer.
CLASS 4TH.
Andrew Eaub. William Yates.
Christian Hertzelt. Joseph Richard.
Robert Townsend. Conrad Shoemaker.
CLASS 5TH.
Daniel Sailor. John Zellner.
Peter Nungesser. George Knecht.
Henry Hess. Adam Maney.
CLASS 6TH.
John Hay. Anthony Huckey.
Jeremiah Hess. Simon Essig.
Matthias Pfeiffer. Isaac Reimer.
CLASS 7TH.
Jacob Arndt. Peter Lattig.
Peter Shaell. Peter Lance.
John Best. Isaac Shoemaker.
CLASS 8TH.
Adam Shaerer. Michael Lance.
Christopher Raub. Michael Brugh.
Jacob Lantzinger. Philip Koch.

No. 7.

CAPTAIN.
Francis Rhoads.
LIEUTENANTS.
1st, Felix Good. 2nd, John Gerhart.
ENSIGN.
Jacob Spinner.
CLASS 1ST.
John Weatter. Valentine Kaupp.
Daniel Neargank. George Kack.
Adam Blaunk. Martin Reatter.
George Leiberts. Frederick Heartsell.
CLASS 2ND.
Jacob Deiller. Lawrence Kline.
Henry Heimbauch. William Neartz.
John Keack. Christopher Ashbauch.
Michael Kline. Stephen Duell.

CLASS 3RD.
 George Ott. William Lyon.
 Godleb Bower. Frederick Kobble.
 Martin Keaffer. Michael Bower.
 Henry Kneause. Henry Tiyber.

CLASS 4TH.
 Jacob Smith. Michael Gagenwere.
 Abraham Seachler. David Heister.
 George Straupp. Michael Young.
 Jacob Knouss. Mathias Prickkey.

CLASS 5TH.
 William Lower. Frederick Keack.
 George Cresst. Abraham Kinasse.
 Jacob Feint. Frederick Stuber.
 Christian Gearasse, Sen'r. Jacob Guysinger.

CLASS 6TH.
 Christian Young. Andrew Gearing.
 Martin Leibert. John Kincause.
 Frederick Weauch. Conrad Buck.
 Frederick Kurtz. John Coons.

CLASS 7TH.
 Henry Richard. Robert Murry.
 Christian Hartman. George Zealler.
 George Headdle. Peter Sink.
 John Hartman. Porttle Hiddle.

CLASS 8TH.
 Henry Nonemacher. Henry Mortz.
 Peter Owell. Andrew Keck.
 Daniel Taille. John Keabble.
 John Reatter. Michael Everhart.
 John Leiddech. John Everhart.
 Henry Kuhn.

No. 8.

CAPTAIN.

Jacob Waggoner.

LIEUTENANTS.

1st, Daniel Bideman. 2nd, John Haas.

ENSIGN.

John Wagoner.

SERGEANTS.

John Haas. Michael Heller.
 Martin Apple. Adam Ebert.

CORPORALS.

Peter Leid. Adam Bitz.
 Adam Stephen. Simon Heller.

DRUM AND FIFE.

William Reifshnider. Christian Sterner.

CLASS 1ST.

John Hansman. Jacob Roth.
 John Narrengong. David Heller.
 John Getter. John Apple.

CLASS 2ND.

Henry Shaffer. Christopher Kunekle.
 George Bachman. John Rothlock.
 John Cooper. Adam Kortz.

CLASS 3RD.

Ludwick Ord. Philip Bergstresser.
 Frederick Smith. Michael Flixer.
 John Backman. Henry Sholl.

CLASS 4TH.
 Martin Shaffer. Peter Seinn.
 Christian Backman. Jacob Koch.
 George Shaffer. Abraham Backman.
 Michael Hellér.

CLASS 5TH.
 Nicholas Wagner. Christopher Heller.
 Christian Gross. John Weil.
 John Gernert. Andrew Heller.

CLASS 6TH.
 Michael Getter. George Ruff.
 Peter Weber. John Koach.
 Michael Heller, Ju'r. Conrad Hause.
 John Furman.

CLASS 7TH.
 Casper Houser. John Deitter Qowff.
 George Ludwick. Peter Harris.
 Ludwick Christian. Jacob Hunsperger.

CLASS 8TH.
 Christopher Rouch. Peter Gouff.
 George Gernet. Henry Kappes.
 Andrew Rickert. George Teamer.

Colonel Henry Geiger, in command of the Second Battalion, in January, 1777, had eleven companies ready to march to camp. The names of the captains, with the number of men, was as follows:

Township.	Total number of officers and men.	Captains.
Upper Saucon,	John Roberts,	39
Whitehall,	Peter Burkhalter, ...	81
Whitehall,	Michael Schneider, ..	61
Macungie,	Peter Trexler,	76
Weisenberg,	John Siegfried,	51
Lynn,	Matthias Brobst,	44
Salisbury,	Frantz Roth,	45
Heidelberg, 	Conrad Roeder,	66
Lowhill,	Michael Deibert,	47
Penn,	Peter Reek,	33
Upper Milford,	William Shaffer,	73

The following letter was received by Colonel Geiger from the Council of Safety. Although a man over sixty years of age and a veteran of the French and Indian War, this letter shows that he was one of the most active of the field officers of the county.

"In the Council of Safety, Philadelphia,
 Jan. 31, 1777.

"Sir: The Council have received your Letter, and now would in answer thereto inform you, that it will be necessary for you to proceed immediately to Head Quarters at Morristown in the Jersey with your men. Gen'l. Washington will provide you with Arms and Accoutrements and Kettles, as his Excellency has retained those of the men whose time is expired and gone home.

"Inclosed we send to your care a letter to the General informing him of your wants. As to the men who refuse to go after being draughted, we leave to your direction, either to confine them in Gaol or march them Prisoners to Camp. Salt we will try and secure for your men who march; it is a very scarce article, but so large and brave a Battalion as yours ought to be provided. Your care and activity in getting your Battalion together ready for marching demands the Councils' warmest thanks to you and your Officers. No doubt you will make all possible dispatch to reach the Camp, where such brave men as yours are much wanted.

"I am, Sir, your very Humble Serv't,

"TIMOTHY MATLACK, Sec'y.

"N. B.—You must appoint a Quartermaster and Commissary to furnish your Battalion until they get to Camp.

"To Colonel Henry Geiger,

"Northampton county."

General Howe having changed his plans from an attack on Philadelphia by land to one by way of the Delaware river, the militia were ordered to march to Chester. The British fleet left New York, and by the end of July reached Delaware Bay. Finding some difficulty in navigating his fleet he returned to sea and sailed up the Chesapeake. On August 25th, 18,000 men under the British flag disembarked near the head of the river Elk.

The American army marched through Philadelphia and encamped near Wilmington, Del. On the 10th of September the British were a few miles west of Kennett Square, and the Americans only seven miles away, with the Brandywine river between them. The next day, September 11th, occurred the battle of Brandywine, in which the Americans lost about 300 killed, 600 wounded, and nearly 400 taken prisoners. The British loss was reported to have been a total of 600, but one authority gives 1,876 as the total killed and wounded of the British, as found in the orderly book of an officer killed at Germantown. The battle was looked upon as a defeat, but Washington said of his army that they were "in good spirits and nowise disheartened by the recent affair, which it seemed to consider as a check rather than a defeat."

Washington encamped near Whitemarch, between the Perkiomen and the Skippack creeks, with his army of about 11,000 men.

The British entered Philadelphia on the 26th of September and occupied the city and Germantown.

Congress and the Pennsylvania Assembly had early taken measures to secure the safety of the public property, and on June 16, 1777, the Assembly passed a resolution, viz: "That the president and council be authorized and empowered to remove as soon as they may think proper, all the bells belonging to the several churches and other public buildings, as also all the copper and brass in this city, to some place of safety."

On Sept. 12, 1777, the Assembly ordered "That Mr. Parker, Mr. Shubart and Mr. Whitehill, be a committee to provide a shallop for transporting the public records, papers and printing press, up the river to Colonel Kirkbride's, from thence to be carried to some place of security, under the care of the members for Bucks county."

The Supreme Executive Council, met on Sunday, Sept. 14, 1777, and ordered "That Mr. Lowden and Mr. Hoge be appointed to have the Money and Papers belonging to the Public Loan Office removed to Easton, in the County of Northampton, and John Snyder and Henry Bartholomew were employed with a Waggon to convey it to the said place. That Colonel Nicola furnish a squad of Two men to go with the said Waggoners. These Papers, &c., are contained in a case, a barrel and an iron chest. That Colonel Flower employ James Worrell, Francis Allison and Mr. Evans, carpenters, or such other workmen as he may think proper to employ, and take down the Bells of all the public buildings in this City, and convey them to a place of safety."

The next day, Sept. 15th, Mr. Lowden and Mr. Hoge reported that they had received a large iron chest containing over £20,000 in paper money from the Trustees of the Loan Office and the Council ordered the chest with its contents to be immediately sent to Easton and committed to the care of Robert Levers, Esq.

On September 17th the Council directed that the books in the Library belonging to the State be also sent to Mr. Levers at Easton, to whose care a case and a barrel, containing the books and papers of the late Council of Safety and the Board of War, had already been sent, with the Loan Office money and papers. A memorandum accompanying this says, "Fourteen boxes and two trunks sent by Philip Mosser and Jacob Kuhn, accordingly."

To transport the continental stores, the sick and wounded soldiers and the prisoners, a large number of wagons were required. In pursuance of circulars sent out by the Executive Council on June 17, 1777, quite a number of men assembled at Allentown on June 26th and elected Conrad Kreider, of Allen township, wagon master. On July 5th Kreider reported that there were 550 wagons in the county. These were divided into brigades, each under a wagon master. On September 4th thirty wagons were ordered to be sent to Philadelphia from Northampton county by the Executive Council, and in all about two hundred wagons from Northampton county were impressed into service.

Congress adjourned on the 18th and left Philadelphia early on the morning of the 19th to convene at Lancaster on the 27th, but three days after removed to York.

The Assembly adjourned on the 18th and met at Lancaster on the 29th. The Executive Council held its last meeting in Philadelphia on September 23d and met again at Lancaster on October 1st.

The diary of Jacob Hiltzheimer, of Philadelphia, who was connected with the Quartermaster's Department, gives us a good idea of the situation. Under date of September 19, 1777, he wrote: "I sent off George Nelson with the money, books and papers belonging to the public to Abraham Hunt's in New Jersey, and one load of my private goods to Peter Trexler's in Northampton county."

Sept. 23. "The city much alarmed and people moving out."

Sept. 24. "Left Philadelphia with my whole family; dined at Bristol, and from thence to Abraham Hunt's, at Trenton, where we were kindly received."

Sept. 26. "This day the English entered Philadelphia."

Oct. 5. "Sent off David Kinney with two wagons, with my goods, for Reading."

Oct. 6. "Set out from Trenton with my family for Reading."

Oct. 7. "Reached George Taylor's at Galloway's Iron Works (Durham), where we had everything we could desire."

Oct. 8. "Dined at Bethlehem, and then proceeded to Squire Peter Trexler's, who received us with great good will."

Oct. 9. "Sent on Nelson and Kinney with the wagons, but remained another day owing to the rain."

Oct. 10. "Arrived at Reading."

After the battle of Brandywine, General Washington ordered the transfer of the military stores to Bethlehem. This order was transmitted in an official letter from David Rittenhouse, member of the Board of War, and State Treasurer, to John Okely, then an Assistant Commissary at Bethlehem, on September 16th. With the message, 36 wagons laden with such stores, arrived from French Creek. The following day, 38 more wagons arrived and the supplies were deposited near the Monocacy, north of the town, under a guard of forty soldiers. On September 18th a continual train of army wagons came into the place. On the 19th more wagons arrived, bringing quantities of ammunition and material for the preparation of more.

The Bethlehem Moravian Diary, under date of September 22d, says: "In the evening arrived 50 troopers and 50 infantry, with the archives and other papers of Congress, from Trenton, via Easton." The entry for September 23d states that the Delegates to Congress (of whom there were then sixteen in Bethlehem, including John Hancock, John and Samuel Adams, and Richard Henry Lee) "generously ordered the removal of the laboratory, just set up in one of our workshops for the manufacture of cartridges, to Allentown, and the early transfer of the Highlanders to Lancaster."

On September 24th the entry for the day reads thus: "The whole of the heavy baggage of the army, in a continuous train of 700 wagons, direct from camp, arrived under escort of 200 men, commanded by Colonel William Polk, of North Carolina. They encamped on the south side of the Lehigh, and in one night destroyed all our buckwheat and the fences around the fields. The wagons, after unloading, returned to Trenton for more stores. Among the things brought here were the church bells from Philadelphia, and the wagon in which was loaded the State House bell, broke down in the street, and had to be unloaded."

The accident occurred in the large open space in front of the Brethren's House, then spoken of as "der Platz," or the Square, on the descent to the mill. Careful and painstaking research has not revealed any further information regarding the Liberty Bell's journey than what is here stated. The tradition in the Mickley family for years is that John Jacob Mickley hauled the bell to Bethlehem where his wagon broke down, when it was transferred to Frederick Leaser's wagon, who brought it to Allentown. The tradition handed down in the Leaser family is that Frederick Leaser hauled the bell to Bethlehem, where his wagon broke down and it was then brought by some other person to Allentown. No documentary evidence exists to substantiate these traditions, and it is hoped that the future may bring to light evidence that will clear up this question.

Besides the chimes of Christ Church, eight in number, weighing 2,400 pounds, two bells belonging to St. Peter's Church were among those brought in the wagon train. Nicholas Haupt, a resident of Bucks county, was in charge of one of the wagons, upon which were two bells. These bells were of varying sizes and weights, some extremely heavy, and it was not possible that they could all be hauled in one vehicle, therefore several wagons and drivers were employed in this duty.

The Liberty Bell and the chimes of Christ Church were taken to Allentown and secreted beneath the floor of the stone building erected by Zion Reformed congregation in 1774. Unfortunately, history has not preserved the names of those who assisted on this historic occasion. It is reasonable to suppose, however, that the church consistory, who had charge of the building, and who must have consented to the concealment of the bells under the floor of the church, were present and aided in the work of concealment. These men were Peter Rhoads, treasurer, John Griesemer, Nicholas Fox, John Miller and Michael Kolb. Rev. Abraham Blumer, who lived in Whitehall township, was at this time the pastor of the congregation. Historians have differed regarding the place of concealment of this famous "herald of freedom." Trenton, Bethlehem and Lancaster have been mentioned as its hiding place and some writers have it that it was sunk in the Delaware. The wagon train, as we have seen, went by way of Trenton to Bethlehem, where the baggage remained for some time. The honor of sheltering this famous symbol of American liberty belongs wholly to Allentown, where it reposed until the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British, when it was returned to the State House.

A tablet was placed on Zion Reformed Church on June 27, 1902, bearing this inscription: "1777-1902. To commemorate the concealment of the Liberty Bell during the Revolutionary War in the second church built on this site. This tablet is erected by the Liberty Bell Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution."

On November 3, 1903, the Liberty Bell was again brought to Allentown, on its return trip from the World's Fair at Chicago, when it was escorted to the church by the largest parade ever seen in Allentown. Impressive services were held at the church and the bell remained over night at Allentown.

A fine bronze memorial tablet in front of the church has this inscription:

"In commemoration of the saving of the Liberty Bell, in September, 1777. Erected to the memory of John Jacob Mickley, Commissary of Issues and Member of the General Committee from Whitehall township, Northampton county, Pa., who, under cover of darkness, and with his own farm team, hauled the Liberty Bell from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, through the British lines to Bethlehem, when the wagon broke down, Sept. 23, 1777. The bell was transferred to Frederick Leaser's wagon and brought in safety to Allentown, Sept. 24, 1777, where it was placed beneath the floor of Zion Reformed Church, and remained secreted for nearly a year.

"This tablet is placed by order of the Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, June 2, 1907, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Daughters of the American Revolution, dated October 15, 1908, and signed by Mrs. Alfred G. Saeger, chairman, and Miss Minnie F. Mickley, secretary, of the John Jacob Mickley Memorial Committee, appointed by Mrs. Allen P. Perley, State Regent of Pennsylvania."

Early in the year 1777, a number of the Hessians taken prisoner at Trenton were brought to Allentown and kept for a time in tents. The camp was located in the northern part of the town in the neighborhood of Gordon street, according to the testimony of an old citizen.

The Bethlehem Diary of September 26th, says: "To this date some 900 wagons, with munitions of war have arrived, and been parked behind the tavern, in the fields towards Nain." Nain was a village established by the Moravians for their Indian converts, and was situated northwest of West Bethlehem, in Hanover township, Lehigh county. The damage done by this large wagon train and the troops accompanying it amounted to over £1,700. Twenty-two acres of buckwheat, four acres of Indian corn, six acres of turnips and one acre of cabbage were destroyed, 17,000 fence rails and 200 chestnut posts used, a crop of flax ruined, six tons of hay and 594½ cords of wood utilized during the time the train remained at Bethlehem.

Besides the military stores and prisoners, the sick and wounded of the army were brought to Northampton county. The order transferring the General Hospital was brought to Bethlehem by Dr. Hall Jackson on the evening of September 19, 1777. It was from the Director General of the Continental Hospital and read as follows:

"My Dear Sir:

"It gives me pain to be obliged by order of Congress to send my sick and wounded soldiers to your peaceable village—but so it is. Your large buildings must be appropriated to their use. We will want room for 2,000 at Bethlehem, Easton, Northampton (Allentown), etc., and you may expect them on Saturday or Sunday. I send Dr. Jackson before them that you may have time to order your affairs in the best manner. These are dreadful times, consequences of unnatural wars. I am truly concerned for your Society, and wish sincerely this stroke could be averted, but 'tis impossible. I beg Mr. Hasse's assistance, love and compliments to all friends from, my dear Sir,

"Your affectionate humble Serv't.

"W. SHIPPEN, D. G."

Trenton, Sep. 18, 1777.

By October 22d over four hundred sick and wounded were quartered in the Brethern's House at Bethlehem, and fifty in tents in the garden at the rear, besides numerous sick officers in other buildings. The surgeons refused to receive any more and those that arrived that day were sent to Easton. Dr. Benjamin Rush, Surgeon and Physician General, arrived in Bethlehem on November 3d, and at his suggestion seventy patients were removed to the Geisinger farm, up the Lehigh river.

James Allen, proprietor of Allentown, who was then living on his property in his home "Trout Hall," wrote in his diary October 1, 1777, "All the baggage of our Army is at Bethlehem and here; and what with Hospitals and artificers these little towns are filled," and on the 15th, "When the hospital and publick works were erected in this little town, I offered to supply them with wood at a reasonable rate, &c.," and again on Nov. 21st, "The General Hospital is still here."

In a letter written by John Arndt and David Deshler, who were Commissioners of Purchases, to President Wharton of the Executive Council, dated March 6, 1778, they state that they had little hope of procuring a large number of cattle or swine at this time of the year, "there being large hospitals in the Towns of Easton, Bethlehem and Northampton, where considerable quantity of Provision is consumed."

A number of soldiers were quartered in the homes of citizens of Allentown, but the greater number were sheltered in Zion Reformed church, which was transformed into a hospital. The government re-imbursed the church authorities for the use of the building and for any damage inflicted, as the accounts of the congregation show. Peter Rhoads, Esq., at this time a member of the Assembly, was the treasurer, and in his accounts is this entry:

"October 3, 1778. Received from Mr. Robert Lettis Hooper, through George Graff, £103, for rent and damages suffered by the church during the war."

Col. Robert Lettis Hooper was Deputy Quarter Master General in the Continental army and a man in whom Gen. Washington seems to have reposed especial confidence. His department covered Northampton, Bucks, Berks and Philadelphia counties in Pennsylvania, and Sussex county in New Jersey. He lived at this time in Saucon township, about five miles south of Bethlehem.

A log house on the north side of Hamilton street, a short distance east of Eighth, was also used as a hospital. This building was removed from Hamilton street to the rear of No. 36 North Eighth street, then owned by Jacob Newhard. It was blown down by a storm about 1870 and many wooden articles such as chairs, benches, mallets and kitchen utensils were made from its logs and presented to friends as relics by Silas Newhard. The key of this house is said to have been deposited in the old state house at Philadelphia by Jacob Kuntz.

The number of inmates of the hospital at Bethlehem on December 28, 1777, amounted to 700. On April 8, 1778, an order was received removing the hospital to Reading, and on April 14th the removal was completed.

Mention has been made of the removal of the laboratory for the manufacture of cartridges from Bethlehem to Allentown on Sept. 23, 1777. After this removal works were also established at Allentown for repairing arms and the manufacture of saddles and scabbards for bayonets. Captain Stiles was in charge of the depot for military supplies, and John Tyler and Ebenezer Cowell were Armourers in the employ of the state. Mr. Cowell arrived at Allentown in the beginning of October, 1777, and fitted up a shop with the timber of an old saw mill owned by David Deshler, in which he employed sixteen armourers, and where he fitted up a waterwheel to turn a grindstone on which bayonets were ground.

This building was situated on the Little Lehigh creek. Mr. Cowell with Dr. William Smith, rented a house on South Seventh street, from Mr. Deshler, in which Mr. Cowell and his family resided for some time. It was also used for a laboratory, until required by Mr. Deshler for the storage of provisions for the army, upon his appointment as a Commissioner of Purchases.

The following is a general return of all the arms, &c., the property of the State of Pennsylvania, received into the public Armourer's Store at Allentown, from Oct. 15 to Dec. 4, 1777.

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

When received, 1777.	Of whom received
		Pistols	Muskets	Bayonets	Scabbards	Rifles	Carbines	Gun Barrells
Oct. 15	Col. Henry's Clerk		24	669	120	2
" 16	" " "	7	123	169	150		5
" 21	" " "		194	3		9
" 22	" " "		371			7		25
" 31	Capt. James Pearson		6
Nov. 18	" " "		2	2
" 18	Col. Wetzel				24
" 22	Capt. Knappenberger		2	2	2
" 22	Col. Wetzel				162
" 25	Col. Henry, muskets with locks		75
" 25	" " " without locks		6
" 22	" " rifles with locks					16
" 25	" " " without locks					2
" 28	Capt. Stiles, muskets with locks		3
" 28	" " " without locks		2
" 29	Champion Wood, a private in Capt. Moulder's Company		1	1	1
Dec. 4	Adam Clendening, Lieut. 6 Batt. North'n Militia		1	1	1
	Total	7	810	847	360	36	5	25

A statement of the Arms, &c. delivered out of the Public Armourer's Store at Allentown from Oct. 5, 1777, to Jan. 1779, follows:

		To Whom Delivered
		Blunderbusses	Pistols	Muskets and Barrells	Bayonets	Scabbards	Rifles	Carbines
1777
Oct. 18	Major Boyd, of the Northampton County Militia			2M	32	40
" 19	Colonel Breinig, of the Northampton County Militia			1M	16	16
" 22	Colonel Wetzel, Lieut. of Northampton County			13M	12	12
" 27	Colonel Deshler, Sub. Lieut. of Northampton County			6M		6
" 31	Ebenezer Cowell, gunsmith, by Col. Bonham's order			25M
Nov. 18	James Pearson, Capt. of the Ammunition Guard			7M	7	7
" 18	James Pearson, Capt. of the Ammunition Guard			2M	2	2
" 18	Ebenezer Cowell				50
" 26	Colonel Wetzel, Lieut. of Northampton County Militia			12M	12	12
" 27	Col. Abraham Miller, of Northampton County Militia			22M	22	22
" 29	John Jackson, sent to Gen. Armstrong at Camp			180M	180	180
Dec. 2	James Allison, Esq., Adjutant of Northampton County Militia			33M	33	33
" 4	Adam Clendening, Lieut. 6th Batt. Northampton County Militia			12M	12	12
" 6	Capt. Kuntz, of Northampton County Militia			12M	12	12
" 9	Jacob Snell, Serg't. 5th. Batt. Northampton County Militia			12M	12	12
" 10	Henry Reitz, Capt. 6th. Batt. Northampton County Militia			5M	5	5
" 11	Jacob Young, Or. Master, 5th. Batt. Northampton County Militia			17M	17	17
" 31	John Jacobson, Clerk			22M	22	22
1778				110M	110	110
Jan. 14	Sent to Col. Wm. Henry at Lancaster
" 21	Ebenezer Cowell						50
" 24	Ebenezer Cowell					36
Feb. 28	John Jacobson, Clerk			50M	50
Mar. 13	John Jacobson, Clerk			625M	625	61
" 26	John Jacobson, Clerk			136M	136
" 26	Col. Henry for his own use			100M	100
May 7	John Jacobson, Clerk			1M
" 16	John Jacobson, Clerk			224M	224	110
" 31	Sent to Col. Morgan at Reading			90M	90
July 8	Col. John Chambers, Sub. Lieut. Northampton County Militia			75M	75		32
" 14	Col. Hanger, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia			110M
" 31	Col. Hanger, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia			66M
Aug. 16	Col. Hanger, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia			50M
" 16	Col. Hanger, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia			265M	265
" 16	Col. Wetzel, Lieut. of Northampton County			8M
" 9	Col. Shoemaker, Sub. Lieut. of Northampton County			50M	50
1779				1M	1
Jan. 25	Col. Wetzel, Lieut. of Northampton County			3M	2			1
" 25	Col. Hagner, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia	2	7	322M	312		1	4
" 25	Col. Hagner, Sub. Lieut. of Philadelphia			298 Bbs. } Bbs. }
	Total delivered out at Allentown	2	7	2961	2522	685	83	5

Among the gunsmiths employed at Allentown were John Moll, Jacob Newhard, George Lagundecker and Adam Foulke. John Moll was the son of William Moll, also a gunsmith, and lived in Allentown from 1772 until his death in 1794. His son, John, born in 1773, succeeded him in the trade. Their gunshop was on North Seventh street, immediately south of the Lafayette Hotel. John Moll, second, married Elizabeth Newhard, and their eldest son, John, born in 1796 and died in 1883, was also a gunsmith, as well as William H. Moll, the grandson, who was the fifth generation of the family in the vocation.

The extreme rigors of the Revolution were felt among the workmen at Allentown, as they were by the American soldiers and artisans employed in that war almost everywhere. Under date of Feb. 17, 1778, John Wetzell, Lieutenant of the county, wrote to the president of the Executive Council at Lancaster, "My duty demands that I should give news to you of a new order received yesterday, viz, in relation to shortness of rations issued to military workers and saddlers, the same having created such great unrest among the workmen that they concluded to give up work. A conversation with David Desler and Fred Hagener made them more content. The sub-lieutenants have received many arms to be repaired, and received yesterday four hundred muskets, and more are expected daily. The quartermaster writes that he wants a large quantity of repaired guns, because he is expecting new militia every day, as well as militia of this county, which is to be fully equipped. We have decided to allow former rations until we receive further instructions. Our department is now in good order, and is increased every day, so that I entertain the hope to obtain the necessary workmen to finish our labor."

"P. S.—The rations which at present are issued are $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of beef, $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of bread, also flour and vegetables, $\frac{1}{2}$ pint of rum or whiskey, wood, soap, and candles."

Lieut.-Com. Cornelius Sweers, of Lebanon, writing to Wharton, May 4, 1778, says, "On investigation of the stores at Allentown, I found certain barrels and chests containing sail-cloth. Since we are in immediate need of this article, I asked Capt. Stiles for the same, which he said could only be surrendered on an order of the Council. I flatter myself that you will give this order, as Gen. Washington needs the same for ordinance wagons, etc."

Frederick Hagner, Sub-Lieutenant, wrote May 11, 1778, to Thomas Wharton, Jun., Esq., President of the Executive Council of Pennsylvania at Lancaster, as follows: "May it please your Excellency; According to your Excellency and Council's last Request dated the 28th April, I have diligently examined and inquired into, but have not been able until this day to give a true and exact Account of what Arms, etc., are now in my possession and how many shall and can be properly repaired by the 20th of this month, which is as follows: In my possession in store, 800 Muskets & Bayonets, with Scabbards, 550 Bayonet Belts, 750 Cartouch Boxes, 45 Shot PUNCHES and 118 Powder Horns. 400 Knap and Havre Sacks, New, 75 Blankets, 25 Tent Cloths, 140 Camp Kettles. In John Tyler's possession, in good repair, 31 Rifles. Will be ready the 10th May, 150 Muskets & Bayonets, from J. Tyler, 150 Muskets and Bayonets from E. Cowel.

"This number of arms, etc., may be depended upon, all in good repair, and shall endeavor, if possible, to exceed the above number, as both Mr. Tyler and Mr. Cowell have promised to deliver more muskets than I have mentioned because it is difficult to get the scabbards for the Bayonets finished. I have three saddlers now employed and will not leave a stone unturned, to serve my Country and your Excellency and Council. I am, with the utmost esteem, Your Excellency's Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant, Frederick Hagner, Sub. Lieut."

Mr. Cowell's letter to Mr. Wharton is as follows:

"Allentown, May 9, 1778. Sir: In answer to your Favour of the 28th ult. I have to inform you that since the return of Arms I made on the 21st Jan. last, I have delivered Col. Fredk. Hagner two hundred and seventy two stand of arms in repair, and have now on hand three hundred and fifty stand complete, except half the number of bayonets are yet to be ground, but expect to have them all ground by 20th inst. The above 250 stand of Arms are all I have upon hand worth repairing, except a few that want new stocks, some of which I expect will be done before that time. I am, Sir, Yr. Most Obednt. Humble Servt., Ebenezer Cowell."

On July 20, 1778, Richard Peters, in the name of the War Office, informed the Vice President of Pennsylvania that "the condition of affairs on the borders was of the most alarming nature, but that the War Office had done everything in its power to serve out military stores." At that time the State had at least twelve thousand stands of arms at Allentown awaiting orders to be issued to the militia. This serves to show that Allentown was at this period extraordinarily active in the cause of liberty. Its people, and those of the surrounding country, were almost without exception, intensely patriotic.

In the year 1778, the headquarters for the Wagon Brigade was located on the south side of the Little Lehigh, not far from the building occupied by the armourers and gunsmiths. The following petition presented to the Northampton county court in September, 1778, contains interesting information regarding this fact.

"To the Worshipful the Justices of the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the county of Northampton, September Term, 1778.

"The Petition of Andreas Reeb of Salisbury township, in the said county, Humbly Sheweth, That having lately petitioned the said worshipful Court for a Recommendation to the Supreme Executive Council for this State for a license to keep a house of entertainment in said township, your worships were pleased to disallow the same; But your Petitioner begs leave to represent that by a dislocation of one of his shoulders some time past, he is thereby greatly enfeebled and rendered in some measure incapable of using those necessary exertions for the support of his family to which his inclinations and will prompts him; and moreover, being situated near the Little Lehigh and Col. Deshler's Mill, and where the Brigade of Wagons which pass continually through Northampton on Public Service do every day resort to and feed, he finds himself obliged to accommodate them with many little conveniences, which are not contrary to law, and for which the Wagoners cannot allow him a compensation equal to his trouble unless he may be permitted to entertain them as a Public House keeper; Besides, your Petitioner, not doubting your Worships would indulge him with your Recommendation, in common with his Fellow Citizens, has put himself to a considerable expense in erecting a Building for the Accommodation of Travellers, your Petitioner therefore prays, as he is provided with every necessary for a Public house keeper, Your Worships will please to grant him a Recommendation and your Petitioner will ever Pray, etc.

"ANDREAS REEB."

"The Brigade of teams in the Service of the United States have a yard near the Petitioner's house and I think a publick House of Entertainment near the said yard is necessary.

"ROBERT L. HOOPER, JR.,

"Dept. Quar. Master Gen."

"We, the Subscribers, beg leave to recommend to the Worshipful Bench the Prayer of the Petitioner.

"David Deshler, George Good,

"Thos. M'Whorter, Peter Birkey."

(Endorsed) Petition. Andreas Reeb for a Tavern License. Allowed.

This tavern stood along the road on the south side of the Little Lehigh, in South Allentown, now the Twelfth Ward.

The Moravians and Schwenkfelders presented petitions to the State Assembly in May, 1778; asking relief from the militia and test laws of the State. On the 20th of May, after considerable debate, the house resolved that Colonel Lollar, of Philadelphia, Mr. Lauman and Colonel Lowrey, of Lancaster, Mr. Peter Rhoads, of Allentown, and Colonel Dill, of York, be a committee to draw up and assign the reasons which induced the house not to grant the prayers of the said petitions. The Journal of the Assembly for May 25, 1878, contains the report of the committee, viz: "The committee appointed to set forth the reasons which induced the house not to grant the petitions of the Moravians and Schwenkfelders societies, so far as the said petitions relate to the dispensing with the abjuration of allegiance to the king of Great Britain, contained in the test of allegiance, required by law of the inhabitants of this state; beg leave to report, That the house appears to your committee to be influenced by the following reasons:

"First. Because the honorable the continental congress, in their declaration of independence, have declared 'That these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states, and that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be totally dissolved.'

"Secondly. Because though the present glorious struggle for liberty and the natural rights of mankind against the tyrannical power of Great Britain is, at this time, well understood; yet many persons amongst us, preferring a slavish dependence on the British king, from prejudice, expectations from lucrative offices, or the most unworthy motives, and screening themselves from the notice of government, by a professed neutrality, have nevertheless, as soon as opportunity offered, declared themselves in favour of our enemies, and become active against the liberties of America; it is therefore absolutely necessary, that whilst the good citizens of this state are freely exposing their lives and fortunes to protect what is still dearer to them than either of these, a proper discrimination be made, that may distinguish our friends from our enemies.

"Thirdly. Because it cannot be conceived that any person can bear allegiance to the united states of America, and at the same time refuse to renounce his allegiance to that power who, without any just pretense, is now carrying on an offensive and cruel war against us, laying waste, burning, plundering and destroying our country by his fleets and armies, and committing every outrage that refinement on savage barbarity can invent.

"Fourthly. Because the petitions on this subject make it evident that the people, on whose behalf they are presented, do consider a general test of allegiance to the state, to be, in some sort, consistent with a reservation of allegiance to the king of Great Britain, and that an alteration in the test required by law, upon the present petitions, would be an acknowledgment, by this house, of the propriety and justice of such a construction of a general test.

“Fifthly. Because the Germans in particular, have the less reason to object to the oath of allegiance as directed by law, as they have heretofore generally renounced allegiance to a royal family which had forfeited its pretensions to the British throne, by acts no less outrageous and insulting on the rights of the subject, than those which the present king has been guilty of towards the people of America.

“Sixthly. Because the house, in all their deliberations and proceedings, have carefully avoided giving offence to any religious society, by granting any indulgence or preference to another; and as many of the good people of the Moravians, as of every other society, have freely and voluntarily taken and subscribed the oath or affirmation of allegiance and fidelity as directed by the laws of this state, this circumstance affords a just ground to infer, that the objections made are really the objections of individuals only; but were it otherwise, this house cannot grant relief to the petitioners, without just grounds of suspicions and offence to those who have already taken the oath or affirmation as aforesaid.

“And thereupon it was Resolved, That this house do adopt the said report, and that the house is nevertheless ready and willing to grant to the petitioners every encouragement and protection in their power, which may appear consistent with the duty they owe to their constituents, and the welfare of the united states of America.”

In the township of Upper Saucon, a number of Mennonite families had settled and as their religious belief forbade their bearing arms, they were subject to much criticism and abuse at a time when every arm possible was needed for the defense of the country. A number of them drew up petitions and presented them to the several bodies of the state government, as follows:

To the Honorable the Supreme Executive Council of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

The Petition of George Bachman, Jacob Yeoder, Casper Yeoder, Abraham Yeoder, Henry Sell, Peter Sell, Philip Geisinger, Henry Geisinger, John Geisinger, Abraham Geisinger, Christian Young and John Newcomer of Upper Saucon in the county of Northampton and State of Pennsylvania,

Humbly Sheweth: That your Petitioners having received Sentence of Banishment at the last Court of Quarter Sessions held at Easton, for no other cause but that we could not with freedom of conscience comply with the Law of this State imposing a Test on the Inhabitants, and being deeply afflicted with the complicated distresses, our unhappy Families are hereby involved in; beg leave, in all humility to lay before you, our deplorable case, not destitute of some hope of obtaining your merciful interposition, as we believe none can Justly charge any of us with having ever done any act, that can be construed inimical to the State or Government we live under, but have always been peaceable subjects, ready and willing to contribute our full proportion towards the support of it, except going into military service, it being contrary to our religious principles to bear Arms in any case whatsoever, and if ever we are found guilty of anything contrary to these our peaceable Principles, may we suffer the severest Penalties; and your Petitioners believing the Supreme Council to be invested with a dispensing Power to mitigate the severity of our sentence as we humbly conceive the process against us, has not been according to the Spirit of the Law, or the intention of the Legislature with regard to the peaceable Industrious part of the People, which Error is imputed to the Magistrate not dearly understanding the full meaning of the first and third clauses of the Act for the further security of Government, passed the first of April last; and your Petitioners not being able yet to get over their religious scruple about taking the said Test, it appearing to us like joining our hands to military service, and being very desirous to continue to be, not only peaceable, but useful subjects to this State; do humbly request the Honorable Supreme Council to take our distressed Case into Consideration, and grant such relief therein as to you in your wisdom shall seem meet.

And your Petitioners shall as in duty bound pray, &c., 4th July, 1778.

George Bachman,	Henrich Geiszinger,
Jacob Joder,	Johanes Geiszinger,
Casper Joder,	Abraham Geiszinger,
Abraham Joder,	Philip Geiszinger,
Henrich Sell,	Christian Jung,
Peter Sell,	Johannes Neukommer.

We, the Subscribers, Freeman of the County of Northampton, being duly qualified according to Law, beg leave to certify the Honorable Supreme Council of this Commonwealth, that we are neighbors to, and well acquainted with the petitioners above named and have ever Known them to be men of unblemished reputation for uprightness and integrity in their conduct, conversation & dealings amongst men, and are convinced that their present blindness to their own Essential interests, proceeds from an unhappy bias in their Education, and not from any disaffection to the present Government.

Witness our hands the 5th July, 1778.

Felix Lynn	Felix Rosenberger
Nicholas Kooken	Michel Zigler
Johannes Lukenbach	Mattes Gangwer
Georg Rauschenberger	Johannes Bär
Adam Lukenbach	Peter Fuchs
Jorg Schäffer	Mattes Mueller.

To the Honorable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met:

The Petition of Eve Yoder, wife of Jacob Yoder, of Upper Saucon township in the county of Northampton in this State, yoeman, and Ester Bachman, wife of George Bachman, of Upper Saucon Township, aforesaid, yoeman, as well on Behalf of themselves and their said Husbands as also on Behalf of John Keissinger, Abraham Keissinger, Henry Sell, Jasper Yoder, Abraham Yoder, Jacob Yoder, Henry Keissinger, Christian Young, John Newcomer and George Bachman, all of them Freeholders and Men of Reputation of the said county who have always behaved peaceably and quietly and never intermeddled in State affairs But paid their Taxes and Fines, furnished horses and teams for the continental service whenever demanded, and some of them have gone with their Teams as Drivers to carry Provisions to the army of the United States for which service they have hitherto received no pay; That the said Freeholders were summoned to appear at the Court of Quarter Sessions held at Easton in June last past, when they appeared accordingly and the Test being tendered to them, by the said court, which said they conscientiously scrupled to take (being of the Religious Society called Menonists) Whereupon the said Court sentenced them to be banished out of this state within thirty days after the said court and that all their personal Estate be confiscated to the State; That afterwards all their said personal Estate even their Beds, Bedings, Linen, Bibles and Books were taken from them and sold by the Sheriff to the amount of about Forty Thousand Pounds.

That from some of them all their Provisions were taken and even not a Morsel of Bread left them for their Children; That as all their Iron Stoves were taken from them out of their Houses tho fastened to the Freehold, they are deprived of every Means of Keeping their Children

Warm in the approaching Winter especially at Nights being obliged to lye on the Floor without any Beds; That some of the said Men's wives are pregnant and near their time of Deliverance which makes their case more distressing and that by reason of the said Proceedings ten of the most respectful and considerable Families in the said county of Northampton are become destitute and very much reduced; May it therefore please this Honorable House to take the Premises into Consideration and to mitigate the Security of the Sentence of the said Court, and that Some Regard be had to the Command of God laid down in the Scripture of Truth, to wit: "What God hath joyned together let not men put asunder" and that our Husbands may be permitted to continue to dwell with us, and that our children may not be taken from us, and your Petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

September the 9th, 1778.

her
Eve E Yoder
mark

her
Esther E Bachman.
mark

September 10th, 1778.

Read and ordered to be recommended to the Council.

Petition of Eve Yoder and Esther Bachman to the Honorable Assembly.

The petition of Eve Joeder and Esther Bachman, in behalf of themselves, their husbands, and other inhabitants of Northampton county, was presented to the Assembly on September 10th and referred to the Executive Council, with the recommendation to them to inquire into the facts set forth in the petition, and if the same is found to be true, to grant such relief to their present distresses, as they may think proper by a draft on the State Treasurer.

The minutes of the Executive Council show that they received this petition on September 17th and ordered that John Ralston, Peter Rhoads, Esquires, and Doctor Linn, of Northampton county, be directed to make inquiry into the circumstances and report to the Council. No further mention of the matter appears in the Executive Council minutes.

The goods of George Bachman were sold by the Sheriff on August 24, 1778, and £445 16 3 in continental money was realized. On the same day £869 9 10 was realized from the sale of Caspar Yoder's personal property, and £408 17 1 from the sale of Abraham Geisinger's goods. Among the effects of the latter, a clock was sold for £49, a German stove for £3 12 0, and a book for 17 shillings. On August 29, 1778, Henry and Peter Sell's goods were sold realizing £1,046 6 6, and John Geisinger's, amounting to £921 16 6, among which was a clock with a walnut case, sold for £35, several desks, and a number of books. Henry Geisinger's property was sold Sept. 3, 1778, for £560 13 2. A Dutch stove was sold for £4 10 0, a walnut table for £5, blacksmith tools for £74, and a clock for £37. Jacob Yoder's property, sold Sept. 1st realized £700 1 10, among which were sold several parcels of books, a Bible for £14 10 0, a clock for £35 and a number of pewter dishes.

CONTINENTAL MONEY.

The issue of paper money or bills of credit, not only by the several colonies, but by the Continental Congress, became a necessity when the Revolutionary War began in 1775. The second Congress, on May 10, 1775, agreed to issue a sum not exceeding 2,000,000 "Spanish milled dollars," in bills of credit for the defence of America. Each colony was required to pay its proportion. They were issued in denominations of from one to eight dollars, 49,000 of each and 11,800 of twenty dollars each. The plates were engraved by Paul Revere, of Boston. The paper was so thick that the British called it "the paste-board currency of the rebels." The size of the bills averaged about 3½ by 2¾ inches and in the face of each was a device significant in design and legend.

New issues were made at various times until the close of 1779, when the aggregate amount was $242,000,000. Then the bills had so much depreciated that $100.00 in specie would purchase $2,600.00 in paper currency. It had performed a great work in enabling the colonists, without taxes the first three years of the war, to fight and baffle one of the most powerful nations in Europe. The total loss to the people, by depreciation and failure of redemption, operated as a tax, for that depreciation was gradual.

Many counterfeits of the bills were put into circulation by the British, who publicly advertised their sale in New York.

The Pennsylvania Assembly resolved to issue £35,000 in bills of credit, to bear date July 20, 1775. The mere issuing of these bills was an act of rebellion, as they were emitted by the mere resolve of the Assembly in defiance of their charter, and without reference to the Governor; and yet these notes, and those issued by resolution of Nov. 18th, same year, (bearing date Dec. 8) and of April 8, 1776, (date April 25), still hold in its accustomed place the name of "his Majesty King George the Third."

Long afterwards these bills were known and spoken of in Acts of Assembly as "the resolve money," taking the name from the circumstances of their issue.

In March, 1777, it was resolved to emit £200,000 for the support of the army, and here the authority of "the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania" appears for the first time.* Various laws had been passed from time to time to call in the bills emitted during the dominion of Great Britain, and in 1778, Congress requested the States to end the currency of notes issued prior to the 19th of April, 1775, as they had fallen into the hands of persons unfriendly to the new Government who held them, and made a discrimination in their favor, believing that they would ultimately be redeemed, whether the subsequent ones were or not; by this means causing the notes issued by the authority of Congress and of the several States to depreciate in value. Accordingly on the 23d of March, 1778, the Legislature passed an act declaring such notes no longer to be a legal tender after the first of June, but that until that time they might be received at the treasury in payment of taxes, in exchange for later notes, &c. In the case of non-residents, the time for presenting them was extended to the first day of August; and by a subsequent act the issue of September 30th (date Oct. 25th), 1775, of £22,000 for the support of the Government was included within its provisions.

Previous to this, Pennsylvania had by a law passed in January, 1777, made the Congress issue a legal tender, and had imposed penalties on refusing to receive them, and on counterfeiting or altering them.

In March, 1780, the State emitted £100,000 for the support of the army, and to provide a fund for their redemption the Executive was empowered to sell certain properties in the city of Philadelphia, as well as Province Island in the township of Kingsessing;* so well have these provisions been carried into effect that not a vestige of the notes now remain. The act under which these notes were issued is a striking example of how the most consummate tyranny may be exercised by even the most zealous devotees of liberty; not content with making them a legal tender, with declaring a refusal to take them an acquittance of the debt, by a supplement passed in the following December, they inflicted upon the first offence, a fine in value of double the sum offered; and upon the second, imprisonment to last during the war, together with confiscation of one-half of the offenders lands, goods and chattels.

*These bills became known as "the Island money" from that circumstance.

About the same time Congress passed a resolution calling on the State to contribute in certain proportions towards the support of the Government, and for that purpose they were to emit notes of a certain fixed form, the same for all the States, bearing interest and redeemable in six years, of which as well as of the principal the United States guaranteed the payment, and "would draw bills of exchange therefor when thereunto requested." Accordingly in June, Pennsylvania emitted $1,250,000 in notes, that long after bore the name of "the dollar money." In May, an act had been passed to receive the old continental money, at one dollar specie for forty in notes, and this emission was to be issued as specie on that basis.

In October a scale of depreciation was adopted, and certificates of pay due to the Pennsylvania Line, founded thereon, were issued, receivable in payment for the Public Lands, and the depreciation was ordered to be ascertained and published every month in the Philadelphia Gazettes. In April, 1781, the following scale of the depreciation of paper compared with silver and gold was adopted by the Legislature:

	1777	1778	1779	1780	1781
January	1- $\frac{1}{2}$	4	8	40- $\frac{1}{2}$	75
February	1- $\frac{1}{2}$	5	10	47- $\frac{1}{2}$	75
March	2	5	10- $\frac{1}{2}$	61- $\frac{1}{2}$	00
April	2- $\frac{1}{2}$	6	17	61- $\frac{1}{2}$	00
May	2- $\frac{1}{2}$	5	24	59	00
June	2- $\frac{1}{2}$	4	20	61- $\frac{1}{2}$	00
July	3	4	19	64- $\frac{1}{2}$	00
August	3	5	20	70	00
September	3	5	24	72	00
October	3	5	30	73	00
November	3	6	38- $\frac{1}{2}$	74	00
December	4	6	41- $\frac{1}{2}$	75	00

And at the same time five hundred thousand pounds were ordered to be emitted for the support of the army, of which £200,000 were to replace the issue of 1777, and the old currency at the depreciated value according to the scale. Ample funds were pledged to the redemption of this issue, and according to the report of the State Treasurer in 1805, there remained outstanding and unredeemed only £4,140 3s 7d. By this act (1781), the dollar was now legally rated at seven shillings and sixpence.

In June the old continental bills and the "resolve money" were declared to be no longer a legal tender, and could be received only at the Treasury and at their current value. Acts were passed from time to time to facilitate the calling in the Bills of Credit, and to increase the objects for which they could be received in payments at the Treasury.

In 1783 a small issue of Treasury notes took place, which has been entirely redeemed, and no further emission was made until March, 1785, when, after a long discussion, and the rise, as in other States about the same time, of a paper money party, the great need of a currency led to, the striking of one hundred and fifty thousand pounds in Bills of Credit, to be loaned out as former issues had been; funds sufficient were set apart for their redemption, and £20,000 were directed to be annually destroyed, yet, confidence was not placed in them, and so rapid a depreciation ensued, that shortly afterwards a supplementary act was passed to call them in much sooner than had been originally designed.

The withdrawal of these notes was expedited by the issue of certificates of State Loan, in exchange for them and the old Continental Loan Office certificates, which was the beginning of the present fiscal history of the State. Of this issue the report of the State Treasurer, in 1805, states that the whole amount has been redeemed except the sum of £2,792 8s 1d.

By the act of December the 4th, 1789, the "resolve money" and the issue of 1777, were no longer to be received at the Treasury after the first of January, 1791, thus entirely destroying their vitality.

From time to time, in 1792, 1793 and 1794, acts were passed to facilitate the redemption of the issues of 1785, of 1781, and "The Dollar Money"; and the final disposition of the subject was made by an act passed on the fourth of April, 1805, which recited that "as now sufficient time had been allowed for the redemption of the Bills of Credit of this Commonwealth, that all such bills outstanding and not paid into the Treasury before the second Tuesday in January, 1806, should be forever irredeemable."

This is believed to be the last legislation in Pennsylvania upon this subject.

Some persons, holders of the notes, cherishing the fond hope that the State would ultimately redeem her obligations at the value expressed on their face, neglected or refused to present them at the Treasury, before the expiration of the time limited for their redemption at the depreciated rates fixed by law; it is principally to this circumstance, that the present generation is indebted for the many specimens of the financing schemes of former days.

The Bills of Credit issued by Pennsylvania and the persons appointed to sign them from July 20, 1775 to March 16, 1785, were as follows:

Resolution, June 30, (date of note, July 20), £35,000.

7,000 notes, each of 10s, 20s, 30s, 40s.

To be signed by three of Sharp Delany, Lambert Cadwallader, Isaac Howell, James Mease, John Benezet, Samuel Cadwallader Morris, Adam Hubley, Thomas Prior, Godfrey Twells, John Mease, John Purviance, and William Allen, Jr.

September 30, (date of note, October 25), £22,000.

6,000 notes, each of 20s, 15s, 10s, 5s.

15,849 notes, each of 2s 6d, 2s 1s 6d, 1s, 9d, 4d, 3d.

15,850 notes each for 6d.

Bills under 1s. to be signed by one; of 1s. and over by three of Francis Johnston, Thomas Shoemaker, Charles Jervis, Thomas Tilbury, Philip Kinsey, John Knowles, Isaac Howell, Abel Evans, and Richard Humphreys.

Resolution, November 18 (date of note, December 8), £80,000.

16,000 notes, each of 10s, 20s, 30s, 40s.

to be signed by three of Matthew Clarkson, William Crispin, William Smith, Thomas Leech, Joseph Redman, William Kenly, Josiah Hewes, Andrew Tybout, George Douglass, Charles Moore, Abel Evans, Thomas Moore, Peter Thomas, Samuel Cadwallader Morris, Cornelius Barnes, Sketchly Morton, Elisha Price, and Nicholas Fairlamb.

Resolution, April 6 (date of note, April 25), £85,000.

54,545 notes, each of 3d, 9d.

54,546 notes, each of 4d, 6d.

28,572 notes, each of 1s, 2s.

28,571 notes, each of 1s 6d, 2s 6d.

14,000 notes, each of 10s, 20s, 30s, 40s.

Bills of 3d, 4d, 6d, 9d, to be signed by one, of 1s, 1s 6d, 2s, 2s 6d, by two, the others by three of William Smith, Benjamin Betterton, Joseph Redman, William Clifton, Sketchly Morton, Josiah Hewes, William Crispin, Andrew Tybout, George Douglass, William Kenly, Charles Moore, Thomas Moore, Abel Evans, Peter Thompson, Elisha Price, Hugh Lloyd, and Samuel C. Morris.

1777.

March 20 (date of note, April 10), £200,000.

150,000 notes, each of 3d, 4d, 6, 9d.

30,000 notes, each of 1s, 1s 6d, 2s, 3s, 4s, 6s, 8s, 12s, 16s, 20s.

12,670 notes, each of 40s.

12,665 notes, each of 80s.

Every bill under 4s to be signed by one, above 4s by two, of Benjamin Betterton, John Young, Jr., William Thorne, Andrew Hodge, William Kinley, Isaac Howell, Caleb Davis, Joseph Gardner, James Cannon, Whitehead Humphreys, Benjamin Jacobs, William Evans, Levi Budd, Isaac Snowden, John Brown, William Will, Philip Alberti, Henry Luithausen, Samuel Smith, Frederick Antis, Robert Loller, James Davidson, Joseph Parker and Michael Shubart.

1780.

March 25 (dated April), £100,000. To purchase provisions for the army.

8,696 notes, each of 60s, 50s, 30s, 20s, 15s, 10s, 5s.

8,694 notes each of 40s.

To be signed by two of Daniel Wistar, Levi Budd, Philip Boehm, Robert Cather, Jedediah Snowden, William Laurence Blair, Charles Lewis Treichel, John Miller, Joseph Watkins, John Knox, Nathan Jones, and William Thorne.

June 1 (according to Resolution of Congress, March 18)

$1,250,000. $1, $2, $3, $4, $5, $7, $8, $20.

To be signed by two of Michael Shubart, Daniel Wistar, Levi Budd, Philip Boehm, Robert Cather, Jedediah Snowden, William Laurence Blair, John Miller, John Knox, and Nathan Jones.

Congress appointed to sign for the U. S., any one of Thomas Smith and Richard Bache.

1781.

April 7 (date of note, April 20) £500,000.

29,077 notes, each of £5, £3, £2 10s, £2, £1 10s, £1.

29,076 notes, each of 15s, 10s.

40,000 notes, each of 5s, 2s 6d, 2s.

20,000 notes, each of 1s 6d, 1s.

80,000 notes, each of 9d, 6d, 3d.

Below 10s. to be signed by one, of 10s. or over, by two of Cadwallader Morris, Samuel Meredith, James Budden, Joseph Wharton, Joseph Bullock, Samuel Caldwell, Michael Shubart, David H. Cunningham, Jacob Barge, Philip Boehm, John Purviance, Joseph Dean, John Miller, Jonathan Mifflin, Isaac Howell, Richard Bache, John Baynton, Tench Francis, David Shaffer, Sr., Thomas Prior, Robert Knox, John Mease, Jacob S. Howell, and John Patton.

By an Act passed January 31, 1783, the following amounts were directed not to be completed:

20,000 notes, each of 5s, 2s 6d, 2s, 1s.

40,000 notes, each of 9d, 6d, 3d.

Amounting to £13,500.

1783.

March 21, $300,000.

Treasury notes, of $¼, $1, $2, $3, $6, $12, $15, $20.

1785.

March 16 (date of note March 16) £150,000.
54,546 notes, each of 3d, 9d, 1s 6d, 2s 6d, 5s,
15s.

54,545 notes, each of 10s, 20s.

Bills of 10s and over to be signed by three, all of the others by two, except the 9d and 3d, by one, of John Chaloner, William Turnbull, George Latimer, Reynold Keen, Andrew Tybout, Edward Fox, James Collins, Peter Baynton, William Smith (druggist), Samuel Murdock, James Bayard, Joseph Redman, Robert Smith (merchant), John Rhea, William Gray (brewer), William Tilton, Francis Wade, Thomas Irwin, Charles Risk, Andrew Pettit, James McCrea, John Taylor, Samuel Caldwell, Stacy Hepburn, and John Duffield.

A Supplement of September 10th appointed the following additional signers:

Levi Budd, George Leib, John Baker, William Wertz, Francis Mentges, Joseph Kerr, John Miller, James Glentworth, John Steel, George Goodwin, Joseph Marsh, Henry Kammerer, Michael Shubart, and Robert Bridges.

A merchant of Philadelphia preserved the following scale of depreciation.

Value of $100.00 in specie in continental money.

	1777	1778	1779	1780	1781
January	$105.00	$325.00	$742.00	$2934.00	$7400.00
February	107.00	327.00	868.00	3332.00	7500.00
March	109.00	375.00	1000.00	3736.00	6000.00
April	112.00	400.00	1104.00	4000.00	0
May	115.00	400.00	1215.00	4600.00	"
June	120.00	400.00	1342.00	6400.00	"
July	125.00	425.00	1477.00	8900.00	"
August	150.00	450.00	1630.00	7000.00	"
September	175.00	475.00	1800.00	7100.00	"
October	275.00	500.00	2030.00	7200.00	"
November	300.00	545.00	3308.00	7300.00	"
December	310.00	634.00	2593.00	7400.00	"

A bill for a purchase of goods on January 5, 1781, was as follows:

1 pair boots,	$ 600.00
6¾ yds. calico, at $85 per yd.,.....	752.00
6 yards, chintz, at $150 per yd.,	900.00
4½ yards moreen, at $100 per yd., ..	450.00
4 handkerchiefs, at $100 ea.,	400.00
8 yds. quality binding at $4 per yd., .	32.00
1 skein silk,	10.00
	$3,144.00

If paid in specie, £18 10s.

Received payment in full.

In Allentown, in 1781, sugar sold at 12 dollars a pound; coffee, 20 dollars; a silk handkerchief, 120 dollars; a spelling book, 20 dollars; a scythe, 130 dollars; tea, 75 dollars a pound; cambric, 25 dollars per yard; a skein of thread, 4 dollars; and a paper of pins, 2 dollars.

A number of people lost their all by selling their property for continental currency at the time of its greatest depreciation, which then soon proved valueless.

The following muster rolls of companies in Northampton county, west of the Lehigh river, appear in the Pennsylvania Archives:

A GENERAL MUSTER ROLL OF THE SECOND BATTALION OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY MILITIA. MAY 14, 1778.

Field Officers.

Colonel.

George Breinig.

Lieut. Col.

Stephen Balliet.

Major.

Frederick Limbach.

1st Company.

Captain.

Joseph Koocken.

Lieutenants.

1st, Peter Koocken. 2nd, Philip Hertzog.

Ensign.

Philip Mechlen.

Class 1st.

Rudolph Zubbler.

Casper Heppler.

(Name mutilated).

John Heistand.

Isaac Heistand.

Jacob Weiss.

Matthias Kern.

Frederick Kemmerer.

Andrew Reinhert.

George Roddenberger.

Class 2nd.

Philip Derringer.

Stephen Dollman.

Abraham Heistand.

Adam Reinhart.

Michael Smyer.

Jacob Drump.

Melchoir Yeackel.

Class 3rd.

Ludwick Stahler.

Abraham Myer.

Conrad Weitmyer.

Frederick Fenneal.

Henry Funk.

Jacob Miller.

George Holtshew.

Class 4th.

Peter Rodenberger.

George Yeagle.

George Christman.

Jacob Seager.

Jacob Creader.

Frederick Metzger.

Nicholas Hiddle.

Class 5th.

Jacob Weaggard.

Jost Weagant.

Peter Cloack.

Christopher Heppler.

Philip Staller.

Abraham Stall.

Daniel Creader.

Frederick Heynbauch.

John Drump.

Frederick Kreammer.

Class 6th.

Wandle Waygand.

Michael Mattinger.

George Reynheart.

William Powless.

Simon Icenheart.

Peter Staller.

Peter Hertzal.

Adam Trump.

Valentine Reynheart.

Class 7th.

George Reynheart.

Frederick Kerrecer.

Michael Flowhouse.

Gaberil Puppimgmeyer.

Adam Kable.

George Syder.

John Hauser.

Jacob Roddenbirger.

Rudolph Weiss.

Jacob Stall.

(Missing).

Class 8th.
 George Kemmerer. John Heartzel.
 Philip Kalle. George Truckenmiller.
 Simon Snyder. Jeremiah Flexer.
 John Reishel. Jacob Sheiffer.
 Christopher Metzger. William Shaffer.

2nd Company.

Captain.

George Knapingberger.

Lieutenants.

1st, John Mosser. 2nd, Daniel Turney.

Ensign.

Jacob Stephen.

Sergeants.

Jacob Syder. Adam Dirch.

Conrad Knapinberger.

Corporals.

Daniel Nower. Joseph Keiser.

Jacob Harman. Jacob Derr.

Drum and Fife.

Michael Bierry. Jacob Weaver.

Class 1st.

Jacob Shankweiler. Martin Turnmyer.

John Finck. Henry Heistand.

John Kline. Frederick Reiss.

Isaac Jerret. Peter Smyer.

George Swarts.

Class 2nd.

Henry Laurish. Jacob Smyer.

Peter Guisser. George Hyle.

George Syder. Michael Kennet.

Michael Meckley. George Graver.

Nicholas Derr. Henry Christman.

Class 3rd.

Christian Ruddt. Michael Shaffer on the Valentine Shaffer. Hill.

Daniel Hughs. Nicholas Loarish.

Frederick Romich. Joseph Romich.

Joseph Icenheart. John Hynley.

Philip Ruddt.

Class 4th.

Jacob Bortts. Christopher Traye.

Ludwick Mickley. Peter Fox.

George Curr. Matthias Westcoe.

Isaac Gayman. Conrad Preiy.

Peter Keannet. Burick Menheart.

Class 5th.

Valentine Keisser. Peter Sclusher.

George Shaffer. Andrew Icenheart.

George Reiss. Henry Meitzler.

Michael Shaffer. Conrad Wetzel.

Matthias Keimmer. Francis Westcoe.

Class 6th.

John Greenewalt. John Geisser.

Matthias Ludwick. Dewauld Shoutt.

Lawrence Kern. Nicholas Klautz.

John Weirts. Henry Caummer.

John Devenderfer. Abraham Klautz.

Conrad Meistler.

Class 7th.

Mark Leitchley. Michael Steamer.

Daniel Smyer. Philip Smyer.

Godfred Devenderfer. Jacob Wagoner.

Jacob Moore. Rudolph Laurish.

Jacob Coumb.

John Gaummer.
 Jacob Gaummer.
 Philip Walter.
 Nicholas Kline.
 John Turney.

Class 8th.

John Hyneley.
 Leonard Kuhn.
 Edward Jerret.
 Henry Moudtern.
 Peter Miller.

3rd Company.

Captain.

Peter Schuller.

Lieutenants.

Thomas Mecklin. James Derr.

Ensign.

James Eberheart.

Sergeants.

John Derr. George Geibler.

Andrew Walb. John Seller.

Corporals.

George Boyd. John Lee.

Balsler Steill. George Mack.

Class 1st.

Casper Reiser. Matthias Gerheart.

Nicholas Levi. Balsar Grouse.

Jeremiah Yeaggle. Adam Garrie.

Class 2nd.

John Jeacobby. Joseph Sannts.

David Creader. John Yount.

George Ruch. Peter Diese.

George Homer.

Class 3rd.

Michael Eberhart. John Shannts.

Daniel Staufer. Adam Roddenberger.

Nicholas Deitts. John Grissmer.

John Reiser.

Class 4th.

John Dillinger. Christopher Ott.

John Hilligas. Philip Eberheart.

Daniel Dubbs. Philip Eaggle.

George Gribble.

Class 5th.

Joseph Eberheart. Adam Kepheart.

Christopher Seller. George Kline.

Woollery Bassler. Matthias Ox.

Conrad Wolf.

Class 6th.

Jacob Dillinger, Jur. Abraham Stawfer.

John Baker. William Reisser.

Jost Reilling. Peter Eberhart.

Peter Weaver.

Class 7th.

George Eaggle. Abraham Shannts.

Jacob Kline. Joseph Shelley.

Jacob Dillinger. Jacob Keller.

Jacob Reeve.

Class 8th.

Michael Derr. Abraham Ruchenbach.

Jacob Holtshauser. Henry Reiss.

Philip Miller. Andrew Reisser.

4th Company.

Captain.

John Morritz.

Lieutenants.

1st, Philip Knapingberger. 2nd, Abraham Wotring,

Sen'r.

	Ensign.		Drum and Fife.
	Abraham Wotring, Jun'r.		Jeremiah Trexler.
	Sergeants.		Christian Weaver.
Martin Ritter.	(Missing).	Henry Koch.	George Zimmerman.
Adam Zerfass.	Nicholas Seger.	Dewalt Koons.	Philip Fogle.
	Corporals.	Peter Smith.	Daniel Grousinger.
John Miller.	Stephen Myer.	Matthias Rissle.	John Putz.
Christian Leibenguth.	Andrew Dormyer.	Melchoir Rissle.	John Dunckle.
	Drum and Fife.	Nicholas Miller.	George Walbert.
John Rock.	Peter Mickley.		Class 2nd.
	Class 1st.	Jost Rissle.	Henry Bower.
Peter Bassler.	Adam Knappenberger.	George Rissle.	David Lidwiler.
(Missing).	Peter Drockshell.	John Hofman.	John Kline.
John Huffman.	Deitrick Hartman.	Henry Moor.	John Eppler.
Casper Peter.		John Fetter.	Peter Rack.
	Class 2nd.	Henry Haas.	Peter Moor.
Matthias Schneider.	Dewald Bech.		Class 3rd.
Jacob Hartman, Ju'r.	Jacob Miller, Sen'r.	Adam Eppler.	Jeremiah Smith.
George West.	Jacob Grechman.	George Speagle.	Jacob Cressman.
Philip Roth.		Matthias Wearoer.	Henry Cressman.
	Class 3rd.	Matthias Seyfort.	Philip Zigler.
Peter Burkhalter.	Jacob Kohler.	George Roup.	John Fogle, Sen'r.
Michael Nuheart.	Martin Mickly.	George Gutikunst.	Henry Sunday.
John Kern.	Jacob Hartman.		Class 4th.
Peter Meyer.		Bartol Kunss.	Philip Jacob Barr.
	Class 4th.	Jacob Kunss.	Adam Brouse.
Michael Miller.	Peter Flickinger.	Michael Overkersh.	John Haas.
Adam Dracksel.	Lawrence Ruch.	Christopher Merckel.	Peter Butz.
Conrad Humbs.	Daniel Kern.	Jacob Kichley.	Henry Romich.
Andrew Sigfret.		Adam Smith, Ju'r.	Joseph Albright.
	Class 5th.		Class 5th.
Peter Deshler.	Leonard Kenorr.	Dewald Kunss.	John Romich.
Conrad Mark.	Abraham Junt.	Jacob Acker.	Peter Mattern.
George Miller.	Conrad Miller.	George Stoneinger.	Jacob Swartz.
Charles Hoffman.		Adam Smith.	Herman Hartman.
	Class 6th.	Peter Trexler.	John Moore.
Martin Gross.	Adam Deshler.	Jacob Romich.	George Hettler.
Jacob Miller, Ju'r.	Benjamin Ott.		Class 6th.
William Schell.	Conrad Leissring.	Jacob Acker, Ju'r.	Jacob Hansringer.
Peter Rauch.		Francis Overkersh.	Henry Brobst.
	Class 7th.	Harman Moore.	George Fetzer.
John Grob.	George Kohler.	Peter Geys.	Michael Shmyer.
Frederick Neihart.	Jacob Kern.	Jacob Shleuch.	Adam Reisch.
John Bersch.	Daniel Kuns.	John Shaffer.	George Hansringer.
Jacob Flickinger.	Frederick Fiffer.		Class 7th.
Martin Mayer.		Christian Acker.	George Rouse.
	Class 8th.	Peter Hammel.	John Koller.
Jacob Schreiber.	Peter Neihart.	Peter Haff (unfit for duty).	Michael Hiske.
Adam Martin.	Jacob Steckel.	Andrew Miller.	John Muth.
Christopher Kern.	Henry Steckel.	Conrad Mayer.	Barnet Heanig.
Andrew Heck.	George Flickinger.	John Shmitt.	Philip Swartz.
	5th Company.		Class 8th.
	Captain.	Henry Stettler.	Peter Shwab.
	Peter Trexler, Junr.	John Daber.	Andrew Reisse.
	Lieutenants.	John Fogel.	William Heins.
John Lichtewalter.	John Trexler, Ju'r.	John Merckel.	John Albright.
	Ensign.	Melchoir Smith.	Jacob Parr.
	Peter Haas, Jun'r.	Jacob Parr, Jun'r.	Joseph Shouch.
	Sergeants.		Class 8th.
Melchoir Mayer.	_____		6th Company.
_____ Pievalhim.	_____ Schlouch.		Captain.
	Corporals.		Henry Reitz.
George Seip.	Francis Warmkessel.		Lieutenants.
Nicholas Mohr.	John Trexler.	1st, Peter Good.	2nd, Daniel Turney.

Ensign.		7th Company.
Peter Kealer.		Captain.
Clerk.		Christian Fisher.
George F. Knauss.		Lieutenant.
Court Martial Men.		Daniel Good.
George Knauss.	Benedict Nightlinger.	Ensign.
		John Ord.
	Sergeants.	Class 1st.
Jost Steinberger.	William Rischell.	Philip Baker.	Peter Brown.
Adam Turney.	Jacob Streiby.	Peter Mayer.	Conrad Neimyer.
		George Helfreich.	Ludwick Andrews.
	Corporals.	John Olhewine.
Martin Ritzel.	Adam Schwander.	George Worman.	Class 2nd.
Christian Mufly.	Michael Schner.	Rudolph Funk.	Adam Schuller.
		Henry Huber.	Adam Ingleman.
Jacob Wenner.	George Wenner.	Conrad Worman.	Harman Neiss.
			Adam Deall.
	Class 1st.		Class 3rd.
Daniel Droxell.	Martin Rischel.	George Schroad.	Samuel Rusher.
Ludwick Rischel.	Joseph Myer.	Henry Ott.	George Shaffer.
Peter Lehr.		John Neiss.	Michael Shaut.
	Class 2nd.	George Wetzell.	Michael Ott.
Peter Steinberger.	Jacob Wener.		Class 4th.
Jacob Young.	Adam Henry.	John Schuller.	John Eddleman.
Jacob Draxel.	John Flexer.	Jacob Weirtner.	John Landes.
	Class 3rd.	Jacob Huber.	Jacob Fisher.
Paul Strubey.	Andrew Wener.	Benedict Funk.	Thomas Flexer.
Michael Kall.	George Sander.		Class 5th.
Abraham Sterner.	Abraham Martin.	Jacob Stallnecker.	Conrad Meyer.
Michael Huth.		George Roushenberger.	John Funck.
	Class 4th.	George Fetterman.	Simon Hyne.
John Roth.	Jacob Holstein.	Daniel Smith.	Michael Wolfgang.
Peter Rabenolt.	Christian Gobel.		Class 6th.
David Meyer.	George Hamman.	John Heistand.	Michael Deall.
Godfreid Knauss.	Frederick Sneider.	Christian Fisher.	Nicholas Miller.
Nicholas Mayer.	Frederick Neyhard.	George Miller.	Christian Andrews.
Lawrence Good.		Peter Ingelman.	Jost Wentz.
	Class 5th.		Class 7th.
Henry Zerfass.	Philip Knauss.	Nicholas Samsell.	Michael Knauss.
Peter Schener.	George Gelick.	Michael Mayer.	Henry Bower.
Nicholas Ocker.	David Knauss.	Jacob Miller.	Jacob Smith.
Adam Good.	Peter Beshtel.	Jacob Leaub.	Nicholas Hyne.
Abraham Geisheim.			Class 8th.
Jacob Hamman.	Peter Keller.	Philip Walter.	Michael Fetterman.
Frederick Hild.	Michael Snyder.	George Laudensleiger.	Michael Andrews.
John Lehr.	Jacob Koll.	Nicholas Stahler.	Godfred Weissmer.
Valentine Steiner.	Adam Heiverly.	Anthony Stahler.	George Heiser.
Daniel Roth.	Lawrence Neyhart.	Henry Heyser.	Nicholas Kline.
	Class 6th.	Jacob Hyle.	Michael Bastian.
George Schweyer.	Henry Turney.		8th Company.
Peter Droxell.	Peter Neyhard.		Captain.
George Yunt.	Leonard Ritzell.		Daniel Shnyder.
John Droxell.	Peter Drisler.		Lieutenants.
John Peter Miller.	Jacob Eagle.		1st, Jacob Wert.
Peter Hoffman.			2nd, Nicholas Mark.
	Class 7th.		Ensign.
Jacob Yunt.	Leonard Steinlinger.		Tobias Sterey.
Daniel Neihart.	Casper Schenenbruck.		Court Martial Men.
George Henry Mertz.	Jacob Schwander.	David Haan.	Nicholas Seager.
John Koch.	George H. Krumbach.		Sergeants.
David Musgeneing.	Leonard Schmidt.	Peter Feller.	Martin Herter.
George Hoffman.	George Eagle.	Adam Maurer.	Paul Gross.

	Corporals.		Sergeants.
Henry Bare.	Adam Sheyer.	Henry Meninger.	Michael Fenstermaker.
Samuel Wootring.	Nicholas Wotring.	Hugh Penk.
	Drum and Fife.		Drum and Fife.
John Shlosser.	Nicholas Wert.		Casper Wanemacher.
	Class 1st.		Class 1st.
Theobald Hertzog.	Christian Miller.	Anthony Opp.	John Neff.
George Dormyer.	Henry Heffelfinger.	Paul Bachman.	Christian Miller.
Casper Kindle.	Conrad Seip.	Peter Reitnauer.	Peter Sholl.
	Class 2nd.	Adam Arndt.	Daniel Oswald.
Christian Jacob.	George Willeman.	Henry Fink.	George Shuck.
Jacob France.	Jacob Kendle.		Class 2nd.
George Semel.	Adam Shneck.	Philip Mosser.	John Ditreich.
	Class 3rd.	Charles Buck.	Daniel Shuman.
Theobald Kendle.	Peter Moritz.	Andrew Staub.	Philip Mosser, Ju'r.
Simon Heartley.	John Bear.	Adam Crautz.	Lawrence Bachman.
Jacob Burger.	Joseph Nelich.		Class 3rd.
	Class 4th.	Jacob Wertman.	John Herman.
Peter Kendle.	Jacob Arney.	Engle Mayer.	Zacharias Haller.
Conrad Shlosser.	Jacob Wolf.	Casper Baldauf.	Jacob Oswald.
John Semel.	John Henry.	Jacob Himbauch.	Michael Mosser.
	Class 5th.		Class 4th.
George Sterry.	Martin Semel.	Michael Wertman.	Charles Straub.
Daniel Snydder, Ju'r.	John Mosser.	Jacob Wanemacher, Sen'r.	Luke Brednich.
Henry Shneck.	Melchoir Bare.	Christian Henry.	Jacob Brednich.
	Class 6th.	William Mayer.	Adam Miller.
Peter Shneck.	Casper Hertley.	Jacob Wertman, Ju'r.
Andrew Yeahl.	Charles Hornberger.		Class 5th.
Daniel Rex.	Samuel Frye.	Michael Shicky.	Bernt Fulweiler.
	Class 7th.	Henry Grum.	Philip Shuck.
Peter Shlosser, Ju'r.	Frederick Bower.	Henry Gesler.	George Shnyder.
Daniel Sterrey.	Abraham Liechtenwalter.	Edward Delong.	Andrew Hanselman.
Peter Slosser, Sen'r.	Charles Bower.		Class 6th.
Abraham Hertley.	Samuel Frye.	Adam Kroch.	Martin Wertman.
	Class 8th.	William Yett.	Philip Opp.
David Newheart.	George Rick.	George Derr.	Samuel Evert.
Jacob Dormeyer.	Michael Ringer.	Christian Clauss.
Herman Schriber.	Frederick West.		Class 7th.

A GENERAL MUSTER ROLL OF THE THIRD BATTALION OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY
MILITIA. JUNE 18, 1777.

	Field Officers.
	Colonel.
	Michael Bobst.
	Lieut. Col.
	Michael Teibert.
	Major.
	Philip Benninghoff.
	Adjutant.
	Frederick Schleich.
	1st Company.
	Captain.
	Adam Stahler.
	Lieutenants.
1st, Michael Kuntz.	2nd, Henry Haller.
	Ensign.
	Jacob Hanss.
		2nd Company.
		William Mayer.
		Lieutenants.
		1st, Theobald Kuntz.
		2nd, Thomas Hermany.
		Ensign.
		George Dris.
		Court Martial Men.
		William Wall.
		Adam Zenner.
		Sergeants.
		Christian Bauman.
		John Kerney.
		Jacob Shmetter.
		Jacob Daubenspeck.
		Corporals.
		Nicholas Ditrich.
		Jacob Shober.
		Jacob Houser.
		Eberhart Ohl.
		Drum and Fife.
		George Hausser.

Class 1st.
 George Crosle. Jacob Holder.
 Samuel Custard. Henry Walton.
 Samuel Sutton. Frederick Schober.

Class 2nd.
 William Karney. George Holder.
 Paul Gricar. Boas Walton.
 Mathias Weaver. John Custert.

Class 3rd.
 George Kocher. Garret Vanhorn.
 John Warner. Joseph Loutton.
 Samuel Dadson. Daniel Warrner.

Class 4th.
 William Thomas. Nathaniel Edmans.
 John Edmans. John Holder.
 Joseph Everit. Joseph Simmer.

Class 5th.
 Joshua Thomas. Joseph Rhoad.
 Jesse Thomas. Samuel Warner.
 Henry Kocher. Nathan Warner.

Class 6th.
 Jacob Mertz. Francis Grum.
 Henry Miller. George Gibberd.
 Philip Schicher. Jacob Weind.
 Henry Wiederstein.

Class 7th.
 Ludwig Mensinger. Michael Haps.
 Bastian Langenberger. Simon Schelhammer.
 George Gilbert, Ju'r. Solomon Bacherd.
 Andrew Rauch.

Class 8th.
 Adam Lang. Henry Arner.
 George Shelhammer. George Daubenspeck.
 John Kistner. Leonard Zimmerman.
 Henry Hauser.

3rd Company.
 Captain.
 Christian Marburger.
 Lieutenants.
 1st, Jacob Grinewald. 2nd, Peter Biver.
 Ensign.
 Daniel Wert.
 Sergeants.
 Jacob Musgenug. Jacob Baral.
 Lawrence Holby. Nicholas Werin.
 Corporals.
 Conrad Bussinger. Conrad Bap.
 George Hand.

Drum and Fife.
 John Greenwald. George Grimm.

Class 1st.
 Nicholas Geringer. Peter Weiss.
 Sebastian Werlin.

Class 2nd.
 David Sander. Nicholas Bachman.
 David Boyer.

Class 3rd.
 Adam Boger. Philip Miller.
 Michael Sieger. Michael Werly.

Class 4th.
 Jacob Heber. Jacob Holby.

Class 5th.
 Abraham Steinbruch. Christian Seiberling.
 George Braucher. Michael Shaller.

Class 6th.
 John Derr. Henry Herber.
 Theobald Holby. Christian Dresher.
 Godfrid Boger.

Class 7th.
 George Greenwald. Wendle Holby.
 Leonard Kapp. Hannes Sieger.

Class 8th.
 Christian Braucher. Paul Gramlich.
 Frederick Beck. Michael Wit.
 Henry Notstin.

4th Company.
 Captain.
 John Horner.
 Lieutenants.
 1st, Andrew Buchman. 2nd, Jacob Dorner.
 Ensign.
 George Custard.
 Court Martial Men.
 Martin Buchman. Henry Kracolo.
 Clerk.
 Martin Rau.
 Sergeants.
 Peter Frantz.
 John Klötz.
 Corporals.
 Casper Klotz. Peter Ruppert.
 Peter Hardman. Samuel Frey.

Drum and Fife.
 Jacob Kuntz. John Wageman.

Class 1st.
 Casper Thomas. Paul Shoemaker.
 John Rau.

Class 2nd.
 Peter Freese. Christian Braucher.
 John Kocher. Adam Thomas.
 Lawrence Georg.

Class 3rd.
 Philip Fenstermacher. George George.
 Michael Mosser. Henry Shoemaker.
 John George.

Class 4th.
 Peter Rinehart. Andrew Knerr.
 Philip Sendle. Barnhart Frees.
 Jacob Hardman. Adam Deiber.

Class 5th.
 Jacob Heilman. Henry Resh.
 Melchoir Frees. Paul Paul.
 George Stern. Michael Frey.

Class 6th.
 Christian Heilman. Jacob Rau.
 Adam Geiss. John Shieverstein.
 George Knodler. Simon George.

Class 7th.
 Michael Walk. Jost George.
 Michael Deiber, Ju'r. Henry Hardman.
 Leonard Frey.

	Class 8th.	Ensign.
Peter Hillman.	Andrew Sendle.	Philip Sadler.
Martin Eliert.	Jacob Shumacher.	Court Martial Men.
George Fritz.		John Smeather. George Smeather.
	5th Company.	Sergeants.
	Captain.	Frederick Leisser.
	Conrad Ritter.	Martin Mootzer.
	Lieutenants.	Corporals.
1st, Adam Kunckel.	2nd, George Bloss.	Philip Ebert.
	Ensign.	Christopher Ecksurct.
	George Rex.	Drum and Fife.
	Court Martial Men.	———— Hollenback.
Casper Schnerr.	Joseph Baliet.	Class 1st.
	Sergeants.	John Breiner.
Michael Greenwald.	Peter Andrews.	Philip Kistler.
Edward Griemeyer.	Philip Hammel.	Class 2nd.
	Corporals.	Conrad Bellman.
George Guldner.	Martin Andrews.	Henry Baush.
Peter Steitel.	William Rex.	George Shnerr.
	Drum and Fife.	George Harman.
Jacob Retenhauser.	Jacob Freyman.	Class 3rd.
	Class 1st.	John Lohra.
Michael Schneider.	Henry Faerber.	Michael Kistler.
Henry Frantz.	Jacob Duenky.	Philip Ehnes.
Henry Boenger.	George Freyman.	Class 4th.
	Class 2nd.	Jacob Rex.
William Kern, Ju'r.	William Silvius.	Paul Bachman.
Nicholas Kern.	Henry Silvius.	Jacob Grimm.
William Fenstermacher.	Philip Mertz.	Paul Anthony.
	Class 3rd.	Class 5th.
William Holly.	Henry Mosser.	Peter Giff.
William Peter.	Anthony Shaeffer.	George Breisch.
Daniel Bloss.	John Rockel.	Martin Probst.
	Class 4th.	Daniel Stambach.
Casper Huntzacker.	William Rex, Ju'r.	Class 6th.
Theobald Peter.	John Wasum.	Samuel Kistler.
Christian Laucnohr.	Andrew Knoedler.	Jacob Kistler.
George Rex.		John Lesser.
	Class 5th.	Abraham Behly.
George Remley, Sen'r.	William Kern, Sen'r.	Class 7th.
George Remley, Ju'r.	John Reber.	Jacob Koons.
Michael Remley.	William Huffman.	Jacob Karl.
Abraham Shelhammer.		Jacob Wetzel.
	Class 6th.	Class 8th.
Peter Waggoner.	Peter Frantz.	Daniel Neier.
Leonard Baliet.	Leonard Lautenschleger.	Christopher Sunday.
Henry Shalebach.	Henry Lautenschleger.	Philip Fosselman.
Martin Shnerr.		Cornelius Klingman.
	Class 7th.
John Kern.	Charles Sholl.	7th Company.
John Huntzecker.	Lawrence Wehr.	Captain.
Jacob Peter.	Baltzer Wirt.	John Grum.
Conrad Rehrich.		Lieutenants.
	Class 8th.	1st, Henry Hoffman.
Jacob Handwerk.	William Andrew	2nd, David Gortner.
Christopher Rex.	Ludwick Stein.	Ensign.
Jacob Brandstetter.	Jacob Baer.	Nicholas Miller.
	6th Company.	Sergeants.
	Captain.	John Linss.
Matthias Brobst.		George Simon Wehr.
	Lieutenants.	George Miller.
1st, Andrew Mayer.	2nd, John Stein.	Christian Shmidt.
		Corporals.
		John Foller.
		Christian Kram.

	Class 1st.		Class 4th.
George Thomas.	Andrew Foeller.	George Smith.	Michael Rishel.
John Peter.	George P. Missemmer.	Isaac Klotz.	Ernest Kloss.
Philip Graus.	Francis Missemmer.		Class 5th.
	Class 2nd.	John Keer.	John Jampert.
John Shneiter.	Martin Linss.	Jacob Zelner.	Baltzer Fritz.
Philip Heimbauch.	Simon Greitz.	Henry Gackenback.
Jacob Messmer.	Henry Neff.		Class 6th.
	Class 3rd.	Jonathan Knauss.	Nicholas Bissecker.
Jacob Weaver.	Michael Ohl, Sen'r.	John Vogt.	Adam Berr.
John Weaver.	John Handwerck.		Class 7th.
Henry Weaver.	John Ruebsomen.	Ludwick Smith.	John Berr.
Adam German.		Abraham Kner.	Conrad Kob.
	Class 4th.		Class 8th.
Michael Wher.	Bernhard Giltner.	John Smith.	George Gudekunst.
Jacob Reinsmith.	Tobias Giltner.	Adam Koch.
Nicholas Wher.	Andrew Giltner.
John Wuchter.	Frederick Mayer.
	Class 5th.
Philip Reinhard.	Jacob Smith.
Jacob Hausman.	John Fogt.
Jacob Kemmerer.	Peter Handwerck.
John Keck.	Conrad Keck.
	Class 6th.
Jacob Hundsinger.	Leonard Miller.
Michael Ohl, Jur.	John Rensmith, Sen'r.
Christian Shnerther.	Samuel Schneithter.
Lawrence Kranoble.	John Rensmith, Jun'r.
	Class 7th.
Adam Gabel.	Charles Ross.
Adam Smith.	Lawrence Ross.
Christian Grum.	Conrad Reitice.
John Ebert.
	Class 8th.
Michael Gabel.	Jacob Keller.
John Rumple, Sen'r.	Leonard Waseaman.
John Rumple, Jun'r.	George Reepert.
Ulrich Neff.
	8th Company.
	Captain.
	Joseph Siegfried.
	Lieutenants.
1st, Kilian Leiby.	2nd, John Ritter.
	Ensign.
	Valentine Miller.
	Sergeants.
Conrad Neff.	Christopher Oettinger.
Peter Saseman.	Jacob Shoemaker.
	Corporals.
Charles Gackabach.	Philip Staetler.
Michael Baurman.	Daniel Knaus, Jun'r.
	Drum and Fife.
Jacob Kloss.	Henry Kloss.
	Class 1st.
David Frey.	Peter Klein.
George Reichert.	John Witt.
	Class 2nd.
Christopher Sterner.	Jacob Berr.
Bernhard Rabert.	Daniel Knauss.
	Class 3rd.
John Kutz.	John Gackenbach.
William Frey.	Henry Derr.
Daniel Staetler.

THE SUGAR-LOAF MASSACRE.

In the Wyoming Valley were many tory sympathizers with Great Britain, who acted secretly as spies, and enabled the savages and active tories to swoop down unexpectedly upon parties of Americans, who, entirely unprepared, often suffered severely from these tory forays. Col. Hunter, in command at Fort Augusta, dispatched a detachment of Captain Van Etten's company, under command of Captain D. Klader, of Northampton county, to join a force moving against the tories.

On Sept. 6, 1780, a body of some 250 to 300 tories and Indians attacked Fort Rice. They were repulsed and additional troops having been ordered to the fort, the tories broke up into small parties, numbering about forty. Hearing of the expected arrival of Capt. Klader's small force, they lay in ambush in the Sugar Loaf Valley, along the path leading from the Susquehanna to Northampton county, about seven miles from Nescopeck, and awaited the arrival of their unsuspecting victims.

In the meanwhile, Capt. Klader, after toiling laboriously to the summit of the Buck Mountain, had taken the path leading by the "old toll-house," thence down the side of the mountain, through a ravine, over the farm of N. Wagner and across the creek below, until they came to what had been a Scotch settlement, but now, because of the border troubles, wholly deserted. To their great delight they saw before them open and cleared fields, covered with a luxuriant growth of grass, and beautiful with wild flowers. Weary as they were with the fatigue and hardship of their long march, when, for days, they had been tearing their way along thickets and bushes, and clambering over logs and stones, they seemed to have entered upon a veritable paradise.

It was noontide of September 11, 1780, knapsacks were immediately unslung, and they entered upon the enjoyment of the hour. The very beauty of their surroundings lulled to rest all thought of danger. No one seemed to realize the necessity for watchful care. Each roamed about as best suited his fancy. Their guns were scattered here and there, some stacked, some leaning against stumps of logs, others lying flat on the ground. The position of the men resembled that of their fire arms. Some were on the ground indulging in a smoke, one man was leaning against a tree with his shoes off, cleaning them out, others had gone for grapes, which grew there in abundance, of which party one had climbed a tree and was picking and eating the grapes from the vine which entwined it.

Suddenly, while in this condition, a volley of musketry was poured in upon them from an unseen foe, and, with it, rang out the terrible war-whoop of the savages, who, in a moment more, were in their midst, hewing down their victims with the murderous tomahawk. Some escaped, and one or two were taken prisoners, but most of them were killed. A great-uncle of the Engle brothers, recently living in Hazleton and vicinity, escaped over the Nescopeck mountain; Abraham Klader, brother of the officer in command, concealed himself in Little Nescopeck creek, by clinging to a tree that had fallen across the stream, and keeping his face only above the water until the enemy had disappeared, when he emerged from his concealment and succeeded in reaching home; Frederick Shickler also escaped on Buck mountain by avoiding the Indian trail, leaving it to his right, and keeping out of sight of the Indians, whose yells he could hear as they followed on in pursuit. Lieut. Myer, Ensign Scoby, and private Peter Tubalt Coans were taken prisoners; the lieutenant escaped, while the other two were taken through to Niagara.

The man in the tree after grapes was shot and fell heavily to the ground beneath. Some were killed in one place and some in another, as they fled and were overtaken by their merciless foes. One soldier whose name cannot be designated, escaped part way up the ravine down which the troops had marched, and there hid himself, but, unfortunately, was betrayed by the barking of his too faithful little dog that had followed him, and was slain. A comrade, secreted in a tree top near by, witnessed the scene. Captain Klader, himself, did not succumb until after performing deeds of valor which caused his name to be remembered with feelings akin to veneration. He is said, by some, to have killed four, and, by others, seven of the enemy, before they finally slew and scalped him.

In time, the mutilated bodies of the dead were gathered by Van Campen, under directions of Col. Hunter, and decently interred.

The Roll of Captain Van Etten's company is given in the records as follows:

A MUSTER ROLL OF A COMPANY OF VOLUNTEERS, NORTHAMPTON COUNTY, NOW IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES, COMMANDED BY JOHANNES VAN ETTEN.

Captain.

Johannes Van Etten, June 15, 1780.

First Lieutenant.

John Fish, June 15, 1780.

Second Lieutenant.

John Myer, June 15, 1780.

Ensigns.

Henry Bush, June 15, 1780.

James Scoby, Sept. 1, 1780; taken prisoner 11th September.

Sergeants.

Thomas Johnston, June 15, 1780.

Samuel Hellet, June 15, 1780.

James Scoby, June 15, 1780; advanced to Ensign the 1st September.

Frederick Everhart, June 15, 1780.

Joseph Gable, August 30, 1780; entered Sergeant.

George Price, July 15, 1780.

Corporals.

Lewis Holmes, June 15, 1780.

Thomas Gay, June 15, 1780.

Samuel Bond, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.

Adam Hicker, July 17, 1780.

Privates.

Samuel Vandermark, June 15, 1780.

Daniel McDole, June 15, 1780.

John Morhart, June 15, 1780.

John Kouts, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.

Rudolph Smith, June 17, 1780.

Abraham Clider, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.

Daniel Smith, June 17, 1780.

George Gongawar, June 17, 1780.

John Myer, June 15, 1780.

Peter Apler, June 15, 1780.

John Weaver, June 17, 1780; killed 11th September.

Daniel France, July 7, 1780.

Lawrence Miller, July 8, 1780.

George Pigg, June 15, 1780.

John Robenholt, June 15, 1780.

Leonard Pack, June 15, 1780.

John Sack, June 15, 1780.

Job Storet, June 15, 1780.

George Ripsher, June 15, 1780.

Peter Snyder, June 15, 1780.

Peter Lasher, June 15, 1780.

Jacob Cryder, June 15, 1780.

Conrad Koaler, June 15, 1780.

John Nap Snyder, June 15, 1780.

Adam Teel, June 15, 1780.

Voluntine Nicolas, June 15, 1780.

George Hickman, June 15, 1780.

John Smith, June 15, 1780.

John Wetherstone, June 15, 1780.
 Christian Haller, July 4, 1780.
 Jacob Houser, July 30, 1780.
 Peter Siner, July 30, 1780.
 Peter Tubalt Coans, June 15, 1780; taken prisoner
 11 September.
 Philip Geo. Shilhamer, Aug. 7, 1780.
 Baltzer Snyder, July 5, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Philip Bitten, Aug. 3, 1780; deserted 10th November.
 George Peter Rinhart, June 28, 1780; killed 11th
 September.
 Andrew Myer, June 15, 1780.
 Joseph Gable, July 3, 1780; advanced to Serg't,
 Aug. 30th.
 Peter Croom, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Johannes Snyder, June 20, 1780.
 Andrew Mourer, June 15, 1780.
 Adam Lung, June 15, 1780.
 George Shilhamer, Aug. 17, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Paul Neely, July 18, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Abraham Smith, July 24, 1780; killed 11th September.
 John Lyn, June 15, 1780; sick, absent.
 Jacob Arndt, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Samuel Summeny, July 25, 1780.
 Jacob Collens, June 15, 1780.
 Henry Davis, June 15, 1780.
 Philip George, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Peter McCoy, July 24, 1780.
 John Haun, July 25, 1780.
 Abraham Wisner, June 15, 1780.
 Uriah Tippy, June 15, 1780.
 Paul Reeser, June 15, 1780.
 Ballser Wever, June 15, 1780.
 George Heater, June 15, 1780.
 John Smith, Jun'r, June 15, 1780.
 Christian Wood, June 15, 1780.
 John Morgan, June 15, 1780.
 Henry France, June 15, 1780.
 Bond Hewes, June 15, 1780.
 John Hain, June 15, 1780.
 Michael Yerty, June 15, 1780.
 Adam Brunthaver, June 15, 1780.
 Antony Bishop, June 15, 1780.
 John Snider, June 15, 1780.
 Peter Daniel, June 15, 1780.
 Peter Simonton, June 15, 1780.
 John Dayly, June 15, 1780.
 Henry Vaugarden, June 15, 1780.
 Abraham Westfall, June 15, 1780.
 Cornelius Devoor, June 15, 1780.
 Casper Clutter, June 15, 1780.
 Peter Quick, June 15, 1780.
 Thomas Van Sikkle, June 15, 1780.
 Samuel Vaugarden, June 15, 1780.
 Solomon Huff, June 15, 1780.
 Thomas Hewe, June 30, 1780.
 James McGraw, July 24, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Jacob Row, June 15, 1780; killed 11th September.
 Abraham Clider (Klader) marked incorrectly as killed, escaped.

The following article on the Sugar Loaf Massacre, from the pen of the late John C. Stokes, appeared some 40 years ago in the Hazleton Sentinel, of which Mr. Stokes was the founder and at that time the editor.

"Local tradition furnishes us with many interesting incidents and reminiscences of early times in Sugar Loaf Valley, that are worthy of preservation, being illustrative of the hardships encountered and privations endured by the pioneers of that beautiful and fertile valley; and there are old persons still living there who have seen and conversed with some of the 'seven months men' who escaped the massacre of 1780, near the spot where Conyngham now stands.
 A brief synopsis of a few of the accounts that have come down to us from a past generation may not, though given disconnectedly be devoid of interest.

"Many of our readers are familiar with the short accounts of the Sugar Loaf Massacre in Mr. Miner's History and Mr. Pearce's Annals.
 Brief as these accounts are, however, they differ very materially from the true version of the affair, if we may credit the concurrent testimony of a score of aged men and women now living, who have heard the facts in the case narrated by men who belonged to the party that the Indians attacked, and by those who were afterwards sent to inter the dead bodies of the victims.
 Mr. Miner's account was from the lips of Abigail Dodson, who was taken prisoner with the Gilbert family, from Mahoning, below Mauch
 Chunk and conducted over the great 'war path' or Indian trail that crossed the Quakake, and passed over the mountain near the present sites of Tresckow and Ashburton, entering the valley by the little ravine that extends from the toll gate toward the Little Nescopeck. The Gilbert family were captured in April, 1780, the year after Sullivan's expedition; and as the Sugar Loaf tragedy was enacted in the autumn of the same year, while Abigail was still in the hands of the savages, she received her account from the prisoners brought to Canada, who, no doubt, supposed that the entire party were killed or captured as since stated in the published account; but there is undoubted evidence that such was not the case. A great uncle of the Engle brothers who now live in Hazleton and the valley, escaped over the Nescopeck mountain, and across the Susquehanna to Fort Jenkins, losing one shoe in his flight, and Abraham Klader, a brother of the officer in command, concealed himself in the Little Nescopeck creek, clinging to a tree that had fallen across the stream, and keeping only his face above the water until the enemy disappeared, when he emerged from his concealment and succeeded in reaching his home. Frederick Shickler also escaped on the Buck mountain, avoiding the Indian trail and finally reaching the white settlement in the Lehigh Valley in safety.

"We have conversed with an old gentleman, now eighty-four years of age, who fifty or sixty years ago heard Shickler, then an old man, relate his adventures. After reaching the top of Buck mountain he left the path to his right and managed to keep out of sight of the Indians, whose yells he could distinctly hear as they followed the path in pursuit of him. A few others are known to have escaped, but nothing reliable can now be gathered respecting their names or the particulars of their escape.

"Both Miner and Pearce say that the company was commanded by Capt. Myers, while Chapman, page 133, says that Wm. Moyer was in command; but the oldest living descendants of the early settlers, with a number of whom we have conversed, agree in asserting that the company was under the command of Capt. Klader, who, after performing deeds of prodigy and valor that caused his name afterwards to inspire feelings akin to veneration, was finally killed and scalped and subsequently buried, as were also others of the party on what is now the farm of Samuel Wagner, about a half mile from Conyngham. We visited Wagner's farm a few days since, in company with Mr. S. D. Engle, of this borough, and were conducted by Anthony Fisher, a man whose locks are whitened by the frosts of ninety winters, to the spot where the brave Klader rests, but no trace of the grave is now to be seen. The oak tree under whose branches he lay, and upon which were the initials of his name, D. K., was sacrilegiously cut down fifteen years ago, and even the stump is decayed and gone. Mr. Fisher, many years ago, was intimately acquainted with John Wertz, who had belonged to the party that buried the slain and marked their leader's grave by cutting the initials spoken of above. As the old man leaned upon his staff and surveyed the spot, he gave expression to feelings of deep regret that the tree was not permitted to stand as a memorial of the heroic deeds of those by-gone days. Well might they have exclaimed, who revered the name of the hero of Sugar Loaf Valley,

"Woodman spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!"

"Klader sold his life as dearly as possible. Four Indians, or, according to some accounts, seven, were dispatched by his own hands before he finally succumbed to numbers. The Indians in retaliation, inflicted upon him every torture that savage cruelty could devise. The details of their barbarities are too shocking to relate. We were shown, by Mr. Fisher, a flint lock and a gun barrel, both much eaten by rust, that were pLOWED up on Klader's grave a few years ago. These relics are in the possession of Mr. Samuel Wagner."

Lieutenant Colonel Balliet, who was one of the officers accompanying the force who volunteered to march to the scene of the massacre and bury the dead, wrote the following letter to President Reed:

"Northampton County, Sept. 20, 1780.

"Sir: I take the earliest opportunity to acquaint your excellency of the distressed and dangerous situation of our frontier inhabitants, and the misfortune happened to our volunteers stationed at the Gnaden Hutts, they having received intelligence that a number of disaffected persons lived near the Susquehanna at a place called the Scotch Valley, who have been suspected to hold up correspondence with the Indians and the Tories in the country. They set out on the 8th inst., for that place to see whether they might be able to find out anything of that nature, but were attacked on the 10th at noon about eight miles from that settlement by a large body of Indians and Tories (as one had red hair) supposed by some forty and by some twice that number, they totally dispersed our people, twenty-two of forty-one have since come in several of whom are wounded. It is also reported that Lieut. John Moyer had been made a prisoner and made his escape from them again and returned at Wyoming.

"On the first notice of the unfortunate event the officers of the militia have exerted themselves to get volunteers out of their respective divisions to go up and bury the dead. Their labor proved not in vain. We collected about 150 officers and men from the Colonels Kern, Giger and my own battalions, who would undergo the fatigue and danger to go there and pay that respect to their slaughtered brethern, due to men who fell in support of the freedom of their country. On the 15th we took up our line of march (want of ammunition prevented us from going sooner). On the 17th we arrived at the place of action, where we found ten of the soldiers dead, scalped, stripped naked and in a most cruel and barbarous manner—tomahawked, their throats cut, etc., etc., whom we buried and returned without even seeing any of their black allies and bloody executors of British tyranny. I can't conclude without observing that the Cols. Kern, of the third battalion, and Giger, of the sixth, who is upwards of sixty years of age, together with all the other officers and men, have encountered their high and many hills and mountains with the greatest satisfaction and discipline imaginable, and their countenances appeared to be eager to engage with their tyrannical enemies who are employed by the British Court and equipped at their expense, as appeared by a new fuse and several gun barrels, etc., bent and broke in pieces with the British stamp thereon, found by our men. We also have great reason to believe that several of the Indians have been killed by our men, in particular one by Col. Kern and another by Capt. Moyer, both of whom went volunteers with this party. We viewed where they said they fired at them and found the grass and weeds remarkably beaten down, though they had carried them off. So I conclude with remaining your Excellency's most humble servant,

"STEPHEN BALLIET,
"Lt. Col. 1st B, N. C. M."

The following extract is from a letter written by Col. Samuel Rea to President Reed, and bears date, Mount Bethel, Oct. 24, 1780:

"Col. Balliet informs me that he had given council in relation of killed and wounded he had found and buried near Nescopeck. As he was at the place of action his account must be as near truth as any I could procure, though since that Lieut. Myers, who was taken prisoner by the enemy in that unhappy action, has made his escape from the savages and reports that Ensign Scoby and one private was taken with him and that they had thirteen scalps along with them, that several of them were wounded and supposes some killed."

MUSTER ROLL OF CAPTAIN ADAM DEAL'S COMPANY OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY, SERVING IN THE 8TH CLASS, ON THE FRONTIERS, COMMANDED BY LIEUTENANT COLONEL STEPHEN BALLIET, ESQ. THE 9TH OF JULY, 1781.

Captain.	Entered.	Dismissed.
Adam Deal,	July 9
Lieutenant.
Jacob Kemerer,	July 9	Sept. 10
Sergeants.
Joseph Gabell,	July 11
Christopher Rex,	July 10	Sept. 10
Peter Rucher,	July 17

Corporals.
Charles Volk,	July 14
Conrath Roerich,	July 9	Sept. 11
Nathan Beach,	July 20
Drummer.
Garrett Rittenhaus,	July 11	Dismissed.
Fifer.
Michael Gortner,	July 11
Privates.
Henry Hunsicker,	July 9	Sept. 11
Peter Heilman,	July 9	Sept. 11
John Braucher,	July 21	Sept. 16
Jacob Brandsteter,	July 10	Sept. 11
Jacob Bachman,	July 17	Sept. 11
Leonard Willeman,	July 9	Sept. 11
John Rumbell,	July 9	Sept. 11
Jacob Bähr,	July 22	Sept. 11
Jacob Schumacker,	July 17	Sept. 11
John Hermany,	July 10	Sept. 11
Dewald Hauch,	July 11	Sept. 11
Daniel Neyer,	July 10	Sept. 11
Martin Bähr,	July 10	Sept. 11
John Fink,	July 10	Sept. 11
John George Shellhamer,	July 9	Sept. 11
George Simon Wehr,	July 9	Sept. 11
John Legliter,	July 9	Sept. 11
Leonhardt Zimmerman,	July 9	Sept. 11
Henry Hausser,	July 9	Sept. 11
Cornelius Glingeman,	July 9	Sept. 11
John Kissner,	July 9	Sept. 11
Michael Keck,	July 9	Sept. 11

Substitutes.		Entered.	Dismissed.
Jacob Mans,	Joseph Gabell, Sergt.,	July 11	Sept. 11
Adam Schmidt,	Charles Volk, Corp.,	July 14	Sept. 11
Philip Hamell,	Peter Stein,	July 30	Sept. 11
John Schmidt,	Christop Bucher,	July 15	Sept. 11
Frideric Handwerk,	Thomas Jansen,	July 27	Sept. 11
Jacob Handwerk,	Garrett Rittenhouse,
	Drummer,	July 17	Sept. 11
Heinrich Class,	Michael Gortner, Fifer,	July 19	Sept. 11
George Rubert,	Heinrich Gcorg,	July 17	Sept. 11
Burkhard Moser,	William Gabell,	July 17	Sept. 11
George Reichert,	Jost Wirt,	July 22	Sept. 11
Christian Schmidt,	Nathan Beach, Corp.,	July 20	Sept. 11
Andreas Miller,	Solomon Leheson,	July 26	Sept. 11
Martin Moser,	Henry Simers,	July 9	Sept. 11
Ulrich Neff,	Williams Simers,	July 9	Sept. 11
Philip Bauer,	Andreas Heger,	July 9	Sept. 11
Henry Bever,	John Edmonds,	July 9	Sept. 11
Leonard Wasum,	Peter Rucher, Sergt.,	July 17	Sept. 11
Daniel Schnyder,	Friderich Schober,	July 17	Sept. 11
Jacob Bohler,	George Schick,	July 22	Sept. 11
Frideric Breiner,	George Miller,	July 15	Sept. 11
Jacob Correll,	Bernhardt Hauser,	July 10	Sept. 11
Christian Schuman,	George Hant,	July 10	Sept. 10
Christoph Sunday,	Daniel Knaus,	July 15	Sept. 10
Philip Fuselman,	Michael Dress,	July 17	Sept. 10
Philip Probst,	Jacob Dengler,	July 17	Sept. 10
Heinrich Notstein,	William Wahll,	July 21	Sept. 11
Mustered the 10th Sept. 1781 pr. order of Col.
Robert Levers, pr. me.			JOHN CHAMBERS.

A MUSTER ROLL OF CAPTAIN ADAM SERFASS' COMPANY, CONSISTING OF THE FIRST CLASS OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY MILITIA. NOW IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES, COMMANDED BY LIEUT. COL. CHRISTIAN SHOUSE, IN THE YEAR 1781.

Names and Rank.	Time of entering in the service.	When discharged.	Days in service.	Names and Rank.	Time of entering in the service.	When discharged.	Days in service.
Lieut. Col.				Henry Mertz,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Christian Shouse,	Sept. 10, 1781	Nov. 10,	60	Daniel Rish,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Major.				Peter Smith,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Peter Trexler,	Sept. 10, 1781	Nov. 10	60	Michael Harbach,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Adjutant.				Nicholas Litzenbach,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Isaac Berlin,	Sept. 10, 1781	Nov. 10	60	Francis Warmkessel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Captain.				Henry Kek,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Adam Serfass,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 10	60	Christian Miller,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Lieutenant.				Nicholas Miller,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Jacob Delb,	Oct. 4, 1781	Nov. 4	30	John Butz,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Ensign.				Jonathan Trexler,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Daniel Rex,	Nov. 8, 1781	Nov. 22	14	Matthias Rissel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Sergeants.				Melchoir Rissel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
John Derr,	Oct. 28, 1781	Nov. 22	25	George Walbert,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
George Vogt,	Oct. 15, 1781	Nov. 22	38	Nicholas Meyer,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Corporal.				Dewald Kuntz,	Oct. 12, 1781	Nov. 22	41
Ditrich Hartman,	Oct. 17, 1781	Nov. 22	36	Dietrich Dorner,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Drummer.				Henry Durny,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Nicholas Lambert,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Matthias Kern,	Oct. 5, 1781	Nov. 22	47
Fifer.				John Fink,	Oct. 5, 1781	Nov. 22	47
William Laury,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Isaac Sherret,	Oct. 12, 1781	Nov. 22	40
Privates.				Michael Yiesly,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Jacob Schreiber,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	John Klein,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Christian Barge,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Henry Knappenberger,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Andrew Hek,	Oct. 20, 1781	Nov. 22	33	George Hoffman,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Peter Neihard,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	John Meyer,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Peter Burkhalter,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Bernhard Smith,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
George Flickinger,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Daniel Neyhardt,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Jacob Steckel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Leonard Steining,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Henry Steckel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Jacob Yundt,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Godfried Weasner,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Jacob Hartman,	Oct. 18, 1781	Nov. 22	34
Adam Garny,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Casper Reaser,	Nov. 2, 1781	Nov. 22	20
John Weaver,	Oct. 28, 1781	Nov. 22	25	Frederick Rise,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Stoffel Kern,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
George Nease,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Mustered this 10th day of November, 1781, per order of Col. Robert Levers, per me.
John Ohlenwine,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	JOHN CHAMBERS.
John Bildhouse,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Allentown and the townships of old Northampton county west of the Lehigh river furnished a number of men prominent in civil and military life during the Revolution.
Henry Heiser,	Oct. 15, 1781	Nov. 15	30	Biographical sketches of these patriots follow:
Peter Braun,	Nov. 5, 1781	Nov. 22	18	PETER RHOADS.
Michael Ringer,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60	Among the patriots of Allentown and vicinity, the man who attained the highest civil positions in the Revolutionary period, was Peter Rhoads. Born in Whitehall township in April, 1737, 2 miles north of the present city of Allentown, the son of Daniel Roth, a native of Switzerland, who died in the same hour in which his son was born, he was educated among the Quakers, by whom he was persuaded to change the spelling of his name to Rhoads. He received a good English education, and was equally as well read in German, besides acquiring a knowledge of French, Latin, surveying, book-keeping and those
Philip Mink,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Simon Snyder,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
John Rhinehart,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Henry Hertz,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
John Rishel,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Casper Hapler,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
George Zimmerman,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Casper Shoenebruch,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
David Musgenung,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60
Adam Swander,	Sept. 22, 1781	Nov. 22	60

duties pertaining to the scrivener of that day. He also learned the trade of a tailor, as it was customary among the Quakers to teach the young men useful occupations.

In 1761 he returned to his native township, Whitehall, and the following year, on November 23, 1762, was married to Sabina Kohler, daughter of Jacob Kohler, of Egypt. In that year he began to build a stone dwelling house on North Seventh street in Allentown, which still stands, the oldest house in the city. Upon the organization of the Reformed congregation in the new town in the same year, he was chosen one of the deacons. Already in 1768 he conducted a general store, which he maintained until his death. In 1772 he was tax-collector of Salisbury township, and in 1773 was treasurer of Zion Reformed congregation.

He became a member of the county Committee of Observation on October 2, 1775, and on July 8, 1776, with Peter Burkhalter, was elected a member of the first constitutional convention, which met at the state house in Philadelphia on the 15th of July, 1776, and was in session until September 28th following. On July 23, 1776, the convention elected the members of the council of safety, consisting of fifteen members from Philadelphia county, and one from each of the other counties. Mr. Rhoads was elected the member from Northampton county. The council of safety in session from July 24, 1776 to March 17, 1777, was the most important body in the state at that time, and carried on the executive duties of the government until the Supreme Executive Council, chosen under the constitution at the election in February organized in March, 1777.

On May 2nd, 1777, Mr. Rhoads was appointed by the Board of War one of the commissioners from Northampton county, to collect blankets for the continental troops. November 24, 1776, he was appointed treasurer for the advance money, for Northampton county.

In October, 1777, he was elected a member of the assembly, which met at Lancaster on October 27th, but did not obtain a quorum until November 20, 1777, and was re-elected in 1778, 1779 and 1780. On April 2, 1781, he voted in favor of the bill which was passed abolishing slavery in Pennsylvania. He was appointed justice of the peace, December 4, 1783.

On October 8, 1784, he was appointed and commissioned by the Supreme Executive Council, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and of General Quarter Sessions for Northampton county. On October 22nd, 1787, he was chairman of the meeting at Bethlehem approving the Federal Constitution, and condemning the acts of the members of the Pennsylvania Assembly who had withdrawn from that body. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1789-'90, and under that constitution commissioned an Associate Judge, August 17, 1791. This position he held continuously in Northampton county, until the erection of Lehigh county in 1812, when he was appointed Senior Associate Judge in that county, which position he filled until his death, making a total service on the bench of thirty years.

In 1792 an attempt was made by the Allen family to establish a separate county with Allentown as the county seat, and Judge Rhoads, who was the agent of the Allen family at Allentown, took a leading part in the movement, but the effort was unsuccessful.

About 1798, the Lehigh Navigation Company was formed for the purpose of improving the Lehigh river, and Judge Rhoads became its President. After expending a large sum of money, the company abandoned the project. In 1811, Allentown was incorporated into a borough, and Judge Rhoads was elected the first Burgess and re-elected in 1812. He was a man of fine physical proportions and possessed great energy and activity. Dr. Egle in a sketch of him, says: "Judge Rhoads was a gentleman of firm convictions, upright and conscientious and wielded a great influence in the town and county."

In a letter written September 22, 1814, to Judge Rhoads by the eminent lawyer, Samuel Sitgreaves, of Easton, the writer in discussing the depression of the Federalist party, says: "I have become indolent and inert, and must leave the Turmoil of Elections to younger men who love Bustle and whose Zeal is not rendered torpid by Infirmary of Body. I rejoice, my dear Sir, that you, to whose more advanced age these Observations might still more reasonably apply, appear to preserve the Zeal of a youthful Spirit beneath the Frost of Years; and I wish it were more generally the Case with our veteran Patriots—Altho' I fell the weight of Apathy heavy on my own Mind, I much honor the perennial Vigor of others—and hope you may long live to infuse your Ardour into the refractory Spirits about you."

Judge Rhoads died at his residence in Allentown on Sunday evening, December 18, 1814, at nine o'clock, at the age of 77 years and 8 months. He was buried the following Wednesday, in the cemetery at Tenth and Linden streets.

DAVID DESHLER.

David Deshler, the son of Adam Deshler, was born in Switzerland, in 1734. His father was one of the early settlers of Whitehall township, where he became quite prominent. David, his eldest son, who was naturalized April 10, 1761, purchased the mill property on the Little Lehigh from Michael Rothrock in 1762 and was one of the first settlers of Allentown. In 1762 he was taxed £9, and in 1768 for a grist mill and a saw mill and fifty acres of land in Salisbury township.

He became a member of the county Committee of Observation on Dec. 21, 1774 and was a delegate from Northampton county to the Provincial Conference of Committees, which met in Carpenters' Hall, Philadelphia, on June 18, 1776. He was chosen by this conference as one of the judges of election for members of the convention, on July 8, 1776, at Allentown, where the second election district, consisting of Northampton, Salsburg, Upper Saucon, Upper Milford, Macungie, Weisenberg, Lynn, Whitehall and Heidelberg held its election.

On March 12, 1777, he was elected by the Assembly one of the four Sub-Lieutenants of Northampton county.

In his account, filed September 4, 1779, he reports having received £4,818 17s 9d, from sundry persons for non-performance of militia duty. He was appointed one of the Commissioners of Purchases for Northampton county on February 19, 1778; Assistant Forage Master on April 5, 1780, and on July 7, 1780, Assistant Commissary of Purchases. He was a delegate to the convention called to ratify the Federal Constitution in 1787.

Mr. Deshler was a man of great ability and much force of character. In 1782, he purchased from John Benezet of Philadelphia, the house built by George Taylor, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, with the land belonging to the plantation along the Lehigh, near Catsauqua, which Mr. Taylor had sold to Mr. Benezet in 1776. Here he spent the latter part of his life. When slavery was abolished in the state, Mr. Deshler owned two negroes. He was one of the wealthiest men of his time in the county and in his will bequeathed each of his six daughters £500, his son David £1,000, and his tanyard and bark-mill to his son George, having already given his portion to his son John Adam.

He died in December, 1796, at the age of 62 years, at Biery's Bridge, now Catsauqua.

PETER BURKHALTER.

Peter Burkhalter, the son of Ulrich Burkhalter, was born December 2, 1731, and accompanied his parents to America from Switzerland, arriving at Philadelphia on September 28, 1733. The family settled in Whitehall township, where the father purchased a tract of 300 acres in 1743, which he conveyed by deed of gift to his only son, Peter, on March 9, 1754. Peter Burkhalter was naturalized on April 10, 1761. He married Eve Catherine Deshler, a daughter of Adam Deshler.

On July 8, 1776, Mr. Burkhalter was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention, which met on July 15, 1776, and in November of that year was elected a member of the first Assembly under that constitution, which organized on November 28, 1776. He was re-elected in 1777, and again elected in 1784, 1785, 1786 and 1787. On March 30, 1780, he was appointed one of the Sub-Lieutenants of Northampton county. His name also appears as captain of a company of associators on May 22, 1775.

He died October 22, 1805, and is buried at Egypt church.

PETER KOHLER.

Peter Kohler, the son of Jacob Kohler, a pioneer settler of Whitehall township, was born April 2, 1735, at Egypt. The first mention of him in active life is in 1764, when he opened a store at Egypt. He operated a grist mill built by his father and also kept a house of entertainment for travelers.

He became a member of the county Committee of Observation on May 30, 1776; was appointed one of the commissioners to collect clothing for the troops on November 8, 1777, and on December 16, 1777, was appointed by the Pennsylvania Assembly one of the persons to take subscriptions for the Continental loan in Northampton county. He was commissioned one of the Justices for Northampton county on May 28, 1779, and was elected to the Assembly in 1780, 1781 and 1782. He died September 27, 1793, and is buried at Egypt.

STEPHEN BALLIET.

Stephen Balliet, the son of Paul Balliet, was born in 1753. He married Magdalena Burkhalter, a daughter of Peter Burkhalter.

He was commissioned a Lieutenant Colonel in December, 1776, and commanded his battalion at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. He also saw service on the frontiers and was one of the officers in command on the march to Nescopeck. He was appointed agent for Forfeited Estates on May 6, 1778 and on Oct. 20, 1783, was elected a member of the Supreme Executive Council. He was appointed a member of the Board of Property on June 7, 1784, and was elected to the Assembly in 1788 and 1789.

In 1797 he was appointed Revenue Collector for the Second District of Pennsylvania. He died August 4, 1821, and is buried in the old graveyard at Unionville.

PETER TREXLER, SR.

Peter Trexler, Sr., the son of Peter Trexler, the first settler in Macungie township, was born Feb. 11, 1721. He was elected one of the first county commissioners of Northampton county in 1752 and in 1753 was commissioned a justice of Northampton county under the King, which office he filled many years. In the French and Indian war he was captain of a company called into service by Benjamin Franklin to garrison the forts on the frontier and to protect the settlers from Indian attacks.

In 1755 he was one of the six trustees of the school erected in Easton by a society composed of many of the English nobility whose purpose was to promote the instruction of Germans in the English language. He was appointed a justice of the peace under the new government on June 3, 1777, and on Nov. 8, 1777, was appointed one of the commissioners to collect clothing for the soldiers. He died August 25, 1798, and is buried in a private cemetery near Breinigsville.

GEORGE BREINIG.

George Breinig was a native of Germany, where he was born January 31, 1733. He emigrated to America in 1749 and settled in Macungie township.

He was one of the judges of election at Allentown, on July 8, 1776, and became colonel of the second battalion of Northampton county Militia, consisting of eight companies, his name appearing in muster rolls dated May 21, 1777, and May 14, 1778. In 1786, he was commissioned a justice of the district of Macungie and Weisenberg townships.

He died May 12, 1812, and is buried at Lehigh Church.

PETER TREXLER, JR.

Peter Trexler, Jr., son of Peter Trexler, one of the first commissioners of Northampton county, and a colonial justice, and grandson of Peter Trexler, the pioneer settler of Macungie township, was born August 15, 1748. On May 21, 1777, he was captain of the fifth company of Col. Breinig's Second Battalion of Militia; on November 1, 1781, Major of the First Battalion, under Lieut. Col. Balliet; and on May 6, 1783, was chosen lieutenant colonel in the militia battalion district of Whitehall, Macungie and Upper Milford townships. The several persons chosen lieutenant colonels met at the house of Joseph Hartzell, esq., on May 14, 1783, and cast lots for rank of the battalions, and the third battalion fell to the lot of Lieut. Col. Trexler. He was elected a member of the assembly in 1785, 1786, 1787, and 1788. He died March 13, 1828, and is buried at Mertztown.

GEORGE GRAFF.

George Graff, born at Killendorf, Alsace, October 11, 1747, emigrated to America with his father, Jacob Graff, in 1754. The family settled in Whitehall township, where the subject of this sketch had a narrow escape from death by Indians on October 8, 1763. George Graff married Barbara, daughter of Jacob Kohler, and in 1772 entered into partnership with his brother-in-law Peter Kohler, at Egypt. In 1773 Mr. Graff removed to Allentown and opened a store at Eighth and Hamilton streets.

In June, 1776, he became Captain of the third company of the first battalion of the Flying Camp, which was commanded on June 18, 1777, by Col. George Huebner. He was a commissioner for purchasing clothing in Northampton county in 1778; was elected collector of the excise on November 27, 1778, serving as such until January 9, 1786; was sheriff of the county from 1787 to 1790; and a member of the Assembly from 1793 to 1796. In 1814 he was burgess of Allentown.

Mr. Graff died February 2, 1835, aged 87 years, and is buried in the old Allentown Cemetery.

HENRY HAGENBUCH.

Henry Hagenbuch, who was Captain of a company of the second battalion of the Flying Camp, on August 6, 1776, was born in 1738. He kept a hotel at Eighth and Hamilton streets, Allentown, for many years, and died here April 20, 1805. He is buried in the old Allentown Cemetery.

CHARLES DESHLER.

Charles Deshler, born September 10, 1754, was quarter-master of the fourth battalion of Northampton County Militia, under the command of Lieut. Col. Boehm. He was a storekeeper here for many years and a prominent citizen. He was appointed storekeeper at Easton of the military stores on March 11, 1778. He married Catharine, daughter of David Deshler, and lived on South Center Square. He died February 4, 1841, and is buried in Union Cemetery.

HENRY GEIGER.

Henry Geiger, a resident of Heidelberg township, was born about 1720. He was commissioned an ensign in the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, on December 20, 1755 and saw considerable service in the French and Indian War. He became a lieutenant in 1757 and was in command of soldiers at various blockhouses and at Fort Allen. In October, 1776, he was commissioned a Colonel of the second battalion of Northampton County Militia. He was also commissioned a colonial justice in 1764. He was for many years a prominent figure in Heidelberg township.

JOHN WETZEL.

John Wetzel, a resident of Macungie township, was a prominent figure in the early Revolutionary period. In 1774 he became a King's Justice and in 1775 was a delegate to the Provincial Conference of June 18th. He was elected to the first assembly on Nov. 5, 1776, and on May 16, 1777, was appointed lieutenant of the county, in which office, by reason of his arbitrary actions, he became extremely obnoxious to the Moravians and other non-resistant sects as well as to officers of the militia.

FREDERICK LIMBACH.

Frederick Limbach, a resident of Upper Milford township, was appointed a justice of the peace in 1777, and a judge of the courts in 1784. On March 30, 1780, he was appointed a sub-lieutenant of the county and in 1783 was elected to the assembly. He removed from the county in 1787.

THOMAS MEWHORTER.

Thomas Mewhorter, a native of Scotland, became a resident of Allentown about 1776. He served in the Revolution and was elected to the assembly for four terms, serving from 1784 to 1788. He built the stone house at the southeast corner of Lehigh and Lawrence streets, where he had a tanyard. He died in Allentown in 1807.

PHILIP BOEHM.

Philip Boehm, a grandson of Rev. John Philip Boehm, the pioneer Reformed clergyman, was born December 14, 1747. He married Barbara Deshler, sister of David Deshler, and for some years was a storekeeper in Allentown. In June, 1777, he was appointed Quartermaster and Aug. 27, 1777, Paymaster of Militia. On Oct. 19, 1778, he was elected coroner of the county. He became major of Northampton County Militia and in 1780 Lieutenant Colonel. He died January 10, 1816.

JOHN JENNINGS.

John Jennings, son of Solomon Jennings, one of the participators in the Indian Walk of 1737, was the owner of the fine farm along the Lehigh, later owned by Jacob Geisinger. He was a Quarter-master in the Revolution and was Sheriff of the county several terms, and died while holding that office in 1778. He proved himself an energetic officer in the Wyoming troubles.

OFFICERS OF THE STATE IN THE REVOLUTION, FROM THAT PART OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY NOW LEHIGH COUNTY.

Committee of the Provincial Conference, held at Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, June 18, 1775.

David Deshler.
John Wetzel.

Delegates to the Constitutional Convention,
July 15, 1776.
Peter Rhoads.
Peter Burkhalter.

Member of the Council of Safety, July 24, 1776.
Peter Rhoads.

Member of the Supreme Executive Council.
Stephen Balliet.
Oct. 20, 1783.

Members of Assembly.
Elected Nov. 5, 1776.
John Wetzel.
Peter Burkhalter.

Elected Oct. 14, 1777.

Peter Burkhalter.
Peter Rhoads.

Elected Oct. 13, 1778.

Peter Rhoads.

Elected Oct. 12, 1779.

Peter Rhoads.

Elected Oct. 10, 1780.

Peter Kohler.

Peter Rhoads.

Elected Oct. 9, 1781.

Peter Kohler.

Elected Oct. 8, 1782.

Peter Kohler.

Elected Oct. 14, 1783.

Frederick Limbach.

Elected Oct. 12, 1784.

Thomas Mewhorter.

Elected Oct. 11, 1785.

Thomas Mewhorter.

Peter Trexler, Jr.

Peter Burkhalter.

Elected Oct. 10, 1786.

Peter Trexler, Jr.

Thomas Mewhorter.

Peter Burkhalter.

Elected Oct. 9, 1787.

Peter Trexler, Jr.

Thomas Mewhorter.

Peter Burkhalter.

Elected Oct. 14, 1788.

Peter Trexler, Jr.

Stephen Balliet.

Elected Oct. 13, 1789.

Stephen Balliet.

Commissary of Purchases.

David Deshler.

Feb. 19, 1778.

Assistant Forage Master.

David Deshler.

April 5, 1780.

Persons to take subscriptions for the Continental Loan. (Appointed by the Assembly, Dec. 16, 1777.)

Peter Kohler.

Commissioners to seize the Personal Effects of Traitors. (Appointed Oct. 21, 1777.)

Paul Balliet.

Treasurer of the Advance Money for the Militia.

Peter Rhoads.

Nov. 24, 1776.

Commissioners to collect clothing.

Peter Trexler, Sen., Nov. 8, 1777.

Peter Kohler, Nov. 8, 1777.

George Graff, Mar. 18, 1778.

OFFICERS OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY, 1776 TO 1790, FROM THAT PORTION NOW LEHIGH COUNTY.

President Judge.

Peter Rhoads.

Judges.

Frederick Limbach.

Peter Kohler.

Matthias Brobst.

Jacob Horner.

George Breinig.

Ludwig Stahler.

Jacob Morey.

Sheriffs.

John Jennings, Nov. 5, 1777.

George Graff, Oct. 16, 1787.

Coroners.

Peter Rhoads, Nov. 5, 1776.

Philip Boehm, Oct. 19, 1778.

George Knauss, Nov. 5, 1784.

George Schreiber, Oct. 16, 1787.

Collector of Excise.

George Graff, Nov. 27, 1778.

Justices of the Peace.

Peter Trexler, Sen., June 3, 1777.

David Deshler, June 3, 1777.

Frederick Limbach, June 3, 1777.

Matthias Brobst, June 3, 1777.

Jacob Horner, June 3, 1777.

Daniel Snyder, June 3, 1777.

Jacob Morey, June 3, 1777.

Peter Kohler, Nov. 2, 1780.

Peter Rhoads, Dec. 4, 1783.

George Breinig, Jan. 26, 1786.

Ludwig Stahler, Nov. 8, 1788.

Dedimus Potestatem.

Peter Trexler, June 4, 1777.

County Lieutenant.

John Wetzel, May 16, 1777.

Sub-Lieutenants.

David Deshler, Mar. 12, 1777.

Peter Burkhalter, Mar. 30, 1780.

Frederick Limbach, Mar. 30, 1780.

Assistant Commissary of Purchases.

David Deshler, July 7, 1780.

Paymaster of Militia.

Philip Boehm, Aug. 27, 1777.

Storekeeper at Easton.

Chas. Deshler, Mar. 11, 1778.

Agent for Forfeited Estates.

Stephen Balliet, May 6, 1778.

Pennsylvania Archives—Colonial Records—Forces American Archives—Egle's History of Pennsylvania—Richard's The Pennsylvania German in the Revolutionary War—Levering's History of Bethlehem—Jordan's Bethlehem during the Revolution—Moravian Diary—Lossing's Field Book of the Revolution—Stryker's Battle of Trenton—Davis' Washington on the West Bank of the Delaware—Journals of the Assembly—Historical Society of Pennsylvania Manuscript Collections—Revolutionary Patriots of Allentown and Vicinity—Diary of Jacob Hiltzheimer—James Allen's Diary—Watson's Annals—Wyoming Valley Historical Record—Ellis' History of Northampton county—Allentown Friedensbote.

CHAPTER IX.

"THE FRIES REBELLION."*

1798-99.

"Fries Rebellion" took place in contiguous parts of Bucks and Northampton counties, in the Fall and Winter of 1798-99, and is so called from the name of the leader, John Fries, who was mainly instrumental in creating this opposition to the Federal authority. In each case the disturbance was caused in whole, or in part, by what the people considered an unjust and unlawful tax, and they resisted putting it in force. In the two latter cases the assessments to be made were of an unusual character, though not heavy in amount, and the opposition to it was caused, no doubt, by want of correct information, and not a settled design to interfere with the execution of the law. The history of the Fries Rebellion proves, quite conclusively, the outbreak was of this character, and, if proper means had been taken by the authorities to explain the law and its necessity, to the disaffected, the extreme measures taken by the general government need not have been resorted to. It was fortunate, however, the trouble was brought to a close without the loss of life or bloodshed, and the bitterness engendered was not permanent.

During the administration of John Adams, the frequent depredations of the French upon our commerce, and their disregard of our rights on the high seas, as a neutral power to the sanguinary conflict then devastating Europe, induced the belief that war with France was unavoidable. Congress, accordingly, made preparation for such emergency should it arise. The military and naval forces of the country were increased, and General Washington, then living in retirement at Mount Vernon, was appointed to the command of the armies about to be called into the field. In view of the impending danger to the country, Congress took such other measures as the President thought requisite, some of which clothed him with almost despotic power. The act, known as the "Alien and Sedition Laws," gave him authority to send obnoxious persons out of the country, at pleasure, and to place others in arrest accused of speaking, or writing, in disrespectful terms of the government. In connection with these measures Congress made provision to carry on the war, now thought to be near at hand, by laying a direct tax to be assessed and collected by agents appointed by the Federal government.

On July 9, 1798, an act was passed providing "for the valuation of lands and dwelling houses and the enumeration of slaves within the United States." For making the valuation and enumeration, required by the act, the states were divided into districts, and, for each district a commissioner was appointed by the President with a fixed salary. It was made the duty of the commissioners to sub-divide these districts into assessment districts, and, for each, appoint one principal and as many assistants as might be required. The assessors were to make out a list of houses, lands and slaves, and afterward to value and assess them. On July 14 Congress passed an additional act, entitled "An Act to lay and collect a direct tax within the United States," fixing the amount to be raised at $2,000,000, of which $237,177.72 was the portion allotted to Pennsylvania. The rates of assessments to be made under this act were as follows: Where the dwelling and out-houses, on a lot not exceeding two acres, were valued at more than $100 and not exceeding $500, there was to be assessed a sum equal to two-tenths of one per cent. on the valuation. As the houses and lands increased in value the rates were increased in proportion, so that a house, worth $30,000, would pay a tax equal to one per cent. of its value. By this means rich and poor alike contributed their share of the burden according to their ability to pay. Upon each slave there was assessed a tax of 50 cents. The fourth section of the act provided for the appointment of collectors, and the duties were to be discharged under instructions from the secretary of the treasury.

Upon the announcement of the passage of these acts of Congress, and their publication, discontent began to manifest itself. They were denounced as unconstitutional, unjust and oppressive, and the government charged with acting in a tyrannical manner. The odium already resting on Mr. Adam's administration was increased, and new enemies made on all sides. Politicians, who seized upon it to bring the administration into disrepute, were governed by selfish purposes, but we must credit the masses with honest motives. Following so soon, after the passage of the Alien and

*Acknowledgments due the late Gen. W. W. H. Davis, author of "The Fries Rebellion," 1899.

Sedition Laws, gave the House Tax Law greater unpopularity than it really merited, or would have received at any other time. The feeling of the country was very much aroused before its passage, and this added fuel to the flame.

The law was violently denounced in Pennsylvania as soon as its provisions were known. At first opposition took the form of noisy declamation, and the application of harsh epithets to the President and his cabinet, and was mainly confined to the counties of Bucks, Montgomery, Northampton and Berks in the eastern part of the state. From passive resistance the opposition gradually assumed the shape of overt acts. In a few instances, and before any matured plan had been agreed upon, the officers were prevented by threats from making the assessments, and, in others, were hooted at and ridiculed. So odious did it make the administration in Bucks and Northampton, that these counties positively refused to furnish their quota, under a law recently passed, for increasing the military force of the country, and not a man was furnished by them. The opposition had assumed such alarming character by the winter and spring of 1799 the President deemed it his duty to send a large body of troops into these counties to quell the disturbance and enforce the law. In order to give our readers an intelligent and accurate account of this outbreak, it will be necessary to take up the thread of events from the passage of the acts of Congress that led to it.

Immediately on the passage of the law, the secretary of the treasury took the proper steps to carry it out. The act of July 9 divided Pennsylvania into nine districts, the third being composed of the counties of Bucks and Montgomery, and the fifth of Northampton, Luzerne and Wayne, with the following named commissioners:

- 1st District, Israel Wheeler,
- 2nd District, Paul Zantzenger,
- 3rd District, Seth Chapman,
- 4th District, Collinson Reed,
- 5th District, Jacob Eyerly,
- 6th District, Michael Schmyser,
- 7th District, Thomas Grant, Jr.,
- 8th District, Samuel Davidson,
- 9th District, Isaac Jenkinson.

Jacob Eyerley, commissioner for the fifth district, and a resident of Northampton, was commissioned sometime in the month of August and took the oath of office. Almost as soon as qualified, he was requested, by the secretary of the treasury, to find suitable persons to serve as assessors in his division. He had no trouble as far as the counties of Luzerne and Wayne were concerned, but, in Northampton, only two persons were named in connection with the appointment. There appeared to be a general indisposition among the people to accept office under the law.

The fourth section of the act of July 9 required the commissioners, as soon as possible after their appointment, to meet and make provision for carrying out the act. The board assembled at Reading, Berks county, October 22, nearly all the members present. Each commissioner presented a plan of his division and divided it into a suitable number of assessment districts. They also furnished a list of persons for assessors, which was forwarded to the secretary of the treasury who was authorized to reduce the number. A form of warrant was agreed upon and signed by the commissioners. The assessors were ordered to meet at an early day, when the commissioners would qualify and give them the necessary instructions.

Bucks county was divided into two collection districts, one composed of the twelve upper townships, for which were appointed one principal and five assistants; James Chapman, Richland, being the principal, and John Rodrock, Plumstead; Everhard Foulke, Richland; Cephas Childs, Samuel Clark, Milford; and one other assistant. Childs took the oath of office November 5, and no doubt the others were qualified about the same time. The assessors met at Rodrock's the latter part of December, after being qualified. Here the last preliminaries were arranged prior to making the attempt to carry the law into effect. Each assessor was given charge of two townships, and allowed a choice of the ones he would assess.

When it became known the assessments were actually to be made and the tax collected under the "odious" law, the hostility of the people, which had somewhat abated since its passage, broke out anew in some localities. The excitement soon reached fever heat. The tax became the general subject of conversation throughout the country, and was discussed in the taverns, stores, at all public gatherings, and at every point where two or more persons came together. As is always the case in times of high excitement, the authors of the law were denounced in unmeasured terms, and both its object and provisions misrepresented. The most extravagant stories were put in circulation as to the intention of the government, and such a state of fear had seized upon the minds of the middle and lower classes, people were really alarmed for their personal safety. Many considered Mr. Adams a despot, and the act was viewed as the most oppressive that had ever disgraced a statute book. In this condition of things it is not in the least strange that a determination to resist the law should manifest itself. The opposition appears to have been more general in Milford township, in Bucks, and in some of the border townships of Northampton county, where the inhabitants early made open demonstration to resist the assessors. In Milford the officers were wholly unable to comply with the law, and there the houses remained unassessed for some time after the assessment had been made in other parts of the district. The most active man in stirring up opposition to the Federal authorities, and who, in fact, was the head and front of all the disturbance, was John Fries, of Milford, who had the countenance and support of many of his neighbors and friends, of whom John Getman and Frederick Heaney, after himself, were the boldest and most active participants in the rebellion.

It would be an easy matter, were we disposed to indulge in romance and present fictitious characters to the reader, to convert the leaders in this disturbance into heroes and clothe them with imaginary qualities; but as we profess to deal only with facts, and intend to write a correct account of the outbreak, 1798-99, such license is forbidden. Fries, Heaney and Getman were plain, honest Germans only, and it is extending ordinary charity to suppose them to have been governed by sincere motives in the course they took.

John Fries, the leading spirit of the insurrection who came of parentage in the lower walks of life, was born in Hatfield, Montgomery county, about 1750. At 20 he was married to Margaret Brunner, daughter of David Brunner, of White Marsh, near Mather's Mill. John was brought up to work, and, when old enough was apprenticed to the coopering trade, which he learned. At twenty-five himself and wife, and their two children, removed to Bucks county settling in Milford township. We are not informed as to the exact locality, but were told by his son Daniel that Joseph Galloway gave him permission to build a house on his land at Boggy Creek, and occupy it as long as he wished, which offer he accepted. We have no means of knowing what length of time Fries lived there, nor when he changed his residence, but, at the time of the outbreak, we find him living in a small log house near the Sumneytown road, two miles from Charlestown, "on a lot that belonged to William Edwards, father of Caleb Edwards, deceased, of Quakertown." He probably did not follow the coopering business long, if at all, after his removal into Bucks county, for the earliest information we have of him shows he was then pursuing the calling of a vendue cryer, which he followed to the day of his death, and for which he seemed to have been especially adapted. This occupation led him to travel all over his own, and neighboring townships, affording him an opportunity of becoming well acquainted with the country and the people. He had ten children: Solomon, John, Daniel, a second John, and a fifth which died in infancy before it had been named; Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah, Catharine and Margaret. Of these ten children Solomon and Daniel were the last to die, both aged men, who had already reached more than man's allotted years. Daniel, the younger of the two, was born at "Boggy Creek," May, 1782.

When the contest between Great Britain and her American Colonies came on, 1776, John Fries espoused the cause of his country, and became an active patriot. He was already enrolled in the militia and had command of a company. We are not able to say at what period he was called into service, but we know he was on active duty 1777, for, in the fall of that year, his company being of the militia was called out from Bucks county to re-enforce the Continental Army, and was with Washington at White Marsh and Camp Hill. In the spring of the following year he commanded a company in the action at Crooked Billet, under General John Lacey, and shared the dangers and defeat of the day. Nearly twenty years later, we find him in command of a company of militia, from Bucks county, in the Whiskey Insurrection. In these military positions it is to be presumed he served his country faithfully.

At the period of which we write, Fries was about fifty years of age. In person rather small in stature and spare, but active, hardy and well made. He was without education, except being able to read and write, with a knowledge of the rudiments of arithmetic. Nature had endowed him with good natural abilities, and he possessed a shrewd and intelligent mind. He was an easy and fluent talker, and somewhat noted for his humor and cunning; was possessed of good hard sense, and, had his mind been properly cultivated, would doubtless have been a man of mark. Personally he was brave and resolute, and unknown to fear. He is said to have possessed a species of rude eloquence which was very engaging, and gave him great control over the multitude. He was a sworn enemy to all kinds of oppression, fancied or real, and was esteemed a quiet and in-offensive man until this outbreak aroused the latent fires within him, made him notorious and his name a terror to the administration of Mr. Adams. He had brown hair, quick and steady black eyes, of which an old neighbor, and one who formerly knew him well, told us "were as keen as the eyes of a rabbit." He had a pleasant disposition, was well liked by all, and, with many, quite a favorite. His character for honesty was above suspicion, and he was considered a sober man, though he occasionally indulged in strong drink. These personal and other qualities gave him, to a considerable degree, the confidence of the community in which he lived, and enabled him to exercise a controlling influence over his neighbors and friends.

In following his occupation of vendue cryer he generally traversed the county on horseback, and, in all his wanderings, was accompanied by a small black dog named "Whiskey," to which he was greatly attached. When he entered a house it was his habit to call for "Whiskey," when the faithful little animal would come and take a seat by his side and remain until his master got up to go away. Master and dog were inseparable companions, and aged persons who knew Fries stated to us that his approach was often heralded some time before he came in sight by the appearance of "Whiskey" trotting along in advance. The favorite little dog, as will be seen, before we conclude, was the means of the betrayal of his master into the hands of his enemies.

Next to John Fries, Frederick Heaney and John Getman were the most active instigators of the disturbance. They were both residents of Milford township at the time, the former living two miles from Charlestown, the latter within half a mile of Fries' house; they were tailors by trade, and in a humble condition in life. Of their history we have been able to learn but little. Heaney was born at what is now "Stover's Mill," Rockhill township, but we do not know at what period he changed his residence to Milford. At one time he kept the tavern at Hagersville, of which Christian Hager was landlord forty years ago, but we have not been able to learn the date of his residence at this place. After his pardon by Mr. Adams, Heaney returned to his home, Milford township, whence he removed to Plainfield, Northampton county, where he died. He gained there not only a respectable, but a somewhat influential standing in the community. He was appointed justice of the peace, and also commanded a volunteer company, which his grandson, George Heaney, commanded, 1860. After his death, which did not take place until he had reached a green old age, his widow was twice married, and died in Plainfield, 1855, at the age of eighty-nine years. He had three sons, Charles, Samuel and Enoch, and one daughter, Elizabeth. It is related by his descendants that while the troops were in pursuit of him, a party of soldiers came to his house one night, when his wife was alone, except her little daughter, Elizabeth. They heard of threats against his life, and, hearing them coming, she jumped out of bed and put a spike over the door to prevent them getting in, and, leaving her child in the house, ran out of the back door and across the fields to alarm a neighbor. When she returned with help the soldiers were gone.

This child was Mrs. Edmonds, living, 1860, in Bushkill township, Northampton county, whose son, Jacob B. Edmonds, resided in Quakertown.

Getman is supposed to have been born in Rockhill township, also, but we have not been able to learn anything of his history. His brother George died near Sellersville, Bucks county, March 4, 1855, at the advanced age of 92 years, 2 months and 10 days, respected by all his friends and neighbors. He, likewise, was arrested during the trouble; was tried and convicted but received a much lighter sentence than his brother John, being fined one hundred dollars and sentenced to undergo an imprisonment of 6 months. Heaney was the owner of a small house and lot. These two men were the advisers and confederates of John Fries, Getman being the most in his confidence. They lacked the intelligence and shrewdness of their leader, but were active in the cause and rendered him important service. Such were the head and front of the "Fries Rebellion."

John Fries was probably the first to array himself against the law, immediately upon its passage and promulgation. His own intense hostility begat the desire with him in feeling, and he labored with great zeal to this end. When going about the county crying vendues he was careful to sound the people as to how they stood upon the subject of the new tax, and was never backward in expressing his own opinion. From a warm supporter of Mr. Adams and his administration, he suddenly became of unmeasured denunciation. He reasoned with, persuaded, and threatened all and seemed to make it his business to create enemies to the act. He was thus active during the fall months of 1798, and, by the end of the year, had raised a fierce opposition to the law and those who were to carry it into execution. He was particularly hostile to the house-tax, and declared openly that no assessments should be made in Milford township, nor tax collected if he could prevent it. We were informed by his son Daniel, then about eighteen, who had a distinct recollection of the events transpiring, that several private meetings were held at his father's house before any public demonstration was made. His friends and neighbors met there to talk about the law and determine, in a quiet manner, what was best to be done. At these conferences Fries always took the lead, and his stronger mind assisted to mould the opinion of others.

The time had now arrived when some more active measures must be taken and opinion changed to deeds. The period approached when the assessors were to commence their duties, and some public demonstration was necessary to prevent them carrying the law into effect. With this object in view, about the first of February, 1799, notices, without any names signed to them, were put up at various places in the township, calling a public meeting for Friday, the eighth, at the public house of John Klein, on the road leading to Gary's tavern, two miles southwest from Charlestown. On the day appointed, a number of persons assembled at the place of meeting late in the afternoon. The two most active and noisy men present were John Fries and George Mitchell, who then kept the public house more recently occupied by Eli Zeigler, at the west end of Charlestown. This tavern was one of the places where the malcontents of the neighborhood assembled at evenings to talk over their grievances. Few, if any, at the meeting appeared to have had a very definite idea of what should be done; they disliked the house-tax and were opposed to paying it themselves, or permitting others to do so; but, beyond this, there was no plan of opposition, at this time. The law was discussed and its authors denounced in violent terms.

Some expressed a doubt whether the bill had yet become a law. The newspapers of the day mentioned that an amendment had lately passed Congress, which seemed to confuse the understanding of the people, and rendered them undecided as to whether the law was actually in force. After the matter had been sufficiently considered and the sense of the meeting fully explained, Fries, with the assistance of the publican, Mitchell, drew up a paper that was approved and signed by about fifty of those present. What the exact import of this paper was has never been determined, as neither the original nor a copy fell into the hands of the authorities. It is supposed, however, to have contained merely a statement of the views of the signers upon the subject of the tax, and their determination to oppose the execution of the law. Before adjournment, however, a resolution was passed requesting the assessor not to come into the township to make assessment, until the people were better informed whether the law was really in force; and one Captain Kuyder appointed to serve a copy of the resolution upon them. Having transacted the business which brought them together, the people quietly dispersed and returned to their homes. The meeting was conducted in the most orderly and peaceable manner, and there was no appearance of disturbance on the part of anyone.

Our readers will bear in mind, that Mr. Chapman, commissioner for the counties of Bucks and Montgomery, met the assessors of the former county at the public house of Mr. Rodrock, the latter end of December, to deliver to them their instructions how to proceed in the assessments. Immediately after this meeting, these officers commenced the assessment in the respective townships assigned them. They proceeded without any trouble, or appearance of opposition, in all the townships but Milford, and even there the people, notwithstanding the late agitation and excitement against the law, quietly acquiesced in its execution. It is true they did not like it, and would rather have avoided paying the tax, but they had abandoned all intention of resisting the law. Childs and Clark had both been appointed for Milford, and, before separating, fixed upon a day when they would begin in that township. Childs had also one or two other townships assigned him, and, it was arranged between them, they should assist each other two days at a time, alternately. As Childs had already made some assessments in his own district, he agreed to help Clark whenever he should be ready to begin the work. Before the meeting adjourned at Rodrock's, the principal assessor named an early day to meet again, and make return of what they had done. Mr. Childs went to assist Clark according to agreement, but, when he reached his house, finding the latter was not able to go on with the assessments, he returned to finish up his own district. In Milford the excitement was still running high; and as threats of serious injury had been made against the assessors, who were forbidden to enter the township, they declined to attempt it.

Fries and his friends had inflamed the minds of the people to such degree, that in some parts of the township they were almost in a condition to take up arms. The assessors met at Rodrock's, to make returns, on February 6, but as they did not complete their business that day they adjourned to meet on the 16th.

In the unsettled condition of things in Milford, the principal assessor, James Chapman, determined to take some steps to satisfy the people of the township in relation to the tax. For this purpose he thought it advisable to have a public meeting called at some convenient place, where he would explain the law, but not trusting altogether to his own judgment in the matter, he went to George Mitchell's on Monday, February 11, and consulted him. The latter agreeing with the principal assessor, he was requested to lend his assistance in getting up the meeting and assented. Word was sent to Jacob Hoover, who owned and lived at a mill on Swamp creek, on the road leading from Trumbauersville to Spinnerstown, about one mile west of the former place, and the same later occupied by Jonas Graber, to give notice of the meeting to the people of his neighborhood; and also to inform them they would be permitted to select their own assessor, and that any capable man whom they might name would be qualified. The offer, however, did not meet with much favor in that section of the township, and the people declined to have anything to do with it. There seemed to be a general disposition, among the friends of Mr. Adams in the township, to have a public meeting called notwithstanding the failure of the first attempt—to endeavor to reconcile matters; and Israel Roberts and Samuel Clark both saw Mitchell upon the subject. A few days after, Mr. Chapman again sent word to Mitchell to advertise a meeting, which he accordingly did, and the time fixed was the latter end of February, the place, his own tavern. The notice given was pretty general, and a large assemblage was expected.

The Jacob Hoover here spoken of was the uncle of Reuben L. Wyker, who lived near Rufe's store in Tinicum, and was active in assisting Fries. It is said he manufactured cartouch boxes for the use of the insurgents, and otherwise made himself useful to them. He escaped capture by having timely warning of the approach of the troops. George Wyker, also of Tinicum, and uncle of Reuben L., was in Philadelphia at market, at the time, and there learned that Jacob Hoover was to be arrested, and that a warrant had already been issued. Being anxious to prevent him falling into the hands of the Federal authorities, he hastened home, as soon as he had sold out his marketing, to give warning of the danger. He told his father what he had heard in the city. The latter was Nicholas Wyker, who lived on the same farm where Alfred Sacket lived in more recent years, on the hillside near Rufe's store. He immediately set off for Hoover's, whom he found at home, apparently very much unconcerned, but entirely ignorant of the danger that threatened him. Even when told of the arrangements made to arrest him, he did not seem to give it much importance; but, while they were in conversation Hoover looked out the window and saw the troops coming up the road. This reminded him of the necessity of fleeing. He immediately ran out the back door, and, keeping the house between him and them, made his way to a neighboring thicket, into which he escaped. When the soldiers arrived at the house, they surrounded it and entered, but the bird had flown, and Hoover was nowhere to be found. After a thorough search, the officer gave up the pursuit and returned with his soldiers, much chagrined. Hoover kept out of harm's way until the affair had blown over, when he returned home. He afterward removed to Lewistown, in this state, where he died.

In the meantime the adjourned meeting to be held at Rodrock's tavern, on February 16, at which the returns of the assessments were to be made, came off. All the assessors, except Mr.

Clark, were there and reported the assessments had been nearly completed in all the townships except Milford, where nothing had as yet been done. The assessor of this township had been so much intimidated and threatened he was afraid to go about in the discharge of his duties. Mr. Foulke also expressed some fears of going into the township, as threats had likewise been made against him, and he anticipated trouble. This state of things changed his mind in regard to permitting the people of the township to select their own assessor, and he now gave his consent to it, hoping it would conciliate them. He used his influence with the commissioner to induce him to agree to the same, and he finally yielded and gave permission. He notified the assessors, at the same time, that in case the people did not accept the terms offered them, and choose some person to discharge the duty, they would have to go into the township, and assist Clark to make the assessments. Proposals were made to the various assessors as to which would assume the duty, but each one had some excuse to give why he could not go, showing great unwillingness to place themselves in the way of danger. The unsettled condition of Milford alarmed them, John Fries and his friends being the terror of these officers.

The time for the meeting advertised to take place at Mitchell's had now arrived, which was held on Saturday, and a great many persons were at it. Everhard Foulke and James Chapman were present on the part of the assessors. The meeting was called for the purpose of reading and explaining the law, as they were extremely ignorant of its provisions and operations; but they behaved in such a disorderly manner nothing could be done. A general fear appears to have seized upon those present. Mr. Foulke used his best endeavors to remove it, but without avail. In their present state of mind, as he well knew, any explanation of the law on his part would have but little, if any, effect, and he did not even attempt it. Among the well disposed citizens present was Jacob Klein, who, at the request of Mitchell made an effort to calm the fears of the people, but he met with no success, for the clamor and noise were so incessant he could not be heard. Israel Roberts proposed to read the law to them, but they would not listen to him, and drowned his voice in their shouts. Conrad Marks, who afterward became an active participant in the disturbance, was at the meeting, but it does not appear that John Fries was there, which is hardly reconcilable, with his known activity in opposing the law. The assessors seeing nothing could be done toward satisfying their minds on the subject of the tax, and removing their prejudice and opposition to the law's execution, declined to take further part in the meeting and returned home.

The officers, upon this occasion, met with a signal failure in their attempt to induce the people to acquiesce in the assessments, and the result of the meeting gave encouragement to the opposition. In the subsequent trial of John Fries before the United States Court, Mr. Chapman, who was a witness on the part of the Government, gives the following account of what took place at this meeting, so far as it fell under his own observations. He says:

"I got there between one and two o'clock. Just as I got to the house, before I went in, I saw ten or twelve people coming from towards Hoover's mill; about the half of them were armed, and the others with sticks. I went into the house and twenty or thirty were there. I sat talking with some of my acquaintances that were well disposed to the laws. Conrad Marks talked a great deal in German; how oppressive it was, and much in opposition to it, seeming to be much enraged. His son, and those who came with him, seemed to be very noisy and rude; they talked in German, which as I did not know sufficiently, I paid but little attention to them. They were making a great noise; huzzaing for liberty and Democracy, damning the Tories, and the like. I let them go on, as I saw no disposition in the people to do anything toward forwarding the business. Between four and five I got up to go out; as I passed through the crowd towards the bar, they pushed one against me.

"No offer was made to explain the law to them while I staid; they did not seem disposed to hear it.

"They did not mention my name the whole time of my being there, but they abused Eyerly and Balliet and said they had cheated the public, and what villains they were. I understood it was respecting collecting the revenue, but I did not understand near all they said. I recollect Conrad Marks said that Congress had no right to make such a law, and that he never would submit to have his house taxed.

"They seemed to think that the collectors were all such fellows; the insinuation was that they cheated the public, and made them pay, but never paid into the treasury. After getting through the crowd to the bar, I suppose I was fifteen minutes in conversation with Mitchell; he said perhaps they were wrong, but the people were very much exasperated. Nothing very material happened, and I asked Mr. Foulke if it were not time to be going. So I got into my sleigh and went off; soon after they set up a dreadful huzza and shout."

Israel Roberts and other witnesses, on the part of the prosecution at the trial of Fries, and who was present at the meeting at Mitchell's, testified as follows:

"At the last meeting at Mitchell's there appeared a disposition to wait till they should have assistance from some other place. It was said that a letter had arrived to George Mitchell, from Virginia, stating there were a number of men, I think ten thousand, on their way to join them; the letter was traced from one to another, through six or eight persons, till at last it came from one who was not there. Some of the company at that time were armed and in uniform. I do not recollect what was said when the letter was mentioned, but they appeared to be more opposed to the law than they were before.

"At the meeting at George Mitchell's, at which Mr. Foulke and Mr. Chapman were present, which was held for the purpose of explaining the law, there were a number, about twelve came up in uniform, and carrying a flag with "Liberty" on it. They came into the house and appeared to be very much opposed to the law, and in a very bad humor. I proposed to read the law to them; and they asked me how I came to advertise the meeting; I told them I did it with the consent of a few others; one of them asked me what business I had to do it; I told him we did it to explain the law. He looked me in the face and said, 'We don't want any of your damned laws, we have laws of our own,' and he shook the muzzle of his musket in my face, saying, 'This is our law and we will let you know it.' There were four or five who wished to hear it, but others forbid it, and said it should not be read, and it was not done."

On his way home from the meeting, Mr. Chapman stopped at the public house of Jacob Fries, who then kept the tavern more recently occupied by George L. Pheister, at the east end of Trumbauersville, where he waited for Mr. Foulke to come up, who arrived soon after. Clarke was also there. Mr. Chapman had a conversation with him upon the subject of taking the rates in the township, when he declined to have anything more to do with it. He gave as a reason for this course that it would not be safe for him to undertake the assessments, and that he did not feel justified in endangering his life in order to assist to have the law carried into execution. He thus washed his hands of the whole business, and resigned his commission. It was now evident to Chapman and Foulke that the other assessors would be obliged to make the assessments in Milford, if they were made at all, and they deemed it their duty to take immediate steps to have it done. They agreed to meet the assessors at Quakertown, on March 4, in order to commence the work, and, before they left for home, Mr. Chapman asked each one to be present at the time and place appointed. When the day arrived for the meeting, but three of the assessors attended, Rodrock, Childs and Foulke, in addition to the principal, Mr. Chapman. They waited until evening without transacting any business, expecting others would arrive but none came, when they adjourned to meet at the house of Mr. Chapman, at nine o'clock the next morning.

As soon as it became noised about that the assessors had resolved to come into the township to take the rates, those opposed to the law renewed their activity against it. The people were told by the leaders that the assessments must not be made, and force would be used to prevent it, if necessary. The information that the assessors, who were now looked upon as enemies to republican institutions were coming, increased the excitement, and the people began active measures to oppose them. Captain Kuyder, who was in command of a company of militia, called them into service to assist in driving the assessors out of the township. He notified his men to meet him at his mill, on March 6, where some fifteen or twenty assembled. Early in the morning, while he was abroad in the neighborhood, he met his acquaintance, William Thomas, whom he invited to go to the mill and see his men. He accepted the invitation and accompanied the captain there. His men were getting together. When he arrived he found a number already assembled, a portion of them armed and others soon came up. After remaining a little while the captain ordered his men to take up the march for the tavern of Jacob Fries, Trumbauersville.

By the time they reached the village a considerable number of stragglers had been attracted, who helped to swell the throng. They marched along the main road until they came to the tavern, when they drew up in front of it and halted. Here a number more joined them, making about thirty in all. The people assembled expressed a desire to see the assessors, whom they knew were somewhere in the township making assessments; and a couple of horsemen were sent off to hunt them up and notify them they were wanted. They were instructed, in case they should find them, to take them prisoners, and either conduct them to Quakertown or bring them to Fries' tavern. Soon after the messengers had left, it was proposed that Captain Kuyder's company and the rest of the people assembled, should march to Quakertown and they immediately started down the road for that place. They presented a somewhat martial, but very irregular, appearance; the greater part being either armed with guns or clubs and accompanied with drum and fife. As they passed through the country they attracted much attention, and the sounds of their martial music were heard "far o'er hill and dale." They, who were not cognizant of the movement, and hardly knew what to make of the demonstration, went to the roadside to see what was going on. As they marched along the road they increased in number, and, by the time they reached their destination, there were more than a hundred in the company. This movement was the overt acts of resistance, and had an important bearing on the subsequent conduct of those who became insurgents in name and deed.

The three assessors, Chapman, Foulke and Childs, met, on the morning of March 5, at the house of Mr. Chapman as had been agreed upon, and thence proceeded into Milford township to make the assessments. They thought it advisable to call upon Clark, in the first instance, and see if they could not prevail upon him to go with them and divide the township, so as to complete their work in a short time. When they arrived at his house he was absent from home, and it was thought best for Mr. Chapman to go in search of him. Learning he had gone to assist one of his neighbors to move, he went to Jacob Fries' tavern to wait for him to return. In a little while he came. Upon being asked to assist in assessing the township he positively refused, saying he might as well pay his fine, even if it should take all the property he had. Finding that nothing could be done with him the subject was dropped. While Mr. Chapman was at the tavern, John Fries came up. After passing the compliments of the day, Fries remarked to him he understood he had been insulted at one of the meetings in the township, which, he said would not have been the case had he been present, and expressed his regret at the rudeness with which the assessor had been treated. The following interview then took place between the two, as sworn to at the trial of Fries:

"I told him (Fries) I thought they were very wrong in opposing the law as they did; he signified that he thought they were not, and that the rates should not be taken by the assessors. I told him that the rates would certainly be taken, and that the assessors were then in the township taking them. I repeated it to him, and he answered, 'My God! if I were only to send that man (pointing to one standing by,) to my house to let them know they were taking the rates, there would be five or seven hundred men under arms here tomorrow morning by sunrise.' He told me he would not submit to the law. I told him I thought the people had more sense than to rise in arms to oppose the law in that manner; if they did, government must certainly take notice of it, answer was, 'if they do, we will soon try who is and send an armed force to enforce the law. His the strongest.' I told him they certainly would find themselves mistaken respecting their force; he signified he thought not; he mentioned to me the troop of horse in Montgomery county, and the people at Upper and Lower Milford, and something about infantry who were ready to join them. He said he was very sorry for the occasion, for, if they were to rise, God knew where it would end; the consequences would be dreadful; I told him they would be obliged to comply; he then said huzza, it shall be as it is in France, or something to that effect. He then left me and went off."

While Mr. Chapman was waiting for Clark at Jacob Fries' tavern, and holding the strange interview with John Fries, the other assessors were engaged in taking the rates around the township. The first house they came to was Daniel Weidner's, at the west end of Trumbauersville, and occupied by Geo. Zeigler, 1859. Childs went in first and told Mr. W. that he had come in order to take the assessment under the revenue law of the United States. He appeared to be in a bad humor at the proceeding, and declined to give any information of his property. The assessor reasoned with him, and pointed out the impropriety of his conduct and what would be the consequence of his opposing the law. He was told he might have ten days to consider the matter, at the end of which time he would be able to determine what he ought to do. He professed not to know whether the law was in force, and said many other things in extenuation of his conduct; charged the assessor with receiving very high wages, &c. Mr. Childs explained that the law was in force and how a committee of Congress had reported against the expediency of repealing it. At last, Weidner, overcome by persuasion, or argument, consented to be assessed and gave up his property, saying to the assessor, "take it now, since it must be done." Childs then continued on his round, walking and leading his horse from house to house, until he reached Mitchell's tavern, where he found the other two assessors, who had arrived a little while before. Weidner got there in advance and was again railing out against the law; and said that the houses of high value were to pay nothing, while smaller ones, and of small value, were to pay high. He was again reasoned with, and finally became apparently reconciled, and gave up an additional piece of property to be assessed. He seemed to take the matter much at heart, however, and exclaimed, "They will ruin me; what shall I do?" The assessors then continued on their way toward Jacob Fries' tavern, where they were to meet the principal assessors by appointment, assessing several houses as they went along.

They had assessed some fifty or sixty houses in the whole, up to this point, and had done it without opposition. In every case but one the people were at home, and there a notice was left. They arrived at the tavern a little before dinner. As Mr. Childs was going into the door he was met by John Fries, who shook him by the hand, said he was glad to see him, and asked him to take a drink.

The assessors dined at Jacob Fries'. After dinner, and while they were sitting at the fire, John Fries came into the room. He addressed himself to Mr. Foulke and Mr. Chapman, and said they were men he greatly esteemed, and was sorry they had placed themselves in that position. He here proclaimed his opposition to the law; and said "I now warn you not to go to another house to take the rates; if you do you will be hurt." Without waiting for a reply he turned upon his heel and went out of the room. He seemed irritated and in anger. He said nothing more to them while they remained there. After a conference, the assessors concluded to pay no attention to the threat of John Fries, but proceed with the assessments. While at the tavern, Mr. Childs took the rates of Jacob Fries' house to which no opposition was made. It was then agreed that Rodrock and Foulke should go together, and Childs by himself to assess the houses of some who were known to be quiet and orderly people. They then mounted their horses and rode away in discharge of their duty. They found a marked difference, between the English and German, to be assessed; with the former they had no difficulty, except at one place, where the family said there were some bad people living in the neighborhood who would do them injury if they submitted to the rates. Messrs. Rodrock and Foulke continued on until about sunset without meeting any hindrance, or seeing any sign of opposition to the execution of the law. They were now going to the house of a man named Singmaster, and, as they turned down the lane out of the public road, they heard some person halloo to them; when stopping and looking round, they saw John Fries and five men coming toward them. Fries was in front, and upon coming up he said he had warned them not to proceed with the assessments, but as they would not obey him he had now come to take them prisoners. Rodrock asked him by what authority he had stopped them, to which he made no reply, but immediately grappled for the bridle of the horse. He wheeled the horse around at the moment, which caused Fries to miss the bridle and catch the rider by the coat tail, but the latter succeeded in tearing away and freeing himself from his grasp. Fries then rode off, but, before he had gone far, he turned about and approached the assessor again. He now cursed Rodrock, and, remarked to him, if he had a horse he would catch him. He offered no further insult, but returned to his companions. Mr. Foulke was less fortunate. The comrades of Fries surrounded him and secured him without resistance; but when in their power they offered him no injury, but treated him with kindness. When Fries returned to his men and found Mr. Foulke in their hands, he at once directed them to let him go, giving as a reason that as they were not able to catch Rodrock, they would not detain him. As the assessor was released Fries remarked to him, "I will have seven hundred men together to-morrow, and I will come to your house, and let you know we are opposed to the law." Being at liberty once more the assessors proceeded to the house of Philip Singmaster, who lived on the road leading from Trumbauersville to Philadelphia, half a mile from the former place, and in a house occupied by Zeno Frantz, 1859. They found him at home, and, upon informing him of their business, were permitted to assess his house without opposition. While here Mr. Childs rejoined them as had been agreed upon when they parted company at the tavern of Jacob Fries. They now compared opinions, and came to the unanimous conclusion they would not be justified in further attempt to take the rates in Milford township, on account of the violent opposition of the inhabitants, led on by John Fries; and the principal assessor was to give notice of this determination to the commissioners. They thereupon ceased to make assessments in the township and turned their faces homeward on the afternoon of March 6.

Meanwhile the insurgents continued their march toward Quakertown, where they arrived about noon, or shortly after. In a little while the party of Capt. Kuyder was joined by John Fries and companions and several others. They halted at the tavern of Enoch Roberts, the same kept by Peter Smith, 1859, when those on horseback dismounted, and, as many as could, went into the house. The scene around the tavern was one of noise and confusion, while those inside were no less boisterous. They were hallooing, and cursing and swearing; the most violent were denouncing John Adams, the house-tax, and the officers who were to execute the law; some were drumming and fifing, apparently endeavoring to drown the hum of confused voices in the strains of martial music, and numerous other ways were resorted to, to give vent to their feelings. The bar of Mr. Roberts was pretty generously patronized, and liquor flowed so freely that the excitement and confusion were increased. Fries, expecting the assessors to come that way on their return home, he had made up his mind to arrest them if nothing transpired to interfere with his arrangements.

When the assessors ended their conference at Philip Singmaster's, after having assessed him, they started directly homeward, having to pass through Quakertown their most direct road. Messrs. Foulke and Rodrock rode together, while Mr. Childs preceded them a short distance. When they arrived at the village, they found it in possession of the crowd of people already mentioned, under the control of John Fries and Conrad Marks. Some were in uniform and others in their usual working clothes; some were armed with guns, and others carried clubs. The noise and confusion they made were heard some time before the assessors reached the town. The testimony, given on the trial, shows they were congregated at two public houses, one already mentioned as being kept by Enoch Roberts, whereas the other was called "Zeller's tavern." We have been at considerable trouble to locate this latter public house, but have been unable to do so. The house, in which Richard Green lived, 1859, on the road to the railroad station, is said to stand on the site of an old tavern which may have been the one the witnesses called "Zeller's." On the other hand it is said, by the old residents of Quakertown, that Enoch Roberts had a son-in-law named N. B. Sellers, who assisted him to keep the public house he then occupied. The name of Zeller may have been intended for Sellers, and is possibly a misprint in the report of the trial, both meaning one and the same place.

When the insurgents saw the assessors coming they set up a great shout, and, as soon as they had approached within hailing distance, ordered them to stop. This they did not heed, as they had determined not to place themselves in their power if it could be avoided. As they entered the village Messrs. Foulke and Rodrock separated, and did not ride in together, Mr. Childs having already stopped at the house of a neighbor just on the edge of the town. Rodrock now rode in advance, and, when he had passed about half through the crowd, without giving heed to their commands to stop, they started to run after him from both sides of the road, some carrying clubs and others muskets, and made motions as if they intended to strike him. John Fries was standing upon the porch of the tavern, and when he saw Rodrock coming up he called out to him to stop, but, paying no attention to it, some of the men ran after him. The assessor, seeing himself pursued, wheeled his horse and demanded of Fries what he wanted with him. This seemed to excite the men the more, and they replied to him with curses, and ordered him, in an authoritative tone, to deliver himself up. To this he replied he would not do it while they addressed him in such language as they had applied to him. Some one in the crowd then gave the order to fire at him, when two men standing near the tavern door pointed their guns but did not fire. He now rode off toward home, and when they saw him making his escape, they again commanded him to stop; some making demonstrations to get their horses and pursue him, but did not. When he reached the house of Daniel Penrose, seeing Jacob Fries and John Jamieson there, he halted and related to them what had taken place. He appeared to be much alarmed; said that Foulke and Childs had been captured, and was afraid they would be killed. He requested Jamieson to return to the village, and prevent them being hurt, which he declined doing unless Rodrock would accompany him; but he was finally prevailed upon to go. He found the two assessors in the hands of the mob but not injured.

The other two assessors were less fortunate, both falling into the hands of the enemy. As Mr. Foulke, who was some little ways in the rear of Mr. Rodrock, approached Roberts' tavern, the crowd ran out to surround him. Some took hold of the horse's bridle, while others, among them Captain Kuyder, seized his person. John Fries came up at this moment and commanded him to dismount, saying that he desired to speak to him, while the surrounding crowd demanded he should be pulled off his horse. There was great danger of violent hands being laid on him, and he began to be alarmed at his situation. At this critical moment, the two Hoovers, John and Jacob, came to his assistance, and interfered with the excited multitude in his behalf. They ordered the mob to desist from their insults, and let Mr. Foulke alone, who would get off his horse without any compulsion. They gave the insurgents to understand the assessors would not be injured while they could protect them. Their resolute conduct somewhat silenced the crowd. Mr. Foulke deemed it the best policy to comply with their demands, inasmuch as he was not in a condition to help himself, and therefore rode up to the tavern shed, where he dismounted, tied his horse, and went into the house. The crowd followed him and soon the bar-room was filled. Now Fries reminded him that he had warned him the day before not to assess the houses in Milford township, and yet they had done so contrary to his orders. He then demanded Foulke's papers, which were delivered to Fries, who, after reading carefully, returned them. The assessor was now suffered to depart, Fries escorting him through the people to his horse, and holding the bridle while he mounted, when he rode off. Fries admitted to Foulke that he had violated the law, probably enough to endanger his life, and told him that he might "return him to the court if he wanted to do so."

It will be remembered that Mr. Childs did not accompany Rodrock and Foulke into Quakertown, but stopped at the edge of it—at the house of Esquire Griffith, who lived where Joseph R. Lancaster resided, 1859, where he dismounted and went in. As he was getting off his horse, Mrs. Griffith came out of the house and told him the people had come to make him and the others prisoners, and there was a large crowd in the village waiting to catch them. A few moments after he entered the house, a little girl came into the room and said the insurgents were taking Mr. Foulke, and, upon going to the window, saw them all around him. When he saw the danger which menaced his companions, he was going out to assist them, but the family persuaded him to remain where he was, and not place himself in unnecessary danger. In a little while John Fries came to the house and saluted Childs in a friendly manner, but told him he must accompany him to where his men were; and, as he had not the power to resist, concluded he might as well yield with as good grace as possible, and thereupon consented to go. As they walked along, Fries said to Childs he had told him yesterday not to go to another house, and how they had come to make him prisoner if they found he intended to go on with the assessments. Childs replied that he and the others were obliged to fulfil their office, unless interrupted by force. When they entered the tavern, Fries addressed himself to his men and Childs, saying: "Here are my men—here is one of them." Going into the bar-room he seated himself upon a table and soon there were several around him. One man damned him and said he should go to the liberty pole and dance around it. During this time they were crowding upon him and pushing, and he received several thumps with the knees and fists. At first he was taken for Rodrock, but when it was discovered he was not, they cursed him anew for being somebody else. He then made himself known as Cephus Childs, when some one remarked he was no better than the others. They asked him a multitude of questions about the assessments; how the people liked it where he had been, whether he had taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, &c., &c. That the reader may judge of the temper the people were in, we make the following extract from the testimony of Mr. Childs, given on the trial:

"They damned the house tax and the stamp act, and called me a 'stampler,' repeatedly; they damned the Alien and Sedition laws, and finally all the laws; the government and all the laws the present government had made. They damned the Constitution, also. They did not mention what constitution, whether of this state or of the United States. They damned the Congress, and damned the President, and all the friends to government, because they were all tories, as none were friends to the present government but the tories. They said they would not have the government, nor the President, and they would not live under such a damned government; 'we will have Washington;' others said, 'No, we will have Jefferson, he is a better man than Adams; huzza for Jefferson.'

Those assembled continued in this strain, and constantly expressed themselves as opposed to the law, and their determination to resist its execution. They boasted that every man in Northampton county would assist them except a few tories, and that between Quakertown and the Delaware, they could raise ten thousand men; and further that General Washington had sent them word that he had twenty thousand men to assist them. Some spoke in German and others in English. After John Fries took Mr. Childs into the house, he left him among the crowd and went out again, being gone some time. When he returned he apologized to him for the manner in which his men had used him. He then took him into an inner room where there were but few people, and demanded his assessment papers. He gave him some papers he had about him, but which did not refer to the collection of taxes, when Fries gave a shout and told his men he had got what they wanted. He then went out of the room, most of his men following him. The crowd were gone but a short time when they returned without Fries, shouting, and rushing up to Childs and took hold of him. Some were armed with clubs, guns, pistols, &c., and others had swords. Daniel Weidner, whose house he had assessed in the morning, was with them, who insisted upon Childs surrendering to him the assessment he had made of his house, but he did not give it up. They again took hold of him and shook him severely; and one man came forward and said he should be shot. Conrad Marks was present armed with a sword, who made many threats, but did not attempt to put any of them into execution. Childs attempted to reason with them, but it had little if any effect toward pacifying them. During this proceeding, Fries returned into the room and gave back the papers to Childs, telling him at the same time he must now go home, and never come back again into the township to assess, or he would be shot. To this he replied that he had left the township with a view of not returning to it again unless compelled to do so by authority, and that, from their present treatment, as he would never be likely to come back without such authority, they might have leave to shoot him. They then told him they wished him and Mr. Foulke to inform the government what had been done, as soon as they pleased. After a little more parleying they gave him liberty, when he rode off, glad enough to make his escape from such unpleasant company.

There is some discrepancy as regards what took place at Quakertown the day the assessors were captured, between the records of the transaction and the relation of those who have a recollection of the event. We had interviews with some of the oldest inhabitants of that section upon the subject, and find them at variance with the testimony drawn from other sources. They state that the assessors were chased to Quakertown by Fries and his party, and that he snapped his gun three times at Mr. Foulke; that the latter sprang from his horse at the porch of Enoch Roberts' tavern and ran in, when they hid him in the cellar, where he remained concealed until ten o'clock, when he was released and ran home. Another version has it that he was hid under the counter in the bar-room, and that Fries hunted all through the house, but was unable to find him; that they got Fries, Heaney and Getman drunk, when Foulke stole out and went home. Still another story is that he was kept confined in a stable, and that Mr. Childs was sent to inform his wife, but was afraid to go into the house, and walked in the yard until ten o'clock at night, when Foulke came home. These statements differ so widely, from the evidence given on the trial, we have thought it best to follow the testimony, believing that to be the nearest correct, because it was related under oath soon after the events happened. One circumstance is told by those who remember the difficulty, which seems so reasonable it is probably true; that a man named Everhart pointed his gun at Foulke, while they had him imprisoned at the tavern, but was so drunk he fell over while doing so. They afterward examined the gun, and found that the ball had been put in the bottom and the powder on top.

The circumstances which took place at Quakertown decided the assessors to make no further attempt to take assessments in Milford, as they were convinced it would lead to difficulty, and, possibly, bloodshed. In other parts of the county the law was quietly acquiesced in, and the officers discharged their duty peaceably, but it was, nevertheless, very unpopular and odious. For the time being, Fries and his friends had prevented the execution of the law in the disaffected district, but as far as we have been able to learn, no public outrages were committed, and their only desire seemed to be to prevent the officers, by intimidation, from making the assessments.

The foregoing embraces the proceedings of the insurrectionists, or insurgents, while opposing the execution of the house tax law in Milford. It will be noticed their whole conduct was of that earnest character which marks the actions of men who are sincere in what they are doing. While there was, naturally, considerable noise and confusion attendant upon their conduct, and high excitement prevailing, there was no unnecessary disturbance, and nothing that can properly be called violence. Rude they were, but not to an extent to create a breach of peace. We have every reason to believe they considered the law of the most oppressive character, and their minds had properly been inflamed against it by the misrepresentation of others. This opinion had been formed before they had an opportunity to learn its provisions and operations, and they were afterward either too much prejudiced, or their pride would not permit them, to be rightly informed. The law of itself was a mild one, and no one who examines it at this day can see anything in it to cause such opposition to it. The rates were light, and the burden of the tax fell upon the shoulders of those who were the best able to bear it. There was likewise a public necessity for that or a similar Act of Congress, and it was necessary that the revenue should be increased, as there was every probability of the government being driven into a war with one of the most powerful nations of Europe. The situation of the politics of the country had something to do with the opposition that was raised against the law. But recently, before their passage, the two statutes known as the Alien and Sedition Laws had passed Congress, which were received with a burst of indignation that had never been equaled in the country. They brought the administration of Mr. Adams into great unpopularity, if not detestation. The odium that rested upon these laws was reflected upon the house tax, and thus it was condemned in advance because it was found in bad company. Many honest people believed that an Act of Congress taxing the country, emanating from the same government which had given them the Alien and Sedition Laws, must naturally be a wicked one, and, they were so well convinced of this, they were not open to persuasion to the contrary. Another circumstance, in connection with the manner in which the law was executed, had something to do with its great unpopularity. The officers exceeded their duties, and went beyond their instructions. The assessors were only required, by law, to assess the houses, lands and slaves, and were not directed to count the window lights of the houses, which were a duty superadded by the officers who had charge of affairs. The fact of the window lights being counted created suspicion in the minds of the people that it was done for the purpose of making them the subject of future taxation. This, more than anything else, led to the meetings held by the people, and, notwithstanding the unpopularity of the measure, there would probably never have been any "insurrection" or outbreak, had the assessors confined themselves to the duties which the law required of them. The abuse of the law had probably more to do with causing the disturbance than the law itself.

Having recounted the opposition to the House Tax Law in Bucks county, and the disturbance growing out of it, we shall now proceed to show what took place in Northampton.

It will be remembered that Jacob Eyerley was appointed commissioner for a district composed of the counties of Northampton, Luzerne and Wayne. As soon as the law was passed, the people of Northampton manifested so much opposition to it, Commissioner Eyerley believed there would be difficulty in carrying it out. This was before he had entered upon the discharge of his duties. While at Reading, in October, he was informed by the commissioner from Bucks, that he had seen persons who had traveled through that county, and in every tavern he stopped at, the law was the subject of general conversation and denunciation, and great pains were taken to find the friends of government, in order to persuade them not to accept the office of assessor. In consequence of this feeling there was great difficulty in finding suitable persons for these appointments. He selected one in each township, taking the most suitable for the duties, from all the information he could get. Commissions were immediately sent them, with notice to meet the commissioner to receive instructions. At that time the commissioner did not believe the state of things was as bad in Northampton as he afterward found it to be. The disaffection in Bucks had spread over the line into some of the neighboring townships of the adjoining county, and the people had become as hostile to the tax as Fries and his neighbors.

Commissioner Eyerley divided Northampton into three districts and first met the assessors November 3, at Nazareth. Two were absent, and some of those present asked to be excused from serving, on account of the hostility of the people and the assessors' fear of injury. As the commissioner had no authority to relieve them they were not excused. Finding them misinformed of the nature and operation of the law the commissioner took great pains to disabuse their minds, and, with such success, they consented to serve, and were given instructions. The following day he met the assessors of the second district at Allentown, all being present but one. The same difficulty met him here he had to contend with at Nazareth, disinclination to accept for the same reason, opposition of the people to the law, and fear of being assaulted, should they attempt to make the assessments. With a good deal of difficulty those present were induced to accept the appointments. As it was taken for granted the absent assessor, a Mr. Horne, did not intend to accept, a blank commission was left with Mr. Stephen Balliet, a prominent resident of the county, with authority to appoint some suitable man in place of Mr. Horne. The assessors of the first district were met November 6, in Chestnut Hill township, with two absentees. One of these was a Mr. Kern, of Easton, but as it was not convenient for him to accept, he named a Mr. Snyder, who was only commissioned. He met with the others the same day; accepted the appointment and served. He stated there was much opposition to the law in his section of the county, and he did not understand it very well himself, but would do the best he could. The commissioner took considerable pains to explain the provision of the law, which entirely satisfied him. He now became quite warm in its favor, and said he would ride fifty miles if it were necessary to accept the appointment, since he had been wrongly informed about the law in the first place. The assessor from Hamilton township did not seem willing to accept his appointment, and it required a good deal of explanation and persuasion to overcome his disinclination. He at last consented, however, accepted his commission, and received his instructions.

In Northampton county the principal part of the opposition to the law was in the townships of Heidelberg, Weisenberg, Lynn, Lowhill, Penn, Moore, Upper Milford and Hamilton. In four districts it was of such violent character the law was not executed until after the troops were marched into them, and, in some of them, the people were almost unanimous against it. In Moore township, the opposition was only among a portion of the inhabitants, and, when the assessor was opposed when making the assessment, he called a town meeting and took the sense of the people. The assessor of Penn township did not meet the commissioners, but refused to accept the appointment in view of the difficulties in his way. Some time elapsed before any one could be found willing to accept the office, but, finally, one bold enough to assume the responsibility, presented himself and he was commissioned and qualified. When the people of the township heard that another person had been appointed in place of the one first named, and had undertaken to discharge the duties of the office, they became very violent and threatened him with personal injury. The leaders of the opposition collected a number of the disaffected into a mob, who waited upon the assessor, and gave him to understand harm would be done him if he attempted to take the rates. This demonstration intimidated him to such degree he resigned, and declined to have anything more to do with it. The hostility to the law continued so great in this township, the assessments were not made until sometime late in the spring of 1799, and after the presence of a military force had completely quelled everything like opposition.

The spirit of insubordination first manifested itself a little while before the general election, when meetings were held in different parts of the county to take action upon the subject. At one of these meetings the officers of the militia were invited to be present, and their co-operation, as the leaders of the military of the county, was earnestly desired. The leading object was to nominate candidates opposed to the law. At this meeting several resolutions were passed, one recommending the circulation of petitions asking a repeal of the Alien and Sedition Laws and the land tax. The proceedings were published in the newspapers and circulated among the people. A petition was given to each of the captains of militia to get signers. On the day of election the people turned out very generally, and, in most of the districts the opposition to the government was so general, its friends dare not say a word in its favor for fear of being abused. The anti-administration candidates were elected by considerable majorities, and the people, generally, rejoiced at their success.

In Hamilton township, the people were so much enraged at Nicholas Michael, the assessor, for accepting the appointment, they went in large numbers to his house at night to do him bodily injury, but, being informed of their intention, he sought safety in flight. The next day he went to the commissioner and made complaint of the treatment he had received, tendered his resignation, and begged its acceptance. This was declined; he was told to return to his duty, and he would be protected in the discharge of it. He accompanied the commissioner to Easton, to see Mr. Sitgreaves, the United States Attorney for the district, before whom he intended to make affidavit in order to have some of the evil-disposed placed under arrest. Mr. Sitgreaves not being at home, they went to Judge Traill, an associate judge of the county; but, when they arrived there, Michael became alarmed and begged to be allowed until the next morning to consider the matter; saying, that if he informed against the people he and his family would be ruined. In the morning he wished to be put in jail to be kept from danger, so great were his fears, but his request was not complied with.

In the present state of excitement the commissioner deemed it advisable to call a public meeting at which the people could come together and have the law explained to them, as he was of opinion the greater part of the opposition arose from a misconception of its provisions. With this object in view, he gave Mr. Michael a letter to take to the constable of the township, requesting him to fix the time and place for the meeting, and to give proper and timely notice thereof. Mr. Eyerley promised to be present to explain the law to such as did not understand it. The constable, accordingly, announced the meeting to be held at the public house of a Mr. Heller, and the time fixed was a few days before New Year's, but we have not been able to ascertain the precise day. The commissioner was present according to promise, being accompanied into the township by William Henry, one of the Associate Judges of Northampton. When they arrived at the place of meeting they found some seventy persons assembled, among them three or four in uniform, whose arms were stacked behind the tavern door. After the meeting was organized, Mr. Eyerley arose and stated that he had come there as their friend, to explain the house tax law, that they might no longer be in ignorance of its provisions. He and Judge Henry then proceeded to explain the statutes as they understood them, but with little effect, as the people were not disposed to listen to any explanation that would be likely to give them a more favorable opinion of the odious law. They hated it, and did not wish to think well of it. In order to reconcile the people, to the assessment of the rates, he proposed they should elect an assessor of their own; this they refused to do, saying, if they did, it would amount to submission to the law, which they did not mean to make. The assessor already appointed was anxious to resign, but this he was not allowed to do, as no one could be found who would accept the appointment in his place.

In Upper Milford the people opposed to the law held a township meeting and appointed a committee of three to wait upon the assessor when he should begin the assessment, and request him to desist; and about the last of December, when he began the work, he was met by this committee and informed he could not proceed. No violence was offered, but he was given to understand he would not be permitted to carry out the law. He immediately wrote the commissioner informing him of the situation of affairs, and asked advice as to the course to be pursued. The latter again thought it advisable to have a public meeting called, at which he would make another effort to explain the law to the people, and endeavor to satisfy them with its provisions. He directed the assessor to give notice to John Schymer, Moretz and other leading men of the township, that he would meet them at such time and place as they might appoint. The place fixed upon was the house of Mr. Schymer, date not known. When the time arrived the commissioner set out for the place of meeting, accompanied by Judge Henry, and, when he arrived within four miles of it, he was met by a friend who advised him not to attend, saying the people were so violent his life would be endangered, but he disregarded the warning and kept on. He found some 75 men assembled at the house of Schymer, several of them having French cockades in their hats, showing very plainly which side they took in politics.

One of the petitions, which a previous meeting had recommended should be circulated for signatures, was handed the commissioner who read it to the people. Some of them, upon hearing it, said it was not such a petition as they had been led to believe it was, as it mentioned nothing about the stamp act. As there was a report in circulation that the act was not in force, Mr. Eyerley read it in German, and explained to them it was their duty to submit to it. One, George Shaeffer, denying that it was a law, the question was submitted to the decision of Mr. Schymer, who, being a justice of the peace, had considerable influence over the minds of the people. Shaeffer was inclined to be noisy and created a disturbance, and he and others used abusive language to the assessor, Mr. Heckewelder, accusing him, among other things, of having been a Tory during the Revolution. Mr. Eyerley proposed that inasmuch as they were opposed to the present assessor, he would give them the privilege of electing one of their own number, to whom he would give the appointment. This they declined, saying: "We will do no such thing; if we do, we at once acknowledge that we submit to the law, and that is what we will not do." Three of the Shaeffers made demonstrations to beat Heckewelder, but were deterred by the interference of others, and he was allowed to go away without injury. The commissioner, even with the countenance of Mr. Schymer and several other well disposed persons present, found it impossible to reconcile the multitude to the law, and he returned home a second time without having effected anything. The opposition to the law in this township, likewise, was not overcome until the presence of troops intimidated them into submission, when the rates were taken without further trouble.

Resistance to the enforcement of the law had now reached that stage it became necessary for the authorities to take some notice of it. About Jan. 15, 1799, Judge Henry, at the request of Commissioner Eyerley, and upon complaint of the assessors that they found it impossible to proceed in the execution of their duty, issued a number of subpoenas to bring persons, cognizant of the opposition to the execution of the laws, before him that he might make a careful examination of the cause of complaint and ascertain its truth. The witnesses who appeared were generally very reluctant to give information, being afraid the insurgents would do them some injury. The judge made appointment to meet a number of persons at Trexlertown, to inquire further into the matter, and a considerable crowd assembled. Among those present was part of a company of light horse under Captain Jarrett. The men were mostly in uniform, and many of them noisy and impudent. The judge was attended by the commissioner and Mr. Balliet. They, who were present, paid little respect to the officers but ridiculed, and made fun of them. From the indications at this meeting, it was evident the disturbance could not be quelled by the local officers, and it was thought best to appeal to the Federal authority. The steps now about to be taken changed the aspect of affairs. Hitherto, it was considered but a local disaffection to a law of questionable expediency, and improperly understood, and which, in due time, would subside and be heard of no more. Down to this point it had hardly attracted public attention outside of the rural districts where the opposition was made, and neither State nor Federal Government had given it consideration. It now assumed National importance, and what shortly before, was unworthy the attention of politicians or statesmen, became a matter of great moment. The action of Judge Henry was the incipient step that changed the affair to an insurrection, and converted the opponents of the house-tax law into insurgents and traitors to their country.

Mr. Sitgreaves, United States District Attorney, was sent a number of depositions he had caused to be taken to Judge Peters, of the United States District Court, Philadelphia. This was some time in February, and the first official information the judge received on the subject, although he had before heard of it as a matter of news. He examined a few witnesses in addition to the affidavits, and, from the facts elicited, thought it his duty to issue warrants for the parties. Being much engaged he directed the district attorney to draw up the form of warrants for his approval and signature. It has been decided, that, in order to ease the minds of the people, the warrants should be drawn in the nature of an order for the defendant to appear before some justice of the peace, or judge of the county, and give bail for appearance at the Circuit Court of the United States, but circumstances prevented it. After this had been decided upon, it came to the knowledge of the authorities that several of the magistrates themselves were disaffected, and others were prevented doing their duty through fear of injury. The judge also had scruples as to the legality of the measure, whether persons, arrested on his warrants, could be taken before an inferior magistrate. While his mind was in doubt, he received additional information of the state of the people in the disaffected districts, and this induced him, both to make a change in the form of the warrants and the procedure under it. The warrants were now to be made returnable to Judge Peters' Court.

THE MARSHAL MAKES ARRESTS IN NORTHAMPTON.

When the form of the warrants was agreed upon, they were made out and put into the hands of Colonel Nichols, United States Marshal, to be served. This was about Jan. 25, and the marshal was directed to proceed to Northampton county immediately and make the arrests. He left Philadelphia on the 26th, serving a few subpoenas on the road, in order to collect evidence, reaching Nazareth on March 1st. Here the marshal met Commissioner Eyerley, and told him to go with him to serve the warrants executed, those placed in his hands being only for the arrest of persons in Northampton county. The next morning, accompanied by Eyerley, and Eyerman, the marshal set out to execute the warrants. They went first into Lehigh township, where twelve were arrested, all against whom they had process, but five others came in afterward and gave themselves up. Their offence was resistance to the execution of the House Tax Law. They then returned to Bethlehem, where they were met by Colonel Balliet. The marshal's party next went to Macungie township, where they had no difficulty until they came to the house of George Snyder, near Emaus, on whom the marshal wished to serve a subpoena. Snyder and his wife used abusive language toward them, the woman taking the lead. The husband came out of his house with a club, and positively refused to receive the subpoena. He called the marshal and the men with him rascals and highway robbers, and, upon being told he was only wanted as a witness, he refused with an oath.

The marshal finding he could do nothing with him requested Daniel Swartz's son to read and explain the subpoena to him, and leaving it with him to be served if it were possible. Thence they proceeded to Millerstown, now Macungie, a few miles distant. On the road they stopped at the house of the Rev. Mr. VanBuskirk, where they left their horses and walked into the town. The marshal had a warrant for George Shaeffer, active in opposing the law, and to whose house they next proceeded to arrest him, but he was not at home. Not meeting with success in this case, they went to the tavern, where a considerable number of people had assembled.

They now made an attempt to arrest a man named Shankweiler, who also lived in Millerstown. The marshal and commissioners walked over to his house, leaving Mr. Eyerman at the tavern. They had not intimated they desired to arrest him, but when they left the tavern the people suspected their intention and followed them in a crowd to the number of about fifty. They went in advance of the officers, and, reaching the house before them, filled the large room. When the marshal arrived a friend pointed out Shankweiler to Colonel Nichols, but observing what was going on, he withdrew into the crowd, with the intention of hiding himself from view; but the marshal followed him, and putting his hand upon his shoulder, informed him he was a prisoner, in the name of the United States, announcing himself as the United States Marshal for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Shankweiler, having no idea of being captured without some resistance, broke loose from the marshal and fled toward the barn. He proclaimed he would not injure the marshal, but made threats against Eyerley and Balliet, toward whom he manifested great hostility. The people became much excited at this proceeding, and many cried out in German, "Strike! Strike!" Some said if he were taken out of his house they would fight as long as they had a drop of blood in their bodies. They seemed inclined to lay violent hands upon Balliet, and one of the crowd presumed to pull the cockade from his hat. The marshal warned them of the consequences of their attempting to strike, and reasoned with them upon their riotous conduct. Finding that himself and companions were in danger, the marshal unbuttoned his coat, that the people might see a pair of pistols he had with him, and also in order that he might be able to grasp them quickly, should he find it necessary to use them. The determined manner of the marshal had its effect, and the crowd became quieter. Shankweiler refused to accompany the marshal to Bethlehem, and swore he would resist the authorities of the United States, let the consequences be what they might. He was told such a course would ruin himself and family, and be the destruction of his property, to which he replied that his father had fought against the stamp act, and he would resist the tax law which was supported by none but Tories and the friends of government. At last he was prevailed upon to promise to meet the marshal at Bethlehem, but could not be induced to say that he would submit or surrender himself. Seeing that nothing further could be accomplished there, the officers took their leave. As they left the house the people set up a shout and hurraed for "Liberty." The marshal now continued on his rounds. He procured a constable to show him where Adam Stephen, Herman Hartman, and Daniel Heberly, for whom he had warrants, lived. Having arrested these persons he and his party returned to Bethlehem, where they arrived on the evening of March 6th. Bethlehem was his headquarters, and here he had his prisoners confined.

The arrests of the persons for whom warrants were issued, and their confinement at Bethlehem by the marshal, caused unusual excitement throughout the country. It created great indignation in the disaffected districts of Northampton and Bucks, and was considered an act of tyranny and oppression on the part of the government. As soon as it became known the arrests were made, the leaders of the opposition to the law determined to rescue them if possible. For the purpose of consulting on the subject, a meeting was called at the public house of Conrad Marks, Milford, Bucks county, on March 7th. Notices were carried around the evening before and left at the houses of those known to be friendly to the movement. By ten o'clock a number of people had assembled, and considerable excitement was manifested. The general sentiment was in favor of immediate organization and marching to Bethlehem to take the prisoners from the hands of the marshal. The crowd was formed in a company, and John Fries elected captain. They were variously armed; some with guns, others with swords and pistols, while those with less belligerent feelings, carried clubs. Subsequently, when Fries was examined before Judge Peters, he said his "motive in going to Bethlehem to rescue the prisoners was not from personal attachment, or regard for any of the persons who had been arrested, but proceeded from a general aversion to the law, and an intention to impede and prevent its execution." This reason, however, hardly explains their course, under the circumstances. Their plan was first to march to Millerstown and thence to Bethlehem.

The people of Northampton, meanwhile, had also taken action in reference to a rescue of the prisoners. A meeting to consult on the subject was called at the tavern of Martin Ritter, on the present road from Mountainville to Emaus, to meet at ten o'clock on the morning of March 7th. Notice was also given for two or three companies of light horse to meet there at the same time, one of which was commanded by Captain Jarrett.

At the hour appointed a considerable number of persons were on the ground, and much noise, confusion and excitement prevailed. Upon the meeting being organized, and a conference had about the matter, that had brought them together, it was unanimously resolved to march for Bethlehem without delay. The strength of the party which marched for that place we have no means of knowing, as the records do not give it. Soon after starting they selected a commander, the choice falling upon Andrew Schiffert. There were a few present who questioned the propriety of the movement, but the general voice was so nearly unanimous in its favor, their advice was not listened to. The excitement ran high, and the multitude clamored to be led to the rescue of their friends in the hands of the Federal authorities. They did not look at the consequences that might recoil upon themselves, nor did they care at that particular moment, for they were burning under a sense of real or imagined wrong. They were blind to the nature of the step they were taking, and deaf to the voice of reason. The multitude believed, in case they should succeed in rescuing the prisoners, the matter would end there. Or, if it did cross the minds of the most far-seeing that such indignity to the government might be taken notice of, and troops ordered there to capture the guilty, it was not supposed, for a moment, the authorities would be able to do anything with them. With this feeling the march was taken up for Gund's tavern, three miles from Bethlehem, where some confederates were expected to join them. Here they resumed the march for the bridge that crosses the Lehigh at South Bethlehem.

RESCUE OF THE PRISONERS AT BETHLEHEM.

Fries and his friends received word, the night before, that the Northampton people, opposed to the law, also intended to make an effort to take the prisoners from the hands of the marshal. In the morning, Conrad Marks sent his son to Ritter's tavern, to learn what movement was on foot at that place. In the meantime the march was commenced for Millerstown, and when they had gone three or four miles on the road, young Marks was met returning. He informed them the Northampton people were already in motion, a large party having left Ritter's before his arrival; that it was not worth while for them to go, as a sufficient number was on the march to accomplish what they had in view. Upon learning this some were in favor of turning back, but Conrad Marks and John Fries advised they should go at least to Bethlehem to see what was going on there. The march was resumed. Daniel Fries, son of John, says that his father started for Bethlehem mounted, but when near old John Cline's, the animal cut its foot with the cork of his shoe and was disabled. Daniel was with him, and as the horse was of no further service on the road, Fries sent his son back with it and continued the march on foot. They passed by Ritter's tavern, and followed the route of the Northampton contingent which had preceded them, overtaking and joining them at the south end of the bridge over the Lehigh at South Bethlehem. The whole command numbered one hundred and forty men, including two companies of riflemen and one of mounted men, the latter being armed with broad swords. They presented quite a martial appearance. Their march through the thickly populated country swelled their ranks by the addition of a number, attracted by curiosity, who followed after to see what would take place, without any intention of taking part in the proceedings. They were neutrals.

We have already said the marshal returned to Bethlehem with his prisoners the night of March 6th, and confined them in the Sun tavern. As the marshal passed through the country, on his return, he heard a rumor that an attempt would be made to rescue the prisoners, but he did not conceive such a thing possible, supposing somebody, as a matter of amusement had raised the story to alarm him. Upon reaching Bethlehem, however, the rumor was confirmed, and he was convinced a movement of the kind was on foot by a band of armed men. The prisoners arrested in Lehigh township were released upon their own bonds, with good securities for their appearance, but the others were held in custody.

The information that an attempt at rescue would be made, naturally gave the marshal great uneasiness, and he proceeded to take such steps as were deemed necessary to prevent it. He held a consultation with Judge William Henry, Mr. Eyerley, the commissioner, Mr. Balliet, Joseph Horsfield, a justice of the peace at Bethlehem, and General Brown. He had received instructions before leaving Philadelphia, to call out a posse comitatus in case it should be found necessary, but was forbidden to use an armed force. He made a demand upon Judge Henry for armed men, but as the latter had received similar instructions, and there could not be found any authority authorizing it, the requisition was refused. It was therefore decided to call such force as they were authorized to accept, and accordingly, summoned a civil posse. Twenty men were called from Bethlehem and Easton, but only eighteen responded, arriving between ten and eleven in the forenoon. We have not been able to get the names of all, but among them were William Barnett, John Barnett, Christian Winters, Christian Roth and Philip Schlaugh. The prisoners were removed upstairs to a room thought to be more secure. As General Brown was a person of influence in the county, the marshal requested him to command at Bethlehem and lend the assistance of his counsel, but he declined on account of having been absent so long from his family. In the meantime an officer was sent to arrest a clergyman named Eyerman and one, John Fox, both active in opposing the law, and who were thought to be too dangerous to go at large. They were taken and brought in without opposition. The proceedings becoming known in the surrounding country, a large number of people came to witness a conflict, which it was supposed, could not be avoided.

About eleven o'clock a Mr. Dixon, who arrived from Emaus, informed the marshal he had seen a number of persons assembled at Ritter's tavern, under arms, some mounted, others on foot, who were about to march for Bethlehem; and also saw others on the road. This was the first positive information that an armed party was actually coming to attempt a rescue of the prisoners. In about half an hour two men, one armed with a smooth bore gun, the other with a rifle, arrived at the Sun, dismounted in the yard, came quietly into the house and placed themselves by the side of each other opposite the door. The marshal and some of the people who were collected, inquired the reason of their coming armed, when, after some hesitation they replied they "had come upon a shooting frolic." Upon being questioned as to what they intended to shoot, one of them evaded a reply by saying they wanted to see what was best for the country. They were then told to withdraw and not appear in arms to obstruct the process of the United States. To this they replied they were freemen and had a right to go where they pleased. They were supposed to be of the insurgent force, and as they would probably come straggling in, it was thought best to secure them in detail. They were accordingly arrested, their arms taken from them and they were taken up stairs and confined in a chamber. Shortly after three other mounted men arrived in uniform, at the head of whom was Shankweiler, who had refused to submit to an arrest the day before. The marshal asked him if he had come to surrender himself, but he replied he came to meet his accuser. They gave no indication of creating a disturbance and mingled peaceably with others assembled. Information was now brought in that there was an armed force at the Lehigh bridge, on the march for the tavern. A consultation was held and it was deemed best to send a deputation down to hold a conference with them, to learn their intention. It was agreed to send a delegation of four upon this duty, two Federalists and two anti-Federalists. The men selected were John Mulhaddon, William Barnett, Christian Roth and Isaac Hartzell, gentlemen of standing and influence in the county. They received no particular instructions, and were only charged to prevail upon the armed force not to come into town.

The deputation rode down through the main street of Bethlehem, crossed the Lehigh to the south bank, and proceeded about a half mile beyond the bridge, where they met a party of armed horsemen, whom they learned were from the neighborhood of Millerstown. These belonged to the Northampton contingent. Upon inquiring for the commanding officer, they were told they had no officers, but were all commanders. The committee then told them the object of their visit, and used every persuasion to induce them to relinquish their march to Bethlehem. They explained to them the probable consequences of the rash step they were about to take; that they would be resisting the laws of the United States in rescuing the prisoners, and the Government would surely punish them for it. All they said seemed to have but little or no effect. While Judge Mulhaddon and Mr. Barnett were talking with these people in front, Christian Roth went toward the road to use his influence in that quarter. One of the men said to him: "We don't know you;" whereupon he told them in reply, that whether they knew him or not, they would thank him for the advice he had given them. Another pointed his gun at him. This did not alarm Roth, who mildly said, "Little man, consider what you are about; don't be too much in a hurry." While they were holding this parley a company of armed riflemen came up. They were likewise informed of the wish of the marshal, but they gave it no more heed than the others.

The march of the insurgents was now resumed and they continued to the bridge where another halt was made. The committee here held another parley with them, endeavoring, by all possible means, to induce them not to go over into the town. They now said that the marshal had two of their men prisoners, who had gone into Bethlehem under arms, and they intended to set them free. They appeared to be alarmed at the idea of the prisoners being taken to Philadelphia for trial. While admitting they should be punished, if they had done wrong, they must be tried in Northampton county. When the committee saw the insurgents were determined to proceed, they suggested it would be better to send three or four men over as a deputation to confer with the marshal. To this they agreed, and three of their number were appointed to go. Afraid lest these men should also be made prisoners, they stipulated with William Barnett that he should return them safely. The two committees then crossed the river to Bethlehem, and together proceeded to the Sun tavern. They were taken before the marshal and had a conference with him. Upon inquiring the reason of so many armed men coming there, they replied they came to prevent him taking the prisoners to Philadelphia to be tried. He told them that could not be done, and advised them to go to their companions and persuade them to return to their homes. They requested that the two men, who had been made prisoners in the morning should be released, which was done and their arms delivered to them. As the committee had promised, they now returned with these men to the south side of the river to deliver them to their companions.

We last took leave of John Fries and his friends on their march from Conrad Mark's tavern by the way of Millerstown to Bethlehem. They were a little in the rear of the Northampton contingent, and arrived at the bridge while the committee of citizens were gone to the tavern with the men deputed to confer with the marshal. They did not halt any length of time on the south bank of the river, but pushed across and continued on to the tavern, where the prisoners were confined. Meanwhile, the committee of conference, on the part of the marshal, had started on their return accompanied by the two released prisoners and their three friends. When they reached the lower part of the village, they met the force of John Fries marching up the main street. They stopped him to hold a parley and endeavored to prevail upon him and his men not to continue their march up into the town; but they disregarded their appeal and said they were determined to go on. One of the men, supposed to have been Fries, said, "This is the third day that I am out. I had a fight yesterday, and I mean to have one to-day if they do not let the prisoners clear." They now resumed the march. The force consisted of two companies of riflemen, and one of mounted men, numbering in all about one hundred and forty. The horsemen marched two abreast armed with drawn swords. The footmen carried rifles, at a trail, in single file. One of the companies was commanded by a Captain Stahler, and wore tri-colored cockades on their hats. Fries marched in front of the riflemen and was apparently in command.

The appearance of this large armed force, so close at hand, created great confusion and excitement, not only at the tavern but throughout the town. A conflict between them and the marshal's posse was now thought inevitable. The inhabitants and strangers in the town flocked around the scene of action to watch the course of events. The marshal had a force of less than twenty men to protect eighteen prisoners, who were merely placed in different rooms in the tavern, without being further restrained of their liberty. When the insurgents were known to be coming, the prisoners were told their friends were at hand prepared to take them away, but they did not wish to be rescued: The force arrived about one o'clock in the day; marched into the yard in front of the tavern; halted, the horsemen dismounting, and the riflemen passing around the house drew up in the rear of the horses and rested on their arms. The men kept well in ranks, and appeared to be under good control. The marshal doubled his guard over the prisoners and stationed two at the bottom and two at the top of the stairs, armed with pistols. Fries went into the tavern, accompanied by two of his men, and requested the sentinel at the foot of the stairway to let him go up to see the marshal. Word was sent up to Colonel Nichols, who came forward and told the guard to let Captain Fries pass up. When he came to the marshal, Fries informed him he had come for the prisoners, and demanded their release. The marshal replied this was out of his power, but if he were determined to take them, he must get them the best way he could. Soon after Fries and his force arrived, Captain Jarrett came up, and the men saluted him with cheers. He had been to Philadelphia to surrender himself and be discharged on bail, and had just returned. He had an interview with the marshal who requested him to get the men to withdraw. This he promised to do, but he either had no influence or did not choose to exercise it. He remained about there some two hours, but took no steps to quell the disturbance. After the interview with the marshal, Fries returned to the guard and told his followers the result of it. Upon learning this they became quite violent and expressed a determination to have the prisoners at every risk. They abused Eyerley, the commissioner, and all who had assisted him, and towards them appeared to be more enraged than at the marshal.

The insurgents now prepared to take the prisoners by force if they should not be given up peaceably. Fries told his men that four or five of the sentinels had to be passed, and begged them not to fire until the marshal's posse had fired upon them; he would go on before them and expected to get the first blow. He cautioned them a second time, not to fire first, and promised to give the word as soon as he was fired upon, when they must help themselves. He then gave the command, and his men followed toward the tavern. They came on with a rush and succeeded in getting into the entry in considerable numbers, where they were met by the marshal's posse. A struggle took place between them, which resulted in the posse clearing the entry of the enemy. Esquire Horsfield came down stairs while the contest was going on, and, seeing that great excitement prevailed, he made his way through the crowd up-stairs again to the landlord, Mr. Levering, and prevailed upon him to close the bar, as liquor stimulated the disturbance. This impulse maddened the crowd, and they returned to the charge with greater fury than before, yelling and uttering savage shrieks. They struck the butts of their rifles on the ground, and fairly jumped with rage. They came to the door and a number entered and filled the hall. Those who remained outside pointed their rifles up at the windows to intimidate, and one, who entered thrust the muzzle of his gun up the stairway, threatening to fire. They shouted their determination to have the prisoners. These proceedings caused great consternation among the marshal's posse, who began to grow alarmed for their own safety.

Philip Schlaugh was so much frightened he mounted his horse when the second rush was made, and rode for Easton as fast as his animal could carry him. Esquire Horsfield begged the marshal "for God's sake" to deliver up the prisoners, and worked his way down the stairs to be ready to make his escape. The marshal and his friends, up-stairs at this time in charge of the prisoners, consulted with Judge Henry and others as to what was best to be done. He was advised to surrender the prisoners to Fries. This he refused to do, but said he would march them to Philadelphia, and if the mob thought proper to take them from him, on the way, it would be their act, not his, and he told them to prepare immediately to start for the city. Several refused to go, saying they would not thus endanger their lives, but if he would suffer them to return to their homes they would meet him in Philadelphia on Monday or Tuesday following. Fries was still demanding their release and threats of bodily harm were made against Eyerley, Henry and others, in case the prisoners were not given up.

The marshal, considering the lives of these gentlemen in danger, rather than expose them to injury, concluded to deliver the prisoners to Fries, and they were released and turned over to him. In a few minutes there was not an armed man on the ground, while the people of the town and neighborhood, who had collected as witnesses of the proceedings, quietly dispersed and returned to their homes. The contest was bloodless and the insurgents won.

THE PRESIDENT ISSUES HIS PROCLAMATION.

Immediately, after the rescue of the prisoners at Bethlehem, John Fries returned to his home in Milford township, but far from satisfied with the part he had taken in the affair. The excitement having subsided and reflection assumed its wonted sway, he doubted the propriety of his course, and began to have fears that he and his friends had gone beyond legal resistance. Like every man, who places himself in the wrong, he was anxious to unburden his mind by talking with others upon the subject, in the hope of justifying his conduct. For this purpose he went to see John Jamison, an old acquaintance, two days after the occurrence, to whom he gave a full account of the affair at Bethlehem, and the part he took in it. He threw the blame upon the Germans, who he said, he could do nothing with as they had gotten the idea into their heads General Washington was opposed to the law, and therefore they need not allow it to be carried into execution.

An effort was now made to harmonize matters so the assessments could be taken, thus putting an end to the disturbance that had so long agitated this and neighboring counties. It was agreed among the leading men in the disaffected districts of Bucks the proper course would be to meet and choose a committee from the three counties. For this purpose a meeting was called at the tavern of Conrad Marks, Monday, March 15th, which some 200 people attended from the three counties. A committee of four men from each county was appointed, with authority to consider the situation, and report what was best to be done under the circumstances. We have not been able to secure the names of all on the committee, but among them were: John Jamison, George Kline, Daniel Roberts, Conrad Marks, Dr. Baker, a man named Davis and Captain Jarrett. They advised the people to desist further opposition to the assessors and other officers in the execution of their duties, and enjoined upon them to give due submission to the laws of their country. This seemed to be the sentiment of all present at the meeting, and no dissent was experienced. The people of Lower Milford were now in favor of having the assessments made, but, Mr. Roberts, upon being consulted, was not willing they should choose an assessor, but if Mr. Clark, who had not yet given up his commission, would take the rates, it would answer every purpose. A second meeting was advertised to be held at George Mitchell's tavern on March 25th, to take the sense of the people upon the subject of permitting Clark to make the assessments. Fries was at the meeting held at Conrad Marks, and, as it does not appear he took any part in the proceedings, he probably quietly acquiesced with others in the peaceable measures adopted. Upon this occasion he and Mitchell had some conversation on the subject, when he admitted his former resistance to the law, a fact he never denied. He now expressed a willingness to give in his submission, and allow the law to be enforced. Apparently wishing to make some amends for his former harsh treatment of the officers, he told Jacob Huber that his house should not be assessed until he had given the assessors a dinner, and that if he were not at home when they came, his son would be there to provide for them. With this the opposition to the law in Milford ended, and from that time forward to his arrest, there was no better ordered citizen in the county than John Fries. He returned to his usual occupation, vendue crying, and, if his present good conduct be any evidence, he had entirely repented his previous course.

The marshal kept Judge Peters fully informed of the operations of the insurgents, and also of his own movements. Immediately upon the rescue of the prisoners at Bethlehem he announced the fact to the judge, who laid the matter before the Federal authorities without delay. Upon being thus officially informed of the truth of what had heretofore reached him in the shape of rumors, although pretty well authenticated, the President called his cabinet together to deliberate upon the steps to be taken in relation thereto. They were now fully cognizant of the resistance that had been offered to the law, and were satisfied it could not be executed in the disaffected districts unless the opposition should end. It was now determined the President should issue his proclamation, and endeavor, by this mild means to call the deluded disturbers of the peace back to their duty, before a resort was had to harsher measures. For this purpose he caused to be issued, from the seat of government at Philadelphia on March 12, 1799, the following:

By the President of the United States of America:

PROCLAMATION.

“WHEREAS, combinations, to defeat the execution of the laws for the valuation of lands and dwelling houses within the United States, have existed within the counties of Northampton, Montgomery and Bucks, in the State of Pennsylvania, have proceeded in a manner subversive of the just authority of the government, by misrepresentations to render the laws odious, by deterring the officers of the United States to forbear the execution of their functions, and by openly threatening their lives. And, whereas, the endeavors of the well-effected citizens, as well as of the executive officers to conciliate compliance with these laws, have failed of success, and certain persons in the county of Northampton, aforesaid, have been hardy enough to perpetrate certain acts, which, I am advised, amount to treason, being overt acts, of levying war against the United States, the said persons exceeding one hundred in number, and armed and arrayed in warlike manner, having, on the seventh day of the present month of March, proceeded to the house of Abraham Levering, in the town of Bethlehem, and there compelled William Nichols, Marshal of the United States, for the District of Pennsylvania, to desist from the execution of certain legal processes in his hands to be executed, and having compelled him to discharge and set at liberty, certain persons whom he had arrested by virtue of a criminal process, duly issued for offenses against the United States, and having impeded and prevented the commissioners and assessors, in conformity with the laws aforesaid, in the county of Northampton, aforesaid, by threats of personal injury, from executing the said laws, avowing, as the motive of these illegal and treasonable proceedings, an intention to prevent, by force of arms, the execution of the said laws, and to withstand, by open violence, the lawful authority of the United States. And, whereas, by the Constitution and laws of the United States, I am authorized, whenever the laws of the United States shall be opposed, or the execution thereof obstructed in any state, by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by powers, vested in the marshal, to call forth military force to suppress such combinations, and to cause the laws to be duly executed, and I have accordingly determined so to do, under the solemn conviction that the essential interests of the United States demand it.

“Therefore, I, John Adams, President of the United States, do hereby command all persons, being insurgents as aforesaid, and all others whom it may concern, on or before Monday next, being the eighteenth day of the present month, to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes; and I do, moreover, warn all persons whomsoever, against aiding, abetting or comforting the perpetrators of the aforesaid treasonable acts, and I do require all officers and others, good and faithful citizens, according to their respective duties and laws of the land, to exert their utmost endeavors to prevent and suppress such dangerous and unlawful proceedings.

"In testimony thereof, I have caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed to these presents, and signed the same with my hand. Done at the city of Philadelphia, the twelfth day of March in the year of our Lord, 1799, and of the Independence of the said United States of America, the twenty-third.

"By the President:

"(Signed) JOHN ADAMS.

"(Signed) TIMOTHY PICKERING,
"Secretary of State."

The proclamation reached Milford township, on the fifteenth of March. Its appearance created a good deal of excitement and talk among the people, who were now convinced the government was disposed to treat the late disturbance with more seriousness than the participators in it had believed. It was reported to the meeting at Conrad Marks, on the eighteenth, where it became the subject of discussion and conversation. On the evening of the day, it first made its appearance in the township, George Mitchell carried a copy down to Frederick Heaney's to whom he read it, who agreed to submit to it; and he made no further opposition. Soon after the appearance of the proclamation, a statement of the part John Fries had taken in opposing the law was published in the newspapers; Israel Roberts carried a copy to him to read what was said of him. The account of his conduct, as published, seemed to affect him greatly; and, upon being questioned he admitted he had never before considered the matter in such serious light as he had within a few days. He said he had not slept half an hour for three or four nights, and that he would give all he was worth in the world if the matter were settled and he clear of it. He expressed a willingness to surrender himself if the government would send for him.

The meeting advertised at George Mitchell's tavern, on March 25th was held at that time. About forty persons were present, among them, John Fries and Frederick Heaney. It was agreed that Clark should make the assessments. Neither Fries nor Heaney voted upon the question, but both expressed a willingness that others should do so, and in fact, hoped they might vote for him. They seemed to yield entire obedience to the authorities, and appeared sensible of their previous misconduct. In Northampton county, the reception of the President's proclamation had the same good effect as in Bucks, and almost wholly quieted the disturbance. But little opposition to the law took place after that date, the most serious being the attack on Mr. Balliet, a collector. He was waylaid upon his return from Bethlehem, whither he had been on business, and so severely beaten a physician was brought from that place to attend him. His injuries however, proved not to be very serious, and he soon recovered. About the same time Henry Hartman, Adam Stephen and Henry Shankweiler, of Millerstown, went to Philadelphia, and surrendered themselves to the Federal authorities, and entered into bail before Judge Peters for their appearance. These men were among the most violent opposers of the law in Northampton county. The opposition to the law had the effect of causing a repeal of the provisions of the house tax, requiring a statement of the windows of each dwelling, at the sessions of 1798-99, and before the most serious disturbances had taken place.

The reader, no doubt, will be as much astonished as the writer, at the course of the government after this period. From and after March 25th John Fries and his aiders and abettors gave their entire submission to the authorities, and comported themselves as quietly as the best citizens. They allowed their property to be assessed, and acquiesced in the law being carried into execution. Under all the circumstances it does not appear that the extreme measures afterwards pursued were called for, but that a lenient government, such as ours professes to be, should have overlooked the faults and even offences of the past, in consideration that a very obnoxious law, and at best of questionable propriety, was allowed to go into full force and effect. The pursuing of Fries, in this view of the case, had the appearance of persecution, which created greater sympathy, in his behalf, than would otherwise have been extended to him.

The President's proclamation gave the proceedings of the insurgents, in Bucks and Northampton, an importance they otherwise would not have received; and, from this time forward to the conclusion of the "Rebellion;" it was a National affair, and attracted the attention of all sections of the Union. Many expected to see another "Western Insurrection" or a "Shay's Rebellion," with a more disastrous termination. The timid friends of republican government were alarmed lest this disturbance might be a rock on which the ship of State would founder and go to pieces, while the enemies of our institutions predicted such would be the result, and appeared delighted at the prospective overthrow of the government.

The President caused his proclamation to be immediately sent to the Governor of Pennsylvania, then in Philadelphia attending upon the session of the legislature, and Governor Mifflin transmitted a copy to the assembly, accompanied by the following message:

Message of the Governor of Pennsylvania, to the Two Houses of Assembly:

"Gentlemen:—It is announced, by proclamation issued by the President of the United States, dated the 12th inst. that combinations, to defeat the execution of the laws for the valuation of lands and dwelling houses within the United States, have existed in the counties of Northampton, Montgomery and Bucks, in the State of Pennsylvania: That in the judgment of the President it is necessary to call for the military force in order to suppress the combinations aforesaid, and cause the laws aforesaid to be duly executed; and that the President has accordingly determined to do so, under the solemn conviction that the essential interest of the United States demands it.

"Though I have received no communication from the President on this important occasion, yet it is my duty, as executive magistrate of Pennsylvania, to call your attention to the subject, that if any means ought to be taken on the part of the state to co-operate with the Federal government, they may be devised and authorized by the Legislature.

"(Signed) THOMAS MIFFLIN.

"Philadelphia, March 14, 1799."

The matter was referred to a committee of the House, which made report condemning the disturbance in the strongest terms, but proceeded to say, that as the President had taken proper steps to quell the insurrection, they did not deem it necessary for the State to take any action in the matter; but whenever it should become necessary to co-operate with the general government they would do so cheerfully. To the report was added the following resolution, but was stricken out on its passage:

Resolved, "That the Governor be, and is hereby requested to cause full and due inquiry into the causes of the said riots, to be made, and to make special report to this House thereupon, and particularly of any circumstances which may be alleged, or discovered, tending to show the origin of the same agency of foreign incendiaries, in the seditious views of domestic traitors."

TROOPS CALLED OUT TO SUPPRESS THE INSURRECTION.

While the legislature took no further action concerning the house tax troubles, the representatives from Northampton county issued an address to the people of the state, in which they say that, on a recent visit to their constituency, they found nothing that "looks like an insurrection." They were highly indignant at the course of the Federal government, as were the people of the state, generally. There was now a change of policy; the "Fries Rebellion" was relegated to the military arm for treatment.

On March 20th the secretary of war made the following requisition on Governor Mifflin for militia to assist in quelling the insurrection:

"WAR DEPARTMENT, March 20, 1799.

"SIR:—To suppress the insurrection now existing in the counties of Northampton, Bucks, and Montgomery, in the State of Pennsylvania, in opposition to the laws of the United States, the President has thought it best to employ a military force, to be composed, in part, of such of the militia of Pennsylvania whose situation and state of preparation will enable them to march with promptitude. As the corps of militia first desired on this occasion are the troops of cavalry belonging to this city, and one troop from each of the counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester, Montgomery, and Lancaster, these troops I have the honor to request your Excellency will order to hold themselves in readiness to march, on, or before the 28th instant, under the command of Brigadier General Macpherson.

"I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant.

"(Signed) JAMES MCHENRY.

"His Excellency, THOMAS MIFFLIN."

Upon receipt of the secretary of war's communication, Governor Mifflin addressed the following letter to the adjutant-general of the state, directing him to issue general orders for complying with the President's request:

"Philadelphia, March 20, 1799, 3 o'clock p. m.

"SIR:—The Secretary of War has this moment communicated to me, the President's intention to employ a military force, in suppressing the insurrection now existing in the counties of Northampton, Bucks and Montgomery, with a request that the Troops of Cavalry, belonging to this city, and a troop from each of the counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester, Montgomery and Lancaster, may be ordered to hold themselves in readiness to march on, or before, the 28th instant, under the command of Brigadier-General Macpherson.

"You will, therefore, issue general orders for complying with the President's request; and communicate by express with the commanding officers of the several corps. As soon as the troops are ready to march you will make your report to me, sending the returns of the officers from time to time as you receive them. I am, sir,

"Your most obedient Servant,

"(Signed) THOMAS MIFFLIN.

"To Peter Baynton, Esq., Adjutant General of Militia of Pennsylvania."

In obedience to the order of his immediate commander in chief, Adjutant General Baynton issued orders calling into service a portion of the militia of the state as follows:

"GENERAL ORDERS.

"PHILADELPHIA, March 20, 1799.

"The following corps of cavalry are to hold themselves in readiness to march on, or before, the 28th instant:

"Captain Dunlap's, Captain Singer's, Captain Morrells, Captain Leeper's, of the city of Philadelphia; Captain Leshner's of the county of Philadelphia; Captain Sims, of the county of Bucks; Captain Taylor's of the county of Chester; Captain Montgomery's, of the county of Lancaster, and Captain Kennedy's of the county of Montgomery.

"Officers commanding the above troops of Cavalry will make report to the Adjutant-General as soon as their respective corps are ready to march.

"By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

(Signed) "PETER BAYNTON.

"Adjutant-General of the Militia of Pennsylvania."

Of the quota of troops called for, one company of cavalry was taken from Bucks and another from Montgomery, but Northampton was so far gone in rebellion her militia were not thought reliable, and none were taken from that county. The President designated William Macpherson as commander of the troops about to make the expedition into Bucks and Northampton, and, to give him sufficient rank, he was appointed a Brigadier-General in the United States army on March 18th. At the time he held the same position in the militia of Pennsylvania, which he resigned on the 22nd so as to accept the new honors that awaited him. General Macpherson resided in Philadelphia, and, after the Revolution raised and commanded a celebrated volunteer corps known as the "Macpherson Blues," which, in its day, was the best drilled corps of citizen soldiery in the country. The troop of cavalry ordered out from Bucks belonged to the lower end of the county, and was commanded by Captain Walter Sims. He was preparing to leave the country when the order of the adjutant-general was issued, and, the next day, tendered his resignation as captain. The letter was addressed to the first lieutenant, William Rodman, and answered on the 23rd in the name of the company. As we have not found any evidence of an election to fill the vacancy of Captain Sims being held before the troop marched, it probably went out under Lieutenant Rodman. General Macpherson subsequently ordered out a company of cavalry from Cumberland county.

Not considering the militia called out sufficient to quell the disturbance the War Department ordered all the regulars that could be spared from other service to join them. The number was about 500, and they were ordered to rendezvous at Newtown and Bristol and from there proceed to the seat of war. Two companies left New York, March 17, for Bristol, there to await the arrival of other troops; a detachment under Captain John Henry reached Trenton from New York on the 23rd, encamped there over night, and marched to Newtown the next morning, there to await further orders. On the 21st a detachment of artillery, under Lieutenant Woolstencroft, passed through Harrisburg from Reading; on the 27th Captain Irvine's artillery marched from Carlisle; and, on the 30th a company commanded by Captain Shoemaker, sixty strong, passed through Lancaster, all for the same destination. The President also made requisition on the executive of New Jersey for two thousand militia, to hold themselves in readiness to march. Of this force the eight troops of cavalry were to be prepared to march at a moments notice. The order provides that, "Those who shall be warned for duty in consequence of these orders are to take care that their swords be not loose, but well riveted in their belts, that their blades be sharp and bright, their pistols clean, and in good order for videt duty; their horses at all times well shod, fed, and gently exercised, their saddles and valise pads well stuffed, and their girths and breast plates sufficiently strong." This order was issued on March 22nd. As Governor Mifflin was an old soldier he understood the importance of minute directions on such occasion. At a meeting of Captain Mosher's company of infantry, at Lancaster, it was resolved they were ready to march at a moment's notice for the support of the government. The Daily Advertiser of March 30th, says that various detachments of regular troops are already on the march for Northampton, which will, it is supposed, form a body of about 500 men.

The time for the marching of the force from Philadelphia under the immediate command of General Macpherson, was fixed for April 3rd, and on the first instant the following orders were issued.

"GENERAL ORDERS.

"The troops, which are under orders to march on Wednesday, the 3rd, inst., will assemble on their own parades precisely at eight o'clock, a. m., on that day in a complete state of preparation to take up the line of march.

"The different commanding officers will receive their instructions as to the route, &c., on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, for which purpose they will attend at my quarters. Lieutenant John Williams of the 2nd troop of cavalry, of the Blues, is appointed aide-de-camp, and is to be respected accordingly.

"(Signed) WILLIAM MACPHERSON,
"Brigadier-General.

"Philadelphia, April 1, 1799."

For some reason, not explained, the march of the troops was delayed until Thursday, April 4th, at eight o'clock a. m., to which effect orders were issued on the 2nd. The command was to rendezvous on the evening of that date at the Spring House tavern, on the Ridge Road, sixteen miles from Philadelphia, whence they were to march for the disaffected districts.

Despite the orders to march on the 4th, the entire force did not leave the city on that day. One company of United States artillery, commanded by Captain Elliott, left the city on the 3rd, the day first named, and, on Friday, the 5th, two troops of volunteer cavalry, and the four city troops of horse, got off, but the main body, under the command of General Macpherson in person, left the morning of the 4th. They assembled at their quarters at an early hour; thence proceeded to the place of general rendezvous, and took up the march amid the shouts of the populace. As they passed through the city to the sounds of martial music, with flying colors, and "decked in all the pomp, pride and circumstance of glorious war," they created a great sensation. The streets were lined with citizens who had turned out to witness the display; and while the men whirled their hats and shouted their huzzas, the ladies waved their handkerchiefs and otherwise manifested their admiration of the glittering pageant. But once since the close of the war of Independence had so large a body of troops been called together in this section of the Union, and, upon this occasion, the number, as well as the nature of their service, caused the display to receive more than usual eclat. Passing out of the city the troops struck the Ridge Road, along which they marched to the Spring House, Montgomery county, where they made their camp the same evening.

As they marched through the country, the people flocked to the highways to gaze at the "Federal Army," as they called it, but, as the expedition was disapproved, they received but few marks of approbation in the rural districts.

Headquarters was still at the Spring House on the 9th on which day General Macpherson issued an address to the inhabitants of the disaffected districts. It was published in German, and the object appears to have been to call the people back to their duty; but inasmuch as they had ceased their opposition to the law some time before, and quietly submitted to its provisions, the address was uncalled for and without effect. The advent of the troops had a tendency to irritate any existing soreness in the public mind, instead of allaying it, and therefore did harm instead of good. The following is the address:

"William Macpherson, Brigadier-General of the armies of the United States, commander of the troops ordered to act against the insurgents of the counties of Northampton, Montgomery and Bucks, in the State of Pennsylvania, to the people of the aforesaid counties:

"FELLOW CITIZENS:—Being ordered by the President of the United States to employ the troops under my command, or, according to circumstances, further military force to procure submission to the laws of the United States, and to suppress and disperse all unlawful combinations, which have been made to obstruct the execution of the aforesaid laws, or any of them, by main force and power, I, therefore, have thought it proper to inform the people of the said counties, and all others whom it may concern, of the danger to which they expose themselves by combining in unlawful proceedings, or giving any assistance or encouragement to those who are concerned therein; and likewise, to represent to them how just it is to submit to the laws, in general, but particularly to those against which they have opposed themselves in the most violent manner. It cannot be unknown to you, my fellow citizens, nor to any part of the people of the United States that submission to the laws, constitutionally made, is absolutely necessary for the support of the government; and that in a republic, where laws are made by general consent, this consent must be manifested by the majority of such persons as have been appointed for that purpose by the people in general, according to the constitution."

After pointing out the duty and necessity of the people to submit to the laws when made, he proceeds to discuss the constitutional power of Congress to lay the tax in question, and points out the article under which the law was passed. "The United States were threatened with the resentment of a very powerful, very ambitious and very revengeful nation," and that the tax was necessary to raise money in order "to provide for the common defense and general welfare" of the country. He next speaks of the tax and the manner in which it was to be assessed, of which he says:

"In laying this tax Congress paid the greatest attention to the situation and wants of the people, and distributed it in such a manner the burden almost totally falls on the richer part, and the poorer class are greatly screened from the effects thereof. It is laid on land, dwelling houses and slaves; but as there are no slaves in this State, the whole tax falls upon the lands and dwelling houses. The lands are to be taxed exactly to their value, be the owner whom he may, but the man whose house, outhouse and lot, not exceeding 2 acres, are worth less than $100.00 has nothing to pay; and if it were worth $100.00 the tax would be only $.20. According to the same rule, other houses of a higher value pay as follows: If worth $200.00, 40 cents; $300.00, 60 cents; $400.00, 80 cents, and $500.00, one dollar, from which you will perceive, my fellow citizens, that the house tax is according to the value of the house at 20 cents to $100.00; but for houses from $500.00 to a $1,000.00 value the tax rises for each $100.00, 30 cents, so that a house of the value of $600.00 will have to pay six times 30 cents or $1.80. If worth $700.00, $2.10; $800.00 $2.40; $900.00, $2.70; $1,000.00, $3.00.

"At this rate the rich man, with a house rated at $1,000.00 has to pay three times as much tax as the poor man whose house is rated at half that sum, viz: $500.00; and thus the tax operates progressively to the most costly houses and opulent people, until the value of their houses is taxed in proportion, five times as high as those of their poorer fellow citizens, whose houses are worth only from $100.00 to $500.00. A house worth $100.00 pays 20 cents, which is only the one-fifth part of one per cent. of its value, and consequently five times as much in proportion as the former. Hereby, my fellow citizens, you must be convinced that an opposition to this tax in our counties is not only contrary to the Constitution, the laws, and every principle of good government, but, in itself, inconsistent and ridiculous, as the tax which is opposed is the most easy on the poorest citizens, whom they irritate to opposition. Many of their houses, however, would have no tax to pay, and very few more than $1.00 each, for very few of their houses would be rated at more than $500.00. It is true, they will be subject to a land tax, but the tax on houses must first be deducted from the whole quota of the State, and what is then deficient will be laid upon the land. The houses in this State will probably pay the greatest part of the tax, perhaps the whole, and, in that case, no tax will be laid upon the land, and those whose houses are rated at less than $100.00 will be exempt from the tax. As a further proof of the attention of Congress to the wishes and accommodations of the people, they have, during the last session, repealed that part which required a statement of the windows of each dwelling house, and which, as it afterward appeared, was more disagreeable than necessary or useful. Therefore no further account of the windows has been demanded. To ascertain the value of the lands and houses was a difficult matter, and connected with a great deal of expense, but when once done need not be repeated. Great pains were taken and the most effective measures employed to select people of good character who understood the business well, and whose interest were equally involved with their fellow citizens to have the business accurately executed. Besides, this act is not perpetual, being only for one year, and will not be continued unless the public good demands it, and not otherwise than with the consent of the people through their representatives. As for those who have, in so treasonable a manner, opposed the execution of such lawful, necessary and, for that part of the citizens who are the least able to pay the taxes, indulgent law, there can, therefore, be no excuse. The bad consequences which they draw upon themselves by their criminal conduct, they cannot impute but to their own blindness, obstinacy and malice. On the contrary, every necessary step will and must be taken to bring them, and all others who have aided and abetted them, to submission and trial by due course of law, in order that their punishment may serve as an example to others and prevent a like course in the future. The necessity of employing arms against a number of our fellow citizens is painful, but the consequences must be imputed to those, whose traitorous conduct has produced the present disturbances, and not to government, who, according to its most sacred duties, is obliged to maintain order, and enforce obedience to the laws.

"But all those who return quietly to their homes, and abstain from any participation in these unlawful acts, either through open aid or secret abetting, counsel, or information, shall obtain the utmost protection to their persons and property.

"Every precaution shall be taken that the march of the troops shall not be troublesome to the citizens; all subsistence shall be punctually paid for, and the strictest discipline observed. Let me, therefore, my fellow citizens, warn and entreat you as you love your country and extenuate the happiness consistent with liberty, order and peace; as you wish to avoid the necessity of human bloodshed, which is as much repugnant to my wishes as those of the President; as you abhor the horrors of a civil war, and the crimes and punishment of traitors, let me conjure you to shut your ears against the counsels of those malicious persons who would lead you to destruction in order to satisfy their own ambition, while they screen themselves from punishment due to their crimes; who try to seduce you to take up arms against the law and governments of your country, and involve yourselves in a contest as hopeless as it is criminal, against the power of the United States; who speak to you of peace and liberty while they are kindling civil war; who complain of expense while they are forcing the government to augment them, in order to suppress sedition and revolt; and who plume themselves upon being Republicans, while transgressing the most essential principles of Republican government; to wit: obedience to the laws made by the decision of the majority.

"Therefore, I forewarn you not to aid or abet those violaters of the law in any manner, so that you may avoid a participation of their crimes, and the consequent punishment.

"Given under my hand and seal at Headquarters, April 6, 1799.

"(Signed) WILLIAM MACPHERSON.

"(Signed) JOHN WILLIAMS, Aid-de-Camp."

REV. CHARLES HENRY HELMUTH ISSUES AN ADDRESS.

When the address of General Macpherson was published, it was accompanied by a letter from the Rev. Mr. Helmuth, addressed to the German population in general, and the people of Northampton, in particular:

"TO THE PEOPLE OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY.

Friends and Brethren in the Faith:—Excuse my addressing these lines to you; where there is fire, everybody is bound to extinguish it, and the clergyman is no more to be blamed for lending his aid than any other citizen. I am depressed with anxiety on your account. I know the consequences of conduct like yours; many of you will doubtless be apprehended and confined, some perhaps will pay the forfeit with their lives. You know it is the duty of the clergy of the city to warn such miserable persons, and prepare them as much as in their power for the awful change. My heart was much oppressed.

"I thought, alas! perhaps the same circumstances as those of 1794 will again occur; perhaps other thoughtless people will fall into the same wretched situation because they were ignorant, and were deluded, and what would be your feelings if you had to witness their sorrow and anguish, their agonies of death? You should have warned the miserable creatures; he would then have been saved; but you neglected to warn him, and are therefore responsible for the destruction of him and his. Such was the melancholy reflection that induced me to write these lines.

"I trust that you will think, when you read this, as you may in truth: This man is sincere for our welfare—why then should we think it improper in him to send us this advice? If he even should now and then say some things that are not perfectly agreeable to us we will still take it in good part, for, perhaps he is in the right, perhaps we have been deluded, we may have been deceived. If such be your thoughts you will soon find them perfectly correct.

"You have hitherto entitled yourselves to the character of industrious and religious citizens of the Union, and most of the Germans still deserve that praise; but, sorrowful to relate, you have suffered yourselves to be spurred on to the most abominable injustice, to actual rebellion against the government you yourselves have chosen. How happy it is that your number is but small, amongst the serious, and that the far greater part of them view your inconsiderate conduct with detestation! You all know that government cannot exist without taxes; at least your Bible should so instruct you; read Romans, 12th chap. 1-7; read it attentively.

"Do but reflect reasonably on your conduct. Even the holy passion week have you profaned with the works of actual rebellion. You have undertaken to oppose a tax, which is as favorable to the country people as any tax can possibly be; for the rich inhabitants of the cities pay by far the greatest proportion of it; you have undertaken to oppose the tax which never would have been made had not the government been necessitated to make defensive preparations against the attacks of the French; a nation that aims at the overthrow and destruction of all religion, against a people that would scarcely have dared to attack and plunder us if they had not been certain they had their advocates among us.

"You do not consider the dreadful consequences of such opposition as you have made: I will therefore inform you of some of them.

"In the first place, an army of several thousand men will be marched into your neighborhood; you well know that in spite of every possible attention of commanding officers, excesses will be committed by an army. You will be more or less prevented from following your usual occupations, and yourselves and families will be put in greater terror and apprehension.

"Second, The army will cost money, and the money the government will have to raise by direct taxes, for which you must thank your own opposition. The western expedition in 1794 cost a million of dollars from this you may judge what expenses you will bring upon yourselves and fellow citizens by your scandalous insurrections.

"Thirdly, If you make any further opposition you will necessarily be treated as rebels, and, before a month has passed, many of you will be in prison. They will be torn from their wives and children, and some will probably suffer an ignominious death.

"Alas! my heart bleeds for you. You have been told a thousand falsehoods. You have been told that the militia approved of your violence, and would not march against you. But you have been wrongfully deceived. For my own part I have heard many speak of your conduct, but I have not heard one approve of it; your best friends (if those are your best friends who agreed with you in political opinions) say the occurrences in Northampton are very unjustifiable; the insurgents must be subdued; what would become of us if everybody were to create an insurrection? This is the substance of what is thought and said of your conduct—and you may depend upon it, that the government could, at a very short notice, muster upward of 20,000 men, if such a number were necessary, who would willingly march against you. Every one cries shame! shame! upon you.

"I beseech you to mark well the character of these men who have enticed you to this insurrection. Are there not many of them who spend more money at the taverns in the course of a few evenings than their whole tax amounts to? Honest Christian men will never advise to rebellion, but more especially against a government which has scarcely its equal under the sun. No; they are wicked, restless men, who have deceived themselves and you.

"It is your misfortune that you have suffered the habit, to grow upon you, of scandalizing the government; of cursing, instead of blessing it; and then indeed there are enough to be found who, having particular ends in view, will scheme with you; persons who wish for your friendship on election day, in order that they may get a lucrative office under the very government that they blaspheme. When matters come to extremities, these deluders know perfectly well how to slip their necks out of the halter and let the deluded suffer. These, who, in comparison with the former, are innocent, will be left to bake as their deceivers have brewed. Think of me when you experience this sorrowful truth.

"Alas! you have been most scandalously deceived: from my soul I pity you! But what is now to be done? Listen, and take my advice. It is possible that the Marshal will be sent with an armed force to seize the wretches who opposed him in arms. For God's sake do not let yourselves be prevailed upon to abet those rebels; for should you be found in their company you will certainly be punished with them.

"Rather endeavor to persuade them to deliver themselves up to the proper authority, and this would be the wisest course they could pursue; but if they will not do so give the Marshal every assistance he may require, for it is your duty.

"Take my advice; affection for you and the impulse of conscience have compelled me to write you this letter.

"If you follow my counsels you will do well, if not, I have done my duty. Be assured that I remain your friend,

(Signed)

J. HENRY CHARLES HELMUTH.

"Philadelphia, March 28, 1799."

The troops quartered at the Spring House tavern and farm houses in the neighborhood the night of April 4th, and, the next morning several cavalry companies resumed the march up the old Bethlehem road for Seller's tavern. This was the present Sellersville in Rockhill township, Bucks county, on the line of the North Pennsylvania railroad. They got there that day and encamped on the farm of Andrew Schlichter, which, we believe, is still in the family, and was occupied by a grandson a few years ago. General Macpherson probably did not follow with the main body until the 6th, as his address bears that date. There is, however, a conflict as to the date of its publication, for while the address itself is dated the 6th, the Philadelphia Daily Advertiser states it was promulgated on the 5th, the day the cavalry resumed their march. If this date be correct, General Macpherson probably marched with the cavalry. The whole force was now assembled at Sellers tavern, where headquarters was established. Judge Peters arrived at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning to be at hand to bind over for appearance at court, any persons who might be arrested. General Macpherson appointed Robert Goodloe Harper, Esq., an additional aide-de-camp, and other arrangements were made to perfect the organization of the troops, and have them in the best possible shape for the war they were about entering on.

From this point the active operations of the campaign were to commence. They were within striking distance of the houses of the leaders of the disturbances in Bucks county, whom they sought to secure. Fries was the first object of capture, and, the same day the troops encamped at Sellers' tavern, a scout was organized to effect his arrest. Some of his acquaintances had given General Macpherson information of his whereabouts, and one, a neighbor, agreed to accompany the troops as guide. The detail for this purpose consisted of four companies of calvary, two commanded by Captain Porter and Wharton, but the names of the commanders of the other two we have not been able to learn. The troops left camp soon after noon piloted by David Penrose, who lived at Bunker Hill. It was known he was engaged that day to cry a vendue for one Fries at this place, and it was the intention to capture him while thus employed. They continued their march up the old Bethlehem road in the direction of that point.

In the forenoon when Fries was on his way to the vendue, he passed the residence of William Edwards, father of the late Caleb Edwards, Quakertown, who, with his son, was making fence along the road. Mr. Edwards told Fries he would be arrested if he went to the vendue, and he had better stay away. He replied he was not afraid, and that no one or two men would take him. Edwards said there would be more than two there, but Fries made no reply and continued on his way. He was afoot and accompanied by his little black dog. Mr. Edwards' son soon mounted his father's horse and rode down to the vendue, where a large number of people were collected; and the fact that the troops were expected probably bringing more together than usually assembled at such places. When the troops were first seen approaching, about half a mile below the tavern, Fries was on the head of a barrel, bell in hand crying off an article; this he knocked down to the bidder without much ceremony, then he jumped to the ground and took to his heels. The commanding officer rode up and ordered the people to stand, but, having become alarmed, they did not heed his order, and broke and ran in all directions, pursued by the troopers. Among the others was one Trumbower, who, choosing to trust to his heels, was chased by a soldier. He made for a fence which he mounted and sprang over, but just at this time the trooper rode up and made a stroke at him with his sabre, which he fortunately avoided and the blow fell on the fence. The sabre was broken into three pieces, and Trumbower made his escape. Caleb Edwards ran for his horse which he mounted to ride home; he was stopped by the soldiers; but David Penrose, the guide, coming up, told them to let him go, and he was permitted to ride away.

In the meantime Fries had succeeded in getting away from the crowd and for the time being, eluded his pursuers. In the confusion, which followed the arrival of the troops and the flight of the crowd, it was some little time before an attempt was made to follow him. As none of the command knew him, they had to trust to their guide for his recognition. A search was instituted among those who remained upon the ground and about the premises, and, not finding him, inquiry was made as to the direction he had taken. This information was soon furnished. Upon leaving the vendue ground, Fries made for a nearby swamp, in a meadow on the farm of John Kachline, half a mile from Bunker Hill, where he concealed himself in a bunch of briars. The soldiers distributed themselves through the meadow as he was suspected of being there, and made a thorough search. He would have remained undiscovered, had not the presence of his dog betrayed his hiding place. He offered no resistance. He was brought back to the tavern, when a horse of Samuel Edward's was seized, upon which he was tied and taken under the escort of the troops down to Sellers' tavern, where he was placed in close confinement.

There is a difference in opinion as to the place of capture of Fries. The Philadelphia Advertiser of April 8, 1799, in speaking of the affair, states he was taken in a wood and was not secured until after a pursuit of nearly five miles. Our information was obtained from Caleb Edwards, of Quakertown, who was present at the vendue the day of the arrest, and was conversant with all the facts of the case. We think his statement more reliable than that of a newspaper editor who lived at a distance of thirty miles from the scene of action. The same evening a detachment of cavalry from the first and third city troops left camp about sunset to arrest Eberhart, another of the insurgents. He was taken in his own house, in the night, and, of course, made no resistance. The troops called at the house of several other disaffected persons, but found none of them at home, they having probably fled at their approach. They returned to camp the next morning before day-break, after a ride of between forty and fifty miles. As soon as Eberhart heard of the approach of the troops, he became much alarmed and began to see the danger in which he stood. The day that Fries was taken he called upon Mr. Foulke and begged him to shield him from the military, and pleaded, in extenuation of the opposition he had made to the law, that he was drunk at the time. An officer, who writes from the camp at Sellers' tavern, under the date of April 6th, says when the capture of Fries was announced, "The joy manifested on this occasion was not to be described." The following extract from a letter written at Quakertown, on April 8th, considered the matter in a less serious light, and the writer presumed to turn the campaign and capture of Fries into ridicule. The author was probably an officer or soldier of the command although that fact is not stated. He says:

"It will doubtless afford you much satisfaction to hear of the success of our arms against the rebels. Trexton's splendid naval victory must yield to the superior splendor of the late action, which took place on the 5th inst. in the neighborhood of Quakertown. Fries, the noted insurgent leader, who, by profession, is a vendue cryer, and who, on that account, had obtained some ascendancy over the multitude, was informed on the morning of the day of the action, (which was a day on which he was also to cry a vendue) that the federal troops were in the neighborhood, and that they were resolved to capture him, and all the world beside if they opposed them. Fries laughed at the account, said he would cry vendue in spite of the standing army, and seemed to talk as if he was not afraid of them. However, while he was busily engaged in his work of the lungs, to his great surprise he beheld about half a mile distant, the troops approaching. He carried no arms for his defense but his heels, and, of course the formidable appearance of a regular and disciplined army struck him with such a panic he threw down the fire shovel he was crying and made the best of his way to the woods.

"The troops, with uncommon spirit and intrepidity marched on towards the crowd assembled at the vendue, and, with a menacing air, demanded the leader of the rebels. A boy of about eighteen, never having seen (I suppose) such boldness and intrepidity in military array, fled with uncommon precipitation. Several of the troopers desirous of exhibiting their zeal and activity in the cause of humanity, pursued the poor soul. For some time, by dint of dodging and taking the advantage of fences, he kept them at bay. They grew more and more warm, as the battle increased in difficulty, and at last discharged their pistols at him and shot a hole through his hat; this brought him to the ground. The troops drew their swords, and it is declared, by a person near the scene of action, that they wounded him severely, and would, no doubt, have killed him, had not some of those that were in the war been informed, that the person captured was not Fries, but a Dutch boy, 18!!! Fries had a dog—(this dog, no doubt, will be entitled to a commission or a pension for life for his services)—this dog having missed his master was in search of him. Though as rank a rebel as Fries, no doubt yet it is ten to one that the sharp scented warrior would not have smelt his track, and of course he would have escaped, had it not been for his own officers and federal dog. The troops, understand that Fries had gone such a particular course, and upon some persons among the insurgents panting after him, the troops had the dog as a pilot, till they finally came in sight of the true rebel. Thus was Fries taken by his dog. A dog worth two of Homer's hero's dogs! for he has, in a manner, quelled the formidable insurrection, an insurrection that has called forth the energies of government from all quarters. Now if this Federal dog is treated according to his merit, he will doubtless obtain an appointment in the army; a troop of dogs under his command might be used to great advantage among the savage Germans, and thus might they obtain new honors equal to the dogs of Cortez in South America."

Another informant says that the night after the arrest of Fries, he was taken to the house of Samuel Thomas, father of the late Edward Thomas, of Quakertown, who lived in Richland township, near Lester's tanyard, on the Bethlehem road, where he was confined in a back room of a brick building standing a few years ago, and probably at this time, and, in 1861, inhabited by Enos P. Nace.

After the capture of John Fries, the military endeavored to make a prisoner of his son Daniel, an active youth of 18, who was somewhat implicated with his father in his operations. They attempted to capture him at home, but he eluded them and took to the fields and woods. He was chased by the light horse into what was then called "Smith's Meadow," near Swamp creek. The bogs bore him and he ran across without hinderance, but the horses were too heavy and broke through, one of the riders falling off and breaking his arm. Seeing they could not pursue young Fries across the meadow, they turned back and he escaped. During the imprisonment of his father, Daniel went to Philadelphia to be present at the trial and watch events. The authorities, hearing of him being in the city, made efforts to arrest him, but in this they were frustrated. Information of what was going on being conveyed to his friends, they concealed Daniel in a joiner's shop, until night, when he quietly left for home and reached it in safety. He was never apprehended. He lived and died near Sumneytown, Montgomery county, where he was interviewed in his 78th year and gave these facts from his own lips.

The next day after the arrest of Fries, he was taken before Judge Peters and examined, and what he said was reduced to writing and signed by him. The following is a copy of what was produced at his trial and admitted in evidence against him. The confession is said to have been made voluntarily.

THE EXAMINATION OF JOHN FRIES,
APRIL 6, 1799.

"The examinant, confesses that he was one of the party which rescued the prisoners from the Marshall at Bethlehem; that he was also one of a party that took from the assessors, at Quakertown, their papers and forewarned them against the execution of their duty in making the assessments. The papers were delivered with the consent of the assessors, but without force: perhaps under the awe and terror of the numbers who demanded them, and were by this examinant delivered to the assessors. He confesses that, at the house of Jacob Fries, a paper was written on the evening preceding the rescue of the prisoners at Bethlehem, containing an association or agreement of the subscribers to march for the purpose of making that rescue; but he is not certain whether he wrote that paper. He knows he did not sign it, but it was signed by many persons and delivered to the examinant; he does not know where the paper is. The examinant confesses also, that some weeks ago, he wrote (before the assessors came into that township) an agreement which he, with others signed, purporting that, if an assessment must be made, that they would not agree to have it done by a person who did not reside in the township, but they would choose their own assessor within their township. A meeting has been held in the township since the affair at Bethlehem for the purpose of making such a choice; examinant went to the place of election, but left it before the election opened. The examinant further acknowledges that his motive in going to Bethlehem to rescue the prisoners was not from personal attachment or regard to any of the persons who had been arrested, but proceeded from a general aversion to the law, and an intention to impede and prevent its execution. He thought that the acts for the assessment and collection of a direct tax did not impose the quota equally upon the citizens and therefore were wrong. He cannot say who originally projected the rescue of the prisoners, or assembled the people for the purpose. The township seemed to be all of one mind. A man, unknown to the examinant, came to Quakertown, and said the people should meet at Conrad Marks' to go to Millerstown. The examinant says that, on the march of the people to Bethlehem, he was asked to take the lead, and did ride on before the people until they arrived at Bethlehem. The examinant had no arms, and took no command, except that he desired the people not to fire until he should give them orders, for he was afraid, as they were so much enraged, there would be bloodshed. He begged them, for God's sake, not to fire, unless they had orders from him, or unless he should be shot down, and then they might take their own command. That he returned the papers of the assessors, which had been delivered into his hands, back to the assessors privately, at which the people were much enraged, and suspected him (Fries) of having turned from them, and threatened to shoot him, between the house of Jacob Fries and Quakertown."

(Signed) "JOHN FRIES.

Taken April 6, 1799, before Richard Peters.

As soon as this examination had been taken, Fries and Eberhart were sent off to Philadelphia under the escort of a detachment of the city cavalry, where they arrived the same evening, Saturday, and were lodged in jail to await their trial for treason. Their arrival and commitment were announced in the newspapers the next morning, and created considerable excitement.

The troops broke camp at Sellers' tavern and marched for Quakertown, where they encamped, it is supposed, on the 6th. They pitched their tents at three different points within the limits of the borough, two companies being located at Penrose's pottery, belonging to the late Richard Moore. The same evening a detachment of cavalry was despatched in pursuit of persons who were accused of having participated in the late disturbance. They were absent from camp all night, and after a hard scout returned the next morning with several prisoners. It was reported that Clergyman Eyerman was of the number, but this turned out to be a false rumor. He had put himself out of harm's way immediately upon his release at Bethlehem. While the army remained encamped at Quakertown the troops were active in the pursuit of the disaffected, and scouts were sent out in all directions to apprehend them. On the seventh a detachment was sent into the region known as the "Rocks," where some of the insurgents resided, and captured several of them, whom they brought to camp, and placed in confinement. The troops remained here until the 8th when they struck their tents and marched for Millerstown, Northampton county. The presence of the troops at Quakertown inspired terror among the inhabitants in all that region of country, and their conduct caused great distress and suffering. In their zeal to arrest the guilty their displeasure often fell upon the innocent. Armed parties patrolled the county in all directions, day and night, and it was only necessary to cast suspicion upon the most upright citizen to secure his arrest. Many persons took advantage of this state of things to have revenge upon their personal or political enemies. The houses of quiet, unoffending people were entered at the dead hour of night by armed men, and the husband torn from the arms of his wife and screaming children; and their terror was greatly increased by the belief that death awaited those who should be taken, whether they were innocent or guilty. The scenes of distress which took place among these poor people, upon such occasions, are described by the eye-witnesses as heart-rending. In many cases the troops added insult to the injury, by exulting over the misfortunes of the poor creatures who had fallen into their hands. So general was the alarm that many of the inhabitants, persons of considerable property and respectable standing, came in and surrendered themselves to the military authorities.

THE ARMY MARCHES FROM QUAKERTOWN TO ALLENTOWN, AND RETURNS TO PHILADELPHIA VIA READING.

While the troops were encamped at Quakertown and engaged in pursuit of those denounced as insurgents, an alarming system of terror prevailed. This was carried to such extent that a large majority of both officers and men, belonging to the expedition, became dissatisfied and disgusted with the duties they were called upon to perform. An officer thus writes to a friend in Philadelphia from camp under date of April 8, 1799.

"The system of terror here, I am sorry to say, is carried far beyond what, in my opinion, the public good requires. Detachments are out every day and night apprehending one or other individuals. I am well informed that from the time the members from this district in the State Legislature went amongst the people and stated to them the impropriety of interfering with the civil power, the magistrates could have effected everything that government could require in the apprehension of any person in the district. There is scarcely an officer or private in this expedition who is not satisfied of this fact. The scenes of distress which I have witnessed among these poor people, I cannot describe, when we have entered their houses. Conceive your home entered at the dead hour of night by a body of armed men, and yourself dragged from your wife and screaming children. These poor people are extremely ignorant, but they have feelings, and they always consider that death awaits any one who is seized, be he culpable or not. I am sorry to say there have been any instances of an inhuman disposition exhibited; they have not indeed been many, but vaunting exultation over men, even if they are guilty, when they are captives, is neither a proof of generosity or courage. Great numbers of the inhabitants are coming in voluntarily and surrendering themselves; many of them persons of respectable property, and of good standing in the neighborhood."

The following is an extract from another letter, written from the same place while the army was encamped there and of the same date, which will give the reader some idea of the unpleasant state of feeling existing in the section of Bucks county where the disturbance had taken place:

"Some of the townships have been at variance ever since the commencement of our Revolution; and they have been characterized according as they took part for or against Britain, as Tory or Whig townships; they consist for the most part of Germans. The townships denominated Tory have always been attached to Mr. Adam's administration; the others of course had different politics. Much bitterness has been constantly exhibited on both sides; but an anecdote, which occurred on this occasion, will, however, give you a closer view than a general relation. It appears that persons of both descriptions were opposed to the window tax, or rather the Tories were opposed to the tax, and the Whigs to the assessors. The landlord of the house in which we were quartered had given information against several of his neighbors who lived in a 'Whig' township, and said they should be hanged together with Fries, but particularly Fries for holding a captain's commission in the last war. A person present, who heard him make this declaration, supposing he meant in the British service, said it was not so; the landlord replied that it was true, and that a reference to the proceedings of Congress would show it, as well as the name of Continental battalion in which he served."

Among the letters written from Quakertown, while the troops were encamped there was one giving the name, and number, and persons who were taken, or had surrendered, which breathes quite a belligerent spirit toward the unfortunates implicated, as the following extract will show:

"We are here now two days, and shall proceed immediately to Millerstown; when we reach that place I expect to be permitted to return home. We have been successful since we set out, and shall have a drove of rascals sufficient to fill a jail; we have already taken thirty-one of them; against which there is sufficient proof to convict of high treason; the others of misdemeanor. Some of them are frightened almost to death; the fear they are in is punishment almost sufficient for the greatest of the offenders. By to-morrow night we shall have about fifty more bad fellows; small fry are admitted to bail. The main guard is pretty well filled.

"Some of the above persons came in and surrendered themselves, by way of making peace, which saved the troops the trouble of going for them, and may save their lives as they expect by it."

The following are the names given and the offences for which they were arrested:

TREASON.

John Fries, John Everhard, Jacob Huber, John Huber, Frederick Heaney, Christopher Sacks, Jacob Klein, Sr., John Klein, Jr., Daniel Klein, Abraham Braith, Jacob Klein, John Getman, William Getman and Daniel Weidner.

MISDEMEANOR.

Aaron Samsel, Peter Hamberg, Abraham Strong, Peter Herdick, Jacob Huber, Henry Huber, Michael Breich, Abraham Heidrick, Henry Mumbower, George Mumbower, Peter Gable, Jacob and Daniel Gable.

HELD AS WITNESSES.

George Mitchell and William Thomas.

These sum up fifteen for treason; fourteen for misdemeanor, and two as witnesses, thirty-one in all. There is hardly a name in the list that cannot be found among the residents of the German districts, of Bucks to-day, and are among the most prosperous, intelligent and respectable citizens.

The army remained in camp at Quakertown until April 8th, when the march was resumed toward Bethlehem, Northampton county, in which region of country there were many insurgents whose arrest was desired. On that day they marched but ten miles, when they again halted, and encamped, as some arrests were to be made in that neighborhood. It was a great relief to the inhabitants of Quakertown and the surrounding country when the army left that place, and many a prayer that they might never return was offered up. The absence of the soldiers and harassing scouts soon restored the usual quiet in that section of the county, although the interest in the campaign was still kept up. Of the prisoners named, 19 were sent to Philadelphia, under an escort of cavalry commanded by Lieutenant Melbecke, where they arrived on Thursday, the 18th inst., and were turned over to the civil authorities. Conrad Marks, who will be remembered as an active participant in Bucks county, surrendered himself on the 17th to the deputy marshal. A writ had been issued for his arrest and several parties of cavalry were sent in pursuit of him, but he eluded them all, and, at last, thought proper to give himself up. He offered bail, but it was refused, and he was sent to the city and thrown into prison.

The army now proceeded to Millerstown (now Macungie, Lehigh county), which they reached on the 10th, and again encamped. We have no means of knowing how long they remained here, but probably did not leave before about the 16th. While encamped here they were joined by two more troops of horse, and a column of infantry. A grand review and inspection was held, and the troops are said to have presented a very handsome appearance. From this point parties of cavalry were sent out in pursuit of the insurgents, and some arrests were made but neither the number nor names is given. It is related that one of the captured was brought before a well-known magistrate and was anxious to know the fate that awaited him, to which the official replied with becoming dignity, "in a fortnight the Circuit Court will met, when you will be tried, and, in a fortnight after, will be in hell, sir." This circumstance is mentioned to show the bitterness of the times, more than for any other purpose. Many excesses were also committed while the troops lay at Millerstown, and the same system of terror was maintained. An officer writing from camp under date of April 11th, says:

"With respect to military operations, they still continue and the number of persons confined in heavy irons increases. I before mentioned to you that some old men have suffered from their fetters. Several of them, who have been accoutred, marched through the country under a heavy guard. Bail to any amount has been offered for their appearance to take their trial, but this would not suit the system of terror, nor would it act as a warning to those who may be disposed to vote as they think best at the next election. All the efforts that have been made, however, will not produce resistance, and when I tell you that a number of the troops who derive their authority from the Federal government, live at free quarters on the people, you will not question their patience."

Another officer writing from the same place, under date of April 10th, thus speaks of the expedition, and the unhappy situation of things while the army remained in the country.

"We are now quartered in a Whig town where the people have always been true Republicans. It appears now to be converted into an actual war between Whig and Tory. The people of Quakertown I find have always been opposed to those who advocate arbitrary measures, and the funding system and standing army. This place, however, appears to have been one of the places where the greatest opposition has been made to the assessors, who, being many of them engaged in hostility against the revolution must, of necessity, have excited disgust and abhorrence in the breasts of those who had fought, or whose fathers had bled, in fighting against the British. The inhabitants are principally Germans. Nearly all the male inhabitants, on the approach of our army, fled from their homes, and their wives and children exhibit a very unhappy scene of distress. Had I conceived that some things, which I have witnessed here could have taken place, I should never have given my consent to march a mile on the expedition.

"One effect produced by the distress is that every individual whom I meet, is disgusted, and a sentiment generally prevails, which, contrary to expectation, will, I apprehend, completely destroy the federal influence at the next election. Had the Governor seconded Messrs. Hartzell, and the Senator from this district, by ordering a single troop of volunteer horse that is here under drums, I am persuaded that this business, of which so much has been made, would have terminated within 24 hours that it took place; and that no other weapons than reasoning would have been found necessary. Great numbers of the people have surrendered; there are about seven detained in irons and I am grieved to see among the suffering some old men, whose wrists are raw to the bone with the hand-cuffs. I would wish to see more humanity among my countrymen, but unhappily we copy too much the cruel and unfeeling practices of the English.

"A liberty pole had been erected in this place, which was cut down by force on the approach of the army. The inn-keeper, near whose house it stood, was arrested when we came up, although he had been previously at Philadelphia and given bail; but, when a volunteer army proceeds thus what would the people have to fear from mercenaries, who have no interest at stake, no principle but obedience to arbitrary orders."

A third letter written from the same point says:

"There are several of these poor creatures who are implicated by information, stirred up in the neighborhood, from the embers of old quarrels and animosities, whose distress is very great. Numbers of them, I am informed, are willing to give themselves up, relying on their innocence, provided they were sure of being admitted to bail; but it is generally understood they will not. Pray, is there no magistrate in the city who has authority to receive bail? Is there no one who feels a sentiment that justice is incompatible with cruelty, and that the mildness of our laws does not authorize the infliction of severe punishment before trial and execution? I can scarcely persuade myself that I tread on the soil of Pennsylvania when I witness the sufferings of these poor, well-meaning but ignorant Germans. They were treated in no respect like citizens of the same country."

The army marched from Millerstown to Allentown, but we cannot fix the exact date of leaving Millerstown. It was after April 15th for the troops were there then. They remained at Allentown only a few days, and, while there, do not appear to have been active in making arrests and committing excesses as at other points. While the army lay here an amusing occurrence took place which is thus related by one who belonged to the expedition:

"One night a sentinel, stationed near a wagon, reported that he heard some person about to make an attack upon it. The alarm was given, the drums beat to arms, and the whole command turned out. The arms were loaded with ball cartridge, and a member of Congress was sent out to reconnoitre, who, upon his return, reported that the enemy (insurgents) were in the rear of the baggage in great force. The troops marched to the point, and a platoon was ordered to fire. Some heavy groan was heard, and a body fell to earth. Some of the boldest ventured forward, and behold they had shot a bull which was making free with the forage that hung out of the tail of one of the wagons. The animal was paid for. This is believed to be the only thing the army killed on the expedition."

From Allentown the troops marched to Reading, in Berks county, where they arrived on Saturday, April 20, at one o'clock. Writs had been issued for the arrest of sixteen persons in Greenwich township, but fourteen of them came in and surrendered themselves, and the troops were sent in pursuit of the other two, but they could not be found. The army made no stay at this place, but almost immediately resumed the march for Philadelphia, where a portion of the cavalry arrived on the 22nd and the remainder, with General Macpherson, the next day. The regulars did not return to the seat of government at the same time as the volunteer corps, but remained encamped there for a while.

While the army was in Reading, the members of one of the troops of volunteer cavalry committed a gross outrage upon the person of one of the most respectable citizens of the town, without the least cause or provocation, which created great indignation in the community.

This consisted in forcibly taking Jacob Schneider, the editor of the Reading Adler to the market house, and publicly whipping him, by the order of his captain. The following is Mr. Schneider's own account of the affair, taken from the Adler, of April 22, 1799:

"On Saturday afternoon last, the troops, who were sent to seize some persons in Northampton, called 'insurgents,' on their return from that expedition, arrived in this town, and last night and this morning they all, except the regulars, marched for their respective homes.

"It is an old proverb, but certainly a true one, that in every fold, be it great or small, there can be found rotten sheep, so it happened here. This army was small, yet it was not without its rotten members, and some extremely so. But among the whole there were none that exceeded Captain Montgomery's troop, of Lancaster Light Horse, not because, as they boasted themselves, it was their trade to catch rebels and abuse them—but because they carried their trade so far as to enter the houses and abuse peaceable and inoffending citizens, in a manner the most scandalous and cowardly.

"As for example, a part of them came to my printing office on Saturday last, not as men of character desirous of supporting the law and the security of the peaceable citizens, but like a banditti of robbers and assassins. They tore the clothes from my body, and forcibly dragged me from my house before their Captain, who certainly proved himself worthy the command of his corps. He ordered his troops to take me to the public market place and give me twenty-five lashes on the bare back, and they proceeded to obey his orders accordingly, and certainly would have fulfilled them exactly had not some of Captain Leiper's troop, of Philadelphia, interfered, reproached them for their illegal and tyrannical conduct, in consequence of which only a part of Captain Montgomery's sentence was inflicted (six lashes)."

Complaint of this outrage was made to General Macpherson by Colonel Heister and Colonel Frailly, but he did nothing, and no redress could be had. Mr. Schneider was anti-Federalist.

The prisoners in custody were confined in the common jail of the city of Philadelphia, until their trial. It is said their confinement was made unusually severe, and that an order was issued that none of the families or friends should be permitted to visit or hold intercourse with them, which was carried into effect.

The expedition, so far as its object was to arrest those who had disturbed the public peace in the counties of Bucks and Northampton, had been entirely successful, and the leaders of the so-called insurrection were in the hands of the Federal authorities. The next step in the drama, or farce, for we hardly know which to call it, was the trial, condemnation and execution of the prisoners; and the preliminaries to which this finale were urged with as much haste as common decency would permit.

TRIAL OF JOHN FRIES.

The trial of John Fries was the most extraordinary judicial proceeding our country ever witnessed. The political rancour which had raged with such fierceness during the closing scenes of the administration of Mr. John Adams, was carried upon the bench and into the jury box, and aided, no doubt, to determine the law and the facts of this case. The Judge evinced an apparent disposition to carry out the high handed measures which had been begun, and whether intentional or not, leaned with a strong bias against the accused.

The Circuit Court of the United States, before which Fries and the other prisoners were to be tried, commenced its session at Philadelphia on April 11, 1799, the Hon. James Iredell, one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, being upon the bench. The case was attracting such widespread interest, the courtroom was filled with an excited and deeply interested multitude, as soon as the doors were thrown open. After the court was duly opened for business, Judge Iredell delivered his charge to the grand jury, a production which was characterized by great partisan bitterness. He reviewed, at considerable length, the Alien and Sedition Laws, argued their constitutionality and said they were called for by the spirit of the times. He next passed to the case of Fries, which he noticed with considerable particularity. He contended, in advance of the trial, and in the absence of testimony to sustain his opinion, that the crime with which he stood charged was Treason; which, he said, consisted in opposing, by force of arms, the execution of any acts of Congress. The case was given to the grand jury, which retired to their room, where they made such examination of it as was necessary to satisfy their minds of the nature of the offence. When they returned into court they presented a true bill as against John Fries, who now stood indicted for Treason, the highest crime known to our law. The following is a copy of the indictment under which he was to be tried viz:

Indictment in the Circuit Court of the United States of America, in and for the Pennsylvania District of the Middle Circuit:

"The Grand Inquest of the United States of America for the Pennsylvania District, upon their respective oaths and affirmations, do present that John Fries, late of the county of Bucks, in the district of Pennsylvania, he being an inhabitant of, and residing in the said United States, to wit, in the district aforesaid, and under the protection of the laws of the said United States, and owing allegiance and fidelity to the same United States, not having the fear of God before his eyes, nor weighing the duty of his said allegiance and fidelity, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the Devil, wickedly devising and intending the peace and tranquility of the said United States to disturb, on March 7, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, at Bethlehem, in the county of Northampton, in the district aforesaid, unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously did compass, imagine and intend to raise and levy war, insurrection and rebellion against the said United States; and to fulfil and bring into effect the said traitorous compassings, imaginations, and intentions of him, the said John Fries, he the said John Fries, afterward, that is to say, on March 7, in the said year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, at the said county of Northampton, in the district aforesaid, with a great multitude of persons, whose names at present are unknown to the Grand Inquest aforesaid, to a great number, to wit, to the number of one hundred persons and upwards, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, that is to say, with guns, swords, clubs, stones, and other warlike weapons, as well offensive as defensive, being then and there unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously assembled and gathered together, did falsely and traitorously assemble, and join themselves together against the said United States, and, then and there, with force and arms, did falsely and traitorously, and in a warlike manner, array and dispose them against the said United States, and then and there, with force and arms, in pursuance of such their traitorous intentions and purposes aforesaid, he, John Fries, with the said persons so as aforesaid traitorously assembled, and armed and arrayed in the manner aforesaid, most wickedly, maliciously and traitorously did ordain, prepare and levy public war against the said United States, contrary to the duty of his said allegiance and fidelity, against the Constitution, peace and dignity of the said United States, and also against the force of the Act of the Congress of the said United States, in such case made and provided.

(Signed) "WILLIAM RAWLE."

"Attorney of the U. S. for the Pennsylvania District."

The case was not immediately taken up, but other business on the docket occupied the time of the court until April 30, when it was called up in order. Fries had employed eminent counsel to defend him, viz: Hon. Alex J. Dallas, father of Vice President Dallas, and Messrs. Ewing and Lewis. The United States were represented by Messrs. Rawle and Sitgreaves, the latter being a resident of Easton, in Northampton county, and at that time the United States Attorney for the Pennsylvania District. As soon as the case was called up, Mr. Lewis preferred the following motion, in writing, viz:

"And now the prisoner, John Fries, being placed at the bar of this Court, at the city of Philadelphia, being the place appointed by law for holding the stated sessions thereof, and it being demanded of him if he is ready for his trial for the treason in the indictment mentioned, he moves, oretenus, that his trial for the same offence may not be proceeded on here, and that the same may be held in the county in which the same acts of treason in the said indictment mentioned are laid, and where the offence therein mentioned is alleged to have been committed.

"This motion was argued at length by Messrs. Dallas and Lewis and Ewing. The application was founded on the judiciary act, passed September 24, 1789, the 29th section of which provides, "That in cases punishable with death, the trial shall be had in the county where the offence was committed; or where that cannot be done without great inconveniences, twelve petit jurors at least shall be summoned from thence." Messrs. Sitgreaves and Rawle replied on the part of the United States; when the court overruled the motion, both judges delivering opinions upon the points raised. One of the reasons given by Judge Iredell why the prisoner should not be tried in the county where the offence was committed was, that the inhabitants were in such a state of insurrection, that a fair trial could not be had. All motions being now disposed of, the next thing in order was to fix a time for the trial, which was set down for the first day of May.

The prisoner being brought in and placed at the bar of the court on that day, was duly arraigned; when the indictment was read to him, to which he pleaded "Not Guilty," and placed himself upon his country for trial. A jury was then drawn and empanelled, which consisted of the following persons: William Jolly, Philadelphia; Samuel Mitchell, and Richard Leedom, Bucks county; Anthony Cuthbert, Alexander Fullerton, John Singer, Philadelphia; William Ramsey, Bucks; Samuel Richards, Philadelphia; Gerardus Wynkoop, Bucks; Jos. Thornton, Philadelphia; Philip Walter, Northampton; John Road, Northampton.*

*John Roth of Whitehall township.

A question arose as to the last two jurymen being qualified, as they were Germans, and did not understand English, but it was agreed that any difficulty of that nature could be explained to them. Several of the witnesses being also Germans, and not able to speak English, a Mr. Erdman was, on that account, sworn in as interpreter.

Mr. Sitgreaves opened the case on the part of the United States. He said, "Treason is defined in the Constitution of the United States, section III., art. III," in the words following: "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." He charged that Fries was guilty of treason in levying war. He then proceeded to elaborate upon the phraseology or description as adopted in our constitution, which is borrowed from the statute of Great Britain, passed in the reign of Edward the III, and which had never been changed. He then passed to an exposition of the full meaning of the word treason, as understood under our Constitution, and pointed out what is necessary to constitute the crime; and that, according to the definition of Lord Hale, it must consist both in levying war, and in levying war against the government of the United States—that if the people assembled in this hostile manner only to gratify a spirit of revenge, or for any other purpose independent of war against the United States, it would only amount to a riot. He reviewed, at considerable length, the leading operations of Fries and his friends, pointing out their combination and conspiracy to resist the federal authorities, and their actual resistance, with arms in their hands, at Bethlehem. He now called witnesses to prove the fact stated in his opening. Among those subpoenaed and called upon the stand were: William Henry, William Barnett, John Barnett, Christian Winters, Christian Roths, Col. Nichols, Philip Schlauch, Joseph Horsefield, John Mohallon, Jacob Eyerley, Samuel Toon, George Mitchell, Wm. Thomas, James Chapman, John Rodrock, Cephas Childs and others. In the main their testimony sustained the facts alleged by Mr. Sitgreaves, and most if not all the overt acts set forth in the indictment were substantially proved.

Among the witnesses called was Judge Peters, then upon the bench, who was examined more particularly as to the circumstances under which he issued warrants in Northampton county, and in relation to other facts within his knowledge previous to the examination of John Fries, on April 6th. At this stage of the trial the confession of Fries was read, the same which was taken before Judge Peters, immediately upon his capture.

The prosecution having now rested their case, Mr. Dallas remarked to the court, that, though they wished to give as little trouble on the part of the defendant as possible, they desired to call two or three witnesses to prove that the indisposition which was manifested to permit the assessments to be made was owing to the uncertainty these people were in of the real existence of the law; that the prisoner himself was under the idea that it was no law; and that they had no intention of opposing Congress by force of arms, but that they wished for time, in order to ascertain its real existence, and, if the law were actually in force, they wished, agreeably to their former custom to appoint assessors from their own respective townships; that it could be shown that Fries was perfectly quiescent after the proclamation, and that some of the witnesses were mistaken as to some of the facts which they had sworn to. Mr. Dallas alluded to the fact, that since the jury had been impanelled, a newspaper in the city had attempted to intimidate the counsel and jury, to warp the sentiments of the latter, and to deprive the prisoners of the benefit of the best talent the bar could afford. He proceeded to an examination of the law of treason, and argued that none of the acts complained of amounted to the crime charged.

After Mr. Rawle had argued the constitutional definition of treason to the court, in support of the positions taken by his colleague, Mr. Sitgreaves, Mr. Dallas opened the case for the defendant in an able and eloquent speech. He reviewed the whole ground, all the testimony of the witnesses produced by the United States, and denied that from the facts proved there was anything like the levying of war against the United States. He argued that treason could not be made out of the act alleged, and that at most it was but conspiracy to resist the execution of an unpopular law. He explained the disadvantages under which the prisoner appeared before the court, and spoke of the popular resentment that had been engendered against him; and he called upon the jurors to drive from their minds everything like bias, and to give the prisoner the advantages of every reasonable doubt they might entertain of his guilt. Having concluded, he called three witnesses, John Jamison, Israel Roberts and Everhard Foulke, to prove the facts he had alleged.

The testimony on both sides being closed, Mr. Ewing opened the case to the jury for the defendant, and was followed by Mr. Sitgreaves and Mr. Rawle, for the United States. The jury was then charged by both judges at considerable length, who reviewed all the facts of the case, and the law bearing upon it, showing a strong bias against the prisoner. The case was then given to the jury which retired to their room, and after an absence of about three hours came in with a verdict of Guilty. The trial had occupied the undivided attention of the court from the first to the ninth of May, and during all this period the public mind was in the greatest possible state of excitement, and the attendance upon the trial large. The jury did not separate the whole time. When the verdict was announced, it was received with satisfaction or disapprobation according to the political bias of the persons present; for, strange as it may seem, politics was mixed up with the whole of the affair.

The court met on the 14th day of May to pronounce sentence upon the prisoner. As soon as court was opened, Mr. Lewis, one of the counsel for Fries, asked for a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted, which caused judgment to be suspended, and the prisoner was remanded back to jail. The ground upon which this motion was based, was that John Roth, one of the jurymen on the trial, had declared a prejudice against the prisoner after he was summoned as a juror on the trial. He read depositions to substantiate the facts stated. Mr. Lewis was sustained in the application by Mr. Dallas, who advanced additional reasons for a new trial. The motion was argued at considerable length by counsel, and the two judges delivered separate opinions. The court was divided in opinion, Judge Iredell being in favor of, and Judge Chase opposed to, a new trial; but the latter finally yielded to the former upon the ground that a division in the court might lessen the weight of the judgment if finally pronounced, and a new trial was accordingly granted. Before the second trial came off the yellow fever broke out in Philadelphia, which caused a removal of the prisoners to Montgomery county where they remained until the fever had abated, when they were returned to Philadelphia. The late Hon. James M. Porter, of Easton, wrote us the following interesting recollections of his residence at Norristown, at that period, which we publish in full:

"I was very young at the time of those transactions, but I still have a recollection that they transpired. When the yellow fever prevailed in Philadelphia, I think in 1799, Isaiah Wells, Esq., was sheriff of Montgomery (perhaps jailor at that,) and the prisoners were removed from Philadelphia to Norristown. Mr. Wells was very kind and allowed the prisoners great liberties, in going out and returning to the jail. Several of them, if not all, were farmers and accustomed to work on their own properties at home; he allowed them to get work and be paid for it, in order to get pocket money, and have exercise; but required them always to be in jail at night. One, whose name was Moyer, worked one day for my father, who lived about one mile from the jail. I remember the fact of his working there very distinctly—splitting wood. We had nothing but iron wedges, and this Mr. Moyer was the first person I ever saw use wooden wedges or gluts in splitting the wood. In the evening he complained of not being very well, and our family wished him to remain all night. This he declined to do, saying that Mr. Wells was very good to them, but he had desired them to be there every night, and he would be as good as his word. The next day he got worse with the jail fever and died with it at Norristown."

The second trial of John Fries was had in the Circuit Court of the United States, at Philadelphia, which commenced on April 29th, 1800. Judge Chase presiding, assisted by Judge Peters, of the District Court. The former indictment had been withdrawn by the District Attorney, and a new one drawn in its stead, upon which Fries was arraigned and, as before, plead "Not Guilty." Mr. Dallas and Mr. Lewis, who were engaged in the first trial as counsel for the prisoner, were retained to defend him also upon the second; but they withdrew from the case at the commencement, because of the extraordinary course of the Judges in laying down their opinions as to the law before hearing counsel, thus prejudicing the case. They alleged that this proceeding was not only illegal but wholly unprecedented, and they therefore declined to have anything more to do with the case. This conduct of Judge Chase afterward became the subject of the first of the articles of his impeachment, on which he was tried before the United States Senate, in February, 1805. Their withdrawal left Fries without legal assistance. The court asked him if he wished to have counsel assigned him, but, as he did not express any desire for it, the trial went on in the absence of it. Mr. Rawle and Mr. Ingersoll conducted the prosecution.

Of the jurors called, thirty-four were challenged without cause, and the following were admitted and sworn, viz: Samuel Wheeler, foreman; Henry Pepper, John Taggart, Cornelius Comegys, Ephraim Clark, Thomas Baily, Lawrence Cauffman, John Edge, Charles Deshler, Henry DuBois, Isaac Dehaven, and John Balliott. Before the jurors were sworn, they were individually asked, upon oath, "Are you any way related to the prisoner," to which they all answered "No." "Have you ever formed or delivered an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, or that he ought to be punished;" to which they generally answered not to their knowledge. Some of them admitted that they had spoken in disapprobation of the transaction, but not as to the prisoner particularly. Mr. Taggart, after he was sworn, remarked to the court that he felt uneasy under his oath, inasmuch as he had often spoken of the prisoner as very culpable, but that he had never made up his mind to hang him; that when he took the oath he did not conceive it to be so strict, and therefore he wished to be excused. The court informed him that as he was now sworn, it was impossible to excuse him, and he accordingly took his seat with the others.

Mr. Rawle opened the case on the part of the United States. Before any of the testimony was admitted for the prosecution, Judge Chase cautioned the prisoner to attend to the examination of the witnesses against him, and to ask them any questions he might deem proper, but to be careful not to ask any questions that might possibly criminate himself. He said that the court would be watchful of him, and would check anything that might go to injure him, and would be his counsel and grant him every assistance and indulgence in their power. The testimony was much the same as that produced upon the first trial, and sustained the facts laid in the indictment. The prisoner offered no evidence. Mr. Rawle summed up the testimony, briefly, after which Judge Chase charged the jury.

The jury retired about six o'clock in the evening, when the court adjourned until ten. When they entered the jury room, the jurors agreed, that without previous argument among themselves, the opinion of each one should be expressed by ballot, which was done, and they were unanimously in favor of conviction. At the hour to which they adjourned, the Court again assembled, when the jury was brought in and delivered the verdict Guilty, amid the most profound silence. During the trial Fries was tranquil, and bore himself with great propriety, but after the verdict was rendered, he became much affected; and in view of his impending fate remained depressed in spirits down to the time of his liberation. It is said that he confidently expected an acquittal, based on the opinion of his counsel that his offence did not amount to treason.

After the rendition of the verdict, Judge Chase remarked to the prisoner that as he had no counsel on the trial, if he, or any person for him, could point out any flaw in the indictment, or legal ground for arrest of judgment, ample time would be allowed for that purpose. The court met on Friday, May 2nd to sentence the prisoner. The sentence was pronounced by Judge Chase, who addressed Fries at length, remarking to the other prisoners at the bar, that what he should say to him would apply generally to them. He reviewed the offence of which he had been convicted, after a fair and impartial trial, and pointed out the enormity of the crime in resisting the acts of a government so free and liberal as that of the United States. He called his attention to his near approach to the close of his career on earth, and besought him to prepare for that other life which was beyond the grave. He entreated him to employ the balance of his days in repenting of his sins, and in seeking that pardon which God alone can give. In conclusion, Judge Chase said:

"What remains for me is a very necessary but a very painful part of my duty; it is to pronounce that judgment which the law has appointed for crimes of this magnitude. The judgment of the law is, and this Court does award, 'that you be hanged by the neck until dead; and I pray God Almighty to be merciful to your soul.'"

Samuel Sitgreaves, who conducted the prosecution at the first trial of John Fries, was one of the ablest men Pennsylvania ever produced. He was born in Philadelphia, 1763, where he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He removed to Easton, Northampton county, about 1786, and, by reason of his great abilities immediately took a high position at the bar, and became prominent in politics. His first appearance in public life, was as a member of the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania, 1790, in which he took an active part. He was elected to Congress, 1794, and served until 1798. In the impeachment of Senator Blount, of Tennessee, before the United States Senate, he was one of the leading managers, and discharged his duties with great power, talents and fidelity. In 1799, Mr. Sitgreaves went to England as Commissioner under Jay's treaty, and was absent at the time of the second trial of Fries. After the election of Mr. Jefferson he retired from politics and devoted himself to his profession. He became disgusted with the Federalists, but could not affiliate with Democrats. He spent the balance of his days in retirement.

During the time that John Fries was confined in prison he received much sympathy from the citizens of Philadelphia, and others. Among those who took deep interest in his fate, was the Rev. Dr. Janeway, an eminent clergyman of that day, who visited him by permission of the authorities, and ministered to him spiritual and other consolation. He presented him a handsome Bible of duodecimo size, with which to console his hours of confinement. After his sentence to death, May 9th, and when he expected shortly to be led to the scaffold for execution, he made a bequest of this Bible to his children, as follows, viz:

“Philadelphia, May 22, 1800.

“My Dear Children.—This book, presented to me by J. J. Janeway, at his request, I leave as the legacy of your dying father. Let me entreat you to regard it as the best gift of Heaven; as revealing the only way of salvation for lost sinners. I beseech, I command you, to read and to study it. I pray that the spirit of God may open your eyes, that you may read it in faith, to the salvation of your immortal souls.

“(Signed) JOHN FRIES.”

The Bible is now in possession of John Fries' descendants who live in Whitmarsh, Montgomery county, and is cherished by them as a great treasure. The bequest is in his handwriting, and to judge by the language he was by no means an illiterate man. He lives many years after this period, and at his death the sacred volume passed into the hands of those for whom he had intended it.

Conrad Marks was tried for treason at Norristown on April 26, 1800, and acquitted, but for aiding the insurrection was sentenced to two year's imprisonment and $800.00 fine. Marks was born June 12, 1745, and died Jan. 16, 1807. He is buried at Western Salisbury church.

Anthony Stahler was acquitted of treason but was sentenced to eight month's imprisonment and $150.00 fine for aiding the insurrection.

Sentences of imprisonment and fines were imposed upon the following, many of which were subsequently lightened.

	Imprisonment.	Fine.
George Schaeffer,	Eight months, ..	$ 400.00*
	Four months, ...	200.00†
Daniel Schwartz, Sr.,	Eight months, ..	400.00
Christian Ruth,	Eight months, ..	200.00
Henry Stahler,	Eight months, ..	200.00
Henry Schiffert,	Eight months, ..	200.00
Henry Jarret,	Two years, ...	1,000.00
Valentine Kuder,	Two years, ...	200.00
Jacob Eierman,	One year,	50.00
Henry Shankweiler,	One year,	150.00
Michael Schmeier,	Nine months, ..	400.00
Henry Schmidt,	Eight months, ..	200.00
Philip Desch,	Eight months, ..	150.00
Jacob Klein,	Eight months, ..	150.00
Herman Hartman,	Six months, ...	150.00
Philip Ruth,	Six months, ...	200.00
John Eberhard,	Six months, ...	100.00
John Huber,	Six months, ...	150.00

* First offense.

† Second offense.

Christian Sachs,	Six months, ...	200.00
John Klein, Jr.,	Six months, ...	100.00
Daniel Klein,	Six months, ...	150.00
Jacob Klein,	Six months, ...	150.00
Adam Breich,	Six months, ...	150.00
George Memberger,	Six months, ...	150.00
George Getman,	Six months, ...	100.00
William Getman,	Six months, ...	100.00
Abraham Schantz,	Four months, ..	100.00
Henry Memberger,	Four months, ..	100.00
Peter Hager,	Four months, ..	100.00
Abraham Samsel,	Three months, ..	50.00
P. Huntsberger,	Three months, ..	50.00
Peter Gabel,	Two months, ..	40.00
Jacob Gabel,	Two months, ..	40.00

Of these men Philip Desch and Michael Schmoeyer died in prison, leaving families. David Schaeffer, it is said, also died in prison of yellow fever, leaving a widow and two children.

Among the witnesses who made affidavit that John Roth had expressed himself that Fries and his followers should be hanged, which he in an affidavit, denied, were Nicholas Moyer, of Philadelphia, Daniel Heberly, Herman Hartman, Henry Shankweiler and Henry Jarret, of Muncie.

The following is a translation of a threatening letter sent to Captain Jarret.

“A certain warning to you, John Sheret, if you have already advised the people who are for liberty that they should not go armed to Bethlehem, you need not discourage others any more as you are already a cursed stambler as are many others in this neighborhood. Your brother Henry also said that the people should not have done that to go against the government. He was scared when he came to Bethlehem and saw the people with weapons and ——— (undecipherable) was also in a rage about it. So Eyerley is a devil as you and John Sheret. I say in case of an outbreak I will burn your house and barn and will shoot you and your brother dead wherever I shall detect you cursed stamblers. If it would not be for your brother Henry most surely Bethlehem would receive its deserving reward, the cursed advice would be frustrated. And you are never safe in your house. You and Eyerley are cursed stambler knaves one as the other else you would not dissuade the people who are for liberty.

“These are the weapons for your slaughter.”
(Drawings of a pistol and dagger.)

PARDON OF FRIES.

The conviction and sentence of Fries increased the excitement already prevailing. The two political parties took up the question of his guilt or innocence and discussed it with great bitterness; the Federalists contending he was guilty of treason and ought to suffer the extreme penalty of the law; the Democrats taking the opposite ground, that he was the victim of tyranny and oppression. The newspapers of that period teem with this violent partizan discussion, and give us an insight into the bitterness that prevailed. When the news spread into the districts where Fries had resisted the execution of the tax law, and it became known, among his neighbors and followers, that he had been condemned to death, the minds of the people were more inflamed than at any past period; and had they possessed the power, would undoubtedly have torn him from the hands of the federal government.

There was a strong feeling in favor of Fries, and this increased after his conviction. He was considered a deluded man, who had probably been led astray by other more responsible parties. For this reason, also, there was a desire to save him from execution. This was participated in by both political parties, and an immediate effort was made to obtain a pardon from the President. Fries does not appear to have been actuated by the feeling of a martyr, nor to have had any desire to be distinguished in that way; but was anxious to escape from the unpleasant position in which he found himself. Soon after his sentence, he caused to be presented to the President the following petition:

“PETITION OF JOHN FRIES.

“To the President of the United States:

“The petition of John Fries respectfully sheweth; that your prisoner is one of those deluded and unfortunate men, who, at the Circuit Court of this district, has been convicted of treason against the United States for which offence he is now under sentence of death. In this awful situation, impressed with a just sense of the crime he has committed, and with the sincerity of a penitent offender, he entreats mercy and pardon from him on whose determination rests the fate of an unfortunate man. He solicits the interference of the President to save him from an ignominious death, and to rescue a large, and hitherto happy family, from future misery and ruin. If the prayer of his petition should be granted, he will show, by a future course of good conduct, his gratitude to his offended country by a steady and active support of that excellent Constitution and laws, which it has been his misfortune to violate and expose.

“(Signed)

JOHN FRIES.

“Philadelphia Prison, May, 1800.”

To the above petition was attached a recommendation, in the following words:

“The subscribers most respectfully recommend the petitioner to the President of the United States. They are warmly attached to the Constitution and laws of their country which they will, on every occasion, and, at every hazard, manifest their zeal to defend and support. But when they reflect on the ignorance, the delusion, and the penitence of the persons involved in the late insurrection, their pity supersedes every vindictive sentiment, and they sincerely think that an exercise of mercy will have a more salutary effect than the punishment of the convicts. It is on this ground that the subscribers, knowing the humanity as well as the fortitude of the President, venture to claim his attention on the present awful occasion, in favor of the wretched father of a numerous family.”

In this manner was the application for pardon brought officially before the President for his consideration.

At the time of the first conviction of Fries, Mr. Adams was in Massachusetts, on a visit at Quincy. Colonel Pickering and Mr. Wolcott, two of the members of his Cabinet, immediately wrote him the result of the trial, and expressed their satisfaction at the verdict. The latter mentioned, incidentally, that Mr. Lewis, one of the counsel of the accused, had stated, on all occasions during the trial, that the offence which he had committed did not amount to treason. He also stated that Fries, had frequently said, that “persons of greater consequence had been at the bottom of the business.” These letters reached Mr. Adams the evening of May 16th, and, the next morning, he answered them. To Mr. Wolcott he wrote as follows:

“Quincy, May 17, 1799.

“I thank you, sir, for the favor of the 11th, which I received last night. The termination of the trial of Fries, is an important and interesting, and an affecting event. I am unable to conjecture the grounds of Mr. Lewis’ opinion and wish I had a sketch of them. Is Fries a native or a foreigner? Is he a man of property and independence, or is he in debt? What has been his previous life? Industrious or idle, sober or temperate?

“It is of importance to discover, if possible, the great man alluded to by Fries, in his observation to Mr. Wood, as at the bottom of the business, and the evidence of any agitation among the insurgents ought to be collected.

“It is of moment, also, to ascertain whether the insurgents had any regular view, or extensive communications with others of similar dispositions in other counties or correspondence with other states. We ought also to inquire whether Fries is the most culpable among the guilty, if that can be known. It highly concerns the people of the United States, and especially the federal government, that in the whole progress and ultimate conclusion of this affair, neither humanity be unnecessarily afflicted, nor public justice essentially violated, nor the public safety endangered.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

"(Signed.) JOHN ADAMS."

This honest expression of opinion, by Mr. Adams, was not well received by some of the members of his Cabinet, who had marked Fries as victim to federal power, and they were not well pleased at the prospect of his escaping them, a remote chance of which they thought they could see fore-shadowed in the President's letter. In the life of John Adams, by his grandson, Charles Francis Adams, volume 1, page 571, the author thus notices this proceeding: "These letters were received by the persons to whom they were addressed with some dismay. They did not understand why the President should entertain his own views of the law, after the proper court had adjudicated upon it, and they honestly thought that the public safety required an immediate example of Fries. 'Painful as the idea of taking the life of a man,' said Pickering, 'I feel a calm and solid satisfaction that an opportunity is now presented, in executing the just sentence of the law, to crush that spirit, which, if not overthrown and destroyed, may proceed in its career, and overturn the government.'"

Two views were presented when the question of the execution of Fries came up, but the conflict was postponed for a time, by a new trial being granted.

After the second conviction, and his sentence to death, by Judge Chase, Mr. Adams took the proper measures to inform himself of the probable guilt or innocence of the prisoner, and of such other matters in relation thereto, as would give him a full understanding of the whole case, that he might act justly and fairly in the premises.

There can be no doubt that, at one period, Mr. Adams had determined to let the law take its course, and made up his mind not to interpose the executive clemency. Mr. Hamilton, in his letter on the public conduct of Mr. Adams, states that while the trials were pending he more than once expressed himself to the effect "that the accused must find their hopes of escape, either in their innocence, or in the lenity of the juries; since from him, in case of conviction, they would have nothing to expect." He further states that a short time before the pardon he declared that the mistaken policy of Washington in regard to the Western Insurrection had been the cause of the second troubles. Whatever the cause may have been, it is evident his mind had undergone great change, and that he had come to the determination to pardon them if he could have justification for doing so. Hence his anxiety to learn the full particulars of the case, independent of the action of the Court and jury.

Soon after the sentence of death, had been pronounced, Thomas Adams, son of the President, waited upon Mr. Lewis, one of the counsel of Fries, and told him that his father wished to know the points and authorities upon which he and Mr. Dallas had intended to rely in case they had defended him upon the second trial. The Attorney-General of the United States made a like request, and, at their solicitation, Messrs. Dallas and Lewis made a full statement of the points of the case, which was sent to the President on or before May 19th. About this time a change took place in the Cabinet, and the President was thus deprived of a portion of his constitutional advisers; and when the question again came up there were only three persons to consult with.

On May 20th, he submitted to his Cabinet a series of thirteen questions, which indicated his leaning to the side of clemency. Mr. Wolcott remained firmly of the opinion that all three of the leaders in the insurrection, Fries, Heaney and Getman, should be executed, which was called for to inspire the well-disposed with confidence in the government, and the malevolent with terror. The other ministers believed that the execution of Fries, alone, would be sufficient to show the power of the law to punish evil doers; but rather than that all three should be released, they were in favor of the execution of the whole of them. Mr. Adams appears to have acted upon his own judgment, and took the responsibility of the measure without the concurrence of his cabinet. Having satisfied his own mind that it was a case in which the executive clemency could be exercised with good effect, and that the great excitement, prevailing in the country, would be much more readily allayed by mercy than the opposite course, he determined to grant an unconditional pardon to all the prisoners. For this purpose he caused to be issued the following:

"PROCLAMATION.

"BY JOHN ADAMS, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

"Philadelphia, May 23rd.

"Whereas, The late wicked and treasonable insurrection against the just authorities of the United States, of sundry persons in the counties of Northampton, Montgomery and Bucks, in the State of Pennsylvania, in the year 1799, having been speedily suppressed without any of the calamities usually attending rebellion, whereupon peace, order and submission to the laws of the United States were restored in the aforesaid counties, and the ignorant, misguided and misinformed in the counties have returned to a proper sense of their duty; whereby it is become unnecessary for the public good that any future prosecutions should be commenced or carried on against any person or persons, by reason of their being concerned in the said insurrection; wherefore be it known, that I, John Adams, President of the United States of America, have granted, and by these presents do grant, a full, free and absolute pardon, to all and every person or persons concerned in the said insurrection, excepting as hereinafter excepted, of all felonies, misdemeanors and other crimes by them respectively done or committed against the United States; in either of the said counties, before the 12th day of March in the year 1799; excepting and excluding therefrom any person who now standeth indicted or convicted of any treason, or other offence against the United States; whereby remedying and releasing unto all persons, except as before excepted, all pains and penalties incurred, or supposed to be incurred for, or on account of the premises. Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America, at the city of Philadelphia, this first day of May, in the year of our Lord Eighteen Hundred, and of the independence of the said United States, the twenty-fourth.

(Signed) JOHN ADAMS."

This proclamation as will be noticed, did not embrace the cases of Fries, Heaney and Getman, already under sentence, and a special pardon was made out for them a few days afterward, which struck the fetters from their limbs and set them free. The biographer of John Adams states that "the Cabinet had been consulted at every step, but nevertheless, when the President ordered the pardons made out the next day, for all the offenders, the disaffected members viewed the Act with disappointment, and Mr. Adams was charged with inconsistency, and having been governed by personal motives for the Act. It was said to be a 'fatal concession to his enemies,' as the Act was 'popular in Pennsylvania.' Such was the tone of the disappointed Federalists who saw in it another departure from the policy they would have introduced into the federal government."

CONCLUSION.

The action of President Adams, in pardoning Fries, Heaney and Getman, was the cause of much dissension in the Cabinet, and, between him and his political friends, it engendered a bitterness of feeling that was never entirely obliterated. So far as official action was concerned, the act of pardon closed the drama of the "Rebellion," and removed it from further consideration. This final disposition of the affair, however, did not have the effect of taking it out of politics, but, for a number of years afterward, it was made a standing text, particularly in eastern Pennsylvania, for philippic against the Federal party. In the campaign which soon followed, between Mr. Jefferson and John Adams, it was used with tremendous effect against the latter and assisted very materially in hurling him and his friends from power. It was one of the leading causes which produced the great political revolution in this State in 1800, and the Federal party never recovered from the odium it entailed upon it. We remember when the names of Fries, Heaney and Getman were mingled in our local county politics; and more than one Democrat, in Bucks county, owed his elevation to skillful use made of the events growing out of the house-tax law of 1798.

The part Mr. Adams took, in the matter of pardoning the insurgents was alike creditable to his head and heart, and tends to remove, in some degree, the stigma his approval of the Alien and Sedition Law, and the House Tax fastened upon his administration. That he was moved to it by the best of motives, and prompted by the dictates of a kind heart, there can be no question, and it is equally certain the act was his own, and against the wish and advice of his cabinet. He has left behind him a record of the satisfaction it gave him. In his tenth letter, in the Boston Patriot, of May 17, 1809, remarking on his responsibility for all his executive acts, and that it was his right and duty to be governed by his own judgment, although in direct conflict with the advice of all his ministers, he says: "This was my situation in more than one instance. It had been so in the nomination of Mr. Gerry; it was afterwards so in the pardon of Fries; two measures that I recollect with infinite satisfaction, and which will console me in my last hour."

It was suspected at the time of the disturbance, that more prominent men than the unfortunates who fell into the hands of the Federal authorities were at the bottom of the rebellion; and even the names of some of the leaders of the Federal party were connected with it. After the trial, John Fries told a Mr. Wood, a clerk in one of the Departments, and who was also clerk of the prison, "that great men were at the bottom of this business" Oliver Wolcott, in a letter to John Adams, dated Philadelphia, May 11, 1799, states that B. McClenachan, a member of the Assembly of Pennsylvania, was certainly an agitator among the insurgents. One authority upon the subject says:

"Much of the blame attending upon this disturbance is cast upon Mr. Sitgreaves, formerly a member of Congress from the Bucks district, and Eyerly, both disappointed politicians. The former followed the march of the troops and appears to have been busy in hunting up persons who had opposed the law. Eyerly was defeated at the election that fall. Fries was a Federalist, and ardent supporter of John Adam's administration, on which account it is supposed he was not afraid of an arrest, believing that his Federal friends would not molest him. Probably Sitgreaves and Eyerly are those to whom Fries refers, that more prominent men were at the bottom of it and left Fries in the lurch. This is given as the reason that the Federal members of the legislature opposed the institution of any inquiry into the cause of the disturbance. It is said it was the desire of the Federalists to bring odium on the Republicans by ordering federal troops into the county to put down the rebellion."

"However this may be—we mean the participation of men of prominence in the disturbance, we think the matter is now pretty clearly established that the affair had given to it much greater importance than merited. We are also well convinced, had the proper steps been taken to quiet the agitation, through the agency of the local authorities there would never have been any need of the interposition of the Federal authorities. In this opinion we are sustained by some of the actors in the scenes that grew out of it. Among others an officer of the army, writing from camp while it lay in Bucks county says: "I need not add after what I have before written to you, that every hour's experience was not only unnecessary, but violently absurd. I can take upon me to assert, that excepting in the rash act of rescuing the people under arrest from the marshal, there has not been even a desire of resistance manifested, and the most marked censure of many persons now in custody. I do verily believe that a sergeant and six men might have performed all the service for which we have been assembled at so heavy an expense to the United States, and with such a loss of important time to us, especially those who are in the mercantile line."

This seems to have been the opinion of all who were acquainted with the whole affair, except those violent partisans whose prejudices were too strong and too bitter to permit them to judge the case with fairness. The whole cost of the expedition to the United States is said to have been $80,000.00.

When Fries was liberated there was great rejoicing throughout the country, but the anti-Federalists failed to give Mr. Adams credit for his act of mercy and clemency. As would naturally be the case, they attributed the act, which he said would console him in his last hours, to sinister motives, and, if anything, they increased the bitterness of their attack upon him and his administration. Such, however, is the history of political parties the world over, and we are not surprised to find no departure therefrom in the exciting times of '98 and '99.

The subsequent history of Fries is brief and void of interest. Upon his release from imprisonment he went directly to the humble home which had sheltered him before he became so famous, and again entered into the ordinary current of life. He resumed his old avocation of vendue crying, and, as before, in company with his little dog, traversed the county back and forth, crying the sales of his neighbors and acquaintance. The events of the "Rebellion" left some bitterness behind it took years to heal, and, from time to time, this lingering ill-feeling broke out in that section of the county. There was much hostility against Penrose, who piloted the troops to Bunker Hill when they captured Fries, and the friends of the latter hardly ever forgave him. A few years after his return home Conrad Marks and his friends came down to Quakertown to whip Penrose, who, with a number of his neighbors, was breaking the roads filled with snow drifts. Marks mistook his man, got hold of a nephew of the one he sought and received a good whipping for his trouble. It is also related that soon after his pardon the friends of Fries, who lived near Sumneytown, Montgomery county, raised a Liberty Pole, rather as a mark of exultation over the defeat of the schemes of the Federalists. John Rodrock, the same who had received indignity at the hands of Fries, was in Philadelphia at the time attending market, and, on his return sent his hired man to cut the pole down, which he accomplished. The people soon got wind of it and pursued and caught the party before they had crossed the line into Bucks. They placed some penalty upon them, but the nature of it we have not learned.

It has been said that John Fries had done his country some service during the Revolutionary War. At that time he was living at Charlestown, Milford township. He was in active service during the war. Between these periods, and while spending some time at home, he was the hero of a spirited affair. While the enemy occupied Philadelphia a party of British Light

Horse, on a foraging expedition in the upper end of Bucks county, were returning to the city through Charlestown in the night. His wife, hearing the clatter of hoofs, got up and looked out of the window just before daylight, and saw the troopers marching by with a large number of cattle in charge. She said to her husband, "Why, John, there goes a troop of Light Horse all dressed in red; and I guess they must be the British." Fries got up immediately and dressed, and went first to the houses of Hoover and Wykert, near neighbors, whom he awoke and informed of what was going on. He then went around the neighborhood and aroused the people whom he headed and, with them went in pursuit of the retreating British. They overtook the soldiers near Spring House tavern, and compelled them to relinquish the cattle and hasten their march to Philadelphia. The cattle were driven back and returned to their owners. John Fries continued to reside in Milford township to the day of his death, which took place in 1818. He was buried in the graveyard at Charlestown, where his remains now lie, without a stone to mark their resting place. The allegation that Fries opened a tin store in Philadelphia after his pardon is wholly without foundation. Such a statement is found in a note at the conclusion of the published account of the trial, and was probably inserted there on some rumor which prevailed at that day, without the author taking the trouble to satisfy himself of its truth. When we visited his son, Daniel, we questioned him particularly upon this point and he assured us that his father returned to Milford township, where he continued to follow his old occupation to the day of his death. The same was stated to us by some of the old residents of Quakertown, who knew him well in their younger days. At his decease, his son Daniel assumed the occupation of a vendue cryer, which he followed until he removed to near Sumneytown, where he resided until his death. Another son, Solomon, lived at White-marsh and both of them left numerous descendants. The father of John Fries, whose name was Simon, came from Wales, and first settled in Maryland, but afterwards removed to Montgomery county, in this state, where he died.

We now conclude this historic episode of Bucks and Northampton counties, and take leave of the reader. In writing the preceding account of the "Fries Rebellion," we were influenced by two considerations; the first a desire to give a correct account of what was an important affair in its day, and hitherto but imperfectly understood; the second, a desire to do justice to those who played the leading parts. If we have succeeded in one or both desires, we have accomplished our purpose.

Of John Fries we have formed a more favorable opinion than we entertained when we commenced writing. We believe him to have been an earnest and honest, but misguided man, who was moved to the course he took by what he considered his duty. The conduct of Mr. Adams shows him to have been actuated by a sense of duty, as he understood it and the pardon of the "insurgents" rescues his memory from some of the charges brought against him. He was no doubt influenced to some extent, by the high political excitement of the day, but he cannot be justly accused of cruelty in the share he had in the troubles of the period. All the actors in these scenes have long since passed beyond the bar of public opinion, and their acts should now be judged with fairness and candor from the standpoint of history, whose chiefest honor is impartiality.

CHAPTER X.

ORGANIZATION OF LEHIGH COUNTY IN 1812.

"For Lehigh was our joy and pride,
Our glad, beloved river;
And all around was charmed ground,
Our home! delightful ever."

—Augusta Moore.

Forty years after the organization of Northampton county in 1752, the Allen family started a movement for the erection of a new county with Allentown as the county seat. Petitions were drawn up and presented to the Legislature, but the influence of the Penn heirs defeated the project. Mrs. Elizabeth Allen, the widow of James Allen, after the death of her husband, married Hon. John Lawrence, a United States Senator from New York. The following letter from Mrs. Lawrence to Judge Peter Rhoads, of Allentown, dated November 22, 1792, contains information on this subject which has never before been published. The letter reads:

"SIR:

"On consulting with my friends here respecting the division of the county, I find that if the proper steps are taken there is every prospect of success. The petitions are now preparing and shall be forwarded to you as soon as finished. I am informed that it will be necessary for them to be signed anew by those persons who signed the former ones and shall be obliged to you if you will inform me what you think the best method to be taken, as you were so kind when I last saw you as to offer your assistance in this business. If you would sketch out the lines of division between the counties, I would have them compared with those done here and would fix upon those which should be most advisable. If you would also endeavor to find out from the people of Bethlehem, that in case a division of the county should be brought about, in which they would wish to be included, in that of Easton or of Allentown and let me know, it would be doing a great service.

"With respect to any expenses which may be incurred in this business my children will very willingly pay a large proportion of them. It will be necessary that I should be acquainted with the determination of the Moravians before the lines which are to divide the counties can be determined. I enclose a copy of one of the petitions, which has already been presented. If you do not think it properly drawn, you will make the necessary alterations and let me know as soon as possible your sentiments on the subject, with those of the Moravians, as there is no time to be lost.

"I will be much obliged to you if you will let Mr. David Deshler, when he calls upon you, read this letter, as I have not written so full on the subject to him as I have to you.

"I am Sir, your friend, and well wisher.

"ELIZABETH LAWRENCE.

"Philadelphia, November 22, 1792.

"To Peter Rhoads, Esq., Allentown, Northampton County."

Miss Anne Penn Allen, eldest daughter of James Allen, wrote a letter on the subject a few months later, as follows:

"SIR:

"I feel myself very much obliged by your two friendly letters which I certainly should have answered sooner had there been any interesting intelligence to have given you respecting the petitions. I am, however, very happy to inform you that many circumstances are much in favor of them and that our friends here think we have great reason to be sanguine. Your letters contained much advice which will be useful. I gave them both to a member of the Assembly who has a high opinion of your judgment and thinks great advantage may be derived from them. We have many friends here who interest themselves warmly in our behalf and who think we shall be successful in carrying our point. If any new ideas should occur to you on the subject I shall be very much obliged to you if you would let me hear from you, as I find your opinions are of great weight with many of the members of the Assembly.

"I beg you to believe me, Sir, your friend and hearty well-wisher.

ANNE P. ALLEN.

"Philadelphia, February 7th, 1793.

"To Peter Rhoads, Esq., Allentown."

The population of the territory of Northampton County, lying west of the Lehigh River had by 1810 so increased that the project of forming a new county was again advocated and this time met with success. On March 6, 1812, the Assembly passed the act erecting Lehigh County. It was decreed by that law—

"That all that part of Northampton County, lying and being within the limits of the following townships, to wit, the townships of Lynn, Heidelberg, Lowhill, Weissenberg, Macungie, Upper Milford, South Whitehall, North Whitehall, Northampton, Salisbury, Upper Saucon, and that part of Hanover within the following bounds to wit, beginning at the Bethlehem line where it joins the river Lehigh, thence along the said line until it intersects the road leading from Bethlehem to the Lehigh Water Gap, thence along said road to Allen township line, thence along the line of Allen township westwardly to the Lehigh, shall be and the same are hereby, according to their present lines, declared to be erected into a county henceforth to be called Lehigh."

The townships which have been organized since the erection of the county are Upper and Lower Macungie, formed by the division of the original Macungie, in the spring of 1832; Washington township, taken from Heidelberg, on Dec. 6, 1847; Lower Milford, set off from Upper Milford, in January, 1853; and Whitehall, set off in 1867.

Northampton township once existed and has been lost, principally by absorption into the borough, and afterwards the city, of Allentown. No record of its organization can be found, but it seems to have been recognized as a township as early as 1804. At that time the county of Northampton was redistricted for judicial purposes, and Northampton, Salisbury, and Whitehall townships were made to constitute District No. 7. Elections for justices, constables, supervisors, school directors, and other officers were held until 1852. In that year a portion of Northampton was added to the borough of Allentown, and the remainder was doubtless attached to one of the bordering townships. At any rate it then ceased to exist as a township. What its precise boundaries were is not known.¹

Location of the County-Seat.—Section 9 of the organizing act of March 6, 1812, authorized and required the Governor, on or before the 1st day of May following, to appoint three discreet and disinterested persons, non-residents in the county of Northampton, nor holding real property therein, whose duty it should be to fix upon a proper and convenient site for a court-house, prison, and county-offices within the county of Lehigh, and as near its centre as the situation would admit. It was provided that these commissioners, or a majority of them, should, on or before the 1st of July, make a written report to the Governor in which they should certify and describe the site or lot of land they had chosen. Commissioners were also appointed to take possession of the property, and to assess, levy, and collect moneys for that purpose. It does not appear that a site was selected within the time specified by the act, as no purchase was made until Nov. 19, 1812. Upon that date William Tilghman (in his own right and by virtue of powers vested in him by an act of the General Assembly passed April 11, 1799, entitled "An Act for the benefit of Elizabeth Allen and Elizabeth Margaret Tilghman") sold to William Fenstermacher, John Yeakel, and Abraham Gresheimer, commissioners of Lehigh County, "in consideration of one hundred dollars lawful money and for other causes, two certain lots or parcels of ground adjoining each other, situate on the northwest corner of Hamilton and Margaret (now Fifth) Streets, in the borough of Northampton." These lots are one hundred and twenty feet in width by two hundred and twenty-five feet in depth on Fifth Street. The deed further specified that the lots were transferred to the commissioners, "to be by them held for the use and benefit of the people of the county, and for the purpose of erecting and building a court-house thereon, and such other public offices as may be deemed necessary for the said county of Lehigh." It was provided that the commissioners should "yield and pay therefor yearly, on the 1st day of January in every year, forever, the sum of four dollars lawful money to the party of the first part during his life," and after his death to Margaret Elizabeth Tilghman, her heirs and assigns, forever; "and the said party of the first part, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, hereby covenants with the said party of the second part and their successors in office forever, that no part of the said yearly rent shall ever be demanded or received by the said party of the first part, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, or by any other person or persons lawfully claiming or to claim under him or them, or by the said Elizabeth Margaret Tilghman, her heirs or assigns, or any person or persons lawfully claiming or to claim under her or them; and that in case the said Elizabeth Margaret Tilghman, her heirs or assigns, shall not execute a release of the said yearly rent so as to extinguish the same, then the heirs, executors, and administrators of the said party of the first part shall and will pay the said rent forever, and keep and preserve the said parties of the second part and their successors in office, and the said County of Lehigh forever indemnified from the payment of the said rent or any part thereof, and all costs and charges to be incurred on account of the same."

On the same date as the above—Nov. 19, 1812—a lot sixty by two hundred and thirty feet, on the southeast corner of Margaret and Andrew Streets (Fifth and Linden), was transferred for a nominal sum to the commissioners to serve as a site for the county jail. The deed sets forth that this lot was bought by William Fenstermacher, John Yeakel, and Abraham Gresheimer, commissioners of Lehigh County, from Henry Pratt, Thomas W. Francis, John Ashley, Thomas Astley, and Abraham Knitzing, of Philadelphia, merchants, by their attorney, William Tilghman, in compliance with a request by Ann Penn Greenleaf, wife of James Greenleaf, now resident in the borough of Northampton.

An effort was made to secure the location of the county-seat at Millerstown, now Macungie borough, and another to have the public buildings placed upon Market Square in Allentown. The Republikaner, in a contemporaneous issue, says that a bill was presented to the Legislature in reference to the latter location, but was not called up. Another bill, petitioning the appointment of commissioners, was called up on the 1st of April, 1814, and rejected by the vote of the Speaker. In the mean time, the jail had been built upon the lot secured for the purpose, and the county commissioners had advertised on Jan. 7, 1813, for contracts for the furnishing of stone, lumber, and other materials with which to build a court-house.

¹As no history of this township is given elsewhere in this volume, we present here a list of the justices of the peace elected in Northampton from 1840 to 1852 (those prior to the former year being given under the head of District No. 7 in the county civil list). They were as follows: Jacob Albright, 1840; Jonathan D. Meeker, 1842; James M. Wilson, 1844; John F. Holbach, 1848; George White, 1852.

Organization of the Courts.¹—The act by which Lehigh County was created provided and declared "That the inhabitants be entitled to and shall at all times hereafter have all and singular the courts, jurisdictions, officers, rights, and privileges to which the inhabitants of other counties of this State are entitled by the Constitution and laws of this Commonwealth," and "that from and after the third Monday in December next the Courts of Common Pleas and of General Quarter Sessions, in and for the County of Lehigh, shall be opened and held at the house now occupied by George Savitz,² in the borough of Northampton (Allentown), in the said county of Lehigh, until a Court House shall be erected in and for said county."

Under this authority the first term of court was opened. The following is from the court record:

"December the 21st, 1812. This being the day on which the several courts of Common Pleas, of the Quarter Sessions, of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, and of the Orphans' Court in and for the County of Lehigh, were to be opened, the Judges of the said Courts appeared at the house of George Savitz, in the Borough of Northampton, that being the House designated by law for holding the Courts, when the Honorable Robert Porter, Esquire, produced a Commission under the great Seal of the State, appointing him President Judge of the said Courts.

"Peter Rhoads, Esquire, produced a commission under the great seal of the State dated the 13th of October A. D. 1812, appointing him Senior Associate Judge of the said Courts, and Jonas Hartzell, Esquire, produced a Commission under the great seal of the State, dated the 13th of October, A. D. 1812, appointing him an Associate Judge of the said Courts."

"John Mulhaddon produced a commission from the State appointing him Prothonotary of Court of Common Pleas, Clerk of Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Term Delivery, Clerk of Court of Quarter Sessions and Orphans' Court, bearing date July 23d, A. D. 1812."

The grand inquest was composed as follows:

George Rhoads, Esq., Allentown.
 Daniel Saeger, Esq., Lynn.
 Frederick Jordan, Esq., Saucon.
 Daniel Cooper, Esq., Saucon.
 John Schuler, Esq., Upper Milford.
 Peter Moyer, Sr., farmer, South Whitehall.
 Adam Dorney, farmer, South Whitehall.
 George Ebenreiter, farmer, Hanover.
 Solomon Graff, distiller, North Whitehall.
 Christian Smith, farmer, Heidelberg.
 Andrew Strassburger, tanner, Upper Milford.
 David Biery, farmer, South Whitehall.
 John Keck, farmer, Heidelberg.
 John Baer, hatter, Upper Milford.
 Joseph Kidd, farmer, Hanover.
 Godfrey Roth, farmer, Heidelberg.
 Abraham Gruenewalt, miller, Weissenberg.
 John Engleman, farmer, Upper Milford.
 Jacob Grim, farmer, Macungie.
 George Smoll, farmer, North Whitehall.
 George Eisenhard, surveyor, Macungie.
 Joseph Larosh, farmer, Heidelberg.
 John Keiper, tobacconist, Allentown.
 Christian Smith, farmer, Lowhill.

The first business of court was the admission of attorneys. In the first thirteen cases that were called confessions of judgment were entered. There were altogether nineteen civil causes for trial. Eight cases were made returnable at the February term, 1813. Three petitions for roads were received, and one praying for the appointment of a commissioner to examine a person of alleged unsound mind. Three persons ¹The Third Judicial District, of which Lehigh, upon its erection in 1812, became a part, was created April 13, 1791, and was composed of the counties of Berks, Northampton, Luzerne, and Northumberland. Jacob Rush was its first president judge, and was succeeded by John Spayd in 1806. Robert Porter was elected in 1809, and was upon the bench when Lehigh County was organized. In 1831, Garrick Mallory was elected, and he was succeeded by John Banks, in 1836. The original district remained unchanged until April 14, 1834, when the State was re-districted, and Berks, Northampton, and Lehigh Counties were made to compose the Third District. On April 5, 1849, Berks County was detached and organized as the Twenty-third District. Northampton and Lehigh remained the Third until the State was again re-districted by act of Assembly, April 9, 1874, when Lehigh became the Thirty-first District, as it still remains.

²This was what is now the Hotel Allen, then a two-story stone structure, about and above which the present large hotel has slowly grown.

made declaration of their intention to become citizens.

On Nov. 30, 1813, court was opened at the house of George Savitz, but adjourned to meet in the upper story of the prison building (which was completed a short time before, and stood on lot No. 122, at the southeast corner of Margaret and Andrew Streets,—Fifth and Linden.

The court record reads: "At half past ten o'clock A. M., the Court met at the house of George Savitz, and adjourned from thence to meet in the room in the upper story of the county prison prepared by the Commissioners for holding the Courts of the County of Lehigh until the court house be erected."

The courts were held at this place until the summer of 1817, when the court-house was finished, since which time they have been held in that building (hereafter to be described), down to the present, with the exception of two terms in 1864, when the court-house was being remodeled.

The first record of the Orphans' Court of Lehigh County is dated Dec. 7, 1812, at which time a term of court was held by the associate justices, the Hon. Peter Rhoads and the Hon. Jonas Hartzel. But one case was brought before them,—the appointment of a guardian of a minor child.

The records in the register's office show that wills were recorded from the 13th day of September, 1812. Those of the following persons were recorded in that year: Daniel Schmeier, of Macungie township, dated July 28, 1812; John Newcomer, of Upper Saucon township, dated August 22, 1805; Matthias Brobst, of Lyon township, dated August 12, 1811; Christiana Wiederstein, of Macungie township, dated June 11, 1812, and Barbara Jenser, of Weissenberg, township dated October 3, 1812.

Letters of administration were granted in 1812 upon the estates of Nicholas Stahler and Daniel Smith, of Upper Milford township, Christian Stump, of Salisbury township, Adam Reber, of Hanover township, Andrew Schnable, Adam Wetzal and Regina Rice.

Among the first persons who declared their intentions to become citizens were, Charles Moore, on May 1, 1816, born in 1785, in County Donegal, Ireland; Gideon Ibach and Gustavus Ibach, on Sept. 7, 1816, born in 1785 and 1791, respectively, in the Dukedom of Berg, Westphalia, who emigrated to America in 1796; Henry Detweiler, born in Langenbrick, Canton Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 18, 1795, who left there April 2, 1817, and arrived at Philadelphia July 20, 1817, and Daniel Zacharias, born in Witgenstein, Darmstadt, April 22, 1783, who left there May 22, 1805, and arrived at Philadelphia Nov. 28, 1805, of which the two latter declared their intentions on May 6, 1818. Henry Heimer, a native of East Friesland, was naturalized Dec. 7, 1815.

Licenses were granted as follows: May, 1813, George Rhoads, Casper Kleckner, Eve Gross, Abraham Rinker and John F. Ruhe, Northampton; Michael Sieger and John More, North Whitehall; Henry Guth and Abraham Griese-mer, South Whitehall; Philip Giess, Salisbury, and George Wagner, Upper Milford. August, 1813, Christian Draxel and Peter Rumbel, North Whitehall; Jacob Hartman, Peter Dorney and George Wagner, South Whitehall; Martin Ritter, Rudolph Smith and George Giess, Salisbury; John Syder, Upper Saucon; George Savitz, John Miller and Abraham Gangewere, Northampton and George Grim, Weisenberg. November, 1813, Jacob Steckel and Daniel Siegfried, North Whitehall and John Billig and Joseph Levan, South Whitehall.

January, 1814, Peter Butz, South Whitehall.

August, 1814, Abraham Diehl, North Whitehall.

Early Financial Affairs of the County.—At the time of the formation of the county, William Tilghman, one of the proprietors of Northampton (Allentown), pledged himself to pay one thousand dollars annually for three successive years into the treasury of the county. He made the first payment Nov. 28, 1812, and it served an important part in meeting the expenses which the commissioners were obliged to incur. The total expenses of the county up to Jan. 1, 1813, were three hundred and sixty-eight dollars and eighty-two cents, leaving six hundred and thirty-one dollars and eighteen cents in the treasury. The expenditures were as follows:

G. Stahler, for election expenses at Millerstown . . .	$34.80
J. Mummy, for election expenses at Grim's District . . .	37.20
A. Shifferstein, for election expenses at Saeger's District	44.20
F. B. Shaw, for election expenses at Allentown District	49.50
G. Kramer, commissioner on seat of justice	50.00
George Savitz, rent of rooms for court	50.00
Commissioner's salary, November 20 to January 1	55.91
Quarry stone for prison	67.21
	$368.82

The county accotnts were audited by John Wagner, Frederick Hyneman, and George S. Eisenhard.

In 1813 the receipts of the county from all sources were $15,448.30. Of this sum, $1,558.66 represented the balance at the previous settlement, and the amount paid in by Judge Tilghman on his promised donation. The sum of $13,254.56 was collected in taxes out of $16,772.60 assessed on the inhabitants and estates, and $3.90 was paid in by Peter Hauck as sheriff's fees. At the close of the year there was a balance in the county treasury of $6,693.80. The auditors were John Weiss, John Spangenberg, and George S. Eisenhard.

In 1814 the total receipts were $18,325.91, and in 1815, $15,050.89. The auditors in those years were William Eckert, Henry Haas, and Henry Mohr.

In 1816 the total receipts were $17,214.05. This year, for the first time, bank loans were made for county purposes, the first being one of $2,176.53 from the Easton Bank.

COURT HOUSE AND JAIL.

As we have heretofore related, the first courts were held in George Savitz's hotel, a small building, which was the nucleus of the Hotel Allen, and the succeeding ones for several years in the jail or county prison building. The first action in reference to the erection of the court-house of which any record has been preserved was the insertion in the German newspapers of Allentown of an advertisement, bearing date of Jan. 7, 1814, calling for proposals for furnishing stone, lumber, shingles, and other material for the erection of the proposed building. The commissioners whose names were affixed to this card were William Fenstermacher, Philip Kleckner, and John Yeakel. In addition to the funds provided by taxation, a number of the inhabitants of Allentown had subscribed various sums for assisting in the work of erecting the public buildings. The treasurer's account for 1815 shows that three hundred dollars was received from William Tilghman for James Greenleaf for that purpose, and also a balance of money subscribed by the proprietors of the borough amounting to $141.34.

John Yeakel having visited Lycoming county and secured a plan of the court-house there, it was made the basis of design for the Lehigh county building. Work was immediately begun on the court-house, and it appears that during the year 1814 the money expended amounted to $6,911.98. During the next year the aggregate of the itemized account was $8,989.85, and in 1816 it was $1,852.68, thus making, with the cost of the bell, $775.80, incurred in 1817, a total of $18,530.31. Other improvements were made about the building and grounds which, as is shown by the commissioners' account for April, 1819, increased the grand total to $24,937.08. Court was held in the new building for the first time in August, 1817.

The court-house remained in its original condition, with occasional repairs, until 1864. At the November term of court in the preceding year the grand jury reported the "court-room entirely too small and inconvenient for the administration of justice, and are of opinion that by building an addition of about thirty feet to the north side thereof in proportion with the old building would make the court-room large enough, and would therefore recommend that the commissioners of the county would enlarge said court-room by making said addition to the same as aforesaid, the cost of which not to exceed the sum of three thousand dollars; or in case the cost of said attachment should exceed said sum of three thousand dollars, that such excess will be made up by private subscription.

"Approved Nov. 6, 1863.

"REUBEN STAHLER,

"Foreman."

Publication of the above recommendation was made in the newspapers, and no exception being taken, the report of the grand jury was approved by the court Jan. 14, 1864, and the commissioners were advised to immediately commence improvements. Accordingly, they advertised for proposals for furnishing stone with which to build. On the last of February, E. Culver, architect, of Williamsport, met the commissioners, and presented drafts and specifications, which were accepted, and on the same date an agreement was entered into with Henry Smith for the mason-work. Work was commenced April 17th, and prosecuted as expeditiously as was consistent with thoroughness. On the 10th of November the court was held in the enlarged room, which, however, was not finished, and the trial of William Keck for murder was conducted at that term.

The cost of the enlargement and improvement of the building, and the proper furnishing of the court-room and offices, which alone was four thousand dollars, amounted to $57,235.86. In 1914 work was begun on an addition to the court-house, to be erected at a cost of $199,000, which will give the public much-needed room.

The erection of the first jail antedated by nearly four years the building of the court-house. Active work was commenced upon it in the spring of 1813, and by fall had progressed so far that the commissioners ordered the upper room to be prepared for occupation by the courts, which was done, so that the November term of Quarter Sessions was held there. The room was used for this purpose until the completion of the court-house, in 1817. This building, which cost only a little over eight thousand four hundred and twenty dollars, was used as a jail until the present elaborate and imposing structure was in readiness, in 1869.

The first action was taken in reference to the new jail in 1865, the grand jury at the September term of court reporting:

"That in accordance with the suggestions of the court they have examined the county prison, and are unanimously of the opinion that the true interest of the county, and the duty of those who represent the people of the county, requires that a new jail should be erected as soon as consistent with our financial condition. We therefore recommend and direct the county commissioners to commence the erection of a county prison some time in the year 1867, having a due regard to the wants of the county and the interests of the people.

"By order of the Grand Inquest.

"LEVI LINE, Foreman."

The grand inquest at the October term, the same year (1865), reported, "That in accordance with suggestions of the court they have visited and examined the jail of said county, and find the same, in their opinion, quite inadequate to answer the purpose for which it is designed, it being too small and too badly arranged, and also too insecurely built to accommodate and keep safe the number of prisoners generally confined therein, and having examined a report on the same subject made by the grand inquest at the last preceding session, and having duly considered the premises, we beg leave to state that we fully concur therewith, and recommend the building of a new jail under the conditions set forth in said report."

After the publication of the recommendations given above and no exceptions being taken, the court approved of the report of the grand jury, and recommended the commissioners to proceed to the selection of a site and the erection of a new jail. On the 14th of March, 1866, the present site, two hundred and thirty feet on Fourth Street and four hundred and twenty feet on Linden, bounded by the streets named and Court and Penn streets, was purchased of Christian Pretz and others for ten thousand dollars.

At a meeting of the commissioners, held Dec. 3, 1866, it was resolved that the commissioners, the clerk, and Mr. G. A. Aschbach visit Schuylkill and other counties to examine their prisons. On the 10th of December they reported that they had visited the prisons of Schuylkill and Berks counties, and Mr. Aschbach was instructed to draw plans embodying the most desirable features in the structures they had seen.

On the 3d of April, 1867, it was resolved that a jail or penitentiary should be erected on the ground already purchased, "in accordance with the plans of Messrs. Aschbach and Nauman, who are appointed architects and engineers, and which plans have been approved by the secretary of the commonwealth."

Work was then immediately commenced. No contracts were made, but all of the labor was performed by the day, that upon the wood-work being under the superintendency of Stephen Dornblazer and James Focht. The stone used in the building, with the exception of that in the front, was from the quarry of Nathan Benner, in Salisbury township.

On April 16, 1868, the commissioners resolved to sell the old jail lot at public sale on June 6th following, possession to be given on April 1, 1869, or as soon thereafter as the new jail was ready for occupancy. Early in April, 1869, the new jail having approached completion, a bill was passed by the Legislature authorizing the transfer of prisoners to it from the old one. The transfer was made April 14, 1869.

The building was not entirely finished until 1870. The last report of Mr. Aschbach, bearing date of Dec. 12th in that year, contained a statement of the amounts expended upon the work each year, as follows: 1867, $68,653.78; 1868, $63,627.42; 1869, $38,963.62; 1870, $9,800.89; 1871, $8,349. If to the aggregate of these amounts the sum of $10,000 expended in 1866 for the lots and $9,094.25 in 1869 for a heavy iron fence be added, it will be seen that the total cost of the prison was $200,222.95.

The jail is a model one in all respects. It is a massive and substantial-appearing structure in the Tudor style of architecture, and the sombre brown or dark-red sandstone of its front gives, in combination with its outlines, an impression of gloomy grandeur. A square tower rises from the centre of the front to a height of one hundred feet. It is embattled at the top with heavy embrasures. The building is two stories in height, and the long structure extending back from the front, in which is the prison-keeper's residence, gives the building the form of a letter T. The length of the side walls is one hundred and seventy-eight feet, and they are built of the Lehigh mountain stone.

The original building contains forty cells, besides seven large rooms used for working purposes, storage, etc., the warden's and clerk's offices and the living rooms of the warden. On March 17, 1908, work was begun on an addition to the jail by the Van Dorn Iron Company, to whom the contract for the entire work, including the cement block building and steel cells, was awarded at $148,000. The addition contains ninety steel cells, in three tiers. In the basement are the boilers and the laundry and on the first floor, used as a workshop, are fourteen large rooms and the kitchen. An "L" to the building contains sixteen rooms or cells used for female prisoners. The addition was completed July 1, 1909.

Sheriff Miller had charge of the prisoners from April 14, 1869 to April 1, 1870, when the first warden was elected. The wardens and the dates of their incumbency are as follows:

- Thomas Jacoby, from April 1, 1870, to April 1, 1876.
- David Schaadt, from April 1, 1876, to April 1, 1879.
- J. H. Lichtenwalner, from April 1, 1879, to April 1, 1882.
- John Jacoby, from April 1, 1882, to April 1, 1885.
- W. R. Henninger, from April 1, 1885, to April 1, 1890.
- Daniel Wisser, from April 1, 1890, to April 1, 1892.
- Daniel H. Creitz, from April 1, 1892, to April 1, 1893.
- Edwin Osenbach, from April 1, 1893, to April 1, 1894.
- Tilghman J. Deshler, from April 1, 1894, to April 1, 1897.
- Tilghman D. Frey, from April 1, 1897, to April 1, 1903.
- Harvey J. Wicand, from April 1, 1903, to the present time.

The deputy warden is J. A. Anderson; foreman, Dept. of Labor, J. H. Bossard; underkeeper, C. F. Allender; night watchman, Edgar Guikinger, and clerk, Elmer E. Edinger. The Board of Prison Inspectors consists of James L. Foote, President; Geo. T. Ettinger, Secretary; W. H. Biery, F. G. Werley, and S. K. Fetterman. The cost of maintaining prisoners for 1913 was $11,192.41, for 1,260 inmates.

FEDERAL AND STATE OFFICIALS.

List of Civil Officials of Lehigh County and Representatives in National and State Legislative Bodies.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

- Daniel Hiester, 1st, 2nd and 3rd Congresses, 1789-1795. Elected. { 1788
Represented Northampton, Berks and Luzerne { 1790 Counties. { 1792
- Samuel Sitgreaves, 4th and 5th Congresses, 1795-1799. { 1794
Represented Northampton, Bucks and Montgom- { 1796
ery Counties. { 1794
- John Richards, 4th Congress, 1795-1797. { 1798
Election contested by James Morris. { 1800
1802
1804
Gen. Robert Brown, 6th to 13th Congresses, 1799-1815. { 1804
Declined re-election in 1814. { 1806
1808
1810
1812
- Peter Muhlenberg, 7th Congress, 1801-1803. 1800
Represented Northampton, Bucks, Montgomery and Wayne Counties.
- Isaac Van Horne, 7th and 8th Congresses, 1801-1805. 1801
Elected October, 1801, to succeed Muhlenberg, who resigned. From 1804 to 1812 the counties of Northampton, Bucks, Montgomery, Wayne and Luzerne elected three members.
- John Pugh, 9th and 10th Congresses, 1805-1809. { 1804
Frederick Conrad, 9th Congress, 1805-1807. { 1806
1804
William Milnor, 10th and 11th Congresses, 1807-1811. { 1806
1808
John Ross, 11th Congress, 1809-1811. 1810
Jonathan Roberts, 12th Congress, 1811-1813. 1810
William Rodman, 12th Congress, 1811-1813. 1810
In 1812 Bucks, Northampton, Wayne and Lehigh counties elected two members.

- Samuel D. Ingham, 13th, 14th and 15th Congresses, { 1812
1813-1818. { 1814
1816
- John Ross, 14th and 15th Congresses, 1815-1818. { 1814
1816
- Thomas J. Rogers, 15th, 16th and 17th Congresses, { 1818
1818-1823. { 1820

- Special election, March 3, 1818, Rogers elected to fill vacancy caused by the resignation of John Ross, appointed President Judge of the Seventh Judicial district.
- Dr. Samuel Moore, 15th, 16th and 17th Congresses, { 1818
1818-1822. { 1820
Special election, Oct. 13, 1818, Samuel D. Ingham resigned and Moore elected. { 1822
- Samuel D. Ingham, 17th Congress, 1822-1823. 1822
Elected to fill vacancy, Samuel Moore resigned.

SEVENTH DISTRICT, LEHIGH, SCHUYLKILL AND BERKS COUNTIES.

- Henry Wilson, 18th and 19th Congresses, 1823-1826. { 1822
Died in office, August 14, 1826. { 1824
- Daniel Udree, 18th Congress, 1823-1825. 1822
- William Addams, 19th and 20th Congresses, 1825- { 1824
1829. { 1826
- John Krebs, 19th and 20th Congresses, 1826-1827. 1826
Elected to fill vacancy caused by Wilson's death.
- Joseph Frey, Jr., 20th and 21st Congresses, 1827- { 1826
1831. { 1828
- Henry A. Mullenberg, 21st and 22nd Congresses, { 1830
1829-1833. { 1828
- Henry King, 22nd and 23rd Congresses, 1831-1835. { 1830
1832
- Edward B. Hubley, 24th and 25th Congresses, 1835- { 1834
1839. { 1836
- Peter Newhard, 26th and 27th Congresses, 1839- { 1838
1843. { 1840
- Michael H. Jenks, 28th Congress, 1843-1845. 1842

SIXTH DISTRICT, BUCKS AND LEHIGH COUNTIES.

- Jacob Erdman, 29th Congress, 1845-1847. 1844
- John W. Hornbeck, 30th Congress, 1847-1849. 1846
- Samuel A. Bridges, 30th Congress, 1848-1849. 1848
Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John W. Hornbeck.
- Thomas Ross, 31st and 32nd Congresses, 1849-1853. { 1848
1850
- Samuel A. Bridges, 33rd Congress, 1853-1855. 1852
- Samuel C. Bradshaw, 34th Congress, 1855-1857. 1854
- Henry Chapman, 35th Congress, 1857-1859. 1856
- Henry C. Longnecker, 36th Congress, 1859-1861. 1858
- Thomas B. Cooper, 37th Congress, 1861-1863. 1860

SIXTH DISTRICT, MONTGOMERY AND LEHIGH COUNTIES.

- John D. Stiles, 37th and 38th Congresses, 1862-1865. 1862 Elected to fill unexpired term of Thos. B. Cooper, deceased.
- Benjamin M. Boyer, 39th and 40th Congresses, 1865- { 1864
1869. { 1866
- John D. Stiles, 41st Congress, 1869-1871. 1868
- Ephraim L. Acker, 42nd Congress, 1871-1873. 1870
- James S. Biery, 43rd Congress, 1873-1875. 1872

TENTH DISTRICT, LEHIGH, NORTHAMPTON AND PART OF BUCKS COUNTIES.

- William Mutchler, 44th Congress, 1875-1877. 1874
- Samuel A. Bridges, 45th Congress, 1877-1879. 1876
- Reuben K. Bachman, 46th Congress, 1879-1881. 1878
- William Mutchler, 47th and 48th Congresses, 1881- { 1880
1885. { 1882
- William H. Sowden, 49th and 50th Congresses, 1885- { 1884
1889. { 1886

NINTH DISTRICT, BERKS AND LEHIGH COUNTIES.

- David B. Brunner, 51st and 52nd Congresses, 1889- { 1888
1893. { 1890
- Constantine J. Erdman, 53rd and 54th Congresses, { 1892
1893-1897. { 1894
- Daniel Ermentrout, 55th and 56th Congresses, 1897- { 1896
1901. { 1898
- Henry D. Green, 56th and 57th Congresses, 1899- { 1899
1903. Elected Nov. 7, 1899, vice Daniel Ermen-trout, deceased. { 1900
- Marcus C. L. Kline, 58th and 59th Congresses, 1903- { 1902
1907. { 1904
- John H. Rothermel, 60th, 61st, 62nd and 63rd Con- { 1906 gresses, 1907-1915. { 1908
1910
1912

STATE SENATORS.

Elected
 James Wilson, ... Oct., 1809
 (Represented Northampton County)
 Henry Jarrett, ... Oct., 1813
 Joseph Frey, Jr., ... Oct., 1817
 Joseph Frey, Jr., ... Oct., 1821
 Henry King, ... Oct., 1825
 Henry King, ... Oct., 1829
 Walter C. Livingston, ... Oct., 1831
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1833
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1837
 John S. Gibbons, ... Oct., 1840
 John S. Gibbons, ... Oct., 1842
 Jacob D. Boas, ... Oct., 1846
 Conrad Shimer, ... Oct., 1849
 William Fry, ... Oct., 1852
 Joseph Laubach, ... Oct., 1855
 Jeremiah Schindel, ... Oct., 1858
 George W. Stein, ... Oct., 1861

Elected.
 George B. Schall, ... Oct., 1864
 Robert S. Brown, ... Oct., 1867
 Edwin Albright, ... Oct., 1870
 Edwin Albright, ... Oct., 1873
 Eyan Holben, ... Nov., 1876
 Eyan Holben, ... Nov., 1879
 Milton C. Henninger, ... Nov., 1882
 Milton C. Henninger, ... Nov., 1885
 Milton C. Henninger, ... Nov., 1888
 Milton C. Henninger, ... Nov., 1891
 Harry G. Stiles, ... Nov., 1894
 Harry G. Stiles, ... Nov., 1897
 Arthur G. Dewalt, ... Nov., 1902
 Arthur G. Dewalt, ... Nov., 1906
 James A. Miller, ... Nov., 1910

MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Elected
 Philip Sellers, ... Oct., 1812
 Jacob Stein, ... Oct., 1812
 Abraham Rinker, Sr., ... Oct., 1813
 Jacob Stein, ... Oct., 1813
 Abraham Rinker, Sr., ... Oct., 1814
 Philip Wint, ... Oct., 1814
 Abraham Rinker, Sr., ... Oct., 1815
 Philip Wint, ... Oct., 1815
 Joseph Frey, Jr., ... Oct., 1816
 Henry Mertz, Jr., ... Oct., 1816
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1817
 William Fenstermacher, ... Oct., 1817
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1818
 William Fenstermacher, ... Oct., 1818
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1819
 William Fenstermacher, ... Oct., 1819
 John J. Krause, ... Oct., 1820
 William Fenstermacher, ... Oct., 1820
 John J. Krause, ... Oct., 1821
 William Fenstermacher, ... Oct., 1821
 John J. Krause, ... Oct., 1822
 George S. Eisenhart, ... Oct., 1822
 Samuel Meyer, ... Oct., 1823
 George S. Eisenhart, ... Oct., 1823
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1824
 Jacob Dillinger, ... Oct., 1824
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1825
 Jacob Dillinger, ... Oct., 1825
 George Miller, ... Oct., 1826
 Jacob Dillinger, ... Oct., 1826
 George Miller, ... Oct., 1827
 Jacob Dillinger, ... Oct., 1827
 George Miller, ... Oct., 1828
 Walter C. Livingston, ... Oct., 1828
 Peter Newhard, ... Oct., 1829
 Peter Kneppley, ... Oct., 1829
 Christian Pretz, ... Oct., 1830
 Peter Kneppley, ... Oct., 1830
 John Weida, ... Oct., 1831
 Peter Kneppley, ... Oct., 1831
 John Weida, ... Oct., 1832
 Peter Kneppley, ... Oct., 1832
 John Weida, ... Oct., 1833
 Jesse Grim, ... Oct., 1833
 Alexander Miller, ... Oct., 1834
 Jacob Erdman, ... Oct., 1834
 Alexander Miller, ... Oct., 1835
 William Stahr, ... Oct., 1835
 Jacob Erdman, ... Oct., 1836
 George Frederick, ... Oct., 1836
 Jacob Erdman, ... Oct., 1837
 Michael Ritter, ... Oct., 1837
 Charles Foster, ... Oct., 1838
 Michael Ritter, ... Oct., 1838
 Benjamin Fogel, ... Oct., 1839
 Michael Ritter, ... Oct., 1839

Elected
 Benjamin Fogel, ... Oct., 1840
 Peter Haas, ... Oct., 1840
 Benjamin Fogel, ... Oct., 1841
 Peter Haas, ... Oct., 1841
 George Frederick, ... Oct., 1842
 George S. Eisenhart, ... Oct., 1842
 Reuben Strauss, ... Oct., 1843
 Phaoon Jarrett, ... Oct., 1843
 Reuben Strauss, ... Oct., 1844
 Jesse Samuels, ... Oct., 1844
 Reuben Strauss, ... Oct., 1845
 Jesse Samuels, ... Oct., 1845
 David Laury, ... Oct., 1846
 Peter Bauman, ... Oct., 1846
 Samuel Marx, ... Oct., 1847
 Peter Bauman, ... Oct., 1847
 Samuel Marx, ... Oct., 1848
 Robert Klotz, ... Oct., 1848
 Samuel Marx, ... Oct., 1849
 Robert Klotz, ... Oct., 1849
 David Laury, ... Oct., 1850
 William Lilly, Jr., ... Oct., 1850
 David Laury, ... Oct., 1851
 William Lilly, Jr., ... Oct., 1851
 David Laury, ... Oct., 1852
 James R. Struthers, ... Oct., 1852
 David Laury, ... Oct., 1853
 James R. Struthers, ... Oct., 1853
 Thomas Craig, Jr., ... Oct., 1854
 James L. Reese, ... Oct., 1854
 Thomas Craig, Jr., ... Oct., 1855
 Joshua Fry, ... Oct., 1855
 Herman Rupp, ... Oct., 1856
 Enos Tolan, ... Oct., 1856
 Herman Rupp, ... Oct., 1857
 Charles H. Williams, ... Oct., 1857
 Tilghman H. Good, ... Oct., 1858
 Samuel Balliet, ... Oct., 1858
 Samuel J. Kistler, ... Oct., 1859
 Zachariah H. Long, ... Oct., 1859
 Wm. C. Litchewalner, ... Oct., 1860
 William H. Butler, ... Oct., 1860
 Wm. C. Litchewalner, ... Oct., 1861
 Charles Craig, ... Oct., 1861
 Samuel Camp, ... Oct., 1862
 Thomas Craig, ... Oct., 1862
 Nelson Weiser, ... Oct., 1863
 Zacharias Long, ... Oct., 1863
 Nelson Weiser, ... Oct., 1864
 James F. Kline, ... Oct., 1864
 Nelson Weiser, ... Oct., 1865
 James F. Kline, ... Oct., 1865
 John H. Fogel, ... Oct., 1866
 James F. Kline, ... Oct., 1866
 John H. Fogel, ... Oct., 1867
 Daniel H. Creitz, ... Oct., 1867
 John H. Fogel, ... Oct., 1868
 Daniel H. Creitz, ... Oct., 1868
 Adam Woolever, ... Oct., 1869

Elected
 Daniel H. Creitz, ... Oct., 1869
 Adam Woolever, ... Oct., 1870
 Herman M. Fetter, ... Oct., 1870
 Adam Woolever, ... Oct., 1871
 Herman M. Fetter, ... Oct., 1871
 Boas Hausman, ... Oct., 1872
 Robert Steckel, ... Oct., 1872
 Robert Steckel, ... Oct., 1873
 James Kimmitt, ... Oct., 1873
 John H. Fogel, ... Nov., 1874
 James Kimmitt, ... Nov., 1874
 George T. Gross, ... Nov., 1874
 Franklin B. Heller, ... Nov., 1876
 George T. Gross, ... Nov., 1876
 Ernest Nakel, ... Nov., 1876
 Franklin B. Heller, ... Nov., 1878
 Ernest Nakel, ... Nov., 1878
 Charles H. Foster, ... Nov., 1878
 Patrick F. Boyle, ... Nov., 1880
 Amandus Sieger, ... Nov., 1880
 William B. Erdman, ... Nov., 1880
 Patrick F. Boyle, ... Nov., 1882
 Amandus Sieger, ... Nov., 1882
 William B. Erdman, ... Nov., 1882
 Hugh E. Crilly, ... Nov., 1884
 Monroe B. Harwick, ... Nov., 1884
 M. R. Schaeffer, ... Nov., 1884
 Hugh E. Crilly, ... Nov., 1886
 David D. Roper, ... Nov., 1886
 Jeremiah Roth, ... Nov., 1886
 David D. Roper, ... Nov., 1888
 Monroe B. Harwick, ... Nov., 1888
 Henry C. Wagner, ... Nov., 1888
 Jeremiah Roth, ... Nov., 1890
 David D. Roper, ... Nov., 1890
 Milton N. Bernhardt, ... Nov., 1890
 Michael J. Lennon, ... Nov., 1892
 Joseph C. Rupp, ... Nov., 1892
 Milton N. Bernhardt, ... Nov., 1892

Elected.
 Michael J. Lennon, ... Nov., 1894
 Alvin J. Kern, ... Nov., 1894
 Perry Wannemacher, ... Nov., 1894
 (Died in office, Aug. 31, 1895.)
 Alvin J. Kern, ... Nov., 1896
 Michael J. Lennon, ... Nov., 1896
 Milton J. Kramlich, ... Nov., 1896
 Jonas F. Moyer, ... Nov., 1898
 Milton J. Kramlich, ... Nov., 1898
 Jeremiah Roth, ... Nov., 1898
 Jonas F. Moyer, ... Nov., 1900
 Joseph W. Mayne, ... Nov., 1900
 Jeremiah Roth, ... Nov., 1900
 Jonas F. Moyer, ... Nov., 1902
 Joseph W. Mayne, ... Nov., 1902
 Jeremiah Roth, ... Nov., 1902
 James L. Mars-teller, ... Nov., 1904
 Alvin J. Haines, ... Nov., 1904
 Daniel H. Flielar, ... Nov., 1904
 1st Dist., Rein K. Hartzell, ... Nov., 1906
 2d Dist., Alvin S. Haines, ... Nov., 1906
 3d Dist., William H. Decker, ... Nov., 1906
 1st Dist., Fred H. Horlacher, ... Nov., 1908
 2d Dist., Oliver E. Leh, ... Nov., 1908
 3d Dist., Wm. H. Decker, ... Nov., 1908
 1st Dist., Claude T. Reno, ... Nov., 1910
 2d Dist., Oliver E. Leh, ... Nov., 1910
 3d Dist., Ellsworth G. M. Kuhns, ... Nov., 1910
 1st Dist., Warren K. Miller, ... Nov., 1912
 2d Dist., Alexander Morrow, ... Nov., 1912
 3d Dist., Ellsworth G. M. Kuhns, ... Nov., 1912

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

SHERIFFS.

Commissioned.
 Peter Hauck, ... Oct. 22, 1812
 George Klotz, ... Oct. 17, 1815
 Anthony Musick, ... Oct. 22, 1817
 Charles L. Hutter, ... Oct. 27, 1820
 Abraham Rinker, ... Oct. 21, 1823
 Daniel Mertz, ... Oct. 16, 1826
 Abraham Rinker, ... Oct. 20, 1829
 Peter Hoffman, ... Oct. 16, 1832
 Jacob Hagenbuch, ... Oct. 20, 1835
 Jonathan D. Meeker, ... Nov. 12, 1838
 George Wetlerholt, ... Oct. 10, 1841
 David Stem, ... Oct. 8, 1844
 Charles Ihrie, ... Oct. 23, 1847
 Joseph F. Newhard, ... Oct. 16, 1850
 Nathan Weiler, ... Oct. 18, 1853
 Henry Smith, ... Oct. 25, 1856
 Charles B. Haines, ... Oct. 17, 1859
 Herman M. Fetter, ... Nov. 12, 1862

Commissioned.
 Jacob Holben, ... Oct. 31, 1865
 John P. Miller, ... Oct. 29, 1868
 Owen W. Faust, ... Oct. 31, 1871
 Edwin Zimmerman, ... Dec. 8, 1874
 Thomas B. Morgan, ... Dec. 18, 1877
 George Bower, ... Dec. 7, 1880
 Charles B. Mabberry, ... Dec. 20, 1883
 Samuel F. Miller, ... Dec. 18, 1886
 Frank Rabenold, ... Dec. 17, 1889
 Franklin Bower, ... Dec. 19, 1892
 Frank C. H. Schweyer, ... Dec. 19, 1895
 Wayne Bitting, ... Dec. 22, 1898
 Jacob B. Waide-lich, ... Dec. 19, 1901
 Edwin A. Krause, ... Dec. 19, 1904
 Victor H. Wiand, ... Dec. 19, 1907
 Harry F. Bower, ... Dec. 23, 1911

PROTHONOTARIES.

Commissioned.
 John Mulhal-len, ... July, 23, 1812
 Henry Wilson, ... Apr. 14, 1815
 Henry Wilson, ... Jan. 8, 1818
 Christian F. Beitel, ... Feb. 9, 1821

Commissioned.
 Charles L. Hutter, ... Jan. 2, 1824
 Charles L. Hutter, ... Dec. 23, 1827
 Daniel Kramer, ... Mar. 29, 1830
 Daniel Kramer, ... Feb. 4, 1833

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Commissioned.
 Edmund W. Hutter, Nov. 25, 1834
 Charles Craig, July 13, 1835
 Jacob Dilling-
 er, Oct. 20, 1835
 Christian F. Beitel, Jan. 9, 1836
 Christian F. Beitel, Jan. 4, 1839
 Jesse Samuels, Jan. 29, 1839
 Jesse Samuels, Nov. 14, 1839
 Daniel Mertz, Nov. 12, 1842
 Nathan Miller, Nov. 17, 1845
 Nathan Miller, Nov. 25, 1848
 Francis E. Samuels, Nov. 22, 1851
 Francis E. Sam-
 uels, Nov. 18, 1854
 James Lackey, Nov. 18, 1857
 James Lackey, Nov. 19, 1860
 Esaias Rehrig, Nov. 4, 1863
 Esaias Rehrig, Nov. 8, 1866
 Jacob S. Dill-
 inger, Nov. 27, 1869

Commissioned.
 Jacob S. Dill-
 inger, Nov. 7, 1872
 Henry A. Saylor, Dec. 15, 1875
 Henry C. Wagner, Dec. 14, 1878
 Tilghman D. Frey, Dec. 27, 1881
 James Haus-
 man, Dec. 17, 1884
 Jonas F. Kline, Dec. 14, 1887
 Edwin H. Stine, Dec. 20, 1890
 Rufus T. Erdman, Dec. 15, 1893
 Wm. H. Snyder, Dec. 19, 1896
 John F. Stine, Dec. 21, 1899
 Ira T. Erd-
 man, Dec. 23, 1902
 George G. Blu-mer, Dec. 22, 1905
 Alfred F. Berlin, Dec. 23, 1908
 M o r r i s R. Schantz, Dec. 23, 1911

Commissioned.
 Frederick Hyne-
 man, Jan. 2, 1824
 Frederick Hyne-
 man, Dec. 23, 1826
 Henry Jarrett, June 1, 1829
 Jacob Dilling-
 er, March 29, 1830
 Jacob Dilling-
 er, Feb. 4, 1833
 H e n r y W. Knipe, Jan. 19, 1836
 H e n r y W. Knipe, Jan. 4, 1839
 C h a r l e s S. Bush, Jan. 29, 1839
 C h a r l e s S. Bush, Nov. 14, 1839
 W. Selfridge, Nov. 12, 1842
 John D. Law-
 all, Nov. 17, 1845
 John D. Law-
 all, Nov. 25, 1848
 Nathan Metzger, Nov. 22, 1851
 James W. Mick-
 ley, Nov. 18, 1854
 Boas Hausman, Nov. 10, 1857
 Boas Hausman, Nov. 19, 1860
 J. E. Zimmerman, Nov. 4, 1863

Commissioned.
 George W. Hartzel, Nov. 8, 1866
 Augustus L. Ruhe, Nov. 20, 1869
 Joseph Hunter, Nov. 7, 1872
 E. J. Newhard, Dec. 15, 1875
 J o h n P. Goundie, Dec. 14, 1878
 James H. Crader, Dec. 27, 1881
 Allen W. Haines, Dec. 17, 1884
 Allen W. Haines, Dec. 14, 1887
 Henry W. Frey, Dec. 20, 1890
 Nathan E. Worman, Dec. 22, 1891
 Ellwood L. Newhard, Dec. 19, 1894
 Francis A. Kreitz, Dec. 16, 1897
 Oscar P. Werley, Dec. 18, 1900
 Milton J. Hoffman, Dec. 14, 1903
 Jonathan E. Frederick, Dec. 19, 1906
 Oliver A. Iobst, Dec. 17, 1909
 John C. Lentz, Dec. 19, 1913

RECORDERS OF DEEDS.

Commissioned.
 Leonard Nagle, July 13, 1812
 Leonard Nagle, Jan. 18, 1818
 George Marx, Feb. 9, 1821
 James Hall, Jan. 2, 1824
 James Hall, Dec. 23, 1826
 John Wilson, March 29, 1830
 William Boas, Jan. 19, 1836
 William Boas, Jan. 4, 1839
 Anthony Gang-
 were, Jan. 29, 1839
 Anthony Gang-
 were, Nov. 14, 1839
 Anthony Gang-
 were, Nov. 12, 1842
 George Stein, Nov. 17, 1845
 Nathan German, Nov. 25, 1848
 Nathan German, Nov. 22, 1851
 Charles Gross, Nov. 18, 1854
 Benjamin M. Krause, June 13, 1856
 G e o r g e T. Gross, Nov. 10, 1856
 Joseph Saeger, Nov. 4, 1859
 Jonathan Trex-
 ler, Nov. 12, 1862

Commissioned.
 Jonathan Trex-
 ler, Nov. 6, 1865
 Silas Camp, Nov. 13, 1868
 Silas Camp, Nov. 14, 1871
 John F. Seib-erling, Dec. 8, 1874
 Edwin H. Brad-
 er, Dec. 24, 1877
 Dallas Dilling-
 er, Dec. 7, 1880
 J o s e p h C. Rupp, Dec. 20, 1883
 Henry J. Gackenbach, Dec. 17, 1886
 Albert S. Weil-
 er, Dec. 18, 1889
 Morris J. Stephen, Dec. 19, 1892
 E. R. Benner, Dec. 19, 1895
 W. Mathias Ritter, Dec. 22, 1898
 G e o r g e F. Knerr, Dec. 19, 1901
 David Davis, Dec. 19, 1904
 Harvey T. Shul-
 er, Dec. 19, 1907
 Oliver T. Weaber, Dec. 23, 1911

CLERKS OF ORPHANS' COURT.

Commissioned.
 John Mulhallen, July 23, 1812
 Henry Wilson, April 14, 1815
 Henry Wilson, Jan. 8, 1818
 Christian F. Beitel, Feb. 9, 1821
 Christian F. Beitel, Nov. 11, 1823
 Fred. Hyneman, Jan. 2, 1824
 Fred. Hyneman, Dec. 23, 1826
 Henry Jarrett, June 1, 1829
 Jacob Dillinger, March 29, 1830
 Jacob Dillinger, Feb. 4, 1833
 Henry W. Knipe, Jan. 19, 1836
 Henry W. Knipe, Jan. 4, 1839
 Charles S. Bush, Jan. 29, 1839
 Charles S. Bush, Nov. 14, 1839
 W. Selfridge, Nov. 12, 1842
 John D. Lawall, Nov. 17, 1845
 John D. Lawall, Nov. 25, 1848
 Nathan Metzger, Nov. 22, 1851
 James W. Mickle-
 y, Nov. 18, 1854
 Boas Hausman, Nov. 10, 1857

Commissioned.
 Boas Hausman, Nov. 19, 1860
 J. E. Zimmerman, Nov. 4, 1863
 George W. Hartzel, Nov. 8, 1866
 Augustus L. Ruhe, Nov. 20, 1869
 Augustus L. Ruhe, Nov. 7, 1872
 Francis Weiss, Dec. 15, 1875
 John Van Billiard, Dec. 20, 1878
 Henry W. Mohr, Dec. 27, 1881
 Chas. B. Kline, Dec. 17, 1884
 Wm. K. Klein, Dec. 11, 1885
 J. Holmes Wright, Dec. 29, 1888
 Lewis L. Lenhart, Dec. 22, 1891
 Franklin Hartman, Dec. 19, 1894
 Martin Klingler, Dec. 16, 1897
 Albert O. Strauss, Dec. 18, 1900
 Lewis L. Roeder, Dec. 14, 1903
 Amandus R. Schuler, Dec. 19, 1906
 Edmund D. Jeanes, Dec. 17, 1909
 Arthur J. D. Koenig, Dec. 28, 1913

REGISTERS OF WILLS.

Commissioned.
 Leonard Nagle, July 23, 1812
 Leonard Nagle, Jan. 8, 1818
 George Marx, Feb. 9, 1821
 James Hall, Jan. 2, 1824
 James Hall, Dec. 23, 1826
 John Wilson, Mar. 29, 1830
 William Boas, Jan. 19, 1836
 William Boas, Jan. 4, 1839
 Samuel Marx, Jan. 29, 1839
 Samuel Marx, Nov. 14, 1839
 Tilghman Good, Jan. 12, 1842
 Edward Beck, Nov. 17, 1845
 Edward Beck, Nov. 25, 1848
 Joshua Stahler, Nov. 22, 1851
 Samuel Colver, Nov. 18, 1854
 Jacob Stlemmer, Nov. 10, 1857
 Jacob Stlemmer, Nov. 19, 1860
 S a m u e l R. Engleman, Nov. 4, 1863
 S a m u e l R. Engleman, Nov. 8, 1866
 E d m u n d R. Newhard, Nov. 20, 1869
 E d m u n d R. Newhard, Nov. 7, 1872
 Henry German, Dec. 15, 1875

Commissioned.
 E. B. Harlach-
 er, Dec. 14, 1878
 Tilghman F. Keck, Dec. 27, 1881
 Obadiah Pfeif-
 er, Dec. 17, 1884
 Tilghman F. Keck, Dec. 14, 1887
 J a m e s B. Smith, Dec. 20, 1890
 Henry Heilman, Dec. 15, 1893
 Franklin Weaver, Dec. 19, 1896
 Harry F. Longnecker, Dec. 21, 1899
 Malcolm W. Gross, Dec. 16, 1902
 S a m u e l J. Koehler, Dec. 22, 1905
 J. Herbert Kohl-
 er, Dec. 23, 1908
 D a v i d H. Thomas, July 7, 1910
 Edwin W. German, Dec. 23, 1911

CORONERS.

Commissioned.
 Peter Dorney, Oct. 23, 1812
 Peter Newhard, Dec. 17, 1815
 Henry Weaver, Dec. 14, 1817
 Daniel Mertz, Jan. 6, 1819
 Andrew Knauss, Dec. 20, 1821
 Benjamin Fogel, Dec. 17, 1824
 Jacob Shantz, Jan. 23, 1829
 Peter Miller, Dec. 11, 1830
 Daniel Klein, Oct. 25, 1833
 Charles Foster, Dec. 9, 1836
 Jacob Marx, Mar. 13, 1839
 Solomon Gangwere, Nov. 8, 1841
 John Eisenhart, Nov. 20, 1844
 Charles Troxell, March 30, 1846

Commissioned.
 Charles Troxell, Nov. 13, 1846
 John Erdman, Dec. 5, 1849
 Jacob Mayers, Nov. 8, 1852
 Joshua Stahler, Jan. 19, 1856
 Owen Saeger, Nov. 7, 1856
 Owen W. Faust, Nov. 9, 1857
 Edwin G. Martin, Nov. 9, 1860
 Ephraim Yohe, Jan. 5, 1864
 James H. Bush, Nov. 9, 1866
 James H. Bush, Nov. 11, 1869
 William H. Romig, Dec. 23, 1871
 Americus V. Mosser, Oct. 23, 1872
 John Osman, Dec. 15, 1875
 Israel H. Troxell, Dec. 20, 1878

CLERKS OF QUARTER SESSIONS AND OYER AND TERMINER.

Commissioned.
 John Mulhal-
 len, July 23, 1812
 Henry Wilson, Apr. 14, 1815
 Henry Wilson, Jan. 8, 1818

Commissioned.
 Christian F. Beitel, Feb. 9, 1821
 Christian F. Beitel, Nov. 11, 1823

Commissioned.
 Thomas F. Martin, Dec. 27, 1881
 W. S. Berlin, Dec. 17, 1884
 Charles Klump, Dec. 14, 1887
 Howard S. Kramer, Dec. 20, 1890
 Dr. Alfred J. Yost, Dec. 15, 1893

Commissioned.
 Dr. Alfred J. Yost, Dec. 19, 1896
 James Goheen, Dec. 27, 1899
 Dr. F. B. Scheirer, Dec. 23, 1902
 Dr. J. Treichler Butz, Dec. 22, 1905
 James Goheen, Dec. 23, 1908
 James Goheen, Dec. 23, 1911

Elected.
 John Yost, Oct., 1841
 Daniel Stahler, Oct., 1842
 Peter Romig, Oct., 1843
 Charles Foster, Oct., 1844
 Samuel Camp, Oct., 1845
 Peter Romig, Oct., 1846
 John Lichtenwallner, Oct., 1847
 Benjamin Breinig, Oct., 1848
 Samuel Knauss, Oct., 1849
 Peter Engleman, Oct., 1850
 Daniel Hausman, Oct., 1851
 Joseph Miller, Oct., 1852
 John Weber, Oct., 1853
 Samuel Sieger, Oct., 1854
 John Erdman, Oct., 1855
 Gideon Marks, Oct., 1856
 Levi Dornblazer, Oct., 1857
 John Peter, Oct., 1858
 Paul Balliet, Oct., 1859
 George Newmeyer, Oct., 1860
 Daniel Bittner, Oct., 1861
 Willoughby Gable, Oct., 1862
 Joseph Newhard, Oct., 1863
 Reuben Danner, Oct., 1864
 Jonas Hollenbach, Oct., 1865
 Daniel Focht, Oct., 1866
 Thomas Jacoby, Oct., 1867
 Henry B. Pierson, Oct., 1868
 Stephen Kern, Oct., 1869
 John Strauss, Oct., 1870
 Hiram Balliet, Oct., 1871
 Jacob A. Leiby, Oct., 1872
 Jesse Solliday, Oct., 1873
 Daniel Lauer, Nov., 1874
 Alexander Singmaster, Nov., 1874
 Alexander McKee, Nov., 1875
 Daniel Lauer, Nov., 1875
 Alexander Singmaster, Nov., 1875

Elected.
 Thomas Casey, Nov., 1878
 David L. Barner, Nov., 1878
 Jonathan Barrald, Nov., 1878
 George K. Carl, Nov., 1881
 William F. Schmoyer, Nov., 1881
 John Hottenstein, Nov., 1881
 Charles F. Hartzell, Nov., 1884
 Wm. S. Knauss, Nov., 1884
 Wm. B. Moyer, Nov., 1884
 Daniel Swoyer, Nov., 1887
 Daniel Wieser, Nov., 1887
 John L. Schreiber, Nov., 1887
 Wayne Holben, Nov., 1890
 Cornelius Acker, Nov., 1890
 Harrison Bortz, Nov., 1890
 Phaon Diehl, Nov., 1893
 James F. Jordan, Nov., 1893
 Milton Kurtz, Nov., 1893
 Stephen B. Neumoyer, Nov., 1896
 Richard J. Klotz, Nov., 1896
 Edward B. Neff, Nov., 1896
 George F. Schlicher, Nov., 1899
 John E. Dubbs, Nov., 1899
 Jos. P. Snyder, Nov., 1899
 Willoughby Guth, Nov., 1902
 Monroe Stephen, Nov., 1902
 L. S. Shimer, Nov., 1902
 Adam E. Bittner, Nov., 1905
 Henry W. Bloss, Nov., 1905
 James W. Peters, Nov., 1905
 Adam E. Bittner, Nov., 1908
 Henry W. Bloss, Nov., 1908
 Walter H. Biery, Nov., 1908
 Walter H. Biery, Nov., 1911
 Samuel K. Petherman, Nov., 1911
 Frank G. Werley, Nov., 1911

TREASURERS.

Elected.
 John Fogel, 1813
 Charles L. Hutter, Nov. 21, 1815
 Henry Weaver, Oct. 16, 1818
 Henry Weaver, Sept., 1821
 Jacob Newhard, Jr., Dec. 27, 1821
 Charles Saeger, Jan. 1, 1827
 Charles Saeger, Jan. 1, 1828
 Charles Saeger, Jan. 1, 1829
 Abraham Gangwere, Jan. 1, 1830
 Michael D. Eberhard, Dec. 31, 1832
 Michael D. Eberhard, Jan. 1, 1833
 John J. Krause, Jan. 2, 1835
 John J. Krause, Jan. 4, 1836
 John J. Krause, Jan. 4, 1837
 George Haberacker, Jan. 2, 1838
 George Haberacker, Jan. 7, 1839
 George Haberacker, Jan. 2, 1840
 George Rhoads, Jan. 1, 1841
 Jacob D. Boas, Jan. 3, 1842
 William H. Blumer, Dec. 8, 1843
 Tilghman H. Martin, Jan., 1846
 Joshua Hanse, Jan., 1847
 Charles H. Martin, Dec. 5, 1849
 Ephraim Yohe, Dec. 2, 1851

Elected.
 Aaron Troxell, Jan. 1854
 Jacob Fisher, Oct. 9, 1855
 Thomas Steckel, Oct. 13, 1857
 William Reimer, Oct. 11, 1859
 Reuben Engleman, Oct. 8, 1861
 David Schaad, Oct. 13, 1863
 J. Franklin Reichard, Oct., 1865
 Simon Moyer, Oct., 1867
 Daniel Bittner, Oct., 1869
 Peter Heller, Oct., 1871
 Peter Hendricks, Oct., 1873
 Charles Keck, Oct., 1875
 John J. Trexler, Nov., 1878
 George Kuhl, Nov., 1881
 Tilghman Buskirk, Nov., 1884
 Daniel Wannemaker, Nov., 1887
 John J. Schadt, Nov., 1890
 John R. Gossler, Nov., 1893
 James M. Sechler, Nov., 1896
 Sylvester J. Hartman, Nov., 1899
 Wm. H. Bartholomew, Nov., 1902
 Harry M. Gangewer, Nov., 1905
 Amos Weida, Nov., 1908
 Henry Krause, Nov., 1911

Elected.
 John Yost, Oct., 1841
 Daniel Stahler, Oct., 1842
 Peter Romig, Oct., 1843
 Charles Foster, Oct., 1844
 Samuel Camp, Oct., 1845
 Peter Romig, Oct., 1846
 John Lichtenwallner, Oct., 1847
 Benjamin Breinig, Oct., 1848
 Samuel Knauss, Oct., 1849
 Peter Engleman, Oct., 1850
 Daniel Hausman, Oct., 1851
 Joseph Miller, Oct., 1852
 John Weber, Oct., 1853
 Samuel Sieger, Oct., 1854
 John Erdman, Oct., 1855
 Gideon Marks, Oct., 1856
 Levi Dornblazer, Oct., 1857
 John Peter, Oct., 1858
 Paul Balliet, Oct., 1859
 George Newmeyer, Oct., 1860
 Daniel Bittner, Oct., 1861
 Willoughby Gable, Oct., 1862
 Joseph Newhard, Oct., 1863
 Reuben Danner, Oct., 1864
 Jonas Hollenbach, Oct., 1865
 Daniel Focht, Oct., 1866
 Thomas Jacoby, Oct., 1867
 Henry B. Pierson, Oct., 1868
 Stephen Kern, Oct., 1869
 John Strauss, Oct., 1870
 Hiram Balliet, Oct., 1871
 Jacob A. Leiby, Oct., 1872
 Jesse Solliday, Oct., 1873
 Daniel Lauer, Nov., 1874
 Alexander Singmaster, Nov., 1874
 Alexander McKee, Nov., 1875
 Daniel Lauer, Nov., 1875
 Alexander Singmaster, Nov., 1875

Elected.
 Thomas Casey, Nov., 1878
 David L. Barner, Nov., 1878
 Jonathan Barrald, Nov., 1878
 George K. Carl, Nov., 1881
 William F. Schmoyer, Nov., 1881
 John Hottenstein, Nov., 1881
 Charles F. Hartzell, Nov., 1884
 Wm. S. Knauss, Nov., 1884
 Wm. B. Moyer, Nov., 1884
 Daniel Swoyer, Nov., 1887
 Daniel Wieser, Nov., 1887
 John L. Schreiber, Nov., 1887
 Wayne Holben, Nov., 1890
 Cornelius Acker, Nov., 1890
 Harrison Bortz, Nov., 1890
 Phaon Diehl, Nov., 1893
 James F. Jordan, Nov., 1893
 Milton Kurtz, Nov., 1893
 Stephen B. Neumoyer, Nov., 1896
 Richard J. Klotz, Nov., 1896
 Edward B. Neff, Nov., 1896
 George F. Schlicher, Nov., 1899
 John E. Dubbs, Nov., 1899
 Jos. P. Snyder, Nov., 1899
 Willoughby Guth, Nov., 1902
 Monroe Stephen, Nov., 1902
 L. S. Shimer, Nov., 1902
 Adam E. Bittner, Nov., 1905
 Henry W. Bloss, Nov., 1905
 James W. Peters, Nov., 1905
 Adam E. Bittner, Nov., 1908
 Henry W. Bloss, Nov., 1908
 Walter H. Biery, Nov., 1908
 Walter H. Biery, Nov., 1911
 Samuel K. Petherman, Nov., 1911
 Frank G. Werley, Nov., 1911

SURVEYORS.

Commissioned.
 Geo. S. Eisenhart, March 28, 1814
 Geo. S. Eisenhart, March 12, 1818
 Geo. S. Eisenhart, Dec. 9, 1824
 Geo. S. Eisenhart, Jan. —, 1827
 Andrew K. Wittman, Aug. 5, 1836
 John Sherer, May 23, 1839
 Jonas Haas, Jan. —, 1842
 Willoughby Fogel, Jan. —, 1845
 Willoughby Fogel, Jan. —, 1848
 John D. Lawall, 1853
 Elected
 Solomon Fogel, Oct., 1856
 Solomon Fogel, Oct., 1859

Commissioned.
 Solomon Fogel, Oct., 1862
 Jesse Samuels, Oct., 1868
 Tobias Kessler, Nov., 1874
 Tobias Kessler, Nov., 1878
 Francis Weiss, Nov., 1881
 Francis Weiss, Nov., 1882
 Francis Weiss, Nov., 1883
 Francis Weiss, Nov., 1887
 Francis Weiss, Nov., 1889
 George Blank, Nov., 1893
 George Blank, Nov., 1896
 George Blank, Nov., 1899
 George Blank, Nov., 1902
 George Blank, Nov., 1906
 George Blank, Nov., 1908
 Solomon F. Rupp, Nov., 1910
 Frederick Schlechter, Nov., 1911
 Chas. W. Grossart, Nov., 1913

CLERKS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.
 George Rhoads, 1813-18
 John Knecht, 1818-27
 George Rhoads, 1827-32
 James Hall, 1832-36
 Josiah Rhoads, 1836
 Abraham Ziegenfus, January, 1836, to November, 1846
 Jesse Line, November, 1846, to Edward Beck, 1853-56

CLERKS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.
 Gofrey Peters, 1856-67
 Lewis M. Engleman, 1867-79
 Victor D. Barner, 1879-82
 Henry C. Wagner, 1882-87
 Morris I. Stephen, 1887-93
 Henry W. Fusselman, 1893-1905
 Jeremiah S. Troxell, 1905-1911
 Harry Weinert, 1911

CONTROLLER.

Elected.
 Cyrus J. Dilcher, Nov., 1913

AUDITORS.

COMMISSIONERS.
 Elected.
 Wm. F. Fenstermacher, Oct., 1812
 Abraham Greisemer, Oct., 1812
 John Yeakel, Oct., 1812
 Philip Kleckner, Oct., 1813
 Jacob Newhard, Oct., 1814
 Jacob Schaffer, Oct., 1815
 John Yeakel, Oct., 1816
 John Billig, Oct., 1817
 John Spangenberg, Oct., 1818
 Jacob Wannemacher, Oct., 1819
 Abraham Schaffer, Oct., 1820
 Solomon Gangwere, Oct., 1821
 Peter Marx, Oct., 1822
 Conrad Knerr, Oct., 1823

Elected.
 John Bogert, Oct., 1824
 John Rinker, Oct., 1825
 John Greenewalt, Oct., 1826
 Joshua Frey, Sr., Oct., 1827
 Henry Laros, Oct., 1828
 Jacob Ward, Oct., 1829
 Caspar Peter, Oct., 1830
 Jacob Schwenk, Oct., 1831
 William Eckert, Oct., 1832
 J. Schmidt, Oct., 1833
 Solomon Griesemer, Oct., 1834
 Martin Ritter, Oct., 1835
 John Sherer, Oct., 1836
 Jacob Derr, Oct., 1837
 Henry Leh, Oct., 1838
 Philip Pierson, Oct., 1839
 Timothy Weiss, Oct., 1840

Elected
 George S. Eisenhart, Oct., 1813
 John Spangenberg, Oct., 1813
 John Weiss, Oct., 1813
 Henry Weber, Oct., 1815
 George S. Eisenhart, Oct., 1816
 J. Gieger, Oct., 1817
 John Stein, Oct., 1818
 John Wilson, Oct., 1819
 Samuel Meyer, Oct., 1820
 James Hall, Oct., 1821
 George Breinig, Oct., 1822
 Jacob Dillinger, Oct., 1823
 Andreas Schifferstein, Oct., 1824
 John Marx, Oct., 1825
 H. W. Kneip, Oct., 1826
 Peter Knepple, Oct., 1827
 John Wilson, Oct., 1828
 Benjamin Fogel, Oct., 1829
 Henry W. Kncip, Oct., 1830
 Jacob C. Kistler, Oct., 1831
 Henry Guth, Jr., Oct., 1832
 Joseph Frey, Jr., Oct., 1833
 Daniel Fried, Oct., 1834
 Jacob Moser, Oct., 1835

Elected.
 Charles S. Bush, Oct., 1836
 David Folweiler, Oct., 1837
 John Ritter, Oct., 1838
 George Miller, Oct., 1839
 Benjamin Breinig, Oct., 1840
 John D. Lawall, Oct., 1841
 Nathan Miller, Oct., 1842
 Charles Ritter, Oct., 1843
 Nathan German, Oct., 1844
 Herman Rupp, Oct., 1845
 Paul Balliet, Oct., 1846
 Charles L. Newhard, Oct., 1847
 John K. Clifton, Oct., 1848
 George Blank, Oct., 1849
 Jonas Haas, Oct., 1850
 Hiram Schantz, Oct., 1851
 Franklin J. Ritter, Oct., 1852
 Eli J. Saeger, Oct., 1853
 Samuel J. Kistler, Oct., 1854
 John R. Schall, Oct., 1855
 Daniel H. Creitz, Oct., 1856
 Robert Yost, Oct., 1857
 W. J. Hoxworth, Oct., 1858
 Charles Foster, Oct., 1859
 Joel Stettler, Oct., 1860
 Owen Schaad, Oct., 1861

Elected.
 George Blank, ... Oct., 1862
 Daniel Clader, ... Oct., 1863
 Abraham Ziegenfuss,
 Oct., 1864
 George Blank, ... Oct., 1865
 Jacob Lichty, ... Oct., 1866
 Daniel Miller, ... Oct., 1867
 W. J. Hoxworth, ... Oct., 1868
 Franklin J. Newhard,
 Oct., 1869
 Wilson P. Reidy, Oct., 1870
 Solomon F. Rupp, Oct., 1871
 J. Winslow Wood, Oct., 1872
 Franklin Harwick, Oct., 1873
 Franklin D. Acker,
 Nov., 1874
 Alvin F. Diefenderfer,
 Nov., 1874
 Frank J. Peter, Nov., 1874
 George N. Kramer,
 Nov., 1878
 Jacob S. Renninger,
 Nov., 1878
 Astor S. Saeger, Nov., 1881
 Morris Schmidt, Nov., 1881
 Henry C. Kelchner,
 Nov., 1881
 Alexander J. Zellner,
 Nov., 1881
 Henry C. Kelchner,
 Nov., 1884
 Clinton O. Fogel, Nov., 1884
 Charles S. Shimer,
 Nov., 1884
 Morris Schmidt, Nov., 1887
 Edwin H. Heilman,
 Nov., 1887

POOR DIRECTORS.

Elected.
 Jesse Grim, Oct., 1844
 M. D. Eberhard, Oct., 1844
 John Blank ... Oct., 1844
 Jesse Grim, Oct., 1845
 M. D. Eberhard, Oct., 1846
 John Blank ... Oct., 1847
 Henry Schantz, ... Oct., 1848
 Jonas Brobst, ... Oct., 1849
 Daniel Miller, ... Oct., 1850
 Henry Diefenderfer,
 Oct., 1851
 H. J. Schantz, ... Oct., 1852
 Peter Romig, ... Oct., 1853
 Solomon Klein, ... Oct., 1854
 Samuel Bernhard, Oct., 1855
 John Mattern, ... Oct., 1856
 John Bortz, ... Oct., 1857
 Jesse Grim, Oct., 1858
 Benjamin Jarrett, Oct., 1859
 Leonard Moyer, ... Oct., 1860
 Jacob Andreas, ... Oct., 1861
 Perry Weaver, ... Oct., 1862
 Charles Weimer, ... Oct., 1863
 Jacob Andreas, ... Oct., 1864
 Jacob Schaffer, ... Oct., 1865
 Solomon Griesemer,
 Oct., 1866
 Daniel D. Mohr, ... Oct., 1867
 Henry Ritter, ... Oct., 1868
 Reuben Henninger,
 Oct., 1869
 John Erdman, ... Oct., 1870
 Jonas Hartzell, ... Oct., 1871
 Reuben Henninger,
 Oct., 1872
 John Erdman, ... Oct., 1873
 Jonas Hartzell, ... Nov., 1874
 John Sieger, ... Nov., 1875
 David Wieser, ... Nov., 1876
 Jesse Marks, ... Nov., 1877
 John Sieger, ... Nov., 1878

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

Elected.
 R. E. Wright, ... Nov., 1846
 C. M. Runk, ... Aug., 1848
 H. C. Longnecker,
 Oct. 8, 1850
 John D. Stiles, Oct. 11, 1853
 Wm. S. Marx, Oct. 14, 1856
 George B. Schall,
 Oct. 11, 1859
 Adam Woolever,
 Oct. 14, 1862

Elected.
 E. Henry Knerr, Nov., 1887
 Edwin H. Heilman,
 Nov., 1890
 Frank Brinker, Nov., 1890
 Milton P. Schantz,
 Nov., 1890
 Frank J. Faust, Nov., 1893
 Charles H. Kramlich,
 Nov., 1893
 Frank Roth, ... Nov., 1893
 Frank J. Faust, Nov., 1896
 Wm. H. Knauss, Nov., 1896
 Thomas P. Roth, Nov., 1896
 Alexander Fatzinger,
 Nov., 1899
 Wm. H. Knauss, Nov., 1899
 Richard H. Heil, Nov., 1899
 Richard R. Romig, Nov. 1902
 Jeremiah G. Roth, Nov., 1902
 Harvey J. Wenner,
 Nov., 1902
 Harvey J. Wenner,
 Nov., 1905
 Peter J. F. Wenner,
 Nov., 1905
 Eugene M. Kemmerer,
 Nov., 1905
 Richard H. Heil, Nov., 1908
 Peter J. F. Wenner,
 Nov., 1908
 Robert J. Andreas,
 Nov., 1908
 Robert J. Andreas,
 Nov., 1911
 Harvey E. Erdman,
 Nov., 1911
 Harvey Hankee, Nov., 1911

Elected.
 David Wieser, ... Nov., 1879
 Jesse Marks, ... Nov., 1880
 Henry Schantz, ... Nov., 1881
 Reuben Danner, ... Nov., 1882
 Edwin Kramlich, ... Nov., 1883
 Owen Schaad, ... Nov., 1884
 W. S. Guth, ... Nov., 1885
 John W. Schwartz,
 Nov., 1886
 A. P. Troxell, ... Nov., 1887
 W. S. Guth, ... Nov., 1888
 S. R. Engelman, ... Nov., 1889
 Owen Schaad, ... Nov., 1890
 William Diebert, ... Nov., 1891
 R. M. Roeder, ... Nov., 1891
 S. R. Engelman, ... Nov., 1892
 R. M. Roeder, ... Nov., 1893
 Thomas F. Good, ... Nov., 1894
 Elias Bittner, ... Nov., 1895
 Silas G. Croll, ... Nov., 1896
 William Diebert, ... Nov., 1897
 Elias Bittner, ... Nov., 1898
 Silas G. Croll, ... Nov., 1899
 Erasmus F. Kern,
 Nov., 1900
 Henry Guth, ... Nov., 1901
 E. E. Ritter, ... Nov., 1902
 Erasmus F. Kern,
 Nov., 1903
 R. J. Lichtenwalner,
 Nov., 1904
 E. E. Ritter, ... Nov., 1905
 E. S. Rabenold, ... Nov., 1909
 Sylvester D. Wotring,
 Nov., 1908
 David M. Landis, ... Nov., 1908
 E. S. Rabenold, ... Nov., 1908
 Frank C. Guth, ... Nov., 1911
 David M. Landis, ... Nov., 1911
 Jeremiah Scherer, ... Nov., 1913

Elected.
 Edwin Albright, Oct., 1865
 Thomas B. Metzger,
 Oct., 1868
 Wm. H. Sowden, Oct., 1871
 C. J. Erdman, ... Nov., 1874
 M. C. Heninger, Nov., 1877
 Arthur G. Dewalt,
 Nov., 1880
 J. M. Wright, ... Nov., 1883
 M. C. L. Kline, Nov., 1886

Elected.
 Harry G. Stiles, Nov., 1889
 James L. Schaad,
 Nov., 1892
 John L. Schwartz, Nov., 1895
 Clinton A. Groman,
 Nov., 1898
 E. J. Lichtenwalner,
 Nov., 1901

Elected.
 Horace W. Schantz,
 Nov., 1904
 Fred. B. Gerneid,
 Nov., 1907
 Lawrence H. Rupp,
 Nov., 1910

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The names of the justices of the peace appointed since 1784, with the districts to which they were commissioned and the date of commission are given below:

Andrew Buchman, District of Heidelberg and Lowhill, Aug. 7, 1784.
 Frederick Limbach, District of Upper Milford, Aug. 27, 1784.
 Peter Rhoads, District of Northampton and Salisbury, 1784.
 George Breinig, District of Macungie and Weissenberg, Jan. 26, 1786.
 Jacob Horner, District of Heidelberg and Lowhill, Jan. 6, 1787.
 Ludwig Stahler, District of Upper Milford, Nov. 8, 1788.
 Peter Kohler, District of Whitehall, Aug. 30, 1791.
 James Gill, District of Upper Milford, Aug. 30, 1791.
 Nicholas Saeger, District of Whitehall, April 21, 1794.
 Andrew Buchman, Feb. 11, 1794.
 John Shymer, District of Upper Milford, Jan. 23, 1795.
 Henry Kooker, District of Upper Saucon, May 7, 1795.
 Charles Deshler, District of Salisbury, Oct. 6, 1797.
 Henry Jarrett, District of Macungie and Weissenberg, March 7, 1798.
 Leonard Nagle, District of Salisbury, March 28, 1798.
 John Van Buskirk, District of Macungie and Weissenberg, Feb. 20, 1799.
 Conrad Wetzel, District of Upper Milford, May 14, 1799.
 Henry Haas, District of Heidelberg and Lowhill, Feb. 24, 1801.
 Anthony Stahler, District of Upper Milford, and Upper Saucon, April 2, 1802.

In 1804 the county was redistricted and numbered. The districts embracing territory in this county were numbered Nos. 4, 7, 8, 10, and 11.

John Weiss, District No. 11, Lynn and Weissenberg, Oct. 24, 1807.
 Daniel Saeger, District No. 11, Lynn and Weissenberg, Oct. 24, 1807.
 William Fenstermacher, District No. 10, Heidelberg and Lowhill, March 29, 1808.
 John Shuler, District No. 8, Macungie and Upper Milford, March 29, 1808.
 Anthony Stahler, District No. 8, Macungie and Upper Milford, March 29, 1808.
 Jeremiah Trexler, District No. 8, Macungie and Upper Milford, March 29, 1808.
 Adam Daniel, District No. 4, Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Hanover, March 3, 1809.
 George Brader, District No. 4, Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Hanover, March 15, 1809.
 Jacob Sweishaubt, District No. 4, Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Hanover, July 15, 1809.
 Jacob Kline, District No. 8, Macungie and Upper Milford, Dec. 11, 1810.
 George Yund, District No. 7, Whitehall and Salisbury, Feb. 6, 1811.
 Matthias Gross, District No. 4, Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Hanover, Oct. 30, 1811.

The justices of the peace of the county of Lehigh from its erection, in 1812 to 1815, were elected under the districts as laid off by the court of Northampton county. In the latter year new districts were formed and are given below in their order from that time until 1840. From that time the names of the justices of the peace will be found in the several townships.

District No. 7 was composed of the townships of Northampton, Salisbury, and Whitehall. Leonard Nagle, Peter Gross, and Nicholas Saeger were commissioned March 20, 1812; Charles Deshler, March 27th, the same year; Jacob Diehl, on the 11th of January, 1813; and Anthony Musick, Feb. 15, 1813. Christian F. Beitel was commissioned justice Sept. 2, 1812, "for the district that includes Hanover." Conrad German was commissioned justice for the townships of Heidelberg and Lowhill, which were formerly described as District No. 10 in Northampton county; John Fogel as justice for District No. 8, which embraced the townships of Macungie and Upper Milford, March 12, 1812; and Lorentz Stahler for the same district Feb. 15, 1813; Peter Haas, Jr., as justice for District No. 11, embracing the townships of Lynn and Weissenberg, Jan. 28, 1814; and Henry Haas for the district "recently described" as District No. 10, containing the townships of Macungie and Lowhill.

DISTRICT No. 1, composed of the townships of Hanover, Northampton, and Salisbury.

Commissioned.	Commissioned.
Jacob Colver, Sept. 2, 1821	Charles S. Bush, Oct. 28, 1828
Jacob Albright, April 1, 1822	Jacob Newhard, Feb. 1, 1831
George Keck, Dec. 12, 1823	Jacob Stein, Nov. 13, 1832
John Ealer, Dec. 12, 1823	Jacob Hart, Jan. 24, 1835
George Marx, Dec. 21, 1824	George Rhoads, Dec. 9, 1835
John Knauss, Jan. 19, 1825
John Y. Krause, April 19, 1826

DISTRICT No. 2, composed of the townships of Upper Saucon and Upper Milford.

Commissioned.	Commissioned.
Daniel Cooper, Dec. 12, 1815	Philip Pierson, May 12, 1834
William H. Long, July 3, 1821	Charles W. Wicand, April 1, 1836
Peter Cooper, Aug. 13, 1821	Andrew K. Wittman, March 8, 1837
Thomas Romig, July 29, 1831
Daniel Fritz, Dec. 9, 1831

DISTRICT No. 3, composed of the townships of Macungie and Weissenberg.

Commissioned.	Commissioned.
George Miller, Oct. 28, 1820	Jonas Seiberling, June 16, 1836
Henry Helfrich, Dec. 5, 1823	Lewis Larash, Nov. 25, 1837
Jacob Romig, Dec. 5, 1823	John Isaac Breinig, Oct. 20, 1838
Samuel Marx, Dec. 26, 1823	Willoughby Fogel, Jan. 29, 1839
George Christman, Jan. 12, 1827	David Schall, March 2, 1839
Geo. Samuel Eisenhard, Jan. 12, 1827

DISTRICT No. 4, composed of the townships of Lynn, Heidelberg, and Lowhill.

Commissioned.	Commissioned.
Henry Long, May 16, 1818	Jacob Zimmerman, Jan. 6, 1832
Andrew Shifferstein, Nov. 3, 1820	W. Fenstermacher, May 21, 1834
Peter Haas, Aug. 13, 1821	Peter Schneider, Dec. 1, 1835
John Weida, April 25, 1822	George Rex, June 16, 1836
John Sieger, Dec. 12, 1823

DISTRICT No. 5, composed of the townships of North Whitehall and South Whitehall.

Commissioned.	Commissioned.
John Sieger, Feb. 5, 1816	Thomas Glick, Sept. 24, 1829
George Scheirer, Nov. 27, 1820	Henry Burkhalter, July 9, 1830
Anthony Musick, Dec. 13, 1820	George Frederick, May 21, 1834
Jonas Hecker, Dec. 12, 1823	Solomon Goebel, June 6, 1836
Abraham Troxell, July 15, 1826	Joseph Kohler, March 7, 1838
Daniel Saeger, Aug. 28, 1826	George S. Xander, Feb. 25, 1839
John Nagle, April 26, 1827

COUNTY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

Charles W. Cooper, elected June 5, 1854; resigned September, 1855.
 Tilghman Good, appointed October, 1855.
 Hiram H. Schwartz, elected May 4, 1857.
 Tilghman Good, elected May 7, 1860; resigned May 22, 1862.
 Jacob Ross, appointed July 26, 1862.
 E. J. Young, elected May 24, 1863, re-elected May 1, 1866; re-elected May 4, 1869.
 J. O. Knauss, elected May 7, 1872.
 Alvin Rupp, elected May 2, 1893; re-elected May 5, 1896; May 2, 1899; May 6, 1902; May 2, 1905; May 5, 1908; May 2, 1911; May 5, 1914.

CHAPTER XI.

THE BENCH AND BAR.

COLONIAL JUSTICES.

The first justice of the peace in the Lehigh Valley was Nathaniel Irish, who was commissioned a justice of Bucks county, on April 4, 1741, by Governor Thomas. He settled at the mouth of the Saucon creek as early as 1737, where, in 1743, he owned upwards of 600 acres and a grist mill, whose ruins were still standing a few years ago in the rear of Mr. John Knecht's house in Shimersville, Northampton county. In February, 1743, Irish had an important case to decide, when Conrad Ruetschi, a Swiss, who had squatted on the Simpson tract, (now the site of South Bethlehem) urged his rights of pre-emption, when the Moravians of Bethlehem entered into negotiations with the owner, John Simpson, of Tower Hill, London, through his attorney, for the purchase of the tract of 274 acres. The case was decided against Reutschi, and June 3, 1746, the tract was conveyed to Jasper Payne, for the use of the Moravian Brethren for two hundred pounds, Pennsylvania currency, a sum equivalent to $533.33.

Thomas Craig was commissioned a justice of the peace on December 17, 1745, and on Sept. 25, 1747, Daniel Brodhead was commissioned, and June 30, 1749, Craig and Brodhead were again appointed justices.

Upon the erection of Northampton county in 1752, Thomas Craig, Daniel Brodhead, Timothy Horsfield, Hugh Wilson, James Martin, John Van Etten, Aaron Dupui, William Craig and William Parsons were commissioned on June 9, 1752, as justices in the new county.

The first court was held June 16, 1752, and in the sessions docket is thus recorded:

"At a court of record of our Lord the King, held at Easton, for the county of Northampton, the 16th day of June, in the 26th year of our sovereign Lord George the Second, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, &c., Anno Domini 1752, before Thomas Craig, Timothy Horsfield, Hugh Wilson, James Martin and William Craig, justices of the Lord the King, the peace in the said county to keep, as also divers trespasses and felonies, and other offences in the said county committed, to hear and determine assigned."

The second court was held October 3, 1752; at this session the first grand jury was empanelled, consisting of James Ralston, William Casselberry, Robert Gregg, James Horner, John Atkinson, John Walker, Allen township; Robert Lyle, Alexander Miller, Michael Moore, Mount Bethel; Charles Brodhead, Garret Brink, Isaac Van Campen, Benjamin Shoemaker, Smithfield township; David Owen, John Cooken, Upper Saucon township; Lewis Merkle, Macungie township; Nathaniel Vernon, Easton.

Of these, Owen, Cooken and Merkle resided in that section of the county which is now Lehigh county.

The first election in the county was held October 2, 1752, at Easton, when James Burnsides was elected Member of the Assembly, William Craig, sheriff, and Robert Gregg, Peter Trexler and Benjamin Shoemaker, commissioners.

Of the Colonial Justices of Northampton county, mention will only be made here of those residing in the territory now Lehigh county. William Plumsted, Esq., commissioned on November 27, 1757, was a resident of Philadelphia, but had a country seat along the Cedar Creek, which later was sold to Daniel Dorney.

Peter Trexler, of Macungie, was commissioned a justice in 1753, and his name appears as such in Orphans' Court proceedings Jan. 21, 1754. Nov. 27, 1757, he was re-commissioned. He was elected one of the first county commissioners on Oct. 2, 1752, and in the French and Indian War, commanded a company called into service by Benjamin Franklin to garrison the forts on the frontier. In 1755 he was one of six trustees of the school erected in Easton by a society whose purpose was to promote the instruction of poor Germans in Pennsylvania.

Lewis Klotz, of Macungie, was a justice in 1752, and was again commissioned on Nov. 27, 1757, Nov. 19, 1764, March 15, 1766, and in 1773 and 1774. He lived a short distance west of Emaus and was a prominent figure in colonial times.

John Everett, of Lynn township, appears to have been a justice in 1753, although his name does not appear in an official list.

George Rex, of Heidelberg township, was commissioned a justice on November 27, 1757. He was the largest individual land owner in Heidelberg township, owning 415 acres in 1764. He died in 1773.

On November 19, 1764, James Allen, John Jennings and Henry Geiger were commissioned justices. Allen was the son of Chief Justice Allen, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court, September 26, 1765. He resided at Allentown a portion of the time, but had a residence in Philadelphia, where he died September 19, 1778.

John Jennings was the son of Solomon Jennings, who participated in the Indian Walk of 1737 and owned the well known Geisinger farm. He was sheriff of the county prior to becoming justice, and again held that office from 1767 to 1769.

Henry Geiger was a resident of Heidelberg township, where he was quite prominent. He was an ensign in the service of the Province in 1755 and in 1757 was commissioned lieutenant of a company stationed at a frontier fort. He was for a time stationed at Fort Allen with a detachment of soldiers and at other forts in the vicinity. His record as an officer was very good, and in the Revolutionary War his ability was recognized by a commission as colonel.

Henry Kookan, of Upper Saucon, was commissioned a justice on March 15, 1766, and again in 1773 and 1774. In 1768 he was taxed for fifty acres in this township and later built a grist mill and saw mill on the site of Dillinger's Mill. He is said to have been of Holland descent.

John Wetzel and Jacob Morey, the last of the king's justices, were commissioned on March 9, 1774. Wetzel lived in Macungie, and later became active in the revolution. Morey was a resident of Upper Saucon and lived where is now Lanark. He was of English descent.

Of these colonial justices, one half of the number were of German blood. That these men were of such character and ability as to be appointed to the office of justice, marks them as leaders in their several communities. There seems to have been no law regulating the number of justices in a county, but every section had its justice, who, at the time when court was held, journeyed to Easton, where no less a number than three were empowered to hold the several courts. The courts of Northampton county were held in the different taverns at Easton, until the completion of the court house in 1766. Referring to the courts of that period, a certain writer says:

"Their sessions were extremely ceremonious and imposing. At the present day, no official, however exalted would think of assuming such awful dignity as was then habitual with the justices of Northampton county. On their passage to the place of holding court—preceded and followed by constables with badges and staves of office—these provincial justices, in their severe gravity and cocked hats, were fearful and wonderful personages to behold. But when they mounted the bench, and the court officers commanded silence, then was the hour of their triumph; for the loyal courtiers of King George, as he sat upon his own throne at Windsor Castle, scarcely regarded their sovereign with more awe and adoration, than the townspeople, and the litigants gave to those worshipful wearers of the county ermine, as they sat in solemn session, in the tavern court-room at Easton."

The last court held under the king was in June 1776, when the Docket was changed from King George III to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The first Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania met in Philadelphia, July 15, 1776, and continued in session until Sept. 28, 1776. This body was the highest authority in the state at this time, and on August 1, 1776, passed an ordinance for the relief of the prisoners in the several gaols in the state, in which was the statement, "At this time the courts of justice within this state are surceased, and all process and proceedings, by which suits can be legally commenced, proceeded in, or determined, are by the authority of the people justly and totally suppressed," and declared that all persons imprisoned for debt or any criminal offence whatsoever (except for capital offences, or practice against the present virtuous measures of the American states, or prisoners of war) be released and discharged, and named persons in each county to hear and discharge the prisoners in said county. In Northampton county, Robert Traill, Abraham Berlin, and Henry Barnet were so named.

On September 3, 1776, the convention, of which Benjamin Franklin was president, appointed the members of the Council of Safety, which body was chosen by the convention on July 23, 1776, and to which was delegated supreme authority after the convention adjourned, justices of the peace for the state. The member of the Council of Safety from Northampton county was Peter Rhoads, Esq., who was thus appointed a justice for the state. On the same day, the convention appointed Robert Traill, Jacob Morey, Christopher Wagner, Henry Kookan, John Weitzel, Peter Trexler, Senior, Nicholas Dupui, Evan Morgan, Robert Forgerman and Henry Barnet, justices of the peace for the county of Northampton. Of these justices, Peter Rhoads was a resident of Allentown, Jacob Morey and Henry Kookan of Upper Saucon and Peter Trexler of Macungie.

Other justices in that portion of old Northampton which is now Lehigh county, were Frederick Limbach, of Upper Milford; David Desh-ler, of Salisbury township; Mathias Probst, of Lynn, and Jacob Horner, of Heidelberg and Lowhill.

Robert Levers, Robert Traill and Peter Trexler were appointed to qualify the justices, and Traill, Trexler, and Morey were again named as justices at the same time as the above named and all were commissioned on June 3, 1777.

On May 28, 1779, Peter Kohler was commissioned justice for Whitehall township.

On January 26, 1786, George Breinig was commissioned justice for Macungie and Weissenberg townships and on November 8, 1788, Ludwig Stahler for Upper Milford township.

JUDGES.

The constitution of 1790 abolished the system of justices and "a judge learned in the law" was appointed as president judge with associates. Under this constitution they held office during good behavior, practically a life tenure. The constitution also provided for the appointment by the governor, of not fewer than three, nor more than four judges in each county. A president judge was also to be appointed to be a resident of the circuit, which included not more than six nor less than three counties. The salary of the president judge at that time was £500 a year, Pennsylvania currency.

HON. PETER RHOADS, first President Judge of Northampton county, was born in Whitehall township, in April, 1737. He received an excellent education for that early period among the Quakers, and became a merchant. At the opening of the revolution he became active in the cause of the colonies, and was elected a member of the first Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania, held at the state house in Philadelphia from July 15 to Sept. 28, 1776. He was later elected to represent Northampton county in the Council of Safety, the governing power of the state until March 17, 1777. He was a member of the Assembly from 1777 to 1781, and on Oct. 7, 1784, was appointed and commissioned by the Supreme Executive Council, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and of General Quarter Sessions for Northampton county. His commission, signed by James Ewing, vice president of Pennsylvania, with the seal of the state attached and recorded in Book D., Vol. 1, page 239, by John Arndt, recorder, is in the possession of the writer, his great-great grandson.

On Oct. 22, 1787, Judge Rhoads was chairman of the meeting held at Bethlehem, approving of the Federal Constitution. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1789-90, and under that constitution commissioned an associate judge, Aug. 17, 1791. This position he held until 1812, when he was appointed senior associate judge in Lehigh county, then erected principally through his efforts, which position he held until his death, making a total service of 30 years on the bench.

Judge Rhoads was president of the Lehigh Navigation Company, and the first burgess of Allentown in 1811, and re-elected in 1812. He was an active Federalist, and wielded a great influence in the town and county. He died at his residence on North Seventh street, Allentown, on Sunday evening, Dec. 18, 1814, aged 77 years and 8 months.

HON. JACOB RUSH, second President Judge of Northampton county, was appointed in 1791 president judge of the Third Judicial District, composed of the counties of Northampton, Berks, Northumberland, and Luzerne, as erected by the act of April 13, 1791, in accordance with the constitution of 1790. He was born in Byberry township, Philadelphia county in 1746, and was a descendant of John Rush, a captain in Cromwell's army, who immigrated to America in 1863. The death of his father in 1753 left him an orphan at the age of seven years, but a moderate inheritance enabled him to obtain a liberal education. In 1765 he graduated at Princeton. He was in active service in several campaigns of the Revolutionary War. In September, 1777, he was admitted to the bar at Philadelphia, where he rose rapidly in his profession and early reached the favorable notice of leading men of the day through the influence of his brother, the famous physician, Dr. Benjamin Rush, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was a member of the Provincial Convention held at Philadelphia in January, 1775, and represented Philadelphia county in the Assembly in 1779-80. On the 26th of February, 1784, he was commissioned a justice of the Supreme court of Pennsylvania; he also served as a member of the high court of errors and appeals prior to the adoption of the constitution of 1790. In 1791 he was appointed president of the court of the third judicial district. To this position he brought a judicial experience probably unequaled by that of any of his successors upon their accession to the bench. He continued to perform the duties of his extensive district, (which, in 1801, embraced Lycoming and Wayne counties in addition to those mentioned) until Jan. 1, 1806, when he was commissioned president judge of the court of common pleas for Philadelphia county. In this position he remained until his death.

David Paul Brown, a practicing attorney of Philadelphia county forty years and author of "The Forum," gives his estimate of Judge Rush in the following language:

"He was a man of great ability, and great firmness and decision of character. He was also an eloquent man. Perhaps there are few specimens of judicial eloquence more impressive than those which he delivered during his occupation of the bench. An accurate idea of his style may readily be formed from an extract from his charge to the grand jury in 1808, and his sentence pronounced upon Richard Smith for the murder of Corson in 1816. We refer as much to the high moral tone of his productions as to their literary and intellectual power. Some of his early literary essays were ascribed to Franklin, and for their terseness and clearness were worthy of him."

Judge Rush's charges to the jury generally and his legal decisions were marked by soundness of principle and closeness of reason. Having been a judge of the supreme court and of the high court of error and appeals, he never appeared to be satisfied with his position in the common pleas; yet, his uprightness of conduct and unquestioned abilities always secured to him the respect and confidence, if not the attachment, of his associates, the members of the bar, and the entire community. He was one of the gentlemen of the old school, plain in his attire, unobtrusive in his deportment, but, while observant of his duties toward others, never forgetful of the respect to which he himself was justly entitled.

As an author his works include: "Resolves in Committee Chamber, Dec. 6, 1774," (Phila. 1774); "Charges on Moral and Religious Subjects" (1803); "Character of Christ," (1806); and "Christian Baptism," (1819). In Reed and Dickinson's controversy regarding the character of Benedict Arnold, he espoused the cause of the latter. A novel, "Kelroy," was written by his daughter, Rebecca, (Phila. 1812).

While president judge of the third district, he resided in Reading. He died at Philadelphia, January 5, 1820.

HON. JOHN SPAYD, third President Judge of Northampton county, was born in Dauphin county in January, 1764. He acquired a classical education, read law, and was admitted to the bar February 14, 1788, and began practicing at Reading, where he attained great prominence. He served as presiding judge in Northampton county with ability from 1806 to 1809. During the years of 1795 and 1810 he was a member of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania and devoted the remainder of his life to the practice of law at Reading. He went to the city of Philadelphia for surgical relief from a disease with which he had long suffered, underwent an operation, but the result was beyond the control of human skill and he died there at two A. M., October 13, 1822, in the 58th year of his age. His remains were brought to Reading on the 15th and interred the following day in the Lutheran grave-yard. The judges of the court, members of the bar and the borough council each passed appropriate resolutions commendatory of his life and character as a lawyer, as a judge and as a public-spirited citizen, resolved to attend his funeral in a body and wear crape on the left arm for thirty days. His remains have since been transferred to Charles Evans' cemetery.

As an advocate his knowledge was various and extensive, his judgment sound and his counsel recognized as of a high order. By his brethren of the bar his merits as a sincere friend and as an honorable practitioner were highly appreciated, and he performed all his various duties as a lawyer, a judge and a citizen with recognized promptness and acknowledged ability. As a lawyer he disdained everything like artifice or technical advantage and looked to the merits of his case alone. He seemed ever to contend for justice rather than victory; hence his influence with the court and jury was deservedly great. In the prosecution of doubtful claims where individuals had important trusts to fulfill which they were anxious should be judiciously and faithfully managed, recourse was had with the utmost confidence to John Spayd, and his opinions were considered oracles upon which the most perfect reliance could be placed.

The borough council at the time of his death passed resolutions in commendation of his valuable services for many years as chief burgess. At a bar meeting presided over by Judge Robert Porter resolutions commendatory of his life and character were adopted. Members of the Philadelphia bar held a meeting in the District Court-Room, presided over by Hon. Joseph B. McKean, and adopted resolutions relating to "John Spayd, Esq., a distinguished member of the profession from Reading, who died while on a visit to Philadelphia, and in testimony of our respect for his private virtues and professional attainments, we will attend as far as the limits of this city the removal of his remains for interment at Reading."

Judge Spayd was married to Catharine Hiestler, eldest daughter of Governor Joseph Hiestler. Their children were Elizabeth, married to Edward B. Hubley, once a member of congress from Schuylkill county; John, a graduate of the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania; Catharine B., married to John B. Brooke, a prominent merchant of Reading and father of Dr. John B. Brooke; Joseph H., a member of the Berks Co. bar; George W., once chief burgess of Reading; Henry, who completed the medical course at the University of Pennsylvania and died one year after his graduation; and Amelia, married to Dr. Diller Luther, of Reading.

At the time of his death, Judge Spayd resided in Penn Square, Reading, next house west of the Farmers' Bank.

HON. ROBERT PORTER, fourth President Judge of Northampton county, and first President Judge of Lehigh county, was the eldest son of General Andrew Porter and was born at Philadelphia on January 10, 1768. His father then was conducting a mathematical and an English school. When he was only eight years old the revolution had begun in earnest and his father had enlisted to serve the United Colonies in their great struggle for independence. Toward the close of the war his father was colonel of the Fourth Pennsylvania regiment of artillery, and it is said that Judge Porter, when only thirteen years of age, was enlisted in one of the companies under the command of his father. At the conclusion of the war he resumed his studies at Philadelphia, and, selecting the law as his profession, he was admitted to practice on May 15, 1789. After being engaged in a successful practice for twenty years, at Philadelphia, he, in 1810, was appointed by Governor Simon Snyder to the office of president judge of the Third Judicial district which comprised the counties of Berks, Northampton, and Wayne. He occupied this honorable position for the period of twenty-two years and then, upon resigning his commission, retired to private life. He resided at Reading, on the northwest corner of Fifth and Penn streets, during his term of office. He died on June 23, 1842, at Brookville, Pa., aged seventy-four years. Judge Porter was a man of profound learning and superior legal attainments.

HON. GARRICK MALLERY, second President Judge of Lehigh county, was a native of Massachusetts. After obtaining a good preliminary education he entered Yale College and was graduated from that institution in the year 1809. He soon afterwards became principal of an academy at Wilkes-Barre, and while occupying that position engaged in the study of law, and was admitted to the bar at Wilkes-Barre about 1812. Being well adapted by nature to the legal profession, he added to his efficiency by diligent and well-directed study, and therefore soon acquired a practice which extended over a large portion of Northern Pennsylvania. In 1825 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania and during his legislative career was instrumental in securing the enactment of certain bills which led to the great improvement of the North Branch region.

In 1832 Governor Wolf appointed him president judge of the Third Judicial District, then composed of the counties of Berks, Northampton and Lehigh, in which position he soon won fame and distinction, and presided with ability and dignity. He resigned in 1836 and removed to Philadelphia, where he resumed the practice of the law. About the time of his resignation the members of the bar of Berks county met March 16, 1836, and passed resolutions of regret, and tendered him a bar dinner in Reading as a token of their high appreciation of his ability as a judge and character as a gentleman. He replied in the kindest terms from Easton, Pa., but owing to a press of professional duties was obliged to decline the proffered honor. His experience in reference to titles to coal and unseated lands throughout the state of Pennsylvania rendered his services especially valuable to purchasers of that kind of property, and his practice thus became very extensive. During his residence in Philadelphia he was standing master in Chancery of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and was for many years solicitor and advisor of the Camden and Amboy, the Philadelphia and Trenton and other railroad companies.

Judge Mallery was thrice married; his last wife was a daughter of Dr. Otto, a prominent physician of Philadelphia. Hon. William Strong, lately retired from the Supreme Court of the United States, was married to his daughter.

HON. JOHN BANKS, third President Judge of Lehigh county, was born near Lewisburg, Juniata county, Pa., in the year 1793. His parental grandfather emigrated from Scotland and lived to the age of nearly one hundred years. His father being a farmer, his youth was spent mostly in assisting him in the arduous duties of that occupation. The advantages of a liberal education, however, were not denied him. He entered upon the study of law with a well-disciplined mind, was admitted to the bar of his native county in 1819, and soon after removed to the western part of the state. He located in Mercer county and there rapidly attained eminence at the bar. Without any solicitation on his part, he was nominated and elected a representative in congress, and twice re-elected, serving from 1831 to 1836. He won distinction in congress by his treatment of contested election cases. His patience and fairness in the investigations and his clearness in applying the law to the facts, made his conclusions invariably acceptable. In the spring of 1836 he vacated his seat in congress to accept the appointment of president judge of the Third Judicial District of the state, composed of the counties of Berks, Lehigh and Northampton, the office having been tendered him by Governor Ritner. Succeeding so accomplished a jurist as Garrick Mallery, he sustained himself in his new position under difficult circumstances, and proved by his administration of justice that he had an acquaintance with the law fully as much under control as his predecessor. He possessed a kind heart, was easy and graceful in his manners and clear in his opinions. His superior qualities soon won for him the full confidence of the people. No man was ever more obliging and condescending to his juniors than he, and no man ever lived in Reading whose companionship was more highly prized by so varied a circle of friends. Having spent eleven years as president judge of the court, he resigned the position in 1847, and accepted the office of state treasurer of Pennsylvania and served one term. In 1841, while judge of the courts, he was nominated by the Whig party for the office of governor of Pennsylvania, but was defeated by David R. Porter, the Democratic nominee. He was subsequently nominated and supported by the Whig members of the state legislature, when in the minority, as their candidate for United States senator.

Upon his retirement from the bench, Judge Banks resumed the practice of the law, and soon became the acknowledged leader of the Berks county bar. He continued in his profession until his death, April 3, 1864, enjoying a very extensive and lucrative practice.

HON. JOHN PRINGLE JONES, fourth President Judge of Lehigh county, was born near Newtown, in Durham township, Bucks county, in 1812, and was an only child. His father died when he was young. His mother was a Pringle and a member of an English family of great respectability in Philadelphia. She moved to her native city after the death of her husband. The education of the son, J. Pringle Jones, was acquired at Captain Partridge's Military Academy, in Middletown, Conn., and at the University of Pennsylvania, where he studied two years and was then admitted to the senior class of the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, from which he was graduated with honor in 1831. After leaving college he studied law in the office of Charles Chauncey, Esq., and was admitted a member of the Philadelphia bar in 1834. Being a great lover of nature he traveled to and wandered over the green hills of Berks County, and whilst in the country, in 1835, he determined to locate in Reading. He was at once received into the best society on account of his education, culture and social qualities. In 1839 he was appointed deputy attorney-general for Berks County and served in that office until 1847. During the time he was associated in the practice of law with Robert M. Barr, Esq., who was appointed, in 1845, reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court. At the expiration of the official term of Hon. John Banks as judge of the Third District, then composed of Berks, Lehigh and Northampton counties, he was appointed by Governor Shunk to fill this honorable position. He took the oath of office March 15, 1847. By an act of the Legislature, passed in 1849, Berks county was erected into a separate judicial district, of which David F. Gordon was appointed president-judge, and Judge Jones continued to reside in Lehigh and Northampton counties until 1851.

In 1849, Mr. Barr, the State reporter, died, and Judge Jones completed two of the "State Reports," which his former partner had left unfinished. These reports are known as "Jones' Reports." In 1851 he was elected president judge of the courts of Berks county for ten years. After the expiration of this term he devoted himself to literary pursuits and to the management of the Charles Evans Cemetery Company, of which he was elected president.

In 1867 Judge Maynard, of the Third Judicial District, then composed of Lehigh and Northampton counties, resigned, and Judge Jones was appointed his successor for the unexpired term. This was the last official position he occupied. In 1871 he had an attack of paralysis. In October, 1872, he sailed for Europe, accompanied by his wife, and traveled through France, Italy, Germany and a part of Russia. He was taken sick and died in London, on Monday, March 16, 1874. His remains were brought to Reading and buried in Charles Evans Cemetery.

He was married first to Annie Hiester, daughter of Dr. Isaac Hiester, of Reading, in 1840. After her death he was married, in 1851, to Catharine E. Hiester, daughter of John S. Hiester. Nature favored Judge Jones with a fine physical appearance and excellent mental endowments. He had a decided taste for literature, and after he retired from the bench devoted much of his time to the gratification of this taste. He was a man of sterling integrity and great moral worth. A marked trait was his strong attachment to his friends, of whom he had a great many in the county of Berks and also throughout Eastern Pennsylvania.

HON. WASHINGTON McCARTNEY, LL.D., fifth President Judge of Lehigh County, was born in Westmoreland, Pa., Aug. 24, 1812. He was graduated with high honors at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa., in 1834, and was appointed professor of mathematics in Lafayette College, Easton, Sept. 24, 1835. In 1836 he was appointed professor of mathematics and modern languages at Jefferson College, his alma mater, where he remained for one year, when he returned to Lafayette in 1837; he resigned Sept. 20, 1843. He was again appointed to the same professorships on Sept. 18, 1844, and resigned in 1846; was appointed professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy, March 13, 1849, which post he held for several years.

He was admitted to the bar of Northampton County January 18, 1838, was appointed Deputy Attorney General of that county in 1846-47-48, and was elected President Judge of the Third Judicial District composed of Northampton and Lehigh counties, at the first general election held for judges, under the amended constitution in the fall of 1851. He founded and was principal of the Union Law School, at Easton, in 1846. He was married at Easton, April 18, 1839, to Mary E. Maxwell, daughter of the late William Maxwell, Esq., of New Jersey, and had three children. He died July 15, 1856. He was the author of a work upon "Differential Calculus," and the "History of the Origin and Progress of the United States." He was remarkable in facility for acquiring languages. Not only was he an accurate and finished German, French, Hebrew, Latin, Greek and Oriental scholar, but within the last year of his life, with all his arduous duties upon the bench, in his Law School, as a member of the School Board, a manager of The Easton Gas Co., and his connection with various useful projects, he had commenced and partly mastered the acquisition of the Russian language. His remains were interred in the Easton Cemetery and a marble tablet inscribed to his memory was placed in the high-school building.

HON. HENRY D. MAXWELL, sixth President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in the village of Flemington, Hunterdon county, New Jersey, Dec. 5, 1812. His great-grandfather, John Maxwell, who was of Scottish extraction, emigrated to this country from the north of Ireland in 1747 with his family of four sons and two daughters, and located in Greenwich township, then Sussex, now Warren county, New Jersey. The eldest son, William Maxwell, entered the English Army, was with General Braddock, also at Quebec with General Wolfe and at the battle of Three Rivers. He was in the commissary department of the British army stationed at Mackinaw when the Revolutionary War broke out. He immediately threw up his commission, marched on foot, through the then wilderness, to Trenton, and was given a colonel's commission. He subsequently received the appointment of Brigadier General and made an active and efficient officer, highly esteemed by General Washington.

General Maxwell, son of William, born November 25, 1739, became a captain in the Revolution. He died at Flemington, February 15, 1828. His youngest son, William, a graduate of the class of 1804 at Princeton, became a distinguished lawyer and practised his profession at Flemington until his death in 1828. He was admitted an attorney of Northampton county court January 24, 1810.

Henry D. Maxwell was his eldest son and was prepared to enter Princeton College in the 15th year of his age, and his father's death compelled him to abandon his cherished project and bend his energies in aid of the mother who was left with six children. He obtained a position as usher at the boarding-school of the Rev. Robert Steel, D.D., at Abington, Pa., and there for about 18 months prepared the young men for college. He then commenced the study of law and was admitted to the bar in New Jersey Sept. 4, 1834. He commenced to practice law at Phillipsburg and was admitted to the bar of Northampton on November 7, 1834, and opened offices at Easton in 1835. He was subsequently admitted to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in December, 1836, and to the Supreme Court of the United States in 1841. In 1848 he was appointed Deputy Attorney General of Northampton County and again in 1849. In 1850 he was appointed Consul to Trieste, Austria, which position he held for one year. In July, 1856, he was appointed by Governor Pollock, President Judge of the third district to succeed his brother-in-law the Hon. Washington McCartney, who had died. He was re-appointed in December 1856 and continued in the office until Dec. 1857.

The Allentown Democrat, of December 9, 1857, had this article:

"On Wednesday of last week, Judge Maxwell held an adjourned court in this borough which terminated his connection with us as President Judge of this judicial district. The following letter, signed by all the members of the Bar, and other citizens of the county, was addressed to him asking his participancy in a public entertainment to be given as a testimonial of his character as a man and as a jurist.

"Allentown, Dec. 1, 1857.

"Hon. Henry D. Maxwell. Dear Sir: The undersigned members of the Bar of Lehigh County and other of its citizens, anxious to give some expression of their high opinion of your character as a man and jurist, do hereby invite you to participate with them in a public entertainment at such time and place as may best suit your convenience. The relation that has existed between us for the past two years enables us to accord to you the highest praise as a patient, courteous, industrious, honest, and learned Judge, and impels us to regret that we are about to part with one who in that important position we have learned to esteem so highly. In returning once more to the labors of the Profession we beg leave to assure you of our best wishes for your happiness and prosperity and of our firm belief that one who so well performed the duties of a Judge and sustained the dignity of the Bench can never fail to grace and adorn the Bar.' ”

The same paper states that the festival that followed was a most happy one evidencing in the strongest possible manner, “that Judge Maxwell left the Bench with the kindest feelings of all parties.”

He gave his first vote in approval of the principles of the then National Republican party, afterward merged into the Whig party. In 1846 he was a candidate for Congress. In 1842 he was appointed Quartermaster of the State Militia. He was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and a director of The Central Railroad of New Jersey, and one of the vice presidents of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society.

HON. JOHN K. FINDLAY, seventh President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Mercersburg, Franklin county, Pa., May 12, 1803. He was educated at the West Point Military Academy, from which he graduated in 1824 and was commissioned a Lieutenant. He took part in the Seminole War in Florida as Lieutenant of artillery, but in 1828 resigned his commission and commenced the study of law. He was admitted to the bar at Harrisburg in 1831, and practiced his profession in Lancaster until 1845, when he was appointed Judge of the District Court of the city and county of Philadelphia. In October, 1857, he was elected President Judge of the Third Judicial District of Lehigh and Northampton counties, which position he filled until 1862.

In politics Judge Findlay was a Democrat and in 1880 was elected a police magistrate of Philadelphia, holding Court No. 2, with his office at 1424 South street. He died, suddenly, at Spring Lake Beach, N. J., on September 13, 1885, aged eighty-two years, leaving a wife and one daughter to survive him.

HON. JOHN MAYNARD, eighth President Judge of the county, was born May 6, 1812, in Vermont. He was educated in the common schools and at Hamilton Academy, New York, studied law with W. J. Angell and George Clyde of Otsego, and was admitted to the bar of Tioga county in 1831. He located at Williamsport in 1840, where he resided to the close of his life, with the exception of a few years. In 1859 he was appointed Assistant Law Judge of the Fifth Judicial District, composed of Alleghany county, and in October, 1862, was elected President Judge of the Third District, composed of Lehigh and Northampton counties, and filled this position ably for five years when he resigned in September, 1867 and returned to Williamsport, where he died in 1855.

HON. ABRAM B. LONGAKER, ninth President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Lower Providence Township, Montgomery county, April 28, 1828. He was educated in the public schools, Franklin and Marshall College and Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., graduating from the latter institution in 1850. He entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, but later changed to the study of law and in August, 1853 was admitted to practice in the courts of Northampton and Montgomery counties.

In 1855 he was elected a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature and was re-elected in 1856, 1857 and 1858, in which latter year he was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives.

He was a sergeant in the Independent Cavalry Company of State Militia, organized in 1862 for emergency service and a private in Co. H, July, 1863. Later he was Regimental Quartermaster of the 41st Regiment of Emergency Militia. In October, 1868, he was elected President Judge for a term of ten years, and removed to Allentown, and resided at Jordan and Union streets. He resigned in July, 1878, and resumed the practice of law. In 1889 he located at Easton, and in May, 1893, removed to Norristown where he practiced law for some years, and died there June 15, 1913, aged 85 years.

He married Miss Mary Slingluff, and had two daughters—Miss Rosaline Longaker and Mrs. Henry K. Kurtz, of Philadelphia.

HON. EDWARD HARVEY, tenth President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Doylestown, Bucks county, January 17, 1844, the only son of Dr. George T. Harvey and Mary Kinsey Larue. He was educated in the schools of his native town, the Lawrenceville, N. J., high school and Princeton College. He studied law under Hon. George Lear and in 1865 was admitted to the bar of Bucks county. He became a member of the Lehigh county bar on November 8, 1865, and two months later commenced the practice of his profession in the office of Hon. S. A. Bridges. He soon acquired a lucrative practice and attained high rank in the profession. In 1873 he was chosen a member of the constitutional convention in which body he served as a member of the committee on corporations. Upon the resignation of Judge Longaker he was appointed by Governor Hartranft on June 14, 1878, President Judge, which position he filled until the close of the unexpired term in January, 1879.

After his retirement from the bench Judge Harvey resumed the active practice of law. In 1878 he was solicited to become the nominee upon an independent ticket, for President Judge of Lehigh county, but declined the honor. Again in 1879 he declined to accept an independent candidacy for judge of the courts of Berks county and in 1882 declined to be a candidate in Dauphin and Lebanon counties, which candidacy was tendered him by a committee of prominent lawyers and citizens. In 1903 he was the Democratic candidate for Judge in Lehigh county, but was defeated by the nominee of the Republican party.

In 1884 he represented the tenth congressional district as committeemen in the Democratic national convention. In 1878 he was chosen President of the First National Bank and became a director of the Second National Bank on Jan. 1, 1905, of which he was elected President, October 16, 1907, upon the death of Hon. Wm. H. Ainey, which position he held until his death. He was also a director of the Allentown Trust Company.

He was President of the Board of Trustees of the Allentown Hospital Association and was active in furthering the interests of that institution, to which he bequeathed a large amount of money. In 1882 he became a charter member of Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M., of which he was a Past Master and Trustee. He was a member of the Livingston Club, Allentown Lodge, No. 130, B. P. O. Elks, University Club, of Philadelphia, Legion of Honor, and was President of the local Bar Association since its organization. Judge Harvey was an able orator and his oration at the time of the civic memorial to the late President William McKinley was a masterpiece. He died at his residence, Fourth and Chew streets, Allentown, September 7, 1913, unmarried, leaving two step-sisters, Mrs. William C. Newell of Doylestown and Mrs. John H. Rex, of Norristown, as his nearest surviving relatives.

HON. EDWIN ALBRIGHT, eleventh President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Lower Milford township, Nov. 8, 1838, the son of Michael Albright and his wife Maria Schaeffer. He was educated in the schools of the vicinity and taught school several terms, devoting his spare time to the study of law. In 1860 he entered the law office of Hon. S. A. Bridges at Allentown and a year later entered the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. He was admitted to practice at the Lehigh county bar on April 12, 1862. He was appointed solicitor for Lehigh county, and in 1865 was elected District Attorney. In 1870 he was elected State Senator, representing Lehigh and Northampton counties, and two years later was elected to represent Lehigh and Carbon counties. In 1878 he was elected President Judge as the nominee of the Democratic party, over former Judge Edward L. Dana, of Wilkes-Barre. At the conclusion of his ten-year term he was again nominated and his impartial administration of affairs was such that he received the endorsement of the Republican party and was again elected. In 1898 he was again nominated, endorsed by the Republican party and received practically the unanimous vote of the people of the county. In 1899 he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Judge of the Supreme Court. He died Dec. 13, 1902 of pneumonia, after a service of nearly twenty-four years on the bench. Judge Albright was a member of Barger Lodge, No. 333 F. & A. M., the Penna. German Society and the Livingston Club. He married in 1866, Miss Rebecca Sieger, and had two children, Mrs. Bertha A. Sieger and Dr. Roderick E. Albright.

HON. FRANK M. TREXLER, twelfth President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Allentown, January 9, 1861, the son of Edwin W. Trexler and his wife, Matilda Sourbeck. He attended the public schools of the city, graduated from the Allentown High School in 1876 and from Muhlenberg College in 1879 with honor. He entered the law office of Thomas B. Metzger, Esq., and was admitted to practice at the Lehigh county bar on April 10, 1882. He was elected City Solicitor in 1885 and re-elected in 1887 and 1889. In 1902 he was appointed associate counsel of the city. Upon the death of Judge Albright he was appointed by Governor Stone on December 20, 1902, President Judge of Lehigh county for the unexpired term, and in November, 1903, was elected to the office for a term of ten years. On Feb. 6, 1914, he was appointed a judge of the Superior Court of the state by Governor Tener.

Judge Trexler is President of the Pennsylvania Juvenile Court and Probation Association, one of the organizers of the Pennsylvania Conservation Society and a member of the executive committee of the Lehigh Valley Children's Welfare Society. He is actively interested in the Young Mens' Christian Association, of which he has been President since 1890, and was largely instrumental in the erection of its fine building. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church and has served as an official of the congregation. In 1910 he received the degree of LL.D., from Muhlenberg College. He is a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania German Society and the Lehigh County Historical Society. He is also a member, P. M. and Trustee, of Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M., of Allen Chapter, No. 203, R. A. M., Allen Council, No. 23, R. & S. M., Lehigh Lodge, No. 83, and Unity Encampment, No. 12, I. O. O. F.

Judge Trexler married, November 7, 1889, Miss Jennie R. Schelling and has five children.

HON. CLINTON A. GROMAN, the present President Judge of Lehigh county, was born in Salisbury township, March 23, 1861. He was educated in the public schools, the Millersville State Normal School and the Allentown Preparatory School. He taught school while studying law under M. C. Henninger and A. G. Dewald and was admitted to the bar on Dec. 21, 1885. He was elected district attorney in 1899 and on Nov. 4, 1913, was elected President Judge of the county.

ASSOCIATE JUDGES.

Under the constitution of 1790, the Associate Judges of Northampton county, commissioned August 17, 1791, were Peter Rhoads, William Henry, David Wagener and John Mulhallon. In 1796 Robert Traill was appointed to succeed David Wagener. In 1799 Traill resigned and John Cooper was appointed. In 1802, David Wagener was again appointed to succeed John Mulhallon. In 1806 the associate judges were Peter Rhoads, David Wagener, William Henry and John Cooper.

Upon the organization of Lehigh county, Peter Rhoads and Jonas Hartzell were commissioned, October 13, 1812, associate judges of the new county. The associate judges of the county since 1815 were as follows:

	Commissioned.
John Fogel,	September 9, 1815.
Jacob Stein,	November 11, 1823.
John F. Ruhe,	November 3, 1838.
Joseph Saeger,	January 14, 1839.
Peter Haas,	March 26, 1840.
Peter Haas,	March 3, 1843.
Jacob Dillinger,	March 14, 1843.
Peter Haas,	Feb. 28, 1848.
John F. Ruhe,	March 29, 1849.
Peter Haas,	November 10, 1851.
Jacob Dillinger,	November 10, 1851.
Charles Keck,	August 7, 1855.
Charles Keck,	November 19, 1856.

Willoughby Fogel,	November 12, 1856.
Joshua Stahler,	November 12, 1856.
Joshua Stahler,	November 23, 1861.
Willoughby Fogel,	November 23, 1861.
James Frey,	November 9, 1866.
Jacob Erdman,	November 9, 1866.
Reuben Guth,	November 9, 1866.
Reuben Guth,	November 26, 1867.
Samuel J. Kistler,	July 30, 1868.
David Laury,	November 5, 1868.
James Frey,	November 17, 1871.
David Laury,	November 6, 1873.

The constitution of 1874 abolished the office of associate Judge in certain districts, of which Lehigh county was one.

ATTORNEYS.

The first business in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county at its first term in December, 1812, was the admission of attorneys applying for the privilege of practicing in the several courts of the county. The following were admitted, viz:

Henry Wilson, George Wolf, Philip S. Markley, John Ross, William McIlhenny, Francis B. Shaw, Frederick Smith, John Evans, John Ewing, Frederick J. Haller, William Sperring and Samuel Sitgreaves.

Of these, only three, Henry Wilson, John Ewing, and Frederick J. Haller, were residents of Lehigh County.

Henry Wilson was a native of Harrisburg, where he was born in 1778, and studied law in that place. He settled at Allentown and was Prothonotary and clerk of the courts of the county from 1815 to 1820. He was elected a member of the 18th congress in 1822, representing Lehigh, Schuylkill and Berks county, and re-elected in 1824. He died in office at Allentown, August 14, 1826. He married Margaret Wilson, a daughter of James Wilson, but had no children.

Frederick J. Haller was admitted to the bar of Northampton County in 1797, practiced also at Reading, and later settled at Allentown, where he died.

John Ewing, one of the pioneer lawyers of Lehigh county, lived for a number of years on Hamilton street opposite the Court house.

John Evans had been admitted to practice in Northampton county in 1803. He did a large amount of professional work in the Lehigh courts, and was regarded as one of the best lawyers who visited Allentown in the olden time. He was born in Chester county in 1782 and died at Allentown, Nov. 23, 1824.

Henry King was for many years succeeding 1815 the leader of the Lehigh bar, and enjoyed the most enviable reputation throughout Eastern Pennsylvania. He was born in the town of Palmer, Hampden Co., Mass., on the 6th day of July, 1790, and received the rudiments of his education in that region. When about fifteen years of age he became one of the few select pupils of the Rev. Ezra Witter, who resided in the town of Wilbraham. Under this teacher he finished his general education. In 1810 he commenced the study of law with an eminent attorney of New London, Conn., W. H. Brainerd, Esq., with whom he remained until the fall of 1812, when his studies were interrupted through the disturbed condition of the region, consequent upon the war with Great Britain. He removed then to Wilkesbarre, Pa., where he completed his preparation for the bar in the office of the Hon. Garrick Mallory and was admitted to practice in April, 1815. It was very shortly after this that he removed to Allentown, where he was for some time the only resident lawyer, but was brought into contact with the eminent practitioners of neighboring towns, as Sitgreaves, Ross, Wolf, Evans, Smith and John M. Porter. In 1825 he was elected to the Senate of Pennsylvania for a term of four years, upon the expiration of which he was again elected. Before his second term expired, in 1830, he was chosen as a representative to Congress, which position he filled for four years, being re-elected in 1832. During his career in the Legislature he was most of the time at the head of several of the most important committees. He was chairman of the committee to remodel the penitentiary system of the State, and drew the bill which divided the State into districts and established the Western Penitentiary. The next measure with which he was identified was the well-known act of 1829, to reform the general code, in the preparation of which he was assisted by the "Prison Discipline Society," of Philadelphia, whose favorite project it was. Joel B. Sutherland, T. J. Wharton and Judge King, of Philadelphia, had been appointed commissioners to visit several of the states, and report to the Legislature from the knowledge thus gained a system for the government of the penitentiaries. After a full examination they reported in favor of the system then in vogue in New York. This was strenuously opposed by the "Prison Discipline Society," who found in Mr. King an able and effective advocate in the State Senate. After a long and severe struggle the plan now in force in Pennsylvania was adopted. Mr. King also drafted the bills under which the Arch and Walnut Street prisons in Philadelphia, were removed, and Moyamensing prison erected in their stead. So closely had he been connected with these reforms, and so active had he been in advancing them, that he gained much fame, and when the commissioners appointed by the King of Prussia to visit the country and report upon the different systems of penal correction came here, they sought him out in his quiet home at Allentown, that they might confer with him. During four years of the time Mr. King was in the Legislature he was also chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Several important laws still in force on the statute-books of the State owe their origin to Mr. King, among them that for "recording releases for payment of legacies," for "preserving the lien of first mortgages," for "distributing the proceeds of sheriffs' sales." Many other laws prepared by him were included in the revised code of Pennsylvania. In Congress, Mr. King was an active tariff man and voted for the tariff of 1832, and opposed every reduction since. Differing in this and some other matters from the administration party under Jackson, he, at the close of his second term, retired to private life. His home was the building in which is now the Hamilton Hotel, where he died July 13, 1861.

Charles Davis, who came to Allentown only a little later than Henry King, was a man of almost equal prominence professionally, while as a citizen he had few superiors in disinterested usefulness. Mr. Davis was born in Easton, Dec. 25, 1795, and pursued his preliminary legal studies in the office of Hon. Samuel Sitgreaves, being admitted to the bar on Jan. 6, 1817. In the same year he removed to Allentown. Here he resided until 1839, following uninterruptedly his profession, which developed a very extensive practice. Mr. Davis removed to Reading in 1839, and from there to Easton, his native place, in 1867. From this time until his death, which occurred quite suddenly on Jan. 19, 1873, he led a semi-retired life, but was in the full enjoyment of his faculties, and was frequently consulted by other members of the Northampton bar. In speaking of Mr. Davis, Judge Maxwell said: "It was worthy of remark that no attorney had ever been more diligent in the practice of his profession, nor more faithful to his clients or more interested and devoted to their interest; that, when his clients had committed to Mr. Davis their causes and business, he devoted to their prosecution and maintenance all the powers of his vigorous mind; that Mr. Davis had not only been an able, successful, and honorable lawyer, but had in other ways also proven himself a valuable and useful citizen; that he had always been a consistent, devoted Christian, and had, by his walk and conversation, honored his religious profession." M. H. Jones, Esq., in seconding the resolutions offered by Judge Maxwell, said,

"That he could indorse unto approval every word that had been said in eulogy of Mr. Davis by Judge Maxwell, and that, in seconding the resolutions, he desired to bear testimony to Mr. Davis' worth and ability as a lawyer, and as a good and upright citizen; that he had been a man of undoubted talent and of great legal experience, and had remained in full practice until, from increasing years and declining health, he had been longer unable to attend to its demands; that his opinions on legal questions were highly valued by his fellow-members of the bar, and exhibited remarkable clearness of mind,—this facile grasp of legal questions he had retained up to the time of his death."

The resolutions referred to were as follows:

"WHEREAS, Information has been received of the death of Charles Davis, Esq., the senior member of the Bar, who was admitted as an attorney of this Court on the sixth day of January, 1817, practiced at this Bar for several years, afterwards removed to Allentown, in the County of Lehigh and subsequently to Reading, in Berks County, in which last-named counties he had a large and successful practice for many years, and a few years ago returned to this his native county, where he resided at the time of his decease.

"Resolved, That this Bar bear testimony to the high character and great worth and accurate legal knowledge of the lamented deceased. He was ever devoted to the interests of his clients; earnest and assiduous in the faithful discharge of his duties to men and the Court, and died at an advanced age, in full Christian hope.

"Resolved, That the members of the Bar will attend the funeral of the deceased in a body, and wear the usual badge of mourning, and that an invitation be extended to the members of the Bar of Lehigh and Berks Counties to unite with us in paying this last mark of respect to the memory of the deceased.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the widow of the deceased, and to the Bars of Lehigh and Berks Counties, and published in the newspapers of this county."

Mr. Davis left a widow and one son, the Hon. J. Depuy Davis, who was State senator from Berks county.

Samuel Runk was born in Hunterdon County, N. J., Sept. 5, 1783. He received his early education at home and in its vicinity, including a knowledge of the classics and of the higher mathematics, with both of which he maintained a close familiarity, to his end. Having passed over his general studies, he took up civil engineering as a speciality, and after several years spent in its theory and practice, made a trip on foot, through Pennsylvania, and from Pittsburgh on a flat-boat, down the Ohio, in search of a future home. The diary of this journey contains numerous items of local interest, and some thrilling incidents in flat-boat navigation at that early day.

Not finding the West to suit him, he returned to Pennsylvania, and entered the law-office of Frederick Smith, at Reading, as a student, and in due time was admitted to the bar at that place, April 17, 1818. Soon after he came to Allentown, and was admitted to the bar of Lehigh county, May 4, 1819, and thereafter continued to reside here.

When he came to this county, this region was intensely German. He took a leading and active part in effecting a change. At a time when Sunday schools were an offense to a large portion of the community, he was instrumental in organizing, and became the first president, of the first "Lehigh Valley Sunday-School Association" established in this valley. The first meeting to organize an English congregation in Allentown was held at his office, and largely through his efforts became successful. He became its treasurer for a number of years.

After the public school system was adopted, he was engaged from year to year, by the directors, to make the examinations of applicants for teaching; through these examinations many of the inepters were dropped by the way.

He was never an aspirant for office, and never held office, except of a purely local character. He was Burgess of Allentown in 1840.

As a lawyer he was thoroughly read in the standard works of his profession. Having come to the bar when a small number only of our State reports had been published, he grew up with them, and had read them all, a labor rarely achieved by those now coming in. As a counselor, he ranked with the most reliable at the bar during his period. None surpassed him in integrity.

As an advocate, he was not a dealer in sonorous rhetoric, but sought to acquire as complete a knowledge as practicable of the material facts of his cases, and to present them, with the law as concisely as consistent with clearness and accuracy, and to rely upon the intelligence and the integrity, of the court and jury, to secure that justice which belonged to them.

He died May 21, 1848, after an illness of a few days, the result of a cold contracted at the preceding term of court. He was a good citizen and an upright lawyer.

Henry Jarrett, who began practice here in 1824, was the son of Isaac Jarrett, and was born in Macungie township, June 22, 1772. In 1798 he was elected justice of the peace for Macungie and Weissenberg townships. He was married to Elizabeth Heintz, of Macungie, in 1800. He was sheriff of Northampton county in 1812, when Lehigh was set off, and a few years later studied law with a Mr. Cook and a

Mr. Kaulbock, and was admitted to practice as an attorney of Lehigh county, Nov. 29, 1824. He resided during his early married life at Millerstown and Freemansburg, but after his admission to the bar removed to Allentown, and lived on Water Street. In 1829, Mr. Jarrett became clerk of the courts of Lehigh county. He died Nov. 4, 1830, at the age of fifty-eight years. His son Phaon was admitted to the bar of Lehigh county, September 4, 1835. He graduated at West Point, and became a civil engineer.

John S. Gibbons was a prominent attorney of about the same period as Mr. Jarrett. He was a native of New York State, born at Poughkeepsie, July 11, 1802. He removed to Philadelphia before reaching his majority, and studied for his chosen profession with two prominent attorneys of that city. In 1824 he came to Allentown, and was immediately admitted to practice. He followed the profession until his death, March 12, 1851, with great success. During the greater part of that period his office was at 531 Hamilton Street. He was a man of more than ordinary ability and of high character. From an obituary notice published in one of the local journals we quote: "Clear, calm, courteous, prudent, and prompt, he was at all times a most able advocate, a most formidable opponent, and when roused by a case, or an opposition that was worthy of his best efforts, he was an eloquent and powerful orator. A strict observer of professional honor and courtesy himself, he frowned indignantly on the petty artifices and low chicanery that with some men pass for professional skill, and held in utter sovereign contempt both the acts and the actors of those degrading practices."

He married, Feb. 6, 1825, Miss Sarah A. Rupp and had nine children.

Hon. Samuel A. Bridges, at his death the oldest member of the Lehigh bar, was born at Colchester, Conn., Jan. 27, 1802. He secured an academic education in his native town, and graduated at Williamstown College in the year 1826. He later studied law, and in 1829 was admitted to practice in his native State. In 1830 he came to Pennsylvania, first locating at Easton, and thence going to Doylestown. He, however, liked neither place, and soon came to Allentown, and remained here up to the time of his death,—his admission to the bar of this county occurring Feb. 1, 1830. Being a good lawyer he soon gained an extensive and lucrative practice, as well as the good will of the people. Under the administration of Governor Porter he was appointed deputy attorney-general for Lehigh county in 1837, and held the office for seven years. On the 22d day of February, 1848, he was elected to Congress to fill the unexpired term of Hon. John W. Hornbeck, an old-time Whig, who died soon after having taken his seat in 1847. During the session for which he was elected the Mexican war ended, and the American government having been successful, succeeded in the acquisition of the Territory of Texas. Many very important measures were brought before Congress, and in all of which Mr. Bridges took a prominent part. He returned from Congress March 4, 1849. Lehigh and Bucks were then united as a district, and Hon. Thomas Ross, of Bucks, was elected in 1848 and 1850, and in 1852, Lehigh being then entitled to the candidate, Mr. Bridges was again elected, serving two years, from 1853 to 1855. After the expiration of his term he again vigorously and actively pursued the practice of his profession. But after a retirement of over twenty years from official life, he in 1876 was again elected to Congress, serving two years. His Congressional record throughout was a good one. A man of strong convictions of mind upon all subjects, and possessed of the courage to boldly assert them at all times, it mattered not to him whether in the minority or majority, they were his views and always honestly given, and with such forensic power and strength of language as to carry great weight.

Mr. Bridges abandoned his law practice in 1880 and lived in retirement. He had long been the leading lawyer at the bar of this county, and his practice was large and highly remunerative. While in practice he devoted the whole force of his life to it. He was well read, and blended the analytical with the logical, and as an orator his style was picturesque and powerful. His devotion to the cause of his clients was a distinguishing feature of his character. Their cause was his cause, and the energy, force, and zeal with which he conducted all cases committed to his charge was the secret of his success as a lawyer. In all his business transactions he was prudent and careful, prompt in the discharge of his obligations, and exacting the same promptness from those with whom he had dealings. Socially he was a pleasant and companionable man, always having a kind word for all whom he met. He was a man of cheerful disposition and of many kindnesses.

Mr. Bridges died Jan. 14, 1884. He was twice married. His first wife was Sarah Wilson, the youngest daughter of James Wilson, a prominent and successful merchant of this city. She was a sister to John Wilson, Thomas Wilson, James W. Wilson, Francis Wilson, Mrs. Chas. L. Hutter, and Mrs. Jos. K. Saeger. She died Jan. 7, 1863. One child, a son, was the issue of this marriage, but he died in infancy. His second wife, Miss Mary Martha Stopp, daughter of the late Joseph Stopp, survived him. She married, Dec. 1, 1886, Chief Justice Edward M. Paxson. Judge Paxson died Oct. 12, 1905, and his widow died shortly after on November 3, 1905.

Of Peter Wycoff little can be authentically related, except the fact that he was born near Bound Brook, N. J., in 1808, studied law under Mr. McDowell, of Doylestown, was admitted to the bar of this county, Sept. 3, 1838, and died March 8, 1877. A few years, about the middle of his professional life, were passed in Philadelphia. He is remembered as an honest, upright man, a good office lawyer, and fairly successful in his profession. He married a daughter of Gen. William Brown.

Robert Emmett Wright was born at Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 30, 1810. After attending for several years the school of Charles Wales in his native town, he entered the drug-store of John C. Baehr, in 1826. Two years later he came to Allentown and entered the employ of John B. Moser, with whom he remained until twenty-one years of age, when he went into the drug business for himself. But he had never cared particularly for this or any other line of mercantile life, and consequently he soon abandoned it and entered his name as a student of law, and upon Sept. 5, 1838, was admitted to practice. Almost immediately after taking up the duties of his profession he attained popularity, which was based upon his unselfish devotion to various public interests, as well as upon his generally recognized professional ability and trustworthiness. Politically he was a Democrat. While not in any sense a place seeker, the possession of various fitting qualities led to his appointment to a number of honorable and responsible stations, in all of which he proved himself more than adequate. He was twice appointed district attorney by Attorney-General J. K. Kane, and was twice given the office of postmaster at Allentown. He acted as school director for twenty-three years, and few men did more than he for the advancement of the educational interests of the city, or, for that matter (though more indirectly), of the county. He also served two terms as burgess of Allentown. He was appointed a reporter of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania by Governor William Fisher Packer, and published the first Index Digest of the Supreme Court Reports.

Always faithful in the discharge of whatever of duty devolved upon him, and always kind and considerate to all with whom he has come into contact, he commanded the respect and affection of the people in the community in which he passed the adult years of a long life. Few men had more friends; few shown their worthiness of having them by so numerous unselfish labors for the good of individuals and institutions. It can be said of Mr. Wright that he was unceasingly a public benefactor.

Mr. Wright married, July 19, 1835, Maria, daughter of Charles L. Hutter, of Allentown, and had nine children. He died Jan. 10, 1886.

Henry C. Longnecker, one of the best-known attorneys of his time, was born in Cumberland County, Pa., April 17, 1821. He was placed at school at Wilbraham, Mass., from whence he entered the Norwich Military University of Vermont, and was subsequently graduated at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. After he graduated he chose the law as his profession, and entered upon its study in the office of Hon. James M. Porter. He was called to the bar Jan. 26, 1843. After the appointment of Mr. Porter as Secretary of War in the cabinet of President Tyler, Mr. Longnecker took charge of his law business, and conducted the same with entire satisfaction until the return of Mr. Porter from Washington, after which Mr. Longnecker concluded to make his residence in Lehigh county, and accordingly was admitted to the bar here on the 30th of January, 1844, and soon entered upon a successful practice. Upon the breaking out of the war with Mexico, Mr. Longnecker volunteered, serving as lieutenant and afterward as adjutant of his regiment. He participated in all the principal engagements under Gen. Scott, which ended in the triumphal entry of the United States army into the city of Mexico. Upon his return from Mexico he was elected district attorney of Lehigh County by a very flattering vote, and in this capacity he acquitted himself with satisfaction. In 1851 and 1854, Col. Longnecker was a delegate to the State Democratic convention of those years. In 1856 the trouble in Kansas assumed a grave aspect, and Mr. Longnecker, like many earnest and conscientious Democrats of that day, opposed the principles by which his party was made the means of extending the area of slavery, and was afterward an ardent advocate of the measures of the Republican party. In 1858, Mr. Longnecker was elected a representative from Pennsylvania in the Thirty-sixth Congress from the Sixth District, which was then decidedly Democratic, and served as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs. In the war of the Rebellion he became colonel of the Ninth Pennsylvania Infantry, and as such commanded a brigade in Western Virginia in 1861. He subsequently commanded a brigade at the battle of Antietam. Col. Longnecker was no ordinary man. In addition to the liberal education which he received he was endowed with a sound judgment upon public affairs, and his counsels were often invoked by those in power during the dark days of rebellion.

He died Sept. 16, 1871, and left a widow (a daughter of Mr. Samuel Lewis) and two children.

John D. Stiles was born in Luzerne county, Jan. 15, 1823. He settled at Allentown in the practice of his profession in 1844, and was a very successful lawyer. He was (as the civil list in the preceding chapter will show) three times elected to Congress, the last time in 1868. On the expiration of his term, in 1871, he returned to the practice of law, in which he engaged until his death, Oct. 29, 1896. He had been three times a delegate to Democratic national conventions, the first being the convention of 1856, when he aided actively in the nomination of James Buchanan, as he afterward did in his election.

C. M. Runk was a native of Pennsylvania, and was admitted to the bar at Allentown, Aug. 31, 1846. He had a successful practice.

James S. Reese was one of the successful practitioners at the Lehigh bar, and became a member of the Legislature, as will be seen by reference to the preceding chapter giving the civil list of the county. He would doubtless have reached higher stations in the gift of the people had his life been spared, but he died quite young. He was a native of Easton.

E. J. More, who was admitted to practice in 1849, the year after Mr. Reese, was a native of Allentown, and died there. He studied his profession with Samuel Runk, and became quite a popular lawyer, especially as a counselor.

William Samuel Marx, in his time a leader of the bar, was born at Wescosville, Lehigh Co., March 1, 1829, and was the son of Samuel and Magdalena (Beary) Marx. His father held several offices of public trust and honor and while register of wills for Lehigh County removed to Allentown, residing opposite the courthouse. William received his early education and preparation for college at the Allentown Academy, then under the charge of Mr. Chas. A. Douglass. He was ready for the freshman class at Princeton at the age of fourteen years, but on account of his youth was put off for a year, after which delay he was entered there. He was graduated regularly in the class of 1848, having for his classmates, among others, Rev. W. C. Cattell, D.D., late president of Lafayette College, and Henry C. Pitney, vice-chancellor of New Jersey.

He entered the law-office of Hon. Henry C. Longnecker, at Allentown, immediately, and after faithful study was admitted to the bar of his native county Feb. 5, 1850, before he was fully of age. He was characterized by great energy and determination, and early established himself as a force among his brethren at the bar. At that date the courts were regularly attended by Judge J. M. Porter, Hon. A. E. Browne, A. H. Reeder, and others, leaders of the Easton bar, and with them the younger men hesitated to contend; but Mr. Marx early demonstrated his willingness and ability to meet and cope with them in the trial of cases and with more than ordinary success. He was appointed sheriff's attorney by Sheriff Nathan Weiler in 1853, and in 1856 was nominated and elected district attorney, and served the full term. His labors were arduous, because of an increase of important cases growing out of riots during the construction of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and in securing the conviction of some ringleaders he, by overwork, laid the foundation of ill health, which, later, culminated in the disease which carried him off. Among his associates of the bar he was early regarded chief, and had one of the most successful and lucrative practices before he had been ten years admitted. About 1860, on account of ill health, he associated with him in practice Hon. C. M. Runk, and continued the partnership until the autumn of 1864. In April, 1866, while trying an important case at Easton, he contracted a severe cold, and, unable to have it at once checked because of his duty to his client, it took a hold on his system which could not be shaken off, and after five months of sickness he died, Sept. 2, 1866, at the early age of thirty-seven and a half years. Mr. Marx was in politics an ardent Democrat up to the war, and in the campaign of 1860 a follower and great admirer of Stephen A. Douglas, and cast one of the thirteen straight ballots given in Allentown to that Presidential candidate. When the South chose the arbitrament of war, he was prompt to range himself on the side of the government, and never swerved in the fiercest contests of partanship of the succeeding years to aid by voice and vote the administration of Abraham Lincoln in vindicating the constitutional supremacy of the laws. This course separated him widely from his party, then and now dominant in his native county. His later votes were consequently given to the Republican candidate. His nature was such that he always entered ardently into and pushed whatever he undertook, and, nothing of a politician, it was always easy to understand where he stood upon any question of the day. His circle of friends and admirers was large, and many of them surviving can tell of interesting incidents in his career.

May 18, 1854, he was married to Josephine W. Baldwin, of Bloomfield, N. J., by whom he had four sons and one daughter. His widow and four children survived him.

Another strong lawyer, who, like Mr. Marx, died very young was John H. Oliver. He was born at Easton, received his early education at Vandever's private school in that place, and then entered Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, from which he graduated, standing high in his class. Immediately commencing practice—he was admitted Nov. 3, 1856—at Allentown, he rose rapidly in his profession. He was popular and a good speaker, and therefore it was not strange that in 1870 he became the choice of the Republicans of the district for Congress. He lacked only about one hundred and fifty votes of defeating his opponent, E. L. Ackerman, although the Democratic majority in the district was very heavy. During the war Mr. Oliver was major of the Fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia. He died not long after his candidature for Congress, at the age of thirty-four, very widely and deeply lamented, and in his death the Lehigh bar lost one of its most brilliant ornaments. He was a man of strong character and yet very fine intellectual fibre,—a scholarly and polished gentleman.

George B. Schall, one of the members of the bar who has passed away, was a native of Trexlertown, and a graduate of Princeton College. He was admitted to practice in 1857, became successively district attorney and State senator.

Adam Woolever was a descendant of a family among the pioneers to this country from the Palatinate, named Wohlleber (Well-liver), numbering several brothers, one of whom first settled in what is now Columbia County, where a town located by them was given the name of "Woolever-Stettle" (Woolever-town). Another planted his home in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., while another nestled down amid the hills of New Jersey, within sight of the Delaware, and in the original home of the proud Lenni Lenapés. These hardy pioneers, having by hard labor founded a home, cleared the forests, and broken up the soil in Columbia County, anticipating rest and comfort in the days to come, had scarcely time to enjoy the fruits of their toil before the hand of oppression reaching across the broad ocean again grasped them, and by the unjust taxation of her Majesty Queen Anne, and some technical plan in the titles of land they occupied, deprived them of their rights and homes and compelled them to renew their efforts elsewhere. Almost disheartened, but braving the dangers and trials awaiting them, with Spartan energy they packed their humble furniture on sleds and, in the midst of a severe winter, wended their way through an unbroken and almost trackless way to the Mohawk Valley, where they settled once more. From this hardy and determined race, sprang Adam Woolever, the subject of this sketch, born in Franklin township, Warren Co. N. J., on the 7th of March, 1833, and the son of Adam and Diana Woolever. In his boyhood he enjoyed excellent education advantages and at the age of about fifteen he entered a store in Easton as clerk. After remaining for a time he entered the office of Judge Joseph Vliet, of Washington, N. J., and read law for one year. With a view to better opportunities for study he left Washington, and removing to Easton, entered the law-office of the Hon. Judge McCartney, one of the most eminent lawyers of the day. Here he read law until 1855, when he was admitted to the bar. In March, 1855, he removed to Catsauqua and opened an office, continuing in practice until 1859, when in the fall of that year he was appointed by Sheriff Haines as his attorney, and served three years in that capacity. At the end of his term, in 1862, he was elected district attorney, in which official relation he served creditably for three years. In 1866 he, in connection with David O. Saylor and Esaias Rehrig, conceived the idea of starting the Coplay Cement-Works, now so well and favorably known, and which project proved successful. While thus engaged in manufacturing interests he continued the practice of law, and in the fall of 1869 was elected to the Legislature, serving creditably during the years 1870-72. In 1872 he was nominated in the Democratic caucus for Speaker of the House, but the Republicans having a majority, one of their number was chosen. In 1875 he was elected chief clerk of the House of Representatives, in which capacity he served until the spring of 1877, when the Republicans gained the ascendancy and ended his term. From that time he lived a more or less retired life. He was also a candidate for the office of State senator and at one time mentioned for the gubernatorial chair.

In 1876, Mr. Woolever published a very meritorious book entitled "Treasury of Wit and Humor," containing sayings of 931 authors, 1,393 subjects, and 10,299 quotations,—a work favorably received by the press, as also by literary and professional men. He was a fine scholar, devoted much of his time to books, and was as thoroughly versed in the standard and light literature of the day as any man in the city of his residence. His social nature and genial temper made numerous friends, and rendered his home the almost daily meeting-place of many kindred spirits. His word ever was regarded as a law unto him. A man of generous, kindly impulses, with the hand of charity ever open for the needy and deserving, the poor ever found in him a practical helper and friend. As a citizen he was plain and unassuming, treating the poor and humble with the same deference as the rich and exalted. His simple and polite demeanor made him universally esteemed by all who knew him.

There were excellencies of character displayed in his private life, there were traits of goodness and kindness and genial warmth and brightness exhibited in his social intercourse with those friends whose "adoption he had tried," which the world knew not of. Few men exhibit the best that is in them to the world. Those who have mingled in the strife of politics and have done battle in the arena in which selfishness and hardness and cynicism are a part of the armor of successful combatants, hide the better feelings of their nature from the gaze of the multitude. It was so with Adam Woolever. It was only to those with whom he was on terms of closest intimacy that he spoke without reserve of those things of which he thought most deeply. They only knew the enthusiastic love he had for all that is strong and pure and beautiful in humanity, and his detestation for falsehood, cruelty, and deception. He had the manliness of a man united with the tenderness of a woman. He was as straightforward and honest in the warmth of his friendships and the intensity of his dislikes as a child. He was bluff and hearty in his ways, with a keenly humorous instinct, but with an undercurrent of grave, old-fashioned courtesy and thoughtful consideration for the feelings of others. A gentleman because he possessed a gentle, kind heart, he was utterly incapable of mean and despicable things. His knowledge of history was remarkable; he had studied it as one who looks beneath the surface to discover the hidden springs of action which have changed the current of national life. He believed in the universal brotherhood of man, and all forms of oppression outraged the fine sense of justice which was a prominent trait in his character.

In politics Mr. Woolever was always a Democrat. He took an active part in every State campaign, and was popular with the masses as a speaker. With a clear perception of the issues involved, a lucid style of speaking, and a pleasing address, he combined an agreeable modicum of facetiousness, never failing to attract and hold the attention of his auditors. He was also equally successful as a lecturer; his productions evincing close thought, careful study, and great purity of language. He believed in "woman's rights," and the injustice and inequality of the laws of the various States with regard to women and their property was a subject upon which he could quote an array of facts absolutely unanswerable.

Mr. Woolever was married in January, 1857, to Miss Eliza Ann Saylor, only daughter of Samuel Saylor, of Hanover township. Their children are Lilly, Ida, Samuel S., Harry, Maggie, and three who are deceased. The death of Adam Woolever occurred on the 24th of September 1882, in his fiftieth year. The virtues of his true heart were apparent in all his life to those who knew him best, and to them is known how much constancy, truth, and manliness, how much tenderness, kindness and charity, are buried in his grave.

Hiram H. Schwartz who was admitted to practice in 1858, now a resident of Berks county, was a native of North Whitehall. He was, as will be seen by reference to the civil list, at one time superintendent of schools of Lehigh county. Removing to Kutztown, he was thrice elected as the representative of Berks county in the State Legislature. He was elected judge of the Orphans' Court of Berks county in 1883.

The late Alfred B. Schwartz, brother of Hiram H., was born in North Whitehall, graduated from Franklin and Marshall College, was admitted to practice in 1859, and by the time the war broke out had attained a very respectable clientage. He entered the army as captain of a company in the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment, and after considerable service returned home and died.

Thomas B. Metzger was the son of Nathan and Rebecca (Worman) Metzger, the former a native of North Whitehall and the latter of Allentown, being a descendant of the pioneer Abraham Worman, who settled at and owned Crystal Springs. Mr. Metzger removed to Allentown in 1830, when fifteen years of age, and his son was born there Dec. 25, 1839. He received his general education at the Allentown Academy under those excellent instructors, McClanahan, Chandler and Gregory. Having very early formed the intention of studying law, he bent his energies toward that end. He taught school at Ruchsville, and subsequently, by invitation of Mr. C. W. Cooper, became instructor in the Allentown Grammar School. In 1859, when eighteen years of age, he realized his hope, and began reading law with Hon. Samuel A. Bridges. In 1860 and 1861 he continued his studies in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and, concluding the course, returned to Allentown, and was admitted to the bar on April 7, 1862. The success which attended him almost from the start proved the choice of profession to have been a wise one. His practice increased evenly and with satisfactory rapidity from year to year as also did his personal popularity. In 1868 he was elected district attorney, and he discharged the duties of that office until 1871. Twice he was elected city solicitor, the two terms being separated by a period of several years. He was a delegate to several State Conventions of his party from this district, and in 1876 was the district delegate of his native county to the National Convention at St. Louis, which nominated Hon. Samuel J. Tilden for President. Official or political life, however, had but little attraction for Mr. Metzger, and a large clientage claimed the greater part of his time and energies. He had an extensive practice in the Lehigh and other Eastern Pennsylvania courts and in the Supreme Court, and was extensively intrusted with the settlement of estates. Mr. Metzger was married Sept. 1, 1863, to Susan R., daughter of Simon Sweitzer. He died Oct. 2, 1908.

Morris L. Kauffman, attorney and financier, was born June 11, 1848, at Allentown. He received his preliminary education in the local schools, and afterward attended the Highland Military Academy in Massachusetts, and the Claverack College in New York. He then studied law under Robert E. Wright, Esq., and was admitted to the bar in 1870. During his early practice he was first associated with Hon. J. S. Biery as a partner, and then with E. H. Reninger until 1887, when he embarked in professional business for himself and secured a large and lucrative practice, which he conducted very successfully until his decease in 1900. He was a most excellent speaker and debater.

Mr. Kauffman became largely interested in local real estate and erected many buildings for business and dwelling purposes. He was fond of travel and made a number of trips to Europe. Having been familiar with military matters and prominently identified with the Republican party of Lehigh county, his efficiency and influence were so highly appreciated that he received the appointment of aide-de-camp under Gen. John F. Hartranft, division commander of N. G. P., with the rank of major, and since then he was generally so addressed.

Major Kauffman was largely interested in and identified with many local enterprises and financial institutions, which aided materially in the development and enrichment of Allentown. He was one of the organizers of the Livingston club, and officiated as its second president. He was affiliated with Greenleaf Lodge No. 561, F. & A.

M., and also Allen Commandery No. 20, K. T., of which he became a past eminent commander, and with Lehigh Lodge No. 83, I. O. O. F. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran church.

He was married to Arabella Balliet, daughter of Stephen Balliet, who was a prominent iron master of Lehigh county in its early history, and they had two daughters, Leila M. and Adela B. He died March 10, 1900.

Hon. James S. Biery, attorney-at-law and member of congress from the Montgomery-Lehigh district of Pennsylvania, 1871-73, was born March 2, 1839, in Venango county, Pa. His parents had removed to that county from Salisbury township, in Lehigh county, in 1837. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the local schools and Emlenton Academy, after which he followed teaching for eleven years, mostly at Allentown. He then studied for the ministry for a time, but he changed his mind and prepared himself to become an attorney, and after following a course of studies in the offices of Edwin Albright, Esq. (afterward judge of the county), he was admitted to practice in 1868. He developed a large business, became identified with many notable cases, among them the great and long-continued legal contest in the Evangelical Association, for the Association, in which he was successful. A number of lawyers were admitted to the bar who received their preparation in his office.

He was a Republican in politics and took an active interest in that party for forty years. He represented the Montgomery-Lehigh district of Pennsylvania in congress from 1871 to 1873. During the subsequent agitation of the tariff he wrote many superior articles on the subject, which were published in the Chronicle and News, and copied in other newspaper with favorable comments. A literary effort of his, worthy of mention, was a satire on "King Grover," which had a wide circulation.

Mr. Biery was a member of Lehigh Lodge No. 83, I. O. O. F., and of the Linden Street M. E. church. He was married to Anna Mertz, daughter of Elias Mertz, of South Whitehall township, and they had one son. Mr. Biery died Dec. 3, 1904.

John Rupp, attorney, was born in Weisenberg township, Lehigh county, near Seipstown. He was reared on his father's farm, and after attending the township school, received his higher education in the Allentown Academy, and Franklin and Marshall College. He then studied law in the office of Adam Woolever, Esq., and was admitted to the bar of Lehigh county in 1865. He developed a large and lucrative practice, and carried on a very successful career at the bar for upwards of forty years until his decease, on March 2, 1906. He served as solicitor of the sheriff of the county, and also of the city, and he was the legal advisor for large industrial and financial concerns. He acted with great distinction as master in the legal proceedings of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston against the Allentown and Bethlehem Transit Company, his decisions which involved large sums of money having been sustained by the courts.

Mr. Rupp was married to Ella S. Zellner. He was a brother of Alvin Rupp, superintendent of public schools of Lehigh county, and of Sol F. Rupp, justice of the peace of Weisenberg township, in whose sketches (Vol. II) the family genealogy appears.

Mr. Rupp was a member of the St. John's Reformed church of Allentown, and of the Allentown Lodge No. 90, Knights of Pythias.

Hon. William Henry Sowden was born on June 6, 1840, at Liskeard, in the parish of St. Cleer, Cornwall county, England. His parents were Samuel Sowden and his wife Mary, who was a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Elliot. Mrs. Sowden died at Liskeard in 1842, at the age of 35 years. In 1846, four years after the death of his mother, he came with his father to America, and for a time resided in Philadelphia. He then went to live with the family of Major George Fry, of Allentown, where he continued to reside until he started his own home.

He attended the public schools of the city, and later he took a course in the Allentown Seminary and Allentown Academy.

He taught school for one term in the city, and had entered the office of Hon. Robert E. Wright as a law student, but his ambitions to become a member of the bar were interrupted by his enlistment in the Union Army. He was mustered in on August 13, 1862, as a corporal of Company D, 128th regiment.

A little more than a month later, on September 17th, the regiment received its baptism of fire at Antietam, where Corporal Sowden was wounded in the leg, and left for dead but was dragged from the field by a comrade to a place of safety. Mr. Sowden suffered from the wound up to his death. A legacy from England enabled Mr. Sowden in 1863, to enter the law department of Harvard College. Graduating in 1865, he returned to Allentown and having on September 6, 1864, been admitted to the Lehigh County Bar, he began the practice of his profession, and soon built up an extensive practice. Although for many years a respected member of the bar, it was in politics that Mr. Sowden made his reputation which became national before he was in middle-life. In his early years, he accepted the faith of the Democratic party, and he had barely reached his majority before his influence became felt. In 1868, he was elected to his first political office, that of solicitor to the county commissioners and by a strange coincidence, his career ended with the same office.

In 1872 he was elected district attorney. He had been elected for two years, the term ending October 1, 1874, but by the change made by the new Constitution he served three months longer than the period for which he had been elected.

Sowden's aggressive style of campaigning had already become widely known and as early as 1864, his services as stump speaker had been sought, he having in that year made many speeches in Pennsylvania for his old commander, General George B. McClellan, who was the Democratic nominee for president against Abraham Lincoln. In 1868 he stumped the state for Horatio Seymour for president, and four years later he did similar service for Horace Greeley.

In 1874 Sowden became a Democratic candidate for the nomination of lieutenant governor, an office that was created by the new Constitution. He was defeated by his opponent, John Latta, who several months after was elected.

In 1875 he was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention at Erie, in the days of the greenback craze. It was one of the most memorable conventions ever held in this state. Sowden stood for what was then known as the money of the Constitution and the "dollar of our daddies"—gold and silver—and so determined a fight did he make that he kept the convention together two days and a half, although the business should have been finished in less than half that time.

In 1876 found Sowden for the first time a candidate for congress in the Tenth District, which was then composed of Lehigh, Northampton and a part of Bucks counties. He was however defeated for the nomination by Samuel A. Bridges by an apparent majority of one vote.

In 1880, being a district delegate to the National Convention at Cincinnati he helped to nominate General Winfield Scott Hancock as the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Two years later he led the Lehigh delegation that nominated Robert E. Pattison for governor. In 1883 he made his famous fight for the adoption of the Crawford County System, under which the people voted directly for the candidates of their choice instead of delegates. It remained in vogue until 1904, when it was abolished only to be re-adopted the year after the restoration of the delegate system had disrupted the party as Mr. Sowden declared it would. In 1884 Sowden again became a congressional candidate, this time under the Crawford County System. He had for his opponents Evan Holben, C. J. Erdman, and Melchior H. Horn.

After a bitter fight he won at the primaries by only fifty majority and in November of that year, he was elected to the Forty-ninth Congress. In the same year he was elected a delegate-at-large to the national convention at Chicago, which nominated Grover Cleveland for the presidency.

In 1886 he was re-nominated for congress and so much pleased were the Republicans with Mr. Sowden's attitude upon the tariff questions that they did not nominate a candidate against him. His second term began March 4th, 1887, but the Fiftieth Congress did not meet until the following December. Mr. Sowden, although an out and out protectionist, was placed on some of the most desirable committees and his popularity among the leaders of both parties became more and more manifest in many ways. During this session he had a bill passed appropriating money for a public building in Allentown. Because of his voting to defeat the Mills Tariff bill recommended by President Cleveland the bill was vetoed.

On account of his vote on the tariff bill the politicians of the county saw a chance to punish him and read him out of the party. At their county meeting they passed resolutions condemning his actions, and would not allow him to defend himself. The following year at their county meeting his course which had been previously denounced was sustained. The year 1890 found him once more a delegate to the state convention at Scranton and he helped again to nominate Robert E. Pattison for governor. In 1892 he stumped the New England states and New York for the National Democratic Committee when Cleveland was elected the second time.

Two years later he ran for the Democratic congressional nomination against C. J. Erdman and M. C. Kline. Mr. Erdman was successful. In 1896 he was the Democratic nominee for mayor, but was defeated by Fred E. Lewis by 236 majority. The same year William Jennings Bryan was nominated for president upon the free silver platform and Mr. Sowden was the leading exponent of his cause in this county.

Two years later he became a Democratic candidate for governor, but when the Lehigh delegation arrived at Altoona the leaders had practically nominated George A. Jenks and Mr. Sowden was nominated for lieutenant governor. He stumped the state for two months and although defeated ran far ahead of his ticket. From 1900 to 1902 he was city solicitor and his record here, as in all the public offices that he held, was clean and honorable.

The Democratic state convention in 1900 elected Mr. Sowden delegate-at-large to the national convention at Kansas City, which nominated Bryan for president the second time. Mr. Sowden was a leader in the convention and made a speech seconding the nomination of Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, for vice president.

Mr. Sowden was again a candidate for congressional nomination in 1902, and was defeated by a very narrow margin. It was then, because of his protective tariff beliefs, that the Republicans turned to him and induced Mr. Sowden to accept the congressional nomination at their hands. Mr. Sowden made a great fight and succeeded in carrying his opponent's own election district, ward, city and county, but the majority in Berks county for his opponent was too great to overcome.

The following year came the judiciary contest and Mr. Sowden and his family arrayed themselves on the side of Judge Trexler and did yeoman service in his behalf. Mr. Sowden made nearly one hundred speeches in the county for Judge Trexler, but advocated the election of the rest of the Democratic ticket.

In 1904 he again was the candidate for congress on the Republican ticket carrying his county by 400 majority and only losing the district by 1,100 votes. It is generally believed that if he had spent a week in Berks county, instead of staying away altogether he would have been elected. In 1906 the county commissioners elected him county solicitor, and he conducted the affairs of the office with signal ability and characteristic integrity, insisting that every dollar paid out must be for a just and legal claim, and that all fees must be in accordance with the fee bill.

Himself for many years a public official against whose record not a word of criticism could be justly said and who never accepted a dishonest penny in fees, Mr. Sowden insisted upon the same high standard of integrity in other servants of the public service, and was for many years the relentless enemy of grafters. Mr. Sowden discovered that a number of court house officials had for many years been padding their expense accounts so as to "eat up" the surplus fees of their offices, one half of which belonged to the county. Through him several of the officers were forced to disgorge several thousand dollars in a single year.

A born fighter, shrewd and aggressive politician and convincing stump speaker, Mr. Sowden had the faculty of reaching the people, thousands of whom in Lehigh county were his steadfast adherents for many years and followed him through all the vicissitudes of his long political career. The secret of his strength lay in that he kept his word to his friends, that he never made statements that were not susceptible of proof and that as a stump speaker, he stood alone in his class. He was a forceful orator, made his appeals direct to the people and possessed a fund of stories and a style that never failed to hold his audiences from start to finish. His Pennsylvania German speeches were inimitable and had much to do with the stronghold that Mr. Sowden always had upon the farming element.

Mr. Sowden, in 1865, was united in marriage to Mary Alice Huntzinger, of Schuylkill Haven, Pa. The union was blessed with two children: Bessie, the wife of Judge James L. Pugh, of Washington, D. C., who have three children: Gladys, Mary Alice and Serena Pugh, and a son, Edward Huntzinger, who died in childhood.

Socially Mr. Sowden was a member of Lehigh Lodge, No. 83, I. O. O. F., and for many years he was its representative to the Grand Lodge sessions.

He departed this life March 3, 1907, in the 67th year of his age.

Hon. Constantine J. Erdman, attorney-at-law and member of congress from the Berks-Lehigh district of Pennsylvania, 1892-96, was born Sept. 4, 1846, in Centre valley, Lehigh county. After acquiring his preliminary education, he attended the classical school of Dr. A. R. Horne, at Allentown, and the Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, from which he was graduated in 1863. After teaching public and private schools for a time he studied law with Robert E. Wright, Esq., and was admitted to practice as an attorney on Oct. 28, 1867. He first associated with John H. Oliver, Esq., at Allentown; afterward with Thomas F. Diefenderfer, Esq., and then with his son, Max S. Erdman, Esq., until his decease, covering a period of thirty-seven years.

Mr. Erdman served as district attorney of the county from 1874 to 1877, and during this time he was adjutant of the Fourth regiment, N. G. P., having participated in the Reading riot of July, 1877. He took great interest in the difficult problems between labor and capital and became the author of the Erdman Arbitration Law. He represented the Berks-Lehigh district of Pennsylvania in congress from 1892 to 1896. He was solicitor for the county commissioners for twenty years.

Mr. Erdman was closely identified with the industrial affairs of Allentown for many years. He officiated as president of the Coplay Cement Company, the Allen Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and the Allentown and Coopersburg Turnpike Company. For a time he served as a trustee of Muhlenberg College, and of the Livingston club. He was affiliated with Barger Lodge No. 333, F. & A. M., Coopersburg Lodge No. 269, I. O. O. F., and the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, and was a member of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Erdman was married to Mary Schall, daughter of John R. Schall, a merchant of Allentown, and they had two children, Max S. and M. Constance. He died Jan. 15, 1911.

Marcus C. L. Kline was born March 26, 1855, in Salisbury township. He attended the common schools in the borough of Emaus, and graduated from Muhlenberg College, June 26, 1874; was admitted to practice in the several courts of Lehigh county, June 5, 1876, and in the Supreme and Superior Courts of Pennsylvania, and Federal courts. He was elected city solicitor in April, 1877, for the city of Allentown; served as district attorney for the county of Lehigh from January, 1887, to January, 1890; was chairman of the Democratic county committee of Lehigh during the years 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, and 1899; served as director in the Second National Bank of Allentown for many years, and January 17, 1901, was elected president of the Lehigh Valley Trust and Safe Deposit Company, and was associated with said institution in that capacity until his death. He was also president of the Allentown Trust Company.

Mr. Kline represented the Lehigh-Berks district in the Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth congresses. He died at Allentown, March 10, 1911. He married, Oct. 4, 1881, Clara M. Keller, and had two children, Edwin K. and Althea L.

Hon. Robert E. Wright, Jr., was born in Allentown, Feb. 15, 1847. He was educated in the public schools and the Allentown Academy, after which he engaged in civil engineering for several years. His inclinations turning to the law, he entered his father's office and was admitted to the bar Sept. 8, 1868. The retirement of his father from active practice threw the responsibility of his extensive clientage upon him when but twenty-three years of age. His skill and ability were equal to the various demands made upon him and his brilliant success led him to be retained as attorney for a number of railroads and large corporations. In 1886, he became president of the Allentown National Bank, which position he held until January, 1909, when he resigned. He was president of the Lehigh Valley Traction Company from 1901 to 1903, and one of its receivers from May, 1903, to August, 1905. He

Samuel J. Kistler,	July 1, 1889	Victor E. Tice,	April 11, 1900
George F. P. Young,	Nov. 13, 1889	E. O. Nothstein,	Sept. 14, 1900
J. H. Marx, Nov. 25, 1889		H. M. Hagerman,	Jan. 29, 1901
W. S. Campbell,*	Dec. 2, 1889	Alfred S. Hartzell,	May 20, 1901
Harry C. Cope, Jan. 7, 1890		Wm. J. Jones,	May 20, 1901
John L. Schwartz,	April 7, 1890	Howard S. Hess,	May 20, 1901
George W. Mackey,*	July 7, 1890	Chas. W. Kaepfel,	May 23, 1901
A. K. Stauffer,* Oct. 6, 1890		George W. Aubrey,	July 22, 1901
Wm. G. Freyman,	Dec. 1, 1890	John M. Gardner,*	Dec. 5, 1901
George L. Xander,	Jan. 8, 1891	Calvin F. Smith,	Jan. 27, 1902
E. O. Reyer, April 8, 1891		Joseph J. Brown,	Jan. 28, 1902
R. L. Schiffer, Oct. 19, 1891		Martin H. Leamy,	April 15, 1902
Quintus F. Ehler,	Jan. 14, 1892	Israel C. Becker,*	April 15, 1902
Ralph Metzger, Jan. 5, 1892		Horace W. Schantz,	Oct. 6, 1902
Calvin E. Arner,	Sept. 13, 1893	Milton P. Schantz,	Dec. 22, 1902
H. J. Steele, Oct. 23, 1893		Joseph H. Stopp,	Jan. 26, 1903
Thomas D. Danner,	July 23, 1894	Hugh J. Gallagher,	Jan. 26, 1903
Leo Wise, Sept. 7, 1894		Robert L. Stuart,	Sept. 21, 1903
E. F. McAtee, Sept. 7, 1894		Allen W. Hagenhuch,	Sept. 21, 1903
Clinton O. Mayer,*	Dec. 19, 1894	Charles O. Hunsicker,	Sept. 21, 1903
Charles D. Thomas,	April 16, 1895	Clarence Beck, Oct. 26, 1903
Daniel W. Sitler,	July 15, 1895	Wilson A. Wert,	Jan. 18, 1904
Edward J. Fox,	Nov. 25, 1895	Glenna H. Doust,	Sept. 12, 1904
Orrin Serfass, May 4, 1896		Francis J. Gildner,	Sept. 21, 1904
Francis G. Lewis,	June 1, 1896	Nimson L. Eckert,	Sept. 21, 1904
George M. Lutz,	Nov. 9, 1896	Robert S. Siegel,	March 6, 1905
Harry A. Cyphers,	April 27, 1897	Fred B. Gerner, March 10, 1905
Robert S. Taylor,	June 7, 1897	Lawrence H. Rupp,	Sept. 4, 1905
F. W. Armstrong,*	June 8, 1897	Edgar C. Nagle,	Sept. 4, 1905
James K. Bowen,	July 5, 1897	Claude T. Reno,	Sept. 4, 1905
W. W. Watson, Feb. 7, 1898		Edwin K. Kline,	Sept. 18, 1906
J. Thomas Schantz,	March 11, 1898	Charles W. Webh,	Sept. 18, 1906
Frederick Wittman,	April 11, 1898	Richard W. Iohst,	Feb. 5, 1908
George R. Booth,	May 18, 1888	Dallas Dillinger, Jr.,	Feb. 5, 1908
P. A. Wildermuth,*	Sept. 6, 1898	Charles N. Ulrich,	Sept. 14, 1908
W. F. Shepherd,*	Sept. 14, 1898	Robert H. Norgang,	Sept. 15, 1908
Calvin A. Loos,	Nov. 17, 1898	Herbert H. Hartzog,	Nov. 17, 1908
James W. Fox,	March 6, 1899	Chas. H. Riegel,	Feb. 20, 1909
Joseph H. Stofflet,	April 17, 1899	Wm. H. Schneller,	March 15, 1909
Malcolm W. Gross,	April 17, 1899	Warren K. Miller,	Oct. 25, 1909
Max S. Erdman,	April 17, 1899	George J. A. Miller,	Oct. 31, 1910
Joseph C. Slough,	July 5, 1899	Roy B. Woodring,	Oct. 3, 1911
O. R. B. Leidy,	July 5, 1899	Ralph H. Schatz,	Oct. 23, 1911
George T. Spang,	July 5, 1899	George Kuhl, Oct. 23, 1911
Marcus S. Hottenstein,	July 5, 1899
Ira T. Erdman,	July 24, 1899
Edwin Sassaman,*	July 24, 1899
Frederic H. Stillwagen,	Sept. 4, 1899
C. J. Hepburn,* Oct. 4, 1899

IMPORTANT TRIALS.

The first notable murder case in the county was that in which William Keck was tried for the murder of a man named Seem, in Emaus, in the spring of 1864. Unusual interest was taken in the case by a large number of people. The trial took place at the November term of 1864. The defense gave enough plausible evidence to convince the jury that the act of shooting had been preceded by such demonstration on the part of Seem as not to allow them to consider it as having been done deliberately, "with malice, pre- tence and aforethought." The verdict was one of guilty of murder in the second degree and Keck was sentenced to imprisonment for six and a half years. After serving a few years he was pardoned.

That the verdict was not one of murder in the first degree, caused great indignation among a multitude. William S. Marx was the chief local counsel for the defendant as well as one of the most noted criminal lawyers in the country, David Paul Brown, of Philadelphia.

Among the noted cases tried in the county court were the foreclosure proceedings of the Old Colony Trust Company against the Allentown and Bethlehem Rapid Transit Company; the proceedings of the committee of minority bondholders against the Lehigh Valley Traction Company; the rupture in the Evangelical Association; the Keck-Nipsch murder trial; the Bechtel murder case; the Bloch and Krause murder trials, and the Leopold Erman murder trial.

A law suit involving years of litigation and arousing widespread interest, causing endless expense to two families in Lehigh county, bringing about disagreements that in intensity approached a feud was tried in the Lehigh county courts in February, 1907, when a jury in the ejectment suit of Andrew Camp vs. the Estate of William Zimmerman gave a verdict for the defendant. The land in dispute is located in Lynn township, near Stines' Corner, and forms the boundary along the farms of the parties interested. It is a narrow strip, 23 feet wide at one end and tapering to a point 1,797 feet distant at the other, containing a little more than one-half an acre, and practically worthless, although a lane runs over part of the strip.

The first suit was brought to try the title to the strip almost fifty years ago, and Andrew Camp, one of the parties, at various times had employed nearly every lawyer at the Lehigh county bar. Thousands of dollars were spent in the cases that were tried, which were twice appealed to the Supreme Court.

When the suit in 1907 was tried, William Zimmerman, the original defendant, and his attorney, John Rupp, had died, as well as a number of the leading witnesses who were surveyors, and who could not agree upon the location of the line, which resulted in what surveyors call a "lap."

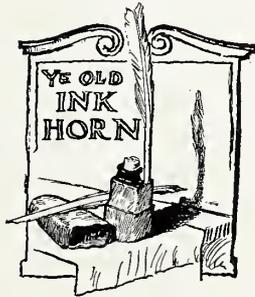

At the trial in 1907, Wilson Wert represented Camp, and Lawrence H. Rupp represented the estate of William Zimmerman, and the decision was again in favor of William Zimmerman, as had been all previous decisions.

When this case was decided it seemed as if the issue was finally settled, as the records of former titles, which were put in evidence, and the decisions of the Supreme Court in favor of the Zimmerman's seemed to settle the question of title forever.

After the trial above mentioned the Zimmermans sold their land and the purchasers again became involved in a trespass case with Camp, who refused to allow them to use the land to remove their crops. After a lengthy law suit a verdict was found against Andrew Camp in damages for the loss which the plaintiffs had sustained.

A year or so later Camp again tried to interfere with the owners of the adjoining property as they were cutting along the line of the disputed tract. He fired several shots at them, and was arrested and tried and convicted on several charges, including a charge of aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill. He was sentenced to two years imprisonment, but because of ill health and old age, was released upon parole, after serving several months in prison. It is believed that the last chapter of this famous case has been written, and it is certain that no other case in the county ever involved such costly litigation, considering the value of the land in dispute, nor has any other case ever attracted more attention than was aroused by the cases growing out of the quarrels of these neighbors, which landed them so frequently in court, which dragged out through more than three generations, and survived even the death of the original contending parties.

CHAPTER XII.

EDUCATION IN THE COUNTY.

EARLY SCHOOLS.

The settlement of Lehigh county was a part of the general migration of the Germans to the new world during the 18th century, of whom Pennsylvania received by far the largest portion. It is said that there was hardly any illiteracy among them. They came in groups and were often accompanied by a minister and a teacher. Those who settled within the bounds of the county were mostly Palatines and Swiss and were church people, holding religion and education in high esteem. They were, with the exception of several groups of Mennonites and a few Schwenkfeldian families, adherents of the Reformed or Lutheran confessions. Soon after their arrival and settlement they established places of worship and in due time made provision for the education of their children.

Benjamin Rush in his Account of the Manners of the German Inhabitants, written in 1789, touching on their schools says: "All the different sects among them are particularly attentive to the religious education of their children and to the establishment and support of the Christian religion. For this purpose they settle as much as possible together, and make the erection of a school house and a place of worship the first object of their care. They commit the education and instruction of their children in a peculiar manner to the ministers and officers of their churches:—hence they grow up with prejudice in favour of public worship and of the obligations of Christianity. Such has been the influence of a pious education among the Germans in Pennsylvania that in the course of nineteen years only one of them has ever been brought to a place of public shame or punishment."

The early settlers in different parts of the county, soon after their arrival and settlement, established places of religious worship, and in due time also, made provision for the education of their children, for they, no doubt, believed that education made better citizens, and enhanced the ability and usefulness of its possessors. Almost without exception, the earliest schools were established at churches or places of worship. Frequently the school house preceded the erection of a church, and served the double purpose of church and school. These schools were church schools, so far as instruction was concerned, but were not directly supported by the church. Each parent who sent children had to pay in proportion to the total number of days sent. In most cases the teacher "boarded round," which in those days was no easy task.

Instruction was imparted in reading, writing, and a little arithmetic. In a few instances the course was more extensive. Instruction in the catechism, and the doctrines of the church, with singing, were generally required. These schools were not strictly denominational, but generally admitted the children of other denominations. After the population had increased many of these schools were overcrowded, and thus a demand for more schools was created, which were established at other places, and at first held at private houses, until buildings could be erected for their accommodation. School houses were built by communities, and were commonly constructed of log; were small, had low ceilings, and small windows and few of them. They were defective in everything but ventilation. The furniture corresponded with the buildings. The instruction was in the German language. The teachers of these first schools were of foreign birth and educated in Europe. Those at the churches were, generally, the leaders in singing on occasions of religious worship. Nearly all these were competent teachers.

What commenced to do harm to our schools about 1760 was, that many of the principal teachers, such as Miller, of Lynn; Roth, of Albany; Michael, and others, left their services as school teachers, and commenced to preach, because the congregations could get no other ministers. Less qualified men were taken as teachers, and the schools lost greatly thereby.

This inaugurated a decline in the requirements for teachers, which continued for a considerable time, until the educating of the children was considered a secondary thing, and, in consequence, much neglected.

At this period, almost any person that came along, and made some pretensions to education, was employed as teacher. This often brought into the school room persons entirely unfit, morally and mentally, for the position. Nearly all the old schools were noted for the severity in discipline. Some of the teachers were not only severe, but cruel in their punishments.

Up to the year 1800, the German language was taught almost exclusively. From the year 1800 to 1820, the English language was gradually but at first very slowly, introduced into the more progressive schools of the southern and central parts of the county. In these schools it was taught in connection with the German. Under the head of "English schools," a few exceptions are mentioned.

In the northern and western parts of the county, English was introduced some years later, and did not find thorough introduction into all the schools of the county, until after the adoption of the common school system by all the districts. In the school report of 1855, the county superintendent states: "The approximate proportion studying in English books is seven-eighths, of whom but three-eighths understand the language." Doctor Helfrich writes: "In the beginning of the first decade of the present century, educational matters began to grow better, but only in individual schools, such as at Lynn, where Salem, and later Frederick Smith; in Heidelberg, Bergemeyer; in Weissenberg, Busie; at the Ziegel church, Storb and Allenborn were teachers. These were all educated teachers from Europe. They not only taught the common branches, but also instructed in history, natural history and natural philosophy, besides giving religious instruction. The schools were generally kept during the winter season, four or five months. The poor, and those living at a distance from the school house, neglected to send their children. The books used in the German schools were the A, B, C book, the Psalter, and the New Testament. But few made use of the law passed for the education of the poor gratis, for too many felt ashamed to send. In this manner ample opportunity was given for each one to obtain sufficient education, yet there were plenty of people who during their youth attended only four or five months school in all. With all this, however, there could be found hardly any person who could not read. All instruction was in the German language."

ENGLISH SCHOOLS.

The earliest of the English schools, was established at Egypt, Whitehall township. The school house was built in 1808, and school commenced in it January 3, 1809, with Jacob Kern, as teacher, who received fourteen dollars per month for his services. This school was kept up regularly until 1857.

The English School Society at New Tripoli, Lynn township, organized in the year 1812, built a school house and established an English school.

This house was used for school purposes as late as 1850.

In the year 1816, the Ballietsville English School Society was formed. A school house was erected as follows: "The house is to be built twenty by twenty-four feet, and each of the twenty subscribers to said school house to deliver one short and one long log, by the first day of May next," (1816). This school was continued for a long time.

About forty years ago, John D. Lawall, taught an English school at Schoenersville, in a building specially erected for this purpose.

In 1833, an English school was established in a small house in the yard of David Harlacher, Upper Saucon; the school was taught by Charles T. Jenkins, an educated man from Montgomery county. It continued very successfully for eight years. These schools did excellent service. They were the means of imparting a good English education to many of the principal young men in the communities in which they were located.

SCHOOLS HAVING FUNDS OR ENDOWMENTS.

It appears that at Dillingersville, Lower Milford, a Lutheran congregation was formed as early as 1743, and that soon after a school house was built, and a school established. This congregation appointed three of its leading members a committee to select and take up a suitable tract of land for church and school purposes. This committee took up a tract of almost thirty acres of land, a little to the west of the above named village, according to a land warrant dated 1770, which was granted to the committee in trust for the said congregation. The building on this tract was known as the "Upper Milford School House." By an act of assembly the association received permission and authority to sell the property "excepting the burial grounds, and the school house thereon, with two acres of ground adjacent." By the sale completed April 1, 1871, $4,050 were realized. This sum is placed at interest. The annual net receipts, including rents, amount to $250. The act provides "that in no event shall a less sum than $100 be appropriated, in each year for school purposes, exclusive of repairing and rebuilding. This sum is to be expended for school, "other and additional to that provided for by the common schools." This with what the township provides gives this sub-district an annual school term of eight or nine months.

At Centreville, near Macungie borough, Lower Macungie township, a tract of about three acres of land, was donated by John Wetzel and Jane, his wife, for school purposes. It was conveyed by deed, dated August 21, 1790, to the trustees and their successors. The grant was made for a union school. The school house was built by the community. In January term of court, 1868, permission was granted to sell a part of the property on ground rent reservation, the interest to be paid annually. The annual receipts amount to about $150, which is spent for summer school, in addition to what the common school provides, giving this neighborhood an eight or nine months' term annually.

On the 24th of September, 1790, three men, viz: Andrew Eisenhard, Cornelius Hughes, and John Herman, entered into an agreement and made themselves responsible for the donation of two acres of land—the first named to give one acre, and each of the other two, half an acre—"on the road leading from Trexlertown to Bethlehem, for a school place, and for no other purpose, forever. And we do further promise and agree by these presents, that we will build a house on the said described land, that shall be sufficient for a school house; this we promise to build free, and complete this fall." This school property is located in what is now East Texas, Lower Macungie. The school was undenominational. On the 24th of October, 1874, the property was sold and over $3,700 was realized. The annual interest amounts to $226. Part of this is annually expended for summer school. This district has also about nine months school, in consequence of the fund mentioned. In Upper Macungie, Andrew Miller, donated two acres of land for school purposes. On this tract is erected what is known as Miller's school house. Hon. Solomon Fogel granted one acre of land, on which was erected a double building at Fogelsville. This building was the first school house in that section that was supplied with a steeple and bell.

Frederick Miller, late of Washington township, by his last will, dated January 17, 1854, bequeathed $4,000 to the "common free schools" of the school districts of Heidelberg and Washington townships, Lehigh county, to wit: $2,400 to the district of Washington, and $1,600 to the district of Heidelberg. These amounts were paid to the above named districts by the executors of the deceased, Heidelberg receiving, after various deductions, $1,506.94, and it is presumed, Washington district in the same proportion. Sam'l J. Kistler, Esq., who furnished the above information stated that this money was used in Heidelberg in building the present school houses. Previous to this, the school houses did not belong to the township, but were owned by the communities that had erected them.

PROMINENT OLD SCHOOL SITES.

In all probability, the Swamp Church School, in Lower Milford, established about the year 1725, is the oldest in the county. This school was discontinued sometime since. The Schwenkfelders established a school at their meeting house near the line, between Lower Milford and Montgomery county, about the year 1734, and continued it until 1840. The Latin and Greek languages were favorite studies and were taught as early as 1775. In Upper Milford, about the years 1735-40, the Mennonites erected a building for school and church purposes. It was built of logs, had a very low ceiling, and small windows. It was divided into two apartments by a swinging partition suspended from the ceiling. One division was used for the school and the other for religious meetings, except when the attendance, in the latter case, was very large, the partition was raised and the two rooms were occupied. This was the earliest of its kind in the neighborhood and had a very pleasant location.

A similar building was erected about the same time and by members of the same denomination, in a fine grove, between Coopersburg and Center Valley, now called "the meeting house." At Dillingersville, referred to above, a school was founded early—long before the revolutionary war. In one of the records it is stated, that John Balthaser Goetz died in the school house and was buried on Easter Monday, A. D. 1759. The house was used for church and school purposes until 1791; since for school only. At Egypt, Whitehall township, a congregation was formed in 1734, and the first church was built in 1764. A school was opened about the same time.

The erection of a school house at Emaus was commenced in September, 1746. On the occasion of the formation of the Moravian congregation at this place, July 30, 1747, Christopher Heyne and Mary Heyne, were appointed overseers of the children, and they entered upon their duties as teachers in September of the same year. The school was conducted with entire success for upwards of three years. In the year 1750, the school that had been established at Oley, Berks county, was moved to this place and, judging from the number of teachers and assistants appointed, it must have been large. In 1753, it was removed to Bethlehem. Fear of attack by hostile Indians was the cause of its removal.

Lehigh church, in Lower Macungie, was founded in 1750, and the school about the same time. The school at the Heidelberg church is no doubt the oldest in the northeastern part of the county. The church was founded in 1745, and the school soon after. Two schools, one supported by the Lutheran members, the other by the Reformed members, were kept at this place for some time, but afterwards united and have ever since formed one union school. New Tripoli, in Lynn, is a very old school site. It is the oldest in the northwestern part of the county. Other old sites are at Unionville, North Whitehall, Jacksonville and Lynn.

Of some of the schools in the northern part of the county, Doctor Helfrich states, the first school was the one at New Tripoli where a congregation had gathered. The Ziegel church school followed, and a few years later Heidelberg and Lowhill, the latter, however, at the Weissenberg church. Lowhill had in the earlier period no school but belonged to Weissenberg school district.

The following, from Doctor Balliet, of North Whitehall, may give an idea of the school houses and schools, from 1816 to 1834, and in some instances, considerably later. The house described was twenty-four by twenty feet, built of log, had a very low ceiling and small windows, and was plastered inside. Along three walls, inside, were long desks, sloping up toward the wall, with high benches without backs. In the center of the room around a very large stove, on two rows of benches without backs sat the abecedarians and the a-b-abbs. Near the stove, fronting the school, was the teacher's desk, painted red, about five feet high, with a high stool or bench to correspond. Behind this were hung on pegs, against the wall the shawls, scarfs, hats and caps. There, too, stood the bucket, with water, often visited by the tired children, not to slake their thirst, but to relieve themselves of the monotony of the school room. Near the bucket were stacks of dinner baskets, the sight of which, an hour before noon, whetted the appetites to the highest pitch. The course of instruction in the English schools embraced reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic. The following were the books used: Comly's Primer and Spelling Book, Murray's Introduction to the English Reader, English Reader and Sequel, Frost's United States History, and Pike's Arithmetic. Grammar and Geography were seldom, if ever, taught in our schools.

The schoolmaster of those times, in many cases, was no teacher, instructor nor educator; he was only the master as the title defines it.

Neighbors living around a school house would select the master. These were often what we call "tramps" without education, character, or training. Sometimes one of these characters would elect himself. If he did not suit, parents would not send their children, and thus stop his salary. The school term was short, seldom exceeding four months in a year.

The day sessions were long. The school was frequently called at eight in the morning and continued till four and a half or five o'clock P. M., with an intermission of an hour at noon. No recess in the half day sessions was granted.

Young America then had "backbone," for what boy or girl of the present day would consent to sit four hours continuous? The German schools, particularly those at the churches, opened in the morning with singing and prayer. This was seldom the case with English schools. The exercises in the forenoon consisted in reading twice and spelling once. In the afternoon the same routine was followed. The interval between reading and spelling was spent, by the larger ones, in writing and ciphering at their seats. In the early German schools the girls were not required to write or cipher. Little or no attention was given to writing by the majority of the masters. All the writing was done with the goose quill; steel and gold pens were then unknown in these parts. The making and mending of pens, consumed much of the teachers' time and patience. The masters in these days were very severe in their school government.

SECOND PERIOD—1834.

At the time when the common school law was passed, in 1834, it met with great and strong opposition by the people. The rich were not willing to pay so heavy a tax for the poor, and even the poor themselves opposed the idea of paying tax. When it was made optional for a township to accept or reject the provision of the act by a vote at the election, many districts voted it down. So strong was the opposition to the law in a few districts, that its friends thought it policy to keep silent. The free school system at first gave no better teachers, but it regulated the location of school houses, formed new districts, and brought the children into the schools. If a person had to pay tax, he wanted the value of his money. The children learned what was to be learned under the old teachers, better ones were not to be had, but more teachers were appointed. Soon, however, young men saw that teaching was a profession, and many devoted themselves more to the cause—sought for education, and the teaching power grew. In this way the schools were gradually improved until the higher and normal schools commenced to educate and prepare better teachers. Since then the improvements are more perceptible.

The following, taken from school reports, will show the improvements made:

Report of 1855.—“Of our school houses I scarcely know what to say. If I must be candid, I will only say they are ‘nothing to brag of.’ They are either the octagon or square order, with desks attached to the wall and high seats, without distinction where little ‘shavers’ can neither touch the bottom, or support backs from the opening of school to the time of dismissal, and who are only kept from giving out under such corporal punishment by the magic power of the rod.”

“With the exception of a very fine building at Balliettsville, North Whitehall, and several buildings in the boroughs of Catasauqua and Allentown, all the school houses in this county agree with the above description.”

Report of the year 1877 is as follows:—“Whole number of school houses in the county, one hundred and ninety-seven; constructed of brick, one hundred and thirteen; of stone, fifty-six; and of wood (frame), twenty-eight. These houses contain two hundred and thirty-nine separate rooms. The average size of the school houses, in the rural districts is thirty-two by twenty-four and height of ceiling, ten and one-half feet. Those in the boroughs and towns are considerably larger. Since the year 1856 no less than one hundred and seventy school houses, containing two hundred and ten rooms, were erected. The entire amount expended during the same period, for building, purchasing grounds, renting, and repairing, is a little over $495,000. The estimated value of school property in Lehigh county, including the city of Allentown, is $700,625.25.”

SCHOOL FURNITURE.

Report of 1856.—“Forty-one of the schools are provided with furniture, affording a tolerable degree of comfort and convenience to pupils, though mostly old style. One hundred and two are supplied with furniture entirely unfit for the purpose for which it is designated.”

Report of 1858.—“Furnished with improved furniture thirty-one, fifty-two with that ‘good enough’ kind, and the remainder or at least many of them, with material disgraceful to an enlightened community.”

Report of 1868.—Fogelsville school house: “It is but just to observe that the citizens contributed about $1,300 toward the erection of this building, and is the only one in the county furnished with Uhlinger’s patent school desks, also furnished by the citizens.”

Report of 1869.—“Catasauqua was the second and Hokendauqua the third district to introduce the patent desks.”

Report of 1870.—“Hanover, in 1869, furnished one of its new buildings with patent desks, the first, strictly speaking, country school house thus supplied in the county, the others having similar furniture being in, or attached to villages.”

EARLY TEACHERS.

Report of 1855.—“The strict letter of the law would have compelled me to reject a still greater number (twenty-nine), but under the circumstances, I did not consider it policy, though the character of some of the certificates amounted to more than a rejection. I will mention one as an illustration: In one of the districts, where the compensation for teachers is not very liberal I was requested to examine a young man, pronounced by those who had previously employed him, and who desired again to employ him, as a very competent (?) teacher. After having spent quite a long time in endeavoring to ascertain in what branches he excelled, I gave him a temporary certificate, with every branch erased except orthography, reading and elementary principles of arithmetic, with a written addition below, of ‘that which is not erased, the holder is still very deficient in.’ The applicant was much pleased with his certificate, and was afterwards employed to teach the best school in the district, the written addition below being taken to mean an extra recommendation. This, however, was the only case in which so much deficiency received even a scrap of paper from me.”

Report of 1856.—“Twenty-six teachers give full satisfaction, sixty-two may be called medium and employed till better ones can be procured, seventy-nine would better be dismissed from the service.”

Report of 1858.—“The various boards of directors are no longer satisfied with the mere fact that a person calls himself a teacher. In many instances he is troubled with questions; frequently such as these, among others, to wit: How many years have you been engaged in the profession? Where did you teach last year? What kind of a certificate do you hold, and what mode of teaching and government do you adopt in your school?”

The teacher knowing that he must pass through an ordeal of this kind, prepares himself for it. He acquaints himself with the different methods of teaching and regulating a school, and at once enters upon the study of those branches required in our schools.

Having obtained a pretty thorough knowledge of these, he will be led to investigate others and by and by will make an accomplished scholar of himself. This has been the means of improving the majority of our teachers fifty per cent., both as scholars and teachers. This much the superintendency has accomplished in connection with our teachers. The effect it has produced upon the people in general is fully as favorable.

Report of 1860.—“The teachers have improved, both in scholarship and manner of imparting instruction, since my last report.”

Report of 1861.—“Each district has its proportional share of good teachers, and the evidence of their efficiency and usefulness has been plainly visible.”

It will be noticed that the standard of qualification for a teacher's certificate was gradually raised from year to year. This, I believe, has been carried out by all the different county superintendents of this county. This requirement was nobly responded to by a large number of our teachers, and they occupy the first positions as educators in the county. Those who did not, were dropped from the list.

The present standing of our teachers, both intellectually and professionally, it is believed, will compare very favorably with that of the other counties of the State. Of the teachers employed this year, thirteen hold State Normal School diplomas, twenty-one permanent, eighteen professional and one hundred and eighty-nine provisional certificates. The average of the last grade is 2.08.

SCHOOLS OF HIGHER GRADES.

During the year 1855, a school was organized at Emaus, with the title “Lehigh County High School,” under the direction of James S. Shoemaker. All the elementary branches, together French, German, and music were taught in this institution. “This school, in connection with the higher branches of mathematics, Latin, Lehigh County Academy and Allentown Seminary, will, I hope, in the course of a few years, turn out an ample number of well qualified young men to take charge of our public schools.”—School report, 1855.

1855.—“The schools I found well attended, some too well, and as a general thing quite an interest was manifested by both teacher and scholars. It was an easy task, however, to distinguish the districts which had accepted the system previous to the Act of 1849. In all of such districts I found better system, better teachers, better pay, and consequently better instruction, than in those which have only had the system since 1849. These seems to be a determination in every district to put the ‘shoulder to the wheel,’ and to push on the cause of education. With such a spirit manifesting itself, it will not be long before Lehigh can be justly proud of her public schools.”

1856.—“There are seventeen graded schools in the county. Thirteen of them in the borough of Allentown, and four in the borough of Cataqua. All the others are promiscuous, as to age, sex and capacity of pupils.” In the year 1858, efforts were made to classify the schools in the rural districts and in many districts with success. In 1860, “Hanover was the only district whose schools were monthly visited by a district superintendent.” In 1862, “The wicked rebellion, and the heavy burdens thereby imposed upon our country had little effect in retarding the progress of education in this county.”

In the year 1856, Mr. William Edelman organized a high school at Saegersville, Heidelberg township. A building for the accommodation of the school was erected by the community. The school continued for several years. In Lynn township, at different places, temporary high schools for the benefit of teachers and those preparing to teach, were held at various times. Similar schools were held at Egypt, Whitehall Station and other places.

On the 17th of November, 1856, opened the high school at Millerstown under the principalship of Professor O. S. Fell, assisted by Miss Mary A. McGee. The course of instruction comprised the common English branches, together with natural philosophy, algebra, and mensuration. Mr. Fell was especially skillful in imparting knowledge and in infusing his own enthusiasm into his pupils.

Through the efforts of the late Honorable Solomon Fogel an act was passed February 24, 1860, incorporating “The Fogelsville Male and Female Academy.” For want of proper patronage, this school did not go into full operation.

1862.—“There are two very good boarding schools in Allentown, attended by many of the younger and more enterprising teachers of the rural districts. These schools are particularly adapted to their wants; they send out every year numbers of well-qualified young men as teachers.”

1866.—“The agency referred to under the heading ‘schools’ in this report, is a chain of normal schools; one is conducted by G. Souders, in Weissenberg district, one by F. P. Bender, in Lowhill district. These are for the benefit of teachers in the northern parts of the county. The one for the eastern and southern parts is at Millerstown, conducted by the county superintendent; all are well attended. The Normal School at Kutztown has in attendance many young men from our county, who have the profession of teaching in view."

1868.—"There are between fifty and sixty teachers in attendance at Kutztown Normal School from this county."

"The following institutions are also valuable 'helps' to the common schools, viz: Muhlenberg College, Allentown Female College, and the Allentown Academy."

1871.—"The first strictly rural graded school is found in Whitehall district, and has been very successful."

It is a fact worthy of mention that the Cata-sauqua High School trained and educated a number of young persons, who are now employed as teachers in some of the schools of the borough and surrounding districts. Pupils who complete the full course of the high school, graduate and receive diplomas. The schools of this town have always ranked very high. Much of their success has been due to the indefatigable efforts of Col. M. H. Horn, who was a leading member of the school board for many years. This is the only school district in the county with a school library. It contains at present about four hundred and fifty volumes.

The comparative tabular statement of Lehigh county schools from 1855 to 1883, on the opposite page makes interesting matter at this day.

EDUCATION OF POOR CHILDREN.

The Schools Under the Law of 1834.—The first entry in the treasurer's report of funds for the education of the children of the poor is for the year 1819, and shows that the sum then devoted to that purpose was $95.69. In the year following it was $77.82. In 1821 the sum was considerably larger, being $245.13. In 1822 it was $288.27; in 1823, $548.73; in 1824, $558.95; in 1825, $412.30; in 1826, $510.57; in 1827, $456.73. In 1828 the fund amounted to $508.98, distributed as follows:

Borough of Northampton, townships of
Salisbury and Northampton,	$421.71
Hanover,	22.30
North Whitehall,	15.01
South Whitehall,	9.32
Upper Saucon,	12.95
Weissenberg,	10.17
Upper Milford,	5.53
Macungie,	3.97
Total,	$508.98

In 1829 the fund for the education of poor children was almost exactly in the same as for 1828, and in 1830 it fell off to $360.76. In 1831 it was $452.39, and in 1832, $526.14, while in 1833 it reached $763.41, which was distributed as follows:

Borough of Northampton,	$434.77
Salisbury,	59.60
Lower Macungie,	51.48 ¹ / ₄
South Whitehall,	43.91
Upper Milford,	41.09
Northampton,	36.73
Upper Saucon,	30.22
Hanover,	21.39
Weissenberg,	21.12
Upper Macungie,	8.27
North Whitehall,	8.07
Heidelberg,	6.42
Lowhill,30
Total,	$763.41 ¹ / ₄

In 1834 the amount raised for the purpose of defraying the tuition of the indigent children exceeded $1,000, the distribution being as follows:

Borough of Northampton,	$440.58
Salisbury,	144.69
South Whitehall,	25.61
Upper Saucon,	76.41
Upper Milford,	46.39
Upper Macungie,	23.80
Lower Macungie,	28.53
North Whitehall,	22.59
Heidelberg,	12.45
Weissenberg,	25.04
Hanover,	108.24
Lowhill,82
Lynn,	2.00
Northampton,	42.84
Total,	$1,000.05

The following year (1835) a still larger sum, $1,153.43, was divided among the townships.

In the meantime the free school law of 1834 had been passed. Of this law Thaddeus Stevens is generally acknowledged to have been the most powerful and effective champion. While the Pennsylvania Germans were, as a rule, opposed to the establishment of free schools,—partly because the measure was a novelty, and partly because it severed education from positive religion, it is a notable fact that the first Governor who took a decided stand in favor of the system was a Pennsylvania German. Governor John Schulze, of Bucks county, came out strongly in favor of establishing a system of free schools as early as 1827. Governor George Wolf, who "signed with warm indorsement" the bill of 1834, was also Pennsylvania German,—a native of Northampton county.

The general law of the State, entered in 1809, provided for the education of the poor gratis, and it was under its provisions that the sums of money we have already stated were raised and applied. The law failed to do the good that was intended by its framers, chiefly for the reason that there were few families who cared to place themselves on record as being too poor to pay the tuition of their children. In his great speech in the House of Representatives Thaddeus Stevens said that the bill of 1809 instead of being called a public school law, ought to be entitled "an act for branding and marking the poor, so that they may be known from the rich and proud." While the country was sparsely settled the system of schools under the law of 1809 was perhaps the best that could be devised and operated.

The new law of (1834) made the schools free alike to rich and poor, high and low, and provided for their support by taxation. It was made optional for townships to accept or reject by election provisions of the act. There was a strong opposition to the law in Lehigh county, the rich being in most cases unwilling to pay a heavy tax for the poor, and the latter frequently unwilling to pay the small share that would fall upon them. Therefore, when the township elections were held, there were heavy votes cast against the free school law. Allentown and the township of Hanover accepted it the first year, and then followed Lynn through the influence of the Kistlers and Mosers. (The date of acceptance by the different townships are all given in the tabular statement). Those townships which refused to accept the new law continued the operation of the old one, and in 1839 the total amount received for the education of their poor children was $1,022.16, distributed as follows:

Upper Milford,	$211.47
Upper Saucon,	155.67
Lower Macungie,	144.27
South Whitehall,	144.53
North Whitehall,	118.05
Upper Macungie,	130.80
Lowhill,	83.43
Weissenberg,	31.92
Heidelberg,	2.01

Total, $1,022.16

The U. S. Census report of 1840 credits Lehigh county with 56 schools and 2,293 pupils.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTES.

Educational meetings were held in 1849 and in 1850, but according to the school report of 1858, "the first institute ever held in Lehigh came off in February last, and was continued for three days. It created quite a sensation among our people, many of whom had never heard of a teachers' institute." Its attendance was good; over one hundred teachers were present. With the exception of three years, the county institute held one session each year since its organization. It has done a great work for our teachers and schools, and especially in moulding public sentiment.

In addition to the annual institute the county is divided into six districts where local institutes are held. These districts are as follows:

First District—Lowhill, Weissenberg, and Lynn.

Second District—North Whitehall, Heidelberg, Washington, and Slatington.

Third District—Upper Macungie, Lower Macungie, South Whitehall, and Grimm's Independent District.

Fourth District—Whitehall, Coplay, Catasauqua, and Hanover.

Fifth District—Upper Milford, Lower Milford, Macungie, Emaus, and Alburdis.

Sixth District—Salisbury, Fountain Hill, South Allentown, Upper Saucon, and Coopersburg.

The liberal appropriations by the State, with its requirements, revolutionized education and its methods in the last decade. The various boards in order to receive the allotted State funds have complied with conditions under which they were granted; thus it was that the school term was lengthened, free text-books furnished, a graded course of study adopted, the standard of qualifications raised and salaries increased. The great majority of teachers are normal graduates. The present status of the schools is more fully described in the chapters devoted to the various townships and boroughs.

For tabulated statement of Lehigh county schools for years 1910 and 1912, see next page.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS.

C. W. COOPER.

The first to be elected after the Act of May 8, 1854, establishing the superintendency, was C. W. Cooper. Mr. Cooper was born in Coopersburg, Lehigh county, on the 21st of April, 1826. His father was Daniel P. Cooper, the founder of Coopersburg. He received his early training at the Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., and later pursued his studies in Philadelphia. Having decided upon law as a profession, he entered the United States Law School at Philadelphia. He was admitted to the bar in 1847. Ill health prevented him from following his profession; and while living on his farm at

EDUCATION IN THE COUNTY.

TABULAR STATEMENT OF LEHIGH COUNTY FOR THE SCHOOL YEAR ENDING JUNE 6, 1910.

DISTRICTS.	Schools.		Teachers.				Scholars.				Tax and Rate Per Cent.			Receipts.
	Whole number.	Average number of months taught.	Number of males.	Number of females.	Average salary of males per month.	Average salary of females per month.	Number of males.	Number of females.	Average number attending school.	Average per cent. of attendance.	Cost per month.	Number of mills levied for school purposes.	Number of mills levied for building purposes.		Total amount of tax levied for school and building purposes.
1. Allentown city,	151	9.67	35	132	$87 85	$55 23	3,433	3,440	6,329	92	$1 86	5	$171,728 29	$35,581 21
2. Catasauqua borough, ..	18	10	3	16	105 00	56 81	406	403	689	93	1 99	6	1.5	15,510 37	3,960 84
3. Coopersburg borough, ..	4	9	1	2	72 50	50 00	84	58	95	95	2 00	5	1.65	2,271 83	966 62
4. Coplay borough,	2	9	4	2	62 50	44 40	162	162	292	93	1 69	6	6,259 36	1,980 53
5. Emaus borough,	14	9	1	7	58 07	49 00	318	300	575	94	1 46	1	8,018 74	3,483 57
6. Fountain Hill borough	5	10	1	4	67 50	48 75	134	108	153	91	1 37	1.5	4,640 79	1,190 14
7. Grims, Ind.,	1	7	1	50 00	19	8	19	93	3 98	2.5	298 84	190 52
8. Hanover township, ..	17	7.78	9	8	62 22	51 25	400	351	525	92	1 69	4	1.75	10,171 27	3,361 62
9. Heidelberg township,	9	7	2	1	47 81	50 00	130	133	192	91	2 33	3	2,215 97	1,586 17
10. Hokendauqua, Ind., ..	6	10	1	4	110 00	52 50	71	77	129	95	2 71	8	4,393 08	929 84
11. Lowhill township, ...	3	7	5	1	43 00	40 00	84	75	119	93	1 95	5.5	1,820 00	1,015 23
12. Lynn township,	19	7	11	8	47 00	45 00	266	253	382	93	2 16	4	5,356 53	3,235 15
13. Macungie borough, ...	3	9	1	2	70 00	52 50	60	66	105	93	1 90	4.5	1,636 24	656 70
14. Macungie, Upper, twp.	14	7	10	4	48 50	48 75	229	198	323	90	1 73	2.5	4,944 16	2,897 38
15. Macungie, Lower, twp.	21	7	13	9	48 33	47 22	328	298	473	92	1 94	3.5	5,921 99	3,801 76
16. Milford, Upper, twp.,	14	7.07	8	6	49 12	45 82	200	197	353	89	2 06	4.5	4,956 12	2,955 26
17. Milford, Lower, twp.,	11	7	3	3	43 25	47 33	139	91	187	88	2 69	4.5	3,587 91	1,858 94
18. Salisbury township, ..	14	7.87	9	9	48 00	46 87	312	301	492	94	2 00	5	4,957 10	7,048 78
19. Saucon, Upper, twp.,	12	7.5	5	7	46 40	46 87	240	211	289	87	1 52	2.75	3,851 46	5,479 77
20. Slatington borough, ..	19	9	17	7	79 00	47 94	438	424	745	95	1 78	9	3	17,315 40	5,720 24
21. South Allentown bor.,	7	8	3	3	57 50	50 00	174	174	229	93	1 42	4.5	2,306 70
22. Washington twp.,	19	8	12	7	48 00	46 00	322	297	479	90	1 72	4	2	6,742 32	4,381 80
23. Weisenberg township,	11	7	4	7	47 50	40 00	132	134	209	95	2 12	5.5	3,464 96	2,096 48
24. Whitehall township, ..	38	9	14	24	63 43	52 85	668	684	1,068	93	2 12	4	2	25,420 77	8,553 74
25. Whitehall, North, twp.	19	7	13	6	49 15	46 33	305	320	458	91	2 14	3	7,069 49	3,645 22
26. Whitehall, South, twp.	15	7	8	7	48 12	48 70	273	237	355	91	2 35	3	1	6,680 07	2,579 49
	474	8.51	194	301	$59 99	$48 40	9,327	9,001	15,264	92	$2 03	4.5	.73	$331,539 77	$106,176 99

SCHOOL STATISTICS OF LEHIGH COUNTY, JULY 1, 1912.

DISTRICTS.	Schools.	Teachers.		Pupils.		State appropriation.	Total receipts.	Total expenditures.
		Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.
City—
Allentown,	163	32	148	3,663	3,752	$35,808	$58,576	$295,838
Boroughs—
Catasauqua,	18	4	16	421	401	4,665	76,739	73,051
Coopersburg,	4	2	2	75	61	981	3,933	3,366
Coplay,	9	4	6	197	182	2,360	12,942	9,698
Emaus,	16	8	8	384	345	3,913	28,153	24,732
Fountain Hill,	5	1	4	110	111	1,113	6,594	5,758
Macungie,	3	1	2	55	62	658	2,677	2,648
Slatington,	20	5	18	481	414	5,326	24,701	22,498
S. Allentown,	8	2	6	171	171	1,811	26,113	26,113
W. Bethlehem,
Townships—
Hanover,	20	10	10	427	421	2,790	19,695	19,416
Heidelberg,	9	8	1	130	124	1,581	4,208	4,112
Lowhill,	6	3	3	90	75	999	3,236	3,067
Lynn,	18	9	9	250	220	2,965	8,983	8,973
Macungie, Lower,	22	13	9	311	288	3,815	10,504	10,146
Macungie, Upper,	15	9	6	218	172	2,990	13,405	13,252
Milford, Lower,	11	6	5	139	106	1,659	6,466	4,811
Milford, Upper,	13	6	7	195	187	2,356	6,683	6,662
Salisbury,	13	6	7	318	322	2,959	9,607	9,448
Saucon, Upper,	12	6	6	238	192	2,603	6,881	6,881
Washington,	19	12	7	307	320	3,825	23,612	13,341
Weissenberg,	11	6	5	122	131	2,002	6,215	5,237
Whitehall,	44	12	33	800	812	7,683	41,009	40,910
Whitehall, North,	19	12	7	286	291	3,417	12,864	10,672
Whitehall, South,	15	9	6	223	244	2,520	7,625	7,589
	247	127	121	4,069	3,905	$44,164	$290,993	$165,537
	494	187	330	9,640	9,411	$100,690	$721,812	$629,530

Coopersburg, he was, on June 5, 1854, elected superintendent of the schools of the county at a salary of $500.00 a year. He was commissioned on the 5th of July. He served until September of the following year (1855), when he resigned to accept the position of cashier of the newly-organized Allentown National Bank. Mr. Cooper organized the system and helped to bring order out of chaos. In 1876 he became a member of the Centennial Board of Finance, served as trustee of the Union Trust Deposit Company, trustee of the Allentown Female College, trustee of the Muhlenberg College, and many years as school director for the city of Allentown. He died on the 11th day of April, 1886.

TILGHMAN GOOD.

Mr. Tilghman Good was born in Allentown, on the 20th day of September, 1818. He was educated at the Allentown Academy under the tutorship of Mr. Mancourt and was graduated with honor when barely fifteen years of age. While yet a student he was induced to take charge of a school at the Jordan Reformed Church with a view to instruct both the teacher and the pupils in English. After graduation he taught public and private schools in Allentown until 1841, when he was elected to the office of register of wills. After his term of register had expired he went back to teaching. Upon the resignation of Mr. Cooper as superintendent, Mr. Good was appointed by the State Superintendent to serve the unexpired term. He was commissioned in October, 1855, and served until the 3d of June, 1857. In 1860 he was again the choice of the directors and was commissioned on the 8th of June. He filled the position until May 22d, 1862, when he was appointed postmaster at Allentown. Later he served as alderman and chief of police, besides filling positions of honor and trust.

H. H. SCHWARTZ.

The third superintendent was Hon. H. H. Schwartz. He was a son of John and Hannah Schwartz, and was born near Kutztown, Berks county, on the 21st of December, 1830. When he was about four years of age his parents moved to a farm in Whitehall township, Lehigh county. Through close application he was prepared to enter the Sophomore class at F. and M. College in 1852 and was graduated with honors in 1855. The following year he entered in the office of Hon. S. A. Bridges as a law student. On the 4th of May, 1857, the school directors of Lehigh county elected him to the superintendency at a salary of $500.00 per year. His work like that of his two predecessors, was mostly that of a pioneer. People in general opposed and prejudiced against the school system; and the county superintendency which was then in its infancy, was made the object of ridicule, contempt and anathema. At the expiration of his term of office in 1860, Mr. Schwartz removed to Kutztown and began the practice of law. Later he became a member of the State Legislature and Judge of the Orphans' Court of Berks county. He was for many years a trustee of the Keystone State Normal School. He died at Kutztown on the 25th of August, 1891.

JACOB ROSS.

Upon the resignation of Mr. Good in 1862, Mr. Jacob Ross was appointed and commissioned on the 26th of July, 1862, to fill the unexpired term. He was born in Salisbury township, Lehigh county, April 22, 1827. He attended the public schools of this township, such as they were at that time, and by close application prepared himself to become a teacher. He taught school for a number of years in different sections of Northampton and Lehigh counties. At the time of his appointment as superintendent he had charge of the Second ward grammar school in the city of Allentown. It is a fact worthy of note that during his term of office his traveling in holding examinations and visiting schools was all done on foot. After his term was over he went back to the school room as teacher, and while so engaged, studied theology during his leisure hours and was ordained as a minister in the M. E. Church. He died very suddenly on the 24th of November, 1877.

E. J. YOUNG.

Mr. Young was born in Northampton county in what is known as the Irish Settlement, on the 14th of August, 1808. His parents were Peter and Elizabeth Young. He attended college at Easton, and at the age of 16 went to Seneca county, Ohio, where he taught school and attended the theological department of Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio. Before finishing his course at Tiffin he came to Allentown and took charge of a school in the First ward. On the 4th of May, 1863, he was elected county superintendent at a salary of $500.00 a year. He was twice re-elected, the first time at $800.00, and the second time at $1,300.00 a year. He served in this position very acceptably, and during his nine years of service was the means of bringing the schools into more popular favor. After his term of office had expired he again returned to the school room, teaching in the Second ward, Allentown, the Bethlehem and the Hellertown High Schools.

He died of apoplexy on the 10th of November, 1887. Just before the fatal attack his daughter asked to transpose the sentence, "Death separates the dearest friends," and these were the last words uttered by him.

J. O. KNAUSS.

Mr. Young's successor was Mr. J. O. Knauss. He was born near Emaus, Lehigh county, on the 1st of January, 1840. His parents were Paul and Julia Knauss. By close application and hard study he succeeded in passing his first examination and receiving a teacher's certificate in the Fall of 1858. He began teaching in his native township in the Fall of 1859 at a salary of $20.00 a month for a term of five months. His summer vacations were spent in working in the ore mines of the neighborhood. In the Spring of 1851 he attended the Normal and Classical School at Quakertown, Pa. In 1871 he passed a successful examination before the faculty and the State Board of Examiners for a State certificate at the State Normal School at Millersville. He taught five years in the ungraded schools of Salisbury township, two terms in Emaus High School, and in the Fall of 1868 he became a teacher in one of the Allentown schools. On the 7th of May, 1872, he was elected over three competitors, superintendent of Lehigh county at a salary of $1,300.00 a year. He was commissioned on the 27th of July and held the same position for a continuous period of 21 years. During this period the schools made a great deal of progress. He raised the standard of teachers' certificates. Many schools outlined the first course of studies and held a large number of educational meetings. Through his efforts the school system was brought into general favor. His success as superintendent was undoubtedly due to the fact that he had taught in rural, town and city schools and to his untiring energy, unflinching fidelity to duty, honesty and good judgment. He retired from the superintendency June 5th, 1893. Upon retiring from the office of superintendent he was appointed to an important position in the Educational Department at Harrisburg, which he still fills with honor and credit. In the compiling of the foregoing account of the development of education in this county extensive use was made of Prof. Knauss' splendid report to the department in 1877.

For sketch of Alvin Rupp, the present incumbent, see Rupp family in second volume.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS OF LEARNING.

ALLENTOWN ACADEMY.

Although it did not come into actual existence until 1819, the Allentown Academy was chartered by the act of the Legislature in March, 1814. The important parts of this act were as follows:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, That there shall be and hereby is established in the borough of Northampton (Allentown), in Lehigh County, an academy or public school for the education of youth in the English and other languages, in the useful arts, sciences, and literature, by the name, style, and title of the Allentown Academy, under the care, direction, and government of six trustees, to wit: Peter Rhoads, John Horn, John Miller (tailor), James Wilson, George Keck, Adam Reep, and Jacob Martin, which said trustees and successors to be elected, as hereinafter mentioned, shall be and hereby are declared to be one body politic and corporate in deed and in law, by the name, style, and title of "the trustees of the Allentown Academy," etc.

SEC. 5. That the sum of $2,000 be and the same is hereby granted out of any unappropriated money in the treasury of this commonwealth, to be paid to the treasurer of the institution, etc., to be applied: $1,000 thereof in the erection of a building or buildings, etc., and the purchasing of books, mathematical instruments, and the necessary philosophical apparatus, and the remaining $1,000 shall be placed in some safe and productive fund or funds, and the income thereof shall be forever applied in aid of other measures to compensate a teacher or teachers in said Academy.

"SEC. 6. That there shall be admitted into said academy, in consequence of said appropriation, any number of poor children of said county that may at any time be offered, in order to be provided with books and stationery and taught gratis: provided that the number so admitted and taught shall at no time be greater than four, and that none of said children so admitted shall continue in said academy to be taught gratis, should others apply, longer than two years: and be it further provided that before any part of the appropriation shall be paid on the order or orders of said trustees, they, or a majority of them, shall duly certify that subscriptions to the amount of $1,000 have been obtained and secured, to be paid for the use of said Academy, and that the trustees have proceeded to erect the building aforesaid."

The last clause deferred the erection of the Academy for several years, and the original trustees appear to have done nothing to bring the school into existence even as such time as they were empowered to, and hence in 1819 the act, which had passed out of force, was renewed. The trustees then appointed were James Wilson, Dr. Jacob Martin, John J. Kraus, John Romig, John Fogel, John Siegel, and Philip Kleckner. They immediately addressed themselves to the work. In an address which they published in the newspapers, after reminding the public of the act of incorporation and the appropriation of two thousand dollars by the State on condition that one thousand dollars should be subscribed by the citizens, they say, "and yet, notwithstanding the above act has been passed now upwards of seven years, said condition has never been fulfilled. Surely this condition of things may continue no longer. In almost every county of the State there are one or more academies in which the children of the citizens can be educated to moral excellence, and shall Lehigh stand alone as a pillar of darkness in the midst of the radiance of the surrounding light and intellectual refinement? We hope not, and therefore earnestly expect that all benevolent enterprising citizens in town or county will early avail themselves of the opportunity to call on Dr. Jacob Martin or John J. Krause, Esq., and contribute their share towards the attainment of an object so extraordinarily desirable and so easily to be accomplished."

The object for which they labored was not realized until four years had passed, when in 1823 the trustees made the following announcement, "Since the required amount for the erection of the Allentown Academy is now subscribed and the undersigned desire to make preparations this Summer yet for its erection, the trustees are earnestly requested to meet for this purpose at the house of George Haberacker, in the borough of Northampton, on Saturday, July 30. The trustees are Peter Newhard, of Northampton; Daniel Saeger, of North Whitehall; Daniel Eberhard, of Upper Milford; John Guth, of South Whitehall; H. W. Knipe, of Upper Saucon; Henry Ritter, of Salisbury, and Philip Wint, of Upper Saucon."

A building was erected at the corner of Walnut and Eighth streets, which is still standing, and in 1827, Silas H. Hickox, who came from New England, took charge of the school. The Academy at once secured a place in the front rank of the schools of the town and of the valley, and retained its position for many years. Mr. Hickox resigned in 1829 for the purpose of devoting himself to the legal profession, and was succeeded by W. W. Wertz. By the census report of 1840, the Academy had thirty pupils. After his term of service, and prior to 1853, the principals were Frederick Mancourt, Charles A. Douglass, R. S. McClenachan, and Robert Chandler. In 1852, Professor I. N. Gregory took charge of the school and remained as its principal until 1865. He was the most successful teacher the Academy ever had, and during the long period he was at its head the institution enjoyed the utmost popularity. Dr. Murphy was engaged as principal in 1867, but remained only a short time, and it became apparent that the school had closed its era of usefulness.

Mr. Gregory, under authority of an act of the Legislature, had put a mortgage on the building for the purpose of raising funds for enlarging it, and under this mortgage the property was sold by the sheriff in 1881. By this sale sixteen hundred dollars was realized over and above the amount of the judgment, and this sum was divided equally between Muhlenberg College and the Female Seminary. At a meeting of the trustees—Eli J. Saeger, August Weidner, George P. Weil, R. E. Wright, Henry Gabriel, and Dr. Alfred J. Martin—held July 15, 1881, Messrs. Wright and Martin were appointed a committee to convey the surplus to the institutions mentioned. This was done on condition that each of them should grant one perpetual scholarship, of which the benefit should be received by such graduates of the public schools as the school controllers and directors should see fit to present for the favor. This measure having been consummated the trustees of the old Allentown Academy resigned sine die.

THE ALLENTOWN SEMINARY.

On the 1st of May, 1848, the Allentown Seminary was opened in Livingston mansion, under the principalship of Rev. C. R. Kessler, of the Reformed Church. He had been induced to engage in the work chiefly by Rev. S. K. Brobst, of the Lutheran Church, the originator of the enterprise and its most zealous supporter. The building in which the Seminary was at first housed was a large two-story stone edifice, now the east wing. This mansion, with the beautiful grounds around it, had at one time belonged to the Livingstons, relatives of the Allens, who were the founders of the town. Before the Seminary was opened this property had passed into the possession of Messrs. Pretz and Weinsheimer, members of the Lutheran Church, and continued in their ownership until the organization of Muhlenberg College, when it was purchased by that corporation.

The object of the institution was set forth by the first principal, Rev. C. R. Kessler, in a letter dated March, 1848, to the Jugendfreund, published by Rev. S. K. Brobst. It reads as follows: "This institution is especially designed for those who desire to prepare themselves for the sphere of the teacher. It is, however, easily seen that those also can attend the institution with advantage who propose studying either theology, jurisprudence, or medicine, and wish to prepare themselves for one of the higher classes of college, and also those who are seeking important acquisitions in knowledge and a higher culture. This institution will offer special advantages to those who desire a thorough and practical knowledge of the German language. The moral culture of the pupils will receive special attention." Bible history, biblical antiquities, and Christian morals were enumerated among the regular studies. The primary object of the school, though of the highest importance, was nevertheless not attained, as it was urged in advance of the times, so that the Allentown Seminary as a normal school, or teachers' seminary, was a failure. The attendance during the first term was but eleven, only four of whom had come to prepare for teaching. The institution, though retaining in view all it had set out to accomplish, was soon announced as a classical school for boarders and day scholars. After much discouragement and zealous effort on the part of the principal and the friends of education by whom he was sustained, the interests of the school began to advance, and the attendance increased to such an extent that it became necessary to furnish enlarged accommodations. Accordingly, during the Summer of 1851, a new building, now the west wing, was erected. In the year 1854 the attendance had risen to two hundred and two, —one hundred and forty-seven males and fifty-five females. The central building, occupying the space between the east and west wings, was then erected during the Summer of 1854, and Livingston mansion was raised to three stories, so that the entire seminary building presented a front of one hundred and thirty feet, and furnished accommodations for one hundred boarders. These were the buildings which, with the spacious grounds around them, subsequently passed into the possession of the corporation of Muhlenberg College and are now occupied by the Muhlenberg Preparatory School.

Among the instructors of the institution were the following: Rev. Christian Rudolph Kessler, A.M., the founder and principal of Allentown Seminary from 1848 to 1855, assisted by Messrs. John Weik, Wm. J. Marx, J. B. Evans, C. L. Lochman, Rev. F. J. Mohr, Prof. C. F. Wulff, Prof. Fr. R. Gerlach, Thomas J. Gross, Prof. C. F. Herrman, Rev. J. L. Kessler, D.D., Rev. J. Riale, Prof. C. V. Mays and Misses Eveline Black, Melvina Stanton, M. Wilson, L. J. Boyd and Mrs. N. Vogelbach. On account of impaired health, Principal Kessler was obliged to cease his labors in 1855.

REV. CHRISTIAN RUDOLPH KESSLER.

Christian Rudolph Kessler, the first president of the Allentown Seminary, was born Feb. 20, 1823, in the district of Davos, and Canton of Graubuenden, Switzerland. His parents were the Rev. J. S. Kessler, D.D., and his wife, Christina Jeklin. He received his early training in a parochial school conducted by his father until the close of the year 1835, when he was sent to the Canton School of Chur, the highest institution of learning in his native country. In 1840 he was sent to the University of Leipsic, but did not remain there long, owing to the departure of the family to America. He now pursued his studies privately, devoting himself especially to Pedagogics or the science of education being especially incited to this by the increased interest in education, which had recently been awakened by the efforts of the Graubuenden Educational Association of which his father was one of the founders and most active members.

At the close of the year 1841 he entered the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Mercersburg. Here besides giving instruction in German, he pursued his theological studies, attending with special interest the lectures of Dr. John W. Nevin, who was then rapidly becoming a leader in American theological thought, and with whom he formed a friendship that lasted through his life. During this time he made himself acquainted with the English language, which he in after life spoke with great freedom and fluency.

In the Spring of 1843 he was received into the Gospel ministry and for one year served a number of congregations in Pendleton county, Virginia, when he received a call of the Salem congregation of Philadelphia, to become assistant pastor to Rev. Dr. Bibighaus, whom he shortly succeeded. He was married to the only daughter of Hon. David Liehman and his wife, Anna Maria Salade, both natives of Switzerland.

In the Autumn of 1845 he was compelled to resign his pastoral charge on account of the repeated attacks of bronchitis usually called "a preacher's throat." After a long and prayerful meditation as to the mode in which he might effect most for the cause of Christ and for the good of man, he arrived at the conviction that he could be most useful by devoting himself to the laborious yet sacred work of educating the young. Rev. S. K. Brobst, the well-known editor of Jugendfreund, learning of his purpose, induced him to come to Allentown and open a school. In May he began his school with four pupils, though he met with many discouragements and disappointments he continued to labor faithfully and soon his admirable character and his ability as a teacher became widely known. Public confidence continued to increase and numbers of students, flocking to his feet from time to time, made it necessary for him to extend his plans and enlarge the buildings.

But as his institution continued to extend and flourish more and more his bodily powers were fast declining. In the Fall of this year he had to call his father to his assistance, to aid in carrying on his operations and meeting the wants of his school. But all this was unavailing. His energetic will did, indeed, continue to triumph over the weakness of his body, and until within five weeks of his decease, he continued to instruct some of the classes, who came daily into his chamber for recitation, where he instructed them, though in a feeble and broken voice.

But the last great scene of his life was rapidly approaching. Feeling his strength completely prostrated, he inquired of his physician what were his prospects for life, and being informed that a few days would in all probability, close his earthly career, he expressed the most perfect resignation to God's will in this matter. Soon after, he took an affectionate farewell of his family, and of some other friends who from time to time called in to see him. The closing hours of his life were perfectly serene and peaceful, his Christian faith supporting him and giving him the assurance of a blissful immortality. Awakening about midnight out of a quiet slumber, he inquired of his father, who was watching by his bedside, whether it was Sunday morning, and being informed that it was, he exclaimed: "O what a glorious Sabbath this will be to me!" and soon after expired.

Thus departed on the 14th of March, 1855, in the thirty-second year of his age, Christian Rudolph Kessler, who will long be held in affectionate and respectful remembrance by all who knew him, but especially by his pupils and the citizens of Allentown, to whose service he devoted the best part of his laborious life. He was a man of no ordinary talents, and of varied attainments. He was an original thinker and a profound scholar. He was a highly acceptable and popular preacher, and a teacher of rare endowments.

The services which he rendered to the cause of education generally and especially in Allentown and that part of Pennsylvania over which the influence of his school extended, cannot be too highly estimated. There is no doubt that he has given a new and great impulse to the cause of education in this region and especially in the county of Lehigh.

Rev. F. J. F. Schantz, D.D., is an historical address delivered on the campus of the Seminary, then Muhlenberg College, in 1898, upon the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of founding of the Seminary, said: "The school at Allentown (Muhlbenberg College) continues a lasting monument to his ability, his devotion to his calling, his self-denying labors and his triumphs of faith in his blessed Lord."

Rev. Wm. N. Reynolds, D.D., of the Lutheran Church, was the principal of the Allentown Seminary from 1855, previous to the death of Rev. Mr. Kessler to September, 1857. In these years he was ably assisted by the following instructors: Rev. J. S. Kessler, Rev. J. Riale, Prof. Luther H. Croll, Prof. E. J. Koons, Mons. J. Germain Anglade, Mrs. R. M. Eyster, Mrs. N. Vogelbach and Misses M. J. Green, Catharine J. Reynolds, Adelaide S. Richards. In the Fall of 1857, Rev. Dr. Reynolds accepted the presidency of the Illinois State University at Springfield, Ill.

Rev. Wm. Phillips, A.M., of the Reformed Church, became the principal at the opening of the Winter term, Nov. 1, 1857, and continued in the position to the close of the Winter term, Nov. 1, 1859. His co-laborers in instruction in these years were: Rev. J. S. Kessler, D.D., Rev. W. R. Hofford, A.M., Rev. Joshua Derr, Prof. C. F. Herrman, Mons. J. Germain Anglade, the late Capt. Jeremiah P. Schindel, of the U. S. A., and Misses S. A. Barrett and Laura P. Hill. At the close of the Winter term, March 26, 1858, the first decade celebration of the Allentown Seminary was suitably observed in Zions' Reformed Church.

In the Spring of 1859, Rev. W. R. Hofford, A.M., of the Reformed Church, a student of the Allentown Seminary from the Spring of 1850 to the Fall of 1853, a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College, an assistant instructor of Rev. Phillips, became the principal of the Seminary. He continued as principal to the close of the Winter term in March, 1864. This was a critical period in the history of the institution, the effects of the financial crisis of 1857-1858 were still felt and the War of the Rebellion opened in 1861 and continued during his connection with the Seminary. The associate instructors in these years were the following: Rev. Dr. Kessler, Rev. Joshua Derr, H. LaRue, John Sykes, Prof. C. F. Herrman, D. F. Schoedler, P. Williard, A.M., T. Kessler and Misses A. E. Avery, Maria Zearfass, Sarah Hughes and Olivia Mease.

THE ALLENTOWN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AND MILITARY ACADEMY.

In March, 1864, this institution was regularly chartered by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, under "the name, style and title of the Allentown Collegiate Institute and Military Academy." Under this charter it possessed collegiate powers and privileges. Notwithstanding the fact that it had the chartered rights of a college, and was nominally under the control of a board of trustees, it was in reality merely a private school. Rev. M. L. Hofford was the only president of the institution under the above charter.

The Board of Trustees consisted of 17 members: Hon. S. A. Bridges, President; Col. Henry C. Longnecker, Vice-President; Jacob S. Dillinger, Esq., Secretary; Wm. S. Young, Esq., Treasurer; Hon. R. E. Wright, Hon. J. D. Stiles, C. Pretz, Thomas Jacoby, Charles W. Cooper, John H. Oliver, Henry Weinsheimer, Geo. P. Weil, John D. Lawall, Wm. H. Blumer, Thomas B. Wilson, Boas Hausman and Charles Kramer. The following constituted the faculty: Rev. M. L. Hofford, A.M., President; Rev. Wm. R. Hofford, A.M., Vice-President; Rev. J. S. Kessler, D.D., Edward Brodie Glasgow, G. A. Aschbach, Hon. Robert E. Wright, Major G. Eckendorff, Prof. C. F. Herrmann, Joel J. Rossister and Charles H. Asay. The circular of 1865-66 shows to what extent the institution had become a military academy for the title had become "Military and Collegiate Institute, Allentown, Pa." Rev. M. L. Hofford continued as president and the names of the following instructors appear in the circular of 1865-66: Rev. E. J. Koons, A.M., Rev. M. H. Richards, A.M., Rev. G. A. Hinterleiter, Rev. J. W. Wood, A.M., George Herman Rupp, F. H. Hutchings, W. W. Johnson, A. Spangler and S. Hughes. The female department was continued, but the names of the female students do not appear in the catalogue. Rev. M. L. Hofford, A.M., President, resigned in the Spring of 1867. The institution was continued until June 16, 1867, when it was closed. The purposes of its founders, however, are continued in the two splendid institutions of learning, Muhlenberg College and the Allentown College for Women, both of which are the outgrowth of the Allentown Seminary.

MUHLENBERG COLLEGE.

(Rev. Solomon E. Ochsenford, D.D., formerly Professor of English and Social Science, Muhlenberg College.)

Muhlenberg College was established in the year 1867, to meet a want, long felt by many of the pastors and lay members of the Lutheran Church in eastern Pennsylvania, where the Lutheran population is very strong. Prior to this period these people had no institution of their own for the higher education of their young people. It was felt by many that a college under Lutheran management was needed, should be established, and could be maintained. The institution, therefore, is a church school, but it is by no means to be regarded, on this account, as sectarian. It is a Christian institution of higher education, established and maintained for the Christian training of the young, not only for those who expect to enter the office of the ministry, but also for those who wish to prepare for other pursuits in life, and who admittedly need the healthful and inspiring influences of Christianity as much as those who assume responsible duties of the Christian ministry.

The immediate cause that led to the establishment of Muhlenberg College by the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania was the establishment of a Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, in 1864, by the same body. A college closely identified with the interest of the Seminary was felt to be necessary. This led to the establishment of the college at Allentown.

In the Providence of God it happened that there existed in the center of the territory of the Ministerium, at this critical period of its history, an institution of high grade and with collegiate powers in which Lutheran clergymen and laymen had been deeply and actively interested from the beginning of its existence, the authorities of which were ready and anxious to turn it over to the Ministerium of Pennsylvania. Thus it happened that Muhlenberg College became the successor, to some extent, at least, of the Allentown Seminary, and of the Allentown Collegiate Institute and Military Academy, which succeeded the Seminary in 1864. Under the charter granted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania the latter institution, into which the original seminary had developed, possessed collegiate powers and privileges, and made its first advancement towards the grade of a college. In the year 1867 the Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania assumed partial control of the institution, elected one-third of the trustees, and advanced it to the grade of a college. Ten years later the same body assumed the entire management of the college.

The original Board of Trustees of the College consisted of the following persons, elected by the stockholders: Rev. Frederick A. Muhlenberg, D.D., ex-officio president; Rev. Edward J. Koons, secretary; Jonathan Reichard, treasurer; Hon. Robert E. Wright, Rev. Samuel K. Brobst, Melchior H. Horn, Charles W. Cooper, William Saeger, William H. Blumer, Rev. William Rath, Rev. Joshua Yeager, Christian Pretz and Rev. F. J. F. Schantz; elected by the Ministerium: Revs. Joseph A. Seiss, D.D., William J. Eyer, and George F. Miller, and Messrs. Amos W. Potteiger, Lewis Klump and Benjamin F. Trexler.

The College Building.

As soon as the joint stock company had secured its amended charter entitling it to establish a college with all the powers and privileges of such an institution, had elected its board of trustees and a president, work was begun to arrange the buildings for the larger field of operations to which they were in future to be devoted. The property of the new college consisted of about five acres of land in the southeastern part of the city of Allentown, on which had been erected several commodious buildings devoted to the use of the institution.

Organization of the College.

Muhlenberg College was named in honor of the Rev. Henry Melchoir Muhlenberg, D.D., the patriarch of the Lutheran Church in America, who had labored not only for the spiritual welfare of the people in a general way, but also put forth strenuous efforts to organize the various and manifold works of the Church for the intellectual and spiritual benefit of future generations in the organization of the first Lutheran Synod, in 1748, and in the effort to establish a literary and theological seminary in Philadelphia. He failed in the successfully carrying out of the latter project, but because the time was not propitious, nor were the people prepared for the important step contemplated. Nearly a hundred years later the Ministerium of Pennsylvania succeeded in carrying out his pious wishes, inaugurated its educational work on its own territory, in the spirit of Muhlenberg, by establishing a theological seminary at Philadelphia, in 1864, and a college at Allentown in 1867, and rightly called one of these by his honored and revered name—Muhlenberg College. Although the name of this eminent pioneer labored in spiritual things may not now be widely known in this country, to the Lutherans in Europe and America, and in India and Africa, it is a familiar and honored one, a name that stands for everything that is noble and ennobling in the sphere of religion and right life.

The course of study adopted at the beginning of the history of the college was like those of similar institutions at that time, embracing all the branches usually included in the regular college course and leading to the degree of bachelor of arts and a four years' scientific course leading to the degree of bachelor of science, and enables graduates to enter any medical school in the country.

The first faculty had as its head the Rev. Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, D.D., LL.D.,

who was called from the chair of Greek at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., to take charge of the new college, named in honor of his distinguished ancestor. He came to the new institution with many years of experience as a successful teacher, and the reputation of being one of the best Greek scholars of his time. Born at Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 25, 1818, the son of Frederick A. Muhlenberg, M.D., and educated at Pennsylvania and Jefferson Colleges and Princeton Theological Seminary, he was well qualified to take up the profession of teaching, and, after teaching for twelve years at Franklin College, Lancaster, Pa., and for seventeen years at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, he, in the prime of mature manhood, and with a wide and varied experience in his chosen profession, assumed the responsible position of organizing a new institution of learning, his high standing as an educator and a scholar giving at once prominence and character to the new institution.

The other members of the faculty were also men of distinction and wide experience in their various departments. These were, besides Dr. Muhlenberg, president and professor of Greek, mental and moral sciences, and evidence of Christianity, the Rev. Edward J. Koons, A.M., vice-president and professor of mathematics, astronomy and physics; the Rev. William R. Hofford, A.M., professor of Latin; the Rev. Samuel Phillips, A.M., professor of rhetoric, logic, English literature and political economy; the Rev. Joseph F. Fahs, A.M., professor of German; and Theodore C. Yeager, M.D., professor of chemistry, physiology and botany. At the head of the academic department, and assistant professor of Greek, was the Rev. Theodore L. Seip, A.M., then recently graduated from the Theological Seminary at Philadelphia and ordained to the office of the ministry by the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania.

During the earlier years of the history of the college, there were frequent changes in the personnel of the faculty, but these did not affect the successful work of the institution. As the places were vacated by members of the original faculty, they were filled by eminent and successful teachers, some of whom spent their lives in connection with the institution. Among these deserve to be specially mentioned, Professor Davis Garber, Ph.D., professor of mathematics and allied branches from the year 1869 until his death in 1896; and the Rev. Matthias H. Richards, D.D., author and scholar, professor of English language and literature from 1868 until his death in 1898.

The period of Dr. Muhlenberg's presidency was also the period of struggle for the newly-founded college. In acquiring the property, arranging it for enlarged usefulness, erecting new buildings, and providing for the maintenance of the institution, without a dollar of endowment, the Board of Trustees had assumed enormous responsibilities. Everything had to be provided for the successful operation of the new enterprise. They began with fair prospects of success; but the panic of 1873-75 came upon them and almost wrecked the enterprise. During the financial stress caused by the panic, the Rev. Dr. Seip was appointed as the financial agent of the institution and by his untiring efforts succeeded in re-establishing confidence in the institution, in securing new students, and in collecting large sums of money to relieve the most pressing needs. As one of the results of his efforts he could report the endowment of the Mosser-Keck professorship of Greek. Some years later, as an indirect result of his labors, came the endowment of the Asa Packer professorship of Natural and Applied Sciences. Dr. Muhlenberg continued as president of the College and as professor of Greek until the close of the year 1876, when he resigned in order to accept the professorship of Greek in the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. His withdrawal was a cause of sincere regret to the best and most deeply interested friends of the College. He remained long enough, however, to establish the institution on a firm educational basis and give it a prominent place among the educational institutions of the State.

Later History of the College.

In the year 1876 the Rev. Benjamin Sadtler, D.D., who had been successful in the active ministry of the Church as a pastor of various congregations, and as principal of the College for Women at Lutherville, Maryland, was elected to the presidency of the college, and entered upon his duties on January 1, 1877. He was inducted into office by the president of the Ministerium of Pennsylvania at its convention held at Allentown, May 28, 1877. At this convention, also, the full control and responsibility for the maintenance of the college were assumed by the Ministerium, and the entire Board of Trustees was elected by this body. Dr. Sadtler, the son of Philip B. Sadtler, was born at Baltimore, Maryland, Dec. 25, 1823, and was educated at Gettysburg College and Theological Seminary, entered the Lutheran ministry in 1844, for eighteen years served as pastor of Lutheran congregations in Pennsylvania, and for fifteen years as president of the College for Women at Lutherville. During Dr. Sadtler's presidency at Muhlenberg College, few changes occurred, either in the faculty or in the external management of affairs. In 1879, Asa Packer's bequest of thirty thousand dollars was received, and was set apart as an endowment of the chair of Natural and Applied Sciences. In June, 1881, Professor Edgar F. Smith, Ph.D., now provost of the University of Pennsylvania, was elected as the first incumbent of this professorship, and he it was who organized this department at Muhlenberg, and by his ability as a scholar and teacher gave to it immediate prominence. Dr. Smith remained only a few years, but the college has been successful in securing competent men, and much has been accomplished since then in the line of natural sciences. Dr. Sadtler administered the affairs of the institution until the Fall of the year 1885, when a fall on the ice disabled him for life, and constrained him to retire from active duties, and in the Summer of 1886 he removed to Baltimore, where he lived in retirement until his death, which occurred April 28, 1900. His successor was elected Nov. 5, 1885, his term of office beginning Jan. 1, 1886. This was the Rev. Theodore Lorenzo Seip, D.D., who was the efficient and esteemed head of the institution until his death, Nov. 28, 1903. When the vacancy occurred, occasioned by the resignation of Dr. Sadtler, the Board of Trustees and the Ministerium of Pennsylvania unanimously turned to Dr. Seip as the most suitable and best-equipped man for this responsible position. Dr. Seip was the son of Reuben L. and Sarah A. Seip, and was born at Easton, Pa., June 25, 1842. He received his classical training in Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., and his theological training in the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, having entered the latter institution in the year 1864, as a member of the first junior class in the newly-established seminary. In the year 1867, after graduation from the seminary, he was ordained to the office of the ministry by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania, and immediately afterward accepted the position of principal of the Academic Department at Muhlenberg College and assistant professor of Greek in the college department, having previously come to Allentown, while yet a student at the seminary, to assist in winding up the affairs of the Allentown Collegiate Institute and Military Academy, preparatory to the opening of the new college. During the War of the Rebellion he served in various capacities during portions of several years. As a member of the first faculty, and its secretary, he assisted the first president in the organization of the various departments. Later, he became professor of Latin and Greek, and in addition taught other branches in the college department. The following are the positions he held prior to his election to the presidency: Principal of the Academic Department and assistant professor of Greek, 1867-73; professor of Latin, 1873-77; financial agent, 1876-77; professor of Greek and Latin, 1877-81; Mosser-Keck Professor of Greek, 1881-86; president and professor of Greek, Moral Science and Evidence of Christianity, 1886-1903. When, therefore, he accepted the presidency of the college, he had practically passed through all the various departments of the institution, had helped to formulate the courses of studies for the several departments, had passed through the period of trial and struggle incident to the early history of the institution, had secured large sums of money for current expenses and endowment, was thoroughly acquainted with the needs and the work of the college, and had withal attained such a fine and ripened scholarship in general, but especially in the classics, that all interested in the future welfare of the college and acquainted with its needs, felt that he was the man providentially trained for the vacancy, and he was unanimously and by acclamation elected by the Board of Trustees. Nor has the church made a mistake in the view taken in this matter; for with the advent of the new administration began a new period of wider influence and greater prosperity than the institution had previously enjoyed. His fine scholarship gave the institution an excellent reputation among other institutions of learning. The courses of studies were amplified and improved, the number of students was largely augmented, and the financial condition was placed on a solid basis. To-day, Muhlenberg College is known as one of the best institutions of learning in the Lutheran Church in America, and is generally regarded as the representative Lutheran college. He was also active in bringing the institution into closer and more prominent relations with other colleges and universities of the country through his active connection with the College Association of Pennsylvania, and as a member of the University Council of Pennsylvania by appointment of the Governor of the State. He lived long enough to see the beginning of that expansion for which he had been working for many years. Greater Muhlenberg has been made possible through the efforts, self-sacrificing labors, and his wise plans for the best interests of the institution to which he devoted his entire active life. On June 18, 1903, he laid the cornerstone of the new administration building of the college, on its new site, and in October of the same year he participated in the services connected with the laying of the corner-stone of Berks Hall, the first of the series of dormitories to be erected on the college grounds. But he was not allowed to see the completion of this new enterprise, for he died on Nov. 28, 1903. After the death of Dr. Seip, the Rev. William Wackernagel, D.D., senior member of the faculty and professor of German, French, Spanish and history was appointed acting president of the institution to serve until a permanent president could be secured. The vacancy in the presidency of Muhlenberg College, occasioned by the death of Dr. Seip, was filled in 1904 by the election of the Rev. John A. W. Haas, D.D., of New York City.

Among those forces that in an age of vast material progress and the setting up of the gods of material success in such an age of commercialized ideals, one of the great factors in the deeper, saner life of the nation is the influence and leading of the great men at the head of the educational institutions. The power of a great personality placed in such a position of responsibility is of the most momentous kind, and that the present European civilization in both hemispheres does not meet the fate of the earlier empires, will be due in a large measure to the work of that body of men who have charge of the wielding and directing of the ambitions and energies of the nation's youth.

To this class of men, heads of colleges, that play so vital a part in the life of the time, belongs Dr. John A. W. Haas, the son of John Christian and Margaret Haas. John A. W. Haas inherited his fathers' ability as a teacher, he having been an able educator in parochial schools. His parents came of that substantial Pennsylvania German stock that has contributed so important an element to the sturdy strength of that great state. He is a younger brother of George Christian Frederick Haas, an eminent Lutheran divine of New York City. He was born in Philadelphia, August 31, 1862, and was sent to the schools of his native city, attending the parochial school of the Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, and later the Protestant Episcopal Academy, graduating from the latter in 1880. He then entered the University of Pennsylvania in the arts course, and received his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1884. A course in the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Mount Airy, Philadelphia, followed, and from this he graduated in 1887, in which year he also received from the University of Pennsylvania the degrees of Master of Arts and Bachelor of Divinity, and took a course at the University of Leipzig, Germany.

After his return to America he was ordained to the Lutheran ministry and appointed the pastor of Grace Lutheran church, New York City, administering that charge for eight years. For another eight years (1896-1904) he held the pastorate of St. Paul's Lutheran church, New York City. During his incumbency of St. Paul's, a new church building was erected, and the growth in other directions was also marked. In 1902, Thiel College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. While pastor of St. Paul's church, Dr. Haas was called to the presidency of Muhlenberg College. He has brought to that college qualifications that eminently fit the requirements of the work—thorough scholarship, a wide experience in dealing with the deeper aspects of the national life, and that indefinable power of leadership which sets him, whatever his official position, in the class of those who move others and are themselves unmoved.

6, 1891, Charlotte, daughter of Charles D. and Fredericka Boscheus.

The present faculty consists of Rev. John A. W. Haas, D.D., George T. Ettinger, Ph.D., Rev. William Wackernagel, D.D., Rev. John A. Bauman, Ph.D., Robert C. Horn, A.M., William H. Reese, M.S., Robert R. Fritsch, A.M., Harry D. Bailey, A.M., Stephen G. Simpson, A.M., James H. S. Bossard, A.M., Rev. John D. M. Brown, A.M., Albert C. H. Fasig, M.S., Harold K. Marks, A.B., George McCaa, B.S., Willard D. Kline, M.D.

Muhlenberg College has graduated more than eight hundred young men, many of whom have already become eminently successful in the varied

Dr. Haas was for several years secretary of the Association of College Presidents of Pennsylvania, and is a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New York City. He is a frequent contributor to religious periodicals, and is the author of "Commentary on the Gospel of Mark in Lutheran Commentary," 1895; "Bible Literature," 1903; and "Biblical Criticism," 1903. He was also a co-editor and a contributor to the "Lutheran Cyclopedia," 1899. In 1914 the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Haas married in New York City, October spheres of life which they have entered, either professional or commercial. More than three thousand young men have either wholly or partly received their education in this institution, and have been more or less influenced by the spirit that pervades its work. Forty-five years is a short period of time in the history of an institution of learning, being sufficient merely to organize fully its various departments, and to set its operations in motion, and the men who have graduated from it must be comparatively young, many only in the beginning of their careers in practical life. Yet many of the sons of Muhlen-berg have already distinguished themselves as presidents of institutions of learning, professors in theological and literary institutions, as pastors of important parishes, as superintendents and officers of public institutions, as authors, editors, and writers for the religious and secular press, as legislators and men of prominence in other

The future of Muhlenberg College is assured. At its new location, with modern and well-equipped buildings, and with better facilities for its legitimate work, it will be able to expand its work, extend its influence, and carry on its work more successfully than at any period of its history.

The college grounds consist of seventy-two acres, beautifully located at the western end of the city, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth streets, and Chew and Liberty streets. The site is elevated, overlooking the picturesque Cedar Creek valley. The administration building, 190 feet long and 65 feet wide, three stories in height, is built of granolithic stone, with Indiana limestone trimmings, in the English Renaissance style. It contains the fine library of the college, the chapel, recitation rooms, laboratories, halls, gymnasiums, etc.

The general scheme of the dormitories is that of a rectangle, following a typical Oxford or Cambridge system. They are divided into sections accommodating from twelve to sixteen students each, and are entered from the quadrangle through separate doorways. They are named Berks, Rhoads and Luther League Halls. West of the dormitories are the base ball and foot ball fields and tennis courts.

ALLENTOWN COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

The Allentown College for Women was founded in 1867 under the name of "The Allentown Female College." It is under the control of the Reformed Church, though in no sense a sectarian institution. It was originally founded by the Classes of East Pennsylvania and Lehigh, but in 1905 passed under the control of the Eastern Synod of which the above mentioned Classis are an integral part. In 1893 the college obtained a new charter under the name "Allentown College for Women." Its founders, deeply impressed with the importance of providing for the higher education of woman, and recognizing the great advantages to be derived from such an institution, determined to found a school whose special aim should be to make it distinguished for its religious influence upon the heart, as well as for the thorough cultivation of the mind, thus to develop all the excellencies of a pure, noble, christian womanhood.

The desires and purposes of these advocates of higher female education found embodiment and recognition in a resolution offered and adopted at a special meeting of East Pennsylvania Classis, held in Zion's Reformed church, Allentown, July 12, 1867, to establish a female college in Allentown, Pa., to be under the supervision of the East Pennsylvania Classis of the Reformed Church. A committee was appointed, consisting of Revs. N. S. Strassberger, W. R. Hofford, I. K. Loos, D. F. Breidle and Samuel Philips, with instructions to effect organization, make all the necessary arrangements for the opening of the college, and superintend the educational interests. At a session of this committee, July 12, 1867, it was decided that a joint stock company should be formed to secure funds for the purchase of property and the erection of suitable buildings, that the college should be under the management of a board of trustees, two-thirds to be members of the Reformed Church, and the organization to be known by the name of Lehigh Female College. A course of study embracing all the principal branches of a thorough Christian education was adopted; the several departments, the primary, academic and collegiate were constituted, and the terms for tuition fixed, Rev. L. Cort was appointed general agent. To enlist the interest of friends of education, and to secure a hearty co-operation in this enterprise, a public meeting was held on Thursday evening, July 12, 1867, in Zion's Reformed church, and addresses were delivered setting forth the advantages of the college,—its claims upon business men, parents, and of the church. The result was the appointment of a business committee, whose duty it should be to counsel and co-operate with the executive committee in commending the college to the favorable consideration of the business portion of the community. The committee was constituted as follows: Charles W. Cooper, Esq.; John H. Oliver, Esq.; Honorable R. E. Wright, Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, Messrs. A. G. Reninger, G. P. Weil, Thomas Mohr, Milton J. Kramer, and W. H. Blumer.

The first president was the Rev. Lucian Cort. The school organization was effected on the fifth day of September, 1867, in the lecture-room of Zion's Reformed church. The number of pupils on the morning of the first day was eight, which by the end of the week had increased to fifteen. The instructors, in connection with the president, were Revs. W. R. Hofford and N. S. Strassberger, Miss M. E. Garrett and Miss Ida E. Erdman.

September 16, 1867, the executive committee appointed Rev. W. R. Hofford to attend to the school work of the president for the remainder of the year, with the view of enabling Rev. L. Cort to give his undivided attention to the duties as general agent.

Feeling the want of a more suitable room, a removal was soon made from the basement of the church to rooms in Hecker's building, on Hamilton street, above Eighth. This place, however, like the other, was only temporary shelter, and hence the question arose, where shall it be permanently located? This question was answered by Honorable R. E. Wright, Sr., a liberal-minded citizen and warm friend of this educational enterprise, who, for suitable consideration, offered his beautiful grounds on Fourth street, known as "Clover Nook," which were taken in possession and occupied for school purposes in April, 1868. The institution rapidly increased in number, and before the end of the first year the accommodations were too limited and it was resolved to build an addition. To provide the necessary funds a committee was appointed to dispose of additional stock. This committee met with encouraging success, which was largely owing to the influence and work of its chairman, Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs.

In less than three months the building was completed, so far as to admit of the opening of the school at the usual time. The college was not formally opened until November, 1868, when appropriate addresses were delivered by Rev. T. G. Apple, D. D., of Lancaster, and Rev. J. Beck, D. D., of Easton.

Pursuant to a notice given by East Pennsylvania Classis, a meeting of the stockholders was held at the American Hotel on the evening of the 17th of February, 1868. Samuel McHose, Esq., was appointed chairman, and Dr. E. G. Martin, secretary. Hon. R. E. Wright, Sr., presented a charter, which he had prepared by request. It was read and unanimously adopted, and ordered to be presented to the court of Lehigh county for incorporation. The charter was granted by the court during the June term of 1868. By this instrument the name was changed to the title, "Allentown Female College." In accordance with the requirements of the charter, an election was held for six trustees to represent the stockholders in the board. The following gentlemen were elected, viz: Charles W. Cooper, Esq.; Hon. R. E. Wright, Sr.; Hon. Joseph Laubach, John H. Oliver, Esq.; Dr. E. G. Martin, and Aaron Troxell, Esq. It was also officially announced that Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, Rev. W. R. Hofford and Aaron G. Reninger, Esq., were elected members of the board to represent East Pennsylvania Classis in her trust of the institution.

The Rev. Lucian Cort was elected to the presidency of the school.

Rev. Lucian Cort's connection with the college as its first president was of but short duration. The Rev. W. R. Hofford, A. M., was formally elected to the position of president July 27, 1868. On the 22d of June, 1869, the Rev. S. G. Wagner, D.D., was elected vice-president and professor of Mental and Moral Science, whose valuable services as an experienced and successful teacher and wise counselor were very generously rendered to the college for seven years.

The impaired health of President Hofford necessitated him to seek relief from the burden of responsibility and the arduous duties of the position which he had held for fifteen years, and in accordance with the advice of his physician he tendered his resignation, and withdrew from the presidency April 16, 1883.

REV. WILLIAM R. HOFFORD, D.D.

William R. Hofford, son of Joseph and Sarah Hofford, was born May 8, 1833, in Upper Saucon township, Lehigh county, Pa.

In 1851 he was admitted as a scholar in the Allentown Seminary and was graduated at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., in 1855. After his graduation he accepted the appointment of teacher of Latin and Greek in Cumberland Valley Institute, which position he held for several years. He graduated from the Theological Seminary at Mercersburg, Pa., 1857. He was licensed May 12, 1858, to the gospel ministry. For one year he filled the position as teacher of ancient languages in the Allentown Seminary. He subsequently became principal and continued in this service to 1864. He was ordained and installed February, 1863, as pastor of Lower Saucon congregation. In the following year Williams township congregation was added to this charge; he served these two congregations until 1869. He supplied the congregation at Freemansburg from May 1, 1869 to Sept. 29, 1872, and also South Whitehall from May 3, 1863.

In 1867 he was elected professor of Latin language and Literature in Muhlenberg College. In 1868 he was elected President of the Female College in Allentown, which position he filled with credit for five years. In 1883 he was called to the Egypt charge consisting of four congregations, which he served until his death which occurred Jan. 31, 1901, aged 67 years, 5 months and 23 days.

Rev. Hofford was married Oct. 1, 1861 to Carrie, daughter of George P. and Caroline Weil. This union was blessed with two daughters.

"Recall him as the honored and successful Principal of the old 'Allentown Seminary,' which institution he brought back again to the prosperity and renown which it had enjoyed under the lamented Rev. C. R. Kessler; study his singular success as the founder and first Principal of the old 'Allentown College for Women,' or as one of the first instructors and originators of 'Muhlenberg College' and from these institutions all; the number is legion who cherish his memory with sacred affection and give him the tenderest place in their hearts. Go to the congregations he served so long and so faithfully, in Saucon and in the Whitehalls, and hundreds and thousands will rise to call him blessed, will feel a thrill of inspiration or shed tears of sadness at the mention of his name."—Rev. J. D. Schindel, in the Parish Assistant.

In 1884 an addition of 53 by 40 feet was added to the building giving it a frontage of one hundred feet. A continuous veranda over 300 feet in length and eight feet wide, extends around the whole building affording excellent room for exercise in unfavorable weather. The building contains a chapel, library, society halls, the standard college as determined by the Rockefeller Foundation.

The number of young women who have been graduated by the college exceeds four hundred, and the number of those who attended it at various times is estimated at fifteen hundred.

The greater Allentown College for Women will be located, on Cedar Crest, 30th and Walnut streets, where a fifty-acre tract has been secured. The site was dedicated June 4, 1913.

The president and board of trustees have adopted a plan which when completed will crown Cedar Crest with a dozen or more build-dining room, recitation rooms, Primary Department, music and art studios, together with twenty-five rooms for boarding students. It is furnished with all the modern improvements and upon the relocation of the college will be used as a preparatory school for which it is favorably located and well adapted.

ALLENTOWN COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

The institution continued to fulfill its mission as a female seminary until the fall of 1913, when the full prerogatives of the charter were assumed, by providing a course of study in accordance with ings, two of which, the administration building and a dormitory are now under construction.

The administration building will be an imposing structure, 200x70, two stories high, the same height as that of the dormitory, and will contain the class rooms, offices for president, dean, treasurer and administrative offices. The flooring will be of terrazzo with an imposing marble stairway leading to the second floor. The main, or administration building will be located in a south-easterly direction from the dor-

ADMINISTRATION HALL, COLLEGE FOR WOMEN, ALLENTOWN.

BISHOPTHORPE MANOR.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Reuben J. Butz, E. H. Reninger, Rev. F. C. Seitz, Rev. C. B. Schneider, Rev. J. G. Rupp, Rev. F. H. Moyer, Hon. Webster Grim, N. A. Haas, N. M. Balliet, Rev. T. W. Dickert, E. M. Young, James Hartzell, G. J. P. Raub, Rev. Paul S. Leinbach, Rev. John S. Stahr, D.D., H. J. Lerch, Jacob W. Grim, Rev. H. I. Crow, Rev. C. E. Creitz, D.D., J. Monroe Hoffman, Rev. W. F. More, H. B. Koch, Hon. C. O. Hunsicker.

FACULTY.

President—William F. Curtis, Philosophy and Sociology.

Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. E. V. Loucks, A.B. Preceptress, Carrie M. Kerschner.

Rev. F. H. Moyer, A.B., Aesthetics; Miss Harriet A. Hill, Art; Miss Florence E. More, A.B., English; Rev. R. M. Kern, A.B., English Bible; Miss Clara Searle, A.B., History; Miss Anna Lash, A. B., Ancient Languages; Miss Catharine Laros, A.B., Modern Languages; Miss Gretchen Barr, A.B., Mathematics; Rev. E. E. Kresge, Ph.D., Psychology; Miss Elvira M. Strunk, B.S., Science; Miss Sara S. Gabriel, Expression; Mrs. Kathryn Sutphen, Piano; Miss Mary West, Vocal Music; Miss Emily J. Foust, Needle-Work; Miss Anna Grim, Mathematics; Miss Henrietta Eicher, Intermediate; Miss Frances Hartman, Miss Grace McClellan, Tutors.

BISHOPTHORPE MANOR.

Among the leading educational institutions of Lehigh county is Bishopthorpe Manor, the only seminary for girls in Pennsylvania under the auspices of the Episcopal Church. It is a select high-grade school and is situated in Fountain Hill, the residence section of South Bethlehem. In 1850 the present property and adjoining lands belonged to Auguste Fiot, a Frenchman, who improved them for a country seat and had them laid out with great beauty. He built the Manor House of stone, a stately mansion, and named the estate Fontainebleau after the historic park and palace near Paris. With its grand old trees, fine walks and terraces, beautiful flowers and fountains it was the most attractive place in the county. The borough that afterwards grew up around it on the mountain side was called Fountain Hill, the name being, it is said, a free translation of the original. At Mr. Fiot's death in 1866 the property was sold to Mr. Tinsley Jeter, a man of broad culture, who proposed its use as a Church School for girls and it was purchased for this purpose in 1867. At the suggestion of the Right Rev. William Bacon Stevens, then Bishop of Pennsylvania, it was re-named "Bishopthorpe" after the country seat of the Archbishop of York, England, the term signifying a bishop's demesne.

The Middle House in which are the dining room and the large study hall was then built and the school opened in 1868 under the control of a Board of Trustees of which the Bishop was President. When the Diocese of Bethlehem was organized in 1871 it became the owner of the property. The school maintained a high standard of character and scholarship and was very successful in its work. In 1885-'86, in order to meet the demands for increased capacity, it was greatly improved by the addition of the New House which contains the gymnasium, music rooms, studio, several bed rooms, the kitchen, butler's pantries, &c. With the increase of expenses, as the school had no endowment, the Trustees found it difficult financially in later years to keep it up to its high standard of excellence and sold it in 1908 to Prof. Claude N. Wyant, the present owner, and an associate. Mr. Wyant who had had much experience in high-grade schools in Virginia and Ohio, became sole owner in 1910 and in that year built the annex which contains the large concert hall, some class rooms, and several bed rooms. All the buildings adjoin one another so that communication does not require going out of doors.

The plan of administration of Bishopthorpe Manor is to some extent different from that of boarding schools generally. The school is conducted as a spacious residence and the students are considered as the members of one family. All are placed on honor to observe those regulations of proper decorum and correct demeanor that will best serve the whole household. The fulfillment of this plan develops a delightful home life and the experience is a constant training for each girl in all the graces that pertain to cultured womanhood.

The school endeavors to develop as fully as possible the intellectual capabilities of each student and accomplishes this by use in part of a well-arranged elective system. There are three courses of study as follows:

College Preparatory, four years, which gives complete preparation for the best colleges.

Academic, partly elective, four years, which corresponds to that of the best high schools.

General Culture, largely elective, two years, for high school graduates and others who desire a finishing course with graduation.

The school furthermore shares largely in the excellent musical advantages of the Bethlehems and maintains an unusually high standard for efficiency of work in music. In addition to the regular courses and music there are special courses in domestic science, domestic art, elocution, art, and post-graduate music.

Bishopthorpe Manor, although conducted under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, is in no wise sectarian and much of its patronage comes from those of other affiliations. It is pre-eminently a home school in management and direction, the aim being to prepare its students to be true home-makers. It holds the view that it is the part of every woman, whether she is a college graduate or not, to make a home, which will be happier and better in every way if she has received the right kind of training. The school gives this thoroughly and fully sustains the tone and best traditions of its long and honorable career as an institution of earnest and accurate scholarship with the best social and cultural training, one where the physical health and the and was moved to 16 S. New street, Bethlehem in 1883 into a very large dwelling built by Captain Dutch. The school during this period went under various names. The founder called it "The Preparatory School for Lehigh University." The students and people of the town called it "Ulrich's Preparatory School." In November, 1897, Mr. Ulrich died. At that time there were twenty-six boys in attendance, of whom three were boarders.

March 3rd, 1890, Mr. Howard A. Foering, B.S., a graduate of Lehigh University, became one of Mr. Ulrich's assistants, and on the death moral and spiritual life of its students are happily combined with the most approved methods of education.

BETHLEHEM PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

BETHLEHEM PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

The founding of the school is due to William Ulrich, a graduate of the University of Berlin, and an officer who had served in the Franco-Prussian war. In the year 1878 he gathered together a few boys and began preparing these boys for Lehigh University in his dwelling house in South Bethlehem. The school grew in size of Mr. Ulrich the sole ownership passed to Mr. Foering. Head Master Foering immediately set about to increase the attendance and to devise plans for new school buildings with large grounds. To this end he bought a large tract of ground in the borough of West Bethlehem, Lehigh county, which borough was later annexed to Bethlehem.

Mr. Foering incorporated the school in 1901 and gave it the name of Bethlehem Preparatory School. The first board of trustees consisted of: Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, Dr. T. M. Drown, Messrs. Garrett B. Linderman, Joseph J. Mc-Kee, E. H. Williams, Jr., George R. Booth, and H. A. Foering. During the same year the original building was erected on the new grounds, and in September, 1901, the new school buildings were occupied. The next year the gymnasium was built.

The school now grew rapidly in numbers. Its reputation for scholarship became almost world wide, and there are found on its rolls students from all parts of North and South America, and occasionally from European countries.

As time went on extensions were made to all the buildings and more land was added. At present the buildings consist of the main building, a four story brick structure, the gymnasium, and the head master's house. This main building contains a fine dining room with a seating capacity of 150, dormitories for sixty boys, eight class rooms and the head master's office. The gymnasium contains a fine, large floor, running track, swimming pool, and dormitories for twenty on the upper floor.

The attendance for the ten years prior to the time this is written (August, 1913) has been in excess of 150 annually. The staff of teachers consists of ten members. The purpose of the school is the preparation of boys for colleges in the United States. Thus far over 1,450 boys have been sent to college. Among these are many men who have become eminent in various professions.

ALLENTOWN PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

The Allentown Preparatory School, under several different names, has a continuous history extending over a period of more than half a century. Prior to 1864 the school was known as Allentown Seminary, and in that year it became Allentown Collegiate Institute and Military Academy. In 1867 Muhlenberg College was organized, and the secondary school was continued as the preparatory department of the college. In 1904, however, the preparatory school was reorganized under a separate faculty and became the Allentown Preparatory School, and when, in January, 1905, Muhlenberg College moved to its new buildings in the western part of the city, the preparatory school remained as the sole occupant of the historic college buildings at the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets. Here the work has been carried on with increasing success for nine years. New buildings are now in course of erection on a campus of fifteen acres, adjoining Muhlenberg College, the gift of Chas. F. Mosser, which are expected to be occupied in September, 1914.

Faculty.

Frank G. Sigman, A.M., Principal, Mathematics, English; Irvin M. Shalter, A.M., Assistant Principal, Mathematics, Science, German, Henry R. Mueller, A.B., Latin, Greek; Howard W. Fields, C.E., Physics, Chemistry, Mathematics; J. Conrad Seegers, A.B., English; Matthias H. Richards, A.B., History, Geography; Charles R. Keiter, A.B., Summer School; J. Robert Kline, Summer School; Mrs. Frank G. Sigman, Matron; William A. Hausman, M.S., M.D., Visiting Physician.

Courses of Study.

The school offers three regular courses, the Classical, the Latin-Scientific, and the Scientific, the general scope of which is indicated by the titles. A more detailed description of these courses is given below.

In order to fully meet the advanced entrance requirements of the best colleges and technical schools, the courses have been placed upon a four-year basis, and the new system was inaugurated, in part, in September, 1911, and went into full force in the fall of 1913. This new arrangement will not be allowed to conflict, however, with the plans of those who entered the school in years past with the intention of preparing for college under the provisions of the three-year courses. As heretofore, especially capable students, who feel that they should complete the work in less than the prescribed time, will be allowed to make the effort. In short, the work will be adapted as nearly as possible to the needs and capacity of the individual student. Boys who enter from other approved secondary schools will be given due credit for work satisfactorily completed in such institutions.

ALLENTOWN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

The Allentown Business College, located at 804 Hamilton street, was established by W. L. Blackman in 1869. Through the efforts of a number of public spirited men, among whom were Rev. Alfred J. Dubbs, Dr. Alfred Martin, Charles Cooper and Edward Young. Mr. Blackman was induced to come from New York to Allentown in 1868 and open a school for business training, claiming that such a school was needed by the community. On February 1, 1869 the school was opened under the name of Allentown Business College and has continued up to the present. During these many years it has trained hundreds of young men and women for successful business careers.

Prof. William L. Blackman was born in North Coventry, Connecticut, May 17, 1843. He received his training in his native town. On September 7, 1861, he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Regiment Conn. Volunteers. He was wounded at Kinston, N. C. Upon coming to Allentown he taught bookkeeping, penmanship and mathematics in A. C. W. and M. Colleges and the city high school. He is an expert accountant and auditor.

The present principal of the school is Nathan S. Biery.

AMERICAN COMMERCIAL SCHOOL.

The American Commercial School was founded by O. C. Dorney in 1889. In 1895 the school was incorporated with a capital of $30,000.00. It occupies an entire floor of the Y. M. C. A. building at the southwest corner of Centre Square, Allentown. Mr. Dorney in connection with the school conducts an Employment Service Department. This department since its organization in 1889 has secured employment for upwards of twelve thousand young men and women.

The dominant influence and guiding force of this institution have been, from its inception, those of its founder and president. Ably seconded as he has been by a large staff of others, Mr. Dorney has, with the genius of true leadership, supplied his coadjutors with his own unfailing energy and enthusiasm, and the school is, to-day, a monument alike to his public spirited zeal and to his administrative ability and unwearied concentration of purpose.

CHAPTER XIII.

NEWSPAPERS.

The oldest paper in the county is the Unabhängiger Republikaner (the "Independent Republican"), established two years prior to the formation of Lehigh county by Christian Jacob Hütter, who was also the publisher of a German and an English paper at Easton. The first number appeared on July 27, 1810, the size being seventeen by twenty-one inches. It was conducted by Charles L. Hütter, a son of the proprietor. The paper always has been and is today, Democratic in its politics, but in order to explain its peculiar title, it is necessary to state that at the time it was established the new Democratic party was named the Republican or free government party, while the opposition party showed some loyalty to the British government. In his salutatory to the readers of the paper, the editor said:

"I am a Republican in the strongest sense of the word; I love liberty, my country, and its laws, and despise all despotism. I shall act independently in all things, but shall obey all laws made by the representatives of the people. All strict partisans I shall follow with a watchful eye, for they are either men who do not think for themselves or are office-hunters. I shall oppose all men who, under the mask of Federalism, promote the interests of the king of England; and finally, I will not take a man for what he pretends to be, but will judge the tree by its fruit."

Charles L. Hütter conducted the paper until July 24, 1812, when he became the proprietor, as his father, Christian J., who was captain of a military company, was called into active service in the war between the United States and Great Britain. On the 9th of September, 1814, the editor made the announcement that he and two of his employes had enlisted in the military service, and would leave for the seat of war, in consequence of which the paper would only be issued in half-sheets, until their return.

Mr. Hütter retained the proprietorship of the paper until November 2, 1820, when George Hanke became the proprietor of the establishment. He died January 26, 1824, and the paper was published by his widow until June 17, of the same year, when Mr. Hütter again assumed control, and continued to be its editor and proprietor until his decease, which occurred September 21, 1830. His son, Edwin W. Hütter, then left school at Nazareth, and at the age of seventeen, on October 14, 1830, took the editorship of the paper and continued its publication for a number of years.

He subsequently became one of the leading editors of the state, private secretary to James Buchanan, while Secretary of State, and after the death of his two sons, his only children, devoted the remainder of his life to the ministry and became a prominent Lutheran divine.

From the time of its establishment the paper was printed with large type on coarse, dark paper, but in 1834, better paper was used. It was enlarged to twenty-one by twenty-eight inches and the general appearance of the paper assumed a more modern style. On March 27, 1839, Reuben Bright became the proprietor and published the paper until December 1, 1841, when it was purchased by James W. Wilson, an uncle of Edwin W. Hütter. In June, 1849, Mr. Wilson enlarged the paper to twenty-two by thirty-two inches, and in January, 1853, to twenty-four by thirty-eight inches and made other marked improvements.

August 2, 1854, Reuben Bright and Ephraim B. Harlacher purchased the paper and it was published by them until January 6, 1858, when Mr. Bright withdrew from the firm and was succeeded by Benjamin F. Trexler. On July 7, 1858, Nelson Weiser became a partner and the firm name was Trexler, Harlacher and Weiser. The subscription list of the paper had now so increased that the hand press, on which it had been printed for so many years, was too slow to supply the demand, and a power press was substituted in its place.

Mr. Trexler withdrew from the firm on July 19, 1867, and Messrs. Harlacher and Weiser continued the publication of the paper. In 1869 it was enlarged to twenty-eight by forty inches and otherwise improved. Mr. Weiser withdrew March 4, 1874, and Edwin J. Young and Lewis P. Hecker became members of the firm. Mr. Hecker withdrew shortly after and the paper was published by E. B. Harlacher & Co., until September 30, 1874, when Mr. Young withdrew and Mr. Harlacher became the sole proprietor until July 1, 1875, when he sold it to E. E. Rinn and William F. Schlechter. In March, 1878, the paper was enlarged to thirty by forty-five inches. Messrs. Rinn and Schlechter published the paper until March 3, 1886, when Mr. Rinn retired from the firm and William F. Schlechter became the sole owner and editor and is to-day, after thirty-eight years of editorship on this paper, the oldest active newspaper editor in the city.

The paper is the German Democratic official organ and as it still upholds the principles propounded by the founder of the paper, is true to its name and its mission.

Der Friedens Bote ("Messenger of Peace") and Lecha County Anzeiger was the second paper established in Allentown, and was by a little more than two years the junior of the Republikaner, its initial issue being made Sept. 28, 1812. The proprietors were Joseph Ehrenfried and Henry Ebner. In politics the Friedens Bote was independent, but it was opposed to the war which had then opened with Great Britain and hence its name. In September, 1814, Mr. Ehrenfried was drafted for service in the war which he had editorially deprecated, and marched with the militia to Marcus Hook. The paper was from that time conducted by Mr. Ebner alone until June 1, 1821, when Frederick G. Rütze became associated with him, under the firm name of Henry Ebner & Co. On Jan. 1, 1831, the paper was bought by Augustus Gräter and Alexander A. Blumer, who continued to issue it for four years, under the firm name of Gräter & Blumer. On Jan. 1, 1834, the firm became Alexander A. and W. H. Blumer. The paper, which was originally and up to this time a four-column sheet, eleven by seventeen inches, was now enlarged to five columns, making the size of the page fourteen by nineteen inches. The publication-office was removed to the building on Hamilton Street, opposite the German Reformed Church, and one door below the present office. Victor Blumer became associated with his brothers on Jan. 1, 1840. A little over two years later, May 4, 1842, Alexander A. Blumer died, and the paper was then carried on by V. and W. Blumer until Jan. 1, 1844, when the firm became Blumer and Bush, Victor Blumer retaining his interest and Charles S. Bush buying that of his brother. In 1847, they enlarged the sheet to six columns. E. D. Leisenring entered the firm Jan. 1, 1850, the style becoming Blumer, Bush and Leisenring, and so remaining until July 1, 1857, when Mr. Bush withdrew. The paper was again enlarged, and on Jan. 1, 1858, Henry A. Blumer became a partner in the house. On July 4, 1860, he gave place to Eli J. Saeger. Victor Blumer died Aug. 24, 1860, and in the spring of the following year the firm-name was changed to Saeger and Leisenring. On Sept. 6, 1865, Mr. Saeger withdrew, and I. F. Walter and J. T. Colver became associated with the remaining partner, under the firm-name of E. D.

Leisenring & Co. Two years later the paper was enlarged to eight columns, and in 1870 a new firm was formed, under the name of Leisenring, Trexler Co. Mr. B. F. Trexler brought into the house thus formed the Welt Bote, the publication of which was continued in connection with the Friedens Bote. In September, 1877, J. T. Colver retired from the firm and W. J. Hartzell entered it, but no change in name was made. On Feb. 20, 1882, occurred the death of Mr. E. D. Leisenring, and then the firm became Trexler and Hartzell.

Mr. B. F. Trexler retired from the firm in 1893, and his interest was acquired by Wm. F. Weaber, the firm becoming Hartzell and Weaber. The paper was printed from this time on in seven columns, and the firm name became The Welt Bote Publishing Company. Mr. Weaber died in 1905, when Mr. Hartzell became sole owner, and still publishes the paper.

The Welt Bote, ("Messenger of the World") was first issued by Benjamin F. Trexler on Nov. 25, 1854, and was printed regularly after Jan. 27, 1855. From 1858 to 1868 it was published in connection with the Republikaner, by the firm of Trexler, Harlacher and Weiser; then again by Mr. Trexler alone until 1870, when it came under the management of the firm then publishing the Friedens Bote. As its name implies, it is a newspaper for the whole world, and it is read wherever there are Germans. It is sent into every state in the union except Vermont, and copies are sent to Austria, Germany, Switzerland and Turkey. The size of the paper is fourteen and one-half by twenty-two and one-half inches, and it is well filled with literary matter and news of especial interest to the Germans of the United States and those of the Fatherland as well.

The Lecha Bote, ("Lehigh Messenger,") was a German local tri-weekly journal, started as a daily by Benj. F. Trexler in 1869, under the name of the Stadt und Land Bote, and its name was changed in 1877. It was published by the owners of the Friedensbote until 1881.

The Lecha Patriot, a German paper, originally an Anti-Masonic and then successively a Whig and Republican journal, was started in 1827 or 1828 by John D. Roney, who came to Allentown from Bucks county and who practiced law here some years. After Mr. Roney had conducted the paper about two years it passed into the possession of Alexander Miller. Subsequently it was owned and managed by G. A. Sage, Reuben Guth, Edwin Keiper, and Solomon Gross. While owned by Messrs. Gross and Keiper, the Patriot office was located on the south side of Hamilton street, between Hall and Eighth streets, and was burned out in the great fire of June 1, 1848. The firm's loss was estimated at $1,200, with no insurance. The paper passed through many different hands, among those associated in the ownership and management being John H. Helfrich, Charles Keck, William S. Young, Benjamin J. Hagenbuch, Tilghman V. Rhoads, Joseph Young, and Ephraim Moss. The last persons who were proprietors of the Patriot as a separate and distinct property were William H. Ainey, John L. Hoffman and Edward Ruhe, who sold it in June, 1872, to Robert Iredell, Jr., who merged it with the Lehigh Register in December, 1872.

The first English paper in the county was the Lehigh Centinel, established in June, 1817, by Charles L. Hütter. It was a small five-column sheet, of Democratic proclivities, and bore the brave motto:

"Here shall the press the people's rights proclaim, Unawed by influence and unbribed by gain."

On November 6, 1820, it was announced that Charles L. Hütter, having been elected sheriff of Lehigh county, and having therefore relinquished the printing business, the Centinel would be published by the editor of the Easton Centinel, Christian J. Hütter. The paper was continued only two or three years, as there were not a sufficient number of English readers to give it requisite support.

The Allentown Democrat began life as the Lehigh Bulletin, in 1837, and is now the oldest English newspaper in the county. John Royer, the founder of the Bulletin, issued a specimen sheet on a Wednesday in January, 1837, and circulated it gratuitously. He said, editorially, "Being sensibly aware that many who have an inclination to subscribe for an English paper to be located in Allentown would prefer seeing its number, size, quality, and probable contents. Under these impressions we present you with this sheet, fondly hoping that it may meet with your approbation and support."

Mr. Royer proposed to issue the paper "as early in the spring as it was possible for him to bring his printing-office from Philadelphia by canal." The first regular issue was made April 26, 1837. The paper was a very fair specimen of the "art preservative of all arts," and was a six-column quarto. The subscription price was two dollars per annum, which, in proportion to size and quality, was dearer than twenty dollars would now be for the Democrat. In his salutatory Mr. Royer forecasts the policy of the paper as follows:

"Aware of the futility of promises, it is the intention of the subscriber to make as few as the nature of this prospectus will admit. Let it suffice, then, to say that the Bulletin will be conducted on firm and decided Democratic principles; and when public men and measures are noticed, it will be in a spirit of moderation and candor. We shall always give the earliest foreign and domestic intelligence. The proceedings of Congress and our State Legislature will receive our early attention. The approaching convention for the purpose of altering and improving our State Constitution, which has created much anxiety among the people, their proceedings, speeches, etc., we shall give at length. Education and agriculture will receive a conspicuous share of the paper. A reasonable portion of its columns will be devoted to jocularity, morality, satire, sportive notes, anecdotes, physic, philosophy, history, poetry, etc., in short everything which can interest or amuse the hearts and minds of this great, free, and reading nation. A number of the above-mentioned subjects will be occasionally illustrated by splendid cuts furnished by an able artist."

Mr. Royer, after conducting the Bulletin a few years, changed its name to the Democrat, and in August, 1847, a little over ten years from the time he had established it, he sold the property to James Rafferty and Mifflin Hannum. In August, 1850, Mr. Hannum purchased his partner's interest, and he then carried on the Democrat as sole proprietor until July 1, 1859. Upon that date C. Frank Haines and Augustus L. Ruhe bought the paper, the latter being a silent partner, though he took a prominent part in the business and editorial management. The paper had deteriorated in quality and lost patronage, both from that reason and the additional one that the editor had not been in accord with the prevailing sentiment of the party. The new proprietors began the arduous task of building up a reputation for the Democrat, and by judicious management and industrious application succeeded not only in regaining all that had been lost but in advancing the paper to a condition of prosperity far beyond any before attained. On July 1, 1865, Augustus L. Ruhe sold his interest to his son, Werner K. Ruhe, who was associated with Mr. Haines under the firm-name of Haines and Ruhe, until his death on Feb. 6, 1904.

Mr. Haines died May 12, 1904. The estate continued the publication of the Democrat for a time, when a company was formed consisting of the estate of Mr. Haines, William D. Miers, John T. Kramer, Fred F. Kramer, and Nathan E. Worman, the four gentlemen having secured the share of the late Werner K. Ruhe. This company published the Democrat until December 13, 1906, when Charles F. Berkemeyer secured a lease on the paper and began issuing it as a daily, the weekly being discontinued. After a checkered career the Daily Democrat passed into the hands of a corporation of which Hon. Fred H. Horlacher, Daniel Erdman, Harry M. Gangewer, Dr. Rein K. Hartzell, and Alfred S. Hartzell were the principal stockholders. Mr.

Erdman was president. Upon his death Democratic County Chairman Jonathan E. Frederick, secured Mr. Erdman's interests and Mr. Ganger was elected president and Mr. Frederick secretary and treasurer. In March, 1909, Charles W. Weiser, at that time editor of the Morning Call, became the editor of the Daily Democrat and the paper took on new life and became one of the leading Democratic newspapers in Eastern Pennsylvania. In April, 1910, the paper was bought by George H. Hardner, a successful contractor of Allentown. Mr. Weiser continued as editor, a position he fills at this time. The paper has continued to grow and is one of the most widely quoted newspapers in the country.

The first number of the Daily City Item was issued on Jan. 1, 1878, the paper succeeding the Morning Herald. It was founded by five young men, three of whom were practical printers. Their names were Robert W. Vogt, Chas. M. Kramer, Nathan E. Worman, Oscar Swartz and Cortland D. Boas. It was published from the office of Rinn and Schlechter, publishers of the Republikaner, then located where is now the firm of Peters and Jacoby. Cyrus Kuntz was the editor, he receiving only his board for his editorship. It met with indifferent success in the beginning, and was kept alive with difficulty, as the young men who had launched the enterprise were without capital, and were compelled to rely upon their business tact and energies to make it a success. The paper being Democratic, took a leading part in the campaigns that followed, and the importance of having an outspoken and fearless party daily was at once recognized by the prominent Democrats of the city and county. N. E. Worman retired from the business, and was succeeded by Chas. A. J. Hartman.

On the 10th of May, 1880, the interest of Robert W. Vogt and Charles M. Kramer in the paper was purchased by Cyrus Kuntz and Chas. A. J. Hartman, who, together with Oscar Swartz, became the proprietors. Mr. Swartz died Aug. 18, 1885, and his interest was purchased by Messrs. Kuntz and Hartman. Mr. Hartman died Sept. 1, 1890. His interest in the firm was purchased by Cyrus Kuntz who became sole owner. Mr. Kuntz died July 7, 1903, and the paper was conducted by his estate until Jan. 1, 1912, when Geo. H. Hardner purchased it. It is now conducted by the Democrat Publishing Company, of which George H. Hardner is President, and E. E. Harwick, Secretary and Treasurer. William L. Hartman and Edw. J. Crader are the editors. Mr. Cyrus Kuntz erected a modern four-story business block at 608-10 Hamilton Street, where the Item was published, but he died on the day bricklaying on the new building commenced. In April, 1912, the business was removed to the northeast corner of Sixth and Linden Streets, in the four-story building erected by Mr. Hardner, where it is now published. It was published as a morning paper until after Nov. 24, 1883, when, having absorbed the Daily Telegram, it was made an evening publication.

The Telegram was started in June, 1882, by two sons of the late Edmund D. Leisenring, the well-known German editor. The paper failed to get such support as was necessary to put it upon a paying basis and after it had passed under the management of three different parties, was purchased by the Item.

The Chronicle and News is the outcome of three distinct journalistic enterprises. Of these the first, chronologically, was the Daily News, established as a neutral journal in 1866 by Peter Correll. It was soon afterwards bought by Harlacher and Weiser, who continued the publication, on South Sixth Street, for a number of years, with Mr. Correll, as editor, and subsequently with Thos. B. Leisenring, E. J. Young and T. F. Emmons in the same capacity. After a short interval of suspension the paper was sold, in 1874, to the Daily News Association, composed of Adam Woolever, Eli G. Schwartz and Werner K. Ruhe. The paper remained under this proprietorship and the editorship of Daniel B. Wood until March 19, 1875, when it was sold to Robert Iredell, Jr., proprietor of the Daily Chronicle, with which it was merged.

The Daily Chronicle had been started by Mr. Iredell, March 3, 1870, in response to requests from many local leaders of the Republican party, who saw the necessity of having a journalistic champion of the principles of Republicanism. It was at first a five-column sheet, and was sold at ten cents per week, but this price was subsequently reduced to six cents per week, for the purpose of extending the circulation of the paper. This measure proved a wise one, and considerably enhanced the value of the property. The effect of merging the News with the Chronicle, in 1875, was to increase the circulation to eighteen hundred copies. The paper was enlarged and the price was then raised to ten cents per week.

In November, 1877, the Daily Morning Herald was purchased and merged with the Chronicle and News. This was a paper which had been started upon an independent platform in September, 1873, by a company composed of T. F. Emmons, Alex. C. Brooks, and D. D. Holder, with Mr. Emmons as editor and Allen T. Frederick as reporter. The Herald published for a short time a Sunday edition, the first Sunday newspaper issued in Allentown.

The Herald soon became Democratic in politics, and Robert E. Wright, Jr., Edward Harvey, Esq., J. H. Holmes and Tinsley Jeter became interested in its ownership. Considerable money was expended in the effort to sustain the Herald, and had it not been absorbed by the Chronicle and News, it would probably have soon suspended publication.

The Chronicle and News is a strong exponent of Republican politics as well as a valuable medium for the dissemination of local and general news. The editors of the paper have been Thomas F. Emmons, Joseph L. Shipley, Daniel B. Wood and Frank J. Sherer. The present editor is George Zimmerman. The founder, Mr. Iredell, died October 22, 1893, and the business was managed by his estate until it was incorporated March 1, 1912, under the name of The Chronicle and News Publishing Company, with Rodney R. Iredell, as president and business manager, and Mrs. Florence Iredell Berger, as secretary and treasurer, son and daughter, respectively, of the founder. The mechanical equipment of the plant has been improved, the paper has increased its volume of advertising and it has now the largest evening circulation in the city.

The Lehigh Register was established by Augustus L. Ruhe, in October, 1846, and was carried on by him very successfully as a neutral newspaper until 1854, when he sold it to C. Frank Haines and David K. Diefenderfer. It was by them made a Whig paper, and in 1856 became a supporter of the Republican party. Mr. Diefenderfer soon sold his interest to Peter Huber. The paper was published by Haines and Huber until 1859, when Mr. Haines sold his interest to John H. Oliver, Esq., an able and popular lawyer, who became a candidate for Congress in 1870, and almost succeeded in overcoming the large Democratic majority of the district. Huber and Oliver continued in partnership until 1861, after which date Mr. Oliver conducted the paper alone for a short period. The paper was then owned successively by William H. Ainey, Ephraim Moss and Elisha Forrest. Mr. Forrest sold the paper in December, 1868, to Morgan R. Wills and Robert Iredell, Jr., proprietors of the Norristown Herald and Free Press, and in May, 1869, Mr. Iredell became the sole owner. In December, 1872, the Lecha Patriot was merged with the Register which is still published as a weekly, being the only English weekly newspaper in Allentown and is published under the same management as the Chronicle and News.

The Allentown Morning Call, while not the oldest of the city's newspapers, has the largest circulation in the Lehigh Valley and is thus a paper of great influence. It was founded May 26, 1883, as The Critic, by Samuel J. Woolever. He conducted it as a weekly and then as quite a successful Sunday paper until December 7, 1888, when he launched it as a five column daily morning paper. At that time the field was more limited both as to the gathering of the local news and the distribution of the finished paper than in these days and they were years of poor support and hard struggling. In 1894 Mr. Woolever sold the paper to Werner K. Ruhe, who associated with himself C. W. Weiser and K. W. De Belle, who each secured a quarter interest, Mr. Ruhe retaining a half interest. In January, 1895, the name was changed to The Morning Call. Mr. De Belle retired in the spring of 1895, and David A. Miller, who was a reporter on the paper from June, 1894, purchased his interest and became the business manager. In 1904 Mr. Miller became the sole owner of the paper, and to his successful management the great success of the paper is largely due.

If the development of the Morning Call had been an easy matter, it would hardly be the strong proposition it is to-day. In 1895 it had a circulation of 800. In 1913 the circulation passed the 16,000 mark. This growth was developed gradually and carefully. The news service was improved from time to time and the mechanical department equipped with the most up-to-date machinery needed in the production of a newspaper. The printing press used in 1895 produced 500 four page newspapers an hour, while that used in 1913 produces 10,000 twenty-four page papers or 20,000 eight or twelve page papers an hour. With the lintotype the news matter is set by machine, one man being able to do the work of seven men setting type by hand.

In 1905, Mr. Miller erected the building for the mechanical plant at No. 27 South Sixth street, and after this was completed installed a plant unsurpassed in the Lehigh Valley. In a short time the Morning Call was admitted to membership in The Associated Press, the greatest news-gathering and distributing service in the world. It has taken a keen interest in local affairs, city and county, and has constantly been alert to the interests closest to the people. Its independent, fearless, policy in presenting the news and its stand on many of the important questions before the people has won for The Morning Call the large clientage it enjoys. It is a member of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association, composed of over three hundred of the largest newspapers in the country. Percy B. Ruhe is the editor, Samuel P. Miller, the publisher, Peter W. Leisenring, business manager, Clarence J. Smith, city editor and George T. Erdman the telegraph editor.

The Allentown Leader, a daily, was first issued August 28, 1893, by The Leader Publishing Company, composed of Wm. E. McCormick, W. J. Hartzell and Wm. F. Weaber. Mr. McCormick was managing editor, George R. Roth city editor and L. B. Landis, business manager. The paper was independent and was sold at six cents a week. In 1897, Wm. F. Roth purchased Mr. McCormick's interest and in 1913 Mr. Roth and his son, George R., became the sole owners. The paper kept pace with the times and from four pages has grown to issues of twelve and sixteen pages and is the largest penny evening paper in this section. George R. Roth is the present editor.

The Lehigh Herald, an English weekly newspaper, made its first appearance on September 4, 1849. It was published by J. D. Gangwere and the subscription price was one dollar per year. It does not appear to have had a long existence and little is known of its history. A copy of its tenth number, issued Nov. 8, 1849, is owned by the writer.

Besides the publications already mentioned, there have been a number of newspapers which existed but a short time. Among them, and probably the earliest, was a small German-English paper, printed at the Republikaner office, by Charles L. Hütter. The Lehigh Democrat led a ten weeks' existence in 1843. A little later, Elias Keiper published for a short period, from the Patriot office, a small English journal.

In later years there was the Evening Dispatch, started in 1867, which was published from the office of the Lehigh Register, then located in Lion Hall, at Church and Hamilton streets. The proprietors of the paper, which had a brief career, were Wm. J. Grim, A. J. Helfrich and Wm. J. Weiss. It was later owned by Elisha Forrest.

The Daily Bulletin, an afternoon paper, neutral in politics, was published by Daniel D. Holder for about six months, in 1876, in the Kramer building at Sixth and Hamilton streets. Mr. Holder has been for twenty-eight years connected with the New York World. The Bugle, a Republican campaign paper, was published in 1877, by Messrs. Wood, Snyder and Orr.

The Union Gazette, an independent newspaper issued in the interest of the trades unions made its first appearance in May, 1902. It was a weekly and was published at Sixth and Union Streets by Charles M. Rehrig, until 1911.

The Lehigh Valley Review, a weekly, was first issued on March 13, 1908. The publisher and editor is John O. Mertz, and, a six-page paper, it is published at 812 Hamilton street.

The Labor Herald, a weekly, made its initial appearance on September 12, 1913. It is an eight-page paper, published at 144 N. Seventh street, by Robert J. Wheeler, editor and proprietor.

The Catasauqua Herald was the first paper in the town of Catasauqua. It was started by Peter Kelchner & Frey in 1857. Arnold C. Lewis was the editor in 1860, and put the paper on a paying basis, but going into the army in 1861, he was unable to continue it and it did not long survive.

The Journal was published by Thomas Lambert, for a short time after the war. The Valley Record was established by Capt. W. H. Bartholomew, who brought out the first issue on Aug. 15, 1870, and published it until 1898. A semi-weekly, called The New Era, was published for a short time, beginning in 1899. The Country Merchant was started on Sept. 1, 1870, by Edmund Randall as an advertising sheet and on July 24, 1871, its name was changed to The Dispatch. The paper was issued as seven columns, weekly, which was enlarged in 1878, to eight columns. Mr. Randall, after forty-three years of editorial work, has retired and John S. Matchette is now the editor and proprietor.

The Slatington News was first issued by Godshalk and Bright on Wednesday, Sept. 2, 1868, from Marsteller's building on Lower Main Street, Slatington. In 1869 Schlauch and Smith became the proprietors and in June the location was changed to Kuntz Hall. June 22, 1870, the firm became Roper and Schlauch, and in 1873, D. D. Roper sold his interest to G. B. Fickard. Benjamin Patterson succeeded Mr. Fickard on Aug. 12, 1874, and the firm continued as Schlauch and Patterson until Jan. 16, 1878, when Mr. Schlauch became the sole owner.

The office was removed to the Oplinger building on March 28, 1883, and remained there until Aug. 15, 1888, when the paper was sold to Mohr and Schoenly, and was located in the basement of what is now the Citizen's Bank building. O. K. Mohr became the editor and proprietor in 1889 and managed the business until November 14, 1891, when the firm became The News Publishing Company, Inc., with H. L. Work as editor and manager, and the paper was changed from an independent sheet to a Republican paper. James L. Mast became editor and C. C. Cortright business manager in October, 1893. On Jan. 1, 1898, James G. Rauch became the sole owner and the firm name became The News Publishing Company. The paper again became independent and is still edited by Mr. Rauch.

The Slatington Star was started as a weekly newspaper at Walnutport in April, 1893, by William Morthimer. He carried it on several years, then sold it to James L. Mast, who transferred the newspaper to Slatington and issued it for several years. Then James G. Rauch bebeen printed regularly every week on Friday. It is a folio, seven columns, regular size, and is Republican in politics. In 1909 a corporation was formed for its publication, entitled The Herald Publication Company, but the following year Mr. Roberts became the sole proprietor and has been the editor from the beginning.

The Coopersburg Sentinel was started in 1889 by W. F. Goettler, of Souderton, as an independent weekly. Samuel B. Beck, who was the manager, later became the editor and proprietor and was succeeded by John B. Beck. On August 15, 1895, Irwin D. Yorgey became the editor and proprietor and continued as such until Aug. 15, 1902, when he sold the paper to Harry A. Gehman. In 1912, Mr. Gehman sold the paper to H. A. Shelly and brother, the present owners, who issue an eight-page paper.

Other papers no longer published in the county were the Macungie Progress, issued by O. P. Knauss, of Macungie, for a number of years and the Emaus Herald.

The Jugendfreund, a German monthly for young people was founded by Rev. Samuel K. Brobst, in June, 1847, and after his death in 1876 was continued by Tilghman H. Diehl for a number of years. It is now published by the Publication Board of the General Council of the Lutheran church. The Jugendfreund was, at the time of its first issue, the only paper in German of this character in the country, and became the main German Lutheran Sunday school paper of the land. In 1858, Rev. Brobst began publishing the Lutherische Zeitschrift, a semi-monthly Lutheran church paper, which became a weekly in 1866, and in 1879 was merged with the Lutherische Herald. From 1868 to 1874, he also published the German Theological Monthly, and for nine years for the soldiers in the army, printed during two years of the war, was distributed by the Christian Commission.

Jugendfreund
Aller Christlichen Benennungen.

Band 1. Muncion, Pa., Juni 16, 1847. No. 1.

Die Pyramiden. Sie hat wohl schon von Gizehen, den Obelisk und des Meiridens, die Pyramiden gesehen, aber wenn sie nicht weiß, was das für eine Sache ist, so ist sie sehr unglücklich. In diesem Sinne ist die Pyramide eine sehr interessante Sache, welche in dem Alterthum sehr hoch gehalten wurde. In dem Jahre 1798 entdeckte man die Pyramiden in der Wüste von Egypten. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt. In dem Jahre 1817 entdeckte man die Pyramiden in der Wüste von Egypten. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt.	Die Sonntagsgäste. Die Sonntagsgäste sind eine sehr interessante Sache. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt. In dem Jahre 1798 entdeckte man die Pyramiden in der Wüste von Egypten. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt.	Christ-Gelehrung. Die Christ-Gelehrung ist eine sehr interessante Sache. Sie ist aus Stein erbaut und hat eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt. In dem Jahre 1798 entdeckte man die Pyramiden in der Wüste von Egypten. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt.	Die Gungershöf in Irland. Die Gungershöf in Irland sind eine sehr interessante Sache. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt. In dem Jahre 1798 entdeckte man die Pyramiden in der Wüste von Egypten. Sie sind aus Stein erbaut und haben eine sehr merkwürdige Gestalt.
---	--	--	--

Kinderlieb.

Zu hochzeit, derer Jule die 10.
Das Du der kleine Jule die 10.
Das Du der kleine Jule die 10.
Das Du der kleine Jule die 10.

come the owner, who conducted it for one year. Frederick W. Sell, then purchased the plant and issued the paper until October, 1913, when he sold it to Mr. Morthimer. It was issued as a double folio and independent in politics.

The first issue of the Slatington Herald was printed Sept. 13, 1907, by A. P. Berlin and John W. Roberts, from its office on the second floor of the postoffice building and since then has CHAPTER XIV.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

The first physician who resided in that portion of Northampton county which now constitutes Lehigh county, was Dr. Frederick Spiegel, who was a resident of Macungie township, as early as 1760, where he is recorded as a doctor and surgeon. He was one of three physicians that attended Magdalena and Dorothea Snyder, who had been wounded by Indians on October 8, 1763, in Whitehall township, when their parents and three of their children were killed. The Assembly paid the surgeons' fees, amounting to £44, 3s. and 8d. Drs. John Matthew Otto and Jacob Reid were the other surgeons.

Dr. Christian Frederick Martin settled in Upper Milford township in 1762, coming from the Trappe, in Montgomery county. He was born in Prussia, December 22, 1727, the son of a Lutheran clergyman, and obtained his medical education at Berlin. He came to America with Rev. Henry Melchoir Muhlenberg, and settled at the Trappe, where he married the daughter of a Lutheran clergyman, Rev. Schwartzley. After the death of his wife, who had six children, three sons and three daughters, he married Mary Miller, and removed to Northampton county. He died of apoplexy at Allentown, June 13, 1812, and was buried at Lehigh church. In his second marriage he had five sons and one daughter, four of the sons becoming physicians. In all, twenty-five of his descendants were physicians.

Dr. Gottlieb Bolzius was the first physician in Allentown, where he appeared in 1766. In 1782 Governor James Hamilton visited Dr. Bolzius to be treated by him for a cancer. He died June 13, 1791, aged 63 years and 23 days, and was buried in the old Allentown cemetery, where his tombstone is still readable. Dr. Bolzius was unmarried, and at his death bequeathed £25 to the Lutheran congregation for the benefit of the church and school house. He also bequeathed £6 to the overseers of the poor of Allentown and of Salisbury township; and twenty Spanish milled dollars to a godson.

Dr. John Herzog owned property in Weisenburg township from 1763 to 1769, but he did not reside there.

Dr. Felix Lynn studied medicine with some practitioner and married the widow of his preceptor. He was born July 8, 1740, in Upper Milford, now Lower Milford, the son of Peter Lynn and his wife, Margaret Brunner, daughter of Felix Brunner. On December 7, 1762, he purchased a property of 40 acres in Upper Saucon township, where he practiced some years. In 1784 he sold the farm to his brother Peter, and removed to Lower Saucon township, where he purchased a farm of over 300 acres for £1994 from Dr. James Cruikshank. He died January 9, 1809, and is buried at Lower Saucon church. His first wife, Jacobina Lynn, was born October 22, 1730, and died March 25, 1801.

Dr. Enoch Godfried's name appears in Allentown in 1767, and also in 1770; but he later removed to Easton.

Dr. Matthew McHenry, the son of the Rev. Francis McHenry (a Presbyterian minister, who died in 1757), and his wife, Mary Wilson, of Northampton county, was born in 1743. His name appears as a "doctor" in the assessment list for Allentown in 1772. He was appointed surgeon of the provincial ship, "Montgomery" on April 13, 1776. He died Dec. 13, 1783. His widow, Margaret, daughter of Robert Gregg, died March 17, 1796.

In the history of the "Crown Inn" there appears the following statement:

"Bethlehem, May 4, 1746.

Marcus Hulings, of Durham; Dr.	£ s. d.
To curing the bellows-maker's leg that was broken,	3 0 0
To curing the man that hurt his ribs,	0 3 0
To bleeding himself,	0 1 0
To bleeding one of his miners,	0 1 0
	3 5 0

John Matthew Otto."

Dr. Otto was a skillful surgeon, and was called upon to treat William Tatamy, the young nephew of the famous Indian Chief of that name, who was shot by a Scotch-Irish lad of 15 years on July 8, 1757.

Dr. Christian Willauer practiced in what is now Lower Milford township and vicinity. He was born May 27, 1760, and died March 20, 1817, and is buried at the Great Swamp church.

Dr. Philip Scholl, who is buried at Kreidersville, also practiced extensively in this county. He was born March 27, 1768, and died May 10, 1828. He lived some time in Livingston county, New York. Among his sons were, Drs. Henry and Griffith Scholl, John, of Saegersville, and James, of East Texas.

Dr. John Frederick Ruhe, a native of Nordheim, in Hanover, Germany, settled in Allentown in 1794, where he opened the first store exclusively for the sale of drugs and also practiced medicine. He had been previously assistant in the King's apothecary in London, England. He was born November 25, 1745, died at Allentown July 27, 1841, and was buried on the old cemetery. He was the father of Capt. John F. Ruhe and Charles A. Ruhe, and the ancestor of the Ruhe family.

Dr. James Jameson came to Allentown from Adams county about 1809. He was considered a good surgeon and attended principally that class of cases where the knife rather than physic was needed. He was a large owner of stock in the chain bridge over the Lehigh river, and erected and lived in the toll house at the western end of the bridge with the keeper; and there he had his office. He was born in 1771, and died March 19, 1831. He had a son James, who resided in Reading.

Dr. Jacob Martin, eldest son of Dr. Christian Frederick Martin, studied medicine under his father and began practice in Allentown about 1790. He was postmaster of the town from 1805 to 1814. He died at Allentown in 1834, aged 58 years. He was married to Jane Savitz (dau. of George) and they had seven sons and three daughters:—Edward F., Charles H., Tilghman H., Walter, Franklin B., William, Thomas, Mrs. Thomas B. Wilson, Mrs. John W. Hornbeck and Mrs. E. R. Newhard. The first five of the sons became physicians.

Edward F. settled at Weaversville and practiced his profession there.

Charles H. graduated at U. of P. Mar. 6, 1830, and carried on practice until he died in Sept., 1860. Three sons survived him and became physicians.

Tilghman H., was born Dec. 6, 1809. After a thorough education he graduated from the U. of P. Medical Department in 1831, and became associated with his father in the practice of medicine and succeeded him. He was an active member of the Lehigh County Medical Society, and also of the State Medical Society. He was married to Mary Kramer (dau. of Daniel, of Allentown), and they had seven children. A son, Alfred J., graduated from the U. of P. Medical Department and became a practitioner with his father, and another son, Thomas T., also graduated from the U. of P. and practiced at Allentown.

Edwin G. Martin, son of Dr. Chas. H., was born Oct. 3, 1836, at Allentown, and, after a special education for the medical profession, was graduated from the U. of P. in 1856 and associated with his father in active practice. He became prominently identified with the Lehigh County Medical Society (being first president), State Medical Society, Allentown Female College, Muhlenberg College and different financial institutions. He was enlisted in the Civil War, serving as surgeon of the 27th Reg't P. V. M. He officiated as Mayor of Allentown in 1880. He affiliated with the Free Masons, and after filling various positions finally became the Grand Commander of the Knights Templar. He was married to Fannie S. Balliet (dau. of Stephen), and they had two children: Irene B. and Dr. Charles S.

Henry Martin, third son of Dr. Charles H., was graduated from the U. of P. in 1858 and practiced four years at Slatington, then enlisted in the Civil War and served as Assistant Surgeon of the 9th Penna. Reserves. He migrated to Colorado.

Walter Martin, son of Dr. Jacob, graduated from the U. of P. and emigrated to California where he died.

Franklin B. Martin, son of Dr. Jacob, graduated from the U. of P., and practiced his profession at Fogelsville, Whitemarsh and Catasauqua, dying at the place last named.

George Martin, the second son of Dr. Christian Fred'k, studied medicine under his father, then located in Montgomery county in 1800, where he practiced 50 years; then removed to Philadelphia and lived in retirement until he died Dec. 8, 1862, at the age of 83 years. He had three sons who studied medicine under him, Frederick A., Charles and John A.

Frederick A. Martin, son of Dr. George, was graduated from the U. of P. in 1830 and associated with his father for two years; then practiced at Coopersburg until 1843, when he located at Philadelphia and carried on practice for seven years. He lived in retirement at Bethlehem from 1850 to 1867, then returned to Philadelphia where he died.

Charles Martin, son of Dr. George, was graduated from the U. of P. in 1833. After practicing three years in Montgomery county, he studied divinity at the Gettysburg Seminary. Upon graduating he became pastor of St. James Episcopal Church in N. Y. city, then went to St. Joseph, Mo., and served as principal of the Seminary.

John A. Martin, son of Dr. George, was graduated from the U. of P. in 1836 and practiced in Montgomery county ten years. His health failing he went to California, and besides carrying on his practice, he established a hospital. But he remained there only two years and returned to Philadelphia, studied law and practiced a short time at Norristown. The practice of the law did not suit his ideas, so he returned to medical practice, and located at Magnolia, Del., where he practiced until he died March 13, 1872.

Charles H. Martin, the third son of Dr. Christian Frederick, was born Dec. 27, 1781, and studied medicine under his father; then engaged in practice in 1812, which he carried on until he died May 31, 1844. He married Christianna Huber, who was born Jan. 23, 1791, and died Oct. 15, 1866. He left two daughters and a son, Charles Ludwig, who was born in 1821, and graduated from the U. of P. in 1841. He assisted his father three years, when his father died and he succeeded to his large practice. He married Matilda Detwiller (dau. of Dr. Henry of Easton), and they had three daughters and five sons (Constantine H., Charles D., Truman D., John Norton, and William E.), the first three of whom became graduated and successful physicians.

Peter Martin, the fourth son of Dr. Christian Frederick, studied medicine under his father, and after remaining with him several years, engaged in practice until he died in 1846.

Mary Martin, daughter of Dr. Christian Frederick, married John Dickenshied and was the mother of Dr. Charles H. Dickenshied, and a daughter of Dr. Charles H. Martin, became the mother of Dr. Samuel Young.

Dr. Charles F. Dickenshied was born near Emaus, Jan. 22, 1791. His father dying when he was only eight years old, he was brought up by his grandfather, Dr. Charles L. Martin, educated and graduated from the U. of P. in 1817. He engaged in a very active and profitable practice for 40 years when he retired at Allentown. He died in October, 1881.

John H. Dickenshied, son of Dr. Chas. F., was born on the homestead June 4, 1826, and was graduated from the U. of P. in 1847. He associated with his father until 1847, when his father removed to Allentown and he took control of the extensive practice in the county where he distinguished himself by his skill and success as a practitioner. He married Amanda Steinman (dau. of Geo.), and they had three sons, Dr. Eugene H., Frederick S., (dec'd), and Chas. F., and four daughters. He died Oct. 17, 1905.

Geo. Van Buskirk attended the U. of P. and Jefferson Medical College, and practiced at Millertown (Macungie) during the English War of 1812-15, after which he removed to Pottstown. He had a son who practiced dentistry at Allentown.

Jacob Stein, a native of Allentown, studied medicine under Dr. Chas. H. Martin, 1816-18, and practiced about 15 years until his death, Oct. 3, 1826. His son, Jacob, was an attorney. Dr. Abraham Stein, his brother, practiced here a short time until his death, Aug. 13, 1827, at the early age of 24 years.

Griffith Scholl was born in New York in 1800, and after graduating from U. of P. immediately located in Heidelberg township. In 1829 he succeeded Dr. John Romig at Fogelsville, and about 1850 removed to Hecktown where he practiced until 1882, after practicing 60 years. He left a son, Joseph, who became a physician in Crawford county.

Henry Scholl, brother of Dr. Griffith, also graduated from U. of P., practiced at Saegersville and died in 1837, aged 38 years. His wife (Rachel Steckel), realizing that his end was near from consumption, studied medicine under his instructions and at his decease continued his practice and reared their family of six children. Three sons were educated, graduated from Jefferson Medical College and became physicians, John D. having remained at home and practiced until 1857 when he died, at the age of 33 years.

Wm. F. Danowsky, of Poland, practiced abroad 18 years, then emigrated to the U. S. in 1836. He practiced for awhile in Emaus; then located and practiced in Allentown until he died in 1875. In 1853 he commenced the manufacture of illuminating gas in a small way, and this resulted in establishing the Allentown Gas Works, of which he was the founder. He had a son, Dr. E. J. Danowsky who was a druggist and died March 9, 1909.

John Romig was born Jan. 3, 1804, in Centre Valley, studied medicine under Dr. John I. C. Baum, at Allentown, and graduated from U. of P. in 1825. He practiced for a while at Fogelsville, then located at Allentown. His professional labors in Lehigh county extended over a period covering half a century and he was distinguished for his great skill and success. In 1834 he embraced the new system of Homoeopathy and assisted in establishing the Allentown Academy of Medicine, from which he was graduated in 1838 and then filled the chair of obstetrics as one of the faculty. He married Eliza Fogel (dau. of Solomon), and they had a large family of children, among them John, William H., and George M., besides three daughters. He died Feb. 5, 1885. His sons, William and George, were graduated from the U. of P., and also the Hahnemann Medical College.

Wm. J. Romig, younger brother of Dr. John, was born June 18, 1821. He studied under his brother, and then practiced at Catasauqua and Allentown. He retired in 1872 and died in 1883. He was an early leader in the Anti-Slavery movement, and showed much interest in the cause of temperance, Christianity, and the welfare of the Church. He was married twice.

Frederick A. Wallace, of Easton, located at Hynemansville in 1845 and practiced there five years when he moved to Philadelphia and afterward to the West.

Frederick Seiberling practiced in Weisenberg township from 1862 for eight years; and H. A. Saylor from 1871 to 1875, when he served as the prothonotary of the county for one term of three years, and afterward resumed his professional duties. Joshua Seiberling and John Brunner began practice in the same locality in 1875.

Joshua Kern, of North Whitehall, graduated from Jefferson Medical College in 1846 and began practice at Orefield, in South Whitehall.

Thomas B. Cooper was born Dec. 29, 1823, at Coopersburg, studied medicine and graduated from U. of P. in 1843, and practiced his profession at his native place. As a relaxation he interested himself in politics and came to represent his congressional district (Lehigh and Bucks) during 1861-1862. He died at his home April 4, 1862. He was a popular, capable and successful physician. He was married to Elmina C. Schantz and they had four sons (Oscar F., Tilghman S., Llewellyn H., Thomas E.) and two daughters.

John Herbst was a manufacturer of clothes in Saxony, and among his children was a son Frederick William, born in 1804, who emigrated to Pennsylvania when 16 years old, studied medicine, graduated from Jefferson Medical College and practiced his profession in Berks county till he died in 1880.

William Herbst, son of Dr. Frederick William, was born in Berks county, Sept. 24, 1833, studied medicine and graduated from Jefferson Medical College in 1855. He located at Trelertown, Lehigh county, and carried on an extensive practice until his death.

He made a special study of local botany and his remarkable attainments on the subject led to his selection as a tutor of Muhlenberg College which position he filled for seven years. He published a book on the fungi. He was an active member of the County and the State Medical Societies since 1860, upwards of 30 years. He was married to Eleanor B. Schall (dau. of David), and they had two children, H. Herbert and Carrie. The son studied medicine and was graduated from the U. of P. and practiced medicine at Allentown for many years.

Aaron Miller was born July 1, 1839, at Saegersville, educated for the medical profession, and graduated from the University Medical College of New York in 1862. He embarked in practice at Germansville, continued there only two years, and then located at Saegersville, where he still carries on an extensive practice. He was married to Sarah K. Mosser (dau. of William), and they had two sons and two daughters.

Jacob S. Shimer (son of Charles B.), was born at Shimersville, April 4, 1836, studied medicine and graduated from U. of P. in 1857. After practicing several years at Macungie and Bethlehem, he located at Shimersville, where he carried on his profession till 1863; then identified himself with the Evangelical Association and became a minister of the gospel in 1866. He died July 27, 1898.

Albert M. Sigmund (son of Frederick, prominent iron-master), was born in Upper Milford, Feb. 27, 1839, studied medicine and was graduated from U. of P. in 1860. After practicing a short time with Dr. John H. Dickenshied, he engaged in the iron business with his brother, Henry, and carried on the Hampton Furnace. In 1863 he was commissioned as a surgeon in the Civil War and served for two years. He then returned to Shimersville, purchased the residence of Dr. Jacob S. Shimer and resumed his practice which he carried on till he died April 10, 1872.

Theodore Conrad Yeager was born April 1, 1828, son of Rev. Joshua Yeager, and a grandson of Rev. Johann Conrad Yeager, whose pastorates of Lutheran charges in and near Allentown continued 92 years. He was educated at the Allentown Academy and Allentown Seminary, studied medicine with Dr. Charles L. Martin, began practicing in 1860; engaged in the drug business with Dr. W. E. Barnes; was assistant Medical Inspector of Lehigh county in 1862; assistant Surgeon of the 51st Regt. in 1863; Professor of Chemistry and Botany at Muhlenberg College, and Deputy Revenue Collector under President Grant. He became very active in politics and was elected Mayor of Allentown in 1873, and while serving this position, died January 14, 1874.

MEDICAL SOCIETIES.--The practicing physicians of Lehigh county organized a medical society in 1853 at the office of Dr. Charles H. Martin in Allentown, and the following were the first officers:

President, Dr. Charles H. Martin, Allentown; Secretary, Dr. David O. Mosser, Breinigsville; Treasurer, Dr. Thomas B. Cooper, Coopersburg. Other members of the society were, Dr. Peter Leisenring, Macungie; Dr. William Kohler, Egypt; Dr. Tilghman H. Martin, Allentown.

The society had a short existence of only a few years and was disbanded.

A re-organization was effected in 1858 and since then the society has held regular meetings. In 1865 there were 24 members; in December, 1913, there were 85. Two addresses on selected topics relating to medical practice are read at the monthly meetings (excepting the annual meeting in January) which are followed by discussions.

The Allentown Academy of Medicine was organized as an institution similar to the Harrisburg Academy of Medicine, by a number of medical practitioners at Allentown for the purpose of promoting and promulgating the science and art of medicine, and a charter of incorporation was secured on March 10, 1910. The first officers and directors were as follows:

President, W. D. Kline; V. Pres't, Geo. F. Seiberling; Secr't'y, W. A. Hausman, Jr., Treas., J. Treichler Butz; E. H. Dickenshied, W. W. Hartzell, F. A. Fetherolf.

The society secured quarters on the third floor of the Free Library building and there it has since held its meetings. A library of medical books has been collected, numbering about 600 volumes, and numerous pamphlets.

STATE DISPENSARY.—In 1908 the State Board of Health established a Free Dispensary at Allentown (No. 118 N. 5th St.), for the treatment of tuberculosis, and appointed Dr. M. F. Cawley as the chief with Dr. J. Treichler Butz as his assistant. Free services are given there three times a week, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 3 to 5 p. m. Dr. Cawley acted as chief until his death in 1911, then Dr. W. D. Kline became his successor, Dr. Butz continuing as assistant. A professional nurse is in attendance. Many cases are treated.

HOMŒOPATHY.

The first school of homœopathic medical instruction in the world was founded at Allentown, Lehigh county, Pa., and called "The North American Academy of Homœopathic Healing Art." It had its inception in "The Homœopathic Society of Northampton County and counties adjacent; and also in the pioneer organization of Homœopathy of Pennsylvania known as the "Hahnemann Association." Its establishment excited considerable interest not only among the clergy and laity, but among physicians who were disposed to investigate the new doctrine.

The plan of Dr. Constantine Hering, at Philadelphia, was to devise a course of lectures and encourage students of medicine to learn the German language in order to understand and appreciate the value of the founder's principles; but the members of the Northampton County Society felt the need of a school for teaching homœopathy, and in writing on the subject, Dr. Henry Detwiller, as early as Dec. 30, 1833, said that Wesselhoeft, Romig and himself called on Dr. Hering in Philadelphia and they adopted a plan which ultimately resulted in the erection of the academy. This plan was matured on Dr. Hering's birthday, Jan. 1, 1834. It provided for an academy to be located at Allentown, of which he was to be the president and principal instructor; and he was to remove to that place as soon as a salary equal to that of a first-class Allentown clergyman was guaranteed to him.

Different suggestions were made as to securing a building and carrying on instruction, but they were not at first realized, because obstacles and discouragements arose which confused the operations of the founders. They succeeded however in opening an academy and carried forward its work. The fund was created by 100 subscribers from Allentown, Bethlehem, Philadelphia and New York, but the greater part was raised at Philadelphia through the efforts of William Geisse who was the real founder of homœopathy in that city. The mistake in not realizing better results was in giving medical instruction in the German language in an English speaking community, and therefore American students, rather than educate themselves in German, were inclined to enter other schools and adopt a system of medicine other than homœopathy.

The Allentown Academy was so well conducted in its early history, that a diploma from the institution was regarded as a medical distinction, because the professors were graduates of German universities and they subjected candidates for practice to a rigid examination. The Homœopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania was in a way the indirect outgrowth of the Allentown Academy, although not immediately a part of it, whose successor was the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia.

Several important publications were issued under the auspices of the Allentown Academy: "Einige Wort uber Nothwendigkeit" (address at dedication of academy); "Homœopathic Domestic Physician" (Hering, 1835-38); "Hahnemann's Organon" (reprint of Stratton edition) published at "Academical Bookstore" in 1836, with a preface by Hering; "Correspondenzblatt" (1835-'37); "Wirkungen des Schlangengiftes" (Herring, 1837).

This Allentown Academy, the first school of homœopathic medical instruction in the world, was founded April 10, 1835, the 80th anniversary of the birth of Hahnemann, the founder of the new system. Its cornerstone was laid with due ceremony on May 27th of that year, and the contents of the box were as follows: Hahnemann's Organon and picture; constitution of the academy corporation, printed in German and English; names of members of the Academy household and the incorporators; Hering's address; Philadelphia newspapers containing an account of homœopathy in Ohio; a copy of Friedensbote; quantity of homœopathic medicine, names of state and city officers; programme of the celebration.

At a meeting of the founders and incorporators held on the same day these officers were elected: President, Constantine Hering; V. President, John Romig; Secretary, Adolphus Bauer; Treasurer, Solomon Keck; William Wesselhoeft, Eberhard Freytag, Henry Detwiller, Rev. Christian Becker, John Rice, Christian Pretz, Joseph Saeger and George Keck, Directors; William Eckert, Rev. Philip Goep, Henry Ebner and J. V. R. Hunter, Trustees.

On June 17, 1836, the legislature granted a charter to the North American Academy of the Homœopathic Healing Art, and the institution then entered upon its interesting and eventful career. The incorporators completed the organization and adopted a constitution, the second article reading as follows:

"The Academy shall consider every member of a Homœopathic Society in the United States as a member of its own body, and shall grant to all equal privileges in the use of what has been accomplished by means of its enterprise, according to conditions hereafter mentioned, without demanding therefor, generally a stipulated contribution."

The constitution provided for a thorough course of study, medical and otherwise, which was as follows: Clinical instruction, examination of the sick, and semiotics, pharmacodynamics and materia medica; pharmaceutics and medical botany; dietetics; special therapeutics, surgery and obstetrics; medical jurisprudence; general therapeutics; symptomatology and human pathology; physiology and anatomy; comparative physiology and comparative anatomy; zoology, phytozoology and mineralogy; chemistry, physics, geology, astronomy and mathematics; history of medicine and natural sciences; Greek, Latin and German languages.

The faculty of the academy comprised the following experienced physicians: Drs. Hering, William Wesselhoeft, E. Freytag, John Romig, J. H. Pulte, and Henry Detwiller. The last named resided at Hellertown, Northampton county, who on the 24th of July, 1828, had prescribed the first dose of homœopathic medicine ever given in Pennsylvania. The remedy was pulsatilla, given to a lady at Bethlehem on whom several doctors had tried all their remedies without success, and he cured her very speedily by its use.

The plans contemplated a commodious 3-story brick, triple structure, in reality a large main building, with transverse wings at its ends, but they could not be carried out. A large lot on the east side of Penn street, south of Hamilton, 250 feet front and 230 feet deep, admittedly a superior location, was secured and on this lot the two wings were erected in their respective positions according to the plans but not the main building.

Annual sessions were held in these two wings from November 1st to August 1st for a period of six years, from 1836 to 1842, and the academy was apparently in a promising, if not a flourishing, condition; then a crisis fell upon the institution from an unexpected quarter which resulted in its complete ruin, and this crisis was the financial embarrassment of its treasurer, John Rice, and the failure of the Northampton Bank of Allentown of which he was the president.

As Allentown was then but a small struggling country town with no prospects of an early resumption, the above named faculty deemed it prudent to separate and introduce homœopathy into the different sections where they resided. Accordingly, Dr. Hering, the president of the academy returned to Philadelphia, where he became very eminent, and took a leading part in the organization of the Homœopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania. Dr. Wesselhoeft removed to Boston, and there he became one of the most prominent homœopaths of that city. Dr. Pulte went to Cincinnati and became one of the most honored physicians of the West. Dr. Romig remained in Allentown, and Dr. Detwiller removed from Hellertown to Easton, where he became known and respected throughout the entire Lehigh Valley. The action of these men in thus separating and introducing the new medical system into different parts of the country was doubtless a wise one, and the result was of much benefit to a great part of the population.

The property was sold in 1843 by the sheriff at public sale for the payment of debts to Philip H. Goep, and after holding it until 1851 he sold and conveyed it to the school district of Allentown. These wings are still standing, but they were enlarged towards the east ends, the window-sashes were altered, towers were added to the front ends, and rooms were constructed for school purposes.

The only homœopathic physicians who remained in the county after the close of the academy were Dr. John Romig and Rev. John Helfrich who had graduated at the academy during its existence. Their number was not increased until 1846, when Dr. J. Henry Helfrich, son of Rev. John Helfrich, who had just graduated at the Pennsylvania Medical College in Philadelphia (there was no homœopathic school in existence at that time), began to practice at Kern's Mill, in Lehigh county and a few years later he took up his father's practice in Weisenberg, where he remained until 1858, when he removed to the village of Fogelsville. In 1866 he left this place and went to Kutztown, Berks county, where he practiced for eleven years. In the spring of 1877 he sold out his business in Kutztown, and removed to Allentown. Dr. Helfrich was a man of wonderful endurance. It is doubtful whether any physician in the county worked harder during his life in the practice of his profession. Wherever he located he had a very extensive practice. He devoted his whole time to his chosen work, and no outside influences had any charm for him.

In 1849 his father had published a German work on homœopathic veterinary practice which was the first book on this subject published in this country.

From 1846 to 1862 no physicians in this county took up homœopathy exclusively, though several practiced it along with the old system. Such were Dr. Charles L. Martin, of Allentown, and Dr. Samuel R. Rittenhouse, of Millerstown, now Macungie. About the year 1865 the latter removed to Reading, where he became an exclusive homœopathist, and one of the leading physicians of that city. During the same period Dr. William Herbst, of Trexlertown, and Dr. Joshua Kern, of Siegersville, began to practice homœopathy. After 1835 many families in the county procured works on domestic medicine, based on the new system, together with a case of homœopathic remedies. In this way many who had no homœopathic doctor in their vicinity were able to cure their own ailments and prevent serious illness.

In the beginning of 1860, Frank J. Slough, of Claussville, this county, began the study of medicine, and of homœopathy in particular, with Dr. I. Henry Helfrich, then residing at Fogelsville. On the 3d of March, 1862, he graduated from the Homœopathic Medical College in Philadelphia as the first graduate of that institution in this county. Within a month thereafter, Dr. Slough entered into partnership with his preceptor at Fogelsville, and remained until November, 1864, when Dr. Helfrich removed to Kutztown, leaving his partner (who had shortly before become his son-in-law), alone at the former place. Dr. Slough continued to practice at Fogelsville until October, 1875, when he left that field in charge of his brother, Dr. Chester Slough, and located at Allentown. He established, in connection with his professional practice, a homœopathic pharmacy, locating it at No. 845 Hamilton street, corner of Ninth. This was then a new thing, not only in Allentown, but in all Eastern Pennsylvania, except Philadelphia. It proved a complete success and powerfully influenced the community in favor of homœopathy. Meanwhile, Dr. Slough's professional practice increased so much that in February, 1877, he sold the pharmacy to Dr. J. Henry Helfrich, who had moved into this city from Kutztown. Dr. Helfrich continued the business at the same place for several years, when, his practice having also become quite extensive, he gave it into the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Agnes M. Slough, wife of Dr. F. J. Slough, and she has conducted the business in a successful manner until the present time. Dr. Slough was a member of the American Institute of Homœopathy, of the State Medical Society of Pennsylvania, of the Homœopathic society of the Lehigh Valley, and of the Homœopathic Pharmaceutical Association of Pennsylvania. Their daughters became graduate pharmacists: Libbie O. (the wife of Horace A. Luckenbach, of Bethlehem), in 1879, and Minnie H. A., in 1895, and they were actively engaged in the business for a number of years.

It is just to mention that Dr. Wm. Wesselhoeft of Bath, in Northampton county was among the first homœopathic physicians in the United States and he became an enthusiastic advocate of the new system. In the fall of 1830, he began to make weekly visits to the home of Rev. John Helfrich in Weisenberg township, about a mile west of Ziegel Church, for the purpose of instructing him in the practice of homœopathy, and there a number of patients were regularly present to put the new healing system to a practical test. The results were very encouraging and the meetings were kept up until Aug. 23, 1834. Then a society was organized called "The Homœopathic Society of Northampton and Adjacent Counties," including Lehigh county. The members from Lehigh county were Rev. Helfrich, Dr. John Romig, of Allentown, Dr. Joseph Pulte, of Trexlertown, and Dr. Adolph Bauer, of Lynn township. Dr. Pulte's ability and prominence afterward came to be recognized and appreciated at Cincinnati, Ohio, by the erection of the Pulte-Homœopathic Medical College in his honor, he having located there and practiced the new system of medicine in a most successful manner.

The society held regular meetings at Allentown and Bethlehem, and also at the residences of its members, and their natural result was the establishment of the academy in 1835.

Among the students of the Allentown Homœopathic school was Dr. P. Scheurer who was born in Lehigh county, Aug. 18, 1799, and labored in the ministry for fifty years. Ill health induced him to read medical books and in 1839 he became interested in homœopathy and practiced successfully until his death at Hanover, April 20, 1875.

Dr. John Henry Floto received a diploma from the institution and located in California, where, in January, 1896, he enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest practicing homœopathist in the world.

Dr. Christian Frederic Geist was a member of the academy in 1836 and afterward practiced in Boston.

Dr. Charles Haeseler graduated in 1836, and located first at Lewistown and later at Pottsville.

Dr. Jacob Schmidt, born at Kreuznach, Germany, June 29, 1813, received a degree at the Allentown Academy and located at Baltimore.

The Lehigh Valley Homœopathic Medical Society was organized at Allentown in April 7, 1881, with Dr. Daniel Yoder as president, Dr. F. J. Slough as secretary, and Dr. W. A. Hassler as treasurer, and the organization has been maintained until the present time. The membership now numbers 30.

The Homœopathic Pharmaceutical Society of Pennsylvania was organized at Allentown in 1881 and this was the first society of this school of medicine in the world. Dr. F. E. Boericke, of Philadelphia, was selected as the president and Dr. F. J. Slough, of Allentown, as the secretary; and its organization has been maintained successfully until the present time. When Dr. Boericke died, Dr. Slough became his successor and he filled this position until his death in 1914.

A Free Homœopathic Dispensary was established at Allentown in 1883 but it was maintained for only a few years when it was discontinued.

REGISTERED PHYSICIANS OF LEHIGH COUNTY.

Name.	Graduated.	College.	Registered.	Residence.
S. A. Apple,	1869.	Jefferson,	1869.	Allentown.
C. H. Apple,	1881.	Jefferson,	1881.	Zionsville.
William Alden,	1889.	Harvard,	1913.	Allentown.
Sherman E. Ayers,	1889.	Eclectic N. Y.,	1907.	Philadelphia.
Roderick E. Albright,	1896.	Jefferson,	1896.	Allentown.
O. D. Arner,	1898.	Medico-Chi.,	1898.	Cementon.
L. B. Balliet,	1854.	U. of P.,	1898.	Unionville.
S. K. Berndt,	1863.	Jefferson,	1863.	Alburtis.
Louis C. Berkemeyer,	1863.	1890.	Allentown.
J. K. Bowers,	1874.	Amer. Univ.,	Allentown.
E. M. S. Beaver,	1874.	Jefferson,	Macungie.
Wilson S. Berlin,	1878.	Jefferson,	Allentown.
John Aug. Brobst,	1885.	Baltimore,	1885.	Allentown.
Chas. H. Brobst,	1888.	Medico-Chi.,	1888.	Macungie.
Harvey F. Bean,	1889.	Jefferson,	1889.	Emaus.
Augustine A. Bancroft,	1869.	Hahnemann,	1889.	Allentown.
Oscar F. Blank,	1889.	New York,	1890.	West Bethlehem.
Martin J. Backenstoe,	1890.	U. of P.,	Emaus.
Cornelius Bartholomew,	1878.	Jefferson,	1890.	Allentown.
A. J. Becker,	1885.	Hahnemann,	1891.	Catasauqua.
Elmer C. Busch,	1892.	Jefferson,	1892.	West Bethlehem.
William B. Brader,	1885.	U. of P.,	1893.	White Haven.
Albert J. Bittner,	1893.	Boston,	1894.	Allentown.
Joseph E. Blank,	1886.	Jefferson,	1894.	Wilkes-Barre.
Alfred Barrall,	1882.	Jefferson,	1895.	Allentown.
Robert Blakeslee,	Catasauqua.
Peter O. Bleiler,	1876.	Jefferson,	Allentown.
John S. Behn,	1894.	Hahnemann,	1896.	Bethlehem.
Edwin M. Bingaman,	1895.	Jefferson,	1896.	Zionsville.
John N. Bauer,	1896.	Jefferson,	1896.	Allentown.
Jacob F. Butz,	1899.	U. of P.,	1900.	Allentown.
Wm. A. Backenstoe,	1910.	Medico-Chi.,	1901.	Emaus.
Geo. H. Boyer,	1903.	Maryland,	1903.	Allentown.
Dewitt Bingler,	1890.	Jefferson,	1904.	Allentown.
John P. Brown,	1886.	Maryland,	1906.	Allentown.
Raymond H. Bloss,	1906.	Medico-Chi.,	1907.	W. Bethlehem.
Fred. R. Bausch,	1907.	Southern U.,	1907.	Allentown.
Elmer E. Behler,	1907.	Medico-Chi.,	1907.	Germansville.
Clarence L. Boyd,	1909.	Baltimore,	1909.	Allentown.
Wilbur A. Bachman,	1909.	Baltimore,	1909.	Rittersville.
Frank S. Boyer,	1909.	Baltimore,	1910.	Allentown.
Maurice B. Burstan,	1907.	Philadelphia,	1912.	Allentown.
Jacob A. Bear,	1901.	Baltimore,	1912.	Easton.
Samuel A. Brown,	1907.	New Jersey,	1913.	Allentown.
Thomas E. Cooper,	1881.	Louisville, N. C.,	Coopersburg.
I. D. Christman,	1876.	U. of P.,	Allentown.
H. S. Clemens,	1862.	U. of P.,	Allentown.
L. S. Collins,	1870.	Eclectic,	Friedensville.
James W. Cole,	1882.	Jefferson,	Allentown.
Morris F. Cawley,	1888.	U. of P.,	1888.	Allentown.
Anna C. Clarke,	1890.	Michigan,	Allentown.
Henry O. Carmichael,	1896.	Tenn. Univ.,	1899.	Lewisburg.
R. S. Clymer,	1902.	Chicago U.,	1903.	Allentown.
Ralph O. Clock,	1905.	U. of P.,	1909.	Allentown.
John H. Dickensied,	1847.	U. of P.,	Lower Milford.

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Name.	Graduated.	College.	Registered.	Residence.
Charles V. Dare,	1854.	Hahnemann,	1886.	Bradford County.
John H. Diller,	1868.	Jefferson,	Emaus.
Henry L. Dunnell,	1870.	N. Y. City,	1892.	Allentown.
Schuyler H. Deck,	1901.	Eclec. Cinci.,	1901.
William T. Davis,	1896.	U. of P.,	1901.	Camden.
Mahlon B. Dill,	1881.	Jefferson,	Shimersville.
E. H. Dickenshied,	1881.	U. of P.,	Lower Milford.
George S. Deibert,	1910.	Temple Univ.,	1911.	Allentown.
Edwin J. Deibert,	1910.	Medico-Chi.,	1911.	Allentown.
Wm. B. Erdman,	1860.	U. of P.,	Macungie.
Frank C. Erdman,	1866.	U. of P.,	Centre Valley.
Albert J. Erdman,	1872.	Jefferson,	Sagersville.
J. D. Erdman,	1872.	U. of P.,	Macungie.
William L. Estes,	1877.	U. of Va.,	1886.	South Bethlehem.
Horace C. Erb,	1888.	Medico-Chi.,	1888.	Steinsville.
William W. Eschbach,	1892.	Jefferson,	1893.	Allentown.
Edwin F. Eshelman,	1893.	Jefferson,	1893.	Stains Corner.
Leo Fink Elstein,	1895.	Germany,	1898.	Wilkes-Barre.
John T. Eckert, Jr.,	1903.	U. of P.,	1903.	Allentown.
Howard B. Erdman,	1906.	U. of P.,	1907.	Macungie.
Frans O. Ericksson,	1900.	Sweden,	1910.	Allentown.
William L. Estes, Jr.,	1911.	Baltimore,	1910.	South Bethlehem.
Jacob Feisel,	1841.	Berlin, Germany,	Easton.
Gustave F. Fox,	1865.	N. Y. Med. C.,	1886.	Bethlehem.
A. B. Fetherolf,	1865.	Bellevue Hosp.,	Litzenberg.
O. Fegley,	1867.	U. of P.,	Allentown.
D. W. W. Follweiler,	1870.	Med. Hosp. Chic.,	Lynnport.
S. C. B. Fogel,	1874.	U. of P.,	Fogelsville.
D. D. Fritsch,	1876.	U. of P.,	Macungie.
Gerhard W. Frick,	1876.	U. of P.,	1889.	Allentown.
J. A. Fetherolf,	1883.	Jefferson,	Slatington.
Harry C. Fuller,	1885.	Jefferson,	Catasauqua.
Robert D. Fry,	1890.	Jefferson,	Centre Valley.
Howard A. Fehr,	1894.	Hahnemann,	1894.	Allentown.
Robert J. Fry,	1899.	U. of P.,	1900.
Fred. A. P. Fetherolf,	1902.	U. of P.,	1902.	Allentown.
William J. Fetherolf,	1906.	Medico-Chi.,	1906.	Steinsville.
Adolf H. Friedman,	1907.	Hahnemann,	1908.	Allentown.
Charles S. Fleming,	1906.	Hahnemann,	1908.	Allentown.
Henry A. Grim,	1855.	U. of P.,	Allentown.
I. D. Graver,	1870.	Bellevue Hosp.,	Steinsville.
Nathaniel C. E. Guth,	1873.	Baltimore,	1893.	Allentown.
Edward Gruver,	1874.	U. of P.,	1893.	Allentown.
M. O. Greenawald,	1872.	U. of P.,	1906.	Allentown.
E. A. Gerhart,	1884.	Baltimore,	1891.	Kresgeville.
William D. Garvin,	1885.	Hahnemann,	1886.	Friedensville.
Frank A. Goris,	1889.	Hahnemann,	1890.	West Bethlehem.
William H. Greiss,	1905.	U. of P.,	1906.	Allentown.
Victor J. Gangwere,	1907.	Medico-Chi.,	1907.	Rittersville.
Arthur F. Gerberich,	1907.	Medico-Chi.,	1909.	Rittersville.
John H. Helfrich,	1846.	Med. Chi.,	Allentown.
William S. Herbst,	1855.	Jefferson,	Trexlerstown.
W. T. Hallman,	1862.	U. of P.,	Neffsville.
M. E. Hornbeck,	1865.	U. of P.,	Catasauqua.
Henry Helfrich,	1856.	Allentown.
William A. Hassler,	1866.	Jefferson,	Allentown.
W. K. Kistler,	1868.	Bellevue,	Germansville.
W. H. Hartzell,	1873.	Jefferson,	Allentown.
John A. H. Helfrich,	1875.	Hahnemann,	Emaus.
Monroe J. Holben,	1875.	Hahnemann,	Slatington.
Harvey Y. Horn,	1879.	Jefferson,	Coplay.
Palm E. Helfrich,	1880.	Hahnemann,
Roger Hunt,	1882.	Homeo. N. Y.,	Fogelsville.
Daniel Hiestand,	1880.	U. of P.,	Catasauqua.
W. H. Hamersly,	1881.	U. of P.,	Mechanicsville.
Andrew H. Howard,	1883.	U. of P.,	Catasauqua.
William F. Hertzog,	1880.	Long I. Col.,	1885.	Allentown.
John Hoffman,	1885.	Lancaster City.
George H. Haas,	1887.	Hahnemann,	Lyon Valley.
Henry H. Herbst,	1881.	U. of P.,	Allentown.
Irwin F. Huff,	1885.	U. of P.,	New Tripoli.
Franklin J. Holben,	1889.	Bellevue,	1889.	Lynnville.
Emanuel L. Howeter,	1889.	U. of P.,	1889.	Allentown.
A. Eugene Heimbach,	1890.	Hahnemann,	Allentown.
Mattie Margaret Hassler,	1892.	Ohio,	Allentown.
William H. Hacker,	1888.	Hahnemann,	1892.	Wilkes-Barre.
Augustus W. Hendricks,	1893.	Jefferson,	1893.	Allentown.
Erwin F. Huebner,	1894.	U. of P.,	1894.	Allentown.
James S. Hornbeck,	1895.	U. of P.,	1895.	Catasauqua.
George M. Hubbel,	1896.	Yale,	1897.	Bath.
William J. Hertz,	1898.	Medico-Chi.,	1899.	Sayre.
Nelson D. Haskell,	Mass.,
William A. Hausman,	1902.	U. of P.,	1903.	Allentown.
Rein K. Hartzell,	1902.	Jefferson,	1903.	Allentown.
Malcolm D. Holben,	1903.	Chicago,	1903.	Slatington.
William H. Herbein,	1879.	Jefferson,	1903.	Fountain Hill.
Chas. O. Henry,	1899.	Medico-Chi.,	1905.	Allentown.
Penrose W. Houser,	1889.	Baltimore,	1906.	Millerton.
Oscar E. Henritzy,	1898.	Medico-Chi.,	1907.	Slatington.
Milton J. Haas,	1907.	U. of P.,	1907.	Allentown.
Harold E. Hersh,	1908.	U. of P.,	1909.	Allentown.
William F. Herbst,	1911.	U. of P.,	1911.	Allentown.
Harry T. Hoffman,	1910.	Hahnemann,	1913.	Rittersville.
C. L. Jonstonbaugh,	1889.	Cincinnati,	1889.	West Bethlehem.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Name.	Graduated.	College.	Registered.	Residence.
Henry D. Jordan,	1902.	Med. Chi.,	1905	Allentown.
A. L. Kistler,	1883.	Hahnemann,		Allentown.
Josiah Kern,	1846.	Jefferson,		Orefield.
W. P. Kistler,	1867.	Bellevue,		Schnecksville.
John F. Kocher,	1869.	U. of P.,		Crackersport.
J. A. Koch,	1874.	Jefferson,		Egypt.
M. J. Kline,	1875.	U. of P.,		Guthsville.
Charles J. Keim,	1875.	U. of P.,		Catasauqua.
Robert C. King,	1876.	Bellevue Homeo.,		Limeport.
F. D. Koons,	1878.	Hahnemann,		Macungie.
Sarah Kline,			1884	Allentown.
Edwin Kirkpatrick,	1886.	Baltimore,	1886	Center Valley.
Thomas C. Krum,	1886.	Baltimore,	1887	Reading.
Alvin J. Kern,	1886.	U. of P.,	1888	Slatington.
John A. Kressley,	1889.	Hahnemann,	1889	New Tripoli.
Quentin Sol. Kocher,	1892.	U. of P.,	1893	Allentown.
Robert L. Klotz,	1893.	Jefferson,	1893	Allentown.
Eugene M. Kistler,	1893.	New York,	1893	N. Y. City.
Nelson F. Kistler,	1889.	Bellevue,	1893	Trexlertown.
Edgar J. Klotz,	1886.	Jefferson,	1893	Stemton.
Isaac I. Kalbach,	1893.	Jefferson,	1894	Zionsville.
Morgan W. Knerr,	1891.	Bellevue,	1894	Breingsville.
Frank J. Kessler,	1893.	U. of P.,	1894	Fountain Hill.
Harry J. S. Keim,	1894.	Medico-Chi.,	1894	Catasauqua.
Allan O. Kissner,	1896.	Baltimore,	1896	West Bethlehem.
Palmer J. Kress,	1895.	Jefferson,	1897	Hazleton.
Jesse G. Kistler,	1888.	Baltimore,	1895	Stony Run.
George Krauss,	1896.	Jefferson,	1901
John C. Kachline,	1901.	Med. Chi.,	1901	Allentown.
Willard D. Kline,	1901.	Jefferson,	1903	Allentown.
Asher G. Kriebel,	1902.	Jefferson,	1904	Lynnville.
Thomas B. Kern,	1909.	Medico-Chi.,	1911	Slatington.
Harry E. Klingaman,	1911.	Medico-Chi.,	1911	Vera Cruz.
Fred G. Klotz,	1911.	U. of P.,	1912	Allentown.
Arthur C. Kinsley,	1907.	N. Y. Medico.,	1913	Long Island.
Harrison Kern,	1913.	Maryland,	1913	Slatington.
W. Jerome Lochman,	1871.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
John A. Laros,	1862.	U. of P.,		Coopersburg.
F. M. Laubach,	1868.	Bellevue,		Allentown.
W. F. Loyd,	1878.	Jefferson,		Catasauqua.
Henry D. Leh,	1884.	U. of Md.,	1884	New Tripoli.
James H. Lowright,	1880.	Jefferson,	1885	Centreville.
John Lear,	1889.	U. of P.,	1889	Allentown.
Andrew G. Leib,	1888.	Hahnemann,	1889	Bethlehem.
William A. Laros,	1891.	U. of P.,		Griesemersville.
Walter A. Levan,	1890.	Jefferson,	1893	Millport.
George F. Lazarus,	1895.	Hahnemann,	1895
Wallace J. Lowright,	1898.	Medico-Chi.,	1899	Centre Valley.
John W. Luther,	1899.	Temple U.,	1909	Allentown.
Sanford T. Lyne,	1901.	Kansas City,	1911	Allentown.
Louis C. LaBarre,	1909.	Baltimore,	1911	Allentown.
Homer D. Leh,	1911.	Jefferson,	1912	Egypt.
Frank H. Long,	1909.	Eclectic, Md.,	1912	Coopersburg.
Nicholas M. Lawless,	1906.	U. of South,	1913	Allentown.
Charles L. Martin,	1844.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
Alfred J. Martin,	1857.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
Edwin G. Martin,	1856.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
Aaron S. Miller,	1862.	U. of N. Y.,		Saegersville.
Jacob N. Miller,	1863.	U. of P.,		Slatington.
Const. H. Martin,	1866.	Bellevue,		Allentown.
Charles D. Martin,	1867.	Bellevue,		Allentown.
Peter N. G. T. Meyer,	1866.	Groningen,		Allentown.
Edwin P. Miller,	1866.	Bellevue,		Saegersville.
Miles F. Mac Taggart,	1865.	Eclectic,	1888	Reading.
Thomas T. Martin,	1877.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
A. N. Miller,	1878.	Bellevue,		East Texas.
E. H. Mohr,	1881.	Jefferson,		Alburtis.
Lewis Mohr,	1872.	Chicago,	1903	New York City.
Charles D. Mandeville,	1887.	Dartmouth,	1907	Newark.
Jason H. Moore,	1882.	Jefferson,	1892	Pittsburgh.
Alfred C. Moyer,	1884.	U. of P.,		Allentown.
Howard P. Mickley,	1889.	Jefferson,	1889	Ballietsville.
Charles S. Martin,	1890.	U. of P.,	1891	Allentown.
John S. Mack,	1892.	U. of P.,	1892	Slatington.
Walter Mitchell,	1893.	Medico-Chi.,	1893	Allentown.
E. S. Mantz,	1899.	U. of P.,	1900
Alfred Malette,	1898.	N. Y. City,	1904	Allentown.
Robert Mackensie,	1897.	U. of P.,	1912	Allentown.
Henry J. McClellan,	1901.	Baltimore,	1902	New York.
J. Francis McAvoy,	1904.	U. of P.,	1904
Charles H. Muschlitz,	1905.	Jefferson,	1909	Slatington.
John D. Matz,	1907.	Medico-Chi.,	1908	Allentown.
Robert D. Morgan,	1910.	Baltimore,	1911	Slatington.
Jonas E. S. Minner,	1910.	Medico-Chi.,	1911	Egypt.
Matthew J. McKeon,	1910.		1912	Allentown.
Thomas G. Nagle,	1870.	L. Island,		Atlantic.
Calvin J. Otto,	1884.	Jefferson,		Allentown.
Philip R. Palm,	1846.	Jefferson,		Allentown.
Nathaniel C. Peter,	1888.	U. of P.,	1888	Whitehall.
James M. Pelles,	1876.	U. of P.,	1890	Allentown.
Welcome Niles Powell,	1882.	Jefferson,	1892	Allentown.
R. C. Peters,	1898.	Medico-Chi.,	1898	Allentown.
Jesse C. Pfaff,	1902.	Medico-Chi.,	1902	Slatington.
David H. Parmet,	1910.	Jefferson,	1910	Allentown.
F. W. Quig,	1862.	U. of Glasgow,		Allentown.

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Name.	Graduated.	College.	Registered.	Residence.
Sidney A. Quinn,	1907	Jefferson,	1913	Allentown.
John Romig,	1825	U. of P.,		Allentown.
William J. Romig,	1845	Jefferson,		Allentown.
N. Ritter,	1861	Jefferson,		Breinigsville.
P. L. Reichard,	1864	Jefferson,		Allentown.
George M. Romig, {	1868	U. of P.,		Allentown.
Henry H. Riegel, {	1870	Hahnemann,		Allentown.
William H. Romig, {	1870	Jefferson,		Catasauqua.
William A. Rentzheimer,	1871	U. of P.,		Allentown.
F. O. Ritter,	1871	Hahnemann,		Friedensville.
John A. Roth,	1881	U. of Maryland,		Seisholzville.
William A. Riegel,	1876	U. of P.,	1889	New Tripoli.
Daniel E. Richards,	1889	U. of P.,	1889	Catasauqua.
William J. E. Rush,	1894	Western U. of Va.,	1902	Slatington.
Josiah W. Richards,	1901	Medico-Chi.,	1902	Philadelphia.
Hope T. M. Ritter,	1902	Baltimore,	1902	Slatington.
Clarence C. Rogers,	1902	Medico-Chi.,	1903	Allentown.
Otto C. Reiche,	1910	Temple Univ.,	1911	Rittersville.
T. Emory Smith,	1910	Medico-Chi.,	1911	Macungie.
Frank J. Slough,	1864	Maryland,		Allentown.
F. C. Seiberling,	1862	Homeopathic,		Allentown.
D. S. Shade,	1862	U. of N. Y.,		Lynnville.
Thomas A. Strosser,	1856	U. of P.,		Steinsville.
E. G. Stinmetz,	1867	U. of P.,		Macungie.
William C. J. Slough,	1867	Long I.,		Hokendauqua.
J. W. Seiberling,	1869	Hahnemann,		Fogelsville.
R. T. Sowden,	1873	Bellevue,		Heynemansville.
Albert W. Sovereign,	1879	U. of Mich.,		Slatedale.
John J. Siggins,	1870	Baltimore,	1886	Allentown.
W. O. Smith,	1870	U. of P.,	1893	Philadelphia.
Sam. B. Swavely,	1878	U. of P.,	1892	Allentown.
P. E. Stein,	1877	Jefferson,	1895	Allentown.
Thomas A. Scherer,	1881	U. of P.,		Coplay.
Agnes M. Slough,	1883	Jefferson,		Slatington.
Augustus Soper,	1880	Ontario,	1888	Allentown.
Oscar A. Schaeffer,	1886	Baltimore,	1886	West Bethlehem.
Libbie Olive Slough,	1887	Hahnemann,		Allentown.
Edward H. M. Sell,		Vienna,	1888	Allentown.
William S. Schantz,	1888	U. of P.,	1888	Coopersburg.
Charles D. Schaeffer,	1880	U. of P.,	1889	Allentown.
Peter H. Steltz,	1888	U. of P.,	1890	Allentown.
Harvey H. Snyder,		U. of P.,		Zionsville.
Charles A. Selser,	1892	U. of P.,	1892	Allentown.
Harry S. Snyder,	1893	Hahnemann,	1893	Allentown.
George F. Seiberling,		U. of P.,	1893	Lynnville.
Frank B. Scheirer,		U. of P.,	1895	Allentown.
Robert E. Strasser,	1896	Jefferson,	1896	Macungie.
Luther J. Saeger,	1899	U. of P.,	1901	Allentown.
James S. Smith,	1895	Jefferson,	1903	Topton.
Ralph F. W. Statler,	1903	Chicago,	1903	Allentown.
Edgar C. Statler,		Chicago,	1903	Allentown.
Burton M. Swayze,	1891	Jefferson,	1903	Allentown.
Clinton J. Schaadt,	1890	U. of P.,	1903	Cementon.
Franklin M. Straub,	1905	Jefferson,	1905	Allentown.
Grant Sparks,	1895	Medico-Chi.,	1907	Catasauqua.
William H. Schaeffer,	1907	U. of P.,	1907	Allentown.
Henry N. Scholl,	1908	Jefferson,	1908	Allentown.
Ernest C. Schaeffer,	1908	U. of P.,	1908	Allentown.
Robert Schaeffer,	1908	U. of P.,	1909	Allentown.
S. Clarence Swartz,	1909	Hahnemann,	1909	Allentown.
Edgar L. Sowden,	1912	Jefferson,	1912	Slatedale.
John S. Schneller,	1910	U. of P.,	1912	Catasauqua.
Albert H. Trumbauer,	1885	Jefferson,	1885	Upper Saucon.
H. T. Trumbauer,	1862	Jefferson,		Coopersburg.
Walter Trumbauer,	1982	Jefferson,	1892	Coopersburg.
William B. Trexler,	1906	Medico-Chi.,	1906	Fullerton.
Henry S. Trumbauer,	1908	Medico-Chi.,	1910	Coopersburg.
Sam J. Weaver,	1872	Jefferson,	1886	Bethlehem.
Harvey T. Wickert,	1876	U. of P.,	1896	Emaus.
Peter O. Wickert,	1882	Baltimore,	1884	Emaus.
Elmer K. Willer,	1886	U. of P.,	1886	Trexlerstown.
Joseph Willer,			1884	Trexlerstown.
Charles B. Weida,	1889	Jefferson,	1889	Philadelphia.
David Williams,	1891	Jefferson,	1891	Slatington.
John H. Williams,	1893	Jefferson,	1893	Slatington.
Henry F. Waite,	1890	London,	1904	Philadelphia.
Frank A. Watkins,	1894	Minnesota,	1904	Allentown.
Harry M. Wasly,	1894	Medico-Chi.,	1905	Allentown.
Truman D. Wilkinson,	1899	Medico-Chi.,	1913	Easton.
Edwin Elmer Wiessner,	1903	Medico-Chi.,	1903	New Tripoli.
Milton E. Weaver,	1904	Baltimore,	1904	Allentown.
I. Fred Wagner,	1904	Jefferson,	1906	Allentown.
Thomas H. Weaver,	1905	U. of P.,	1906	Allentown.
Joseph N. Weaver,	1906	Medico-Chi.,	1907	Allentown.
David Wasserman,	1911	Medico-Chi.,	1912	Allentown.
Daniel Yoder,	1858	Med. Col. of P.,		Catasauqua.
Norton R. Yeager,		U. of P.,		Allentown.
Martin L. Yost,			1887	Safsbury.
Alfred J. Yost,	1893	U. of P.,	1893	Allentown.
Nathan Ziecenfuss,	1892	Jefferson,	1892	West Bethlehem.
Sam. F. Zehner,	1903	U. of Tenn.,	1903	Lynnport.
Charles H. Zellner,	1906	Baltimore,	1906	Allentown.

VETERINARIANS.

From the beginning of the first settlements until the year 1889, the practice of medicine and surgery in connection with domestic animals was carried on without any legal restrictions. Farmers and men of experience, who had become familiar, through long observation, with animal sickness and diseases, prescribed and administered the necessary remedies, and in every section of the county there came to be men who were recognized for their skill in curing domestic animals of their various ailments. Then (April 11th), an Act of Assembly was passed by the legislature of Pennsylvania which related to the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery, and every practitioner of this particular branch of the profession was obliged to be a graduate of a regularly chartered veterinary college, and to register his qualifications in the prothonotary's office of the county where he practiced; but all those who had practiced for five years before were allowed to register by filing the necessary affidavits, within six months after the passage of the act. This legislation was brought about by the efforts of the Pennsylvania State Veterinary Association, which had been organized in 1883. The first president was James W. Sallade, then of Pottsville, but formerly of Berks county. In 1909, the membership was 200.

In 1895, a State Board of Veterinary Examiners was established by an act passed on May 16th, and all practitioners after that date not therefore registered were obliged to secure a certificate from this State Board, which had to be filed in the prothonotary's office of the county where the practitioners resided. This act was amended in 1905, which authorized the Secretary of State to issue a license on the board's certificate, and this license qualified the practitioners to practice anywhere in the state.

The State Board was created for the purpose of looking after the sanitary condition of livestock in Pennsylvania, and in 1907, Dr. Otto G. Noack, of Reading, was appointed agent for the entire state.

REGISTERED VETERINARIANS.

Name.	Residence.	College.	Graduated.	Registered.
Henry T. Albright,	Allentown,	New York,	1891	1891
G. G. Blank,	Allentown,	Ontario,	1884	1889
A. H. Balliet,	Balliettsville,	Ontario,	1888	1889
H. F. Bauer,	Allentown,	Lehigh University,	1909	1910
Oscar J. Biehn,	Centre Valley,	Ontario,	1893	1894
William Beck,	Allentown,	1866	1904
W. H. Diefenderfer,	Macungie,	1864	1889
A. H. Dorney,	Allentown,	Ontario,	1889	1895
Reuben Deiber,	Lowhill,	1853	1889
J. A. Ettinger,	Alburtis,	1872	1889
Jacob M. Fetzner,	Coopersburg,	Ontario,	1886	1889
John C. Foelker,	Allentown,	1856	1889
Samuel J. Foelker,	Allentown,	Ontario,	1879	1889
Jacob F. Foelker,	Allentown,	New York,	1885	1889
Jonas K. Gerhard,	Siegfried,	1875	1889
James Goheen,	U. Macungie,	1879	1889
David D. George,	Washington,	1866	1889
Joseph Heckenberger,	Catasauqua,	Ontario,	1879	1889
Wm. A. Heckenberger,	Catasauqua,	1854	1889
Milton D. Harper,	Breinigsville,	New York,	1896	1898
Solmon Haas,	Lowhill,	1864	1889
James A. Haas,	Fogelsville,	American,	1892	1894
A. M. Johnson,	Siegfried,	1876	1889
J. H. Jacoby,	U. Macungie,	1864	1889
Morris W. Keck,	Slatington,	Ontario,	1888	1889
Josiah Kern,	N. Whitehall,	1860	1889
Theo. J. Koehler,	Fullerton,	1868	1895
John J. Kline,	Allentown,	Ontario,	1881	1902
Richard L. Kramlich,	Fogelsville,	Ontario,	1902	1907
Mellis E. Kuehner,	N. Whitehall,	U. of P.,	1912	1912
James Lichtenwalner,	Weisenberg,	1864	1889
Edgar L. Lackey,	Allentown,	1882	1889
Newton C. Lazarus,	Emaus,	American,	1894	1895
Chas. Mumbauer,	Vera Cruz,	1880	1899
John H. Mohr,	Allentown,	1847	1889
Daniel H. Miller,	Allentown,	1872	1889
Jacob Miller,	Salisbury,	1873	1889
Allen Martin,	Rittersville,	1889	1901
Aharah Ortt,	L. Milford,	New York,	1852	1889
Henry Ritter,	N. Whitehall,	1879	1889
Philip Roth,	U. Milford,	1854	1889
Willoughby Schmoyer,	Breinigsville,	1879	1889
Joseph S. Schultz,	U. Milford,	1869	1889
L. C. Shoemaker,	L. Macungie,	1874	1889
Elias Snyder,	Lynn,	New York,	1884	1889
A. S. Shimer,	Shimersville,	Ontario,	1889	1889
Wm. J. Schantz,	U. Macungie,	1850	1897
A. L. Schantz,	Allentown,	1871	1891
Albert L. Schantz,	Macungie,	1882	1895
Victor H. Weand,	Allentown,	1876	1889
Edwin Weand,	Macungie,	1875	1889
V. B. Weaver,	U. Saucon,	1878	1889
Wm. H. Wieder,	Emaus,	1872	1889
Wm. H. Weaver,	Coopersburg,	1844	1889
C. Daniel Werley,	Lynn,	Ohio,	1893	1895
Edward W. Widmer,	Allentown,	1844	1889

OSTEOPATHY.

A school of medical science whose therapeutic system constitutes a practice of treating disease in all forms without the aid of drugs was instituted in 1874 by Dr. A. T. Still, of Baldwin, Kans., who is known as the founder of the "School of Osteopathy."

The first college was started in 1892 in Kirksville, Mo. Since that time other colleges have been established in the principal centers of the United States, and there are now osteopathic practitioners in all the large cities and most of the larger towns in the country.

The practice of osteopathy has been legally acknowledged in forty states; and in many states there is an independent examining and licensing board, or an osteopathic representative on the State Board of Health.

A bill was laid before the legislature of Pennsylvania at the session of 1904 for the purpose of legalizing the practice in Pennsylvania, and passed, but not approved by the governor. It was, however, recognized in 1909, the act regulating the practice having been approved March 9th.

The osteopaths have been organized into state associations; also one national called "The American Osteopathic Association," but none local on account of the limited number.

The first graduated physician to practice osteopathy at Allentown was Dr. Sanford T. Lyne, of Kansas, Mo., who located here in 1898. He attended the "School of Osteopathy" at Baldwin, Kansas, and in 1901 was also graduated from the College at Kirksville, Mo.

The other practitioners here of this school are:

REGISTERED OSTEOPATHS.

Name.	Graduated.	College.	Registered.	Residence.
William H. Allen,	1909	Atlantic,	1909	Allentown.
Fred. W. Collins,	1893	New Jersey,	1913	Allentown.
R. Swinburne Clymer,	1901	1909	Allentown.
F. A. De Moits,	1909	Buffalo,	1909	Allentown.
Reinhard Deutsche,	1909	Atlantic, N. J.,	1910	Allentown.
H. Armitt Gilbert,	1909	Boston,	1909	Allentown.
Ole C. Lund,	1882	Norway,	1910	Allentown.
Helen Love,	1910	New Jersey,	1913	Allentown.
Stephen Rock,	1904	Charlestown, W. Va.,	1910	Allentown.

DENTISTRY.

The practice of dentistry was not carried on as a distinct profession in Lehigh county until about 1830. The first dental college was established at Baltimore shortly before that time, and the next was at Philadelphia in 1851. Theretofore regular physicians extracted teeth. The repair of teeth and the supply of false teeth then were rare, confined almost entirely to great cities and indulged in by people of means.

About that time and for twenty years afterward the persons who were inclined to dentistry would spend several months with a recognized dentist and under him acquire some practical experience then start out for themselves.

One of the earliest dentists at Allentown was George C. Hand. He started here in 1832. In an advertisement in 1849 he stated the following rates: Best teeth on gold plate $2.25; on silver plate, $1.50; on pivots, $1. Plugs of gold 50c; of silver 25c. He was located on the north side of Hamilton street, above Seventh. About the same time, Hiram Brobst advertised as a dentist on West Hamilton street, over Ruhe's tobacco store, where he attended to "filing, cleaning, plugging and inserting teeth, from one to a full set, on moderate terms."

In 1876 an act was passed—on April 17th—by the legislature of Pennsylvania which required dental surgeons who practiced in the state to be graduates of a reputable institution where this specialty was taught, and to register their diplomas in the county where they resided. The diplomas were to be registered within three months after the passage of the act. But the act was not to apply to any surgeon who had practiced dentistry for three years prior to its passage. The following statement shows the registered practitioners in the county, with college and year of graduation. Where no college is given, the year shows the time when the practitioner started.

The act of 1876 established a State Board of six examiners, who were to be selected by the State Dental Society, and this Board was to approve the diplomas before registration. This act was amended in 1897.

REGISTERED DENTISTS.

Name.	Residence.	College.	Graduated.	Registered.
C. A. Bachman,	Emaus,	Pennsylvania College,	1901	1901
Geo. B. Bleiler,	Allentown,	Philadelphia College,	1903	1903
Luther Campbell,	Slatington,	Baltimore,	1870
F. M. Deibert,	Slatington,	1901	1903
Geo. H. Diefenderfer,	Allentown,	Philadelphia College,	1912	1912

Name.	Residence.	College.	Graduated.	Registered.
M. D. Eroh,	Allentown,	Pennsylvania College,	1904	1904
H. P. Feldman,	Allentown,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1899	1899
Carl Schurz Henry,	Allentown,	Pennsylvania College,	1901	1901
Conrad A. Herwig,	Allentown,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1900	1902
Odillon K. Hoppes,	Wanamaker,	Medico-Chi.,	1903	1903
John H. Hart,	S. Bethlehem,	Medico-Chi.,	1904	1906
Henry A. Jelly,	Allentown,	Col. Union,	1896	1902
D. George Knecht,	Allentown,	Pennsylvania College,	1900	1900
Frederick Lichtenwalner,	Emaus,	Pennsylvania College,	1909	1911
Henry M. Lucas,	Allentown,	Pennsylvania College,	1905	1905
Chas. A. Miller,	Allentown,	Medico-Chi.,	1903	1903
Waldemar A. Muller,	Allentown,	Medico-Chi.,	1907	1907
Joseph N. Mertz,	Siegersville,	Pennsylvania College,	1905	1907
Eugene V. McAvoy,	Catasauqua,	Medico-Chi.,	1910	1911
Allan D. Noxon,	Allentown,	Philadelphia College,	1902	1903
G. Francis Paine,	New York,	Pennsylvania College,	1897	1904
Rollo O. Peters,	Slatington,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1909	1909
Raymond F. Peters,	Egypt,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1911	1911
Walter Richards,	Slatington,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1898	1899
Willard H. Richards,	Allentown,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1905	1906
John E. Rehrig,	Catasauqua,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1908	1910
Benj. H. Stuckert,	Allentown,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1899	1899
Maurice H. Spare,	Allentown,	University of Pennsylvania, ..	1905	1911
Oliver J. Scheetz,	Allentown,	Medico-Chi.,	1910	1911
Milton O. Trexler,	Allentown,	Medico-Chi.,	1907	1907

Dentists in Allentown who were registered elsewhere are Geo. J. De Long, Geo. A. Flexer, Richard J. Flexer, Geo. F. Hummel, Clinton M. Koontz, Geo. E. Kutz, Harvey W. Lyte, Granville H. Rabenold, Wm. H. Schaeffer, Howard S. Seip, O. H. Uhler, Howard W. Wiltberger, and Wm. L. Yocom.

The Lehigh Valley Dental Society, composed of fifty dentists from Easton, Bethlehem, Mauch

Chunk, Allentown, Catasauqua, Lansford, Emaus and vicinity, was organized in 1903. Dr. H. W. Solt, is president; Walter Richards, of Slatington, recording secretary; Geo. J. De Long, of Allentown, financial secretary, and C. A. Bachman, of Emaus, treasurer. The society is a member of the Pennsylvania State Dental Association, of which Dr. H. S. Seip is president.

CHAPTER XV.

WAR PERIODS.

WAR OF 1812-1814.

The second war with Great Britain, popularly called the War of 1812, was caused by the impressment of American seamen and seizure of American ships by Great Britain. An additional cause of the animosity against England was the activity of British emissaries in fomenting trouble among the Indian tribes in the West. On May 16, 1812, the British sloop-of-war Little Belt fired on the American frigate President, in reply to the hail of the American vessel. The fire was returned, and the sloop soon disabled, when a civil answer was returned. This incident hastened hostilities and war was formally declared on June 19, 1812.

The reverses that befell the American army during the year 1812 increased the activity of the Federalists, which party opposed the war and prophesied disaster. The brilliant exploits of the navy before the close of the year dispelled the gloom that hung over the people and restored their confidence in their leaders, while it justified the judgment of the Federalists, who favored the increasing of the navy and the opposition of the Democrats to it ceased. During the last six months of 1812 more than fifty armed British vessels and 250 merchantmen, with over 3,000 prisoners, and a large amount of booty, were captured by the Americans.

Governor Simon Snyder had, as early as May 12, 1812, issued an eloquent appeal for Pennsylvania's quota of 14,000 militia. The response to this was immediate. Three times as many troops tendered their services as were required. Lehigh and Northampton counties comprised the Eighth Division, commanded by Major General Thomas Craig and Brigadier General Conrad Kreider, Jr. The third and fourth classes of the First Brigade of this division, comprising a total of 462 men, were enrolled to hold themselves in readiness to march when called upon, in pursuance of the order of the governor as commander in chief. The report of Major Nicholas Saeger, Brigade Inspector, on July 1, 1812, showed that these 462 men were under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Nicholas Neligh, of the 118th Regiment, and Majors Peter Rumble (of the 94th Regiment) and John Zeakle (of the 13th Regiment). The enrollment included companies from several regiments, as follows: 101st, Capt. Jacob Gackenbach, 66 men; 13th, Capt. Geo. F. Coldoway, 68 men; 118th, Capt. John Shaeffer, 96 men; 94th, Capt. Henry Mertz, 60 men; 38th, Capt. Abraham Shaeffer, 60 men; Capt. Abraham Zerfass' Riflemen, 32 men; Capt. Abraham Rinker's Riflemen, 50 men, (both rifle companies offered their services to the Governor), and Capt. Peter Ruch's cavalry troop of 30 men. These troops were then constituted the 1st Regiment of the 1st Brigade in the Second Division.

The British movements up the Chesapeake Bay, which culminated in the burning of the capitol at Washington and the bombardment of Baltimore, aroused great excitement, and in August, 1814, Governor Snyder issued a stirring call to arms. Lehigh county responded liberally and sent out several companies for the protection of the sea coast. The Governor's proclamation was published in the Friedensbote of August 4th. On the 18th, Capt. Ruhe's and Capt. Rinker's companies met in full uniform on the market-place at Allentown, and on the same day a company of a hundred regulars under Capt. Schell passed through the town on their way from Reading to New York. Camps were established at Bush Hill, Marcus Hook, on the Delaware, and at York.

The Friedensbote of Sept. 8, 1814, states that on September 6th, Captain John F. Ruhe's company of light infantry and the rifle companies of Captains Abraham Rinker and George Dinkey marched to Philadelphia. These three companies comprised over 140 young men of courage, all well equipped. The newspaper states that Captain Rinker had served in the Revolution, and that his manly courage in offering his services in defense of the rights of his country at his age, then 58 years, redounded greatly to his honor. Captain Peter Ruch's fine troop of cavalry, numbering 30 men, left Allentown on September 8th. The infantry went into camp at Bush Hill and the cavalry troop arrived there on September 14th, but as there was no forage for their horses, they returned to Philadelphia and were quartered at the hotel of William Smith.

Captain Ruhe's company was called the Northampton Blues, and a member of it wrote a number of letters from camp which furnish considerable information. About 1,000 men were encamped at Bush Hill on September 16th. Colonel Lewis Beach was in command and a few weeks later the companies were ordered to march to Marcus Hook. On October 19th, the correspondent complained of poor bread, which made the men sick, and stated that often they had no salt or vinegar. The meat was good, but was tasteless without salt. The receipt of the news of the death of General Ross and the defeat of the British was celebrated with rejoicing. Videttes had been posted every ten miles between Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The soldiers remained at Marcus Hook until November 30th, when they were ordered to break camp and marched to Philadelphia. Colonel Beach's regiment of about 600 men was reduced by sickness to 400 men. Captain Ruhe's company arrived at Allentown in good order on Monday, December 5th, and on the following Sunday attended services in full uniform in the Lutheran church. The companies of Captains Rinker, Ott, and Dinkey, which were encamped on the Brandywine creek, five miles from Wilmington and thirty miles from Philadelphia, arrived home soon afterward, as well as Captain Ruch's cavalry troop, which assembled at Captain Ruhe's hotel on Dec. 15, 1814, by order of Captain Ruch. While these companies had not participated in any engagement, they showed their willingness to meet the enemy, and fully expected to be called into active service.

The news of Jackson's victory at New Orleans, Jan. 8, 1815, was received at Allentown February 28th. It was celebrated by the firing of cannon, illuminations, bonfires, and the marching of a torchlight procession, headed by a band from Bethlehem. A large number of people from the surrounding community, participated in the celebration, which was an occasion of great rejoicing.

The rosters of the companies from Lehigh county are as follows:

ROLL OF CAPT. JOHN F. RUHE'S COMPANY.

A complete muster-roll of the Fifth (Capt. Ruhe's) Company of the Second Regiment Volunteer Light Infantry, under the command of Col. Louis Bache, under the order of the commander-in-chief of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania of 27th August, 1814, and attached to the First Brigade, Second Division, Pennsylvania Militia.

Captain.

Ruhe, John F.

First Lieutenant.

Blumer, Jacob

Ensign.

Fatzinger, Solomon.

Sergeants.

Miller, William Kauffman, George
Dobbins, William Gangwere, Isaac

Corporals.

Mohr, John Swander, Daniel
Gangwere, Andrew Miller, John

Drummer.

Keiper, George

Fifer.

Klotz, John

Privates.

Raser, Benjamin	Mickley, Jacob
Stattler, John	Biery, Peter
Seip, Christian	Horn, Samuel
Kichline, Peter	Keiper, Daniel
Nagle, Leonard	Derr, Abraham
Weaver, William	Balliott, Barthold
Weal, John	Klotz, Andrew
Houck, David	Mohr, Jacob
Stattler, Henry	Kichline, William
Ebner, Henry	Houck, Jacob
Gutekunst, Adam	Spinner, George
Huber, David	Hutter, Charles L.
Keiper, William	Gossler, Jacob
Ruhe, Charles A.	Wilson, John
Mertz, George	Weaver, Charles
Swenk, Mathias	Gross, Henry
Haberacher, George	Wagner, John
Keiper, Peter	Ginkinger, William
Seip, Jacob	Reep, John
Good, John	Reichard, Henry

CAMP MARCUS HOOK, November 29, 1814.

I do hereby certify, upon honor that the above is a just and true muster-roll of Capt. Ruhe's company.

JACOB BLUMER,
First Lieutenant.

LOUIS BACHE,
Colonel First Regiment, P. V. I.

ROLL OF CAPT. ABRAHAM GANGWERE'S COMPANY.

Pay-roll of the First Company of riflemen, commanded by Capt. Abraham Gangwere, attached to the First Brigade, Second Division, Pennsylvania Militia, in the service of the United States, under the command of Brig.-Gen. H. Spering, Maj.-Gen. Shitz commanding.

Captain.

Gangwere, Abraham

First Lieutenant

Moyer, Daniel

Second Lieutenant.

Newhart, Jacob

Third Lieutenant.

Stein, Jacob

Ensign.

Keller, Adam

*Sergeants.*Dull, John
Minor, Pitkin
Quear, DanielBeidlemen, Abraham
Quear, Jacob*Corporals.*Keiper, Abraham
Long, JosephBickle, Daniel Nagel, Joseph*Musicians.*

Keiper, Jacob

Quear, Daniel

*Privates.*Poyer, John
Daniel, Daniel C.
Rose, Joseph
Swenk, Jacob
Frain, John
Keik, Daniel
Moyer, Nicholas
Keider, Joseph
Rhoads, Daniel
Brobst, Solomon
Ott, Jacob
Moyer, Abraham
Rhoads, John
Yundt, James
Litzenberger, George
Shoemaker, Benjamin
Kuntz, Philip
Hilman, Daniel
Hany, Charles
Kinkinger, James
Hoffman, Peter
Brobst, Henry
Hartman, Henry
Amhiser, Henry
Fisher, George
Floats, George
Good, Henry
Kentz, George
Long, Jacob
Kline, Mathias
Kammerer, Henry
Loudenslager, Peter
Loudenslager, John
Foght, Gotlib
Henry, George
Gangwere, Thomas
Hubenstine, David
Acker, Henry
Besh, George
Shivry, Jacob
Deal, John
Shriver, William
Besh, John
Woodring, Gabriel
Good, Michael
Flexer, John
Reichenbach, Jacob
Hamor, Jacob
Druckenmiller, Michael Miller, JohnNerfer, John
Frack, Jacob
Nagel, Jacob
Shantz, John
Miller, John, Jr.
Guishler, John
Rinebolt, Cornelius
Hill, George
Sloufer, William
Fryman, Michael
Rider, Frederick
Rownolt, Solomon
Kuntz, Peter
Highberger, Adam
Rish, Henry
Heller, Frederick
Snyder, Henry
Minich, Peter
Herner, George
Rice, Henry
Seip, Peter
Breder, George
Ebenrider, Peter
Trexler, Israel
Koch, Jacob
Caldwell, John
Erich, Jacob
Fatzinger, Henry
Keifer, Elias
Erhard, John
Hower, Jacob
Herwig, Henry
Ott, Jonathan
Flower, John
Snyder, John
Mushlitz, Jacob
Poe, Michael
Sentle, Michael
Lehr, George
Nagel, Philip
Rau, Conrad
Weil, Conrad
Luckenbach, Abraham
Hillegas, Jacob
Shontz, Jacob
Shontz, Henry
Heller, Jeremiah
Wetsel, George
Good, Solomon

I certify, upon honor, that this muster-roll exhibits a true statement of the number of men in my company, attached to One Hundred and Eighteenth Regiment, First Brigade, Seventh Division, Pennsylvania Militia, in the service of the United States.

ABRAHAM GANGWERE,
Captain.

I believe the above to be correct.

CHRISTOPHER J. HUTTER,
Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding.

I certify that the company commanded by Capt. Abraham Gangwere is now in the service of the United States, under order of Brig.-Gen. H. Spear- ing, commandant militia district.

THOMAS J. ROGERS,
Brigade Major.

Marcus Hook Camp, Oct. 23, 1814.

ROLL OF CAPT. ABRAHAM RINKER'S COMPANY.

CAMP DUPONT, Nov. 13, 1814

A true list of Capt. Abraham Rinker's company of the Eighteenth Section of Riflemen, commanded by Col. Thomas Humphrey.

*Sergeants.*Knauss, Peter
Lehr, PeterMarck, Jacob
Strouse, John*Corporals.*Shiffert, John
Nunemacker, GeorgeStoer, Conrad Keck, John*Musician.*

Wotring, Ferdinand

*Privates.*Bower, Henry Siegfried, Daniel
Hertz, Henry
Mayer, George
Smith, Adam
Hartzel, Jacob
Reinbold, John
Lucas, Solomon
Strouse, George
Yohe, Jacob
Lehr, Michael
Lehr, Adam
Mensch, Adam
Hartzel, Andrew
Diffenderfer, Jonathan
Deily, Jacob
Yost, Nathaniel
Whiteman, Jacob
Moritz, George
Hartzel, Solomon
Gordon, Jacob
Horlocher, George
Good, Adam
Kunckel, Lewis
Beidelman, Jacob
Hecker, Adam
Lower, Michael
Swander, Henry
Fetzer, Daniel
Shaffer, George
Billig, JohnDeily, Christian
Hartzel, Adam
Steinberger, Peter
Kershner, Conrad
Doll, Charles
Kloekner, Solomon
Whiteman, John
Shoudt, Michael
Nunemacker, Henry
Keck, David
Eschenbach, Daniel
Bortz, George
Newhard Frederick
Steinberger, Jacob
Spangler, Jonas
Sharrer, Adam
Bachman, Jacob
Rou, or Rau, John (quit
the company Sept. 23, 1814).
Klotz, Peter (quit the company Sept. 23, 1814).
Ealer, John
Mensch, Peter
Frantz, Henry
Moll, Peter
Cock, Peter (enlisted in the army of the United States Oct. 2, 1814).

The above statement commences from the 23d day of September, 1814, to the 31st day of October, 1814, making one month and eight days complete.

We do certify that the within list is a true statement, on honor, this 13th day of November, 1814.
 ABRAHAM RINKER, Captain.
 THOMAS HUMPHREY,
Colonel First R. P. V. R.

ROLL OF CAPT. GEORGE DINKEY'S COMPANY.

CAMP DUPONT, Nov. 18, 1814.

A true list of Capt. George Dinkey's company of the Eighteenth Section of Riflemen, commanded by Col. Thomas Humphrey.

Sergeants.

Saeger, Daniel Traxel, Christian
 Lentz, John Beiper, John

Corporals.

Deck, Casper George, John
 Kelly, John Meyer, Henry

Musician.

Meyer, Daniel

Privates.

Anewalt, John	Schad, John
Sheirer, Solomon	Yeal, John
Backer, Frederick	Siegfried, Solomon
Rincker, Jacob	Meyer, Godfried
Schlusser, John	Siegfried, Peter
Snyder, Jacob, Jr.	Snyder, John
Siegfried, William	Decherd, Peter
Snyder, Samuel	Snyder, John
Meyer, Conrad	Siegfried, Andrew
Zellner, Michael	Haas, Jacob
Handwork, Frederick	Sensinger, Daniel
Moser, John

I do certify, on honor, that the company commanded by Capt. George Dinkey is in the service of the United States, under the command of the General commanding the Fourth Military District.

THOMAS CADWALADER,
Brigadier-General.

Camp Dupont, Nov. 26, 1814.

I do certify that the within list is a true statement, on honor, this 13th day of November, 1814.
 CAPT. GEORGE DINKEY.

ROLL OF CAPT. JOHN OTT'S COMPANY.

Sergeants.

Frederick Wittman Martin Ochs
 Jacob Knepply Peter Wird

Corporals.

Thomas Genners Melchior Herben
 Elias Heller William Fogel

Privates.

Peter Shafer	John Hofman
Daniel Nederour	Mathias Dotrer
Philip Hoyer	Samuel Paul
Philip Jacoby	John Trap
John Brown	Philip Bucheker
Jacob Gangwer	Daniel Romig
Frederick Stoll	Henry Myer

John Henn	Philip Hewline
John Boskerk	Peter Weber
Leonard Bigenberg	Peter Will
Peter Beuhaker	Erhard Weber
Simon Shafer	Philip Jacoby
Henry Marsteller	John Givt
Henry Boester	Daniel Gangwer
George Thapp

CAPT. PETER RUCH'S CAVALRY TROOP.

This troop was formed in the territory now embraced in Whitehall, North Whitehall, and South Whitehall townships. The company entered the service of the United States on Oct. 12, 1814, and continued therein up to Nov. 30th, a period of one month and 19 days. Although a cavalry troop, the members were paid only for infantry service.

Captain.

Peter Ruch

First Lieutenant.

William Boas

Second Lieutenant.

George Keck

Cornet.

Simon Strauss

Quartermaster Sergeant.

Henry Wilson

Sergeants.

1st, Peter Burkhalter	3d, George Xander
2d, Solomon Steckel	4th, Jacob Steckel

Trumpeter.

Benjamin Kohler

Privates.

Jacob Biery	Daniel Mohr
Henry Bortz	John Mohr
Jacob Deichman	John Moyer
David Deshler	James Seagreaves
Peter Dorney	Daniel Snyder
Peter Good	John Stephen
Jacob Hains	Peter Troxell
George Kern	Jacob Schreiber
George Klotz	Peter Wannemacher
Peter Leisenring	Martin Weiser
John Leisenring	Michael Frack
Isaac Marshall

ROLL OF CAPT. GEORGE COLDOVEY'S COMPANY.

Captain.

George F. Coldovey

First Lieutenant.

John Arndt

Second Lieutenant.

George Miller

Ensign.

John Knidler

Sergeants.

Jacob Miller
Lewis Larosh
John Koull

Jacob Krammes
Daniel Dudt

Corporals.

Jacob Esterline
David Shaffer

John Wertz
William Laudenslager

Drummer.

Philip Myer

Fifer.

George Mertz

Privates.

Frederick Kemmerer
Henry Prich
Michael Weaver
John Rabenold
Adam Rickert
George Quaney
Henry Hittel
Jacob Gilbert
Jonathan Kemmerer
Daniel Buchman
John Brunck
Henry Daubert
John Dubs
Henry Funck
George Derr
George Smith
John Bachman
Conrad Meitzler
Henry Meitzler
George Snyder
Peter Kline
John Kemmerer
Godfried Diefenderfer
Peter Kayser
Joseph Homan
Peter Finck
George Karl
John Mohr
George Schmeier
John Snyder
Philip Richenbach
John Richenbach
John Hisky
George Krinamyer
Andrew Klotz
Anthony Lacleyder
Henry Mohr
George Reinert
George Schlicher
Daniel Draxel
Jonathan Shelhamer
Nicholas Fegley
David Schubert
George Kriling
Solomon Finck
Daniel Christman

David Norman
Frederick Came
Allick Mensh
Peter Hine
John Wagner
John Wertz
Christopher Ridnouer
George Flores
Peter Deal
Jacob Brish
Lewis Steler
Joseph Bachman
Henry Rice
Jacob Meitzler
Christian Dull
Michael Werly
Dabold Werly
Peter Grim
Michael Smith
Conrad Karsh
Christian Bozer
Christian Snyder
Henry Peter
Philip Ware
Conrad Smith
Philip Fenstermacher
John Holwig
Christian Kuntz
John Miller
Andrea Hanselman
Daniel Leiser
Henry Snyder
Christian Lutz
Eberhard Ohl
David Fretz
Abraham Jeintimer
Paul Bar
Charles Rose
Peter Snyder
Isaac Lefever
Jacob Wagner
George Neitz
George Dutt
John Harpster
Christian Willauer

I believe the above to be a correct muster of pay roll.

CHRISTIAN J. HUTTER,
Lieut. Col. commanding.

I certify that the company commanded by Capt. George F. Coldovey is now in the service of the United States, under orders of the General Commanding Military District No. 4.

H. SPERING, Brigadier General.

Oct. 25, 1814.

MEXICAN WAR.

At the outbreak of the Mexican War, in 1846, the local military company, the Harrison Guards, assembled in the square, prepared to leave for the front, but were not called to enter the service, as a company from Mauch Chunk was mustered in. Henry C. Longnecker, then a young attorney, became a lieutenant and also adjutant of a regiment, and participated in all the principal engagements under General Scott. Upon his return from Mexico he was elected district attorney. Among the residents of the county who served in the war were Major Herman C. Yeager, James Mickley, Daniel Newhard, Andrew Yingling, Peter Doane, William Mink, Henry Moose, Chas. Denhard, Edward Remmel, Jacob Remmel, James Smith, Jacob Deily, Peter Hauck, and Reuben Kauffman. Edward Ruhe enlisted, at the age of twenty, in Co. K, Second Regiment, Dec. 26, 1846, and died in the service near Puebla, Nov. 6, 1847. Jonathan Knauss enlisted in the service and died away from home. Levi Kraft, of Catasaqua, enlisted at Mauch Chunk. He afterward served in the Civil War and died at the Soldiers' Home, Dayton, Ohio. Horatio Good enlisted at Mauch Chunk, and in later years went to California, where he was killed by Indians.

In the summer of 1848 the soldiers who had taken part in the war returned and were welcomed north of the town by Capt. David Stein's militia company, and paraded through the streets of the town to the square, where addresses were delivered from the balcony of the Allen House by Hon. John D. Stiles and others.

John Kuhn was not among this number, but returned a year later. The confinement in a Mexican prison had made him insane and he is still remembered by old citizens as an eccentric character, known as "Mexico John."

Rudolph Kent, who, in 1830, married a daughter of Jacob Deily, of Hanover township, was a general in the war. His son, J. F. Kent, became a general in the United States Army.

CIVIL WAR.

On the 13th day of April, 1861, two days before President Lincoln issued his proclamation

CAMP MARCUS HOOK, Oct. 23, 1814.

I certify, upon honor, that this muster roll exhibits a true statement of the company of Pennsylvania Militia now in the service of the United States.

GEORGE F. COLDOVEY, Captain.

for 75,000 men, the citizens of Lehigh and Northampton counties assembled in the public square of Easton, to take action in behalf of supporting the National Government in the impending crisis. Patriotic addresses were made by Andrew H. Reeder, Esq., of Easton, and others, in which the two counties were urged to prepare themselves to sustain the President in his efforts to preserve the Union.

On the 15th of April, the President issued his proclamation, and on the afternoon of that day, the Secretary of War telegraphed to Governor Curtin that a call had been made on Penn-

Franklin Leh
Charles Dietrich
James Geidner
Ernst Rottman
Matthew R. Fuller
Gideon Frederick
Allen Wetherhold
Edwin H. Miller
Norman H. Cole
George W. Rhoads
Benneville Wicand
William Early
Marcus H. Sigman
Darius Weiss
George Hoxworth
William Wagner

John Romig
Charles A. Pfeiffer
William Wolf
Ignatz Gresser
James M. Wilson
Lewis G. Seip
Milton H. Dunlap
William G. Frame
Edwin M. Hittle
Wilson H. Derr
Joseph Hettinger
William S. Davis
Joseph Weiss
George F. Henry
Conrad Shlatterdach
Stephen Schwartz

nied them

ican

cted ville non, not ates'

at 8

arked

d at wing

the sday,

State

ania),

mediately

departing men, and prepared at the Eagle Hotel (at the northwest corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets), placing under each plate a $5 state bank-note, which, unfortunately, had no purchasing power upon their arrival at Washington. At 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 17th of April, the gallant band of volunteers, headed by Capt. Yeager, and followed by a cheering crowd, marched down Hamilton street (lightly covered with snow), to the East Penn Junction and took train to Harrisburg.

Those who subscribed the Roll were:

John E. Webster
William Kress
Solomon Goebel
Joseph T. Wilt
Jonathan W. Reber
Samuel H. Schneck
William Ruhe
Henry Storch

Daniel Kramer
Charles A. Schiffert
John Hook
David Jacobs
Nathaniel Hillegas
Martin W. Leisenring
Edwin Gross
George S. Keiper

with his company to Washington with loaded guns.

Several hours later, after breakfast to the company, supplied through the generosity of State Senator from Lehigh county, Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, the five companies were regularly mustered into the service of the United States by Capt. Seneca G. Simmons, 7th U. S. Inf., and with a detachment of 50 men, of Co. H, 5th U. S. Artillery, under the command of Lieut. J. C. Pemberton (who afterward became Lieutenant General of the Confederate Army at Vicksburg, and after the Civil War a resident of Allentown for a time), embarked at 8:10 a. m., on two Northern Central R. R. trains, of 21 cars, for Baltimore, where they arrived at 2 p. m., without any special incidents excepting the waiving of Rebel flags by young women at a female col-

HISTORY OF LEHIGH COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Sergeants.

Jacob Miller
Lewis Larosh
John Koull

Jacob Krammes
Daniel Dudt

I believe the above to be a correct muster of pay roll.

CHRISTIAN J. HUTTER,
Lieut. Col. commanding.

Corporals.

Jacob Esterline
David Shaffer

John Wertz
William Laudenslager

I certify that the company commanded by Capt. George F. Coldovey is now in the service of the United States, under orders of the General Commanding Military District No. 4.

H. SPERING, Brigadier General.

Drummer.

Philip Myer

Oct. 25, 1814.

MEXICAN WAR.

Fifer.

George Mertz

At the outbreak of the Mexican War, in 1846, the local military company, the Harrison Guards,

Frederic
Henry
Mich
John
Adan
Geor
Henr
Jacob
Jonat
Danic
John
Henr
John
Henr
Geor
Geor
John
Conr
Henr
Geor
Peter
John
Godfr
Peter
Josep
Peter
Geor
John
Geor
John
Philip

Mr George Michael

317 Sby St

Elmira

J. G.

John Ric
John Hisk
George Krinamyer
Andrew Klotz
Anthony Lacleyder
Henry Mohr
George Reinert
George Schlicher
Daniel Draxel
Jonathan Shelhamer
Nicholas Fegley
David Schubert
George Kriling
Solomon Finck
Daniel Christman

Christian Lutz
Eberhard Ohl
David Fretz
Abraham Jeintimer
Paul Bar
Charles Rose
Peter Snyder
Isaac Lefever
Jacob Wagner
George Neitz
George Dutt
John Harpster
Christian Willauer

joined north of the town by Capt. David Stein's militia company, and paraded through the streets of the town to the square, where addresses were delivered from the balcony of the Allen House by Hon. John D. Stiles and others.

John Kuhn was not among this number, but returned a year later. The confinement in a Mexican prison had made him insane and he is still remembered by old citizens as an eccentric character, known as "Mexico John."

Rudolph Kent, who, in 1830, married a daughter of Jacob Deily, of Hanover township, was a general in the war. His son, J. F. Kent, became a general in the United States Army.

CIVIL WAR.

On the 13th day of April, 1861, two days before President Lincoln issued his proclamation

CAMP MARCUS HOOK, Oct. 23, 1814.

I certify, upon honor, that this muster roll exhibits a true statement of the company of Pennsylvania Militia now in the service of the United States.

GEORGE F. COLDOVEY, Captain.

for 75,000 men, the citizens of Lehigh and Northampton counties assembled in the public square of Easton, to take action in behalf of supporting the National Government in the impending crisis. Patriotic addresses were made by Andrew H. Reeder, Esq., of Easton, and others, in which the two counties were urged to prepare themselves to sustain the President in his efforts to preserve the Union.

On the 15th of April, the President issued his proclamation, and on the afternoon of that day, the Secretary of War telegraphed to Governor Curtin that a call had been made on Pennsylvania for sixteen regiments and that two regiments were wanted within three days, because the capitol was wholly unprotected and it was feared that it would be attacked. The governor accordingly telegraphed an appeal to all parts of the State for men to come forward with the utmost dispatch for the defense of Washington.

No sooner had the news of the attack on Fort Sumter come to Allentown than Capt. Thomas Yeager, of the Allen Infantry (one of the three organized militia companies at Allentown), hurried to Harrisburg and tendered the services of himself and his command to Governor Curtin. Having been directed to bring his company to Harrisburg, he immediately returned to Allentown on the evening of April 16th and opened a list for volunteers in the company's armory, which was then at No. 716 Hamilton street. Men of all occupations, both old and young, responded to the call, and by noon of the following day, forty-eight had signed the roll.

The excited populace crowded the armory and the streets; the citizens packed a box with necessary articles of clothing, charged themselves with the care and support of the families of the departing men, and prepared a farewell dinner at the Eagle Hotel (at the northwest corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets), placing under each plate a $5 state bank-note, which, unfortunately, had no purchasing power upon their arrival at Washington. At 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 17th of April, the gallant band of volunteers, headed by Capt. Yeager, and followed by a cheering crowd, marched down Hamilton street (lightly covered with snow), to the East Penn Junction and took train to Harrisburg.

Those who subscribed the Roll were:

John E. Webster	Daniel Kramer
William Kress	Charles A. Schiffert
Solomon Goebel	John Hook
Joseph T. Wilt	David Jacobs
Jonathan W. Reber	Nathaniel Hillegas
Samuel H. Schneck	Martin W. Leisenring
William Ruhe	Edwin Gross
Henry Storch	George S. Keiper

Franklin Leh	John Romig
Charles Dietrich	Charles A. Pfeiffer
James Geidner	William Wolf
Ernst Rottman	Ignatz Gresser
Matthew R. Fuller	James M. Wilson
Gideon Frederick	Lewis G. Seip
Allen Wetherhold	Milton H. Dunlap
Edwin H. Miller	William G. Frame
Norman H. Cole	Edwin M. Hittle
George W. Rhoads	Wilson H. Derr
Benneville Wicand	Joseph Hettinger
William Early	William S. Davis
Marcus H. Sigman	Joseph Weiss
Darius Weiss	George F. Henry
George Hoxworth	Conrad Shlatterdach
William Wagner	Stephen Schwartz

The following drum corps accompanied them to the railroad station:

Major Amos Ettinger, fifer;
 William Hittle, drummer;
 Charles Denhard, bass-drummer (Mexican War veteran).

John E. Webster, the first on the roll, acted as the color-bearer.

At Reading, Adolphus Schadler and Enville Schadler joined the company; and at Lebanon, John E. Uhler. These three volunteers did not sign the roll, but their names appear on Bates' Official Roll.

The Company arrived at Harrisburg at 8 p. m. the journey on the way having been marked by no special incident. The men bivouacked at the old Pennsylvania depot, with the following other companies which had responded to the governor's call:

Ringgold Light Artillery, of Reading;
 Logan Guards, of Lewistown;
 Washington Artillery, of Pottsville;
 National Light Artillery, of Pottsville.

At one o'clock on the morning of Thursday, April 18, Gen'l Wm. H. Keim (of the State Militia, then Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania), ordered Capt. Yeager to proceed immediately with his company to Washington with loaded guns.

Several hours later, after breakfast to the company, supplied through the generosity of State Senator from Lehigh county, Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, the five companies were regularly mustered into the service of the United States by Capt. Seneca G. Simmons, 7th U. S. Inf., and with a detachment of 50 men, of Co. H, 5th U. S. Artillery, under the command of Lieut. J. C. Pemberton (who afterward became Lieutenant General of the Confederate Army at Vicksburg, and after the Civil War a resident of Allentown for a time), embarked at 8:10 a. m., on two Northern Central R. R. trains, of 21 cars, for Baltimore, where they arrived at 2 p. m., without any special incidents excepting the waiving of Rebel flags by young women at a female college. They dis-embarked at Canton, a suburb of the city, but upon discovering an excited mob which had filled the streets of the vicinity, upon the suggestion of Capt. James McKnight, of the Ringgold Light Artillery, (a veteran of the Mexican War, who at once recognized the animus of the mob to be directed against the new arrivals,) the volunteers only were ordered back into the cars. In a short time Marshal Geo. B. Kane appeared with a large force of city police to escort the soldiers to Bolton station, a distance between two and three miles.

Then the men formed in close column of two, with the Regulars at the head. According to Bates' History, the Allen Infantry held the centre of the column, but according to the survivors of this company they occupied the rear. The mob, upon observing the formation of the column and the march begun, were driven into a frenzy, and when Lieut. Pemberton and his Regulars left the head of the column and filed off towards Fort McHenry, the mob became more violent, but the escorting policemen prevented the column from being broken and it finally reached the station without any fatal results, although some of the men were bruised by missiles from the rioters, among them the following members of the Allen Infantry:

Privates Hittle and Gresser, seriously lamed.

Private Jacobs, struck on the mouth with a brick and lost his teeth, and falling unconscious fractured his left wrist.

Private Derr, struck on the ear with a brick, and as a consequence has since been afflicted with deafness; but, it was reported that he repelled this insult by striking his assailant with the butt end of his gun which tore off the latter's ear.

The troops found their way into a train of box cars which prevented further injury to them from the volley of cobble-stones and bricks which were thrown by the rioters, and the train finally moved off, passing over the Pratt street bridge (which had been set on fire) and reaching Washington at 7 o'clock in the evening, to the great joy and relief of President Lincoln and all loyal men.

Although the total number of these "First Defenders" of Washington was only 530, the morning newspapers of the Capital reported it to have been 5,300, sufficient to deter the Rebel soldiers, drilling on the opposite bank of the Potomac river, in their design to seize Washington and take possession of the capitol; and by the time Rebel spies and sympathizers in the city had communicated the correct number, other volunteers, notably the 6th Massachusetts and the 7th New York Regiment, arrived in sufficient numbers to prevent its capture.

The "First Defenders" were quartered in the Capitol, the Allen Infantry having been assigned to former Vice-President Breckinridge's room, which led off from the Senate chamber. They were at once visited by Speaker Galusha A. Grow, Secretary of War Simon Cameron, Col. John W. Forney, Hon. James Campbell, of Pottsville, and other prominent men from Pennsylvania, residing at Washington, who expressed great gratification that the soldiers of the Keystone State were the first to arrive for the defense of the National Capitol. On the next day, the 19th, they were visited by President Lincoln, who shook hands most heartily with all of them. He was accompanied by his Secretary of State, Hon. William H. Seward.

The following most interesting letter was written by Capt. Yeager to Reuben Guth, editor of the Lehigh Patriot (German newspaper at Allentown), the second day after his arrival at Washington; and containing many valuable details relating to a noteworthy occasion it is published in full:

WASHINGTON, Saturday Evening,
April 20, 1861.

Mr. Reuben Guth:

SIR: I suppose you heard of the trouble at Baltimore. We were the first men that crossed the "Mason and Dixon Line" on Wednesday [Thursday] last. The Secessionists in Baltimore retained our box of merchandize that the citizens of Allentown gave us for an outfit. Our trunks we received, but the box is wanting. Two of my men saw it in Baltimore when it was taken from the Harrisburg railroad train and placed on a baggage-wagon. We just escaped with our lives going through. I suppose you have already heard of it. Two of my men were hurt with clubs and stones. We have the stones in our headquarters.

Where is the other Allentown Company? We have no tidings of them here. The railroad is torn up between Harrisburg and Philadelphia. We have no news at all here—unless the North sends men here soon, and enough, there is doubt entertained about Washington. I presume you are aware of the arrival of a Massachusetts Regiment? They quarter in the Senate chamber. There are doubts whether any more Northern troops can pass through Baltimore. Colonel Foreny called on me personally after my arrival, took me to his office, introduced me to the army officers, and sent me shouts of joy for being one of the first from the Keystone on the ground. Partook of champagne and brandy, gave me 100 "Frank" envelopes, and as quick as they get all he will send more. The loyal citizens are calling every day in our headquarters to render service. A Miss Bach sent us some linens and things for those hurt fellows in our quarters, and white sugar and milk.

The booking establishment in the capitol is not well fixed. The government is fixing every minute at it. We got 59 new muskets last night; that is, muskets with each 15 rounds of ball and cartridge for each man, so there are 1,500 in the capitol. There are 80,000 more in the arsenal.

The Northern troops will all have to come by water—twenty-four hours from Philadelphia. There are men-of-war stationed at the mouth of the Potomac. That seems at present the only avenue for entrance of Northern troops. I presume you know that the government blew up Harper's Ferry arsenal preventing them from recruiting in.

A large amount of loyal citizens, descendants of Pennsylvania, residing here, came here and glory in our spunk in fighting through the riot on Wednesday [Thursday] in Baltimore, three miles from one depot to the other; but we fought through nobly and stand by the Stars and Stripes. William Ruhe and William Kress brought up the rear of the company, as I had no lieutenants. They showed fight with the butts of our old muskets. Oh, it was awful! You can not imagine. Ours was the first riot on Wednesday [Thursday] and on Thursday [Friday] was the second, when the Massachusetts Regiment, of about 1,000, fought through. They all had minnie muskets out of the Springfield Armory, and all loaded and 15 extra rounds; they killed a good many Secessionists and lost two men and some wounded. Good for Massachusetts!

Questions from the mob when we passed through; I had my men instructed to say nothing nor look around but stick to me; they did so: "Say, you traitors;" "Abolitionists;" "Abe Lincoln's Militia;" "Hurrah for South Carolina;" "Capital Success;" "Hit him;" "Stone him;" "Kill him;" "What muskets;" "No locks;" "No powder;" "Sponges to wipe cannons for Jeff Davis."

Right and left on us, their fists on our noses, you have no idea of the language, conduct, danger. The only reply I made was in one case: "Where are you going?" My remark was—"For my country."

The belief in Harrisburg when we left there, Wednesday [Thursday] morning, of all Curtin's administration and General Keim, was that we would be massacred in Baltimore, as we were the first troops to cross the Mason and Dixon Line, but they did not let us know it. I took the hint, but I kept it from my men. The reason was we were only a few hours in Harrisburg when General Keim called at my door at one o'clock at night and said: "Captain Yeager, go to Washington immediately; load your guns." Says I: "They are not in condition; no locks, no flints." He remarked: "They are good for clubs." When he mentioned the word clubs to my answer, I took the hint of an intended massacre in Baltimore, but I let my men drink freely to keep up their spirits so they should not take the hint.

About us being the first Pennsylvania Troops going to the seat of government for freedom, and not only of Pennsylvania but of all the other free States, this courage and brisk movement of ours has made us not only friends of Pennsylvania, but in all the Southern Union papers; and particularly Col. Forney, who called on us immediately and rejoiced in our courage coming through the plotted assassins, particularly not having good arms.

If the Northern men take the stand in this matter as I did, we will between now and three months march back to our native firesides with the "Minnies" on our shoulders, drums beating, trumpets sounding, Stars and Stripes in our hands and playing "Hail Columbia," and the perpetual "Star-Spangled Banner."

But this stand our loyal people of the free states must take immediately. Let them come in citizen's dress as passengers; they can be organized here. Send me a good, strong, sober and honest Allentown man for a second lieutenant, immediately in citizen's clothes. When he arrives at Washington, let him inquire for Captain Yeager, Penna. Volunteers. He will find us in a few minutes, as all the free states' men have known me by reputation already for the reason that I was one of the first of the Keystone State.

Colonel Forney gave me 50 franked envelopes and sent a messenger to see if I wanted more. Forney is a man, and so are the army officers I am acquainted with. Their acquaintance I got in this way: They send messengers to different quarters of the volunteers, rap at the door of the quarters, and inquire for Captain So and So. If he is in, answer "yes." The reply of the messenger will be: "Captain of the United States Army will send a message in a few minutes. In a few minutes a message comes in writing, addressed to Captain Yeager, Penna. Vols.: "I desire to see you in my office in one hour; office capitol, East, North or agricultural office, this number." In this way you find out where they are and sit. They all sit in full uniform, very complimentary, but fierce, savage, and resolute.

I will have my trunk full of orders, letters, calls, and instructions by the time I come home. I preserve them all for future information. I have a hat-full already. We are called to Major McDonnell's quarters every few hours through the day and night, all the captains, only to receive instructions. He is the main man, called mustering officer of the United States Army—fine man, 6 ft. 2 in.

This letter is dated Saturday night, April 20th, but I did not get it finished until Sunday night; so the latest is in and correct.

They established a post-office at the capitol yesterday for the benefit of all volunteers. All letters addressed to me must be addressed: Capt. T. Yeager, Penna. Vols. Tell Mrs. Yeager and my dear children and all friends that all is right and I feel well. Always send my wife word when I write.

THOMAS YEAGER,
Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Postscript: The government cannot get uniforms before 21 weeks. They don't care much about uniforms, but we will get all the overcoats in a few days. The other equipments are all first-class and plenty. We have not been on duty yet. To-morrow night we get the first standing guard with one-half the company in front of the capitol for 12 hours. I got two new men since; one on the cars at Lebanon, Pa., a very smart young man named Uhler, and also another young man from Harrisburg.

I expelled a Dutchman at Harrisburg for not obeying my orders. I stripped him myself, in the middle of the street, taking the whole uniform from him and left him naked except pantaloons, stockings, and shirt, and took all the money he had received at Allentown with the exception of ten cents.

George Roth, Gideon Frederick, and John Romig are fast on the way of being cured. George Roth got the fits in the cars from Washington depot. The army doctor soon had him in our quarters again all right. Plenty of private Union physicians call to give their services. The water is very good and we are just getting used to it at the right time of the year, in April. Shirts would be very desirable to us, checked and white ones.

We all had to take the oath of allegiance in Harrisburg by holding up our right hand to God and swear that we would support the Constitution of the United States and Pennsylvania, and obey the orders of our superiors. The oath was administered by Capt. Simmons, United States Army, Seventh Infantry, mustering officer for Pennsylvania Volunteers. General Cameron's son called on all the Pennsylvanians last night by direction of his father. He showed us a new invention of a pistol made in Connecticut, which the War Department ordered yesterday; 300, to supply the officers of the volunteers. They are the most ingenious invention I ever saw. They are only for the commissioned officers—as you pull the trigger, the cock springs right back again and so you shoot six times.

There are no uniforms yet. It is a question whether the Secession mobs at Baltimore took our box of clothing with all these handy things in. At Reminger's store they have an account of it and it is a correct one. Our trunks were all received. The Massachusetts men were served the same way with their outfit. They say theirs were worth $3,000. The uniforms of all the Northern men will be taken at Baltimore if they come as soldiers.

I wrote to Governor Curtin immediately about the Baltimore affair. Shirts would be very convenient, check or white ones, as we lost all ours. If any are sent they should be sent by express and the title captain omitted; merely Thomas Yeager, Washington Capitol, Penna. Vols.

If you see my dear father, give him my respect, good spirit, and my country to the last. I had no time to write to him yet, but will try to do so in a few days. I consider you all friends, except a few traitors in Allentown and cowards.

Once my solid, stern, iron constitution gave way,—the morning when we left Harrisburg,—when I shook hands with Wm. H. Blumer, as the cars commenced moving, about the contemplated assassination in Baltimore. He accompanied us to Harrisburg. In military, nothing will move me, but contemplated assassinations moved me. But I thought onward and forward, with a resolve to live or die for Washington though threatened assassination come from whatever quarter.

The ladies of Allentown, learning of the needs of the Allen Infantry, shipped a large box of shirts, underclothing and stockings to the company. The men occupied the capitol twelve days. During this time provisions and meals were meagre; fresh meats and vegetables were wanting; the pork furnished was green and unpalatable. All the more welcome, therefore, were the supplies (such as apples and fresh eggs), which were sent by appreciative friends at home.

Stephen Schwartz, after having been sworn in at Harrisburg with the company, on April 18th, received leave of absence to attend the funeral of his only child, and rejoined the company at Washington during the first week, accompanied by Charles W. Abbott and Theodore Mink, who also became members; and a third addition, George Junker, was made shortly afterward. Junker, while passing through Baltimore, was arrested, but he secured his release by pretending to be a deserter from Camp Curtin, at Harrisburg, on his way to join the Rebel army.

Twenty-eight members of Small's Philadelphia brigade were, by order of the War Department, assigned to and mustered into the Allen Infantry.

The five companies mentioned were reorganized into seven, and with the addition of three other companies, recruited at Harrisburg, Doylestown, and Carbondale, became the 25th Regiment, commanded by Col. Henry L. Cake, of Pottsville.

The Allen Infantry became Co. G, of the regiment. The lieutenant-colonelcy was offered to Captain Yeager, but he declined.

After leaving the capitol, the company performed guard duty at the United States Arsenal, opposite Alexandria. While there they were detailed, on June 8th, with the Ringgold Light Artillery, to cross Long Bridge and unload from boats some thirty large cannon and mount them on carriages at the Arlington Heights entrenchments. On the 29th, with other companies, they marched to Rockville, and then to Poolsville, Point Rocks, Sandy Hook, and Harper's Ferry, where, on the 4th of July, a skirmish took place with the Confederates. On the 6th of July they marched to Williamsport, crossed the Potomac to Martinsburg and went into camp. On the 15th the brigade marched to Bunker Hill, and thence, on the 17th, to Charlestown, and the following day back to Harper's Ferry, where they encamped.

The terms of enlistment having expired, General Patterson thanked the men and directed them to move by way of Baltimore to Harrisburg, where the entire regiment assembled on the 20th of July, and they mustered out of service on the 23d.

The thanks of the House of Representatives, which are rarely tendered, and only for most signal services to the government, were expressed in the following terms:

THIRTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

July 22, 1861.

Resolved, That the thanks of this House are due and are hereby tendered to the five hundred and thirty soldiers from Pennsylvania who passed through the mob at Baltimore and reached Washington on the 18th of April last, for the defense of the National Capitol.

GALUSHA A. GROW,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

On July 24th the Allen Infantry arrived at Allentown, and were escorted with bands of music, amid the ringing of bells, to the centre of the borough where an appropriate address of welcome was eloquently delivered by Robert E. Wright, Esq., in the presence of a large multitude, followed by a banquet.

On July 27th, Captain Yeager delivered discharges to the men of his company, which were dated at Harrisburg, July 23, 1861.

The muster-out roll contains the following seventy-eight names, with the ages of the men:

Capt. Thomas Yeager, 35
1st Lt. Joseph T. Wilt, 21
2d Lt. Solomon Goebel, 29
1st Sergt. John E. Webster, 38
2d Sergt. John A. Winne, 22
3d Sergt. William Wagner, 21
4th Sergt. Henry W. Sawyer, 26
5th Sergt. Geo. Junker, 26
1st Cor. William Wolf, 23
2d Corp. William Kress, 24
3d Corp. Ignatz Gresser, 25
4th Corp. Daniel Kramer, 25
Drummer, Geo. F. Henry, 32

Privates.

Chas. W. Abbott, 27	Edwin H. Miller, 28
Theodore Anderson, 31	Theodore Mink, 28
Francis Bach, 23	Thomas McAllister, 21
Henry Cake, 24	Henry McNulty, 24
Norman H. Cole, 18	Charles Orban, 37
Chas. Dietrich, 18	Charles A. Pfeiffer, 18
Wilson H. Derr, 18	William S. Ruhe, 51
Milton H. Dunlap, 18	John Romig, 28
Ephraim C. Dore, 28	Ernest Rottman, 44
William Early, 22	George W. Rhoads, 29
William G. Frame, 28	Jonathan Reber, 27
Matthew R. Fuller, 34	Lewis G. Seip, 26
Gideon Frederick, 42	Henry Storch, 19
Charles C. Frazer, 25	Marcus H. Sigman, 21
Edwin Gross, 25	Charles A. Schiffert, 18
James Geidner, 24	Samuel Schneck, 20
Samuel Garner, 33	Stephen Schwartz, 21
Otto P. Greipp, 21	Adolph Schadler, 23
John Hawk, 33	Enville Schadler, 18
Nathaniel Hillegass, 31	Francis Schaffer, 24
George Hoxworth, 30	Charles Spring, 28
Joseph Hettinger, 22	Charles Schwartz, 19
Edwin M. Hittle, 19	Adolph Stefast, 35
John F. Hoffman, 25	John Uhler, 19
Joseph Hauser, 58	Martin Veith, 23
David Jacobs, 22	John Weber, 26
George Keiper, 18	Darius Weiss, 18
Alexander Kercher, 19	Benneville Wieand, 18
Isaac Lapp, 19	Allen Wetherhold, 18
Maximilian Lakemeyer, 21	Joseph Weiss, 26
Paul Lieberman, 34	James M. Wilson, 44
Martin W. Leisenring, 18	Frederick Zuck, 22
Franklin Leh, 19

The following members of the company had been discharged before the muster-out:

Henry McNulty, Apr. 28, 1861.
Franklin Leh, May 9, 1861.
William S. Davis, May 9, 1861.
Lewis G. Seip, May 25, 1861
Daniel Kramer, May 27, 1861
Norman H. Cole, May 31, 1861
Milton H. Dunlap, May 31, 1861
Charles A. Pfeiffer, May 31, 1861
John E. Webster, June 25, 1861

In March, 1914, there were eight survivors of the Allen Infantry:

William Kress, Allentown
Wilson H. Derr, Allentown
Ignatz Gresser, Allentown
Jos. Hettinger, Oil City
David Jacobs, Bethlehem
Geo. W. Keiper, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Stephen Schwartz, Tiffin, Ohio
Samuel H. Schneck, Slatington

MAJ. THOMAS YEAGER, son of Henry Yeager, and grandson of Rev. John Conrad Yeager, was born Nov. 2, 1825, in Upper Saucon township, Lehigh county.

In 1859, while a merchant in Allentown, he organized the Allen Infantry and became captain of the company; he continued to be the captain until the breaking out of the Civil War, when he tendered the company to the governor, who accepted it, and it was mustered into the United States service on April 18, 1861, as one of five "First Defender" companies of Pennsylvania. It has been declared by students of the Civil War tactics that he saved the Capitol and President Lincoln from capture by the superior rebel force encamped across the Potomac, by his bold and defiant declaration to certain Confederate officers, while marching down Pennsylvania avenue, "We are 5,000 strong, and 10,000 more are on the trains right behind us."

He served his first enlistment of three months; and on Nov. 7, 1861, he was commissioned major of the 53d Regt. Pa. Vol. Infantry. He was recognized as a fearless officer. At the Battle of Fair Oaks, on June 1, 1862, he was suddenly shot while endeavoring to locate the enemy, who were secreted in a woods; and when he was picked up after the battle by his aid, James J. Hamman, his body was found pierced by three bullets and his horse's body by eleven. His untimely death caused great regret at Allentown, as well as in the army, more especially after it was learned that the President on the preceding day had commissioned him a brigadier-general in recognition of his bravery. Several weeks afterward, the body, through the efforts of Col. John W. Forney, was forwarded to his family at Allentown, where it was buried with unprecedented military honors in Union Cemetery. The grave is marked by a small marble shaft on the main driveway, several hundred feet west of the entrance.

Yeager Pest, No. 13, G. A. R., was named after him.

FIRST REGIMENT.

The second company which left Allentown in response to the President's call was Co. I, of the 1st Penna. Regt., composed of the members of the Allen Rifles, commanded by Capt. Tilghman H. Good, and the Jordan Artillerists, commanded by Capt. Wm. H. Gausler, both of Allentown.

In obedience to the expressed desire of the state authorities that companies reporting should consist of not less than 100 men, the two companies mentioned voted, at their respective armories, on the evening of April 17th, to consolidate.

At 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, April 18th the men assembled on Hamilton street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, and effected an organization by the selection of commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the two companies in equal proportions as follows:

Captain, William H. Gausler (Artillerists)
 1st Lieut., Emanuel P. Rhoads (Rifles)
 2d Lieut., Benj. C. Roth (Artillerists)
 1st Sergt., Abiel Heilman (Artillerists)
 2d Sergt., Edwin G. Minnich (Rifles)
 3d Sergt., Henry Fried (Artillerists)
 4th Sergt., Noah Trumbor (Rifles)
 1st Corp., Henry Trumbor (Rifles)
 2d Corp., Mahlon Fried (Artillerists)
 3d Corp., Daniel G. Miller (Rifles)
 4th Corp., Charles Mertz (Rifles)
 Musician, Julius Benkert (Rifles)
 Musician, Augustus Ebert (Artillerists)
 Privates from Artillerists, 23
 Privates from Rifles, 45

They marched down Hamilton street, accompanied by an excited and cheering throng of people, to the music of fife and drum, to the East Penn. Junction and took a train for Harrisburg, where they arrived at 3 p. m., and encamped in Camp Curtin.

On April 20th, the company was mustered into the United States service for three months as Co. I, by Capt. Fitz-John Porter, United States Army, and with eight other companies, constituted the 1st Regiment Penna. Vols. Samuel Yohe, of Easton, captain of Co. C, was chosen colonel of the regiment; T. H. Good, captain of the Allen Rifles, lieutenant colonel; and Thomas W. Lynn, major.

The men were supplied with muskets and 12 rounds of ball-cartridges. The ladies of Harrisburg provided them with two days' rations of boiled fresh beef and hard tack. The regiment was ordered to protect the line and bridge of the Northern Central R. R. from Washington to Baltimore, and re-open and establish communication between the two cities, which had been destroyed by the Baltimore mob, after the passage of the 6th Mass. Regt. the day before.

During the night of April 20th, the Regiment, under the command of Brigadier-General Geo. C. Wynkopp, boarded N. C. R. R. cars for Washington, but reaching within nine miles of Baltimore, they found Gun-Powder Bridge burned by the Rebels. They disembarked and went into Camp at Cockeysville, Md. On the way, in hot cattle cars, the fresh beef soured, and the men were without rations for three days.

Obedying the order of the governor requiring full ranks, this regiment lost a day, and finding the railroad bridge at Havre-de-Grace destroyed, could not proceed to Baltimore, and by this circumstance they lost the proud distinction of "First Defenders," though they were the first Pennsylvania regiment which reported for duty at Harrisburg and the first regiment mustered in and equipped in the state.

On April 25th, the regiment changed their quarters to York, Pa., where the men remained two weeks, drilling and preparing for the field. About six miles from York the regiment met a provision train, which supplied much-needed food.

On May 14th the regiment was detailed to guard the N. C. R. R. from the Pennsylvania line to Baltimore. The turbulent crowd opposed the way until Lieutenant-Colonel Good mounted a passenger car, and commanded them to make room immediately or take the consequences. This had the desired effect and the regiment proceeded through the city to a state asylum which was then in course of erection. Its presence here during the next two weeks assisted most effectually a sentiment in that city for the preservation of the Union. On the 25th it was relieved from duty there, and afterward, until July 8th, performed guard duty at various places, more especially at Frederick City, Md.

The following order was then received:

HEADQUARTERS, DEPT. OF PENNA.,

MARTINSBURG, Va., July 8, 1861.

Col. Samuel Yohe, Commanding 1st Penna. Vols.:

SIR: I am instructed by the commanding General to say that your Regiment has been selected to garrison this important post, on account of the confidence reposed in the administrative qualities of the commander and the heretofore good conduct of the Regiment, which give assurance of the safety of the depot, the inhabitants will be protected, and many now opposed to us made friends of while the lukewarm will be strengthened in their feelings.

I am sir, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

F. J. PORTER, A. A. G.

The regiment remained at Martinsburg until July 17th, then rejoined the division at Charlestown, and assisted in making demonstrations in favor of the army operating under General McDowell in front of Washington, until the 21st; then it was moved to Harper's Ferry; on the 23d to Sandy Hook, and on the evening of that day took the train for Harrisburg, where the men were honorably discharged and mustered out of service on July 26th. Immediately afterward Co. I took the train for Allentown, where they were received by a rejoicing, cheering multitude, and entertained with a fine dinner at the Allen House.

ROSTER OF CO. I, 1ST REGT.

Captain.

Wm. H. Gausler

Lieutenants.

1. E. P. Rhoads 2. Benj. C. Roth

Sergeants.

1. Abiel Heilman 3. Henry Fried
2. Edwin G. Minnich 4. Noah Trumbor

Corporals.

1. Henry Trumbor 3. Daniel G. Miller
2. Mahlon Fried 4. Charles Mertz

Musicians.

Julius Benkert Augustus Ebert

Privates.

Tilghman Albright	Alonzo Kuhns
James Albright	Henry Keiper
Henry A. Blumer	Benj. Kleckner
Wellington J. Blank	Thos. Laubach
Daniel Bechtel	James Leiser
Anthony Behlen	Tilghman Miller
David Bergenstock	Henry Miller
Nelson Crist	Henry Mohr
William Dech	Chas. Miller
Tilghman Dennis	Wm. J. Moyer
John Eichel	James McCrystal
Perry Egge	John Nonnemaker
Wm. Ginginger	Daniel Nonnemaker
Henry Guth	Andrew Nagel
Willoughby Gaumer	Jesse Ochs
Wm. H. Haldeman	Peter Rimmel
Oliver Hiskey	Edwin Roth
Jonas Heldt	Tilghman Ritz
Wm. P. Harris	Lewis Rehr
Peter Huber	Edward Rimmel
Ellis Hammersley	James M. Seip
Wm. H. Hilliard	Richard M. Saeger
Martin Hackman	Christian Stahley
Charles Haines	Charles Schwenk
Charles Hackman	Joseph Steble
David Hardner	James Stuber
Henry Haldeman	Joseph Smith
Thomas Keck	Franklin Trexler
Lewis Koehler	Henry Trexler
Solomon Kramer	Walter Van Dyke
Franklin Keck	George Wenner
Wm. Kleckner	Abraham Worman
Melchoir Kenold	Henry C. Wagner
Henry Kramer	Franklin Wasser

Charles Hackman, Lewis Koehler, Franklin Keck, Edwin Roth, Richard M. Saeger, Charles Schwenk, James Stuber, Henry Trexler, and Henry C. Wagner.

Of the foregoing Company, the following subsequent promotions in later service are noted:

Capt. Wm. H. Gausler, to Major of 47th Regt.
Lieut. E. P. Rhoads, to Capt. of Co. B, 47th Regt.
Sergt. E. G. Minnich, to Capt. of Co. B, 47th Regt.
Priv. Wm. H. Kleckner, to Capt. of Co. B, 47th Regt.
Priv. Wm. H. Ginginger, to 1st Lt. and Q. M., 47th Regt.
Priv. Henry Haldeman, to 1st Lt., Co. B, 47th Regt.
Priv. Chas. A. Hackman, to 1st Lt. Co. G, 47th Regt.
Priv. James B. Stuber, to 2d Lt. Co. I, 47th Regt.
Priv. Andrew C. Nagle to Capt. Co. B, 54th Regt.
Priv. Henry C. Wagner to Capt. Co. K, 54th Regt.
Priv. Peter C. Huber to Capt. Co. G, 128th Regt.
Lieut. Benj. C. Roth to Capt. Co. E, 202d Regt.

NINTH REGIMENT.

THREE MONTHS' SERVICE.

Of this regiment, recruited under the call for 75,000 men, Co. D was from Lehigh county, and about one-half of its members were enlisted at Catasauqua, where a meeting was held immediately after the publication of the President's call. Patriotic addresses were made by David Thomas, M. H. Horn, George E. Cyphers, and others, and a feeling was aroused which bore immediate fruit. At a second meeting, held on April 17th, the number of enlistments was increased to forty. These men were consolidated with a squad enlisted at Allentown, and left for Harrisburg on the 19th, where they were mustered into service on the 24th.

At the town meeting in Catasauqua the following persons were appointed a committee to go with the enlisted men to Harrisburg, and attend to their wants until they were mustered into service: Joshua Hunt, M. H. Horn, William Miller, C. D. Fuller, V. W. Weaver, and George W. Cyphers. After they were duly mustered, Governor Curtin commissioned M. H. Horn, of this committee, with authority to visit their camps, and attend to their wants generally. From the date of muster the Ninth Regiment remained at Camp Curtin until May 4th, when, having received arms and accoutrements, it proceeded to West Chester, where a camp was established and daily drill had. There it remained until the 26th of May, when it moved to Wilmington, Del., and remained in camp at Hare's Corner, until June 6th, when it joined Gen. Patterson's command at Chambersburg, Pa., and was attached to the 4th Brigade, 1st Division,

The survivors of Company I in April, 1914, were: Lieutenants, E. P. Rhoads and Benj. C. Roth; Sergeant, Henry Fried; Privates, Augustus F. Ebert, Peter Huber, Charles Haines, commanded by Col. Dixon H. Miles, of the regular army. The regiment advanced to the Potomac, on Sunday, June 16th, and encamped on the road between Williamsport and Martinsburg. It subsequently recrossed the Potomac and encamped near Williamsport until July 1st, when the whole army at that place removed across the river in the direction of Martinsburg, Va. The enemy under Jackson having retreated from Falling Waters, the 9th encamped on the 2d of July on their camp grounds. From the 2d to the 8th they remained in and about Martinsburg, then moved out on the Winchester pike to Bunker Hill. A general forward movement was decided upon with a design of giving battle to the enemy concentrated at Winchester, but before the movement was commenced the order to advance was countermanded. On the 17th, the regiment was removed to Charlestown; on the 21st to Harper's Ferry; on the 22d to Hagerstown, and on the 24th to Harrisburg, where the men were mustered out. The Catasauqua men, on their return home, were tendered a collation, served in one of the Crane Iron Company buildings. The Allentown boys were also appropriately greeted.

FIELD AND STAFF OFFICERS.

H. C. Longenecker, colonel; William H. H. Hagen, lieutenant-colonel.
Company D, Mustered in April 24, 1861.

Captain.

G. D. Hand

First Lieutenant.

C. A. G. Keek

Second Lieutenant.

Enoch Phillips

First Sergeant.

Levi Stuber

Second Sergeant.

William Semmer

Third Sergeant.

Tilghman Miller

Fourth Sergeant.

Morgan Richards

First Corporal.

Charles Nolf, Jr.

Second Corporal.

Richard Wilson

Third Corporal.

William Williams

Fourth Corporal.

Granville Hangams

Musician.

Henry Stressen

Musician.

William Miller

Privates.

Arthur, Samuel	Llewelyn, Thomas
Barrow, Samuel C.	Meyers, William H.
Baumeister, William C.	Morrison, John
Clement, Hugh	Michael, Charles H.
Craft, Richard	McCloskey, John
Cooney, Michael	McGee, Cornelius
Dettwiler, Henry	McHecker, John
Davis, Isaac	McHoes, Joshua
Daniel, Daniel	Patrick, John
Edwards, Evan	Panly, William H.
Elliott, James	Paul, William
Eckenberger, Henry	Ruse, David
Fondran, Benedict	Rohn, Wilson
Graham, John	Ritter, Augustus
Grate, John	Schwab, Joshua
Hopkins, William	Snyder, William T.
Hopkins, John	Snyder, James R.
Hughes, James	Sattenfuse, William H.
Henry, Francis	Schlosser, William
Hetthenson, James	Smith, Samuel
Hammerly, Robert	Smith, Stephen
Hacker, Jacob	Steinberger, Henry
Jones, Joseph	Tomblor, David A.
Kramsic, Edwards	Vansychell, James
Kane, John	Vouland, Charles
Kick, Lorentz	Wilson, Frank H.
Keiser, William	Werly, William
Leister, Tilghman	Wolf, Abraham
Lockwood, Samuel	Xandres, Francis
Leister, Peter	Young, James

FORTY-SIXTH REGIMENT.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

Immediately after the mustering out of the three months' men, Arnold C. Lewis (editor and publisher of the Catasauqua Herald), commenced recruiting a company for the three years' service, which became Co. C, of the 46th Regiment. The company was composed in part only of men from Catasauqua and vicinity, and mustered in Aug. 17, 1861. The regiment was recruited in Northampton, Allegheny, Potter, Berks, Dauphin, and other counties.

The regimental organization was completed at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, on September 1st, as follows: Col. Joseph F. Knipe, Lieut-Col. James L. Selfridge, Maj. Arnold C. Lewis. The regiment was assigned to the Army of the Shenandoah, and was posted on the Upper Potomac, along the Maryland shore, near Harper's Ferry. Soon after its arrival it was assigned to the 1st Brigade of the 2d Division. On the 24th of February, 1862, they crossed the Potomac, and occupied in turn Leesburg, Charlestown, Martinsburg, and Winchester. Their first engagement with the Rebels was near Kernstown, and on the 25th of May, participated in the Battle of Winchester, where the Union Army, numbering 7,000 men, contended with Jackson's forces of 20,000 for five hours. In this fight the 46th lost in killed, wounded, and missing, 17 men. On the 7th of August they were ordered towards Cedar Mountain, and on the 9th the whole division was advanced upon the Rebel lines. The position of the 46th was opposite the enemy's advanced artillery, and upon this they charged with desperate valor. They were fearfully exposed to the enemy's artillery and strong lines of concealed infantry, which poured in upon them a merciless storm of shot and shell. The total loss of the regiment was 30 killed, 34 wounded, and 6 taken prisoners. In the Battle of Antietam they supported Ricketts' Division. Upon the inauguration of the Fredericksburg campaign the 46th was ordered forward from Fairfax. In the reorganization of the army, the 46th was made part of the 12th Brigade. On the 27th of April, 1863, the corps marched north to Kelly's Ford, crossed the Rappahannock and the Rapidan, and moved to Chancellorsville, and was here joined by the 3d and 5th Corps. The army under General Hooker advanced May 1st, and was met by Stonewall Jackson's Corps on the 2d, about sundown. Fighting immediately commenced. It was continued the whole night, and until the evening of the 3d, both armies losing heavily. The 46th lost 4 killed, a large number wounded, and 10 taken prisoners. On the evening of July 1st, the regiment arrived at Gettysburg, and was posted on the summit of Culp's Hill, where it held the extreme right of the line as far as Spangler's Spring. Owing to their sheltered position, the loss was small.

After the withdrawal of Lee's army into Virginia the 46th was forwarded, with the 11th and 12th Corps, to the Rapidan and there detached from the Army of the Potomac and ordered to Tennessee. In January, 1864, a large proportion of its officers and men re-enlisted for a second term of three years, and joined General Sherman's army at Chattanooga, where it entered the 20th Corps. They participated in all the battles fought under Sherman after that date, the most important of which were: Resaca, Dallas, Kennesaw, Peach-Tree Creek, Pine Knob, Marietta, and Atlanta. In these several engagements their loss in killed and wounded was about 150 men. On Sept. 1, 1864, Atlanta surrendered, and the hard fighting of the regiment ended.

On the 11th of November, Sherman commenced his march to the sea. On the 21st of December he reached Savannah; on the 17th of February, Columbia; on the 17th of March, Goldsboro. On the 26th of April, Johnson surrendered at Raleigh, and the army immediately commenced its homeward march. On the 16th of July, the 46th, after nearly four years of faithful service, was mustered out. An order was given to muster out at Alexandria, Va., but the regiment was not broken up until it reached Harrisburg.

The roster of the Lehigh men in Co. C of this regiment was as follows:

COMPANY C.

Mustered in Aug. 17, 1861; mustered out July 16, 1865.

Arnold C. Lewis, elected capt. Aug. 17, 1861; maj. Sept. 4, 1861; killed Sept. 22, 1861, by private John Lanehan, of Co. I, while attempting to enforce discipline in a case of insubordination. (Lanehan was hanged for the crime near Frederick City, Md., Dec. 23, 1861.)

W. R. Thomas, elected 2d lieut. Aug. 17, 1861; 1st lieut. Sept. 4, 1861.

Joseph Matchette, pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1861; to 5th sergt.; to 1st sergt.; to 1st lieut. Nov. 1, 1862; to capt. of Co. I, July 27, 1864.

James McQuillan, pro. to corp. Nov. 4, 1861; to sergt. March 4, 1862; to 2d lieut. March 20, 1864; to 1st lieut. July 27, 1864.

Robert Wilson, pro. to 1st sergt.; to 2d lieut.; killed at Cedar Mountain Aug. 9, 1862.

Isaac Davis, pro. to corp. Oct. 31, 1861; to sergt. Aug. 31, 1863; to 1st sergt. May 22, 1865.

Daniel Davis, pro. to corp. Nov. 6, 1863; to sergt. May 22, 1865.

Edward Cramsic, pro. to 2d lieut. Co. E, May 22, 1865.

Morgan Richards, pro. to 5th sergt; drowned near Edenberg, Va., April 4, 1862.

William McMonagle, pro. to corp. April 8, 1864.

John Moore, pro. to corp. April 8, 1864.

John Patrick, pro. to corp. May 22, 1865.

Robert E. Williams, pro. to corp. Aug. 17, 1861; severely wounded at Cedar Mountain; disabled for service and hon. disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 15, 1862.

John J. Davis, pro. to corp. April 4, 1862; to sergt. Nov. 9, 1863.

Hugh Lyons, pro. to corp. Aug. 30, 1863.

John H. Price, pro. to corp. Sept. 14, 1861.

Privates.

Wallace Brown, killed at Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862.

Daniel Desmond, wounded at Cedar Mountain; disabled for service and hon. disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 15, 1862.

John Leo, wounded in battle, and trans. to Vet. Res. Corps. Nov. 1, 1863.

John McQuillen, must. out on surg. sick certif. Nov. 24, 1862.

David Bachman, died at Phila. June 15, 1865.

Daniel Dyer, hon. disch. on surg. sick certif. July 14, 1862.

Alexander Doneghly, wounded in battle; hon. disch. (disabled) on surg. certif. Nov. 27, 1862.

John Cannon, drowned with Morgan Richards, near Edenberg, Va., April 4, 1862.

Andrew Sinly, wounded in action; died Aug. 16, 1864.
 Philip Hill, hon. disch. on surg. sick certif. as unfit for duty Nov. 11, 1862.
 George Hasson, wounded at Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862; died Sept. 7, 1862; grave at Alexandria, Va. No. 235.
 John Kilpatrick, hon. disch. on surg. certif. as disabled, Oct. 26, 1862.
 James McLaughlin, hon. disch. on surg. certif. as unfit for service, Oct. 10, 1862.
 David McCandles, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Patrick Reily, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, Dec. 15, 1863.
 John A. Richards, wounded at Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862; died soon after in the field.
 W. S. Thompson, hon. disch. on surg. certif. as unfit for service, Feb. 21, 1863.
 Frank Ward, died at Hancock, Md., Feb. 15, 1862.
 Patrick Sullivan, hon. disch. on surg. certif. as unfit for service, Feb. 13, 1863.
 John Blair, hon. disch. on surg. certif. April 13, 1863, as unfit for service.
 Philip Gallagher
 James Adams
 Thomas Mooney, must. into service Jan. 7, 1864.
 James McCracken, must. into service Dec. 31, 1863.
 Condy Pollock.
 John Reed, must. into service Jan. 3, 1864.
 Edward Rogers.
 Samuel Zellner, disch. by General Order, Oct. 22, 1862.
 Edward Mullen
 John McFadden, must. into service Feb. 29, 1864; absent sick, at muster out.
 H. W. Ehrit, must. into service Jan. 1, 1864.
 Benjamin Beidelman, must. into service March 3, 1864.
 Jeremiah Keef, must. into service Jan. 1, 1864.
 Thomas McMurtie, must. into service March 9, 1864.
 Solomon J. Rowe, must. into service, Feb. 29, 1864.
 Elias Beidelman, must. into service Feb. 26, 1864.
 William McGonagle, must. into service May 11, 1864.
 James McClellan, must. into service April 7, 1864; must. out July 8, 1865.
 John Brown, must. into service Feb. 29, 1864.
 John McMurtle, must. into service Dec. 31, 1863.
 William Pritchard, must. into service March 11, 1864.

47TH REGIMENT.

SERVICES.—This regiment was principally recruited through the exertions of Col. T. H. Good, of Allentown, by authority from the governor, on Aug. 5, 1861. Of the ten companies five were from Lehigh county: B, G, I, and K, of Allentown, and F, of Catasauqua.

The companies rendezvoused at Camp Curtin, and on September 1st the following field officers were selected from Lehigh county: T. H. Good, colonel; W. H. Gausler, major; and J. W. Fuller, adjutant. Schools of instruction brought the command to a high degree of proficiency. The companies were uniformed and equipped as they were mustered in from August 19th to September 20th.

The regiment proceeded from the state and became stationed at Kalorama Height near Washington, on Sept. 21st, where it continued until the 27th. It was then ordered to join the advance of the army, encamped at Fort Ethan Allan, and was assigned to the 3d Brigade. It was armed with the Mississippi rifle and drilled exclusively in light infantry tactics. As winter approached the men received blankets, gloves, and articles of clothing from their families and friends at home.

The brigade moved to Camp Griffin and on October 11th took part in the "grand review" at Bailey's Cross Roads. On Jan. 22, 1862, the regiment was ordered to accompany the brigade to Key West. On the 23d it left for Annapolis, where, on the 27th, it embarked on the steamship "Oriental," and reached its destination on February 4th. While in Florida it suffered much from fevers and many of its members died. On June 18th it embarked for Hilton Head and arrived there on the 22d. In July it was moved to Beaufort, where the entire island was picketed, and a large portion of the brigade having been ordered north, the 47th bore its full share of duty; so much, indeed, that it received the highest commendation for its fine discipline.

In September an expedition was fitted out to penetrate Florida and remove the obstructions in the St. John's river, which included the 47th. The campaign was opened on October 1st by operations directed against St. John's Bluff, five miles from the mouth of the river. A detour of 25 miles was made through pine woods and swamps with the 47th in the advance, driving the rebels before them. Co. B, of Allentown, and Co. E, of Easton, were sent in pursuit and, after a sharp skirmish, took Jacksonville, Fla. Thence these two companies proceeded, by steamer "Darlington," 200 miles up the river, where they captured the rebel steamer, "Gov. Milton" and conveyed it within the Union line. The loss to the regiment in these great operations was only two wounded men.

On October 21st the command destroyed the railroad bridge over the Pocotaligo and broke communication between Charlestown and Savannah. A landing was effected at Mackey's Point, and the brigade marched towards the bridge, but proceeding only a few miles, upon reaching an open country a heavy fire from a rebel field battery fell upon the men. The enemy was driven from its position and followed for four miles, where the enemy were found in force at Pocotaligo Bridge. A steady fire was continued for two hours, and night approaching, the 47th was obliged to withdraw to Mackey's Point. Captains Mickley and Junker and 14 men were killed and 114 wounded. The officers and men were complimented in general orders for their gallantry. On the 23d the regiment returned to Hilton Head, and a week afterward was detailed as an escort at the burial of General Mitchell, firing the salute over his grave.

On the 15th of November the 47th was ordered to Key West, and arriving there on the 18th, five companies, under Col. Good, were ordered to garrison Fort Taylor, and the other five, under Lt. Col. Alexander, to garrison Fort Jefferson, which were regarded as very important military posts. These forts were placed in the best possible condition and made impregnable; and here the regiment remained until Feb. 25, 1864. In the meantime, 500 men of the regiment re-enlisted and received a veteran furlough. It was highly complimented at various times during its occupancy of Key West for efficiency, and it enjoyed continuously the confidence of the department commander.

On that day, February 25th, it was transferred to Franklin, La., and assigned to the 2d Brigade of the 1st Division, in the 19th Army Corps. An expedition was then fitted out to proceed up the Red river and placed under the command of Gen. N. P. Banks, which moved March 15th to Alexandria, where it was joined by the command of Gen. A. J. Smith, and a fleet of gunboats under Commodore Porter; and thence it proceeded up the river to Shreveport, which was to be the point of attack. The regiment, on April 7th, engaged the enemy near Pleasant Hill, and again eight miles away, where a hotly contested battle ensued in both of which the rebels were defeated. On the 8th, at Sabine Cross Roads, and Peach Hill, the enemy defeated the advance of Banks. The command withdrew after midnight and returned to Pleasant Hill on the 9th. The loss was near 60 killed and wounded, among the former having been Lieut. Swoyer, of Co. K. On the afternoon of that day another battle ensued in that vicinity and the rebels were again driven back.

Notwithstanding these victories the army was obliged to retreat to Grand Ecore, a place strongly fortified, and there it remained until the 22d, when it proceeded to Alexandria by the 25th.

During this expedition the 47th marched 800 miles and lost by sickness, killed, wounded, and missing altogether 200 men.

On May 16th the army reached Simmsport and crossed to Atchafalaya on a bridge of steamers. Subsequently it moved to New Orleans, where it was ordered to Washington, arriving July 12th.

At the capital, the 47th was engaged in ex-

PELLING the rebels from Maryland. General Sheridan was placed in command of the forces which were re-organized and afterward known as the Army of the Shenandoah. On September 19th, the regiment was engaged in the battle of Opequan, occupying the right of the corps and fought with great gallantry. On the 21st it was deployed to skirmish and charge the enemy's works, and the pursuit of the enemy was continued during the entire night. The regiment was then encamped at Cedar Creek.

On the 19th of October, the regiment participated in the battle of Cedar Creek. It led in the pursuit of the enemy to Fisher's Hill. The next day the pursuit was ended. Capt. Minnich was killed, Capt. Goebel mortally wounded, and Capt. Oyster severely wounded. The total loss was 176 killed, wounded, and missing. The corps then fell back five miles to Winchester and went into winter quarters, which was changed on December 20th to Fairview, in the midst of a snow-storm. While there the regiment guarded the railroad and constructed works of defense; also participated in reconnoissance and skirmishes.

After the surrender of General Lee, on April 9th, the regiment moved by rail to Washington and encamped near Fort Stevens; and on May 23-24th, participated in the "grand review."

On June 1st the regiment was again ordered to Savannah, where it arrived on the 6th. In July it was at Charlestown, with headquarters in the mansion of the Confederate secretary of the treasury. Co. E was at Fort Moultrie, and Co. G at Fort Sumter. Many members fell victims to disease and their remains now repose in Magnolia Cemetery.

On Jan. 3, 1866, the regiment embarked for New York, where it arrived, after a stormy passage, and proceeded by rail to Philadelphia; and on the 9th of January it was mustered out at Camp Cadwalader, after a service of four years and four months. It had served in seven southern states, participated in exhausting campaigns, marched more than 1,200 miles, and made twelve voyages at sea. It was the only regiment from Pennsylvania that participated in the Red river campaign, or that served in that department prior to the surrender of Lee.

FIELD AND STAFF.

- Col. Tilghman H. Good (Allentown), must. into service Sept. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 24, 1864, exp. of term. (Died July 18, 1887.)
 Col. J. P. S. Gobin (Sunbury), pro. from capt. Co. C, to maj. July 24, 1864; to col. Jan. 3, 1865; to brev. brig.-gen. March 13, 1865; must. out with regiment Dec. 25, 1865 (Died May 1, 1910.)

- Lieut.-Col. G. W. Alexander (Reading), must. out Sept. 23, 1864, exp. of term.
- Lieut.-Col. Charles W. Abbott (Allentown), pro. from capt. Co. K Jan. 3, 1865; must. out with regiment Dec. 25, 1865.
- Maj. William H. Gausler (Allentown) disch. by special order of War Department, April 15, 1864. (Died March 16, 1914.)
- Maj. Levi Stuber (Allentown), pro. from capt., Co. I, to maj. May 22, 1865; must. out with regiment.
- Adj. J. W. Fuller, Jr. (Catasauqua), pro. from sergt., Co. F, to adj. Oct. 30, 1861; res. Jan. 9, 1862. (Died Nov. 1910.)
- Adj. W. H. R. Hangen (Allentown), dismissed by order of War Department April 15, 1864.
- Q. M. James Van Dyke (Allentown), pro. from 1st lieut., Co. C, to q. m. Sept. 24, 1861; res. Jan. 16, 1862.
- Q. M. Francis Z. Heebner (Allentown), pro. from private, Co. B, to q. m. Jan. 20, 1862; prisoner from October, 1864, to March, 1865; must. out June 1, 1865, exp. of term. (Died Nov. 22, 1896.)
- Q. M., W. H. Ginkinger (Allentown), pro. from private, Co. B, to com.-sergt. Sept. 18, 1861; to q. m. June 23, 1865; must. out with regiment.
- COMPANY B.
- E. P. Rhoads, capt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to capt. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Edwin G. Minnich, capt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to 1st lieut. Aug. 30, 1861; to capt. Sept. 19, 1864; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 9.
- William H. Kleckner, capt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to 1st lieut. Sept. 19, 1864; to capt. Jan. 4, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1864; veteran.
- H. A. Haltiman, 1st lieut., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Sept. 19, 1864; to 1st lieut. Jan. 4, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Allen G. Balliet, 2d lieut., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- R. A. Hilliard, 2d lieut., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Jan. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Thomas F. Sourwine, 1st sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to sergt. Sept. 19, 1864; to 1st sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Allen Gaumer, 1st sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; killed at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- T. Bergenstock, sergt., must. Sept. 10, 1861; pro. to sergt. Sept. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- John Houck, sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Charles E. Miller, sergt., must. Jan. 9, 1862; pro. to sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Franklin Fatzinger, sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to sergt. Nov. 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Oliver Hiskey, sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Charles Bachman, sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to sergt. Aug. 1, 1864; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; pro. to com.-sergt. Nov. 1, 1865; veteran.
- Matthew R. Fuller, sergt., must. Aug. 30, 1861.
- Henry H. Kramer, corp., must. Sept. 10, 1861; pro. to corp. June 24, 1861; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- John Eisenhard, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. April 21, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Daniel G. Gerhard, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 16, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Charles H. Knauss, corp., must. Sept. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 4, 1865; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Valentine Fisher, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 16, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- T. Reinsmith, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 1, 1864; wounded at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- George J. Weiss, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 26, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Harrison Geiger, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Henry Storch, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. to enlist in regular army Jan. 13, 1862.
- Allen J. Reinhard, corp., must. Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Henry A. Schwartz, corp., must. Oct. 16, 1862; must. out Oct. 15, 1865, exp. of term.
- Francis H. Straehly, corp., must. Oct. 16, 1862; must. out Oct. 15, 1865, exp. of term.
- Lewis H. Seip, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded at Sabine Cross-Roads, La., April 8, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; disch. Oct. 4, 1865; veteran.
- John A. Darrohn, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Winchester, Va., Nov. 12, 1864, of wounds received at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 4, 1864; veteran.
- Aaron Fink, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., Nov. 5, 1862, of wounds received at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Thomas Miller, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; died at Winchester, Va., Oct. 25, 1864, of wounds received at Cedar Creek Oct. 19, 1864; veteran.
- Jesse Rimmel, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Key West, Fla., March 29, 1863.
- Francis Xander, corp., must. Aug. 30, 1861; killed at Sabine Cross-Roads, La., April 8, 1864; veteran.
- James Hamilton, musician, must. Jan. 26, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Henry Strominger, musician, must. Aug. 30, 1861; trans. to Co. G. Sept. 19, 1861.
- Adam Garrecht, musician, must. Jan. 9, 1862.
- Alfred Eisenbraun, musician, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Georgetown, D. C., Oct. 26, 1861; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, District of Columbia.

Privates.

- Albright, John D., must. Dec. 21, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Assenheimer, G., must. March 2, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.

- Acker, Cornelius, must. Jan. 14, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 27, 1862.
- Apple, John, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Key West, Fla., March 12, 1862.
- Apple, Jacob, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Berryville, Va., Sept. 15, 1864; veteran.
- Bieber, William, must. Jan. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Bergenstock, H., must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Bast, Jacob, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Aug. 21, 1865; veteran.
- Blumer, Alexander, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Bohlen, Frederick, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Brong, Lewis H., must. Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Beltz, Henry, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Key West, Fla., March 1, 1862.
- Braden, Josiah, must. Feb. 9, 1864; died at New Orleans, La., July 9, 1864.
- Bergenstock, H., must. Feb. 11, 1865.
- Barry, James, must. Jan. 24, 1865.
- Chamberlain, G., must. Feb. 2, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Cope, Thomas, must. Jan. 29, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Clader, Ephraim, must. March 14, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Deal, George, must. April 4, 1865; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Dengler, John, must. Feb. 13, 1865; must. out with company, Dec. 25, 1865.
- Darohn, Joseph, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 24, 1863.
- Denhard, Edward, must. —, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Diehl, Solomon J., must. Sept. 10, 1862; died at Key West, Fla., June 18, 1863.
- Detrick, Ambrose, must. March 2, 1864; died at Washington, D. C., Oct. 7, 1864.
- Egge, Perry, must. Jan. 9, 1862; must. out Jan. 15, 1865, exp. of term.
- Fleming, John, must. Jan. 30, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Ferber, Peter, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Fries, John, must. Nov. 18, 1863; wounded at Sabine Cross-Roads, La., April 8, 1864; must. out June 29, 1865.
- Funk, George, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Nov. 24, 1862, to re-enlist in regular army.
- Fink, Edward, must. Aug. 30, 1861; killed at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864.
- Geidner, Evan, must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded at Cedar Creek Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Geist, William, must. Sept. 4, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Graver, John, must. Jan. 11, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Gangwere, William, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Ginkinger, William H., must. Sept. 14, 1861; pro. to com.-sergt. Sept. 18, 1861.
- George Nathan, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., Nov. 14, 1862, of wounds received at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Hittle, Daniel E., must. Feb. 10, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Hiskey, Franklin, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Horn, John, must. Feb. 9, 1864; must. out with company, Dec. 25, 1865.
- Heckroth, Thad, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. July 9, 1864.
- Hausman, Joseph, must. Aug. 23, 1864; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Hilliard, William H., must. Jan. 14, 1862, must. out Jan. 15, 1865, exp. of term.
- Hartzel, Alvin J., must. Nov. 23, 1863; trans. to Co. I, April 16, 1864.
- Heebner, Francis Z., must. Sept. 14, 1861; pro. to q.m.-sergt. Sept. 14, 1861.
- Haltiman, Peter H., must. Sept. 10, 1862; died at Baltimore, Md., Nov. 20, 1864, of wounds received at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
- Hedrick, Levanus, must. Oct. 12, 1863; drowned at Morganzia, La., June 27, 1864.
- Hilliard, William H., must. Sept. 14, 1861; died at Key West, Fla., Aug. 18, 1862.
- Jacob, George, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865, vet.
- Jackson, James A., must. Feb. 16, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 2, 1865.
- Johnson, John, must. Jan. 11, 1864; died at Fortress Monroe, Va., July 26, 1864.
- James, Thomas, must. Aug. 30, 1861; veteran.
- King, John, must. Feb. 18, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865, veteran.
- Kramer, Allen L., must. Sept. 9, 1862; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out May 25, 1865.
- Knauss, Henry, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Knerr, Levi, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Kramer, Henry, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. March 11, 1864.
- King, Howard, must. Jan. 24, 1865; must. out July 14, 1865.
- Keim, Phaon, must. Oct. 29, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865, exp. of term.
- Kern, William, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Hilton, S. C., Oct. 23, 1862, of wounds received at Pocatoligo, S. C. Oct. 22, 1862.
- Labar, Alonzo, must. Jan. 25, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Labar, Leander, must. Feb. 6, 1865; must. out with company, Dec. 25, 1865.
- Leisenring, Martin, must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Lentz, Josiah R., must. March 23, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Leizer, James F., must. Dec. 29, 1862; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Lausterer, John D., must. Oct. 29, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865, exp. of term.
- Lutz, James, must. Nov. 23, 1863; trans. to Co. I, April 16, 1864.
- Lutz, Samuel, must. Dec. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. I, April 16, 1864.
- Labold, Charles, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Mennig, George, must. Jan. 18, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Miller, Albert, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Miller, Dennis, must. March 23, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.

- Morgan, Barnett, must. Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Miller, Henry, must. Jan. 18, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Martin, Levi, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Sept. 18, 1864; exp. of term.
- Mennig, Luther, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Mentz, Joseph, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on Nov. 24, 1862, to enlist in regular army.
- Metzgar, Philip, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 11, 1864.
- Martin, Charles A., must. March 1, 1862; pro. to sergt. maj. Sept. 1, 1864.
- Meirknecht, Conrad, enl. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Charleston, S. C., Oct. 30, 1865; veteran.
- Nixon, John T., must. Jan. 25, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Nunemaker, George, must. Jan. 18, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Newhard, Allen, must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
- Osman, Andrew, must. Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Pfeiffer, Charles, must. Feb. 9, 1864; wounded at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Pauley, Henry, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 16, 1864.
- Pfeiffer, Obediah, must. Jan. 9, 1862; wounded with loss of leg, at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Mar. 16, 1865; veteran.
- Baumer, Edwin, must. June 9, 1862; died at Key West, Fla., Aug. 27, 1862.
- Ritz, Tilghman, must. Aug. 20, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Reichard, George, must. Feb. 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Rommel, Peter, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Rommel, Edwin, must. Nov. 18, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Reinhard, Christian, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Rhoads, Allen P., must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Rich, George, must. Jan. 12, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Ruttman, Ernest, must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; must. Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865; veteran.
- Rogers, Samuel S., must. Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Rabenold, J. D., must. Aug. 23, 1864; wounded at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; disch. by general order May 15, 1865.
- Reinhard, Henry, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Jan. 13, 1862, to re-enlist in regular army.
- Reichard, Edwin, must. Aug. 30, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 1, 1864.
- Repsher, Joseph, must. Feb. 19, 1864; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
- Rhoads, Franklin, must. Sept. 10, 1862; captured at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; died at Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 15, 1864; burial record Nov. 22, 1864.
- Reymond, Haldeman, must. Sept. 4, 1861; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Shaneberger, George, must. Jan. 19, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Siseloof, John, must. Feb. 2, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Shafer, John E., must. Feb. 16, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Smith, William H., must. Feb. 17, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Smith, Isaac N., must. Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company, Dec. 25, 1865.
- Smith, Barclay, must. Jan. 23, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865;
- Smith, Benjamin, must. Feb. 3, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Smith, Franklin B., must. Feb. 18, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Smiley, William, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Steidley, Charles, must. March 7, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Schreiner, Caspar, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out with company Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Schaffer, Hiram, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 19, 1861.
- Serfass, Aaron, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Sieger, Franklin, must. Aug. 23, 1864; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Siegfried, Charles, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Springer, James, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Jan. 13, 1862 to re-enl. in regular army.
- Stuber William, must. Sept. 14, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 10, 1863.
- Stuber, Francis, must. Aug. 30, 1861; trans. to Co. G, Sept. 19, 1861.
- Scherer, August C., must. Nov. 24, 1863; died at Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28, 1864, wounds received at Cedar Creek, Va. Oct. 19, 1864; veteran.
- Schimpf, John, must. Aug. 30, 1861; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; veteran.
- Schwenk, Charles, must. Jan. 9, 1862; died at Baton Rouge, La., June 20, 1864; veteran.
- Smith, George, must. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Key West, Fla., June 6, 1862.
- Smith, Joseph, must. Dec. 28, 1863; died at New Orleans, La., Sept. 2, 1864.
- Steffen, Thomas, must. June 9, 1864; killed at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864.
- Savitz Charles, must. Aug. 20, 1861; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Steffen, David, must. Feb. 26, 1864; must. out Jan. 27, 1866.
- Trexler, Allen W., must. Feb. 4, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Trexler, Charles, must. Sept. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Tice, James, must. Aug. 30, 1861; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 10; veteran.
- Ungerer, Christian, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Van Billard, Oliver, must. Feb. 20, 1864; must. out May 26, 1865.
- Van Billard, Martin, must. Feb. 9, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Wagner, Charles, must. Dec. 15, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Wilhelm, Nelson, must. Feb. 20, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
- Weiss, William J., must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
- Wieand, Harrison, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.

Wieand, John, must. Aug. 30, 1861; wounded, with loss of leg, at Pocotaligo, S. C.; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 3, 1862.
 Wieand, William, must. Sept. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
 Wolf, Abraham, must. Aug. 30, 1861; trans. to Co. I, Oct. 10, 1863; veteran.
 Wieand, Benjamin, must. Sept. 10, 1861; trans. to Co. D, Dec. 15, 1863; veteran.
 Xander, Dallas, must. Feb. 3, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 25, 1865.
 Young, Franklin, must. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, exp. of term.
 Young, Joseph, must. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Jan. 13, 1862, to re-enl. in regular army.
 Young, Daniel, must. Feb. 27, 1864; trans. to 48th Co. Vet. Res. Corps March 14, 1865.

COMPANY F.

Mustered in Aug. 30, 1861, mustered out Dec. 25, 1865, except as otherwise mentioned.
 Henry S. Harte, pro. to capt. Aug. 30, 1861; acted as maj. by brevet during the latter part of the Red River expedition and the beginning of the Shenandoah campaign; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Edwin Gilbert, pro. from 1st sergt. to capt. Jan. 1, 1865.
 George W. Fuller, pro. to 1st lieu. Aug. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. June 22, 1864.
 W. H. Bartholomew, pro. from 1st sergt. to 1st lieu. Sept. 1, 1864.
 Henry H. Bush, pro. to 2d lieu. Aug. 30, 1861; died at Fort Taylor, Fla., March 31, 1862.
 Augustus Eagle, pro. from sergt. to 2d lieu. April 1, 1862; res. Sept. 11, 1864.
 Thomas F. Lambert, pro. to 2d lieu. Jan. 1, 1865.
 James Tait, pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 18, 1864; to 1st sergt. Jan. 1, 1865.
 Richmond H. Schwab, pro. to corp. Sept. 18, 1864; to sergt. Jan. 1, 1865.
 Joseph J. Lilley, pro. from corp. to sergt. April 21, 1865.
 John L. Jones, wounded and prisoner at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864; exchanged Sept. 24, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 18, 1864; to sergt. June 2, 1865.
 John W. Heberling, pro. to sergt. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Albert H. McHose, pro. to sergt. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William H. Glace, pro. to sergt. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 James W. Fuller, Jr., pro. to 1st lieu. and adjt. Oct. 30, 1861.
 William H. Fink, pro. to sergt. Sept. 18, 1864; died at Baltimore, Md., April 15, 1865.
 Benjamin F. Bush, pro. to corp. Sept. 11, 1864; to sergt. Sept. 18, 1864.
 Preston M. Rohn, pro. from corp. to sergt. Jan. 1, 1865.
 F. Longenhagen, not on muster-out roll.
 Josiah H. Walk, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1865.
 Spencer Tettermer, pro. to corp. April 2, 1865.
 George H. Longenhagen, pro. to corp. April 2, 1865.
 Martin O'Brien, pro. to corp. April 25, 1865.
 Robert Cunningham, pro. to corp. June 2, 1865.
 Walter Moyer, must. into service Dec. 4, 1863; pro. to corp. June 2, 1865.
 James M. Bush, must. into service Dec. 4, 1863; pro. to corp. April 25, 1865.
 James E. Patterson, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.

Augustus F. Eberhardt, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. April 3, 1863.
 Joseph H. Schwab, disch. on surg. certif. April 25, 1865.
 W. H. Van Dyke, must. into service Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
 Franklin Arnold, wounded at Summit Point, Va., March 28, 1865; disch. on surg. certif. July 15, 1865.
 James Ritter, died at Fort Jefferson, Fla., Oct. 23, 1863.
 David Tombler, musician, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Simon P. Keifer, musician, must. into service Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.

Privates.

Peter Andrews, must. into service, Feb. 28, 1865.
 David Andrews, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Daniel A. Akroth, must. into service Oct. 27, 1862; trans. from Co. C, 14th Regt. Pa. Cav., March 18, 1864; must. out Dec. 9, 1865.
 George Armsberg, must. into service Sept. 7, 1864; trans. from Co. C, 14th Regt. Pa. Cav., March 18, 1864; must. out Sept. 6, 1865.
 Henry Buss.
 Hiram Beidelman, must. into service Feb. 9, 1864.
 Philip Bohner, must. into service Feb. 8, 1864.
 William H. Barnhart, must. into service Feb. 25, 1865; trans. from 14th Regt. Pa. Cav. March 18, 1865.
 Stephen Beers, disch. on surg. certif. April 13, 1863.
 Abraham Bauder, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Godfrey Betz, died at New Orleans, May 10, 1864.
 Faustin Boyer, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Alfred Biege, must. into service Sept. 28, 1864; substitute; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 E. Bartholomew, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; died at Fort Taylor, Fla., April 3, 1862.
 P. Bartholomew, must. in Dec. 21, 1863.
 Ernest Bender, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
 Charles Buss. William Clader.
 John Curren, must. in Feb. 8, 1864.
 John C. Collins, must. in March 15, 1864; trans. from 14th Regt. Pa. Cav. March 18, 1865.
 William Christ, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
 John H. Crotto, must. in Sept. 8, 1864; trans. from 14th Regt. Pa. Cav. Feb. 25, 1865; must. out July 22, 1865.
 Frederick Coulter, must. in Feb. 25, 1865.
 Michael Deibert, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; substitute; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Samuel Dunkel, must. in Jan. 9, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March, 1864.
 William Ehrich, must. in Jan. 26, 1863.
 Joseph Ebertz, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
 Frederick Engle, disch. on surg. certif. March 14, 1862.
 Augustus Engle, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William Eisenhart, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, date unknown.
 Henry Falk.
 Martin C. Fry, must. in March 31, 1864.
 George W. Frome, must. in Feb. 23, 1865.
 Frederick Fisher, disch. on surg. certif. July 7, 1864.
 Orlando Fuller, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William H. Fried, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 26, 1864.
 David A. Fry, must. in March 7, 1865, died at Charleston, S. C. Aug. 16, 1865.

- Amandus Fritz, must. in Feb. 10, 1864.
 John Guth, must. in Dec. 19, 1863.
 Joseph Geiger, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Thomas B. Glick, must. in Sept. 18, 1864, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Preston Getter, must. in Oct. 5, 1862; must. out Oct. 4, 1864.
 Addison R. Geho, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 9.
 Rainey Grader, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 Joseph Gross, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; died at Winchester, Va., Jan. 17, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, lot 18.
 Levi H. Getter, must. in Dec. 7, 1863.
 William F. Hallenbach.
 William H. Heberling, must. in Feb. 11, 1864.
 Joseph Hesler, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
 George W. Hatter, must. in Feb. 8, 1864.
 Joseph Heckman, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John F. Haldeman, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Henry Hummel, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Osborn Houser, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Joseph Hunsicker, trans. to Co. B, 1st U. S. Art., Dec. 5, 1862.
 William Herman, died at Natchez, Miss., July 23, 1864.
 L. Hultzheiser, died at New Orleans, La., May 1, 1864.
 William A. Houser.
 Edwin Haldeman, must. in March 7, 1865.
 Isaac Jacoby.
 James Johnson, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
 William Jordan, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Abraham Jassum, must. in Oct. 5, 1862; must. out Oct. 4, 1865.
 Edward Jassum, must. in Oct. 5, 1862; trans. to Co. H, Oct. 31, 1864.
 Isaac C. Jacoby.
 William H. Jackson, died Sept. 19, 1864.
 Philip King, must. in Dec. 4, 1863; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.
 George Kerchner, absent, sick, at muster out.
 George Klein, disch. on surg. certif. April 16, 1864.
 Reuben H. Keim, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William Kuntz, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Nicholas Kuhn, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Owen Kern, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 George King, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Charles King, must. in Sept. 1, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Jefferson Kepner, must. in Jan. 27, 1864; must. out by General Order Aug. 11, 1865.
 J. K. Longenhagen, must. in Dec. 19, 1863.
 John Laub, must. in March 7, 1865.
 Peter S. Levan, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 J. Laudenslager, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John Lucky, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Alfred Lynn, must. in Dec. 7, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 14, 1865.
 Emory Lindster, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; pro. to hosp. steward Aug. 25, 1861.
 Harrison Lilly, killed at Summit Point, Va., March 25, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 26.
 James Lilly, must. in Jan. 28, 1864.
 Thomas Lehr, must. in March 28, 1864.
 Franklin Laubach, must. in April 25, 1864.
 Lawrence McBride.
 William C. Moll, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 Joseph Mersch, must. in Feb. 28, 1864.
 Franklin Mersch, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
 George Moll, must. in Dec. 10, 1863.
 Sidney J. Miller, must. in Jan. 27, 1865; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.
 Uriah Myers, must. in Feb. 16, 1865.
 W. H. Moyer, (2d), must. in Sept. 18, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. March 4, 1862.
 V. Minsenberger, disch. on surg. certif. April 2, 1862.
 Philip McCue, must. in April 7, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. July 7, 1864.
 Peter Moser, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C. Oct. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 24, 1863.
 John Markoffer, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865.
 Joel Michael, must. in May 2, 1865; trans. from 159 Reg. P. V. disch. on surg. certif. May 25, 1865.
 Charles H. Michael, must. in Sept. 1, 1862; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Dec. 11, 1864.
 W. H. Moyer (1st), captured; died at Florence, S. C., Jan. 22, 1865.
 Peter Moser, must. in Dec. 19, 1863; absent, sick at muster out.
 Daniel Newhard.
 Albert Newhard, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William Offhouse, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Michael O'Brien, must. in Jan. 26, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. May 25, 1865.
 John O'Brien, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C. Oct. 26, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 William Reeser, must. in Dec. 16, 1863.
 Edward Renseimer, must. in Feb. 23, 1865.
 Thomas B. Rhoads, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Francis Roth, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Griff Reinhart, must. in Dec. 21, 1863; wounded at Sabine Cross-Roads, La., April 9, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 28, 1864.
 Charles Rohrbacher, must. in Sept. 1, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Aaron Roeder, trans. to Co. B, 1st U. S. Artillery, Dec. 5, 1862.
 Edward Remely, must. in Jan. 27, 1865.
 Matthias Snyder. Matthias Smith.
 David Shafer, must. in Dec. 18, 1863.
 Joseph Savitz, must. in March 31, 1864.
 Samuel Snyder, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
 Reuben Siegfried, must. in Feb. 21, 1865.
 Francis Shafer, must. in Feb. 23, 1865.
 Henry Soltzman, must. in March 8, 1865.
 Lucian Schroeder, must. in Feb. 12, 1864; trans. from 159th Regt. P. V. May 29, 1865.
 Samuel Smith, disch. on surg. certif. April 12, 1862.
 John G. Seider, disch. on surg. certif. April 12, 1862.
 Thomas A. Smith, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 14, 1862.
 John Schreck, disch. on surg. certif. April 13, 1863.
 Godlieb Schrum, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Robert M. Sheats, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Llewelyn J. Sleppy, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Nicholas Smith, must. out Sept. 10, 1862;

- John G. Snyder, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order, June 1, 1865.
- Peter Shireman, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out June 1, 1865.
- Franklin Siegfried, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
- Jacob Sholl, must. in Feb. 3, 1864; died at Philadelphia March 21, 1864.
- James Troxell.
- James A. Trexler, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Hiram Werkheiser, must. in March 7, 1864.
- Gilbert Whiteman, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Conrad Warneck, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 18, 1862.
- John P. Weaver, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Franklin H. Wilson, must. in Sept. 10, 1861; disch. by General Order June 1, 1865.
- James M. White, must. in Nov. 23, 1862; trans. from 14th Regt. Pa. Cav. March 12, 1865; disch. on surg. certif. June 25, 1865.
- Adam Wuchter, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out by General Order July 24, 1865.
- John Weiss, died at Camp Tyler, Tex., July 15, 1864, of wounds received at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864.
- John Whorely, died at New Orleans, La., July 16, 1864.
- Ambrose Wesner, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
- Levi Warner, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
- George Youss, must. in Dec. 16, 1863.
- COMPANY G.
- Mustered in Sept. 18, 1861; mustered out Dec. 25, 1865, except where otherwise mentioned.
- Charles Mickley, pro. to capt. Sept. 18, 1861; killed at Pocatigo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; buried in Union Cemetery, Allentown.
- John J. Goebel, pro. to 1st lieu. Sept. 18, 1861; to capt. June 18, 1863; com. maj. Oct. 18, 1864; not mustered; died at Winchester, Va., Oct., 1864, of wounds received at Cedar Creek, Oct. 19, 1864.
- Thomas B. Leisenring, pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Sept. 19, 1864; to capt. Jan. 1, 1865. (Died June 13, 1887.)
- G. W. Huntzberger, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieu. Jan. 13, 1862; to 1st lieu. June 18, 1863; must. out Nov. 30, 1864.
- William H. Steckel, pro. to sergt. Nov. 1, 1864; to 1st lieu. Jan. 1, 1865.
- Charles A. Henry, pro. to 2d lieu. Sept. 18, 1861; res. Dec. 31, 1861.
- Charles A. Hackman, pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. March 2, 1862; to 2d lieu. June 18, 1863; commanding capt. Nov. 30, 1864; not mustered; must. out Nov. 5, 1864.
- James W. Crader, pro. to corp. April 5, 1862; to sergt. May 1, 1863; to 2d lieu. March 20, 1865.
- Henry T. Dennis, pro. to corp. April 5, 1862; to sergt. May 1, 1863; to 2d lieu. March 20, 1865.
- D. K. Diefenderfer, pro. from corp. to sergt. April 1, 1862; to 1st sergt. May 1, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Jacob Warman, pro. to sergt. Jan. 1, 1865.
- John Pratt, pro. from corp. to sergt. Feb. 5, 1865.
- Daniel V. Mertz, must. into service Dec. 15, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864; to sergt. Feb. 1, 1865.
- John G. Helfrich, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Martin H. Hackman, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; pro. to corp., sergt. April 26, 1864; must. out Jan. 8, 1865.
- John W. Glick, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1865; to sergt. May 1, 1865; must. out June 1, 1865.
- James Crader, died at Natchez, Miss., July 9, 1864.
- Harrison Guth, corp.
- Benjamin F. Swartz, must. in Dec. 31, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864.
- George Hepler, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1865.
- Frederick Wilt, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; pro. to corp. Feb. 1, 1865.
- John Kneller, must. in Dec. 19, 1863; pro. to corp. Feb. 1, 1865.
- Constant Losch, must. in Dec. 17, 1863; pro. to corp. May 14, 1864.
- Nelson Coffin, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1864; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- William Hausler, pro. to corp. Dec. 27, 1862; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- R. M. Fornwald, pro. to corp. Jan. 19, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Solomon Becker, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1862; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Allen Wolf, pro. to corp. May 1, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Solomon Wieder, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- James Geidner, musician.
- William N. Smith, musician, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Privates.*
- Daniel Ansbach, disch. on surg. certif. March 4, 1862.
- Richard Arnbrunn, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Peter H. Bernd.
- William Buskirk, must. in Feb. 15, 1864.
- Jacob Blank.
- Benjamin Bortz, must. in Dec. 18, 1863; must. out by General Order July 6, 1865.
- Jeremiah Bernhard, must. in Dec. 17, 1863.
- John Brensinger, must. in Feb. 22, 1864.
- Jacob Bollinger, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
- William L. Burger, must. in Feb. 3, 1864.
- George P. Butz, must. in Feb. 29, 1864.
- John Barton, must. in Feb. 25, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
- Hiram Brobst, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 18, 1862.
- Joseph Barber, disch. on surg. certif. July 28, 1864.
- David Buskirk, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out by General Order May 25, 1865.
- Jacob H. Bowman, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Jacob Beidelman, died at Natchez, Miss., July 3, 1864.
- John Becher, killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
- Alfred Boynton, must. in Feb. 18, 1865.
- Adam Backman, must. in March 23, 1865; not on muster-out roll.
- Edwin K. Crader.
- Thomas K. Crader, must. in March 5, 1865.
- Charles Carter, must. in Feb. 20, 1865.
- John Curran.
- Jacob Diehl, must. in Feb. 15, 1864.
- Timothy Deterline, must. in Jan. 16, 1865.
- Lewis Dennis, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Timothy Donahue, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Alpheus Deck, must. in Dec. 19, 1863; died at New Orleans, La., June 3, 1864.
- Benjamin Diehl, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; killed at Pocatigo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Henry Daisor, must. in April 19, 1865; trans. from 14th Regiment, Pa. Cav. April 19, 1865.
- Henry Doll, must. in Dec. 17, 1863.
- William L. Eshbach, must. in Jan. 21, 1864.

- Charles Eckert, must. in Dec. 29, 1863; must. out by General Order Sept. 25, 1865.
- Milton A. Engleman, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- William Eberhart, died at Fort Jefferson, Fla., May 9, 1863.
- Francis Everett, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
- Mantes Eisenhart, must. in Feb. 6, 1864.
- Peter G. Fegeley, must. in Feb. 2, 1864.
- Malrai Foust, must. in Jan. 16, 1865.
- William Frick, must. in Feb. 15, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
- Joseph Fisher, disch. on surg. certif. March 4, 1862.
- Ferdinand Fisher, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- William G. Frame, must. in Sept. 24, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 4, 1864.
- Henry Gelter, absent, sick, at muster out.
- James Gaumer, must. in Sept. 11, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Franklin T. Good, must. in Sept. 8, 1862; disch. by order of War Department Aug. 13, 1864.
- Preston B. Good, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- William H. Gupitill, must. in Jan. 30, 1865; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 15, 1865.
- John Great, must. in Oct. 31, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 16, 1864.
- William Geisinger, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 9, 1865.
- Henry C. Graceley, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 13, 1864.
- William Hertz.
- John J. Harte, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent at muster out.
- Ed. H. Hunsberger, must. in Jan. 1, 1862.
- Max J. Hallmeyer, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 28, 1863.
- Jonathan Heller, must. out Sept. 18, 1864; died at New Orleans June 7, 1864.
- George T. Henry, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Cornelius Heist, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Henry Henn, must. in Feb. 2, 1865; must. out by General Order May 15, 1865.
- Solomon Hillegass, must. in Sept. 8, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Levinus Hillegass, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Franklin Hoffert, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Henry J. Hornbeck, pro. to com. sergt. April 15, 1864.
- John Heil, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Nov. 4, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Philip Hower, died at New Orleans, La., April 21, 1864.
- Jacob Hay, must. in Feb. 15, 1865; died at Charleston, S. C., Oct. 10, 1865.
- John C. Helfrich, died at New Orleans, La., Aug. 5, 1864.
- Frederick L. Jacobs, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Charles Kauffman, must. in Feb. 2, 1865.
- Daniel T. Keiser, must. in Jan. 25, 1864.
- William Keck, must. in Jan. 29, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
- Allen P. Kemmerer, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; disch. by Special Order April 17, 1864.
- Lewis Keiper, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- James H. Knerr, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- George Knauss, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- William H. Kramer, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- John Kremmill, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 28, 1863.
- Benjamin S. Koons, must. in Feb. 2, 1865; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 10, 1865.
- William Kennedy, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; died at Philadelphia, May 25, 1865.
- J. Knappenberger, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- John Kuntz, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- Isaac Kase, must. in Feb. 2, 1865.
- D. Leibensperger, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.
- Emanuel Loeffler, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.
- William Leiby, must. in Sept. 28, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Benjamin G. Lucas, must. in Oct. 23, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865.
- George W. Lightfoot, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 26, 1865.
- George Lehr.
- Julius Lasker, killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 10.
- John Lynn, must. in Sept. 17, 1862.
- Charles Moyer, absent, without leave, at muster out.
- Nathan Miller.
- Wellington Martin, must. in Dec. 7, 1863.
- Hiram Mertz, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.
- Franklin C. Mertz, must. in Dec. 29, 1863.
- William H. Mertz, must. in Feb. 2, 1865.
- William Martin, must. in Jan. 24, 1865.
- John Meisenheimer, disch. on surg. certif. March 4, 1862.
- Henry Meyer, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 21, 1863.
- Edmund Miller, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 9, 1862.
- Orlando Miller, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Franklin Moyer, trans. to 1st U. S. Art., Nov. 28, 1862.
- Barney Montague, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Gideon Moyer, must. in Sept. 11, 1862.
- John R. Moody, must. in Jan. 19, 1865.
- William Mercer, must. in April 28, 1865.
- Daniel Mead, must. in Feb. 25, 1865.
- Benjamin F. Neur, must. in Nov. 23, 1863.
- James Noddins, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; absent at muster out.
- Franklin Oland, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 30, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C. Oct. 22, 1862.
- Condy O'Donnel. Aaron Peter.
- Moses Peter, must. in Dec. 19, 1863.
- Francis Pfeifer. Henry G. Rice.
- Jonathan W. Reber, must. in Dec. 29, 1863.
- George Reber, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Israel Reinhard, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- William C. Reinsmith, must. in Oct. 31, 1861.
- Jonas Scherer. J. W. H. Strominger.
- Francis Stuber.
- Ambrose L. Shultz, must. in Feb. 29, 1864.
- Reuben L. Seip, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.
- Christian Smith, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.
- Daniel Scheetz, must. in Jan. 4, 1864.
- Charles Stem, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
- John Schimpf, Sr., disch. on surg. certif. March 4, 1862.
- Francis Smetzer, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Jacob Stangala, disch. on surg. certif. April 18, 1864.
- Edwin S. Stahler, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- William Sieger, must. in Oct. 22, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865.

- Walter C. Smith, must. in Oct. 31, 1861; trans. to U. S. Signal Corps, Feb. 29, 1864.
- Irvin Scheirer, must. in Oct. 1, 1862; died at Fort Jefferson, Fla. May 18, 1863.
- Edmund G. Scholl, died at Key West, Fla., May 18, 1862.
- Christian Schla, died at New Orleans, La., June 1, 1864.
- Henry Smith, died at New Orleans, La., May 30, 1864.
- Jeremiah Strahley, died at New Orleans, La., May 14, 1864.
- Carl Shorp. F. Sly.
- W. H. Trumbower, must. in Feb. 2, 1864.
- Lewis Teichman, must. in March 22, 1865.
- Luther M. Toomey, must. in Nov. 30, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. March 31, 1865.
- Nathan Troxell, disch. on surg. certif. April 18, 1864.
- John A. Ulig, disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 12, 1862.
- Augustus Upman, must. in Jan. 30, 1865.
- Fred. Vaughn, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; trans. to Co. C, Dec. 9, 1864.
- I. Vartin, died at Fort Jefferson, Fla., Jan. 24, 1864.
- Frederick H. Walter.
- Simon D. Wolf, must. in March 21, 1864.
- Edward Wieand, must. in Feb. 2, 1865.
- Frederick Weisbach, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- George Wooten, must. in Nov. 28, 1863; must. out Sept. 9, 1865.
- John E. Webster, must. in Sept. 24, 1861; died at Baton Rouge, La., June 24, 1864.
- Reuben Wetzell, died at Georgetown, D. C., Nov. 17, 1861; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery.
- Jeremiah Westcott, must. in Jan. 30, 1865.
- Peter Weller, must. in March 10, 1865.
- David Weider, must. in Sept. 17, 1862.
- George Xander, must. in Oct. 31, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Joseph Young, must. in March 1, 1864; must. out May 17, 1865.
- William Young, died at Washington, D. C., Nov. 24, 1861; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery.
- Engelbert Zanger, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Henry Zeppenfelt, must. in March 1, 1864; died at Beaufort, S. C., Sept. 10, 1862.
- Owen Kuder, must. in Oct. 16, 1862; pro. to corp. June 2, 1865; to sergt. July 11, 1865; must. out Oct. 15, 1865.
- Charles Nolf, sergt.; killed accidentally at Key West, Fla., June 9, 1862.
- Thomas J. Kerr, must. in July 1, 1863; pro. to corp. July 2, 1865.
- Stephen Hettinger, must. in March 15, 1864; pro. to corp. June 2, 1865.
- Israel F. Hartzell, must. in March 15, 1864; pro. to corp. June 2, 1865.
- Joseph Hettinger, pro. to corp. July 11, 1865.
- Charles H. Dankle, must. in Jan. 26, 1865; pro. to corp. July 11, 1865.
- Jefferson Kunkle, must. in March 31, 1864; pro. to corp. July 11, 1865.
- Alvin J. Hartzell, must. in Nov. 23, 1863; trans. from Co. B, April 16, 1864; pro. to corp. July 11, 1865.
- Henry Miller, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- D. H. Nunemacher, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1862; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- T. W. Fritzinger, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- John W. H. Diehl, pro. to corp. May 17th, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Francis Deifer, pro. to corp. Nov. 29, 1862; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- Joseph Kramer, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; pro. to corp. April 21, 1865; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
- Allen Knauss, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 7, 1865.
- William Frack, must. in Sept. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. May 1, 1862; killed at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864.
- Michael Fitzgibbons, pro. to corp. April 21, 1865.
- Tilghman H. Desh, pro. to corp. April 21, 1865.
- Benjamin Huntzberger, must. in Jan. 14, 1864; pro. to corp. April 21, 1865.
- Julius Benkhart, musician.
- Hippolett Benkhart, musician, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps May 1, 1865.

Privates.

- Frank Allenspach, must. in March 24, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
- George Acher. Theodore Anderson.
- William Burger.
- John Bush, must. in Jan. 5, 1864.
- William Bayne, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
- John Bullard, must. in April 5, 1864; trans. from Co. D, Oct. 23, 1864.
- Theodore Baker, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
- William Baker, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
- J. Bondenschlager, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 29, 1862.
- William Baumeister, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps May 12, 1864.
- John Bartholomew, killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
- John Burns, must. in March 7, 1865.
- William Barre.
- James B. Cole, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 15, 1862.
- Augustus Colvine, must. in Feb. 15, 1865; trans. to Co. C, March 20, 1865.
- John Clemons.
- William H. Dreisbach, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Aug. 1, 1865.
- Edwin Dreisbach, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
- T. T. Drawbaugh, must. in July 1, 1862.

COMPANY I.

Mustered in Aug. 30, 1861; mustered out Dec. 25, 1865, unless where otherwise mentioned.

Coleman A. G. Keck, pro. to capt. Aug. 30, 1861; res. Feb. 22, 1864.

Levi Stuber, pro. to 1st lieut. Aug. 30, 1861; to capt. Aug. 1, 1864; to maj. May 22, 1865.

Theodore Mink, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Sept. 19, 1864; to 1st lieut. Nov. 3, 1864; to capt. May 22, 1865.

Allen Lawall, pro. from sergt. to 2d lieut. Jan. 1, 1865; to 1st lieut. May 30, 1865.

James Stuber, pro. to 2d lieut. Aug. 30, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.

Wm. H. Meyers, wounded at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864; at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 19, 1864; to 1st sergt. May 27, 1865; com. 2d lieut. July 25 to 1st sergt. May 27, 1865; com. 2d lieut. July 25, 1865; not mustered.

Edwin Keiser, sergt.

Edwin Kemp, pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 19, 1864.

Thomas N. Burke, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; to sergt. July 11, 1865.

- John Dias, must. in Jan. 25, 1865.
 Frederick Drester, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 22, 1862.
 Samuel Dillingham, must. in Nov. 18, 1862; trans. from Co. H, 14th Regt. Pa. Cav.; disch. on surg. certif. April 11, 1865.
 L. Druckenmiller, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Conrad Dietrich.
 Peter Dopstadt, must. in March 7, 1865.
 Enos Eckhart, must. in Jan. 30, 1865.
 William Ellis, died at Beaufort, S. C., Aug. 2, 1862.
 Walter P. Fetzer.
 Joseph Freeman, must. in March 10, 1865.
 Francis Farrell, must. in March 10, 1865.
 W. Fenstermacher, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Owen Fetzer, died at New Orleans, La., April 19, 1864.
 Isaiah Foy.
 John Gross, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 Charles Gross, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
 Henry Gutthard, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
 Alexander Great. A. Genstenlichter.
 George T. Gross, disch. on surg. certif. July 30, 1862.
 Samuel Guth, disch. on surg. certif. July 20, 1864.
 Allen P. Gilbert, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Francis Gildner, killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 10.
 Solomon Gross, must. in Feb. 8, 1864.
 Eli K. Hunsberger, must. in Jan. 16, 1864; absent at muster out.
 Charles Henry. Granville D. Hangen.
 Joseph Hawk, must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
 David C. Hawk, must. in April 1, 1864; died at New Orleans, La., July 28, 1865.
 Albert Hiller, must. in March 7, 1865.
 George W. Hartzell.
 William F. Henry, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Uriah Henry, must. in Feb. 9, 1863.
 Daniel Kramer, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
 Levi Kraft, disch. on surg. certif. March 12, 1864.
 Edwin Keiper, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Xaver Kraff, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Charles Kaucher, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 David F. Knerr, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Solomon Krechlo, trans. to Capt. Snyder's company, 1st U. S. Art., Nov. 27, 1862.
 Charles Klotz, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; trans. to Co. H, Dec. 7, 1862.
 Elvin Knauss, died at New Orleans, La., Aug. 3, 1864.
 Ogdon Lewis, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Samuel Lutz, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; trans. from Co. B, April 16, 1864.
 John J. Lawall, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Peter Lynd, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Franklin Lefler, must. out Oct. 30, 1864.
 David Lost, died at Camp Griffin, Va., Oct. 29, 1861.
 James Lutz, must. in Nov. 23, 1863; trans. from Co. B, April 16, 1864; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 William Mench, disch. on surg. certif. July 14, 1864.
 Harrison W. Miller, must. in Jan. 14, 1864.
 Charles Matzkowsky, must. in Feb. 20, 1864.
 William Martin, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 29, 1864.
 Oscar Miller, must. out Sept. 20, 1864.
 Aaron McHose, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Sylvester McCabe, must. in Jan. 17, 1862; must. out Jan. 17, 1865.
 Jesse Moyer, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Leander Morrell, must. in Oct. 23, 1864; trans. from Co. H, 14th Regt. Pa. Cav.; must. out Oct. 22, 1865.
 Philip W. Miller, must. in Nov. 20, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, April 3, 1865.
 Jeremiah Metz, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 John McIntire.
 William McLaughlin, must. in March 8, 1865.
 Nicholas McKeever. Jacob Newhard.
 Samuel Moss, must. in July 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 12, 1864.
 Jacob Peter, must. in Nov. 24, 1863.
 Alfred C. Pretz, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; trans. to 2d Fla. Cav. March 31, 1864.
 Cornelius Rowan, must. in Nov. 24, 1863.
 George Rhoads. Joseph Rockell.
 William Reed, must. in March 20, 1865.
 James C. Robertson, disch. by order of War Department Jan. 27, 1862.
 William Radeline, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; died at Charleston, S. C., Oct. 25, 1865.
 Marcus Roth, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
 S. M. Rauvenblach. Milton H. Stephens.
 William Swartz. Levi Stein.
 Reuben Snyder, must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
 Jacob Seber, must. in Dec. 24, 1863.
 David Shaffer, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 22, 1862.
 Henry D. Spinner, disch. on surg. certif. July 27, 1863.
 Henry C. Snaveley, must. in Jan. 16, 1862; must. out Jan. 17, 1865.
 Frederick Scarbecker, must. in Nov. 23, 1862; trans. from Co. H, 14th Regt. Pa. Cav.; must. out Nov. 22, 1865.
 Charles G. Sasserman, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 2, 1865.
 Gottlieb Schweitzer, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William Smith, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Samuel Smith, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Stephen Schechterly, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order, June 1, 1865.
 Charles Smith, must. in March 7, 1865; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Frank W. Siegfried, trans. to Capt. Snyder's company, 1st U. S. Art., Feb. 26, 1863.
 Francis Stick, died at New Orleans, La., June 20, 1864.
 Jonas Snyder, died on board of the steamer "McClellan" July 8, 1864.
 Henry J. Schlagle, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Jan. 13, 1865.
 Joseph Stephens, must. in Nov. 5, 1862; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 Frederick Smith, died at Fort Tyler, Texas, May 4, 1864.
 Isaiah Schlochter.
 Peter M. Stockslager.
 Clinton Sage, must. in March 10, 1865; not on muster-out roll.
 Levi Schoittz, died at Philadelphia March 14, 1864.
 Edwin F. Trickler.

Henry Trask, must. in March 6, 1865.
 John L. Transue, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John Troxell, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Israel Troxell, must. in Sept. 10, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 James Vansyckel.
 Daniel Vansyckel, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Eli Wieder.
 William Walter, must. in Jan. 4, 1864.
 Harrison Weil.
 Henry W. Weil.
 Gideon Weiser.
 Henry W. Weiser, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William Wipkey, must. in Oct. 18, 1861; must. out
 Oct. 30, 1864.
 Samuel Wierbach, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Daniel Wannemaker, mut. in Sept. 10, 1862; must.
 out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Lewis Warner, trans. to Capt. Snyder's company, 1st U. S. Art., Nov. 27, 1862.
 Francis Xander.
 Nathaniel Xander, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Joseph Yonkert, must. in Feb. 2, 1865.
 Peter Yeager, must. in Jan. 4, 1864.
 Thomas Ziegler, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct.
 19, 1864.
 Frederick Ziegler, must. in Oct. 23, 1862; trans.
 from 14th Regt. Pa. Cav.; disch. on surg. certif.
 April 11, 1865.

COMPANY K.

Mustered in Sept. 17, 1861; mustered out Dec. 25,
 1865, unless where otherwise mentioned.
 George Junkert, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; pro. to capt. Sept. 17, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S.
 C., Oct. 25, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Charles W. Abbott, pro. to 1st lieut. Sept. 17, 1861; to capt. Oct. 22, 1862; to lieut.-col. Jan. 3, 1865.
 Matthias Miller, pro. from corp. to 1st sergt. Jan.
 1, 1864; to 2d lieut. Aug. 1, 1864; to capt. Jan.
 4, 1865.
 David H. Fetherolf, pro. from 2d to 1st lieut., May 2, 1862; must. out Nov. 17, 1864.
 Franklin Beisel, pro. from corp. to 1st sergt. Aug.
 7, 1864 to 1st lieut. Jan. 23, 1865.
 Alfred P. Swoyer, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut.
 May 2, 1863; killed at Sabine Cross-Roads, La.,
 April 8, 1864.
 Elias F. Benner, pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 14, 1864; to 2d lieut. Jan. 23, 1865.
 George J. Scherer, pro. from corp. to sergt. Nov.
 6, 1864; to 1st sergt. Jan. 24, 1865.
 John Bischoff, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct.
 22, 1862; pro. from corp. to sergt. Jan. 24,
 1865.
 Samuel Kunfer, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; to sergt. Jan. 24, 1865.
 Samuel Reinert, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct.
 22, 1862; pro. to corp. Aug. 1, 1864; to sergt.
 Oct. 1, 1865.
 William Landis, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; pro. to sergt. Oct. 1, 1865.
 Peter Reinmiller, sergt. must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Conrad Volkanand, sergt. Must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Phaon Guth, sergt. Must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out
 Oct. 1, 1865.
 William H. Berger, died at Philadelphia Nov. 5,
 1865, of wounds received at Cedar Creek, Va.,
 Oct. 19, 1864.

Edwin Moyer, sergt.
 Manoh Carl, corp. wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C.,
 Oct. 22, 1862.
 C. Weidenbach, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864.
 Edwin Person, must. in Feb. 9, 1864; pro. to corp.
 Sept. 26, 1864.
 William Hinkle, must. in March 29, 1864; pro. to corp. April 21, 1865.
 John Saylor, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; pro. to corp.
 July 1, 1865.
 Nathan Handwerk, must. in March 7, 1864; pro. to corp. Oct. 1, 1865.
 Amos Slutter, must. in March 29, 1864; pro. to corp. Oct. 1, 1865.
 George Kruck, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Lewis Benner, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Martin Guth, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct.
 1, 1865.
 Joseph Frack, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; must. out June 22, 1865.
 William Knerr, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out
 Oct. 1, 1865.
 William Schubard.
 Daniel Fritz, musician, disch. on surg. certif. July 29, 1862.

Privates.

Valentine Amend, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Benjamin Amey, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out
 Oct. 1, 1865.
 Charles Acker, must. in Nov. 5, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. May 19, 1865.
 William Barr, must. in Feb. 8, 1864.
 Peter Berkemeyer, must. in Feb. 10, 1864.
 Francis Boger.
 Charles Bower, must. in March 15, 1864.
 Henry A. Breinig, must. in Feb. 21, 1865.
 Joseph Bachman, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 16, 1861.
 M. Bornschie, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William H. Barber, must. in July 26, 1862; must.
 out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Tilghman Boger, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; must. out
 by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Tilghman Breisch, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out
 Oct. 1, 1865.
 William Brecht, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, March 1, 1864.
 Lewis Berliner, killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 10.
 John Bower, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
 William Carl.
 Peter Cope, must. in March 21, 1864; must. out by General Order June 22, 1865.
 Francis Dankle.
 John Delp, must. in Aug. 11, 1863; drafted.
 John Dottery, must. in Dec. 2, 1863.
 E. Druckenmiller, disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 18, 1864.
 Alfred Diehl, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out
 Oct. 28, 1865.
 Daniel D. Dackratt, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; pro. to principal musician Sept. 1, 1863.
 Lewis Dipple, died at Key West, Fla., April 27, 1862.
 Philip W. Datzius, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; died at Portsmouth Grove, R. I., Nov. 9, 1864.
 William Eastman, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
 Werner Erbe, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, March 1, 1864.

- William Frey, must. in March 2, 1864.
 Charles Fisher, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John F. Fersch, disch. on surg. certif. March 11, 1864.
 Paul Ferg, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 20, 1862.
 Joseph Freas, must. in March 10, 1865; must. out by General Order Sept. 14, 1865.
 Rudolph Fisher, disch. on surg. certif. July 29, 1862.
 Harrison Fegley, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864, trans. to Co. E, 21st Regt., 1st Bat. Vet. Res. Corps, Jan. 17, 1865.
 Edward Frederick, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; died at Fort Jefferson, Fla., Feb. 16, 1863.
 Gottlieb Fiesel, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Nov. 9, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 John Gulty.
 Benedict Glichler, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; must. out by General Order, May 19, 1865.
 Jacob Geesey, must. in Oct. 12, 1864; must. out Oct. 11, 1865.
 Matthias Gerrett, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; died at New Orleans, La., May 22, 1864.
 Edwin Gross, must. in Dec. 15, 1863; died at Charleston, S. C., Oct. 20, 1865.
 Charles Grim, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
 Jacob F. Hertzog, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 24, 1863.
 Charles Heincy, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William P. Heller, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Harrison Handwerk, must. out Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
 Edward Houser, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
 Henry Hantz, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; must. out Oct. 19, 1865.
 John Hinderer, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 1, 1864.
 Wm. A. Heckman, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; promoted to principal musician Sept. 1, 1863.
 Paul Houser, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; drowned from steamer "Pocahontas" June, 1864.
 Nicholas Hagelgaus, killed at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864.
 George Hoffman, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; died at Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21, 1865.
 Jacob Hull, must. in May 2, 1865; trans. from 159th regt. P. V. May 2, 1865.
 George Kase, must. in Dec. 2, 1863.
 Abraham Keiter, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
 William S. Keiter, must. in Feb. 16, 1865.
 Edward Keller, must. in Feb. 16, 1865.
 John W. H. Knerr, must. in Feb. 15, 1865; absent, on detached duty at muster out.
 James E. Knerr, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
 Frederick Knell, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. May 9, 1863.
 John Koffler, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 7, 1863.
 Jacob Kentzler, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John Holdhoff, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Anthony Krause, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John Keiser, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
 George Kilmore, killed near Berryville, Va., Sept. 5, 1864.
 Moses F. Klotz, must. in Dec. 15, 1863; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 9.
 John Kolb, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 David Klotz, must. in Nov. 5, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 1, 1864.
 Julius Landrock. William Leonhard.
 W. A. Leibensperger, must. in March 15, 1864.
 Daniel H. Long.
 Lewis Long, must. in Dec. 2, 1863.
 Eliah Leh, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Amandus Long, died at Key West, Fla., March 29, 1862.
 George Leonhard, died at Key West, Fla., April 19, 1862.
 Joseph Louis, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 23, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Abraham Landis, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 23, 1862, of wounds received at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Solomon H. Long, must. in March 15, 1864; died at New Orleans, La., Aug. 21, 1864.
 Harrison Metzger.
 Jonas Metzger, must. in Oct. 18, 1861.
 Lewis Miller.
 Peter Miller, must. in Feb. 17, 1865.
 John Moser, must. in Feb. 22, 1864.
 Samuel Madder, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Lewis Metzger, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Alfred Muthard, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 David Moesner, must. out by General Order, Aug. 21, 1865.
 Martin Muench, died at Key West, Fla., July 22, 1862.
 John McConnell, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Jacob Madden, died of wounds received at Pleasant Hills, La., April 9, 1864.
 Patrick McFarland, died at Fort Jefferson, Fla., Sept. 16, 1862.
 William Noll, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order June 1, 1865.
 Conrad Nagle, died at Alexandria, Va., Aug. 23, 1864; grave 2604.
 Frederick Nessler, died at Key West, Fla., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Charles Preston, must. in Dec. 17, 1863.
 Elias Ready, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 26, 1861.
 Martin Reifinger, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 3, 1864.
 Henry S. Romig, must. in Dec. 2, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. April 11, 1865.
 Charles Resch, died at Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 10, 1864.
 Charles Richder, must. in Nov. 5, 1862 died at Baltimore, Md., Sept. 1, 1864.
 William Shrank, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 David Semmel.
 Benjamin Shoemaker, must. in Dec. 2, 1863.
 William H. Shoemaker, must. in Dec. 2, 1863.
 Lewis G. Seip, must. in Feb. 19, 1864.
 Tilghman Sourwine, absent, sick, at muster out.
 John G. Snyder, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
 William H. Snyder, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
 Levi Stahly, must. in April 1, 1864.
 Paul Strauss, wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Daniel Strauss, must. in March 15, 1864.

Evan Strauss, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
 James Strauss, wounded at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864.
 William Sterner, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
 Andreas Snyder, disch. on surg. certif. June 3, 1862.
 F. Sackenheimer, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 1, 1862.
 John Schimpf, wounded at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 John Scholl, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 William D. Schick, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. July 4, 1865.
 Alfred Smith, must. in March 3, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. July 19, 1865.
 William Shearer, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 15, 1864.
 Henry Savitz, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
 William Schlicher, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; must. out Oct. 1, 1865.
 Franklin Smith, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; must. out Oct. 9, 1865.
 James Sieger, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865.
 Charles Stout, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out Oct. 28, 1865.
 John G. Sigle, must. in March 2, 1864; must. out by General Order Nov. 14, 1865.
 Lewis Schneek, must. in Dec. 15, 1863; killed at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 10.
 John Schuchard, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 24, 1862, of wounds received at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
 Augustus Schirer, died at Key West, Fla., April 5, 1862.
 Josiah Siegler, must. in May 28, 1864.
 Henry S. Toole, must. in Oct. 17, 1862; must. out by General Order July 8, 1865.
 Christopher Ulrich, must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Lewis Wasser, must. in Feb. 21, 1865.
 James D. Weil, must. in March 2, 1864.
 Levi Wagner, must. in Feb. 4, 1864.
 Samuel Woodring.
 Christian F. Wieland, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to assistant surgeon Dec. 13, 1864.
 Samuel Wolf, killed at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864.
 William Walbert, died at New Orleans, La., April 30, 1864.
 Benjamin Zellner, must. in Dec. 15, 1863.

COL. T. H. GOOD.

Col. Tilghman H. Good was born in South Whitehall township, Oct. 6, 1830. He was brought up on the farm of an uncle until he became 16 years of age, when he went to Allentown and learned the trade of shoemaker. After following his trade at Philadelphia for two years, he conducted a shoe store at Allentown for a short time; then carried on the Allen Hotel for several years. He acted as teller of the Allentown Bank from 1855 to 1859.

Col. Good became identified with the state militia in 1849 and served as Captain of the Allen Rifles for a time. When the Civil War broke out he and this company volunteered in April, 1861, being assigned as Co. I, 1st Regt., and he was chosen lieutenant-colonel. When the term of three months expired, he organized the 47th Regt. Pa. Vols., for three years and served with the regiment until discharged Sept. 24, 1864.

After the Civil War he carried on the American Hotel from 1865 to 1869. He was then engaged in the real estate and insurance business for ten years, when he again secured the Allen House and ran it until 1885. Then he removed to Reading and conducted the Grand Central Hotel on Penn Square until his decease July 18, 1887.

In 1870 he resumed his connection with military affairs and became the captain of the Allen Rifles, N. G. P. He was promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1874, and to colonel in 1875, and re-elected in 1880. He participated in the Reading riot of July, 1877.

Col. Good served in the State Assembly 1858-59; and officiated as Mayor of Allentown three terms, 1869-71, 1871-73, and 1874-76. He was affiliated prominently with Free Masonry and became a Knight Templar.

Major William H. Gausler was born at Rittersville, May 9, 1830, and received his education mostly in the schools at Bethlehem. He was employed on the Lehigh canal for a number of years and eventually ran twelve boats from White Haven to Philadelphia, with a line to Allentown, for supplying the towns en route with provisions, etc. From 1856 to 1861 he was engaged in the lumber business at Allentown. Then he enlisted in the Civil War, served as a captain for 3 months, from April to July, 1861, and as a major in the 47th regiment for 3 years. While at Key West he officiated as the provost-marshal and commander of Fort Taylor.

In 1866, Major Gausler located at Philadelphia and engaged in the wholesale grocery business, and later in the wholesale queensware business. He was a frequent visitor to Allentown. He was president of the Reunion Association of the 47th regiment, and always attended its meetings. He died March 16, 1914, nearly 84 years old.

Of the captains of the 47th regiment, Capt. Edwin G. Minnich, of Co. B, was killed at Cedar Creek, Oct. 19, 1864. Capt. Charles Mickleby, of Co. G, was killed at Pocatoligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862. Capt. George Junkert, of Co. K, died Oct. 25, 1862, of wounds received at Pocatoligo, and Capt. John J. Goebel, of Co. G, died at Winchester, Va., October, 1864. Capt. Thos. B. Leisenring died at Allentown, June 13, 1887. Captains Wm. H. Kleckner, of Co. B.; Henry S. Harte, and Edwin Gilbert, of Co. F.; C. A. G. Keck, Levi Stuber, and Theodore Mink, of Co. I, and Chas. W. Abbott, of Co. K, are deceased. The surviving captains, in 1914, are E. P. Rhoads, of Defiance, Ohio, who was born in Allentown Nov. 11, 1833, of Co. B, and Matthias Miller, of Allentown, of Co. K.

NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT (9th Cavalry).—A part of Co. A, from Lehigh county was in this regiment. It was organized on the 29th of August, 1861, and its place of rendezvous was near Harrisburg. On the 20th of November, it moved to Louisville, via Pittsburgh, went into camp at Jeffersonville, and to the front in January, 1862. In February, on the advance of Gens. Buell and Mitchell against Gen. A. S. Johnson, at Bowling Green, it was ordered to remain for the protection of the State. The battalions were posted at different localities. In March the regiment was ordered into Tennessee, and in May the 3d Battalion met a force of Morgan's cavalry at Lebanon (where that daring leader was defeated) and, afterward, captured Morgan's rear-guard, and pursued his force to the Cumberland mountains at Sparta. The same battalion was again warmly engaged at Moore's Hill on the 6th of June, and at Tompkinsville, on the 9th of July, with Morgan's force again.

The battalions were united in Kentucky early in August, and the regiment was engaged in protecting the State against Morgan's bands. It covered the retreat of Gen. Nelson to Louisville, after the battle of Richmond, Ky., on the 30th of August, and in doing so had a sharp fight with the rebel cavalry at Shelbyville. It was engaged at Perryville, where it fought bravely, and lost 10 killed and 27 wounded.

It returned to Louisville and on the 22d of December went on an expedition through the Cumberland, Pine, and Clinch mountains. On the 1st of January, 1863, it reached the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, captured a force of the enemy, and burned the bridge over the Watauga. Twelve miles distant, on the Holston river, another force of 250 was captured and paroled, and a mile of trestle-work destroyed. The command then recrossed the mountains and reached Nicholasville on the 13th of January. Soon afterward the regiment went to Louisville, then to Nashville, and, on the 8th of February, to Franklin, where it drove Forrest's cavalry from the town. During eighteen days the regiment confronted a vastly superior force of rebel cavalry under Van Dorn. In the Chickamauga campaign the regiment was in action at the battles of Rover, Middleton, and Shelbyville, at which latter it captured a battery and about 1,000 prisoners. It was also in action at Cowan, Lafayette, and Chickamauga.

In the Winter and Spring of 1863-64 it was in the battles of Dandridge, New Market, Mossy Creek, and Fair Garden. It then re-enlisted, had a furlough of thirty days, and returned, 1,200 strong, in May. During the Summer of 1864 the regiment operated against Morgan in his last raid into Kentucky, and on the 2d of September reached Chattanooga, crossed the mountains to McMinnville, and on the 6th defeated a brigade of Wheeler's command, taking about 300 prisoners. The same day the regiment defeated a part of the force of the rebel general, Williams.

The regiment joined Gen. Sherman at Marietta, Ga., and on the 14th of November started on the march to the sea. During this march it was in action at Lovejoy's Station, Macon, Bear Creek, Waynesboro, Buckhead Creek, Buckhead Church, and Waynesboro again.

After reaching Savannah, the regiment delayed a month, then went forward, and was in action on the Charleston and Augusta Railroad, at Aiken, Lexington, Black Stakes Station, Averysboro (N. C.), Bentonville, near Raleigh, Hillsboro Road, and Morrisville.

This regiment had the honor of firing the last gun at the enemy before the surrender of General Johnson, and of receiving the flag of truce with a letter asking for terms of surrender. After this surrender the command went to Lexington, where it remained till the 18th of July, when it was mustered out of the service.

The following is a list of Lehigh county soldiers:

NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT (NINTH CAVALRY)

THREE YEARS.

Company A.

- Samuel H. Schneck, 1st sergt., must. in Oct. 3, 1861; pro. from corp. May 20, 1865; must. out with company, July 18, 1865.
 James B. Hammersley, sergt. must. in Oct. 3, 1861; pro. from private Jan. 1, 1864; com. 2d lieu. March 16, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 Tilghman Miller, bugler, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; killed at Louisville, Ky., July 20, 1864.
 Charles Dickson, farier, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Privates.

- Daniel F. Bechtel, must. in Oct. 31, 1861; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 Augustus Ebert, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; pro. to hospital steward, Jan. 1, 1865.
 Ellis T. Hammersley, must. in Oct. 31, 1861; wounded at Carters Station, Dec. 30, 1862; and at Watauga River, Tenn., Jan. 1, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Oscar T. Hoffman, must. in May 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 Henry H. Mertz, must. in Oct. 3, 1861, must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 Victor Matauer, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 John Masenheimer, must. in June 20, 1864; disch. by General Order July 18, 1865.
 Richard N. Saeger, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
 Edward G. Yeager, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; disch. by General Order May 29, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

NINE MONTH'S SERVICE.

This regiment, of which Companies D and G were recruited in Lehigh county, was raised in response to the proclamation of the governor, issued July 21, 1862, calling for troops to serve nine months. The several companies rendezvoused at Harrisburg, and were mustered into service from the 13th to the 15th of August. A Lehigh county man, W. W. Hammersley, was chosen lieutenant-colonel. On the 16th of August the regiment was ordered to Washington. Soon after its arrival there it crossed the Potomac, and encamped for a week on Arlington Heights. On the 21st it moved to Fairfax Seminary, and on the 29th to Fort Woodbury, where for a week it was incessantly engaged in felling timber and erecting fortifications. On the 6th of September the regiment, in light marching order, recrossed the Potomac, and entered on the Maryland campaign. The first engagement in which the regiment participated was at Antietam creek, on the 17th of September, where it made a most gallant charge. Colonel Croasdale was instantly killed, and Lieut.-Col. Hammersley was severely wounded. The regiment received a most severe fire, 34 being killed and 85 wounded, of whom 6 subsequently died. After the battle the regiment was alternately encamped at Sandy Hook and Maryland Heights. On the 16th the regiment arrived at the Neabsco river, where it was halted, and on the following day turned back to Fairfax station, the struggle at Fredericksburg being over. On the 19th of January, 1863, it proceeded to Stafford Court House. It was here placed in Winter quarters and was employed on guard and picket duty until the opening of the Spring campaign under Hooker. While here, Lieut.-Col. Hammersley, being permanently disabled by the wounds received at Antietam, resigned, and Capt. L. Heber Smith was commissioned to succeed him. On the 1st of May, the corps having reached Chancellorsville, the brigade was ordered to entrench on the plank road leading through the Wilderness. Later in the day the regiment was moved out to the United States Ford to open the way over the Rappahannock, but returned in the evening to the intrenchments. During the night it was ordered out upon the front, where it remained until the morning, and during the day participated in the fighting upon the left centre. At evening the enemy succeeded in breaking the right wing and coming in upon the flank occupied by the Union works. The night was very dark, and in retiring to its original line the regiment found itself in the clutch of the foe. Many of the officers of the staff and 225 non-commissioned officers and men were taken prisoners. The balance of the regiment, under command of Capt. Kennedy, succeeded in reaching its position in the line, which it held with tenacity, the battle raging around them with the utmost fury. The brigade having suffered severely during the preceding two days, was, on the afternoon of the 3d, ordered to the rear as guard to prisoners, but in a few hours was again summoned to the front. At the close of the battle the regiment, reduced to 172 men, returned to Stafford Court-House. On the 12th of May, the term of service having expired, it was relieved from duty and proceeded to Harrisburg, where, on the 19th, it was mustered out. The officers and men who were taken prisoners were held but a short time, returning in time to be mustered out with the rest of the command.

Following is the roster of Lehigh men in this regiment:

FIELD AND STAFF.

W. W. Hammersley, lieut.-col., must. into service Aug. 14, 1862; pro. from capt., Co. G, Aug. 25, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 31, 1863.

COMPANY D.

Mustered into service Aug. 13, 1862; mustered out May 19, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.

John P. Dillinger, capt., must. in Sept. 2, 1862. (Died May 15, 1889.)

Walter H. Seip, 1st lieut., must. in Sept. 4, 1862.

William H. Miller, 2d lieut., must. in Sept. 4, 1862.

Eenjamin C. Roth, 1st sergt.

Franklin C. Wasser, sergt.

George Diefenderfer, sergt., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.

Stephen Swartz, sergt.

Frederick A. Ruhl, sergt., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.

William G. Moyer, corp. Ignatz Gresser, corp.

George F. Hawk, corp. George Hoxworth, corp.

Tilghman F. Horn, corp.

William Sowden, corp., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Abraham Worman, corp., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.

Alonzo Kuntz, corp., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.

Privates.

- James Albright. Henry A. Breinig.
 Frederick A. Boas. James A. Bieber.
 Henry A. Berger. Franklin Bower.
 Henry Burger.
 Mahlon H. Beary, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Allen Blank, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Edward Bloss, disch. March 19, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Sylvester Burgen, died near Stafford Court-House, Va., March 2, 1863.
 Franklin Bloss, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Dallas Dillinger.
 Aaron Frederick, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Edwin W. Fried. Solomon S. Frederick.
 Daniel Fried.
 Lewis Frankensfield, died at Washington, D. C., March 22, 1863.
 Victor Faringer. John George.
 William Giess. Richard Grauff.
 William Graver. Andrew Gangwer.
 Henry B. Good, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Stephen A. Henry. Moses L. Klotz.
 Peter Hillegass. Rinehart Keiffer.
 James S. Hoffert. Nathan Keiser.
 Phaon Hartman. Harrison Knauss.
 Philip Helweid. Emanuel Knauss.
 J. H. B. Jarrett. William Kern.
 James A. Jackson.
 George Keck, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 James Lutz. J. B. Lichtenwallner.
 William D. Miller.
 David H. Mattern, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 John Nagle. H. Nunnemaker.
 Henry Nagle, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Charles Nagle. Henry Pfeiffer.
 Tilghman Pcter, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Peter Romig. Henry K. Reiss.
 Jacob Richard. Jacob H. Saeger.
 Charles Snyder, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 John E. Shaffer. Daniel Schlegler.
 Jeremiah Siegfried. Clark Sutton.
 Theodore Siegfried, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 22, 1862.
 Jeremiah Transue. Henry G. Wagner.
 William W. Weaver. Frederick Weaver.
 Henry Wieand. Joseph Yingling.
 James Wetzell. John Young.
 William Wagner.

COMPANY G.

- Mustered in Aug. 12, 1862; mustered out May 19, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.
- W. W. Hammersley, capt., must. in, Aug. 14, 1862; pro. to lieut.-col. Aug. 25, 1862.
 Peter C. Huber, capt., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. from 1st lieut. Sept. 2, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Daniel C. Miller, 1st lieut., must. in Sept. 2, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. Sept. 2, 1862.
- George W. Hamilton, 2d lieut., pro. from 1st sergt. Aug. 18, 1862.
 James A. Lucas, 1st sergt., pro. from corp. Aug. 18, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 William H. Schlosser, sergt., pro. from corp. Sept. 18, 1862.
 Benjamin F. Leech, sergt., pro. from corp.
 Solomon H. Kramer, sergt., pro. from corp., Aug. 18, 1862.
 Freston Brock, sergt.
 Henry Weller, sergt., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Charles A. Pfeiffer, sergt.
 David Hollenbach, corp., pro. Dec. 31, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Reuben D. George, pro. to corp. Feb. 7, 1863.
 Lewis Fink, corp.
 John W. Stull, pro. to corp. Dec. 31, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Samuel Smith, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1862.
 James R. Roney, pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1862.
 Tilghman J. Keck, corp.
 Milton H. Dunlap, corp.
 Willoughby Knauss, corp., died at Philadelphia, Nov. 18, 1862.
 Wellington Martin, musician, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.

Privates.

- Eli Andreas, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Robert Attreed. Abraham Bechtel.
 George S. Berger, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Reuben Bittner, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Tilghman Bloss. Henry W. Butz.
 Thomas J. Brader. Milton W. Beaver.
 J. Berkenmeyer, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 9, 1863.
 Joseph Barriss, trans. to Co. D, 145th Regt. P. V., date unknown.
 Ira Coffin, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry Creitz.
 Lewis Daubert, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Albert Dorward, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Charles Diefenderfer. Daniel J. Dillinger.
 Hugh O. Davis, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 31, 1863.
 C. Fenstermacher.
 James Eli, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1862.
 William Fry, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1862.
 Edwin Fritzinger, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1862.
 Andrew Flata, died at Washington, D. C., Nov. 8, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery.
 David Gackenbach, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
 Thomas F. Good, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Aaron Grum, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 William H. Good. William A. Goranflo.
 L. W. O. Goranflow, died at Maryland Heights, Md., Nov. 14, 1862.
 William Haas.
 Mandes Henry, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry Huber.
 Tilghman Jacoby, died near Stafford Court-House, Va., Feb. 20, 1863.

William Kenner. Jeremiah Kern.
 Gabriel Kern.
 Alfred Klotz, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 James Krum, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 James Kunkel, missing in action at Chancellorsville, May 2, 1863.
 Theodore Knauss.
 Franklin J. Keck, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 14, 1863.
 John Lentz, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Jacob Long, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry Luckenbill, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Daniel F. Mertz, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Daniel Moyer, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Howard C. Manvill. David Miller.
 Henry Merkel. William H. Miller.
 Franklin Moyer.
 Meno Miller, died at Baltimore, Md., October 3d, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 William Mertz, died at Allentown, Pa., May 13, 1863.
 Samuel B. Parker. Emanuel Paules.
 David O. Prichard, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Paul Rehrig, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 William H. Reitz, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Jonathan W. Reber. Levi F. Riedy.
 Henry G. Richard. Thomas J. Raynes.
 William J. Richard.
 Franklin S. Ritter, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Griffith Schindler. Henry Shenton.
 William Schner. Benjamin F. Smith.
 William G. Smith, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry Stout, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry H. Snyder. Jeremiah Sourwein.
 Reuben Sorben. Daniel Strauss.
 John Watt, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
 John P. Weaver.
 Hiram Wilt, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Henry W. Wint, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
 Daniel Weiss, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., 1863.
 Thomas Zellmer.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT.

(Nine Months' Service, Drafted Militia.)

Seven companies of this regiment were from Lehigh county, and the remaining three from Monroe. They rendezvoused at Philadelphia, in November, 1862. Soon after its organization, the regiment was sent to Suffolk, Va., and selected to accompany Gen. Foster in his expedition for the reinforcement of the army operating upon the defenses of Charleston. Proceeding to Newberne, N. C., it set sail on the 27th of January, 1863, arriving at Hilton Head on the 5th of February. While in the Department of the South, the regiment was principally employed in fatigue duty upon the fortifications and in provost duty. Soon after the expiration of its term it returned North, and was sent to Philadelphia, where, on the 17th and 18th of August, it was mustered out of service.

Following are rosters of the Lehigh companies of this regiment:

COMPANY A.

Mustered in Nov. 7, 1862, and mustered out Aug. 17, 1863, except when specially mentioned.
 Levi Smoyer, captain.
 Monroe H. Miller, 1st lieut., com. qr. May 4, 1863; not mustered.
 Alexander Singmaster, 2d lieut., by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 Levi Giering, 2d lieut. com. 1st lieut., May 1, 1863; not mustered.
 J. Franklin Mertz, 1st sergt., pro. from sergt. Dec. 8, 1862; com. 2d lieut. May 4, 1863; not mustered.
 William F. Seip, sergt. pro. from private Dec 8, 1862.
 Jacob Geary, sergt., pro. from private Dec. 8, 1862.
 Lewis H. Reinhard, sergt.
 Amatas W. Jacoby, sergt., pro. from corp. Nov. 25, 1862.
 Jonas F. Gorr, sergt., disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 James G. Gorr, sergt., disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 Charles H. Hiskey, corp., pro. to corp. March 10, 1863.
 Edward Doll, corp., pro. to corp. March 10, 1863.
 Franklin D. Smoyer, corp.
 Jacob Hinkle, cor. pro. to corp. Dec. 12, 1862.
 Edwin Lorrish, corp.
 Simon S. Miller, corp., pro. to corp. Dec. 12, 1862.
 William H. H. Jarrett, corp., pro. to corp. Nov. 26, 1862.
 Henry Smoyer, corp., disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.
 John Fries, Jr., corp.
 John Bleiler, musician, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.
 John Seislove, musician.
Privates.
 Jacob Acker. William Albitz.
 Reuben Ahner, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 David Baxter. John Bernhart.
 Benjamin Boyer. Nathan Bortz.
 Henry Bleiler, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 27, 1862.
 Frank Christman. Sylvester Engleman.
 David Derr. John Fritz.
 William David. Joshua Fritz.
 William Deitz. David Frederick.
 John H. Eisenhard. C. W. Fenstermacher.
 Lewis Eisenhard. Daniel Faust.
 Augustus Fegley, died at Beaufort, S. C., June 4, 1863.
 William M. Flexer, died at Beaufort, S. C., June 7, 1863.

Stephen Fegley. William Guth.
 Augustus Gorr, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.
 William Gorman.
 Edward Hallacher, disch. by Special Order, Nov.
 26, 1862.
 Jacob Horace, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 William H. Hirkey, died at Beaufort, S. C., March 30, 1863.
 John P. Haas. Michael Kuter.
 James Haines. Amandes Knerr.
 John Haines. Milton Laudenslager.
 John H. Hoffner. L. F. Laudenslager.
 Carolas Haas. John Mayberry.
 Alfred Haas. John Mest.
 John Keck. Jacob Moyer.
 William Kehm. William Miller.
 Amandes Kemmerer.
 John Mongold, disch. by Special Order Nov. 29, 1862.
 Jacob J. Miller, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 James Miller. Josiah Rockel.
 Charles H. Nuss. John Ruhf.
 James Newmoyer. Nathan Rickerd.
 Moses Nelford. Charles Remsen.
 Benneville Oswald. Henry Smith.
 Jacob R. Ritter. Peter Shifferd.
 James Rickard. Peter Shell.
 William Raw. Charles Smelsley.
 John F. Romig. Jacob Sorber.
 Amandus Stephens, disch. by Special Order, Nov.
 26, 1862.
 Alfred Sturk, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 Tilghman Schwartz, died at Beaufort, S. C., May 14, 1863.
 Henry Shaffer. Tilghman Wetzel.
 David Steward.
 Stephen Wieder, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
 William Wieder, disch. on surg. certif. March 29, 1863.
 James Wile.

COMPANY B.

Mustered in Nov. 7, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18,
 1863, except where otherwise mentioned.

Samuel D. Lehr, capt.
 Daniel Knauss, 1st lieutenant.
 John L. Culbertson, 2d lieutenant.
 William Kerr, 1st sergt., pro. from corp. Nov. 25, 1862.
 Franklin C. Balliet, sergt.
 Jacob B. Werley, sergt., pro. from corp. May 6, 1863.
 B. Frank Abbott, pro. to corp. Dec. 24, 1862; to sergt. Feb. 28, 1863.
 Solomon B. Ritter, sergt., pro. from corp. Dec. 8, 1862.
 Aquilla Knauss, sergt., disch. by Special Order, Nov.
 24, 1862.
 Aaron Beisel, sergt., died at Beaufort, S. C., May 5, 1863.
 John A. Long, sergt.
 Tilghman Beisel, pro. to corp. Nov. 20, 1862.
 John Fahringer, pro. to corp. May 6, 1863.
 Allen J. Troxell, pro. to corp. June 2, 1863.
 John Lehman, pro. to corp. Dec. 8, 1862.
 Uriah B. Sanders, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.

Milton J. Guth, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
 Edward Steyer, pro. to corp. June 10, 1863.
 Samuel Roth, corp.
 Alfred T. Bernhard, corp., disch. on surg. certif.
 June 2, 1863.
 Moses L. Shaadt, corp., disch. on surg. certif. Dec.
 24, 1862.
 William Shaffer, pro. to musician Dec. 15, 1862.

Privates.

William H. H. Acker. Nathan Adam.
 Edward Bauer, must. in Dec. 31, 1862.
 John Beidler. Charles Beltz.
 Ferdinand Buchman. Jacob Bast.
 Solomon Blank, died at St. Helena Island, S. C., Feb. 19, 1863.
 Benneville Bart.
 William Cope, must. in Dec. 31, 1862; disch. on surg.
 certif. June 2, 1863.
 John Deily.
 John David, disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.
 Edward Y. Engleman, disch. by Special Order Nov.
 24, 1862.
 Alvin Fink. Aaron Fahringer.
 Charles Frick. Charles Frantz.
 Daniel F. Fink.
 Daniel Ferver, died at Beaufort, S. C., March 18, 1863.
 William Fry. Lewis Gaumer.
 Phaon H. Guth. Alfred Guth.
 David D. Gilbert. Daniel George.
 Joseph Gackenbach, disch. by Special Order Nov.
 22, 1862.
 Charles Hensinger. William Herman.
 Michael Houser. Henry W. Jarrett.
 Thomas Hoffman.
 Josiah K. Knerr, pro. to chaplain March 1, 1863.
 Samuel J. Kramer.
 Franklin Kline, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 Tilghman Keinert. William Kratzer.
 John Kuhns.
 Alexander Kepple, Jr., must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 James S. Kuder.
 James Kline, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 22, 1862.
 James O. Knauss, disch. by Special Order Nov.
 20, 1862.
 Daniel Kerschner, disch. by Special Order Nov.
 25, 1862.
 Andrew Keck, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 24, 1863.
 Edwin Koch, died at Hampton, Va., Feb. 22, 1863.
 James Kichline. Henry M. Lehr.
 Charles Kichline. Elias Laser.
 Solomon Long, disch. by Special Order Nov. 22, 1862.
 Levi Levan. Solomon Miller.
 Andrew Loughridge. Nathan Muthard.
 Alfrom Moyer. William J. Minnich.
 Adam Miller. Franklin Miller.
 Abraham Miller, disch. by Special Order Nov. 22, 1862.
 Joseph Moyer, died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 19, 1863.
 John Moyer. Frederick Oswald.
 M. K. Nunnemacher. Daniel S. Patterson.
 A. Nunnemacher. Joseph N. Ruch.
 Daniel Roth, disch. on surg. certif. May 11, 1863.
 Edwin J. Sell. Joel Steiner.
 Evan Strauss.
 Lewis H. Sell, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 Lewis H. Schaller.
 Jeremiah Speigle, disch. by Special Order Nov. 24, 1862.

Esekias Wisser, disch. by Special Order Nov. 22, 1862. Charles W. Miller. Peter Miller.
 Abraham Miller. Nathaniel Moll.
 Charles Smith, must. in Dec. 12, 1862; disch. on Gideon Moyer, disch. by Special Order Nov. 28, 1862.
 surg. certif. June 2, 1863. Isaac R. Moyer, disch. on surg. certif. March 7, 1862.

Patrick Nugent.
 Edmund Newhard.
 Henry Oisander.
 on surg. certif. June 13, 1863.
 Solomon J. Rawe.
 Jacob Roth.
 Allen Roth.
 Frederick Schermer.
 Matthew Schwerer.
 Moses Semmel.
 Israel Schmoyer.
 , com. 2d lieutenant. May 1, 1863; not

PROGRAM

Selection Arion Band

Invocation Rev. J. M. Rinker

Singing by Audience—"My Country 'Tis of Thee"

My country, 'tis of thee, Sweet land of liberty, Of thee I sing; Land where my fathers died, Land of the pilgrim's pride, From every mountain side Let freedom ring.	My native country, thee, Land of the noble free, Thy name I love; I love thy rocks and rills, Thy woods and templed hills; My heart with rapture thrills Like that above.
--	---

Address Rev. C. D. Kerschner

The American's Creed Ruth Remmel

Recitation—"The Blue and Gray" Dorothy Fetter

"Flanders Field" Francis Scholl

"America's Answer" Robert Boyer

Selection Arion Band

Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg" Mildred Rowe

Tilghman Smith.
 Philip Storm
 died at Beaufort, S. C., May 27,
 Edwin Trivily.
 disch. by Special Order Nov. 25,
 William Wilson.
 Joseph Younkert.

COMPANY E.

Nov. 11, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18, where otherwise mentioned.
 ker, capt., died at Beaufort, S. C., 1st lieutenant.
 bach, 2d lieutenant.
 t sergeant, pro. from corp. Feb. 16, sergeant., died at Fortress Monroe, 1863.
 rgt. John Albright, sergt.
 sergt.
 ergt., pro. from private Nov. 18, gt., disch. by Special Order, date
 Lucas Baumer, corp.
 corp.
 uss, corp.
 to corp. Nov. 18, 1862.
 corp.
 corp., disch. by Special Order

Privates.

John Bergland.
 William Brown.
 John Boyd.
 James Crader.
 David Ehrig.
 Henry Ehe.
 Nathan Ebert.
 William Ebert.
 Stephen Ebert.
 Edward Daus.
 Francis Dimmel.
 Willoughby Egner, died at Hilton Head, S. C.,
 March 1, 1863.
 J. Fenstermacher.
 Franklin Fritzing.
 Samuel S. Faust.
 Charles Ferguson.

Jacob Koppel.
 Isaac Laub.
 David Lauchner, disch. by Special Order Nov. 28, 1862.
 George Loeb.
 John Martin.

John Link.
 William Merkley.
 Alfred Miller.

Stephen Fegley.
 Augustus Gorr, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.
 William Gorman.
 Edward Hallacher, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 26, 1862.
 Jacob Horace, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 26, 1862.
 William H. Hirkey, died at Beauport, 30, 1863.
 John P. Haas.
 James Haines.
 John Haines.
 John H. Hoffner.
 Carolas Haas.
 Alfred Haas.
 John Keck.
 William Kehm.
 Amandes Kemmerer.
 John Mongold, disch. by Special Order, 1862.
 Jacob J. Miller, disch. by Special Order, 1862.
 James Miller.
 Charles H. Nuss.
 James Newmoyer.
 Moses Nelford.
 Benneville Oswald.
 Jacob R. Ritter.
 James Rickard.
 William Raw.
 John F. Romig.
 Amandus Stephens, disch. by Special Order, 26, 1862.
 Alfred Sturk, disch. by Special Order, 1862.
 Tilghman Schwartz, died at Beauport, 14, 1863.
 Henry Shaffer.
 David Steward.
 Stephen Wieder, disch. by Special Order, 1862.
 William Wieder, disch. on surg. cert., 1863.
 James Wile.

William Guth.
 Milton J. Guth, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
 Edward Steyer, pro. to corp. June 10, 1863.
 Samuel Roth, corp.
 Alfred T. Bernhard, corp., disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.

Micha
 Aman
 Miltor
 L. F.
 John J
 John
 Jacob
 Willia

Josiah
 John R
 Nathan
 Charles
 Henry S
 Peter Sh
 Peter Sh
 Charles S
 Jacob So

COMPANY B.

Mustered in Nov. 7, 1862; mustered out Nov. 1863, except where otherwise noted.

Samuel D. Lehr, capt.
 Daniel Knauss, 1st lieut.
 John L. Culbertson, 2d lieut.
 William Kerr, 1st sergt., pro. 1st sergt., 1862.
 Franklin C. Balliet, sergt.
 Jacob B. Werley, sergt., pro. 1st sergt., 1863.
 B. Frank Abbott, pro. to corp. sergt. Feb. 28, 1863.
 Solomon B. Ritter, sergt., pro. 1st sergt., 1862.
 Aquilla Knauss, sergt., disch. by Special Order, 24, 1862.
 Aaron Beisel, sergt., died at Beauport, 1863.
 John A. Long, sergt.
 Tilghman Beisel, pro. to corp. Nov. 20, 1862.
 John Fahringer, pro. to corp. May 6, 1863.
 Allen J. Troxell, pro. to corp. June 2, 1863.
 John Lehman, pro. to corp. Dec. 8, 1862.
 Uriah B. Sanders, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.

Milton J. Guth, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
 Edward Steyer, pro. to corp. June 10, 1863.
 Samuel Roth, corp.
 Alfred T. Bernhard, corp., disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.

Memorial Day Program

St. Marks Cemetery

Sunday Afternoon, June 7th, 1925

At 2 P. M.

Peter Lester, Chief Marshal

Edwin J. Sell.
 Evan Strauss.
 Lewis H. Sell, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 Lewis H. Schaller.
 Jeremiah Speigle, disch. by Special Order Nov. 24, 1862.
 Joel Steiner.

Esckias Wisser, disch. by Special Order Nov. 22, 1862.
 Charles Smith, must. in Dec. 12, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.
 Henry Shuler, died at Suffolk, Va., Dec. 18, 1862.
 Madison Strauss.
 Henry Smith, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 Daniel Taylor, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 Peter Weaver, must. in Dec. 12, 1862.
 James A. Yeager.

COMPANY D.

Mustered in Nov. 8, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.

David Schaadt, capt.
 Samuel A. Brown, 1st lieut., resigned May 2, 1863.
 Josiah Kern, 2d lieut., com. 1st lieut. May 1, 1863.
 John Morgan, 1st sergt., pro. to corp. Dec. 3, 1862; to 1st sergt. May 1, 1863.
 Jesse Wambold, sergt. Silas T. Biery, sergt.
 Ruben Helfrich, sergt., pro. from corp. Nov. 10, 1862.
 Joseph Koch, sergt.
 Josiah Saeger, pro. to corp. Nov. 10, 1862.
 Jacob Herling, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1863.
 Lewis Miller, pro. to corp. March 15, 1863.
 John Lindenmuth, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
 Joseph Miller, pro. to corp. Feb. 10, 1863.
 William J. Frantz, pro. to corp. May 1, 1863.
 Frank B. Gordon, pro. to corp. May 23, 1863.
 Henry M. Lorash, corporal.
 Alexander B. Brown, corp., died at Beaufort, S. C., May 22, 1863.
 Isaac George, musician.

Privates.

James A. Bates.	Lewis R. Brown.
Edwin Biehl.	Samuel Clader.
Peter Bowman.	Francis Carter.
Andrew Buder.	Phaon Diehl.
M. Druckenmiller, disch. on surg. certif. June 13, 1863.
Edwin Diehl, disch. by Special Order Nov. 23, 1862.
George Eisenhard.	James Friezt.
Christian Flarkie.	James Fucherty.
Anthony Fogel.
Charles Gross, disch. on surg. certif. March 23, 1863.
William Hauser, absent, sick, at muster out.
Moses Hauser.	William Harmony.
Henry Hausman.
John Herman, absent, sick, at muster out.
Charles H. Holy.	Philip Horn.
Evan Holben.	William Hunt.
Lewis Hopper.
Nathan Hauser, disch. by Special Order Nov. 23, 1862.
Stephen Kechline, absent, sick, at muster out.
Renadus Kleckner.	Jacob Kromer.
Louis Kratzer.
Charles L. Koch, com. capt. May 1, 1863; not mustered.
John Kiffel.	Henry Lauer.
Jacob Koppel.	John Link.
Isaac Laub.
David Lauchner, disch. by Special Order Nov. 28, 1862.
George Loeb.	William Merkley.
John Martin.	Alfred Miller.

Charles W. Miller.	Peter Miller.
Abraham Miller.	Nathaniel Moll.
Gideon Moyer, disch. by Special Order Nov. 28, 1862.
Isaac R. Moyer, disch. on surg. certif. March 7, 1863.
Charles Mennigle.	Patrick Nugent.
Adam Miller.	Edmund Newhard.
Robert Newhard.	Henry Oisander.
Samuel Oldt, disch. on surg. certif. June 13, 1863.
Herman Peter.	Solomon J. Rawe.
Willoughby Peter.	Jacob Roth.
Joseph Protzzellen.	Allen Roth.
Amandus Reinert.	Frederick Schermer.
Henry Schaffer.	Matthew Schwerer.
Lewis Scheirer.	Moses Semmel.
Thomas Scheirer.	Israel Schmoyer.
Franklin B. Snyder, com. 2d lieut. May 1, 1863; not mustered.
Philip Siegel.	Tilghman Smith.
William Smith.	Philip Storm
Reuben Snyder.
Milton W. Snyder, died at Beaufort, S. C., May 27, 1863.
Frederick Scherer.	Edwin Trivily.
Adam Trickert, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.
Aaron Wenner.	William Wilson.
William Wright.	Joseph Younkert.

COMPANY E.

Mustered in Nov. 11, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.

Tilghman Schleiker, capt., died at Beaufort, S. C., July 9, 1863.
 Peter Graybill, 1st lieut.
 Henry H. Weirbach, 2d lieut.
 Loras Koch, 1st sergt., pro. from corp. Feb. 16, 1863.
 John Hohe, 1st sergt., died at Fortress Monroe, Va., Feb. 16, 1863.
 Charles Hohe, sergt. John Albright, sergt.
 Henry Schleiker, sergt.
 Charles Rockel, sergt., pro. from private Nov. 18, 1862.
 Samuel Furry, sergt., disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 Joel W. Roth, corp. Lucas Baumer, corp.
 William Ziegler, corp.
 Charles H. Ziegenfuss, corp.
 William Hohe, corp.
 Henry Billiard, pro. to corp. Nov. 18, 1862.
 Christian Neuchler, corp.
 John W. Albright, corp., disch. by Special Order date unknown.

Privates.

Frederick Binder.	John Bergland.
Alfred Butz.	William Brown.
Charles Breischer.	John Boyd.
Hiram Burger.	James Crader.
James Carroll.	David Ehrig.
Henry Chron.	Henry Ehe.
John Derr.	Nathan Ebert.
Edward Dallas.	William Ebert.
Francis Dimmel.	Stephen Ebert.
Willoughby Egner, died at Hilton Head, S. C., March 1, 1863.
J. Fenstermacher.	Samuel S. Faust.
Franklin Fritzinger.	Charles Ferguson.

Franklin Finney. Edward Garlich.
 Edwin Gernert. Alfred George.
 William O. Hartman, died at Hilton, S. C., Aug. 10, 1863.
 John Hower, disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 George M. Hoffman. Adam Klauss.
 John Hartman. John A. Knerr.
 Jacob Hopper. George D. King.
 James Johnson. Edward Klauss.
 Levi Knerr.
 Isaac Klougherty, absent, sick, at muster out.
 Samuel Kern, disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 Reuben D. Long. Frederick Martin.
 Paul Michael. David Mack.
 Joseph W. Mohry. Samuel Mack.
 Ephraim Moyer, disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 Frederick Miller. George M. Pilgard.
 Washington Miller. Moses Rau.
 John McFarland. Israel Rumpfolt.
 John C. Newcomer. Willoughby Rickert.
 Edward Reichard, disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 Martin Seibert. William Shields.
 Joseph Somsreither. John Stieb.
 Jesse Shoemaker. Daniel Shoemaker.
 Tilghman Scholl. Michael Stoneback.
 John Schleifer. Joseph Unkle.
 Gideon Snable. Tilghman Weil.
 Henry Sell. William R. Wimmer.
 Reuben Sell. Thomas Widrig.
 Jonas Shaffer. Absalom Weirbach.
 Samuel Smith. Charles W. Weiss.
 Henry Weichter, disch. by Special Order, date unknown.
 Benjamin Wagner, disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.
 William D. Weaver. Tilghman Young.
 Henry Young.

COMPANY G.

Mustered in Nov. 7, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18,
 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.
 Lewis P. Hecker, capt. (Died March 8, 1914.)
 Joseph P. Cornett, 1st lieu.
 William F. Hecker, 2d lieu.
 William G. Fryman, 1st sergt.
 Levi Oberholtzer, sergt., must. in Nov. 12, 1862;
 pro. from corp. Dec. 6, 1862.
 William H. Kuntz, sergt.
 Edwin F. Osenbach, sergt., must. in Nov. 12, 1862;
 pro. from private Nov. 20, 1862.
 Gideon Lentz, sergt., pro. from private Nov. 30, 1862.
 John R. Reichard, sergt., disch. by Special Order,
 Nov. 20, 1862.
 Benneville Roth, sergt., disch. by Special Order,
 Nov. 18, 1862.
 Lewis D. Steckel, sergt., pro. to qr. m. sergt., Dec. 6, 1862.
 W. F. Newhard, corp. Benneville Stehley, corp.
 Michael Klein, pro. to corp. Nov. 20, 1862.
 Jeremiah Oswald, corp.
 William Fisher, must. in Nov. 12, 1862; pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.
 Jeremiah M. Deibert, must. in Nov. 12, 1862; pro.
 to corp. Nov. 20, 1862.
 John W. George, must. in Nov. 12, 1862; pro. to corp. Dec. 10, 1862.

Adam Everett, corp.
 John Handwerk, corp., disch. by Special Order,
 Nov. 20, 1862.
 Benjamin Rockel, corp., disch. by Special Order,
 Nov. 20, 1862.

Privates.

David Buchman. Joseph Bersheig.
 Peter Bear, disch. by Special Order Nov. 20, 1862.
 Peter Benner, disch. by Special Order Nov. 20, 1862.
 William Best.
 Charles E. Clader, must. in Nov. 12, 1862.
 John Deibert. Lewis Deibert.
 Solomon Deibert, disch. by Special Order Nov. 12, 1862.
 Henry Dorwart, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.
 Benneville Eisenhart. John Fisher.
 Charles Frantz. Frederick Frahlic.
 John Gensenleiter.
 Carl Halier, must. in Nov. 14, 1862.
 Nicholas Helm. Daniel Keiser.
 Jeremiah Kerschner. Henry Kern.
 Levi E. Kistler. James Krause.
 Charles Kunsman, must. in Nov. 12, 1862.
 Peter Kuntz.
 Owen Kern, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 18,
 1862.
 Nathan Kennel, disch. on surg. certif. May 8, 1862.
 Andrew Kratzer, died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 18, 1863.
 William Krause. Lewis Leh.
 Joseph T. Leibenguth. William Measimer.
 Henry J. Miller. Jeremiah Miller.
 Reuben Miller. William Montz.
 Adam Minich. Richmond Muthart.
 Reuben Mertz, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.
 William Morgan, pro. to com. sergt. Nov. 20, 1862.
 Stephen Newhard. Moses Peter.
 William Newhard. Levi Peter.
 Jonathan J. Paul, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.
 Tilghman Rebert. Mana A. Rockel.
 Cyrus Richelderfer. Elias Roth.
 Joseph Rickert. Oliver Roth.
 Edwin Rex, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.
 Reuben Roth, died at Beaufort, S. C., April 17, 1863.
 Henry H. Rex. Ephraim Schreiber.
 Willoughby Schaffer. Moses Sensinger.
 Elias Schneck. Harrison Simons.
 Hilary Schneck. Samuel Smith.
 Jeremiah Schneck. Peter Snyder.
 Lewis Schneck. Josiah Steckel.
 Charles Schneider. Tilghman Stehley.
 Henry W. Steibing.
 John Samuel, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.
 Henry Smith. Matthias Winsch.
 John Witmer.
 Conrad C. Wolf, must. in Dec. 23, 1862; died at Hilton Head, S. C., Aug. 11, 1863.
 Jonas Wright, absent, sick, at muster out.
 Valentine Wright, absent, sick, at muster out.
 William Wright, absent, sick, at muster out.
 Alfred Yehl, absent, sick, at muster out.
 Charles Yehl, absent, sick, at muster out.
 Samuel Yehl absent, sick, at muster out.
 Joseph Yehl.
 Lewis Zerfass, disch. by Special Order Nov. 18, 1862.

COMPANY I.

Mustered in Nov. 8, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.

Alvin F. Creitz, capt., disch. Nov. 25, 1862.
Lewis Hermany, capt., pro. from 1st lieu. Nov. 8, 1862.

Wm. G. Grosscup, 1st lieu., pro. from 2d lieu. Nov. 8, 1862.

Allen Xander, 2d lieu., pro. from sergt. Dec. 6, 1862.

Wm. H. Cassler, 1st sergt., pro. from private Nov. 25, 1862.

Amandus Hermany, 1st sergt., disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Stephen Stiegerwalt, 1st sergt., pro. from private Nov. 25, 1862.

Henry B. Creitz, sergt.

Levi F. Stiegerwalt, sergt., pro. from private Nov. 25, 1862.

Daniel Moose, sergt., pro. from private Nov. 25, 1862.

Matthias Behler, sergt., disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

David Horn, sergt., disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

David Wertman, corp.

Samuel Sechler, pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.

Michael Bachert, pro. to corp. Feb. 14, 1863.

Samuel Arnold, pro. to corp. Jan. 13, 1863.

Owen Grosscup, pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.

Lewis Schultz, pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.

Reuben Dauber, pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.

Dennis Northstein, pro. to corp. Dec. 6, 1862.

Levinus Smith, corp., disch. by Special Order June 13, 1863.

Levi S. Follweiler, corp., disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Thomas Everett, corp., disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Reuben Hunsicker, corp., disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Daniel Bachman, corp., died at Hilton Head, S. C., Feb. 14, 1863.

John Shappell, corp. Charles Smith, corp.

Jacob K. Hartman, corp. Elias Herber, musician.

Samuel Follweiler, musician; disch. by Special Order, Dec. 25, 1862.

Privates.

Thomas Braucher. Anthony Coleman.

Daniel Billig. Daniel B. Creitz.

Henry Billig. Willoughby Camp.

Jacob Brobst. John Camp.

C. Druckenmiller.

Charles Deppe, disch. by Special Order June 2, 1863.

Joseph Dengler, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Edward Everett, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Daniel Everett, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Jonas Grim, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Joseph Hausman, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Henry Hartranft, disch. by Special Order June 2, 1863.

William Eckroth. William Freed.

Levi Greenawalt. Joseph Handwerk.

Daniel Heintzelman, died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 26, 1863.

William Henninger.

Jefferson Kunkle.

Owen Krauss.

Benjamin Kunkle, disch. by Special Order, June 2, 1863.

David Kistler.

Edwin Koenig.

Samuel Loch, died at Beaufort, S. C., April 27, 1863.

Jacob Moser.

John Miller (1st), disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

John Miller (2d), disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Lewis Miller.

Robert McDaniels, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Daniel Ohlenwine, absent, sick, at muster out.

Isaac Oswald.

Jacob Oswald, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Jonas Phillips, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Benjamin Rauch, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Solomon Riegel, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Thomas Ruch, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 25, 1862.

Reuben Phillips, died at Beaufort, S. C., May 7, 1863.

Adam Ruppel.

Charles F. Reed, died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 23, 1863.

Jacob Schoedler.

Harry Snyder, disch. by Special Order June 2, 1863.

Benneville Smith, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Daniel Smith, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

Samuel Wagoner, disch. by Special Order Nov. 25, 1862.

John F. Snyder, died at Beaufort, S. C., May 28, 1863.

William Sicks.

Henry Schwem.

Henry Seislove.

Charles Winderholder.

Edwin Hermany.

Samuel Knecht.

Stephen Leh.

Benjamin Weida.

Elias Zellner.

Solomon Zettlemyer.

COMPANY K.

Mustered in Nov. 7, 1862; mustered out Aug. 18, 1863, unless where otherwise mentioned.

Samuel C. Lee, capt., disch. Nov. 25, 1862.

George Neitz, capt., promoted from 2d lieu. Nov. 7, 1862.

Charles H. Foster, 1st lieu.

Philip W. Flores, 2d lieu., promoted from 1st sergt. Dec. 6, 1862.

Edwin Seibert, 1st sergt., promoted from private Dec. 7, 1862.

George Repp, sergt.

George G. Rosenberg, sergt., promoted from corp. Dec. 7, 1862.

William H. Wieand, sergt.

Daniel Schantz, sergt., disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.

James F. Smith, sergt., disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.

Charles Heil, sergt., died at Beaufort, S. C., May 11, 1863.

Eugene T. Tool, promoted to corp. Dec. 7, 1862.

William M. Roeder, corp. John F. Fegely, corp.

Willoughby Staudt, promoted to corp., Dec. 7, 1862.
 Thomas F. Mohr, promoted to corp. Dec. 7, 1862.
 Henry Bower, promoted to corp. Dec. 7, 1862.
 George Knoll, promoted to corp. Dec. 7, 1862.
 Robert Groman, promoted to corp. Dec. 7, 1862.
 John Dice, corp., disch. by Special Order November, 1862.
 William Williams, corp.

Privates.

Martin Ackerman. Jonathan H. Bickel.
 William E. Benedict. John Brecht.
 Benjamin Bortz, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Willoughby Bauder. Bernhard Beringer.
 Eberhard Bauder.
 Elias Diehl, disch. by Special Order November, 1862.
 Josiah Dony, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 William Dony, disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1863.
 Willoughby Dony. Franklin Flores.
 Franklin Dieter. Jonas Fritz.
 William Ettinger. Solomon Fritz.
 David Fisher.
 Charles J. Fegely, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Charles Furry, disch. by Special Order November, 1862.
 Enoch Field. John A. Griffith.
 Addison Fry. Tobias Gerhart.
 Eli George. Daniel Heimbach.
 David Gery.
 William Heft, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Richard T. Jones, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Solomon Haliman, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 29, 1863.
 William Heil. William Knoll.
 William Jones. Joseph Koons.
 Isaac Klein.
 John Knoff, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 David Kriebel, disch. by Special Order, Nov., 1862.
 James Kidd. G. Laudenschlager.
 John Lewis, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 S. Leibensperger, died at Beaufort, S. C., April 12, 1863.
 Henry Mohr.
 Jesse Mangold, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Amos Miller, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Seth Miller, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 John T. Roberts, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Solomon Mill. Amandus Rick.
 Michael Nuss. David Rudolph.
 Gottlieb Pflueger. William H. Schiffert.
 Lewis Reinbold. William Sicher.
 S. Rothenberger.
 Francis Schaffer, disch. by Special Order, Nov. 1862.
 Charles Schell, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 John D. Schell, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Jacob D. Stauffer, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.

George Y. Stein, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Jeremiah G. Steichter, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Daniel Thomas, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Franklin Weidner, disch. by Special Order, November, 1862.
 Samuel Schaffer. John Trumbower.
 Levi Schuler. Edwin Weil.
 George Schmoyer. William R. Williams.
 Charles H. Staudt. John Wolf.
 Jeremiah Swartz.

TWO HUNDRED AND SECOND REGIMENT.

ONE YEAR'S SERVICE.

Company E of this regiment, raised in the Fall of 1864, went from Lehigh county. They rendezvoused at Camp Curtin, where the regiment was organized September 3d, with Walter H. Seip, of Lehigh county, as major. On the 10th the regiment proceeded to Chambersburg, and on the 29th started for Alexandria, from which place it was sent to duty on the Manasses Gap Railroad. Gen. Sheridan had just opened his campaign in the Shenandoah Valley, and over this road the supplies were transported. To keep it open was therefore of vital importance, and to break it up, hinder and destroy trains was a cherished purpose of the disloyal inhabitants dwelling along the line. Moseby and his guerrillas claimed this as their favorite stamping ground. Frequent collisions occurred. When the triumphs of Sheridan were assured, and the enemy effectually routed, this railroad was abandoned, and the ties and rails were removed to Alexandria. In this laborious duty the regiment was engaged and when completed it retired to Alexandria, where it was assigned to guarding a portion of the Orange and Alexandria Railroads, extending from Bull Run to Alexandria, with headquarters at Fairfax Station. In the vicinity of the station four large works were built, and the regiment was here kept busy in guarding the workmen.

Toward the close of May, 1865, the regiment was ordered to the anthracite coal regions of the state, with headquarters at Tamaqua, where the command was distributed in detachment to various points in that region. Toward the close of July the detachments assembled at Harrisburg, and the regiment was mustered out Aug. 3, 1865.

COMPANY E.

Mustered in Aug. 30, 1864; mustered out Aug. 3, 1865, except where specially mentioned.
 Walter H. Seip, capt., pro. to maj. Sept. 4, 1864. (Died Sept. 23, 1868.)
 Benjamin C. Roth, capt., pro. from 1st lieu. Sept. 4, 1864.

James A. Lucas, 1st lieut., pro. from 2d lieut. Sept. 4, 1864.
 George H. Good, 2d lieut., must. in Sept. 4, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. April 4, 1865.
 Alfred Mellin, 2d lieut., pro. from 1st sergt. April 16, 1865.
 Alfred Smith, 1st sergt., pro. from sergt. April 16, 1865.
 Jeremiah Transue, sergt.
 William H. H. Trexler, sergt.
 Henry Weiland, sergt.
 John Knerr, sergt., pro. from corp. June 23, 1865.
 George Benson, corp.
 Henry Wittenmyer, corp.
 Aaron Frederick, corp.
 Milton W. Reichard, corp.
 Eugene Stettler, corp.
 Milton Kichline, corp.
 Addison J. Knauss, corp.
 Augustus W. Mennig, corp., pro. to corp. June 23, 1865.
 C. Laudenschlager, corp., accidentally killed at Washington, D. C., May 28, 1865.
 Eli I. Fatzinger, musician.
 Thomas Roth, musician.

Jacob W. Strickler.
 Milton A. Saeger.
 Hiram F. Shaffer, disch. by General Order, June 19, 1865.
 John Shaffer.
 Edwin Troxell.
 Edwin C. Troxell.
 Joseph S. Trumbower.
 Depew Uberoth.
 Jacob A. Smith.
 Edwin Schertzingler.
 John Vogel.
 George J. Wolf.
 John Young.
 Harrison Young.

TWO HUNDRED AND NINTH REGIMENT.

Company H of this regiment, from Lehigh county, was organized at Camp Curtin on the 16th of September, 1864. Immediately after its organization it moved up the James river, landing at Bermuda Hundred. It was placed at Camp Potter, where it remained two weeks, then posted to the left of Fort Harrison, midway between the James and Appomattox rivers. During the engagement at Fort Harrison, the regiment was ordered upon the parapet, creating the impression upon the enemy that a charge upon his flank was about to be delivered. The real charge upon the front was heroically made, and the fort was captured.

On the night of the 17th of November the enemy made an attack upon the picket line in considerable force. On the 24th, the regiment was transferred to the Army of the Potomac and the regiment was encamped on the commanding ground near Meade Station, the division, which was in command of Gen. Hartranft, being posted as a reserve to the other two divisions. During the Winter the regiment was engaged in drill, in fatigue duty upon fortifications, and in the construction of roads, and was out upon occasional demonstrations upon the left.

At a little before daylight, on the morning of the 25th of March, 1865, the regiment was aroused by rapid and heavy firing in its front, and it was soon apparent that the lines, which were held by Gen. Wilcox's division, had been broken, and Fort. Steadman, in its immediate front, had been captured.

A battle ensued in which the regiment and two others from Pennsylvania, came off victorious, for which they were highly complimented.

Preparations were made for a determined assault on the enemy's works at daylight on the morning of the 2d of April. Lieut.-Col. McCall, who commanded the brigade, massed his force, by order of Gen. Hartranft, near the Avery House, at 1 a. m. Two hours later he led it to the front of Fort Sedgwick, and formed it in column of regiments, just inside the picket line, as a reserve to the Second Brigade, which was formed in a similar manner outside. At 4 o'clock the signal to advance was given, and

Privates.

Henry H. Brown.
 Allen D. Burger.
 Jacob H. Burger.
 George S. Burger.
 Jeremiah Beidelman.
 J. Bartholomew.
 Franklin Brobst, must. in March 7, 1865.
 Thomas Baker, disch. by General Order June 19, 1865.
 Madison Coles.
 Franklin Doyle.
 Lewis Fluck, must. in Feb. 28, 1865.
 William Fusselman, died at Baltimore, Md., Oct. 7, 1864.
 John D. Gangwere.
 Amos Giess.
 David Gackenbach.
 John Gorman.
 Albert Herman, must. in March 4, 1865.
 Edwin C. Hess, must. in Jan. 28, 1865.
 Franklin J. Kromer.
 William Kieffer.
 Harrison S. Kern.
 Anthony Kleinsmith.
 Adam Koch.
 James Kern.
 Willoughby G. Kuhns.
 Edwin Knechel.
 William S. Knauss.
 John Keiffer.
 Levi Kraft.
 Henry A. Knerr.
 Aaron Moyer, disch. by General Order, Aug. 5, 1865.
 David M. Miller, died at Alexandria, Va., Oct. 22, 1864, grave 2791.
 John Nagel, Sr.
 Amon P. Nagel.
 Theodore S. Nagel.
 John Petit, must. in Feb. 23, 1865.
 William Reinhard.
 Lewis F. Ruff.
 William F. Reinhard.
 Emanuel Reinhard.
 Joel Sterner.
 Jeremiah Biery.
 Henry E. Burger.
 Henry J. Burger.
 Augustus S. Bechtel.
 William H. Boeker.
 Henry W. Derr.
 Frank Ernst.
 Nathan Gaumer.
 Amandes Hackman.
 Moses Hoffman.
 Charles R. Hartman.
 Henry Kleckner.
 James J. Kunkle.
 Uriah Keck.
 William H. Lentz.
 Charles Lick.
 Jesse Lehman.
 William A. Lynn.
 James C. Moore.
 Nathan Miller.
 Harrison Miller.
 David Miller.
 Lewis Miller.
 John Nagel, Jr.
 William W. Osman.
 Hiram Parker.
 Henry C. Smith.
 Augustus Schitz.
 Herman B. Stettler.
 Frederick Sachsenheimer.
 Franklin P. Smith.

the regiment moved at double-quick after the column. At the picket line there was a momentary check, occasioned by meeting numbers who came running back, and reporting a repulse. These were quickly rallied, pressed onward and gained the hostile front, capturing many prisoners, and turning the captured guns of the fort and batteries upon the enemy. It succeeded in holding the captured line, though hard pressed by the rebels. At night the firing gradually died away, and a heavy picket line was thrown out, the enemy's chevaux-de-frise being moved to the opposite side of his works. The command was early astir, and at daylight the pickets cautiously advanced. They soon found that the enemy had gone, and when the columns reached the city of Petersburg, they found it also abandoned. After remaining in the city until noon, it returned to camp. The division was now ordered to take charge of the army trains, and moved with them along the South Side Railroad, repairing the track as it went, until it reached Nottoway Court House, where it was halted, and the regiment remained until the 20th, the rebel army having surrendered on the 9th. From here it returned to City Point, and thence to Alexandria, where it was held until the 31st of May, when it was mustered out of service.

COMPANY H.

Mustered out May 31, 1865, except as specially mentioned.

William H. Miller, capt., must. in Sept. 14, 1864; disch. March 26, 1865.
 William Kerr, capt., must. in Sept. 14, 1864; pro. from 1st lieu. Apr. 15, 1865.
 Lewis Fink, 1st lieu. must. in Sept. 15, 1864; pro. from 2d lieu. Apr. 15, 1865.
 David B. Overholt, 2d lieu. must. in Sept. 19, 1864; pro. from 1st sergt. April 15, 1865.
 Albert Dorward, 1st sergt. must. in Sept. 9, 1864; pro. from sergt. April 15, 1865.
 William Morton, Jr., sergt., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; absent, in hospital at muster out.
 John Lutz, sergt., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; pro. from corp. April 3, 1865.
 William H. Keener, sergt., must. in Sept. 9, 1864; pro. from corp. April 3, 1865.
 William Marshall, sergt., must. in Sept. 9, 1864.
 Cornelius Fagen, sergt., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; died at City Point, Va., April 10, 1865.
 A. O. Frankenfield, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Tilghman J. Wagner, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Penrose Rex, corp., must. in Sept. 9, 1864.
 James W. Snyder, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William S. Coffin, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Levi Ziegenfuss, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865.
 Paul Michael, corp., must. in Sept. 18, 1864; pro. to corp. April 3, 1865.
 Lewis C. Kratzer, corp., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; pro. to corp. April 19, 1865.

Privates.

Thomas H. Arnold, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Joseph Arnold, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Moses Allender, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
 Reuben Brader, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
 George W. Blocker, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Wilson Beninger, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Jacob W. Christ, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William P. H. Clark, must. in Sept. 8, 1864; died March 25, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, City Point, Va., Sec. 2, Div. 2, grave 159.
 John Darrohn, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Francis Devlin, must. in Sept. 17, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 John Ebert, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 John Eastman, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William J. Edwards, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 C. F. Engleman, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Milton A. Eckert, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 O. H. C. Follweiler, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Jarrett Ferber, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William L. German, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William F. Griesley, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Amandes Gernert, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Jeremiah Geiger, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Anthony Gehrig, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Tilghman Hartzell, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
 Tilghman Handwerk, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Charles H. Holey, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 James N. Hersh, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Aaron Handwerk, must. in Sept. 9, 1864.
 Hezekiah Hipple, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
 Michael Herley, must. in Sept. 8, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 John W. Jones, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 John Kressler, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Charles Krause, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Francis Kuntz, must. in Sept. 9, 1864.
 Josiah Klotz, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Albert Kleckner, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
 Jacob Koch, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Hiram M. Kratzer, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Samuel Keiffer, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 Jonathan W. Klotz, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; died March 28th, of wounds received at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865.
 James Kane, must. in Sept. 6, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 Henry Levan, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 John Lawrence, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Cornelius Lentz, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Edwin Loch, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Jonas Mace, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent at muster out.
 Moses Metzger, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Ephraim Michael, must. in Sept. 14, 1864.
 Henry Myers, must. in Sept. 6, 1864; disch. by Special Order, dated Jan. 13, 1866.
 Amandes Moyer, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; died March 25, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, City Point, Va., Sec. C, Div. 3, grave 65.
 Thomas Murry, must. in Sept. 10, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 Samuel Mace, must. in Sept. 16, 1864; died at Alexandria, Va., May 27, 1865; grave 3175.
 Patrick McCann, must. in Sept. 6, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 William H. McDonald, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; not on muster-out roll.

William Nicholas, must. in Sept. 8, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 William L. Nagle, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Robert Newhart, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 Elihu Oswald, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Peter Oswald, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Robert Ohle, must. in Sept. 14, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
 Emanuel Paules, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; disch. by General Order June 3, 1865.
 Joseph Rex, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Francis Rabenold, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Samuel Roth, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 Alfred Ritter, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
 William Ruhe, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Robert F. Roberts, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 William E. Rex, must. in Sept. 7, 1864; disch. by General Order July 13, 1865.
 Edwin Rex, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Lewis A. Rex, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Irwin Rober, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Tilghman Rober, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
 Amandes Roth, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
 John Snyder, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Charles A. Shiffert, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; disch. by General Order June 3, 1865.
 Henry W. Sell, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Simon Snyder, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; died May 11, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
 David Y. Williamson, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Henry W. Weiss, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Thomas West, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Henry Weiss, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Francis Weaver, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
 Matthias Zimmerman, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.

MILITIA OF 1862.

The Fifth Regiment of the Militia of 1862 had a large part of its strength from Lehigh county. The men were not formed into companies, but, rallying from points all along the railroads and from the back regions, on the intimation that the border was in danger of invasion, they went to Harrisburg en masse, and were there organized into companies and regiments. The Fifth Regiment was organized on September 13th, with H. C. Longnecker as colonel, J. B. Clemens as lieutenant-colonel, M. H. Horn as major, and E. D. Lawall as adjutant. The regiment went forward to the front, and with others received the compliments of Gen. McClellan in the following language (addressed afterward to Governor Curtin): "The manner in which the people of Pennsylvania responded to your call and hastened to the defense of their frontier no doubt exercised a great influence on the enemy." The Governor of Maryland, in his closing address to Governor Curtin, said, "The readiness with which they crossed the border and took their stand beside the Maryland brigade shows that the border is but an ideal line."

FIFTH REGIMENT MILITIA OF 1862.

Field and Staff Officers.

Colonel.

Henry G. Longnecker.

Lieutenant-Colonel.

J. Breckenridge Clemens.

Major.

Melchoir H. Horn.

Adjutant.

Edward D. Lawall.

Quartermaster.

Milton J. Kramer.

Surgeon.

George Mish.

Assistant Surgeon.

William M. Culver.

Sergeant-Major.

Thomas Metzger.

Quartermaster-Sergeant.

Elisha Forrest.

Commissary-Sergeant.

Jacob Wolle.

Hospital Steward.

George C. Hand.

COMPANY C.

Captain.

Isaac N. Gregory.

First Lieutenant.

Benjamin J. Hagenbuch.

Second Lieutenant.

Benjamin K. Sweitzer.

First Sergeant.

William Keyser.

Sergeants.

William Kress.
 Simeon H. Price.

Edwin Hittle.

Corporals.

Edward B. Young. Alfred Ettinger.
 Tilghman D. Kemmerer. John Stopp.
 E. F. Powell. E. B. Roth.
 William Dech. Israel Yingling.

Musician.

Edward Shiffert.

Privates.

Charles Arthur. Daniel Keiser.
 Charles Apple. William Knauss.
 William Basher. Francis Kramer.
 Jeremiah Beiry. Stephen Lentz.
 Jeremiah Beidelman. William Lind.
 Henry Bitting. Edward Lucas.
 William Burnham. Benjamin Lucas.
 J. H. Burger. Augustus Mennig.
 James Christ. David Miller.
 Washington Christman. Tilghman Osman.
 Henry Cole. Charles Present.
 Dennis Diefenderfer. Charles Quier.
 George Deifer. Solomon Reinsmith.
 Solomon Dorney. Walter Reinsmith.
 Milton Eckert. Charles Reinsmith.
 Charles Egge. Franklin Rinker.
 Edward Y. Engleman. James Ritter.
 Frederick Frantz. Adolph Rosstaischer.
 Franklin Fried. Joseph Ruhe.
 Peter K. Grimm. Uriah Sanders.
 Amos Guth. Henry Seagreaves.
 Uriah Guth. William H. Simons.
 Walter Getter. Edwin Strauss.
 George Hagenbuch. Charles Wagner.
 Peter Hartman. Paul Wald.
 Joseph Hecker. Thomas Wenner.
 Henry Heckman. Benjamin Weaver.
 Henry Heimbach. Milton Weaver.
 Solomon Helfrich. Henry Weikle.
 Simon Hauk. Francis Weidner.
 Moses Kehm. John Weiss.
 George Kauffman. Henry Wuchter.
 Daniel Keiper. John O. Yingling.
 Gabriel Keiper. Emanuel Yohe.

COMPANY E.

Captain.

William Marx.

First Lieutenant.

Charles Mertz.

Second Lieutenant.

William H. Wannemacher.

First Sergeant.

Thomas Keck.

Sergeants.

Charles J. Haines. James Smith.
 Amandes A. Wagner. Elisha Forrest.

Corporals.

Thomas Ruhe. Allen A. Huber.
 Samuel B. Anewalt. Henry Gangwere.
 Alfred J. Breinig. Henry A. Evans.
 Joseph E. Balliet. Jacob Blumer.

Musician.

Charles Mohr.

Privates.

J. A. Aikens. Samuel Becker.
 Frederick A. R. Baldwin. John Bergland.
 John Bechtel. James Cahoon.
 Jonathan Becker. Jacob S. Dillinger.

Conrad Emig. S. R. Nissley.
 Jacob Goebel. John Nunnemacher.
 William H. Hagenbuch. Esias Rerig.
 John Hartzell. William H. Roney.
 Solomon Hartzell. Werner Ruhe.
 Benneville Hine. Alfred G. Saeger.
 Edward C. Heiber. Charles G. Sassman.
 Benjamin T. Jacoby. Milton Sassman.
 John Krause, Jr. David O. Saylor.
 William Laubach. Peter Shutz.
 Edward Laubach. Richard Snyder.
 Edward D. Lawall. Samuel Smith.
 Walter Losch. George Teraberry.
 Eugene Master. Willoughby Trexler.
 Thomas B. Metzger. Peter Wanner.
 Daniel H. Miller. Wilson Wieder.
 Harrison Miller. Henry Worman.

COMPANY G.

Captain.

George B. Schall.

First Lieutenant.

Thomas Snyder.

Second Lieutenant.

Sylvester Weiler.

First Sergeant.

Allen P. Steckel.

Sergeants.

Cornelius Fagan. Franklin Beck.
 James B. Roeder. Allen Newhard.

Corporals.

Elias Shingler. George Engleman.
 Charles Shout. Allen Pfeiffer.
 Milton H. Beidler. Daniel Gilbert.
 Jacob R. Wolle. Edwin L. Young.

Musicians.

Francis Stroehley. Joseph Moll.

Privates.

Alfred Adam. William Hintz.
 Allen Burger. Isaac P. Hummel.
 William Burger. Herman Haverly.
 Jacob Bast. William H. Kuder.
 Matthew Bliche. Henry Kercher.
 James Beck. Tobias Kessler.
 James S. Biery. Jonathan Bear. Tilghman W. Kramer.
 Jonathan Bear. Edward Clauss. Milton J. Kramer.
 Edward Clauss. Benneville Christman. James S. Kuder.
 Benneville Christman. William Leibensberger.
 Tilghman Daubert. Henry Daubert. Solomon Long.
 Henry Daubert. Henry Diener. Allen Mohr.
 Jacob Eckert. Jacob Eckert. Samuel Miller.
 Benneville Ecker. Robert Fatzinger. William Mohr.
 Robert Fatzinger. Owen Fatzinger. Tobias Mosser.
 Owen Fatzinger. Peter Fegley. James Neff.
 Peter Fegley. Amandus O. Greenawalt. Edwin H. Peter.
 Amandus O. Greenawalt. James Gernard. Charles Richter.
 James Gernard. George Hand. Charles Ruhe.
 George Hand. Daniel Hood. Tilghman Ruhe.
 Daniel Hood. William Hertz. John Ross.
 William Hertz. Peter Reinhard.

Henry Schwartz.	Reuben Schout.
Augustus Schitz.	Edwin Troxell.
John H. Sykes.	Esaias Trumbour.
George Schafer.	Jacob Wint.
Jacob Snyder.	Charles Wolf.
John Schneider.	Jesse Wombold.
Leonard Schmucker.	August Weber.
Henry Schaeffer.	Hezekiah Weiser.
Stephen Smith.	Peter Yoder.
Charles Schaffer.	Edwin Yeager.
Alfred Smith.

COMPANY H.

Captain.

William H. Hoffman.

First Lieutenant.

Franklin Stahler.

Second Lieutenant.

Abiel Heilman.

First Sergeant.

Henry Fried.

Sergeants.

Henry Ritter.	Henry E. Ruhe.
D. J. F. Deshler.	George W. Hoffman.

Corporals.

Franklin Trexler.	Owen Mertz.
Henry Trexler.	Benjamin Kleckner.
Henry Schwartz.	Moses Schneck.
William Mininger.	Franklin Hersh.

Musicians.

Almon Nagle. Allen F. Barber.

Privates.

Henry Bornman.	Lewis W. Roth.
Samuel Baum.	William Roth.
Peter Cortwright.	William Ritter.
Jacob Cleaver.	William Ruhe.
George D. Deifer.	William Reinhard.
Charles Erdman.	Herman Schuon.
Edwin Eisenhard.	Morris Stemler.
Charles Everett.	Daniel Shitz.
George Fried.	Edward Sherer.
Tilghman Frederick.	John Sowers.
Daniel Fink.	Nathan Snyder.
Daniel Fritz.	William Saussman.
Wilson Gross.	Reuben Steckel.
Martin Heft.	Francis Smith.
Charles Herzog.	Tilghman Snyder.
Gottlieb Herzog.	Lewis L. Sheldon.
William Huffort.	Charles Saul.
William Henry.	Peter Storch.
Jonathan K. Knouss.	Francis F. Troxel.
Robert Latimore.	Daniel Trump.
Israel Lehr.	Frederick Wilt.
Hiram Mertz.	Edwin Weiland.
Tilghman Miller.	Benjamin Wonderly.
John Nehlig.	Jacob Weaver.
Henry Odenheimer.	William Yohe.
William Raub.	Henry Zink.
Solomon Raub.

EMERGENCY TROOPS OF 1863.

Four full companies were recruited in this county with a design of entering the field in the 27th regiment, but on account of disagreement in regard to the term of service, but one went on duty. It was mustered in as Company H, June 19, 1863, went to Columbia and crossed the bridge to Wrightsville. Upon the attack of the rebels they retreated with the regiment and burned the bridge behind them. They were shelled by Gen. Ewell. About a week later, the regiment moved to Carlisle, then to Waynesboro, Boonsboro, and beyond, and back by way of Hagerstown and Greencastle. Subsequently, the regiment was moved to Mercersburg, and Chambersburg. It was disbanded at Harrisburg, Aug. 1, 1863.

TWENTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT MILITIA.

COMPANY H.

Captain.

Isaac N. Gregory.

First Lieutenant.

Edward B. Young.

Second Lieutenant.

Benjamin K. Sweitzer.

First Sergeant.

William Keiser.

Sergeants.

Edwin Hittle.	Charles H. Dankle.
Thomas Keck.	Theodore Siegfried.

Corporals.

Samuel Anewalt.	Jacob Bass.
Alfred Ettinger.	William Bauham.
Joseph Balliet.	James Mosser.
John Stopp.	John H. Johnson.

Musician.

Edward Shiffert.

Privates.

John Anthony.	Peter Fegley.
Henry F. Ames.	Eli Fritzing.
Hiram E. Beitelman.	Franklin Grimm.
William H. Becker.	Amos Guth.
Owen Bachman.	Walter Guetter.
Charles Boehm.	Solomon Helfrich.
Daniel Beidelman.	William Knauss.
Milton Brong.	Charles Kaufman.
Samuel P. Bliss.	Wilson Kistler.
Nicholas Correll.	Lewis Kistler.
Reuben Desh.	Charles Knauss.
Alpheus Desh.	Frank P. Laubach.
Wellington Diehl.	Constantine Martin.
Milton Eckert.	Harrison Miller.
Charles Eckert.	Hiram Mertz.
John Frieze.	Frank Mertz.

Augustus W. Mennig.	John Shimer.
Theodore Mohr.	Christian Smith.
Allan D. Moore.	Frank Troxell.
David Overholtzer.	Aaron Tice.
George Reeder.	Theodore Taylor.
William Rees.	John Weiss.
Walter Reinsmith.	Charles Wagner.
Daniel Reinhard.	Alfred V. Wittenmyer.
Benjamin Smith.	M. Wetherhold.
Reuben Seip.	Francis Weimer.
Eugene Stettler.	Allen Wolfinger.
Franklin Smith.	Milton Weaver.
Hiram S. Shimer.	Edwin Wieand.
John A. Schaffer.	Henry Wittenmyer.
Levi Seigenfuss.	Edwin C. Yeager.

MILITIA OF 1863.

Company B and a portion of C in the 38th Regiment were from Lehigh county, and its colonel was Melchior H. Horn, of Catasauqua, from which locality came nearly all of the men whose names appear in the roster. On Sunday, June 28, 1863, Governor Curtin telegraphed over the State the following dispatch:

"The enemy is appearing. I must rely upon the people for defense of the State, and have called militia for that purpose. The term of service will be while danger is imminent. Send forward companies as soon as possible."

A meeting was held the same Sunday afternoon at Laubach's Eagle Hotel. A roll was started and sixty-six persons signified their willingness to go to the front. Two days later the roll was increased to 116. At noon, on June 30th, the company organized, and at one o'clock they left for Camp Muhlenberg. The next morning they were mustered into service for 90 days. The number being too large, some of the men were transferred.

On the 2d of July, the organization of the regiment was effected, with Melchior H. Horn as colonel. The next day Gen. Siegel took command of the camp, and commenced forwarding the men to the front. The 38th was ordered out on parade, and the men were complimented by Gen. Siegel on their soldierly appearance. The regiment left camp that day and proceeded to Harrisburg and then to Shippensburg. Thence they moved through Chambersburg to Camp Advance. The Thirty-eighth remained along the borders until July 28th, guarding and repairing railroads, and gathering in rebel stragglers. On the 28th, the brigade was ordered to Chambersburg but the 38th with the 45th moved to Harrisburg, and thence to Schuylkill county. The regiment was mustered out at Reading on August 7th. There was considerable sickness in the regiment during the campaign, but only one death occurred.

Col. Horn, writing of the militia in general, very truly says, "With but few exceptions they were not brought to mortal conflict, but they nevertheless rendered important service. They came forward at a moment when there was pressing need, and had the Union army been defeated at Gettysburg they would have taken the places of the fallen, and would have fought with a valor worthy of veterans. The bloodless campaigns of the militia may be a subject for playful satire, but in the strong arms and sturdy hearts of the yeomanry of the land, who spring to arms at the moment of danger, and when the danger is past cheerfully lay them down again, rests a sure guarantee for the peace and security of the country."

Following is the roster of the Lehigh county men in this militia regiment:

THIRTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

THREE MONTHS.

COMPANY B.

Mustered in July 3, 1863; mustered out Aug. 7, 1863.

Captains.

Melchoir H. Horn, (pro. to colonel July 3, 1863).
Joshua Hunt.

First Lieutenant.

Edwin Micklely.

Second Lieutenant.

John Morrison.

First Sergeant.

Henry Welty.

Sergeants.

William Stewart.	Robert Stewart.
William Williams.	Charles G. Earp.

Corporals.

Frederick Eagle.	Llewelyn Thomas.
William Andreas.	Milton Berger.
William A. McKibben.	Evan Edwards.
John H. Nolf.	Charles Graffin.

Musicians.

Franklin Eckensperger.	James Courtney.
------------------------	-----------------

Privates.

Charles Andrews.	Jacob Case.
Reuben P. Bowen.	William J. Craig.
John Barr.	John Conway.
Joseph Broadseller.	John Church.
John Black.	George Hopkins.
William Boyle.	John Hunter.
David W. Bowen.	William H. Hock.
James Blair.	Peter Haut.
William H. Bates.	Joseph Humphries.
John Cane.	Thomas James.
John Case.	Samuel Kieffer.
Joseph Cane.	William Krone.

Uriah Kurtz.	Lewis Gutenday.
Peter Keeling.	Thomas Hunt.
John Kieffer.	John Hille.
Allen Kurtz.	Samuel McKeague.
Charles C. Lantz.	David McFetridge.
Tilghman Michael.	John McClenaghan.
James Moran.	Dennis McFadden.
George Matchett.	Godfrey Osenheimer.
Tilghman Michael.	Enoch Philips.
Daniel Wilson.	Jonathan Price.
William Miller.	Thompson Porter.
Joseph McMullen.	David P. Porter.
James McCleary.	Henry Raup.
Joseph McFetridge.	William Rankin.
James McNab.	J. H. Stoflet.
Jacob Donecker.	John D. Snyder.
Morgan Emanuel, Jr.	Franklin Smith.
Owen W. Eastman.	John Stewart.
James W. Fuller.	Charles D. C. Troxell.
Charles D. Fuller.	John J. Thomas.
Orange M. Fuller.	William R. Thomas.
Jacob Funk.	Benedict Vantram.
Adam Freund.	Evan Williams.
Berthold Fritchey.	David Williams.
Samuel Fries.	William Young.
Adam Fulton.	Daniel Yoder, pro. to hos-
Joseph Forrest.	pital steward, July 3,
John Gross.	1863.

COMPANY C.

Mustered in July 3, 1863; mustered out Aug. 7, 1863.

The following named persons were mustered into Company C:

William Biery.	William H. Horn.
Franklin Bower.	John Keifel.
Tilghman Breisch.	Simon H. Kester.
John W. Campbell.	Alfred Lynn.
William Hopkins.	George H. Minnich.
William Wheeler, to Co. E (Capt. Edwin Kelly) of the same regiment.
Samuel C. Wolle, to Co. F, 37th Regt. (Capt. John R. Porter), of which he was made 1st sergt.
F. P. Laubach, to Co. H, 27th Regt. (Capt. Isaac N. Gregory).

FORTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

Companies D, I, and K, of this regiment were from Lehigh county, recruited at Allentown. They went to Reading, and were there mustered into service July 1, 1863. They remained until the 5th, and towards evening took the train for Carlisle. They proceeded ten or twelve miles beyond that place and found the track torn up; then marched to Chambersburg, where they received orders to go to Mercersburg. Near South Mountain, the corps under Gen. Warren, of which this regiment was a part, had a skirmish with the rebels, on their retreat from Gettysburg. The corps was drawn up in line of battle the next morning, but the rebels had fled. The regiment then returned to a point near Greencastle, and camped for two days, when Company I, and two others were stationed as provost guard at Gen. Warren's headquarters. The men were discharged on August 3d, and 4th.

Following are rosters of the Lehigh county men in this regiment:

FORTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

THREE MONTHS.

Mustered in July 1, 1863; discharged Aug. 3-4, 1863.

Field and Staff Officers.

Major.

John H. Oliver.

Quartermaster.

Abraham B. Longaker.

COMPANY D.

Captain.

Walter H. Seip.

First Lieutenant.

Benjamin C. Roth.

Second Lieutenant.

James A. Lucas.

First Sergeant.

William H. Schlosser.

Sergeants.

Henry Stanton.	James Roney.
Harrison Butz.	George T. Young.

Corporals.

John Nagle.	Henry E. Burger.
Daniel Miller.	Charles Laudenslager.
James Lutz.	Henry Wieand.
John W. Lackey.	Aaron Fredericks.

Musicians.

Andrew Gangwere.	Dallas Xanders.
------------------	-----------------

Privates.

John D. Albright.	Christian Kuntz.
Adam Beers.	Emanuel Knauss.
Augustus C. Bechtel.	Edward H. Lucas.
Henry D. Custer.	Israel Lehr.
Madison Cole.	Jesse Lehman.
Edward T. Engleman.	Jacob Leibensberger.
Solomon Fatzinger.	Daniel Lehr.
Nathan Gaumer.	Lewis P. Levan.
John Grotz.	Milton T. Laudenslager.
Frederick Gangwere.	Gotlieb Lutch.
Jacob J. Goeble.	Wellington Martin.
Otto Geler.	William P. Mohr.
Henry A. Heckman.	George Nunnemacker.
Henry J. Horn.	James Nagle.
C. Lewis Huber.	Jesse F. Ochs.
Uriah Hartzell.	Edward Ochs.
William H. Ibach.	Charles Preston.
Henry Ibach.	Lewis P. Queen.
Benjamin F. Ibach.	Reuben Raub.
Moses Kehna.	George W. Reese.
Henry L. Kenner.	William Reinhard.
Peter Kromer.	Charles Richler.
Benjamin Kleckner.	John H. Ross.

William Roth.
Henry C. Roth.
William A. Roney.
Tilghman S. P. Reiss.
Augustus E. Sherer.
Benjamin F. Schwartz.
Tilghman H. Snyder.
Israel Schneck.
Jeremiah Sherer.
Peter Schultz.
Walter P. Scholl.
Peter Schreiber.

Jeremiah S. Shuman.
John L. Schreiber.
Jesse Smith.
Clinton P. Trexler.
James H. Unger.
Depew Uberoth.
Frederick Wilt.
Peter Werner.
Henry Weinsheimer.
Peter Weller.
Henry E. Wittemyer.
William Young.

COMPANY I.

Captain.

Charles Keck.

Lieutenants.

1. David H. Kline. 2. Stephen Smith.

Sergeants.

1. Levi Krauss 4. James A. Bieber.
2. Abner A. Campbell. 5. Alfred G. Peter.
3. Geo. Diefenderfer.

Corporals.

1. Daniel Reinsmith. 5. David Deily.
2. Gideon H. Smith. 6. Chas. Leinberger.
3. Benj. J. Schlosser. 7. David Pfaff.
4. Joseph Hough. 8. Daniel H. Snyder.

Musician.

John Roth.

Privates.

Benj. Allender. Stephen Hallman.
Jacob H. Berger. Milton Kachline.
Wm. S. Berger. Ephraim Keeser.
James Bachman. Jonas Ludwig.
Wm. P. Berkemeyer. John D. Long.
Peter Benner. Jacob Oswald.
Eugene Breifogle. Ellis J. Peter.
Sylvester Bieber. Alfred Peter.
Lewis Baer. Asher T. Queer.
Samuel Balliet. James Reinsmith.
Francis Balliet. Leon F. Roeder.
Alfred Baige. Samuel Ritter.
Solomon Bachman. Irwin Raber.
David Clauss. Joseph Ray.
Peter Coop. John Ratley.
Wilson Druckenmiller. Solomon Reinsmith.
Aaron Druckenmiller. Eli Reinert.
James Delong. Sebastian Silliman.
John Evans. Paul Smith.
Josiah Fatzinger. Joseph Snyder.
Wm. F. Frey. Jacob Seiss.
Jonas Frey. Levi Smith.
Lewis Frack. Daniel Snyder.
Phaon W. George. W. T. Shoemaker.
Jonas Gehry. David Steffan.
John Grof. Horatio Troxel.
John Greber. Aaron West.
Levi Haaf. Philip Werley.
Elias Hartman. John Wilbert.
Phaon Hausman. Robert Young.

COMPANY K.

Captains.

John H. Oliver, prom. to major, July 5, 1863.
Charles Mertz.

Lieutenants.

1. Abiel Heilman. 2. Henry Fried.

Sergeants.

1. Thomas Snyder. 4. Wm. G. Moyer.
2. Wm. J. Reichard. 5. Henry C. Huber.
3. John A. Young.

Corporals.

1. Henry Trexler. 5. David Hardner.
2. Daniel Smith. 6. William Haas.
3. Milton Bieber. 7. John Lentz.
4. Jeremiah Transue. 8. Sylvester Weiler.

Musicians.

Stephen A. Henry. Chas. C. Moore.

Privates.

Samuel S. Apple. Henry Moore.
Blackford Barnes. Wm. C. Moore.
Charles Bennett. John Manhart.
Adolph Clauss. John Moyer.
Hugh Cassidy. Aaron Moyer.
Edwin Desch. Josiah D. Moll.
John H. Eisenhart. John Musenheimer.
T. S. Frederick. Wilson B. Moyer.
Robt. Fatzinger. Andrew Nagle.
Benj. Fatzinger. Theodore Nagle.
Daniel C. Fritz. Tilghman Ott.
Benj. Fink. William Ruhe.
A. W. Gangwere. Werner Ruhe.
Chas. W. Gorr. Lewis Roth.
John J. Gorr. Edward Reichard.
James Gallagher. Amandus Sieger.
Charles Hart. Christian Stahly.
Moses Hoffman. T. Steinberger.
Geo. C. Hand. Hiram T. Shaffer.
Solomon Heberly. Ludwig Shultz.
David Howard. Joseph Stempfle.
Henry Hardner. Edwin Shaffer.
Philip Hill. Charles Schott.
John Hill. Achilles Smith.
Philip Helwert. George Smith.
Edwin Jacoby. John H. Seislove.
Chas. Kramer. Wm. H. Trumbower.
Henry Kemerer. Russel A. Thayer.
Harrison Kern. Christian Voltz.
Willoughby Kern. Benj. Wonderly.
Wm. M. Landis. Charles Wolf.
John La Roche. Fred'k Weikle.
Josiah Lefevre. George Yauss.
George Minnig. John H. Young.
Owen Metz.

PUBLIC SUPPORT OF CIVIL WAR.

The first soldiers from Lehigh county had hardly entered the field when public action was taken toward relieving such families as were pecuniarily distressed by the absence of the men who supported them. At a special meeting of the county commissioners, a petition was presented to them subscribed by many citizens of the county, and "praying for an appropriation out of the public funds to support the families of those who might be in need during the absence of their men or soldiers who proposed to defend the country's flag." It was resolved by the commissioners to appropriate $5,000 in instalments of $500 each to be distributed at such periods as might be deemed proper.

On Jan. 1, 1862, the commissioners gave evidence of their recognition of new necessities by resolving to raise the county tax to 40 cents upon $100, and the state tax to 25 cents, and to levy a special tax of 50 cents per head for militia purposes. During the same year it became necessary or expedient to offer a county bounty. On July 28th a committee of citizens, appointed at a public meeting, requested the commissioners to make an appropriation for recruits required from the county to fill the quota required by the governor. They appropriated $10,000 for this purpose, and $50 was to be paid to each recruit, the quota having been 200 men.

More men were demanded than thought necessary; therefore, on Sept. 5, 1862, at the request of a similar committee of citizens, the commissioners appropriated the sum of $100 as a bounty to each soldier recruited in the county and regularly mustered into the United States service as a volunteer, not exceeding the quota allotted to the county under the call for 300,000 men to be raised by a draft; and $50 to all those persons who had enlisted in the county and been mustered into the old regiments in service since the last county appropriation, or who should hereafter enlist in such regiment. And on September 15th, it was resolved that the bounty thus offered should be allowed until the 25th of the month, but none paid after that date.

The county tax was raised two mills on $100, or to 50 cents on April 13, 1863, and at the same time the State tax was increased to three mills or 30 cents.

On June 30th when the state defense became urgent, the commissioners resolved to pay $20 per month to each recruit for that service not exceeding three months. The company of Capt. Walter H. Seip, with 85 men then left Allentown, and each of them was paid the $20. Other companies from the county for State defense received the same payment.

Though there were recognized enemies of the Union in the county, as elsewhere, the great majority of the people were loyal, and either went to the rescue personally or supported the great movement which resulted in the overthrow of a gigantic rebellion.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR, 1898.

On April 28, 1898, pursuant to General Orders, the 4th Regiment Infantry, N. G. P., reported at Mt. Gretna, Pa., for the purpose of volunteering in the service of the United States in the war with Spain. On May 9th, Co. B, of Allentown, was mustered into the United States service, being the first company of infantry mustered from Pennsylvania. Co. D, also of Allentown, was mustered the following day. The entire work of muster-in of the regiment was completed before that of any other regiment of the state.

On May 14th the regiment was ordered to Chickamauga Park, Ga., where it arrived May 16th, and was assigned to the 2d Brigade, 1st Division, 1st Army Corps. On the 23d, the regiment participated in a review by Maj. Gen. Wilson, commanding the division, and on the 25th, participated with the brigade in a series of practice-battle movements. Early in June, Captains Willits and Medlar were detailed to recruit the eight companies of the regiment to the maximum of 106 men to each company, and within ten days the recruitment was completed from the home stations of the several companies.

On July 4th the 2d Brigade was ordered to proceed to Charleston, S. C. The regiment broke camp at Chickamauga Park, on Friday, July 22d; arrived at Rossville, Ga., at noon; then embarked on trains Saturday, July 23d, arrived at Newport News, Va., on July 25th, where a temporary camp was established named "Camp Brooke." The regiment remained there until the 27th, when they embarked on transports, and on the 29th passed out of the harbor, bound for Porto Rico, where they arrived August 2d. On the 3d they reached Arroyo and disembarked while the "St. Louis," "Cincinnati," and Gloucester" were shelling the hills back of the town. It was near midnight before the entire regiment reached shore. A temporary camp, with shelter tents, was pitched along the Guyama road, about one mile northeast from Arroyo, and on August 14th a permanent camp was made one mile east of Arroyo. Ten companies of the regiment were placed on outpost duty, five companies alternating daily, commanded by field officers, on the Patillo and Guyama roads, and on the road leading from Arroyo northward into the mountains.

The forward movement of the brigade began on August 6th. The 4th Regiment formed the reserve of this movement. A battle followed, and the capture of Guyama was accomplished, but the regiment was not actively engaged. Colonel Case was advised to move on the enemy with two battalions August 13th, and attack his strongly entrenched position on the mountain north of Guyama. The 3d Battalion was to remain at Arroyo, to cover and protect the town. August 13th, the 1st and 2d Battalions broke camp at Arroyo at 4 a. m. The 1st Battalion and wagon train, under the command of Lieut. Col. C. T. O'Neill, moved at 5:45 a. m., and marched to the iron bridge about one mile northwest of Guyama, where they lay as the support of the advancing force. Half an hour later the 2d Battalion, under the immediate command of Colonel Case, moved to the same point, the 3d Battalion remaining at Arroyo. Information was received that the enemy were executing a flank movement on the 4th Ohio.

The 2d Battalion of the 4th Pennsylvania was placed on high ground, commanding the entire country. Co. B was detached and took possession of the barracks and public buildings in the town. While engaged in this work, news came of the Peace Protocol and General Brooke ordered the 1st and 2d Battalions to withdraw to a point on the Ponce Road, just south of the edge of the town. Here the regiment remained on outpost duty until the order came on August 28th to break camp and march to Ponce. The first afternoon the regiment marched ten miles, and the next two days about twenty miles each. On the night of the 30th, the regiment encamped within the limits of Ponce, and the next day marched to Porte-de-Playa. The loading of the transport, "City of Chester," occupied all of the 31st of August, and part of the next day. At 2 p. m., of the 1st of September, the vessel weighed anchor and the regiment was homeward bound, the sick of the regiment being removed to the hospital at Ponce. The regiment arrived at New York on the 6th of September. It was then learned for the first time that the regiment was to have sixty days' furlough preparatory to muster-out.

On the 27th of October, the regiment, over a thousand strong, participated in the Peace Jubilee at Philadelphia and was finally mustered out Nov. 16th, 1898.

Staff Officers.

The following Staff-Officers of the 4th Regiment were enlisted in the service from Allentown:

Lt. Col., Christopher T. O'Neill, commander of the 1st Battalion.
Major, W. D. Mickle, Commander of the 3d Battalion.
Surgeon-Major, Morris F. Cawley, Chief Regimental Surgeon.
Adjutant, Frank D. Beary, Battalion Adjt. and Regt. Commissary.
Sergt. Major, J. Howard Martz.
Q. M. Sergt., Harry Bower.

ROSTER OF Co. B, 4TH REGT.

Enlistments from Lehigh county, mostly from Allentown:

Captain.

James A. Medlar.

First Lieutenant.

Charles D. Rhoads.

Second Lieutenant.

Orlando C. Miller.

Q. M. Sergt.

Oswell W. Riedy.

Sergeants.

Edward D. Fried.
Wilson Desch.
Wm. F. Weiss.

Geo. W. Wieand.
R. Otto Wollmuth.

Corporals.

Geo. A. Rex.
Lewis S. Spangler.
James F. Wieand.
Wm. F. Bower.
J. F. A. Newhard.
Wm. H. Smith.

Wm. A. Ruch.
Harry L. Christ.
Orange M. Frantz.
Harry A. Lambert.
John W. Thomas.
Ralph S. Weaver.

Privates.

Fredk. J. Abel.
John B. Abbott.
Harry Adams.
Roy Applegate.
Harry C. A. Balliet.
F. J. Bartholomew.
Guy P. Brown.
Wm. S. Buckland.
John W. Bloss.
F. D. Bankhardt.
Wm. J. Benson.
Fredk. Becker.
Sol. K. Brown.
A. G. Connolly.
W. W. Cox.
Chas. E. Clader.
Chas. H. Campbell.
Percival Confer.
Harry H. Ellicott.
Adam J. Epp.
C. Fenstermaker.
Ray A. Frederici.
Robt. E. Frantz.
Harvey J. Frantz.
Howard E. Gangler.
Victor H. Geist.
Morris Gehring.
Ernest H. Gross.
John F. Gallmoyer.
T. H. Ginkinger.
Leidy J. Garnet.
Edward Goheen.
Franz Hall.
S. A. S. Hammar.
Harvey J. Held.
P. J. Hertzog.
William Hohe.
A. W. Hagenbuch.
Henry F. Hersh.
F. D. Hildenburger.
John R. Helwig.
George E. Hafner.
Frank Hager.

Edwin Hoats.
Albert J. W. Keener.
F. L. Kramlich.
John P. Kahler.
Wm. Kunkle.
Albert Kramer.
Raymond Kerschner.
Edmund C. Lloyd.
Geo. W. Lutz.
Frank H. Lynn.
Austin W. Leidy.
Newton W. Leidy.
F. H. Laudenslager.
C. J. Laskowski.
Wm. Labold.
Robt. L. Martz.
Chas. A. Mattern.
Robt. R. Mest.
Robt. W. Miller.
C. C. M. Moyer.
John H. Moyer.
Chas. E. Miller.
David S. McMahon.
Herman Nikalai.
Herman F. Naiel.
Wm. Pierce.
Fredk. H. Reichard.
John L. Schick, Jr.
Frank W. Schreiber.
Frank Seislove.
Geo. S. Sternberger.
Chas. B. Schlicher.
Paul Smith.
Paul E. Schantz.
John W. Thomas.
Paul J. Tilton.
Wm. A. Trump.
T. H. Weaver.
Henry C. Weibel.
Philip Walters.
Walter Ward.
John P. Wotring.
David S. Yates.

ROSTER OF Co. D, 4TH REGT.

Enlistment from Lehigh county, mostly from Allentown:

Captain.

Charles Spangler.

First Lieutenant.

Evan. S. Witemeyer.

Second Lieutenant.

Saml. J. Chubbuck.

Q. M. Sergt.

Geo. H. Shillinger.

Sergeants.

M. O'Laughlin. Edwin R. Keck.
Geo. F. Hamersly. Oscar C. Neff.
Elmer A. Amey.

Corporals.

W. C. Witemeyer. Harry Dietrich.
Oliver E. Miller. O. H. Keinert.
Richd. H. Moerder. Wellington Koch.
Edward G. Rose. Barney McNulty.
Geo. W. Weider. John J. Roberts.
Morris W. Knauss. John C. Wetherhold.

Privates.

Frank W. Ahlum. Chas. B. Lester.
Wm. Bechtel. Robt. A. Lucas.
Edwin M. Bernhard. Daniel McConaghy.
Allen J. Berger. Patrick J. Mahon.
Calvin J. Boehm. Chas. E. Miller.
Joseph Boehmer. Harvey Miller.
Harrison Burger. Edwin L. Mosser.
Harry E. Burger. Harry E. Moyer.
Harry J. Bush. Edward Nagle.
Herbert G. Boorse. Allen A. Neff.
Chas. B. Chubbuck. H. J. Nonnemacher.
Wm. P. Collins. F. A. Oberholzer.
Michael F. Connoly. Lewis P. Oswald.
Ira A. Danner. Harry Oberly.
Horace W. Dennis. Franklin Ott.
Isaiah F. Dennis. Reeve W. Raub.
Chas. J. Draper. Riles Raub.
Edwin H. Eagle. Calvin G. Reitz.
Ira T. Endy. George Ruhmel.
D. J. Frankenfield. Harvey J. Saul.
P. L. Gallagher. Lewis Schaeffer.
Irvin F. Gaugler. Wm. Sheirer.
Edgar German. Oliver Schrunk.
John H. Hartzell. Geo. Schwartz.
Harry Heist. John L. Scott.
Geo. W. Hersh. Leonard G. Sefing.
Wm. O. Hering. H. F. Sensenbach.
Chas. Hertzog. Jeremiah Simons.
Lewis Hildebrand. John Smith.
John W. Horne. H. B. Steinberger.
Elmer H. Hufford. Robt. A. Steinmetz.
Edward W. Jacoby. Geo. L. Stevens.
Edward J. Kane. Edwin Seislove.
Edwin A. Keiper. Wm. R. Schell.
Walter Kleckner. Wm. M. Sassaman.
Henry Kressly. Jos. M. Troxell.
Lewis S. Krick. Herbert Trumbauer.
Elmer Kuhns. Chas. A. Wagner.

Edward M. Wagner. Wm. M. Wieand.
Adrian B. Weaver. Herbert A. Warg.
Harry A. Weaver. Oswald A. Yehl.
Harry Wetherhold. Jos. C. Zerwick.
Wm. S. Weinsheimer. Harvey E. Ziegler.

Nov. 16, 1904 a bronze tablet embracing the above names, was attached to the front wall of the Court-House, first story, in grateful recognition of their patriotic services in the Spanish-American War of 1898. It was placed there by Liberty Bell Chapter, D. A. R.

OLD STATE MILITIA.

In 1794, the officers of the 1st Regiment of the State Militia for this section of Northampton county, were as follows:

Lt. Col., Andrew Buchman.
Majors, Samuel Everett, Conrad Reder.
1st Co.—Capt., Jacob Oswald; Lieut., Burkhart Moser, Jr.; Ensign, Adam Miller.
2d Co.—Capt., John Smith; Lieut., Samuel Kistler; Ensign, Valentine Probst.
3d Co.—Capt., Philip Stafler; Lieut., Conrad Kopp; Ensign, Jonathan Knauss.
4th Co.—Capt., Fredk. Seiberling; Lieut., Geo. Greenwald; Ensign, Abraham Greenwald.
5th Co.—Capt., Nicholas Miller; Lieut., Philip Shellhammer; Ensign, Henry Ohl.
6th Co.—Capt., Geo. Rau; Lieut., Nicholas Bachman; Ensign, Simon Kocher.
7th Co.—Capt., Michael Ohl; Lieut., Geo. Gultner; Ensign, Geo. Andreas.
8th Co.—Capt., Wm. Rex; Lieut., Fredk. Handwerk; Ensign, Michael Wehr.

The officers of the 2d Regiment were:

Lt. Col., Jacob Grim.
Majors, John Shimer, Peter Haas.
1st Co.—Capt., Henry Haas; Lieut., Philip Knauss; Ensign, Jacob Swartz.
2d Co.—Capt., Jeremiah Trexler; Lieut., Geo. Steinger; Ensign, John Wetzel.
3d Co.—Capt., Adam Stahlnecker; Lieut., John Dillinger; Ensign, Lawrence Ruch.
4th Co.—Capt., Jacob Druckenmiller; Lieut., Fredk. Kemmerer; Ensign, Daniel Good.
5th Co.—Capt., Christopher Mohr; Lieut., Fredk. Grammes; Ensign, Wendel Wieand.
6th Co.—Capt., Henry Jarret; Lieut., Andrew Shifert; Ensign, Jacob Klein.
7th Co.—Capt., Joseph Sewitz; Lieut., Fredk. Hering; Ensign, Geo. Schaffer.
8th Co.—Capt., John Stahl; Lieut., Christian Zellner; Ensign, John Schmeier.

OFFICERS OF THE 7TH REGIMENT.

Lt. Col., Abraham Rinker.
Majors, Geo. Frederick, Nicholas Saeger.
1st Co.—Capt., Geo. Rhoads; Lieut., Adam Rieb; Ensign, Jacob Spinner.
2d Co.—Capt., Geo. Halter; Lieut., Melchior Dietrich; Ensign, Lawrence Good.
3d Co.—Capt., Martin Graff; Lieut., John Moser; Ensign, John Kendel.
4th Co.—Capt., Jacob Steckel; Lieut., Paul Balliet; Ensign, Peter Leisenring.
5th Co.—Capt., John Balliet; Lieut., Jacob Hartman; Ensign, Peter Schroeder.
6th Co.—Capt., John Roth; Lieut., Jacob Blumer; Ensign, David Musgenung.

7th Co.—Capt., Michael Kuntz; Ensign, Jacob Bishop.
8th Co.—Capt., Rudolph Smith; Lieut., John Freisch; Ensign, Geo. Ueberroth.

Thomas Craig, who had served as a colonel in the Revolution, was commissioned April 17, 1800, by the governor as major-general in command of the state militia, composed of the counties of Northampton and Wayne. He was again commissioned June 1, 1807, and Aug. 3, 1811.

The Brigadier-Generals in 1812 were Henry Spering and Conrad Kreider, Jr. In 1814, Henry Mertz succeeded Kreider.

Upon the establishment of Lehigh county in 1812, the counties of Northampton, Pike, and Lehigh constituted the 7th Division.

In 1810 George Rhoads, of Allentown, was lieutenant-colonel of the militia.

An original muster-roll of local militia found by the writer in North Whitehall, was deposited among the State Archives at Harrisburg. It was dated May 6, 1816, and read as follows:

ROLL OF RIFLE COMPANY.

Captain.

Frederick Handwerk.

First Lieutenant.

John Ringer.

Second Lieutenant.

Geo. Hotz.

Ensign.

John Hausman.

Privates.

Henry Roth, clerk.	John Peter.
Geo. Rex, drummer.	John Shoeneberger.
Geo. Wassum, fife.	John Wassum.
Daniel Helfrich.	John Lichtenwalner.
Wm. Moyer.	Jacob Bahr.
Adam Frey.	Wm. Lintz.
Nicholas Kern.	Adam Kunkel.
John Sauerwein.	Samuel Machfern.
Daniel Sensinger.	Chas. Klotz.
Jacob Frey.	John Miller.
Jacob Kiener.	John Frantz.
Philip Wehr.	Jacob Hoffman.
Simon Hartman.	Geo. Peter.
John Reber.	Geo. Haag.
Daniel Lintz.	John Kreckel.
Daniel Rockel.	John Bahr.
John Frey.	Daniel Knappenberger.
Jacob Rockel.	John Neihart.
Peter Troxel.	Jacob Focht.
John Zellner.	Henry Bahr.
Daniel Rex.	Daniel Andreas.
Daniel Hausman.	Geo. Sell.
Abraham Hartman.	David Moser.
Wm. Reber.	Conrad Wehr.
Daniel Keck.	Christian Hausman.
Conrad Lintz.	Fredk. Kraus.
Andrew Shassler.	Daniel Zellner.

Wm. Wuchter.
John Kern.
Samuel Rehrich.

Geo. Rau.
Jacob Brang.
Daniel Koch.

After their return from the War of 1812, Capt. George Dinkey's company of riflemen was known as the North Whitehall Rifle Rangers. Their commander, in 1826, was Capt. Daniel Saeger, when the company was known as the Whitehall Volunteer Rangers. Capt. Leonard Larosh commanded the company from 1829 to 1831. In 1836 the captain was David Laury; and in 1848, Reuben Frantz. On June 19, 1850, David Laury was again commissioned captain, and was probably the last captain of the company.

Capt. Peter Ruch organized a Cavalry Troop at the beginning of the War of 1812-14, which is claimed to have been the oldest in Pennsylvania. Governor Simon Snyder, on Aug. 1st, 1814, commissioned him "captain of the Troop of Dragoons, of the Militia of Penna., in the second Brigade of the 7th Division, composed of the militia of the counties of Northampton, Pike, and Lehigh, to serve for seven years." He was commissioned Brigadier-General on Aug. 3, 1821 by Governor Hiester, and re-commissioned Aug. 3, 1828, by Governor Schulze.

A return sheet of the 2d Brigade, 7th Division, made by Brig.-Genl. Ruch, on Sept. 28, 1822, shows that Stephen Balliet, was an aide-camp of the general; John F. Ruhe, brigade major; Peter Haas, brigade quartermaster, and Joseph Wilt, brigade inspector. The officers and staff of the 82d Regiment consisted of Col. Samuel Moyer, Lieut.-Col. Jacob Wannemacher, Majors Andrew Shifferstein and Michael Hiskey, and Captains William H. Long, John Weida, Lewis Larosh, Samuel Heffner, Joseph Steffy, Philip Mumbauer, Jacob Kistler, Joseph Saeger, Jonas Seiberling, Michael Everett, and Adam Kutz; the eleven companies composing the regiment having a total of 1,452, rank and file.

The 68th Regiment was under the command of Col. Charles L. Hutter, of Allentown, Lieut.-Col. Gideon Ibach, Majors Jacob Larosh and Peter Burkhalter. It was composed of twelve companies. The captains were: Jonas Faust, Casper Ringer, John Reiss, John J. Smith, Geo. Lehr, Joseph Guth, John Rex, Nicholas Gruber, Joseph Long, Solomon Gross, Joseph Fry, and Abraham Troxell, with a total of 1,235 men.

The 105th Rifle Regiment was composed of eight companies, with 371 men, commanded by Col. George Miller, Lieut.-Col. Henry Roth, Majors Adam Keller, and Wm. J. C. Baumer, and Captains Frederick Handwerk, Michael Ritter, Daniel Saeger, Jacob Hartz, Laurence Stettler, Jacob Marcks, and Jesse Samuels. Two companies of volunteer cavalry, one commanded by Capt. Solomon Steckel, and the other by Capt. Wm. Miller, both of 33 men; and one infantry company, commanded by Jacob Newhard, of 50 men, were also in this brigade. The total muster of the brigade was 3,221.

The captains of the troop, succeeding Peter Ruch, were: Solomon Steckel, Sr., from 1821-28; Joseph Steckel, 1828-35; Solomon Steckel, Jr., 1835-42; Thomas Ruch, 1842-54; Edward Sheidy, 1854-59; William Lichtenwalner, and Elias Kuntz, 1859-62. During the captaincy of the last the name was changed to "Washington Troop," which it bore until disbanded in 1862. In mid-summer of that year the company tendered its service to Governor Curtin for assistance in suppressing the rebellion. The officers came to Allentown and took the oath of allegiance to the United States, and the troop held itself ready to march to the place of rendezvous at a moment's notice. A dispatch was received from the governor directing the company to come without officers, but this the men declined to do. In August, 1862, a draft was made and this caused the troop to disband, after an honorable service of fifty years.

Thomas Ruch, son of Gen. Peter Ruch, was commissioned as first lieutenant of the troop, Dec. 14, 1839; captain, Aug. 3, 1842; captain, Aug. 20, 1849; major; March 8, 1853; major, June 21, 1854; colonel, May 28, 1860. He was also commissioned captain of the Guthsville Troop of Cavalry Oct. 28, 1858; and again June 6, 1859.

The By-Laws of the Whitehall Troop of Cavalry were as follows:

ART. 1.—The uniform of this troop shall consist of a blue coat of cloth with a standing collar and a piece of red cassimer in front of the collar; a silver star on it embroidered, with silver edging around the collar, and the body shall be embroidered with red and silver edging. There shall be three rows of large ball buttons and a cord shall extend from the button-holes toward the seam of the sleeves; the embroidering of the skirt to be of red cord with a piece of red cassimer on the skirt, and a silver star on the tip of the skirt. The pantaloons to be likewise of blue cloth, embroidered with red and silver cord. The cap to be of leather, with a band of tin, and a strip of bear-skin, to extend from the brim in front to the termination of the cap behind; with a red feather and white top cockade and eagle. Sword with a white belt, red sash, black leather boots and silver-plated spurs. The horse equipment shall be as follows: Holsters and cartridge-box with a cover of bearskin, pistols, halter and saddle.

ART. 2.—The Troop shall train on parade three days in each and every year in addition to what is required by the militia laws of this State.

ART. 3.—Every member of this Troop failing to attend on any of the additional days of training shall be subject to a fine of $2 for every time he neglects to attend.

ART. 4.—Every member of this Troop, enrolled for six months before the day of training, who shall appear on such day of training, not in full and complete uniform, shall be fined as follows, to wit: Without a coat, 50 cents; pantaloons, 25 cents; cap, 25 cents; cap without a tin-band, 6 cents; feather, 12½ cents; cockade, 6 cents; holsters and cartridge box, 25 cents; pistols, 25 cents; sword, 50 cents; white sword belt, 6 cents; stock, 12½ cents; red sash, 12½ cents; boots, 12½ cents; spurs, 12½ cents; halter, 12½ cents. And for every other part of the uniform missing, such fine as shall be imposed by the Court of Appeals to be appointed by this Troop.

ART. 5.—At the regular company training in the year 1843, and at every such training in each succeeding year, three members shall be appointed who are to compose a Court of Appeals; and also three members who are to compose a Committee of Inspection, whose duty it shall be to inspect the uniforms and accoutrements of the members of this Troop, and report to the Court of Appeals.

ART. 6.—If any of the members of this troop shall drink too much so as to be unfit to parade on the day of training he shall pay a fine of $1 a day for his bad behavior.

THOMAS RUCH, Captain.

The following was the Roster of the Company in 1842:

Captain.

Solomon Steckel.

First Lieutenant.

Thomas Ruch.

Privates.

Peter Ruch.	Joseph Diehl.
Wm. Kohler.	Geo. Miller.
Reuben Troxell.	Jesse Hecker.
James Roth.	Daniel Schreiber.
Solomon Kemmerer.	John Strauss.
Joseph Kern.	John Woodring.
Peter Troxell.	Edward Resch.
Eli Steckel.	Samuel Koch.
Stephen Troxell.	Tilghman Snyder.
Jacob Saeger.	Owen Kern.
Aaron Guth.	James Meyer.
Charles Fatzinger.	Wm. Kratzer.
Thos. Frack.	Chas. Freyman.
Solomon Kratzer.	Paul Roth.
Edward Sherer.	Thomas Weaver.
Wm. Peter.	Elias M. Kuhns.
Joseph Diehl.	Charles Roth.
Thomas Gangewere.

ROSTER OF COMPANY IN 1849.

Captain.

Thomas Ruch.

Privates.

Eli Steckel.	Josiah Kern.
Richmond McKee.	Elias M. Kuntz.
Owen Schreiber.	Edward Sherer.
John Snyder.	Thos. Frack.

Chas. Fatzinger.
Daniel Troxell.
Chas. Freyman.
Thos. Scheirer.
Adam Gehres.
Daniel Levan.
Owen Hermany.
Chas. Roth.
David Reinhard.
Jonas Reinhard.
David Rudy.
Owen Schadt.
Henry Schadt.
Nathan Snyder.
Jacob Miller.
Wm. Schadt.

Theodore H. Howell.
Josiah Sherer.
Chas. Rinker.
Chas. Keiter.
Ephraim Mickley.
Edwin Schadt.
Tilghman Levan.
David Schadt.
Aaron Landis.
Charles Ritter.
Israel Rudy.
Wm. Roth.
Wm. Kern.
Andrew Hartman.
Henry Muse.

Other companies were formed at different times in North Whitehall township, among which were the North Whitehall Jefferson Guards, of which George Schmidt was captain during 1839 and 1840, Reuben Saeger in 1844, and Reuben Frantz from 1845 to 1848. A rifle company was formed in 1828 by Capt. Daniel Moyer, of which he remained the commanding officer until 1844.

At the time of the visit of General Lafayette to America a large parade was held in his honor in Allentown. The proclamation issued by Gen. Peter Ruch, ordering the militia to parade, was dated Sept. 23, 1824. A copy of this proclamation is owned by the Lehigh County Historical Society.

Battalions.—Independent military companies existed in every township of the county and frequently assembled on battalion days for drill and manoeuvres. In 1819, Capt. Michael Ritter commanded the Hanover Greens, in Hanover township; Capt. Adam Keller, the American Blues, and Capt. Gideon Ibach, of Cedarville, the Lehigh County Greens, of South Whitehall township; Capt. Jacob Schantz, the Union Macungie Rifle Company, of Macungie township; Capt. Joseph Wilt, the Mechanic's Rifle Company of Upper Saucon, and Capt. John Yeaker, the Upper Milford Rifle Company.

In October, 1843, there was a great gathering of military companies at Camp Washington, near Allentown. The local companies were: Lehigh Artillerists, Capt. Fry, and Harrison Guards, Capt. Boas, of Allentown; Whitehall Troop, Capt. Ruch; Washington Guards, Capt. Miller; Upper Milford Riflemen, Capt. Stahler; Salzbürg Riflemen, Capt. Klein. The officers commanding were: Maj.-Gen. Wm. H. Keim; Brig.-Gen. Joseph K. Saeger; Colonel George Wenner; Major Reuben Strauss, and Div. Q. M., James L. Selfridge.

In 1840, Capt. Philip Pearson commanded a company known as the Upper Saucon Rifle Rangers, and in Weisenburg township the local company was known as the Independent Blues. In 1842, the Union Guards existed in South Whitehall.

On Oct. 7, 1854, at Zimmerman's Hotel in Lowhill township, "battalion day" was participated in by these companies: Jackson Bush Rangers, Capt. D. F. Follweiler; Lynnville Fencibles, Capt. P. P. Haas; Independent Lowhill Rifle Rangers, Capt. Peter Lentz; Lowhill Artillerists, Capt. J. E. Zimmerman; Washington Cavalry, Capt. Lucas Schlauch and Washington Rifle Rangers, Capt. S. Schlosser. General Herman Rupp and Majors Amos Ettinger and E. Keiper were the officers of highest rank present.

The Lehigh Artillerists, of Allentown, were organized in 1827, with William Fry, as captain. Three years later he resigned and John F. Ruhe, Jr., succeeded him. In 1834, Samuel Gumpert was elected captain, and his successor was Capt. H. S. Morehead, under whose command the company participated in a military encampment at Easton, from Aug. 29th to Sept. 3, 1842. The company numbered 43 men and wore blue uniforms, with scarlet facings and stripes, buff belts, and scarlet plumes. On Thursday, September 1st, Governor Porter reviewed the troops, in the presence of over 30,000 spectators, according to the newspaper accounts of that day.

Dr. John Romig, of Allentown, was active in military circles and on Feb. 27, 1830, was commissioned colonel of the 144th Volunteer Militia of the Second Brigade by Governor George Wolf, who also commissioned him, on Oct. 26, 1832, captain of the Allentown Troop of Cavalry.

In 1836, the Harrison men in the Lehigh Artillerists withdrew and organized the Harrison Guards, with Jacob D. Boas as Captain, and Reuben Strauss as First Lieutenant. Major William Fry organized the Van Buren Artillerists about the same time. There was much rivalry between the companies at this time, as the Guards were Whigs and the Artillerists Democrats, and in the campaign of 1840 there was considerable warmth of political feeling, which continued until the companies disbanded.

After they disbanded, Amos Ettinger organized the Lehigh Fencibles, on August 6, 1849, which company had a short existence. Captain Ettinger was soon promoted to major and later became leader of the Allentown band. Captain Hiram Yeager commanded the company until it disbanded.

Allen Rifles.—This company was organized July 10, 1850, composed largely of former members of the Fencibles. The officers elected were: Captain, Tilghman H. Good; 1st lieu., Thomas Steckel; 2d lieutenant, William Fry; 3d lieutenant, or quartermaster, John P. Dillinger. On Nov. 20, 1855, the company participated in the dedication at Easton of a monument to George Taylor, signer of the Declaration of Independence. The parade on that occasion was headed by Major General David Laury and Majors Longnecker and Ettinger, and the Allen Rifles was preceded by the Bethlehem band.

The uniform of the company was the regulation blue, with caps, and minie rifles were carried. Under the instruction of Captain Good, one of the ablest tacticians in the state, the company attained a degree of proficiency in Hardee's tactics and the Zouave drill which won for them a reputation extending beyond the borders of the state, and in the opinion of competent judges, rivalled Col. Ellsworth's Zouaves. In 1859 a military company from Washington, D. C., challenged the Allen Rifles to a drill and York was selected as a meeting place, on which occasion the Rifles were victorious. Their armory was on Hamilton street, between Seventh and Church streets.

On April 20, 1861, the Allen Rifles were mustered into the United States service as Company I, First Regiment, Penna. Volunteers, with 70 men and 11 officers. Captain Good was chosen Lieut.-Colonel of the regiment, and William H. Gausler became captain, with Emmanuel P. Rhoads, first lieutenant and Benjamin C. Roth, second lieutenant. The history of the company until their muster out on July 23, 1861, will be found in the Civil War history. Many of the company then enlisted in the 47th and 54th Regiments, all but a few of whom received commissions, ranking from lieutenant to colonel.

On June 30, 1870, the company was re-organized under the name of Allen Rifles, with their former colonel, T. H. Good, as captain; Andrew C. Nagle, 1st lieutenant, and Charles M. Mertz, 2d lieutenant. In 1874, Capt. Good was again promoted to the rank of colonel, and Andrew C. Nagle was elected captain, and commissioned Oct. 12, 1874, with Lieut. Mertz as 1st lieutenant, and James R. Roney as 2d lieutenant. From 1874 the Allen Rifles has been Company D, Fourth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Jordan Artillerists.—This company was organized in 1856, principally from residents of the lower section of the borough, now the First Ward. William H. Gausler was its captain and the armory was located at what was then Rex's hotel. In 1860 the company purchased regulation United States uniforms, with dress coats and overcoats, with plumed hats, in which they paraded, for the first time, on Jackson Day, Feb. 8, 1861, when the company entertained the Norristown Rifles, commanded by Capt. John F. Hartranft, later governor of the state. Many of the company became members of Company I, First Penna., in the Civil War.

Allen Infantry.—In 1859 the Allen Infantry was organized with Thomas Yeager as captain. The company uniform was of gray cloth, with black and gold bullion trimmings, and the men carried flint-lock guns, with bayonets. The drill-room was at 716 Hamilton street. The company paraded in the new uniform for the first time on Feb. 21, 1861, with the Allen Rifles, Jordan Artillerists, and Menninger's band, in the military parade at Philadelphia, when President-elect Lincoln officiated at the raising of the flag over Independence Hall and accompanied Mr. Lincoln, (then on his way to the inauguration at Washington), to Harrisburg, where he addressed 5,000 Pennsylvania soldiers from the balcony of the Jones House, later the Commonwealth hotel. The subsequent history of this company appears under the head of "First Defenders," in the War of the Rebellion, in which this company was the first from Allentown to volunteer their services.

In 1857, a German military company, commanded by Leopold Kern, was organized. Henry Harte, then proprietor of the Lafayette hotel, later became its commander, and the company drilled in the yard at the rear of the hotel. Early in 1859 Capt. Harte removed to Catasauqua and the company was re-organized by Capt. Yeager as the Allen Infantry.

Allen Continentals.—On June 21, 1869, at a meeting held at the Pennsylvania hotel, the Allen Zouaves were organized, with Samuel D. Lehr as captain; Edward Keiser, 1st lieutenant, and Chas. W. Keinert, 2d lieutenant. The uniform adopted was Turkish in design and consisted of a blue flannel blouse with ornamental yellow trimmings and braiding, wide red flannel ankle trousers, and white canvas leggings. A red turban with a long, flaming, red tassel covered the head, while a brilliant blue sash, with pendant ends adorned the waist.

A muster roll of the Zouaves was forwarded to the adjutant general and the company was formally enrolled in the service of the state, and commissions issued to its officers, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, approved May 4, 1864. This act provided that the active militia of the state should be composed of volunteers, and in case of war, invasion and riots, this militia should be first ordered into service to aid the civil officers in the execution of the laws. Each county was considered a separate brigade, and these county brigades were divided into twenty divisions. Lehigh and Northampton counties constituted the Seventh Division. Company organization was completed by the qualification of one captain, two lieutenants, five sergeants, eight corporals, two musicians, one wagoner and sixty-four privates, minimum, and eighty-two privates, maximum. There was no permanent regimental formation. The companies were known as independent companies, and to be attached to provisional regimental formation as occasion might require, if ten companies to a regiment, with the customary and present complement of regimental officers. Each of the numerous brigades was commanded by a brigadier-general, and each of the twenty divisions was distinguished by its own major-general. Shoulder straps with stars were abundant in those days, and one difficulty in keeping up the militia organization was in getting a sufficient number of privates and companies "to go 'round" and give the many officers, from major-generals down something to command. There were about three hundred of these independent companies at this time, but new companies were being constantly formed and companies all the time disbanding, so that the record was constantly changing and the militia in this respect lacked the element of permanence.

The Allen Zouaves having complied with the requirements of the military laws as they then stood, received its equipment from the state. This equipment consisted of a muzzle-loading Springfield rifle, a belt, cartridge box and bayonet. At this time the state supplied only the arms and accoutrements; the soldier had to furnish everything else himself. To raise the money necessary for uniforms, rent, heat, light, etc., monthly dues, of fifty cents were charged against each member. Having bought the resplendent uniforms, and received the arms and accoutrements, and having been duly enrolled among the state's militia, the Allen Zouaves were now ready for the actual business of warfare. Accordingly, Wint's Hall, the third floor of No. 815 Hamilton street, was leased for an armory and the company commenced drilling twice a week, on Monday and Thursday nights. Naturally great interest was at first taken in all the company's affairs in general, and in these drills in particular; the attendance was large and regular, and the members loyal and enthusiastic. But gradually, with the lessening of the novelty of the new uniforms, and the growing familiarity with the manual of arms and evolutions of the drill, the attendance and interest decreased. Another factor in bringing about this result, and perhaps the greater one, was the monthly dues of fifty cents. Many of the members of the company found this a greater drain upon their resources than they were able, and in some cases, willing to bear, and falling into arrears, they remained away from the company meetings and drills, and so finally these became very slimly attended.

In justice to the officers of the company, it must be said that they were all along faithful and persistent in their efforts and attendance. At no time was there any dissatisfaction felt towards them. To make matters worse, in 1873, the landlord of the building notified the company that he needed the hall which it was using as an armory, for business purposes, and new quarters had to be secured. In its crippled condition this was no easy task for the Allen Zouaves. The treasury was empty, the members indifferent, the officers well nigh discouraged and the financial credit of the organization rather limited. Those were dark days for the Allen Zouaves. Suddenly, and from an unexpected quarter, a ray of sunlight broke across the prospect. A patriotic citizen, George Haas, offered his residence on the south side of Hamilton street, near Tenth, to the company for use as a meeting and drill room until other arrangements could be made. This offer was gratefully accepted and the Zouaves again had a habitation and drilling was resumed. The parlor and dining room of Mr. Haas' residence was used for drill purposes and as the company's average attendance had dwindled to five or six men and the three officers, these rooms supplied ample floor space for its martial manoeuvres.

On May 14, 1874, the Legislature passed an act which was the foundation of the generous legislation that in the following years built up the National Guard of Pennsylvania and ultimately placed it as the foremost volunteer citizen soldiery, not only of this country, but of that of any nation. This act, first rearranged and re-districted the organization of the militia. The former twenty divisions were reduced to not more than ten, and "arranging said divisions so that by lines of railway or contiguous localities, the troops therein may be most speedily concentrated and assigning the troops thereto in proportion to the taxable inhabitants."

Even more important, to the companies, at least, was the provision that each company was to receive an annual allowance of one hundred dollars, if located in towns of less than fifteen thousand inhabitants, and if in towns exceeding that number, two hundred dollars, annually, for the payment of armory rent. About this time, also, the company received its proportion of the state military tax, which was then for the first time distributed. This amounted to about four dollars per man. Of this per capita, two dollars and twenty-five cents were paid directly into the company's treasury. The balance of each man's share was disposed of in this manner. His accounts with the company were consulted and paid out of this balance and if anything remained it was handed over to him; if, on the other hand, this balance was not sufficient to pay his indebtedness, the account was called square. Up to this time, the Allen Zouaves had been merely an independent company, assigned to what was known as the Seventh division of the volunteer Militia. This division was composed of four companies, viz.: Allen Zouaves, Capt. S. D. Lehr; Allen Rifles, Capt. T. H. Good, both of Allentown; Selfridge Guards, Capt. James R. Roney, of Bethlehem, and the Easton Greys, Capt. Frank Reeder, of Easton. The division commander was Maj.-Gen. James L. Selfridge, of Bethlehem. A complete re-organization of the state militia took place under the Act of 1874 and the troops from that time on have been known as the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

National Guard.—The Guard was divided into ten divisions and these divisions were subdivided into brigades. The most important change, however, was the formation of permanent regimental organizations and the assigning of the formerly independent companies to these regiments and distinguishing them by letter designation in regular army manner. At this time the National Guard consisted of 879 officers and 9,273 enlisted men, divided into 194 companies, of which 10 were cavalry, 6 artillery and 178 infantry. These made up 19 regiments, 1 battalion and 6 unattached companies. The Allen Zouaves were assigned to the newly created Fourth Regiment, under the designation of Company B, by which name it has been since properly known in military parlance.

The Fourth Regiment was composed of nine companies as follows: Co. A, Reading, Capt. A. T. Wenrich; Co. B, Allentown, Capt. S. D. Lehr; Co. C, Reading, Capt. Franklin Coller; Co. D, Allentown, Capt. A. C. Nagle; Co. E, Hamburg, Capt. E. D. Smith; Co. F, Easton, Capt. Frank A. Stitzer; Co. G, Emaus, Capt. A. J. Adrain; Co. H, Slatinton, Capt. D. G. Rhoads, and Co. I, Catasauqua, Capt. H. S. Harte. The regiment was commanded by Col. T. H. Good, and together with the Sixteenth Regiment, commanded by Col. Edward Schall, of Norristown, composed the Third Brigade, which brigade in turn composed the Second Division of the National Guard. The brigade was commanded by Brig.-Gen. Frank Reeder, of Easton, and the division by Gen. William J. Boulton, of Norristown.

Larger quarters becoming necessary, the third floor of the building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Linden streets was rented for an armory, and weekly drills on Monday nights were resumed. In 1875 the company caught the contagion incident to the universal interest in the approaching centennial celebration of American independence, and with its usual spirit determined to do something noteworthy in marking this great era of national history. Its membership was strong, its interest deep and abiding, its affairs prosperous and its Zouave uniforms worn and out of date.

At this time there was no such thing as a regulation uniform and the style of dress was left to the ingenuity and imagination of each individual organization. New uniforms were needed by Co. B. What so appropriate as the time-honored and picturesque habiliments of the heroes of Concord, Lexington, Bunker Hill and days of the Revolution? No sooner was the suggestion made than it was unanimously adopted and the brilliant Zouaves at once proceeded to array themselves in the staid and sober uniform made familiar in history by pictures of Valley Forge and the days of Washington. The traditions of the Continental Army were followed as rigidly as possible. The coat was a blue swallow-tail, slashed and trimmed with buff, with large brass buttons, oval in shape and smooth in finish. Buff knee breeches, with buttons at the knee, heavy white stockings, specially made for the purpose, and low black shoes with great brass buckles on the instep. A tricornered chapeau with large brass shield, bearing a spread eagle, and the figures '76. At the same time the name of the company was changed to Allen Continentals. Up to this time the company had not taken part in any public demonstration or great event, and the only opportunities it had had for appearance in public was in assisting in doing the honors at the funeral of some deceased soldier, local parades or Fourth of July celebrations.

The eagerly awaited opportunity to show their mettle and incidentally to dazzle the fair sex with their brand new uniforms was however near at hand. In June, 1875, the Centennial Committee of Lehigh county organized a fair for the purpose of raising funds in aid of the approaching exposition at Philadelphia.

This fair was held upon the old fair grounds at Sixth and Liberty streets and continued for a week. The Allen Continentals were in attendance during the entire celebration, gave exhibition drills and generally formed one of the chief attractions. The great event of the fair was a sham battle, in which the Allen Rifles also participated. So interesting did the boys become that the excitement carried them beyond the control of their officers, and never did the Continentals of old charge Hessians more recklessly and fearlessly than the Continentals of Co. B, charged upon their suppositious enemy, and the conflict became for a short time rather serious. Fortunately a cessation of hostilities was finally secured and beyond torn uniforms, some powder burns and bayonet jabs, the damage was not serious, but it showed that the old spirit had not died out in the young generation, and that the uniforms of the country's first heroes was not unworthily worn.

The first out-of-town trip of the company occurred on Sept. 5, 1874, when it went to Easton for regimental inspection. On Sept. 13, 1875, another trip was made to Reading for a similar purpose, the inspection taking place on the fair grounds. May 15, 1876, the regiment was inspected at Allentown, the other companies of the regiment coming here for that purpose. In the summer of 1876, the great Centennial year, the company, with the rest of the National Guard, encamped at Fairmount Park, in Philadelphia. This was the first encampment for the Continentals, and as it was the only company wearing this distinctive and appropriate uniform and at the same time having attained a high degree of proficiency in the manual and in evolution, it attracted an unusual amount of attention. Aside from this, the experience of an encampment together with other organizations, and all the duties, discipline, and incidents of camp life were a novelty and afforded opportunities and temptations not contemplated by tactics, not easy to be resisted, and not always tending to the peace and comfort of the commanding officers. Many were the incidents and accidents attending this first tour of duty, some even to this day recalled with pleasant and piquant memory. However, it was not all fun and play and much was learned by officers and men, that was of lasting benefit, for both, even in these days of practical and thoroughly business-like encampments. The next tour of duty was the gravest and the most important one the Allen Continentals had hitherto been called upon to face.

The great railroad strike of 1877 had broken out, the wheels of traffic had been stopped all over the state and the property of the railroad companies was at the mercy of the mob and threatened with destruction. Allentown was quiet, but the call for aid came from our neighboring city of Reading. On Sunday, July 23, about noon, the captains of the Allentown companies received orders to assemble their commands at their respective armories, and to hold themselves in readiness to move at a moment's notice. Capt. Lehr at once sent messengers flying to all parts of the city summoning his men to report instantly. The smallest man of his company, Musician Fred. Bechtel, distinguished himself by being the first on the ground, reporting in less than half an hour with his fife ready for his country's service. Remarkable as it may seem, it is nevertheless a fact, that within one hour's time after the receipt of the order by the captain, every officer and man of the company had reported, excepting two, who were sick in bed.

The night and all of Monday to 4 p. m. were spent at the armory waiting for orders. By this time all the companies of the regiment excepting Co. A, of Reading, had assembled at Allentown. Orders to move were then received, but even the company commanders were not informed of the destination. The regiment, with Co. B on the right moved to the East Penn Junction and embarked on a train of cars and moved toward Reading.

A short distance east of the station the troops disembarked and were marched to the station, where orders were given to load and fix bayonets. The entire strength of the regiment then on duty was about 220 officers and men. Co. B had not only the honor of being the right company, but was also the largest company on duty, reporting three officers and forty-one men. Each man had seven rounds of fixed ammunition. The regiment was then marched along the main double tracks of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, on Seventh street, toward the city, Co. B still being the leading company, and Gen. Frank Reeder and Col. T. H. Good in advance of the regiment. A short distance in from the depot the level of the tracks on Seventh street dips considerably below the level of the street and pavements, the elevation of the latter gradually rising to about fifteen feet. Solid stone walls rise from the track level to the streets and the sidewalks are protected by stone parapets. This depressed portion of the street is known as "the cut" and is over two squares in length, and the intersecting streets are continued over this cut by overhead bridges.

As soon as Co. B arrived at the cut, the rioters opened hostilities by throwing stones and bricks, torn from the pavements and streets, down upon the men, from behind these stone parapets which formed a natural and excellent rampart and completely concealed and protected those making the attack. At this point the music and commanding officers, who had been leading the column, promptly fell to the rear. At the word of command Co. B at once broke into column of platoons, covering the entire width of the tracks, and advanced steadily. Orders had been given not to fire until commanded and these orders were repeated. Immediately after this movement had been executed, a shot was fired at the company from a second story window on the east side of the street. This shot was answered by a shot from one of the men in the second platoon of the company. This was the signal for the beginning of a general running fire along the line, and from the rioters on both sides of the street and from the overhead bridges, while a perfect hail of stones, bricks and chunks of coal were poured from the streets above into the ranks of the soldiers, knocking them down like ten-pins. All this time Co. B was advancing by platoons followed by the Easton Greys and the other companies in order. After passing under the first bridge the company encountered a locomotive and tender on one track and a freight car on the other. This obstruction hindered the forward movement by platoons, and the men broke and found their way between these and the walls, in the best way they could. Having passed these obstructions, the company was formed into double rank, company front and moved forward a short distance arriving at about 100 feet north of Penn street. Directly in front of the company on Seventh street and blocking all of Penn street, was a wild, howling mob of thousands of men and some women. Up to this time all of the firing by the soldiers had been directed toward the parapets and bridges overhead. When Co. B arrived at the point just mentioned, a volley of upwards of twenty shots was fired point blank into the mob ahead. This volley scattered the crowd like chaff and the company came to a halt. All of this firing was not only without orders but against orders, which were not to fire until the command was given; but the attack upon the soldiers was so vigorous and provoking, that firing once begun could not be stopped while the ammunition lasted or the attack continued. Of the 41 men of Co. B, 21 were wounded, more or less seriously, during this march through the cut, and one of them, Corporal Charles Weber, was crippled for life.

The ammunition of the company was completely exhausted by the above volley, and it, with the rest of the regiment, marched down Penn Square to the Mansion House, where a fresh supply was received. The regiment was then marched back to the Reading depot, where it was quartered until next day without anything to eat. Here the regiment did guard duty and protected the depot and property of the railroad company. This was a hazardous undertaking, as the place was surrounded by a turbulent and riotous mob, which tried in every way to swerve the soldiers from their duty and enlist their sympathy. The mob succeeded in their efforts with a portion of four companies of the 16th regiment who were united with the 4th for this duty, to such an extent that they handed their ammunition over to the rioters and gave the men of the 4th to understand that if they attacked the rioters these members of the 16th regiment would join with the rioters in resisting the attack. This added to the gravity of the situation. The regiment had been materially reduced by sending home the wounded, and by stragglers and deserters, but with its inadequate force in the face of angry thousands and treachery on the part of those who should have aided and assisted them in maintaining law and order, the officers and men of the 4th, without exception, remained faithful to duty. What would have been the result if an attack had been made no one can tell. Fortunately there was no attack, and about 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning the welcome orders were received to vacate the depot and move to Temple, about five miles east of Reading. No time was lost getting on board cars and proceeding to Temple. Arriving there orders were received to continue on to Allentown. Upon arriving at Emaus, six miles west of Allentown, the engineer of the train refused to proceed any further, saying that a large mob was gathered at the East Penn Junction, of which he was afraid, and pulled the fires of his engine.

The regiment thereupon disembarked and proceeded to march overland to Allentown, arriving there about 10:30 p. m., and just in time to quell an incipient riot on Centre Square, where a threatening crowd had gathered and was evidently only waiting for a signal or excuse to begin trouble. However, when the solid ranks of glistening bayonets appeared coming up South Seventh street, the crowd melted away more suddenly and far more silently than it had appeared. The various companies were quartered in town over night, and next day pitched camp on the old fair grounds, where they remained for six days and were the magnet of attraction for all the surrounding country. The regiment was then sent to Harrisburg, where it guarded the State Arsenal for eleven days and at the expiration of this period was sent home, which ended the first and famous campaign of twenty-one days. While guarding the arsenal, an important and lasting change was made for Co. B. New uniforms, the regulation United States army uniform, were issued to all companies for which each man was charged $5.50, which was deducted from his pay, and the Allen Continentals bade a sad farewell to their distinguishing and unique Revolutionary garb.

On June 12, 1878, an Act of Assembly again reorganizing the National Guard and making many changes and improvements in the service was approved. By it the former divisions were consolidated into one, with only one officer ranking as major-general. The brigades were not to exceed five and the number of infantry companies were limited to 150, with five additional companies of cavalry and five batteries of artillery. This was declared to be the peace footing of the Guard, with power on the part of the commander-in-chief to increase this allotment in case of war. Under this law the Guard was divided into five brigades and the 4th regiment, together with the 6th, 8th, 11th, the Washington troop and Griffin Battery (now known as Battery C), formed the Second Brigade, commanded by Brig.-Gen. Frank Reeder. Col. T. H. Good still continued in command of the regiment, which was composed of Cos. B and D of Allentown; E, of Hamburg; F, of Easton; H, of Slatington; I, of Catasauqua, and K, of Portland.

In 1881, the brigades were reduced to three and the 4th, 8th, 9th, 12th, and 13th regiments formed the Third Brigade, commanded by Brig.-Gen. J. K. Siegfried. As they became inefficient the Easton, Portland, Catasauqua, and Slatington companies were disbanded and their places taken by A, of Reading; C, of Columbia; F, of Pottsville; G, of Pine Grove, and H, of Lebanon, which, with B, and D, of Allentown, and E, of Hamburg, now compose the 4th Regiment.

Co. B attended all the regular encampments, beginning in 1876, and invariably turned out with full strength of officers and men, and, upon all drills and parades in camp, it regularly exceeded the average in the number of men turned out, and was frequently commended by the regimental officers for this reason. The company also participated in the following extra tours and ceremonies, viz.:

The reception to Gen. U. S. Grant, at Philadelphia, Dec. 16, 1879; Constitutional Centennial parade, at Philadelphia, Sept. 16, 1887; Centennial of Washington's inauguration parade, at New York, April 30, 1889; the inauguration parades, at Washington, of President Garfield, 1881; President Cleveland, 1885; President Harrison, 1889, and President Cleveland, 1893; the inauguration parades at Harrisburg, of Governors Hartranft, 1875; Hoyt, 1879, and Beaver, 1887; and the parade in honor of the dedication of the 9th regiment armory at Wilkes-Barre, in April, 1886.

On Oct. 29, 1885, Captain S. D. Lehr was elected colonel of the regiment, Col. T. H. Good declining to be a candidate. Capt. Lehr had served continuously as captain of the company for over sixteen years, with the exception of a brief interval. On Dec. 2, 1875, he had been elected major of the regiment and been commissioned.

The company had made attempts to elect his successor without success. In order to avoid a bad feeling and possible detriment to the company, a unanimous call was extended to Major Lehr to accept a re-election as captain, and the committee selected to deliver this call, was made up of the several aspirants for the captaincy. Coming as it did, the major found it irresistible and resigning his office of major he was unanimously re-elected captain on June 6, 1876, and served as such until his election as colonel. First Lieut. George B. Roth was elected captain on Nov. 23, 1885, to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Capt. Lehr, and served his full term until Dec. 29, 1890, when, upon his declining to be a candidate, James L. Schaadt, Esq., was elected captain. Capt. Schaadt had been a member of the company from 1884 until June 17, 1889, when he was appointed regimental quartermaster on the staff of Col. Lehr, and served in that capacity until the expiration of the colonel's commission in October, 1890, when he re-enlisted as a private in Co. B, and on December 29, 1890, was elected captain of the company. He served a full term and brought the company up to a high standard of efficiency in every respect, and was a popular and, at the same time, proficient officer. In spite of the urgent requests to accept a re-election, he declined to be a candidate, on the ground that the demands of business prevented his giving sufficient time to the duties of captain.

On January 20, 1896, First Lieutenant James A. Medlar was elected captain. Capt. Medlar was one of the charter members of the Slatington Rifles, Co. H, when that company was mustered into service in 1874, and remained with it until 1879, when, upon removing to Allentown, he enlisted at once with Co. B, as private and rose step by step in that organization to his position as its commander. He was a faithful and capable officer and popular with the men, and with the aid of his two lieutenants, Chas. B. Rhoads and Orlando Miller, not only maintained the high standard of efficiency attained by Capt. Schaadt, but moved it upward, the company having received the unusual rank of "very superior" upon every point at the spring inspection of 1900, which placed it as the second highest company in the entire state.

On the morning of July 10, 1892, the company received orders to move at once to Homestead, to assist in quelling the riot at the Carnegie Mills. By noon, the time for the leaving of the train, every officer and man had reported for duty, and left with the command. The sudden summons, the rush of preparation, the excitement and crowd attending the departure, the tearful good-byes of wives and sweethearts, the long ride, the uncertainty of destination and of what might occur before it would be reached, the arrival at Swissvale, and going into camp, the two nights bivouac on the bare ground, the second of which was made unpleasant by a pouring rain, against which the boys had no protection except the improvised shelter tent formed by stretching rubber blankets, all too small, over brush-wood and crawling under,—sleeping in a system of rivulets beneath a leaky roof, the three days without food other than adamantine hard tack and black coffee—all of these, and many more, are the incidents which will not soon be forgotten.

The officers and men, with the usual spirit of the company, bore all these and more, without complaint, and probably rather enjoyed the experience of being tired, wet, and hungry as a novel and necessary accompaniment of a soldier's life. The company with its regiment, and the 10th and 14th and Battery C, formed a provisional brigade under command of Col. Hawkins, and remained on the hillside at Swissvale, directly opposite to Homestead during the entire tour of duty, excepting when sent across the Monongahela river to do guard duty at the Carnegie Works and City Farm Lane. The camp of the 4th was distinguished from that of all the other regiments by being the only one laid out in accordance with the regulations of the new tactics. Much hard and disagreeable work had to be done and Col. Case improved the opportunity by holding drills. The work was all willingly and uncomplainingly done and much valuable experience was gained by officers and men. On July 28th, the company was relieved from duty and with the regiment started for home, arriving at Allentown next morning, bronzed, bearded, and weather-beaten and looking like veterans, but happy, healthy, and in excellent shape generally to settle down to their customary civil duties as private citizens.

About 1880, the company left its quarters at the corner of Seventh and Linden streets and rented the third floor of Nos. 42 and 44 North Seventh street, which gave it a largely increased floor space for drilling purposes. The rear portion of the second floor was comfortably fitted up for a company and meeting room. Here the company remained until January, 1894, when jointly with company D, it rented a portion of the new Central Market building, at the northeast corner of Sixth and Court streets, which it still occupies. Here each company has a commodious and beautifully furnished company room for reading and meeting purposes, convenient and ample store-rooms for accoutrements and equipments, and one of the largest halls in the state for drill purposes. The clear floor space of the drill hall is 155 by 68 feet, is upon the second story with large windows along each side, lighted by gas and electricity, with adjoining cloak rooms, dining rooms, kitchens, etc.

In rifle practice, Co. B has always taken a leading place. In 1884 the first attempt at target practice was held and seven men were qualified as marksmen. In 1885 the number was increased to ten. In 1886 none were reported as qualified. In the spring of 1887, Col. Lehr appointed Private Morris Hoats, of Co. B, inspector of rifle practice on his staff. The members of the company gave the inspector enthusiastic support in his efforts to stimulate interest in the matter of rifle practice. A good 500-yard range was secured at Schreiber's mills for the joint use of the two Allentown companies, and Co. B qualified 22 officers and men in this year, two as sharpshooters.

In 1888 this number was increased to 32 with 5 sharpshooters, and before Inspector Hoats was promoted to adjutant of the regiment, he had the pleasure of reporting every officer and man of the company as qualified marksmen and sharpshooters,—an honor that the company has held year by year since then.

In 1890 the company secured an excellent 600-yard range on Kline's Island. Since 1887 the company has always been represented on the regimental team at the state matches on Coleman range (Mt. Gretna, Pa.). Probably the greatest distinction ever received by Co. B was the awarding to it of the rating of 100 on every point by the state in 1879. This was the first time in the history of the State Militia that the perfect mark was given to any company, and Co. B was the only one that received it. In 1880 the company again received the same average grade, together with another company, and in 1886 it, for the third time, received the highest possible grade with several other companies to share the glory.

During the night of the 10th of September, 1897, the telegraph flashed over the State, the news of the shooting, by sheriff's deputies, of a number of miners at Lattamore in the Hazleton coal district. Next morning at four o'clock Co. B received orders to assemble and proceed at once to Hazleton, via Sunbury and Milton. When the call to assemble came, the men responded promptly and by 8 o'clock in the morning all except two had reported. These two men were out of the state, but reported by the morning of the 12th of September. The regiment reported to the general commanding at Hazleton, on the afternoon of the 11th and was ordered to go to Audenried. The company arrived there at about 7 p. m., too late to put up tents, so the men used the company mess tent for the night. After a stay of two days at Audenried, the regiment was ordered to go to Drifton. Here the company remained until the 28th of September, when orders were received to break camp and return home. Co. B participated in two practice marches over the mountains while at Drifton.

The service of the company in the Spanish-American War will be found under that head.

Colonel Case having entered the regular army, Lieut.-Col. C. T. O'Neill, of Allentown, was, on November 18, 1899, elected colonel and is still in command of the Fourth Regiment (1914). Captain Medlar retiring to private life at the close of his term as captain, First Lieut. Charles D. Rhoads was elected captain on February 8, 1901, and re-elected February 14, 1906.

Captain Rhoads was promoted to major and ordnance officer, 4th Brigade, and former First Lieut. Orlando C. Miller was elected captain, June 6, 1910.

Twice since the Spanish-American War, in 1900 and in 1902, has Company B, together with the other companies of the Fourth Regiment, been called upon by the governor to suppress the violence and lawlessness of a frenzied mob.

In 1900 the regiment was ordered to Shenandoah, where it encamped at Columbia Park. From there it was ordered to the Panther Creek Valley, where it stopped and dispersed a mob of over five thousand marchers who were coming to terrorize the workmen of the Panther Creek District. The excellent discipline of the regiment is evidenced by the fact that not a single shot was fired nor a single person injured in this trying and arduous duty.

In 1902 the regiment was sent first to Mount Carmel and later to Nanticoke. During this tour of duty it again demonstrated its training as citizen-soldiers and the innate love of law and order born in every true American citizen.

Company B bore its full share of the trials and hardships of these two tours of duty and fully maintained its reputation for discipline and training. Its present officers are: Captain, Orlando C. Miller; 1st Lieut., Carrol H. Hudders; 2d Lieut., Harry A. Hall.

Company D, Fourth Regiment, became in 1874, as the Allen Rifles, one of the eight companies of the Fourth Regiment, National Guard, commanded by Captain Nagle and Lieutenants Mertz and Roney. In 1876 Lieut. Roney was promoted to the rank of major, and aid-de-camp on second division staff (Gen. Boulton, commanding), and Oscar T. Hoffman was elected to fill the vacancy.

This company did active duty in the labor riots in July, 1877, being ordered to the city of Reading, were marched through the P. & R. R. cut to Penn street, where they came in contact with the mob, who had possession of the tracks, and had overturned a number of the cars loaded with coal and merchandise, and had also an engine in their possession, and running it backward and forward; in this engagement there were a number of citizens killed and some of the company badly wounded by stones thrown by the rioters. The regiment being relieved by United States Regulars, were ordered to Harrisburg, Pa., to guard the State Arsenal, and from there returned home after the disturbance was at an end. July 11th to 19th, 1892, the company was ordered to Homestead, to quell the disturbance at the Carnegie Iron and Steel Works, and was encamped opposite the works, on the north bank of the Monongahela river, near Swissvale. On two occasions the company was ordered across the river to do provost guard duty in the town of Homestead, and was carried across in the famous steamer, "Little Bill," on which the Pinkerton men were fired upon, and a number of them killed and wounded.

On the evening of Sept. 10, 1897, the company was ordered to proceed to Hazleton. They left on the morning of the 11th, arrived at Audenried about 4 p. m., and were detailed for duty at Drifton, six miles north of Hazleton, where they remained until relieved on September 28th. The service of the company in the Spanish-American War is given in the history of that war, after which they were again mustered into the service of the state on Jan. 12, 1899. In 1900 the company was in service at Shenandoah and Panther Creek Valley and in 1902 at Mount Carmel and Nanticoke.

Lieut. Hoffman was promoted to 1st lieutenant on the resignation of Lieut. Mertz, and private John L. Stiles was elected 2d lieutenant on Oct. 11, 1878. Capt. Nagle resigned May 5, 1879, and on June 19, 1879, Major James R. Roney was elected and commissioned captain. Lieut. Stiles resigned July 28, 1880, and Lieut.

Hoffman died Sept. 18, 1880. On Nov. 26, 1880, Sergt.-Maj. A. J. Reichard was elected 1st lieutenant, and First Sergeant William D. Mickley, 2d lieutenant. On June 27, 1884, Lieut. Reichard was elected captain; 2d lieutenant Mickley, 1st lieutenant, and First Sergt. Winfield S. Troxell, 2d lieutenant. Capt. A. J. Reichard resigned Dec. 2, 1884. William D. Mickley was elected captain on Feb. 24, 1885, and re-elected March 28, 1890; 2d lieut Troxell was elected 1st lieutenant, and First Sergt. George G. Blumer, 2d lieutenant, who resigned Dec. 23, 1890. Sergt. Charles Spangler, who had been elected 2d lieutenant, was elected 1st lieutenant April 17, 1891, and Sergt. Evan S. Witemeyer was elected 2d lieutenant. Sergt. C. T. O'Neill, who had been appointed sergeant-major of the regiment, Aug. 16, 1884, by Col. Lehr, was promoted to adjutant Aug. 3, 1887; was elected lieut.-colonel, and Nov. 18, 1899 elected colonel of the regiment. Captain Mickley was elected major in 1886, and was succeeded by Captain Charles Spangler; 2d Lieut. Witemeyer became 1st lieutenant, and Sergt. Charles Chubbick 2d lieutenant. Capt. Howard M. Hersh succeeded Capt. Spangler and was succeeded by the present commander, Capt. Wm. C. Gessner. The present lieutenants are John E. Dillinger and Arthur A. Barber.

The staff officers of the Fourth Regiment from Allentown are (1914): Colonel, C. T. O'Neill; major, Frank D. Beary; adjutant, Capt. Henry A. Reninger; inspector rifle practice, Capt. Wm. A. Ruch; battalion adjutant, 1st Lieut., Guy P. Brown; assistant surgeon, Capt. E. H. Dickenshied; battalion quartermaster and commissary, 2d Lieut. Clarence J. Smith. The non-commissioned staff officers are: Regimental Color Sergeant, Chas. M. Uhl; battalion sergeant-major, Wm. S. Fink; drum major, Sergt. Bernard F. McNulty.

CHAPTER XVI.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Few counties of the State can claim as large a number of charitable institutions and so varied and far-reaching in their scope as Lehigh county. Within its borders are found the following charitable institutions: The County Home, in South Whitehall; St. Luke's Hospital, South Bethlehem; The Children's Home, in Salisbury township; Allentown Hospital, in Allentown; Good Shepherd Home, in Allentown; Phœbe Deaconess and Old Folks' Home, in Allentown; Rescue Mission, in Allentown.

COUNTY HOME.

The project for the establishment of a "House of Employment and Support of the Poor of Lehigh County" was set on foot as early as 1831. The Legislature was petitioned to pass a bill authorizing the people of the county to vote upon the question of opening such an institution, but a strong opposition was manifested to the measure, which was expressed in numerous remonstrances. On April 11, 1844, a bill authorizing such an election was passed by the Legislature, which was shortly afterwards approved by Governor David R. Porter. At the October election in 1845 the people voted "Poor House—yes" or "Poor House—no." The result of the election was 1,200 majority in favor of the establishing of a poor house.

The commissioners, twenty-eight in number, named in and appointed by the act to select and purchase land on which to erect the necessary buildings were: Lewis Schmidt, Michael D. Eberhard, John S. Gibbons, Caspar Kleckner; Philip Knappenberger, Daniel Bastian, Solomon Fogel, John Lichtenwalter, David Follweiler, Assa Krammes, Benjamin Breinig, Peter Troxell, Charles Ritter, Jacob Erdman, John Ritter, Martin Ritter, Charles Burkhalter, Charles Foster, Conrad Knerr, John Weida, Benjamin Bear, Jesse Grim, Tobias Schmidt, Michael Harter, George Levan, Solomon Knauss, John Peter, Henry Yeager.

At a meeting held in Allentown on Oct. 28, 1844, for the purpose of effecting an organization, Lewis Schmidt was appointed chairman, and Michael D. Eberhard, secretary. A committee of eight was appointed to receive proposals for a suitable farm. Thirty properties were offered before the next meeting was held on December 4. The full Board of Commissioners met in the court house and voted on the different farms that were offered. The election resulted as follows: For the tract owned by Charles and Solomon Mertz in South Whitehall, the present county farm, 22 votes; for the farm of John Ritter, 3 votes; for the farm of William Wenner, 1 vote. The tract selected by the commissioners consisted of the Charles Mertz farm of 106 acres, for which $100 an acre was paid, and the Solomon Mertz farm of 97 acres, for which $90 an acre was paid. Later on an additional tract was purchased, making a total of 254 acres, at a total cost of $27,662. Previous to the erection of the buildings the overseers of the poor, as they were then known, were instructed to report at the next meeting the number of persons who were seeking admission to the institution. A meeting was held in Allentown, March 28, 1845, by the Board of Poor Directors for organization. At the next meeting, which was held April 7, the report was received from the different districts in regard to the number of paupers in them: Allentown, 44; Upper Macungie, 17; Lower Macungie, 11; Upper Saucon, 11; Salisbury, 3; South Whitehall, 6; North Whitehall, 15; Weissenberg, 1; Lowhill, 5; Hanover, 7; Upper Milford, 25; total, 145. Three townships, Lynn, Heidelberg and Northampton failed to report.

On May 1, 1845, proposals were received for the erection of a building. The contract was awarded as follows: Joshua Seip and Stephen Dornblaser, carpenter work; Thomas Becker and Daniel Smith, mason work; Nonnemacher & Fatzinger, bricklaying; Robert McDowell, slates and roofing. The main building was erected in 1845 at a cost of $4,893, and $1,044 were expended for fixtures. The building was opened for the reception of inmates, Dec. 29, 1845, when 24 inmates were admitted. In 1847 a hospital was erected and an addition to it in 1861, and still another addition in 1878. The original cost of the several buildings was $51,154. The capacity of the home is 475 inmates. The following have been the stewards up to the present: On April 9, 1845, Thomas Faust was appointed the first steward and Mrs. Faust the first matron. Mr. Faust served until 1873.

Josiah Henninger, 1873 to 1886; Moses Kern, 1886 to 1895; S. A. J. Kern, 1895 to 1910; William H. Kuhns, 1910—.

The following is the list of Poor Directors from 1844 to 1913:

1844 Jesse Grim, Michael Eberhard, Allentown; John Blank, Upper Saucon.
 1845 Jesse Grim, Allentown.
 1846 Michael D. Eberhard, Allentown.
 1847 John Blank, Upper Saucon.
 1848 Henry Schantz, South Whitehall.
 1849 Jonas Brobst, Upper Macungie.
 1850 Daniel Miller, Upper Macungie.
 1851 Henry Diefenderfer, L. Macungie.
 1852 Hiram J. Schwartz, U. Macungie
 1853 Peter Romig, L. Macungie.
 1854 Solomon Klein, Salisbury.
 1855 Solomon Bernhard, U. Macungie.
 1856 John Madden, Millerstown.
 1857 John Bortz, Upper Macungie.
 1858 Jesse Grim, Allentown.
 1859 Benjamin Jarret, L. Macungie.
 1860 Leonard Moyer, Upper Macungie.
 1861 Jacob Andreas, Allentown.
 1862 Perry Weaver, Upper Milford.
 1863 Charles Wenner, South Whitehall.
 1864 Jacob Andreas, Allentown.
 1865 Jacob Schaeffer, Upper Macungie.
 1866 Solomon Griesemer, S. Whitehall.
 1867 Daniel B. Mohr, Allentown.
 1868 Henry Ritter, Salisbury.
 1869 Reuben Henninger, S. Whitehall.
 1870 John Erdman, N. Whitehall.
 1871 Jonas Hartzell, Allentown.
 1872 Reuben Henninger, S. Whitehall.
 1873 John Erdman, N. Whitehall.
 1874 Jonas Hartzell, Allentown.
 1875 John Sieger, S. Whitehall.
 1876 David Wisser, Whitehall.
 1877 Jesse Marks, Allentown.
 1878 John Sieger, S. Whitehall.
 1879 David Wisser, Whitehall.
 1880 Jesse Marks, Allentown.
 1881 Henry L. Schantz, S. Whitehall.
 1882 Reuben Danner, L. Macungie.
 1883 Edwin C. Kramhar, Allentown.
 1884 Owen Schadt, Whitehall.
 1886 W. S. Guth.
 1887 John W. Schwartz.
 1888 A. P. Troxell.
 1889 W. S. Guth.
 1890 S. R. Engelman.
 1891 Owen Schaat.
 1892 Reuben M. Rolder, William Deibert.
 1893 S. R. Engelman.
 1894 Reuben M. Rolder.
 1895 Thomas F. Guth.
 1896 Elias Bittner.
 1897 Silas G. Croll.
 1898 Elias Bittner.
 1899 S. G. Croll.
 1900 William Deibert.
 1901 E. F. Kern.
 1902 S. G. Croll, Henry Guth.
 1903 E. E. Ritter.
 1904 E. F. Kern.
 1905 R. J. Lichtenwalner.
 1906 E. E. Ritter.
 1907 E. S. Rabenold.
 1908 R. J. Lichtenwalner.

1909 S. D. Woodring, D. M. Landis.

1910 E. S. Rabenold.

1911 D. M. Landis.

1912 Frank C. Guth.

1913 E. S. Rabenold.

This institution was for many years known as the Lehigh County Poor House and House of Employment. Afterwards it was known as the Almshouse, but several years ago a more appropriate name was adopted by the grand jury, namely: County Home.

The home is located about four miles west of Allentown, about 1 mile southeast of Schantz Spring and 1 mile east of Wescoesville. The Allentown and Reading trolley line passes in front of the home. The improvements consist of large spacious buildings with dining-room on the lower floor and sleeping apartments on the second and third floors, hospital buildings, laundry, bakery, slaughter-house, steward's residence, a large Swiss barn, with outbuildings, tramp house, electric power house and sewerage disposal plant. The two latter were recently erected at an expenditure upwards of $50,000.

In former years quarters were provided for insane patients but the accommodations for this class of patients was deemed unsatisfactory and the county now pays for the maintenance of 175 insane in the Rittersville State Asylum.

It was the custom also in former years to rear and educate homeless children at this institution, but the project failed to give satisfactory results. Children are now placed out either for adoption or in board, in good homes at the county's expense. In former years the dead were interred on the cemetery near the home, but at present all unclaimed bodies are forwarded to the State Anatomical Board at Philadelphia.

Officers of the Lehigh County Home for the year 1913: Steward, Wm. H. F. Kuhns; Matron, Mrs. Emma C. Kuhns; Assistant Matron, Mrs. Catharine Hartzell; Hospital Steward, R. E. Peters; Hospital Matron, Mrs. Jennie Peters; Cook, Mrs. Mary Kratzer; Baker, Samuel Weidner; Engineers, Andrew Erbor, Charles Berger; Farmer, Harvey Kratzer; Teamster, Alfred Weaver; Solicitor, Richard W. Iobst; Treasurer, F. H. Lichtenwalner; House Physicians, A. N. Miller, M.D., Wm. B. Trexler, M.D.; Chaplains, Rev. E. O. Leopold, Rev. Frank A. Guth; Organist, Wm. Frankfield.

ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL, SOUTH BETHLEHEM.

The need of a hospital in the Lehigh Valley had often been felt and spoken of; but nothing was done previous to the close of the year 1871. In that year it was called to the attention of several gentlemen of South Bethlehem by the Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, rector of the Church of the Nativity, who urged it as a work which members of his and other sister churches of the Lehigh Valley and vicinity should undertake. About the same time, the Rev. Mr. Gries, rector of Grace Church, Allentown, hearing that an effort was about to be made, had a collection taken up in his church for that object on Thanksgiving Day, 1871, and transmitted it to the Rev. Mr. Whitehead. This was the first offering made for the hospital.

On March 29, 1872, a charter of incorporation was obtained from the Legislature, and an organization was effected. Some changes in the charter were, however, deemed essential, and these alterations were made in an amendment to the charter, subsequently granted by the Court of Northampton county in 1873 and again by the Court of Lehigh County in 1880.

At the meeting held January 27, 1873, a committee of three was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the building fund. This committee entered at once upon its work and met with such success that at the meeting held on the 27th day of February, the Board of Trustees appointed another committee to examine and report upon a suitable site or building for the hospital. This body, at the next monthly meeting, recommended the purchase of a double building then approaching completion, on Carpenter street, now Broad street, South Bethlehem, and the amount of subscriptions to the building fund being sufficient to justify it, the buildings referred to were purchased for the sum of eight thousand dollars. They were afterwards somewhat altered to meet the requirements of such an institution.

One of the objects of the amendment to the hospital charter had been to commend the work to members of all denominations of Christians. This was fully accomplished.

After the building had been purchased and it became necessary to furnish it, the members of several churches provided for the different rooms. In the same spirit, the ladies of Bethlehem, South Bethlehem, and vicinity, without regard to church connection, undertook to raise funds by a fair and festival. This was held at the hospital building during the month of June, 1873, and realized a very handsome amount. The building and furniture being thus provided, the hospital was opened and the first patient received Oct. 17th, 1873.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Luke's Hospital was organized Aug. 6, 1874, and by their first excursion to Glen Onoko, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, realized $840. During the following year the Ladies' Aid Society continued its valuable assistance and obtained the sum of $2,272.33, while the Lehigh Valley, North Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania Railroads furnished free excursions to the Centennial Buildings at Fairmount Park. The fund for the support of the Training School for Nurses was established by this society in 1886, and has since been fostered by it. In 1879 it organized the Fruit and Flower Mission under the charge of a number of young ladies who carry ice cream and flowers to the ward patients every Wednesday.

At a special meeting held Nov. 30th, 1875, the Board of Trustees accepted from Mr. Isaiah V. Williamson, a benevolent citizen of Philadelphia, a deed of trust, dated Nov. 16th, 1875, conveying to the hospital nine ground rents in Philadelphia aggregating $589.50 annual income, "in trust, nevertheless, to appropriate the net income, interest and arrears of said yearly ground rents to the establishment and support of free beds in said hospital, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and the principal thereof to keep forever, whole and intact."

During the year 1875, the number of beds was increased by the addition of six new ones, so that the hospital contained fifteen beds for adult patients and two beds for children.

On Dec. 8th, 1875, negotiations culminated in an agreement between Mr. Tinsley Jeter, the owner of what is known as the water cure property, for the sum of $25,000. This agreement and its subsequent fulfilment was effected with the co-operation and approval of Messrs. Robert H. Sayre and W. H. Chandler. The property thus purchased for hospital purposes consisted of 20 acres and 85 rods of land, upon which, in addition to the main building, was a small dwelling and three barns. A considerable portion of the land was laid out as an orchard and there were also other fruit trees. The property was purchased Dec. 8th, 1875, for $25,000, towards which the Hon. Asa Packer contributed in behalf of his two sons, the late Harry E. and R. Asa Packer, and himself, the sum of $10,000; the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company contributed $5,000; leaving a balance of $10,000 for which a bond and mortgage was given. (This balance, amounting with interest to $11,170, was cancelled in 1877 and 1878, from moneys received through the energetic labors of the Ladies' Aid Society.) The building was occupied May 24, 1876.

At the close of the first five years of the existence of the institution, in October, 1878 the reports set forth that four hundred and fifty-five patients had been under treatment in the building and four hundred and ninety-six had been treated at the dispensary a total of nine hundred and fifty-one unfortunates for the five years.

At a meeting held July 4th, 1879, it was resolved in accordance with a resolution of the Board of Trustees to procure plans for new hospital buildings, which should be prepared with reference to future extensions. These plans were subsequently supplied by Messrs. Jardine, architects of New York City, and the hospital committee gave them their approval, and the work was put under contract.

The designs contemplated four separate pavilions and an operating building, all connected by underground corridors. The building to be of brick and one-story high. Each pavilion, of the dimensions of 136 by 30 feet, to contain 24 beds, and to be thoroughly heated by steam, and properly ventilated. The operating building to be 68 by 30 feet.

It was intended to build but one pavilion and the operating building at first, and to add the other pavilions as the increase in the number of patients might demand. The buildings under contemplation became more necessary in view of the conditions accompanying the bequest of the late Hon. Asa Packer to the institution, which required that provision be made for the sick and disabled employes of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. This munificent bequest was as follows:

"I further will and direct that there shall be paid annually to the trustees of the hospital at Bethlehem, Pa., now known as the St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, and under the auspices of the Diocese of Central Pennsylvania, the income of three hundred thousand dollars, which shall be paid to the trustees of the said hospital for its maintenance and support.

"They shall pay annually from the time of my death the whole or such part of the said income for the above purpose as they in their discretion may deem proper and expedient, but any portion of the income not so paid over, shall be added annually to the principal sum of three hundred thousand dollars, and the income thereafter to be derived therefrom shall be held, appropriated and paid by the trustees in the same manner as is above provided for in reference to the income of the said principal sum of three hundred thousand dollars.

"This bequest is made with the understanding and on the condition that the employes of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and of other railroad companies of which the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company are owners or part owner, who may be injured, wounded, sick or disabled by age or other cause while in the service of the companies, are to be furnished with board, lodging and medical attention free of charge, under rules to be adopted by the trustees of the hospital, and which shall be subject to the approval of the trustees under this will. The funds to be derived from this income shall be applied—first, to the expenses of such employes, and if any balance is left out of the annual income, it may be applied to the general purposes of the hospital."

By further provisions of the will:

"Stock of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at par is to be substituted for the amount named in the above bequest, and the legatees shall only be entitled to the actual income derived from such stock."

The first patient to avail himself of the provisions of the Asa Packer bequest was admitted into the institution in 1880. During that year the new hospital buildings were under course of construction at an estimated cost of $32,000. They were dedicated on Oct. 25th, 1880. The Bishop and clergy, together with the trustees, walked in procession to the building, and entering, proceeded to the center of the new ward, repeating Psalms 41 and 91. Rev. E. E. Butler, of Easton, read the lesson, St. Matt. viii: 1-18. The Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed were said, and after prayer by the Bishop, the building was dedicated for its holy and charitable work. The Gloria in Excelsis was sung and an address was made by Rev. C. B. Schultz, of the Moravian Church. The structure was occupied in November and proved satisfactory in every particular.

Early in the year 1884, Mr. Robert Lockhart, of South Bethlehem communicated to the Board of Trustees his desires to erect a pavilion for women. On motion the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

WHEREAS, Mr. Robert Lockhart has communicated to the Board of Trustees of St. Luke's Hospital his desire to erect at his own expense a woman's pavilion:

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees thankfully accept his generous offer, fully appreciating the philanthropic and charitable motives that prompt him to supply this much needed department. Early in the Spring of 1884 the pavilion was put under contract and completed. The general style of the building was similar to the men's pavilion already erected with some alterations dictated by experience. It contained one ward of twelve beds' capacity, and six private rooms. It was also provided with a large solarium, an operating room, clothes room and bath rooms. It was heated by steam, lighted by gas, and well ventilated.

It was formally opened on June 17th, 1885, although as early as May patients had been received into it. The Yoder property with an area of 16 acres adjoining the hospital grounds, was purchased in 1886 and "St. Luke's Place" in 1887; the latter is a roadway 50 feet in width connecting the hospital grounds with Delaware avenue. Since then there has been a small addition to the land and a loss of $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres occupied by the reservoirs of the Water Company leaving 33 acres. The need of an administration building became apparent about this time, the superintendent reporting that he had no office, no place to keep his books and papers, nor to receive visitors. To remedy this large contributions were made by employes of the railroads, mining and manufacturing companies of the Lehigh Valley during the year 1887, and the building was contracted for and constructed. The new administration building caused an expenditure of about \$45,000. The work of the hospital at this time may be illustrated by the fact that during the single year of 1887, no less than 1,691 people were treated by the hospital without one cent being received in return. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Wilbur, of South Bethlehem, on March 11th, 1889, indicated to the Board their desire to erect in memory to their son, Merit Abbott Wilbur, a pavilion for children. It was contracted for and completed in March of the following year. It contained a ward of twelve beds, five private rooms, operating room, dining room, clothes room, bath rooms, and toilet.

In the Autumn of 1888, a committee of the Board was appointed to solicit contributions, and a circular letter stating the needs of the hospital was transmitted to various congregations of the Diocese through their clergy, and to the superintendent and officers of the various industries of the Lehigh region and to individuals.

In response to this circular letter contributions were received amounting to $12,112.33, more than two-thirds of which was contributions by employes.

In 1881 Dr. W. L. Estes was appointed superintendent and surgeon. At a meeting of the Board held in April, 1891, the office of Director was created and Dr. W. L. Estes was appointed to the office, in addition to his duties of physician and surgeon-in-chief. To the office of Superintendent, hitherto held by him, the Executive Committee, with the approval of the Board, appointed Miss Victoria White, who also was principal of the Training School for Nurses.

The annual report for 1895 shows an indebtedness of $7,400. This was due to the failure of the largest source of income, the Asa Packer bequest. This bequest, amounting to 6,000 shares of the capital stock of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, together with 203 shares (the accretions upon said stock), was transferred to the hospital by the executors and trustees of the estate of Asa Packer. In April, 1895, Capt. James Wiley donated $5,000 to the hospital, to establish the Annie Lewis Wiley Memorial Fund for maintenance of the hospital, the income only to be expended. Mr. E. P. Wilbur also donated $1,000 to the training school fund. By the will of Edward B. Leisenring, deceased, of Philadelphia, a bequest of $10,000 for the endowment of free beds, was received.

By the will of Benjamin F. Barge, deceased, of Mauch Chunk, a bequest of $5,000 for the endowment of a free bed was received.

The Training School for Nurses was established Dec. 1, 1884. Miss Victoria White filled the office of Superintendent and Principal for a number of years. She was succeeded by Miss Brown. In January, 1912, Miss Brown resigned and Miss Cornelia H. Parker was appointed her successor.

The annual report for the year 1912 shows that 2,643 cases were treated during the year. It also shows that all bills for the year have been paid and a balance of $1,668 on hand.

Of the buildings now in use, the Men's Pavilion, the Operating Pavilion, the Kitchen and Laundry Pavilion were completed in 1881; the Woman's Pavilion and the Boiler House were completed in 1885; the Administration Building was completed in 1888; the Children's Pavilion was completed in 1890; the Isolation Pavilion for contagious diseases was built in 1893; a commodious stable was erected in 1892.

In 1901 a new operating room was erected by the late Samuel Thomas, as a memorial to his wife, Rebecca Mickley Thomas. Sayre Ward for Men was erected in 1903 by the late Robert H. Sayre. The Pathological Laboratory was erected in 1907 by the late Robert H. Sayre as a memorial to Dr. William H. Chandler, who was Secretary of the Board for thirty-three years. Lehigh University Students' Pavilion was erected in 1908 by friends of the University on ground leased to the University by the hospital. Additions to the dispensary and offices and an X-Ray Laboratory were erected in 1912. A new Ward for Women is being erected by Eckley B. Cox, Jr., of Drifton, Luzerne county.

This institution has been doing very proficient work and is not only appreciated and recognized for its successful work in the Lehigh Valley, but under its skilled Director and Surgeon-in-Chief

Dr. William L. Estes, it has become one of the strongest hospitals of the eastern part of Pennsylvania.

The officers of the institution at present are as follows:

Board of Trustees.

Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, LL.D., President, ex-officio; Rt. Rev. Charles L. Moench, First Vice-President; Warren A. Wilbur, Second Vice-President; Albert N. Cleaver, Secretary; Warren A. Wilbur, Treasurer; James C. Haydon, Rev. Marcus A. Tolman, Frank Firmstone, F. J. Meyers, N. M. Emery, Harry J. Seaman, John W. Eckert, Charles M. Dodson, Henry C. Trexler, H. H. Mitchell, Henry S. Drinker, LL.D., Leonard Peckitt, Edwin Thomas; Allan C. Dodson, Robert E. Wilbur, Charles M. Schwab, M. L. Connelly, Rev. Francis S. Hort, James W. Fuller, Jr., Henry S. Snyder, David J. Pearsall, G. Reginal Radford, Alexander C. Graham.

Medical Board.

Director, and Physician and Surgeon-in-Chief, William L. Estes, M.D.; Associate Physician and Surgeon-in-Chief, William P. Walker, M. D.; Chief of House Staff and Dispensary, William L. Estes, Jr., M.D.; Pathologist, Adam L. Kotz, M.D., Easton; Acting Roentgenologist, A. J. Bittner; Resident House Physicians and Surgeons, 1912; Austen J. Canning, M.D., Edgar L. Sowden, M.D., Stanley A. Krebs, M. D., Thomas B. Kern, M.D.; 1913; Stanley A. Krebs, M.D.; Superintendent of the Hospital and Principal of the Training School for Nurses, Miss Cornelia Halsted Parker.

HOMEOPATHIC STATE HOSPITAL.

The first step looking forward to the establishing of a Homeopathic State Hospital in the State of Pennsylvania was taken by the Germantown Homeopathic Medical Society of Philadelphia which appointed a committee of twelve of its members of which Isaac W. Heysinger, M.D., was chairman for the purpose of introducing and furthering a bill before the State Legislature to provide for the selection of a site and construction of a State Insane Hospital to be under homeopathic management and control. After several unsuccessful attempts the following bill was finally passed by both houses of the Pennsylvania Legislature, June 25-26, 1901:

(No. 437)

AN ACT

To provide for the selection of a site and the erection of a State Hospital for the treatment of the Insane under Homeopathic Management, to be called the Homeopathic State Hospital for the Insane, and making an appropriation therefor.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the Governor shall appoint three persons. The President pro tempore of the Senate, shall appoint one member of the present Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint one member of the present House, who, together with the present President pro tempore of the Senate, and the present Speaker of the House of Representatives, shall constitute a Commission, who shall serve without compensation, to select a site and build a hospital, to be conducted under homeopathic management, for the care and treatment of the Insane of the following counties, to wit: Bradford, Bucks, Carbon, Lackawanna, Lehigh, Monroe, Northampton, Pike, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Wayne and Wyoming, and of such other insane patients as are hereinafter specified.

SEC. 2. Said Commissioners shall as soon as possible after their appointment, select a tract of land suitable for the purposes of said hospital, which shall be located as nearly as possible at the center of population of the district above named and at a place as readily accessible as practicable from all parts of said district.

SEC. 3. The tract of land so selected shall be good, arable land, well adapted to the preservation of the health, the occupation and maintenance of the inmates of said hospital, with an adequate supply of good water, and large facilities for drainage from the hospital buildings and said tract of land, so selected, and the cost thereof shall be approved in writing by the Governor and the Board of Public Charities before the purchase money shall be paid, and the deed for the same shall be taken in the name of the Commonwealth: but nothing herein contained shall prevent said commissioners from receiving a deed to the Commonwealth, in fee, for any land donated for the purpose aforesaid.

SEC. 4. The plans for the said Hospital shall be prepared by said Commissioners, and approved by the Board of Public Charities. The buildings shall be of the best design for the construction of such institution, and without expensive architectural adornments or unduly large or costly administrative accommodations, and no change shall be made in said plans of construction without the consent of the Board of Public Charities.

SEC. 5. To enable the Commissioners to purchase the land and to commence the erection of said buildings, the sum of three hundred thousand dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specially appropriated: to be drawn from the Treasury as the same may be required, on warrants drawn by the Auditor General in the usual manner, vouchers or statements to be furnished, approved by the Secretary of the Board of Public Charities, before any warrant is issued: provided that no part of the money herein appropriated shall become available until the Governor, Auditor General and State Treasurer shall have filed in the office of the Auditor General and State Treasurer a certificate setting forth that there is in the Treasury a sufficient sum of money, not otherwise appropriated, to pay the said appropriation.

SEC. 6. Said Commissioners shall proceed to erect said buildings, and shall make report to the Board of Public Charities of the amount of money expended by them and of the progress made in the erection of the buildings, semi-annually at least, and oftener if required by the Board.

SEC. 7. The said Commissioners, upon the completion of said Hospital, shall surrender their trust to a Board of Trustees, to consist of nine members, who shall serve without compensation, and be appointed by the Governor, and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Said Trustees shall be a body politic or corporate, by the name and style of the Homeopathic State Hospital for the Insane. They shall manage and direct the concerns of the institution, and make all necessary by-laws and regulations, not inconsistent with the Constitution and Laws of the Commonwealth. Of the Trustees first appointed three shall serve for one year, three for two years, and three for three years, and at the expiration of the respective periods the vacancies shall be filled by the Governor, by appointment for three years, as hereinbefore provided: and should any vacancy occur by death or resignation, or otherwise, of any trustee, such vacancy shall be filled by appointment as aforesaid, for the unexpired term of such manager.

SEC. 8. The said Board of Trustees shall appoint a competent and skilful physician, of the homeopathic medical school and practice, who shall be Superintendent, and shall have charge, supervision and direction of the Hospital, both professional and otherwise. He shall nominate for appointment such and so may assistants, attendants and other employees as may be considered necessary by said Board of Trustees: and in the absence or disability of the said Superintendent, the next medical officer in rank shall perform the duties thereof. The said Superintendent, with the approval of the Trustees, shall appoint a Steward, who shall have charge, under the direction of said Superintendent, of the purchase, production and distribution of all supplies, under such rules and regulations as may be established by said Trustees. The salaries of the Superintendent, assistants, employees, and attendants of the Hospital shall be fixed by the said Board of Trustees.

SEC. 9. The laws now regulating the support and maintenance of the indigent insane in the State Hospitals for the Insane, and the payment thereof, shall apply to the Homeopathic State Hospitals for the Insane.

SEC. 10. The said Trustees shall make, under oath by their president or treasurer, a quarterly report to the Auditor General of the State and to the Board of Public Charities, containing an itemized statement of the expenses of the institution during the previous quarter: and unless such itemized report is made, and approved by the Board of Public Charities, Auditor General and State Treasurer, the State Treasurer is hereby directed not to pay any more money to said institution until such report is made and approved as aforesaid.

SEC. 11. Whenever the said Hospital shall have sufficient accommodations for the proper care of a larger number of insane patients than shall be committed to it from the district above named, the Committee on Lunacy of the State Board of Charities shall have authority to transfer to said hospital patients from any other State Hospital for the Insane, or to authorize the commitment to said Hospital of patients from any other part of the State, giving the preference in all cases to those whose family or friends desire them to receive homeopathic treatment.

SEC. 12. The Governor, judges of the several courts of record of, the Commonwealth, members of the Legislature, and members of the Board of Public Charities shall be ex-officio visitors of said Hospital.

July 18, 1901.—This bill was approved except as to Section Five, which provides for an appropriation of $300,000 to enable the Commissioners to purchase land and commence the erection of buildings, from which Governor William A. Stone withhold his approval in the sum of $250,000 because of insufficient State revenue.

The commission received several propositions from places in the section designated. On Dec. 18 and 19, 1902, the commission visited a number of the sites that were offered to them in Lehigh, Northampton, Monroe, Bradford, and Wayne counties. Three sites in Lehigh county were under consideration. The Weikel Hill farm near Coopersburg; a farm west of Bingen station, between Coopersburg and Bethlehem, and the Rittersville section.

Finally the Rittersville section was chosen to locate the new hospital. The tract secured by the State was formerly owned by the following persons: J. M. Wright, Robert E. Wright, Thomas Schaadt, William H. Diehl, Matilda Ritter, Mathias Koenig, Joseph L. Stone and the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co., comprising 209 acres.

The corner-stone was laid June 27, 1904. The failure of the Legislature to appropriate and the Governor to approve what the Legislature did appropriate, the moneys that were necessary to expeditiously proceed with the erection and furnishing of the buildings caused a great deal of delay in the completion of the institution.

The institution was opened for the reception of patients Oct. 3, 1912. The cost of the land and erection of buildings is as follows: Farm, $58,000; reservoir, $29,950; pumping station, $22,320; buildings, $1,821,000, a total of $1,931,270. The capacity of the institution is 1,000 inmates. The number of patients at present is 867.

The institution is located on a high tract of land on the north bank of the Lehigh River, between Allentown and Bethlehem, about one and a quarter mile from the bridge crossing the Lehigh at Allentown, and three miles from Bethlehem. The Central Railroad of New Jersey runs immediately adjacent to the farm at the foot of its southern slope. The Allentown & Bethlehem trolley line passes along the front of the property to the north.

The hospital at Rittersville is the first homeopathic institution of its kind in Pennsylvania. Similar institutions are found in New York, Massachusetts, Minnesota and California.

The improvements of the institution consist of administration department, three buildings, four ward buildings, two chapels, building containing staff and congregate dining rooms, operating room and auditorium, kitchen, ice and cold storage plant, laundry, boiler and power plant and electric light plant. The main water supply is obtained from the Bethlehem city water works, brought to the hospital grounds by gravity from which point it is pumped into two million capacity reservoirs. In addition to this the institution has an artesian well and a 3,600-gallons storage tank for emergency use for boilers and ice plant.

The present Board of Trustees was appointed by Governor Tener in February, 1912. They

The officers of the institution are: Henry I. Klopp, M.D., Superintendent; Harry F. Hoffman, M.D., Assistant Superintendent; Walter E. Lang, M.D., Senior Assistant Physician; Charles S. Trites, M.D., Junior Assistant Physician; Sarah Adleman, M.D., Junior Assistant Physician; Charles B. Reitz, M.D., Pathologist; Charles W. Fritchmann, Steward.

PHOEBE DEACONESS AND OLD FOLKS' HOME.

This institution is one of the newest charitable institutions of the Reformed Church.

The desire or impetus for the organization and establishing of a Deaconess Home in the Le-are: Harry C. Trexler, president; E. M. Young, Secretary and Treasurer; Russell C. Stewart, Archibald Johnston, John J. Tuller, M.D., William A. Seibert, M.D., Leonard Peckitt, F. J. Slough, M.D., George R. Bedford Dr. Henry I. Klopp was elected superintendent, Feb. 17, 1912, and entered upon his duties March 18, 1912. Since the present Board of Trustees and officers have assumed the management of the institution, very efficient work has been done, and it is very gratifying to note how much has been accomplished in the way of finishing the buildings and running the institution in so short a time.

PHOEBE DEACONESS AND OLD FOLKS' HOME.

high Valley can, to a large extent, be traced to a paper which was read before the Ministerial Association of the Lehigh Valley by Rev. A. B. Koplín, D.D., of Hellerstown.

At the annual meeting of Lehigh Classis in 1901 an overture was received from Tohickon Classis asking Lehigh and East Pennsylvania Classis to join Tohickon Classis in the establishing of a Deaconess Home. At this meeting a committee was appointed to confer with similar committees from the other classes. A meeting of these committees was held in Christ Reformed Church, Bethlehem, Sept. 10, 1901. At this meeting Dr. Koplin was asked to prepare a paper on the "Importance of Deaconess Work" which should appear in the church papers, and a committee was appointed to inquire into the feasibility of establishing such a home in mutual, helpful relation with St. Luke's Hospital, South Bethlehem, or Allentown Hospital. At the next annual meeting of Classis the committee recommended the establishing of a Deaconess Home which was to be located at Allentown in mutual, helpful relation with the Allentown Hospital. The three Classes passed resolutions giving the committee power to act and authorized them to carry forward the necessary work.

Each of the three Classes elected three trustees and the Board of Trustees elected six more. The following persons constituted the trustees for the first year: Rev. A. B. Koplin, D.D., Hellerstown, Pa.; Rev. Franklin J. Mohr, Quakertown, Pa.; Rev. G. A. Schwedes, Bethlehem, Pa.; Rev. Wallace H. Wotring, Nazareth, Pa.; Rev. D. E. Schoedler, D.D., Allentown, Pa. Rev. David A. Winter, Lehighon, Pa.; Jacob Rader, Easton, Pa.; Samuel Wolf, South Bethlehem, Pa.; Howard Seabold, Lehighon, Pa.; George W. Hartzell, Sr., Allentown, Pa.; W. H. Hartzell, M.D., Allentown, Pa.; M. H. K. Laros, Allentown, Pa.; Clinton H. Leaser, Allentown, Pa.; John T. Scheirer, Allentown, Pa.; John N. Lawfer, Allentown, Pa. The Board was organized in Christ Reformed Church Bethlehem, in September, 1902. The charter was granted by the Lehigh county court, Jan. 20, 1903. At a meeting of the Board held in St. John's Reformed Church, Allentown, March 24, 1903, a constitution for the governing of the home was adopted and the same was ratified at the annual session by all the Classes interested. At the meeting of the Board in September 1903, through the efforts of Rev. R. M. Kern, the plan of the Old Folks' Home was added to the original plan of the Deaconess Home. In 1904 the property known as the Griesemer homestead, located between Turner and Chew streets and Nineteenth and Lafayette streets in Allentown, was purchased. The tract comprised about three acres of land whereon there was erected a large three-story brick dwelling with modern improvements and in good condition. The first inmate was received into the Home, Sept. 8, 1904. The Home was dedicated Oct. 13, 1904. The first Deaconesses of the home were ordained June 7, 1908, in Zion's Reformed Church, Allentown, Miss Gold, of Nazareth, Pa., and Miss Frick, of Irwin, Pa.

Soon after the founding of the Home an Auxiliary Society was organized including members of all the Reformed Churches in Allentown of which Mrs. Reuben P. Steckel was the faithful president up to the time of her death. Chapters have been organized at Hellertown, Bethlehem, Richlandtown, Perkasio, South Bethlehem, Indian Creek, Souderton, Emaus, Trumbauersville, East Greenville and Northampton. These societies have furnished a large amount of the money for the purchasing of the original Home, the erection of the new building and for the maintenance of the Home. The Home maintains two prominent and important charitable works side by side. The one feature is a training school of candidates for the deaconess work where they receive instruction and training which will fit young women for this vocation. The other feature is to provide a home for the aged fathers and mothers who have toiled long and faithfully and are deprived of the blessings of a Christian home. The Home is maintained through free-will offerings from the friends of the institution and the dues of auxiliary and corporation members. The dues for auxiliary members is $1.00 a year. A person contributing $10.00 at any time and $5.00 annually can become a corporation member, a life member by paying $150, or an honorary member by paying $1,000.

The following constitute the Executive Committee: Dr. W. H. Hartzell, President; Rev. Robert M. Kern, Secretary; Rev. A. P. Koplin, D.D., Rev. W. H. Wotring, D.D., and John T. Scheirer.

The Home had not been opened very long before the trustees felt that the building was too small to accommodate the many who were seeking admittance. As early as 1906 only two years after the opening of the Home the Ladies' Auxiliary proposed the building of an annex to the old building. In 1909 the Auxiliary reported having $7,000 on hand for an annex or new building. In 1910 a committee of the trustees was appointed to procure plans and specifications for a new building. The plans which were adopted call for a large central administration building with two wings, one to be a deaconess building. The corner-stone of the new Old Folks' building was laid on June 22, 1911, and the building was dedicated June 20, 1912. During the same year a green house was erected at a cost of $1,000, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Hillegass, of East Greenville, Pa. The building was erected at a cost of $35,000. The furnishings were provided for by individuals, and the various chapters and congregations at a cost of $8,000. The Auxiliary is now engaged in raising funds to install a $1,400 laundry in the Home.

The Good Shephera Home, Allentown, Pa.

For Infant Orphans .

For Crippled and Blind Orphans.

For Old People and Nurses.

For Manual Training, Laundry and Power-house.

Here The Helpless Shall Find Compassion.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

REV. IRA W. KLICK.
REV. PROF. WILLIAM WACKERNAGEL, D.D.

MRS. ESTELLA RAKER, Matron.
REV. JOHN H. RAKER.

ROBERT W. KURTZ.
REV. JOHN H. RAKER.

I was born blind.
My mother is dead.

All I need is a little help now.

I was my mother's last thought and care.

Blind and unable to move.

Aunt Polly Nauman
107 years old on Sept.
11, 1913.

Miss Johanna M. Baur, of the Bethesda Deaconess Home of Cincinnati, O., the first superintendent, came to the Home, Sept. 6, 1904, and remained with the Home until Feb. 1, 1910, when her relations with the Home were severed. Miss Carrie J. Dreibelbies, a highly educated lady of large experience in mission and deaconess work, has been filling the office of superintendent since 1910.

The Good Shepherd Home for Crippled Orphans, Infant Orphans, Destitute Children, Old People, and Aged or Disabled Ministers.

The Good Shepherd Home, located in the Twelfth Ward of the city of Allentown, Pa., had its origin in the heart and mind of the Rev. J. H. Raker, a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and of his estimable wife, (a descendant of Conrad Weiser), while they were at the head of the Berks County Orphans' Home at Topton, Pa. Mr. Raker, having become pastor of Grace Lutheran Church in the Twelfth Ward of Allentown, after some time given to the study of Inner Mission problems, felt constrained to prove his obedience to his Master by a "faith which worketh by love"—as all true Christians do. On February 21, 1908, he received the first crippled orphan in his house. A few days later he bought the old Kline homestead at Sixth and St. John Streets, for $7,500.

Possession was taken on April 1st, and on November 15, 1909, a charter was granted to "The Good Shepherd Home," by Judge Trexler, of the Court of Lehigh county. The property was transferred to the corporation, at the purchase price. The board of trustees, consisting of five members. The advisory board consists of 25-30 members. Public statement of the management of the home is given by the superintendent and the treasurer annually at the home's anniversary in the first week of September. The report is given in print in Sweet Charity, the bi-monthly organ of the home, the subscription list of which shows almost 7,500 paying readers on June 1, 1913. Mr. Raker is the editor.

The house standing on the lot, corner of Sixth and St. John's Streets, was soon filled to its utmost capacity. The board of trustees purchased an adjoining property for $3,500, in order to make room for the infant orphans, the first of whom had already been received in October, 1908. The new cottage for infant orphans was opened in August, 1910. And again better quarters had to be found for the old people and the nurses. The board of trustees acquired possession of a house on the corner of Fifth and St. John's Streets, valued at $7,500, in April, 1911. The first old person received in the home was Mrs. Mary Schindel Eisenhardt, the well-known church-woman, "Aunt Mary."

Other buildings to be mentioned, the laundry, power house and manual training, erected on a lot adjoining the old people's house. The lot, the brick-building, the machinery, furnace, etc., require an outlay of $10,000.00.

The very active Allentown Ladies' Auxiliary has pledged itself for $2,000. There are such in Mauch Chunk, Hegins, Reading, Birdsboro, Bethlehem, South Bethlehem, and Hellertown. The Fairview Cemetery Association donated a beautiful burial plot to the home. At present the Good Shepherd Home has over $35,000 worth of property with less than $14,000 of debt. There are so many pressing applications for admission that in the near future more property must be acquired or the old house remodeled and enlarged. The Good Shepherd Home certainly is a necessity and a benefaction.

At present (June, 1913) there are 43 crippled, blind, and mute orphans, destitute children, infant orphans, and nine old people (Aunt Polly is 106 years old), and one retired minister in the home, besides 9 nurses, one of whom is a public school teacher, and another one a kindergarten teacher.

The home is a charity institution of the Evangelical Lutheran Church open to all that need help, which is willingly rendered if possible.

Centurion Bands have been organized in the Wilkes-Barre, Danville, and Lancaster conferences. The Wilkes-Barre conference supplies the home with coal; the Danville Conference assumed the present cost of the infants' cottage, $4,000. They pay the interest and also the improvements. The Lancaster Conference has not yet specified what special work they will do. The money has simply been sent to the treasurer of the home.

The Good Shepherd Home is especially for the most needy ones that are not admitted in other institutions of mercy. Many people have promised to remember the Home in their wills. People are invited to visit the home at any time, except on Sundays. The Ministerium of Pennsylvania, appointed a committee to investigate the Home, and report before the annual convention.

THE ALLENTOWN HOSPITAL.

The need of a hospital in Allentown with its increasing population and densely settled surrounding territory where a large number of men are employed in the cement mills and other industrial establishments, was felt for a number of years. In accordance with a resolution introduced into council by M. J. Lennon and Winslow Wood and passed Nov. 1, 1892, Mayor S. D. Lehr called a public meeting in the council chamber on Dec. 14, 1892, to consider the project of establishing a hospital. The mayor was elected chairman of the meeting and Dr. H. H. Herbst, secretary. Addresses on the importance of erecting a hospital were made by Drs. H. H. Herbst, E. G. Martin, P. L. Reichert, H. K. Hartzell, W. P. Kistler, Hon. E. S. Shimer, J. F. Gallagher, and Rev. A. R. Horne. At a meeting held in the mayor's office on Dec. 27, 1892, the name for the institution "Allentown Hospital," was adopted. A charter of incorporation was obtained from the Lehigh county court, Feb. 6, 1893. At a meeting held on the following day the following officers were elected: President, S. D. Lehr; Secretary, E. S. Shimer; Treasurer, H. W. Allison. Messrs. Allison and Lehr were appointed a committee to draft by-laws for the Corporation. It seems that for a few years the project lay dormant.

At a public meeting held in the court house on Oct. 16, 1895, the project for a hospital in the city of Allentown, was revived.

Addresses were delivered by Hon. Edward Harvey, Dr. W. H. Hartzell, Rev. J. A. Singmaster, and Rev. John B. Maus. A committee of fifteen was appointed by the chairman of the meeting, Mayor H. W. Allison, to devise a plan for organization. The committee appointed consisted of the following persons: Hon. Edwin Harvey; Revs. J. A. Singmaster, G. W. Richards, John B. Maus, Dr. W. H. Hartzell, H. C. Trexler, Henry Leh, W. R. Lawfer, S. A. Butz, Henry Cole, Leonard Siefing, James K. Mosser, Christian Swartz, and James F. Gallagher. At a meeting held on Oct. 23d a resolution was passed that no proposal looking to sectarian control of the hospital, should be entertained. The organization was effected on Nov. 15, 1895, when the following officers were elected: Chairman, Mayor H. W. Allison; secretary, James F. Gallagher; Treasurer, John E. Lentz. Rev. J. A. Singmaster, Dr. W. H. Hartzell, and M. J. Kauffman were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws. This committee reported at a meeting on Dec. 13, 1895, when the constitution and by-laws were adopted. The charter for the association was granted Jan. 20, 1896. The following persons were elected to serve as trustees for the institution: Dr. W. H. Hartzell, John E. Lentz, Revs. G. W. Richards, J. B. Maus, and J. A. Singmaster, for three years; Dr. Orlando Fegley, James F. Gallagher, Col. H. C. Trexler, H. S. Shimer, and H. W. Allison, for two years;

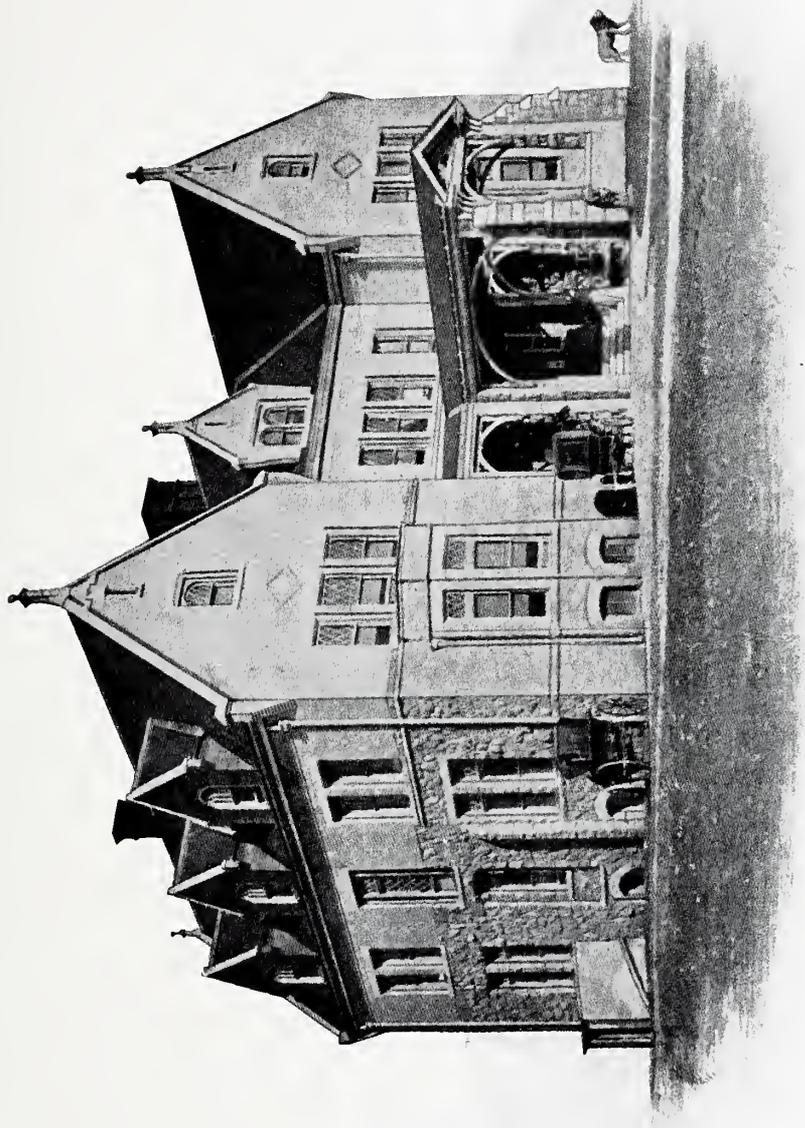

Hon. Edward Harvey, Rev. S. A. Repass, Henry Leh, John R. Gossler, and James F. Hunsicker, for one year. Rev. Singmaster was elected president of the board; Hiram S. Sheimer, vice-president; James F. Gallagher, secretary, and John E. Lentz, treasurer.

A meeting of the old organization, known as the "Allentown Hospital," was held on April 17, 1897, when a resolution was passed agreeing that all the property and corporate franchises be assigned and transferred to "The Allentown Hospital Association," this organization having received some money by will from Barbara Schaadt.

After the election the trustees of the new organization at once made an effort to raise money and secure a suitable location for the erection of a hospital.

Efforts were made to secure from the city a whole or a part of the "reservoir tract." Later on the trustees also made an effort to buy a part of West End park at a nominal sum. Both of these requests were refused. Several tracts were offered to them. Henry Leh offered to donate two acres at the northwest corner of Fourteenth and Union Streets. The Highland Cemetery Association offered to donate three acres of ground for a hospital site. Col. Trexler and Mr. Klein offered to give three acres northwest of Fairview cemetery. None of these tracts were accepted.

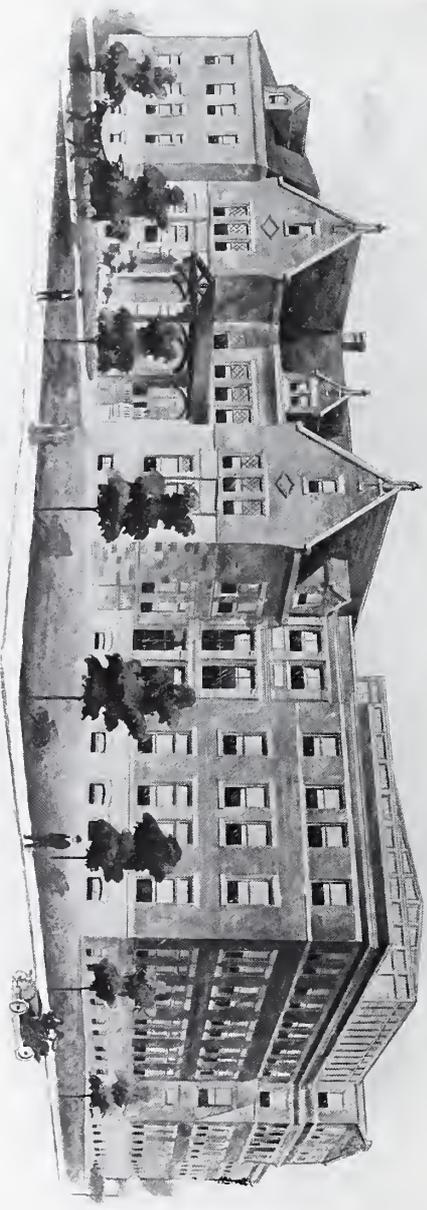

When the Solomon Griesemer tract at Seventeenth and Chew, was offered for sale, one of the conditions of the sale was that none of the lots would be sold for hospital purposes. Four individual members of the board, Col. H. C. Trexler, Henry Leh, Hiram S. Sheimer, and Frank M. Trexler, purchased the lots and later the deed for the tract was made out in the name of the hospital association. The cost of the hospital site was $5,297.51. Building operations were started during the summer of 1898, and the institution was opened for the reception of patients on May 22, 1899. The building and improvements of the ground cost $20,243.63, and the furnishings and supplies $3,856.36. The first hospital consisted of a fine operating room. Twenty-three beds and two cots in the wards; five beds in single rooms, and one in the receiving ward and twelve for the employees. The first medical staff of the hospital was as follows: Surgeon in Chief, Dr. Orlando Fegley; Assistant Surgeons, Drs. C. D. Schaeffer, A. J. Yost, Daniel Hiestand, and R. E. Albright; Physician in Chief, Dr. W. H. Hartzell; Assistant Physicians, Drs. C. S. Martin, H. H. Herbst, C. J. Otto, and I. F. Huebner; Ophthalmologist, Dr. G. F. Seiberling; Pathologist, Dr. M. F. Cawley; consultants: Surgeons, Drs. John B. Deaver, and H. Y. Horn; physicians, Drs. H. H. Riegel and William B. Erdman. The surgeon in chief, Dr. Fegley, was not able to serve on account of sickness. Dr. Schaeffer was appointed temporarily to take his place. After Dr. Fegley's death on March 10, 1900, Dr. Schaeffer was elected surgeon in chief. Seymore Davis, of Philadelphia, was the architect of the building, and the contractor was James M. Ritter. The following members constituted the building committee: J. A. Singmaster, J. F. Hunsicker, W. H. Hartzell, W. P. Moyer, and J. B. Maus.

ALLENTOWN HOSPITAL, 1898.

ALLENTOWN HOSPITAL, 1902.

ALLENTOWN HOSPITAL, 1912.

The rooms of the hospital were generously furnished as follows: Operating room, by Mrs. Mary E. Heilman; sterilizing room, by Mrs. Mary A. Young; men's medical ward by the Keystone Athletic Association; men's surgical ward by Allentown Fire Department; women's medical ward by Mrs. Walter P. Huber; woman's surgical ward by Hon. and Mrs. James L. Schaadt; west isolating room by Mrs. George Ormrod; east isolating room by the W. C. T. U.; reception room by C. A. Dorney Furniture Company; head nurses sitting and bed room by the Golden Circle of King's Daughters; central private room by the Circle of the Silver Cross, Kings' Daughters; west private room by Faithful Workers; east private room by Circle of "Seven"; sideboard by the Ever Ready Circle, King's Daughters; X-Ray instrument, Dr. C. D. Schaeffer.

From the annual report for 1899 we learn that the statistics for the first six months are as follows:

One hundred and sixty-eight patients were treated; largest number of patients at any one time, 21, with an average of 12. The nursing force consisted of a head nurse, two graduate nurses, and four probate nurses. The president in his annual report for the same year advocates the extension of its capacity and usefulness by the erection of a wing in the near future.

IMPROVEMENTS.

In 1902, through the generosity of James K. Mosser, of Allentown, a large and commodious wing was added to the building at a cost of $39,773.

This building was furnished as follows:

Male surgical ward, by William F. Mosser; female surgical ward by Hon. Robert E. Wright; children's ward by Mrs. Walter P. Huber; male surgical dressing room by the M. W. M. Circle; female surgical dressing room by the Ladies' Auxiliary; seven private rooms by the Silver Cross Circle of King's Daughters, the Circle of Seven, the Faithful Workers, the Clover Club, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Kleppinger, the Sunshine Circle, and the employees of F. W. Woolworth; four isolating rooms, two rooms by Mrs. E. G. Martin; Broad silk-weavers; Adelaide silk-mill; connecting corridor, first floor by C. A. Dorney Furniture Company; connecting corridor, second floor, by the Kroll Furniture Company; rug by John Taylor; laundry machinery by Messrs. Nuding and Neuweller; wheel-litter by Thomas E. Ritter; six additional beds and bedding by the Ladies' Auxiliary; shades for entire building by J. M. Grimley.

In 1903 two lots opposite the hospital on Chew Street, were purchased at a cost of $5,500, for a nurses' home.

A beautiful annex known as the woman's ward was erected in 1905, by Mrs. Maria E. Mosser, widow of the late James K. Mosser.

The cost of the annex was $4,371, and was paid for by the generous donor. During the same year there was also erected a boiler house, coal house, laundry, and a corridor connecting them with the main building.

The most extensive improvements since the hospital was erected, was the new building which was erected in 1911 and 1913, at a cost of $114,371, not including the furnishings.

The rooms in the new building were furnished by the following persons and organizations: Alvin Lawfer, Mrs. Alvin Lawfer, Silver Cross Circle, Keiper family in honor of H. L. Keiper, Henry School, Jockey Club, Charles Lieberman, Mrs. Frank Koch, Robert Wilbur, E. N. Kroninger, P. J. Laubach, John M. Mack, E. M. Kern, J. M. Grimley Co., George Kleppinger, Merkel & Co., Joseph Lieberman, Tilghman Cooper, Thomas Ritter, Mrs. R. P. Stevens, Owen Clauss, Lloyd Tilghman, Victor Wonderley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moyer, Dr. Lowright, Mrs. and Ada Balliet, Mr. and Mrs. David Malcom, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Wetherhold, Mrs. Grace Moyer, National Silk Dye Company, Levi Bachman, D. G. Dery, Nurses Alumnae Association, two rooms; Mrs. Charles Matchan, in memory of her husband, Ward B., M. T. J. Ochs, Arthur G. Dewalt, Fred Horlacher, David S. Menges; The Ladies' Auxiliary furnished the obstetric ward, the nursery, the maternity ward, and various dressing rooms throughout the hospital; Mrs. Heilman, the operating-room. Mrs. E. M. Young, the sterilizing room, Road Drivers' Association, the children's private ward, Mrs. Walter A. Huber, the children's ward; fire department one of the wards, James F. Hunsicker, Dannie Megges, and Abraham Samuel, the doctors' rooms.

TRAINING SCHOOL.

A course of theoretical and practical instruction for the purpose of training women to become professional nurses was started shortly after the institution was opened. The first superintendent or head nurse was Miss Anna B. Gibson. Miss Clara V. Haring filled the office from 1900 to 1912, since which time Miss Alma M. Viehdorfer has filled it. Judging from the number of graduates and the character of the young ladies who have been graduated from this institution, it is evident that very efficient work is being done.

The following have been the resident physicians of the institution:

Dr. William A. Hausman, 1902.
 Dr. Jere F. McAvoy, 1903.
 Dr. William J. Creighton, 1904.
 Dr. Clyde J. Saylor, 1904.
 Dr. Mahlon G. Miller, 1905 and 1906.
 Dr. William H. Greiss, 1905 and 1906.
 Dr. William J. Matz, 1907.
 Dr. Forrest G. Schaeffer, 1908.
 Dr. Robert L. Schaeffer, 1908.
 Dr. Oscar O. Salter, 1909.
 Dr. Frank S. Boyer, 1909.
 Dr. John S. Schneller, 1910-1911.
 Dr. Edwin S. Minner, 1910-1911.
 Dr. Fred G. Klotz, 1911-12.
 Dr. Edward J. Deibert, 1911-1912.
 Dr. Harry B. Kern, 1912-1913.

LADIES' AUXILIARY.

A Ladies' Auxiliary to co-operate in erecting and maintaining the hospital, was organized Feb. 1, 1896, with thirteen members. In 1899 they reported an active membership of 292. When the first building was erected they furnished the money with which the lot was purchased. They also contributed $2,500 towards the building, and $900, towards the furnishing.

This organization is the most valuable auxiliary of the institution and has rendered most valuable assistance in providing means for the erection of the building, their furnishings and maintenance of the hospital. Since 1909 tag day is observed about the middle of May, which nets annually about $2,600. The officers of the auxiliary are: President, Mrs. Harry E. Ruhe; vice-presidents, Mrs. R. S. Leisenring, Mrs. Mary E. Heilman, and Mrs. Annie Schock; Recording Secretary, Laura V. Keck; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. James Straub; Treasurer, Mrs. Henry D. Hersh.

OFFICERS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The first president of the board was Rev. J. A. Singmaster, who served until 1900, when Hon. Edward Harvey was elected, who filled the office up to the time of his death in 1913.

Dr. W. H. Hartzell filled the office of Secretary until 1902 when Dr. Charles S. Martin was elected, who filled the office until 1908, since which time Abraham Samuels has filled the office. John E. Lentz held the office of treasurer until the annual meeting in 1899, when he resigned on account of ill health. Edward H. Renninger has filled the office ever since.

Dr. C. D. Schaeffer has practically been the surgeon in chief since the hospital was opened. Dr. Orlando Fegley had been elected surgeon in chief, but owing to ill health he never served. Since 1902 Dr. Schaeffer has also been the physician in chief. By consulting the statistics of the institution, it is remarkable how much has been accomplished in so short a time. It speaks well for the officers and friends of the institution. To Dr. Schaeffer more than to any other man, the institution owes its remarkable growth. It is one of the finest and best equipped hospitals of the state.

STATISTICS.
Year	Nurses Graduated	Patients Treated	State Appropriation	Moneys Rec'd for Maintenance.
1899		168	$ 5,000	$36,092.60
1900		380		8,114.68
1901	3	420	1,052.81	29,389.42
1902	5	533	13,062.00	45,013.00
1903	4	614	6,055.42	28,678.54
1904	8	805	9,704.38	25,153.15
1905	8	870	9,875.00	42,611.14
1906	4	899	10,500.00	38,418.72
1907	9	995	13,750.00	42,488.06
1908	9	1,111	11,000.00	70,759.79
1909	4	1,132	13,000.00	81,528.45
1910	13	1,322	15,000.00	68,749.69
1911	9	1,443	11,250.00	40,130.83
1912	12	1,505	18,750.00	65,156.57

Since the founding of the institution $365,000 has been expended for grounds, buildings, and furnishings; $329,513 has been spent for maintenance.

Members of the Association.

Any person contributing $10 at any one time, and $5 annually during each succeeding year, shall be a member of this Association. Membership shall be forfeited by a failure to pay the annual dues for two years.

Any person, firm, or organization contributing not less than $10 in cash, or not less than $25 in material or merchandise, shall be entitled to a representative in the Association during the current year in which the donations are made.

Any person may become a life member of the Association by the payment of not less than $150 at any one time.

Any person may become an honorary member of this Association by the payment of not less than $1,000 at any one time.

Honorary Members.

George O. Albright.
 Charles F. Mosser.
 Employees of Atlas Portland Cement Co.
 Atlas Portland Cement Co. Relief and Beneficial Association.
 Hon. Edward Harvey.
 John Greenall.
 *L. J. Helfrich.
 *Henry Leh.
 Lehigh Portland Cement Co. and Employees.
 William F. Mosser.
 Hon. Robert E. Wright.
 *John E. Lentz.
 *James K. Mosser.
 *Dr. Martin H. Boye.
 Edwin G. Trexler.
 Harry C. Trexler.
 Thomas J. Koch.
 John W. Eckert.

*Deceased.

E. M. Young.
 Max Hess.
 George Ormrod.
 William H. Gangewere.
 Dr. C. D. Schaeffer.
 James F. Hunsicker.
 Heilman Boiler Works.
 Andrew S. Keck.
 Mrs. Margaret Matcham.
 Horlacher Brewing Co.
 Ladies' Auxiliary.

Owen D. Clauss.
 Joseph Lieberman.
 E. H. Wetherhold.
 Merkle & Co.
 Crane Iron Works, Catasauqua.
 Allentown Hospital Alumni Asso.
 Circle of Silver Cross, King's Daughters.
 Road Drivers' Club of Lehigh Valley.
 i Bachman.
 J. M. Grimley Co.
 Mrs. Annie R. Huber.

Life Members.

Allentown Electric Light and Power Co.
 Allentown Fire Department.
 Allentown National Bank.
 American Cement Co. and Employees.
 Bonneville Portland Cement Co.
 Coplay Cement Co. and employees.
 Hon. Hugh E. Crilly.
 Donaldson Iron Co. and employees.
 George H. Hardner.
 Mrs. Mary E. Heilman.
 Bryden Horse Shoe Co. and employees.
 Lehigh Valley Transit Co.
 George W. Seagraves.
 United Italian Societies.
 Lehigh Portland Cement Co.
 Mrs. Joseph Ruhe.
 Mrs. Walter P. Huber.
 Keystone Athletic Association.
 Lawrence Portland Cement Co. and employees.
 Lehigh Valley Trust Co.
 Merchants' National Bank.
 Mrs. Joseph B. Lewis.
 Novelty Hosiery Co. and Excelsior Knitting Mch. Mfg. Co.
 M. U. M. Circle.
 Mr. and Mrs. James L. Schaadt.
 Whitehall Portland Cement Co. and employees.
 William R. Yeager.
 *Mrs. E. B. Young.
 William F. Mosser.
 Mack Bros. Motor Car Co.
 Allentown Public Schools.
 Ladies' Auxiliary of Allentown Hospital.
 H. Leh Estate.
 Richard C. Bondy.
 Joseph Ruhe.
 A. Samuels.
 *H. L. Keiper.
 E. N. Kroninger.
 Louisa Ochs.
 Charles L. Lieberman.
 George H. Kleppinger.
 Mary I. Koch.
 Peter Laubach.
 T. S. Cooper.
 Lloyd M. Tillman.
 Charles Ziegenfus.
 D. G. Dery.
 A. G. Dewalt.
 V. F. Wonderly.
 Henry L. School.
 Mrs. Ida V. Lawfer.
 Mrs. Briana Pendleton Stevens.
 Robert E. Wilbur.
 Mr. and Mrs. John M. Mack.

*Deceased.

STAFF, 1913.

Physician and surgeon, Dr. Charles D. Schaeffer; assistant, Dr. Calvin J. Otto; pathologist, Dr. Joseph M. Weaver; X-Ray operator, Dr. Edward W. Feldhoff; directress of nurses, Miss Alma M. Viehdorfer, R.N.; assistant directress of nurses, Miss Ruth A. Mench, R.N.; night directress of nurses, Miss Blanche M. Harrison, R.N.; internes, Dr. Arthur C. Zuck, 1912-April 1, 1913; Dr. Edward L. Royer, 1912-July 1, 1913; dietitian, Mrs. Edith M. Lithgow; stenographer and bookkeeper, Miss Etta E. Smallsbeck; consultants—surgeons, Dr. John B. Deaver, Philadelphia; Dr. H. Y. Horn, Coplay; physicians—Dr. H. H. Riegel, Catasauqua, Dr. Wm. B. Erdman, Macungie.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Mr. James F. Hunsicker, president; Mr. Peter J. Laubach, vice-president; Mr. Abraham Samuels, secretary; Mr. Edward H. Reninger, treasurer.
 Term Expires 1917—Hon. James L. Schaadt, Mr. Edward M. Young, Mr. Samuel F. Jordan, Mr. Emil A. Hirner, Mr. George K. Mosser.
 Term Expires 1916—Dr. Charles D. Schaeffer, Mr. Abraham Samuels, Mr. Edward H. Reninger, Mr. Edwin G. Trexler.
 Term Expires 1915—Mr. James F. Hunsicker, Dr. A. H. Balliet, Mr. George Ormrod, Mr. A. L. Reichenbach.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

The smallpox epidemic in the Spring of 1882 left so many orphans and half orphans that Mr. William H. Thurston, then president of the Bethlehem Iron Company, felt the necessity of a place of refuge for these unfortunate children. A small house was rented on Cherokee street in South Bethlehem, and Miss Lizzie Frick was placed in charge of it as matron. For about four years Mr. Thurston bore the whole expense of maintenance, but as the number of applications for admittance increased, he deemed it necessary to place the Home on a more permanent basis and it was done in 1886. Mrs. George Jenkins was the first president with the following directors: Julia DeWitte Coppie, Martha N. Sayre, Sarah M. Nelson, Alice C. Frazier, Julia DeWitte, C. Jenkins, R. A. Lambertson, E. P. Wilber, Robert Lockhart, Samuel Adams and William H. Thurston. The number of children increased until the first house was too small and Mr. Thompson donated a lot for a new building, also on Cherokee street upon which a house was built with the funds secured by Mrs. Jenkins and the ladies of the Board. The new Home was taken possession of in June, 1888. In 1895 when the still increasing number of children had again rendered the Cherokee street quarters inadequate the Board of Directors decided to purchase a country site where new buildings could be added from time to time and afford more room for the children. The fulfilling of this desire was made possible by the generous donation of a building by Capt. James Wiley in memory of his wife, Anna Lewis Wiley. The directors having secured an option on a tract of six acres of land in Salisbury township, immediately began to solicit funds for its purchase. Sufficient funds having been secured the property was purchased and the building which is the Children's Home of to-day was erected, but recently a three-story addition, 32 x 41 was erected.

The following have been the matrons up to the present time: Miss Lizzie Frick, Mrs. Frey, Mrs. Kintner and the present matron, Mrs. Abner Herman.

The children of the Home under nine years of age are taught by a competent teacher in the Home. Those over nine years of age attend the public schools of the township located at Gauff's Hill only a few blocks from the Home.

The object of the Home is to furnish temporary shelter for homeless, destitute or unfortunate children until suitable, permanent homes can be found for them. The children are admitted between the ages of two and fourteen years. The children come principally from Lehigh and Northampton counties. The Home is supported chiefly by annual subscriptions, together with the income from nominal board paid by parents and guardians and State aid. More than a thousand children have been provided for since it has been founded.

The Children's Home is in charge of leading women of the Bethlehems and there are several Allentown ladies connected with the administration of its affairs, including Mrs. H. C. Trexler, Mrs. R. E. Wright, Mrs. Lucy Huebner, and Mrs. Charles D. Shrady. Mrs. H. H. Mitchell, of Bethlehem, has been president of the Home since 1908 and it is largely due to her ambition for the project and ability that the extensions of work have been made. Miss Anna Gummere, of Bethlehem, is the secretary and Miss Montgomery, of Fountain Hill, is the treasurer. Mrs. J. Davis Brodhead, of South Bethlehem, is a prominent, active member of the Executive Committee, and heads the committee on school work.

RESCUE MISSION AND HOME OF ALLENTOWN.

The Rescue Mission and Home, located at 12-14 North Third street, Allentown, was organized by Obadiah Becker in 1900. In 1901 it was incorporated under the laws of our State and the following trustees were elected: Obadiah Becker, Superintendent; Charles Keiser, President; E. A. Soleliac, Treasurer; Harry J. Troxell, Secretary; E. J. Rapp and Miss Mary Ormrod. The building consists of a three-story brick house, a brick chapel, 42 x 15 feet built in 1909, and a two-story dormitory, 36 x 15 feet. In 1911 the number of meals served was 5,233; lodging was furnished to 6,063 persons, and the Gospel preached to over 9,000 people in 372 meetings, conducted in the mission. The Home depends for its support on voluntary contributions.

CHAPTER XVII.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

EARLY ROADS.

The first public road laid out in what is now Lehigh county was surveyed in 1735 while still a part of Bucks county. It began about a quarter of a mile northwest of Breinigsville, in Upper Macungie, at a black-oak tree, situated at a corner of lands of Peter Trexler and Henry Shade—near the tavern of Jeremiah Trexler, whose father (said Peter) had purchased land there in 1729. The road passed through the present site of Breinigsville and Weiler's Store, crossed the Little Lehigh, thence through what is now the borough of Macungie, and the villages of Shimersville, Old Zionsville, New Zionsville, Hosensack, Krausdale, and Geryville to North Wales where it joined the road from New Goshenhoppen to Philadelphia. The order was issued March 27, 1735, and the report was filed Aug. 16, 1735, by the viewers, Robert Thomas, John Roberts, Hugh Evans, and Jan Jansen.

Slatington Road.—In 1752, in Northampton county, a road was ordered to be laid out from John Moyer's house, on the Macungie road, (near Zionsville R. R. station), to Kern's Mill, (now Slatington). The viewers were Joseph Eberhard, David Owen, David Geesey, Christopher Haymaker, George Shoemaker, and George Hoffman. The road ran generally in a north-easterly direction, and passed through lands of George Streibeck, George Plott, (Vera Cruz), Rudolph Andreas, Taylor Floch, Barbara Shoemaker (near Emaus) and George Hoffman, crossing the Little Lehigh at "Hoffman's Grist Mill" (owned ten years later by Jacob Wirth); thence a distance of three miles to the Cedar creek, passing Nicholas Walbert's grist-mill and through Lynford Lardner's plantation for two miles, passing east of his shooting-place, called "Grouse Hall," (near Wenersville) to the top of a long hill; thence a distance of 284 perches through Peter Troxell's land crossing Jordan creek, vacant land (Meyersville); John Schadt's, Caspar Wistar's and Paul Balliet's land (Ballietsville) a distance of three miles; thence by what is now Neffsville and lands of Jacob Shieffely and George Rex, six miles to said grist-mill at Trucker's creek; thence 30 perches to Trucker's house (William Kern) and through land of Nicholas Kern and Joseph Grove two miles to a road leading from Bethlehem over the Blue mountains; total distance 23 miles, 106 perches.

Reading Road.—In 1753, divers inhabitants of Berks and Northampton counties prayed the Provincial Council for a road from Easton to Reading, for which there was a great necessity, inasmuch as the roads commonly used were not laid out by any authority, neither the Council nor the Courts of the respective counties. The petition was signed by the following subscribers:

Conrad Weiser.	John Jones.
Thomas Craig.	Jasper Scull.
Henry Harvy.	Thos. Armstrong.
Jonas Seely.	Benja. Lightfoot.
James Read.	Moses Heyman.
Jacob Levan.	Lewis Gordon.
Wm. Parsons.	Theobold Baum.
Will. Craig.	Merrick Starr.
Hugh Wilson.	James Starr.
Peter Haws.	Lyon Nathan.
Conrad Bower.	Geo. Beale.
John Hutton.	Isaac Levan.
James Biddle.	Peter Weitner.
Richard Rigg.	Abraham Crosius.
Yost Sassamanshausen.	Peter Weiser.

This road was surveyed by David Schultz. It crossed the Lehigh river at a ford, by way of Kline's Island, south of the present bridge, and the Jordan creek near William Allen's house (now Union street); thence partly along the present Jackson street to Cedar creek, through John Griesemer's land, by way of the present Wescosville and Trexlertown into Berks county, near Rothrocksville, a distance of 13 miles. The distance from Easton to the Lehigh river was given as 15 miles. In later years, thousands of immigrants who landed at New York and settled in the west, traveled by way of this highway.

The viewers from Northampton county were: George Knauss, Lewis Klotz, Thomas Armstrong, Jeremiah Trexler, Melchior Schmidt, and Frederick Romig.

Heidelberg Road.—In 1753, inhabitants of Heidelberg township prayed the Court for a public road from "Bake Oven" in the Blue mountains to the Great Road leading to Philadelphia, near George Good's plantation (now

City Water Works, formerly Schantz's spring. The names of the subscribers were:

Daniel Burger.	Lorentz Stimson.
Frantz Gildner.	Simon Wehr.
Henrich Ohl.	Migel Eber.
Conrad Bloss.	George Rex.
Andres Meyer.	Peter Miller.
John Foller.	John Leonard Stein.
Nicholas Handwerk.	Jacob Peter.
Filb Wagenman.	Michael Moser.
Fetter Misemer.	Samuel Muse.
Philip Fidler.	John Moller.
Daniel Coston.	Jacob Ferber.
Paulus Antoni.	George Mertz.
Frederick Schneider.	Jacob Bender.
Henrich Reinhart.	John Hunsicker.
Christian Smith.	John Fuhr.

The road was laid out, and the viewers were: George Good, George Rex, Jacob Rex, Jacob Kohler, Daniel Troxell, and George Coster.

The road from Emaus to Bethlehem in Salisbury township was laid out in 1760.

In 1761, a road was laid out from Ballietsville (then Paul Balliet's tavern) to Jacob Kohler's mill at Egypt, thence crossing the Lehigh river to Wilson's mill in Allen township to Easton.

In 1762, a road was laid out from Kohler's mill, Egypt, to the new town (Allentown). The viewers were: William Craig, Christopher Wagner, John Tool, Paul Balliet, Thomas Hunsicker, and George Rex.

LEHIGH CANAL.

The navigation of the Lehigh river was a subject of discussion for many years, and as early as March 9, 1771, an act was passed declaring it a common highway and appointing commissioners to improve the navigation of the stream. Other acts were passed in 1791 and 1794, and on Feb. 27, 1798, an act was passed appointing William Tilghman, Godfrey Haga, and John M. Taylor, of Philadelphia; John Barnett, Joseph Horsefield, and Nicholas Kern, of Northampton county, and Matthias Hollenbach, Rosewell Welles, and Lord Butler, of Luzerne county, commissioners, who were authorized to receive subscriptions for stock, at $100 a share, in the Lehigh Navigation Company and also authorizing the sum of $10,000 to be raised by a lottery, the proceeds to be employed in the improvement of the river.

The Lehigh Coal Mine Company had been organized Feb. 13, 1792, by Col. Jacob Weiss, Michael Hillegass, Charles Cist, William Henry, and others and secured about 10,000 acres of land, the greater part containing coal deposits. Owing to the difficulties of transporting the coal, the mines remained neglected until 1806, when William Turnbull constructed an "ark"—a rough timber boat, 16 feet wide and 20 feet long, in which he conveyed two or three hundred bushels of anthracite to Philadelphia. Boats of this pattern, somewhat larger, were afterwards made to carry on the business, and continued in use until 1831. "Bear trap" dams were built to form pools of water, and when the water overflowed them long enough to fill the river-bed below to its ordinary flow, the "sluice-gates" were let down and the current thus created would move the "arks," collected in the pool, down the artificial flood. Twelve of these dams and sluices were built in 1819. They were designed by Josiah White, who, with Erskine Hazzard and George F. A. Hauto, had secured a twenty-year lease from the Lehigh Coal Mine Co., at an annual rental of one ear of corn, had a new act passed authorizing them to improve the navigation of the river, and organized on the 10th of August, 1818, the Lehigh Navigation Company. On Oct. 21st, the Lehigh Coal Company was formed and on April 21st, 1820, the two companies were consolidated under the name of the Lehigh Navigation and Coal Company, and in that year, 365 tons of coal were sent to Philadelphia. By an act of Assembly passed Feb. 13, 1822, the company was incorporated as the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company and was empowered to commence a slack water navigation upon the Lehigh within a year from the date of the act. In the same year in which operations were begun on the canal, a railroad was constructed, nine miles in length, from the mines at Summit Hill to Mauch Chunk, on the wagon road laid out in 1819. The elevation at Summit Hill was 936 feet and the cars of coal descended by gravity. Mules rode down with the coal and brought the empty cars to the mine, the trip taking three hours. In 1845 a back track was completed for returning the cars, now known as the famous "Switchback Railroad."

Work on the canal was commenced in 1827 with thirteen hands, under the direction of Mr. White, at the mouth of the Nesquehoning creek; which number soon increased to seventy, and afterwards to many more. Two scows (14 by 35 feet) were rigged for lodging and feeding the men; one was built for the manager's counting-house, store-house, and dwelling; and another for a kitchen and bakery. As the work was finished on the way down the stream, these four scows were floated down from point to point. The improvement was made while the country north of Lehigh Gap was still a wilderness and the working people came from many nations. Payments were made by check so as not to encourage violence. The work was completed in 1838, a total distance from the headwaters of the river to the Delaware at Easton, of 46 miles, and the company now operates the Delaware division canal, extending from Easton to Bristol, a distance of 60 miles. There are 50 locks in the Lehigh division and 25 in the Delaware division.

During 1822, 2,240 tons of coal were shipped to Philadelphia and in 1823, 5,800 tons. In 1824, 9,541 tons were shipped, and the prediction that not one-half of it would be sold was proved untrue. The price was $8.40 a ton. In 1825, the company transported 28,393 tons. The increase of the business within the next thirty years is shown in the remarkable development of the traffic: 131,250 tons in 1835; 429,453 tons in 1845; and 1,275,000 tons in 1855. Then the traffic reached its highest point, because a movement had been made in 1851 to introduce a railroad on the opposite side of the river and this was completed in September, 1855.

As a means of conserving the coal supply, the company has recently been engaged in making boulets, consisting of culm, and coal tar pitch, to be used as fuel. At Hauto, a large steam plant for the generation of electrical energy, for commercial distribution throughout the Lehigh valley, is now being constructed, where the vast accumulations of waste of the mines for nearly a century will be utilized.

In the year 1801, Peter Rhoads was president and Daniel Kliest, secretary, of the old Lehigh Navigation Company. Among the former's papers were found the following relating to the lottery carried on by the company.

Statement of Account between Edward Stone and the Lehigh Navigation Company:

Dr.

1803—Mar. 1, To 501 Tickets per Messrs. L. & H.,	$2505 00
1804—April 3, To 880 with Messrs. Allibone & Son,	4400 00
	$6905 00
Deduct 2½ per cent.,	172 62
	$6732 38

Cr.

For use of his wheels,	$ 20 00
Numbering and Rolling,	112 00
Check-Book,	7 00
37 Days Attendance as Clerk—4,	148 00
M. Fortune the same,	148 00
Making Prize Lists,	20 00
Printer Jackson,	14 36
	$469 36
Prize Tickets,	1300 00
Balance Due,	4963 02
	$6732 38

LEHIGH NAVIGATION LOTTERY—2D CLASS.

Dr.

1804—Apr. 5, Cash from Thos. Allibone & Son for 100 T,	$487 50
1804—Apr. 11, Cash from Thos. Allibone & Son for 100 T,	487 50
1804—April 19, Cash from Thos. Allibone & Son for 102 T,
H. & P. Rice's Note,	$350 00
Jesse Keasley's Note,	150 00
Cash,	2 73
	502 73
Cash overpaid on these,	4 48
May 1—Note at 60 days for 257, ..	1250 00
Cash,	2 87
	1252 87
May 9—Prizes paid for 120,
1 of 600; 4 of 20; 1 of 6 (15 per ct. off), and cash,	585 00
July 28—Printer's Bill,	$435 77
Prizes,	2861 10
Cash,	115 63
	3412 50
	$6732 58

Cr.

1802—Apr. 20.—200 tickets rec'd of D. Kliest, Esq., for sale on commission of 2½ per cent.,	$ 975 00
1804—Mar. 1.—300, com. of 2½ per cent., ..	1462 50
1804—Apr. 4.—201, com. of 2½ per cent., ..	979 88
1804—Apr. 5.—100, com. of Messrs. Allibone & Son,	487 50
1804—Apr. 11.—100, com. of Messrs. Allibone & Son,	487 50
1804—April 19.—102, com. of Messrs. Allibone & Son,	502 73
1804—May 1.—257, com. of Messrs. Allibone & Son,	1252 87
1804—May 9.—120, com. of Messrs. Allibone & Son,	585 00
	$6732 98

Errors Excepted—July 30, 1804.
GEO. TAYLOR, JR.

There were thirteen prize tickets found among the papers, numbered respectively:

857	3132	5509	5540
2928	3152	5530	5544
2948	3193	5535	5861
3130

Of these, No. 2948 drew a prize of $425; No. 3130, $42.50; 3132, $17; and Nos. 5509, 5530, and 5535, each $5.10. The last three were drawn by persons from Allentown: Peter Keiper, Jr., Peter Ealer and Elizabeth Ealer.

It is not known how many tickets were sold, but in the account given they would appear to have numbered 1,380. They were sold at $5 per ticket.

The tickets were printed on small, oblong pieces of paper, 2 by 4 inches; and ticket No. 2,948 was as follows:

LEHIGH NAVIGATION }
 LOTTERY. } SECOND CLASS.

No. 2948—Authorized by Law of the State of Pennsylvania.

THIS TICKET will entitle the Bearer to such Prize as may be drawn to its Number, if demanded within Twelve Months after Drawing, subject to a Deduction of Fifteen per cent. Bethlehem, February 12, 1802.

Dan'l Kliest, Secretary.

The following interesting letter, relating to the "Canal Lottery," not heretofore published, is given in this connection:

BETHLEHEM, June 10, 1804.

MY DEAR HON'D FRIEND:

I received your kind favor of the 8th inst and must confess that I have more than once been wondering at your intrepidity in not deserting your post; for that kind of Business wherein you are at present engaged is not every Body's Business, at least it would make me more tired than any other work.

But like a good old Veteran you stand to your Post, and seem to be determined to hold out till the Word of Retreat is given, which a good general will not easily give till either the Battle is won or he is absolutely overpowered by his Antagonist in Skill or Superiority of Numbers.

I, for my part, must confess that I should not regret if Madam Fortuna should overpower me with Numbers, that is to say, if she would throw 1 or 2 thousand dollars on the Ticket No. 855 whereof I am the Bearer, or if it even should fall to the Lot of the Company of 18 whereof 11 are drawn already, or to the Navigation Comp'y. Tickets, or to the old Judge Rhoads himself. Fortune, as you observed, seems not quite averse to Boating and Rafting; at least in my opinion she has hitherto been rather more smiling and favorable to that Branch of Business, as I expected in the Beginning of the Drawing.

Among the Tickets which I have sold there are Nos. 3160 and 3054. The holders thereof wish to know if Fortune has bestowed anything upon them or not. If you should write once more to me, please to inform me thereof, as also No. 855.

It seems the Drawing is coming nearly to a Conclusion, and who will rejoice more to be released than yourself and to be at Liberty to return home to your family. I and my family are, thanks to God, tolerably well at present, and so is Mr. George Huber and his Spouse, who, as well as Mrs. Levering, join with me in saluting you; and believe me to be your sincere friend and Very humble and obedient Serv't,

ABRM. LEVERING.

Peter Rhoads, Esq.

P. S.—The Letter which you enclosed to me for Dan'l Kliest, Esq., I shall have a good opportunity to send tomorrow or next day.

A. L.

The above letter was folded in the customary form of that period and sealed at the back with red sealing-wax. It was addressed to—

Peter Rhoads, Esq.,
 At Mr. George Leshers Tavern
 Philadelphia.

It was post-marked at Bethlehem June 10th; and at the upper right-hand corner it was marked "Free," signed by Huber, the postmaster.

TURNPIKE ROADS.

There were two prominent turnpike roads in Lehigh county leading from Allentown, one to the southeast to Coopersburg, and the other to the east to Bethlehem.

Coopersburg Pike.—A charter of incorporation was granted by the Governor of Pennsylvania, July 16, 1874, to the Allentown and Coopersburg Turnpike Co., for the construction and operation of a turnpike road from Allentown to a point in the road leading from Coopersburg to Philadelphia where it intersects the line dividing Lehigh and Bucks counties, with an authorized capital of $25,000, in shares of $10. There were 218 subscribers in taking up the whole capital, the largest being:

F. A. Ruhe, Allentown, 50.
 Jos. Ruhe, Allentown, 50.
 Charles H. Ruhe, Allentown, 50.
 F. S. Kemerer, Allentown, 50.
 M. J. Kramer, Allentown, 25.
 Fred I. Tobst, Allentown, 25.
 John Gross, Allentown, 20.
 Abr. Ulmer, Centre Valley, 150.
 Enos Erdman, Centre Valley, 25.
 Henry Yeager, Centre Valley, 20.
 Jos. Wittman, Limeport, 20.
 H. B. Pearson, Friedensville, 25.
 Geo. Blank, Coopersburg, 25.

The first Board of Directors was constituted as follows:

Robt. Dubbs, Allentown.	H. B. Pearson, Friedensville.
H. H. Fisher, Allentown.	Enos Edrman, Centre Valley.
John Gross, Allentown.	Jos. Wittman, Limeport.
Jos. Wittman, Limeport.	Abrm. Ulmer, Centre Valley.
Abrm. Wittman, Lanark.

Five gates were established along the turnpike, covering a distance of nine miles:

1. 100 yards beyond the Little Lehigh on the road to Emaus.
2. Mountainville, at the cross-roads.
3. Centre Valley.
4. Between Centre Valley and Coopersburg at the road to Passer.
5. Coopersburg.

The construction was under the direction of Adolph Aschbach and L. S. Jacoby, civil engineers of Allentown, during 1874-75; the cost was $25,000.

It was operated until 1910, when it was condemned by proceedings in Court on the application of the county, and the damages were assessed at $35,140.

Bethlehem Pike.—A charter was granted by the governor of Pennsylvania, April 18, 1876, to the Allentown and Bethlehem Turnpike Co., for the construction and operation of a turnpike road leading from Allentown to Bethlehem by way of Rittersville, with an authorized capital of $15,000, in shares of $10. There were 135 subscribers in taking up the whole capital, the largest being Chas. A. Ruhe 50, F. A. Ruhe 50, Joseph Ruhe 50, James Moser 50, J. Franklin Reichert 50. They were distributed as follows:

Allentown, 86.	Coplay, 1.
Hanover Tp., 16.	Bethlehem, 30.
Catasauqua, 2.

The first Board of Directors was constituted as follows:

Chas. H. Ruhe, Allentown.	M. H. Horn, Catasauqua.
J. S. Dillinger, Allentown.	Weston Dodson, Bethlehem.
Hiram Belford, Allentown.	Geo. H. Myers, Bethlehem.
J. K. Moser, Hanover.	Francis Weiss, Bethlehem.
J. F. Reichert, Hanover.

Treasurer, MORGAN F. MEDLAR.

The turnpike started at the east side of the Lehigh river, and followed the public road east by way of Rittersville to the west side of the Monocacy creek at Bethlehem, a distance of four miles. It was constructed during the summer and fall of 1876, and the civil engineer was Samuel D. Lehr, of Allentown.

The cost of construction was $26,000, the cost showing the care in putting down the road-bed.

There were three gates: One in East Allentown; one at Rittersville; and the third near the Monocacy creek, afterward removed to a point midway between Rittersville and the creek.

It was operated until 1907 when it was condemned by proceedings in Court on the application of the county and the damages were assessed at $20,854.

Shimersville Pike.—A third turnpike was established in the southern section of the county, in Upper Milford township, in 1852. It is only 5½ miles long, extending from Shimersville, by way of Zionsville, to Herefordville (Treichlersville) in Berks county, where it connected with the Green Lane and Goshenhoppen Turnpike Road. The length in Berks county is only half a mile. It was constructed by virtue of an Act of Assembly, passed March 3, 1852, and though named in the Act as the "Berks and Lehigh Turnpike Road," it was commonly called the "Shimersville Pike."

Breinigsville Pike.—An Act was passed April 18, 1853, authorizing a turnpike-road to be constructed and operated "from the west end of Hamilton street in Allentown, along the Reading Road to Breinigsville," and the Allentown Iron Co. was authorized to subscribe for stock of the proposed company. Many prominent names of persons in that southwestern section of the county were mentioned in the Act but it was not established.

RAILROADS.

First Railroad.—The first charter granted in this country, or probably any other, for the building of a railroad, was granted in 1819 to Henry Drinker, by the Pennsylvania Legislature, for a railroad from the Delaware valley to the headwaters of the Lehigh river, over the route now occupied by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad from the Water Gap to Scranton. That was before the days of steam and the "wagons" to be run on the road were to be moved by horse power. That charter and the rights it conveyed were purchased by the original Delaware & Lackawanna Company for $1,000.

Lehigh Valley.—The Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. was originally incorporated under the name of the Delaware, Lehigh, Schuylkill, and Susquehanna R. R. Co., by an Act passed by the legislature of Pennsylvania on April 21, 1846, at the request of James M. Porter, Peter S. Michler, and Abraham Miller, and others of Northampton county, and Henry King, Christian Pretz, of Lehigh county; which was secured by the strenuous exertions of Dr. Jesse Samuel, who then represented Lehigh county in the House, against a strong and determined opposition.

The commissioners named in the Act were:

William Edelman.	Benj. Ludwig.
Casper Kleckner.	Christian Pretz.
George Probst.	Peter Huber.
Stephen Balliet.	James M. Porter.
John D. Bauman.	Peter S. Michler.
Thomas Craig.	Abraham Miller.
Henry King.

These commissioners advertised for subscriptions of stock on June 2, 1846, but they were obliged to adjourn the opening of the books from day to day at least twenty times, and it was not until Aug. 2, 1847, that a sufficient amount of stock could be secured, when the total shares subscribed numbered 5,002, and with $5 paid on each share, the money paid in amounted to only $25,010.

The letters patent were issued Sept. 20, 1847, and the election of officers on Oct. 21, 1847, at Easton, in the law office of James M. Porter, Esq., resulted as follows:

President, James M. Porter.

Managers.

Dudley S. Gregory.	Daniel McIntyre.
John S. Dorsey.	Edward R. Biddle.
John P. Jackson.	John N. Hutchison, Sec.

These officers were continued in 1848, 1849, and 1850; and in the year 1850, during the last three months, the first survey was made by Roswell B. Mason along the Lehigh river from Easton to Mahoning creek. When the construction was about to be begun, the canal commissioners in behalf of the canal inquired carefully as to whether or not it might or would be injured. They reported on Mar. 10, 1851, that it would not, and on that day the work was started on the first 16 miles from the Delaware river to a point near Allentown, under the direction of Dr. Jesse Samuels, civil engineer, of Allentown.

The following land-owners in Lehigh county, near Allentown, released their claims for damages for a nominal consideration on March 1, 1851:

Stephen Rhoads.	John Moore.
Peter Newhard.	Abraham Newhard.
Adam Hecker.	George R. Boyd.
John Yost.	Henry King.

The last-named, Henry King, was a prominent lawyer at Allentown and he secured the release.

On April 4, 1851, Asa Packer became identified with the enterprise, and in October following secured a large amount of the original stock and inaugurated earnest movements towards the construction of the road. A year afterward Packer submitted a proposition to build that portion from Mauch Chunk to Easton for a certain price to be paid in bonds and stocks of the company which was accepted; and about that time Robert H. Sayre was appointed the chief engineer.

On Jan. 7, 1853, the name of the company was changed to the Lehigh Valley R. R. Co.

The construction of the railroad was completed by Sept. 24, 1855, and then it was accepted by the company from the contractor, Asa Packer.

In 1856, the office was removed from Easton to Philadelphia. James M. Porter had been the president till then, but this action obliged him to decline a re-election on account of his large legal practice.

The railroad at once became an avenue of great importance to the public by establishing connections with Philadelphia through the North Pennsylvania R. R. and Belvidere Delaware R. R., and with New York through the Central R. R. of New Jersey, and with the West through the Catawissa R. R., and the Williamsport and Elmira R. R. Although a great many passengers are carried annually, the transportation of coal is the chief source of profitable remuneration.

The length in the county is 23 miles, passing through the following districts: Washington, Slatington, North Whitehall, Whitehall, Coplay, Allentown and Salisbury; and the following stations were established:

Allentown.	Laury's.
Fullerton.	Treichler.
Catasauqua.	Rockdale.
Hokendauqua.	Slatington.
Coplay.	Lehigh Gap.
Cementon.

A superior, attractive, and commodious brick station was built in 1890 at Hamilton, Walnut, and Jordan streets, to take the place of the old station about 1,000 feet south of it, still standing and used for railroad purposes.

Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R.—The second railroad constructed in the county was that extending from the Lehigh Valley R. R. on the west bank of the river opposite Catasauqua by way of Walbert's, Trexlertown, and Alburdis, to Red Lion in Longswamp township, Berks county, not reaching Fogelsville within two miles.

An Act was first passed April 5, 1853 for the construction of a plank road from Catasauqua to Fogelsville; but this was so amended by an Act passed April 20, 1854 as to allow a railroad to be constructed instead of a plank road, if thought best; and in 1856 the Act was amended, allowing the road to be extended into Berks county. During 1856 and 1857 the railroad was built for a distance of nine miles from the Catasauqua Station on the L. V. R. R. at a cost of $260,000, which was paid by the Crane Iron Co., and the Thomas Iron Co., interested in iron furnaces and iron-ore mines reached by the railroad. In 1860 it was extended to Trexlertown and afterward to Alburdis on the East Penn. R. R. and to Rittenhouse Gap in Berks county, a total length of 17 miles, in Lehigh county, 16 miles.

A remarkable iron bridge was erected along the railroad across the Jordan creek, 1,165 feet long, an extended description appearing in the narrative of South Whitehall township, in this publication, under the head of "Iron Bridge."

The stations in the county, southwardly, are Mickle's, Seiple, Guth, Walbert, Chapman, Trexlertown, Spring creek, and Alburdis. It has become a part of the P. & R. R. Co. system.

East Penn. Railroad.—In 1856 an Act was passed incorporating the Reading and Lehigh Railroad Co., for the purpose of constructing a railroad from a point near the junction of the Lebanon Valley R. R. with the P. & R. R. to any point on the Lehigh Valley R. R., either in Lehigh county or Northampton. The name was changed to East Penn. Railroad Co. by Act of April 21, 1857.

The railroad was constructed to a point on the L. V. R. R. called East Penn Junction, half a mile south of Allentown, 36 miles from Reading, during the years 1857, 1858, and 1859, and completed May 11, 1859, when the regular trains began to run daily.

The length of the railroad in Lehigh county is 13 miles; and the stations are, southwardly, Allentown, Emaus, Macungie, and Alburtis.

A "Union station," handsome and convenient, was built at Hamilton and Race streets and is maintained by the Central R. R. Co. of N. J., and the P. & R. R. Co.

Ironton Railroad.—A company was formed in 1859 for constructing a short railroad from Coplay on the L. V. R. R. through Whitehall township to Ironton in North Whitehall so as to reach valuable iron-ore beds in that vicinity. A charter was obtained on March 4th, the work of construction was begun shortly afterward, and the road was completed in 1860, at a cost of $70,000. In 1882, the Thomas Iron Co. became the sole owner, and it has continued to be until now. From the beginning until 1882, Eli J. Saeger was president of the company.

The Siegersville Branch was constructed to Siegersville and Orefield, over three miles long, in 1861, and was operated with the railroad until the mining operations were discontinued there twenty years ago.

The first cement works was established along this railroad in 1884; and within twenty years, the industry came to be so extensively developed that ten large plants were put up along the line, with an aggregate annual capacity of 5,000,000 barrels. In 1903, the total tonnage, including cement, iron-ore, limestone, and coal, amounted to 585,667 tons. For many years, this railroad was the most profitable of any in the world in proportion to length and investment.

In 1898, a passenger service was established.

Slatington Branch of L. V. R. R.—During the year 1860 a short branch railroad was constructed from the L. V. R. R. at Slatington to Slatedale for the accommodation of the slate operations along the line. The Berks County R. R. was connected with this branch at Emerald in 1874, and the passenger and freight traffic is carried over it to Slatington, the company maintaining a separate station there.

Central R. R. of N. J.—The destructive flood of 1862 along the Lehigh river and the great damage to the Canal of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. led to the construction of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad on account of the injury to the property-holders through the obstructions placed there for purposes of navigation, and therefore the opposition to the re-building of the dams became so great it was believed that the restoration of the canal would not be undertaken. This opposition culminated in the passage of an Act on March 4, 1863, which prohibited the rebuilding of the dams on the Upper Lehigh, but in lieu thereof the Legislature granted the company a charter for a railroad from White Haven to Mauch Chunk; and in 1864 an Act was passed authorizing the railroad to be extended to Easton, there to connect with the New Jersey Central R. R.

Accordingly, this railroad was built along the east bank of the river in 1867, passing through Catasauqua and Hanover township, a distance of eight miles to Bethlehem, and operated by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., until 1871, when it was leased to the New Jersey Central R. R. Co., which has carried it on until the present time. The stations in the county are Catasauqua, Allentown, and Bethlehem Junction.

Berks County Railroad.—In 1871, a company was authorized to construct a railroad from a point on the Wilmington and Northern Railroad, several miles north of Birdsboro, through Reading and along the Maiden creek to a point (Emerald), near Slatington on the Branch of the L. V. R. R. It was constructed until 1874, and in 1876 it passed under the control of the P. & R. R. Co. The name has been changed to Schuylkill and Lehigh Branch.

It passes through the central portions of Lynn, Heidelberg, and Washington townships, from west to east, a length of seventeen miles in the county. The stations along the line eastward are Wanamaker, Jacksonville, Lynnport, Tripoli, Lochland, Germansville, Best, Emerald, and Slatington.

Perkiomen Railroad.—This line of railroad was first projected in 1850. In 1852 a charter was secured to construct a railroad from Norristown to Freemansburg, and in 1853, to extend it to Allentown. In 1854, the name was changed to the Norristown and Allentown R. R. Co., and in 1865 to the Perkiomen R. R. Co. Up to this time no work of importance was done; but soon after 1865 operations were commenced at Perkiomen Station on the P. & R. R., and the line was built to Pennsburg. In 1874, work was started at the northern end, and in the spring of 1876 the daily trains began to run to Allentown regularly.

The length of this railroad in the county is 9 miles to Emaus Jc., where it joins the East Penna

R. R., and on the way passes through Lower Milford and Upper Milford townships and the borough of Emaus. The stations are Hosensack, Zionsville, Dillinger, Vera Cruz and Emaus.

Projected Railroads.—A number of railroads were projected from an early time in the history of the county, which were never built.

In 1838, the Hamburg, Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton R. R. Co., was chartered by the legislature. The road was to have been extended by way of Kutztown. No attempt was made in its construction. In 1854, the Allentown R. R. Co. was incorporated to construct a railroad from Allentown to the P. & R. R. R. at any point between Reading and Port Clinton, and if not constructed by way of Kutztown, a branch should be built to that place. A large portion of the roadway was built but never completed, several hundred thousand dollars having been expended. The route of this proposed railroad (as appears by the county atlas of 1876) extended from Allentown westwardly through Salisbury, S. Whitehall, Lower Macungie, and Upper Macungie, by way of Dorneyville, Westcosville, Trexlertown, and Breinigsville. The abutments of two proposed bridges at Allentown can still be seen though erected nearly 60 years ago, one of them to have crossed the Little Lehigh near the outlet of Cedar creek, and the other Lehigh street at the northern terminus of the Coopersburg Pike; and the railroad was to have connected with the L. V. R. R. at the river.

TROLLEY LINES.

The establishment and successful operation of a street-railway system in the county-seat of Lehigh county quite naturally led to its extension into the several sections of the county for the accommodation of the people. Accordingly, all the outlying towns in every direction can now be conveniently reached at all times during the day from early morning to midnight. The several railways are as follows:

- North*, to Siegfried, by way of 6th street and 6th Ward through Fullerton and Catasauqua.
- East*, to Bethlehem and Easton, by way of Rittersville.
- South-east*, to South Bethlehem and Hellertown, by way of South Allentown.
- South-east*, to Norristown and Philadelphia, by way of Mountainville and Coopersburg.
- South*, to Macungie, by way of Mountainville, Waldheim Park and Emaus.
- North-west*, to Slatington, by way of Fairground, Clifford Park, Schnecksville, and Neffsville.

The following are extensions:

- North-east*, from Bethlehem to Nazareth.

North-west, from North Catasauqua to Hokendauqua, Coplay and Egypt.

West, from Egypt to Slatington line near Schnecksville, by way of Ormrod.

West, from Slatington to Emerald and Slate-dale.

The extensive and increasing travel on the trolley lines in the city of Allentown and radiating from this great industrial and social centre is shown by the published annual reports of the Lehigh Valley Transit Co. for the last three years:

	1911	1912	1913
Passenger Receipts, .	$1,141,138	$1,242,007	$1,431,395
Sale of Electric Power, etc.,	199,641	280,243	333,602
	$1,340,779	$1,522,250	$1,764,997
Operating Expenses,	592,458	650,079	740,280
Interest Taxes, etc.,	453,945	497,844	578,144
	$1,046,103	$1,147,923	$1,318,424
Surplus,	294,676	374,327	446,573
Deductions:
Discount on Bonds,	9,362	12,678	14,132
Dividend, Pref. St.	49,782	99,566	99,566
Deprec'n Reserve, .	106,149	117,360	141,660
	165,293	229,604	255,358
Net Surplus,	$129,383	$144,723	$191,215

The Allentown and Kutztown Traction Co. was organized in 1895, and merged in the Allentown and Reading Traction Co. in 1902; and since then the latter company has conducted passenger traffic between the two county seats. Dorney Park was established along the line in South Whitehall township, two miles southwest of Allentown.

COUNTY BRIDGES.

The following bridges have been erected and maintained across the Lehigh river at points above Allentown as far north as the Gap, those at Allentown being described in the narrative relating to the city:

Biery Bridge.—On March 5, 1824, an Act of Assembly was passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania to establish and maintain a toll bridge across the Lehigh river at Biery's-Port and in this behalf the following Commissioners were appointed to carry its provisions into effect by securing subscriptions of stock at $25 a share, viz.:

- Owen Rice, of Bethlehem.
- Jacob Blumer, of Northampton Borough.
- George Yundt, of South Whitehall.

Peter Ruch, of North Whitehall.
Frederick Biery and John Sterner, of Hanover.

The response in subscriptions was sufficient to encourage this necessary improvement, and in this behalf an election was held on July 24, 1824, for a president, four managers, and treasurer of the Company, which resulted as follows:

President—Owen Rice of Bethlehem.

Managers—Frederick Biery, Philip Faust, Charles D. Bishop, and George Helfridge.

Treasurer—Joseph Biery.

On the 26th of July, Jacob Blumer was appointed secretary of the Board.

Peter Miller agreed to grant as much land on the western or "Pennsylvania" shore of the river as the Board might deem necessary for the consideration of $10 and "free passage over the bridge for himself and his wife during their natural life-time"; and Frederick Biery agreed to grant sufficient land on the eastern or "Jersey" shore in consideration "that he, his family and sons, as well as those in his employ, should cross free for the term of 20 years."

The Board accepted these offers, and decided that the bridge should be built with two chains, and the passage-way should be 13 feet wide in the clear.

Peter Rumbel agreed to supply all the lumber at the following rates:

White Oak at $13 per 1,000 feet; Pine at $10; Hemlock at $9; Shingles at $7.50; Half-price boards at $5.

Jacob Blumer, the secretary, was also appointed to superintend the construction of the bridge.

The rates of toll were as follows:

For every Coach, Landau, Phaeton, or other pleasure carriage with 4 wheels; or every sleigh or sled drawn by 4 horses, 25 cents
For carriage with two horses, 18¾ cents
For every 4-horse wagon loaded, 25 cents
For single horse and rider, 6¼ cents
For every horse or mule, 4 cents
For every head of horned cattle, 2 cents
For foot passengers, 1 cent
For all carriages drawn wholly or in part by oxen, two oxen shall be estimated as one horse.
For carriage and 6 horses, 37½ cents; 5 horses, 31¼ cents; 3 horses, 20 cents.

The practice of granting passage by the year was common, the rates paid ranging from $1 to $4.50.

The shares of stock were regarded as of great value. The dividends were declared semi-annually, being from 75 cents to $1 per share.

When the Crane Iron Works started operations, the rate of toll was fixed at $3 for a weight not exceeding 15,000 tons.

The great freshet of 1841 swept away the bridge; but a similar chain bridge was immediately put up in its place.

The chains were anchored in stone foundations on both sides of the river; the ends, and the middle where the chains rested, were topped with a frame cover to protect them from the weather; and these tops at a distance looked like a fortress. The sides of the bridge were open. In the Lehigh Water Gap, there still remains a chain bridge which resembles the construction of the old Biery Bridge.

About 1850, this bridge was regarded as unsafe because it swung to and fro while a team passed over it. Therefore, steps were taken to erect another bridge in its place and the following notice was advertised in the newspapers and posted in the vicinity for the purpose of securing subscriptions of stock:

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with an Act of Assembly, incorporating a company to build a bridge over the river Lehigh under the name of "The President, Managers and Company of the Lehigh County Bridge at or near Biery's Mills", books for subscription of stock for said purpose will be opened on Monday, the 26th day of July, at the public house of Nathan Frederick in Biery's Port, to be kept open for three successive days, for 6 hours each day:

Joseph Laubach.
George Breinig.
Daniel Newhard.
Henry Kurtz.
David Eberhard.
June 24, 1852.

Peter Troxell.
Joshua Miller.
David Troxell.
James Gangewere.
Charles S. Bush.

Commissioners.

The bridge was removed in 1852 and a covered wooden bridge was erected in its place with trusses in the centre for support, and a double drive-way. The total cost was $14,954. It was destroyed by the great flood of 1862, but immediately rebuilt in the same style. The trusses however were at the ends, and there was only one drive-way. The total cost was $5,161. The dividends were about 12 per cent. per annum.

This bridge was maintained by the company until 1892, when it was purchased by the county authorities; then a new iron bridge was substituted at the joint cost of the county, the Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. and the A. & B. Rapid Transit Co., amounting to $19,000, which was paid as follows: County, $10,500; L. V. R. R. Co., $8,000; Rapid Transit Co., $500.

The trolley line from Allentown to the west end of the bridge, and from the east end to Siegfried, was built in 1891, and for thirteen months the passengers traveling to and fro walked across a temporary structure.

Crane Iron Co. Bridge.—About 1845, the Crane Iron Co. felt the necessity of a separate bridge for its use, because iron ore beds were discovered at different places in Whitehall and South Whitehall townships, and the hauling of the ore around by way of the Biery Bridge came to be considered as a serious item, and they therefore determined to erect a public bridge up the river half a mile above the Biery Bridge. But they found a statute of Pennsylvania in the way which interfered with their project, because it was too near the bridge mentioned, and the Legislature would not grant another charter which would disturb vested rights. To avoid this objection, they purchased land on both sides of the river where the bridge was desired, and erected a private bridge for themselves. But the traveling public soon discovered that this bridge could be used free from any charges of toll, and it came to be used therefore as a general highway; indeed, at times the teams became so numerous that they extended in a continuous row from the entrance of the Fairview Cemetery across the bridge to the Company's office.

A statute provided that as soon as the Crane Iron Co. acquired the majority of the stock of the Biery Bridge Co., they could then charge toll for passing over their private bridge.

When the Catasauqua & Fogelsville R. R. was constructed in 1857, this bridge was strengthened so that the company could lay a railroad track on it, and haul cars loaded with iron ore over it, drawn by a small locomotive, to their works. This engine was named "Hercules." The bridge was swept away by the flood of 1862, and a covered wooden bridge was immediately erected in its place. Later an iron bridge was substituted by the company.

Pine St. Bridge.—In 1906-07, the county authorities erected a superior iron bridge across the river, a short distance above the Crane Iron Co. Bridge, at Pine street, to facilitate intercommunication between Catasauqua and West Catasauqua. This bridge had been agitated for many years, but it was realized at last. It is now much appreciated for its great utility. The abutment at the eastern end was constructed at the cost of the borough of Catasauqua, and that at the western end by the township of Whitehall.

Hokendauqua Bridge.—This is an iron structure, spanning the Lehigh river and connecting Hokendauqua with North Catasauqua, which was placed there at the joint expense of Lehigh and Northampton counties. The papers relating to its establishment could not be found in the Quarter Sessions' office.

Coplay Bridge.—At the outlet of the Hokendauqua creek in the Lehigh river, a covered wooden two-span bridge, 490 feet long, was erected across the river in 1855, pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Assembly passed April 5, 1855. Upon its completion a charter was issued to the Hokendauqua Bridge Co., dated April 1, 1856, which included the names of the stockholders, and the number of shares taken by each, as follows:

Solomon Baer,	20	Stephen Balliet,	8
Adam Laubach,	10	Charles Ritter,	4
Edward Schreiber,	20	J. B. Clement,	4
John Laubach,	10	R. S. Levan,	8
David Fretz,	4	Aaron Bailliet,	8
Jacob Schreiber,	10	Lewis A. Buckley,	4
Samuel Laubach,	20	Adam Johnson,	4
Jacob Beil,	10	O. L. Schreiber,	4
Peter Beil,	6	Joseph Brown,	8
John Engler,	6	Caroline Hemphill, ..	4
Joseph Laubach,	5	Elizabeth Schwartz, .	4
George Kemmerer, ..	4	David Young,	4
Jacob Mickley,	4	George Schrader,	8
Reuben Young,	2	Daniel Rudolph,	4
Reuben Dewalt,	2	John Kleppinger,	2
Leslie Miller,	4	David Bliem,	2
Edward Stadler,	4

The name of the creek was naturally given to this bridge for identification.

The toll charged was similar to the rates for the other bridges across this river. It was in use until the flood of 1862 swept it away. But it was immediately rebuilt by the stockholders, who signed an agreement dated June 27, 1862, agreeing to contribute $20 a share. This rebuilt bridge has been maintained until the present time, and it was conducted as a toll bridge until it was declared free by the joint action of the two counties, Northampton and Lehigh, in 1892. The total cost to the county was $10,525.

It connects the two boroughs, Coplay and Northampton. It is one of the two covered wooden bridges still remaining across the river along the boundary line of Lehigh county.

Siegfried's Bridge (See Whitehall township).

Cherry-Ford Bridge.—In 1826, a company was formed for building a bridge across the Lehigh at Cherry-Ford, then called "Kuntz's Ford, (a mile and a half north of Laury's), but the project failed. A second effort was made in 1882 to secure a bridge at this point, which resulted shortly after in the erection of the present iron bridge.

Slatington Bridge.—The bridge across the river, connecting Slatington and Walnutport, was erected in 1854 by a stock-company, called the Slatington Bridge Co., at a cost of $12,000. It was a covered wooden structure, and toll was charged until 1893, when it was purchased jointly by Lehigh and Northampton counties. In 1911, it was torn down, and a substantial iron bridge was put up in its stead. It was swept away by the flood of 1862 and immediately rebuilt.

Lehigh Gap Bridge.—A company was incorporated for the building of a bridge across the river at the Lehigh-gap on Feb. 14, 1825, by John D. Bauman (who owned a grist-mill on the eastern bank of the river), John Rice, Christopher Kern, and Dr. James Jameson. On Mar. 18, 1826, the name adopted was the Lehigh Water-Gap Bridge Co. Thirty-five citizens subscribed for stock amounting to $7,500. A chain bridge was erected in that year, a portion of the iron having been manufactured at Little-Gap, and another at the Maria Furnace near Weissport. It has continued as a toll-bridge from that time until now, nearly 90 years. It was never swept away by any of the floods passing down the river, but it was damaged by the floods of 1841, 1857, and 1862.

In Gordon's "Gazetteer of Penna" (1832) mention is made of an unfinished bridge at this point which was begun in 1818, and washed away by high-water in April, 1819.

Railroad Bridges.—A number of bridges have been placed across the river by railroad companies for the accommodation of their traffic:

A superior and attractive, elevated iron structure at the gap by the Lehigh and New England R. R. Co.

An iron structure at Slatington to form a connection with the L. V. R. R., by the L. & N. E. R. R.

An iron structure at Catasauqua by the Crane Iron Co., to connect the furnace with the L. V. R. R. and the C. & F. R. R.

Two iron structures by the C. R. R. of N. J., one at the upper end of Allentown, and one at the lower end to connect that railroad directly with the city.

POST OFFICES.

The following post-offices have been established in Lehigh county. The table shows the time when established; also the changes and discontinuances:

Name.	Time.	Changed to	Discontinued, Etc.
Allentown,	Jan. 1, 1803.
Emaus,	Mar. 5, 1806.
Fogelsville,	Jan. 28, 1820.
Lynnville,	Feb. 2, 1820.
Jacksonville,	Feb. 4, 1820.
Trexlerstown,	July 26, 1821.
Stabler's,	Dec. 10, 1825,
North Whitehall,	Apr. 4, 1826,	Balliettsville, Mar. 7, 1876.	Aug. 28, 1849.
Macungie,	Sept. 19, 1827.
Fryburgh,	Nov. 27, 1827,	Coopersburg, June 25, 1832.
Rittersville,	Mar. 8, 1828,		June 30, 1899.
Lowhill,	Nov. 28, 1828,		Sept. 29, 1906.
Saegersville,	Dec. 18, 1828,	Germansville, Nov. 4, 1846,	Re-established.
South Whitehall,	Apr. 26, 1830,	Walbert's, Oct. 24, 1895.
Weissenberg,	June 28, 1830,	Hynemansville, Apr. 17, 1848, ...	Re-establd. Mar. 20, 1850.
Lowhill Port,	Jan. 7, 1831,	Claussville, Feb. 6, 1834.
New Tripoli,	Jan. 7, 1831.
Coopersburg,	June 25, 1832,	Centre Valley, June 9, 1849,	Re-estbd. Feb. 8, 1850.
Kern's Mill,	Feb. 8, 1833,	Eisenhart, Dec. 19, 1849,	Nov. 17, 1836; re-estd. Feb. 3, 1837.
Somerville,	Feb. 8, 1833,	Kern's Mill, Feb. 3, 1837.
Claussville,	Feb. 6, 1834.
Heidelberg,	July 2, 1836,		July 11, 1837.
Breinigsville,	Mar. 29, 1839.
Seiberlingsville,	Feb. 2, 1841.
Saucon Valley,	Aug. 25, 1841,		July 16, 1861.
Friedensville,	Feb. 16, 1843,		Mar. 15, 1910.
Craneville,	July 24, 1844,	Catasauqua, Aug. 10, 1846.
Wescosville,	Dec. 3, 1845.
Ruchsville,	July 16, 1846,	Mechanicsboro, Sept. 4, 1849, ...	Re-estd. June 21, 1853.
Catasauqua,	Aug. 10, 1846,	From Craneville.
Germansville,	Nov. 4, 1846,	Saegersville, July 20, 1849,	Re-estd. 1852-62; Re-estd. 1884.
Hynemansville,	April 17, 1848,	From Weissenberg.
Centre Valley,	June 9, 1849,	From Coopersburg.
Hosensack,	Aug. 29, 1849.
Eisenhart,	Dec. 19, 1849,	From Kern's Mill, Changed to Orefield.
Orefield,	Jan. 8, 1850,	From Eisenhart.
Dillingersville,	Aug. 28, 1851,		Aug. 15, 1906.
Slatington,	Sept. 23, 1851.
Shimersville,	Jan. 30, 1854,	From Zionsville.
Shoenersville,	May 29, 1854,		Dec. 31, 1907.
Schnecksville,	July 11, 1855.
Slatedale,	Mar. 4, 1856,		Mar. 27, 1857; Re-estd. June 8, 1883.
Laury's Station,	July 17, 1856.
Whitehall Station,	July 23, 1856,	Siegfried's Bridge (Northampton Co.), March 16, 1860,	Re-estd. as Cementon, Feb. 27, 1891.
Hensingersville,	May 13, 1858,	Alburtis, Feb. 27, 1868.
Steinsville,	May 21, 1858.
Lyon Valley,	May 28, 1858.
Ruppsville,	June 10, 1858,	Litzenberg, May 10, 1862.
Lehigh Valley,	July 17, 1858,	Rockdale, Mar. 22, 1871.
Neffs,	June 25, 1860.

CHAPTER XVIII.

CENSUS OF THE COUNTY.

At the time of the erection of Northampton county in 1752, the population was about 5,900. The population of Upper Saucon at that time was about 650; Milford township about 700; and Macungie township about 650. The population of the territory later embraced in the townships of Whitehall, Salisbury, Weisenberg, Lowhill, Lynn, and Heidelberg, was about 800; and that of Allen township, out of which Hanover township was erected in 1798, about 300. From these figures, the population of the territory now included in Lehigh county in 1752 can be safely estimated at about 2,900.

In 1790, when the first census was taken, the population of this section of Northampton county, now Lehigh county, was about 8,900. The following table gives the population in detail with the exception of Hanover township, then included in Allen township.

Townships.	No. of heads of families.	Free white males of 16 yrs. up, inc. heads of fam.	Free white males under 16 years.	Free white fem. inc. heads of families.	Other free persons.	Slaves.	Total.
Heidelberg,	166	244	256	465			965
Lowhill,	75	97	113	206	1		417
Lynn,	169	225	308	486			1019
Macungie,	210	335	330	596		1	1263
Salisbury,	170	257	248	502			1007
U. Milford,	202	275	279	597			1151
U. Saucon,	145	201	257	387			845
Weisenberg,	101	133	185	296	1		615
Whitehall,	203	266	394	593			1253
	1441	2033	2370	4128	3	1	8535

The one slave was owned by Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk, of Macungie.

The following table gives the population of the townships now constituting Lehigh county in 1800:

	Males.					Total.
	Under 10.	10 to 16.	16 to 26.	26 to 45.	Above 45.
Hanover,	147	41	67	83	31	369
Heidelberg,	230	96	111	116	73	626
Lowhill,	113	36	38	51	32	270
Lynn,	203	89	134	88	78	592
U. Milford,	295	128	119	153	107	802
Macungie,	279	139	177	195	106	896
Salisbury,	118	38	54	65	45	320
U. Saucon,	148	93	118	93	77	529
Weisenberg,	154	50	76	82	38	400
Whitehall,	366	167	195	176	130	1034
Allentown,	78	46	76	46	40	286
	2131	923	1165	1148	757	6124

	Females.						Total.	Colored.	Slaves.	Total.
	Under 10.	10 to 16.	16 to 26.	26 to 45.	Above 45.	Total.
Hanover,	160	37	65	77	25	364	2	1	736
Heidelberg, ..	233	84	113	112	70	612			1238
Lowhill,	120	36	32	50	36	274	1		545
Lynn,	230	75	110	85	72	572			1164
U. Milford,	290	118	127	164	111	810			1617
Macungie,	356	138	146	188	115	943	5	5	1844
Salisbury,	114	40	54	63	45	316	3		638
U. Saucon,	157	64	111	90	70	492	2	3	1024
Weisenberg, ..	146	37	62	72	38	355			755
Whitehall,	374	120	204	177	123	998			2032
Allentown, ..	85	48	57	48	46	284	3		573
	2265	797	1081	1126	751	6020	21	1	12166

CENSUS OF LEHIGH COUNTY, 1790-1910.

City.	Formed	1790	1800	1810	1820	1830	1840	1850	1860	1870	1880	1890	1900	1910
Allentown, .	1762	486	573	710	1,132	1,757	2,493	3,703	8,025	13,884	18,063	25,228	35,416	51,913
Boroughs.
Catasauqua, .	1852								1,653	2,853	3,065	3,704	3,963	5,250
Coopersburg, .	1879										392	454	556	683
Coplay,	1860									728	774	880	1,581	2,670
Emaus,	1859								277	477	847	883	1,468	3,501
Fountain Hill, .	1892												1,214	1,388
Macungie,	1857								410	486	701	644	692	772
Slatington, .	1864									1,508	1,634	2,716	3,773	4,454
S. Allentown, .	1909													1,814
W. Bethlehem, .	1880										1,414	2,759	3,465	4,472
									2,340	6,052	8,827	12,040	16,712	25,004

Townships.	Formed	1790	1800	1810	1820	1830	1840	1850	1860	1870	1880	1890	1900	1910
Hanover,	1798	736	850	866	1,102	1,478	1,762	2,380	2,804	3,813	2,863	3,324	3,907
Heidelberg,	1752	965	1,238	1,433	1,900	2,238	2,308	1,589	1,369	1,441	1,567	1,437	1,411	1,238
Lowhill,	1753	417	545	632	703	808	854	1,021	1,043	997	914	763	715	709
Lynn,	1753	1,019	1,164	1,497	1,664	1,747	1,895	1,997	2,321	2,375	2,678	2,635	2,366	2,178
Macungie, L., ..	1743	1,263	1,844	2,420	2,802	3,323	1,756	3,036	3,438	3,061	3,952	3,657	2,920	2,893
Macungie, U., ..
Milford, L., ..	1738	1,151	1,617	2,033	2,416	2,829	3,081	1,236	1,448	1,505	1,563	1,424	1,233	1,089
Milford, U., ..
Salisbury,	1753	1,007	638	933	1,165	1,342	1,488	1,884	2,043	2,487	3,078	4,100	4,582	2,828
Saucon, U.	1742	845	1,024	1,456	1,642	1,905	2,072	2,372	2,043	3,487	3,228	2,832	3,096	2,415
Washington, ..	1847	1,862	2,047	2,464	2,517	2,668	3,477	3,477
Weisenberg, ...	1753	615	755	1,046	1,175	1,285	1,427	1,726	1,823	1,644	1,627	1,514	1,366	1,222
Whitehall,	1753	1,253	2,032	2,551	3,318	3,929	5,514	7,935	9,350
Whitehall, N., ..	1810	1,807	2,008	2,234	2,946	3,575	4,170	3,245	2,847	3,280	3,580
Whitehall, S., ..	1810	1,623	1,952	2,290	2,913	4,085	2,748	2,884	2,204	2,472	2,497
.....	11,593	14,851	17,763	20,499	23,294	28,176	33,388	36,860	39,079	39,363	41,765	41,915
Lehigh County, ..	1812	8,535	12,166	15,561	18,895	22,256	25,787	32,479	43,753	56,796	65,969	76,631	93,893	118,832

Estimated area of county in 1840, by U. S. census:

Districts.	Length in miles.	Breadth in miles.	Estimated acres.
Hanover,	5	4	9,600
Heidelberg,	8	4	30,080
Lowhill,	4 1/2	4	7,040
Lynn,	8	6 3/4	33,920
Macungie,	8	5 3/4	29,440
Salisbury,	7 1/2	4	15,360
Upper Milford,	6	5 1/2	22,400
Upper Saucon,	5 1/2	5	15,360
Weisenberg,	6 1/2	5 1/2	21,120
Whitehall, N.,	8	7	21,120
Whitehall, S.,	7	6	18,560
Northampton,
Northampton Bor.,

Length of county, 28 miles; width, 15 miles.
 Area in miles, 389.
 Area in acres, 248,960.

In 1832 there were 2 furnaces, 3 forges, 28 saw-mills, 46 grist-mills, 5 fulling-mills, 6 clover-mills, 2 oil-mills, 33 stores, 40 taverns.

The following statement shows persons employed in 1840 in the avocations named:

Mining,	50
Agriculture,	2,983
Commerce,	101
Manufacturers,	2,427
Navigation Canal,	17
Professions,	73

The following exhibits shows the situation of industrial affairs in Lehigh county in 1840:

One furnace, produced, tons,	600
One forge produced, tons,	3,000
Employees,	93
Investment,	$20,500
Employees, marble works,	10
Capital,	$1,000
Employees, machinery,	29
Capital,	$23,905
Small arms made,	465

Employees,	5
Employees, brick, etc.,	44
product,	$61,322
Fulling-mills,	2
Woolen-mills,	6
Employees,	17
Capital,	$7,500
Stores,	71
Lumber yards,	6
Grist-mills,	62
Saw-mills,	48
Oil-mills,	7
Tobacco employed,	38
Invested,	$6,025
Tanneries,	29
Employees,	$51,690
Invested,	119
Distilleries,	84,470
Gallons,	5
Employees,	3
Powder-mills,	104
Employees,	$4,500
Invested,	1
Potteries,	1
Employees,	1
Invested,	$50
Paper factory,	1
Employees,	6
Invested,	$7,000
Total invested in manufacturers,	$292,190

The following particulars relate to agriculture in the county in 1840:

Horses, 6,139.
Cattle, 18,136.
Sheep, 13,448.
Swine, 32,625.
Wheat, 176,468 bushels.
Barley, 3,018 bushels.
Oats, 202,015 bushels.
Rye, 301,830 bushels.
Buckwheat, 52,338 bushels.
Corn, 207,098 bushels.
Potatoes, 116,061 bushels.
Hay, 26,302 tons.
Tobacco, 4,000 pounds.
Dairy, $75,809.
Orchard, $30,008.

County statistics from U. S. census in 1910:

Land area acres,	220,160	$
Farmers, native,	3,216
Farmers, foreign-born, white,	79
Farms by owners,	2,190
Value of farms,		8,964,731
Farms by tenant,	998
Value of farms,		7,435,726
Farms by managers,	107
Value of farms,		1,231,501
Farm acreage,	191,657
Average acreage per farm,	58.2
Improved acreage,	165,662
Woodland acreage,	18,206
Unimproved land,	7,789

CENSUS OF THE COUNTY.

387

Average improved acreage per farm,	50.3
Buildings,		7,830,265
Implements and machines,		1,416,313
Domestic animals, etc.,
Cattle,	18,053	650,105
Horses,	8,723	1,155,945
Mules,	282	36,788
Swine,	15,203	124,021
Sheep,	543	2,546
Poultry,	233,497	142,945
Bees (colonies),	876	3,521
Field crops:
Corn, acres,	23,261
Corn, bushels,	717,987	394,893
Oats, acres,	17,352
Oats, bushels,	391,368	136,979
Wheat, acres,	28,995
Wheat, bushels,	518,759	492,821
Buckwheat, acres,	307
Buckwheat, bushels,	5,057	3,540
Rye, acres,	15,248
Rye, bushels,	228,955	171,716
Potatoes, acres,	12,026
Potatoes, bushels,	1,157,733	463,093
Hay forage, acres,	37,305
Hay forage, tons,	42,537	680,592

Coopersburg,	265	415,698	439,843
Coplay,	937	792,565	76,764
Emaus,	1,422	1,778,754	383,854
Fountain Hill,	528	875,230	243,017
Macungie,	408	424,171	164,457
Slatington,	1,605	1,624,436	340,305
S. Allentown,	963	684,010	33,611
W. Bethlehem,	2,015	2,778,145	471,260
	$10,200	$12,434,268	$3,369,463
Townships.
Hanover,	1,934	1,536,075	181,310
Heidelberg,	461	711,267	287,180
Lowhill,	243	365,330	68,445
Lynn,	795	1,219,970	391,779
Macungie, L.,	788	1,328,604	229,321
Macungie, U.,	823	1,969,708	285,737
Milford, L.,	448	706,921	149,181
Milford, U.,	756	780,994	229,829
Salisbury,	1,767	1,670,380	187,674
Saucon, U.,	1,054	1,448,836	249,246
Washington,	1,151	1,216,579	245,367
Weisenberg,	473	624,293	299,083
Whitehall,	2,733	4,850,851	618,887
Whitehall, N.,	982	2,474,134	479,095
Whitehall, S.,	1,086	1,987,034	359,812
	$15,494	$22,886,986	$4,324,946
Total of county,	$50,117	$85,405,104	$20,686,154

Property valuation of county in 1913:

	Taxables.	Real and personal property.	Money at interest.
City.
Allentown,	$24,423	$50,083,850	$12,991,745
Boroughs.
Alburtis,	252	317,349	38,712
Catasauqua,	1,805	2,743,910	1,170,640

State tax from Allentown, $51,967; from boroughs, $13,478; from townships, $17,300; total from county, $82,745; county debt in 1913, $307,000.

Statement of land, horses, and cattle of county in 1913, prepared by the county commissioners and reported to state authorities:

	Cleared Land.	Timber Land.	Horses, etc.	Value of Horses, etc.	Cattle, etc.	Value of Cattle, etc.
Hanover,	5,817	28	371	$21,930	386	$12,480
Heidelberg,	12,021	2,774	477	43,060	335	9,187
Lowhill,	8,300	351	265	21,625	239	9,090
Lynn,	23,909	820	699	42,705	622	15,555
Macungie, L.,	22,147	579	622	52,835	977	22,410
Macungie, U.,	14,203	282	739	45,540	713	21,515
Milford, L.,	11,183	711	504	43,295	584	17,605
Milford, U.,	10,975	517	462	32,895	565	12,860
Salisbury,	9,257	1,133	462	34,515	420	12,160
Saucon, W.,	14,869	1,081	684	70,985	780	31,110
Washington,	13,869	1,416	444	36,720	323	8,090
Weisenberg,	14,334	1,180	563	28,275	584	14,600
Whitehall,	6,933	88	477	30,660	348	10,440
Whitehall, N.,	15,798	474	642	39,343	563	14,470
Whitehall, S.,	11,543	206	635	45,925	652	19,554
Total,	194,978	11,640	8,046	$590,308	8,092	$231,126
Total, Boroughs,			937	$64,545	139	$5,020
Total, Allentown,			1,498	$130,020	57	$1,580

CHAPTER XIX.

ALLENTOWN FROM 1762 TO 1811.

The site now occupied by the city of Allentown was a wilderness of scrub oak 175 years ago, where the neighboring tribes of red men hunted the deer, grouse and other game. The first conveyance of the land was by a warrant dated at London, May 18, 1732, to Thomas Penn, for five thousand acres at a yearly quitrent of one shilling sterling for each hundred acres. Penn assigned the warrant on the same date to Joseph Turner, a merchant of Philadelphia, and on September 10, 1735, Turner assigned the warrant to William Allen, his partner in business. Portions of this tract were surveyed from time to time, ranging in date from October 9, 1735, to October 28, 1740. The tract upon which the town of Allentown was subsequently laid out was surveyed November 23, 1736.

A draft of several tracts of land in the forks of the Delaware river, in and near the west branch of that river, as the Lehigh river was then commonly called, drawn by Benjamin Eastburn, in 1740, shows William Allen as the owner of a tract of 765 acres on the west bank of the river where the little Lehigh creek flows into it, and of two tracts of 500 acres each adjoining on the south. James Bingham is given as the owner of 500 acres adjoining on the west, and Caspar Wistar, of 500 acres on the east bank, opposite the island. Adjoining Wistar's tract on the north, John Page is shown as the owner of two tracts, one along the Lehigh of 2,723 acres and another adjoining of 1,500 acres.

North of this, along the Hokendauqua creek, were two more tracts belonging to William Allen, of 1,800 and 1,426 acres respectively. East of these was a tract of 1,000 acres owned by Jeremiah Langhorne and William Allen, and one of 500 acres owned by Caspar Wistar.

The first building erected on the tracts which now are included in the area of Allentown was a log house built by direction of William Allen near the western bank of the Jordan creek. In the year 1753, David Schultz surveyed a road from Easton to Reading which passed through Allen's land, on the draft of which is marked, "William Allen's house," located north of the road and west of the Jordan creek. The course of the road from the east bank of the Lehigh was as follows: "Down the river south 12 degrees, east 46 perches to the ford, then across the river south 75 degrees west, computed 30 perches upon the island, north 28 degrees, west 36 perches and 10 perches more, the breadth of the western stream; thence south 52 degrees, west 142 perches to the Jordan in Mr. William Allen's land; south 73 degrees, west 56 perches, south 73 degrees, west 110 perches, north 85 degrees, west 150 perches, south 75 degrees, west 60 perches, and south 70 degrees, west 140 perches, to the western line of Mr. Allen's land; south 70 degrees, west 72 perches to a black oak, south 88 degrees, west 64 perches to the Cedar creek and township line of Salisbury and Whitehall and south 70 degrees, west 44 perches (18 miles from Easton) to near John Griesemer's, etc." Union and Jackson streets are links in this old time road, over which many thousands of emigrants travelled on their way to the West.

This building, which Mr. Allen called his fishing place, was occasionally visited by the proprietor and his brother-in-law, Colonial Governor James Hamilton and John Penn, with other friends, who spent their time fishing in the Jordan and Little Lehigh, which abounded in trout, and in hunting the ruffed grouse and other game in the vicinity. The foundations of this house were still in existence when Jordan street was opened, about 1845, and were then removed.

In 1762 Mr. Allen decided to lay out a town upon his land and the residents of Whitehall township learning this, petitioned the court for a road to the new town, viz: "To the Worshipful the Justices of the County Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, held at Easton, March Sessions, A. D. 1762. The petition of divers inhabitants of Whitehall Township Sheweth: That your petitioners are in great want of a road to lead from Jacob Collier's mill to a new Town to be erected on part of a Tract of Land belonging to the Honorable William Allen and thence the nearest and best way to the King's Highway leading from Philadelphia to Bethlehem. Your Petitioners therefore pray that your Worships will be pleased to appoint six proper persons who are no ways interested in the said Road to view and if they shall see occasion to lay the same out for a publick road and your Petitioners shall ever Pray, etc." This pe-

W. Surveyed by Order of William Allen Esq. 1762

Great Spring

[Endorsed: map of Allentown 1762]

Freeman's

tion was endorsed: "Petition of the Township of Whitehall for a Road through the new Town, March, 1762." William Craig, Stophel Waggoner, John Tool, Paul Balliet, Thomas Hunsicker, and George Rex were appointed viewers.

The viewers reported June 22, 1762, that they had viewed and laid out "a certain road leading from Whitehall township to the new town called Northampton, and from thence by a marked black oak sapling standing by the road that leads from Salisbury to Upper Saucon township, close by the line of said township; beginning at a road that leads from Trucker's Mill to Philadelphia, then south. . . . to Gottfried Knauss'; thence south to Jordan Creek; thence down said section of the city between Fourth and Tenth and Union and Liberty streets. The streets located were Margaret (now Fifth), William (now Sixth), Allen (now Seventh), James (now Eighth), and Ann (now Ninth), running north and south, and Gordon, Chew, Turner, Andrew (now Linden), Hamilton, and John (now Walnut), running east and west. These streets, including the sidewalks, were all sixty feet in width, except Allen, the main street, and Hamilton, which were eighty feet in width. At the junction of Allen and Hamilton streets was located a public square which extended forty feet into the eight lots adjacent, making a rectangle 320 feet long and 160 feet wide. On the plan, east of the corner of Fourth and Union streets, creek, south across said creek; thence east to Northampton town; thence down Allen street; thence north to a corner; thence south to Little Lehigh, etc."

THE RHOADS HOUSE, BUILT IN 1762.

Allentown was laid out in 1762 by direction of Chief Justice William Allen and named Northampton Town. A reproduction of the original plan of the city is shown in connection with this chapter. The original is owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, to whom it was presented by Brinton Coxe, Esq., on Sept. 13, 1886. This plan shows that the town covered forty-two blocks, and it consisted of 756 lots, each (with a few exceptions) sixty feet in width and 230 feet in depth, and comprised that is marked a house with the name, "Freeman's." This was a tenant house which was occupied at this time by Richard Freeman, who farmed a portion of Allen's land.

Allen street was the main thoroughfare, a link in the road from the Blue mountains south. Hamilton street was named in honor of Governor James Hamilton, Judge Allen's brother-in-law. Andrew, John, Margaret, James, William, and Ann were named after his children; Gordon, after Sir Patrick Gordon, a former colonial governor; Chew, after Benjamin Chew, later Chief Justice, and Turner, after Joseph Turner, Allen's partner.

After the town site was surveyed and platted, building operations began at once. Several men from the neighboring townships selected lots and commenced the erection of homes. Colonel James Burd wrote in a letter to Mr. Allen, dated Lancaster, June 28, 1762, "I had a letter the other day from Mr. Klotz, and he informs me that my house goes very well and that there is ten houses more building in Northampton."

As an illustration of the cost of building in colonial times the account (in the writer's possession) of the cost of the stone house built by Peter Rhoads in 1762 and 1763, shown on the plan as on lot No. 348, still standing at 107 and 109 North Seventh street, will prove interesting.

	£	s	d
Seventeen loads stone at 1 s. and 1-6,	1	3	0
Hauling stones, Daniel Horlacher, 2 days,	1	0	6
Hauling stones,	1	19	0
Boards and carriage,	8	10	6
Boards bought of Conrad Colp,	0	5	0
Two hundred feet boards,	1	1	0
Shingles and carriage,	3	5	0
Sawmiller,	0	12	6
Mason's work, Jacob Brang, 3½ days at 4-6, ...	0	15	9
Mason's work, Philip Kugeler, 3½ days at 4-6, ..	0	15	9
James Preston,	1	8	0
Mason's work,	4	5	0
Carpenter's work,	9	0	0
Joiner's work,	8	14	6
Work by Anthony Meese,	3	4	3
Work by Peter Yund, 4 days at 2-6,	0	10	0
Work by Daniel Rhoads,	0	10	0
Work by Caspar Sterner, 3 days at 2-3,	0	6	9
Lime bought of Henry Funk,	0	10	0
Lime bought of David Deshler,	0	6	0
Nails, 12 lbs. at 9d.,	0	9	0
Nails, 8 lbs.,	0	6	0
Nails, 30 lbs. at 14d, bought of Blass Boyer,	1	15	0
Nails, 17 lbs., bought at Bethlehem,	0	10	10
Carriage, Jacob Kohler, Jr.,	0	18	11
Paid David Deshler for porting, etc.,	2	8	1
Paid Jacob Moor, hauling water,	0	12	2
Paid 7 qts. rum of Peter Troxell,	0	7	0
Beef of Adam Heberly,	0	2	5
Beef and butter of Blonk,	0	10	10
Sundry cookery,	0	6	9
Glass and putty,	1	9	10
Lock, hinges and iron work,	2	14	0
Stove,	3	6	0
Sundries,	9	7	8
Stable,	3	10	0
Total cost,	£77	5	0

At the present day the average home on the outskirts of the city costs $4,000, a great increase in cost when compared with less than $400.00, 150 years ago.

The year 1762 was one of great drought. From May to September no rain fell. Rye was harvested in June and corn in August, as life was gone and it was useless to wait longer. The grass was withered by August 1st, and the grain withered so that it scarcely yielded as much as was put into the ground.

Notwithstanding the dry weather the infant town received additions and in the assessment list of Salisbury township for 1762, in which Allentown was included, there are the names of thirteen persons who were assessed as residents of the town. Their names and amount of assessment are as follows:

Abel, Leonard,	£7	Lauer, George,	£4
Brenner, Simon,	6	Moor, Jacob,	5
Derr, John Martin,	4	Miller, Peter,	4
Deshler, David,	9	Rinker, Abraham,	8
Froelich, Martin,	7	Shwab, Peter,	4
Lyendecker, Simon,	5	Shnepf, George,	4
		Wolf, George,	8

The tax list for 1763 shows sixteen taxables, viz:

Abel, Leonard,	£1	Miller, Peter,	£1
Brenner, Simon,	1	Nunemaker, Daniel,	1
Derr, Martin,	1	Rinker, Abraham,	2
Deshler, David,	3	Roth, Peter,	2
Froelich, Martin,	2	Shwab, Peter,	1
Lyendecker, Simon,	2	Shnep, George,	1
Lauer, George,	1	Shreck, Nicholas,	1
For the house he lives in,	2	Wolf, George,	3
Moor, Jacob,	2

In 1763 the name Northampton appears for the first time in the tax lists. In the year 1764 the names of twenty-eight persons appear as taxables, an increase of twelve, viz:

Abel, Leonard,	£6	Leitdecker, Simon,	7
Brenner, Simon,	6	Miller, Peter,	8
Brang, Jacob,	6	Moll, John,	6
Derr, Martin,	9	Moor, Jacob,	9
Deshler, David,	30	Mordochay, Martin,	6
Fries, Simon,	4	Nunemacher, Daniel,	8
Froelich, Martin,	12	Rinker, Abraham,	8
Griesinger, Caspar,	6	Roth, Peter,	10
Hauck, Lawrence,	6	Savitz, Abraham,	6
Huber, Barthol,	8	Shackler, Frederick,	6
Klingsmith, Philip,	8	Shnepf, George,	6
Kugler, Philip,	7	Shwab, Peter,	8
Kuper, Frantz,	6	Titus, Tobias,	8
Lauer, George,	7	Wolf, George,	15

In the year 1765, the same names appear in the tax list with one exception, that of John Moll, and there were no additions to the number of inhabitants. The list for this year, as it contains the number of houses and other information, is here given.

NORTHAMPTON TOWN, 1765.

	Lots.	Houses.	Horses.	Cows.	Professions
Abel, Leonard,	1	1	1	1	0
Brenner, Simon, ..	1	1	0	1	1
Briningner, Caspar, .	1	1	0	1	0
Brang, Jacob,	2	2	1	1	1
Derr, Martin,	2	1	1	2	0
Deshler, David,	2	1	4	4	4
Fries, Simon,	1	1	0	1	1
Froelich, Martin, ..	2	1	0	2	1
Hauck, Lorentz, ..	2	1	1	0	1
Huber, Barthol, ...	0	0	1	1	2
Klingsenschmidt, Ph.,	1	1	1	1	0
Kugler, Philip, ..	1	1	0	0	1
Kupper, Frantz, ..	1	1	0	0	0
Lauer, George, ...	1	1	1	2	0
Leitdecker, Simon, .	1	1	0	1	1
Marthin, Mordecai. .	2	2	0	0	0
Moor, Jacob,	2	1	1	4	0
Miller, Peter,	2	1	0	0	1
Nunemaker, Daniel, .	1	1	0	0	0
Roth, Peter,	1	1	0	1	2
Rinker Abraham, ..	1	1	1	1	0
Savitz, Abraham, ..	1	1	0	0	0
Schackler, Fred'k, .	1	1	0	1	0
Schnepf, George, ..	1	1	0	0	1
Schwab, Peter, ...	2	1	0	1	0
Titus, Tobias,	1	1	1	1	0
Wolf, George,	1	2	1	4	2

Total, 35 lots, 29 houses, 15 horses, and 31 cows. William Allen, Esq., received £17 5 3, quit rent and was taxed upon 500 acres of land rated at £12 per 100 acres.

The tax list for 1766 contains thirty-eight names, as follows:

- Abel, Leonard,laborer.
- Albert, Abraham,potter.
- Bishop, Peter,taylor.
- Brenner, Simon,carpenter.
- Brang, Jacob,mason.
- Bolzius, Doctor,
- Copper, Frantz,cooper.
- Derr, Martin,wagoner.
- Deshler, David,shop-keeper and beer house.
- Dill, Philip,poor.
- Froelich, Martin,smith.
- Simon Fries,locksmith.
- Hauck, Lorentz,butcher.
- Barthold, Huber,innkeeper and shoemaker.
- Hunsicker, Daniel,laborer.
- Jones, David,joyner.
- Kassel, Peter,laborer.
- Kugler, Philip,mason.
- Kressinger, Caspar, ...laborer.
- Marthage, Martin,shopkeeper and still house.
- Miller, Peter,taylor.
- Miller, Jacob,
- Moor, Jacob,baker.
- Nicholas, Felix,shoemaker.
- Nunamaker, Daniel, ...joyner.
- Rincker, Abraham,

- Roth, Peter,taylor.
- Savitz, Abraham,taylor.
- Schwab, Peter,
- Shoenberger, Henry, ...poor.
- Schreiber, George,innkeeper.
- Schnepf, George,taylor.
- Smith, George,poor.
- Shackler, Frederick, ...
- Titus, Tobias,baker.
- Wolf, Reilen,poor.
- Wolf, George,innkeeper.
- Wantel, Lorentz,joyner.

The tax list for 1767 is as follows:

Albert, Abraham,	£11	Moor, Jacob,	9
Abel, Leonard,	7	Miller, Peter,	10
Bishop, Peter,	7	Marthage, Martin,	15
Brenner, Simon,	7	Miller, Jacob,	6
Brang's widow,	4	Nunamaker, Daniel,	6
Copper, Frantz,	4	Preston, James,	5
Derr, Martin,	9	Rothrock, Michael,	8
Deshler, David,	33	Reep, Andrew,	9
Frelch, Martin,	11	Rincker, Abraham,	10
Fries' widow,	4	Roth, Peter,	11
Hauck, Lorentz,	4	Schwab, Peter,	6
Huber, Barthol,	15	Schnepf, George,	6
Hunsicker, Daniel,	6	Henry Schoeneberger,	4
Jones, David,	5	Schreiber, George,	16
Johe, Adam,	15	Savitz, Abraham,	5
Kugler, Philip,	5	Shackler, Frederick,	6
Kressinger, Caspar,	4	Titus, Tobias,	4
Lauer, George,	4	Wolf, Reilen,	5
Lagendecker, Simon,	8	Wolf, George,	17

The tax list for 1768 is as follows:

Name and Occupation.	Houses.	Lots.	Rate.	Horses.	Cows.	Sheep.	Bound Servants.	Whole Rate.	Tax.	Quit Rent.
Albert, Abraham, potter, Twenty acres of cultivated land; 80 acres of uncultivated land.	1	1	£2. 8.0	£3. 8.0	£0. 5.1	9s.
Abel, Leonard,	1	1	1. 4.0	1	1	2. 4.0	0. 3.3	½d.
Bishop, Peter,	1	1	0.18.8	..	1	0.18.8	0. 1.5	9s.
Brenner, Simon, carpenter,	1	1	1.12.0	..	2	1.18.8	0. 2.11	9s.
Breston, James, mason,	1. 0.0	0.16.0	..
Bachman, Jacob, receives rent,	3. 0.0	0. 4.6	..
Bishop, John, poor, for the house he lives in,	1	1	1.16.0	1.16.0	0. 2.8	9s.
Cooper, France,	1	1	.12.0	..	1	0.18.8	0. 1.5	18s.
Derr, Martin, wagner,	1	2	1.12.0	1	1	2.12.0	0. 3.11	1s.
Detties, Tobias,	1	1	0.18.0	..	1	1.14.8	0. 2.7	9s.
Endercon, Joseph,	2. 0.0	0. 3.0	9s.
Endercon, Joseph, for house he lives in,	1	1	4.16.0	4.16.0	0. 7.2	..
Frelch, Martin,	1	1	1.16.0	1	1	2.16.0	0. 4.2	9s.
Faller, John, smith,	1	1	1.18.0	..	1	2. 4.8	0. 3.3	9s.
Hertz, Andrew, poor, for house he lives in,	1	1	1.16.0	1.16.0	0. 2.8	9s.
Hauck, Lawrence,	1	1	0.12.0	0.12.0	0. 0.11	9s.
Huber, Barthol, innkeeper,	1	1	1. 4.0	1	4.14.0	0. 7.1	9s.
Hagenbuch, Henry,	1	1	1.18.0	1.18.0	0. 2.11	9s.
Hagenbuch, Henry, receives rent, 10 pounds,	6. 0.0	0. 9.0	..
Hunsicker, Thomas, receives rent,	1	1	3. 0.0	3. 0.0	0. 4.6	9s.
Yohe, Jacob, innkeeper,	1	1.13.4	0. 2.6	..
Yohe, Jacob, innkeeper, for house he lives in,	1	1	6. 0.0	6. 0.0	0. 9.0	9s.
Jutz, Anthony, shoemaker,	1. 0.0	1.16.0	..
Jutz, Anthony, shoemaker, for house he lives in, ...	1	1	1. 4.0	1. 4.0	0. 1.9	9s.
Johe, Adam,	5	5	8	1	6.18.0	0.19.5	..
Johe, Adam, for land he lives on,	24. 0.0	1.16.0	..
Jennings, John, sheriff,	3	1	1	..	5.16.8	0. 8.10	..
Jennings, John, sheriff, for house,	6. 0.0	0. 9.0	9s.
Kugler, Philip,	1	1	0.12.0	..	1	0.18.8	0. 1.5	9s.
Kressinger, Caspar,	1	1	0.12.0	0.12.0	0. 0.11	9s.
Lorentz, Wandel, joiner,	1. 0.0	0. 1.6	..
Lorentz, Wandel, joiner, for house he lives in,	1	1	3. 0.0	3. 0.0	0. 4.6	9s.

Name and Occupation.	Houses.	Lots.	Rates.	Horses.	Cows.	Sheep.	Bound Servants.	Whole Rate.	Tax.	Quit Rent.
Lauer, George, carpenter,	1. 0.0	0. 1.6	...
Lauer, George, carpenter, for house,	1	1	3. 0.0	3. 0.0	0. 4.6	9s.
Moor, Jacob,	1	2	1. 4.0	2. 4.0	0. 3.3	9s.
Miller, Peter, taylor,	2	2	1. 4.0	1	1	2. 4.0	0. 3.3	9s.
Miller, John, turner,	1	1	1.18.0	1.18.0	0. 2.10	9s.
Miller, Dewalt, joiner,	1. 0.0	0. 1.6	...
Miller, Dewalt, joiner, for house he lives in,	1	1	1. 7.0	1. 7.0	0. 2.0	9s.
Myer, Hertz,	2	2	11. 8.0	11. 8.0	0.17.1	18s.
Nunnemacher, Daniel,	1	1	0.12.0	0.12.0	0. 0.11	9s.
Nicholas, Valentine, poor, for house he lives in,	1	1	1. 4.0	1. 4.0	0. 0.19	9s.
Reep, Andrew, tanner,	1	1	0.12.0	1	2. 5.4	0. 3.4	9s.
Reiling, Wolf, potter,	1. 0.0	0.16.0	...
Reiling, Wolf, potter, for the house he lives in,	1	1	1. 4.0	1. 4.0	0. 1.9	9s.
Rinker, Abraham, 18 acres cultivated land,	4. 4.0	1	1	5. 4.0	0. 7.9	...
Roth, Peter, shopkeeper, £2,	1	1	0.18.0	2.18.0	0. 4.4	9s.
Schwab, George,	1	1	0.12.0	..	1	0.18.8	0. 1.5	9s.
Schroeder, Michael,	1	1	0.12.0	0.12.0	0.11.0	9s.
Schreiber, George, shopkeeper, £1,	1	1	1. 4.0	1	2.17.4	0. 4.4	9s.
Sevetz, Abraham, tailor,	1	1. 0.0	0. 1.6	9s.
Smith, George, weaver, £1,	1	1	0.12.0	1.12.0	0. 2.5	9s.
Scheckler, Frederick, shopkeeper, £2,	1	1	0.18.0	2.18.0	0. 4.5	9s.
Smith, Frederick, poor,	9s.
Timball, George, bruer, £1,	1. 0.0	0. 1.6	9s.
Timball, George, bruer, for house he lives in,	1	1	4.16.0	4.16.0	0. 7.2	...
Wolf, George, poor,	9s.
Ward, John, innkeeper, £1,	1	1.13.4	0. 2.6	...
Wagner, Mathias, smith, £1,	1	1	1.16.0	2.16.0	0. 4.2	9s.
Wolf, Jacob, poor,	9s.
Broff, James, silversmith, £1,	1. 0.0	0.16.0	...
Broff, James, silversmith, for house he occupies,	1	1	6. 0.0	6. 0.0	0. 9.0	9s.
Christman, Jacob, shop,	1. 0.0	0.16.0	...
	43

Single Men.

- | | | | |
|-------------------|------------------|---------------|----------------|
| Michael Krebs. | Thos. Belson. | John Sherb. | John Strohm. |
| William Anderson. | Daniel Kreger. | John Derr. | Caspar Weaver. |
| John Shnyder. | John Moll. | John Kuntz. | Each 15 |
| Philip Evert. | Frederick Gebel. | Peter Miller. | shillings. |

Gentlemen's land.

Isaac Greenleaf, 200 acres, £20.0.0 0. 1.10 ½
 James Allen, Esq., 2,650 acres, 212.0.0 0.15.18 15.
 James Allen, Esq., receives ground rent of Northampton for 56 lots at 9s. per lot, comes to £25.0.0 sterling. Returned in Pennsylvania currency at 50 per cent. is £37.16.0 currency. The tax of said sum at 1s. 6d. per pound comes to £2.16.8.

Defence against Indians.—On the eighth of October, 1763, a band of Indians killed fifteen or more persons in Allen and Whitehall townships. The inhabitants of these townships, and, as the news spread, of adjoining townships, became panic-stricken and fled to Bethlehem and Allentown. In a few hours Allentown was crowded with refugees, and, although it was Saturday, Rev. Jacob Joseph Roth, a Lutheran minister, was conducting a service in the log church building at Hamilton and Church streets, which the members of the Reformed and Lutheran faiths had erected the previous year, and which served both as their house of worship. Colonel James Burd had fortunately arrived in town the same morning on his way to Fort Augusta, and with his assistance the men of the town, numbering twenty-two, with three others of the neighborhood, were organized into a company for the defense of the town. From a statement made by Colonel Burd in a letter, we know that but three of the citizens possessed guns and two of these were out of order. It is evident that the men of the company were armed with weapons of various descriptions, such as swords, pistols, pikes, axes, and clubs. Rev. Roth wrote to the governor two days later, requesting guns and ammunition. The letter delivered to the governor by George Wolf, who was chosen captain of the company, was, verbatim, as follows:

“Northampton Town, the 10th of this Instant, October, 1763.

“To the Honourable James Hambleton, Esqr., Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, Newcassel, Cent, and Sasox, on the Delaware, We send Greeting:

“As I, Joseph Roads, of Northampton Town,

Church Minister, of the Eighth of this Instant, Octr., as I was a preaching, the people come in Such Numbers that I was obliged to quit my Sermon, and the Same time Cornel James Bord was in the Town, and I, the aforesaid Minister, Spoke with Cornel Bord concerning this affares of the Indians, and we found the Inhabitance that the had nither Guns, Powder nor Lead, to defend themselves, and that Cornel Bord had lately spoke with his Honour. He had informed me that he would assist them with Guns and Ammunition, and he requested of me to write to your Honour, be cause he was just Setting of for Lancaster, and the Inhabitance of the Town had not Chose their officers at the time he set of, So we, the Inhabitance of the said Town hath Unanimus Chose George Wolf, the Bearer hereof to be the Captain, and Abraham Rinker to be the Lieutennet; we whose Names are under written promise to obey this mentioned Captain and Lieutennet and so we hope his Honour will be so good and send us 50 Guns, 100 Pounds of Powder and 400 Pound lead, and 150 Stans for the Gons. These from your humble Servant, Remaining under the Protection of our Lord Saviour, Jesus Christ.

“JACOB ROTH, Minister.”

The Names of the Company of this said Northampton Town.

Georg Wolf, Captain;	Tobias Dittis,
Abraham Rinker, Lieutenant;	Lorenz Hauck,
Philip Koogler.	Simon Brenner,
Peter Miller,	Jacob Wolf,
Frederick Schakler,	Simon Lagundacker,
Leonhard Abell,	Georg Nicholas,
John Martin Dourr,	David Deschler,
Peter Roth,	Daniel Nonnemaker,
France Keffer,	Peter Shab,
Jacob Morr,	Abraham Sawitz,
Martin Frolick,	John Schreck,
George Laur,	Georg S. Schnepf,
	Michael Readcot.

Directed, The Honourable James Hambleton, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor and Commander in Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, New Cassel, Cent, and Sasox, on Delawar, in Philadelphia. These.”

Rev. Roth died in 1764 and was buried in the churchyard of the church in Upper Saucon township.

Colonel Burd's letter to William Allen, which here follows, gives considerable information regarding the situation.

FORT AUGUSTA, 10 Jan. 1764.

“DEAR SIR: Your safe arrival in England with the young ladys, your daughters, gave your many friends here great pleasure amongst which number I beg leave to be esteem'd one.

“I expected ere now to have been pleasantly situated at Northampton with my family, but the alteration of our affairs in America by the new Indian War, has obliged me to think of settling in the interior parts of the Province. Should a peace be patched up again with those Infamous Barbarians before they feel the weight of the British Arms and be made thoroughly sensible of their folly and presumption by a vigorous prosecution of the Present War in their own Country, I am of opinion a peace with them would only be postponing a heavier shock then we have lately felt from the perfidy of that faithless crew and the safety of our fronteers very precarious.

“I was at Northampton in October last and arrived there of a Friday Evening when I sent off a letter to Mr. Gordon at Easton begging the favor of his company at Northampton next morning, in order to consult what might be necessary for the good of the town. I was obliged by the Governor's instructions to me to leave Northampton on the Sunday morning and to Repair to this place as fast as possible as by General Amherst's Intelligence to his Hon. the Enemy had Determined in their Grand Council at Lake Huron to attack Detroit, Pitsburg, Fort Augusta, and Niagara immediately, and their conclusion was if they succeeded in these severall attacks they would be sure of the country, but without their reductions it was in vain for them to carry on the War against the English.

“On the Saturday morning the town of Northampton was crowded with men, women, and children, flying from the Enemy whom they said was within a few miles of the town killing all before them and burning the houses, upon which I collected the men of the town together in order to make a stand and save the people, with the place; but found only four Guns in the town, one of which my own and two out of order and no ammunition. I remained there expecting Mr. Gordon until three in the afternoon when I concluded to go to Bethlehem to see how matters were there and I found that place likewise crowded with the fugatives and wounded people. Mr. Gordon had been there on his way to me but did not light from his horse. Upon the news he immediately returned to Easton to his family. I stayed all night and next morning set off for this place where I have remained ever since and don't know when my duty will permit me to return to my family.

“The confusion the town of Northampton was in, prevented me from doing anything with the people concerning the meadow lots and I went from Philadelphia to Northampton and I acquainted your good son and Mr. Stewart with the people's propositions to me, which was to rent the uncleared meadow in lotts of five acres each, for seven years, the first four years to pay no rent, but have the benefit of the lott for clearing and fencing, the remaining three years to pay you Twenty Shilling Sterling a year and to deliver you up the five acre lott under good substantial fence and in good grass fit for the Sythe, such as well improved meadows ought to be. We had concluded to lett out lotts upon the above terms, and I went to Northampton for that purpose but was disappointed of my intention as I have mentioned before. The town was increasing but I suppose now it is quite at a stand, they had not got Water in the Well but I gave orders to go on with it. I cannot Remember the Depth of it. I left my Memorandum book at Lancaster in which I had noted every particular and therefore hope you'll excuse me.

“There is nothing new here worthy of your notice, the killing of 6 Indians in Conostago Manor and 14 in Lancaster gaol by the Frontier People of this County and Cumberland you have no doubt been informed of.

“I beg my kind compliments to the young gentm. your Sons and young ladys your Daughters, and that you would believe me with unalterable Regard, Dear Sir,

“Your sincerely affectionate obed. humble servant,

“JAMES BURD.”

In another letter Colonel Burd states he had laid aside all thought of living in Northampton, on account of the Indian troubles. He suggested that directions concerning the management of the town should be given to the best man to be found in the town, and states that Mr. Allen's house should have a new roof and that many of the inhabitants had cut considerable timber. The Indians, of which there was only a small band, returned to their mountain retreats after committing these brutal murders and did not approach the town. In the same year (1763) efforts were made to have the seat of justice removed to Allentown, but the influence of the Penns, who were the proprietors of Easton, prevented it.

from the town. Simon Brenner, a carpenter, lived there until 1774. Caspar Greisinger was still living in the town in 1773. Jacob Brang died in 1766, leaving a widow Margaret and children, George, Christopher, Jacob, and Peter. He lived on South Seventh street, where the Germania Hotel now stands.

Martin Derr and his wife, Ursula, lived here until 1774. David Deshler, a prominent resident, lived in Allentown until 1783, when he removed to Allen township, where he died in 1796. He owned and operated a grist mill on the Little Lehigh, which stood over 100 years. Martin Frœlich, a smith, remained in the town until 1782. Simon Fries, a locksmith, died June 22, 1765. He owned a house and lot

DESHLER'S MILL, BUILT PRIOR TO THE REVOLUTION.

Correspondence relating to early history.—In a letter dated Philadelphia, August 4, 1766, Joseph Shippen writes to Colonel Burd: "I acquainted Mr. James Allen with your offer of the house at Northampton for £300 or letting it to him for £20 per annum, but he declines both, and says you had better let it for £20 to the man who offers it, though he does not know him."

First Settlers.—Of the family names that appear in the early tax lists of Allentown, eight are still represented in the city's inhabitants. Leonard Abel and his wife Salome resided in Allentown until about 1775, when they removed and a half interest in a saw-mill in the town. He and his wife Apollonia, nee Bauer, had a son, George, whose baptism on Feb. 27, 1765, is the first recorded in the Reformed Church records. Lawrence Hauck, the town's first butcher, lived on Lehigh street. He was the father of Peter Hauck, the first sheriff of Lehigh county. Barthol Huber was an innkeeper and shoemaker in the town from 1764 to 1766. Philip Klingenschmidt lived in the town from 1764 to 1766. Philip Kugler, a mason, lived here from 1764 to 1774.

Frantz Kupper, a cooper, lived here from 1764 to 1774. George Lauer, a carpenter, lived here from 1762 to 1768. Simon Lyendecker's name appears in the tax lists from 1762 until 1768. Mordecai Marthin, whose name is sometimes written Martin Mordecai and Martin Marthage, was the first Jewish resident and had a shop and still house in the town from 1764 to 1767. Jacob Mohr, the town's first baker, who came from Salisbury township, settled here in 1762 and died in 1796. He lived at the north-west corner of Seventh and Linden streets. His son John was the father of two sons, John and Jacob. Peter Miller, a tailor, lived here from 1762 to 1785.

Daniel Nonemaker, a joiner, came here in 1763, and was the ancestor of the family of that name. His son, Henry, was a weaver by occupation. Abraham Rinker, who kept the ferry over the Lehigh river, settled here in 1762. His son, Abraham, born in 1756, served in the Revolution and War of 1812, and died here in 1820. He and his wife, Gertrude, had several children, among them Abraham, Jr. Abraham, the second, was a member of the assembly and sheriff of the county.

Peter Roth, or Rhoads, came to Allentown in 1762 and built a stone house, which still stands at 107 and 109 North Seventh street. He was a tailor and storekeeper and subsequently became prominent in the Revolution and judge of the county. He died in 1814.

Abraham Savitz, a tailor, lived here from 1763 to 1776. Frederick Schackler, who was a shoemaker and a tavern-keeper in the town from 1764 to 1772, was born in 1721 and died in 1792, in Allen township. His wife, Magdalena Spængler, was born in Esweiler, Zweibruecken, Germany, in 1745, and died in 1785.

Peter Schwab and his wife, Anna Maria, lived here from 1762 to 1768. George Schnepf, a tailor, and his wife, Margaret, lived here from 1762 to 1774. Nicholas Schneck's name appears only in the 1763 tax list. Tobias Titus, a baker, lived here from 1764 to 1774. George Wolf, an innkeeper and Captain of the company raised to defend the town against Indians, lived here from 1762 to 1770.

Dr. Gottlieb Bolzius, the first physician of the town, located here in 1766, and remained here until his death in 1791. George Schreiber removed from Whitehall township to the new town in 1766 and was a store-keeper here many years. He died in 1800, aged 60 years. His wife, who was Juliana Deshler, died in 1840, aged 93 years. They had no children. Abraham Albert, a potter, settled here in 1760, and died June 10, 1811.

Andrew Reip, who was a tanner and later a tavern-keeper, came here in 1767. He was born in 1740 and died here in 1816. He married Eve Catherine Crumbach and had a son, Adam Reip, a cabinetmaker, who died here in 1833.

In the tax list for 1768 appear for the first time the names of Andrew Hertz, Henry Hagenbuch, innkeeper, who became a captain in the Revolution, Jacob Yohe, innkeeper, John Miller, joiner, Mathias Wagner, smith, and James Broff, a silversmith.

Lots sold—Ground rents.—William Allen executed the first deeds, giving title to lots in his new town, on June 1, 1765. They were in printed form with blank spaces for the necessary insertions, and were given "in consideration of the charge and expense which the said A. B. hath already expended in building upon and improving the lot of ground mentioned and described, and also for and in consideration of rent, conditions and covenants, hereinafter reserved and mentioned to be paid, done and performed on the part of the said A. B. his heirs and assigns, and of the sum of five shillings." The free use and privilege of a common or commons was permitted and the quit rent, amounting to nine shillings sterling, was to be paid on the first of June, annually. Records have been found of deeds granted on the above date to Jacob Fenigel, for lot No. 123, on the northeast corner of Fifth and Linden streets, to Peter Rhoads, for lot No. 348, on the east side of Seventh above Linden; to Jacob Brang, for lot No. 384, on the West side of South Seventh street, below Walnut; to James Burd, for Lot No. 471, on the north side of Hamilton street, near Eighth, later owned by Jacob Newhard, Sr., and to David Deshler, for a lot on the west side of South Seventh street, near Union.

Incidents of Early History.—In 1768, James Read, prothonotary of Berks county, paid a visit to Allentown, as appears from the following letter:

"To James Read, Esq., Prothonotary, Reading.

*From Edward Shippen, Lancaster, 27 June, 1768.
Monday Evening.*

"Doctor Kuhn was so kind just now as to send up his son with your acceptable favour of this day's date, tho' you say Sunday noon. I am well pleased to find you are safe returned and that you had so very an agreeable journey, and such unexpected good company, and so merry a time with ye Citizens of Mr. Jamey Allen's town, and am glad that you are coming to see us again. I owe many visits in your debt; but you know the reason that I have not had the pleasure of discharging at least some of them this Spring. Mr. Hamilton is not yet come; but I expect notice from him by the next Post of his design of setting off very soon, that he may have 10 or 12 days to spend with us before August court. William Allen, Esq., our Sagacious Chief Justice intimated to us to other day that Mr. H. intended to bring Miss Allen up with him, and if so doubtless, but some Miss or other will accompany her."

It seems that James Allen had, as late as 1769, owned a much larger amount of land than he was taxed with in 1776, and had promised to convey to the lot-holders one thousand acres of land in trust, and for some reason, which does not appear, they released him from the obligation, as the following document shows:

"Know all men that we the subscribers proprietors of Lots in the Town of Northampton do hereby certify that Mr. James Allen hath declared to us his intention of conveying in Trust for the Inhabitants of this Town a thousand Acres of Land called Barrens as an open free common in pursuance of a promise made by his father William Allen Esqr Now we do hereby certify and make known that we the present Freeholders of the said Town do refuse to accept of such conveyance from him and do discharge him and his said father William Allen Esquire from any promise made by either of them to us to that purpose and we do hereby release to the said William Allen and James Allen any right or claim that we have or may have to the said common or any demand from them on that account. Witness our hands and seals this first day of May, 1769 Henry Kookin, Martin Derr, George Shreiber, Peter Miller, Lawrence Hauck, Martin Frolich, Bartle Huber, Simon Brenner, Margaret Brang, Peter Bischoff, George Shap, Abraham Albert, Leonard Abel, Johann Miller, Tobias Diber, Frederick Sheckler, Mathias Wagner, Henry Hagenbuch, Philip Kugler, David Deshler, Jacob Mohr, and Daniel Nunnemacher. Acknowledgment taken before Henry Kookin one of the Justices of the Peace of Northampton County May 1st, 1769."

That the inhabitants of Northampton were an enterprising people is demonstrated by the fact that as early as 1774 a fair was held in the town, permission having been given by the proprietors. The following document, entitled "Grant of liberty to hold Fairs in the Town of Northampton," signed by John Penn, October 1, 1774, in the fourteenth year of the reign of George Third, with the great seal attached, is in the possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania:

"Thomas Penn and John Penn, Esquires, true and absolute Proprietaries and Governors in Chief of the province of Pennsylvania and counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware. Whereas it hath been represented to us that it would be of great service and utility to the Inhabitants of the Town and County of Northampton that two Fairs be held yearly in the said town of Northampton for buying and selling goods, wares, merchandize and cattle: Know ye, that we favouring the reasonable request of the said Inhabitants and considering the flourishing state to which the said Town hath arrived through their Industry, have of our own free will, granted and do by these presents, for us, our heirs and successors, grant to the present and succeeding Inhabitants of the said Town that they shall and may forever hereafter have and keep within the said Town of Northampton two Fairs in the year, the one of them to begin on the first Wednesday of May, yearly, to be held in Allen street, and to continue that day and the next day following, and the other of the said Fairs to be held in the aforesaid place on the first Wednesday of November every year and the next day after it, with all the liberties and customs to such Fairs incident or belonging."

James Allen, Proprietor, 1767.—Chief Justice William Allen deeded to his son, James Allen, all his land in and around the town. The deed was dated January 5, 1767, and conveyed 3,338 acres and 114 perches. The witnesses to the deed were Alexander Stuart and William Allen, Jr. It was acknowledged before George Taylor, Justice of the Peace, on January 13th, and recorded February 13, 1767. A draft of the land conveyed in this deed is here reproduced. Tract No. 2 then contained the town of Allentown, which now covers nearly the entire tract.

ALLEN FAMILY.

William Allen, the founder of Allentown, was born in Philadelphia, August 5, 1704. He was the son of William Allen, a merchant of Philadelphia, who died in Philadelphia, August 30, 1725, aged 55 years, and who was a native of Ireland, as he mentions in his will his sister, Catharine Cally, living at Dungannon, Ireland, and his uncle, William Craige, of the same place. His grandfather was John Allen, of Dunganon, Ireland, who was married to a sister of William Craige, and who fled from Stirlingshire, Scotland, to escape the persecution of the Presbyterians by James I, of Scotland. William Allen, the elder, married about 1700, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Susanna Budd, a sister of Rose Budd, whose daughter, Sarah Plumley, married Edward Shippen, of Lancaster. Mrs. Allen was born in Burlington, April 7, 1679, and died in Philadelphia, April 20, 1760.

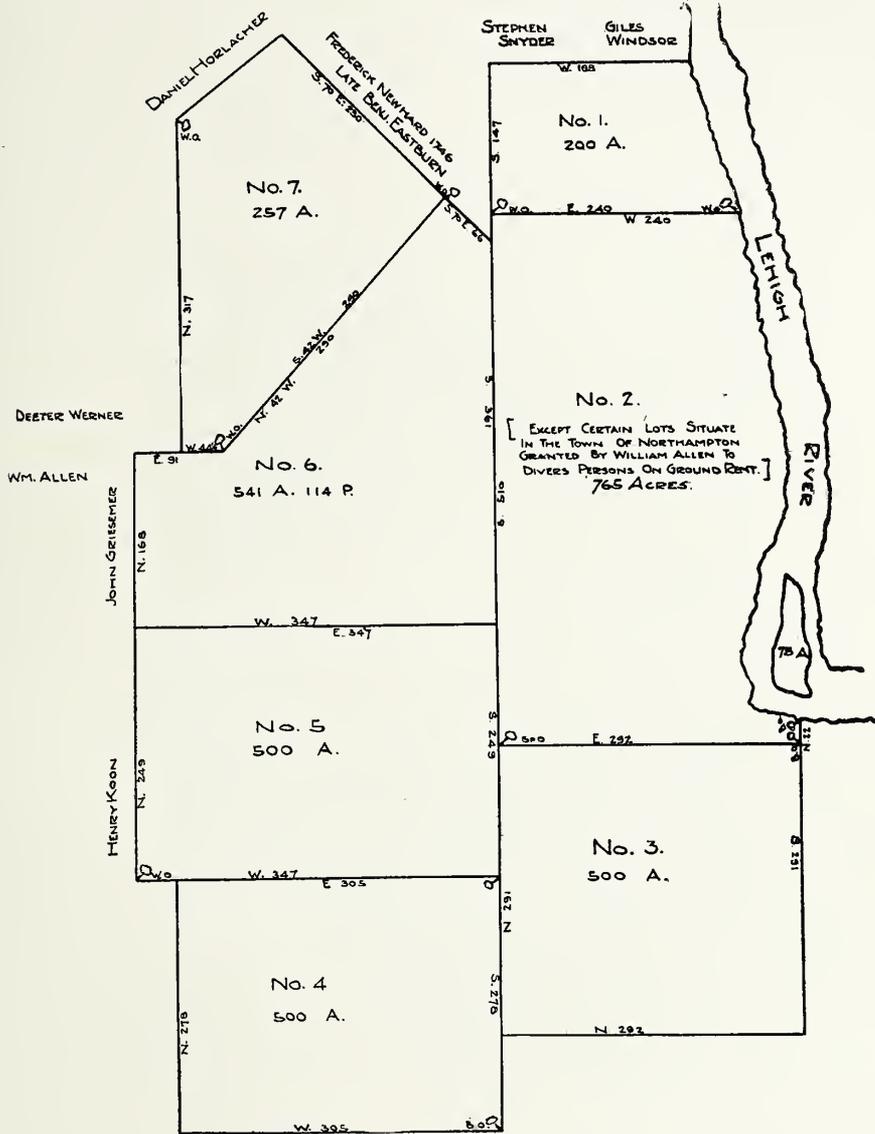

William Allen, the elder's will, dated July 3, 1725, and probated September 13, 1725, mentions only two children, although he had three other sons, John, Thomas, and James. The eldest surviving son, John, died, it seems, soon after his father and without issue, his mother not mentioning him in her will, but leaving everything to her son William except a few legacies to collateral relations.

William Allen was baptized August 17, 1704, in the First Presbyterian church in Philadelphia. He was married in Christ church, February 16, 1733 (old style), to Margaret Hamilton, daughter of Andrew Hamilton, Provincial Councillor and Lieutenant Governor under William Penn, and sister of James Hamilton, also Lieutenant Governor. Mrs. Allen was born in 1709 and died in Philadelphia, May 13, 1760.

The positions which William Allen obtained conjectured from the direction in his father's will that five hundred pounds sterling be remitted to him in London for his expenses there. He was then twenty-one, perhaps studying law at

BY
L. J. H. GROSSART, C. E.
ALLENTOWN, PA.

DRAFT OF A TRACT OF 3338 ACRES MORE OR LESS, GRANTED BY WILLIAM ALLEN ESQ.
TO HIS SON JAMES ALLEN.
JAN. - 5 - 1767.

SITUATED IN SALISBURY TOWNSHIP, NORTHAMPTON, COUNTY.

at a time when lawyers had become numerous in the colony should only have been given to men of legal education. That he received this, has been the Temple. Judge Huston in his work on "Land Titles," speaking of Penn's mortgage of the Province to Gouldney for £6,600, of which a deed of April 30, 1724, recites that one-fourth then remained unpaid, tells on page 231, "I have heard more than once, many years ago, that William Allen, a distinguished barrister in London and afterward Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, had furnished money which finally paid off this mortgage, and the books of the Land Office show many grants of large tracts of land to him between the years 1733 and 1740." Allen never practiced law for any length of time, but returning to America before September 21, 1726,

ALLEN FAMILY COAT OF ARMS.

the date of the merchants' and chief citizens' agreement to take the money of the Lower counties at their face value, to which his signature appears; he engaged in trade.

On October 3, 1727, he was elected a common councilman of Philadelphia, but whether then in the city or not, did not attend until May 16, 1728, the third meeting afterward. In 1731, he became a member of the Assembly, serving until 1739. In 1732 he was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania. In October, 1735, he was chosen mayor of Philadelphia, and at the end of his term, the Hall of Assembly, just finished, was opened with the collation customary from an outgoing mayor.

The Pennsylvania Gazette of September 30, 1736, says: "Thursday last, William Allen, Esq., Mayor of this city for the year past, made a Feast for his citizens at the State house, to which all the Strangers in town of note were also invited. Those who are Judges of such things say that considering the Delicacy of the Viands, and the Excellency of the Wines, the great Number of Guests, and yet the Easiness and Order with which the whole was conducted, it was the most grand and the most elegant entertainment that has been made in these Parts of America."

With Andrew Hamilton, he purchased the ground where the old state house is located, and held it until the province was able to reimburse him. The state house having been erected at the charge of the province, but the estate and inheritance in the land yet remaining in Hamilton and Allen, by Act of the General Assembly, passed February 20, 1735, they were required to convey to John Kinsey, of Philadelphia, Joseph Kirkbridge, Jr., of Bucks county, Caleb Cowpland, of Chester county, and Thomas Edwards, of Lancaster county, as Trustees of the Freemen of the Province, their estate in the land.

In business, Allen was the partner of Joseph Turner, the councillor, and the profits from commercial enterprise, with the money which Allen and his wife inherited and the advance in value of land in which he had invested, made him at the death of his father-in-law, one of the rich men, and in after years, notwithstanding his charities, perhaps the richest man in Pennsylvania. He left the Assembly in 1739, thinking with Hamilton, that no important questions were likely soon to present themselves.

Allen often acted as judge of the Orphans' Court and Common Pleas, and continued in the important judicial office of recorder of the city until October 2, 1750, when having been appointed chief justice of the Supreme Court of the province, he resigned the recordership as incompatible with his new duties. He was the only chief justice before the Revolution who was a native of Pennsylvania. For nearly a quarter of a century he presided over the court, says Edward F. DeLancey, in his sketch (Penna. Mag. Vol. 1, p. 202), "with a dignity, learning and impartiality and intellectual force, equalled by few and exceeded by none of those great jurists, who have ever adorned the ermine of Pennsylvania and made immortal the renown of her supreme judiciary. In the Supreme Court chamber is now preserved with care, the very bench upon which he sat, when before him pleaded the gifted fathers of that illustrious bar."

At the same time he continued in business and from 1756 until the Revolution was a representative from Cumberland county in the assembly. His city residence was on King (now Water) street, adjoining his wharf and stores, the property being about seventy-six feet in breadth and his stables and coach house being across the street and on the east side of Front. About 1750, he established his country seat at "Mt. Airy," a mansion with forty-seven acres beyond Germantown, since owned by the late James Gowan, where the Lutheran Seminary is now located.

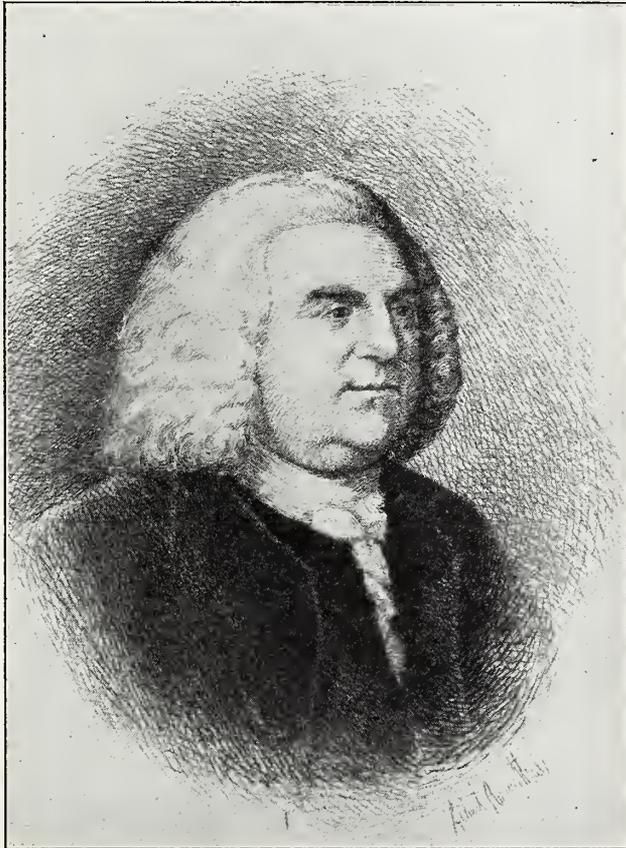

Although a politician often leading a faction greedy for office, Allen was throughout life a man of large public spirit, thinking of the needs of the colony, giving his influence, his time and his pecuniary aid for its advancement. He was a large contributor to the Pennsylvania Hospital, to the college of which he was one of the original trustees, and to the expedition in search of the North West Passage.

Governor Thomas, writing to the Bishop of Exeter, on the 23d of April, 1748, relative to some funds the bishop had raised to aid the German Palatines, says, "If I might be permitted to advise, the money raised for this purpose should be lodged in a safe hand in London, subject to the draft of Mr. Wm. Allen, a considerable merchant, and a very worthy honest gentleman of Philadelphia, that he might see it regularly apply'd to the uses intended."

that he painted the picture to preserve its remembrance, and presented it to the governor, saying as he did so, "that he had never executed a better painting." These facts were told Mr. E. F. DeLancey by Mr. John Penn Allen, the governor's nephew, one of the twin sons of Andrew Allen, when showing him the picture at his home in London in 1867.

Besides the money for the Gouldney mortgage and the purchase of the State House grounds, Allen advanced on one occasion a good part of the tax payable by the Proprietaries under

CHIEF JUSTICE WILLIAM ALLEN, FOUNDER OF ALLENTOWN.

Allen also assisted Benjamin West, the painter, in his early struggles. There is still preserved, among the chief justice's descendants in England, a splendid picture by West, of a family fete in the grounds of Governor John Penn's magnificent seat of "Lansdowne," upon the Schuylkill, which contains portraits of the governor and his wife, Ann, the eldest daughter of Allen, of all the Allen family, and of West himself. The latter was present on the occasion, and the beautiful, joyous scene so impressed him, a bill proposed for raising revenue, there being a deadlock between the lieutenant governor and the Assembly, the former pressing for money for military uses and not feeling free to consent to a law which taxed the Proprietary estates, and the Assembly refusing to vote the means of defence unless the taxation were agreed to. The gentlemen of Philadelphia made up the sum which it was estimated would have been due from the Proprietaries and the Assembly passed the necessary money bills.

Samuel Foulke, in his diary, tells us that when Sir William Johnson's conduct in connection with the Indian treaty of 1762 was criticised in the assembly, "Ye Judge bellowed forth such a torrent of obstreperous jargon as might have been heard in a still morning to ye Jersey shore in vindication of Sir William's conduct, in which combat he was extremely chafed, and his lungs so exhausted that he left the house and appeared no more this year."

Nevertheless in the Assembly and in the City corporation, Allen was active not merely in carrying out the views of a party, but in promoting objects of general utility; and as Chief Justice, Mr. DeLancey tells us, he gave his services gratuitously, receiving his salary (£120 yearly) only to appropriate it to charities.

During his visit to England in 1763, he achieved a victory for all the American colonies in regard to the bill in Parliament for taxing them. A letter from London to the Pennsylvania Gazette, dated March 24, 1764, says, "The 15th Resolution relating to the Stamp Duty, will certainly pass next session, unless the Americans offer a more certain duty. Had not William Allen, Esq., been here and indefatigable in opposing it, and happily having made acquaintance with the first Personages in the Kingdom and the greatest part of the House of Commons, it would inevitably have passed this Session."

With other prominent citizens and followed by his three eldest sons, Allen joined the American Philosophical Association soon after its resuscitation.

He was a great friend of Benjamin West, but a strong hater of Benjamin Franklin, and after the latter attained celebrity, spoke of him as "that Goliath." He charged him with playing double on the stamp act while in England. It was natural antipathy; Allen belonged to the wealthy, office-holding coterie, whom Franklin had supplanted in public favor; Allen in time became the father-in-law of Penn; Franklin the leader of the populace; Allen was a merchant prince inclined to nepotism and exclusive; Franklin was a satirist and a leveller. In the contention preceding the Revolution War, Allen his family, and his friends sided with the Colonies; and, in October, 1775, he went so far as to donate a quantity of cannon shot to the Council of Safety, which body "returned thanks for his generous donation"; but he was anxious to maintain union with Great Britain, and labored as a member of the Assembly for that end.

In 1774 he published a pamphlet of seventy-two pages in London, England. A copy of this very rare pamphlet is in the Congressional Library, and the title-page reads as follows: "The American Crisis: A Letter, addressed by permission to the Earl Gower, Lord President of the Council, etc., etc., on the present alarming Disturbances in the Colonies Wherein various important Points, relative to Plantation Affairs are brought into discussion; as well as several Persons adverted to of the most distinguished characters, and an Idea is offered towards a complete Plan for restoring the Dependency of America upon Great Britain to a state of Perfection. By William Allen, Esq., London: Printed for T. Cadell, in the Strand, 1774."

In 1897 Mr. L. Burd Walker published copies of and extracts from letters of Allen taken from his letter book which contains copies of 187 letters from 1753 to 1770. This book fell into the hands of Edward Shippen, later became the property of Edward Burd, from whom it descended to Mr. Walker. We quote further on from this book, and only mention now two entries, one, on December 3, 1761, when he writes that he had "returned from the Back Country where I had been trying some criminals," and the other on June 29, 1762, when he says, "At Easton at an Indian treaty, and have a smart fit of gout."

He resigned the Chief Justiceship in 1774. He was in his seat in the Assembly in the month of June, 1776, when, Bancroft says, "John Dickinson promised him before the house that notwithstanding the recall of the instructions to that effect, he and his colleagues in Congress would continue to vote against Independence." After the Fourth of July, Allen seems to have kept quiet, and he may have been out of town when "disaffection" was taken note of by the new government.

E. F. DeLancey says that not long before his death he went to England. He may have gone abroad in 1776, and returned during the British occupation of Philadelphia. He was in the city on October 10, 1778, when a pass was granted to his daughter Mrs. DeLancey to visit him there with her small children. His will was dated April 26, 1769, and witnessed by Edward Shippen, Jr., the councillor, and Townsend White and Nathaniel Allen. In view of the death of his sons, John and James, and in order to protect his property from the operation of the attainder of his other sons, he executed in the presence of Townsend White, John White, and Blair McClenachen a codicil bearing date December 1, 1779, in which he devised John's, James', and Andrew's shares to their respective children, and William's share to James Hamilton absolutely. He moreover freed all his slaves.

In the early part of 1780, the American army needing horses, those of the "disaffected" were seized first and Allen lost four. On June 8 following, "for divers good causes and considerations," he deeded to Edward Shippen, Jr., and Tench Coxe, all his messuages and lots within the city square bounded by Arch, Sassafras, Second and Third streets, reserving to himself an estate for life.

It is frequently stated that Chief Justice Allen died in England, but recently facts have come to light which prove that he died at his country seat at Mt. Airy. This is proven by a note occurring in the "History of Bethlehem," by Bishop J. M. Levering (1903), which quotes the following extract from a letter written by Rev. Daniel Sydrich, the Moravian pastor in Philadelphia, to Bishop Nathaniel Seidel, of Bethlehem, September 12, 1780: "Wednesday, the 6th inst., good old William Allen departed this life quite unexpectedly at his country seat Airy Hill (Mt. Airy) and his body was buried here the next day."

From the accounts of David Evans, cabinet-maker, of Philadelphia, from 1774 to 1811, we find under date of September 7, 1780, "Est. Wm. Allen, late Chief Justice, making his coffin of mahogany with plate, horse hire and attendance on the corpse from Mount Airy, £13."

He died on September 6, 1780 (Tilghman's Estate, 5 Wh. 44). On the 10th, Jasper Yeates, writing from Lancaster to Col. Burd, says, "By a letter received from Mr. Parr in Philadelphia we have advice that old Mr. Allen is gone to his long home. Poor gentleman. He is at length happily removed from all his troubles."

SIGNATURE OF WILLIAM ALLEN.

On the 16th of the month his will and codicil were proved in Philadelphia by the oaths of all the witnesses except Nathaniel Allen, who was deceased.

William Allen had four sons and two daughters who grew to maturity:

John Allen, born about March, 1739.

Andrew Allen, born about June, 1740.

James Allen, born about 1742.

Anne Allen, who married John Penn.

William Allen, born about 1751.

Margaret Allen, who married James Delancey.

John Allen, the eldest son, was a student at the College of Philadelphia, which he entered May 25, 1755; began the study of law under Tench Francis at Philadelphia, but finished at the Temple, in London. He was elected a common councilman of Philadelphia at the beginning of the Revolution; was a member of the Committee of Inspection and Observation for the city and Liberties; and was a delegate to the Provincial Convention of New Jersey in 1776, but was opposed to Independence. In December, 1776, he put himself under the protection of the British army under Gen. Howe. The act of confiscation of 1778 required him to surrender himself for trial for high treason before the 20th of April following. His death February 23, 1778, before the act was passed, saved his estates. He was married in New York, April 6, 1775, to Mary, daughter of David Johnston, of New York. His children were William and John, twins, born in 1776. John Allen lived near Red Hook, N. Y., and died in 1809. The elder, William, died in 1850. He married a Miss Verplanck, and lived at Fishkill Point, Hyde Park, N. Y. Hon. Francis A. Channing, M. P., of 40 Eaton Place, London, England, is his grandson.

Andrew Allen, the second son, was born in June, 1740. He was educated at the College of Philadelphia, since become the University of Pennsylvania, which he entered May 25, 1755, and from which he graduated in 1759 with his brother James, William Paca, of Maryland, afterwards a Signer of the Declaration of Independence, Samuel Powel, afterward Mayor of Philadelphia, and some six others, the second class which proceeded from the institution. He then studied law under the direction of Benjamin Chew, at the time attorney general, and about July, 1761, went abroad to finish his education at the Temple.

Returning home almost exceptionally well educated, Andrew at once took the position in the community placed at his hand by the social and political influence of his father. He was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court, April 20, 1765. The corporation of Philadelphia chose him as a common councilman in October, 1768. On the resignation of Mr. Chew, he was appointed attorney general of the Province and held that office until the Revolution, about seven years. He was invited to a seat in the Provincial Council by his brother-in-law, John Penn, qualifying December 24, 1770.

In May, 1774, he was sent by the council with James Tilghman to Virginia to induce the governor of that colony to unite in a petition to the King for a settlement of the boundaries. He was appointed recorder of deeds of Philadelphia, June 25, 1774, serving until 1776.

About this time, the dispute with Great Britain on the subject of taxing the colonies became the all absorbing topic, and Allen was in unison with the popular feeling to prepare for resistance.

He was one of the founders of First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry. On November 2, 1774, some twenty-eight citizens, who, it is said, had often met for fox hunting, formed themselves into this company of Light Horse. They were all men of substantial means, who had something at stake in the fate of their country, and who needed not pay to keep them in the field. Some of them were representatives of the elite, and others afterwards attained such prominence in public affairs as shed lustre on the organization; but at that time Andrew Allen was the most distinguished man among them.

The officers first chosen were: Captain, Abraham Markoe, (formerly of the Danish Island of St. Croix); 1st lieutenant, Andrew Allen; 2d lieutenant, Samuel Morris (previously sheriff of Philadelphia county); cornet, James Mease, etc. The company after serving at its own expense throughout the war which ensued has since maintained perpetual succession and is now commonly known as the 1st City Troop.

Allen may be presumed to have favored the compromise suggested early in 1775 by the British House of Commons; viz., any colony to vote a proper supply and in consideration to be excepted from each act of Parliament taxing America; for he was present at the meeting of the Provincial Council which commended it to the favor of the assembly. This compromise was not accepted; being addressed to the colonies separately, instead of through Congress, it asked them to desert each other. It was, probably, however, Allen's influence as much as John Penn's incapacity and love of quiet, which kept the Penn government from taking a forcible stand against the Whigs.

Allen was one of the Committee of Safety appointed by the Assembly, June 30, 1775, for the defence of the Province; and he was appointed one of the delegates to the Continental Congress. When, however, after active service on the Committee and in Congress, he saw that the latter body was only making ready to declare Independence, he withdrew from the cause. He resigned from the Troop in April, 1776, and after June 14, 1776, no longer attended the meetings of Congress, although had he been present on the 1st and 2d of July, he could have prevented the vote of Pennsylvania being given for Independence. His last public office was burgess from Philadelphia to the assembly, which he was chosen in May, 1776, running as a Moderate, or one in favor of reconciliation with England. There were four to be chosen, and the vote stood: Samuel Howell, 941, Andrew Allen, 923, George Clymer, 923, Alexander Wilcocks, 921, Thomas Willing, 911, Frederick Kuhl, 904, Owen Biddle, 903, Daniel Roberdeau, 890. Clymer was the only one elected of those wished for by the advanced Whigs.

These figures show how evenly divided was the populace on the question of independence. Its advocates, some of the voters having gone to war, could not get a majority over a good conservative ticket, although Galloway's statement that not one-fifth of the people desired independence is evidently wrong as to Philadelphia at least.

Christopher Marshall says in his diary: "I think it may be said with propriety that the Quakers, Papists, Church, Allen family, with all the Proprietary party, were never so happily united as at this election, notwithstanding the Friends' former protestation and declaration of never joining with that party since the club or knock down election of 1742. Oh, tell it not in Gath, or publish it in the streets of Askalon, how the testimony is trampled upon!"

After the Declaration of Independence, Allen attached himself to the British army and was with it at its entry into Philadelphia. In March, 1778, the Pennsylvania Assembly passed an Act of Attainder against him, in consequence of which much of his property was sold. The treaty of Peace prohibited any future confiscations, and provided that any persons could come to the United States and remain twelve months unmolested in their endeavors to obtain restitution. Allen went to England about the close of the war, but visited Pennsylvania in 1792 and remained a few years. The treaty of 1794 with Great Britain provided that British subjects holding land in America, or American citizens holding land in England should with their heirs and assigns hold and dispose of the same as if natives, and that the United States make restitution for losses occasioned by the non-payment of debts to British subjects contracted before the Peace, to be ascertained by commissioners to be appointed. He endeavored without success to collect the money paid to the state on his land contracts. He seems to have resided afterwards with his daughter, Mrs. Hammond.

He died (Gent. Mag.), March 7, 1825, in Montagu street, Portman Square, London, aged 85. He married, April 24, 1768, Sarah, eldest daughter of William Coxe, alderman of Philadelphia, by his wife, Mary, daughter of Tench Francis, Esq., Attorney General of Pennsylvania. William Coxe was a son of Col. Daniel Coxe, Chief Justice of New Jersey.

Mrs. Allen was called "the beautiful Sally Coxe," in Philadelphia. Their children were:

Andrew, founder of the Anchor Club, in Philadelphia. British Consul in Boston. Died without issue at Clifton, near Bristol, England, December 3, 1850. He married Maria, daughter of Charles Coxe, of Sydney.

Ann, who died unmarried.

Elizabeth, who died unmarried.

Margaret, who married May 20, 1793, in Philadelphia, George Hammond, the first British Minister to the United States. He was for some time Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. He died in Portland Place, London, April 23, 1853, aged 90. Mrs. Hammond died December 8, 1838.

Maria, who died unmarried.

John Penn, born October 25, 1785. M. A. (Univ. Oxon.), died unmarried.

Thomas Dawson, born October 25, 1785. M. A. (Univ. Oxon.). Rector of North Cerney, Gloucester. Died without issue. Married August 26, 1840, Jane, widow of Rev. E. C. Henry, and daughter of E. H. Mortimer.

Anne Allen, daughter of William Allen, married May 31, 1766, John Penn, Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, son of Richard and grand-son of William Penn. He was born in Philadelphia in 1728, from which circumstance he was called the "American Penn." He was Governor of the Province from 1763 to 1771, and also from 1773 to the end of the Proprietary government in 1776. He continued in the country during the Revolution, and, in 1777, having refused to sign a parole, he was confined by the Whigs at Fredericksburg, Va. Governor Penn died at the country seat of Andrew Allen, in Berks county, February 9, 1795.

William Allen, fourth son of William Allen, was born about 1751. He became a Lieutenant Colonel of a Pennsylvania regiment, January 4, 1776, and at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War served under St. Clair, but after the Declaration of Independence resigned his commission and joined the British. In 1778 he raised a company called the Pennsylvania Loyalists, and with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel was the commanding officer. Sabine's "American Loyalists" says: "From the influence of his family and from his personal standing, he expected to make rapid enlistments, but was disappointed. At the Siege of Pensacola, where one of the men who attempted to desert received the cruelest punishment, a shell was thrown into the door of the magazine as the men were receiving powder, and forty-five of this regiment were killed and a number wounded. In 1782, and near the close of the contest, though still in service, the Pennsylvania Loyalists were of but little consequence in point of numbers." He was very witty, affable, and of remarkably fine manners, and as much a favorite with his officers and men as he was in society. It was of him, and not of his father, the chief justice, after whom he was named, of whom it was said, when he resigned his command under Congress to that body, that he did so, "not because he was totally unfit for it, but because the Continental Congress presumed to declare the American states free and independent, without first asking the consent and obtaining the approbation of himself and wise family." He was included in the Act of Confiscation of March, 1778, and after the war lived in England. He died unmarried, in London, July 2, 1838, aged 87 years.

Margaret Allen, daughter of William Allen, died at Tunbridge Wells, England, October 18, 1827. She married at Shrewsbury, N. J., August 19, 1771, James DeLancey. He was born in 1732; graduated at Cambridge, England; was aide-de-camp to General Abercrombie at Ticonderoga; and represented New York city in the Colonial Assembly. He died at Bath, England, April 8, 1800. He was the leader of the "Conservative or "DeLancey Party" in the Province down to the end of British rule. He was the eldest son of James DeLancey, chief justice and governor of New York, and his wife, Anne, daughter of Colonel Heathcote, of New York.

James Allen, the third son of William Allen, and the one in whom the residents of Allentown are most interested, was born about 1742. He entered the College of Philadelphia with his brother Andrew, May 25, 1755; graduated in 1759; studied law with Shippen, the Provincial Councillor; and in July, 1761, went to London, England, to complete his law studies at the Temple, where he remained until 1765. In his letter book, his father writes under date of July 20, 1761, to his agent in London that Andrew and James have gone to London to the Temple to study law; and that their expenses are not to exceed £200 a year, and adds that "they are honest lads, and of more vivacity and higher spirits than John, and particularly Andrew, whose temper is rather too quick, of which I have frequently cautioned him." On September 26, 1764, he writes, "My sons' expenses much exceed anything I could have imagined."

It was a son of William Allen, and probably James, who accompanied Benjamin West, a protege of his father's, to Italy in 1760, in one of Judge Allen's vessels. They landed at Leghorn, and thence went to Rome.

James was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court, September 26, 1765; was elected a common councilman of Philadelphia on October 6, 1767, and in May, 1776, was sent to the assembly from Northampton county, where he served with ability and courage. After the house adjourned he returned to his country seat in that county, where he lived in retirement a non-combatant. In 1768 he became a member of the American Philosophical Society.

In November, 1776, shortly before the fall of Fort Washington, he visited the American camp on Harlem Heights, and was received and lodged at his headquarters by General Washington with great politeness.

William Allen on June 1, 1765, for a yearly-quit rent of nine shillings sterling.

On February 7, 1776, a tract of 61 acres and 66 perches, in Salisbury township, adjoining the above, was also deeded to James by his father.

Although many writers credit James Allen with the founding of Allentown, or Northampton, as it was formerly called, his father, Judge William Allen was the founder. At the time it was laid out, in 1762, James Allen was a youth of twenty, studying law at the Temple in London.

In James Allen's Diary, published in the JAMES ALLEN.

On January 5, 1767, William Allen deeded to his son James Allen, land amounting to 3,338 acres (embracing the present City of Allentown and its environs. A clause in the deed, excepting certain lots, read as follows: "save and except certain Lotts of Ground situate in the Town of Northampton within the said tract which have heretofore been granted by the said William Allen to divers persons on ground rent forever." These lots were granted by Wil-

Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, in the first entry, under date of November 6, 1770, he says: "Two days ago I returned from Trout Hall (a name I have just given my house), where I had been with Mr. Lawrence, my brother Billy, and Jemmy Tilghman."

September 13, 1771, he says: "Lord Dunmore passed thro' this town on his way to Virginia; I dined and supped with him. This day I set off for Trout Hall with my wife and child and Mrs. Lawrence. They have not been there since I finished my house."

October 30, 1773: "I compute my business this year will be between three and four hundred pounds, which, added to my estate, will fall but little short of one thousand pounds per annum."

July 26, 1775: "My profession is visibly on the decline, and when it is no longer useful, I shall suffer considerably. My last year's profits were £600 and this year would have increased, and the governor has given up my house; these two articles would fall heavy on me; and reduce me to the necessity of retiring to my house at Northampton."

October 14, 1775: "Last Thursday and the preceding Tuesday I appeared in Battalion in my uniform, as a private man in Capt. Shees company."

March 6, 1776: "The plot thickens; peace is scarcely thought of. Independence predominates. Thinking people uneasy, irresolute, and inactive. The Mobility triumphant. Every article of life doubled. Twenty-six thousand troops coming over. The Congress in equilibrio on the question of Independence or no. Wrapt in the contemplation of these things I cry out 'O! Rus quando ego te aspiciam, etc.' I love the cause of Liberty, but can not heartily join in the prosecution of measures totally foreign to the original plan of resistance."

May 15, 1776: "I am now a political character; having been chosen a Representative in Assembly the first of this month for Northampton county, without any opposition; having 853 votes and only 14 against me."

June 16, 1776: "This day I set off with my family for Northampton, with the chariot, phaeton and sulky."

January 25, 1777: "Having let my house to Carter Braxton and some of the Virginia Delegates, with a great part of my Furniture, at £150 per annum, and left Philadelphia, which from the current Politics, began to grow disagreeable; I thought myself happy in having so good a Retreat in Northampton county."

"The Country was to me delightful, and my Neighbor Mr. Benezet, Captain Symes, a prisoner, together with occasional Visits made the time agreeable enough."

"During October and November I remained at Trout Hall a calm spectator of the Civil War, but occasionally gave great offence to the violent Whigs in Northampton by entertaining the regular officers, our prisoners, and was often threatened on that account."

When General Howe was expected in Philadelphia, a persecution of Tories, (under which name is included every one disinclined to Independence, though ever so warm a friend to constitutional liberty and the old cause,) began; houses were broken open, people imprisoned without authority by private persons, and as was said, a list of 200 disaffected persons made out, who were to be seized, imprisoned and sent off to North Carolina; in which list, it was said, our whole family was set down; my brothers under this dreadful apprehension fled from Philadelphia to the Union. Soon after, against my judgment, they all went to Trenton and claimed protection from General Howe's army. From whence they went to New York, where they now are, unhappily separated from their families and like to be so for some time. I was informed of this by General Gates at Bethlehem—and of course became alarmed for my own safety.

"Accordingly on Thursday, December 19, 1776, at seven A. M., my house was surrounded by a guard of Soldiers with fixed Bayonets; I got up and when I came down stairs the officer who was at the front door, produced a warrant from the Council of Safety to seize me and bring me before them. I accordingly went to Philadelphia and appeared before them, and opened the scene by saying, that they had drawn me from my retirement unexpectedly; Mr. Owen Biddle then said, that they had received accounts of the unwillingness of the Militia of Northampton county to march, that they knew my influence and property there, and were afraid of my being the cause of it, and added that my brothers being gone over to the enemy the publick would expect that I should be put on my Parole and hoped I would have no objection to stay within six miles of Philadelphia. Mr. Matlack said, "at least Mr. Allen may chuse his place of Residence." I told them that my political principles were well known, that since I had not interfered in publick matters, further than in confidential conversations with my friends and I wished always to remain so during the present unhappy war. . . . In the afternoon they produced a certificate which they hoped I would not object to; wherein they set forth, my brothers departure, and the backwardness of the Militia as reasons for sending for me; that I had given them satisfaction respecting my prudent conduct; that my conduct did not appear unfriendly to the cause of Liberty, nor inconsistent of a gentleman; and I in return pledged my honor verbally not to say or do anything injurious to the present cause of America. So we parted amicably and as we began with great politeness on both sides."

"28th got home and continued quiet and happy for some time. This happiness was unfortunately interrupted by an unlooked for accident. Being ignorant that any of the Militia were in the Town, Mrs. Allen with her daughter Peggy and Lyddy Duberry went to visit Mrs. Bond in the Chariot: entering the street a company of Militia met them in front; Samson endeavored to drive out of the road, but was stopt by a hollow way. The soldiers beat him with their muskets and pushed at him with their bayonets, on which to defend himself he made use of his Whip. This so enraged them, that they pushed their Bayonets into the Chariot, broke the glass and pierced the chariot in 3 places; dur- the whole scene my wife becoing to be let out and the children screaming; they also endeavored to overset it, while they were within it. David Deshler happening to be present prevented it and led the horses on, by which means they escaped. Their design was to destroy the Chariot. I having walked across the field saw nothing of this till it was over and the company had marched on. Soon after Major Boehm and the Capt'n Buckhalter returned. The former, a violent man, countenanced the attack, whereupon a rencounter ensued between him and me, in which he attempted to draw his sword on me. This accident has disturbed my peace."

October 1, 1777: "Many of the Congress passed by this place (Northampton) and are since assembled, together with the officers of this government at Lancaster; Mr. Hamilton is now at my house. . . . Since the battle of Brandywine many thousand Wagons passed by my door and are continually passing in great numbers. All the baggage of our army is at Bethlehem and here; and what with Hospitals and Artificers these little towns are filled. Every day some of the inhabitants of Philadelphia are coming up to settle here. The road from Easton to Reading, by my house, is now the most travelled in America. . . . My tenants whose rents are due in sterling, often pay off arrears of six or seven years in continental money at the old Exchange and yet I dare not object, tho' I am as much robbed of five-sixths of my property, as if it was taken out of my drawer."

November 21, 1777, referring to General Howe's evacuating Philadelphia, he says, "Mr. John Adams, who passed thro' here a week ago, spoke of it as a certain event, and said the struggle was past and that Independence was now unalterably settled; the Crisis was over. . . .

. . . My situation is as before; I hear nothing from my friends in Philadelphia, and every species of oppression and waste of property continue as before. My tenants set me at defiance, and I who am not the most patient man, am forced to bear all—sed manet alta mente re- postum.

"The Genl. Hospital is still here and the Director Genl. Dr. Shippen and his assistant Dr. Bond, my old acquaintance, with my wife's cousin T. Lawrence, make out a good Society, and we endeavor to banish Politics."

The sick and wounded of the army had been sent to Bethlehem from time to time, some months prior to this date, until four hundred were quartered in the Brethren's house alone, and over fifty tents in the garden in the rear. In October, those who could not be cared for were sent to Allentown and elsewhere.

The last entry in the diary is on July 15, 1778, when he writes that he is not well and intends to go to France in the autumn.

He died in Philadelphia, September 19, 1778, in his 37th year, two months and four days after the last entry in his diary.

His will dated May 23, 1778, and probated April 13, 1782, bequeaths to his wife all the furniture, plate, horses, carriages, books and stocks absolutely. "Also all moneys or interest due, the house and lot on Chestnut street, and office lot adjoining, the same which her father, John Lawrence, Esq., gave to me on my marriage. To my son James a tract of 812 acres in Salisbury Township on the River Lehi, of which 50 acres were sold to Mr. David Deshler, including the Lehi Island, and the town lots with the ground rents arriving from the lots heretofore granted away; also a tract of 50 acres on the hill contiguous to the above, and a tract of 200 acres on the Lehi River and Jordan Creek, now in the tenure of Simon Peter Gehris, he paying to each of his sisters the sum of £150 each at their several ages of 15 years, free of interest. To my eldest daughter, Anne Penn Allen, a tract of 501 acres situated on Trout Creek with the saw mill thereon contiguous to land of George Stout and Rudolph Smith, and to land sold to George Blank and George Keck. To my second daughter, Margaret, a tract of 500 acres situated on the Little Lehi Creek, etc. To my youngest daughter, Mary, a tract of 541 acres contiguous to the above, etc. The rest of my estate I bequeath to my son James and my three daughters to be equally divided among them, as Tenants in Common, not as Joint Tenants. My three negro slaves, Francis, Sampson, and Harry, shall be henceforth free and manumitted, I having ever been persuaded of the Injustice of Slavery." His sword he bequeathed to his brother Andrew, and his watch to his brother William. His wife and brothers Andrew and William were appointed executors.

James Allen married March 10, 1768, in Christ church, Philadelphia, Elizabeth, only child of John Lawrence, Esq., and his wife, Elizabeth Francis, a cousin of the mother of his brother Andrew's wife. She was born in Philadelphia, November 30, 1750, and after the death of her husband, James Allen, in 1778, married Hon. John Lawrence, a United States Senator from New York. Her father, John Lawrence, was born May 30, 1724, and died January 20, 1799.

ANNE PENN ALLEN.

James and Elizabeth Allen had four children, viz:

Anne Penn Allen, born February 19, 1769.

Margaret Elizabeth Allen, born April 21, 1772.

Mary Masters Allen, born January 4, 1776.

James Hamilton Allen, born January 24, 1778.

Anne Penn Allen, eldest daughter of James Allen, was born in Philadelphia, February 19, 1769. She has been described as one of the most splendid beauties this country has produced—a brunette with a warm, high color and auburn hair. Gilbert Stuart painted three portraits of her, of which it is said Thackeray was enraptured with, when he visited Philadelphia. She married, April 26, 1800, at Christ church, Philadelphia, James Greenleaf, then of Washington, D. C. Greenleaf was born in Boston, Mass., June 9, 1765, the son of William Greenleaf, a merchant of Boston, and Sheriff of Suffolk county in 1776. He was the twelfth of a family of fifteen, and descended from a family that settled in Newbury, Mass., in 1635. One of his sisters married Dr. Noah Webster, the compiler of Webster's Dictionary, and the poet, John Greenleaf Whittier, was descended from the same family.

In 1793 Greenleaf was appointed United States Consul at Amsterdam. He had been a resident of Holland for some years, being a partner in a mercantile house. In 1788 he married the Baroness Antonia Cornelia Elbertine Scholten van Aschat, from whom he was afterwards divorced.

Greenleaf was a speculator in lots in the early days of Washington, D. C., having at one time owned over 1,300 lots, and a third interest in over 7,000 more. He became a partner of Robert Morris and John Nicholson in the immense land purchases which ruined them and him. They organized in 1795, the North American Land Company, with Greenleaf as secretary, for the sale of 6,000,000 acres, which they had jointly selected, guaranteeing to the stockholders an annual dividend of six per cent. Morris and Nicholson contracted for the purchase of his share, giving him $1,150,000 in drafts on each other, which they never paid, and on which he was sued as indorser.

JAMES GREENLEAF.

In 1795 he bought General Philemon Dickinson's house on Chestnut street, Philadelphia for $28,000, and also Governor John Penn's country seat, Lansdowne, of his widow for $37,000. In 1797, Lansdowne was sold by the sheriff for $55,100, and the Chestnut street property was re-purchased by General Dickinson.

Because of the insolvency of Greenleaf, Miss

Allen, prior to her marriage, executed a deed conveying all her real estate to William Tilghman and John Lawrence, in trust. After their death, the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, passed an act in 1828, appointing Walter C. Livingston trustee.

During the last years, Mr. and Mrs. Greenleaf lived apart, Mr. Greenleaf residing in Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Greenleaf in her home at Fifth and Hamilton streets, in this city.

The beautiful grove of trees at the rear of her residence was a favorite spot for public meetings seventy-five years ago. Mrs. Greenleaf entertained lavishly until blindness prevented her active participation in society.

Mr. Greenleaf died in Washington, September 17, 1843, and is buried in the Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Greenleaf died at Allentown in 1851. The Allentown Friedensbote of September 25, 1851, has the following notice: "Died, on last Sunday (September 21, 1851), in this town, of old age, Ann P. Greenleaf, in her 83d year."

She is buried in North Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. James and Anne Penn Greenleaf had two daughters; the eldest, Mary Livingston Greenleaf, was born January 31, 1802. She was married at Allentown, July 12, 1824, by Rev. Rodney, to her cousin, Walter C. Livingston, of New York. The second daughter, Margaret Tilghman Greenleaf, was born in 1803, and married Charles Augustus Dale, of London, England, in July, 1832. Shortly after this Dale committed suicide by shooting himself, on account of the disgrace of his imprisonment in the old jail here in Allentown, in which he had been confined by reason of a family disagreement. They had one son, Allen Dale, a civil engineer in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who was drowned in the Raritan canal near Princeton, in September, 1895. Mrs. Dale died shortly after, in her ninety-third year.

Margaret Elizabeth Allen, second daughter of James Allen, was born April 21, 1772. She was married in Philadelphia, July 1, 1794, to William Tilghman, for twenty years Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, a son of James Tilghman. She died in Philadelphia, September 9, 1798, but her remains were brought here for interment under St. Paul's Lutheran church. Upon the erection of the present church, the remains were placed in the tower where a tablet marks the spot with this inscription: "A memorial of Margaret Elizabeth Tilghman, wife of William Tilghman, of the City of Philadelphia. Endowed with warm affection and an excellent understanding, she enjoyed the flattering prospect of an useful and Happy Life, but it pleased Almighty God, whose Providence, tho' unsearchable, is all-wise, that she should be cut off, in the flower of youth, from this transitory world. She died, surrounded by mourning friends, the 9th day of September, in the year of our Lord, 1798, and of her age the 27th."

She had one child, Elizabeth Margaret Tilghman, born in Philadelphia, April 19, 1796. She married Benjamin Chew, son of Benjamin Chew and his wife, Katherine Manning. She died in Philadelphia, June 16, 1817, and left one son, William Tilghman Chew, who died without issue.

Mary Masters Allen, the third daughter of James Allen, was born January 4, 1776. She was married in Christ church, Philadelphia, November 27, 1796, to Henry Walter Livingston, of Livingston Manor, N. Y. She was so famous for her graceful and profuse hospitality that she was long known in New York society as "Lady Mary." She died at Livingston Manor, December 11, 1855. Her husband, Henry W. Livingston, son of Walter Livingston and his wife Cornelia, daughter of Peter Schuyler, was born in 1768; graduated from Yale University; studied law and was secretary to Gouveneur Morris when Minister to France. He was a member of Congress from 1803 to 1807, and died at Livingston Manor, Columbia county, N. Y., December 22, 1810.

They had seven children; viz:

I. Henry W., of Livingston Manor. Died in Paris, France, February 19, 1848. Married Caroline Marie de Grasse Depau, daughter of Francis Depau. She died at Stuttgart, February 13, 1871. Their children were:

Henry W., married Angeline Urquhart, and had children, Mary, Henry W., and Bayard.

Silvia, died in 1873; married Johnston Livingston, of New York, and had two children, Carola and Estella.

Walter, of the Brooklyn bar, Surrogate of Kings county, N. Y. Married Silvia Coster, and had one child, Stephanie.

Marie, deceased, married Samuel M. Fox, of Philadelphia, and had a daughter, Stephanie, who died in 1878. She married H. B. Livingston, and had one daughter, Mary Angelica.

De Grasse, who married Anna Hyslop.

Robert, died in February, 1877; married Mary S. McRae, and had children, Duncan, Mary, Allen, Jacqueline, and Robert McRae.

Stephanie, died without issue at Santander, Spain, February 10, 1856. She was married to Baron Adolph Finot.

Louis Phillipe de M. Died unmarried in 1881.

II. Allen, who died unmarried at Rouen, France.

III. Walter Copake Livingston, the third son of Henry W. Livingston and his wife Mary Masters Allen, was a merchant, and his house at Eleventh and Girard streets, Philadelphia, was in the centre of the fashionable residence neighborhood in the '50s. He was at one time a member of the Senate of Pennsylvania, and was also United States Consul to Marseilles, France. He took his family abroad with him and repeated in France the brilliant entertainments with which he had dazzled Philadelphia society. After the family returned to this country came the crash. Mr. Livingston had become heavily interested in some iron furnaces near Media. The venture proved unsuccessful and the attempt to make it pay swallowed up his fortune. The family property in Allentown was also swept away. Mr. Livingston resided in Allentown part of the time in the old "Trout Hall," then called "The Livingston Mansion." He died January 31, 1872, aged 72 years.

Mr. Livingston married his cousin, Mary Livingston Greenleaf, and had children, as follows:

Anne Greenleaf, who died without issue, March 28, 1846. She married Thomas C. Rockhill, formerly Minister to China.

Tilghman, who died unmarried.

James, who died unmarried.

Walter, who died unmarried.

Henry Walter.

Meta, who died February 28, 1907, aged 75 years, and was unmarried.

Marion, who died unmarried, February 1, 1907, aged 68 years.

Florence, who died unmarried.

After Mr. Livingston's death, soon followed by that of his wife, two daughters and a son, but three members of the family remained, Marion, Meta, and a brother, who went to sea, and was never heard from again. The sisters moved to 2227 South Clarion street, where they resided until their death. They were buried in the family vault, originally in Christ church graveyard, but moved years ago to North Laurel Hill Cemetery. This vault has now been closed for the last time. The stone covering the vault is that of the father of Judge William Allen, and it bears this inscription: "Here Lyeth the Body of William Allen, Late Merchant of this City, who Dyed the 30th of August, 1725, aged 55 years."

IV. Mary, died in Paris, April 14, 1880. She married James Thompson, and had two children, James, who married Amelia Parnell, sister of Charles Stuart Parnell, M. P. for Ireland. They had one son, James Henry Livingston Thompson, who died in Paris, April, 1882.

Henry L., the second son, died unmarried.

V. Elizabeth, who was married to Wm. D. Henderson, of Boston, and died without issue.

VI. Cornelia, of Staten Island, N. Y., who married Carroll Livingston, and had children, Charles Carroll, and Brockhorst Livingston, a Lieutenant of U. S. N., who died unmarried.

VII. Anne, of Staten Island, who married Anson Livingston, and had three children:

Mary, who married Capt. Harrison, of U. S. A., and died without issue.

Anne Ludlow, unmarried.

Ludlow, died unmarried.

James Allen, son of James Allen, born January 24, 1778, died August 31, 1788, in his tenth year. His property then descended to his sisters, who, on May 17, 1798, made partition of the property in the town of Northampton, according to the opinion of Peter Rhoads, Thomas Mowharter, and George Palmer. Eventually Walter C. Livingston received title to all the property, and from him it passed into alien hands.

In the words of E. F. DeLancey, it may be said both of Philadelphia and of Allentown, that "the name of Allen, for more than a century the synonym for high ability, political power, great wealth and the first social position, is there no longer known."

Trout Hall.—Trout Hall, built by James Allen, in 1770, still stands in Allen Park, at Fourth and Walnut streets. This building, since the destruction of the Greenleaf Mansion, at Fifth and Hamilton streets, is all that remains in our city to remind us of the founders of the town, and it should be restored to its original appearance and preserved as a historic land-mark. It was originally a two-story and a half stone dwelling, about forty-five feet square, with a park on the north side and a beautiful lawn on the south side. A stone wall extended along Walnut street from Fifth to Jordan street. The front rooms, on the first floor of the mansion, which faced Union street, are wainscoted in black walnut and in every room is a rare marble mantel or fireplace. In later years, when the residence of Walter C. Livingston, it was called "The Livingston Mansion."

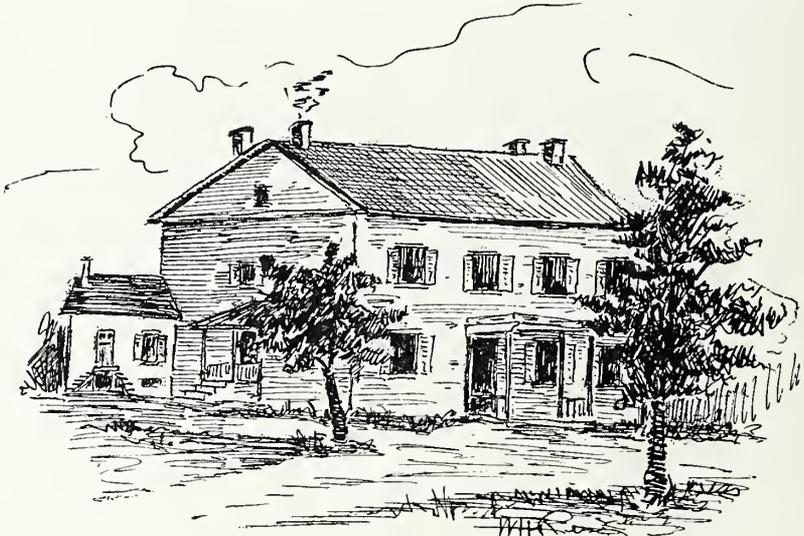

Later Tax Lists.—The tax list for 1773 gives the following names of residents of Allentown: Leonard Abel, Godlieb Ammore, George Brong, Simon Brenner, John Brotzman, Richard Backhouse, Jacob Bachman, Melchior Danner, Martin Derr, Martin Frelich, Nicholas Fox, Henry Gross, Caspar Grisinger, Conrad Hartzel, Lorenz Hauck, Henry Hagenbuch, Barthol Huber, Frantz Kuper, Philip Kugler, Michael Kraft, Peter Linn, John Lamm, Jacob Mohr, Peter Miller, John Miller, Dewalt Miller, John Miller, Jacob Moritz, Matthew McHenry, Daniel Nunemacher, Valentine Nicholas, Lewis Nicholas, Jacob Nunemacher, Peter Rhoads, Andrew Rieb, George Reeser, Mathias Ringel, George Schwab, George Schreiber, Abraham Savitz, George Smith, Frederick Smith, William Tennis, Tobias Titus, James Taylor, Esq., Mathias Wagner, Jacob Yohe. Single men.—William Anderson, Philip Ebert, Nicholas Gobel, George Hoffman, Michael Kreps, John Maurer, Michael Nagel, Philip Ritter, and Augustine Schitz.

First Stores.—The first store (in those days called a shop), in Allentown was opened by David Deshler, in 1764, who had a beer shop connected with it. He soon after sold both businesses and devoted his attention to his grist and saw mills. Mordecai Martin also opened a moved to Allentown and opened a store at the southeastern corner of Eighth and Hamilton streets, which he conducted for over fifty years. He died in 1835. Philip Boehm had a store here in 1776, but later removed to Lower Saucon township. In 1786, Henry W. Archer conducted a store in the town, which, in 1788, was conducted by James Wilson, who lived here until his death in 1834. Peter Snyder, about 1798, opened a store at the northwest corner of Seventh street and Market Square, where Weiler's liquor store is now located.

First Taverns.—The first tavern-keeper of Allentown was George Wolf, who is rated as an inn-keeper in the tax lists. He was here as early as 1762, and in 1763 was made captain of the company raised for defense against the Indians. His name does not appear after 1768. Frederick Schackler kept a tavern in 1765, but store in 1765, but remained in the town only two years. In 1765 Peter Rhoads opened a store, which he conducted until 1814. It was located at 107 North Seventh street and had a large number of customers from among the residents of the surrounding country, some coming even from beyond the Blue mountains. The journals of the business conducted from 1774 to 1814 are still in existence, owned by the writer.

TROUT HALL, BUILT IN 1770.

Frederick Schackler conducted a shop for a few years, but soon removed to Allen township. George Schreiber opened a store in 1768, which he conducted until his death in 1800. Lewis Nicholas had a store here in 1772 and 1773. In 1774, George Graff, who had conducted a store at Egypt, with his brother-in-law, Peter Kohler, changed his occupation in 1768 to that of store-keeper. George Schreiber opened a tavern in 1766 but by 1768 he also converted his tavern into a store.

Barthol Huber, who settled in Allentown in 1764, is assessed as an inn-keeper and shoemaker in 1765 and 1766. He is mentioned in the tax lists as an inn-keeper until 1773. In 1781 he is assessed as a tanner. Jacob Yohe kept a tavern in the town from 1768 to 1773.

In 1772, Nicholas Fox opened a tavern in a log building on the southwest corner of Seventh and Linden streets, called "The Rainbow," which he conducted until his death in 1809. It was a very popular resort and "battalion day" was usually held in its vicinity.

Henry Hagenbuch kept the "Cross Keys" in a stone building at the northwest corner of Eighth and Hamilton streets as early as 1772. This property was in the Hagenbuch family many years.

In 1776 there were six taverns in the town kept by Nicholas Fox, Henry Hagenbuch, Michael Kelchner, Michael Schroeder, George Weiss, and Philip Klotz. In 1781 Barthol Hittle, Widow Grumbach, Andrew Rieb and Henry Gross were also tavern-keepers and in 1788 George Miller is assessed as an innkeeper.

Ferry.—Christian Rinker, of Upper Saucon, petitioned the Northampton county court on March 18, 1766, for a license to keep a public house, stating that he intended "to move next spring to Allentown to the ferry, on the road leading from Easton to Reading, and from Bethlehem to Allentown, so that his house will be a convenient stage for travelers on the said ferry and road." His petition was signed by Melchoir Kneppley, William Chilcott, David Owen, Wm. Samuel, Peter Kneppley, Aquilla Tool, Henry Brunner, Thomas Owen, Andreas Erdman, George Bachman, Philip Bahl, Caspar Weber, and Christian Jung, as recommenders. His request was granted on Sept. 1, 1766.

Abraham Rinker was the ferry-keeper after Christian Rinker, and in 1781, Caspar Weaver is mentioned as owning the ferry. In 1795 Jacob Clader became ferryman and conducted it until the building of the first bridge in 1812. The point where the ferry crossed the river was a short distance south of the present bridge. Previous to the establishment of the ferry the river was crossed by a ford, the road leading over the island and fording the western stream.

Revolutionary Period.—On the eighth of July, 1776, an election was held in Allentown for members of the first constitutional convention in Pennsylvania. The inhabitants of the townships west of the Lehigh river comprised the second election district of Northampton county and voted at Allentown. The judges of election were John Gerhart, David Deshler, and George Breinig. The men elected were Peter Rhoads, of Allentown, and Peter Burkhalter, of Whitehall township. The convention met at the State House in Philadelphia, on July 15, 1776.

The urgent appeal of the Deputies of the Provincial Conference held June 25th, 1776, aroused the people and four companies of men were raised in the county, one of which Capt. Henry Hagenbuch, of Allentown, commanded. This company participated in the battle of Long Island. Capt. George Graff, of Allentown, was in command of a company of the Flying Camp, from June to December, 1776, which saw service at Trenton and Princeton. A detailed history of the movements of these troops appears in the chapter on the Revolutionary War.

The Liberty Bell and the chimes of Christ church, Philadelphia, were secreted in Zion Reformed church in September, 1777, and in the same month a laboratory for the manufacture of cartridges was removed to Allentown and many sick and wounded soldiers were quartered in the church building and in the homes of citizens. On September 18, 1777, Dr. Shippen, Director General of the Continental Hospital, wrote that he required room for 2,000 sick and wounded at Bethlehem, Easton, and Allentown. The hospitals remained in these towns until April, 1778, when all were removed to Reading. In October, 1777, works were established at Allentown for repairing arms and the manufacture of saddles and scabbards for bayonets. Captain Stiles was in charge of the depot for military supplies and the armourers employed by the state were John Tyler and Ebenezer Cowell. In the year 1778, the headquarters for a continental wagon brigade was located on the south side of the Little Lehigh creek, in what is now the Twelfth ward of Allentown.

In February, 1777, the town was filled with soldiers, the battalion of militia of this district assembling here, numbering 600 men. They remained two weeks and marched off on the 15th of February. During the Revolution many prominent persons visited Allentown, either on business of the government or on their way to other towns. A full history of the Revolution is given in Chapter VIII.

Prominent Visitors.—On September 17, 1777, James Hamilton, former Colonial Governor of the Province and uncle to Mr. Allen, arrived at Trout Hall, where he was sent by resolve of Congress. He was very happy that he was so well situated, and remained here the entire winter.

On November 2, 1777, John Hancock passed through here on his way from York to Boston. He was escorted by a troop of fifteen horsemen.

On November 21, 1777, Mr. Allen wrote in his diary that "Mr. John Adams, who passed through here a week ago, said that independence was now unalterably settled." He adds, "The General Hospital is still here and the director general, Dr. Shippen, and his assistant, Dr. Bond, my old acquaintance, with my wife's cousin, T. Lawrence, make out a good society, and we endeavor to banish Politics."

On January 2, 1779, a troop of Pulaski's cavalry passed through here on the way to Lebanon for winter quarters.

Mrs. Washington, or Lady Washington, as she is called in the Moravian Diary, passed through here, with her escort, on June 16, 1779, when she left Bethlehem on her way to Virginia.

On October 6, 1780, Joseph Reed, president of the Supreme Executive Council; John Bayard, speaker of the assembly, and David Rittenhouse, state treasurer, escorted by twenty Bucks county militia, on horseback, passed through here on the way to Reading.

General George Washington passed through Allentown on July 25, 1782. An entry in Freeman's Journal, dated July 31, 1782, reads, "On Wednesday last his excellency General Washington left this city (Philadelphia) in order to join the main army on the banks of the Hudson."

From an entry in his expense account (the book is to be seen in the Congressional Library), it appears that his stopping place for the night of the 24th was at Pottsgrove (now Pottstown), thirty-six miles northwest of Philadelphia.

His next stop was Bethlehem, to reach which place he must have passed through Allentown. The Moravian Diary says on July 25, 1782, that General Washington arrived quite unexpectedly, accompanied by two aides and no escort. These aides were Col. Trumbull and Major Walker. On the 27th he arrived at Newburg.

Joseph Hopkinson, the author of "Hail Columbia," who practiced law at Easton for a time, visited Allentown in 1791, as the following letter of introduction was handed by him to Judge Peter Rhoads. It reads:

PHILADELPHIA, June 4, 1791.

DEAR SIR: I expect this will be delivered to you by Mr. Joseph Hopkinson, who has regularly studied the law and been admitted an attorney of our Court of Common Pleas, after an examination at which I attended and in which he acquitted himself much to our satisfaction. As he proposes settling in your county, I beg you would favour him with your friendship. You will find him deserving of it and his clients will not be disappointed in the trust they repose in him. If I can get leisure at your June Term to pay one more visit to the land of trout and strawberries, you will probably see at Easton.

Your old friend, JAMES BIDDLE."

Early Churches.—The first church building erected in Allentown was a log building situated on the lot at the southeast corner of Hamilton and Church streets, which was granted for that purpose by the founder of the town. It was used as a house of worship by the Reformed and Lutheran inhabitants. The Reformed congregation erected a stone structure from 1773 to 1776, after which the Lutheran congregation occupied the log building until 1794, when they erected a building on South Eighth street. The history of these two congregations, Zion Reformed and St. Paul's Lutheran, appears in detail under the head of "Churches."

In 1767, John Ritter, John Godfried Enax, and others, petitioned the governor of the province for license to collect funds for building a church for the Roman Catholics living in Allentown, but the project was never carried out. Rev. Theodore Schneider, of Churchville, now Bally, Berks county, ministered to the Catholics of the town at that time.

Early Schools.—In the early days it was customary for the choir-leader or organist to teach the school which each congregation usually maintained. As early as 1767, if not earlier, a school was maintained in Allentown by the Reformed congregation, as Rev. Gros reported in 1768 that in each of his congregations was one winter school.

The first schoolmaster of whom there is any record was Francis Turner, who was schoolmaster at Allentown, on October 1, 1774, when he purchased an A, B, C, book and a half-quire of paper at a store in the town. It is almost certain that he kept school in the log church building, which was used for a schoolhouse after the erection of the new stone church. Jacob Fischer was schoolmaster in 1777, but the next year removed to Lynn township. John Daniel Jaquet, the next schoolmaster of whom we have any record, taught here in 1783. In 1785, Rev. Blumer reported thirty-five scholars in the school. In this year also specific mention is made of the schoolhouse when window glass for the building was purchased by Jacob Spinner. In the year 1800, John Philip Grimm is recorded as the schoolmaster. Among the early English schoolmasters were one Brown, previous to 1795; Thatcher, from 1795 to 1800, who taught English to the children of three families in 1797, and John Ryan, who taught in an octagonal school-house with steeple and bell, built for him by James Wilson, on the rear of the Wilson lot on Church street, opposite Zion Reformed church. This was known as the English school and was in existence at least thirty years, as Ryan was still here about 1825.

Growth of the Town.—After the Revolution, in 1782, there were fifty-nine houses in Allentown, the ownership of which is indicated by the following assessment list:

Houses.	Houses.
Albert, Abraham, potter, 1	Dyler, John, laborer, . . . 1
Bishop, John, tailor, . .	Deshler, David, grist- and Brenier, George, shoe-	saw-mill and 75 acres of maker,	land, 1
Buchman, Jacob, laborer, 1	Deshler, Charles, shop-
Blank, George, tailor, . . 1	keeper,
Preston, James, mason, . 1	Erhard, Michael, shoe-
Bolzius, Gottfried, doctor, 1	maker,
Bemper, Christian, shoe-	Frolich, Martin, 1
maker, 1	Fox, Nicholas, inn-keeper, 1

Houses.

Gangwere, George,
 Gall, William,
 Groff, George, 1
 Gews, Jacob, laborer, 1
 Gangwere, Andrew, tailor, 1
 Gabel, Frederick, carpenter, 1
 Gross, Henry, inn-keeper, 1
 Gangwere, Matthew, wheelwright,
 Huber, Barthol, tanner, . 1
 Horn, John, hatter, 1
 Hertz, Peter, laborer, 1
 Hauck, Lawrence, laborer, 2
 Horbach, Peter, laborer, 1
 Hagenbuch, Henry, inn-keeper, 1
 Hauck, Peter, shoemaker, 1
 Henry, Abraham, skindresser, 1
 Huber, Jacob, shoemaker, 1
 Hettle, Barthol, inn-keeper, 1
 Krumbach, Widow, inn-keeper,
 Klotz, Philip, shoemaker, 1
 Krumbach, Conrad (and 50 acres of land), 1
 Kuntz, Michael, joiner, . 1
 Keiper, John, tobacconist, 1
 Young, Andrew, shoemaker, 1
 Yeoh, Jacob, 1
 Moll, John, tailor, 1
 Miller, John, joiner, 1
 Miller, Peter, tailor, 1
 Murphy, John, watchmaker, 1
 Mewhorter, Thomas, tanner, 1

Single Men.

John Widder.
 Henry Heisser.
 Jacob Fink.
 George Ad. Blank.
 John Reesomer.
 John Gabel.
 Bernhard Kline.

Dawall Young.
 John Moor.
 Caspar Smith.
 Rudolph Smith.
 Samuel Greter.
 Jacob Knauus.
 John Smith.

Houses.

Nonnemacher, Henry, weaver (and 23 acres of land), 1
 Newhard, Jacob, joiner, . 1
 Nagle, Leonard, laborer, . 2
 Ott, Nicholas, mason, . . 1
 Riller, Philip, laborer, . . 1
 Rhoads, Peter, shop-keeper, 1
 Reeser, George, laborer, . 1
 Reel, Andrew, inn-keeper, 1
 Ringel, Matthew, smith, . 1
 Rinker, Abraham, hatter, . 1
 Shick, Christian, laborer, 1
 Shreiber, George, (and 25 acres of land), 1
 Shade, Henry, 2
 Shraeder, Michael, 1
 Steer, Richard, skindresser, 1
 Spade, John, laborer, 1
 Smith, Joseph, shoemaker, 1
 Weiss, George, inn-keeper, 1
 Weiss, Jacob, tailor, 1
 Wartinton, Joseph, tailor,
 Worman, Conrad, 200 acres of land,
 Winsch, Frederick, laborer,
 Weaver, Caspar, ferry and 80 acres of land,
 Zettle, Conrad (200 acres of land and 1 grist mill), .
 Dornblaeser, Yost, laborer,
 Allen, Elizabeth, 1
 Greenleaf, Isaac, (200 acres of land),
 Turney, Adam (90 acres of land),
 Henry Zettle,
 George Giess,
 Abraham Spinner,
 Rudolph Shmitt,
 George Neids,

Single Freemen.

Robert Young,
 Christian Ginginger,
 Mathias Knepply,
 Valentine Wieder,

Dr. John David Schoepf, of Ansbach, Germany, who traveled through Pennsylvania in 1783 and 1784, wrote of Allentown and vicinity, as follows:

“Six miles from Quaker-town, we arrived at a little village of 10-12 houses and a mill, named for the first settler, Stoffel Wagner’s, and after we had driven through more lonesome woods and between more high hills, and had crossed Saucan creek, there opened up a splendid valley, its mellow, fat soil presenting everywhere a cheerful prospect; and soon after we came to the quiet, but magnificent Leheigh. The last hills between Quaker-town and this valley have the same name as the river, that is, are called the Leheigh hills; so far as I could see they do not form one connected chain, but are broken ridges and heights, quite separate or meeting by their jutties, and in appearance ranged in sharp lines from east to west, but really they fall in with the other hills and are part of a broken chain running northeast to southwest. The surface of the higher hills was partly of the blueish stone mentioned and partly of a sort of laminated gneiss. But in the valley there appeared a grey limestone, quite without petrifications. A mile perhaps across the valley, and one reaches the banks of the Leheigh, which with a magical beauty show united every charm of a delectable reguin. Almost all the finest North American shrubs and trees push forward to lend the scene heightened grace, their branches flung far over the river and shadows cast—the calamus, the rhododendron, cephalanthus, sassafras, aselea, tulip tree, magnolia, and many others which we desire consumedly as guests in our gardens. The Leheigh river is not more than 100 yards wide, a soft, clear, pure, stream, flowing over a rocky bottom. Soon we caught sight of Bethlehem lying near, the first view of which, from its situation, and from the orderliness (for America) of its large houses, made from a distance the best impression, and all the more because to reach this excellently chosen site so long a road through such wild regions must be followed.

“The whole way from Philadelphia we saw only a few birds in the forests, chiefly woodpeckers and certain birds of pray. We had met with no wild beast nor with any other indigenous quadruped. Moreover, very few flowers appeared along the road, and no great variety of plants. The woods are in large part composed of the several kinds of North American oaks, the Nearly every family seems to have owned a cow, the enumeration showing one hundred and two, while of horses there were but eight owned in the town.

The tax list for 1788 contains the following names:

Albert, Abraham, potter.
 Bollzius, Gottlieb, Dr.
 Blanck, George, taylor.
 Bachman, Jacob.
 Brousen, Widow.
 Deshler, Charles, inn-holder,
 Derr, Joseph, wheelwright,
 Shener, Peter,
 Ehrhard, Michael, cordwainer.
 Fox, Nicholas, innkeeper.
 Folk, Valentine,
 Gangwair, Andrew, taylor,
 Gross, Henry, innholder,
 Gangwair, Jacob,
 Geable, Frederick, baker,
 Ginginger, Daniel,
 Ginginger, Christian,
 Graff, George, store,
 Henry, Abraham, skindresser.
 Hover, Conrad, sadler.
 Houck, Peter, cordwainer.
 Hagenbuch, Henry,
 Hertz, Peter,
 Doctor Bond’s house.
 Horn, John, hatter,
 Jung, Andrew, cordwainer,
 Jung Deobald, saddler.
 Kuns, Michael, joiner,
 Kauffman, George, turner,
 Kauffman & Kuns,
 Keipper, John, tobacconist,
 Keiper, Peter, cordwainer,
 Klotz, Philip,

Meckley, Jacob,
 Miller, John, joiner,
 Murphy, John, clockmaker,
 Miller, George, innholder,
 Mohawter, Thomas, tanner,
 Miller, John, taylor,
 Mull, John, gunsmith,
 Mohr, John, joiner,
 Meyer, Nicholas, blue dyer,
 Neuhard, Jacob, joiner,
 Nagle, Leonard, butcher,
 Nunemacher, weaver,
 Ott Nicholas, mason,
 Preston, James, mason,
 Rhoads, Peter, Esq’r, store,
 Rineker, Abraham, batter,
 Reeser, George, weaver,
 Reeb, Andrew,
 Ritter, Philip,
 Shantz, Henry, joiner,
 Steahr, Richard, skindresser,
 Spinner, Jacob,
 Shmitt, Casper, brickmaker,
 Shriver, George, cordwainer,
 Shreader, Michael, blacksmith,
 Shade, Henry, cordwainer,
 Shmitt, George, taylor,
 Turnbleaser, Jost,
 Turnben, James, storekeeper,
 Frederick, George, blacksmith,
 Geiger, Jacob, clockmaker,
 Miller, John, cordwainer,
 Bishop, Anthony,

sassafras, tulip tree, sour gum, chestnut, birch, wild-ash, and other which are commonly found along the coast as well. Nor did we find many mature seeds nor many seed-bearing plants, so that we became uneasy, thinking that if we had no better fortune farther on, our journey would afford us little pleasure in these respects. And especially, we had seen nothing thus far which as a product of the country might be highly recommended for adoption in other lands. In most places the soil seemed to be only of a moderate goodness, in the valleys and flats a few conspicuously fertile spots. The inhabitants of such a country might, to be sure, call themselves under a mild government, so long as they lived by the yield of their lands in peace and satisfied with very inconsiderable returns, extensive possessions balancing want of natural fertility and unskilful cultivation. I do not yet observe any exclusive advantage of this country in itself, beyond that arising from the sparseness of the population—that is to say, the diminished difficulty that people of a certain condition find in accumulating a landed estate has been hitherto the especial allurements held out by America, and this may be the case for a long time to come, but not everywhere equally so.

“Allen-town, of which the official name is Northampton, numbers 40-50 houses: the first name was that of a fort which in the war before the last stood several miles away towards the mountains, as defence against the Indians, called Fort Allen and now in ruins.

“The road from here to Reading leads over the ridges of connected hills, which are counted a part of the afore-mentioned Dry Land. Perhaps three miles from Allen-town is the famous curiosity of the region the so-called ‘Big Spring’ which breaks out of the earth in a vein large as a man’s leg and within the first hundred rods of its course sets three mills going. It appears that in this hilly and dry country the water is assembled at only a few places, gushing out thence in greater volume and force. This range of hills is too low to furnish such supplies of water, but running as they do with the Blue mountains it may be supposed that the few (and therefore more considerable) springs of the Dry Land come from the mountains, and are here raised through subterranean canals, as by an elbowed pipe.

“Ten miles from Allen-town is Maguntchy, a village of few houses—its name is Indian. Not far off is Cedar creek which also rises in a very large spring. The Lehigh hills are now to the left and pretty near; they appear to make a continuous parallel course with the Blue mountains, which are constantly in sight at a distance of 8-10 miles running uniformly; whereas the summits of the Lehigh hills are more cut into and of a wave formation. The land hereabouts is fairly good; fields and meadows of a fertile appearance, the latter conspicuously green at this time. The farm management seems pretty orderly. One gets a glimpse of many good stone houses, many of them very neat, and everything about the premises shows order and attention. The people are mainly Germans, who speak bad English and distressing German. The buckwheat, greatly seeded here after wheat for the second harvest, stood in full bloom and with the pennyroyal (Cunila pulegiodes) so common on all the roads made a strong and pleasant evening odor.

“America is indeed the land of the oak. All the forests are largely oak, but the trees are nowhere either large or strong. What we have seen yesterday and to-day would be counted young wood, but this is hardly probable, because we observed no old stumps. Besides, the thin trunks do not stand very close together; the dry soil of these hills does not give any superfluous nourishment. And this was confirmed by the accounts of the inhabitants who say they rarely find an oak more than six inches through. Hence they are obliged to fetch their fence rails 4-6 miles, split chestnut-rails being used for this purpose, the oak rotting faster especially if the bark is left on.”

That improvements were making in and near the town is shown by the following petition for a bridge across the Jordan creek; the petitioners apparently desired the bridge to be erected at Hamilton street; this, in the following remonstrance, is strongly resisted; the reasons given for this resistance, notwithstanding they were proper at that time, will, to the present generation, be very interesting, particularly that part stating that the inhabitants, by having the bridge erected, “would entail upon themselves a burden of expenses so enormous and intolerable that they are entirely incapable of undergoing it.” The effect of the remonstrance was that the bridge was erected further down the stream:

“Petition presented to March Sessions, 1788, of Northampton county Court, respecting a bridge over Jordan creek, at the town of Allen-town, in said county, &c.

“Your petitioners find themselves greatly aggrieved by a grant of a petition preferred by sundry inhabitants of Salisbury township afore-said, for the laying out a road from the town of Northampton to the ferry over the Lehigh, and erecting a bridge over Jordan creek, which petition was signed, and the prayer thereof granted, in so short a time that the subscribers could not possibly state their objections against it.

"That your petitioners now beg leave to lay before your worships the reasons why they conceive that the said road and bridge, if laid out and erected on the place proposed, is a great grievance to the township of Salisbury, viz:

"That the road to be laid out from the church to the place where the bridge is to be built will cost a great sum in making it passable, on account of the steepness of the hill: that the annual repairs of the same will create great expense; and that on account of the clay soil, it will be next to impossible to keep the said road passable for many seasons.

"That on account of the steepness of the bank of the Jordan on the town side, among other inconveniences, it will be impossible for any cattle to come to the water in any season of the year.

"That if the said bridge be erected at the place proposed of the length of eighty feet, according to contract, it will be necessary that a bridge dyke or dam be erected from the end of the said bridge to the rising ground twenty-five or thirty rods long, over so much low meadow ground, which will create an expense to the township of many hundred pounds, besides the unavoidable annual costly repairs, and the costs of making and repairing a new road from thence to the ferry, the raising of which enormous sums, and the prospect of the unavoidable yearly repairs, would be an intolerable burthen for the township, without any the least benefit, especially in the present time, when the inhabitants, with their utmost endeavors, find it hardly possible to pay their regular taxes. Whereas, if the road would remain where it now is, and the intended bridge be built where the road now crosses the creek, all those enormous expenses in making the new road, and twenty-five or thirty rods bridge or dam, besides the certain annual expenses for repairs, would be prevented, and the new bridge, if erected in the old road, would cost fifty pounds less than it is possible on the place proposed.

"That further, if the bridge is to be built on the place proposed, and any repair is to be made thereon, or on the bridge over the low ground (which will most certainly happen after very high water), the whole passage will be stopped entirely, as it will be impossible to ford the Jordan in that place even when the water is lowest, on account of the steepness of one of the banks.

"That the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth Allen, through which this new road is to be laid out principally, will suffer greatly, and the value thereof be lessened by five hundred pounds, without any advantage to others.

"Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray your worships to take the above into your serious consideration and alter the said grant for the said new road and bridge, that the same may not be laid out and erected on the place proposed, and to order the bridge to be built where the road at present crosses the Jordan, which will release the township of Salisbury from an enormous expense, a burden so intolerable that they are entirely incapable to undergo it.

Your petitioners, &c., &c., David Deshler, George Blank, Adam Deshler, Jno. Knauss," and about fifty other signers.

The United States Gazetteer, compiled by Joseph Scott, in 1795, describes Allentown in the following words: "A handsome and flourishing town of Northampton county, pleasantly situated on the point of land which is formed by the junction of Jordan creek and the Little Lehigh. It is regularly laid out, and contains about ninety dwellings, a German Lutheran and a Calvinist church, an academy, and three merchant mills."

Post-Office Established.—The inhabitants of Allentown secured their mail at Bethlehem until 1803, when a post-office was established in the Compass and Square hotel, which then occupied the site of the Hotel Allen, with its proprietor, George Savitz as postmaster. It was the universal custom at that time to send letters by travelers and frequently men who intended to journey to distant points advertised in the newspaper their willingness to carry letters to persons residing at their destination. In 1776 there were only 75 post-offices in the United States. Until 1816 the rates of postage were: For a single letter composed of a single sheet of paper, under 40 miles, 8 cents; under 90 miles, 10 cents; under 150 miles, 12½ cents; under 300 miles, 17 cents; under 500 miles, 20 cents, and over 500 miles, 25 cents. In 1816 these rates were slightly changed, and were in force until 1845, when a rate of five cents per one-half ounce for a letter carried 300 miles and ten cents over 300 miles was established. In 1851 letter postage was fixed at three cents per one-half ounce, under 3,000 miles, if prepaid; if not prepaid, five cents; over 3,000 miles, six or twelve cents. In 1852 stamps and stamped envelopes were ordered. The pre-payment of postage did not become a law until March 3, 1855. In 1863 the rate was made uniform at three cents on all domestic letters of one-half ounce and on Oct. 1, 1883, was reduced to two cents.

Early Families.—Among the early residents of Allentown, while it was still a village, were Richard Backhouse, an Englishman, who subsequently removed to Bucks county, where he became connected with the Durham furnace; George Blank; George Brang; Charles Deshler, a store-keeper, who died in 1841; Justus Eckert; Henry Gross; George Graff, a store-keeper at Eighth and Hamilton streets; Andrew Gangevere, tailor, who lived on North Seventh, near Linden; Frederick Goebel, baker; Daniel and Christian Ginkinger; John Horn, hatter, who lived on the west side of North Seventh, between Linden and Turner, and who died in 1800; Abraham Henry; Peter Hertz; John Keiper, tobacconist on South Seventh street; Peter Keiper, shoemaker, who died in 1813; John Miller, joiner; John Miller, tailor; John Moll, gunsmith; John Murphy, who made the tall clocks then generally used; Thomas Mewhorter, who lived at Lehigh and Laurence streets, where he had a tan-yard; Jacob Newhard, joiner, who lived on Hamilton, near Eighth; Leonard Nagle, butcher; James Preston, mason; Jacob Spinner; Michael Schroeder, blacksmith; Dr. John Frederick Ruhe, apothecary; Caspar Weaver, who ran the ferry; James Wilson, store-keeper, and later state senator; Conrad Worman, owner of Worman's spring, and Jacob Geiger, clock-maker.

CHAPTER XX.

ALLENTOWN AS A BOROUGH. 1811-1867.

Incorporation.—Allentown was incorporated as a borough under the name of Northampton on March 18, 1811, when the act of incorporation was approved by Governor Simon Snyder, after it had passed the legislature. The act contained the following clause prescribing the boundaries:

“The town of Northampton shall be and the same is hereby erected into a borough, which shall be called the ‘Borough of Northampton,’ and shall be comprised within the following bounds, to wit: Beginning at a post on the northern bank of Little Lehigh creek, thence extending by lands of John Wagner and Abraham Worman, and running along the line dividing the town and the outlots, north eighteen degrees west, to a stone, the northwestern corner of said town; thence along the line dividing the town and outlots, north, seventy-two degrees east, to a post on the western bank of Jordan Creek; thence down the said creek, the several courses thereof, to the junction of the said Lehigh and Jordan creeks; thence up the said Lehigh Creek, the several courses thereof, to the place of beginning.”

First Election.—The first election was ordered to be held upon the first Monday in May, 1811, at the public house of George Savitz, a two-story stone building on the site of the present Hotel Allen. The election was held May 6th, and the following were elected as the borough’s first municipal officers:

Burgess, Hon. Peter Rhoads.

Town Council: George Graff, Chairman, Dr. Jacob Martin, John Miller (tailor), John Keiper, Sen., and Leonard Nagle. High Constable, John F. Ruhe, Jr., Road and Street Commissioners, Conrad Huber and John Mohr.

These officers were qualified May 20, 1811, by Charles Deshler, justice of the peace, and the town council elected George Rhoads, town clerk.

On July 15, 1811, the Council passed an ordinance providing for the collection of a tax of one mill and a half on the dollar, to create a fund to defray the contingent and other expenses of the borough and on Feb. 6, 1812, Burgess Rhoads issued a precept to the high constable to collect the same. The amount of the duplicate for the year 1811 was $187.43½, which was paid to John Horn, treasurer. An ordinance passed by the Council on Feb. 5, 1812, directed the high constable to suppress and disperse all disorderly meetings of any kind and to prevent strangers or others from breaking the Sabbath, and gave him authority to suppress vice and immorality. An ordinance passed June 6, 1812, and signed by Jacob Martin, chairman, read as follows: “Be it ordained that the Public Square is hereby given up as a donation to the county of Lehigh for the sole purpose of erecting the public buildings of said county thereon and for no other.”

An ordinance passed May 29, 1813, directed the purchase of two additional fire-ladders, at least 25 feet long, and that a shed for storing them be erected on Union street, between Allen and William streets.

In 1814, ordinances were passed prohibiting the practice of allowing any kind of horned cattle to remain at night on the streets and alleys from April 1st to December 1st, and also prohibiting the running at large of horses, under a fine of one dollar; of hogs, under a fine of seventy-five cents, and of geese, under a fine of fifty cents each. In 1822, ordinances were passed prohibiting the running at large of dogs under fine of one dollar each and regulating the sale of cordwood. In 1824, an ordinance was passed regulating the building and repairing of chimneys.

Early Street Improvements.—The borough streets were uneven and poorly drained, no grade had been established and sidewalks were unknown, and the second ordinance adopted, on July 15, 1811, directed the street commissioners to have all the streets and alleys ranged and opened according to the plan of the town, and to have all streets and alleys cleared, repaired, and passable with horses, carts, and wagons.

An ordinance passed May 30, 1812, read: “The road and street commissioners are hereby notified to have the streets and alleys surveyed, regulated, and laid out according to the original plan, and to have power to remove all articles deemed public nuisances, fences, etc.” It was also ordained and enacted “that in Allen and Hamilton streets, twelve feet wide on each side, and in all other streets, ten feet on each side, shall be allotted as a foot-path or pavement, which shall be kept clear and passable by the owner or possessor of each respective lot or lots adjoining said footway.”

In Section 5 of the same ordinance it was decreed that the road and street commissioners of the borough should proceed to employ a surveyor or surveyors as soon as convenient to lay out the streets and alleys, at least before the 15th day of September, 1812, and the streets so to be laid out were comprised within the following bounds: "Union street, extending from Ann street to Margaret; John, Hamilton, Andrew, and Turner streets, every one of them to begin from Ann street, and to extend to Margaret street, and Ann, James, Allen, William, and Margaret streets, to begin from Union, and to extend as far as Turner street, including all such alleys as may fall within the above-mentioned limits, provided that no lot containing a crop of grain or any other crop shall, in consequence of this ordinance, be disturbed, nor the fences of such lots removed before such crops shall be gathered."

Ordinance No. 6, passed Sept. 1, 1812, provided for the opening of William (Sixth) street, "from its intersection with Turner street to the farthest extremity of the plan of the borough." Section 2 provided that the commissioners should "notify the proprietor immediately, or his agent, so that they may remove such wood as may be found growing thereon and dispose at their own pleasure within twenty days after they are duly notified."

Notwithstanding the several actions of the Council, but little was done in the way of street improvements during the first fifteen years of the existence of the borough government. On June 4, 1828, the following resolution or ordinance was adopted by the Council:

"Whereas numerous complaints are daily made respecting the state of the streets, alleys, gutters, and pavements in the borough, and the progress of improvement demands the attention of this Council, be it ordained and enacted that the four principal streets, and as many of the other by-streets as the citizens residing and holding property in such streets desire, shall be regulated according to a reasonable plan of descent from the highest parts of each of them, and that the pavements and gutters be laid out to correspond as much as possible with the natural rise and descent of the adjoining streets."

This plan contemplated the taking of the market-place as the standard point, and the measurement of the respective descents in every street from it. The lot-owners were "to set up curbstones and fix gutters as the regulators should direct."

In May, 1832, Simon Sweitzer was appointed chief engineer, "to regulate pavements, curbs, gutters, streets, etc.," and in the following June he reported a plan "for leveling and regulating Market Square and Hamilton street to the Jordan," which was favored by the Council and acted upon, though only to a limited extent.

Enoch Lewis made a plan for the systematic grading of the streets and conformance of the sidewalks to the same, which was adopted by Council, Feb. 4, 1834, and an ordinance was passed by the Council in August, of 1835, obliging property-owners to dig down or fill up their sidewalks in accordance therewith. From this time on an engineer was regularly employed, receiving his office at first by appointment and afterwards by election, and street improvement was carried on quite rapidly and effectively.

Annexations.—The corporate name of the borough was changed from Northampton to Allentown by authority of Section 20 of an act passed April 16, 1838. The council was by this act increased from five to ten members.

The original boundaries were not extended until 1852. By an ordinance passed August 30, 1852, a portion of Northampton township was added to the borough. The territory was described as follows: "Beginning at the northeast corner of said borough, thence north 70 degrees east to the west bank of the Lehigh river at low water mark, thence down the same, the several courses and distances thereof to the junction of said river with the little Lehigh creek, thence up the same to the south-east corner of the borough, and thence along the eastern borough line to the place of beginning." This section had been long known as Lehigh Port and was locally dubbed St. Domingo, from the fact that it was the residence of quite a number of negro families, and was familiarly called "Mingo."

A small part of Northampton township was annexed by ordinance passed Sept. 14, 1852, described as "beginning at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Jackson streets, westwardly 958 feet, north 20 degrees, west, 616 feet, thence north 70 degrees east, 974 feet to Jefferson street and thence along said Jefferson street 798 feet to the place of beginning."

The names of the streets of the borough were changed by ordinance passed Jan. 18, 1853. Two maps of the borough had been published, one by Phaon Jarret, in 1842, and the other by A. E. Rogerson, in 1850.

This ordinance adopted the names of the streets as set forth in Jarret's map, with the following alterations: Andrew street, changed to Linden street; John street to Walnut street; Margaret, William, Allen, James, and Ann streets, changed to Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth streets. The street next to the Lehigh river was named Front street, and Second,

Third, and Fourth streets were located, and named. The words north, south, east or west, were added to the names of the streets, as they were located north or south of Hamilton street, or east or west of Seventh street. Alleys were named as follows: Between Front and Second, Water; Second and Third, Wood; Third and Fourth, Foundry; Fourth and Fifth, Penn; Fifth and Sixth, Law; Sixth and Seventh, Church; Seventh and Eighth, Hall; Eighth and Ninth, Lumber; Ninth and Tenth, Fountain; Liberty and Gordon, North; Gordon and Chew, Pine; Chew and Turner, Oak; Turner and Linden, Chestnut; Linden and Hamilton, Court; Hamilton and Walnut, Maple; Wal-creek being called Lehigh ward, while the older part of the borough was divided into the South and North wards, the former including all west of the Jordan and south of Hamilton street, and the latter all west of the Jordan and north of Hamilton street. Each ward formed an election district, and elections were held in the Lehigh Ward, at the public house then occupied by Tilghman Kleppinger; in the South ward, at the public house of Widow Kleckner, and in the North ward at the public house of Samuel Moyer.

Elections were directed to be held annually on the third Friday in March, in each ward, for a Burgess and high constable, to serve one year;

ALLENTOWN IN 1830.

nut and Union, Hickory; between Lawrence and Union, from Fifth to Eighth, Hill; between the little Lehigh and Union street, from Seventh to the little Lehigh, Crook; between Fifth and Sixth, from Union to Lawrence, Locust; and between Fifth street and the western line of the borough, Lawrence street was located.

This ordinance also directed that the houses be numbered, commencing with number one, at Seventh and Hamilton streets, "thence counting upwards in each street, towards the outer extremity thereof."

By an act of assembly, passed April 28, 1853, Allentown was divided into three wards, the territory between the Lehigh river and Jordan two members of town council, to serve two years; an auditor, to serve three years, and a justice of the peace, constable, assessor, school directors and election officers.

The Lehigh ward was changed to the First ward by an act passed March 8, 1859, and at the same time, the South ward was divided into the Second and Third by making Water and Seventh streets the dividing line and the North ward was also divided by Seventh street into the Fourth and Fifth wards.

By an ordinance passed March 8, 1860, the First ward was enlarged by admitting to the borough limits all the territory north of it, between the Lehigh river and Jordan creek, up to the northern boundary of the lands of the Allentown Iron Company.

Market-Houses.—The Allentown newspapers regularly quoted market prices beginning 1815, and a market-house was erected, 20 by 40 feet, on the north side of the square at Seventh and Hamilton streets, in 1817, authorized by an act passed by the legislature on March 22d of that year. The building was of wood and stone and had several entrances. On August 15th, an ordinance was passed prescribing rules for the rental of stalls, prohibitions, penalties, etc. The market was open at that time on Wednesdays and Saturdays, from 4 to 9 a. m. in summer, and from 6 to 10 a. m. in winter. In August, 1824, an ordinance was adopted which provided that all dealers must submit their weights and measures to the clerk of the market, whose duty it should be to adjust them.

In 1832 hay-scales were erected on the square, directly north of the market-house. They occupied that locality for many years, and a frame, in which a borough official corded and measured wood, occupied contiguous ground.

In the fire of 1848, fearing that the flames from the burning buildings west of the square might reach the frame roof of the market-house and from thence spread to the east side of the square, borough officials ordered it to be torn down. Lewis Klump (whose widow is still living), assisted in tearing down the building. In the newspaper account of the fire its loss is reported, estimated at $500. It was not rebuilt.

A market-house, 51 by 91 feet, with thirty-six stalls, and entrances at either end and side, was completed in August, 1859, at Linden and Church streets. Market days were Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. It was in use until 1897, when the present municipal buildings were erected.

In 1893 a market was opened in the building erected at the northeast corner of Sixth and Court streets.

OFFICERS OF THE BOROUGH, 1811 TO 1866.

- 1811.—Burgess, Peter Rhoads; Town Council, George Graff, chairman, Dr. Jacob Martin, John Miller, John Keiper, Sr., Leonard Nagle; High Constable, John F. Ruhe, Jr.; Road and Street Commissioners, Conrad Huber, John Mohr; Town Clerk, George Rhoads.
- 1812.—Burgess, Peter Rhoads; Town Council, Dr. Jacob Martin, chairman, John Mohr, John Miller, John Hanse, John Eckert; High Constable, Frederick Eckert; Road and Street Commissioner, Peter Hauck, Peter Newhard; Town Clerk, Jacob Blumer.
- 1813.—Burgess, Peter Rhoads; Town Council, Dr. Jacob Martin, chairman, Jacob Stettler, John Wagner, Dr. John F. Ruhe, Sen., Jacob Newhard, Sen.; High Constable, Frederick Eckert; Road and Street Commissioners, George Shaffer, William Eckert; Town Clerk, Jacob Blumer.
- 1814.—Burgess, George Graff; Town Council, Dr. Jacob Martin, chairman, John Wagner, Adam Reep, William Eckert, John Knecht; High Constable, John Lchr; Road and Street Commissioners, Jacob Bishop, Frederick Kocher; Town Clerk, Jacob Blumer.
- (The record of officers from 1815 to 1830 is incomplete. In 1816 Jacob Martin was still chairman of the council. Jacob Blumer was town clerk until 1829. The name of John F. Ruhe appears as chairman in 1822, that of Peter Newhard in 1824, Michael D. Eberhard in 1826, Philip Sellers in 1827, and John F. Ruhe again in 1828-29.)
- 1830.—Burgess, John J. Krause; Town Council, Adam Reep, chairman, Adam Seip, Andrew Gangwere, Henry Reichard, Moses Horn; High Constable, George Keiper; Street Commissioners, John Keiper, William Ginkinger; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe.
- 1831.—Burgess, John J. Krause; Town Council, Henry Reichard, chairman, Timothy Geidner, Solomon Gangwere, Benjamin Ludwig, Thomas Ginkinger; High Constable, George Keiper; Street Commissioners, William Ginkinger, John Keiper; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe.
- 1832.—Burgess, John J. Krause; Town Council, Henry Reichard, Timothy Geidner, Solomon Gangwere, Benjamin Ludwig, Thomas Ginkinger; High Constable, George Keiper; Street Commissioners, John Wagner, John Keiper.
- 1833.—Burgess, John J. Krause; Town Council, David Heimbach, chairman, George Haberacker, Charles A. Gross, Martin Schwenck, Peter Huber; Town Clerk, J. W. Hornbeck; High Constable, George Keiper; Street Commissioners, Abraham Gangwere, George Keiper.
- 1834.—Burgess, John J. Krause; Town Council, Jacob Stein, chairman, George Wetherhold, Abraham Bieber, Charles A. Ruhe, Samuel Horn; Town Clerk, J. W. Hornbeck; High Constable, George Keiper; Street Commissioners, Abraham Gangwere, John Keiper.
- 1835.—Burgess, Jacob Newhard; Town Council, Charles A. Ruhe, chairman, Joseph Saeger, John Eckert, Jr., Joseph Weiss, Jacob D. Boas; Town Clerk, J. W. Hornbeck; High Constable, George Wetherhold; Street Commissioners, John Keiper, H. W. Knipe.
- 1836.—Burgess, Jacob Newhard; Town Council, Michael D. Eberhard, chairman, Jacob D. Boas, Solomon Keck, Abraham Rinker, Paul Knauss, Town Clerk, R. E. Wright.
- 1837.—Burgess, Jacob Newhard; Town Council, Michael D. Eberhard, Peter Newhard, chairman, John Mohr, John Wagner, Jr., Joseph Hartman; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; Treasurer, Henry Ebner; Engineer, Simon Schweitzer; Wood-Corder, Caspar Newhard.
- 1838.—Burgess, John F. Ruhe; Town Council, John J. Krause, John Albright, Henry W. Knipe, Solomon Fatzinger, Charles A. Ruhe, George Stein, Joseph Hartman, Joel Krauss, John V. R. Hunter; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; High Constable, Jacob Heckman.
- 1839.—Burgess, Samuel Runk; Town Council, John Mohr, chairman, George Stein, Joseph Hart-

- man, Daniel Keiper, Henry Reichard, Samuel Moyer, Jacob Moyer, Andrew Klotz, Bartholomew Balliet; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; High Constable, Reuben Strauss.
- 1840.—Burgess, Samuel Runk; Town Council, John Wagner, chairman, John Mohr, John Eckert, Joseph Young, John Detweiler, Henry Reichard, Jacob Hagenbuch, Andrew Klotz; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; Treasurer, Jacob Stein; Engineer, S. Schweitzer; Street Commissioners, George Engleman, Joseph Lehr.
- 1841.—Burgess, Charles Seip; Town Council, John Albright, chairman, John Mohr, John Wagner, John Detweiler, Joseph Young, John Eckert, John J. Krause, Joseph Saeger; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; Treasurer, Jacob Stein; Engineer, S. Schweitzer; Clerk of Market, J. F. Newhard; Wood-Corder, Caspar Newhard.
- 1842.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, John J. Krause, chairman, John Albright, J. K. Saeger, Joseph Young, William Moll, Stephen Barber, Charles Scholl, William Mertz, John Nonnemacher; Town Clerk, S. A. Bridges; Treasurer, George Stein; Engineer, P. Jarrett; High Constable, Israel Erdman; Street Commissioners, Peter Newhard, Jacob Colver.
- 1843.—Burgess, Peter Newhard; Town Council, Joseph Young, John Moll, Stephen Barber, Charles Scholl, William Mertz, Joseph Kramer, Abraham Gangwere, Michael D. Eberhard, J. D. Boas; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe; Treasurer, George Stein; High Constable, Samuel Moyer; Market-Master, J. F. Newhard; Engineer, Jesse Samuels; Street Commissioners, Caspar Keiter, Adam Seip.
- 1844.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, Joseph Young, chairman, J. D. Boas, Michael D. Eberhard, John Moll, Charles Scholl, C. H. Martin, Joseph Kramer, Stephen Barber, William H. Mertz, Abraham Gangwere; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe; Treasurer, George Stein; High Constable, Samuel Horn.
- 1845.—Burgess, R. E. Wright; Town Council, J. D. Boas, chairman, Simon Schweitzer, Charles Saeger, Michael D. Eberhard, Nathan Dresher, Solomon Gross, C. H. Martin, Joseph Kramer, Charles Kramer, Abraham Gangwere; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe; Treasurer, George Stein; High Constable, Samuel Horn.
- 1846.—Burgess, Peter Wycoff; Town Council, Charles Saeger, William Edelman, Nathan Dresher, Jonathan Reichard, James Gangwere, Solomon Gross, William Fry, Reuben Strauss, Charles Kramer, Simon Schweitzer; Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe; Treasurer, J. W. Hornbeck; High Constable, Charles Haines.
- 1847.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, Peter Newhard, Jacob Hartzell, John Eckert, Bartholomew Balliet, George Keifer, Amos Ettinger, Aaron Troxell, George Wetherhold, C. L. Martin, Bernard Rees, Town Clerk, John F. Ruhe; Treasurer, J. W. Hornbeck; High Constable, William Eckert; Engineer, Jesse Samuels.
- 1848.—Burgess, John D. Lawall; Town Council, Amos Ettinger, Aaron Troxell, B. Balliet, John Eckert, B. Rees, W. H. Blumer, Peter Heller, James Hartman, Edmund D. Leisenring, Charles Koch; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; High Constable, Jacob Ehrig; Engineer, Jesse Samuels.
- 1849.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, W. H. Blumer, Charles Keck, E. D. Leisenring, Joseph Hartman, Peter Heller, Paul Knauss, Charles Eckert, F. E. Samuels, John Nonnemacher, Nathan Dresher; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; High Constable, Jacob Ehrig.
- 1850.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, Nathan Dresher, Paul Knauss, F. E. Samuels, Charles Eckert, John Nonnemacher, Isaac Stahr, Thomas Weaver, Peter Weikel, J. D. Lawall; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; High Constable, William Egge.
- 1851.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, Isaac Stahr, Thomas Weaver, John L. Hoffman, Peter Weikel, J. D. Lawall, Thomas Weiss, Thomas Wetzell, Jacob Miller, Joseph Nonnemacher, William Egge; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, Elias Mertz; High Constable, William Jacoby.
- 1852.—Burgess, William Fry; Town Council, Jacob Miller, Joseph Nonnemacher, Thomas Wetzell, William J. Egge, E. R. Newhard, Peter Heller, Owen Saeger, John Diefenderfer, Reuben Reiss, Thomas Weiss; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; High Constable, William Horn.
- 1853.—Burgess, William J. Egge; Town Council, E. R. Newhard, Peter Heller, Thomas Weiss, Owen Saeger, John Diefenderfer, Jonathan Trexler, W. H. Blumer, Tilghman Statler, Ephraim Grim, Reuben Engleman; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; High Constable, William Horn; Engineer, Elias Mertz.
- 1854.—Burgess, Robt. E. Wright; Town Council, W. H. Blumer, Tilghman Statler, Ephraim Grim, William Hecker, Jonathan Trexler, J. F. Newhard, James F. Kline, W. B. Powell, Evan W. Eckert, J. F. Kleppinger, John G. Schimpf; Town Clerk, Eli J. Saeger; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, J. D. Lawall. (He resigned, and G. A. Aschbach was appointed.) High Constable, William Horn.
One policeman, Jacob Ehrig, was also appointed this year. He was the first regular police-officer.
- 1855.—Burgess, Thomas Mohr; Town Council, John G. Schimpf, Evan W. Eckert, J. F. Newhard, W. B. Powell, J. F. Kleppinger, John Romig, James Dietrich, Stephen Keck, Solomon Butz, William Maddern; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach; High Constable, John L. Hanke.
- 1856.—Burgess, William Grim; Town Council, C. L. Martin, Ephraim Yohe, Enoch Newhard, David Schwartz, John Romig, James Dietrich, William Maddern, Solomon Butz, Stephen Keck; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach; High Constable, John L. Hanke.
- 1857.—Burgess, ———; Town Council, Aaron Renniger, J. A. Kramer, Joseph Seip, William Mertz, Nathan Gaumer, Thomas Barber, Ephraim Yohe, J. F. Newhard, David Schwartz, C. L. Martin, — Kleckner, Jesse Wasser; Town Clerk, C. J. Martin; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach.
- 1858.—Burgess, Thomas Mohr; Town Council, Jesse Wasser, W. H. Gausler, Tilghman Statler, William Maddern, Samuel McHose, Benjamin Statler, Aaron Renniger, Nathan Gaumer, Jo- seph Seip, Thomas Barber, William Mertz; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach.

- 1850.—Burgess, George Beisel; Town Council, Samuel McHose, W. H. Gausler Benjamin Statler, Tilghman Statler, Charles W. Eckert, J. H. Bush, David Schwartz, William Maddern, Peter Weikel, Jesse Wasser; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach.
- 1860.—Burgess, George Beisel; Town Council, Samuel Engelman, Solomon Butz, Samuel B. Lewis, O. K. Hoffman, Aaron Keiter, William Kichline, Charles A. Eckert, David Schwartz, Peter Weikel, J. H. Bush; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach.
- 1861.—Burgess, William Grim; Town Council, Charles Mickley, Owen Yingling, W. H. Blumer, Samuel Roth, James Roney, O. K. Hoffman, Aaron Keiter, Samuel B. Lewis, William Kichline, Samuel Engleman; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard.
- 1862.—Burgess, W. H. Hoffman; Town Council, Benjamin Hagenbuch, Charles Christ, Peter Weikel, George Erdman, Charles Wagner, W. H. Blumer, Samuel Roth, Owen Yingling, Jas. Roney; Town Clerk, E. J. More; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach.
- 1863.—Burgess, W. H. Hoffman; Town Council, J. S. Graffin, J. A. Kramer, John P. Miller, Jesse A. Wasser, J. H. Bush, Benjamin Hagenbuch, Charles Christ, Peter Weikel, George Erdman, Charles Wagner; Town Clerk, Thomas B. Metzgar; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach; High Constable, Daniel W. Lehr.
- 1864.—Burgess, Charles Kline; J. H. Bush, J. S. Graffin, J. A. Kramer, John P. Miller, Jesse A. Wasser, Daniel Brown, H. E. Ruhe, Amos Ettinger, John L. Hoffman, Lewis Klump; Town Clerk, Elisha Forrest; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, G. A. Aschbach; High Constable, Daniel W. Lehr.
- 1865.—Burgess, Charles Kline; Town Council, R. E. Wright, Daniel Roth, John Egge, W. J. Hoxworth, Samuel McHose, John L. Hoffman, Daniel Brown, Joseph Hecker, H. E. Ruhe, Amos Ettinger; Town Clerk, Elisha Forrest; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, Peter Weida, High Constable, Jacob M. Ruhe.
- 1866.—Burgess, William Kern; Town Council, J. L. Hoffman, Russel A. Thayer, Henry Stettler, Thomas Steckel, Edward Ruhe, Samuel McHose, Joseph Hecker, John Egge, W. J. Hoxworth, Daniel Roth; Town Clerk, Elisha Forrest; Treasurer, Jonathan Reichard; Engineer, Peter Weida; High Constable, Jacob M. Ruhe.
- JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, 1840-1867.
- 1840.—John W. Hornbeck. 1858.—John F. Halbach.
Charles Seip. 1859.—Ephraim Moss.
- 1841.—John Kleckner. John F. Ruhe.
James Molleneux. Elias Mertz.
- 1842.—Jonathan D. Meek. 1860.—A. K. Wittman.
er. 1861.—Jacob Dillinger.
- 1844.—John F. Ruhe. 1862.—E. J. Abele.
Eli J. Saeger. John D. Lawall.
- 1849.—John F. Ruhe. 1863.—Lewis F. Schmidt.
Eli J. Saeger. Jesse M. Young.
- 1850.—Jacob Dillinger. 1864.—Elias Mertz.
- 1852.—John D. Lawall. 1865.—A. K. Wittman.
- 1853.—John F. Halbach. 1866.—Henry T. Kleckner.
- 1854.—John F. Ruhe.

Assessment List, 1814.—The assessment list of Allentown in 1814, amounting to $324,039, was as follows:

- Eve Albert—House and lot valued at $600, and one cow worth $12; tax, 58 cents.
- Christian Amheiser—House and lot valued at $350; two cows, $24; tax, 34 cents.
- Jacob Blumer, clock maker—House and lot valued at $550; cow, $12; occupation, $25; tax, 51 cents.
- Jacob Bishop—House and lot, $500; horse, $50; cow, $12; tax, 50 cents.
- William Boas, storekeeper—Tax, 18 cents.
- Abraham Beitelman, hatter—Occupation, $50; cow, $12; tax, 24 cents.
- Margaret Bender—House and lot, $550; tax, 48 cents.
- Charles Deshler, storekeeper—House and two lots, $2,000; house and lot, $1,500; occupation, $80; horse, $70; cow, $12; total, $3,362; tax, $3.19.
- Henry Denhart—House, barn, and lot, $500; three horses, $120; two cows, $24; tax, 61 cents.
- John Dieffenderfer—200 acres of land, $10,000; four horses, $180; nine cows, $108; total, $10,288; tax, $9.77.
- Jacob Derhammer, tavernkeeper—House and two lots, $1,800; occupation, $100; horse, $40; cow, $12; total, $1,952; tax, $1.85.
- William Dobbins—House and lot, $1,200; horse, $45; tax, $1.19.
- Daniel Deyly—House and lot, $450; cow, $12; tax, 44 cents.
- William Eckert, storekeeper—House and two lots, $1,500; four lots, $400; occupation, $100; horse, $25; cow, $12; total, $2,037; tax, $1.92.
- John Eckert, tobacconist—House and lot, $1,500; four lots, $400; horse, $25; cow, $12; occupation, $80; total, $2,017; tax, $1.90.
- Frederick Eckert, tailor—Tax, 18 cents.
- Henry Eberhart—House and lot, $1,400; cow, $12; tax, $1.38.
- George Eckert—One horse, $10; cow, $12; tax, 30 cents.
- John Ebing—House and lot, $5,000; lot, $80; tax, $4.83.
- Solomon Fatzinger—Seventy acres of land, $4,200; two horses, $90; 3 cows, $36; total, $4,326; tax, $4.12.
- George Fox—Tax, 18 cents.
- Peter Frantz—House and lot, $1,000; house and lot, $600; two cows, $24; tax, $1.54.
- James Greenleaf—Trout Hall and other buildings, $5,000; 208¾ acres of land, $18,720; 216 town lots, $25,600; total, $45,320; tax, $43.06.
- John Gutekunst, miller—Grist mill, $2,000; eleven acres of land, $770; house and lot, $500; two cows, $24; occupation, $60; total, $3,254; tax, $3.09.
- Solomon Gutekunst—House and lot, $500; one horse, $245; tax, 49 cents.
- Jacob Gangewere—House and lot, $450; two horses, $90; cow, $12; tax, 50 cents.
- Abraham Gangewere, tavernkeeper—House and lot, $2,000; lot, $80; occupation, $100; cow, $12; tax, $2.08.
- Solomon Gangewere, joiner—House and lot, $700; house and lot, $300; cow, $12; occupation, $50; tax, $1.06.
- George Graff, storekeeper—House and two lots, $1,200; occupation, $75; cow, $12; tax, $1.22.
- Felix Griesemer—House and two lots, $1,000; cow, $12; tax, 96 cents.
- Jacob Gosler, card weaver—Two houses and a lot, $400; occupation, $40; cow, $12; tax, 43 cents.

Henry Gross—House and lot, $800; horse, $20; cow, $12; tax, 79 cents.

Andrew Gangewere—House and lot, $1,000; tax, 95 cents.

Christian Ginginger—One cow, $12; tax, 18 cents.

Peter Hauck—House and lot, $700; occupation, $75; horse, $45; cow, $12; tax, 79 cents.

Abraham Henry—House and lot, $500; two horses, $90; cow, $12; tax, 55 cents.

Jacob Hagenbuch—House and lot.

(Mr. Hagenbuch was an inn-keeper, and as he had died just before the assessment was taken, no entry is recorded.)

Peter Hartz—House and lot, $1,000; cow, $12; tax, 96 cents.

Conrad Huber, saddler—House and lot, $600; occupation, $40; 2 horses, $90; cow, $12; tax, 69 cents.

Widow Horn—House and lot, $600; tax, 57 cents.

John Horn, hatter—House and lot, $2,000; occupation, $100; two cows, $24; tax, $2.02.

Abraham Horn—Barn and lot, $500; tax, 47 cents.

John Haines, storekeeper—House and lot, $5,000; occupation, $150; horse, $80; cow, $12; half acre of land, $250; lot, $80; total, $5,572; tax, $5.30.

Jonas Hertzell—Occupation, $150; tax, 32 cents.

Chas. L. Hutter, printer—One lot, $500; occupation, $150; tax, 62 cents.

Jost Hecker—133 acres of land, $7,315; 3 horses, $135; two cows, $34; total, $7,474; tax, $7.10.

James Jamison, physician—House and lot, $600; occupation, $150; horse, $80; tax, 79 cents.

Widow Kaufman—House and two lots, $600; tax, 57 cents.

George Kaufman, turner—Occupation, $40; cow, $12; tax, 23 cents.

Paul Knaus, joiner—Occupation, $50; tax, 22 cents.

Georg Friedrich Knaus—Eight acres of land and buildings, $1,500; two cows, $24; tax, $1.45.

Casper Keiter—House and lot, $300; tax, 28 cents.

Friedrich Kocher—House and lot, $1,000; two horses, $60; cow, $12; tax, $1.02.

John Keiper, tobacconist—House and lot, $1,100; house and lot, $600; house and lot, $500; two houses on market place, $2,000; two lots, $200; horse, $60; cow, $12; occupation, $100; total, $4,572; tax, $4.35.

Widow Keiper—House and lot, $600; cow, $12; tax, 59 cents.

John Keiper, card weaver—House and lot, $300; cow, $12; occupation, $40; tax, 33 cents.

Philip Klotz—House and lot, $700; cow, $12; tax, 57 cents.

George Klotz—Occupation, $50; horse, $40; tax, 27 cents.

John Kraus, silversmith—Occupation, $100; tax, 27 cents.

John Knecht—House and lot, $600; horse, $40; cow, $12; tax, 60 cents.

Widow Livingston—610 acres of land, $42,700; 282 town lots, $28,200; total, $70,900; tax, $67.36.

George Lauer—House and lot, $700; 3 horses, $130; cow, $12; tax, 77 cents.

Michael Lauer—One cow, $12; tax, 19 cents.

John Loehr, weaver—House and lot, $600; occupation, $40; cow, $12; tax, 60 cents.

Peter Loehr, weaver—House and lot, $600; occupation, $40; horse, $40; two cows, $24; tax, 67 cents.

Philip Loehr—Tax, 18 cents.

Henry Loehr, card weaver—House and lot, $600; occupation, $20; cow, $12; tax, 58 cents.

John Miller, innkeeper—House and lot, $1,200; occupation, $40; tax, $1.16.

John Miller, laborer—House and lot, $600; cow, $12; tax, 58 cents.

John Miller, tailor—House and lot, $1,000; occupation, $50; cow, $12; horse, $40; lot, $80; tax, $1.13.

Jacob Miller, mason—House and lot, $1,000; occupation, $40; cow, $12; tax, $1.

John Mohr, joiner—House and two lots, $1,500; occupation, $50; two cows, $24; tax, $1.38.

John Moll, storekeeper—House and five lots, 2,000; two cows, $24; occupation, $60; tax, $1.98.

Sara Mowharter—House, lot, and tan yard—$2,500; tax, $2.27.

Jacob Martin, physician—House and lot, $2,000; four lots, $1,400; occupation, $150; horse, $50; cow, $12; total, $3,612; tax, $3.43.

Charles Martin, physician—House and lot, $900; occupation, $125; horse, $60; tax, $1.03.

Christina Meyer—House and lot, $500; cow, $12; tax, 48 cents.

John Mulhallon, Prothonotary and Clerk of Orphans' Court—Occupation, $150; tax, 33 cents.

Leonhart Nagle, Recorder and Register of Wills, —House and two lots, $1,000; lot, $200; occupation, $200; cow, $12; horse, $20; tax, $1.36.

Peter Nagle—House and lot, $400; tax, 38 cents.

Jacob Newhard—House and lot, $900; two cows, $24; tax, 88 cents.

Abraham Newhard, joiner—House and lot, $1,500; cow, $12; occupation, $60; tax, $1.50.

Peter Newhard, joiner and storekeeper—House and two lots, $1,500; occupation, $100; cow, $12; tax, $1.53.

John Nunnemaker, laborer—House and lot, $800; lot, $80; cow, $12; tax, 85 cents.

Jacob Nunnemaker—House and lot, $350; cow, $12; tax, 34 cents.

Andrew Neitlinger, card weaver—House and lot, $500; occupation, $20; cow, $12; tax, 50 cents.

Henry Nunnemaker—Cow, $12; tax, 20 cents.

(The name of James Preston, mason, is marked with a cross and there are no figures annexed.)

Peter Rhoads—House and two lots, $2,200; occupation, $150; horse, $25; cow, $12; tax, $2.27.

Peter Rhoads, Jr.—House and lot, $1,000; horse, $25; cow, $12; occupation, $80; tax, $1.06.

George Rhoads, innkeeper—House and lot, $1,300; two lots, $1,000; cow, $12; occupation, $100; tax, $2.29.

Margaret Reiter—House and lot, $400; cow, $12; tax, 39 cents.

Abraham Rinker, innkeeper, at Hagenbuch's House—House and lot, $2,500; occupation, $125; horse, $60; cow, $12; tax, $2.50.

Philip Rider, joiner—One lot, $300; occupation, $50; cow, $12; tax, 35 cents.

John Rinker, house and lot, $500; cow, $12; tax, 48 cents.

Abraham Rex—House and lot, $1,000; tax, 48 cents.

John Fr. Ruhe, innkeeper—House and two lots, $1,800; occupation, $100; cow, $12; tax, $1.82.

John Frederick Ruhe, physician—House and lot, $1,500; occupation, $60; tax, $1.48.

Dan'l. Reese, joiner—House and two lots, $700; cow, $12; occupation, $50; tax, 72 cents.

John and Benjamin Reeser—House and lot, $500; tax, 48 cents.

Jacob Strauss, hatter—House and lot, $1,000; shop and lot, $600; occupation, $800; cow, $12; tax, $1.61.

Peter Snyder, storekeeper—House and lot, $3,000; occupation, $150; cow, $12; tax, $3.

James Seagreaves, saddler—House and lot, $1,500; 3 horses, $150; two cows, $24; occupation, $80; tax, $1.67.

Widow Schreiber—House and lot, $800; tax, 76 cents.

John Seip—Tax, 18 cents.

Michael Schmidt, tailor—House and lot, $350; occupation, $20; cow, $12; tax, 37 cents.

Dan'l. Seip, blacksmith—House and lot, $800; smithy and lot, $400; occupation, $50; cow, $12; tax, $1.20.

Jacob Stettler, hatter—House and lot, $1,300; horse, $40; cow, $12; occupation, $50; tax, $1.33.

Henry Stettler—House and lot, $1,100; house and lot, $1,500; cow, $12; tax, $2.48.

Daniel Stettler—Tax, 18 cents.

Peter Seip—House and lot, 800; occupation, $40; two cows, $24; tax, 82 cents.

Jacob Stein, clockmaker—House and lot, $1,000; occupation, $40; cow, $12; tax, $1.

George Schaeffer—House and lot, $1,000; horse, $50; cow, $12; tax, $1.01.

Jacob Steckel, tanner—House, lot, and tan yard, $1,800; occupation, $100; horse, $40; two cows, $24; tax, $1.86.

George Savitz, innkeeper—House and two lots, $500; lot, $500; cow, $12; occupation, $150; total, $6,162; tax, $5.85.

Daniel and Jacob Saeger—House and two lots, $2,000; mill and one and one-fourth acre of land, $1,000; tax, $2.85.

William Tilghman—Seventy-eight acres of land, $7,020; 10 acres, $450; 289 town lots, $28,900; total, $36,370; tax, $34.56.

Conrad Worman—House, barn and lot, $500; two cows, $24; tax, 49 cents.

Jacob Worman, joiner—House and lot, $900; two cows, $24; occupation, $50; tax, 93 cents.

Henry Worman, hooper—House and lot, $700; two cows, $24; tax, 69 cents.

John Wagner, miller—House and lot, $1,500; occupation, $100; lot, $150; two houses and two lots, $500; house and lot, $400; house and lot, $200; two horses, $100; two cows, $24; total, $2,974; tax, $2.83.

James Wilson, storekeeper—Store-house and lot, $5,500; house and lot, $400; occupation, $200; horse, $30; cow, $12; total, $6,142; tax, $5.84.

Abraham Worman—53 acres of land, $3,445; two horses, $100; three cows, $36; total, $3,581; tax, $3.40.

Martin Weiser—House and lot, $400; horse, $50; tax, 43 cents.

Henry Webber, card weaver—House and lot, $1,000; occupation, $50; cow, $12; tax, $1.01.

Jonas Webber, mason—One lot, $150; occupation, $25; cow, $12; tax, 25 cents.

Adam Wetzel, deceased—House and lot, $1,500; occupation, $75; tax, $1.50.

Widow Wetzel—House and lot, $300; tax, 28 cents.

Andrew Young, House and lot, $600; cow, $12; tax, 59 cents.

Widow Young—House and lot, $250; tax, 24 cents.

John Dieffenderfer—Tax, 18 cents.

Adam Hecker—Tax, 18 cents.

Andrew Reece—Tax, 18 cents.

John Gutman—No tax.

John Geisner—One cow, tax, 20 cents.

George Hauck—18 cents.

Tobias Grub, smith—Occupation, $40; tax, 25 cents.

Leonhart Nagle, joiner—House and lot, $500; lot, $150; tax, 62 cents.

John Spangenberg—Cow, $12; lot, $300; tax, 30 cents.

Gideon Ibach—Cow, $12; tax, 20 cents.

David Guth—Tax, 20 cents.

Jacob Deily—Tax, 18 cents.

Mathias Gross—House and lot, $450; tax, 43 cents.

Casper Kleckner—Cow, $12; tax, 20 cents.

Adam Gruber, joiner—Tax, 18 cents.

Thomas Davis—Tax, 18 cents.

James Bell—Tax, 18 cents.

Jacob Egy—Tax, 18 cents.

Henry Hartman—Tax, 18 cents.

Philip Baeny—Lot, $150; tax, 25 cents.

Jacob Clader—Lot, $80; tax, 8 cents.

Andrew Friderich—Lot, $80; tax, 8 cents.

SINGLE FREEMEN.

Daniel Mertz, Conrad Worman, Christian Seip, John Miller, mason; Jacob Huber, William Miller, Leonhart Nagle, Jacob Hauck, Isaac Gangwer, John Wilson, Jacob Newhart, Abraham Rinker, Isaac Preston, John Mohr, Peter Mensch, Henry Keiper, John Keiper, Adam Locke, George Henry Martin, Weiser, Peter Nagle, Andrew Gangwer, Andrew Klotz, William Ginginger, Henry Wilson, Adam Gutekunst, Benjamin Reasor, Henry Ebner, John Stadler, Friedrich Holler, John Ehler, George Spinner, George Keiper, George Wertz, David Wagner, John Young, Henry Stadler, Charles Weaver.

Northampton Bank.—The first financial institution of Allentown, the Northampton Bank, was chartered by act of the legislature on July 11, 1814, and on Aug. 12th, following, the first board of directors was elected, namely: Peter Dorney, John Wagner, Jacob Blumer, William Eckert, Jacob Stein, George Schaeffer, Andreas Strassburger, John Krauss, Peter Rhoads, Jr., Peter Ruch, Stephen Balliet, Jr., Joseph Frey, Jr., and George Keck. Peter Rhoads, Jr., was elected president, and James A. Sinton, cashier. The bank began business almost immediately after its organization with a capital of $123,365.00. It occupied a two-story stone structure on the site of the present Allentown National Bank during the entire period of its existence. Peter Rhoads, Jr., was its president for twenty-two years, until his death, July 8, 1836. John Eckert then became president and filled the position until his death, Nov. 3, 1840, when John Rice became president. Sinton was cashier until 1817, when John F. Ruhe, Jr., succeeded him, and filled the office until 1820, when Rice became cashier. George Keck succeeded Rice as cashier in 1840.

At the time of organization, ten dollars of the amount of the capital stock was paid in. On

Jan. 5, 1831, the report of the bank to the auditor general was as follows:

Deposits and dividends unclaimed,	$ 47,955	01
Notes and bills discounted,	120,701	80
Securities, bonds, and mortgages,	182,019	17
Stocks and bills of exchange,	20,997	66
Specie,	40,385	04
Notes of other banks,	30,884	21
Real Estate,	20,000	00
Notes in circulation,	238,539	00
Dividend, 14 per cent.

The bank was successful and prosperous for twenty-eight years, until John Rice, who then became president, by his bad management, brought about its failure. He was speculative and visionary, became largely interested in outside business projects, as the lumber trade and management of mail stages, and advanced large amounts to the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. and other corporations and individuals. The credit of the bank began to fail in 1842. Strenuous efforts were made to sustain the institution. At a special meeting of the board of directors, held March 23, 1843, among other matters, it was resolved that the bank be closed until the 25th of April, to make arrangements in the meanwhile to secure, as far as practicable, the interest of note-holders, depositors, and the stockholders and prepare a report to the stockholders. Only a few days previously, on March 13, 1843, the following statement had been made of the affairs of the bank:

18, 1842, $249,160; March 13, 1843, $95,040. In March the bank promised, "at the farthest, to resume specie payments on July 3, 1843."

On May 3, 1843, a general meeting of the stock-holders was called for June 5th, by thirty-three of their number, altogether owning one-tenth of the bank's stock. The object of the proposed meeting was set forth as "first, to obtain from the directors an immediate and thorough investigation of the affairs of the bank; second, to obtain the amount of indebtedness and available assets; third, to obtain a general and particular statement of the affairs of the bank; fourth, if the present condition is found to be such as to justify the expectation that in a reasonable time it may be in a situation to resume the regular business of banking, to take into consideration the propriety of making every effort possible to sustain the bank; and, fifth, to inquire into the expediency of electing five trustees to close the concerns of the bank agreeably to the act of April 1, 1822, in case the above-mentioned objects cannot be obtained." This call was signed by Frederick A. Martin, Charles Kramer, Wm. H. Blumer, M. D. Eberhard, Thomas Butz, Joseph Saeger, Christian Pretz, Jacob Saeger, Paul Balliet, Henry G. Guetter, John M. Mieksch, John F. Rauch, Philip H. Gaepf, John Oerter, Ernst Lehman, Eberhart Freytag, Sebastian Goundie, Jacob Wolle, Solomon Keck, George Blank, Bernhard Rees, William Eckert, John B. Moser, George Schaeffer, John Wagner, Joshua Fry, Nicholas Saeger, Christian Berger, Solomon Fogel, Thomas Kern, Solomon Gangwere.

At a meeting of the directors, a committee of three, consisting of Philip Mattis, Esq., of Easton, and Charles Saeger and Jacob Dillinger, of Allentown, was nominated to investigate the concerns of the institution.

Pursuant to the call, a meeting of the stock-holders was held June 5th, at the banking-house, and because of the large attendance adjourned to the public-house of William Craig. Stephen Balliet was elected president, and Augustus L. Ruhe, secretary. The investigating committee nominated by the directors at their meeting was confirmed, and they were instructed to employ counsel if necessary, make a thorough examination of the affairs of the bank, and report within thirty days to "a grand committee of thirteen, consisting of Solomon Fogel, William Eckert, Charles Kramer, John Wagner, Christian Pretz, Philip H. Gaepf, Augustus L. Ruhe, Christian Berger, John Lichtenwalter, John F. Rauch, George Blank, John Saeger, and Anthony Krauss."

The investigating committee (in which John

Dr.

Capital stock,	$124,635	00
Notes in circulation,	95,040	00
Contingent fund,	13,576	40
Profit and loss,	4,760	20
Discount and interest,	615	34
Dividends unpaid,	7,054	50
Amount due other banks,	2,800	00
Amount due depositors,	74,698	05
A special deposit,	10,004	65
Post-note,	290	00
Loans,	101,900	00
	<hr/>
	$435,424	14

Cr.

Bills and notes discounted,	$152,752	30
Judgments and mortgage loans,	171,200	00
Stock in Pennsylvania institutions,	19,624	00
Real estate,	4,000	00
Expenses,	1,024	74
Amount due by other banks,	2,679	20
Amount of loans to the state,	12,705	25
Acceptances,	39,258	41
City drafts in favor of bank,	24,850	00
Specie and drafts,	7,330	24
	<hr/>
	$435,424	14

The circulation of the bank averaged during a period of ten years $350,000. It stood, Jan. 18, 1842, $412,854; April 19, 1842, $269,460; Oct.

F. Ruhe had taken the place of Philip Mattis) began their work and carried it on diligently and rapidly.

Prior to this time the bank had made an assignment to John W. Hornbeck, Esq., Charles Kramer, George Keck, George Brobst, and William Blumer.

The feeling that existed in the community at this time may best be illustrated by following the incidents as they occurred from day to day. The Lehigh Bulletin, commenting on the failure of the bank, said, "The rottenness of this institution will now be made manifest. We have reason to believe that the stock is all sunk, and that the note-holders and depositors will get little or nothing." On the 14th of June, at a meeting held for the purpose of adopting such measures as might be necessary to protect the rights of the note-holders, the following resolutions, which throw considerable light on the progress of affairs and the fevered state of public feeling, were adopted:

"WHEREAS, the Northampton Bank, after a series of financial expedients as numerous, as wild, and as reckless as they were unfitted to effect the purpose for which they were intended, has, notwithstanding the solemn and oft-repeated assurances of her perfect solvency, made by her principal officers and backed by the publication of statements of the most plausible nature, been at length compelled to admit her own insolvency and transfer the wreck of her property to assignees for the benefit of creditors;

"AND WHEREAS, the officers of said bank, after squandering the greater part of her assets by assigning, transferring, and pledging them to sundry irresponsible persons for the purpose of eking out a few more months of a miserable existence already most ruinously prolonged, have dared on the eve of this general assignment and in view of it to prefer a portion of her note-holders by exchanging the only valuable portion of her property remaining in her possession for the Northampton Bank bills held by them and their friends, and thus securing them from loss, while others as justly entitled to the payment of their claims are left to divide among themselves the comparatively valueless portion that remains, all which is in our opinion fraudulent and contrary to the act of assembly of 1843, enacted to prevent preferences in deeds of assignment;

"AND WHEREAS, the assignees are now by the operation of the law above and superior to the power that appointed them, and wholly beyond their control, subject only to the action of the stockholders in joint meeting, and the Court of Common Pleas of the county at its next term; therefore

"Resolved, That the assignees acting as they are for the benefit of all the creditors of this ill-omened institution, and able and willing as we feel they are to discharge their duty without fear, favor, or affection, be and they are hereby requested to treat the recent transfer of the Mauch Chunk mortgage loan and other similar transfers as if they never had been made, and adopt such legal measures as will bring the matter before the proper tribunal in order that the right of the directors to make such transfer may be legally investigated.

"Resolved, That the stockholders, in whose integrity we have ever had unbounded confidence, be requested to withhold their approbation from this assignment until it is ascertained beyond a doubt that the assignees in carrying it into effect will adopt such measures as are necessary to test the legality of these obnoxious transfers."

Public opinion became every day more incensed against John Rice, the president of the ruined bank, for his reported nefarious, and certainly unwise and unfortunate, administration of its affairs. He withdrew from assisting the committee of investigation, refusing to give up certain papers belonging to the institution, and on the 4th of July left town. The assignees, thinking that all was not right, sent the sheriff after him, who overtook him at Coopersburg. He entered into bail in the sum of ten thousand dollars for his appearance at the next term of court. A week later he was burned in effigy on the public square by a crowd of men and boys, so violent had become the feeling of the community.

The committee of thirteen, of whose appointment mention has been made, received the report of the investigating committee on July 10, 1843, and four days later made a statement to the stockholders and the public. This report set forth the following facts: The deficiency, admitting the assets in value as they appeared upon the books of the bank, amounted to $263,059.11. "Add to this amount," they say, "such assets as are considered worth nothing (but taken in the foregoing as good), $68,990.34, and the loss amounts to $322,049.45. Should to this amount the probable loss of the mortgage loan be added, $66,500 it would swell the deficiency to $398,549.45. To this amount is to be added the item of dividends unpaid $6,414.85, contingent fund, $2,419.60, discount and interest $1,750.72, and profit and loss $847.89, amounting together to the enormous deficiency of $409,982.51.

"The committee under these circumstances would respectfully recommend to such of the assignees as have been approved by the stockholders to pursue such a course as will speedily bring the fallen institution to a close."

This report was followed upon July 15th by the following resolutions by the directors:

"WHEREAS, it appears from the report of the committee of investigation that John Rice, president of this bank, is a defaulter to a very large amount, and considering him the principal cause of bringing still heavier losses on the institution, by not only neglecting his duty while cashier, for suffering bills discounted to lie over without being protested, whereby the indorser was relieved and the debts lost, but lately, while president, by squandering the funds of the bank and pledging its available assets in the hands of irresponsible stock jobbers and brokers without the assent or knowledge of the board:

"AND WHEREAS, considering the conduct of the said John Rice for several years past in studiously concealing from the Board of Directors the true condition of the bank, while he was deceiving both them, the stockholders, and the public with garbled statements and false representations, is unworthy the further confidence of the board or the countenance of an injured community; therefore

