"Resolved, That John Rice, president of said institution, be and he is hereby expelled from the board, and that his official functions as president of this bank immediately cease.

"Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the board, and published in all the papers of the Borough of Allentown.

ABRAHAM NEWHARD,	THOMAS KERN,
HENRY EBNER,	THOMAS B. WILSON,
PETER HOFFMAN,	SOLOMON FOGEL,
GEORGE BLANK,	JOHN ROMIG,

Directors."

The failure of the bank was severely felt in the community, some persons losing all their possessions, and very many were severely crippled in their business affairs. It was long before the town recovered from the depression following the failure.

In 1844 the Lehigh Valley Bank was organized, with John Wagner as president, which conducted business until 1847, when its charter was repealed. Moses Y. Beach, of New York, was the capitalist of the concern. In 1852 a bill was passed incorporating the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, with a capital of $100,000, but it was never organized. In 1851, William H. Blumer, William Kern, and Jesse M. Line organized the banking house of W. H. Blumer & Co. Their place of business was first in the Odd Fellows' building, and afterwards between the Allentown National Bank and the Allen House. The firm carried on business successfully until 1877, when they failed.

BRIDGES.

Chain Bridge.—The first movement towards establishing a bridge across the Lehigh river at Allentown was the incorporation of a company by an act of assembly, dated March 28, 1797. The commissioners appointed were:

Of Allentown—Peter Rhoads, Henry Hagenbuch, and Thomas Mewhorter.

Of Easton—Peter Ealer.

Of Philadelphia—Wm. Tilghman and George Eddy.

The time limit fixed in the act for the erection of a bridge was ten years, and not having been erected the act became void by limitation.

The next effort was made in 1806, an act having been passed March 28th, and the commissioners named were James Greenleaf, Jacob Clader, George Rhoads, John Keiper, George Butz, and Jeremiah Trexler. The time limit was five years, and this effort was also abandoned.

The third effort was made in 1812, an act having been passed March 2d, and the Lehigh Bridge Company was organized, of which Dr. James Jameson was president, and George Graff, treasurer. Shares of the par value of $50 were issued, and a chain bridge was erected during the next two years at a cost of $15,000, when it was opened for travel.

The bridge was 530 feet long between the abutments, and 32 feet wide, 22 feet above the water. It consisted of two loops and two half-loops, and was suspended by four chains. A fine of $4.00 was imposed for trotting or galloping over the bridge. It had a double drive-way until damaged by fire on March 13, 1828, when an entire section burned, including Dr. Jameson's stable on the middle pier, occasioning a loss of $3,000. It was again damaged during the building of the canal and dam by the canal company, when one of the chains was broken by a large rock from blasting operations near by; afterward it had a single drive-way. It was swept away by the flood of January 8, 1841.

Wooden Bridge.—After a ferry had been used at this place until the following December, a covered, wooden, toll bridge was erected to take the place of the chain bridge by the Allentown Bridge Co. It was washed away by the flood of January 4, 1862, at midnight.

A temporary frame structure was erected, which continued in use until 1867.

Iron Bridge.—On February 23, 1866, the county commissioners, with their civil engineer, Jesse Samuels, awarded a contract to William Lothrop, of Trenton, N. J., for the erection of an iron truss bridge, and to Solomon Butz for the abutments and piers. They applied to the legislature for authority to increase the loan for that purpose from $80,000 to $100,000. It was completed by the contractors, and accepted by the commissioners February 12, 1867. The cost was $75,367. This was in use until February 28, 1902, when it was swept away by the flood. A temporary wooden structure was put up by June 1st, by the following enterprising citizens: George O. Albright, Andrew S. Keck, Wilson Arbogast, Morris C. Bastian, and Frank H. Hersh for the public accommodation and their efforts in this behalf were highly appreciated. A moderate toll was charged for conveyances; pedestrians paid one cent. It was 650 feet long and 28 feet wide. Until this structure was erected a ferry was in use.

Hamilton Street Bridge.—A project to bridge the Jordan at Hamilton street was agitated as early as 1787 by the presentation of a petition to the court at Easton, but a strong remonstrance was filed at March sessions, 1788, against it, signed by more than fifty persons, which prevented its erection. Among the objections stated were the steepness of the western bank of the creek, and the opening of a public road eastward from Fifth street, which would cause much damage to adjoining property-holders. Owing to this remonstrance, a bridge was built shortly afterward at Union street, where the public road crossed the creek.

In 1837 a superior and substantial stone bridge was erected at this point, costing $10,593. It was 800 feet long and thirty feet wide and consisted of eighteen arches, considered at that time one of the finest bridge structures in the state. The contractor was Daniel Kleckner, of Allentown. The expense was chiefly borne by the county and the commissioners then were: Solomon Griesemer, Martin Ritter, and John Sherer. Interested parties contributed $670 towards this necessary public improvement, among whom were Christian Pretz, Solomon Gangwere, and Selfridge and Wilson, who each gave $100, and others gave from $3 to $30.

Three arches at the east end were filled in when the improvements were made at Race street. In 1885, a 15-foot side walk was built along the north side. In 1890, an iron stairway was constructed on the north side, leading to the railroad, being done while the new station was erected by the L. V. R. R. Co. In 1909, a sidewalk was added on the south-side.

The fine, superior, stone arches of this bridge, built seventy-seven years ago, are still in a good state of preservation, evidencing the remarkable character of the workmanship in its erection.

The stone bridge at the Lehigh Valley depot, no longer in use, was built at an early date, it is said prior to a bridge at Union street. It appears on the Jarrett map of 1842, on which none at Union street is shown. The stone bridge at Union street, over the Jordan, was built by the county in 1853. It is built with four arches of an oval shape. Daniel Hillegass was the builder. It replaced a frame structure which was held in place by chains, to prevent the high water from carrying it away. Steckel's bridge was built in 1840. It was 110 feet long and twenty feet wide, a frame, covered structure.

Hanover Bridge.—In 1858 a wooden bridge of three spans was erected across the Lehigh river near the Allentown Iron Works in the Sixth ward, by the Hanover and South Whitehall Bridge Co. It was a toll bridge and much used by the Iron company in hauling iron ore from Hanover township. It was swept away by the flood of 1862 and never rebuilt.

FLOODS.

Flood of 1786.—In the year 1786, there was a flood in the Lehigh river, known in the northern end of the county as "Tippy's Freshet," from the fact that the house of a man of that name, including himself, his wife, and two children were swept away. The children were drowned, but he and his wife were rescued by clinging to the overhanging branches of trees from which they were taken by small boats. No other particulars have been given of it. The water in the river rose at this time to a height of fifteen feet above low water mark.

Flood of 1839.—An extraordinary flood occurred in the Lehigh and Little Lehigh on Saturday, Jan. 26, 1839. There was a hard, continuous rain during Friday and Saturday which caused all the streams in the vicinity of Allentown to rise to unusual heights, and by Saturday afternoon the waters of the river flooded a number of stores along the basin and caused much damage to the goods in the cellars. One of the piers of the bridge was injured, and the flood reached within two feet of the floor.

The Little Lehigh also overflowed its banks from Mertz's tannery to Engelman's tavern. All the land was under water and the bridge across the stream was only two feet above the surface. Nonnemacher and Savitz suffered much damage, and great quantities of wood was swept away from brick-kilns, and many unburned bricks were destroyed. Damage was done to Hunter's, Heimbach's, and Weaver's grist-mills, and to Ruhe's tobacco factory.

The dam and stable at Edelman's mills were washed away and the bridge across the creek was so damaged as to make it impassable. The bridges at Klein's and Danner's mills were also injured. Many families along the creek had to leave. Rails, lumber and other property were swept away, and all the bridges were more or less injured.

The Jordan creek was also raised higher than ever known, and the rapidly rising current was so threatening that the people in the valley could barely escape with their lives. The bridges were injured, particularly those at Weida's, in Lowhill, and at Steckel's, near Allentown. Much lumber was swept away and the adjoining properties suffered a great deal of damage. The river rose to 13 feet above low water mark.

During the height of the flood on Saturday afternoon, a distressing accident occurred at the crossing of the Little Lehigh between the two mills, on the road to Emaus. The driver of the Philadelphia mail-coach, Henry Gaumer, was drowned in attempting to reach Allentown. When he reached that point, some persons in the mills warned him of the danger, but he seemed determined to go ahead. The four horses halted part way in the stream; then the passengers were just able to rescue themselves. The driver jumped out to lead the horses, but three of them tore loose and ran back; he seized the remaining horse but this becoming unmanageable he and the horse were drowned and the stage was swept down the stream a fourth of a mile until it became wedged between trees.

Gaumer was recognized as a brave young man, beloved by all who knew him. He left a widow surviving. His body was found on Sunday morning below the mill and an unusual crowd of people attended his funeral on Monday in the Allentown Cemetery. He was aged 25 years.

Flood of 1841.—The flood of 1841 reached Allentown on January 8th, and began to sub-store-houses at the basin have been considerably injured and several of our merchants, in not having their goods removed, have met with heavy losses. A large quantity of lumber, and a number of boats and scows were lost. About 2,000 tons of coal are lost. The navigation dam has but little if any injury done to it. The canal has sustained some injury."

Mention of this flood is made in the narrative of Catasaquaque relating to the Crane Iron Works.

It has been related by old inhabitants of the city that in this flood a canal boat loaded with coal was swept down the river to Allentown, where it lodged on Hamilton street at Second. No persons were on the boat, having been rescued on the way.

Flood of 1862.—On Jan. 4, 1862, there was a most remarkable flood in the river at Allentown, which was described in the newspapers as follows:

"The rain which caused it extended during three days, and the river commenced to swell to an alarming extent in the afternoon and evening of the side on the 9th. The Lehigh Bulletin of Jan. 23d, that year, contained the following account:

EASTERN VIEW OF ALLENTOWN IN 1845.

"After the intense cold weather we had the beginning of last week,—on Wednesday and Thursday, we had rain with a warm southern wind that brought on a sudden thaw. The river and streams in these parts rose rapidly to an unprecedented height. The Jordan and Little Lehigh appear not to have been as high as the great freshet of 1839. Owing to the immense height of the Big Lehigh, the back-water was several feet higher than two years ago. The Little Lehigh was about three feet higher over Mr. Martz's tan yard, than before. The Jordan ran on the large stone bridge over it.

"The freshet in the Big Lehigh was tremendous. The water was about 20 feet above low-water mark below the dam, and was about 3 feet above the highest point on the Big Island. Such a flood is not recollected by our oldest inhabitants.

"Our excellent bridge over the Big Lehigh, and the toll-house are gone; three frame houses of D. Kleckner, between his tavern and the bridge are gone. The gate-keepers' family have got away but saved nothing of the house. The other families saved more or less, but sustained heavy losses. The 4th. The torrent reached its highest point about 3 a. m. on the 5th and began to subside about 7 a. m.

"Its impetuosity and the great height it attained were not entirely due to the heavy rains but rather to the breaking successively of several immense dams in the upper part of the river. The Allentown bridge was washed off its piers at midnight of the 4th, causing an estimated loss of $50,000. All the bridges along the river from Mauch Chunk to Easton were swept away, excepting the railroad bridges at Allentown and Freemansburg, and the bridge at Lehigh Gap.

"The furnaces and rolling-mills here were damaged much, and the lumber-yards suffered great losses, including the inhabitants of the lower part of town. Kline's Island was laid entirely bare.

"Several dwellings were made tenantless and two were carried away entirely. Bridges, boats, stables, houses, piles of lumber, logs, and goods of every description within the reach of the water came floating down on the angry torrent.

"Seven persons of this place lost their lives. Three of them were the wife and two children of Herman Laub. One was the son of a lock-tender; and two were the wife and child of Anthony Dyer, a canal-boat owner. There were many heroic rescues.

"Property worth millions of dollars was destroyed. The loss and damage to property here amounted to more than $200,000.

"The river rose to 20 feet, 6 inches above low water-mark, six inches higher than in the flood of 1841.

"The flood was given its start just below White Haven, by the giving away of a dam; and the breaking of this dam caused the embankment of the Lehigh canal to crumble away, and then, as if by magic, its entire line from White Haven to Mauch Chunk was swept away, including all the locks and dams, (no attempt having since been made to rebuild them).

"Canal boats, with their human occupants, were drawn into the mad waters and hurled along on their turbulent bosom. Many thrilling scenes were witnessed. Lights were occasionally seen flashing on the passing boats, hurriedly, moving from one part to another; and when these boats came in sudden contact with some formidable object, a horrible crash would be heard, the flickering lights would vanish, and agonizing shrieks of human voices would be heard, calling for aid.

"At Slatington some men got on the bridge spanning the river there early in the evening to view the horrifying situation while the mad and fascinating waters were rising. Suddenly they realized their perilous situation and left the bridge; but, to their great amazement, just as they got off they heard an awful crash and saw the broken timbers floating away."

An interesting description of this flood, as it affected Catasauqua, is given in the narrative of that borough.

Stage Coaches.—The first stage line in Northampton county was established in September, 1763, by George Klein, whose "stage-wagon," started from the Sun Inn, Bethlehem, on Monday morning for Philadelphia, and left the "King of Prussia" tavern, on Race street, for the return trip, on Thursdays.

A notice in the Friedensbote, of Allentown, dated Nov. 18, 1812, read as follows: "The mail stage, winter schedule, leaves every Monday and Thursday mornings at 3 o'clock from John Frederick Rube's, the sign of the Rainbow, in Allen street (now Seventh), Northampton, and arrives the same evening at Adam Fluck's, at the sign of the White Swan, in Race street, Philadelphia. It leaves Philadelphia on Tuesday and Friday at 2 o'clock, spends the night at Montgomery Square and arrives in Northampton every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon. Every care will be taken for the convenience of travellers. Henry Ott, Samuel Sellers, George Weaver, William Smith."

The route travelled from Philadelphia to Allentown, with the distance from point to point, was as follows:

From the court-house, in Philadelphia

	Miles.
To Poole's Bridge,	1/2
" Norris'	2 1/4
" Farmhill meeting,	2 3/4
" Rising Sun,	3 1/2
" Stenton's,	5 1/4
" Germantown Meeting House,	6 1/4
" Mount Airy,	8 1/2
" Scull's,	10
" Ottinger's,	12 1/2
" Francis',	12 3/4
" White Marsh Church,	13 1/4
" Benjamin Davis,	16
" Baptist Meeting,	23 1/4
" Housekeepers',	25 1/4
" Swamp Meeting,	37 1/2
" Christopher Wagner's,	47 1/2
" Bethlehem,	52 3/4
" Allentown,	58

In 1820 the "Great Northern Line of Stages," advertised the mail stage from Philadelphia, for Bethlehem, Northampton, Nazareth, Wilkes-Barre, Montrose, Owego, Geneva, Ithaca, Canandaigua, Buffalo, and Niagara, three times a week, leaving George Yohe's hotel, sign of General Washington, No. 6 North Fourth street, and Daniel Lebo's White Swan Inn, 106 Race street, at 4 a. m. The fare to Bethlehem was three dollars, and from Bethlehem to Wilkes-Barre, four dollars. Way passengers were charged six cents per mile.

In 1828 John Moore & Co. ran a stage which left Philadelphia from 124 N. Fourth street, every morning, except Saturday, at 6 o'clock, breakfasted at Jenkintown, dined at Ottsville, and arrived at Allentown early in the afternoon. The stage left Allentown at 5 a. m. every morning except Saturday, and the passengers breakfasted at Hellertown, dined at Willow Grove and arrived at Philadelphia in the afternoon. The fare from Philadelphia to Easton, Bethlehem, or Allentown was three dollars. Tickets for seats in the coach were sold at Daniel Kramer's, in Allentown.

In 1833 the Peoples Accommodation Line of Daily Coaches was started by Charles Brock, of Philadelphia; Jacob Shipe, of Easton; Charles Copp, of Allentown, and G. H. Goundie, of Bethlehem. The coaches left the Golden Swan Hotel, on Third street, near Arch, in Philadelphia, at 5:30 a. m., and ran to Bethlehem, where a four-horse coach left immediately for Allentown to Mr. Copp's Pennsylvania Hotel, from which point the return trip was begun at 5 a. m. In the summer of 1834 the start for Philadelphia was made at 7 a. m.

On May 1, 1836, the Eagle line of coaches, owned by Walter C. Livingston, Charles Seagraves, Peter Cooper, Jacob Kern, George Weaver, Jacob Bush, and others, started business, running through Coopersburg, Quakertown, Montgomery Square, and Germantown to Philadelphia. At Coopersburg connection was made with the stage from Bethlehem and Easton. The Allentown agent was John F. Ruhe. This line was very popular with the inhabitants of Allentown, as it was a more direct route than the former stage lines.

A line of stages between Easton and Reading, which had formerly made tri-weekly trips, became daily in 1837. The coach left Wm. White's Easton Hotel at 4:30 a. m., and returning left William Coleman's hotel in Reading at the same hour. The route was as follows: Easton to Butztown, 7 miles; to Bethlehem, 5 miles; to Allentown, 6 miles; to Trexlertown, 8 miles; to Kutztown, 9 miles; to Reading, 18 miles.

Before Allentown was in existence the distances from point to point from Reading to Easton were given in the almanacs of the period, as follows: To Parvin's, 6 miles; to D. Levan's, 12 miles; to county line, 4 miles; to Trexler's, 6 miles; to Cedar Creek, 6 miles; to West Branch of the Delaware, 3 miles; to Bethlehem, 5 miles, to Easton, 10 miles. Total, 52 miles.

The stage route from Allentown to Berwick was as follows: To North Whitehall, 8 miles; to Lehigh Gap, 8 miles; to Leighton, 8 miles; to Mauch Chunk, 5 miles; to Lausanne, 1 mile; to Conyngham, 21 miles; to Nescopeck, 9 miles; to Berwick, 1 mile. Total 61 miles.

In 1828, the fare from Allentown to Lehigh Gap was one dollar. In 1816, John Applebach of Cherryville, drove the stage from Bethlehem to Berwick. The fare was $4.00 and way passengers were charged sixteen cents per mile.

Among the stage drivers were William Dietterline, "Father" Knauss, and one Nortz. On the afternoon of Sunday, June 27, 1852, a frightful accident occurred to a stage coach returning from Worman's Spring, where many persons had gone to avoid the heat. The coach was crowded, and while driving up the hill on Union street, the harness tore, and the overloaded vehicle fell over the steep embankment between Union and Lawrence streets. Two boys were instantly killed: Llewellyn R. A. Schantz, aged eleven (son of Widow Schantz, and brother to Rev. F. J. F. Schantz), and a boy named Held. Tobias, son of Jonas Reinsmith, had both legs broken, and Jacob, son of Oliver Snyder, had a leg and shoulder broken. Eli Steckel was also injured and many other passengers were more or less bruised.

Water-Works.—The first water-supply of the inhabitants of Allentown was obtained from the Little Lehigh and from springs, of which there were several in or near the limits of the town. A large spring was located on Lehigh street, just below what is now Lawrence street, which was used by residents of that vicinity over a hundred years. The American Steel and Wire company used its water for a time and only a few years ago it was connected with a sewer. There were other springs near by, one in the Nonnemaker lot and another west of Lehigh street. East of Fourth street were two large springs, one at the foot of Chew street, on what was later the Elliger property, and one at Gordon street, on land owned many years by the Gross family, near the present Spinning Company plant. A small stream ran through the town along Gordon street.

Wells were dug to supply the inhabitants, and, as early as 1763, Colonel Burd's letters to Judge William Allen mention a well in course of construction. Public wells were situated at the following points: Seventh and Linden, on Seventh, north side (this was operated by a bucket, all the others by pumps); Sixth and Linden; Seventh and Walnut, on Seventh below Walnut; on the square in front of the present Chronicle office; Sixth and Union; on Hamilton, west of Sixth; at Hagenbuch's hotel, Eighth and Hamilton, and at the northeast corner of Tenth and Hamilton.

An act of the legislature was passed Feb. 13, 1816, authorizing the organization of a water company in which Peter Newhard, Charles H. Martin, Peter Snyder, William Boas, and Solomon Gangwere were named as commissioners, and it provided that the company should proceed with the work within three years and complete the same within five years so far as to have the water within the limits of the borough. It was further provided that if, after the year 1834, the borough should be disposed to purchase the interest of the company, it should be permitted to do so, the sum to be ascertained by seven disinterested men.

Nothing having been accomplished in this behalf before the limitations of the Act, it was revived March 25, 1825, and John J. Krause, Henry Wilson, Abraham Newhard, Solomon Gangwere, and Michael Schneider were appointed commissioners to secure the organization of a company. This act provided that the borough might purchase the works after the year 1843. Operations were begun under the revived act by securing stock subscriptions at $10 per share, and by Aug. 28, 1826, satisfactory results were obtained, as appears by the following list of subscribers:

No. of Shares.	No. of Shares.
Abraham Worman, 10	John Miller (tailor), 5
Philip Brong, 3	Robert May Brooks, 10
John J. Krause, 5	Margaret Wilson, 10
Henry Ebner & Co., 10	Charles Davis, 5
Charles Kramer, 2	James Hall, 2
Charles L. Hutter, 3	Walter C. Livingston, 5
Daniel Fried, 5	Conrad Knerr, John
Michael Schneider, Jr., 5	Bogart, commission-
Jacob Newhard, 2	ers of Lehigh
Bernhart Reese, 5	County, 50
Christian F. Beitel, 4	Abraham Horn, 1
Abraham Newhard, 4	William Eckert, 5
Peter Newhard, 5	William Ginkinger, 1
Daniel Zeller, 4	Martin Schwenk, 2
Jacob Newhard, 2	Charles A. Gross, 2
Jonas Kuntz, 2	John Wilson, 3
Selfridge & Wilson, 5	Benjamin Ludwig, 3
William Fry, 5	John Ealer, 1
John Rice, 5	Charles Seagreaves, 2
Peter Hoffman, 3	Peter Hoffman, 2
George Habacker, 5	Andrew Krauss, 10
John S. Gibons, 5	John W. Jungkurth, 2
Charles Hutter, 2	Moses Horn, 1
George Keck, 5	John Smith, 1
Christian Brobst, 5	John F. Ruhe, 2
Leonard Nagle, 2	Moses Horn, 1
Andrew Gangwere, 2	Charles Kramer, 2
Andrew Klotz, 2	John Giltner, 2
Michael D. Eberhart, 5	Henry Ebner & Co., 20
John Spangenberg, 3	Keck & Saeger, 5
Louis Schmidt, 5	Peter Newhard, 3
Jacob Stein, 2	Jonas Smith, 2
Charles H. Martin, 10	Jonas Kuntz, 1
Gangwere & Schaffer, 10	Joseph Weiss, 3
Jacob Saeger, 10	Selfridge & Wilson, 5
Walter C. Livingston, 25	John B. Moser, 1
John Miller, 20	Frederick Hyneman, 5
Frederick Heineman, 5	Charles Davis, 2
Jacob Stern, 5	Walter C. Livingston
Godfrey and Christian	and John Rice, 100
Pretz, 10	Henry King and John
John D. Roney, 5	Rice, 20
Nicholas Saeger, 5	John Strassburger, 10
Abraham Rinker, 2	Joseph Fry, 2
Henry Weaver, 2	Andrew Gangwere, 3
Henry Reichart, 5	Corporation of bor-
Timothy Geidner, 2	ough of Northamp-
Peter Rhoads, 5	ton, by John J.
John Eckert, 5	Krause, burgess, 500
Jacob Statler, 5	William W. Weaver, 4

The organization was known as the Northampton Water Company. The first election was held June 4, 1827, at the house of Michael Schneider, when five managers were chosen to serve for the ensuing year, viz: Walter C. Livingston, John Miller (fuller), Peter Hoffman, John Rice, and Charles H. Martin, of whom Livingston was chosen president and Rice secretary.

The company resolved to use the water from the clear and strong-flowing spring near the Little Lehigh, in the south part of the town, owned by Abraham Worman, afterward called "Silver Spring," or "Crystal Spring," with an average daily flow of 4,000,000 gallons in the dry season, and purchased the site from the owner. Pumping-works were erected in the stone building still standing near the foot of Ninth street, and a reservoir constructed at Fountain and Maple streets. The pumping was done by water-power from the stream of the Little Lehigh driving a breast-wheel which communicated the power to the pumps, and this was used until 1858, when turbine wheels were introduced. This work was accomplished in 1828-29, and pipes were laid along Hamilton street to Fifth. The number of shares subscribed had in the meantime been augmented, and in 1829 there were 1,941, making the stock of the company $10,410. The deed from Abraham Worman to the company gave them the right "to enter and dig across his premises a trench to the large spring near his dwelling," and to use the water. It was not signed until March 19, 1831. On the 30th of April, of that year, Livingston deeded to the Northampton Water Co. the lot of land "on which the reservoir or cistern had previously been constructed," 60 by 230 feet, on the north side of John street (now Fountain), bounded on each side by an alley. Two other lots adjoining were sold to the company the same day by other persons.

From this time, for a dozen years, the affairs of the company progressed smoothly and satisfactorily. The pipes were extended on Seventh, Sixth, and Fifth streets as demanded, but in other respects very little was done towards improving the effectiveness of the works. In 1841 the capital stock paid in was $16,271, and the water-rents amounted to $1,060.

A new reservoir was supplied about that time but this proving unsatisfactory it was reconstructed. Subsequently for nearly ten years the management was not satisfactory and a new company was organized in 1850, called the Allentown Water Co., for the purpose of securing a forfeiture of the charter of the Northampton Water Co., but this was not successful. Then a re-organization was effected, an enlarged water-supply was obtained by the purchase of two mill properties, a new reservoir, 36 by 100 feet was built, and other improvements accomplished; and in 1855 the name of the company was changed to the Allentown Water Co.

In 1869 the water works was purchased by the city. The plant had been offered in 1868, and at the spring election of 1869 the voters by a large majority had authorized council to make the purchase. Then it was placed under the management of a joint committee, with Chas. E. Christ as the first superintendent. In 1875 it was given to the water commissioners (J. W.

Grubb, John R. Schall, Peter Brown, and J. O. Shimer), with R. A. Thayer as their first superintendent. Steam power for pumping was introduced in 1881. The total cost of the plant to 1884 was $195,000; there were twenty-six miles of water mains, 100 fire hydrants, and 3,000 family hydrants. The capacity of the two reservoirs 410,241 gallons; and the engines had a daily pumping capacity of 1,311,880 gallons.

In 1888 the plant at Fountain House was established, and the basin enlarged to 950,287 feet in 1896, with a capacity of 1,200,000 gallons, and the reservoir was supplemented by three standpipes, one on the hill beyond the power house, 15 feet in diameter and 150 feet high.

In 1898 councils bought the Schantz mill property in the eastern corner of Upper Muncie township, four and a half miles west of the city, which included a large spring of superior water, for $14,000. The land was patented in 1748. Jacob Schantz became the owner in 1792, and he carried on the mill until his decease. His son, Hiram, secured it in the settlement of the estate in 1843, and David Koch bought it in 1888, who sold it to the city.

In 1901, the electors of the city, by a vote of 3,876 to 1,757, authorized a loan of $225,000 for the improvement of the water service; which was subsequently increased to $357,700.

The dimensions of the Schantz spring basin were enlarged to 180 feet wide by 490 feet long, with an area of 63,000 square feet, and a capacity of 2,700,000 gallons when filled to the height of the overflow. The pipe-line from this spring to the pumping station is five miles long. The value of the plant in April, 1914, was $1,250,000.

Fire of 1848.—At about half past three o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday, June 1, (Ascension Day of that year), 1848, the cry of fire was raised in the streets of the borough and clouds of smoke from a stable in Hall street, between Hamilton and Linden streets (then called Hall alley), indicated the locality of the outbreak of the destructive element. The stable was the property of John Eckert, a tobacconist, where two of his apprentices were working, and it was fired by them in retaliation for a fancied wrong—having been denied a holiday on Ascension Day. A strong breeze was blowing from the northwest, and every spark the moment it alighted on the dry and combustible roofs was instantly fanned into a blaze, and many buildings were soon wrapped in flames. The two hand engines of the town were promptly on hand, but owing to a scarcity of water and the very high wind, they were powerless in contending against the flames. The fire raged about three hours.

The smoke was seen for miles and brought a fire company from Bethlehem to the scene. The market-house on the square was torn down in order to prevent the spread of the fire eastward.

The Republikaner of Tuesday, June 6th, printed an account of the fire, of which the following is a translation:

“TERRIBLE FIRE.

“35 DWELLINGS AND ABOUT 42 BARNs AND STABLES A PREY TO THE FLAMES. LOSS ABOUT $200,000.

“At 4 o'clock last Thursday a fire broke out in our town, which, owing to the high wind then prevailing, spread so quickly that in the course of an hour and a half nearly half the town was laid in ashes. The fire originated in the stable of John Eckert, either through incendiaries or the carelessness of children, and spread from one stable to another so rapidly and did its work of destruction so thoroughly, that all the buildings on Hamilton Street, running westwardly from Market Square to Hagenbuch's hotel, excepting Laudenslager & Ettinger's hardware-store, were destroyed. The firemen exerted themselves to subdue the flames, but their efforts proved vain, and it seemed as if the whole town would be burned down.

“The loss in property is large, so large that Allentown will hardly recover from the stroke in a decade. The main business portion of the town lies in ashes. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that this block was the most beautiful in town, including a number of three-story brick buildings, among them the new Odd-Fellows' Hall. The loss falls so much more heavily by reason of the failure of property-owners to have their dwellings insured.

“Below follows a list of the sufferers, who for the main part have lost their all through this calamity. This list will be found in the main correct, since we sent a man to the spot to obtain a complete list of all who have been ruined by the destroying element.

“North Ward.

“The large three-story brick hotel on the northwest corner of Market Square, the property of Jesse Grim, and tenanted in part for hotel purposes by James Trexler, and in part by Messrs. Grim & Reninger and Selfridge & Wilson for store purposes, besides a frame store-house and five stables. The loss of Mr. Grim is put at $8,000; insurance, $5,000. The store of Grim & Reninger was insured for $6,000; loss, $10,000; Selfridge & Wilson suffer a total loss, $4,000. The books and some of the goods in these two stores were saved. Mr. Trexler, the landlord, lost nearly everything, and saved only a little of his furniture. His loss is $1,200.

“The two-story brick store-house of Yeager & Weidner. A part of the stock saved. Loss, $7,000; insurance on building, $1,000.

“The two-story brick dwelling-house and jewelry-store of Joseph Weiss. Loss, $3,450; insurance, $1,533.

“The two-story brick stove and tinware shop of Thomas Ginkinger. Whole loss, $1,800.

“The double two-story dwelling-house and stable of Daniel Keiper. The house was occupied by Keiper and Ephraim Gangwere. A part of the household furniture was saved. Loss, $4,300, secured to the extent of $2,000.

"The two-story frame dwelling-house of Abraham Newhard, and his carpenter-shop and barn. This house was occupied by Silas and Abraham Newhard. Only a little of the furniture was saved.

"The three-story brick dwelling of Abraham Newhard, occupied by Thomas Newhard and Stetler & George. Entire loss, $4,150; no insurance.

The three-story brick dwelling-house and drug-store of Dr. Danowsky, besides a laboratory and stables; very little saved. Loss, $4,500; secured, $1,500.

"The three-story brick dwelling-house and store-stand of Elias Mertz (or Mertz & Weaver), and stables. A part of the store-goods saved; loss, $8,000; insurance, $5,000.

"Two three-story brick dwellings and outhouses of Mr. Klein, one tenanted by Messrs. Huber & Wagner as merchants, the other by Messrs. Keiper & Gross, publishers of the Lehigh Patriot and Lehigh Reporter, and booksellers. A portion of Messrs. Huber & Wagner's stock and the business books of Keiper & Gross, were saved. The store of the former firm was insured for $6,000; loss, $10,000. The two buildings were insured for $4,000, and valued at $6,000; the loss to the printing-house was $1,500.

"The three-story brick dwelling-house and hardware-store of Edmund R. Newhard. A part of the wares were saved. Loss, $9,500; insurance, $1,200.

"The two-story store and dwelling-house and stable of Mr. Peter Newhard. A part of the furniture was saved. Loss, $3,500; insurance, $2,000. In this building was the post-office, the greater part of the contents of which were saved.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house and shoe-store of Mr. George Lucas. In the latter nearly everything was saved. The building was insured for $1,000. Loss, $1,900.

"The two-story brick dwelling, store-house, and stable of Mr. Peter Huber. Nothing was saved except the books, some papers, and money. A large sum of money, as well as a large quantity of grain, is said to have been destroyed. Loss, $8,445; no insurance.

"The following also suffered losses, estimated as follows:

M. Schwarz, barn and contents,	$500
Ephraim Gangwere, household furniture,	600
Charles Eckert, stable (insurance, $200), ..	500
John Eckert, stable,	226
Widow Schaffer, stable,	500
Charles Seager, stable,	150
Reformed Church,	200
Silas Newhard, household goods,	300
Edwin Keiper, household goods,	100
Michael Uhler, dry goods,	2,500
Silas Newhard, household goods,	300
Hannah Dunlap, household goods,	45
The market-house,	500

"South Ward.

"The two-story stone dwelling-house and an adjacent frame building on the southwest corner of Market Square was the property of Mr. Joshua Hanse. Loss, $3,864; insurance, $2,000.

"The new Odd-Fellows' Hall, with the store-stock of Messrs. Weiss & Co., the saddler-shop of Charles Keck, and the restaurant of Henry Nagel. No insurance. Loss to the Odd-Fellows, $6,528.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house, two stables, and the frame-work of a barn of Dr. C. H. Martin, and all his household goods. Nothing was saved. Loss, $5,206; no insurance.

"The two two-story brick dwelling-houses, stable, and shop of John Q. Cole, one of the houses occupied by the family of Mr. Brown, the toy manufacturer. Mr. Cole had a great deal of willow-ware on hand, and he and Mr. Brown suffer especially. Estimated loss of Mr. Cole, $3,280; insurance, $1,500. Mr. Brown's loss is $550, with no insurance.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house and stable of Mr. Joseph F. Newhard. Estimated loss, $1,700; insurance, $1,000.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house, tobacco-factory, stable, machine-shop, etc., of John F. Ruhe, as well as a large quantity of tobacco. Estimated loss, $4,755; insurance, $1,600.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house and stable of Michael Uhler. Loss, $1,100, with no insurance.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house and stable of Charles Scholl, besides tailoring materials and household furniture. Estimated loss, $1,400; no insurance.

"The two-story brick dwelling-house of Catharine Graff and household furniture. A total loss, $750.

"The butcher-shop and barn of Mr. Martin Schwenk. Loss, $600.

"The turning-shop of Reuben Kauffman, with finished work. Estimated loss, $220.

"The new two-story brick dwelling-house of William Scholl, on Allen Street, opposite Mr. Rees' hotel. Loss, $500.

"The two-story dwelling-house of Mr. George Good, on Allen street, with all its contents. Loss, $850.

"The frame dwelling-house of Albright & Woodring, on Allen Street, with contents. Loss, $300.

"The following persons besides the foregoing have lost property as indicated:

H. C. Longnecker,	$300
George F. Ruhe, house furniture,	100
Henry Ruhe, cash,	50
Reuben Reiss, furniture,	250
Reuben Strauss, furniture,	150
Nathan Laudenslager, sundries,	150
Charles Beidler, smithy,	60
Henry Ebner, stable,	75
Andreas Wind, stable,	280
The Allenton Hose House,	150
James Seagreaves, two stables,	550
William Kern, stable,	250
Dr. Tilghman H. Martin, barn,	975
Ephraim Grim, stable,	420
M. U. R. Hunter, stable,	150
George Keiper, stable,	300
Richard Levers,	55
John Neiligh, furniture,	200
Sarah Hittel, furniture,	100
John Wolf, furniture,	20
Charles Keck, tailoring goods,	300
Weiss & Lochman, fancy goods,	1600
Henry F. Nagle, tools,	350
Patrick McGlown, scaffolding, etc.,	100
C. L. Lochman, tools,	50

"The above losses were estimated by a committee appointed at a citizens' meeting. It can be seen that the above valuations are low, and if the full value of the lost property were given it would sum up the loss to at least $250,000. As it is now made, the loss does not appear higher than $145,000, of which $42,000 is covered by insurance.

A meeting of citizens was held the morning after the fire to take measures for the relief of the sufferers. Hon. Henry King was president, and J. D. Lawall and J. M. Line, secretaries. Committees were appointed to ascertain the losses, to prepare an address to the country, to succor those in need of immediate assistance, and to demolish the tottering walls left by the fire. Thanks were expressed by resolution to all who assisted in preventing the spread of the flames, especially the Bethlehem firemen. On June 3d a second meeting was held, at which a financial committee and collectors were appointed to secure donations. The country responded liberally in answer to the cry of distress that went up from smitten Allentown, and the report of the financial committee, made Feb. 1, 1849, showed that they had received and disbursed $13,497.49. Money was sent from various points in Lehigh county, from Philadelphia and New York, from Montgomery, Lancaster, Lebanon, Northumberland, Northampton, Bucks, Chester, Carbon, Huntingdon, York, Crawford, Berks, and Bedford counties, from Ohio, from New Orleans, and from Washington, D. C. (through Hon. S. A. Bridges).

The address prepared by the committee read as follows:

"FELLOW CITIZENS: A dire calamity has befallen us; one of which no human prudence could foresee, nor human power and energy avert. A fire, originating in an obscure corner of our town, driven onward by a strong gale of wind, has swept through the centre of our prosperous and beautiful place, and left it a mass of blackened walls and smouldering ruins. From the height of prosperity, have all within its range been suddenly prostrated to comparative want and wretchedness—the labour of many years, in three short hours completely destroyed, while many, very many, have been stript of everything except their trust in God, and their strong reliance on the benevolence of their less unfortunate citizens at home and abroad.

"From the best estimates that have been made, we ascertain the actual loss to be an amount equal to one-fourth of the assessed value of all the real and personal property in our town, which contains nearly four thousand inhabitants. To replace this we do not even hope—to restore the sufferers to the position which they occupied before this calamity we deem impracticable; but we do hope by the aid of those who can "feel for other's woes" to lift from the ruins amidst which they now sit, helpless and almost hopeless, many of those who have lost their all, and enable them to begin the world again with renewed confidence in God and their fellow men. To our fellow citizens we appeal for that assistance which you can so easily afford, which will relieve so much suffering here, which our grateful hearts will never forget, and which Heaven will not fail to reward.

"Permit us to suggest to you to request the editors of your papers to adopt such other measures as in your opinion will enable your fellow citizens most easily to remit to the proper officers of our finance committee whatever they may feel disposed to contribute in aid of the sufferers.

JOHN S. GIBBONS,
M. HANNUM,
R. E. WRIGHT,
J. D. STILES,
C. S. BUSH,
Committee on Address."

After receiving the reports of the several committees to ascertain losses on immediate relief, &c., &c., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the distribution of the monies which may be collected for the relief of the sufferers, be referred to a committee of Finance, consisting of 15—no one of whom shall reside or own property in the burnt district, and who are hereby directed to appropriate the same in such manner as to give the largest portion of the funds to those who are left most destitute. Whereupon the chair appointed the following committee:

"Christian Pretz, Jacob Dillinger, Jesse Samuels, William H. Blumer, Michael D. Eberhard, Jacob D. Boas, Benjamin Ludwig, Aaron Troxel, Simon Sweitzer, Robert E. Wright, Charles S. Massey, Charles G. Von Tagen, John D. Lawall, Jonathan Cook, and Dr. John Romig.

"Resolved, That the committee of finance be authorized to appoint a treasurer and other officers, also to appoint collectors to proceed to such districts out of this county as they deem proper, and on such conditions as they consider just,—and also to distribute circulars.

"The above named committee met and organized by electing the following officers:

"Jacob Dillinger, chairman.

"R. E. Wright, corresponding secretary.

"M. D. Eberhard, treasurer.

"J. D. Lawall, secretary.

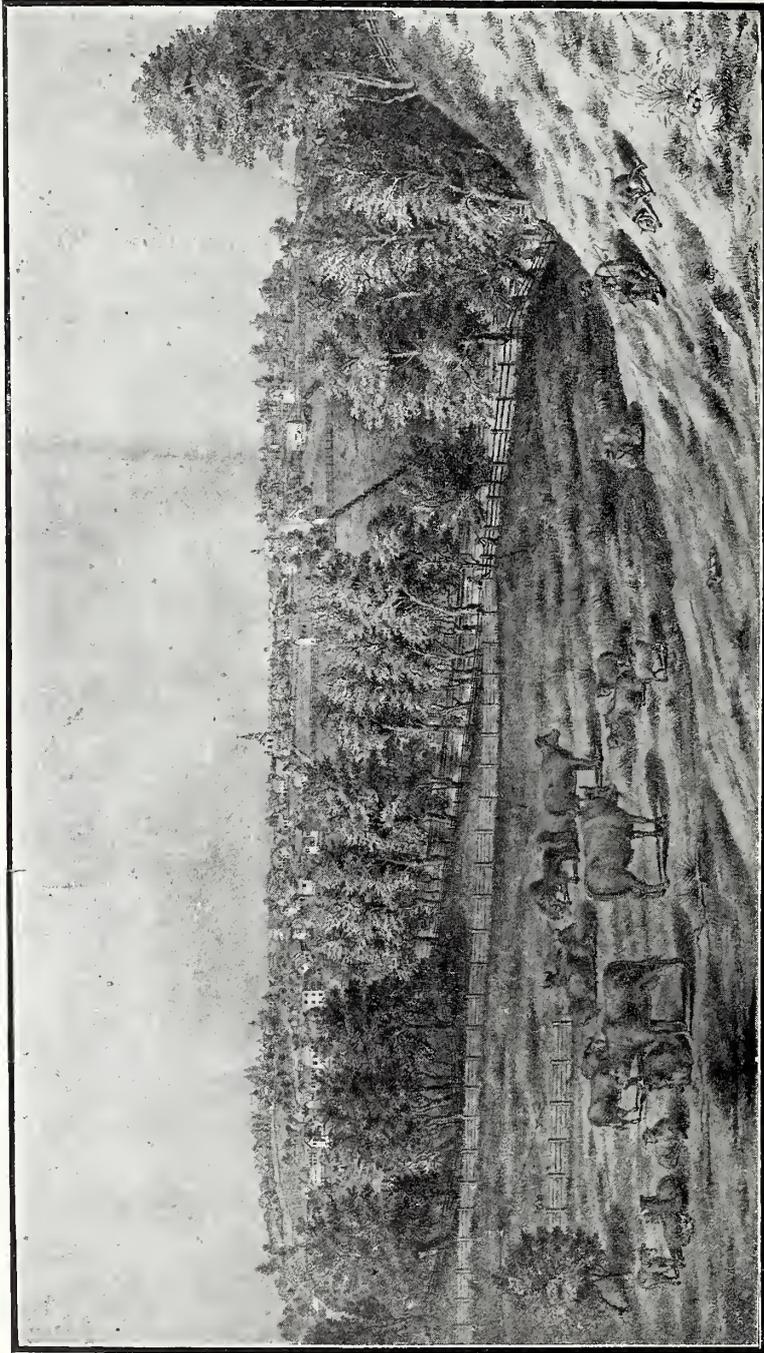

"All remittances to be made to the treasurer, M. D. Eberhard, Allentown, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

Extract from the minutes of a public meeting of citizens of Lehigh county, held at the Court House, in Allentown on Saturday the 3d day of June, A. D. 1848.

"Attest:

HENRY KING, President.
J. M. LINE,
J. D. LAWALL,
Secretaries."

The fire, great as was the loss it caused, was a blessing in disguise for Allentown. In some cases the lots in the burnt district sold for more a year or so after the fire than they would have brought before it with the buildings. The first notice that the Republikaner contains of rebuilding on the ruins of the fire was that of a house erected by Joseph Weiss, which is mentioned under date of Oct. 5, 1848. Others began at the same time or soon after, the town received acquisitions of a desirable nature in the arrival of men of means, and improvement went rapidly forward. The town had in 1848 a population of 3,700, and numbered 619 houses, and in 1854, six years after the fire, when a special census was taken to ascertain the amount of growth, it was found that the population was 5,250, and the number of houses 970,—a gain of 1,550 in population and of 351 in the number of houses. The establishment of the iron-works, a short time before the fire, had done something towards bringing about this result. The building of the railroad was begun in 1855, and materially advanced the interests of the town.

ALLENTOWN IN 1853.

Fire Companies.—The first fire company in the borough was the Friendship Fire Company, organized Nov. 2, 1818. The Lehigh Hose Company existed already in 1830, and the Lehigh Engine Company was organized about 1835. The Humane Fire Company was organized about 1837. The Good Will Company was organized in 1850, the Columbia, in 1853, and the America Hose Company in 1864. The detailed history of these companies appears in the history of the Fire Department.

Churches and Schools.—During the fifty-six years of Allentown's existence as a borough there were ten church buildings erected within its limits, two Lutheran, one Reformed, one Presbyterian, one Methodist Episcopal, one Episcopal, two Evangelical, one Catholic, and one Free Hall. St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, on South Eighth street, a brick structure, was erected in 1855, to replace an older building. The old stone church, with its wine glass pulpit and sounding board, high altar, high backed pews, and high galleries, arched windows and large double doors, aisles without carpet, pews without cushions, large stoves and massive chandeliers, is still remembered by a few of the older inhabitants. St. John's Lutheran church, on South Fifth street, was erected in 1855, and consecrated on May 6th, of that year. Zion Reformed church, at Hamilton and Church streets, began the erection in 1838 of a brick building to replace the historic stone structure erected in 1774. It was completed and dedicated in June, 1840. As the hour of service in the Lutheran and Reformed congregations was not the same, the attendance at each church was large. St. John's Reformed congregation was organized in 1865, but did not erect a building until 1868.

In 1830 a Presbyterian church was built on North Fifth street, succeeded by a larger structure on the adjoining lot in 1838. The pulpit stood in the west end of the church, between the two doors, opening from Fifth street. Attendants at the service, on entering the church, faced the audience in their pews. There was an end gallery for the organ and choir. In 1855 and 1856 the church was remodeled.

The Methodist Episcopal church, on Linden between Fifth and Sixth streets, built in 1844, was a brick structure, without galleries. Many young people attended the evening services of this congregation.

The Episcopal church at Fifth and Linden streets was built in 1866.

The Salem Evangelical church, at Linden and Ninth, built in 1838, was succeeded by one above Ninth in 1857; an Evangelical chapel was built in 1853, on Turner street, near Second.

The only Catholic church in the borough was built on Ridge avenue, in 1857.

The Free Hall, on Linden street, near Ninth, was built about 1840, in which any denomination was permitted to hold services, even infidels, and also served as a public meeting place.

The United States Gazetteer, compiled in 1795, by Joseph Scott, states that Allentown contained about 90 dwellings, a German Lutheran and a Calvinist church, an academy, and three merchant mills. This statement indicates that an academy had been established in Allentown prior to the establishment of the Allentown Academy by Act of 1814. The writer has in his possession a "Reward of Merit" card, which reads as follows: "The Bearer, Mr. Edward Rhoads, excels this week in Learning for which he deserves the praise of his Parents and Instructor herewith bestowed. E. Porter, Preceptor. Allentown Academy, 1816." The card is a printed form, with spaces for the insertion of the name of the pupil and the study and bears in the margin the words, "Allentown, Printed by Charles L. Hutter."

A bill for tuition rendered by John Ryan, dated June 9, 1823, read as follows:

Four months teaching of Edward, @ $5.00 per quarter,	$6 25
Four months teaching of Stephen, @ $2.50 per quarter,	3 12½
Three months teaching of Augustus, @
$2.50 per month,	2 50
Contingent Expenses,	1 00
	$12 87½

Among the early teachers was Henry Eberhard, who died in 1822. He was the father of Michael D. Eberhard, also a teacher.

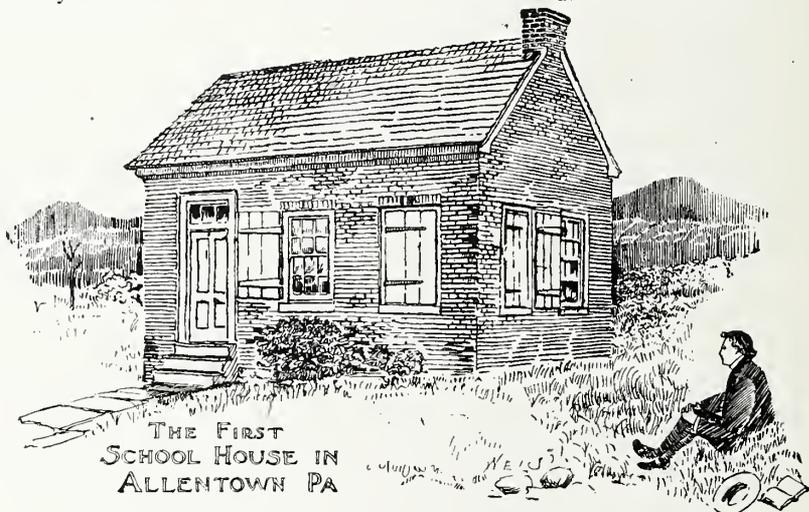

Charles Weaver had an English school on South Seventh street in 1813.

A school for girls was opened in 1813. Night schools were kept by various teachers from 1813 to 1845. John Ryan had one in 1819, in a large room in the old jail building, where a Mr. Ellis had previously kept school. Ryan's rates were $3.00, $4.00, and $5.00 per quarter according to the studies taught. C. L. Arnold had one in 1838 and a number of years prior to that time, in the school building adjoining the Presbyterian church. He taught reading, writing, arithmetic, and book-keeping, and pupils paid one dollar per month. "The Schoolmasters' Synod," an organization of teachers, met, as early as 1827, at Worman's Spring. In 1829 Zachariah Anselmus was president, and John O. Adams, secretary. The history of the Allentown Academy, chartered in 1814 and opened in 1827; the Allentown Seminary, and other schools will be found in the chapter on education. The large Temperance House on Union street, west of Seventh, was occupied by a school and Mr. James Lee had a private school on Union street.

On the Jarrett map of 1842, the academy is marked at Eighth and Walnut streets, and there are three schoolhouses located; one between the Academy and the Lutheran church, on South Eighth street; one on North Fifth street, between the Presbyterian church and the old the seminary, proposed to take $2,200 for the good will and fixtures and that the rent of the building was $650 per annum. His diary reads: "Splendid affair, amply sufficient to accommodate 100 boarding scholars, and 300 day scholars. At present 100 scholars all told, Oct. 21, 1857. The omnibus being ready we left for Allentown. Fare $1.65 for three. Arrived 6 p. m. In evening to German Reformed church, where our Synod met yesterday, Rev. Miller preached in German." Nov. 2, 1857, there were six teachers, 11 boarders, 11 primary scholars, and 9 female day scholars. The number of male day scholars is not given. Among the scholars at the Seminary in 1852 were G. D. Hart, W. H. Gabriel, J. P. Reichard, A. S. and J. F. Weinsheimer, W. H. Snyder, A. S. Guth, C. H. Roney, H. G. Reichard, A. G. Weikel, J. P. Leisenring, O. A. Miller, S. P. Kern, D. F.

SCHOOLHOUSE AT FRONT AND WALNUT STREETS.

jail, and one on Union street, at the point where Walnut street extended, then called Middle street, adjoins Union, which building is still standing. Between 1820 and 1830 a small building on North Seventh street, where C. H. Ettinger's store now stands, was used as a schoolhouse. In the 40's a female seminary was established by Rev. Andrew Young, in the south Homeopathic College building on Penn street. After his death his widow conducted it for a time, assisted by Miss Baldwin, later the wife of William S. Marx, Esq.

An interesting item relating to the Allentown Seminary is found in the diary of Rev. William Phillips, a Reformed clergyman, who took charge of the seminary Nov. 1, 1857. He was then principal of the Northampton Academy, at Easton, and recorded that Rev. Reynolds, of Mertz, T. C. Yeager, J. A. Blumer, Oliver Holben, J. Y. Krauss, A. C. Pretz, C. E. Meyer, C. E. V. V. Clark, D. J. Kuntz, J. P. Schindel, J. H. E. Dubs, F. J. F. Schantz, W. R. Hofford, H. M. Nagle, and R. F. Saeger, and in 1857, Alexander, Rosina, and Victor Blumer, Maggie Kern, Ann Kessler, Frank Weil, Maria Wright, and Oscar Weinsheimer.

An act passed in 1824 provided for the instruction of the children of the poor at the expense of the county. In 1828, under the provisions of that act, the borough of Northampton (Allentown) and the townships of Salisbury and Northampton paid $421.71 and in 1830 the sum of $270.63, for the education of their poor children. In 1833 the borough alone paid $434.77.

The act of 1824 had prepared the people in a great degree for the new school law of 1834, and it was accepted on its first submission to the people. One of the additional means used to influence public opinion and secure a favorable result in the election appears to have been "a numerously attended and influential meeting of the citizens of the borough at the public house of George Wetherhold, Friday evening, Sept. 12, 1834," at which the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"WHEREAS, We believe that education contributes to the happiness of man and the welfare of society, and we desire, so far as is in our power, to improve the moral conditions of the community, and to perpetuate free institutions; therefore,

"Resolved, That we solemnly believe that an act passed at the late session of the legislature entitled 'an act,' etc., if put in force will be of advantage to the poor as well as the rich, and we will therefore apply all honorable means at the next election to secure the success of the system."

The efforts of the friends of the new law were successful, and it was adopted in the borough by a vote of one hundred and thirty-seven against one. The first board of school directors consisted of Jacob Mohr, J. S. Gibbons, Esq., George Haberacker, William Fry, Alexander Taylor, and George Keiper.

The first public examination and school exercises were held Dec. 11, 1838, an announcement being made in the papers by Christian Pretz, secretary of the board. The forenoon was devoted to the examination of the pupils in their respective rooms, and in the afternoon all assembled at the German Lutheran church, where an address on education was delivered by Charles Davis, Esq., president of the board. Prior to the opening of the schools, Sept. 2, 1839, the directors published a card in which they said they would "make it their especial duty to see to it that on the part of the teachers employed everything possible is done to promote the moral and spiritual education of the pupils entrusted to them, and therefore again ask the active co-operation of the parents and guardians, without which the best system must fail of attaining its object." The next year a "female teacher" was wanted, according to an advertisement which appeared in one of the newspapers, and in 1841 three of the six teachers were ladies.

The following letter, applying for a school at Allentown, was written to the postmaster of the borough:

UPPER MOUNT BETHEL, Stone Church, P. O.,
Feb. 22, 1836.

SIR: I have just been informed that the Trustees of Allentown Academy or the Directors of Public Schools, had advertised for four male and two female teachers. My apology for troubling you upon the subject is, that I have not seen the advertisement, and do not know whom to address. I was in Allentown last fall for the purpose of taking charge of the Academy but arrived too late, as a principal and assistant had been employed a few days previous. I called on Messrs. Davis and Hornbeck, Esqrs., and I think, showed them the recommendations I have from some of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Vermont, members of Congress and other gentlemen of reputation. I am an attorney by profession, but while pursuing my academical and legal studies, I employed a part of my time in teaching, and my wife and myself are now teaching in this place; and the time for which we engaged will expire this week, and we have concluded to teach a few weeks longer, by the scholar, unless a better opportunity can be obtained in some larger place. We are now employed by the month. We keep in the same building, but in separate apartments; my wife takes charge of the girls and I of the boys, and our employers are pleased with the arrangements, and will furnish us with testimonials of their approbation of our management and qualifications. I can teach all the branches usually taught in academies, except the Greek language. I had a tolerable knowledge of the Latin and French languages, six or seven years since, but have had but little occasion to pay any particular attention to them since that time, though I have had a few students who have studied Latin. The knowledge I have of the French language I acquired while I was a Cadet at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. My wife is well qualified to teach Grammar, Arithmetic, Geography, etc. We think of employing our time for one or two years to come, in teaching, if we can obtain a favourable opportunity for that purpose in one place; therefore if you have not already engaged teachers, please inform me immediately, whether you wish to engage us, and how much you will be willing to pay us by the month, quarter, or year, and I will return an immediate answer to you. You undoubtedly wish to obtain teachers who are well qualified, and will be willing to pay them a fair compensation for their services. Col. Porter, some time ago, informed me that the Directors in Easton paid the teachers of the public or free schools, $30 per month, each. I hope to receive an answer from you or some of the trustees in the course of the week; you are probably aware that the mail will leave Easton on Friday morning very early, on the route through this place, and will not leave Easton again until Monday.

Yours very respectfully,

J. J. DEAVITT.

Another application read:

To the Board of School Directors.

GENTLEMEN: Being anxious to obtain a station as a teacher in the ensuing free school, I hereby offer my services in one of the establishments for the annual compensation of $400, for which I engage myself to give instructions in the German and English Languages, if required.

Should I be so fortunate as to meet with success, I'll endeavor to give general satisfaction to the board of directors as well as to the parents of the pupils.

Your most obedient Servant,

JOHN F. HALBACH.

Allentown, March 22, 1836.

Mr. Halbach taught in the school-house on North Seventh street, where he also had a singing school.

In 1838, the school board allowed a debating society to meet one evening a week in the school room occupied by Mr. Good on payment of one dollar a month, and the same privilege was allowed to a society that met in the room occupied by Mr. Arnold or Mr. Philips. The board also disapproved of Mr. Arnold's action in not having kept any school on two half-days, without the consent of the board. The members present at this meeting, Sept. 11, 1838, were Charles Davis, Henry Ebner, Jacob Mohr, and Christian Pretz.

At this meeting the deeds for the school-house property were accepted and an order was drawn on the treasurer for the amount of the same.

On Jan. 4, 1843, Robt. E. Wright, secretary of the board, announced that the following set of books would be used in the schools: Cobb's New Spelling-Book and Juvenile Readers Nos. 1 and 2 (primary books), the New Testament, Frost's History of the United States, Mitchell's Geographical Reader, Frost's American Speaker (Reader), Frost's Grammar, Mitchell's Primary School Geography, Keith's Arithmetic, Frost's Exercises in Composition, and Cobb's Abridgment of Walker's Dictionary.

In the year 1849 the first public appeal was made to the directors to appoint a superintendent of schools.

Notwithstanding there were only ten teachers employed, the Lehigh Register, of Sept. 14, 1849, said, "We would suggest the appointment of a general superintendent of the schools. We are far behind the progressive spirit of the times in this important matter. We have no doubt if the directors would move in the matter it would meet the approbation of all the friends of public-school education."

At a meeting of the Lehigh County Association of Teachers, directors and friends of education, Feb. 23, 1851, the following resolutions were adopted, which clearly indicate the then existing need in the public-school system:

"Resolved, That the appointment of district superintendents is wisely recommended, and that the necessity for them is becoming daily more imperative.

"Resolved, That in the opinion of the association much of the incompetency of teachers, at present so general a cause of complaint, would in a great degree be corrected by the establishment of teachers' seminaries under the control of district superintendents."

When a county superintendent was to be elected, in 1854, the Allentown school directors,

F. E. Samuels, C. H. Martin, Joseph Young, Jonathan Reichard, David Menninger, Jonathan Schwartz, and Nathan Gaumer, participated in it.

In the year 1856 the county superintendent reported that "among the ten first-class school-houses is that of Lehigh Ward in Allentown"; and continued, "there are thirteen graded schools, well provided with outline maps, globes, orrery, blackboards, geometrical blocks, etc., but in the style and arrangement of the seats and desks, they are not equal to some in the rural districts. The directors of the boroughs of Allentown and Catasauqua are the most assiduous in their attention to the schools."

The Allentown High School for both sexes was established in 1858, under the charge of R. W. McAlpine, "a young gentleman fully competent to the task." This vastly increased the influence of the educational system. In the same year the first school-house built by the board of directors was erected on Turner street, above Eighth, in what was then known as the North ward. Previous to this all the schools were kept in buildings erected for other purposes, but purchased by the board and converted into school-houses. The new building at once took rank among the best in the county. In 1859, by a vote of six to two, a separate high school for each sex was established, and Augustus Armagnac was appointed teacher of the male, and Mrs. Hannah L. Romig of the female high school. Thus the organization of the schools as primary, secondary, grammar, and high was complete, but serious difficulties arose in administering the system. There seems to have been no regular time for promotions, and hence we find them made in September and January, and in 1861, it was resolved "that three of the scholars attending the male grammar school be examined by the county superintendent, in presence of the president, visiting director of said school, and the secretary, who should be authorized to promote said scholars without reference to the board." A closer approach to perfect system was made in April, 1861, when C. W. Cooper, Esq., offered, and the board passed, the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed for the purpose of drafting questions for the different grades, and that the same be presented to each scholar in attendance during the last week of the term, and that the admission of scholars into schools shall be governed in accordance with such examination."

Among the citizens who interested themselves in the public schools of the period of which we have written, Charles Davis, Esq., held a prominent place. He was appointed as one of the inspectors by the court, and afterwards was president of the school board. He had an able successor in Jonathan Reichard, Esq., who had the honor of successfully performing the work of grading the public schools and of being chosen the first president of the Teachers' and Directors' Educational Association, organized in 1852. Tilghman Good, elected county superintendent in 1860, and R. W. McAlpine, the first teacher of the high school and editor of the Teachers' Journal, which appeared in 1858, also deserve to be mentioned. As active friends of the public schools at this period, as well as promoters of higher education, should be mentioned such men as Christian Pretz, R. E. Wright, Esq., Eli J. Saeger, Rev. S. K. Brobst, C. W. Cooper, Esq., Reuben Guth and Dr. T. H. Martin.

Mercantile Growth.—In 1811, the store-keepers of the new borough were James Wilson, at the southeast corner of Seventh and Hamilton; George Graff, at Eighth and Hamilton; Charles Deshler, on South Centre Square; William Eckert, on South Seventh street; John Haines, at the southwest corner of Hamilton and Seventh streets; Peter Snyder, at the northwest corner of Seventh and the Square, and Peter Rhoads, on Seventh above Linden. In 1815, Spangenberg and Gangewere opened a store on South Seventh, opposite John Keiper's tobacconist's shop; Wagner and Dobbins one at the southwest corner of Eighth and Hamilton, and Frederick Eckert and John F. Ruhe, Jr., opened a store on North Seventh, on the east side, between Hamilton and Linden. Jacob and Daniel Saeger established a general store in 1815, opposite the Reformed church. In 1822 they sold out to Godfrey and Christian Pretz, who carried on the business until the death of Godfrey Pretz, in 1830. The business was then conducted by Pretz, Saeger & Co., and Pretz, Kern & Co., and Pretz, Guth & Co., until 1859, when Christian Pretz retired, when the firm became Hiram Guth & Co. The Saegers built the building at the southeast corner of Hamilton and Sixth streets, where the firm later located. Pretz, Saeger, & Co. reported a business of $60,000 in 1843. James Wilson was succeeded by his son, John Wilson, and he by the firm of Selfridge and Wilson, who did business until 1845. Charles Deshler was succeeded by his son-in-law, William Boas. Frederick Eckert died in 1821, after which John F. Ruhe, Jr., continued the business alone and was succeeded by his son, Charles A. Ruhe. The first hardware store was opened by Peter Newhard, who was succeeded in 1843 by his son, Edmund R. Newhard. Dr. John Frederick Ruhe opened the first apothecary shop about 1795. He died in 1841 and was succeeded by Ludwig Schmidt.

In 1814, the store-keepers were Charles Deshler, William Eckert, George Graff, John Haines, Peter Newhard (hardware), Peter Snyder, and James Wilson. The tavern keepers, Jacob Derrhammer, Abraham Gangewere, John Miller, George Rhoads, Abraham Rinker, John F. Ruhe, Jr., and George Savitz. There were three mills conducted by John Wagner, John Gutekunst, and Daniel and Jacob Saeger. The tailors were Frederick Eckert, John Miller, and Michael Schmidt. The hatters were Abraham Beitelman, John Horn, Jacob Strauss, and Jacob Stettler. The saddlers were Conrad Huber and James Seagreaves. Jacob Steckel was a tanner and Mrs. Sara Mowharter owned a tan-yard. John Moll and Tobias Groh were gunsmiths. There were four physicians, Drs. James Jameson, Charles and Jacob Martin, and John F. Ruhe, Sr.; one silversmith, John Kraus; two tobacconists, John Keiper, and John Eckert; two clockmakers, Jacob Blumer and Jacob Stein, and two printers, Charles L. Hutter, and Henry Ebner.

In 1838 there were 23 storekeepers in the borough dealing in foreign merchandise: John Wilson, Saeger, Keck & Co., Selfridge & Wilson, Peter Hoffman, Peter Newhard, Peter Huber, Peter Biery, Charles A. Ruhe, Joseph Weiss, John Moll, Jacob D. Boas, Charles S. Massey, Andrew Klotz, Samuel V. R. Hunter, Jacob Schlaugh, Alexander Blumer & Co., Edwin W. Hutter, George Stein, Pretz, Saeger & Co., Boas and Stein, and John B. Moser.

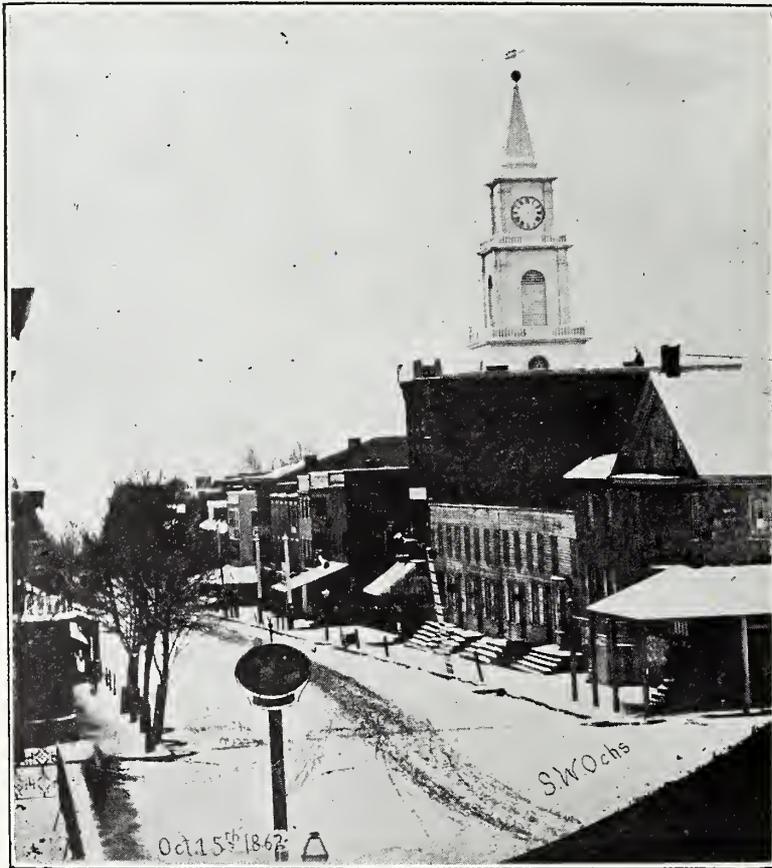

In 1842 the merchants of the borough were: Pretz, Saeger, & Co., Selfridge & Wilson, Saeger, Keck & Co., Stein, Wenner & Line, Hunter & Miller, Charles A. Ruhe, Andrew Klotz, Samuel Lightcap, Peter Huber, Peter Newhard, Elias Mertz & Co., Joseph Weiss, John Moll, Craig & Dillinger, A. & W. Blumer, John W. Walter, George Stein, Daniel Carey, Boas & Saeger, John B. Moser, Ludwig Schmidt, Day & Miller, George Esser, and Charles S. Massey.

Among the merchants of the period from 1811 to 1867 may be mentioned the following: John Young and George Haberacker, who opened a hatter's shop near the little Lehigh bridge in 1816; Jacob Newhard, who advertised Windsor chairs, sofas, etc., in 1818; Philip Brang, on Seventh street, who sold stoves, etc., in 1817; Britannia Barnes, 1820-30; Peter Huber (grain, etc.), 1830-40; Rupp & Shifferstein, 1830-40; Benjamin Ludwig, (leather), 1830-60; Nathan Laudenslager, coppersmith, succeeded in 1839 by Amos Ettinger; Thomas

Ginkinger, coppersmith, on Hamilton, below Selfridge & Wilson's, in 1839; James Jameson, clothing store on Hamilton street, "between Capt. Gumpert's Allentown Hotel and Blumer's book-store, opposite Jacob D. Boas' hat-store," in 1839; Jere. Schmidt and Anthony Siegfried, shoes, 1840; John J. Krause, (lumber) 1840-50; Peter Hoffman & Son, 1840-70; Weaver and Trexler, 1840-70; E. W. Hutter, (books), 1830-40; Blumer & Leisenring (books), 1840-55; Stephen Barber (hardware), and Bar-Reninger & Co., in 1858, to Reninger & Shimer, in 1862 and in 1866 to E. S. Shimer & Co.

Craig and Dillinger were on North Seventh street, Henry Schurmmman at Seventh and Hamilton, and Newhard's hardware store on Hamilton between Seventh and Eighth. In 1848 the borough had five tailors, Charles Keck, Aaron Troxell, Charles Scholl, Edward Stettler, and Joseph Hartman; five shoemakers, Jeremiah Schmidt, George Lucas, Jonathan Reichard, James Roney, and a Mr. Rieser; two hatters, ber & Young, 1840-50; Wm. G. Ritter, (stoves and tinware), 1840-65; James Petit (cedar cooper) 1843; George Lucas (boots and shoes), 1843; Isare Erdman (furniture), 1843; William Bush, (stoves, etc.), 1850-70; Dr. W. F. Danosky (drugs), 1840-50; Klump & Weaver, (drugs), 1840-70; Saeger & Keck (store and mill), 1840-65; Henry Schnurman, from 1850; Mosser & Son (tanners), from 1850, and Grim and Reninger, begun in 1843, changed to Grim, Capt. Jacob D. Boas and James Gangewere; masons, Daniel Glace, Phillip Klee, and the Foelkers; bricklayers, Joseph Nonnemaker, Daniel Siegfried, and the Seips; carpenters, David Schwartz, John Diefenderfer, W. H. Seip, B. Balliet, and a Mr. Butz; tinsmiths, Amos Ettinger, James Bush, and a Mr. Hoffman; painter, James Sieger; cabinet maker, Moses Coolbaugh; chairmakers, Jacob Newhard and Reuben Reiss; cedar cooper, J. L. Cole; blacksmiths, Peter Heller, Charles Wagner, Samuel Beidelman, and Peter Newhard; coach makers, Keck & Stattler, Peter Lehr, William Fry, and Joseph Kramer; wagoner, William Wolf; daugerreotype taker, Benjamin Lochman; jewelers, Joseph Weiss, Charles S. Massey, and George Stein.

SOUTHEAST CORNER SEVENTH AND HAMILTON STREETS, 1862.

The transportation companies were Able, Wilson & Co., and Edelman, Bachman & Co. Large warehouses were situated on the Lehigh, to which the canal boats, loaded with merchandise, were poled across the river and unloaded. The newspapers were weeklies, semi-monthly or monthlies: Republikaner, Friedensbote, Lecha Patriot, Democrat, Register, and Jugend Freund. The daily papers principally read were the Philadelphia Public Ledger and North American and the New York Herald.

Industries.—In 1860 there were 57 manufactories in Allentown, viz:

Foundry and machine shops: Thayer, Erdman, Wilson & Co., and Barber, Sherer, & Co.

Agricultural Implement Manufacturers: Welcome B. Powell, Theo. S. Sweitzer, Brader & Young, Jesse Bitting, Thos. Newhard & E. P. Rhoads, Jonas W. Koch, and M. H. Beitler.

Iron Railing Manufacturer: Charles Denhard.

Planing Mill: Pretz, Gausler & Co.

Fire-brick Manufacturers: Ritter & McHose.

Paint Manufacturer: Breinig & Bro.

Carriage Manufacturers: Tilghman Stattler, P. H. Lehr, R. D. Kramer, Snyder & Hendricks, and Reuben Engelman.

Railroad Spike Manufacturer: Wilson & Co.

Axle Factory and Forge: Shimer, Kessler, & Co.

File Factory: Stalter, Gruelle & Co.

Piano Manufacturer: Simon Sweitzer.

Shoe Manufacturers: George Lucas & Son, and Young & Leh.

Woolen Manufacturer: Gabriel & Weil.

Coverlid Manufacturers: Chas. Wieand, W. F. Christman, and Wieand & Bro.

Stocking Manufacturers: Enoch Newhard and Philip Storch.

Last Manufacturers: F. S. Wilt and P. Baum.

Gun Factory: John and William H. Moll.

Saw Mill: Hoffman & Bro.

Grist Mills: Robert Dubs, Mickley, Weaver & Co., Pretz, Eckert & Co., Roth, Mickley & Co., Keck, Saeger & Co.

Distilleries: Thomas Yeager and Edmund Schreiber.

Breweries: Wm. Oberle, Kern & Meyer, Richard Deily, and Daniel Weiss.

Iron Furnaces: Allentown Iron Co.

Rolling Mill: Haywood & Co.

Eight brick yards.

Prominent Visitors.—In 1836 Allentown was visited by two prominent men—Governor Ritter, in September, and on October 3, Gen. William Henry Harrison, then a candidate for the Presidency. Gen. Harrison was met at Bethlehem by a committee of citizens from Allentown and the party proceeded in coaches, each drawn by four gray horses. Some distance east of the town the staff officers of the county militia, with the military companies and the Allentown Band met the General and party, and the procession proceeded to the hotel on the square, where an eloquent address was delivered by Charles Davis, Esq. A newspaper report says: "The General's reply was listened to with breathless attention. It was manly, energetic, and fluent. It was all his warmest friends could wish, and at once gave him rank with all who heard him as one of the most efficient speakers of the day. So many thronged to see him and offer congratulations of friendly and honest hearts that at least two hours were consumed before he was able to recommence his route."

On June 26, 1839, President Martin Van Buren visited Allentown. At a meeting of citizens held at the house of Samuel Gumpert on the day preceding, a committee was appointed to make arrangements for his reception. This committee made the following recommendations:

"That to-morrow morning, June 26, be ushered in by the firing of a national salute and the ringing of bells.

"That a committee of five persons be appointed to provide quarters for the President.

"That the said committee be requested to meet the President and his escort from Reading, at Trexlertown, and escort him thence into town to his quarters.

That the Allentown Band be requested to accompany the said committee.

"That all military parade be dispersed with.

"That the civil authorities and citizens be requested also to accompany the committee and join in the escort.

"That upon the arrival of the President upon the top of Griesemer's hill, minute guns be fired and bells rung until he arrives at his quarters.

"That the committee of escort be particularly requested to tender to the President the liberties of the borough, and such civilities as they may think necessary during his stay with us.

"That when the President takes his departure from us, he be accompanied by said committee, band, civil authorities and citizens, until met by a committee from Easton."

Messrs. Samuels and Bright, a sub-committee, reported that they had procured powder and made cartridges sufficient for a national salute; that Capt. Weiss, in the name of the Allentown Band, accepted an invitation to accompany the escort and expressed a willingness to contribute their services and that Mr. Rice had offered the use of a stage and horses for the conveyance of the band. Mr. Aug. P. Rhoads reported that he had prepared the cannon and procured cannoniers, and that all would be ready for service at any hour in the morning. Among the members of the committee, besides the above-mentioned, were Messrs. Bridges, Marx, and Morehead.

In the summer of 1848, Hon. William F. Johnson, candidate for governor, visited Allentown. A public meeting was held on the lawn of Mrs. Anne Penn Greenleaf's residence, which extended from the house at Fifth and Hamilton streets, to Walnut, and east to Penn street. A large audience gathered here and the future governor was introduced by James P. Reese, Esq. In 1851, Hon. William Bigler, candidate for governor, visited the town. A large escort met him at Ruch's hotel, in North Whitehall, and proceeded by way of Catasauqua, to Allentown, where the streets were lined with people. A public meeting was held on the square, when Mr. Bigler spoke in English and Mr. Grund, of Philadelphia, in German. Hon. James Buchanan spent a night at Allentown in 1856, before he was nominated for the Presidency, and was introduced to citizens, in the southeast room of the Allen House, by Hon. Samuel A. Bridges.

Reminiscences.—In the year 1840, a traveler, after crossing the old covered wooden bridge over the Lehigh river, would have noticed the following objects on a walk through the borough. On Hamilton street, north side, the stone house near the bridge and the tavern at Front and Hamilton, with the large warehouses on the inlet; the long stone bridge over the Jordan, which crossed the mill race at about Race street; the grist mill, south of the bridge; several brick yards in the meadows; the dissecting room of the Homeopathic College and the Greenleaf mansion, on the south side; several buildings on the north side and at the corner of Fifth, the home of Charles Davis, Esq., later Rev. Joshua Yeagers', and afterwards Samuel A. Bridges home. On Hamilton street, on the north side, were the Court House, Habrackers' hotel (later Kramer's and Bittenbender's, and afterwards the residence of Hon. Henry King and Hon. John D. Stiles); John S. Gibbon's residence; Jonathan Reichard's shoe shop; the American hotel (kept by Jacob Stem, earlier by Abraham Gangewere); several low frame buildings, between Sixth and Seventh; a large brick building on the corner of Church; Blumer's book store; Jameson's clothing store; Allen House (kept by Capt. Gumpert, earlier by George Savitz); the watch house; the market house; the store building at the northwest corner of Seventh; the Eagle hotel; Joseph Weiss' jewelry store; Newhard's hardware store; Hagenbuch's hotel, at Eighth and Hamilton, later the Cross Keep and the Rising Sun hotel at Tenth street. On the south side were the Dickenshied building, at the southeast corner of Law, still standing; Pretz, Saeger & Co.'s store at Sixth; Solomon Gangewere's frame building; the Reformed church; Capt. J. D. Boas' hat store; Thomas Ginkinger's coppersmith shop; Wilson's frame buildings, and stone store building at Seventh; Joshua Hains' stone building at the southwest corner, and a stone wall along Hamilton to Hall: Dr. Charles H. Martin's residence, on the southwest corner of Hall; Amos Ettinger's coppersmith shop; Catharine Graff's house; Benjamin Ludwig's, Jacob Huber's, Christian Beitel's, Rev. Zeller's, and Widow Stahl's residences.

On North Fifth street were the Presbyterian church, a school-house and the old jail, with a few dwellings. On North and South Sixth were quite a number of houses. On North Seventh street were the Northampton Bank; John F. Ruhe's store, later Charles A. Ruhe; Jacob Dillinger's residence; Stephen Rhoads' residence, a stone building, at the southeast corner of Linden; the Pennsylvania hotel; the Rhoad's residence (still standing); John Moll's residence and gunsmith shop; the Lafayette hotel, and other homes on the east side; John Eckert's residence; Michael Schneider's hotel; Jacob and John Mohr's residences; Samuel Horn's, Peter Lehr's and William Miller's residences on the west side.

On South Seventh street were Dr. Tilghman H. Martin's residence (where the Y. M. C. A. now stands); the Keiper and Michael D. Eberhard homes; Widow Hauck's store; William Eckert's and Spangenberg and Gangewere's stores; Kramer's and Bernard Reese's hotels; Andrew Klotz' and William Boas' stores.

On North Eighth street were a number of residences, on Ninth only a few and on Tenth there were none. On Lehigh street were the Jarret, Fetzer, Knappenberger, and Mertz homes, all stone, Totten's hotel and several log buildings. On Union street were Ginkinger's hotel, and the Getter, Strassburger, and Hartman homes, with a number of other buildings. On Walnut street, near Fourth, was the Livingston mansion, Major Fry's residence near Sixth, and near Eighth the home of Dr. John Frederick Ruhe. Other noteworthy buildings were the Academy, schoolhouse, and Lutheran church on South Eighth street; the Abraham Spinner home at Union and Jackson; the Gabriel woolen-mill, two grist-mills, a tan yard, the water-works and a brew house along the Little Lehigh; the Homeopathic College buildings on South Penn street; the Free Hall on Linden street; the Freeborn foundry, "Clover Nook," Robert E. Wright's residence and Daniel Freytag's, later the Elliger home, on North Fourth street, and the home of John S. Gibbons beyond, along the Jordan.

In 1828, Mrs. Anne Royall, a writer, of Washington, D. C., visited Allentown and in describing her trip from Mauch Chunk to Allentown wrote: "The land becomes richer and less uneven as we approach Allentown; the heights are covered with chestnut, and the valleys with large black walnut, large farms and fine orchards; the largest apple trees I ever saw; fine barns and houses, sleek cattle, few sheep and few horses in sight, but a number of fine hogs running at large in the woods. I found dinner on the table at the stage-house, set for an elderly, fine-looking, tall, slender man, a Lutheran priest, and his young, beautiful, and accomplished wife. Allentown is a very handsome town, near the Lehigh. It stands upon an elevated site, surrounded on all sides by a vale. This, again, is surrounded by mountains and hills, forming a romantic and picturesque appearance. It appears to be a flourishing town and does much business. It contains between 2,000 and 3,000 inhabitants and the houses on the principal streets are handsome, showy buildings. Mr. McFarlin, a lawyer, and Mr. Hecox, principal of an academy, called on me to pay their respects as well as to subscribe for my book. I called on Hon. Henry King, State Senator, a few minutes before my departure. Mr. King is an attorney and said to be a man of talent and extensive wealth. He is, however, very plain and simple in his manners, and equipage. He is a tall, slender made man, with a thin, oval face, and keen black eyes and black hair. Major Hutter, who had returned home the previous night, called to see me at the tavern, followed me to Mr. King's, and, without ceremony, introduced himself. This is what I like—plain honesty seeking to unite with its kindred feeling. The Major was a plain but warm-hearted man, who would go to all lengths for his friend. He had been taking a frolic, he said, the night before, upon the success of his efforts to elect General Jackson, he also being an editor. I had merely time to exchange a few words with these gentlemen, when the Easton stage arrived, in which I was to take my seat to Reading. Of all the pleasant travelling companions I ever travelled with, a gentleman who lived between Allentown and Reading was the most so. By degrees, he and I fell into conversation about the country, but his talent lay in wit, pleasant stories, and anecdotes. He was a well-bred, warm-hearted German, though he pronounced the English language with purity and ease. He related more humorous Irish bulls than I ever heard or read in my life; but finding, at length, that a silent fellow passenger was an Irishman, he turned in upon the Germans and gave them no quarter. He was the best mimic I ever heard and kept us in convulsions during his ride, but at length he arrived at his dwelling. The gentleman was called 'squire something, which name I am sorry I do not recollect. I dined at Kutztown. The road from Allentown to Reading passes over some of the finest farming land in Pennsylvania. It must be understood that from the care and skill of the Pennsylvania farmer the land is never suffered to lose in point of fertility. They have made farming a perfect science and pursue a regular routine in changing their crops from one thing to another, by which means land originally rich is still the same and produces as much as at first, and land originally poor has become fertilized. I have seen nothing in any of the Atlantic states, in the farming line, that has any resemblance to the farming in Pennsylvania. Father and son, grandfather and so on, have become rich on the same tract of land. I see nothing like poverty in the country, whatever there may be in the towns. The great, massy barns, with elegant sash and glass windows, their overgrown horses and cattle, their smooth ploughed furrows, their haystacks and snug, warm houses, with coffers full of specie, their thick, serviceable cloths, the ease and contentment, and, above all, that noble independence which marks their steady looks and movements, prove them to be a wealthy and happy people. Not a priest, or greycoat, I mean, ever gets a footing amongst them."

In the fall of 1823, the Democrats of Allentown held a celebration in honor of the election of Governor Schulze, at Abraham Gangewere's hotel, where is now the American. There was at that time in the borough, as common property, a small cannon, once the property of George III, King of England, which was called "Katzekop." The Democrats used this cannon at their celebration, firing it in the hotel yard, and the Federalist young men plotted how to secure it. Their opportunity came when the cannoniers went into the hotel to assuage their thirst; and, after creating a diversion among the crowd of boys, the night being dark, in the confusion the cannon was passed through the fence to waiting comrades and taken up Court street to John Keiper's stable, near Hagenbuch's hotel. Among these young men were Tobias Grob, Jacob Hegenbuch, William and Daniel Keiper, John Mohr, Benjamin Ludwig, John Gutekunst, George Spinner and Martin Schwenk. A few days later it was thrown in an outhouse at Hagenbuch's hotel. Here it lay buried for 45 years, when it was found during the digging of a cellar. It was subsequently used in celebrations, in one of which it is said to have exploded. The cannon had been brought to Bethlehem at the time of the French and Indian war, but later taken by a Mr. Frey to a July 4th celebration at Rittersville, and afterward to Allentown.

On Aug. 3, 1840, the Allentown Whigs, with a band, attended the Harrison convention at Easton, at which John F. Ruhe, Jr., and Wm. W. Selfridge, of Lehigh county, were vice presidents.

Among the interesting events occurring in this period were the visit of "General Tom Thumb," who appeared in the court house, in 1849; an entertainment by Indians in Odd Fellows' Hall; the first fair, in 1852, and the first train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad in 1856. It was made up of flat cars, fitted with seats, and citizens were given a free ride to Hokendauqua and return. In the exciting scramble for seats, Dorsey, the fifteen-year-old son of Dr. Charles H. Martin, was overcome, and died. Other recollections are of "Jim" Groves, the negro, well-known and liked by all; Josey Pierce, the negro barber; the large, round stone, still to be seen at the Lafayette hotel (said by some to have been a meteorite); the old house of Samuel Moyer on Sixth street, built of the logs of the old union church; the rescue of a boy from a canal boat by William Roth, in the flood of '62; the Bull's Head hotel, at Fifth and Linden; the burning of Leh's hotel, at Seventh and Linden; the first telegraph line in 1850; the tall poplar trees on South Seventh street; and the excursions to Helfrich's and Woman's Springs, to the Jordan, to the Island, to Turnhole mountain and to Bauer's or Big Rock.

The Allentown Democrat, speaking of the many improvements, said in 1859:

"There have been so many changes, physically and socially, in Allentown, as a town, within a few years past, that a former resident, who returns to it after a short absence, can scarcely recognize the place or its people. Quite recently one of this class remarked to us: 'I came here to spend some time amid the scenery and acquaintances of former days, but I am hardly able to discover a vestige of that scenery, or to find an acquaintance once in an hour. Everything has changed.' And that man had been absent but about seven years. By the census of 1850, the population of Allentown was 3,780, showing an increase during the previous ten years of 1,291. Now our population is estimated at 10,000, and the original borough plat has increased in area east and west, at least a quarter of a mile. The face of the original borough plat has been improved too, so that our whilom resident might well say, 'everything has changed.' In building operations we have progressed remarkably—in 1855, 108 buildings were erected; in 1856, 138; in 1857, 169; in 1858, 52, making a total of 467 buildings in four years. Handsome three and four-story brick and iron front edifices cover the site of many an old weather-board shell of his day: stores of a hundred feet in depth have succeeded the pent-up dingy shops his eyes were accustomed to look upon; and the din of busy life prevails everywhere in lieu of the sweet calm then so grateful to him in taking his after-dinner nap. If he should go to where he considered himself 'in the country,' planing mills, grist-mills, saw-mills, machine shops, foundries and furnaces, depots, with long trains of cars stretching either way, and dwellings innumerable would greet his eyes, and the noise of railway trains astir his ears. At the dawn of the year 1855, Allentown had no railroad outlet, now it has two—the Lehigh Valley Railroad connecting us with the principle emporiums of the Union, while the East Pennsylvania road links us with the far West and South by the shortest route in existence. Besides these, we have the Allentown and Auburn road in process of construction. Stage-coaches are almost among the things past—a few months more will put them entirely so. Instead of consuming twelve and fifteen hours in travelling to Philadelphia, we now go there, spend about three hours, and return to our homes, all between the rising and setting of the sun.

"We might note many other changes physically, but space forbids. The changes socially during this time were none the less striking. But notwithstanding all the differences betwixt then and now, the work of change has only fairly commenced, it is progressing at present as fast as ever. In spite of the financial depression that raged over the country of late, between 75 and 100 buildings will be completed during the summer, new residents are added constantly to the population, new branches of trade are opening, and former ones enlarging."

CHAPTER XXI.

ALLENTOWN AS A CITY. 1867-1914.

Development Since 1867.—Allentown was incorporated as a city by act of the Pennsylvania Legislature passed March 12, 1867. The First ward was divided into the First and the Sixth wards, thus making six wards in the city. The western limits were extended two squares west of Tenth street, and an addition of thirty-three perches was made on the north, between the extended Ninth and Eleventh streets. An addition of 1,046 feet, between Eighth and Ninth streets, on the north, was made on June 10, 1868. On June 10, 1870, the boundary lines were extended west from Twelfth to Seventeenth street, south to the Little Lehigh river, north to Sumner avenue and east to the Lehigh river. The city then had an area of 3.14 square miles, or 2,011.27 acres.

On June 3, 1901, a tract of seventy acres, west of Seventeenth street, between Chew, Lafayette, Linden, Nineteenth and Walnut streets, was annexed. On March 22, 1904, an annexation of 152.9 acres was made, bounded on the south by Linden street, on the west by Twenty-fifth street, on the north by Early street and on the east by Lafayette and Nineteenth streets. A further addition of 24.07 acres, bounded by Seventeenth, St. George, Fairview and Walnut streets, was made March 23, 1906. On Jan. 16, 1907, 182 acres south of the Little Lehigh, a part of South Allentown were annexed. On June 4, 1907, 113.08 acres, bounded by Chew, Seventeenth, Page and Leh streets, and Albright avenue, including the Fair Grounds, were annexed. On March 24, 1908, 363 acres, south of the Little Lehigh creek from its junction with the Jordan creek to Jefferson street extended, were annexed. On August 14, 1908, 239 acres in the northwestern section, bounded by Seventeenth and Page streets, Sumner and Albright avenues and the Walbert's State road, were annexed. On Dec. 1, 1911, 660 acres, east of the Lehigh river, in Hanover township, now the Fourteenth ward, were annexed. In 1914, the total area of the city of Allentown amounted to 3,815.32 acres.

On Monday, Dec. 1, 1913, the form of city government was changed by legislative enactment and a select council of fourteen and a common council of twenty-eight members retired from office. A council of five members, including the mayor, who became Superintendent of Public Affairs, became the governing power of the city. The four new members of the council, Calvin E. Arner, Col. Samuel D. Lehr, Capt. Charles D. Spangler and Robert J. Wheeler, were elected Nov. 4, 1913. Mr. Arner became Superintendent of Accounts and Finances; Col. Lehr, Superintendent of the Department of Streets and Public Improvements; Capt. Spangler, Superintendent of Public Safety, and Mr. Wheeler, Superintendent of the Department of Parks and Public Property.

The assessed valuation of the real estate of the city in 1914, was as follows:

First Ward,	$2,764,785
Second Ward,	4,234,950
Third Ward,	4,147,070
Fourth Ward,	4,201,225
Fifth Ward,	3,989,650
Sixth Ward,	1,595,142
Seventh Ward,	2,922,300
Eighth Ward,	4,710,198
Ninth Ward,	2,479,370
Tenth Ward,	3,514,845
Eleventh Ward,	5,932,203
Twelfth Ward,	1,337,753
Thirteenth Ward,	3,441,245
Fourteenth Ward,	1,143,876
Total,	$46,414,612

The property exempt from taxation by law was valued in 1914, as follows:

First Ward,	$ 571,850
Second Ward,	465,000
Third Ward,	371,200
Fourth Ward,	191,000
Fifth Ward,	442,000
Sixth Ward,	241,200
Seventh Ward,	267,500
Eighth Ward,	307,800
Ninth Ward,	711,700
Tenth Ward,	209,800
Eleventh Ward,	1,080,000
Twelfth Ward,	146,780
Thirteenth Ward,	183,000
Fourteenth Ward,	33,200

The total of exempt properties was $5,309,130, making the total real estate valuation of the city, on Jan. 1, 1914, $51,972,998. The total poll tax was $15,658. The number of horses in the city was 1,618; cows, 97. In 1914, the city tax rate was 6.4 mills; the school tax rate, 6.5 mills, and the county tax rate, 3 mills, or $6.40, $6.50 and $3.00 per thousand dollars valuation respectively. The water rent of the average family amounts to $3.75.

Manufactories.—The number of wage earners in the city according to the last reports was 11,481; value of products, $26,263,327; number of establishments, 274; capital invested, $21,369,000; wages paid, $5,061,000; cost of materials, $15,581,000. The city has twenty silk mills, ten shoe factories, a large wire and nail works, seven furniture factories, four boiler works, twenty-three foundry and machine shops, a large automobile truck plant, forty-seven cigar factories, five clothing factories, eight hosiery and knit goods mills, ten planing mills, six brick and tile works, twenty-eight printing houses, thirty-two bakeries, glass works, brass foundries, paint and fertilizer factory, meat packing plant, cigar and paper box factories, and many other manufacturing establishments.

The city ranks second in the state in production of textile fabrics and ninth in the value of products. The textile industries, including dyeing and finishing, had a combined output value of $9,838,000 or 37.5 per cent. of all the industries in the city in 1909. The leading branch of this industry is the manufacture of silk and silk goods, the production of which amounted to $7,456,000 in 1909.

The production of the metal working industries was valued at nearly $7,000,000; of boots and shoes, $1,302,000, and of tobacco, $1,446,000.

CITY OFFICIALS

MAYORS

1867-1869.	Samuel McHose
1869-1873.	Tilghman H. Good
1873-1874.	Theodore C. Yeager ¹
1874-1876.	Tilghman H. Good
1876-1878.	Edward B. Young
1878-1880.	Alfred J. Martin
1880-1884.	Edwin G. Martin
1884-1886.	Edward S. Shimer
1886-1888.	Werner K. Ruhe
1888-1890.	Henry W. Allison
1890-1893.	Samuel D. Lehr
1893-1896.	Henry W. Allison
1896-1899.	Fred E. Lewis
1899-1902.	James L. Schaadt
1902-1905.	Fred E. Lewis
1905-1907.	Alfred J. Yost ²
1907-1908.	Charles D. Schaeffer
Feb.-Nov., 1908.	Harry G. Stiles ³

1. Dr. Yeager died in office, Jan. 14, 1874, and Herman Schmon, president of Select Council, by virtue of his office, became mayor, and served until February, 1874.

2. Dr. Yost died in office, April 16, 1907, and Dr. Schaeffer was elected Mayor by City Councils.

3. Mayor Stiles died in office Nov. 8, 1908, and Dr. H. H. Herbst was elected Mayor by City Councils.

Nov., 1908-Feb., 1909. Herbert H. Herbst
1909-1911. Charles O. Hunsicker
Dec. 4, 1911.— Charles W. Rinn

CONTROLLERS

1875-1877.	Reuben S. Shimer
1877-1879.	Charles Banks
1879-1881.	Charles K. Heist
1881-1889.	Walter C. Smith
1889-	James Hausman.

TREASURERS

1867-1874.	Jonathan Reichard
1874-1877.	Jacob A. Blumer
1877-1884.	John Koch
1884-1886.	Lewis E. Butz
1886-1890.	Joseph F. Newhard
1890-1892.	George W. Seagraves
1892-	Alfred L. Reichenbach

CITY SOLICITORS

1868-1870.	F. A. R. Baldwin
1870-1871.	John H. Oliver
1871-1873.	Charles M. Runk
1873-1875.	George W. Wilson
1875-1877.	Thomas B. Metzgar
1877-1879.	Marcus C. L. Kline
1879-1883.	John M. Kessler
1883-1885.	Alex. P. Crilly
1885-1891.	Frank M. Trexler
1891-1893.	John Rupp
1893-1898.	Frank M. Trexler
1898-1900.	William H. Sowden
1900-1902.	John L. Schwartz
1902-1905.	Francis G. Lewis
1905-1910.	Leo Wise
1910-	Malcolm W. Gross

CITY ENGINEERS

1867.	Peter Weida
1867-1869.	Aschbach and Hauman
1869-1889.	Samuel D. Lehr
1889-1891.	Lewis S. Jacoby
1891-1893.	Lewis J. H. Grossart
1893-1896.	Robert S. Rathbun
1896-1903.	J. Howard Martz
1903-1906.	Harry F. Bascom
1906-	Charles D. Weirbach

HIGH CONSTABLES

1867-1869.	Jacob M. Ruhe
1869-1871.	Emanuel Hafford
1871-1874.	Henry T. Kleckner
1874-1875.	Wm. H. Hilliard
1875.	Daniel S. Gift

CHIEFS OF POLICE

1875-1878.	Daniel S. Gift
1878-1884.	Tilghman Good
1884-1886.	Preston J. Baker
1886-1888.	James W. Crader
1888-1890.	Mahlon H. Bieber
1890-1893.	Daniel S. Gift
1893-1896.	Wm. D. Mickleby
1896-1899.	Patrick Herrity
1899-1902.	Patrick F. McGee
1902-1905.	H. H. Eastman
1905.	Geo. L. Smith
1905-1906.	Wm. F. Bower
1907-1908.	Milton B. Schadt
1908-1909.	Herman Benning
1909-1911.	Chas. D. Rhoads
1911-	M. H. Bernhard

CHIEFS OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

1870-1873. Simon P. Snyder
 1873-1875. Werner K. Ruhe
 1875-1878. Jacob S. Reninger
 1878-1887. John P. Dillingier
 1887-1888. Bigler Huffort
 1888-1890. Hafiz B. Cleavelend
 1890-1893. George J. Klein
 1893-1896. Charles H. Cohn
 1896-1899. Charles D. Grim
 1899-1902. John V. Huffort
 1902-1905. Charles H. Cohn
 1905-1908. James E. Gallagher
 1908. John V. Huffort
 1909-1911. Charles H. Cohn
 1911- . Wm. R. Kransley

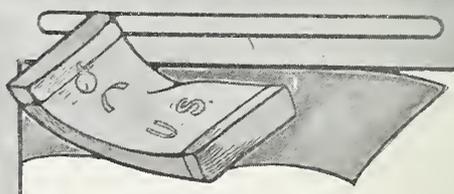

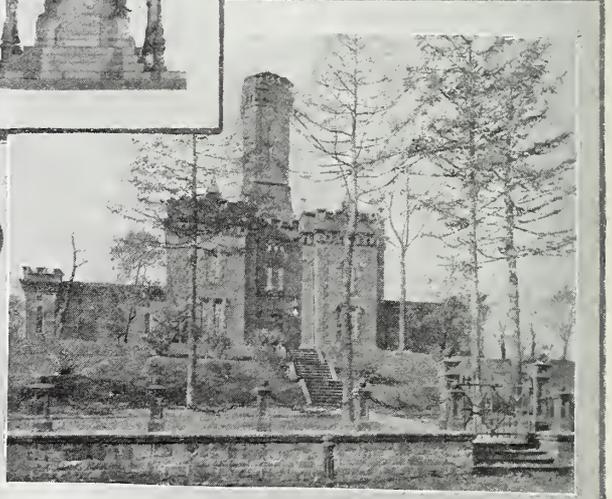

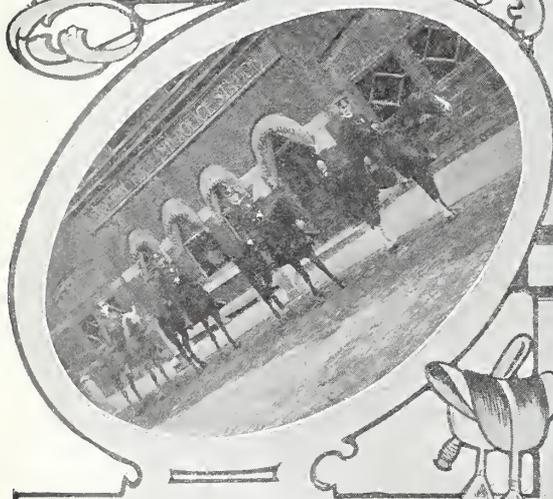

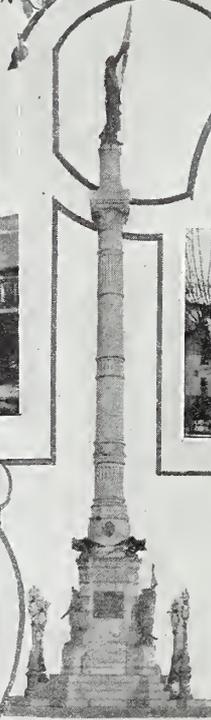

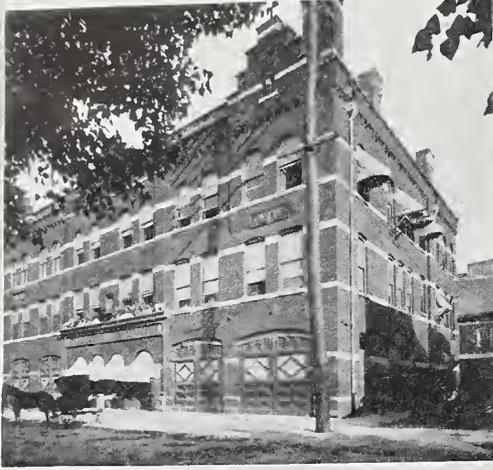

ALDERMEN

1867	Joshua Stahler	1897	George Fry
	Edward Beck		Allen W. Haines
	John Hawkins		J. Fred Kutz
1869	Elias Mertz		Patrick McCloskey
	Tilghman Good		George H. Hardner
1870	Henry T. Kleckner	1899	Robert L. Schiffert
1872	Joshua Stahler		Alexander Fatzinger
	Francis Z. Heebner	1900	Walter L. Jones
	Patrick McCloskey		Peter H. Steltz
1874	Tobias Kessler	1901	Theodore H. Scholl
1875	Walter L. Jones		F. T. L. Keiter
1876	Henry T. Kleckner	1902	George Fry
	Elias Mertz		Edward A. Mertz
	John H. Hull		Edward F. Ochs
1877	James Hausman		Patrick McCloskey
	John W. Sepp		Edward F. Berke-
	Philip K. Hartzell		meyer
	Patrick McCloskey	1904	Robert L. Schiffert
1879	U. S. Litzenberg		George W. Hartzel
1880	Walter L. Jones	1905	Walter L. Jones
1881	Henry T. Kleckner		Jacob L. Reninger
	Edmund R. Newhard		Peter H. Steltz
1882	George Fry	1906	Theodore H. Scholl
	John W. Sepp		F. T. L. Keiter
	Patrick McCloskey	1907	William F. Bower
	Henry C. Huber		Joseph C. Slough
1883	Emerson H. Shock		Patrick McCloskey
1884	Joseph Young		Edward F. Berke-
	Isaac A. Kase		meyer
1885	Walter L. Jones	1909	Robert L. Schiffert
1886	Henry T. Kleckner		Harvey M. Heil-
1887	George Fry		man
	John W. Sepp	1910	Walter L. Jones
	Patrick McCloskey		Jacob S. Reninger
1888	Wilson P. Riedy		Eugene Mackes
1890	Walter L. Jones		M. Herbert Beary
	F. T. L. Keiter	1911	Theodore H. Scholl
1891	Walter O. Butz		F. T. L. Keiter
	Nathan E. Worman		Thomas McFadden
	Tobias Kessler		Elwood L. New-
1892	George Fry		hard
	John W. Sepp		Charles D. Schall
	Patrick McCloskey	1913	William F. Bower
	George H. Hardner		Guy R. Jones
1894	William Duth		Joseph C. Slough
	Alexander Fatzinger		William A. Gott-
1895	Walter L. Jones		hardt
1896	Edgar J. Lumley		John H. Bernecker
	F. T. L. Keiter		Charles F. Deily

Post Office.—A post office was first established in Allentown on January 1, 1803, when George Savitz, proprietor of the Compass and Square, a hotel which occupied the site of the Hotel Allen, was appointed the first postmaster. Prior to that time the residents of the town received their letters at Bethlehem or by the courtesy of friends. Mr. Savitz conducted the business of the office at his tavern for five years, until April, 1808, when his son-in-law, Dr. Jacob Martin, was appointed. The office was removed to his residence, on the site of the Y. M. C. A. building, and Dr. Martin filled the office for six years. On May 4, 1814, Charles L. Hutter, the editor of the Republikaner, was appointed postmaster and moved the office to a one-story frame building east of Zion Reformed church. On Nov. 22, 1820, George Hanke succeeded him, but the office remained at the same place. Mr. Hanke died Jan. 27, 1824, and on Feb. 10, 1824, Henry Weaver became postmaster and the office was located in a two-story stone building at Law and Hamilton streets. Edwin A. Hutter, the publisher, was appointed to the office on Jan. 1, 1833, and the business was again conducted in the frame building in which it was located while his father held the office. Robert E. Wright, Sr., was appointed postmaster on July 13, 1836, and the office was removed to a frame building on the site of the Lehigh Valley Trust Company. On June 9, 1841, Augustus L. Ruhe received the appointment of postmaster and the office was located at the southwest corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets. Robert E. Wright, Sr., was appointed to his second term, Sept. 24, 1844, and located the office in a one-story building east of what is now the Hotel Allen. He held the position only one year, when Edmund R. Newhard, who was appointed Nov. 17, 1845, succeeded him and moved the office to a building on the north side of Hamilton street, near Eighth. The office was burned out in the fire of 1848 and was then removed to a building on South Centre Square, on the site of the Chronicle and News building.

Mrs. Maria E. Hornbeck, widow of Congressman Hornbeck, was appointed Feb. 26, 1849, and held the position eight years, in which time the office was located in a building at 604 Hamilton street, and in the old building still standing on the southeast corner of Law and Hamilton streets. The late Wm. H. Newhard was her assistant. Reuben Guth, publisher of the Lecha Patriot, became postmaster in 1857 and the office was established in a building at 8 South Centre Square. Mr. Guth's daughter, Mrs. T. W. Kramer, was his assistant. His successor was Tilghman Good, appointed March Public Buildings.—The principal public buildings in the city are the Court House, Post Office building, municipal buildings and the library building.

Central Fire and Police Station Mounted Police
Post Office Building

Court House
Soldiers' Monument
County Jail

6, 1862, the first Presidential appointee, at which time the office was located at the southwest corner of Hall and Hamilton streets. Mr. Good served seven years and during the latter part of his administration the office was removed farther east on Hamilton street, to where Sieger's saddlery store is located. David K. Diefenderfer, appointed April 1, 1869, continued the office at the same place and upon the appointment of Robert Iredell, Jr., on Jan. 8, 1877, the office was removed to the building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets. During his incumbency the office was located at 716 Hamilton street for four years, the period of its lease by the government and later removed to the Stiles building, at 529 Hamilton street.

George T. Gross was appointed April 23, 1885, and during his term, in 1889, the office was removed to the Paxson building, at 459 Hamilton street, where it remained for eighteen years, until the erection of a federal building. Mr. Gross served until Feb. 12, 1890, when John Stopp was appointed. He was succeeded by Allen T. Frederick, appointed May 4, 1894, and Milton P. Schantz, appointed March 23, 1898, became Mr. Frederick's successor. Mr. Schantz was appointed to his second term on March 26, 1902, and on March 25, 1906, was appointed the third time, serving twelve years as postmaster. Dr. Charles S. Martin, appointed March 30, 1910, took charge of the office May 2, 1910, but served only a few days, as he died suddenly on May 4, 1910. J. Herbert Kohler was then appointed postmaster and took charge of the office July 1, 1910. On May 27, 1914, Martin Klingler was appointed postmaster by President Wilson.

On Feb. 1, 1907, the new post office building at Sixth and Turner streets was opened for business, the office having been removed after the close of business at 8 p. m. on the previous evening. The first move for a public building in Allentown was made by Congressman William H. Sowden, in February, 1888, when a bill providing for a post office building at Allentown passed both houses of Congress, but was vetoed by President Cleveland. Ten years later, a committee of sixteen men, selected by a public meeting of citizens, visited Washington and urged the advisability of the erection of a public building in Allentown at a meeting of the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. The omnibus bill for public buildings, including one for Allentown, was passed June 2, 1902, and approved by President Roosevelt. The amount appropriated was $100,000, which was increased on March 3, 1903, to $110,000, and on June 30, 1906, through the efforts of Congressman Kline, an additional $5,000 was secured, making the total amount granted $115,000. The amount paid for the lot, 112 by 150 feet, was $21,500. Work on the building was begun Sept. 25, 1905. George B. Page, of Philadelphia, was the architect, and Messrs. Fissel and Wagner, of New York city, the contractors. Joseph Chamberlain had the work of erection in charge. The building, 110 by 65 feet, is constructed of Indiana limestone, terra cotta and brick. The main entrance is on Turner street, from a platform 55 feet in length, the top of which is supported by six massive Ionic columns, 3 feet six inches in diameter at the base and tapering. These columns are surmounted by Corinthian capitals, and support a ledge of limestone bearing the inscription, "United States Post Office." Directly over this, in the cornice, is the figure of an eagle, wings spread, in terra cotta. The main lobby is 65 feet long and 13 feet wide, wainscoted in King of Prussia marble, with a terrazzo floor. The main work room is 35 by 70 feet, lighted by side windows and an open skylight. There are also the money order and registry room, and the offices of the postmaster and assistant postmaster, a total of 6,350 square feet of working space.

As early as 1850, a resident of the borough, Elias Shafer, was employed to carry letters to the inhabitants, but free delivery was not established until Oct. 1, 1882, with six letter carriers. The present force consists of twenty-three clerks, thirty-four carriers, four substitute carriers, six rural carriers, two special delivery messengers and two building employees. The assistant postmaster, Arthur J. Nagle, was appointed Jan. 1, 1905. Former assistant postmasters were C. W. Dech, F. T. Good, F. K. Hartzell, A. T. Frederick, Wm. H. Albright and Morris F. Becker.

Public Library.—The Allentown Free Library, at 914 Hamilton street, was opened to the public on Monday, Nov. 25, 1912. The library, in 1914, numbers 6,400 volumes, and the librarian is Miss Sarah V. Lewis, who assumed charge on Sept. 1, 1912.

A movement for a library in Allentown was started as early as 1810, when the following notice appeared in the Republikaner: "Members of the Allentown English Circulating Library are to meet at the house of Col. George Rhoads on Saturday, December 22d, at seven o'clock, to elect officers and form a constitution." The library was subsequently called, "The Library Company of the Borough of Northampton," and in 1818, Jacob Blumer was the secretary, while the following year that office was held by Charles Davis, Esq.

A book owned by the writer, the editor-in-chief, contains a printed label, which reads: "No. 59. Loaned to the Library Company of the Borough of Northampton by John Wilson." The book was purchased in Allentown, Dec. 20, 1812.

How long this library existed is uncertain, but it apparently went out of existence and the books were scattered among the members. The Fratres Literarium, or Brothers of Literature, a literary society, was organized by Prof. Robert C. Chandler, of the Allentown Academy, about 1848, which was in charge of a library of well selected books that had been gathered together at the academy, where a library was established in 1817, the use of which was offered to the community. The society was granted a charter in 1866. In 1869, after the academy had ended its career as a school, the library was located over Schreiber Brothers' store, at 10 East Hamilton street, where the Academy of Natural Science, Art and Literature was without a home, and the library and museum were placed in the keeping of the Odd Fellows, who, as trustee of the library, maintained a circulating library. Unfortunately, the library was totally destroyed in the burning of the Breinig & Bachman building in 1892.

The Women's League held a "Kirmess" in Lehigh Valley hall in 1890, to raise funds for a public library and a total of $1,200 was realized. The name was changed to the Women's Literary Club, and in 1891, the library was moved to the rooms of the Allentown Oratorio Society, on South Seventh street, where it remained for twenty years. Books were issued to members of the society and to persons paying a fee of three dollars per year.

In 1907, the M. U. M. Circle of Hess Broth-

VIEW ON NORTH SEVENTH STREET FROM CENTER SQUARE, 1876.

it remained some time, with Tobias Kessler as librarian. Later, the Academy of Natural Science, Art and Literature was established in the old academy building, with Fritz Warner, a local taxidermist, in charge of the museum. Eli J. Saeger was its president and the books of the defunct literary society became its property. The ladies of the city, of whom Mrs. Samuel B. Lewis was the leading spirit, gave a game supper and old folks' tea party on Dec. 31, 1874, for the benefit of the library, which was a great success. The game, venison and bear meat, and prairie chickens, was furnished by Mr. Warner, on a hunting trip in the West. The ladies wore costumes of the colonial period and there was dancing in the evening to the music of the Eureka orchestra.

When the academy building was sold, in 1881, ers' store, headed by Mrs. Blanche Phifer Trevena, raised $1,056 for the library fund by an automobile contest. A roll of honor was started, by which $3,170 was secured, and with the addition of other subscriptions, a total sum of $14,575, was realized. The property at 914 Hamilton street was purchased for $15,000, on which $5,000 was paid and a mortgage of $10,000 given for the balance. Alterations and additions to the building brought the cost to $14,575. The sum of $12,000 was contributed by the citizens of the city and the mortgage paid. The total cost of the building, ground, improvements, etc., was $25,887.04. The library is open to the public from 11:30 a. m. to 9 p. m., week-days, except holidays. Two handsome paintings, presented to the city by the artist, Peter Gross, of Paris, a native of Lehigh county, "The Village of Montmorency," by Mr. Gross, and "The Port of Marseilles," by J. M. Grimelund, have been placed on the walls of the building. The officers of the library are: President, George T. Ettinger, Ph.D.; vice-president, Mrs. Samuel B. Lewis; treasurer, Max Hess; secretary, David A. Miller; financial secretary, Miss Beulah Phifer; directors: Mrs. L. L. Anewalt, E. J. Lumley, H. E. Bohner, F. D. Beary, Dr. R. C. Peters, J. M. Wuchter, and Rev. E. O. Leopold.

Soldiers' Monument.—The soldiers' and sailors' monument, which occupies the center of Centre Square, was unveiled and dedicated on Oct. 19, 1899, on which occasion Governor William A. Stone was present and spoke, and Hon. George F. Baer was the orator of the day. The shaft is of Barre, Vermont, granite, with copper and bronze ornamentations. The contract was awarded Nov. 26, 1898, to the Pennsylvania Monument Association for $39,000, but with the cost of the foundations and additional bronzes, the total cost was $43,000. The cornerstone was laid by the G. A. R. on June 26 1899. It is 35 feet square at the base and 97 feet in height. A bronze figure of the Goddess of Liberty, 13 feet high, surmounts the shaft. An enormous crowd witnessed the ceremonies at the dedication, which was attended also by 1,020 school children, who, at the moment of unveiling, sang the "Star Spangled Banner," and every child waved an American flag.

Street Railways.—The street railway in Lehigh county had its origin in an Act of the Legislature, passed March 21, 1865, which authorized a company to construct and operate a line from a point on Hamilton street, near its western end, to the L. V. R. R. depot, with right to operate extensions to Catasauqua and the Allentown Iron Works. Another act was passed March 4, 1868, work was commenced soon afterward, and the first street car, drawn by horses was run May 21, 1868. The incorporators were:

John Y. Bechtel	Samuel McHose
H. C. Longnecker	David Thomas
John Smylie	Samuel A. Bridges
John D. Stiles	John H. Oliver
Samuel Lewis	James W. Fuller
William S. Marx	Peter Weikel
William H. Blumer	William H. Hoffman
Jesse M. Line	Joseph F. Newhard
Christian Pretz	Tilghman W. Kramer
Algernon Roberts	Alfred J. Martin

Samuel Lewis was selected as the first president and he served for upwards of twenty years. The company was capitalized at $150,000; $45,000 was expended for construction and equipment, and it started with eight cars, two omnibuses, and 26 horses. The car barn was at the rear of the Black Bear Hotel, between Eighth and Ninth streets (now Hess Brothers). A "loop" was extended out Seventh to Gordon, to Tenth, to Hamilton.

Electric Railways.—On Oct. 29, 1889, a charter was issued to the Bethlehem and Allentown Street Railway Company, and on November 18th, to the Bethlehem and South Bethlehem Street Railway Company, both to be operated by electricity. On May 29, 1891, the Allentown and Bethlehem Rapid Transit Company was then organized and chartered, and leased the other constructed railways for 999 years. A powerhouse was established in the First ward. Cars were purchased with the necessary electrical equipment, and the three roads were operated with electricity from July 1, 1891, reaching to Catasauqua, Bethlehem and South Bethlehem, and in 1892 the Catasauqua and Northern Street Railway Company was chartered to reach Northampton, Siegfried, Hokendauqua, Coplay and other points.

In January, 1893, Albert L. Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, and John K. Page, of New York city, came here and promoted another system, securing a charter for the Lehigh Valley Traction Company, and also the Allentown and Lehigh Valley Traction Company, built a power plant, and equipped its lines with electricity, and began to operate cars on Oct. 15, 1893. Then they purchased the A. & B. Rapid Transit Company and operated the two systems under one management, with Mr. Johnson as president, beginning April 1, 1894.

The roads were extended to Siegfried and Coplay, and all the lines operated together until Jan. 1, 1895, when all were transferred to A. and L. V. T. Company. In 1897, the system was extended to Hellertown, and in 1898 to Emaus. In 1898, the system operated 90 cars, with 65 equipments, and 48 miles of single track, included the Central Park and Manhattan Park at Rittersville, and employed 200 men on the cars and in the shops.

On December 1, 1899, all the properties heretofore built and operated under the Allentown system were merged into what was afterwards known as the "Lehigh Valley Traction Co." In February, 1900, the Bethlehem & Nazareth Passenger Railway Co., from Bethlehem to Nazareth, was leased for 999 years; and in December, the Allentown & Slatington Street Railway Co. was leased, and also the properties constituting the Easton Consolidated Electric Company, and the Slate Belt Electric Street Railway Company.

During 1901, the Philadelphia & Lehigh Valley Traction Company was organized by merger of the Inland Traction Company and the Allentown & Coopersburg Street Railway Company, and in the Fall of that year, it was leased to the Lehigh Valley Traction Co. At approximately the same time, the Quakertown Traction Co. was acquired by the Philadelphia & Lehigh Valley Traction Company and remained a part of its main line from Allentown to Chestnut Hill. By reason of unfortunate occurrences in 1902, such as fires at the power station, car barn and repair shop, floods, etc., the company met with financial reverses, and in May, 1903, was forced into the hands of Receivers (Robert E. Wright, C. M. Bates and George W. Norris). It was operated several years by the receivers, who reorganized the entire system and the resultant Company was the present Lehigh Valley Transit Co. In the process of reorganization, the leases of the Easton Consolidated Electric Co. and the Slate Belt Electric Street Railway Company were cancelled, and those properties returned to their respective stockholders for operation.

The Transit Company, after its organization, effected a thorough rehabilitation, and established a thoroughly up-to-date power station in the First ward of Allentown, with various sub-stations along its several lines. In October, 1911, the company acquired the property of the Montgomery Traction Co., extending from Lansdale to Norristown, and practically relocated and rebuilt the entire line.

In March, 1914, the Transit Company operated 155 miles of track and 170 passenger cars; and it employed about 800 persons, one-third of them being trainmen.

Management.—The following constitute the Board of Directors for 1914:

Charles H. Bean	Charles M. Schwab
John C. Dawson	Edward B. Smith
Harrison R. Fehr	Warren A. Wilbur
George H. Frazier	Harry C. Trexler
Charles E. Ingersoll	E. M. Young

The following officers are residents of Allentown: Harry C. Trexler, Chairman of Board; Harrison R. Fehr, president; Edward M. Young, vice-president; Charles N. Wagner, secretary-treasurer; Charles M. Walter, auditor.

Messrs. Trexler, Young and Wagner have filled their respective positions since 1905, and Mr. Walter has been connected with the local street railway system for nearly twenty years.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

The first public action at Allentown in behalf of establishing protection against fire was an ordinance passed by the town council on July 15, 1811, in which the street commissioners were directed to provide three fire ladders for the borough, one to be at least 35 feet long, one 30 feet, and the other 20 feet. The next action was taken on Jan. 2, 1816, which prohibited the misuse of the fire ladders, hooks and other property of the borough.

The first company, the Friendship Fire Company, was organized Nov. 2, 1818, at George Savitz' tavern. Charles L. Hutter was the secretary.

The first fire engine with buckets, which cost $524, was supplied in 1820 by the county commissioners.

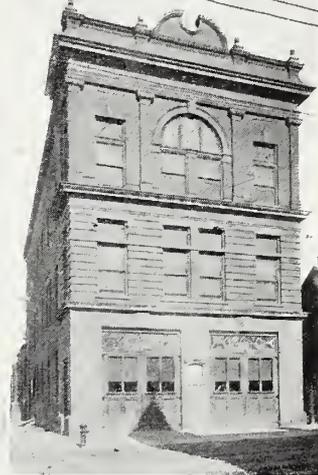

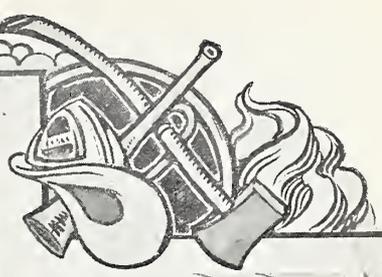

Mention was made in 1830 of the Lehigh Hose Company, when a hose carriage was supplied for this company. It was afterward also supplied with a fire engine.

In 1836, the town council passed an ordinance which required "that a joint committee, to consist of one member of the Lehigh Fire Company, one of the Hose Company, and one of the Friendship Fire Company, be appointed to procure, on the credit of the borough, 400 feet of hose, 4 axes (two for each engine company), and one goose-neck for the Lehigh Fire Company, and to have repaired the engine house of the Friendship Fire Company." This committee consisted of George Keck, of the Lehigh Company, William Boas, of the Friendship Company, and Joseph Weiss, of the Hose Company.

In 1837, a new fire engine was provided by council for the Friendship Company, towards which the county commissioners appropriated $100. R. F. Smith was its secretary. About this time, the Humane Fire Company was organized, the officers being Joseph F. Newhard, president, and Augustus P. Rhoads, secretary.

In 1840, the officers of the Lehigh Company were Eli J. Saeger, president; Benjamin Hagenbuch, vice-president; Ephraim Grim, secretary, and Charles L. Geidner, treasurer.

The first firemen's parade at Allentown was held on Saturday, August 26, 1843, of which the Lehigh Bulletin, published by John Royer, and the first issue of the Democrat, both dated August 30, 1843, have full accounts. The day was clear and warm and the companies turned out strong. Major Reuben Strauss acted as chief marshal. The Lehigh Hose Company was first in line, with four horses and 45 men, dressed in black coats and white trousers. The Friendship Fire Company came next, their engine drawn by two horses. They had about 50 men in line, attired in light coats, dark trousers and black caps. The Lehigh Engine Company followed with about 50 men, their engine drawn by four gray horses, and last was the Humane Engine Company, with about 75 men and four horses. The Allentown Band was in line and all the

FIRE ENGINE HOUSES

Liberty
Good Will

Allen
Franklin

Hibernia
Columbia

carriages and engines were decorated with laurels, evergreens and flowers. After the parade the companies tried their skill at throwing streams of water, which developed into a "cold water fight." The Humane had two pipes, which were directed on the Friendship and Lehigh, but as the Humane first ran out of water, the other companies claimed the victory.

The committee of arrangements consisted of the following citizens: Lehigh Hose Company, Joseph Weiss, Joseph Hartman and Jonathan Reichard; Friendship Engine Company, Francis Samuels, Mark S. Young and Thomas Seip; Lehigh Engine Company, James W. Wilson, E. R. Newhard and Benjamin Hagenbuch; Humane Engine Company, Reuben Strauss, Joseph Young, R. E. Wright and Joseph F. Newhard.

The first hook and ladder company was organized in 1843, chiefly through the instrumentality of Benjamin Hagenbuch.

The Good Will Company was organized June 27, 1850, and received the engine formerly owned by the Humane, which in later years passed into the possession of the Slatington Company. Tilghman H. Good was its first president. This company obtained the first steamer used in the town in 1865, the company paying $2,500, and the borough a like amount. A Silsby rotary engine was bought in 1876, the company contributing $800 toward its cost. Henry H. Mertz became a member in 1865, and acted as the engineer for 48 years. The foreman since 1910 has been Charles H. Ziegler. A new Silsby engine was supplied in 1900, and a chemical combination wagon in 1908. The present superior three-story brick building was erected in 1906.

The Columbia Fire Company was organized in 1853 and its first location was on Hamilton street, between Seventh and Eighth. Joseph F. Newhard was the first president; James W. Wilson, secretary; and Wm. H. Blumer, treasurer. It became the successor of the Friendship. A hand engine and hose carriage were supplied in 1854, and a steamer was substituted in 1866, the second in town. Its quarters were removed to the northwest corner of Tenth and Court streets in October, 1888, in a fine two-story brick building. A new Ahrens-Fox steamer was purchased in 1909, and a combination wagon in 1914. John Getter has been a member since 1896, and has filled the position of engineer since 1908. The oldest surviving member is W. W. Washburn, who became a member in 1863.

The American Hose Company was organized in 1864, and its first locality was at No. 16 South Sixth street, where it continued until 1897, when its quarters were removed to the east end of the City Hall. Its early names were Eagle, Young America and Lehigh. The first hand drawn carriage was generally called the "Shoo-Fly." This was in use until 1866 when a new hand drawn carriage was secured and this latter was continued until 1895, when a horse drawn carriage was supplied, costing $1,850; and the last was improved in May, 1914, at a cost of $2,700, by adding a motor chemical engine. It carries 250 feet of hose and 120 gallons of chemicals. The horses, "Duke and George," which pulled the carriage for five years before 1914, were well trained and recognized as the finest "fire team" in the service in the entire state of Pennsylvania, and the members regretted to part with them by a public sale. The first members were all young men under age, numbering about fifty; the only survivor now is James Hausman, city controller. The "50th Anniversary" was appropriately celebrated in March, 1914.

The Liberty Fire Company was organized in 1869 with forty members. John W. Sepp was the first president, and Alvin Zellner, secretary. Its building was established at No. 711 Chew street in 1871, and rebuilt (three-story brick) in 1900. The apparatus comprises a steam engine and combination wagon. The surviving first members are Charles Wolf, Levan Troxell, Henry Hillegass, Samuel Burger, Alfred Gangawere, William Bast, and Charles Carr.

Hibernia Hose Company was organized March 17, 1871, at No. 635 Ridge avenue, and the quarters continued there until 1907, when a superior three-story brick building was supplied by the city at the southeast corner of Ridge avenue and Tilghman streets, at a cost of $22,000. A hand drawn hose carriage was in use until 1898, when a combination wagon was substituted; and a hook and ladder truck was supplied in 1907. The company has four horses, including the "speediest fire team in the state." The old hose carriage is still retained as a great curiosity of the "early fire service," which stands in its quiet unpretentiousness on a platform in the rear of the large hall on the third floor. It was presented to the company in 1871 by the Hibernia Fire Company, No. 1, of Philadelphia, and the presentation committee then said that it had been made in 1771, and had survived many "fire fights," which grew out of the great rivalry of fire companies there. The company also highly regards a silver horn presented by the Perth Amboy fire department in 1903.

The Allen Fire Company was organized in May, 1871. It had been started under the name of the "Vigilant Fire Company" in 1865. The first meetings were held in the basement of Rex's Hotel at the corner of Hamilton and Wood streets, and the first president was Alfred Fried. In September, 1871, the first steam fire apparatus was supplied at a cost of $4,000, the city paying half, and the members the other half, which they raised by subscriptions, holding fairs, etc. It had been used by the Southwark Fire Company, of Philadelphia. At the same time a hose carriage was bought by the company for $400; and in July, 1872, a pair of superior roan horses. Its quarters were at Second and Hamilton streets for a time until 1874, when they were removed to a frame building at Ridge avenue and Linden street, which was improved by adding a bell tower in 1889. In 1875, the membership dwindled down to twenty owing to the panic, but the people of the vicinity fortunately came to the rescue. A new steam engine was purchased in 1882, which was rebuilt in 1906. A combination wagon was supplied in 1909. The present superior three-story brick structure was erected in 1902 by the city, at a cost of $25,000; the bell tower is 62 feet high. The only surviving member from 1865 is James F. Butz. Ulysses Kleckner has been a member since 1884, serving as engineer since 1897. This company highly values a number of gifts from fire companies—an old, beautiful gilt mantle mirror and silver trumpet from the Southwark Fire Company, of Philadelphia, in 1871; silver trumpet from the Norristown Hose Company, in 1897; full size trumpet, made out of anthracite coal, (superb piece of workmanship with appropriate inscriptions) from the Columbia Fire Company, of Scranton, in 1902; and a valuable bust figure in marble of "Laura," from the same company in 1903; and a cut glass punch bowl (complete set) from the Franklin Fire Company, of South Easton, in 1908.

The Rescue Hook and Ladder Company was organized in 1881. Its first name was Rainbow, which was retained for a year. The first meetings were held in the livery stable of James W. Crader, at Sixth and Church streets, until 1887, when the place was removed to Nos. 632-34 Linden street, the west end of the old market house; and till then the old hook and ladder truck continued in use when a new truck was substituted. New quarters were then supplied by the erection of the City Hall, a fine three-story brick structure. The first officers were Samuel Ott, president; James W. Crader, secretary; and Henry Heilman, treasurer. In 1907 an improved truck was secured, which was modernized in 1914 by the addition of a new motor engine. The old truck was given to the Hibernia Company.

Of the first members, the following are survivors: Lyman J. Keck, Peter J. Beisel, Oscar G. Beisel, Charles Schmoyer, William Dutt, and William Seagreaves.

The Pioneer Fire Company was organized in 1897 and was first located on Allen street, above Seventh, where it remained two years. In 1899, the city supplied a superior two-story brick building on the northeast corner of Tilghman and Eighth streets at a cost of $16,000. The old Silsby rotary steam fire engine (third size) and hose carriage of the Liberty Fire Company were given to this company, and have been used until now. In 1912 a horse drawn combination wagon was supplied, and this was afterward improved by attaching a Webb motor engine, which was the first introduced in the local fire department. Alexander Schrader has been the engineer from the beginning; and the driver, M. C. M. Kratzer. The first officers were: William Wicand, president; W. W. Wetzel, secretary; George H. Hardner, foreman.

The Franklin Fire Company was organized in 1900, and the city supplied a spacious three-story brick building at the southeast corner of Fourteenth and Turner streets in 1901, at a cost of $20,000, when a combination chemical wagon was also secured. An America-LaFrance steam fire engine was purchased in 1908. The first president was Elmer Heimbach, and William Conrad, secretary. Members of this company erected on the adjoining lot to the east, a superb two-story brick "Home" for social purposes, which has proven a complete success. Its appointments for providing entertainment for their families are complete. On Sept. 19, 1913, they entertained the Veteran Firemen's Association, of Reading, in a most hospitable manner, and in appreciation of this extraordinary occasion, the association presented to the "Home" a costly solid mahogany grandfather's clock, with chimes, which is truly an attractive and highly valued ornament in the reception room. The president is B. A. Beauchner. This is regarded as one of the finest, best equipped places of a fraternal organization in the state.

The Fairview Fire Company held its first meeting May 15, 1903, with six members, at the South Allentown Hotel, in Salisbury township, and the name of Fairview Fire Company, No. 1, was adopted April 22, 1904, when the membership was increased to forty-one. The meetings were afterward held in the township school house at Fifth and Auburn streets, and then on premises at No. 1012 South Sixth street, which were bought by the company and remodeled in 1908. A fine two-story brick building was supplied by the city in 1911, at No. 929 South Seventh street, and the company has since secured the adjoining lot on the north for contemplated improvements. A combination apparatus was purchased Oct. 1, 1909, the horses having been previously secured. The first president was A. J. Heller; and secretary, Henry Hildebrand.

The East Allentown Fire Company was organized in 1897 in the Cottage Inn on the "Bethlehem Pike," half a mile east of the river, in Hanover township. After several meetings, the members then assembled in the township school house in that vicinity (Union and Carlisle streets) until 1902, when Jacob Saeger presented to the company a lot of ground on the northeast corner of Dauphin and East Walnut streets, 20 by 110 feet, which included a one-story frame building; and to this the company added the adjoining lot 20 by 110 feet. The meetings have been held here since. A two-story brick building was erected by the company in 1911, at a cost of $4,200, which was purchased by the city in 1914. The company became a part of the fire department in 1913. In 1903, a Holloway chemical hand drawn wagon was supplied. The company has 750 feet of hose, but it cannot be used in case of fire because the city government has not yet planted fire hydrants in the ward for purposes of extinguishing fires. The first president was Lovely Moll. The membership is 80.

On Feb. 9, 1870, the various companies were brought under the present collective organization as a Fire Department of the city. Simon P. Snyder, who had been chief under the old organization, was the first under the new.

Firemen's Parade.—On Monday afternoon, Nov. 8, 1909, the fire department of Allentown held a large and most imposing parade with ten companies in line with apparatus as follows:

America,	50
Good Will,	80
Columbia,	50
Liberty,	45
Hibernia, *
Allen,	60
Rescue,	54
Pioneer,	90
Franklin,	65
Fairview,	60

*Not uniformed and only apparatus in line.

The fire chief, Charles H. Cohn, with three assistants, mobilized the department on North Seventh street beyond Liberty, which moved at 2 o'clock over the following route: From Seventh and Liberty to Fifth, to Hamilton, to Fifteenth, and counter-marched to Centre Square where it was reviewed and dismissed.

The weather was fine and all the streets along the line of march were crowded.

A quartet of mounted police took the lead, followed by a dozen automobiles with city officials and visiting fire officials, then the fire chief and assistants and the several companies according to number. The parade was proclaimed by all as a great success, and displayed the superior condition of the department.

State Convention.—The Second State Firemen's Convention was held at Allentown on Oct. 9, 1903, and all the arrangements had been carefully made to bring about on this occasion the greatest firemen's parade ever witnessed in the state; but unfortunately when the parade was about to form, rain began to fall and this ended in a veritable cloudburst which caused the crowds to disperse, the firemen to separate and the public interest to vanish.

Fire Alarm System.—The Gamewell fire alarm system was adopted and introduced by the city in 1895; and in 1900 the city was divided into four fire districts which were placed under the control of a chief engineer, and three assistant engineers. Until now, the following fire alarm boxes have been set up in the several sections of the city:

Box	Location.
5—	2d and Hamilton.
6—	Front and Allen.
7—	5th and Gordon.
8—	6th and Tilghman.
9—	5th and Walnut.
14—	8th and Hamilton.
15—	Lehigh and Union.
16—	8th and Linden.
17—	8th and Liberty.
18—	9th and Chew.
19—	4th and Liberty.
21—	6th and Linden.
23—	6th and Hamilton.
24—	Ridge Ave. and Chew.
25—	Fountain and Walnut.
26—	7th and Hamilton.
27—	3d and Linden.
28—	Jordan and Union.
29—	Front and Furnace.
31—	10th and Hamilton.
32—	4th and Hamilton.
34—	Roberts' Furnace.
35—	7th and Turner.
36—	5th and Hamilton.
37—	9th and Hamilton.
38—	11th and Turner.
39—	6th and Liberty.
41—	9th and Tilghman.
42—	7th and Gordon.
43—	Thread Mill.
45—	13th and Hamilton.
46—	Fourth and Turner.
51—	6th and Chew.
52—	11th and Hamilton.
53—	Chew and Madison.
54—	4th and Tilghman.
61—	Hess Brothers.
62—	8th and Union.
63—	10th and Liberty.
64—	7th and Washington.
65—	2d and Allen.
71—	15th and Turner.
72—	16th and Chew.
73—	Allentown Hospital.
74—	15th and Hamilton.
75—	14th and Walnut.
76—	17th and Linden.
81—	Jefferson and Gordon.
82—	5th and Washington.
83—	Allentown Flint Bottle Works.
84—	Phœbe Home, 19th and Turner.
91—	7th and Ward.
112—	Allentown Gas Works.
113—	Thirteenth and Liberty.
114—	16th and Liberty.
115—	17th and Liberty.
116—	Diehl's Furniture House.
117—	Race and Hamilton.
121—	Madison, between Chew and Gordon.
123—	14th and Gordon.

- 124—Adelaide Silk Mill.
- 125—Wire Mill, Lehigh street.
- 126—Franklin and Gordon.
- 127—Front and Linden.
- 131—12th and Hamilton.
- 132—3d and Gordon.
- 133—Water Works.
- 134—5th and Lawrence.
- 135—Dietrich Motor Car. Co.
- 141—Balliet's Cigar Box Factory.
- 142—16th and Roth Avenue.
- 143—17th and Fairview.
- 145—Front and Hamilton.
- 151—7th and Linden.
- 212—7th and Allen.
- 213—Penn and Greenleaf.
- 214—13th and Turner.
- 215—Ridge Ave. and Liberty.
- 216—15th and Tilghman.
- 217—Penn and Chew.
- 221—20th and Chew.
- 223—15th and Liberty.
- 224—8th and Cedar.
- 225—Wire Mill, 5th street Entrance.
- 226—Wire Mill, S. Penn St. Entrance.
- 231—Franklin and Union.
- 232—Fifth and Allen.

- 312—24th and Chew.
- 313—17th and Walnut.
- 314—10th and Washington.
- 315—New and Washington.
- 316—L. V. Freight Station.
- 321—13th and Union.
- 322—14th and Hamilton.
- 323—Water and Lawrence.
- 324—12th and Tilghman.
- 325—16th and Union.
- 326—10th and Linden.
- 331—6th and Greenleaf.
- 332—Washington and Meadow.
- 334—2d and Turner.
- 412—Auburn and Pike.
- 413—6th and St. John.
- 414—9th and St. John.
- 415—Mack Motor Car Co.
- 416—Lehigh and Race.
- 417—Traylor Engineering Co.
- 512—2d and Hamilton, East Side.
- 513—Third and Hamilton, East Side.
- 514—3d and Lawrence, East Side.
- 515—2d and Saeger, East Side.
- 516—National Silk Dyeing Co.
- 517—East Allentown, 14th Ward.
- 518—Rittersville State Hospital.

FIRE ORGANIZATIONS.

Name.	No.	Instituted.	Members.
America, 624-26 Linden,	2	Mar. 9, 1864	63
Good-Will, 22 South Eighth,	3	Jan. 25, 1850	117
Columbia, Tenth and Court,	4	Dec. 13, 1853	75
Liberty, 711 Chew,	5	Sept. 20, 1869	107
Hibernia, 635 Ridge,	6	March 17, 1871	180
Allen, 136 Linden,	7	May 16, 1871	102
Rescue, 632-34 Linden,	8	March 17, 1881	52
Pioneer, 701-03 Eighth,	9	July 21, 1897	119
Franklin, 14th and Turner,	10	Nov. 30, 1900	226
Fairview, 929 S. Seventh,	11	Sept. 28, 1908	193
East Allentown,	12	July 24, 1901	65

There is no Company No. 1 because upon the reorganization of the department, when Allentown was made a city in 1867, no company could claim direct lineal descent from the Friendship and, as a compromise, that number was dropped from the Fire Department. The America was known earlier as the Lehigh, Washington, Young America and Eagles; the Allens as the Vigilant.

Schools.—With the year 1866 began a new era in the educational history of Allentown. The various educational forces having attained their full development, then rapidly assumed their final form. At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Allentown school district, in January, 1866, at which E. B. Young, president; C. W. Cooper, T. Good, George H. Hagenbuch, Boas Hausman, H. J. Saeger, and J. S. Dillinger were present, was taken the initiatory step in the unanimous passage of the following resolution:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, it is deemed policy to combine all the wards of this city in one school district.

Resolved, That Messrs. Saeger, Dillinger and Cooper, be a committee to draft certain sections covering the suggestions of the board, with power to confer with a committee of the town councils."

The result of this action was the Act of 1866, constituting the entire borough one school district, under the control of a board of controllers elected by the board of school directors of each ward, who were elected by the people. In the board of controllers was vested the right and title to all the property and the entire corporate power of the district, and they were given power to establish schools, erect buildings, assess and collect taxes, etc.; appoint all teachers of grammar and high schools and a superintendent, and enter into all contracts and agreements, on behalf of the district. To the boards of school directors of the different sections was reserved the power to elect the teachers below the grade of grammar, to admit pupils into and to visit the schools of their respective sections. A supplementary act, passed in 1869, granted them the power to participate in the election of city superintendent, and a further supplement, passed in 1871, increased the number of controllers from one to two for each section.

The new board, after the adoption of a course of study, began the erection of a new schoolhouse at Fifth and Chew streets, the lot for which had previously been purchased for $3,250. The cornerstone was laid in May, 1867. The condition of the schools was such that additional ac-

SCHOOL HOUSES

Lincoln Building

Washington Building

German Catholic Parochial Building

commodations were absolutely necessary, as during the term of 1867-68 the boy's high school was kept in a room over a mercantile establishment, and the girls' in the Presbyterian church session room, while from four to six lower grades were provided for in rented rooms in houses or in Sunday schools.

The necessity for providing for regular examinations soon became apparent to the board, and they, therefore, in May, 1867, appointed R. K. Buehrle, the teacher of the boys' high school, to conduct the examinations of all the schools in addition to his duties as teacher. In February, 1868, he was elected city superintendent, which office he held until 1878.

The first high school commencement was held in 1869 in the Presbyterian church, and the first diplomas were awarded to the class of 1874. The classes graduating from 1869 to 1874 subsequently received diplomas also. The effect of having regular annual examinations, and promoting in accordance with proficiency was soon seen in greater regularity of attendance and better attention to study, especially in the higher grades.

The growth of the city necessitated the erection of new school houses in the Sixth ward in 1870, and in the Fourth ward in 1872, and the buildings in the Second and Third wards were remodelled. A new building in the First ward was erected in 1874 and in 1882, the building on Ninth street, in the Eighth ward, was erected.

In 1876, there were 57 schools: one high school, with an enrollment of 51 males and 59 females; four male grammar schools, enrollment 160; four female grammar schools, enrollment 144; nine male secondary schools, enrollment 550; eight female secondary schools, enrollment 450; nine male advanced primary schools, enrollment 575; nine female advanced primary schools, enrollment 581; seven male primary schools, enrollment 580; and six female primary schools, with an enrollment of 450 pupils.

In May, 1878, G. H. Desh was elected superintendent of schools and served until 1881, when L. B. Landis was elected. Mr. Landis served until 1893, when F. D. Raub, the present incumbent, was elected. Additional buildings have been erected in different sections of the city until in 1914 there are twenty-one buildings, as follows: High School, on Turner street, between Eighth and Ninth, built in 1893, and the Harrison, Morton, Garber, Horne, Livingston (1911), Wolfe, Hunsicker (1902), Sheridan, McKinley (1886), Cleveland, Washington (1897), Jackson (1911), Herbst, Stevens (1890), Allen (1900), Garfield (1908), Franklin (1888), Jefferson (1910), Lincoln (1900), and Mosser buildings. Night schools are held in the high school and Sheridan buildings and evening manual training schools in the Sheridan, Herbst and Stevens buildings. An open air school is also held and a school for mentally defective children. In 1914 there are 175 schools, taught by 39 male and 151 female teachers, with 3,966 male pupils and 4,062 female pupils. The average daily attendance is 8,028, and the cost of each pupil per month, $1.79. The average salary of male teachers is $85.74, and of female teachers, $51.27. The salaries in the primary grades range from $45 to $60; in the secondary, from $55 to $70; in the grammar, from $65 to $80, and in the high school from $800 to $1,600, with $2,000 for the principal. The salary of the superintendent is $2,500. The present rate of school tax is six and one-half mills. The course of study pursued in the high school is as follows:

First Year, Normal Course.—English Grammar, Arithmetic, Algebra, Civics, Latin and German. The classical and Latin scientific courses omit German and the commercial course substitutes therefore commercial geography.

Second Year, Normal Course.—English, (Rhetoric, Composition, Classics); Ancient History, Algebra, Physical Geography, Zoology, Botany, Latin and German.

The Classical Course omits Zoology and Botany, and includes Greek; the Latin Scientific Course substitutes German for Zoology and Botany and the Commercial Course includes English, Commercial Arithmetic, Mediaeval and Modern History, Algebra and Bookkeeping.

Third Year, Normal Course.—English, Mediaeval and Modern History, Plane Geometry, Chemistry, Latin and German. The Latin Scientific Course omits Chemistry and substitutes more advanced Latin. The Classical Course adds Greek and the Commercial Course embraces English, U. S. History, Bookkeeping, Stenography and Typewriting.

Fourth Year, Normal Course.—English, Physics, Psychology and School Management, Latin and German, with Astronomy and Geology optional. The Latin Scientific Course includes English, Virgil, Physics, Solid Geometry and Trigonometry, and Higher Algebra, with Astronomy, Geology and Chemistry optional. The Classical Course includes English, Latin, Greek, Physics and German. The Commercial Course embraces English, Political Economy, Stenography, Typewriting and Commercial Law.

In 1914, the officers of the school district of Allentown are James M. Wuchter, president; Thomas P. Wenner, secretary; A. P. Zellner treasurer; A. E. Bittner, tax collector; R. J. Butz, solicitor; F. D. Raub, superintendent; Daniel Hamm, principal of high school. The attendance officer is O. P. Knauss; supervisor of music, Margaret Sykes; supervisor of drawing, Charlotte S. Schmerker; grade supervisor, Mary G. Allen, and medical inspectors, Dr. F. S. Boyer and Dr. Thomas H. Weaber.

By an Act of the Legislature approved May 18, 1911, the government of the schools was vested in a board of nine school directors and the board of control and section boards were abolished.

The act provided that at the municipal election held in November, 1911, three directors were to be elected for two years, three for four years, and three for six years, and biennially thereafter, three directors were to be elected at large, for terms of six years, with the term of office beginning on the first Monday in December following their election. The first board of school directors elected in 1911 under the new law was as follows: Major Frank D. Beary, President; Wilson Arbogast, Rev. E. O. Leopold, Dr. R. C. Peters, James M. Wuchter, Jacob H. Fink, Thomas J. Roth, Alex. B. Ellsworth and Francis P. Hunsicker.

The officers and members of the school district from its organization in 1866 to 1914 are:

OFFICERS AND MEMBERS

From Organization of School District, 1866-1914:

PRESIDENTS

C. M. Runk,	1866-1874
William J. Egge,	1874-1877
S. B. Anewalt,	1877-1878
John McLean,	1878-1881
P. L. Reichard,	1881-1885
O. F. White,	1885-1887
B. K. Weaver,	1887-1889
Geo. T. Ettinger	1889-1894
E. H. Dickenshied,	1894-1896
Geo. T. Ettinger,	1896-1898
Dr. H. H. Herbst,	1898-1905
F. G. Lewis,	1905-1906
H. E. Crilly,	1906-1908
Dr. H. H. Herbst,	July, 1908, to Oct., 1908
Dr. J. D. Erdman,	Oct., 1908, to July, 1909
Dr. J. R. Morton,	1909-1910
F. G. Lewis,	1910-1912
Major F. D. Beary,	1912-1913
James. M. Wuchter,	1913-1914

SOLICITORS

T. F. Diefenderfer,	1884-1894
R. J. Butz,	1894-

SUPERINTENDENTS

R. K. Buehrle,	1868-1878
Geo. H. Desch,	1878-1881
L. B. Landis,	1881-1893
F. D. Raub,	1893-1914

SECRETARIES

Boas Hausman,	1866-1867
J. S. Dillinger,	1867-1873

Wm. S. Young,	1873-1877
W. H. Deshler,	1877-1883
M. H. Richards,	1883-1898
Geo. T. Ettinger,	1898-1900
T. P. Wenner,	1900-

TREASURERS

Henry J. Saeger,	1866-1873
Sydney Burcaw,	1873-1877
J. P. Barnes,	1877-1894
M. F. Cawley,	1894-1896
A. P. Zellner,	1896-

MEMBERS

1866-1867

First Section, Geo. Erdman; Second Section, Boas Hausman; Third Section, Tilghman Good; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper.

1867-1868

First Section, George Erdman; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger; Third Section, Tilghman Good; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper; Sixth Section, James O'Donnell.

1868-1869

First Section, George Erdman; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger; Third Section, Thomas Mohr; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper; Sixth Section, James O'Donnell.

1869-1870

First Section, George Erdman; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger; Third Section, Thomas Mohr; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper; Sixth Section, John Hull.

1870-1871

First Section, George Erdman; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger; Third Section, Thomas Mohr; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper; Sixth Section, James O'Donnell.

1871-1872

First Section, George Erdman, W. A. Roney; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, W. R. Griess, C. M. Runk; Fifth Section, C. W. Cooper, John McLean; Sixth Section, C. H. Nimson, John Hull.

1872-1873

First Section, George Erdman, W. A. Roney; Second Section, J. S. Dillinger, H. H. Fisher; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk, W. R. Griess; Fifth Section, John McLean, W. H. Blumer; Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs.

1873-1874

First Section, James B. Cole, Henry Reuter; Second Section, William S. Young, Milton Apple; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, C. M. Runk, William J. Egge; Fifth Section, John McLean, W. H. Blumer; Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs.

1874-1875.

First Section, Henry Reuter, James B. Cole; Second Section, William S. Young, Milton Apple; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, W. J. Egge, H. A. Grim; Fifth Section, John McLean, W. H. Blumer; Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs.

1875-1876

First Section, Henry Reuter, James B. Cole; Second Section, William S. Young, Milton Apple; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, William J. Egge, H. A. Grim; Fifth Section, John McLean, W. H. Blumer; Sixth Section, Dennis Shields, William McNanemin.

1876-1877

First Section, John Swartz, Henry Santee; Second Section, William S. Young, William H. Deshler; Third Section, Sydney Burcaw, C. H. Ruhe; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, Reuben Stahler; Fifth Section, John McLean, W. H. Blumer; Sixth Section, Dennis Shields, William McNanemin; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, W. J. Grim; Eighth Section, William Reichenbach, William J. Egge.

1877-1878

First Section, John Swartz, Henry A. Santee; Second Section, William S. Young, W. H. Deshler; Third Section, Edwin Keller, Solomon S. Frederick; Fourth Section, S. B. Anewalt, C. L. Newhard; Fifth Section, John McLean, Robert Steckel; Sixth Section, Dennis Shields, William McNanemin; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, W. J. Grim; Eighth Section, William Reichenbach, Edward Kincaid.

1878-1879

First Section, John Swartz, John Weiss; Second Section, W. S. Young; W. H. Deshler; Third Section, Edwin Keller, Solomon S. Frederick; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, John McLean, Eph. Horlacher, Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, W. J. Grim; Eighth Section, Edward Kincaid, Abraham Newhard.

1879-1880

First Section, John Weiss, Dr. P. L. Reichard; Second Section, Jacob Kichline, W. H. Deshler; Third Section, Edwin Keller, Solomon S. Frederick; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, John McLean, Eph. Horlacher; Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, Jonathan Stetzel; Eighth Section, Edward Kincaid, Charles Gehringer.

1880-1881

First Section, Dr. P. L. Reichard, Henry Santee; Second Section, W. H. Deshler, M. H. Richards; Third Section, Solomon Frederick, Adam Wiegner; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, John McLean, Eph. Horlacher; Sixth Section, James Kinery, William Rohs; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, Jonathan Stetzel; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, P. K. Hartzell.

1881-1882

First Section, Dr. P. L. Reichard, Henry Santee; Second Section, W. H. Deshler, M. H. Richards; Third Section, Sol. S. Frederick, Adam Wiegner; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, John McLean, Rev. W. R. Huffort; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, John Flood; Seventh Section, H. A. Grim, Jonathan Stetzel; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, P. K. Hartzell.

1882-1883

First Section, Dr. P. L. Reichard, O. F. White; Second Section, M. H. Richards, J. E. Lentz; Third Section, Solomon Frederick, E. C. Huber; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, John McLean, Rev. W. R. Huffort; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, John Flood; Seventh Section, A. P. Zellner, Rev. J. Fritzingler; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, P. K. Hartzell.

1883-1884

First Section, Dr. P. L. Reichard, O. F. White; Second Section, J. E. Lentz, M. H. Richards; Third Section, E. C. Huber, R. S. Leisenring; Fourth Section, W. P. Huber, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, Rev. W. R. Huffort, Eph. Horlacher; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, John Flood; Seventh Section, A. P. Zellner, Rev. J. Fritzingler; Eighth Section, L. H. Lenhard, Charles Gehringer.

1884-1885

First Section, Dr. P. L. Reichard, O. F. White; Second Section, John E. Lentz, M. H. Richards; Third Section, E. C. Huber, R. S. Leisenring; Fourth Section, C. L. Newhard, George T. Hersh; Fifth Section, Rev. M. O. Rath, Samuel Keller; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, A. P. Zellner, Rev. J. Fritzingler; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, E. J. Young.

1885-1886

First Section, J. C. Diehl, O. F. White; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, R. S. Leisenring; Fourth Section, George T. Hersh, C. L. Newhard; Fifth Section, Samuel Keller, Rev. Myron O. Rath; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, D. S. Mertz; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, E. J. Young.

1886-1887

First Section, J. C. Diehl, O. F. White; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, Rev. E. Gernant, C. L. Newhard; Fifth Section, Samuel Keller, Rev. M. O. Rath; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, D. S. Mertz; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, E. J. Young.

1887-1888

First Section, J. C. Diehl, O. F. White; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, Charles L. Newhard, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, Samuel Keller, E. E. Rinn; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Daniel Herrity; Seventh Section, Theo. Knauss, D. S. Mertz; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, E. J. Young.

1888-1889

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, C. L. Newhard, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, Samuel Keller, E. E. Rinn; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Daniel Herrity; Seventh Section, W. J. Grim, John F. Weida; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, C. S. Miller.

1889-1890

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, Charles L. Newhard, B. K. Weaver; Fifth Section, Samuel Keller, E. E. Rinn; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Daniel Herryty; Seventh Section, W. J. Grim, John F. Weida; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, C. S. Miller.

1890-1891

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Rev. A. R. Horne, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, George G. Blumer, Daniel Hiestand; Fifth Section, E. E. Rinn, H. H. Herbst; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, John F. Weida, H. F. Rosenberger; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, E. S. Miller.

1891-1892

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Davis Garber, M. H. Richards; Third Section, C. H. Ruhe, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, George G. Blumer, Daniel Hiestand; Fifth Section, H. H. Herbst, E. E. Rinn; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, Reuben Brong.

1892-1893

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Davis Garber, M. H. Richards; Third Section, George T. Ettinger, R. D. Butz; Fourth Section, George G. Blumer, Daniel Hiestand; Fifth Section, H. H. Herbst, E. E. Rinn; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, Patrick McGee; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, Reuben Brong.

1893-1894

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, Davis Garber, M. H. Richards; Third Section, R. D. Butz, George T. Ettinger; Fourth Section, George G. Blumer, M. F. Cawley; Fifth Section, H. H. Herbst, T. P. Wenner; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, M. J. Lennon; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, Reuben Brong.

1894-1895

First Section, J. R. Morton, John Miller; Second Section, E. M. Young, A. P. Zellner; Third Section, George T. Ettinger, R. D. Butz; Fourth Section, George G. Blumer, J. S. Yeakel; Fifth Section, John M. Stevens, H. S. Weaver; Sixth Section, H. E. Crilly, M. J. Lennon; Seventh Section, Theodore Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Section, Charles Gehringer, Reuben Brong; Ninth Section, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Section, T. P. Wenner, E. C. Shimer.

1895-1896

First Ward, J. R. Morton, John P. Miller; Second Ward, E. M. Young, A. P. Zellner; Third Ward, George T. Ettinger, W. J. Frederick; Fourth Ward, James Swartz, J. S. Yeakel; Fifth Ward, John M. Stevens, H. S. Weaver; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, M. J. Lennon; Seventh Ward, Theodore F. Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Ward, C. J.

Otto, Reuben Brong; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, T. P. Wenner, E. C. Shimer.

1896-1897

First Ward, J. R. Morton, John P. Miller; Second Ward, E. H. Reninger, E. M. Young; Third Ward, George T. Ettinger, W. J. Frederick; Fourth Ward, W. F. Hecker, A. K. Jacks; Fifth Ward, John M. Stevens, Christian Swartz; Sixth Ward, Daniel O'Donnell, Hugh Ferry; Seventh Ward, Theodore F. Knauss, E. H. Dickenshied; Eighth Ward, Reuben M. Brong, C. J. Otto; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, T. P. Wenner, E. C. Shimer.

1897-1898

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. P. Swartz; Second Ward, E. H. Reninger, E. M. Young; Third Ward, George T. Ettinger, W. J. Frederick; Fourth Ward, William F. Hecker, A. K. Jacks; Fifth Ward, J. M. Stevens, Christian Swartz; Sixth Ward, Daniel O'Donnell, Hugh Ferry; Seventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, E. F. Keck; Eighth Ward, C. J. Otto, Reuben M. Brong; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, T. P. Wenner, E. C. Shimer.

1898-1899

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. P. Swartz; Second Ward, E. H. Reninger, E. M. Young; Third Ward, George T. Ettinger, W. J. Frederick; Fourth Ward, W. F. Hecker, A. S. Rabenold; Fifth Ward, J. M. Stevens, Christian Swartz; Sixth Ward, Daniel O'Donnell, Hugh Ferry; Seventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, E. F. Keck; Eighth Ward, C. J. Otto, W. J. Keck; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, T. P. Wenner, E. C. Shimer.

1899-1900

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. P. Swartz; Second Ward, E. H. Reninger, E. M. Young; Third Ward, Wm. J. Frederick, J. H. Birchall; Fourth Ward, A. S. Rabenold, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, J. M. Stevens, F. G. Lewis; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, E. F. Keck; Eighth Ward, C. J. Otto, W. J. Keck; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, T. P. Wenner, J. A. McCollum.

1900-1901

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Rev. A. R. Horne, S. B. Neumoyer; Third Ward, John H. Birchall, F. P. Hunsicker; Fourth Ward, A. S. Rabenold, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, William Hunsicker; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, C. J. Otto, W. J. Keck; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, John McCollum, J. J. Hittle; Eleventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, J. L. Hoffman.

1901-1902

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Rev. A. R. Horne, C. M. W. Keck; Third Ward, C. L. Freeman, F. P. Hunsicker; Fourth Ward, A. Samuels, A. S. Rabenold; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, William Hunsicker; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, Orlando Oldt, E. D. Swoyer; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, H. E. Ruhe; Tenth Ward, John McCollum, J. J. Hittle; Eleventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, J. L. Hoffman.

1902-1903

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Rev. A. R. Horne, C. M. W. Keck; Third Ward, C. L. Freeman, F. P. Hunsicker; Fourth Ward, A. Samuels, C. J. Otto; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, William Hunsicker; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, Orlando Oldt, E. D. Swoyer; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, H. F. Lehr, D. George Weber; Eleventh Ward, E. E. Ritter, J. L. Hoffman.

1903-1904

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, C. M. W. Keck, Daniel Mager; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, C. L. Freeman; Fourth Ward, C. J. Otto, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, J. A. Scheffer; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, E. D. Swoyer, Orlando Oldt; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, H. F. Lehr, D. George Weber; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, M. O. Blank.

1904-1905

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, C. M. W. Keck, Daniel Mager; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, John Ruhe; Fourth Ward, A. Samuels, C. J. Otto; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, J. A. Scheffer; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, E. D. Swoyer, Samuel Diehl; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, H. F. Lehr, D. George Weber; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Harper Clous.

1905-1906

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, C. M. W. Keck, Daniel Mager; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, John C. Ruhe; Fourth Ward, O. T. Weaver, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, J. A. Scheffer; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, George E. Boyle; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, E. D. Swoyer, Samuel Diehl; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, R. J. Goepple; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Harper Clous.

1906-1907

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, W. W. Eshbach; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, D. F. Bast; Fourth Ward, O. T. Weaver, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, J. A. Scheffer; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, George E. Boyle; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, E. D. Swoyer, Samuel Diehl; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, R. J. Goepple; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Harper Clous.

1907-1908

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, W. W. Eshbach; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, John C. Ruhe; Fourth Ward, O. Weaver, A. Samuels; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, J. A. Scheffer; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, George E. Boyle; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, J. D. Erdman, F. L. Best; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, D. George Weber; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Harper Clous.

1908-1909

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, W. W. Eshbach; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, D. F. Bast; Fourth Ward, S. F. Biery, C. L. Moyer; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, Uriah J. Erig; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, Neil Ward; Seventh Ward, E. F. Keck, W. P. Ludwig; Eighth Ward, J. D. Erdman, F. L. Best; Ninth Ward, H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, Frank Zimmerman; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Harper Clous; Twelfth Ward, R. A. Wagner, F. S. Fetzer.

1909-1910

First Ward, J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, Thomas Roth; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, D. F. Bast; Fourth Ward, Samuel F. Biery, C. L. Moyer; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, U. J. Erig; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, Neil Ward; Seventh Ward, W. P. Ludwig, J. J. Houser; Eighth Ward, J. D. Erdman, Frank L. Best; Ninth Ward, Dr. H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, Frank Zimmerman; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Oliver Clauss; Twelfth Ward, R. A. Wagner, John H. Sykes.

1910-1911

First Ward, Dr. J. R. Morton, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, Thomas J. Roth; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, George Wetherhold; Fourth Ward, Samuel F. Biery, Charles L. Moyer; Fifth Ward, F. G. Lewis, William Hunsicker; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. McDermott; Seventh Ward, W. P. Ludwig, J. J. Houser; Eighth Ward, Dr. J. D. Erdman, F. L. Best; Ninth Ward, Dr. H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, Frank Zimmerman; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Oliver Clauss; Twelfth Ward, R. A. Wagner, John H. Sykes; Thirteenth Ward, George Sykes, Landes Miller.

1911-1912

First Ward, William H. Downey, S. B. Bechtel; Second Ward, Daniel Mager, Thomas J. Roth; Third Ward, F. P. Hunsicker, George Wetherhold; Fourth Ward, Samuel F. Biery, Charles L. Moyer; Fifth Ward, Francis G. Lewis, U. J. Erig; Sixth Ward, H. E. Crilly, P. F. Hanlon; Seventh Ward, W. P. Ludwig, J. J. Houser; Eighth Ward, Dr. J. D. Erdman, F. L. Best; Ninth Ward, Dr. H. H. Herbst, M. H. Bickert; Tenth Ward, A. B. Ellsworth, Frank Zimmerman; Eleventh Ward, J. L. Hoffman, Oliver Clauss; Twelfth Ward, R. A. Wagner, John H. Sykes; Thirteenth Ward, George Sykes, Reginald Longnecker.

1912-1913

Wilson Arbogast, 6 years	Thomas J. Roth, 4 years
Rev. E. O. Leopold,	Jacob H. Fink 4 years
6 years	A. B. Ellsworth, 2 years
Dr. R. C. Peters, 6 years	F. P. Hunsicker, 2 years
James M. Wuchter,	Major F. D. Beary,
4 years	2 years

1913-1914

Dr. J. D. Erdman,	Dr. R. C. Peters, 4 years
6 years	Rev. E. O. Leopold,
Rev. J. Charles Rausch,	4 years
6 years	Thomas Roth, 2 years
H. G. Correll, 6 years	J. M. Wuchter, 2 years
Wilson Arbogast, 4 years	Jacob H. Fink, 2 years

BANKS

ALLENTOWN NATIONAL BANK.—What is now the Allentown National Bank was originally organized as a State bank, under the title of the Allentown Bank, Aug. 27, 1855, with a cash capital, paid in, of $100,000. The first president was Jacob Dillinger, the cashier, Charles W. Cooper, and the teller, William J. Hoxworth. The board of directors was constituted as follows: Jacob Dillinger, John Appel, Stephen Barber, Stephen Graff, Solomon Keck, Charles Kramer, Jesse M. Line, Welcome B. Powell, George Probst, Aaron G. Reninger, Joshua Seiberling, Hiram J. Schantz, and Dr. William Wilson. This bank surrendered its State charter Aug. 1, 1865, and organized the same day as a national bank under the provisions of the National Currency Act of 1864, with a capital of $200,000. Jacob Dillinger had died in November, 1861, and William Saeger had been elected president in the same month. He was continued in that office when the national bank was organized, and Mr. Cooper was retained in the position of cashier. Mr. Hoxworth had resigned as teller in May, 1864, and his place had been filled by Joseph E. Balliet, who was re-elected at the time of reorganization.

The first board of the Allentown National Bank consisted of William Saeger, Jacob Cornell, Daniel Clader, C. F. Dickensied, John Fogel, Stephen Graff, Boas Hausman, James K. Mosser, Tilghman H. Martin, Christian Pretz, John G. Schimpf, Henry Schnurman and Dr. William Wilson. The capital of the bank was increased to $500,000 in 1870. William Saeger, who was elected president in 1861, held that office until Aug. 1, 1883, when he resigned because of advanced years, and was succeeded by Esaias Rehrig. Upon Mr. Rehrig's death in 1885, Charles W. Cooper became president. He died in 1886, when Robert E. Wright succeeded to the presidency and held the position until his resignation on Jan. 11, 1909. C. M. W. Keck succeeded Charles W. Cooper as cashier in 1885, and held the office until Jan. 18, 1909, when he was elected president. He resigned Jan. 9, 1911, and on January 11th, Lloyd M. Tillman was elected president. Mr. Tillman served until March 24, 1913, when he resigned. Reuben J. Butz, the present president, was elected to the position May 5, 1913. Dr. C. D. Schaeffer is vice-president. John F. Wenner, the cashier, was elected Jan. 18, 1909, succeeding C. M. W. Keck, who was elected president. John F. Scheirer was elected the first assistant cashier on Jan. 16, 1911, and Charles S. Dilcher, the present assistant cashier, was elected to the position on Jan. 15, 1912.

Joseph E. Balliet, who succeeded William J. Hoxworth as teller in 1864, was connected with the institution for forty years and was vice-president at his death. He was succeeded as teller by his nephew, David B. Sanders, the present teller, who has been connected with the bank for forty-four years.

The bank began business in the old building which had been occupied by the Northampton Bank, which was used as a dwelling house and for other purposes from 1843 to 1855, and in 1871 built a two-story brick building, with stone trimmings, on the site, at a cost of $46,000, which was occupied by the bank until the erection of the present eight-story office building in 1905. This building is built of artificial stone, with steel frame, of fire proof construction, and is valued at $270,000. The first floor is occupied by the bank, into which the institution moved on March 16, 1905.

The par value of the stock of the institution was changed from $40.00 to $100.00 at the annual meeting of Jan. 12, 1909. On Sept. 11, 1902, the capital stock was increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000, stockholders having the privilege of subscribing for an amount equal to their holdings. The surplus fund and undivided profits amount to $546,979.18, and the deposits, in March, 1914, to $2,469,511.13. The board of directors are: Reuben J. Butz, Tilghman S. Cooper, D. G. Dery, John W. Eckert, Harvey H. Farr, William H. Gangewere, Emil A. Hirner, Samuel F. Jordan, Herbert C. Keller, Charles Kline, Frank J. Myers, Charles D. Schaeffer, John Taylor, Frank W. Weil and Robert E. Wilbur.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK was organized in 1863, and began business in 1864. The stockholders were William H. Blumer, Jesse M. Line, William Kern, and Nathan Laudenslager. Mr. Blumer was president. Tilghman H. Moyer was the first cashier, and Jacob A. Blumer succeeded him in that position. This bank was quite prosperous for a number of years, but failed in 1877. It was located at No. 8 East Hamilton street.

THE ALLENTOWN SAVINGS INSTITUTION, one of the oldest and most successfully managed savings-banks in Eastern Pennsylvania, commenced business in the year 1860. It was organized through the efforts of Hon. William H. Ainey, under a special charter passed by the Legislature during the winter of 1859 and 1860. Mr. Ainey became its first president, and Charles S. Bush its first cashier. The first board of trustees was composed of the following: William H. Ainey, Christian Pretz, George Probst, Samuel Sell, Nathan Peter, Henry B. Hottle, John D. Stiles.

Paul Balliet and Dr. B. F. Jacoby. Mr. Bush served as cashier upwards of three years, when he resigned to accept the cashiership of the Second National Bank. He was succeeded by Francis E. Samuels, who served about two years, when he resigned and became the cashier of the Second National Bank. Mr. Samuels was succeeded by Jacob S. Dillinger, who served about three years, when he resigned, after being elected prothonotary of Lehigh county. He was succeeded by Reuben Stahler, who served in that capacity about eight years, when he was elected cashier of the Second National Bank to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Samuels. Mr. Stahler was succeeded by B. J. Hagenbuch. Mr. Ainey continued to serve as president from the organization of the institution to its close. The last board of trustees comprised the following: William H. Ainey, C. Pretz, Martin Kemmerer, Milton Appel, Benjamin J. Hagenbuch, George Probst, Charles S. Bush, Reuben Stahler and C. B. Sell. The bank was located at 532 Hamilton street.

The institution was organized, as its title indicates, as a savings-bank. It received money on deposit in large and small sums, paying interest to the depositors of from three to six per cent., according to the amount and the time of deposit. The institution early enlisted the confidence and patronage of the people of the entire county, and its deposits steadily increased until shortly before the panic they had reached about half a million dollars. After the failure of William H. Blumer & Company and the First National Bank of Allentown, in 1877, banks in this locality, and especially savings-banks, were much distrusted, and as one after another failed, this want of confidence was intensified.

At the time of the failure of Blumer & Company there were seven savings-banks, besides theirs, in Allentown, all of which failed except the Allentown Savings Institution. There was besides a savings-bank at Bethlehem, one at Slattington, two at Fogelsville, and one at Macungie, all of which in like manner failed, leaving the Allentown Savings Institution alone as the only incorporated savings-bank doing business. This institution promptly met all its obligations, retaining the patronage and confidence of its customers to a remarkable degree when the circumstances before related are considered. During and subsequent to the war its investments were largely in government bonds, and from judicious purchases and sales it realized large profits. In addition to regular semi-annual dividends to the stockholders of from six to twelve per cent., per annum, it declared a one hundred per cent. dividend in 1869, and another in 1875 of two hundred per cent. on the original capital. Both of these dividends were payable in cash or stock at the option of each stockholder, but all preferred and took the stock. For reasons mainly personal to its officers and stockholders, it was decided to withdraw from business, and the affairs of the institution were closed up.

After providing for the deposits, most of the remaining assets were divided directly among the stockholders. The market value of these, together with the cash realized from sale of such assets as could not be divided, amounted to over eight thousand dollars to one thousand dollars originally paid in as capital, so that each stockholder, who paid in one thousand dollars at the beginning, received back eight thousand dollars, besides the regular semi-annual dividends. At a final meeting of the stockholders, held Feb. 5, 1883, Mr. Christian Pretz acting as chairman, and Prof. T. L. Seip as secretary, the following was moved and unanimously adopted:

"WHEREAS, We, the stockholders of the Allentown Savings Institution, have heard with pleasure the statement of the very satisfactory condition of its affairs and accounts as ascertained by the Auditing Committee appointed at the meeting of the stockholders held Jan. 29, 1883, and inasmuch as the business affairs of the institution have been closed, and this is our final meeting as stockholders; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deem it but proper and due to the president of the institution, the Hon. William H. Ainey, to put on record our high appreciation of his valuable services in successfully managing its affairs from the beginning to the close of its history, covering a time when most similar institutions failed with disastrous losses to their stockholders and the community.

Resolved, That we also recognize the efficient services of the Officers of the institution, who aided the president from time to time in the transaction of its affairs."

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF ALLENTOWN was organized in 1863, and began business in 1864, with a paid in capital of $100,000, which was increased the following year to $200,000, and a few years later to $300,000. The first officers were William H. Ainey, president, and Charles S. Bush, cashier, and the first directors, William H. Ainey, George Probst, Benjamin J. Hagenbuch, Samuel Sell, Aaron Balliet, Edward Kohler, Charles A. Ruhe and James H. Bush. After serving two years, Charles H. Bush resigned the cashiership in 1865 on account of ill health, and was succeeded by Francis E. Samuels, who continued as cashier until his death, in 1875. Reuben Stahler succeeded Mr. Samuels, and held the office until 1891, when he resigned, and William R. Klein became cashier. He was succeeded in 1903 by Charles H. Moyer, who still fills the position.

Mr. Ainey continued as president until his death in 1907, when Hon. Edward Harvey became president. Judge Harvey continued as president until his death in 1913, when Thomas E. Ritter, the present president, succeeded him.

The bank building at the southeast corner of Centre Square was erected in 1881, previous to which time it was located at 532 Hamilton street.

The present board of directors are M. J. Backenstoe, Silas G. Croll, Henry J. Grim, Henry D. Gross, George H. Hardner, William A. Hausman, Wilson G. E. Jacoby, Harry W. Kress, Calvin J. Otto, Henry E. Peters, Thomas E. Ritter, Victor F. Wonderly and John S. Yeager. The deposits of the bank are $2,715,000, the largest of any bank in the city.

The surplus and undivided profits amount to over $550,000. The market value of the stock is $325 a share, which pays fourteen per cent. dividend to the stockholders.

THE LEHIGH VALLEY TRUST COMPANY was organized June 7, 1886, with a capital stock of $125,000. The first board of directors were Edwin G. Martin, James K. Mosser, John Williams, Thomas F. Butz, Joseph Ruhe, Baxter B. McClure, A. F. Peters, Henry K. Hartzell, Samuel B. Anewalt, Andrew S. Keck, John Bowen, James Singmaster, Thomas T. Martin, Harry K. Kurtz, John R. Gonser, Franklin H. Hersh, and Morris L. Kauffman. Dr. Edwin G. Martin was elected president; Samuel B. Anewalt, vice-president; Morris L. Kauffman, trust officer, and James P. Barnes, secretary and treasurer. The bank was incorporated July 14, 1886, and purchased the property at 636 Hamilton street, for $18,220. The building had been previously occupied by the First National Bank. An addition, fifty feet in depth, was made to the building, which was used by the bank until the completion of the present handsome edifice in 1911. In 1909, the property at 634 Hamilton street, was purchased for $40,000, giving them a frontage of 44 feet, upon which the new building was erected. Its front, of Vermont white marble, is in the Ionic style of architecture, with four fluted columns, supporting a marble cornice and gable. Ornamental bronze doors are approached by a series of granite steps. The wainscoating and floor are of marble and the furniture all of metal. The building is lighted mainly by a large dome light of leaded glass.

Dr. Martin, the first president, died in 1893, when James P. Barnes was elected president, and Edward H. Reninger, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Barnes retired as president in 1890, when Samuel B. Anewalt was elected and John Bowen succeeded Mr. Anewalt as vice-president.

Mr. Anewalt retired as president in 1901 and was succeeded by Hon. M. C. L. Kline. Mr. Bowen died in 1902, and Edward M. Young succeeded him as vice-president. In 1905, Mr. Kline resigned the presidency, and Edward M. Young was elected to the position, which he still holds, while Lewis O. Shankweiler was chosen vice-president. Upon the death of Mr. Kauffman in 1900, Reuben J. Butz was elected trust officer, which he filled until elected president of the Allentown National Bank in 1913, when Lawrence H. Rupp was elected trust officer.

The board of directors are Samuel B. Anewalt, Morris C. Bastian, Reuben J. Butz, Wilson J. Hartzell, H. H. Farr, George H. Kleppinger, Andrew S. Keck, Charles F. Mosser, George K. Mosser, George Ormrod, E. H. Reninger, Joseph Ruhe, L. O. Shankweiler, John Taylor, and E. M. Young. Frank K. Hartzell is assistant treasurer, and Henry J. Hornbeck, assistant secretary. The surplus and undivided profits amount to $500,000.

THE MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK was organized in 1903, with a capital stock of $200,000, and began business at its present location in the Y. M. C. A. building, on March 30, 1903. Hon. Fred E. Lewis was the first president and was succeeded by the present incumbent, Thomas F. Diefenderfer. Charles O. Schantz was cashier until his death in 1911, when Francis O. Ritter succeeded him. Thomas J. Koch is vice-president and Herbert B. Wagner, assistant cashier. The present board of directors are Frank D. Bittner, Gottlieb Buehler, Owen D. Clauss, Thomas F. Diefenderfer, Morris Hoats, Thomas J. Koch, John Leh, James A. Miller, Henry G. Merkle, William P. Moyer, F. O. Ritter, Abraham Samuels, Jonas Schrader, James M. Schneider, Daniel Z. Walker and William R. Yeager. The deposits on April 6, 1914, amounted to $2,539,726.30, and the surplus and undivided profits were $306,431.10.

THE CITIZENS DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY began business Oct. 12, 1905, at 106 North Seventh street. The capital stock was $125,000, and L. D. Krause was president, and Fred H. Lichtenwalner, secretary and treasurer. The bank remained at this location two years, when it was removed to the Young building, its present location, at Hamilton and Hall streets. Dr. W. H. Hartzell succeeded Mr. Krause as president, but resigned in 1914, and Mr. Krause became acting president. On April 30, 1914, the surplus and undivided profits were $80,150.14, and deposits, $921,018.93. Mr. Lichtenwalner is still the secretary and treasurer; H. B. Koch is vice-president, and Frank Jacobs, trust officer. The board of directors are L. D. Krause, L. L. Anewalt, George F. Breinig, O. N. Clauss, William F. Bower, W. B. Fogelman, Joseph F. Gehringer, Fred B. Gerner, H. A. Grammes, F. T. L. Keiter, Dr. R. B. Klotz, H. B. Koch, George F. Knerr, H. J. Lerch, A. R. Lewis, and John C. Schwartz.

THE ALLENTOWN TRUST COMPANY was organized in 1907 and began business on Sept. 12, 1907, in the Commonwealth building. Hon. M. C. L. Kline was the first president and served until his death in 1911, when Edwin H. Stine became president. James L. Marsteller has been the secretary and treasurer since its organization. In 1910, the Romig property at the northeast corner of Hamilton and Law streets, was purchased for $40,000, and a granite and brick structure, 30 by 104 feet, was erected at a cost of $35,000. The second floor is divided into offices and contains a directors' room, while the first floor is used entirely for banking purposes.

The capital stock is $150,000; surplus, $98,513.42; deposits (Dec. 31, 1913), $749,690.69; and total trust funds, $387,584.04.

The directors are Avon Barnes, P. S. Fenstermacher, Henry D. Gross, Jacob W. Grim, William G. Grosscup, Samuel D. Lehr, O. E. Leh, William H. Ryan, Horace W. Schantz, George F. Seiberling, Harry E. Truchses, James N. Rhoda, Daniel F. Keller, T. F. Keck, William J. Gehringer, Charles Ziegenfus, Edwin H. Stine, Freeman Hawk, and Robert L. Schiffert.

THE RIDGE AVENUE DEPOSIT COMPANY, situated at 418 Ridge avenue, opened business on Oct. 15, 1912. Dr. William J. Hertz, is president; C. J. Burger is vice-president; Frank H. Marsh, cashier; and the directors, besides the above officials, are E. J. Ferry, William Holz, Stephen Koller, Walter C. Lotte, C. C. Marsh, C. F. Neuweiler, John Shigo, Robert F. Siegfried, Dr. F. B. Scheirer, L. Sussman, Neil Ward, and L. H. Yeager. The capital stock is $50,000. On July 27, 1914, the deposits were $156,000, and the surplus, $11,376.00.

THE PENN COUNTIES TRUST COMPANY opened business on Oct. 31, 1912, in the basement of the Haas building at Eighth and Hamilton streets, with Lawrence H. Rupp, as president, and Claude T. Reno, as secretary and treasurer. In 1912, the trust company purchased the building and the first floor was fitted up as a banking room and occupied April 1, 1913. The cost of the building and fixtures was $238,000. Mr. Rupp resigned as president on May 6, 1913, and Charles C. Kaiser succeeded him. M. Herbert Beary, who had been elected assistant secretary and treasurer on July 16, 1913, succeeded Mr. Reno as secretary and treasurer on his resignation, Sept. 2, 1913. Martin E. Kern is first vice-president; L. H. Yeager, second vice-president; H. A. Muschlitz, third vice-president, and Francis G. Lewis, trust officer. The capital stock is $300,000, fully paid; the surplus and undivided profits, $65,000, and deposits, $275,000. The directors are Henry W. Bloss, A. J. Buckley, George F. Erich, Joseph P. Fry, John Graeflin, Charles D. Geisinger, Francis J. Gildner, Joseph F. Gorman, W. J. W. Groves, Nathan A. Haas, Charles C. Kaiser, Martin E. Kern, E. G. M. Kuhns, John H. McDermott, H. A. Muschlitz, Elmer E. Ritter, Henry B. Schadt, W. A. Stein, Oscar H. Trexler, L. H. Yeager, and H. J. Weidinger.

OTHER BANKING INSTITUTIONS.—In 1867, the Macungie Savings Bank was established, which did a large business for some years, but made an assignment in 1878. Its president was David Schall. William C. Lichtenwallner was the first cashier, and was succeeded by John F. Weida.

C. M. Runk and Henry J. Saeger carried on a banking business for several years.

The Girard Savings Bank, of which Phaon Albright was the president, and H. K. and F. K. Hartzell, successively, the cashiers, was organized in 1868, and went into voluntary liquidation in 1877.

The Franklin Savings Bank was in existence ten years, from 1868, making an assignment in 1878. Its president was B. H. Miller, and cashier, J. E. Zimmerman.

The Empire Life Insurance and Trust Company, of which A. G. Reninger was president, and Morgan F. Medlar, cashier, began business in 1869, and closed in 1878.

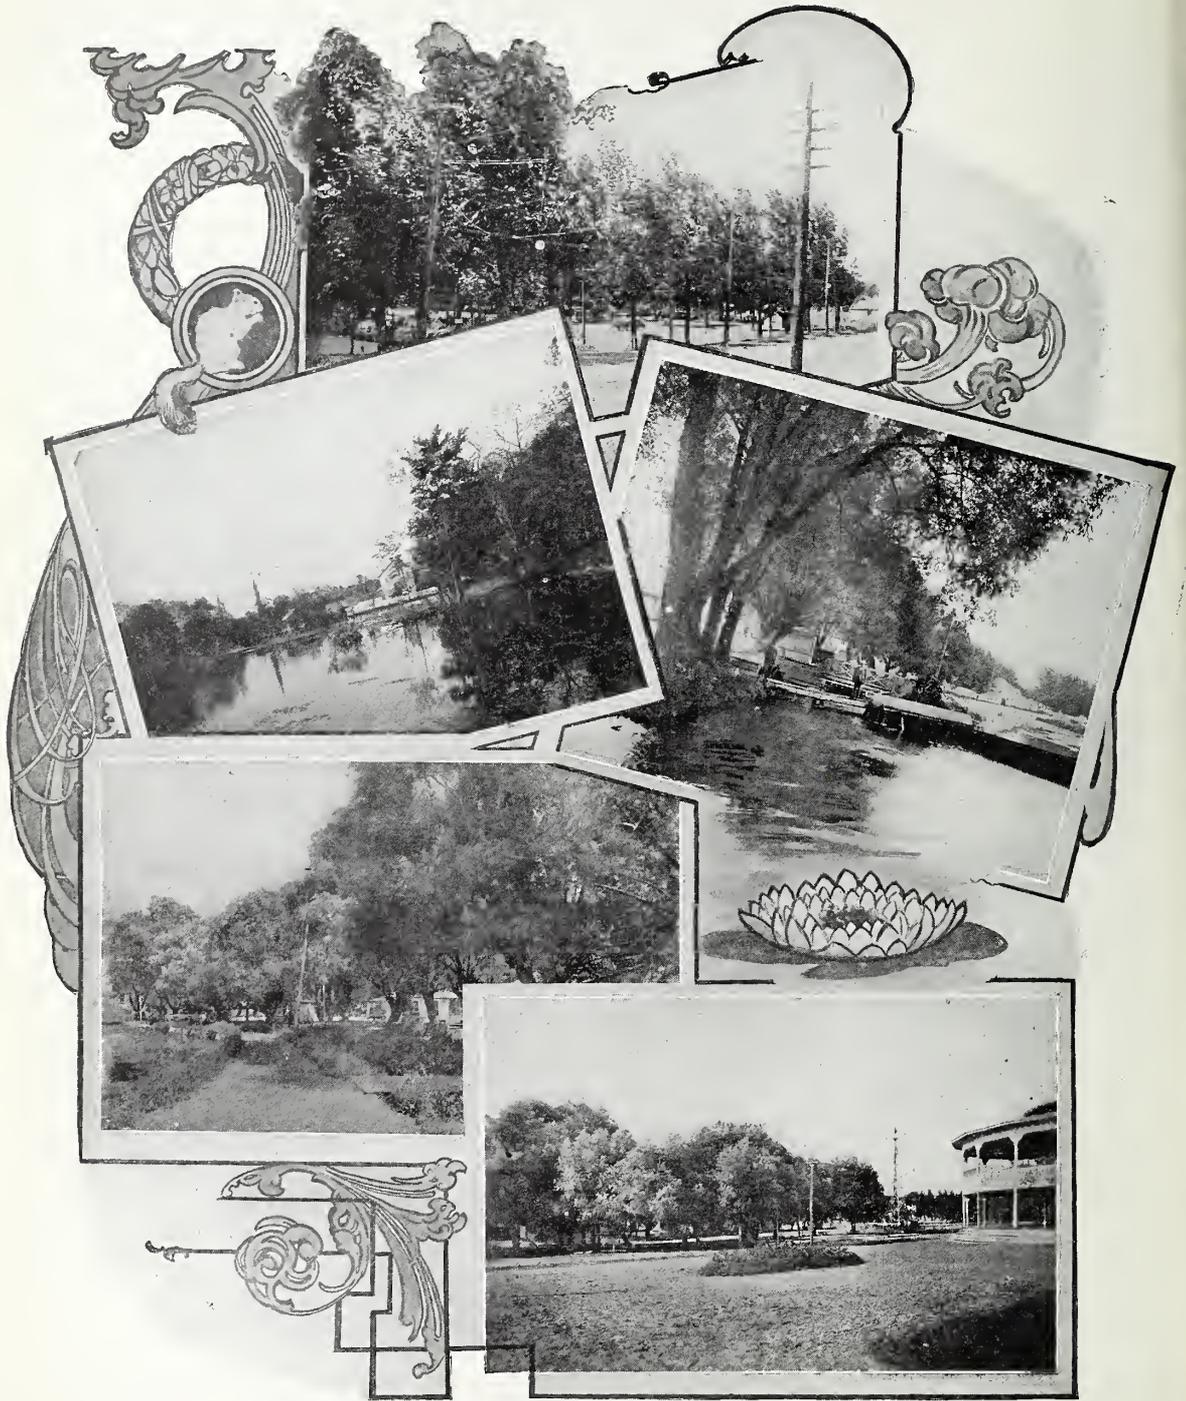

T. H. Good and Edward Ruhe, in partnership, carried on a banking business for several years.

The Erin Savings Bank, of which William L. Yohn was the proprietor, was established in 1870, and went into voluntary liquidation about five years later.

PARKS.

City Park, between Linden and Turner, and Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, was located on a plot 600 feet square, owned by the city and prepared as a park through the liberality of Col. H. C. Trexler. A band stand has been erected and the grounds beautified, so that the park has a valuation of nearly $250,000.

Allen Park, at Fourth and Walnut streets, was acquired by the city in 1908, having been formerly the Muhlenberg College property. Its picturesque grounds contain many stately old trees. The property contains the stone building known as Trout Hall, built in 1770 by the son of the founder of the city, and is admirably adapted to park purposes, furnishing a breathing spot for the congested section of the city.

VIEWS OF DORNEY PARK AND CENTRAL PARK.

Other parks are River Front park, along the Lehigh, and the park along the Little Lehigh, besides Central Park, a favorite resort along the trolley line at Rittersville and Dorney Park, on the line of the trolley system to Reading.

THEATRES.

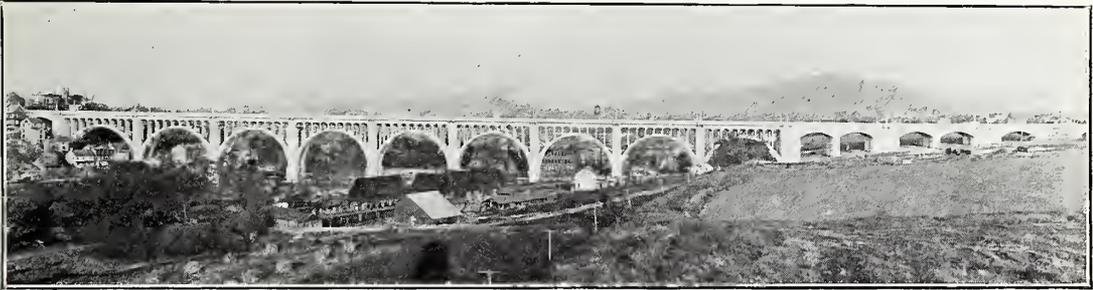

The first halls where entertainments in the town were held were the Court House, (where General Tom Thumb was exhibited in the '40's) the Free Hall, Odd Fellows' Hall and Kline's Hall. The Hagenbuch Opera House, on Hamilton street, above Eighth, (now owned by the John Bowen Grocery Company), was the first theatre in the city, built about 1870 and used as such until 1885, when Music Hall was built at the northeast corner of Sixth and Linden streets, the

From time to time notable musicians and lecturers appeared in this theatre. Since the erection of the Lyric theatre in 1899 it has been the leading play-house and assemblage hall in the city.

The Orpheum theatre, at 35-39 North Sixth street, during the season presents many entertaining attractions. Among the other theatres are the Lyceum, located on Hamilton street between Ninth and Tenth; the Pergola, on Hamilton street above Ninth; the Hippodrome, on Hamilton street above Sixth; the Victor, above Seventh; the Hamilton, at Second and Hamilton; together with a number of smaller moving picture houses in different sections of the city.

BRIDGES.

LINDEN STREET BRIDGE.—The stone bridge across the Jordan meadows at Linden street was erected in 1884 at an expense of $46,448. It was built by the county commissioners, and the name of which was later changed to the Academy of Music. In this theatre many noted actors have performed, such as Thomas Keene in Louis XI (1890); Mme. Janauschek in Macbeth (1890); Wilson Barrett in Hamlet (1892); Alex. Salvini in The Three Guardsmen (1893); Mrs. John Drew in The Rivals (1894), as well as many famous musicians. It was destroyed by fire in 1903. The Lyric Theatre, at Sixth and Court streets, was opened Oct. 10, 1899, with Lewis Morrison in Frederick the Great. The auditorium is 68 feet wide and has a depth of 129 feet, and was built with a seating capacity for 1,400 people. The architects were J. B. McElpatrick and Son, of New York.

EIGHTH STREET BRIDGE.

Many notable political gatherings have been held in the Lyric theatre among which were the Democratic State convention in 1910; the Progressive Assembly, which was addressed by former President Theodore Roosevelt in 1912; also the Democratic meeting during the same year which was addressed by Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, now President of the United States.

approaches by the city. It is 340 feet long and 50 feet wide, including the sidewalks each 7 feet wide, and has eight arches of stone.

The bridge over the Jordan on Gordon street was built by the county in 1889. The Allentown Rolling Mills were the designers and contractors. The stone bridge over the Little Lehigh was erected about 1820.

EIGHTH STREET BRIDGE.—A company was organized in November, 1900, for the building of a bridge between the city and South Allentown at South Eighth street, but after the abutments and piers had been built, the project was dropped until the Allentown Bridge Company was formed and a charter granted June 4, 1912. A reinforced concrete structure, 2,650 feet long, was built at a cost of $500,000, and opened for business on Nov. 18, 1913. Toll rates of one cent for foot passengers and from five to fifteen cents for vehicles are charged. The bridge is 138 feet above the Little Lehigh creek and 142½ feet above the bottom of the foundations. Its width is 46 feet, with a roadway of 32 feet. The contract was awarded July 29, 1912, to McArthur Bros., of New York, who used 45,000 barrels of cement, 36,000 tons of crushed stone, 20,000 tons of sand and 1,100,000 pounds of reinforcing steel rods in the structure, which contains 29,500 cubic yards of concrete.

FLOODS.—In 1869, a flood occurred which caused considerable damage at Allentown and along the valley.

On Aug. 25, 1901, a flood in the Lehigh and neighboring streams caused considerable damage. Between two and three P. M. the stream rose rapidly, until the dam was completely submerged. The spray shot up to the bridge, the current reaching within six feet of the floor. The water reached the highest point at 10:15 P. M.

The cause of the flood was a heavy downpour of rain in the coal regions and the breaking of the Hudsonale reservoir at Hazleton. The flood was described in a daily newspaper as follows:

"In Allentown a great deal of damage resulted. The water early in the evening flowed steadily into the plant of the Allentown Electric Light & Power Company, and the Traction company power-house. By 8 P. M. the electric light service was crippled and many houses were without lights. The water filled the pits of the fly wheels and the Allen steamer was secured to keep them dry, but the rushing waters came too fast and the Good Will reserve engine was also gotten out.

"The trolley service began to suffer by 8 o'clock, just as the people were coming into town from the outlying districts. Hundreds wished they had never left, for they got home early next morning as best they could. Five out of the seven pits at the power house were inundated. But two engines, whose pits were higher than the others, escaped any damage and with these going, the trolley service was kept moving. For several hours on Saturday night there was no semblance of running cars. Many walked home on the Bethlehem pike. One woman was seen strolling along in the darkness with four children, the oldest scarcely able to walk. The conductors and motormen also walked. By 2 A. M. a number of cars were run, but none ventured to run from town. At Sixth and Hamilton streets, there were six cars standing from 2 to 5 A. M. loaded with sleeping passengers. The American Hotel porch and the entrance to Gross' restaurant were crowded with persons during the wait.

"Because of the trolley washout, the L. V. R. R. ran special trains between Cementon and Bethlehem at midnight. The electric light service was improved during the day and last evening there was a general service.

"Butcher E. A. Krause's shop was flooded and a 40-foot embankment was washed away. Arbogast & Bastian's abattoir was filled and much damage resulted.

"In the stone house on the north side of Hamilton street at the bridge, the families of Joseph Pieber and Frank Smith reside, who kept boarders. Every now and then a piece of household goods would be carried away and one of the women would run after it. They carried their goods to the second floor. The water stood almost two feet on the first floor. A large number of cellars in the First ward were flooded.

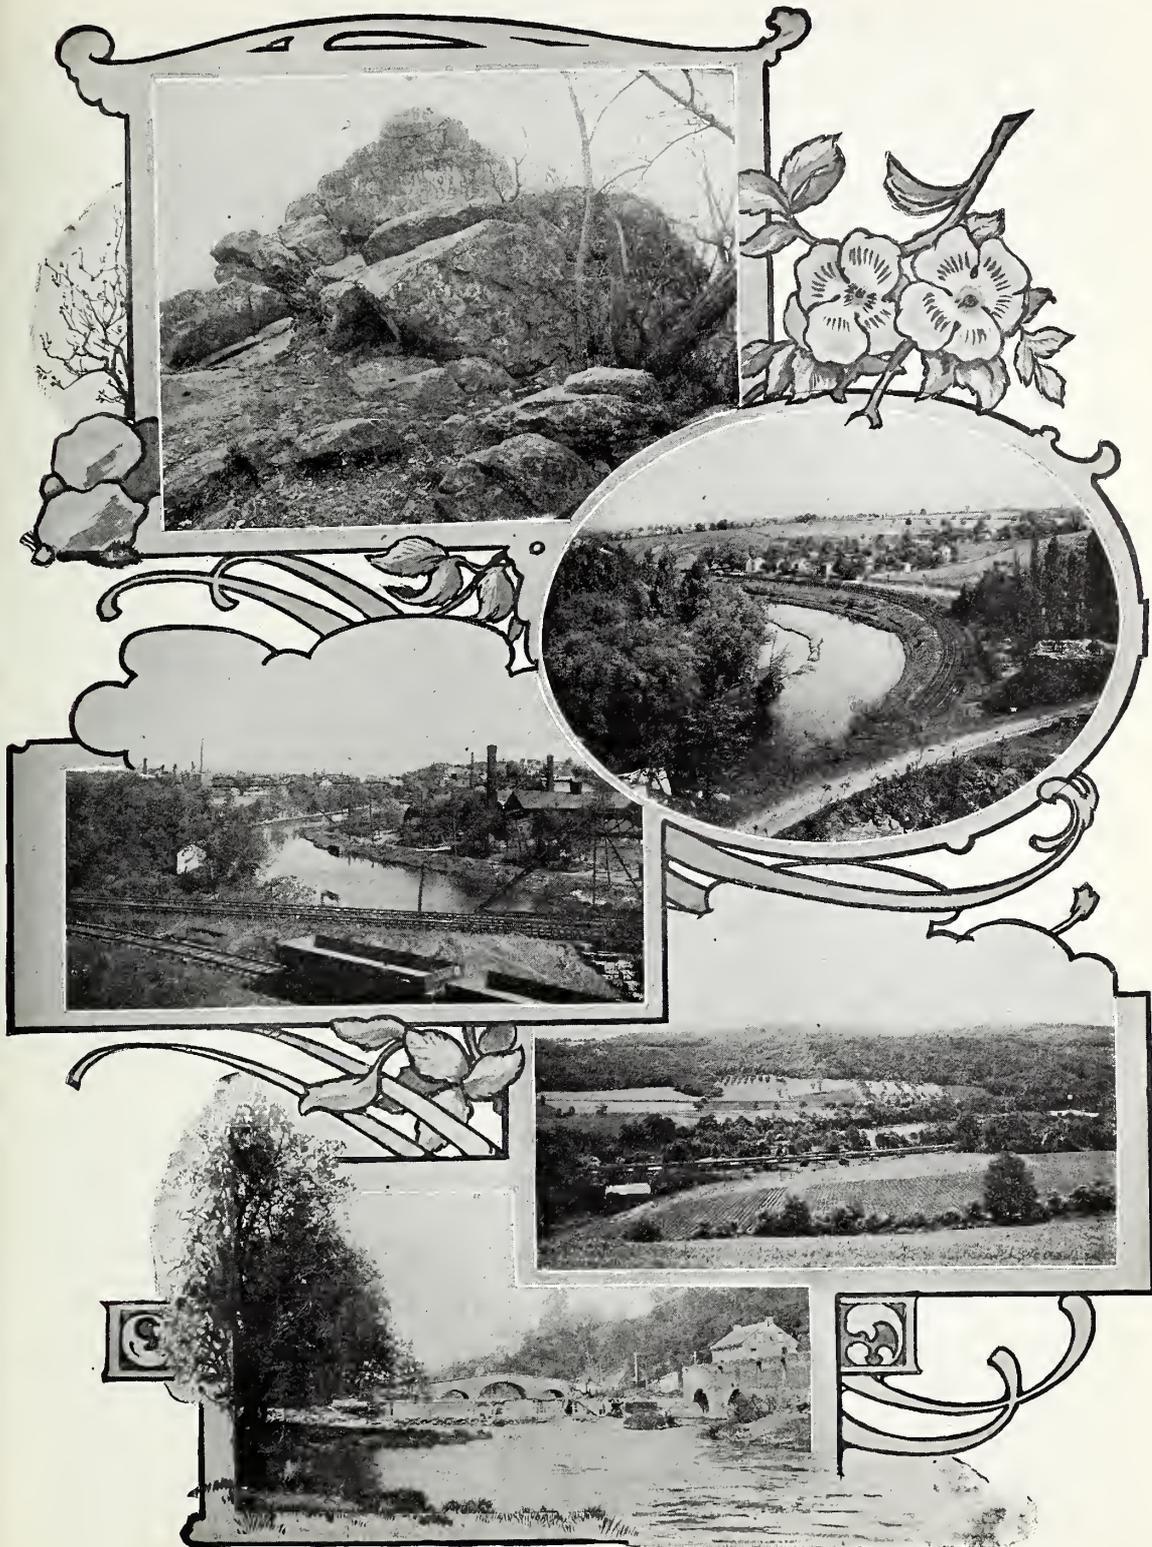

"Below the bridge nothing could be seen excepting the roof of the home of Mrs. Charles Kline, on Kline's Island. The loss of Charles H. Kline, the truck farmer, was $500. One of the garbage teams was caught in a hole and the horse was saved by cutting the harness. Mrs. Kline's house bears the marks of the freshets of 1862 and 1869. The former mark is under the window sill of the first floor and the latter about three feet below. At Stine's Island, up the river, the water reached the door of Peter Stine's house.

"The overflow caused great back water in the Jordan and Little Lehigh. The South Allentown car barn was threatened with a flood and the cars were all run out. The water did not rise that high, however. At the wire mill there was a relief gang to prevent damage.

"The Jordan backed up high and flooded part of the meadows at the Adelaide silk mills. A number of the employes were called out to save the silk from damage. The reserve steamer yesterday worked from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. getting the water out.

"Navigation was suspended before noon. A boat that came here then tied up near Kimmet's lock. The horses in the stable at the Atlantic Refining Co.'s plant near the Biery limekilns, were rescued when the water was up to their bodies."

FLOOD OF 1902.—A rain storm, accompanied by violent and most unusual thunder and lightning, visited Allentown and vicinity on February 28, 1902, which caused much damage to different industries, more especially in the Cedar creek and Little Lehigh valley, and the suspension of the trolley service to the great inconvenience of the people. The meadows were so flooded by noon that the Kutztown cars could not cross the bridge at Griesemerville, and the dam at Dorney Park was drawn off because it was feared that the banks might be washed away by the raging torrent. Shortly afterward, the dam was destroyed and the volume in the narrow defile was three feet higher than ever before known. Below Dorney's, all the fields were inundated on both sides of the creek to the hillsides.

THE BIG ROCKS AND VIEWS ALONG THE LEHIGH AND LITTLE LEHIGH RIVERS.

The bridge above the Duck Farm Hotel and the fences were washed away. The butcher shop and electric power-house were flooded, even the boiler room of the waterworks was filled so high that the public service had to be shut down for the first time since it was established there in 1887. The meadow at Third and Union streets and the railroad bridge at Biery's limekilns were covered, and the furniture factory of Johnson & Schwartz had to be closed.

In South Allentown the cars were removed from the trolley car barn, the wire mill, and Gabriel's woolen mill were flooded, and only from the east and north could the city be reached. The Adelaide silk mill shut down at 2:30 P. M. Business was nearly suspended.

The Little Lehigh reached almost to Lawrence street. The Jordan rose 25 feet above low water mark at Allentown.

The Lehigh river, by the marks shown on Kline's Island, was 22 inches higher than the flood of 1862 when the river had reached a point 65 inches above the first floor. The flood of 1869 was 47 inches.

The damage to property on this occasion exceeded that of 1862; but the loss of life was less because the flood was in daytime, while that of 1862 took place principally in the night-time.

The bridge across the river at Allentown, and the Central Railroad bridge at Kline's Island, were swept away. Many bridges along the Little Lehigh and Jordan were swept away or damaged. The loss to bridges alone amounted to more than $400,000; and the total loss in the entire county was estimated at $1,000,000.

ASSOCIATIONS.

LEHIGH COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Sixty-two years ago a number of leading farmers and enterprising citizens became interested in the project of forming an agricultural society, which was to have for its aim "the improvement and advancement of agriculture, horticulture, live stock, and domestic and mechanic arts."

Several counties in Massachusetts and other States had organized such societies, and were holding annual fairs which were doing much good in promoting the interests of agriculture in those communities.

A series of meetings were held during the years of 1850 and 1851 at the Eagle Hotel, Allentown, and at Ruchsville, Breinigsville, and Millerstown. The first one, however, at which definite action was taken, convened at the public house of William Leisenring, in Egypt, Whitehall township, on Jan. 24, 1852, Daniel Beisel acting as president, and Dr. D. A. Moser as secretary. There it was resolved to organize an agricultural society for Lehigh county, and to this end a committee consisting of Messrs. Jesse M. Line, of Allentown; John Yost, of Salisbury; Charles Witman, of Saucon; Charles Foster, of Upper Milford; James F. Weiler, of Lower Macungie; William Mink, of Upper Macungie; Jacob Grim, of Weisenburg; Joseph Moser, of Lynn; David Knerr, of Lowhill; Andrew Peter, of Heidelberg; John Fenstermacher, of Washington; Edward Kohler, of North Whitehall; Peter Mickley, of South Whitehall; Charles Ritter, of Hanover; and George Beisel, of Northampton, was appointed to prepare a constitution and report at an adjourned meeting to be held in the room of the commissioners, in the Court House at Allentown, Feb. 3, 1852. On that day the meeting was held at the place designated, and an address, strongly favoring the project, was delivered by Hon. Robert E. Wright, Sr. A constitution was read and adopted, after which an organization was effected and officers chosen for the new society. Edward Kohler, Esq., who had taken a prominent part in the movement, was elected the first president. This position he worthily filled until 1855. Fifteen vice-presidents were chosen, one from each township; Mr. Jesse M. Line was elected recording secretary; Dr. David A. Moser, corresponding secretary, and Owen L. Schreiber, treasurer.

THE FIRST FAIR.

Preparations were immediately begun for the holding of the first Lehigh county agricultural fair. Allentown, being at that time already a flourishing town and also the county seat, was selected as the most convenient place for this purpose. East of Fourth street, between Walnut and Union streets, lay a desirable five acre plot of ground, owned by Messrs. Pretz and Weinshimer, considered suitable for such an undertaking. Booths and tents were put up to shelter and protect the displays, and here it was on October 6th, 7th, 8th, 1852, that the first exhibition was held. The whole plot was enclosed by a white muslin screen, seven feet high, intended to prevent outsiders from viewing the show, and if it did not entirely serve that purpose, it must have revealed only enough to arouse double interest, for it is recorded that the fair was successful beyond the hopes of the most sanguine, and that the receipts amounted to twelve hundred dollars.

Among the features of the fair were the addresses delivered during the successive days. The first one was at "early candle light," on the grounds by Robert E. Wright, Sr.; the second by George W. Foering, in the Court House; and the third, a German address, at the close of the fair, by Rev. Jeremiah Schindel. The premiums paid for the exhibits amounted in all to one hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty cents.

SELECTION OF A PERMANENT LOCATION.

So generally had the people of Allentown and Lehigh county become interested in the new enterprise, that a second fair was proposed. The managers at once felt warranted in taking steps to make this feature of the society a permanent institution. With this end in view they leased a tract of land in the northwestern section of the town, north of Libery, between Fifth and Sixth streets, containing about eight acres. This property was owned by William Mattern and afterward secured by purchase, at a cost of two thousand dollars. To this were added three acres and five perches, bought for one thousand and eighty-five dollars and eighty-four cents, from Owen Saeger. The deeds for both properties were recorded on Jan. 1, 1856, in Deed Book Vol. 19, pages 450 and 533, etc.

In the spring of 1853 the Mattern tract was enclosed by a board fence; a frame cottage style ticket office, and a two-story frame exhibition hall were erected, and other temporary structures put up. Here the second fair of the Association was held, on Sept. 28th, 29th and 30th of the same year, and with even more gratifying results, in every respect, than the first one. It really marked the beginning of that wonderful success which attended the later operations of the society. A representation of the original buildings and their surroundings in this location, still forms the central scene on the certificates of stock issued by the association. Later on, two wings were added to the main building, changing its form into that of a Roman cross, and making it more commodious and better adapted for exhibition purposes. The office building was also enlarged to serve as a dwelling and dining-room during the fairs. Subsequently a race track of about one-third of a mile was laid out, a grand stand erected, and other necessary improvements made.

It was at an early period, too, that the shade trees were planted, which in after years served to make the old fair grounds one of the loveliest and most attractive spots in Allentown.

RE-ORGANIZATION AND INCORPORATION.

In 1854 it was thought advisable to re-organize the society and to form a stock company. Therefore, a new constitution, embodying all the wisest and most desirable provisions found in the constitutions of other societies, was framed, and the proposition for a change laid before the members at the annual meeting held in February, 1855. The plan contemplated the issuing of shares of stock, at ten dollars each, but permitting no person to hold more than one share at the same time, nor allowing any member to draw dividends from the funds of the association. This movement was sanctioned and the constitution adopted, with the result that on the 13th day of August, 1855, the society was incorporated under a general act. Since then the change has proven itself a most gratifying one. As dividends on stocks were prohibited by the constitution, the receipts of the society, in excess of the necessary expenses, have been expended in the purchase of real estate, improvement of the grounds, erection and repair of buildings, and in the payment of premiums, all of which has kept the society in a most flourishing condition.

Even at this early period the fame of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society spread abroad throughout Eastern Pennsylvania, attracting immense throngs of people to its fairs, which, indeed, were always creditable.

One of the most interesting features of those old-time fairs was the public announcement of the award of the premiums on the last day of the exhibition. This announcement was usually made by Hon. R. E. Wright, Sr., and W. J. Hoxworth, Esq., and listened to by hundreds of interested exhibitors.

Among the principal attractions during those annual gatherings was the flying coach, with its improvised orchestra, located on the southeastern section of the enclosure and operated by Mr. Stephen Lentz. Mr. Lentz continued to furnish this amusement from year to year until the society abandoned the old ground.

Exhibitions were held annually with highly encouraging results until 1862, when, however, no fair was held. During that year the great Civil War was overshadowing the country, having already brought sorrow and mourning to many families in the county.

In October of the same year, the grounds of the society were occupied by seven companies of the 176th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, as a rendezvous, before being mustered into the service of the United States. These were Company A, Captain Levi Smoyer; Company B, Captain S. D. Lehr; Company D, Captain David Schadt; Company E, Captain Tilghman Schleider; Company G, Captain L. P. Hecker; Company I, Captain Lewis Harmony; and Company K, Captain George Neitz. From this place they marched in a body to the Lehigh Valley station to proceed to the seat of war.

The old fair grounds, in fact, during the thirty-five years that it was under the control of the society, furnishes many interesting reminiscences of events in the history of Lehigh county.

In June, 1875, a Centennial Fair and Tea Party was held here, under the auspices of the Lehigh County Ladies' Centennial Association, of which Mrs. S. B. Lewis was president; Mrs. A. C. Pretz, secretary; and Mrs. Jacob H. Saeger, treasurer. The object of the enterprise was to raise funds in behalf of the Great Centennial Fair, that was to be held the following year in Philadelphia, in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Republic. One of the main features of the local fair was a sham battle, reproducing the Bunker Hill contest at the beginning of the Revolutionary War. The participants in this engagement were the Allen Continentals, Putnam Rifles, Reading Rifles, Putnam Guards, and a company of Minute Men, representing the Americans, under the command of General McAllister, aided by Col. Ruch. The Easton Greys, Allen Rifles, Sheridan Guards and the Sixth Ward Red Coats, commanded by Col. T. H. Good, represented the British side.

A Rhode Island clam bake under the supervision of Mr. R. A. Thayer and Judge A. B. Longaker was one of the noted features. Other interesting attractions were the exhibition of old relics and reproduction of scenes of by-gone days. Besides all these a quartette of Tyrolese singers in Swiss costume enlivened the occasion.

The fair was a success financially and otherwise, netting over three thousand dollars for the Centennial cause, and affording a season of enjoyment for the people of Allentown and Lehigh county.

During the railroad riots in 1877, the 4th Regiment of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, under the command of Col. T. H. Good, encamped for a short time on the grounds after their return from the deplorable encounter with the rioters in the railroad cut at Reading, Pa., and awaited further developments.

The use of the grounds was also frequently granted for Fourth of July celebrations, political gatherings, Sunday school picnics, and for other assemblages. The place was much sought after for such occasions, because of its proximity to the heart of the town, and, especially, because of the beautiful trees, which by this time had grown large and furnished delightful shade and a home for countless blackbirds, whose chattering will always be associated with the old fair grounds.

After 1862 the annual exhibitions were resumed and held regularly, with increased interest and success. The exhibits became more numerous, and the attendance so large that the want of space became a matter of serious concern. Already in the early seventies the imperative necessity of acquiring additional territory was foreseen, and action was taken towards securing land lying east of the fair grounds, owned by Dr. George Elliger and Charles Seagraves. Also, at the time when Sixth street was opened, north of Liberty street, the purchase of the triangular strip of land between the old road and the newly opened Sixth street was agitated, but neither of these projects was ever carried out.

ENLARGING THE AREA OF THE OLD FAIR GROUND.

The only increase in the area of the old ground that was ever secured was accomplished through the efforts of Hon. Jeremiah Roth. He entered into an agreement with Robert J. Yeager in 1882, for the use of two acres of land, lying immediately north of the fair grounds, for a term of fifteen years, at an annual rental of one hundred and eighty dollars. This addition gave the society a territory of fourteen acres, and so afforded some relief, but only for a time. The grounds were still inadequate and the buildings too small for the operations of the growing institution.

Then much dissatisfaction was felt, besides, on account of the short racetrack and the small grandstand, which were all the society could boast of. Although there was no desire to turn the society into a trotting association, still it was felt that to keep abreast with the times, it was necessary to secure a half-mile track and a grandstand capable of seating thousands of spectators and stabling for upwards of a hundred speed horses.

The successful fairs of 1885 and 1886 further increased the dissatisfaction with the old fair grounds. Renewed efforts were now made for expansion. Committee after committee were appointed, and plans were proposed and considered for enlargement by purchasing additional land from surrounding property owners and vacating intervening streets, but all these efforts, too, proved fruitless. It was not until the ten thousand dollar mark of the receipts, at the fair of 1888, was reached, that action was taken, resulting in a change of location and in the securing of a larger site.

THE NEW FAIR GROUNDS.

The new fair, or the Great Allentown Fair, as it soon became known, dates from the year 1889. At a meeting of the executive committee, held Oct. 26, 1888, the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas the present grounds of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society are inadequate to accommodate so large an attendance as we have had at the last annual fair, and

"Whereas the speed horse is becoming one of the main features in agricultural exhibitions,

"Therefore it be resolved, That a committee of five be appointed, to be styled a committee to purchase ground for the Lehigh County Agricultural society, to locate and purchase such grounds as they deem suitable, either in connection with the present grounds of the society, or some other land suitably located for the use of a fair ground, erection of buildings, and the construction of a half-mile track, for the purpose of holding annual exhibitions of the said Lehigh County Agricultural Society, and report the same to a special meeting of the stockholders of said Society, to be called by the president before the first day of January, 1889, for the approval or rejection of said report."

The committee then appointed consisted of Messrs. F. B. Heller, H. J. Schantz, T. K. Klein, Isaac S. Roeder, and Joseph Hecker. At the special meeting called on Dec. 29, 1888, this committee submitted their report embodying three distinct propositions, describing properties as suitable sites, to wit:

(1). That the society remain at the old place, and increase the area of its ground to about twenty-two and a half acres by the purchase of tracts of land from surrounding property owners;

(2). That a new location be secured by the purchase, from Solomon Griesemer, S. D. Lehr, and Catharine Newhard, of about thirty-seven acres, situate in South Whitehall township, immediately west of the city limits, on Seventeenth street, between Chew and Liberty streets, or,

(3). That the society purchase from the West End Improvement Company, several tracts of land known as the Runk farm, bounded on the east by Thirteenth street; on the west by Sixteenth street and the Weaver estate; on the north by Liberty street; and on the south, partly by Chew street and partly by the public road, known as Old Turner street, containing about thirty-three acres.

Each proposition was carefully considered by the stockholders, who finally resolved unanimously to purchase the Griesemer tract, including the Lehr and Newhard lots, at the price named in the report, to wit, $19,310.00. The purchase of this site was subsequently consummated, the officers having been directed to take conveyances for the several tracts, and make arrangements for the payment of the purchase money. Deeds for the same were recorded April 4, 1889, in Deed Book, Vol. 100, pages 72 to 77.

SALE OF THE OLD FAIR GROUNDS.

At the annual meeting of the society held Feb. 5, 1889, the president, recording secretary, and treasurer were authorized and directed to sell the old fair grounds at public sale to the highest bidder, as a whole, or in such plots as they might deem advisable, to realize the largest amount, at a sum not less than $28,000. They were also authorized to sell certificates of stock for a period of sixty days, at twenty-five dollars a share, the aggregate number of shares of stock of the association, however, not to exceed one thousand.

At the same meeting, the committee on site, as heretofore constituted, together with the president, Hon. Jeremiah Roth, the recording secretary, Captain L. P. Hecker, and the treasurer, Mr. Joseph Hecker, were designated a building committee to prepare the new grounds for the use of the society and to plan and erect the necessary and proper buildings.

In accordance with these instructions, the officers had the old grounds cut into plots, with intervening streets, and sold the entire tract, in separate plots, at a public sale held at the Eagle Hotel, at Allentown, Pa., March 1, 1889, for $35,000.62, reserving the right to remove all the buildings except the ticket office and dwelling.

They also sold, during the period of sixty days as above set forth, one hundred and forty-four new shares of stock, at twenty-five dollars a share, realizing thirty-six hundred dollars.

With these funds in hand, the building committee proceeded with the work of fitting up the new grounds, and erecting the necessary buildings and other equipments, for the future use of the society.

Many of the structures were transferred from the old grounds and re-erected on the new with some changes and additions. These were the Mechanics' Hall, Floral Hall, and the refreshment stand; all the horse, cattle, sheep, and swine sheds, and the poultry house. The accommodations for horses being, however, considered insufficient, a row of fifty new box stalls, intended exclusively for the use of speed horses, was added.

The main exhibition hall on the old grounds was not removed, as it was considered wiser and more advantageous to build a new one, in size and design better adapted to meet the wants of the society in the new location. The building erected for this purpose is a substantial structure, eighty by two hundred feet, one-story high, affording sixteen thousand square feet of space with sufficient light, show cases, and other permanent fixtures conveniently arranged for exhibiting needlework, fine arts, and miscellaneous displays.

As the desire to secure a half-mile track was one of the dominant reasons for seeking larger grounds, the attainment of this object was not lost sight of. Col. S. D. Lehr, civil engineer, was chosen to lay out a track of this character, and the work of properly grading it was awarded to Mr. F. C. H. Schweyer. Seth Griffin, a professional track builder, was engaged to put on the top dressing. They were instructed to build it in accordance with the principles and contour recognized as the best by the ablest and most experienced turfmen. This resulted in the completion of a half-mile track of oval shape, fifty feet wide on the back stretch and eighty feet on the home stretch, with proper slopes at the turns. This is now regarded as one of the finest half-mile tracks in the country, and today holds a mark that equals the world's half-mile record of 2.04 $\frac{3}{4}$, in a pacing race.

The grandstand, erected at the same time, and considered sufficiently large enough then to accommodate those interested in the trials of speed, was a substantial building, forty by two hundred feet, with a seating capacity of about twenty-five hundred. The first floor was provided with fixtures for restaurant and dining rooms, and also for the headquarters of the president, secretary, and the entry clerks.

A two-story frame cottage building, with porches on the eastern and southern sides, was erected at the corner of Seventeenth and Chew streets, as quarters for the treasurer and his clerks, and also to serve as a dwelling for the overseer of the grounds. The turnstiles and gates for the entrance and exit were located to the north and west of this building.

Among the attractions which led the members of the society to choose the Griesemer tract for the new site was a natural grove, which extends along Seventeenth street, the entire width of the grounds. This grove was preserved intact for the comfort of visitors, and no stands were allowed to be erected in the central part of it. To further beautify the same, the fountain from the old grounds was removed there and built on an elevated spot. Comfortable benches were constructed around the trees, and subsequently, also, a band stand was located there.

The city water mains were extended to the grounds, the water distributed over the premises, and hydrants erected at suitable points. All other necessary conveniences and facilities were provided, and the grounds enclosed by a neatly painted fence, six and a half feet high. When all this work was accomplished, the date fixed for holding the annual fair had arrived. The money expended up to that time for the construction of the track, erection of buildings, and all other equipments on the grounds amounted to forty-three thousand two hundred and fifty-four dollars and sixty cents.

THE FIRST EXHIBITION ON THE NEW GROUNDS, SEVENTEENTH AND CHEW STREETS.

Great preparations were made for the first fair on the grounds in the new location. Liberal premiums were offered, special attractions secured, and other features introduced to insure the success of the enterprise. The efforts of the officers were heartily seconded by the people at large, and resulted in the completeness of an exhibition in every department, never equalled before in the history of the society. The exhibits were numerous and all the displays of an excellent character. The managers were greatly encouraged and anticipated a large attendance. But alas! Their sanguine expectations were not realized. The weather was so unpropitious during the entire week of the fair, that the attendance failed to come up to their calculations, and the newly opened grounds were in such a bad condition that no racing could take place on the track.

The latter fact was almost a sorer disappointment than the small attendance at the fair, as trials of speed on the new course were especially desired. Unwilling that the season should close without any opportunity to enjoy this pleasure, the managers decided to hold a special trotting meeting three weeks after the close of the fair. The response to this meeting on the part of the horsemen was gratifying and resulted in a very successful venture. The weather was all that could be desired, and the merits of the new track were shown, in the remarkable record of that time, in a mark of 2.22 $\frac{1}{4}$.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather during the fair, and the increased expenses incurred in holding the special meeting, the financial results were highly satisfactory. The combined receipts amounted to twelve thousand and six hundred dollars and eighty-one cents, and the disbursements, including premiums, purses, and expenses, nine thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars and ninety-four cents, netting a profit of two thousand eight hundred and forty-seven dollars and eighty-seven cents.

The interest in the succeeding exhibitions in all departments increased to such an extent that additional accommodations had to be provided in the shape of box stables for speed horses, cattle sheds, and other facilities for exhibition purposes.

It soon also became evident that the grandstand was inadequate to accommodate all those wishing to see the racing attractions. This subject assumed so urgent an aspect in 1894 that an addition of forty feet by one hundred and fifty feet was built at the western end of the stand, and the basement fitted up with other conveniences and for exhibiting carriages.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE NEW FAIR GROUNDS.

The expediency of securing more land for the purpose of improving and enlarging the new grounds, after an occupancy of a few years, also challenged the attention of the association. A step in this direction while adjoining land could still be bought was furthermore considered highly important, even if not needed for immediate use, in order to obviate the difficulty experienced formerly in an endeavor to enlarge the old grounds. Hence at the annual meeting of the society in February, 1897, this idea took definite shape, and resulted in the appointment of a committee of five, consisting of Hon. Edward Harvey, Col. H. C. Trexler, Captain L. P. Hecker, Mr. T. K. Klein and Hon. Jeremiah Roth, with power and authority to purchase a tract lying immediately on the western limits of the ground. This committee secured the tract in question from the heirs of Solomon Griesemer, deceased, containing eleven acres and one hundred and five and six-tenths perches, at a cost of $5,830.00, the title papers for which are recorded in the Recorder's office at Allentown, Pa., in Deed Book Vol. 143, and page 33, etc.

This purchase increased the area of the present grounds to fifty-one acres and four perches, and it now constitutes one of the finest and most valuable properties of its kind in this section of the state. Its surface slopes gently toward the north, and is most admirably adapted for the arrangement of the various attractions that enter into the makeup of an agricultural fair.

In 1898 a new horse exhibition building, thirty by three hundred feet, was put up. This is a building of striking appearance, and affords ample space for exhibiting the live stock in this department. About the same time, the old horse stables and cattle sheds were removed to the rear end of the newly acquired tract, thereby providing a larger space for the display of farming implements and machinery.

During this year the need of better accommodations for exhibiting field and orchard products, as well as poultry, became also a matter of urgent necessity. The executive committee, in their report submitted at the annual meeting of the society in 1899, recommended the erection of two buildings to meet this want. These recommendations were approved by stockholders and the erection of such buildings, as well as a band stand in the grove, was authorized. The improvements thus decided upon, were completed during that year, and now form three of the most tasteful structures on the new grounds.

The agricultural hall and the poultry house are especially conveniently arranged, with ample space and light for the display of the products in these two respective departments.

The band stand is of a neat shell-shape design and well suited for musical performances.

Further improvements were projected and carried out. These included an executive building, a number of ticket offices, and additional turnstiles erected during the year 1900, which furnish excellent facilities for transacting the business of the society with ease and dispatch.

On the night of the last day of the exhibition in 1900, the greater portion of the horse stables along the western limit of the fair grounds, was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $2,627.25, which, however, was fully covered by insurance. These were replaced by substantial new buildings in the following year.

THE SEMI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

The year 1901 marked the climax of the history of the society. It was the year for the semi-centennial celebration. The exhibits and amusements of that year far outshone in excellence those of previous years. Every effort was made to make it the banner year, and the earnest efforts of the officers of the society were justly rewarded by the attendance of thousands, many of whom had travelled long distances that they might be present.

The gates were open to the public for six successive days, from September 23d to 28th, and during that entire week all roads led to the Great Allentown Fair.

The music rendered by several bands was an important feature. The famous Allentown Band, assisted by eminent soloists from New York and Philadelphia, sent sweet strains through the grove and grounds each day of the exhibition.

Unique performances by daring equilibrists, wonderful acrobats, skilled bicycle riders, and others, entertained those on the grand stand between the races.

The Midway, which was as extensive as it was varied, contained several attractions imported from the Buffalo Exposition, and contributed largely to make the fiftieth anniversary a notable and interesting one.

All the departments were well filled with creditable displays of products from the farm, the household and the work-shop. The main exhibition hall presented an attractive appearance, the exhibits in the section set apart for the handiwork of ladies being exceptionally fine, and showing to better advantage than ever before. The merchants' displays, which occupied a large portion of this building, consisted of some of the most attractive articles in the various lines of trade represented, and, in the tasteful manner in which they were arranged, furnished a pleasing sight.

Farming implements, machinery, and carriages constituted a collection of exhibits on an extensive scale, of excellent workmanship and finish. This feature of the exhibition afforded a suggestive object lesson, highly appreciated by thousands of visitors, who studied it with the keenest interest.

The speed programme included a number of stake races for large purses, but the star attraction came off on Wednesday, September 25th, in a special match race between Prince Albert and Little Boy, two of the fastest pacers on the turf. Long before the time set for this great event all seats on the enlarged grand stand were taken and many spectators found there was standing room only. This race proved to be one of the exciting features of the fair, and resulted in the lowering of the track record to 2.04 $\frac{3}{4}$, equalling that of the world's record on a half-mile track in a pacing race.

Throughout the week the weather was delightful, a most fortunate circumstance in favor of the success of the celebration. The attendance was unusually large on each day, but especially on Wednesday, when it surpassed that of any corresponding day. "Big Thursday" maintained its reputation of former years, when again the crowd was equally large, and, in the aggregate for the week, the largest during the existence of the institution. The fair was a success financially. The receipts amounted to over $48,000, largely exceeding those of any exhibition held in the past.

With pardonable pride the managers can look upon the record established during the semi-centennial year, and congratulate themselves upon its splendid showing.

The celebration marked the closing period of half a century of steady progress of the society. Its aim, as laid down in the constitution, is the improvement and advancement of agriculture, horticulture, live stock, and the domestic and mechanic arts. This object has steadily been kept in view during that period and emphasized at each recurring exhibition.

It may not be amiss to add that the society's existence has not been in vain, for the community at large has been benefitted, directly and indirectly. The latest agricultural implements and products have been introduced to many a tiller of the soil, with the gratifying result that labor has been lessened and the harvest multiplied and improved; stock raising has been wonderfully promoted; the good housewife has had the opportunity of learning new methods and styles pertaining to her department; and the pleasure seeker has been entertained in many ways.

The society has proven to be a useful and desirable institution. During the last sixty years many county fairs have risen and fallen; a number are now on the verge of dissolution; but if this society will continue to be conducted in the exemplary manner which has distinguished it for many years, it is safe to predict for the Great Allentown Fair a long and prosperous future.

In 1908 and 1909, cement pavements and gutters were laid on Chew and Seventeenth streets, a new cattle shed, costing $3,200, was built; an addition was made to the poultry building, costing $5,000, including coops; and an addition of seventy-five feet was made to Machinery Hall. In 1912, new cattle sheds, costing $15,000, were completed. In 1913, Chew street and the square at Seventeenth and Chew, were asphalted at an expense of $14,000.

The new concrete and steel grand stand, with a seating capacity of between 8,000 and 9,000 people, was built in 1911, at a total cost of $110,000. In the same year two subways were built under the race track, new cattle sheds were built, new macadam walks laid, a new hotel built at Seventeenth and Liberty streets, and the grounds beautified. In 1912, the price of admission was changed from twenty-five to fifty cents by vote of the stockholders, which action was in 1913 made a part of the constitution. The attendance on Thursday, 1913, was 80,000.

RECEIPTS.

The following table shows the annual receipts from the organization of the society to the present time, from which an idea may be obtained of the large increase in the attendance and growth of the institution, to wit:

1852,	$1,200	1870,	5,118
1853,	2,200	1871,	7,359
1854,	2,700	1872,	8,000
1855,	4,000	1873,	8,862
1856,	2,600	1874,	7,813
1857,	2,300	1875,	7,185
1858,	2,470	1876,	4,465
1859,	2,555	1877,	5,781
1860,	2,710	1878,	5,902
1861,	1,883	1879,	6,436
1862,	No Fair	1880,	7,198
1863,	2,579	1881,	7,943
1864,	2,870	1882,	8,063
1865,	4,946	1883,	8,660
1866,	3,868	1884,	5,443
1867,	6,352	1885,	9,435
1868,	5,869	1886,	7,190
1869,	6,930	1887,	4,472

1888,	10,282	1901,	48,165
1889, (rain)	8,213	1902, (rain)	18,866
1890,	14,799	1903,	44,807
1891,	17,706	1904,	43,420
1892,	18,999	1905,	53,056
1893,	19,379	1906,	51,952
1894,	18,007	1907, (rain)	40,260
1895,	22,967	1908,	50,213
1896,	20,925	1909,	47,837
1897, (rain)	19,552	1910,	60,461
1898,	27,096	1911,	71,873
1899, (rain)	26,719	1912, (rain)	52,308
1900,	33,977	1913,	76,000

MEMBERSHIP AND OFFICIAL RECORD.

The society has a present membership of eight hundred and ninety-eight, and its management is lodged in an executive committee, which consists of the president, vice-president, recording secretary, treasurer, corresponding secretary, chemist, geologist, and librarian, together with one member from each borough, ward, and township in the county of Lehigh, elected yearly, at the annual meeting of the society.

This body exercises a general control and supervision of its affairs, except matters which relate to the purchase and sale of real estate, the borrowing of money, and other measures of vital importance, which are determined by the association itself.

The official record of those who filled the respective positions of the elective offices, includes the following persons and the time each served:

PRESIDENTS.

Edward Kohler, Esq., who was identified with the initial movement for the organization of an agricultural society, was chosen the first president, and worthily filled the office until 1855. He declined a re-election, and was succeeded by Hiram J. Schantz, who had also taken a deep interest in the early stages of the formation of the society. He served until 1859, when Col. George Beisel occupied the position for one year. In 1860, Owen L. Schreiber, a prominent farmer of the county, who had served as the first treasurer of the society, was elected and served creditably until 1873, with the exception of the years 1869 and 1870, during which Solomon Griese-mer held the office.

Enos Erdman, an enterprising farmer and business man residing in the lower section of the county, was elected in 1873. He took an active part in the management of the transactions of the association, and filled the position with great success until his death, in 1884. He was succeeded by Hon. Jeremiah Roth, who had always been an enthusiastic supporter of the society. He filled the position up to his death in January, 1907, and by his activity and devotion to its interests contributed much towards establishing the society in its present flourishing condition.

John W. Eckert was elected president in February, 1907, and filled the position with ability for seven years, until 1914, when Dr. Victor H. Wieand was elected president.

RECORDING SECRETARIES.

Jesse M. Line, one of the signers of the petition for incorporation, was chosen the first recording secretary, and served two years, from 1852 to 1854. He was followed by Hon. A. L. Ruhe, who was also one of the charter members. He held the office until 1856, when Joshua Stahler, another charter member, was elected to that position, and served uninterruptedly with distinction for nineteen years, until 1875, when he declined a re-election. He was succeeded in that year by Capt. L. P. Hecker, who filled the position until 1895, with the exception of the year 1870, when W. J. Hoxworth served in that capacity. Mr. Hecker was the secretary during the transition period. He prepared the systems for the entry of exhibits and awarding of premiums; also for the inauguration of the department, under the rules of the National Trotting Association, to meet the requirements of the society on the new grounds. In 1895 he declined a re-election, when W. K. Mohr, Esq., was chosen and served for five years. During his term Mr. Mohr improved the systems in use, and introduced other features that greatly simplified the work in the secretary's office, and that of some of the other departments. He was followed by Mr. H. B. Schall, as the secretary for the semi-centennial year, who now holds the office with great credit to himself and the society.

TREASURERS.

Owen L. Schreiber, one of the original promoters of the society, was chosen its first treasurer, and served for three years, from 1852 to 1855. He was succeeded by Aaron G. Reninger, a charter member, who held the office for eighteen years; and who, together with Mr. Stahler, the recording secretary during that period, managed the affairs of the society with signal success. In 1873 he declined a re-election, when Dr. J. P. Barnes was chosen and held the office for two years, declining a re-election at the end of his second term.

Ephraim Grim, who was also a charter member and who had previously always taken an active interest in the society, succeeded Dr. Barnes in 1875, and served the association faithfully until his death, in 1886. After the death of Mr. Grim, Joseph Hecker was chosen to fill the unexpired term, and was continued in office until his death, which occurred in the year 1890. T. Frank Butz held the office during the year 1890. He was succeeded in 1891 by V. D. Barner, a young and energetic business man, who filled the position for five years, until 1895, when he declined a re-election. In that year A. W. DeLong was chosen, who very acceptably discharged the duties of that office until his death, when the present treasurer, Milton J. Kern, was elected.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

No provision was made for the election of vice-presidents in the constitution operative before the year 1885. In that year the instrument was amended and the omission supplied. Mr. Isaac B. Meyers was elected to that position and served until 1895, when he was succeeded by Mr. Robert R. Ritter, the present incumbent.

PETITION FOR CHARTER.

To the Honorable the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh County:

The petition of the undersigned, being members of the Lehigh Agricultural Society, located at Allentown, in the County of Lehigh, respectfully represents: That they are desirous to acquire and enjoy the power and immunities of a corporation of body-politic, under the name, style and title of the Lehigh Agricultural Society, for the purpose and in the manner specified by the constitution of said society, a copy of which is hereto appended.

And they will pray, etc.

Allentown, Feb. 16th, 1855.

Charles Kramer	E. R. Newhard
Thomas Yeager	A. G. Reninger
John D. Lawall	Ephraim Grim
Joshua Stahler	Thomas B. Wilson
Eli J. Saeger	H. J. Saeger
E. D. Leisenring	J. M. Line
Paul Balliet	William H. Blumer
H. King	Charles S. Bush
C. Seagreaves	J. F. Newhard
A. L. Ruhe	C. Keck
Charles H. Martin	James H. Bush
C. Peter

Among the records of the Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh County, it is thus contained:

In the matter of the application for a } Charter of Incorporation of the Le- } high County Agricultural Society. }

And now, Aug. 13, 1855, on due proof being made that notice of said application had been made according to the order of the Court, and it appearing that the objects, articles, and conditions therein set forth and contained are lawful and not injurious to the community, and no sufficient reasons being shown to the contrary, the Court decree and declare that the persons associated, as in said application or constitution is intended, mentioned or provided, shall, according to the articles and conditions in said constitution set forth and contained, become and be a corporation or body-politic. And the Court further direct that the constitution or instrument be recorded in the office for the recording of deeds, etc., in and for said county of Lehigh, and that the same being so recorded the persons so associated, or meaning to associate, shall, according to the objects, articles and conditions in said constitution set forth and contained, become and be a corporate or body-politic in law and in fact, and to have continuance by the name, style and title of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society, according to the laws of this Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in such case made and provided.

State of Pennsylvania, }
 Lehigh County. } ss:

I, Francis E. Samuels, Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas of said County of Lehigh, certify that the above is a true copy of the records of said Court in relation to the granting of a charter of incorporation to the Lehigh County Agricultural Society, so full and entire as the same remains on record in my said office.

Witness my hand and seal of office, at Allentown, Aug. 13, A. D. 1855.

F. E. SAMUELS, Prothonotary.

BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS.

The Building and Loan Associations of the city are as follows:

Pennsylvania Loan and Building Association; president, S. D. Lehr; secretary, Morris Hoats; treasurer, D. J. Nagle.

Mutual Loan and Building Association; president, J. Herbert Kohler; secretary, F. H. Lichtenwalner; treasurer, John R. Helwig.

Mechanics' Loan and Building Association; president, Elmer E. Butz; secretary, H. B. Yingling; treasurer, Charles S. Dilcher.

Security Building Association; president, J. M. Grimley; secretary, M. H. Bickert; treasurer, F. K. Hartzell.

State Capital Savings and Loan Association; Dallas Dillinger, secretary.

Similar associations in the past have been the Lehigh, Union, Farmers' and Mechanics, American, Jordan, Equitable, National, Home, Hope, Workingmens', Security, and Penn Land and Loan associations.

Y. M. C. A.—The Young Men's Christian Association was organized at Allentown, Nov. 15, 1881, with fourteen members. A constitution was adopted and a committee appointed to secure funds for expenses and a meeting place which presented a favorable report. A room was rented on the second floor of the Yeager building, No. 20 North Seventh street, and the first officers elected were F. K. Kern, president; M. P. Schantz, secretary; and C. O. Schantz, treasurer.

The first public meeting was held in its quarters, Feb. 12, 1882, and addresses were delivered in the German and English languages by Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs and Rev. Thomas Bowman. The association was subsequently located in the Stiles building, on Hamilton street, in a frame building at 518 Hamilton street, at 17 South Seventh street, and in the Martin homestead at 16 South Seventh street, which was later purchased and in 1902, a six-story red brick building erected on the site, the whole valued at $145,000. The association has a membership of nearly one thousand. The cost of maintenance is about $11,000 annually. There are twenty-six dormitory rooms, renting from two to four dollars per week; a large library and reading room; a complete gymnasium; a large auditorium; educational and Bible study classes; lecture and concert courses, and other attractive features, which are open to members, the annual dues for which amount to five dollars.

Y. W. C. A.—The Young Women's Christian Association building is located at 722 Walnut street. The membership is 340, and the building has accommodations for ten transient guests. There is a gymnasium and circulating library. The cost of maintenance is over $800 annually. The secretary is Miss Laura V. Keck.

G. A. R.—A Post of the Grand Army of the Republic was organized at Allentown Dec. 10, 1866, with the name of Yeager Post, No. 13, in honor of Capt. Yeager, who had commanded the Allen Rifles, one of the "First Defenders," and was killed at the battle of Fair Oaks. The charter members were:

William J. Weiss	William Ruhe
Charles Bachman	Henry C. Wagner
Theodore Baker	D. K. Diefenderfer
Oscar T. Hoffman	Peter H. Berndt
Jacob A. Arnold	Franklin Fatzinger
Walter H. Vandyke	Charles H. Knauss
William H. Blank	William Schwartz
Walter H. Seip	John W. Reber
Dallas C. Zander	Francis Sourwine
George Hepler

From the number given the Post it would appear to have been among the first posts organized in the State of Pennsylvania.

The Post was re-organized Oct. 24, 1874.

E. B. Young Post, No. 87, was organized Oct. 19, 1877. The charter members were:

E. B. Young	F. G. W. Fatzinger
N. S. Litzenberger	Allen Wolf
D. Murath	H. A. Schwartz
J. B. Hamersly	Lafe Knerr
Leonard Killian	Lewis Warner
Jairus Bernhard	R. Hamersly
Ignatz Gresser	O. T. Hoffman
E. L. Hamersly	B. F. Frederick
Charles A. Harris	Jeremiah Murray
H. C. Wagner	G. F. Ensheimer
H. C. Huber	H. T. Bleckley

SONS OF VETERANS.—James A. Garfield, No. 6, Sons of Veterans, was instituted at Allentown, March 17, 1881. The members were:

George J. Klein	Ulysses Horn
W. H. Sleider	John Allen
S. J. Menninger	H. B. Frederick
Charles W. Goranflo	William H. Smith
George Gresser	Eugene S. Keck
George Mohr	Peter Becker
Charles W. Harris	Allen E. Wolf
Harry F. Miller	Elmer P. Werley
W. H. Wolf	H. C. Keck
Charles Tice	Harry Dreisbach
Herbert Tool	Walter Smith
George W. Fisher

The name was later changed to Allen Camp.

LEHIGH COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The Lehigh County Historical Society was organized Jan. 9, 1904, in common council chamber, with Prof. George T. Ettinger as president; Philip W. Flores, vice-president; Charles R. Roberts, secretary; and Leo Wise, Esq., treasurer. Its purpose is the promotion and encouragement of historical study and research, and particularly the discovery, collection, preservation and publication of the history of Lehigh county, the marking of places of historical interest in the county, and the collection of books, newspapers, relics, maps, manuscripts, letters, etc., referring to the history of Lehigh county and the state of Pennsylvania. It has a valuable historical library and a museum of historical objects, which will be placed in "Trout Hall," when that historic building will be granted to the society. The annual due is one dollar per year, with a membership fee of one dollar. The society has a membership of 180 and has published two pamphlets and a handsome souvenir of the 150th anniversary of the city of Allentown. A committee appointed by the society prepared this history of Lehigh county, published in 1914.

ALLENTOWN BAND.—The Allentown Band was organized in 1853 by Amos Ettinger, who was its first leader. The first members were changing later to E flat cornet. It has been under has able direction and wise management that the Allentown Band has attained the high position it now holds, ranking among the leading bands in the country.

John Able, Allen Barber, Henry Breinig, Jonathan Desch, William Ettinger, George Fry, T. H. Good, Abraham Gangewere, Horatio Kramer, Walter Miller, Allen Newhard, James Rees, Edward Ruhe, Henry E. Ruhe, Carlus Samson, James Sieger, Peter Schwentzer, Frank Weiss, Peter S. Wenner, Frederick Wolf, Joseph Weiss, Theodore Yeager and Israel Yingling. Anthony Heincke, who came from New York city, was later the leader and instructor. He subsequently located at Boston, where he became quite a celebrated musician. In the Civil War period,

The Lehigh Saengerbund was organized Jan. 25, 1858, with Gottlob Volz as president; John Leonard, as secretary; Herman Schuon, as treasurer; Prof. C. Herman, as musical director; and these members: Christian Weippert, Ferdinand Nick, Christian Volz, Edward Muendler, Henry Kiehn, Bernhard Keiser, B. Schmid, H.

ALLENTOWN BAND.

nearly all of its members enlisted in the army. In 1865 the band was reorganized and Wm. H. H. Minninger became the leader, and Fritz Benkhard, the instructor. Mr. Minninger resigned in 1878 and Lucas Westemeyer became the leader and instructor for one year. Prof. Waldemar Grossman was made instructor in 1881, and continued until 1885, when Martin Klinger was made leader, instructor and business manager, continuing as such to the present time. Mr. Klinger came to the band in 1876, when a mere boy, as its first fluegelhorn player, O. Clauss, John Muenster, Leonhard Saeving, Charles Wentzel, John B. Meyer, A. F. Leisner, C. E. Clauss, Charles Gundelwein, Herman Kunze, August Hebsacker, Leopold Kern, Friedrich Benkhardt. Ferd. Wieser, Lewis Klump, John B. Moser, G. A. Aschbach, John G. Schimpf, George P. Weil, Henry Kiecherer, William Oberle, Henry Gabriel, Henry Koenig, William F. Danowsky, B. F. Trexler, Amos Ettinger, Joseph Nagel, and P. Schulz. The home of the organization is at 227 North Fifth street and the present president is John Graeflin.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

MASONIC BODIES.—The first Masonic lodge in the Lehigh Valley was Military Lodge, No. 19, instituted May 18, 1779, in General Sullivan's army, during the Revolutionary War. Col. Thomas Proctor, commander of an artillery regiment, was the master. During the month that General Sullivan's army of 3,000 men were encamped at Easton, this lodge there held frequent meetings.

The history of Masonry in Allentown dates from March 17, 1817, when Abraham Levan, Jr., and Charles L. Hutter, Past Masters; and John Fogel, Abraham Knerr, Christian Brobst, Jacob Rupp and Jonas Barnett, petitioned the R. W. Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania for a warrant for a new lodge. On April 7, 1817, a warrant was granted for a lodge at Allentown to be called Jordan Lodge, No. 151, with Charles L. Hutter as W. M.; Jonas Barnett, S. W.; and Christian Brobst, J. W. Peter Cooper was the first secretary and John Fogel, treasurer. Jonas Barnett died Aug. 31, 1817, and in 1818, Christian Brobst became W. M. Subsequent W. M.'s were William J. C. Baum, Henry Weaver and Samuel Runk. From a newspaper of this period we find that on St. John's Day, June 24, 1819, the lodge had a procession, to which neighboring lodges were invited and meetings were held in the morning and evening. Among the members of the lodge were John Sieger, Anthony Musick, (treasurer, 1819), Peter Good, Joseph Fry, Jr., Peter Burkhalter, Daniel Swander, Peter Haas, George Haberacher, John Evans, Andrew Wind, Joseph Saeger, Laurence Stahler, George Frederick, Felix Linn, Peter Bright, Jacob Hartzell, Daniel Fretz, Sr., Peter Martain, Michael Ritter, Solomon Fogel, Philip Foust, John S. Gibons, Charles Seagreaves, Andrew Gangeware, Samuel Marx, Charles Craig, Rev. Dr. Jacob W. Hanger, Moses Horn, Bernard Reese, Chester Clarke, Jacob and Peter Schantz. The membership of the lodge in 1827 was 44. At the time of the anti-Masonic movement the lodge was forced to suspend and on Sept. 4, 1837, its warrant was vacated and it ceased to exist. One of the noteworthy events in the life of this lodge was the funeral of General Thomas Craig on Jan. 15, 1832, aged 92 years, who was buried at Allentown with military and Masonic honors. Major General Craig had been a Colonel in the Revolution and Major General in the militia for 16 years. The procession marched to the cemetery to the funeral strains of the Bethlehem Band, the tolling of bells, and the firing of minute guns, accompanied by the local artillery company, the Lehigh Artillerists.

Barger Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M., was constituted May 27, 1859. Its charter members were Alfred J. G. Dubbs, Esaias Rehrig, Boas Hausman, John Y. Bechtel, Nelson Weiser, Charles Kline, Russell A. Thayer, George Erdman, and Solomon Griesemer, of whom Mr. Dubbs was installed W. M., Mr. Rehrig, S. W.; Mr. Hausman, J. W.; Mr. Bechtel, treasurer; and Mr. Weiser, secretary. The first stated meeting of the lodge was held June 10, 1859, when nine applications were received from dismissed members and five from new applicants. At the end of the year the lodge numbered 56 members. On May 27, 1909, the lodge celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in a fitting manner. Its present membership is over three hundred.

Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M., was constituted Nov. 10, 1882. The charter members were Augustus F. Shick, Phaon H. Stettler, Hiram H. Fisher, Edward Harvey, William H. Ryan, James R. Roney, George J. Snyder, Lewis F. Knecht, Jesse Marks, William A. Lichtenwalner, John D. Stiles and John F. Wenner. The first elected officers were Edward Harvey, W. M.; William H. Ryan, S. W.; James R. Roney, J. W.; Phaon H. Stettler, treasurer; and Augustus F. Shick, secretary, who has held that office continuously. The present membership of the lodge is three hundred and eighty-five.

Jordan Lodge, No. 673, F. & A. M., was constituted June 10, 1913. Its charter members were David S. Bachman, W. M.; Harry W. Seem, S. W.; Daniel W. Hamm, J. W.; Harry W. Kress, treasurer; Francis M. Berkemeyer, secretary; Harry C. Trexler, Edgar J. Lumley, William P. Moyer, Alfred L. Reichenbach, Harry E. Truchses, Arthur G. Dewalt, Elmer E. Ritter, Erney E. Bastian, Warren K. Miller, William H. Mann, Preston J. Everett, Thomas R. Wasser, Frederick D. Kutz, Harvey E. Bohner and Julius Suther. The membership is over four hundred.

Allen Royal Arch Chapter, No. 203, was constituted March 29, 1866. Its charter members were A. J. G. Dubbs, M. E. H. P.; Edwin G. Martin, John H. Fogel, John B. Moser, Henry J. Saeger, William B. Fogel, William C. Lichtenwalner, Herman Rupp, Benjamin Lochman, Henry S. Clemens, Solomon Griesemer, Charles Kline, Edward B. Young, George B. Schall, John D. Lawall, Samuel B. Anewalt, Henry F. Martin, Nelson Weiser, Christian F. Schultz, and Julius Holstein. It numbers over three hundred members.

Allen Council, No. 23, R. & S. M., was constituted Dec. 24, 1864. The charter members were G. B. Schall, I. G. M.; J. D. Lawall, D. I. M.; J. Y. Bechtel, P. C. W.; Benj. Lochman, treasurer; Dewees J. Martin, Rec.; Henry J. Saeger, Edw. B. Young, Sol. Griesemer, J. H. Fogel, and Henry Correll. It has a membership of over two hundred and its present officers are H. L. Bowman, T. I. M.; G. H. Berkemeyer, D. I. M.; Chas. R. Roberts, P. C. W.; F. M. Berke-meyer, treasurer; and Augustus F. Shick, recorder. P. T. I. M., Charles W. Wolfertz, at present M. P. Grand Treasurer, is a Past M. P. Grand Master of the state of Pennsylvania.

Allen Commandery, No. 20, Knights Temp-lar, was constituted May 2, 1860. The charter members were William Lilly, Em. Com.; Wil- liam R. Otis, Gen.; George B. Schall, Capt. Gen.; Lausford F. Chapman, prelate; Solomon Griesemer, treasurer; John Y. Bechtel, recorder; James Houston, S. W.; David O. Mosser, J. W.; Simon H. Price and John B. McCreary. The commandery now numbers upwards of three hundred members. In May, 1879, the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania convened in Al- lentown, when Gen. J. P. S. Gobin was elected Em. Grand Com. In May, 1885, the Grand Commandery again convened in Allentown. On May 20, 1907, Allen Commandery had as its guests Grand Commander William M. Donald- son, and Sir Knights Governor Edwin S. Stuart and Admiral Winfield S. Schley, who held a public reception on Centre Square.

The Masonic bodies of Allentown met in Odd Fellows' Hall until Dec. 28, 1863, when they removed to the southwest corner of Hamilton and Sixth streets and remained there until April 1, 1873, when they removed to the southeast corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets, where they remained until March 27, 1885. They then removed to the northwest corner of Hamilton and Law streets, and remained there until June, 1903, when they removed to their present hall, on the northwest corner of Hamilton and Eighth street. The meeting room is 42 by 63 feet, car- peted with a two-tone Whittall Victoria Wilton carpet, which, including that in the corridor and ante-rooms, was purchased at a cost of $1,400. The curtains and draperies are of French silk velour, of old gold color, especially made in France, costing $700. The furniture is of solid mahogany, and hand carved, purchased at an expense of $2,700. The presiding officer's chair is a triplet, 9 feet, 6 inches wide, and 7 feet, 6 inches high, weighing about 1,200 pounds, with Corinthian columns. The wardens' chairs have Ionic and Doric columns. There are 155 lineal feet of davenport, upholstered in dark green leather. The pipe organ was brought from the old hall. On the fourth floor are the parlor and reception room, billiard room, large banquet hall, kitchen, pantry, cloakroom and lockers.

EASTERN STAR, Anne Penn Allen Chapter, No. 145, Order of the Eastern Star, was instituted Feb. 19, 1913, with the following officers: W. M., Mrs. C. E. Eisenhard; W. P., J. A. Heim- bach; A. M., Mrs. A. M. Mann; secretary, C. R. Roberts; treasurer, Mrs. E. J. Heimbach; C., Mrs. M. L. Guth; A. C., Mrs. A. F. Lan- dis; chaplain, Mrs. C. E. Grimley; M., Mrs. R. C. Ringer; O., E. O. Leopold; W., Mrs. S. S. Lund; S., A. P. Ringer. It numbers nearly three hundred members.

Mary Livingston Chapter, No. 167, Order of the Eastern Star, was instituted May 25, 1914, with the following officers: W. M., Mrs. C. E. Eisenhard; W. P., C. R. Roberts; A. M., Mrs. Flora A. Iobst; secretary, Mrs. Mary Reiff; treasurer, Mrs. Mary A. Reinhard; C. Mrs. Annie M. Bastian; A. C., Miss Helen C. Lund; C., Mrs. Anna Hartshaw; M., Mrs. Clara A. Muthart; O., E. O. Leopold; W. Mrs. Susan E. Roth; S., George F. Reinhard. It numbers nearly one hundred members and meets in the Merkel building at Seventh and Turner streets.

ODD FELLOWS.—The founders of the Inde- pendent Order of Odd Fellows were working- men, mechanics and artisans of humble birth, and the secret of their success was owing to the fact that they had true hearts, though illiterate, with an unseemly exterior. The first use of the name was made in 1745 and the founder of this his- toric "Independent Order" was Thomas Wildey (born in 1782), who was initiated when he came of age. He emigrated in 1817 and settled at Baltimore, where he met John Welch, an "Odd Fellow" from England. They had missed the pleasant associations of the order in England, and therefore desired to institute something of the kind in the United States.

According to traditions, five members were required to institute a lodge; so they advertised a notice in the Baltimore American, March 27, 1819, and three responded, John Duncan, John Cheatham and Richard Rushwerth, and the five Odd Fellows met at the "Seven Stars Hotel" on April 26, 1819, where they solemnly insti- tuted and opened a lodge, which they named "Washington," with Wildey as Noble Grand, and Welch as Vice Grand. And from this in- significant beginning there has arisen the largest and most powerful secret, beneficial organization in the world.

Being desirous of securing formal connection with the order in England, a petition was accordingly forwarded to the "Duke of York Lodge," at Preston, in England, in September, 1819, and the Washington Lodge was recognized on Oct. 23, 1819. A charter was issued and the right of establishing new lodges was claimed. Two years afterward the Past Grands constituted themselves into the Grand Lodge of Maryland and the United States, and Washington Lodge surrendered its charter to this body.

GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.—The first lodge of Odd Fellows in Pennsylvania was self-instituted at Philadelphia on Dec. 26, 1821, which was named "Pennsylvania Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F." A Grand Lodge was instituted June 27, 1823, and on Jan. 15, 1825, the first constitution was adopted. It was composed of four jurisdictions, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. Afterward, gradually lodges were instituted in other states, and Grand Lodges were established, and now there are four branches: Subordinate Lodge with four degrees; Subordinate Encampment with three degrees; Daughters of Rebekah, with one degree; and Patriarch's Militant with one degree.

ALLENTOWN LODGE.—On Feb. 21, 1842, the first lodge of Odd Fellows was instituted at Allentown. The petitioners were H. S. Moorehead, Tilghman Seip, David Stem, Peter Leisenring, and Daniel J. Carey, and the lodge was named Allen Lodge, No. 71, I. O. O. F. Mr. Moorehead was chosen the Noble Grand; Seip, the Vice-Grand; Stem, the secretary; and Carey, the treasurer.

The different lodges in Allentown are as follows:

NAME.	Number.	Instituted.	Members.	Assets.
Allen,	71	1842	281	$15,604
Lehigh,	83	1843	141	5,813
Vienna,	847	1873	242	7,247
Constantine,	1113	1899	280	6,558
Unity Encampment,	12	212	3,314
Lincoln Rebekah,	72	1895
Patriarchs Militant,	39	1908

JUNIOR ORDER U. A. M.—This order was instituted at Germantown, in 1858, as a voluntary secret, patriotic and beneficial society. In 1860, eight councils formed a State Council, and other State Councils were formed; in Delaware in 1868, and in New Jersey in 1869. A National Council was organized in 1869 for the purpose of creating a Supreme Order for promoting its growth and extending its influence. It was incorporated in 1870, and this was recognized in directing all affairs of the order until 1912; then it was contended that State Councils could secede and act independently; litigation followed, and the contention was not sustained.

Five councils were organized at Allentown:

- Phil. H. Sheridan, No. 287 in 1888.
- Jordan, No. 746 in 1891.
- Allen, No. 753 in 1891.
- Fair, No. 791 in 1892.
- James Allen, No. 835 in 1892.

At the State Council in 1899 at Scranton, the session refused to provide for the payment of per capita tax to the National Council, and a number of the councils in the state seceded from the National Council, including Nos. 753, 791, and 835, of Allentown, which became merged in the Independent Order of Americans. This left but two councils from 1900 to 1906, when a new council was instituted, Pride of Lehigh, No. 572, and this was afterward consolidated with No. 287.

Among those members from Allentown who represented local councils in the State Council were the following:

From No. 287, Robert H. Schmickle, Jesse C. Mc-Illhane and Harry G. T. Miller.

From No. 746, John H. Rhoads and Oscar F. Hauser.

From No. 753, Robert E. Donneck and Elmer M. N. Minnich.

From No. 791, Harvey E. Burger and James Hixon.

From No. 835, William A. Smith and Charles F. Allender.

From No. 746, John H. Rhoads served on the Appeal Committee in 1897-98; and served as a National Representative from 1902 to 1905. Oscar F. Hauser served as Vice Councillor in 1906 and 1907; as Junior Past St. Councillor for 1908 and 1909.

From No. 287, Harry G. T. Miller served one year on the State Legislative Committee in 1905, and on the Law Committee from 1906 to 1910.

Through differences in the State Council at Erie, in 1910, a number of councils seceded, and merged with the Fraternal Patriotic Americans, among them Nos. 287 and 746. Some of the members of No. 746, not desiring to leave the Jr. O. U. A. M., retained the name and number, Jordan Council, No. 746.

Its officers in 1914 were:

- Councillor—Albert J. Fuehrer.
- Vice Councillor—Victor F. Herner.
- Recording Secretary—John H. Rhoads.
- Financial Secretary—Charles D. Rhoads.
- Treasurer—John S. Reinhard.
- Trustees—Wilson R. Krader, John F. T. Hunter, Calvin A. Diehl.
- Members, 35. Assets in litigation, $6,000.

There were 52 charter members of Council No. 287 in 1888. In April, 1914, there were only six survivors: William J. Abele, James

A. Bartholomew, Freeman Hawk, J. M. Koehler, Albert O. Sell, and Louis Weinert. C. J. Hacket served as financial secretary 19 years, and John W. Ehrle as recording secretary 14 years. Members, 476; assets, $6,500. This Council and Council No. 746 have associated together for social purposes, including the families and friends of members, and furnished a room in the Hunsicker Hall, No. 142 North Seventh street.

Allen Council, No. 753; membership in 1913 was 1,181; Fair Council, No. 791, was 385; and James Allen Council, No. 835, was 295.

DAUGHTERS OF LIBERTY was organized as an auxiliary body to the Independent Order of Americans, which has three councils: Washington, No. 12, instituted in 1888; members, 38; Pride of Allen, No. 182; instituted Oct. 10, 1910; members, 138; Pride of Lehigh, No. 194, instituted Aug. 11, 1913; members, 62.

P. O. S. of A.—The first Washington Camp of the Patriotic Orders Sons of America in Lehigh county was instituted at Allentown June 12, 1860, as No. 63, by installation officers from Camp No. 1, of Philadelphia, which was then at the head of the order. The charter members were:

- | | |
|---------------|-------------------|
| W. J. Wieder | A. M. Springer |
| George Moser | M. Dunlap |
| E. C. Huber | W. N. Smith |
| E. T. Good | Charles H. Knauss |
| Charles Gross | James Bieber |
| E. G. Scholl | T. V. P. Reiss |
| J. A. Blumer | H. W. Cole |

The first past president was E. C. Huber; president, W. J. Grim; secretary, J. A. Blumer; treasurer, James Bieber.

In April, 1861, a large number of the members having enlisted in the Civil War, a resolution was passed exempting them from the payment of dues and fines. The meetings were continued until June 2, 1862, when the camp was obliged to suspend because the majority of the members had enlisted. This suspension was continued until June 3, 1868, when certain former members of the camp assembled for the purpose of effecting a re-organization, and the books, records and papers of the camp were obtained from a member who kept them in his custody. Through the instructions of the county president of the order at Philadelphia, the camp was re-organized as No. 63.

In July, 1873, another camp was instituted as No. 196; but it continued only four years, when it was consolidated with No. 63.

In March, 1872, the National Camp of the order was organized at Allentown in the hall of Camp No. 63 by delegates from the several states, the delegate from Camp No. 63 on this occasion was F. G. W. Fatzinger (one of its earliest members).

The State Camp held its annual sessions at Allentown in 1895 and in 1906.

Statement and condition of camps in Lehigh county:

CAMPS AT ALLENTOWN, JAN. 1, 1914.

NUMBER.	Members.	Value.
11,	257	$4,942
63,	90	1,536
115,	193	7,500
196,	120	4,657
406,	287	1,341

CAMPS IN COUNTRY DISTRICT, JAN. 1, 1914

LOCATION.	Number.	Members.	Value.
Alburtis,	97	148	$6,380
Slatington,	119	255	10,423
Egypt,	168	89	4,119
Old Zionsville,	244	81	2,091
Steinsville,	288	217	6,232
Catasauqua,	301	203	2,440
West Bethlehem,	310	231	3,823
Slatedale,	323	193	4,326
Guthsville,	378	120	3,675
Saegersville,	391	140	8,232
Emaus,	398	268	7,561
Coplay,	409	152	11,428
Saucona,	411	120	4,409
Coopersburg,	511	147	3,187
Macungie,	569	117	2,781

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.—The Knights of Pythias was instituted at Allentown May 23, 1870, with the name of Greenleaf Lodge, No. 257. The lodge was carried on in the German language until March 25, 1872, when a number of members withdrew because a desire was prevailing that the English language should be substituted. Upon their withdrawal, the English language was subsequently used in the lodge.

Thereupon Donau Lodge, No. 347, was instituted April 2, 1872, as a German lodge. The active members then were:

- | | |
|-------------------|------------------|
| John F. Bohlinger | Frederick Traub |
| Frederick Neikam | John Fries |
| Francis Daeufer | John Truckenbrod |
| William Gruele | Leonard Kilian |
| Martin Schmidt | |

Lehigh Division, No. 9, Uniform Rank of this order, was organized July 8, 1881.

KNIGHTS OF THE MACCABEES.—The order of the Knights of the Maccabees is founded upon the history and traditions of the Maccabean dynasty and the exploits of Judas Maccabeus, a military leader, whose name in Hebrew signified "a hammer." Mattathias, a Jewish priest, and founder of the Maccabean dynasty, was the first to make a stand against the persecutions of the Jewish nations by Antiochus Epiphanes, king of the Syrians, in the beginning of the second century, B. C. With his five sons and a handful of men, he rose against the national foe, destroyed all traces of heathen worship, and fled into the wilderness of Judah. At his death in 166 B. C., Judas Maccabeus became the leader of the patriots and re-established the independence of the Jewish nation.

The order was founded in London, Ont., in 1878, as a fraternal and beneficial society. Nathan S. Boynton was elected the first past supreme commander, and the present head of the order is Hon. D. P. Markey. The order numbers 300,000 members, and has 5,000 local tents. Its accumulated funds amount to over $12,000,000, and since organization $57,000,000 has been paid out in benefits. The state officers are W. E. Haney, G. C.; and L. S. Boyd, G. R. K.

Allentown Tent, No. 389, was instituted on Sept. 21, 1901, with the following officers: Charles W. Laros, P. C.; George S. Roth, C.; William Z. Schuler, Lt. C.; George S. Mest, Rec. K.; Marcus H. Bickert, Fin. K.; Gustav Henrich, chaplain; C. H. Diehl, sergeant; Irwin F. Huebner, physician; P. A. Dixon, M. at A.; Frank Trexler, 1st M. G.; William H. Wagner, 2d M. G.; Charles F. Wagner, Leut.; Henry P. Storch, picket. The present membership is 250.

Allentown Division, No. 11, of the Third Battalion, Sixth Regiment, of the Uniformed Rank, K. of T. M., was instituted March 13, 1908, in Runk's Hall, with 24 members. Its officers are: Captain, Charles C. Gruver; First Lieutenant, Irwin W. Gable; second lieutenant, Julius R. Mosser. Resident officers holding membership in the division are: Col. Preston A. Dixon, aide-de-camp, on Major General's staff, and Major Edward F. Rothenberger, commander of the Third Battalion, Sixth Regiment. The present membership is 33.

KNIGHTS OF FRIENDSHIP.—Franklin Chamber, No. 9, O. K. of F., was organized May 14, 1885, in Paff's Hall, at Lumber and Hamilton streets, with fifty-nine charter members. The present membership is six hundred and forty-four.

Liberty Chamber, No. 45, was organized Feb. 17, 1898, in Scheirer's Hall, at Fifth and Liberty streets, with seventy-two charter members. It now has 203 members.

Washington Chamber, No. 18, was organized Sept. 27, 1884, at Second and Hamilton streets, with eighteen charter members. Its membership is now 192. Lehigh Consultory, No. 4, was organized on Oct. 11, 1890, at Second and Hamilton streets, with 39 charter members. It has now 72 members. All these bodies now meet on the fifth floor of the Merkel building, at Seventh and Turner streets, where they have finely furnished quarters.

HERD No. 6, LOYAL ORDER OF BUFFALOES, was organized July 18, 1911. Its first officers were George W. Ravert, Com.; Samuel C. Speer, secretary; and John R. Helwig, treasurer. The present membership is 988, and the meeting place is in Merkel's Hall, at Seventh and Turner streets.

B. P. O. ELKS.—The re-organization of Allentown Lodge, No. 30, B. P. O. Elks, was contemplated during the summer of 1898. Through the conspicuous services of John H. Ritter, and Henry J. Grim, of the defunct lodge, and H. C. Keller, the necessary number of petitions were secured for a charter, when organization was effected Aug. 31, 1891, and the following officers chosen: exalted ruler, H. C. Keller; esteemed leading knight, J. H. Ritter; esteemed loyal knight, Arnon P. Miller; esteemed lecturing knight, Harry R. Wagner; secretary, Fred D. Kutz; treasurer, Henry J. Grim; trustees, M. P. Schantz, E. E. Butz, H. H. Farr, O. H. Gernert, H. L. Keiper; esquire, W. H. Anewart; inner guard, Joseph C. Noble; tiler, J. Edward Gomery; chaplain, Edward F. Ochs; organist, J. C. Schwartz. The ceremonies of institution and installation of officers were held in the Allentown Crockery building on the afternoon and evening of Sept. 28, 1898, by district deputy grand exalted ruler Burd W. Payne, assisted by Ashland lodge, No. 382, B. P. O. E. Allentown Lodge organized with a membership of 28 charter members, occupying for quarters the third floor of the Shankweiler & Lehr building. Growing rapidly in numbers, they constructed for their own use a magnificent home at 31 and 33 South Eighth street, which they occupy at the present time. The past exalted rulers of this organization are H. C. Keller, J. H. Ritter, Arnon P. Miller, J. Edgar Gomery, George G. Sykes, George W. Hunsicker, Ray N. Keck, Edward S. Sherer, Robert Lange, Frank M. Keck, C. Arthur Wagner, Lloyd W. Mitchell, H. W. Wiltberger, Harry J. Koch, Lawrence H. Rupp and C. S. Dilcher. The present exalted ruler is W. N. Eberhard.

Fred D. Kutz has been the secretary since the institution. The present membership constitutes 514 of the "Best People on Earth."

MODERN WOODMEN.—Allentown Camp, No. 6428, Modern Woodmen of America, was organized in this city in Weiler's Hall, on April 26, 1899, with 18 charter members. The membership at the present time is 380 and they meet in

Fraternal Order of Eagles
Livingston Club

B. P. O. Elks
Temperance Hall

Lehigh Saengerbund
Young Men's Hall

the Crockery Company building at 37 South Seventh street.

This camp is one of 12,000 that belong to the largest fraternal beneficial insurance society in the United States. Healthy white males between the ages of 18 and 45 are eligible.

The local camp has lost thirteen members by death since organization and has paid $33,000 to the beneficiaries of the deceased.

The present officers are the following: consul, George Phillips; advisor, F. W. Krause; banker, H. E. Erdman; clerk, H. C. Kepner; Escort, F. C. Gillepsie; watchman, N. W. Rauch; sentry, H. W. Travena; trustees, W. A. Sensitivefer, W. S. Reed, William Rumfield, Jr.; chief forester, William D. Berk; pianist, Frank Weiant; physicians, Dr. I. F. Huebner, Dr. John D. Matz, Dr. James F. Smith, Dr. W. J. Hertz.

ALLENTOWN AERIE, No. 110, FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES, was organized Sunday, Feb. 24, 1901, in Ruhe's Hall, corner Sixth and Hamilton streets, by Grand Organizer Brother Horace Merkel, M.D., of Seattle Aerie, No. 1, Washington, assisted by members of Reading, No. 66, with thirty-seven members. Charles H. Cohn was the first Eagle in Allentown. At almost every session since its inception, candidates have taken the vows of the Eagle. The first officers of the Aerie were: past worthy president, William Fenstermacher; worthy president, Carson W. Masters; worthy vice-president, Samuel Thomas; worthy chaplain, Dr. J. Bond Watt, worthy conductor, Peter Schultz; secretary, Paul Livinood; treasurer, Harry B. Schall; inside guard, Robert F. Good; outside guard, J. O. Lash; trustees, Cornelius Cunningham, J. H. Harris, Charles H. Cohn; Aerie physician, Dr. Charles H. Schlesman. After a very short stay at this, their first meeting place, they moved to the second floor of the Hunsicker Laundry building, on South Seventh street, where the membership gained so rapidly that they were again obliged to get better accommodations for their increasing flock and purchased the Rinn residence at 133 and 135 North Sixth street, where the membership increased to about eight hundred. Many imagined they were about at their height, but the progressive members saw still further ahead and purchased this home and built their present building, which is recognized as one of the most modern homes in Eagledom. There are bowling alleys, pool and billiard tables, bath rooms, shower baths, an up-to-date dining room, and a perfectly equipped kitchen, sitting rooms, ante-rooms, and possibly the largest meeting room in the city, which is easily converted into a dance floor or hall, and a roof garden covering the entire building. Their membership now has grown to twenty-one hundred.

The following have served as presidents of this Aerie:

William Fenstermacher,	C. M. Sieger,	1907
First Past Worthy	C. D. Strauss,	1908
President.	John Hoffman,	1909
Carson W. Masters,	Fred Urich,	1910
1901	Thomas Ealer,	1911
Dr. J. Bond Watt, 1902	Price Hoffman,	1912
James N. Rhoda, 1903-04	M. J. McGuire,	1913
J. H. Kohler, 1905
S. J. Minninger, 1906

The present officers are M. J. McGuire, P. W. P.; W. O. Hufford, W. P.; Ernest Wittwer, W. V. P.; R. A. Barber, chaplain; Joseph Afflerbach, conductor; F. L. Schaefer, I. G.; H. E. Grim, O. G.; Charles A. Kemmerer, secretary; William A. Ruch, treasurer; C. F. Kramlich, Thomas Ealer and Dallas Dillinger, trustees; and Drs. C. F. Zellner and Jere. McAvoy, A. P.

The Aerie pays one dollar for the first week of sickness and seven dollars per week for the following twelve weeks. Also one hundred dollars on the death of a brother in good standing, for the sum of seventy-five cents paid as dues monthly.

FRATERNAL MYSTIC CIRCLE, No. 804, of Allen Ruling, was instituted at Allentown on July 6, 1901. Its membership is 350, the largest of any Circle in the state, and it has been recognized as the best uniformed.

The order was established in 1884. The recorder since 1906 has been E. S. Miller, of Allentown. The deputy supreme organizer is Peter A. DeLong, of Allentown.

CEMETERIES.

The first burial ground in Allentown was located at the northeast corner of Tenth and Linden streets, at what was then the western boundary of the town. A plot of ground, 240 feet square, was set aside for this purpose by William Allen, the founder of the city, but title was not vested in the owners until Nov. 3, 1813, when his granddaughter, Mary Livingston, deeded the tract jointly to George Graff and John F. Ruhe, trustees for the two congregations of the borough, Zion Reformed and St. Paul's Lutheran. In 1829, the cemetery was enlarged by the purchase of four lots from Walter C. Livingston, thus extending the grounds to Turner street. The price was $200, and the only restriction was that a section forty feet square should be reserved as a burial ground for the Livingston family. Burials were made in rows, in the order of deaths, and frequently husband and wife were buried at opposite sides of the graveyard, as no lots were sold to families. It was only in the case of a few prominent families that members of the same family rest side by side. The first burials appear to have been made in the center of the burial ground, extending then from right and left. The first interments, of which there is any record, were those of Mary, wife of Barthol Huber, who died May 18 and was buried May 20, 1765; Simon Fries, who died June 22 and was buried June 23, 1765; and Frederick Newhard, who died Nov. 29, in his 66th year, and was buried Nov. 30, 1765.

The following prominent individuals of Allentown and vicinity were buried in the cemetery:

Thomas Hunsicker, 1772	George Yund, Esq., 1828
John Griesemer, 1789	Frederick Hyneman, 1829
Dr. Gottlieb Bolzius, 1791	Lieut. Jacob Blumer, 1831
George Schreiber, 1800	Dr. James Jameson, 1831
Capt. Henry Hagenbuch, 1805	Capt. Jacob Clader, 1832
Hon. Peter Rhoads, 1814	Dr. George Knauff, 1834
Capt. Abraham Rinker, 1820	Dr. Jacob Martin, 1834
John Evans, Esq., 1824	Capt. George Graff, 1835
George Hanke, 1824	Jacob Newhard, Esq., 1835
Jonas Hartzell, Esq., 1824	Peter Rhoads, Jr., 1836
George Savitz, 1826	Dr. John Frederick Ruhe, 1841

Mrs. Annie P. Greenleaf, granddaughter of William Allen, was buried there in 1851, and afterward removed to the North Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia. Several young children of Walter C. Livingston also rest there in unmarked graves. A young man named Gaumer, drowned in the flood of Jan. 26, 1839, was buried there, and his grave is marked by a stone. Old residents state that an Indian was buried in the northwestern section of the older tract, whose grave was long marked by an iron frame. He is said to have died in the old foundry at Second and Union streets. There are 424 graves marked by stones, but a great many graves are not marked. Quite a number of bodies were removed to Union, West End, Allentown and Fairview cemeteries, where the old stones are still, in many cases, to be seen.

An unoccupied portion on the northwest, 240 feet long on Tenth street and 120 feet deep on Turner and Chestnut streets, was sold by order of the Court, Nov. 16, 1891, to John Bowen, for $6,000. Upon this tract twelve houses were erected. The fund derived from this sale was divided into three equal parts. Each congregation received $2,000, and the remaining $2,000 was invested as a trust fund for the future maintenance of the cemetery, the Court having appointed as trustees Alvin P. Zellner, representing Zion Reformed congregation and Alfred P. Bachman, representing St. Paul's Lutheran congregation. These trustees resigned in 1914, when Harrison E. Ruhe was appointed trustee for Zion Reformed and Dr. George F. Hummel trustee for St. Paul's Lutheran congregations. Pavements, curb and gutters around the cemetery have been paid for out of the fund, which now amounts to $1,336. The inhabitants of the city owe it to the memory of their forefathers to preserve and beautify this last resting place of the founders and first inhabitants of Allentown.

ALLENTOWN CEMETERY.—The Allentown Cemetery Association, which controls the burying ground at Linden and Fountain streets, had its origin in 1846. The original record states that, "Whereas (Rev.) Charles S. German, being the owner of three contiguous pieces of ground situate on the north side of Andrew (Linden) street, in the borough of Allentown, bounded on the south by Andrew street, on the east, north and west by public twenty-foot alleys, containing in front on said Andrew street 160 feet and in depth 230 feet, proposes to sell the said ground for a cemetery, divided into lots agreeably to one of two certain plans or drafts thereof made and to be submitted to, and adopted by, a majority of the subscribers or purchasers, at $10 per lot. We, the subscribers, therefore agree to pay to the said Charles S. German, his heirs, executors, or assigns, the sum of ten dollars for each lot." Then followed the names of subscribers, as follows:

Peter Newhard	Solomon Keck
E. R. Newhard	Moses Keck
John I. Smith	Thomas Gangwere
Aaron Wint	George Beisel
Abraham Newhard	Elizabeth Stein
Michael Uhler	Nathan Dresher
Thomas B. Wilson	Joel Krauss
Samuel Lightcap	Elizabeth Keck
Eli S. Biery	Joseph Knauss
C. Pretz	Jesse Keck
John Gross	Solomon Knause
Charles H. Martin	Tilghman H. Martin
Ephraim Grim	George Keck
J. W. Hornbeck	Daniel Gangwere
Charles Keck	Thomas Wickert
Henry Weinsheimer	W. & B. Craig
Charles F. Martin	Nathan Eberhard
Silas S. Newhard	Benjamin German
George Lucas	Tilghman Good
David Stem	William W. Selfridge
Joseph K. Saeger	William Fry
Peter Koons	Samuel A. Bridges
John S. Gibbons	W. J. Hoxworth
John Appel

The price was later changed from ten dollars for one lot to sixteen dollars for two lots. Shortly after the subscription was made, March 9, 1846, the persons interested assembled at the house of John Gross, and appointed a committee to draft a constitution, which was subsequently adopted. Peter Newhard was chosen president; Ephraim Grim, treasurer; and John Gross, trustee. The first managers were Joel Krauss, Christian Pretz, and John Gross.

The lots number 225, all of which have been taken, on which there are estimated to be 1,500 burials. Among the fine monuments erected are those of the Newhard, Stocker, Seip, Schantz, Klotz, Nonemaker, Hart and Yost families, and Samuel A. Bridges, James Wilson, George Beisel and John Young.

The officers are Alexander Helfrich, president; Edward J. Rapp, secretary (since 1903); and Franklin J. Newhard, treasurer and superintendent since 1898.

UNION CEMETERY.—The Union Cemetery at the northwest corner of Tenth and Chew streets, was established in April, 1854, and incorporated some months afterward under the name of the Union Cemetery Association, of which the officers then chosen were: J. D. Lawall, president; J. F. Newhard, secretary; William S. Young, treasurer; Nathan Dresher, trustee; Lewis F. Schmidt, Benjamin J. Hagenbach and Mifflin Hannum, managers.

A tract of land, containing eleven acres, at Tenth and Chew streets, was purchased from Jacob Miller and Jacob Hagenbuch at $200.00 per acre and laid off into lots one rod square. These lots were first drawn by ticket, and sold at $6.00 each, but shortly afterward at $10.00. They have recently sold for $200.00 and upwards, depending upon locality. There are over 1,200 lots in the cemetery, all of which have been sold.

The first person buried here was John Diefenderfer, who died Sept. 25, 1854.

All the lots having been sold until 1882, interested parties purchased the adjoining lot of nine acres on the west, situated on the northeast corner of Twelfth and Chew streets, and extending from Chew street northward to Liberty, from the Penn Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia, for the price of $1,150.00. They laid it off into 600 lots, 16 feet square, and named the place "West End Cemetery." By the minutes of the subsequent consolidated company it would appear that J. C. Anewalt and S. B. Anewalt sold lots from No. 4 to No. 730 and issued certificates to the purchasers.

UNION—WEST-END CEMETERY.—The first meeting of the consolidated company was held April 17, 1896, and its incorporation was secured on May 4, 1896. The petition was signed by:

Edward S. Shimer
Reuben H. Kramm
Albert S. Weiler
Charles H. Ruhe

Harvey L. Newhard
John C. Anewalt
M. P. Kohl

The first officers were.

Wilson K. Hartzell,	David Kuehn
President	Aaron R. Groner
A. L. Reichenbach,	Phaon Diehl
Secretary

The total lots number 2,200; the burials exceed 12,000.

G. J. S. Kohler has served as superintendent since 1903. D. T. Snyder has been employed there continuously since 1894, and served as sexton since 1913.

The main entrance is on Tenth street. This large cemetery in the city contains many fine monuments and several vaults.

FAIRVIEW CEMETERY is situated across the Little Lehigh river, in the Twelfth ward.

The company was organized in 1870 by George Fry, F. M. Kramer, J. J. Stein, William Kichline, Charles Eckert, Charles Kline and R. S. Shimer, and incorporated Nov. 11, 1870 under the name of the Fairview Cemetery Association, with Charles Kline as president; Jacob J. Stein, secretary; Charles Eckert, treasurer; and Charles K. Heist as superintendent.

The association purchased thirty-three acres of land from Charles Eckert, William Kichline, and the estate of William Fry at $500 per acre, and in 1871 laid it off into lots. An appropriate entrance lodge was built of stone along the Emaus road, including a chapel capable of holding 100 persons, and a receiving vault in the farther end of the tract.

Large expenditures have been made in beautifying the cemetery and maintaining it in an attractive condition.

Many fine monuments have been placed in the cemetery, among them being those of William F. Mosser, John D. Stiles, James K. Mosser, Henry Leh, Dr. John C. Foelker, John Yeager, William F. Yeager, Alexander Shimer and Hiram Shimer.

Miles L. Eckert, treasurer for upwards of twenty-five years, succeeded his father, the first treasurer. Fred F. Kramer has been the secretary for upwards of twenty years; John T. Kramer president since 1906; and Sylvester Roth superintendent since 1888.

The cemetery was laid out by one of the greatest architects in his line, Latham, of Buffalo, on a plan requiring a mile of paths or roads to every acre, and contains many beautiful arbor vitae, Boston elm and Norway maple trees. The amount of $75,000 has been expended in beautifying the grounds, which are kept in excellent condition. There are about 3,000 interments. Ten per cent. of all receipts are placed in a perpetual maintenance fund, which is designed to keep the cemetery beautiful forever.

A section of Fairview cemetery was purchased in 1881 by people of the Hebrew faith as a burial ground. It is called Mt. Sinai cemetery and contains twenty-nine graves.

HIGHLAND CEMETERY was laid out by Dr. C. J. Otto, William B. Fogelman and Hiester G. Kramlich, who purchased from Rev. Henry Wentz, twelve acres of ground along the Tenth street road, north of the city, on what is now Roth avenue, on Sept. 25, 1896. 1,073 lots, sixteen feet square, were laid out, and 774 interments have since been made there. There is a large soldiers' plot with 33 graves, and altogether 52 soldiers are buried there. Lesher H. Yeager became the sole owner in 1909, and since then has acted in the capacity of superintendent.

GREENWOOD CEMETERY.—David Griesemer, Alfred B. Griesemer, Charles H. Schmid, Samuel D. Lehr and Harrison E. Ruhe, of Allentown, associated together in January, 1898, for the purpose of forming a cemetery company. They secured thirty acres of land, lying between Greenwood and Albright avenues and extending from Turner to Liberty streets, which they caused to be laid off into 2,500 lots, each 16 feet square, and enclosed by an iron fence, four feet high, and named it "Greenwood." A superior and attractive gateway was placed at Twenty-first and Chew streets, and a handsome chapel costing $5,000 erected along the main drive-way.

The first burial was made Feb. 12, 1898, and in ten years the interments numbered upward of a thousand, evidencing the high appreciation of this cemetery as a burial place. The total interments to March, 1914, numbered 2,226. The first body interred there was that of David Hollenbach.

The association was incorporated June 2, 1898.

David Griesemer was the superintendent from 1898 to 1904; Solomon Griesemer from 1904 to 1910; and Charles H. Schmid since 1910, who has also been the treasurer since that time, and secretary from the beginning.

Some of the more imposing monuments in this cemetery are those of David Griesemer, Henry Trexler, Jeremiah Trexler, Lewis D. Krause, Bastian Brothers, and Kuhns and Kershner. A neat booklet has been printed showing the avenues and lots as laid off, and the fine appearance of the monuments, chapel and entrance.

HILLSIDE CEMETERY is situated on Steckel Hill, in Whitehall township, along the extension of Fourth street, two blocks north of the city line. It was established in 1907 by James L. Marsteller, Henry J. Kurtz, William F. Behney, James F. Marsteller and William B. Schaeffer, who purchased sixteen acres of land from the estate of Jonathan Sterner, and caused the same to be laid off into 1,664 lots, in dimensions 16 by 18 feet. They were incorporated April 1, 1907, under the name of Hillside Cemetery Association, and the officers since then have been James L. Marsteller, president; and Henry J. Kurtz, secretary, treasurer and superintendent.

Concrete ornamental entrances have been built on the east and west sides, the land is being gradually graded, planted with many varieties of shrubbery and enclosed by California privet hedging. The expenditure until March, 1914, exceeded $10,000; and the interments numbered 89.

The Woodmen of the World have erected a fine granite monument at the grave of Frank Hammerly.

The English Catholic cemetery was established at Ridge avenue and Allen street in 1854, and the German Catholics have maintained Holy Sepulchre Cemetery at Laurel Hill since 1873. A cemetery was opened a few years ago adjoining the Church of St. John the Baptist.

The Jewish congregation of Agodas Achim, with Lehigh lodge, No. 8, of the Independent Order of Brith Scholem, purchased an acre of ground on Laurel Hill, Fullerton road, which was dedicated as a cemetery on July 13, 1913.

St. Mark's cemetery was opened in 1885 for the Lutheran and Reformed congregations worshipping in the church on Hellertown avenue.

CENSUS.—The population of Allentown according to the census of the United States taken every decade was as follows:

1790,	486	1860,	8,025
1800,	573	1870,	13,884
1810,	710	1880,	18,063
1820,	1,132	1890,	25,228
1830,	1,544	1900,	35,416
1840,	2,493	1910,	51,913
1850,	3,703

The population, in 1910, by wards, was as follows:

First Ward,	4,125	Eighth Ward, ...	7,168
Second Ward, ...	3,622	Ninth Ward,	4,260
Third Ward,	3,396	Tenth Ward,	7,290
Fourth Ward, ...	2,531	Eleventh Ward, ...	4,997
Fifth Ward,	2,150	Twelfth Ward, ...	1,874
Sixth Ward,	5,077	Thirteenth Ward,	1,857
Seventh Ward, ...	3,566

The population in 1914 is estimated at 60,000.

CHAPTER XXII.

CHURCHES.

The history of the various religious bodies of the city is treated in detail in the following pages, each congregation's history appearing under its respective denomination.

REFORMED.

ZION REFORMED CHURCH.

This congregation, the oldest in Allentown, was organized in 1762, in the same year in which the town was founded. A log church building was erected in this year by the Reformed and Lutheran inhabitants of the town and vicinity and used as a joint place of worship. This building, as near as can be ascertained, stood in the rear of the same lot on which the present edifice stands. The first pastor was Rev. John Daniel Gros, D.D., who became pastor of four congregations, Allentown, Egypt, Jordan and Unionville, in 1765. The first entry by Rev. Gros in the church register was the baptism of John George, son of Simon and Appollonia Fries, "residents of the new town," on Feb. 27, 1765. In his report to Coetus, on May 9, 1765, Rev. Gros reported a membership of 83 persons, the baptism of six children and four members received. The first mention of the officers of the congregation is on December 9, 1765, when, according to the Friedensbote, of June 3, 1840, the church accounts were adjusted in the presence of the pastor, Rev. Gros, and the elders and deacons, Thomas Hunsicker, Jacob Mohr, John Griesemer, David Deshler and Peter Roth. The church record book contains the following inscription, translated from the German: "Church Record begun in the new town Allentown, in the 1765th year of the Kingdom of Grace from the birth of our Saviour Jesus Christ, for the use of the Reformed congregation there. J. Daniel Gros, Ref. Minister."

Rev. John Daniel Gros was born at Webenheim, in the county of Zweibruecken, in 1737. He attended the Universities of Marburg and Heidelberg and came to America in 1764. He served as pastor at Allentown until 1770, when he took charge of the congregations in Saucon and Springfield. In 1773 he accepted a call to Kingston, N. Y., where he was pastor until 1783. He was pastor of the German Reformed congregation in New York city from 1783 to 1795. He became professor of German Languages at Columbia College, 1784-1795, of Moral Philosophy, 1787-1795, and Regent of the University of New York from 1784 to 1787. Columbia College gave him the degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1789. He wrote the first great book published in America on moral philosophy, entitled, "Natural Principles of Rectitude, a Systematic Treatise on Moral Philosophy," Philadelphia, 1795. He died May 27, 1812. Dr. Gros was a man of culture and superior qualities. He directed the classical and theological studies of Rev. William Hendel, D.D., and was tutor to the distinguished and accomplished Rev. Dr. Milledoler.

In 1770 permission was granted to the congregation by Governor Penn to collect funds by means of a lottery for the purpose of erecting a new church building. On Feb. 17, 1771, Rev. Abraham Blumer became pastor of the congregation. In his report to Coetus in that year he states that the congregation had thirty-eight members and the salary for the four congregations was £75. On June 25, 1773, the cornerstone of the new church building was laid. The building committee consisted of John Griesemer, Nicholas Fuchs, John Miller, Michael Kolb and Peter Rhoads, Treasurer. The building was completed in 1776 at a cost of about five hundred pounds sterling. It was the exclusive property of the Reformed congregation. In the construction of the church were used 345 loads of stones and 24,000 feet of boards. The masonry was contracted for by James Preston at £45 and John Miller received £135 for the carpenter work. The largest contribution was £15, by Peter Rhoads, and the smallest, two pence, by "a friend." A cut of this church, made from a photograph of a woodcut used in a German newspaper of 1840, the Friedensbote, is shown on the following page.

In 1782 Rev. Blumer reported to Coetus a membership of forty-nine families in his Allentown congregation and the baptism of twenty-eight persons. In 1785 his report indicates that forty-five families were members of his congregation, that eighteen persons had been baptized and twenty-two confirmed, and that there were thirty-five scholars in the school. Rev. Blumer was pastor of the congregation for thirty years, retiring in 1801, owing to failing strength and increasing years. His last baptism at Allentown was March 29, 1801.

It was during the pastorate of Rev. Blumer, that the Liberty Bell and the chimes of Christ church, nine in number, were concealed beneath the floor of Zion church in September, 1777, when the British troops occupied Philadelphia. In the year 1777 and 1778 the church building was used as a hospital for sick and wounded Continental soldiers and on Oct. 3, 1778, the treasurer of the congregation received from Deputy Quartermaster General Robert L. Hooper, the sum of £103 for rent and damages suffered by the church during the war.

cultured gentleman and was familiar with several modern languages.

Abraham Blumer

In 1774 he received a call from the French Reformed church, of New York City, which he declined in a letter written in the French language. The church entries made by him are models of scrupulous neatness. Rev. Blumer died April 23, 1822, at his farm near the Jordan Reformed church, where he was buried.

Rev. John Gobrecht succeeded Rev. Blumer as pastor in 1801 and served until 1831. He was the son of Rev. John Christopher Gobrecht, SECOND CHURCH, BUILT 1773, WHERE LIBERTY BELL WAS CONCEALED.

Rev. Abraham Blumer, the second pastor, was born in Grabs, in the canton of Glarus, Switzerland, Dec. 14, 1736. He was the son of Rev. John Jacob Blumer, and his wife Salome Shindler. He studied at Basle and was ordained to the ministry June 8, 1756. He became chaplain of a Swiss regiment in the service of the King of Sardinia, in 1757, and remained in that service until 1766, when he became a teacher and private tutor. In 1770 the Synods of South and North Holland sent him to Pennsylvania. He arrived at New York in January, 1771, and in the following month assumed the pastorate of the congregation at Allentown as well as of the other three congregations in the Whitehall charge. Rev. Blumer was a thoroughly and was born in Lancaster county, Dec. 10, 1773, in which county he studied under Drs. Melsheimer, Stock and Hendel. His home while pastor of the Whitehall charge was between Egypt and Ballietsville, where he died March 5, 1831. He was a quiet, peaceable man, much given to study and was greatly beloved by all his parishioners. Rev. John Zuilch became his assistant toward the close of his pastorate and preached at Allentown every fourth Sunday. Upon the death of Rev. Gobrecht, Rev. Joseph S. Dubbs received a majority of all the votes cast in the whole charge, but in Zion congregation Rev. Zuilch received the larger number. This led to a division, and the friends of Rev. Zuilch organized a separate congregation and called him as pastor. He soon withdrew and was succeeded by Rev. Dr. J. C. Becker. The differences between the two parties gradually disappeared and in 1833 the congregations reunited under the pastorate of Rev. Dubbs.

Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Dubbs, the fourth pastor, from 75 members in 1831 to 1,200 in 1860. He resigned in 1856, but his resignation was not accepted and Rev. Joshua Derr was then called as associate pastor. This arrangement did not prove satisfactory and resulted in 1858 in the organization of a separate congregation, called was born Oct. 16, 1796, in Lower Milford township. He studied under Rev. Dr. F. L. Herman, and was ordained in September, 1823. He was pastor at Allentown until 1861, assisted in later years by his son, Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, and Rev. C. R. Kessler, both of whom preached in English. During his pastorate the congregation grew

St. John's, of which Rev. Derr became the regular pastor. Rev. Joseph H. Dubbs became his father's assistant Sept. 18, 1859, and was elected pastor on the retirement of his father, Jan. 1, 1861. Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Dubbs remained pastor of the other congregations of his charge until 1868, when he resigned and removed to Allentown, where he died April 14, 1877. During his pastorate at Zion church, a new brick building was erected, the cornerstone of which was laid preach in the evening. Rev. Joseph H. Dubbs resigned his pastorate Feb. 15, 1863, and Rev. N. S. Strassburger, of Pottstown, was elected

ZION REFORMED CHURCH.

Aug. 5, 1838, and the building was dedicated June 7 and 8, 1840. At this time more frequent services were necessary and Dr. Dubbs began to his successor March 1, 1863, and became the pastor of the once more united Zion congregation. He was a close student and a forceful orator. During his pastorate he preached in German in the morning and in the evening in English. Rev. Strassburger resigned March 1, 1881, and in June, 1881, Rev. Edwin A. Gernant was elected pastor, and ordained and installed on July 17th. During his pastorate, on Jan. 24, 1886, a new church was decided upon, of which the cornerstone was laid Aug. 22, 1886. This beautiful structure, which, with the chapel, was built at a cost of $50,000, was dedicated April 8, 1888. Rev. Gernant resigned the pastorate in June, 1890, when Rev. Thomas J. Hacker, D.D., was elected pastor. He served until the last Sunday in December, 1904. Rev. H. M. J. Klein, Ph.D., was chosen pastor April 16, 1905, and continued until August, 1910, when he was elected to a professorship at Franklin and Marshall College. Rev. Simon Sipple, the present pastor, was elected Dec. 1, 1910.

In 1904, the Sunday school chapel was rebuilt and re-dedicated on Nov. 4, 1906.

About the year 1802 a pipe organ was purchased by the congregation which was in use until 1867. In the third, or brick church, the organ was situated in the gallery. In 1867, a new organ was purchased at a cost of about $3,000, and the old organ was sold to the congregations of the Union church near Petersville for $100. It is probable that the old bell, purchased by the congregation in 1795, was also sold at this time. The new organ was dedicated Oct. 2, 1867. In 1885, it was remodelled and re-dedicated on Feb. 15, 1885. The present organ was dedicated Oct. 6, 1912. The cost of the organ, including the Durfee organ chimes, and re-arrangement of the choir seats, was about $10,000. The present organist, W. W. Landis, was elected to the position in August, 1913.

The present membership of the congregation is 1,100.

A Sunday school was organized by members of this congregation in 1825. Michael D. Eberhard was the first superintendent. During the erection of the third church it met in the Lutheran church and the Lutheran schoolhouse on South Eighth street, as many Lutheran children also attended the school. In 1839, the school met in the basement of the new church. Joseph Young, Joseph Weiss and Henry Weinsheimer were among the active workers in the school. In 1849, 35 teachers and 180 scholars were enrolled. The chairs in the school, (one of which is still in existence) were labeled, "Reformed and Lutheran Sunday School." Rev. Joshua Yeager, the Lutheran pastor of St. Paul's, was very active in his encouragement of the school. It remained a union school until 1855, when St. John's Lutheran congregation was organized.

The present membership of the school is 880, and Wilson K. Mohr, Esq., is the superintendent.

The active organizations of the congregation are the Womens' Missionary Society, Pastor's Helpers, Altar Guild, Phoebe Circle, Lemonade Booth, Young Peoples' Guild and Mission Band.

ST. JOHN'S REFORMED CHURCH.

To establish a congregation of the Reformed faith in this city, whose services were designed to be conducted exclusively in the English language was, fifty years ago, no light matter.

The German language, since the first origin of the Reformed Church in this section, has been the principal medium of social and religious intercourse, and with but few exceptions all the congregations have been exclusively German. The early pioneers naturally preferred to worship God in their mother tongue, and they desired their children to do likewise; hence they regarded the use of English service in the church as a dangerous innovation. This prejudice held sway for some time.

At length, however, the more intelligent and advanced members, and especially the young, began to show signs of restlessness under the full consciousness that their religious wants were not fully met, and they resolved upon immediate action.

This city had been rapidly increasing in population; the public schools introduced an entire English curriculum; the language came to be more generally spoken, and there became apparent a more urgent demand for English service in the Reformed Church. To his credit be it recorded that Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Dubbs, now of sainted memory, showed a disposition, during the closing period of his long and laborious pastorate of Zion's Reformed congregation, to meet this growing demand for English service to the best of his ability, by instructing such of his catechumens as preferred it, in that language.

The first step taken was the introduction of an occasional English service by the pastors of the mother congregation, which was soon afterwards followed by a regular evening service in that language. Yet even this did not satisfy a pressing want; it began to be generally felt that the organization of an exclusively English congregation, and the erection of a suitable church building for the same, was absolutely indispensable, and the only means of keeping the young within the church of their fathers.

Encouraged and stimulated by the judicious counsel of Rev. W. R. Hofford and Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, who actively sympathized with them, a few of the more venturesome spirits resolved that they would take the initiative without any further delay.

An earnest petition, setting forth the importance of such organization and the desirableness of realizing it at as early a day as possible, was presented to the consistory of Zion's Reformed congregation, over the signatures of George Kuhl and C. Lewis Huber. The author of this petition was the Rev. W. R. Hofford. We find the following record bearing on this paper:

"At a meeting of the Consistory of the German Reformed congregation, held June 4, 1865, the above petition was laid before it, when it was, on motion, Resolved, That the prayers contained therein be granted. By order. Attest, E. J. Knauss, Secretary of Zion's Reformed Consistory, at Allentown, Pa."

After some few months' delay, caused by certain unexpected complications, in obedience to a call inviting all those favorable to the new enterprise, a meeting was held in the lecture-room of the mother church on the evening of Sept. 14, 1865. An organization being effected, with Tobias Kessler as president and Reuben H. Kramm as secretary, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Resolved, That the members of Zion's German Reformed congregation, of Allentown, Pa., seeing the necessity of doing something speedily to maintain and further the interests of our church, favor the organization of an exclusively English congregation; and desiring that this may be done peaceably, and that a friendly relation may continue to exist between the mother church and her offspring, we deem it prudent that our pastor, Rev. N. S. Strassburger, should organize and install the members of the consistory; and that, after the organization, said congregation be left unrestrained in the adoption of such measures as will be thought most expedient to insure success." A committee was appointed at the same time to consult with the influential members of the mother church as to the best method of promoting the contemplated enterprise. At an adjourned meeting, on the evening of Sept. 27, 1865, this committee, having reported favorably, was continued for a further prosecution of the work. Another committee, appointed Nov. 29, 1865, to secure a suitable room for the use of this inchoate organization, reported at a subsequent meeting, held Dec. 6, 1865, that they had succeeded in obtaining the Academy building. Meanwhile, the proper application, as required in such cases by the Constitution of the German Reformed Church of the United States, being laid before the Classis of East Pennsylvania, convened in special session in the city of Allentown, on Nov. 26, 1865, met with favorable action, and authority was given to proceed with the organization.

On the evening of Dec. 28, 1865, a meeting was held in the Academy Hall, on the corner of Eighth and Walnut streets, which provided for the creation of the new Sunday school, to be called the "Sunday-school of the English Reformed Congregation of Allentown," and to form the nucleus of said congregation. The following officers were elected: Superintendent, T. Kessler; assistant superintendent, R. H. Kramm; secretary and treasurer, George Kuhl; librarian, Levi Fenstermacher; assistant librarian, Miss Ellen J. McHose; president of the association, George Hagenbuch. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for the government of the Sunday School Association, to report at a meeting held Jan. 11, 1866, when its work, after a few slight changes, was adopted, and substantially controls the organization to this day.

An announcement having appeared to that effect in the Daily News of the city, the English Reformed Sunday school convened for the first time in the Academy Hall, on Sunday, Jan. 1, 1866, at 1.30 o'clock P. M., with an encouraging attendance of officers, teachers, and pupils. A fortnight after, Jan. 15, 1866, divine services being ended, in order to complete the new organization, an election was held for church officers, which resulted in the choice of two elders: George Hagenbuch and Tobias Kessler, and four deacons: Reuben H. Kramm, George Kuhl, John S. Kessler, and C. Lewis Huber, who were ordained and installed at a service held in Zion's Reformed church on the evening of Jan. 29, 1866, by a committee appointed by the Classis of East Pennsylvania. They constituted the consistory for 1866-67, being the first consistory of the new English Reformed Congregation of Allentown.

At a regular meeting of the consistory, held April 2, 1866, it was resolved to present the name of Rev. S. Philips, of Carlisle, as a candidate to be voted for as pastor by such persons as, at a congregational meeting to be held for the purpose, on Sunday evening, April 8, 1866, might be willing to identify themselves permanently with the new interest. This election was held at the appointed time, and resulted in the choice of the above-named candidate. A call was promptly extended to him, and as promptly accepted. He preached his introductory sermon on Sunday, May 20, 1866. He was installed by a committee of the Classis of East Pennsylvania on June 26, 1866. The new congregation was still without a name, it was agreed at a meeting of the consistory, June 20th, that the church shall hereafter be known as the "St. John's English Reformed Congregation." At the same time the constitution and by-laws were reported by the pastor, which were afterwards unanimously adopted by the congregation on July 1, 1866. On July 8th, when the first communion was administered, the congregation numbered 124 members, two of these having been received by confirmation, and the others by certificate and reprofession.

Being without the necessary church building, the consistory met in special session on July 29th of the same year, when they appointed the Hon. Samuel McHose to negotiate for a suitable lot for a church. This resulted in the purchase of the present church property at Sixth and the Sunday services and Leh's Hall for the Wednesday evening services and the use of the main Sunday school, while the infant school met in the third story of Mr. Kuhl's building, Mrs. William R. Hufford, Miss Anna B. Steckel and Mr. Kuhl having it in charge.

The cornerstone of the church was laid in the summer of 1867. The erection of the church was interrupted by the sudden resignation of the pastor, Rev. Philips, whose pastorate ended Nov. 10, 1867. At this time the congregation numbered 236 persons. At a congregational meeting held March 2, 1868, Rev. Samuel G. Wagner, then pastor of Boehm's church and the Whitemarsh congregation, Fort Washington, was elected pastor. A call was tendered and ac-

ST. JOHN'S REFORMED CHURCH.

Walnut streets. On April 8, 1867, the congregation was incorporated as St. John's English Reformed church of Allentown. Samuel McHose, William Blumer, Thomas Mohr, C. B. Haintz and Thomas Barber were then appointed a building committee. On Nov. 25, 1866, Milton J. Kramer, Levi Line and Thomas Mohr were elected trustees, and on May 5, 1867, at a congregational meeting held in the court house, the following consistory was chosen: Elders: George Hagenbuch, Tobias Kessler and Samuel Engleman; Deacons: George Kuhl, R. H. Kramm, C. Lewis Huber, John S. Kessler, Lewis P. Hecker and Charles H. Ruhe.

The congregation secured the court house for cepted and Rev. Wagner's pastorate began June 1, 1868. The installation took place in the court house in the month of June and the introductory sermon was preached on July 12, 1868.

The church building was dedicated on the first Sunday of the new year, Jan. 3, 1869. There were three services on that day, as well as services on Saturday afternoon and evening. The pastor was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. W. Nevin, Rev. Dr. D. Gans, Rev. Dr. C. Z. Weiser, and Rev. Dr. D. Y. Heisler. The consistory remained the same with the exception of the election of Henry C. Wagner to succeed C. Lewis Huber, who withdrew from the congregation. In 1871 the basement rooms for the use of the Sunday school were dedicated. In 1876, a Hook and Hastings pipe organ was purchased for $3,000 and erected in the gallery. In 1884, a beautiful chime of nine bells was presented by Samuel A. Butz, Esq., in memory of his daughter, Helen. The two towers were erected at this time and the church remodelled. The total cost of the improvements was about $10,000, and on the first Sunday in December, 1884, the church was re-dedicated.

In 1890, the chapel was built at a cost of $16,000, which was enlarged in 1891 with an addition for the infant department at a cost of $1,790. Rev. C. Ernest Wagner was associated with his father from April 1, 1889, until October, 1891.

Trinity Reformed congregation was organized as a mission of the church in 1890 and a memorial chapel built by Joseph Ruhe, a member of St. John's. Rev. Scott R. Wagner served as assistant pastor from October, 1900, to April, 1903. Rev. Dr. Wagner was pastor of the congregation for thirty-six years, his pastorate ending June 30, 1904. During this period 1,167 persons were received into the church, 570 children baptized, 305 marriages solemnized and 570 funerals attended. Rev. Dr. Wagner died at his son's residence at Lancaster, Oct. 30, 1908.

Rev. Frederick C. Seitz, of Hanover, Pa., the present beloved pastor, was elected as such July 3, 1904, and began his pastorate Oct. 1, 1904. On Nov. 21, 1909, a memorial window and reredos over the altar, presented by Rev. C. Ernest Wagner in memory of his father were unveiled and consecrated. In 1911, extensive improvements to the church were made at a cost of about $10,000. New windows were inserted, the entrance to the edifice altered, a new chancel erected, the interior was re-frescoed and new carpets and a new system of electric lighting was installed. The church was re-dedicated Jan. 14, 1912. In 1913, the chapel was improved at a cost of $800, by new chairs, class tables and new floor covering.

The organ was removed from the gallery to the front of the church in 1890, and in 1900 a new Hook and Hastings organ, with three manuals, costing $8,000, was installed. The organists of the congregation have been Solomon P. Newhard, J. S. Whitney, J. F. Ohl, F. Wolf; M. S. Gabriel, 1871-76; Alfred H. Ettinger, 1876-1897; David E. Miles, 1907-1909. The present organist, Professor Will Rees, was elected Dec. 15, 1909. The choir numbers 35 persons and the Junior choir has a membership of 30 boys and girls. The congregation numbers 789, and its benevolences exceed the contributions for congregational expenses. In 1913, the contributions for benevolence were $8,136.00, while the amount contributed for congregational purposes was $6,409.00. The congregation also supports a foreign missionary in Japan, Rev. Dr. Christopher Noss.

The present consistory is composed of R. H. Kramm, elder emeritus; Milton S. Gabriel, Alvin Rupp and David A. Miller, elders; G. Fred Kuhl, Harry J. Lerch, Henry A. Reninger, John S. Mickley, Calvin M. Hillegass, John A. Rupp, Jacob W. Grim, Ernest B. McCready and Conrad A. Herwig, deacons. The trustees are Edward H. Reninger, Esq., Nathan A. Haas and John N. Lawfer. Reuben P. Steckel was trustee of the congregation for thirty-three years from 1880 until his death in 1913.

The Sunday school numbers 476 scholars and 38 officers and teachers. Oliver H. Mickley is superintendent, David H. Kratz, president of the Sunday School Association, and Mrs. Frederick C. Seitz, superintendent of the Primary department. The Sunday school orchestra is under the leadership of E. A. Donecker.

The societies of the congregation are: Ladies' Aid Society, Missionary and Mite Society, Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, Loving Service Circle, I. H. M. Circle and Lend a Hand Circle, The King's Daughters and Sons (successors to the Young Peoples' Guild) and the Boys' and Girls' Mission Band.

SALEM REFORMED CHURCH.

After preliminary consideration of the subject relating to the establishment of a third Reformed church at Allentown for nearly a year, a joint committee, composed of members of Zion's and St. John's congregations, a lot of ground was leased on the corner of Eighth and Chew streets and a temporary frame chapel was erected on it which was dedicated Sept. 12, 1875, and named Salem's Reformed Church. A Sunday school was organized and George W. Hartzel elected superintendent. Members of the Reformed congregations, numbering 64, were admitted as members of Salem's church, and they elected the following consistory:

Trustee—Owen W. Faust.

Elders.—Aaron Butz, Elias Troxell.

Deacons.—John Bartholomew, James F. Hunsicker, Henry Hillegass, William B. Schaeffer.

Treasurer.—A. L. Newhard.

Public services were then regularly conducted every Sunday in the church and Sunday school. Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, of the Salisbury charge, was elected pastor and began the performance of his duties April 1, 1876; and $13,000 having been secured towards a church, the following building committee was appointed:

Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs	Conrad Paff
Solomon Boyer	Jesse Marcks
Thomas Steckel	Aaron Butz
Elias Lentz	Elias Troxell

A lot of ground was secured, situated on the north side of Chew street, near Seventh and the cornerstone was laid on Whitsuntide, June 4, 1876; and on December 24th a brick edifice, 52 by 91 feet, costing $20,000 and seating 700 persons, was dedicated to the service of God, the entire week having been devoted to religious worship and thanksgiving, and many appropriate gifts were received from different devoted members. The steeple was supplied with a fine, large bell, presented by Nathan Weiler, and with a clock by two young machinists (Knauss and Grammes). The membership of the church had increased to 500 in ten years; and of the Sunday school to 650, with William B. Schaeffer as the superintendent.

In 1890, Rev. George W. Richards became the assistant pastor and upon the retirement of Rev. Dr. Dubbs in 1892, became the pastor. In 1905, a Sunday school chapel, with a seating capacity of about 1,800, was built. In 1898, Rev. Richards was elected to the chair of church history in the Seminary at Lancaster, and the following year Rev. A. R. Bartholomew succeeded him as pastor. During his pastorate about eighty of the members of the congregation assisted in organizing St. Andrew's congregation and about one hundred formed the nucleus of Dubbs' Memorial congregation. Rev. Dr. Bartholomew resigned in the fall of 1902, to become secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions. Rev. Theodore F. Herman became the pastor in January, 1903, and served until 1910, when he accepted the chair of Systematic Theology in the Seminary at Lancaster, and was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Gustav A. Schwedes.

The last services in the old church were held Nov. 3, 1912, after which the building was torn down and work begun on the present magnificent structure, erected at a cost of $100,000, the cornerstone of which was laid Aug. 10, 1913. The building committee was composed of the pastor, Frank A. Arner, C. Frank Stahler, H. G. Merkle, O. P. Schlosser, J. M. Grimley and Herbert J. Hunsicker. The architect of the building was A. A. Ritcher, of Reading. The congregation numbers over 1,600 and is the largest congregation of this denomination in the United States. The Sunday school enrollment is over 2,100, of which James F. Hunsicker is the superintendent.

CHRIST REFORMED CHURCH.

Christ Reformed church is a brick edifice situated on the southeast corner of Second and Court streets, in a district of the city formerly known as the East Side. On this corner there was previously a small frame church which had been occupied by the United Brethren, and it having been determined by the East Pennsylvania Classis, on May 4, 1875, that a congregation should be organized in this district, a committee, consisting of the active Reformed pastors of Allentown, obtained permission to occupy this little church for religious services and Rev. Jared Fritzinger preached the first sermon there on March 5, 1876.

The encouragement was so great that a Sunday school was organized on April 2nd, and in July following a congregation was effected, with the name of Christ Church, with not a single member from any of the older congregations who lived in the East Side, and very little financial aid. Rev. Fritzinger had been appointed a missionary and he had secured a score of persons from that vicinity who were willing to become members, who purchased the little church for $1,500.

The following consistory was elected:

Elders.—Tobias Weiss, William Serfass.

Deacons.—William Cole, W. Beisel, T. Lester.

Trustees.—D. Moyer, A. Weiss, C. F. Datesman.

The first communion was administered on Oct. 22, 1876 to thirty members. After laboring most faithfully for four years, Rev. Fritzinger was obliged to resign on account of illness and old age.

Rev. William J. Kerschner became the pastor in March, 1881, served most faithfully for nearly three years and got the congregation to be self-sustaining, which came to number 110.

Rev. Moses H. Diefenderfer was elected as his successor in July, 1884, and "he won many people to the church who had hitherto scoffed at religion." The little frame church became too small to accommodate the increasing attendance and quite naturally he directed his efforts toward a new building "to the greater glory of God." A little child brought him a penny for the new church and this led a large-hearted member of another congregation to offer $500, and so the movement proceeded until enough money was secured to warrant the undertaking. A building committee was appointed with Major F. D. Beary as chairman; the cornerstone was laid Sept. 6, 1896; and the completed semi-gothic building, 39 by 110 feet, was dedicated May 2, 1897. The membership had grown to 305.

The services were conducted in the English and German languages until June, 1901, when the German was discontinued.

A bell was placed in the church tower in 1902, as a gift from Charles E. Wolf, an elder. A fine pipe organ was installed in 1905, one-half of the cost having been contributed by Andrew Carnegie. Other useful gifts were presented by different members.

In 1909, the property, including a two-story brick building, adjoining the church on the south was purchased as a parsonage; new heating and lighting systems were installed, and the exterior of the edifice was repaired. The total valuation of the church property is estimated at $30,000.

CHRIST REFORMED CHURCH.

The pastors have been:

Jared Fritzinger, 1876-1880	M. H. Diefenderfer, 1884-1901
William J. Kerschner, 1881-1883	H. L. Fogelman, 1901-1907 Charles F. Althouse, 1907—

The membership of the church in April, 1914, was 585; of the Sunday school, 500. Major

Frank D. Beary has been a most zealous superintendent in the cause of Sunday school work since 1893.

The only surviving charter member of the congregation is Mrs. Emma (W. H. H.) Trexler.

TRINITY MEMORIAL REFORMED CHURCH.

A chapel was built at the northwest corner of Linden and Poplar streets in 1889 by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ruhe in loving remembrance of their son, Robert. They were members of St. John's Reformed congregation, whose activities led to the establishment of a congregation in this section of Allentown.

About Sept. 1, 1891, Lehigh Classis appointed a special committee of five ministers to canvass the neighborhood in order to secure the names of such persons as were willing to join in forming the fifth Reformed congregation at Allentown and this resulted in a meeting held on Oct. 5, 1891, when it was formally organized. The first members were:

Mrs. Anna M. Baker	Maria Litzenberger
Dr. L. C. Berkemeyer	Sarah C. Mest
Charles F. Berkemeyer	James W. Roberts
Blanche A. Berkemeyer	Mary L. Schelly
Anna May Berkemeyer	J. F. Schoenberger
Harvey W. Good	Mrs. A. M. Schoenberger
Mrs. Ida L. Good	Kate S. Schoenberger
Moses Guth	Lilly L. Schoenberger
Mary H. Guth	Bertha Schoenberger
Milton P. Haas	F. A. Schoenberger
Lena L. Haas	William C. Wieder

A Sunday school association was formed about the same time.

The present attractive edifice was erected in the place of the chapel in the year 1900 at an expense of about $25,000.

The following Reformed ministers have been the pastors:

C. Ernest Wagner, 1891	L. J. Rohrbaugh, 1897-1903
Stewart U. Mitman, 1891-95	Scott R. Wagner, 1903-06
William J. Hinke, 1896-97	S. Ezra Neikerk, 1906-12 J. J. Schaeffer, 1912—

The membership of the church in April, 1914, was 400, and of the Sunday school, 575.

GRACE REFORMED CHURCH.

Grace Reformed church is a brick edifice on Cleveland street, in the Twelfth ward, Allentown, erected in 1896, the congregation having grown out of the movement in establishing and carrying on the Salisbury Union Sunday school. The organization was made July 9, 1897, with 49 members who were mostly from the Salem Reformed church, among the more active being Harry Kleckner and wife, F. M. Young and wife, Charles Fried and wife, Myron Kline and wife, Francis Buchecker and Miss Clara Krum, the organist.

The building was remodelled in 1913, and steam heat installed; and additional improvements were made in the winter and spring of 1914, costing $1,500.

The pastors have been:—P. A. DeLong, 1897-98; D. E. Schoedler, 1899-1908; Franklin H.

Reformed church on May 25, 1900, and the first installation of a consistory took place there two days afterward. The first officers were E. S. Rambo, B. K. Hamm and J. S. Yeager, elders; and George H. Horn, A. B. Lentz, S. A. Moyer, S. M. Sterner, O. B. J. Haines and M. S. Harting, deacons.

In June, 1900, with a membership of 54, Rev. Robert M. Kern was elected pastor, and he has

ST. ANDREW'S REFORMED CHURCH.

Moyer, 1908 to the present time. The membership in April, 1914, was 250.

A Sunday school has been conducted from the beginning, with Franklin B. More as the superintendent since 1900; members, 450.

ST. ANDREW'S REFORMED CHURCH.

After a number of preliminary meetings, this congregation was regularly organized in Zion's served the congregation since in a most efficient and successful manner.

The religious services were begun in the Academy of Music at Sixth and Linden streets on July 1, 1900, and held there for six months, then (on account of the destruction of the building by fire) in the Lyric theatre until the completion of their church in 1903.

A lot of ground, 100 by 110 feet, on the northwest corner of Ninth and Gordon streets, was secured for a church in August, 1900, and within a year afterward operations were started. The cornerstone was laid Nov. 3, 1901, and a superior, attractive and commodious stone structure was solemnly dedicated March 15, 1903, the services having been continued for a week. Shortly afterward a fine pipe organ was supplied. The total cost exceeded $50,000.

The development of this religious body, notwithstanding similar other bodies, has been most remarkable; for starting with 54 members, it increased to 204 in four months, and at the end of the first year to 373. In April, 1914, the membership was 1,200, which evidences the popularity and administrative ability of the pastor. The services have been conducted from the beginning until now in the German and English languages, alternately morning and evening.

A Sunday school was organized at the same time in the Eighth ward school building with O. B. J. Haines as superintendent, who has continued to serve until now. The membership is 1,150.

DUBBS MEMORIAL REFORMED CHURCH.

Dubbs Memorial Reformed church is situated on the northeast corner of Fifth and Allen streets, and was erected as a memorial to Rev. Dr. A. J. G. Dubbs, the founder and first pastor of Salem Reformed church. The congregation was organized in July, 1902, with a membership of 65, of whom 36 were from the Salem church; on Sept. 6, 1903, the cornerstone was laid, and the building operations were carried on so successfully that by April 17, 1904, the Sunday school room was dedicated. The membership of the church had increased to 200, and of the school to 360. The first elders were Dr. N. C. E. Guth and Israel Ritter; and the first deacons, John C. Holman, Charles Laudenslager, C. J. Dilcher and Harvey E. Burger.

The lot was purchased in 1888 by the Young People's Society of Salem church and though regarded then as apparently out of the way, it was found to be just in place when the movement for this church was inaugurated.

The building is a large and imposing brick edifice, 60 by 100 feet, with Sunday school annex at the rear, and a commanding steeple at the front. The church was completed at an expense exceeding $35,000, and it was dedicated June 18, 1912, making the ninth Reformed church in Allentown.

Rev. E. E. Kresge was chosen pastor Aug. 31, 1902; moved in September to Allentown, where he resides at No. 521 Tilghman street; was regularly installed on October 21st, and has since served the congregation in a most efficient manner.

The introductory movement for the establishment of the Sunday school was started May 11, 1902, in the Allen public school building; and on the 17th of May a permanent organization was effected with more than 100 persons in attendance. The officers then elected were: superintendent, Dr. N. C. E. Guth; assistant superintendent, Charles R. Roberts; secretary, Cyrus J. Dilcher; librarian, Seldon M. L. Gernert; treasurer, Harvey E. Burger. Dr. Guth served as superintendent until 1906. He was succeeded by James A. Heiney, who has served since in a most faithful manner.

The membership of the church in April, 1914, was 723; of the Sunday school, 750; which shows the devotion and co-operative spirit of the congregation.

ST. PAUL'S REFORMED CHURCH.

St. Paul's Reformed congregation, which worships in a chapel at Hamilton and Carlisle streets, was organized Sept. 1, 1912, with 77 members, and Rev. J. P. Bachman as pastor. The congregation owns the lot, 80 by 150 feet, on which the frame chapel was erected at a cost of about $1,200, as a temporary place of worship, which was dedicated Jan. 16, 1913. The Sunday school was organized in May, 1912, and now has a membership of 175, with George Horn as superintendent.

ST. JAMES' REFORMED CHURCH.

St. James' Reformed congregation was organized June 4, 1913, and on June 29, 1913, the chapel at Fifteenth and Union streets was dedicated. The membership at that time numbered 46, which has since increased to 82. Rev. Joseph S. Peters is the pastor and the consistory is composed of J. A. Wuchter, Granville Peters and Clark F. Dreshler, elders, and A. R. Kline, Charles A. Vogenitz, Alton Bowman, Fred N. Peters, Warren E. Koch and George K. Halteman, deacons. The choir leader is Ray Schoenly, and the organist, Miss Pauline Schadt. The congregation owns a lot at Fifteenth and Walnut streets on which a church building will be erected at some future time. The Sunday school enrollment is over 150 and its superintendent is Frank M. Cressman.

ST. MARK'S UNION CHURCH.

St. Mark's Union Church is situated on Hellertown avenue, in South Allentown. A meeting was called in behalf of organizing another congregation in this community on Feb. 12, 1885, which was held in the public school building, with Harrison Bortz as president and M. J. Moll, secretary. The matter received favorable consideration and Rev. G. E. Sandt, James Barner and Henry A. Scholl were appointed as a committee to secure a proper lot for a church.

An organization was effected soon afterward and a constitution adopted, and the following consistories were elected:

LUTHERAN	REFORMED
Elders —	Elders —
James Barner	Franklin B. Gehris
Frederick Lishock	David Leibensperger
Samuel Ruhf	F. A. Lynn
Deacons —	Deacons —
Jacob Leibensperger	George H. Moyer
William Schlosser	James M. Carl
George Reinhold	John Mohry
Trustee —	Trustee —
Edwin Miller	Frederick Aubend

James Barner donated a lot 60 by 80 feet for a Union church soon after the meeting. Earnest steps were taken in putting up a building, and this was consecrated. The property is valued at $10,000.

The pastors have been:

LUTHERAN	REFORMED
C. E. Sandt, 1885-1905	Jared Fritzinger, 1885-93
I. B. Ritter (Supply) 1905-05	M. H. Diefenderfer, (Supply)
C. A. Kerschner, 1906-	C. E. Schaeffer, 1893-98
	P. A. DeLong, 1898-1900
	J. P. Bachman, 1900-08
	John B. Stoudt, 1908-09
	Charles Freeman (Supply) 1910
	J. F. DeLong (Supply) 1910-12
	J. P. Bachman 1912-

The combined membership of the two congregations is 750, the Lutherans being the larger.

An active Sunday school has been carried on with the superintendents alternating every year. The members number 300.

LUTHERAN.

ST. PAUL'S EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH.

In the same year that Allentown was founded, in 1762, the Lutherans and Reformed erected a building of logs which served as a house of worship for both congregations. The first Lutheran pastor was Rev. Jacob Joseph Roth, who had been a Catholic studiosus, and was from Siegen, in Germany. On Oct. 8, 1763, the day of the massacre by Indians in Allen and Whitehall townships, Rev. Roth was preaching at Allentown and the alarmed inhabitants of the vicinity crowded into the town in such numbers that the service was interrupted and the pastor was compelled to assist in organizing a military company for the defense of the town. Rev. Roth was received into full membership in the Lutheran Ministerium on Oct. 17, 1763. This is the first mention of the Allentown church in the Halle Reports. Rev. Roth died and was buried May 13, 1764, at Upper Saucon church.

From 1764 until 1769 the pastorate was vacant and dependent on occasional visits from neighboring clergymen. In 1769, toward the close of the year, Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk became the pastor of the congregation. He was born at Hackensack, N. J., Feb. 11, 1739, the son of Capt. Jacob Van Buskirk, of Dutch descent. He studied first for four years with his pastor, Rev. John A. Waygandt, then at the college of New Jersey and afterwards with the Dutch Reformed pastor at Hackensack, Rev. Mr. Schuyler. He was ordained Oct. 12, 1763. He became assistant to Rev. Muhlenberg, pastor at Germantown in 1765 and in 1769 removed to Macungie, taking charge of the Upper Milford, Upper Saucon, Salisbury and Allentown congregations. He remained pastor until 1778.

During his pastorate the Reformed congregation erected a stone church building, while the Lutheran congregation continued to occupy the log building. Rev. Van Buskirk died Aug. 5, 1800, and is buried at North Wales.

After 1778 the congregation was without a pastor until 1783, when Rev. John Christian Leps is mentioned in the synodical minutes as pastor at Allentown. He was a native of Denmark, and had resided in the Danish West Indies. He arrived in Philadelphia in 1773 and was engaged by Dr. Kunze as teacher in a seminary which he endeavored to establish. The seminary failed and Rev. Leps was ordained pastor at Loonenberg, now Athens, New York, in 1774. In 1778 he was still in New York, but longed to return to Pennsylvania. He did not remain long at Allentown, for in 1787 he was living in Virginia.

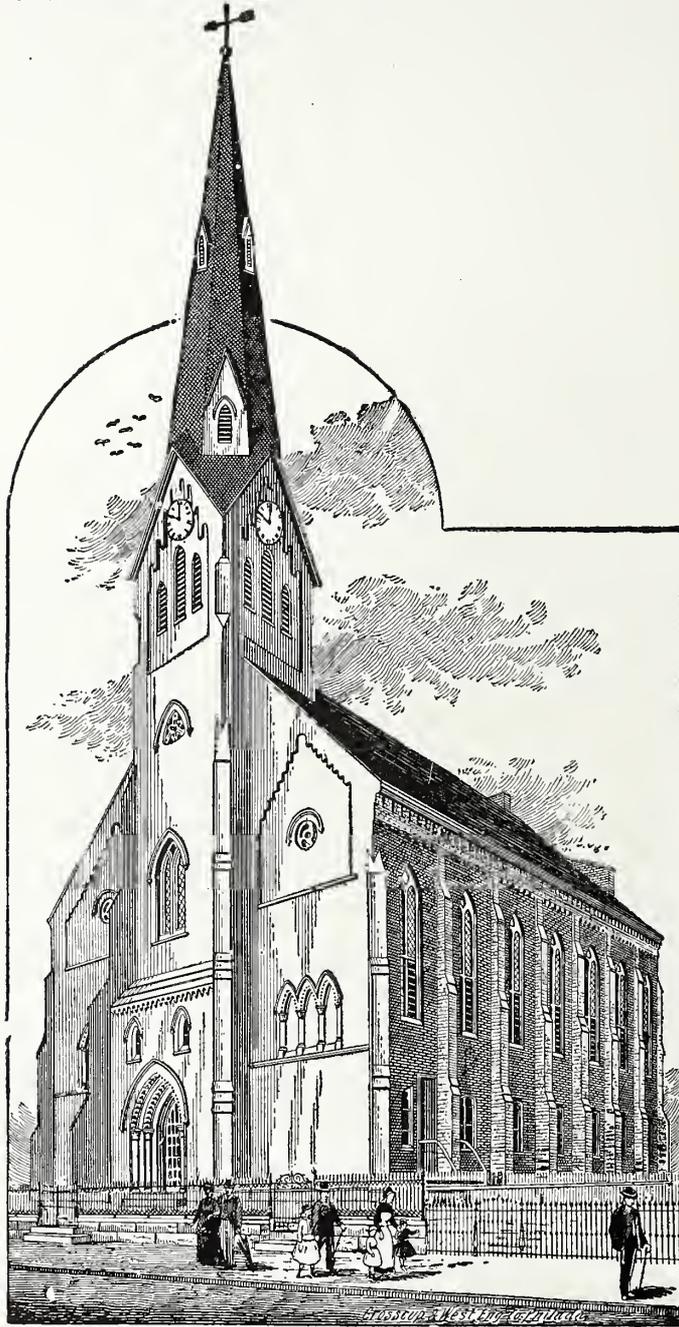

Rev. Carl Christopher Goetz, a native of Worms, was the pastor at Allentown and at Jordan church from 1785 to 1788. He had been chaplain in a cavalry regiment in Europe, pastor at Altenkirch, Nassau-Weilberg, court preacher to two Lutheran Princes at Solms-Braemfels, and inspector and pastor at Neu Saarvard and Hergstein.

Rev. Van Buskirk preached in Allentown subsequently, and in 1793 George Frederick Ellisen, a candidate from Germany was examined and licensed as a candidate to have charge of the four congregations in which charge Allentown was included. In 1796 his name was on the roll, but he was not at synod; in 1797 it disappears from the roll, and his license, not having been renewed, expired.

In 1794, during the pastorate of Licentiate

Ellisen, the old log church was abandoned and the erection of a larger structure was begun on the site of the present church. The cornerstone was laid June 24, 1794, and the building was of Whitehall. Leonard Nagle, of Allentown, was the treasurer. The subscriptions were secured by John Roth, Sr., and Godlieb Shreader, and collected by Philip Klotz and George Adam consecrated Sept. 4, 1795. The trustees of the congregation were John Horn, Peter Hertz and Henry Schantz, of Allentown, and John Roth, Blank. Mr. Klotz and Andrew Young collected £99.0.3 at Philadelphia. The collection at the laying of the cornerstone amounted to £25.1.3.

BRICK CHURCH, BUILT 1856.

The congregation received a legacy from Dr. Gottlieb Bolzius, of £26.17.6. Rev. Abraham Blumer, the Reformed pastor of Zion church, contributed £1.10.0, and many members of his congregations contributed. The cost of the building was nearly £1300 sterling. The carpenter work was contracted for by George Rhoads and Conrad Marks received £50.0.0 for the smith work. The old church was sold at vendue on June 1, 1795, to Valentine Fatzinger for £17.0.0.

Rev. John Conrad Jaeger became pastor of the congregation in 1800 and served it until 1831. Rev. Jaeger was born near York, Pa., Oct. 14, 1768. In 1792 he was licensed as "catechet" for the congregations at Greenwich, N. J., and which proposal was accepted and the salary increased to $150. After his father's death, in 1832, he became pastor of the two other churches in the charge, after which he preached every fourth Sunday morning and every other Sunday evening. He remained pastor until April 11, 1852, when he resigned, retaining, however, his country congregations. Rev. Yeager was born Sept. 23, 1802, and trained and educated for the ministry by his father. He remained active in ministerial life for 58 years, in which time he baptized 6,859 children, confirmed 3,875, married 2,000 couples and buried 2,763 persons. He died at Allentown, Aug. 1, 1888. He was a man of stalwart physical proportions, earnest

ST. PAUL'S EV. LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Williams township, Northampton county, and in 1800 purchased a farm in Allen, now Hanover township, where he lived until his death, Nov. 8, 1832. His charge included Christ church (Hanover), Dry Lands, Friedens, in Upper Saucon and Allentown. In each of his four churches Rev. Jaeger preached once in four weeks, on Sunday morning only. The Allentown congregation paid him $100 annually. In 1827, his son, Rev. Joshua Yeager, was licensed to preach, and assisted his father in his whole charge until 1831, when the father resigned at Allentown and Friedens church, of which his son then became pastor. Rev. Joshua Yeager settled in Allentown and offered to preach every other Sunday, and eloquent, and was greatly respected and beloved by his congregations.

On Sept. 12, 1852, Rev. Jacob Vogelbach was elected pastor and continued until February, 1857, when he resigned. Rev. Vogelbach preached in the German language and in October, 1852, Rev. B. M. Schmucker accepted the call to become the English pastor of the congregation and remained until St. John's church was erected.

A new church building having been determined upon to replace the old stone structure, the final service in the old church was held on Easter, 1855. The name "St. Paul's" was adopted for the new church on May 27, 1855. A brick edifice, erected at a cost of about $15,000, was consecrated Sept. 21, 1856.

In 1857, Rev. A. T. Geissenhainer became pastor and remained until August, 1858, when Rev. William G. Mennig succeeded him, taking charge in February, 1859. He remained pastor until the spring of 1877, when he resigned. During his pastorate the congregation united with the East Pennsylvania Synod and about 350 of the members left the congregation and organized St. Michael's congregation. On Oct. 1, 1877, it was voted to make use of the English language in the Sunday evening services.

Rev. Charles E. Hay, D.D., began a successful pastorate on Dec. 1, 1877. The membership increased from 400 to 608; a new pipe organ was purchased in 1884 at a cost of $3,000; and in 1899, a parsonage, costing $5,000, was erected. Rev. Hay resigned Feb. 10, 1890, and with 113 of the congregation founded St. Matthew's congregation.

Rev. J. A. Singmaster became pastor May 1, 1890, and served until May, 1899, when he was elected to the Singmaster chair of Biblical Theology in the Gettysburg Theological Seminary. Rev. George A. Greiss, the present pastor, succeeded him, preaching his initial sermon Sept. 9, 1900. The present membership is 1,137.

On April 19, 1903, the last services were held in the old church building, and on November 1st the cornerstone of the new building was laid. On Oct. 8, 1905, the new church was dedicated. This magnificent Gothic edifice was erected at a cost of $92,000, and was made possible by the generous gift of William R. Yeager and his mother, of $10,000, as a memorial in honor of William F. Yeager, the former's father. The capacity of the church is 1,000 and of the chapel 900. The body of Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Tilghman, wife of Chief Justice Tilghman and granddaughter of the founder of the city, William Allen, who died in 1798, reposes in a crypt in the foundation of the church.

The Sunday school of the congregation dates back to the year 1834, when the Lutheran and Reformed congregations had a union school. On Sept. 24, 1856, the school was organized in St. Paul's with Rev. S. K. Brobst as superintendent. It is divided into three departments, the main school, the primary school and the Bible class, each of which has a large membership. The societies of the congregation are: Home Missionary Society, Society for the Care of the Poor, Woman's Home and Missionary Society, Young Ladies' Mission Band, Children's Mission Band, St. Paul's Sewing Society, St. Paul's Guild, and the Christian Endeavor Society.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

In 1852 the first steps were taken for the erection of a separate English Lutheran church, the meeting having been held in St. Paul's Lutheran church, with Dr. Charles H. Martin as president, and Augustus L. Ruhe, as secretary. As soon as this determination had been formed, the German members also resolved to build a new church, which rendered the work of securing an English church more difficult, because little assistance could be expected from those who remained in the old congregation. But an amicable arrangement was effected that the English church should be built and when completed the whole congregation would occupy it until the old church was removed and a new one erected. A lot was accordingly secured at Fifth and Maple streets and enough subscriptions were obtained, upwards of $7,000, to warrant the undertaking.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The cornerstone was laid June 25, 1854; and the edifice was consecrated May 6, 1855, the services being extended for several days.

The English congregation was organized in the lecture room of the church July 16, 1855, the name "St. John's" chosen, and the government and discipline authorized by the General Synod were adopted. The first vestry was as follows:

Trustee.—Dr. Tilghman H. Martin.

Elders.—William Saeger, Ephraim Grim, Christian Pretz, Charles Keck.

Deacons.—B. M. Krause, William H. Balliet, Tilghman J. Kleppinger, John J. Jarrett.

The members at the organization of the congregation were:

Ephraim Grim	Henry Weinsheimer
Thomas Yeager	Henry Keck
Solomon L. Keck	Deweese Martin
Dr. H. A. Grim	Philip S. Pretz
Andrew L. Keck	Reuben Bright
Charles Keck	Benjamin M. Krause
William Saeger	John J. Jarrett
Christian Pretz

The first communion was held Nov. 4, 1855, with 39 communicants.

The congregation was incorporated February, 1856. An organ was then installed and C. F. Herman became the organist, who filled this position until 1891, a continuous period of 35 years.

In 1870, the church was enlarged and a parsonage erected at a cost exceeding $10,000, and a new organ was installed. While the building operations were going on the services were conducted in the Court House. The total expenses for all improvements exceeded $20,000. A re-consecration took place June 11, 1871.

In 1877-78 a new front was added to the church and many improvements were made at a total cost of $18,000, which became necessary by reason of a fire in the church in October, 1887. The services were again conducted in the Court House and another consecration took place Jan. 27, 1889. Ten years afterward the organ was rebuilt and new carpets were laid in the church and Sunday school at an expense of $4,100.

The membership had increased to 450 in 1885. In 1891, Prof. C. A. Marks became organist and served for 21 years, until his death in 1912.

In January, 1903, the pews were made free. During 1903 and 1904, a new Lutheran church was established at Thirteenth and Hamilton streets, and 90 members of St. John's were dismissed to it.

During this time, large improvements to the church became necessary which were made at an expense of $23,000. The renovated building was consecrated April 9, 1905.

During the past fifty years, the aggregate cost of the improvements amounted to $70,000. Besides, the congregation exhibited great liberality towards extension of the church benevolent operations and the cause of Christian education at the theological seminary and Muhlenberg College.

The congregation sent into the Lutheran ministry the following ministers from its members:

J. D. Schindel	S. A. B. Stopp
J. W. Richards	Bernard Repass
J. W. Lazarus	E. J. Wackernagel
Frank S. Seip	F. W. D. Buchman
F. W. Wackernagel	George D. Foust
F. E. Cooper	John Foust
J. J. Schindel	Charles R. Keiter
L. D. Lazarus

The Ladies' Sewing Society, the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, and the Young People's Society, are worthy of special mention for their great assistance in connection with the successful development of this historic church of Allentown.

The pastors have been:

B. M. Schmucker,	Reuben Hill,	1872-85
1855-61	S. A. Repass,	1885-1906
J. F. Fahs,	A. Steimle,	1907-
1863-72

The congregation numbered 700 members in April, 1914.

A "Union" Sunday school was first opened in the stone building of 1774, in the year 1825. Prior to this date it was carried on in the Court House. The separate school of this congregation was organized in 1855 out of some of the old, active members of the Union school, whose withdrawal resulted in a great loss to the school in Zion's Reformed church. The first superintendent was Henry Weinsheimer, who had been one of the most efficient members of the Union school for many years. Among the early teachers were Maria and Amanda Reichard, Mrs. Messina Samson, Christiana Bender, Cordelia Saeger, A. G. Saeger, Ella Koch, S. A. Bridges, Amanda Yeager and Rebecca Keck. Later superintendents until 1878, were T. H. Moyer and R. K. Buehrle. A mission school was started about 1868 which was afterward transferred to St. Peter's congregation. It had an enrolled membership of 400.

Subsequent superintendents to 1886 were A. C. Pretz and T. H. Diehl. Then the pastor became ex-officio the superintendent, with assistants, and he has since filled this position. The total enrollment in 1914 was 398.

The 50th anniversary was held May 14, 1905

ST. PETER'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The first efforts toward founding this church in the portion of the city between the Jordan creek and Lehigh river, at Ridge avenue and Chew streets, were made Feb. 26, 1866, by a number of Lutherans who resided in that section of the city, known for a time as "Mingo." They were encouraged to organize a congregation there by the pastors of the Lutheran churches in Allentown, and in this behalf public meetings were held in the First ward schoolhouse. Within a month, active steps were taken to secure a lot on which to build a church, and on July 3d the name "St. Peter's" was adopted. Building operations were begun Aug. 31, 1867, the cornerstone was laid September 22d, and the dedication took place Aug. 9, 1868.

ST. PETER'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The first vestry was elected Sept. 7, 1867, which comprised the following:

Elders.—Karl Richter, Peter Bernhard, Wilhelm Merkel, Jacob Poepfel.

Deacons.—Francis Sterner, Paul Knoechel, Louis Boyer, William Diehl.

The German language was wholly used in the services for some time; then demands came for services in the English language also, and since then the morning services have been conducted in the German language and the evening in the English.

The congregation was incorporated in 1878.

Improvements were made to the building at different times, and it was enlarged at the rear in 1895.

In 1883, distinguished services were held in the church in commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and to signalize the event a unique monument was set up in front of the building, surmounted by a bust likeness of the greatly revered founder of the Church, which is said to have been the first established in America. It is designated by the modest white figure in the accompanying cut. The following expressive couplet is inscribed on its face in the German language:

Gottes Wort and Luther's Lehr

Vergehen nun and nimmermehr.

These words translated, signify that the Word of God and the teaching of Luther will never pass away.

The pastors have been:

K. Schlenker, 1866-67	W. A. Lambert, 1904-09
Y. Sentner, 1868	F. W. Wackernagel, 1910-
S. K. Brobst, 1868-76
G. F. Gardner 1877-1904

A parochial school was conducted for a time during the ministry of Rev. Gardner in a separate building erected at the rear of the church; and in this building the Sunday school has been conducted. English services were introduced by Rev. Gardner.

The membership of the church in April, 1914, was 540; and of the Sunday school, 350, of which the pastor has officiated as superintendent, with an assistant.

A neat directory of the congregation, including an historical sketch, was compiled by the pastor, Rev. Wackernagel, and published in 1913.

ST. MICHAEL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The first steps towards the formation of another Lutheran congregation at Allentown were taken Jan. 25, 1875, at a meeting of the Fourth Ward Mission Society, on account of dissensions over doctrine and discipline in St. Paul's congregation, which was composed mostly of its members. On the 8th of February, an executive committee was appointed, consisting of Rev. Reuben Hill, Samuel J. Brobst, Mrs. Mary Eisenhard, Franklin Sieger, John Sanders and Edwin Kramlich, and then regular services were begun which were conducted by pastors of Allentown connected with the Pennsylvania Ministerium in the chapel of the Salem Reformed congregation at Eighth and Chew streets. There were at that time 123 communicant members.

In May, 1876, a lot was secured at the southwest corner of Ninth and Turner streets, the name "St. Michael's" was adopted, and the following officers were elected:

Elders.—Abner H. Wint, George Ludwig, Samuel Roth.

Deacons.—Charles Gehringer, Addison Wint, Henry Ludwig, Amandus Kuhns, Charles Dresher and Reuben Lichtenwalner.

In June, a building committee was appointed consisting of Edwin Kramlich, Walter J. Grim ning services to satisfy the younger members. The communicant membership at that time was 550; and the Sunday school had 580 teachers and pupils.

In 1895, the parsonage at No. 201 North Ninth street was purchased. The church was remodelled in 1901; and again in 1913, including a superior granolithic pavement.

The congregation entertained the General Synod of the Lutheran Ministerium in 1902.

The first daily Christian Kindergarten was started in this church in 1905.

A monthly parish paper has been published for and Charles W. Ludwig. Ground was broken soon afterward, the cornerstone of their proposed church was laid on August 13th, and the completed edifice consecrated May 7, 1877. The cost was about $20,000. Shortly afterward the congregation was formally received into the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania.

ST. MICHAEL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The religious services were conducted wholly in the German language until October, 1883, when the English was introduced for the eve-the use of the congregation since December, 1903, under the auspices of the Luther League.

The pastors have been:
 Benjamin M. Schmauk, J. Steinhäuser, 1894-1904
 1876-83
 George F. Spieker, A. T. W. Steinhäuser, 1905-1883-94

Three times portions of its membership have 'swarmed' in the formation of St. Luke's, St. Stephen's and Christ congregations, but still the old hive is as busy and active as ever.

ST. MATTHEW'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

In response to a call in the newspapers of Allentown, about 100 persons assembled on the evening of Feb. 4, 1890, in a vacant store-room on Hamilton street above Eighth, for the purpose of considering the propriety of establishing another English Lutheran church, and then it was determined to organize a congregation under the General Synod. A second meeting was held on February 11th, a constitution was adopted and Rev. Charles E. Hay was invited to conduct religious services. On February 23d, a congregation was organized with 107 members, under the name of "St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church" and the following vestry was elected:

Elders.—P. K. Grim, F. S. Wilt, H. D. Biever and Edward Fetzer.

Deacons.—C. P. J. Bittner, J. C. Kleinsmith, W. J. Frederick, L. O. Shankweiler, I. W. Leiby and J. Lehrman.

Rev. Hay was then elected as pastor.

On March 14th a plot of ground for a church was secured, situated at the corner of Tenth and Maple streets, and the cornerstone was laid on May 25th, when the congregation and Sunday school marched there in a body. The membership was 151, of which 133 had withdrawn from St. Paul's.

The chapel was erected at a cost of $6,000, and dedicated Oct. 26, 1890. Financial aid was received from the Board of Home Missions. Various improvements were subsequently made to the property, including concrete walks, electric lighting and the installation of a pipe organ and steam heating plant.

The auxiliary organizations connected with the church are the Sunday school, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, Ladies' Aid Society, Ushers' Union, Sunshine Circle and Mission Band, the first two having been particularly useful and efficient factors in the development and success of the congregation.

The pastors have been:

Charles E. Hay, 1890-98	E. C. Ruby, 1908-14
H. D. Newcomer, 1898-1904	George Bowersox, 1914-
William I. Good, 1904-07

ST. STEPHEN'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The organization of this congregation had its inception in a joint meeting of the teachers' association and members of the St. Stephen's Sunday school, held in the Seventh ward public school building on June 14, 1896. The following persons expressed a willingness to become members of the new congregation:

L. W. Weiss and wife	Miss Mame Miller
John Oswald and wife	Miss Sallie Haaf
John Kopp	Miss Laura Haaf
Ira O. Nothstein	Miss Carrie Bauer
Henry Heintzelman	Barton Shoemaker
James Heintzelman	Miss Minnie Kuhns
Mrs. Frank Derr	Rev. Wm. Wackernagel

The congregation was organized October 29th with 48 members, 24 of whom were from St. Michael's congregation; and the first council consisted of:

Elders.—William Deisher, L. D. Weiss and D. S. Ludwig.

Deacons.—H. T. Heintzelman, Frank Derr, Elmer T. Gehris and Oscar C. Bast.

The first regular services were held November 14th in the school building mentioned, where the Sunday school sessions had been held since 1889.

A one-story frame chapel was built on Fourteenth street below Chew and completed in December, 1897, and the Christmas services were held there. The dedication took place Jan. 30, 1898. The services were in the English and German languages. In 1902 the subject of a change to a different location and the sale of the chapel was considered, and on Feb. 1, 1903, by a vote of 60 to 2, it was decided to secure a new site, and in December following, two lots were secured on the northeast corner of Turner and Franklin streets.

A charter of incorporation was obtained Nov. 9, 1903. The charter members were: F. H. Jacoby, E. S. Kuhns, O. S. Rabenold, H. F. Wint, M. Werkheiser and Wilson Schneck, and the vestry consisted of:

Oscar F. Hauser	John Christman
Z. Cressman	H. T. Heintzelman
F. W. Weber	M. K. Seibert
D. E. Snyder	George B. Bortz
C. F. Miller	L. G. Heilman
George Egolf	Oscar Bast

On Jan. 1, 1904, the congregation decided to erect a new church on the lots secured, a contract was awarded June 9th, ground was broken June 12th, and the cornerstone was laid September 4th. The Sunday school room was completed and the dedication took place May 21, 1905. Active services were held for six years and in this time there was a large increase in the membership. Building operations were renewed vigorously; but a great calamity occurred Sept. 29, 1911, when the large corner stone tower collapsed through defective workmanship, causing "many sad hearts and tearful eyes" in this energetic, determined and hopeful congregation.

This suddenly threw a serious problem upon the members and upon the young pastor who had just taken hold of the corporation, for they felt the great loss in various ways. But they were equal to the most trying position and determined unanimously to raze the remaining building to the ground and start anew, in which they were nobly encouraged by the surrounding community and all the churches in Allentown. The cornerstone was laid April 21, 1912, and by September 1st the basement was finished, ready for a "Home Coming Service," which was largely attended and liberally encouraged; and by Oct. 5, 1913, the new building was put under roof and made ready for all the regular church services, and the pastor could well preach a sermon on the text: "What hath God wrought!"

St. Stephen's Lutheran church was at last dedicated Nov. 9, 1913, a most beautiful edifice, "with a congregation of over 400 members, a Sunday school of over 700 members, an earnest and devoted Ladies' Aid, a happy Mission Band, and two encouraging choirs."

Rev. Dr. William A. Wackernagel was particularly prominent and useful during a most trying period of 17 years in the establishment of this Lutheran church, and quite naturally he has come to be regarded as its founder. He acted as superintendent of the Sunday school for nearly 12 years.

The pastors of the church have been: Ira W. Klick, 1900-10; Howard A. Kunkle since 1910. The latter compiled a complete history of the church and Sunday school.

The Sunday school of St. Stephen's Lutheran church was organized March 10, 1889, by Rev. Dr. Wackernagel under the auspices of the Missionary Society of Muhlenberg College, and the major part of the teachers during its early history for nearly ten years were students at the college. The sessions were held in the Seventh ward school building until "St. Stephen's Day" (2d day of Christmas), 1897, when they were transferred to the chapel erected on Fourteenth street, near Chew. The largest attendance until then was 157. Prof. C. H. Neubert organized the German Bible Class in 1897, and he has since continued its efficient teacher. The sessions were held in the chapel from 1897 to 1905, in which time the attendance was developed to 171, in spite of losses on account of the removal; since then they have been conducted very successfully in the modern room of the church. In April, 1914, the membership was upwards of 700, and the average attendance upwards of 350.

ST. LUKE'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

By the encouragement of Rev. J. A. Scheffer and his wife, a Sunday school movement was started in 1885 on the first Sunday in Advent by a meeting in the public school building on Ninth street in the Eighth ward and church services were also conducted there afterward, at which Rev. Scheffer preached in the English language, and Rev. J. S. Renninger in the German. These meetings and services were continued for a year and resulted in the erection of a one-story frame chapel on North Seventh street, beyond Liberty, which came to be occupied in January, 1889.

The Lutherans who stood by Rev. Scheffer and formed the congregation were:

Martin L. Erich and wife	Nathan Schneck
D. D. Druckenmiller and wife	Calvin Ritter
Edwin A. Krause and wife	Caroline Seibert
Moses Heilman	Martha J. Haas
Matilda Rabenold	Levi Ritter
Benjamin F. Heilig	John Derr
William Trexler	Lucy Derr
William Heilig	Mrs. Leinberger
	Jacob Bogert
	Lizzie Krause

Successful services were conducted here until Sunday, Feb. 7, 1897, with the membership increased to several hundred, when, to the amazement of all assembled during a session of the Sunday school, a fire broke out and ruined the building. This occurrence put increased energy and religious spirit into the struggling members and they immediately determined to build a new church, and within a year (Christmas, 1897), their proposed handsome, red sandstone edifice was so far advanced that they had religious services in the basement.

The members persevered and struggled for five years, and finally, in December, 1902, their church was dedicated to the service of God with sincere praise and thanksgiving. The total cost was $21,500. In two years they added a fine pipe organ costing $3,000, towards which Andrew Carnegie contributed $1,400. The membership at that time was 300, and among them may be specially mentioned the following, who gave great financial assistance:

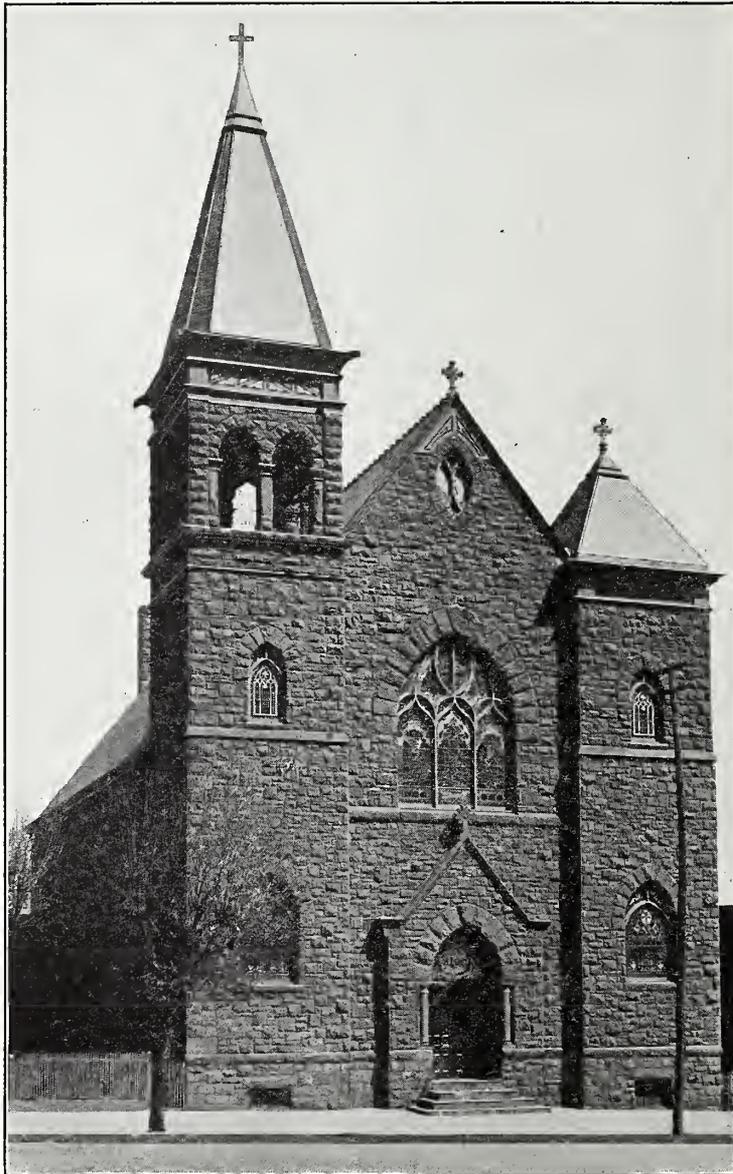

Rev. Scheffer and wife	Mrs. Kate W. Cressman
Richard S. Kistler and wife	J. H. Bender and wife
Dr. A. W. Hendricks and wife	Levi F. Rex and wife
M. L. Erich and wife	Aaron Hahn and wife
D. D. Druckenmiller and wife	C. H. Neubert
	William Heilig

The wife of Rev. Scheffer manifested special devotion towards the maintenance and welfare of this church, by serving as head of the Missionary Society for twenty years, and superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday school for twenty-one years.

An addition was built at the rear of the edifice in 1913 for Sunday school purposes, owing to the rapid development of the school. The membership in April, 1914, was 616; of the church, 635.

The regular pastors have been: J. S. Renninger, 1888 to 1892; J. A. Scheffer, 1892 to 1894; and J. C. Rausch, 1894 to the present time. Rev. Scheffer was obliged to discontinue active work in the church and Sunday school on Third street in East Allentown. A Sunday school was first organized there by students of Muhlenberg College and other interested Christians and carried on for a number of years; then a congregation was organized in 1888 and came services on account of a serious throat affection, but he is still devoted to the welfare of the congregation in which he is encouraged by his wife.

ST. LUKE'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

ST. JOSEPH'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

St. Joseph's Lutheran church is situated to be known as St. Joseph's Lutheran church of Hanover township. A frame building was erected under the directions of a building committee consisting of George Mosser, Sr., Jacob Dannecker, Sr., and Oliver Deily, which was dedicated Aug. 2, 1888. The lot was donated by William Saeger. Rev. J. S. Renninger served as supply pastor until Rev. P. P. Wisser was called to the regular pastorate. The congregation has had as its pastors, Revs. Wisser, Renninger, Kramlich, Scheidy, Mattern and P. A. Behler, the present pastor. The church council consists of the pastor, Hiram S. Fry, John Fetter, Edwin Hunter, William Luetten, Dr. C. C. Rogers, Henry C. Smith, Clarence Kurtz and Harry Fritch. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the congregation was observed on Oct. 26, 1913.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Grace Lutheran church is a brick edifice, 35 by 50 feet, on a lot of ground donated by Tilghman K. Kline, on the northeast corner of Seventh and St. John streets. It was erected in 1898. The congregation grew out of the joint endeavors of members of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations in that section of the city, started several years before in the old public schoolhouse.

The first members in the organization of this congregation were:

Samuel S. Osman	Adam Snyder
Wilson C. Frederick	Nathan H. Snyder
Samuel K. Wenrich	Reuben Osman
Jacob J. Miller	William J. Snyder
Charles H. Held	Samuel E. Erich
H. N. Knappenberger	Henry E. Semmel

The congregation was incorporated in 1900.

The first regular pastor was Rev. John H. Raker, who served from March, 1907, to May, 1911. He was succeeded by Rev. J. W. Koch, who has served since in a successful manner as evidenced by the increasing membership. The number of members in April, 1914, was 200.

A Sunday school has been conducted from the beginning; superintendent, Ambrose Myers.

CHRIST LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Christ Lutheran church, which stands at the corner of Hamilton and Thirteenth streets, one of the largest and handsomest churches of Allentown, is a monument to the energy and devotion of a small group of men and women who resolved in the fall of 1903 to organize a new Lutheran church in the West End. The work was begun by the Allentown Conference of the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania, and placed in the hands of a committee consisting of the president of the conference (first the Rev. J. S. Erb, of Slatington, afterwards the Rev. Dr. W. D. C. Keiter, then of West Bethlehem, now of Allentown), the Rev. F. E. Cooper, then pastor of St. Mark's church, South Bethlehem; the Rev. Drs. S. A. Repass and J. Steinhäuser, pastors of St. John's and St. Michael's churches, and Messrs. Frank D. Bittner and Horatio B.

Koch, both of whom have been connected with all the later work of the congregation.

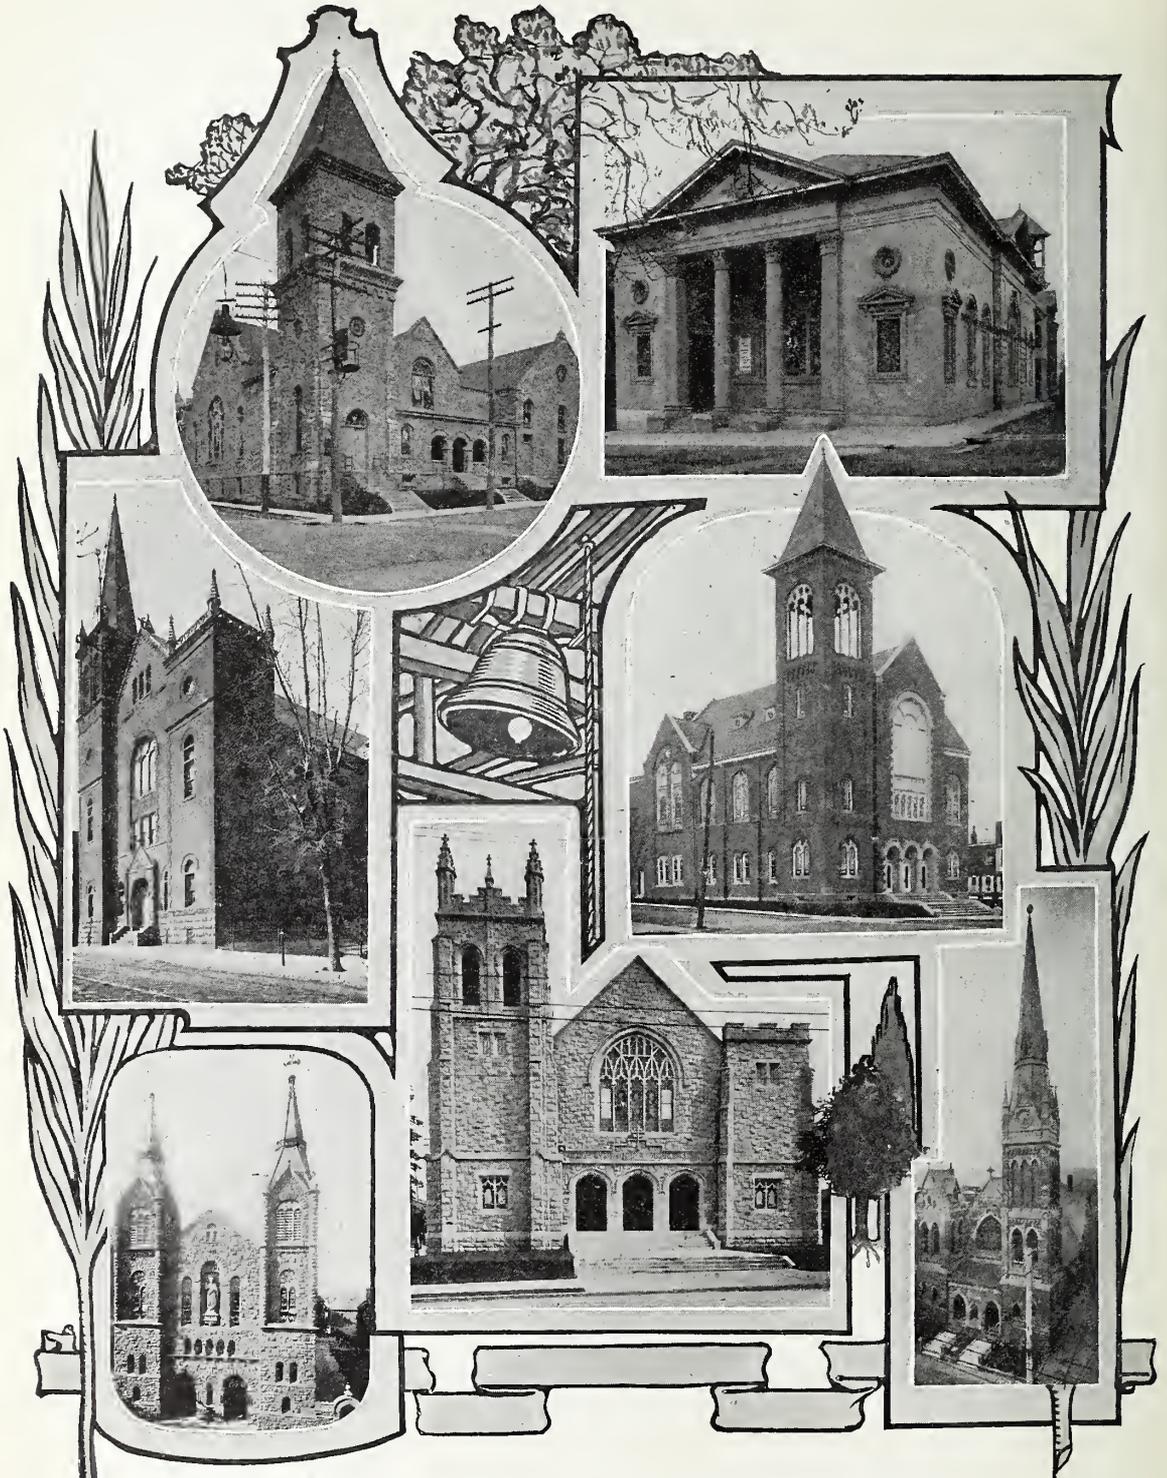

After a canvass of the neighborhood and a series of meetings of interested persons, held in the Lincoln school building, at Franklin and Walnut streets, a permanent organization was effected and a church council elected, Nov. 6, 1903. The members of this church council were Frank D. Bittner, Horatio B. Koch, Charles H. Moyer, Solomon S. Frederick, Owen H. Laub, James H. Holman, Joseph S. Frederick, Benjamin F. Kuhns and Reuben C. Pretz. At the same time the congregation just organized, resolved to proceed at once to purchase a site and erect a church building, and a building committee was appointed, consisting of Solomon S. Frederick, Horatio B. Koch, Frank D. Bittner, Charles H. Moyer, George W. Shoemaker, and Frank W. Koch.

Between the 6th of November and the 13th of December this committee effected the purchase of the lot of ground at the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Hamilton streets, bought from E. M. Young, and erected on the northern end of the lot a comfortable frame chapel seating about two hundred persons. It was opened for the congregation's first service Dec. 13, 1903, and served as a place of worship until June, 1905.

In the early part of March, 1904, the congregation called as its first pastor the Rev. Charles Michael Jacobs, of Philadelphia, who accepted the call and took charge of the work April 1, 1904. At that time there were 133 members on the roll of the church and the Sunday school, which had been organized Jan. 1, 1904, numbered 175, with Prof. A. A. Kunkle, (now of Detroit, Mich.) as superintendent. On the third Sunday in April ground was broken for the church building. Plans were prepared by Ruhe and Lange, architects, of Allentown, and the building operations were conducted under the immediate supervision of Mr. S. S. Frederick, and other members of the building committee. The chapel was completed in June, 1905, and the church was consecrated Sept. 27, 1906. The total cost of the church property was $76,000, of which $40,000 was raised by subscription in the congregation, which then numbered less than 300.

In the spring of 1913 the Rev. Charles M. Jacobs, D.D., resigned the pastorate of the church to accept a call to the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mount Airy, Philadelphia, and in July the congregation elected the Rev. Emil E. Fischer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to be its pastor. He assumed charge of the congregation Oct. 19, 1913.

At the time of the annual congregational meet-

St. Andrew's Reformed Church
 Bethany U. E. Church
 German Catholic Church

Presbyterian Church
 Dubb's Memorial Reformed Church
 Christ Lutheran Church
 Zion Reformed Church

ing in January, 1914, the membership of the congregation had reached 560; the Sunday school numbered 450; the contributions for current expenses amounted in 1913 to $8,388.02, and for benevolence, $1,809.35. The officers were: F. O. Ritter, M.D., vice-president; E. H. Smith, secretary; H. G. Berkemeyer, treasurer.

ST. JAMES LUTHERAN CHURCH.

St. James Lutheran church is a one-story frame edifice on the corner of Eleventh and Tilghman streets, which was erected in the winter of 1912-13, and dedicated in February. The congregation was organized in 1908. Arrangements are being made to put up a fine stone structure in 1915. The membership of the church is 71; of the Sunday school, 122. The pastor is Rev. Charles K. Fegley.

PRESBYTERIAN.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The first church of this denomination in the Lehigh Valley was established in the "Irish Settlement" in Allen township, near the village of Weaversville, in 1728. The early churches of Allentown used the German language exclusively in worship and it was not until the organization of the Sunday school in 1820 that the English language came to be the medium of religious expression. The first efforts to obtain English preaching were made at a public meeting held for that purpose April 10, 1820, of which Hon. Peter Rhoads was chairman, and Charles Davis, secretary; and as a result of this meeting, a minister from Bethlehem preached three times in the English language, and a minister from Easton twice during that year. From 1821 to 1824, Rev. Robert Russel, pastor of the Presbyterian church in the "Irish Settlement" preached at Allentown frequently on Sunday afternoons. Rev. Samuel Bowman, of Easton, preached here several times during 1826; Rev. J. A. Hicks, also of Easton, several times during 1827; and Rev. L. F. Leake, a missionary under the "Domestic Missionary Society of New Jersey" on Sundays for six months in 1828, who gave special encouragement to the Sunday school movement in the town.

The first subscription in behalf of a church edifice at Allentown was made in August, 1829, and the subscribers were:

Charles Davis, $30	Thomas Craig, $40
Samuel Runk, 20	Maria H. Strale, . . 10
Christian Pretz, 20	W. C. Livingston, . . 50
G. Pretz, 10	Mary C. Livingston, 50
Abram Houpt, Jr., . . . 10	Charles Saeger, . . . 5
George Yeakel, 5	John D. Roney, . . . 10
George Wurtz, 15	John More, 5
Edward Wurtz, 5	John Rice, 15
William Wurtz, 10	John Vogel, 5
Robert M. Brooke, . . 20

The subscriptions amounted to $335; and at a later meeting the amount subscribed was reported as $1,240, of which $658 was secured at New York city.

The first trustees elected May 21, 1830, were:
 Charles Davis Silas H. Hickox
 Samuel Runk John D. Roney
 F. A. Strale

Mr. Runk was elected as treasurer.

On May 31, 1830, Mrs. Anne P. Greenleaf donated and conveyed to the trustees for church purposes, lot No. 121, on the east side of Fifth street, 140 by 240 feet, which adjoined the jail property on the south. Steps were taken to erect a church; the cornerstone was laid June 24, 1830; and the building was dedicated Jan. 2, 1831. Rev. Alexander Heberton was chosen the first minister from April 1, 1831, and the first organization which assembled in the edifice was the Sunday school. The building was 40 by 50 feet; and the auditorium was on the second floor.

In September, 1831, the "First Presbyterian Church in Northampton" was organized with the following members:

Mrs. Lydia Roney	Mrs. Elizabeth Heberton
Mrs. Ellen Davis	Miss Catharine De Berthold
Miss Sarah Marks	thold
Miss Rachel Engel	Miss Sarah De Berthold
Charles Davis

The Lord's Supper was first administered in the church Oct. 2, 1831; and on October 3d, Charles Davis was elected ruling elder, and the pastor was regularly installed.

The first protracted religious meetings in Allentown were conducted in this church during the fall and winter of 1832, which were not favored by some of the congregations in the town.

John Mason was appointed as the first sexton in 1834.

The relations of the church were with the "Presbytery of Newton" until 1838; when they were changed to the "Third Presbytery of Philadelphia."

The church accommodations becoming too small, a movement was made to erect a larger building on the corner of the lot to the south, which was consummated in 1838, the cornerstone having been laid July 28th, and the dedication having taken place December 30th. The trustees then were:

Charles Davis	John Rice
Joseph Gross	James Jameson
Isare Erdman

A bell was hung in the tower at the front of the building, which weighed 260 pounds. It was said to have been used for a time in Spain. This bell was in use in connection with the services until 1856 when it was sold and removed to the Union church at Cedarville, and a M'Neely bell substituted.

The following interesting incident transpired in connection with the dedication:

"It was near 12 o'clock on Saturday night before the dedication that the ladies succeeded in arranging the carpets and other furniture of the new church. At that late hour Mr. Rice was anxious and undecided as to which side of the house the females should occupy, and therefore consulted Rev. John E. Grant, D.D., of Philadelphia, who replied: 'Let them sit on both sides with their husbands, brothers, and friends.' But Mr. Rice insisted that that would not answer, and would give rise to scandal, was contrary to custom, etc. Whereupon Dr. Grant replied that the old custom was heathenish and unchristian, and finally refused to have anything to do with the dedication if the females were seated together only on one side of the house. With fear and reluctance Mr. Rice yielded, and from that day the custom began to pass away. Now it is no more improper for the sexes to sit together in church than at their own tables at home."

The renting of the pews was begun in 1839.

In December, 1839, Charles Davis, the only elder in this church for eight years, and its principal supporter, removed with his family to Reading. His loss here was deeply felt, and not less was the loss of the wisdom and efficiency of his excellent wife. For nearly four months after the removal of Mr. Davis, the church was without any ruling elders. On April 8, 1840, Isare Erdman and James Jameson were elected and installed, but they too, removed to Reading in 1845.

The financial affairs of the congregation in the winter of 1844-45 were very discouraging and the trustees lost control of its affairs, and the congregation met in the Odd Fellows' Hall from April 6th to July 6th, when it returned to the church. There was a debt on the property of more than $6,000, which Rev. Walker, the pastor, was largely instrumental in raising. A new board of trustees was then elected, consisting of John S. Gibbons, Henry King, and Richard Walker, and the last named spent six weeks in Philadelphia and other parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, going from church to church and house to house collecting funds.

The Sabbath school was large and efficient, but a demand existed for better accommodations. Therefore, in 1855, a chapel was built, and a recess in the east end of the church made for the pulpit, which before had been in the west end between the doors. The seats were taken from the church and put in the chapel, and new seats were put in the church. While these things were being done the congregation worshipped in the Methodist church.

On Feb. 4, 1856, a charter of incorporation was granted by the Court. During the following summer, an extension was added to the front of the church building, comprising a vestibule and tower, and the walls of the audience-room were elaborately frescoed. Mr. Walker's ministry continued sixteen years and nine months, during which 145 members were added to the church, only 25 of them by certificate.

During the year 1864, the walls were repainted, owing to damage by water through a defective roof, and a new roof was put on the building by the liberality of Samuel Lewis.

In 1902 a beautiful classic church of Grecian architecture was erected at a cost of $25,000, wholly different from the numerous other churches at Allentown, which was dedicated April 13th, the interesting services continuing during the week.

The dimensions of the building are 51 feet 5 inches wide, by 105 feet deep. The front contains an entrance, 11½ feet by 26 feet, with tiled floor, flanked on the north and south by vestibules, 10 feet square, which open into the auditorium. The pulpit platform is on the north side and faces the seats, which are arranged on the semi-circular plan, with capacity for 575 people, additional room being available for chairs, when necessary. The organ chamber occupies the northeast corner, with choir space in front. In the southeast corner a vestibule leads to the Sunday school building, which was erected in 1892. The building is heated by steam and provided with exhaust flues for ventilation. The exterior is of cream-mottled brick with gray stone trimmings. The front portico is embellished with four stone columns, 28 inches in diameter and 23 feet high, with carved Corinthian capitals. In place of the cornerstone there are two marble tablets built in the front wall at the entrance porch, one containing the inscription of the church history, and the other of announcements of meetings.

An undenominational Sunday school was begun in 1820 through the efforts of Miss Elizabeth Baum, of Reading, assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth McKeen, who were encouraged by Charles Davis, Esq., and his efficient wife. The sessions were conducted on Sundays from April to October. In 1828 there were nineteen pupils with Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Hyneman, Miss Hyneman, and Miss Boas as teachers. It was first started in the Court House; afterward conducted in the Academy; then in the basement of the Presbyterian church. It was a new departure in religious life and the other churches of the town did not encourage it for a time.

When the sessions came to be held in the church in 1831, the school naturally took the name "Presbyterian," and the ruling elder, Charles Davis, Esq., was elected superintendent, who served as such until he removed to Reading in 1839.

In 1840, a constitution was adopted, and also the name "The Lehigh Sabbath School Association"; but in 1842 the name was changed to "Presbyterian." The officers and teachers acted as pioneer workers in the cause and established schools in different parts of the county, which gradually changed to other denominations. One of the schools was at Balliettsville in 1866, of which Gen. Robert McAllister, a member of this church, became the superintendent.

The rear of the present church was erected in 1892 for Sunday school purposes, where the sessions have since been held. Irvin Schelling was a most efficient superintendent from that time for 21 years.

The pastors were:

Alexander Heberton,	Benjamin Judkins,
1831-33	1859-62
Joseph McCool, 1833-35	Samuel M'C. Gould,
Moses Floyd, 1835-36	1862-64
Jacob Helfenstine,	William H. Thorne,
1836-37	1864-65
J. M. Bear, 1837	James W. Wood, 1865-83
Jacob T. Field, 1838-39	John F. Pollock,
Robert W. Landis,	1884-1909
1839-42	William E. Brooks,
Richard Walker, 1842-58	1910—

The membership of the church in April, 1914, was 460; of the Sunday school, 425.

WESTMINSTER PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH is a one-story frame edifice on the southeast corner of Ninth and Tilghman streets, which was erected on a large lot of ground in 1910, and enlarged with an extension to the south in 1914 for Sunday school purposes. The membership of the congregation is 107; of the Sunday school, 240. The energetic pastor is Rev. Francis B. Everitt.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

LINDEN STREET M. E. CHURCH.—Through the religious zeal of two sisters, Elizabeth and Sarah Muffly, (who were members of the M. E. church in Bucks county, near Quakertown, and located in Allentown in 1842, on Walnut street above Ninth, where they purchased a residence), the first efforts were made here in establishing a church. By their request in 1843 the conference sent a minister named Newton Heston, and they provided a meeting-place by altering a small building on the rear of their premises.

While the minister was carrying on his religious endeavors, they gave him board and lodging at their home, and soon the meeting place became too small. The first members were the two women mentioned, William Kelley and wife, and William Ruhe and wife. So they leased the "Free Hall" (which was situated on Linden below Ninth) and very successful meetings were conducted there, but not without much opposition, for "some of the warm-hearted converts were arrested on a charge of assault and battery and put to jail when they resisted their parents, who came to the meeting and attempted to take them away forcibly. The brethren had encouraged the converts in resisting their parents, because they believed that the parents had no right to disturb the meetings in such a manner." This seemed but natural because it was said the German churches regarded the introduction of English preaching as a species of profanation, and of Methodism as an invasion of their rights in presuming to establish itself in their midst.

In 1844, a lot of ground was purchased for $200 from Christian Pretz, situated at the southwest corner of Linden and Law streets, and there a one-story meeting house was erected. The congregation having been poor and the community not in sympathy with this movement, the young preacher was obliged to go away during the week, and collect money so that the workmen could be paid at the end of the week; on Sundays he preached, and the next week he did the same; and so he continued until the building was finished and paid. When completed, it was a model of neatness, with carpets on the aisles, cushions at the altar, and Venetian blinds at the windows, which led the community to accuse the Methodists of worldly pride.

The first trustees were:

Samuel L. Reichard (Mauch Chunk)
James Anthony (Parryville)
David Keiper (Allentown)
Samuel Pettit (Allentown)
William Zane (S. Easton)
Jacob Deily (S. Easton)
Jacob Gangewere (Easton)

A constitution was adopted Sept. 2, 1845.

The building was enlarged in 1868 by adding a story, and a front extension.

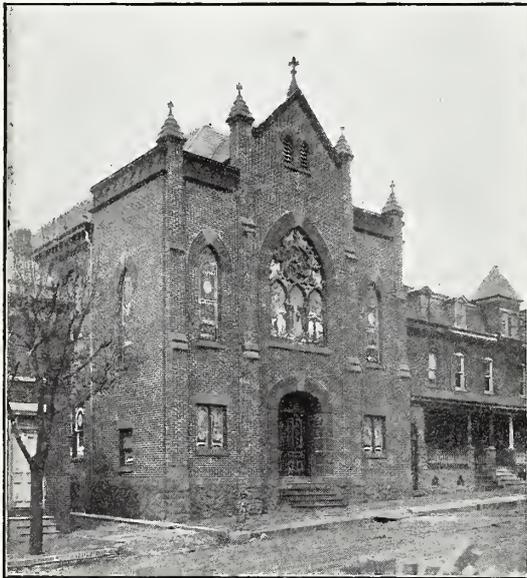

The following ministers have served this charge to the present date:

Newton Heston 1843-44	H. H. Hobbs and J. F. Boyd 1855-56
George Quigley 1845-	H. H. Heckman 1857-
George Quigley and J. C. Murphy 1846-	F. Egan 1858-59
W. W. McMichael 1847-	Samuel G. Hare 1860-61
J. F. Turner and William Burrell 1848-	E. T. Kenney 1862-63
D. R. Thomas 1849-	W. C. Best 1864-65
Samuel G. Hare 1850-	Gideon Barr 1866-
William H. Brisbane 1851-52	J. F. Crouch 1867-69
Samuel Irwin, S. I. Thomas and J. M. Hinson 1853-54	Wm. Swindells 1870-71
	R. Owens 1872-
	E. F. Pitcher 1873-75
	Samuel Heilner 1876-77
	Wm. McDowell 1878-79
	Wm. Coffman 1880-82

Wm. Howell	1883-85	Wm. Powick	1904-07
E. Pickersgill	1886-88	W. Q. Bennett	1908-09
Wm. Bamford	1889-93	C. J. Benjamin	1910-
B. M. Neill	1894-97	F. A. Gacks	1911-12
Theo. Stevens	1898-1900	J. T. Satchell	1913-
R. D. Naylor	1901-03

A new church building was erected in 1907, at the southwest corner of Linden and Lumber streets, where the congregation now worships. The cornerstone was laid Nov. 3, 1907.

CALVARY M. E. CHURCH.—The first services in behalf of this congregation were held by Rev. J. Hapburn Hargis in the First Ward school building in March, 1872; then on Chestnut street, near Ridge, and he preached to small numbers of people. The active workers were CALVARY M. E. CHURCH.

Simon Reynolds, George Matchette, Robert Pifer and William R. Thomas, and the little congregation was known as the "Allentown Furnace and Lime Ridge Charge." Revival meetings were conducted, the membership was soon increased to 22, and by June a one-story frame church, on the north side of Chew street, between Ridge avenue and Second street, costing $3,000, was solemnly dedicated.

The first board of trustees consisted of Joseph Downing, Sr., James B. Cole, Milton J. Kramer, Josiah S. Kern and David Walker; and on their application the congregation was incorporated as Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

In 1889 the church was enlarged to answer the requirements of the increasing membership.

The present substantial and attractive brick edifice was built in the place of the frame structure from 1904 to 1907, when it was re-dedicated.

The pastors have been:

J. H. Hargis	O. C. Burt
David Shields	O. R. Cook
W. W. Wisegarver	Thomas Evans
John Shields	John Priest
Robert Miller	A. J. Amthor
George W. Adams	W. J. Bawden
W. B. Rockhill	Robert J. McBeth
Isaac Jenkins	Franklin Mack
William H. Zweizig	C. M. Haddaway
William B. Wood	Geo. L. Schaffer

The membership in April, 1914, was 175; of the Sunday school, 150. The superintendents have been James B. Cole, David Walker, Jacob Ross, Josiah Kern, David B. Santee and H. E. Kern.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—There were religious services at Allentown in behalf of the Episcopal denomination as early as 1825, by Rev. Rodney, of Easton, and Rev. Bowman, of Lancaster, but no progress was made in this German community and further efforts were abandoned until 1858. Then Rev. Azariah Prior was sent to Allentown and he conducted services mostly in the Court House for three years, and different clergymen preached for a year.

In September, 1862, under orders from the Board of Missions, Rev. E. N. Potter entered upon his duties here, and from October 5th the preaching by him was regular every Sunday. Efforts were made looking to the establishment of a church and these were finally successful after persevering for three years. A lot was secured on the northwest corner of Linden and Fifth streets, and there the cornerstone was laid, April 18, 1865, by the assistant bishop, Right Rev. William B. Stevens, D.D., and the church was consecrated by the Right Rev. Horatio Potter, July 3, 1866.

The first vestrymen of the church were:

H. C. Longnecker	James C. Biddle
William W. Hamersly	C. P. Fisher
R. Clay Hamersly	John I. Romig
William H. Ainey	Allen Bobst
Edmund J. More	George B. Roberts

Rectors.—The rectors have been:

E. N. Potter, 1862-67	O. B. Keith,
W. R. Gries, 1867-72	1878-79; 1881-85
D. W. C. Byllesby,	C. R. Bonnell, 1879-81
1873-76	Robert H. Kline,
C. S. M. Stewart, 1876-77	1885-
Hugh Roy Scott, 1878

The membership of the church is 450, and of the Sunday school, 110.

CHURCH OF THE MEDIATOR.—Mission work in behalf of extending the Episcopal Church and establishing it in the Sixth ward of Allentown was begun in 1863 by Rev. E. N. Potter, and this was conducted actively until prospects were realized for securing a church; a lot was secured at the northeast corner of Front and Furnace streets; the cornerstone was laid in 1866, and the church consecrated in 1869. Services were continued until 1886, when for want of proper support it was closed and continued so for nearly 20 years.

The pastors were:

E. N. Potter	C. E. D. Griffith, 1871-78
C. E. D. Griffith	H. R. Scott, 1878
Joseph Murphy, 1867-68	O. B. Keith,
Jeremiah Karcher,	1878-79; 1881-85
1868-69	C. R. Bonnell, 1879-81
F. W. Bartlett, 1869-71	R. H. Kline, 1886

In 1905, the church was repaired by the bishop of the diocese, and re-opened in February, 1906. Services, including a Sunday school, were conducted for five years, when the property was sold to the St. Mary's Greek Catholic Congregation because the sustaining members were obliged to move away into other parts of the city owing to the large influx of foreign population.

The members then assembled in the McKinley public school building on Turner street, between Eleventh and Twelfth, and there revived the Sunday school. The vestry seeing a proper spirit displayed, purchased a desirable property on Turner street, above Sixteenth, near the city park, including a dwelling house for $25,000. The necessary alterations were made and religious services have been held there since Sept. 15, 1912, by the rector, Rev. Robert N. Merriman. A beautiful and commodious structure was erected in 1914.

BAPTIST.

BAPTIST CHURCH.—Three members of the Baptist denomination at Allentown (John A. Schulte, a German from New York City, Emanuel G. Gerhard and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Evans, from Philadelphia), with letters of dismissal from their respective churches, united to organize a congregation of their own faith and accordingly held a meeting in Breinig's Hall on Tuesday evening, Sept. 21, 1858, with Rev. Dr. William H. Cathcart, of the Second Baptist church, of Philadelphia, as a presiding officer, and the Philadelphia confession of faith was adopted.

Two weeks afterward, Dr. Cathcart performed the ceremony of baptism on four candidates in the Jordan creek just above the Hamilton street bridge—Justus Evans, Mary Barnes, and William J. and Catharine A. Hoxworth, preceded by a brilliant sermon on the subject in the Court House to a large audience, from which they marched to the creek in a long procession, singing with much spirit on the way; and there they were greeted by thousands of interested spectators who crowded the meadow along the east bank of the stream and also on the old stone bridge.

On Feb. 22, 1859, this congregation was recognized by a church council in the Presbyterian Church with Rev. Duncan Dunbar as moderator, and Rev. Thomas C. Trotter, as clerk; and in effecting it, Mrs. Evans, Miss Hartshone (a teacher in the academy), and Mrs. Sarah G. Hawkins were given a large share of credit for their successful efforts in conducting prayer-meetings from house to house in the few English and German families of Allentown, who had become identified with the congregation.

On March 8, 1859, Rev. Joseph L. Sagebeer was elected pastor, and the following officers were chosen: E. G. Gerhard and Blackford Barnes, as deacons; William J. Hoxworth, as clerk; and Justus Evans, as treasurer. Soon afterward a Bible school was organized with Mr. Hoxworth as superintendent; and in this school James S. Biery was one of the early teachers. Religious worship was carried on in a leased property and in the Court House for about six years, until the congregation established a church of their own.

A lot, 98 by 115 feet, was secured on the northwest corner of Sixth and Chew streets in 1864, and a building committee was appointed to erect a church costing $7,000. The cornerstone was laid September 6th and on Nov. 17, 1867, the church was dedicated. The total cost was $11,680. At this time the membership was about 59.

The first baptistry was built on the lot at the rear of the church in 1866, but this was afterward removed to the church and placed under the pulpit platform. In 1876 a new baptistry was put in the same place.

Two colonies left the church; one of eight members in 1869, to form the Bethlehem Baptist church; and the other of seventeen in 1871, to form the Catasauqua Baptist church.

A commodious parsonage was erected at the rear of the church in 1869, costing $3,000.

The New Hampshire Confession of Faith was adopted March 17, 1875, and in the fall of that year the congregation entered the Reading Baptist Association.

A fine, new, modern stone church and Sunday school, with parsonage attached, were established on the site of the old church in 1901, costing $40,000. The building is of granite, the Gothic style prevailing, and was dedicated on May 19, 1907. The congregation now numbers 315 persons. The pastors have been:

George Sagebeer, March, 1859-Feb., 1862.
 George Balcolm, April, 1863-July, 1864.
 J. H. Appleton, December, 1865-November, 1868.
 William E. Rees, (Supply) 1868-1869.
 Ebenezer Packwood, February, 1869-January, 1872.
 J. S. James, October, 1872-December, 1882.
 F. S. Dobbins, March, 1883-June, 1890.
 B. G. Parker, November, 1890-August, 1894.
 J. H. Griffith, December, 1894-July, 1895.
 Charles H. Moss, December, 1895-March, 1897.
 G. C. Williams, June, 1897-April, 1899.
 W. S. Catlett, October, 1899-February, 1911.
 W. W. West, May, 1911-

The Sunday school enrollment is 300, and Peter H. Rems is the superintendent. Former superintendents have been H. W. Willenbecher, W. E. Rees, W. S. Haas, J. S. James, G. H. Desh, William Roth, A. F. Peters and C. R. James.

The deacons of the congregation have been Blackford Barnes, 1859-1860; E. G. Gerhard, 1859-1860; William J. Hoxworth, 1859-1881; Justus Evans, 1863-1881; William Roth, 1875-1908; Armat W. Lee, 1875-1897; Henry W. Willenbecher, 1875-1887; George W. Harrar, 1881-1886; Charles R. James, 1881-1905; Frank D. Fried, 1887-1896; William Broadbent, 1893-1899; Lewis D. Wehr, 1898-1905, and Charles H. Hoxworth, 1900-1905. The present deacons are Jacob G. Sterner, from 1866; Ambrose F. Peters, from 1893; David J. Williams, from 1897; George W. Singiser, from 1899; L. P. La Roche, from 1905; Peter H. Rems, from 1907, and John S. Blank, from 1909.

The societies of the congregation are Ladies' Mite Society (organized Jan. 25, 1883); Woman's Missionary Society; Further Lights Society, Christian Endeavor Society, Ushers' League and Boys' Club.

TWELFTH STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.—A one-story brick edifice, 30 by 50 feet, was erected in 1890 on Twelfth street, beyond Turner, and to meet the growing demand of the congregation, the building was enlarged in 1907, and again in 1908; but by 1911 the increasing membership required larger accommodations and this necessitated rebuilding the church, with a seating capacity of 800, at an expense of $8,500.

The first pastor was Rev. William Mohr, who served the congregation for seventeen years, until he died. He was succeeded by Rev. B. F. M. Fahl, who has since been a most efficient pastor, for with a small congregation to work with, he has increased its membership to 253.

The enrolled membership of the Sunday school since 1907 has been gradually developed to 400, and since then the superintendents have been

William Schlegel, Oliver Gaugler and Leidy Kratz.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

By Bishop Thomas Bowman, D.D.

The Evangelical Association originated as a result of the religious activities of Jacob Albright, a native of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. He was convicted of sin and converted to God in the year 1792, and united with the Methodist Episcopal church, which later gave to him a license as an exhorter. He succeeded in leading a number of German speaking people to the Lord Jesus Christ, and these, because the worship of the Methodist Episcopal church was conducted in the English language, felt constrained to form a separate religious organization. In the year 1796 Albright began his labors as a lay-preacher and visited Lebanon, Bucks, Schuylkill and Northampton counties. In the last named county he preached in the homes of George Philip and Jacob Reidy, who resided near the Blue Ridge mountain, close to the place now called Phillips' Corner. The third class of the new organization was formed at this place and consisted of eleven persons. The first General Assembly was held Nov. 3rd, 1803, in the home of Samuel Liesser, in Colebrookdale, Berks Co., Pa. Here a permanent organization was effected, the Holy Bible was adopted as the rule of faith and Albright was ordained as a minister. The first Annual Conference was held Nov. 15th and 16th, 1809, in the home of Samuel Becker, at a place called Muehlbach, in Lebanon county, Pa.

Lehigh county was visited by Albright in the year 1800, at which time he preached at Lynnville and Macungie. Later the work of the new organization was introduced into the county at three different places, viz: Upper Milford, Cedar Creek, and Allentown. The establishment of the Church at these places will be considered separately.

UPPER MILFORD.

The first sermon preached at this place by a minister of the Evangelical Association was in 1824 in the home of John Hittel. The opposition, however, was so violent that Mr. Hittel became discouraged and the services were discontinued. Private meetings for prayer service were nevertheless continued until the family moved to Millerstown, now Macungie.

In 1828 George Yeakel, residing in Hosensack, opened his home for preaching services. Rev. W. H. Orwig, later one of the bishops of the church, and Rev. Charles Hammer, later one of the publishers of the church, were per- in the same neighborhood, where the first serv- mitted to preach in the home of David Schubert, ices were held in 1824. This first preaching service occurred on Sunday afternoon Sept. 13, 1829.

In this year the first congregation of this de- nomination in the county was organized at Up- per Milford. Among the first families which united with the church were George Yeakel, David Schubert, Peter Wiest, Daniel Wieand, and John Hittel.

In 1832 Rev. John Zinzer intended to con- duct services in the house of John Hittel; how- ever, evil-minded persons gathered in large num- bers and made such great disturbance that no service could be held. They raved and cursed as if demon-possessed, breaking the windows, tearing the doors off their hinges, and pulling down the fences. When finally some of the members of the church ventured to leave the house to return to their homes they were fol- lowed and insulted, barely escaping with their lives.

Several years after order was restored in a measure, Rev. Andrew Yeakel, a Schwenkfelder minister, and his adherents united with the Ev- angelical Association which action greatly strengthened the work of the denomination.

The first church edifice for this congregation was built in 1840 on land purchased from Chris- topher Schubert. The Board of Trustees, as well as the building committee, consisted of Daniel Kriebel, Daniel Stahl, and Jacob Hall- man.

In 1872 additional ground was purchased from the heirs of Christopher Schubert and a com- modious church edifice was erected in which the congregation still worships.

This congregation was disrupted in conse- quence of the disturbances in the Evangelical As- sociation in 1891, but it was the first subse- quently to reunite.

CEDAR CREEK.

In 1831 a young man named Francis Gabel, who had been converted in Upper Milford, came to Cedar Creek, and obtained employment in a wool factory operated by David Mertz, a son of Gen. Henry Mertz. The young man's consistent life, and his faithful confession of salvaton, received through faith in Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour, produced a favorable im- pression upon his employer. After considerable urging on the part of Mr. Gabel, Mr. Mertz consented to invite Rev. John Zinzer to come from Milford and preach in his home. He accepted the invitation and his first audience num- bered five, viz: David Mertz and wife, Gen. Henry Mertz, Francis Gabel, and John Hittel, who accompanied the preacher from Milford.

The place was made a regular appointment and was connected with what was then known as the Lebanon circuit, and was served by Rev. J. Zinzer and Rev. J. P. Leib. However on account of the determined opposition and perse- cution of those days, very few people attended the services. Even Gen. Mertz remained away from the services in the house of his own son.

In 1834 the annual conference constituted Al- lentown and the region round about a circuit, and named it Lehigh. Rev. Joseph M. Saylor and Rev. Jacob Riegel were appointed to this cir- cuit. Rev. Saylor preached his first sermon after his appointment in an orchard owned by Susan Mohr. The service being in the open instead of a private house, was largely attended.

Shortly afterwards, while Rev. Saylor was conducting services in the home of David Mertz, a certain so-called pastor, with about a dozen of his adherents, came to the meeting and accused Rev. Saylor of preaching false doctrine, and as- serted that he was ready to prove it. After con- siderable argument and discussion, it was agreed that each pastor should preach a sermon on a text selected by the other, and that the meeting at which the sermons were to be delivered should be held in the Court House in Allentown. Sub- sequently the parson gave notice that he would not attend the proposed meeting. So, on the text which his adversary had selected for him, namely, 1 John 1: 8-10, Rev. Saylor preached in the house of Solomon Butz, near the Cedar Creek on 19th of June, 1835. The sermon was preached with unusual liberty and unction, so that the entire audience was visibly affected.

Soon afterwards a congregation was organized. The first members were Jacob Gabel, David Mertz and wife, Gen. Henry Mertz, John Neitz, Solomon Butz and John Griesemer.

John Neitz was the father of Rev. Solomon Neitz, who was one of the most polished pulpit orators the denomination has produced and was a man of great influence both within and with- out his church. He was born on Ascension Day, and was also "born again" on Ascension Day. He was prominently connected with the Board of Publication and the Board of Missions of the denomination, and was sent to Europe as a rep- resentative of the Mission Board to visit its mis- sion work there.

David Mertz later was given license to preach as a local minister and for several years also served as an itinerant preacher.

Solomon Butz was the father of Rev. Edmund Butz, who served fifty years as an itinerant minister with large success.

In this same year, 1835, the first church of the Evangelical Association in Lehigh county was built on what is known as the "Bet-Hügel" (Hill of Prayer), located about a half-mile west of the Lehigh county poorhouse. It was a small stone building and was dedicated Nov. 14th and 15th, 1835, by Rev. John Seybert, then presiding elder, and later the first bishop of the church, and Rev. Joseph M. Saylor, preacher in charge of the circuit. The attendance was so large that services were held both inside and outside of the building. The land upon which the church was built was donated by Gen. Mertz, who also cation to Wescosville, a village about a mile farther west, where a larger and more modern house of worship was built. The pastor appointed to Lehigh circuit serves this congregation in connection with appointments at East Texas, Emaus, and Schnecksville. The present pastor is Rev. A. H. Doerster.

ALLENTOWN.

The first attempt on the part of a minister of the Evangelical Association to preach in the city of Allentown was made in 1817 or 1818 by Rev. John Driesbach, then a presiding elder of the denomination. The service was held in the home of a Mr. Kaiser. A young man present disturbed the services by ridiculing and attempting to imitate the minister so that it was almost paid the larger amount of the building expenses, although others contributed and gave considerable labor gratuitously.

BET-HUEGEL (HILL OF PRAYER.)

On account of the prejudice against the new church it was necessary during the course of its construction to procure some mechanics from a distance. Among these was a man named John Schell, a mason from Milford, who was afterwards converted and became a very useful and acceptable minister in the denomination. Gen. Mertz, who was so prominently connected with the establishment of the work of the church was a man of great influence in the community, having been a Brigadier-General in the State Militia and also a member of the State Legislature.

The second church was built near the site of the first in 1854, and was dedicated by Rev. J. P. Leib and Rev. Solomon Neitz. In 1885 the congregation decided to remove from the old lo-impossible to continue the services. The minister, when compelled to stop preaching, said to the young ruffian: "You will have a sudden departure into eternity." Soon afterwards the man was struck by lightning and instantly killed. The second time Rev. Driesbach attempted to preach in Mr. Kaiser's home four men pushed a piece of timber so forcibly against the door that they broke it into pieces. This so alarmed the occupant of the house that no further attempt was made to continue the services.

In the year 1835 a second attempt was made to introduce the work of the Evangelical Association into Allentown. During this year a colored man by the name of James Grove opened his house for the minister of this church.

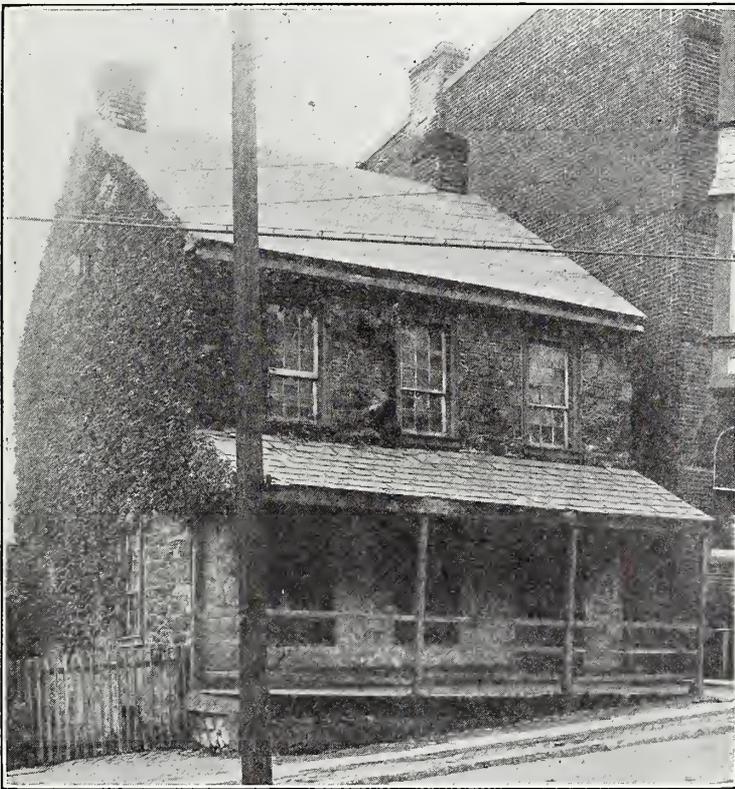

Rev. J. M. Saylor and Rev. Jacob Riegel were the preachers. They came from Upper Milford, accompanied by some of their members from that place and they and those accompanying them usually returned to their homes in Upper Milford after the evening service. Both they and the colored man were compelled to suffer many insults and indignities, because, as in the days of the Apostles, this "new sect" was everywhere spoken against, and so the second attempt was abandoned. A short time afterwards, Joshua Fink opened his house for worship, but the opposition and persecution became so violent that he also was compelled to close his house. Mr. Fink was ostracized to such an extent that he was compelled to move to the Cedar Creek of its mark and struck the Bible in front of the minister.

Not long afterwards a twice born man named Henry Schmidt, a courageous Christian, moved to Allentown from Philadelphia and at once opened his home for prayer and preaching service. Rev. Charles Hesser, an especially talented and fluent preacher, stationed in Philadelphia, occasionally came from there and held service in Mr. Schmidt's home. Afterwards the good Presbyterian people allowed Rev. Hesser to preach in their church.

SALEM CHURCH.—Either in February or

GROVE HOUSE, ON LEHIGH STREET, ALLENTOWN.

Where First Indoor Services Were Held by Evangelical Association, in 1835 to find employment in order to support his family!

However, these plucky and spirit filled Evangelicals were not to be so easily discouraged. On the 10th of October, 1837, Rev. John Seybert and Rev. Solomon Altimos preached in the old market place on the square, the one at 10 a. m., and the other at 2 p. m. During the service some ruffian threw a stone, with the intention of hitting the preacher, but it fell short

March, 1838, the first congregation was organized in Allentown by Rev. Francis Hoffman. The following were some of the first members: Henry Schmidt and wife, Samuel Beidleman, Elizabeth Brobst, Adam Geiser, Rebecca Scherer, Judith Nester, and Susanna Kichline. Steps were immediately taken to build a church. The members of the church from Cedar Creek came over to the aid of the members in Allentown. It was decided to locate the church at the corner of Ninth and Linden streets. The building still stands, but has been converted into dwelling houses. Gen. Mertz, David and Solomon Butz, Benjamin Mohr, and Reuben Glick purchased the lot. The new church was dedicated the same year on the 26th of November by Rev. Charles Hesser and Rev. Francis Hoffman.

This congregation was served in connection with appointments in the country until 1856, when it was detached by the annual conference, and Rev. John Schell was appointed as the first preacher of Allentown station. At this time the congregation numbered one hundred and sixty-six members.

The church on the corner of Ninth and Linden streets becoming too small to accommodate the increasing membership, it was decided to sell that property and erect a larger church on Linden street, west of Ninth. This church edifice was built in 1857, and was dedicated by Rev. Solomon Neitz and Rev. J. Breidenstein.

In consequence of the sad division of the Evangelical Association in 1891 the majority of this congregation withdrew from the church. The church building was too large and inconvenient for those remaining with it, hence it was decided to sell the property and erect a more modern and convenient church at the corner of Linden and Fourteenth streets. The new church was built during the pastorate of Rev. H. C. Lilly, and under the special supervision and largely through the liberality of L. D. Krause, a banker and merchant of Allentown. This church was dedicated in 1902 by Bishop S. C. Breyfogel.

Salem church is splendidly located in the residential section of Allentown. Its membership has been doubled since the congregation located at the above-mentioned place.

A pipe organ, the gift of L. D. Krause, was installed at the time the new church was built.

The following are official members at present: L. D. Krause, J. Daubenspeck, H. E. Bohner, H. S. Dengler, W. E. Bastian, Frank Schultz, D. J. Roth, Herbert Wentz, O. S. Hoch, James Schwoyer, F. C. Kemmer, D. J. Roth and Ralph Miller.

The following pastors served this congregation in the order named: John Schell, William Heim, G. G. Rhoads, Thomas Bowman, John Kaehl, John Schell, Moses Dissinger, C. H. Baker, C. B. Hiehr, Joseph Steltzer, R. M. Lichtenwallner, Daniel Yuengst, H. R. Yost, B. F. Bohner, J. C. Bliem, W. K. Wieand, W. A. Leopold, G. T. Leopold, D. S. Manning, H. B. Brown, M. Schlagenhauf, H. C. Lilly, A. Kreckler, and B. L. Romberger, the present pastor.

IMMANUEL CHURCH.—The second congregation of the Evangelical Association in Allentown was organized in 1850 in the First Ward. It was, however, served by the pastors of the First Church until 1864. Prayer meetings were held in private houses by William Egge and William Transue, who had been appointed as leaders. In 1853 a small chapel, 36 x 45 feet, was built in Linden street, near Second, in which prayer service was held during the week, and preaching service on Sunday afternoon. The building committee was composed of Nathan Yohe, William Barr and Jacob Nagle.

In 1864 the congregation was separated from the First Church by the annual conference and Rev. Ephraim Ely appointed as its first pastor.

In 1870 the chapel was sold and a new commodious church in which the congregation still worships was built on Turner street, between Front and Second. The new church was built under the pastorate and supervision of Rev. Solomon Ely. For several years this congregation struggled under the burden of a heavy church debt, but during the pastorate of Rev. W. K. Wieand, assisted by Bishop Bowman, the debt was cancelled.

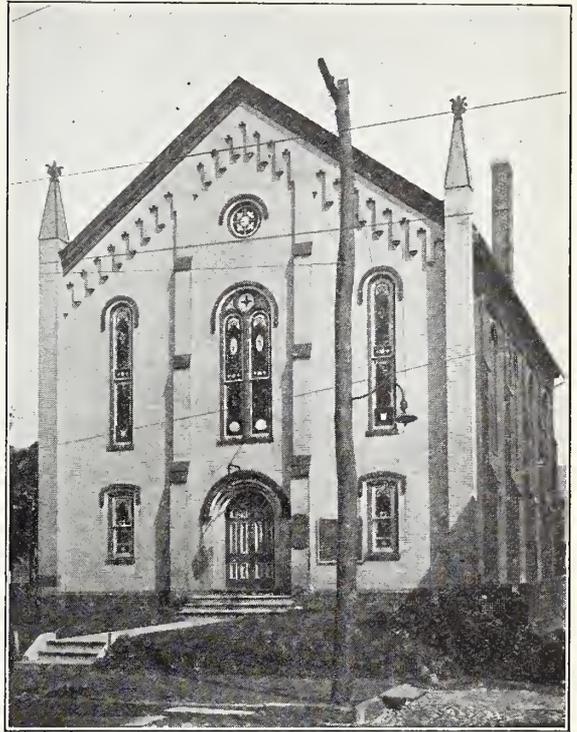

Several years since the congregation purchased a fine parsonage adjoining the church property. This congregation was disturbed very little on account of the difficulties in the church general, losing comparatively few of its members, and it bears the honor of cheerfully opening its doors for Bishop Bowman and the members of the East Pennsylvania Conference when they were refused admittance into the Ebenezer church in 1891.

The following pastors have served this congregation since its organization into a separate church: Solomon Ely, Daniel Wieand, Reuben Lichtenwallner, C. H. Baker, D. J. Kemble, W. K. Wieand, J. C. Bliem, James O. Iehr, Joseph Specht, George Gross, B. F. Bohner, S. T. Leopold, I. F. Heisler, C. K. Fehr, J. W. Boyer, F. D. Geary, C. D. Dreher, C. C. Moyer, and H. M. Taylor, the present pastor.

EBENEZER CHURCH.—The history of Ebenezer Church of the Evangelical Association dates back to the year 1868, when at the session of the East Pennsylvania Conference held in Reading, Pa., at which Bishop Joseph Long was chairman, and Rev. S. G. Rhoads, secretary, it was decided to organize a new congregation in Allentown. It was decided that the congregation should worship, exclusively in the English language, the other congregations of this denomination in the city being exclusively German. Rev. S. S. Chubb was appointed as the first pastor of the church. Not having had an edifice at that time, the services were held in the Linden street

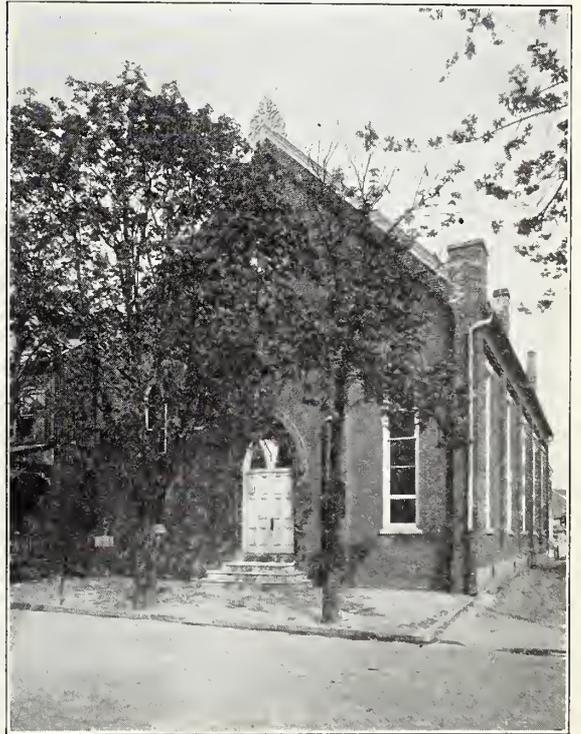

SALEM CHURCH, 1401 LINDEN STREET.

IMMANUEL CHURCH (FIRST WARD)

EBENEZER CHURCH, ON TURNER STREET.

ZION CHURCH, ON LIBERTY STREET.

church on Sunday afternoons. On the 27th of May, 1868, a building committee was elected to procure a site and erect a church building. The committee consisted of the following: M. B. Schadt, Perry Wannamaker, H. S. Weaver, George H. Good and W. L. Christman. The building committee selected a lot on Turner street, below Seventh, and a frame church edifice, 36 x 57 feet, with a wing 16 x 20 feet, was erected. The church was dedicated by Rev. Thomas Bowman, now the senior bishop of the church. The dedication took place on the 11th day of October, 1868.

Immediately after the dedication a Sunday school was organized, with a membership of 62. Perry Wanamaker and Henry S. Weaver were elected the superintendents.

In 1869, under the pastorate of Rev. Augustus Kreckler, steps were taken to build a larger church. The congregation grew so rapidly that the frame building was too small to accommodate the people that worshipped in the church. A committee was appointed to secure additional ground. On Jan. 24, 1889, the committee reported that additional ground had been purchased for $4,600.00. A building committee, consisting of W. P. Huber, J. H. Berger, L. H. Mertz, B. K. Weaver and Elvey Loux was appointed. The frame building was moved back on Church street and converted into dwelling houses. The present beautiful and commodious structure was erected, and dedicated on the last Sunday of July, 1890, by Rev. W. F. Heil, assisted by Revs. A. Kreckler and S. S. Chubb.

During the year 1911, under the pastorate of Rev. James L. Tonkin, extensive improvements were made to both church and parsonage. This congregation at present has a modern church plant and a fine parsonage.

Several sessions of the East Pa. Conference were held in this church. The most notable of these was in 1891, when an unfortunate division took place in the Evangelical Association, resulting in the organization of the United Evangelical Church. For several years the members of Ebenezer church worshipped in halls, but the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania decided in favor of the Evangelical Association and in 1895 Conference was again held in Ebenezer church. The following pastors served Ebenezer in the order named: S. S. Chubb, J. G. Sands, J. N. Metzger, J. O. Lehr, J. B. Smoyer, B. D. Albright, James Bowman, J. A. Feger, J. W. Hoover, A. Kreckler, S. T. Leopold, A. Kreckler, J. S. Steininger, W. L. Bollman, C. H. Bohner, I. F. Bergstresser, James L. Tonkin.

ZION CHURCH.—In 1874 the East Pennsylvania Conference decided that a congregation should be organized in the northern part of the city of Allentown, and appointed Rev. John Schell as its first pastor. The conference also appointed Rev. Jos. M. Saylor, Rev. John Schell, Rev. C. B. Flihr, Rev. J. O. Lehr, and Mr. Owen Swartz as a building committee to select a site for a new church and also to superintend its erection.

The corner stone of the new church was laid by Bishop Reuben Yeakel during the summer and the church was dedicated by Rev. Solomon Neitz on Jan. 24, 1875.

Alfred Bernhart was elected the first superintendent of the Sunday school.

Rev. John Schell was re-appointed in 1875, but passed from labor to reward during the year.

The first trustees of this congregation were elected in 1875 as follows: Owen Swartz, C. A. Bleim, William Egge, D. M. Kistler and William Reichenbach.

The congregation still worships in the same church building. In recent years a fine parsonage was purchased, which is located at 915 Gordon street.

The following pastors served this congregation in the order named: John Schell, Jesse Laros, B. H. Miller, Joseph Specht, A. W. Warfel, A. A. DeLong, S. B. Brown.

From the spring of 1891 to October 24th, 1894 the Evangelical Association made no effort to conduct services or to hold Sunday school in this part of the city. Those who had withdrawn from the Evangelical Association retained possession of the church property until the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania by its decree on Oct. 21, 1894, returned the property to the members and the pastors properly appointed. So the Evangelical Association was virtually compelled to begin anew. During these years Rev. S. T. Leopold, who had charge of Ebenezer congregation, also served as the pastor of the scattered members.

In 1895 Rev. Joseph Specht was again appointed by the Annual Conference. He was followed by S. A. Zuber, who however was deposed from the ministry during the year. His term was filled out by A. Trauger. Then followed James E. Bean, B. C. Krapp, I. F. Heisler, J. G. M. Swengle, and H. H. Smith, the present pastor.

EMAUS.

The Evangelical Association began its work in Emaus in 1839. Rev. Charles Hesser preached the first sermon in the house of Mr. C. Fehr. The village was taken up as a regular appointment on what was then and is still called Lehigh circuit. Rev. G. T. Haines was the first regular pastor. The first members uniting with the church were Daniel Keck and wife, Charles Fehr and wife, and George Kemmerer and wife.

The services were held alternately in the homes of the members until 1845, when a small frame church, 30 x 40 feet, was erected. The congregation then numbering eighteen members. The church cost $1,450.00, Father George Kemmerer bearing the larger part of the expense. The church was built during the pastorate of Rev. Francis Hoffman and dedicated by him.

During the pastorate of Rev. J. K. Seyfried in 1868 there was a great revival and some 60 members were added to the church, among them being: Henry Kemmerer, Conrad Seem, Jacob Erdman, Thomas Leh, Jacob Woodring, Reuben Kemmerer and other prominent citizens of Emaus and vicinity.

In 1873 Emaus was detached from Lehigh circuit and was served as a separate congregation. Rev. Solomon Ely was appointed as its pastor.

During this year the congregation decided to build a new brick church, 40 x 68 feet. The new church cost $6,800.00. The building committee consisted of Henry W. Kemmerer, Conrad Seem, and Jacob Erdman. However, only the basement of the new church was completed this year. In 1874 the church was finished and dedicated by Rev. Francis Hoffman and Rev. Solomon Neitz.

The congregation was afterwards again attached to Lehigh circuit, and has been served by Rev. A. H. Doerstler for the past three years.

SLATINGTON, SLATEDALE AND EMERALD.

In 1857 Rev. George Knerr was appointed to a new mission located in the upper part of Lehigh county. He preached at several places in that part of the country lying south of the Blue Ridge without meeting with much success, except at Slatedale. He with other ministers of the Evangelical Association preached in the homes of Frederick Miller, Robert Drakc and John Dorward, and also in a school house. Besides Rev. Knerr, Rev. J. Schell, Rev. S. G. Rhoads, Rev. E. Reitz, Rev. Thomas Bowman, and Rev. Joseph Steltzer preached in the early years.

The work, however, did not take definite shape until 1859, when a class was organized with William Weiss and John Dorward as leaders. The land on which the present church stands was purchased and a small church building erected, which was dedicated on Dec. 4, 1859, by Rev. John Schell and Rev. Joseph Specht.

Slatedale in its earliest history was connected with Carbon circuit, but in 1867 it was connected with Berlinsville circuit; was commenced in 1866, and the church was built in 1870, during the pastorate of Rev. Joseph Steltzer. In 1874 Slatedale and Slatington were constituted a charge by themselves and Rev. Reuben Deisher appointed as the pastor. In the meanwhile an appointment was taken up in Emerald and a church built in that place. In 1901 Slatedale and Emerald were constituted a charge and Slatington was served as a distinct charge and W. A. C. Ely was appointed to Slatedale.

The congregation at Slatedale from its earliest history had a normal growth; however in 1868 a great revival swept over the place and many were added to the Church. The building becoming too small for the worshippers, a new church was erected in 1881. The building committee consisted of Rev. J. C. Bliem, J. H. Sterner, Alfred Dorward, Levi Paulus, Lewis Roth, Jonas Weiss, Aaron Handwerk and Aaron Peter. The new church was dedicated on Dec. 4, 1881 by Rev. C. K. Fehr, Rev. S. C. Breyfogel and Rev. J. C. Bliem.

CATASAUQUA.

About the year 1836 Evangelical preachers first came into the vicinity of what is now Cata-sauqua, Pa. Rev's M. F. Maize and C. Hesser were the first regular itinerants. They were welcomed to the homes of Silas and Henry Yundt, Henry Enock and William Neighly, where they also had permission to preach. Others who served in a local relation were: J. Gross, P. Lehr, L. Sheldon and W. J. Egge. A class was soon organized and in 1848 the first church was built on the Howertown Road, between Union and Wood streets. It was a brick structure, 30 x 38 feet in dimensions, and cost eight hundred dollars, while the lot cost enough more to make the entire cost nearly one thousand dollars. The trustees at the time the church was built were: C. G. Schneller, William Neighley, and Henry Yundt. The church society had been organized in 1842, but it had not reached a very promising condition until six years later. The original members were: Henry Yundt and wife, Enock Yundt and wife, Abram Yundt and wife, Joseph Yundt and wife, Valentine Knoll, Matthias Knoll and wife, and Sebastian Knoll. By 1868 the society had received so many accessions that its old church was no longer adequate for its accommodation, and the present structure, Emmanuel Evangelical Church, at the corner of Second and Walnut streets, was erected in that year. It is a large brick edifice and cost about $10,000. The building committee was: William Michael, David Tomblor, Owen Schwartz, C. G. Schneller and Aaron Klick. A parsonage was purchased in 1874. The second church was built under the pastorate of J. O. Lehr. In 1864 Catasauqua was taken from Lehigh circuit and made a self-supporting station.

The preachers appointed by conference from the beginning to the time of the division and the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania were: M. F. Maize, C. Hesser, F. Hoffman, D. Berger, G. T. Haines, J. C. Farnsworth, J. Kramer, D. Wieand, Moses Dissinger, Henry Bucks, C. Hummel, C. Meyer, George Knerr, S. G. Rhoads, J. O. Lehr, C. B. Fliehr, Jacob Adams, C. Breyfogel, R. M. Lichtenwalner, B. F. Bohner, H. J. Glick.

UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

By Rev. W. F. Heil, D.D.

The persons who organized the United Evangelical Church were formerly members of the Evangelical Association. Its organization was due to a radical difference of opinion concerning the interpretation of the constitution and polity among the members of the Association.

The founders of the Evangelical Association were Pennsylvanians, and, while they adopted an episcopal form of church government, they expressed their opposition to a strongly centralized government by adopting provisions which limited the powers of the General Conference and of the bishops.

The early missionary operations of the Association were directed chiefly to the Germans and many of the members gained by these missions were favorable to a more strongly centralized government. In 1863 a tendency to enlarge the powers of the General Conference and the bishops appeared. This enlargement of power was not to be secured by amending the constitution of the church, but by interpreting it. This tendency found little favor in the conferences in Pennsylvania. In the General Conference of 1883, held in Allentown, Pennsylvania, much attention was given to a controversy between J. J. Esher, D.D., and Rudolph Dubs, D.D., LL.D., two of the bishops of the church. At first the controversy was largely personal, but it soon came to involve the question of authority on the part of the bishops and later that of the General Conference. In their final utterances, the leaders of the Association made the General Conference a body of practically unlimited powers; the bishops were made the interpreters of the law, with power to suspend all who refused to be governed by their interpretation in the interval of General Conference sessions; and pastors were empowered to remove from membership without trial those whom they deemed guilty of seditious conduct.

In the controversy which continued from 1887 to 1894, the persons who favored the enlargement of the powers of the General Conference and of the ministry, were known as the "Majority," while those who advocated a more democratic policy were named the "Minority." Issues other than those relating to church government were raised, but the "Minority" successfully maintained that the principal question at issue was, whether the simple form of government adopted by the founders of the Association should be preserved or whether it should be superseded by a more strongly centralized polity.

In the annual conference districts where the "Minority" outnumbered the "Majority," the latter organized rival annual conferences. In a number of these districts the conferences were practically unanimous in their support of the "Minority" and the rival conferences included chiefly ministers who did not belong to the active ranks. In the district of the East Pennsylvania Conference, twenty out of one hundred and seventeen members withdrew and organized another conference. The General Conference of the Association, held in Indianapolis, Indiana, in 1891, recognized the rival annual conferences as legitimate bodies and practically outlawed those who adhered to the "Minority." The latter were in possession of many churches and parsonages and a large number of suits were instituted by the "Majority" to get possession of these. The "Minority" proposed that one or two test cases should be thoroughly tried, agreeing to be governed in all instances by the decision of the Supreme Court in these cases. The "Majority" declined this proposal, and inaugurated suits in almost every county in which the "Minority" was represented. A long period of litigation ensued, a case tried in Reading, Pennsylvania, under Judge G. A. Endlich, reaching the Supreme Court in 1894. This case was decided in favor of the "Minority" by the lower court, but on appeal was reversed. The Supreme Court decided that the General Conference which represented a majority of the church had the right to determine the questions involved and declined to inquire whether they had been righteously determined. The costs were assessed against the properties involved in the litigation. The "Minority" in most cases vacated the churches and parsonages held by them and where the "Majority" had no adherents they were put to secular uses.

The calling of the General Conference at Naperville, Illinois, followed the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Delegates from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, and Iowa were present. The delegates from Pennsylvania represented three annual conferences with a membership of 45,000. Of this number more than 36,000 were finally enrolled as members of the United Evangelical Church. This General Conference adopted "Articles of Faith," which are in accord with the doctrines set forth and promulgated by the various Methodistic churches; it adopted a polity in which the General Conference is limited to such powers as are specifically conferred upon it by the Discipline; it adopted permanently the itinerant system of stationing preachers; it made the office of bishop chiefly executive and limited the tenure of office to two consecutive terms; it admitted lay delegates to the annual and the general conferences; it granted all persons, in case of accusation, the right to an impartial trial; and it vested the control of local church property in the congregations which created it. Rudolph Dubs, D.D., LL.D., and W. M. Stanford, D.D., were elected the first bishops; and eight years later they were succeeded by H. B. Hartzler, D.D. and W. F. Heil, D.D. The present bishops are W. H. Fouke, D.D., and U. F. Swengel, D.D.

In 1913 the church included ten annual conferences: East Pennsylvania, Central Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, Ohio, Illinois, Des Moines, Northwestern, Platte River, Kansas and Oregon. Its educational institutions are: Albright College, Myerstown, Pa.; Western Union, LeMars, Iowa; Dallas, Dallas, Oregon. A large mission is maintained in the province of Hunan, China. Its Publishing House, located at Harrisburg, Pa., reported at the end of 1912, net resources of $133,788.36, a gross business of $136,625.41. The annual missionary receipts are $142,021.00. The value of all property acquired since 1894 is $5,111,605.00. Fifteen congregations are located in Lehigh county. These reported in 1912 as follows: Members, 2,608; Sunday school enrollment, 4,915; church property, $187,631.00; annual receipts for church purposes, $23,635.00.

ALLENTOWN.

TRINITY U. E. CHURCH.—Trinity United Evangelical church was originally the Salem Church of the Evangelical Association and as such was the oldest Evangelical church at Allentown. In 1835 it was a part of Lehigh circuit. In 1857 it became a station, with Rev. John Schell as preacher. In 1891, when the division in the Evangelical Association began, a large majority of the members of Salem church adhered to the "Minority," and when they were deprived of the use of their property by the decision of the court in 1894, the pastor, Rev. F. E. Erdman, called a meeting of the officials, at which the situation was discussed and three committees were appointed, one on location, one on temporary place of worship, and one on organization. A congregational meeting was held on Friday evening, Oct. 5, 1894, at which 275 persons signed a declaration of their allegiance to the new order of things and organized, taking the name "Trinity Evangelical Church." A building and finance committee was appointed with instructions to proceed at once to purchase a lot and collect funds. The lot on the corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets was secured and on October 12th ground was broken, on the 24th the cornerstone was laid by Rev. F. E. Erdman, assisted by Revs. J. D. Woodring and D. S. Stauffer. On April 14th, 1895, Easter Sunday, the first services were held in the chapel and on July 21st, the church was dedicated, Bishop R. Dubs, D.D., officiating. The building, together with the lot, cost $30,000.00, of which amount $10,000.00 was raised on the day of dedication. The first trustees of the church were: W. F. Romig, Freeman Hawk, Chas. Shoemaker, Wilson Muschlitz and Theo. F. Knauss. The building committee consisted of Henry Leh, Charles Shoemaker, J. B. Haas, Charles W. Knouse, and W. F. Romig. While the building was in course of erection, the congregation worshipped in the High School building, which was readily placed at their service. In 1902 the interior was reconstructed at a cost of $5,000.00. The improvements included the rearrangement of platforms, floors and pews, so that the entire building can be used in connection with one service. A gallery was placed in the lecture room. Wilson partitions were put into all dividing walls, and the entire interior was frescoed. The church will accommodate a thousand people without the use of extra seats. On May 11, 1913, a pipe organ, built by M. P. Moller, of Hagerstown, Md., was dedicated. The present membership is 540, and the enrollment of the Sunday school is 913. The pastors since the reorganization were F. E. Erdman, D. A. Medlar, W. F. Heil, J. P. Miller, A. E. Hangen and F. S. Borkey.

BETHANY U. E. CHURCH.—The Bethany United Evangelical Church of Allentown, dates its origin in the year 1868, when, at a session of the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Association, held in the city of Reading, Pa., under the presidency of Bishop Long, it was decided to establish a third church in the city of Allentown, to be an exclusively English church. The same session of Annual Conference appropriated the sum of $300 towards the support of the new mission for that year, and appointed Rev. S. S. Chubb as its first pastor. Twenty-seven members composed the new congregation.

Immediate steps were taken to erect a house year 1890 was replaced with the present commodious structure known as Ebenezer church of the Evangelical Association. W. P. Huber, J. H. Burger, L. H. Mertz, B. K. Weaver, and Levi Long were the building committee. Rev.

TRINITY UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

of worship. On May 27, 1868, M. B. Schadt, Perry Wanamaker, H. S. Weaver, W. F. Christman and George H. Good, were elected as trustees, as well as a building committee. A frame building at a nominal cost was erected on Turner street, east of Seventh street, which in the W. F. Heil dedicated the church, assisted by Rev. J. W. Hoover, the pastor; and Revs. S. S. Chubb and A. Kreckler, former pastors of the congregation.

The unfortunate dissension in the Evangelical Association led to civil litigation, upon which the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania declared that according to law the property acquired by this congregation which had now grown to about 500 members, belonged to the Evangelical Association of North America. Upwards of 400 members felt morally constrained to withdraw (leaving a very small minority of the membership in the old building) and they organized the Bethany United Evangelical Church of Allentown, Pa. This was in the year 1894. The first pastor of the new organization was Rev. J. D. Woodring, D.D. Immediate steps were taken towards the erection of a new church edifice. The present building at the corner of Sixth and Oak streets was built in 1895, at a cost of $40,000. The building committee was: J. H. Burger, L. H. Mertz, W. P. Huber, H. D. Derhamer, B. K. Weaver, Chas. Y. Moyer and M. B. Schadt.

The first board of trustees consisted of J. H. Burger, T. H. Miller, L. H. Mertz, W. J. Wagner, and B. K. Weaver. The present board is: J. H. Burger, Charles Bear, C. W. Laros, E. C. Reinhard, and D. K. Weidner. The following served as pastors to date: Revs. J. D. Woodring, D.D., 1893-1897; C. L. Oswald, 1897-1900; J. H. Shirey, 1900-1903; C. D. Huber, 1903-1907; E. H. Kistler, 1907-1910; H. H. Smith, 1910-1913, and A. B. Saylor, 1913-.

The church has enjoyed great prosperity, having at present a membership of 650, and a Sunday school of over 1,000 enrolled members, while at the same time it has made material contributions to the formation of a new church in the West End of the city, known as Grace United Evangelical Church.

SEIBERT U. E. CHURCH.—Seibert United Evangelical Church dates its history back to the year 1784. In the spring of that year the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Association located a mission in what was then North Allentown. A church was erected on Liberty street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, known as the Zion Church. Rev. John Schell served as the first pastor. At the end of the second year the mission reported 96 members. The congregation prospered so that at the end of 1893 the pastor, Rev. C. H. Egge, reported a membership of 199. During the pastorate of Rev. Egge a dissension arose in the Evangelical Association resulting later in the organization of the United Evangelical Church. The large majority of the members of Zion Church adhered to what was known as the "Minority" side, and later as the United Evangelical Church.

Rev. H. D. Shultz was the pastor from 1894 to 1897. These were eventful years. The old church being lost by a decision of the Supreme Court of the State, given Monday, October 1, 1894, it was decided at a congregational meeting, Thursday evening, October 4, 1894, to proceed at once to build a new church. A provisional constitution was adopted and the name "Seibert Evangelical Church" chosen. W. P. Moyer having previously secured a lot at Ninth and Liberty streets, it was decided to build on this lot. The Board of Trustees, consisting of W. J. Egge, George Mealey, W. P. Moyer, J. S. Yeakel and Owen S. Swartz, were appointed a building committee. On Monday, October 8, 1894, Susan Swartz and Mary Schaffer turned the first ground in the excavation for the new church. The cornerstone was laid Nov. 11, 1894, by the pastor, assisted by Revs. F. E. Erdman and J. D. Woodring. Watch-night services were conducted in the lower room of the church on Dec. 31, 1894. This room was formally opened for services on Sunday, Jan. 20, 1895. Revs. A. M. Stirk and J. D. Woodring preached the sermons. Revival meetings were opened which resulted in a large number of conversions. The parsonage was also erected during these four years. During this pastorate the congregation raised $19,637.64 for all purposes. This pastorate closed with 232 members.

The following served as pastors during the years mentioned: Rev. J. M. Rinker, from 1898 to 1902; Rev. A. J. Brunner, from 1902 to 1906; Rev. A. H. Snyder, from 1906 to 1907; Rev. J. S. Heisler, from 1907 to 1911.

At the Annual Congregational meeting in January, 1910, it was decided to remodel and enlarge the church. A building committee was appointed, consisting of the following members: W. P. Moyer, M. C. Bastian, C. H. Dickert, J. H. Kehler, O. S. Swartz, Emmanuel Reinhard, Alexander Reinhard and Rev. J. S. Heisler.

A large addition, 23 x 75 feet, was built at the east end of the church, giving very much more room for the accommodation of the growing Sunday school and adding 23 feet to the main auditorium.

A fine "Bates and Culley" pipe organ was also installed at an expense of $2,500.00. This organ was the gift of Messrs. W. P. Moyer and M. C. Bastian, who paid half of the expense, and Andrew Carnegie, who donated the other half.

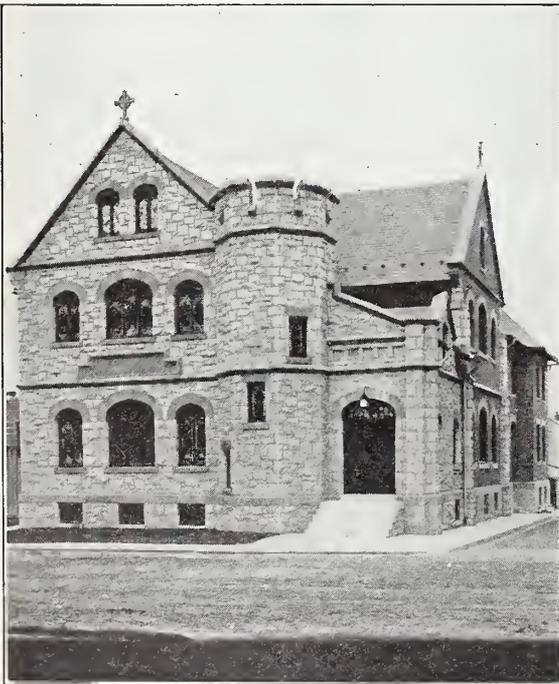

The total expense connected with the remodeling and beautifying of the church, amounted to $13,000.00. On Sunday, Jan. 29th, 1911, the church was re-opened with appropriate services. Rev. W. M. Stanford, D.D., officiated at the

BETHANY CHURCH, ON NORTH SIXTH STREET.

SEIBERT CHURCH, NINTH AND LIBERTY STREETS.

GRACE CHURCH, FIFTEENTH AND TURNER STREETS.

ZION'S CHURCH, SOUTH ALLENTOWN.

FOUR UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCHES, ALLENTOWN.

re-opening. The entire expense was provided for, so that to-day the congregation has a property, including a fine parsonage, valued at $33,000.00, clear of all indebtedness.

At the end of Rev. Heisler's pastorate there were 328 members and a Sunday school enrollment of 540.

In the spring of 1911, Rev. E. S. Woodring, A.M., was appointed as pastor. At the end of his second year's pastorate he reported a membership of almost 400 and a Sunday school enrollment of 775.

GRACE U. E. CHURCH.—Representatives of the various United Evangelical churches of the city considered the growing West End a most favorable section in which to locate a new church, and with that purpose in view secured the piece of ground 120 x 100 feet on the South East corner of Fifteenth and Turner streets in October, 1903. Mrs. Annie Huber, a generous member of Bethany church, gave impetus to the movement by donating one-half of the lot. The Willing Workers, a society composed of the women of the different congregations, began to gather funds for the mission. The East Pennsylvania Conference of the church endorsed the project and appointed as missionary and pastor, Rev. G. Wes. Marquardt, in March, 1906. A frame chapel, 32 x 56 feet, costing nearly $1,000 was erected and paid for in ten days. The first public service was held March 25, 1906. Permanent organization was effected April 2, 1906, with seventy members, and trustees, stewards and Sunday school officers duly elected. At this meeting it was decided to build a permanent chapel and the matter was entrusted to the following committee: Chas. H. Ettinger, chairman; Milton Kline, secretary; John Leh, Chas. Zeigenfus, Sr., and G. W. Marquardt. A Finance Committee, consisting of E. J. DeRone, chairman; C. T. Davis, secretary; Thos. E. Miller, treasurer; H. P. W. Muse and Rev. Marquardt was appointed to finance the enterprise. Building operations proceeded with speed and the cornerstone was laid September 23, 1906. The stone chapel, with a seating capacity of 700 and costing $28,000, including equipment—fully covered by subscriptions—was dedicated June 30, 1907. Situated most favorably in a growing territory the church made rapid progress and at this writing has a membership of nearly 300, and a Sunday school enrollment of over 500. It is well organized, doing most effective work in every line of Christian activity and exerts a strong moral and spiritual influence in the western part of the city. Rev. A. W. Cooper is the present pastor.

ZION U. E. CHURCH is the product of mission work conducted in South Allentown, by the Trinity United Evangelical Church of Allentown. At the Quarterly Conference, held July 25, 1898, a committee was appointed to inquire for a place of worship south of Hamilton street, in the city of Allentown. This committee, having failed to find a place, was discontinued at a conference session held May 27, 1897. At the same conference William Hoffman reported that the missionary societies of Trinity congregation had appointed a committee to make further inquiry for a place of worship and, at the conference session of September 3, of the same year, this committee reported that a temporary chapel had been erected in South Allentown at a cost of $109.20, of which amount, $36.41 had been contributed in offerings at the opening service. The conference appointed a collector to secure the balance. At the conference of November 25, of the same year, the collector reported the balance paid. It was also reported that the mission was organized with a membership of twenty-three and that a Sunday school was being organized. A year later, November 9, 1898, the conference decided to purchase the Scheetz's lot at a cost of $440.00. Up to the year 1899 this mission was under the supervision of Rev. D. A. Medlar, pastor of Trinity congregation. At a session of the Quarterly Conference, held February 17, 1899, a memorial was addressed to the Annual Conference which met at Mohnton, Pa., the following month, asking that South Allentown, be supplied with a pastor. The Annual Conference added Northampton to South Allentown, called the charge South Allentown and Northampton Mission and appointed Rev. J. Stermer as pastor. During his first year the present brick building was erected at a cost of nearly $4,000.00. The cornerstone was laid on June 4, 1899, by Rev. D. A. Medlar, and the dedication took place on October 1, Rev. W. F. Heil officiating. In 1913 the parsonage was built. The congregation was incorporated November 13, 1899, the charter members being, Jacob Christine, Charles Weidner, John J. Gangaware, Harrison Bortz, Charles Fry, Daniel B. Harper, James Moritz, Oscar Mohr, Paul R. Byer, and Horace Haas. The following ministers served this charge: John H. Stermer, 1899-1902; J. M. Rinker, 1902-03; J. E. Bahner, 1903-06; D. G. Reinhold, 1906-07; W. H. Snyder, 1907-11; Thomas Knecht, 1911-.

CATASAUQUA.

The adherents of the United Evangelical Church met on October 6, 1894, and organized themselves into a congregation and adopted the name, "St. John's Congregation of the United Evangelical Church." Peter Heilman, John W. Souder, George Minnich, James Fahler, and Charles W. Weibel were elected trustees. Rev. D. S. Stauffer, John W. Souder, Peter Heilman, George Minnich, and David Graffin were appointed a committee to purchase a lot and build a church property. A lot on the corner of Third and Walnut streets was purchased for $3,000 and a brick church was erected on the rear. The church was dedicated March 5, 1895, Rev. A. M. Stirk officiating. Among the oldest members of the church are: Mrs. Caroline Gilbert, Mrs. Mary Minnich, Henry Souder and wife, Charlotte, Peter Heilman, James Fahler. The following ministers served as pastors: D. S. Stauffer, 1894-96; R. M. Lichtenwalner, 1896-1900; C. D. Huber, 1900-03; D. P. Longsdorf, 1903-07; John H. Stermer, 1907-10; R. W. Hand, 1910-12; A. W. Warfel, 1912-

EGYPT.

In 1901 the United Evangelical Church of Egypt was organized. The appointment was served in connection with Catasauqua. In 1902 it was taken from Catasauqua and connected with Emerald. At present it is again connected with Catasauqua. The congregation occupies a small chapel, erected in 1902. A Sunday school is maintained and the congregation is served on alternate Sundays by the pastor of Catasauqua.

EMAUS.

The St. Matthew's United Evangelical Church was organized in 1894. John Koch, Sr., Joseph Bagenstoe, Jonas Fritz, Sylvanus Ritter and James Hauser were elected trustees. Samuel Lee and James Hauser were appointed to secure a place of worship and to arrange for the purchase of a building lot. The lot on the corner of Fifth and Ridge streets was purchased. Thomas Knecht, James Hauser, and Henry Knouss were appointed a building committee. On November 10, 1894, the cornerstone was laid. Rev. H. D. Schultz had charge of the service. The church was dedicated by Bishop R. Dubs on December 25, 1894. Until 1913 Emaus was served in connection with Cetronia and Vera Cruz but at the session of the East Pennsylvania Conference of that year, it was constituted a mission by itself. The following ministers served as pastors: C. S. Brown, H. H. Smith, Thomas Knecht, F. Sechrist, J. K. Seyfrit, John Stermer and D. F. Kostenbader. Rev. Stermer served a full term, beginning with 1903, and was re-appointed in 1911. He is the present pastor. During the term of Rev. Frank Sechrist, a very successful revival resulted in seventy conversions. The congregation has advanced slowly since its organization, the most noted advance having been made in the Sunday school, which reports an enrollment of 384.

SLATINGTON.

The officials, with a number of other members of the St. Paul Church of the Evangelical Association, met in the home of Aaron Peter on October 5, 1894, L. F. Brensinger, acting as president and William H. Gish as secretary. William Ruch's hall was secured as a place of worship. Committees on worship, on location, and on organization were appointed and a congregational meeting was called for October 8. At the appointed time a large number of the members of St. Paul's congregation met. Rev. A. M. Stirk presided at the meeting and L. F. Brensinger acted as secretary. Rev. I. J. Reitz for the committee on organization, submitted a report providing for a temporary organization under the name of Trinity Evangelical Congregation. It also provided that the form of organization which had obtained in the St. Paul's Church, should be recognized in the new congregation. At an official meeting held October 12, 1894, it was decided to purchase two lots on the east side of Second street, owned by Charles Mack. The lots had a frontage of eighty feet on Second street, and a depth of 150 feet and cost $2,500.00. Rev. I. J. Reitz, Stephen Zellner, John DeLong, Aaron Peter, William Ruch, Edward German and Edward Shoenberger were elected a building committee. A permanent organization was effected on April 2, 1895, by electing W. H. Gish, L. A. Jones, William Ruch, Stephen Zellner and Alexander Weaver, trustees. The cornerstone of the new church was laid June 2, 1895, and the church was dedicated November 3 of the same year, the Rev. A. M. Stirk officiating. The cost of the church was $6,128.00. Later an adjoining lot was purchased for $900.00 and a parsonage costing $2,376.00 was erected on it. In 1913 the congregation had 153 members, a Sunday school enrollment of 289, with an organized men's class of 66 members. J. P. Miller served as pastor from 1891-93; I. J. Reitz, 1893-96; D. S. Stauffer, 1896-1900; J. W. Woehrlé, 1900-02; W. J. Edelman, 1902-03; J. M. Rinker, 1903-07; G. A. Knerr, 1907-11; W. H. Snyder, 1911-

EMERALD.

At a public meeting at which Rev. I. J. Reitz presided and A. C. Nolf, Esq., acted as secretary, held on October 6, 1894, it was decided unanimously by the people adhering to the United Evangelical Church, to erect a place of worship at once. At a second meeting held two days later, the committee on location and property, consisting of A. C. Nolf, Peter Oswald, and Peter Kern, reported that Daniel Thomas offered a suitable lot for $500.00; $50.00 of the purchase price was to be paid in cash and the balance was to be secured by a mortgage. The said Mr. Thomas also agreed to pay $25.00 toward the erection of a church. This offer was accepted and A. C. Nolf, Jeremiah Oswald, Peter Kern, Justus Moyer and Lewis Kuntz were elected as building committee. The excavation for the foundation was begun on October 14; on November 4, the cornerstone was laid by the pastor, Rev. I. J. Reitz; and on December 23 of the same year the church was dedicated by Bishop C. S. Haman. It was the first church of the United Evangelicals to be dedicated in the East Pennsylvania Conference. Cash subscriptions to pay the entire cost of the building were secured on the day of dedication. The temporary organization held over until August 22, 1895, when a permanent organization was effected by the election of Peter Oswald, A. C. Nolf, Justus Moyer, Elias Roth, and Peter Kern as trustees. In the organization of the board Peter Oswald was chosen as president, A. C. Nolf, secretary, and Justus Moyer, treasurer. The congregation was connected with the Slattington charge until 1902, when Egypt and Franklin (now Emerald) were constituted a mission. In 1906 Franklin was constituted a mission by itself and in 1911 Berlinsville and Cherryville were added to Emerald. In 1913 Cherryville was detached, leaving Emerald and Berlinsville a separate charge. The following ministers served as pastors: J. P. Miller, 1891-93; I. J. Reitz, 1893-96; D. S. Stauffer, 1896-1900; J. W. Woehle, 1900-02; J. D. Kistler, 1902-04; J. K. Hoffman, 1904-1908; A. W. Warfel, 1908-12; J. F. Layton, 1912-.

HOSENSACK.

In the year 1897 about 85 of the members of the Upper Milford Evangelical Association withdrew and organized the Grace United Evangelical Church. A committee consisting of Rev. Daniel Yeakel, Asa Miller, Nathan Stahl, Jesse S. Moyer, Josiah Doney, Charles Miller, and Levi Miller, was appointed with power to select a site. Rev. Daniel Yeakel, the senior member of the committee and the leading spirit in the congregation, was given the privilege to make the final selection, and he, after a night of prayer, chose the present site, located near what was formerly known as Powder Valley railroad station. Rev. David Yeakel, Jesse S. Moyer, H. L. Yeakel, Asa Miller were appointed a building committee. Work was begun at once and on September 26, 1897, the church building was dedicated by Rev. C. Newton Dubs. The first trustees were Rev. Daniel Yeakel, H. L. Yeakel, Jacob Geho, Jesse S. Moyer, and Charles Heil. The congregation forms a part of the East Greenville Mission and is served in connection with the East Greenville and Clayton appointments. Rev. C. W. Heffner was pastor when the church was erected and since then the following ministers served the congregation: D. G. Reinhold, 1898-1900; J. K. Freed, 1900-04; N. S. Hawk, 1904-06; S. A. Heisey, 1906-07; Thomas Knecht, 1907-10; J. E. Bahner, 1910-14.

CETRONIA.

For the greater part of a century the Evangelical Association had a foothold along the waters of Cedar creek. Pioneer missionaries preached in private houses, in barns and under the open heavens, until, in later years a stone building called "Bet-Hügel" was used as a church. From this first place of worship a number of churches had their beginning of which the last in years is the Grace United Evangelical Church of Cetronia. A neat church building was erected in 1896 under the pastorate of Rev. Frank Sechrist. The building committee consisted of Edward Mertz, Willoughby Hartman, Edward Glick and Tilghman Helfrich. The church is located along the main street of the village. The present congregation includes a number of the older families of the community. It has given many members to the churches in Allentown. A good Sunday school is maintained and conditions promise a fair growth in the future. This school was organized by Reuben Glick about seventy-five years ago. Its sessions were held in a shed used to store bark. Elden Glick, Edward Mertz and John Beidler are the present trustees. Ellsworth Reinhart is the steward, Peter Weaver the class leader, and Mrs. Lillie Helfrich the Sunday school superintendent. Rev. D. G. Reinhold is pastor.

VERA CRUZ.

The Evangelical Association people began their worship in the Baptist church in the year 1852. The United Evangelical congregation was organized in 1898, and purchased the rights of the Baptist people, receiving sole title to the lot on which the building stands and to the adjoining cemetery. In 1901 the church was enlarged and remodelled under the pastorate of Rev. J. K. Freed. At this time Francis G. Swartz of Allentown donated a piece of ground in honor of his parents, which was added to the cemetery. The trustees at the time when the property was purchased were Amandus Kline, Edwin H. Mohr and Philip Ritter. The present trustees are the same, excepting Amandus Kline, deceased, whose successor is George Wambold.

REV. JOHN SCHELL.

Rev. John Schell was one of the early ministers of the Evangelical church. He was born in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, Jan. 29, 1816, son of George and Catharine (Schuler) Schell. At the age of eighteen years he learned the stone mason trade, which he followed during the summer months; and during three successive winters he attended the Uakertown Academy. Afterward he taught school at Shimersville, Pa. In 1847 he was soundly converted to God and the following year he entered the ministry of the East Pennsylvania Conference and was assigned upon the Germantown Circuit. In 1849 he was appointed upon the Bowmantown Circuit; from 1850-51 he served Pinegrove Circuit. From 1852-53, Schuylkill Haven, from 1854-55, Pottsville, from 1856-57; Salem church, Allentown; from 1858-59, Weissport; from 1860-61, Orwigsburg; from 1862-63, Lebanon; from 1864-65, Catasauqua; in 1866, Salem church, Allentown, for a second time; Salem church, Reading, during 1867 and 1868; Milford Circuit in 1869; Sixth and Dauphin Street Church, Philadelphia, in 1870 and 1871; during 1872 he located at Allentown, owing to ill-health. In 1873 he served Hamburg, after which he was appointed to the North Allentown Mission, which he served during 1874 and 1875, and in the latter year he built the Zion's church, located on Liberty street, near Ninth. In his efforts in building the new church he was very successful and scores of souls were converted. His death occurred Feb. 16, 1876. His funeral was conducted in the Salem church, at Allentown, and it was largely attended. The funeral sermon was preached by Bishop T. Bowman, D.D., assisted by Presiding Elder J. M. Saylor and other ministers of the denomination.

REV. JOHN SCHELL.

Rev. Schell was a minister of service, having been a delegate to the General Conference which met at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1863. He was a man of great piety and goodness of heart, although not noted for the eloquence of his preaching, he nevertheless was a power in the church in which he labored so long and faithfully. Rev. Schell had been ailing for a long time and he suffered much pain during his last sickness, but he bore it all with Christian fortitude, and during the last days of his life he spoke much of Heaven and the blessedness of the Christian's death. He was buried at Schubert Meeting House in Upper Milford township.

Rev. Schell was first married to Mary Miller, who died in 1843, leaving one daughter, Mary A., who became the wife of Henry Ibach and she now resides at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

He was married, second, in 1850, to Amelia, a daughter of George and Mary (Koch) Heil of Lower Macungie. She was born in 1830 and died in 1889. Their children follow: (1) Sarah who died aged fourteen years; (2) Anna H. J. (m. J. A. Moyer, and they have the following children: Amy M., Howard U., Robert W., and Arthur G.); (3) Addison A., who died in his third year; (4) John W., who died aged fifteen years; (5) Lillie L. (m. O. C. Donecker. She died in 1886, aged twenty-four years); (6) William M., died aged twenty-four years; (7) Erwin G., died in infancy.

SOLOMON NEITZ was born in Lehigh county, Pa., April 2, 1821. He was converted at the age of fourteen at the Mertz church (the first Evangelical church in Lehigh county), in March, 1835. He entered the ministry of the East Pa. Conference, 1840. In 1855 he was conference agent for Union Seminary. He was elected presiding elder in 1856 and 1860, but having been appointed by the Board of Publication to write the "Life of Bishop Seybert," he resigned in 1861, and devoted himself to that work. He was re-elected presiding elder in 1862, 1866 and 1870; served Reading Eighth Street church in 1874, was re-elected presiding elder in 1875; resigned in 1878, and was appointed to Reading Eighth Street again, where he served three years. In 1881 he rested because of failing health, and in 1882 he was appointed to Reading Ninth Street, which he served until September, 1883, when he became disabled for further service and thereafter was retained in the itinerancy without appointment until his death. He was a delegate to the General Conference of 1856, and to every subsequent one until his death. In 1863 he was sent by the Board of Missions to Germany to inspect and more firmly establish the work there. He was the faithful and efficient treasurer of the Charitable Society for a number of years.

REV. SOLOMON NEITZ.

As an orator Solomon Neitz has probably never been surpassed in the church. His speech was always weighty, impressive and convincing, and he often swept his audience into raptures by his grand and overwhelming oratory. Unlike many, whose only strength is in their victory, Neitz was always fertile in resources and fresh in his subject matter, and frequently led his hearers into fields not often traversed by others. In 1844 Neitz was married to Susan Hammer, a member of an eminent Evangelical family of that name, who were among the fruits of the great Orwigsburg revival. His son, Henry, entered the ministry of the East Pa. Conference in 1867. Father Neitz suffered a stroke of paralysis in Sept., 1883, which caused his death May 11, 1885, in Reading, Pa. His wife and four children survived him.

JOHN P. LEIB was born at Cornwall, Lebanon county, Pa., Dec. 30, 1802; converted during the great revival at Orwigsburg; entered the Eastern Conference in 1831; was elected presiding elder in 1836, in 1840, in 1848, in 1852 and in 1866. He died at his post while pastor at Phoenixville in 1875, being found dead in his bed on the morning of September 7. He was justly regarded as one of the leading men of the church. A short time prior to his death he attended a camp meeting at Milford, during which he made the following statement at a praise meeting. Raising his right hand, trembling with age, he said: "I, John P. Leib, seventy-two years of age, having spent fifty-one years in the service of God, and forty-five years in uninterrupted succession in the ministry of the gospel, confess before you all that I have found pardon and salvation in the blood of the lamb, and that I am the Lord's with body, soul and spirit, with all I am and possess both for time and eternity." His wife, Hannah, a sister of Rev. Chas. Hammer, preceded him in death.

JOSEPH M. SAYLOR was born at Orwigsburg, Pa., Sept. 4, 1803, and died at Reading, Pa., Oct. 12, 1891, aged 88 years, 1 month and 8 days. He was converted at Orwigsburg under the labors of John Seibert in 1823, with whom he traveled York Circuit in 1824. He was licensed by the conference in 1825, and in 1826 he traveled in Ohio, where he was ordained at the first annual session in the West. He was elected presiding elder in 1833. In 1843 he founded the Evangelical work in Germantown, and in Reading in 1844; was again elected presiding elder in 1848, 1851, 1872 and 1876. He became superannuated in 1882, but preached frequently until his death, being the oldest preacher in years and length of service in the church. He was in many respects a remarkable man, and his services to the church were indeed great and Notwithstanding his irresistible humor and grotesque manner, he was a good preacher and a highly useful man. In 1854 he was licensed to preach by the East Pa. Conference, and two years thereafter entered the active ranks, in which he did valiant service for twenty-seven years, filling some of the most important appointments of his native conference during twenty-three years, after which, in 1879, he took work in Kansas Conference, where he served four valuable. He was one of the compilers of the English hymn book and ther church literature. His mind remained clear to the last, his memory retaining with great vividness the events of the early days. Upon his retirement from active work in 1882, the East Pa. Conference adopted suitable resolutions recognizing his long and valuable services.

REV. JOS. M. SAYLOR.

REV. MOSES DISSINGER.

MOSES DISSINGER was born in Shaefferstown, Lebanon county, Pa., March 17, 1824. This man was in some respects unrivalled in the church. He was the embodiment of peculiarities. His manners, speech, sermons, everything about him, bore the stamp of his marked individuality.

After severe suffering, he died in Douglass county, Kansas, Jan. 25, 1883, in the fifty-ninth year of his age. An interesting volume might be written about this eccentric son of the church, whose quaint manners and sayings will long be the theme of conversation around thousands of firesides. He was a strong advocate of temperance, and his discourses on that subject were unique and very effective. During the Civil War he was a radical Unionist, and delivered numerous speeches in support of the administration. He was fearless, brave and patriotic, a foe to sin and evil of every kind and his memory will ever be revered in the church. [See Dissinger Family in Vol. II.]

REV. BENJAMIN JOHN SMOYER.

A son of John and Sarah (Neitz) Smoyer, was born at Emaus, Dec. 13, 1844. He was educated in the public schools and also attended Freeland's Seminary, Collegeville, Pa., Union Seminary, New Berlin, Pa., and Lebanon Valley College. In the early part of his life he clerked in a store and taught school.

Church, in which position he did excellent work for five years; in 1895 he was re-elected Presiding Elder and continued in this office until the time of his death, April 24, 1903, aged 58 years, 4 months, 11 days. Rev. Smoyer was an earnest, profound and powerful preacher and frequently swayed his audiences into rapture or moved them to tears by his zeal and eloquence.

REV. B. J. SMOYER.

He was licensed to preach in 1866 by the East Pa. Conference of the Evangelical Association, and served these appointments successively: Lehigh Circuit, Carbon Circuit, Mahantongo Circuit, Schuylkill Haven, Mahanoy City, Annville, Shamokin, Allentown English Mission (now Bethany Church), Tamaqua, Lehigh and Lebanon. In 1884 he was elected Presiding Elder and served 8 years; in 1891, at the General Conference held at Philadelphia, he was chosen Corresponding Secretary of the General Missionary Society of the United Evangelical

He was married twice. His first wife was Sarah J. Kawvel, who died in 1898. The issue of this union was 4 sons and 6 daughters. His second wife was Mrs. Emma (Sherer) Knerr, who with the children survived him.

GEN. HENRY MERTZ, a foremost citizen in Upper Milford township, was born July 21, 1782. In the heart of the fertile Cedar Creek Valley lived General Mertz, a man of commanding influence, who had served his fellow citizens in the State government, and as a Brigadier-General of the State Militia, and he was in active service in the War of 1812 as a Brigadier-General. Besides his plantations, General Mertz had a woolen mill, the power of which was derived from Cedar Creek, and operated by his son, David, the central figure of the narrative. General Mertz died March 11, 1844, aged 61 years, 7 months and 26 days. His wife was born Aug. 25, 1783, died March 10, 1844, only a few hours before her distinguished husband was called into his reward.

REV. DAVID MERTZ was born Jan. 26, 1806. In 1831, an Evangelical named Francis Gabel came to the Mertz establishment seeking employment. He was duly engaged by David Mertz to work in the woolen mill, and proved to be a steady and reliable workman. Best of all, Gabel let his "light shine" in a way that won the confidence of the Mertz family in his profession of piety. Through the conversation of Gabel, David Mertz and his wife became spiritually concerned, and requested Gabel to bring his preacher to them and preach in their home.

Accordingly, Rev. J. G. Zinzer preached at David Mertz's house and soon afterwards he and his wife were converted and connected themselves with the Evangelicals.

In 1835 General Mertz and his son, David, determined to build an Evangelical church at their own expense. The church is located near the "Alms House" in South Whitehall and soon became known as "Der bete Hugel" (Hill of

REV. DAVID MERTZ.

Prayer) or Mertz's church. The church building is still standing and a cut of it appears on page 526 of this volume.

David Mertz was licensed to preach in 1839 and travelled seven years. He was a powerful exhorter, and possessed deep conviction. He died at Allentown Feb. 4, 1892. His wife, Carolina Scholl, was born Aug. 7, 1808, died Nov. 21, 1897.

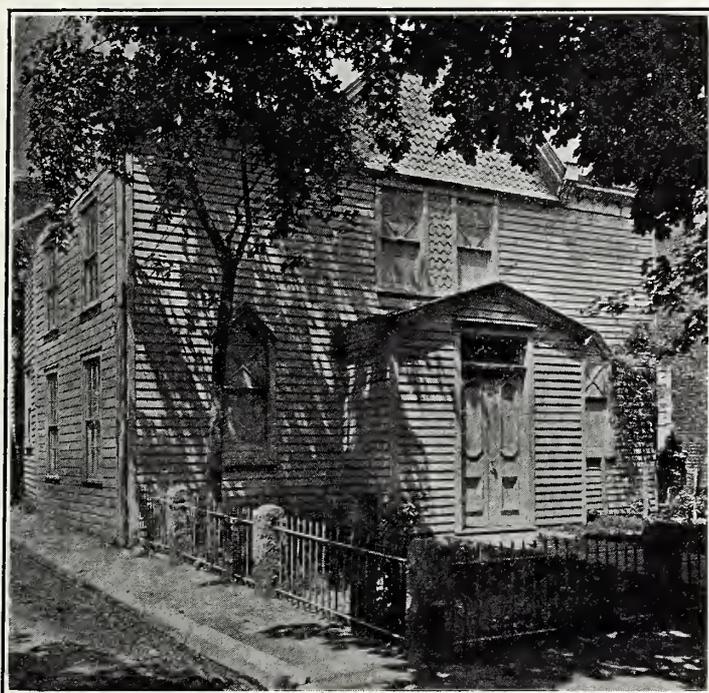

ENTRANCE TO WALDHEIM PARK.

THE UNITED EVANGELICAL WALDHEIM ASSOCIATION.

The ministry and laymen of the United Evangelical Church in Allentown and its vicinity desiring to provide a permanent camp-ground, requested Rev. C. S. Harman, the Presiding Elder of the Allentown district to appoint a committee to look for a grove. A committee was appointed but it met with no success. Three years later Presiding Elder F. E. Erdman appointed another committee to secure a suitable grove and this committee upon the earnest solicitation of T. M. Wilhelm, finally secured an operated with them and the latter furnished by far the larger amount of money and service which was given generously without the expectation of returns on the investment. No other ground within easy access of Allentown offers larger possibilities as a center for summer gatherings free from the objections which usually are found at places devoted to other than moral or religious purposes. [See History of Waldheim Park.]

THE HOLINESS MOVEMENT IN ALLENTOWN. During the early nineties this movement received an impetus in the division of the option on what is now Waldheim, and recommended its purchase at a meeting held in Bethany Church, Allentown, Sept. 12, 1904. The purchase was ordered and "The United Evangelical Waldheim Association" was incorporated. Membership in the association is secured by the purchase of stock. The stock-holders hold an annual meeting, open to all who desire to attend. The management of the business is entrusted to a board of seventeen directors who are elected at these meetings.

EBENEZER HOLINESS CHURCH.

The initiative for the securing of a permanent grove was taken by the ministers, but their efforts have been fruitless until some laymen co-operated with them and the latter furnished by far the larger amount of money and service which was given generously without the expectation of returns on the investment. No other ground within easy access of Allentown offers larger possibilities as a center for summer gatherings free from the objections which usually are found at places devoted to other than moral or religious purposes. [See History of Waldheim Park.]

THE HOLINESS MOVEMENT IN ALLENTOWN. During the early nineties a number of Holiness preachers from New England joined the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Association. Among them were Joshua Gill and John N. Short formally of the M. E. Church. These ministers later on became the nucleus of the New England Conference of the Evangelical Association. At the annual camp-meetings of the East Pennsylvania Conference, Holiness Evangelists were engaged who fearlessly expounded the doctrine of Holiness as a second definite work of grace. The efforts of the movement were successful we are told. The Holiness adherents started regular Sunday afternoon meetings in the Ebenezer Evangelical church, on, on Turner street, Allentown. The leader of these Holiness meetings was T. L. Wieand and he likewise was the head of the whole movement. Strong opposition however developed against the sect holding the meetings in this church. The opposition against the doctrine which the church generally espoused was lead by the pastor of the congregation and the Holiness meetings were much hampered. Fin-building upon it. Rev. C. W. Pettit who became the next pastor, came from a charge at Glen Falls, N. Y.

At a congregational meeting, held July 30, 1899, at Beulah Park, the name of the church was changed to Ebenezer Pentecostal Church of Allentown, Pa. They subscribed to the form and doctrine of the Association of the Pentecostal Churches of America. Ebenezer Pentecostal Church has a membership of 65 persons, and an ally the Holiness forces after much consideration asked the church for their letters which were granted to all who were in good standing. They withdrew to the corner of Seventh and Linden streets, and continued their worship in Klepinger's hall, and there the services continued to be conducted by T. L. Wieand.

GRACE U. B. CHURCH.

On March 23, 1898, Ebenezer Holiness church was organized with Rev. L. N. Custer as its first pastor, and after him Rev. W. E. Frederick served the flock. They had worshipped for a while at Ninth and Chestnut streets, in a log house owned by David Schoudt. Afterward they leased the corner of Linden and Church streets and the congregation erected a frame enrollment in the Sabbath school of 100. [See history of Beulah Park.]

UNITED BRETHREN.

GRACE U. B. CHURCH.—A Sabbath school was organized April 15, 1902, in the school building at Sixth and Tilghman streets by Rev. J. M. Walters, pastor of Zion's U. B. church, and sessions were conducted regularly on Sundays for two years until a chapel was erected on Washington, above Sixth street. The dedication took place Sept. 4, 1904. A congregation was organized and services, including Sunday school, have since been conducted there.

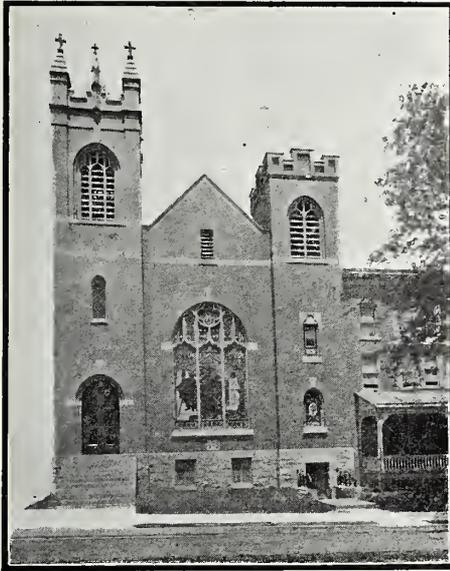

The Board of Trustees comprises F. M. Hassler, B. F. Wehr, R. A. Parks, C. A. Bergenstock, and D. F. Brown.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:
 S. L. Rhoads, 1903-04 C. H. Holzinger, 1909-10
 A. G. Nye, 1904-06 E. E. Bender, 1910-13
 Z. A. Weidler, 1906-08 C. G. White, 1913—
 W. W. Freidinger, 1908-09

The first quarterly conference was held at the residence of Rev. Rhoads.

ZION U. B. CHURCH.—At the annual conference of the United Brethren in Christ in Schuylkill county, Feb. 26, 1864, Allentown and Bethlehem were constituted a mission and Rev. David Hoffman was appointed as the missionary. Upon his location at Allentown he secured a meeting-place on Hamilton street, first east of Seventh, and afterward at Ninth, and the first year the congregation numbered 54 members. Trustees were appointed to secure subscriptions for a place of worship, and a Sunday school was organized with 23 members under the superintendence of Jonas Kunkle.

ZION U. B. CHURCH.

In 1866, "Free Hall," at the corner of Ninth and Linden streets, was purchased, and the first floor was remodelled for religious services, which was dedicated on June 10th. By the end of this year the membership increased to 118, which was arranged in five classes under T. J. Schmeyer, Benjamin Stettler, A. H. Unger, J. L. Breinig and Edward Stever as class leaders. In 1870 the membership was 169.

The meetings were continued at Ninth and Linden until 1906, when the brick edifice of the congregation was erected at an expense of $25,000, at No. 839 Linden street. The dedication took place June 3d.

The East Pennsylvania U. B. Conference was held here, October 1-6, 1913.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:
 David Hoffman, 1864-70 W. H. Uhler, 1890-92
 ——— Sandt, 1870-72 H. W. Zimmerman, 1892-93
 ——— Schropp, 1872-76 J. H. Johnson, 1893-97
 J. B. Dougherty, 1876-78 J. H. Johnson, 1892-1901
 J. H. Unger, 1878-80 G. D. Batdorf, 1892-1901
 J. H. Mark, 1880-82 J. M. Walters, 1901-03
 J. Shoop, 1882-83 D. S. Eshelman, 1903-04
 J. P. Smith, 1883-86 H. B. Spayd, 1904-08
 J. Runk, 1886-88 C. A. Snavely, 1908-13
 M. J. Heberle, 1888-90

MENNONITE BRETHERN IN CHRIST.

By H. H. Romig.

The founder of this Church is Rev. Wm. Gehman, born in Hereford, Berks Co., Pa., January 22, 1827. He was a miller by trade, but early in life began farming on a farm near Vera Cruz, Lehigh Co., Pa., where he has resided since. His wife was a daughter of Jacob Musselman.

For eight years Rev. Wm. Gehman preached in the Old Mennonite Church, known as the Oberholtzer Mennonites, also called Mennonites No. 2. (The Oberholtzer Mennonites had separated from the main body of Mennonites in this country). Then with his followers, he left the Oberholtzer Mennonites because of disagreement in regard to holding prayer meetings and in the matter of experimental Christianity. The new denomination, officially and originally called "The Evangelical Mennonite Association," also known as "New Mennonites," originated in 1853 through the union of about 20 zealous Mennonite preachers and lay members, among whom Rev. Wm. Gehman was the leader. The preachers first associated with him were: Wm. N. Shelly, David Henning, and Henry Diehl; and the following lay officials had united with them: David Gehman, Joseph Schneider and Jacob Gottshall. These all attended the first preachers' conference held Sept. 24, 1858, in the home of David Musselman, Upper Milford township, Lehigh Co., Pa. At this conference they adopted rules and articles of faith. Their second conference was held Nov. 1, 1859, in the Evangelical Mennonite meeting house in Haycock township, Bucks Co., Pa. Other ministers belonging to their number soon after the founding of the church were Eusebius Hershey, Abel Strawn, Jonas Musselman, Abraham Kauffman, and Joseph L. Romig.

After the first two annual conferences they held two conferences yearly for some time. In 1879 they and the United Mennonites joined forces, and in 1883 the name of the denomination was changed to Mennonite Brethren in Christ. They have had an Annual Conference in Canada for many years; also conferences and missionary operations in various states of the Union and in other countries. Rev. Eusebius Hershey, one of the first preachers, died in Africa while working as a missionary. A granddaughter of Rev. Wm. Gehman, Miss Rose Lambert (now Mrs. David G. Musselman of Victoria, Texas) for years served as missionary in Hadjin, Asia Minor, where, during the Armenian massacres, some of her co-workers were murdered, she also being in great danger of losing her life. Rev. Henry Weiss and wife have been missionaries in Chili, South America, for years.

Their church polity at first was patterned after that of the church from which they came, but becoming more Methodistic in their doctrine and mode of worship they also gradually adopted the Methodistic form of church government as then used in the Evangelical Association and similar Methodistic branches. They have had Presiding Elders for many years, but no bishops, although a few have favored the plan of having bishops. They have a General Conference convening every four years. They have introduced some new methods of work by sustaining, in addition to the regular work, two separate departments, known as "The Gospel Heralds" and "The Gospel Workers," the former consisting of men, the latter of women. These wear uniforms and preach and perform deeds of love in a way somewhat similar to that of the Salvation Army.

The first church of this denomination was built soon after its organization, and is located in Upper Milford township, this county, along the Perkiomen Railroad, between Dillinger and Zionsville stations. Other churches were built soon afterwards in Lehigh and surrounding counties, at Coopersburg, Quakertown, Hatfield, Fleetwood and Terre Hill. The services at first were in German. After the English language was introduced the denomination made rapid strides forward. Churches were established at Emaus, Allentown, Bethlehem, Reading and other places.

Rev. Wm. Gehman was the first Presiding Elder, and held that office fourteen years. Other Presiding Elders were: Rev. Wm. B. Musselman, Rev. Wm. Gehman (son of the founder), Rev. Chas. Brunner, and Rev. Harvey B. Musselman.

The man who for many years gave most largely towards the maintenance of the work of the church was a prominent layman, the late John B. Gehman, owner of the farm on which was a great iron-ore mine, adjoining the famous Bittenbender mine, at Siesholtzville, Berks Co., Pa.

The denomination now has a well-equipped camp meeting ground at East Allentown, where hundreds of the members yearly attend and hold great meetings. For years they had a camp ground, now abandoned, on Chestnut Hill, several miles west of Coopersburg.

These Mennonites are a very strict, honest, and zealous people; observe feet-washing, and are opposed to war, infant baptism, and secret societies.

Rev. Wm. Gehman, the founder, and for many years called "Father" Gehman, is now (1913) eighty-six years of age, well preserved, and still frequently preaches in German with unusual vigor and great unction.

In 1886, certain members of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ at Allentown first began to assemble at the residence of Miss Louisa Horlacher, on Linden street above Eleventh, with the view of establishing a congregation and erecting a church for religious worship according to the doctrines of the Mennonites. They were identified with the Third Mennonite church in Lower Milford township, a mile east of Zionsville station. These meetings were continued for three years, then, in 1889, they succeeded in erecting a small frame chapel on Gordon street, above Eighth. The active members were:

Louisa Horlacher	Henry M. Gehman and wife
John D. Baus and wife	James A. Gaumer
Ammon Dreisbach and wife	James Quier
Oscar Baer and wife	Ellen Reichenbach
	Mrs. Weigert

The first pastor was Rev. W. B. Musselman; and since 1910, Rev. W. S. Hottel.

A one-story brick edifice was erected in 1902; which was remodelled and improved in the spring of 1914.

The membership in April, 1914, was 195; of the Sunday school, 314, with Albert Gaumer as the efficient and successful superintendent since 1912.

Another congregation of this branch of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ was organized in South Allentown in 1900, and after conducting religious meetings under Rev. W. Steinmetz in a small building on Greenleaf street for two years, they succeeded in erecting a one-story brick church at No. 529 Greenleaf street, and have since carried on their organization. They started with the following active members:

Wilson Steinmetz and wife	William Brunner and wife
Charles Beaver and wife	Henry Gehman
Franklin Bobst and wife	Lillian Frey
	Emma Schul

In April, 1914, the membership was 90.

A Sunday school has been carried on in connection with the church. The members number 250. O. C. Kistler has been superintendent since 1908.

The pastors have been:

W. Steinmetz, 1900-03	W. J. Fretz, 1908-11
L. Frank Haas, 1903-05	R. L. Woodring, 1911-14
R. Bergstrasser, 1905-08

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH.—This congregation was organized by Rev. W. H. Grubb, in 1904, and a one-story frame building, 30 by 40 feet, was erected on the north side of Chew street, above Twelfth (No. 1215). The active members were:

Harvey S. Kummery and wife	A. M. Musselman
Menno Sell and wife	Horace Kratz
Peter Sell and wife	Mrs. Amanda Benner
V. C. Backenstoe and wife	Mrs. Caroline Heller
Levi Heistand and wife	Miss Sevilla Fink
Henry Griesemer and wife	Miss Addie Shleifer
Oscar Wurster and wife	Amandus A. Moyer
	Arthur Moyer
	William Rosenberger

The pastors have been:

W. H. Grubb, 1904-06	Victor B. Boyer, supply
William Gottschall, 1906-10	from 1910-12; pastor since Jan. 1, 1913.

The members of the church number 93, and of the Sunday school, 185, of which A. M. Musselman has been the superintendent from the beginning.

Mizpah Grove was established by the executive board of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ of the Pennsylvania Conference in April, 1910, by the purchase of six acres of ground at Fifth and Lawrence streets, in East Allentown, the Fourteenth ward. The twenty-one ministers of the conference immediately, by their own personal exertions, cleared off an appropriate spot at the northwest corner and set up 154 small tents for camping members ready for a meeting in the beautiful grove in July. A superior well was sunk to the depth of 40 feet and an abundant supply of excellent "granite-stone" water secured. A two-story brick building was erected for a dining hall and storage purposes in 1910; another nearby in 1911, and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,000 in 1912. The conference is in three divisions, centered at Bethlehem, Mount Carmel, and Allentown, embracing twenty-one ministers, and since then they have conducted very successful meetings in this grove three times each year in July and August. The sanitary arrangements are perfect.

SWEDENBORGIAN.

The New Jerusalem church is founded on an acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as the one and only personal God of the universe. The first believers at Allentown were Simon Sweitzer and his family, who moved from Philadelphia in 1830, and others who afterward united with them were Frederick Bohlen, J. Brader, Robert E. Wright, I. N. Gregory, E. D. Leisenring and Eli J. Saeger.

In the winter of 1868-69, Rev. A. O. Brickmann, of Baltimore, came to Allentown and preached in Bohlen's Hall on North Seventh street, and also in the Court House, which resulted in the organization of a congregation in the Court House on Oct. 20, 1869, with Mr. Sweitzer as president, Mr. Saeger as treasurer, and John Wunderlich as secretary.

Rev. L. H. Tafel, of Philadelphia, began to conduct services in 1870, and preached several years every fourth Sunday. He organized a Sunday school. Both church and school were carried on in Bohlen's Hall. During 1873, Rev. J. E. Bowers visited the church occasionally as a missionary. Then Rev. Brickmann accepted a call as the pastor and he carried on his ministrations in a most effectual manner until 1877. During this time a new constitution was adopted and the congregation became connected with the Pennsylvania Association. The services attracted large audiences.

The meetings were suspended for several years until May, 1881, when the Right Rev. William H. Benade, the presiding minister of the Pennsylvania Association of the new church, introduced a theological student, Eugene J. E. Schreck, from its academy, who began preaching every two weeks for a time, then every week. He preached in the English and German languages, and also acted as superintendent of the Sunday school. During this time, a property was secured by the society on South Seventh street, near Union, and the dwelling was altered for religious services, the dedication having taken place Dec. 10, 1882.

In 1883, the society severed its connection with the Pennsylvania Association, and Rev. Schreck, upon his ordination, became the regular pastor. Then there were about 70 members in Allentown, and additional members in the county districts. The congregation now worships in the Court House and the pastor is Rev. J. E. Smith.

FREE METHODISTS.

The religious denomination, which has been named and recognized as the Free Methodists, was first organized at a State Conference held in New York on August 23, 1860. The 50th anniversary of its existence was properly celebrated at Silver Lake in New York, in August, 1910.

Their doctrine, articles and rules are similar to those of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

A congregation was organized at Allentown on Aug. 10, 1867, by Rev. William Parry, and the first members were Charles Hartman, Henry D. Spinner, Anna Johening and Eliza Schantz. The chairman of the district at that time was Rev. William Gould, which embraced Allentown and the Lehigh Valley circuit. The first meetings were held at the home of Mr. Hartman, and afterward in a chapel at Eighth and Chew streets. In 1884 the membership was twenty.

The meetings were continued at different other places until 1892, when a one-story frame chapel was erected, 30 by 60 feet, on the rear of a lot of ground on the southwest corner of Turner and Penn streets. It is connected with the New York District, in the New York Conference. The principles positively prohibit members connected with secret societies or addicted to the use of tobacco and liquor.

Pastors.—The pastors since 1892 have been:

W. B. Rose, 1890-92	A. W. Myer, 1902-04
J. T. Cameron, 1892-93	William Gould, 1904-07
W. R. Tamblin, 1893-96	O. D. Seward, 1907-10
J. E. Payne, 1896-99	C. A. Kress, 1910-12
Chester Sanford, 1899-02	D. A. King, 1912—

Rev. W. B. Rose is the general publishing agent of the church literature in all its forms, at Chicago, Ill.

The membership is 40. The Sunday school has 60 members, with Miss Sarah Johanning as superintendent. A previous superintendent for 30 years was Charles O. Schantz.

The National Conference includes only three German congregations.

NEW REFORMED.

ZION'S NEW REFORMED CHURCH.—This is a mission frame chapel of the Ebenezer New Reformed Church at Bingen, in Northampton county, in dimensions 30 by 32 feet, situated on the northwest corner of Seventh and St. John streets. It was organized in November, 1912, by Rev. David G. Wiegner, pastor of the Bingen church, with the following members:

Marcus Dietz and wife	Mrs. Sallie Latsham
L. Greenawald and wife	Mrs. Wayne Trego
James Vogenitz and wife	Mrs. Irwin Bartman
William Nagle and wife	Mrs. Lewis Blass
John Kline and wife	Mrs. Anna Seagreaves
Benjamin Lentz and wife	Mrs. Mary Lewis
Thomas Rickert and wife	Miss Sallie Wisner
Miss Mildred Lentz	Miss Edna Miller
Miss Gertrude Rehert

The membership of the church is 30, and of the Sunday school, 80, with George Lentz as superintendent.

GOSPEL CHAPEL.

An undenominational religious congregation was organized in 1912 by Rev. F. D. Geary with 30 members, having assembled in a one-story frame building on the northeast corner of Linden and Church streets, owned by Charles Losch, and this has been maintained until now. The membership in April, 1914, was increased to 70. A Sunday school was organized at the same time, with Asher Bower as superintendent. Its membership is 150.

Mr. Losch died in 1913 and devised this property to the congregation, but the last will is being contested.

AFRICAN.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH.—This building, a two-story frame structure at No. 738 North Penn street, 30 by 40 feet, was erected by Mrs. Harriet Baker in 1900, under the name of "Baker Home, Gospel Mission." She was an active and successful representative of the Philadelphia Conference at Philadelphia, which was interested in the religious welfare of the colored race, and conducted meetings here until a short time before her death, March 1, 1913. She was 84 years old and during her life was recognized as a most remarkable woman. She caused a similar church to be erected at Lebanon. She was previously located at Columbia, Pa., for many years, where her property was destroyed during the rebel invasion.

The first floor comprises the auditorium, which is fitted up with pulpit and backed benches. The second floor is arranged with nine rooms which were occupied by Mrs. Baker from 1900 until she died. The property is under the care of her family. Notwithstanding her death, the services have been conducted every Sunday by Rev. C. J. Morton. A Sunday school is also conducted there. The membership is small, on account of removals. The colored population of Allentown is estimated at one hundred.

JEWISH.

KENESETH ISRAEL congregation was organized by Jewish inhabitants of the city about 1885, but a temple was not erected until 1906, when a handsome structure on South Fifteenth street, between Hamilton and Walnut, was dedicated on Sept. 9, 1906. The temple is built of cement block, and is one-story, with a basement for the use of the school. Rev. Morris Mandel was the pastor at the time of dedication. His successor was Joseph Leiser. The present able and accomplished pastor is Rev. Theodore F. Joseph. The building committee of the temple was composed of A. Samuels, chairman; L. N. Ellenboger, A. Ellenbogen, I. Weil, M. Stern, J. Merkel, M. Hess, C. Kline and M. Gladstone.

SONS OF ISRAEL congregation, at Sixth and Tilghman streets, was organized in 1906, and in 1908 built the handsome church building at a cost of $30,000. Among the members of the congregation are Max Rapaport, Jacob Caplan, Max Senderowitz, Max Rosenberg, Max Channock, Samuel Swartz, Abraham Nathan, Jacob Schattenstein, Morris Movosovitz and E. A. Markowitz.

Agodas Achim Synagogue, at 625 North Second street, was built in 1885. Rabbi Goodman Grossman is its pastor.

CATHOLIC.

It appears from the following petition that a number of Catholics resided at Allentown in 1767; these, desirous of erecting a church, petitioned the governor for license to collect the necessary funds. There is, however, no account that the project was carried out.

The petition of the congregation of Roman Catholics of the town of Northampton, Sept. 25, 1767, (Penna. Arch., Vol. IV., p. 279) humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners are about to build a church for the worship of God in the town of Northampton, and have already provided materials for putting their design into execution.

But they fear the inability of your petitioners is likely to render their good intentions fruitless, unless they are at liberty to ask assistance from charitable and piously disposed people. They, therefore, humbly entreat your honor to grant them a license for the said purpose, whereby they may have the peaceable and quiet enjoyment of their religion according to the laws of the province, and reap the benefit of those privileges granted them by your honor's benevolent ancestors, etc.

JOHN RITTER,

J. G. ENAX, and others.

Catholic inhabitants of Allentown were among the first settlers in 1763 and 1764. There were only sixty-eight men and sixty-two women of German, and seventeen men and twelve women, Irish Catholics in the whole county of Northampton in 1757. This was so reported by the priest, Theodore Schneider, in consequence of a requisition made in order to ascertain their numbers in Berks and Northampton counties. This was rendered necessary in order to ascertain the correctness of very serious charges brought against them by many misrepresentations from the inhabitants of Reading, who stated the danger they were in from their machinations in their vicinity, charging them of meeting with French officers and a large number of Indians, in order to concoct measures to murder all the white people and that they had three hundred stand of arms concealed at their church in one of the lower townships of Berks county. The defeat of General Braddock left the country open to the depredations of the Indians in 1754, and the Indian murders in 1755-56-57 by the French Indians, the French being Catholics, those Catholics in these counties became suspected, and were persecuted by all other people.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION CHURCH.—The Catholics of Allentown and vicinity were limited prior to the nineteenth century. However, in 1837 and the succeeding years, the German Catholics in this region were administered to by the Jesuit Fathers, who came from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Churchville (now Bally), Berks county. Their visits continued until 1852, when Father Gustensuake came from Easton to say mass in the First Ward, every four weeks.

His successor was Rev. Tanzer, also from Easton, who came mostly once a month to say mass in the home of Mr. John Koehler, situated on Ridge avenue and Liberty street, the ground now occupied by the sisters' residence and parish school.

In 1856 the history of the Church of the Immaculate Conception begins, for in that year ground was bought on Ridge avenue and Allen street, for which $300 was paid. It was 80 feet wide and had a depth of the present Irish churchyard. The first resident pastor, Father Tuboly, came here June 22, 1857, and on August 8, of the same year, the first shovel of clay was removed in the excavation for the building of the little brick church. The contract was awarded to a builder, whose name was Quier, at the price of $1,800. The cornerstone was laid September, 1857, and it was dedicated October 25th of that year by Bishop Neumann, of Philadelphia.

The records of Father Tuboly show that the collection at mass on the morning of the dedication was $11.20, and at the afternoon service, $6.09.

There were 36 families belonging to the congregation, all of whom were Germans and very few now among us.

Some of the names given in a small manual are: John Bohrer, Theodore Bruckman, Xavier Deutsch, John Koehler, Peter Koehler, John Gehringer, John Kerner, John Kaier, Andrew Latzer, Herman Laube, John Martin, John Medernach, Jacob Miller, Henry Miller, Christian Schmidt, Peter Quast, Nicholas Scharle, Anton Vogel, Louis Wehr, Theodore Wieamar, Melchisedech Yeager, John Wolf, Charles Wickel.

Immediately after the dedication a mission was given by the Redemptorist Fathers, Jacob and Rev. Michael McEnroe assumed charge of the congregation May, 1862, and remained to 1866. and had as curate, Rev. Father Kaier, from April 9, 1862, to March, 1863, and from April, 1863, to April 8, 1866, the Rev. Joseph Kaelin.

Father McEnroe remained here until the Beth-

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION CHURCH

Klaholz, the former for the English speaking and the latter for those of German birth. Father Tuboly was removed March 27, 1858, and was succeeded by Father Schrader. From 1859 both German and Irish Catholics attended the services. In 1859 Father Schrader was transferred to Reading, and Rev. Rudolph Kuenzer succeeded him, who remained until 1862.

lehem parish to which he was assigned, was established. The pastorate was then given in charge of Father Kaelin, and it was during his time that the additional property, which includes the land east of Ridge avenue and between Liberty and Allen streets, was purchased.

A disagreement occurred on St. Patrick's Day, 1866, between the Irish and German members.

The parish offered to take Father Kaelin as pastor for the Germans, but he declined to accept, afterwards locating in Harrisburg as rector of a church in that diocese, where he passed to his final reward about eight years ago. While here his residence was 613 Front street.

From this period, April 8, 1866, the two congregations began their separate functions, Rev. Father Hugh Garvey as pastor of the Immaculate Conception, and Rev. Father Hilterman, of the new congregation of the Sacred Heart on North Fourth street.

It was during Father Garvey's administration of the parish that the church property passed through a sheriff's sale, from the German to the Irish members. The sale was conducted at the Keystone Hotel and the property was purchased by John Devenney in the name of the pastor. Father Garvey at once proceeded to erect a temporary frame structure which served the congregation until the erection of the present church. Father Garvey remained with the congregation from May, 1869, to November, 1869, and was succeeded by Rev. John Gallagher, who remained until July 19, 1870.

Rev. Edward F. Prendergast took charge on or about July 31, 1870, and was pastor of the church until Feb. 8, 1874. During the pastorate of Father Prendergast plans and specifications were completed for the erection of the present splendid edifice. The foundations were completed when the panic of that time compelled a cessation of all work, and so remained for several years. Father Prendergast was removed to St. Malachi's in Philadelphia and while there was made auxiliary bishop to Archbishop Ryan and was raised to the archbishopric upon the death of that great prelate.

After the removal of our present archbishop to Philadelphia, Rev. James J. Fitzmaurice was made rector about the middle of February, 1874, and served in that capacity until 1876, when he was succeeded by Rev. James P. Byrne, who continued as rector until April 22, 1877.

Rev. P. F. Donegan assumed the rectorship after that date and remained with this congregation until Feb. 15, 1905. During his pastorate the magnificent church was erected and completed, the contractor, Hon. P. F. Boyle, a member of the parish, doing the work. The parochial residence was also erected while Father Donegan was in charge.

On Feb. 15, 1905, the present beloved rector, Rev. John J. Walsh, was placed in charge of the congregation, and with characteristic energy began at once to make great improvements in the church property.

Seeing the necessity for a parish school and a home for the sisters, Rev. Father Walsh bought the property on the west side of Ridge avenue. Splendid buildings were thereon erected and given in charge of the Sisters of St. Joseph, and are monuments of his zealous efforts toward the propagation of this holy religion. The church property in general was placed in a substantial and improved condition under his wise directions.

SACRED HEART OF JESUS CHURCH.—This congregation has a very interesting history. Few Catholics were settled in Lehigh county as early as 1769. It was probably not until the beginning of the nineteenth century that these people were attended by priests regularly, and we have no positive information of such visitations prior to 1837. In that and the succeeding years, the German Catholics in this region were administered to by the Jesuit Fathers, who came from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Churchville, now Bally, Berks county. Their visits continued until 1852. Then came Rev. Father Gustensuake from Easton, who said mass in the First ward every four weeks. Until the year 1856, Allentown was attended by Rev. Father Tanzer, from Easton, who came from time to time, mostly once a month, to say mass in a little frame house belonging to Mr. John Koehler, situated on Ridge avenue and Liberty street. His successor was Rev. Geiger.

In the same year ground was bought on Ridge avenue and Allen streets, for which $300 was paid. It was 80 feet wide and had a depth of the present Irish churchyard. In 1857 a small brick church was built there, for which $1,800 was paid. The congregation consisted then of about 36 German families. The first resident pastor was Rev. J. Tuboly, who came Aug. 1, 1857. The church was dedicated under the title of the Immaculate Conception by the Ven. Bishop Neumann, of Philadelphia, Oct. 25, 1857. The collection on that day amounted to $17.29. Rev. J. Tuboly was removed in March, 1858, and Rev. Carl Joseph Schrader was his successor. Under his ministry a parish school was opened in the frame house of Peter Koehler, with thirty children. The first teacher and organist was Jonas Adam, of Goshenhoppen, the second, F. H. Gressing. These two remained but a short time; but the third, Mr. Lehmer, remained several years; the children paid 50 cents tuition per month. Rev. Carl Joseph Schrader was removed in May, 1860, and Rev. Rudolph Kuenzer took charge and remained until May, 1862; from May, 1862, until April, 1866. Rev. M. McEnroe was pastor, his German assistants were Rev. Xavier Kaier from June 9, 1862, until March, 1863; Rev. Joseph Kaelin from April, 1863, until April 8, 1866. Rev. M. McEnroe was changed and Rev. Joseph Kaelin took charge of the parish and was pastor until May 1, 1869.

In the meantime the Irish Catholics had so increased that they earnestly thought of a separation. As there was still a debt of $800 on the ish records and the beautiful painting of the Immaculate Conception, which was above the high altar in their original church. They were still hard at work and under the supervision of Rev. E. O. Hilterman, (who was appointed pastor, church, and no means to pay same, it was sold by the sheriff and bought by a certain Mr. J. Devenney, of Allentown, in behalf of the Irish Catholics, whose temporary pastor was Rev. Hugh Garvey.

HERZ JESU KIRCHE, ALLENTOWN, PA.

The German Catholics preserved the old par-

June 9, 1869), bought a large tract of land situated at North Fourth and Pine streets. The cornerstone was laid Sept. 12, 1869, by Rt. Rev. Bishop James Wood, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The following year, Nov. 6, 1870, the church was dedicated under the title of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus, by the same Rt. Rev. Bishop, on which day four boys and eight girls received their first holy communion and were confirmed in the afternoon.

In autumn, Oct. 2, 1871, the school was established with the permission of Rt. Rev. James Wood. At the request of Rev. E. O. Hiltermann, three Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, opened school with 80 pupils. Rev. E. O. Hiltermann remained until November, 1874. Rev. Herman Dietrich took charge until August, 1876; then Rev. E. O. Hilterman was re-appointed and remained until 1883, when Rev. John B. Maus was appointed pastor, who en-in May, 1912, as a dwelling for the school sisters. The tireless pastor did not forget the sick of his flock; five missionary sisters of the Sacred Heart came June 15, 1912, to nurse the sick of the parish in their private homes. They occupy the former rectory, 417 Pine street.

A free school was established under his direction, which has now an attendance of 710 pupils, taught by Sisters of St. Francis.

On Oct. 20, 1913, the Very Rev. Peter Masson purchased the handsome residence and park of the late Hon. Edward Harvey, which will be converted into a non-sectarian hospital, known as the Sacred Heart hospital, Allentown.

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST CATHOLIC CHURCH.

larged the school and put a beautiful new front to the church. He remained until death called him to a better life; he departed from his faithful flock Jan. 9, 1899, and his worthy successor was Rev. Joseph Nerz. Under his ministry the church was enlarged and the beautiful new school built. The school has several times changed its location until April, 1906, it moved into its new quarters, a stately edifice with twelve class-rooms, equipped with all modern requirements and an attendance of 370 pupils.

Rev. Joseph Nerz died April 3, 1911, and his successor is Very Rev. Peter Masson, V. F., who beautified the church by carrying out the plans of his predecessor in a most tasteful manner. This edifice was dedicated by Archbishop Edmund F. Prendergast, Dec. 24, 1911.

Very Rev. Peter Masson also bought the home of Mr. Henry O'Neill, 317 North Fourth street,

Very Rev. Peter Masson is assisted by Rev. August Buettner and Rev. Henry Kuss.

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST.—In 1894 there were ten families of Slavonians at Allentown, who carried on their religious devotions in the German Roman Catholic church (Sacred Heart), and subsequently other families united with them until they secured a church for themselves.

In 1907 there were 200 Slavonian families at Allentown, and then they started a congregation of their own with the encouragement of Monsigneur William Heinen, of Mauch Chunk, and Rev. Aloysius J. Vychodil, as priest. They secured a large lot of ground, 4 3-10 acres, in a fine, elevated location at the northwest corner of Front and Bridge streets (Nos. 900-930), which was purchased from the Allentown Iron Company, and included a commodious four-story brick building with 29 rooms, which had been used by that company as its administrative building. This was changed for their religious purposes by converting the first floor into an auditorium, and devoting the other parts for a parsonage.

This arrangement was carried on until 1911, by which time Rev. Vychodil had built up a congregation strong enough to support a separate church, and accordingly in that year they erected a superior brick structure of commanding appearance, 55 feet wide and 110 feet deep, with a steeple 94 feet high, including a sonorous deep-toned bell which is heard in the surrounding country for miles. A section of the lot at the rear was set apart and laid off in 1912 for burial purposes.

The congregation now numbers 300 families. The Slavonians from Emaus worship here, coming a distance of seven miles to carry on their devotions and show their religious fidelity, which evidences the influence of the priest, Rev. Vychodil.

The establishment of this fine church and the development of a large devoted congregation to sustain it successfully within seven years, display the high administrative ability of the priest. The Slavonians or Slovaks belong to the Indo-European race and their native land is Hungary. The men are employed in the steel and mill works, dye works, in the streets, and in smaller establishments; while those at Emaus, are employed in the Donaldson Iron Works. The females who are workers are employed principally as cigar makers or in private families.

The societies belonging to the congregation are: St. John the Baptist, Sacred Heart, St. Anthony, St. Michael, Sodality of the Rosary, in Allentown; and St. John the Baptist, in Emaus.

ITALIAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—The Italian congregation of Our Lady of Mount Carmel was established by Rev. Masson, May 1, 1911. Before that time, Rev. Joseph Nerz, who also spoke the Italian language, looked after their welfare. The first resident pastor came in May, 1911, and the house at 321 Ridge avenue was purchased, the first floor of which was converted into a chapel, and the upper floor served as a residence for the pastor, Rev. Carmine Cillo.

The congregation numbers about two hundred families and the present pastor is Rev. Ernst Santaro.

POLISH CATHOLIC CHURCH.—The Polish congregation of St. Peter and St. Paul was established by Rev. Masson on March 1, 1912, who offered the basement of the Sacred Heart church for the Polish services and appointed Rev. Alfred de Wroblenski, of South Bethlehem, to hold services for the new congregation. He was installed by Rev. Theodore Suck on July 15, 1912. Rev. Masson purchased, on Oct. 26, 1912, a lot, 200 by 125 feet, on North Front street for the new church. The cornerstone was laid by him on Sept. 21, 1913. Rev. Michael Strzemplewicz, the first resident pastor, took charge Nov. 1, 1912, and lived for seven months at the Sacred Heart rectory. He is an energetic worker and established a mission at Northampton, dedicated to St. Michael. The new church at Allentown was opened for services on Christmas, 1913.

GREEK CATHOLIC CHURCH.—This congregation, called St. Mary's, is located at Ridge avenue and Green street. The first pastor was Rev. Polansky and the present pastor is Rev. Basil Dobuschowsky.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BOROUGH OF ALBURTIS.

REV. FRANK P. LAROS.

Erection.—The infant Borough of Lehigh county is a direct descendant of the village of Alburdis, and what has commonly been known as Lockridge, which places sprang into existence since the building of the East Pennsylvania branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, in 1857-58. It is situated in one of the most beautiful and fertile valleys of the county, the Macungie Valley, which extends from the South Mountain on the south into the hills of Upper Macungie township on the north, to Salisbury township on the east, and to Longswamp township of Berks county on the west. It is twelve miles distant from the City of Allentown and is located at the junction of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railway and the East Pennsylvania Branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway. It comprises the former towns of Alburdis, and what has been commonly known as Lockridge, which was built by the Thomas Iron Company, and a portion of the farm-lands surrounding the towns. The towns of Alburdis and Lockridge have practically always been identical, the name Alburdis having been applied to both, Lockridge having received its name from the blast-furnaces erected therein by the former Lockridge Iron Company, but now the property of the Thomas Iron Company. Both towns have always had the same post-office and for many years have been enjoying the educational advantages afforded by the same schools. The land whereon the borough is situated, comprising 420 acres, was originally owned by several land-owners. A portion of it was conveyed to Jacob Koller on the 20th of February, 1745. A land warrant was granted to Matthias Hindley (Heinly), on the 13th of November, 1754. By a Proprietors Patent a large tract of land was conveyed to Christian Ruth bearing the date of May the 16th, 1764. A large tract was conveyed to Peter Keyser, bearing the date 29th Oct., 1766. John Meckley, Adam Gaumer and Jacob Meitzler were among the earliest property-owners of this locality. Some of the first dwellings were log-houses and others built of stone, some of which are still standing but the priority of which it is hard to establish. These original dwellings have been enlarged and otherwise changed and improved, and some have given place to modern structures so that their historic value is greatly reduced.

INCORPORATION.

At the March term of Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county, in 1913, application was made by a majority of the freeholders residing within the town of Alburdis, for a charter of incorporation. The application was made to the Court, but upon a remonstrance being filed, a hearing was set by the Court for the 27th day of April, 1913. The hearing having been held upon the day set, and testimony taken, whereupon after due consideration by the Court, the exceptions were dismissed, and on the 9th day of May, 1913, decreed, "that the said town of Alburdis, be incorporated into a borough, in conformity with the prayer of the petitioners; that the corporate style and title thereof shall be "The Borough of Alburdis," according to the boundaries set forth in the petition. It was further decreed, that the said borough should be a separate election and school district and that the American Hotel, Tilden E. Kuhns, proprietor, be designated and constituted the polling place of the said borough. It was further provided that the first election, for the election of officers provided by law, should be held on Tuesday, the 10th day of June, 1913, between the hours of 7 A. M. and 7 P. M. of said day, and that the annual borough elections should be here held at the times provided by law. James Geisinger was designated and appointed to give due notice of said election and the manner thereof, as provided by law, and of the persons who should be chosen at said election. The Court also decreed that Harvey Shuler act as judge and W. P. B. Gery and Warren Schmoyer be the inspectors of said election. H. B. Schmoyer was subsequently appointed instead of Warren Schmoyer who was unable to serve. After a primary having been held by the citizens of the newly created borough, and a non-partisan ticket having been constituted, the first election was held at the time designated and the ticket was elected consisting of the following named officers, viz: Burgess, G. W. Schmoyer; council, Alvin F. Nuss, George Bortz, Lewis Schmoyer, James Knedler, Thomas Shuler, W. H. H. Meckley and James Geisinger. Tax-collector, George Knerr; assessor, William Findlay; constable, Robert Hausman; judge of election, Harvey Shuler; inspectors, Walter Snyder and William Knerr. D. F. Keller continued as justice of the peace, as his term of office had not expired having been elected while the town was still a part of the township. A school board was appointed by the Court, after the necessary signatures from among the citizens endorsing their appointment had been secured, consisting of: Dr. E. H. Mohr, J. L. Schmoyer, O. J. Knedler, Robert Schadler, and Sylvester Lehrman. The borough of Alburdis having become a fact the future conceals within her bosom its possibilities of progress and development. The advantages of a good railway system, its proximity to the county-seat, its excellent situation, the previous enterprise of its citizens for its industrial development, it bids fair to become one of the most prosperous boroughs of the county, and one of the most preferable residential centres between Allentown and Reading.

The borough now contains two churches, a post-office, a railway depot, express and telegraph office, a school-house, a feed store, a feed, lumber and coal yard, one saddler shop, three grocery and general merchandise stores, a cigar and shoe store, a novelty store, a drug store, a tailor shop, three hotels, a saloon and restaurant, a carriage works, a butcher shop, barber shop, blacksmith shop, two shirt factories, furnaces and silk-mills.

The population of the borough is approximately 700 inhabitants, occupying 160 dwellings.

INDUSTRIES.

Lockridge Iron Company.—The oldest industry in Alburdis are the two blast furnaces of the Thomas Iron Company, formerly known as the Lockridge Iron Company. This company was organized by some of the directors of the Thomas Iron Company and a number of other gentlemen, with Samuel Thomas as president, and J. T. Knight, secretary and treasurer. This company was chartered December 26, 1866. The company started the erection of two furnaces in 1877, but before they were completed the organization was merged with the Thomas Iron Company. The entire capital stock was taken by the Thomas Iron Company, May 1, 1868, and paid for in stock of the Thomas Iron Company. The property is situated at the junction of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railway and the East Penn branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, and consisted of 167 acres and 2 perches of land. The first of these furnaces to be completed is known as No. 7, was put in blast March 18, 1868; this furnace had a 14 ft. bosh and was 55 ft. high at its completion. This furnace has since been raised 5 ft. the present size being 14 ft. bosh by 60 ft. high. A second furnace—now known as No. 8, 16 ft. bosh and 55 ft. high—was erected and put in blast July 9 1869. This furnace was also raised 5 ft., the present size being 16 ft. bosh and 60 ft. high. The first blowing engines used in these furnaces were imported from England and were first used in the furnaces of the Crane Iron Company. One of these engines is still used as an emergency engine the other having been dismantled. Additional blowing engines of the same size and style as those connected with furnaces Nos. 3 and 4 were put in to furnish the blast for these furnaces. The furnaces of the company were numbered in the manner as indicated Nos. 5 and 6 being reserved for two furnaces which the management contemplated building at Hoken-dauqua, and which were erected in 1872-73. There were also some valuable limonite ore leases transferred with the property. The property at the present time contains 170 acres, 92 perches, with a substantial superintendent's residence, and dwellings for the accommodation of thirty-six families and other employees. This plant has been running regularly with but slight interruptions since its erection, the longest period of it lying idle being nine months during the years 1911-1912 and was for many years practically the sole industry of the community and the chief support of the residents of Alburdis and the immediate vicinity. The plant employs when both furnaces are in operation eighty-five men, but at present only one furnace is in blast employing forty-four men. The output of these furnaces is about 800 tons of iron per week, the output of the furnace in blast at present often ranging from 400-500 tons per week. The combined annual output of these furnaces is 36,000 tons of iron, the product being what is commonly known as pig-iron, allowance of ample time being made for repairs, when the furnaces must of course be out of blast.

The superintendents in charge of the plant were as follows: V. W. Weaver was the first superintendent, who was succeeded by his son, William Weaver, in 1873. He was succeeded by Edwin Thomas, May, 1877, who was succeeded by David Thomas in June, 1880. Daniel Davis who had formerly been superintendent of the Keystone furnace took charge of the Lockridge furnaces March 1, 1885, as the successor of Mr. Thomas and served in that capacity for over twenty-two years. On the 15th of October, 1907, he was succeeded by John Thomas, who served as superintendent until June, 1912. The furnaces are now being operated under the supervision of Henry Knerr, who has been in the employ of the Company for more than thirty-eight years and served as foreman for about twenty-five years. He assumed charge of the plant July, 1912.

Shirt Factories.—The town of Alburdis has done as much as many towns of larger size for its industrial development and improvement. Not every enterprise has been successful, yet on account of the enterprise of its citizens the result has been that Alburdis has a number of successful industries. For the purpose of improving the industrial condition of the town, in March, 1893, a stock company was formed for the purpose of manufacturing shirts, under the name of the Alburdis Manufacturing Co., Limited. The object of the company was to provide employment for the inhabitants of the town. For the accomplishment of this purpose a series of citizens meetings were held at which steps were taken for the creation of such an industry. A committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions from among the citizens, which resulted in $3,900 being raised for the avowed purpose. It was decided to lease the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Lichtenwalner, situated on Main street, which had formerly been used for a store and tinsmith business. Mr. Kengott who had been operating a shirt factory in another part of the State was the promoter of the Alburdis Manufacturing Company. The building on the Main street property was improved so that it might be adapted to install a plant for the manufacture of shirts. The equipment of Mr. Kengott was installed and twenty-three Wheeler and Wilson machines were purchased for the use of the company. A steam-boiler and engine was installed, certificates of capital stock to the amount of $3,900 were issued and in the spring of 1893 the factory began the manufacture of shirts. Messrs. W. F. Kengott, W. H. H. Meckley, Dr. S. K. Barndt, A. H. Berger and G. G. Greiss were elected to serve as a board of managers. W. F. Kengott was chosen as general manager of the plant. After being in operation until October the 23rd, 1893, the factory was closed. After lying idle for some time the factory was leased to the Einstein Mfg. Co., of New York, March the 6th, 1894. Mr. Fausset was the general manager. He was succeeded by John Kurtz who was succeeded by Frank Herbert. After operating the factory for about twenty months the plant was again shut down and finally abandoned by the Einstein Company. After lying idle for some months the Alburdis Manufacturing Company, decided to lease the machinery and appurtenances to W. B. Butz for a period of five years, beginning Nov. 16, 1896. The factory being in operation for nearly five years the building was sold to H. W. Shuler, May 11, 1900. On June the 10th, 1901, the Manufacturing Company was dissolved. This marks the beginning of the shirt industry in Alburdis.

The following is a complete list of the subscribers to the fund of the Alburdis Manufacturing Company, Limited:

Dr. S. K. Barndt.....	$150 00	E. J. Lichtenwalner	25 00
W. B. Butz.....	100 00	J. S. Levan.....	25 00
A. H. Berger.....	100 00	W. P. Miller.....	300 00
W. T. Breinig.....	100 00	W. H. H. Meckley	200 00
H. F. Borneman....	50 00	Lewis Meckley....	150 00
P. S. Butz.....	50 00	Dr. E. H. Mohr....	100 00
G. G. Greiss.....	150 00	Percival B. Nuss...	50 00
John Geisinger....	50 00	Charles E. Nuss...	50 00
D. D. Hensinger....	150 00	G. W. Schmoyer....	100 00
Charles D. Hoffner.	100 00	A. K. Snyder.....	100 00
Frank Herbert.....	25 00	L. S. Schmoyer....	100 00
W. F. Kengott.....	1,000 00	Thomas Shuler....	75 00
Harry Keiser.....	50 00	J. L. Schmoyer....	75 00
Gideon Kemmerer..	50 00	G. F. Schlicher....	50 00
Nathan Lohrman....	100 00	Peter Wetzel.....	150 00
S. J. Lohrman.....	75 00	Leo Zuker.....	50 00

Alburdis Shirt Mills.—The Alburdis Shirt Mills have their beginning in the Alburdis Manufacturing Company, from whom W. B. Butz leased the machinery and operated the factory on the Main street site. After the sale of the property to H. W. Shuler, Mr. Butz moved his machinery and equipment to Second street where he had purchased the building which was formerly used for school purposes. The building was enlarged and fitted out for the manufacture of shirts. It is a two-story structure and the dimensions are thirty-five feet by sixty-three feet with an engine-room of twelve feet by sixteen feet. The plant began operations in 1902. It was operated under the name of the Enterprise Manufacturing Company. After its operation for five years by W. B. Butz, he was succeeded by a son Robert F. Butz who formed a partnership with James F. Butz which continued for about four years. In 1911 James F. Butz retired from the partnership and he was succeeded by another son of W. B. Butz—Ralph J. Butz. The factory is operated under the name of the Alburdis Shirt Mills. The plant has been successfully operated since its erection and has furnished employment to many citizens of the town and the immediate community. The plant has outgrown its first capacity and has steadily increased so that to-day it gives employment to thirteen doing work regularly at their homes, fifty-seven men, women, girls and boys besides erating forty-eight machines which have an output capacity of 800 dozen per week, or an annual output of over 40,000 dozen finished shirts, making allowances for necessary repairs, the sleeves being made by the branch factory at Fogelsville, Pa. The factory does mainly contract-work although some custom work has been done since its erection.

Shuler's Shirt Factory.—This shirt factory is under the management of H. W. Shuler, of Alburdis. He purchased the property from Mrs. Elizabeth Lichenwalner. The equipment was purchased from the Alburdis Manufacturing Company, Limited. This factory is one of the younger industries of the town. The Alburdis Manufacturing Company, which was organized to manufacture shirts is the progenitor of this factory as well as of the Alburdis Shirt Mills. Mr. Shuler purchased the building in 1900. The equipment was purchased in May, 1900. The building which is a brick structure was at the time of its purchase, twenty-four feet wide and fifty-two feet long. In November, 1901, operations were begun. At that time there were thirty machines in the building and thirty hands were employed. For a number of years it was operated with this equipment. There being an increasing demand for greater producing facilities a frame addition was built to the former building the dimensions, of which are forty-five feet by twenty-two feet, one story high into which nineteen machines were placed. There are now forty-nine machines in use employing fifty-eight hands having a weekly output of 525 dozen finished shirts, or an annual output of over 27,000 dozen shirts. The factory affords employment to many men and women, girls and boys of the town and the immediate vicinity. The factory does solely contract-work. At present it is doing work for Unterberg & Co., of New York, for which company work has been done for nearly thirteen years. The factory has been working practically without interruption since its erection, making allowances for the time needed for necessary repairs.

The above named factories for the manufacture of shirts have been a great source of help to the town especially in times of panic and financial depression. They afford employment to many of the townspeople and add also to the industry of the people so that there is no excuse for idleness and lack of industry. These factories have been successfully operating for nearly thirteen years and their loss would result in a great depression. The value of these factories for the industrial development of the town cannot be overestimated.

Alburdis Silk Ribbon Mills.—One of the most important, though one of the newest, manufactures in the borough is that of silk, carried on by the Alburdis Silk Ribbon Mills, which are a monument to the enterprise and liberality of Alburdis' substantial men. In 1896 the Hartley Silk Manufacturing Company, of Middletown, New York, advertised through a Mr. Freeland for a site in the Eastern States for the location of their silk mill which had been lying idle for some time. A letter sent by the above-named gentleman, to the Alburdis Board of Trade, such an organization not having been effected, was brought to the attention of the public-spirited citizens of Alburdis, and after a liberal discussion resulted in the call of a citizen's meeting, January 1, 1897. The meeting was presided over by P. B. Nuss after which J. L. Schmoyer was elected secretary, whereupon it was decided to send a committee of two, consisting of W. B. Butz and William Richards, to Middletown, N. Y. to investigate the equipment of the Hartley Silk Manufacturing Company. The committee having visited the mills favorably reported the enterprise and in due process of time and after due deliberation, a number of the citizens decided to identify themselves with the new industry. Immediately a meeting was called for the purpose of determining upon some means whereby the enterprise might receive the proper support. When the meeting was held, a committee was appointed, consisting of W. H. H. Meckley, J. L. Schmoyer, W. B. Butz, Lewis Meckley and Peter Butz, to solicit subscriptions from the citizens for the purchase of the ground and the erection of the buildings suitable for the manufacture of silk. The committee carried forward the work, and with such success, that $9,000 was raised for the erection of the buildings. An acre of ground was given gratuitously by Lewis Meckley on which the mills were erected. A building committee, consisting of Dr. S. K. Barndt, J. L. Schmoyer, W. B. Butz, Peter Butz and Tilghman Keiser were appointed to look after the building operation. In the spring of 1897, ground was broken for the foundations of the building, from which time rapid progress was made in the work of erection. The contract for the erection of the building had been awarded to W. H. Gangewere. The title to the property was vested in the Hartley Manufacturing Company. The subscribers were secured by a mortgage given upon the property, and bonds secured by this mortgage were issued bearing 5 per cent. interest. The bonds were further secured by insurance policies which were held as collateral.

The building erected by the citizens of Alburdis was a frame structure, one-story high, and its dimensions were 40 by 80 feet. The mills were equipped with 25 broad silk looms. The works were formally opened during the month of August, 1897. The mill employed about 30 hands. After having been in operation for about five years the building was destroyed by fire, in 1902. The mill was rebuilt and a brick building took the place of the former frame structure. The mill was under the superintendence of G. W. Smith, of Paterson, N. J. Two years later Mr. Smith purchased the mills from the Hartley Mfg. Co. From this time it was run under the name of the Alburdis Silk Ribbon Mill, G. W. Smith, Prop. The mills enjoyed a period of success. Five years later an addition of brick was made to the former structure, the dimensions of which were 60 ft. by 60 ft. After a lapse of three years of successful operation a brick addition was built, its dimensions being 125 ft. by 55 ft., one story high and a basement, to meet the demands of the growing business. It was incorporated under the name of the Alburdis Silk Ribbon Mills, G. W. Smith, president, and Cyril G. Smith, secretary and treasurer. As the building was enlarged additional looms were erected, and at present there are 48 high-speed improved ribbon looms in operation. These mills employ 60 hands having an annual output of $200,000 worth of ribbon. The plant, which is capitalized at $50,000, stands upon a solid foundation, and has been a great and substantial addition to the industrial development of the town, affording many of Alburdis an opportunity to eke out their living.

The following is a complete list of the subscribers to the fund for the building of the mills:

Peter A. Butz.....	$200 00	P. E. Texter.....	100 00
George P. Seip.....	100 00	A. F. Nuss.....	100 00
Dr. S. K. Barndt...	500 00	Lewis Meckley....	250 00
Knights of Malta..	200 00	J. L. Schmoyer....	500 00
S. D. Becker.....	100 00	D. D. Hensinger...	100 00
G. W. Schmoyer....	200 00	A. K. Snyder.....	200 00
P. S. Butz.....	200 00	H. F. Bornmann...	100 00
R. F. Deisher.....	500 00	D. F. Keller.....	200 00
P. O. S. of A. Camp 27	200 00	J. L. Butz.....	100 00
W. P. Miller.....	500 00	W. T. Breinig.....	200 00
T. B. Marsteller...	100 00	Chas. Schaffer....	100 00
P. B. Nuss.....	50 00	W. B. Butz.....	500 00
Albert Herbert....	100 00	W. H. H. Meckley..	200 00
S. J. Lohrman.....	100 00	F. H. Yeager.....	100 00
Dr. E. H. Mohr....	200 00	Daniel Dengler...	150 00
Morgan Hartman..	100 00	Benjamin Bloch...	50 00
Harry Keiser.....	2000 00	Jr. O. U. A. M....	200 00
Thomas Shuler....	200 00	Marcus Kline.....	50 00
Alexander Pearson..	100 00

CHURCHES.

Christ Chapel.—This is not a regularly organized congregation, but only a preaching-point and has been such since its erection. In the beginning of the year 1883 Rev. W. A. Helffrich saw the need of a preaching-point at Alburdis and immediately began to agitate the matter and to awaken sentiment in this direction. Subsequently the subject of having a preaching-point was taken up with Lehigh Classis, which body approved the plan and appointed Rev. Thomas Reber to supply the same, providing a suitable place could be found to hold the services. The plan not being agreeable to all parties concerned, an adjustment was finally made and in 1884, Rev. N. W. Helffrich began to preach in the former school-house on 2d Street, wherein he was assisted by Rev. O. E. Leopold. This school-house soon becoming too small for the attending worshippers, the permission was granted by the school board to use the larger school-house of the present site for the holding of services. The congregation soon outgrowing its present quarters a movement was started to erect a chapel. A meeting of the various church members representing different congregations of the surrounding community, was held on the 8th of December, 1884, in the school house on 2d Street. On motion of G. F. Schlicher, J. W. Gerner was chosen chairman of the meeting; G. F. Schlicher was elected secretary; A. H. Berger was elected treasurer; J. S. Saul, D. D. Hensinger and Styles Levan were elected trustees; G. W. Schmoyer and Thomas Shuler were elected to serve as ushers. At this meeting the trustees were instructed to purchase a suitable plot of ground and to proceed to erect a chapel. The ground was purchased from Lewis Meckley on the site of the present building, and in the spring of 1885 building operations were begun. The building committee consisted of G. W. Schmoyer, G. F. Schlicher, D. D. Hensinger and John S. Saul. Agreeable progress was made, and in the spring of 1885 the corner-stone was laid by Rev. W. A. Helffrich and Jacob Schindel. After the space of one year the building was completed and the dedication services were held on Whitsunday, 1886. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. O. E. Leopold; the sermon in the afternoon by Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, and the sermon in the evening by Rev. W. R. Hofford. Rev. N. W. Helffrich and A. R. Horne had charge of the services. The funds for the building of the chapel were raised by subscriptions from the people of the town and the immediate vicinity. All the money was raised with the exception of $1,000. The chapel was erected at a cost of $5,000. The indebtedness was finally disposed of by a Ladies' Aid Society, which organization was occasioned by the indebtedness on the property. After faithfully laboring for several years the amount was raised, the note was paid and burned, and the chapel became free of debt.

CHRIST CHAPEL.

Some time after the completion of the chapel an association was formed, being styled the Christ Chapel Association, and the following officers were elected: Trustees, J. L. Schmoyer, B. D. Laudenslager and Joseph Hensinger; A. H. Berger was elected treasurer. The first organist was James F. Hensinger, who ably filled that position until his demise in 1896. He was succeeded by O. J. Kneedler, who has ably filled the position until the present time.

The chapel was erected as a preaching-point in connection with the Lehigh church, as a union place of worship, that is for the preaching of both Reformed and Lutheran pastors. The said ministers were to preach here without compensation. It was intended to be a means of conservation for the Lehigh church. The privilege was also extended to pastors of the adjacent congregations to preach in the chapel who had representatives residing in the town. But in the latter years it has been wholly served by the pastors of the Lehigh church.

The following pastors have preached here: Rev. N. W. Helffrich, who was succeeded by Rev. Frank P. Laros, Dec. 17, 1905. The following are the Lutheran pastors: Rev. A. R. Horne, who was succeeded in 1901 by Rev. I. B. Ritter, who preached for two years; he was succeeded by Rev. C. A. Sandt in 1903, who preached until his decease in 1905. He was succeeded by Rev. C. A. Kerschner, Feb. 1, 1906, who has preached here up to the present time.

There is a large Sunday-school connected with the chapel, having a membership of 275. Percival B. Nuss is the superintendent. This Sunday-school formerly met in the school-houses of the town. It is the combination of two Sunday-schools, the German school, which met in the former school house on 2d Street, and the Union Sunday school formerly which met in the present school house.

Memorial Presbyterian Church.—It is coming more and more to be recognized as a duty by Christian men, and as a wise policy by business men to provide the means of grace, wherever centers of population are formed. The establishment of a Christian church and the preaching of the Gospel attracts the best class of workmen, gives stability and order to society, counteracts the tendency toward vice and evil habits, and stamps a semi-Christian character upon even a secular enterprise, and the Sabbath-school supplies that moral training and instruction from the lack of which the children of the poor, the ignorant and the toiling too often suffer. In accordance with this reasoning, soon after the erection of the furnaces of the Lockridge Iron Company, a Sabbath school was established and organized April 12, 1868, by V. W. Weaver, superintendent of the furnaces, Mrs. V. W. Weaver, Mrs. C. H. Welty, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McLaughlin, and others, in the office of the Thomas Iron Co. A short time afterward they placed at the disposal of the school a small building, formerly used as a school-house. The building was equipped with the pews of the First Presbyterian church of Catasauqua, which church had already done efficient service in the formation of the First Presbyterian church of Hokendauqua. Rev. Cornelius Earle, of the First Presbyterian church, of Catasauqua, commenced services once a month on Wednesday evening. On Christmas following the organization, when presents were distributed, the Sabbath-school numbered 13 teachers and 92 scholars. During the following year preaching services were held somewhat irregularly owing to many interruptions, and the fact that Rev. Earle was obliged to come from a distance and remain over night. At the second Christmas gathering, Dec. 25, 1869, there were enrolled 18 teachers and 120 scholars. The friends of the new enterprise by this time felt that not only more frequent services were necessary, but that if possible these services should be held on the Sabbath day. Since it was impossible for Rev. Earle to do this, and being anxious that the enterprise should succeed, he made arrangements with Rev. Richard Walker, of Allentown, then without a regular charge, to preach on the afternoons of the first, second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, who was to alternate with Rev. J. A. Little, of Hoken-dauqua. The wisdom of this arrangement and the results of the earnest endeavors of Rev. Walker were soon apparent, since the congregation began to increase numerically, increased interest was awakened, and it was resolved to attempt to erect a house of worship. To bring this matter to a successful issue a meeting was called by V. W. Weaver, July 27, 1870, at which meeting the following persons were appointed to constitute a committee to solicit subscriptions, viz: Dr. S. K. Barndt, chairman; George Welty, Jr., Jones F. Long, Thomas McLaughlin, William Shankweiler, Charles Welty and V. W. Weaver, secretary and treasurer. To this committee Rev. Walker was added, who volunteered to canvass Iron-ton and Allentown in behalf of the new interest. After weeks of earnest endeavor, a creditable amount of subscriptions was received, which seemed to justify the erection of a house of matter, and on the following Saturday, Sept. 17, 1870, they assembled at the place, and in the midst of a falling rain fixed upon the site for the church edifice. Afterward they also located the ground for the cemetery. The title of the property was vested in the Memorial Presbyterian church of Lockridge, as soon as the same was incorporated. The building was drafted by V. W. Weaver, Sr., and the contract was awarded for the erection of the same to George Welty, Jr. The beautiful cornerstone was the gift of Messrs. Schmeyer and Wieder, of Allentown; the stone door-sill of the basement was presented by Messrs. Snyder and Schadler, and that of the main entrance by Benjamin Mull. At the first stated meeting of the newly organized Presbytery of Lehigh, held in Allentown, Sept. 13-15, 1870, a standing committee on Missions was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Nelleville, Dinsmore and Earle, and elder David Thomas were designated to permanently organize a church at Lockridge, as soon as Rev. Walker should deem it advisable, and was also added to the committee, of which he became the chairman. The Memorial Presbyterian church derives its name from the commemoration of the reunion of the two great branches of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., in 1870. The laying of the cornerstone took place on Sunday afternoon, October the 9th, 1870. The following ministers took part in the services: Rev. Walker, J. A. Little, Jno. McNaughton, Theophilus Heilig and Rev. Earle. The cornerstone having been laid, the work of the building under the efficient management of V. W. Weaver, was speedily carried forward, so that the basement was ready for the holding of services by Sunday, Dec. 11, 1870. During the following winter, besides the regular, special services, were held for two weeks by Revs. Earle, Fulton and Little, assisting Rev. Walker with such success that in the latter part of March, 1871, Rev. Walker reported to the committee appointed by the Lehigh Presbytery, that it was now advisable to organize the congregation. This was accordingly done on Sunday, April 2, 1871, by Revs. Walker, Earle and Elder Samuel Thomas, members of the committee. V. W. Weaver was ordained to the eldership and a congregation was organized, consisting of the following members:

V. W. Weaver.
Mrs. V. W. Weaver.
Mary M. Harley.
John Lee.
Martin Lee.
Thomas Lee.
Mary Lee.
Elizabeth A. McLaughlin.

Thomas E. McLaughlin.
Robert McCracken.
Isabella McCracken.
Elizabeth Lewis.
Lizzie A. Lewis.
Reese Lewis.
Mary Ann Loughridge.
Susanna James.
Mary E. Barndt.

MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

worship. A building committee was appointed, consisting of V. W. Weaver, Dr. S. K. Barndt and Jonas F. Long, to procure a site and construct a building. On the strength of this action an application was drawn up by Rev. Earle, for a building site and land for a cemetery signed by the building committee and presented to the Thomas Iron Co., who, with their usual liberality (as witness a former grant of both land and money to the first Presbyterian church of Hoken-dauqua), the request was cheerfully granted and at once the board of directors at a meeting held in the office of the company held at Hoken-dauqua, Sept. 15, 1870, Messrs. David and Samuel Thomas were appointed to locate the grant. They with equal promptitude acted upon the Lydia Keiser.

George Dobbins.
Rebecca Dobbins.

William Williams.
William Blair.
Charles Welty.

On the following Sabbath, April 9, 1871, the church was formally dedicated to the worship of God. Rev. Charles Lindsley, of New Rochelle, N. Y., preached the sermon. Revs. Earle and Little also took part in the service. A pleasant feature of the occasion and worthy of recognition was the announcement made by the pastor, Rev. Walker, that the bell was the gift of Samuel Thomas; the communion service the gift of Mrs. David Thomas, and that pecuniary aid had been secured from the Thomas Iron Company, to the amount of $1,000, through which timely liberality the church was dedicated free of debt. At the regular semi-annual meeting of the Lehigh Presbytery, held at White Haven, April 18-20, 1871, the church was entered upon the roll of the presbytery, and placed under the care of Rev. Walker as stated supply, who served the congregation until Sept. 13, 1877. Among the others who served the congregation as pastors were Revs. E. A. Nelson, David R. Griffith, Prof. Stephen G. Barnes and Frederick F. Kolb, the last named serving the congregation from April 18, 1888, until the time of his death January 31, 1902, a period of 13 years. Mr. Kolb had previously served as missionary among the miners of Carbon and Luzerne counties, and at the time of his death had labored for a period of 42 years in the Master's cause. Since the death of Rev. Kolb, the church has been without a regular pastor, for which the principal cause is the fact that the church is situated in a center where the Reformed and Lutheran Churches are in the ascendancy, and on the other hand the uncertainties of the iron industries, causing a complete shut-down of the furnaces on several occasions, and thus compelling the employees to seek employment elsewhere, which has been instrumental in reducing the church-membership to 46, with services only every two weeks. There is a Sunday-school connected with the congregation, of which the total membership, including officers and teachers is 146. The superintendent is Robert McKeever.

SCHOOLS.

The advantages offered through the public school system has been enjoyed for many years in this community. The first school-house in this section and now within the limits of the borough, was a stone structure which stood along the public road leading from Alburdis to Hensingersville, a short distance beyond Lockridge, situated near the home now occupied by Jonathan Bard. When this school-house was built it is hard to determine but from what I have been able to gather it must have already been built about 80 years ago. For many years this school was used by the young of the community who sought the educational advantages which it afforded. Some of the teachers who taught here were: John Karsten, Nathan Herzog, James Christman, a Mr. Bleiler, and Constantine Schoemaker.

Later a schoolhouse was built further in the town, on the site of the paint mill property. This one was also a stone structure and was built some time during the 50's. This school-house continued to be used until the year 1870, when it was regarded as being located too closely to the railway and it was therefore abandoned. Some of the teachers who taught here were: Jacob Lichty, and Willoughby Guth. The branches taught in this school were: Geography, Reading, Writing and Arithmetic. In the year 1870, a brick schoolhouse was erected on Second Street, on the site of the present Alburdis Shirt Mills. This building was used only a few years. The town was enjoying an unparalleled era of prosperity, and rapidly growing, the schoolhouse soon became too small. It was therefore abandoned and another location was sought and a schoolhouse erected. Those teaching in this school were the following: James Gerner, and Tilghman Brobst.

In the year 1874 a two-story brick building with four rooms was erected for the accommodation of the schools. It was built on the site of the present building, which is the building erected at that time. This building has been used for school purposes up to the present. The schools are divided as follows: Primary, secondary, grammar, high school. The supervising principal is F. D. Stauffer, teaching the High School; the grammar is taught by Warren Knerr; the secondary is taught by Clara Mohr, the primary by Rosa Keller. The school term is 8 months. The following are some of the teachers who have taught here: P. B. Nuss, James Gerner, John Keiser, George Kline, S. J. Kern, Samuel Bordner, Rev. J. F. Keller, J. Calvin Schuger, Mrs. Richard Kramlich, Ralph Butz, and others.

The school board in 1914 was composed of Dr. E. H. Mohr, Tilden Kuhns, O. J. Kneidler, Robert Schradler and John Bieber. In 1914, A. K. Snyder was Burgess, and D. F. Keller and R. F. Butz, Justices of the Peace.

CHAPTER XXIV.

BOROUGH OF CATASAUQUA.

WILLIAM H. GLACE, ESQ.

Original Title.—The borough of Catasauqua is situated on a part of 10,000 acres which William Penn, the Proprietary of Pennsylvania, devised to his daughter Letitia, who afterward married William Aubrey, of London, England, and in 1731 they granted and conveyed this land to John Page. Some months afterward, Page secured a warrant to take up 2,723 acres of the 10,000 acres, and in pursuance of this warrant the tract was surveyed and set apart for him. The patent from the Proprietaries to Page erected the tract into a Manor, by the name of "Chawton."

Among the names of the early settlers and purchasers of this tract are the following: Thomas Armstrong, Robert Gibson, Robert Clendennin, Joseph Wright, John Elliott, Andrew Mann, Robert Gregg, and Nathaniel Taylor, all Irish names, showing that the town is situated within the bounds of the original Irish settlement.

The Armstrong tract contained 330 acres.

The Robert Gibson tract contained 193½ acres and included the Paul Faust farm. Part of this land is now owned by the Lackawanna Land Co.

That portion of the original tract on which the greater part of the town was first built appears to have passed into the possession of Andrew Hower and Marks John Biddle, of Philadelphia, who secured possession of 190 acres at a sheriff's sale in 1795. Frederick Biery made his purchase from Biddle in 1795. Biddle also sold some portions of his land to Abraham Ziegler, who sold to Biery and Kurtz.

Hower retained a small amount of the land situated at Third and Walnut streets until 1823, when he sold it to John Peter.

Nathaniel Taylor resided on the Lehigh River, north of the town, at "Dry-Run." In his will at Easton, he mentions the spring on the Lehigh, south of Dry-Run. This tract was purchased in 1787 by Christian Swartz of Longswamp township, Berks county.

Irish Settlement.—Rev. Leslie Irwin stated in a letter to David Thomas (in which he requested the privilege of preaching in the old church of the Irish Settlement), that, according to the original grant to the Irish settlers, it extended from Siegfried's to Koehler's at the locks, one mile below Catasauqua, and this was confirmed by Rev. Mr. Clyde in his history of this settlement, and extended in the form of a trapzoid beyond Bath.

A peculiarity of these people was an innate disposition to argue, for some of them were educated, and, while the Pennsylvania Germans delved and dug, they themselves would not toil hard, but would discuss the possibilities of the French and English War in Canada, and the prospect of a war with the mother country. They established a small academy on the Monocacy creek which was the fore-runner of Lafayette College at Easton. When the Revolution came, they responded patriotically, and their pastor, Rev. John Rosburgh, organized a company and fell at the battle of Trenton. Their disinclination to manual labor caused them to sell their farms when good prices could be obtained, and in almost every case a Pennsylvania German was the purchaser, so that by the year 1800 not an Irish owner of land was left along the Lehigh river, nor within two or three miles of it.

This disposition asserted itself for years afterward, and now there are only a few descendants living in the settlement. As they sold their farms they went to Central Pennsylvania and the West, where land was cheaper.

Another important factor was their inter-marriage amongst themselves (very few marrying out of the colony) and the sterility of the families was a natural consequence.

Early Residents.—Prior to the establishment of the iron-works, this locality, known as Biery's Port, was settled in about the same degree as the surrounding country. There were only four families owning the ground on which the town was originally incorporated, the Bierys, Fausts, Peters, and Breischs, and of these, one family, the Fausts, resided beyond the present borough limits. The Deilys lived in the old stone house, south of the creek, which was built in 1768; and Mr. Kurtz, west of town, on a farm.

The Bierys (Frederick and Henry) had come to the locality in 1801 when they bought the stone mill, afterward owned by Mauser & Cressman, who then rebuilt it and have since carried on the business. Henry Biery soon removed to New York; but Frederick remained and exerted his energy in making many improvements in the neighborhood, and carried on the mill until his decease in 1845. He also carried on what was known as Biery's Ferry, and in 1824 built a chain bridge. (See Bridges.) He built a stone tavern (still standing and occupied as a private house) in 1826, and a stone building of the same material in 1835 (also standing); and a stone house in 1830, now occupied by Frank Mauser. Thus a little cluster of buildings was in existence at the east end of Biery's Bridge. His sons were Daniel, Jonas, Solomon, David, and William; his daughters were the wives of Nicholas Snyder, Samuel Koehler, and Jacob Buehler. Solomon inherited his father's energy, and was during his whole life an active character. He carried on a tavern for many years. Jonas was engaged in the lumber trade.

John Peter lived at what is now the corner of Bridge and Front streets. He moved to this location in 1823 from Heidelberg (where he was born in 1799), and bought his small farm of Andrew Hower, at first occupying a house which had been built by John Yundt, and afterward erected a stone dwelling. He followed weaving for nine years, and was one of the first lock-tenders for the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. In 1851 he moved away and died at Allentown.

The Faust family had been long settled just north of the borough boundary. The first representative of the family here was John Philip Faust. Jonas, his son, after his death, about 1831, received his lands, and, dying two years later, the farm was accepted at its appraised value of $50 per acre by his son Paul, who lived upon it until his death, in November, 1883. A portion of his land was divided and sold in town lots.

Henry Breisch, a stone-mason, lived where Dr. Daniel Yoder now lives, and owned 10 acres of land surrounding his home. At the time the town was laid out, a road extended up the hill from the Faust farm-house, past Breisch's home, and onward to the Howertown Road. The land on the gentle slope, where are now the best residences of Catasauqua, was in part tilled and in part rough pasture land, in many places overgrown with brush and trees. Among the first settlers after the establishment of the iron-works were the Williams family, the Fullers, James Lackey, Joshua Hunt, Joseph Laubach, Peter Laux, Charles G. Schneller, and Nathan Fegley.

David Williams, father of Thomas (who was killed on the railroad in 1872), David (superintendent of the Union Foundry), John (cashier of the Crane Iron Co.), and Oliver (president of the Catasauqua Manufacturing Co.), came here in 1840 from Wales, and took a contract for moulding with the Crane Iron Co. He died in 1845.

Nathan Fegley came here soon after Mr. Lackey, and opened a store. Afterward he kept a temperance hotel, and in addition to his mercantile business opened the first lumber and coal-yard in Catasauqua. He left in 1854, and his store passed into the possession of Weaver, Mickle & Co., a firm which was composed of Valentine Weaver, Edwin Mickle, Samuel Thomas and John Thomas.

In 1847, Joseph Laubach came here from Allen township, adjoining Hanover, and opened a store near Biery's Bridge. In 1848 he bought the property, where, two years later, he started the Eagle House, which was the next hotel after that carried on by the Bierys.

The Catasauqua House was built by Jesse Knauss about the same time; the American House by Solomon Biery in 1856; and the Pennsylvania House about 1857.

Charles G. Schneller started in business in a small way on Second street and Mulberry alley in 1848. In 1854 he moved to Front street, where he sold stoves and hardware for 30 years. He was a native of Bethlehem, and came to Catasauqua from Bucks county.

Other early merchants were Getz & Gilbert, who established themselves in 1854; Peter Laubach, who opened a store shortly afterward; and Joseph and J. W. Swartz, who began in 1856.

Morgan Emanuel, a native of Wales, was another early resident, who did much towards the development of the town. He died April 11, 1884, aged nearly 80 years.

Indian Relics.—Very few relics of the past have been found in the vicinity of Catasauqua. When the Lehigh Valley Railroad was constructed, an Indian skull was found on the bluff below the station, surrounded by boards, pipe and other relics.

Opposite the mouth of Coplay creek, when the canal was dug, many arrow-heads of flint were found, showing that the Indians had made these arrow-heads where the spring flowed into the Lehigh river.

Joseph Miller (who lived in the old stone house on the road to Hokendauqua, above the cemetery gates), said in 1866 that he heard his grandfather say that there was an Indian burying ground on the lowlands and while standing on the hills on the opposite side of the river, peering through the heavy under-brush and evergreens, he saw at different times parties of Indians bury their dead at that place.

An Indian grave-yard is alleged to have been on the Taylor premises near the colonial mansion where the present corn-crib and pig-sty are situated. It was about 60 feet wide by 150 feet long, and upwards of one hundred graves were there marked by small flat stones. In this vicinity numerous flint and stone relics were found which are included in the collection of Dr. Charles Milson.

Incorporation.—Application was made to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh County on April 3, 1851, for the incorporation of Catasauqua into a borough. The decree of the Court was made Feb. 1, 1853, which provided as follows:

“That the village of Catasauqua, and the territory in and around the same as comprised with-

River Lehigh, thence up the said River Lehigh, the several courses and distances thereof at low water mark to the place of beginning, be and the same is hereby declared a body corporate in law, under and subject to the provisions, requirements, and enactments of the Act of Assembly, entitled, ‘An Act regulating boroughs,’ approved April 3, 1851, to be known and designated in law and otherwise as the borough of Catasauqua, and shall constitute a separate Election and School District, subject to all the laws now in force regulating such districts. The election for borough officers is hereby directed to be held on the third Friday of March annually, at the public house now in the occupancy of Charles Nolf, until removed therefrom according to law.”

While the town was being incorporated, there were many signs of activity and immediately

CATASAUQUA IN 1852.

in the following boundaries, to wit: Beginning at a point in the River Lehigh at low water mark, thence through land of Paul Faust, on the line dividing the said county of Lehigh from the county of Northampton, to the public road leading from bridge to Howertown, thence down the said road in the middle thereof, to a stone corner between lands of George Breinig and Henry Kurtz, thence on the line between the said lands of the said Breinig and Kurtz to Catasauqua creek, thence down said creek the several courses and distances thereof to its junction with the afterward the town council proceeded energetically with grading the streets and smoothing off the rough places preparatory to paving. New buildings were going up, among them the three-story brick hotel of Solomon Biery, fronting on two streets near the old stand; the hotel, store, and dwelling of William Gross on the opposite corner, he having secured a license at the last court; and a bridge over the Lehigh river on the site of the old chain bridge. The Crane Iron Co. works were in full blast with five furnace stacks in constant operation.

First Officials.—Election officers were appointed who were directed to conduct the election which was to be opened only to citizens legally entitled to vote who resided within the territory mentioned in the decree. The first officials elected were the following: Chief Burgess, David Thomas; Town Council, Jesse Knauss, William Biery, Joshua Hunt, Jr., Joseph Laubach, John Clark; Street Commissioners, Morgan Emanuel, Jonas Biery; High Constable, Charles Siegley; Auditor, John Williams; Judge, Isaac E. Chandler; Inspectors, David G. Jones, Augustus H. Gilbert; Assessor, Levi Haas; School Directors, James Ginder, Owen Rice, Charles Nolf, Charles G. Schneller, George W. Klotz, James Wilson; Justice of the Peace, John Hudders; Constable, Joseph Lazarus.

Name.—Catasauqua is a compound word meaning "dry-ground" in the dialect of the Leni-Lenape tribe of Indians who first inhabited this section of country.

Catasauqua means the earth is thirsty; and Gattoshacki, wants rain, which indicated in their language that the vegetation hereabout suffered for want of rain. The creek, which empties into the Lehigh river at the south end of the borough, was therefore called by this name. On some of the earlier maps of the land hereabouts it was called Catasauqua, and on others, Mill-creek, because a mill had been erected along its headwaters by Thomas Wilson in 1735. In one deed of 1763, it was written Callisuka; in others, Caladaqua.

The Irish settlers recognized this parched condition of the ground and absence of vegetation between the river and Shoenersville, and therefore avoided the locality. This peculiarity still prevails.

Hanover Township.—Hanover township was established Aug. 15, 1798, out of the southern section of Allen township, and was a part of Northampton county until the erection of Lehigh county in 1812, and the county line, as then established, extended from a point on the east bank of the Lehigh river, opposite the outlet of Coplay creek, almost at right angles with the river, along the northerly line of Hanover township, and included the western half of the township; and the site of the village of Biery's Port occupied the northwest corner of it. Doubtless its location led the active persons, interested in the erection of the new county, to establish the line so as to include the village, in order to give its inhabitants and property-holders convenient communication with the county-seat at Allentown.

First Taxables.—The population increased rapidly from the founding of the town, and in 1853 the following persons owned property here:

George Andrew, tailor	Aaron Koch
John Albright	Owen Kuntz, blacksmith
Nathan Andreas	Jesse Knauss, liveryman
William Biery, carpenter	Widow Kreider
Solomon Biery	John Koons, blacksmith
Joseph Brown, tailor	Anthony Knapp, mason
John Boyer	William Kratzer
Hugh Brattor, laborer	Reuben Kratzer
Jonas Biery	Henry Kurtz
Daniel Biery	Samuel Koehler
Jacob Beil	James Kerr
Aaron Bast, carpenter	A. Kromer
John Brobst	Joseph Lichtenwallner
William Bayard	James Lackey, merchant
Charles Becker, minister	Widow Leibert
Washburn Bough, boat-builder	Joseph Laubach, inn-keeper
Lewis Bough	S. H. Laciari, tinsmith
Lucinda Beers	John Laubach
Stephen Beers	Laciari & Co., merchants
David Beidelman, weaver	Jonas Lilly
Christian Bough	Robert McIntyre, contractor
Amos Buchmier, tailor	Widow McAllister
John Clark	John McIntyre
Samuel Colver	Peter Morey
William Cramsey	Jacob Miller
Jacob Christ	William McLelland
Charles Deiler	William Miller, merchant
Noah Davis	William Minnich
Daniel Davis	John Machette
Reuben Dilgard	William McLelland (3d)
George Deily	William Neighley, carpenter
Jacob Deily, wheelwright	Ferd. Eberhard, contractor
Morgan Emanuel	James Nevens
Samuel Evans	David Neighley
John Evans	Frederick W. Nagle
Philip Fenstermacher	Samuel L. Nevens
Paul Faust	Samuel Old
James W. Fuller, contractor	Reuben Patterson, shoemaker
Nathan Frederick, inn-keeper	Jacob Ruthman, mason
Thomas Frederick, merchant	William Romig
Jacob F. Fogel	Charles W. Rau, saddler
Reuben Fenstermacher	John Roth
Henry Fenstermacher	Samuel Romich
Nathan Fegley	Patrick Roney
George Foehler	Jacob Leem, shoemaker
Owen Frederick, cabinet-maker	Simon Sterner, machinist
William Fegley, carpenter	Jonathan Snyder
Augustus Gilbert	Charles G. Schneller, mason
Henry Goetz	Charles Sigley
James Ginder, boat-builder	William Stillwagon
William Gross, merchant and inn-keeper	Nicholas Snyder
Peter Hinely	Samuel Still
Levi Haas	Owen Swartz
Henry Hock, saddler	Solomon Swab
John Hock	James Snyder
Joshua Hunt	Peter Sheckler
William Jones	George Snyder
John James	Joseph Troxell, shoemaker
David D. Jones	David A. Tombler
	David Thomas
	David Thomas, Jr.
	John Thomas
	Samuel Thomas
	Maria Troxell

Widow Wyman	John Wilson
David Williams	Henry Yundt
E. P. Weiss, merchant	Enoch Yundt
Enos Weaver

Among the tenants at this time were Moses E. Albright and William Steckel, merchants; Henry Bush and Charles Nolf, innkeepers; Benjamin Bush, miller; William Tice, carpenter; Cornelius Earle, minister; and Franklin Martin, physician.

In consequence of necessary grading, heavy excavations in streets, and the building of a lock-up, the debt of the borough at the end of the first fiscal year amounted to $3,200; and land damages for the opening of streets, interest, and further grading, increased the debt on the 1st of April, 1855, to $4,000. On the 1st of April, 1863, it was $5,000, and from that time forward for a number of years the receipts were not sufficient to pay the interest and current expenses, which caused an annual deficit. The expense of building the town hall and purchasing fire apparatus, etc., amounted to $22,000; and there being an average annual deficit of $700, the debt in April, 1874, was found to be $36,609. The tax-levy had never amounted to more than $3,300 prior to 1874, but in that year the triennial assessment showed a valuation of more than double the previous assessments, and thus met a long-felt want, increasing the tax-levy so as to pay current expenses.

Borough Extended.—The borough was extended in 1895 by annexing a part of Hanover township which lay to the north and east, and was described in the proceedings as follows:

“Beginning at a point in the center of the Catasauqua creek which is in the present boundary line of the borough; thence along said line north 88 degrees and 42 minutes west 192 feet, more or less, to a stone, and south 59 degrees and 28 minutes west 1,084 feet and 6 inches to an iron pipe in the center of Howertown Road; thence along said line and the center of said Howertown Road north 50 degrees and 13 minutes west 464 feet and 4 inches to an iron pipe in the centre of said Howertown Road, said iron pipe being also in the line dividing Lehigh county and Northampton county; thence along said county line north 70 degrees and 12 minutes east 1,412 feet, more or less, to a point in the said Catasauqua creek; and thence down said creek, the several courses and distances thereof to the place of beginning.”

Wards Established.—The petition of 49 citizens of the borough was presented to the court on April 11, 1876, praying for a division of the borough into two wards for the purpose of facilitating elections and of securing a fair representation for each section in the Council and School Board. The court appointed Eli J. Saeger, F. J. Newhard, and W. B. Powell as commissioners, who viewed and considered the premises, and recommended a division of the borough into two wards as prayed for. The court confirmed their report, and on Jan. 19, 1877, filed a decree, dividing the borough into two wards, named respectively First ward and Second ward, and giving the boundaries of each.

In 1909, an application was made to extend the borough limits on the east, so as to embrace what was commonly known as East Catasauqua, containing 435 acres. After due proceedings the decree of annexation was made Oct. 3, 1909, and the territory was constituted the Third ward. The commissioners were William Weisly, John R. Tait, and James T. Davis.

This section was known for fifty years as “Hog-town,” until it was annexed, when it came to be called the Third ward.

In 1911, the Second ward was divided into two parts, and the eastern part was constituted the Fourth ward. The commissioners were H. W. Hankee, Harvey H. Knerr, and Samuel Heilman.

Line Adjusted.—The northerly line of the borough was fixed on the northerly line of Hanover township in Lehigh county, which was also the southerly line of Allen township in Northampton county; and this borough line also became the southerly line of the borough of North Catasauqua.

This line was in dispute for many years, and as a consequence many taxpayers and voters were in doubt as to where they lived. Therefore commissioners were appointed by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county, and they filed their report but it was set aside on January 6, 1889.

Subsequently, another set of commissioners was appointed by the joint action of Lehigh and Northampton counties, and after giving the matter a thorough investigation they established the line according to the evidence secured and submitted their report to both courts, which was confirmed and so this long-standing controversy was settled. Their report was as follows:

“Maj. Samuel D. Lehr of Allentown, Birge Pearson of Easton and Thomas S. McNair of Hazleton were appointed as commissioners to locate the correct boundary line between Lehigh and Northampton counties north and east of Catasauqua over which there has been a dispute for many years. They set about their difficult task in a proper way, examining old records, maps and reports, hearing testimony and taking measurements in this behalf, and then located the line; and they reported their proceedings in this behalf, accompanied by three charts which show the line along the east end of Hanover township, the line on the north side of Hanover township and Catasauqua, and also the line in an enlarged form through Catasauqua to indicate how individual properties are cut through.

"Allen township in Northampton county was erected in 1797 from a point in the Lehigh river to the road leading from Hanoverville to Bath, on lands of John Fogel, now Daniel Fogel, where the Monocacy creek crosses the road; which point the commissioners established by an affidavit of Daniel Fogel, who is now 85 years of age.

"When Lehigh county was taken from Northampton county in 1812, the county line was extended from the intersection of Monocacy creek and the Lehigh river along the creek to the public road to the Lehigh Gap, which it follows to a point in said Allen township line. This road was changed since 1812 and the commissioners had to secure the old location and follow it to the old line on the crest of Rocky Hill, which is the northeastern corner of Hanover township.

"The old Allen township line was not run since 1798. Its western end was designated as a point 20 perches south of Faust's Ferry. By the affidavits of Reuben Faust of Catasauqua and Benjamin B. Burger of Allentown, the commissioners fixed upon this point at a buttonwood tree on the east bank of the Lehigh river. These two were easily fixed upon the site of the ferry and there the commissioners found timbers along the bank showing that a boat landing had been located there.

"Having determined these points at Fogel's and at Catasauqua, the commissioners ran a bee line between the two and that line from Rocky Hill to the river as the new boundary line. It cuts diagonally through Mr. Faust's property at Catasauqua and cuts off a small corner of the Bryden Horse Shoe Works property; thence it passes north of Theodore Bachman's house and touches the bay-window of Daniel Milson's house; it crosses Adam Rau's premises so as to cut it into two equal triangles; and it also cuts off a foot and a half of a corner of the Stand-Pipe."

GOVERNMENT.—The government of the borough comprises the Chief Burgess, Councilmen, and Receiver of Taxes, who are elected, and other officials, who are appointed by Council.

Officials.—The borough officers for the year 1914 are:

Chief Burgess—Dr. Charles J. Keim

Councilmen

FIRST WARD

Samuel Mitchell
Sam'l P. Gemmel
Chas. D. W. Wower

SECOND WARD

Rufus W. G. Wint
Howard V. Swartz
William H. Wentz

THIRD WARD

Robert H. Steinmetz
Harvey W. Snyder
Harry B. Smith

FOURTH WARD

Oscar H. Shugar
Joseph M. Kane
Robert G. Dougherty

Receiver of Taxes—William McNabb.

Treasurer—Ralph C. Boyer.

Secretary—John S. Matchette.

Water Overseer—Daniel Gillespie.

Street Commissioner—James H. Harte.

Chief of Police—Charles E. Sheckler.

Patrolmen—Alvin Roth, Andrew Smith.

Fire Marshall—Henry Zeaser.

Charles E. Sheckler has filled the office of Chief of Police since April 1, 1875, (excepting from 1908 to 1912), a period covering 34 years. He also acted as tax-receiver from 1881 to 1906.

Town-Hall.—The town-hall is situated on the north side of Church street, between Front and Second streets, at Railroad alley. It is a two-story brick building with a clock-tower, and was erected by Fuller & Graffin in 1868 at a cost of $14,000. The first floor was set apart for a council-chamber, and a storage room for the apparatus of the Phoenix Fire Company. The second floor was set apart for a public auditorium, as a place of entertainment and amusement, and it was so used until 1908, when it was condemned as unsafe and therefore discontinued. In 1911 the necessary changes were made there for the council-chamber, and offices for the chief Burgess, receiver of taxes and water rents, and borough treasurer. The first floor has since been wholly occupied by the fire company, excepting a small space at the rear for a "lock-up" with two cells.

The clock and bell of the "Front Street School House" (T. A. B. Hall since 1900), were transferred to the tower of the Town Hall when the school-house was sold to the St. Lawrence Temperance and Beneficial Society, and they continued in use for a number of years until they became out of repair; then the clock stopped and the sweet-toned bell was no longer heard, which for many years had proclaimed the time of day to the community for miles round-about, and they have been resting there in forgotten quietude ever since. They were bought, originally by a committee headed by 'Squire Koons, which raised $500 by soliciting public subscriptions, and placed in the school-house as a great public convenience, where they were highly appreciated.

Fire Companies.—There are three fire companies in the borough, one being located in each ward; but only the first two are recognized as constituting the fire department.

Phoenix Steam Fire Company No. 1 was organized April 23, 1866, incorporated Sept. 11, 1871, and merged in the fire department of the borough in 1891. The apparatus consists of a Button steam fire engine, two hose carriages, with 1,500 feet of hose, and a two-wheeled gig. Membership, 180. The quarters of the company are on the first floor of the Town-Hall.

Southwark Hose Company No. 9, was organized Feb. 4, 1873, incorporated Oct. 9, 1890, and merged in the fire department in 1895. The apparatus consists of a Silsby steam fire engine, hose carriage with 800 feet of hose, and a two-wheeled gig. Membership, 125. The quarters of the company are in a two-story brick building, situated at the southwest corner of Second and Church streets, in the First ward.

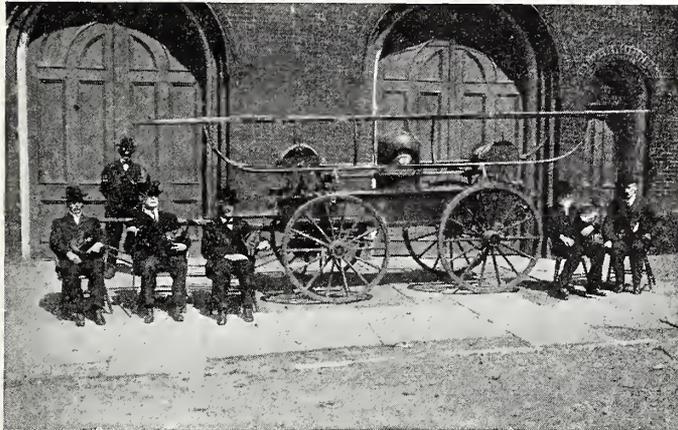

East End Fire Company was organized in 1910.

4, 1845, which was attended by the following persons:

Owen Rice
John Kane
Edward Clark
Henry E. Kildare
Isaac Miller
Thomas Dempsey
Alexander Miller
Robert Campbell
Richard Davis
Jacob Smith
Morgan Emanuel
Neil McKeever
Thomas Miller
William McClelland
Samuel Thomas
John Thomas
William J. Aull
David Thomas
John McIntyre

George Jenkins
Arthur McQuade
William Boyle
John Lees
Noah Phillips
Cochrane McLaughlin
Charles Dempsey
William Neligh
William Pollock
John Hunter
James Hunter
Alex. McCurdy
James Dempsey
Mark Dempsey
Patrick Dempsey
James McAllister
John Clark
William Davis

The idea was approved, and the name "Humane Fire Company" adopted.

FIRST FIRE ENGINE.

The apparatus consists of a two-wheeled gig and 300 feet of hose. Membership, 130. The quarters are in a one-story brick building at Eleventh and Race streets, in the Third ward, erected in October, 1913. It has not as yet been merged in the fire department.

The borough appropriates $225 annually toward the maintenance of the two recognized companies.

Humane Fire Company.—The following interesting details are mentioned in this connection relating to the first efforts of the community in behalf of affording protection against fire.

David Thomas, the manager of the Crane Iron Co., encouraged the workmen to form a fire company for the protection of the community as well as the iron works against fire, and in pursuance of his suggestion, a preliminary meeting was held in the village on Nov.

An application was then made to the Court of Lehigh county for a charter of incorporation and the decree was made March 14, 1846.

Hand Fire Engine.—Soon afterward the company purchased a hand-pumping engine from the Philadelphia Fire Company for the use of the local fire company. This engine was housed in a frame building on Second street near Church (now the site of the large stone stable of the Crane Iron Co.), until one was put up about 1866 on Front street, south of Church.

The engine consisted of a large water tank, set on four strong wheels, and over the centre was placed a tower which enclosed a force-pump; and this pump was operated by two projecting handles from the front and rear with extension arms that could be laid inward when not in use. Twenty men were necessary to put and keep these handles in successful motion, ten on the ground, and ten on the tank with extension and folding platforms. A stream of water could be forced over buildings and into the air nearly as strong and as high as the steam fire-engines of a later period. The water in the tank was supplied by a bucket-brigade from a neighboring well and pump, or by a hose from the water mains.

At that time, the water mains were laid on Church and Wood streets, and on Front street from Church to Wood. These mains were primarily laid for the protection of the iron company's properties. The water was pumped into them from the water-house in the furnace where a powerful pump was operated by a flow of water from the canal. The pressure through the mains was great, with such a force back of it.

A hose carriage with sufficient hose was secured at the same time, the hose being used to lead the water from the fire-plug into the engine tank, and from the force pump to the immediate vicinity of the fire whence it was "played" upon the burning building.

Water Fights.—A favorite sport on Saturday afternoons for the members of the fire company was to pit one party with a section of hose directly from a fire plug against a similar party with a section from the hand fire-engine.

Of course, the great steam-engine in the furnace was too powerful, with its inexhaustible staying qualities, for the heart-engines in twenty plucky firemen. It was, indeed, a dramatic performance, and the skillful engineer in the furnace displayed much judgment in manipulating the throttle at his end of the line to keep the human energy of the respective contestants swaying to and fro until either party became exhausted.

Steam Fire Engine.—This hand-engine continued in use until 1865; then a large fire occurred (the destruction of the machine-shop of the Crane Iron Co.) which demonstrated its inefficiency. The borough substituted an improved steam fire-engine which was purchased from the Phoenix Fire Company, of Philadelphia, and this was used for 30 years; then it, too, had to make way for a stronger engine because it had failed to cope with the great and costly fire at the Unicorn Silk Mill, beyond the northern end of the borough.

The old hand-engine was stripped of its brass mountings and taken to the shadow of an old tree near the C. & F. R. R. round-house, and there the two passed away together in the natural process of decay.

Before the erection of the Town-Hall in 1868, the fire apparatus was housed in a frame building specially put up by the borough for the purpose, on Front street south of Church, which is now occupied as a barber-shop.

BURGESSES.—The following list comprises the names of the burgesses since the incorporation of the borough, and the terms of service:—

David Thomas, 1853	Robert E. Williams, 1885-87
John Boyer, 1854	John W. Hopkins, 1888-89
Uriah Brunner, 1855	Thomas Jones, 1890-91
David Thomas, 1856-57	W. A. Borger, 1892-93
William Goetz, 1858-59	Charles R. Horn, 1894-96
A. C. Lewis, 1860	C. D. W. Bower, 1897-99
John Williams, 1861-69	Rufus M. Wint, 1900-02
James C. Beitel, 1870-71	Henry W. Stolz, 1903-05
John Williams, 1872-73	Dr. Charles J. Keim, 1906-08; 1914-
M. H. Horn, 1874	Dr. Henry H. Riegel, 1909-13
George Bower, 1875
William H. Glace, 1876
F. W. Wint, 1877
Henry Davis, 1878-80
Philip Storm, 1881-84

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following justices of the peace served in the borough from the time of its incorporation:

George Frederick, 1853-55	George Frederick, 1858-63
John Hudders, 1853-58	John H. Nolf, 1863-65
Chauncey D. Fuller, 1855-65	R. Clav Hammersly, 1865-95
Joseph Hunter, 1865-70	Charles Graffin, 1895-1900
William H. Glace, 1870-75	F. Joseph Wehrle, 1900-05
Abraham F. Koons, 1875-98	George H. Richter, 1905-10
Edwin C. Koons, 1898-1914	C. F. Roth, 1906-14

Upon the subdivision of the borough into two wards in 1877, it was contended that each ward became entitled to two incumbents, and two extra continued to be elected and to officiate without protest for upwards of twenty years, when they discontinued because the Secretary of the Commonwealth decided that no more than two justices would be commissioned in a borough regardless of the number of wards. The extra incumbents were:

James Courtney, 1878-83	Edward D. Boyer, 1884-89
Edwin Gilbert, 1878-79	Jacob Van Buskirk, 1889-91
William J. Craig, 1879-84	James Tait, Jr., 1891-96
Alexander N. Ulrich, 1883-1910	Thomas Jones, 1896-1906

Census.—The population of the borough, according to the United States enumeration, since its incorporation, has been as follows:

1860	1,932	1890	3,704
1870	2,853	1900	3,963
1880	3,065	1910	5,250

The population in January, 1914, was supposed to be about 5,300.

INDUSTRIES.

The following establishments are mentioned in connection with the industrial affairs of Catasauqua. It is apparent that they comprise a great variety.

Abattoir.—The borough was supplied with meats by visiting butchers from other places until 1858, including Frederick Nagle from the "Irish Settlement"; then George Bower began a butcher-shop along the canal at the foot of Chapel street where the old boat-yard had been carried on for twenty years. He moved the shop in 1861 to a point along the canal, at the foot of Mulberry street (two blocks north of the old Biery Bridge) and at the same time built a two-story brick dwelling-house at No. 209 Front street for his home; and he continued the business in an active and successful manner until 1890. He slaughtered from fifteen to twenty head of cattle every week, besides many sheep, hogs, and calves; and he had five delivery teams which traversed the surrounding country for a number of miles. He furnished the Canal Co. with their meat orders at the lock-houses north and south of Catasauqua.

There were sixteen visiting butchers when he started, but his increasing local trade soon caused them to discontinue their visits to Catasauqua. His son, Charles D. W. Bower, succeeded him in 1890, moving his family to the home 209 Front street. He took possession of the shop and made extensive improvements in 1893, introducing steam and electric power with a complete modern equipment; adding a cold storage building, and an ice-house with a capacity for 500 tons. He has continued the business in a successful manner until now. He conducts a meat-store at the home (No. 209). He maintained a store for a time at No. 129 Bridge street.

John Eckert, after working for George Bower for some years, engaged in the butchering business for himself, and carried it on for ten years until he died, when he was succeeded by his son-in-law, Henry Walker, whose shop is on Second street at Willow.

William S. Hauser engaged in the butcher business in 1896, in the Third ward, and carried on a slaughter-house and meat shop for six years, when he was succeeded by his son, Alvin A., who has conducted the place until now.

Artificial Ice.—E. L. Walker, H. G. Walker, C. O. Fuller, and William H. Sattelle, of Catasauqua, associated together for the purpose of manufacturing artificial ice. They were incorporated Sept. 29, 1913, under the name of Crystal Ice Co., with a capitalization of $25,000, and secured a site at American and Peach streets, where they erected a one-story brick-building and equipped it with the latest improved refrigerating machinery; daily capacity, 35 tons; employes, 12.

Bakeries.—The first bakery was started on Front street, north of Bridge, in 1860, by John Eskey, and he carried on the business until 1865. It was then abandoned until 1879. John L. Laubach revived it at the same place and conducted the business until 1891.

A man named Albright embarked in the business in 1861, on Front street, north of Strawberry alley, and carried on a bakery for some years. Then different parties followed him till 1879, when James Dilcher became the owner and he conducted it until his death, but at a place nearby (No. 219), and his son, George, until 1908. Then William F. Kuehner became the purchaser and he has continued the business until now, with three delivery teams.

Different parties carried on the Albright bakery, after Dilcher left it. Alexander Morrow operated it from 1895 to 1902. Then it was idle for about 10 years. John Dold revived it in 1912, carried it on a year; then John Klinge became the owner.

Henry Hauser began a bakery at Front and Chapel streets in 1889. He removed to 740 N. Third street in 1902, where he has continued until now. He employs three hands and has two teams.

A bakery was carried on by different parties at Second and Mulberry streets from 1870 to 1875.

Boiler Works.—Daniel Milson came to Catasauqua in 1854, and was employed at his trade of boiler-maker with the Crane Iron Co., and afterward with the Thomas Iron Co., until 1863. He was regarded as an expert mechanic. In 1865 he embarked in the business for himself, renting the shop of the former company which was at the rear of the pattern-shop at Front and Willow streets, and there he conducted the plant until 1890, when he retired. He employed from 25 to 50 hands. He was succeeded by Samuel McCloskey, an employee for years, who continued the business several years; then his three brothers became associated with him and they conducted a works on the premises of the Catasauqua Manufacturing Company, along the canal between Pine and Spring streets. This was continued until 1902; then Samuel McCloskey became the sole owner and he re-established himself afterward in the plant of the Crane Iron Co., where he has continued until the present time, carrying on a general business and employing from five to ten men.

Bottling Works.—August Hohl engaged in the bottling business at Coplay in 1884. After remaining there eight years, he located at Catasauqua, and here it has been continued until the present time. He also embarked in the wholesale liquor business in 1904. The store and bottling works have been at Front and Race streets since 1907. The three-story brick building was erected by Jonas Biery about 1855 for a hotel, and so used for about ten years. Then it was occupied as a general store until 1907.

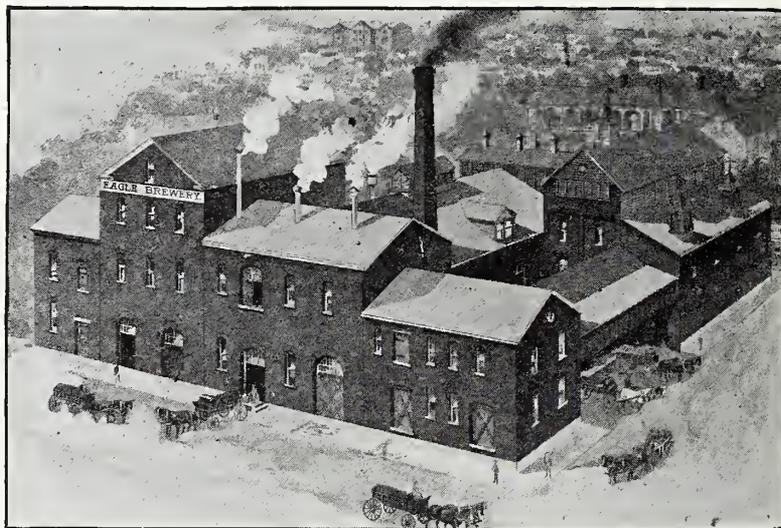

Bottling establishments are also conducted in connection with the two breweries.

Breweries.—Two breweries are operated in the borough, both started about the same time, in the year 1867.

Kostenbader Brewery is situated on Railroad alley, between Mulberry and Willow streets. It duction of beer. It is generally known as the "Eagle Brewery."

Lehnert Brewery is situated at No. 115 Railroad alley. It was started by Matthew Millhaupt in 1867, and conducted by him under the name of "Catasauqua Brewery" until his decease in 1872. His widow then operated the plant for a while when a German brew-meister became the purchaser and afterward married the widow. He carried on the business until he died, and it was continued by his sons-in-law, Henry Geisel and Felix Keller, for several years, when operations were suspended for a number of years. An Englishman then converted it into an ale brewery. He carried on business for several years when it was again suspended for about ten years. Henry Kersch and H. H. Rice then became the owners and engaged in was established in 1867 by Herman Kostenbader. The first building was a frame structure and then the annual production was only 1,500 barrels, but a large brick building was erected in its stead and the capacity was doubled. The plant was enlarged in 1900 and a second enlargement was made in 1913, increasing the capacity to 20,000 barrels. The proprietor died in 1909, when he was succeeded by his two sons, August F. and Herman A., who have operated the plant in a successful manner until the present time. Their trade extends throughout Lehigh county. They carry on a bottling works in connection with the brewery, which was started on the premises in 1905, and equipped with the latest appliances. The employees number from 25 to 30. The brewery is devoted wholly to the prothe manufacture of beer and porter. Rice purchased the interest of his partner in a few years and conducted the business until November, 1906, when Charles L. Lehnert purchased the plant, and he has operated it until now. He employs from 15 to 20 men, and produced in 1913, 9,000 barrels. In 1914 he remodeled and enlarged the plant to a capacity of 15,000 barrels. A bottling works is connected with the brewery.

EAGLE BREWERY.

Brick Yards.—David A. Tombler was engaged in the manufacture of building bricks for about 20 years, from 1860 to 1880. His plant was located at the east end of Catasauqua. The product was hand-made. He employed 50 hands and upwards, according to the demands of his trade, and conducted two yards. Many buildings at Catasauqua were built of his brick during the period mentioned.

Tomblor was succeeded by Milton Kurtz, who carried on the business from 1880 to 1905, but in 1902 his yard was established some distance to the northeast at Fourteenth and Race streets, on a tract of thirteen acres. He employed from 16 to 20 hands and produced annually from 700,000 to 1,000,000 bricks, with horsepower.

In 1886 Oscar H. Kurtz associated with Wm. B. Schaeffer for manufacturing brick with machinery. They secured a Martin machine from Lancaster and carried on business for a year; then they sold their plant to David Davis and David Williams who conducted the business for ten years.

Oscar H. Kurtz associated with Franklin Goldsmith and they continued brick-making in East Catasauqua on the Kurtz plant, from 1905 to 1910. They employed from 20 to 25 men and produced annually from one million to one and a quarter million with steam power. The plant laid idle for a year, then Mr. Kurtz resumed operations for himself and has continued until the present time. In 1913 he employed from 12 to 15 hands and produced 700,000 bricks.

Many bricks in the building operations at Catasauqua were made in the Rader Brick Works at Northampton.

Carriage Works.—An industry of a creditable nature for the manufacture of carriages and wagons was carried on at Catasauqua for nearly 50 years. Frederick W. Becker embarked in the enterprise about 1865, and established a plant on the east side of Front street, near Race, which was a two-story frame building, 30 by 80 feet. His vehicles had a fine reputation. He conducted a good business until 1876 when he was obliged to suspend. The employees numbered from 10 to 15. He was followed by his son, Charles, who conducted the works with the same number of hands for some years. Afterward different parties carried on the business, but through competition they drifted into repairs. The last persons to operate the place until 1912, were Robert Rabenold, George Knauss and Milton Snyder.

Cigar Factories.—William Sacks started the manufacture of cigars at Catasauqua about 1865 and carried on the business until 1911. He employed several hands. He was succeeded by his son William, who has continued the business until the present time.

Charles Myers started about the same time and continued for twenty years. He was succeeded by Charles Schweppinger, who carried on the factory until he died, in 1910.

John G. Sacks has conducted a factory in the borough from 1890 to the present time. He employs from three to six hands and produces annually about 200,000.

Morris Huff carried on a factory from 1890 to 1912.

Crane Iron Works.—The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company was organized in 1818, and after operating their coal beds and canal for 20 years, in which time they had increased their production and transportation of 1,000 tons, in 1821, to 224,000 tons, in 1837, they quite naturally considered the propriety of encouraging the establishment of industries along the Lehigh river for the consumption of their coal. They, therefore, in 1838, offered the valuable water privileges of the river from the Hokendauqua dam to the Allentown dam to any persons who would expend $30,000 in the erection of a furnace and run it successfully for three months by the exclusive use of anthracite coal.

This offer led to the organization of the Lehigh Crane Iron Company, which included members of the Coal and Navigation Company, and, in the Fall of 1838, Erskine Hazard (one of the leading spirits of the Iron Company), went to Wales for the purpose of securing a competent person to come to the United States in their interest and superintend the erection of furnaces. He there met George Crane (proprietor of the Crane Iron Works at Yniscledwin) who recommended David Thomas, an expert employee, and they called to see him.

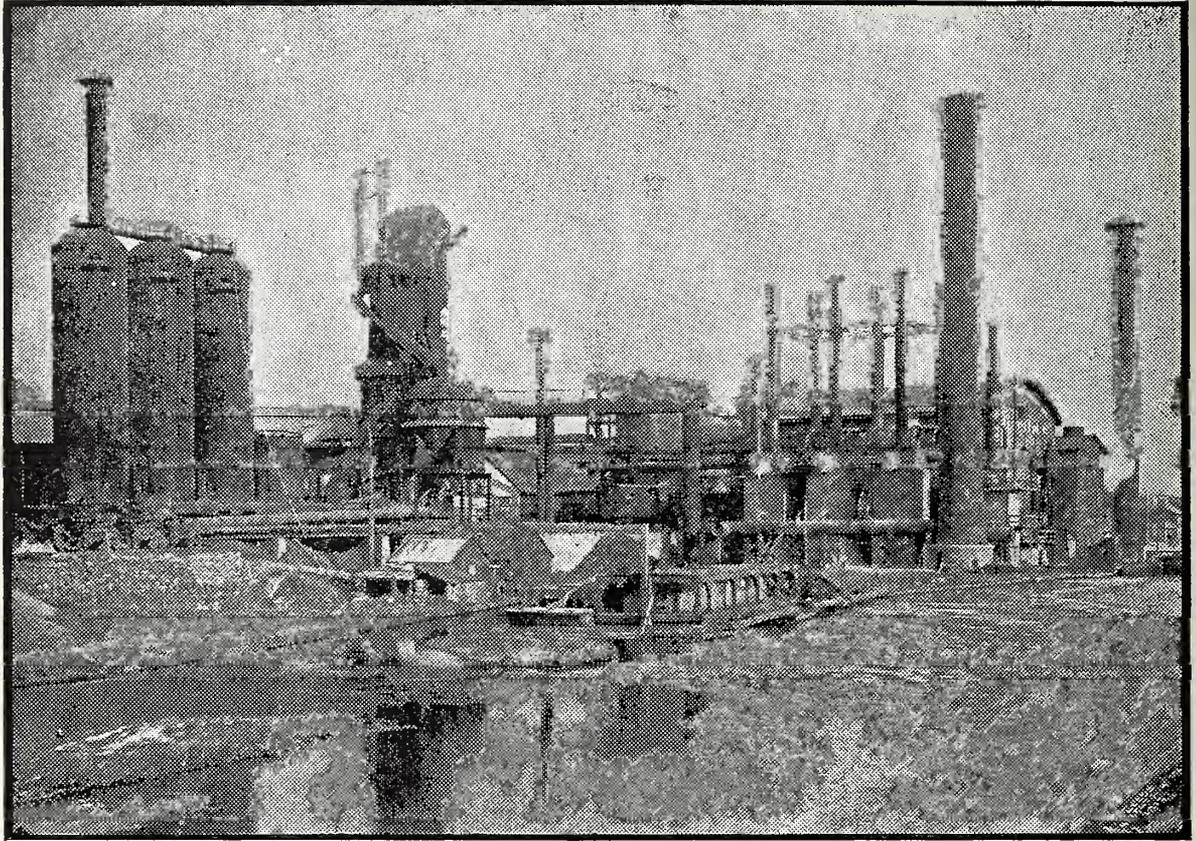

At first, Thomas was reluctant to leave his native land, but, influenced by a liberal offer, besides the consideration that his sons would have better opportunities in America than they could hope for in Wales or Great Britain, he consented, and on the night of the last day in the year 1838, he entered into an agreement with Mr. Hazard.

It should be mentioned in this connection that Solomon W. Roberts went to Cardiff, Wales, in 1836, as an inspector of rails which were ordered by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, and other railroad companies. He visited the Crane Iron Works in May, 1837, and then informed his uncle, Josiah White, of the successful use of anthracite coal in the manufacture of iron there. He returned in November, bringing the details of Crane's plans and specifications illustrative of the process. He was asked to take up the manufacture, but declined and recommended one of Crane's associates. In accordance with his recommendation, Erskine Hazard, of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, went to Wales in November, 1838, and Hazard secured the services of Mr. Thomas.

In the Spring of 1839, Samuel Glace, while inspecting the canal along Biery's Port, noticed a number of men standing on the east side of the canal, which led him to think that there might be a leak in its bed, and so he asked the lock-tender, Jonathan Snyder, who they were. He then recognized Owen Rice and Frederick Biery, and they introduced him to the strangers as gentlemen from Philadelphia. Shortly afterward, he received orders from Mauch Chunk, to ascerwhen the other machinery arrived, the projectors of the works were as badly off as if none had been sent.

There was not at that time a foundry in the United States large enough to cast such cylinders as were needed. There were small foundries at Allentown and Bethlehem. The company applied to the Allaire Works of New York, and the Alger, of Boston, but neither of them could bore a 5-foot cylinder without enlarging their works, tain if there were any quicksands along the canal at Biery's Port. These were the men who selected the site for the furnace where the first iron was made in America with the use of anthracite coal, which proved a commercial success.

CRANE IRON WORKS.

Mr. Thomas sailed from Liverpool on May 13, 1839, and reached New York June 5th. He brought with him his whole family. Before leaving England he had made the blowing machinery and castings for the hot-blast, and all were shipped except the two cylinders, which were too large for the hatches of the ship. So, which they were unwilling to do. Mr. Thomas then went to Philadelphia to the Southwark Foundry of S. V. Merrick and J. H. Towne, who enlarged their boring machinery and made the required cylinders.

Fire-brick were imported from Wales, none being manufactured in this country, and in August, 1839, ground was broken at Craneville (now Catasauqua) for the first furnace.

After many difficulties and discouragements, the furnace was finally blown in at five o'clock July 3, 1840. The ore was two-thirds hematite to one-third New Jersey magnetic. It was blown with two-and-a-half-inch nozzles, and the blast heat was 600 degrees.

The first run of iron was made the 4th of July, and proved a great success. From this time its manufacture by anthracite was successfully conducted at the Crane Works, and continuously except for the slight cessations common to all manufacturing establishments.

Furnace No. 1, in which the success of the new discovery was first fully demonstrated in this country, was 42 feet in height, with 12 feet bosh. It was operated by a breast-wheel 12 feet in diameter and 24 feet long, geared by segments on its circumference to a spur-wheel on a double crank, driving two blowing cylinders, 5 feet in diameter, with a 6-foot stroke, worked by beams on a gallows-frame. The motive power was the water of the canal, the difference between the upper and lower levels of lock No. 36. The furnace remained in blast until its fires were quenched by the rising waters of the flood of January, 1841, a period of six months, during which time 1,088 tons of pig iron were produced. The largest output for one week was 52 tons.

The furnace was blown in again after the freshet May 18, 1841, and continued in blast until August 6, 1842, producing in this time 3,316 tons of pig iron.

Mr. Thomas had been looked upon as a visionary and the remark was made by a leading charcoal iron-master that he would eat all the iron Mr. Thomas made with anthracite coal.

Other Furnaces Erected.—This successful operation led the company to put up one furnace after another to supply the increasing demands of their trade, until they had six in operation, as follows: 1842. Furnace No. 2, 45 feet high; 14 feet bosh. 1846. Furnace No. 3, 50 feet high; 18 feet bosh. 1849. Furnace No. 4, 50 feet high; 18 feet bosh. 1849. Furnace No. 5, 50 feet high; 18 feet bosh. 1868. Furnace No. 6, 60 feet high; 17 feet bosh.

The first load of iron ore was brought to the works on April 30, 1840, by Henry Hoch. It was hematite from the mine of Jacob Rice in Hanover township, Lehigh county. One was brought during the first year from the mine of Nathan Whitely, near Breinigsville, in Upper Macungie township; and one from the mine of John Kratzer, in South Whitehall township. In 1842, the celebrated Goetz bed was opened in Hanover township, Northampton county, and the first ore was taken to the Crane furnace.

The first magnetic ore was brought from the Mount Hope mine in Morris county, N. J., in 1840.

In the erection of the furnaces no machinery was used. Trees were cut down and set up as poles, to which ropes and chains were fastened and these held scantling in place at intervals; planks were laid as a floor on this scantling and on this floor heavy stones were pulled up to the masons on small two-wheeled carts with long handles.

A large blowing-engine was afterward erected, because the water-wheels were not powerful enough to furnish blast for all the furnaces, even though a small engine had been erected at an earlier date. This necessitated more room, and Bridge street (which ran in a direct line to the Canal) had to be vacated and located as at present.

Canal Bridge Moved.—The question then was how to remove the canal bridge to the new location, and Samuel Glace; an experienced superintendent on the canal, solved it. He waited until the boating season was over; then he placed two empty boats under the bridge and drew the water from the canal, which put the boats on the ground; then he placed long blocks on the boats and covered them with planks; then the water was let into the canal, which raised the boats and put the bridge up in the air and then the bridge was easily drawn to its new position.

Public Interest.—The manufacture of iron was quite a curiosity, and down to the Civil War, for a period of 20 years, the works were visited by many people of prominence, including Sir Morton Peto, Simon Cameron, Horace Greeley, and Dom Pedro (Emperor of Brazil). The bridge house was at times crowded with people, and it became a custom of the villagers to come to the evening cast.

The teams which brought iron ore from the mines were sometimes more than two miles in length, reaching from the Crane Iron Company scales out to Eberhard's quarry on the Mickley road. The roads in the county were frequently made impassable to the farmers and this reconciled them to the proposed C. & F. R. R. The magnetic ore was brought from New Jersey in loads and hoisted on an inclined plane by horse-power and then piled up in front of the furnaces 60 feet high.

The coal was brought by boats and piled up on the site of the new canal, opposite the Bryden Horse Shoe Works, in immense quantities. In the winter season it was placed on barrows, then taken on huge scows to the furnaces, ready for use. This was done night and day during the entire winter. On one of the midnight trips, Hugh Dougherty was missing, and found drowned. His funeral was the first Catholic funeral in town. The interment was made at Easton.

Immense quantities of coal were also hoisted by buckets and piled in great heaps on the site of No. 6 Furnace (which was torn down in February, 1914.) The opening of the L. V. R. R. and C. & F. R. R. changed this, and many costly improvements had to be made to meet these new conditions.

The six furnaces operated by the company for many years have been reduced to two. The men employed vary from 300 to 500.

The company erected numerous small two-story brick and frame dwellings in the First ward of the borough for the convenience of its workmen, numbering altogether 95, put up at the same time as the furnace. It has also 5 dwellings in the Second ward, 3 in the Third, and one in the Fourth; total assessed, 104.

Iron Curiosities.—At the laboratory of the Crane Iron Works there are two interesting curiosities on the north side of the building which look like the mouths of two projecting cannon. They were placed there in 1907 as mementos. They are abandoned tuyeres, which had been in the furnaces, through which the hot-blast was forced. The one next to the pavement was in the first furnace, erected in 1840.

The company made an assignment in 1893; a re-organization was effected under the name of the Crane Iron Works, and it passed under the control of the Empire Steel and Iron Company. Its main office was at Philadelphia from 1839 to 1895; then it was transferred to the Front street office at Catasauqua, opposite the furnace, where it continued until 1908, when it was removed to the Empire Steel and Iron Company building on Bridge street.

The Empire Steel and Iron Company removed its offices from New York City to Catasauqua in 1900, locating in the Crane Iron Works office building, and continued there until 1908, when they were transferred to the superior three-story brick building on Bridge street, which the company erected at a cost of $20,000.

Besides the Crane Iron Works, other companies, controlled by the Empire Steel & Iron Company, with offices here, are the Mt. Hope R. R. Co., and the Victoria Coal and Coke Co., of West Virginia.

Leonard Peckitt, president of this company since 1899, became chief chemist of the works in 1888, and since 1890 has been prominently identified with its management.

Fire-Brick Works.—David Thomas, Oliver A. Ritter, and Samuel McHose embarked in the manufacture of fire-bricks at Catasauqua in 1868, and they continued together until 1873, when Thomas became the sole owner. Then his sons, Samuel and John, and son-in-law, Joshua Hunt, associated with him to continue the business. They traded as the Lehigh Fire-Brick Co., and manufactured all kinds of fire-bricks for furnaces, ovens, arches, jams, boshes, and cupolas. Upon the decease of the senior partner, in 1882, the company was incorporated; and in 1903, when a re-organization was effected, it was re-incorporated with the same capital, $60,000.

In 1872 the plant was destroyed by fire and immediately rebuilt. The stone buildings put up then are still in use. They are situated along the canal, between the Wint Planing Mill and the Bryden Horse-shoe Works. Two kilns are in operation, and the annual production is one and a half millions. The directors and officers are L. H. McHose, president; Charles T. Evans, secretary and treasurer, and D. G. Dery.

Foundries.—Union Foundry and Machine Co. was started in 1851, by John Fritz and Brother, who established a plant at the southeast corner of Front and Pine streets for the purpose of carrying on a general foundry and machine business, and here the first foundry was put up in the Lehigh Valley for the production of cast-iron columns, which came to be shipped to all parts of the United States.

The plant was sold to William Michel and David Thomas, and afterward David Thomas became the owner. In 1869 Thomas sold it to Oliver Williams, David Williams, and William Hopkins, and they operated the works successfully till 1882, when they enlarged the buildings to meet the demands of their increasing business. They carried on the plant until 1891; then Hopkins sold his interest to the partners, and shortly afterward they were incorporated with Oliver Williams as president, and his nephew, J. Arthur Williams, as secretary and treasurer. In 1901 they were obliged to locate elsewhere so as to secure larger quarters. They accordingly established a plant along the north side of Race street, between the river and the canal, on 7 acres of ground, and here they carried on business for four years, when the company failed, and Leonard Peckitt purchased the plant.

Catasauqua Casting Co.—After the Union Foundry plant remained idle for two years a new organization was effected in 1907, which was called the Catasauqua Casting Co., and placed under the management of Frederick Conlin, for the manufacture of all kinds of castings. It was continued in operation until 1912, when it suspended, and since then the plant has been idle. The employees numbered from 100 to 150.

Davies and Thomas Foundry is situated in the Third ward, along the main thoroughfare, and the extensive plant covers 20 acres of ground, with the Catasauqua creek running through the premises.

This great and successful enterprise was started in 1865 by Daniel Davies, and associated with him were his son, George, and William Thomas, who traded under the firm name of Davies, Thomas & Co. In 1868, the Thomas interest was purchased by his partners and they carried on the business until the father died in 1876; then James Thomas (a brother-in-law of George Davies) purchased this interest in the works and the partnership of Davies and Thomas Co. was formed for the continued manufacture of general foundry and machine work, vertical and horizontal engines, car castings, and appliances for furnaces, mills, and mines. The plant comprised a number of brick buildings, covering a floor space of 35,000 feet. Five vertical engines were required to supply the motive power; the employees numbered from 175 to 200; and to facilitate its extensive shipments it was connected with the Central R. R. of New Jersey.

In 1894 the business was incorporated with a capital of $300,000. The estimated value of the plant in January, 1914, was $500,000, and in a general way the buildings have become four times what they were in 1876, with the employees numbering from 250 to 500, depending upon the conditions of the trade. Their productions are sent to all parts of the United States and to Canada.

This company is recognized as the pioneer in the manufacture of iron plates for lining tunnels under rivers by the shield method. Since 1905, it has supplied the extensive tubes for the sub-aqueous tunnels which have been put into successful operation from New York City to Jersey City, to Long Island City, and to Brooklyn; and it is now engaged in supplying the plates for a very extensive sewer at Brooklyn in the Corona District. These tunnels are admittedly marvelous accomplishments as great pieces of engineering; but this company in supplying the tunnel-plates is equally worthy of special recognition, because their production required the most exacting manipulation of materials, besides the nicest discrimination in successfully meeting the extraordinary demands of the contract; and this success secured a great distinction for the borough of Catasauqua.

In this connection it may be mentioned that the foundry was not fitted for such a great undertaking, but had to be changed to suit the occasion. These changes were designed and made by James Thomas, and he was encouraged in the new enterprise by the children of his deceased partner, George Davies, which evidences the superior and courageous spirit of the company, and their complete success merits all possible praise.

The directors and officers of the company are: Leonard Peckitt, president.

Harry E. Graffin, secretary and treasurer.

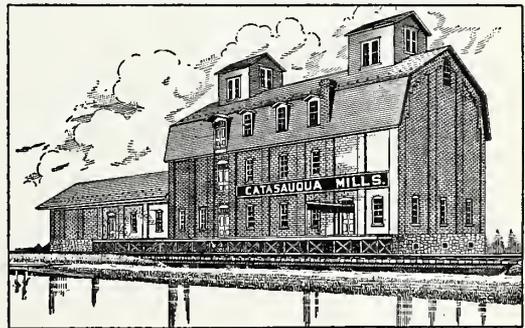

Hopkins Thomas, general manager.

George Davies, Rowland D. Thomas.

Of these George Davies and Harry E. Graffin (his brother-in-law), are the successors of George Davies, deceased; Hopkins Thomas and Rowland D. Thomas are the successors of James Thomas, deceased, and C. R. Horn, general agent at New York City, is a son-in-law.

George Davies died in 1894; James Thomas died in 1906.

McIntyre Foundry.—Robert J. McIntyre was foreman for a time in the New York City Iron Works, where he learned under his experienced father the business of putting up structural iron buildings, and then he filled the position of superintendent of the Union Foundry Co. at Catasauqua for nine years. In 1893 he leased the foundry of the Crane Iron Co., which was situated at the foot of Willow street, along the canal, east of the furnace, and there he produced all kinds of rolling-mill, furnace, and architectural castings, besides filling orders from the Crane Iron Co. He carried on the business for three years, then removed to Allentown.

MAUSER AND CRESSMAN MILL.

Garages.—The first garage at Catasauqua was established in April, 1911, on Pine street, at Railroad alley, by Nicholas J. Dungan and William H. Wentz for repairing automobiles. It is a one-story frame building, built in octagonal form, on a lot 90 by 100 feet, and is equipped with the necessary machinery. Wentz sold his interest to Philip Lynch, in July, following, and since then the garage has been carried on under the name of Lynch and Dungan.

In 1913, Preston H. Kratzer also opened a garage in connection with his motor-car works.

The residents of Catasauqua have shown a great appreciation of the automobile for business and pleasure purposes. About 130 automobiles were in the borough in January, 1914, many of them of a costly style.

Grist-Mill.—A grist-mill was erected at the mouth of the Catasauqua creek about 1752, and it was operated by the waters of this creek, but it is not known who built it and first engaged in the milling business.

In 1782 John Benezet, of Philadelphia, sold the land (then embracing 300 acres) to David Frederick operated the mill from 1801 to the time of his death, in 1845. Then Solomon Biery (Frederick's son) and Thomas Frederick became the owners and carried it on ten years. It was a small stone building, run by an overshot water-wheel.

In 1855 William Younger and Milton Berger (who were cousins) purchased the property and conducted the business under the name of Berger & Younger until 1871, when Berger died and Younger became the sole owner, and during this time it is believed the water power was secured from the canal. Younger improved the plant by enlarging and introducing a large turbine water wheel, and he developed the business to a remarkable degree, thereby enhancing the value of the property. He continued the business until 1891, when he was obliged to make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the National Bank of Catasauqua (which had given him much financial assistance for a period of twenty years) was obliged to buy the mill and all the property connected with it. This was subdivided by the bank and sold off in parts to different parties. The grist-mill and adjoining property was purchased by George S. Mauser, in 1895, for his son, Franklin B. Mauser, and son-in-law, Allen H. Cressman, and they have since carried on the milling business under the name of Mauser & Cressman in a successful manner. It was burned down in 1898; then the land was sold to the firm, and they rebuilt the mill and equipped it with modern machinery. The water-power from the canal, until 1895, was supplied through a channel two by four feet; then it was enlarged to 6 by 14 feet, to meet the demands of the trade. The daily production was increased to 200 barrels. This is the first industrial site in the borough.

WAHNETAH SILK MILL.

Deshler, of Allentown, but there was no mention made of a grist mill. In 1785, however, in the assessment list, Deshler is mentioned as the owner of 350 acres in Allen township, including a grist-mill, which is the first record evidence of this mill. It is also mentioned as "Deshler's Mill" on the Howell Map of Pennsylvania, which was published in 1792. He died in 1796. Subsequently Jacob Newhard became the owner of it, and in 1801 he (and his wife Mary) conveyed it to Frederick Biery and his brother, Henry. Soon afterward Henry sold his interest to Frederick and removed to New York.

Included with the mill property is a fine two-story cut-stone dwelling, which was erected by Frederick Biery in 1830. It is still in a good state of preservation and reflects the superior workmanship of the masons and carpenters of that period, four-score years ago.

Horse-shoe Works.—In 1882 Joshua Hunt, Oliver Williams, and P. F. Greenwood associated together for the purpose of manufacturing forged horse-shoes under a patent of George Bryden from Hartford, Conn. They erected a one-story brick-building on the northwest corner of Railroad and Strawberry alleys (the site being now at the rear of the American Mechanics' Hall), which they equipped with necessary machinery, and they traded under the name of Bryden Horse-Shoe Co. They had in use two forge-hammers, employed 30 hands, and produced daily three tons of horse shoes under the management of Mr. Greenwood. The bar-iron was received from the Catasauqua Rolling Mill, with which Williams was prominently identified.

They continued there until 1889; then the company established a larger plant, north of Chapel street between Front street and the canal, and placed it under the management of Jacob Roberts, an experienced mechanic, from Poughkeepsie; and there the plant has been continued with increasing success until now, with gradual enlargements to meet the demands of the trade. It has come to be recognized as one of the largest plants of the kind in the world,—the buildings covering seven acres of ground, the daily production being from 40 to 50 tons of horse-shoes, and the employees numbering from 250 to 300. When the plant was first established on Front street, the capital was $100,000; but this has been increased until now it is more than $600,000. The development and success of this great enterprise at Catasauqua was mainly attributable to the superior management of Mr. Roberts, from the time he took charge of it, in 1889, until he died, in 1906.

During the Boer War of 1899-1900, this company supplied the British War Department with a carload of horse and mule shoes weekly; and since then the company has received orders from that government.

The shoes are made in many varieties and shipped to all parts of the world.

Oliver Williams was at the head of the enterprise until he died in 1894. He was succeeded by George E. Holton (his son-in-law) who served as president and treasurer until his decease in 1913. Mrs. Holton, the widow, has since officiated.

Machinery.—The Lenox Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1898, by a number of enterprising men, including Oliver Williams, Jacob Roberts, and Sydney Heilig, of Catasauqua, for the manufacture of special machines of various kinds, more especially buttonhole workers, tackers, attachments for sewing-machines, button-covering machines and "Lenox" cash-registers. They secured the old and abandoned two-story brick building of the school district on Second street, which had been occupied for school purposes for upwards of 40 years, and this was equipped with necessary machinery. Business has been conducted there until the present time under the management of William Hargraves, with 9 to 12 hands, and a capital of $30,000.

Motor-Car Works.—On Oct. 1, 1913, Preston H. Kratzer embarked in the business of manufacturing light motor trucks, with various types of bodies and top covers; also of general repair work to automobiles and motor-trucks. He established a plant in South Catasauqua, along the River road, in the building where he had conducted the South-End Planing-Mill from 1903 to that time. It was damaged by fire in February, 1914.

Planing Mills—About 1860, John H. Knauss and a Mr. Harwig associated together as Knauss & Harwig, to conduct a planing mill business on Race street at the Catasauqua creek, and there they erected and equipped a building on the east bank (where the Davies & Thomas Foundry is located). They operated the plant for several years, then Knauss became the sole owner; but he had just assumed the ownership when it was destroyed by fire through little children playing with matches around the mill, and it was a total loss because the insurance policies were not promptly transferred to him. The Humane Fire Company ran to the rescue but to no avail. Many of the by-standers assisted in manipulating the hand engine or in forming a bucket-brigade to supply the engine with water from the mill-dam 200 feet off, one row of men passing the empty buckets to the dam, and another row passing the full buckets to the engine. After the fire, the site was secured by Daniel Davies for a foundry and machine shop.

Previous to the planing-mill a distillery had been carried on at this place for many years by Geo. W. Bogh and his brothers. They fed many hogs on the premises which squealed so much that the settlement there came to be called "hog-town," and the name was generally continued until East Catasauqua was annexed to the borough as the Third ward.

Previous to 1850, Nathan Fegley, from Mauch Chunk, was engaged for some time in conducting a lumber yard on Church street, where the Town Hall is now located. He returned to Mauch Chunk about 1850, and was succeeded by John Stoddard, of White Haven, who then established a yard at the southeast corner of Front and Spring streets, on land leased from Owen Swartz. He shipped lumber died in 1882. Rufus W. Wint was admitted into the firm, and the name was continued until 1900, when Frank J. Fatzinger and Oliver A. Fatzinger each purchased an interest and a limited partnership was formed. Since then the business has been conducted under the name of F. W. Wint Co., Lt'd.

About 1870 saw and planing mills were established on the premises, and as the business developed the plant was gradually enlarged, more especially in 1902 when a large adjoining lot on the south extending from Front street to the canal was purchased which had been occupied by the Catasauqua Rolling-Mill.

The partnership is capitalized at $60,000; a stock of several million feet of lumber is carried on hand, including a "dry-kiln" with a capacity of 175,000 feet, much of it under cover,

GOLDSMITH & SON.

in boats by the Canal from White Haven and Swartz acted as his agent. This was continued several years, when Swartz bought the business and conducted it until 1863. Then Horatio D. Yäger became a partner, and the business was carried on under the name of Swartz & Yäger until 1870. Swartz then sold his interest to Ferdinand W. Wint, and the business was carried on as Yäger and Wint until 1872, when George W. Cyphers was admitted as a partner, and the firm name was changed to Yäger, Wint & Cyphers. Cyphers died in 1873, and his interest having been purchased by his partners, the firm name was changed to H. D. Yäger & Co. The business was conducted under this name only a year, when Yäger sold his interest, and a new firm was created, consisting of Mr. Wint, Owen F. Fatzinger, and James P. Wint, who traded as F. W. Wint & Co. The senior partner to meet the demands of its extensive trade; and the employees number from 60 to 75. All kinds of building materials are manufactured on orders from building contractors and shipped to all parts of the Lehigh Valley.

A planing-mill is situated at the east end of the Third ward, in Catasauqua, on Race street. It was erected and equipped with the necessary machinery by Franklin Goldsmith, in 1909, for the purpose of supplying all kinds of building materials, and he has since conducted business there in a successful manner. The firm is now Goldsmith & Son, by the admission of Frank R. A. Goldsmith. The building is 86 by 110 feet; a running supply of 300,000 feet of lumber is kept on hand, much of it under cover; and 40 hands are employed. The trade reaches out into all parts of the Lehigh Valley.

A planing mill was carried on from 1903 to 1913, by Preston H. Kratzer. It was situated in the south end of the borough along the River road, and was converted into a Motor Car works in 1913.

Pine Olein Factory.—In 1909, T. C. Smith and Franklin Trumbauer, of Allentown, bought a secret process for manufacturing a sweeping compound and general disinfectant, which they named "Pine Olein." They established their factory at the foot of Spring street along the canal, and while carrying on the business improved the product by experimenting with different combinations. Franklin J. Fatzinger, Owen A. Fatzinger, and Rufus W. G. Wint became the owners, and the business is being conducted under the name of Pine Olein Manufacturing Co.

Quarry Equipment.—In 1881, Joseph Matchette, a veteran captain of the Civil War, of Catasauqua, embarked in the business of equipping quarries with compressors, drills, hammers, pumps, and sundry supplies for taking out slate and limestone, and he extended his trade throughout the Lehigh, Perkiomen, East Penn, Schuylkill, Lebanon and Conestoga Valleys. He was the first to introduce in the last three valleys the steam drill for boring purposes, and the use of dynamite and the electric battery for blasting purposes, which greatly facilitated the removal of large quantities of rock at reduced cost.

In 1891 his son, Joseph D., became a partner, and since then they have conducted the business under the firm name of Joseph Matchette & Son.

Capt. Matchette was the agent of the Dupont Powder Mills, in the southeastern section of Pennsylvania, for nearly thirty years supplying his extensive trade with powder.

Rolling Mill.—In 1863 a number of enterprising men of Catasauqua associated under the name of the Northern Iron Co., for the manufacture of armor plate for war vessels, and also rails; and they erected a mill along the canal north of Pine street. It was capitalized at $100,000, which was afterward increased to $500,000. The management was under David Thomas, president; Charles G. Earp, secretary and treasurer, and David Eynon, superintendent; but just as they had gotten ready to carry on the plant, the Civil War ended; then they changed the extensive equipment to the manufacture of tank and boiler plates, afterward adding sheet-iron, and by 1867 the production came to be 6,000 tons. In 1868 the name was changed to the Catasauqua Manufacturing Co.

In 1864 a large rolling-mill was put up at Ferndale on the west side of the Lehigh river, a mile south of Catasauqua, for the manufacture of bar and skelp iron, and the business was carried on for a time under the name of East Penn Iron Co.; which was afterward changed to Lehigh Manufacturing Co.

In 1868 the plant was leased to the Catasauqua Manufacturing Co., and in 1872 this company purchased the plant. David Thomas and his sons, Samuel and John, were at the head of the company. Then Oliver Williams became the president by reason of his large interest in the Catasauqua mill.

In 1882 the total production of the two mills was 36,000 tons, with 600 employees; and the estimated value was $2,000,000.

A small mill was erected south of the mill near Pine street, which was named Mill C, and another was erected north of the Ferndale plant which was named Mill D.

These plants were in successful operation until 1892, and had a national reputation for the manufacture of all kinds of bar and merchantable iron, which was shipped to all parts of the United States. Before this time their financial standing was first-class and the works were kept running in a most successful manner. Then a strike arose, the panic followed, and this great company failed.

The Catasauqua plants were dismantled, and the land came to be owned by the F. W. Wint Co. The Ferndale plants were sold to James W. Fuller, who organized the Lehigh Foundry Co., and transferred the establishments to it.

Rubber Works.—In 1900 a company was organized at Catasauqua for the manufacture of a new metal out of a secret combination of copper and other materials which was to be harder than steel, and a plant was erected and equipped with machinery in East Catasauqua along the creek; but after some experimentation the enterprise proved a total failure and much money was lost.

A rubber company was then organized, which secured the building, equipped it with the necessary machinery and proceeded to manufacture certain rubber goods, such as fruit-jar rings, rubber heels and soles, door mats and rubber webbing materials, but after running the plant several years this also resulted in failure.

In 1910 a company was organized at Trenton, N. J., comprising Isaac Fineberg, Henry Bernstein, Antonio de Piano, Piano Rossa and Joseph Maher and his brother William, and they were incorporated under the name of Leicester Rubber Co., for the manufacture of rubber goods by the reclaiming process, such as automobile mats, door mats, stair mats, jar rings, shoe soles and heels, etc., and there they have since carried on the business. In the summer of 1913 they secured the rubber plant mentioned and embarked in the business at Catasauqua on September 4th. Since then they have conducted the business in a successful manner, employing from 20 to 25 hands. New machinery was installed and the capacity of the plant was increased. The building is two-story, 60 by 175 feet.

Stone Works.—In 1903 Daniel Milson embarked in the business of quarrying and crushing stone on the property of the Deily Estate, to the rear of the Wahnetah Silk Mill. The quarried stones were supplied to the furnace of the Crane Iron Co. for fluxing, and the crushed stones to contractors for concrete work. He employed 20 men, produced about 200 tons a day, and continued there seven years. Then he rented and produce upwards of 6,000 tons of materials for roofing, concreting, public roads, and railroads. Morgan Emanuel and his son, David, had previously been engaged in the business for a number of years.

SILK MILLS.—There are three silk mills carried on at Catasauqua.

Dery Mill.—D. G. Dery located at Catasauqua in 1897, and embarked in the manufacture of broad silks. He erected a fine three-story brick building at the foot of Front street, along Race, 150 feet front by 50 feet in depth, equipped it with the necessary machinery and started with 200 hands. After conducting the plant successfully for two years he enlarged it by adding a three-story brick building of the same dimensions at right angles, making the structure in the quarry of Henry Kurtz, in the Third ward and there he has carried on the business until now. He erected a new modern crusher with a daily capacity of 500 tons and employs from 20 to 25 hands.

DERY SILK MILL.

Henry Kurtz had previously carried on his quarry for many years for burning lime and supplying a superior blue cut-stone for building purposes, and in this business he was succeeded by his son. Jonas Biery also carried on extensive quarry operations supplying thousands of tons of limestone to the Crane Iron Co.

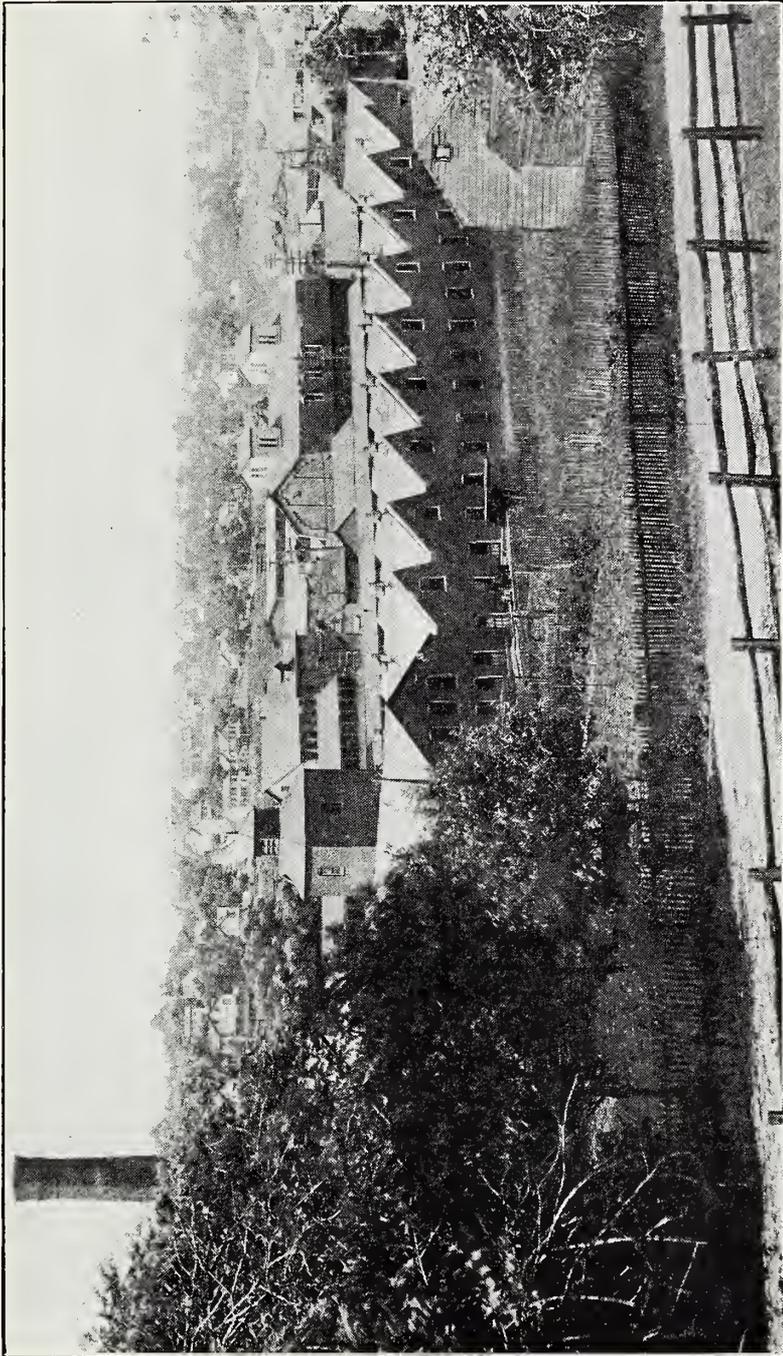

David L. Emanuel and others, under the name of Emanuel & Co., started a crusher plant at the slag bank of the Crane Iron Works in 1910, and the business has since been carried on by the company. They employ from 25 to 40 hands the form of an L which he also equipped with machinery. Since then he has carried on the business in a most successful manner, affording constant employment to 400 hands.

During this time Mr. Dery established fifteen other silk mills at different places, fourteen being in Pennsylvania, which he has conducted in a similar manner. His employees altogether number 3,600. The principal office for all his establishments is at Allentown, embracing all the rooms on the seventh floor of the Allentown National Bank building.

The home of Mr. Dery is at Catasauqua, a spacious, three-story brick Colonial building on a large plot of ground.

Wahnetah Mill is situated on the road to Allentown, beyond the Catasauqua creek, near the grist-mill. It was organized in 1890, with a capital of $125,000 by James Thomas, Frank M. Horn, James W. Fuller, Samuel Thomas, Edwin Thomas, C. R. Horn, William W. McKee and George Davies, for the manufacture of silk plushes and fabrics. Alexander Pfeffer was engaged as the general manager and he was sent to England to secure the necessary machinery and a supply of silk, and the mill was erected in 1892. The capital was increased to $200,000, and the business was conducted under varying circumstances until 1900.

VIEW OF WEST CATASAUQUA AND WAHNETAH MILL.

William R. Thomas was then engaged as the superintendent and he has managed the increasing business in a most satisfactory manner. The manufacture of plushes was abandoned and in 1902 broad silk looms were installed; and in 1903 one hundred looms were in operation. Since then the plant has been much enlarged, and in January, 1914, there were about 700 looms in operation with 400 hands.

Catasauqua Mill.—James J. Seyfried, Edward J. Smith, and Wilson J. Smith associated together in 1911 as the Catasauqua Silk Co., for the manufacture of broad silks in the borough. They purchased a two-story frame factory building on Race street between the river and canal, and equipped it with the necessary machinery; and they have since conducted the business in a successful manner. Their annual production, which runs from $60,000 to $70,000, is shipped to New York City. They employ from 20 to 30 hands.

Tinsmith Shops.—Charles G. Schneller in 1854 engaged in the business of tinsmith and dealer in hardware and stoves, locating at Front and Strawberry streets, in Catasauqua, and there he continued in business until 1887. His son, Charles W., became a partner in 1881, and in 1887 secured the entire business; since then he has conducted it in a successful manner. He employs four hands. The Schneller Row (three-story brick) was erected there in 1868. Mr. Schneller died in 1909, aged 88 years.

Charles Schneider has been engaged in this business at Catasauqua since 1872; since 1900 at his present stand, No. 108 S. Second street.

John P. Schneller (brother of Charles W.), has been at No. 120 Front street since 1880, though he had carried on the business in the borough for several short periods before.

Samuel P. Gemmel started in 1893; and since 1897 he has conducted the business at No. 312 Second street.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.—The first work done in the village in 1839 was the building of a two-story frame house opposite the site of the furnaces which, within six months after coming to this country, was occupied by Mr. Thomas and his family.

There was built at the same time a row of "shanties" from Second street to Limestone alley; also frame houses from Limestone alley to near Howertown Road, which were surrounded by a front yard, with fences neatly whitewashed. The occupants were the clerks and bosses at the works. This was the "boulevard" of the village.

A brick row was built on Wood street from Limestone alley to Howertown Road, and each house was generally occupied by four families. Some of their descendants now living in large houses were born there.

In 1839 there were few, if any, coal burning stoves. Every thrifty tenant had his cord of wood sawed, chopped, and piled in the cellar.

Bake-ovens were erected; one on Wood street, the other on Church; and their fires were burning from Monday morning till Saturday night, for the neighbors took their turn. The dough was prepared and placed in straw baskets; then, by a dexterous movement, upturned on a wooden tray or shovel, and pushed into the ovens. Occasionally, some belated housewife would come and beg the privilege of putting only a small pie into the oven if there were still room.

After the water was introduced, several spigots were on Wood and Church streets, the only streets in the village where the mains were laid. The water was taken from the Lehigh river, but then it was free from impurities and adulterations.

The first streets were opened on the land of Frederick Biery, from Race street to Wood, as far as his land extended. As the village grew in the centre, Second street was opened to Church and made crooked so as not to interfere with buildings already erected. When it was extended to Middle alley, a stop was made at the line of Henry Breisch's land and the street was fenced off. Prior to this time, Second street had been opened by John Peter from Bridge street north, and when Second street was extended northward another crook was necessary to make the connection.

Meanwhile, Bridge street was opened, and, in order to make it correspond with Church street, it also was made crooked, otherwise the lines would have overlapped and the lots would have become too long. Strange to say, the alleys between Church and Bridge streets were run as if these streets were at right angles. The consequence was that the lots on Bridge street at alleys were sliced off at the point of intersection. While this was not considered when the lots were cheap, in after years, when parties began to measure up and find themselves short from 8 to 12 inches, law suits arose, bitter feeling was developed and expensive litigation naturally followed. Such was the situation on both sides of the street but it would not have occurred if the points of intersection had been a right angle.

In 1839, there were four public roads which lay within the present boundary of Catasauqua:

One extended from the dam along the canal west of the Faust farm house, crossing Front street where it is intersected by Chapel street, and proceeding due east along the north side of the Breisch farm house (near the site of Dr. Daniel Yoder's residence) to the Howertown Road.

borough, which lowered the surface several feet between Union street and School alley, and required high stoops before the residences, as they are now seen.

In 1848, Second street was laid out from Race to Church, by direction of the Court.

Building Lots.—During the period from 1845 to 1860, this town grew in population. The Biery lots were sold on Front and Second streets to Wood; and John Peter sold his lots on those streets from Bridge to the borough line. The balance of the Peter farm was sold to David Thomas. Henry Breisch also sold his farm, lying between Second and Third streets from Church to Pine, to David Thomas.

But Thomas for years sold very few lots,

PINE STREET BRIDGE.

The second from the Biery grist mill due east over the Deily hill by the farm house to a point where the road forks in the Third ward toward Bethlehem.

The third from the mill race over the county bridge in the Third ward.

The fourth was the Howertown Road which originally extended due north on the west side of the Biery farm house to a point at Union street where it joined the road as it is at present, the last portion having been vacated long ago.

In 1841, Front street was laid out by the Court, but it was known for some time as Cinder street because the slag from the furnaces was hauled on it to make it passable in wet weather. It was graded in 1853 by Elias Mertz, surveyor, right after the incorporation of the which eventually proved to be a good feature, because it paved the way for many fine residences between Second street and Howertown Road and from Bridge street to Walnut. Third street was only opened in 1870, twelve years prior to his death; and Fourth and Fifth streets were opened some years after his death in the settlement of his estate. The population at this time was 2,853.

Bridges.—There were two bridges across the river in the early history of the town; the Biery Bridge, erected as a chain structure in 1824, and maintained as such until 1852, when it was removed on account of its insecurity. A covered wooden structure was then erected in its place, and this was continued as a private toll-bridge until 1892, when the county purchased it and an iron structure was built to accommodate the increased public and trolley traffic. The Crane Iron Co. bridge was erected by the company for its own uses in 1845 and since maintained. A third bridge, built of iron, was established at Pine street by the county in 1906.

Water Works.—When Catasauqua was founded in 1839 the water rights and land west of the canal, from the Hokendauqua Dam to the Allentown Dam were ceded to the Lehigh Crane Iron Co. by the canal company as a substantial inducement to capitalists to erect furnaces here and develop an increased market for coal as a feeder to the canal project. At that time, the towns along the Lehigh river north to the coal mines were few, and it never entered into the minds of the investors that the stream would become the sewer system of populous boroughs and hundreds of coal mines.

When the first furnace was erected, the blast power was secured from the canal, a new canal having been excavated which was afterward used as the main channel. The pump to furnish water for furnace use was attached to a blast wheel, which remained in use until No. 3 furnace was completed in 1844. More convenient water facilities for the town were required and then a 4-inch main was laid from the pump to Wood street, up Wood to Second, up Second to Church, and thence to a basin located on that street above Church alley.

The leakage from this basin eventually undermined the limestone soil, and necessitated its abandonment and a wooden tank was erected. In 1854, a 4-inch main was laid on Front street, as far as Bridge, and in 1856, a 3-inch main was extended up Second street, as far as Strawberry alley, to supply the new residence of David Thomas. This pipe was recently discovered while laying the new mains on that street, and it was found almost closed with corrosion. The same year the Front street main was extended to the new rolling mill, and subsequently as far as Puddlers' Row, above Chapel.

When this was about to be done originally, it would seem that David Thomas wrote to his son Samuel, then at Nazareth (going to school), to stop off at Bethlehem and take measurements of the pump used there to supply water to the inhabitants of that town, as he intended to supply water to the company houses on Church and Wood streets. Richard W. Leibert (who is still living at Bethlehem), supplied him with the desired information. Work was then commenced without a charter and in time the mains were extended, a reservoir was built on Church street, and later on north of Walnut between Fifth and Sixth streets. A charter was subsequently obtained and the company furnished the water until its merger with the Clear Springs Water Co.

By 1872, the demands upon the water supply had increased so largely that the company decided to make extensive improvements, and spent $25,000. On Front street from Wood to Bridge an 8-inch main was laid; Second, Union to Chapel, a 10-inch main; 4-inch main on Union and Chapel streets; 10-inch main on Bridge, from Front to Second; and 10-inch main on Walnut to Fourth, where connections were made with a 12-inch main leading to a new stone and concrete reservoir on Currant alley, above Walnut, the highest point in the town. A new pumping station was built below No. 6 furnace, 23 by 25 feet in dimensions, with water and steam pumps having a capacity of forcing 185,000 gallons of water per day. A nearby stand-pipe, to equalize the pressure upon the pipes, was also built.

The use of the river water for household purposes becoming objectionable, an artesian well was drilled adjoining the pumping station and alternating filters erected to overcome its frequent filthiness.

All the town gutters and refuse from manufacturing places north of Bridge street had drained into the canal, the surface of which frequently presented mysterious compositions.

The company requiring more room for storage purposes, a 36-inch main was extended on the canal bed, from a point facing the canal below the bridge, which carried water to the forebay at the machine shop and pumping station, while another of similar size ran from the forebay in front of No. 5 furnace and extended to the turbines opposite No. 1; the feeder canal was then abandoned and filled in, giving the company large storage space in front of the furnaces.

For many years, the revenues of the water system were not given close attention and reverses coming to the Crane Iron Co., its receivers made overtures to the original owners, and the water and land rights, with some reservations, passed back to the Navigation Company and then to the Clear Springs Water Co.

Council then reduced the number of fire hydrants to 23, owing to the demands of the new regulations, and when in January, 1908, the rates were announced, many consumers discontinued the use of the water.

The Fire and Water Committee were directed to make an investigation and report the cost of establishing a municipal plant. A public meeting was called in the Town-Hall, Thursday, July 23, when it was proposed to ask the taxpayers for a loan of $80,000 to sink wells, and proceed with the erection of a municipal system.

By unanimous direction of Council, it was submitted to the tax-payers at the November election, which resulted in polling 776 votes for the loan and only 74 against.

Artesian Wells.—Two artesian wells were sunk upon a tract of land, designated by a geologist sent by the State Board of Health, at Walnut and St. John streets, east of the Catasauqua creek. The success of the first well demonstrated the wisdom of the designated spot, and the second well was equally satisfactory. The wells are about 240 feet deep, steel cased, 10 inches in diameter, with a flow of 500 gallons a minute. They were both tested by air lifts for seven days and nights, and the supply of water was pronounced inexhaustible. The strata of sandstone were pierced the entire depth. The State Board certified that it was perfectly pure; and by practical tests at the boilers of the plant it was found free from lime sediments.

The committee had investigated other plants and asked experienced engineers to come to Catasauqua, view the location and prepare plans for a municipal plant. Dr. C. J. Keim was then serving as burgess, with Councilmen Henry W. Stolz, Alfred J. Leh and Martin Graver from the First ward, and Thomas Jones, William McCandless, and Oscar Shugar from the Second ward, all favorable to a municipal water-works. Detailed plans and specifications were formally adopted, and the sale of the water bonds for $80,000 at 4 per cent. was advertised. George H. Hardner, of Allentown, became the contractor, the sale of the bonds was made, three-fourths of the issue having been taken by residents of the borough. Work was started in March, 1910, and completed the following October. Two equity suits were instituted by the Clear Springs Water Co. to restrain the borough from proceeding to establish the water-works, but the Court dismissed both bills, deciding that their vested rights were not injured.

Thomas Jones is worthy of special mention in the establishment of this improvement for the public welfare. He came to Catasauqua in 1853 and assisted in laying the water pipe in 1854. For many years he was employed as a machinist at the Crane Iron Works; then he became master mechanic of the Catasauqua & Fogelsville R. R. under its superintendent, John Thomas, which position he held until the road was acquired by the P. & R. R. Co. He served in town council from 1884 to 1889; officiated as burgess from 1889 to 1891; and again served in the town council since 1908, while this improvement was being established.

Edmund Randall, the publisher of The Catasauqua Dispatch, is equally worthy of mention for his continuous and persistent advocacy of its ownership by the borough.

Pumping Station.—The pumping station is a brick fire-proof building, with concrete foundations and floors, structural, steel and slate roof, with ample proportions for duplicating the present plant. The engine and compressor room is 50 by 60 feet and boiler room 50 by 50 feet, with fuel space for more than 100 tons. These rooms are well lighted, provided with fire-proof partitions and furnished throughout in a neat and substantial manner. The chimney is constructed of brick lining 5 feet square inside and 100 feet high, on a concrete foundation.

In the boiler room there is a battery of two high-pressure tubular boilers, 100 to 125 horsepower each, set in masonry with connections to pumping machinery.

In the engine room there are two air compressors of the Ingersoll-Rand most improved type, made to operate condensing, either or both together, through air receiver to air-lift system, with discharge from wells into storage reservoir; also two large Platt cross compound horizontal crank and fly-wheel pumping engines with condenser, of combined daily capacity of two million gallons, made to operate, either or both together, with suction from storage reservoir and delivery to system of water mains.

Reservoir.—The storage reservoir is 72 feet in diameter, 14 feet 6 inches deep, having a capacity of 364,000 gallons; made of brick concrete and steel construction, with roof of cement tiling, and ventilator screened and protected from all impurities, which makes it a most fitting receptacle for storage, direct from the wells. The large pumping engines, with suction from this reservoir, deliver the water through water mains and tower to the people.

Tower.—The water tower is located on the hill, near Sixth street and Howertown Road, in North Catasauqua, just north of the borough line. It is built of steel, 15 feet in diameter and 80 feet high, resting on brick sub-structure with stone trimmings, reinforced at the top with heavy eye beams. This sub-structure is on octagonal foundation of concrete, 30 feet in diameter. It is connected through the sub-structure with main and drain pipes and valves placed so that the tower may be used with the system or not, as may be desired. The reservoir affords the city a storage of about one-half million gallons of water for use in an emergency and, as a reserve, additional to the capacity of the plant, should there be a serious conflagration.

Mains.—The system of water mains, ranging from 16 inches to 6 inches in diameter, with but few laterals of 4-inch pipe, in all about seven miles, is laid in the principal streets of the borough.

In case a fire occurs in the lower portion of the town, mains on American street, Howertown Road, Second and Front streets furnish a constant flow.

There have been located at the street corners thirty-five Matthews type hydrants, with 6-inch base connections and two 2½-inch nozzles for hose and one 4-inch nozzle for steamer to each hydrant. This system is divided into 63 districts, any and all of which may be shut off as desired. In case of repairs, but one square of patrons will be inconvenienced for a short time. There are 70 fire plugs and 790 taps from the mains.

The Water Commissioners have been: David Tolan, 1910 to 1911, and Daniel Gillespie since 1911. The annual receipts are about $9,000.

Town Pumps.—There were three town-pumps in the place. The first was at Biery's Hotel, on Race street, set up when the first tavern was started.

The second was at the Thomas residence, on Front street, opposite the furnace; the well was sunk by the Crane Iron Co., and a pump-stock was placed there with a long iron handle to raise the water and a long handled iron cup was attached to it by a chain from which to drink it. This was highly appreciated, for the quality of the water was superior and many persons refreshed themselves there, more especially the working people at the furnace; indeed, all the families in that vicinity got their drinking water at this pump. It was continued in active use until the town came to be supplied from the municipal water-works. It may be remarked that the company established another pump on the premises a short distance below the office, about 1860, to take its place, and the old one was removed on account of the commotion there at times which was objectionable. The iron pump-stock is still there but it has not been much used for several years.

The third was at the rear of the Eagle Hotel on Bridge street.

Public Fountains.—In the summer of 1911 the subject of public fountains on the streets of Catasauqua was agitated, which resulted in the appointment of a committee of citizens which consisted of:

Joseph Matchette, chairman
John Moat	Franklin Beck
George Boyer	Cooper Weaver
Alvin A. Hauser	Reuben Weaver

Subscriptions were solicited and the collections amounted to $500. Then five places were selected for locating the fountains, as follows:

Front street, American Mechanics Hall.
 Bridge street, Postoffice Building.
 Howertown Road, north of Pine street.
 Five Points, Howertown Road.
 Third Ward, Twelfth and Race streets.

These five fountains were set up in the fall of 1912 where the water has since been free, taken from small, ever-flowing vertical outlets, and this public convenience has been highly appreciated and commended.

Clear Springs Water Co.—The water-plant of the Crane Iron Works, established along certain streets of Catasauqua from the beginning of the town, in 1839, was sold, in 1905, to the Clear Springs Water Co. (whose large plant is situated near the northern line of Whitehall township, above Cementon) and from that time the Company has maintained an office in Catasauqua, being in the P. O. Building since its erection in 1907. The principal office is in Philadelphia. The local office has been in Catasauqua since 1905.

Joseph Milson has been its superintendent since October, 1912. His predecessor was Walter L. Watson.

This company supplies the following towns in the Lehigh Valley:

East of the river.—Siegfried's, Northampton, and North Catasauqua.

West of the river.—Cementon, Egypt, Coplay, West Coplay, Hokendauqua (part), West Catasauqua, and Fullerton.

The total length of mains in service is 43 miles.

Canal.—In the course of the construction of the canal, a lock was placed at a point which came to be in front of the furnace at Catasauqua, with dimensions of 22 feet wide by 95 feet long, and a drop of 8 feet from one level to the other. The number in the system is 36. The next lock to the north is about a mile distant, and the next to the south also a mile.

A double canal was maintained for a number of years from 1839, from a point near the Hartman Ferry (locality of the Hokendauqua Bridge) to the furnace to facilitate receiving and shipping materials.

Grain and coal were "floated" down the river to the Delaware river, and thence to Philadelphia, on flat-bottomed boats called "arks," and these "arks" were sold there because they could not be taken back against the current. In passing Biery's Port these boats attracted much attention. When the canal came to be opened for transportation in 1828 the movement of the boats through the locks excited as much public interest for a time as the "casting" of iron in the furnace in 1840.

The first excursion to Biery's Port on the canal was made by a party from Allentown and an "ark" was used to carry the excursionists. The boat was handsomely decorated with American flags for the occasion. This occurred on Friday, June 26, 1829. Ogden E. Frederick recalls how his mother-in-law, Mrs. James W. Fuller, with much spirit narrated the trip many years ago. She was amongst the party, having accompanied her parents, then a girl (Clarissa Miller) 11 years old. She remembers distinctly the crowded condition of the boat and the great pleasure the extraordinary trip afforded. Two horses pulled the boat, and though the movement on the water was slow, the sensation was pleasing and the passing scenery truly picturesque and inspiring, much beyond what she had yet experienced.

Another occurrence, worthy of mention, was several years afterwards when many of this community went by boat to Easton to witness the hanging of a man named Getter, on a small island in the Delaware river.

Boat Yards.—Along the canal, from 1845 to 1865, two boat-yards were carried on for the building and repair of boats; one of them by Bogh Brothers, situated on the site of the Fire Brick Works between Walnut and Chapel streets, and the other by Ginder & Rehrig on the site of the lowlands opposite the Catasauqua Hotel.

RAILROADS.—It was in the Fall of 1855 that the first locomotive, the "General Wall," borrowed from the Central R. R. of N. J., with a passenger car attached, came to Catasauqua, which was as far as rails had been laid. It was a gala day for the borough, only two years old. On this train were citizens from Easton, including Thomas McKean (then 90 years old) and an army officer on recruiting service. A dinner was had at the Eagle Hotel, while flags were flying and bands playing. After dinner a procession was formed which marched to Hokenauqua, to view the furnace just erected there.

On the way from Allentown, the train ran slowly, stopping now and then to cut down projecting limbs of trees which hung over the track.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad was established on the opposite side of the river and opened for traffic and travel in September, 1855; and in 1856 the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railroad was started from the Catasauqua Station there and opened for traffic and travel in 1857.

David Kline, a painter by trade, was the first agent and the first freight was brought by him over the bridge on a wheel-barrow.

The Central R. R. of New Jersey was established and extended along the canal through the borough in 1867; and the New England R. R. is now being extended through the central section of the borough to the canal near the Crane Iron Works to facilitate the shipment of coal by boats from Catasauqua.

The trolley street railway was extended from Allentown through Catasauqua along Front street to Siegfried's in 1891.

POST OFFICE.—For twenty years after this settlement was started at the bridge, the hamlet was called Biery's Port. A post office was established July 24, 1844, and named "Craneville." after George Crane, of Wales, who was the owner of iron works where David Thomas was employed before coming to this country, and upon the appointment of Nathan Fegley as postmaster in 1846, it was moved to the corner of Front and Church streets.

Mail came three times a week from Allentown to Mauch Chunk by stage, and several times a week from Bethlehem to Cherryville by one-horse conveyance. But letters for this place were frequently sent to Craneville, N. J., a small town 20 miles from New York City on this Easton stage route, which caused a delay of some days in the delivery of letters. The Crane Iron Co. received their mail from Allentown by private carrier which helped somewhat.

A change was agitated as early as 1845, but owing to the dominant party represented by the old inhabitants at the lower end of town, they prevented the Post Office Department from adopting various names proposed. Owen Rice was at that time chief clerk at this iron works (who, for many years, had been the scrivener of deeds for the country hereabouts) and learning from old drafts made in 1735 and later that the creek flowing through the east end of the village was named "Catasauqua" (Cattosoque) he suggested the name and it was adopted by the department on Aug. 10, 1846.

Postmasters.—The following persons filled the position of postmaster:

Nathan Fegley,	Isabella D. Duff,
..... 1846-50 1865-71
Joseph Laubach,	Adaline Creveling,
..... 1850-53 1871-77
Nathan Frederick,	William H. Bartholomew,
..... 1853-54 1877-89
Augustus H. Gilbert,	Edmund Randall,
..... 1854-55 1889-94
Solomon Biery,	Jonas F. Moyer,
..... 1855-61 1894-98
Arnold C. Lewis,	Henry Davis,
... March-Nov., 1861 1898-1900
Frank B. Martin,	Charles Graffin,
..... 1861-62 1900-08
Charles D. Fuller,	Samuel S. Graffin,
..... 1862-65 1908-

The borough post office force comprises a postmaster and assistant; three clerks, auxiliary clerk, and special delivery messenger; four carriers, sub-carrier, and mail messenger.

Three daily deliveries are made excepting Sundays; and four collections from 35 boxes located in different parts of the borough.

The following statement shows the character and extent of the postal business at Catasauqua:

Daily mail handled:

Incoming (pieces),	4,600
Outgoing (pieces),	2,800

Registered mail during 1913:

Outgoing (pieces),	2,247
Incoming (pieces),	2,233

Stamped paper sold during 1913, ...	$13,340
-------------------------------------	----------

Domestic orders paid during 1913, ...	21,950
---------------------------------------	--------

Domestic orders issued during 1913, ..	34,048
--	--------

International orders paid during 1913,	1,318
--	-------

International orders issued during 1913,	3,426
--	-------

Exchanges, and the Clear Springs Water Co.; and the third by the "Charotin Club," a social organization of 80 members.

GAS WORKS.—In 1856, Joseph Laubach, John Thomas, William Getz, Samuel Glace, John Williams, and Joshua Hunt, of Catasauqua, associated together for the purpose of organizing a company to manufacture gas and supply the town with an improved light. A charter was secured and the first officers were: Joshua Hunt, president; Joseph Laubach, treasurer; John Williams, secretary.

The plant was established along the canal, north of Pine street, and there it has since been kept in constant operation. The enterprise was appreciated by the community and largely patronized, which made it successful from its inception. The introductory price per 1,000 feet was $4.50; but this was gradually reduced until it came to be $1.50.

Bituminous coal was used until 1880 for the production of gas; since then it has been made by the Lowe process.

Three gasometers have been put up as follows: 1856, with capacity of 5,000 cubic feet; 1878, with 15,000; and 1905, with 50,000, when the improvements to the plant cost $8,500.

The average annual consumption for thirty years was 2,500,000 feet; the consumption for the year 1913 was 19,000,000 feet, with 1,153 consumers.

The plant to 1884 cost $25,000; to January, 1914, the investment was $150,000. The total length of mains laid is 15 miles. East of the Lehigh river the company supplies Catasauqua, North Catasauqua, Northampton and Siegfried; west of the river Coplay, Hokendauqua, and part of West Catasauqua.

William McCandless has been foreman and gas-man at the works since 1884; George W. Steele manager since 1902.

The franchises were leased on Dec. 23, 1913, to the Allentown-Bethlehem Gas Co., which included those secured by the Catasauqua Gas Co., Consumers Gas Co., of Northampton county, and Peoples Gas Co., of Lehigh county.

ELECTRIC WORKS.—A plant was established in 1890 for supplying the inhabitants with electric light and power, situated along the public road in the southern extremity of the borough. The company (Catasauqua Electric Light and Power Co.) was organized by George Davies, Rowland T. Davies, James Thomas, and Rowland D. Thomas, and incorporated with a capital of $60,000, and after establishing its plant, supplied the town with electric lights, under an agreement with the borough, at designated points.

Similar companies were organized in the ad-

POST OFFICE.

Post Office Building.—The post office has been located at Bridge and Railroad streets since 1907. The superior and attractive three-story brick building was erected by capitalists identified with the National Bank of Catasauqua at a cost of $25,000. The first floor is occupied by the Post Office; the second by the Telephone joining districts to the north and west for public electric lighting. All of the franchises secured by the companies were leased to the Lehigh-Northampton Gas and Electric Co., which was organized in 1890, and the last named company supplied the electric light and power to the several communities until Dec. 23, 1913, when the Lehigh Valley Light and Power Co. became the lessee of all the franchises.

The streets were lighted by gas lamps, set on posts, from 1856 to 1890; then incandescent electric lights were substituted, and in 1900 arc lights were added, which have since been maintained. The installation in January, 1914, was as follows:

356-40 Watt tungsten street lamps; 38-550 Watt direct current arc lights.

In January, 1914, there were in use in the district 1,000 electric meters; and 83 motors of 603 horse-power used by manufacturers, etc. Total investment in plant, $200,000.

George W. Steele has been the manager since 1902.

THOMAS AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES.—The following sketches are included in this narrative to show the character of the founder of Catasauqua and his contemporaries.

DAVID THOMAS was born Nov. 3, 1794, in the county of Glamorgan, South Wales. He was an only son and his parents gave him the best education which their means would allow, but this was confined to the rudimentary elements. He was very studious by nature and took much delight in the acquisition of knowledge. Not satisfied with working on a farm, he secured employment in iron works when 17 years of age and continued there five years, in which time he showed great aptitude for business. His progress was so great and his accomplishments as an iron-worker were so highly appreciated that he was selected in 1817 as the general superintendent of the blast furnaces connected with the Ynisedwyn Iron Works in the Swansea Valley, and also of its iron-ore and coal mines. He filled this position for upwards of twenty years. During this time, he experimented successfully with the use of anthracite coal as a smelting fuel, and ultimately produced iron by the introduction of a hot blast.

While he was developing his experience in the successful manufacture of anthracite iron at this establishment in Wales, enterprising capitalists connected with the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. in Pennsylvania were considering means to develop their business in the Lehigh Valley, and in this behalf they offered valuable water privileges along the river to any persons who should lay out $30,000 in erecting a furnace, and run it successfully for three months by the exclusive use of anthracite coal for fuel.

Selected Manager.—This great inducement led these capitalists to organize an iron company, and they delegated one of their associates, Erskine Hazard, to visit that establishment and secure a competent man to superintend the erection of such a furnace as was contemplated; and this resulted in employing Mr. Thomas. The Company selected Biery's Port along the canal, three miles above Allentown (afterwards named Catasauqua) as the locality for their great undertaking, and in one year after his arrival Mr. Thomas demonstrated the practicability of producing iron successfully as a commercial commodity by the sole use of anthracite coal.

Becoming recognized as the pioneer in this particular line of business in America, this directed much long-continued public attention to this locality. Quite naturally his accomplishment and its beneficent results to the community were made a significant feature in the celebration of the 75th Anniversary of Catasauqua in the year 1914. Therefore, the manner of his first arrival is worthy of emphasis in this sketch.

Visits Biery's Port.—In pursuance of his agreement with the Lehigh Crane Iron Co., Mr. Thomas came to Pennsylvania, reaching Allentown with his family on July 9, 1839. Two days afterward, accompanied by his son Samuel (then a lad twelve years of age) he walked to Biery's Port to see where it was proposed to erect the new furnace. When he reached the top of Frederick's Hill (now called Packer's Hill), he stopped "to view the landscape o'er," and in the distance saw the Blue mountains whose blue outline extended along the horizon with its great ridge broken by prominent gaps in several places.

The residence of George Frederick was at the foot of the hill where he lived with a number of stalwart sons in a two-story stone house, erected in 1757, and a few hundred feet north of it, near the entrance to Biery's Bridge (which crossed the Lehigh river) were the house and red barn of William Miller; while just across the river from Frederick's was the residence of Jacob Deily, formerly the home of George Taylor, a signer of the Declaration of Independence; and at the far end of the bridge was the hamlet of Biery's Port.

Startling Noise.—While the prospecting Welshman and his son stood there, a loud noise from the vicinity of the hamlet startled them. Little Samuel, while in the great city of London, had provided for such a supposed emergency by purchasing a gun, but, alas, at that moment of apparent peril, he recalled that it was among the family effects somewhere in a canal-boat on the Morris Canal, slowly moving towards this point and not just then available. After discovering the cause of this explosion, they decided to venture forward and soon reached the bridge which they found to be constructed of chains, fastened at the ends to heavy stone piers. They each paid a big copper penny to the toll gatherer (Daniel Tombler, ancestor of the Tombler family of this community), and, proceeding farther across the canal bridge, reached the hamlet which consisted of a grist-mill, saw-mill, fulling-mill, and several dwelling houses, and beyond there was a woods to the right as far as the eye could see.

The middle stone building (which is still standing) was the hotel of the place, and Frederick Biery, the village nabob, sat there on a bench. Mr. Thomas entered into a colloquy with him and he soon learned where the proposed furnace was to be erected. Hardly had he gotten this information, when, suddenly, that terrifying report again broke the prevailing quiet of the village, and turning around quickly the agitated pedestrians in wonderment learned that it was caused by an upright saw in yonder mill, ripping into slabs, by means of water-power, a large log on the skids. Thence they walked to the site of the proposed new enterprise, and after inspecting the place they returned afoot, late in the afternoon, to their hotel at Allentown, (Haberacker's, now the Hamilton). A house was then rented for Mr. Thomas and his family (the site now of the Prince Furniture Co.) and there they made their home until the two-story frame dwelling north of Biery's Port was completed for them by the Crane Iron Co.

Difficulties Surmounted.—It was late in the "Thirties" that the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. (which owned the great anthracite coal fields near Mauch Chunk) realized that they had no adequate market for their products. Locomotives were few in number and largely wood-burning. The entire number of stationary engines running in eastern Pennsylvania probably did not exceed twenty-five. A few spasmodic attempts had been made to smelt iron ore with the use of anthracite coal, but the success was in different. It was therefore decided by the Lehigh Company that they would make a market for their coal by smelting the abundant iron ores not far from the line of their canal and to accomplish this they organized the Crane Iron Co. with a capital of $100,000 (a sum more difficult to raise than twenty times that amount would be to-day); and under the superintendency of Thomas they came to erect their first anthracite furnace at Catasauqua.

One can hardly appreciate the difficulties that daily beset the manager; ores and fuels of unknown and varying constituents; no experienced help; no foundries or machine shops worthy of the name within reach; and weakly constructed blowing-engines which were continually breaking down; hot-blast ovens of the crudest type, capable of heating only 500 to 600 degrees. These were but a part of this manufacturer's difficulties. After their pig-iron had reached market, it met customers who had no faith in it and often it could only be sold with a guarantee of faultless casting.

With the opening of the Lehigh Valley R. R. in 1855, a new impetus was given to the iron industry. Prior to that time, the furnaces were obliged to depend upon the canal for coal and for shipments of iron; and it was about this time that Thomas built the first of those minimum hot-pressure blowing-engines which afterward became the common type and allowed the use of the New Jersey rich magnetic ores.

Founder of Town.—Mr. Thomas was prominently identified with the management and success of the Crane Iron Works for many years. He became the promoter of the large iron works at Hokendauqua, which were named after him. He was interested in other enterprises here and elsewhere. He took much interest in the political, financial, religious, and charitable affairs of the town, and therefore came to be commonly recognized as its founder. He was particularly concerned in the establishment and success of the First Presbyterian Church of Catasauqua and he encouraged temperance and thrift amongst the numerous workmen under him.

Mr. Thomas was married to Elizabeth Hopkins, daughter of John Hopkins, of Wales, and they had five children: Jane, Gwenny (married to Joshua Hunt), Samuel, John, and David. He died June 20, 1882, in the 88th year of his age. His remains were deposited in the large Thomas vault in Fairview cemetery.

FREDERICK BIERY first introduced the custom of entertaining at funerals in this section of the country. It was at the time of the burial of a member of his own family. The interment was made at the church in Shoenersville, and there the announcement was first publicly made from the pulpit by the minister that the mourners and friends were invited to return to the home of Mr. Biery for the refreshment of man and beast. There the guests were arranged in rows in the yard, and servants appeared, some with bottles of whiskey and glasses, and others with lunch consisting of bread, meat, pie, cake, and coffee; and hostlers provided fodder for the horses. Thus a custom was introduced which prevailed hereabouts for many years. It became a necessity because the country was sparsely populated. Some of the relatives and friends were obliged to start early and travel far if they wished to attend a funeral.

He owned a large tract of land here and the site for the Crane Iron Co. furnace was purchased from him. He had five sons, Daniel, Jonas, Solomon, David and William, and three daughters, Mrs. Nicholas Snyder, Mrs. Samuel Koehler, and Mrs. Jacob Buehler. Three fine and attractive cut stone two-story dwelling-houses erected in 1826, 1830, and 1835 along the main road in the village near the bridge which carried his name for nearly seventy years, are still standing in a remarkable state of preservation. He died in 1845.

His son Solomon carried on the tavern for many years; and he served as post-master of the Catasauqua office from 1855 to 1861. In later years he was interested in the car-building firm of Frederick & Co., at Fullerton. Jonas lived in the farm house (now the residence of August Hohl on Race street and Railroad alley), and was engaged as a farmer. He owned and sold all the land upon which East Catasauqua came to be established. The quarry along the Catasauqua creek, where the Crane Iron Co. obtained all their lime-stone for the furnaces for years, netted him more than $40,000 on a royalty of three cents a ton. A large part of the land along Second street, and also along Wood street, was sold by him into lots for buildings, though quite a number had previously been sold by his father. Daniel resided on his farm near Weaversville, now owned by Peter Laubach, and there he died; David resided on his farm near Mickley's, and there he died; and William, the youngest son, died at home at a comparatively early age.

GEORGE BREINIG, while a young man, attended the academy at the "Irish Settlement" and on his way to and fro he passed the farm which was irrigated by the Catasauqua creek and became noted for its fertility. Upon reaching manhood he purchased this farm of 245 acres 76 perches from the estate of Peter Beisel, deceased, in 1831, and moved upon it in 1832. It is still owned by some of his descendants.

JAMES W. FULLER figures very prominently as a contemporary of David Thomas. His father, Chauncey Dorrance Fuller, came to Biery's Port from the "Plains," above Wilkes-Barre, soon after the construction of the Lehigh Canal was started, and he was employed by the company for a number of years. Subsequently he served as one of the Justices of the Peace of the borough for ten years, from 1855 to 1865.

The son, in his early years at Biery's Port, ran boats on the canal, and afterward conducted the store at the bridge. From 1852 to 1856 he was specially employed by David Thomas, for the Crane Iron Co., to secure from the Legislature of Pennsylvania a charter for a railroad to extend from Catasauqua to Fogelsville and Red Lion (near Mertztown in Berks county), for the purpose of enabling the Company and also the Thomas Iron Co., to bring iron ore from the westerly and southerly portions of the county to their large works at a reduced expense, and also to discontinue damaging the public roads with their numerous heavy teams which had come to be a source of complaint by the tax-payers. His efforts developed intense opposition which resulted in public meetings at Allentown to denounce the attempts of the "Black Republicans" towards securing such a charter, because, as alleged, it would finally destroy the fine farms in the beautiful and productive valley of the Jordan. His skill and perseverance brought success. In the Spring of 1856, the railroad was commenced, and within a year the ore teams were no longer seen on the public roads, tearing up the roadway and making it well-nigh impassable as had theretofore been the case.

During the Civil War, Mr. Fuller became prominently identified with the political and military affairs of Pennsylvania, and his influence with the Republican administration then was generally recognized.

He was married to Clarissa Miller and his children, who lived to mature years, were Orange, James W. Jr., Abbott, Clinton H., and Clara (married to Ogden E. Frederick). Two of them survive, Abbott, who resides at Philadelphia, and Mrs. Frederick, at Catasauqua. He established the Fairview Cemetery in 1858, and upon his decease in 1872 he was buried there.

SAMUEL GLACE was born at Reamstown, in Lancaster county, Pa., on Oct. 12, 1805. He went from Conyngham, in Luzerne county, to Mauch Chunk, in the Lehigh Valley, in 1826, where he entered the employ of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. In 1830 he took up his residence at Biery's Port upon receiving the appointment of division superintendent of the canal from the "Slate Dam" at Laury's to the "Allentown Dam," and he filled this position for ten years. Then he became the mining agent of the Crane Iron Co., which he served for many years. He was the first person to produce hydraulic cement in the Lehigh Valley at Lehigh Gap, his son William having prepared a paper on the subject for the Historical Society of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. He was married to Isabella Swartz, of Allen township, and they had two children, William H. Glace (Attorney-at-law), and Amanda E. (married to Dr. Daniel Yoder), both of whom reside at Catasauqua. He died January 3, 1892, at the remarkable age of 86 years.

JOHN GEORGE KURTZ, the grandfather of the late Henry Kurtz, at Catasauqua, settled in Hanover township along the Catasauqua creek, in 1760, and established a homestead when the surrounding country was a wilderness. The land extended thence to Shoenersville and was generally known as "Drylands," because no water was obtainable there during the summer months, and the cattle had to be driven to the Lehigh river where the creek had its outlet. It is said that after he had erected a cabin he went to Europe to fetch his family, but upon his return with them he found the cabin in ruins, having been destroyed by the Indians.

In 1839, the plantation was divided between two of his grandchildren, Henry (who took the western portion), and George (who took the eastern). Their descendants here have become numerous. For many years these grandsons refused to sell their land for building lots, which caused the town to develop towards Bethlehem, and the improved section came to be called East Catasauqua.

JAMES LACKEY was a native of Reading. He came here at an early day in the history of the town and carried on the canal-store (where George B. F. Deily resides) when Thomas came here. He occupied this store several years, then he leased an acre of ground north of the furnace between the canal and river and erected a store and dwelling which he carried on until about 1850. By this time, the business of the Crane Iron Co. had increased so much that they were obliged to extend their plant to the north; so they purchased the property and Lackey located on Front street, south of Mulberry, where he erected another store and dwelling. He conducted a general store business there until 1857, when he was elected prothonotary of Lehigh county and he removed to Allentown. This locality on Front street then became the site of the National Bank of Catasauqua, and is now occupied by the Imperial Hotel.

Mr. Lackey served as prothonotary from 1857 to 1863, and as deputy for many years afterward. He died in Allentown at an advanced age.

JOHN LEIBERT lived near "Rohn's," now included in the Third ward. He was a boss-car-penter for the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. for a time; then, upon receiving a similar appointment from the Crane Iron Co., he located at Biery's Port. He died about 1845. His widow survived him upwards of 50 years. His son Owen became prominent as superintendent of the Bethlehem Steel Co. The only descendants living here are a daughter Jane, and a granddaughter Emma (wife of James Morrow, Esq.).

The day Leibert moved to Biery's Port (then Craneville), he was asked where he was going. He answered rather ironically—"Oh, to Craneville, and now I suppose my daughters will marry Irishmen." The late James Nevins was his son-in-law.

ROBERT MCINTYRE came here with his teams from Mauch Chunk, where he had finished a contract soon after Mr. Thomas arrived, and he did considerable work in digging the race for the water which turned the large water-wheel in the furnace. Soon afterward he purchased the farm adjoining Fairview Cemetery and there mined iron-ore which was washed where the Lehigh Valley R. R. depot is situated. The race for the washery is now used to run the turbine wheel which raises the water for the locomotives of the Lehigh Valley R. R. and Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R. He also purchased the farm on the road to Bethlehem, now owned by the Oberly Estate. He owned real estate in town, now known as the Eagle Hotel and the Lehigh National Bank. He built several sections of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R. His principal work, which gave him much fame, was the construction of the Aqueduct through which the water was conveyed from the Upper Potomac river to Washington, D. C. In 1864 he sold his property here and removed to his farm near Quincy, Ill., where he died at an advanced age.

JOHN PETER resided between Schneller's block and the Lehigh canal. He moved here in 1823 and bought his farm from Andrew Hower, heirs of John Philip Faust and others. His first home was built by John Yundt. He afterward erected a stone dwelling which is now the stable of F. W. Wint & Co. He followed weaving for nine years. Upon the completion of the canal he became a lock-tender.

In 1851, he sold the remainder of his farm (not heretofore sold into lots), to David Thomas, and moved to Bethlehem. In contrast with many of the first inhabitants who opposed Thomas in his projects, he could always be relied upon to support him.

JONATHAN SNYDER was a native of Shoenersville. He had a fair education with a fine handwriting. In 1839 he became the lock tender opposite the furnace of the Crane Iron Co. Afterwards he occupied the toll-house at the Biery Bridge. He collected all the tolls in this section of the canal. When the town was erected into a borough he served as assessor for some years. Of his immediate family, the only survivors are his grandchildren, the Williams family, who reside at Second and Bridge streets.

THOMAS LETTER.—The following interesting letter was sent by David Thomas to a friend in Wales six months after he had settled here and it is submitted to show the situation of affairs at Catasauqua and vicinity in 1839:

CRANE IRON WORKS, Dec. 11th, 1839.

Mr. David Bowen, Aberdare, South Wales, England.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—I have taken my pen in hand to write you a few lines from this wide western hemisphere. I am in perfect health and good spirits and all my family are the same who join me in hoping this brief letter will find you and your family also enjoying good health and happiness. I suffered much on the voyage and after I came here from sickness, which you no doubt have heard; but my health and strength have now recovered amazingly, and I am now flattered by those who knew me before that I look better than I did some years ago.

We have been treated here with much kindness. My employers have done everything in their power for my comfort; they have built me a very good house, with garden and every convenience that one could wish, and I have reason to believe they are satisfied with me. I have under my care about 100 men with proper foremen to look after every department; I give the orders and pay them.

We live in a very fertile country where every sort of grain, vegetable and fruit is very abundantly grown. The climate is very healthy; and the weather has been hitherto very good. The people are hospitable and kind, chiefly from German origin. There is much of that language spoken here, which I am learning very fast. The children can talk it better than I can.

Places of worship and schools are numerous. Many denominations are supported by voluntary contributions; the schools by a tax, every State appropriating so many thousand dollars for the use of schools. There is one built in my neighborhood where every one can educate his children for almost nothing, to any branch of science or literature.

The government is Democratic, and chiefly in the hands of the most numerable part of the community, which in my opinion is the worst part of their policy, and the most likely to injure the permanent progress of America. Your radicals, with riotous chartists, I think would have enough of universal suffrage only for them to witness the abuse of that suffrage as applied here. I have seen with regret the riotous affair of the chartists at Newport, and I am afraid from the appearance of the English newspapers that you are going to have more of it.

The population of this district is not very thin. It is peopled as thickly as Carmarthenshire. The towns are six to ten miles from one another and some of them have from 3,000 to 12,000 people. Philadelphia is 54 miles and New York is 93 miles, to either of which places we can go from here in one day. Traveling here is very expeditious, as there are canals and railroads in every direction. The town nearest to us is Allentown which is three miles from our works.

The natural resources of this country are numerous. All sorts of minerals are very abundant; provisions are very cheap, in fact, everything for the use of man is very moderate except woollen cloths, which are about double of those bought in England. Calico and cotton prints are as cheap here as you can get them there, and cotton goods of every sort are very cheap.

I do not think the cattle in this country are as good as in the old country; but horses are equally as good, if not better generally. Pigs are very cheap and abundant. Pork is very cheap, selling in the market at 9 shillings, 1 pence per cwt., and the best bacon fed upon Indian corn (which is very plentiful here) for 12 shillings, 6 pence per cwt. of your currency; best flour is $5.50 per barrel or 550 half pence of your currency, weighing 106 pounds. I had a barrel last week which makes bread pretty nearly as white as this sheet of paper I am writing upon; good black tea 1 shilling 6 pence to 7 shillings 6 pence per pound; coffee, best, 15 shillings ½ pence, but very good for 4 shillings ½ pence per pound; loaf sugar is 7 pence, if good season, 6½ pence; burnt sugar for 3½ pence to 5 pence per pound of your currency; and indeed everything in that way is very cheap.

The people here only eat three meals a day; breakfast at 6 in the morning, dinner at 12, and supper or tea at 6 in the evening. They have plenty of meat on the table for each meal whatever house you go into. All classes eat very much alike and about the same times.

Poverty is rarely known here except among the intemperate or idle. Old people, widows, and orphans are very well taken care of. The law of the land is very lenient to the actual poor, but very much otherwise to imposters. I have only seen three people begging, two of them Irish and one a German.

Since the time I left, is there any fresh duty? They do not know what duty is here, only on goods imported. The farmers in this country are usually free-holders. There is not one farmer out of a hundred but what lives on his own land, and they are generally very wealthy. Manufacturers are increasing very fast here; they are short of hands and capital, both increasing very fast. We have had some very bad times this autumn in the money market, but it is improving again very fast.

In about three weeks from this time our furnace will have fire in it. We are going to build another in the spring.

John Thomas is here and he is a good boy, very strong and industrious. He sends his best regards to his mother.

Please address your letter to David Thomas, Crane Iron Works, near Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa.

I am, my dear old friend,

Your sincere old friend,

DAVID THOMAS.

CHARACTER OF EMPLOYEES.—The men employed at the furnaces were mostly Irishmen. There were some Welshmen and Germans, but as a rule they were employed round about the furnaces. Catholics and Protestants were employed in equal numbers so far as possible. This prevented combinations and strikes among them and preserved the peace of the hamlet. The government of the village in its early days was fraternal, that is, that part connected with the furnaces.

The temperance movement was strong. There was a division called the "George Crane Division" for adults, and the "Crystal Fount Section" for boys. The meeting place was in a hall where the Crane Iron Co. stables are now. Every one was expected to join the movement and if not, he had to give a reason why. The result was one of great influence. The adults were led to save their money so that many of them, upon leaving with their families, purchased farms in the vicinity of Quincy, Ill., and their descendants are among the substantial citizens of that section.

A peculiarity of this growing hamlet before 1853 was its seclusiveness from the neighboring towns and villages. It was mostly inhabited by foreigners who naturally brought the habits and customs of their own country with them, and had a rather quiet, contented life without newspapers to excite or distract their minds, or locomotives and heavy trains of cars to break the stillness of the country air. The Sabbath day was honored by them and the "Old Church" in the woods was generally filled by attentive listeners. The community was made up of young and middle aged men, and possessed many promising boys and girls who had time and opportunities to develop knowledge, as well as health and strength, in this region by the side of the Lehigh river. Employment in the growing iron works was steady and the men employed remained the same from year to year.

OCCUPATIONS.—The occupations and persons employed in them at Catasauqua appear in the following lists:

Doctors.—The earliest medical practitioners at Catasauqua were the following, (the year after the name indicating the time of starting):

William Romig	M o u l t o n Hornbeck
F. W. Quigg	(1868)
F. B. Morris	Henry H. Riegel 1868)
Daniel Yoder (1858)	Charles Keim (1876)

The present practitioners:

H. H. Riegel and son,	Alfred J. Becker
William	James Hornbeck
Charles J. Keim and son,	Charles E. Milson
Harry	John Schneller

Dentists.—Two dentists are in active practice:

J. Edward Rehrig	Wesley Willoughby
------------------	-------------------

Druggists.—The early druggists of the borough were Joseph Stofflet, William A. Hassler, John Black, and Uriah E. Brunner, 1852-56.

Jacob S. Lawall succeeded Brunner in 1856. In 1857 he located at No. 409 Front street and carried on a general business, including paints, varnishes, etc., until his death in 1889, when he was succeeded by his sons, Charles E. and Edgar J., who have continued the business until now at the same place.

William Heckenberger started in 1874 at No. 145 Front street, and carried on the business until his death in January, 1914. The store is continued by his widow for their son who is pursuing a course of study in pharmacy.

Veterinarians.—Dr. William Heckenberger practiced as a veterinary surgeon at Catasauqua from 1861 to 1909, when he was succeeded by his son, Henry, who has since continued the business. An earlier practitioner was Peter Laux.

Lawyers.—The earliest lawyers at Catasauqua were Adam Woolever, R. Clay Hamersly, Joseph Hunter, William H. Glace, and A. N. Ulrich.

Those in practice in February, 1914, were Austin A. Glick, William Schneller, and Charles N. Ulrich.

Barbers.—The first barber here was William Welch who conducted a shop from 1855 to 1873. He was succeeded by George Fitzhugh who has continued the business until now.

Francis Zellers conducted a shop from 1871 to 1898, and he was succeeded by his son, Alvin R. who is still in the business.

Edwin Weiss started in 1898 and he was succeeded by Oliver Gering in 1903.

Others here are William Roxbury (1893), Q. H. Smith (1898), John Missimer (1907), Samuel Roth (1908), and William Johnson (1913, succeeding F. J. Wehrle).

FUNERAL CONDUCTORS.—Owen Frederick moved to Catasauqua with his family in 1848, and embarked in the business of conducting funerals in connection with cabinet-making, and carried it on for 30 years until his decease. He was succeeded by his son-in-law, Henry A. Steward, who continued until his decease in 1897; then Ogden E. Frederick (son of Owen) and William H. Scherer (who had been in the employ of both Frederick and Steward) purchased the business from the Steward Estate and they have carried it on until the present time under the firm name of Frederick & Scherer. The plant has always been where it is now, at No. 208 Front street. The cabinet-making branch was discontinued in 1902. Some of the coffins are still manufactured by them; the others are obtained at casket factories.

Elmer E. Erdman has been a licensed embalmer and funeral director at No. 143 Front street since 1902. He succeeded Charles Snyder who had carried on the business since 1875.

Edward J. Rodgers located here in 1911.

HOTELS.—There are nine hotels at Catasauqua:

Biery House.—The first hotel at Biery's Port was erected in 1826, by Frederick Biery, on the public road from Allentown (now Race street) a hundred feet east of the canal. It was conducted by Solomon Biery and others until 1850. It is still standing, an attractive cut-stone two-story building. The first post office was conducted here from 1844 to 1846.

Eagle Hotel.—The Eagle Hotel was erected by Joseph Laubach, at the northeast corner of Front and Bridge streets, in 1850. He carried on the business until 1861; his son, William H., to 1864; and his son, Franklin P., to 1876; when the father resumed it from 1876 to 1886. There were different owners during the next twenty years; then E. L. Walker purchased the property and he has conducted the hotel until now.

American House.—A large three-story brick building was erected at the south end of Front street as a hotel, in 1850, by Solomon Biery, who placed his brother-in-law, Nathan Frederick, there as the proprietor, who carried on the business for several years; and he was succeeded by Charles Beck, Biery's son-in-law, who continued there until 1870. Afterward it was conducted by different parties till 1912; since then George Monshine has been proprietor.

United States Hotel.—A large three-story brick building was built on the opposite corner at the same time by his brother, Jonas Biery, who started a hotel there. It was occupied by William Gross; then by Biery's son-in-law, Augustus Gilbert, who conducted the business till 1860; afterward it was a general store till 1907; since then it has been occupied as a wholesale liquor store.

Catasauqua House.—Charles Knauss erected a three-story brick building in 1850, secured a license for a hotel, and carried it on for some years as the Catasauqua House. Different parties conducted the business until Jesse Weaver became the owner, who sold it to a Mr. Wessner of Philadelphia. Wessner's Estate is still the owner. The present proprietor is Frederick Swegler.

Pennsylvania House.—Harrison Hower built a three-story brick building on the northeast corner of Second and Bridge streets, in 1853, and established a hotel there, which he carried on for 15 years. He was followed by different parties. John W. Geiger purchased the place in 1897, and he has since conducted the business.

Mansion House was erected on Front street, between Church and Bridge streets, in 1871, by Henry S. Harte, and carried on by him until his decease, in 1882; afterward by his son, Lewis K., Franklin Medlar and William J. Hopkins until 1900; and since 1900 by Henry Blocker.

Walker Hotel, in East Catasauqua, was established by E. L. Walker in 1897, and he conducted the place until 1906, when he purchased the Eagle Hotel at Front and Bridge, which he has carried on until the present time.

Imperial Hotel.—After the Catasauqua National Bank was removed to its new quarters on Bridge street in 1904, the building was sold and converted into a hotel, called the "Imperial," and as such it has been carried on till now. Victor Miller was the first landlord, who with partners carried it on till 1907. Then Adam Langkammer bought it, and since then it has been conducted by him and his son, Charles.

There are five other licensed places at Catasauqua, which are conducted as saloons.

PICTURE GALLERIES.—John Swartz started a gallery in 1852 at the southwest corner of Second and Bridge streets for taking pictures by the Daguerre process. He was succeeded by a Mr. Guth.

In 1864, Theodore J. Kline embarked in the business of supplying photographs. Others since then have been A. M. Bachman, G. D. Lentz, and C. Roth.

MOVING PICTURES.—The first moving picture show was opened at Catasauqua in 1908, by William H. Wentz, at the southeast corner of Front and Pine streets, and there he has continued exhibitions until the present time. His place had a capacity of 500 persons, but it was enlarged in February, 1914, to hold 800. It is known as the "Majestic."

The Bijou was opened in 1910 and continued until the Summer of 1914. The Palace was opened in 1911, and has been continued until now. They are located on Front street, at Walnut.

COAL YARDS.—Shortly after the Lehigh canal was opened, Johnson & Swartz embarked in the coal business (about 1826) and carried it on for many years. Their yard was located along the canal, south of Race street; and this yard has been operated by different parties until now. Daniel Milson has been in the wholesale and retail business there since 1898, and he also supplies wood, sand, limestone, crushed stone, and cement.

George B. F. Deily has been in the coal business since 1885. His yard is along the canal north of Race street. He is largely interested in farming, owning several large plantations east of the borough. His father had carried on this yard from 1849 to 1862; and Edwin Swartz from 1878 to 1883.

A third coal yard is carried on along the canal north of Pine street by F. W. Wint & Co. in connection with their planing mill and lumber yard.

REAL ESTATE Co.—In 1905, Rowland T. Davies, George H. Williams, and Mrs. Winifred Williams Emanuel formed a limited partnership under the name of the Catasauqua Real Estate Co., and as such erected, during 1906, sixteen fine brick dwelling-houses in the Second ward, along Pine and Third streets. They are held by the company and rented to tenants.

FANCY POULTRY.—In 1902 Samuel Gibson engaged in the fancy poultry business, directing his attention particularly to three varieties of the "Orpingtons." His yard is at American and Locust streets, and there he has continued until now, with special birds numbering from 100 to 300. His shipments are made to all parts of the United States.

In 1909, Hopkins Thomas and John Steitz engaged in this business, directing their attention to the "White Cornish Game." Their yard is in the Third ward, with special birds numbering from 50 to 100, and they forward shipments to all parts, as far as California.

In 1912 a poultry show was held in Fuller's Hall, during Christmas week, with 500 exhibits, which was largely attended. The superintendent was Samuel Gibson. Besides the parties mentioned, the others interested in poultry here since 1900 are Harvey Rinker, George Reinhold, Libold Ehle, George Williamson, Robert Gibson, and Percy Seibert.

POLITICAL ANIMOSITY.—As elsewhere, political animosity manifested itself in this vicinity in various ways on different occasions. Three instances are submitted.

Spiked Cannon.—The Allentown Democrat, in November, 1844, contained the following item relating what the Whigs had done to the Democrats right after the State election which resulted in their defeat at the polls:—"The Democrats found their cannon spiked when about to fire it off on Saturday afternoon in honor of their late victory. This shows to what means the 'coons' will descend to get revenge. We would caution our friends to be on the look-out, for we would not trust them in our hen-coop."

Salt River Parade.—But the Democrats could also show feeling against the Whigs in 1858. The fight during the campaign and at the polls was bitter, and being successful as a matter of course, they had to ridicule the foe by taking them up "Salt River." Those at Cata-auqua therefore got up a badge and distributed it throughout the community for the amusement of the participants in the political jollification; which made the announcement of the proposed excursion in the following interesting manner, even if it was sarcastic:

BOUND FOR LECOMPTON RETREAT at the head of
FREE TRADE RIVER

The slow southern steamer Old Buck will leave for Lecompton Retreat at the head of Free Trade River from Biery's-Port on Monday morning next, October 25th, at sunrise:—

Commander and Dictator,	Bill Biery
First Mate,	Old Sol
Second Mate,	Wash Bogh
Steward,	Charley Beck
Clerk,	Al Woolever
Engineer,	Jake Bogh
Fireman,	Jack Heinley
Cook,	Jake Kester
Bar-keeper,	Ike Miller
Purser,	Joe Laubach
Pilot,	J. Gross
Barber,	Lew Bogh
Physician,	Josh Siegfried
General Ticket-Agent,	Jim Schall
Boot-black and watchman, ...	Joe Lazarus

A colony is to be established at the head of Free Trade River where the worshippers of Old Buck can worship him at their heart's content and where all who are willing to bow the knee and submit to his Lecompton Test are invited to settle—with the understanding however that no settlers will be allowed to advocate Home Protection or be unwilling to labor for 10 cents a day.

It is understood that the small great men of the Old Keystone, including the Joneses, the Biglers, the Dewarts, the Landys, the Phillippes, and the Leids have already gone in advance.

The steerage will be reserved for the small-fry politicians in Allentown who subscribe to Lecompton.

For further information inquire of A. S. S. Bridges, Allentown, and at the post office at Biery's-Port, just below Catasauqua.

Doylestown, Oct. 20, 1858.

Federalist Denounced.—Thomas Barr, a resident of Allen township, represented Northampton county in the State Legislature in the year 1852-53, and he was elected as a Federalist or Whig. His actions at Harrisburg excited the ire of the Allentown Democrat, which was led to criticise him in the following manner:

The citizens of the county (Lehigh) are now witnessing, if they have not been made to feel, the evil consequences resulting from the election of Federalists to the Legislature by our sister Northampton; and the Democracy of the latter county have the very questionable gratification of knowing that her representatives are laboring zealously to prostrate the best interests of a neighboring constituency.

With true Federal instinct, her representatives cling to and support monopolies, just as naturally as a "nigger takes to a banjo"—vide Mr. Barr's course in the matter of the Catasauqua & Fogelsville R. R. He seizes every opportunity to bring it up in the House. Scarcely a bill is read but he springs up with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clauses and insert a bill to authorize the Lehigh Crane Iron Co. to build a railroad to their ore mine, lease quarries, etc. A more iniquitous proposition, we venture to say, has rarely been introduced into our Legislature. Without regard to private rights, and for the benefit only of a mammoth iron company, the Legislature is asked to cut up the farms of a rich agricultural region that this company may enjoy a still greater monopoly of the iron business.

We cannot believe that the Legislature will inflict such injustice upon the other furnaces along the Lehigh, or upon those whose property it is proposed thus to cut up and sacrifice. We cannot believe that justice has yet flown from our Legislative halls, and hence we cannot believe that a project more iniquitous than the famous Gettysburg Railroad will be fastened upon a portion of our citizens.

A charter was nevertheless secured in 1854, and the railroad was found a great benefit to the townships through which it was constructed, in that it relieved many miles of the public roads from the hard and injurious travel by the numerous ore teams in transporting many thousands of tons of iron ore from the mines of the Crane Iron Co. to its large and prosperous works in Catasauqua. These roads were rendered almost impassable during the wet seasons before the construction of this railroad for upwards of ten years, and the persons mostly affected were the adjoining farmers, though many of them received large royalties and benefits far beyond what they otherwise might have realized from cultivating the land.

The first efforts in this behalf had been made by securing an Act of Assembly, dated April 5, 1853, which authorized the following commissioners to establish and maintain the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Plank Road, and the Lehigh Crane Iron Co. to subscribe for stock:

Jacob Dillinger	Jonas Biery
Samuel Sieger	Phaon Albright
Aaron Guth	James W. Fuller
David Thomas	Charles W. Cooper
Owen Rice

Finding that the plank-road was an impracticable enterprise, an Act was passed April 20, 1854, authorizing this company to construct and maintain a railroad instead of a plank-road.

MEXICAN WAR.—During the Mexican War, two men enlisted from here: Levi Kraft (a tin-smith who worked for C. G. Schneller), and Horatio Good (who lived up the river). They went to Mauch-Chunk and there joined their company; thence to Wilkes-Barre, and by canal to Harrisburg, thence to Pittsburg, thence by river steamer to New Orleans. Both of these lived to come back, wearing their peculiar uniforms of the army at that time, with caps like a coal scuttle, decorated with metal chains. Kraft afterwards served three years (1861-64) in the 47th P. V. Reg. and died a few years ago at Dayton's Soldier's Home. Good went overland to California and was killed by the Indians.

Several enlisted men from Allentown returned from Mexico at the same time; but one, John Kuhn, was missing. A year afterward he returned but the cruelties of a Mexican prison had made him insane. His home thereafter was in the Lehigh county poor-house. Every year for 25 years, in his summer vacation, he visited Catasauqua in his old uniform, hat bedecked with flowers and a cavalry sword suspended at his side clanking on the pavement; and to the time of his death he was known only as "Mexico John." No one would think of molesting him in any way; the people showed respect for him, and encouraged him in his innocent amusement.

LOCAL FLOODS.—Catasauqua was the scene of great excitement during the flood of June 4-5, 1862, when the water rose above its usual level from 24 to 27 feet, and was about 4½ feet higher than the flood of 1841. All the bridges, with a number of small buildings, great quantities of lumber and fencing materials, and many wagons, etc., were carried away. The engineer of the Crane Iron Co. remained in the engine-room and was instrumental in rescuing several persons from drowning. Many of the boats which were here, loaded with ore from New Jersey, were lost including the possessions of the boatmen. A German family from Newark (man, wife, and two children) were on their boat at Parryville when the flood tore it loose; they reached Catasauqua but the boat was wrecked below the town, and all they had was their clothing on their backs. Another family from Stanhope, N. J., also lost their boat and all their clothing; they were knocked off the boat and rescued, excepting an infant, fourteen months old, which was drowned. When morning dawned, two men were discovered on a cinderbank, in the midst of the river; and at another point a man and boy were on a tree. A father was on a tree near by, and his screaming daughter on another; and a little girl was seen holding on to a ledge at an arch of the Biery Bridge. Fruitless attempts were made to save these people by a raft attached to a rope, but the current was too strong; finally the superintendent of the Crane Iron Co. rescued them by means of a flat-bottom boat, made by his carpenters, after struggling heroically for more than an hour.

The scene was awful to behold. While standing on the river bank, the roaring torrent could be distinctly heard, and also the agonizing cries of men, women, and children, who were carried on logs, boats, etc. Below the town a house was swept from its foundations and carried down the valley; and at Wheeler's locks several houses and barns, with household goods, animals and other contents were swept away. Words cannot describe the loss and suffering.

Relating to the flood of 1841, mentioned in the beginning of the foregoing article, the following entry was made in the books of the Crane Iron Co., to show how it affected the works:

"On Thursday, January 7th, at nine o'clock in the evening, the river rose so that the back water prevented the wheel from turning, at half after ten covering the tow-path of the level above lock 36. At twelve it was two feet over the banks, and was one foot over the bottom of the hearth of the furnace. At 1.20 the water was at its height, and 34 inches in the furnace. It was at its height until 3.30 o'clock when the river began to fall. The water wheel was muddied all over and the water was nine inches over its top. The dam and canal bank was broken so that when the water fell in the river it was too low to turn the wheel, though every effort was made to fill up the bank, but they could not succeed and were obliged to throw the furnace out on Monday, the 11th of January.

"DAVID THOMAS,
"THOMAS S. YOUNG."

(The furnace was blown in again on May 18, 1841.)

OLDEST BUILDINGS.—There are eight old buildings in the borough which are still standing worthy of special mention.

TAYLOR MANSION.—The most conspicuous old building is the Taylor residence on account of the great prominence of the owner of the premises who erected the building, which led the Historical Committee of Old Home Week to select it as one of the local features in advertising the seventy-fifth anniversary of the town, and therefore an extended reference to the title will be regarded as appropriate in this connection:

John Page secured 2,723 acres from the Penns by patent, Sept. 11, 1735, which was located along the east side of the Lehigh river, and embraced what is locally known as the "Irish Settlement."

He devised by last will, in 1741, all his estate in Pennsylvania to Evan Patterson, of Old Broad street in London, and then Patterson by Letter of Attorney, dated July 7, 1750, empowered William Allen and William Webb to sell and convey this land, who, on Dec. 8, 1750, conveyed 331 acres of the large tract to Thomas Armstrong, situated along the river at and in the vicinity of the Catasauqua creek; and Armstrong, on March 10, 1767, conveyed the 331 acres to George Taylor. Armstrong was an elder of the Allen township Presbyterian church, and in 1755 was commissioned as the coroner of Northampton county. His residence was near the mouth of the creek.

In 1768 Taylor erected a large two-story stone mansion on this tract near the river, opposite the Jacob Yundt mansion (afterward known as the "Frederick Mansion"), on a bluff a short distance south of the creek which is still in a good state of preservation. The walls are two feet thick. There are three fire-places on the first floor, kitchen, and adjoining sitting-rooms; and across the rear face of the recesses he set iron plates, cast at the Durham Furnace in Bucks county, each with the following inscription:

G. T. 1768.

The plate in the fire-place of the kitchen, 40 inches square, was removed by the Deily Estate and presented to the Historical Society of Lehigh county in 1910. The others have been concealed by a coat of plaster and wall paper.

In 1768 Taylor was a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly; and in the assessment list of that year he was assessed for 100 acres of cultivated land and 200 acres of uncultivated, including 4 horses and 4 cows. (In the same list there appears another George Taylor, who was designated as "poor.")

In the assessment of 1770, besides the land, he was assessed as having had then six horses, eight cows, and three negroes.

Taylor sold the premises in 1776 to John Benezet, of Philadelphia. He was a member of Congress and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He died at Easton on Feb. 25, 1781.

Upon the erection of the Third ward school building along Race street in Catasauqua, the School Board recognized the great local prominence of Taylor and therefore they selected his name in preference to others suggested as the most proper by which to designate the new building.

In 1782 Benezet sold the premises to David Deshler, of Allentown, but there was no mention made of a grist-mill. In 1785, however, in the assessment list, Deshler is mentioned as the owner of 350 acres in Allen township, including a grist-mill, which is the first record evidence of this mill. It is also mentioned as "Deshler's Mill," on the Howell Map of Pennsylvania, published in 1792. He died in 1796.

In 1801 Michael Bieber, Jacob Schreiber, and Peter Deshler conveyed 250 acres of this tract to Abraham Ziegler.

In 1815 Ziegler sold 159 acres, 115 perches of the tract to John Beisel for $21,200; and, in 1821, Beisel sold the same to George Geisinger, of Salisbury township, being then bounded by lands of Michael Miller, Daniel Rohn, John Sterner, Frederick Biery, and the "forks" of the road leading to Bethlehem and Shoener's Tavern; and Geisinger died in 1823, when the Orphans' Court adjudged the land, (including the "Taylor Mansion"), to his daughter, Maria (intermarried with Jacob Deily), whose descendants still own the premises.

DEILY BARN, a stone structure near the Catasauqua creek, east of the new concrete county bridge, supposed to have been erected about 1760, and now owned by the F. J. Deily estate.

BIERY FARM-HOUSE at Second and Race streets, two-story stone, plastered and marked in THOMAS HOME.—The first home of David Thomas was on Front street, opposite the Crane Iron Works, a two-story frame building erected for Thomas during the summer and fall of 1839 by the company while he and his family sojourned at Allentown till it was finished. A stone ice-house was erected for his use at the same time on the lot along the street, now used as a small store; owned by the company. There were two prominent and useful institutions in connection with this home which are also worthy of special mention.

A sun-dial was established in 1840 by the Crane Iron Co. along Front street near the gate leading to this home which was highly appreciimitation of brick; supposed to have been erected about 1760; now owned by August Hohl.

TAYLOR HOUSE BUILT 1768.

BIERY HOTEL, on Race street, at rear of American Hotel; fine two-story cut stone, used for many years as a tavern; erected in 1826; now owned by George B. F. Deily.

BIERY HOME at Race and Canal streets, opposite the large grist mill of Mauser & Cressman; fine two-story cut stone, erected in 1830; now owned by Frank B. Mauser and occupied by him as a residence.

BIERY STONE-HOUSE, on Race street at the canal; fine two-story cut stone, used for many years as a store and residence by James Lackey, Joseph Laubach and George Deily to accommodate the boatmen; erected in 1835; now owned by George B. F. Deily and occupied by him as a residence.

ated in the village for 30 years. Whenever the sun shone, it indicated the correct time to all the inhabitants and visitors who passed the place. Watches and clocks were expensive then and not in general use.

A well was sunk by the Crane Iron Company on this premises at the same time that the dwelling-house was erected for Mr. Thomas, and a pump-stock was placed there with a long iron handle to raise the water and a long handled iron cup attached to a chain from which to drink it. It was in use until 1860.

KURTZ FARM-HOUSE, in the Third ward on the Kurtz Lane leading from the Howertown Road; two-story stone, erected about 1800; now owned by John Yeager.

FREDERICK HOME.—The old two-story stone house on the public road on the west side of the Lehigh river near the Biery Bridge was razed in 1892 to utilize the stone for filling in the approaches to the iron county-bridge erected on the site of the Biery Bridge. It was one of the early houses in the Lehigh Valley, having been built in 1757. It was familiarly known as the "Frederick Mansion," named after George Frederick, who was the owner of the farm on which it stood to the time of the construction of the Lehigh Valley R. R. in 1855, when he sold it to Asa Packer. One of the early owners was Jacob Yundt, who settled along the Lehigh river after taking up 278 acres in two warrants in 1750, which extended from the Biery Bridge down to Stephen Snyder's farm; and he erected the stone house known for years as "The Fort," because it is supposed to have been used as a place of refuge during the Indian incursions.

On account of their prominence in the early history of the town, I should mention also the Biery Grist-mill, the Breisch Home, and the Peter Home.

BIERY GRIST-MILL.—Opposite the Biery Tavern were the Biery grist-mill, together with a saw-mill and fulling-mill, and the fine two-story stone house (now the residence of Frank B. Mauser). The mill-dam (abandoned) lay several hundred feet to the northeast, and the mill-race extended under what is now the northerly end of the Dery silk mill, and the yard of the Mauser residence. At the fulling-mill the bags of carded wool were fastened together with strong pins cut from the hawthorn hedges which grew along the road-sides in the township.

The farm-house along Race street, at Second was the residence of Jonas Biery, a son of Frederick, who conducted the farm. There was a small, rough-coated house where the Mauser barn is now located.

BREISCH HOME.—The Breisch home was on a farm of about seven acres. It occupied the site of Dr. Daniel Yoder's residence, at Third and Bridge streets.

PETER HOME.—The Peter farm lay along the river. It extended northward from Church street to a point 100 feet beyond Spring street, and eastward to the Howertown Road, excepting the Breisch farm, which was "sandwiched in between." The farm house and barn were situated opposite the Schneller Block; the former was built of stone and stood near the canal.

HANDSOME HOMES.—The following handsome homes at Catasauqua are worthy of mention:

- | | |
|--------------------------|----------------------|
| D. G. Dery | Mrs. Owen Fatzinger |
| Joseph S. Elverson | Frank M. Horn |
| Mrs. Jas. W. Fuller, Sr. | Mrs. George Holton |
| James W. Fuller | Mrs. Richard Koehler |

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------|
| Mrs. Herman Kostenbader | William R. Thomas |
| August Kostenbader | Harry Seaman |
| Mrs. Ruth McKee | Oscar Stine |
| Leonard Peckitt | Robert Wilbur |
| Edwin Thomas | Dr. Daniel Yoder |
| | Mrs. James Thomas |

Aged Residents.—The following aged residents, seventy-five years and over, were living at Catasauqua in January, 1914:

- | | |
|---|--|
| John Witt, 88 | Ferdinand Eberhardt, 76 |
| Jacob Applegate, . . . 87 | Samuel Hart, 76 |
| Richard Snyder, . . . 87 | George Henry, 76 |
| Wm. R. Thomas, Sr. 86 | Ferdinand Knotzer, . 76 |
| George Fahler, 86 | Uriah S. Koehler, . 76 |
| Mrs. Lydia Esch, . . . 84 | William Lauer, 76 |
| Mrs. Martha McClellan, 84 | Benedict Marks, . . . 76 |
| Mrs. Jesse Weaver, . . 84 | Adam Scholl, 76 |
| Charles Graffin, . . . 84 | Albert Newman, . . . 76 |
| *Mrs. Edwin Gilbert, 82 | Frank Shuler, 76 |
| Mrs. George Minnich, 82 | Robert Rabenhold, . 76 |
| Mrs. Jacob Roberts, 82 | Louis Mehrbrey, . . . 76 |
| Robert Strehem, . . . 82 | Jeremiah McMachen, 76 |
| William Wolf, 82 | Matthias Petri, 76 |
| George Bower, 81 | William Waddig, . . . 76 |
| Benjamin H. Weaver, 81 | Mrs. Tilghman Bellis, 75 |
| Mrs. Rebecca Hughes, 80 | Mrs. George Davies, 75 |
| Dr. Daniel Yoder, . . . 80 | Mrs. John Eckert, . . 75 |
| Robert Kurtz, 80 | Mrs. Andrew Engelhart, 75 |
| Robert J. Clark, . . . 80 | Mrs. R. Clay Hamersly, 75 |
| Nathaniel Kidd, . . . 80 | Mrs. Joseph Hohl, . . 75 |
| Mrs. Henry Souder, . . 80 | Mrs. Michael Fields, 75 |
| Mrs. Rebecca Boyer, 79 | Mrs. Evan Jones, . . . 75 |
| Mrs. Andrew Kurtz, 79 | M r s. A braham F. Koons, 75 |
| Edward Kurtz, 79 | Mrs. Jonas Kemmerer, 75 |
| Andrew Schleicher, . 79 | Uriah Kuntz, 75 |
| Franklin Snyder, . . . 79 | Mrs. Uriah Kurtz, . 75 |
| Mrs. Wm. Kildare, . . 78 | Miss Martha Mitchell, 75 |
| Mrs. Conrad Sieg, . . 78 | Mrs. Jacob Miller, . . 75 |
| Mrs. Thomas Thomas, 78 | Mrs. Nancy McHenry, 75 |
| Reuben Daniel, 78 | Mrs. Jeremiah McMachen, 75 |
| James Fahler, 78 | Mrs. Robert Rabenhold, 75 |
| Henry Missimer, . . . 78 | Mrs. Adam Scholl, . . 75 |
| Michael Fields, 78 | Mrs. Samuel Snyder, 75 |
| Mrs. John Downs, . . . 77 | Mrs. James Thomas, 75 |
| Mrs. Milton Kurtz, . . 77 | Miss Maria Simon, . . 75 |
| Mrs. Alfred Leh, . . . 77 | Conrad Daniel, 75 |
| Dr. H. H. Riegel, . . . 77 | William H. Glace, . . 75 |
| Andrew Johnson, . . . 77 | Thomas Jones, 75 |
| Mrs. Eve Abe, 76 | Charles Millheim, . . 75 |
| Mrs. John McBride, . 76 | John Rothrock, . . . 75 |
| Mrs. Daniel Desmond, 76 | Joseph Ryan, 75 |
| Mrs. Hannah Bachman, 76 | Peter Sheeler, 75 |
| Mrs. Francis J. Deily, 76 | John Schleicher, . . . 75 |
| Mrs. Pauline Englert, 76 | Joseph D. Schwab, . 75 |
| Mrs. Pauline Heckenberger, 76 | Frantz Zeller, 75 |
| Mrs. Franklin Langenhagen, 76 | Conrad Daniel, 75 |
| Mrs. Nathaniel Kid, 76 | Miss Jane Seibert, . . 75 |
| James Campbell, . . . 76 | Mrs. David Walters, . 75 |
| Andrew Engelhart, . 76 | |

*Only one in list who was born at Catasauqua (Biery's-Port), and remained in town since.

CHURCHES.

The following churches have been erected and maintained at Catasauqua:

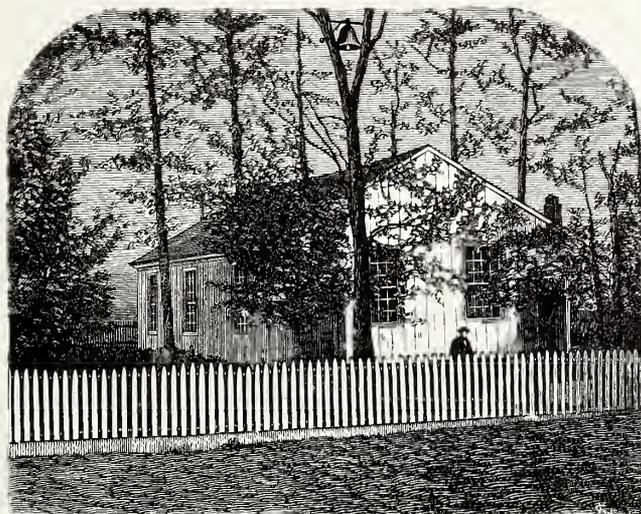

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The First Presbyterian church at Catasauqua was established when the Crane Iron Co. started its great works here in 1839, and David Thomas is regarded as its founder. The first building was erected in a woods on the south end of a small triangular piece of ground at the extreme limits of the land purchased by the Crane Iron Co., which was donated by the Company for religious purposes. It adjoins the public road that led from Allen township on the north to the old town of Bethlehem on the southeast. The base or front of this land was 164 feet in length, and the other two sides each 158 feet.

By the suggestion of Mr. Thomas this small

The history of this congregation was concisely given in an address by Samuel Thomas, son of the founder, upon the occasion of celebrating on Sept. 23, 1904, the "Semi-Centennial Jubilee" of laying the corner-stone of the present church on the northeast corner of Second and Pine streets, and its completeness being recognized, it is substituted here in the place of a previously published narrative. It was entitled by him, "Early Reminiscences of the First Presbyterian church":

"Just fifty years ago, in the peace and calm of the early twilight of a beautiful September evening, a group of Christian worshippers assembled to witness the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the First Presbyterian Church in whose shadow we are now standing, first in name only, but not in point of erection.

"The first church was a little frame building 25

FIRST CHURCH IN CATASAUQUA.

piece of ground was enlarged by the Company to a rectangular figure 200 feet in width and 350 feet in depth.

The building was constructed of boards set upright, and covered by a shingle roof; and once a year it was white-washed, inside as well as outside, for which purpose a hogshead of lime was always on hand in a shed at the rear of the building. Three long iron rods were placed across the auditorium near the ceiling at equal distances, and these were fastened on the outside by nuts so as to keep the building firmly together. Camphene was used in lamps for lighting the room. The lamps were suspended from the ceiling and these could be lowered or elevated at will by simply pressing against a slender rod which extended through a little hole in the ceiling.

by 35 feet, built by David Minnich, in the woods between the reservoir and what is now Mrs. John Williams' garden, at the upper end of Church street, on land donated by the Crane Iron Co. The time was the last Sunday of December, 1839, cold and stormy, when the ground was covered with snow, and Brother John and I had nailed planks together to use as a plough to open paths through the heavy fall of snow. The storm was so severe that after the corner stone had been laid by Rev. Landis, pastor of the Allentown Presbyterian Church (the first English church in Lehigh county), the little congregation were obliged to continue the services in the home of Father Thomas, which is still standing opposite the Crane Iron Works.

"Of that little band of Presbyterian pioneers, I can find only three survivors besides myself: Mrs. Bender (nee Peter), and Mrs. Owen Swartz, her sister, and Mrs. Rehrig (nee Lackey), all the others having passed on to the beyond towards which we also are hastening.

"As near as my memory serves me, those present on this interesting occasion were the following:—

'Father' and 'Mother' Thomas with their five children (Jane, Gwenny, Samuel, John, and David), Mrs. James Lackey and daughter Maggie, John Samuels and daughter Rachel, Mrs. John Leibert, John Peter and family, Aaron Bast, Charles Breisch, Lawrence Landis, Mrs. Jonathan Landis and Andrew Archer. There were doubtless others, but these stand out clearest against the past.

"The little building has been demolished and the venerable black oak tree has been removed, in whose forked branches I, as a boy, hung the bell which called the faithful to prayers. This bell passed into the hands of the Crane Iron Co., by whom it was used once a month on pay-days to call the men together. It still hangs on a branch of the tree, close to the office, where the curious may find it. The tree and bell were natural means to a spiritual end and though they have passed out of use, the spirit abides for this church whose semi-centennial we celebrate to-day, and its great development into other churches, such as the Bridge Street Church, the church at Hokendauqua, the Bethel-Welsh Congregational church (known as 'Mother Thomas's Church'), the churches at Lockridge, Ferndale, and Richard's Mine in New Jersey, and the Presbyterian Church at Thomas in far off Alabama.

"All these churches are living branches of the tree which was planted in faith and hope fifty years ago on that inclement Winter Sunday by a band of earnest Presbyterian men and women. The women are worthy of special mention for they too carried their share of the burden cheerfully and nobly. Well do I remember my sister Gwenny, Rachel Samuels, Maggie Lackey, and Susanna Peter, brave and helpful young girls, who carried water in pails all the way from the canal to scrub and clean the church, and as the building was used for a day-school during the week, every Saturday morning it required their earnest attention.

"In a recent interview with Mrs. Owen Swartz and Mrs. Rehrig, whose personal recollections of the early times in the history of this church are very clear, I was reminded that services were held in my father's house until the completion of the building on March 22, 1840.

"This little white-washed church was used for worship until the present building was ready to be occupied in 1856. Two years after the laying of the corner stone, the church was dedicated, free of debts. My thoughts dwell with especial pleasure upon those far-off days, and the building of those early Walls of Zion in our adopted home.

"As I review those early years, I see the earnest figures of my father and mother, who were strangers in a strange land, zealous from the beginning to see a house of worship planted here. When the church was organized, it numbered only three, father, mother, and sister Jane; and father was then ordained as first elder.

"About two years later, David Williams, Sr., located with his family at Catasauqua and he became a member of this church; and soon afterward he was inducted into the eldership. He was a most excellent man, and though in poor health he was strenuous in all good works. It was he who took up the collection and acted as treasurer of the church. He died August 14, 1845, and his remains were laid to rest in the church yard after services in the little white church which he had served so well.

"As the population increased, the church in the woods became too small. A special meeting of the congregation was therefore held to discuss ways and means for securing a new building. A committee was appointed consisting of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Earle, David Thomas, Morgan Emanuel, William McClelland, and Joshua Hunt.

"By an arrangement with David Thomas (who had donated some adjoining land to enlarge the church property on Church street), an exchange was made of that land which secured to the congregation the site of 180 by 180 feet at the corner of Second and Pine streets, upon which to-day stands the present church, the parsonage and the chapel. Plans having been made and adopted, sufficient funds were raised to warrant the new enterprise.

"The corner-stone of the old church was brought here and deposited just previous to the ceremony of laying the new corner stone. It is a gray sand stone from near Kreidersville. It was fashioned by Charles Breisch and bears the date of 1839, which can be seen on examination. In the new stone a copper box was laid which, according to custom, contained a Bible, some coins, local papers, and whatever the copper box of the old corner stone had contained. An address was delivered by Rev. Richard Walker, of Allentown, and Rev. Leslie Irwin of Bath assisted in the services.

"On Sunday, the 11th day of May, 1856, the church was solemnly dedicated to the worship of God. Rev. Geo. Duffield, D.D., preached the dedicatory sermon, Rev. C. Earle and Rev. R. Walker taking part in the services. Rev. Jacob Becker preached German in the afternoon.

"Only a few remain who were then from 20 to 30 years of age:

Mrs. Thomas Bear
Charles Graffin
Daniel Milson
James Nevins

William Kildare
Chas. W. Schneller
Mrs. Quigg

and those who were from ten to twenty years still among us are:

Mrs. John Thomas
James Thomas
Mrs. James Thomas
Mrs. Emma C. Williams
Rebecca Siegley
Mrs. Kate Stewart
William H. Glace
Joseph Matchette
Mrs. Herbert James
Samuel Davis
Daniel Davis

David Davis
Owen F. Leibert
Joseph McFetridge
John McFetridge
Mrs. John Knauss
Mrs. James Torrence
Martha Wilson
Thomas Jones
Mrs. Wm. T. Snyder
Mrs. Edwin Mickle
Mrs. James W. Fuller
Archibald Courtney."

The edifice is built of brick, semi-Gothic in style. The main building is 40 by 63 feet, exclusive of tower and pulpit recess; and it has a transept on the south side 20 by 30 feet, which forms part of the audience room, and also an organ transept on the north side, 10 by 20 feet. The organ was the gift of David Thomas. The spire is 150 feet high, a fine-toned bell being in the tower. The congregation had been regularly incorporated in 1853.

As commemorative of the re-union of the Old School and New School Assemblies of the Presbyterian church, a memorial chapel was built on Pine street at the rear of the edifice in 1871, the cornerstone having been laid May 13th, and the dedication having taken place on December 10th. This building is also of brick, semi-Gothic in style, 35 by 82 feet. It contains rooms for all church purposes; and it is used for mid-week services and by the Sabbath-school.

Forty feet north of the church, fronting on Second street there is an attractive and conveniently planned manse, built of brick, in style corresponding with the church.

Rev. Cornelius Earle served as pastor in a most efficient manner from Oct. 14, 1852 to

A Sunday-school has been conducted in connection with the church from the beginning and the superintendents have been prominently identified with the church as elders:

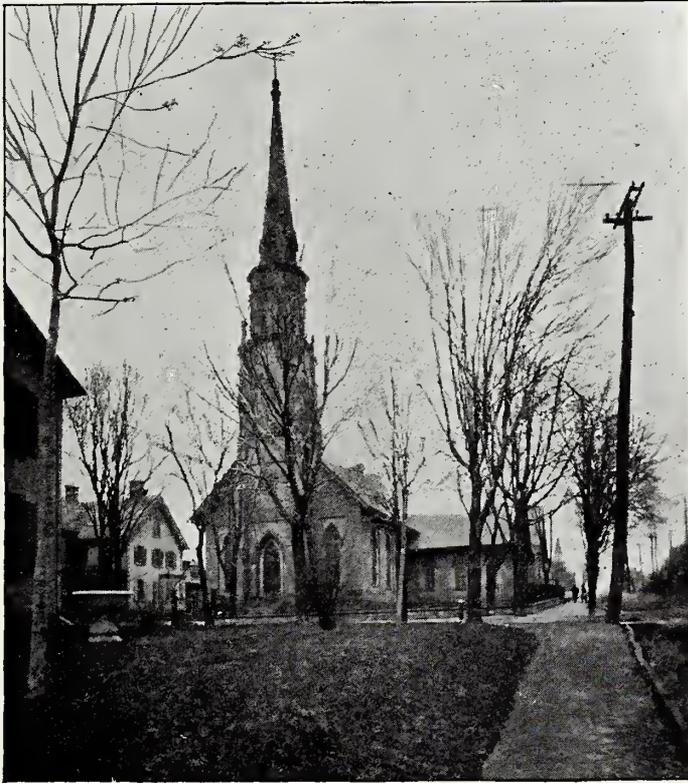

David Thomas, 1839 to 1847; elder from 1839 to 1882.

Joshua Hunt, 1847 to 1882; elder from 1847 to 1886.

John Williams, 1882 to 1892; elder from 1874 to 1892.

Joseph Matchette, 1892 to 1914; elder from 1892 to 1914.

The membership of the church in December, 1913, was 234; of the Sunday-school, 300.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

1898, when he resigned, after a continuous service covering a period of forty-six years.

During the year 1899, the regular services were conducted by other licensed Presbyterian ministers, but mostly by Rev. Charles H. Miller, who was finishing his course of studies in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., but had been licensed to preach in 1898.

Rev. Mr. Miller was elected as the successor of Rev. Earle in October, 1899, and installed as the pastor on Feb. 8, 1900, and since then he has served the congregation in a most efficient manner.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH.—Rev. Leslie Irwin, at the time of building the little frame church, was the pastor of the congregation in the "Irish Settlement." He was a graduate of the Royal Belfast College, and having been licensed to preach by the Synod of Ulster, he emigrated to America in 1834. He was received as a licentiate by the Presbyterians of Philadelphia on Dec. 22, 1835, and there ordained as an evangelist, with orders to locate in the "Irish Settlement." Upon his arrival he found two churches, one at Weaversville and the other near Bath, both of which are still standing.

The erection of a church of the same faith within the boundaries of his parish without authority of the Presbytery, and the removal of influential families like the Nagles, Depews, Loders, Lyles, and Hudders, to the new village, caused him to be on the alert. He therefore visited the people who had come from his own country in the north of Ireland, and finding himself in touch with them, he requested permission to preach to them in this new church, which was given.

At great personal inconvenience and in spite of inclement weather, he visited the families from house to house, and once every Sabbath preached the gospel to them. Finally, in 1850, in compliance with their request, set out in a petition, the Presbytery of Newton organized another congregation with thirty-two members and ordained James McClelland as its first ruling elder. Rev. Irwin continued his ministrations in a most faithful manner for fifteen years until 1865, when he was succeeded by Rev. James Lewars. In 1852 he succeeded in securing the erection of a church on Bridge street, a short distance west of the Howertown Road, on the additional lot of ground, containing 2 acres 76 perches which had been granted and conveyed in 1849 by John Peter to David Thomas, Robert McIntyre, Owen Rice, Samuel Thomas, William Taylor, David Williams, and John Peter, as trustees of the Presbyterian congregation. Before this time a memorial to the Presbytery was signed by 170 individuals, as residents of Craneville, and a report was forwarded in 1850, stating that there were 62 members in communion with the church.

After the purchase of this small additional tract of land the "old school members" desired to withdraw from the "Union Church," and effect a division of the assets, having, in a petition to the Crane Iron Co., styled themselves as the "Presbyterian Church of Craneville," though neither of the two congregations had as yet been incorporated. The Presbytery at Newton recognized Rev. Irwin's congregation as the "old school." The lot, known as the "Academy Lot," was eventually sold, the debt on it satisfied, and the surplus equally divided between the two congregations respectively known as the "Old School" and "New School." These designations subsequently became offensive to the respective members and a change was accordingly made so that the congregation which erected their new church in 1852 on Bridge street was named "The First Old School Presbyterian Church," and that which erected theirs in 1854 at Pine and Second streets was named "The First Presbyterian Church." The former was incorporated in 1851, and the application was signed by

Robert McIntyre	William Miller
John McIntyre	William Baird
John Hudders	Thomas Knox
John G. Loder	James Pollock
William Taylor	F. W. Quigg

The first edifice erected in 1852 on Bridge street was a plain, brick, one-story building and this was used until 1866, when the present brick church was erected in its place. A two-story brick parsonage was erected shortly after 1852 on the lot east of the church for the use of the pastor.

From that time, the so-called "old-school" have worshipped in the building by themselves. In the proceedings of incorporating the respective congregations, this distinction was studiously avoided, and the only public evidence of its existence is the inscription of the letters "O S" on the corner stone of the Bridge Street Church.

The membership of the congregation was as follows: In 1850, 32; in 1865, 105; in 1873, 225; in 1900, 159; in 1913, 271.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

Leslie Irwin,	1839-65	David Harbison,	1876-1901
James Lewis,	1865-68	Benj. F. Hammond,	1902-09
William Fulton,	1868-75	Harry W. Ewig,	1909-14

Four young men of this church became candidates for the ministry, and, after a thorough preparation, were regularly installed as ministers of the Gospel according to the Presbyterian faith. Their names are Nathaniel McFetridge, John Irwin, Albert J. Weisley, and Joseph L. Weisley.

The "Semi-Centennial Jubilee" of the church was appropriately celebrated by the congregation May 6-11, 1900; and as a "souvenir" of this occasion, a neat little volume was compiled, embracing a concise history of the church, and distributed among the members.

A Sunday-school was organized by the first pastor about the time he began his pastorate here and it has been conducted until the present time. The superintendents have been Joseph McMullin, John Hudders, and William Weisley, the last named since July 14, 1872. The membership in December, 1913, was 170.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—In 1845 a small number of persons, who were attached to the Methodist Episcopal Church, met in the home of Isaac Lorash, on Church street, east of Front street, near the present Town-Hall, and they were addressed by the Rev. Newton Heston, of Allentown. This was the first attempt at establishing this denomination at Catasauqua. From that time, during a period of ten years, at irregular intervals, different ministers went from Allentown and Bethlehem to Catasauqua and preached to little meetings of zealous Methodists at their respective homes, among them having been Revs. George Quigley, Thomas Murphy, and Samuel Irvine; and one of the first places was the home of Owen Frederick, whose wife A. Jeannette Frederick, was particularly active in this behalf. This home was on Front street where 'Squire Koons now resides.

The religious meetings at the homes soon became too large, and the use of the Second Street School-house (now the Lennox Factory), was secured from the school directors. The ministers who preached here were Revs. A. H. Hobbs, H. H. Hickman, and F. D. Eagan, and some of the more prominent members, besides Mrs. Frederick, were Mrs. Amelia Matchette, Mrs.

for the regular services, and also for the use of the Sunday-school; and during the process of completion a "Festival" was held here from which the special committee realized $700, which was appropriated towards the cost of the building. Besides the active members mentioned, others were: Mrs. Amelia Goodsell, and a Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin, and their daughter. The first meeting of a Board of Trustees was held in April, 1860, and this was composed of Charles Graffin, Arthur Campbell and Joseph Reichert.

This first church was realized chiefly through the earnest preaching of Rev. Eagan, and the steadfast co-operation of Mrs. Frederick, who frequently practiced much self-denial to secure successful meetings. The old Bible and hymn-books, and the lamps and collection boxes, which were used at the previous meetings in the private

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

Margaret Rogers, and Samuel Steele. After meeting in the school-house for some time they were permitted to conduct their services in the little frame Evangelical church on Howertown Road, and there, during the year 1858, twenty persons were converted to Methodism.

During the later years, with the membership constantly increasing, the subject of a denominational church began to be discussed with great earnestness, and this met with so much encouragement that a lot, 50 by 189 feet, was secured in 1859, situated on Front street beyond Walnut, from James W. Fuller, Sr., for $450, and building operations were begun. The corner stone was laid in June, and by December 25th, the building was dedicated, a one-story brick edifice. The basement was first completed homes, school-house and Evangelical church are in the possession of Mrs. Frederick's family. The auditorium was not finished until 1867.

A charter of incorporation was obtained in November, 1860, with the name of Grace Methodist Episcopal church of Catasauqua, Pa.

A Sunday-school was organized Feb. 25, 1860, with James Thomas as superintendent and he continued in active service for many years. He was succeeded by Prof. Henry J. Reinhard in 1898, who has served very successfully until the present time.

The 30th anniversary of the church was appropriately celebrated on Dec. 22, 1889.

A superior and attractive church edifice was erected on the southeast corner of Fifth and Walnut streets; built of blue limestone; and includes a two-story annex on Walnut street for Sunday-school purposes. The corner stone was laid June 1, 1890, at the northwest corner of the building, where the old corner stone of 1859 was also placed; and the building was dedicated with appropriate services Dec. 21st following. The stone tower is 97 feet high.

In January, 1914, the membership of the congregation was 235; of the Sunday-school, 220.

Pastors.—The church was regularly supplied with ministers from Allentown and other places from 1859 to 1864, when the first pastor was appointed. The pastors who served this congregation were the following:

Charles W. Bickley, 1864-65	Charles H. Rorer, 1889-92
Henry F. Isett, . 1865	Charles M. Simpson, 1892-97
Silas B. Best, . 1866-69	E. C. Yerkes, .. 1897-99
John J. Jones, . 1869-71.	Isaac M. Foster, 1899-1901
William P. Howell, 1871-74	Franklin F. Bond, 1901-04
Jeremiah Pastorfield, 1874-76	Robt. A. McIlwaine, 1904-07
Gaseway Oram, 1876-79	Jacob E. Grauley, 1907-11
Daniel M. Young, 1879-81	William H. Pickop, 1911-13
S. Olin Garrison, 1881-84	A. Lincoln Shalkop, 1913-
John Stronger, 1884-87
Andrew J. Anslow, 1887-89

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.—The Lutherans of Catasaqua determined to establish a church for themselves during the winter of 1851, but finding themselves too weak to engage in the undertaking alone they joined the German Reformed congregation, which was in a similar situation, and they together resolved to co-operate and erect a "Union Church." A committee was accordingly appointed at a joint meeting, which was constituted as follows:

Lutheran—George Breinig, Samuel Koehler, and Charles Nolf; Reformed—Solomon Biery.

During the previous year, religious meetings were held in the Presbyterian church.

The site selected was on Howertown Road, and a lot of ground there, containing one acre, was purchased from Henry Kurtz for $300. The corner stone of the church was laid on July 4, 1852, and the building was dedicated on Christmas Day, the Rev. Jeremiah Schindel preaching the principal sermon.

The first Lutheran council consisted of the following members:

Elders.—George Breinig, George Frederick.

Deacons.—Jonathan Snyder, Reuben Patterson.

The building was an attractive brick edifice surmounted with a square steeple and bell, elevated about sixty feet.

The first members were:

Charles F. Beck and wife	William D. Rahn and wife
Jacob E. Bough and wife	Francis N. Siegfried and wife
Daniel L. Bough and wife	Mrs. Solomon Biery
Joseph Geiger and wife.	Thomas Frederick
Reuben Patterson and wife	Mary Schaeffer
James E. Patterson and wife	Wm. Schoenenberger
	James Weber

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Other members were gradually added, and in three years the membership increased to 136.

Temporary benches were used as seats until the spring of 1858; then pews were substituted of the stall type, with straight backs, flat seats, and doors with wooden twirlers. At the same time the interior of the church was repainted.

Rev. Schindel called Rev. William Rath to assist him in the fall of 1853, and this assistance became so satisfactory in one year that Rev. Rath was elected the regular pastor; and he prepared the first list of members, which embraced 136 names. The first communion was administered by him to 68 members.

pose of securing English preaching. They erected a brick edifice at Third and Bridge streets, where they have continued until now.

The bell in the steeple, in use from 1852 to 1878, having become cracked, a new bell, the gift of William Roesch, was substituted in its place; but this also became cracked within a year, and Mr. Roesch again substituted another, which has been in constant use until now.

INTERIOR VIEW OF ST. PAUL'S.

During the fall of 1864 the building was remodeled; and in 1865 an organ was supplied.

After Rev. F. J. F. Schantz became the pastor, in 1861, he began to advocate a separate church for his congregation. This was eventually accomplished, in 1868, by purchasing the interest of the Reformed Congregation in the property. The services were conducted in the German language at the morning service, and in the English at the evening.

In 1870 the basement was improved and fitted up for Sunday school purposes, and for services during the week. In 1871 the congregation was incorporated.

The burial of deceased members on the adjoining grave-yard was discontinued in 1868, and by 1873 the removal of the bodies buried there to the Fairview Cemetery was completed.

In 1873 a number of members withdrew and organized a separate congregation for the purpose of securing English preaching. The building committee was:

Simon Breinig	Samuel M. Snyder
Fred'k Eberhardt	Ulrich F. Koehler
John L. Witt	Tilghman F. Frederick
Cain Semmel

The building is a superior and commodious brick structure, with a steeple 70 feet high.

The flag-stone pavement and iron fence were placed along the front of the property in 1888; and a parsonage was erected at the southerly side of the church in 1890.

In 1893 the Sunday school room was remodelled, and rolling partitions and new seats were introduced.

A "Semi-Centennial Jubilee" of the church was celebrated during the week beginning June 29, 1902.

In 1903 the auditorium was refrescoed, and otherwise improved by appropriate gifts from devoted members.

In 1905 a steam-heat plant was installed in the church; and in 1908 in the parsonage.

In 1909 an annex was built at the rear of the church, making its total dimensions 70 feet wide by 110 feet long.

A new pipe organ was then installed; and a fine brass eagle lecturn, accompanied by a bronze tablet, was presented by William H. Glace, Esq., as a testimonial to his father, Samuel Glace, who was a devout elder of the church and died in 1892, at the age of 86 years. The total cost of the improvements was $25,000.

In 1911 a vested choir was introduced, with

A union Sunday-school was started with the churches in 1855. After the dissolution in 1868, a re-organization was effected, with a distinctive Lutheran Sunday-school, which was named "St. Paul's." The pastors have been the superintendents; Tilghman F. Frederick served as first assistant, from 1875 to his decease in 1909. He was succeeded by William Samuels.

The Luther League has been an efficient auxiliary during the past ten years.

The membership of the church in January, 1914 was 914, and that of the Sunday school was 565; but many children of the members attend the Sunday schools at East Catasauqua, West Catasauqua, and Fullerton.

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH.

processional and recessional singing at the opening and closing of the services.

Two chapels are connected with this church; one at East Catasauqua called "Zion's," and the other at Fullertown, called "St. Johns."

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

Jeremiah Schindel	Joseph W. Mayne,
..... 1852-54 1888-92
William Rath, 1853-61	James F. Lambert,
F. J. F. Schantz, 1861-66 1892-
Jacob D. Schindel,
..... 1867-88

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH.—The Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity at Catasauqua is recognized as a daughter of St. Paul's Lutheran church. The latter was established here in 1851, and the services were conducted in the German and English languages for twenty years; then the younger element in the congregation, which had grown up under the influence of an English education in the local schools and also in Sunday-school, requested the church council not to reduce the English services from five to four times a month, as the council had intended to do, by action taken at the annual meeting on Jan. 1, 1873. This request was made because there were still ten English members who maintained that the existing circumstances had not justified such action. The request was refused, whereupon the English members of the congregation promptly held meetings and determined to organize a congregation and establish a church where the services should be carried on in the English language.

The active members in this behalf were Melchior H. Horn, George Bower, Edwin Schlauch, Thomas Frederick, Charles F. Beck, Jacob S. Lawall, and Henry J. Eckenberger. The movement was successful and a committee secured the German Reformed church as a temporary place for holding the English services of the new congregation and conducting a Sunday-school. The first services were held on Sunday, January 14th, which evidenced the determined spirit and efficient manner in which the undertaking had been handled.

A constitution was adopted Feb. 10, 1873, and the following officers constituted the first council:

Elders—George Bower, Thomas Frederick.
Deacons—Edwin Schlauch, Jacob B. Werley, H. J. Eckenberger, Orantes Pearson.
Trustees—Charles F. Beck, Edwin H. Breder.
Treasurer—M. H. Horn.
Secretary—Wm. H. Horn.

Regular services in English were conducted every Sunday morning and evening, until May, 1873, when Rev. John K. Plitt was elected as the pastor.

The first communion service was conducted on May 14, 1873, by Rev. Joseph A. Seiss, D.D., of Philadelphia, and the following members communed at that time:

George Bower	H. J. Eckenberger
Mrs. A. D. Bower	Amanda Eckenberger
C. D. W. Bower	Jacob L. Lawall
Myra Bower	Anna C. Lawall
M. H. Horn	E. H. Breder
Mrs. Matilda L. Horn	Mary C. Breder
Wm. H. Horn	Benjamin B. Lynn
Frank M. Horn	Robert A. Lytle
Thomas Frederick	Edwin Schlauch
Catharine Frederick	Mrs. Edwin Schlauch
Thos. W. Frederick	Mrs. Oliver Overpeck
Charles F. Beck	Joseph H. Shipe
Catharine Beck	Emily C. Shipe
Jacob B. Werley	George Frederick
Abbie R. Werley	Mrs. Effie J. Frederick
Orantus Pierson	Mary Fenstermacher
Elizabeth Pierson	William H. Bender

The efforts in behalf of a church building were equally successful, for by the fall of 1873 the corner stone was laid on a central lot of ground at the northeast corner of Third and Bridge streets, and the completed building was dedicated with appropriate services in the spring of 1874. The edifice, built of brick, with a basement and central tower, presents an attractive appearance; its dimensions are 50 by 70 feet; the total cost was $16,000. The congregation was incorporated June 16, 1882.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

John K. Plitt, 1873-77	John D. Roth, 1889-93
M. H. Richards, 1877-82	Paul G. Klinger, 1893-96
(Missionary supply.)	Wm. Geo. de Armit
George W. Sandt	Hudson, . . . 1896-1902
..... 1883-84	Edwin Francis
Charles S. Kohler,	Keever, 1902-07
..... 1884-86	Charles L. Fry, 1908-13
D. M. Henkel, . 1887-89

A Sunday-school was organized Jan. 12, 1873, with 80 people, and Melchoir H. Horn as superintendent. His successors were D. M. Henkel, George Bower, Oliver Williams, and since 1904 J. Arthur Williams (a nephew of Oliver Williams).

A two-story frame parsonage was erected in 1912, adjoining the church on the north. The church membership in January, 1914, was 145; and of the Sunday school, 115.

SALEM REFORMED CHURCH.—The Reformed people of Catasauqua, who resided here when the place was known as Biery's Port, worshipped either at Shoenersville or Howertown; but, desiring to attend divine services nearer home, they secured the use of the Presbyterian chapel on Church street, at such times when the Presbyterians had no services. In this manner they carried on their organization from 1848 to 1852, under the pastorate of Rev. Jacob C. Becker. Nicholas Balliet, a devout member of the Reformed church, is worthy of much commendation for his earnest efforts in behalf of the congregation.

A movement was soon made to build a church, but the membership having been small (about 100), they invited the Lutheran people here to co-operate with them, and they together selected the following Building Committee: Lutheran, George Breinig, Samuel Koehler and Charles Nolf; Reformed, Solomon Biery.

A lot of ground (one acre) was purchased from Henry Kurtz for $300, situated on the Howertown Road; the corner stone was laid July 4, 1852; and the dedication of a "Union" church was held on Christmas Day, 1852, with the following ministers officiating: Revs. Jacob C. Becker, J. D. Hoffenditz, — Apple, Jeremiah Schindel, Joshua Yeager, and William Rath.

The union of the two congregations was continued until 1868. Then the Reformed sold their interest in the property to the Lutherans for $3,600, and erected a church for themselves on a lot, situated at the southeast corner of Third and Walnut streets, which was donated by Joseph Laubach. The corner stone was laid in April, 1869, and the building was formally dedicated in the fall of that year, under the name of the First Reformed Church of Catasauqua. Their services during this time were held regularly in the Bridge Street Presbyterian church, where a Sunday school was also conducted.

In several years dissensions arose in the congregation, which continued until both the congregations and the Sunday-school became disorganized, and the property involved in a large debt; the pastors were necessarily changed to meet the varying conditions. This situation prevailed until the property was sold by the sheriff in 1880; then a re-organization was effected under the name of Salem Reformed church of Catasauqua.

Under this name the congregation has been maintained in a successful manner until the present time. In 1887 it became self-supporting; the annex to the building was erected in 1888; and in 1890 the church was repainted. The steeple was then rebuilt, it having been blown down by a violent storm in 1878.

The great increase in the Sunday-school required larger accommodations, and in 1902 a new adjoining building was put up for Sunday-school purposes. In 1903 a new pipe organ was installed at a cost of $2,000, through the zeal of the Young People's Association, of which Andrew Carnegie donated $1,000.

In 1909 a steam-heating plant was added, and the Duplex Envelope system introduced.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

Jacob C. Becker	Wilson F. More,
Cyrus J. Becker. 1886-1904
A. B. Koolin, . 1873-77	Alexander P. Frantz,
John J. Crist, 1877-86 1904-

During the pastorate of Reverend More, three young men of the congregation entered the ministry: Rev. Irwin H. DeLong, D.D., of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster; Rev. Samuel E. Moyer, of Perkasio; Rev. William F. Kosman, of Riegelsville; and afterward the Rev. George A. Bear, graduate of Central Theological Seminary, Dayton, Ohio.

The membership of the church in January, 1914, was 502; of the Sunday-school, 496.

The Mite Society, organized Jan. 5, 1885, by married women of the congregation, has since been of great assistance in maintaining the church successfully.

EMANUEL EVANGELICAL CHURCH.—A society was organized in the vicinity of Biery's Port in 1842, by persons who had espoused the principles of the Evangelical Association, which was making vigorous exertions elsewhere in Lehigh county. The members were Henry, Enoch, Abram and Joseph Youndt and their wives, and Valentine, Matthias, and Sebastian Knoll, apparently the zealous Christians of two families of this community. They persevered in their efforts for six years, when the preaching of Henry Bucks and Noah McLain at last brought the realization of their hopes and prayers, the establishment of a church. The building was a one-story frame structure, 30 by 38 feet, on the Howertown Road between Union and Wood streets, erected at a cost of $1,000. The trustees, active in securing its erection, were Henry Youndt (one of the first organizers), Charles G. Schnell, and William Neighley. It was named the Emanuel German Evangelical church of Catasauqua.

Services were continued in this building until 1870, by which time the accession of members had grown to such proportions that a larger building became necessary and accordingly another lot was secured in a more central locality, at the corner of Second and Walnut streets, where an attractive one-story brick edifice, with a frame tower, was erected, at a cost of $10,000, and here the congregation has continued its regular services until the present time. The trustees were William Michael, David A. Tombler, Owen Schwartz, C. G. Schnell, and Aaron Glick.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

William Hessart	C. B. Fleager
Francis Hoffman	Jacob Adams
John Kramer	C. Breyfogel
Henry Bucks	Reuben M. Lichtenwal-
Noah McLain	ner
Michael Singlinger	Benj. F. Bohner
Samuel Rhoads	Henry J. Glick
Christian Hummel	Henry Hains
Jacob Gross	J. C. Bliem
Christian Myers	C. K. Fehr
George Knerr	Sner Kreskey
Moses Dissinger	C. C. Moyer
George Haines (twice)	J. Willet Boyer
John Schell	A. H. Dostler
John Koehl	Henry Wentz
James Lehr	J. G. M. Swengel

The church was remodeled in 1889 at a cost of $3,000, and repainted and repapered in 1912.

The membership of the church in December, 1913, was 94; of the Sunday-school, 125, whose superintendent the last ten years has been Mr. Thomas Heilman.

WELSH BAPTIST CHURCH.—A number of Welsh families, affiliated with the Baptist denomination, resided at Catasauqua in 1871, and they associated together for the purpose of establishing a church here for themselves. They were:

Mrs. Anna Powell	Kate Ratcliffe
Mrs. Gwenny Lewis	David Thomas
Richard Gower	William Thomas
David Walters	Daniel Morgan
Robert Lytton	John Evans
Mary Ann Lovett

They secured a lot of ground, 50 by 180 feet, on the northwest corner of Third and Chestnut streets and there they caused a one-story frame church to be erected at a cost of $4,000. It was 34 by 52 feet, set back from Third street about 25 feet. Religious services were conducted there occasionally for about two years by Rev. William Morgan; then the members became separated on account of the panic, and the congregation naturally ceased to exist. In 1872 the membership was about 75.

The building was bought by the mortgagee, who converted it into a compartment-house for six families, and different Hungarian families occupied it until 1908. Shick & Hausman, plumbers, then bought the premises, razed the church, and erected dwellings in its place.

It was occupied for a time by the Salvation Army, and meetings in behalf of temperance were also held there.

WELSH CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—A number of Welsh families came to locate permanently at Catasauqua and connected themselves with the First Presbyterian church. This connection was maintained until 1882, when they determined to organize a congregation for themselves, not simply for the purpose of separating from the church where they had so long assisted in carrying on religious worship, but more especially for the purpose of securing regular preaching and worship in the Welsh language. There were probably fifteen families and the more active in this behalf were those of Daniel R. Griffith, John Williams, John Evans, David D. Thomas, Richard Thomas, Lewis Jones, Edward Davies, and Henry Harris.

Mrs. David Thomas, familiarly known as "Mother" Thomas, (who was a Welsh woman, reared in Wales), encouraged this movement, and donated a lot of ground, 90 by 111 feet in dimensions, on the northwest corner of Fourth and Pine streets, where the first steps were taken in May, 1883, towards the erection of a church, and the corner stone was laid on June 17th, by the aged "Mother" Thomas, assisted by her sons, Samuel and John, who supported her during this most interesting ceremony. The first named of the members was zealous in supervising the plans and construction of the building, and the operations were carried on with so much success that by November the building was completed. One of the most gratified persons was "Mother" Thomas, and it should be said of her in this connection that after $3,000 had been raised and the plans perfected for a frame edifice, chiefly by the solicitations of Mr. Griffith, she said to him that the plans should be altered for a brick edifice and if he couldn't raise the difference she would attend to its payment. Mr. Griffith altered the plans accordingly and, when the building came to be dedicated, all the debts which had been contracted were paid in full by her assistance.

The edifice is of Gothic style, built of brick, one-story, with a steep, slate-covered roof, surmounted by a neat open spire in a transverse position. Its dimensions are 30 by 50 feet, with entrance porch on Pine street, and a wing entrance on Fourth street. The building committee was Rev. David R. Griffith, Samuel Thomas, David D. Thomas, and William P. Hopkins. While the building operations were going on regular services were held in the Welsh Baptist church on Third street, north of Walnut.

The dedication services were held Dec. 2, 1883, all conducted in the Welsh language, and it was regarded with so much pride that Welsh ministers from Kingston, Providence, and Shendoah came here to participate in the unusual ceremonies. By that time the communicant members had increased to 64. The name adopted was Bethel Welsh Congregational church.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

David R. Griffith (14 years)	William Davies
Tydwel Williams (5 years)	Fynah Williams
	Isaac T. Williams (1913)

A Sunday-school was started with the first movement for a church, the pupils numbering 118, and it has been continued until now. The superintendents have been David R. Griffith, David D. Thomas, and Thomas Williams. The membership of church and Sunday-school have been reduced, owing to removals caused by industrial changes.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—The first efforts towards establishing the Episcopal church at Catasauqua were made in 1870, when the rector of the Church of the Mediator at Allentown (Rev. F. W. Bartlett) held religious services in the public school-building on Willow street. These services were continued at irregular intervals for two years, when the rector was transferred to another part of the diocese and he could no longer conveniently carry them on. The movement, begun in this way, was continued by the rector of the Church of the Nativity at South Bethlehem (Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, now Bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburgh), who came here occasionally and preached in the school-house and also in the Trinity Lutheran church.

during the year 1872. These occasional services were continued from 1873 to 1875 in the railroad station of the Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., by Rev. C. E. D. Griffith, the rector of the Church of the Mediator at Allentown. Among those who supported and encouraged these meetings during that time were:

Mrs. Ryan Mealey	John McRell
Mrs. Wm. Wilkinson	R. Clay Hamersly
Thomas Daugherty and wife

From 1875 to 1893, there were no religious services in behalf of this church; but the rector of the church at South Bethlehem (Rev. C. K. Nelson, now Bishop of the Diocese of Georgia), visited Catasauqua occasionally for the purpose of administering the Holy Communion in the dwelling-houses of certain active members. In April, 1893, Rev. Robert H. Kline, rector of Grace Church at Allentown, instituted a series of meetings in the town and these were continued at various places with much encouragement, which eventually led to the establishment of an Episcopal church here.

When the Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D.D., became the bishop of this diocese, he appointed Rev. William H. Heigham as the missionary at Catasauqua, who took up his residence among the people and exerted himself in behalf of a church for two years, when he removed to New York City. He was followed by Rev. George A. Green, who also labored with great fidelity and secured the erection of a building on the southwest corner of Walnut street and Howertown Road, on a lot of ground which was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Peckitt. The corner stone was laid Oct. 28, 1900, and the attractive, unique edifice was consecrated May 21, 1905.

The building was modeled after the ancient St. Martin's Episcopal Church of England, which was erected outside the walls of Canterbury and afterward restored and used in the year 580, by Queen Bertha, the first Christian Queen of England.

Rev. Mr. Green served until after the consecration of the building, when he accepted a call to Fish-kill, New York, and in June, 1905, removed to that great field of labor. The bishop then appointed Rev. James B. May for the congregation, and this rector has served the church in a most faithful manner until the present time. During his administration the membership has been increased to 200; many improvements have been made to the building, including the installation of a superior pipe organ; and a large vested choir has been introduced which is an impressive adjunct to the services of the church. A handsome pulpit, litany, and prayer desks have been added to the furniture of the church.

A Sunday-school was held at various times until July, 1900; since then it has been maintained with regular sessions and an increasing attendance. The present lay-superintendent is Walter E. Smith.

ST. MARY'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH is situated on the northwest corner of Second and Union streets. The first efforts towards establishing a congregation at Catasauqua were made in 1847, by the following families:

Peter Freund and wife	Nicholas Schmidt and wife
John Blum and wife	George Schneider and wife
Jacob Geiss and wife	Martin Englebert and wife
Ludwig Englebert and wife	Thomas Lindner and wife
Adam Freund and wife	Conrad Schaeffer
	Frank Roth

At that time a lot of ground was bought where the church is now located, in dimensions 67 feet front on Second street, and 105 feet deep. Occasional services were held at the home of Mr. Schneider during the next ten years, first at 330 Church street, and then in the dwelling adjoining the lot on the north, to which he had removed; and the priests who conducted the services were Revs. Charles Duboly, John Kosten-snick, and John Albert, all resident fathers at Easton.

In the beginning of February, 1857, a start was made to erect a small, one-story frame church on the lot mentioned, at the corner, 19 by 30 feet, the builder having been Conrad Schaeffer (one of the organizing members mentioned), which included a diminutive steeple with a bell; and this was dedicated with the usual religious ceremonies on Sept. 9, 1857. The regular services then began to be held once a month on Sundays, by assistant priests from Allentown, and these were continued until 1874, the names being Joseph Winter, William Hernen, and Joseph Schroeder; then Rev. J. Henry Badde, from Bethlehem, came and preached every second Sunday, and continued to do so until 1887.

By 1878 the membership had increased to 65 active, zealous families, and they were encouraged to provide better quarters for their religious meetings. A one-story brick edifice, 30 by 70 feet, was erected on the lot facing Second street, some distance north of the corner; and the same builder who had put up the first church, superintended its erection. A brick central tower and steeple with bell were placed at the front.

Rev. Frederick Schlebbe served from 1887 to April 21, 1889; when Rev. John Seimetz (assistant to Father F. W. Longinus at Pottsville) was appointed priest of this promising congregation, and he has served in a most successful manner until the present time. He not only largely increased the membership, but the possessions of the congregation in the enlargement of the edifice, and in the erection of a fine, commodious parsonage at the rear of the church; and a superior three-story, ten-roomed parochial school, and a Sister's home, two-story brick, on the opposite corner lot.

The first movement towards a parochial school was made in 1884 by the erection of a small one-story brick building with two rooms, and the classes numbered 64 children. It was placed on the lot along Union street, opposite the church, west of the corner. This was occupied ten years, then the large increase of the pupils required a new building and this was supplied, consisting of a large three-story brick building, with ten class-rooms, and an auditorium, 50 by 70 feet, capable of accommodating an audience of 500, on the site of the small school-house; which reflects much credit upon Father Seimetz.

A Sunday-school was started early in the history of the church and it has been maintained until the present time.

In 1874 the congregation established a cemetery for its members in South Catasauqua, by purchasing two acres of land and laying it off into lots; then the interment of the deceased members began to be made there. Previously the interments had been made in the Fairview Cemetery. In January, 1914, it was enlarged by the purchase of three and one-fifth acres of adjoining land. The burials here by Father Seimetz since April, 1889, number 649 by his record. No previous record was kept.

The membership of the church and Sunday-school in January, 1914, was large.

FAIRVIEW CEMETERY was founded by James W. Fuller of Catasauqua in 1858, having purchased from Robert McIntyre and Peter Miller 6 acres, 110 perches of land in South Whitehall (now Whitehall) township, across the Lehigh river from Catasauqua, because the conveniences of interment in the borough were limited. Before that time, the dead bodies of the town had been buried in the graveyards there. Fuller laid off the land into lots, ten by twenty feet, and named the place "Fairview Cemetery" on account of its elevated situation and fair view; and he provided in each deed, delivered by him for lots in the cemetery, that when one-half of the lots in the original plat were sold, the purchasers were empowered to form an association for the care and management of its affairs, make rules and regulations for its government, elect officers and have complete control of the ground.

In 1871, an organization was formed by the lot-holders, who elected the following managers:

Melchoir H. Horn, president.
R. A. Boyer (sec. and	Samuel L. Nevins
treas.)	James W. Swartz
David A. Tombler	William H. Laubach
R. Clay Hamersly	Orange M. Fuller
John Thomas

A petition was presented to Court for the incorporation of "The Fairview Cemetery Association," and the decree was made on Sept. 13, 1872. The dead interred in the grave yards of the borough were then removed to the cemetery.

Many fine monuments have been set up in this cemetery. It includes a superb "Soldiers' Monument" which is recognized as the first erected in Pennsylvania, and this was accomplished largely through the instrumentality of Samuel Thomas in response to an earnest request of his brother David, made shortly before his death in 1862.

In 1895, a superior and attractive, enclosed pavilion was placed in the circle, next to the Soldiers' Monument, by the Association; and another prominent feature is the large vault of David Thomas.

Soon after the cemetery had become the property of the Association in 1872, two bequests were made to it by James W. Fuller and Samuel Glace with the condition that the income should be expended towards the perpetual care and preservation of their burial lots. Since then numerous other lot-holders have followed their example.

The total lots laid off number 2,317. The graves to January, 1914, numbered 4,800. The total area covers about fifteen acres.

John Kane was the first soldier of the Civil War buried in this cemetery, April 27, 1862, and the extraordinary event attracted many people.

FIRST FUNERAL.—After the completion of the first furnace, a young man named John Thomas (a relative of the manager) fell from its top and was killed. Samuel Thomas, the son of the manager, saw the young man drop. The body was buried in the grave yard at the rear of the Presbyterian church on Fifth street, in Allentown. It was carried on a bier, on the shoulders of relays of fellow-employees, who wore high hats, from which hung long streamers of black crepe, after the custom at that time prevalent in Wales.

Almost every inhabitant of the hamlet followed the solemn procession on foot to the grave yard, amongst them being "Mother" Thomas (as she was afterward affectionately called), and Mrs. James Lackey. After the completion of the substantial family vault by David Thomas in Fairview Cemetery, the remains were removed to it. Soon after this funeral, a burial ground was provided in Biery's Port on the lot adjoining the Presbyterian church.

At that time it was customary in the surrounding country, when there was a funeral, to place the coffin on a large farm-wagon on a bed of straw, and chairs were arranged around the coffin for the chief mourners. On account of the thinly-settled country, relatives and friends came a considerable distance to attend a funeral, and after the burial all were invited to return to the house for refreshments. The guests stood in a here by the rapid rush of the water in the canal, which was caused by the forcing process to supply a strong blast for the furnace; and they were buried in the first church graveyard.

Since that time, there has arisen a great change in the modes of burial, and in the construction of the coffins. Then there were no means of embalming or preserving the bodies, the only way being to lay them on sod. Burials were therefore necessarily made soon after death.

A grave yard was attached to the St. Paul's Lutheran church; one to the Evangelical church at the corner of Howertown Road and Mulberry street, and one to each of the Presbyterian churches.

These grave yards in the town were discon-

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

row and waiters served them with a cold lunch, followed by helpers who carried bottles of whiskey and glasses on trays and offered liquid refreshment to all such as wished to indulge.

The cholera of 1854 was fatal. It was brought here in a boat from Philadelphia. Some days there were several funerals; and it was indeed a gruesome sight to see them marching up Church street, the coffin high in the air upon the carriers' shoulders, swaying to and fro, followed by relatives whose lamentations filled the air. Of the McClelland family, an adult brother and sister were buried the same day.

Quite a number of boatmen were drowned and the bodies buried there removed to the Fairview Cemetery. It has been estimated that about 100 bodies were buried in the grave yards of the Presbyterian churches.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.—At the close of the Civil War, the patriotic impulses of this community showed a practical appreciation of the costly services of the volunteer soldiers from Catsauqua and vicinity, by the erection of a costly marble monument on the circular plot, reserved for it in the cemetery. On the four sides of the shaft, there are inscribed the names, rank and regiment of each soldier who boldly went forth to battle that the Union might and should be preserved, numbering altogether 157; and also the names of the battles in which they were engaged. Twenty-six of these soldiers were killed or died in service. Across the top of the shaft hangs the American flag in graceful folds, surmounted by the striking figure of an American eagle with outspread wings, as if standing guard over the heroes sleeping quietly there till the resurrection morn. Around the monument a space was at first reserved for the burial of veteran soldiers, but this idea was afterward abandoned in order to set apart the monument more effectually.

The monument was solemnly dedicated on Oct. 3, 1866, with appropriate ceremonies, pursuant to arrangements by the Monument Association, and Rev. C. Earle, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, delivered an historical address. In the course of his remarks he emphasized the statement that neither his name nor the name of any other civilian member of the committee appeared on the shaft in pursuance of a provision by the Monument Association at the time of its inception "that no man's name shall be inscribed on the monument unless he was sworn into the service of the United States and was under the enemy's fire"; so that it is just what it purports to be, "A Soldiers' Monument."

Maj. A. R. Calhoun was the orator and he delivered an impressive oration to a large concourse of people who had assembled from all the towns and places of the Lehigh Valley, including many men who had been in actual service.

In 1871, Gen. Charles Albright, member of Congress, introduced a special Act of Congress to donate 4 siege guns and 24 cannon balls of unused artillery to the George W. Fuller Post, No. 74, G. A. R., for the adornment of this, "the first soldiers' monument in Pennsylvania"; and in 1884, upon the reorganization of Fuller Post No. 378, G. A. R., the Secretary of War ordered the Commandant of the Watervliet Arsenal at West Troy, N. Y., to issue to said Post four 64-pounder cannons, two of the English model of 1812 weighing respectively 5,514 and 5,498 pounds, and two United States guns of the 1819 and 1829 models, weighing respectively 5,014 and 5,000 pounds; and these were placed at the four corners of the monument as an appropriate and expressive ornamentation.

SCHOOLS.

The first school was held in the "Old Church," and started with 15 pupils. A Mr. Landis was the teacher, and he was soon afterward followed by a young man named Evans, when it was transferred to the Hanover township school-house on Deily's Hill, which overlooked the dam opposite the foot of Second street. This was before 1853. The new school law had previously been accepted. The building was one story, with one room.

The first school building established within the limits of the borough was a frame shanty put up by the Crane Iron Co. at the corner of Church street and Limestone alley.

The second was erected by Hanover township at the corner of Union street and Railroad alley.

The third was the Bridge Street School in 1849.

The fourth was situated on lower Second street now owned by the Lenox Manufacturing Co.

The fifth was the Second street High School building in 1859.

The sixth was on lower Front street, now owned by the Temperance Association.

The seventh was the Lincoln Building on the Howertown Road.

The eighth was the High School building, adjoining the Lincoln Building.

In addition to the schools mentioned, a three-story building, situated on Front street near Union, was rented and used for school purposes. This is now owned by Frank Hunsicker, Esq.

The attendance of the pupils was registered as follows:

1858	300	1861.....	408
1859	325	1862	450
1860	365	1863	474

Mrs. Esther Hudders conducted a private school for years in the basement of the Bridge street Presbyterian church. She and her husband were the first teachers there and they taught three years.

TEACHERS.—The early teachers were the following, with the time of service:

- Margaret Meeker, 1845; from Allentown.
- D. F. Davis, 1846; from Easton.
- Edward Clarke, 1847, from Wyoming county, Pa.
- John Hudders, 1848 to 1852; from Irish Settlement.
- Esther Hudders, 1848 to 1852; from Irish Settlement.
- Joseph Leonard 1853; from Connecticut.
- Rebecca Leonard (sister of Joseph) 1854; from Connecticut.
- Annie E. Butchers 1854-55; from N. Y. State.
- Charles L. Russell 1855-56; from Bridgeport, Conn.
- Samuel P. Bliss 1856; from Connecticut.
- Charles H. Kitchell 1857; from N. Y. State.
- Alonso W. Kinsey, 1857; from Catasauqua.

In the year 1858, the teachers were: Charles L. Russell, grammar school; Alonzo W. Kinsey, and William H. Barton, secondary; Eliza McKee and Anna Phillips, primary.

Mr. Russell having resigned, R. Clay Hamersly became his successor; then his school was regraded and classified; the advanced pupils were formed into a High School which was established in 1863 and assigned to Prof. Hamersly.

ACADEMY.—An academy was erected in 1848-49 on the Presbyterian lot by Alfred Cattermore (an English carpenter who had "strayed" here), by securing subscriptions from the members of the church; and the Crane Iron Co. advanced $1,200 towards the cost of it, for which they took a mortgage. This was regarded as a model school at that time. It had ventilators in the ceiling, and each pupil had his own desk with an ink-well set in on top and screwed fast, and shelves were arranged underneath for his books. It was continued in use as a private school until 1856 when it was sold to the Catasauqua School District for $2,530, and the proceeds, after satisfying the mortgage, were distributed in equal proportions to the two Presbyterian congregations. The trustees of this school were:

David Thomas	David Williams
Robert McIntyre	Owen Rice
Samuel Thomas	John Peter
William Taylor

The School District held and occupied this school house and lot for 40 years, until the erection of the Lincoln school building; then it was abandoned for school purposes. Subsequently it was sold to James W. Fuller for $5,000, and he erected thereon a commodious mansion for himself, which is still standing.

The teachers were John Hudders, and his wife, Esther Hudders, Joseph Leonard, Rebecca Leonard, Samuel P. Bliss, Alonzo W. Kinsey, Charles H. Russell, and others.

READING CLASS.—In reading, a class stood up and read in consecutive order from the head to the foot, or vice-versa; and so the English reader was read through and commenced over again and re-read. It was considered the proper thing when the end of the book was reached at the Latin word FINIS, for the last pupil in the course of reading to call out loudly, "Five Irish Niggers in Spain," and the next to reverse the order of the letters and call out "Six Irish Niggers in France," and this performance generally ended in a trouncing.

CLASS LEADERS.—It was customary to choose two leaders of a spelling class who were selected by the pupils to fill up their respective sides, and whenever a word was mis-spelled by a pupil in the class, he quit and this was continued until only one was left, who represented the winning side.

PENS.—Quills were used as pens and a part of the teacher's duties was to prepare them after school hours, ready for the next session. I remember the day the first steel pens were introduced. They were imported from England and called "Jos. Gillotte Pens," which were sold to the pupils two for three cents. All school supplies then, even the ink, were sold to the pupils.

TEACHERS' PAY.—The teacher's pay, $1.06¼, was brought by the pupils every three months and this was generally paid in Mexican money. Spanish shillings were called "levys"; and sixpences or half-shillings were called "fips" (6¼ cents).

PUNISHMENT.—Corporal punishment in the schools was almost universal. Solomon's admonition "spare the rod and spoil the child" was considered the proper doctrine. Long whips, cut from the stumps of trees after the woods had been removed, were the proper caper. It was considered good practice to send a pupil out into the yard to cut them and bring them into the school-room, then give him a good whipping to break his spirit and so develop obedience.

Rulers were thrown at scholars for whispering, who were directed to bring them to the teacher, then hold their little hands to the teacher who slapped them until the offenders wriggled with pain.

Pupils who failed to understand their sums in mensuration were compelled to stand on a desk, hold a brick in one hand and count the corners of the Bridge street Presbyterian church. This was before the parsonage was erected.

Some of the teachers in those days were barbarous in their treatment of the pupils. They would sneak behind the pupil who had made a mistake in his sums and yank him from his seat by pulling him by the ear, or take a book and bang him on the side of the head. I remember one teacher who called up his pupils and slapped them on their hands with a black ruler (which was supposed to be more painful than a white one), meanwhile chewing tobacco vigorously and expectorating into a large spittoon five feet off.

Another cruel feature of those days was this: When a class was called up to recite or spell, the pupil who missed had to go to the foot of the class, and, at the close of the lesson, tell the teacher how many mistakes were made, and so many times would the teacher slap the palm of the hand hard with a black ruler. Oh, how those slaps would sting! The burning sensation would continue for hours.

TOWN-BALL.—Among the games for the boys was one called town-ball. Self-appointed leaders divided the boys into two contesting parties or sides by selecting one at a time alternately until the number present was exhausted; and that leader started the selection by winning the toss of the bat, "wet" or "dry," either having spat on one side and tossed it into the air, then the other would have to guess, and if the latter got his guess he would take his side to the bat, and the other his side to the field.

The bat was a heavy paddle, not a round stick as now. The ball was not a purchased article; it was generally made by some boy out of his woolen socks which were unraveled and the yarn was wound around some rubber strips cut from an old gum-shoe, or around a small piece of cork, and sewed in a leather cover.

There were four corners, like the points of a square figure; sometimes five corners, an extra one between the second, and third, making the points of a pentagon. If the batter struck at the ball and missed it and the catcher caught it he was out; but if he hit it he had to run and make his base. If the ball was caught on the the sessions of school from four to six months, but the founder of the town did not think it was right to allow the sons of his workmen to run around the streets; so he erected a long frame building, at the corner of Church street and Limestone alley and directed school to be held during the whole year without any vacation.

STATUS IN 1913.—The Board of Directors and the teachers of Catasauqua in December, 1913, together with the buildings in which the schools were carried on, were as follows:

Directors.

James S. Stillman, Pres. Roland D. Thomas
Clifford H. Riegel, Sec. Joseph S. Elverson
Edwin Chapman, Treas. John J. Williams
Harry B. Weaver

LINCOLN SCHOOL BUILDING.

fly or even one bound he was out. All the players had to be made out; then the side would select its best batter to bat and if he succeeded in making three "home runs," his side could start anew; otherwise the fielders would take their turn at the bat.

The score of runs was frequently very high in the game. It was kept by cutting notches on a stick, or by tallies of five.

If the ball should be lost in the grass, the fielders would cry "lost-ball," and the play was suspended until the ball was found.

A runner at or around the bases, hit by a thrown or batted ball, was regarded as out. The ball was not hard; frequently, it was a hollow, flexible "Goodyear" ball, which was preferred.

SESSIONS.—The early custom was to continue

Teachers.

Henry J. Reinhard, supervisor since 1900.

High-school.

Gustavus E. Oswald,	C. D. Hummel
principal.	D. F. Gould
Alfred C. Lewis

Lincoln Building.

Sarah J. McIntyre	Mabel Weisley
Hannah Davis	Mildred T. Lawall
Sarah J. McHenry	Mildred Heilman
Estella McKeever	Mary Leickel
Ella Fait	Elizabeth Scott

Second-Ward Building.

Francis H. Sheckler	Helen Buck
Mame Torrence	Mary McCandless
Sophie Matchette

Third-Ward Building.

Margaret Tolan Jennie Helman
 Amanda J. Funk
 M. Adeline Davies, Supervisor of Music.
 Total pupils, December, 1913, 770.

Equipment.

High School, First ward, erected in 1911; 3-story brick, costing $60,000; 7 rooms; 115 pupils; auditorium capacity, 700; library, 1,000 volumes; chemical laboratory; gymnasium; complete modern appointments.

The Board of Public Instruction then was constituted as follows, the names appearing on a bronze inscription plate which is set in the wall, in the hall on the first floor:

	Joseph Matchette, President
	David Davis, Secretary
	David K. Caldwell, Treasurer
William Weisley	David R. Griffith
Chester E. Frantz	Geo. C. D. Goldsmith
Wilson J. Smith	Harry E. Graffin

Building Committee.

Harry E. Graffin, chairman
 David R. Griffith
 Chester E. Frantz

Builders.

Franklin Goldsmit hand Son.

Lincoln Building, First ward, 2-story, costing $40,000; 10 rooms; 357 pupils; modern appointments.

Second street Building, Second ward, erected in 1859; 3-story brick, costing $20,000; 6 rooms; 185 pupils; modern appointments.

George Taylor Building, Third ward, erected in 1913; one story brick, costing $12,000; 4 rooms; 113 pupils; modern appointments.

(When East Catasauqua was taken from Hanover township in 1909 and annexed to Catasauqua, it included two small one-story brick school-houses for which settlement was made by process of law. The one at the rear of the planing mill was abandoned for school purposes and will be sold; the other was remodeled and enlarged, and named George Taylor Building.)

PUBLIC LIBRARIES.—In 1846, the Crane Iron Co. started a library of 250 books for the use and improvement of their employees. A room was set apart on the second floor of the two-story brick office building on Front street opposite the furnaces for this purpose and it was kept up for nine years. This is another evidence of Mr. Thomas' desire to develop and maintain a high standard in the community.

About 1878, Oliver Williams, another prominent man here in the industrial affairs of the Lehigh Valley, took an active part with other persons in establishing a library. Several hundred volumes of promiscuous books were collected and a successful reading circle amongst the young people was kept up until May, 1891, when the books were presented to the High school and added to its collection. The room was in a building on Church street, west of the Town Hall, where a cigar store is now conducted.

NEWSPAPERS.—Five newspapers have been published at Catasauqua: Herald, Journal, Dispatch, Valley Record, and New Era. The first two had a short existence; the third has continued from the time it started, in 1870, until the present time; and the fourth was published from 1870 until 1897.

THE CATASAUQUA HERALD was first in the borough. It was started in 1857 by Peter Kelchner and ——— Fry, as a weekly newspaper, and they carried on its publication for three years, when Arnold C. Lewis became the proprietor and editor. He embarked in the business with much spirit and had just begun to display his enterprising character and literary ability when the Civil War broke out and his patriotic spirit led him to abandon the quiet field of journalism for the active and strenuous field of war in order to assist in upholding the Constitution and preserving the Union. His brother, Sharpe D., carried on the newspaper for several months and then it was discontinued.

THE CATASAUQUA JOURNAL was started by Thomas Lambert shortly after the close of the Civil War and carried on by him until 1870, when it was sold to Capt. William H. Bartholomew and he assisted Mr. Bartholomew for some time in its publication.

CATASAUQUA DISPATCH.—Edmund Randall learned the art of printing at Chambersburg, and after serving as a private in Co. A, 126th Regt., Pa. Vol., for a term of nine months, he followed printing as a journeyman at Philadelphia until 1870. He then located at Catasauqua and embarked in the printing business for himself as a publisher and job printer, which he has conducted until the present time, being now the oldest continuous publisher and printer in the Lehigh Valley. He first issued a weekly sheet Sept. 1, 1870, entitled The Country Merchant, but afterward, July 24, 1871, changed the name to The Catasauqua Dispatch, and in 1878, enlarged the dimension to the regular size. It has been published weekly by him since then, a period of 44 years. In politics, it has been independent; in local affairs, recognized for its constant devotion to home interests; and in literary selections, appreciated as a family journal. With the strong competition of metropolitan newspapers against him, more especially for the last twenty years, the grit and determination of the publisher are worthy of much praise in maintaining this local newspaper. The job printing department has a complete equipment of types and presses. The business has been conducted at No. 113 Bridge street since 1890. It is the only newspaper issued at Catasauqua. The Valley Record and New Era became merged in the Dispatch.

This newspaper and printing business were purchased by John Matchette in March, 1914, Mr. Randall having retired on account of ill health.

VALLEY RECORD was started on August 15, 1870, as a local weekly journal by William H. Bartholomew. It was a folio sheet with seven columns afterward increased to eight columns. He carried on its publication until he became the postmaster of the borough, when it was merged with the Dispatch.

NEW ERA was started in 1882, by Joseph B. Mayne as the fifth paper, in the Catasauqua Bank building (now the Imperial Hotel). Hiram F. Helman became the owner in 1892 and he conducted it until the fall of 1897, when he sold it to Edmund Randall, who merged it with the Dispatch.

ASSOCIATIONS.—Various associations have been organized and encouraged from an early period in the history of the town until the present time; and like other places the number is large in proportion to population.

SECRET SOCIETIES.—The following secret and beneficial associations have been organized at Catasauqua. The particulars relating to them will be found in the tabulated statement:

Name.	No.	Instituted.	Members.	Value.	Hall.
Odd Fellows—
Catasauqua Lodge,	269	1847	362	$11,000	Odd Fellows.
Fraternity Encampment,	156	1867	87	800	Odd Fellows.
F. & A. M.—
Catasauqua Lodge,	284	1854	172	Masonic.
R. A. Chapter,	278	1894	114	Masonic.
Junior Order American Mechanics—
No-Surrender Council,	103	1881	200	12,000	A. M.
G. A. R.—
Fuller Post,	378	1883	48	T A B
Daughters of Rebecca—
Orpah Lodge,	159	1887	40	Odd Fellows.
P. O. S. of A.—
Washington Camp,	301	1888	206	16,000	S. of A.
Independent Order of Red Men—
Tribe,	204	1888	397	10,000	S. of A.
R. A. Council,	1110	1888	33	A. M.
Knights of Golden Eagle,	241	1888	229	10,000	S. of A.
Knights of Malta—
—Bruce Council,	214	1897	140	8,000	S. of A.
Shepherds of Bethlehem—
Star of Catasauqua,	80	1905	98	A. M.
F. O. Mystic Circle—Ruling,	973	1905	80	A. M.
Knights of Friendship—Thomas,	72	1909	150	A. M.
Woodmen of World—Camp,	250	1910	104	Odd Fellows.
Crane R. & B. A.,		1911	100	Laboratory.
Daughters of Pocahontas,	212	1913	64	Odd Fellows.
Loyal Order of Moose,	1362	1913	124	Odd Fellows.
Catasauqua Club,		1896	80	10,000
Roman Catholic Societies—
St. Nicholas Beneficial,		1884	136	Par. School.
Neumann Kasina,		1906	78	Höhl.
Knights of St. George,	144	1910	68	Par. School.
St. Mary's,		1913	41	Par. School.
St. Lawrence T A B,		1890	90	10,000	T A B

ODD FELLOWS.—The Independent Order of Odd Fellows instituted Lodge No. 269, at Catasauqua, on Oct. 6, 1847. Until 1884 the total initiations were 436; and until Jan. 1, 1914, 970. The membership then was 362. The meetings were held in Esch's Hall on Front street from 1847 to 1890; then the lodge purchased the M. E. church (a fine brick building with a basement), on Front street near Spring, and there the meetings have since been held.

Fraternity Encampment, No. 156 was instituted June 6, 1867. The members on January 1, 1914, numbered 87.

F. AND A. M.—A lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was instituted at Catasauqua on Jan. 30, 1854, under the name of Porter Lodge, No. 284, after the District Deputy Grand Master, James

M. Porter, of Easton, Pa.; and the first officers of the lodge installed were the following:

W M—Robert McIntyre.	S D—F. B. Martin
S W—Levi Kraft	J D—Charles Allen
J W—James McLeary	S M C—William Getz
Sec.—A. H. Gilbert	J M C—James Clugston
Treas.—Charles H. Nolf	Tyler—William Biery

These officers had been made Free Masons in Easton Lodge No. 260, from which they had dimitted. Porter Lodge has had a continuous and successful existence until the present time, a period of sixty years. Dr. Daniel Yoder, of Catasauqua, filled the office of treasurer from 1863 to 1911, a period of forty-eight years, when he was obliged to decline another re-election on account of his advanced age; and Edmund Randall (publisher of the Catasauqua Dispatch) served as secretary from 1886 to 1904; David Davis has served since 1904.

Total membership since 1854, 472; membership in December, 1913, 172.

The following five Lodges were constituted of members made in Porter Lodge and regularly dimitted:

Lehigh Lodge at Trexlertown in 1858.
Barger Lodge at Allentown in 1859.
Manoquesy Lodge at Bath in 1861.
Slatington Lodge at Slatington in 1861.
Chapman Lodge at Siegfried in 1906.

The meetings were held in the following halls: Romig's at Front and Race streets from 1854 to 1868; Fuller's at Front and Church streets from 1868 to 1897; Reiss', No. 511-13 Front street, since 1897. The last named was rented for two years; then the Lodge bought the building from F. W. Wint & Co.

Extraordinary Occasion.—The celebration of the 125th anniversary of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania by Porter Lodge, at Catasauqua, on Sept. 25, 1911, was an extraordinary occasion because the "acting officers" were of such an average great age and long-continued membership. This will appear from the following tabulated statement:

Member.	Age.	Initiated.	Office Held.	Acting Officer.
William R. Houser,	78	1856	W.M. 1860	W.M.
George Bower,	79	1862	W.M. 1867	S.W.
Henry H. Riegel,	75	1865	W.M. 1869	J.W.
Daniel Yoder,	78	1859	Treasurer { 1865-1909 }	Treas.
Edmund Randall,	67	1868	Secretary { 1880-1909 }	Sec.
Joseph Matchette,	70	1865	W.M. 1877	S.D.
Philip Storm,	82	1878	J.D.
James C. Beitel,	69	1874	S. M. of C.
Daniel Davis,	68	1867	J.M. of C.
Allen S. Heckman,	57	1893	W.M. 1893	Purs'n't
Henry Souder,	84	1872	W.M. 1872	Tyler.
Benjamin Lochman,	84	1868	W.M. 1868	Chaplain.

The attendance was 115 members, and 35 visitors.

R. A. Chapter.—Catasauqua Royal Arch Chapter, No. 278, was constituted April 11, 1874, with the following charter members:

John B. Davis, High Priest	Owen F. Fatzinger
Abraham F. Koons, King	Charles R. Horn
Chas. D. W. Bower, Scribe	Charles W. Chapman
Dr. Daniel Yoder, Treas.	Allen S. Heckinger
Edmund Randall, Sec.	William W. McKee
Dr. Henry H. Riegel	Edwin C. Koons
	Morgan Emanuel
	John Matchette
	William R. Thomas

Seven of these have since died. Altogether 223 companions have been exalted. Membership, January, 1914, 114. Two chapters have been constituted from No. 278: Slatington, No. 292, in 1909; Siegfried, No. 295, in 1913.

The chapter meetings have always been held where the Blue Lodge assembled.

G. A. R. Posts.—Fuller Post, No. 74, was organized at Catasauqua in 1867. The active members, who filled the several offices, were Edwin Gilbert, Spencer Tetemer, William H. Myers, Aaron McHose, and John W. Heberling. The total membership was 30. It was disbanded in 1869. The meetings were held on Front street, north of Walnut.

A re-organization was effected in 1872 as No. 378, but it was again disbanded in 1876. During this time, in 1875, Congress donated to the Post 4 cannon and 16 shot, for the purpose of decorating the "Soldier's Monument" in the Fairview Cemetery.

A third organization was effected in 1883, with the name of Lieut. George W. Fuller Post, No. 378,—after a veteran of the Civil War, enlisted in Co. F, of the 47th Regt. Pa. Vols. The organizers were Edwin Gilbert, Charles Laramy, Frank H. Wilson, Edmund Randall, Joseph H. Schwab, Joseph Matchette, John Matchette, and Joseph Wray. The meetings were held over the Catasauqua National Bank, on Front street, until 1901, when the quarters were removed to the old Front street school building, No. 215, (now the T. A. B. Hall), where they have continued until the present time on the first floor, in the south room.

The meeting-place is commonly called G. A. R. Hall. The membership, in December, 1913, was 48. The quarters are handsomely decorated with the pictures of battle-scenes and war generals; and on the ceiling there are narrow wooden strips, fastened in the form of a star, and pictures of badges of the army corps (25) are attached to them, including the Division colors. Among the mementos of the Civil War are 24 muskets in a walnut case; and a cabinet filled with relics gathered from the battle-fields of the Civil War and donated in 1888 by the late Joseph Hunt (brother of Joshua), upon his removal from Catasauqua.

K. G. E.—Catasauqua Castle, No. 241, Knights of the Golden Eagle, was instituted Jan. 30, 1888, and the twenty-fifth anniversary was celebrated Jan. 27, 1913, in the P. O. S. of A. Hall. From 1888 to 1914 the total receipts were $41,648, and of this sum the benefits paid amounted to $22,568. The assets of the company were $10,000, on Jan. 1, 1914. The total initiations exceeded 500; present membership, 230.

Nathan A. Bartholomew has been the faithful Master of Records for upwards of 20 years.

KNIGHTS OF HONOR was organized at Catsauqua under the name of Iron Lodge, No. 1964, in 1881 as a secret beneficial society with 20 members, which increased to 80. Until 1909 it became so reduced that it was merged with Allen Lodge, No. 1764, at Allentown. On January 1, 1914, there were only three survivors: John Morrison, James Tait, and Edmund Randall; on the 6th of January, Morrison died, and now there are but two survivors.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETIES.—The subject of temperance was kept prominently before the community from the real beginning of the town in 1839. David Thomas, the manager of the furnace, was particularly desirous of giving it a firm foothold in order to maintain the character and reliability of his workmen, and he and his wife encouraged the formation and maintenance of societies. Oliver Williams, another prominent iron-master here, and his wife, were also active and earnest in its behalf.

Cadets of Temperance.—Crystal Fount Section No. 34, Cadets of Temperance, was chartered by the Grand section on June 16, 1868. The charter members were:

Harry Fuller	Walter Williams
David Kennedy	George Garrigues
Evan J. Evans	Morgan Williams
Ali D. Price	Frank McIntyre
James McAllister	John Harris
James E. Gillespie	Owen Fackler
James Lehr	Frank Graffin
Edward J. Goering	Frank Weibel
John Davis	Thomas Evans
John Hollenbach	John Nevins
William Graffin	Jere Shaneberger

These names are given to show what young men of the town were interested in the cause of temperance at that time. All of them have died excepting Frank McIntyre. Capt. Joseph Matchette organized this section.

The meetings were held in Temperance Hall on Second street and continued for some years.

Good Templars.—On Sept. 13, 1882, Walker Lodge, No. 578, Independent Order of Good Templars, was chartered by the Grand Lodge, with 52 members, and Joseph Matchette was installed as the Worthy Chief Templar. This was active for some time and accomplished much good during its existence.

The St. Lawrence Temperance and Beneficial Society was organized in 1890, under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church. It purchased the Front street school building in 1900, and there its meetings have since been held and its organization successfully maintained. The property is valued at $10,000; the membership is 90. Since then the two-story brick building with a bell-tower has been known as the T A B Hall. The borough erected the building in 1868, and conducted schools there until 1896, when they were transferred to the new Lincoln Building on Howertown Road.

The building was divided into compartments and these are occupied by different organizations, including the G. A. R. Post. It has a large room for amusements.

LYCEUM.—In 1857, a literary society under this name was carried on at Catsauqua, which was active until December, 1860, when the political and war excitement led to its disbandment. The members were:

David Williams	James Thomas
Daniel N. Jones	W. R. Thomas
William H. Glace	L. I. Thomas
John M. Davies	Owen F. Leibert
Samuel Roberts	John J. Thomas
Enoch Phillips	William M. Jenkins
David Thomas, Jr.	William H. Laubach
Daniel Milson	John Baird
George W. Fuller	Samuel Davis
George Davies	Joseph Matchette
Edward Hall	Daniel Davis
Thomas Jones	John James
Mitchell McMonagh	George Eisenhart
Morgan Richards	William J. Thomas
G. W. Cyphers	John Richard
Wm. McClelland, Jr.

The last president was Thomas Jones, and the secretary Joseph Matchette.

The subject of debate on Nov. 6, 1860, was: "Is the South justified in seceding if Abe Lincoln is elected?" The debate took place on Nov. 19th, and the debaters were:

Affirmative.	Negative.
Thomas Jones	Jos. Matchette
Joseph Forrest	Samuel Davis
Morgan Richard

The Chair decided in the affirmative, but the house in the negative.

The meetings were held in what was called "Temperance Hall," on Second street, near Church, on the second floor of the Crane Iron Co.'s carriage shed.

BRASS BANDS.—About 1845, a band of music was organized in the village with John Thomas as leader and the last survivor was Samuel Thomas. It continued until 1854, when Samuel Thomas and other principal players removed to Hokendauqua. The instruments were made of brass, some of which were very large and attracted much attention not only on account of their size but of the great volume of tone produced by the strong-winded players.

Another was organized at Catasauqua in 1868 and named "Pioneer." The members were:

Benjamin Bachman	O. M. Fuller
Frederick W. Becker	William Koons
Atilio Benvenuti	Uriah Kurtz
James C. Beitel	Robert Miller
Walter Biery	Henry Rothrock
Henry W. Ehrie	Jacob Sigley
H. C. Eckenberger	John Stuart

The name was afterward changed to "Catasauqua," and the organization has been kept up until now. The early leaders were Anthony Bush, William Dieterline, Conrad Hirst, and C. F. Roth (member from 1873-1907). The band filled a special engagement for a week at the "Centennial" (1876), at Philadelphia.

A band was organized in the "East-End" in which members of the Walker family were prominent but it disbanded in a few years.

MUSICAL CENTRE.—Catasauqua has been recognized as a musical centre of Lehigh county since 1870, when a "Choral Society" was organized, and this spirit has been maintained with varying social energy until the present time. In 1914 the society numbered 160 members, with Harry E. Graffin as the president, and Matthew F. Webber as the director. Two superior concerts were given on the 21st and 22d of April, in the high school auditorium, which were largely attended and highly appreciated.

LAWRENCE SOCIAL CLUB.—In 1878 a number of boys at Catasauqua, the sons of the prominent business men of the place, associated together and formed a club which they called "Lawrence," after a naval hero in the War of 1812-15, who had won their admiration. It was not simply for the purposes of ordinary club life, but for mental improvement and physical culture as well; and in this behalf their parents gave them encouragement, one of the parents, 'Squire Koons (from 1875 to 1898) setting aside a two-story frame building with a large room on each floor along Mulberry street, to the rear of his office, No. 146 Front street, for their use. The rooms were appropriately furnished including a billiard table, "artistic" mural decorations, and a library of several hundred volumes, which embraced history and fiction. Weekly meetings were held, debates carried on and recitations encouraged, regularly conducted under rules and regulations. Singing was a special feature, with Prof. J. S. P. Faust, of Allentown, as their teacher, he having taught many of the parents. Some of the members became not only proficient singers, but performers on the guitar and mandolin. Nearly every year they had "outings" at Dingman's Ferry in Pike county.

All of them became prominently identified with business affairs, almost entirely at Catasauqua, and all of them excepting one became affiliated with Free Masonry.

The club was maintained until 1905, and in that year the last outing was had. After a successful existence for nearly thirty years, the members look back to the days of their young manhood, and talk over their "club life" with much pleasure.

The following list comprises the members. Only three have died, marked *; and the survivors are residing at Catasauqua, excepting eight as indicated:

David S. Bachman (Allentown)	Edwin C. Koons, Esq.
David J. Beck (N. Y.)	Albert A. Koons (N. Y.)
Dr. Alfred J. Becker	Dr. Charles E. Milson
Edwin Chapman	Joseph Milson
Rowland T. Davies	Marmaduke Peckitt (Oxford, N. J.)
August Degner (Chicago)	Dr. William A. Riegel
James W. Fuller (3d)	Rowland D. Thomas
John J. Glick*	Wm. R. Thomas, Jr.
George W. Graffin	John W. Thomas (York)
Harry E. Graffin	William J. Snyder (Brazil, Ind.)
John J. Griffith	Ralph Weaver
Richard O. Heilman	Harry B. Weaver
George E. Holton*	George H. Williams
Dr. James L. Hornbeck	Walter E. Wyckoff
Charles R. Horn
David Hunt*
James D. Kaye (N. Y.)

CATASAUQUA CLUB.—A bicycle club was organized in the early part of 1896 at Catasauqua, which included upwards of 50 members, and they secured the home of the late Morgan Emanuel, deceased, No. 226 Pine street, for their quarters. In the fall of that year the members determined to convert it into a social club, and 40 members signed the charter. The building, a two-story brick, was then purchased, the necessary changes were made, a bowling alley was constructed in the basement, and the rooms (13) were furnished, including a billiard table, at a total expense of $10,000. One of the features of the club is that members are prohibited from treating one another. The reading room is supplied with leading periodicals and newspapers. The "grill-room" has an octagonal table with nearly 100 initials of members and prominent visitors inscribed on the top, including a flag and "S" to signalize the visit of Admiral Schley. O. J. Benvenuti has been the courteous and efficient steward since 1897. The membership in February, 1914, was 80.

BANKS.—There are two banks in the borough, the National Bank of Catasauqua and the Lehigh National Bank of Catasauqua.

NATIONAL BANK OF CATASAUQUA.—The first was established Sept. 9, 1857, as a "State Bank" with a charter from the State of Pennsylvania by an Act of Assembly passed May 5, 1857, and an authorized capital of $100,000. Its first officers and directors were:

Eli J. Saeger, president.

David Thomas	Jonas Biery
John S. Hoffman	James W. Fuller
Charles A. Luckenbach	Robert Oberly
Jacob P. Scholl	Samuel Laubach
David A. Tombler	Jacob Fatzinger, Sr.
Joshua Hunt	William Miller
Melchoir H. Horn, cashier.
John O. Lichtenwallner, teller.
James W. Mickley, clerk.

ier's residence, was erected on the old foundation, with superior improvements to meet the demands of its business.

In 1865, it was converted into a National bank. The charter was extended in 1885 for 20 years; and re-extended in 1905 for 20 years more.

In 1903, the bank was removed to its present locality at Bridge and Second streets, in a substantial and stately stone building with a modern equipment for security against fire and burglary. It may be mentioned that the site was offered in 1858 free of cost to the bank by David

Its first place of business was in the residence of Thomas Frederick on lower Front street in a room which is now used as a barber shop. The Lackey two-story brick-building on Front street, No. 139, was then secured, remodeled, and made suitable for banking purposes, and in 1858, the bank was removed to it. In that locality it continued in active operation with increasing success until 1903. In 1867, a substantial three-story brick building, embracing a bank and cash-

Thomas, which was declined; but in 1903, when purchased, the price was $13,000.

The above cut shows a complete set of notes issued by the Bank of Catasauqua. The five dollar bill was the first note issued by the bank numbered one, and was the first note paid out over its counter. It was carried by General William Lilly, of Mauch Chunk, for many years. The one dollar bill was the first one of this denomination issued.

The first statement of the bank, Jan. 5, 1858, was as follows:

Resources.		Liabilities.
Notes,	$ 89,225	Capital Stock, .	$100,000
Cash, etc.,	146,078	Surplus,	690
Property,	1,433	Circulation, ...	129,000
	$236,736	Deposits,	7,046
			$236,736

In 1865, when it became a National bank, its financial situation was as follows:

Edwin Thomas, president.
 Dr. H. H. Riegel, vice-president.
 Frank M. Horn, cashier.
 H. V. Swartz, assistant cashier.

Officers.

PRESIDENTS.

Eli J. Saeger, 1857-88
 Melchior H. Horn, 1888-90
 Frank M. Horn, 1890-99
 Owen F. Fatzinger, 1899-1904
 Edwin Thomas, 1904-1914

NATIONAL BANK OF CATASAUQUA.

Resources.		Liabilities.
Notes,	$361,105	Capital Stock, ..	$180,600
Bonds,	118,500	Surplus, etc., ..	42,177
Cash,	196,051	State Bank
Due from		Notes, still
Banks,	23,634	outstanding, ..	348,532
Bank,	8,100	Deposits,	116,907
	$707,390	Due to Banks, .	19,174
			$707,390

CASHIERS.

Melchior H. Horn, 1857-88
 Frank M. Horn, 1888-90
 Charles R. Horn, 1890-99
 Frank M. Horn, 1899-1914

LEHIGH NATIONAL BANK.—The second bank was organized in July, 1906, with a capital of $125,000, and the First Board of Directors was constituted as follows:

James C. Beitel	James W. Peters
Dr. A. J. Becker	B. Frank Swartz
H. A. Benner	James J. Seyfried
George H. Dilcher	Charles W. Schneller
Wm. F. Fenstermacher	Oscar J. Stine
William H. Glace	A. H. Snyder
Herman Kostenbader	Rufus M. Wint
P. J. Laubach	Thomas Schadt
Frank B. Mauser	Dr. Daniel Yoder

The annual dividends since its organization have been something over seven per cent.

In November, 1913, its situation was as follows:

Resources.		Liabilities.
Loans,	$1,070,050	Stock,	$ 400,000
Bonds,	800,500	Surplus, etc., ..	380,401
Bank, etc., ...	70,000	Circulation, ..	197,498
Cash, etc., ...	284,639	Deposits,	1,256,380
	$2,234,279		$2,234,279

Directors and

Rowland T. Davies
 G. B. F. Deily
 D. George Dery
 J. S. Elverson
 Charles C. Kaiser
 Charles E. Lawall
 George B. Mauser

Officers, 1914.

Lucius H. McHose
 Leonard Peckitt
 Dr. H. H. Riegel
 Harry J. Seaman
 Edwin Thomas
 Charles N. Ulrich

Mr. Glace, a resident attorney-at-law of large practice and business experience, was selected as president; Mr. Beitel, as vice-president, and J. F. Moyer as cashier. All the stock was taken by residents of Catasauqua and vicinity.

The property on the southeast corner of Front and Bridge streets (which extended to Railroad alley, 45 by 198 feet), was purchased from the estate of James W. Swartz, deceased, and steps were taken to erect a proper bank building for business.

Temporary quarters were established on the premises of Mr. Glace at 423 Front street, and actual business was started on Aug. 1st; and the first financial statement on Sept. 4th was as follows:

Resources.	Liabilities.
Loans, $168,371	Capital Stock, . $ 97,580
Bonds, 36,247	Surplus, etc., .. 3,218
Cash, etc., ... 69,120	Circulation, ... 35,000
Bank, etc., 2,934	Deposits, 140,874
$276,672	$276,672

During the year 1907-08 an attractive bank building was erected with the most approved equipment for banking purposes, with assurance of protection against loss from fire or burglary. It is two-story, built of terra cotta; the first floor commodious and convenient of access, is occupied by the bank, and the second floor is set apart for offices.

LEHIGH NATIONAL BANK.

The management of its affairs during the first year showed a large increase of deposits, evidencing that this second bank had won the support and practical encouragement of the community.

The last financial statement in November, 1913, was as follows:

Resources.	Liabilities.
Loans, $354,078	Stock, 125,000
Bonds, 275,701	Surplus, etc., .. 63,576
Bank, 33,000	Circulation, ... 35,000
Cash, etc., 97,943	Deposits, 537,146
$760,722	$760,722

Officers.

PRESIDENTS.

William H. Glace, 1906-08
James C. Beitel, 1908-14

CASHIER.

Jonas F. Moyer, 1906-14

The Board has continued the same with the exception that Mr. Glace and Mr. Schadt resigned; Mr. Swartz died; and Mr. Kostenbader also died and his son August was elected his successor.

SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.—The first mutual association formed at Catasauqua for the saving of money was in 1868. It was called "Mechanics' Land, Loan, Saving and Building Association." The officers were Joshua Hunt, president; John Williams, treasurer; David Davis, secretary. It was conducted simply as a savings association, the moneys paid in by members being loaned. The shares numbered about 1,200, held by members from five shares to fifty. The par value was $200. This value was realized in eleven years, and in 1879 the affairs of the association were closed.

A similar association named "Catasauqua," was formed in January, 1870, by William H. Glace, Esq. The officers were Charles W. Chapman, president; Robert E. Williams, secretary. The par value was realized in twelve years, notwithstanding the panic of 1873-76. It covered 2,500 shares. These two were the only associations of this kind.

Since 1887, three associations have been organized and respectively run in series after the twelfth year when the par value of $200 of the first series was reached. They are the "Home," organized Feb. 2, 1887; the "Catasauqua," organized Jan. 13, 1890; and the "Lehigh," organized in July, 1910.

As to the "Home," for the fifteen series completed, 4,300 shares were in force, 1,811 matured, the total payments amounted to $370,000, and the value of the shares of the several series ran from $205 to $212. As to the "Catasauqua," the figures of the maturing series were about the same. This shows reliable and successful management.

OLD HOME WEEK CELEBRATION.—During the week of June 28 to July 4, 1914, Catasauqua held an old home week celebration, which was very successful, and which attracted many former residents. The president of the Old Home Week Association was Leonard Peckitt; secretaries, Harry H. Aubrey and Daniel B. Quinn; treasurer, James S. Stillman. The executive committee was composed of the chairmen of the several committees: J. S. Elverson, finance; William H. Glace, Esq., historical; Rev. David R. Griffith, memorial; Captain Joseph Matchette, parade and music; Edmund Randall, publicity; Albert B. Lee, fireworks; Thomas Deemer, decoration; John L. Shick, entertainment; Harry B. Weaser, educational; and Wilson Scott, concessions.

The Historical Committee consisted of William H. Glace, Esq., chairman; Rev. J. F. Lan-bert, H. J. Reinhard, Charles R. Roberts, James B. Laux, Dr. Daniel Yoder, Thomas Jones, Rev. J. A. Little, D.D., David Davis, Thomas Quinn, Rev. A. P. Frantz, Frank M. Horn, Rev. J. A. Seimetz, and Edmund Randall.

At a meeting of the committee on Nov. 29, 1913, James P. Lambert and Henry J. Reinhard were chosen editors of a history of the borough, which was issued June 1, 1914. The program of events during the week was as follows:

Sunday, June 28th.—Religious Day.

Special thanksgiving and commemorative services in all churches. Receptions to former pastors.

Monday, June 29th.—Reception Day.

General reunion of families and social and fraternal societies.

Band concert in the evening at 8.45 o'clock. Concert by the Catasauqua Choral Society on St. Paul's lawn at 7.45 P. M. Address by Dr. John A. W. Haas, President of Muhlenberg College, Allentown, on a civic topic.

Tuesday, June 30th.—Educational Day.

Parade of public and parochial school children and alumni at 4 P. M.

Reunion of the alumni association of the Catasauqua high school and concert by Bethlehem Steel Company band in high school auditorium, 8 P. M. Band concert in the evening.

Wednesday, July 1st.—Sport Day.

Registered shoot by Bryden Gun Club. Athletic tournament, 3:30 to 6 P. M.

Thursday, July 2d.—Fraternal Day.

Parade of all fraternal, patriotic and social organizations. Display of fireworks in the evening. Band concert.

Friday, July 3d.—Firemen's Day.

Parade of Catasauqua and North Catasauqua fire departments and invited guests. Band concert in the evening.

Saturday, July 4th.—Historical Day.

Grand historical, patriotic and civic pageant. Display of fireworks in the evening. Band concert.

William Allen's Chair.

CHAPTER XXV.

BOROUGH OF COPLAY.

The borough of Coplay is situated on the Lehigh River about five miles north of Allentown on a part of the tract of land of 400 acres purchased by John Jacob Schreiber from the Penn's in 1740. The original Schreiber home was located along the Lehigh River.

For many years the only settlement of this place consisted of the following: Jacob later Owen Schreiber homestead where now the Coplay cement mill, No. A, is located. The building was erected in 1799, and is still standing, having been used by the Coplay Cement Company as an office and later as a machine and tool shop; the Edward Schrieber homestead, now owned and occupied by Samuel B. Schaadt, and the Daniel Schrieber homestead located along the Lehigh River where the Thomas Iron Company now has its cinder dump. For a long time the place was known as Schrieber. A ferry crossing the Lehigh at this place was known as Schrieber's ferry. A short distance to the west of the Coplay station the distillery known as Schrieber's distillery was located. The building was moved a short distance to the west and is now used as a dwelling place by foreigners. The place was later known as Lehigh Valley, no doubt receiving its name from the Lehigh Valley Iron Company whose furnaces were located at this place. In 1854 when the Thomas Iron Company was organized and located at what is now Hockendauqua, the place was known as Coplay, named after the creek which empties into the Lehigh River a short distance to the south. The Thomas Iron Company being a competitor of the Crane Iron Company of Catasauqua, for the purpose of attracting trade selected the name Hockendauqua after the name of creek emptying into the Lehigh on the opposite side of the river and erected a large sign with the following inscription on it: "This place shall henceforth be known as Hockendauqua."

Lehigh Valley was then changed to Coplay. Coplay being a corruption from "Kolapechka" the name of the son of the Indian Chief Paxanosa, who lived at the head of the creek named after him near Unionville.

The borough of Coplay was formed out of a part of Whitehall township in 1869. The following is the record of the court, Feb. 10, 1869, petition of citizens of the village of Coplay presented praying for a charter of incorporation; same day petition ordered to be laid before the grand jury.

"April 7, 1869, the grand jury returned the charter of incorporation approved. Charles Keck, foreman."

"Now, April 7, 1869, the court confirms the judgment of the grand jury and decree that the said town of Coplay be incorporated into a borough, in conformity with the prayers of the petitioners and the corporate style and title thereof shall be 'The Borough of Coplay.'"

Schools.—A stone school house was erected at Schrieber's prior to 1830. The school house stood in West Coplay, near the bridge crossing the Ironton Railroad. It was the public school for the people living at Coplay, Hockendauqua and surrounding sections. It was abandoned as a school in 1869 and was used later as a hospital for smallpox patients. The building was torn down a number of years ago.

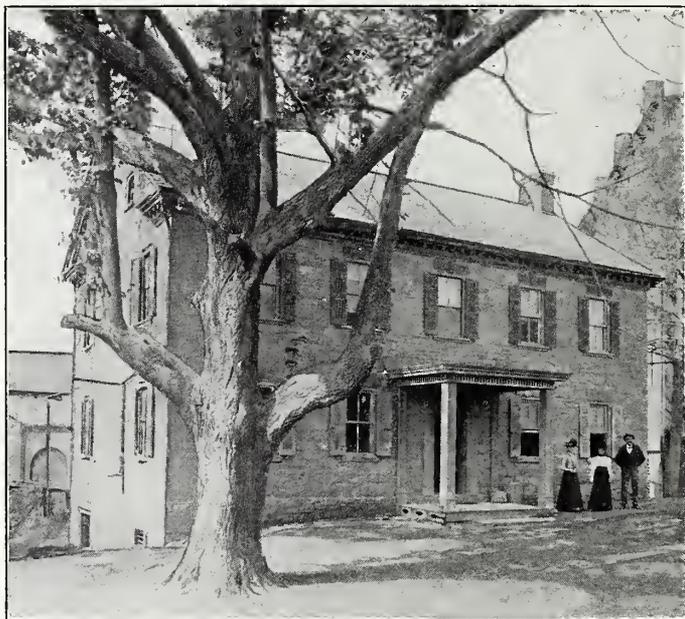

WASHINGTON SCHOOL BUILDING, BUILT 1909.

In 1860 the citizens of Coplay expressed a desire for a school house in the growing village to have it more convenient for the children and to use it occasionally for religious purposes. The same year a one-story brick school house was erected at the corner of Second street and Keystone alley. The corner-stone of this building had the following inscription: "Lehigh Valley School House, 1860." When the new school building on Chestnut street was erected the cornerstone of the old building was removed and placed below the corner-stone of the new building. Part of the walls of the old building are still standing; upon it the second school house of Coplay was built in 1870 containing four rooms. This is now known as the town hall and is used by the town council and the fire company. The third building was erected in 1892 on Chestnut street, containing 10 rooms and all the modern conveniences. In 1909 the Washington building containing four rooms, known president of the "Allentown Female College," a minister of the Reformed Church, started to preach occasionally to an unorganized congregation in the school house. Rev. S. A. Leinbach having been elected pastor of the Egypt charge moved to Coplay in 1868 and in the absence of Rev. Hofford frequently conducted services in the school house. The first communion services were held in the school house April 16, 1871.

Trinity Reformed congregation was organized Feb. 12, 1871, when the following persons were elected: Elders, Owen L. Schrieber and Benja-as the High School building was erected at the corner of Fourth and Center streets.

SCHREIBER HOMESTEAD, BUILT 1799.

Churches.—The borough of Coplay has two churches, Reformed and Lutheran. As early as 1859 religious services were held in Aaron Schrieber's barn by William C. Rothrock, who was a licentiate of the Reformed Church, and at the time teaching school at Siegfried's. Aaron and David Schrieber, the owners of the lumber yard at Coplay, furnished the lumber for the temporary seats. A small table now in possession of James and Maria Schrieber was used as a pulpit. On a number of occasions the services were so well attended that the seats were all occupied and a number of persons stood throughout the entire service.

After the school house was erected in 1860 services were frequently held in the school house. About the year 1867 Rev. W. R. Hofford, min S. Levan; Deacons, A. F. K. Krout, C. H. Knerr, Edward S. Haaf and Nathaniel Stofflet. Through the liberality of B. S. Levan and the Lehigh Valley Iron Company the Reformed congregation was enabled to erect a house of worship. At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Lehigh Valley Iron Company, held March 22, 1872, the following action was taken:

"Resolved, That the Lehigh Valley Iron Company will give a suitable lot of ground for the erection of a Reformed Church in Coplay and pay two thousand dollars in cash for the erection of the same."

The corner-stone was laid July 28, 1872, and the church was dedicated June 14 and 15, 1873. The church is constructed of brick, the dimensions are 40 x 60 feet and originally had a high steeple. This was blown down during a severe storm in 1882. The same year a new tower was erected. In 1891 an annex 32 x 40 of brick was built for Sunday school purposes. In 1892 the congregation was chartered. In 1902 steam heat and electric lights were installed. In 1907 the beautiful and commodious parsonage was erected at the corner of Fourth and Coplay streets. In 1910 a Wilson rolling partition was placed between the church and Sunday school room. Art windows were installed and the church and Sunday school rooms were frescoed. The following pastors have served the congregation: Rev. S. A. Leinbach, 1872 to Dec. 31, 1883; Rev. W. R. Hofford, Jan. 1, 1884, to Jan. 31, 1901; Rev. Thos. H. Krick, Aug., 1901, to present time. The Sunday school was organized May 26, 1871. The Coplay cemetery was dedicated Oct. 18, 1874.

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran congregation of Coplay, was organized on Ascension Day, May 22, 1873, through the efforts of Rev. J. D. Schindel, D.D., who became the first pastor. Rev. F. J. F. Schantz had in years past preached in the public school house and it was there that the congregation was organized.

Until the year 1882 the congregation worshipped in the same building with Trinity Reformed congregation. Early in 1882, however, the pastor with much consecration supported by a willing congregation, began to solicit subscription and within ten months there stood on Third street, between Center and Coplay streets, a church building for the Lutheran congregation, dedicated to the worship of God and free from debt. The services of dedication were held on Nov. 12, 1882.

Upon the resignation of Dr. Schindel in 1883 Rev. G. W. Sandt, D.D., now editor of The Lutheran, was elected pastor and served for a period of one year. With the departure of Dr. Sandt, Dr. Schindel again became the pastor and remained so until his death on June 27, 1908.

In the year 1900 building operations were again begun to accommodate the growing congregation and Sunday school, and on Sept. 7, 1902, a new church building, having twice the capacity of the first, was dedicated. Again, largely through the efforts of the indefatigable pastor, Dr. Schindel, this building was soon paid for.

In the year 1899 Rev. J. J. Schindel, a son of the pastor, became his assistant, and since his death has remained pastor of the congregation to the present time. Since 1883 there has been a flourishing Sunday school in connection with the congregation.

In 1886 an Evangelical Church was erected at the corner of Second and Hall streets. The congregation was abandoned in 1906. The building was later purchased by the American Steam Engineers and is now used as a lodge hall.

INDUSTRIES.

In the Summer of 1853 a company was organized under the firm of Stephen Balliet & Co., consisting of Stephen Balliet, Stephen Balliet, Jr., Aaron Balliet and Benjamin S. Levan for the purpose of erecting and operating an iron furnace. Twelve acres of land on the west bank of Coplay Creek were purchased from Daniel Schrieber and the foundation of Furnace No. 1 was laid in the Fall of the same year. A block of frame houses for the workmen was also built in the Fall of 1853.

Stephen Balliet dying in 1854 a reconstruction of the firm became necessary. Joseph Lanbach and Lewis A. Buckley were admitted as partners. The company was now incorporated as the Lehigh Valley Iron Company. A superintendent's house was erected in the Fall of 1855. In 1862 Furnace No. 2 and another block of houses was erected. In 1867 Furnace No. 3 and a row of brick houses on Third street was erected.

In 1878 the year of financial depression business was discontinued. On June 18, 1879, the Coplay Iron Company (Limited) was incorporated. The business was carried on with varying degrees of success until 1885 or 1886 when it was again reorganized under the name of Coplay Iron Company and continued until 1890 when it went into liquidation.

Gallia Silk Mill of Coplay was established under the name of The Lehigh Valley Silk Mill on April 15, 1901, and in 1908 the name was changed to Gallia Silk Mills. The main building is situate at the corner of Third and Chestnut streets, and was erected in 1900. The mill has a capacity of 357 looms. The company manufactures all kinds of silk dress goods, chiefly, black goods. The mill is well equipped with modern machinery to turn out the best material known on the market.

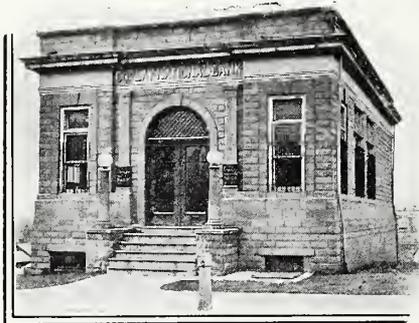

George Beishlag was superintendent of the mill for ten years. The mill gives employment to more people than any public enterprise in Coplay with the exception of the cigar factory. A. Alexander is the general superintendent and L. W. Lutton is the manager under whose skillful management the mill has made considerable improvement.

Cigar Factory.—In 1904 Victor Thorsch & Co. purchased the building formerly used by Person & Riegel as a general merchandise store and remodeled the interior and started a cigar factory. In 1905 T. J. Dunn & Co., of New York, purchased the plant, stock and good will and are still trading under the firm name of Victor Thorsch & Co. The company manufacture the famous New Bachelor cigar. They occupy a four-story brick building, 96 x 42, and a one-story frame building 100 x 45. They employ 300 people. Joseph P. Karch is the general manager of the plant.

Brick Yard.—E. B. Rader, proprietor of the Rader Brick Yards, established the business in 1890. The first year he made brick by hand, employing eight men and turned out 6,000 bricks. He now employs 15 people and manufactures a million a year. The bricks are used mostly locally. Together with his son, William, he also makes cement blocks and slabs.

Coplay National Bank.—This institution was organized in 1909 with a capital of $50,000. In the same year a cement block building was erected on a lot 50x150 feet, located at Second and Hall streets. The interior of the building is modern in its equipment and contains an exceptionally large and strong vault. The deposits approximate $400,000, and the surplus and undivided profits are more than $20,000. The original officers of the bank who continue to serve to the present time follow: Dr. H. Y. Horn, president; W. F. Levan, cashier; Horace Boyd, first vice-president; H. G. Raisbeck, second vice-president; and Sam. Kramer, book-keeper. The directors of the bank are: Dr. H. Y. Horn; W. F. Levan, Horace Boyd, H. G. Raisbeck, W. H. Thomas, John Smith, Morris Caplan, M. J. Hartz, J. W. Scott, and John Berg, who took the place of J. G. Meyle, deceased, who was very active in the organization of the bank.

COPLAY NATIONAL BANK.

Public Places.—The first public place in Coplay was conducted in the building at the corner of First and Coplay streets by Abraham Hartz. Later the Eagle Hotel on the opposite corner was erected by Unis Peters and his son, Moses Wm. F. Fenstermacher has been the proprietor for the last twenty-six years. His predecessor was Thomas Danner.

The Columbia House at the corner of Second and Coplay streets, was erected by Gottlieb Meyle. In 1899 it was purchased by Charles Albert, who conducted it until 1907 when he sold it to John W. Scott, who is the present owner and proprietor.

The Coplay House was built in 1900 by Samuel J. Guth, who conducted it until 1909, when he sold it to John Harvelick. Upon the death of Mr. Harvelick the property was purchased by C. L. Lenhart, of Catasauqua. Since May 1, 1911, Samuel Wallitch is the proprietor.

The Coplay Cemetery Association was organized June 10, 1875, when one and one-fourth acres of ground was purchased from the Coplay Iron Company. The petitioners were: David Meyer, Amos Wolf, Edwin Seifried, A. F. Krout, B. S. Levan, Edward S. Haff, and Edward H. Rogers. On June 2, 1899 two and one-fourth acres were added. The board of managers are as follows: E. C. Simmons, President; A. P. Bartholomew, Vice-President; Granville Rogers, Secretary; Frank Zellner, Treasurer; William Fricker, and David Diefenderfer.

The population of Coplay in 1870 was 728; in 1910, 2,760; taxable property in 1870 was $545,032; in 1913, $768,471.

The office of burgess has been filled by the following persons: 1870, Owen L. Schreiber; 1871, L. P. Levan; 1873, Elias Sieger; 1845, Henry Balliet; 1877, B. S. Levan; 1878, Elias Sieger; 1881, B. J. Conner; 1882, Elias Sieger; 1883, Valentine Koehler; 1886, Levi Frey; 1887, A. D. Laubach; 1890, L. E. Nicholas; 1891, A. D. Lanbach; 1892, A. R. Frey; 1893, John D. Trankley; 1894, Edwin Seyfried; 1897, Edward H. Tait; 1900, H. Y. Horn; 1903, H. M. J. Fenstermacher; 1906, John P. Clader; 1909, H. B. Schaadt. The office of Justice of the Peace has been filled as follows: 1869, George P. Bates; 1869, Nathaniel Kaser; 1879, A. F. K. Krout; 1883, Gotlobe Meily; 1884, A. F. K. Krout; 1888, Austin E. Bush; 1889, A. F. K. Krout; 1892, Peter Koehler; 1893, Joseph B. Mickley; 1897, A. P. Bartholomew; 1902, Calvin Knerr.

CHAPTER XXVI.

BOROUGH OF COOPERSBURG.

BY HON. FRANK B. HELLER.

The territory now occupied by the borough of Coopersburg, was embraced in the tracts designated on the map as Nos. 95, 97, 98, 118 and 119. The original white settlers of the section were mostly Mennonites who emigrated from Holland between the years 1730, and 1737. They were of simple tastes, but industrious, enterprising, thrifty and devout. After clearing sufficient land to afford them sites for dwellings, necessary outbuildings and to raise crops for their sustenance their thoughts turned to the acquisition of a place for religious worship, and as early as 1738-9, they erected a building for church and school purposes on the site of the old Mennonite meeting-house, north of the borough. Among these Mennonites was George Bachman, the pioneer settler of Coopersburg. He was born in 1686, came here in 1737, built a Hotel "Der Siebenstern," about midway between the present Barron House and the shed belonging to it, about 1745. He died in 1753 and was buried at the neighboring meeting house. His tombstone, well-preserved, may yet be seen in the adjoining cemetery. His immediate descendants seem to have held sole possession of the original tract until the close of the eighteenth century, one of his sons became proprietor of the hotel, a second built a house on the south side of the present Station Avenue, and a third the house recently razed and long occupied by the late Ezekiah Gerhard. About the year 1775, Daniel Cooper, born March 31, 1752, at Dillenburg, near Amsterdam in the duchy of Nassau, arrived in the country, first settled at Gosenhoppen, came here in 1800, purchased a tract of land from the Bachmans and erected the house, recently razed, which was long occupied by the late Dr. J. A. Laros. Soon after he purchased the hotel, together with another tract. He served several terms as Justice of the Peace, died in 1822, and was buried at the old meeting house. Some of his descendants have lived here ever since. His son, Peter, who was born in 1791, lived here all his lifetime. He built the older portion of the present Barron House in 1829, the store-house, now occupied by J. D. Knerr, in 1830, and soon after a third house on the site of the present residence of T. S. Cooper. He was repeatedly elected Justice of the Peace, had the reputation of being a remarkably reliable counsellor-at-law for a layman, was an accurate conveyancer and an expert surveyor, and served for some time as Deputy Surveyor General of Pennsylvania. He died in 1837. He had three sons, Milton, Charles and Thomas, and one daughter, Matilda. Milton left the place in his youth, and after serving an apprenticeship in a store in Philadelphia, engaged in the shoe business, his house having an extensive trade in nearly every state of the union, then organized. After retiring from business he returned to the place and lived here until his death in 1906. He was president of the Coopersburg Savings Bank during the whole period of its existence. Charles studied law, served successively as superintendent of the schools of Lehigh county, cashier and president of the Allentown National Bank. Thomas graduated as a physician in 1842, practiced medicine here until 1860, when he was elected to congress, but died before the expiration of his term. Matilda became the wife of Dr. Frederick A. Martin. Tilghman S. is a son of Thomas.

Among the settlers who came here in the early part of the nineteenth century were Michael Landis, a Mennonite preacher, who in 1808, built a house on the site of the residence, late of Dr. M. H. Boye; David Rinker, who built one on the site of that now occupied by Charles Shaffer; Jacob Bowman, who built one on the site of that now occupied by Charles Ott; Jacob Muschlitz, who built one on the site of the residence late of Abel Strawn; Jacob Seider, who built the one now occupied by Morris Reichenbach, and Joseph Frey, Sr., who built a fulling-mill on the site now occupied by Stopp's Mill. The first store was opened by Solomon Keck, in 1820, in a house built alongside of the hotel. During the early part of the nineteenth century the place had come to be one of considerable importance; it was the junction of two stage lines from Allentown and Bethlehem to Philadelphia. It was also the first stopping place of the farmers from the upper sections of Lehigh county on their way to Philadelphia, with their produce. Thirty or forty teams in the yard during a single night was no unusual occurrence.

The place rose to the dignity of a country village in 1818; a postoffice was established April 1, of that year, and David Roth appointed postmaster. The village and postoffice were named Fryburg, after Joseph Fry Jr., who was then proprietor of the hotel and also of a distillery which stood on the site now occupied by Beidler's machine shop, and who also built the first store-house alongside of the hotel in 1820. Subsequently he was successively elected to the state legislature, to the Constitutional Convention of 1837-8, and to Congress. He was considered quite a statesman, and during his congressional term, was visited here by James Buchanan, afterwards President of the United States.

On June 25, 1832, the name of the village and postoffice was changed to Coopersburg after Peter Cooper, heretofore referred to. The North Pennsylvania railroad, now under lease to the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company, was completed, opened for traffic, and a station established here in 1856, the first passenger train passing through the place on the 26th of December, of that year. The Allentown and Coopersburg Turnpike road opened in 1875, and discontinued as such in 1909, passed through the place. The Allentown and Coopersburg Street Railway Company opened an electric railway line from Allentown to the borough in 1902. This, under various names and auspices was soon after extended to Philadelphia and is now known as the "Liberty Bell Route."

In 1878, John S. Stephens, George Blank, George W. Haeney, Dr. H. T. Trumbauer, Samuel Y. Kern, Jacob Anstett, Frank K. Haring, Israel R. Parker, Milton Cooper, Peter Brunner, Sylvester Clewell, Henry Barndt, William H. Baim, John Fluck, David Barron, Thomas E. Cooper, C. Elamina Cooper, Amanda M. Cooper, Jacob Schaffer, Dr. J. A. Laros, T. S. Cooper, William H. Brader, Dr. M. H. Boye, Peter Eckert, William Jordan, Thomas Weaver, Samuel Furry, Genaah Jordan, Samuel K. Eichelberger, William T. Trumbauer, James T. Blank, Amos Haring and Daniel Schaffer, petitioned the court for a charter of incorporation as a borough. The movement met with considerable opposition, but the petitioners finally triumphed and the charter was granted Dec. 2, 1879. The first election for borough offices was held Feb. 17, 1880, and resulted in the election of the following officers: Burgess, John S. Stephens; Town Council—Milton Cooper, Frank K. Haring, Dr. J. A. Laros, Samuel Y. Kern, Daniel Schaffer, and Joel Ritter; Justice of the Peace, George Blank and T. S. Cooper; School Directors—Dr. H. T. Trumbauer, Henry K. Landis, Charles Ott, Genaah Jordan, Jacob

Schaffer and Abraham Geissinger; Constable—Thomas Stephens; Judge of Election—William H. Baim; Inspectors—Allen H. Ott and Jeremiah Landis; Assessor—Aaron H. Hackman; Auditor—Charles Haring.

The ancient village had now assumed a new status, and the fact seemed to inspire its citizens with redoubled energy and augmented public spirit. Institutions and enterprises sprung up as if by magic. Two churches were erected in close succession. The first by the Moravian denomination. The congregation worshipping here was organized Oct. 25, 1883. The cornerstone of the church was laid twelve months later, the dedication took place June 21, 1884. The church plant now consists of a four-room church and Sunday-school building, and a modern parsonage. The pastors who served here were: Rev. L. P. Clewell, 1883-1887; Rev. Jessie Blickenderfer, 1887-1888; Rev. C. B. Shultz, 1888-1890; Rev. J. S. Romig, 1890-1893; Rev. C. E. Romig, assistant pastor, June, 1892-March, 1893, pastor from then to 1894, Rev. J. Erickson, Nov. 1894-Sept. 1896, Rev. D. Hayes Keech, Oct. 1896-Nov. 1897; Rev. S. C. Albright, M. A., Dec. 1907-June, 1911; Rev. Edmund D. S. Bruner, M. A., July, 1911. The congregation publish a monthly magazine, "The Coopersburg Moravian News." The second church erected in the borough was built in 1888, incorporated in 1891. It consists of a brick church building with two annexes for Sunday-school purposes, is furnished with a pipe organ, with water-motor bellows, piano and reed-organ, electric lights, steeple and bell. It is a Union Church of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations. Rev. E. A. Yehl was the first pastor of the Lutheran congregation, resigned in 1893, and was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Kistler, the present incumbent. Membership, 160. Rev. J. G. Dubbs was the first pastor of the Reformed congregation, resigned in 1912, and was succeeded by Rev. Thomas M. Kressley, the present incumbent membership, 115. Sunday-school membership, both denominations, 403. A new school-house of respectable dimensions, though with a single room, was erected immediately after the organization of the borough, but this was soon found inadequate to supply the educational facilities desired and was therefore supplanted by a modern structure designed and equipped to meet all demands likely to arise in the near future.

Next in the line of public improvements came the erection of water-works in 1903 followed by the organization of a Fire Company the same year.

Among the other institutions in the borough some of them ante-dating it are Coopersburg Lodge I. O. O. F., founded in 1850, Saucona Encampment, I. O. O. F., founded in 1853, Saucon Lodge F. and A. M., founded in 1870, Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., founded in 1890, Junior O. U. A. M., founded in 1900, M. W. of A., founded in 1904, P. O. of A. (Ladies) founded in 1905, Boys' Scouts, founded in 1913, and the Ladies Aid Societies of both churches.

Among the industries and enterprises of the borough are the following:

Hotels and Places of Entertainment.

Barron House, on Main Street, W. K. Link, proprietor.

Van Ness House, Main Street and Station Avenue, Dr. A. M. Gary, proprietor.

Baldwin House, Station Avenue, Allen Kemmerer, proprietor.

Restaurant, Main Street, Stuart Miller, proprietor.

Restaurant, Station Avenue, W. W. Snyder, proprietor.

General Stores.

The Old Stand, opposite Barron House, J. D. Knerr, proprietor.

Main Street, near Creamery, Wilson S. Moyer, proprietor.

Main Street, opposite Van Ness House, Harry E. Young, proprietor.

Station Avenue, opposite station, T. J. Trumbauer, proprietor.

Hardware, Main Street, A. O. Gehman, proprietor.

Green Grocery, pies and pastry, W. S. Urmy, proprietor.

Stoves, tinware and plumbing, J. T. Bixler, proprietor.

Drug-store, W. W. Coller, proprietor.

Shoe factory and store, C. H. Stoneback, proprietor.

Automobiles, supplies, etc., Charles H. Roeder, proprietor.

Creamery, Chas. D. Steininger, proprietor.

Agricultural implements, etc., Universal Shredder Co., W. H. Beidler, manager.

Handle Factory, M. B. and F. B. Landis, proprietor.

Coal and feed, H. E. Knappenberger, proprietor.

Lumber, M. B. Landis, proprietor.

Coopersburg Sentinel "Weekly Paper" and job printing office, H. A. Shelly and Brother, proprietors.

Coopersburg bending works, A. M. Landis, proprietor.

Coopersburg Casket Co., Harvey Baus, manager. Manufacture caskets and sell to undertakers.

Furniture and undertaking, H. A. Ritter, proprietor.

Coopersburg bakery, Main Street, C. F. Newcomer, proprietor. Established 1886 by William Ruth. Passed into hands of present owner in 1890. Employs seven hands. Three teams deliver its products.

Coopersburg Telephone Company, organized May 9, 1908, first as a firm, now as a limited partnership. Officers: President, C. H. Stoneback; Secretary, C. F. Newcomer; Treasurer, A. M. Landis. Operates seven miles of wire, has fifty-four subscribers and is connected with the Bell line.

Kern's Carriage Works, established about 1868, by Samuel Y. Kern, and Peter Schwartz, was continued but a short time under the firm name, when Mr. Schwartz retired and Mr. Kern became sole proprietor. He continued thus until his son Harvey attained his majority, when the two associated themselves in the business under the firm name of S. Y. Kern and Son. They manufactured carriages and spring-wagons of all descriptions. Their specialty was fine carriages of which many were sold and shipped to distant cities. When bicycles came into use they added a bicycle department and later an automobile repair department.

Since the death of Mr. Kern, Sr., the business has been continued by the son, though under the old firm title. The works are located at the corner of Main Street and Station Avenue.

Cigar factory, Eisenlohr Brothers, proprietors. Employs about 100 hands, located on Station Avenue, near railroad station.

Gabriel Hosiery Company, established at Coopersburg as a branch of Henry Gabriel's Sons, Allentown, in 1903, by M. S. Gabriel, Incorporated in 1906. Officers: President, M. S. Gabriel; Vice President, W. L. Jordan; Treasurer, W. R. Jordan; Secretary, R. A. Young. They have an office at New York. Manufacture fine grade, seamless hosiery. Capacity, 500 dozen pair daily. Employ 100 hands. Products distributed by jobbers all over the country. Located on Main Street, both sides. The departments on the East side occupying the old Jordan Carriage works, which after an existence of half a century under the firm name of Jordan and Brother, were discontinued to make room for the new enterprise.

First National Bank of Coopersburg. This institution was organized Feb. 17, and opened Feb. 24, 1908. It is located where the former Coopersburg Savings Bank was, in Odd Fellows

Building on Main Street. Its first officers were: President—James T. Blank; Vice President—Dr. H. T. Trumbauer; Cashier, R. D. Barron. President Blank has since retired and Marcus L. Engleman elected in his stead. Its Board of Directors are: Dr. H. T. Trumbauer, Thomas J. Trumbauer, C. F. Newcomer, F. K. Haring, M. L. Engleman, W. S. Stephens, J. A. Fulmer, Josiah Weierbach, J. F. Stoneback, J. D. Knerr, E. A. Mory, M. A. Ritter, and R. D. Barron. Its status can be described in no way better than by the following:

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF COOPERSBURG at Coopersburg, in the State of Pennsylvania, at the close of business, April 4, 1913.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts,	$96,091 72
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured, ..	50 80
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation,	25,000 00
Other bonds to secure Postal Savings	1,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds,	750 00
Bonds, securities, etc.,	73,339 36
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	1,100 00
Due from Nat. Banks, not reserve agts.	5,793 34
Due from approved reserve agents, ...	27,181 81
Notes of other National Banks,	1,220 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents,	109 26
LAWFUL MONEY RESERVE IN BANK, VIZ:
Specie,	$11,619 25
Legal tender notes,	2,790 00
	14,409 25
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation),	1,250 00
Total,	$247,295 54

LIABILITIES.

Capital Stock, paid in,	$25,000 00
Surplus fund,	12,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid,	1,405 79
Nat. Bank notes outstanding,	25,000 00
Due to other National Banks,	5,892 54
Dividends unpaid,	88 00
Individual deposits subject to check, ..	152,005 29
Time certificates of deposit,	23,998 89
Cashier's checks outstanding,	1,905 03
Total,	$247,295 54

State of Pennsylvania, County of Lehigh, S.S.

I, Robert D. Barron, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

ROBERT D. BARRON, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of April, 1913.

ELLA A. TRUMBAUER, N. P.

My commission expires March 10, 1913.

Correct Attest:

C. F. NEWCOMER,

M. A. RITTER,

W. S. STEPHENS,

Directors.

LINDEN GROVE STOCK FARM.

This enterprise was set on foot in 1874, by T. S. Cooper now well known in many sections, and the world over, as "The Jersey Cattle King." The firm now embraces, besides the founder, his two sons, Ralph and Peter, under the firm name of T. S. Cooper and Sons. The business of the firm consists in the breeding, rearing, importing and selling of high class Jersey cattle. The equipments of the firm, besides a thorough knowledge of the business, a perfect understanding of the points which count in the make-up of a perfect milk, butter, and progeny producing Jersey and a reputation for integrity and fair-dealing, consist of a plantation of about 300 acres, located along both sides of Main street and extending along the South side of Station Avenue to the railroad. The farming operations here are conducted upon the highest, most modern, approved and result-producing principles. It is studded with fine residences, an elegant office building, capacious and well-appointed barns, modern and sanitary stables, a commodious sales pavillion, and all other appliances, and equipments necessary to the successful prosecution of the business. One or two members of the firm proceed annually to the Island of Jersey, in the English Channel, and personally select and purchase the best in the cattle line which the island affords. After the voyage to this country, the cattle are quarantined at the United States quarantine station the required time, are then brought to Linden Grove, and pass under the care, supervision and nurture of the firm. The herd at this season usually consists of about 300 head.

If all the records, books, catalogs and correspondence of thirty-eight years of Jersey dealing at Linden Grove could be compiled they would constitute volumes of Jersey literature, which could not help affording others of less experience many valuable suggestions in the selection, mating, rearing and general handling of Jersey cattle. Numbers of Jerseys that have become distinguished, have been bred and handled here. Among these are the famous bull that won Sweepstakes at the World's Fair at Chicago, in 1893, the bull that won Grand Championship at the National Dairy Show in Chicago in 1911, the bull that brought the highest price at auction ever secured by a breeder for a product of his own herd, the bull that brought the record price ($15,000.00) of any bull sold at any auction, and the cow that distinguished herself similarly by bringing the record price of $7,000.

The annual Decoration day auction sales at Linden Grove receive world-wide attention.

Knowing that the stock offered is the best that can be secured and that the bidders represent all sections of the country, the Associated Press spreads the news of the sales, the names of the buyers, the description of the animals and the prices realized for them the civilized world over. Prices at these sales have ranged from one hundred to five hundred dollars for calves, from three hundred to seven thousand dollars for cows and from five hundred to fifteen thousand dollars for bulls. The aggregate sum realized for 1,613 head of cattle sold at these auctions during the last thirteen years was $831,180.00, or an average of $515.30 per head.

the fine animals offered, others to learn the lessons and gain the information afforded, others to imbibe the excitements produced by the lively bidding and to join in the applause following a record sale, while still others are intent upon the very legitimate purpose of engaging in the battle of the dollars for the possession of the prizes offered in the sales ring. It is a business day for the breeder and stockman the country over, an educational day for the amateur or admirer of fine cattle, especially Jerseys and a holiday for many within a radius of fifty miles. Truly T. S. Cooper has distinguished himself. He has achieved an enviable reputation as a RESIDENCE OF DR. MARTIN H. BOYE, WHO IS STANDING AT THE TREE.

The scene at these sales is an animated one. Fashionably dressed ladies, austere millionaires, dignified preachers, wise statesmen, sagacious politicians, astute lawyers, skilled doctors, prudent bankers, shrewd business men, deft artisans, intelligent farmers and others of like qualities with their genteelly dressed wives, daughters and sweethearts are there, together with all their imitators and opposites down to the simplest lout, all, to the number of four or five thousand, mixed in one heterogeneous mass, rubbing elbows and jostling each other in good-natured animation, some intent upon meeting their friends and having a good time, others to inspect connoisseur of fine cattle. He has contributed very largely to the improvement of the dairy stock of the country. He has given fame to his native town, employment to many and an annual entertainment to many more.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES ON THE BOROUGH.

Population, 800; families, 202; dwellings, 177; assessed valuation for county purposes, $386,608.00; assessed valuation for state purposes, $337,098.00; expended for municipal purposes, $3,549.08; expended for school purposes, other than buildings, $3,185.80; value of school property, real and personal, $13,000.

Its facilities for communication are afforded by seven mails daily, by railroad, one by star route and two by R. F. D. routes; by the Western Union Telegraph lines and the Coopersburg Telephone line in connection with the Bell system; for transit by seventeen passenger trains on the railroad, an hourly service on the Lehigh Valley Transit Company's Liberty Bell Route from Allentown to Philadelphia, United States and Adams Express Companies.

HOME OF DR. MARTIN H. BOYE, THE SCIENTIST.

On April 29, 1729, Springet Penn conveyed his title of a large tract of land to his brother, William (both grandsons of William Penn), who soon after conveyed his title to all unto William Allen, to whom a warrant under date of March 5, 1730, was issued. Allen soon after sold the greater part of a 300-acre tract to John Reeser. The latter sold a part of this tract now located in the borough of Coopersburg to Rev. Michael Landis, an early minister of the Menonite Church, who erected a stone house upon his tract in 1789. This house stood until 1871, when it was razed by Dr. Martin H. Boyè and upon its site he built the present residence. The smaller portion of the house as seen in the accompanying illustration was built by Daniel, a son of Michael Landis, in 1812. The stone spring-house standing under the beautiful pine-tree, to the left of the main dwelling, was built by Daniel Landis in 1807. A barn still standing was built in 1828, but this will shortly be razed. There remains intact one of the original corner stones of the Penn grant to his two grandsons. The location of this stone is frequently referred to in conversation with the present owners and occupants of this long settled property. The original tract, as Rev. Michael Landis bought it was about 30 acres. Tradition informs us that he selected it because there are four never failing springs of excellent water upon it.

About the year 1860 Dr. Boyè became the owner and occupant of this old homestead, which had been in the Landis family nearly one hundred years. The celebrated scientist, Dr. Boyè, continued to reside upon it until his death in 1909 at the advanced age of 97 years. From time to time improvements were made to his residence until now it contains vacuum steam heat, electric lights, hot and cold water, bath and all the conveniences that add to the comforts and well being of the populace of the twentieth century. The present owners and occupants of these premises are Mr. and Mrs. E. Oppenlander.

CHAPTER XXVII.

BOROUGH OF EMAUS.

The borough of Emaus is situated at the foot of the South Mountain, in the beautiful Lehigh Valley, near the junction of the East Penn and Perkiomen railways. It was founded as a congregational village (Gemein-Ort) May 5, 1758, and was laid out by a survey in December of the same year. Though the village was founded as a Moravian Cure Animarum, as its settlement antedates the advent of the Moravians to Pennsylvania. Among those who settled in the vicinity of Emaus prior to 1740 are, Rudolf Andreas, John Shoemaker, Conrad Wetzel, George Hoffman, Henry Roth, John Henry Knauss, Sebastian Knauss, Frederick Rauschenberger, Jacob Ehrenhard. The first white child born in the vicinity of Emaus was Ludwig Andreas, son of Rudolf Andreas and his wife, Anna Catharine, nee Braum, who emigrated from Boehm, near Manheim, to Pennsylvania in 1730. He was born September 29, 1734, and was of the Reformed faith. His sister, Barbara, married Jacob Ehrenhard, one of the Fathers of Emaus. Practically all the early settlers of the Macungie region, with the exception of a few Mennonites, were either members of the Reformed or Lutheran denominations. There were, however, at this time, only a few ministers of these denominations in the colony. In a letter dated October 18, 1734, Rev. John Philip Boehm, the organizer of the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania, appeals to the Reformed Synod of Holland in behalf of the poor sheep at the end of the wilderness in the regions of Saucon, Macungie, Maxatawny, and Great Swamp, who thirst for the hearing of God's word as dry land for water. Between the years of 1736-1739 Hendrich Goetschy, the boy preacher of colonial times, visited the Macungie region, conducted services in houses, barns and groves and baptized children. Among his preaching places he mentions the following: Skippack, Old Goshenhoppen, New Goshenhoppen, Swamp, Saucon, Macungie, Egypt, Maxatawny, Oley, Berne and Tulpehocken.

In 1741 the Salisbury Union Church was erected. In December of the same year, Count Ludwig Zinzendorf arrived in the colony and soon made the acquaintance of the pious reformed elder, Henry Antes, and the latter explained to him his plan for the union of the German churches in the colony. Elder Antes was grieved when he saw how hopelessly the few pious souls of the colony were divided and what little influence they had on account of it. It is said that the count hesitated for some time, but finally gave his approval. Antes therefore issued his "Call for a meeting of Christians, to be held on New Year's Day, 1742, in Germantown. It was to be held not for the purpose of disputing with one another, but to confer in love on the important articles of faith in order to see how near all could come together in fundamental points." It was at this meeting that led to the organization of God in the Spirit. Seven conferences were held between January 1 and June 3, 1742. At this last meeting the religious state of nine denominations was discussed, viz: the Friends, Moravians, Lutherans, Reformed, Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Tunkers, Conestoga, Siebentager, and Separatists, with the unanimous result of the General Synod of Pennsylvania. Henry Antes was commissioned to prepare, in the name of the Synod, a circular to the whole country, in which all the children of God should be invited to join the Church of God in the Spirit. In this circular occurs the following passage, which will easily be recognized as Zinzendorf's own resume of these seven Synods: "All of us, taken together, constitute the body of Jesus in Pennsylvania, which was recognized as such in the first conference of all denominations; acknowledged anew in the second Synod; sealed in the third; opened in the fourth; demonstrated in the fifth and sixth; and in the seventh and last general conference of denominations cheered by the presence of a visible Church of Jesus. We intend to continue holding this Church-council every quarter of a year, with all quietness, according to the wisdom which the Lord will grant. Our members will assist; for as regards externals all are called and spiritually all are known. Whoever belongs to the Lord, let him come to us!"

"These are the words of the Church of the Lord to all her members, whether hidden or known, yea, to all whom the Lord or God will yet call. Have Thou mercy on Zion!"

While Zinzendorf was on an expedition among the Indians, Antes issued a circular letter dated September 15, 1742, in which he announces Zinzendorf's willingness upon his return to visit and preach in communities that desire to hear him. At the request of Sebastian Knauss, who had learned the wheelwright trade with Antes, at which time his soul was spiritually blessed; the count came to the vicinity of Emaus, and preached December 2, 1742, in Jacob Ehrenhardt's house. His text was Matthew 7:14. The settlers were well pleased and expressed the desire to hear him more frequently. Sebastian Knaus, Jacob Ehrenhardt and John Adam Schaus went to Bethlehem and requested that some one should break to them the Word regularly. Hitherto the only spiritual oversight the settlers had received was a few visits by Rev. J. P. Boehm, an occasional sermon by Goetschy, and the half-hearted services of J. William Straub, an unordained schoolmaster, who lived in Bucks County, and in connection with several congregations there also served the Salisburg congregation. On the 29th December, 1742, Conrad Wetzel, Eberhard Kopp, Sebastian Knaus, Jacob Ehrenhardt, and Frantz Blum were received into the congregation at Bethlehem. These became the nucleus of the Emaus Congregation.

The settlers were given the assurance that they would be supplied with preaching by the Brethren. Before the close of the year a small log church was completed. It stood within the old burial ground, a small monument now marks the spot. A congregation in harmony with the plan of the Union Synod was organized consisting entirely of Reformed and Lutherans and several Mennonites. It was understood that by uniting thus they were not forsaking the faiths in which they were originally confirmed. For uniformity's sake it was mutually agreed that the Lord's Supper be administered according to the Lutheran custom. John Gottlieb Pezold conducted the services most frequently, and it was chiefly through his efforts that the congregation finally affiliated with the Moravians. Leonard Schnell occasionally assisted Pezold. Both were members of the first "Sea Congregation," which arrived at Philadelphia during the earlier part of the month of June, 1742.

During the year 1747 the Union Synod showed signs of rapid weakening mainly due to the efforts of Reverends Muhlenberg and Schlatter in successfully organizing Lutheran and Reformed congregations into regular Synods. The authorities at Bethlehem fearing that important congregations and properties upon which they had expended considerable means were about to pass from out of their control, made an effort to bring the union circles, whom they served into closer filial relation to the Moravian Church. Besides the piety and purity of the lives of the Moravian Brethren and the excellence of their schools had won the affection of many of the most spiritual of the colonists, so that not a few gave frequent intimations of a willingness to enter into a closer relationship. This was especially true of the "Trope" in Maguntche.

"So it appeared to the bishops and elders of Bethlehem time to gather this ripe grain into a sheaf and they accordingly resolved to gather these souls into a congregation and to provide them with the needful spiritual workers and oversight. For this purpose the adherents in Salzburg were called together in a love-feast on July 23, 1747, at which the subject of organization was discussed with them and it was definitely determined upon that the following Sabbath should be the day for the completion of the organization.

Accordingly on the next Sunday July 30, 1747, all the chosen ones gathered in Bethlehem, some living in Salzburg and some in Saucon, all being present but those prevented by sickness. They all attended morning service. Brother John Frederick Cammerhoff presided, basing his sermon on the daily text: "They shake the head at Him;" citing these lines which the historian quotes:

'Gottes Leiden und blutige Muth,
Reimt sich nicht mit Philosophie.'

After the sermon an enjoyable love-feast took place in the chapel, during which different matters pertaining to the outward and inner arrangements of the organization were discussed. They were then introduced to the brethren and sisters who should be their leaders. Thus Brother Anton and Sister Elizabeth Wagner were to be their elder and elderess; John Munster and his wife, Rosina, deacon and deaconess, and Brother Christopher Heyne and his wife, Maria, were to be superintendents over the boarding school children. At 6 o'clock the whole congregation assembled and the little band from Salzburg were set in the midst, the congregation encircling them, while among others this hymn was sung:

'Die unumschraenkete Hand des Herrn
Besorgt sie all 'in der Naeh und Fern;
Und zuweilen sammelt Er sich auch Haufen,
Die Er mit seinem Geist pflegt zu taufen,
Zu einem Leibe.

Das werden Gemeinen des Herrn genennt
Worin das Feuer des Herren brennt:
Unser Gotteskaemmerlein wohnt in der Mitten;
Gnade und Wahrheit fuellt solche Huetten;
Und Fried und Freud.

After they had thus sung, Spangenberg spoke on the daily word: "For a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on Him." (1 Tim. 1: 16). Following the address the newly chosen brethren and sisters were ordained for the work in Salzburg by the laying on of hands by Bishop Spangenberg and Cammerhoff. Finally Brother Sebastian and Sister Anna Knause and Brother Jacob Ehrenhardt and Sister Barbara Ehrenhardt were set apart by the laying on of hands to the office of church wardens.

This act of organization was concluded with the celebration of the Holy Communion, administered to the following ten members of the newly received Salzburg congregation by Rev. Cammerhoff. They were Sebastian Knauss, Anna Knauss, Jacob Ehrenhardt, Barbara Ehrenhardt, Samuel Eberhardt Kopp, Anna Kopp, Conrad Weizel, Philip Kratzer, Jacob Herrmann, Heinrich Guth.

The remaining charter members who were enrolled at the organization were: Joseph Graff, Susanna Graff, Peter Graff, Margareta Graff, Johannes Knauss, Maria C. Knauss, Jacob Loscher and wife, Johannes Koehler, Eva M. Koehler, Martin Bamberger, Elizabeth Bamberger, Johannes Landes and wife, Jacob Barstler, Catherine Albrecht, George Hartmann, Christina Hartmann, Tobias Weber, Margareta Weber, Peter Hoffman and wife, Rudy Oberly and wife, Frederick Rauschenberger, Maria Rauschenberger, Catherine Guthin, Rosina Pfingstag, Rosina Mosz, Mrs. Philip Kratzer, Gertrude Cugin, Catherine Wezel."

From the small circle of adherents in Lynn from time to time believers were added to the congregation. On July 23, 1749, a united communion was celebrated. This filial relation was continued until October 2, 1751, when the last united communion was held, because the school-house was completed, a separate congregation was organized in Lynn.

On May 5, 1758, the church authorities determined to found a congregational village (Gemein Ort) closed to all except members of the Salzburg congregation. One hundred and two acres were donated for this purpose. The town was surveyed and laid out December 23, 1758. The following year two houses were erected. Not until 1761 did the village receive its biblical name, Emmaus, when at a love-feast held April 3rd, conducted by Bishop Spangenberg, it was announced that the place hitherto called Maguntchi and Salzburg was now to be known as Emmaus. The Bishop at the time read an original hymn composed for the occasion, beginning,

"Als Jesus Auferstanden war, Reist von Jerusalem ein Paar."

PRELIMINARY CONDITIONS OR TOWN REGULATIONS.

Which every person desiring to become an inhabitant in the new town or village called Emmaus, situate in the Township of Salisbury, in the County of Northampton, in the Province of Pennsylvania, must previously agree strictly to observe and adhere to, to wit:

Section 1. For-as-much as the fundamental plan and original design of building the congregation village Emmaus is principally to establish a suitable place where persons belonging to the Brethren's Church, or any particular branch thereof, living either in towns or on their plantations may have for themselves and families a Cure Animarum and preservation from dangerous and hurtful worldly connections and their consequences; which care and preservation and other spiritual assistance they are but too sensible cannot be had in their present places of abode, living either mixed with other people of different sentiments and practice, or on plantations too remote from our Churches and Congregation Houses. It necessarily follows therefore, that, strictly speaking, nobody can have leave to reside in this village but those who belong to the Brethren's Church and such who earnestly desire to live a peaceful and quiet life in all godliness and honesty, whereby they for themselves and their own hearts may have benefit; mutually build up each other; have the Word of God richly dwelling among them; train up their children for our Saviour; preserve their sons and daughters for Him; become a blessing and advantage to the Province; a pleasure to the magistrates and an honor to our Saviour.

Sec. 2. A second reason for building this village is: that its inhabitants in the emergencies and troubles of War (as has been the case since the year 1755) may be in a condition mutually to assist each other, as well as generally to render the difficulties incident to human life more supportable.

Sec. 3. To the end that these two purposes may be fully attained, a number of Brethren in Emmaus, as a Committee of Arbitrators for the management of Temporal Affairs, are to be appointed for to regulate and keep in good order everything relating to the village and its inhabitants. The elders and wardens of the congregation, as well as those of each respective choir, for the time being, are ordinarily to constitute a part of this committee.

Sec. 4. Whoever has a mind to remove to and establish himself in Emmaus, must above all things, first lay before this committee a true and just account and state of his temporal circumstances, particularly of his debts; if he has wherewithal to discharge them and the time when; and in case it be required by the committee, he must pay them off before he obtains leave to build.

Sec. 5. The landlord will give each settler in Emmaus a lease, and the tenant on his part must bind himself, his executors and administrators in a bond of five hundred pounds sterling penalty to perform the covenants contained in such lease.

this country) to settle them amicably; and should the voices be equally divided on both sides, that then the President of the said Committee, as umpire, shall at all times decide the matter in question, whose determination shall be binding to both parties, as though they had actually entered into Arbitration Bond.

Sec. 8. That, not only light-minded, disorderly and useless conversation, but also all intercourse between persons of both sexes, as well married as single, both within and without the village, contrary to our avowed choir principles, must be carefully avoided; for which reason every master of a family, having children and servants of both sexes, must make such disposition in their houses, that all soul-damages and offence may be prevented, and in cases of that

EVERETT HOME. ERECTED 1763.

Sec. 6. Every inhabitant in Emmaus must as is meet and right, not only conduct himself in all things agreeable to the Laws of the Province, for we will not be a disorderly people, but likewise must conform without exception to all the Congregation and Village Regulations which under the directorium of the Unitas Fratrum, now are or hereafter may be made.

Sec. 7. Under this head is to be reckoned first of all, that every inhabitant of Emmaus shall own and acknowledge the authority of the said Committee of Arbitrators for temporal concerns, and engage to act conformable to their Town Regulations; as also upon any differences arising between neighbor and neighbor that they will refer the matters in dispute unto the aforesaid Committee of Arbitrators (a usual thing in nature always to act subordinate to the advice and direction of the committee.

Sec. 9. That no inhabitant follow any other trade or business, save that only which he followed at his admission into the village, unless he obtain the consent and approbation of the committee for so doing.

Sec. 10. That all traffic be carried on with ready money or money's worth, and that at a word, without cheapening. In general every inhabitant of Emmaus in matters respecting Trade and Commerce, is to govern himself according to the prescription of the committee, to the intent that the interest and welfare of every individual there residing may be duly attended to and promoted.

Sec. 11. That none either borrow or lend money without the previous knowledge and consent of the aforesaid committee.

Sec. 12. That none give even a night's lodging in his house to any person whatsoever, without first having acquainted the committee thereof and obtained their consent or the Wardens' approbation. In like manner, that no inhabitant, nor any person belonging to him, by his direction, do undertake a journey, either far or near, without first consulting the Wardens thereupon.

Sec. 13. That no person do presume to act in the capacity of a doctor, surgeon, empirick or midwife. Nor, on the other hand, shall any inhabitant consult or advise, in medicinal and chyrurgical concerns or in matters in midwifery, with any other persons than those authorized and appointed by the congregation, unless it be with the privity and consent of the committee or the wardens of the congregation.

Sec. 14. Further, that in as much as a Congregation Village must have many necessary expenses to defray, for the well ordering of the whole or some particular branch thereof, e. g. night-watches, digging, making and repairing wells and pumps, provision against fire and the eruption of Savages, etc. no inhabitant therefore ought to withdraw his hand but cheerfully contribute on such occasions his proportion as shall be resolved on from time to time by the aforesaid committee or by a special committee to be composed of a select number of the inhabitants.

Sec. 15. All those who have leave to build houses must firmly agree to this: that neither they, their executors or administrators have power to sell, let, hire out, or even give away their houses, lots and improvements in Emmaus, nor any part thereof, unless they have authority for so doing in writing from the owner of the soil, or his agents, or from the aforesaid committee.

Sec. 16. The landlord pays the quit-rent for the land to the proprietaries; but all other taxes now laid or hereafter to be laid by the Government on persons, lots, houses and personal estate are to be defrayed by the tenants and the owner of the soil indemnified against the same.

Sec. 17. Nothing shall be taught or preached in Emmaus, but what is conformable to the Gospel of Christ. Has any one an opinion, peculiar to himself, such a person may be indulged therein, provided he seek not to propagate it.

Sec. 18. It is expected that on all occasions that when the congregation is expressly convened, each person appear at the appointed time.

Sec. 19. No difference shall subsist in Emmaus longer than eight days; nor shall any complaint be lodged unless within the time aforesaid limited, no accommodation can be effected; in which case the matter in dispute shall then be laid before the committee and by them determined in such wise, that a decision be made and the affair finally adjusted in the space of eight days, between the accuser and accused, that so the umbrages given may be immediately abolished, which is to be done at the cost and charge of the person, who in the judgment of the committee has been the aggressor.

Sec. 20. No meetings, either public or private, shall be kept without lights, on any account whatsoever.

Sec. 21. Whenever the congregation negotiates matters by any member of theirs, the whole body is necessarily responsible; however his authority for so doing must first have been subscribed by the committee or the president and clerk of the same. Should anyone, notwithstanding, transact anything in the name of the congregation, for which he had no such commission, he shall answer for it according to law, and moreover forfeit thereby his privilege of continuing in Emmaus.

Sec. 22. He that borrows shall repay at the appointed time, unless he can make it appear that it was not in his power to keep his word; in which case another reasonable time shall be fixed and agreed upon. He that lends to others shall set a time when it is morally possible he may be repaid. No one shall bespeak a thing that he knows he cannot pay for when he is to fetch it away.

Sec. 23. No dancing-matches, tippling in taverns (except for the necessary entertainment of strangers and travellers) beer-tappings, feastings at weddings, christenings or burials, common sports and pastimes, gaming with dice, cards, etc., (nor the playing of the children in the streets), shall be so much as heard of amongst the inhabitants. They whose inclination is that way bent cannot live in Emmaus.

Sec. 24. Those whose time is mostly engrossed by the business of their respective offices and functions in the congregation and have not wherewithal to live upon, must be provided for by the congregation, as circumstances and necessity require. Otherwise every inhabitant in Emmaus must labor with his own hands and eat his own bread. Those who by reason of age, sickness or poverty are incapable of so doing, the congregation will maintain if so be they have no relations, who according to Holy Writ, ought to do it.

Sec. 25. Should any person, by the all-wise Providence of God, be deprived of his senses, he shall for God's sake be mercifully treated and patiently borne with and be committed to the care of discreet persons to be attended and nursed by them both as to soul and body, and if so be he is restored again, no mention shall be made of his former situation in any wise.

Sec. 26. Every brother and every sister shall be respected in the offices they respectively bear in the congregation; nor shall any person presume to be disobedient to or oppose a servant of the congregation or any one else in the exercise of his office.

Sec. 27. Those to whom the inspection over houses, wells, fields, roads, taxes, etc., is committed, shall be assiduous in their offices; should any mistake or fault happen to be made on their side, no one in such case shall resist them, but rather lay the affair before the committee and leave it to their determination.

Sec. 28. The exclusive privilege of setting up a store, apothecary's shop and tavern is reserved for the public benefit of the Congregation Village. Besides these, no other persons shall in any sort meddle with store or shopkeeping or exercise the business of an apothecary, nor shall any one else be allowed to keep a public house.

Sec. 29. A brother shall be allowed and appointed to receive all the profits that accrue by the above regulations or by any other ways or means, who shall make it his proper business to keep just accounts of his receipts and disbursements and quarterly or oftener, if required, lay them before the committee; that so all things may be transacted honestly in the sight of God and man.

Sec. 30. Whenever it happens that any one cannot be permitted to reside any longer in Emmaus, the committee with the consent of the Bishops and Elders of the Brethren's Church; who for the time being have Emmaus under their care and direction, is then to notify the same in writing and insist upon his leaving the place.

Sec. 31. Nevertheless nobody, in such case, shall lose the benefit of their improvements, but shall be satisfied for the same in the manner prescribed in the lease.

Sec. 32. Goods which are to be had in Emmaus, shall not without urgent necessity be bought elsewhere.

Sec. 33. To that end that good work may be made and the same may be sold for a right price, there shall be established a Board of Masters, who shall have the superintendence over all the trades and professions exercised and carried on in Emmaus. In the beginning, however, the committee may take charge upon them, when every inhabitant in Emmaus must strictly govern himself according to the rules and orders the committee or board aforesaid shall in that respect ordain and make.

Sec. 34. All fraud and over-reaching of one's neighbour; likewise any premeditated mischief done to the woods, fences, fields, fruit trees, etc., belonging to the owner of the soil or any other, shall be deemed infamous; as generally all other gross, heathenish sins, to wit: gluttony and drunkenness, cursing and swearing, lying and cheating, pilfering and stealing, quarreling and fighting shall not even be heard of in Emmaus; he that is guilty of the like cannot be suffered to continue there.

Sec. 35. All parents and masters (whose children, servants, maids or prentices are under their own roof) as well as those who have the care of the choir-house, shall see that the people under their respective charges may be within at seasonable hours and all night talks prevented. In general, parents and masters shall be accountable for their children and families, and when any of them misbehave or do amiss, it shall be required at their hands, unless they have given the committee timely notice and information that one or another of their household is intractable, that so measures may be taken to put a stop to any consequent mischievous effect or else, if needs must, that the incorrigible transgressing party may be turned away.

Sec. 36. He that sees, hears, or comes to the knowledge of anything, by which danger and hurt to soul or body or otherwise offence and scandal may in any sort ensue or arise, either to the whole place or any particular brethren or sisters, or even to a single person, must by no means conceal it, but take the first opportunity, with prudence and discretion, to reveal the matter unto such persons as of right should be acquainted with it, e. g. the elders and wardens and such like persons in the respective choirs. Those who act not in this manner shall be looked upon as accomplices.

Sec. 37. Every man must be circumspect and careful in regard to fire and subject himself therein to such rules as shall be established among us.

Sec. 38. The streets of the village shall be kept orderly and clean by the circumjacent housekeepers who shall not throw or cause to be thrown out any straw, dung, or other filth, but shall carefully lay the same behind their houses, in their yards or gardens. or shall any tools or other things of general use or value be carelessly left lying about in public places.

Sec. 39. Any damage done to wells, ways, houses or other things of a public nature shall be repaired and made good at the cost and charge of the person or persons through whose fault and neglect the same happened.

Sec. 40. Nobody shall use and make free with a thing belonging to his neighbour, without first having obtained his consent.

Sec. 41. No marriage shall be contracted or made without the privity and approbation of the elders of the congregation and choirs; nor shall any one attempt to promote or make secret matches. He that is minded to act otherwise, whether it be by himself alone or in conjunction with others forfeit his right of being an inhabitant of Emmaus.

Sec. 42. The sick shall not be promiscuously attended and nursed, but according to the received regulations of the congregation.

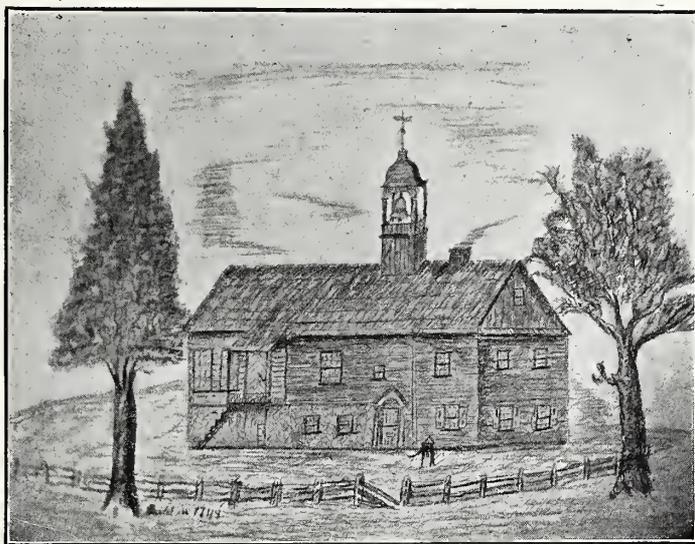

Sec. 43. No journeyman, prentice, servant, maid, or negro shall be received into any family without the privity and approbation of the com-twelve members of the congregation were imprisoned at Easton and kept on bread and water until the 29th, because they refused to take the oath of allegiance to the new government, in September thirteen others repeated the experience, among them their minister.

Bethlehem, Oct. 1st, 1778.

My dear Br. Graff:

.....
 "On that day (Sept. 16th) I left Lititz with Br. Matthaeus (Hehl) went by way of Heidelberg, Oley where we visited old Br. & Sr. Burstler,—and Emaus, and reached Bethlehem on the 19th, to my great joy and surprise of many Brethern. Br. Matthaeus did not hurt, because mittee, and every housekeeper shall put away all such as soon as they become seducers.

MORAVIAN CHURCH SHOWING THE ADDITION OF 1766.

Sec. 44. It is a good and necessary thing for every one to make his last will in due time. The committee can be consulted in that respect from time to time as occasion requires.

Sec. 45. The Committee of Arbitrators, under the direction of the elders and bishops, is to have the superintendence of the foregoing articles, and generally of the whole village and its inhabitants, of what rank and condition so-ever.

The foregoing statutes were subscribed by Sebastian Knauss, Andrew Giering, Bernard Winsch and Matthias Wogner, the seventh day of July, 1761.

The years 1778-1779 were hard years for the people of Emmaus on account of their conscientious scruples against oaths. On April 4, 1778 he knew that on Friday the 18th the Justices would be in Bethlehem to administer an oath to all Brethern, who were willing; nothing happened because none of the Brethern consented to take it though the Justices were on time. I rejoice in the unity of the Brethern and their steadfastness is surprising. On the 22nd Br. Frantz Bohler and 12 of his Emaus Brethern passed through here on their way to the Easton jail having been summoned thither because of their refusal to take the oath. The 12 however partly on account of rough treatment, and partly on account of their families, grew weak and faint hearted, took the oath, and left their leader Br. Bohler alone in prison. Later however he was released, the required security of 400 pounds having been given the jailer and Fuller (sic) by him and was ordered to appear at the next court. Br. Bohler is quite cheerful and rejoices that he now knows what his value is. A number of Mennonites Sackons were shamefully treated because they would not take the oath."

.....
Christn. R. Heckewelder.

The following ministers served the congregation: 1742-1747, Leonard Schnell and Gottlieb Petzold; 1747-50, Anton and Elizabeth Wagner; 1750-51, John W. and Rosina Michler; 1751-52, Andreas and Dor. Horn; 1752-53, John C. and Christina Francke; 1753-55, Daniel and Xanna Neubert; 1755-56, George and Gertrude Schneider; 1756-58, John C. and Margaret Engel; 1758-60, John and Magdalena Schweitzhaupt; 1760-62, Daniel and Hanna Neubert; 1762-63, George and Maria Pitsohmann; 1763-66, Anton and Elizabeth Wagner; 1766-73, Henry and Elizabeth Lindenmeyer; 1773-77, Andrew and Maria Langgard; 1777-79, Francis and Anna Bohler; 1779-85, John J. and Anna Schwihel; 1785-86, Nicolaus L. and Anna Bagen; 1786-90, John and Maria Roth; 1790-91, John and Anna Beck; 1791-1793, Bernhard and Sarah Grube; 1793-98, George and Anna Mueller; 1798-1801, Ludwig F. and Maria Boehler; 1801-2, John and Anna Bardell; 1802-05, John and Susanna Molther; 1805-07, John and Anna Bardill; 1807-9, Gottfried and Anna Oppelt; 1809-13, Theodore and Susanna Shulz; 1813-30, Paul and Anna Weiss; 1830-36, John and Sophia Brickenstein; 1836-38, Peter and Eliza Kluge; 1838-39, G. F. and Eliza Troeger; 1839-44, Levin T. and Louisa Reichel; 1844-46, Julius and Emma Bechler; 1846-53, Ambrose and Matilda Ronthaler; 1853-60, John and Carolina Rugennas; 1860-62, Edward and Annie Kluge; 1862-64, Lorenz and Anna Oerten; 1864-68, Henry C. and Mary Bachman; 1868-76, Julius and Maria and Ellen Wunsche; 1876-77, W. H. and Dorothea Hoch; 1877-79, Max E. and Martha Grunert; 1879-82, Clemens and Caroline Reinke; 1882, L. P. and Sarah Clewell.

In 1749 the first church was rebuilt and was located in the rear of the present parsonage. In 1766 an addition was made to the part used for school purposes, "because it was too small." For this addition the trees were felled by Frederick Rauschenberger, whose wife was a sister to the Reformed Itinerant preacher Goetschy, mentioned above. The present structure was erected in 1834, to which the Sunday-school chapel was added in 1876. It was enlarged in 1906 and again in 1912. The present membership is 286, and the endowment fund is $17,000.

The water supply was obtained from two village pumps, which stood in the middle of Main street, one in front of the residence of the late Tilghman Reinsmith and the other in front of the home of Samuel Rothrock. In 1790 the first store was opened by James Gill. The first postmaster was William Horsfield, Lewis Christ and Thomas Knauss conducted the first tavern, it was replaced about eighty years ago by the Exchange Hotel.

In 1798 a New England Divine records his visit to Emaus as follows:

"We pass the river Jordan, over a strong stone bridge as we enter this town, (Allentown), and the Little Lehigh, as we go to Emmaus,—a small village about eight miles from Bethlehem, inhabited by the United Brethern. It is situated not far from the foot of a mountain and contains about twenty dwelling-houses, the congregational-house, united with the chapel is possessed by a minister (George and Anna Miller). In the chapel is an organ, and the minister is also the schoolmaster. The steward is an old man, and the storekeeper also superintends the tavern. But these are not public property as in Bethlehem and Nazareth.

An original settler, a brother, gave one hundred and thirty acres of land to the brethren for the support of the minister and school at Emmaus.

In this place, was one of those accommodations for the lodging of a married couple, which cause so much conversation. Perhaps it may not be amiss to indulge the curiosity of such, as may be very solicitous to be informed upon this point, what is the reason for this uncommon practice, and what the practice is, that in future such visit Bethlehem and Nazareth, may spare the inhabitants from needless enquiries, sometimes bordering upon impertinence.

According to constant practice, single beds are used by unmarried persons, from their youth upwards. When couples are united in holy wedlock and become heads of a family, these two beds and their bedsteads, are placed so contiguous to each other, that they are covered with one general blanket or counter-pane. This outer covering designates the lodging of some married persons, but this is not a universal custom, as many use the common large beds. It is convenient in case of the sickness of either party, the nursing of children, and the poverty of young housekeepers, who may not wish to be at the expense of exchanging or altering their single beds, bedding or bedsteads. The bed is not different from that in common use, except that it has head, foot, and side boards."

During the early part of the nineteenth centure, hats, clocks, blankets, shoes and cigars were extensively manufactured. Gradually the strict rules governing the village were disregarded until in 1836, when the town was opened to members of other denominations. Emaus, however, remained "Quaint Old Emmaus" until the building of the East Penn Railway in 1858, and the incorporation of the Borough in 1859.

Among the early settlers of the village of Emaus were Jacob Ehrenhard, Andrew Gearing, Abraham Ziegler, George Christ and Frederick Winch.

Jacob Ehrenhardt, one of the first settlers of Emaus and one of the founders of the congregation here, lived in the house formerly owned by Hiram S. Getz, of Reading. He was born on Maundy Thursday in Marstadt, Germany, Township, Feb. 16, 1734, and baptized by Rev. John Philip Boehm, the Reformed minister. At the age of seven years, she visited her brother, Sebastian, and subsequently joined the Moravian Church. She died Oct. 3, 1804. They had several sons, among whom were John and Andrew. The former purchased land not far from the town, where he lived and died. He had four sons, John J., William and Thomas, and one other, who removed to another part of the state.

Abraham Ziegler was a native of Freundstadt, in Schwartzwald, in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, the name has disappeared from the community.

For many years the Christ family were actively engaged in the affairs of the village of Emaus.

HOUSE BUILT BY JACOB EHRENHARDT.

in 1716. He died Feb. 7, 1760. His wife, Barbara, daughter of Rudolph Andreas and his wife, Anna Catharine Braun, was born in Boehn, near Manheim, March 8, 1722. She was reared in the Reformed religion and arrived at Philadelphia with her parents on Aug. 29, 1730. In 1764, as the widow of Jacob Ehrenhard, she was taxed one pound for fifty acres of deeded land. She died Sept. 18, 1777.

Andrew Giering, born Aug. 19, 1729, and died March 20, 1803, lived in a log house at the lower end of town, afterwards remodeled and lately owned by Francis Schaefer. He came to this country a single man, married here, and worked at his trade, which was shoemaking. His wife, Maria Catharine Knauss, as a daughter of Ludwig Knauss, and was born in Whitmarsh

The progenitor of the family was Christian Christ, a native of Igelheim, in the Palatinate, where he was reared in the Reformed faith. In 1741 he was married to Maria C. Begdalt. They came to Pennsylvania in 1749 and settled in Lynn township, where they united with the Moravians. He died Oct. 21, 1801. Of his nine children, four survived him. They were: Daniel, Lititz, Pa.; George, Emaus; Margareth, the wife of John Ehrenhard, Shamokin; and Maria Catherine, Bethlehem.

George Christ was born in Lynn Feb. 12, 1753. He married Catharine Anders, a daughter of Ludwig and Sophia Knauss Anders. After his marriage he came to Emaus, and erected two log houses on the tract now occupied by the residence of Mrs. Sylvester Bieber. He had five sons, George, Jacob, Lewis, Henry and Jonathan, all of whom, with the exception of the latter, passed their days in Emaus. George was a hatter, Jacob a tobacconist, Lewis kept the town tavern, Henry was a farmer, and Jonathan was a saddler.

George Leibert, son of Michael and Barbara Romlin Leibert, was born Dec. 1735. He learned the art of blacksmithing in the shop of Jacob Ehrenhard, whose daughter Elizabeth he married in 1760, and whom he succeeded as the village blacksmith. Henry Leibert, son of Martin and grandson of Michael, was born in Philadelphia March 25, 1743. He learned the trade of a turner with his brother, Peter, in Germantown. He married March 10, 1772, Christina, a daughter of Jacob Ehrenhard and removed to Emaus.

One of the most prominent citizens of the later period was Frederick Jobst, a native of Alsace-Lorraine, who migrated with his father, J. George, and brother Francis, to America in 1828 and at once came to Emaus, where the family has become large and wealthy. He was renowned far and wide as a fiddler. He organized the Emaus band.

Samuel Stoudt is the oldest resident of the borough and probably of the county, being in his 98th year. He is a shoemaker by trade, which he still follows. He reads the newspaper without the aid of glasses. The first President for which he voted was Martin Van Buren.

SCHOOLS.

The early German settlers were particularly attentive to the education of their children. School houses were erected alongside the churches and frequently preceded them. In which cases they were used for church purposes until a larger edifice was erected. While all the denominations and sects were solicitous for the training of their children, the pre-eminence must however be accorded to the Moravians.

A peculiar feature of the Brethren's Church from its earliest times, and retained to the present day, has been their solicitude, not only to preach the Gospel to the adults among Christians and heathen, but "to suffer little children to come to the Saviour," and for this purpose to conduct their schools in such manner, that not only the faculties of the mind might become developed and strengthened by judicious training, but the affections of the heart be drawn in early years to the best Friend of children. Before Count Zinzendorf left America he said in his "Pennsylvania Testament": It is one of my greatest hopes and desires that Bethlehem may become a pattern of the education of children."

This desire was remembered and acted upon by those brethren to whom the superintendence and direction of all congregational affairs was entrusted, and a system of education was introduced, the like of which may probably never be found in any other community.

At a conference held at Bethlehem August 7, 1746, the representatives from Macungie (Emaus) were informed that a school was to be established among them. A building was erected and on February 6, 1747, the school was opened with an enrollment of forty. Christopher Demuth, of ripe old age, native of Moravia, was placed in charge. A number of well trained children from the school of Nazareth were added "as a salt."

In September it was made a boarding school, with Christopher Heynes, John Muenster, Anton Wagner and their wives in charge, they continued to serve faithfully and well until 1750, when the whole school system of the Brethren church was reorganized. From an early annalist we quote the following pregnant sentence: "Many were judged ripe for reception in the church through baptism, while others the dear Lord took to himself." Among those who died during this period were two little Indian maidens. The obituary record of the congregation contains the following pathetic entrance:

April 3, 1748, little Hannah died, the first treasure seed out of the little school.

May 7, 1749, small Rebecca died and the next day was buried in her little wigwam.

On February 25, 1750, the girls school closed on the Ysselstein farm, now a part of South Bethlehem was closed. The older girls school was taken over to Bethlehem, while the younger ones were brought to Maguntsche. In 1750 there occurred an estrangement between Henry Antes, who had done so much for the upbuilding of Bethlehem, and the authorities, which resulted in Antes' withdrawal to his farm and former home at Fredricktown. John Nitschmaun, without ever consulting with him, closed the flourishing school on Antes' premises.

In reference to the disposition of the pupils in this school, Bishop Levering in his history of Bethlehem, p. 251, makes the following statement: "On the 12th of that month (August, 1750) a number of the boys were taken to the Maguntsche school and a few of the Indian boys were removed to Bethlehem and Gnadenuetten. Two weeks later the remaining of the boys were placed in the school at Oley." This school at Oley had been organized in the month of February, 1748, and had now become quite an important school, but on account of the drain of these outlying schools on the Central treasury, the authorities determined to close it also. On September 10, 1751, the boys were transferred to the school at Maguntsche and the girls of both Oley and Maguntsche were taken to Bethlehem. "The two single brethren, Schwarz and Adam von Erd, accompanied the children from Oley. Some other single brethren, namely: Peter Braun, Marc Ralfs and Heppner Schon, were sent as their assistants. During this year the families of Oerter, Horn and Christopher Francke were added to the working force of the institution. These children, some of them of well-to-do Philadelphia families, "with an allowance of meat twice a week," were abundantly cared for spiritually and temporarily. The routine of the institution included morning and evening devotions, regular hours of study and recreation, also love-feasts in their season. On Sundays a brother held service in the church which the children attended." Thus the school was conducted as a boys school for two years, when the authorities determined to also discontinue the school at Salisbury. On the 27th of August, 1753, the school was closed and fourteen of the boys were removed to Bethlehem.

In 1754, John Ettwein and Francis Boehler and their wives were placed in charge of the work among the children at the outlying places. In December of this same year it was determined to re-open the school in Salisbury and on January 10, 1755, it was formerly opened, "with Joachim Sensemann and wife in charge of the household and Hans Peterson serving as preceptor." But the peace of the school was soon again to be disturbed. In 1755 was the year of the Indian outbreaks. Dark and dreary were the autumn days of 1755. Every day brought new tales of horror and woe from the frontier settlements, of crops destroyed, of buildings burned, of families massacred, of children carried into captivity. Truly the melancholy days of the year had come, yea the saddest of all the year.

During the month of November definite information reached Bethlehem, that the Indians had determined to clear the entire region of white people and that on their great day, "Christmas" Nazareth and Bethlehem were to be destroyed. The morning of November brought the direful news of the massacre at Gnadenheuten. Nearer and nearer to Bethlehem carried the wild men of the forest their fiendish work. The provincial government was appealed to for aid and protection. Bethlehem now became very solicitous for the safety of the children in the outlying schools. On December 8th the children from Nazareth were brought to Bethlehem, and immediately upon their arrival two wagons under guard were sent to Macungie to convey the boys of this school, with John Schmid and his wife, who had charge of them, to Bethlehem. Thus ends the checkered career of the boarding school of Maguntsche.

The long dreaded, Christmas passed without bringing ruin and disaster to Bethlehem. Though the Indians had stealthily, under the cover of night, made their way to Bethlehem, they found their plans frustrated, for the town was well watched and guarded. Their number was insufficient to besiege the town or to make an open attack, so they quietly retraced their steps, and left Bethlehem undisturbed in its peaceful slumber. There is, however, a tradition that a few stayed and were lurking on the hillside back of the Indian house, with the hope of yet before the break of day setting fire to some of the unguarded outer buildings. But that early in the morning strange and doleful sounds fell upon their ears, which struck terror in their hearts, they had never heard anything like it before. Surely thought it must be the great spirit warning them, that he people who had brought so many blessings to them were under his care and protection. Frightened, they slipped back into the woods and disappeared in the forest. The strange sounds had come from the terrace roof of the Brethren House, where the trombone choir, with their jubilant chorales, announced to the new Bethlehem the birthday of the Saviour. It is said that when during the day the children of Bethlehem were assembled in the old chapel to enjoy a Christmas service, some one said, that the guardian angels of these children were the best Christmas watchers. Yes, who doubts or would be so irrelevant as to deny that the guardian angels of the little ones from Emaus, Nazareth and Bethlehem brought fear to the hearts of the maurading Indians, like the guardian angels of the Christ-child had brought peace and goodwill to the hearts of the shepherds on the hillsides of Bethlehem of old. After the Indian outbreak, the school was reopened but as a congregational school, and continued until it was displaced by the public school. In 1763 the substantial stone dwelling on the opposite side of the street was erected as a home of refuge in case of an Indian attack. It was used for a time for school purposes.

In 1855 the "Lehigh County High School" was organized under the direction of James S. Shoemaker. All the elementary branches, together with the higher branches of mathematics, Latin, French, German and music were taught.

In it a number of young men were prepared for the profession of teaching. The school never attained the position of importance its founders had hoped for.

Emaus is first mentioned as a separate school district in the report by the Superintendent of Public Instruction for the year ending June 1, 1861. Emaus then had two male teachers, a term of five months, an attendance of 59 male pupils, and 50 female pupils, with an average cost per pupil per month of 47 cents. The tax rate was $3\frac{1}{2}$ mills, the amount of the State appropriation was \$47.60, and the average salary for the teacher per month was \$23.00. The superintendent reported to the department that "in this part of the county, Emaus is the leader in educational affairs."

In 1877 the school term consisted of six months of 22 days each. From this time on until the present day, the schools have progressed by strides. At present the school term is nine months of 20 days each, and eighteen schools are in operation. The high school was the first in the county to qualify as a third grade high school. Among the teachers who taught the highest grades are: E. S. Miller, H. D. Greenawald, A. E. Stahler, R. J. DeLong, Rev. M. E. Kemper, Rev. J. V. George, D.D., Rev. H. A. I. Benner, Supt. J. J. Unger, Principal H. L. Reber, W. H. Unangst, Supt. W. D. Landis, Rev. E. Elmer Sensenig, John Yerger and H. Snyder.

CHURCHES.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

The first Evangelical sermon in Emaus was preached in the house of Charles Fehr by Rev. Charles Hesser, in 1839. The Evangelical Association began here in 1840. Rev. G. Haines was the first pastor. In 1845 Rev. Francis Hoffman, pastor, the first church, a frame one-story structure 30 x 40 feet, was erected at a cost of $1,450. Then as now Emaus belonged to Lehigh Circuit. The membership grew steadily until 1868, when under the labors of Revs. S. Ely and J. K. Seyfrid in a Great Revival 60 souls were converted.

In 1873 under the efficient administration of Rev. S. Ely, the present two-story brick church, 40 x 60 feet, with a seating capacity of nearly 500, was erected at a cost of $6,800, and dedicated by Rev. Solomon Neitz. In this year Emaus was detached from Lehigh Circuit, and changed into a Mission, and in 1878 made a station. The following pastors have served the congregation since the erection of the present church in 1873: Revs. S. Ely; F. Hoffman; J. Adams; B. H. Miller; J. H. Stermer; E. Butz;

J. C. Bleim; S. B. Frey; D. Lentz; C. N. Roth; J. K. Fehr; J. H. Smith; G. Heinrich and L. A. Werner.

ST. JOHN'S REFORMED CONGREGATION.

On January 1, 1876, about sixty persons of the Reformed faith, under the leadership of Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, met in the Moravian Church and organized themselves as St. John's Reformed Congregation. Immediately after organization the following officers were elected: Elders, James Tool and Adam Fink; Deacons, Samuel Rothrock, William Heimbach and Edwin H. Sterner. The congregation continued to worship in the Moravian Church until the fall of 1882. During the summer of that year the congregation in connection with the Lutherans had built what is now known as St. John's Lutheran and Reformed Church of Emaus. The present membership is almost 500.

The following pastors have served the congregation: Revs. A. J. G. Dubbs, 1876-1886; R. C. Weaver, (Supply); 1886-1891, C. E. Schaeffer, 1892-1896; P. A. DeLong, 1897-1899; J. B. Bachman, 1900-1908; J. B. Stoudt, 1908-1910; D. E. Schaeffer, 1910-

ST. JOHN'S UNION CHURCH.

The foundation for St. John's Lutheran congregation of Emaus was laid by the late Rev.

William Rath, who invited the members of the Lutheran faith in Emaus and vicinity, to attend preaching service of the Lutheran denomination in the Moravian Church, where he conducted the first service February 28, 1875. The number of members at the beginning was about 40. At the first communion, held June 4, 1876, forty-three persons communed. By the courtesy of the officials of the Moravian Church, services were regularly held in their church until the present St. John Lutheran and Reformed Church was ready for use.

On the 24th day of December, 1882, the Evangelical Lutheran congregation of St. John's Church, Emaus, was organized.

February 15, 1890, Rev. Myron O. Rath, who had been assistant pastor for some time, was elected to succeed his father the Rev. William Rath, and continues his pastorate to the present time. The first regular English service was held June 17, 1888. The present membership is about 300. St. John's Lutheran and Reformed Sunday-school held its first session April 19, 1885.

ST. MATHEW'S UNITED EVANGELICAL CONGREGATION.

The United Evangelical Church of Emaus was organized by members belonging to the so-called "Minority" at the time of the division in the Evangelical Association in the year 1891.

St. Mathew's United Evangelical Church, corner Fifth and Ridge streets, was erected during the pastorate of Rev. Thomas Knecht in 1894. Rev. Frank Sechrist was pastor 1895-1897. During his pastorate a great revival took place, which resulted in seventy professed conversions. From this time on the church has had a slow but steady growth and to-day has doubled its original membership.

Besides the above named, the following ministers have served the congregation: Revs. C. S. Brown, two years; H. H. Smith, one year; N. S. Hawk, two years; during this period it belonged to Lehigh circuit.

In 1898 this church and Cetronia became a separate charge and since then it has been served by the following pastors: Revs. J. K. Seyfrid, four years; J. H. Stermer, four years; D. F. Kostenbader, three years. The present incumbent is the Rev. J. H. Stermer.

MENNONITE BROTHERS IN CHRIST CONGREGATION.

The two-story frame church on Chestnut street was built by Moses Wieand and used by the Free Methodists for a number of years. The membership of the congregation became less and less, and finally ceased to exist as a congregation in Emaus.

In 1884 the Mennonite Brethren in Christ, who had prior to this time held services in private houses, purchased the church for $1,240, and established a regular appointment in the same. The Rev. Jonas Musselman was the first preacher in charge. The church was served in connection with appointments at other places. The following pastors served the charge: Revs. Abel Strawn, Samuel Frey, L. B. Taylor, W. Steinmetz, L. Frank Haas, R. Bergstresser, and the present pastor, Rev. H. K. Kratz.

The present Board of Trustees consists of Harvey Thompson, President; R. T. Laudenslager, Secretary; and William Yeakel, Treasurer.

At the last session of the Annual Conference of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ, the Emaus Church and the Macungie were made a separate charge.

ST. MARGARET'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

On the 10th day of June, 1908, the opening service was held in the building on Main street, which it still occupies. From that date on to the present time services have been maintained regularly. Rev. J. P. Briggs has been the Rector in charge from the beginning.

EMAUS BAND.

The first band in Emaus was organized by Frederick Iobst when a young man of 17 or 18 years of age, and when he had only recently emigrated from the Fatherland. Among the first members were the Knausses and the Klins. The instruments used were chiefly trombones, bassoons, bugles, trumpets, clarinets and French horns.

This organization remained in existence until the war clouds of the great rebellion appeared on the horizon, when politics disrupted it into a Democratic and a Republican band, the members siding politically. When the war broke out, the fragments of both were collected and united by John Z. Iobst, son of Frederick Iobst, who became the efficient leader, and under him the following went to Doylestown, where they enlisted on September 22, 1861, as the band of the 104th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and remained in service till August 11, 1862: John Z. Iobst; Stephen E. Albright; William Cox; Samuel Dankel; John W. Druckenmiller, Sylvester Engelman, H. H. Gallagher, George H. Gorr, Herman Knauss, Harrison Knauss, Joseph M. Lewis, John E. Mann, Jacob Richard,

William Rohs, William S. Seip, Lewis Sponheimer, Henry S. Tool, Albert S. Tool, Eugene T. Tool and James H. Widrig. When this band was mustered out of service on August 11, 1862, it disbanded shortly after it came back. The surviving members of it are John Z. Iobst and Lewis Sponheimer of Emaus, and James H. Widrig of Iowa.

Following this organization there were a number of others under the leadership of Nathaniel Heller, John Weaver, Raham Shuler, Isadore Smoyer and Jerome Smoyer. The life of them was of short duration.

From the survivors and descendants of these bands the present Emaus Band was organized on June 18, 1892. The organization was made at the Central House, of which Captain A. J. Adrain was then the proprietor. W. B. Neumoyer became its leader. The following were the charter members: W. B. Neumoyer, H. L. Reber, J. R. Jarett, Wm. M. Jarett, Austin A. Adrain, W. C. Wieder, James Knauss, John Kirschman, Charles Druckenmiller, James McElroy, Marcus Ritter, Howard Knauss, John Christman, Howard Kline and Herman Knauss; the last named being a survivor of the 104th Regiment Band.

From these 15 members the band has increased in membership to 37 and includes the following nine descendants from the members of the 104th Regiment Band: J. Robert Druckenmiller, H. F. Druckenmiller, Charles Druckenmiller, all four sons of John W. Druckenmiller; and James George and Howard Knauss, all sons of a grandson of George H. Gorr and Edwin Knauss, a grandson of Herman Knauss.

Under the leadership of Prof. W. B. Neumoyer, the band has attained a high standard of efficiency. Its annual concerts compare favorably with those rendered by metropolitan bands.

Emaus was incorporated on August 1, 1859, and the territory included within the borough at that time is as follows: Beginning at a corner and thence by land of Edwin Kline, North 49 degrees, West 130 perches to a post corner, thence by the said Kline, Gideon Ritter, Henry Reinsmith, south 49 degrees west 192 perches, to a post, thence by land of said Reinsmith and Samuel Christ south 40 degrees, east 138 perches, to a maple tree, and thence by land of said Henry Reinsmith, John Schwartz, John G. Giering, north 45½ degrees, east 130 perches, to a stone corner, thence by land of Jacob Tool, north 28 degrees, east 2 perches, to the place of beginning. The court designated the public house of Simon Shoemaker for the first borough election. This election took place on October 31, 1857, between the hours of 2 and 6 P. M. The following officers were appointed: Joseph Wilt, judge; J. G. Geiring and Moses Wieand, inspectors. The result of the election was as follows: Burgess, Frederick T. Iobst; Councilmen, Raham Schuler, Abraham Fehr, Peter Egner, Aquilla Knauss and Owen Bitting.

LIST OF BURGESSES.

Frederick T. Jobst, 1859-64.
 William J. Eberhard, 1865-65.
 Isaac Egner, 1865-67.
 Charles Seider, 1867-68.
 Peter Gabel, 1868-69.
 John Weaver, 1869-71.
 Abraham Ziegenfuss, 1871-72.
 Raham Schuler, 1872-73.
 James Tool, 1873-75.
 Jacob Schipe, 1875-77.
 James Tool, 1877-78.
 George Neimeyer, 1878-82.
 Rahman Schuler, 1882-83.
 Wm. Hamman, 1883-84.
 William Eberhard and James Tool, 1884-85.
 John K. Lorentz, 1885-86.
 Samuel Bean and Tilghman Weiden, 1886-87.
 Samuel Bean, 1887-1888.
 J. H. Bickel, 1888-89.
 James Tool, 1889-90.
 W. H. Wieand, 1890-92.
 T. H. Reinsmith, 1892-94.
 Milton Marcks, 1894-95.
 E. Marcks, 1895-96.
 S. H. Kline, 1896-97.
 Henry Heilman, 1897-1900.
 E. A. Stansfield, 1900-1903.
 A. R. Weaver, 1903-1904.
 E. Marcks, 1904-1906.
 H. T. Wickert, 1906-1909.
 Daniel R. Miller, 1909-.

The following chronicle records the borough's growth and development.

In 1868 the old brewery was erected by Isaac Egner and Mathias Smith. In 1869-70 the furnace was erected. H. A. Knauss is superintendent. 1870 the Free Methodist congregation was organized in town. 1871 the borough authorities instituted the water works. The system at present includes two reservoirs, one of 40,000 gallons capacity, the other of 250,000, besides three artesian wells. 1876 the Perkiomen Railroad was built through town. In 1882, the plant of the Donaldson Iron Company was erected. This plant is at present employing between 600 and 700 men. It has a daily output of about 200 tons. J. D. Ormrod is the present superintendent.

In 1882 Home Mutual Fire Insurance Company was organized.

In 1890 the borough erected a municipal electric light plant, but owing to the high cost of producing the current, discontinued the plant and have since received the current for lighting and power purposes from the Allentown Electric Light and Power Company. A contributory company of the Allentown holds the contract.

In 1891 the Central School Building was erected and the schools removed from the old building on Main street.

In 1891 the Mountain Water Company was organized and furnishes water to the western section of the borough.

In 1892 the Keystone Silk Mill started operations. It is now operated by Jonas Frederick.

In 1895 the Emaus Record, Emaus' first newspaper appeared, being published by J. D. Weaver.

In 1898 the trolley line between Emaus and Allentown was built.

In 1901-2 the present town hall was erected.

In 1902 the Emaus Fire Company No. 1 was organized.

In 1903 the adjacent territory of the borough was annexed, thus increasing the area of the borough to one square mile.

In 1903 the Emaus Bank was organized.

In 1905 the large cigar factory of Jeitles and Blumenthal was erected, Daniel Trumbore is the present superintendent.

In 1906-7 the silk plant of D. G. Dery was erected. This plant was enlarged this year. Charles Goldman is the superintendent.

In 1908 J. H. Frederick erected a silk mill in town. This plant has been enlarged this year.

In 1909 the Emaus Foundry and Machine Company located in town. It is expected that this plant will be enlarged this year by Messrs. James and ——— Zettlemyer, the present owners.

In 1909-10 the Emaus Gas and Fuel Company began the erection of its plant in town. John Roddick is in charge of the plant. In 1910 the Washington School Building was erected.

The population in 1912 was 3,501, in 1900 it was 1,468.

Emaus is well supplied with many and varied small industries, a large number of stores, places of business, fraternal and social organizations, the enumeration of which would carry far beyond the scope of this work.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

BOROUGH OF FOUNTAIN HILL.

BY CLARENCE E. BECKEL.

The term "Fountain Hill" is popularly applied to all the section of country west of Brodhead avenue and Broadway in South Bethlehem, and extending westward to the limits of Salisbury township. The corporate limits of Fountain Hill borough, however, are entirely within Lehigh county. Roughly, the line begins at a point in the Lehigh River about where the upper end of Calypso Island formerly was; thence extends southwardly taking in the Borhek farm, St. Luke's Hospital and the reservoir, and around the Fountain Hill cemetery to Benner street; thence along said street to the Emaus road; along said road and Broadway to a point a few feet beyond Bishopthorpe street, where it joins the county line; thence along said county line diagonally across Fountain Hill to Uncas street and the Lehigh River.

The first written record of this locality is contained in the Moravian diary of 1742, wherein it is mentioned that "some of the women pulled flax at the Schweitzer's," referring to a Swiss squatter, Conrad Ritschi, who at an early date settled on the lands lying on the south side of the Lehigh. In the early days of the settlement its sylvan paths were frequently traversed by the Moravian Brethren in their pilgrimages between Bethlehem and Macungie.

In February, 1743, the Moravians opened negotiations with William Allen for the purchase of the Simpson tract of 274 acres, the first land acquired by them south of the Lehigh, but before the sale was consummated Mr. Allen insisted upon the removal of the Swiss squatter Ritschi, the first resident of Fountain Hill, and he was finally persuaded to depart. Subsequently other parcels of land were purchased on the south side of the river, and in March, 1769, the Brethren carried into effect a plan for placing the several farms in charge of tenants.

Conrad Ernst was the first tenant of the farm at the Crown Inn, later known as the Fuehrer farm, and Marcus Kiefer took the Weygandt farm, which was subsequently operated successively by John Christian Clewell, John Hoffert and his son, Samuel Hoffert.

The Hoffert farm house stood north of east from Bishopthorpe. These lands were held by the Moravians until 1848, when the Fuehrer farm of 98 acres was conveyed to Daniel Desh for a consideration of $95 per acre. This farm commenced at the Crown Inn, the site of the present Union depot in South Bethlehem, and extended westward along Lehigh street and Ostrum street, and southwestward to Seminole street. It also included the greater portion of the lands in the angle formed by Brodhead avenue and Broadway, South Bethlehem. At the same time the Hoffert farm, stretching off to the southwest over the farther part of Fountain Hill down to the Emaus road, and up to the present premises of the hospital, and beyond to the Fountain Hill cemetery, was divided; 107 acres being sold to C. C. Tombler; 32 acres and 21 perches to his son, L. O. Tombler, and a small portion to Dr. F. H. Oppeldt.

In 1854 Daniel Desh sold his farm to Rudolphus Kent, of Philadelphia, who subsequently associated with himself in its ownership two other Philadelphia gentlemen, Charles Hacker and Samuel R. Shipley, the latter the founder of the Provident Life & Trust Co. Soon after acquiring the land Kent sold 10 acres to the North Penn. Railroad Co. Included in this parcel was the ground now occupied by the Union depot and round house of the P. & R. Railway, and that of the old E. P. Wilbur Trust Company building, now leased for office purposes by the Lehigh & New England Railroad Co. Messrs. Kent, Hacker and Shipley laid out the balance of the farm into blocks, and in naming the streets adopted the Indian names which some of them still bear, notably Cherokee, Pawnee, Seneca, etc.

One of the first blocks sold, the one nearest the railroad bounded by Lehigh, Ottawa, Wyandotte and Lenni Lenape streets, was purchased by E. P. Wilbur and R. A. Abbott. The latter subsequently sold his portion to Mr. Wilbur. About the same time Robert H. Sayre purchased the block to the south of the Wilbur block, bounded by Wyandotte, Third, Lenni Lenape and Ottawa streets. Lenni Lenape street formerly formed the southern boundary of the Wilbur block, and has since been vacated. Other early purchases were made by John Smylie, who purchased the block adjoining the Sayre property to the west, and William H. Sayre, who acquired the southwest corner of Third and Wyandotte streets. Beautiful residences were erected on all of these by the owners between 1858 and 1864, and shortly thereafter by Dr. Frederick Martin and Dr. G. B. Linderman, the latter a wealthy coal operator from Mauch Chunk. The residence of Dr. Linderman, erected in 1870, was several years ago sold by his son, Garret B. Linderman, to Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who made extensive alterations and improvements and now resides there.

To return to the Hoffert farm, the elder Tomblor lived on the farm for two or three years, having built a new farm house which is now the front or main building of Bishopthorpe Manor. On Dec. 2, 1850, Mr. Tomblor sold his property to Augustus Fiot, a retired music dealer of Philadelphia, who added a third story to the new house and made other extensive improvements. Mr. Fiot was a native of France, and in his youth had resided near Fountainbleu, which name he gave to his villa. With its stately old trees, beautiful flowers and fountains, Fountainbleu for a number of years was the most beautiful spot in the vicinity of Bethlehem. Mr. Fiot added to his place by the purchase of a piece of woodland on the slope of the mountain, and ten acres of the 32 acres which had been bought by L. O. Tomblor.

The remaining 22 acres bought by L. O. Tomblor were sold Aug. 7, 1850, to Daniel C. Freytag, who erected a dwelling and resided there about four years. In April, 1856, he sold the property to Malvina F. Wheeler, wife of O. H. Wheeler, a Mauch Chunk attorney, and they lived there until the Spring of 1860 when it was rented by Tinsley Jeter, of Philadelphia, who purchased it in November of the same year.

Augustus Fiot, the owner of Fountainbleu, died in April, 1866, without issue, and devised his place to his brother, Julius Fiot, of Philadelphia, who the same year sold the entire property consisting of 146 acres to Tinsley Jeter. Title did not pass to the latter, however, until three years later. In 1866 Mr. Jeter also purchased several blocks of ground from Messrs. Hacker, Shipley and Kent, which had formed a part of the original Fuehrer farm, and extended the streets laid down on the plan of lots made for these gentlemen, southwestwardly across the 22 acres on which he resided, and also across the Fiot property. These streets retained the Indian names, while the new cross streets laid out by Mr. Jeter were given the names of persons who had been prominently identified with the growth of the locality, such as Freytag and Fiot.

It was about this time that the name Fountain Hill was first applied to this part of the town, the owners feeling the need of some distinctive name for the locality.

Bishopthorpe may be said to have had its beginning in 1867. Mr. Jeter, the owner of Fountainbleu, conceived the idea of opening a girls' school and tendered the property on favorable terms for this purpose. He submitted his plans to Bishop Stevens, who about this time had taken up his residence on Fountain Hill, and he was favorably impressed with the idea. At a meeting of interested persons held at the residence of R. H. Sayre on Dec. 11, 1867, Mr. Jeter's offer was accepted and the necessary steps were at once taken. The name "Bishopthorpe" was suggested by Bishop Stevens, who had lately been in England where he had been the guest of the Archbishop of York at his country-seat, named "Bishopthorpe." The new school was opened Sept. 5, 1868, with Miss Edith L. Chase, of Philadelphia, as first principal. For a period of several years prior to 1908 the school was discontinued, but on October 1st of that year it was reopened with Prof. Claude N. Wyant as principal.

The present sketch would be incomplete without reference to an institution, which for 25 years enjoyed the patronage of many notable people from far and wide. This was the water cure hospital which stood on the present site of St. Luke's Hospital, presided over by Dr. Francis H. Oppedt, a native of Germany, who came to America in 1843 and located at Bethlehem. Attracted by the remarkable spring of pure water he applied to the Moravians for permission to erect a building which was completed in 1846. It was a hotel-like structure capable of accommodating forty people, and the treatments consisted of hot and cold applications in various forms, internal as well as external. The place at once acquired a famous patronage which continued until 1871, when financial reverses compelled the proprietor to dispose of the property. It was purchased in 1872 by the late James T. Borhek, and by him sold to Tinsley Jeter.

St. Luke's Hospital was chartered by the Legislature in 1872 at the instance of the Episcopal Church authorities, who had fostered the idea, and in 1873 its basis was broadened by an amendment to the charter permitting of the selection of trustees from among other denominations. In October, 1873, the hospital was opened in a building purchased and fitted up on Broad street (now Broadway), South Bethlehem. Through the kindly aid of Asa Packer and others the Oppedt water cure property along with an adjacent tract were purchased from Mr. Jeter in 1875, and on May 24, 1876, the hospital was removed to its present location. The first members of part of the general migrations of the Germans to the Board of Trustees were the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, Robert H. Sayre, Tinsley Jeter and John Smylie. In the 40 years of its existence this beneficent institution has done a remarkable work, during the year ended Sept. 30, 1912, the number of house and dispensary cases treated numbering 2,643. The total number of cases admitted since the opening of the hospital were 57,667. The Board of Trustees is constituted as follows: Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, LL.D., President, ex-officio; Rt. Rev. Charles L. Moench, First Vice-President; Warren A. Wilbur, Second Vice-President; Albert N. Cleaver, Secretary; Warren A. Wilbur, Treasurer; James C. Hayden, Rev. M. A. Tolman, Frank Firmstone, John Fritz, H. W. Allison, A. G. Saeger, H. J. Seaman, John W. Eckert, C. M. Dodson, H. C. Trexler, H. H. Mitchell, Henry S. Drinker, LL.D., Leonard Peckitt, Edwin Thomas, A. C. Dodson, R. E. Wilbur, C. M. Schwab, M. L. Connelly, Rev. F. S. Hort, J. W. Fuller, Jr., H. S. Snyder, David J. Pearsall, and Rev. Gilbert H. Sterling. William L. Estes, M.D., is the efficient director, and Physician and Surgeon-in-Chief.

The Fountain Hill Cemetery is yet another public enterprise worthy of mention. The company was incorporated in June, 1872, and the cemetery dedicated on July 7th by a service at the site in which Lutheran, Moravian, Reformed and other ministers participated. The first interment was made Aug. 28, 1872.

Fountain Hill's first water supply was derived from the waters of the springs above Fountainbleu, collected in a small reservoir constructed by Tinsley Jeter, and distributed through pipes to some of the residences, and even down to the railroad station. Another private company was the Cold Spring Water Company formed by Dr. G. B. Linderman, which also supplied the needs of a few residences. The Bethlehem South Gas and Water Company, organized in 1867, began to supply water from the Lehigh in 1875. The site of the reservoir and filtration plant on the hillside above St. Luke's Hospital is visited by hundreds of people who are attracted by the fine views and pure air.

The religious history of Fountain Hill has centered largely around the Church of the Nativity (Protestant Episcopal), located at Third and Wyandotte streets. Prior to 1862 religious services were held at intervals at private residences, and in that year Rev. E. N. Potter, son of Bishop Potter, was sent here as a missionary to aid in the building of a church. This was the beginning of the Church of the Nativity. The corner-stone was laid in August, 1863, and the completed edifice dedicated by Bishop Stevens April 19, 1865. Fountain Hill proper has but two churches, St. Paul's Lutheran and Grace Reformed.

In this connection it is worthy of note that Fountain Hill is the residence of the Bishop of the Diocese of Central Pennsylvania of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, LL.D. Leonard Hall, located on Delaware avenue, is maintained by the Diocese as a school for the Episcopal clergy.

Fountain Hill was incorporated as a borough in June, 1893. Its present Chief Burgess is Prof. Barry MacNutt. Town Council is composed of Arthur R. Ueberroth, President; J. A. Titlow, Secretary; Richard M. McGovern, Treasurer; W. L. Trumbauer, Jacob Bingel, Harry L. Felker, A. J. Earich, and David J. Leidig. The other officials are: Engineer, Frank H. Villie; Solicitor, Clinton A. Groman; Supervisor, Nicholas Brown; Tax Receiver, Joseph L. Boyer; High Constable, Howard Bingel; Constable, Daniel B. Keller. The municipal building is located on Clewell street.

The Board of Education is composed of A. M. Strohl, President; Wm. Bachert, Vice-President; John J. Rodenbach, Secretary; Albert Gradwohl, Treasurer, and George Vogel. John S. Stettler, the principal, assisted by a corps of efficient instructors, has supervision over the training of about 200 children. The main school building, named after Bishop Stevens, is located on Seneca street.

The health of the community is carefully guarded by a Board composed of Albert Gradwohl, President; Harry Clark, Secretary and Registrar, and Daniel Reed, Health Officer.

The Fire Department, designated as Fountain Hill Hose Company, No. 1, is equipped with a hose cart and a steamer. Harry Koch is Chief of the Department.

Fountain Hill is continuing to carry out the original intention of its founders, in making of it a residential section, and its only industrial efforts are confined to two silk mills and a machine shop. At this time the population of the borough is about 1,500 people.

CHAPTER XXIX.

BOROUGH OF MACUNGIE.

By O. P. Knauss.

This is the second oldest borough in Lehigh county. It is situated in the southern section of Lower Macungie township, at the foot of the South mountain, nine and a half miles southwest of Allentown. The Swabia creek flows through the northern part of the town and the East Penn Branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway, opened in 1859, passes also through the northern section. The population at present is about 800.

Peter Miller, who resided in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, Pa., founded Millerstown in 1776. He purchased 150 acres of land from Lewis Larose in November of that year, and upon a part of this tract he laid out the village, naming it after himself. He sold twenty-three lots on each side of Main street, and each lot contained two acres of land, subject to ground-rent. On February 2, 1782, he sold the balance of his land and the revenues arising out of the ground-rents of said lots to Bartholomew Hoover, who obtained a patent for the land from the State of Pennsylvania, dated July 23, 1784. In November of the same year Hoover and his wife, Mary, reconveyed the entire tract to Peter Miller.

As Macungie, which is the name of the township in which the village is located, signifies "bear swamp" in the dialect of its original Indian inhabitants, the country in the vicinity was probably an uninviting morass, inhabited by wild beasts.

The town being no new upstart, inasmuch as its existence is coeval with the life of our nation, its inhabitants should be inspired with patriotic pride when they recollect that their town was laid out and settled in the year of the Declaration of Independence. The town had the further patriotic distinction of being officially made one of the places where the militia were trained on stated days, when such training was obligatory on the part of all citizens liable to military duty; and battalion days at Millerstown gave the place fame and excitement. But by their famous resistance of the collection of the Federal Tax, in 1799, the inhabitants may have sacrificed some of the prestige to which the year of the town's foundation entitled them. On December 26th, of that year, the first borough election was held at the public house of Charles H. Knauss, now the post-office and hardware store building. These were elected: James Singmaster, Burgess; Harrison Miller and J. Peter Haas, Justices of the Peace; S. R. Rittenhouse, J. Peter Haas, Peter J. Weiler, Solomon Ohl, and Solomon Gorr, Councilmen.

The present borough officers are: Dr. H. M. Schell, Burgess; John L. Reinhard, President; William H. Klotz, Treasurer; A. E. Moyer, Secretary; John F. Wieder, C. H. Neumoyer, John Singmaster, Wm. Rohrbach, John H. Beidler, Councilmen; O. J. Knauss and H. W. Schantz, Justices of the Peace; Edward Feinour, Constable; O. H. Lohrman, Street and Water Commissioner, and Health Officer; Howard L. Hertzog is postmaster; O. P. Knauss is Registrar of Vital Statistics.

On November 13, 1857, the village was incorporated into a borough.

NAME CHANGED.

On September 6, 1875, 130 of the inhabitants of the borough petitioned the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county to change the name of Millerstown to Macungie, because there was also a town and postoffice called Millerstown in Perry county, and letters and merchandise addressed thereto, without naming the county, often miscarried. On November 8, of that year, the petition was granted.

The town is situated on the northerly side of South mountain, in a valley which is unsurpassed in fertility and attractiveness by any other in many parts of the state. From many points on the mountain, within a mile of the borough, there is presented a grand panoramic view of two-thirds of Lehigh county and parts of Berks and Northampton counties—a scene which never fails to incite wonder and delight. The streets of the borough are all substantial, lined with beautiful shade trees and lighted at night by electric lights. On account of the size and substantial character of the buildings, the cleanliness and compactness of the principal part, the town far surpasses most others of an equal population.

An effort was made to secure the location of the county seat at Millerstown when the county was erected in 1812.

STREETS.

Main street extends in a northwesterly direction, with the greater portion of the town on the southerly side. The other streets running in the same direction are Buttonwood, Sycamore, Chestnut, Walnut, Poplar, Mulberry, Arch, Oak, Spruce, Cedar, Lehigh, Laurel, Willow, Maple and Lumber. The cross streets now built up are Lea, Church and Race, while there are a number of alleys laid out and wholly or partly built up.

It is a matter of regret that the main cross streets run in a diagonal direction from the main street and this formed the lots in a similar way, thus creating very crooked lines. This could have been avoided if the projector of the town and the early settlers had exchanged portions of their lots. As a result of this neglect, most of the streets fronting on Main run crooked in the rear and spoil the uniformity and appearance of them.

EAST MACUNGIE.

On the eastern border is situated the village of East Macungie (long called Centreville), with a population of about 300. John F. Unger, a civil engineer, gave the place the name Centreville while being engaged by Jonas Wescoe in surveying land there about the time the East Penn Railroad was projected. Great things were anticipated by the prominent citizens for the future village and efforts were made to have the station for the new railroad located there. However, the village grew as slowly as the borough. So far as business and industrial interests are concerned, it may be regarded as a part of the borough.

About the first building there was the hotel, which is a substantial stone structure, upwards of 100 years old, but which has been improved since it was erected. A general store and a coal yard and feed and grain warehouses are the only business enterprises. Robert J. Miller conducts the hotel, which is owned by Jeremiah Berger, and Wm. M. Gehman the coal and grain business. J. C. Wasser conducts the store business.

HOUSE TAX WAR, OR HOT WATER REBELLION.

When the Federal government, in 1799, laid a direct tax on houses, the amount being determined by the size of the house and the number of window panes, this borough became distinguished for its opposition. Some of the objectors met in an upper room in the home of Mrs. Schaeffer, whose first husband was Jacob Miller and she was always known later as "Grandy" Miller. She was among the women who poured boiling water on the appraisers and soldiers to keep them from levying or collecting this tax, hence the name—"Hot Water Rebellion." Millerstown was a centre of this insurrection and "Grandy" rose from child-bed to take part in it. Prominent among her colleagues was John Fries, of Lower Milford, who was afterwards tried at Easton, convicted and sentenced to be hung, but subsequently pardoned by President John Adams.

Troops were raised in Berks and Lancaster counties to quell this insurrection and several companies marched from that section, April 1, 1799, one of them having camped in Schaeffer's woods, adjoining the town on the west. Some citizens in sympathy with the government pointed out some of the guilty ones who were taken prisoners and removed to Bethlehem. When an attempt was made by Captain Henry Jarrett, of the Light Horse Brigade, to release the prisoners, they were transferred to Philadelphia. Fries had been the leader to rescue the prisoners. Yellow fever broke out in Philadelphia and the prisoners were transferred to Norristown where they were held until a change in the government was effected and all of them were pardoned. Among the prisoners were David Schaeffer and Michael Schmoyer, both of whom died while in captivity at Norristown. They had families here and left direct descendants. [For a fuller description see Chapter IX on Fries' Rebellion.]

"GRANDY" MILLER.

CHURCHES.

Macungie is supplied with five congregations, each owning its house of worship. They were organized in the order noted.

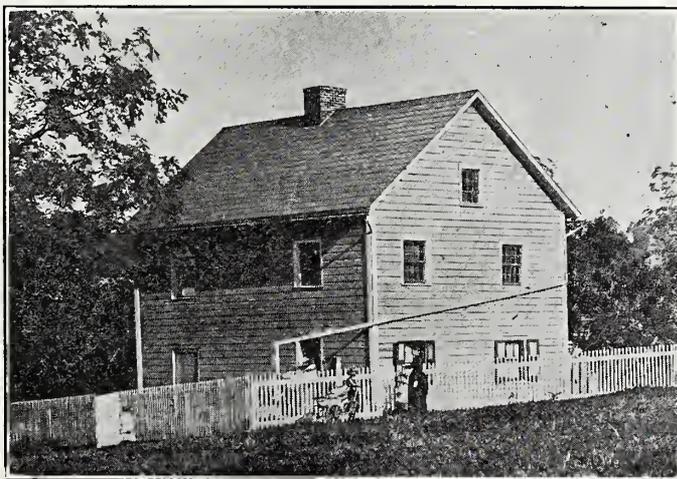

SOLOMON'S REFORMED.—Solomon's Church was built in 1841, on the western side of Church street, on an acre of ground donated by Solomon Wescoe, who was one of the fathers of the church and after whom it was named. It grew out of a 1850-'52; Rev. Daniel Zellers, 1853-'57; Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, D.D., 1857-'76; Rev. T. N. Reber, 1882-'92; Rev. C. E. Schaeffer, 1892-'97; Rev. Thomas W. Dickert, 1897-'03; Rev. Simon Sipple, 1903-'08; Rev. J. J. Schaeffer, 1908-'12; Rev. E. W. Kriebel since 1913.

The congregation purchased a lot on the north side of the church and erected a handsome parsonage thereon during the service of Rev. Dickert.

For twenty years past the congregation has published a monthly journal in its own interests, entitled The Pastor's Helper. It is devoted to congregation news and matters.

The Lutheran pastors were these: Rev. Benjamin German, 1841-'48; Rev. William German, 1848-'51; Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, 1851-'56; Rev. Joshua Yeager, 1856-'67; Rev. Alfred movement started in 1840 among former members of the Lehigh, Trexlertown, Long Swamp, Salisbury and Chestnut Hill Churches, residing in or near Millerstown. A union church by the Lutherans and Reformed was built. A new burial ground was opened in 1869. The church building was modernized in 1870.

WESCOE MEETING HOUSE.

In 1893 the Lutherans sold their right, title and interest in the property to the Reformed wing for $1,000 and proceeded to erect Grace Lutheran Church. The Reformed congregation made marked improvements to the old building and in 1900 beautified it by frescoing. Steam heating was later introduced and in 1911 electric lights were put in. The following served as Reformed pastors: Rev. Samuel Hess, 1843-'45; Rev. Henry Bassler, 1845-'48; Rev. John S. Kepler, D.D., 1848-'50; Rev. J. B. Perner, Croll, 1867-'68; Rev. Wm. Rath, 1868-; Rev. Myron O. Rath, to 1900. Rev. W. M. Kopenhaver has been pastor since.

The churchyard has been used for burial purposes by both congregations. In 1869 an acre of land was purchased from Eli Lichtenwalner and cut up into burial lots. After the congregations separated, they, however, agreed to use the cemetery in common, and it is therefore, a union burial ground.

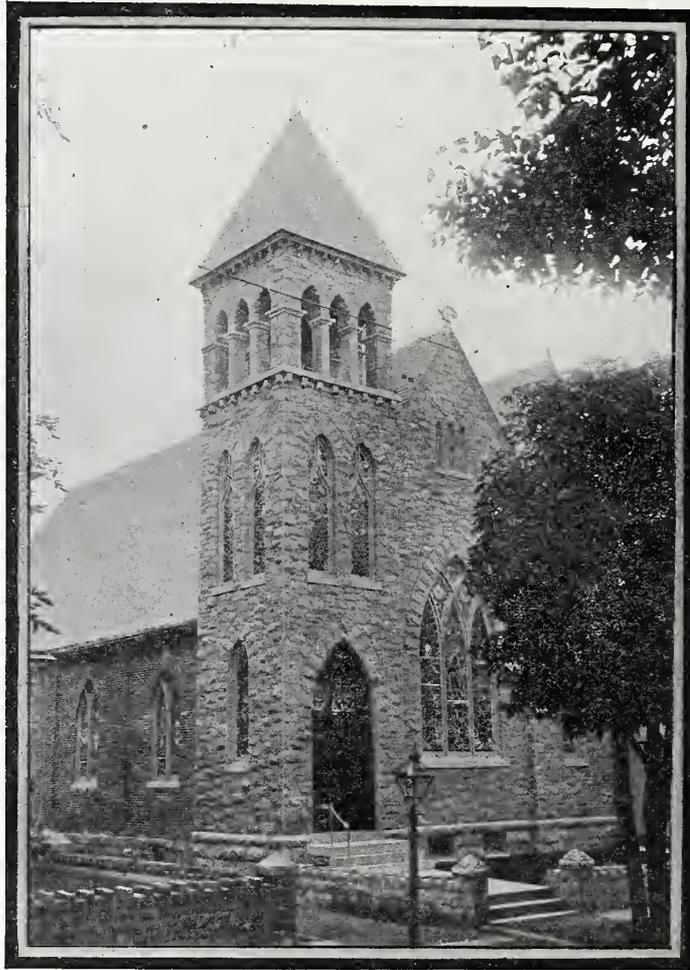

GRACE LUTHERAN.—The milling firm of Fritch Bros. & Bogh donated a lot of ground fronting on Main street and the Lutherans erected thereon a handsome church property. The main edifice is built of Seisholtzville granite and is comfortably furnished. In the rear is a brick chapel used for Sunday-school and church society purposes. Dr. D. D. Fritch has been superintendent of the Sunday-school from its organization.

The late George Mayer donated the deep and fine-toned bell of the church.

While on a trip to the Orient in 1896, Rev. M. O. Rath and the late G. F. Egner purchased a slab of stone in Palestine and had it shipped Pennsylvania Classis of the General Synod. This caused a great deal of dissatisfaction among the former church members and he was locked out of Solomon's Church. His adherents broke open the church and took possession. A tedious law suit followed, Rev. Croll maintaining that the time for which he was appointed had not expired.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH.

here. From it was cut the corner-stone of Grace Church as well as a tablet on which is inscribed a memorandum thereof and many small pieces used as souvenirs.

ST. MATTHEW'S EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN.—This congregation was formed in 1868. It was mainly an outcropping of the Lutherans of Solomon's Church. Rev. Alfred D. Croll was pastor of the latter congregation until the above-named year, when he left the Ministerium of Pennsylvania of the General Council and joined the East

The court decided in his favor. Then about a hundred of his adherents proceeded to secure a church of their own. A lot of ground on East Main street was donated by James Singmaster and in 1869 the present brick structure was erected at a cost of $6,500, all of which was raised by subscription. The building committee consisted of James Singmaster, John Mattern and Samuel Moyer. Rev. Croll served as pastor for four years, until his death, June 19, 1876. He was succeeded in order by the following:

Rev. W. I. Cutter, 1876-'78; Rev. E. Daron, 1878-'80; Rev. D. E. Read, 1880-'81; Rev. W. H. Lewars, 1881-'82; Rev. J. A. Singmaster, D.D., 1882-'85; Rev. G. W. Fritch, 1885-'91; Rev. G. J. Martz, 1891-'93; Rev. M. F. Good, 1893-'97; Rev. A. K. Zimmerman, 1898-'99; Rev. G. C. H. Hasskarl, 1899-'00; from 1900-'03 supplies were Revs. W. I. Good and Ira Z. Fenstermacher; Rev. Jacob Peter, 1903-'05; Rev. J. M. Dietzler, 1906-'07; Rev. A. B. Miller, 1908-'10; since 1910 Rev. B. S. Dise.

The congregation maintains a Sunday-school, of which the present superintendent is Wm. S. Weaver, a Christian Endeavor Society and a Missionary Society.

BAPTIST CHURCH.—In consequence of some differences among members of Solomon's Lutheran and Reformed Church, about eighteen of them left and established the German Baptist Church in 1852. Prayer-meetings were held in private houses until the following year when a quarter of an acre of ground was bought from Manasses Bear, of Upper Milford township for $20. This is situated a square south of Solomon's Church, on the same side of Church street. John Backenstoe and Joseph Wieand were the trustees of the new congregation and they erected a two-story brick house of worship. Wm. Desch was elected elder and preacher and Henry Desch and William Mohr deacons. The rite of feet-washing and baptism by total immersion are practiced by this congregation. English services are now also conducted.

The following were pastors in order of service: Rev. Wm. Desch, Rev. Henry Desch, Rev. Wm. H. Larose, Rev. John H. Pangratz, Rev. J. F. Niebuhr and Rev. J. M. Fahl, the present incumbent.

MENNONITE BRETHREN IN CHRIST.—This is the youngest existing church in the town and was organized in 1902. A neat frame edifice was erected during that and the following year on a lot of ground on Walnut street. Regular services have been held there since. The congregation is small in membership but maintains a flourishing Sunday-school.

The pastors have been Revs. J. G. Shireman, W. J. Fretz, E. T. Schick, H. K. Kratz and the present one is Rev. E. E. Kublic.

DEFUNCT CHURCHES. THE LEA STREET BAPTIST CHURCH was erected in 1873 by a faction of the German Baptist Church led by Aaron Erdman, who favored connection with the Conference of the German Church of America and the dropping of the rite of feet-washing. The pastors were Revs. Longer, Henry Desch and Lewy. The attendance and support diminished until the church was abandoned about twenty-five years ago. The two-story frame building was later used in turn as a cigar-factory, warehouse, silk mill and in 1912 was bought from the C. O. Shimer estate by Friendly Lodge of Odd Fellows and converted into a model meeting place.

THE FREE METHODIST CHURCH was an organization that flourished here about half a century ago. Meetings were held in the "Free Hall" on the south side of Main street. This was a frame structure erected upon a lot owned by George Miller and was intended to supply a long-felt want as a meeting place for various purposes. It was not a successful venture for the building was later sold to Mr. Miller by the sheriff. When the Evangelical Association was formed the building was offered to members by Mr. Miller, who was one of the original number. He later donated the property to the Association. The congregation was never strong but many spirited revival meetings were held there. Among the ministers who officiated there were Revs. Adams, Hess, Fehr, Warman, Ziegenfuss, Seyfrit, Wieand, Smoyer, Kembel, Lichtenwallner, Dissinger, Ely, Seagrist, Wenner, Baker, Butz, Warfel and Romig.

SCHOOLS.

Before a free school school was opened here in 1840, various buildings were used as school-houses. One was a log house on the site of the Desch store, another was a frame building on the lot of the late Peter J. Weiler and still another was the stone part of J. W. Gerhard's carriage works. The first regular school building was a stone structure in the former School alley, now Depot alley. This had a belfry and bell. Some of those who taught here were Messrs. Howell, Crout, Gibbons, Nash, Harrison Miller, Samuel Lorash, Wagner, Shade, W. J. Hoxworth, Fair, Joseph Nicholson (who first taught English in the district), Charles Shoemaker, James Christman, Miss Ruther, Annie R. Rems, Emily R. Hoyt and Henry Neumeyer.

MACUNGIE INSTITUTE.—Realizing the insufficiency of the existing schools, a number of citizens of the town and vicinity organized the Macungie Institute with a capital of $1,300. A half acre of ground at the eastern end of Main street was purchased from Joseph Wescoe for $50 and a two-story brick building was erected thereon at a cost of $1,800. After being supplied with charts, maps, globes, etc., the school was opened November 17, 1856, with sixteen scholars. In three months the number had increased to thirty-five. In 1857 the scholars numbered eighty-five. Oliver Fell was the principal with Miss Mary A. McGee as his assistant, and Dr. S. R. Rittenhouse as lecturer on hygiene. The common branches of an English education were taught, besides physical geography, natural philosophy and mensuration. A literary society was conducted by the teacher and scholars for mutual improvement. The enterprise was a factor for much good in the community but existed somewhat ahead of the time. The normal schools then sprung up and its influence was soon exhausted. The income of the school was not sufficient to meet the current expenses in 1860 and a debt of $700 had been contracted. The building was then rented to the public school board for three months and in 1862 the property was sold to the town school district for a figure barely covering the indebtedness. There was made an addition of equal size as the original building in later years and other improvements were made, including the addition of steam-heat. There are at present four departments, although only three schools and teachers.

The following have been teachers of the Macungie public schools in the several departments:

James Van Buskirk, Viola J. Hartshorn, A. H. Berlin, Charles Schwenk, M. J. Kramlich, Eugene Bieber, T. F. Emmens, Frank W. Siegfried, James S. Biery, William Muhlenberg, Samuel C. Lee, George Heffner, R. S. Hittle, S. W. Witman, R. J. De Long, Hoyt Wightman, Annie R. Rems, Oliver Neumeyer, Hannah Thomas, Alice Newhard, Emma Shoemaker, Lizzie Edmunds, Ida Baughman, John Rems, Alvin Rupp, Fannie M. Ihric, Clara Eberhard, Clara Kunstman, Annie Kernahen, Sallie Sames, H. O. Beisel, Sallie Hoxworth, Laura Weinberger, O. J. Knauss, W. K. Desch, Frederika H. Dase, Tillie Mann, Jennie Donnelly, Annie Griffin, Mary C. Rems, Charles H. Horton, W. H. Nicholas, Mary S. Hale, Lizzie E. Shimer, George A. Weber, Ella R. Erdman, E. J. Heilman, H. O. Shiffert, W. N. Decker, Mary Downs, Geo. C. Bollinger, M. H. N. Ritter, H. W. Shimer, Jacob Erdman, B. F. Cressman, A. J. Heller, J. W. Taylor, J. M. Uhler, L. C. Mullen, D. Elizabeth Reinecker, Ira W. Schuck, en, John L. Cuttshall, O. A. Fulmer, Minnie E. Mock. The present teachers are Principal Wm. Blanche Macbeth, Wm. Kintner, Francis Steph-H. Krill, Olga M. Hendryx, secondary, and Miss Annie Griffin, primary. The latter has thus far taught very successfully for twenty-five years in succession in the borough's schools. A high school course was adopted some years ago and six classes have graduated therefrom.

TURNPIKE ROAD.

In 1858 the Millerstown and Shimerville turnpike was opened. It was constructed by Patrick Rehill who was a contractor in charge of work at the East Penn Railroad being built at the same time. The road previously had always been a poor one, although it was the King's Highway. The stretch of road improved is about two and a half miles and its southern end connects with the Berks and Lehigh turnpike. A toll gate was established at Guth's, about midway between Shimerville and Macungie. As toll roads became unpopular within recent years, the stretch named was abandoned in 1911. By court proceedings, the county purchased the road and it then became a public thoroughfare.

TROLLEY ROAD.

On September 2, 1899, the electric railway was opened to Macungie, by way of Emaus. This point is the terminus of the line, but it is expected that it will eventually be extended to Reading, touching the principal villages between. At first there was a forty-minute service but later the time was extended to one hour intervals between cars and cars run until midnight. The road runs in the middle of Main street, entering it at Walnut where it occupies the road to Emaus through East Macungie and from there runs along and across fields to Emaus.

WATER SYSTEM.

In 1895 an excellent water system was established. The borough purchased about twenty acres of woodland, half way up the mountain side, where springs of the purest water abound. A spacious reservoir was built, the water from the springs led therein through covered pipes and the stored water through other pipes into the town, about a mile from the springs and reservoir. The reservoir has an elevation of 220 feet from the central part of the town and this creates a pressure of 90 pounds to the square inch. The reservoir is covered with a good roof over a well ventilated building and all springs are covered. Water is carried by powerful pressure to all parts of the town.

TOWN HALL.

In 1906 a handsome brick building was erected at the northwest corner of Church and Locust streets, for municipal purposes. It is fitted out with quarters for the Fire Company, the Town Council and the School Board. It is also the election polling place. In the basement are two iron cages or cells for the incarceration of unruly persons. The building is supplied with steam heat and electric lights. First floor houses the fire apparatus, consisting of a combination chemical and hook and ladder wagon, for two-horse attachment; a hose cart, hose and equipment for the firemen. The second story is divided into two spacious rooms by folding doors. The front is used by the Fire Company and contains a pool table, etc., while the rear part is for the other bodies. In the tower in front is a fire alarm bell.

and vicinity. At present the current is received from the parent company at Allentown. Charles H. Neumoyer is president; H. L. Hertzog, secretary, and L. S. Shimer, treasurer. These officers and the following are the present directors: A. B. Neumoyer, John F. Wieder.

MILLERSTOWN BAND.

Few, if any, of the old institutions of the town are better remembered and with keener regard than the Millerstown Band and a short record of it should have a place in this history. It was or-

SINGMASTER HOMESTEAD.

FIRE COMPANY.

Macungie Fire Company, No. 1, was incorporated in March 4, 1907, with these charter members: John L. Reinhard, Charles H. Neumoyer, H. L. Hertzog, John F. Wieder, Harry Hosfeld, J. W. Singmaster, John D. Rems, O. J. Knauss, Luther W. Fritch, J. H. Beidler, H. W. Schantz, Wm. B. Rohrbach, Charles Muth, Jr., and H. M. Desch.

The company has now about 150 members and is a flourishing organization. On a number of occasions it has shown its efficiency at fires.

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY.

The Macungie Electric Light, Heat and Power Company was organized in 1908, and furnishes light and power to people in the town ganized in 1855. The original members were Peter J. Weiler, Henry G. Hangen, Dr. Peter S. Leisenring, Thomas W. Christman, Monroe H. Miller, J. Peter Haas, James Singmaster, Alexander Weaver, Henry Neumeyer, Chas. H. Schwenk, Edwin Singmaster, Harrison Miller, William H. Miller and Frederick Schulze. Teachers in order were Frederick T. Iobst, of Emaus; John Hook, of Reading; Frederick Benkhard, of Allentown, and George Douglass, a leading member of Beck's famous band of Philadelphia.

After the band had practiced well it became quite proficient in a few years. It left for the war in November, 1861, and was mustered in at Harrisburg as the Fifty-fourth Regiment Band, Pennsylvania Volunteers. About a month was spent in Camp Curtin at Harrisburg. It was then transferred to Washington, afterwards to a small place on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and last to Sir John's Run, along the Potomac river, in Berkeley county, Virginia. There it was discharged from duty and the men returned to their homes. The original list of members had been changed considerably and the following were among those who served in the band during its engagement in the war:

Peter J. Weiler, Edward Diehl, John Bauer, William A. Rems, Monroe H. Miller, Henry Creitz, John Haines, Christian Dankel, Samuel Oswald, Alexander Weaver, Samuel Creitz, Franklin Christman, John Hamburg, William Miller, Alfred Miller, Franklin Mertz. Edwin Lorish was employed as cook and was mustered in as a bandman though he was no musician.

Peter J. Weiler, the leader of the band during its war service and for many years afterwards, was an accomplished musician. He also taught other bands and was a careful instructor. Much of the success of the organization was due to his ability and watchfulness. He died in 1906. Only a few of the original members are now still living.

The band had earned an excellent reputation for its renderings and filled many engagements. It was at the height of its proficiency about thirty years ago, and then gradually disbanded, owing to the leaving of members for other places and bands. It was later succeeded by the Macungie Band (when the town's name was changed), and the Keystone Band, under which name it had been incorporated. In its time the old band contained excellent musicians and rendered some of the best selections of music.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETIES.

FRIENDLY LODGE, No. 85, I. O. O. F., was chartered July 19, 1843, by these members: Benjamin Rupp, N. G.; P. G. Breyfogel, V. G.; Herman Rupp, Sec.; Harrison Miller, Treas.; Benneville Yoder, P. H. Kaiser, Charles Hittle, Peter Wertz, Henry Groff, John Mattern, George Mertz, Daniel Yerk, Geo. Kern, Aaron Butterwick, Jacob Romig, Peter Farrar, Henry Gabriel and Frank Hersch. The lodge met first in the frame building on the north side of Main street, now owned by J. H. Beidler, then on the second story of the Free Hall, afterwards on the third floor of the Shimer building, then in Singmaster building. In 1912 the lodge purchased and remodeled the former church building on Lea street and converted it into a model meeting place. Here the other lodges of the town are tenants. The present officers of the lodge are as follows: Edwin Strauss, N. G.; Clarence Moll, V. G.; N. W. Knauss, Cor. Sec.; J. M. Roedler, Fin. Sec.; W. L. Knappenberger, Treas. The lodge meets every Saturday evening.

CONTINENTAL CASTLE, No. 61, K. G. E., was instituted October 4, 1885, by the following charter members: Dr. Chas. Meyer, Dr. T. A. Strasser, Dr. J. D. Erdman, Dr. D. D. Fritch, A. B. Christman, J. L. Reinhard, R. F. Moyer, N. S. Gery, Chas. A. Rauch, C. O. Fogel, P. C. Blank, P. H. Ritter, Wilson Hoffman, Herman Kraemer, M. E. Hertzog, H. F. Neumeyer, W. L. Knappenberger.

The Castle meets every Thursday evening. The present officers are Robert P. Conrad, N. C.; Frank Wetzel, V. C.; John Wetzel, P. C.; Ira High, H. P.; E. M. Shiffert, M. of R.; A. B. Christman, C. of E.; C. A. Rauch, K. of E.; Chas. Muth, E. J. Christman, Alton Wieder, Trustees.

MACUNGIE BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION was organized Jan. 24, 1884, and these were the first officers: J. D. Erdman, Pres.; Chas. H. Moll, Vice Pres.; O. P. Knauss, Sec.; John Rems, Treas.; Ellis R. Lichtenwalner, Horace F. Neumeyer and Wm. H. Klotz, Trustees. It meets on the first and third Friday evenings of each month. The present officers are C. A. Rauch, Pres.; J. M. Roedler, Sec.; W. H. Klotz, Treas.

WASHINGTON CAMP, No. 569, P. O. S. of A. was instituted Oct. 31, 1890, and surrendered its charter on May 10, 1897, and reorganized July 5, 1897. The camp has about 100 members and meets every Monday evening. The present officers are Raymond Moll, Pres.; Paul Hartzell, Vice Pres.; P. W. Trexler, Rec. Sec.; J. M. Roedler, Fin. Sec.; A. B. Christman, Treas.; Edwin Strauss, J. O. Wetzel and O. J. Knauss, Trustees.

MACUNGIE ENCAMPMENT, No. 123, I. O. O. F. was organized or renewed February 15, 1913, being transferred from Longswamp, Berks county, where it had existed as Longswamp Encampment since 1856. Sixty members joined the first evening. The organization meets on the second and fourth Tuesday evenings of each month. Its present officers are O. P. Knauss, C. P.; W. H. Krill, H. P.; Clarence Moll, Sr. W.; Edwin Bauer, Jr. W.; N. W. Knauss, Scribe; W. L. Knappenberger, Treas.

MACUNGIE LODGE, No. 75, K. of P., the first lodge of this order in the county, was chartered June 3, 1868, by the following members: F. B. Wescoe, V. P.; Julius Holstein, W. C.; George F. Knauss, V. C.; M. H. Miller, R. S.; M. D. Lichtenwalner, F. S.; Herman Phillips, B.; E. S. Marsteller, G.; Amos Parker, I. S.; James Haines, O. S. The lodge suspended about twenty years ago, the membership having fallen off so that successful business could no longer be done.

HOTELS.

Leonard Schlauch kept the first hotel in an old log house where the Keystone House now stands. The old tavern was the voting place for Upper and Lower Milford and Upper and Lower Macungie until 1832. The hotel now is an up-to-date hostelry. Ambrose Weller is the present proprietor.

In 1869 Dr. Charles Meyer erected the com-many a horse was handled by the late Stephen Hill and others.

BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS AND PEOPLE.

The borough now contains five churches, a postoffice, with two rural mail routes, railroad station (East Penn Branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway), express and telegraph offices, bank (Perkiomen National), school-house, town hall, lodge hall, steam roller mill, iron furnace, hosiery mill, underwear mill, silk mill, shoe factory, brass foundry, paper-box factory, creamery, carriage factory, grain warehouse, coal and lumber yards, printing establishment, tinsmith shop, blacksmith shop, livery, bakery, bread and cake store, four general stores, grocery store, three ice cream and candy stores, two hotels, two barber shops, shoe store, plumbing establishment, SALLADE HOME.

modious four-story hotel building on the north side of Main street, near the crossing of the East Penn Railroad. This has been conducted as a hotel ever since, by different men as proprietors. The present proprietor is George E. Lynn. Dr. Meyer also conducted a drug store in the western side for many years.

For many years the brick building in the central part of Main street, now occupied by the postoffice, hardware store, etc., was a hotel and was long known as the Centre House. It had its last license in 1883.

The East Pennsylvania Hotel, later known as the Black Horse Hotel, was a hostelry, abandoned as such about thirty years ago. It was converted into the double dwelling westwardly of Grace Lutheran Church on Main street, and that edifice stands on the site of the hotel yard where bicycle shop, watch and clock repairer, cigar manufacturer, hardware store, restaurant, millinery store, two tailor shops, butcher shop, meat market, harness shop, furniture store, machine shop, three shoe makers, four doctors, two veterinarians, a dentist, three resident pastors, two lawyers, two justices of the peace, two master painters, concrete contractor, undertaker, ice cream manufacturer, several agents, music agency, etc.

INDUSTRIES.

The town possesses a number of diversified industries that make it quite a business centre in the community. Before the advent of the steam railroad, it was the trading point of people for many miles around. Until the Perkiomen Railroad was opened, much custom came from people in the lower section of Lehigh, and from Berks and Montgomery counties. Coal, lumber and other merchandise were bought here and delivered far away. Closer competition cut up this trade and then local industries gradually sprung up.

Coverlet weaving was for many years an extensive and profitable industry considering the population and resources of the community. This industry ceased sixty years ago, the fashion in these articles having changed and new inventions in weaving machinery having made competition with the hand loom impracticable. Thus it came to pass that the industries of the town were restricted to the shoemaker, the blacksmith and the tailor, and instead of several men being engaged as at present, there were possibly a dozen employed making boots and shoes to order, before factory footwear was introduced.

A pioneer industry was a rope-walk operated in a small way by John Wack, on Plum alley.

THE MACUNGIE FURNACE.

Little or nothing was done in the way of establishing industries until the year 1874, when the iron furnace was erected. As the panic of the previous year had seriously depressed the iron industry, a new furnace seemed to be a doubtful enterprise; at all events, after having been kept in blast for a few years, apparently at a loss, the company became insolvent and the plant was sold by the sheriff. A few years later a new company, named the Macungie Iron Company, was formed, the furnace was restarted and after a precarious and interrupted operation it went out of blast in 1894 and was again sold by the sheriff in 1898.

On account of a later boom in pig metal it again became a valuable plant. It was bought by the Empire Steel and Iron Company, and, having been repaired and made better than it had ever been before, was put in blast January 11,

SINGMASTER TANNERY.

Hat making was also carried on for a time by three men. Although their trade cut no great figure, when it is considered that fashionable and substantial "beaver tiles" were made by them, it must be regretted that the industry became obsolete instead of serving as the foundation for several large establishments.

A well known industry in the community for many years was the tannery established by Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk about 1785. His son-in-law, Adam Singmaster succeeded him and the latter's son, John, and his grandson, James Singmaster, conducted the same until the latter razed the buildings about thirty years ago, the manufacture of leather in small establishments having become unprofitable.

1900. It had a successful run but was blown out for repairs several times. Then, in October, 1912, it was restarted, after extensive improvements had again been made, but was only operated until May 16 of the following year when the works were shut down, owing to the unfavorable iron market. The furnace is one of a number of plants owned or controlled by the Empire Company, whose headquarters are at Catasauqua. Leonard Peckitt, of that place, has been the president of the company since its organization.

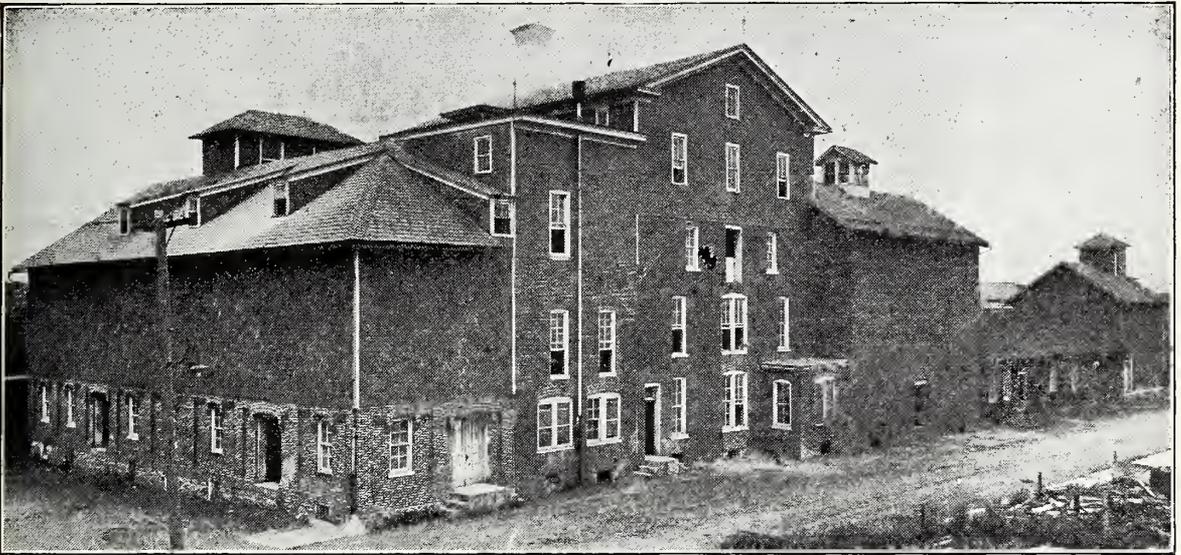

Mr. Peckitt purchased considerable mountain land near Macungie within recent years and erected on the former "Roedler Head" a fine bungalow and observatories, where he and wife spend the greater part of the summer seasons.

KEYSTONE ROLLER MILLS.

In 1876 Dr. D. D. Fritch, his brother, Nathan D. Fritch, and their brother-in-law, Harry F. Bogh, bought the old grist mill of the Harrison Miller estate, located at the Swabia creek, nearly opposite the railroad station, together with the old mill dam and land on Race street. The old frame mill was razed and a new mill, built of brick, 50 by 180 feet, was erected 200 feet south of Main street. The water system was improved and the roller process of flour-making was adopted. Through their enterprise, zeal and business tact, their interests grew to such a degree that the available water power was found inadequate, so a steam was substituted. The trade continued to increase and the firm was compelled to make additions to the mill and enlarge its capacity from time to time, until to-day it turns out 500 barrels of flour every 24 hours, which includes the large elevator located at East Greenville, Pa. In 1911 the mill was reconstructed, a large addition being made to the south end, and entirely new and the latest improved machinery was installed. A few years ago an elevator was erected at East Greenville, Montgomery county, where a flourishing business is maintained in connection with the extensive business at Macungie. About the year 1879, Dr. Fritch introduced the first rye flour ever made by the roller process in the country. The Keystone Roller Mills in its various departments employs twenty-five men. Two of the leading brands of flour manufactured by this concern, "Fritch's XXXX Fancy," and "Triumph's Spring Patent," are household words in many of the homes in eastern Pennsylvania.

In 1897 Mr. Bogh withdrew from the firm.

KEYSTONE ROLLER MILLS.

rels of flour every 24 hours. The mill is operated uninterruptedly every working day during the year, and whether times be poor or brisk, the product finds such a ready sale that the mill is often taxed to its utmost capacity to supply the demand. Besides a number of brands of flour, the mill produces corresponding quantities of feed and bran. This enterprising firm buys up practically all the wheat and rye that are grown within a radius of many miles of Macungie, but such is the quantity needed for the output that large and steady shipments are bought and received from the north and west.

For storage purposes, a cylindrical steel elevator was built, with a capacity of 25,000 bushels. The plant, however, has a total storage capacity

Dr. Fritch, the senior brother, is the controlling head and partner, his brother, Nathan, not taking an active part on account of illness.

In connection with the milling business and very much for experimental purposes, Dr. Fritch some years ago purchased the fine Schaeffer farm lying partly in the northwestern section of the borough, and this has been made a model farm under his own personal supervision. For many seasons extraordinary crops of wheat, grass and potatoes have been taken from it. Dr. Fritch specializes in the raising of wheat and potatoes. From a fourth of his farm or about forty acres, in 1907, the potato yield was 15,000 bushels. In this connection it may be mentioned that through the instrumentality of the extraordinary crops of potatoes raised by Dr. Fritch, shipments of potatoes were begun which have increased, as other farmers have begun the same course, from a few bushels to 100,000 bushels from the Macungie railroad station.

The effect of the scientific farming introduced by Dr. Fritch has not only been of material benefit to his own county and state but to the country at large. His advice has been solicited from many quarters of the United States and also from foreign lands.

Besides their extensive mill business, and the farm and elevator interests, Messrs. Fritch erected three handsome mansions on Main street, where they reside, and a number of other houses in town. They also own considerable other real estate here.

Much of the local progress during the past thirty years is attributable to the enterprise manifested by the proprietors of the Keystone Roller Mills.

PRINTING AND PUBLISHING.

The pioneer printer at Macungie was L. F. Roth who transferred a small outfit from Hellertown to this place. He did a jobbing business for a year or two and then sold his outfit to Captain Levi Smoyer, a lawyer, who had his office here. With Richard J. DeLong, principal of the borough schools, as editor, he published the Macungie Independent, a monthly paper, for several years. O. P. Knauss having served his apprenticeship in the establishment with Mr. DeLong, rented the outfit and carried on the business one year, when Mr. DeLong retired. Since then Mr. Knauss has conducted the printing business in a successful manner. In 1883 he purchased the printing plant from Mr. Smoyer and improved its equipment very much from time to time.

In 1888 Mr. Knauss started the publication of a weekly newspaper, entitled Macungie Progress, which he conducted for exactly twenty-three years, until March 30, 1911, when he suspended its publication. The rural mail facilities enabled country people to receive daily papers and their introduction supplanted the weeklies.

This local paper had a wide circulation and through the careful management of the proprietor it exerted considerable influence for good in the community. In its issues much of the town's history was chronicled and during its existence more local improvements of a public character were advocated and secured than in all its previous history.

The location of the plant was toward the western end of Main street until 1908 when Mr.

Knauss purchased the old Weiler premises (one of the oldest properties in Macungie), towards the eastern end, improved and enlarged the same, and since then he has carried on the general printing business there.

VALLEY KNITTING MILL.

The Valley Knitting Mill of R. F. Moyer & Co. was established in 1891. John L. Reinhard and John Rems formed a partnership with Mr. Moyer and the manufacture of hosiery has been successfully carried on ever since. The original brick building on Church street has been doubled in size and the capacity and facilities were improved from time to time. Various styles of hosiery are manufactured in large quantities. The output is disposed of mostly to big dealers in New York and other large cities. From fifty to seventy-five hands are regularly employed.

In 1907 Mr. Rems withdrew from the firm, selling his interest to the remaining partners. Mr. Reinhard has active control in the manufacture, Mr. Moyer being more regularly engaged in his general store business which he maintains in connection.

MACUNGIE UNDERWEAR FACTORY.

The manufacture of ladies' underwear was begun by John Rems & Sons in 1907, in a well-built frame structure erected on a lot which fronts on Locust street. Mr. Rems had for sixteen years been associated with R. F. Moyer and John L. Reinhard in the manufacture of hosiery. He took into partnership his sons, John D. and Robert E., and by industry and perseverance they have built up a nice business among the big dealers and houses in the trade. Electric lighted, well heated and ventilated, with modern machinery, and equipment, their establishment is a model of its kind. There is steady work for half a hundred employes on the average.

CENTURY SHOE CO., LIMITED.

In the beginning of the year 1901 the Century Shoe Company, Limited, was organized. The firm members were W. H. Welland, Calvin C. Griner and Alvin E. Moyer. Work was begun in a frame building close to the railroad station and business was started in a small way. Mr. Welland was a former manufacturer and salesman and Messrs. Griner and Moyer were skillful mechanics. The trade gradually grew and then Mr. Welland withdrew and John H. Beidler took his interest in the firm. The building and facilities were outgrown and a fine three-story-and-basement brick factory building was erected on a lot located just beside the railroad, east of the station, purchased from the Singmaster estate. A splendidly equipped plant has been put up and the business has developed in a very successful manner. At first infants' shoes and the smaller children's shoes were made, but gradually machinery was added for the larger sizes and these are produced in the best styles and shapes. The company has been very successful and its trade extends to nearby and distant points in many states.

The Century Shoe Company succeeded the Reliable Shoe Company which had been pioneers in the shoe line here. After several years of successful operation, this firm moved its business to Orwigsburg, Schuylkill county, where it has been steadily prospering since.

MACUNGIE SILK MILL.

In 1909 G. Byron Kleppinger, Charles L. Huber, Charles W. Rothenberger, Dr. D. D. Fritch, Charles A. Rauch and Horace W. Schantz organized a company for the manufacture of silk materials at Macungie and became incorporated December 20, 1908, under the name of the Macungie Silk Company with a capital of $20,000. Dr. D. D. Fritch is president and Mr. Kleppinger secretary and treasurer, and also manager of the company. Their new enterprise was started in the former Baptist Church building on Lea street and while carrying on the works there they erected a one-story brick mill, 50 by 72 feet, on Locust street and equipped it with the necessary machinery, and began business there in September following. They operated eight looms in the manufacture of ribbons and bindings of different varieties, in various colors, which they mostly sell direct to the trade in all parts of the United States. They employ 25 hands and run day and night from Monday morning until Saturday afternoon. The thrown silk is imported from Japan and China and secured from importers in New York.

CARRIAGE WORKS.

The Enterprise Carriage Works of J. W. Gerhard have long been established and are constantly busy turning out new vehicles and making repairs. Mr. Gerhard also conducts a store for the sale of carriages at Allentown. He is largely interested in a stone quarry near Allentown and operates a fine farm a few miles south of town. The works here employ a force of mechanics all the year and the product is sent to all parts of the country.

MACHINES AND INVENTIONS.

For about thirty years Horace F. Neumeier has been engaged in manufacturing various patented articles of his own invention, including hydrants, nozzles, spigots, etc., and making repairs with automatic machinery in his model shop. A more extended reference to his personality and mechanical skill will be found in a biographical sketch in this volume.

BRASS WORKS.

Richard Goedecke transferred his business of manufacturing ornamental brass goods to Macungie from New York in 1888 and formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, M. W. Schmoyer. Business was quite successfully carried on for several years in the former "Hall" church building on Main street. In 1903 H. F. Neumeier succeeded the firm and later took with him into the business J. Walter and Howard M. Singmaster. The business was incorporated the same year. Later Mr. Neumeier disposed of his interests to Messrs. Singmaster and they erected a fine plant on a plot of ground on the north side of the railroad, opposite the station. The firm name was changed to Macungie Brass & Manufacturing Company, and for some years various brass articles have been manufactured there. At present automobile parts are made for the trade.

IRON FOUNDRY.

Among industries that had been doing business here but which are now out of existence, is the iron foundry long operated by James Miller and later by his sons, Victor and Oscar, and still later by Miller & Rauch. It finally passed into other hands and after having been improved and enlarged, a series of fires eventually destroyed it in 1911. In its time many stove parts, plows, and other castings were made. The foundry stood just north of the railroad, about a square east of the station.

MANY CIGARS MADE HERE.

Some twenty years ago Magee Bros. carried on an extensive cigar manufacturing business here. They failed in a few years and were succeeded by J. Steigerwalt & Co. who also became in financial straits. Both concerns had employed many hands. They were located in the former church building on Lea street. While there are a number of cigarmakers here they are compelled to work elsewhere as there are no factories to employ them here.

PAPER BOX FACTORY.

In 1909 the Wheeler & Wieder Company began the manufacture of paper boxes here. They gradually increased their facilities and are now very well equipped. They produce boxes for textile mills and shoe factories and their trade is steadily increasing. A number of skilled hands and improved machinery are employed. Mr. Wheeler is a native of Shoemakersville and previously worked at Reading and Kutztown. Mr. Wieder is a native of town. Their place of business is in the Weaver building, East Main street.

LEFT GOOD IMPRESSIONS.

Among deceased citizens who were prominently identified with the town, the county and state, and left their impress upon the community, may be mentioned the following:

Station Agent Gideon F. Egner, ex-Sheriff

Wayne Bitting, Assemblyman Perry Wannemacher, County Commissioners David L. Barnier, Stephen B. Neumoyer and Alexander Singmaster, Lawyers Levi Smoyer and Ellis R. Lichtenwallner, Postmasters John Haines, Amos Parker, Charles Rems; also Edward Muth and Jonas Hunsberger, merchant tailors; Stephen Hill, C. K. Henninger and Chas. S. Shimer, hotelkeepers; John Shiffert and Aaron Erdman, hardware merchants; Conrad Hosfeld, barber; Jethro Schuler, machinist; Charles Hill, brick manufacturer and butcher; Frank B. Wescoe, teacher and secretary; John Fingado, express agent and cigarmaker; Samuel Moyer, carpenter contractor; Wm. Haines, Sr., hat maker; Frank Shimer, merchant; C. O. Shimer, drover and capitalist; T. M. Brobst and H. T. Hertzog, justices; Charles Schwenk, tinsmith; Wm. Haines, shoemaker; Victor G. Moyer, baker; Frank D. Lukens, shipper and salesman; Dr. Charles Meyer and Franklin Fisher, druggists.

CHAPTER XXX.

BOROUGH OF SLATINGTON.

First Settlement.—The Borough of Slatington is situated on the west side of the Lehigh river, about two miles below the Gap in the Blue Ridge, at a point where the famous "Warrior's Path" crossed the stream, and where Nicholas Kern took up land as early as 1737. The area of this land amounted to 500 acres, subsequently increased to 700 acres, and it was described as having been on the West Branch of the Delaware river, as the Lehigh was then called.

Benjamin Franklin, in his report to Governor Morris in January, 1756, stated that he had pro-wit, and in time came to be corrupted to "trucker." There were no other settlers in this immediate locality besides the Kerns until after the discovery of slate, and this family lived here quietly as farmers and millers.

Nicholas Kern established a grist-mill and saw-mill on Trout creek a short distance west of the river about 1745. The saw-mill stood on the site of the present mill; and the grist-mill was under the same roof to the south. Upon the removal of the mill the second was built at a point now in the center of Main Street at the cured boards and timber from Trucker's saw-mill for use at Fort Allen at Weissport some distance above the Gap; and many state papers, letters and reports from officers, who were stationed in this region from 1756 to 1764, bear date as from "Kern's," or "Trucker's." The two names represented the same person, William Kern, having become distinguished from others of this name because of his jovial and joking disposition. The locality was inhabited by Germans, and they naturally used the term trucker to identify him, which signified a joker or east end of the bridge. It was a stone structure, a story and a half high. This was torn down in 1850 by Jonas Kern and he erected the present three-story stone mill at the eastern end of the bridge on the lower side of the street. At that time the only persons who lived in the lower section were: Jonas Kern, John Kern (his father), Henry Kuntz and Robert McDowell.

KERN'S MILL.

Below the mill of 1850, about 150 feet, along the creek, it was stated in 1850 by John Kern (grandfather of Benjamin Kern, who is now living at Slatington, 82 years old,) that certain Indians tented under a large chestnut tree when the first settler, Nicholas Kern, arrived, and they became very friendly with him; that they became angered at some alleged wrong by early settlers down the river where they killed a number of persons and destroyed much property, but they did not molest Kern though they suspected his co-operation against them.

The house of Nicholas Kern was the first building put up in the place. It was built of logs about 1741, and stood on the north-east corner of Main and Diamond streets. Many years afterward, about 1807, another log building was erected in its place and it had the distinction of a double porch in that period. It was torn down in 1858, and a new modern dwelling was erected in its stead by Henry Kuntz, which has been improved by his son-in-law, W. W. Bowman, and is now occupied by him.

In 1761 a public road was laid out along the line of the old "Warrior's Path," across the Lehigh river, thence up the Slatington hill, in a southwesterly course, parallel with the Blue Ridge. The point where it crossed Trout creek was a hundred feet south of the bridge, and extended around the hill-side to the present course. But the "Warrior's Path" crossed the river at the outlet of Trout Creek, then followed the course which afterward became Factory street.

The first industry in the slate business was the "Tunnel Quarry" of Jones and Roberts north of the Kern mills about a thousand feet, opened in 1845, for the production of roofing slate; and the next was the slate factory along Trout creek, about five hundred feet south of the mills, for the production of slate mantels and slate slabs, erected in 1847, which afterward became the property of the Lehigh Slate Company and is now operated by Bachman Brothers. The "Tunnel Quarry" was operated until 1886.

A covered wooden bridge across the river was erected in 1854. The Lehigh Valley railroad was constructed along the river in 1856; and the same year a hotel was erected near the station. And then it was that the place was named for a time, "Liberty."

In 1862 the "Riverside" Slate quarry was opened, and in 1863 another near the river, by David Williams; and in 1865 he put up a school slate factory which was destroyed by fire in 1874 and immediately rebuilt. This is the large three-story frame building on the east side of the railroad near the station, unoccupied for some time.

David Williams was an enterprising man and contributed much toward the development of the town, covering a period of 20 years. He was recognized as one of the most extensive slate operators in the country and became prominently identified with the development of the slate industry. In 1884 his factory had reached an annual capacity of 1,300,000 school slates which found a ready market in the several states of the Union. He was burgess of the borough for four years from 1875 to 1879.

Old Buildings.—In 1807, about the time when John Kern, rebuilt the old home, he also erected a stone barn a hundred feet to the rear of it. In 1894 the western portion was removed in the opening of Diamond street; the eastern portion is still standing, and on the frame front there are two dates to show the time of erecting the barn and of the change, 1807-1894.

In 1820 George Kern erected a two-story stone dwelling house on the north side of Main street, 100 yards east of the homestead. It was used as a tavern from 1824 to 1840, then changed to a dwelling, being now owned and occupied by Amandes Glose. A large stone barn was erected the same time by George Kern on the opposite side of the street, 200 feet to the east. This is still standing. It became the property of Phaon Semmel in 1857, when he changed it for business purposes.

The old two-story stone building erected by Jonas Kern in 1845 on the north side of Main street, on a lot adjoining the old homestead, and used for a time as a tavern is still standing, owned by his son, Benjamin, an inscription stone being on the front which shows also two goblets.

The old stone grist-mill, built by Jonas Kern, at Trout creek, in 1850, is still standing and in operation by its owner, Alfred J. Kern; and the saw-mill re-built by Jonas Kern about the same time is also standing and in operation by its owner, Alfred J. Kern.

An old two-story stone building, with cut-stone front, similar to the previous old buildings, erected by George Kern in 1853 is still in a fine state of preservation; and the slate factory, on Factory street, erected by the Lehigh Slate Company in 1854 is also standing, occupied by Bachman Brothers.

These buildings, attractive for their appearance, are in lower Slatington. A similar two-story stone building, with cut-stone front, on the south side of Main street, beyond South, in upper Slatington, erected by Thomas Kern in 1847, is also still standing in a fine state of preservation; also the first two brick office buildings erected in 1851, above-mentioned.

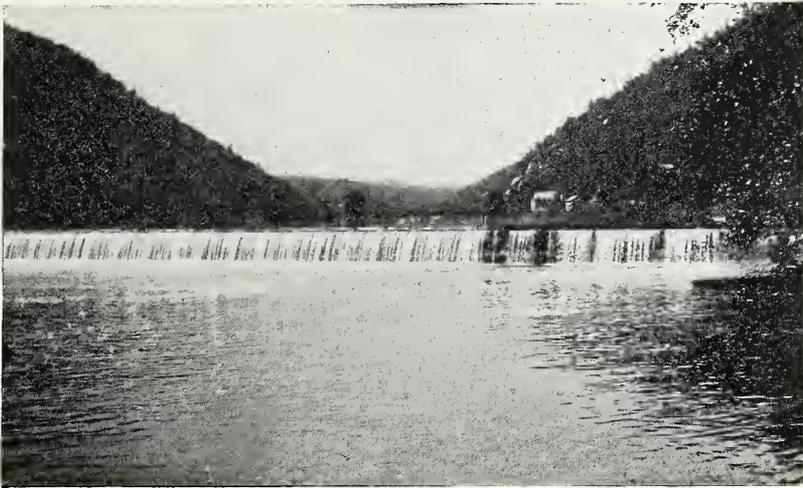

Discovery of Slate.—The first efforts in digging for slate in this section of Pennsylvania began shortly after the year 1800, a charter having been granted in 1805 by the legislature to a number of capitalists for the purpose of opening and working a slate-quarry along the Delaware river below the Water-Gap. After slate had been quarried there for a number of years, it was thought that this material might also be found along the mountain near the Lehigh Water-Gap. It was said by Daniel D. Jones, an old and experienced early operator, that two Welshmen, William Roberts and Nelson Labar, migrated from the quarry near the Delaware Water-Gap and opened similar quarries on the east and west sides of the Lehigh river below the Gap, and that the names of other pioneers were: Owen Jones, Robert M. Jones, George Labar, Hugh L. Davis and Henry Williams.

chantable slate of their native country. Upon learning from Heimbach where it was obtained, they went to the spot, a short distance down the river, and investigated the locality. It was found on the land of John Benninger in Northampton county and being satisfied that the material was slate, they secured a lease on the property. In the spring of 1845 they opened a quarry and embarked in the business of producing roofing slate. In August following, Benninger also opened a quarry.

The same season, these Welshmen went to the west side of the river to extend their researches, but they decided that there was no slate in that vicinity: "Kern's Mill" or "Kernsport," as it was then called.

However, a short time afterward, slate was

VIEW OF LEHIGH GAP.

But, in 1828, before the latter explorations, a party of gentlemen from Baltimore, Md., had opened a quarry in Whitehall township, west of Laury's Station, about ten miles from the Lehigh Water-Gap; and in 1831, some of these gentlemen, accompanied by Robert McDowell, had discovered slate material on the farm of John Benninger, near the Lehigh Water-Gap, but the quarry was abandoned after having been worked for several years because a better quality came to be discovered elsewhere in that vicinity.

It appears that William Roberts and Nelson Labar in 1844 while journeying a-foot from Easton toward Mauch Chunk, on the old stage route along the Lehigh river, noticed at one of their resting-places (which was opposite the present site of Slatington) some pieces of stone leaning against the barn of Peter Heimbach, and they recognized a close resemblance to the mer-discovered there by Owen Jones on the property of Jonas Kern. He and William Roberts then secured a lease for fifteen years and opened a quarry in the hill-side east of the road leading to Welshtown which came to be known as the "Tunnel Quarry."

This first written lease was as follows:

"Articles of agreement made and concluded upon this thirtieth day of August, 1845, between Jonas Kern, of the township of Heidelberg, in the county of Lehigh, state of Pennsylvania, and Owen Jones and William Roberts of the same place,—Term of 15 years, for the 'making a quarry of slate-stone to make slate shingles,' to 'pay to the said Jonas Kern, Miller, twenty-eight cents for each and every ton of slate shingles.' Jonas Kern to have the right to have as many of the large slate that could not be used for shingles. . . . 'And further, the aforesaid parties agree that if the said Jonas Kern, Miller, has a mind to begin to quarry himself, he can't take nobody to him as a partner excepting Owen Jones or William Roberts; therefore nobody has no Right to Commence to make a quarey on the aforesaid lands but Owen Jones and William Roberts or Jonas Kern, Miller, himself, with the aforesaid Owen Jones and William Roberts.'

(Signed)

"Jonas Kern.

"Owen Jones.

"William Roberts.

"Witness at signing,
"George Rex."

The efforts mentioned led to the execution of a second lease in 1847 on other land of Mr. Kern by several enterprising men, Robert McDowell, John Williams, Samuel Taylor and James M. Porter, who formed a partnership under the name of McDowell & Company for the purpose of quarrying slate, besides conducting a general store; and they developed what came to be known as the Douglass and Washington quarries. Thomas Craig afterward united with this partnership, and their efforts proving successful they purchased the property.

The mercantile business of the firm mentioned was carried on for several years until 1851 in the William Kern building on Main Street, at Diamond, which had been enlarged by Jonas Kern for that purpose; then they started another store in upper Slatington, on the northwest corner of Main and Dowell streets. (This Dowell street was named after Robert McDowell.) Jonas Kern conducted a store in the enlarged building of 1847 for ten years and his son, Benjamin, for upwards of thirty years, (the latter having erected the American Hotel opposite in 1869.)

Owen Jones having established his business interests here, went to Wales and brought his family. He followed slate operations at Slatington for many years; then removed to Danielsville, in Northampton county, three miles north-east of Slatington, where he was accidentally killed by the fall of a derrick. He had started the first school-slate factory in 1847 with Mr. Roberts. Mr. McDowell, who became interested with them, was one of the leading slate operators and dealers; also a prominent merchant as well as one of the most influential citizens in the development of the town.

Incorporation.—A petition was presented to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county at April Term, 1864, praying for the incorporation of the town of Slatington into a borough, the boundary lines to be as follows:

"Beginning at a white-oak tree on the west bank of the Lehigh River, 48 perches south of the L. V. R. R. bridge across Trout Creek, thence through lands of D. & E. Remaly, Jacob Remaly, R. McDowell and D. D. Jones, S. 75° W, 240 perches to a stone; thence through lands of said McDowell, Jones, John Remaly, Lehigh Slate Co. and Thomas Kern, N. 13° W. 130 perches to a stone; thence through lands of Henry Kuntz, Benjamin Kern, Elias Kern, Williams and Hall, N. 77° E, 268 perches to the east bank of the Lehigh River; thence down the River 132 perches to the place of beginning."

The necessary proceedings were instituted and a decree of incorporation was made Sept. 7, 1864. The first election was held at the public house of Charles Peters (now Neff House) in November, when the following officials were elected:

Burgess, Robert McDowell.

Council, Henry Kuntz, Charles Peters, Jonas Hoffman, Henry Handwerk, Abraham Person.

The early meetings of town council were held in the office of the Lehigh Slate Company, and afterward in the Morey Building and Armory Hall until a town-hall was established at the southwest corner of Third and Church streets, in 1889. One of the first subjects to receive its consideration was "the little corner-house" on Main street and Center alley for a "lock-up," and the employment of Henry Handwerk to fit it up for that purpose.

The first building in upper Slatington was a two-story stone dwelling erected by John Remaly in 1849, and connected with his large farm. It is still standing on the west side of Main street beyond South.

The borough was surveyed by A. J. Haudman during the winter of 1865-66 for the purpose of establishing the lines and grades of the streets, and a map which he prepared was approved in March, 1866.

The upper town had been regularly laid out in 1851 by Daniel D. Jones and Robert McDowell and lots had been sold by them. Then there were only several buildings in the place; by 1860 the population had increased to 500, and by 1869 to 2,000.

Mr. Jones erected the second house in the upper section on the northwest corner of Main and Dowell streets, and suggested the name which it bears. He became the first postmaster in 1851, and the third burgess in 1867; and the third house was the two-story brick building opposite, next to the Slatington National Bank, occupied by the Carbon Slate Company.

The first store in Upper Slatington was started by McDowell and Company in 1851, in the Jones building and here they had their slate office.

The persons of the town who are generally recognized as most prominent in its foundation and rapid development were:

	Robert McDowell.
David McKenna.	D. D. Roper.
Henry Kuntz.	Samuel Caskie.

Borough Map.—In 1904, George T. Op-linger (the town surveyor for fourteen years), prepared a superior and comprehensive map of the borough which included all the particulars of the place worthy of mention.

The boundary lines show the following courses and distances: S. 77° W. 6,000 feet; N. 13° W. 3,800 feet; N. 77° E. 4,030 feet; N. 13° W. 500 feet; N. 77° E. 2,000 feet; thence along the west bank of the Lehigh river, 4,409 feet; and enclose an area of nearly 540 acres. These extended the limits of the borough, and were established according to the ordinance of June 18, 1890.

The borough was divided into three wards in 1904, as follows:

First Ward.—All the territory north and west of Franklin street, Fairview Avenue and Trout creek.

Second Ward.—All south of Franklin street.

Third Ward.—All east of Trout creek and Fairview avenue.

The borough is divided naturally into three sections: one, north of Trout creek; another, east of Fairview avenue; and the third, south of Trout creek.

The Williams Island lies in the western portion of the river at the foot of Main street. It is a narrow strip of land, about 1,000 feet long, almost entirely included within the borough limits. It is owned by the David Williams estate.

The elevation of the borough at the L. V. R. R. station above sea level is 365.7 feet; from there to Trout creek, about 1,000 feet; the incline is gradual, but thence to the southern limit it is rather steep, reaching an elevation of 600 feet.

The first (Remaly) reservoir, 20 by 40 feet, is located in the 2nd ward, on Main street, near the southern limit. The tract contains 1 acre, 157 perches.

WATER-WORKS.

Remaly Springs.—John and George Remaly owned a farm which lay to the south of the town of Slatington, and on it there was a strong spring of water. In 1853 they laid wooden pipes from this spring to the town and supplied several families with water until 1859, when they leased the system to Moses Kuntz for five years at an annual rental of $85, to facilitate collection of rents. In 1861, Daniel D. Jones bought the farm, and shortly afterward, Kuntz surrendered his lease. Jones then transferred the reservoir together with the pipes laid and the privileges secured to the Slatington Water Company.

About 1870 the Water Company secured the right to take water from the spring of Paul Kern about three-quarters of a mile on the hill to the southwest and laid an iron pipe line around the knoll to the small reservoir on Main street in order to increase the supply of water.

Dorward Springs.—The water-supply from the Remaly and Kern springs becoming too small and unreliable for the rapidly increasing borough a number of public-spirited citizens, including David D. Roper, David McKenna, John D. Emack, Samuel Caskie, David Williams, Robert H. Dolby, and Lewis C. Smith, purchased from Phaon Dorward, a tract of hill-land in Washington township, along the Welshtown road about one mile and a half northwest from Slatington, containing about 23 acres on which there was a large supply of superior spring water, and this they granted and sold to the borough with the express stipulation that it should forever be used as a supply for its inhabitants and for domestic purposes, otherwise it should revert to the grantors, the proposition having first been approved at a public election. This was in 1883, and immediate steps were taken to impound the water and convey it by gravity in pipe-lines to the borough, by means of a public loan. Two large reservoirs were constructed with cement interior (one then and the other in 1891), and placed under cover, one having a capacity of 240,000 gallons and the other of 260,000 gallons; and two iron mains were laid along the Welshtown road to the borough, one from each reservoir. Since then this source has afforded an abundant supply of the best water; and the Remaly and Kern supply was discontinued. The elevation is nearly fifty feet higher than the Remaly supply was.

In 1880, Oscar Neff and his father, Edward B. Neff, obtained control of the Slatington Water Company, a private corporation, and they continued to supply the town from the springs mentioned until the fall of 1883, when they sold the plant established with all rights and privileges to the borough.

Two public places were established for the convenience of the people and passing teams, one at the Remaly House (now Neff House), and the other at the southwest corner of Main and Dowell streets, until about 1883, when they were discontinued.

Public Lighting.—The lighting of the streets was done by means of kerosene lamps located by the borough authorities, at all the prominent points of the town and these were maintained until the substitution of electric light.

In 1886, Frederick Horlacher erected a steam power plant on Dowell street, west of Main, to supply the community with light and power and set up the necessary poles and wires for this purpose. He furnished the light for two years; then joined Joel Neff, Frederick Welz, Eldred D. Peters, and others in organizing the Citizens' Electric, Light, Heat, and Power Company, and conveyed the plant to this company which operated it for two years when it was removed to Walnutport along the canal to reduce the cost of production by securing waterpower from the canal. After conducting the plant there for ten distance north of Main street, with a gasometer holding 25,000 feet, and mains were laid throughout the town covering altogether two miles; and it has been in operation until the present time. Joseph Richards has been the treasurer from the beginning. The patrons number 300.

Bridges.—There are three iron bridges in the borough which span Trout creek, two being county bridges. One is on Main street, east of 2d. It was first reported to the Court in 1814 by viewers with a favorable recommendation, but it was not built until 1826. It was constructed of stone, and continued in use until 1869 when an iron bridge was put there in its place to carry heavier burdens than had theretofore been taken over it; but this, too, had to be years it was leased to the Slatington Electric Company which was controlled by Hugh Crilly, who had constructed the trolley line from Allentown to Slatington, and the last-named company supplied the light until 1906; then the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, having purchased the trolley line, also became the owner of the light company, and since then, under contract with the borough, has supplied the town. The large arc lights were introduced at the street intersections in 1902.

VIEW OF LOWER MAIN STREET.

Gas.—The Slatington Gas Company was started in 1904, as an incorporated body with a capital of $35,000, by Joseph Richards, Robert G. Pierce, and James L. Foote, of the borough, and a number of interested parties at Allentown. A plant was erected along Trout creek a short removed in 1901 because the violent puffing of smoking engines passing to and fro underneath caused the beams to show signs of weakness and decay, and a more imposing structure was substituted. The parts of the removed bridge were conveyed by teams thirteen miles to a point on the Ontelaunee creek near the Berks county line and used in the construction of a new bridge on the public road from New Tripoli to Kempton. This bridge in Slatington is about 300 feet long, with an elevation of 30 feet above the creek.

The second was erected in 1898 on Walnut street and is also about 300 feet long.

The third is a small structure spanning the narrow ravine near the outlet of the creek into the river. It was erected by the borough.

In 1854, a bridge was constructed across the Lehigh river to connect Slatington and Walnutport and facilitate travel and traffic from Lehigh county into Northampton county and vice versa by way of these two towns. It was a covered wooden structure erected by the Slatington Bridge Co., a stock company, and toll was charged until 1893 when it was purchased by the joint action of the two counties. In 1911 a new iron bridge was erected in its place.

Railroads.—The first railroad communication was secured in 1856 by the construction of the Lehigh Valley R. R. along the western bank of the Lehigh river, and the next was by the construction of the Central Railroad of New Jersey along the eastern bank through Walnutport, which is on the opposite side.

The third railroad was constructed in 1870 by the Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. as a branch to Slatedale along Trout creek for the purpose of reaching several slate operations and transporting roofing slate, slate slabs, etc., to its main line. This improvement was secured at the solicitation of the slate operators.

In 1874 the Berks County R. R. was constructed from Reading to the Western terminus of the Branch Railroad mentioned; which opened direct travel and traffic from Slatington to Wilmington by way of Reading. The name of this railroad was subsequently changed to Schuylkill and Lehigh, and became the property of the Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co.

In 1900 a trolley line was constructed from Allentown by way of Schnecksville to Slatington by Hugh Crilly, who transferred it to the Lehigh Valley Transit Co. in 1906; and since 1900 direct communication has been carried on between the places mentioned. It enters the borough on Main street and follows it from Kern's Grove to Railroad street at the L. V. R. R. station. A high-tension power plant, in a one-story brick building, was established in 1907 by the Transit Co. along the line at the southern extremity of the borough.

In 1911 the Lehigh & New England R. R. Co. extended a branch from Danielsville around Walnutport to the Lehigh Valley R. R., a short distance below Slatington, crossing the river on its own iron bridge and reaching the borough from the "Junction" on the L. V. R. R. track. It maintains a separate office but its trains arrive at and depart from the L. V. R. R. station. The local agent has been Alexander Everett.

Postoffice.—Previous to the year 1851 the nearest postoffice to Slatington was at "Craig's Store" in the Lehigh Gap, and there all its mail matters were delivered and received; but by that time its business interests had developed to such an extent that the department at Washington showed an inclination to establish an office for the accommodation of the people and the name "Waverly" was suggested. This name, however, was not allowed because an office under this name had already been established in Pennsylvania; thereupon the name Slatington was selected and approved.

At that time the mail passed this point on the railroad daily from Philadelphia to Mauch Chunk, arriving at 10 o'clock p. m. and departing at 2 o'clock the next morning on its way returning to Philadelphia. The total receipts for the first year were less than $50 and half was paid to the postmaster for his services. The receipts had increased so much within thirty years that the office became a presidential appointment.

The following incumbents served the office:

D. D. Jones, 1851-52.
Robert McDowell, 1852-61.
Moses Kuntz, 1861-69.
Dr. H. O. Wilson, 1869-79.
L. C. Smith, 1879-85.
David Lutz, 1885-89; 1897-1903.
John R. Roberts, 1889-93.
Albert Bachman, 1893-97.
Wallace W. Morgan, 1903-07.
Samuel J. Evans, 1907-14.

In 1910, upon the town council having established a system of numbering the houses, the P. O. department introduced the free delivery of mail throughout the borough with three carriers and twenty-three boxes.

On July 31, 1911 the Postal Savings Bank was opened in the Slatington office.

Since 1903 the postoffice has been located in the Berlin building, on Main street, at the angle.

Newspapers.—The history of the newspapers of Slatington will be found in the chapter on newspapers which embraces all the newspapers and publications of Lehigh county. Those in the borough are Slatington News, Slatington Herald, The Slatington Star.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Slatington, No. 1.—The subject of protecting the community against fire did not receive any serious, practical consideration until the Slatington Hose Co., No. 1, was instituted Aug. 5, 1885, and then a carriage and hose were supplied; and in 1890 a steamer and hook and ladder truck. Its apparatus is located in the town hall, and there the company holds its meetings. Its membership is 130.

Vigilant, No. 2, was instituted Oct. 19, 1903, with a combination wagon, including hose and a chemical engine. The town council has supplied a small building for its fire equipment on Main street in lower Slatington. The membership is 65.

Spring-side, No. 3, was instituted May 28, 1909, and is located on Main street, in upper Slatington, near Washington street. Its membership is 45. It has not as yet secured an apparatus or building.

Fire Chiefs.—The chiefs of the Slatington Fire Department have been:

John H. Lloyd.
Charles W. Yenser.
Charles L. Berkemeyer.

Evans W. Evans.
William Paules.

Fireman Fountain.—An attractive iron fountain, 12 feet high, was erected by Slatington Hose Co., No. 1, in 1910, at the angle of Main street in front of the postoffice. It represents the figure of a fireman with a lantern suspended from his right hand and a little child resting confidently on his left arm, which together symbolize in a most expressive manner vigilance and humanity, two prominent characteristics of their protective association.

The figure is on a pedestal with projecting basins for running water for man and beast. The globe of the lantern is red glass which encloses an electric bulb; and this is lighted every night throughout the year, and in the darkness it hangs there as a beacon of assurance to the community. Many persons and beasts are refreshed at the fountain daily. It was dedicated on the 23d of April with appropriate public ceremonies, consisting of a parade, music and speeches which proved very interesting to the entire community and showed the high appreciation of this public gift by the vounteer firemen of the borough.

Banks.—The Dime Savings Bank was organized Sept. 9, 1868, by the following citizens of Slatington, who constituted the first board of directors:

Daniel D. Jones.
Henry Williams.
Robert McDowell.
David Williams.
Lewis C. Smith.

Jacob Renninger
Abraham Gish.
Phillip Woodring.
John T. Kress.

Mr. Jones was elected president; Mr. McDowell, vice-president, and A. J. Schnackenberg-er, cashier. The company purchased the Carr property (where the National Bank of Slatington is now located), fitted it up for banking purposes and embarked in business Jan. 11, 1869. It was in active operation for nearly five years and then suspended on account of a panic.

National Bank of Slatington.—The history of this bank is identified with the history of some of the enterprising and progressive business men who have been foremost in the development of the natural resources of the Lehigh Valley which has come to be one of the richest and greatest wealth-creating valleys of the world. It was organized on May 22, 1875, with the following persons who constituted the first Board of Directors:

Robert McDowell.
Valentine Weaver.
Dr. Henry H. Riegel.
Col. John Craig.
Hon. David D. Roper.
Samuel J. Kistler.

William Andrews.
Thomas Kern.
John Balliet.
John Henry.
Peter Gross.
Dr. J. F. Miller.

The last named, Peter Gross, of Schnecksville, was elected as president, and William H. Gish (a business accountant and bank official of large experience and acquaintanceship in the community for many miles) as cashier.

The charter was dated Aug. 11, 1875, and the bank started with a paid up capital specified at $50,000, and an authorized capital at $100,000, on its present site, Main street, on August 31st, following, with Abraham Gish (father of the cashier), as its first depositor; and by January 1st following its total resources amounted to $140,000.

The building of the Dime Savings Fund was purchased in the spring of 1876, and remodeled with the necessary improvements, including a fire-proof vault.

Mr. Gross, the president, after serving nearly twenty years, was succeeded on Jan. 16, 1895, by Eldred D. Peters, a merchant of Slatington, who officiated until July 24, 1906; then Thomas Kern, of Slatington, became president and he has filled the position until now.

The officers and directors of the bank for 1913 were as follows:

I. W. Griffith, president. Wm. H. Gish, cashier.

Directors.

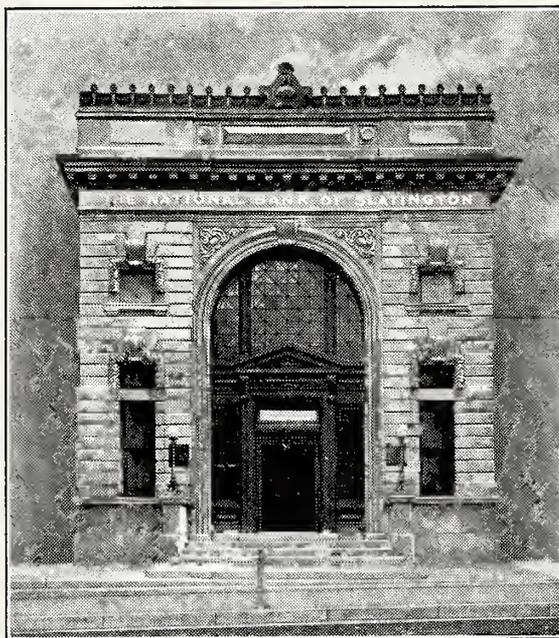

Thomas Kern.	Granville Hahn.
Dr. H. H. Riegel.	Hector Tinsdale Craig.
Idwal W. Griffith.	James S. Peters.
Wm. H. Gish.	Dr. A. J. Kern.

Its exhibit of Aug. 14, 1913, was as follows:

Capital,	$ 50,000
Resources,	860,854
Loans, etc.,	680,371
Deposits,	645,908
Surplus, etc.,	90,151
Due from Agents, etc.,	89,094
Real Estate,	33,685

In 1902 the bank erected a superior building of gray stone, classic in style and equipped it with a Herring & Hall triple-plate steel vault, with all the modern appurtenances for protection and convenience.

HOTELS.—The hotels established at Slatington were the following:

NATIONAL BANK OF SLATINGTON.

The exhibit of Aug. 14, 1913, was as follows:

Capital,	$100,000
Resources,	932,256
Loans, etc.,	723,721
Deposits,	615,209
Surplus, etc.,	105,720
Due from Agents, etc.,	104,252
Real Estate,	49,023

Citizen's National Bank was opened Feb. 1, 1902, with a capital of $50,000. It erected a substantial three-story brick business block on the northwest corner of 2nd and Main streets, and selected the large corner room on the first floor for banking purposes which was equipped with the latest improvements; the other rooms were set apart for stores and offices; and the third floor for a Masonic hall. The officers and directors are:

President, S. B. Costenbader.	R. G. Pierce.
Vice-President, Wilson Rex.	Thomas Zellner.
Cashier, H. H. Misson.	L. E. Williams.
A. L. Rice.	C. C. Marsh.
	Chas. Meendson.

Kern House stood on the north side of Main street, several hundred feet east of the Trout creek bridge. It was carried on from 1824 to 1840 but then discontinued for want of proper patronage. The building is still standing, being two-story stone, with cut-stones on the front. The first floor was elevated several feet above the road. The top of the main door was a semi-circle but this was walled up and the door-way transferred some feet to the west. The old door-way, with its artistic arch and red key-stone is still visible.

Jonas Kern House was on the same side of Main street, nearer the bridge mentioned. The old stone house was enlarged by the addition of 40 feet on the east, built of brick, the same height, with the roof and covered porch extended. The old part was used as a tavern and the new part as a general store. The proprietors for twenty years were Henry Kuntz, Dennis Hunsicker, Edward Raeber, and Jesse Miller.

Remaly (Neff) House was erected by John Remaly in 1850 on the southwest corner of Main and Church streets, and he secured a license in 1851, the first for a public house in upper Slat-ington, and this first license is in the possession of Mr. Remaly's daughter, Mrs. George F. Op-linger. The license cost was $10.00, and the fees $1.75. It became the property of Edward B. Neff in 1869, and since then has been known as the Neff House.

The other hotels were established as follows:

Railroad (Bittner) House, 1851.

Eagle Hotel, 1856.

United States (Arlington), 1865.

American House, 1869.

Mansion House, 1870.

Sun Inn, 1870, 1902.

Broadway House, 1878.

Herman House, 1889.

Hallow-E'en.—For many years until 1908, a number of persons, mostly young and thoughtless men, got together on Hallow-e'en in the town and by a bad, if not malicious impulse tore down and carried away signs, gates, porches and fences, derailed small trucks at slate operations and pushed them into the quarries, detached guy ropes and upset slate-splitters' shanties, thereby causing much damage and great inconvenience; and they also paraded the streets in a manner that was more or less uncivil.

But in 1908 all this was suddenly changed by the simple suggestion of a public parade in which merriment, nonsense and masquerading should prevail, and prizes of small amounts should be awarded to certain best subjects by disinterested judges; since then parades have been held annually with the most gratifying results and not a single instance of malicious mischief.

The last parade of 1913 was very successful in every respect and reflected great credit upon the different persons who had the matters in charge. It would seem that each succeeding year was more attractive and amusing than its predecessor, both as to the numbers and musical features in the several divisions of the parade and the laughable characters, performance and masquerade of the participants.

The children predominated, which showed their great interest in the celebration of a custom that has been handed down for centuries; and their parents encouraged them.

Many strangers from the surrounding towns and country districts witnessed the parade, having come by trolley, teams and automobile.

TOWN OFFICIALS.—The following persons served as burress and councilmen:

BURGESSES.

Robert McDowell, 1864, '70, '71.
 Dr. Alfred P. Steckel, 1865, '66.
 Daniel D. Jones, 1867, '68, '72, 73.
 William Morgan, 1869.
 Thomas Kern, 1874.
 David Williams, 1875, '76, '78, '79.
 Benjamin Kern, 1877.
 Samuel Caskie, 1880, '82, '84.
 Joel Neff, 1881, '83.
 Alexander Jacobs, 1885.
 Frank J. Stettler, 1886, '87.
 John Wert, 1888.
 B. Frank Peters, 1889.
 Frank Jacobs, 1890.
 Eldred D. Peters, 1891.
 Henry Kuntz, 1892.
 Dr. Luther Campbell, 1893.
 Samuel Schneck, 1894, '95, '96, 1903, '05.
 Solomon DeLong, 1897, '99.
 Joseph Richards, 1900, '02.
 Charles W. Yanser, 1906, '08.
 John S. Mack, 1909, '13.

COUNCILMEN.

Henry Kuntz, 1864.
 Charles Peter, 1864.
 Jonal Hoffman, 1864.
 Henry Handwerk, 1864.
 Abraham Pearson, 1864.
 Daniel R. Williams, 1865.
 Jesse La Bar, 1865, '72, '73, '82, '84.
 John Handwerk, 1865.
 Benjamin Kern, 1865, '66, '70, '71, '72, '76.
 William Morgan, 1865, '66, '74, '75, '82, '83, '84, '85, '86.
 William R. Williams, 1866, '67.
 Evan Williams, 1866.
 Aaron Peter, 1866, '67, '68, '79.
 G. H. Scholl, 1867, '68.
 Wm. H. Kress, 1867, '68.
 A. Berkemeyer, 1867, '68, '69, '70, '71.
 Hugh L. Davis, 1868, '76, '77, '78.
 J. F. Kress, 1869, '70, '71, '72.
 Jonas Hoffman, 1869, '73, '76, '77, '79, '81.
 Abel Heilman, 1869.
 J. Charles Mack, 1869, '74, '75, '76, '78, '80, '81.
 David Ross, 1870, '71.
 J. L. Schrieber, 1870, '71.
 Thomas Kern, 1872, '76, '77, '83, '84, '85, '96.
 James Anthony, 1872.
 Duane Neff, 1872, '74.
 Owen E. Mank, 1873.
 Griffith Ellis, 1873, '77, '94.
 Willaby Kern, 1873.
 Allen Zander, 1873.
 Joel Neff, 1874, '77, '78, '79, '80, '93.
 Samuel A. Santee, 1874, '75.
 S. H. Schneck, 1874.
 John T. Robuts, 1875.
 W. H. Houser, 1875, '76, '78.
 E. B. Neff, 1875, '79, '81.
 D. F. Snyder, 1877.
 Dr. J. F. Miller, 1878.
 Fred Welz, 1878.
 William Ruch, 1879.
 D. D. Jones, 1879, '80, '81.
 L. Campbell, 1880, '81, '89, '90, '91.
 Ed. Rauch, 1880.
 David Lutz, 1880.
 Hyman Peters, 1881.

J. F. Hunsicker, 1882.
 John Balliet, 1882.
 Evan Williams, 1882, '83.
 E. D. Peters, 1882, '87, '88, '89.
 John G. Dairs, 1883.
 Walter B. Grosh, 1883.
 Phaon A. Lemmel, 1883, '84.
 Charles L. Berkemeyer, 1884, '85, '86.
 Robt. H. Dalby, 1884, '85.
 John Kennel, 1885, '86.
 Wm. Peters, 1885, '86, '87.
 Wm. N. Evans, 1886.
 George McDowell, 1886, '87, '88, '89, '90, '91, '96.
 Frederick Horlacher, 1887, '88, '89, '09, '10.
 L. Williams, 1887, '88.
 Thomas S. Schiffert, 1887, '88, '89, '90.
 William N. Williams, 1887.
 E. B. Neff, 1888, '89, '90.
 John F. Berkemeyer, 1890, '91, '92.
 Griffith R. Davis, 1890, '91, '92.
 Wm. A. Fritzinger, 1891, '92.
 Rudolph W. Mosteller, 1891, '92.
 Elias German, 1892.
 Wm. J. Evans, 1892.
 John W. Balliet, 1893.
 Oscar A. Neff, 1894.
 Robert G. Davis, 1895.
 Morris W. Keck, 1895.
 Amandus P. Neff, 1896.
 John H. Zellner, 1896.
 Wm. O. Owens, 1896.
 S. D. Behler, 1896.
 A. A. Kern, 1896.
 S. J. Evans, 1897.
 F. M. Ringer, 1897.
 Henry Bittner, 1898.
 Henry Boyer, 1898.
 W. W. Morgan, 1899.
 Thomas Zellner, 1899.
 Ellis Owens, 1899.
 Edwin Osler, 1900.
 A. J. Thomas, 1900.
 Wm. E. Roberts, 1901.
 Samuel Steckel, 1901.
 Solomon DeLong, 1902.
 Richard H. Scholl, 1902.
 John A. Paules, 1902.
 Richard A. Krause, 1903.
 Fred P. Steckel, 1903.
 John M. Yeager, 1904.
 Llewellyn Williams, 1904.
 Wm. H. Paules, 1905, '08, '10.
 H. W. Maxwell, 1905.
 R. G. Pierce, 1905.
 R. W. Griffith, 1906.
 John F. Miller, 1906.
 R. J. Hutchison, 1906, '08, '10.
 Ellis Owens, Jr., 1907.
 C. H. Hodges, 1907.
 M. D. Holben, 1907.
 Henry Maxwell, 1908.
 R. B. Yale, 1908, '10.
 Chas. D. Peters, 1909, '10, '12.
 Albert J. Eberwine, 1909, '10, '12.
 Ervin W. Jones, 1910, '12.
 Richard R. Owens, 1910, '12.
 H. J. Bachman, 1910, '12.
 A. P. Berlin, 1912.
 James Owen, 1912.
 A. E. Leibfried, 1912.

SECRETARIES.

Charles Peter, 1864, '65.	Charles L. Berkemeyer, 1885, '86.
Wm. Morgan, 1865, '67.	George McDowell, 1886, '92.
G. H. Scholl, 1867, '69.	John F. Berkemeyer, 1892, '93.
J. F. Kress, 1869, '70.	R. W. Mosteller, 1893, '94.
A. M. Miller, 1870, '70.	Elias German, 1894, '95.
J. F. Kress, 1870, '73.	John W. Balliet, 1895, '96.
O. E. Mank, 1873, '74.	E. D. Peters, 1882, '83.
S. A. Santee, 1874, '76.	W. B. Grosh, 1883.
W. H. Hauser, 1876, '79.	M. J. Holben, 1883, '84.
D. D. Jones, 1879, '82.	Robert H. Dalby, 1884, '85.
E. D. Peters, 1882, '83.	Albert N. Kennel, 1907, '14.
W. B. Grosh, 1883.
M. J. Holben, 1883, '84.
Robert H. Dalby, 1884, '85.

Jackson W. Utt has been chief of police since the new regulation of 1891, also for some years previously.

Llewellyn C. Griffith has been the assessor of the borough for upwards of twenty years, and Elias Sauerwine the tax collector for upwards of twenty-five years.

HEALTH BOARD.—The health board was first created by the town council in 1864, but it was inactive until 1891, then new regulations were adopted for the different departments of the local government including that for health, and John W. Roberts (editor of Weekly Herald) has since been the secretary.

The commissioners have been:

Richard Hutchinson,	David Morris, 1891.
1891.	Michael Hickey, 1891.

The health officer:

Dr. David Williams, 1891.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following incumbents served the office of justice of the peace in the borough:

Lewis C. Smith, 1800, '81.	Wm. H. Sell, 1890-'95.
Frank J. Stettler, 1881.	Henry A. Schertzingler, 1895-'13.
Oscar A. Neff, 1882.	Samuel Steckel, 1913.
Arthur H. Miller, 1883, '88.
Robert H. Dalby, 1888-'90.
Henry Kuntz, 1866-'68.	Hiram I. Hankee, 1881-'91.
John F. Kress, 1868-'80.	Hiram W. Hankee, 1891-'14.
Isaac M. Cassel, 1880-'81.

PHYSICIANS.—The first physician who located at Slatington was Dr. O. H. Wilson. He came from Maryland in 1852 and made arrangements to attend the employees at the slate quarries whenever needed, each one to pay him fifty cents per month. After practicing for some years in this way Dr. A. P. Steckel migrated from Whitehall in 1864 and Dr. J. F. Miller from Easton also in 1864, who continued here in active practice for a number of years.

The physicians since then have been the following:

Stephen Ruch.	W. A. Levan, 1890.
Joseph Grosscup.	J. S. Mack, 1892, 1913.
Robert W. Young.	David Williams, 1889-
Malcolm J. Holben,	1908.
1876-1913.	R. W. Young, 1875-1910.
Nathan F. Hallman,	Charles Muschlitz, 1909-
1885-	1913.
Alvin J. Kern, 1888-1913.	Robert D. Morgan, 1908-
J. P. Brown.	1913.

DENTISTS.—The dentists have been:

Alexander Weaver, 1864-'74.
Luther Campbell, 1870-1914.
Walter Richards, 1898-1914.
F. W. Deibert, 1908-'13.

VETERINARIANS:

George.
Morris W. Keck, 1888-1913.

OPTICIANS:

George Warren, 1900-'03.
George Marstellar, 1903-'13.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

NAME.	Hall.	Instituted.	Members.
I. O. of O. F., Lodge No. 624.	Detmar, .	May 12, 1868,	175
Encampment, No. 231, . . .	Detmar, .	Sept. 12, 1872,	29
P. O. S. of A., Camp No. 119,	Behler, .	June 21, 1869,	253
F. and A. M., Lodge No. 440,	Bank, . . .	July 10, 1869,	124
Knights of Pythias, No. 92,	Fritzinger,	Apr. 27, 1871,	190
G. A. R., Farragut Post
No. 214,		1870-1878,
G. A. R., Samuel Krebs
Post No. 284,	Behler, .	Aug. 1882,	17
Sons of Veterans,	Behler, .	Aug. 1888,	95
Jr. O. U. A. M., Council
No. 68,	Behler, .	Mar. 6, 1886,	245
Knights of Golden Eagle,
Castle 206,	Fritzinger,	Oct. 5, 1887,	190
Knights of Friendship,
Chamber No. 6,	Fritzinger,	Feb. 24, 1890,	600
Knights of Malta, No. 92,	Seibert, .	July 8, 1891,	176
Modern Woodmen of America,	Detmar, .	July 5, 1900,	107
Foresters of America, . . .	Fritzinger,	Oct. 20, 1900,	175
Ladies of Golden Eagle, . .
Daughters of America, No.
17,	Behler, .	Nov. 23, 1898,	130
Ladies' Knight of Honor, . .	Behler, .
Slatington Band,	Band, . . .	1864; 88; '06,	25

Besides the halls mentioned, Lyceum Hall in the P. O. building, owned by A. P. Berlin, has been used since 1910 for dancing, basket-ball and amusements of various kinds.

Since 1881 the most prominent hall for public entertainments has been the armory, which was changed in 1892 to the Opera House.

G. A. R.—Farragut Post, No. 214, was organized July 1870 with sixty members. Its meetings were held until 1878 when it was disbanded. The commanders were:

Clement C. White,	Owen E. Mack,
A. M. Miller,	William D. Kare.

Samuel Kress Post, No. 284, was organized Sept., 1882, with twenty members and A. M. Miller as post commander.

In 1913 there were seventeen survivors, the following six residing at Slatington:

Thos. Ackerson,	John Nonamaker.
Elias Andrews.	Saml. H. Schneck.
Eli German.	Henry Wise.

Samuel H. Kress, of New York City, erected, under the auspices of this post, a superior granite monument in the Union Cemetery to the memory of his nephew, Samuel Kress, after whom the post was named; which was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on Decoration Day, 1909. The names of 129 members enrolled are inscribed on three of its sides, of whom 72 have died.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—Building and loan associations have been carried on at Slatington since 1864, and in the past forty years a number of them have been matured to assist working people in securing homes, which generally required about ten years. Since 1890 the standard societies have run in six series, the first, second and third having matured, and the fourth, fifth and sixth being now kept up by a regular system of premiums, interest and dues. Wm. Martin Sell has been most actively identified with them since 1887.

Motor Club.—The Slatington Motor Club was organized on Jan. 25, 1911. Its membership has increased to 50. In October, 1913, there were 90 automobiles in the borough.

MILITARY COMPANY.—In 1875 Capt. David G. Rhoads forwarded a petition, with 70 signers, to the Adj. General of Pennsylvania requesting permission to organize a military company at Slatington and enter the National Guard of Pennsylvania. The petition was received with a favorable recommendation and the company was given a temporary organization at a meeting in the town hall on July 17, 1875, with Rhoads as its captain, O. E. Mank as 1st Lt., and George McDowell as 2d Lt. Weekly drills were held to prepare for the Fall inspection, and on Aug. 9, 1875 it was mustered into service for five years under the name of Slatington Rifles, Co. H, 4th Reg't, N. G. P. After the mustering ceremony, the company was paraded through the town and its appearance highly complimented. On Sept. 4th, the ladies of the borough presented them with a handsome silk flag, and on Sept. 13th it accompanied the 2nd Division N. G. P. to Reading for inspection. From that time the company practiced weekly drills for the perfection of the members in the science and art of military tactics. The armory was situated on Church street, where the Opera House is now located.

The company participated in the Reading Riot of 1877, from July 23d to the 25th, where ten of the men were injured, and Capt. Rhoads was struck by a missile from one of the rioters which knocked off his cap and almost felled him to the ground but he nevertheless kept his command, moving forward through the "Cut" on 7th street from Walnut street to Penn, which was the centre of the great disturbance. They continued in service until August 11th, when they returned to Slatington and received a cordial welcome home.

Roll of Co. in Strike.

Capt. D. G. Rhoads.	Corp. John G. Davis.
1 Lt. O. E. Mank.	Corp. William Spielman.
2 Lt. George McDowell.	Corp. James Hunt.
1 Ser. Benjamin Patterson.	Corp. John Hawk.
2 Ser. James M. Kress.	Corp. H. A. Schertzinger.
3 Ser. Thomas J. Davis.	Corp. James Hall.
4 Ser. James A. Medlar.	Mus. James W. Scheirn.
5 Ser. N. H. Barthold.	Mus. B. Frank Maury.
Corp. Charles McLaughlin.	Mus. Frank Walp.
	Cook Jacob Remaly.
	Cook Alfred Seigfried.

Privates.

Stephen Balliet.	Henry McLaughlin.
Milton Bachman.	William Morgan.
Laurence Duggan.	William E. Mott.
Paul Dieter.	O. F. Mumbauer.
David Hutchinson.	Albert P. Peter.
Frank Hoffman.	Joseph Pfaff.
Benjamin F. Hunt.	B. W. Roth.
Moses Harberman.	Edwin Roth.
Jefferson Harberman.	Jefferson Schaffer.
Jesse Houssman.	A. J. Schanackenberg.
Elias H. Kern.	Edward Thomas.
L. F. Leisering.

Henry Helm, sub. for Joseph W. Munny.

Evan. Shankweiller, sub. for Corporal Parry.

Captain Rhoads, Lieutenant Mank and Private Mumbauer were wounded at the Reading strike; the first was wounded on the head; the second was cut in the right cheek; and the last had several of his toes mashed.

Encampment.—A successful encampment was held under the auspices of Company H from July 4th to the 8th, 1878, in a beautiful grove near the borough. Invitations were issued to a number of military dignitaries and companies of N. G. P., and the following acceptances were received:

Gen'l Frank Reeder and staff.

Col. T. H. Good and staff.

General ——— Bertolette.

Companies B, D, E, I and K, 4th Reg't.

Company H, 9th Reg't.

Lily Cadets of Mauch Chunk.

When the tents were pitched in the grove, the encampment was named "Camp Good" in honor of the popular commander of the 4th Regiment, and upon the arrival of the different organization they were escorted to their respective quarters. The regular routine of camp duties was carried out in a spirited manner, many visitors expressed their high appreciation of the superior conduct and military evolutions of the men, and the visiting dignitaries and companies were delighted with the cordial reception and hospitable entertainment of the community.

Homestead Riot of 1892.—Co. H, commanded by Capt. Frank Jacobs, participated in the Homestead Riot of 1882 in the western part of Pennsylvania. It was called out on July 10th and reached Homestead the next day at midnight. It remained there, performing guard duty in protecting the iron works until July 29th, when it was sent home.

Company Disbanded.—The company, with 62 men and a very creditable record, was disbanded on July 1, 1896.

Popularity of Company.—This company became a very popular organization, and for some years was invited to attend various public functions, the following being some of the more prominent:

Inauguration of Gov. Hoyt, January, 1879.

Reception, Gen. U. S. Grant, Dec. 6, 1879.

Inauguration, Pres. Garfield, March 4, 1881.

Philadelphia Bi-Centennial, Dec. 7, 1882.

During the Fall inspection and encampment, Co. H was allotted remarkable averages by the Adjutant General in his reports to the Governor, as will appear by the following:

Fairmount Park Aug. 7-12, 1880; average 98.6.

Wilkes-Barre, Aug. 23-29, 1881; average, 93.

Lewistown, Aug. 5-12, 1882; average, 100.

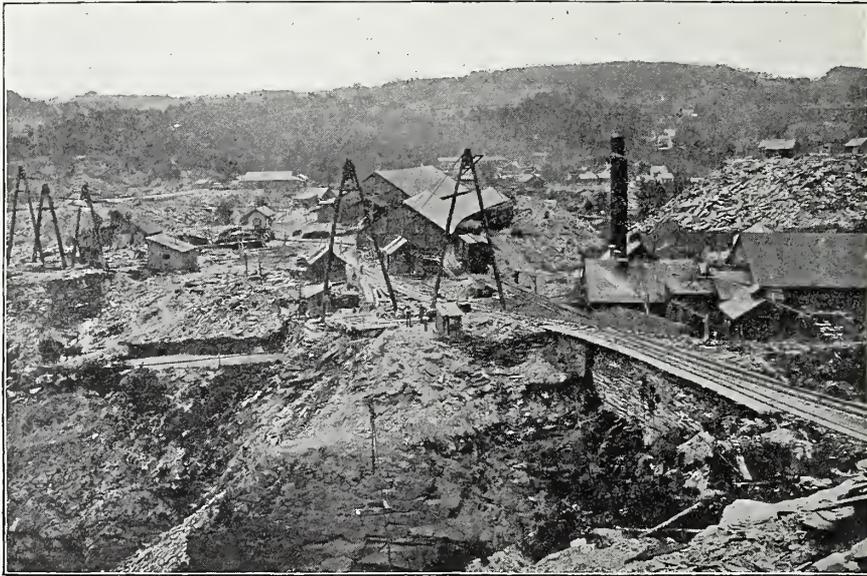

Armory.—When Co. H was organized, it occupied a room on the second floor of a three-story building, known as Town Hall, in Lower Slatington and there it assembled for awhile; then in another building some distance farther away which proved very inconvenient and eventually led to securing an armory for themselves on Church street east of Main. This was erected during the latter part of 1880 and dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on Feb. 22, 1881. The building was a one-story brick structure, 39 ft. front and 100 ft. deep, the front wall being 32 ft. high, built in parapet style which terminated in a dome at the top. The auditorium was 30 ft. wide, 65 ft. long and 20 ft. high, making it the largest and most desirable room in the borough for drilling exercises of the company and public entertainments. At the rear there was a stage 17 ft. wide by 18 ft. deep, with a dressing room on each side 9 by 7 ft. The auditorium was illuminated by night by a large and handsome chandelier, suspended from the center of the ceiling and by wall lamps placed at regular intervals on each side. The total cost, including fixtures, was $7,000. It was an ornament to the town and reflected much credit to the community. The company occupied this building until it became disbanded in 1896. During intervals the hall was rented for amusements and meetings of various kinds.

Samuel Marshall became the purchaser in 1892. He made a number of improvements, in-INDUSTRIES.—The following narrative relating to the industrial life of Slatington shows the varied nature of the mills, shops and factories of the borough. The tabulated statement of the slate operations indicates the great extent of the slate business and the large number of employees.

Slate Operations.—The slate quarries in the vicinity of Slatington are the following—those marked with a * are situated within the borough limits, all manufacture roofing slate, roduced a saloon and conducted the place for entertainments and amusements until his decease in 1901, when his sons succeeded him in its ownership, and since then it has been known as the Opera House.

SLATE QUARRY.

Captains.—The following captains commanded the company:

David G. Rhoads,	Hiram W. Hankee,
1877-78.	1885-90.
George McDowell,	Frank Jacobs,
1878-85.	1890-94.
	William H. Keener,
	1894-96.

Capt. Keener was a war veteran, having been a private in Co. G, 128th Regt. P. V. for nine months from Aug. 17, 1862, and also a private in Co. H, 209th Regt. P. V. from July 19, 1864, to June 6, 1865, when he was honorably discharged with the rank of sergeant.

He entered Co. H, 4th Regt., N. G. P. on Sept. 15, 1879; promoted to sergeant Feb. 4, 1881, to 2d Lt. July 14, 1885, to 1st Lt. July 23, 1887, and to captain April 23, 1894.

but those marked with a † also produce black-boards and structural slate with factories at the plants:

Name.	Started.	Employees.
Big Franklin,	1910	15-20
Blue Mountain,	1895	30-50
Blue Valley, †	1907	40-50
Blue Vein,	1909	30-50
Carbon, †	1888	40-100
Cambridge, * †	1895	40-50
Columbia,	1876	35-50
Ellis Owens,	1910	30-50
Ellis Owens Sons,	1910	30-50
Eureka,	1894	80-125
Fairview,	1890	25-35
Franklin,	1908	25-50
Hazel-Dell,	1890	25-50
Genuine Washington, †	1909	60-100
Manhattan, †	1903	60-100
Pennsylvania, *	1895	40-50
Provident, †	1890	60-100
M. J. Roberts & Co.,		20-50
Slatington, †	1852	100-120
Valley-Side, * †	1912	15-20
Washington, * †	1885	60-100
E. D. Peters & Sons,	1907	25-40

The following additional slate operations are carried on in the borough:

E. L. Krause and brother, school slates and black-boards (commonly known as the National School Slate Co.).

Rudolph School Slate Works.

J. F. Unger Slate Co., structural slate.

Bachman Brothers, black-boards.

Thomas Zellner, black-boards.

Elmer F. Snyder, sink-tops.

Besides the plants mentioned, the following parties are dealers in slate materials of all kinds:

Slatington-Bangor Slate Syndicate.

International Slate Co.

Griffith Brothers Slate Co., Ltd.

J. K. Hower.

Henry N. Sieger & Son.

O. A. Miller Slate Co.

Mantels — Black-boards.—The first slate factory at Slatington was put up in 1852 by Jones & Co., on the south side of Trout creek, opposite the present works of the Bachman Bros., on Factory street where the first mantels were made and finished and the business was carried on for seven years, then a new mantel factory was erected by the Lehigh Slate Co. on the south side of the creek (Bachman Works) and the machinery of the first factory was removed to it, and some of the largest slate machinery was brought from Vermont and introduced, then the business was carried on in the new factory in the manufacture of black-boards, slate slabs, sink-tops, etc., and it was continued until 1900, the last 12 years by Waltes Bachman. From 1902 to 1906 it was operated by the Pennsylvania National Slate Black-board Co., Howard Daum, proprietor. After lying idle for 5 years it became the property of John N. and Morris L. Bachman (sons of Waltes Bachman), who have since traded under the name of Pennsylvania Black-board Co., mostly engaged in the manufacture of black-boards, their sister, Mrs. Howard Daum being the owner of the real property.

Daum erected a stock-house to the east in 1901, but in 1903 it was rented to Elmer F. Snyder, who equipped it with machinery for making sink-tops and he has since been engaged in manufacturing them, with four hands employed.

John F. Unger started in 1883 manufacturing slate black-boards and structural work between the river and the L. V. R. R. at the outlet of Trout creek where he established a frame factory, and he carried it on successfully until his death in 1909, and since then his estate has conducted the business under the name J. F. Unger Co. The product is sent to all parts of the country; also to Canada and Porto Rico. The rough material is secured from local quarry operations.

Thomas Zellner engaged in the manufacture of slate black-boards in the western part of the borough in 1893, and after continuing there five years, he removed his plant to Welshtown, along the Trout creek, where he has carried on the business until the present time. He employs 15 hands.

School Slate Works.—In 1884, E. L. Krauss associated with Charles Nelson of New York, in establishing a plant at the western section of Slatington for the manufacture of school slate and black-boards and they carried on the business until 1892. The management was subsequently changed several times and carried on until 1907, when Mr. Krause and his brother, Arthur H., became the owners and they have since operated it in a successful manner. The plant covers two acres of ground, embraces eight one-story brick buildings and employs from 150 to 200 hands. It is commonly known as the National School Slate Co.

John H. Rudolph started manufacturing school slate in 1898 and gradually enlarged his plant in lower Slatington on the south side of Trout creek as his business increased until he died in 1910. He employed from 50 to 100 hands. Since then his estate has continued the business under the name of American School-Slate Works. The factory is a large and very attractive building, painted white.

Prospect Development Co. was first organized in 1905 as the Prospect Drilling and Development Co. by A. P. Berlin and R. J. Hongen for the purpose of core drilling to test slate and mining properties. Special machinery was invented by Mr. Berlin and the process was first applied here successfully which is recognized as the only reliable method of discovering a deposit without sinking a shaft or removing the earth at greater or less expense.

Grist-Mill.—Nicholas Kern, the first settler here in 1741, established a grist-mill along the east bank of the Trout creek, about 1742, and also a saw-mill adjoining it on the north. They were carried on together by him until his death in 1748, and afterward by his son, William, grandson John, and great-grandson Jonas, until 1850. The last named then rebuilt both but located the mill at the lower side of the bridge where it is now, and operated them until 1861, when he transferred them to his daughter, Violetta (married to Henry Kuntz). They were then rented to different parties until sold to Alfred J. Kern in 1881 (who had rented them since 1874), and he has continued operating them until now.

Carriage Works.—In 1857 Phaon A. Semmel established a large works in lower Slatington on the south side of Main street, at Factory street, for the manufacture of carriages, light and heavy wagons, and sleighs. He then purchased from George Kern a large stone barn (which had been built in 1820), and converted it into a general store and warehouse, and erected a large two-story frame building for manufacturing purposes, and here he carried on the business to a greater or less extent according to the demands of his trade until 1910. His son, Palmer A., then became his successor, and he has continued the business until the present time. He employs four hands.

The strong walls of the old building are still in good condition though nearly one hundred years old. This barn was used in connection with the building on the opposite side of Main street, a short distance to the west, which was occupied as a tavern from 1824 to 1840.

Planing Mill.—In 1870 John Balliet started a cabinet shop to the rear of the Eagle Hotel in lower Slatington for the manufacture of furniture in an old brewery building, but in two years his business had grown to such proportions that he was obliged to seek new quarters. He then established a plant on Railroad street and carried it on until he died in 1888, in this time having devoted his attention more especially to building materials, such as doors, windows, window frames, etc. Thomas Kern became the purchaser, and he has operated the plant in a successful manner until the present time, in connection with supplying all kinds of lumber to builders. Allen E. Leibfried has filled the position of foreman since 1888, having previously been in the employ of Balliet from 1873 to 1888, altogether 40 years in the same industry.

Rolling Mill.—The Slatington Rolling Mill Co. was organized in 1890 by Wm. P. Hopkins, of Catasauqua, who was assisted by a number of leading citizens of the borough for the manufacture of bar-iron and the plant was established on five acres of land situated on South Walnut street, alongside of the L. V. R. R. The company was organized with a capital of $100,000, and they employed 160 hands. It was operated for about 20 years when it was obliged to suspend because its product could not be put on the market in competition with steel products. The plant was then purchased by local capitalists who organized under the same name and have since carried on business there, giving employment to 100 hands. The president of the company is Edwin German, who is the principal stockholder.

Boiler Works.—Samuel J. Evans and — Marsden embarked in the business of general repairs to boilers, etc., in 1889, on Race street, and continued business until 1895 when the enterprise was enlarged to include a foundry and machine shop and a limited partnership was formed to trade under the name of Slatington Foundry, Machine and Boiler Works, Ltd., with Mr. Evans as president and general manager. Machinery and castings of all kinds are manufactured and the works employ from 20 to 25 hands.

Machine Shops.—The first machine shop for general repairs at Slatington was put up by Edward MacConachie on Factory street and carried on by him until 1891 when he was succeeded by Joseph Custard, who conducted the plant three years; then Peter Macconachie (son of Edward), became the proprietor and he has carried on the business successfully until the present time, devoting his time mostly to automobile repairs.

Claude Zellner started a general machine shop on Church street, west of 5th, in 1910, and has conducted it until now with two hands.

Bottling Works.—In 1876 Frederick Horlacher moved from Bauman's, in Carbon county, to Slatington and embarked in the bottling business and from that time for nearly forty years has been prominently identified with the establishment of various local enterprises and taken a practical interest in the government of the community. He bought the small works of ——— Woodring, on Dowell street, a short distance west of Main, and carried on the business for four years, but finding the quarters too small, he removed to lower Slatington, on Race street, near Walnut, at the rear of a large lot where he had built his residence, and there put up a large plant. He conducted this in a successful manner until April, 1913, when he transferred it to his son, John, and the son has carried it on until now.

Hosiery Mills.—In 1895 Thomas Zellner, Wm. A. Fritzinger, Robert F. Muschlitz and Frederick E. Wyle associated together for the purpose of manufacturing hosiery and have since carried on the business under the name of Slatington Knitting Co. It employs about 70 hands. It is located in a two-story frame building on Main street and Center alley. A dye-house was established in 1903 and since then operated in connection with the mill. Their production is disposed of through jobbers.

In 1900 Henry A. Muschlitz erected a large two-story frame building, north of Main street bridge along the Branch R. R. and equipped it with knitting machinery for the manufacture of hosiery, and he has since conducted the business with an average of 75 hands. It is called the "Crystal Knitting Mills."

Silk Mill.—In 1901 a silk mill was established on Race street by the Slatington Textile Mfg.

Co. for the manufacture of broad silks and, erected a large, three-story brick building. After conducting the business three years it was purchased by the Post & Sheldon Corporation, of Paterson, which has carried on the business until the present time. The plant was enlarged in 1904 and about 350 hands are given constant employment. This corporation has two similar plants at Allentown besides an extensive establishment at Paterson, and a similar plant is now being erected at Slatedale, three miles west of Slatington, where 250 hands will find employment.

Box Factory.—The Keystone Box Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1902 by Edward L. Krause, Wm. A. Fritzingler and Robert F. Muschlitz for the manufacture of lock-corner and lid-slide pencil boxes and also counter-trays and pyrographic boxes and established a plant in the western section of Slatington near Church street which has been carried on successfully until the present time. It employs 75 hands and has developed a large trade which extends throughout the country.

Saddlery.—Dennis Miller carried on a general saddler business at Slatington from 1865 to 1870; then Thomas F. Schiffert conducted a prosperous shop for forty years until his death, and his brother, George D., succeeded him who has continued it until now.

Bakery.—Lewis Best embarked in the baking business in lower Slatington about 1880, but he carried it on only two years when he was succeeded by William H. Mory and he conducted the business in a successful manner for thirteen years. Then different parties had the establishment for varying periods until 1912, when Edwin Bailey became the proprietor. He employs two bakers and has two delivery wagons.

Slaughter House.—About 1885 Amandus A. Kern and Thomas Zellner embarked in the slaughtering business on School Hill (the southern section of town), and carried it on five years when Mr. Zellner retired from the firm, then James Ringer became associated with Kern and they put up a plant at 4th and Franklin streets, which they conducted for several years.

In 1893 Mr. Kern established a large plant on Church street, between 5th and 6th, and he carried it on successfully until his death in 1909; since then the business has been continued in the name of his estate, including a meat-store on Main street, near the postoffice.

Ice.—Frederick Horlacher embarked in the ice business in 1888 by manufacturing it at his bottling works, and he continued it for two years when he was obliged to suspend further operations on account of the limited consumption and the high cost of production. He then secured the right to harvest ice on the Kern mill-dam where he erected a large frame storage house with a capacity of 3,200 tons, and supplied the citizens with natural ice for a period of twelve years. In 1902 he sold the ice plant and business to C. H. Hodges, who has conducted the business until the present time. In 1906 Hodges erected a dam and storehouse with a capacity of 3,000 tons at Emerald from which he has since supplied his customers.

In 1912 H. A. Beers, of Walnutport, started supplying ice at Slatington and he delivers a large quantity.

Garage.—There are two garages at Slatington for the accommodation of automobiles. The first was started in 1897 by Lewis F. Sauerwine, on Middle alley, to the rear of the Opera House, which he equipped with machinery for making all kinds of repairs and he carried this on in a very successful manner until the Fall of 1913 when he erected and equipped a much larger plant, two story brick building, 40 by 85, on the same alley farther south, at the rear of his residence to accommodate his increasing trade and the requirements of his patrons.

The other was established in 1909 by Frederick Horlacher, he having changed his bottling works for this purpose and equipped it with a machine shop which has been carried on since by Charles Snyder.

Peter Macconachie has a similar establishment on Factory street, in lower Slatington, which is devoted entirely to making repairs.

Concrete Blocks.—Daniel D. Olewine began to manufacture concrete blocks for building purposes about 1900, and in 1906 erected a plant in the western section of the borough which he has since carried on. In connection with the factory he deals in cement, sand, lime and plaster.

Cigars.—A number of persons have been engaged at Slatington in the manufacture of cigars, those worthy of mention being Jacob Hummel from 1864 to 1875, his son, Charles P., for upwards of twenty years, and John F. Miller from 1883 to the present time.

SLATINGTON IN 1913.

Town Hall,		Taxables,
Fire Companies, . .	3	Cemeteries,	2
Police,	3	Newspapers,	2
Water Works, . . .		Livery-Stables,	2
Gas Works,		Garages,	2
Bridges,	4	Hotels,	7
Banks,	2	Saloons,	13
Steam Railroads, .	4	Restaurants,	3
Street Railway, . .		Pool-rooms,	3
Car Barn,		Amusement Halls, . .	2
Churches,	11	Telephone Lines, . . .	2
School Buildings, .	3	Telegraph (W. U.), . .	1
Population,	3,000	Societies,	17

Halls,	7	Hardware,	6
Physicians,	7	Millinery,	6
Dentist,	2	Meat,	3
Optician,	1	5-10 Cent,	2
Veterinarian,	1	Dealers in slate, ..	4
Painters,		Industries:
Plumbers,	6	Box Factory, ...	1
Concrete Contrac-		Grist Mill,	1
tors,	2	Saw-Mill,	1
Tailors,	5	Slaughter-House,	1
Shoemakers,	6	Marble Works, .	2
Cigar manufactur-		Rolling-Mill, ...	1
ers,	2	Machine Shops, .	4
Laundry,	1	Knitting Mills, .	2
Undertakers,	2	Umbrella Han-
Photographers, ..	1	dles,	1
Barbers,	5	Slate Works:
Black-smiths, ...		Roofing,	21
Stores:		School,	2
Dry-Goods,	16	Structural,	11
Drug, Etc.,	3	Black-Boards, ..	3

For particulars of Slatington relating to census, taxables, property valuation, &c., see chapter XVIII on CENSUS.

CHURCHES.

The churches and schools of Slatington began to be organized with the beginning of the town and they have continued to co-operate in a most successful manner, so that now the borough contains eleven of the former and three of the latter.

The churches are as follows:

St. John's Reformed.	St. Paul's Evangelical.
St. John's Lutheran.	Trinity United Evan-
Presbyterian.	gelical.
Baptist.	Christ Episcopal.
Welsh Calvinistic.	Methodist Episcopal.
Methodist.	Roman Catholic.
Welsh Congregationalist.

St. John's Reformed Church.—With a view to forming a religious organization at Slatington, constituted of members of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations, a number of meetings, addressed by ministers of the respective churches, were held in the old town hall and also in the public school-house, and a final meeting was held Aug. 7, 1868, when it was determined that a union church should be built, to be known as "St. John's Union Church of Slatington." A joint building committee was appointed, consisting of the following members:

Reformed—Jonas Kern, Philip Wotring.

Lutheran—David Ross, Henry Handwerk.

The site for the building was selected on Second street, south of Main, on a lot adjoining the public school property. The corner-stone was laid with proper ceremonies June 17, 1869, the officiating ministers having been Isaac Loos and Samuel Leinbach, who represented the Reformed denomination, and L. Grove and J. S. Renninger, the Lutheran.

The church was erected under the superintendency of the committee named, and dedicated on Dec. 26, 1869. The officiating ministers were: Reformed—Revs. D. Brendel, Levi K. Derr, Samuel Leinbach. Lutheran—Revs J. D. Schindel, Ferdinand Berkemeyer (the latter still living in the 85th year of his age, in retirement at Sellersville, Pa.).

This relationship between the two denominations was carried on in a harmonious manner until 1881. The Reformed denomination then purchased the interest of the Lutheran for the consideration of $4,000, thereby becoming the sole owner of the property. General repairs were immediately made to the building, costing $4,000, and from that time until now it has been occupied by the St. John's Reformed congregation.

During the first thirteen years the congregation carried on a successful organization, and for the first ten years Rev. Levi K. Derr served it as pastor when he was obliged to resign on account of failing health. The first communion was administered in May, 1870, and at that time sixty-six persons presented their names for membership. Rev. William J. Peters became Mr. Derr's successor; the membership then was 225. The Slatington charge was composed of St. John's and Frieden's Church (situated about one half mile to the south in Washington township), but in 1886 St. John's became a separate charge. In 1885 Rev. Peters ended his pastorate and was succeeded in 1886 by Rev. Neri Peters, who has served the congregation until the present time in a most efficient manner, covering a continuous period of 27 years.

In 1889 the Sunday school rooms were enlarged and improved and a parsonage was erected on an adjoining lot to the south at an expense exceeding $5,000. In 1894 the interior of the church was largely improved and handsomely decorated and electric light chandeliers and large ventilators in the ceiling were introduced. In 1898 a superior new organ with 930 pipes, was installed, a brick annex having been built at the rear of the church for that purpose. In 1900 a new steeple was erected and the exterior of the church repainted, which was done by the Ladies' Aid Society at an expense exceeding $1,200. In 1906 extensive improvements were made to the church edifice including a renovation of the Sunday school room at an expense of $4,000.

The membership of the congregation in 1913 was 920 and of the Sunday school 715. During the pastorate of Rev. Peters 1,727 members were added to the church; 840 by confirmation, and 887 by letter and renewal of profession; and in this time $75,220 contributed by the members for various church purposes.

St. John's Lutheran Church.—The introductory history of this church will be found in the history of St. John's Reformed Church.

In 1871 this congregation elected Rev. D. K. Kepner as its pastor and he served until Jan. 1, 1875. For the following year there was no regular pastor but during this short period Rev. J. D. Schindel, of Allentown, and four students of the Lutheran Seminary at Philadelphia conducted the religious services. One of the students was Jesse S. Erb and his ability and success came to be so highly appreciated by the members that he was unanimously elected as pastor in 1876 and he has continued to serve the congregation to the present time, covering a period of 37 years.

The Union Church having become the property of the St. John's Reformed congregation, the Lutheran congregation immediately proceeded to establish a new church for themselves on a large lot of ground situated on the same street, a short distance south on the opposite side, which had been generously donated, including a two-story frame building for a parsonage, by a generous and zealous member, Mrs. David Ross. The corner stone was laid June 2, 1881, with appropriate ceremonies by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Erb, who was assisted by Prof. N. N. Wacker-nagel and S. A. Zeigenfuse; and the completed edifice was dedicated Dec. 2, 1883, the pastor having been assisted in the dedication by Revs. B. Sadtler, D.D., and J. D. Schindel. In 1888 an addition of 28 feet was erected at the rear of the church and other improvements were made, including the installation of a superior pipe organ at an expense of $8,000.

During the inception of the foregoing church movement, addresses were also made on the subject of Sunday school and the first meeting was held in the Presbyterian Church where a school was started with 18 pupils. This number was augmented at the second meeting to 64 pupils, and a proportional increase was made at subsequent meetings which required a more commodious building which was secured in the public school house at Second and Main streets. Upon the erection of the Union Church in 1869 the meeting place was transferred to the church and it was there until the dissolution was effected when each congregation conducted a separate school for the children of its members; and this has been continued until the present time.

A bible-class was organized about the same time which was regularly instructed by Rev. Renninger, assisted by Rev. S. A. Leinbach, of the Reformed denomination and by their united efforts they succeeded in establishing the Union Church.

Presbyterian Church is an attractive frame structure, with a steeple 120 feet high, painted white, situated at the northern extremity of the main street in the upper section of Slatington. The organization of the congregation was effected by a number of the first English settlers in this vicinity who held religious meetings from 1850 to 1855 in the various homes, which were under the directing influence of Rev. Dr. Gray, of Easton, Rev. Leslie Irvine, of the Allen township church and James Kennedy (a ruling elder of the Allen church) with the encouragement and support of thirteen original members, among whom were the ruling elders, Robert McDowell and James Marshall, and the deacons, W. S. Crosbie and W. Jones; and the result of these meetings was the erection of a frame church on the site mentioned during the years 1854-'55, the corner stone having been laid in July, 1854, and the structure dedicated in February, 1855, with the Rev. Dr. D. V. McLean (then president of Princeton College), officiating in the ceremonies.

For twenty-five years, services were held in the building, but the timbers showing signs of weakness and decay, the congregation determined to erect a new building, and accordingly the old church was razed, and the corner stone was laid in 1874. The structure, as it appears now (of which the accompanying illustration shows a correct likeness), was finished in 1876, and dedicated on Sept. 29th, with Rev. Dr. Wm. Ormisston, of New York, preaching the sermon on that occasion. The cost of the building was $7,000. The building committee was Robert McDowell, D. D. Roper, D. D. Jones, Jesse Labar and Samuel Caskie.

The membership in 1884 numbered 70. In 1910 the church was remodeled and much improved. In 1913, the membership was 175.

The following pastors served the congregation:

T. M. Adams, 1855-57.	John F. Scott, 1886-88.
A. G. Harned, 1857-66.	Percy Y. Schelly,
George J. Porter,	1889-96.
1866-67.	Julius W. Brockway,
John W. McNaughten,	1897-1901.
1870-75.	D. H. Ferrell, 1902-04.
S. Stockton Burroughs,	H. M. Vogelsoner,
1876-80.	1904-12.
B. F. Meyers, 1882-83.	James H. Boal, 1913-
James J. Campbell,
1884-85.

A Sunday school was conducted with the church since 1854. It was started by Mr. McDowell with only six members, and till 1866 the membership had increased to 273. In 1913, it was 200.

In the school room two interesting slate tablets are attached to the wall at the rear of the superintendent's desk, in remembrance of the long continued services and devotion of two faithful members of the church and school: Robert McDowell, elder from 1851 and superintendent from 1855 to the time of his decease in 1878; and David McKenna, elder from 1878 and superintendent from 1879 to the time of his decease in 1908.

A small burying ground is situated on the rear of the lot but no interments have been made on it for many years. Only six graves are marked with stones, but the inscriptions are not legible.

Baptist Church.—A number of the Welsh inhabitants of Slatington and vicinity, who were attached to the Baptist Church, formed an association and began to hold religious meetings in September, 1861, at Williamstown, a settlement west of the town in a frame building erected by Henry Williams at a cost of $800. The active members at that time were Mr. Williams and wife, John Roberts and wife, Ellis Owen and wife, and Mrs. Catharine P. Williams. The services were continued at Williamstown every Sunday until 1891, when they were started at Slatington with sixteen members in the Fritzinger hall, but in several months the hall was destroyed by fire, including considerable furniture of the church; then the hopeful and determined members erected a church for themselves at the west end of Church street, costing $5,000, where the congregation continued for nine years. With increased membership, they were encouraged to establish a larger church, and securing a lot on the southwest corner of 2nd and Main streets, they erected a most attractive edifice at a cost of $21,000, of which three prominent members, Ellis Owens, Joseph Richards and Robert G. Pierce contributed each $5,000, and this was dedicated with appropriate services in June, 1900. The membership at that time was 105; which has been increased to 125. The officiating pastors have been:

VIEW LOOKING NORTH ON MAIN STREET.

Allen J. Morton, 1864-79.	D. E. Richards, 1895-1906.
Charles Jones, 1891-92.	Gomez Evans, 1908-10.
Henry Evans, 1893-94.	Moses S. Young, 1912-

A Sunday school has been conducted in a successful manner from the inception of the church. The superior singing of the school and congregation is a distinguishing feature of the services.

Welsh Churches.—Several Welshmen, of Slatington (John Davies, William Griffith, and William Evans), organized a congregation in the year 1847, and religious meetings were held in a slate building for four years, Davies and Griffith having officiated as elders.

The Synod of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church of Pennsylvania convened at Slatington from the 11th to the 13th of April, 1851, and it was then that their first church came to be dedicated. It was built of stone, one-story high, and stood on the southwest corner of Church and 4th streets. In 1858 difficulties arose in the congregation which led to a separation and the establishment of two bodies, which called themselves respectively, Welsh Presbyterian or Calvinistic Methodist, and Welsh Congregationalist.

The former remained in the building of 1851, but finding it too small, they erected, in 1859, a new and substantial stone church in its place, one story, 28 by 34 feet, with a capacity of 200, which was appropriately dedicated Jan. 1, 1860. They carried on worship until it was burned down March 30, 1863. A two-story brick building was put up a short distance west of the corner, and this was dedicated Jan. 30-31, 1864. It was occupied by the congregation until 1882, then the increased membership required a larger building, and they erected a superior and attractive brick structure on Fourth street, a short distance south of Church, and here they have continued until the present time. The building was enlarged in 1897.

A prosperous Sunday school was carried on from the beginning, in connection with the church. The membership of both bodies is about 200.

The pastors have been:

John G. Jones, 1851-53.	R. E. Williams, 1890-93.
Thomas H. Roberts, 1853-54.	John W. Morris, 1893-99.
John J. Evans.	John O. Jones, 1900.
Ebenezer T. Jones, 1862-64.	John Williams, 1901-14.
John L. Jeffreys, 1869-71.

The Welsh Congregationalists, the other body, withdrew and erected a church on the same street, farther west, in the hollow, and carried on their religious devotions there until 1883, when they erected another but far superior building on a lot of ground, 60 by 100 feet on the northwest corner of 4th and Franklin street, an attractive, large frame edifice, 30 by 60 feet, which they painted white, and there they have continued regular services until the present time, keeping up the premises in a fine condition. The membership is 110. A Sunday school has also been supported and its membership is 125.

The pastors have all come directly from Wales, whose names have been:

William Jones.	Wm. Davies (N.
W. Tudwel Williams.	Wales).
Wm. Davies (S. Wales).	Isaac Trevor Williams.
James Williams.

Methodist Episcopal.—Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Slatington, organized a congregation in 1869 and determined to establish a church. In this behalf the following building committee was appointed: Rev. J. W. Knapp, James Anthony, James Thomas, David Evans, Harrison Evans, George S. Coffin and Wm. H. Gish. A lot of ground was secured on Centre street; the corner-stone was laid Sept. 12, 1869; and the one-story frame structure was dedicated Dec. 19, 1869. And here services have been conducted until the present time. The church was remodeled in 1909.

Evangelical Churches.—The Evangelical Association established an organization at Slatington in 1862 by first holding meetings in private homes and afterward in the hall of Lewis Heritzky in the lower section of Slatington until 1870, when a one-story frame building was erected on the northeast corner of Second and Washington streets, the corner-stone having been laid June 19. Members of this denomination living at Slatedale and that vicinity co-operated with the members at Slatington in establishing this edifice. Their efforts were successful in increasing the membership and by 1884 it numbered 264. It was dedicated as St. Paul's Evangelical Church and the organization has been continued until the present time.

When this denomination divided after 1890 a second church was established in 1895 at the corner of Second street and Center alley, an attractive two-story brick edifice which was named Trinity United Evangelical Church. [See Church History of the County.]

Christ Episcopal.—The first steps towards the establishment of the Episcopal Church at Slatington was taken in 1898 when religious services in this behalf were conducted by Rev. Wm. H. Heigham, of Catasaqua in the Seibert building. Irregular meetings were held there for over a year; then on December 24, 1899, a special service was conducted by Bishop Talbot in the Presbyterian Church, which was largely attended. New rooms were fitted up in the Semmel building in lower Slatington, and with the appointment of James L. Foote as the first warden a stronger spirit was shown. The mission had six communicants.

In December, 1900, Rev. George A. Green became the first rector, and he conducted regular services every Sunday afternoon until July, 1904. By that time the communicants had increased to thirty-six, and the vestry to two wardens.

In the Summer of 1902 the subject of a new church had first been agitated. Subscriptions began to be solicited; and then Mr. and Mrs. James L. Foote offered a building lot on the corner of Williams and Diamond streets which was accepted. This success led to the appointment of a building committee in April, 1905, consisting of Rev. R. S. Radcliffe, James L. Foote, James L. Mast, Esau Prestwood, Charles North, Harry W. Jones, Harry E. Prestwood, W. J. Gladstone and John J. Parry, and their efforts were continued until a building contract was executed in May, 1906. Ground was broken ten days afterward. The corner-stone was laid by Bishop Talbot on Oct. 8, 1906, and finally on June 8, 1907, an attractive frame, Gothic edifice, 24 by 72 feet, which cost $10,000 was dedicated. The General Missionary of the Central Diocese Rev. R. S. Radcliffe, was very active in this work for several years. Services have been held every Sunday since the dedication without a rector.

A Sunday school was started in November, 1899 with Mrs. James L. Foote as superintendent, and she continued to serve this position in a most faithful manner until she died in 1907. The chancel window, which contains a full length picture of Jesus Christ, was presented by Mr. Foote in commemoration of his wife who has come to be regarded as the principal founder of this church. Mrs. James L. Mast, also an active worker, succeeded Mrs. Foote as superintendent but she died shortly afterward. Edmund Collins was then appointed superintendent by the Bishop and he has served in an official manner until now. The membership of the school is 106. The membership of the church is small, only 28, having been greatly reduced by death and removals from the district.

Roman Catholic.—A considerable number of members of the Roman Catholic Church had for years been located in the vicinity of Slatington but were obliged to carry on their religious devotion in churches situated some miles away and this condition prevailed until 1883 when a small frame chapel was established in the borough on the south side of Washington street, between Sixth and Seventh streets and this was maintained until 1908 when a larger frame building was erected, including a two-story frame parsonage. The services were conducted by priests from Mauch Chunk and Lehighton until 1906 when a separate parish was established here and Father J. C. Vitt became the local priest. He served the small congregation, numbering about 200 members from this section of the county, until 1911 when he was succeeded by Father Joseph I. Plappert.

CEMETERIES.—The Fairview.—There are two cemeteries in which the residents of Slatington bury their dead. The first was started by Robert McDowell on a part of his farm in the southeastern section of the borough in 1868, elevated on the hill-side, and called "Fairview." It was laid out with 1,108 lots and a large number have been sold for burial purposes; and it was held by him until his decease in 1878, and after his death by his estate until 1910, when it was sold to the re-organized Fairview Cemetery Association which was incorporated and of which Dr. Luther Campbell has since been president.

Union.—The second was founded in 1870 by the Reformed and Lutheran congregations on an elevated tract of four acres south of Slatington, called "Union" after the church in which these bodies then worshipped jointly. The enclosure was enlarged gradually until now it embraces 13 acres. The burials from 1870 to Oct. 26, 1913, numbered 1,305, the record being so kept as to show the burials in consecutive order.

A corporation was instituted in 1895 under the name of the Union Cemetery Association, by members of the two churches, to maintain this cemetery in perpetuity without profit, and the two churches conveyed the land secured by them to this corporation for the nominal consideration of $1. It is kept in fine order and includes many attractive monuments, including the "Soldiers' Monument," dedicated in 1909, and the Firemen's Monument, dedicated also in 1909, several months later.

Undertakers.—Augustus Berkemeyer was engaged at Saegersville as a cabinet-maker in connection with undertaking from 1838 to 1864; removed to Slatington and there conducted the business of undertaking until 1869, when he sold it to Daniel Heintzelman and removed to Allentown, and Heintzelman carried it on until he died when he was succeeded by his son, Henry, who has followed it since.

John F. Berkemeyer, son of Augustus, located at Slatington in 1891 to conduct this business and he has also followed it until the present time.

Joel Stettler was engaged in the business here for some years before 1880.

SCHOOLS.

Prior to 1858 the children of lower Slatington attended school half a mile north of the place along the river; and those of upper Slatington attended the Friedensville school, half a mile to the south.

The first school within the present limits of Slatington was started in the old stone mill of William Kern in 1820, but it was continued there only a few years. The next was started in 1858, and the Welsh congregation having separated, the school directors of Washington township rented the stone church for school purposes; and this was used until 1868 when a new two-story, brick building (47 x 50 feet, costing $7,000 and dedicated Aug 30th), was provided by the township, at the southeast corner of Main and Second streets, which is still standing but considerably enlarged.

The teachers during this early period were George Berkes, Xantippe Kohler, ——— Jones (Welshman), Miss Susan Knauss, Miss M. D. Baker, Miss Jane Mott, besides others whose names could not be recalled.

A school was conducted for a time in the second story of the Lehigh Slate Co. office building, taught by Miss Rebecca McDowell; and another was conducted in the home of Moses Kuntz.

Rev. A. G. Harned, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church carried on a successful school in the church from 1857 to 1866, which was taught during part of the time by ——— Berry, of Connecticut. Other schools were held in private houses; but by the year 1868 most of them had given way to the common schools.

In 1868 the schools were divided into four grades: Primary, secondary, grammar and high, with pupils numbering altogether about 200, who were under the superintendency of A. J. Kline.

In 1875 the pupils numbered over 300. A second primary school was then opened in McDowell hall, the schools were graded with a better classification, and regular course of study, and higher studies were introduced for advanced pupils.

In 1879 the number of pupils had so increased

FIREMEN
MONUMENT.

conducted the business of undertaking until 1869, that more room was demanded and an addition was built to the school building, 25 x 45 feet, two stories high, costing $2,500; and the rooms were furnished with the latest appliances costing $1,000. The lot was also improved by grading and tree planting, and a strong retaining wall was built along Main street. The management of the schools became so popular that many pupils were admitted not only from the adjoining districts of Lehigh county but also from Northampton and Carbon counties which reflected much credit upon the administrative ability of Prof. Stettler. During his administration more than fifty young men and women became teachers from the High school as teachers, most of them securing positions in Lehigh and adjoining counties.

Besides the common schools, Prof. Stettler also conducted two night schools, one attended by the quarry and factory boys with sessions two evenings a week, and the other by advanced pupils for knowledge of the higher branches.

Since the public schools have been placed under Prof. James W. Snyder they have reached a very high degree of efficiency, and the graduation of the high school pupils has come to be a sufficient recommendation for their admission into colleges and universities.

Board of Directors.

President—Able Boyer.
Vice-President—D. B. Costenbader.
Secretary—William M. Roberts.
Treasurer—Peter N. Snyder.
L. H. Bauer (resigned).

Teachers.

James W. Snyder Supervisor.

High School (1897).

Charles C. Bachman,	H. A. Zell.
Princ.	Clarence Myles.
Helen M. Smith.	Vida Roper,
Joseph F. Frederick,	Music director.
Franklin J. Fister.	Margie Jones.
Dora Shenton.	Millie Steckel.

2nd St. Building (1868; 1879).

Olive Young.	Marguerite Robert.
Ruth Kern.	Beryl Weygandt.
Ella Engle.	Blodwen Griffith.
Maud Neff.	Edna Peters.

3d Ward Building (1906).

Sydney Peters.	Bessie Boyer.
Ina E. Kern.	Violet Hankee.
Mayme Krause.	Carrie Handwerk.
Florence Geist.

School Directors.

Richard H. Dyer,	Alvin S. Haines, 1889-91.
1865-68.	John Kennel, 1890-95.
Moses Kuntz, 1865-68.	J. F. Lentz, 1890-92.
William Peter, 1865-68.	S. H. Schneck, 1891-93.
David Heintzleman,	Robt. Muschlitz, 1891-93.
1865-68.	John Richards, 1892-94.
Lewis C. Smith, 1865-72.	James L. Foote, 1893-95.
Mixon Lewis, 1865-68.	Evan H. Roberts,
Aaron Peter, 1865-76.	1894-96.
Henry Kuntz, 1866-69.	Joseph D. Bentz, 1894-96.
Jonas Hoffman, 1866-69.	Joseph Richards,
David McKenna,	1895-97.
1867-73; 75-78.	Dr. John S. Mack,
Robert W. Parry,	1895-97.
1867-70.	Levi A. Snyder, 1896-98.
G. R. Davis, 1867.	Frank A. Schereir,
Resigned.	1896-98.
David Williams, 1868-72.	Quincy A. Stettler,
William H. Gish, 1869-72.	1897-99.
Alexander Weaver,	Henry W. Maxwell,
1869-72.	1897-1902.
Jesse Labar, 1869-72.	Edward Shoenburger,
Lewis Henritzy, 1869-72.	1898-1900.
George Brown, 1870-73.	Frank J. Lentz,
John Morgan, 1870-73;	1898-1900
1884-90.	Dr. David Williams,
Thomas Kern, 1871-78.	1899-01.
James Anthony, 1871-74.	Levi S. Brown, 1900-02.
Phillip Woodring,	Wm. Fritzinger, 1901-03.
1872-75.	John Richards, 1901-03.
Dr. A. P. Steckel,	W. F. Andrews, 1902-04.
1874-79; 1882-84.	Jos. B. Roberts, 1902-04.
Robert McDowell,	Alfred S. Morgan,
1874-77.	1903-08.
D. D. Jones, 1875-78.	Dr. M. J. Holben,
Robert F. App, 1875-78.	1903-05.
D. D. Roper, 1877-80.	James Paules, 1904-11.
Samuel H. Schneck,	James Owens, 1904-06.
1877-80.	Esau Prestwood, 1905-08.
D. M. Cassel, 1878-81.	Richard O. Roberts,
Daniel R. Williams,	1905-07.
1879-82.	B. W. Kern, Jr., 1905-07.
Hiram A. Hankee,	James D. Neyer, 1907-09.
1880-83.	A. E. Leibfred, 1906-09.
John T. Roberts, 1880-84.	Chas. A. Bechtel, 1908-11.
George T. Oplinger,	Osville Peters, 1908-11.
1881-87.	A. P. Berlin, 1906-11.
H. L. Davis, 1881-83.	Edwin Osler, 1908-11.
J. F. Miller, 1882-84.	Howard E. Daum.
Joel Neff, 1885-90.	1906-12.
John A. Wiegner,	Peter N. Snyder, 1912-18.
1885-87.	L. H. Baun, 1910-13.
F. A. Bachman, 1886-88.	S. B. Costenbader,
L. F. Brensing, 1887-89.	1909-19.
Evan J. Williams,	W. M. Roberts, 1910-15.
1888-90.	Abel Boyer, 1913-15.
Dr. A. J. Kern, 1889-94;	Robert Williams,
1890-01.	1913-19.

Principals of Schools.

A. E. Atwater, 1869-71.	J. J. Santz, 1887-96.
J. O. Rowlands, 1871-72.	J. H. Hurst, 1896.
J. H. Deardorf, 1872-75.	J. W. Snyder, A. M.,
Frank J. Settler, 1875-87;	1906 to present time.
1898-1906.

CHAPTER XXXI.

BOROUGH OF SOUTH ALLENTOWN.

The borough of South Allentown adjoins the city of Allentown on the southeast. The land on which it is located was a part of the Allen family lands, portions of which were later owned by the Scholl, Keck and Mory families. In 1870, James and Stephen Barner sold about 200 acres to Aschbach, Weber and Rau, who then laid it off in building lots according to an adopted plan, and the proposed town was called Strassburg. The sale of lots and the development of the town was postponed on account of the severe panic which prevailed from 1873 to 1877. A few houses were erected and for many years the place was known as "Aineyville," after the head of the iron furnace in operation along the river from 1868 to 1906. The increase of population in Salisbury township and South Allentown, now the Twelfth ward of Allentown, resulted in the growth of the village and it became known as Southeast Allentown, by which name it is still generally known.

By a decree made May 21, 1909, after due proceedings in the Court of Quarter Sessions, 462 acres, in the form of a square, were taken from the central portion of Salisbury township and incorporated the borough of South Allentown. The first election was held June 29, 1909, at the hall of the Workingmen's Beneficial Society and the following officials were elected:

Edwin F. Miller, burgess; John Beck, Jacob W. Held, Wm. H. Hoffman, Bernhard J. Reilly, L. H. Reinhard, Edwin H. Scholl, and Willoughby Stephens, councilmen; A. J. Heller, treasurer.

The taxable inhabitants in 1914 numbered 590 freeholders, 302 tenants and 71 single men, a total of 963. The total assessment amounted to $964,745.00. The amount of tax levied was $4,000.00. The officials in 1914 are: Wm. H. Hoffman, burgess; James Druckenmiller, J. Robert Eck, F. B. Gehris, Jacob W. Held, Charles E. Nonnemacher, John F. Waltz and Carvin J. Yeakel, councilmen; Jacob H. Gehris, secretary; Thomas K. Diehl, treasurer; J. Edw. Didra, Wallace Groman and H. O. Bleam, auditors; Jacob Christine and Fred Nonnemacher, constables. The justices of the peace are Charles F. Long and Harrison O. Bortz; and William Beck is assessor. Jacob H. Gehris was town clerk from 1909 to 1913 and Charles H. Heller from 1914. The estimated population in July, 1914, was 3,000. The meetings of the town council are held in the Arion band hall.

The Fearless Fire Company was organized in 1911. It has 135 members and Charles Messenger is the foreman. The water consumed by the residents was taken from cisterns until 1909, when water was obtained from an artesian well put down by M. B. Biery. In 1913, the borough opened up two artesian wells on the southeast borough line, at a depth of 250 feet and a cost of $2,675.00, where a stand-pipe is being erected. A system of street lighting has also been installed. The electric street railroad was constructed through the town to South Bethlehem in 1893 and to Emaus in 1895.

The first hotel was erected by Edwin F. Miller in 1893, who conducted it for sixteen years. His son, E. C. W. Miller succeeded him, but he died several months afterward, and it has since been conducted by his son-in-law, Charles Minnich. The first general store was started by James Barner, and the second by Edwin F. Miller. In 1914, there are four stores: Guth & Heller, M. D. Henninger, William Rau and Harry Reed. John A. Didra opened a bakery in 1905, which employs six hands and two teams. A blacksmith shop was started in 1912. James Ritter opened a greenhouse in 1904, and was succeeded by T. B. Binns in 1908, and Milton Geissinger in 1910. Mr. Geissinger died in 1913 and was succeeded by his son, Wm. Penn Geissinger, who also conducts a peach orchard of several acres, started by his father. There are two broad silk mills, the Keystone Textile Company, which employs seventy people and the Stuyvesant Silk Company, where sixty people are employed.

The Lehigh Iron Company erected a furnace at the river in 1868 and another in 1872, which were operated until 1906. The company produced annually for many years, 25,000 tons of pig iron and employed 150 men. Wm. H. Ainey was president and treasurer and Harrison Bortz, manager. The plant has now been dismantled.

Dr. W. A. Bachman located as the first physician in 1911, and A. J. Heller, who had been a building contractor, located as an undertaker.

The social orders of the borough are the Workingmen's Beneficial Society and the Jr. O. U. A. M. The Arion Cornet band was started in 1909 with thirty members and Prof. John Muth as the leader.

Churches. St. Mark's Union church, on Helwas erected in 1902, of which the pastor is Rev. R. L. Woodring.

Schools. An old township school building was taken by the borough in 1909, which has been improved several times. A fine, large brick building was erected in 1912 at a cost of $21,000.

STUYVESANT SILK MILL, SOUTH ALLENTOWN

lertown avenue, was organized in 1885, and a building was subsequently erected, valued at $10,000. The joint membership is 750 and the pastors are Rev. J. P. Bachman, Reformed, and Rev. C. A. Kerschner, Lutheran. Zion U. E. church was erected in 1899. The pastor is Rev. Thomas Knecht. A Mennonite church building

In 1914 the directors were: Harry Hillegass, John J. Lynn, John A. Didra, Charles Beidler, and Michael Deibert; and teachers: Luther H. Adams, principal; Emma Maury, Estella P. Balliet, Naomi Brensinger, Bertha Miller, Ruth Brensinger, Hilda Knerr, Anna Gackenbach, and Lizzie Dietrich.

CHAPTER XXXII.

BOROUGH OF BETHLEHEM (WEST SIDE).

BY CLARENCE E. BECKEL.

Early History.

The early history of West Bethlehem is closely linked with that of the Moravian Brethren, who soon after settling in Bethlehem saw the natural advantages of the strip of aluvial land lying to the west and south of the Monocasy for industrial purposes. As early as 1742 they erected a saw mill on the creek below the present site of the New Street bridge. Shortly thereafter a laundry and a bleaching house were built on the bank of the river. The latter building in later years was known as "Noah's Ark," and as a resort for disreputable people gained for itself a very unsavory reputation. All trace of it has long since disappeared.

FERRY.

On Jan. 25, 1743, a site was selected by the Brethren for the erection of a grist mill on the east bank of the Monocasy, and the same day for a landing place for the ferry across the Lehigh. Up to that time the river had been forded or crossed by canoe, but now that a mill was to be built it was seen that arrangements would have to be made to provide a more adequate means of crossing, for the settlers coming with grist from the Saucon valley and elsewhere, as well as for the Brethren who had frequent occasion to cross the stream. The site selected for a ferry landing was at the foot of Main street, and on March 11 a "flat" was dragged into the river by eight horses and launched. The miller, John Adam Schaus, was the first of a line of regularly appointed ferrymen. At first the rude craft was operated by poling, but this method was supplanted in 1758 by a rope rigging stretched across the river from the site of the Crown Inn to a point directly opposite.

INDIAN HOUSE.

The old Indian house stood on the west bank of the Monocasy, immediately north of the present stone bridge at the Luckenbach mill. It was a one-story stone structure, 52 by 40 feet in dimensions, erected as a temporary home for the Christian Indians, who prior to this had occupied quarters at the foot of the hill to the south-east, as well as other friendly Indians who from time to time sojourned at Bethlehem. The original intention was to place an Indian couple, or some properly qualified white person, in charge of the building, which was ready for occupancy on Oct. 25, 1752. In the summer of 1756 a log house was built just south of it, near the creek, containing a chapel for the Indians. In 1758 this was removed to the Indian village of Nain, near Bethlehem. Both the men and women were given employment, the men as guides and scouts, or in the fields, and the women to weave baskets, mats, and numerous other articles. The men also contributed to the larder by their skill in catching fish, shad at that time being plentiful in the river. Stipulated wages were paid for these services and receipts taken therefor. During the troublous winter of 1755-1756, these friendly Indians acted as scouts on the outskirts of the village, and doubtless on more occasions than one their vigilance prevented sudden attacks by the lurking savages. After the removal of the Indians to Nain on October 18, 1758, the building was occasionally used as a temporary lodging house for travelers.

REVOLUTIONARY BURIAL GROUND.

Upon the establishment of the Revolutionary hospital for the Continental soldiers at Bethlehem, a site was selected on the bluff across the Monocasy as a burial ground for the dead soldiers. Two men died in the hospital on December 7, 1776, and subsequently hundreds of others, and all found a resting-place in unmarked graves. In 1892, in connection with the sesqui-centennial exercises in Bethlehem, a marker was erected on the site. Each year on Memorial Day, the pupils of the Young Ladies' Seminary repair to the spot, and hold appropriate exercises in memory of the unfortunate patriots. On numerous occasions bones have been uncovered in making excavations for different purposes, and these have been carefully collected and re-interred in the soldiers' plot on Niskey Hill Cemetery, by the members of the local Post, G. A. R.

BRIDGES.

The question of a bridge across the river to supplant the ferry, was first brought up in 1791, and on Jan. 2, 1792, a committee consisting of Bishop John Ettwein, Paul Muenster, Francis Thomas, Frederick Beitel, Valentine Fuehrer, and Massa Warner, was appointed to look into the matter. Three days later the committee submitted an adverse report. On January 23, taking advantage of the absence of Ettwein, the strongest opponent to the project, another meeting was held, which resulted in a practically unanimous vote in favor of a bridge. A company was accordingly organized, and operations begun in the spring of 1794. The bridge was completed on September 27, the same year. The structure was an open one, and tolls were collected. The structure cost $7,800, and this amount was distributed in shares of one hundred dollars each. With the completion of the bridge the old ferry was abandoned.

The second bridge, also an uncovered one, was opened for travel October 19, 1816, and gave excellent service until January 8, 1841, when it was completely destroyed by the memorable freshet of that year, which wrought such frightful havoc throughout the entire valley.

A covered bridge was then constructed, also of wood, which still stands, though doomed to disappear as many hope in the very near future, to be replaced by a more modern structure which shall do honor to the present generation. The "Old Bridge," as it is familiarly styled, was considerably damaged by the freshet of 1862, and again in 1902, narrowly escaped destruction. The collection of toll ceased entirely on November 8, 1892.

The first foot-bridge across the Monocasy was built in 1741, near the grist mill. This was replaced by another in 1747.

In 1815 and again in 1818 and 1822, petitions were presented to the two counties for the construction of a bridge across the Monocasy, to provide access for teams to the grist mill and to the tannery from the west. In the latter year both counties took favorable action, and a stone bridge was erected.

The construction of the canal in 1827-1829 necessitated a bridge at the foot of Main Street.

The Broad Street bridge marked an epoch in the growth of West Bethlehem. A company was organized May 1, 1869, which commenced immediate operations, and on May 17, 1871, after many annoying delays, the completed structure was formally opened for traffic. In 1887 the bridge was purchased by the two counties, and on May 14, the collection of toll ceased.

In 1907 the commissioners of the two counties took steps to replace the old structure, which was no longer considered safe. The contract for a modern re-enforced concrete bridge was awarded on August 6, 1908, to Cramp & Co., of Philadelphia, at their bid of $104,000, and work was begun on August 28. The bridge was officially declared open to vehicles by the contractors at noon on December 1, 1909.

CANAL.

Construction of the canal was begun at Bethlehem in August, 1827, and on June 2, 1829, the water was first let into that portion of the ditch that passes the town. The building of this waterway from Mauch Chunk necessitated many changes in the topography of the land in the lower section of the town. The first coal transported down the canal passed Bethlehem on June 10. In the early days of canal navigation, passengers were carried on packet boats. At first it was feared that the stagnant water in the canal would breed disease, but this fear was found to be needless as the water was kept in motion.

OLD SOUTH BETHLEHEM.

The advent of the canal, followed by the activities incident to the operation of the foundry and other industries, had a tendency to promote growth in that portion of West Bethlehem which lay between the river and the Monocasy, from the western end of Vineyard Street, to the saw mill eastward. About the year 1830 the name "South Bethlehem" was first applied to this section. Later, when a borough of that name was organized on the south side of the Lehigh, the older residents of Bethlehem still continued to speak of the former as "Old South Bethlehem."

During the freshets of 1841 and 1862, much suffering was occasioned in Old South Bethlehem, and in the latter year seven lives were lost. In more recent times, notably in 1902, considerable inconvenience was suffered by the residents, who had to even be removed from second-story windows in boats to escape the rising waters of the Monocasy, backed up by the heavier flow of the Lehigh.

RAILROADS.

The Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad, now a division of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was authorized to build a line from Easton to Mauch Chunk, by a bill passed by the Legislature in 1864, and in 1866 the building of the section through Bethlehem was begun. On Nov. 25, 1867, the first train passed down the new road. On March 31, 1871, it was leased by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and in 1873 the present passenger station was built near Main Street.

The Lehigh and Lackawanna, originally incorporated May 1, 1862 for the construction of a railroad from the North Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley Railroad Junction in West Bethlehem, to the Borough of Bath in Northampton County, completed the line to Chapmans on Nov. 28, 1867, the event being celebrated by running an excursion to that place from Bethlehem.

ISLANDS.

Some years ago General W. E. Doster, the owner of a large part of the lands above and below the New Street bridge, conceived the idea of forming a pleasure resort on Sand Island. The tract was cleared of underbrush, and numerous improvements made to make it an attractive spot. The tract to the west was designated "Wampanoag," while the three islands east of the bridge, adjoining Semple's paint mill were named "Mohican Islands," the names of two prominent Indian tribes. The project was a failure, and for several years past large quantities of earth and refuse have been deposited on the place, with a view to bringing the land above the high water mark, thus making it available for manufacturing sites, etc.

INDUSTRIES.

In 1829, Charles F. Beckel, who since 1825 had been operating a small iron foundry on Main Street, moved the establishment to Sand Island near the canal lock, and here for many years flourished the "Beckel Foundry," the pioneer of all iron industries along the Lehigh at Bethlehem. The operating power was water secured from the upper canal level, which was returned to the lower level. The products of the foundry were of a great variety, including castings for mill work, agricultural implements, stoves, ornamental iron fences, bridges, etc. At a later period Mr. Beckel associated with himself two of his sons, Charles N. and George M. Beckel. The former became an expert bridge engineer, and in November, 1870, erected an iron span for the New Street bridge, to replace one damaged by the freshet of Oct. 4, 1869. In August, 1871, he completed the erection of the Union Street bridge across the Monocacy. The ornamental iron fence at present surrounding the Central Moravian Church, at Bethlehem, was also a product of the Beckel foundry.

The establishment suffered severely from the freshets of Jan. 7, 1841, and Oct. 4, 1869, but on each occasion triumphed over the catastrophe, until the early eighties when the death of the elder Beckel, coupled with financial reverses, compelled the abandonment of the enterprise. The property eventually came into the possession of the E. P. Wilbur Trust Company, and later, when General Doster carried into effect his plan for improving Sand Island as a pleasure resort, the plant was entirely dismantled.

On the present site of the Diamond Roller Mills, on the south bank of the canal, formerly stood the brewery of the Brethren's House Diacnory. In 1829 the property was purchased by Owen Rice for storing grain, flour, and feed, and in 1838 Copeland Boyd established a paper mill, the power being secured from the waters of the canal. At a still later period the building was used as a barrel factory by the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Zinc Company, and finally as a foundry facing mill, until it was destroyed by fire in 1885.

In 1887, D. D. Fritch and Trion D. Fritch, under the firm name of D. D. Fritch and Company, built up a milling business on the above site. The firm name was soon after changed to Fritch and Egner, and again in 1904 to T. D. Fritch and Sons. The main mill was erected in 1886, and in 1892, an elevator was added. Another addition was built in 1908. Twenty-two people are employed in the mill, which has a daily capacity of two hundred barrels. "Fritch's Best," "Diamond B. B.," and "Diamond Rye Flour," three of the leading brands manufactured, have a wide reputation.

In this locality was also laid the foundation of a coal and lumber business, first undertaken by Timothy Weiss, followed by Henry G. Guetter, who combined with the coal business the lumber yard formerly located on North Street, Bethlehem. The enterprise was later successively conducted by Borhek and Knauss; Borhek, Knauss and Miksch; Borhek and Miksch; and more recently by the Brown-Borhek Lumber and Coal Company, Limited. The latter firm placed the business on a substantial basis and increased its efficiency by the purchase of the Brown lumber yard in South Bethlehem. In 1913 the Brown-Borhek Company was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania.

Located at Ninth and Lehigh Avenues is the Guerber Engineering Company, established February 20, 1901, by F. S. Guerber, with a capital stock of $250,000. The company manufactures frogs, switches, and steel structures of every description, and has a considerable export trade. About two hundred skilled workmen are employed. The officers of the company are as follows: A. N. Cleaver, president; F. C. Stout, vice president; Franklin H. Brunner, secretary; W. B. Myers, treasurer; J. E. Boatrite, general manager, P. A. E. Guerber, manager of sales.

The firm of Pettinos Brothers, manufacturers and importers of graphite or plumbago, was established in 1892, by George F. Pettinos. Associated with him in the business is his brother, Charles E. Pettinos. Other products manufactured are paint, greases, belt dressing, foundry equipment and supplies. The company also has extensive interests in sand operations scattered throughout the country. Besides the Bethlehem plant, located on River Street, they have factories at Byers, Pa., and Colombo, Ceylon.

The Sauquoit Silk Mills, located on River Street near the old bridge, are extensive manufacturers of dress and crepe silks, and employ nearly five hundred people. E. H. Clewell recently succeeded Mr. H. C. Bailey as manager of the mills. Mr. Alexander D. Steele, of Scranton, is president of the concern, which also operates mills in Philadelphia and Scranton.

The firm of L. W. Strock and Company, manufacturers of handles, was established about 1897 by the late Lycurgus W. Strock. They maintain an office and warehouse on Lehigh Avenue, and operate mills in Tennessee. The product is widely sold, and a considerable export business is done. Mr. Strock died March 15, 1913.

Another concern doing an active business on the west side is the King Coal Company, located on Vineyard Street. This firm commenced business in 1892 under the name of Delp and King. Mr. Delp retiring six months after the formation of the partnership, the business was continued by Mr. Franklin B. King. The latter retired April 1, 1908, leaving the business in the hands of his son, Franklin G. King. The firm deals extensively in coal and wood.

The wholesale grocery firm of J. A. Eberts and Company had its origin in South Bethlehem, where J. A. Eberts on Nov. 3, 1890, commenced the selling of food-stuffs. On Jan. 1, 1896, Mr. J. H. Barrall entered into partnership with Mr. Eberts. In October, 1897, the firm occupied its new building near the Central Railroad of New Jersey freight station. Mr. Barrall died before the moving was completed, and Mr. Eberts continued the business until July 15, 1901, when the present firm was incorporated with a capital of $125,000. This was increased to $250,000, on June 3, 1902, and on January 21, 1907, a bond issue of $100,000 was authorized. Branches are maintained at Allentown, Scranton, Easton, and Bangor, Pa.

The Mineral Spring Ice Company was incorporated under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania on March 8, 1900, with a capital stock of $100,000. The plant, located at No. 56 River Street, has a weekly capacity of two hundred and twenty-five tons of ice. The officers of the company are as follows: John F. Rauch, president; A. C. Graham, vice president; Arnon P. Miller, treasurer; W. J. Semple, secretary. The directors are: John F. Rauch, A. C. Graham, Arnon P. Miller, George W. Rhoda, M. K. Musselman, A. C. Dodson, and Eldredge Wilbur. C. C. Dorn is superintendent.

Among the more recent industries, worthy of more than passing notice, is that of Kurtz Brothers, established April 10, 1894, by Charles F. and John Kurtz. They make a specialty of interior construction and equipment for offices, banks and stores, and also manufacture bar fixtures on an extensive scale. The concern is one of a very few similar ones in this country, nearly all work requiring special design and finish, for which Kurtz Brothers are peculiarly well fitted. Much of the output is manufactured from rare foreign and domestic woods, and finds a ready sale in this as well as many foreign countries. The plant is located along the Monocacy at Union Street, and furnishes employment for about one hundred skilled mechanics.

BANKS.

The Bethlehem Trust Company was organized September 25, 1906, and opened for business May 15, 1907. The banking house was first located on First Avenue, west side, where they erected a substantial modern building at a cost of $20,000. In order to extend the scope of its operations by locating in the business zone, the board of directors bought the lot at the north-west corner of Main and Broad Streets, Bethlehem, and upon it erected a five-story office and bank building during the years 1912 and 1913, at a cost of $100,000. This building is one of the most modern and substantial of its kind in eastern Pennsylvania.

The bank is capitalized at $125,000, and has deposits of $350,000, in addition to a surplus of $30,000. Much credit for the success of this banking institution is due to A. C. Young, its secretary and treasurer.

HOTELS.

The first hotel on the west side was the "Anchor," erected in the early part of the last century at the south-east corner of Main and Canal Streets. The first landlord was Captain George Henry Woehler, who had the honor of entertaining within its walls a distinguished foreign guest, Prince Maximilian of Wied, travelling incog. as Herr von Brennerberg. The hostelry was later conducted by William Neisser and Andrew McCarty, and finally came into the possession of the late Herman Fetter, by whose name it has since been known. In 1889 it was purchased from the Fetter estate by M. C. Fetter, the present owner, who replaced it by the present substantial three-story hotel on the adjacent corner, which he conducted himself for about five years. The present proprietor is W. S. Lobach, Jr.

The Pennsylvania Hotel, erected early in the fifties by George Steinman, and later known as the Keystone House, was conducted successively by George Meitzler, Mr. Barnes, and Jesse Miller. The present owner of the property is Mrs. Bachman, and the landlord is A. R. Woodring.

CHURCHES.

Moravian Chapel.

The first religious activities conducted on the west side, were begun among the canal boatmen who tied up at Bethlehem over Sunday. The movement was started at the instance of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association, and on Oct. 20, 1850, the Rev. William Eberman officiated at the first of a series of services held in a room over Knauss and Borhek's store in old South Bethlehem. Other people living in the vicinity attended these services, and the considerable number of neglected children belonging to these families, and others living further up along the canal, induced him to organize a Sunday school the following year.

In June, 1856, the old Vineyard Street School-house was erected on the west side, and here in 1859, students of the Moravian Theological Seminary held prayer-meetings. On May 6, 1860, a Sunday school was opened with thirty scholars, and this was the beginning of the West Bethlehem Moravian Sunday school. Services were conducted here at stated intervals, and later in the two-story school-house on Spring Street.

The first steps looking to the erection of a regular place for holding services were taken in 1877, when the late Levin J. Krause offered to present a lot for a Sunday school chapel on the Allentown road at the corner of Third Avenue, providing it should be erected within five years. The enterprise was not undertaken, however, until after the expiration of that time. The cornerstone of the building was laid Aug. 26, 1883, and on Jan. 27, 1884, the chapel was dedicated. The bell which in earlier times had been in use on the old Moravian Church, was placed in the belfry on May 27, 1885. Alterations and improvements to the building were made in 1890, and on Jan. 25, 1891, it was formally re-opened.

In 1901, Rev. F. W. Stengel, of Zoar, Minn., accepted a call as first assistant pastor of the Bethlehem Moravian congregation, and assumed the oversight of the West Side chapel. He was succeeded on June 25, 1911, by Rev. William H. Fluck, the present pastor, formerly of York, Pa. Charles H. Rominger is superintendent of the Sunday school, which at the close of the year 1912 had a total enrollment of 245 scholars, and 32 teachers and officers. Fred B. Hartman is the organist.

Trinity Lutheran Church.

As early as 1886 there was a strong sentiment on the part of the Lutheran constituency on the west side, to have a place of worship of its own, and until the spring of 1887 services were conducted from time to time in the Moravian chapel. On July 17, 1887, the organization of a Sunday school with an enrollment of forty-two persons was effected, and permission secured to use the rooms of the Fairview School building for meeting purposes. At a meeting held in the same building on July 29, 1887, a congregation was duly organized. The Rev. G. F. Spieker, D.D., pastor of St. Michael's Lutheran Church, Allentown, presided, and T. Clem Beck officiated as secretary. The following church council was elected: Trustees—William Nickum, Tobias K. Hess, John Frey, William McHose; Deacons—George H. Young, Joseph Goth, Emanuel Engler, George E. Lees, M. B. Harwick, A. Clayton Keim; Treasurer—James Lees. Church Council extended a unanimous call to the Rev. Wm. D. C. Keiter, of Allentown, Pa., who had been ordained in June, 1887. This call was accepted and on Sept. 4, 1887, he was installed as pastor.

On Sept. 10, 1887, the trustees purchased a lot on Third Avenue from George Applegate, for $1,000. Messrs. George H. Young, William Nickum, T. K. Hess, William Walp, and Joseph Goth, were appointed as a building committee, and on October 30, 1887, the cornerstone was laid with impressive services. The first services in the completed edifice were held on Palm Sunday, March 25, 1888. On Good Friday, March 30, 1888, the first class of fifteen persons was confirmed. The formal consecration of the church took place on Sunday, April 8, 1888. Rev. Keiter served as pastor of the congregation until Nov. 9, 1909, when he resigned to accept the office of secretary of the Board of Trustees of Muhlenberg College. A call was extended to Rev. Luther D. Lazarus, of South Bethlehem, who entered upon his labors on January 1, 1910.

The first superintendent of the Sunday School was George H. Young. The present incumbent is Thomas E. Semmel. The organists of the congregation have been Mrs. C. Spiegler, 1887-1900; Mrs. Ada Smith Merkley, 1900-1903; and since May, 1903, I. H. Bartholomew.

Bethany Reformed Church.

On May 20, 1888, some of the members of the Reformed Church living on the west side opened a Sunday school in the Fairview School Building. In 1890 the consistory of Christ Reformed Church, Bethlehem, purchased a lot on Fourth Avenue, whereon a chapel was erected at a cost of $2,400. The corner-stone was laid October 26, 1890, and the following February the Sunday school moved into the new quarters. The formal consecration took place on June 28, 1891, when the name Bethany Chapel was adopted. The first superintendent of the Sunday School was George V. Snyder. On Dec. 11 the same year, a congregation was organized and the following officers elected: Elders—David Hess, M. B. Titlow, Henry J. Schmock, and Augustus De Long; Deacons—William H. Kresge, James White, James Wagner, and Francis Miller; Trustees—Leo A. Stem, James D. Faust, and George V. Snyder. On January 10, 1892, Rev. John F. De Long, of Reading, Pa., was elected pastor and served the congregation until 1897. He was succeeded by Rev. Frank H. Moyer. In 1901 the chapel was moved to the rear of the lot, and in its place a brick edifice of a combined Gothic and Colonial type of architecture erected, at a cost of $8,000. The cornerstone was laid July 28, 1901, and on April 27, 1902, the church was completed. Additions were also made to the chapel, which continued to be used for Sunday School purposes. Rev. Moyer served as pastor of the congregation until 1908, and on Dec. 15, 1908, was succeeded by Rev. E. H. Laubach, who served until March 31, 1911. Rev. H. I. Crow has been the pastor since Sept. 15, 1911. Miss Clara Snyder is the organist of the church, and Robert C. Moll superintendent of the Sunday School.

Olivet United Evangelical Church.

Another church having a strong organization on the west side is the Olivet United Evangelical Church. At present they have in course of erection on Broad Street a beautiful edifice which will be ready for occupancy before the close of the year 1913. Rev. W. H. Christ is the pastor.

SCHOOLS.

The early school history of West Bethlehem for want of exact records is rather obscure. In 1853 the school directors of Hanover township erected a one-story school house on King's Alley, midway between Vineyard and Spring Streets, at a cost of $2,000. The building contained only one room, but answered the purpose for which it had been constructed for more than ten years. About the year 1868 a more modern and commodious two-story school house was erected on Spring Street, and for some unaccountable reason was christened "The Vineyard Street School-house." From a village the community gradually grew into a town, and with the increase in population came a strong sentiment in favor of a ten-months school term. Sessions had previously been held only five months in the year, and when the question of an independent school district came up, it was bitterly opposed by the township directors. The residents of the town finally won out, and secured at the same time the extra school facilities sought. In 1884, after several additions had been made to the Vineyard Street building, the Fairview building was erected on Fourth Avenue. Owen R. Wilt, the present superintendent of the South Bethlehem schools, was elected principal and served about five years. His successor was Principal Huttel, who remained to see several classes graduate. With the incorporation of the borough in 1886, came a better organization of the school system, and in 1887, C. T. Bender was elected principal, with general supervision of all the schools. He served in this capacity until 1904. So rapidly did the town grow that it was very soon again necessary to provide enlarged school facilities, and in 1891 the handsome Higbee School-house was ready for occupancy. After consolidation with Bethlehem borough in 1904, the school districts were merged and are now under the efficient supervision of Superintendent W. C. Sampson.

BETHLEHEM PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

The Bethlehem Preparatory School was founded in 1878 by William Ulrich, Ph.D., a graduate of the University of Berlin, and an officer in the German army during the Franco-Prussian war. Upon the death of Prof. Ulrich, in 1897, Prof. H. A. Foering, B.S., a graduate of Lehigh University, succeeded to the principalship of the school, and so rapidly did the school grow under his efficient management that it was found desirable to remove the school from its old quarters at the corner of New and Cunow Streets, Bethlehem, to its present site on Eighth Avenue, West Bethlehem. Here commodious buildings were erected for class-rooms and living rooms, as well as an up-to-date gymnasium, while outdoor sports were encouraged by the laying out of grounds for football, base-ball and tennis. Among the list of graduates appear the names of many notable men.

CORPORATE HISTORY.

The real growth of the community began with the completion of the Broad Street bridge in 1871, the gorge formed by the Monocasy having served as a natural barrier until the bridge made available for homes the lands on the hill to the west.

The question of incorporating as a Borough was discussed at a meeting of citizens held on March 15, 1886, when a committee was appointed to look into the matter, and ascertain the views of the taxpayers. At a subsequent meeting held on May 4, the committee reported a majority of the citizens as being in favor of the project, and it was decided to proceed at once. The charter became effective on September 16, 1886, and included the district heretofore referred to, known as "Old South Bethlehem." At a borough election held on November 2, Marcus C. Fetter was elected burgess; and William H. Foltz, George W. Grube, Charles T. Hess, Asher Hower, William Mann and William Walp, members of council. Mr. Fetter served as burgess three years, and was succeeded by the late George H. Young for three years. Mr. Fetter again served five years, Leo A. Stem three years, J. A. Eberts three years, and A. C. Huff one year. The last town council of West Bethlehem Borough was composed of the following members: H. D. Snyder, Charles Auer, G. Fred Keller, Joseph R. Craig, Jacob Frankenfield, Frank V. Kleckner, George W. Grube, John M. Herbig, and George H. Olpp.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The first fire department, styled "Monocasy Hose Company," was organized in 1887, and housed in the new municipal building erected on Prospect Avenue. The company has rendered valiant service in fighting the grim fire fiend whenever its services were required, the writer having in mind particularly the fire of March 8, 1897, which destroyed West Bethlehem's first playhouse, the Bijou Theatre; the two fires of November 28, 1907, and February 2, 1908, which completely destroyed the large frame coal sheds at F. B. King's coal yard on Vineyard Street; and still later the plants of the Pure Oil Company and Pettinos Brothers, and more recently the plant of the De Berg Oil Company and the old saw mill property on Sand Island. The disastrous fires enumerated above, all of which occurred in the lower section of the town, prompted the residents of that section to organize a second hose company. At a meeting held on February 7, 1908, at the home of Alvin Garis, No. 97 Lehigh Avenue, an organization was effected. Subsequently the name "Lehigh Hose Company" was adopted, and quarters secured on Vineyard Street, which several years later were destroyed by fire. The company now occupies a new building recently completed for them by the borough.

CONSOLIDATION.

On August 16, 1904, after a corporate existence of eighteen years, West Bethlehem consolidated with Bethlehem proper. The former now comprises the fifth, sixth and seventh wards of Bethlehem borough, represented by the following persons in town council: Fifth ward—William Witmeyer, Claude M. Kresge and Milton T. Knadler; Sixth ward—A. C. Huff, Aaron M. Rush and Robert J. Lilly; Seventh ward—Stanley K. Weaver, John Clark and Samuel F. Happel.

Bethlehem, West Side, in recent years has grown beyond the expectations of any one. On all sides homes are springing up, and before many years the title "City of Homes" may well be applied to what was formerly a quiet village, and at a still earlier period, the lurking place of savage Indians, with hearts breathing vengeance on the peaceful settlers in the mother town on the hill east of the Monocasy.

Many of the foregoing facts, relating to the early history of West Bethlehem are based upon the findings of the late Bishop J. Mortimer Levering, contained in "A History of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, 1741-1892." Bishop Levering possessed qualifications which eminently fitted him for the performance of a task such as the publication of the above work involved, and as custodian of the archives of the Bethlehem Moravian congregation at that time, had access to a veritable storehouse of historical treasures. With painstaking care he delved into the diaries and other manuscript records, and unearthed many a hidden gem of historical worth which posterity might have searched for in vain.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

HANOVER TOWNSHIP.

COMPILED BY WILBUR L. KING.

Hanover township was originally a part of Allen township, which, in 1748, was erected into a separate township by a decree of the Bucks County court upon a petition of numerous inhabitants who settled within its limits down to that period. At the January term of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Northampton County, in the year 1798, petition was made by a number of the people living in the lower part of Allen township for a new township. The court accepted the petition and appointed Samuel Rea, John Barnet, and John Horn to view the territory and report to the court as to the expediency of such a division. The viewers made a report at the August session following, which report, with the action of the court, is here given: "We all three met at the house of Abraham Mensch's on the tenth day of April, 1798, in Allen township but had no time to view the same; therefore agreeable to our report and your order we all three met at the house aforesaid on the fourth day of June, 1798, and reviewed the same township of Allen and think that there were occasion of a Division and have Divided the same, beginning at a stone in the Nazareth township line near the house of John Fogel and thence south sixty-five degrees west one hundred and fifty-two perches to a post and stone at the east side of the river Lehi, twenty perches below Philip Foust's Ferry. A Draft of which return was confirmed, to wit, Aug. 15, 1798, by consent and the lower part of the township which has been struck off and named 'Hanover' by the Court." The name "Hanover" was apparently selected in memory of the former home in the "Fatherland" of German settlers residing in the newly created township.

The greater portion of this township was not settled until long after most of the other townships in the county were settled. The reason for its late occupancy was owing to the fact that the greater part of it was embraced in the "Manor of Fermor" which contained 23,000 acres of its choicest land. This tract had been surveyed, by the Penns, originally for their private use and it was not made subject to public settlement until June, 1795. Previous to that time, however, a considerable number of squatters had settled on portions of the tract. Some of these had located themselves probably as early as 1743. Such occupation was made in spite of the protests of the representatives of the proprietaries who claimed that the land was not open to public entry, as the title was vested in the original proprietors, and not in the state. The applications of the squatters for patents to the land they occupied were also refused by the public land office of the state which seemed to confirm the contention of the proprietaries. In 1779, the Legislature of the state of Pennsylvania passed a law vesting all the estates of the proprietaries in the Commonwealth. A precedent had already been established by the Legislature in a previous act which confiscated the estates of the "Tories" who, during the Revolutionary War, had given sympathy and support to the British side and forfeited them to the use of the Commonwealth.

The Act of 1779 provided compensation for the loss sustained by the proprietaries in consequence of the vesting of the proprietary estates in the state. The act likewise reserved proprietary manors from its operation. The legal question was raised that the Manor of Fermor did not possess the essentials of a proprietary manor, and therefore did not come within the reservation of the act of 1779, and as a consequence the lands embraced by it were subject to public entry, and the squatters on the land contended that they were entitled to patents for the same by paying the price therefor fixed by law. Under these circumstances the proprietaries and their successors were compelled to bring actions of ejectment against the settlers on the land in dispute to determine the question in controversy.

As to what constituted a manor had already been defined by the courts of the United States in the following language: "A manor is a tract of land originally granted as a manor, and let by the proprietor to tenants in perpetuity, for life, in money, services, or in kind." The Manor of Fermor was a part of the general grant by the Crown to William Penn and inherited by Thomas and John Penn, and did not seem to come within the legal definition of a manor, as previously defined, and it was upon these grounds that the settlers defended themselves against the proprietaries, claiming that the lands were vested in the state under the Act of 1779. The occupants were willing to pay for the land occupied by them upon obtaining title thereto but they desired to know to whom the money was to be paid.

The ejectment suits which had been brought in the United States Circuit Court at Philadelphia were reached for trial in June, 1795, a jury was empaneled and sworn, when after a brief parley the litigants agreed upon a settlement, with the assent of the Commonwealth, so that the legal question raised was not judicially determined. The controversy was adjusted in the following manner; each of the litigants paid one-half of the costs and the settlers were to pay for the land at the rate of £65, 10s for every hundred acres. At the value of an English pound at that time in United States money, the land cost the settlers about $1.75 an acre. This agreement was concluded at Easton, June 25, 1795. After the settlement of the ejectment suits, the land of the manor was re-surveyed and divided into one hundred and ninety-six tracts, in acceptance with the several tracts occupied by the settlers.

The territory which was set off in compliance with the petition of 1798 embraced the present townships of Hanover in Lehigh and Northampton counties and the defendants to the ejectment suits of 1795 were settlers in the combined territory. Among the defendants we note the names of Hartzell, Frankenfield, Ritter, Ehrig, Smith, Santee, Johnson and Koehler. The township remained, with its original territory, until the year 1812, when Lehigh county was erected and Hanover township was divided, about two-thirds of its territory being formed into Hanover township in Lehigh county.

Hanover township is the only township in Lehigh county lying east of the Lehigh River. It is bounded on the north and east by Northampton county, on the south by the Lehigh River and Salisbury township and on the west by the Lehigh River and Whitehall township.

The principal streams of the township are the Lehigh River which flows by its western and southern border and the Monocacy creek which separates the township from Northampton county on the east. This creek derived its name from the Indian language, "Monocacy," or "Manoquesy," as it is sometimes spelled, signifying "a stream containing several large bends." The Central Railroad of New Jersey follows the Lehigh River through the township, the Lehigh and New England Railroad runs along its eastern border, and the Lehigh Canal extends within its limits from East Allentown to Bethlehem.

One of the prominent incidences in the early history of provincial Pennsylvania was brought about through the first purchase of land, from the Indians, above the Neshaminy, in Bucks county, made by William Penn through his agent, William Markham, in 1682, and its subsequent extension beyond what was believed by the Indians to be the original boundaries covered by the deed. The encroachments of the settlers into disputed territory made a new understanding desirable and a treaty was therefore held at Durham in 1734, continued at Pennsbury in 1735, and concluded at Philadelphia in August, 1737, in which the limits of the tract, as described in the deed of 1682, were confirmed. It was also arranged to perform the "walk" which was to determine the limits of the land deeded. This resulted in the famous walk of 1737 and known as the "Walking Purchase." Two different routes covered by the walkers have been indicated by various writers. The popular theory, as recorded by Ellis in the "History of Northampton County," published in 1877, states that the route was through Bethlehem and the gap in Moore township. The other route, and no doubt the correct one, is of particular historical interest to the township inasmuch as the route was much further west and passed through Hanover township. This route is briefly stated in Egle's "History of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania," page 967, as follows:

"A map, however, drawn by Thomas Holme, sometime surveyor of the Province, illustrating this historic walk, which, together with other valuable documents bearing on the transaction, was purchased from the heirs of the Penn family, a few years ago, by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, has, once for all put to rest the many erroneous statements extant in books in reference to the day and half day's walk. Setting out from Wrightstown, as was stated, on the morning of the 19th of September, 1737, the walkers pursued a northerly course, keeping along the old Durham road to Durham creek, thence deployed westerly, at about two o'clock P. M., and forded the Lehigh a half mile below Bethlehem, thence walked on in a north-westerly line through the plot of the present borough of Bethlehem, and passing through the north-east angle of Hanover township, Lehigh county, into Allen township, halted at sun-down, not far from the site of Howell's mill on the Hockendauqua."

PIONEER SETTLERS.

Among the pioneer settlers in the township we find some whose descendants are still living within its boundaries; others have left no descendants or have moved to other parts.

In addition to such persons as Clader, Dewalt, Fatzinger, Kurtz, Laubach, Quier, Reichard, Sterner and Yeager, which are noted in the biographical sketches, a number of other early settlers are here noted.

THOMAS ARMSTRONG lived not far from Catauqua on a farm which has since passed into the possession of Samuel Koehler. He was a man of prominence, having held the office of coroner in colonial times, his commission being dated Oct. 4th, 1755. He was an elder of the Presbyterian congregation at the Irish settlement. His wife Margaret survived him. He had four daughters, Jeanne, Mary, Elizabeth, and Margaret, who was the wife of Rev. Robert Russell, sixth pastor of the settlement church. The records do not show that he left any male descendants.

JACOB BAST emigrated from Germany in 1774 with his parents at the age of five. They settled on the east side of Monocacy creek. His son, Jacob, married Polly Clader, daughter of Jacob, and settled near the Clader farm on the road from Bethlehem to Allentown. He died in 1862, aged 82 years. His sons were Jacob, Martin, and John. Jacob settled on the homestead, Martin in Manheim, Lancaster county, and John in Saucon township.

HEINRICH BRADER was an early settler in the present township of Hanover and his brothers, Philip and Laurence, in Hanover township, Northampton county. Heinrich settled on the farm owned by John Mitmar. He had sons among whom were Daniel and George who settled on the homestead and near there. Their descendants are in different parts of the county.

CHRISTIAN YOUNG was a native of Bucks county and came to Hanover about 1800 and opened a store east of the limekilns, on the road from Allentown to Bethlehem. In 1812 he opened the "Black Horse" Tavern, which he kept until his removal to Bucks county about 1818. His sons were Samuel, a physician, Joseph, and William, all residents of Allentown.

The Keiper family, that in 1800 were prominent in the township, are still represented there, but are not as numerous as in the olden time. Charles Ludwig Keiper, born Dec. 15, 1737, died Sept. 9, 1815, settled in what is now Hanover township. He was the son of Carl Ludwig Keiper, who owned a tract of 250 acres in Milford township, valued at the time of his death, in 1753, at £500, which Michael Keiper, the eldest son, purchased. Other children of the senior Keiper were Catherine, wife of Michael Heller, Elizabeth, wife of Christopher Heller, and Mary wife of Daniel Heller. Charles Ludwig Keiper, Jr., married Maria Catherine Ort, who was born March 12, 1737, and died Sept. 17, 1818. They had the following children: Joseph, Abraham, John, Jacob, Catharine, Helena, Anna Elizabeth, Anna Margaret, and Maria Barbara.

The name Knauss appears in 1812. This was John Knauss whose father, Abraham, was born at Emaus in 1754 and married Elizabeth Boeckel in 1780. Abraham Knauss was a Huffschmid (horse shoer) and located in the "Drylands." He died at the age of 82 years in 1836. He had two sons and a daughter, John born 1794, Anna Maria and Anthony. John married Sarah, daughter of Abraham Mensch and settled on a farm near Schoenersville. He had three children, Abraham, Anna M., and John H. Later a John Knauss, a windmill maker, located at Rittersville. He was a Justice of the Peace and died in 1866, aged 71 years. His son Lewis settled in North Whitehall.

PETER KELCHNER was a resident here when the township was erected in 1798. He died July 21, 1848, at the age of 75 years and is buried with his wife Margaret, nee Meyer, at Rittersville. They had sons, John, Joseph and Peter.

JOHN KEIM was a settler near the east line of the township while Hanover was yet a part of Allentown. He was born in 1754 and died in 1815. Many of the family lived to an advanced age. Elizabeth, probably his wife, was born in 1756 and died in 1839, aged 80 years. Both are buried at Schoenersville.

JONATHAN OTT, a native of Germany, purchased 152 acres of land prior to 1800 of George Ervenreider, on the Lehigh river, later owned by A. & S. Keck. He had three sons, Owen, who settled in Allen township, Northampton county; Tilghman, who located in Allentown, and George who remained in the township and a daughter, Mrs. Franklin Butz, of Whitehall.

CHARLES COLVER, a German, settled on a farm near Rittersville, prior to 1781. His sons went west with the exception of Jacob, who married Susanna Miller, settled on a farm at Rittersville, raised a family of eleven children, and died Nov. 20, 1828.

FIRST TAXABLES.—The first assessment roll of the original Hanover township of Northampton county, was made in the year 1799, and contains the names of one hundred and twenty-six free-holders and twenty single freemen. The amount of the tax to be raised was $222.92. Matthias Hummel was the collector. The names here given are of those who resided in the portion set off to Lehigh county in 1812 and are from the assessment list of that year which assessment was made prior to the division of the township.

RESIDENTS OF 1812.

Joseph Abrecht	George Iundt
Jacob Alshouse	George Keck
Jacob Bast	John Keim
Michael Bauer	John Kelchner
Frederick Bearey	Michael Kelchner
Felix Beissell	Nicholas Kreamer
John Beissell	Peter Kelchner
Christian Bechtel	Jacob Keiper
Henry Bicker	John Keiper
Nicholas Bickert	Ludwig Keiper
Nicholas Brang	Joseph Kidd
Henry Brolder	Andrew Kichlin
George Brolder	Philip Kleckner
Jacob Cleder	John Knauss
Jacob Clewell, Sr.	John Artman
John Bunding	George Koch
John Clewell, Sr.	John Keiffer
Charles Colver	Daniel Klaus
Jacob Colver	George Kortz
Isaac Dacker	George Kreidler
William Daniel	Jacob Kruber
Peter Dick	George Laubach
Abraham Diffenderfer	Leonard Laubach
John Edelman	John Lehr
John Ehrhard	David Luckenbach
Peter Ehrett	Peter Minnich
George Ehrig	John Newhard
George Evenreider	Joseph Dewald
Michael Everhard	Peter Ossenbach
Anthony Faas	Elizabeth Quier
Jacob Fatzinger	Daniel Quier
Henry Fatzinger	George Quier
George Faust	Jacob Quier
Henry Frey	George Reichard
Joseph Frey	Michael Reichard
Daniel Gangeware	Henry Reiss
David Gold	George Rockel
Philip Gross	John Rockel
James Hall	Daniel Rohn
John Hall	Christian Young
Christian Hartman	Joseph Scherrer
Christian Houser	Frederick Dieffert
Frederick Heller	Conrad Seiple
Jeremiah Heller	Jacob Seiple
George Heley	John Seiple
Michael Herwich	John Sterner, Sr.
Aaron Hillman	Abraham Sterner
Joseph Daniel, Jr.	Abraham Sterner, Jr.
Jacob Hower	John Sterner, Jr.
Jonathan Hower	Joseph Sterner
John Huber	Philip Strohm
Abraham Huber	Jacob Stuber
George Ising	Isaiah Troxell
Conrad I. Jeager	Henry Vogelmann
Daniel Iundt	John Walter

David Weinland	Peter Ritter
Andrew Zechner	Abraham Smith
Martin Zechner	John Riegler
Abraham Ziegler	John Kain
Mathias Rigel	Jacob Kolb
Abraham Keiper	George Sterner
Joseph Keiper	Peter Evenreiter
Joseph Quer	John Herwig
Frederick Herman	John Fatzinger
John Neuhard	Joseph Sterner
Jacob Neuhard	Abraham Keisser, Sr.
Joseph Cleader	Joseph Keisser
Henry Shnyder	Daniel Reigert
John Kremser	David Gold
William Licht	Isaac Keller
Henry Shoener	John Erd
Daniel Blim	Joseph Bachman
John Andreas	Christian Ritter
John Moore	John Reigle

EARLY ROADS AND BRIDGES.

In 1746, the first unofficial road from Bethlehem to Gnadenhuetten was traced through the woods by John Levering and Shebosh* but it did not prove permanent, as it was soon obstructed by fences. In June of the following year, the Court of Bucks county authorized the laying out of a road which was to extend from Bethlehem to the Gnadenhuetten Moravian Mission, north of the Blue Ridge, now the site of Lehighon, Carbon county. An attempt was made in September, to carry out the order of the court, by Jasper Payne and John Brownfield of Bethlehem, Solomon Jennings and sundry men along the line to establish a convenient and direct course but, on account of unreasonable obstruction set forth by some members of the committee, nothing definite was accomplished. A new committee was appointed by the court who took up the work in November and completed the work. This road was approved by court in March, 1748. It had a total length of twenty-five miles. It was used by the mission until its destruction in 1755 and from that time until 1761 it was used as a military road, after which, for many years, it was practically abandoned.

In the year 1754, the Provincial authorities gave an order to the authorities of Northampton county to lay out a road from Easton to Reading, in the new county of Berks. On Oct. 15, 1755, Justice Horsfield, of Bethlehem, went to Easton, to help lay out "the King's Road to Reading." The road was only partially laid out, however, in this year, and was not completed until several years later. On a map, dated 1761 and published in the history of Bethlehem, the road is shown as passing through Hanover township.

*Shebosh was a white man from Oley. He married an Indian wife and was called by the Indians "Shebosh," meaning running water. He was generally known by his Indian name, although he was baptized by the Moravians as John Joseph Bull.

About 1761 a road was laid out that passed from the Philadelphia road, through Salisbury township, crossed the Lehigh river by a ford on the Geissinger farm near the old house, and passed through what later became Rittersville and Shoenersville, in Hanover township.

At the first term of court, held December, 1812, after the erection of Lehigh county, a petition of the inhabitants of the borough of Northampton was presented, setting forth "that a public road was much needed to commence at a spot fixed by the president, managers, and company for erecting a bridge over the Lehigh River, to proceed in a straight line from thence by the north side of Jacob Clader's house to the road leading from the ferry on the Lehigh to Bethlehem." Viewers were thereupon appointed by the court who made a report which was confirmed. This action was the first taken in reference to roads, both in Lehigh county and Hanover township, by the Lehigh county court and is the route of the road now used from East Allentown to Bethlehem.

The bridge at East Allentown from which the above road commenced was built the same year and stood until 1828 when it was destroyed by fire. It was replaced by another which was carried away by the flood of 1841. It was rebuilt and again, in 1862, destroyed by flood. A temporary structure did service until 1867 when another bridge was built at a cost of about $125,000 which was likewise doomed to destruction by the flood of 1902.

Towards the close of 1791 agitation was started for the erection of a bridge across the Lehigh river at Bethlehem. The ferry had served its day of usefulness and new conditions demanded better facilities for travel. It was not until the third of April, in the following year, that an Act of Assembly authorizing its construction was passed. In the spring of 1794, active operations were started on its construction. On May 12, the woodwork was commenced, hemlock timber, cut in the forests along Panther Creek and floated down the Lehigh river, being used. The bridge was completed September 27th at a cost of $7,800. This bridge, like its successor, built in 1816, was an uncovered one. One of its approaches was on soil now in Hanover township.

On September 6, 1822, the Grand Jury of Lehigh county made a favorable report for a bridge across the Monocacy creek "at Weinlands (now the slaughter house) from the mill to the Allentown road." This was a stone bridge and was largely for the accommodation of the settlers in the township who desired to do business with the grist-mill and tannery on the east side of the stream.

The building of the Broad Street bridge at Bethlehem across the same stream was commenced August, 1870, and completed May 17, 1871. The company was incorporated May 1, 1869. This was a toll bridge until 1887 when it was made a free bridge.

INDUSTRIES.

As has already been stated, the township was originally a part of the Manor of Fermor and in reproach, for the supposedly poor soil and difficulty of securing good crops, was frequently called the "Barrens" or "Drylands." But the fallacy has been exposed and the land is recognized to be as good as any in the state and splendid crops are secured from its acres. The chief occupations of the people are farming, trucking, dairying, and stock raising; and there are also iron works, flour mills, factories, silk mills, brick works, lime kilns, and stone quarries which engage the attention of its inhabitants. Among the various industries only some of the more prominent ones can be more fully noted.

The Roller Smith Company, manufacturers of electrical apparatus, are located on the pike between Rittersville and Bethlehem. This is a New York corporation which was established in New Hampshire in 1909. The main factory building is of brick, eighty by one hundred feet, and two stories high. The brass foundry is a one story building, eighty by twenty feet. Warehouses have also been provided. The company employes about one hundred and fifty people. H. D. Bean is the efficient factory manager.

The firm manufactures electrical measuring instruments, which include volt meters, ammeters, and watt meters, resistance measuring apparatus, circuit breakers, and special switch board protective apparatus of all kinds. They also manufacture the Columbia intergrating Watt meters for both switch board and commercial use.

This concern is a consolidation of the Switch Board Equipment Company of Bethlehem and the Whitney Electrical Instrument Company of Penacook, N. H. The company has recently also taken over the business of the Columbia Meter Company of Indianapolis, Ind.

The Roller Smith Company make a specialty of intricate engineering problems connected with the control or measurement of electricity. The officers of the company are president, F. W. Roller, of East Orange, N. J.; vice president, D. R. Smith, of Stanley, N. Y., and treasurer, P. V. R. Van Wyck, of Summit, N. J.

The firm of Klotz & Bregenzler, manufacturers of silk ribbons, at Rittersville, was organized in January, 1906, with two looms in an old barn located on the Frank Texter farm where they continue until they had nine looms. Owing to the increased demand for their product they erected the present brick factory in the fall of 1907, in Rittersville, and occupied it early in the following year. Ribbons are manufactured exclusively. The concern is made up of Dr. R. B. Klotz and Edwin A. Bregenzer. They have nineteen looms and employ thirty-five people. They are the first industry in Rittersville.

The Central Carriage Works, near West Bethlehem, was established by Cyrus F. Lapp, in 1893. He has carried on the carriage business there to this time, giving employment to as many as eight men.

The Royal Knitting Mill, at Rittersville, located at the corner of the Allentown and Bethlehem pike and Melrose avenue, was established in 1911 by A. S. Knecht and H. W. Reed. They manufacture children's union suits. They employ thirty people and have in use that many machines. They occupy a two story frame building thirty by one hundred feet.

The firm of Hildebrand and Osenbach, manufacturers of half hose, at Rittersville, was established September 1, 1910. The firm have twenty five machines and that many people employed. They are the second industry to establish at Rittersville.

The Manhattan Hotel at Rittersville is now owned by J. Widman & Company and conducted by C. J. Widman. The hotel is a long established stand and was built originally by Michael Ritter. The present proprietor took charge in September, 1907, and succeeded Widman & Brey who took charge in April, 1906. The hotel is conducted along modern plans and has twenty rooms. It is a three story building with large porches all around the house on the first and second floor. The present building was erected in 1896, the one previous to it having been destroyed by fire in February, 1896, and was built of logs. A store and hotel was conducted in the same building. James Smith was proprietor one year and Smith and Huber conducted it six years previous and Cornelius Acker managed it for some years for the Lehigh Valley Traction Company.

The Hotel Hanover at Rittersville was established by Henry J. Moyer in 1893 who carried on the business there until he died June 3, 1899, when Charles Silfies became the proprietor and continued until January 6, 1900, at which time C. L. Werst became his successor. The hotel is located on the south side of the turnpike east from Central Park.

VILLAGES.

NAIN.—This was the earliest village built in the township. It was situated about two miles northwest of Bethlehem and one mile east of Rittersville. This village was built for the converted Indians living at Bethlehem and was projected as an experiment at the suggestion of Count Zinzendorf, of the Moravian Church, and by him named Nain. It was located on land originally belonging to the Benezet estate, which was later known for many years as the George Geissinger farm on the Lehigh, and afterward occupied by Owen Mack. The land was purchased by the Moravians in May, 1757, for the purpose of locating the village. After the site for the village was selected and staked off and the timber cut and removed to Bethlehem for the use of that community it was found that the new highway from Easton to Reading would pass nearby. This was considered very undesirable and, on January 9, 1758, another site on the same farm was selected. By June, the first house was erected and on October 18, 1758, a chapel was dedicated and the village taken possession of by the Indian congregation.

The village was not destined to long life, however, on account of the threatening attitude of the Indians prowling between Bethlehem and the Blue Mountains and the anxiety caused to the settlers in the township. Accusations were also made against certain of the Indians at Nain, and endeavors made to show, that they were implicated in the murder at Stentons. This resulted in a trial being held at Philadelphia and later at Easton. Although acquitted, the Government ordered the removal of the village, the order being received at Bethlehem November 5, 1763. After the removal of the Indians, the houses and chapel were sold at auction and taken down and removed. Several were set up again at Bethlehem.

SHOENERSVILLE.—This village is located about midway between Bethlehem and Catasqua and is on the boundary line between Hanover township, Lehigh county and Hanover township, Northampton county. It derived its name from Adam Shoener who settled there in 1784.

Adam Shoener was born in 1763, came to Northampton county in 1794, and settled in the place that now bears his name. A road at that time passed his house. He opened a tavern called the "Blue Ball" which he kept until about 1837, when he built a brick house near Christ Church, where he lived until his death which occurred October 28, 1849, at the age of eighty-six years. His wife, Catharine, died December 26, 1839, in her sixty-fifth year. They had ten children. Thomas, a son, kept the "Blue Ball" three years after his father retired, then moved beyond the Blue Mountains, where he died in 1853, aged forty-three years. Another son, Abraham, moved into Northampton county and died in 1877, aged seventy-five years.

The "Blue Ball" tavern was opened by Adam Shoener soon after 1794 and was conducted by him till 1837. Thomas Shoener, his son, succeeded him and kept it for three years. It was then kept by Charles Reinsmith, Nathan Larrach and others. In 1850, Jonas Snyder built the present hotel on the other side of the street and in Northampton county, and the "Blue Ball" was discontinued. Cornelius Cressman kept the present hotel which has seventeen large rooms from 1898 until 1905, when E. A. Gable, the present owner, moved into it.

The first store in the village was opened near Christ Church about the year 1825 by Samuel Saylor who came from Easton. He erected a double house near the cemetery lot in which he resided and opened a store which he conducted for thirty years. His son, David O. Saylor, succeeded him and conducted the business until his removal to Allentown in 1860. The store was discontinued between 1860-1870. Soon after the building of the present hotel, in 1850, a store building was erected on the corner opposite the hotel and alongside the old "Blue Ball" tavern. It was opened by Joseph Pierson and John A. Dech. The latter retiring, Richard Snyder became interested in it in 1864. Later he became sole owner and sold it in 1871 to Elias R. Benner, who formed a partnership with Martin Frankenfield under the firm name of Frankenfield & Benner. Later Mr. Benner became sole owner and continued the business until 1899, when he sold it to his son, H. A. Benner, who in 1906, after the death of his father, also acquired the property. He razed the building and upon its site erected the present combined modern store and residence.

The first postmaster in Shoenersville was Samuel Saylor, the office having been opened in his store in 1825. His successor was Richard Snyder who served until December 8, 1875, when E. R. Benner was appointed. His son, H. A. Benner, became the successor and served until the office was discontinued in 1908 due to its patrons being served by rural free delivery from Allentown.

In 1908 the first telephone line was built to the village from Catasauqua.

RITTERSVILLE.—This place is located about midway between Allentown and Bethlehem along the line of the Lehigh Valley Traction Company Railway. It was named after Michael Ritter who came from Northampton County in 1808 and purchased land at this place on which he settled. A tavern had been kept some years when he arrived. He continued same until about 1832 when his son, Charles Ritter, took charge and kept it till 1865. J. Frank Reichart was the landlord from 1869 to 1883. He was succeeded by E. W. Gangewere.

Michael Ritter also opened a store about the year 1825 which he conducted for some years. Others who followed were David Knauss, Henry Moyer, Milton Ritter, and Edwin Osenbach.

The death of Michael Ritter occurred March 17, 1854, when he was seventy-one years of age. He, with a number of his descendants, is buried in the village cemetery. He had four sons,—Charles, Thomas, William, and Franklin, and daughters, Mrs. Walter Huber and Mrs. Henry Moyer. Charles Ritter kept the hotel for many years and was postmaster from 1832 till his death on April 11, 1883. He was seventy-seven years old when he died. Thomas Ritter was seventy-five years old when he died in 1883 and William died in 1888, aged sixty-two years. Franklin Ritter was a school teacher and located in Whitehall township.

A blacksmith shop was built about the year 1822 by Mr. Alshouse. He was succeeded by Jacob Keiper, Joseph Paul and John Roller after which it was discontinued.

In 1868, J. Frank Reichart laid out a race course near Rittersville and in 1872 the Rittersville Park Association was organized. The park was enlarged to sixteen acres and fitted up at a cost of twelve thousand dollars. The grounds were opened up for trotting and pacing in May and August of each year. The land has since passed into the hands of the Lehigh Valley Traction Company.

The largest institution located in Rittersville is the Homeopathic State Hospital for the Insane. The cornerstone was laid with appropriate ceremonies on June 27, 1904. The plot of ground on which the buildings are located includes one hundred and eighty-eight acres and extends in a narrow strip from the Allentown and Bethlehem turnpike to the Lehigh Canal. The hospital with all the buildings included are valued at $1,500,000.

EAST ALLENTOWN.—East Allentown was founded in 1828 on the west side of the Lehigh River at the end of the chain bridge. The land at this point was owned by Jacob Clader who lived in a stone house on the left side of the road leading to Bethlehem. The toll house was on the first pier of the bridge. Jacob Saeger and George Keck purchased from Jacob Clader forty-five acres of land in 1828 and, obtaining a license, converted the stone house into a hotel. A man by the name of Haldman was landlord for a few months and was succeeded by Josiah Rhoads. A small frame building was erected for a store, which having been stocked with goods, was conducted by Jacob Saeger's son, William. After this a large stone tavern was erected on the right side of the road which they conducted for many years. Later it passed to Nathan Baker who sold it to the railroad company who later demolished it. The original stone tavern having been vacated, it was used as a dwelling until it too was bought by the railroad and razed. The stone house now used for a depot by the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad was erected soon after 1830 and the store was also moved into it. In 1832, Saeger & Keck built a stone and brick grist mill on the bank of the canal. The mill was run from 1833 to 1837 by Solomon Keck, son of George, and Charles and William Saeger, sons of Jacob, after which they bought the mill, a stone dwelling for the miller, and six acres of land adjoining eastward. In 1850, C. L. & A. S. Keck opened the lumber-yard boating and ran it until 1854, when the lumber-yard boating, grist mill, store, and a store at White Haven were all consolidated into one business. In 1856 it was again divided, C. L. & A. S. Keck taking the lumber yard and William Saeger and son, Alfred, taking the store and mill.

Lime was burned and stone quarried on the left side of the road by the Claders before 1829. Lime has also been burned many years farther out on the Bethlehem road by John Clader and, about 1850, John Trexler & Sons commenced the business. About 1862-63 Tilgham Dorney put up small works and commenced the manufacture of fire bricks. The property passed through several changes and was later in the possession of Joseph Downing.

East Allentown, long a suburb of Allentown, developed into a thriving community. Its interests being so closely identified with its bordering city, made a closer union desirable and in the fall of 1912 it was consolidated and became a part of Allentown.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES.

CHRIST CHURCH.—The oldest church organization in the township is Christ Church located at Shoenersville. This church was organized in the year 1779 as a Lutheran and German Reformed Union Church by the Rev. Johann Friederich Ernest, a Lutheran pastor, and the Rev. Mr. Gross, a German Reformed pastor. Soon after the organization, efforts were made to erect a suitable house of worship. With this end in view, a plot of ground containing three acres and twenty-two rods, which was admeasured to George Newhard and Philip Stuber and Balzer Rochel was purchased April 10, 1779, upon which to erect a union meeting house.

After certain conditions of union had been agreed upon by both congregations, a building committee was chosen. Peter Beisel and Jacob Gloeter (Clader) were elected on the Reformed side and Nicholas Sterner and Valentine Waldman by the Lutherans. The building was begun March 5, 1780, and sufficiently completed to conduct services by the autumn of 1781. The church was dedicated and named "Zion's Church" by Rev. Wack.

CHRIST UNION CHURCH, SHOENERSVILLE.

Title to the tract of three acres and twenty perches was given for £2, 17s, 11d., on November 5, 1801, by John and Richard Penn through their attorney, John R. Coates, to Casper Ritter, of Hanover township, trustee for the Lutheran congregation and Peter Beisel, of Allen township, trustee for the Reformed congregation. On this tract the log church was built and the two congregations worshiped therein until the year 1819 when a second church, a stone structure, was erected. The cornerstone was laid on Ascension Day, May 20, in that year, and the edifice was dedicated on the following Christmas. This church was built on ground purchased by George Brader and George Schaeffer, trustees of Zion's Church of Hanover township, for $166.25, and comprising a tract of only one hundred and thirty-three perches. On August 13, 1828, another tract of ninety-two perches was purchased from Peter Koehler by George Jung (Young) and Peter Kelchner, trustees of Christ Church for $34.50. The fourth purchase was the ground lying south of the present brick church, comprising nine and seven-tenths perches for one dollar. The parties granting the deed to Owen Ritter, Milton Kurtz, and Martin Zellner, trustees of Christ Church, were George Deily, Francis Deily, Sarah Deily, Samuel Colver, Robert J.

ed him and served six years and was followed by Rev. Mr. Van Der Sloot who remained until 1811 when Rev. Charles C. Becker was called. He served until his death in 1858. His son Cyrus Becker served until 1902 and was succeeded by Rev. F. A. Guth, who continued until 1911, since which time Rev. J. S. Bartholomew has been the pastor.

The Lutheran congregation has been under the charge of the following pastors: Rev. Johann Frederich Ernest, 1780-1792; Rev. George Joseph Wichterman, 1792-1793; Rev. John Conrad Yeager, 1793-1832; Joshua Yeager, 1832-1885; Rev. A. R. Horne, 1885-1902; Rev. E. H. Eb-

THE ORIGINAL ST. PETER'S UNION CHURCH.

Yeager, Clara Deily, John Kent, D. W. Levan, Mary Kent, and E. Ford Kent. The deed bears the date March 30, 1883.

The stone church answered the needs of the congregation until 1872, when it was torn down, and on May 26, 1872, the cornerstone of the present brick church was laid. It was completed at a cost of about $17,000. The first organ used by the congregation was purchased July 19, 1795, for £90. John Daniel Young, then a school teacher, was the first person to play it. The Sunday school was organized in 1845.

The German Reformed pastors who have served the congregation are as follows: Rev. Mr. Gross, 1784-1794; Rev. Mr. Hoffmeier succeeded him, 1794-1804; Rev. A. O. Ebert, 1804-1806; Rev. I. B. Ritter, 1806 to the present time.

ST. PETER'S UNION CHURCH at Rittersville, was organized in 1842 by members of Christ Church at Shoenersville, who resided at Rittersville. The population had materially increased in the section about Rittersville and as it was inconvenient for the members to go to their church, a necessity was felt for a church in their vicinity. A meeting was therefore held on the second Tuesday in January, 1842, at the home of Michael Ritter when steps were taken to build a church if possible. An organization was effected and Jacob Bast, Michael Ritter, and Solomon Flores were appointed a committee to locate a suitable tract of ground on which to erect a church building and lay out a cemetery. A plot of ground was purchased for thirty dollars from Thomas Ritter and a brick church built on same. The cornerstone was laid May 8, 1842. The church has since been used jointly by the Reformed and Lutheran congregations.

The Reformed pastors who have served the church are as follows: Rev. J. S. Dubbs, 1842-1856; Rev. D. F. Brendle, 1856-1865; Rev. I. K. Loos, 1866-1889; Rev. Tobias Kessler, 1889-1892; Rev. J. De Long, 1892-1900; Rev. W. H. Erb and Rev. T. O. Stern (supply), 1900-1902; Rev. F. A. Moyer, 1902-1905; Rev. F. A. Guth, 1905-1911; Rev. J. S. Bartholomew, 1911 to present time.

The Lutheran congregation had as pastor Rev. Joshua Yeager, 1842-1887; Rev. A. R. Horne, 1887-1903; Rev. E. H. Eberts, 1903-1904; Rev. A. O. Eberts, 1904-1906; Rev. I. B. Ritter, 1906 to the present time.

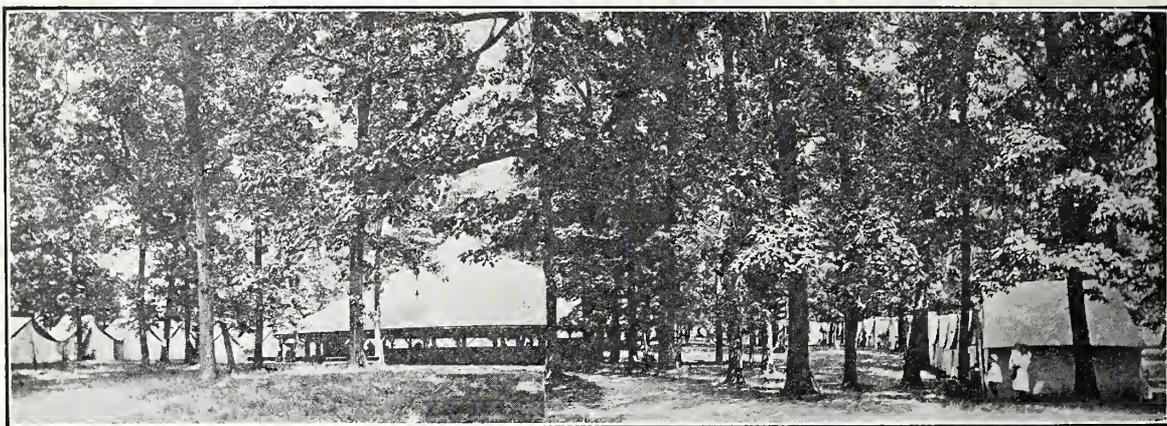

BEULAH PARK CAMP MEETING ASSOCIATION.
—Beulah Park is located east of Allentown in Hanover township, along the Allentown and also a well, one hundred and fifty-six feet deep, of excellent water.

The first campmeeting was held from July 2-13, 1897, under the auspices of the above association. The meeting was in charge of the Rev. T. L. Wieand, Bishop T. Bowman, Bishop S. Breyfogel, and the Rev. B. F. Bohner. This meeting was held in the open air and special workers from distant points had been engaged for the occasion. The meetings have grown in interest and importance from year to year.

In 1904 the corporation name was changed to Beulah Park Camp Meeting Association and its control vested in fifteen members, namely, T. L. Wieand, W. H. Bache, H. C. Snyder, M. A. Biehm, Edward Simonson, Clara Boyd, Harvey J. Wieand, C. P. Combs, C. A. McGuirl, Ralph Wieand, Oliver Wieand, E. C. Krapf, Mrs. D. E. Newell, Mrs. Anna Gregory and J. B. Matlack.

The present officers of the association are T. L. Wieand, president and treasurer, of Allentown; W. H. Bache, vice-president, of Bound Brook, BEULAH PARK, RITTERSVILLE.

Bethlehem trolley road, near Rittersville. The park covers ten acres of ground. These acres were sold to a number of individuals to whom the venture proved difficult and expensive in the beginning. The first organization was effected October 25, 1897, under the corporate name known as the Pennsylvania Holiness Camp Meeting Association. The directors were T. L. Wieand, L. P. Peters, Harvey J. Wieand, Frank J. Roberts, and O. H. Wieand. The association has a capitalization of $25,000. The improvements of the park consist of eight permanent buildings as follows: a pavillion which seats fifteen hundred people, a dormitory which has thirty-six rooms, a large dining hall, and cottages

N. J., and J. B. Matlack, secretary, of Malvern, Pennsylvania.

The beginning of the association was started under difficulties but these were gradually overcome as the value and usefulness of Beulah Park came to be recognized. The association is interdenominational and they teach a doctrine of Holiness and entire sanctification as a second definite work of grace, as taught by the Pentecostal churches of the Nazarene, and as it was taught by John and Charles Wesley of the Methodist church and as other Methodistic churches teach it. The Evangelical Association also holds its annual campmeeting in this park. The meetings are usually well attended and prove full of interest.

CEMETERIES.

The cemeteries at Christ Church at Shoenersville has been in use since the organization of the church in 1780. In this cemetery many of the early settlers of Lehigh and Northampton Counties have found a resting place. The earliest death record is that of Anna M. Kleckner, who died December 10, 1789, aged twenty-three years. After 1865, steps were taken to start a new cemetery. An organization was effected which was called the Shoenersville Cemetery Association and two acres of land were purchased of Samuel Saylor. This land joined the old cemetery. Lots were laid out, trees planted and the place was ready for use in January, 1866. Mrs. Jacob Reichert was the first to be buried there. More than one thousand and five hundred interments have been made in the old and new cemetery. The grounds are well kept and the cemetery bears evidence of care and attention.

The cemetery of St. Peter's Union Church at Rittersville was laid out at the same time that the church was organized, in 1842. The present grounds were opened in the spring of 1859. The cemetery is well kept and has furnished the resting place for nearly a thousand persons.

Another cemetery exists within the limits of the township, although no graves are marked and no records were kept of the burials. This spot is on the hillside along the west bank of Monocacy creek at Bethlehem. During the Revolutionary War a large number of soldiers were brought to Bethlehem where hospital quarters were established. During this time, 1777-8, a large number died from a malignant putrid fever, as many as five, six and even a dozen in one night. These were buried in trenches on the hillside by the Monocacy. It is estimated that about five hundred were so buried of which the names of only fourteen soldiers are known.

SCHOOLS.

The earliest schools in the township were located at Shoenersville, Rittersville, and West Bethlehem. They were subscription schools and conducted, as a rule, during the winter months for four or five months only. Instructions were in the German language.

At Shoenersville school was first taught by a Mr. Bibinghouse about the year 1800. He later studied theology and became a minister of the German Reformed Church. His successor was Frederick Holey. The school was kept in a log house erected for the purpose on the church lot belonging to Christ Church and was conducted as a church school. About 1827-28 a brick school house was erected and an English school established. John D. Lawall taught in this school about seventy-five years ago and Owen Leopold taught for five terms from 1850-55 and later entered the ministry. The teacher's desk used at that time is still in use in the school or lecture room of the frame house adjoining the church. On May 1, 1888, a plot of land was purchased from Isaac Treible and a new school house erected thereon.

At Rittersville a school house was erected about 1812 and school was kept there irregularly until Hanover accepted the school law of 1834. A new school house was then built which served the purpose until about 1850 when the two story brick school house was erected. In 1907 it was rebuilt. A school house was also built about 1845 near the home of Peter Kichline and was known as "Kichline's school house." This is located north of the Bethlehem turnpike and northeast of Rittersville.

COTTAGE OF T. L. WIEAND, BEULAH PARK.

Bast's school house, originally located on the north side of the pike between Rittersville and East Allentown, was built in 1838, a lot having been donated by Abram Fatzinger on October 13 of that year for the purpose. This was an old fashioned school with the backs of the scholars' desks facing the teacher's desk in the center of the room, the seats being arranged in a semi-circle. It was a story and a half stone building. On April 1, 1887, a lot was purchased from Daniel Fatzinger on the opposite side of the pike and a new building erected. The directors at the time were E. T. Osenbach, Franklin Texter, Asa Rohn, Edward Lilly, Richard Breder, and Jonathan Weisel. An additional piece of ground was purchased in July 12, 1893, adjoining the school, and another room was added to the building in 1910.

Keiper's school house is located on the old Allentown road east of Rittersville. This was named after Samuel Keiper by whom the ground was donated June 21, 1894, to the school district of Hanover on which to erect a school house. It is a one story brick building.

The school house at East Allentown was built in 1869 on ground purchased from William Saeger on the thirtieth of August of that year. It was a two story brick building. It was rebuilt in 1904 and additions made to it in 1907 and 1909.

The Koehler's school house, near Catasaqua, was originally situated on the east side of the road leading to that town. It was built many years ago on land donated by Samuel Koehler, Sr., from which fact it derived its name. The children from Catasaqua were required to attend school in this building when it was first used. On August 27, 1897, a new plot of ground was purchased from the estate of Samuel Koehler on the west side of the road and a new building erected.

Hanover township, with Allentown, has the distinction of accepting the school law of 1834 in the same year in which it became a law while the other townships in the county rejected it. This fact is commendable, especially so in view of the strenuous opposition to the law in some quarters. In the year 1834, Lehigh county paid Hanover school district for the education of the poor under the act of March 29, 1824, the sum of $108.24. In 1870, the school reports state that "Hanover, in 1869, furnished one of its new buildings with patent desks, the first, strictly speaking, country school house thus supplied in the county, the others having similar furniture being in, or attached to, villages." In 1860, we are further informed, "Hanover was the only district whose schools were monthly visited by a district superintendent."

In 1855 Hanover township had eight schools, eight teachers, and 384 pupils. The township received for school purposes $1,350 and paid out $1,560. The school appropriation was $162.50. The directors were Samuel Breder, president; C. L. Bush, secretary; Timothy Weiss, treasurer. In 1877, Hanover had ten schools and 548 scholars in 1883 there were eleven schools and 321 scholars and in West Bethlehem five schools and 316 pupils.

At the present time, there are six schools in the township, namely Shoenersville, Rittersville, Keipers, Kichline, Bast and Koehlers. The 472 pupils enrolled are instructed by thirteen teachers. The school appropriation for the district in 1913 is $3,534.54, the income from all sources $16,129.15 and the expenditures for all purposes $16, 205.66. The school board consists of Harvey Osenbach, president; William H. F. Eberhard, vice-president; Dr. Victor J. Gangewere, treasurer; John Brophy, secretary, and Harry A. Bennger.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—Prior to 1840 the justices having jurisdiction over this territory were elected in districts, and there names will be found in the civil list of the history.

Henry R. Hillman,.....	commissioned	April 14,	1840
Samuel Saylor,.....	commissioned	April 14,	1840
Michael Ritter,.....	commissioned	April 11,	1843
Samuel Saylor,.....	commissioned	April 15,	1845
Michael Ritter,.....	commissioned	April 11,	1848
George Frederick,.....	commissioned	April 9,	1850
Michael Ritter,.....	commissioned	April 13,	1852
Tobias Sterner,.....	commissioned	April 11,	1854
Levin A. Miksch,.....	commissioned	April 10,	1855
Jacob E. Bogh,.....	commissioned	April 28,	1856
Levin A. Miksch,.....	commissioned	April 10,	1860
Edmund F. Tice,.....	commissioned	April 10,	1860
John Osman,.....	commissioned	April 15,	1862
Charles Kreager,.....	commissioned	April 11,	1865
Levi Overholtzer,.....	commissioned	April 17,	1866
Thomas F. Laubach,...	commissioned	April 9,	1867
John Osman,.....	commissioned	April 14,	1868
H. W. F. Eberhard,...	commissioned	April 13,	1869
Henry C. Moyer,.....	commissioned	April 15,	1873
J. R. Hottenstein,....	commissioned	March 19,	1877
Henry C. Moyer,.....	commissioned	March 25,	1878
Jedediah H. Weiss,....	commissioned	April 9,	1881
Henry C. Moyer,.....	commissioned	April 6,	1881
Henry C. Moyer,.....	commissioned	———,	1883
J. H. H. Hendricks,...	commissioned	———,	1886
Ferdinand Hoehle (did not take up com.)		———,	1887
George O. Houser,....	commissioned	———,	1888
J. H. H. Hendricks,...	commissioned	———,	1891
John Brophy,.....	commissioned	———,	1893
J. H. H. Hendricks,...	commissioned	———,	1896
John Brophy,.....	commissioned	———,	1898
J. H. H. Hendricks,...	commissioned	———,	1901
John Brophy,.....	commissioned	———,	1903
J. H. H. Hendricks,...	commissioned	———,	1906
John Brophy,.....	commissioned	———,	1908
J. A. Hendricks,.....	commissioned	———,	1910

POPULATION.—The growth of the population of Hanover township is shown in the following table:

1752	200	1870	2804
1820	866	1880	3813
1830	1102	1890	2863 ^A
1840	1478	1900	3324
1850	1762	1910	3907 ^B
1860	2380

The assessor's returns for the year 1913 show 1,480 freeholders, 367 tenants, and 1,934 single men, property exempt from taxation, $228,500; assessed valuation, $181,310; total valuation $1,525,125; 5,817 acres of cleared land; 28 acres timber land, 371 horses and 386 cows.

^A West Bethlehem was incorporated in 1880 as a separate borough.

^B Part of Hanover township was annexed to Catasaqua borough in 1909.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

HEIDELBERG TOWNSHIP.

ERECTION.—The territory now comprised in the townships of Heidelberg, Lynn, and Washington was known prior to 1752 as Heidelberg District. On the 16th of June following the organization of Northampton county (which was effected in March of the same year), a petition was received by the first Court, upon which the following was indorsed:

"The petition of a number of inhabitants settled in the back parts of Heidelberg and Macungie, praying that they ought to be formed into a township, was allowed, and Mr. Scull, surveyor of the county, to measure out the same."

"A draught and return of Heidelberg township, under the head of David Schultz, surveyor, was allowed and ordered to be recorded."

The first official act in recognition of Heidelberg as a township was made at the October term of Court in 1752, when Conrad Blose was appointed constable; Jacob Bainter, his successor, was appointed Sept. 16, 1755.

Lynn was set off from Heidelberg the same year, but Heidelberg for almost a hundred years comprised in addition to its present territory that which is now included in Washington.

The area of the township, until 1847, was about 51.8 square miles, or 33,000 acres; then it was reduced to 26.3 miles or 17,000 acres.

DIVISION OF TOWNSHIP.—For some time prior to 1847, the project of dividing the township was agitated among its residents, and in May of that year the following petition was drawn up, circulated, and presented to the court:

"To the honourable the judges of the Court of Common Pleas of the county of Lehigh, now composing and holding a Court of General Quarter Session of the Peace in and for the said county at the May Term, A. D. 1874.

"The petition of the undersigned citizens of the township of Heidelberg, in said county, respectfully sheweth,—

"That the said township of Heidelberg is uncommonly large for all township purposes, inasmuch as the supervisors of the public highways we find it exactly inconvenient to keep all the roads in repair and to attend to various duties. It is also extremely inconvenient for the citizens of said township to attend general and township elections and other meetings on account of the great distance. Many of them are unable to travel that distance, etc.

"Your petitioners would therefore pray your honors to appoint three competent and respectable men to inquire into the expediency of dividing the said township into two parts, as nearly equal as may be, to a line commencing at a point in or near the middle of the Blue Mountain, on the line of East Penn township, Carbon Co.; thence running to some point on the line of or between the township of North Whitehall and Low Hill, Lehigh Co. And they will pray, etc.

Michael Rehrig.
George Rehrig.
William Roberts.
Ellis Morris.
William Roberts.
John Roberts Berlde.
David Williams (B).
Jacob Remely.
Jacob F. Hailer.
John Remely.
Daniel Ritter.
Stephen Kern.
Dennis Hunsicker.
Charles Kern.
Daniel Remely.
Daniel Breyfogel.
Nathan German, Sr.
Henry Smith.
Jonas Bock.
Owen Hunsicker.
Wilhelm Ebbert.
Frederick Leffler.
Joel Ross.
Nathan German.
Josiah German.
Henry Clauss.
William W. Ereus.
Robert Roberts.
John S. Williams.
Rice Owens.
Daniel Acanol.
Richard Hughes.
Robert Jones.
David Peter.
John Ree.
Daniel Schleicher.
Elias Bittner.
John Kruw.
Reuben Peter.
Daniel Fink, Jr.
Daniel German.
David Ross.
Nathan Weaver.
John Heil.
Jacob Holban.
John Peter.
Nicholas Kern.
Daniel Kern.
John Kreitz.
Jonas Kern.
Joseph German.
John Frederick.
John Wasmer.
Charles Dornard.

Solomon Moyer.
Owen German.
Abraham Reidy.
Henry Loeser.
Adam German, Jr.
Henry Snyder.
Andrew Muth.
Nathan Hastis.
Owen Jones.
Monases Snyder.
Benjamin Lerau.
Charles Peter.
Casper Shutt.
John Walls.
George Ree, Esq.
Daniel Saeger.
John Reppert.
Jeret Snyder.
Reuben Kern.
Charles Engle.
Charles Shafer.
Jacob Eisenbower.
Elias Williams.
Isaac Moyer.
R. M. Jones.
Richard T. Jones.
Griffith Davis.
Henry Perry.
Henry Fink.
John Reppert.
Joseph Peter.
David Kern.
Henry Stemler.
John Ritter.
George Wert.
Gabriel Kern.
Levi Reppert.
David T. Druckenmiller.
Christian Riess.
Samuel Pauley.
Wilhelm Moyer.
Frank Faber.
Emanuel Moyer.
Esra Moyer.
Abraham Reppert.
Daniel Paulus.
Reuben Wert.
Nicholas Wert.
Stephen Wert.
Dobias Wert.
Abraham Roberts.
Stephen Rex.
Jonas Peter.
Daniel Dornard.

John Rex.
Charles Newha.
Jonas Peter.
Daniel Peter.
Abraham Neff
Joseph Blass.
Jeremiah Leutz.

John Reit.
William Leutz, Sr.
Daniel Newhard.
Jonas Peter.
Thomas Peter.
Levi German.
William Ebart.

Peter Frantz, Jr., April 26, 1769..... 123
Francis Gilpner, Nov. 28, 1743..... 97
Peter Grawall, Aug. 26, 1748..... 179
Adam Germon, Nov. 16, 1786..... 14
Adam Germon, Nov. 16, 1786..... 101
Adam Germon, April 17, 1792..... 15
Adam Germon, April 17, 1792..... 36
Henry Geiger, Oct. 25, 1765..... 46
Francis Giltner, May 21, 1766..... 109
Frederick Giltner, June 27, 1768..... 105
Jacob Goltner, Feb. 1, 1769..... 77
Joseph Garber, April 27, 1769..... 53
Henry Hauser, April 25, 1744..... 167
Henry Hoffman, Jan. 20, 1749..... 108
Michael Hevoner, March 30, 1750..... 139
Michael Hiskey, Aug. 21, 1754..... 61
John Handwerk, Nov. 9, 1768..... 57
Elizabeth Hoffman, Nov. 30, 1765..... 16
Nicholas Handwerk, Aug. 12, 1766..... 110
Peter Herger, Nov. 4, 1766..... 35
Henry Hair, Sept. 30, 1767..... 29
George Hafe, Jan. 2, 1769..... 29
Martin Koogher, Nov. 5, 1747..... 114
Frederick Kern, May 4, 1748..... 149
George Knedler, Oct. 31, 1753..... 134
John Kuntz, Nov. 17, 1790..... 7
Johannes Kunkle, Oct. 29, 1766..... 91
Michael Kunkle, Oct. 29, 1766..... 41
John Kern, March 27, 1769..... 370
John Lap, Feb. 4, 1752..... 58
John Lap, Feb. 4, 1752..... 123
Robert Levers, Aug. 23, 1774..... 1
Christian Lanahner, April 24, 1775..... 77
John Lintz, April 17, 1792..... 53
Christian Langenohr, Jan. 30, 1769..... 55
Jacob Mowrer, Dec. 15, 1743..... 33
Jacob Mowrer, Dec. 15, 1743..... 182
Jacob Mowrer, May 15, 1745..... 33
Jacob Moyer, March 24, 1749..... 100
Jacob Moyer, Dec. 6, 1749..... 100
Peter Miller, April 6, 1749..... 67
Peter Messimer, Dec. 31, 1773..... 38
Conrad Marms, Dec. 5, 1757..... 92
Felix Mantisingler, Oct. 12 1753..... 34
Peter Missemmer, Dec. 14, 1753..... 174
Peter Missemmer, Dec. 31, 1773..... 38
Peter Musgenong, March 20, 1787..... 18
Conrad Miller, May 10, 1766..... 90
Peter Missemmer, Aug. 12, 1766..... 32
George Meal, March 4, 1768..... 59
Ulrich Nafe, May 26, 1746..... 147
George Nyeheart, May 30, 1750..... 112
Ulrich Nefe, Nov. 6, 1751..... 103
Ulrich Nefe, Aug. 5, 1765..... 19
Ulrich Nefe, Nov. 29, 1766..... 75
Ulrich Henry Neff, Nov. 29, 1766..... 30
Henry Oswald, Jan. 31, 1749..... 63
Michael Ohl, Aug. 20, 1765..... 30
Michael and Henry Ohl, Sept. 21, 1765..... 55
Michael Ohl, Sept. 21, 1765..... 70
Jacob Arndt, Nov. 12, 1766..... 32
Henry Polinger, Dec. 7, 1748..... 107
Charles Pennington, June 10, 1749..... 194
Jacob Peter, March 12, 1752..... 31
Rudolph Peter, Jan 28, 1754..... 74
Elias Painter, Aug. 22, 1758..... 170
Adam Reeder, Aug. 5, 1752..... 27
Peter Reege, July 20, 1753..... 47
John Rhoads, Oct. 31, 1753..... 181
John Rockel, Feb. 10, 1755..... 112
William Rex, Oct. 25, 1755..... 86

“LEHIGH COUNTY, ss.

“I, J. D. Lawall, clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace of Lehigh County, do certify that the foregoing is a correct and true copy of a petition presented to our said court at May session last past for the division of Heidelberg township, as the same remains on file in said office. Witness my hand and seal of office this first day of September, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven.

“J. D. LAWALL, Clerk.”

Jesse Samuels, Benjamin Fogel, and Charles Sheimer were appointed by the Court as commissioners to inquire into the expediency of making the requested division. They reported that on the 16th of August, 1847, they met at the house of Charles and David Peter, in Heidelberg, and made the division desired,—that is, they set off the township now known as Washington, but then named “Dallas.”¹

LAND WARRANTS.—Following is a list of the land warrants located in the township, with the dates of their issuance, names of persons to whom granted, and number of acres taken up by each. The list shows the names of the early settlers, but the dates cannot be considered as indicating the year when they came into the country, for, as a rule, the pioneers did not obtain their warrants until several years had elapsed from the time of their arrival.

WARRANTEES.

	Acres.
Jacob Arndt, June 14, 1765.....	61
Andrew Martin, Aug. 26, 1766.....	104
Andrew Martin, Aug. 26, 1766.....	67
Jacob Arndt, Nov. 12, 1766.....	32
Jacob Colter, March 5, 1753.....	134
Andrew Climer, Dec. 3, 1767.....	2
Henry Deel, Aug. 13, 1765.....	15
Jacob Daubenspeck, May 14, 1765.....	68
Tobias Eberth, Sept. 18, 1767.....	10
John Eberth, Oct. 26, 1768.....	15
Leonard Foot, Oct. 30, 1745.....	114
Henry Francis, May 10, 1748.....	41
Henry Frey, Jan. 26, 1749.....	64
Leonard Fahr, June 6, 1753.....	129
Philip Fiddler, Aug. 28, 1758.....	36
Henry Frantz, Nov. 14, 1758.....	299
Leonard Fahr, Feb. 26, 1766.....	119
Johannes Feller, Aug. 25, 1765.....	104
Christopher Fahr, Dec. 3, 1765.....	37
Peter Frantz, April 3, 1767.....	34
John Frey, May 18, 1768.....	25
Jacob Frey, May 18, 1768.....	33

¹ See history of Washington township for a fuller account of this action, and also for a description of the eastern boundary of the present Heidelberg.

Charles Ross, Oct. 6, 1755.....	103
Peter Raigh, March 9, 1759.....	24
Michael Ramilie, Aug. 5, 1765.....	32
John Ruckle, Aug. 10, 1765.....	28
Peter Ruch, Oct. 24, 1765.....	38
Jacob Reedy, May 14, 1766.....	47
John Rumpel, Aug. 6, 1766.....	49
Jacob Reedy, Aug. 7, 1766.....	65
Conrad Reedy, Sept. 24, 1767.....	48
Henry Reinhart, Nov. 12, 1767.....	85
Andrew Shitler, June 14, 1745.....	107
Frederick Sneider, Oct. 2, 1746.....	44
Melchoir Sholtz, Nov. 3, 1748.....	34
Daniel Sneider, Jan. 24, 1749.....	98
Daniel Sneider, Jan. 25, 1749.....	25
George Siegler, April 17, 1750.....	161
Frederick Schneider, Feb. 6, 1752.....	38
Frederick Schneider, Feb. 6, 1752.....	33
Lawrance Simon, June 6, 1753.....	52
William Silfeers, Aug. 29, 1753.....	45
George Lina, April 17, 1754.....	118
Frederick Schneider, Nov. 13, 1754.....	26
Tecter Seidler, Nov. 13, 1754.....	224
Melchoir Seidler, Nov. 6, 1758.....	34
Melchoir Seidler, Nov. 27, 1758.....	21
Frederick Schneider, June 14, 1765.....	20
Christian Smith, Oct. 21, 1772.....	62
Christian Smidt, Nov. 5, 1765.....	38
Christian Smidt, Nov. 5, 1765.....	90
Henry Smith, May 29, 1766.....	110
Henry Smith, May 29, 1766.....	13
Frederick Snyder, Aug 7, 1766.....	27
Frederick Snyder, Nov 11, 1766.....	44
Adam Staat, Dec. 22, 1766.....	55
Frederick Snyder, April 8, 1767.....	62
Philip Lehr, April 18, 1767.....	150
Henry Smith, April 28, 1767.....	17
Jacob Traubespeck, Sept. 16, 1747.....	197
George Welger, March 21, 1743.....	51
George Welger, Nov. 28, 1743.....	84
Jacob Weaver, Nov. 2, 1744.....	171
Philip Waugheman, April 18, 1747.....	154
John Weaver, Sept. 21, 1748.....	103
George Welger, Dec. 18, 1749.....	46
Jacob Weaver, Feb. 19, 1750.....	23
Simon Wehr, Oct. 3, 1753.....	161
Peter Woodring, Sept. 26, 1758.....	138
Simon Wehr, April 6, 1787.....	60
Casper Weaver, Aug. 6, 1766.....	90
Leonard Wasson, Aug. 7, 1766.....	50
Simon Wehr, Aug. 15, 1767.....	25
John Yeager, Aug. 29, 1758.....	46
George Ziegler, Sept. 30, 1751.....	86

France Güldner,....		Carle Ruppert,....	7
John Graus,.....	12	Geo. Remely,....	7
John Grum,.....	4	Michael Remely,....	5
Martin Greider,....	5	George Rex,.....	32
John Gunckel,.....	7	Jacob Rex,.....	22
Jacob Housemen,..	9	William Rex,.....	13
John Huntzisker,(?)	15	John Reber,.....	7
Michael Hoffman (?)		Charles Ross,	6
Andreas Holtz,....	11	John Rumpel,.....	7
George Hand,	6	Henry Reader,	4
John Handwerk,....	8	Simon Rearich,....	5
Nichs. Handwerk,..	14	Peter Rear,.....	7
Peter Handwerk,..	6	John Rockel,.....	5
Jacob Hock,	4	Henry Reinhard,..	5
Christian Hauman,..	4	John Reinsmith,..	5
John Kern,.....	13	Adam Reader,.....	5
William Kern,.....	20	Frederick Shnyder,.	14
Frederick Kern,..	10	Casper Shnerr,....	8
Henry Kern,	4	Wm. Silvius,.....	12
Andreas Knedlerr,..	9	George Spar,.....	7
John Keck,.....	8	Christian Smith,....	6
Peter Kocher,.....	6	Geo. Shellhammer,.	8
Conrad Lintz,.....	9	Melchert Seidel,..	7
Christian Lauche-		Lawrence Simon,..	9
nohr,	6	Martin Shick,.....	7
Frederick Meyer,..	8	Philip Sturm,.....	6
Philip Mertz,.....	10	Henry Shlebach,...	5
Andreas Meyer's		Henry Smith,.....	9
widow,	6	John Ulrich,.....	4
John Miller,.....	10	Peter Wotring,....	5
Frederick Meyer,..	8	Jacob Weaver's wid-
Jacob Musgenung,..	8	ow,	4
Peter Miessemer,.	27	Nichs. Weatherhold,	4
Felix Matzinger,...	6	Conrad Wolf,.....	5
Samuel Mill,.....	12	Leonard Wassum,..	9
Conrad Miller,	8	John Wassum,.....	8
Ulrich Neaf,.....	14	Simon Wear,.....	8
Bernet Neaf,.....	5	Martin Wuchter,....	7
Michael Ohl,.....	31	Ulrich Wendel,....	6
Rudolph Peter,....	8	John Yager,.....	10
Jacob Peter,.....	10	Daniel Young,.....	10
Casper Peter,.....	10

SINGLE MEN.

Philip Ebert.	John Remely.
France Grum.	Conrad Reader.
Geo. Jacob Groh.	Conrad Shiedler.
George Haft.	John Smith.
William Horst.	William Wotring.
Lawrence Kern.	Jacob Weyand.
John Lintz.	John Zulick.

TAXABLES IN 1781.—The assessment, made by the commissioners of Northampton county for the township in 1781, shows that there were within its limits then the following taxable inhabitants.

TAX LIST OF HEIDELBERG TOWNSHIP, 1762.

John Huntzicker, Collector.

Jacob Arndt,.....	5	Tobias Ebert,.....	10
Ulrich Arnerrrt,...	5	John Ebert,.....	9
Martin Andreas,....	9	Frederick Eison,...	9
Jacob Anthony,....	7	Henry France,.....	10
Paul Anthony,....	15	Jacob Fryman,....	4
Peter Bear,.....	8	John Fry,.....	7
Killian Bauer,.....	4	Philip Feedler,....	8
Conrad Bloss,.....	22	Henry Free,.....	7
Jacob Bender,.....	15	Leonard Fuhr,....	10
Conrad Becker,....	6	Henry Färber,....	14
Conrad Doderer,...	16	John Freler,.....	10
Jacob Dauvenspeck,	10	Jacob Geiger,.....	5
Henry Diel,.....	4	Henry Geiger, Esq.,	12
Adam Domas,.....	4*	Frederick Güldner,.	5
*Added 4.		Jacob Güldner,.....	5

Martin Andrew.	John Fehler.
Peter Andrew.	Henry Faber.
Martin Andrew, Jr.	John Fought.
Joseph Balliet.	Henry Binninger.
Henry Byer.	David Gortner.
George Blose.	John Fry.
Widow Bear.	Jacob Geiger.
Daniel Bloss.	George Gultner.
Jacob Broadsteller.	Widow Gultner.
Ulrich Brinket.	Adam German.
Jacob Bailer.	Michael Grenewald.
Tobias Ebert.	Michael Gabel.
John Ebert.	Adam Gabel.
Jacob Fryman.	Andrew Gultner.
Andrew Fehler.	John Hunsicker.

Jacob Hunsicker.
 John Hunsicker, Jr.
 Casper Hunsicker.
 David Hess.
 Andrew Hotz.
 Michael Hoffman.
 William Hoffman.
 Henry Hoffman.
 Peter Handwerk.
 Jacob Handwerk.
 Jacob Handwerk, Jr.
 John Handwerk.
 Jacob Hartman.
 Philip Hammel.
 Martin Harter.
 Jacob Hausman.
 William Holling.
 Philip Krauss.
 Widow Keck.
 John Keck.
 William Kern.
 Frederick Kern.
 John Kern.
 William Kern.
 James Kemmerer.
 Solomon Kreitz.
 John Krum.
 Christian Krum.
 Adam Kounkle.
 Christian Lauchner.
 John Lintz.
 Conrad Lintz, Jr.
 John Miller.
 Nicholas Miller.
 Philip Mertz.
 Peter Meyer.
 Jacob Missinger.
 Peter G. Missinger.
 Frantz Missinger.
 Michael Missinger.
 Frederick M. Meyer.
 Leonard Miller.
 Henry Neff.
 Widow Neff.
 Ulrich Neff.
 Michael Ohl.
 Casper Peter.
 William Peter.
 Jacob Peter.
 Widow Peter.
 John Kocher.
 John Peter.
 Casper Peter, Jr.
 Simon Reerig.

SINGLE FREEMEN.

John Ramble.
 Michael Snyder.
 Tobias Wehr.
 John Reinsmith
 Daniel Meyer.
 Abraham Riedy.
 George Miller.
 Conrad Keck.
 Michael Keck.
 Peter Dewalt.

George Reemely.
 Michael Reemaly.
 George Remaly, Jr.
 John Ramble.
 John Buchle.
 Conrad Reeder.
 Jacob Rex.
 William Rex.
 George Rex.
 George Rex, Jr.
 William Rex.
 William Rex, Jr.
 John Robert.
 Peter Ray.
 George Ray.
 Jacob Riedy.
 Conrad Riedy.
 Peter S. Riedy.
 Jacob Reedinghouse (supposed Ridinghouse).
 John Reinsmith.
 George Ruppert.
 Peter Leidel.
 John Sorbrick.
 George Shoenberger.
 Frederick Sleigh.
 Abraham Shelhamer.
 Ludwig Stein.
 Anthony Shafer.
 Balzer Snyder.
 Adam Smith.
 John Snyder.
 Christian Smith.
 Jacob Smith.
 Samuel Snyder.
 Conrad Slosser.
 Isaac Swartz.
 George Smitter.
 Simon Wihl.
 Peter Wagner.
 John Wasum.
 Leonard Wasum.
 Leonard Wasum.
 Balzer Wirth.
 Jacob Weaver.
 John Weaver.
 Martin Muchter.
 Yost Wall.
 Michael Wehr.
 Lawrence Wehr.
 Philip Wehr.
 Henry Serfass.
 Martin Lentz.
 Hotzer George.

Christian Swabenland.
 Jacob Bare.
 Leonard Balliette.
 Frederick Handwerk.
 William Andreas.
 George Ridinghouse.
 David Wegandt.
 Conrad Reerig.
 Andrew Mourer.
 Stoffel Rex.

TAXABLES IN 1812.—The following were the taxable inhabitants in 1812, as shown by the township assessment made by the commissioners of Northampton county:

Daniel Andrew.
 John Anthony.
 Jacob Bahler.
 Stephen Balliet.
 Jacob Bahr.
 Peter Bahr.
 George Blose.
 Ulrich Benninger.
 Christian Bloss.
 George Bloss, Jr.
 Daniel Brandstetter.
 John Bahler.
 Jacob Bapt.
 Jacob Blim.
 Peter Beissell.
 John Beyer.
 Solomon Brandstetter.
 Jacob Clauss.
 Jacob Dingler.
 Peter Eberth.
 John Ebert.
 Michael Ebert.
 Conrad Ebert.
 Christian Ebert.
 Henry Ebert.
 Samuel Ely.
 — Fenstermacher.
 Gottlieb Focht.
 Jacob Fryman.
 William Fenstermacher.
 Jacob Ferber.
 Widow Ferber.
 George Fryman.
 Daniel Fink.
 Peter Frey.
 John Frederick.
 John Fritzingler.
 Matthew Fritzingler.
 Jacob Fritzingler.
 Andrew Fritzingler.
 Jacob Fenstermacher.
 John Frantz.
 Jacob Frantz.
 John Miller, Jr.
 Franklin Loyer.
 John Frederick.
 Jacob Focht.
 Conrad German.
 Jacob Geiger.
 Adam German.
 Philip German.
 Andrew Gultner.
 Abraham German.
 Henry Geisinger.
 Philip Haas.
 George Handwerk.
 Michael Harter.
 Jacob Hartman.
 Joseph Hunsicker.
 Casper Hunsicker.
 John Hunsicker.
 John Hunsicker, Jr.
 Jacob Hoffman.
 William Hoffman.
 Michael Hoffman.
 Peter Hoffman.
 Peter Handwerk.

John Handwerk.
 Peter Handwerk.
 Jacob Handwerk.
 Henry Handwerk.
 Philip Handwerk.
 Henry Hennewitze.
 George Horn.
 Frederick Hausman.
 Peter Hoffman.
 Christian Hammen (supposed Hausman).
 George Boltz (supposed Haats).
 John Hausman.
 Christian Hausman.
 Christian Haag (Hawk).
 Solomon Hartman.
 Henry Helfrich.
 Daniel Helfrich.
 Joel Kern.
 Casper Hunsicker.
 Simon Hartman.
 Andrew Kemmerer.
 John Jaeger.
 Henry Kistler.
 George Kern, Jr.
 John Krause.
 Christian Krum.
 John Krum.
 William Kern.
 George Kern.
 Nicholas Kern.
 Jonas Kern.
 John Kern.
 John Kressler.
 Jacob Kressler.
 Barnet Kressler.
 Adam Kressler.
 John Krum.
 Daniel Kramer.
 Christian Krum.
 Christophel Kern.
 Nicholas Kern.
 Philip Kemmerer.
 John Keck.
 Adam Kunkle.
 John Kressler.
 Andrew Kunkle.
 Philip Krause.
 George Krauss.
 Conrad Kern.
 Daniel Kern.
 Daniel Kern, Jr.
 Frederick Kemmerer.
 Jesse Kern.
 George Kamper.
 John Kohler.
 Abraham Krerr.
 Joseph Lorash.
 Joseph Lauchner.
 Adam Linns (Lentz).
 Jacob Linns (Lentz).
 Jacob Lanchner.
 William Linns (Lentz).
 John Meyer.
 Jacob Miller.
 John Miller.

The amount of taxes was £364 15s. 3d. The highest assessment was for £8, and was upon Michael Ohl. John Miller and Casper Peter are each assessed £6; all others below.

Carl Fred Moyer.
 Simon Moyer.
 Francis Messinger
 (Messemere).
 George Muthard.
 Leonard Miller.
 Dewalt Mertz.
 Frederick Miller.
 William Moyer.
 John Mace.
 George Miller.
 Henry Miller.
 Christian Messinger
 (Messemere).
 John Meyer.
 Bernhard Neff.
 Henry Neff.
 Widow Neff.
 Michael Neff.
 Peter Newhard.
 Jacob Neese.
 John Peter.
 Daniel Peter.
 Johannes Peter.
 Jacob Peter.
 Thesbold Peter.
 William Peter.
 Casper Peter.
 Casper Peter, Jr.
 John Peter, Sr.
 Nicholas Peter.
 George Peter.
 Michael Peter.
 Jacob Peter.
 Henry Peter.
 John Peter.
 Henry Peter, Jr.
 Daniel Roder (Roeder).
 John Rinker.
 Daniel Roth.
 Jacob Ritter.
 Abraham Redig (sup.
 Riedy).
 John Rotest (Retar).
 Balzer Royer.
 Andrew Rauch.
 George Rex.
 Abraham Rex.
 Christian Rex.
 John Rex.
 Abraham Riedy.
 Peter Rockel.
 Adam Rockel.
 Widow Rockel.
 William Rockel.
 Godfrey Roth.
 George Ratert.
 George Remely.
 John Rohrich (Rerich).
 Ambros Remely.
 Michael Remely.

Peter Roth.
 Peter Rohrich (Rerich).
 Georgfe Ratert.
 Widow Ratert.
 George Rex.
 Philip Ratert.
 John Rex.
 Susanna Reedy (Riedy).
 Abraham Roder (Roeder).
 Christian Shnyder (Snyder).
 Abraham Soritz.
 Jacob Shnyder (Snyder).
 Andrew Schassler (Schissler).
 Christian Schmidt.
 Jacob Schneider (Snyder).
 Christian Snyder.
 Henry Schmidt.
 Michael Schmidt.
 Andrew Sensinger.
 Peter Seidel.
 Daniel Shuler.
 John Schleicher.
 David Shnyder (Snyder).
 Henry Stamler (Stemler).
 John Schoneberger.
 Peter Sell.
 Simon Schneyerder (Snyder).
 Joseph Saeger.
 John Saeger.
 Conrad Wirt (Wert).
 Jacob Wehr.
 Michael Wahr.
 Martin Wuchter.
 Jacob Weber.
 Mary Frey.
 Christian Werth.
 George Wassam.
 Conrad Wehr.
 Lawrence Wehr.
 Jacob Weber.
 Martin Werth.
 Peter Wahr.
 Laurence Zeller.
 George Zerfas.
 Jacob Kern.
 Peter Frees.
 Philip Bretz (Pretz).
 Samuel Leger.
 John Schmidt.
 Samuel Miller.
 Daniel Krauss.
 Samuel Kressler.
 Laurence Newhard.

SINGLE FREEMEN.

Jacob Hoffman.
 John Bare.
 John Rex.
 John Hunsicker.
 Christian Shnyder (Snyder).
 John Handwerk.
 Henry Hoffman.
 Michael Krum.

Frederick Snyder.
 Leonard Reinsmith.
 William Lafavour (Lafavre).
 Daniel Hunsicker.
 Adam Peter.
 Daniel Snyder.
 Daniel Krauss.
 John Housman.

John Remely.
 William Rex.
 John Weidman.
 Peter Hunsicker.
 Samuel Boller.
 Peter Krum.

Jacob Kressley.
 John Weber.
 Michael Hoffman.
 George Sensinger.
 Henry Bare.

PIONEER SETTLERS.—The early residents of this township are all or nearly all mentioned in the list of land warrants, and the lists of taxables in 1781 and 1812. The greater part of the land now owned by Edward Neff and Joel Neff, in Heidelberg township, was by warrant in June, 1745, granted to Andrew Shitler, and after his death it was conveyed by the administrator to his only son and heir, Conrad Shitler, who by deed dated Dec. 13, 1762, conveyed the same to Jacob Peter, who on Nov. 10, 1764, conveyed the same to John Hunsicker, Sr., who by deed dated Oct. 26, 1787, conveyed the same to his son, Jacob Hunsicker, who died leaving a widow and seven children, and at an Orphans' Court held at Easton, Jan. 11, 1797, the land, consisting of 260 acres, was accepted by John Hunsicker, eldest son of Jacob, who by deed dated July 19, 1779, conveyed 137 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres thereof to Bernhard Neff, son of Ulrich Neff. Said tract then adjoined land of Peter Missemere, Jacob Brandstetter, Adam German, etc. Bernhard Neff had three son, John, George, and Abraham, and by deed dated Jan. 23, 1829, conveyed 69 acres thereof to his son, George Neff, and the balance to his son, John Neff; about the year 1845, conveyed his portion to Abraham Lobach, and John Neff moved to East Penn township, Carbon Co., close to the Andrew Church, where he died and left one son, his only heir; and George Neff, by deed dated March 20, 1866, granted and conveyed a portion of his land to his son Edward Neff. George Neff died intestate on November 26, 1881, and on April 3, 1882, Joel Neff, another son of George, accepted the same at the appraisement. Abraham Neff, the other son of Bernhard Neff, in his early days resided near Germansville, but afterwards moved to North Whitehall township, close to the Union Church, where he carried on the undertaking business, afterwards established a carriage factory, and built up the village which is named after him, Neffsville.

Here is added a memorandum, which was in the handwriting of Richard Peters (whose name is frequently mentioned in the upper township in the old papers), which was found among the old papers of George Neff, deceased:

"January 18, 1758 Memorandum that Monday, the third day of April next is appointed for an Hearing Between Bernhardt Neff and Henry Frie at the Secretaries office upon a Caveat Entered the 6th September last by said Neff against the acceptance of a Survey made for the Said Frie on a Brance of Truckers Creek now (Jordan Creek) in Northampton County now Lehigh Co) and the parties are desired to attend accordingly

RICHARD PETERS.

"A true copy from its original."

A portion of the land now owned by Nathan Wuchter was originally by warrant dated Oct. 25, 1749, granted to Daniel Bürger, of Salisbury township. The tract was mentioned as situated between Francis Giltner and John Snyder in Heidelberg township, Bucks county, and Daniel of Germansville, where now the Germansville Depot of the Schuylkill and Lehigh Railroad is situated.

Of the Peters who early settled in Heidelberg township were three brothers,—Caspar, Rudolph, and Jacob. Caspar settled in what is now Washington, and the account of his descendants will be found in that township. His son, Caspar, lived in the limits of Heidelberg.

Rudolph Peter settled in Heidelberg. He took out a warrant for 74 acres of land on January

BERNHARD NEFF HOUSE AND MILL, BUILT 1767, NOW KNOWN AS LEIBY'S MILL.

Bürger, by deed dated Aug. 1, 1772, conveyed a portion thereof to John Martin Wachter, Sr., who conveyed the same to his son, Martin Wachter, who conveyed the same to his son, William Wachter, who conveyed the same to his son, Nathan Wachter. Martin Wachter was one of the Revolutionary soldiers under Washington.

Among the Peters who had original land here, near Saegersville and Germansville, was Rudolph Peter, to whom 74 acres, 140 perches of land was granted by warrant dated Jan. 28, 1754, which is situated north of Saegersville.

Jacob Peter, who was the owner of a tract of land between Saegersville and Germansville, and it was originally by warrant dated March 12, 1745, granted to him, so Philip Peter was the owner about the year 1786, of a tract of land adjoining Jordan Creek on the west, and west 28, 1754. Eve Elizabeth, a daughter, became the wife of Adam German, who settled at Germansville. It is not known who his other children were. He died in 1813, aged 57 years, and is buried in Heidelberg churchyard.

Jacob Peter, supposed to be a brother of Rudolph and Caspar, took out a warrant for 31 acres on March 12, 1752; nothing is known of his descendants.

In 1781 Caspar Peter, Caspar Peter, Jr., William, Jacob, John, and the Widow Peter were assessed on real estate, and in 1812 John, Daniel, Johannes, Jacob, Theobald, William, Caspar, Sr., Caspar, Jr., John, Sr., Nicholas, George, Michael, Jacob, Henry, Sr., Henry, Jr., and John Peter, Jr.

Heidelberg in 1781 and 1812 embraced Washington. The line of Casper Peter, one of the three brothers, has been well traced. Of the other brothers, Rudolph and Jacob, but little is known of the generation following. Nicholas Peter, whose name appears in 1812, had three sons,—Daniel, Elias, and John Jacob (2d).

John Jacob Peters (1st) lived on the farm now owned by Aaron Peter. He executed the mason work of the county jail at Allentown in 1816. He married Maria Krum, sister of Michael. They had seven children: Jeremiah, Adam, Polly (Mrs. Dutton), Henry, Abram, Jacob, and Reuben.

Johannes Hunsicker was the first of the family of that name known to be in the township. His son Henry married Maria Barbara Huff in 1786, by whom he had three sons and six daughters. She died in 1802, aged 38 years.

Peter Hunsicker lived in 1794 on the land adjoining Philip Mosser. The Heidelberg churchyard contains tablets to Susanna Hunsicker, born 1799, died in 1850, and Magdalena Hunsicker, born in 1731.

John Hunsicker, (born in 1755, and died in 1836, aged 80 years), and wife, Catharine Stiegerwalt (born in 1757, died in 1823), were located near Heidelberg Church, where their son Henry lived. He married Susanna ———, who died in 1850, and left five children, of whom were Reuben, David, and Levi, the last two living on the homestead.

Joseph Hunsicker, a brother of John, married a daughter of Michael Ohl, and had no children. He married for his second wife a daughter of ——— Krum, (sister of Christian), by whom he had Christian, Jonas, John, Daniel, Reuben, and Henry. Christian settled on part of the homestead; Jonas where William Addis lived; John on part of the homestead, and resided on the property with his son Levi. Daniel settled in Washington township. Reuben moved to Slatington, where he died, and Harry located in Carbon county.

John Handwerk, on November 9, 1758, took up in Heidelberg township, 57 acres, and on August 12, 1766, Nicholas Handwerk took up 110 acres. John was born in 1710, and died in 1791. In 1781 he was assessed with Peter Jacob, Sr., Peter Jacob, Jr., and among the single free-men is given Frederick Handwerk.

In 1812, John Peter, Jacob Peter, Henry and Philip Handwerk are assessed. In the Heidelberg Churchyard are tablets to Peter Handwerk, born 1744, died 1826; Johannes Handwerk, born 1742, died 1813; Jacob Handwerk, born 1771, died 1826; Catharine Handwerk, born 1747, died in 1808. The family in this township and Washington are numerous.

Jacob Kemmerer moved from Saucon township to this township in the early part of his life, previous to 1754. He was a great hunter, and during his life shot a vast number of deer. He also was or acted as captain over a squad of men who went across the Blue Mountains to Gnadentoppen to bury those who had been killed by the Indians. He went to the Wyoming Valley to help protect the whites from the horrible slaughter of the Indians. He died about the year 1825, at the age of 88 years. He had a brother Fritz, who was a miller in Allentown.

CHARACTER OF PEOPLE.—As a rule to 1840 there was little mingling with other people. Those who had possession of the land conveyed it from one heir to another, and thus kept the land among their descendants. Schools of the English language were scarce. Churches both of the German Reformed and Lutheran denominations were found all over the county, and were well attended. There was strict adherence to the doctrine of the churches, the parents greatly desired having their children trained in the precepts of Christianity.

It seems an astonishing fact that a man should borrow from $500 to $1,000 of a neighbor, the lender taking no note, merely marking down the amount, and the time when to return it, with a piece of chalk on one of the house-joists or on the large house-clock. It was a sacred duty when the time had expired to pay the interest or amount, according to what was agreed upon. If any one failed to be prompt, or failed entirely to meet his payment, this was an extraordinary affair, and such conduct was considered a crime. The old saying, "His word is as good as his note," was really true with this class of people.

For a stranger to settle among them was a rare occurrence. Railroads and telegraphs there were none. Trade was carried on by wagons to Philadelphia and other markets. Stores had their supplies brought all the way from Philadelphia on wagons, a distance of eighty miles. Dealers would arrange to go to the city two or four times a year, and arranged their time so that they were able to reach a hotel when it was time to feed their horses. Here the men greeted each other in the most friendly manner. They drank pure old rye whiskey, which they obtained at the hotel at three cents a glass with a cigar thrown in, according to the general custom. On arrival at the great markets, they were earnest, prompt, and shrewd at their business, and spared no pains in carrying out their duty honorably. When the time arrived for the return of the heavy four- and six-horse teams, there was a general excitement. People came from twelve to fifteen miles to see the bright calicoes and other wearing materials.

This made every heart glad and anxious to buy. In common with the Pennsylvania Germans elsewhere, those of Heidelberg have been a prosperous and industrious people.

HEIDELBERG CHURCH.—The township has had till now but one church, which has always been known as the Heidelberg Church and the congregation as the Heidelberg Congregation. The church, like most of those in Eastern Pennsylvania where German immigrants of the Reformed and Lutheran faiths settled at the same time and the same place, was a Union Church; that is, the Reformed and the Lutherans held all the church property—such as the building, the church land, the cemetery, etc.—in common, and had their divine services alternately in the same church building, either congregation entirely free, however, to engage in worship according to its own faith and teachings unmolested by the other, with admission to the members of the other faith as well as its own. The necessities of primitive times collected these divided members of one faith under one and the same roof.

The church stands one mile east of Saegersville, near the centre of the township, on the road to Neffsville. The first small springs of the Heidelberg creek, which flows into the Jordan, at the iron bridge, three-quarters of a mile east of Weidasville, take their rise upon the church lands. The church, school-house, graveyard, and the lands of the congregation lie all together in a small valley, hemmed in by surrounding low hills.

The first settlements were made in the year 1735. The number of the first immigrants was small, consisting of isolated families who had come from Switzerland and Westphalia. Their names have been preserved, and show that they were from one neighborhood, but the name of the place is, unfortunately, forgotten. The names of the first arrivals were Jacob Peter, Casper Peter, and Wilhelm Peter, three brothers, but whether their father accompanied them cannot be ascertained. Later came Johannes Hunsicker, Jacob Mayer, David Gisi, Conrad Wirtz (now written Wert), Frederick Nisele, Ullrich Neff, Heinrich Hoffman, Peter Miller, Heinrich Roeder, Georg Grum, and Jorg Schmalz. This first company of settlers formed the foundation of the succeeding congregation, and at once staked off the land they intended to use for church and school purposes. They called it the Hill of Zion, and laid upon their descendants the solemn injunction that they should not rest until they had obtained lawful possession of the same through a warrant. The first immigrants passed through Upper Milford to the Kittatinny Valley, and followed the course of the Lehigh to the Blue Mountains.

They traversed all the land lying between the Lehigh Hills and the Blue Mountains, and not until the latter loomed up before their sight, and they saw their elevation, and the hillsides and the valleys below, forming the present area of the townships of Heidelberg and Washington, together with the excellent water and fine forests, did they discontinue their journey, saying, "Here there are hills, woods, water, and rocks; here it is possible to live."

Between the years 1735 and 1740 there also came hither Palatines and Wurtembergers, who strengthened the colony. Among these there were, on the Reformed side, Heinrich Ohl, Jacob Riedy, Michael Fritzinger; on the Lutheran side, Ulrich Sensinger, Jorg Rex, Peter Handwerk, Johann Krauss.

The Reformed and Lutherans had provided themselves with a piece of land for church and school purposes and used it in common, but later the Reformed bought an adjoining tract to the west and built a school and dwelling-house upon it when they sold their undivided interest in the school house to the Lutherans which they had in common, so that two schools existed from 1756 to 1849; when it was agreed among both congregations that they hold all lands in common and have but one teacher and choir leader.

The organization of the congregation took place in the year 1740. Heinrich Ohl, who had taken up the land where Saegersville now stands, and was the richest and most respected man in the settlement, agitated the matter of building a church, but four years passed before the church was constructed. Meetings were held, but as no minister could be engaged, the work of construction was delayed. During this period the services of a reader from Lynn were obtained, and he was accustomed to hold services at the houses of the people. The place for assembling was at Jacob Daubenspeck's, about one mile south of the church lands, and divine service was held there for a period of five years. Finally there came a talented Lutheran minister, by the name of Jacob Friedrich Schertlein, who was undoubtedly sent to this portion of the country through the interposition of Rev. Muhlenberg, and then earnest steps were taken to build the first church of logs. It was erected 1744 and dedicated by Revs. Schertlein and Philip Jacob Michael. The building stood in the northeastern corner of the old graveyard. At the same time a school-house was erected. From the beginning the fathers contemplated the holding and enjoyment of these buildings in common. They built the church and school-house upon this land, and when the church was completed and dedicated, both branches of the congregation made a contract on March 28, 1745, that it should be and remain a Union church.

The following heads of families formed the congregation:

The elders were:

Reformed.

George Grum. Jörg Schmalz.

Lutheran.

George Rex. Michael Mosser.

The members were:

Jacob Mayer.	Friederich Schneider.
Heinrich Ohl,	Jonas Matzinger.
Ulrich Sensinger.	Michael Fritzing.
George Schmalz (elder).	Jacob Peter.
Daniel Burger.	Cspar Peter.
Nickel Klein.	Rudolf Peter.
George Grum (elder).	Michael Mosser (elder).
David Gisi.	Jörg Newhard.
Michael Fritzing.	Nickel Burger.
George Rex (elder).	Michael Ruch.
Leonhard Mayer.	Peter Miller.
Heinrich Oswald.	Conrad Wirtz (Wert).
Adam Winch,	Friederich Nisele.
Heinrich Hofmann.	Jcob Schlung.
Ulrich Neff.	Hns Ulrich Arnd.
Andreas Schüssler.	Johannes Niesele.
	Heinrich Roeder.

The above-named members were the builders of the first church, and paid for its construction £18 5s., of which the Reformed side contributed £13 18s. 8d., and the Lutheran £4 6s. 4d. None of the Lutherans were married. Mary Ohl (single, Michael's daughter) contributed $500.

The Indian massacres, which from 1755 to 1758 devastated all the settlements across the Lehigh, at Gnadenhütten (now Lehighton) and in Lynn, both on the right and left of the Heidelberg settlement, passed by this congregation almost without leaving a trace. Scarcely a single murder took place. Nevertheless the members were prepared to render each other prompt assistance. Fathers Longenour, Kemmerer, and others went to Gnadenhütten and assisted in burying the murdered, and upon the occasion of the Lynn township massacre, when Zeislof and others were murdered, Father Bachman hastened to their assistance from Miller's Valley, near the present Lynnvillle. Zeislof and some of his family were scalped, but were still alive when Bachman arrived, and he attended to them until death delivered them from their agony. Bachman said it was dreadful to see the bloody, disfigured heads, and to hear the sufferers calling for water to allay their thirst. The reason for the freedom of the congregation from the Indian troubles lay, besides the providence of God, possibly in the fact that no Indian village stood within its limits. The nearest village was in Lynn; another was on the other side of the Blue Mountains, in the vicinity of Lehighton; and still another lay south of the Blue Mountains, across the Lehigh. An Indian path, however, led in a straight direction from the Lehigh Gap through the present village of Saegersville over the Schochary Mountain (where a spring on land then owned by Christian Miller is still known as the Indian spring) to the principal Indian path, which ran from the Lehigh Mountains through the Indian village in the Ziegel congregation's lands to the Blue Mountains.

The second church was built in 1756. The first was destroyed by fire. The new church was also built of logs, but very much larger and better arranged in every respect, fitted out with galleries, aisles, pulpit, and altar. A new school-house was also erected at the same time, placed upon the land of the Reformed congregation (which had sold all its right in the old school-house to the Lutherans for £4 10s.) and from this time on each congregation had its own school until later years, when the old school-house was torn down, and the schools were united in one. The new church was dedicated in 1757, and the old contract (that the building should be used in common), was renewed. From 1745 to 1757 the number of communicants was more than doubled; but, an increase in members from Europe partly accounted for this.

The heads of families who built the new church were as follows:

Michael Ohl.	Johannes Schneider.
Simon Wehr.	Johannes Farr.
Johannes Grum.	Friederich Kern.
Caspar Peter.	George Remely.
Heinrich Ohl.	Michael Remely.
Conrad Bloss.	Jacob Peter, Jr.
Friederich Schneider.	Johannes Reber.
Jacob Riedy.	Philip Hammel.
Jacob Peter.	Johannes Frey.
Johannes Reinschmidt.	Christof Hoffman.
Simon Kreitz.	Peter Seidel.
Conrad Lintz.	Johannes Rockel.
Christian Schmidt.	Johannes Peter.
Heinrich Neff.	Samuel Schneider.
Christian Grum.	Heinrich Hoffman.
Nicolaus Wehr.	Conrad Riedy.
Heinrich Reinhard.	Johannes Neff.
Peter Mayer.	Daniel Borger.
Ulrich Neff.	Jacob Daubenspeck.
Lorenz Wehr.	Wilhelm Fenstermacher.
Johannes Reber.	Philip Mertz.
Philipp Wehr.	Jacob Ferber.
Johannes Filler.	Jacob Hunsicker.
Heinrich Ferber.	Conrad Miller.
Johannes Hunsicker.	Jacob Freiman.
Bernhard Neff.	Simon Rerig.
George Bloss.	Franz Grum.
Rudolph Peter.	Heinrich Geiger.
George Haf.	Wilhelm Kern.
Andreas Roder.	Johannes Kern.

Not until 1758 did the congregation make efforts to obtain a fee-simple deed and lawful possession of their church and school lands. To accomplish this Michael Ohl (a son of Heinrich), and Simon Wehr were appointed a committee on the Reformed side to obtain the requisite papers at Philadelphia. The Lutherans also acted in the matter. The following members of the Reformed Church obligated themselves to furnish the money for the purchase of the lands: Jacob Peter, Johannes Hunsicker, Johannes Grum, Rudolph Peter, George Haack, Bernhard Neff, Jacob Riedy, Heinrich Neff, and Heinrich Ohl. Nancy Ohl, an unmarried daughter of Heinrich, had the church weatherboarded at her own expense in later years.

In the War of Independence, this congregation furnished a number of soldiers, but the names of only two have been preserved, Christian Schmidt and Mr. Krumbach.

The first church records were (according to the statement of Father Johannes Hunsicker, who died when upwards of 90 years old, and was the authority for most of the foregoing information), destroyed by fire with the first church building. The minutes of the Reformed Church record begin in 1764, and are still in existence; of the Lutheran, in 1768. On the title-page of the latter appear the names of Wilhelm Rex, Casper Schnerr, Tobias Ebert and Samuel Miehle as the Lutheran consistory.

A new cemetery was opened in 1832, the old graveyard having been filled to its entire capacity, and the congregation, having decided to use the ground to the north of the church. This has been increased in size a number of times since.

In 1849 the congregation held an election to decide whether the schools should be joined in one so as to settle the difference in the creeds. All the votes but three were cast in favor of uniting the schools. At this time Ferdinand Berkemeyer taught on the Reformed side, and Joseph Fulton on the Lutheran. The latter resigned and Berkemeyer was chosen as the common teacher.

A festival was held for two days in 1851 upon the occasion of the hundred and sixth anniversary of the founding of the church.

The third church was built in 1849, and on the 17th of May in that year the consistory and members of the church assembled for the purpose of adopting a constitution.

It was placed on the other side of the little brook, not thirty paces from the spot where the other stood.

The Reformed consistory at this time was composed of Rev. Johannes Helffrich, the minister, George Peter and Michael Peter, elders, and Reuben Peter, Daniel Peter, Stephen Bachmann, and Johann Dörward, deacons; the Lutheran, of Rev. Jeremias Schindel, the minister, George Sensinger and Friedrich Kraus, elders, and David Ross, Georg Schneider, Nathan Wuchter, and Nathan German, deacons. The building committee consisted of Johannes Schmidt, Gottfried Peter, Jacob Klauss, and Philip Krauss.

The cost was $6,279.95.

The number who contributed to the erection of the new church was 363, all of whom (with some few exceptions, as, for instance, certain widows), were the heads of families.

Scarcely was the church finished when the desire arose to possess an organ. The matter had been agitated before this time, but the majority were always opposed to the idea, having preferred singing without the accompaniment of an organ. Upon an election, only 63 votes were cast in favor of purchasing an organ, while fourteen resolute ones were found against it. The construction of the organ was given to Charles Hanzelmann, an organ-builder, who had removed to these parts from Philadelphia. It was dedicated in 1853, and for those times was a perfect work.

A renovation of the church took place in 1882, the entire church repainted, the interior frescoed, and the pews made better, and in 1883 the organ also received a complete repairing.

A new brick school-house, with two rooms for the schools of the congregation and the township, was built in 1883 by the aid of the church, and dedicated the same year.

The members assisted in building the Frieden's Church; also churches at Slatington and Slate-dale.

In 1902, the hot air system was introduced at an expense of $1,030.

In 1913, the church was again generally improved, after the lapse of thirty years, at an estimated expense of $5,000. The floor was raised at the entrance and made to slope toward the pulpit; a new pulpit and stained-glass windows introduced; interior handsomely decorated; and superior cement steps with railing placed at the entrance.

In 1910 a fine soldiers' monument was placed in the cemetery near the northwest corner. [See general township history so entitled.]

The total membership is 750, divided equally in the two congregations.

The following were the ministers:

REFORMED.	John Helffrich, 1816-52.
Peter Miller.	William A. Helffrich,
Philip J. Michael.	1845-79.
_____ Roth.	Nevin A. Helffrich,
Jacob Weymer.	1879-1906.
Johann H. Helffrich,	George M. Smith,
1772-1810.	1906-12.
Henry Diefenbach,	Howard A. Althouse,
1810-16.	1912- .

LUTHERAN.

Jacob Fried. Scherblein.
Daniel Lehman.
Daniel Schumacher.
John George Young,
1768.
Doring and Wartman
till 1837.

Jeremiah Schindel,
1837-
Thomas Steck.
J. B. Fox.
J. S. Renninger.
Jacob H. Longacre,
1901- .

son Peter, and afterward it passed into the possession of Wilson Sauerwine. It was in a field near a hill, which is now under cultivation. Peter and Nathan Hoffman are buried there; also their sister Catharine, who was the widow of George Benninghoff.

SCHOOLS.—The first school of the township was connected with the Heidelberg Church; and one of the township school buildings is still jointly owned by the township and the two congregations on their property, next to the church. The early teachers were:

Thaerges Lupp, 1770-'80. Joseph Fulton.
Jost Heinrich Miller, Ferdinand Berkemeyer.
1780. ——— Freitag.
——— Horn.

Joel P. Geiger was the teacher here from 1863 to 1891.

The first English school of the township was started at Saegersville in 1823. The teachers were John Brown (one-armed) and William Lester, a Quaker, who came from Germantown. The building was one-story, built of logs, and it was continued in use until 1880.

In 1884, the district contained ten buildings:

Saegersville	Peter's
Germansville	Church
Pleasant Corner	Central
Mantz's	Water Pond
Harter's	Hawk's

The first six were frame buildings, put up by the township in 1855, at a cost of $800 each, with funds bequeathed by Frederick Miller for that purpose.

The church school building is of brick and was erected in 1881 at a cost of $2,000; the Central is also of brick, erected in 1883 at same cost; the other two are of frame and cost $800 each.

The common school system was accepted in 1848, and the first directors elected were the following:

Nathan German,	Jacob Hunsicker (president),
Casper Handwerk,	Peter Miller (secretary, who
Jonas Peter,	had filled this position
John Kressley,	before.)

The Board in 1913 was as follows:

President—Henry Bittner (1912-'16).

Secretary—Benjamin Sauerwine (1912-'18).

Treasurer—Alvin B. Peters (1912-'16).

Alfred Fink (1912-'14).

George Kressley (1912-'14).

The schools and teachers, with terms taught:

School.	Teacher.	Terms.
Saegersville,	Sophia Miller,	17
Germansville,	E. K. Greenawald,	17
Pleasant Corner,	George F. Herber,	9
Mantz's,	Frederick Weiss,	6
Kemmerers,	Eugene M. Handwerk,	11
Peter's,	A. J. Herber,	34
Church,	Charles W. Kunkel,	11
Haak's,	Edna Fink,	1
Water Pond,	Elmer Kunkel,	8
Central,	(vacant since 1905.)

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.—In 1910 a fine granite soldiers' monument was erected in the cemetery of the Heidelberg Church, near the northwest corner, at a cost of $800, by contributing members of the church, of whom Moses Metzger and Nathan Handwerk were appointed a special committee. A cannon on wheels, standing near the south side, was donated by the U. S. government at the request of the representative in congress from this district, Hon. John H. Rothermel. The monument is surmounted with the figure of a soldier and gun, "at rest," and presents an attractive appearance. The height is about 18 feet.

The names of the following "Comrades" are inscribed on the north and west sides, (those marked with * having died):

Owen Bachman.*	John Kolb.*
Henry Berkemeyer.	Levi Krause.*
Jacob Berkemyer.	Aaron Krum.
Peter Berkemyer.	John Krum.
Reuben Bittner.*	Charles Kuhnsman.
Edward Blose.	Edwin Loch.*
Franklin Blose.	John McConnel.
Tilghman Blose.*	Harrison Metzger.
Nathan Buck.	Jonas Metzger.
Edward Clouser.	Lewis Metzger.
John Delong.*	Moses Metzger.
Edwin Ebbert.*	Daniel Moose.*
Jacob Ebert.	Samuel Oswald.*
Stephen Ebert.*	Emanuel Pauly.*
David Fetherolf.*	Alfred Peter.*
Lewis Fink.*	Tilghman Reabert.*
Edwin Fritzingler.*	Cyrus Reichelderfer.
George Fritzingler.*	Joseph Rex.*
William Fry.*	Lewis Rex.*
Jeremiah Geiger.*	Penroe Rex.*
Elias German.	William Rex.*
William German.*	Elias Riedy.
Wm. G. Grosscup.	Levi Riedy.*
Aaron Handwerk.*	John Rinker.*
Joseph Handwerk.*	Leon Roeder.
Levi Handwerk.*	Lewis Roth.
Nathan Handwerk.	Jeremiah Sauerwine.
Tilghman Handwerk.*	Moses Sensinger.
Wm. Handwerk.	Elias Smith.
George Hauser.	Daniel Strauss.*
Stephen Hetinger.	James Strauss.*
George Hoffman.	Paul Strauss.*
David Hollenbach.*	Francis Wert.
Wilson P. Kistler.*	Charles Weller.*
Hiram Kolb.

PRIVATE BURYING-GROUND.—Only one private graveyard has been discovered in Heidelberg township, on the Heinrich Hoffman homestead. Part of this farm was later owned by his

The "Water Pond" building is situated in Heidelberg, but the school is carried on jointly with Lowhill.

The township has no graded schools. The buildings are all of brick, one story, with one room, excepting the Kemmerer's which has two rooms, addition made in 1903. The first six, and Haak's and Water Pond, were continued frame buildings until 1877 when brick buildings were substituted.

Pupils of school age in 1913 numbered 237.

On the Joseph Fink farm in Jordan Valley, there is an old log two-story building that was built about 1840. The first floor was used by a shoemaker, and on the second floor a school was conducted until 1846. The floors were of thick planks, and the benches in the school room of rough slabs or planks, smooth only on the upper side. Holes were bored into the ends and heavy sticks of wood were fitted into them, which served as the legs. Gottlieb Gaushorn (German) and John Ravert, served as teachers.

Jacob Freibolin attended this school (now 80 years old, a successful farmer of the township, who came from Germany when nine years old, with his father.)

INDUSTRIES.—Many industries have been established in the township, and carried on for many years, comprising grist-mills, and factories of various kinds.

Mills.—The Snyder Mill was erected in 1808 by Jacob Snyder, on the Jordan creek, near the township line of Lowhill. It was the first erected in that vicinity, and he operated it for many years. It had different succeeding owners until about 1880 when Elias Kressly became the proprietor and after carrying it on for some time sold it to Frank Hollenback, who continued the business and was succeeded by his son, James. It was destroyed by fire about 1900. The saw-mill there was not burned but it was converted into a cider-mill, and is now so used.

The Holben Mill was erected on the Jordan about a mile north of the township line, in 1789, and the site has been occupied for the same purpose until now. In 1881, a new frame mill was established in its place by Phaon W. Bittner for producing chopped feed on orders and he carried it on until April, 1913, when he transferred the business to his son, Elmer V., and Albert J.

The German mill was originally built of stone by Adam German, Sr., before the Revolution. It came to be owned by Philip German, Sr., who, in 1814, erected a two-story stone dwelling-house against the north side, and his son, Adam, succeeded him, during whose ownership until his death in 1840, additions were made to the mill and dwelling, and a saw-mill (with wool-carding machine attached) was erected. Nathan German then became the owner, and he was succeeded by Philip Dieffenbach, and after him by Enos German, who carried it on until his decease in 1898. Then Howard F. Kern, purchased it and he operated it until 1903, when he sold it to William Grosscup. The mill was leased to Lewis D. Leiby, and Wm. J. Schmeck, for five years, and at the expiration of that time Leiby bought the property and rebuilt the mill of frame, three-story. The milling business has since then been carried on by him and his brother, Howard L., under the name of L. D. Leiby and Bro., including the extensive shipment of potatoes. The present dam, and the race through the village, were constructed in 1809.

The Leiby Mill is situated on the Jordan creek about a mile and a half north of the German mill, a short distance above the village of Jordan Valley. In 1806, it included 50 acres of land and was sold for $6000, showing that it was a valuable property, with a prosperous trade and so near the base of the Blue Mountains. Succeeding owners from that time for a period of eighty years were Henry Neff, O. W. Oswald, Adam German, Abraham Riedy and his son Elias who used it for grinding grain and sawing lumber on orders. Then William Leiby became the purchaser who has operated it since 1887, chiefly for sawing lumber, assisted by his sons, Richard and Benjamin.

Elias Bittner established a small saw-mill about 1850 on the Jordan, a mile north-west of the Leiby mill, having been on the property now owned by Mrs. Peter Fink. The "Sand-Spring" is situated a short distance above it, where the waters bubble up in great quantities, and form the recognized source of the Jordan. He carried it on ten years, then sold it to Stephen Bittner who added a chopping mill and carried on the business jointly about fifteen years. William Leiby became the purchaser in 1877, and ran the saw mill for ten years, when he discontinued the business and removed to the mill above-mentioned. His father, Jacob A. Leiby, operated an apple-brandy distillery on the property near the mill for a while; he had operated another (formerly Elias Handwerk's) about 300 yards distant, for many years until his death in 1876. He served as county commissioner from 1872 to 1875. His father was Andreas, who had moved to this locality upon Lynnpport.

Nathan German operated a small mill not far from the Bittner mill from 1865 until his death in 1893; and his son-in-law, Edwin A. Weiss carried it on two years to finish the business. An Indian massacre is said to have occurred in this vicinity about 1755.

Tanneries.—A tannery was established at Saegersville by Henry Drumhower, who bought some land there in 1805. He carried on the business until 1812, when he sold it to Abraham Roeder; and Roeder continued it until his decease, when his son, Conrad, succeeded him and remained there until 1850. Charles Blumer owned it for a time; then Stephen M. Kistler became the purchaser and after carrying on the establishment three years, he formed a partnership with Godfrey, and they continued the business in the new place for three years, when Peter became the sole owner, and he erected another two-story brick building and established a tannery north of the road, the building being still mountain to Lehighton, the road being still familiarly known as the "Factory Road." This plant was run by water power, and a very extensive business was done for a number of years. He employed Solomon Walter, Frank Walter, Sr., and others from the vicinity, numbering upwards of twenty men; also a Mr. Dehring and others from Philadelphia. Then Jonas Hess, Solomon Hess and others were there manufacturing guns for a time. Several gunsmiths carried on gun-making in the township until the Civil War, they having bought the forged barrels at the Kutztown factory and made guns at their homes. It was abandoned in 1873. The property was afterward owned by Wilson Ger-in existence. In 1860, Peter formed a partnership with his son, Owen H., and after trading together for four years the father retired and his son-in-law, Thoms K. Moser, took his interest, and the business was conducted under the name of Peter and Moser, until Moser died in 1883. Moser's son, Oliver G., was in the firm for two years, and Howard A. Peter (Owen's son) bought this share, after which the business was continued for twenty years, till 1905, when it was discontinued.

FRTZINGER HOME, NEAR THE "BAKE OVEN."

Rifle-Factory.—From 1832 to 1844, Philip Hess, Jr., erected a large stone rifle factory, 35 by 95 feet, at the foot of the Blue Mountains in Heidelberg, one-half a mile west of the old "Balliet Furnace" (known afterward as the "Lehigh Furnace") and situated on the west branch of the road leading from Saegersville across the man and Peter German, who converted the factory into a distillery and carried it on until about 1900, when it was discontinued and Peter became the sole owner of the property, who has since occupied the land for farming purposes.

A "grinding-mill" was an important part of this enterprise, situated some distance west of the factory (where the "Reservoir" is located now); and there the forged iron barrels were ground from a circular to an octagonal form. The grindstone was made out of a hard hill-stone, and it was circular in form, set upright, two feet thick and four feet in diameter. The grinding process produced a loud, piercing noise, which was heard for long distances roundabout, occasionally a mile off. There were two forges in the factory and each hammer was nearly as large as an old "ten-plate" wood-stove, and, in operation, the strokes were too fast to be counted.

Powder-Mill.—On property in the township, near the eastern line, which was included with the furnace, now owned by Henry Blose, a man by the name of Babb carried on the manufacture of powder during and before the time of the rifle-barrel factory.

Two Indians were killed in the vicinity of this mill, not far from where the Kemmerer school-building is now situated, one by Christian Lauchner (grandfather of David, who is now 82 years old and resides in the northernmost dwelling of the township).

Carriage-Factories.—A carriage factory was started at Saegersville, in 1847, by Christian Greiner, who conducted the business for several years, then moved to Northumberland county. He was succeeded by Phaon Semmel, who carried it on extensively until 1874, when he sold it to Wm. A. Godshall and moved to Slatington; and Godshall continued the factory for several years. Then Pfeifly and Miller became the owner and they carried it on for a short time when it was discontinued.

Joseph Rauch established a factory at Pleasant Corner in 1864 for the manufacture of carriage wheels and operated it in a very successful manner until 1893 when he extended the plant and included the manufacture of carriages, farm wagons, and huckster wagons, on orders given, and continued its successful management until 1903 when he retired after having followed a business career there for forty years. Then he transferred the business to his son, Victor D., and son-in-law, Amandus P. Handwerk, who have since carried on the plant and maintained its reputation as a prosperous local industry, employing from 7 to 10 hands.

Machine-Shop.—After the construction of the S. & L. R. R. through the township, William F. Krum (who had carried on a blacksmith shop near "Handwerkville," for many years) erected a two-story frame machine-shop in the place of his smithshop and engaged in the manufacture of horse-powers, threshing machines and farming implements besides making repairs, and he carried on a large business, with the assistance of several mechanics, until 1882, when competition obliged him to suspend further operation of it. The frame of the building is still standing, though thirty years have elapsed, but the shop is practically in ruins. It was a useful enterprise while in active existence.

Cider-Press.—In 1890, William A. Haak erected a one-story frame building on the road from Leiby's grist-mill to the Haak school-house and equipped it with a mill and press for manufacturing cider for farmers in that vicinity, who supplied the apples; and he has operated it since during the Fall of the year. His largest production in a day was 3,200 gallons; but the average production has been from 600 to 1,000 gallons.

Distilleries.—There were numerous distilleries for the production of apple brandy in every section of the county before the Civil War but the revenue tax becoming too burdensome nearly all of them were abandoned. There is only one in Heidelberg, near Pleasant Corner. It was started about 1860 by James Smith, and subsequently carried on by his son, William, and then by his grandson, Henry, (now proprietor of the hotel at Pleasant Corner). Granville O. Bachman and James P. Hausman began operations here in 1912, and have since then been in the business.

VILLAGES.—The following villages have been formed in the township:

Germansville.	Deibertsville.
Saegersville.	Jordan Valley.
Pleasant Corner.	German's Corner.

Germansville is situated one mile west of Saegersville, on the Schuylkill and Lehigh R. R., where the company maintains a station for the convenience of the people. It is 35 miles east of Reading, and 7 miles west of Slatington. The Jordan creek flows through the village. Previous to 1842 it was known as "German's Mill."

The original owner of the land was Adam German, Sr., to whom 250 acres was patented in 1742, and 101 acres, 44 perches adjoining in 1786; and before the Revolution he established a stone grist-mill with adjoining stone dwelling-house which has been in continuous operation until now. [For history of this mill, see "Grist-Mills" in description of the township.]

Hotel and Store.—The building in which the hotel and store have been conducted, was erected in 1842 by Nathan German and he started the business. It was owned and conducted by different persons until 1866 when Peter Miller sold it to Jonas W. George and Wm. G. Grosscup who carried on both places together until 1879, when George took the hotel and Grosscup the store. George conducted the hotel business until his death in 1885, when Grosscup bought his interest and he carried on both until 1891. A. F. Hunsicker then bought the business and leased the property, and so carried on the establishment for seventeen years, when Howard A. Peter purchased the property, including the business, and he has since been the proprietor.

Post-Office.—A post-office was transferred from Saegersville to this place in 1853, and continued ten years; then it was returned to Saegersville, doubtless owing to political selection. Nathan German served as the post-master during this time. In 1884 an office was established in the store, and it has been continued since. The post-masters were:

Albert J. George, 1883-87.
 Joshua Seiberling, 1887-90.
 Jonathan Miller, 1890-91.
 Wm. G. Grosscup, 1891-1908.
 Howard A. Peter, 1908-

In 1913, the village contained 23 dwelling-houses and 115 inhabitants.

A hotel was situated a short distance south of the German mill along the road, and carried on in an old, log, weather-boarded dwelling-house by Abraham Riedy, Sr., Abraham Riedy, Jr., — Newhard, George Muthard, Conrad German and Jacob German. After it was closed, another hotel was started several hundred feet north of it in a stone building erected about 1820. Peter Wuchter, son-in-law of Conrad German, was the proprietor and carried on the business until 1833, when it was discontinued. At that time a party from this vicinity moved to Seneca Co., Ohio, consisting of Conrad German, Peter Wuchter, Henry Kistler and family, and Michael Kistler, Sr. and family. These two places anteceded the hotel now at Germansville, established in 1842.

An early store was started about half a mile west of Germansville, shortly after the year 1800, situated on land now owned by Betsy Moyer, who is in the 92nd year of her age. She said it was the first store in this section, and her grandfather was the proprietor for about thirty years until his decease. Shortly afterward another store was started at Saegersville by Joseph Saeger.

Samuel Geary, Sr., of Hereford, in Berks county, located in the village in 1835, after purchasing the land of Henry German, Sr. Subsequently his son, Samuel, Jr., became the owner; and then his grandson, Nathan, who has been the present owner since 1896.

Henry Smith, sheriff of Lehigh county from 1856 to 1859, was engaged as a blacksmith in the village, and also dealt in stoves and tin-ware. When he left in 1856, his place of residence was on the opposite, adjacent corner from the hotel. He was succeeded by John Heil.

Physicians.—The practicing physicians have been:

Wilson P. Kistler,	Jesse G. Kistler,
before 1870.	1896-1907.
Willoughby K. Kistler,	Elmer E. Behler,
1871-1896.	1907-

Blacksmith-Shop was carried on by John Heil for sixty years until about 1890; then lived in retirement until his decease in 1901, aged 86 years. He was succeeded by Jacob Danner, who occupied the place about five years. Then Albert J. Hamm (son-in-law of Heil) became the owner and he has since conducted the business, having previously had a shop at Jordan Valley four years.

Carpet-Weaving Shop was started here by Benjamin Heil in 1877 (who had previously been located in Lowhill) for weaving carpets on orders, and he carried on the business five years. He was followed for two years by his son, Franklin P., then by his nephew, Tilghman A. Heil, of Slatington, who has conducted the shop for the past thirty years.

Brick-Yard.—In 1875, Edward Neff engaged in the manufacture of building brick, a short distance north of the village and carried on the business about ten years. His production was wholly used in the erection of buildings in this vicinity.

Ice.—Daniel and Enos German were engaged in the ice business here for about ten years from 1875, having taken the ice from the mill-dam north of the village. For several years they sold the ice to different parties and shipped it to various places; but finding this too troublesome, they afterward sold their annual crops to the Angelica Ice Company at Reading, which attended to the cutting and shipment of it.

Potato Shippers.—For many years, the shipment of large quantities of potatoes from the Germanville R. R. Station has been a very important business which encouraged the farmers and brought annually much money to the community, and this has been largely expended by them in the improvement of their properties, and in many cases the erection of new buildings.

William J. Schmick established a grain-house and coal siding at the station in 1895, and began dealing in coal, flour, feed, grain, cement, crushed-stone, sand and fertilizer besides shipping potatoes, and he carried on the business until 1908. His son, Herbert W., then became associated with him in the business and they have since traded together. Lewis D. Leiby and Brother, and Bittner Brothers & Co. also established sidings and shipping points along the railroad, several hundred feet north of the station, and have been very successful. The total shipments, during the last season of 1912-13, exceeded 300,000 bushels.

SAEGERSVILLE is situated near the centre of the township, about a mile east from the Germansville Station, on the S. and L. R. R. and four miles west from the Neffsville Station on the electric trolley line. Michael Ohl, Sr., was the original owner of the land in 1760, and came to possess there upwards of 600 acres of land, which was subsequently owned by the following persons:

Peter Miller,	Thomas K. Moser,
Dr. Aaron S. Miller,	Tilghman Peter,
Dr. Edward P. Miller,	Owen H. Peter,
Samuel J. Kistler,	Aaron S. Lobach,
Wilson K. Peter,	Owen D. Snyder,
Frank G. Snyder,	William Fry,
Harrison G. Snyder,	Sally Snyder,
Peter Pfeiffer,	Maggie A. Zuill,
Edwin Hunsicker,	Gideon H. Peter,
Levi Hunsicker,	David P. Handwerk,
William Adams,	Reuben Reber,
David G. Handwerk,	Wilson F. Peter,
David Hunsicker,	and others.
Lewis K. Peter,

Hotel and Store.—In 1762, L. B. Ohl, son of Michael, established a hotel, and it was carried on by him for many years. In 1809 Joseph Saeger bought the property. Since then the following landlords have conducted the business:

Joseph Saeger, 1809-31.	James Hollenbach,
Peter Miller, 1831-75.	1887-94.
Willoughby Missemer,	Dr. Aaron S. Miller,
1875-78.	1894-1909.
Herman A. Snyder,	Edward B. Kuhn,
1878-81.	1909-11.
L. M. Holben, 1881-87.	Jacob Hahn, 1911-

The storekeepers in the same building have been:

Joseph Saeger, 1809-31.	Wilson K. Peter, 1873-
Peter Miller, 1831-59.	78.
Samuel J. Kistler, 1859-	Herman A. Snyder,
76.	1878-81.
Kistler and Peter, 1870-	L. M. Holben, 1881-87.
73.	James Hollenbach, 1887-till now.

When Dr. Miller became the owner in 1894, he erected a superior and commodious two-story brick building in the place of the old hotel. At the side entrance he placed two tablets; one, the original tablet of sand-stone, and the other, a granite tablet to indicate time of improvement by himself; which are as follows:

S. of Entrance.	N. of Entrance.
L. B. OHL IN	DR. A. S. MILLER
ANNO 1762	1894

Post-Office.—The post-office was established here in 1828. The postmasters have been:

Joseph Saeger, 1829-31.	Margaret S. Miller, 1895-
Peter Miller, 1831-52.	99.
(At Germansville, 1852-	Sophie R. Miller, 1899-
62.)	1909.
E. P. Miller, 1862-67.	Viola Kuhns 1909-11.
Alvin D. Kistler, 1867-71.	James Hollenbach, 1911-
Saml. J. Kistler, 1871-95.

Undertakers.—Harrison H. Hunsicker was undertaker here for upwards of 30 years, and practically conducted all the funerals of the township. He was succeeded by his son, James

A. G., in 1899, (while still under age), who has since carried on the business with trade covering the entire township.

Industries.—For the tanneries and carriage factories carried on here, see "Industries," in the description of the township.

Physicians.—The following physicians have practiced here:

Henry Sholl.	John Sholl (till 1861).
Mrs. Henry Sholl.	Griffith Sholl, 1861-68.
(formerly Rachel Steck-	A. S. Miller, 1865-1914. el.)

Dr. Miller has served on the U. S. Pension Board since 1901.

County Meeting.—This township was recognized for thirty years as a Republican stronghold in Lehigh county politics, and many meetings of the Republican County Committee were held here until the Delamater disastrous campaign in 1890. In August, 1913, the first meeting was held here by the Democratic County Committee, and largely attended; the addresses having been made in the grove opposite the hotel.

In 1913, the dwellings numbered 18, and the population 100 (in 1884 having been estimated at 142.)

Peter Race-Track.—In 1885, Lewis K. Peter, an enterprising farmer in good circumstances, with a great fondness for high-bred stock and fine music, established a private race-track, (1-3 m.) on his farm south of the hotel near the public road, and encouraged horse-racing for about five years. It was done to have the people of the community to assemble there and show the speed of their horses, which provided a considerable amusement. The occasions were not advertised like racing at county-fairs, simply circulated by parties interested who wanted sport of this kind, of whom Mr. Peter was the principal spirit.

During this time he also supported a band of music, of which he was the leader, (being himself a superior player on the clarinet); and this also contributed a great deal towards the entertainment and merriment of the people.

Pleasant Corner is situated on the Jordan creek, one mile and a quarter south-west from Sagersville, and two miles south from the Schuylkill and Lehigh R. R. The land was taken up by John Rice in 1744, but patented in 1748 to Michael Dotterer, who sold it to Conrad Dotterer in 1763, and Conrad sold it to John Hartman in 1765. Michael Evert secured a part of the land here in 1763, which was afterward owned by Daniel Evert and Stephen Werley.

The first name of this village was Holbenville, given to the business centre when started in 1851, by Jacob Holben. It was continued until 1857, when it was changed to Pleasant Corner by Daniel Rex, of Lehigh, and Abraham Peter, of Heidelberg, and the change is said to have caused "a good deal of commotion."

A grist-mill was established on the Jordan, in 1769, by John Hartman, where Pleasant Corner came to be located, about eighty years afterward. Jacob Holben became the owner in 1840, and during the next forty years it was owned by different parties. Phaon W. Bittner settled there in 1881 and erected a large three-story frame mill in the place of the old one, for producing chopped feed on orders, and also a machine-shop for making general repairs to agricultural machinery; and at the same time he began to deal in farming implements, flour, feed, grain and fertilizer; and in 1896, he embarked also in the business of shipping potatoes from the Germansville Station on the S. and L. R. R. These several occupations he conducted successfully until April 1913, when he transferred the business established there to his two sons, Elmer V., and Albert J., who have carried it on until now. His last shipment of potatoes for the season of 1912-13 was 60,000 bushels.

Jacob Holben, before establishing the store and hotel, had embarked in the foundry business about 1850, which he carried on extensively until 1865. He formerly resided in Lynn township, having located here in 1840. When he was elected to the office of Sheriff of Lehigh county in 1865 he removed to Allentown. He was succeeded by a number of parties including Solomon Zimmerman and Lewis Bittner. In 1881, Bittner sold it to his nephew, Phaon W. Bittner, who then transferred it to his mill property, and carried it on in connection with his other business; and the land became a part of the Rauch carriage works, which adjoined it.

[For the grist-mill and carriage factory established here, see "Industries," in general history of the township.]

The first store and hotel were started here in 1851, by Jacob Holben, and he continued proprietor until 1865, when he sold out to William Roth. Roth was there only two years, then sold to Owen Hunsicker, and Elias Bittner, who as a firm carried on the business until Hunsicker's death when Peter Bittner took his place. Afterward John H. Hollenbach secured Elias Bittner's interest and the firm then conducted an extensive business for some years when David A. Bittner became the sole proprietor in 1895; Bittner sold it to George A. Bachman, who made extensive improvements in 1901 by erecting a large three-story frame building with forty rooms for summer boarders and secured a large patronage. Bachman sold it to Henry Smith, in 1905, and Smith has been there since, carrying on a successful business. This stand has a very attractive appearance, and is in fact, as well as in name, a "pleasant corner."

A general store has been connected with the hotel.

A post-office was established here in 1873 with the name of Jordan, after the creek, and Lewis Bittner was the first postmaster, who served until after 1884. He was followed by David A. Bittner, George A. Bachman, from 1895 to 1905, and Henry Smith, since 1905.

A blacksmith shop was carried on here from 1880 to 1907, by Edwin Snyder; and a new one in a different locality, near the hotel, since 1909, by Charles Leibelsperger.

The status of the place in 1913, included 17 dwellings, and a population of 80.

DEIBERTSVILLE is situated two miles east of Saegersville, on one of the roads which lead from that place to the county-seat. Upwards of thirty years ago the land was owned by Frederick Krause. He was succeeded by Peter Butz, Henry Roth, and J. Peter Miller, in conducting the hotel, until 1842, when Miller sold the property to Daniel Deibert, and Deibert carried on the business for nearly forty years until his decease in 1881, during which time his name was given to the village. Then Wm. Metzger became the owner, including the store and land, but in the same year he sold the entire property to Harrison German. B. F. Eisenhard conducted the hotel after 1882. The place was carried on by different parties until 1910, when the business was discontinued, the last proprietor having been Milton Schaeffer.

The store business was started in 1848, by Levi Krause in the room adjoining the hotel, and shortly afterward he erected a store building on the opposite side of the road. He continued in the business several years, and was followed by different parties until 1883, when Isaac S. Dietrich became the store-keeper, who remained there ten years, then the store was discontinued.

The village of Newside is located in Washington township about half a mile north of Diebertsville, where the foundry of F. N. Peter and Brother is carried on for the manufacture of iron fences, fire escapes, etc., which are largely used in Lehigh and upper Berks counties. It was started by their father in 1861.

JORDAN VALLEY is a small village one mile north of Germansville, with a store, hotel, blacksmith shop and four dwellings. Eli Snyder started a hotel there about 1890, and after conducting it 20 years was succeeded by Franklin Semmel. A store had been started there earlier which has been carried on for the past twenty-five years by Osville P. Rex. A blacksmith shop was started by Albert J. Hamm twenty years ago. He carried it on four years; then different parties followed for short periods, the present smith being Charles Fritzinger. A post-office was maintained here for some years but it was discontinued when the R. F. D. came to be established through this vicinity. The place has four dwellings.

German's Corner is a small village near the line of Lynn, about a mile north of the railroad. Henry A. German started a store, and planing-mill, about 1895, which he carried on till he died in 1900, when he was succeeded by his nephew, Edwin F., who has continued the store till now. The mill was discontinued in 1910. It has seven dwellings. The Handwerk distillery was situated near by.

Post Offices.—Three post-offices have been located in the township. Saegersville (1829), Germansville (1862), and Jordan (1873); and two rural free delivery routes, one from Saegersville toward the Blue Mountain altogether in the township, and the other from Jordan southward which is mostly in Lowhill.

Two (Jordan Valley and German's Corner) were discontinued because the R. F. D. was introduced through their territory.

As a great improvement over the mail service here before 1880, the Lehigh Telegraph Co. established its line through Saegersville in July of that year, and placed an instrument in the post office there, conducted then by Samuel J. Kistner.

ELECTION DISTRICT.—The polling-place of this district has always been at Saegersville from the erection of the township, excepting several years when it was at Holbenville. The entire township, though still five miles square, continues to be a single election district, notwithstanding efforts were made to create subdivisions.

OFFICIALS.—The following Justices of the Peace and Constables have served in this political district:

Justices.—Among the early justices of the peace, who were appointed by the Governor of the State, there were the following:

Before 1840.

Henry George, 1762.	Wm. Fenstermacher,
John Jeremy, 1774.	1811.
Henry Booken, 1774.	Conrad German, 1812.
Robert Levers, 1779.	Daniel Saeger, 1812.
Peter Kohler, 1785.	Nicholas Saeger, 1817;
Peter Rhoads, 1786.	1829.
Samuel Everett, 1798-	Peter Haas, 1820.
1806.	John Saeger, 1826.

Peter Snyder.
George Rex.
John Weiss.

John Weida.
Jacob Zimmerman.

Since 1840.

John Saeger, 1840-55.	George Rex, 1840-48.
Jacob German, 1855-60.	Samuel J. Kistler, 1848-
Wilson K. Peter, 1860-	90.
65.	Samuel J. Kistler, Jr.,
Joel P. Geiger, 1865-1900.	1890-1906.
John A. Roberts, 1900-	James O. Hollenbach,
05.	1906-11.
Wm. G. Grosscup, 1905-	Eugene Handwerk,
—	1912-

Constables.—The following have served as constables since 1840:

Nathan Peter, 1843-4.	Harrison G. Snyder,
Geo. Hoatz, 1845-7;	1873-5; 1883.
1850-2.	Aaron S. Lobach, 1876-
John Reber, 1848.	82.
Henry Smith, 1849.	John A. Roberts, 1884.
Wm. Adams, 1853-7;	Sylvester P. Miller.
1858-9.	Henry L. Smith.
Peter Miller, 1856-7.	Fred'k W. Kressily,
Tilghman Peter, 1860-5.	1908-11.
William Fry, 1866-72.	Payson P. Heilman,
	1912-

POPULATION.—The population of the township since 1790 has been as follows:

1790	1860,	1469.
1800	1870,	1441.
1810	1880
1820	1890,	1437.
1830	1900,	1411.
1840	1910,	1238.
1850

The U. S. Census enumerators of the township since 1880 were:

Samuel J. Kistler.	Howard A. Peter.
Oliver G. Moser.	James B. Sauerwine.

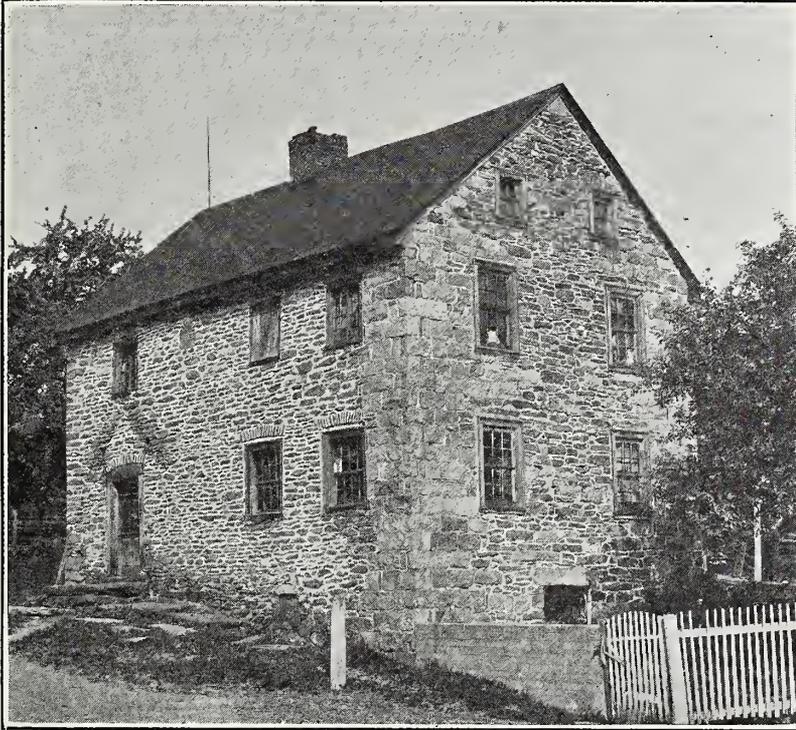

HANDWERK HOME.—The oldest surviving building in the township, of "Ye Colonial Days," is situated on the fine farm of Owen Hunsicker, two miles north of Germansville, and it constitutes one of the half-dozen dwellings which make up what is known in the community for many miles as "Handwerk-schtaedtel," on account of the activity, success, and prominence of the families there by this name.

It is two-stories, built of stones, 24 by 34 feet, over a superior spring of water which has not been known to run dry. The workmanship of the German carpenters is reflected in the hand-made doors, window sashes and frame, rafters, and strong wooden pegs, including iron locks and keys, bolts, hinges and nails. Both floors have two rooms and the connecting stairway is of heavy frame-work along the inside of the west end; and the inside cellar way is built of stones. In the garret there are large bins which were used by the first occupants for storing wheat, rye and corn, but now for colonial relics, such as flax-brakes, reels and spinning-wheels.

Over the large, open fire-place on the first floor, there is a heavy beam with an inscription, apparently of a religious character, which has become illegible and almost obliterated; and in the door-ways on the north and south sides there are the old-fashioned double doors, cut in half horizontally, through which eight generations of OLD TIME POLITICS.—In 1817, when Findlay (Democrat) and Hiester (Federalist) were candidates for Governor, Findlay was elected. During this campaign there was great confusion among the voters of the district; and then less than 20 Federalist voters, the large majority having been Democrats. In 1820, the candidates were the same; but, strange to say, the Heidelberg Federalists changed to Democrats and voted for Findlay, and the Democrats changed to Fed-this family have made their ingress and egress during the past 150 years. The sides of the building indicate the four points of the compass, as the buildings of the first settlers were generally made to do.

HANDWERK HOMESTEAD, BUILT 1769.

On the south side, over the main entrance, between windows in the second story, there is walled in an inscription stone, 12 by 20 inches, with the following legend:

HANNES HANDWERCK
MIT GOTT HAB ICH DIES
HAUS GEBAUT IM IAHR CHRISTI ANNO

1769

The wife of Mr. Hunsicker, the owner, is the daughter of Henry Handwerk, and she is now 79 years old, still active, in good health.

eralists, and voted for Hiester; and Hiester was elected. Joseph Saeger and Conrad German were at the head of this extraordinary movement.

The voters of the district were Anti-Masons; and afterward Whigs. In 1839, when Porter defeated Ritner, there were only 17 Democratic votes in the whole township (including what is now Washington) cast for Porter, these including Henry Leh, Daniel Hausman, Daniel Kiehner, and Nicholas Kern. The victorious Democrats then held a celebration at Allentown and they sent special coaches from there to Heidelberg for the 17 Democrats to participate in the great jollification in appreciation of their firm devotion to the ticket. It was a joyful occasion for them, and the event was long-remembered by the community.

BATTALION-DAYS.—The place in the township where "Battalion-Day" was held by the State Militia for the purpose of practicing military evolutions was mostly at Saegersville. The "practice" had become abandoned by 1860, and no attempt was made to revive it, because a new system came to be introduced after the Civil War. Other places were at Deibertsville and Hunsicker's Tavern (discontinued) one mile east of Pleasant Corner.

These annual occurrences were very interesting and they attracted much attention from all classes of people, not only from the immediate neighborhood but from distant places. They were to them in those days what the agricultural fairs have come to be since then.

PUBLIC ROADS.—The first entry in the record of Northampton county, at Easton, relating to public roads in Heidelberg was made in 1770. The application was made by inhabitants of Heidelberg and Lynn for a road from Michael Ohl's (Saegersville) on the "Great Road to Philadelphia," (about a quarter of a mile from Ohl's) by way of Barnet Giltner, Tobias Ebert, John Hartman's mill, Jacob Bachman, John Bear, and Micahel Seip, to the "Great Road leading to Philadelphia, by Michael Meyer's Plantation." Viewers were appointed and the road was laid out.

Many entries for roads were made there after 1770 until 1812, when the applications were entered in Lehigh county at Allentown. Previous to 1752, they were made in Bucks county, at Doylestown.

The following roads have been selected from numerous entries for Heidelberg:

1831, from Caspar Handwerk's on road from Easton to Orwigsburg, crossing Jordan creek to road from Heidelberg church to Allentown.

1835, from German's Mill via John, George, Abraham, and Martin Handwerk, and others, to Stephen Balliet on road from Kutztown to Mauch Chunk.

1837, from road from German-Mill to Mosser's, to Michael Smith's.

1838, from road from Henry Blose to Blue Mt., to road from Saegersville to Heidelberg Church.

1841, from road from Lowhill to New Tripoli, via land of Bernhard and Jacob Kressly, to State Road, from Kutztown to Mauch Chunk at Elias Lentz's.

1856, from road from Balliets' Furnace to Allentown, via land of George Rex, Daniel Krauss and Stephen Peter, to road from Kutztown via Saegersville to Leighton.

1857, from road from Pleasant Corner to New Tripoli via Daniel Rex, Abraham Rex, Michael Rouch and Benjamin Rouch, to road from Germansville to New Tripoli.

1859, from road from Saegersville to New Tripolis, via Elias Snyder, Nathan German, Frederick Speicher, and others to road from Germansville to Mosserville at Reuben Rauch's.

The total mileage of public roads in the township is 80.

Three prominent highways have been generally recognized from the beginning of the district:

East and West, from Neffsville via Germansville to New Tripoli; and from Slatington along the Blue Mountains.

North and South, from Lowhill via Germansville, to Slatington, and the Blue Mountains.

COUNTY BRIDGES.—Five bridges have been put up by the County in the township, four crossing the Jordan creek in a distance of two miles, and one the Mill creek.

Kressly Bridge is on the road from Pleasant Corner to Bittner's Corner, one-fourth of a mile north of the township line. It was built of stone, with five arches in 1871, at a cost of $5,000; and neighboring property-holders made contributions in its erection.

Holben Bridge is on the same road at the Holben Mill (now Bittner's), 300 steps south of Pleasant Corner. It was built of stone, with one span. It is the first county bridge in the township.

Rauch' Bridge is on the road to New Tripoli; 300 steps west of Pleasant Corner, near the Rauch Carriage Works. It was built of iron, with one span, in 1900.

Germanville Bridge is at the village on the road to the R. R. station. It was built of stone, with one span, in 1887.

Peter's Bridge is on the road to Schnecksville, three miles east of Pleasant Corner. It was built of iron, with one span, in 1901.

Previously all these sites were occupied by wooden structures, placed there by the township.

CREEKS.—There are three creeks which make up the water system in the township: Jordan, which has its origin from springs at the base of the Blue Mountains and flows a little east of south, to the west of the central, portion, passing into Lowhill, near the old Kressly grist-mill, in length five miles; Mill, a tributary of the Jordan, which rises near the middle of the eastern township line and flows along and near this line, passing into Lowhill, in length nearly, three miles; and Trout, rises in N. E. section and flows eastwardly two miles through the township, with its outlet in the Lehigh river at Slatington.

RAILROAD.—The Schuylkill and Lehigh R. R. extends through the central portion of the township from east to west, in length about four miles, with one of its stations in the township, named Germansville. It was constructed in 1874.

FARM AND WOODLAND.—A large proportion of the area of the township (17,000 acres) is woodland, which is estimated to be about 5,000 acres, comprising numerous scattered tracts in different sections, and timberland in a dense, unbroken forest along the Blue Mountains. The remaining 12,000 acres are practically farming land under good cultivation. Improved farms are in all parts of the township, even to the base of the mountain, and their successful operation is shown in the superior, well-painted buildings, with substantial iron fences in front of the dwellings. The largest annual crop of most farmers for many years past has been potatoes, running from 2,000 to 10,000 bushels, and it is a common expression of opinion by strangers whilst passing the attractive properties—"see the potatoes in that paint!"

NOTABLE SUMMITS.—A remarkable collection of rocks, called the "Bake-Oven" is situated on the summit of the Blue Mountains about the centre of the dividing line between Lehigh and Carbon counties. It is about 1,400 feet above the level of the sea, and on account of its elevated position has been used as a signal station in the U. S. Survey Department. It has been visited by many persons during the past fifty years, not only from the surrounding country, but by strangers, for its extensive, indescribable views; and the published reports of these visits have made the spot famous as a wonderful point of observation. The city of Allentown can be distinctly seen, 20 miles to the south-east; even the city of Reading, nearly twice that distance to the south-west. Tourists have declared that in some respects the views are superior to those from the Alps in Switzerland. The "Switch-Back" at Mauch Chunk, and the "Delaware Water-Gap" are also visible.

Another notable summit is about 1,000 feet west of the township corner called "Bear Rocks," in Lynn township.

RESERVOIR.—In 1908 the Washington Water Supply Co., established a reservoir near the headwaters of Trout Creek on the farm of Peter German (son of Nathan), south of the "Bake Oven," at the base of the Blue Mountains, for the purpose of supplying water for domestic uses to the families of Slate-Dale, Franklin, and Williamstown, in Washington township. It covers an acre of ground, circular in shape, and the depth of the water in the centre is 15 feet. The iron main has been extended to the borough line of Slatington, nearly five miles. It occupies the site of the "grinding-mill," which was a part of the Hess rifle-barrel enterprise, operated on this property upwards of seventy years ago.

VIEW OF BEAR ROCKS.

CHAPTER XXXV.

LOWHILL TOWNSHIP.

COMPILED BY ADAM P. FREY.

The township of Lowhill is situated in the central portion of Lehigh County. It was established by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Northampton County on December 18, 1753, in the following order:

"The petition of Peter Derr, that a large tract of land bounded on the east by North and South Whitehall townships, on the south by Upper Muncie and Weisenberg townships, on the west by Weisenberg and Lynn townships, and on the north by Heidelberg and Washington townships, may be formed into a township be allowed."

The territory thus set apart for a district or township was not designated by a name, but from that time it was recognized as Lowhill (doubtless from the low elevations of the numerous hills, as compared with the valleys). The petitioner was appointed the first constable of the district on Sept. 16, 1755.

Jordan creek and its tributaries (Lion creek, Switzer creek and Mill creek) flow in a very winding course, in a southeast direction, through the township and furnish the farmers with an abundant supply of flowing water. In early times, many grist mills were driven by these streams, but competition has caused them to be abandoned.

Numerous springs of the best water for domestic uses are found in all parts of the township, and their situation in the valleys led to the location of dwelling houses near them by the first settlers. Notwithstanding their position was rather low as compared with the surrounding land and by traveling over the township at the present time no buildings may be seen while passing over the higher places, until all at once, while turning a curve downwards, beautiful buildings and homes appear on account of these springs and small streams of water.

The land is generally very fertile, more so especially along the streams, and remarkably rolling in character. It is of a slate formation and well adapted to the production of large quantities of wheat, rye, oats, hay, corn and potatoes, particularly of the last named, for which the district has become famous. In proportion to area, the annual production of potatoes in Lowhill exceeds that of any other district of the county. In former years only the best soil in a field was selected to raise potatoes by the farmer; but at the present time the whole field is planted, even to the very tops of the hills and good crops are raised. The township contains about 9,000 acres, of which about 400 acres is timber land at the present time.

LAND WARRANTS.—The following persons took up land in Lowhill upon warrants dated as here indicated:

		Acres.
Michael Aver,	Feb. 9, 1750,....	38
Peter Boll,	Aug. 15, 1750,....	38
Valentine Bermirhoff, ...	April 22, 1752,....	63
Peter Boll,	Feb. 9, 1775,....	33
Martin Buchman,	March 20, 1767,....	42
Martin Buchman,	Sept. 28, 1768,....	31
John Bear,	May 19, 1767,....	54
Adam Cline,	March 28, 1751,....	217
John Correll,	April 26, 1751,....	61
John Correll,	Nov. 26, 1764,....	15
Peter Derr,	Feb. 7, 1747,....	51
Peter Doufance,	Sept. 26, 1747,....	127
Michael Dieber,	Nov. 21, 1786,....	28
Andrew Eshbach,	June 17, 1765,....	68
Martin Eighler,	March 18, 1767,....	67
Martin Eighler,	March 18, 1767,....	31
Andrew Eshbach,	April 28, 1767,....	42
George Ebenhart,	June 3, 1767,....	44
Martin Entert,	Aug. 31, 1767,....	22
Jacob Froch,	Oct. 9, 1752,....	36
Henry Fuerbach,	Oct. 23, 1753,....	91
Peter Frantz,	March 11, 1789,....	12
Philip Fenstermacher, ..	May 12, 1767,....	50
Henry Houser,	Oct. 25, 1744,....	125
Christian Hoffman,	March 17, 1785,....	42
John Hartman,	Feb. 24, 1789,....	6
Jacob Horner,	March 23, 1767,....	16
John Hartman,	Sept. 28, 1768,....	2
Michael Kimball,	Nov. 21, 1745,....	189
Philip Kerger,	Jan. 17, 1754,....	41
George Kint,	April 14, 1757,....	98
John Klotz,	Feb. 1, 1775,....	30
Henry Krellon,	April 10, 1766,....	102
Jacob Klotz,	March 16, 1767,....	69
Jacob Klotz,	Nov. 10, 1767,....	39
Michael Mosser,	March 23, 1767,....	79
Peter Neider,	March 30, 1768,....	53
George Oldwine,	Nov. 2, 1758,....	59
John Conrad Redd,	May 25, 1743,....	90
Jacob Riffle,	June 3, 1746,....	134
Maudlin Robenholder, ...	April 11, 1749,....	94
Andrew Rees,	Nov. 15, 1750,....	58
David Riffle,	Jan. 8, 1752,....	54
Jacob Row,	Oct. 21, 1766,....	58
Zachary Satler,	March 6, 1749,....	80
Henry Shedd,	May 9, 1753,....	57
John Christian Stahl, ...	Nov. 28, 1753,....	148
Peter Sell,	Oct. 1, 1766,....	40
Andrew Sendell,	Oct. 21, 1766,....	41
Andrew Slicer,	Nov. 10, 1767,....	24
Reynard Vogdeas,	Nov. 4, 1745,....	126
John Wolfshurter,	April 27, 1748,....	88
Jacob Weimer,	June 7, 1768,....	12

Of these names, only those of Philip Fenstermacher, Peter Frantz, Christian Hoffman, John Hartman, John Klotz, Michael Mosser, Jacob Row, and Peter Sell appear on the assessment-roll of 1781 which would indicate that all of the others who had taken out warrants were non-residents at that time.

TAXABLES OF 1762.—The following list embraces the taxable residents of the township for the year 1762:

George George, Collector.

Baul, Peter,	£10	Kiessner, John, . . .	£5
Boughman, Martin, . . .	14	Kind, George,	6
Bachman, Jacob,	10	Knerr, Abraham, . . .	14
Cerphas, John,	8	Knedler, George, . . .	6
Diel, Yost,	6	Leiser, Andrews, . . .	6
Dietrich, Adam,	5	Meyer, William, . . .	5
Dieber, Michael,	12	Moser, Michael, . . .	16
Esbach, Andrew,	6	Moser, Tobias' widow,	12
Eilert, Mathis,	6	Reis, Christian,	6
Ehrenhard, George, . . .	12	Rough, Jacob,	7
Fry, Jacob,	4	Ravenold, Peter, . . .	8
Fries, Yost,	4	Sendel, Andreas, . . .	7
Fogel, Jacob,	4	Sell, Peter,	6
George, George,	5	Shick, Valantine, . . .	10
George, Yost,	6	Shoemaker, George, . .	6
Grumlin, George,	4	Smetter, William, . . .	5
Gregelo, Henry,	6	Shnyder, Jacob,	12
Hornor, Jacob,	7	Stern, George,	6
Hilleman, Jacob,	4	Sinn, George,	6
Hilleman, Christian, . . .	5	Sieger, George,	6
Hartman, George,	4	Thomas, Engel,	6
Hospelhorn, Ludwig, . . .	4	Wilker, Jacob,	4
Hartman, John,	25	Winter, Jacob,	5
Husby, Jacob,	4
Hartman, Conrad's, son-in-law,	6
Klotz, Jacob,	9	Singlemen.
Keuffer, Francis,	4	George, John.
Kope, Christopher,	4	Hillman, Jacob.
Konfert, Michael,	5	Snyder, Jacob.
Knip, Christian,	4

TAXABLE RESIDENTS IN 1781.—According to the assessment for Lowhill made by the commissioners of Northampton county in 1781, the following persons were then property-owners:

Peter Bohl.	Simon George.
Andrew Buchman.	John George.
Jacob Buchman.	George George.
Nicholas Burger.	Jost George.
Gabriel Boppenmeyer.	Lawrence George.
Conrad Biebelheimer.	Henry George.
Andrew Dobber.	Jacob Heilman.
Michael Dieber.	Jacob Huner.
Jacob Dorner.	Christian Hoffman.
Stophel Eiller.	John Hartman.
Tobias Eber.	Henry Hartman.
John Eber.	Peter Hartman.
Jost Fries.	Peter Heilman.
Philip Fenstermacher	Jacob Housman.
Leonard Fry.	John Klotz.
Peter Frantz.	Abraham Knerr.
Jacob Fritz.	George Knadler.
John Fry.	Henry Kragolo.
Peter Fues.	Caspar Klotz.
Adam Geiss.	Peter Kocher

George Krauss.
Stofle Keep.
Martin Keep.
Peter Knodler.
Widow Leisser.
Michael Mosser.
Tobias Mosser.
Paul Paulus.
Jacob Rowe.
Jacob Rowe, Jr.
George Rowe.
Matthias Riffle.
Peter Rish.

George Stern.
George Sin.
Andrew Sande.
Paul Shoemaker.
Peter Sell.
George Snyder.
Ludwig Smith.
Widow Smith.
Caspar Thomas.
Adam Thomas.
Martin Wuchter.
John Wuchter.
Andrew Knerr.

Single Freeman.

Christian Heilman.	Jacob Shoemaker.
Michael Deeber.

Abram Knerr and Michael Mosser are each assessed six pounds, the highest in the township, and all others are assessed three pounds and below. The total amount of tax was £207 18s. 8d. George Krous was collector.

FIRST SETTLERS.—The following have been ascertained as the names of the first settlers in Lowhill township:

John Conrad Redd,	1743
Henry Houser,	1744
Michael Kimball,	1745
Richard Vogdeas,	1745
Jacob Riffle,	1746
Peter Derr,	1747
Peter Douthace,	1747
John Wolfshuster,	1748
Maudlin Rabenholder,	1749
Zachary Seller,	1749
Andrew Rees,	1750
Michael Aver,	1750
Peter Ball,	1750
Adam Cline,	1751
John Cowell,	1751
David Riffle,	1752
Valentine Bermishoff,	1752
Jacob Froch,	1752
Henry Shedd,	1753
Henry Fuerbach,	1753
John Christian Stahl,	1753
Philip Kerger,	1754
George Kint,	1757
George Oldwine,	1758

EARLY FAMILIES.—The following names represent the ancestors of the early families of Lowhill township:

Bittner, Andreas.	Klein, Peter.
Buchman, Martin.	Knauss, George.
Derr, Peter.	Koehn, Peter.
Deiber, Michael.	Krause, George.
Fenstermacher, Philip.	Klotz, Jacob.
Frey, Leonard.	Moser, Michael.
George, Simon.	Moser, Tobias.
George, John.	Moser, Abraham.
George, George.	Moser, Philip.
George, Jost.	Shifferstein, Andrew.
George, Lawrence.	Shoemaker, Paul.
George, Henry.	Slough, Joseph.
Hartman, John.	Slough, Nicholas.
Kuntz, David.	Weida, Peter.
Knerr, Abraham.	Zimmerman, Jacob.

RESIDENTS IN 1812.—The following were the taxable inhabitants of Lowhill township in the year 1812:

Henry Acker.	Jacob Kline.
Andrew Buchman.	Jacob Knauss.
John Buchman.	George Klotz.
Andrew Bittner.	Andrew Andrew.
John Bittner.	Jacob Leissa.
Michael Diebert, Sr.	John Lepig.
Michael Diebert, Jr.	Jacob Muthard.
Christian Delong.	John Muthard.
Daniel Dieber.	Philip Mosser.
Solomon Delong.	Solomon Hottenstine.
Adam Diehl.	Michael Moser.
Solomon Diehl.	Abraham Moser.
Sebastian Ettel.	Tobias Moser.
Michael Eberts.	Nicholas Ocher.
John Eberts.	Martin Oertal.
Conrad Eberts.	John Peter, Sr.
Balzer Fritz.	John Peter, Jr.
Jacob Fenstermacher.	George Rau, Sr.
Peter Frey.	Andrew Rupp.
Michael Frey.	John Rau.
George Folk.	George Rau, Jr.
Peter Frey, Jr.	Jacob Resh.
Andrew George.	Christian Smidt.
Christina George	Andrew Shnable.
(widow).	Christian Seager.
Henry Haas, Esq.	John Smidt, Sr.
George Haas.	Daniel Seigfried.
Frederick Holben.	Henry Smidt.
Christian Holben.	John Shrer.
Christian Holben.	Andrew Shifferstine.
Christian Haupt.	John Stern.
Christian Hausman.	Michael Stern.
Jacob Hausman.	Jacob Shoemaker.
Peter Hollenbach.	Nicholas Seibert.
George Hollenbach.	John Smith, Jr.
Christian Hartman.	John Weaver.
Jacob Hartman.	Peter Weida.
Henry Hartman.	John Weida.
Jacob Haaf.	Emanuel Wetzell.
George Heilman.	Jacob Zimmerman.
Tobias Heilman.	Jacob Beaker.
Jacob Heilman.	Peter Buchman.
George Haaf.	Conrad Bellman.
Nicholas Herzniger.	Adam Bear.
Conrad Jacoby.	Abraham Knerr.
Adam Knauss.	George Kuntz.
Conrad Knerr.	Andrew Knerr.
Andrew Knerr.	John Hartman.
David Kuntz.	Jacob Sherry.
Simon Kocher.	Conrad Smith.
Casper Klotz.	George Seibert.
Andrew Knerr.	Abraham Smidt.

Single Freemen.

Adam Frey.	Jacob Ocher.
Peter Freis.	Jacob Gressley.
John Kuntz.	Jacob Hausman.
Martin Serpert.	John Deibert.

Amount of tax, $170.55.

LAND OWNERS IN 1912.—The following are the land owners and tenants of Lowhill township in the year 1912:

Land Owners.

Names.	Acres.	Names.	Acres.
Acker, Alfrom, ...	35	Haas, Frank,	83
Bittner, Edwin, ...	33	Haas, Richard,	45
Bittner, George, ..	60	Hunsicker, Joseph, .	74
Bittner, Henry, ...	120	Hunsicker, Howard,	55
Bittner, Mrs. Na-		Heilman, Oscar, ...	23
than,	150	Heilman, Benjamin,	50
Bittner, William, .	104	Heilman, George, ...	58
Bittner, Albert, ...	4	Holben, Joseph, Est.	81
Bittner, Alvin P., ..	17	Mary,	10
Bittner, Owen,	138	Heil, William,	11
Beck, Frank P., ..	108	Holben, James, ...	174
Bailey, Charles, ...	149	Hensinger, Mrs.
Burkhart, Max, ...	25	Mary,	10
Bachman, Wilson, .	115	H a n d w e r k , W i l-
Bachman, Willough-		loughby,	95
by,	22	Hardner, George, .	86
Baer, John E.,	128	Hahn, Granville, ..	74
Baer, Lewis,	112	Hopkins, Thomas, .	71
Baer, Milton,	11	Knerr, Richard, ...	42
Bennecoff, Victor, .	25	Knerr, George, ...	98
Bennecoff, Benja-		Knerr, Edwin,	53
min,	69	Kunkle, Frank,	9
Bloch, Garion,	30	Klotz, George,	31
Butterwick, Mrs.		Klotz, Elmer,	63
Meta,	93	Klotz, William, ...	70
Billig, George,	10	Klotz, Edgar J., ...	139
Diehl, Reuben, ...	26	Klotz, Edwin M., ...	121
Diehl, Peter,	77	Kemmerer, Robert,	2
Diehl, Jeremiah, ...	47	Kocher, Harry, ...	74
Dengler, Tilghman,	17	Kressly, Cyprian, ..	82
D e L o n g , M r s ,		Kressly, Benjamin, .	11
Marian,	18	Kressly, Oscar, ...	20
Fries, Edmund, ...	15	Kressly, Frank, ...	165
Flexer, Moses,	115	Loch, Peter,	102
Faust, Frank J., ..	10	Lohrman, Amandes,	13
Fritzinger, Mrs.		Lowhill Church, ...	20
Maria,	91	Leiser, Alphonso, .	2
Fenstermacher, Jona-		Miller, Walter, ...	15
than,	7	Miller, Calvin,	32
Focht, Thomas, ...	58	Moyer, Milton,	41
Frey, Adam P., ...	24	Neff, Clinton,	75
Frey, Robert J., ...	130	Ouldt, Frank,	44
Frey, William F.,		Peter, Jeremiah, ...	116
Sr.,	80	Peter, Henry,	28
Frey, William F.,		Resh, Alfred,	27
Jr.,	60	Rockel, William, ..	33
Frey, John,	15	Rauch, William, ..	42
Frey, Mrs. Hettie, .	26	Reinert, John,	51
George, Frank, ...	42	Snyder, James, ...	17
George, Mano,	103	Snyder, Willoughby,	56
George, Phaon, ...	113	Snyder, Nathan, ...	130
George, Charles, ...	69	Smith, Moses, ...	29
Guth, Harry, Est.,...	15	Smith, Amandes, ..	35
Guth, Chester, ...	4	Seibert, Jeremiah, .	63
Greenawald, Alvin,	93	Seibert, George, ...	40
Grim, George,	81	Schafer, Milton, ...	2
Gunkle, William, ..	39	Stettler, Phaon, ...	7
Geiger, Wallace, ...	73	Shoemaker, Benja-
Hollenbach, Henry, .	57	mjan,	107
Hollenbach, Eugene,	64	Shoemaker, Daniel,
Hollenbach, Owen, .	70	Mrs.,	118
Hollenbach, Thomas,	25	Shoemaker, Gran-
Hausman, Frank, .	112	ville (now Trex-
Hausman, Elvin, ...	39	ler),	215
Hausman, Solomon,	26	Schadt and Diefen-
Haas, Solomon, ...	94	derfer,	133
Haas, Joshua,	100	Scherer, Frank, ...	27

Names.	Acres.	Names.	Acres.
Scheirer, Richard, .	127	Shellhamer, Fred, .	120
Semmel, Henry, ...	30	Snyder, Mrs. Wayne, .	48
Semmel, David, ...	26	Trexler, Harry, ...	453
Schmick, Henry, ..	39	Dion, George,	52
Schlough, Frank, ..	50	Eck, John,	57
Schuler, Jacob,	94	Wotring, Orville, .	60
Schuler and Bittner,	49	Weida, John,	2
Schuler, Albert, ...	140	Werley, Aaron, ...	58
Schuler, John,	40	Werley, Elias,	19
Schuler, Lucingus, .	15	Werley, Benjamin, .	19
Schneck, Lucingus, .	34	Werley, Owen,	15
Snyder and Krause, .	18	Werley, George, ..	89
		Zettlemoyer, Francis, .	90

Tenants.

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1. Beck, Charles. | 24. Grammes, Clinton. |
| 2. Baer, Granville. | 25. German, Phaon. |
| 3. Bittner, Reuben. | 26. Knerr, Wilbur. |
| 4. Bittner, Oscar. | 27. Kuntz, Edward. |
| 5. Brunner, Milton. | 28. Klotz, Martin. |
| 6. Brunner, Josiah. | 29. Klotz, Oliver. |
| 7. Bowman, Alvin. | 30. Lentz, Ellsworth. |
| 8. Beers, Milton. | 31. Lentz, Richard. |
| 9. DeLong, Tilghman. | 32. Millhouse, Elias. |
| 10. Dengler, Henry. | 33. Mumey, Harry. |
| 11. Eisenhard, Henry. | 34. Muick, Frank. |
| 12. Everett, Amandes. | 35. Peter, John. |
| 13. Fritzing, Richard. | 36. Seibert, Henry. |
| 14. Fritzing, Frank. | 37. Shellhamer, Aman-des. |
| 15. Feinour, Charles. | 38. Shingler, Thomas. |
| 16. Hausman, Harvey. | 39. Snyder, James. |
| 17. Hopkins, Daniel G. | 40. Snyder, Samuel. |
| 18. Hahn, Jefferson. | 41. Shoemaker, Henry. |
| 19. Hollenbach, Moses. | 42. Werley, Owen G. |
| 20. Hollenbach, Lewis. | 43. Werley, Morris. |
| 21. Herman, Charles. | 44. Werley, Monroe. |
| 22. Hartman, Elias. | |
| 23. Heintzleman, James. | |

Singlemen.

- | | |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Bennecoff, James. | man. |
| 2. Bailey, William. | 13. Holben, William. |
| 3. Brunner, William. | 14. Kressly, John. |
| 4. Brunner, Thomas. | 15. Klotz, Charles. |
| 5. Bittner, Astor. | 16. Klotz, Thompson. |
| 6. Bartholomew, William. | 17. Klotz, Frank. |
| 7. Focht, Osville. | 18. Lewis, Charles. |
| 8. Gordon, Frank. | 19. Lewis, Ed. |
| 9. Haas, Wilson. | 20. Miller, Claude. |
| 10. Haas, Jonas. | 21. Peter, Warren. |
| 11. Haas, Melancton. | 22. Snyder, John. |
| 12. Hollenbach, Tilgh- | 23. Shingler, George. |
| | 24. Stauffer, Samuel. |

EARLY MILLS.—

1. Michael Mosser, now Hollenbach's mill.
2. Jacob Becker's, now Bittner's Corner.
3. Philip Fenstermaker, later Schlicher's.
4. Kline's, now Lyon Valley mill.
5. Weida's mill, later Weidasville.
6. Bittner's, now Moses Smith.

I. MICHAEL MOSSER purchased a large tract of land in Lowhill township, along the Mill creek, near the "Trexler Deer Reservation," in 1760, there erected a large grist mill, thereby becoming the first miller of the township in that section of the county. This was established on the west side of the creek and carried on for many years, when it was rebuilt by Mosser & Fry.

In 1800, another mill was established on the opposite side of the creek by John Hollenbach and has been carried on by descendants of the family until the present time, the present owner being Thomas B. Hollenbach, one of the most enterprising and successful business men of the county.

At present the mill is equipped with the modern roller process and operated by water and steam power and is generally recognized as one of the most modern in the county; the flour made is of a superior quality and many patrons prefer it to all other brands.

A store, grist mill, saw mill and clover mill were established at the Jordan creek by Jacob Becker before the year 1800, at what is now known as Bittner's Corner. A warrant for this land was first taken out by John Hartman in 1768 and 1789, later purchased by Andrew Bittner of Germany, a son, Jacob Bittner, carried on the mill until about 1863, when he went to Heidelberg and died there about the year 1873, aged 83 years. The mill property came into possession of his son Jacob, who carried on the grist mill, store, hotel and saw mill and cigar-making was carried on at the same place by his son, Silas Bittner, in 1880 to 1888. In 1878, Jacob was assisted in the mill by his brother Tilghman, who had the misfortune of being caught in the cog wheels and ground to death. This was a great shock to the community, and people came from far and near to see the mangled remains. This Bittner's Corner mill was abandoned about the year 1890 and only a ruined stone wall marks the place at present.

About a mile down the stream from Bittner's Corner, Elias Kuhns operated a linseed oil mill before the Civil War, later a saw mill was erected and the oil mill was changed to a grist mill. Michael Frey some time later purchased the place and conducted it until it was bought by Peter Bittner, Jr. The saw mill was abandoned about the year 1898, and conducted only the grist mill until his death, when a Mr. Zimmerman, of Weisenberg township, bought it and rented it to Henry Dengler. In 1904, Moses Smith bought the property and is the present owner.

A grist and saw mill was built at Weidasville in 1840 by Peter Weida, and operated for about 50 years by John Weidas, Esq., Benjamin Weidas, John Weidas, Jr. The mill is now abandoned and the property is owned by Elmer Klotz at the present time.

THE FENSTERMAKER MILL, about a mile farther down the Jordan creek from Weidaville, was established about the year 1800, by Philip Fenstermaker. It was rebuilt in 1848 and rebuilt again and enlarged in 1873, after which it became the property of James Schlicher (commonly called Schlicher's mill), who carried it on for a number of years, when David Fenstermaker succeeded him. It was discontinued about 1900 and subsequently the property was purchased by Col. Harry C. Trexler, who added it to his large deer reservation.

THE LYON VALLEY MILL was built at the Lyon creek (generally spelled Lion) before 1800 by Jacob Fenstermaker, and he was succeeded by his son Elias. In 1829, Solomon Ziegler became the owner and operated it until 1848, when Joseph Klein (then known as Kline's mill), who purchased the property and rebuilt and enlarged a stone building and conducted it till his death. It was successively owned by: Lewis Bittner, Jacob Zimmerman, Jr., Ed. Zimmerman, Mathias Kuhns, Samuel Bridges, Esq.; rebuilt by Wm. F. Fry, Sr., in 1882, bought by Dr. Frank Holben in 1888, then bought by Wayne Snyder in 1910, to the present time, now called Lyon Valley Mill, operated by water and steam power. The mill is equipped with three stones for grinding. In 1912 and '13 the mill is idle and will be sold in the near future because Wayne Snyder, the owner, died. This property was bought by Frank Koons, of Allentown on Aug. 6, 1913.

INDUSTRIES OF LOWHILL TOWNSHIP.

A blacksmith shop was established at Clausville by Henry W. Peter in 1873 and carried on by him until 1893, when he was succeeded by Charles Stopp, who continued it for six years. John J. Peter, son of Henry, then took possession and he has operated it in a very successful manner until the present time. A wheelwright has been conducted in the same building or shop for a number of years by William Rogel and John Peter and others.

In connection with the blacksmith business, Mr. Peter has been dealing extensively in hides and his business has increased during the last few years so much that he secured the help of Amandes Everett and during busy seasons he often hires more help. All other blacksmith shops in the township have been abandoned, namely: Lyon Valley, Bittner's Corner, Jonas Kressly, Walter Miller, Ruhetown, Charles Bailey's Levi Werley's. At one time all the above-named places and several others enjoyed a good trade.

A MACHINE SHOP.

An industry of considerable prominence for many years until recently was carried on quite extensively by Joseph, Jacob and Jonas Kressly, three brothers, on the road leading from Lyon Valley to the Lowhill church. The place is now owned by Frank Kressly, son of Jonas, but the business is discontinued since Jonas died. All manner of farm implements were manufactured here, such as grass mowers, threshing machines, horse powers, treading powers (that time used), hay rakes, land rollers grain fanning mills, corn shellers, plows, harrows, cultivators, etc., as many as twelve men being employed to conduct the business, these implements were sold to the farmers over the surrounding territory for many miles, even beyond the Blue mountains.

A CARRIAGE FACTORY.

A carriage factory near Clausville was erected and carried on quite extensively by Levi Werley for nearly fifty years. He started in a blacksmith shop, and as his trade extended he erected additional buildings until he came to have a considerable plant from 1880 to 1895, when it was discontinued on account of his illness. His business was particularly successful and at different times as many as twenty-two men were employed. His carriages, wagons and sleighs became very popular and he enjoyed a large trade in this and adjoining counties.

WEAVERS.

Nathan Frey conducted a large trade in this township in weaving at his home, near the Lowhill church. His shop is still standing, built of logs, now used by his son William, the present owner of the farm, as a washing and butcher house. He made carpet, flannel, cloth linsey-woolsey; the latter named article was a very popular material among his neighbors, and when the wool industry decreased he made mostly carpet, which was also noted as a very good material. He learned his trade from his father, Peter Frey, who had steadily three looms in operation. Other weavers in the township were, Peter Bittner, Sr., Daniel Werley and Willoughby Snyder but at the present time no weaving is done in the township.

DISTILLERIES.

A number of whiskey distilleries were established in the township and carried on for a great length of time, but now all are out of existence.

The oldest distillery of rye and apple whiskey was conducted by Aaron Lentz, near Bittner's Corner, later conducted by Jonas George. Other distillers were: Peter George, Sr., Peter George, Jr., Jacob Derr, Jacob Zimmerman, Jacob Hartman, Phaon Hausman. The last place of distilling whiskey from apples was that of Mano and Frank George, who discontinued in 1904.

VILLAGES OF THE TOWNSHIP.

There are a few small villages in the township, namely: Weidasville, Claussville, Lyon Valley, Ruhetown and a few of lesser importance.

CLAUSSVILLE is situated on one of the numerous elevations found in the township, about ten miles from Allentown.

The first house or tavern was built by Daniel Schumaker in the year 1800; the town was so called after Daniel Clauss, who kept the tavern from 1834 to the year 1851.

The postoffice was also so named after him. The village contains at present a hotel, a postoffice, a store, a blacksmith shop and a wheelwright establishment.

The tavern was kept by John Shifferstein and Joseph Slough from 1830 to 1834; Daniel Clauss from 1834 to 1851; Martin Seibert, from 1851 to 1856; Jonas Seibert, from 1856 to 1861; Jonathan Haaf, from 1861 to 1884; Henry W. Peter, from 1884 to the present time, and the Claussville hotel is one of the most popular country hotels in the upper end of the county, the owner and his family are very accommodating to the traveling public and good meals and drinks are served and the management of the hotel is excellent.

The first store opened at Claussville was in 1830, by John Shifferstein and Joseph Slough, until 1844, when a new store and dwelling house was erected opposite the hotel by Levi Knerr, who was succeeded by his son, Richard, the present owner of the store. In connection with the store is a large huckster route, carried on by Wilbur J. Knerr, son of Richard, this route extends, through the townships of Lowhill, Weisenburg, Heidelberg, and Lynn. Wilbur Knerr enjoys a large trade in Kentucky and Indiana horses, with neighboring farmers and business people.

The first postoffice established in this village was in the year 1830, and the first postmaster appointed was John Shifferstein; he was succeeded by Levi Knerr, and then Richard Knerr, the present incumbent, was appointed.

WEIDASVILLE.—The land on which this village is located was warranted to John Gimbel, who sold it to Nicholas Gower, who, on the 19th of April, 1765, sold it to John George Smith, who, on Sept. 27 the same year conveyed it to John Zerfas and Feb. 22, 1769, it passed to Jacob Homer. On the 12th of April, 1804, it came into possession of Abraham and Andrew Homer, sons of Jacob. Andrew sold his interest to Abraham, Feb. 23, 1805, who, on the 22d of March, 180—, sold to Casper Schmick. May 26, 1811, Peter Weida purchased this tract of over 200 acres. It remained in the possession of the Weidas until 1868, when it was bought by Jacob Peter, who was joined by Daniel Kuhns, and continued by Daniel Kuhns until the year 1896, when it came into possession of Phaon Baer and others.

In 1830, a store was opened at this place by John Weida and his son Benjamin until 1864, when Daniel Kuhns bought the store and conducted it until 1896, when it was purchased by John E. Baer, the present incumbent.

In 1863, a postoffice was established, and John F. Weida was appointed the first postmaster, succeeded by Daniel Kuhns, later by John E. Baer, at which time the rural free delivery route of Schnecksville compelled him to abandon the postoffice in 1908.

The village at present contains only a store and six dwelling houses and twenty people living in it.

LYON VALLEY.—This settlement lies in the valley of Lyon creek, on the road leading from Allentown to Hamburg, about 14 miles north of the former city. The village, which consists of two places, namely, Old and New Lyon Valley, about a half a mile apart, was named after Lyon creek, a branch of the Jordan.

In the year 1845, Daniel Bittner came to the locality of Old Lyon Valley and opened a tavern and soon after a store in the same building. Jacob Zimmerman became associated with him the next year. They continued together six or eight years, when Bittner sold his interest to Zimmerman, who carried on the business until 1860, when it was sold to Dinkey & Mosser, who, in 1886, sold to T. D. Frey, but the tavern was continued by Zimmerman until 1872, when he too sold it to T. D. Frey and he continued both until 1879, when he sold to C. W. Haas & Bro. The hotel at this place was abandoned by the last proprietor, Jonas Fenstermaker, in 1885, and New Lyon Valley was licensed as the hotel place, but the store continued by the following owners to the present time: Osville Haas, John Heintzleman, John Hollenbach, Elias Hensinger, Peter Hensinger and Robt. G. Kemmerer, the present owner. This place was the voting place for a long time, but elections are now held at New Lyon Valley.

The entire village, both old and new, contains a store, hotel, grist mill, blacksmith shop, creamery and seven dwelling houses situated on the sunny or western side of this beautiful valley. Twenty-five inhabitants dwell here.

The proprietors of the New Lyon Valley hotel from 1855 to the present time (1913) were: Wm. F. Frey, Dr. F. J. Holben, John Adams, Wm. Shoemaker, Wayne Snyder, Oliver J. Fink and Frank T. Koons.

The postoffice at Lyon Valley was first established in 1857 and Jacob Zimmerman was the first postmaster and the different proprietors of the store were also postmaster in succession.

RUHETOWN.—In the southeastern part of the township lies a beautiful valley along the Jordan creek, where several farmers retired into small dwellings erected there, and as the German word for rest is pronounced (ruhe) they called the cluster of houses by that name "Ruhetown," and it still bears its name, but all residents are farmers now, while the several smaller dwellings do not exist any more. A great portion of the valley is enclosed by the Trexler deer reservation.

It is believed by some people that Balzer Fritz kept the first store in Lowhill, on the road leading from Claussville to Fogelsville, at a place where Andrew Schifferstein kept a hotel and which was later kept by Joel Klotz. It is now only a farm house, occupied by Clinton Grammes.

BITTNER'S CORNER.—Near the northern end of the Lowhill township is a place well known among the people of the township as Bittners Corner.

In 1768 and 1789, John Hartman took out a warrant for land in this vicinity. Soon after Andreas Bittner, a native of Germany, purchased the property of John Hartman, hence the name Bittner's Corner. Bittner had previously purchased other lands at the west corner of the road leading to Heidelberg township. In 1812, his son Jacob took possession of this property and bought the Jacob Becker mill and carried it on until about 1863, when he was succeeded by his son Jacob. The property is now owned by Peter Loch, of New Tripoli. At one time this was a very busy country place, having in operation a grist mill, saw mill, hotel, store, cigar factory, shoemaking and clover mill. The place now (1913) contains a store, hotel and five dwelling houses. Amandes Shellhamer is the present proprietor of the hotel and store.

LEATHER CORNER POST.—This is a somewhat odd name applied to a tavern stand in this township. This is probably the oldest hotel in the township, which was built before the Revolution and kept by Ludwig Smith from that time for several years. In 1786 he was succeeded by Christian Neshier. In 1806, Moses Coyne purchased the place and opened a store in the same building. Jacob Woodring was the landlord during the War of 1812 until 1826, when his son-in-law, Jacob George, became landlord until his death in 1898, being a Boniface for a period of 52 years.

The present hotel at the "Leather Corner Post" was built of brick in 1861 by John P. Baer, who was succeeded by Henry Yundt. The present owner is Walter Miller, who conducts a first class hotel and enjoys a satisfactory trade. The place now (1913) contains a hotel and three farm houses.

An early store and hotel was once conducted by Johannes Rau at the upper end of the township, the old log building is still standing and now owned by George Seibert.

At the place where Tilghman Dengler now lives was once an old tavern stand; it was conducted by Lafayette George at a time when no licenses were required to sell liquor, and when liquor sold at three cents a drink and a cigar in the bargain.

An Early Road.—On the meeting of the first court of Lehigh county, held Dec. 21, 1812, a petition was presented from the inhabitants of Lowhill and Weissenberg for a road "to lead from the house of Christian Hartman, in Lowhill township, through the land of George Row, to the house of John Bittner; thence to the house of George Shoemaker; thence to the house of Nicholas Werley, in Weissenberg township; thence coming in the great road leading from Heidelberg township, in said county, to Philadelphia." The court appointed Peter Gross, Henry Haas, Henry Good, Peter Kern, John Sieger and Peter Snyder as viewers. They reported at the February term of court 1813, that they had viewed the proposed route, and had laid out a road as suggested. The report was not acted upon until the May term, when, on the 4th of that month, it was confirmed.

Old Trees.—Close to the Lowhill church stands an old "oak tree," considered by the oldest citizens, long ago dead, to be over 200 years old. Peter Frey, Sr., who died Oct. 5, 1859, at the age of 80 years related to his son Nathan, that when he (Peter) was a little boy the tree had the same size as at the present time, and in 1798, and in 1859, when the second and third churches were built, they held services under the spreading, shady branches of this venerable "oak tree."

Another old tree, a "pine tree," standing on the farm now owned by William F. Frey, Sr., is of the same as related by the same old man, to overtop all trees in the surrounding neighborhood; both trees show no signs of retarding so far, and appear to be enduring for another hundred years.

CHURCHES.

There are two churches in Lowhill township, namely: Lowhill and Morgenland.

LOWHILL CHURCH is situated near the north-western boundary of the township. It derives its name from the township, and the members of the two congregations worshipping there reside within a radius of several miles round about, and some of them who moved from the district to other parts do still retain their membership.

The congregations had their origin in those of the Weissenberg church. The members of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations who worshipped there in harmony since 1749 developed a controversy which in twenty years led to a separation of some of the Reformed members and to the erection of a church for themselves within a mile to the eastward on an elevation, which commanded a fine view of the surrounding country, superior to that of the Weissenberg church.

The organization was effected at a meeting of the members held on the 27th of January, 1769, at which a constitution and rules for the construction of a church building were signed. Jacob Bachman, Jr., presented a tract of land of 3 acres and 30 square rods in extent for the site of the church and the burial place. The names subscribed to the constitution then adopted are as follows:

Jacob Bachman, Jr.	Engel, Thomas.
Jost George.	Jacob Bachman, Sr.
Nicholas Mannebach.	Nicholas Bachman.
Andreas Eschbach.	Christoph Knör.
Johann Hartman.	Heinrich Kempfer.
Johannes George.	Peter Kocher.
Peter Weiss.	Paul Bachman.
George George.	Johann Simon George.

At a meeting a subscription list was also begun for the purpose of defraying the expenses of building the church. In addition to the above names, the following (who afterwards joined this church) also contributed towards its construction, namely:

Sylvester Holben.	Peter Bohl.
Wilhelm Holben.	Abraham Knör.
Elizabeth Reichel	Frederick Schneider.
(widow).	Heinrich Ohl (Heidel-
Benhard Schneider.	berg).
J. W. Schneider.	Lorenz Bachmann.

Michael Deybert.
Johann Tiessluss.
Catherine Kempfer.
Phillipp Ennes.
Christian Reiss.

Johannes Reinsmith.
Wilhelm Stumpf.
Nicholas Kocher.
Michael Probst, Sr.

The total of the above subscription was £37, 13s., 6d.; additional contributions at a meeting held after the church was completed being £1, 16s.; total cost, £39, 9s., 6d.

The church was built of logs during the summer and dedicated on the 3d of September, 1769, by Rev. Philipp Michael. It was said to have been more carefully finished than other churches of that neighborhood which had been constructed earlier. Upon the dedication, Heinrich Ohl, of Heidelberg, presented to the new congregation a black altar cloth; Mrs. Heinrich Kempfer a white one (in those days called table-cloth, because a table was made to serve for the altar); Nicholas Munnebach presented two smaller cloths; Elizabeth Reichel (the widow of Johannes Reichel), a communion service, and Nicholas Mannebach and Abraham Knor a baptismal service.

The following members soon joined the congregation, mostly emigrants:

John Adam Geiss.	George Falk.
Jacob Bär.	Philip Fenstermaker.
Wilhelm Schmetton.	Mathias Schlimann.
Jacob Mussergenug.	Nicholas Impody.
George A. Guthekunst.	Nicholas Impody and
Adam Dries.	others.
Jacob Harner, Esq.

Soon the congregation recognized the necessity of a school house, for they did not like to send their children to the Weissenberg school, and it was resolved to erect a building for this purpose, more land was needed, and Jacob Bachman, who owned all the land surrounding the church, in part sold and in part gave the congregation 17 acres additional, so that the church and school lands comprised 22 acres and 18 square rods. This was done on the 19th of March, 1786. The school-house was built and a teacher appointed, who, as anywhere else, in consideration for the use and occupation of the land, led the singing in divine services, but for leading the singing at funerals and for teaching school, he was paid extra.

In the early history of the church, while Rev. Michael preached, in an irregular way, without a formal call, no baptismal record was kept. In 1772, Rev. John Heinrich Helffrich was called to serve the congregation, and by him the prior baptisms were entered. From that year on, the register was regularly kept until the time of Rev. Johannes Helffrich (who kept private memoranda, for the custom of having children baptized at home arose at that time, and they were not then entered upon the church register, and he and his successors kept their own private records, in which they entered notes of all their ministerial work, such as births, deaths, marriages and confirmations, in the most careful manner.

The second church was built in 1798, the old building having become too small. The old contests, too, were closed, since many of the young men had married maidens of the (Weissenburg) Lutheran faith, and these desired to go to church and join the communion of their faith, so nothing was easier than the transition by which the purely Reformed church was changed to a Union church. A new constitution was agreed upon, the church and all its possessions made common, and then the work of building was begun. On the 28th of May, 1798, the corner-stone was laid, with services conducted by Rev. Johann Heinrich Helffrich, the Reformed minister, assisted by Rev. Herman Jacob Shellhardt, who was chosen the first Lutheran pastor of the church. In the fall of the same year the same pastors dedicated the completed structure. The church was again built of logs, but artistically finished after the manner of those times. A neat pulpit and altar at one end of the longer sides, and galleries spanned the other three. Later the building was weather-boarded. The consistory, and the first Lutheran consistory who signed the constitution were composed of the following members:

REFORMED.	LUTHERAN.
Rev. Johann Heinrich Helffrich.	Rev. Jacob Herman Schellhardt.
Deacons.	Deacons.
Philipp Fenstermaker.	Jacob Harner, Esq.
Lorenz George.	Nicholas Imbotty.

After 1850 a new organ was placed in the church. It was constructed by Charles Hanzelman (who came to this region about that time), at Rev. Johannes Helffrich's house in Weissenberg.

The third church was built in the year 1858, located on the site which had been occupied by the old church. It was constructed of brick, crowned with bell-tower and bell, and finished in modern style. The corner-stone was laid on the 13th of May, 1858, and the services were conducted by the Lutheran pastor, Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, and the Reformed pastor, Rev. William A. Helffrich. A wicked, unchristian affair took place on this day, occasioned by the sutlers, who, carrying on their trade, as they did at many other places on festival days. In this wise it occurred: It had for many years previous become a custom in Eastern Pennsylvania for sutlers or hucksters, often to the number of twenty or more, to come to the church festivals, where many people usually congregated, and there range their wagons in a circle round the church, to erect booths, and to sell nuts, candy, cakes, beer and even whiskey. The proverb says, "Where the carcass lies there the vultures will be found," and by means of these hucksters a rough element was attracted, who turned the day into an occasion more similar to a wicked debauch than a decent Christian festival. Thousands of visitors came from near and far, and were present at these festivals, such as corner-stone laying, dedicatory services and, later, the centennial anniversaries, and so, owing to these hucksters, many of the people were employing the holy Sabbath day in trading, drinking, eating, or in walking through the woods about the church, engaged in laughing or frivolous conversation. During divine service they swarmed through the neighboring woods, while the church within was without worshippers, or the rough rabble ran noisily in and out, disturbing the services. The earnest church members were opposed to this disorder, and it was resolved that corner-stone laying in Lowhill should mark its overthrow. Both of the pastors resolved never thereafter to lend their presence at any festival gathering where the congregation should not be willing by resolution to forbid the coming of the sutlers, and as the pastors laid this matter before the consistory, and that body immediately resolved that at the coming dedication no sutler should be permitted to be present. This resolution, however, was not executed without considerable strife, even members of the church took sides with the sutlers. With the dedication day also came the hucksters in spite of notices published in the newspapers and erected their tents. But during the progress of the ceremonies several members, who were of the same mind as their pastors, induced the sutlers, by threats of prosecution, to strike their tents and leave. The fight against them extended from here to other churches, and finally the disorder entirely disappeared, although not without a desperate resistance.

On the 24th and 25th of April, 1859, the dedicatory services took place, sermons being delivered by the Revs. Joshua Derr, Thomas Steck and William A. Helffrich.

The organ was repaired during the fall of the same year and rededicated on the 25th day of September, 1859. Revs. Thomas Steck and William A. Helffrich preached.

On the 10th of November, 1865, it was resolved to build a new school house and an election was held to choose a building committee.

A roomy brick house was erected during the next summer and dedicated on the 7th of October, 1866, by the pastors of the church.

A handsome bequest of $2,261.32 was left the congregation in 1874 by John Holben, a venerable member of the church, upon condition that the interest derived from the same should be annually paid as salary to the pastors of the church.

In 1901, a second bequest was made to the congregation by Solomon Heintzleman, an old bachelor, living a hermit life, about one mile south of the church, near Lyon Valley. The amount was made by will amounting to $582.24, the interest of which was to be used for the keeping in repair his grave, monument and fence and lot on the adjoining cemetery and the balance of the interest to be used for the best purposes of the church.

A third bequest was made in 1907 by Reuben Zimmerman, amount of $500 also by his will directing the interest of which to be used annually to repair his burial place on the cemetery for himself and wife, Rufena, and the balance to be used as salary for the pastors in equal shares.

Mrs. Mary Klotz (nee Rex) presented two ornamental lamps to the congregation, to be placed at the side of the pulpit, which lamps make an excellent appearance.

The collection at the Lowhill church during regular services were lifted by deacons in wooden boxes until 1906, when two of the oldest church members, namely, John George and Peter George, put their heads and hands together and bought two perfectly finished aluminum collection plates, and the catechumen class, under the direction of Rev. Jesse Mengel, bought two more. The members of the class were: John Everett, Charles Snyder, Fred Greenawald, Edgar Kern, Pearl Wotring, Hilda Knerr, Jennie Hamm, Ada Haas, Lily Bachman, Clara Greenawald, Elsie Weiss and Mabel De Long.

Prior to the last-mentioned bequest, in 1886, the catechumen class, under the direction of Rev. J. N. Bachman, also made a grand bequest to the congregation, in the shape of a new Bible and Bible stand; the members of the class were as follows:

Adam P. Frey, Oliver J. Kocher, Charles George, Granville Frey, John A. Frey, Annie Frey, Ella Schafer, Tervillia Bachman, Sarah Greenawald, Ella Greenawald, Ella Fritzingler, Emma Fritzingler and Rosy Frey.

The Sunday school, connected with the church, presented the congregation with a new English Bible as a Christmas gift in 1908, and from that time on English services are occasionally held.

In 1900 a large new pipe organ was installed in the church.

The Reformed wing of the congregation are using the individual communion cups since 1909, but the Lutheran wing are still using the old cup.

The church is still heated by old style stoves, but there is a strong sentiment to install a steam heating plant.

The Reformed ministers of the church from the beginning to the present time (1913) were:

1. Philipp Michael, from 1769 to 1772.
2. Johannes Henrich Helffrich, from 1772 to 1810.
3. Heinrich Diefenbach, from 1810 to 1816.
4. Johannes Helffrich, from 1816 to 1852.
5. William A. Helffrich, from 1852 to 1867.
6. E. J. Fogel, from 1867 to 1877.
7. J. N. Bachman, from 1877 to 1905.
8. Jesse M. Mengel, from 1905 to 1912.
9. Milton Klingaman, from 1912 —.

The Lutheran ministers were:

1. Hermann Jacob Schellhardt, 1798.
2. G. F. Obenhausen.
3. Friederick Geissenhainer.
4. George Wartman and J. Däring.
5. Jeremiah Schindel, from 1837 to 1858.
6. Thomas Steck, from 1859 to 1866.
7. J. S. Renninger, from 1867 to 1878.
8. Milton Kramlick, 1878 to 1884.
9. Frank K. Barndt.
10. Milton Kuehner.
11. Henry E. Semmel, 1897.

73 Lutheran members.

The present (1913) membership of the congregation consists of 157 Reformed members and

The officers of the church are:

REFORMED.	LUTHERAN.
Elders.	Elders.
William F. Frey, Sr.	Frank Scherer.
Frank P. George.	Frank Hollenbach.
Deacons.	Deacons.
Elvin Bachman.	Henry Bittner.
Wilson Schuler.	Walter Bittner.
Henry Greenawald.	Francis Zettlemoyer.
Asaba Greenawald.	William Brunner.
Financial Council.	Trustees.
Frank P. Beck, Pres.	Oliver J. George.
Adam P. Frey, Sec.	H. H. Bittner.
James F. George, Treas.

The consistory and council have a regular meeting every three months to discuss matters pertaining to the welfare of the church.

Church services are held every two weeks in the forenoon at 10 o'clock, mostly in the German language, but a strong sentiment prevails among the younger elements to have more English sermons. A large cemetery is connected with the church, as a burial place for members only, which is crowned with tombstones and monuments of marble, granite and other varieties of stone.

A Sunday school is connected with the church. Its membership is (1913) 149 young people.

The sessions are held every Sunday forenoon at 9 o'clock.

The different choir leaders were: John Banner, Jessie Banner, Israel Banner, Peter Bender, R. Lichtenwalter, Erastus Roth, Daniel Miller, Wm. Stump, J. Adam Lichty, Oliver Acker, Simon Norgang, Granville Werley, and John E. Baer at present.

MORGENLAND CHURCH.—This church stands upon an elevation in the southeastern corner of Lowhill township, near a spot known long ago as the "Leather Corner Post," surrounded on all sides by small valleys, through which the Jordan creek flows at a distance of a mile from the church.

The church has from its beginning been a Union church. Reformed and Lutherans, divided and independent in faith and teachings, have equal and common right to all the church lands, church building and church yard, and make free, undisturbed use of them together.

The organization of the church is of recent date. Members of the Lowhill, Union, Jordan, Ziegel and Fogelsville congregations united, selecting this spot upon which to erect a house of worship, which should be nearer their homes and more convenient for them and their families.

On the 4th of April, 1857, a meeting was held for the purpose of selecting a site, which resulted in securing a piece of land owned by Daniel Sechler, for the church building, and of an adjoining tract, owned by Jacob George and Reuben Krause, for a graveyard.

Another meeting was held on the 13th of April following, at which it was resolved to begin the erection of a building without delay and to organize the congregation by electing a consistory. This election resulted as follows:

REFORMED. Elders.	LUTHERAN. Elders.
Jonas Mertz.	John Weida.
Solomon Hamm.	Daniel Claus.
Deacons.	Deacons.
Franklin Fritzingar.	Benjamin Weida.
Gideon Haaf.	George Klotz.
Daniel Sechler.	Reuben Deibert.
Levi Haas.	Peter Ertel.
Trustee.	Trustee.
Solomon Diehl.	David Heilman.
Treasurer.
Reuben Krauss.
Building Committee.
Simon Minnich.	Jesse Klotz.
Jonathan Diehl.	Michael Deibert.

The work of construction was immediately begun and on the 23d of August of the same year everything was ready to lay the corner-stone, with services held by Revs. J. S. Dubbs and William A. Helffrich.

On the 31st of August, 1858, the dedicatory services were held by Revs. Joseph S. Dubbs, Jeremiah Shindel and William Rath leading. The church is of brick, constructed in modern style.

The congregation afterwards provided itself with a pipe organ, which was dedicated in 1870 by the pastors, Revs. Fogel and Leopold.

By the year 1871, the old graveyard, which is small, was well filled up, and a piece of ground on the opposite side of the street was laid out in regular lots for a cemetery. It was dedicated by Revs. Fogel and Leopold.

In the year 1900 the congregation erected a bell-tower with a bell at the southeast corner of the church. This addition was also of brick and the lower part is well fitted out as an ante-room, so often necessary for congregational meetings, etc.

The Reformed ministers of the congregation thus far have been:

1857—Joseph S. Dubbs.
— Joseph H. Dubbs.
1867—E. J. Fogel.
1911—Frank Guth.

The Lutheran ministers have been:

1857—Jeremiah Shindel.
— William Rath.
— Owen Leopold.
— Elmer Leopold.
1910—Frank Keller.

Church services are held every two weeks alternately by the Reformed and Lutheran pastors in the forenoon at 10 o'clock. The church is warmed by stoves. The membership numbers 280. The services are mostly in German.

A Sunday school is connected with the church, which meets every Sunday. It has 146 members at present (1913) of the young people of the neighborhood.

The elected officer holders of the church now are as follows:

REFORMED. Elders.	LUTHERAN. Elders.
Lucingus Diehl.	Lucingus Schneck.
Max Burkhardt.	Benj. Heilman.
Deacons.	Deacons.
Charles George.	Geo. Heilman.
Richard Haas.	Monroe Werley.
Howard Hunsicker.	Robert Kemmerer.
Elmer Baer.	Allen Hausman.
Trustee.	Trustee.
Jefferson Haas.	Geo. Klotz.
Treasurer.
Elias Worley.

This congregation has no land adjoining the church for farming purposes for the use of the organists, as was the custom with other churches in this section. The organist receives a cash salary and is one that came from a neighboring congregation. The names of the choir leaders from the beginning to the present time (1913) were as follows: Prof. Harwick, William Walbert, Daniel Miller, Oliver Acker, Allen Banner, Prof. G. F. Werley, John E. Baer.

SCHOOLS OF LOWHILL TOWNSHIP.—The Lowhill church was built in 1769 and soon after a school was established. About the year 1800, this school was taught by Jacob David, Jr. After him came Jacob Hart, John Benner, Israel Benner, Sr., ——— Shreiber, Mr. Busse, Peter Bender, Erastus Roth, Daniel Miller and others. The township had only this one school until the year 1855. The members of the first school board in Lowhill township were: Peter Ertel, president; Levi Dornblaser, secretary, and Andrew Knerr, treasurer.

The township of Lowhill paid nothing toward the education of the poor until the year 1833, when 30 cents only was paid; in 1834, $0.82; 1835, $9.70; 1836, $15.45; 1837, $35.17; 1838, $41.32; 1839, $83.43. So it continued to increase until at the present time, when the school tax rate is six mills on the valuation on both real and personal property. Some time after 1855, the township was divided into seven districts, namely: Holben's, now Lyon Valley; Scheirer's; Liberty Hill, now Highland; George's, now Morgenland; Claussville, Lowhill church, and Waterpond, which is a joined school district with Heidelberg township. No accurate records were kept until 1871, when regular meetings were held and minutes of all transactions recorded.

The reason no records were kept prior to 1871 was that the people were opposed to the free schools law passed in 1834. This township did not adopt this law until 1849. The first school houses were of frame structure, with the weather boards placed upright, and the joints were closed by narrow strips. From 1870 to 1876 all school houses in the township were rebuilt again of frame, but of finer workmanship, and they were all painted with a dull red color, entitled the "Little Red School House on the Hill." The present structures are all brick and furnished in the modern style. The schools are all ungraded.

The following are some of the teachers of the different schools since 1871:

- No. 1, Lyon Valley—
- | | |
|--------------------|-------------------|
| I. J. Kistler. | Frank A. Schuler. |
| Owen Quier. | James Bachman. |
| Oscar Miller. | Phœby Dinkey. |
| John Sturm. | William Henry. |
| W. J. Muir. | Ada M. Fries. |
| A. H. Miller. | Henry H. Frey. |
| Geo. Haas. | Elsie Woodring. |
| James Holben. | John A. Everett. |
| Ammon Lichty. | Annie Haas. |
| Joel Bittner. | Olive Oswald. |
| Amandes J. Holben. | Francis Baer. |

School No. 2, or Scheirer's—

- | | |
|--------------------|-------------------|
| Wilson Fisher. | John Oswald. |
| Alvin Rupp. | Jennie Ebert. |
| J. W. Scheirer. | Geo. Buchman. |
| Owen Snyder. | A. J. Kern. |
| A. W. Troxell. | James Hausman. |
| Edgar Klotz. | Geo. F. Herber. |
| M. A. Richards. | R. A. McClellan. |
| Wm. A. Stump. | Wilmer Holben. |
| Walter Hoffman. | Edwin Follweiler. |
| Rev. M. N. George. | Cora Herber. |
| Milton Fries. | |

School No. 3, or Highland—

- | | |
|------------------|--------------------|
| L. M. Holben. | Henry Wehr. |
| Frank Kock. | Harry O. Knerr. |
| Robert Banner. | Ralph Leh. |
| W. D. Zimmerman. | Mattie Geggus. |
| T. J. Knerr. | Raymond McClellan. |
| Peter Hoffman. | William Masters. |
| L. G. Heilman. | Wilmer Holben. |
| A. P. Frey. | Elsie Peter. |
| Frank Schuler. | Ira W. Fisher. |

School No. 4, or George's—

- | | |
|-------------------|---------------------|
| Leon Snyder. | Geo. Mast. |
| James German. | George Hoffman. |
| Frank Heil. | Francis Lindaman. |
| William Werley. | Geo. Buchman. |
| Aaron Greenawald. | M. D. Wehr. |
| Harry Cope. | William F. Masters. |
| A. J. Herber. | Irene Hummel. |
| Chester Frantz. | Nora Werley. |
| Frank Wiltout. | Clayton Watring. |
| T. J. Knerr. | William F. Masters. |
| H. F. Hielman. | |

School No. 5, or Claussville—

- | | |
|------------------|--------------------|
| Alvin Rupp. | P. C. Bittner. |
| Levi Knerr. | E. J. Faust. |
| P. W. Snyder. | L. G. Heilman. |
| L. M. Holben. | H. N. Scheirer. |
| Sam'l Heilman. | Maggie Musselman. |
| W. J. Knerr. | Henry H. Frey. |
| Abner Buck. | Pearl C. Wotring. |
| H. F. Heilman. | John A. Everett. |
| W. D. Zimmerman. | Lily M. Rupp. |
| Edgar Acker. | Mrs. Irene Master. |
| G. P. Brown. | |

School No. 6, or Lowhill—

- | | |
|--------------------|---------------------|
| Daniel Miller. | L. G. Hausman. |
| Oscar Miller. | A. J. Holben. |
| Achilles Miller. | E. J. Faust. |
| Sol. F. Rupp. | S. W. Hacock. |
| B. F. Mohr. | Frank J. Herber. |
| A. J. Herber. | Adam P. Frey, since |
| William Stump. | 1895 to the present |
| J. Adam Lichty. | time. |
| Rev. M. N. George. | |

School No. 7, or Waterpond—

- | | |
|------------------|-------------------|
| Frank Herber. | A. H. Henry. |
| A. Diefenderfer. | Frank A. Schuler. |
| Nathaniel Peter. | Blaine J. Knerr. |
| I. W. Bittner. | Geo. Buchman. |
| J. H. Bittner. | Annie Seiberling. |
| A. J. Herber. | Charles Kunkle. |
| James Holben. | Wilson Scheirer. |
| Alfred Ebert. | R. A. McClellan. |
| R. J. Peters. | Elmer Kunkle. |
| Alice Shoemaker. | |

The township graduation system was introduced in this township in the year 1898, but the first year there was no applicant and the commencement was connected with that of the Weisenberg schools. The following is a list of the alumni and graduates of 1912 and '13:

ALUMNI.

- | | |
|-------------------------|------------------------|
| Class of 1899. | Hilda L. Knerr, M.E. |
| P. J. P. Heilman. | Class of 1907. |
| Blaine J. Knerr. | Walter Sittler. |
| Class of 1900. | Phaon F. Schafer. |
| C. A. J. Buchman. | Class of 1908. |
| Class of 1902. | Annie L. Haas. |
| Mrs. Estella Holben- | Class of 1909. |
| Hollenbach. | Clara H. Greenawald. |
| Annie A. Knerr. | Class of 1910. |
| Class of 1903. | Arthur W. George. |
| Henry H. Frey. | Clara E. Hopkins. |
| Class of 1904. | Beulah K. George. |
| Harvey A. Creitz. | Flossie B. Haas. |
| Raymond A. McClellan. | Class of 1911. |
| John Hausman. | Norman C. Hollenbach. |
| Class of 1905. | Vertie Q. Kressly. |
| John A. Everett. | Carrie A. Smith. |
| Class of 1906. | Lillie L. Kressly. |
| Wilmer P. Holben. | Lillian G. Hollenbach. |
| Mrs. Pearl C. Wotring- | Class of 1912. |
| Schuler. | Ralph Knerr. |
| Clarence P. Hollenbach. | Blaine E. Werley. |
| Clayton W. Wotring. | Total, 30. |

CLASS OF 1913.

- | | |
|------------------|--------------------|
| Paul Berkemeyer. | Norman D. Fenner. |
| Howard Haas. | Eddie Hopkins. |
| Lila Hopkins. | Verna I. Kressley. |
| Elma Norgang. | Willard Thomas. |

The following is the

PROGRAM
of the
FOURTEENTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT
of the
PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF LOWHILL TOWNSHIP in the MORGANLAND CHURCH on June 14th, 1913, at 7:30 P. M.
Music by Clauser's Orchestra.
PROGRAM

- Music.
Prayer, Rev. Frank Keller.
Music.
Salutatory, Paul Berkemeyer.
Recitation, "Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud," Elma Norgang.
Music.
Andre and Hale, Norman D. Fenner.
Essay, "How to Make the Home Happy,"
..... Verna I. Kressley.
Music.
Perserverance, Howard Haas.
Graduation, Eddie Hopkins.
Music.
Oration, "Labor and Genius," Ralph Knerr.
The Hero President, Blaine E. Werley.
Music.
American Patriotism, Willard Thomas.
Valedictory, Lila Hopkins.

Music. (Collection.)

Address and Presentation of Diplomas, Alvin Rupp
Remarks by the Chairman and others.
Benediction.
Music.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN LOWHILL TOWNSHIP
IN THE YEAR 1913.—There are two secret societies or lodges organized and regularly held in this township, namely, at Claussville and at Leather Corner Post. The one at Leather Corner Post is called the "Lowhill Mutual Aid Association." It was organized June 8, 1888, meets every Saturday evening before full moon in each month. The association was chartered in the Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh county and signed by the president judge, Edwin Albright, on September 1, 1890. The charter members were:

- Mano Klotz, President.
Wallace Geiger, Vice-President.
E. Henry Knerr, Secretary.
John P. Baer, Treasurer.
Irvin Ackey, Granville Klotz, Wm. H. Frey, Auditors.
Other members that signed first charter were: Solomon Klotz, Henry Henritzy, John L. Smith.

There were 261 members admitted since the organization to the present time (1913). Nineteen members died since organization. Four members withdrew. One hundred and six members were discharged. There are at present (1913) 132 active members.

The office holders of this association at the present time are as follows:

- President, Richard Haas.
Vice-President, Monroe Werley.
Secretary, Benj. F. Werley.
Assistant Secretary, Blaine E. Werley.
Treasurer, Chas. P. George.
Trustees, Phaon George, Elias Werley, Geo J. Klotz.
Auditors, Geo. F. Haas, Edwin R. Knerr, Oliver M. Klotz.

Knights of the Golden Eagle, Castle No. 486, was organized at Claussville, May 18, 1895. The regular meetings are held the first and third Saturday evenings of each month. The charter members were:

- Past Chief, Frank J. Faust.
Noble Chief, Geo. F. Haas.
Vice Chief, Samuel Deily.
High Priest, William Deibert.
Master of Records, Q. O. P. Faust.
Clerk of Exchequer, O. F. Heilman.
K. of Exchequer, Henry Peters.
Sir Herald, Calvin Freas.
Other members were: Edwin Knerr, Charles Diehl, John Seip, John J. Peter, Esq., Chas. Frantz, D. H. Leiser.

Since the organization of this society, 12 brothers died and 13 brothers' wives died to the present time. Five brothers were discharged during the entire organization, and 119 members have withdrawn for various reasons. The present membership (1913) is 126 active members. The officers conducting this society at present are:

- Past Chief, Frank Krause.
- Noble Chief, Llewellyn Guth.
- Vice Chief, Harry Mummy.
- High Priest, Frank Faust.
- M. of R., Geo. F. Haas.
- C. of Ex., O. F. Heilman.
- K. of Ex., S. F. Heberly.
- Sir Herald, Edwin Hopkins.
- W. H., Charles Herman.

The following is a list of persons found on the Mercantile Roll of 1913:

Bear, Elmer,	$6 75
Bennicoff, P. S.,	3 80
Bittner, Alvin P.,	2 85
Bittenbender, O. D.,	2 85
Dengler, Tilghman,	3 95
Fink, Oliver J.,	2 95
Hausman, Sol. D.,	4 25
Hollenbach, Lewis D.,	2 85
Hollenbach, Thos. B.,	3 70
Kemmerer, Robt. G.,	12 75
Klotz, Oliver M.,	2 85
Knerr, Richard J.,	6 75
Miller, Walter,	3 00
Moyer, C. H.,	2 85
Peters, J. J.,	2 85
Peters, H. W.,	2 85
Scheirer, Richard,	3 05
Shellhamer, A. S.,	3 25
Shellhamer, Fred.,	2 85
Smith, Moses H.,	2 90
Schneck, Lysingus,	2 80

MAIL ROUTES IN LOWHILL TOWNSHIP.

There were several Star Routes passing through this township prior to 1900, namely: Kutztown route, to Schnecksville; Saegersville route, to Macungie; Harrisburg route, to Allentown, and the various post offices were supplied, such as Claussville, Leather Corner Post, Weidasville, Lyon Valley and Lowhill, and the citizens of the township were required to go to these various post offices and get their newspapers, letters, etc. This often happened only once a week, as newspapers that time were weeklies or monthlies.

In 1908, when rural free deliveries came into existence, all these routes, except one, now going from Saegersville to Fogelsville, were discontinued and all post offices too were discontinued except the ones at Lyon Valley and Claussville. At the present time there are four free delivery mail routes passing through the township, namely: Jordan, Route 1; Schnecksville, Route 1; Orefield, Route 1; Fogelsville, Route 1.

At first many citizens were opposed to these free deliveries but now, after experiencing its comforts, those same persons would be more opposed if they should be abandoned.

There are, however, a few families that have to get their mail at a short distance from their homes, but those usually reside away from the traveled public road.

TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS.—Prior to 1840 the justices having jurisdiction over this territory were elected in districts, and their names will be found in the civil list of the general history. Those elected since 1840 are as follows:

	Commissioned.
John Weida,	April 14, 1840
Edward Beck,	April 14, 1840
John Weida,	April 15, 1845
Edward Beck,	April 15, 1845
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 14, 1846
Peter Weida,	April 9, 1850
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 9, 1850
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 10, 1855
Peter Weida,	April 10, 1855
John Weida,	April 14, 1857
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 10, 1860
Charles A. Wuth,	April 15, 1862
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 11, 1865
Daniel H. Miller,	April 9, 1867
Jacob Zimmerman,	April 8, 1870
Daniel H. Miller,	April 9, 1872
Jacob Zimmerman,	Mar. 13, 1875
Daniel H. Miller,	Mar. 19, 1877
Jacob Zimmerman,	Mar. 30, 1880
E. Henry Knerr,	April 19, 1882
E. Henry Knerr,	April 6, 1883
Ed. C. Hollenbach,	Aug. 20, 1883
Frank J. Faust,	May 1, 1886
J. Adam Lichty,	May 1, 1888
Frank J. Faust,	May 1, 1891
E. Henry Knerr,	May 1, 1893
James A. Holben,	May 1, 1896
E. Henry Knerr,	May 1, 1898
Frank J. Faust,	May 1, 1901
Peter Hensing,	May 1, 1903
John J. Peter,	May 1, 1906
Adam P. Frey,	May 1, 1908
John J. Peter,	May 1, 1911

Other township officials at the present time (1913) are as follows:

Township Supervisors.	Richard Scheirer, Treas.
Reuben Bittner, Pres.	Edwin M. Klotz.
Mano A. George, Sec. and Treas.	Constable.
Elmer Klotz.	Henry Dengler.
Township Auditors.	Tax Collector.
Benjamin Werley.	Warren Peters.
Walter Miller.	Assessor.
Robert C. Kemmerer.	Henry A. Hollenbach.
School Directors.	Election Officers.
Eugene Hollenbach, Pres.	Richard Haas, Judge.
Clinton Grammes, Vice-Pres.	Henry Seibert, Inspector.
Frank P. Beck, Sec.	Wm. Bailey, Inspector.
	Election Clerks.
	Charles F. Beck.
	John J. Peter.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

LOWER MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP.

COMPILED BY REV. MELVILLE B. SCHMOYER.

Nearly a hundred years after Macungie township had been formed, it was divided into two parts—Upper and Lower Macungie townships. The separation was made on the 3rd day of May, A. D. 1832. Hence the early history of this township will appear under Upper Macungie township.

Lower Macungie is bounded on the northwest by Upper Macungie, on the northeast by Salisbury (Salzburg), on the southeast by Upper Milford, on the southwest by Longswamp and Herford townships, Berks county.

The surface of the township is pretty generally level—a few sections being of a broken character, underlaid with limestone. The township is unsurpassed for soil-fertility, beauty of landscape, and improvements of various kinds. Wherever the traveller gazes, neat, substantial houses, huge Swiss barns, and fine churches meet his eyes, bespeaking prosperity and plenty. Here and there are a few remnants of the stately oak, hickory, chestnut and walnut trees, which once adorned the township. A few places, like the Flats, had been covered with scrub-oak. Deer were plentiful, and this township had been a favorite hunting-ground of the Indian. Nevertheless at no time did any of the settlers suffer at the hands of the Indian. In 1763 Indian outrages had affected some of the other townships; the settlers here were very much alarmed lest they also might feel the consequences of these dangers. A few timid ones had sought safety in flight from their homes, but events showed that such would not have been necessary.

MILLS.

The principal stream, flowing through the township, is the Little Lehigh, having its source near the Schlossberg, in Berks county, and emptying its waters in the Lehigh River at Allentown. Its chief tributaries within this territory are the Swabie Creek and the Spring Creek. The latter stream, in very old documents, also bore the name of Mill Creek, a name now foreign to the majority, unless by research they should have come across it. These streams water the land and help to make it fertile, as well as in days gone by, furnished water-power for a number of mills, some few remaining to this day. Amongst these mills may be named the following: Ludwig's, later operated as the Butz and Lichtenwalner Roller Mills, now in possession of Reuben Deisher; Romich's Mill at the Lehigh Church, later in possession of the Schmoyer's, and now known as the Wagenhorst Mill; Albrecht Mill on the Spring Creek, near Trexlertown, now owned by Mr. Guldin; Danner's Mill, now owned and operated as a roller-mill by O. J. Smoyer; Peter Romich's Mill, now owned by Mr. Fluck; Riegel's Mill, now owned by Jacob Reinhart; Seems' Mill, where formerly was also manufactured linseed oil and cloverseed was hulled. This mill is no longer in operation. Both of the latter mills were situated about two to two and a half miles from Emaus: and what was known as Knerr's mill. The Fritch Roller Mill, at Macungie, is of comparative recent date. The substantial stone buildings of these mills bear testimony to the excellent manner in which these old structures were constructed, some of the same standing a century or more.

EARLY SETTLERS.—Whilst the first settler of what was then Macungie township is credited to Jeremias Trexler, who located at Trexlertown in what is now Upper Macungie township about 1719, nevertheless the following years brought many settlers to this region, particularly after the public road had been laid out in 1732. Conditions of soil, natural water supply, and the very early establishment of a church with school, was a powerful incentive to the German mind for settling here. Amongst the early family names are found: Joseph Albrecht, Michael Danner, Johann Mathias Eigner, Nicholas Keyser, all of whom landed in 1727, Friederich Marsteller, in 1729, Daniel Christman, in 1730, Philip Schmyer and Johannes Riegel in 1733, George Wagner, in 1737, John Dietrich Gaumer, Michael Knappenberger, John Peter Walvert, George Adam Bortz, Frederich Klein, Jacob Friederich, Philip Lauer, Matthias Ludwig, John Wetzel, Wm. Meitzler and others.

LAND WARRANTS.—On Dec. 3, 1735, a land-warrant for 200 acres of land on the Little Lehigh, was issued to Philip Schmyer. It is described as "adjoining the lands of Hans Hage and Joseph Albrecht" and in it is further set forth the fact of his early settling here. For it says "whereon he has been about two years settled." The Patent Deed for the same tract was afterward issued on March 9, 1789, to one of his sons, Daniel Schmeier; for which tract Daniel paid one hundred pounds two shillings lawful money into the Receiver's General Office of this Commonwealth. The descendants of Philip Schmyer, numbering upwards of 25,000 are still in great numbers to be found scattered over Lehigh county, as well as through the other states of the union.

John Heist; Susanna, wife of Dewald Albregt; Benjamin, married to Maria Kuntz; and James, who went to Ohio. (5) Christian, who died in 1761; (6) Anna Margaretha; (7) Michael, married to Magdalena Küchel, having these children: Jacob, married to Maria S. Nein, Catharine, married to Conrad Fenal, Elizabeth, wife of Frederick Fenal, Gertrude, wife of Abraham Schwartz, Loves married to Adam Brouss, Magdalena, wife of Jacob Steffy (Stephen), Abraham, married to Susanna Stephen, and Rachel, wife of Samuel Yeager. (8) The youngest child of Philip was John Philip.

John Schmeier, son of Daniel, inherited a tract of 130 acres from his father, whereon he erected

ROMIG HOMESTEAD. BUILT IN 1805.

The children of Philip Schmyer were (1) John, who had been married to Waltborga Fegely, their children being, Jacob, Susanna, Maria Margaretha, Regina, John Daniel, Anna, Elizabeth and Philip; (2) Elizabeth; (3) Peter; (4) Daniel, who was married twice, the second wife was Catharine Keyser. From the first marriage were born Daniel and Philip; from the second; Maria Catharine, wife of John Butz, Peter, married first to Barbara Mosser and the second time to Maria Lick; John, married to Sarah Wetzal; Elizabeth, wife of Peter Butz; Solomon, married to Catharine Schmeier; Sarah, married to a substantial stone-house and barn in 1809. The inscription on the house reads "Gebauet von Johann und Sarah Schmeier, 1809." The house is standing on the farm of the late J. Benjamin J. Schmoyer, and whilst any number of houses of greater antiquity may be found throughout the county, it bears the remarkable record that in it there never has occurred any death nor was any funeral held from it since its erection to date.

Frederick Romig, the first of the family who settled in Macungie, came here in 1732, and bought a tract of land adjoining the Lehigh Church. He built a saw-mill on a branch of Saucon Creek, where now is Geissenger's mill. His sons, Frederick, Adam, Jacob, John, Henry, and Joseph, mostly located near their father, and the locality was known as the Romig settlement. Now it is generally known as Lehigh Church. Here stands a stone-building, erected in 1780, probably the oldest, as far as dates are ascertainable, in the township. It is now owned by Joseph Warmkessel. Across from said building is the mill, built by the Romig's. The stone-house on this property bears the date of 1805. About a quarter mile northwest from aforesaid dwellings, are the remains of the Romig private cemetery—the only one remaining of its character, as far as the writer knows, within the bounds of the township.

PRIVATE GRAVEYARDS.

Along a line-fence of Mr. Reichard's farm, underneath a couple of apple-trees, are indications of about a half a dozen or more graves, as indicated by the markers. Around it is a sort of worm-fence, indifferently kept in repair. Most of the stone markers are broken off near the ground. Only one stone any longer bears a legible inscription as follows:

“Johannes Romig
sohn von Heinrich,
ruhet hier in Frieden.
Er war geboren den 21 July
1782. Und starb den 1 Februar
1831. Sein Alter war 48 Jahre
6 monate und 10 Tage.
Leichen Text Psalm 39-56

In stiller Ruh
Schlafe auch Du Bis aus der Gruft
Jesus dich ruft.”

Adam inherited the paternal homestead, and lived and died there. His son, John, born in 1769, also settled on the homestead farm, and in 1817 sold it and moved to Allentown, where he purchased the Saeger Mill, at the east end of the Jordan Bridge. Drs. John and William Romig, of Allentown, were his sons.

Another of the early settlers was Michael Schäffer, who took by warrant, a large tract of land lying west of what had been Millerstown. We find that upon the 27th day of August, 1839, one hundred and ninety Palatines came to America by the ship “Betsy,” Richard Buden commander. Among these was George Friederich Schäffer, the father of Michael. Michael Schäffer built a massive stone dwelling upon the site of the present brick building later occupied by James Shäffer, his great-grandson. He and his wife there lived to a ripe old age, surrounded by their children and grand children. His wife died at the age of ninety-eight.

His son, Jacob, was married and lived with his parents on the above-mentioned farm. He was twenty-six years of age at the time of the “Fries' Rebellion,” 1798, and took an active part in the opposition to the “house tax,” maintaining that the said tax was illegal. When the government officers came to Millerstown he hurried home, saddled his horse, filled his saddle-bags with provisions, and fled to South Mountain, which was not inhabited at that time. Soon after his flight the soldiers surrounded his house and made violent demonstrations, demanding his surrender. When they were informed that he was not about they became furious, and entered the house to make a thorough search. They went into the bedrooms and ran their sabers through the bedclothes, to satisfy themselves that he was not concealed therein. The only room of the house that they did not enter was one in which Jacob's young wife was at that very time giving birth to a child. When they failed to find him in the house they went into the barn, where they stuck their sabres into the hay and straw in the vain endeavor to ferret out his hiding-place. They now caught the boy who was employed upon the farm, whom they tried to persuade to disclose his master's whereabouts. He persisted that he did not know. They thinking, however, that he knew, procured a rope, one end of which was passed around his neck, while the other end was thrown over a rafter in the barn. They now proceeded to pull him off his feet, letting him down again before life was extinct. They kept this up for some time, but as his answer was invariably the same, they finally gave him his freedom, and, after feeding their horses from the provender they found in the barn, they took their departure.

After remaining in the mountains for several days, Jacob found his provisions giving out, and not daring to return home, he went to Trexler-town, to the hotel then kept by William Haines, now occupied by Philip Moatz. Here they tried to persuade him to remain, but he, fearing lest some one might have seen him enter the house, got a bag of provisions and left; and fortunate it was for him that he did so, for in a short time after his departure the hotel was surrounded by the soldiers, who were eager for his capture. Jacob that same night rode to Maxatawny, where he remained with his uncle, Jacob Hawk, until the danger had subsided, when he returned to his family and his friends. George Schäffer, a brother of Jacob, lived in the old stone house at Macungie where Mrs. Schulze and her daughter resided. David, another brother, was taken prisoner during the "Fries' Rebellion," and died while held by the Tories at Norristown. He had also been a resident of Millerstown, where he left a wife and two children. His widow was afterwards married to a man named Miller, residing at the same place, and lived to be a very old woman. Many of Macungie's old citizens remember her under the name of "Granny Miller."

Jacob Schäffer was a colonel in the war of 1812. He died in 1831, at the age of fifty-nine. He had a family of eight children,—four sons and four daughters. His son, George, was a retired farmer, who died on April 23, 1881, at the age of seventy-seven years. One of George's daughters was married to David L. Barner. His other daughter was married to Meno Weiler, of Reading.

John, another son, bought the farm of his father, Jacob, whereon he resided until the time of his death, on Jan. 16, 1882, at the age of seventy-two years. He was married to Hannah Trexler.

His son, James, had bought the homestead, where he resided with his family of six children until he moved to Allentown.

Jacob, a son of John Schäffer, is married, and lived at Fleetwood, where he was station-agent for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

Willoughby was a bachelor, residing with his mother at Macungie, while Anna, the only daughter of John, married Dr. S. R. Rittenhouse, of Reading.

Charles Schäffer, a son of Jacob, Sr., attained a ripe old age.

Jacob's daughter, Elizabeth, was married to John Lichtenwallner, of Fogelsville. When a widow, she resided at Allentown. In the same city also resided her sister, Lydia, also a widow, who has been twice married. Her first husband was Jonathan Beidler, her second, William Good.

Christian Ruth, who came to America about 1760, in 1764 secured a warrant for a large tract of land near Lehigh Church. A part of the original tract is at present in the possession of the Peter Ruth estate, whereon resides the widow of Peter, together with her son, Frank, and daughter, Mary. A large portion of said original tract had been sold by Mr. Ruth to Daniel Schmeier, who, by will, bequeathed the same to his son, Solomon.

George Ruth, a son of Henry and Sarah A. (Schmeyer) Ruth, is a descendant of aforementioned Christian, residing at the Lehigh Church.

Adam Desh, who came from Wurtemberg, Germany, settled upon a large tract of land, lying along the South Mountain, about two miles south of Macungie. The patent for same bears date, Sept. 23, 1788. In 1793, he bought an adjoining tract of 179 acres from Conrad and Hannah Haas. He and his wife, Gertrude, had a family of six children—Jacob, Philip, Catharine, married to Melcher Baer, Elizabeth, married to John Stahl, Mary, married to Christian Reinert, and Sallie, married to Frederick Gaumer. Philip had been taken prisoner by the Tories in 1798, and died whilst a prisoner at Norristown. Jacob was married to Elizabeth Bauer, residing on the old homestead. Jacob and his wife reared a family of seven children: George, Daniel, John, Jacob, Charles, Maria, and Catherine.

Another pioneer settler is represented by the Butz's. The ancestor, John Butz, came to America about 1737, and resided near or at Philadelphia, where he died. His son, Peter, in February, 1761, bought a farm of 212 acres, located in Lower Macungie township, from Catherine, widow of Joseph Albrecht and moved his family thereon. This farm is situated in what is known as the "Butz's Gass" and some of Peter Butz's descendants reside in the immediate vicinity to the present day.

Peter left three sons—Samuel, who settled in Longswamp, Berks Co.; Peter who moved to the Cedar Creek, Lehigh county, where some of his descendants now reside, and John, who at his father's demise, bought the old homestead whereon he settled and lived to his death, Jan. 7, 1827.

Philip Lauer, settled upon a tract of 47 acres of land, which he bought April 10, 1810, from Nicholas Klein. This was a part of a farm of 180 acres, which was surveyed and warranted to Casper Blylor, April 29, 1746. It lies about a mile southeastward from the borough of Alburtis, and on it now resides, Mrs. Jonas Lauer with her son, Frank. On May 28, 1827, Philip obtained a patent thereon from the Commonwealth upon giving an indenture of mortgage thereon for the sum of $141.29. He had been a tailor by trade, was married to Elizabeth Wieand, of Montgomery county, by whom he had 12 children—George, Catherine, Peter, Jacob, Samuel, Henry, Daniel, Joseph, Judith, Jonas, Nathan and Sarah. Jonas resided in Ohio, Joseph at Philadelphia, Nathan in Mercer county, this state. Sarah, married to Ephraim Geary, lived in Berks county. Daniel bought the homestead from his father, and in August, 1841, he moved thereon. He was married to Sarah Schwartz, a daughter of Daniel Schwartz, of Upper Milford. He was, for a term of eight years, road supervisor of his township, and served a term of three years as county commissioner. He was a prominent member of Lehigh Reformed Church, where he held from time to time, various offices. He died March 12, 1878, at the age of seventy-two. He had a family of four children—Eliza, married to George Desh, of Macungie, Caroline, married to Michael Miller, of Topton; Franklin, who resides with his family in Iowa; and Jonas, who lived on the homestead, which he had bought from his father in 1875.

The original Christman came from Wurtemberg, Germany, and settled near Sigmund's Furnace, close to the line of Berks County, where Phillip Christman was born. It is related that while Phillip's father was out in the field on a wagon loaded with hay, he met with an accident by which he lost his life. The horse coming to a gutter refused to cross, when, standing on the loaded wagon, he urged him with a hay-fork which he held in his hand. This caused the horse to take a sudden spring forward, and he was thrown from the wagon upon the fork, one of the prongs of which pierced his heart, resulting in his almost instant death. After this accident Phillip's mother was married to Francis Wesco, and moved a short distance north of the borough of Macungie.

Philip Christman was married and had nine children, six sons and three daughters. His son, John Henry, was born Feb. 3, 1777, in the house now owned by the Dr. Herbst estate, of Allentown, and situated upon the mountain road leading from Macungie to Alburtis. When John Henry was four weeks of age, his father moved with his family upon a farm in Berks county. When John was a young man he went to Montgomery county, where he became a miller. Soon afterwards he got married and moved to a mill in Berks county, near Sigmund's Furnace.

Later he moved upon a farm situated on the line of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, in the township of Lower Macungie, midway between Macungie and Alburtis. His son, Jonas, lived upon this farm until it was sold by the sheriff.

John Henry Christman reared a family of twelve children,—seven sons and five daughters,—Jacob, Henry, Jonas, Daniel, Nathan, Samuel, Ephraim, Polly, Susan, Rebecca, Sarah and Lydia.

Ephraim resided at Macungie. Jonas although at one time the possessor of a fine farm, had lost all, and occupied with his wife and son, a small tract of land in Lower Macungie.

Daniel a son of John Henry Christman, settled on the farm now owned by Nathan Gehman, where he died April, 1856, at the age of forty-five. Benneville, one of her sons, had been the constable of Macungie, where he was also engaged in the ice cream business. Daniel, another son, had a shoe-store in Macungie.

Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk, of Hollandish descent, with his family settled upon a tract of land which he purchased from Peter Miller on the 19th day of November, 1784. This tract had been warranted on the 23d of July, the same year, and contained one hundred and fifty acres, less so much of it as had been cut up into lots upon which the village of Millerstown had been laid out. It was the same ground which is now occupied by that portion of the borough of Macungie lying east of Church Street. He lived in a house which stood at the corner of Main Street and the road leading to the village of Centreville. His wife's maiden name was Hollenbach, with whom he lived until his death, when he was buried at North Wales, Pa. His wife was a sister to the great-grandmother of ex-Governor Hartranft, and is buried at the Lehigh Church, this township.

Rev. Van Buskirk preached at the Trappe, then Germantown; afterwards Lehigh Church, together with Milford, Salsburg, visiting his congregations upon horseback. He paid a number of visits to the camp of Washington during the Revolutionary War. He built, and for a long time operated, the tannery, situated in Macungie, which was owned by his great-grandson, James Singmaster. He was an ardent supporter of Adams' administration, and in 1798, during the excitement of what was known as the "Fries' Rebellion," his life was attempted. While sitting in his house, surrounded by his family, a bullet was sent crashing through the window, but he luckily escaped injury. He was the only slaveholder in the township according to the Federal census. His family numbered three sons and four daughters.

His son George moved to Pottstown, where he practiced medicine. Jacob was an old bachelor, who, when a young man, went to York State, where for many years he kept a hotel and accumulated considerable property. When he died his estate was left to go to ruin, and was never settled up nor taken possession of by any of his relatives. John, a third son, settled in Virginia, where he owned a large plantation and a large number of slaves. Later, however, he sold out and moved to Market Street, Philadelphia, where he kept one of the principal hotels of the city. He was married to a Miss Eckert, from Berks county, and had two sons, one a lawyer, at one time Secretary of State of Maryland, where he committed suicide.

INDUSTRIES.—Reference has already been made to the various grist and roller mills in the township, there remain comparatively few industries to be referred to, inasmuch as the majority are located in the boroughs of Macungie and Alburtis, which will be referred to under the article "Boroughs." On the farm of the late Jonas Lauer, there used to be a saw-mill, which had been operated to within the last few years. At Spring Creek is located a creamery, built by the Loux's over a score of years ago. At present it is known as the West Auburn Creamery Company, which corporation has ceased to make butter, instead shipping directly the cream and milk to Allentown.

Another extensive industry in days gone by was the mining of hematite iron-ore. Within a few years previous to the "financial crash" of 1874 very rich and valuable deposits of this ore had been discovered in the township. The mining fever seized the people. Leases were made, shafts sunk, and the hidden treasure sought after everywhere. Ore-washeries sprung up abundantly. Many a farm was partly laid to waste, but no one cared as long as the returns came in the shape of rich royalties. Let coming generations gaze upon the unsightly holes in beautiful fields, and strive to bring the mud-dams back to a state, so as to reward the husbandman for his labor expended. The section, known as the "Flats," situated eastward from East Texas was especially devoted to this mining fever. About a score of washeries were located in the space of a couple of city-blocks. The region had been originally covered with scrub-oak. A number of people had been making their livelihood by grubbing the same by the day, and thus getting the land in shape for agriculture. These had been lamenting that the days of their livelihood would soon be undone, when the discovery of the ore, opened up the "golden-age" for them. However, now one can traverse the township from one end to the other, and scarcely anywhere even find the abandoned ruins of what were once active washeries. A goodly portion of the land has been reclaimed for agriculture, nevertheless many an acre will lie barren, because the expense of reclaiming would be almost unwarranted. At present it can be said that the principal industry of the township is that of agriculture.

RAILROADS AND TROLLEYS.—The East Penn branch of the Philadelphia and Reading traverses the entire length of the township. At Alburdis, this connects with the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railroad, which at present is leased and operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Company. The traffic on these roads is steadily growing, and it had reached such an extent, necessitating the double-tracking of the East Penn Branch, a couple of years ago.

There are two trolley lines operating through the township, the Lehigh Valley Traction Company, whose lines extend as far as Macungie, and the Allentown and Kutztown Traction Company, affording direct egress from Allentown to Reading.

VILLAGES.

EAST MACUNGIE (CENTREVILLE).—This village lies very close to the borough of Macungie, and is often referred to as East Millerstown or East Macungie. Its history is identical with that of Macungie, where all its mail matter is directed, as it has no post-office of its own. The oldest house in the town is its only hotel, which was kept by George Gorr, at which time Andy Mohr lived in a house on the corner of the street across the way.

The people of Centreville (now East Macungie) Union School District pride themselves that they have the advantage over most country school districts in that they have from 9 to 10 months school every year. Every child of school age, living in a radius of 2 miles, is entitled to attend school free of charge, hence the name of Centreville.

On Aug. 21, 1790, John Wetzel and his wife, Jane, donated three acres of land for the purpose of a common and united Lutheran and Reformed school house, for the use and benefit of teaching, instructing and the learning of the youth, etc. The deed conveying the same to the trustees, and the witnesses to the same were acknowledged before Ludwig Stahler, one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, in and for the said county of Northampton. Daniel Good and Isaac Jarret being named as the first trustees, and they at once began to erect a log school house on this land and named it the "Gorr School."

The logs for the building were furnished by Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk, of Millerstown (Macungie); the other expenses were borne by the neighbors. The building was made into two apartments, one for an English, the other for a German school. The loft of it was used by the neighbors for smoking meat.

In 1841 the log school house was torn down, and was replaced by one of stone, which was used for school purposes until 1871, when an arrangement was made with the school directors of Lower Macungie township, by the trustees, by which they took charge of the old stone school house, and bore the expense of laying the foundations for a new school upon said trust property.

Upon this foundation the school directors built a brick school building, and in 1878, made an addition to it, two apartments, one for a primary and the other for a secondary school, which are now opened during the winter months.

In Jan., 1868, permission was granted to the trustees to sell part of this trust property on ground rent reservations, the interest to be paid annually by order of the court.

In consequence of said permission, so much thereof as had not been appropriated by the school directors of the township, was sold at public sale. The annual receipts thereof amounted to $100.00, which is spent for summer school in addition to what the regular winter term affords.

Later the ground rent reservation was modified, by decree of the court, that all those who wished could pay for their lots for cash, and receive a clear title to them. Therefore the following parties took advantage of this offer: P. & R. Railway Company, Fred J. Huber, Sr., George Knauss (now owned by Robert McClellan), Henry Eisenhard (now owned by George Wieand), Mrs. Annie M. Hauser. The rest hold their property on ground rent reservation.

Formerly the trustees were chosen by the people of the district, but they are now appointed by the county court, to whom they must report, at stated times, the financial conditions of the said trust. The following were among the trustees: Daniel Good, Isaac Jarrett, John Singmaster, Levi Giering, James Gorr, Charles Foster, Aquilla Knauss, Benjamin Jarrett, Joseph Gaumer, C. A. Jarrett, William Dankel, W. C. M. Wickert and Laudon. The last two named are the present trustees.

The old stone school house was sold to John Huber, who is the present owner, and resides in it.

Among the teachers who taught this school since 1790, were the following: Mr. Grim, Philip Numbauer, Mr. Howe, John Figoda, John Van Buskirk, Charles Mohr, Mr. Miner, Mr. Brush, Mr. Gibbons, Jonas Miller, Jonas Gorr, Miss Eliza Roedler, O. J. Knauss, George Wimmer, H. W. Stephens, Miss Sadie C. Gorr, Mark Wickert, Milton Ritter, John W. Schantz, James T. Hauser, Miss Katie Faust and Charles Dankel, the present teacher.

Among the representative men, who received their early education, were Joseph Gaumer, John Singmaster, Joseph Bortz, James Christman, John Maddern, Benjamin Jarrett, Jonas Wescoe and others.

The indenture, conveying the property to the trustees, is an instrument fraught with more than ordinary interest, and follows in full:

"This Indenture, made the twenty-first day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety, and in the American Independence the Fourteenth, Between John Wetzel, of Macungie township, in the county of Northampton and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Esquire, and Jane, his wife, of the one part, and Daniel Good, of Upper Milford township, in the said county of Northampton, and Isaac Jarrett, of the said township of Macungie, both trustees, of the other part,

"Witnesseth, that the said John Wetzel and Jane, his wife, for and in consideration of the sum of Twenty Shillings in Specie, to them in hand well and truly paid by them, the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, at and before the en-sealing and delivery hereof, the receipt whereof they do hereby acknowledge, and thereof acquit and forever discharge the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and successor or successors, by these presents have granted, bargained, sold, released, and confirmed, and by these presents do grant, bargain, sell, release, and confirm unto them the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, as trustees, to their heirs and assigns, their successor or successors, to and for the sole purpose of building, erecting, and holding a common and united Lutheran and Reformed house of schooling, and to keep the instructions for the youth, &c., therein, All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of ground situate, lying, and being in the said township of Macungie, Beginning at a stone corner, in a line of land of Edward Jarrett; thence by same north fifty-eight perches to a white oak sapling; thence by the said John Wetzel's land, and partly a public road, south thirty-six degrees and a half, east twenty-two perches and a half to a stone, south twenty-five degrees, east seventeen perches to a stone, and south forty degrees, west thirty-two perches, to the place of Beginning, Containing three acres, one hundred and nineteen perches of land, and the allowance of six per cent. for roads, etc. It being a part of a certain tract of land of about sixty-three acres, which the Honourable, the Supreme Executive Council, of the said Commonwealth, by patent of the fourteenth day of June, A. D. 1783, under the hand of His Excellency John Dickenson, Esquire, President of the said Supreme Executive Council, and the great seal of the said Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; for the consideration therein mentioned, granted, and confirmed unto the said John Wetzel in fee, under the reservation of the fifth part of all gold and silver ore for the use of the said Commonwealth, to be delivered at the pit's mouth clear of all charges.

"As in and by the said recited patent, enrolled in the Rolls offices at Philadelphia, in patent book No. 2, page 39, more at large will appear.

"Together also with, all and singular, the buildings and improvements, ways, woods, waters, water-courses, rights, liberties, privileges, hereditaments, and appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertain-ing, and the reversions and remainders, rents, issues, and profits thereof, and all the estate, right, titles, interest, use, possession, property, claim, and demand whatsoever, both in law and equity, or otherwise, howsoever, of them, the said John Wetzel and Jane, his wife, of, in, and to the same, and every part or parcel thereof, to have and to hold the said described lot or piece of three acres one hundred and nineteen perches of land, and the allowance, as aforesaid hereditaments and premises hereby granted, or mentioned, or intended so to be, with the appurtenances unto the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, their successor or successors, their heirs and assigns, to the only proper use and behoof of the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, their successor or successors, their heirs and assigns, in fee forever. In trust, nevertheless, to and for the sole purpose of a common and united Lutheran and Reformed school-house, and a house for the use and benefit of teaching, instructing, and the learning of the youth, etc. And the said John Wetzel, for him and his heirs, doth covenant, grant, and agree to and with the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, as trustees, their successor or successors, their heirs and assigns, that he, the said John Wetzel and his heirs, the said above described lot or piece of three acres one hundred and nineteen perches of ground, and the allowance as aforesaid, hereditaments and premises, hereby granted, or meant, or mentioned, or intended so to be, with the appurtenances unto the said Daniel Good and Isaac Jarrett, their successor or successors, their heirs and assigns, against him, the said John Wetzel, and his heirs, and against all and every other person or persons whomsoever lawfully claiming, or to claim by, from, or under him, them, or any of them in manner and form aforesaid, shall and will warrant and forever defend by these presents.

"In witness whereof," etc.

The witnesses to this instrument were Nicholas Loras and Peter Schmoyer; and it was acknowledged before Ludwig Stahler, one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Northampton.

East Macungie has one hotel, one school-house, a store, coal and lumber yard, one cigar manufactory, and its population is about three hundred.

EAST TEXAS.—This village, which was at first known by the name of Macungie Square, is situated upon a high bluff of the Lehigh Creek, and has at present two hundred and thirty-eight inhabitants. In 1830 there were three buildings upon the site of this town,—an old school-house, of which we shall make mention hereafter; an old stone house where the hotel now stands, and a building near by in which a general store was kept. In 1845 the first hotel of the village was erected, which has since been enlarged. At this hotel one part of the inhabitants of Lower Macungie township, outside of the Borough of Macungie, cast their votes. The second name given to the village was that of New Texas, which name it kept until the year 1872. A number of unsuccessful attempts had been made previous to this time to have the post-office established in the village. Finally Stephen Acker, the "leading spirit" of the place, got up a petition signed by six citizens and several outside postmasters, asking the government for an office. His efforts were rewarded with success, and a post-office was established in the year last mentioned, and at the suggestion of Mr. Acker its present name, East Texas, was given to both the village and the office. The office was first kept in the store of Benjamin K. Keck. At present it is kept in the store of Levi Butz. There are in the village two hotels, one general store, and two churches—an Evangelical and United Brethren.

On the 24th of September, 1790, three men, viz: Andrew Eisenhard, Cornelius Hughes, and John Herman, entered into an agreement, and made themselves responsible for the donation of two acres of land; the first named to give one acre, and each of the other two half an acre, "for a school place, and for no other purposes, forever." And we do further promise and agree by these presents that we will build a house on the said described land that shall be sufficient for a school-house; this we promise to build free and complete this fall." The same year a log house was built upon the above tract, which is situate in East Texas. Sixty years ago this house was torn down and a second one built of logs, which in 1857 was replaced by a brick building with steeple and bell.

On the 24th of October, 1874, the greater part of the ground not occupied by the building was cut into lots, which were sold subject to ground rent, the annual interest of which amounts to the sum of two hundred and twenty-six dollars. Part of this sum is annually expended for summer school.

WESCOESVILLE.—Wescoesville is a small village of upwards of 300 inhabitants, situated about 5 miles westward from Allentown, being situated on the old stage road from Allentown to Kutztown. Since the building of the trolley, there is easy access to the place, and the same has helped more to its development than all previous years of its existence, as far as the erection of houses is concerned. Among the original settlers of this locality are found the names of the Bortz's, Bastian's and the Mink's.

Three Bortz brothers, Henry, George and John Jacob, arrived in America in about 1781. Henry settled in Oley, George in Macungie twsp., above the present borough of Macungie; and John Jacob in Long Swamp township, Berks county. Coming over from Oley, Henry built a saw-mill on the Cedar Creek, as well as a log-house.

In 1797, he built the hotel at Wescoesville, the original walls are still standing to-day, although there have been made some modifications to the place. Henry Bortz conducted this hostelry until 1811, when he died. It went in the name of the Henry Bortz estate until 1814, when his son, Henry, Jr., bought the same and took charge, conducting it to the time of his death in 1828. The place then was sold to Philip Wesco. At this time there were only about two other houses at this place, one of them a log-house above the hotel, in which Mr. Bortz's mother resided. The same year, 1828, Jonas Faust came and began store in an old stone-house. A Mr. Boyer conducted the hotel for a year or two, when Israel Wesco moved on the hotel, and, in 1837, bought the same from Philip Wesco. Jonas Faust conducted the store to 1848, when he sold out to Wm. Ritter, who in 1850, sold to Walter P. Huber. Israel Wesco dying in 1858, the estate was then sold in 1860. Walter Huber bought the hotel and part of the farm, Wm. Mink buying the balance, consisting of the store-house and some land. In 1861, Walter Huber changed the hotel into a store and held the property to 1868. In 1861, Wm. Mink built the brick building, where is the present store, and it became the hotel, being conducted by Mr. Mink, later by Moses Schadt. From 1868 to 1876, the hotel was conducted by Amandus Marks. In the Centennial Year, Jonas Wieand bought the then hotel property and lot, and changed the same to a store; Jesse Bortz, who had become the owner, moved the hotel back to its original place, where it has remained to date, the present owner being Willoughby Stettler, the lessee, Wilson F. Walbert. From 1876 to 1883, Jonas Wieand conducted the store. That year Hiram Horlacher bought the store, and his son, M. J. and son-in-law, Mr. Kohler, conducted the business to about 1889 or 1890 under the name of Horlacher & Kohler. About the afore-mentioned time, M. Kohler withdrew from the business and M. J. Horlacher continued the same, later selling the same to his brother, Allen, who conducts the present store.

The poor-house, having been established near the place, there was a clamor for a postoffice. Application was made to Washington, and in 1844, the same was granted, and the place called Wescoesville, the first postmaster being Israel

Wesco. After his death, John Bortz was appointed, who served to 1860. From 1861 to 1869, Walter Huber served in this capacity, then Jonas Wieand to 1891; afterwards M. J. Horlacher, and then Allen Horlacher.

The original school-house was built by Israel Wesco about 1845-46. In 1857 the school-house was moved nearer the centre of the district, bringing it about a half mile westward from Wescoesville. Wescoesville improving more, the building was again removed to the latter place, where it remained until the same became too small, when a new double building was erected, the old building being used as a residence.

A Union Sunday School in the widest sense of that term, was conducted in the school house from 1859 to 1891. The Evangelical church having moved from the Bet-Hügel to Wescoesville in 1885. (For fuller history of same, consult article Evangelical churches), a union Sunday school, representing the Lutheran and Reformed people was continued in the school-house, and for some time already preaching is conducted there by the pastors of the Trexlertown church. The industries of the village are very limited. Mr. Laros conducts the saddler business; Mr. Calvin Deshler, the shoemaker, and Herbert Bogert, the blacksmith. Formerly a tailoring business was also represented, but owing to the establishment of large men's clothing-houses at Allentown, and the facility offered by the Allentown-Kutztown trolley, which runs through the village, the same was discontinued.

HENSINGERSVILLE.—This hamlet was named after Peter Hensinger. It lies in a southerly direction, about one mile from Alburdis. The place itself has really only a few houses, although quite a number of adjoining farms are reckoned in this place. Including these, there are about 50 inhabitants. The original hotel, built in 1846 by Peter Hensinger and kept by him, was later removed about a quarter of a mile, where it is located at present. This building was also erected by Mr. Hensinger, and at the present time is owned and conducted by Alfred Beitler. The stone-house, standing opposite the hotel, was built by David Wendling, but later got into the possession of Benjamin, his brother. Adjoining the original hotel, there used to be a saw-mill, clover-hulling establishment, shingle machine, where all the wood used to be boiled before it was sawed, and a grist-mill. Concerning the latter, it is still related as to how people brought whole wagonloads of chestnuts, which were ground into grist, often requiring the mill to be operated all night. But a few fragments of these former-day activities are remaining. In this place there had been formerly a store, a shoemaker shop and shoe-store, but they are torn down. The store used to be conducted by Saul and Hensinger. The shoemaker-shop and store was conducted by Benjamin Wendling. A school-house, known as Hensinger's, is also included in the territory of what is designated by this name.

MINESITE.—This hamlet, consisting of about a dozen houses, is situated on what is generally known as the "Flats." The hotel is conducted by a man named Kehm. During the heyday of oremining, according to what is still related, the locality must have been the scene of many wild orgies, some of them hardly credible for civilized communities. It formerly had a post-office, but with the establishment of rural routes, the same has been discontinued.

WEILERSVILLE.—Weilersville was formerly known as "Lehigh Church" and still is spoken of under that title. It is a small village, lying about a mile northwardly from Alburdis. The original settlers in this locality were the Ruths and the Romichs, the latter built a stone grist mill and several stone houses, one of them bearing date of 1780, still standing and in possession of Joseph Warmkessel. The grist-mill afterwards became the property of Samuel Schmeyer, then John B. Schmeyer, his brother, and at present is owned by Mrs. Susan C. Kutz. Her son, Wm. Wagenhorst is operating the mill. Sometime in the forties, James Weiler opened a store at this place, and through long efforts of his, he succeeded to have the place designated Weilersville. D. Y. Bittenbender operated a stone-cutting establishment here, which, since his death is continued by his son, Oscar, who removed it from the place adjoining his father's home to near Weiler's store, now kept by Mr. Kauffman. Near this place is the historic Lehigh Church, the history of which will be given further on. The locality has about 100 inhabitants.

SCHOOLS.—The schools of the township are in a flourishing condition. At first there had been decided opposition to the law of 1834, which created the public schools. It was not because the inhabitants of the township had been indifferent to education. For since 1750 at least, there had been conducted a school at Lehigh Church by the people of the congregation, and similarly elsewhere. But it was felt that the state was usurping the free rights of the people, and even insulted their pride as if they were unable to educate their children. However in 1849, the law was adopted, the first Board being composed as follows: Jacob Wenner, president; James Weiler, secretary, and George Ludwig, treasurer.

The township had been divided into the following districts, excluding Macungie borough. The establishment of the borough of Alburdis in the spring of 1913, will probably cause the numbers to be changed, or simply those be omitted. The numbers ran as here set forth:—No. 1, Bastian's (which school has been discontinued since about 1886, owing to scarcity of children of school-age in this district); No. 2, Wescoesville; No. 3, Hartzell's; No. 4, Kiechel's; No. 5, Riegel's; No. 6, Ritter's; No. 7, Centreville, secondary; No. 8, Centreville primary; No. 9, East Texas secondary; No. 10, East Texas primary; No. 11, Danner's; No. 12, Schmoyer's; No. 13, Lehigh Church; No. 14, Butz's; (No. 15, had been Alburdis High; No. 16, Alburdis grammar; No. 17, Alburdis secondary; No. 18, Alburdis primary); No. 19, Saul's (Hensingersville); No. 20, Nuss'; No. 21, Desch's; No. 22, Fogel's. The present Board consists of J. C. Wasser, president; Wallace Bauer, secretary; Clinton Bastian, treasurer; Wesley Jacobs and James Butz, who resigned after the Alburdis borough was incorporated.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—Since 1840 the following were commissioned, the year indicating the beginning of the same:

1840 Joseph Kemmerer.	1879 George Welty.
Jesse Nace.	M. D. Henninger.
1845 Charles Sober.	1880 Clinton O. Fogel.
Jesse Nace.	1881 Stephen Acker.
1850 Harrison Miller.	1882 Daniel Mohr.
Jonas Faust.	1885 S. A. J. Kern.
1853 Walter P. Huber.	1886 John Keiser.
1855 Harrison Miller.	1887 Stephen Acker.
1858 Horatio Hertzog.	Daniel F. Keller.
George Hertzog.	1892 Stephen Acker.
1863 George M. Hertzog.	Daniel F. Keller.
William Levan.	1897 Preston M. Bastian.
1864 Daniel Mohr.	Daniel F. Keller.
1868 H. T. Hertzog.	1902 Preston M. Bastian.
1869 Daniel Mohr.	Frank D. Butz.
1873 H. T. Hertzog.	1906 Daniel F. Keller.
1874 Daniel Mohr.	1907 Preston M. Bastian.
1878 H. T. Hertzog.	1911 Daniel F. Keller.

HISTORY OF LEHIGH CHURCH.—About one mile northward from the borough of Alburdis, where the road leads across the Little Lehigh, lies the property of the Lehigh Church, upon which is situated the fine church building and the stone residence. The beautiful burial grounds adjoin the church. There is something pathetically entrancing in an old graveyard. It is so silent, yet so eloquent; peaceful, yet resembling the results of battle; so conciliatory, yet its occupants were oft in strife. The tombstone inscriptions are so charitably kind, remembering only the virtues of the departed, whilst their defects are interred with their bones.

The first name by which this congregation was known had been the "Church of the Holy Trinity." Subsequently, for some reason or other, the date being unascertainable, it was called "Zion's," which name it now bears, although more commonly it is known as "Lehigh Church."

The congregation dates from 1745. The immigrants, in view of erecting a church, had set aside this suitable piece of ground and withheld it from later arrivals. It was lying in the middle of their settlement. When the time arrived, that it was deemed opportune to take possession of this vacant land, as it had been kept by common consent hitherto, a committee of four persons were selected, who were to go to Philadelphia and secure title to the same for congregational purposes. The original idea had been to build a "Union" church, and, accordingly, the committee consisted of Matthias Eigner and Michael Knappenberger, representing the Lutheran side, and a Mr. Long and John Butz, the Reformed. The committee fixed upon a time, when they would set out to fulfill their mission. However the Reformed portion coveted the land for their sole use, and in order to outwit the Lutherans, started some time in advance of what had been designated. When the Lutheran portion of the committee learned of the treachery played upon them, they naturally were angry, and, saddling their best horses, made all possible speed to overtake, if not yet forestall, those who had played them false. The Reformed portion, feeling secure of their prize, and deeming it safe by reason of the time gained by their early departure, put up for the night at some hostelry along the route. Whilst ensconsed in slumber, the Lutheran committeemen passed by, reaching Philadelphia early in the morning, and, as soon as the State-house was opened, went to secure a legal title to the tract, which was graciously and promptly given by the authorities. Imagine the surprise and consternation on the morning of the 23rd of February, 1749, when, after having secured title, the Lutheran portion later met the Reformed portion on their mission intent, and these were told by the Lutherans "that the bird which they had intended to catch, was already caged"! The treacherous act was the source of a "spring of animosity" originating between the Lutherans and Reformed of the community, which wended its way down through a couple of generations. The land, consisting of 36 acres, hence was solely in possession of the Lutherans.

The first church was begun directly after the purchase of the land, and, in 1750, was dedicated to the service of God by the Rev. Phillip Heinrich Rapp, who had resided with the congregation for some time previously and preached at the homes of the members. The church was founded, built and dedicated entirely as a Lutheran. The original building had been a simple log structure, and had stood in the northeast corner of the churchyard. A school-house was built at the same time, which soon was enlarged, and, in the course of time was used both as a school-house and parsonage. After Rev. German's departure, it ceased to be used as a parsonage, the sexton of the church residing there from that time.

The circumstances of the primitive church here were similar to elsewhere. The only peculiarity the congregation had, was that its members possessed the most fertile soil in the state. Through the crops and cattle-raising, the farmers soon attained a high degree of prosperity. The public road from Goshenhoppen to Trexlertown, which had been opened, afforded an excellent medium of reaching the market. Many of the members became wealthy. Some of these purchased in Philadelphia the services of poor immigrants, who were sold into a sort of bondage, until, by their services, they could pay for their passage-money. In this manner, Matthias Eigner bought the services of Catharine Nothstein, kept her in service, treated her kindly, and had her confirmed. In religious development, this congregation excelled most Lutheran churches of that period, it itself becoming a centre of Lutheran teaching. Here the pastors of a number of the neighboring congregations resided, and generally were capable men, considering the times and conditions. Rev. Rapp, the first pastor stationed here, employed a school-master, who taught under his supervision and conducted an excellent school. Rev. Rapp, no matter what was said of his earlier or even later career, was a benefit to this congregation. Strict European methods were introduced by him. Upon the completion of the church, he began to keep a church-record. Children were baptized within the church, marriages, after the publication of the bans three times publicly, were celebrated at the altar and entered on the records. As an instance, we here report the first recorded: "May 2, 1751—After the bans had three times been published, there were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Emanuel Pfeiffer, widower, and Maria Barbara, Valentin Mecklins' respectable single daughter, both new arrivals. Attest, P. Rapp, Copul." Funerals were likewise recorded. From 1770 to 1774, pastor Buskirk also kept the records of marriages and deaths of other congregations, such as Saucon and Upper Milford, in this book. The names of the confirmed were likewise regularly entered. The year 1799, show the names of a class of 94 who were confirmed here. However the names show also that not all belonged to the congregation, but were only confirmed here by Rev. Buskirk instead of the home-churches.

ZION'S UNION CHURCH.

Amongst the early names found on the church-records, are the following. However, not all of these were original immigrants, since it is known that a number of them were already the children of immigrants, born and reared here:

Jeremiah Trexler (Dreh- sler).	Jacob Koller.
Johann Matthias Eigner (Eichner).	Jacob Stephy (Stephan).
Michael Knappenberger.	Philipp Drescher (Drüs- cher).
Johann Peter Fetherolf.	Stophel Müller.
Wilhelm Fegely (Vö- gelein).	Christian Gorr.
Daniel Schmeier.	Simon Häin.
Christian Schmeier.	Lorenz Schöd.
Friederich Seitz.	Andreas Trexler (Drechsler).
Jacob Barth.	Martin Boger (Poger).
Johann Peter Klein.	Peter Mattern.
Jacob Wagner.	Emanuel Pfeiffer.
Jacob Danner (Tanner).	Lorenz Küchele.
Georg Ruch.	Mathaus Ludwig.
Mathaus Heinli.	Andreas Eisenhard.
Georg Adam Bortz.	Jacob Herman.
Johannes Dee	Valentine Meckley.
Nicolaus Schmidt.	Michael Warmkessel.
Adam Moser.	Bastian Druckenmiller, Sr.
Johannes Dietrich Gaum- er.	Georg Christ, Sr.
Mathias Steinlein.	George Acker.

Michael Schiffert (Sche- vert).	George Seiler.
Balzer Federmann.	Joseph Albrecht.
Jacob Shankweiler.	Johannes Weber.
Leonard Kuhns (Kuhn).	Adam Desch (Tesch).
Conrad Kolb.	Heinrich Koch.

The congregation at first was small, but the well-known desirability of the neighborhood and advantages of church privileges soon attracted strangers, who speedily occupied all the vacant lands. Some few Reformed had also settled with the limits of the congregation, but were compelled to go to Longswamp or to Salisbury in order to worship according to the dictates of their consciences. In 1760 Dr. Friedrich Spiegel began to reside here. The keenest rivalry existed between Lonswamp congregation and this place. There they were Reformed; here strictly Lutheran. But the contest always left the Lehigh people in the advance.

The first complete consistory recorded on the church-records, bears date of 1769, although there are individual names of the consistory mentioned previously. The persons elected the aforesaid year were:—Martin Poger (Boger), Simon Hain, elders; Jacob Hermann, Daniel Schmair (Schmeier), Heinrich Eigner, and Heinrich Wetzel, deacons.

The corner-stone of the second church was laid June 11, 1784, when the local pastor, Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk, was assisted by the Rev. Johann Friedrich Ernest, of Breunwick, New Jersey. The consistory signing the attestation, a copy of which was placed in the corner-stone, were—Heinrich Egner, Peter Trexler, elders; Valentin Haupt, Frantz Warmkessel, Adam Howerther, Christian Weber, deacons; the building committee, composed of George Breinig, Michael Schmeier, Johannes Heinli, Daniel Schmeier, and Henrich Knappenberger; treasurer, Peter Trexler. Heinrich Knappenberger had been the school-master at the time.

The attestation concluded with the following words: "Der Herr unser Gott segne zeitlich und ewig Alle, die dieser Stiftung getreulich nachkommen. Der Herr aber sehe drein und räche es, wo dawider gehandelt wird. Amen! Gottes Wort und Luther's Lehr, vergehet nun und nimmermehr." (The Lord our God bless now and forever all our successors, who shall remain faithful to the purpose of this undertaking. May He look upon and avenge whatever is done to thwart and oppose it. Amen! God's Word and Luther's teachings shall never disappear.)

The new church was built of stone, and made unusually strong and massive, the walls still being firm, when torn down in 1894. It was finished both within and without after the style of the times. The building was greater in length than width, yet almost square. Two large double doors opened on the north side, and one on the east. The windows on the first floor were oblong and protected by solid shutters. On the second floor windows were all alike, rounded in a bow at the top. The interior was arranged with reference to the doors. Near the entrance, the steps led to the galleries. The pulpit originally along the long wall, was later placed along the narrow southern wall. Back of it was a large window. Opposite it, at the other end, on a gallery was placed the organ and choir. In front of the pulpit, in a large clear space, surrounded by an altar-rail, stood the altar, constructed after the fashion of the altar of the covenant, which was draped with a black cloth, over which, on communion season was spread a white covering. The pulpit was also draped in black. The congregation was seated according to age and sex in different parts of the church. On the galleries only the front of the pews were painted in white; the unpainted portion, most seen by the worshipper occupying his seat, gradually obtained a dull brown color, which made a solemn, dreary impression on the mind. The ground-floor originally was laid with brick, upon which sand had been spread, and for days, horses were ridden over the same so as to make the floor firm and hard.

Lehigh people having a new building, the Reformed at Longswamp must also have a new church, and in order to be ahead of the Lehigh Church also secured an organ. But Lehigh was not to be outdone in this respect. For they also secured an organ—larger and better, which however the Longswamp people never would acknowledge. Some of them once came to hear the much bragged about organ at Lehigh, amongst them being Jack Long, a descendant of the Long previously mentioned, who, after listening to the organ, voiced the general opinion of these people, by calling aloud to his neighbor in church—"You there! I don't know, but it seems to me that this organ is not a bit better than ours!" Inter-marriage of sons and daughters of these old families; discouragement on the part of the ministers has broken down this old unkindly-disposed feeling.

In 1843, the congregation resolved to repair the church. Its wall stood strong and firm as on the first day; the interior was torn out, the floor relaid, the pulpit and organ placed along the shorter walls, and everything finished in modern style.

On August 26, 1843, the congregation entered into an agreement with the Reformed within the bounds of the parish, to make the church "Union." In said agreement, Rule I, clearly set forth "that the land (German word land)" is and shall continue to belong exclusively to the Lutheran congregation; that however the use and benefit of the church, the cemetery for burial and the real estate shall be "union" for the Lutherans and Reformed, and all their future posterity, for the purpose and benefit of HOLDING DIVINE SERVICES." "That all revenues of the church and real estate shall be applied and used for the benefit of both in common with equal rights."

On Christmas day, the church was consecrated as a Union. On Whit Sunday, 1844, the organ which had been repaired, was reconsecrated.

The celebration of the hundredth anniversary took place on the 5th and 6th days of October, 1850.

On Easter Monday, Apr. 9, 1860, an election was held to secure a building committee for the erection of a tower and the securing of a bell. At the same time the church was repainted and refrescoed. In 1881, it was again renovated both within and without.

In the spring of 1894, it was decided to build a new church. The old walls still firm as ever, were taken down. The new building, built of brick with stone trimmings, the auditorium of which is 67 by 44½ feet, lecture room, 37 by 29 and infant room, 37 by 10 feet, finished in oak, was consecrated on Nov. 25, 1894. The cornerstone of this building had been laid Whit-sunday, Apr. 6, 1894.

The sesquicentennial of the church was observed Nov. 24, 1895. On Aug. 20, 1911, the church after a complete renovation within and without, and being recarpeted, was reconsecrated.

A Sunday-school was early begun. Among the early superintendents being John B. Schmeyer, Peter Ruth and others. Peter Ruth served a long period in this capacity, although a few times, for a period of a year or so, some other person had been elected, yet one can practically say to the time of his death.

The Lutheran pastors of the congregation were:

Philipp Heinrich Rapp, who, when he came over, had been a merchant, and was ordained by the notorious Andrea, was the first minister residing with the people. The congregation had made application to the Synod for a minister some time before, but were put off from time to time, it being stated that there were none to be given. Rapp is said to have ended his life by committing suicide; however present investigations show that he laid a good, systematic foundation for the congregation at this place. On Oct. 29, 1751, he received a call from Christ Church, New York, which he felt inclined to accept. In the Church-record he writes of this call and says, "It pains me inexpressibly to desert the congregation which I have brought into being." He preached here to Dec. 18, 1751.

2. Jacob Friederich Schertlein, served here from 1753 to 1765, and resided with the congregation. He was an abler man than his predecessor, and in his twelve years' work, laid the foundation for the future development at which the church arrived.

3. John George Wiessner preached here from Sept., 1765, to the end of Dec., 1767. He belonged to the Andrea school. After Wiessner's departure, the congregation was served for over a year by different persons sent by Dr. Muhlenberg.

4. Jacob Van Buskirk began his ministry July 9, 1769, and served to Feb. 18, 1800. He also resided with the congregation. Under his ministry the church flourished and attained its greatest prosperity. 1784, Trexlertown church was founded, although since for many years members of the ministerium were forbidden to preach there, we are at a loss to account as to how they were served. Nevertheless it took away members from Lehigh. Rev. Buskirk, by instruction of Dr. Muhlenberg, also educated certain young men for the Lutheran ministry, amongst them being Rev. Lehman.

5. John Paul Frederick Kramer, who had never been ordained, supplied for nearly a year.

6. J. F. Obenhausen served from Apr., 1800, to the close of Nov., 1806.

7. John (and not Friederich) Gaisenhainer served from Dec., 1806, to towards the end of Sept., 1808. Rev. Gaisenhainer was then stationed at the Jordan church. Rev. Frederick Geissenhainer had then been stationed at New Hanover.

8. Heinrich Heyne preached from Oct., 1808, to July, 1817.

9. Rev. Heinrich G. Stecher succeeded Rev.

Heyne, serving from about Sept., 1817, to Oct. (or later), 1819.

10. Rev. Benjamin German began his labors May, 1820, and continued to 1838. He was the last pastor to reside in the parsonage.

11. Rev. Jeremiah Schindel was pastor to Jan., 1839.

12. He was succeeded by Christoph Gottlieb Friederich on Aug. 1, 1840, and who remained about a year and a half.

13. On Aug. 21, 1842 Rev. Joshua Yeager began his long ministry. He relinquished his labors May 31, 1885.

14. Rev. A. R. Horne, D.D., who had assisted Father Yeager as a supply for about one year already, was elected pastor Oct. 10, 1885, and served to the end of March, 1901.

15. Rev. Irwin B. Ritter served as supply pastor from Oct. 27, 1901, to Nov., 1903.

16. Then Rev. Charles E. Sandt served in a similar capacity to Aug. 15, 1905.

17. Rev. Charles A. Kerschner, of Conyngham, Pa., was called and entered upon his labors on Feb. 1, 1906, and is successfully serving the congregation at the present time.

The Reformed ministers were:

1. Charles G. Hermann, who had been chosen pastor in the year in which the church became Union. He afterwards resigned.

2. Joshua Derr was chosen and served till 1863.

In the spring of 1863, Rev. Wm. A. Helffrich was elected, the call being ratified by the East Pennsylvania Classis in the following year. He was pastor for the rest of his active life. After the ordination of Nevin W., his son, the father took him as his assistant, and upon the father's relinquishing his labors, was elected as the regular pastor, which he continued to 1905, when he died.

Rev. Frank P. Laros was then called and is the present pastor.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

UPPER MILFORD TOWNSHIP.

ERECTION.—The territory now constituting Upper Milford and Lower Milford townships, in Lehigh county, was first erected into a separate district in 1737, while a part of Bucks county. The petition for its erection was signed by the following resident taxpayers of that region of country:

Peter Walber.	Johannes Beltzart.
Ulrich Reaser.	Theobald Mechlin.
Matthias Ochs.	Johannes Post.
Johannes Meyer.	Melchior Stecher.
Joseph Henckel.	Michael Koehler.
Daniel Rausch.	Felix Brunner.
Heinrich William Dillinger.	Jacob Derry.
Heinrich Riesz.	Michael Zimmerman.
Christian Biegel.	William Langhorst.
William Bitz.	Martin Weitknecht.
Jacob Wetzell.	Johannes Baumgartner.
	Hannes Ord.

It was presented to the county court, then sitting at Newtown, on June 10, 1737.

The survey was made by John Chapman on March 13, 1738. The boundary lines formed a square figure, six miles long and five and a half miles wide, and enclosed 33 square miles, or 21,120 acres; and the territory thus set apart was named Upper Milford. At that time there was a township in Bucks county which was named Lower Milford.

In 1752, this township was included with Northampton county upon its erection out of part of Bucks; and in 1812, it was included with Lehigh county, upon its erection out of part of Northampton.

Description.—These two townships are situated in the most southern part of the county, and are bounded as follows: on the northeast by Salisbury and Upper Saucon townships; on the southeast by Milford township in Bucks county; on the southwest by Upper Hanover township in Montgomery county, and Hereford township in Berks county, and on the northwest by Lower Macungie township.

Later surveys show a considerable difference as to dimensions and area, for the territory appears to be about $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by $6\frac{1}{4}$ miles wide, and therefore contains 40,625 square miles, or 260,000 acres.

The surface formation is very irregular, hilly at some places and mountainous at others. In the southern part of Lower Milford is the Hos-ensack Hill, or the great Mill Hill (commonly called "Grosze Mühlberg"), which extends across the township into the county of Montgomery; and in the northeastern part is the Chestnut Hill. The northwestern part is crossed by the Moser (now Dillinger) Ridge, running from northeast to southwest; and the center part by Mill Ridge (called Kleine Mühlberg), running from northeast to southwest. Upper Milford is crossed by the South (or Lehigh) Mountain from east to west, in the upper part; and in the southern part by Bald Hill (commonly called "Kahlen Berg"). The highest spot in both townships is situated on the Chestnut Hill, in Lower Milford, which is 960 feet above the level of the sea; the second highest is on South Mountain, in Upper Milford, 920 feet, and the third highest is Moser's Ridge, in Lower Milford, 910 feet.

The soil is principally gravel; sandstone abounds in all sections. Iron ore has been found in great quantities along spurs of South Mountain. In the vicinity of Shimersville there is some of the richest red-oxide iron ore; and in the vicinity of Zionsville some of the richest magnetic iron ore, of any found in the State. Near Shimersville, on the north side, is a rich deposit of emery and corundum crystals, worth about $200 per ton. Limestone is found in Upper Milford; also among the Hosensack and Saucon valleys in Lower Milford. Mica is found in some places in Lower Milford, on the premises of H. H. Boyer, and Readon Schantz, near Dillingersville; and zinc on the premises of Nathan Kunkel and others near Shimersville, in Upper Milford.

The soil is well cultivated and very productive. Its cultivation is the chief employment of the inhabitants, who have brought it to a high state of fertility by the free use of lime. Not only is the largest and healthiest grain produced, but it brings the highest prices.

The territory is well watered with superior creeks and brooks which run through fields and meadows and along the hill-sides, and operate grist-mills and saw-mills at numerous sites on their way.

The principal stream is Hosensack creek, which rises at the foot of Chestnut Hill on the west side, and runs south and southwestwardly through the center of Lower Milford; thence through the Hosensack valley, a distance of over six miles, (turning the wheels of eight grist- and saw-mills); and empties into the Perkiomen creek in Montgomery county. Several smaller creeks empty into it from the southerly side among them the Schwenk's (or Dub's), Eberhard's and Dickenshied's; and on the northerly side the following: Schantz's, Walter's (or Mechling's with several branches), Indian, and Trump's. Swamp creek rises in Saucon township, and runs in a southerly direction through the northeast corner of Lower Milford into Bucks county. Hicken creek rises in the same part of the township and runs southwardly into Bucks county, where it empties into Swamp creek.

The Krauss creek rises in the southern corner of Lower Milford, near the foot of the Hosensack Hill, and runs due south into Montgomery county, where it empties into the Perkiomen creek. In the same section there is Stauffer's creek, which rises on the Hosensack Hill, and empties into the Krauss creek. Saucon creek rises in the northern section of Lower Milford, on Chestnut Hill, and runs northwardly into Saucon township, where it empties into the Lehigh river, near Hellertown. Ortt's (or Wieder's) creek rises in the same part of Lower Milford, and runs north at Limeport into the Saucon creek. These creeks, within the bounds of Lower Milford, turn the wheels of sixteen mills.

Indian creek rises in the western corner of Upper Milford, thence runs east, southeast, and southwardly, into the Hosensack, in Lower Milford. The Perkiomen creek rises in Berks county, and runs through Upper Milford, in the form of a horseshoe east, southeast, and southwardly. Leibert's creek rises in the north-eastern part of Upper Milford, runs west and northwardly through Leibert's Gap of the South Mountain, and empties into the Little Lehigh, in Lower Macungie township. Thany's, (or Fetterman's) creek rises near Shimersville, runs northeast, and empties into Leibert's Creek at Vera Cruz. Miller's creek rises in the north-western part of Upper Milford, near Shimersville, runs northwardly into Lower Macungie, and empties into the Little Lehigh. These creeks turn within the bounds of Upper Milford ten grist, saw, and other mills.

Iron Ore.—On both sides of the South Mountain, in Upper Milford, iron ore is abundant in quality, and rich in quantity, producing from 35 to 45 per cent. of metal. Along the west base of the mountain, in the vicinity of Emaus, mines have been kept in operation for nearly fifty years, particularly on the premises of Charles and Peter Schwarz, where they have been carried on very successfully by David Lewis, from 1834 until 1870, and since 1870 by the Emaus Iron Company.

On the east side of the mountain several very rich magnetic veins were discovered about the year 1848. Those on the premises of William Brunner, Henry Wickert, and others were operated by Samuel Lewis (the oldest iron-master of Lehigh county), F. T. Iobst, and George Neumoyer. In 1880 the Hellertown Iron Company; Lewis, Pascoe & Webb; Schwarz, Dickenshied & Company, secured leases on the premises of F. T. Iobst (formerly of William Brunner), and continued operations. They discovered rich veins of ore, from two to twelve feet, thick and delivered an average of 5,000 tons of ore yearly. Several other mines along the mountain, on the premises of Daniel Klein, Joshua Fry, and others, have been kept in operation.

About 1870 on the premises of Anthony Mechling (now deceased), at Zionsville, Upper Milford, one of the richest magnetic iron-ore veins in Lehigh county was discovered. It was worked by John O. Schreiber & Company for seven years, and after 1878 by the Crane Iron Company. About 1875 a rich vein of the same ore was also discovered on the premises of Charley Shoonly at the same place; and about 1881 another was discovered on the premises of Mr. Gackenbach, and of Jonas Kern at the same place. These mines were carried on by the Crane Iron Company for some years. The ore produced an average of 45 per cent. clear iron.

On the premises of Mr. Shultz, at Shimersville, there is one of the richest veins of oxide iron ore ever discovered in Lehigh county, which produced an average of 50 per cent. of iron.

PIONEER SETTLERS.—After 1733, there was a large immigration of settlers, mostly Germans, to the lower part of the present Lehigh county. They were emigrants from Germany and other parts of western Europe, with strong religious convictions, who classified themselves as Schwenkfelders, Mennonites, Lutherans and Reformed, and many of them settled in the Hosensack Valley and other parts of Upper Milford township.

Among the Schwenkfelders, there were Balt-hasar Krausz, Hans Henry Jaeckel, Caspar Jaeckel, and Christoph Schubert.

Among the Mennonites: Dürk Jansen, Conradt Meyer, Michael Meyer, and Jacob Hie-stand.

Among the Lutherans: Jacob Kurr, Thomas Kurr, Theobald Mechlin, Heinrich Wilhelm

Dillinger, Michael Flores, George Klein, Jacob Busch, Balthasar Vetterman, Martin Schaffer, Peter Hüttel, Ludwig Siefers, Caspar Rütter, Gabriel Kohler, Friedrich Kemmerer, Melchior Stecher, Mathias Ox, John Michael Guthman, Philip Stephen Pappenmeyer, Friederich Nungesser, Isaac Leopold Delp, Johann David Straub, Heinrich Riesz, and Michael Zimmerman.

Among the Reformed: Ulrich Riezer, Franz Ruzs, Jacob Wetzel, Peter Wetzel, Joseph Eberhard, Valentine Kaiser, Alexander Diefenderfer, Peter Linn, Jacob Dubs, Felix Brunner, Henry Huber, Andreas Kraeber, Ludwig Biting, Phillip Herzog, Friederich Wilhelm Kern, Peter Lang, Andreas Engleman, Nicolaus Stahl-er, Peter Schlosser, Johannes Armbruster, Johannes Ortt, Christopher Andreas Guthman, George Stahl and Jacob Müller.

Land Warrants.—Warrants for tracts of land were taken up in Upper Milford township (now included in Lower Milford) by the following-named settlers:

James Steel, gentleman of Philadelphia, March 26, 1733, for 2,400 acres of land in Pennsylvania in several tracts; two tracts were located here, one being on the county line in the Hosensack valley, which contained 500 acres. A patent was issued to him on August 31st, following. He sold this tract on Feb. 8, 1741, to James Hamilton, of Philadelphia, for £150; who sold it on Dec. 23, 1761, to Hans Heinrich Jäekel (Yeakel) for £1,250. This tract was subsequently owned by Rev. Daniel Yeakel, David S. Yeakel (descendants of Hans Henry Yeakel), and Anthony Schultz, George Schultz, J. Dech, and others, and regarded as of the richest farm land in Lehigh county.

Another tract, containing 276 acres, and situated in Kraussdale, was surveyed to Steel, on April 24, 1734, and he sold it to Nicolaus Walber for £189. A tract of 179 A., 35 Ps., was patented in 1768, to Rev. George Kriebel; and the remaining part of the tract, called "Old Rights," in 1770, to Friederich Limbach, Esq., which was afterward owned by John Stauffer, Milton Oberholtzer, Jesse Bry, and Dr. Jonas R. Gerhard.

Michael Zimmerman for three tracts, in 1733, 1738 and 1741, for 333 acres, situated in Hosensack Valley, also on the county line adjoining James Steel's or Hamilton's tract. This was patented to Michael and George Zimmerman, on May 23, 1741, then sold by the Zimmerman's on Dec. 4, 1784, to John Yund, who sold, in 1787, to John Roeder. It was afterward owned by Henry E. Roeder David Roeder and others, being very rich farming land.

Martin Weidknecht for 170 acres, in 1734, situate near the present Dillingersville. A patent was granted in 1822 for part of the land to Jacob Ehrhard, and in 1837 another patent for the other part to Jacob S. Meyer. These premises were afterward owned by Lewis S. Roeder, Lewis H. Wieand, Joshua Stahler, Henry D. Meyer, Abraham Musselman, and John Rhoads.

Heinrich Wilhelm Dillinger, for 150 acres, in 1734; he sold the same about 1760 to his son, John Jacob Dillinger, who obtained a patent. The father in 1752 took up another tract, for 23 A., 123 Ps., which was patented in 1790 by the name of "Gaul," to his son. These premises were afterward owned by Daniel Dillinger (a descendant), Frederick T. Jost, Henry Boyer, David Schuler, and others.

Jacob Wetzel, in 1734, for 150 acres, and in 1754, for 51 A. 39 Ps., for which he got patents in 1747 and 1754. The premises are situated in Hosensack Valley, and were afterward owned by David Schuler, John D. Eberhard, Daniel Rothenberger, and others. Wetzel secured a third patent in 1771 for 47 acres, called "Mount Fair," afterward owned by Abraham Kauffman and L. S. Roeder.

Stephen Riemer (or Reemer), in 1734, for 100 acres, who sold it on Dec. 3, 1735, to Peter Wentz, of Philadelphia, who secured a patent. It is situated in Hosensack Valley. On this tract the first grist-mill was erected in Lehigh county by said Peter Wentz, in 1740. Parts of the premises came to be owned by Solomon Schantz, Reuben M. Roeder, and Jonathan Fretz, the last named having had the mill property.

Conrad Wetzel, (Justice of the Peace for many years), in 1734, for 145 A., 53 Ps., patented in 1762 to Christian Miller, of Long Swamp, Berks county.

George Schumacher, in 1734, 200 acres situated in Kraussdale, on the county line, 140 acres, being in Lower Milford. A patent was granted in 1749, to Balthaser Krauss. This property was owned by the Krauss family for over a hundred years. In 1736 a second warrant was issued to Schumacher for another tract of 200 acres, situated near Emaus, and patented to Daniel Schwartz and Francis Schwartz. It was afterward owned by the Swartz family, Peter Henninger, Daniel Klein and others.

Henry Keiber (Kaiber or Geber), in 1734, for 150 acres, in Hosensack valley, in Lower Milford, (then Upper Milford), patented in 1757, to George Klein; afterward occupied by Henry B. Schantz, Reuben M. Roeder, David Roeder, Christian Weiss and others. On this tract the present village of Hosensack is located.

Theobald Mechlin (now Mechling, sometimes called Duwalt Meichly), in 1734, for 156 A. 40 Ps. A second warrant in 1747 for a tract of 20 acres, and a third warrant in 1757 for a tract of 18 acres. Patent for first tract to Mechlin in 1747; for the other two tracts to Thomas Mechlin. The premises are still in the Mechlin family and owned by Benj. T. Mechlin, Jr.

Jacob Dubs in 1734 for 150 acres, situated in Hosensack Valley, and called "Potts," patented in 1772 to his son, Daniel. These premises were owned by the Dubs family for over 125 years, and afterward by Henry W. Longacre, Alfred Freed, and Widow Lydia Dubs.

Hans (or John) Post, in 1735, for 125 acres, who sold it in 1794 to Thomas Kurr, who took a warrant in 1749, for an adjoining tract of 25 acres, and sold both tracts in 1766, to Ludwig Siffert, for £300; and Siffert in 1775, sold to Hans (or John) Schantz, for £700. John Schantz in 1765 purchased 125 acres from Valentine Keiser, and in 1785 a patent was granted to him for these three tracts, containing together 295¾ acres, patented by the name of "Shanzburg," all in Lower Milford.

Ulrich Rieszer (or Reeser), in 1735, for 269 acres, situated in Kraussdale, in Lower Milford. A second warrant in 1749 for 15 acres, adjoining the first tract. In 1760 he obtained a patent for 269 acres. In 1784 he conveyed by his last will over 82 acres to his son, Casper Reiser; another part, 195¾ acres, was sold in 1788, to Jacob Brobst. A tract, 15 A. 30 Ps., was sold to Balzer Krauss, Jr.

Paul Ritter, (Rütter) warrant in 1737, for 192 acres, situate on the Hosensack creek. His son, Casper Ritter, obtained a patent in 1753, who sold it in 1758, to Joseph Eberhardt for £250.

Jacob Miller, in 1737, for 133 A. 58 Ps., in Lower Milford, near Steinsburg, who sold it in 1743 to John Kooken (or Kocken); and Kooken secured a patent in 1761.

Michael and Joseph Eberhard, for the use of the "Reformed Calvinist Society" in 1738, for 113 A., 70 Ps., patent granted in 1762. It is still owned by the Great Swamp Reformed congregation; Trinity church, one of the finest country churches in Eastern Pennsylvania was erected on the land in 1872-73, at a cost of $30,000.

Matthias Ox (or Ochs), in 1738, for 159 acres, and was patented to him in 1747. This tract is situated near Dillingersville.

Conrad Holbe, in 1738, for 212 acres, was patented partly to Anthony Stahler, and partly to John Martin Schwenck, (the latter dated in 1762, for 88 A. 25 Ps.).

Hans Oord or John Ord (afterward Ortt), in 1738, for 200 A., 113 Ps.; patent issued to him in 1761. The township line between Upper and Lower Milford runs through near the middle of this tract.

Henry Ritter for 170 acres on March 16, 1737, which Lorenz Erbach secured in 1749; patent in 1762 to Johannes Reiswig. This property is in Lower Milford, adjoining the Great Swamp church, and is now owned by O. C. Keiper, Esq., and on it can still be seen the cellar of a house built by Ritter in 1739.

Johannes Meyer (or John Moyer) in 1734 for 180 A., 112 Ps., patent to him in 1761. Previous to that year he erected a saw-mill on the premises and sold it the same year to his children. The division line of the township runs through the land.

Peter Rosz (Rose), in 1737 for 157 acres in Lower Milford; bought by Christian Zellner (now Zelner).

Michael Moser, in 1734, for 10 acres. It is where Dillingersville is located.

Balzer Gueren, in 1738 for 200 acres situate at the source of Hosensack creek, in Lower Milford.

Lutheran congregation in 1770 for 29 A. 137 Ps., selected by members of the congregation, (Theobald Mechlin, and Heinrich Wilhelm Dillinger) for school and church purposes; patent granted in 1840. Land is situated near Dillingersville, now in possession of John N. Bitting and the "Union Church Association."

Jacob Rausch in 1738 for 115 A. 54 Ps., in Lower Milford; patent in 1789 to Peter Busch.

Valentine Keiser in 1734, and a second in 1735 for two tracts in Hosensack Valley, containing together 150 acres; patent to Joseph Eberhardt, Sr., in 1742; now in possession of estate of Dr. J. H. Dickenshied. In 1741 for another tract of 100 acres, on a branch of the Hosensack. Keiser conveyed it in 1765 to Hans or John Schantz, who obtained a patent.

Michael Bischof for 203 A. 60 Ps., on the county line near Steinsburg, Bucks county; patent in 1761.

Friederich Notes in 1740 for 104 acres, and sold in 1745 to Henry Schleiffer, who obtained a patent in 1765.

Michael Flores in 1752 for 137 acres near Dillingersville, and patent to him in 1763.

Peter Rittenhaus in 1741, for 250 acres, situate on Hosensack creek, patent to Abraham Meyer in 1774, called "Meyer's Neglect." On these premises Henry Funk erected a grist-mill, (later Kriebel's mill), in 1775.

Andrew Eckhard (sometimes called Skart), in 1743 for 45 acres in Hosensack Valley; patent to George Stahl.

Friederich Kemmerer, in 1742 for 98 A., 132 Ps., by the name of "Meatville"; patent in 1796 to Abraham Schantz. This tract is near Dillingersville.

Ludwig Bitting in 1744, for 51 A. 115 Ps., on Hosensack Hill in Lower Milford; patent in 1772, by the name of "First Fruits," to Andrew Graber.

George Mack in 1793 for 100 acres in Hosensack Valley, patent to George Stahl and John Molder, Sr. In 1744 another warrant was issued for 100 A. 137 Ps., to George Mack. This tract was purchased in 1808 by Abraham Kriebel, who purchased the same day from Conrad Wetzel an adjoining tract of 32 acres, which were patented in 1808, by the name of "Abraham's Plain" to said Kriebel.

Michael Schmidt (Smith) for 284 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres near Limeport, and patent granted in 1750.

Jacob Kurr in 1746 for 46 A. 155 Ps., in Hosensack Valley patent to Casper Rieszer, by the name of Escurial. On March 9, 1752, another warrant was issued for a tract of 32 acres; patent to Abraham Kriebel (part of "Abraham's Plain").

Thomas Kurr, in 1749, for 25 acres; and in 1749 for another tract of 39 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres. The 25-acre tract was patented to Hans Schanz, (included in Schanzburg). The other tract was sold to George Klein for which a patent was granted to him by the name of "Kleinhausen."

George Klein for 95 A. 108 Ps., in Hosensack Valley; and patent in 1759 to him.

Felix Brunner for 200 acres in Lower Milford, and sold in 1763 to George Urffer, to whom the patent was granted.

Melchoir Stecher, in 1735, for land in Lower Milford, who sold to Joseph Eberhardt, to whom patent was granted.

Christopher Krauss in 1740 for 100 acres in Hosensack Valley, and patent was granted to him. (In the private rooms of Christopher Krauss on this land, a school was established in 1765 by Charles Guss, a teacher. His salary was £35, besides eight bushels of grain, free dwelling, garden and feed for one cow per annum for a term of four years.)

Hans Adam Trump in 1740 for 100 acres in the Hosensack, and patent granted to him.

George Hoffman in 1745 for 27 acres, 141 perches, near Emaus.

Henry Huber in 1747 for 113 acres in Lower Milford and he sold in 1751 to Henry Otto, (now Ott), who sold in 1773 to his son, Christoph Ott, to whom a patent was granted in 1789.

Conrad Wetzel, second warrant in 1748, for 164 acres in Lower Milford, and he sold in 1753 to George Stahlnecker, to whom a patent was granted in 1754.

John Peter Walber (first constable of Upper Milford); patents were granted to him in 1751 for four tracts, containing together 182 acres, 151 perches, in Kraussdale.

Christopher Walber, patent in 1753 for 230 A. 110 Ps., in Kraussdale, adjoining land of his brother, John Peter Walber.

David Streib in 1748, for 73 A. 150 Ps., in Hosensack Valley; he sold in 1760 to Peter Edelman, who obtained a patent in 1770, by the name of "Ladle."

Michael Hartman Ditlow, for 72 A. 84 Ps., in Lower Milford, patent granted in 1761.

George Sewitz, in 1765, for 92 A. 80 Ps., in Hosensack Valley; he sold in 1767 to Adam Hillegas, who sold in 1772, to his son, John, and a patent was issued to him in 1784 by the name of "Fairfield."

Johann Adam Roth, in 1751, for two tracts containing 35 A. 38 Ps., in Lower Milford, patent in 1837, to Christian Schearer.

Peter Schlosser in 1755 for 46 A. 113 Ps., in Lower Milford; patent in 1875 to Thomas Schearer.

Nicolaus Dietz for two tracts containing 163 A. 10 Ps., called No. 25, "lying in Richland Manor," Lower Milford, and patent issued in 1789.

William Bitz (called Bit or Pits), in 1738, for 47 A. 29 Ps., patent in 1771 to Jacob Wetzel, called "Mount Fair."

Johannes Keichler, (sometimes called Keuler) in 1740 for 130 acres in Lower Milford; and he sold to John Adam Rothenberger, to whom a patent was granted in 1808, by the name of Wales; and in the same year he sold 99 A. 106 Ps., to his son-in-law, Jacob Schwenck (commissioner of Lehigh county in 1832-35).

Balzer Yeakel in 1766, for 35 A. 50 Ps., on the east side of "Bald Hill" in Lower Milford; and patent issued to him in 1771, called "Yeakel's Rock."

And warrants for tracts in Upper Milford (included in Upper Milford as now recognized) by the following named settlers:

Christian Crall (or Kraul) for 250 acres, patented in 1782, to William Schaffer. It is situated in the present village of Zionsville, and was afterward occupied by George Schall, Widow Mechling, Reuben Stahler, Jonathan Berkey, and others. The new Lutheran church is standing on part of the ground.

Dürk Jansen, in 1734, and patent in 1735 for 352 acres, who sold to Jacob Miller; and Miller to John Shimer, Esq. The village of Shimersville is located on this land, and some of it is still owned by descendants of the Shimers.

Henry Riesz (Risz or Reesz) in 1738 for 200 A. 75 Ps., patent to Jacob Hiestand, in 1787, by the name of "Hiestand's Delight." This tract is situated in Upper Milford. In 1744 an adjoining tract of 50 A. 125 Ps. was secured to Riesz. A patent was issued in 1822, for 29 A., 16 Ps. of the tract near Vera Cruz, to Daniel Mohr.

Henry Schiszler (Sheezler) in 1738, for 149 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres, situate near Zionsville, patent in 1761, to John Nicolaus Stahler.

Leonhard Lotz (or Lutz) in 1739 for 200 A. 39 Ps.; patent in 1761 to Rudolph Weiss. This tract is situate near Zionsville, and the church of the Evangelical Association is located on the land.

Henry Schleiffer in 1752 for an adjoining tract of 112 A. 156 Ps., patent to him in 1765, who sold both tracts in 1796, to Abraham Hiestand. On the first tract the Mennonite church and Zionsville Station are located.

John Hiestand for 124 A. 152 Ps., and in 1743 for an adjoining tract of 37 A. 138 Ps., patent to him in 1762. The premises are situated in Upper Milford.

Michael Meyer in 1741 for 100 A. 130 Ps. near Shimersville, and patent to Friederich Kern in 1752.

In 1744 another warrant was issued to Meyer for 48 A. 35 Ps., patent in 1789 to Conrad Meyer, by the name of "Meyersbury." This tract is near Zionsville in the possession of Edmund Christman.

Conrad Stamm, for 150 acres; patent in 1743. This tract is situated near Zionsville.

John Bingamin, in 1744 for 120 A. 92 Ps., near Zionsville; sold in 1753 to Peter Hittel who obtained a patent in 1762.

Jacob Gartenhauer, in 1745, and 1747 for 53 acres near Emaus.

George Strepeck, (or Strespeck), probably Streiszbach) in 1744, for 150 acres in Upper Milford and sold to Frederick Martin who obtained a patent.

Nicolaus Staehler, in 1744 for 26 A. 51 Ps. near Zionsville; and he purchased in 1759 from Henry Schiszler an adjoining tract of 149 $\frac{3}{4}$ A.; patent to him in 1761 for both tracts.

Christian Biegel, (Bigli or Bieghly), in 1745 for 88 $\frac{1}{2}$ A. in Upper Milford; sold to different parties and finally to Henry Meyer who obtained a patent by the name of "Meyertown," in 1789.

Peter Kohler, (sometimes called Kouchler), in 1745 for 135 A. in western corner of Upper Milford.

Peter Broomfeld, in 1749, for 62 A. 143 Ps. in Upper Milford and he sold in 1753 to Peter Hittel who secured a patent in 1762.

Henry Rudolph, for 81 A. in Upper Milford near Vera Cruz Sta., a patent was granted in 1822 to Abraham Schieler for 35 A. 124 Ps., of this tract.

Philip Steven Poppenmeyer, in 1747, for 60 A. near Zionsville. A patent was granted in 1822 to Jacob Meyer, now occupied by Edwin Christman. A second warrant was issued to Peppenmeyer on same day for tract of 81 A. 93 Ps., and a patent was granted in 1827 for 56 A., 88 Ps., of it to Jacob Andreas.

Peter Fink in 1757 for 25 A. of said 81 A. 93 Ps., and patent was granted in 1832 to Jacob Ortt.

George Schambach, in 1740, for 235 A. in Upper Milford, and he sold to Jacob Sicher to whom a patent was granted in 1789.

Michael Bastian in 1752 for land in Upper Milford; patent in 1811 to John Schuler, Esq. Philip Herzog for 102 A., at Zionsville; patent to him in 1751.

On this premise, in the lower part of Zionsville, the Reformed church is located.

Bernhard Bear, for 113 A. on "Bald Hill," in Upper Milford, and patent to him in 1760.

Adam Krammes for 72 A. 140 Ps., near Zionsville, and he sold in 1762 to Simon Schneider, to whom a patent was granted in 1762, by the name of "Snyderburg."

Wendell Heimbach, for 99 A. 24 Ps., in Upper Milford and patent granted 1782 to his son, David, the founder of Hampton Furnace.

Frederick Fahnel, in 1764, for 23 A. 98 Ps., in Upper Milford and patent granted in 1765; he sold to John Hiestand in 1775.

Michael Guthman, for 103 A. in Upper Milford; he sold to John Adam Gebhard, to whom patent was granted in 1771.

Herman Niesz for 178 A. 33 Ps., near Vera Cruz; patent granted in 1767 under the name of "Niessheim."

Michael Wolfgang, in 1750, for 144 A. near Emaus in Upper Milford.

Jacob Stahl, 135 A. 20 Ps., near Zionsville, and patent issued in 1761. Jacob Stahl died in 1786 when the property was sold to Andrew Riesser. And Riesser sold it in 1789 to Philip Walter, who in 1790 erected a saw-mill and grist-mill.

Philip Tauney (Thani, Thauri, or Doni), in 1744 for 38 A. 71 Ps., in Upper Milford; patent granted in 1821 to Henry Leibert. On this premise between 1768 and 1778 the Leibert Mill was erected by Jacob Hahn. In 1883 William G. Moyer sold the premises to Jesse Stauffer. In 1752 Philip Tanney took up an adjoining tract of 269 A.

George Stahl, in 1765, for 47 A. in Upper Milford; patent to Jacob Miller and others.

Jacob Hahn for 25 A., patent by the name of "Squarrils Plain."

George Ohlewein, in 1756, for 11½ A. in Upper Milford; patent in 1789 to Andrew Engelman called "Springfield."

Christopher Andreas Gutman, in 1738, for 103 acres in Upper Milford, and he sold to John Adam Gebhard to whom a patent was granted in 1771.

William Rueb (or Rieb), in 1748 for 43 A. 30 Ps., in Upper Milford; patent in 1816, to Jacob Schantz. The Evangelical United Mennonite Church is located on this tract.

Philip Kratzer for 198 A. 150 Ps., in Upper Milford and patent to him in 1760.

Bernhard Derr (or Doer), in 1758, for 18 A. in Upper Milford. The Baptist Church near Vera Cruz is located on this tract.

George Lesch, in 1812, for 18½ A., near Vera Cruz; patent issued in 1814.

Sebastian Knauss and Andrew Giering, about 1740, took up great tracts of land in Upper Milford, south and south-west of Emaus. Both were leading members of the Moravian church and both donated land to it in the Borough. Their premises are now in the possession of many owners, including the Donaldson Iron Co.

George Hereft, (Hooft), in 1740 for 100 A. in Upper Milford.

The following warrants were taken in Upper Milford, but their exact location is not known:

John George Baumgartner, in 1738, for 100 acres.

Johannes Elverich, in 1741, for 50 acres.

Jacob Steffler, in 1744, for 57 acres.

Gabriel Kohler, in 1746, for 75 acres.

Johann Michael Kieler, in 1746, for 64 acres.

Christian Steinmyer, in 1751, 150 acres.

Jacob West in 1751, for 40 acres.

Batzer Fetterman, in 1752, for 52 acres.

Michael Stocker, in 1740 for 150 acres, now in possession of Charles Johnson, of Charles Johnson.

Henry Bitting, in 1740 for 100 acres.

Henry Rutler, in 1740, for 50 acres.

Christopher Bayer in 1738 for 151 acres.

Andreas Bastian, for 32 A. 50 Ps.

Also the following without learning the time or quantity of land:

Yost Hengel, (Hinkel), Michael Peace, Conrad Irig, John Wetzler, John Schaub, John Gisell, and Samuel Bechtel.

Tax List of 1762.—The following taxables were in the township in 1762:

TAX LIST OF UPPER MILFORD, 1762.

John Shantz, Collector.

Peter Arnold,	£ 5	Valatine Kayser, . .	£ 4
Andreas Bastian, . .	5	Conrad Klein,	5
Michael Bastian, . .	5	Baltzer Kraus,	20
Mathias Bastian, . .	6	Frederick Kern,	11
Jonas Bastian,	4	Adam Keahl,	6
Jacob Berger,	4	Peter Keahl,	15
Stephen Buppenmeyer,	8	Natz Keicher,	6
Mathias Barthol, . .	8	George Klein,	22
Philip Becker,	4	Frederick Kemmerer,	17
Gottfried Cabis, . . .	4	Frederick Limbach, .	6
Christman's widow, .	14	Felix Linn,	5
Hartman Michael Dillow,	9	Peter Long,	12
Jacob Diel,	7	Jacob Miller,	10
Adam Drump,	15	Christian Miller, . .	13
Stephen Dollman, . .	5	Peter Martin,	8
Stephen Dhur,	5	Samuel Mechlin, . . .	24
Philip Dieringer, . .	7	Dewald Mechlin, . . .	18
Philip Dany,	7	Samuel Meyer,	11
Sebastian Drukenmiller,	16	Benjamin Meyer, . .	12
Jacob Dubs,	19	John Marburg,	7
Jacob Dillinger, . . .	15	Conrad Menges, . . .	5
George Dillinger, . . .	6	John Meyer,	16
Bernard Dear,	8	Michael Meyer's widow,	9
John Dear,	12	George Menges, . . .	4
Andreas Engleman, .	11	Christian Metzger, . .	6
Peter Edelman,	12	Peter Miller,	4
Jacob Eberhard, . . .	14	Conrad Neymeyer, . .	0
Joseph Eberhard, . .	20	poor,	0
Michael Eberhard, . .	23	Herman Nies,	7
John Eberhard,	48	Henry Ott,	12
Peter Fink,	5	Mathias Ox,	16
Christian Fisher, . . .	12	John Orth,	20
Michael Florus,	9	Adam Ox,	4
Jacob Funck,	5	John Ohlewine,	13
David Giessy,	4	Ulrich Rieser,	20
Adam Grames,	9	Christian Reiner, . . .	8
Adam Gebhard,	12	George Reinert,	8
Christopher Goodman,	16	Nicholas Rothenberger,	16
Felix Huber,	6	Michael Reader, . . .	4
George Huft,	5	Jacob Reiber,	4
Christopher Heisler, .	5	Henry Ries,	16
John Histant, Jr., . .	11	Adam Reinhard, . . .	6
Jacob Huber,	16	Frederick Rouschenberger,	4
Christopher Heller, . .	18	Adam Reichenbacher,	4
John Hanky,	6	John Reiswick,	10
George Helferich, . .	18	France Russ,	6
George Hahn,	7	Christopher Reichly, .	7
Jacob Hahn,	6	George Stiehl,	4
George Hammer, . . .	13	Baltzer Stiehl,	4
Casper Holtzhouser, .	20	Michael Sheibeli, . . .	5
Michael Hollenbach, .	4	Daniel Stauffer, . . .	16
Casper Hepler,	6	Nichs. Stehler,	16
Henry Hertz,	8	David Streüp,	24
Peter Hertz,	17	Jacob Sicher,	12
Philip Hertzog,	16	Philip Sebold,	6
Henry Huber,	10	Jacob Shafer,	4
John Simon Histant, .	16	Henry Shleifer, . . .	14
Christopher Hoffmann,	6	George Shantzenbach,	16
Jacob Holtzhauser, . .	6	Martin Shafer,	5
Jacob Köhler,	17	John Shout,	9
Peter Kryling,	17	Baltzer Sholl,	5
Philip Kratzer,	9

Martin Shwenk, ... £ 10	Christian Weis, £ 4	Widow Greilings.	Michael Meyer.
John Shantz, 15	George Wüst, 4	John Griesemer.	Jacob Miller.
Peter Shlosser, 7	Ferdinand Wertz, ... 6	Adam Gebhard.	Leonard Miller.
Jacob Smith, 13	Jacob Welder, 6	William Haintz.	Nicholaus Miller.
George Stahlnecker, 18	Jacob Wetzel, Jr.,... 11	Adam Hatman.	Peter Miller.
Michael Smith, 22	Martin Werfel, 4	Casper Hepler.	Philip Miller.
Adam Shuler, 19	France Welgon, ... 16	Stoffel Hepler.	Henry Marsteller.
Adam Shoemaker, 11	George Weis' wid-	Jacob Heil.	Conrad Neumeyer.
Christian Steininger, 16	ow, 13	Simon Hein.	Herman Niess.
Christian Sturtz, .. 4	Rudolph Weis, 15	John Hauser.	John Niess.
Ludwig Sifert, 16	Henry Weis, 4	David Heimbach.	John Ohlwein.
Peter Strein, 7	John Yund, 16	George Hillgass.	John Ord (Ortt).
Jacob Stahl, 14	Baltzer Yakel's wid-	John Hillgass.	Christopher Ott.
Peter Trautman, .. 4	ow, 18	Felix Hirth.	Henry Ott.
John Valentzer, ... 6	Henry Yabel, 6	John Hiestand.	Michael Ott.
Jacob Wetzel, Sr.,... 20	Jacob Zerfink, 10	John Hiestand, Jr.	Michael Paulus.
John Wetzel, 5	Joseph Zebitz, 7	Abraham Hiestand.	Jacob Rauschenberger.

Singlemen.

Bernard Bear.	Michael Smith.	Isaac Hiestand.	Henry Hartzell.	George Reiner.
Henry Döss.	Peter Shuler.	Henry Hartzell.	George Horner.	Widow Reiner.
Frederick Delp.	Michael Shuler.	John Reiswig.	John Reiswig.	Christian Reiner.
Felix Dups.	Frederick Smith.	Nicholaus Hittel.	Nicholaus Hittel.	Adam Reinhard.
Isaac Histant.	Peter Swenk.	Philip Herzog.	Philip Herzog.	John Riesser.
Adam Kurtz.	Nichs. Schublin.	Philip Herzog, Jr.	Philip Herzog, Jr.	William Riesser.
Henry Kemmerer.	George Stahl.	Jacob Huber.	Jacob Huber.	Samuel Reichert.
Mathias Kern.	Ludwig Stehler.	Peter Hartzell.	Peter Hartzell.	Abraham Reichert.
Henry Mattern.	Jacob Sleifer.	Jacob Holtzhausen.	Jacob Holtzhausen.	John Rischel.
Henry Orth.	John Shout.	Nicholaus Jeissyly.	Nicholaus Jeissyly.	Martin Rischel.
Leonard Ox.	Frederick Shoemaker.	Adam Jeissyly.	Adam Jeissyly.	Henry Romig.
John Riess.	George Trunkenmiller.	Baltzer Jaeckel.	Baltzer Jaeckel.	Adam Rothenberger.
Killian Russ.	Simon Walther.	Melchoir Jaeckel.	Melchoir Jaeckel.	George Rothenberger.
		George Jaeckel.	George Jaeckel.	Jacob Rothenberger.
		Jeremiah Jaeckel.	Jeremiah Jaeckel.	Peter Rothenberger.
		Casper Jaeckel.	Casper Jaeckel.	David Rothrock.
		John Jacoby.	John Jacoby.	Jacob Rothrock.
		John Jund.	John Jund.	George Rud.
		Isaac Jarrett.	Isaac Jarrett.	Michael Rudolph.
		Jacob Kreter.	Jacob Kreter.	Henry Russ.
		Daniel Kreter.	Daniel Kreter.	George Schaffer.
		Christopher Krauss.	Christopher Krauss.	William Schaffer.
		Baltzer Krauss.	Baltzer Krauss.	Abraham Schantz.
		Jacob Koehler.	Jacob Koehler.	John Schantz.
		Philip Kratzer.	Philip Kratzer.	Joseph Schantz.
		Adam Kehl.	Adam Kehl.	Conrad Schaub.
		Philip Kehl.	Philip Kehl.	Adams Schaub.
		Friederich Kemmerer.	Friederich Kemmerer.	Martin Scheibele.
		John Kemmerer.	John Kemmerer.	Joseph Schelly.
		George Kern.	George Kern.	Henry Schiffer.
		Lorenz Kern.	Lorenz Kern.	Jacob Schiffer.
		Conrad Klein.	Conrad Klein.	Jacob Schiffer, Jr.
		Gabriel Klein.	Gabriel Klein.	Peter Schlasser.
		George Klein.	George Klein.	Jacob Schmeyer.
		Isaac Klotz.	Isaac Klotz.	Peter Schmeyer.
		Nicholaus Klotz.	Nicholaus Klotz.	John Schnell.
		Jacob Knauss.	Jacob Knauss.	John Schneider.
		Michael Knauss.	Michael Knauss.	Adam Schuler.
		Joseph Kooken.	Joseph Kooken.	Adam Schuler.
		Nicholaus Kooken.	Nicholaus Kooken.	John Schuler.
		Peter Kooken.	Peter Kooken.	Peter Schuler.
		Friederich Krammes.	Friederich Krammes.	Jacob Sicher.
		Leonhard Lauten-	Leonhard Lauten-	Friederich Siechly.
		schlager.	schlager.	George Seider.
		George Lautenschlager.	George Lautenschlager.	Daniel Smith.
		Martin Leibert.	Martin Leibert.	Jacob Smith.
		Friederich Limbach.	Friederich Limbach.	Jacob Smith.
		John Linn.	John Linn.	John Smith.
		Friederich Martin.	Friederich Martin.	Peter Smith.
		Michael Mattinger.	Michael Mattinger.	Anthony Stahler.
		Philip Mechlin.	Philip Mechlin.	Ludwig Stahler.
		Thomas Mechlin.	Thomas Mechlin.	Nicholaus Stahler, Jr.
		Christian Metzger.	Christian Metzger.	Nicholaus Stahler, Jr.
		Abraham Meyer.	Abraham Meyer.	Abraham Stahl.
		Conrad Meyer.	Conrad Meyer.	Jacob Stahl.

Tax List of 1781.—The following assessment-lists, made by the commissioners of Northampton county, Dec. 27, 1781, shows the names of all of the taxable citizens then residing in the territory which is now included in the townships of Upper and Lower Milford:

Ludwig Andreas.	Peter Deiss.	Abraham Meyer.
Stofel Andreas.	Michael Eberhard.	Conrad Meyer.
Michael Andreas.	Jacob Eberhard.
Ulrich Bassler.	Joseph Eberhard.
Michael Bastian.	Peter Eberhard.
Henry Birkheimer.	Andrew Engelman.
Gabriel Pappenmeyer.	Adam Engelman.
Michael Bischof.	Conrad Ernst.
Henry Bitting.	Samuel Eisenhard.
Jacob Becker.	Jacob Eckle.
Jacob Van Buskirk.	Jeremiah Flexer.
Adam G. Bortz.	Frederick Fanel.
Nicholaus Bieber.	Balzer Fetterman.
Even Bill.	George Fetterman.
Jacob Bildhaus.	Widow Fischer.
Peter Braun.	Daniel Folck.
George Christ.	Michael Flores.
George Christman.	Henry Funck.
Frederick Delp.	Jacob Funck.
Peter Daney.	John Funck.
Stephen Dalman.	Rudolph Funck.
George Dillinger.	George Funck.
Nicholaus Dietz.	Jacob Fischer.
Daniel Dany.	Widow Gebhard.
John Dany.	Andrew Girring.
Phillip Derringer.	Jacob Gernet.
Jacob Deep.	Leonard Griesemer.
Daniel Derr.	Matthias Gerhard.
Michael Derr.	Peter Gerhard.
Stephen Derr.	Daniel Guth.
Daniel Dubs.	Adam Geary.
Henry Daubert.	Jacob Geary.

Jacob Stahlschmiedt.
George Stahlnecker.
Jacob Stauffer.
Jacob Stephen.
George Stroh.
Traulis estate.
John Trexler.
Bastian Truckenmiller.
George Truckenmiller.
Adam Trump.
John Trump.
Jost Wentz.
Jacob Wentz.
Jacob Weiss.
Widow Weiss.
George Worman.
Conrad Wurman.
Friederich Winsh.
Michael Wolfgang.
Philip Walter.
Elias Weaver.
Philip Walter, Jr.
George Welder.
Frantz Westgo.

Mathias Westgo.
Conrad Wetzel.
John Wetzel.
Jacob Wickert.
Jost Wieand.
Wendell Wieand.
Adam Wieder.
Peter Weaver.
Jacob Wolf.
Philip Witman.
Rudolph Weiss.
Conrad Witmeyer.
Jacob Wittner.
Ferdinand Wirtz.
Goufried Wiesner.
Tobias Wendell.
Conrad Wagner.
Conrad Wolf.
Casper Yoder.
Christian Young.
Conrad Zeller.
John Zeller.
Rudolph Zubler.

Jacob Dillinger.
John Dillinger.
Maria Dillinger.
Jacob Dilgert.
David Ditlow.
Isaac Dixson.
Daniel Dubs.
Henry Dubs.
Jacob Dubs.
Christian Dutt.
Adam Eberhard.
Daniel Eberhard.
John Eberhard.
Jacob Ehrhard.
Jacob Ehrenhard.
Friederich Eidinger.
David Eulenbach.
George Engelman.
Henry Engelman.
John Engelman.
Peter Engelman.
John Erdman.
Daniel Erney.
John Fellman.
Widow Ferdman.
Philip Fetterman.
Jacob Fink.
John Fink.
Christian Fischer.
Jacob Fischer.
John Fischer.
Widow Flores.
Daniel Fretz.
John Frick.
John Funk.
Jacob Geary.
Matthias Geho.
John Gehring.
Jacob Geisinger.
Philip Geisinger.
Jacob Gerhard.
John Gering.
William Gorman.
Ludwig Greber.
Felix Griessemer.
Friederich Griessemer.
Jacob Griessemer.
John Griessemer.
Daniel Guth, Sr.
Daniel Guth, Jr.
George Guth.
John Hanger.
Peter Hartzell.
George Harlacher.
John Haupt.
Adam Heckman.
George Heil.
Jacob Heil.
David Heimbach, Jr.
David Heimbach, Sr.
Abraham Hentricks.
Jacob Henscher.
Abraham Hiestand, Jr.
Abraham Hiestand, Sr.
Jacob Hiestand.
John Hilligass.
Michael Hilligass, Jr.
Michael Hilligass, Sr.
Nicholas Hittel.
William Horsfield.
George Jacoby.
Henry Jacoby.

John Jacoby.
John Jarrett.
Andrew Jackel.
Christopher Jackel.
David Jaekel, Jr.
David Jaekel, Sr.
George Jaekel, Jr.
George Jaekel, Sr.
Jeremias Jaekel.
John Jaekel.
Melchior Jaekel.
Moses Kain.
Abraham Kaufman.
Peter Kehler.
Jacob Kehler.
Michael Kehm.
John Keiser.
Joseph Keiser.
John Kemmerer.
Henry Kern.
Matthias Kern.
Daniel Klein.
George Klein.
George Klein.
Isaac Klein.
Michael Klein.
Andrew Kleinsmith.
Henry Knappenberger.
Jacob Knauss.
Peter Kneppel.
Friederich Krammes.
Nicholaus Kramer.
Andrew Krauss.
David Krauss.
Friederich Krauss.
George Krauss.
John Krauss.
Abraham Kriehel.
Jacob Kriehel.
Jacob Kriehel.
Henry Larosch.
Jacob Larosch.
Jacob Laub.
Leonhard Lautenschlaeger.
Nicholas Lautenschlaeger, Jr.
Nicholas Lautenschlaeger, Sr.
Henry Leibert.
Martin Leibert.
Joseph Leopold.
Peter Linn.
Jacob Marsteller.
Widow Marsteller.
Friederich Martin.
Ludwig Mattinger.
Widow Mattinger.
John Mechlin.
Conrad Mertz.
Jacob Metzger.
Friederich Miller.
Friederich Miller.
George Philip Miller.
Jacob Miller.
Isaac Miller.
Peter Miller.
Widow Miller.
Daniel Mohr.
Henry Mohr.
Jacob Mohr.

SINGLE FREEMEN.

John Derr.
Jacob Dillinger.
Peter Engelman.
Philip Eberhard.
Jacob Hiestand.
George Horlacher.
George Hein.
George Kemmerer.
George Klein.
Nicholaus Klein.
Jacob Klein.
Friederich Metzger.

George Reiner.
Andrew Reisser.
Philip Stahler.
Peter Stahler.
Jacob Stahlnecker.
Peter Schaffer.
Michael Schandt.
Adam Trump.
Killian Weiss.
John Riesser.
Henry Yundt.
Christian Zeller.

Tax List of 1812.—In 1812, when Lehigh county was organized, the following were the taxable citizens of Upper Milford (now Upper and Lower Milford townships):

Henry Albrecht.
Stoffel Andreas.
Jacob Arner.
Jacob Axter.
John Baal.
Adam Bader.
Michael Bahm.
Jacob Baer.
Abraham Bartow.
Henry Bassler.
Ulrich Bassler.
Henry Bauer.
Jacob Beitelman.
John Berkenstock.
Jacob Bildhaus.
Ludwig Bitting.
Jacob Bleyler.
Jacob Bortz, Jr.
Andrew Boyer.
Adam Brey.
George Brey.
Michael Brey.
Philip Brey.
George Friederich
Caldower.
George Carl.
John Carl.

George Christ.
Henry Christ, Jr.
David Christman.
George Christman.
George Clewell.
Joseph Clewell.
Daniel Cooper.
Joseph Cope.
Jacob Daney.
Philip Daney.
Philip Daney, Jr.
Peter Daney.
Jacob Danner.
Henry Daubert.
Henry Daubert, Jr.
John Daubert.
Jacob Deiss.
Jacob Derr.
Michael Derr.
Widow Dickenshide.
George Diehl.
Michael Diehl.
George Dietz.
Jacob Dietz.
Nicholaus Dietz.
Christina Dillinger.
Daniel Dillinger.

Stoffel Mohr.
 William Mohr.
 Abraham Moyer.
 Henry Moyer, Jr.
 Henry Moyer, Sr.
 Jacob Moyer, Sr.
 Jacob Moyer, Jr.
 William Moyer.
 John Mumbauer, Jr.
 John Mumbauer, Sr.
 Christian Musselman.
 George Nehs (Nace).
 Jacob Nehs.
 Jacob Nehs.
 Conrad Nepmeyer.
 Jacob Oberholtzer.
 Christian Ortt.
 John Ortt.
 Henry Ortt.
 Henry Ott, Jr.
 Henry Ott, Sr.
 Widow Ott.
 Samuel Paul.
 Adam Reichenbach.
 George Reichenbach.
 George Reichenbach.
 Leonhard Reichenbach.
 Michael Reichenbach.
 Peter Reichenbach.
 Cornelius Reinbold.
 Hartman Reinhard.
 Daniel Reinert.
 Peter Reinert.
 Peter Reichert.
 Andrew Riesser.
 Casper Riesser.
 John Riesser.
 Solomon Riesser.
 William Riesser.
 Samuel Rinker.
 John Roeder, Sr.
 John Roeder, Jr.
 Samuel Roeder.
 Friederich Romig.
 Adam Rothenberger.
 David Rothenberger.
 George Rothenberger.
 George Rothenberger.
 Jacob Rothenberger.
 John Rothenberger.
 Peter Rothenberger.
 David Rothrock.
 Jacob Rothrock.
 George Ruch.
 Michael Rudolph.
 George Schaffer.
 George Schaffer.
 Peter Schaffer.
 Peter Schaffer.
 Abraham Schantz.
 Christian Schantz.
 Jacob Schantz.
 John Schantz.
 John Schantz.
 John Schaub.
 George Schell.
 Michael Schelly.
 Andrew Schenkler.
 Adam Schiffert.
 John Schiffert.
 Ulrich Schitz (Schutz).
 John Schlotterer.
 Daniel Schmidt.
 Jacob Schmidt.
 Solomon Schmidt.
 Jacob Schmoyer.
 John Schmoyer.
 Adam Schneider.
 Jacob Schneider.
 Samuel Schneider.
 Simon Schneider.
 David Schubert.
 George Schumacher.
 John Schuld.
 Abraham Schuler.
 Adam Schuler.
 George Schuler.
 John Schuler.
 Samuel Schuler.
 Baltzer Schultz.
 Daniel Schwartz.
 Daniel Schwartz.
 Jacob Schweneck.
 Jacob Seibert.
 Peter Sell.
 Christian Shearer.
 John Shimer.
 David Sicher.
 Jacob Sicher.
 Adam Singmaster.
 Conrad Smith.
 George Smith.
 Peter Smith.
 David Spinner.
 John Stadler.
 George Stahl.
 John Stahl.
 Christian Stahler.
 Daniel Stahler.
 David Stahler.
 Henry Stahler.
 Jacob Stahler.
 Ludwig Stahler.
 Nicholas Stahler, Sr.
 Nicholas Stahler, Jr.
 Nicholas Stahler.
 Peter Stahler.
 Philip Stahler.
 Lorenz Stahler.
 Abraham Stauffer.
 Jacob Stauffer.
 Peter Standt.
 Adam Steininger.
 Adam Stephan.
 Jacob Stephan.
 Andrew Straszberger.
 George Truckenmiller.
 Adam Trump.
 George Trump.
 Baltzer Urffer.
 David Urffer.
 Michael Urffer.
 Widow Urffer.
 Bernhard Vogele
 (Fegely).
 Nicholaus Vogele.
 George Vogt, Jr.
 George Vogt, Sr.
 John Wagner.
 John Wagner.
 Jacob Walker.
 Daniel Walter.
 David Walter.
 Philip Walter.
 Elias Weaver.
 Michael Weaver.
 John Weaver.
 Peter Weaver.
 John Weikel.
 Baltzer Weinberger.
 Christopher Weiss.
 Jacob Weiss.
 Henry Westgo.
 Jacob Westgo.
 Philip Westgo.
 Daniel Wetzel.
 Jacob Wetzel, Sr.
 Jacob Wetzel, Jr.
 John Wetzel.
 David Wieandt.
 John Wieandt, Sr.
 Jacob Wieandt, Jr.
 John Wieandt.
 Jost Wieandt.
 Wendel Wieandt, Sr.
 Wendel Wieandt, Jr.
 Jacob Wickert.
 Adam Wieder, Jr.
 Adam Wieder, Sr.
 Casper Wieder.
 Gottfried Wiessemer.
 Christian Willauer.
 Jacob Wittmer.
 Widow Wittmer.
 John Zeisloff.
 Carl Zeller.
 Christian Zeller.
 Conrad Zeller.
 John Zeller.
 Abraham Ziegler.

SINGLE FREEMEN.

Henry Dany.
 John Dany.
 George Derr.
 Henry Derr.
 Jacob Diehl.
 Peter Diehl.
 Abraham Dietz.
 Peter Dietz.
 Daniel Dubs.
 John Dubs.
 John Eberhard.
 Michael Engelman.
 John Fischer.
 George Flores.
 Henry Flores.
 Henry Henry.
 George Hittel.
 Philip Hittel.
 John Rudolph.
 Jacob Schaub.
 Stoffel Schubert.
 Jacob Schuler.
 Christian Schwartz.
 Peter Schwartz.
 David Seibert.
 Stoffel Seibert.
 William Hittel.
 Daniel Jackel.
 George Klein.
 Benjamin Kriebel.
 Benjamin Kriebel.
 George Lechner.
 Jacob Lechner.
 Daniel Miller.
 David Mohr.
 Jacob Moyer.
 Philip Mumbauer.
 John Ott.
 Jacob Ott.
 Jacob Reichenbach.
 Michael Reichenbach.
 Adam Reinhard.
 Lorenz Ruch.
 George Rudolph.
 John Smith.
 Jonathan Stahl.
 John Strassberger.
 David Trexler.
 John Wieder.
 Leonhard Wieder.
 Philip Zeffass.

Prominent Early Citizens.—Many prominent men have lived in the townships of Upper and Lower Milford, and during their careers exerted a strong and guiding influence in the agricultural, industrial, religious, educational, financial and political affairs of their extensive territory covering upwards of thirty square miles, which is worthy of notice in this historical compilation.

Ludwick (or Ludwig) Bitting, a farmer of Upper Milford, owned a farm of over 146 acres on the Hosensack Hill (now Lower Milford) from 1744 to 1771. He was elected to the State Legislature for Northampton county in 1758, 1759, and 1760.

Daniel Stahler was born in Upper Milford, March 31, 1781; established the first hotel in Dillingersville (then Stahler's) in 1812; was appointed the same year postmaster of the new postoffice (which was the first in Upper Milford), and he held the office until 1827; was elected Commissioner of Lehigh county in 1842 for one term; and died Aug. 31, 1854, aged 73 years, 5 months.

Lorenz Stahler, (brother of Daniel), was born in Upper Milford, April 18, 1779; was appointed justice of the peace in 1812, and continued in office until 1840, when he was elected under the new law for one term of five years; continued in office 33 years, until 1845; died Aug. 15, 1854, aged 75 years, 3 months, 27 days.

Joshua Stahler, (son of Lorenz), was born Oct. 2, 1814, in Upper Milford; was elected justice of the peace in 1845, and re-elected in 1850; elected Register of Wills for Lehigh county in 1851; elected coroner in 1855; elected associate judge in 1856; and re-elected in 1861.

David Gehman was born in Hereford township, Berks county on Aug. 26, 1802, removed to the Hosensack Valley in 1828, when he purchased from George Kline, Jr., a tract of land, on which he established a country store, and conducted it for a number of years until 1860. In 1841 a new postoffice, by the name of Hosensack, was established and Gehman was appointed postmaster, and he filled the position for twelve years. In 1861 he was re-appointed and after serving eleven years he resigned. In 1873 removed to Quakertown, Bucks county, where he died March 5, 1881, aged 78 years, 6 months, 9 days. He left two daughters: Mrs. Charles Schoenly and Mrs. John Brunner.

Samuel Moyer, a tanner in Upper Milford (at what is now Burkhalter's tannery, in Lower Milford), was elected to the State Legislature for one term in 1826.

Charles W. Wieand was born March 13, 1809, at Zionsville, where for several years he carried on the business of store-keeper and dealing in tombstones; then purchased the farm of his father, David Wieand; was appointed in 1831 justice of the peace of Upper Milford, and in 1840 was elected for a term of five years. He also served as a surveyor. By his influence a new postoffice was established at Zionsville, in 1849, and he was appointed postmaster for four years. In 1866, he purchased the Mensch mill property from John B. Gehman. In 1876, he removed to East Greenville, Montgomery county, where he assisted his son, Rev. C. J. Wieand, in establishing the Perkiomen Seminary.

Frederick Sigmund, ironmaster, was born in Würtemberg, Germany, on March 31, 1809, and came as a boy to this country; purchased (1850) Hampton Furnace, in Upper Milford, and conducted the same very successfully until his death. He was also a number of years secretary of the Board of Common Schools of Upper Milford, and died June 25, 1860, aged 53 years, 2 months, 25 days.

Henry M. Sigmund (eldest son of Frederick Sigmund, ironmaster), was born in Upper Milford, June 25, 1836. Upon his father's death he and his brother, Dr. Albert M. Sigmund, became the owners of the Hampton Furnace, which they carried on for nearly seven years, when it was discontinued and sold to Peter Faust. He died Aug. 10, 1876, aged 40 years.

Samuel Stauffer (son of Abraham Stauffer), was born in 1811, in what is now Lower Milford, at Kraussdale; obtained his first education in the schools of his neighborhood; was employed for several terms as a teacher; served several terms as school director of Upper Milford (before the division) and several years as secretary of the school board; was elected in 1853 as the first justice of the peace of Lower Milford for five years, and four times re-elected, serving in all 20 years; was appointed notary public in December, 1882; and with his son, Henry, as a partner, he assisted in carrying on a farm, gristmill and saw mill.

Charles Foster (a son of John Thomas Foster, of Philadelphia), was born in that city on March 24, 1801. His father and mother died when he was only three years old, and he was adopted and educated by Jacob Frey, of Montgomery county. He became a blacksmith, settled in Upper Milford, and in 1825 married Magdalena Fischer, daughter of John Fischer. The same year he purchased Fischer's Hotel, which he conducted for over thirty years, and during this time he was also a progressive farmer. In 1838 he was elected to the State Legislature; elected commissioner of Lehigh county in 1844 for three years; elected county auditor in 1859 for three years, and served as a school director of Upper Milford for eighteen years. He died in Upper Milford on July 6, 1875, aged over seventy-four years.

Jacob Schwenck, a farmer and carpenter and joiner, of Lower Milford (then Upper Milford), was elected commissioner of Lehigh county in 1832 for one term of three years; died in 1838.

John Yeakel, was born Nov. 15, 1774, in Lower Milford (then Upper Milford); was elected one of the first county commissioners of Lehigh county for two years (1812-'14). In 1816 he was re-elected for a second term of three years, and in 1819 for a third term of three years. He became the proprietor of the hotel at Hosensack in 1820, and conducted the place until he died, March 17, 1825.

Willoughby Gabel was born in 1810; for a number of years was a successful storekeeper and farmer of Lower Milford (then Upper Milford); was elected justice of the peace in 1845, and re-elected in 1850 and 1855; served as county commissioner of Lehigh county from 1862 to 1865. He served as one of the first school directors of Upper Milford, after the acceptance of the common-school law in 1844 by the township, and officiated as president of the school board.

Michael H. Albright, Esq., born Jan. 19, 1811, settled in his early boyhood with his mother in Lower Milford (then Upper Milford). He served as a justice of the peace of Lower Milford for thirteen years (1860-'73), and over ten years as school director of the same township. During this time he was one of its most prominent citizens and as such widely known throughout the county. He taught school for a number of years in the township. He moved in 1873 to Allentown, and died in 1892, aged 81 years.

George K. Carl, born June 28, 1828, was elected assessor of Lower Milford in 1854, and re-elected for twelve terms, and was elected, November, 1881, county commissioner of Lehigh county for one term of three years.

Edwin Albright (son of Michael H. Albright), was born Nov. 28, 1838, in Lower Milford (then Upper Milford), received his early education in the school of his father; went to Allentown in 1860, studied law, and became a prominent attorney. He served as solicitor under Sheriff Herman Fetter from 1862 to 1865; as district attorney from 1866 to 1869; as State Senator from 1871 to 1877; and as president judge of Lehigh county from 1878 for 24 years until his decease on Dec. 13, 1902, aged 64 years.

Philip Wetzel Flores, the first vice-president of the Lehigh County Historical Society, was found dead in the library connected with his home at Dillingersville, February 24th, 1908. He was stricken with apoplexy during the night. Mr. Flores was descended from Michael Flores, who emigrated from Wittemberg, Germany, about 1740, settling in the neighborhood of Dillingersville, where he was a farmer and blacksmith, and obtained a large tract of land. His son, John Michael Flores, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. The latter's son, Peter, who died October 1, 1865, was the father of Philip W. Flores, who was born at the old homestead August 9, 1832. He was a farmer, kept the village store and was appointed postmaster on October 17, 1865, serving for a number of years. In October, 1862, he enlisted in the 176th Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company K, December 6, 1862, and was in service in Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina for over ten months. He was honorably discharged August 18, 1863. Following this service he was Assistant Assessor of the United States Internal Revenue for Upper Saucon, Upper Milford and Lower Milford townships for two and a half years.

Mr. Flores was a very well read man and was especially proficient in local history. He devoted much time to studying and writing the history of the lower end of Lehigh county, especially of the Milfords, in which he was a recognized authority. He contributed historical articles to newspapers and magazines and was for forty years a correspondent for the Allentown Friedensbote. He was the author of the history of Upper and Lower Milford Townships in the History of Lehigh and Carbon counties, published in 1884, and of several chapters in the "Skizzen aus dem Lecha Thale." He was one of the organizers of the Lehigh County Historical Society, having been present at the time the organization was effected.

Mr. Flores left one son and three daughters. He was a member of the Reformed congregation at Zionsville, of E. B. Young Post, No. 87, G. A. R., of Allentown, of Coopersburg Lodge, No. 390, I. O. O. F. and of the Pennsylvania German Society. He was buried with military and Grand Army honors, February 29th, in the burial ground connected with the Zionsville Reformed Church.

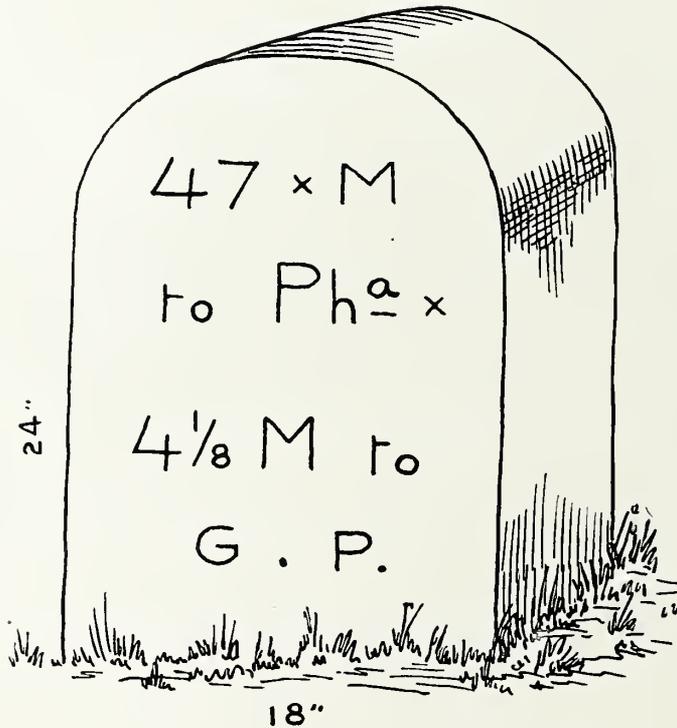

OLD ROADS.—By order of the proprietary government of Pennsylvania, there was in the month of August, 1735, surveyed and laid out a public road by the name of "The King's High Road," beginning in Macousin (Macungie) township, a short distance northwest of Breinigsville, on land of Peter Trexler; running through the present borough of Macungie and Upper Milford (then Bucks county); crossing the land of Derrick Jausen (Shimersville), Christian Crall (Zionsville), John Meyer, Dewalt Mechlin, Henry Geber (Hosensack), Peter Walber, Ulrich Rieszer, and Alexander Diefenderfer, crossing the county-line between Bucks and Philadelphia counties (now Montgomery county) through Geryville into Gussenhoppen (Goshenhoppen), to North Wales where it joined the road leading from Goshenhoppen to Philadelphia. It was reported that this road was laid out 52 feet wide. This was the first public road within the limits of the present Lehigh county. The "Great Philadelphia Road," 25 feet wide, was laid out in 1755. It begins at the "King's Highway," on the line between the townships, and extends northwardly through Upper Milford, Lower Macungie, Salisbury, South and North Whitehall, and Washington township to Slatington; and thence in later years extended over the Blue Mountains to Mauch Chunk.

The third public road (nearly as old) is the one leading from Emaus across the South Mountain in Upper Milford and the Chestnut Hill in Lower Milford, and thence into Bucks county.

The next historic road is that leading from Zionsville eastwardly across Upper Milford and Lower Milford, passing Dillingersville and the Great Swamp Church; thence to Spinnerstown, in Bucks county. On this road, the first mail-route crossing Milford from Fogelsville to Trumbauersville was established in 1812.

ANCIENT MILESTONES.—There are three remaining old milestones still standing along the "King's Highway" through this section of territory; two on the highway from Hosensack to Emaus (one of them in front of the "Buck-Horn Tavern" with the inscription very plain—1773, 43 M To P), and the other half a mile south of Vera Cruz still upright but in a damaged condition with no inscription; and the third on the highway from Old Zionsville to Macungie, at Shimersville, at the northwest corner of Llewellyn Shimer's barn with the inscription very plain—47 M to Ph^a & 4½ M to G P (the G P meaning Goschenhoppen Pike at Treichlersville, in Berks county).

Another principal road leads from Zionsville in Upper Milford to Hereford, in Berks county. A turnpike was constructed on its bed in 1853 by the Berks and Lehigh Turnpike Co.

There are other prominent roads in the township, those worthy of mention being from Hosensack, in Lower Milford, to Spinnerstown; from Dub's mill (now Schelly's) to Limeport; from Hosensack to Hereford; from Zionsville to Coopersburg; from Vera Cruz to Lanark; from Shimersville to Emaus; and from Shimersville to Seisholtzville.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following elected officials served in the township from 1840 till its division in 1853:

Charles W. Wieand,	Willoughby Gabel,
1840-'45	1845-'52
Lorenze Stahler, 1840-'45	Reuben Stahler, 1852-'53
Joshua Stahler, 1845-'53

[See respective Divisions for officials since 1853.]

POLLING PLACE.—The polling place of the township from the beginning until its division in 1853 was at Dillingersville.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR.—The first resident of Upper Milford to take an active part in the movement for the freedom of the colonies was Andrew Engelman, who was elected a member of the Committee of Observation for the county on Dec. 21, 1774. In the following Spring, in May, 1775, 26 companies of Associators were enrolled in the county and the Upper Milford company of 64 men was commanded by Capt. Christian Fisher and Lieut. Philip Walter. On June 20, 1775, Jacob Miller and George Kreibel were appointed committee-men to assist Mr. Engelman. At the election on Sept. 27, 1775, Andrew Engelman was again elected committee-man, and in 1776 he was re-elected with Frederick Limbach. Limbach was appointed a justice of the peace in 1777 and a judge of the courts in 1784. On March 30, 1780 he was appointed a Sub-Lieutenant of the county and in 1783 was elected to the Assembly. He removed from the county in 1787.

In January, 1777, Capt. William Shaffer, of Colonel Geiger's Second Battalion, was in command of the Upper Milford company of 73 men. In 1778, the muster roll of the Second Battalion, commanded by Colonel George Breinig, Lieut. Colonel Stephen Balliet, and Major Frederick Limbach, gives Capt. Peter Schuler in command of the third company, with Lieutenants Thomas Mechlin and James Derr and Ensign James Eberhard. Among the privates were John Jacoby, Peter Dietz, John Youndt, Michael Eberhard, Daniel Stauffer, John Shantz, Adam Rodenberger, John Dillinger, John Dubbs, Philip Eberhard, Joseph Eberhard, George Kline, Matthias Ochs, Jacob Dillinger, Jr., Peter Eberhard, Michael Derr, and Jacob Holtzhauser. In Capt. Christian Fisher's company were Ensign John Ord and Privates Peter Mayer, Conrad Neimeyer, Adam Engelman, Adam Deal, Henry Ott, John Neiss, George Wetzell, Michael Shaut, George Shaffer, John Schuler, John Landis, George Fetterman, Conrad Meyer, Peter Engelman, Jost Wentz, Nicholas and Anthony Stahler, Michael Fetterman, Nicholas Kline and Michael Bastian.

WAR OF 1812.—In the English War of 1812-15, the following men enlisted from Upper Milford township:

Dr. C. F. Dickenshied, (surgeon).	Henry Fegely. Charles Ross.
Henry Flores.	Jacob Krammes.
George Flores.	John V. Buskirk.
George Schmoyer.	Jacob Ortt.
Nicolaus Fegely.

CIVIL WAR.—Names of the men who served in Civil War with the 176th Reg't Penna. Militia for ten months in Virginia, North and South Carolina: (* from Upper Milford;  from Lower Milford.)

Capt., Geo. Neitz.	Privates.
1 Lt., Chas. H. Foster.*	Jonathan H. Bickel.
2 Lt., Philip W. Flores.	Franklin Flores.
1 Serg., Addison Seibert.	David Gery.
3 Serg., John G. Rosenberg.*	Daniel Heinbach.
4 Serg., Charles Heil.	Wm. H. Schiffert.
5 Serg., Wm. H. Wierand.*	Martin Ackerman.
2 Corp., Wm. M. Roeder.	John Brecht.
3 Corp., John F. Fegely.*	William Dony.*
4 Corp., Willoughby Sandt.*	Wm. Ettinger.
6 Corp., Henry Bauer.*	David Fischer.*
Drummer, Michael Nuss.*	Solomon Hallman.*
	Joseph Kuhns.*
	Gottlieb Pflueger.
	Lewis Reinhold.*
	Sam'l Rothenberger.
	William Sicher.*

Three year men in the Civil War:

UPPER MILFORD.
427th Regt.	104th Regt.
Solomon Wieder.	William Schlicher.
David Wieder.	Jacob Diehl.
Daniel Hittel.	Edwin Diehl.
	John Lynn.
LOWER MILFORD.
Solomon Hillegass.	Milton Engleman.
Levinas Hillegass.	Reuben M. Schaffer.
Charles Miller.	John J. Brunner.
Anthony Kleinsmith.
Daniel Kleinsmith.

EARLY SCHOOLS.—The greater proportion of the early settlers were Germans. The Moravians principally settled at the northern portion of the township in the vicinity of Emaus, while the Schwenkfelders spread into the lower or southern portion, adjoining Berks, Montgomery, and Bucks counties. Some settlements were made previous to 1725, even as early as 1715, by the so-called squatters. The Mennonites, Lutherans, and Reformed came in large numbers, and settled from 1730 to 1750.

They had a fair share of school learning, and only a few of them could not read nor write. They early established schools to educate their children, and it was a feature with them that they were hardly seated in their new houses before they began to organize congregations and build churches. Their schools were numerous and well attended, and they gave the common-school system a generous support.

Almost without exception the earliest schools were established at churches; and frequently the school-house preceded the erection of the church, and served the double purpose of school and church. These schools were church-schools so far as instruction was concerned, but they were not directly supported by the church. Each parent who sent children had to pay in proportion to the total number of days sent. In most cases the teacher "boarded 'round," which, in those days, was not an easy task.

The instruction was imparted in reading, writing and arithmetic; also in the catechism and the doctrines of the church, with singing. These schools were not denominational, but generally admitted the children of other denominations. After a time passed many of these schools became overcrowded, and some children had to go from three to four miles to school; thus a demand was created, for schools at other places, as Birkenstocks, Schwartzs, Brunners and Krausses. Some were first held in private houses until buildings could be erected. School-houses were commonly constructed of logs and had low ceilings; in everything defective, but ventilation. The instruction was exclusively in the German language. The teachers were foreigners. Those at the churches were generally the leaders of singing at religious worship. Before the Revolution some of those teachers quit as school-teachers and commenced to preach, and less qualified men were taken as teachers, and the schools lost greatly thereby.

Almost any person who came along and made pretensions to education was employed as teacher. This often brought into the school-room persons entirely unfit, morally and mentally. Nearly all the old schools were noted for severity in discipline. Some teachers were not only severe but cruel.

Till 1800 the German language was taught almost exclusively. From 1800 to 1820 the English language was gradually, but at first very slowly, introduced.

Previous to the adoption of the common-school system here in 1844, there were 17 school districts in Upper Milford, which were known by the following names, the years indicating the time they were established:

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|---|
| 1 Swamp church, 1727
to 1730. | 8 Berg, (St. Peter's),
1805. |
| 2 Hosensack, 1734 or
1735. | 9 Brunner's (Bildhaus'), before 1800. |
| 3 Dillingersville, 1734
or 1735. | 10 Chestnut Hill, —;
1820. |
| 4 Mennonite Church,
1735 to 1740. | 11 Kern's, 1820. |
| 5 Zionsville, before
1760. | 12 Krauss', 1842. |
| 6 Berkenstock's, before
1775. | 13 Weber's 1790. |
| 7 Schwartz's, before
1790. | 14 Kriebels, before 1800. |
| | 15 Pratt's, before 1820. |
| | 16 S t e i n i n g e r ' s
(Schwartz's) —. |
| | 17 Ruch's (Schwartz's). |

No. 2 was on the county line. Nos. 4, 8 and 16 were discontinued before the adoption of the common school system in 1844. No. 10, established very early, discontinued for a time, then re-opened. No. 17, was kept for three years at John Ruch's by Michael H. Albright, established in 1842.

Numbers 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 12, 14, and 15 were prominent old districts adopted by the school board in 1844. Previous to 1844 the school-houses were owned by the respective communities.

The Great Swamp Church school was the first in Lehigh county. It was established by the Reformed congregation as a "Gemein-Schule," and maintained by the trustees for about 115 years. When the common-school law was adopted in 1844, the school-board adopted the district for one year and paid $12.50 rent for the building. The teacher, Joseph Conover, was employed four months and a half, at $16 a month. It was the last school at this place. John Dubs and Philip Mumbauer were the trustees.

The Hosensack school was established in the Hosensack Valley as early as 1735 by the Schwenkfelders. Schools were conducted prior to 1740 in private houses. The first school was under the control of three trustees elected by the denomination. A "Gemein-Schule" was begun in the home of Christopher Krausz (or Krauss) in 1765, on the premises where the Carl school-house is situated. The record says: "April 22, 1765, An agreement was made with Charles Guss to serve as school-teacher for us at the private house of Christopher Krausz for the term of four years, for a salary of thirty-five pounds and eight bushels of grain; besides a free dwelling, garden, feed for one cow, and fuel, per annum. School to commence at said Christopher Krauss' house on May 22, 1765."

On Dec. 12, 1768, there was another agreement made with Charles Guss to teach a second term of four years at the same place. The salary was the same, except instead of eight bushels of grain twelve bushels were delivered. The Latin and Greek languages were taught, besides the usual branches.

School was also taught in the home of George Yeakel. A special building was erected on his premises in 1790 and used until 1840. The teachers were:

Charles Guss, 1765-69; 1769-73; Jost Vollert, 1777-78; George Kriebel, 1780-83; 1786; George Martin, 1781; G. Carl Stock; Christopher Yeakel; John Schultz; Isaac Schultz; John Krauss.

A school-house was situated on Chestnut Hill where the Union Church stood, and controlled by the Reformed congregation. It was erected at an early period and carried on for a number of years. A new building was put up in 1820, out of the materials of the old church, and the school was continued for 30 years. The teachers were Philip Mumbauer, John Oberholtzer, Elias Schaffer and others.

The Weber building was in the northeast section of Lower Milford. In 1844 it was more than 50 years old; the last school was taught there by Willoughby Artman.

The Mennonite school was maintained in the church near Zionsville. It was started before 1740 and carried on for many years. It had discontinued before 1844.

The Bergenstock school was on the premises of John Bergenstock in Lower Milford. It was supported from the time of the Revolution to 1844. The last teacher was Henry B. Schleifer.

The Berg (Hill) school was situated on the premises of St. Peter's church. It was a small stone building, having been erected after 1805. Several of the teachers were Andreas Lap, Jacob Oberholtzer, ——— Bast, and George Gehman.

The Dillinger School was a "Gemein-Schule" on the premises of the old Upper Milford Lutheran Church, held in the log building every Winter from 1735 to 1791, conjointly with the congregation, but when that was discontinued, the building was used exclusively for school purposes until 1799; then a stone building was erected in its place, combined with a dwelling-house, and this was used until 1845, when a third was put up. In 1845 the township accepted the common school system, and until that year the teacher was partly paid by the rent from the dwelling-house and partly by the parents whose children attended the school. In 1867 a society was incorporated under the name of "Union School and Church Association." In 1870 this society was authorized by the legislature to sell the real property, and in 1871, they sold 27 A. 97 Ps., to John V. R. Bitting for $4,050, reserving 2 acres for the school and graveyard. The money was put at interest, and the income appropriated for school purposes. The Act of 1870 provided that not less than $100 should be expended besides the regular tax, and the district should cover an area within a radius of one mile from the schoolhouse. It has been maintained until now. Some of the known teachers before 1844 were John J. Loeser, John F. Viger, John B. Goetz, John Golconci, Jacob Oberholtzer, Philip Mumbauer, and Samuel Kriebel; from 1844 to 1867, some of those recalled were Joshua Stahler, Aaron Schantz, David Oberholtzer, Charles F. Schantz, and William Eberhard. Since 1867, some of the earlier ones were E. S. Bitting, Benneville X. Schell, Milton H. Hill, Henry Schiffert, and John N. Bitting. This is the oldest place used for educational purposes in the county, and covers a continuous period of nearly 180 years. The "Summer School" is controlled by a board of three trustees who are chosen by the members of the association on the first Saturday of March, one each year for a term of three years.

Common Schools.—The common-school law of Pennsylvania, passed in 1834, was accepted by the majority of the voters of the township at the annual township election, March 17, 1843. One year afterward, the first school board of six directors was elected: William Hittel and Daniel Stahler, for one year; Willoughby Gabel and Saul Wieder, for two years; David Kern and Anthony Krauss, for three years. They met on April 3, 1844, at the public house of Henry Dillinger, in Dillingersville, to organize, and the following officers were chosen: Willoughby Gabel, president; William Hittel, secretary; Anthony Krauss, treasurer. The first school tax levied was $426.60.

During the Summer of 1844, the directors and trustees of the respective school districts made contracts for the use of the several school houses for one term. They decided to establish five new sub-districts, to build four new school-houses, and to establish one school in the home of Daniel Schantz.

Thirteen old sub-districts were accepted from their respective trustees, and agreements were made for four new schoolhouses; at Miller's mill for $228; at Henry Koch's for $236; at George Klein's for $162.25; and at George Carl's for $181. Eighteen schools were recognized in the township for the first year and teachers were employed for 4½ months of 24 days, at an average salary of $16.08 per month; and the schools were to be opened on the first Monday of November.

The first report for the year ending the first Monday in June, 1845, was as follows:

Whole number of schools,	18
Average number of months taught,	4½
Number of male teachers (no females), ..	18
Number of male scholars,	584
Number of female scholars,	383
Number learning German,	407
Average no. of scholars in each school,	53¾
Average salaries per month,	$16 08
Cost of teaching each scholar per month,	$0 33½
Amount of tax levied,	$429 66
Received from State appropriation,	$6857 26
Received from the collection of school tax,	$403 76
Cost of instruction,	1,391 75
Cost of fuel and contingencies,	334 18½
Cost of school-house,	1,059 52

Rent was paid for schoolhouses as follows:

M. H. Albright, for school-room,	$10 00
John Dubs, for Swamp church school-house, ..	12 50
Samuel Stauffer, for Krauss' school-house, ..	15 00
David Kern, for Kern's school-house,	10 00

$47 50

During the Summer of 1845, four new sub-school-districts were established and five new schoolhouses erected.

On Dec. 6, 1852, the district was separated into Upper and Lower Milford, a line being run through the middle of the district from northeast to southwest, and each of the divisions contained nine sub-districts.

From 1844 to 1853, the township as a school district received annual appropriations from the state amounting to $10,009.50.

DIVISION OF TOWNSHIP.—On Dec. 6, 1852, this township was divided by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county, by a line run through the middle of the township from northeast to southwest. The upper or northwestern part was called Upper Milford, and the lower or southeastern part, Penn; but the name Penn was afterward changed to Lower Milford.

The first election in Upper Milford (as newly created) was held at the public house of George Neitz, in Zionsville, on March 18, 1853, when the following officers were elected: Justice of the Peace, Samuel Kemmerer; Constable, George Schantzenbach; Supervisors, Charles E. Roeder, Lazarus Weidner; Assessor, George Bachman.

The first election in Lower Milford was held at the public house of Solomon Kemmerer, on March 18, 1853, when the following township officers were elected: Justice of the Peace, Samuel Stauffer; Constable, George K. Carl; Supervisors, Jacob Schantz, Samuel Derr; School Directors, Aaron Dubs, William C. Roeder, Daniel S. Yeakel, Abraham Pearson, Samuel Stauffer, Samuel Hottel; Auditors, Charles F. Dickenshied, Ephraim Christ, William F. Cramer.

The following historical details relate more particularly to the upper sub-division of the original township of Lehigh county, as it has been recognized since 1853 under the name of UPPER MILFORD; and similar historical details will appear in a subsequent chapter which relates more particularly to the lower division, as it has been recognized since 1853 under the name of LOWER MILFORD.

VILLAGES.—The township includes the following villages:

Zionsville.	Shimersville.
Zionsville Station.	Vera Cruz.
Powder Valley.

Zionsville.—The land here was taken up by Christian Crall and Philip Herzog. In 1734 Crall first secured 25 acres in the upper portion of the place and about 1740 Herzog 102 acres in the lower portion; and they erected dwellings in their respective localities. The Lutheran church was built on a part of the Crall land, and the Reformed church on a part of Herzog's. In 1789, Crall's land was owned by Christopher and William Mohr; and Herzog's by Wendell Wieand.

Of the Crall land, Peter Hittel in 1757 donated one acre to the Lutheran congregation and in 1758 the first church was built of logs. Reformed church was built of logs, 50 perches to the south, in 1753.

Philip Hittel put up the first general store in 1810, and the first hotel in 1830, and he carried on the business for a number of years.

The store was re-built by C. W. Wieand in 1848, and carried on subsequently by numerous merchants, the last Albert H. Sterner, since 1906.

Peter Miller started a hardware store in 1871, and carried on the business until 1876; his son, L. H. Miller, was associated with him from 1876 to 1896; his two sons, L. H. and M. J. Miller carried it on from 1896 to 1907; and his son, M. J., since 1907.

The hotel had many different landlords until 1879, then James J. Gackenbach took possession and conducted the stand in a successful manner for upwards of twenty years. He was succeeded by different parties for short periods, the last being Martin L. Haller since 1913.

The Zionsville school was built previous to the year 1760 as a union "Gemein Schule" (church school), near the Lutheran church, and continued as such until 1841 when a new two-story building was erected by subscription. In 1844 it was offered by the trustees (Jacob Hillegas, John Wieder, and Jacob Schneider) to the township directors who accepted it. Jacob F. Keil was employed as the teacher and he reported the whole number of scholars to be 63, 40 male and 23 female, of whom 23 studied German. In 1874 the school board purchased from Charles W. Wieand half an acre of ground for $100 and erected there a large stone school-house with a steeple, at a cost of over $1,200. The old building was then sold by the trustees of the churches at public sale to the highest bidder, and within thirty days it was removed. The names of the teachers who taught school here from 1844 for 40 years, were:

Thomas L. Worthington.	J. R. Diller.
ton.	Sallie Wieand.
Aaron S. Wagner.	E. Strunk.
Adam Snyder.	Laurentius Weaver.
Silas Christman.	J. W. Stauffer.
John G. Glace.	George W. Bassler.
Thomas R. Lynch.	George W. Roeder.
Charles W. Wieand.	Leon Snyder.
M. W. Stauffer.	J. D. S. Kneller.
W. B. K. Johnson.

In the subscription schoolhouse, the first Sunday school was organized in 1842, which was named "Zion's." It was conducted in this building until 1858; then the members of the two churches (three congregations) went to the Sunday-school in the basement of the Reformed church by which time the feeling against Sunday schools as an institution for the religious, as well as the moral, training of children had subsided. The Lutheran members withdrew amicably in 1877, to occupy their own basement room in their new church of 1876.

Post Office.—In 1849, a post office was established here by the name of Zionsville, and the store-keeper, C. W. Wieand was the first postmaster. Since that time, the village has been known by this name. It was removed in 1854 to Shimersville on account of the great inconvenience in changing the mails from the stages late in the night; and its name was then changed to Shimersville. In 1886 an office was established here a second time and named "Old Zionsville," which has been continued until now. The names of the postmasters, with time of service are:

Leon L. Snyder, 1886-'89.
O. D. Reese, 1889-'93; 1897-1900.
L. H. Miller, 1893-'97; 1906.
R. E. Reese, 1900-'05.
M. J. Miller, 1906-'14.

Brick-making.—About 1850, Charles W. Wieand embarked in the business of manufacturing building bricks. He established a yard and kiln on a lot of ground a short distance to the south of the Reformed church and made many thousands of bricks. Most of the brick buildings in Old Zionsville were built of his bricks; also the Reformed church of 1858. In 1871, he sold the plant to Henry Roth, who carried on the business about ten years; and he furnished the brick for the Lutheran church of 1876. It was in operation during this time, excepting from 1860 to 1871.

In 1869, Anthony Mechling erected a fine, large two-story brick dwelling-house on the King's Highway, opposite the hotel. The bricks were made on his premises, to the rear of the building.

Iron-Ore Mines.—Eastward of the hotel, on the properties of James J. Gackenbach, Charles Schoenly and Jonas Kern, mining operations were carried on by the Crane Iron Company, from 1880 for a number of years, and many thousands of tons of ore were removed. Several shafts were sunk to reach the beds of ore, the deepest having been 235 feet.

To the westward, on the property of Anthony Mechling, operations for iron-ore had started ten years earlier, and shafts were also sunk to reach the ore to the depth of a hundred feet.

Marble Works.—Charles W. Wieand was engaged in preparing marble grave-stones for some years previous to 1860. He was followed by Wm. H. Kuhns who continued the business until 1911; since then Kuhns's son, Allen W., has carried on the place. Mr. Kuhns also filled the position of organist in each of the two churches for 25 years, supplying the church music for this community for 50 years.

Benneville R. Dellicker also embarked in the marble business in 1900, and has since carried it on in connection with undertaking.

Nathan Gehry followed undertaking here for about 30 years from 1850 to 1880, when he died.

Carriage Works.—About 1860 a coach-maker shop was started by David Trexler, and he carried on the business until 1865; J. D. G. Knelner from 1865 to 1868; and Joseph Yeakel from 1868 to 1885.

Saddlery.—James F. Smith was engaged in the saddlery business from 1859 to 1898; then his son, Edwin F., became associated with him and since then they have conducted it in partnership.

Shirt Factory.—In 1861, Peter Schuler erected a small two-story frame shop for carriage-works, and it was so occupied until about 1885. Afterward Eisenlohr Brothers carried on there for upward of ten years a tobacco stripping factory. Since October, 1912, Butz Brothers, from Alburtis, have operated a factory for making plain muslin shirts, and employed from 18 to 30 hands.

Beneficial Societies.—The I. O. of O. F. Lodge No. 1077, was instituted in 1894, membership, 86; and the P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 244 in 1883, membership, 81.

Physicians.—Dr. Edwin Bingaman practiced as a physician in the village for 16 years from 1895; then removed to Hyde Park near Reading. The earliest practitioner for upwards of 20 years was Dr. Charles H. Appel, who built the first physician's home at Zionsville about 1872. He was followed by Dr. I. I. Kalbach, who was here for three years.

King's Highway.—The King's Highway was extended through this section of territory in 1735 from North Wales by way of Hosensack valley, Zion's Hill and Macungie to Breinigsville. Milestones were planted along the northerly side in 1776, and many of the older residents still point out the spots to the eastward and westward of the village where they stood a mile apart. Only two remain as quiet but expressive witnesses of the early post-riders and the later mail stages

"in ye olden times," one at Hosensack and the other at Shimersville.

Status in 1913.—The status of the village in November, 1913, was as follows: Two churches, two stores, post office; hotel; shirt factory; two marble yards; schoolhouse; population, 180; dwellings, 44.

Zionsville Station was established in 1876 on the Perkiomen railroad, where it crossed the old "King's Highway," from Philadelphia by way of Hosensack and Zionsville to Macungie and Weissenberg to the settlement along the Blue Mountains. The same year Abraham Geisinger erected a large three-story brick building for a hotel and store; and dwelling-houses were erected by Rev. Uriah Schelly, Elias Rosenberger, Philip Miller, Solomon Hallman, Joseph Schultz,

A blacksmith shop was started in the village in 1878. It has been actively carried on since 1900, and by William H. Huber from 1911.

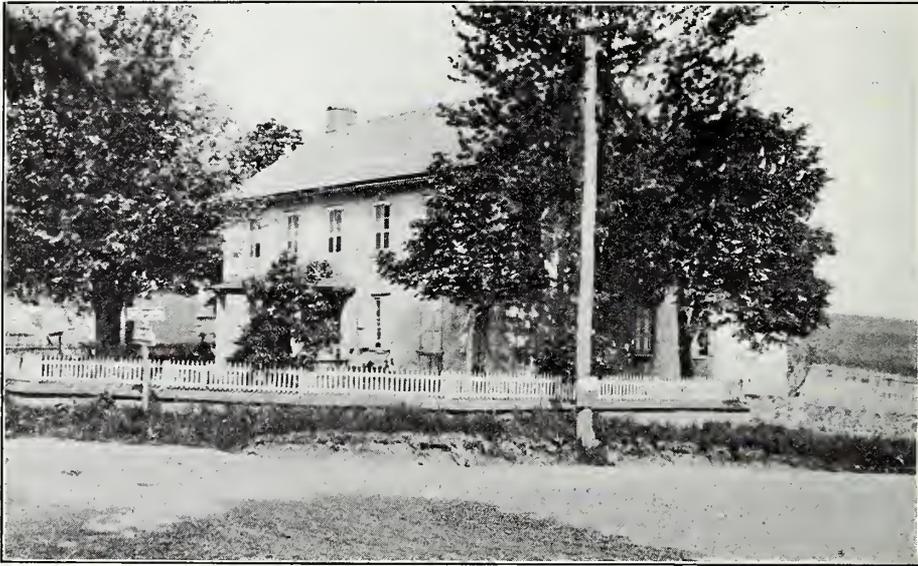

A coal yard was started in 1883 by O. S. Heil and after carrying it on for a short time transferred it to Wm. W. Kuhns, (son of the railroad station agent), who has conducted the business until now.

N. A. Stahl located here in 1908 for the purpose of dealing in and supplying all kinds of farming implements, carriages and wagons, and he has since then carried on the business.

There is a picturesque horse shoe bend in the track of the railroad starting at this station, and extending to the south-eastward.

In 1913 the village included 17 dwellings.

Taxidermist.—Henry B. Schantz was born

HOMESTEAD OF JOHN SHIMER, SHIMERSVILLE. SITUATED ON THE "KING'S HIGHWAY."

and Alfred Romig; and afterward by William M. Gehman, Samuel Schubert, Abraham Geisinger and George Miller.

The hotel and store were conducted together from 1876 to 1883 by William M. Gehman (1876-79), C. Czarlinsky (1879-81), and O. F. Haas (1881-83). Since then they have been carried on separately; the hotel by James F. Rauch since 1909, and the store by Richard E. Reese and John Geisinger since 1910.

A postoffice was established here in 1878 by the name of Zionsville, with William M. Gehman as postmaster, who served the office till 1882. The successors have been: Abraham Z. Schelly (1882-), Manoh Geisinger, Charles Hammond, R. E. Reese.

in 1847 in Lower Milford, near Hosensack, on a farm and there he was brought up to farming. He showed an early inclination to hunting in the township near by and to mounting the specimens of birds and small animals which he shot. He started in 1875 to study the art of taxidermy and since then has successfully mounted many hundreds of local specimens for persons from different parts of this section of the county as well as for himself. His collection comprises 150. His residence has been at Zionsville Station on Perkiomen railroad since 1904.

Powder-Valley is a small village of ten dwellings and a general store in the valley of Indian Creek which took the name from the powder-mills erected at that point. The first mill was started in 1829 by Henry Kemmerer. After carrying it on for a year, he sold it to Henry Trump and Henry Schell and they continued the business for a year when it was destroyed by an explosion. Shortly afterward, Kemmerer put up another mill nearby and this was carried on by him for several years when it also was exploded, killing two negroes and a German named Lewis Reiber.

During this time Kemmerer was engaged in the store business, and after the second explosion he sold the premises to Christopher Schubert, who then discontinued the store and the building was converted into a dwelling and has since been so occupied. He then erected in the place of the powder-mill a wool-carding mill and casinet factory. He carried on this enterprise several years. Solomon Moyer became the owner in 1852 and he conducted this industry for seventeen years when he sold the property to Tilghman Stahl and a year afterward his cousin, Nathan Stahl, became a partner. They discontinued the woolen-mill business and erected a stove-mill which they carried on two years; then Nathan Stahl bought his partner's interest and built a new saw-mill including a steam-engine for power and he conducted the business until December, 1882, when the plant was destroyed by fire.

In 1883, Nathan Stahl erected a grist- and saw-mill and carried on the business for three years; then he sold the property to Tilghman Stahl and Daniel Yeakel. Besides conducting the mills they established an ice plant there. In 1900 they sold the premises to Amandus Miller and he has operated the grist-and saw-mill until now.

About 1886 Daniel Yeakel started his son, Harrison, in the store business, in a new building. The son carried it on until 1890, when it was sold to Amandus Miller, his brother-in-law, who conducted the store with the mill till 1907, when he sold it to Solomon Sterner, and he was followed by D. N. Berkey, the present occupant.

A pottery was started by Charles Stahl in 1878 and carried on by him for twenty years.

During the ownership of Solomon Moyer he carried on various enterprises, such as weaving fancy woolen blankets, bending fellos for the rims of wheels, boiled molasses, etc., he having been a man with an inventive mind.

A postoffice was established here Oct. 19, 1889.

Shimersville is situated in Upper Milford, two miles south-east of Macungie, along the King's Highway, in an elevation which commands an extended view of the East Penn Valley to the north and northwest, reaching to Allentown and Fogelsville. Dirck Jansen took up 350 acres of land here in 1734; afterward he sold part of it to Jacob Miller who was mentioned as an inn-keeper as early as 1774 and conducted a public place for upwards of twenty years. John Shimer purchased the property about 1792 and resided here for upwards of thirty-five years. He served the office of Justice of the Peace from 1795 to 1805; he also conducted the hotel for a time. The village was named after him. He sold the hotel and farm to his son, Charles B., in 1828, who owned the property until 1865, having been landlord from 1828 to 1835. Several parties succeeded, then George Beck carried on the business from 1845 to 1855. Charles S. Shimer, son of Charles B., was the owner and landlord from 1865 for several years, when he sold the property to Jacob Riegel, his brother-in-law. For the next forty-five years numerous parties had possession of the place. Edward Gehring was the last proprietor for some years, and James Brophy became the occupant in November, 1913.

The store business was started here in 1839 by Joshua and Reuben Stahler, and carried on by them for five years. Numerous parties were the store-keepers in the next forty years; then Llewellyn S. Shimer for about twenty years, and he was succeeded by Henry S. Kern.

A postoffice was established here in 1854, with Reuben Stahler as the first post-master, who served two years; Charles B. Shimer, from 1855 to 1867; Dr. Albert M. Sigmund, from 1867 to 1875; John L. Schreiber from 1875 to 1885; since then by the store-keepers.

Rich beds of iron ore, emery and corundum were found in the vicinity of Shimersville, which were worked for a time in a limited way but without success.

In November, 1913, the place contained a store, hotel, chapel, 15 dwellings and 60 inhabitants.

A small frame factory for the manufacture of pantaloons was started here by certain property holders to give employment to people in the village and vicinity, but the hands could not be secured and the enterprise had to be abandoned. In 1909 the Seventh Day Adventists organized a congregation in the building with Rev. George Unger as the pastor, and services have since been held every Saturday, including Sunday school. The building is rented by the trustees for the owners.

Wm. H. Huff started a blacksmith shop in 1884 and he has since carried on the business.

Ancient Milestone.—A large milestone, made of granite (24 inches high, 18 inches wide, and 6 inches thick) was planted by the government on the east side of the "King's Highway," from Philadelphia by way of Zion's Church and Macungie to the early settlers of Weissenberg, at the barn of Jacob Miller (afterward John Shimer) about the time of the Revolution, to indicate the distance from that point to Philadelphia. The distance to the Goschenhoppen Pike was added afterward when a turnpike was constructed from the western terminus of that pike to Macungie by way of Shimersville. The inscription is plain and this surviving monument of early travel through this country is in a good state of preservation.

Kern Gunsmith Shop.—Daniel N. Kern, after learning the trade of gunsmith from an expert mechanic, David Fischer, started a shop of his own in 1867 on his father's farm near Shimersville on the road to Vera Cruz, and carried on the business for 25 years. He made all the parts of the guns and rifles, purchasing the barrels and stocks in a rough, unfinished state. He also repaired watches, clocks and sewing machines.

Kern Carp Ponds.—A short distance northeast of Shimersville on the road to Vera Cruz, opposite the local schoolhouse, Daniel N. Kern embarked in the business of raising German carp on April 9, 1881. He first constructed a pond covering one-fourth of an acre and secured nine small carp from the State-hatchery at Marietta. From this small beginning he developed a second pond of three-fourths of an acre, and the supply on hand grew to 10,000, some weighing upwards of fifteen pounds, even reaching eighteen pounds. Small fish an inch long he sold for ten cents a piece, but large ones for $1. He filled orders from all parts of the United States and came to be recognized as an authority on the subject, having prepared many articles relating to the character and development of this special fish for newspapers at Allentown, New York, and Chicago.

While so engaged he also directed his attention to bees, poultry and fruit.

After pursuing the business for sixteen years, he sold the ponds and farm of 50 acres to Jordan Brothers of Coopersburg, and removed to Allentown.

Vera Cruz is a village at a prominent cross-roads in Upper Milford, a mile southwest from the station on the Perkiomen railroad. In November, 1913, it contained a population of 160, general store, hotel, church, silk-mill, two smith-shops and creamery.

The land was taken up in 1738 by John Baumgärtner; and Christian Fischer secured a part of it on which he started a store business before 1763. Since 1877 it has been carried on by two merchants: Francis Schwartz 1877 to 1885, and Amandus R. Schuler from 1885 to the present time.

John Fischer, son of Christian, secured a tavern license in 1786 and conducted the stand until 1816. Numerous parties had the place from that time to 1911; then Uriah Schuler conducted it for two years; and Harvey Keinert since April, 1913.

The village was named in 1851 by Alexander Weaver, then the store-keeper.

A postoffice was established here Feb. 8, 1861, with Charles Bernhard as the first postmaster.

A creamery was started in 1880 by David Schuler and afterward carried on by his son, William. The Schuler Brothers operated it for a number of years until 1910; since then by Amandus R. Schuler.

A silk-mill was put up in 1909 by a corporation which was organized by A. R. Schuler, Dr. A. H. Trumbauer, Philip Ritter and others, and has since been operated in the manufacture of broad silk, employing 40 hands. A dam was built to the east half a mile about that time to supply water and ice.

Henry Mohr established a smith shop in 1840 which he carried on till 1874. He was succeeded by his son, Edwin, who has since followed the business. It was started for making cutlery, but was soon directed to making and sharpening mill-picks with a trade extended throughout Lehigh county and all the adjoining counties.

Lewis Ritter carried on a black-smith from 1900 to 1911; he was followed by Wm. Kerchner.

Frederick Jordan manufactured carriage bodies from 1900 to 1913.

Two beneficial societies are maintained in the village which meet in the hall above the Schuler store: Knights of the Golden Eagle, and Knights of Pythias.

Dr. A. H. Trumbauer was the first physician here and conducted a successful practice from 1885 to 1911; Dr. H. A. Klingaman since 1911.

A two-arch stone county-bridge spans the creek at the village, which was erected here many years ago. It was repaired in 1913.

Aged people in the village in 1913, were Anna Mohr (96), Charles Ortt (92), Anna Ortt and Susan Ortt (over 80), Moses Ortt (over 75).

The Vera Cruz station on the Perkiomen railroad is situated one mile east of the village. Charles Horlacher started a coal, grain and feed business there in 1876 and carried it on four years. He was followed by Daniel M. Klein for 24 years until 1909; and since then by Klein's son, Edwin.

INDUSTRIES.—The following industries have been carried on in Upper Milford township, mostly grist- and saw-mills. The Hampton Furnace (generally called Sigmund) was a prominent enterprise and important centre for nearly sixty years, especially during the Civil War.

Frey Grist-Mill is in Upper Milford between Vera Cruz and Emaus, on the King's Highway, about a mile north of Vera Cruz. The land was first settled by Philip Thani in 1747, and Jacob Hahn, a miller, became the purchaser in 1758, who erected a grist-mill and saw-mill about 1770 and carried them on upwards of 20 years. Jacob Dilgert was the owner 10 years and Henry Seibert 23 years, until his death. John Gross, a subsequent owner, erected a new stone-mill there and carried it on six years; William Schantz followed him for upwards of 30 years until his death in 1880, when his son-in-law, Wm. G. Moyer, succeeded him, rebuilt the mill, and in 1883 sold it to Jesse Stauffer, who then carried on the business for a number of years. In 1909, E. B. Frey and Robert Newhard purchased the property. They carried it on for a year, then Frey became the sole owner and he has had it since.

Miller Grist-Mill was in Upper Milford along the Miller creek on the road from the "King's Highway" to Macungie, about 1½ miles north from Shimersville. It was erected before 1800 by John Wetzel and operated by him and his family for thirty years; then by Joseph Beitler for five years. George Miller became the owner and ran it for thirty years until his decease, when it was abandoned for a time. It was revived about 1880, and Charles Seislove has operated it since 1895, as a chopping mill, and for cider in season.

Shelly Saw-Mill was situated near the Frey grist-mill, erected some time earlier, and operated by Jacob Dilgert, ——— Fink, and John Leibert. After Leibert's death it was separated from the grist-mill. In 1834 Daniel Lauer became the owner, and after running it ten years, he sold it to John Ortt. In 1865 Willoughby Mohr erected a larger mill in its place and in 1867 sold it to Henry Shelly who has operated it until now. For a time, about 1840, Lauer introduced a wool-carding business, which was carried on about ten years.

Schultz Spoke-Mill was formerly an oil mill, built by Henry Trump, about 1830. It was operated by him for 18 years, and his son, William, for 8 years, when it was sold to Michael Miller and discontinued. Miller then established a grist-mill and stave factory, which was run by him and his son, Elmer, until 1866. Samuel Miller purchased the property, converted it into a spoke-mill and conducted the business for a time. He was followed by Augustus Schultz and Orville Miller until 1904 when Robert G. Schultz became the owner and he has since run the plant in manufacturing spokes, handles, shingles and potato crates, and sawing lumber. He has also operated a cider-press in the Fall of each year, and produced from 500 to 1,000 barrels. It is situated along the Powder Valley creek, a short distance west of the Hosensack valley.

Yeakel Grist-Mill is in Upper Milford on Indian creek, a short distance above the Schultz spoke-mill. It was built by Christian Metzger as an oil mill before 1790. He operated it until 1810 when he rebuilt it and changed it to a grist-mill. In 1816 Abraham Yeakel became the owner and he carried it on till 1824 when it was destroyed by fire. He rebuilt it immediately, then conducted it until his death in 1865. His son, Levi, purchased the property, and carried on the business for upwards of twenty years. Subsequent owners until 1912 were: Levi G. Yeakel, Nathaniel Rothenberger and Harvey Gery; then a Mr. Cassell, of Philadelphia purchased it, who is converting it into a factory for the manufacture of wooden shoe soles.

Wieand Grist-Mill, with saw-mill attached, is situated in Upper Milford on the Perkiomen creek, near the Sigmund Furnace property. It was built by Christian Mensch before 1800 and carried on by him for about 40 years, after which Andrew Yeakel, Benjamin Kriebel, Owen Weaver, John B. Gehman and C. W. Wieand owned it successively until 1885. Hiram Yeakel was the next owner for some years; then his son, Daniel, who has carried on the place until the present time.

Heimbach Oil-Mill was situated on a branch of the Perkiomen creek, half a mile east of the Sigmund Furnace, on the road from the furnace to Harlem. It was built by Wendell Heimbach about 1815 and operated by him for several years when he changed it to a clover-mill, and as such it was carried on until about 1840, then discontinued.

Boody Grist-Mill is in Upper Milford on Indian creek, on the road from the turnpike to Sieszholtzville, a mile southwest from old Zionsville. It was built by Adam Koehl in 1774, and he added a saw-mill. After carrying it on 15 years he sold the property to his son, Simon. A number of subsequent parties ran it until 1815, after which Frederick Nehs carried on the business for 30 years. Henry Burger and Samuel Beck became the purchasers in 1845 and they ran it for 40 years. In 1864 they erected a large stone mill in the place of the old mill and discontinued the saw-mill. Burger purchased Beck's interest in the property and with his son, Samuel, carried it on till his death, and the son continued the business until his death about 1908, when the plant was sold to George M. Boody of New Jersey, who has operated it until now.

Moyer Grist-Mill is situated on the Perkiomen creek along the turnpike from Treichlersville to Shimersville, in Upper Milford, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles southwest from Old Zionsville. It was first erected by Andrew Yeakel for an oil mill and he afterward changed it to a clover mill. He kept it in operation several years and in 1840 sold it to Daniel Wieand. Subsequently David Schneider bought the property and changed it to a grist-mill. About 1886, Franklin Moyer became the owner and he has carried it on until now, for chopping feed.

Bitting Saw-Mill was in Upper Milford on Indian creek, along the road from Shimersville to Sieszholtzville, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of the former place. It was put up before 1820 by Jesse Bitting and run by him for a number of years when it was abandoned.

Sigmund Furnace was situated in Upper Milford township, near the county line, along the head-waters of the Perkiomen creek, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Old Zionsville. It was erected in 1809 for the manufacture of charcoal iron by David Heimbach, and Wisselman and Covely, and the plant was named Hampton Furnace. Soon afterward Heimbach became the sole owner and he operated it for 23 years, when he sold it, including 90 acres of land, to John V. R. Hunter, of Allentown. Hunter carried on the business for two years, then sold the plant to Daniel V. R. Hunter, of Oley, in Berks county, who conducted it for six years. Several different parties then carried it on until 1850, when it was sold by the sheriff, and Frederick Sigmund, of Upper Milford, became the purchaser. Sigmund improved the furnace, bought additional land and operated it until his decease in 1860, when his two sons, Henry M. and Dr. Alfred M., succeeded him in its ownership. They carried on the business for five years when the doctor sold his interest to his brother, Henry, who continued it three years longer, then suspended further operations. And so the career of an important industry in that section of the county was terminated after having been in operation for sixty years. Since 1850 it was known as "Sigmund Furnace."

The coldest weather at the Furnace was reported on Dec. 8, 1866, when the thermometer fell to 13 degrees below zero.

In 1872 a postoffice by the name of Sigmund was established in the store of F. N. Gery on the road from the furnace to Perryville (Harlem) in Berks county. Peter Faust was the postmaster for many years. He was succeeded by Jesse Moyer, ——— Geschwind, and Ambrose Kemmerer, the last-named from 1895 until it was discontinued in 1909. The store is still carried on by Mr. Kemmerer.

Powder-Mill.—In 1870, Peter Faust purchased the property and in the furnace building erected a powder-mill. He carried it on four years when it was set on fire and exploded by a stroke of lightning during a storm. James Watson, an employee, was killed.

Faust Creamery.—A creamery was erected near the furnace in 1900 by Peter Faust, Jr., and it has been conducted by him since that time. A stocking factory is carried on in the second story.

Stahler Machine-Shop.—In 1837, Anthony Stahler established a machine-shop on the road from Shimersville to Very Cruz, half a mile northeast of Shimersville, for the manufacture and repair of threshing machines, and also for the sale and repair of farming implements. He conducted a successful business until his decease in 1860. His son continued until he effected a sale of the plant to George Moyer in 1862; then Moyer carried it on until 1910, when it was discontinued.

Coach-Factory, in Upper Milford, on the King's Highway, one mile west of Shimersville, was started by Jonas George in 1845 and carried on by him for six years; then Charles Guth became his successor and it has been operated by him and afterward by his son, William, until the present time, though for some years past in a comparatively small way making repairs.

David Landis, married to a daughter of Charles Guth, has carried on a saddlery business nearby for many years.

Brensinger Store.—In 1901, William Brensinger started a small general store on his premises, next to the dwelling, in Upper Milford, on the road from Shimersville to Seiszholtzville, two miles southwest of Shimersville, and he has since conducted a successful business.

Seider's Tavern was situated on the "Philadelphia Road" near the line between Upper Milford and Macungie township a mile west of Emaus where it was erected in 1785 by George Seider. He carried it on twenty-five years, then the business was discontinued.

Fischer's Tavern was situated on the "King's Highway" between Shimersville and Macungie on land taken up by John Wetzel which he sold to John Fischer about 1795. Fischer then erected a tavern and carried it on for twenty-five years. Jacob Fischer purchased it in 1820 and conducted it five years, when Charles Foster became the owner and he continued the business for over thirty years until the East Penn. R. R. was established and this caused its abandonment.

POSTOFFICES.—The following post-offices were established in Upper Milford:

Zionsville, 1849; transferred in 1853, to Shimersville, and name changed in 1854.

Vera Cruz, Feb. 8, 1861.

Zionsville (Station), Oct. 18, 1877.

Sigmund, May 24, 1881; discontinued March 15, 1908.

ELECTION POLLS.—The polling-places of the township since its erection in 1853, have been as follows:

At Old Zionsville hotel from 1853 to 1892 for the entire district.

At Cornwall hotel (Emaus), Vera Cruz hotel, and Old Zionsville hotel, from 1893 to 1907.

At Vera Cruz hotel and Old Zionsville hotel from 1908 to 1914.

CHURCHES.—The following churches and congregations were established in the township, and their history embraces a period covering nearly two hundred years, which evidences the Zionsville Reformed Church Old Zionsville, Pa.

Old Zionsville, Jan. 28, 1886.

Powder Valley, Oct. 19, 1889.

Dillinger (Station), Dec. 28, 1889; discontinued Apr. 4, 1904.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following officials served in this township since its erection in 1853:

Samuel Kemmerer,	Reuben Stahler,
1853-'68.		1853-'70
Samuel C. Lee, 1868-'76.	W. H. Hillegass,
Phaon C. Weaver,		1870-'74
1876-'86	Leon S. Snyder,
Francis Schwartz,		1874-'79
1886-'89	J. D. G. Kneller,
Lewis S. Roeder,		1879-'99; 1904-'15
1889-1904.	N. N. Benfield,
S. K. Fetterman,		1899-1904
1904-'15

great devotion of the first settlers and their numerous descendants to religious principles and convictions:

Zionsville Reformed.

Zionsville Mennonite.	Mennonite Brethren.
St. Peter's Union.	Evangelical Association.
Salem Lutheran.	United Evangelical.
Zionsville Mennonite.	United Brethren.

Zionsville Reformed Church is situated in the village of old Zionsville at the angle of the King's Highway where a road was extended southwardly to Hereford, in Berks county. Its founder was Philip Herzog who had emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1738, and soon afterward settled here, taking up 102 acres of land, and it was on the eastern corner of this tract that the first church was built of logs, sometime previous to 1750. It was only 16 by 20 feet in dimensions, with earth floor, and stood fifty rods northeast of the present edifice. The old, adjoining grave-yard, 40 feet square, is still visible, with several grave stones whose inscriptions are not legible.

The following names of parents and sponsors, taken from the baptismal record of the church, started in 1757, constituted the first members of this congregation:

Philip Herzog,	John Reisz.
Nicolaus Stahler.	Peter Lang.
John Stahler.	Christian Fischer.
Alexander Diefenderfer.	Philip Becker.
Frederich Kern.	Peter Linn.
Rudolph Weiss.	Peter Funck.
Jacob Funck.	Joh. Koch.
Philip Tyel.	Jacob Berger.
Stoffel Andreas.	George Bater.
Joh. Henry Rudolph.	Conrad Wolf.
George Stahl.	Michael Schmeier.
Casimir Grunmeyer.	Stoffel Schmidt.
Daniel Dubs.	Gorg Knabenberger.
Johannes Miller.	Jacob Holtzhauser.
Jacob Christman.	Gottfried Diefendahler.
Nicolaus Bieber.	Henry Kemmerer.
Joh. Armbruster.	Hartman Leubenguth.
Joh. Olewein.	Adam Schuler.
Joh. George Christman.	Joh. Bernhard Vogeli.
Joh. Marburger.	Conrad Nusz.
Christian Metzger.	George Suszholtz.
Joh. George Christman.	Philip Wetzel.
Joh. Lerch.	Melchoir Baer.
Nicolaus Larosch.	Wendel Wieand.
Michael Stocker.	Joh. Hilligass.
Jacob Federolf.	David Staudt.
Valentine Fleck.	Peter Lahr.
Adam Reinhard.	Peter Drescher.
Joh. Rothenburger.	Philip Walter.
Johannes Ortt.	Henry Erhard.
Ulroch Kulbe.	Andreas Graber.
Adam Diehl.	Conrad Klein.
David Strausz.	Jacob Gehry.
Joh. Adam Zieszly.

The old log building was used until 1789. Then Wendell Wieand sold a small tract of 1 A., 23 Ps., along the southerly side of the King's Highway to Christopher Mohr as trustee for the use of the congregation, and here a one-story stone building was erected to take the place of the first church. It stood in the cemetery about 100 feet southeast of the present edifice.

The third church was built of brick in the year 1858, near the corner of the King's Highway and the turnpike. Its dimensions were 42 by 60 feet.

In 1909 the present superior, commodious and very attractive granite edifice was erected on the site of the brick church, in dimensions 65 by 100 feet, at a cost of $30,000; and it is recognized as one of the finest churches in Lehigh county. The interior arrangement is complete. The seating capacity of the auditorium is 500; and of the adjoining Sunday school-room is the same; but the two rooms can be changed into a single auditorium by raising (not rolling) a large asbestos curtain. The pulpit platform is so built that the pastor (or speaker) can take a position at the easterly end and be seen and heard from all points in the double auditorium. This is exceptional.

The interior decorations and appurtenances are worthy of special mention. A large Baker and Culley, Philadelphia, organ was placed in the westerly end at a cost of $2,500, which was paid as follows: Congregation, $1,200; parents of Ellwood Roeder, (the organist at that time), $300; and gift of Andrew Carnegie, $1,000. The children of Rev. Eli Keller (a highly honored pastor of the congregation for 27 years) presented the large stained-glass window in the northerly wall, representing the Good Shepherd and His sheep at a cost of $250. Two aged descendants of John Ortt, (one of the first members), Anna and Susan Ortt, both over 80 years, presented the large stained glass window in the westerly wall, at a cost of $250.

The Aid Society supplied the pews costing $1,000, and contributed $500 towards the cost of the building; and besides supplied the fine stained-glass windows of their room on the southerly side, on the second floor. The earnest, devoted women of the congregation accomplished this by meeting every Saturday afternoon and working for the welfare of the church; which meetings are continued.

The corner-stone was laid Aug. 9, 1909, and the building was dedicated to the service of God July 24, 1910. The services were continued daily for one week and were successful in every way. Thirty-eight pastors of various churches were in attendance at different times during the week, many of them accompanied by their church choirs.

A handsome two-story parsonage and commodious barn were erected in 1912 on the property of the Zionsville charge, south of the church, at a cost of $6,500 (including the lot of ground).

The membership in 1913 was 460.

The following pastors have served this congregation from the beginning of its history until now:

John	Egidius	Hecker,	J.	Henry	Helffrich,
		1757-'62.			1779-'1810.
John	Philip	Leydich,	Jacob	Wm.	Dechant,
		1762-'70			1811-'15.
John	George	Witner,	Daniel	Zeller,	1815-'57.
		1771-'79.

Alfred J. G. Dubs, 1857-'71. Eli Keller, 1874-1901.
 R. S. Appel, 1871-'73. Osville R. Frantz, 1901-'07.
 Daniel Weiser, 1873-'74. James N. Blatt, 1907—.

The Sunday school organization has been carried on successfully since 1877. The present superintendents are Charles F. Christman and Dallas Carl; the membership, 245.

A missionary society was organized by Rev. Eli Keller in 1881, which has been maintained since then with meetings every four weeks on Sunday evenings, instead of the regular church service.

Second Zionsville Reformed Congregation was organized in 1818 by certain members of the old congregation at Zionsville, for the purpose of co-operating with the Lutheran congregation in erecting a new church at Zionsville, and this was accomplished by the joint congregations in 1819 by the erection of a large stone church on a small piece of land (43 perches) which they purchased from Christopher Mohr. The representatives of this congregation on the Building Committee were: John Mechling, Lorentz Stahler, Conrad Mertz and Christian Stahler.

They continued to hold regular services in this building until 1871; then, not having a pastor, they sold their interest to the Lutherans for $550, and returned to the old congregation, having become satisfied to worship in the brick church which had been erected in 1858.

The pastors were:

Jacob C. Becker, 1820.	Christian R. Keszler, 1847-'49.
J. Theobald Faber, 1820-'33.	John B. Poerner, 1849-'54.
Samuel Hess, 1833-'44.	John S. Keszler, 1855-'64.
H. S. Baszler, 1845-'47; 1864-'71.

Zionsville Lutheran Church is situated at old Zionsville, in an elevated position on the easterly side of the "King's Highway." The congregation was organized in 1757 by members of the Lutheran denomination who had separated from the congregation of 1734, which had established itself in the township of Upper (Lower) Milford, about two miles southeast of old Zionsville and not far from the present village of Dillingersville.

Peter Hittel (the progenitor of the Hittel family in Lehigh county) one of those members, had bought of John Bingaman, in 1753, a tract of 120 acres at the upper end of Zionsville and in 1757 donated one acre of it to the newly-organized congregation for religious purposes; and it was on this land that a small log church was built in 1758.

A church record was then begun and in it the names of the first members were entered. They were as follows:

Henry Hertzell.	Christian Reinert.
Joh. Nic. Steiner.	Ludwig Siefer.
Peter Arnold.	Wilhelm Schaffer.
John Schaller.	Adam Thiel (Diehl).
Abraham Reinhard.	Joh. Musselberger.
Nicholas Rothenburger.	Christian Fischer.
Balthagae Vetterman.	Peter Schuler.
Michael Flores.	Philip Federolff.
Jacob Dillinger.	Friederich Kirchner.
Peter Martin.	George Marsteller.
Friederich Toelp.	George Still.
Jost Olewein.	Stephan Thalman.
George Winter.	Philip Schutz.
Michael Spiegel.	Michael Stocker.
Isaac Jerry (Jerrett).	Philip Schlauch.
Christian Metzger.	Jacob Schaffer.
Fred. William Kern.	Johannes Heinle.
Philip Jacob Wagner.	Frantz Wesko.
George Dorr (Doerr).	Hannes Hud.
Peter Huttel (Hittel).	Heinrich Becker.
Gabriel Kohler.	George Seiler.
Theobald Machlin.	Adam Kohlman.
Henry Kurr.	Johannes Schantz.
Friederich Kammerer.	Abr. Hauser.
John Wetzel.	Christopher Hoepler.
Peter Fischer.	Michael Flexer.
J. Michael Mattinger.	Martin Ringel.
Jacob Sicher.	Jacob Heil.
Joh. Seb. Truckenmuller.	Conrad Wittmeier.
Joh. Philip Heiny.	Mathias Bastian.
Joest Rosz.	Peter Federolff.
	Peter Hertzell.

The first log building was used until 1819; then it was torn down, and a large stone "Union" church was erected in its place. In its erection they were assisted by certain members of the Zionsville Reformed congregation who showed a determined spirit to secure a safe, new and larger building which the majority of that congregation did not approve because they regarded the stone church of 1789 as still sufficient and perfectly safe. The joint building committee was as follows:

Lutheran—Isaac Klein, John Vogt, John Dillinger, Jacob Bildhaus.

Reformed—John Mechling, Lorentz Stahler, Conrad Mertz, Christian Stahler.

In 1876 a third attractive church, with a steeple visible for many miles, was built of brick, and a large basement fitted up for Sunday school purposes; but it was erected wholly by the Lutheran congregation. The Reformed congregation, which had occupied the property jointly with the Lutherans for upwards of fifty years, sold their interest in 1871 for $550; and in it the Lutherans have held regular services until the present time.

In 1889 a fine iron fence was put up in front of the church. This was extended along the front of the cemetery in 1913.

In September, 1898, the 140th anniversary of the church was celebrated in a fitting manner. Since 1893 the congregation has successfully celebrated an anniversary every five years.

In 1903 the graves in the cemetery numbered 1223; of which 830 were marked with headstones for identification.

In December, 1913, a new pipe organ (Durner, of Quakertown) was installed at a cost of $2,800.

The following pastors have served this congregation:

— Schafer, 1757.	Fred'k W. Mendsen,
Jacob F. Schertlein,	1819.
1758-'60.	Benjamin German,
George Weisner.	1819-'48.
Jacob Van Buskirk,	William German,
1769-'93; 1797-1800.	1848-'51.
George F. Ellisen,	Augustus L. Dechant,
1793-'97.	1852.
I. P. F. Kramer,	Jacob Vogelbach,
1800-'03.	1852-'57.
Friederich Geisenheimer.	William Rath, 1857-'89.
Henrich Heyer.	Myron Rath, 1889-1895.
— Röllner.	Milton J. Keener (sup-
Frederich Plitt.	ply 1896).
Henry Heiny, 1808-'17.	Irvin B. Ritter,
Henry G. Secher,	1896-1907.
1817-'19.	David Kauffman, 1907—

The "Union" Sunday school was carried on in the church school-building from 1841 to 1858; then the Lutheran members jointly occupied the Sunday school room in the basement of the new brick church of the Reformed congregation and this arrangement was conducted until they took possession of their own basement in the new brick edifice of 1876.

St. Peter's Union Church is situated in the western section of Upper Milford on the road leading from Shimersville to Siesholtzville, 3½ miles west of Shimersville. The land was purchased by settlers of that vicinity in 1770 for the purpose of providing a schoolhouse and burying-ground.

The school-building was erected and the graveyard set apart about that time, and they were maintained until 1844 when Lutheran and Reformed congregations came to be organized there and they erected a two-story stone-plastered church where religious services have been held in harmonious alternation until the present time.

In 1883 the building was repaired, and a new steeple erected, 100 feet high.

In 1904 the church was re-modeled; the old organ and pews were removed and in their stead were placed the organ and pews formerly used by the St. Peter's Lutheran church of Allentown, these having been accepted as a generous gift; and re-dedication services were held on September 11th which were largely attended.

In 1912 lightning struck the building in the front, which passed down both sides without doing any damage. The organ was covered with a rubber blanket at the time and this was a protection against damage which might otherwise have resulted.

The following pastors have served this congregation:

Lutheran.	Reformed.
Daniel Kohler.	Henry S. Baszler, 8y.
Samuel K. Brobst.	Christian R. Keszler, 1y.
Ferdinand Berkemeyer.	John B. Poerner, 5 y.
Edward Herman.	John S. Keszler, 9 y.
M. Sell.	R. S. Appel, 2 y.
Alfred Croll.	Aug. L. Dechant, 1 y.
A. R. Bayer.	Eli Keller, 1874-1901.
D. H. Humbert.	O. R. Frantz, 1901-'07.
	James M. Blatt, 1907—.

A Sunday school has been maintained in the church. The building and graveyard have a fine location. Seven soldiers are buried there.

Salem Lutheran Church.—A number of the members of the Lutheran congregation which worshipped in St. Peter's Union Church in Upper Milford withdrew in 1873, under the leadership of Rev. Alfred Croll, and established a church for themselves in the township, a short distance south of the St. Peter's Church. The building is two-story, stone, plastered, and marked in imitation of cut-stone, with a steeple and bell, set on an acre of ground. A number of pastors have conducted the services, the last since 1910 being Benjamin S. Dice. The members have been greatly reduced, through death and removals, only twelve remaining in November, 1913. The building was repaired and repainted in 1913. A graveyard is maintained on the property.

A Sunday-school has been carried on from the beginning; membership now 43; superintendent, James C. Rohrbach.

Zionsville Mennonite Church is on the King's Highway, midway between Zionsville Station and old Zionsville in Upper Milford. The congregation was organized before 1740 by Mennonites who had settled in this vicinity. In 1772 John Schantz and Benjamin Meyer as trustees of the congregation, bought half an acre of ground from Henry Schleifer. It would seem that a log church had long before been erected on this ground where burials had been made. In 1795 other trustees bought adjoining ground (39 perches) from Conrad Meyer for the purpose of enlarging the graveyard; and in 1840 Conrad Meyer sold to the congregation an additional tract of 1½ acres, and it was then that the log building was torn down and a stone church erected in its place. This stone church was occupied for 36 years, then, in the "centennial year," a fine, large, brick edifice, 40 by 70 feet was put up where services have been continued until now.

In 1905 the auditorium was improved by a metal ceiling and in 1913 the premises were enlarged by adding 1½ acres.

This is sometimes called the "Second Mennonite Church," because the "First" was put up in Lancaster County; but it is commonly known as the "Zionsville Mennonite Church."

The names of the earliest members were:

Conrad Stamm.	Johannes Gehman.
Johannes Stahl.	Johannes Stauffer.
Derrick Jansen.	Daniel Stauffer.
Henry Schliefer.	Abraham Meyer.
George Weisz.	Ulrich Baszler.
John Schantz.	Jacob Hiestand.
John Meyer.	Philip Geisinger.
Henry Funk.	Christian Musselman.
Benjamin Meyer.	Rudolph Weisz.
Michael Meyer.	And others.
Peter Meyer.

The pastors have been:

Michael Holtzhausen.	Anthony S. Shelly,
Hans Gehman.	1880-1905.
Johanne Gehman, 35 y.	William Gottschall.
John Schantz, 1828-'48.	S. P. Preheim.
Joseph Schantz, 33 y.	Ellwood Shelly, 1913.
William Gehman, 6 y.
Carl H. A. von der
Smissen, 1881-'89.

A stone is set in the front wall with the years inscribed when the several improvements were made on the ground, as follows:

1740; 1760; 1816; 1841; 1876; 1905.

The membership in November, 1913, was 100.

A Sunday-school has been conducted from the beginning of the congregation. It was re-organized in 1853; then it possessed a library. In 1913 the membership was 60, reduced by death and removals. Henry B. Schantz served as superintendent from 1890 to 1907.

Mennonite Brethren.—About 1855, differences arose in the old Mennonite congregation which in time led to a separation, and those who left the church organized a congregation in 1858, with Rev. Wm. Gehman as their pastor. They secured a piece of ground on the great road from Hosensack to Vera Cruz, about a mile distant from the mother church, and in 1859 erected a one-story brick church, 34 by 40 feet. The first members were:

Rev. William Gehman (pastor).	David Musselman.
David Gehman (deacon)	Rev. William Gehman
Jacob Musselman.	Abraham Musselman.
Abraham Kauffman, Sr.	Jonas Musselman.
Samuel Kauffman.	Abraham Kauffman, Jr.
Joseph Stauffer.	William Gehman is
Josiah W. Stauffer.	still living, and 80 years old.

The first meeting was held Sept. 24, 1858, at the residence of David Musselman, which was attended by four ministers, Revs. Wm. Gehman, Wm. N. Schelly, David Henning, and Henry Diehl; and three deacons, David Gehman, Joseph Schneider, and Jacob Gottschall; and then a name was selected: "Evangelical Mennonite," and inscribed on the stone set in the front wall over the door.

In the winter of 1881-82 a General Conference was held in this church and delegates from Canada, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan were present. The name "Evangelical Mennonites" was changed to "Evangelical United Mennonites."

At a special general conference held at Harrisburg, in Ohio, in December, 1883, the name was changed to "Mennonite Brethren in Christ."

From 1858 to 1884 the congregation increased its membership to sixty-five; and in that time several young men became ministers of the gospel, Joseph L. Romig, Abraham Kauffman, Jonas Musselman, and John Traub.

The services are held twice every Sunday; membership 65.

The ministers who served as pastors were:

William Gehman.	Emanuel Cassell,
William N. Schelly.	1902-'05.
Joseph L. Romig.	O. S. Hillegass, 1905-'08.
L. Lambert.	W. W. Zimmerman,
Abraham Kauffman.	1908-'11.
Abel Strawn.	Robert Bergstrasser,
Jonas Musselman.	1911-'14.

In 1875, a Sunday school was organized which has been maintained until now. F. M. Gehman has been superintendent twelve years.

This building is locally known as the "Third Church," of the Mennonites.

Evangelical Association.—Rev. John Seybert, the first bishop of the Association, organized a congregation in 1829, and held the first meeting at the residence of David Schubert (a Schwenkfelder) on "Bald-Hill" on the 13th of September, where Revs. William Orwig and Carl Hammer conducted religious service; and this resulted in the erection of a church in an elevated locality in Upper Milford along the road leading from the Hereford and Shimersville Turnpike through Powder Valley to the Hosensack Valley. The first members were:

David Schubert.	George Yeakel.
Christopher Schubert.	Melchior Yeakel.
Peter Wiest.	Abraham Yeakel.

In 1831, the congregation secured from Christopher Schubert a small tract of land and established a burying-ground for its members. In 1838, David Schubert built a stone meeting-house on land adjoining the small tract mentioned for the use of the congregation and in 1840 sold it to them with three-quarters of an acre of land for $300. It was occupied until 1858, when a new brick edifice, 38 by 50 feet, was erected in its stead. It was remodeled.

A branch of this congregation was organized in 1844, in the vicinity of Vera Cruz and afterward its meetings were held for a number of years in the Baptist Church. Some of the first members were Francis Schwartz, Daniel Schwartz, Amandus Klein, Henry Mohr, and Thomas Kern.

United Evangelical Church.—Before 1850 a German Baptist congregation was organized by Reverend Fleischman, of Philadelphia, in Upper Milford at the village of Vera Cruz, and the first members were Wm. Desch, Henry Desch, Manasses Baer, Jonas George, Wm. Mohr, Harry Gehman and Owen Rhoads. They erected a one-story frame church in 1853 along the King's Highway, a short distance south of the village, and at same time established a graveyard on an adjoining lot. Wm. Desch and Wm. Mohr were ordained as its ministers who served for many years; then it was discontinued on account of the death and removal of members.

In 1900 a congregation of United Evangelical members purchased the property and remodeled the church. Since then regular services have been conducted there, including a Sunday school, each with a small membership. The pastors have been D. G. Reinhold, J. K. Freed, J. H. Stermer and D. S. Kostenbader.

U. B. Church.—In 1881, the United Brethern in Christ was organized near Vera Cruz by Rev. James H. Unger, minister of the East German Conference of this church. The first meeting was held in 1880 in the Baptist Church and a later meeting in the private house of Charles Schuler. Those who joined this class first were Charles Schuler and wife (Henrietta), Levi N. Schelly and wife (Mary), and daughter (Mary), Joseph Wieand, Amandus Snyder and wife (Lucy). Later came Charles Mumbauer, Oscar Romig, and Catharine Weidner. Meetings were regularly held in 1883 at the house of Charles Schuler by Rev. Eph. Light, Rev. John H. Ruhl, and Rev. H. B. Spayd, and also at the house of Levi N. Schelly.

SCHOOLS.—The school board of the township for 1853-'54 was constituted as follows: David Hiestand and Friederich Sigmund, three years; Peter Henninger and John Ortt, two years; Charles B. Shimer and Charles W. Wieand, one year. Mr. Wieand was chosen president; Mr. Sigmund, secretary, and Charles Foster, treasurer.

The schools and first teachers were as follows:

1. Brunner's, William H. Wieder.
2. Kern's, Charles H. Blank.
3. Koch's, Thomas K. Zeisslove.
4. Kriebel's, Samuel Kriebel.
5. Miller's Mill, George W. Hartzell.
6. Ortt's, Solomon Schiffert.
7. Schantz Mill, George W. Brinker.
8. Schwartz's, Solomon Daubert.
9. Zionsville, Charles W. Wieand.

The teachers were employed for 4½ months, at a salary of $18.

In 1855, a new sub-district was established in Powder Valley called Powder and a new building erected for $450. The teacher appointed was S. T. Butterwick. The term was the same; but the salary was increased to $20. Till the year 1882 the schools had increased to 14; the term to 5 months, and the salary to teachers to $32.

For statistics on school affairs see chapter on CENSUS.

DIRECTORS AND TEACHERS.—The following directors and teachers served the township schools for the year 1913:

Directors.

President, Harvey E. Miller.
Secretary, Charles P. Heller.
Treasurer, Elmer Hinnershitz.
 Harvey E. Marsteller.
 Charles F. Christman.

Teachers.

Name.	School.
M. J. Wertman, princ.,	Shimersville (Kern's).
Stanley D. Schubert,	Shimersville.
Harvey H. Bleiler,	Vera Cruz.
Sarah M. Lehman,	Vera Cruz
Esther R. Silsdorf,	O. Zionsville.
Mary E. Roeder,	Zionsville (Geissinger).
Florence J. Miller,	Ortt's.
Mabel R. Benfield,	Miller's.
Alfred J. Kohler,	Henninger's.
Elmer H. Roeder,	Brunner's.
Ella D. Reese,	Powder Valley (Schubert).
Lulu S. Miller,	Yoder's (Kriebel's).
Myron M. Merkel,	Kochs.
Helen R. Kuntz,	Sigmund.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

LOWER MILFORD TOWNSHIP.

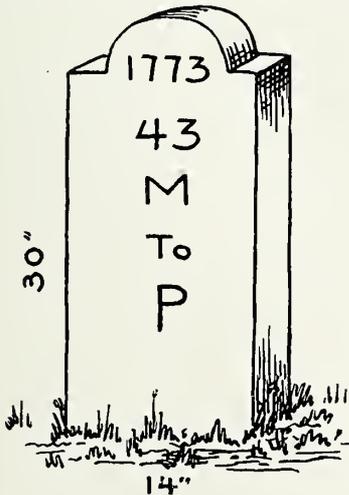

The following historical details relate more particularly to the lower sub-division of the original township, as it has been recognized since 1853.

VILLAGES.—The following villages are in the township of Lower Milford:

Hosensack.	Dillingersville.
Kraussdale.	Dillinger Station.
Corning.	Limeport.

Hosensack is situated on the creek of this name in Lower Milford, 4080 ft. east from the Perkiomen R. R. In 1913 it contained a creamery, store, hotel (discontinued) and four dwellings. The Hancock Ice Plant is near by, to the west, with a dam covering 40 acres and an ice-house with a storage capacity of 30,000 tons.

Henry Kieber (Geber) took up 150 acres of land here along the Hosensack creek in 1734, and he then erected a dwelling-house. George Klein became the owner and secured a patent for the land in 1757. Two years later Klein obtained a license and then started a tavern on the site where the hotel building is now situated.

In 1773 a milestone was planted along the north side of the King's Highway, from Philadelphia by way of Hosensack through Upper Milford to Macungie, several hundred feet east of the tavern to indicate the distance as 43 miles from Philadelphia. It was transplanted to its present locality, opposite the hotel, by Solomon Holder while proprietor.

George Stahl conducted the hotel after George Klein for upwards of twenty years, which covered the trying period of the Revolution. During the Indian troubles of 1784, fifty soldiers were stationed there. In 1797, Klein sold it to his son, Abraham, who succeeded Stahl. A number of proprietors carried on the place until 1840, when Solomon L. Holder bought the property and he conducted the hotel for twenty-five years. Then George Bachman became the owner and in 1867 he tore down the old log building and erected a two story stone hotel in its place. He was proprietor until 1882. Since then the proprietors have been Christian Weiss, Michael Hinnerschlit, Thomas Roeder, John Weiss, Elmer Hillegass, Hugh McLean and Harvey Smith.

Previous to the Revolution, George Stahl established a store near the hotel and conducted it for a number of years until after the war when it was discontinued. He hauled great quantities of flour to Philadelphia which had been brought to his place from the mills along the Hosensack creek; and also provisions. In 1828 David Gehman started a store at the village and there carried on the business in a successful manner until 1850 when he put up a large new brick building, and it has been occupied as a general country store until now. He continued the business until 1860, a period of 32 years. The store keepers since 1880 have been R. N. Wanner (10 yrs.), J. S. Moyer (10 yrs), A. D. Brey (13 yrs.), and J. H. Yeakel since April, 1913.

In 1841 a postoffice was established there with David Gehman as postmaster, who filled the position until 1853. Solomon L. Holder served eight years; then Gehman was re-appointed and he served until 1872. His son-in-law then acted for one year. Subsequently the position was filled by the storekeepers, until 1910 when it was discontinued because of the introduction of a rural free delivery route.

The last bear in this vicinity is said to have been shot by John Stahl (a 12-year-old son of George) during the Revolution with the assistance of several comrades.

The hotel has been known for many years by the name of "Buck-Horn" and this was supposed to have been given to the place by George Stahl before 1800, when he hung up on the sign-post a large pair of Elk buck horns to attract public attention. They were blown down and broken in half some years ago, one arm still lying at the building as a silent witness of "ye ancient days."

In 1879 a creamery company was incorporated and a plant was put up in 1880, which has been carried in until the present time, the principal parties interested being Wm. Roeder, Reuben Roeder (dec'd), John M. Roeder, Milton Schantz and others.

A county bridge, built of stone with two arches, spans the creek which flows southwardly a short distance west of the store.

David Roeder carried on a blacksmith shop for a number of years. He was succeeded in 1890 by his son, John.

In 1913 the village included seven dwellings.

Hosensack Valley.—The following extract was taken from a sketch of "The Hosensack Valley," by P. W. Flores, which was published in Friedens-Bote, and appears in "Sketches of the Lehigh Valley (1880-86) pp. 218-20:

"More than twenty mills of different kinds have been operated by the Hosensack creek and its tributaries, showing its appreciation by the settlers and its value to the community.

"It would appear that the name 'Hosensack' was originated by the German surveyors in the employ of the proprietary government, who, in making the early surveys in this region of country, were obliged to return from the valley by the same route taken in entering it, as from a 'pant-pocket.'

"The territory was included in the surveys relating to the Goschenhoppen and Macungie settlements as early as 1684, and in the deeds from the Indian chiefs to William Penn.

"The Indians understood the transactions so far as these lands were concerned because they never disturbed the early settlers in the possession of the lands. This is evidenced by the fact that certain friendly Indians had remained in the Hosensack Valley on the land of Joseph Eberhardt (afterward of Dr. J. H. Dickenschied), where they dwelt in poor huts without interference. They visited the houses of the settlers and begged for food which was given to them so as to keep them in good humor. It is said that upon one occasion an old Indian visited the home of Eberhardt and seeing the beautiful 'house-cat,' took it quickly into his arms and left, after which he killed it, prepared a meal and enjoyed it heartily.

"It is doubtful if any real settlements were made in this valley before 1730, though there might have been some 'squatters.'

"One of the first landowners, if not the very first, in the Hosensack Valley, was James Steel, the private secretary of William Penn. The Lieutenant Governor of the Province in 1683 bought 5,000 acres of land in Pennsylvania, of which he devised 2,400 acres to his wife. This came to be purchased on Jan. 21, 1729, by Steel; and when he took up the land in different places he selected 500 acres in Hosensack Valley, and also 270 acres on the other side of the Hosensack Hill in Kraussdale. The 500 acres lay in the lower part of this valley and the county-line between Lehigh and Montgomery cuts it into two nearly equal parts. Steel received a patent for his land on Aug. 31, 1733, subject to the usual quit-rent of a silver shilling on each hundred acres. He was in the possession of this land over 12 years and sold it on Feb. 8, 1741, to Gov. James Hamilton for £150, and therefore it has since been known as the Hamilton tract.

"On Sept. 12, 1734, John Heinrich Jaeckel arrived with the Schwenkfelders at Philadelphia. Soon afterward he went with his brother, Balthaser Jaeckel, and his brother-in-law, Gregory Schultz, to North Whitehall where they stopped; but that locality appearing dangerous to them on account of the Indian troubles, John Heinrich Jaeckel (now Yeakel) then journeyed to the Hosensack Valley, and on Dec. 23, 1761, bought the Hamilton tract for £250 after it had been in Hamilton's possession for over 20 years. Seven years afterward he divided this land in equal parts among his four sons, Balthaser, Jeremiah, George and Melchior, and it has remained in parts among his descendants until to-day.

"The son, Balthaser, built on his part of the land in the beginning of the year 1800 a wool-carding mill, which he carried on many years, but it was afterward changed to a cassinet factory and bought by George Yeakel and Amos Antrim of Oley, who conducted the factory for many years until it was destroyed by fire in the year 1849."

Kraussdale is a small village in Lower Milford, in the southern extremity of Lehigh county, on the old King's Highway, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles south from Hosensack. The land was first settled by Ulrich Rieser in 1735. Baltzer Krauss became the owner of 196 acres in 1793, and he sold the property to his sons, John and Andrew, in 1803.

John Krauss established a machine-shop here and made wool carding-machines until he died in 1819. His son, Anthony, purchased the property, changed the shop into a factory for the manufacture of threshing-machines, and carried on the business in an extensive and successful manner for upwards of 30 years, affording constant employment to more than 25 hands. He died in 1852 and his sons, Isaac, Harrison and James, became his successors, who then conducted the business under the name of Krauss & Brothers. In 1870 the plant was enlarged for the manufacture of all kinds of farming implements and they continued this great local establishment until 1900, a continuous period by themselves covering almost 50 years. Since the beginning, the family name was prominent and influential in business and manufacturing affairs for a century.

In 1913 there was no business place of any kind in the village, and only six dwelling-houses.

Corning is a small village and station on the Perkiomen R. R., near the line of Montgomery county. The public road from Treichlersville, in Berks county, to Hosensack passes through the place. The improvements were made within ten years after the construction of the railroad. A postoffice was established in 1883, which has been continued until now. Elias Trump was the first postmaster and store-keeper. He was succeeded by his daughter, Anna B., upon his death, and she carried on the store and postoffice until she died in 1912, when B. S. Caswell became the purchaser and he has since conducted the business.

A short distance from the station, Henry Scherer started a small tannery in 1894 for preparing pelts on orders by a special process which he learned from Charles Burkhalter, the tanner, near Zionsville Station, and he has carried on the business until now. Skins of various kinds have been brought to him from the surrounding country for many miles.

Dillingersville is in Lower Milford, nearly two miles east of Zionsville Station. The land was first settled by Michael Moser in 1735, and he built the first house there near a fine spring which he occupied for 30 years. John Jacob Dillinger became the owner in 1788, and afterward established an oil-mill on the premises which he carried on for 15 years. This building is still standing but changed into a dwelling-house.

John Dillinger, son of John Jacob, started a general store business in 1800 and carried it on for about 10 years. Henry Dillinger was the store-keeper from 1829 to 1846. Since then for 50 years there were many successive owners who carried on the business for short periods. From 1896 the storekeeper has been Erwin G. Kramer.

Daniel Stahler established a tavern in 1810 and carried it on for 17 years, Henry Stahler for 2 years, when Henry Dillinger became the owner. In 1830 he erected a large stone hotel building and conducted the business for 25 years. For the next 30 years there were many landlords, the longest term having been from 1868 to 1882 by E. S. Diefenderfer; and for the succeeding 25 years there were also numerous parties; since 1907, they have been L. N. Mazurie, Charles W. Culp, Robert Miller, James Brophy and Daniel Schmoyer (Nov., 1913).

The polling place of Lower Milford has been at Dillingersville since 1852; and when the two districts were one (Upper Milford), it had been there from the beginning because of its central locality.

A postoffice was established here in 1825 and named "Stahler" after Daniel Stahler who was the first postmaster and filled the position until 1827. This was the first office in the lower part of Lehigh county. His successors were: Henry Stahler, 1827-29; Henry Dillinger, 1829-49, when it was discontinued for two years. It was re-established in 1851 with the name of "Dillingersville," and this was the name until discontinued on Aug. 15, 1906, because of establishing the R. F. D. The postmasters were: Erwin Burkholder, 1851-56; Daniel J. Dillinger, 1856-66; James D. Dillinger, 1866-67; P. W. Flores, 1867-88; after 1888 there were eight, the last having been Erwin G. Kramer.

In November, 1913, the village contained a store, hotel, 9 dwellings and 30 inhabitants.

Dillinger Station is a business point on the Perkiomen R. R., about two miles east of Zionsville Station, established there in 1876. It was first known as Schelly's for a short time, named after Levi N. Schelly who embarked in the coal, grain and feed business there at that time. He carried on the stand for 5 years. He was followed by E. LeRoy High, C. A. Moyer and H. B. Geho, the last since 1910. The place includes 6 dwellings, and 18 population.

A short distance east of the station, the railroad extends through a rock tunnel, about 1,700 feet long, in a ridge of the South Mountain. It was excavated during the years 1874-75.

A postoffice was established here Dec. 28, 1889, and continued until April 14, 1904, when it was discontinued.

Limeport is a village of 50 dwellings and 200 inhabitants in Lower Milford at the Saucon township line on the road which leads from the Allentown and Coopersburg turnpike to the village of Steinsburg in Bucks county.

In 1825 Daniel Erdman erected the first public house here and called it Eagle Hotel. He carried it on until his death in 1850. Reuben Schaffer then purchased the property and he also conducted the place for 25 years. He was succeeded by Thomas K. Ott who kept it 2 years, and next by Mr. Ott's son, Milton H. Ott, who kept it for a number of years. Afterward there were different owners for varying periods, until 1912 when Wilson Henry took possession.

In 1850 Joseph Wittman built a second hotel and named it "Anchor." Different tenants conducted the business for sixteen years, when the property was purchased by Peter Benner, and Benner and his family carried on the business until 1903. Henry W. Fink, a grandson of Benner, became the owner and he has conducted the stand until now. A store was started in this building with the hotel, and carried on by different parties until Peter Benner became the owner of the property in 1866; afterward he and his son-in-law, David Fink, carried it on for several years, then discontinued it.

A postoffice was started in the general store of Benner & Fink in 1867 with Lewis M. Benner as the postmaster who filled the position four years. Joseph Wittman then filled it for four years, afterward Charles B. Egner and others until 1897; Sylvester Egner (a nephew of Chas. B.) filled the office for sixteen years; then, Dec. 1, 1913, Monroe Schaeffer became the postmaster and he removed the office to the large department store of his father, Charles W. Schaeffer.

When Benner & Fink discontinued their store about 1870, Schaeffer & Deily opened a general store in a two-story building opposite the Eagle Hotel and carried it on several years. They were succeeded by Charles B. Egner and Joseph Weaver until 1890, when John M. Cressman became the owner and he has since conducted the store.

In 1878 a department store was started in the centre of the village in a small way by Charles W. Schaeffer and he has carried on the business with increasing success until the present time. The building is now a 3-story frame, 60 by 100 feet, slate-covered on sides, with a hall on the third floor, and the numerous departments include all such articles as may be needed in a country district. The large business requires the assistance of six hands.

A blacksmith shop has been carried on from the beginning of the village; by Peter Dietz for 25 years, and by Sarus Hoffman since 1909.

A cigar factory was started here about 1870. Sylvester Egner has carried it on since 1892.

Howard H. Fegely embarked in the creamery business at Limeport in 1911 and put up a building which he equipped with the latest improved machinery. Since then he has carried on the plant in a most successful manner.

The following doctors have practiced their professions in this vicinity:

John R. Diller, 1860-73.	Harvey Rohrbach,
Robert C. King,	1906-07.
1873-1906.	Milton Weaver, 1907-09.
	A. F. Gerberich, 1909-

The Knights of Pythias, Castle No. 273, was instituted here in 1869, membership 140; meets in Eagle Hotel hall. The Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Lodge No. 114, in 1913; membership 60; meets in Schaeffer Store hall.

The burning and selling of first-class lime for agricultural purposes was carried on extensively at Limeport for nearly fifty years from 1850, more especially from 1875 to 1885. Thomas K. Ott had nine kilns, whose large quarry was located in the village; Joseph Wittman had four kilns; and Stahler & Schell had three kilns. The lime was not used for building purposes. The farmers came from points to the southwardly, ten to fifteen miles distant, and at times their teams, four and six horses to a large wagon, stood in a row through the town and beyond, covering nearly a mile in length. Some of them came there at three o'clock in the morning and waited till three in the afternoon before getting their wagons loaded. The price was 9, 10 and 11 cents a bushel. Since 1885 the business is rather limited, only two and three kilns burning at a time.

In 1865 Peter Benner put up a large frame factory for the manufacture of carriages at Limeport, and his son-in-law, John Trexler, carried it on for five years. He was succeeded by the Holtzman Brothers, Charles, John and Lewis, of Baltimore, Md., who conducted the enterprise in an extensive manner for thirteen years. Then Horace M. Dubbs purchased the property and carried on the business until 1900 when it was discontinued on account of competition from western manufacturers and he sold the factory and stock on hand at public sale. Since 1900 the building has been occupied for storage purposes, more especially for accommodating the owners of automobiles, of which there are now six at Limeport.

The Milford Cornet Band of Limeport was organized in 1860, comprising 25 members, with Nathaniel Heller as leader, and Prof. Frederick Iobst, of Emaus, as teacher, and it was maintained for nine years, during which time it participated in numerous picnics, parades and entertainments of various kinds; then it was disbanded.

In 1908 it was revived by 24 members of the Knights of Pythias, of Limeport and vicinity, with Joseph A. Brunner, Esq., as leader and Prof. Jacob Geisinger, of Pleasant Valley, as teacher, and the organization was carried on till November, 1913, when it was discontinued because its meetings and performances interfered too much with the regular avocations of its members.

INDUSTRIES.—The following grist and saw-mills and various other industries have been carried on in the township of Lower Milford.

Fretz Mill is situated on Hosensack creek, in Lower Milford along the public road leading from Hosensack to Steinsburg, in Bucks county, half a mile northeast from Hosensack. It is the oldest mill property in Lehigh county. It was established in 1740 on land bought of Peter Wentz in 1735 and 1739. In 1743 he sold to Isaias Cuschwa (or Gushwa), of Mount Bethel, Lancaster county, all his land, over 200 acres. Cuschwa carried on the mill three years, then sold it, with the land, to David Straub for £400. Straub operated it for three years, then sold it and 76¾ acres of land to Francis Russ, of Saucon township; and Russ conducted it for twelve years. In 1761 Russ sold the mill and 48 acres to his son, Killian, and in 1763 he sold the other part of the tract to his son, Francis. Since 1765 there have been numerous owners for varying short periods covering together over a hundred years, until 1879; then Jonathan Fretz became the owner and he has continued owner of it until now, but it has been operated by his son, William.

In 1768 John Hillegass and Adam Kohl were assessed as the owners of grist-mills in the township and John Schantz as the owner of a saw-mill.

Mills on the Hosensack.—Six mills were built along the Hosensack creek; four of them are still in operation.

Schelly grist-mill was situated on the Hosensack creek in Lower Milford, one mile east of Dillingersville. The land was settled by Jacob Dubs in 1734, and his son, Daniel, erected a grist and saw-mill about 1800. He operated it until 1824, followed by his son, Daniel, Jr., until 1837, and by Wm. D. Moyer until 1863, when Isaac H. Schelly became the owner. Different parties ran it until 1880, when Henry F. Schell bought it and improved the plant by adding steam power. The business was continued until about 1900, when the mill was burned and abandoned. The owner then was Albert Walter.

Eberhard saw-mill in Lower Milford is on a branch of Hosensack creek, over a mile southeast of Dillingersville. It was put up in 1882 by John D. Eberhard, who carried it on for a number of years. He was succeeded by his son, Clement, who has continued the business until now.

The third is the Eckard (Quinus A.) mill who has operated it since 1907. It is a three-story stone building without a saw-mill annex, used for producing chopped feed. Previous owners have been Harry Dull, Jonathan Fretz, Jacob Weiss, Samuel Weinberger, and Samuel Krauss.

The fourth is the Schantz mill. It has been operated since 1864, now nearly 50 years, with a saw-mill annex. Power is supplied to the barn for threshing purposes, and to the house for washing purposes and cream separation. A saw-mill was started here before 1768 by John Schantz, and some time afterward an oil-mill was erected. This was enlarged by his son, John, in 1824, and the two were operated until 1852 when the grandson, Henry, became the owner and he substituted a grist-mill in the place of the oil-mill, which was carried on with the saw-mill until 1864, when the great-grandson, Milton, became the owner.

The fifth is the Schultz mill, a three-story stone mill founded by Henry Funk in 1775, who ran it until 1783 and supplied the American army with much flour during the Revolution, hauled by George Stahl. Rev. Geo. Kriebel owned it from 1783 to 1796; Abraham Kriebel from 1796 to 1816 until his death; his son, Jacob, then carried it on 59 years, when he died at the age of nearly 85 years. Joel Yeakel, then his son, Daniel K., were successive owners until 1883, when Daniel Schultz became the purchaser and he has carried it on until now, a period of thirty years. Flour was produced until 1912; since then chop-feed for cutsumers. His power is from the 40-acre Hancock Ice Dam, the strongest water power in the county.

Roeder saw-mill, the sixth industry, was situated on Hosensack creek in Lower Milford, below the Schultz mill and county bridge. It was erected by John G. Stahl before 1800 and carried on by him until 1820; afterward by Samuel Roeder and by Roeder's son, Daniel C., and grandson, Reuben M., until about 1885, when it was discontinued.

Stauffer Grist-Mill is on Walter creek, along the Perkiomen R. R., half a mile southeast from Zionsville Station. The land was taken up by John Moyer, who erected a saw-mill before 1760 and carried it on until 1761 when he sold it with 55 acres to his son, Samuel, and the son continued the business for 22 years. Different owners operated it for 50 years. Charlotte Miller was then the owner and in 1845 added a grist-mill. Solomon Klein became the owner in 1853, made improvements to the plant and in 1862 sold it to Samuel Stauffer who, with his son, Henry, carried on the business upward of twenty years. Tilghman Stahl and Edward Christman operated it successively until 1905; and Sylvester Reinhard since 1905. The saw-mill has been abandoned, and the grist-mill is carried on for supplying chopped feed on orders.

Walter Grist-mill was situated on the Walter creek, near the King's Highway east of Zionsville Station. In 1789 Andrew Rieser sold 135 acres there to Philip Walter, who erected a grist-mill in 1796 and run it until he died in 1812. His son, Daniel, bought the place and ran it, excepting for a short period, until 1852. Samuel Steinbach operated it until 1868, and Edward Heist until 1900 when it was destroyed by fire.

Stahl Grist-mill is on Indian creek, at the eastern end of Powder Valley, in Lower Milford. It was first established by George Carl as an oil-mill; then altered to a chopping-mill and saw-mill and Jacob Huyler became the owner, who ran the plant until 1885, when J. C. Hancock purchased the property and carried on the business for twenty years, having in 1894 substituted a superior three-story brick structure a short distance to the north across the railroad and equipped it with roller process. He then rented it to Osville S. Stahl for seven years. Stahl bought it in 1912 but had owned it only three weeks when it was destroyed by fire. He immediately rebuilt it as a chop-mill and subsequently enlarged it by adding a mansard story; and he has since carried it on in a successful manner. It is supplied with a 30-foot overshot water-wheel and the power from the large Hancock dam is of a superior nature. The ruins of the old Carl mill are still visible.

Heiler Grist-mill is on Indian creek in Lower Milford, a short distance below the Stahl mill. The industry was first a saw-mill, built by Jeremiah Krauss, about 1790, and run until 1807 when a clover-mill was established which attracted much attention. Nathan Krauss, son of Jeremiah, then converted the clover-mill into an oil-mill. James F. Heiler substituted a grist-mill about 1860, and since then it was operated by different parties until J. C. Hancock became the owner with other properties in that vicinity about 1885 when it was discontinued.

Moyer Grist-mill is in Lower Milford, one mile southwest of Limeport. It was built as a clover-mill about 1844 by Jacob Dietz who afterward changed it into a grist-mill, ran it for a time, then discontinued it. Dietz died in 1863, then Iobst and Newhard bought the property and rebuilt the mill. In 1877 Abraham S. Moyer became the owner, and after his death, Emanuel E. Moyer bought the plant and carried it on for a number of years. The present owner, Wm. Miller, has conducted business there since 1910.

Herman Grist-mill is in Lower Milford, three miles east of Dillingersville on the Hicken creek. It was put up originally as a clover-mill by Henry Rudolph and run by him until 1841 and by John Reinhard until 1861. Charles Hillegass then bought the property and substituted a grist- and saw-mill which he operated until his death in 1876. Jacob Hendricks then became the owner and carried on the plant until 1882 when it was destroyed by fire. He rebuilt the grist-mill and conducted it until 1900. William Herman then bought the property, and with his son has carried it on until now.

Gerhard Grist-mill is on Saucon creek in Lower Milford, along the road from the Coopersburg pike to Steinsburg, half a mile south of Limeport. The first building was erected by Andrew Engelman before 1785 and carried on until 1810. Different owners had the property until 1842 when Henry Gerhard became the purchaser. He carried on the old mill until 1858 when he erected a large stone mill and he and his son, Tobias, conducted the business until 1882. Aaron Heist was the owner afterward to 1907, and Wilson Roth to the present time. The business was discontinued about 1905.

Kriebel Saw-mill is in Lower Milford on a branch of the Krauss creek, southeast of Hosensack. It was erected in 1855 by George Kriebel and carried on upwards of ten years. In 1868 he sold it to Krauss & Bro., and in 1870 Jesse Brey became the owner, who operated the plant for upwards of twenty years when it was discontinued.

Oil Mills were early industries in different parts of Lehigh county. Those worthy of special mention were the Dillinger and the Stahler, both in Lower Milford.

Dillinger's was a short distance east of Dillingersville, erected by Jacob Dillinger about 1790 and carried on by him fifteen years. The mill was then changed into a dwelling house and it has been occupied for many years since 1853 by Edward Reinhard and by his widow. The building is still in a good state of preservation.

Stahler's was near the road from Zionsville to Coopersburg. It was erected by Anthony Stahler before 1785 and operated by him until his death in 1799, and then by his son, Anthony, for 5 years when it was sold to Jacob Mohr, who discontinued the industry and converted the building into a dwelling house.

Organ Works.—In 1790 John and Andrew Krauss, sons of Baltzer, made an organ at Kraussdale, in an old shop on their father's premises while still under age, and this is supposed to have been the first organ made in Pennsylvania, and this established their reputation to such an extent that they came to supply, before 1808, an organ for the Roman Catholic Church at Churchville (Bally) in Berks county, and shortly afterward for the Longswamp Church in the same county, and also for the Jordan Union Church in South Whitehall, Lehigh county.

In 1826, at the same place, George and Joel, sons of Andrew Krauss, made a bass viol; and in 1828 George and another brother, Samuel, made a melodean, which is supposed to have been the first ever made.

Later, Andrew Krauss and his sons, George and Samuel, made an ingenious globe which was turned by a clock once every 24 hours; and George painted it after a map of the world which was printed in London.

The building of organs was continued at Kraussdale until 1840 when the factory was removed to Palm, in Montgomery county, five miles distant, where the business has been continued until now.

Cassinet Factory.—A factory for the manufacture of woolen goods was erected in 1800 in Lower Milford by Balthaser Yeakel. It was situated on Indian creek, in Hosensack Valley, on the road from Hosensack to Palm, where it was carried on for upwards of twenty years when it was sold to George Yeakel, Jr., who changed it to a cassinet works. It was sold to Amos Antrim who conducted it until 1846 when it was destroyed by fire, and the industry abandoned.

Wheelwright-Shop.—Samuel Carl resided for seventy years in this township at the outlet of Powder Valley near the Stahl (Carl) grist-mill where he carried on a wheelwright-shop for the greater part of this time. He served as a supervisor for 20 years, and was affiliated with the Odd-Fellows upwards of 60 years. He was born in Hereford, Berks county, in 1825, and went to Upper (Lower) Milford when thirteen years old.

Dubs Pottery was situated in Lower Milford, on the Dillinger land, two miles northeast of Dillingersville. It was erected in 1821 by Henry Dubs and carried on by him until 1835, when the factory was sold to Wm. Dillinger, and Dillinger operated it for a number of years. This was the first pottery carried on in Lehigh county.

Dubs Forge was an active industry for about 50 years in Lower Milford for the manufacture of cutlery, augers, etc. The building was situated on the road leading from the Dub's (Schelly) grist-mill to Limeport. It was put up in 1825 by John Dubs on 68 acres of land which he had bought from his father Daniel Dubs, and conducted by him and his son, Aaron K., for a long while. It had quite a reputation.

Plover Creamery is on the road from Dillingersville to Steinburg, a short distance south-east from the county bridge at Abraham Stauffer's dwelling-house. It was erected and equipped by David Schuler about 1880 for his son, William, who carried it on for 25 years; followed by David Schuler (William's son) from 1905 to 1909, by Howard Fegely to 1912, and by Charles Dice since 1912.

The Plover postoffice was established here in 1890 and carried on till 1905 when it was discontinued by reason of the R. F. D.

Lime Kilns.—These were in Lower Milford from the time of the early settlements until twenty years ago. Limestone was found in superior beds from one end of the district to the other, and this led the farmers to establish kilns on their own farms and burn lime for their plantations. Wood was first used for a considerable time, then anthracite coal was substituted. The cordwood and stones were generally collected during the winter months and placed at the kilns. Some of the more prominent owners who produced and sold large quantities in the lower section were Abraham Schantz and his son, John, Joseph Schantz, Henry Schantz, Solomon Schantz, Milton Schantz, Samuel Weinberger and Jonathan Fretz. Hosensack was a prominent locality in the southern end. Limeport was more prominent in the northern end, the operators of the kilns there having been Thomas K. Ott, Joseph Witman and Stahler & Schell.

Tanneries.—There were two tanneries in Lower Milford, on the road from Zionsville to Hosensack, about two miles apart.

Burkhalter's was on the King's Highway, a mile southeast of old Zionsville. It was erected by John Hanger in 1822, who carried it on two years, Samuel Moyer three years, and Charles Burkhalter thirty-five years until his death in 1862, when Charles Burkhalter, Jr., became the owner and he conducted it for nearly forty years, when it was abandoned. The Lehigh County Agricultural Society awarded him a premium (a superior steel-plate print) in 1891 for a "Display of Angora skins and robes," in the manufacture of which he was regarded as an expert of remarkable experience and ability. It is said that he had tanned a small hide by his special process, and a pair of boots had been actually made out of the leather and delivered to him on the same day that the calf was slaughtered. He died at the home of his son-in-law, Henry B. Schantz, near Hosensack, at an advanced age.

Dub's was over a mile east of Dillingersville. It was erected by Jacob Dubs, Jr., in 1824, and operated by him and by his sons, Daniel and Jacob, for many years; and afterward by Alvin Jarrett and Samuel K. Carl until 1861 when it was abandoned.

Hancock Ice-Plant.—John C. Hancock, of Philadelphia, embarked in the ice business in Lower Milford township in 1885 by the purchase of the Carl (Huylar) mill property and its water-right along the Powder Valley creek near its outlet into the Hosensack, and the erection of a storage ice-house with a capacity of 14,000 tons. In 1895 he secured property in the Hosensack Valley, constructed a dam of superior fresh water, covering 40 acres, and erected an ice-house with a storage capacity of 30,000 tons. And in 1896 he established a third plant along the Walter creek, a short distance above the second plant, the storage house having a capacity of 20,000 tons.

Miller Peach Orchard.—In 1907, Charles Miller, planted a peach orchard of 600 trees in the township at the outlet of the Powder Valley creek into the Hosensack on the southern side.

OLD LANDMARK.—The oldest house in Lehigh county stood on land now owned by O. C. Keiper, Esq., until a few years ago, when it was torn down. The cellar and part of the walls can still be seen on the farm adjoining the Great-Swamp Church land on the west. The house was built of logs in 1739 by Henry Ritter. This date was carved on the log mantelpiece, set in the stone chimney, over the fireplace. The section containing the date is now owned by the Lehigh County Historical Society, to which it was presented by Mr. Keiper. Henry Ritter warranted this land, amounting to 170 acres, on March 16, 1737, 74 acres of the tract lying in the present Lehigh county and 96 acres in Bucks county. In 1749 Laurence Erbach became the owner and deeded it in 1785 to his only son, Jacob Erbach. Henry Ritter, who removed to Salisbury township, was the ancestor of the Ritter family of that township.

OLD TAVERNS.—Besides the hotels described in the several villages, two old taverns are worthy of mention:

Walber's Tavern was situated near Kraussdale, in Lower Milford, on the "King's Highway," and about two miles southeast from Hosensack. It was probably established by Nicholas Walber as early as 1735, and was the first in Lehigh county. The land was first settled by Walber in 1734. James Steel had purchased from the heirs of William Markham in 1729, 276 acres in Upper Milford; which was sold in 1734 to Walber. After carrying on the tavern for seventeen years he sold it with other buildings and 104 acres to John and Daniel Stauffer, and then it was abandoned. It was then said that one day a peddler came to the tavern and requested lodging which was refused. The following day his dead body was found in a neighboring swamp. After that night, frequent mysterious noises were heard in the old tavern which led to its abandonment.

Larosch's Tavern was situated in Lower Milford township, just across the line of Upper Milford, on the "King's Highway," about a mile southeast from old Zionsville. Henry Lerosch secured a license in 1786 to keep a public place and he conducted it until his decease in 1800, when his son, Henry, became the owner, who carried it on several years. Martin Kemmerer was the landlord from 1815 to 1845, and his son, Solomon, to 1863, when it was discontinued.

When Upper Milford township came to be divided in 1853, the first election for township officers was held at this tavern on March 13th.

POST-OFFICES.—The following post-offices were established in Lower Milford:

Stahler's, Dec. 10, 1825, discontinued Aug. 28, 1849.

Dillingersville was substituted Aug. 28, 1851, and this was discontinued Aug. 15, 1906.

Hosensack, Aug. 29, 1849.

Limeport, April 17, 1867.

Corning, June 4, 1883.

Plover, March 6, 1890; discontinued Feb. 28, 1905.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following officials served this office in the township since 1853:

Samuel Stauffer, 1853-68.	Michael H. Albright, 1860-73.
Charles Mangold, 1873-83.	Aaron H. Wagner, 1873-90.
Henry E. E. Roeder, 1868-73.	Emanuel J. Wieder, 1890-1902.
Willoughby Gabel, 1883-1919.	Joseph A. Brunner, 1902-19.
	1853-60.

ASSESSOR.—Edward Reinhard, of Dillingersville, was the township assessor for 30 years until his death in 1908. His record was kept in superior order and he was highly complimented for its accuracy and legibility.

CHURCHES.—The following churches and congregation have been organized and carried on in Lower Milford township:

Great Swamp.	Hosensack Schwenk-
Upper Milford Lu-	felder.
theran.	Grace United Evan-
Chestnut Hill.	gelistical.

Great Swamp Church.—The congregation of this church is believed to have been organized previous to 1730, and that at that early date the first log church had been built. The congregation, with old and new Goschenhoppen congregations, formed one charge, and the records of the three congregations prior to 1736 are found in one volume, the oldest congregational record of the Reformed Church. The entries began in the year 1731, and on April 24, 1736, the record book of the Great-Swamp congregation was opened by Rev. Goetschius, in which are entries of baptisms, marriages and deaths. Rev. John Philip Boehm mentions the congregation in 1734 in a letter to the Holland Synod. Rev. Geo. M. Weiss, who administered the first communion to the congregation at New Goschenhoppen as early as 1727, was the first pastor of the congregation. He arrived in America in the first ship whose passengers were recorded by the authorities at Philadelphia, on Nov. 18, 1727, with Frederick Hillegas and Alexander Diefenderfer, who settled in the vicinity. Rev. Peter Miller was the pastor from 1731 to 1734. Rev. John Henry Goetschius, the boy preacher, served as pastor from 1735 to 1740. Rev. Peter Henry Dorsius served as supply from 1741 to 1744 and from 1745 to 1748. Rev. Frederick Casimer Miller was pastor, succeeded by Rev. George Michael Weiss, who was pastor from 1748 to 1761. Rev. John Rudolph Kitweiler, called the "Swiss minister," was pastor from 1763 until his death, Oct. 2, 1764, aged 47 years and 9 months. His tombstone, almost obliterated, stands in the old Great-Swamp graveyard. In 1747 the delegates to the Reformed Synod from this congregation were John Huber and Nicholas Mombauer. Rev. Weiss made, in 1758, a list of the male members of the congregation, who were 45 in number. Their names were:

- | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------------|
| Franz Rus. | Jacob Huber. |
| Ulrich Rieser. | Rudy Huber (der Wag- |
| Ludwig Bitting. | ner). |
| Alexander Diefendörfer. | Huber, the tailor, son-in- |
| Peter Linn. | law of Hitz. |
| Jacob Schmidt. | Rudy Frick. |
| Christian Miller. | Abraham Ditloh. |
| Jacob Miller. | — Ditloh, Jr. |
| Jacob Dubs. | J. Nicholas Mombauer. |
| Jacob Wetzel. | Paul Samsel. |
| Jacob Kehler. | John Adam Millauer. |
| Jacob Wetzel, Jr. | Johannes Huber. |
| Felix Brunner. | Johannes Huber, Jr. |
| John Reiswick. | Philip Boehm (der |
| Joseph Eberhard. | Schlosser). |
| Michael Eberhard. | Valentine Kaiser. |
| Michael Eberhard, Jr. | Daniel Hucken. |
| Ulrich Spinner. | Huber, brother of the |
| John Bleyler. | tailor. |
| Heinrich Bleyler. | A weaver living with |
| Philip Heger. | Ditloh. |
| Daniel Hitz. | George Weiss. |
| J. Huber. | — Kunius. |
| Abraham Faust. | David Streib. |
| Heinrich Huber. | Andres Greber. |

Of these early members of the congregation, Joseph Eberhard and Alexander Diefenderfer arrived in this country in 1727. Eberhard died in 1760 and Diefenderfer in 1768. Frantz Rus, Ulrich Reaser and Jacob Dubs came in 1732. Reaser was born in 1709 and died in 1784. Jacob Dubs was born in Switzerland in 1710 and died about 1772. Peter Linn arrived in 1737, and married a daughter of Felix Brunner, who came in 1732. Michael Eberhard, who came with Joseph, in 1727, lived over the line in Bucks county. He was born in 1698 and died in 1772. Ulrich Spinner, born in Switzerland in 1717, died in 1769. He was the father of David Spinner, the famous potter, specimens of whose sgraffito earthenware are highly prized. John Bleyler, who lived in Bucks county, died in 1759. Daniel Hitz, of Switzerland, was born in 1699 and died in 1785. Henry Grob married his daughter, Adelheit Hitz. She died in 1764 and Grob married the widow of Rev. Kitweiler. Henry Grob died in 1768. Henry Huber was born in 1715 and died in 1778. Rudolph Huber was born in 1722 and died in 1779. Abraham Ditlow was born in 1731 and died in 1808. Nicholas Mombauer was born in 1720 and died in 1815, aged 94 years.

In 1766 a man named Jacob Ries, a shoemaker, acted as pastor for a time, but was dismissed the same year. Rev. Philip Jacob Michael and Rev. John Philip Leydig supplied the congregation until November, when Rev. John Theobald Faber, a new arrival, became the pastor and in 1768 reported thirty families in the congregation. In 1771 the number of families was forty. Rev. Casper Wack officiated as pastor in 1780 and 1781, after Faber removed to Lancaster county, Rev. Frederick Daelliker became pastor in 1781 and served until 1784. In 1783 he reported 37 families in the congregation and 31 scholars in the school and that he had baptized 12 and confirmed 26 persons. Rev. Frederick William vander Sloot served as pastor in 1784 and 1785, until Rev. John Theobald Faber began his second pastorate in the latter year and served until his death, Nov. 2, 1788, which occurred suddenly, he having been stricken with illness while in the pulpit. He was buried under the altar.

The property of the congregation, on the road leading from Dillingersville to Spinnerstown, a short distance from the county line between Lehigh and Bucks counties, was surveyed for the congregation in 1738. The patent for the land, issued in 1762, reads as follows:

"Thomas Penn and Richard Penn, Esquires, true and absolute Proprietors and Governors in Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania and Counties of Newcastle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware, To all unto whom these Presents shall come, Greeting: Whereas in pursuance of Warrants under the seal of our Land Office, dated the twenty-third day of May, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-eight, there was surveyed on the twenty-seventh day of September, following, unto Michael and Joseph Eberhart, a certain Tract of Land situate in Upper Milford Township, formerly in the County of Bucks, now Northampton, Beginning at a marked white oak, a corner of the said Michael and Joseph Eberhart's Lands thence by Land of Bartle Hornberier South-West one hundred and thirty perches to a post, Thence by Land of Lawrence Erb North-West one hundred and forty-eight perches to a post, thence by Land of Felix Brunner North-West one hundred and thirty perches to a stone in a line of the said Joseph Eberhard's Land, thence by the same South-East one hundred and forty-eight perches to the place of Beginning, containing one hundred and thirteen acres and seventy perches and the usual allowance of Six Acres per cent. for Roads and Highways, as in and by the said Warrant and Survey remaining in the Surveyor General's Office and from thence certified into our Secretary's Office more fully appears, And Whereas the said Warrant was granted and the said Tract surveyed thereon at the instance and request and by the direction and at the proper cost and charges of the Minister, Elders and Congregation of the reformed Calvinist Society settled in Upper Milford aforesaid and adjacent Township of Lower Milford, who have now humbly besought us to grant unto the said Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard, the son of the said first Joseph Eberhard, who is since lately deceased, in Fee the said described Tract of Land. In Trust for the Minister, Elders and Congregation for the time being of the said reformed Calvinist Society and their Successors settled and to be settled from time to time in the said Two Several Townships of Upper and Lower Milford the said Congregation having now erected on the said Tract a Church and School House for the use of them and their Successors. And we favoring their request. Now know ye that for and in consideration of the sum of seventeen pounds eleven shillings and seven pence lawful money of Pennsylvania to our use paid being the money of the said Congregation by the said Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard, their heirs and assigns, the Receipt whereof we hereby acknowledge and thereof do acquit and forever discharge the Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard their heirs and assigns by these Presents, and of the yearly Quit Rent hereinafter mentioned and reserved. WE HAVE given, granted, released and confirmed, and by these Presents for us, our Heirs and Successors do give, grant, release and confirm unto the said Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard, their Heirs and Assigns the said one hundred and thirteen acres and seventeen perches of Land as the same are now set forth, bounded and limited as aforesaid. With all Mines Minerals Quarries Meadows Marshes Savannas Swamps Cripples Woods Underwoods Timber and Trees Ways Waters Water Courses Liberties Profits Commodities Advantages Hereditaments and Appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining and lying within the bounds and limits aforesaid. Three full and clear fifth parts of all Royal Mines free from all deductions and Reprisals for digging and refining the same and also one-fifth part of the ore of all others mines delivered at the pittsmouth only expected and hereby reserved and also free leave right and liberty to and for the said Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard, their Heirs and Assigns to Hawk Hunt Fish and Shoot in and upon the hereby granted Land and Premises or upon any part thereof. To have and to hold the said one hundred and thirteen Acres and Seventy Perches of Land and Premises hereby granted (Except as before excepted) with their appurtenances unto the said Michael Eberhard and Joseph Eberhard their Heirs and Assigns forever. IN TRUST nevertheless and for the use of the Minister Elders and Congregation for the time being of the said reformed Calvinist Society and their Successors settled and to be settled from time to time in the said two several Townships of Upper and Lower Milford and to and for no other use or purpose whatsoever To be Holden of us our Heirs and Successors. Proprietaries of Pennsylvania as of our Manor of Tamor in the County of Northampton aforesaid in free and common Socage by Fealty only in lieu of all other services. YIELDING AND PAYING thereof yearly unto our HEIRS and SUCCESSORS at the Town of Easton in the County aforesaid at or upon the first day of March in every year from the first day of March last one-half Penny sterling for every Acre of the same or value thereof in coin current according as the exchange shall then be between our said Province and the City of London to such person or Persons as shall from time to time be appointed to receive the same and in case of non-payment thereof within ninety days next after the same shall become due then it shall and may be lawful for us our Heirs and Successors our and their receiver or receivers unto and upon hereby granted Land and Premises to Re-enter and the same to hold Possess until the said quit rent and all arrears thereof together with the charges accruing by means of such non-payment of Re-entry be fully paid and discharged. Witness: James Hamilton, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, who by virtue of certain powers and authorities to him for this purpose (inter Alia) granted by the said Proprietaries hath hereunto set his Hand and caused the Great Seal of the said Province to be hereunto affixed at Philadelphia this sixteenth day of December, in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and sixty-two, the third Year of the Reign of King George the Third over Great Britain."

The following amusing incident is related to show the manner in which the Reformed congregation came to be first in securing the above title:

"It has ever been declared that the congregation had existed as a union of Reformed and Lutheran members, down to 1762. Some Lutheran names occur in the original enrollment. The anecdote, by which the whole tract came into the sole possession of the Reformed body, is still related as a fact. We record the transaction in brief. It is said that the two organizations appointed two men to attend to the patenting of the land, in trust for both, Elder Sheets of the Lutheran and Elder Eberhard of the Reformed. The former, instead of accompanying the latter, that both might transact their duty in common and to the mutual benefit of both congregations, hurried on ahead. Elder Eberhard, hearing of their over-much haste, proceeded 'by express' to Philadelphia, and entered the Land Office, in advance of Elder Sheets, and succeeded in securing a title for the Reformed Congregation exclusively, whilst his colleague, who reached the city first, had leisurely indulged in a glass of wine at the hotel. After they met on the steps of the Land Office, Elder Sheets intending to transact the business, and Elder Eberhard having already attended to it, both were surprised, the one sadly, the other gladly. After a few moments of awkward silence, followed by a short parleying, they returned to the hotel to explain. It resulted in the following dialogue:

Eberhard—Neighbor Sheets, do you know the difference between the Lutherans and Reformed?

Sheets—Well, they vary in the Lord's Prayer, the former using "Vater Unser," usually, whilst the latter "Unser Vater." Besides, they differ in their several views on the Lord's Supper.

Eberhard.—There is still another difference, is there not?

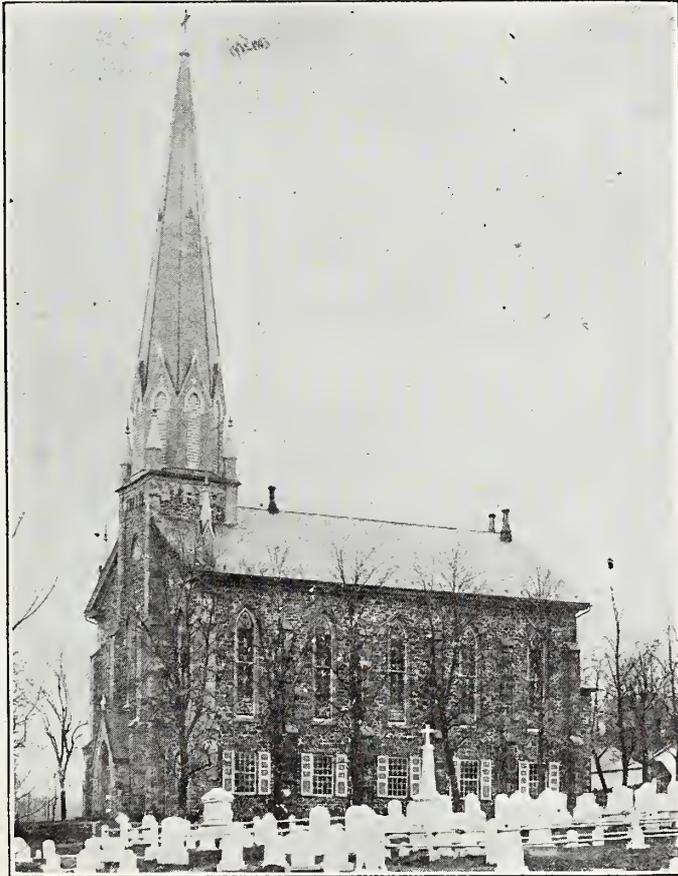

Sheets—I am not aware of any other difference; what may it be?

Eberhard—I will tell you: The Reformed first attend to duty, and then indulge in wine, whilst the Lutherans first sip their wine and then attend to duty.

No other explanation was needed. And as both elders indulged in a glass or two of good wine, they started on their home-road in good fellowship.

The fourth and present church was built in 1872-73, and the cost was $30,000. It is a superior stone edifice with a steeple 165 feet high and presents a most attractive appearance. The building committee was Isaac Fluck, Aaron Dubs, Samuel Wieandt, Daniel Eberhardt and Reuben Mumbauer.

The congregation was incorporated in 1856, the application having been signed by the pastor, Rev. Daniel Weiser; the elders, Samuel Wieandt and Isaac Fluck; and the deacons, Charles Wieandt, Aaron Kemmerer and William Derr.

GREAT SWAMP REFORMED CHURCH.

The Lutherans then withdrew apart and built a church on a spot which elder Sheets donated for that purpose."

The old log church was sold to George Stahl of Hosensack Valley in 1772, and a stone church was erected near the same site.

The third church was built in 1837, and this was reported to have cost only $1,800 in money, the stone and timber having been taken from the land owned by the congregation.

In 1902-03 the church was re-modeled and greatly improved at a cost of $4,000. The galleries were removed from the two sides; the organ was re-constructed and located on the south side of the pulpit; a metal ceiling was put in; the walls were frescoed and wood-work painted; fine stained windows were introduced; a steam heating plant installed; the stone-walls were re-pointed and the exterior wood-work re-painted. The dedication was held June 7, 1903.

The membership in 1913 was 450.

The following pastors have served the congregation:

George Michael Weiss,	Frederick Wilhelm Van-
1730-31.	der Slott, Sr., 1784-85.
Peter Miller,	John Theobald Faber,
1731-34.	Sr., 1785-88.
John Heinrich Goets-	Nicolaus Pomp, 1789-91.
chius,	John Theobald Faber,
1735-40.	Jr., 1791-1807.
Peter Henry Dorsius,	J. Albert C. Heffenstein,
1741-44.	1808-11.
Frederick Casimir Mil-	Frederick William Van
ler,	Der Slott, Jr., 1812-18.
1745-48.	John Theobald Pater,
George Michael Weiss,	Jr., 1818-33.
1748-61.	Daniel Weiser, 1833-03.
John Rudolph Kitweil-	Clement Z. Weiser,
er,	1863-93.
1763-64.	Thomas H. Leinbach,
Philip Jacob Michael,	1894-1904.
1766.	James O. Oswald,
John Philip Leydich,	1904-10.
1766.	Thomas H. Bachman,
John Theobald Faber,	1911- .
1766-80.
Caspar Wack, 1780-81.
Frederick Daelliker,
1781-84.

A Sunday school was organized by the pastor, Rev. Daniel Weiser in 1840. When the week-day schools came to be separated from the church, after the passage of the common-school law in 1834, he started a movement in this behalf, but this met with such bitter opposition that the worthy pastor was accused of "selling his religious influences to the Pope at Rome and Methodism, and of joining Jesuitism and Stravelerei," and these schools were called "Kaelver Schule" (schools for calves).

The pastor, under the circumstances, started with only a small number of pupils, not exceeding twenty-five, but this was no discouragement to him. He persevered and each succeeding Sunday witnessed an increased attendance and a stronger public support, showing that the prejudice was unfounded and the opposition was subsiding.

A semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the Sunday-school was held Aug. 4, 1890 in the grove near the church and it was attended by a large concourse of people. The membership of the school at that time was 350. The receipts during the 50 years, $3,500; which were expended as follows: for school purposes, $2,700; for the Womelsdorf Orphans' Home, $725; and for missions in China, $75.

The membership in 1913 was 252, the reduction having been caused by death and removal to surrounding factory towns, and Allentown and Philadelphia.

Upper Milford Lutheran Church.—This congregation was organized about 1734 and secured a tract of land containing nearly 30 acres in the township (now Lower Milford) near Dillingersville on which they erected a log building, supposed to have been the first in Lehigh county, for religious services. The first members were:

Theobald Mechlin.	Andreas Eckhart.
Henry William Dillinger.	Henry Ritter.
Martin Weitknecht.	Heinrich Riesz.
Michael Moser.	Christopher Andreas Guthman.
Peter Wentz.	Leonhart Lutz.
Henry Post.

From 1745 to 1748 the old Lutheran patriarch, Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, was in charge of the church. He was living in Providence township, then in Philadelphia county. From 1748 to 1749 the congregation was served occasionally by the school teachers, John Jacob Loeser and John Friederich Viger, from 1749 to 1753 by Ludolph Henry Schrencke, who came March, 1749, from Luneberg, in Germany, to Philadelphia, and was ordered by Muhlenberg to this church, and had the Upper Milford and Saucon congregations in charge until the year 1753.

A church record was begun in 1749, which shows the following members:

Johann Jacob Kurr.	Johann Adam Roth.
Peter Schilp.	Johann Michael Bastian.
Michael Schmidt.	Mathias Bastian.
Friederich Kammerer.	Johannes Dorr.
John George Dillinger.	Johannes Wagenseil.
Jacob Dillinger.	Michael Rieb.
Hans Dillinger.	Johann Martin Schwenck.
Johann Jacob Mechlin.	George Schweighardt.
Johann Peter Mechlin.	Jacob Busch.
Michael Flores.	Johann Mathias Muller.
Nicolaus Stahler.	Balthasar Vetterman.
Paul Ritter.	Martin Schaffer.
Martin Ritter.	Peter Huttel (Hittel).
Peter Greulig.	Peter Trautman.
Johann George Bassel.	Jost Olewein.
William Hendle.	Balthasar Gotz.
Johann George Miller.	Johann Michael Mattinger.
Mathias Ox.	Jacob Schantz.
Johann Michael Guthman.	George Walder.
Johann Peter Kohler.	Ludwig Siefers.
Friederich Nungesser.	Michael Reichenbach.
Philip Stephen Boppemeyer.	Peter Edelman.
George Klein.	Adam Reinhard.
Thomas Kurr.	Christian Metzger.
Isaac Leopold Dolp.	Peter Lange.
Johann Adam Trump.	Conrad Zeller.
Johann David Streib.	Johannes Junt.
Gabriel Kohler.	Friederich Keiser.

In 1757 a difference arose in the congregation and many members left it, going to the congregation at Zionsville. Those remaining supported the church until 1791 when it was discontinued.

The following pastors served the congregation:

Henry M. Muhlenberg,	John A. Friederichs,
1745-48.	1754-63.
Ludolph H. Schrenke,	Christian Espich,
1749-53.	1789-91.

The building was occupied as a school by children of Lutheran members until 1799; then it was torn down, and a new stone school house, with dwelling compartments was erected in its place. An organization was then formed by members of different denominations, Lutheran, Reformed, Mennonite and Schwenkfelder, and rules for its occupancy were adopted by them.

The old graveyard of the church is 80 feet square, situated along the public road adjoining the dwelling-house on the premises. The stone wall along the road is still standing; the fences along the other three sides are in poor repair; and the ground has a much neglected appearance. The graveyard is supposed to have been wholly taken up with graves. Only three headstones with legible inscriptions are standing. Two of them relate to Dillinger and his wife, which are as follows (the third relating to his wife and child):

Jacob Dillinger, Died Dec. 5, 1803. Aged 71 years.	Anna Maria Dillinger, second wife of John Jacob Dillinger, Died May 27, 1815. Aged 61 yrs, 9 mos.
--	---

The agreement and rules were signed Feb. 21, 1799, by the following persons who represented that community in this most interesting local proceeding relating to the public welfare through education:

Michael Flores.	John Stahl.
John Dillinger, Jr.	Philip Walter.
Abraham Schantz.	Henry Meyer.
Christian Schantz.	Heinrich Larosz.
John Dillinger.	Heinrich Stahler.
George Schuler.	Abraham Histan.
Jacob Schantz.	John Mechling.
Bernhard Lautenschlag-	Conrad Zellner.
er.	Hanner Weigel.
Hannes Rentel.	Christian Zellner.

This instrument was acknowledged before Daniel Stahler, justice of the peace; and the following persons were elected to carry out its provisions:

Trustees and Building Committee.—Michael Flores, John Dillinger.

Collectors.—Abraham Schantz, Philip Walter.
Treasurer.—John George Schuler.

In 1809 a log barn was built near the stone house, but this removed in 1844 and a stone Sweitzer barn was erected in its place.

In 1845 (Jan. 18) another agreement, with regulations, was adopted and signed, also acknowledged, and afterward (Jan. 22, 1845) recorded in the Recorder's office.

In 1848 a new stone school-house was erected on the road towards Dillingersville, about 100 yards north of the building erected in 1799. This was rented by the school-board and occupied until 1885, when a new brick building was erected in its place by the association farther north at the angle in the road; and this is still occupied by the township directors for which they pay rent to the association.

In January, 1867, the association was incorporated by the Court under the name of the "Union School and Church Association."

In 1870 an Act of Assembly was passed authorizing the association to sell 27 a. 97 ps. of the 30 acres at public sale and appropriate the proceeds as provided by the agreement with an appropriation of at least $100 annually out of the income to maintain a free "Summer-School," and the property was sold to John R. Bitting for $4,050.

[For full proceedings see "Sketches of Lehigh Valley," pp. 194-203.]

The following early teachers taught in the old union school building. The years indicate the total terms taught by them:

John N. Bitting, 38 years (1865-1903).
Calvin Davidson, 30 years.
Michael Weidner, 30 years.
Benneville X. Schell, 30 years.
W. S. Erney, 30 years.
Joseph A. Brunner, Esq., 15 years.
Emanuel Bitting.

Chestnut-Hill Church is situated on Chestnut Hill in Lower Milford. The first church at this place was erected by a Reformed congregation. The year in which the original congregation was organized is not known. By an old deed, dated March 3, 1757, it appears that the ground, about one acre, was sold by Andreas Engelman to the congregation for the consideration of ten shillings. The following members are mentioned in the deed:

George Stahlnecker.	Peter Kurtz.
Jost Olewein.	Jacob Hoover.
Jacob Smith.	John Goodwalts.
Martin Schwenck.	John Shoemaker.
Jacob Bitthaus.	Christian Miller.
Christofel Heller.	Peter Schlosser.
George Welder.	Peter Lang.
Nicholaus France.	Andreas Engelman.

Attested by Susanna Margaretha Gebhard and Thomas O. Wentz.

An old record-book is in the possession of the congregation. It was begun in June, 1773, and closed in December, 1787, and this shows the names of the parents, baptized children, and sponsors.

In 1818 (Febry. 14), a part of the gallery broke down during the services at a funeral of Abraham Hendrick but without any serious accident. This was the last service held in this church.

In 1820 the old log church was removed and the materials were used in the construction of a log and stone school-house on the same site, and here school was conducted but no regular church services, only funeral service and occasional preaching for the next 30 years, during which the congregation held services in the Great-Swamp Church.

The last school was carried on in this building by the school directors during the year 1844-45, when the common-school law was accepted, and Zacharias Wagner was the teacher. Then a new school-house was erected by them half a mile distant.

In 1850 the Reformed congregation was joined by a Lutheran congregation and they together erected a stone "Union Church" with the assistance of certain Mennonite members in the place of the school house. The building committee was as follows:

Reformed—Peter Engelman.

Lutheran—Anthony Schiffert, Willoughby Gabel.

Mennonite—Henry Meyer (but no congregation organized).

Treasurer—Samuel Rothenberger.

The cost in cash expended was $1,600. The dedication took place in October.

In 1888, a new two-story brick church was erected with a steeple 140 feet high, costing $8,000, and this has been maintained until the present time. It was re-painted and re-carpeted in 1911 at a cost of $400, and a steam-heating plant was installed at a cost of $1,000.

The membership of the Reformed denomination in 1913, was 74; of the Lutheran, 90.

The following pastors served the Reformed congregation till 1787; afterward there was no regular pastor for upwards of 60 years:

Casper Wack.

Frederick Dellicker, 1782-83.

Frederick Wilhelm, 1784-86.

Rev. Jacob W. Dechant preached after 1811.

The following preached since 1850:

Reformed.	Lutheran.
John B. Poerner, 1850-55.	W. B. Kemmerer.
John S. Keszler, 1856-63.	S. K. Brobst.
Henry S. Baszler,	Ferd'd Berkemeyer.
1864-70.	Edward H. M. Sell.
A. F. Ziegler, 1871.	Leonard Groh.
F. J. Mohr, 1871-83.	R. Kistler.
Robert C. Weaver,	F. Welden.
1884-93.	Joseph Hilpot.
Thomas H. Leinbach,	A. R. Horne, 1874-86.
1894-1904.	Milton J. Kramlich,
James O. Oswald,	1886-92.
1904-10.	Daniel K. Humbert,
Thomas H. Bachman,	1892-94.
1911- .	Irvin B. Ritter, 1894-97.
	David C. Kauffman,
	1897- .

About 1850, John Eberhard, a member of the Great-Swamp Reformed congregation, who resided near the Chestnut-Hill church, organized a Sunday-school there and acted as superintendent for a number of years. It has been carried on until now. The membership in 1913 was 117.

Hosensack Schwenkfelder Church.—A number of Schwenkfelders left their homes in Silesia from 1734 to 1737 and emigrated to Pennsylvania, settling in Upper (Lower) Milford, in the vicinity of Kraussdale and Hosensack, where they organized a congregation shortly after, fixing their habitations. The first members were:

Abraham Kriebel.	Casper Yeakel.
Jeremias Yeakel.	Jacob Seibert.
Baltzer Yeakel.	Baltzer Schultz.
Melchior Yeakel.	Jeremias Krauss.

These and other members with their families carried on religious devotions at different homes for upwards of forty years, until they secured land from George Yeakel and erected a meeting-house in 1781. A school for secular education was encouraged by them in connection with religious instruction.

Schwenkfelder Church is situated along the county line at Kraussdale, in Lower Milford, on land donated by Baltzer Krauss, Jr., previous to 1805 for religious and school purposes. A congregation was then organized; and a church erected in 1815. The members at that time were:

Johannes Krauss.	David Yeakel.
Andreas Krauss.	Carl Yeakel.
George Krauss.	Christopher Neuman.
Jacob Kriebel.	Jacob Gerhard.
George Schultz.	Jeremias Meschter.
Samuel Schultz.	Christopher Yeakel.

A new brick edifice was erected in 1857. The names of the pastors were:

George Kriebel.	William Schultz.
John Schultz.	Joshua Schultz.
Christopher Schultz.	Jacob Meschter.

A Sunday school was started at the same time; also a week-day school in which the German, Latin and Greek languages were favorite studies, and this was continued until 1840.

For years, the church at Kraussdale celebrated the 24th day of September as "Memorial Day," when the Schwenkfelders first landed at Philadelphia, and on this occasion they served a lunch consisting of bread, butter and apple-butter, to all members and visitors who participated in the celebration; and on this account it was called by some as "Apple-Butter Day."

It has been said that no other denomination has been so faithful in celebrating their deliverance from religious persecution and in showing honor to their leader.

Grace U. E. Church.—In 1897, Daniel Yeakel built a church, one-story frame edifice, at the outlet of the Powder Valley into the Hosensack for the United Evangelical congregation which was organized of members in that vicinity by J. H. Bohner, of East Greenville, and religious services have been held there since. The members number 80.

SCHOOLS.—The school board of the township for 1853-54, was constituted as follows: Aaron Dubbs and William C. Roeder, one year; Daniel S. Yeakel and Abraham Pearson, two years; Samuel Stauffer and Samuel Hottel, three years. Aaron Dubbs was chosen president; William C. Roeder, treasurer; and Samuel Stauffer, secretary.

The township had nine sub-districts: Dillingersville, Krauss', Klein's, Carl's, Johnson's, Dietz's, Dub's, Eberhard's, Schantz's. The teachers were employed for 4½ months at a salary of $18.

In the year 1882, the schools were 10; the term, 5 months; and the salary to teachers, $30.

The following directors, and teachers served the township in 1913-14:

Directors.

- Pres., Sylvester T. Miller.
- Sec., Victor Cressman.
- Treas., Allen Krauss.
- James M. Heimbach.
- Eugene C. Smith.

Teachers.

Name.	School.
Ada N. Derr,	Schantz's.
Edith M. Henry,	Limeport.
Calvin Davidson,	Engleman.
Raymond Schaffer,	Dietz's.
Mark Bergenstock,	Corning.
Claude O. Peters,	Hosensack.
Hattie L. Snyder,	Dillingers.
Mabel D. Erney,	Wieders.
Elva Hagen,	Eberhard's.
Winnie Seip,	Dubb's.
Howard Linsenbigler,	Kraussdale.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

LYNN TOWNSHIP.

[SUPPLIED BY HON. JAMES A. MILLER, STATE SENATOR OF LEHIGH COUNTY.]

ERECTION.—A region of territory which lay in this section of the country and in the adjoining township of Albany, Berks county, was, from the earliest settlement, designated as "Alle-mangel," and in judicial proceedings also called "back parts of Macungie, or "Heidelberg Dis-trict."

On March 11, 1752, the county of North-ampton was established out of part of Bucks county, and it then included the region men-tioned which extended to the Blue Mountains. In June of that year, the district of Heidelberg was erected in this region; and in October following, a petition was presented to the Court at Easton asking for a new district to be formed out of the western part of Heidelberg. View-ers were appointed who laid out the territory and made their report in June, 1753, when it was confirmed. The endorsement on the peti-tion was as follows:

"The petition of sundry inhabitants lying under the Blue Mountains between Heidelberg and the County line to be laid out into a township, was al-lowed, and Edward or Nicholas Scull is appointed surveyor, to be employed to survey and make re-turn of the same;" and the report stated "that there was laid out a certain tract of land, beginning at a post at a corner of Heidelberg township, and from thence extending by the same N 20° W 1280 perches and by vacant land 290 perches to ye Blue Moun-tains, thence along the mountains S 65° W, 518 ps., S 30° W, 60 ps., S 50° W, 302 ps, and S 67° W, 1578 ps, to the County line; thence by the same line S 45° E, 2200 ps to a stone in said line; thence by Weissenburg township N 45° E, 1640 ps. to the place of beginning, containing about 20,000 acres; which said tract of land is laid out and included for a township called Linn township."

The superficial area in the above Report of Viewers is given as about 20,000 acres; but, judging from the measurements returned, this area cannot be correct; it should have been given as about 25,640 acres, or 40 square miles, as pub-lished on page 16, in the Historical Atlas of Le-high County, issued in 1876.

The name of the township is supposed to have been given in honor of Jacob Lynn, one of the first settlers of the district who. resided at the base of the Blue mountains near the eastern line.

In September, 1753, Charles Folk was ap-pointed first constable of the new township; on Sept. 16, 1755, George Briner was appointed to the same office.

LAND WARRANTS.—Many persons had set-tled within the boundaries of the district de-scribed and returned before warrants were taken out for the land. The following names have been given as found on the records, including the date and number of acres:

	Acres.
Valentine Baronthiesel, March 6, 1741,	156
Michael John Bomgardner, Feb. 15, 1743,	109
Valentine Baronthiesel, Oct. 16, 1750,	54
Henry Brenigh, Jan. 10, 1753,	64
Peter Beisel, Sept. 3, 1754,	25
Jacob Billman, Sept. 4, 1772,	40
Martin Brobst, Jan. 7, 1790,	84
Michael Buck, Nov. 14, 1765,	64
Peter Bulldoff (Baldauf), Sept. 24, 1766,	43
Jacob Billman, Dec. 27, 1766,	50
Jacob Barr, Nov. 4, 1767,	121
Peter Beisel, Aug. 24, 1768,	36
Henry Bredich, April 6, 1769,	97
Adam Clause, April 3, 1767,	136
Adam Creites (Adam Creitz), Dec. 19, 1768,	154
Gottlieb Demut (Gottlieb Donat), Aug. 24, 1753,	95
John Everitt, May 4, 1759,	56
George Enos, May 30, 1785,	42
Philip Enos, April 12, 1768,	25
Philip Eberth, May 4, 1768,	44
Thomas Everitt, March 18, 1769,	36
Gabriel Foagher, Oct. 25, 1748,	63
John Flugh, Dec. 12, 1749,	53
Samuel Frees, Oct. 22, 1752,	60
Daniel Hiestler, April 25, 1744,	112
George Harmony, March 6, 1749,	50
Zachariah Heller, May 11, 1769,	223
Christian Henry, June 22, 1769,	78
Abraham Kerper, Jan. 24, 1743,	200
Abraham Kerper, Oct. 30, 1744,	21
Henry Kuntzman, Sept. 2, 1749,	160
Henry Kuntzman, July 19, 1754,	79
Jacob Kistler, April 30, 1866,	126
John Kistler, May 21, 1766,	42
Henry King, June 14, 1769,	146
Evan Long, Feb. 8, 1744,	348
Jacob Leesser, Oct. 14, 1749,	115
Peter Lutz, Sept. 13, 1765,	59
Michael Miller, Aug. 11, 1747,	63
Simon Moser, Dec. 22, 1748,	203
Christian Miller, April 20, 1749,	31
Christian Miller, March 23, 1750,	72
Frederick Michael, Aug. 4, 1750,	70
Adam Miller, Aug. 5, 1752,	149
Michael Moser, June 8, 1754,	54
Simon Moser, Nov. 19, 1766,	33
Jacob Muntz (Moutz), Dec. 10, 1766,	48
Jacob Muntz, (Moutz), Dec. 10, 1766,	39
Conrad Muntz (Moutz), Dec. 10, 1766,	49
Christian Miller, April 7, 1767,	105
Larance Miller, Oct. 19, 1767,	44
George Nongesser, April 1, 1747,	53
George Neiss (or Neirs), Dec. 19, 1751,	75
John Neart, Feb. 8, 1769,	56
George Oswald, June 9, 1752,	199
Daniel Oswald, April 27, 1768,	75
Daniel Qswald, May 11, 1769,	142
David Pillman, Oct. 4, 1738,	200
Adam Potts, March 13, 1745,	79
Michael Poke, May 11, 1748,	124

Henry Pedneek, May 3, 1749,	115
Godfried Peatzle, April 30, 1767,	131
Mathias Rhoads, April 15, 1740,	204
Baltzer Redenhower, Nov. 29, 1748,	124
Henry Rubrecht, Nov. 12, 1768,	70
Job Sickfried, Feb. 24, 1737,	300
Charles Stroub, Sept. 5, 1748,	293
Henry Sunday, March 6, 1750,	130
Andrew Seachler (Sechler), May 30, 1785,	40
Nicholas Smith, Sept. 30, 1765,	107
Jacob Snyder, Oct. 11, 1765,	112
Melchoir Geer, Nov. 12, 1766,	109
Gabriel Vogel, June 8, 1754,	37
Sebastian Verner, Sept. 8, 1758,	125
Martin Wydsell, Sept. 29, 1741,	168
Philip Wertman, Dec. 15, 1749,	197
Philip Wertman, Aug. 8, 1750,	123
Henry Wetherstine (called Winderstein), Nov. 12, 1773,
George Witzell, Dec. 28, 1767,
Henry Weiderstine (called Wintherstein), Feb. 1, 1768,
Michael Wertman, April 27, 1768,
Baltzer Yeager, Nov. 4, 1752,
George Huns Zimmerman, Aug. 2, 1751,

John Moyer, Jr.	John Smith.
Daniel Moyer.	Mathias Schitz.
Peter Notstein.	Daniel Straub.
Daniel Oswald.	Charles Straub.
Jacob Oswald.	Andrew Straub.
Anthony Opp.	Philip Sittler.
Philip Puhl.	Ehrhard Seisloff.
Margereth Pugh.	Henry Snyder.
Matthias Probst (Matthias).	Widow of Stambach.
George Probst.	Frederick Souder.
Martin Probst.	Adam Stahler.
Philip Probst.	Abraham Shellhamer.
Peter Rerdenower.	Philip Shellhamer.
Jacob Rex.	Bernard Snyder.
Jacob Reegle.	Henry Snyder.
Henry Ruprecht.	Daniel Snyder.
Henry Riehes.	Samuel Everett.
Daniel Reiss.	Daniel Stambach.
Henry Steigerwalt.	Christian Shuman.
George Sausley.	Philip Shock.
John Swatz.	Jacob Steitly.
Peter Sheefly.	Jacob Wertman.
Michael Stein.	Martin Wertman.
Stoffle Sunday.	Michael Wertman.
Charles Shuck.	Widow Weitzel.
Widow of John Stein.	John Weiss.
Frederick Sechler.	Jacob Wannamacher.
George Shuck.	Jacob Wannamacher, Jr.
Martin Shuck.	Philip Wannamacher.
George Snyder.	Caspar Wannamacher.
Michael Shickly.	John Weisser.
Andrew Sechler.	William Yett.

TAXABLES OF 1781.—The following names were taken from the assessment of the township as made by the County Commissioner Dec. 27, 1781:

Philip Anthony.	William Holby.
Adam Arend.	Paul Hertzog.
John Anthony.	Daniel Ham.
Philip Breiner.	George Hollenbach.
Philip Bower.	John Herman.
John Breiner.	Jacob Heinbroch.
Michael Bock.	Dewalt Hanck.
John Bear.	George Heilman.
Martin Baily.	George Heilman, Jr.
Abraham Baily	Christian Haas.
Lorance Bachman.	Leonard Haas.
Paul Bachman.	Henry Kram.
Frederick Breyner.	Andrew Kunkle.
Conrad Bylman.	Adam Krok.
George Breish.	Christian Kock.
Henry Bautz.	Jacob Kuntz.
Martin Bear.	John Kuntz.
Widow Bear.	Michael Kuntz.
Casper Baldauf.	John Kistler.
Adam Clause.	Michael Kistler.
Adam Critis	Jacob Kistler.
Wilhelm J. Carl.	Samuel Kistler.
Melchoir Derr.	Philip Kistler.
Mathias DeLong.	George Kistler (Dietrich Mill, over two miles from Kutztown.
John Dietrich.	Henry King.
John DeLong.	Frederick Lyser.
George Eckroth.	John Lvser.
Bastian Edel.	Peter Leitz.
Stofle Eckroth.	John Lyby.
George Ehris .	John Lurah.
Michael Fenstermacher.	Christian Luff.
Bernhard Fallweiler.	Jacob Manss.
Philip Fusselman.	Christian Miller.
George Folck.	Simon Mosser.
Joseph Gorber.	Philip Mosser
Peter Gift.	Berghard Mosser.
Henry Gissler.	Andrew Meyer.
Conrad Hollebach.	Eagle Meyer.
Christian Henry.	William Meyer.
George Hauselman.	Carl Meyer.
Zachariah Haller.	Andrew Miller.
Zachariah Haller, Jr.	Jacob Miller.
Henry Haller.	Martin Metzger.
Christian Haller.	Conrad Nun.
Dewalt Houck, Jr.	John Moyer.
George Hermany.
John Heil.
Jacob Hans.

	Single Freeman.
John Hermany.	Paul Anthony.
Daniel Shuman.	Henry Fink.
Leonard Bock.	Philip Opt.
Charles Bock.	George Ruprecht.
John Baldauff.	Deater Hanselman.
Philip Baldauff.	Andrew Hanselman.

TAXABLES OF 1812.—The following names were taken from the county assessment for the year 1812:

Paul Anthony.	Jacob Benfield.
Daniel Arndt.	Christian Beary.
John Arndt.	John Bear.
Valentine Brobst.	Michael Croll.
Jacob Bachman.	John Carl.
Sebastian Benninghoff.	Widow Carl.
John Benninghoff.	Jacob Behley.
Mathias Brobst.	Andrew Graver.
John Brobst.	John Seiberling.
Michael Brobst, Sr.	Daniel Greenwald.
George Breiner.	Philip Harman.
Jacob Baush.	Nicholas Hartman.
Daniel Bachman.	Conrad Hartman.
Frederick Frey.	Adam Harry.
William Kistler.	Jesse Hermany.
Martin Bear.	Peter Hunsicker.
Philip Baldauf.	Jacob Holben.
George Bihl.	Deaterich Hunsicker.
Catharine Baldauf.	Widow Hausman.
Godfrey Brobst.	Jacob Haas.
John Baush.	George Harman.
Jacob Bear.	Jacob Haas, Jr.
George Breisch (estate)	John Heil.
Abraham Belchley.	Lewis Herring.
Michael Brobst.	Nicholas Hollenbach.
James Brier.	Christian Holben.

Smuel Ely.
 Daniel Hollenbach.
 Samuel Jenser.
 George Jenser.
 Philip Jaxheimer.
 Jacob Klingaman.
 Jacob King (Koenig).
 Henry Krum.
 John Kistler.
 Samuel Kistler.
 Jacob Kuntz.
 Philip Kistler.
 Jacob Kistler.
 John Kistler, Jr.
 Ferdinand Kistler.
 Peter Kashner (Kerschner).
 George Krumm.
 Michael Kistler.
 Jacob Kistler.
 Samuel Kistler.
 Peter Kunkle.
 Philip Kerschner.
 Conrad Kerschner.
 Jacob Kerschner.
 Conrad Kerschner.
 Christian Klingeman.
 Michael Klingaman.
 Michael Kistler.
 Frederick A n d r e w
 Leiby.
 Jacob Lutz.
 Daniel Leeser.
 Frederick Lutz.
 Jacob Leiber.
 Christian Lutz.
 Henry Lutz.
 John Lutz.
 Peter Lutz.
 John Liebic, Jr.
 George Lock (Loch).
 Zachariah Long.
 Abraham Long.
 Conrad Lutz.
 Andrew Miller.
 Peter Miller.
 Jacob Mauce (Mantz).
 Henry Mauce (Mantz).
 Philip Mauce (Mantz).
 David Mosser.
 Borgart Mosser.
 Abraham Merkel.
 Peter Myer.
 Michael Mosser.
 Jacob Mosser.
 Peter Miller.
 Andrew Miller, Jr.
 John Miller.
 Peter Miller.
 Abraham Miller.
 Henry Creitz.
 Henry Carl (estate).
 Adam Clause.
 Samuel Billman.
 George Castord.
 John Crash.
 Martin Crone.
 George Crone.
 Martin Donot.
 John Fogel, Esq.
 Job Delong.
 George Drein (Trein).

Henry Drumbower.
 John Everitt (estate).
 John Everitt.
 Peter Everitt (weaver).
 Tobias Ebert.
 Philip Ebert.
 Peter Ebert.
 Peter Eberoth.
 John Eberoth.
 Ferdinand Fullweiler.
 Daniel Fullweiler.
 Henry Fusselman.
 Ehrhard Fusselman.
 Michael Fenstermacher.
 Jacob Fenstermacher.
 Frederick Fry.
 Philip Fenstermacher.
 Jacob Frederolf (Fetherolf).
 Jacob Frey.
 Christian Fink.
 Widow Fry.
 Henry Moyer.
 George Mosser.
 Philip Mosser.
 John Neif (Neff).
 John Meyer.
 Peter Neif (Neff).
 John Notestein.
 Daniel Oswald.
 Jacob Oswald.
 Jacob Oswald, Jr.
 John Oswald.
 John Oswald, Jr.
 Anthony Opp.
 Conrad Opp.
 William Peter.
 John Rubrecht.
 Laurence Reitz.
 John Reitz.
 George Raush (supposed Baush).
 George Rubrecht.
 Henry Rubrecht.
 Isaac Romick.
 John Sensinger.
 Andrew Straub.
 George Sherry.
 John Sittler.
 Jacob Shneider.
 Henry Shneider.
 John Stein.
 John Snyder (Shneid-er).
 Peter Shneider.
 John Steirwold (Steiger-wald).
 Jacob Smith.
 Henry Steirwold (Stei-gerwald).
 Nicholas Schleicher.
 Jacob Sechler.
 Jacob Schneider.
 Conrad Stump.
 Valentine Sell.
 Andrew Sechler.
 John Sechler.
 Jacob Schallhard (Schell-hart).
 Henry Schackler.
 Frederick Sechler.
 George Sittler.

Daniel Saeger (late Crawford Co.).
 Andrew Straub.
 Andrew Sechler, Jr.
 John Stroub.
 Henry Stroub.
 Jacob Schallhard (Schell-hart).
 George Shnyder.
 William Shnyder (Snyder).
 Henry Smith.
 Melchior Schwab.
 Conrad Hartman.
 Henry Schitz.
 John Schaller.
 Henry Soudal.
 Andrew Steirwold.
 John Shnyder.
 Samuel Shneider.
 John Seiberling.
 George Sentee, Jr.

Peter Shnyder.
 Frederick Sheoffer.
 Joseph Sechler.
 Christian Shnyder.
 Jacob Straub.
 George Schallhamer.
 George Wannemacher.
 Jacob Wartman.
 Philip Wartman.
 Philip Wannemacher.
 Daniel Wannemacher.
 Jacob Wannemacher, Jr.
 Jacob Wannemacher, Sr.
 John Weiss.
 John Weiss, Jr.
 Christian Wert.
 Casper Wannemacher.
 Christian Wannemacher.
 Henry Weaver.
 Henry Weaver, Jr.
 Andrew Wertman.
 John Ritter (estate).

Single Freemen.

Christian Kuntz.
 Thomas Everitt.
 Henry Weaver.
 Abraham Fenstermacher.
 John Miller.
 John Fenstermacher.
 John Shnyder.
 John Miller.
 Jacob Weaver.
 Andrew Hartzell.
 Peter Shnyder.
 Jacob Meyer.
 Jacob Moser.

George Benighoff.
 Jacob Bachman.
 Henry Beitz (supposed Reitz).
 Henry Loag.
 Charles Loag.
 Henry Koenig.
 Philip Brobst.
 Michael Kistler.
 John Kistler.
 Jacob Rubrecht.
 Henry Fullweiler.
 John Hoffman.

PIONEER SETTLERS.—The following are the names of the pioneer settlers of this district so far as they could be ascertained:

Peter Baldauff.
 Laurence Bachman.
 Paul Bachman.
 Henry Baush.
 Jacob Billman.
 John Adam Creitz, Sr.
 George Custard.
 John Everett.
 Thomas Everett.
 Michael Fenstermacher.
 Jacob Fetterolf.
 John Fetterolf.
 Peter Fetterolf.
 Philip Fetterolf.
 Bernhardt Folweiler.
 John Heil, Sr.
 George Hermany.
 Svlvester Holben.
 Peter Hunsicker.

George Kistler.
 George Leazer.
 Andrew Miller.
 Christian Miller.
 Berkhart Mosser.
 Philip Mosser.
 Sebastian Mosser.
 John Much.
 Daniel Oswald.
 George Oswald.
 George Probst.
 Martin Probst.
 Matthias Probst.
 Philip Probst.
 Jacob Wannemacher, Sr.
 Marcus Wannemacher.
 Philip Wannemacher.
 John Weiss.
 George Philip Wertman.

SCHOCHARY RIDGE is a prominent ridge of elevated woodland half a mile wide which extends westward into the township from Heidelberg at the southeastern corner for about four miles. This name originates from Schoharie in New York State and was doubtless given to this surface formation of the township because some of the earliest German settlers had migrated from that locality; and its incorrect spelling arose from their pronunciation of the word in the German language.

In connection with the Pioneer Settlers, the following prominent homesteads in the district are mentioned; also several historic houses:

Kistler Homestead.—On the Elmer C. Kistler farm in Kistler Valley there is a landmark of more than ordinary historic interest in connection with the annals of the Evangelical Church. It is a one and one-half story stone-house, 20 by Aaron Schafer, Gideon Long, Jacob Seidel, Daniel B. Smith, and Daniel Schlenker (who died at Wesnersville, in 1912, aged 84 years). The church had many liberal supporters, among whom were Jonas W. Bachman and William F. Mosser.

Heinrich Fink Homestead.—On the farm of Aaron A. Moyer, near New Tripoli, is an old log house that was built by Heinrich Fink about the time of the Revolutionary War (a cut of the house appearing herewith). Moyer owns inter-

KISTLER HOMESTEAD IN KISTLER VALLEY, BUILT IN THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD.

40 feet, which was built about the time of the Revolutionary War, and for many years served as a dwelling. It is now Mr. Kistler's carpenter shop. In this house religious services were first held in Lynn township by the Evangelicals in the year 1858. Preaching services continued there at regular periods until 1885 and after the organization and erection of Zion's Evangelical Church, at Wesnersville, in 1872. Services were however held prior to 1858 in that section by this denomination, in a small house along the public road near Wesnersville, across the line in Berks county. The following were the heads of families that were members of this church: the brothers, Daniel B. and William B. Kistler, Johan P. Schmidt (school teacher), Stephen Braucher, Daniel Braucher, Peter Braucher, esting papers from which the following facts were taken, in all probability pertaining to his own land:

Valentine Craber obtained a warrant for 100 acres on March 6, 1750.

Dec. 14, 1767, Valentine Probst received a sum of money from Peter Snyder on account of a land sale.

April 28, 1786, a draft was made for Daniel Hauck.

April 20, 1791, John Schuman sold a 30-acre tract to John Fink.

Feb. 25, 1794, Daniel Fink sold a tract to John Fink.

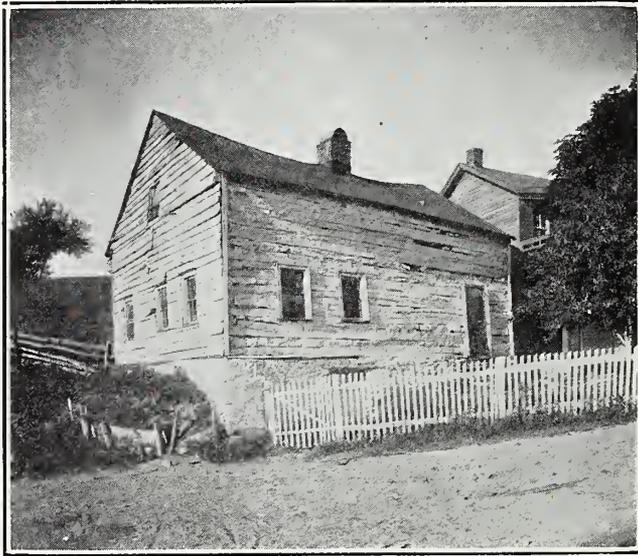

June 16, 1798, Adam Miller sold a tract to Henry, Christian, and Anna Maria Fink, and Adam and Catharine Boger; and they sold it to John and Daniel Fink.

April 6, 1802, John Peter Finck sold a tract to John Kistler, Jr., for £750.

After the Finks, the property passed to John Kistler, who was succeeded by John Kistler, Jr., and the latter by Aaron Kistler. The present owner, Mr. Moyer, is a grandson of John Kistler, Jr. In a log house which stood opposite the present dwelling, school was conducted by German teachers up to 1842.

Straub Homestead.—On the Alvin G. Heintzleman farm, which belonged to his father, Daniel, since 1847, there is a very old log-house, one and one-half stories high, with dimensions 28 by 20 feet. It was built before the Revolutionary tracts are located about one mile from New Tripoli, on the public road leading to Lynnville. This pioneer built a log house on this property soon after he had established himself in the township, which stood until 1891, when it was razed by Jacob Mosser, the present owner of the property. Fogel and some members of his family are buried on a private graveyard on this property. The burial place is located along the public road about 100 feet south of the present brick house now occupied by Mosser, and three or four of the graves were to be seen until about 1890. Apple trees now grow upon this sacred spot.

HEINRICH FINK HOMESTEAD.

War, by a son of Charles Straub. The latter was one of the very early pioneers of Lynn, and took out a warrant for 293 acres of land in 1748. The log house, (a cut of which appears herewith) is the second one on this tract.

Straubs, located on the Ontelaunee, was established by Andrew Straub, Sr., who, on March 22, 1800, took up 92 acres of land at that place, and transferred it to his son, Andrew, Jr. In the same year the latter conducted a distillery on these premises; and in 1817 erected a large stone house, now occupied by Charles Hartung. Later John Ulrich, Sr., owned and carried on the place. During the Forties he erected a frame building in which he kept a store until his death in 1852.

HISTORIC HOUSES.

Philip Gabriel Fogel, in 1734 or 1735 settled in Lynn township. He took out warrants for 63 acres of land in 1748 and 37 in 1754. These Fogel figured prominently in the earliest history and settlement of the township. The house which he built was used as a "Block House" and there the settlers congregated during the Indian invasions. It was also used as a place of religious worship before the establishment of the Ebenezer Church, in 1760. Tradition states that the settlers met there at intervals for several years. The house was constructed of heavy oak logs, which were roughly but very substantially fitted into each other at the corners and made specially secure by hickory pegs driven into big holes. The main part of the house was 40 by 56 feet. It had five floors. On the first floor rose a massive stone chimney with a wide open fire-place, and this floor was covered with large flat stones.

The second floor was of oak timber eight inches in thickness. Safety and strength were considered in the construction of this house, doubtless one of the very first in that section of Lynn. Oak logs were split through the middle, its sides being hewn even with a broad-axe by skilled hands until they were eight inches thick; and these pieces of timber were so interlocked as to leave no cracks in the floor peradventure the Indians would attempt to shoot at the settlers if they should gain entrance onto the first floor. From the second floor up, on the west side, the building projected four feet over the first story. The house had high gables and a peaked roof. There were four windows in each gable. The panes were 7 by 9 inches; and there were twelve panes in each window. The nails, hinges, and locks were of home-made iron, very strong and of the pioneers, a circular groove at some places two and one-half inches in depth.

Three port holes, ten inches square, were at each gable end, showing that the house was used as a fort during the trying period of the French and Indian War from 1755 to 1763. The oldest residents of Lynn do not recall that it was garrisoned by soldiers, but it was guarded by fearless inhabitants with muskets in hand.

During the Revolutionary period an addition 14 by 30 feet, was built over a fine spring of water. This part had a cellar without air holes but had an outside door which, when not in use, was banked up with ground to conceal it from prowling Indians.

ANCESTRAL HOME OF THE STRAUB FAMILY OF LYNN.

heavy. The doors were massive, divided into upper and lower sections. The partitions were made of boards which were hewn with the broad-axe, and these boards were crudely and irregularly placed.

On the second floor in after years a store was established in one of the rooms; in which stood an old-fashioned wood stove where the sturdy pioneers of Lynn had congregated for years to warm themselves and exchange opinions concerning Indian invasions, raids, massacres, wars, and the loss of loved ones. Into the floor around this stove there was worn, by the heavy boots

After the Fogel family vacated the property, it passed to Burkhard Mosser, and he was succeeded by his son, Jacob, who was followed by his son, John; then Jacob Mosser (born in 1832) the present owner, became the purchaser. His son, John S., now conducts the farm and his children are the sixth generation of the Mosser family residing on these acres.

On the south side of the Schochary, on the property long known as the John Snyder farm, now owned by Reuben Bachman and occupied by his son, Robert, are the ruins of a stone house around which centers much local history.

About the time of the Revolutionary War the house was built by Thomas Everett. Later it was occupied for many years by Dr. Joseph T. Zangerle, born in 1804, in Tyrol, Germany. His career was eventful. His saddle-back rides through the country, his gruffness of manner and speech, his domestic upheavals, his death by his own hand on May 14, 1860, at Lynnville where he last lived, and his burial, closed the chapter of an interesting character. After the removal of Dr. Zangerle to Lynnville, the historic house was occupied and tenanted by many families, but none lived there for any length of time. It stood unoccupied for many years and finally through lack of repair, fell into decay and ruin. The superstitions connected the house with weird stories and even murder is said to have happened in it. The much-mentioned building stood in the meadow between the Reuben Bachman property and Charles V. Hollenbach. During the Civil War the Knights of the Golden Circle (Copperheads) had their meeting-place in it and it was there that an attempt was made to blow up the organization.

KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN CIRCLE.

The Knights of the Golden Circle were an organization effected in the upper end of the county with places of meeting in Lynn township, under the leadership of Harry Newell (a tailor by trade), and others, numbering about eighty members. They were sympathizers of the Southern Confederacy, and protested against the retention of Confederate prisoners during the progress of the Civil War. Secret meetings were held in a stone house situated one mile north of Lynnville, in the lowland of the John C. Snyder farm, on the south side of the Schochary. During the progress of a certain meeting in this place, Unionists, under the leadership of Dr. Trexler, had planned to put a barrel of gunpowder in the cellar and blow the Copperheads to atoms; but their plans miscarried. The members afterward considered themselves unsafe there, since the place of meeting was known, and then met in Kistler Valley, in the house of Michael Brobst, now owned by Jonathan Smith. At this place on a certain night, shots were exchanged between the guard and one who had secreted himself in currant bushes by the house, for the purpose of ascertaining what transpired within. They left Kistler Valley and met in the home of one, Behler, near Lynnport. Finally they met in the house of David Schütz in the same locality. Bitter feeling existed during these times and Newell and a man conspicuously prominent about Lynnport, narrowly escaped being ridden on a fence-rail."

INDIAN REMINISCENCES.

Lynn township suffered severely from numerous incursions by the Indians, and for extended information on this subject the reader is referred to Chapter VI, entitled: "French and Indian War." The following reminiscences are, however, given in connection with this township.

Samuel Benfield shot an Indian in 1795 at the Blue Mountain near where Levi Heintzleman now lives in Lynn township. The Indian was alone. Benfield, fearing the approach of other Indians, hid himself in a brush, but no other Indians appearing, he took the Indian's gun and left the body on the ground.

The early settled farm, now owned by Levi Heintzleman, was formerly owned by a Gossler, and several miles away lived David Mosser who was visited by one Steinbrook from Longswamp township, Berks county. Steinbrook told his host he wished to pay his respects to his friend Gossler, but he was informed that the trip was dangerous and he had better remain. Steinbrook, however, went, and while sitting at a window at Gossler's he was shot dead by an Indian who mistook him for Gossler. The ruins of the house in which Steinbrook was shot can still be seen.

During the French and Indian War two soldiers were stationed for some days in a house on the Frederick Leaser farm in Lynn, and Indians with evil designs were encamped about three squares westward, who watched the soldiers and settlers as they walked around on the outside. The soldiers were each supplied with six different uniforms or suits, and these they changed quite often during the day. By this hoax the impression was given to the savages that a dozen well-armed soldiers were ready for an attack, and it doubtless saved the lives of many pioneers.

During the French and Indian War, the savages made an attack upon a family near the Blue Mountain, back of Lynnport, and the farm where the family lived is now owned by Albert B. Smith. The family saved themselves by throwing at the savages live wood-coal they got out of their bake-oven, which caused the savages to retreat into the woods. About this time Bernhard Follweiller, the Indian fighter, who had been out with his gun, appeared on the scene, and he followed the Indians into the woods, where he blew a decoy by whistling like an Indian, and this led an Indian to appear. Follweiller shot him and quietly buried the body under some rocks in the woods.

Upon his death-bed, Follweiler told his sons that at a certain tree, under rocks, they would find the skeleton of a bear, and on investigation the sons found a skeleton, not of a bear, but of the Indian whom their father had shot in the forehead. This Indian skull until late years was in the possession of the Indian fighter's descendants. The gun, he decreed, should go to the oldest son from one generation to another, and this identical rifle is now in the possession of James Follweiler, of Ohio.

Mrs. Derr, wife of a Fetherolf, in 1844, when 80 years old, told Harrison Saul (born in 1827), that her brother, ——— Derr, was murdered by the Indians on a farm in Lynn township which later was owned by Sebastian Bennighoff; and that the brother was buried at the Ebenezer Church, at New Tripoli.

Before the erection and garrison of Fort Everett at Lynnport, in 1755, the settlers of that section assembled for the night in a block-house (a fortified building) at Fetherolfsville, when attacks were feared from the Indians.

Matthias Schitz, who lived near Lynnport, had collected clothing and articles of value into a chest which he buried along the hillside back of his house in which Wm. H. Reitz now resides. This was done peradventure he would return in the morning and find his house in ashes.

Christian Wannamaker was scalped in a log barn at Lynnport. In the morning he had gone out to feed his cattle; not returning, his family investigated and found him lying in the barn in great agony, his scalp having been taken by the brutal savages. He died that same day.

George (?) Enos, a lad aged about fifteen years, was captured by an old Indian during the French and Indian War, in the meadow, on the farm now owned by Charles O. Oswald. This farm was the Enos homestead. After his capture the lad accompanied the Indian without resistance. When the Indian and the boy on their march reached the Blue Mountain, the bare feet of the boy became sore, and the Indian, feeling kindly towards the lad, made him a pair of moccasins from a deer skin which he had stolen from Ferdinand Enos, an Indian fighter, and probably the lad's father. The boy was then allowed to walk by himself and managing to get behind his captor, when the opportunity presented itself he ran away from the Indian with the swiftness of a deer. He safely reached what later was the home of Heinrich Billig (now the Benjamin Henry Estate), and there he hid under the threshing floor of a barn. The following morning he arrived at his home and danced about the room, happy over his successful escape.

On Feb. 14, 1756, the Indians surprised the inmates of the house of Frederick Reichelsderfer, shot two of his children, set his house and barn on fire and burned all his grain and cattle. Thence they proceeded to the house of Jacob Gerhart and there killed one man, two women, and six children. Two of the children had slipped under the bed; one of them was burned, the other escaped and ran a mile to neighbors.

On March 24th following, ten wagons were sent to Allemangel to bring away a family with their effects. As they were returning, about three miles below one George Zeisloff; they were fired upon by a number of Indians from both sides of the road, which caused the wagoner to leave their wagons and run into the woods; and the horse became frightened, ran down a hill and broke one of the wagons in pieces. The Indians killed George Zeisloff and his wife, a young man of twenty, a boy of twelve, and a girl of fourteen. Four of them were scalped. The Zeisloff property is now owned by James A. Oswald, situated two miles southwest of New Tripoli.

EARLY MILLS.

The description of the early grist-mills forms a valuable part of the township industrial history, and the following eleven contributed their share towards its welfare, six of them on the Ontelaunee creek and five on the Switzer.

Saeger	Holben
Oswald	Bausch
Benninghoff	Smith
Wanamaker	Greenawald
Snyder	Rex
Mosser

GRIST MILLS.

The description of the following grist mills forms a valuable part of the township's industrial history:

Saeger Mill.—Daniel Saeger embarked in the milling business in Lynn township in 1811, and erected a large two-story stone grist-mill with basement, which was supplied with water-rights from the Ontelaunee creek, about 1,000 feet distant to the northeast.

It is at New Tripoli along the main thoroughfare.

After operating it for two years he sold it to Samuel Ely, Jr. Ely carried it on until 1820, when he sold it to Jacob Grim. It then passed through a number of owners until 1867, when Joseph Rickert sold it to Reuben German, who operated it successfully for upwards of twenty years, having in 1885 installed the roller process machinery and added engine and boiler, besides the water-wheel for more reliable power. Reuben's son, Albert A., his brother, Jonas, and Jonas's son, Henry W., operated it in succession until 1910, when Henry A. Sittler became the purchaser and he has carried it on until the present time. Jonas German constructed a second dam along the race mid-way between the old dam and the mill, made necessary by the first having become filled with alluvial deposit. It covers about three acres.

A frame ice-house was erected at the breast of the dam in 1903, by Hon. James A. Miller for storing ice, with a capacity of 200 tons.

This is the first grist mill along the headwaters of the Ontelaunee. The water-shed is situated about a mile beyond the mill, the waters flowing eastward, going into the Jordan and thence into the Lehigh river, and those flowing westward going into the Ontelaunee and thence into the Schuylkill river.

Oswald's Mill, a landmark near New Tripoli, situated on the Ontelaunee, was built by Samuel Kistler, in 1816. It is a large stone building, 40 by 60 feet, three and a half stories high. Christian Kistler hauled the stone from the mountain near-by for its construction. Kistler operated the mill many years, and was succeeded by his sons, Christian and David. The latter sold his interest to his brother a few years later and moved to Schuylkill county. William M. Kistler, son of Christian, succeeded his father; later Mrs. William Kistler and John Kistler had the mill a few years. The next proprietors were Henry and James Sittler. Afterward Daniel Heintzleman purchased it for his son, Daniel A., Jr., known as "Little Daniel," who operated it three years. On Nov. 20, 1891, Sylvanus Oswald purchased it and he has continued to operate it to the present time.

It is the second mill at that place. The first stood across the road from the present building. It was built of logs by Conrad Kerschner and was one of the earliest mills in the district. It was operated by the Kerschner family for many years. The Kerschners owned a large acreage of land in Lynn township at an early period in its settlement.

Bennighoff's Mill, formerly "Reitz's," is situated on the Ontelaunee. Peter Fenstermacher built a powder mill at that place about 1834, and operated it several years, when Jonas Reitz became the owner. In 1840 he tore down the powder mill and built a two-story grist mill, which he operated. He also built and operated a distillery at the same place. In 1854, he sold it to his sons, Samuel and Benjamin. They conducted it several years, then sold it to John Ulrich when it was destroyed by fire which culminated in a law-suit and a conviction, and the place was idle some years. During 1889-90, the present mill, a frame building, 30 by 50 feet, two stories, was erected by Ulrich, who then operated it with his son, George L., for thirteen years. Since 1903 Albert F. Bennighoff has owned and operated it as a custom mill in a successful manner. It is equipped with roller process.

Wanamaker Mill, at Wanamaker Station, was first erected along the Outelaunee creek, near Steinsville, by Christian Wanamaker in 1825, and he operated it until 1840, when he sold it to his son, Daniel, who carried it on successfully until 1866, when he tore it down and erected in its place a large three-story brick-structure, which was then and is still one of the finest mills in this section of country. He continued business there until 1878, when Wellington B. Griesemer became the owner, and in 1881, Benneville Lutz. It was carried on by Lutz until his decease about 1900, when it was bought by Henry F. Kistler, who has operated it in a very successful manner since that time. Roller process was introduced by Lutz about 1890.

Snyder Mill was erected by Jacob Wanamaker, Sr., prior to 1829. It was a two-story stone building situated along the Ontelaunee, near Lynnport. Succeeding owners were Joel Snyder and his son, Alvin, and Levi J. Reitz. During Reitz's ownership about 1900 it was destroyed by fire. Then the place laid idle for several years when it was bought by Elihu Billig who built a frame mill, including a cider press, and has since carried on business there.

Mosser Mill was first a log building erected by Philip Mosser before 1800 on the Ontelaunee creek, in the eastern portion of the township, two miles west of the line. He carried it on, in connection with an adjoining saw-mill until he died in 1817, when his son, David, became the owner, and a two-story stone mill was erected by the son in its place. David then carried on the business until he died in 1832, when his two sons divided the property, John taking the tannery, and Joseph the grist-mill and saw-mill. Joseph conducted the plant for about 40 years, in this time making two frame additions to the grist-mill to meet the demands of his increasing trade; then he rented it to his son, Lewis F., and the son has carried it on until now. The son purchased the property in 1893. Flour and chop were manufactured until 1890, then the making of flour was discontinued on account of competition.

In 1862 Joseph Mosser erected a superior two-story brick dwelling-house on the mill property near the mill, and a noteworthy feature in its construction was the decoration of the parlor ceiling and walls in oil painting with numerous butterflies, no two alike, executed during the winter months by three expert German artists who had got out of work at Slatington and were glad to earn off, in this manner, the cost of their boarding and lodging in the home of Mr. Mosser. Though fifty years have elapsed, the decoration is remarkably well preserved and reflects the great skill of the artists.

Holben Mill stood on the Switzer creek near Lynnville, on the farm now owned and operated by George M. Miller. The first building was put up before 1813 by Jacob Holben, and there a stone mill was erected in its place by him. It was carried on by different descendants of the family until about 1895, when it was destroyed by fire.

Bausch Mill is situated on the Switzer creek, next to the Holben. It was erected before the Revolution. John Bausch owned and operated it for many years; then it was carried on by his sons, Jacob and George, together for a time and afterward by Jacob.

John Snyder, who married Jacob Bausch's daughter, purchased it in 1825, and conducted the business there until he died in 1872, he having added a saw-mill in 1845. His son, Nathan, then became the successor and operated the plant until his death in 1907. Oscar Betz, who married Nathan Snyder's daughter, then bought the property and since that time it has been operated by tenants. The saw-mill was abandoned in 1905.

Smith Mill, a mile and a half south-west of the Holben Mill, on the same creek was erected by Abraham Smith about 1840, and carried on by him for many years; then by his son-in-law, Gideon Moyer, and others until about 1890, when it was abandoned. A creamery was started in its place and operated for a time.

Greenawald Mill was the second on the Switzer Creek, near Stein's Corner, and it had its origin in 1790, because the owner, Charles Greenawald, was unable to buy the Rex mill above. It was carried on for many years by Greenawald and then by his son, Edwin, and other parties, until 1905, when Franklin Leiby became the owner and Leiby has since operated it as a custom mill. Greenawald put a new vertical saw in the adjoining saw-mill and his son substituted a circular saw.

Rex's Mill was probably the earliest in the county, north and west of the Lehigh mountains. It was situated on Switzer creek in Lynn township, near the line of Weisenberg, but the dam for operating it was in Weisenberg. It was built of logs about 1750. In 1790 it did a large business. It was carried on to produce chop as well as flour; also to break and clean hemp and bruise hemp seed; and to hull millet used to make "pap," then considered an extra dish. The mill was torn down many years ago, but the site is still visible.

INDUSTRIES.

The following industries are mentioned as an interesting part of the early history of this township.

Kistler's Card Mill.—In Owl Valley, near Stein' Corner, in this township, there are landmarks still, that suggest a busy industry during the early settlement of the township. On the 34-acre tract, now owned and occupied by H. M. Fry, is the time-worn and dilapidated building in which a man named Hower conducted one of the first stores of that locality. He was succeeded by Daniel Kistler who, in connection with the store business, operated a card-mill ("Kratzmuehl") for many years.

People took the wool, as it came from the sheep, to this mill to have it carded. The imperfect machinery for carding the wool stood on the second floor. The first floor was used by James Kistler, son of Daniel, a blacksmith for many years.

After Daniel Kistler, the land was owned by Adam Bachman, who also operated the card-mill, and he was succeeded by his son, Jacob, whose estate sold the property to H. M. Frey, the present owner. The store and card-mill were separate buildings but they stood close together.

The first store in that section was at Fetherolfville, near the county line, conducted by John O'Neill.

Ontelaunee Woolen Mills were located near Jacksonville on the property now owned by Charles E. E. Foster. George Breish was the first owner. In 1793 and 1794 he received the first water-rights for them. After him they were owned by Henry Fusselman; John Her-many and Ralph Camp; Levi Brobst; Henry Brobst; Daniel Brobst; George Brobst; Reuben Buck. The last proprietor was Charles H. Foster, who was the last wool-carder in that section. Shortly after the Civil War, Reuben Buck remodeled the mill, and added new machinery. He manufactured all kinds of home-spun flax and woolen goods. It has been discontinued for upwards of twenty years.

While in the ownership of Reuben Buck, a chopping-mill was also carried on.

Distillery.—In 1898 Henry Weaver started a small distillery for the manufacture of apple brandy, commonly called "apple-jack." It is situated on the Ontelaunee, a short distance below the Mosser grist-mill, and is operated only during the months of September and October. The plant consists of two small frame buildings, one for the cider-press and the other for distilling the brandy. The production, during the season annually has been about 50 barrels.

Abandoned Slate Quarries.—Slate operations were begun along both sides of the Ontelaunee, a short distance south of Mosserville, on the Kistler and Mosser farms, about 1850, by Welshmen from Slatington, and continued for forty years quite extensively; but they had to be discontinued on account of the excessive cost of production. The nature of the slate mined was superior, with a durable, dark-blue color, and many roofs of buildings in this and other townships were covered with roofing slate manufactured there. The large deposits of waste materials are the remaining evidence of the operations.

Similar operations were also conducted on property of Peter W. Leininger, of New York city, located near Robert's Corner.

Reitz Stocking Mill.—Jonas Reitz started in 1830 the manufacture of woolen stockings in a part of his dwelling-house, near the Reitz grist-mill and distillery, on the same farm. He was assisted by his wife and children. It was chiefly carried on the fall and winter. It was continued 25 years.

Snyder Machine Works.—Owen Snyder embarked in the machinery business at Lynnport about 1865, for the manufacture of grain cradles, plows, harrows, and cultivators, and subsequently threshing-machines and other farming implements. His sons, James and Benjamin, became associated with him and then the business reached extensive proportions which was continued for about twenty years, and then it gradually decreased until it was finally abandoned in 1905.

Family of Weavers.—The Kerschner family has been prominently identified with the weaving of carpets and other materials in Lynn township, between Lynnport and New Tripoli, for over one hundred years continuously and the old hickory loom is still in use, in a fine state of preservation, without crack or warp, at New Tripoli, by a great-grandson of the first weaver.

Philip Kerschner started about 1800, after having learned the trade, and carried on the business for nearly 40 years, until he died in 1855. Then his son, Philip, succeeded him and worked on the same loom for about 35 years, when he directed his attention to farming and died in 1900, at the age of 85 years. The grandson, Levi, started in 1870, on his grandfather's loom and worked at the trade 42 years, until shortly before he died in 1912; then his son, James L., a teacher at New Tripoli, secured the loom, removed the loom to his home, put up a special shop, and embarked in the business to carry it on during the summer months, when not engaged at teaching.

Saddleries.—Jonas C. Weaver engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of harness at Lynnport about 1890, and carried it on twenty years. According to the demand of his trade he frequently employed several hands to assist him. He learned the trade under Thomas Bleiler who carried on business extensively at Lynnville for many years, then moved to Schuylkill county. Osville Moser and Worden Fritzingler have been in this business at New Tripoli for a long while.

COUNTY BRIDGES.

There are eight county bridges in the township, seven spanning the Ontelaunee creek:

Billig	Bennighoff
Wanamaker	Kistler
Jacksonville	Mosserville
Lynnport	Kistler Valley

Billig Bridge spans the Ontelaunee, half a mile east of the county-line, on the road leading from Lynnport to Kempton. It consists of one iron span, set on stone abutments, with an extra stone abutment in the center for support. It had been previously placed at Slatington across the deep ravine at the Kern grist-mill by the county and transferred to the present location in 1900, when a larger and stronger bridge was substituted there.

Wanamaker Bridge, across the Ontelaunee, at Perry Long's, was built in 1870. It was of iron, brought by team from Hamburg, there having been no railroad at that time through the township. Previously the creek was spanned by a foot bridge at that place. The iron bridge was replaced by one of concrete and iron during the fall of 1910 and spring of 1911.

Jacksonville Bridge, across the Ontelaunee mill dam at Reuben Buck's, was built in 1824, of stones, and containing only three arches it became too small. Water wore around it on the north side and a wooden covered bridge was added. These bridges then served the community until in 1911 when the present bridge of concrete and iron was constructed by the county in its place.

Lynnport Bridge is situated south of the village across the Snyder mill-dam. It was erected in 1857 by the county. It consists of a covered wooden one-arch structure, set on slate abutments, and is 90 feet long.

Bennighoff Bridge is a one-span iron structure across the Ontelaunee at the Bennighoff grist-mill, one mile north of Lynnport, erected by the county in 1890. Previously, there was a "ford" at this point for teams, and a foot-bridge with side rails for pedestrians.

Kistler Bridge is situated one mile west of New Tripoli and spans the Ontelaunee at the Kistler grist mill. It is built of stone and consists of four arches with high side walls. It was put there in 1821 by the county.

Mosserville Bridge is situated at Mosserville, near the store and mill and spans the Ontelaunee, being a three-arched stone structure with side-walls and wings, 75 feet long, erected by the county in 1825.

Kistler Valley Bridge is situated on the road leading from Lynnport to Stony Run, near the Kistler Valley school-house. It is constructed of stone, with one arch and side walls, and was put there by the county more than sixty years ago.

The township maintains numerous small bridges in different sections of the district.

PUBLIC ROADS.

The township is about seven miles square. It is the extreme northwestern district of the county, with its northern boundary on the top of the Blue mountains. The mileage of public roads is 122. This may seem small by comparison with other districts, but about one-fifth of the township area consists of unbroken forest along the Blue mountains, which is traversed by only three roads in a length of nine miles known respectively as the "Dresher" from Steinsville to Dreher'sville, the "Jacksonville," via Leibysville to Tamaqua, and the "Werfman," from New Tripoli, via Rabert's Corner and Snyder's to Tamaqua, the last named being the thoroughfare from Allentown via Schnecksville.

The State Highway Department has arranged to construct two "state roads" through the township; one, Route No. 226, to extend from Schnecksville to New Tripoli and thence across the mountain to Tamaqua, in the township about 6 miles; the other, Route No. 285, to extend from Hamburg by way of Lenhartsville and Wanamaker to New Tripoli, the point of meeting being at the Ebenezer Church, in the township also about 6 miles.

There have been three prominent thoroughfares through this district generally recognized for over one hundred and fifty years; from Steinsville by way of Wanamaker, Jacksonville, Lynnport and New Tripoli to Schnecksville and Allentown (known before the Revolution from Steinsville to New Tripoli as the "King's Highway"); from Kempton, in Berks county, by way of Kistler's Valley and Lynnville to the road mentioned; and from New Tripoli, by way of Lynnville, and Stein's Corner to Kutztown in Berks county.

All these were extensions from the King's Highway, which was laid out in the time of King George III, before the Revolution, from Philadelphia, by way of Skippack, Green Lane, Seisholtzville, Mertztown and Grimsville, to Kempton, this being mentioned on the Berks county records as the "Maxatawny Road;" and this was the road taken by the early farmers of Lynn in transporting their farm products to Philadelphia and bringing hither hardware and merchandise of every description.

Some of the old milestones are still standing on this highway; one near Harlem in Berks county (a mile beyond Seisholtzville), and several between Green Lane and Skippack, all in a fine state of preservation with the inscriptions, indicating the distance to Philadelphia, plainly legible. The milestones near Harlem indicates the distance to Philadelphia as 46 miles.

Water System.—The township is irrigated in a superior manner by numerous rivulets and streams which drain into the Ontelaunee creek. The source of this creek is at a large spring in the township at the base of the Blue Mountains, near the line dividing Heidelberg township, on lands of George E. Mosser, of Allentown, the property having continued in the name of this family for many years.

Productive Farms.—It is generally recognized that the farms in this township are among the most productive in Lehigh county, and the farmers among the most enterprising to be found anywhere. Besides the regular crops of wheat, rye, oats and hay, the yield of potatoes annually is particularly large. The flourishing condition of the farmers is evidenced by their superior livestock, handsome homes, and capacious, well-painted, attractive barns.

Bear Rocks is a large collection of rocks several hundred feet square, situated on the summit of the Blue Mountains in Lynn township. Several of the larger rocks, piled on each other, constitute the corner between Carbon and Schuylkill counties, which lie on the northerly side of the mountains. Their elevation above the sea is about 1,500 feet, and the point commands one hundred years. Eight centers have thus been formed:

New Tripoli	Steinsville
Lynnport	Lynnville
Jacksonville	Stein's Corner
Wanamaker	Mosserville

Stores are carried on at each of these places; and hotels also, excepting Mosserville. Six of them are situated in the central portion along the railroad, and two in the southern.

A place called Reitz's was established by Andrew Straub, Jr., in 1817, on land which his father had secured from the state in 1800, and transferred to him shortly afterward. He then erected a stone house on it and afterward sold the property to John Ulrich who started a store a most extensive view, not only reaching southeast to Allentown, eighteen miles, but southwest to Reading a distance of thirty-five miles. The name was given to the place after the wild bear which had its home there in the early history of the district.

FIRST PUBLIC HOUSE AT NEW TRIPOLI, BUILT 1771.

VILLAGES.

This township has a number of prominent business centers where trade and enterprise naturally led people to drift together and establish stores, hotels, dwelling-houses and various industries.

Some of these have been recognized for over in 1849 and carried it on until he died in 1852, when it was sold to his son, Isaac. Isaac operated the farm without the store until 1860, when Jonas Reitz purchased the property including 80 acres. He then erected a small distillery and carried it on two years when his son, Samuel, became the owner. Samuel then enlarged the plant and conducted the business for forty years. Since then nothing has been done there besides farming. It was known as "Reitz's," since 1860. It was situated one mile east of Lynnport and comprised only a few buildings.

Rabert's Corner, formerly Oswaldsville, is located at the intersection of four public roads near the Blue Mountains. It consists of a stone house (built by Jonas Oswald in 1864, brick dwelling, and school house. Oswald carried on a hotel in the stone house and established a post office there, which was continued until 1866, when it was removed to Mosserville. In 1878 Henry J. Rabert purchased the place, and conducted the hotel until 1889 when it was abandoned. Susan German carried on a store in the same building from 1881 to 1884.

Reitz's and Rabert's Corner have not been classed with villages because they lost their character and influence in the community as business centers.

A small business center was also situated along the railroad called "Lochland," a short distance from the township line, which was known for upwards of twenty years before the railroad was constructed in 1874, and it was continued until about 1910, when it was abandoned.

NEW TRIPOLI is the largest and most thriving place in Lynn township. It is situated in the eastern section, along the Schuylkill and Lehigh railroad, about 11 miles west from the borough of Slatington, 9 northwest from Schnecksville (on the trolley-line), and 17 northwest from Allentown, the county-seat. There is a cross-roads in the town, the main thoroughfare, Madison Street, extending north and south, and a street called Wayne, extending eastward towards Schnecksville, and another called Decatur extending westward towards Lynnport. It was laid out in 1816 by Samuel Ely, Jr., owner of the land, and named after Tripoli in honor of the U. S. naval victory at that port on the northern coast of Africa.

Prior to 1811 the land here was a part of the Henry Mantz farm, and in that year Mantz sold a small tract and water-rights from the Ontelaunee creek to Daniel Saeger. Soon afterward, Saeger erected a grist mill and store-building and started business there; and other persons having also put up buildings, the place took the name of Saegersville. In 1813, Saeger sold the mill and store to Samuel Ely, Jr., who then carried on the business, in connection with a tavern which had been established in a building nearby, erected in 1771, as indicated by an inscription stone on the face of the front wall.

Town Lots.—Upon having laid off the land into lots, Ely exposed them to sale at his tavern in July, 1816, and the following were sold to the persons named during 1816 and 1817.

Peter Haas, 31, 42, 13, 64, 65, 81, 82.	Abraham Smith, 39, 40, 80, 87.
Christian Kuntz, 115.	John Straub, Jr., 31, 67, 68.
Jacob Fenstermacher, 10, 14, 61, 62, 72-77.	John Schoenberger, 88.

Henry Weaver, 89, 90, 91.	Henry Falmer, of Bucks County, 32-38.
Jacob Schmeck, 10, 13.	Adam Heckman, 43.
Philip Everett, 86.	Diedrich Hiesler, 44-47.
Isaac Miller, 85.	Daniel O'Daniel, 17, 122.
Henry Rubrecht, 83, 129, 130.	Andrew Krause, 49.
John Schmeck, 11, 12.	Andrew Shifferstine, 50.
Andrew Kunkel, 20.	Samuel Marx, 21.
Andrew Straub, 66, 125, 126.	Daniel Koch, 18, 109.
George Lock, 29, 30.	Isaac Frober, 37.
Henry Meyer, 103.	Henry Rossman, of Berks County, 19, 36, 39-42, 61, 62, 63, 67, 68, 73, 74, 79, 80.
John Settler, 102.	Solomon Hartman, 14, 123, 124.
Michael Krum, 116.	Samuel Ely, 4-6, 64.
John Kresley, 131.	Conrad Hartman, 78.
Solomon Kistler, 118, 119.	Jacob Moyer, 11, 12.
Abraham Miller, 63.	John Kistler, 54.
Jacob Linn, 133, 134.	Daniel Kern, 100, 101.
John Reitz, 127, 128.	Morris Ancona, 66.
Daniel Marburger, 115.	Jacob Hillegas, No. 157.
George Tryne, 48.	Maria Hiller, 120, 121.
Daniel Shaeffer, 16.	Jacob Grim, 22.
Christian Biery, 7, 8, 15- 18.	John Derr, 79.
William Wuchter, 132.	Conrad German, 52, 105.
John Bier, 9.	Daniel Dorward, 104, 167.
John Mantz, 69.	John Mohr, 58, 59, 99.

Industries.—The earliest industry established here was a grist-mill. Its history is included under a separate head. Sylvester O. Moyer engaged in the business of manufacturing carriages and built a large two-story frame factory with a basement about 1880 and he carried it on until his death in 1897. He was succeeded by Alvin Peter for a short time; then Menno G. Wehr conducted the plant until 1910.

When the carriage factory was discontinued, Joseph L. Batteiger, of Strausstown, Berks county, took possession of the building and equipped it for manufacturing shirts, but he operated the plant for only a year, when Menno O. Bachman, James W. Loy, and James Kerschner secured the place and they have since carried it on, employing from 20 to 25 hands, mostly girls from the town.

A slaughter-house was established in the town by Quince Trine in 1907. He put up several frame buildings, equipped them with the necessary machinery, and carried on the business for several years, when he was succeeded by Lewis F. Snyder, who has since operated the plant in supplying the community, reaching from Wessnersville to Saegersville, a distance of twelve miles, with all kinds of meats.

William A. Reimert, a cabinet-maker at New Tripoli for many years, in 1898 embarked in the business of manufacturing bar fixtures. His first fixtures having been placed in the German House. Since then he has supplied upwards of a hundred hotels situated in different parts of the country.

A stone blacksmith shop was established in the town about 1850 by Samuel Camp, on the north side of Decatur street, near Madison, and carried on by him for a long while. He was succeeded by Charles Yohe, Alfred Kressly, John M. Snyder, John F. Smith and Alvin Brobst until the year 1885. Then Franklin Kerschner became the owner and he has operated it in a successful manner until the present time.

Post-Office.—A post-office was established here in 1823, and the postmaster was Samuel Camp, who served for many years. His successors were:

Silas Camp.	'85.
Edwin Camp.	Franklin Camp, 1885-'89.
James Krum, 1866-'69.	Levi B. Oswald, 1889-'93.
Jonas German, 1869-'72.	William F. Krauss, 1893-'97.
William F. Krauss, 1872-'82.	William F. Snyder, 1897-1914.
Elias K. Gildner, 1882-

Hotels.—The first hotel was established in this locality many years before 1812, probably in 1773, when the two-story stone building was erected on the road toward Schnecksville (now Wayne street) several hundred feet from Madison. This interesting building is still standing in a good state of preservation, with the year 1773 plainly visible at the top of the west gable end, a picture of it illustrating this part of the narrative. Daniel Ely, Jr., was the owner of it in 1813, and he carried on the place until 1818. In the following fifty years the proprietors were Samuel Camp and his son, Edwin, and William P. Krum and his brother, James. Jonas German then became the owner, including the store, and he continued in that locality until 1879, when he erected a large, two-story brick building at the southwest corner of Madison and Decatur Streets, to accommodate the large trade which he had developed, naming it the "German House," and there he continued a very successful business until his decease in 1900. His son-in-law, Hon. James A. Miller, then became the owner and he has carried on the hotel and store until the present time. He equipped it with modern improvements including electric lights. Mr. Miller's brother, William A., has been a partner in the business since 1908, the firm name being J. A. Miller & Bro.

Daniel Saeger started a general store business in 1812, in a small one-story stone building, which he erected a short distance beyond the hotel on the opposite side of the road, but how long it was continued there is not known. The building is still standing but its size would indicate that it must not have been occupied for any considerable time, and that the business was transferred to a large room in the hotel building, and continued there until 1879. For upwards of thirty years this stand at New Tripoli has been one of the most successful and popular business places in the country districts of Lehigh county. Since 1910 it has been largely patronized by local, state and national politicians, being in the home town of State Senator Miller.

In 1895 William F. Krauss, who had been in the grain and potato business at New Tripoli for twenty years, erected a two story frame building on the southeast corner of Madison and Decatur streets, and embarked in the hotel and store business. He continued there until his sudden death in 1902, and his son, Frank, succeeded him, for two years. Since then Menno O. Bachman has been the owner, and conducted the hotel. He rented the store to James W. Loy, who has since carried on a general business in merchandise.

National Bank.—The New Tripoli National Bank was organized by

C. Daniel Werley.	James O. Ebert.
Nathan H. Snyder.	Joshua N. Oldt.
M. O. Bachman.	James W. Loy.
G. E. Oswald.	Elmer J. Bachman.
Phaon W. Bittner.	Samuel T. Zehner.

and became a chartered institution Oct. 8, 1909, with an authorized capital stock of $25,000.

A one-story cement block building was erected on the main thoroughfare at Madison street in dimensions 28 feet front by 48 feet deep, with interior finished in oak, and equipped with a fire and burglar-proof vault and an Ely-Norris safe of the latest design, heated by hot water heat and lighted by acetylene gas, at a total cost, including fixtures, of about $9,000. The windows and doorway are large, affording an abundance of natural light and ventilation. The structure was finished and opened for business on March 1, 1910, with the following as the first Board of Directors, and Officials:

Phaon W. Bittner, Pres.	Nathan H. Snyder.
C. Daniel Werley, V. P.	James O. Ebert.
Francis W. Harder, V. P.	James W. Loy.
	G. E. Oswald.
Elmer J. Bachman, V. P.	P. B. Oswald.
	Joshua N. Oldt.
Samuel T. Zehner.	M. O. Bachman.
	Charles F. Bretney, Cashier.

The institution has since conducted business in a most successful manner in the village of New Tripoli, and its last exhibit Aug. 9, 1913, showed total resources amounting to $331,946.62 with deposits of $272,588.90, and surplus of $13,273.43.

The management has remained the same excepting that G. E. Oswald and P. B. Oswald have discontinued to serve as directors; and the cashier, Mr. Bretney, having resigned, D. C. Kerstetter, of Shamokin was elected as his successor in August, 1911.

Church and School.—The description of Ebenezer Church and the schools conducted here is included in the township history.

R. R. Station.—The Berks County Railroad was extended through the township in 1874 to open traffic between Reading and Slatington, and the station was located at the north end of Madison street, about 500 feet from the central part of the town. It has become a prominent shipping point for potatoes.

In 1875 William F. Krause established a coal yard and grain house there which he carried on successfully for twenty years. David N. Leiby was there until 1897; then Wm. H. Hoffman became the proprietor and he has continued the business in a most successful manner until now. His shipments of potatoes in the season of 1912-13 amounted to 160,000 bushels.

Physicians.—The practicing physician at New Tripoli since 1890 has been Dr. John A. Kressly. Previously for a period of 50 years they were: M. J. Holben, F. O. Ritter, H. D. Leh, I. F. Huff, E. E. Wiesner, Steckel, Sholl, Mumbauer, Graul, Keiser, Breinert, Neff.

Octogenarians.—There are two survivors at New Tripoli, born here, who are upwards of 80 years old, and have always lived here: Harrison Saul, 86 years, and Sabina Setzer (his half sister), 82 years, both residing together in the home of Mr. Saul. Another fact worthy of mention is that Mr. Saul has always lived on the property where he now resides, which he acquired in 1854. Other aged persons in the town are Edward Krum, 87 years; Elias S. Snyder, 80 years; and Henry Kistler and his wife, both 78 years.

Three, worthy of special mention, died at Mosserville and were buried at New Tripoli; Sophia Mosser (widow of John), died 1883, aged 85 years; Joseph Mosser, died 1898, aged 88 years; Mary Krause Mosser (widow of Joseph), died 1911, aged 97 years.

FAMILY HEADS IN 1913.—The following heads of families resided at New Tripoli in 1913:

Rev. H. A. Althouse.	Daniel D. Fenstermacher.
Menno O. Bachman.	er.
James L. Bittner.	Wm. F. Fritzingner.
Joseph Brittner.	Elias K. Gildner.
Rev. A. O. Ebert.	Achilles O. Grim.
Owen Ebert.	W. P. Handwerk.

Nathan Heintzelman.
Wm. A. Herbert.
Wm. H. Hoffman.
George Jones.
Adolph G. Keiser.
Frank Kerschner.
James Kerschner.
James L. Kerschner.
Henry D. Kistler.
James W. Korn.
Chas. F. Krause.
Dr. John A. Kressly.
Mrs. Elias B. Krum.
Henry Landis.
Wm. Lauchnor.
Isador Lauchnor.
Clinton E. Leiby.
David N. Leiby.
Peter Loch.
Herbert S. Loy.
James W. Loy.
Moses D. Mantz.
Hon. James A. Miller.
Wm. A. Miller.
Osville J. Moser.
W. H. Moyer.
Mrs. David Oswald.
Wm. B. Oswald.

P. B. Oswald.
Lewis Rauch.
Abner H. Reimert.
Wm. A. Reimert.
Harrison Saul.
Edwin Schoedler.
Calvin Sittler.
David E. Sittler.
Francis W. Sittler.
Henry W. Sittler.
Henry A. Sittler.
Sylvester J. Sittler.
Morris S. Smith.
Edwin D. Snyder.
Elias S. Snyder.
Mrs. Henry E. Snyder.
Nathan Snyder.
Tilghman Snyder.
W. F. Snyder.
W. Frank Snyder.
Quince Trine.
James A. Weaver.
Mrs. Reuben Weaver.
Menno G. Wehr.
John F. Weiss.
John S. Weiss.
Tilghman Weiss.
Mrs. Lewis F. Wertman.

Status in 1913.—The status of the town in 1913 was as follows:

Population, 400.	Warehouses, 2.
Dwellings, 60.	Slaughter-house.
General stores, 2.	Manfr. Bar fixtures.
Hotels, 2.	Wall-paper store.
R. R. Station.	Implement dealer.
Postoffice.	Shoe store.
Union Church.	Cobbler shops, 2.
Public school-house.	Watch repairer.
Bank.	Restaurant.
Grist-mill.	Ministers, 2.
Shirt factory.	Undertaker.
Blacksmith shop.	Justice of the Peace.
Job printing.	Physician.
Sadler shops, 2.	Veterinary surgeon.
Barber shops, 2.	Notary public.

In 1854, there were only seven dwelling houses in the village, mostly built of logs; three were two-story.

Recently several fine residences were erected in the town.

The drinking water is supplied from wells, nearly every property having its own well.

LYNNPORT.—Marcus Wannemacher was the owner of the land here, and his dwelling was situated near the railroad station. Michael Everett started a store in 1814, and he was succeeded by David Kistler, William Kistler and Levi Kistler until 1865. In the stone building Levi Kistler embarked also in the hotel business in 1843. He was succeeded by Lewis H. Oswald in 1865 who carried on both the store and hotel for upwards of thirty years. He then sold the property and business to his son, Charles, who has carried them on until the present time.

A postoffice was established by Oswald about 1870, and the postmasters since then have been the owners of the property except in several cases when it was removed for short periods.

The slate industry was started here about 1844, by James M. Porter, Daniel Jones, and a man named McDowell (the same parties who are said to have first opened quarries at Slatington), with David Follweiler as superintendent.

A mantel factory was started in 1860 by Anthony Dounon, of Philadelphia. Afterward it was carried on by Henry F. Martin for a time; and then by Jesse B. Keim, of Philadelphia. For the last fifteen years it has been operated by the estate of Rev. J. N. Bachman and William Hess.

Another mantel factory was started in 1880 by Alvin F. Creitz, Moses K. Jacob and Charles K. Henry, who afterward sold the plant to Potter & McHose. It was operated for upwards of twenty-five years when it was abandoned. The last owner was Dr. Wilson P. Kistler who removed the machinery and factory and sold the land to John G. Jones.

John Watt started a small factory in the summer of 1913 for the manufacture of slate mantels, registers and sink-tops, buying the materials from slate operations, and has since carried on the business there.

In 1911 Frederick Pfeifly started dealing in flour, coal, grain and potatoes, and has since established a large business. During the last season of 1912-13, his shipments of potatoes by the car have amounted to 100,000 bushels. Previous of the more prominent shippers at this station have been Charles, Henry, Benj. K. Henry, Jacob Hartman, Samuel Hartman, John Kuhns, and Jonas Hamm.

The status of the town in 1913 was as follows:

Population, 175.	Flour and grain house.
Dwellings, 35.	Blacksmith shop.
Stores, 2.	Cobbler shop.
School buildings, 2.	Barber shop.
Hotel.	Clock repairer.
Coal yard.	R. R. station.

JACKSONVILLE.—In 1781 David Hamm owned the land where Jacksonville came to be located a short distance from the Ontelaunee creek in Lynn township. The first dwelling-house was built there by Martin Baer in 1820. John Hermany purchased it some years afterwards, made additions to the house, and opened a store and hotel. Elihu F. Lutz became the owner about 1865 and carried on both until his decease several years ago. Since then his estate has conducted the business.

A postoffice was established in 1845, and the postmasters have been:

Zachariah Long.	E. F. Lutz.
John Oswald.	John Follweiler.
Jacob Oswald.	Daniel Kressley.
John Hermany.	Elmer Kressley.

The Jacobs Church, a beautiful, well-kept edifice is situated in this village. For its description, see general history of Lynn township.

A planing mill was established here about 1890 by Daniel Kressly and operated by him with from two to ten hands, according to the demand of his business until he died in 1900, and since then his son, Elmer, has carried it on.

The present status of the place is as follows:

Dwellings, 12.	School building.
Population, 60.	Blacksmith shop.
R. R. Station.	Planing mill.
Church.	K. G. E. hall.

About 1884, the Grangers erected a hall at Jacksonville adjoining the R. R. station and occupied it for some years when it was purchased by the Knights of the Golden Eagle who have since held their meetings in it.

Amandas Hermany, of Jacksonville, has a patent deed in his possession which contains the following data: In 1744 a warrant was issued to one Evan Long for a tract of land situated in what is now Lynn township. Afterwards it was surveyed and found to contain 348 acres and allowances, and within its bounds are now situated the village of Jacksonville, Jacobs Church, the Hermany farm, and the farms of Amandas Leiby, Edwin Follweiler, John B. Follweiler, Lewis Follweiler, Frank Follweiler, Herman Wuchter, Ammon Long, Perry Long, Mrs. Emily Steigerwalt, William Pfeifly, Mrs. Lewis Hermany, Mrs. Susanna E. Hermany, J. J. Lutz; also the houses and lots of Michael Pfeifly, Rev. Jesse M. Mengel, Mrs. John Leiby, and the Jacksonville planing mill now owned by Elmer Kressly. When this tract was surveyed it was bounded by lands of George Hermany, Michael Albrecht, Frederick Leiser (Leaser, of Liberty Bell fame), Nicholas Smith, Daniel Ham, Philip Enos, John Yoder, and Martin Widsel.

WANAMAKER is a station on the Schuylkill and Lehigh railroad and when this was constructed in 1874 the business centre which had previously been made there took the name of Wanamaker after the prominent family whose ancestor located in this section of the country before 1740. Jacob Miller secured a warrant for the land as early as 1760, and this was conveyed to Philip Wannemacher in 1791. Christian Wannemacher became the owner in 1812 and he began improvements in 1825, among them a grist-mill along the Ontelaunee creek, along the public road leading to Kempton. [see description of this mill in "Grist-Mills," of the township.]

The railroad was constructed through this property and the station located upon it. Shortly afterward, Benjamin Levan erected a fine two-story brick hotel near the station, and William Fusselman a frame building; Jeremiah Klingaman established a steam saw mill; Klotz & Billig a foundry, and Milton Kerchner a marble yard. The remainder of the Wannemacher property in the vicinity was conveyed to Dr. D. S. Shade in 1878. The industries named were discontinued.

Irvin P. Reinhart has conducted a successful general store for a number of years.

Amandus Lutz, son of Benjamin, started a coal yard about 1890 and conducted the business for a number of years when he sold it to Henry F. Kistler, who has carried it on since.

Another coal yard was started by James D. Heintzelman about 1905 and carried on six years. He erected a frame grain house and dealt in grain, flour, feed, fertilizer and potatoes very extensively in connection with the coal business. He was succeeded by Clinton D. Fetherolf.

The Atlantic Refining Co. established an oil station there and erected a large tank with a large capacity which has been maintained since by them.

The village contains fifteen dwellings, and a population of 75.

A fine, graded school building is situated along the public road midway between this village and Steinsville which are about half a mile apart.

STEINSVILLE.—The land on which this village came to be located was granted by the state to Michael Stein in 1756, who had emigrated from Germany. It was founded by his son, John, in 1810. In 1832 he erected a spacious structure and embarked in the hotel and store business which he carried on for many years. He was followed by J. L. Brobst who continued there until 1874, when he conveyed the property to Dr. J. D. Graver, Graver made many improvements and rented the place to different parties, more especially Joseph Rose who carried on the business from 1874 to 1906. The present proprietor is Daniel Berk; and the store-keeper since 1911 has been Harry J. Rapp.

Odd Fellows' Hall.—In 1860, a number of Odd Fellows, of Steinsville and vicinity organized the Steinsville Hall Association for religious, social, and educational purposes and in 1861 erected a fine two-story brick building, 30 by 36 feet, which has since been known as Odd Fellows' Hall, and there they have held their meetings. An addition of 20 feet was made to it in 1912. Other societies meet there, including the Grand Army Post, No. 606. It is called the "Blue Mountain Hall."

Postoffice.—The postoffice was established in 1858, and postmasters have been the keepers of the store.

Industries.—A carriage factory was started here in 1851 by Ely & Waidelich and carried on by them for about forty years. Eugene Ely operated the plant for some years afterward. The blacksmith shop has been continued until the present time by different parties, the last being Adam Shollenberger.

A creamery was put up in 1881 by Doctors Shade and Graver, of Steinsville, for the manufacture of butter and cheese, and they carried it on for some years; since then it has been rented, the present lessee being G. A. Brownback.

A shoe factory has been operated here by C. E. Bond since 1895.

A cabinet-shop was carried on by C. S. Greenawald from 1874 to 1884, but he has since made all kinds of repairs to furniture. He has been undertaker for this community since 1874.

Physicians.—The following physicians have carried on practice here:

Joseph Soliday, 1826-'56.	Horace B. Erb, 1890-
D. S. Shade, 1856-'80.	1907.
J. D. Graver, 1870-'90.	Wm. J. Fetherolf, 1907--

Private Cemetery.—The private cemetery of Dr. J. D. Graver is in this village and attracts much attention by reason of its granite monument. It is mentioned among the "Private Cemeteries" of the township, and includes about two acres of level ground in a commanding situation.

Status in 1913.—The following particulars are mentioned as existing in the village in 1913:

Dwellings, 17.	Creamery.
Population, 110.	School building.
Hotel.	Blacksmith shop.
Store.	Private cemetery.
O. F. Hall.	Custom tailor.

SLATEVILLE.—In 1851 slate was first discovered in this section of the country near Steinsville by John, Michael and Samuel K. Lutz (sons of Samuel J.), and quarries were then opened and operated by Faulk, Daniel and William Roberts; but no special efforts were made to develop this industry here until 1869 when a storm uprooted a large tree which exposed a valuable bed of slate on the farm of Samuel F. Lutz and caused operations to resume at this place, and these were continued with more or less success by different parties for nearly thirty years, more especially by Wellington B. Grieseimer and his son, George W., of Reading, who became interested in the business in 1875 through their connection with the Berks county railroad. Different other quarries were opened in the vicinity and carried on by Krum & Roberts (afterwards Lutz & Keener), Centennial Slate Co., and Quaker City Slate Co. None of the plants have been in operation since 1900. The railroad stimulated this industry shortly after it was opened in 1874, but within thirty years competition became too great and was therefore gradually discontinued. During the existence of the several plants many thousand squares of roofing slate were shipped over the railroad from Wanamaker to all points.

The settlement came to be generally known as Slateville, and included fifteen dwellings. A hotel was started there by James L. Lutz and carried on by him for about twenty years. It is distant from Steinsville about a mile, but mentioned in connection with the village on account of its identification with the place.

LYNNVILLE was first started by Valentine Stull in 1806 by putting up a building and opening a general store which he carried on for many years. Not having any children, he "adopted" a very promising nephew of his wife's name, Peter Haas (afterward very active and prominent in the political history of Lehigh county). Haas eventually became the owner, and he was followed by his son, Jonas. The next two proprietors were Joseph Miller and William Miller; and about 1872 Solomon W. Bachman and Wm. Mosser. Bachman became sole owner in 1877 and carried on the business thirty-five years, retiring in 1912.

In 1807 John Seiberling built a house here and started a hotel which he conducted for forty years, when he was succeeded by his son, James, and then by David Bleiler (Seiberling's son-in-law), for upwards of 30 years. Wm. F. Brobst became the owner in 1902 and then tore down the old buildings and erected new ones in their stead (including a store-room), and he has since carried on the business. Sales of live-stock are frequently held there, which attract many farmers and make the place a prominent business centre.

A postoffice was established in the village in 1820 with John Seiberling as the postmaster, and he continued to fill the position until his decease in 1875, aged 92 years. Solomon W. Bachman was the postmaster from 1875 to 1912, excepting during the two Cleveland administrations. On June 1, 1912, it was transferred to the store near by of Robert Brobst who became the postmaster.

Besides the hotel building, the village includes nine dwellings, one of the former the home of Dr. Zangerle, who lived there till his decease in 1860.

Physicians.—The following physicians practiced here:

Joseph Zangerle.
H. Saylor.
— Trexler.

F. C. Seiberling.
R. J. Fly, 1899-1904.
A. G. Kriebel, 1904—.

The St. Peter's Church is situated near Lynnville [see description in "Churches" of the township].

About 1876, Dr. F. C. Seiberling and others who were interested in education established a select school at Lynnville, which was conducted in a most successful manner for upwards of ten years in the township building.

Among the more prominent teachers were James T. Wilder, of Sumpter, South Carolina, and Alvin Rupp, present school superintendent of Lehigh county. Many of the more prominent business and professional men of the township received their preliminary education there.

STEIN'S CORNER is situated in the southern section of the township, on the thoroughfare from New Tripoli to Kutztown. The land was formerly owned by the Grims. About 1855 a hotel was established at the place by Simon Lentz and he carried on the business for ten years. He was followed by William Seaman, William Stein, John and Charles Peter, ——— Hoffman, Elias G. Wiesner and Mr. Zerfass, who also acted as postmaster and carried on the store business.

A store was started about 1874 by William Stein and he subsequently came to own also the hotel which he carried on together for many years. Afterward this business centre was generally called "Stein's Corner."

A postoffice was established in 1875 with Joshua Weida as the postmaster who filled the position until he died. His successors have been the storekeepers.

Ten dwellings are in the village.

MOSSERVILLE is a small recognized village in the eastern part of the township, over a mile north from New Tripoli, comprising a grist mill, store, blacksmith shop and six dwellings. A tannery was successfully operated there for many years but it was abandoned in 1890.

The land here was originally taken up by John Much in 1746 in two tracts, one of which was sold to Philip Mosser in 1763 who had migrated thither from Goschenhoppen, and who later secured additional land. He had four sons, among them David, who remained at home in the township.

A grist mill and saw mill were erected there before 1800 by Philip Mosser, and they have been carried on continuously until the present time. By himself until 1817, by his son, David, until 1870, and by his grandson until now, a period covering more than 120 years.

A stone arched bridge spans the Ontelaunee near by.

A postoffice was established there in 1857 by Lewis F. Mosser, who served as the postmaster for twelve years.

A general store was started in the village about 1850 by Aaron Mosser, and he was followed by his brothers, David J. and John. John Ben-nighoff has carried it on since 1908.

A small frame blacksmith shop was put up near the mill by Mr. Mosser in 1890 and this has been operated since by different parties.

OFFICIALS FROM LYNN.—The following state officials were selected from Lynn township as representatives of Lehigh county at Harrisburg:

Senator.—James A. Miller, 1910-14.

Assemblymen.—Samuel Camp, 1862; Daniel H. Creitz, 1868, 1869; Charles H. Foster, 1879.

And the following county officials at Allentown:

Associate Judge.—Peter Haas, 1840-1856.

Sheriff.—Jacob B. Waidelich.

County Treas.—Daniel Wannemacher.

Co. Comm'r.—Jacob Wannemacher, 1819;

Samuel Camp, 1845.

Recorder of Deeds.—Silas Camp, 1868-1874.

Justices of the Peace.—The following persons served as justices of the peace in the township since 1840. For earlier names, see Civil List in Chapter IX:

Peter Snyder, 1840-'50; '55-'60; Jacob S. Kistler, 1840-'45; Jonas Haas, 1845-'55; David Fullweiler, 1850-'55; '65-'75; William M. Kistler, 1855-'65; Daniel H. Creitz, 1860-'68; Alvin F. Creitz, 1868-1903; William F. Krauss, 1875-'85; James A. Miller, 1885-1910; Elmer C. Kistler, 1903-'19; James W. Loy, 1910-.

Population.—The population of the township since 1790, according to the U. S. census enumeration has been as follows:

1790.....1,019	1860.....2,321
1800.....1,164	1870.....2,375
1810.....1,497	1880.....2,678
1820.....1,664	1890.....2,635
1830.....1,747	1900.....2,366
1840.....1,895	1910.....2,178
1850.....1,997

ELECTION DISTRICT.—The polling place of Lynn township was at Lynnville previous to 1875, and from 1875 to 1893 at Samuel Reitz's; then the township, owing to the large number of electors, exceeding 600, was divided into three districts with the polling places fixed at Lynnville, Jacksonville and New Tripoli.

CHURCHES.

Three churches are situated in this township:

Ebenezer, at New Tripoli; Jacob's, at Jacksonville; and St. Peter's, near Lynnville. A fourth church, Jerusalem, in Albany township, Berks county, is generally claimed as belonging to this community on account of the large and long continued membership from the township and therefore it has been included in this narrative.

EBENEZER CHURCH is situated at the western end of New Tripoli, along the northerly side of the thoroughfare leading from the town to Lynnport. It is a large brick building, one-story, with a stone basement, 54 feet front and 104 feet deep. The auditorium is a superior room, well-lighted, heated by steam, with a seating capacity of 1,000. A gallery is arranged across the front of the room and a fine organ is situated to the right (north) of the pulpit. The basement is equipped and used for Sunday school purposes. A tower is built at the southeast corner, topped with a slate-covered spire, 100 feet high, and includes a large, clear-toned bell whose peals can be heard for many miles in the surrounding country. The building was erected jointly by the Lutheran and Reformed congregations, which have worshipped there since 1761, at a total cost of $24,000.

The church councils at that time were constituted as follows:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Elders—John P. Reitz, Owen Krause.	Elders—Jonas F. Schneider, Paul Hunsicker.
Trustees—William H. Reitz, Lewis F. Wertman.	Trustees—Owen A. Peter, Edwin H. Snyder.
Deacons—Henry A. Sittler, Edwin Clause, William H. Frey, Oscar Betz.	Deacons—James A. Miller, Frank Kerschner, Wilson A. Mosser, Lewis B. Fenstermacher.
Treasurer—William F. Krauss.	Treasurer—James W. Korn.
Bldg. Com.—William F. Krauss, Phaon Reitz.	Bldg. Com.—Owen A. Peter, Jonas Snyder.
	Treas. Bldg. Com.—Jonas German.

The church was not supplied with an organ at that time. Several years later, a movement in this behalf was started by an active, earnest member, William H. Reitz, and this culminated in the addition of a fine, large organ at a cost of $2,500, one-half of which was generously contributed by Andrew Carnegie upon application having been made to him. Mr. Reitz took a prominent part in the church of 1890, as his father, Jonas, had in the church of 1824, and his grandfather, Lawrence, had in the church of 1798. This church is also known by the name of Lynn Township Church. In earlier times it was called "Die Orgel Kirche," or "Organ Church," because it was then the only place of worship in that region which had an organ. I:

has always been "union" in character from the beginning of its history.

The limits of the congregation extend from the Blue Mountains on the north to the limits of the Heidelberg congregation on the east, of the Jacksonville congregations on the west, and of the Lynnville congregations on the south,

Scholl who became one of the prominent and most active members of the church. The settlement there included a talented teacher by the name of Andrew Steiger (who taught school in the winter season), and, in answer to the earnest solicitations of his neighbors, he conducted the first divine services in the log house mentioned.

EBENEZER CHURCH, AT NEW TRIPOLI.

about five miles in length and four miles in width.

The foundation of this church dates from 1740, and 200 paces beyond the place where the public road from Lynnville to the Blue Mountains crosses the Ontelaunee, in an old log house, occupied for many years by Peter Snyder, Esq., and demolished in April, 1913, it had its origin. At that time the house was the residence of Peter

This house came to be a place of refuge to people of that vicinity during incursions by the Indians, and for a time it was also used as a store by Scholl.

After carrying on religious services in this house until 1745, the settlers determined to establish a church; but fifteen years were permitted to pass by before any real steps were taken in this behalf. Then a number of them, including Peter Scholl, Bernhard Schneider, Aaron Hartel, Jacob Hoffman, Peter Beisel, Heinrich Widerstein, Philip Wertman, Philip Mosser, Dietrich Sittler, Martin Schuck, Jacob Lynn and Jacob Oswald, purchased a tract of land from Jacob Hoffman and on it in 1761 they caused the first log church to be erected, but without any floor or boarding on the sides. An ordinary table was used as an altar; the pulpit was constructed of rough boards; and a small organ was supplied by some unknown person, from which the church became known as "Die Orgel Kirche."

The first settlements of this section of the county were made by a portion of the Allemaengel colony, having been the northern limit of that colony, as the Weisenberg settlements were the eastern; and the sloping sides of the Schochary were occupied before the Kistler Valley was. The earliest pioneers came here about 1735, and included Christian Weber, George Ludwig Schutt, Heinrich Oswald, Philip Gabriel Fogel (with two sons, Conrad and John, the latter having moved back to Macungie and founded Fogelsville), Valentine Schnider and Jacob Lynn. They were Palatines, Huguenots and Swiss. Others followed soon afterward and moved farther into the valley named. Besides those named, the following names are generally recognized as the progenitors of first families in this section of territory and many of them became the first members of this church:

Peter Scholl.	Martin Schuck.
Peter Beisel.	Dietrich Sittler.
Mathias Schutz.	Melchoir Duer.
Aaron Hartell.	Jacob Manz.
Jacob Hoffman.	Joseph Holder.
Jacob Lynn.	Erhard Zeiskloff.
Christian Muller.	Jacob Grunewald.
Joseph Gerber.	Michael Fenstermacher.
Johannes Schmidt.	Jacob Oswald.
Burkhard Mosser.	Heinrich Hauss.
Michael Bock.	Conrath Billman.
Michael Hettinger.	Johann Adam Kressly.
Peter Kirschner.	Andreas Straub.
Stephen Gross.	Thomas Everett.
Abraham Schellhammer.	Heinrich Runig.
Philip Schumann.	George Kistler.
Martin Grentler.	Abraham Offenbach.
Silvester Holben.	Adam Arndt.
Michael Hobbes.	Jacob Donatt.
Adam Brentz.	Frederich Hess.
George Brenner.	Wilhelm Mayer.
Philip Mosser.	Heinrich Widerstein.
Philip Wertman.	Bernhard Schneider.
Philip Antoni.

The records began with the year 1764, but the earliest writings relating to the church have been destroyed.

Between 1790 and 1800 this church owned a parsonage in common with the Jacob's and Bethel Churches. It established a school and encouraged teaching the children in connection with religious worship.

The second church was erected in 1798, made necessary then by reason of a violent storm which seriously damaged the first building, including the organ. It was constructed also of logs, two stories high, with galleries and the conveniences of that time. The dedicatory services were held by Rev. Daniel Lehman, Lutheran minister, and Rev. Johannes Roth, Reformed minister.

The title to the land was not secured in legal form until 1811. It seems that the consistories of the two congregations purchased a piece of ground from Jacob Hoffman in 1760, as stated above, and they then proceeded to establish their first place of worship; also a building for school purposes, and other necessary buildings for farming purposes. These improvements were put there without any title from the state or any written instrument from the reputed owner, and this situation of affairs was continued until 1810, when steps were taken to secure the title in the two congregations. Application was made to the state for a patent, and the state treasurer issued a receipt on Sept. 11th to Philip Mosser and Jacob Oswald as trustees of the Lutheran and Reformed Calvinist congregations of Lynn township, in Northampton county, for the sum of $79.91, in payment of 40 acres and 20 perches of land; and a patent was issued to them as such trustees on January 4, 1811, for said tract of land called "Harmony," which was part of a large tract of 149 acres, 20 perches in Lynn township, which had been surveyed to Adam Miller, in pursuance of a warrant dated August 5, 1752. The state authorities recognized the title to said land in the two congregations by reason of "sundry conveyances and a long uninterrupted possession duly proven." The patent is enrolled in Patent Book H, No. 4, p. 457.

The third church was erected in 1824, a new constitution having been adopted by the two congregations, founded on the prior instrument. The corner stone was laid May 16th. The building was constructed of stone and was generally recognized as the finest in this part of the county, and was dedicated in the fall. The total cost was $2,425, just one-tenth of the cost of the present beautiful and attractive structure. The consistories were as follows:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Elder—Jacob Mosser.	Philip Ebert.
Trustee—David Mosser.	Jacob Oswald.
Deacons—George Trein,	Daniel Oswald.
Heinrich Straub, Jacob	Abraham Fenstermacher.
Kistler, Geo. Bausch.	Peter Mayer.
Bldg. Com.—Jacob Mos-	Johann Miller.
ser, George Trein.	Philip Ebert.
	Jacob Fenstermacher.

The carpenter was George Fusselman, and mason, Peter Neff.

But a new organ was not supplied until 1850; then it was put in the church by Charles Heinzelman under special contract, and dedicated October 19th and 20th.

This third building was continued in use for over 60 years until 1890, when the fourth building was erected, as previously described.

The following ministers officiated:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
H. M. Muhlenberg, 1770-'80.	Philip Jacob Michael.
Hermann Jacob Schellhardt.	Peter Miller.
Daniel Lehman.	Heinrich Hentzel.
Friederich Gaisenheimer, 1806-'08.	Johannes Roth.
Johannes Knoske.	J. Frederich Van der Slat.
G. F. J. Saeger.	Johann Heinrich Helffrich, 1804-'10.
Dorning and Wartmann.	Heinrich Helffrich, 1810-'16.
Jeremiah Schindel.	Johannes Helffrich, 1845-'52.
Peter Z. Oberfeld.	William A. Helffrich, 1845-'67.
E. A. Bauer.	E. J. Fogel, 1867-'74.
W. Siegelin.	William A. Helffrich, 1874-'79.
Owen Leopold, 1858-'61.	Nevin W. Helffrich, 1879-1906.
S. S. Klein, 1861-'64.	George M. Smith, 1906-'11.
Ludwig Zuber, 1867-'69.	H. A. Althouse, 1911—
Henry S. Fegeley, 1869-1906.
A. O. Ebert, 1906—

The membership of each congregation is about 400.

The school, which was carried on in connection with the church, is mentioned in connection with the schools of the township.

The organists of the church are worthy of special mention for their long, continued and most faithful services. Frederic Schmidt from 1835 to 1870, and his son, Theodore, from 1870 to 1910, when he died.

CEMETERY.—A small lot of ground, about 100 by 200 feet, was set apart for burial purposes a short distance north of the church, to the rear of the shedding for teams. Numerous interments were made there until 1857, many of which have become unmarked. Then John Bachman, who owned a farm across the road from the church property set apart about two acres along the road, laid it off into lots 16 feet square and sold the lots, and since then the burial of deceased members of the church have been made here. Stephen Grim, Bachman's son-in-law, becoming the owner of the farm, enlarged the cemetery and continued the sale of the lots; and he was succeeded by Achilles O. Grim as owner of the unsold lots and adjoining land. Numerous interments have been made there, and many of the lots have been improved by owners by the erection of attractive monuments.

JACOB'S CHURCH is a brick edifice at Jacksonville, erected in 1863 and situated on the main thoroughfare. It is a union church, owned in common by Lutheran and Reformed congregations since 1807.

The first settlements in the vicinity of this church were similar to those in the vicinity of Ebenezer Church and by the same class of settlers, possessed of a strong religious spirit. The heads of the first families were the following, who arrived from 1735 to 1760 and many of them became identified with the foundation of this church:

Martin Weitzel.	Henry Koeing.
Charles Straub.	Peter Lutz.
Evan Long.	Daniel Oswald.
Jacob Lieser.	Michael Stein.
Gottlieb Donat.	Charles Shuck.
John Baumgardner.	Frederic Sechler.
George Oswald.	Adam Sechler.
John Everett.	Jacob Wannamacher.
George Hermany.	Philip Wannamacher.
Henry Brednich.	Andreas Sechler.
George Nungesser.	Henry Widderstein.
Frederic Lieser.	Balthaser Yoder.
John Lieser.	John Baer.
John Leiby.	George Breisch.
John Lorah.	Martin Baer.
Jacob Oswald.	Matthias Delong.
Peter Frantz.	George Eckroth.
John Nyer.	Stofle Eckroth.
Jacob Baer.	Bernhart Follweiler.
Adam Creitz.	Philip Fusselman.
George Enos.	Henry Holler.
Philip Enos.	Daniel Ham.
Thomas Everett.	John Herman.
Zacharias Haller.	Mary Wannamacher.
Christian Henry.	Abraham Long.

The first effort to establish a church here was in 1761, when Daniel Ham donated two acres for a Reformed Church, situated in the King's Highway, half a mile from the house of Abraham Langen, together with the right of going to a spring of water near by for drinking purposes. Religious services had been previously held in the woods and in the homes of the settlers, for they were pious people, having brought with them their Bibles and singing books. Sermons were read by the school master and occasionally by ministers who came from a distance, as Boehm, Kidenweiler and others. The buildings was put up in that year and stood about fifty steps southwest from the present site. It was built of logs and had no flooring nor boards at the side; and was dedicated by Rev. Philip Jacob Michael, the first pastor. At the same time a log school house was put up adjoining the church, and the congregation employed the following teachers: — Dannecker, Frantz Spittler, Robert Singler, — Knechlein and others.

The early members suffered a great deal from the incursions of the Indians, for the church was situated along a pathway which they used. On the land of Aaron Donot, a man named Eckroth was shot dead while plowing, and his daughter was wounded. At the spring in Jonathan Muthhard's meadow near Lynnport a man was murdered and he was buried there; when the people went to bed they took their loaded guns and sharp axes with them; and so when they attended church service.

The first baptisms were made and registered by Rev. Conrad Steiner, Jr. In 1804, Rev. Hoffman administered communion to 51 communicants.

From the beginning until 1807 the property was wholly in the ownership of the Reformed congregation; then a right was given to the Lutherans, and a third acre of land was acquired from Daniel Ham. In November of that year, it was determined to erect a new church on the extra land secured and this was finished in 1808, and regularly dedicated by the two congregations. The building was of stone; in dimensions, 36 feet wide, 42 feet long, and 28 feet high; and cost $1,407.92½. The master-mason was Abraham von Bremer, who received $226.67; and the master-carpenter was Nicholas Bachman, who received $349.34.

The church council then was:

Elders—Casper Wannemacher, John Nyer, Jacob Fetherolf and Michael Stein.

Deacons—Conrad Stump, John Everett, and Martin Baer.

Bldg. Com.—Bernhart Follweiler, John Oswald, Jacob Koenig, and Henrich Fusselman.

Treasurer—John Smied.

The ministers were: Lutheran, Heinrich Greisenheimer; Reformed, Henry Dieffenbach.

In 1822, a new double, log school house was put about 20 steps distant, and the pupils were instructed in both languages. The congregations supplied the teachers until 1838, when the township accepted the common school system. This was used until 1863 when a two-story brick building was erected in its place by the church and the township jointly—the church members paid $483 towards the cost which was satisfactory to the township.

A new organ was placed in the church in 1849.

The third, and present, church building was erected in 1862-'63 at a cost of $6,500. The corner stone was laid April 27, 1862; and the dedication took place May 24, 1863, the ministers officiating having been Reverends Zulich, Klein, Miese, Dubbs, and Leopold.

The church councils consisted of—Elders—David Fetherolf, Henry Braucher, Jacob Klingaman, David Follweiler.

Trustees—Henry Long, Daniel Wannemacher.

Deacons—Benjamin Glase, Thomas Long, James K. Moser, Samuel Sechler, John F. Follweiler, Charles Everett.

Bldg. Com.—Aaron Donat, Reuben Buck, Joshua Smith, Levi Kistler.

Pres.—Samuel Hermany; Sec.—Reuben Ross; Treas.—Wm. Mosser.

Master Mason—John Stimer (who received $800).

Master Carpenter—August Hollenbach (who received $775, and extra for the steeples).

In 1865 a bell, weighing 590 pounds, was put in the steeple; the cost was $200.

The cemetery was laid out in 1865, and enlarged several times. It is situated opposite the church.

The iron fence was put up in 1881, costing $822.32.

The following ministers have officiated:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Henry Geisenhainer, 1807-'11.	Philip Jacob Michael, 1761-'70.
John Knoske, 1811-'19.	John Waymer, 1770.
G. F. E. Jager, 1819-'50.	Conrad Steiner, Jr., 1771-'76.
John Roeller, 1850-'38.	— Hertzell.
Owen Leopold, 1858-'61.	— Roth.
S. S. Kline, 1861-'64.	Peter Miller, 1795-1807.
E. Kramlich, 1864-'69.	Henry Dieffenbach, 1807-'16.
H. S. Fegeley, 1869-1906.	John Zulich, 1816-'75.
A. O. Ebert, 1906—.	J. N. Bachman, 1877-1905.
	J. S. Mengel, 1905-'11.
	M. F. Klingaman, 1912—

Rev. Roth was buried under the altar of the old church.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH is situated at Lynnville, in the southeastern section of Lynn township, along the public road leading from Lynnville to Seiberlingsville. It is a fine structure, one high story, built of brick, with a superior, elevated location which commands an extended view of the surrounding country.

In 1857, certain inhabitants, of the Lutheran and Reformed faith in northwestern portion of Weisenberg township and the southeastern of Lynn, became desirous of securing better facilities for church worship and therefore agitated the question of erecting a building for themselves in the most convenient section of these two adjoining districts but they could not come to any agreement as to the exact locality. The heads of families in the northwestern portion of Weisenberg then determined to establish a place of worship near Seiberlingsville, and so those of the southeastern portion of Lynn selected a place south of Lynnville.

The latter party proceeded with so much earnestness and pride that they secured a piece of ground, several acres in area, and by August 30th laid the cornerstone of their proposed church, and within a year the building was completed at a cost of $4,000. The dedication took place May 23-24, 1858, and the following pastors officiated:

Lutheran—Rev. Jeremiah Schindel.
Reformed—Rev. William A. Helffrich.
Rev. Benjamin K. Derr.

The councils were constituted as follows:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Elders — Peter Haas, George Rex.	Jonas Bachman. George Miller.
Trustee—John Schnei- der.	Samuel Schneider. Daniel S. Fenstermacher.
Deacons—Joshua Weida, Joel Haas, Joseph Mil- ler, Jonas Fritz.	Jonas Schneider. David Holben. Nathan Bachman.
Bldg. Com.—Jacob Gehr- inger, Jonas Werley.	Peter Bachman. James Schmidt.
Treasurer—Peter Haas.
Secretary—Francis Weiss.

In 1912, the building was remodeled and many improvements were made to it, such as introducing new pews, installing two hot-air furnaces, re-papering the interior of the building, and re-painting the entire building, adding half an acre of ground for enlarging the cemetery and the enclosure about the church; and new carpets were supplied by the ladies of the congregation. The total cost was about $3,000; and the re-dedication took place Dec. 1, 1912.

The cemetery is a part of the church property and is situated to the east of the building.

The councils in 1913 were constituted as follows:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Elders—Jacob W. Kra- mer, John D. Baush.	Stephen Bachman. Benjamin Leiby.
Trustee—Amson C. Kist- ler.	David Wert. William Snyder.
Deacons — George L. Weida, Charles Miller, Clinton Derr, Edwin Kistler.	Herbert Heintzelman. Jacob Snyder. Claude Bachman.

The following pastors have served in this church since its organization:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Rev. Owen Leopold, 1850-'61.	Rev. Wm. A. Helffrich, 1858.
Rev. S. S. Kline, 1863-'67.	Rev. E. J. Fogel, 1866.
Rev. L. Zuber, 1867-'69.	Rev. Siegel, 1872.
Rev. H. S. Fegely, 1869- 1906.	Rev. Benjamin Weiss, 1875-'76.
Rev. A. O. Ebert, 1906 —.	Rev. J. N. Bachman, 1877-1906.
	Rev. J. M. Mengel, 1906- '12.
	Rev. M. F. Klingaman, 1912—.

JERUSALEM CHURCH.—This church is situated near Wessnerville, in Berks county, a short distance from the westerly line of Lynn township, but the membership is mostly from this township, and therefore it was deemed proper to include it with the history of the preceding churches.

The first efforts to effect a church organization in this community, called Allemangel, must have taken place between 1740 and 1747, as ascertained from the report of Rev. Henry Melchoir Muhlenberg who visited this place during those years and sent some of his assistants at times to minister to the spiritual needs of the people who had come from Faulkner Swamp, New Hanover, and Goshenhoppen. During this time Rev. Muhlenberg directed his father-in-law, Conrad Weiser, to buy 50 acres of land for the congregation, hence there must have been an organization before 1747, otherwise such a transaction would not have taken place.

The first church was a small log building; and a log school-house was erected about the same time. When the church was finished is not known. The first church record, which was arranged by Rev. Daniel Schumacher in the year 1768, says on the title page, that Rev. Tobias Wagner (who served the Moselem congregation from 1745 to 1759, and then returned to Germany) officiated at the consecration of the church. Therefore it could not have been completed later than 1759. A second log church was built in 1768, or the old one was replenished. The officers of the church at that time were: E. Fosselman, G. Lambert, G. Kistler, P. Stambach, J. Gardner, M. Haas, M. Hollenback.

In 1770 Rev. Muhlenberg conveyed to this congregation the 50 acres which he had bought in 1747 and held in his name. The trustees then were: Philip Stambach, Jacob Gardner, Valentine Brobst, Matthew Brobst, and George Kistler.

In 1768, the members of the Reformed faith in that community were allowed the privilege of holding services in the church at such times as would not interfere with the regular services of the Lutherans.

When it became desirable to erect a new church, the Lutherans and Reformed agreed to build a Union Church, the Reformed to pay their part of the cost and the Lutherans to accord them equal rights in the use of the church. The cornerstone was laid May 7, 1812, and the officiating ministers were:

Lutheran—Revs. J. Knoske, H. Geisenhainer, J. Weygandt.

Reformed—Revs. H. Dieffenbach, Jacob Dieffenbach.

The consecration took place on Whitsunday, May 29, 1814, and also on the following day, May 30th. The pastors who officiated were:

Lutheran—Revs. John Knoske, Heinrich Heine.

Reformed—Revs. H. Dieffenbach, J. Dieffenbach, A. J. Herman.

Building Committee—Michael Brobst, Samuel Kistler, John Weiss, Jacob Bachman.

The centennial was observed Sept. 2d and 3d, 1871. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion and large congregations were present at all these services.

In 1880 the church was renovated, a bell-tower, built and a bell supplied, and it was re-consecrated Oct. 23, 1881.

During summer of 1908 the church was remodelled and newly furnished and reconsecration services were held on Oct. 25, 1908, by Rev. Dr. George F. Spieker (Mt. Airy Theological Seminary), and Rev. A. O. Ebert, representing the Lutherans, Rev. George B. Smith (of Kutztown) and Rev. J. S. Bartholomew, representing the Reformed.

The church councils at that time were:

LUTHERAN.	REFORMED.
Elders—Jarius Trexler, Alvin Fetherolf.	Elders—John Hunsicker, John Smith.
Trustees—Jacob Schroder, Geo. N. Kistler.	Trustees—Monroe Snyder, Elmer J. Bachman.
Deacons—James Leiben- spenger, Stephen Kistler.	Deacons—Anson Bach- man, Edwin Fistler.

Lutheran Pastors.

Revs. Dr. H. M. Muhlenberg and N. Kurtz first did pioneer work in that section.

Tobias Wagner, not later than 1755.

Daniel Shumacher, 1755-1770.

John A. Friederici, 1770-1774.

Vacant to 1778, but visited by Dr. Muhlenberg, and J. H. Schaum.

Frederick J. Miller, 1778-1780.

Daniel Lehman, 1780-1810.

John Knoske, 1811-1823.

Joseph Doering.

George Wartman.

Ludwig Walz, 1828-1831.

Isaac Röller, 1831-1857.

Owen Leopold, 1859-1861.

S. S. Klein, 1861-1867.

L. Zuber, 1867-1868.

D. D. Trexler (a few months).

H. S. Fegley, 1869-1906.

A. O. Ebert, Aug. 1, 1906-

Reformed Pastors.

Henry Dieffenbach.

J. Zuilch.

A. J. Herman, 1856-1901.

James O. Oswald, 1901-1904.

J. S. Bartholomew, 1906-1912.

A. L. Brumbaugh, 1913-

The following young men have entered the ministry of the Lutheran Church from this congregation:

S. K. Brobst.

Reuben Kistler.

Alfred Kistler.

William U. Kistler.

Chas. E. Kistler.

Edwin Kistler.

D. Elmer Fetherolf.

Jonas Henry.

MORAVIANS.—Whilst the pioneers in the vicinity of Jerusalem church became dilatory in their religious efforts to establish and carry on a church along the line between Berks, and Northampton counties, a number of the Moravian faith found a settlement there and for a time manifested much zeal, indeed so much that members of the Lutheran and Reformed faith were induced to revive their activity under the influence and visitations of Rev. Henry M. Muhlenberg, from fears that the Moravians would eventually defeat them in their efforts for a church.

However, these Moravians, not disheartened, established a small log church for themselves, near by and carried on worship for a time. The foundation of the building is still in existence, though covered by sod, on the farm of Samuel J. Kistler, about 350 yards from the graveyard, adjoining an apple orchard, where a slight elevation marks the site of it. And their school-house is said to have been situated in the other valley eastward from the church.

On the Kistler farm mentioned, in the lower western end of the township, there is an almost forgotten graveyard which was placed there by the Moravian settlers. It was 68 feet by 100 feet in dimensions, but is now nearly obliterated by a growth of trees, in fact these trees are the second growth, for so long has the time been since it was abandoned. Kistler was born on his farm in 1861; and he recalls that when a young man he counted seventy mounds in the graveyard. A row of sixteen was in the middle of it and the next row on the north side contained ten. Many of them had markers only, but some had regular tombstones. In 1911, six of them were found standing around a tree, with undecipherable inscriptions which show that they were put there from 1746 to 1770.

FAMILY GRAVE-YARDS.—Within the boundary lines of this township, sixteen private burial places have been found, which shows the prevalence of the custom in the early history of the county. They are situated in the different sections of the township, and such details of them have been presented as could be obtained at this time.

In the township, near the Blue Mountains, one mile north of Wanamaker, on the Frederick Leaser farm, there is a private graveyard in a big field back of the barn now the property of Lewis Sensinger. It is 24 x 26 feet; and contains many graves of pioneers, the most prominent being those of Frederick Leaser, who hauled the Liberty Bell from Philadelphia to Allentown, in 1777, and his son Daniel, born March 18, 1772, died Dec. 18, 1814.

Another prominent grave is that of John Smith, a Revolutionary soldier, who was born Feb. 13, 1757, and died Oct. 10, 1826.

The Graber private burial ground is situated at Steinsville, immediately back of the village. The monument and receiving vault cost $3,000.

On the west side of the public road, leading from Wanamaker to the Blue Mountains, about one-fifth of a mile north from the village, on the farm now owned by Robert S. Henry, there is a private graveyard surrounded by a thick stone-wall, whose dimensions are 24 x 18 feet. Within this plot three adult persons are buried, two having substantial tombstones, bearing the following inscriptions:

Adam Heinrich, Born Jan. 23, 1774, Died Mar. 16, 1853, Aged 79—1—23	Barbara Heinrich, Gattin von Adam Heinrich Geboren November 10, 1782, starb Septem- ber 28, 1854, alt 71 vahr, 10 monat, 18 tage.
--	---

The grave nearest the wall on the south side has pieces of slate as markers.

The Adam Kressley farm is situated near "Donats Kopf," on the north slope of the hill. It is locally known as "Saul's Head," now owned by William K. Fetherolf. A grave is visible there, in which a blacksmith named Saul was buried. The hill was named after this pioneer blacksmith.

A small graveyard is on the Blue Mountains, near the "Mountain House" on the road leading from Jacksonville to Tamaqua. David Follweiler and several other persons were buried there.

Along the road leading across the Blue Mountain there is a small graveyard and here Daniel Follweiler and others were buried.

Martin Weitzel, his wife, a child, and some members of the Ennis family were buried at the southeast side of a large white-oak tree, which stands at the cross-roads at the county cement bridge, built in 1911, over the Ontelaunee creek, near Jacksonville, and also near the house of the late Reuben Buck. The road now passes over their graves. Weitzel was an early pioneer settler, and was buried on his land as was the custom of pioneer settlers.

On Dr. D. W. W. Follweiler's land, 200 yards east from Fort Everett, a graveyard was located which contained the graves of six adult persons, marked by rough field stones. All traces of the graves have been destroyed.

A graveyard is located on the farm now owned by James W. Smith. It is between the houses of Mr. Smith, in one valley, and William H. Reitz in the other, several fields dividing them. The burial place was about 150 feet west from the line fence between the two properties. Mr. Reitz (one of the oldest and best informed residents of that vicinity) stated that his father-in-law, David Schitz—who had always lived nearest to the graveyard, said that some of the very early settlers were buried there.

In 1753, Joh. Christ. Moyer owned the land, and he and others were buried in this graveyard. In Revolutionary times, Martin Wertman was the owner, and it is stated that two horses were stolen from this property by Tories.

On the east side of the public road between the farms of William H. Hoffman and Edwin Snyder near New Tripoli, there is a graveyard where Jonas Clauss, and nine children of Jonas Ebert, were buried. These graves are not marked and a pile of field stones now covers them.

On the Lewis F. Snyder farm, formerly an Ebert homestead, there is an enclosed plot 12 x 12 feet, which contains two graves of adult persons. This farm is located near what is Greenwald's, and the graveyard is on the west side of the public road, leading northward from this station.

One of the graves has a tombstone which bears the inscription: "Philipp Ebert, who died October 6, 1828, aged 62 y., 10 m., 19 d.

Ebert was a Lutheran member of Ebenezzer church. He had a certain tree at the church, where he always tied his horse, and some one wished this tree cut down because it was getting old. But Ebert protested and said with emphasis: "As sure as you cut down the tree, so sure you will cut me away from the church." This was about 1824. Then an evil-minded person promised a quart of apple-jack to a low character of the community if he would cut the tree down and this he did one night. Thereafter Ebert never went to the church, but by his request he was buried where his grave now is.

A private graveyard was also on the farm of Henry F. Reinhart, at the upper end of Stony Run, in a meadow south of the house. Tradition says that Indians were buried there.

The Grim private graveyard is located one-eighth of a mile from Stein's Corner, on the right side of the public road leading to Seiberlingsville, and is on the farm now the property of Benjamin Leiby. This was an old Grim (or as the land warrant and deed spell it: "Krim") homestead. The farm belonged to one Johannes Grim (1793-1870) whose wife was Catharine Schneider. A number of adult persons were buried here. The last burials there were a little boy named Charles Grim, and a child of Jefferson Kunkel. In November, 1911, seven markers of field stone were still there. One large stone bears the initials C. K., with the date 1763.

Tradition states that a church was to have been established at Stein's Corner, but instead the Wessnersville (Friedens) Union Church was erected.

A very old stone house, pebble-dashed on the outside, stands on the Benjamin Leiby farm. It was erected by a Grim.

Near the old Nathan Bachman homestead, now owned by his daughter, the widow of Mahlen C. Dietrich, in the southwestern end of Lynn township, at the western end of Kistler Valley, 150 yards east of the public road leading to Wessnersville, in a field of the John H. Hunsicker farm, there is a private burial ground, 18 by 30 feet in dimensions and in the middle of it there stands a growing hickory tree, 14 inches in diameter. No information could be obtained from the older residents of the district as to who is buried on this plot now almost entirely forgotten. Two field stones were found on the plot, which contained inscriptions that could not be interpreted.

Old residents recall that some of the graves had tombstones, but the inscriptions could not be read. It appears that the plot, now become a part of the field without any enclosure, is full of graves. It may have been the burial place of a few families of the early settled Moravians, locally known as "Herrnhüter."

At the line fence between the Anson C. Kistler and Henry D. Kistler farms in Kistler Valley, there is a private graveyard, on the Anson C. Kistler side, near the Schochary Hill, and an old white-oak tree marks this burial place. As late as 1890, seven graves were visible, marked by rough field stones. It is almost entirely forgotten and obliterated. Who lies buried there is not known.

A log-house stood several squares away, which was probably erected about 1742, the time one George Michael Kuntz obtained a warrant for the land. In 1907, Anson C. Kistler found a Spanish coin on the site of this house, dated 1773. The value of this coin is about three cents, but Mr. Kistler nevertheless prizes it most highly as a memento.

One mile east of Lynnville, on the Miller homestead, there is a private burial place, long known as the "Miller graveyard." It is located at the corner of two public roads, in dimensions 50 x 50 feet with a stone wall in fairly good condition along the two sides adjoining the public roads, the other two sides being enclosed by a fence. One Christian Miller had settled here at a very early period. He, and his wife, some children, and grandchildren, and descendants of the fourth generation, were buried here. Twenty tombstones remain standing and upwards of twenty graves are unmarked. Among those buried there are the following:

Christian Miller, Sr.,	1706-1785
Christian Miller, Jr.,	1741-1778
Anna Elizabeth Miller,	1757-1830
Andreas Miller,	1739-1817
Peter Miller, Sr.,	1772-1855
Maria Magd Miller,	1770-1863
(wife of Peter)
George Miller,	1798-1865
Mary M. Miller,	1805-1874
(wife of George)

It is noteworthy of mention that, in August, 1913, one of the descendants, Mr. Reuben Miller, of Millport, Carbon county, with the encouragement and assistance of other descendants, improved this private burial place at great expense by putting around it a concrete wall, by securely fastening the upright tombstones in cement beds, and by covering its entire surface with concrete so as to prevent the growth of obnoxious grasses and weeds, an improvement which has won for him much favorable comment.

SCHOOLS.

The first building for school purposes was put up about 1761, by the members of the Ebenezer Church, near the log church, where the present edifice stands. It was one story, with a hall running through the middle. The school-room was on the left of the hall. On the right there was a room for living and sleeping purposes, and another small room which was used as a kitchen; and these two were occupied by the teacher and his family. The teacher's children slept on the garret, where (it is said) the snow was often blown in and lay in heaps on the bed in the morning.

About 1858 a new brick building, two-stories, was put up by the church, with two rooms, one for the school and the other for the church. The earliest teacher mentioned was named Jacob Salem, who was regarded as a very capable teacher, and he continued teaching for many years until he became too feeble. He was succeeded by Frederick Schmidt, also a superior teacher from Germany, who "devoted himself to his work with his whole heart." He taught for upwards of thirty years, from about 1830 to 1865. His teaching was in the German language. He also filled the position of organist and choir leader. He was succeeded by his son, Theodore S., who taught in the English language for the township in a most efficient manner, for fifteen years and like his father, he was a skilful musician and acted as organist and choir leader of the church until his decease in 1910.

Some of the first public school teachers were: Blair, Schumacher, Stoneback, Bradley, Reinhart, and Bausch.

The township, by election, adopted the common school system in 1838, and elected directors to carry out the provisions of the law. The president of the board was Jesse Hermany; the secretary, J. S. Kistler; and the treasurer, Daniel Brobst. Then there were in the township 375 persons who were liable to taxation, for school purposes; and the state appropriation to the district was $242.78.

In 1855, there were 15 schools in the district and 604 pupils.

During the latter part of 1878 the board consisted of the following members:

Daniel Fetherolf.	Daniel Bennighoff.
Daniel Kerschner.	Daniel Leiby.
Daniel Kistler.	Willoughby Brobst.

But an election changed the personnel of the board as follows: Daniel H. Creitz and Samuel Hermany took the places of Daniel Kistler and Willoughby Brobst.

The school board had become unpopular because of some of its decisions and Harrison Saul, a former teacher, and prominent citizen, had sarcastically called it the "Daniel's Board," because it had five Daniels on it. At an excited meeting of the board held at New Tripoli, a number of citizens of villages protested against the unfair division of that section, the board having decided that children living on the East side of Madison street should attend Snyder's school which stood about one and one-half miles north of the village and Harrison Saul was the spokesman for the protestors. His stinging address in which he frequently mentioned the "Daniel's Board," led Samuel Hermany to attempt to answer him and on rising from the table where the directors sat, in great silence he said: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?"

Mr. Saul promptly and vehemently replied: "I am Saul, Kish's son, and have been sent out to find my father's asses, and lo! here I have found them."

The first graded school house in the township was at New Tripoli, a two-story building, owned jointly by the township and Ebenezer Church on church ground. The first floor was used for school purposes by the township; the second for church and Sunday-school purposes.

The first double room building in the township was erected at Lynnport in 1887, the second at Steinsville in 1888; the third at Lynnville in 1889; the fourth at New Tripoli in 1890.

The directors elected under the new school code in November, 1911, were the following:

James M. Braucher, 6 years.

Samuel T. Waidlich, 4 years.

Frank B. Snyder, 4 years.

Charles H. Koenig, 2 years.

Monroe P. Snyder, 2 years.

Of whom Waidlich was selected as president, F. B. Snyder as secretary, and M. P. Snyder as treasurer.

At that time, the status of the school affairs in the township was as follows:

Buildings, 16.	Tax levied, $5,416.
Teachers, males, 8.	State app't'n, $3,043.
Teachers, females, 9.	Property value, $30,000.
Pupils, males, 247.	Salary, $44 to $50.
Pupils, females, 239.

The buildings were known as follows:

New Tripoli (graded).	Camp's.
Lynnport (graded).	Rausch's.
Steinsville (graded).	Snyder's.
Lynnville (graded).	Kistler Valley.
Greenawald's (graded).	Slateville.
Fenstermacher's.	Jacksonville.
Fetherolf's.	Rabert's Corner.
Weaver's.	Bausch's.

The building known as Bausch's is owned jointly by Lynn and Weisenberg.

Teachers.—The following is a list of teachers of the township for the year 1913-14:

TEACHERS.	Edna E. Snyder.
John F. Weiss.	Hattie Fetherolf.
Mrs. Leon B. Klingaman.	Anna L. Heintzelman.
James L. Kerschner.	Eva Kistler.
Minnie L. Sittler.	Florence M. Kuntz.
Olive F. Oswald.	Elmer W. Fisher.
Howard E. Hartman.
Mame E. Wuchter.	SCHOOL.
Arthur B. Klingaman.	New Tripoli (secondary)
Minnie E. Klingaman.	New Tripoli (primary).
Milton D. Leiby.	Greenawald's.
Jennie A. Foster.	Snyder's.
Cyrus A. Peter.	Weaver's.
Fred F. Behler.	Lynnport (secondary).
Alfred Kistler.	Lynnport (primary).

Jacksonville.	Lynnville (primary).
Fetherolf's.	Kistler's Valley.
Steinsville (secondary).	Rausch's.
Steinsville (primary).	Camp's.
Slateville.	Rabert's Corner.
Fenstermacher's.	Bausch's (with Weisen-
Lynnville (secondary).	berg).

In 1913 the pupils of school age between the years of 6 and 16, numbered 379, seven less than in 1912.

English School.—The first action of the people of the township in behalf of improved facilities for education, except in connection with the churches, was taken in 1812, at Saegersville, later called New Tripoli. A society was then formed for the erection of a schoolhouse where all the instruction was to be given in the English language, and it was built on Decatur street, on lots, 70 and 71, each 66 feet wide and 177½ feet deep. It was called the Saegersville English schoolhouse, and teaching came to be carried on there successfully from that time until the township accepted the school-law in 1838. Daniel Saeger was the most influential man of the community in this movement.

Rules and regulations were adopted for the management of this school, which were as follows:

"RULES AND REGULATIONS OF SAEGERSVILLE ENGLISH SCHOOL SOCIETY.

"At 'an election held at the House of George Tryne, Innkeeper, on the twenty-seventh Day of March, A. D. 1812, Jacob Mosser & Daniel Saeger, Esq., were Duly Elected a committee to establish Rules and Regulations, as follows, to wit:

"1st. That there shall be five Trustees and One Treasurer Chosen annually by ballot, and the Elections to be held on the second Saturday of April at the School-Room, and the said Trustees and the successors shall be elected in a manner and form as is hereinafter Described, to have the name & title 'Saegersville English School Society.'

"2d. That the said Trustees, after each annual election, shall elect from among their own members a President and Secretary, and in all cases Two-Thirds of the Trustees shall constitute a quorum to transact any business.

"3d. That all elections to be held in Pursuance of this Rule Shall be conducted by two members of the society, who shall be appointed inspectors at the same time & Place where the Trustees are to be elected as a'ordered by the Electors then assembled, and the inspectors so chosen shall appoint one suitable person as a clerk.

"4th. That the Secretary of the Society shall make out and furnish the Inspectors of every election with a fair, true, and correct list of all members of the said Society & the number of shares set opposite their Respective names.

"5th. That in all elections to be held in pursuance of these Rules, every person of the age of twenty-one years who has subscribed for any number of shares in Said Stock of Said society, shall be entitled to a vote for each and every Respective Share.

"6th. That in case any vacancy happens by Death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, a majority of the Trustees assembled shall appoint special election for supplying such vacancies, and every special election shall be held and Conducted as is directed for the annual Election, and the Persons so legally chosen shall hold said office for the remainder of the time in whose place he was elected.

"7th. That it shall be the Duty of the Trustees yearly and every year to get a School-Master who is by them judged competent for Business, and agree with him for his salary for Three months, to commence from the first day of December, or as near that time as conveniently may be, and defray the said salary. Each subscriber of the said English School Society shall pay quarterly the sum of two Dollars, and every month if not amounts to a quarter the sum of eighty cents, and every non-subscriber shall pay quarterly the sum of three Dollars, & every month if not amounts to a quarter, the sum of one Dollar & twenty cents; and if it should happen that it would not be money enough to pay said salary, and no money in the Treasury, then every Subscriber Shall pay his proportionable part according to the number of shares subscribed, & if money left, then to remain in the Treasury for any use the said Trustees shall direct.

"8th. That after the said quarterly school is expired, and any number of said subscribers is Desirous of having School for any time before the then next quarterly school, they shall apply to the Trustees, who shall grant them Leave for any time for getting a School-Master competent for Business to have a school at said School-house at the expense of the Company applying for said school.

"9th. That in case the Teacher or employees should think themselves aggrieved, they are to make known their complaint to any one of the Trustees, who can at any time call a meeting of the Board of Directors in all cases.

"10th. That the Trustees take particular Notice that Sufficiency of wood be provided for the stove during the quarterly school mentioned in the 7th article, for the comfort of the Teacher and Scholars.

"11th. That the said Trustees & their successors shall be impowered to keep the school-house & appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging, all in good order and Repair, and to Draw the Money from the Treasurer of said society found to defray the expenses of all warrants or orders on the Treasury which shall be signed by the President of the Society.

"12th. That the present Trustees and their Successors shall permit and suffer all Persons of Lawful age who shall offer to subscribe in their own name or the name of any other person who shall Duly authorize the same for any number of Shares in the Stock of said Society, and the Shares in Said Stock shall be Ten Dollars each, and that each and every subscriber shall have and to hold the several and respective shares for which subscribed for themselves, their Heirs, or Assigns, & the warrants or titles for said shares or Share shall be signed by the President of Said Society.

"13th. That a book to be kept by the Trustees and their proceedings recorded therein.

"In witness whereof we, the said Committee, have hereunto set our hands the twentieth Day of August, in the Year of our Lord one Thousand Eight Hundred and Twelve.

"JACOB MOSER.
"DAN. SAEGER."

At the same time, a subscription paper was circulated there for the purpose of raising money, which was as follows:

"We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, do promise to pay to the managers or trustees of the Saegersville English School Society the sum of Ten Dollars for every share of stock in said society or company set opposite to our respective names, in such manner and proportion, and at such time as shall be determined by the Trustees of the said society, and the said sums of money to be applied for the use of the aforesaid English school, as witness our hand this 20th day of August, A. D. 1812.

Names of Subscribers.	Number of Shares
Jacob Moser	2	$20
Daniel Saeger	2	20
Henry Mantz	2	20
George Tryne	2	20
Burckhardt Moser	2	20
Christian Holben	2	20
John Kistler	2	20
John Sittler	2	20
George Sittler	2	20
David Moser	2	20
Samuel Ely, Jr.	2	20"

On April 2, 1813, an election was held at the schoolhouse for selecting trustees to carry on the school property, and the following were elected:

David Mosser.	George Tryne.
George Sittler.	Henry Mantz.
John Sittler.

Tryne was chosen as president of the Board and Mantz as secretary.

The cost of building this schoolhouse was £85, 3s. 5½d.

Teachers were regularly employed by the society and the school was carried on successfully until 1838, the last teacher having been Robert M. Blair recognized and appreciated for his superior fitness. Then it was taken by the township school-directors upon the adoption of the common-school system, and used by the Board for about twenty years.

In 1890, the township erected a fine one-story brick building, with two rooms in its place and established a graded school there.

Phaon B. Oswald, of New Tripoli, was a teacher of Lynn township school for about 30 years, retiring in 1910; and he served as assistant secretary of the Lehigh County Teachers' Institute for many years. His son, Gustave E., has become an efficient and successful teacher of the public schools, having filled the position of principal at Høkendauqua and Tamaqua and now serving this position at Catasauqua.

PROFESSIONAL MEN.—As an evidence of the intellectual, energetic and progressive character of the people of this township, which was developed by the education and associations here, it may be mentioned in this historical narrative that a large number of professional men have been produced who are located in various parts of the state.

Reformed Ministers.

A. J. Bachman, Schaefferstown, Pa.
 J. P. Bachman, Allentown.
 G. M. Bachman, Catawissa.
 Charles E. Creitz, Reading.
 Willoughby D. Donat, Schuylkill Haven.
 W. D. Donat, Aaronsburg.
 Geo. G. Greenawald, Boyertown.
 M. J. Klingaman, Lynnport.
 George W. Lutz, Pennsburg.
 William A. Reimert, Yochow, China.
 Oliver P. Schellhammer, York.
 J. N. Bachman (dec'd).

Lutheran Ministers.

Preston A. Behler, Allentown.
 A. O. Ebert, New Tripoli.
 J. O. Henry, Topton.
 Charles E. Kistler, Reading.
 William U. Kistler, Pennsburg.
 William F. Mosser, Bethlehem.
 James J. Reitz, Walnutport.
 O. P. Smith, Pottstown.
 John H. Waidelich, Sellersville.
 Astor C. Wuchter, Ohio.

Attorneys-at-Law.

Francis J. Gildner, Allentown.
 George M. Lutz, Allentown.
 Edwin J. Mosser, Chicago.
 Wilson A. Wert, Allentown.

Physicians.

J. O. Fenstermacher, New Tripoli (D. V. S.)
 Wm. J. Fetherolf, Steinsville.
 James A. Fetherolf, Tatany.
 D. W. W. Follweiler, Lynnport.
 Robt. D. Follweiler, Lynnport

CHAPTER XL.

NORTH WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP.

ERECTION.—North Whitehall township was formed in 1810 by a division of Whitehall township into two parts by a straight line extended from the corner of Lowhill and Macungie townships in a northeastwardly direction to the Lehigh river at Coplay. The extreme length of the territory was about eight miles and the extreme width about five miles and embraced 27 square miles; and this body of land remained as a whole until 1867 when a portion, about ten square miles, was taken away in creating a new township called Whitehall.

The surface is undulating, and the soil is very productive for farming purposes. In some sections it is impregnated with valuable deposits of iron ore, limestone, and slate. Tracts of oak, chestnut, and pine are still found in different sections.

The surface of the western part is mostly drained by the winding course of the Jordan creek, and the northern and north eastern parts by the Rock and Crab creeks. At the outlet of the Rock creek in the Lehigh river there was formerly a very deep hole whose bottom could not be reached by a line 100 feet long.

The Coplay creek is the longest water course in the township. It enters the township from Washington, crossing the line a short distance beyond Neffsville, and flows southwardly about five miles to a point near the southern line, then eastwardly about three miles into Whitehall. Two grist-mills were long run by its waters, Wotring's, and Romig's, both near Schnecksville. Romig's mill is now no longer in use. Along its course, near Romich's mill, a portion of the stream formerly disappeared into the ground, and reappeared near Balliet's mine, (distant about a mile), as pure spring water. Chaff thrown into the opening did not come out at the exit till after twenty-four hours. In early times it was so full of trout that they could be caught by simply dipping a basket into the water, but after the mine was opened it was choked up with dirt from the washings, and they disappeared.

EARLY SETTLERS.—The early settlers of this region were also Swiss or Germans, with here and there wanderers from Alsace or Lorraine. Their travels in search of suitable lands made them ascend the Lehigh river, and then its tributaries, which they believed must flow through fertile and easily tilled valleys. The course of settlement and colonization spread from the western bank of the river, up the Jordan and Coplay creeks, and later along the smaller streams, such as Mill, Rock, and Sand creeks, where the immigrants found water and pasturage in abundance. Coplay creek proved particularly attractive, and many dropped their burdens along its green banks. Some of them had settled as early as 1733, at a spot which they called by the old biblical name of Egypta, because of its fertility. From this, as from a centre, the settlements spread, but still principally along Coplay creek, along the course of which all the most desirable sites were located between 1735 and 1750. Among the pioneers were the families of Steckel, Saeger, Schaadt, Burkhalter, Ruch, Bear, Scheurer, Woodring, Kennel, Balliet, Schlosser, Gross, and Schneck, some of the latter touching the settlements already made in the northern parts of the county, along the Blue mountains. About the same time, the families of Lichtenwallner, Sieger, Seip, Semmel, Kern, and others located along the Jordan, in the western part of the township, while along Mill creek George Ringer, Ulrich Flickinger, John Jacob Mickley, Nicholas Marks, John Schneider, and Nicholas Troxell settled upon land in the eastern part and along Rock and Crab creeks, which were farther north, were the Miller, Newhard, Laury, Yehl, and Kuntz families.

The first duty which occupied the early settlers was the clearing of a space sufficiently large for a dwelling house and garden. Their houses were built of logs, the interstices between which were filled up with saplings, and sometimes roughly plastered with mud. At first the bare ground, trodden down hard, served as a floor, but later rough boards were laid. The roof was thatched with straw, and in the course of time covered with boards and shingles. The houses were one story and a half in height, and the same model was observed by all in the method of their construction. On the ground floor there were two rooms,—a larger, used as a kitchen, dining room, and for general family purposes, the other smaller, and occupied as a bedroom. The latter opened into a still smaller room, called the "kammer," which was without a window, and used by the head of the family and his spouse as a bedroom. In the kitchen there was a huge fireplace, generally in the partition-wall between the two lower rooms, and a large chimney reared itself from the middle of the roof.

On the right hand, a bake oven was inserted into the fireplace and chimney, and in the loft over the oven there was a smoke house for drying meat. Later, wall stoves were used, which were square boxes of rough cast iron, without a cover, inserted into the wall. The loft was all one room, and was used by the children as a bedroom, and for storing grain and flax. Small windows, with four panes of glass, were let into the walls, and heavy plank doors guarded from external assault. In the loft there were also loopholes, from which to repel the attacks of hostile savages. The furniture was simple, and for which purpose flax and wool were the only materials used.

It required men of great bodily strength to engage in a contest with nature such as the early settlers undertook, and tales of the strength and endurance of the North Whitehall settlers are told to this day. Their lives were simple and well regulated their food was corn mush, game and fish. The richer farmers treated themselves of a Sunday to pies made of bread crust and beef.

The Coplay and other creeks abounded in trout, and shoals of shad ascended the Lehigh River every spring. These were caught by parties who erected what were called shad-bounds, the idea of which was received from the Indians. In the center of the stream, some distance above a fall, a large circle, not entirely closed, was roughly made out of logs. It generally consisted of a heavy board for a table, and several rude benches and bedsteads.

HOUSE BUILT BY PAUL GROSS.

They next began constructing barns and out-buildings, at the same time clearing more land. Thrashing floors were of mud, leveled and beaten down hard. Upon the new land the farmers raised wheat for the first and second crop, and afterwards rye and buckwheat, and, after 1780, Indian corn. Upon a whole farm, in the early days, no more of these grains was raised than is now produced by a single field. The rye and buckwheat were used for bread, wheat being the only commodity passing current as money. The wheat was carefully garnered and ground into flour,—not for the use of the farmer and his family, but to be sold. Flax was also raised, but only in such quantity as was needed for clothing made with stones, rising above the surface of the water. From the broken ends of the circle, wing-walls of stone extended to both banks of the river, thus effectually preventing the return of the fish down stream. The party of fishermen then went some distance up the river, and with twigs and branches frightened the shad into swimming into a circle, where they were easily caught. It was a common occurrence to take 200 fish out of a circle, many of which weighed ten pounds. Some of these Indian bounds were standing as late as 1825.

The clothing used by the early settlers was mainly of flax, which was woven by the women and the younger sons of the family. Children went barefooted, and when grown up were presented with a pair of cowhide shoes or boots. Later, a pair of these was given each fall. Agriculture was a rude affair, and farming implements were of the simplest description. Plows were made of wood, the point of the share being tipped with iron; hoes and forks were clumsily made and heavy out of all proportion.

Not all the land was at first taken by farmers and improved. Large tracts were also applied for by speculators, who held them for a time only for the purpose of realizing a profit on their sale. One of the principal of these was Samuel Morris, of Philadelphia, who owned a large estate in the neighborhood of Romich's mill. He stationed a watchman by the name of John Henry upon his land to prevent depredations upon the wood. John was fond of his toddy, and the neighbors were accustomed to humor this weakness of his to such an extent that he would forget his duty and assist them in carting away the wood he was appointed to guard. He is still remembered by the name of "Elsenhaus," which he received because of his so doing. Another famous land speculator was Nicholas Kraemer, who flourished between 1800 and 1817.

The colonist made application to the rulers of the province of Pennsylvania for a warrant for the survey of the land selected, paying at the same time a certain per cent. of the purchase money down. The prices of the land varied at different times. Between 1744 and 1758 the price per 100 acres was £15, 10 sh., or $41.33 or $0.41 per acre. About 1762 and 1763, the time of the Indian troubles, the price sank to £9, or $24, and in 1765 it rose to its former price, at which figure it remained for but a short time. The value fell again to £5 sterling, or $22.22, in July, 1765, at which price it was sold till after the close of the Revolutionary War and the return of peace, in 1784.

After taking out the warrant, the settler had a presumptive title to the land, which he secured by paying a portion of the purchase money down as already stated. The warrant in reality was only an instrument giving the surveyor-general of the province authority to survey a tract of land corresponding in quantity to what was asked for in the settlers application. The survey was then made, generally a few months after the issuing of the warrant, and a return made to the land office, with a draft attached. Then, at the convenience of the colonists, sometimes not for many years after the first steps were taken, the settler paid the balance of the purchase money, and received from the proprietaries of the province a deed-patent for the land surveyed for him. The full title to their lands was thus often not secured by the early settlers till after the lapse of twenty or twenty-five years, or even more, from the time when they first settled. For example, the land of Nicholas Saeger, who took out a warrant for 250 acres on Coplay creek on October 28, 1737, was not surveyed till the 14th of November following; and he did not ask for or obtain his deed for the same till April 6, 1762. So with the second tract of 43½ acres, for which he applied on January 24, 1739. This was not surveyed till the 8th of May in that year, and a deed for it was not received by him till April 6, 1762. Thus it will be seen that Saeger was in the full enjoyment of the first tract twenty-five years, and of the second twenty-three years, before the title fully vested in him. This was the general practice of the early settlers, some of whom in fact never received a deed for the lands for which they had taken out warrants, selling their title to the warrants, so that often the deeds were made to their vendees. This seeming looseness was permitted by the proprietaries for the greater encouragement of colonization.

TAXABLES FOR 1781.—The assessment-lists for 1781, disclose the names of the following real-estate owners in the township:

Michael Bruch	Peter Neuhard
Stephen Balliet	Frederick Neuhard
John Balliet	Lawrence Neuhard
Paul Balliet	Peter Neuhard
Henry Berger	Lawrence Ruch
Jacob Berger	Michael Ringer, Jr.
Christopher Blank	Nicholas Seager
Henry Bear	Nicholas Seager, Jr.
Philip Deel	Samuel Seager
Peter Draxel	Christian Seager
Daniel Draxel	Peter Steckle
Nicholas Draxel	Jacob Steckle
Adam Draxel	John Shad
Jacob Frantz	Adam Serfass
Jacob Flickinger	Stephen Snyder
George Flickinger	Widow Snyder
Martin Graff	Michael Snyder
Lawrence Good	Daniel Snyder
Paul Gross	Conrad Seip
Widow Houser.	William Seip
Jacob Harmon	Adam Sheurer
John Hoffman	Peter Sneck
Barthol Hoffman	Henry Sneck
Peter Hoffman	Yost G. Sneck
George Hoffman	Martin Samel
Henry Heffelfinger	George Samel
Andrew Jeal	Jacob Sander
Jacob Kohler	Adam Sander
Peter Kohler	John Sander
Theobald Kennel	Widow Siegfried
Henry Koon	Andrew Siegfried
Gottfrey Laury	Samuel Woodring
Conrad Leysering	Nicholas Woodring
Peter Meyer	Jacob Wolf
Jacob Miller	Philip Knappenberger
Sebastian Miller	John Mosser
Adam Miller

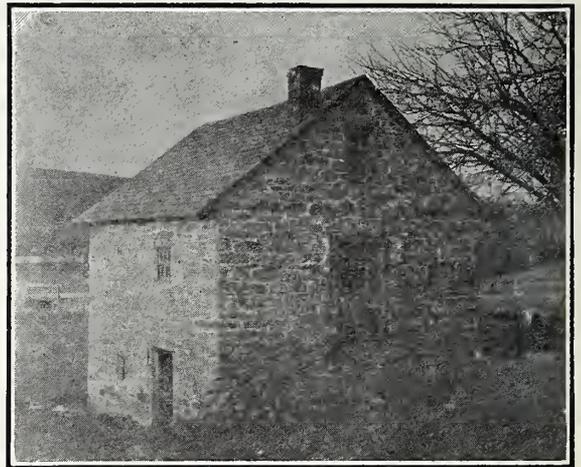

INDIAN MASSACRE.—The valleys through which the Coplay, Rock, and Mill creeks flow were favorite hunting- and camping-grounds of the Delaware and Shawanese Indians. Kolapechka, a chief of the latter tribe, and the son of Paxanosa, also a chief, dwelt on the banks of Sand Spring, one of the tributaries of Coplay creek, near Balliettsville. He was a good man, and was frequently employed by the government as a messenger. The remains of the foundation walls of this hunt are still pointed out. There were Indian villages on Laurence Troxell's, Hilarius Kennell's and the Woodrings' land, near Schnecksville. Another encampment was located on land of Jerry Kuhns, and the spring flowing by the spot is yet known as Indian Spring. At the mouth of Rock creek there was also a village, and at the same point there was a fording place used by the Indians in crossing the Lehigh river. Some distance farther down the stream were rapids, which were known as the Indian falls until they were flooded by the erection of Kuntz's dam, two miles above Laury's. There were burial grounds on land of Tilghman Schneck and beyond Unionville. Near Romich's mill there is a field on the side of the hill, well exposed to the sun, upon which the savages raised Indian corn. In the neighborhood of these places there are still found stone arrowheads, axes, tomahawks, hoes, etc., in abundance. Traces of Indian paths are still visible in the vicinity of Sand Spring, and from Siegfried's bridge to Egypt, thence to the Blue mountains, near the Bake Oven Knob. The latter runs due east and west, and its course is still plain from the cleared space where there are woods. At the upper end of the village of Whitehall, in Whitehall township, about a quarter of a mile north of the bridge at Siegfried's, the Indians were accustomed to cross the Lehigh river. On the Northampton county side of the river, numerous skeletons, beads, tomahawks, etc., were discovered in digging the road bed of the Lehigh and Susquehanna railroad, about fourteen years ago. Numerous Indian paths branched out on this side of the river from this fording place, one of which, leading along Mill creek, was taken by the Indians on their murderous journey in October, 1763.

The relations of the early German settlers were peaceful and friendly with the Indians. The latter plaited baskets for their white neighbors, and received in return the necessaries of life, while the children of both played and grew up with each other. After the defeat of Braddock in 1753, the murderous instincts of the savages were aroused, and the settlers were constantly disturbed. It was a customary thing for the former, rifle in hand, to ascend some high point near his house before retiring, and look for blazing cottages. In 1758 peace was made and kept unbroken till 1763, when Indian fury again broke out.

On the 8th of October, 1763,—a clear, delightful fall day,—a band of twelve Indians crossed the Lehigh river at the spot where Whitehall now stands, fresh from an attack upon the whites in Allen township, Northampton county, and proceeded along Mill creek to the farm of John Jacob Mickley, three of whose children they met in the woods gathering chestnuts, and immediately murdered two of them. They then proceeded to the house of Nicholas Marks and John Schneider, both of which they burned down after they had killed Schneider, his wife and three children, and wounded two daughters, scalping one of them, and leaving both for dead. Marks and his family escaped. Another of Schneider's children was taken captive, and never restored. The murdered Mickley children were buried on the farm, and the spot where they are interred at the foot of a large chestnut-tree is still pointed out. For nineteen years the scene of these cruelties remained entirely deserted by whites. In 1784, G. Remeli bought the land and erected upon it a small stone house, which is yet standing. A portion of the land is now owned by James Frantz.

REMELI SPRINGHOUSE, BUILT 1784.

The daughters of John Schneider, who were wounded by the Indians and left for dead, (one of them being scalped), recovered from their injuries. In 1765 the Assembly of the province passed a bill for their relief. They never enjoyed sound health, and the one who had been scalped was a pitiable object with her head uncovered with hair.

During these troubles the settlers would leave their homes and seek refuge in what were called forts, as at Siegersville, Ballietsville, and in Deshler's Fort, near Egypt, and Coplay. Paulus Balliet and Adam Deshler were very active in the protection of the community from the attacks of the Indians, and formed and equipped companies of soldiers to fight with the Indians, receiving for their services in the latter's behalf substantial reward from the Assembly of Pennsylvania. Deshler's fort is still standing in a good state of preservation. It is a two and a half story stone building and stands on a little eminence overlooking the meadows through which Coplay creek flows. The building is forty feet long by thirty in width. The walls are eighteen inches or two feet thick, and heavy timbers support the interior. There were a few small windows in the sides, with four panes of glass, and in the gable ends there were square loopholes. A large hearth and chimney occupies the center of the house, and divides the lower and upper stories into two apartments. In the mantelpiece above this can be seen the bullet-holes made by the Indians. It was the place of refuge for the entire neighborhood upon an alarm being sounded, and at the time of the Indian murders in 1763 was occupied by twenty men at arms, who, on receipt of the ill tidings from the fugitives, started in pursuit of the savages, but without overtaking them.

A number of captives were taken by the Indians during the disturbances, and those with black hairs and eyes were generally spared and adopted. One of the Mayers, his wife and his son, were captured and received into a tribe. In September, 1757, a girl by the name of Margaret Frantz was taken prisoner by the Indians while washing flax in company with another girl named Solt, who was also captured in the creek near her father's house, on land near Ballietsville. She was twelve years of age, and lived with the Indians for seven years, until exchanged. Her companion, Solt, lived with an Indian as his wife, and had two children, of whom she was permitted to retain the girl on her being restored to the whites. Henry Frantz, the father of Margaret, was killed by the savages in 1764 and scalped. The Indians pricked a mark resembling a hen's foot, or, as some say, leaves, on the right wrist, rubbing it in with powder. Five years after her return from captivity, on the 9th of May, 1769, she was married to Nicholas Wotring. She became noted far and wide for her knowledge of herbs and simples, which she acquired from the Indians, and her services in curing the sick were in great demand. Her journeys, while on these errands, she always accomplished on horseback. She died on the 29th of June, 1823, aged seventy-eight years, one month, and twenty-three days.

Marker of Indian Massacre.—A granite marker, twenty-eight inches wide, by thirty-six inches high, and thirteen inches thick, was set up by the Lehigh County Historical Society on Oct. 8, 1913, in North Whitehall township, on the west side of the public road leading from Egypt to Sheidy's, about a mile west of Egypt, near the dwelling-house of James Frantz, for the purpose of marking the locality where the Indians in 1763 killed in a barbarous manner a number of inhabitants of the township. The inscription is as follows:

"Here on October 8, 1763, John Snyder and his wife, Anna Margaret Wotring, with their three children and Jacob Alleman's wife and child were killed by Indians. Their bodies were buried 200 yards south of this spot. John Jacob Mickley's children, Henry and Barbara, killed the same day, were buried half a mile to the east. This was the last Indian massacre in Lehigh county."

UNION CHURCH.—The earliest inhabitants of North Whitehall, including those of contiguous territory, were mostly of the Reformed faith, and some were Lutherans. The early history of Union church is involved in considerable obscurity, for there are no written records to throw light upon it. In the early times the settlers attended services, held at private dwellings or in the school-houses, and they often consisted only of prayer, singing, and reading of Scripture. After their number had increased somewhat, those of the Lutheran faith began attending services at the nearest churches, such as Jordan and Heidelberg; but those of the Reformed faith, being greater in numbers, early united in forming a congregation and building a house of worship. The exact date when this was done cannot now be ascertained, but it probably happened in the decade beginning with 1750; for there is a record of date 1748, in which the Heidelberg, Jordan, and Egypt churches are mentioned, and there is another made in 1764, in which mention first occurs of Schlosser's (now Union) church. This building erected by the Reformed communicants (the original of the present Unionville congregation), stood just outside the southeastern wall of the old burying ground. It was constructed of logs, and was about 50 feet in length. It was plastered within, and contained galleries along the sides, with benches of equal height placed on the level floor, so that it was impossible for those who occupied the rear seats to see the minister at the altar or the worshipers on the floor below. The chancel was laid with flag stones, and altogether the structure was an improvement upon others of that day. This first building was commonly known as Schlosser's church, being located on land which was donated by the first of the Schlosser family, and supposed to have been erected in 1755.

In 1767 the congregation united with the Reformed congregations of Egypt, Jordan, and Northampton borough in purchasing six acres of land and erecting a common parsonage, at a total expense of £52, or $345.62. This, it is supposed, stood on what is Moyer's land, on the road from Mechanicsville to Mickley's Tavern, in South Whitehall.

In 1768 an application was filed in the land-office of Pennsylvania for a tract of land by Daniel Gross and Paul Balliet for the use of the Reformed congregation, although both in this application and in the patent-deed afterwards granted for the land, the congregation is denominated Presbyterian, under which name they held the land until April, 1879, when action was taken towards changing the name from Presbyterian to Reformed, and in December, 1881, Alexander, Peter, and Moses Hollenbach were appointed a committee to have the change legally made. A deed for their lands was confirmed to the congregation on May 27, 1827, in pursuance of the seventh section, of an act of assembly approved the 17th day of April, 1827, which enacts—

"That the officers of the land office are hereby authorized and required to issue a patent, free of the purchase money and fees, to Peter Romich and Christian Houseman, Sr., and their successors, in trust and for the sole use and benefit of the congregations of North Whitehall township, Lehigh county, known by the name of Union, alias Schlosser's, Church, composed of Lutherans and Presbyterians, for a certain tract of land situate in North Whitehall township aforesaid, surveyed to them by virtue of an application dated June second, 1768, numbered 3374."

Three drafts of church lands are contained among the church records,—the first of three acres, surveyed in 1795, at the request of Michael Hoffman; the second made in 1796, at the request of Peter Romich, in which the church tract is shown to consist of 87 acres and allowances; and a third was made on April 11, 1839, by Daniel Saeger, Esq., by request of the consistory. The last appears to be the only legal one, and on it the church land is shown to consist of 94 acres, 18 perches.

On November 7, 1795, the congregation then consisting wholly of Reformed members, held a meeting and decided to erect a stone church in place of the old log building. It was also resolved to invite their Lutheran neighbors to form a congregation, and unite with them in erecting the new building, which should be held in common. As an inducement, the Reformed members offered the Lutherans a half interest in 40 acres of their lands, which tract should after that time be held in commonalty by both, and also agreed to sell all of their lands above these forty acres, and devote the proceeds towards the expense of construction. On May 27, 1796, being the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone, the Lutherans accepted these propositions, formed a separate congregation, and united with their Reformed brethren in constructing the new church. None of the church lands were sold, however, the cost of constructing being liquidated with free-will contributions.

This second church building stood in a line with the old stone school house (still standing) and the yard of the present brick church, on ground lying between the two. It was solidly built of rough hewn stone, with galleries running around three sides of the interior. It was completed in the following year (1797), and since that time has, together with the church lands and other temporalities of the former Reformed congregation, been held and owned in common by the members of the Reformed and Lutheran congregations of this vicinity, each, however, being perfectly free to worship after its own fashion, and holding divine services on alternate Sundays. From this date the church and congregation have been known as the Union church, although among the people it was also called the Grund-Eichel Kirche, or Scrub-Oak Church, owing to the large quantity of scrub-oak and low timber growing around the building.

The first communion service of the church, made of pewter, has been preserved as a cherished relic of the early times, and is deposited in a special case for exhibition, which is attached to the wall in the southwest corner of the auditorium. Two of the klingsäck, used for taking the collection from 1755 for an hundred years, are also on exhibition in the same corner, suspended against the wall. They are made of small, black, velvet bags, with little bells fastened to the bottom, and attached to black poles about five feet long.

The old white-painted pulpit of the 1797 church has also been preserved as an interesting piece of furniture, and stands in the basement at the foot of the south side stairway. It is nine feet high, and four feet wide at the top, and resembles a large goblet with the base cut off at the foot of the stem.

This stone building served all the purposes of the united congregations until February 11, 1871, when they resolved to erect a new and substantial brick building, 50 feet in front and 80 feet in depth. It was found, however, a task of no small importance to tear down the old stone church for so solid was the masonry, and so thick were the walls, that it required the use of blasting-powder, and the united efforts of a large crowd of people, who had collected by invitation from the neighborhood and even from distant parts of the township, to overthrow the walls. The timbers were found in part still sound and dry as when first laid. When the corner stone was reached, it was found entirely empty, although many articles, besides pieces of money, had been deposited in the walnut box, with sliding lid, which was placed in the cavity of the stone, nearly a century previous. It was ascertained that it had remained uncovered and unprotected over night, when laid, and the supposition is that it was then rifled of its contents by sacrilegious thieves.

On May 28, 1871, the corner stone of the present building was laid with imposing ceremonies in the presence of a large throng. In the corner stone was placed a zinc box, resting on a plate of heavy glass, and packed on all sides with powdered charcoal and plaster of Paris, and in this box were placed church records, books of worship, silver and copper coins, and mementoes of members of the congregations, and the whole covered with a second plate of heavy glass.

The present building is of brick, handsomely finished within and without. It has a spire one hundred and sixty-five feet in height, in which hangs a bell of 2,000 pounds weight. Around the three sides extend galleries, and a basement room is under the whole, used for Sunday- and singing-school purposes. It was dedicated to the service of God on Whitsuntide, 1872, with impressive ceremonies, conducted by Revs. Dr. William F. A. Notz, E. Boner, and A. R. Horne, Lutheran ministers; and Rev. Drs. Bomberger, and Gerhard, Reformed ministers.

Certain additions to the church constitution were proposed at a meeting of the church councils on February 11, 1871, and formally adopted by the congregations on the 25th of February following. They were as follows: "The present church shall be for the exclusive use of the Reformed and Lutheran congregations. As long as one single member of either of these denominations remains faithful to its doctrines and practices, the church property cannot pass out of his hands." These additional rules were signed by the church councils, consisting of William Gernert, Moses Hollenbach, Hilarius Kennel, and Peter Gross, elders; and Tilghman Semmel, Thomas Casey, Tilghman F. Schneck, Stephen Deibert, David Hensinger, Lewis Clauser, Alexander Peter, deacons.

The building committee consisted of Benjamin Semmel and Emanuel Krause, of the Lutherans, and Elias Hoffman and Aaron Balliet of the Reformed. The cost of erecting the present building was $34,000, which was paid in part with labor, collections, and free-will offerings; the remainder by levying a tax upon the basis of the county and state rates, no adult male member paying less than $5.

The Lutheran church record begins with 1797, and is headed as follows: "Church Record of the Evangelical Lutheran Brethren in the Faith of the Union Church in Whitehall, Northampton." The first entry was the baptism of a child of Christian and Magdalene Hausman March 5, 1797. Immediately following are the records of baptisms in families by the name of Adams, Helfrich, Seiss, Deibert, Mosser, Fenstermacher, Walb, Semmel, Rumbel, etc. In 1806 there were 93 communicants on the Lutheran side, and in 1821 21 catechumens were confirmed by the name of Mosser, Miller, Laury, Semmel, Seiss, Scheirer, Jacobs, Deibert, Housman, Zellner, and Herbster.

The early records of the Reformed congregation were placed in the corner stone of the second church, but when that was opened, they were gone with the rest of its contents. Nearly everything told of its early history has been transmitted by oral tradition, and not much can be stated with certainty, except that in point of numbers the Reformed congregation was always stronger than the Lutheran. In 1808 the Lutherans had 68 communicants, the Reformed more than twice that number. In 1858 the latter had 309 communicants, while the Lutherans numbered a little more than half as many. In 1872 there were 264 heads of families of the Reformed faith and 155 of the Lutheran. In 1874 the Reformed had communing members to the number of 615, while the Lutherans had 419; the former had 330 contributing members and the latter 225. In 1884 the congregations were 1,076, composed of 622 Reformed communicants and 454 Lutheran. In 1913, the membership was about 800 Reformed and 700 Lutheran.

The congregations possess a large pipe-organ, which was originally purchased in 1821, and formerly stood in the old stone church. When that building was torn down, it was removed and repaired and two registers added; it was then placed in the present church, and rededicated with it in 1872.

A steam-heating plant was introduced in 1890; and in 1913 a new organ, operated by an electric equipment, was supplied, costing $3,500.

In 1846 a Sunday school was begun at Union church by the late Rev. S. K. Brobst, Peter Gross, Esq., and others, which has remained in full life ever since. For thirty years it was under the superintendence of Mr. E. D. Rhoads, the organist of the church.

Many of the earliest settlers buried their dead on their farms, where their remains now rest, unmarked by any stone, upon spots undiscoverable at present. After the organization of Egypt and Union Churches, nearly all the interments took place on one or the other of the burying-places provided by these two congregations. The first burial ground lay to the rear and side of the old log church, and comprised the area occupied by what is now known as the old cemetery. The latter lies on the side of the road opposite to the present church building, and is inclosed with a low stone wall. The inscriptions upon many of the old headstones, which were often at first of comparatively soft stones and later of slate, have yielded to the influence of wind and weather, and are now partially or wholly undecipherable. The oldest legible one on the ground is that of Follatin (Valentine) Remeli, 1770. On May 18, 1886, the two congregations decided to lay out a new cemetery upon the church lands, and November 9th, rules for its regulation were adopted. It contains an area of two acres in the rear of the church, and was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

During 1883 the congregations erected upon the church land a commodious barn. This is used for storing the hay and crops raised upon the glebe (70 acres) the use of which, together with the old stone schoolhouse, is enjoyed under a lease from the congregations by the schoolmaster and organist.

Pastors.—The following have been the pastors:

Reformed.

John Daniel Gross, 1764-71.	Joseph S. Dubbs, 1831-66.
Abraham Blumer, 1771-1801.	Edwin J. Fogel, 1866-1911.
John Gobrecht, 1801-31.	James Oswald, 1911- .
Lutheran.
John H. Schaum, 1762-69.	Henry A. Geissenhainer, 1808-14.
John George Jung, 1769-72.	George Wartman, 1814-37.
Theophilus Emanuel Frantz, 1779-82.	Joseph Doering, 1814-37.
Carl Christopher Goetz, 1785-91.	Jeremiah Schindel, 1837-59.
John Casper Dill, 1791-96; 1798-1806.	Thomas Steck, 1859-66.
George F. Ellison, 1796-98.	Josiah S. Renninger, 1867-88.
	Josiah B. Fox, 1888-1901.
	Jacob H. Longacre, 1901- .

Organists.—The following have been organists:

Durs Rudy	Erastus D. Rhoads, 1858-
Mr. Ritter.	93.
Mr. Ringer	George Hankee, 1893-
	1905.
	G. W. Werley, 1905-

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—For several years previous to 1872, Rev. J. S. Renninger preached occasionally both to the Lutherans and Reformed of Laury's and the vicinity, and during 1871 he began holding services both in German and English regularly. His labors were fully appreciated and on Christmas of that year they presented him with a substantial token of their esteem and love. Rev. S. A. Leinbach had also begun, about May, 1869, to hold services both in German and English in the schoolhouse at Laury's, and continued to hold them every four weeks.

Most of the members belonged either to the Reformed or Lutheran congregations of Union and Egypt churches, but their desire to have a more convenient place of worship became so strong, and their numbers increased so much that it was resolved to form a separate church, and to that end Hon. David Laury and David Scheirer were appointed a committee to draft a plan of organization and a constitution. This draft was submitted to the members in February, 1872, and unanimously adopted, and an organization effected on May 12, 1872, with Rev. S. A. Leinbach as the Reformed, and Rev. J. S. Renninger as the Lutheran pastor. The first church council consisted of Jacob D. Miller, Henry Heffelfinger, Reformed elders; Charles Loeser, and Reuben Yantz, Lutheran elders; Moses Newhard, Thomas Newhard, David Scheirer, and Samuel Heiney, Reformed deacons; and Jacob B. Mauser, Thomas Schaffer, Samuel Shoch, and Eli Schumacher, Lutheran deacons.

Jacob Miller, Samuel Miller, and Moses Newhard each offered two acres of land from their farms, which were desired by the association for church lands, and that of Jacob Miller was accepted, one mile from Laury's. Thus it happens that this church is sometimes called Miller's church.

It was decided to erect a church building at once, and a building committee was appointed consisting of Joseph Roth and Joseph Peter from the Reformed side, and William J. Keck and David Laury from the Lutheran. On June 23, 1872, the corner stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies. The church was finished in the following year, and on the 13th and 14th days of September, dedicated to the service of God by Revs. L. Groh, J. B. Fox, and J. S. Renninger, Lutheran ministers, and Revs. Thomas Leinbach,

A. J. G. Dubbs, and S. A. Leinbach, Reformed ministers.

The church is of frame, 40 feet in width by 60 feet in depth, with a basement, also a steeple, 85 feet high, painted white, with a bell. The cost was $6,000.

The congregation number about 150 members, evenly divided between Lutherans and Reformed.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

Lutheran.

Josiah S. Renninger, 1888-1908.
1869-88. Elmer O. Leopold,
Jacob D. Schindel, 1908- .

Reformed.

Samuel Leinbach, 1884-1901.
1869-83. George P. Stem, 1901- .
William R. Hufford,

Organists.—The organists: Mr. Druckenmiller, Jennie Kuhns, Nellie Brader, and Orville Gruber (since 1905); superintendents of the Sunday school: Oscar Yehl and George Erdel.

A cemetery was laid out immediately after the purchase of the church lands, and rules for its regulation were adopted by the congregations in the spring of 1872.

In 1838, David Laury and Robert McDowell established a Sunday school, which held its meetings in the schoolhouse, near Laury's, and which was known as the "Slate Quarry Sunday School." The exercises were at first conducted entirely in English, but later in English and German. It was the first Sunday school projected in Lehigh county outside of Allentown. After the completion of St. John's church, the meeting place was transferred to the basement and there the meetings have since been held. Judge Laury was superintendent up to the time of his death, in 1883.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS have been organized in various parts of the township. As a general rule, the meetings are held in the public schoolhouses. At Schnecksville a Sunday school was organized in the spring of 1847, by Peter Gross, Esq., and Henry Rockel.

SCHOOLS.—The early German and Swiss settlers came with a fair share of common school learning, and there were but few among them who could not read or write. They recognized the advantages that instruction, even of a primary nature, would confer on their children. Hardly were they established as a community before they resolved to erect a place of worship, and with it the schoolhouse. This, as elsewhere, was the case in North Whitehall. The oldest schoolhouse within the present limits of the township was the one erected at what is now Unionville, about 1755. It was a low building of logs, with small windows, poor light and ventilation. It stood in the meadow opposite the church building, near a walnut tree. The building was double, one side being occupied by the teacher and his family, and the other being used for school purposes. Instruction was of the most primitive description, and entirely in German. The only books used were an A, B, C, book or primer, the Psalter, and the New Testament. Some of the teachers were educated men from Germany, but generally their qualifications for the position of teacher were of a limited degree. Besides having the charge of the school, the teachers were also the organists of the congregation. This first house at Unionville was succeeded, about 1808, by a more pretentious structure of stone, the expense of erecting which was defrayed by holding a lottery, authorized by an Act of Assembly passed the 15th day of February, 1808. This was successfully conducted by a committee composed of Daniel Snyder, Frederick Hausman, Peter Kern, Michael Deiber, Stephen Balliet, and Peter Butz. Like its predecessor, it was a parochial school, and was conducted upon the same methods. It is still standing, owned by the Unionville congregation, and was used as a residence by E. D. Rhoads, a teacher there for many years, still living in 1913 aged eighty-two years.

The present schoolhouse is a brick building, erected about 1880. It stands on land owned by the congregation, devoted to this purpose. There are two schools, graded.

German was the only language taught in the schools up to 1816, when the first English school was established at Ballietsville. In that year the English School Society was formed, and at a meeting held on the 29th of March, Stephen Balliet was elected president, and George Deichman, Jacob Schneider, and Christian Troxell, managers. Peter Romich and Peter Butz were the secretaries. It was resolved to build a house, 20 by 24 feet in extent, and that each of the twenty subscribers to the house deliver one short and one long log towards its construction by the 1st of May following. Besides the officers already named, the subscribers were composed of the following: Nicholas Wotring, Peter Wotring, Samuel Snyder, Abraham Jacob, Wilhelm Rinker, Nicholas Scheirer, Michael Frack, Peter Graff, Joseph Balliet, Frederick Hausman, Solomon Graff, George Frantz, Peter Rumble, and John Laury. The building was erected about 100 yards southeast of Ballietsville, and was plastered within. Along the three walls of the interior were placed long desks, sloping up to the wall, with high benches without backs. One of these benches was occupied by the grown up boys, another by the larger girls, and the third by the smaller boys and girls who were just beginning to read and write. In the center of the room, around a clumsy wood stove, sat on two rows of benches without backs the smallest children, who had nothing but their primers to handle. Near the stove, and along the fourth side of the building, was the teacher's desk, painted red, about five feet high, with a bench of corresponding altitude. Behind his desk, on the wall, were hung the hats, shawls, and scarfs of the scholars. In the corner stood a wooden bucket filled with water, to which the children often journeyed during the long school hours, which lasted from eight in the morning till half-past four or five in the afternoon, with an intermission of an hour at noon for dinner. This was generally taken by the children in the school-room, and during school hours the baskets and receptacles in which it was brought stood in a tempting row, flanking the water-bucket. The teachers were chosen by the neighbors; or sometimes they began keeping school without consulting the wishes of the community. If the teaching of one of this latter kind was not agreeable to the parents they would not send their children, and thus effectually "freeze out" the self-constituted master by stopping his salary. Some of the teachers were well educated, but many were not. The course of instruction in these early schools embraced reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic. The books used were Comly's "Primer and Spelling Book," Murray's "Introduction to the English Reader," "English Reader, and Sequel," Frost's "United States History," and "Pike's Arithmetic." Grammar and geography were unknown sciences.

The discipline in the early schools was unnecessarily severe, and at times even cruel. School terms were seldom longer than four months, and many of the children were not sent to school longer than for one-fourth of that time. The schools were opened and closed with singing and prayer, after the good old German fashion. The exercises for each half of the day consisted of reading twice and spelling once, with writing and ciphering at their seats in the intervals by the older scholars. Little attention was paid to penmanship, writing was done with quills, and the making and mending of these was one of the principal qualifications demanded of a teacher. The teachers of the early parochial schools were paid by the parents of the pupils, but took out a greater portion of their remuneration by "boarding around," as it was called.

The English school building at Ballietsville was used till about 1865, when, upon the erection of a substantial new brick schoolhouse on top of the hill overlooking the village, it was transformed into a dwelling-house, and is now so used. The teachers at Ballietsville have been Dalton, Wallace, Roberts, Custus, Ellis, McCarthy, Handwerk, Donahue, Frazer, Bissing, John Barton, Peter Weida, Adolph Bocking (of Dusseldorf, Prussia,) C. Williams, M.D., John Clifton, Revs. Alfred Dubs, and J. H. Dubs, Bowman, Pflueger, Kluge, T. F. Emmens, Ward, Gruver, H. S. Moyer, George F. Hottel, and Wilson.

Other schoolhouses, generally of logs, with no pretensions to architecture, and with no regard to light or ventilation, were also erected in the early part of this century at the Union Slate-Quarries, in Deibert's Valley, at Schnecksville, and near Siegersville.

The poor were often unable in the early times to send their children to the schools provided, even for the short terms they were, and we find in the accounts of the county treasurer the following credits allowed for amounts paid for the education of the poor in North Whitehall, in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 29, 1824: For the year 1828, $15.01; for 1830, $13.29; for 1833, $8.07; for 1834, $25.59; for 1835, $73.91; for 1836, $51.35; for 1837, $121.21; for 1838, $114.15; and for 1839, $118.05.

Previous to the enactment of the general school law of 1834 it was the custom in communities which had erected schoolhouses to elect, generally in the spring, trustees to take charge of the school interests. Thus the records of the Court show that on the 19th of May, 1825, no trustees having been elected in North Whitehall, the following were appointed for that purpose by the Court, viz: Peter Ruch, to serve for one year, Peter Gross, Esq., for two years, and George Scheurer, for three years. The first full board of which there is a record was composed of Dr. William Kohler, Dr. H. O. Wilson, Daniel Saeger, Esq., Rev. Joseph S. Dubbs, and David Laury.

After the acceptance, in the year 1843, of the provisions of the Act of 1834, the schools attained a degree of prosperity and discipline they had not known before. More and better schoolhouses were built, until 1884, when they numbered 17, all substantial buildings of brick, and mostly furnished with modern school appliances. These accommodated 802 children, divided among 20 schools, 14 mixed and 6 graded. These schools were named after the localities in which they were situated and are given below, with the teachers in charge during the winter of 1883-84:

TEACHERS.

1. Siegersville, R. M. Henninger
2. Litzenbergers, near Kern's Mill, E. G. Guth.
3. Sandy Peter's,* William H. Semmels.
4. Schnecksville (Primary), Miss Anna A. Mosser.
5. Schnecksville (Secondary), Charles A. Kerschner
6. Sand Spring, J. George Kerschner.
7. Unionville (Primary), E. D. Rhoads.
8. Unionville (Secondary), A. M. Kline.
9. Long's, or Renninger's, C. F. Kuder.
10. Diebert's Valley, H. S. Ritter.
11. Rockdale, L. M. Beidler.
12. Keck's, H. D. Keck.
13. Laury's, A. H. Bieber.
14. Model, or Kern's, H. A. Frantz.
15. Scheidy's, O. E. Kuhns.
16. Ballietsville, J. M. Moyer.
17. Ironton (Primary), C. E. Frantz.
18. Ironton (Secondary), J. G. Schucker.
19. Coplay Creek, or Ruchsville, C. D. Werley.
20. Levan's, Miss A. C. Wotring.

*Abandoned twenty-five years ago, now used as "Depot" in Trexler's peach orchard.

Schools of 1913.—Directors: President, Elmer H. Schneck; secretary, Ralph E. Diefenferfer; treasurer, Henry P. Brown; Tilghman F. Oswald, Alfred N. Kuhns.

School.	Teacher.	Terms.
Schnecksville,	Joseph P. Deibert,	37
Schnecksville,	Elsie K. Bittner,	20
Ironton,	M. D. Wehr,	6
Ironton,	Maggie M. Falk,	10
Laury's,	Ardie S. Leh,	10
Laury's,	Hilda Sourwine,	2
Ballietsville,	Eva S. Bear,	5
Sand-Spring,	Asa M. Stopp,	20
Siegersville,	Katherine Kistler,	2
Unionville,	James O. Boyer,	22
Kernsville,	Charles T. Rex,	3
Rising Sun,	Helen Ritter,	2
Coplay Creek,	Sadie Woodring,	3
Scheidy's,	Annie Mickle,	2
Model,	William S. Troxell,	1
Ormsrod,	LeRoy Best,	3
Levan's,	Carmi K. Lichty,	12
Rockdale,	Solomon J. Boyer,	1
Diebert's Valley,	Florence M. Phillips,	1
Ruchsville,	Iona Dettmar,	1

All are brick buildings excepting Siegersville, which is constructed of cement block.

Registered school children in 1912, 644; in 1913, 634.

The average monthly cost of each pupil for the year 1912-13 was $2.18½; for 1911-12, $2.35.

The value of the 20 buildings in 1912-13 was estimated at $27,000.

Robert M. Henninger, a retired teacher at Siegersville, taught public school twenty-five years, 20 in North Whitehall and 5 in South Whitehall.

Schnecksville Academy.—A superior English school was conducted in the village from 1856 to 1870. It was in a brick building at the foot of "School alley," nearly opposite the rear of the present Sunday school chapel. The teachers were: Charles Rudy, Abner A. Kamball, — Hoffman, and — Beam. Then it was sold to the township school authorities.

A public exhibition was given under the auspices of the Academy, while Prof. Rudy was the teacher, in the Union Church at Neffsville on the afternoon of March 11, 1858, and the large auditorium was packed with interested and delighted people from the community. There were 25 numbers on the program of exercises, and those not given by classes were as follows:

3. Recitation—"Excelsior," by Alice R. Wilson, (a daughter of Dr. Samuel Wilson, of the village.)
7. Dialogue—"Dr. Gregory and Patient," by J. E. Wilson (son of Dr. W.) and Martin S. Croll (now banker at Topton).
8. Song—"My Country, 'tis of Thee," by three daughters of Martin Semmel (Amanda, Louisa, and Mary).
10. Song—"Yielding to Christ," by Sarah E. Wilson and Pauline J. Semmel.
12. Recitation—"Pauper's Death-Bed," by Sarah E. Wilson.
13. Reading—"While the Union lasts," by Joseph E. Wilson.
15. Recitation—"Parrhasius," by James L. Henry.
18. Song—"There is a Happy Land," by Alice and Sarah Wilson, Achilles J. Long, and Asher Fatzinger.
24. Reading—"Character of True Eloquence," by Alfred A. Smith (now in Texas).

The selections rendered, the energy of the active participants, and the public appreciation of the people show the superior literary character of the township nearly sixty years ago.

Rudy, the Pedagogue.—Prof. Rudy was the son of Durs Rudy, a German farmer, merchant, and organist of Heidelberg township and is said to have been the best and most accomplished pedagogue ever at Schnecksville. Being fond of travel, he subsequently went to Paris, France, learned to speak fourteen languages fluently and conducted a school of languages with a proficient teacher for each language. In his extensive travels, he visited China, and there he compiled and published a Chinese grammar.

MILITARY SPIRIT.—The early settlers were heartily inclined to the peaceful pursuits of agriculture, to follow which most of them had fled from war and persecution in the old country. Not a score of years had elapsed after their settlement in the wilds of America, before they found themselves surrounded by new foes, spurred on by the bitterest feelings of hate against the new-comers, who had squatted upon their favorite hunting grounds. The struggles with these savage enemies developed fighters of no mean ability, and from North Whitehall came a number, such as George Gangwere and the Frantzes, whose fame has descended to this day. The short interval of peace succeeding the French and Indian war was busily employed by the farmers in improving their neglected lands, which had lain in enforced idleness during the reign of Indian terror. This quiet was rudely disturbed by the exactions of England, and the consequent outbreak of the War of Independence. The cause of freedom was eagerly embraced by its settlers, all of whom had been impelled to come to these wilds by their love of freedom. Among them were Stephen Balliet, who was in command of a regiment at the battle of Brandywine; Michael Laury, who gave his life at Mount Bethel, N. J., for his country; and his sons, one of whom was named Godfried; Christian Acker, from near Unionville; John Kepp, George Semmel, Martin Moyer, and others whose names are not remembered. Of those who did not enlist and engage in active service, many hastened with teams to the army, and freely contributed their time and means to the relief of the patriot army, and to the advance of freedom's cause. Among them are remembered Peter Kuhn, Johannes Schad, and Adam Scheirer. The success of the American arms again permitted them to return to the cultivation of their lands, from which they were again aroused by the exciting example of Heiney, Fries, and Gehman, who rebelled in 1798-99 against the imposition and collection of the house-tax, and whose cause was eagerly embraced by the sturdy and independent yeoman of North Whitehall.

Many of them were captured by the National troops and brought to trial, but all were released without punishment.

Their experience during this insurrection taught them the value of trained military organization, and the formation of military companies began to be agitated during the first decade of the present century, although it is claimed that Capt. George Dinkey's company of volunteers was organized as early as 1790, and assisted in the liberation of some of the rebel prisoners who were being tried by court-martial at Bethlehem in 1799. During the war of 1812-14, Capt. Dinkey offered the services of his company to the government, and the company was attached to the regular line. Among the members of the company at the time were William Siegfried, Daniel Boyer, Samuel Snyder, Jacob Rinker, Adam Leinberger, Adam Schreiber, Michael Musselman, Daniel Saeger, John Annewalt, Peter Laudenschlager, and Daniel Sensinger. The organization of the company was continued after their being mustered out of service, under the name of the North Whitehall Rifle Rangers. Their commander in 1826 was Capt. Daniel Saeger, at which time the company was known as the Whitehall Volunteer Rangers; in 1829-31 by Capt. Leonard Larosh; in 1836 by Capt. David Laury; in 1848 by Capt. Reuben Frantz; in 1850, Capt. David Laury, who was probably the last commander of the company.

In the beginning of the war of 1812, Peter Ruch organized a cavalry company, which is claimed to have been the oldest in Pennsylvania. He was commissioned captain on August 1, 1814. On the first roll appear the names of Joseph Seager, Peter Troxell, Solomon Steckel, John Deichman, Peter Burkholter, Michael Frack, John Schwartz, John Schreiber, Daniel Leisenring, Peter Leisenring, and William Boas, first lieutenant. They proceeded to Philadelphia on September 8, 1814, in response to Governor Snyders call for volunteers to repel the threatened invasion of Pennsylvania, and their services were immediately accepted. They were mustered in, and lay encamped at Bush Run, near Philadelphia, till the 1st of October. On that day they struck tents, and on the 3d marched to Marcus Hook, 23 miles below the city, where they were engaged upon fortification and guard duty till the last week of November, when they were mustered out. They reached their homes in North Whitehall about the middle of December, and were the heroes of the population, which flocked to welcome them. The organization was continued under the names of the Whitehall Troop, the North Whitehall Cavalry Troop, the Lehigh County Cavalry Troop, the North Whitehall Light-Horse, the North Whitehall Cavalry, and the Troop of Dragoons, according to the caprice of the various commanding officers. Every young man in the township at some time or other belonged to the company, and its fame extended far and wide. The uniform was of blue cloth trimmed with red, white belts, and leather helmet with red and white plume, and was furnished by the members at their own expense. They met six times a year for drill and field practice.

The captains of the Whitehall Cavalry begin with Peter Ruch, the founder, who held the office from 1814 to 1821. He was succeeded by Solomon Steckel, Sr., from 1821 to 1828; Joseph Steckel, 1828 to 1835; Solomon Steckel, Jr., 1835 to 1842; Thomas Ruch, 1842 to 1854; Edward Scheidy, 1854-1859; William Lichtenwalner and Elias Kuntz, 1859 to 1862. During the captaincy of the last the name was changed to that of the Washington Troop, which it bore until disbanded in 1862. In midsummer of this year the company tendered its services to Governor Curtin for assistance in the suppression of the Rebellion. The officers went to Allentown and took the oath of allegiance to the United States, and the troop held itself ready to march to the place of rendezvous at a moment's notice. A dispatch was received from the Governor telling the company to come without their officers. This the men refused to do. In August, 1862, came the draft, and that disbanded the troop, after a half-century of honorable service.

Other companies were also formed at different times in the townships, but they were generally of an ephemeral existence. The longest-lived of these were the North Whitehall Jefferson Guards, of whom George Schmidt was captain during 1839 and 1840, Reuben Seager in 1844, and Reuben Frantz in 1845 and 1848. A new rifle company was formed in 1828 by Capt. Daniel Moyer, of which he remained the commanding officer till 1844.

These early organizations served to keep alive a martial spirit among the people, which was increased by frequent battalions and musters and shooting contests, at which the general challenge, "Nord Weithall gegen die Welt" (North Whitehall against the world), was broadly made, and always well sustained. Many reached high rank in the early militia annals. Foremost among them were Gen. Peter Ruch, Gen. Peter Steckel, Gen. David Laury, Col. Jacob Saeger, Col. Thomas Ruch, and majors and captains by the dozen.

Of those who enlisted in the Mexican War, William Mink, of Schnecksville, is remembered as having returned with a bullet in his body, which he carried to the grave.

Many soldiers enlisted from North Whitehall in the Union army during the Civil War, but only two companies were mustered into the service composed distinctively of citizens of this township. These were "D" and "G" companies of the 176th Regt. Penn. Drafted Militia. The officers of the former were David Schaadt, captain; Samuel A. Brown, first lieutenant; and Dr. Joshua Kern, second lieutenant; of the latter, Lewis P. Hecker, captain; Joseph P. Cornet, first lieutenant; and William F. Hecker, second lieutenant. They enlisted in October, 1862, and were mustered out in August, 1863, after nine months' service. Many more were soldiers in the Union army from North Whitehall, but these were the only two organizations distinctly from the township.

MINERAL DEPOSITS.—In natural advantages North Whitehall is not equaled by any other township in Lehigh county. That portion of the township lying south of the center contains the most valuable deposits of red and brown hematite ore, while along Coplay creek are found hills of the most desirable blue limestone and cement. Toward Egypt is found cement, and along Mill and Rock creeks, in the direction of Laury's, beds of slate have been uncovered. In the northeastern portion of the township, in the vicinity of Rockdale, along the Lehigh river, a clear white sand was dug, which is much sought after for moulding and building purposes.

Iron ore was first found in North Whitehall about 1800, upon land originally owned by the Scheurers and the Woodrings, where Ironton now stands. It lay in lumps upon the surface, some large boulders weighing several tons, and found in such profusion that its presence was a serious impediment to the prosecution of agriculture. Some of this surface ore was taken to the Richard and Regent Furnace at Hamburg and exchanged for pig-iron; some was turned into nails by hand at the forge of Adam Scheurer; some loaded upon four horse teams and sold at twenty-five or fifty cents a load; some taken to Mauch Chunk with teams and exchanged for equal weight of coal. Between 1812 and 1826 the ore was taken to the old David Heimbach forge at Hampton, in Milford township, and to Clarissa Furnace near Little Gap, on the Aquashicola creek, in Lower Towamensing township. About 1826 the Lehigh Furnace at the base of the Blue mountains was built by Stephen Balliet and Samuel Helffrich, and then the surface ore was exhausted. Digging was commenced by Reuben Trexler and Abraham Leshner, and their venture proving unprofitable, the work they began was continued by the managers of the Maria Furnace near Parryville, and of the Henry Furnace at Nazareth. These furnaces for a time received all the products of the mines. Some of the ore was taken to the Lehigh Furnace, which was filled with this ore from North Whitehall, and first blown in during the fall of 1826. The mining was carried on by sinking a shaft and then drifting, taking out lump ore only. These original mines were the ore-pits styled Nos. 1 and 2, immediately north of Ironton, and belonged to the Thomas Iron Co., of Hokendauqua. The Joseph Balliet mine below Ironton was next opened, afterward owned by his heirs and Frank P. Mickley. In opening this the miners came across several of the tunnels which had been made in developing the original Ironton mines.

The first apparatus for screening ore was made by Fritz Guth, an ingenious German, who was persuaded by Stephen Balliet to immigrate to this country, and who lived for many years near Ruchsville. He was also the inventor of improving the blast in the charcoal furnaces used at that day.

Many pits were opened since 1830, and they are most easily mentioned and described by following the course of the Ironton Railroad, beginning with the eastern boundary line of the township.

In going from Coplay to Ironton, the first mines met are the three openings on the land formerly owned by Daniel Steckel. They were extensively worked in 1863 and 1864, and a large amount of ore shipped from them. The next mine is what is known as the Weaver mine, which proved to contain only a small quantity of ore, and, after being worked for a short time, was abandoned. The next is what is known as the Kennel mine. The ore was of a superior quality. The next is the Mickley mine, which was worked a long time, and a large quantity of good ore taken from it. It was abandoned in 1882. The next is what was known as the Joseph Balliet Mine.

The next are the pits of the Thomas Iron Company, at Ironton, known as Nos. 1 and 2, which have been referred to as the oldest openings in the township. Between 1860 and 1880 there was taken from these about 323,000 tons of clean, merchantable ore. The depth was 120 feet. Adjoining this was the mine owned by the heirs of Stephen Balliet, which was worked for twenty-five years, and proved very productive. Next were the mines of the Balliet Brothers (Aaron, Paul, and John). The yield from these was very large. The profits from these two pits in a single year during war times reached the large sum of $35,000. Next was the mine of Paul Brown's heirs, (Samuel A. and P. Frank Brown), the average yearly yield having been about 8,000 tons.

The last mine on this range was the Jeremiah Ritter, about one-quarter of a mile east of the Brown mine. This was one of the oldest openings in the neighborhood, as well as one of the richest. About 1870, Thomas Eagan, who was then working it, abandoned mining, considering it exhausted, and the mine lay idle for about a year. The late Capt. Joseph Andrews then made a contract with the Crane Iron Co., the leaseholders, to resume operations, and from 1871 to his death, in May, 1875, he removed about 34,000 tons from this seemingly exhausted mine. The work was then continued by his brother, William Andrews, until Jan. 1, 1881, by which time, 46,000 tons additional were mined. It was then abandoned, heavy covering and much water making it too expensive to mine. But a third effort was afterward made by tunneling by Hartzell and Godshall, who also secured large quantities.

Along the Siegersville Branch of the Ironton R. R. were found a number of ore-mines. The first was on the lands of Jonathan Henninger, leased by the Thomas Iron Co. The bed was worked for a number of years, and the annual yield was about 7,000 tons. One-third of a mile below this, towards Siegersville, was the Allen S. Balliet mine, worked for at least twenty years, and averaged yearly 5,000 to 7,000 tons. West of this about half a mile, was the Levan mine. The mine of Thomas Schadt also belonged to this belt. South of the Levan mine, half a mile distant, was found the David Ruch mine, opened about 1880 upon lands of Lewis Sieger, of which the average annual yield for four years was 7,000 tons. Southeast of Ruch's were the mines of Daniel Henry and Horace Guth. The deposits were not considered as large, although the ore was of a good quality. Next, and last, were the mines of the Sieger Brothers, at Siegersville, which were opened in 1840 by Samuel Sieger. The opening was large, and the mine was considered one of the best in the county.

A number of slate-quarries were opened at various times along Rock and Spring Mills creeks, in the eastern part of the township, in the vicinity of Laury's. One of them (Crump & Breton on Spring-Mill creek), was originally opened about 1828, and it is claimed that this and the Union Slate Quarries were the first quarries uncovered in this country. The opening of the North Peach Bottom Quarry was made about 1828, by Jacob Dinkey, who manufactured roofing-slate of the best quality for about one year, when he leased the quarry to John T. Schofield. The latter operated it for another year, when it came back into the hands of Dinkey, who then sold two-thirds interest in it to Anthony Preston, of Washington, D. C., and William Bailey, of Baltimore. This was on the 21st of January, 1830, and they operated it for about fifteen years, when Jonas Rinker became the owner. Both he and his predecessors occupied themselves mainly with the manufacture of table-tops and mantels and trimmings for buildings (furnishing the dressing for the public buildings at Washington, D. C.). In 1853, C. M. Runk, Esq., of Allentown, acquired the title of Mr. Rinker, and devoted himself to the full development of the quarry, and through his exertions the true value and character of the quarry were shown. Roofing slate were manufactured, and they were found to be of a quality unexcelled in the world. The North Peach Bottom Slate Co. was formed about 1877, having obtained Runk's title, and continued operations until February, 1884, when John Crump and Richard Brereton, of Philadelphia, purchased the quarries, and they manufactured ten squares of roofing-slate per day, (the slate having the best reputation of any in the market).

At the mouth of Rock creek, ten miles north of Allentown, the bed of the Lehigh presents a smooth and level surface, being slate rock. The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. built at this place a dam, fourteen feet high, which soon became widely known as the "Slate Dam." This attracted the attention of Thomas Lymington, an experienced slater of Baltimore, who, in 1828, came to the Slate Dam in search of roofing-slate. About a mile west of the river, along Rock creek, he discovered a place where roofing-slate might be found. He took a sample to Baltimore, and finding it was good, he soon after leased a few acres of land and commenced quarrying. The same year the Baltimore Slating Co. was formed, with a capital of $13,000. They purchased the farm of 160 acres, on which Mr. Lymington had his lease. He transferred his interest to the company, and a large quarry, under the name of the Union Slate Quarries, was opened. The company operated the quarry with indifferent success for ten years, when they began leasing it to different parties, among them Fell & McDowell, until 1849, when they sold all their interests to Stephen Balliet, Jr., and Stephen Graff, who worked it for a time and then abandoned it. The slate produced were of a brownish color. An effort was again made, about 1872, by Freeman, Knecht, and others, to operate the quarry, but it was found unprofitable and abandoned.

On Coplay creek, about a mile south of Iron-ton, a slate quarry was opened about 1868 by the Grant Slate Co., of which William Fry, Esq., of Tamaqua, was president, and they purchased 14 acres of land from Henry B. Schadt. The slate formation was of cement order, for posts, mantels, etc. The quarry was discontinued after three or four years' operating.

Large quarries of the best blue limestone were found along Coplay creek, in the neighborhood of the old Grant Slate Quarry. The stone was used for fertilizing purposes, and is also sold to the furnaces along the Lehigh. Those of Charles Lobach, of George Kleckner, and Lewis Falk, and of Monroe Newhard, Frank J. Newhard, and Solomon Ruch, were the largest and most productive in the township. Smaller quarries were also opened in other parts along Spring Mill creek.

Cement stone was also found in the direction of Egypt, but was not developed to any extent in North Whitehall, until about 1895.

In the northeastern part of the township, especially upon the lands of Daniel Peter, vast fields of clean white moulding and building sand were found.

EARLY ROADS.—The oldest road in the township is what is known as the Mauch Chunk road, leading from Allentown over the Blue mountains to Mauch Chunk, and passing through Ruchsville, Iron-ton, Ballietsville, and Unionville. In the time of King George III, a public highway was laid out from Philadelphia to the Buckhorn Tavern at Shimersville, thence through Siegersville and Schnecksville to the country north, crossing the Blue mountains at the Bake Oven Knob. In 1753, a road was laid out from the Bake Oven Knob to Allentown, past Helffrich's Springs, in South Whitehall township. These were the principal of the old highways running north and south. A number ran in a westwardly direction from the Lehigh River, principal among which was the one from Siegfried's bridge to Kohler's mill, at Egypt; thence to Ruchsville and Siegersville. On September 22, 1761, a petition was presented to the Court of Northampton county for a road leading from Paul Polyard's tavern to Jacob Collier's mill, thence to Willson's mill, thence to Easton. It is probable that this is the highway, branching off from the Mauch Chunk road about one-fourth of a mile below Ballietsville to Egypt, running thence to Siegfried's bridge, crossing the Lehigh there and proceeding to Easton. On May 4, 1813, George Yundt, Esq., Jacob Mickley, Peter Rinker, John Helffrich, Peter Grimm, and Henry Schneider, viewers, reported a road to lead from Siegfried's Ferry up the Lehigh river to the public road leading from Balliet's to the Newhardt Ford at the bank of the river.

COUNTY-BRIDGES.—There are six county bridges in the township:

On Coplay Creek.—Ruchsville Bridge, one arch, cement, rebuilt in 1910. Previously the bridge was a one arch stone structure, erected in 1833 at a cost of $425.

On Jordan Creek.—Peter's Bridge, wood, one span, covered; rebuilt in 1882, first put up before 1860; two miles south of Schnecksville on the road to Weidasville. Geiger's Bridge, wood, one span, covered, near Ruhetown. And Kern's Bridge, stone, with two arches, built over the creek at the mill in 1828. On the inscription stone, the distance to Easton is given as 22 miles (including the names of the County Commissioners); which indicates that the officials recognized this highway as a thoroughfare from the Delaware at Easton to the West, by way of Kern's mill and Claussville, in this section, to Hamburg and Harrisburg. It is about 1,000 feet north from the township line.

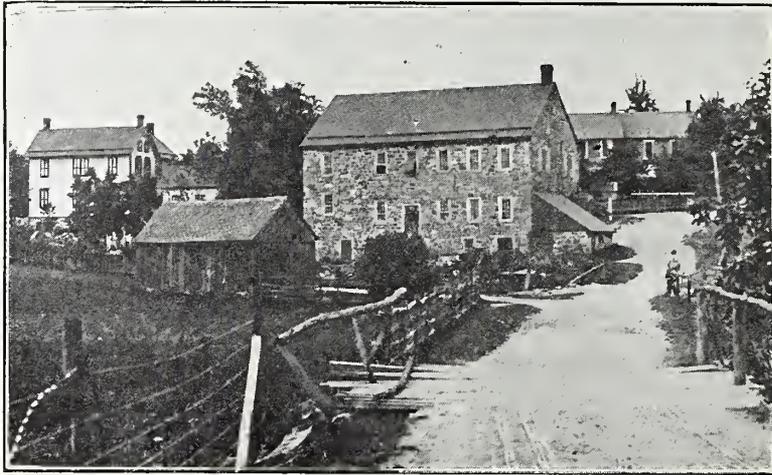

On Rock Creek.—Laury's Bridge, near the outlet of Rock creek into the Lehigh river, constructed of iron, in one span, and erected in 1868. Beidler Bridge, near the mill on the road from Laury's, about two miles west of the village. It is a stone, one arch structure, rebuilt in 1870.

Private Bridges.—The only private bridges in the township span the Lehigh river.

In 1884, there was no bridge along the river in North Whitehall. An effort had been made in 1831 for one at Kuntz's ford, but it failed. Over fifty years afterward, in 1884, another attempt was made for one at Cherry ford, one mile north of Laury's, near the township line, and this was successful.

ring in 1763. It was built of logs which were contributed, ready for use, by the neighbors who were interested in securing it for their convenient accommodation, and operated for seventy-four years; then a superior two-story stone building was erected nearby to take its place and this has been carried on until now. The owners since then have been Michael Wotring, Sr. (Samuel's son), Michael Wotring, Jr., Thomas Bertsch, Asa Knerr, Reuben Butz, Henry Nadig, and Franklin Hollenbach (1886-1914). The old log-mill was demolished in 1837, and a two-story frame dwelling erected on its site, the old foundation stones being used in the sub-structure.

A quaint agreement between Samuel Wotring,

HOLLENBACH'S MILL AND SITE OF OLD WOTRING MILL AT SAND SPRING.

RAILROADS.—In 1855 the Lehigh Valley R. R. was constructed along the entire northeastern border line of the township, a distance of seven miles. [See Chapt. XVII "Internal Improvements."]

In 1860 the Ironton R. R. was constructed from the Lehigh Valley R. R. at Coplay, through South Whitehall township to the Ironton mines in North Whitehall, which became the property of the Thomas Iron Co. in 1882.

In 1860 the Siegersville Branch of this railroad was extended to the Sieger mines at Siegersville; and thence to the Kern mines at Orefield, half a mile beyond the township line.

EARLY MILLS.—The following grist-mills have been established in this township; two on the Coplay creek, two on the Jordan creek, and one on the Lehigh river:

Wotring Mill, on the Coplay creek, near the "Sand-Spring," was established by Samuel Wotring the builder of the mill and Jacob Wolff, dated December 30, 1763, is still in existence. In it Wolff agreed to give land for the mill-race and Wotring agreed to open the water-gates when he had nothing to grind, both agreed to make a bridge over the race, Wolff to furnish the wood. The agreement was witnessed by Henry Geiger and Paul Balliet and acknowledged before George Taylor, Esq.

Jacob Kennel started a saw-mill on the creek a mile above the Wotring mill, and he and his son, Elias, carried it on for many years. They were succeeded by Stephen Knecht who conducted the business until he died; then it was operated several years until 1895 and abandoned.

Romig Mill was established on the Coplay creek, a mile below the Wotring mill, by Adam Romich in 1790 for his son, Peter, and this was carried on, in connection with a saw-mill, until 1826 when a stone mill was erected in its place.

Peter Romich operated the plant until his death in 1844. His son, John, then became the owner who carried on the business and his sons, Owen and Henry, after him for nearly fifty years. John Morgan then purchased the property in 1890. The grist-mill was continued in operation by him until 1910; the saw-mill is still used.

Kern Mill is situated along the Jordan 1,000 feet north of the township line. It was erected by Peter Kern in 1806. The building, as appears by the accompanying illustration, is a three-story stone structure. Its interior was burned in 1890 and immediately repaired. The owners for the past fifty years have been Edward Kern, John Seiberling, Owen Kern, Thomsuccessfully until 1880. Then it was purchased by John R. Schall who remodeled and enlarged it, introduced the full "roller process," and carried it on extensively for ten years. In 1890 the Mauser Milling Co. was organized and this company has operated it in a most successful manner until the present time, with an increased capacity, producing 300 barrels daily. This company also operates plants at Treichlers and Northampton, and their total daily production is 1,000 barrels which is shipped to the coal regions and foreign countries. Much of the grain consumed is bought from farmers in the surrounding country but the greater proportion is secured from the Northwestern states.

KERN MILL, BUILT 1806.

as Kern, Richard Klotz, Emanuel Wilt (20 years till 1890, when the fire occurred), and Willoughby Hoffman (1891 to 1911, who repaired the interior). Then George H. Hardner of Allentown, became its owner, and he has since leased it to William Shoemaker.

Rex Mill was erected by Stephen Rex in 1874 along the Jordan creek, about a mile above the Kern mill, with a saw-mill attached. It is a small frame structure and was used for making chopped feed until 1896; since then it has been operated as a cider-mill by Oscar Sechler.

Mauser Mill.—David Laury established a grist-mill at Laury's in 1839, with a superior water-power secured from the river under a lease with the Canal Company and he operated it

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following Justices of the Peace have served by election in the township since 1840, one in the eastern section and the other in the western:

Edward Kohler, 1840-65.	Franklin P. Keck, 1909-15.
David Laury, 1865-69.	Daniel Saeger, 1840-50;
Samuel A. Brown, 1869-74.	1857-62.
William Maxwell, 1874-79.	H. O. Wilson, 1850-52.
Henry F. Beidler, 1879-1904.	John Schantz, 1852-57.
Edwin F. Smith, 1904-09.	Peter Gross, 1862-76.
	William Sell, 1876-82.
	Henry D. Gross, 1882-1919.

Peter Gross, the great-grandfather of Henry D. Gross, Esq. (now serving his seventh continuous term by election), filled the office by appointment "during good behavior," from March 20, 1812.

Peter Kohler was appointed from the township of Whitehall Aug. 30, 1791; Nicholas Sae-ger, April 21, 1794; George Yund, Feb. 6, 1811.

POLLING-PLACES.—From the beginning of this township to 1840 there was one polling-place for the electors and this was at Hersch's Tavern in the central portion; then it was removed to Ballietsville where it continued until 1885, when three places were established to facilitate elections: Levan's for western section; Ballietsville for central, and Laury's for eastern.

POST OFFICES.—Seven post offices are maintained in the township:

Orefield	Ironton
Schnecksville	Laury's
Neffsville	Rockdale
Ballietsville

Two were discontinued, Rising Sun and Sheidy's.

A "Rural Free Delivery" was started from Schnecksville post office Feb. 16, 1907, and the carrier since then has been George L. Hausman.

VILLAGES.—The following villages have been formed in the several sections of the township:

Schnecksville	Ballietsville
Siegersville	Unionville
Kernsville	Neffsville
Ruchsville	Rising Sun
Ormrod	Laury's
Ironton	Rockdale

SCHNECKSVILLE is the most prominent village in the township on the main thoroughfare leading from Allentown to New Tripoli, 10 miles from the county-seat and 9 miles from the latter place or about midway between the two places. It is located in the western section of the township, not far from the lines of Washington and Low-hill, and in this vicinity some of the earliest settlements were made by the German immigrants. The dwellings are built on both sides of the highway for a distance of half a mile, with the Gross Hotel in the center, and seven public roads concentrating towards the place.

Adam Schneck, from Wurtemberg, Germany, took up land here in 1766, and his descendants in the township came to be numerous and some of his land was held by them (including Daniel John B., Joseph, and Nathan), for upwards of 100 years afterward. Daniel owned all the land on which the village came to be formed, and about 1840 he laid off lots and sold them. He and his son Moses erected the first hotel and all the early buildings; and Michael Deibert started the first store but Schneck soon became the owner of it.

A post office was established here in 1846 with Peter Gross as the post-master, he being engaged in the mercantile business. He filled the position for sixteen years, and his partner, Joel Gross succeeded him for twelve years until he retired. Daniel Bertolet had the office for five years.

The trolley line of the Allentown and Slating-ton Street Railway extends through the village on the thoroughfare.

In 1880, the village contained 22 dwellings and a population of 160. In 1913, there were 47 dwellings, with a population of 200, which included a doctor, undertaker, blacksmith, saddler, and miller; also a number of retired farmers who have comfortable homes on lots with gardens and stables at the rear.

A carriage factory was conducted by John Hess from 1850 to 1862 in the large two-story brick building, afterward occupied by the Eagle Hotel; and he was succeeded by John K. Sachs from 1862 to 1878, when the enterprise at Schnecksville was discontinued on account of the great competition from the Western manufacturers.

The Eagle Hotel was started there by Peter Salem in 1869 and the business was continued by him and others until 1912 when it was abandoned, and Henry D. Gross, Esq., became the owner of the property. When the Gross Hotel was discontinued April 1, 1914, this place was re-licensed.

Where the chapel now stands, David Paff carried on a wheel-wright shop from 1858 to 1868; different parties were there then for short periods; and William De Long continued the business from 1878 to 1888.

The saddler business was conducted by Wil-liam Gernert from 1846 to 1874; Henry Sheir-er from 1850 to 64; and Victor Gangwar has been here since 1908, having been previously for some years at Neffsville.

A blacksmith shop was carried on by Josiah Semmel from 1858 to 1878; by Charles P. Stopp from 1878 to 1908 and his son, Charles, from 1908 to 1911; and since 1911 by Allen Mus-selman.

Daniel Schneck carried on the manufacture of building brick from 1850 for nearly twenty years, and during this time supplied the brick in the erection of a number of buildings at Schnecks-ville. His yard and kiln were situated along the road a short distance west of the village.

When the post office was established in the village, a stage route was started from this point to Allentown by way of Siegersville, Guthsville, and the Guth mines for delivering mail and packages and carrying passengers. The fare one way was forty cents. It was carried on until 1902 when the A. and S. trolley line was put in operation and the "Star" postal route was discontinued. The drivers were Moses Schneck, Stephen Smith, Henry Druckenmiller and Thos. F. Good.

It was extended to Saegersville for a time.

The practicing physicians have been: Samuel Wilson, from 1858 to 1862; Wilson P. Kistler, 1862 to 1877; Francis O. Ritter, 1877 to 1887; Irwin F. Huff, 1887 to 1902; and Franklin J. Holben since 1902.

Henry D. Gross, of Schnecksville, has filled the office of Justice of the Peace continuously in this district since 1882, acting also as a land-surveyor and scrivener; and his uncle, Peter Gross, also filled this office from 1862 to 1877.

lic school. At the rear of the building, extending to the end of the lot, there is a burying ground with twelve marked graves and three unmarked. A small marble obelisk, six feet high, marks the burial place of William Henry, an active and influential member of the small congregation, who was born in 1820 and died in 1900, aged 80 years (a veteran of the Civil War, who resided and died at Ormrod).

S. S. Chapel.—In 1886 a fine, one-story brick chapel was erected in the village for Sunday school purposes; in dimensions 45 by 55 feet, one-story, with a frame steeple, 50 feet high, including a bell. The most active spirit in securing its erection was Henry D. Gross, Esq., and

HOUSE ON A. J. KOCH FARM, BUILT BY DANIEL GROSS.

Eugene W. Schlauch has acted as an undertaker with his residence at Schnecksville, since 1890. His business extends within a radius of ten miles, and in this time he has directed 1,400 funerals. The previous undertaker here for 40 years was Jonas Acker.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH.—The Evangelical denomination established a one-story frame church at Schnecksville in 1871, 30 feet front and 42 feet deep. The names of the building committee are inscribed on the corner stone: E. DeLong, Samuel Schneck, and Joel Gross. It is situated on the main street, between the chapel and the public school. he was the superintendent until 1910. Prof. James P. Deibert succeeded him from 1910 to 1911, and since then the Professor's son, Arthur, has filled the position in a successful manner.

'Squire Gross had served the Sunday school at its meetings in the public school building previously to 1874. His uncle, Peter Gross, Esq., had been at the head of this religious movement from the beginning in 1847 until 1868; his father, Joel Gross, from 1868 to 1871; and Reuben Scheirer from 1871 to 1874.

PUMPS.—There are five pumps at Schnecksville: Eagle Hotel (discontinued), Gross Hotel, Blacksmith-shop, and Druckenmiller (Sell), each 60 feet deep, in use for many years the one at Gross' Hotel upwards of 70 years; and Holtenbach, 300 feet deep, (artesian well drilled in 1912). A water right at the Smith shop pump has been granted to a number of properties. All the other properties have cisterns where rain-water is collected for domestic uses.

PROMINENT MEN.—Among the more prominent men who were brought up at Schnecksville and located elsewhere may be mentioned:

Joseph P. Gross, William C. Gross (deceased) and Thomas F. Gross, attorneys at law at Philadelphia, the first named having compiled in 1882 a standard work on the Pennsylvania laws relating to "Landlords and Tenants."

Dr. Francis O. Ritter, Cashier Merchants' National Bank at Allentown.

John F. Semmel, banker at Lehighon.

Richard Hess, large real estate agent and dealer at Kansas City, Mo.

Philip C. Croll, minister, at Beardstown, Ill.

Peter A. Gross, deceased, distinguished artist at Paris, France, some of whose paintings are owned by his cousin, A. N. Lindenmuth, photographer at Allentown. He presented one of his appreciated subjects (a large canvass) to the Allentown Public Library in 1911.

RARE CURIOSITIES.—Henry D. Gross, Esq., is the possessor of a rare silver, open-face watch, two and one-half inches in diameter, supposed to be 150 years old. It was first owned by an early rich settler of Washington township, Henry Barr, whose name is inscribed in script on the inside of the case (the given name Henry being written in very small characters in a slanting direction in the forward part of the written B). Upon his death it descended to his son, Reuben, and then to his daughter, Eliza, and in the settlement of Eliza's estate it was presented to Mr. Gross twenty years ago. He also highly appreciates in his possession, in a perfect state of preservation, a $10 bank-note of The Northampton Bank printed in the German language, made payable to C. Pretz or order, and dated at Allentown, Lehigh county, Pa., Sept. 26, 1839, signed by John Eckert, president, and John Rice cashier. At the top corners appear fine vignettes of Herschel and Haydn; at the bottom corners, Göthe and Klopstock.

SIEGERSVILLE is situated in the southwestern section of the township at the intersection of two prominent highways on the township line, and near the A. & S. trolley line, seven miles from Allentown. A two-story stone building was erected by John Sieger soon after he settled here in 1750, on the southwest corner of the cross-roads, and this is still a prominent landmark of the county. He started a hotel here and carried on the business for many years; and through his enterprise a settlement came to be formed in the vicinity of this point which took the name of Siegersville after him. In 1810 the house was rebuilt of stone and enlarged by his son, Samuel, and Samuel was succeeded by his brothers, Michael Sieger, and Elias Sieger. Later proprietors were Nathan Weiler and his son, Sylvester. In 1911 it was repaired and the exterior cemented. J. W. Hendricks conducts a stove and tin-ware store in the front part; William Deibert occupies two rooms on the first floor of the rear part as a residence, using one room as a cobbler-shop; and a family occupies the remaining rooms of the rear.

The present two-story, brick hotel stand was established on the northwest corner in 1855 by Samuel Sieger, who carried on the business for some time; and it was continued in the family name until 1903 with the following as among the later proprietors: Charles Derr, Daniel Mattes, and Franklin L. Schlauch (1875-1903). Then Victor B. Schwartz became the owner and he has since conducted the modernized stand in a successful manner.

The first general store was started in the old two-story stone building on the southeast corner, which was erected before 1800, and carried on there by Elias Sieger for many years; then a two-story brick building was erected in 1842 on the northeast corner for store purposes. Some of the later merchants were Kern Bros., David Ruch, and Franklin Guth for fifteen years till 1884, when A. Victor Diefenderfer became the purchaser and he has continued the business until now.

A post office was established here in 1833 by the name of Siegersville, but this was changed to Orefield about 1840 to prevent confusion with Saegersville. The postmasters until 1884 were Elias Sieger, Aaron Eisenhard, George Roth, and Franklin Guth. Since 1884, the store-keeper, William Diefenderfer, has filled the position.

A rural free delivery route, about 25 miles long, was started from Siegersville in 1906, with about 130 patrons. The carriers till now have been Wayne Gackenbach, Samuel Koch, and John A. Everett.

Eli Metzger started a blacksmith shop west of the hotel about 1850 and he carried it on for upwards of thirty years; and he was succeeded by Allen Musselman. Walter Heller has been there since 1911.

In 1913 the village contained 45 dwellings, 50 families, and a population of 200. In 1880 there were 30 dwellings, and 160 inhabitants.

Amandes Sieger, of the village, was a representative in the State legislature from 1881 to 1885.

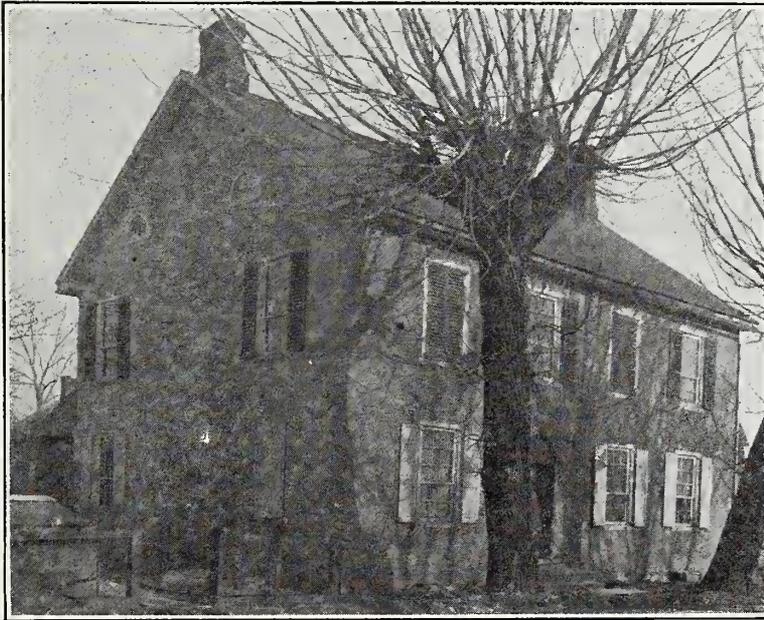

The practicing physicians in the village have been: Josiah Kern (1858-1900), A. J. Erdman, and Henry Litzenberger; none since 1910.

Extensive mining operations were carried on at the village by different members of the Sieger family for sixty years, beginning with Samuei in 1840, and followed by John, Lewis, and Amandes, and they supplied immense quantities of ore to the Bethlehem Iron Co. To facilitate its shipment, the Siegersville Branch of the Iron-ton R. R. was extended to the mines, and to those at Orefield.

drunk and many demonstrative speeches delivered.

KERNSVILLE is a small village, one mile west of Siegersville on the Jordan, near the township line. It was named after Peter Kern who established a superior stone grist-mill there in 1806. This mill has been operated by different owners until now. A store was started by Owen Kern, and carried on by him, Edward Guth, Peter Lerch (1875-1908), and Edward Kern (since 1908). A post office was here for some years but had been discontinued some years before the introduction of the rural free delivery. It contains eight dwelling houses.

RUCHSVILLE is a village situated at the intersec-

SIEGER HOMESTEAD, AT SIEGERSVILLE.

John Sieger established a tannery at the village and carried it on a number of years.

Fourth of July.—Before the Civil War, it was common for the people of this township, as elsewhere, to assemble occasionally on the "Fourth of July," and show in a public manner with more or less enthusiasm their appreciation of the natal day of the United States. One of these great occasions at Siegersville is recalled, the National Holiday of the year 1817. Gen. Henry Mertz was president of the meeting; John Sieger, Esq., vice-president; and the Rifle Company of Captain Keller enlivened the proceedings by military evolutions. George S. Eisenhard read the Declaration of Independence, and many toasts were tion of two prominent public roads, and before the construction of the Lehigh Valley R. R. was one of the busiest towns in the county. The land was owned by John Saeger and he erected a hotel about 1800. He was succeeded by John Troxell and Laurence Troxell and later by General Peter Ruch, an active and prominent militia officer, who secured the holding of the battalion muster-days and military parades at his place which naturally led the community for many miles around about to name it after him. Many horse races were held on the road leading to Egypt from the hotel to the General's residence which was exactly one mile, and much enthusiastic demonstration was witnessed on these occasions after the militia had imbibed apple brandy freely and frequently. The General was succeeded by his son, Thomas, and then by Eli Steckel, who were captains of some distinction and kept up the prominence and reputation of the hotel. In 1858 Owen Schadt became the owner and he improved the great cross-roads by erecting a large, double, three-story brick hotel which he conducted in a successful manner for many years. He was succeeded by his son-in-law, Henry George. Shortly after 1858 Schadt also put up a brick store building, brick barn and several frame dwellings. The store was conducted by John Schantz and David Moyer, Erdman and Ruch, Lewis B. and Edmund Erdman, Edmund Erdman alone, and latterly by men named Diefenderfer, Moyer, Eck and Schiffert.

A post office was established in 1844, and the postmasters were generally the storekeepers.

ORMROD was started in 1898 along the railroad near Ironton by opening cement and limestone quarries, which caused the erection of dwelling houses and "shanties" for the accommodation of the working people, and these increased gradually in numbers, until 1913 there were 25 of the former and 100 of the latter, with a population of 500, mostly foreigners.

Preston C. Weaver erected a three-story frame hotel building and he has conducted it until now. There are two small grocery stores in the village.

Three large cement mills have been established at this place along the railroad.

IRONTON is a village which was formed in the midst of the hematite iron-ore mines and took its name from this mineral which was mined there in great quantities since 1835, as appears in this volume treated in the chapter under the head of "Iron Mines." In 1860, the land was laid off into building lots by Tinsley Jeter, of Bethlehem which were rapidly bought and improved by the miners, and the improvement was so rapid that the village is said to have sprung up in a year.

Abraham Scheirer was an early settler here and in 1778 erected a dwelling house. This was converted into a hotel in 1858 by Abraham Lucas and he carried on the business there for many years to accommodate the miners and laborers. A second hotel was established in 1860 by Horace Balliet, in connection with a store, and he carried it on for upwards of thirty years.

A post office was established here in 1860: The postmasters have been: Horace Balliet, 1860-86; William H. Balliet, 1886-1901; Samuel J. Balliet, 1901-14.

Abraham Lucas erected a hotel, called "Iron-ton," in 1859 and carried it on ten years. His successors were Augustus Ebert, William Schadt, George Kennel, and Joseph Kocher. It was destroyed by fire in 1879 and not rebuilt.

The Pennsylvania Hotel was erected by Horace Balliet in 1880 and conducted by him, including a general store, until his death in 1886, and by his estate until 1902. Benjamin Balliet carried on the hotel for a year, Nathaniel Kuhns for two years; then it became the property of William Long in 1905, and he has carried it on since.

A second general store was started in 1902 by two brothers, A. P. and W. H. Balliet, and a nephew, Samuel J. Balliet, who traded as Balliet Brothers & Co., until 1910. William H. Balliet died then, but his third interest was retained by the widow, and the business has continued under the same name. They also deal in coal, flour, and feed.

In 1913 it contained 48 dwellings and a population of 185; store, hotel, school, saddlery, and blacksmith shop. In 1884 it had 49 dwellings and 277 population.

A Catholic chapel had an existence here for a number of years until about 1885, when it was sold and subsequently torn down. It was supplied with services by priests from Catasaqua.

The extensive mining operations here led to the construction of a railroad to this place from Coplay in 1860; and a branch was extended from a point nearby to the mines at Siegersville and Orefield.

Schall & Co. carried on a coal and lumberyard along the railroad for a number of years. They were succeeded by Fogel and Straub.

The ore mines east of the road were re-opened and operated by Hartzell & Gottshall from 1895 to 1911; and those west of the road re-opened in 1901 and operated until now, employing at first about 50 hands, and now about 25.

BALLIETSVILLE is recognized as the oldest village in the township and lies in the central part of the district. It came to be located on land of Paulus Balliet after whom it took its name. He settled here in 1749 and erected a log dwelling-house which he soon afterward converted into a tavern for the accommodation of the traveling public. The old records of the county court show that a license was granted to him on June 22, 1756, and again in June, 1759. The place was known as "Whitehall Inn," and its inviting sign on the inn-post was the picture of a "foaming bowl." It was a popular stopping place for travelers on the way to Mauch Chunk for nearly a hundred years. It was a post station during this time, and when the stage coaches ran to and fro on this route the horses were changed here. It stood until 1840 when the main portion of the building was torn down by Stephen Balliet,

Jr., and a brick structure erected in its place; and the rear part was removed in 1884. The following landlords conducted business here until 1913, when the license was not renewed:

Paulus Balliet	John Schmidt
Stephen Balliet	Edwin Deibert
Paul Balliet	Sylvester Woodring
Dr. Jesse Hallman	Harry Peter
John Schantz	Joseph Masenheimer
Joel Lentz	Elmer Hassler
David Kline	John L. Roth
Charles Leinberger	Clinton Frantz, 1909-13

A general store was carried on in connection with the hotel. Before the Revolution it was a station where the Indians received their supplies from the State. The store keeper was Benjamin F. Ritter from 1863 till 1910, when he died, since then his son, Irwin, has done the business for the estate.

A post office was established here at a very early period, and on account of its central locality it was the only one in the township for many years. The name was Whitehall, but it was afterward changed to North Whitehall. Benjamin F. Ritter was the postmaster from 1863 to 1910 when he died; his son, Irwin, has filled the position since.

The polling-place for this vicinity was at Hersch's Tavern three miles to the west of the Whitehall Inn, until 1840, when it was transferred to Ballietsville, and there it has been held until now.

A tannery was carried on for over an hundred years. It was established by Nicholas and John Saeger, grandsons of Nicholas Saeger, who had emigrated from Bavaria and settled in Whitehall in 1733; and they carried it on until about 1810. They were succeeded by Peter Graff and his son, Stephen, who conducted the business in a successful manner until 1863; then Edwin Kuhns became the owner and he operated the plant until 1893 when it was discontinued. The buildings are still standing in a dilapidated condition; also the firm, square brick chimney, 65 feet high.

Asa Neumoyer carried on a creamery and cider press from 1893 to 1903 with steam power supplied from the tannery engine.

UNIONVILLE is situated in the northern part of the township, a short distance east of the Union Church, from which it took its name. Jacob Snyder erected a dwelling there in 1815, which was sold to John Ringer; and in 1821 Ringer secured a license for a hotel which he carried on for ten years until he died. Then Peter Butz purchased the property and continued the business until 1847 when he was succeeded by David K. Wotring, and Wotring was the proprietor for forty years, after whom his daughter, Jennie, became the owner and she has leased it to different parties till now. A store was carried on in the building from the time of its erection until 1900.

Besides the hotel, the village has five dwellings. A practicing physician is located there, Dr. H. P. Mickley.

It is located at the upper terminus of the direct highway to Allentown by way of Ballietsville, Ironton, and Ruchsville, the distance being ten miles.

NEFFSVILLE.—A village nearby was called Neffsville, after securing a post office by this name. Abraham Neff was engaged in the manufacture of carriages for many years until 1881. In 1840 he laid off the land into building lots. In 1855 he received a license to keep a hotel, and he was succeeded by his sons, Edward and Peter; afterward by Nathan Eck and Lewis Bittner; and since 1890 by O. G. Moser.

A general store was started in 1855 by Andreas & Cole; they were succeeded by Andreas & Kern; and since 1888, Willoughby B. Kern has conducted the business, having then acquired the property, including the hotel building.

Abraham Neff was the first postmaster and he filled the office until his death in 1881. He was succeeded by Frank Schlosser who served until 1888; then W. B. Kern became the postmaster and since then he has filled the position.

Franklin Schlosser has been engaged continuously since 1871 in the marble business, supplying grave-stones and monuments. S. Walter Snyder has assisted him since 1882; and he has been a public auctioneer since 1890.

In 1884, three brothers, P. W., E. J., and C. N. Frantz embarked in the business of manufacturing carriages, light spring wagons, and sleighs at this place, and they have continued on the same premises, in a large two-story frame building until the present time.

While Neff was engaged in this business before the Civil War, a man named Beers entered the village as a spirited competitor, and erected a large, four-story brick building on the northwest corner of the cross-roads and there carried on the business for about ten years. The factory building is still standing, but when it was sold, it was converted into a dwelling-house after removing the fourth story.

A tannery was carried on east of the village by Benjamin Semmel and his two sons, Reuben and Francis, for some years until his death in 1875, when the sons continued it as partners for five years; then Francis became the sole owner and he conducted the business until 1905 when it was abandoned.

Stephen Miller established a brick-making plant half a mile east of the village and carried on the business for a number of years. Some of the dwellings there, including the old Neff carriage factory were constructed of the bricks made there.

Shortly after the opening of the trolley line through Neffsville in 1900, O. G. Moser established a fine park of three acres near the village to accommodate picnics, dancing parties, and family re-unions, and since then it has become a popular resort.

In 1913, the village contained 30 dwellings and 120 inhabitants.

Erastus D. Rhoads, a retired school teacher and church organist is living with his son-in-law, Francis Semmel, at the advanced age of 82 years. He taught public school from 1846 to 1892, and was the organist and choir-leader at the Union church for thirty-five years.

Jonathan Wright followed the business of undertaker at Neffsville from 1870 to 1893; since then no one has followed it here.

The aged men at or near Neffsville in 1913 were: David Kuntz, 95 years; Joel DeLong, 82 years; Erastus D. Rhoads, 82 years; Jonathan Clauser, 81 years; John Sheidy, 80 years.

RISING SUN is a small village about two miles northeast of Neffsville which was started by Elias M. Kuntz in 1860 by establishing at a cross-roads a store and hotel, which he carried on successfully until 1900 (excepting two years when occupied by his son, Ellsworth); then he sold the premises to Harvey Rabert, who has since conducted the business. Besides the hotel, the village has two dwellings. A blacksmith shop was carried on there for many years by David Kuntz (a brother of Elias).

LAURY'S is a small settlement along the Lehigh river, at the eastern terminus of a prominent highway which extends from Unionville, through the upper section of the township, along the winding course of Rock creek. It was first known as Slate Dam, because at this point in the river the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., had in 1830 erected a large dam on a bed of slate, but in 1832 David Laury (forty years afterward an Associate Judge of Lehigh county) established a hotel here and he conducted it in a most successful manner for forty years. In this time it became a favorite resort for boarders in the summer season, and the place was named after the popular landlord. He was succeeded by his son-in-law, George F. Kimball; and afterward by C. D. Strauss, Sames & Minnich, and Jacob S. Sames.

The store business at this point has been carried on by Lewis D. Ritter, Herman Karlinske, Benjamin Sheirer, and Thomas F. Weitknecht (the last named since 1892).

In 1853, a post office was established here and Mr. Laury filled the office of postmaster continuously (excepting the year 1864) until his decease in 1883. He was succeeded by his son, Alexander, who has served the position for thirty years until the present time.

In 1855, upon the construction of the Lehigh Valley R. R. along the west bank of the river, a station was located at this prominent point and Mr. Laury was selected as the Company's agent, and he filled this position also in a satisfactory manner until his death, when he was succeeded by his son who was his assistant during the entire period; and the son has since served the company in a most faithful manner, making altogether a continuous service with the Lehigh Valley R. R. of nearly sixty years.

In 1913 the village contained 40 dwellings and an estimated population of 200; also a fine brick school building, besides the hotel, store, and R. R. station.

ROCKDALE is in the northeastern extremity of the township, along the Lehigh river at an old Indian fording-place where the Crab creek has its outlet. It owes its origin to the construction of the L. V. R. R. in 1855, when a large deposit of superior sand for moulding and building purposes was discovered at this point and the locality then took the name of "Sand-bank," but this was changed to Rockdale in 1856 by the railroad superintendent.

A railroad station was built here by the owners of the land, Christian Pretz and Stephen Balliet, to facilitate their shipment of freight. Elias Lentz built a hotel there in 1856, and he conducted the business for five years. He also put up a saw-mill and several dwellings. He was succeeded by William De Long, who carried on the place for about thirty years; then Franklin P. Rabert became the owner and he has been the proprietor until now. Coal chutes were established there and maintained during this time.

A post office was established some time before 1871 at the Boyer Hotel, half a mile up the creek; then transferred to Rockdale where the hotel keepers have since been the postmasters.

In 1913, the village included 10 dwellings, besides hotel, coal-chutes and private railroad station.

The following ministers were brought up at Rockdale, and in the vicinity: Reformed—Nero Peters, Mosby Roth, Benjamin Roth, Hiram Frantz, and Osville Frantz; Lutheran—Elias Yehl; Clinton Everett became a prominent educator, teaching for some years in Muhlenberg College, then located in South Carolina. Samuel Miller served as sheriff of Lehigh county from 1890 to 1893, having been prominent in Democrat politics for many years, and born and brought up between Rockdale and Laury's, where he still resides at the age of seventy-six years.

The electric light and power line, planted on structural iron piers, during the spring and summer of 1913, (which enters the county near "Bake-Oven," on the Blue mountains and extends in an eastwardly direction through the northern corner of Heidelberg, the central section of Washington and the northern section of North Whitehall to and beyond Laury's,) crosses the ravine several hundred feet west of Rockdale.

Mr. Lentz made two remarkable discoveries here, which caused much comment and awakened the liveliest curiosity. In 1856 he and a laborer were engaged in elevating a dumping-place for coal which was occasionally flooded by the rising waters of the river, and while digging into the sloping bank of the creek, about 60 yards from the river, the laborer turned up a coin with his pick axe. Upon examination it was found to be the top one of a pile of nineteen coins which were buried two feet under the surface. These coins were round, as large as a "Bland Dollar," and about as thick as a silver half-dollar. The substance did not appear like gold or silver metal, yet it gave out a clearer and more resonant sound than either. The spot was thickly overgrown with old beds of bushes having tangled roots, and a licorice tree stood about eight feet to the south. No remains of a box or covering was found about the coins, and they seemed to have been placed just as they were found. All were exactly similar and the inscription seemed to resemble Chaldaic characters. A distinguished Jewish rabbi said they were like a coin used by some nation contemporaneous with the second Hebrew king, about 2,400 years before the birth of Christ.

About three months after the discovery of the coins, Mr. Lentz made a second discovery at a place sixteen feet distant from the other. Thomas Ruch was hauling away coal with a four-horse team from the same dumping place, and, while driving away, the wheels sank into the bank which had become soft from recent rains. One of the rear wheels turned up a stone of peculiar shape, 10½ inches long and 2½ inches thick, whose ends were perfectly round and smooth. The ends had the appearance of being sealed, and upon breaking them one was found to contain a substance which resembled crushed oyster-shells, and the other a coil of coarse, black human hair. No explanations have been made relating to the time or the cause of these strange deposits.

About a mile above the village along the railroad, Lewis Peter (son of Daniel), opened a large "Sand pit," and carried on operations for a number of years until 1908.

TREXLER DEER PARK.—Col. Harry C. Trexler, of Allentown, in 1906, established a reservation covering about 1,500 acres of rolling farm and wood land for raising deer, buffalo, and elk, to keep these animals from becoming extinct; nearly all of which large area lies in North Whitehall township not far from Schnecksville, a small portion (about 100 acres) being in Lowhill. It is well-watered by meandering streams, in picturesque ravines, prominent among them being the Jordan; and it is enclosed by a strong wire fence, eight feet high and altogether thirteen miles long, with gates at certain points for convenient ingress and egress in its supervision. The keeper of the park from the beginning has been Oliver Frey. The animals in the reservation October, 1913, numbered 300 deer, 12 buffalo, and 20 elk.

INDIAN BAKE-OVEN.—Near the top of Schantz's Hill, in the Trexler Deer Park, about a mile west from Schnecksville in a direct line, there is a great curiosity in a slate rock on the southerly steep hill-side, five hundred feet above the rippling waters of the Jordan, and this has excited much curiosity in settlers and hunters for over a hundred years. No one knows when it was first discovered but there it still is, apparently a mark of pre-historic times, not a natural hole or indentation worn in the protruding rock by the rains and storms and changing seasons as if eaten out by the "Teeth of Time," but a veritable excavation by a sharp implement, hollowed out from the edge, exactly like a bake-oven, five feet in diameter and nine inches high, with a rectangular inlet, eighteen inches wide and six inches high, and a hole through the top into an aperture shaped like a cigar-box whose outlet is six inches wide and three inches high, as if designed for smoke to escape.

A steep deer path passes in front of this ledge of rock, and the oven is about five feet above the path. This rock is surrounded by chestnut and oak trees of medium growth, and a rock-oak stands on its western extremity.

A considerable platform of rock is known to have originally extended a foot or more in front of the entrance to this oven, but most of it was broken off by violence by several inconsiderate boys some years before Colonel Trexler enclosed the land for a "Deer Park."

SAND-SPRING.—Half a mile east of Schnecksville, near the Wotring Mill, there is a large spring which bubbles up through a bed of sand with a strong and perennial flow of excellent water. From the time of the earliest settlements, this was a central point which attracted much attention, and for many years before the days of trolley-lines and railroads there were only two conspicuous and popular places in Lehigh county for picnics and pleasure parties, and they were generally known as "Dorney's Park," and "Wotring's Sand-Spring."

It is evident, from the numerous flint relics found here during the course of a hundred years, such as arrow and spear heads, stone implements, etc., that the Indians had a village in the vicinity of this spring. The locality would naturally attract them for its picturesque environment, as it later also attracted the German immigrants. It was on the "Indian Trail," which extended through this section of country.

This bubbling spring flows into an egg-shaped basin about fifty feet long and thirty feet wide, surrounded by oak and chestnut trees, with a slight embankment of small rocks, covered with moss, grass, and low bushes at its head. Fifty years ago, the flow was much stronger than it is now. The commotion over the outlet at the bottom extended several inches above the surface and carried along considerable particles of sharp, white sand. The flow was so strong that the owner of the grist-mill secured and held for a long time a water-right from this spring, having constructed a ditch through several fields for 500 yards and led the water by gravity into the dam, so as not to allow it to pass down a rivulet into Coplay creek without supplying any power on its way.

ADDITION TO TOWNSHIP.—On April 19, 1897 a portion of Washington township was added to North Whitehall to facilitate road making. The tract of territory was described in the proceedings in the Court of Quarter Sessions, as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of Lowhill, Heidelberg, Washington, and North Whitehall townships, thence N. $24\frac{1}{4}^{\circ}$ W. 201.8 perches to a point where the division line, on lands of John Sell and David Handwerk, (formerly of William Metzger and Monroe Peter), intersects the division line between Washington and Heidelberg townships, thence by lands of William Fenstermaker, David Handwerk, David Kehnel, Reuben Reber, Benjamin Geiger, and Willoughby Kern, at N. $58\frac{1}{4}^{\circ}$ E, 652 ps., to a stake, thence by lands late of Abraham Bear and Joseph Hunsicker, N. $50\frac{1}{4}^{\circ}$ E., 81.8 ps., to a line intersecting the road leading from Union church to the old Mauch Chunk road.

CHAPTER XLI.

SALISBURY TOWNSHIP.

Salisbury township lies in the Southeastern part of Lehigh county. Its surface is rolling, well watered and fertile. The township slopes from the Lehigh Mountain, which marks its southern boundary to the north and east towards the Lehigh river, which forms a part of its northern and eastern boundary. Few squatters had probably settled within the bounds of the township between the years of 1730 and 1735; but it was not until the latter date that the Penns began to dispose of their holding and that a steady stream of immigrants, some from the lower counties and others direct from the Fatherland began to cross the Lehigh Mountains and settle within the boundaries of the township.

On March 20, 1753, a number of persons from along the West branch of the Delaware (Lehigh River) united in petitioning the court of Northampton county that they be formed into a township. This petition was presented to the court, May 20 of the same year, together with similar petitions from Whitehall and Weisenberg. The following action was taken by the court June 9, 1753; that:

“The petition of divers persons, inhabitants of a tract of land, eight miles long by three miles broad, bounded on one side by the West branch of the Delaware river, and on the other side by the respective townships of Upper Saucon, Upper Milford, Macungie and Whitehall, praying that the same may be laid out in a township, to be called Salisburg, be allowed.”

The name of the township is often spelled Salzbug or Saltzburg, and Gen. W. W. Davis, in his History of Bucks County, claims this as the original spelling, but since the original warrants contain the spelling “Salisbury,” and because the provincial government was English, in all probability it was named after Salisbury in England; which, however, the German settlers pronounced as “Saltzburg,” and spelled it accordingly. The general accepted spelling to-day is Salisbury.

Nearly all the early settlers of the township were of the Lutheran and Reformed faiths, and soon after their arrival they joined hands in the erection of churches, in which they worshipped alternately. The first house of worship thus jointly erected in the western end of the township on the banks of the Little Lehigh river in 1741 and was known for a time as the church “on the Little Lehigh,” but later the name was changed to “New Jerusalem church, Western Salisbury.” In 1759 there was erected another union church in the eastern end of the township and was the “New Jerusalem church, Eastern Salisbury.” These two churches, together with the Moravian church at Emaus, were for many years the only houses of worship in the township.

REV. DANIEL ZELLERS.

JERUSALEM UNION CHURCH OF WESTERN SALISBURY.

About four miles west of Allentown and less than two miles north from Emaus is located the Jerusalem Union Congregation of Western Salisbury. It is jointly owned by the Lutheran and Reformed congregations worshipping in it. It stands on an elevated plateau, near the Little Lehigh River, and can be seen from far and wide. The edifice is a splendid type of church architecture of the olden time. It is built of stone, its ceiling is high and arched and galleries are found on the sides. It was erected in 1819, but remodeled in 1884, when the interior was changed and the steeple with its vestibule added. The first church was erected in 1741, which is described as having been rudely constructed of logs with a stone covered floor, hewn logs for pews and without a stove.

The church register contains the following inscription:

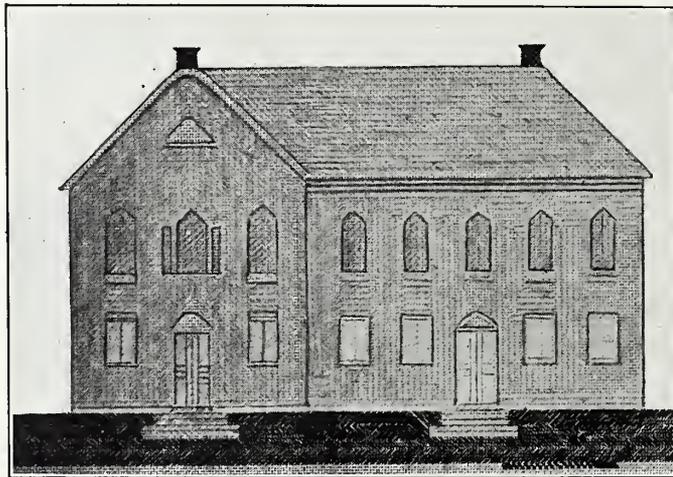

ANNO DOMINI.

1741

1st Die Kirche Gebaut Worden.
In diesem lieben Gottes Haus
Soll Jesus gehen ein un aus,
Un Gott soll hoch gelobet werden
Von uns, sein Volk auf dierser Erden,
Das wer hir horet Gottes wort,
Moeg selig werden hir und dort.

AMEN.

Alles was odem hat, lobe den herrn,
HALLELUJAH.

CHURCH IN 1819 (FROM AN OLD SAMPLER).

After a number of years it was replaced by a frame structure which again in 1819 gave way to the present edifice. Though the first church was erected in 1741 it was not until two years later (December 15, 1743) that a deed for the ground upon it was erected. The parties to the deed were Johann Wilhelm Straub, "Prediger dahier an der Kleine Yecha," and Hennrich Roth and Johann Martin Bamberger." Wir begeben uns vum dieses Platzlein (2 acker fur 20 schillings) mit aller geretighkeit auf heisiger landesfreiheit, an die schon wirklich erbaute Reformirte, Evangelische, Lutherische Kirche, Gott zu ehren unser und unserer nachkommlingen Sellen Heil und Wohlfart."

Prior to the erection of the church in 1741 religious services were held in barns and groves, by itinerant missionary pastors; among those who visited the section with some degree of regularity were Reverends John Philip Boehm and John Henry Goetschy.

As is the case with many of the early baptismal records, the record opens with a Latin inscription:

In Nomine
Sancti
Spiriti
Baptizati Sunt
Sequentes
Infantes

Schreib unsere Nahmen aufs beste,
Ins Buch des Lebens ein,
Und bind die Sell fein feste,
Ins Schoene Buendelein;
Derer die im Himme! Gruenen,
Und vor die Leben frei
So will ich ewig ruehmen,
Das dein Hertz Treu sei.

Among those who brought children to baptism prior to 1800, we find the following family names:

Althomus, Anner, Andreas, Blank, Boger, Bastian, Bock, Brei, Biery, Brinker, Bader, Bieber, Bogert, Cuter, Dreschler, Duer, Doerr, Dauber, Danner, Dornie, Eysman, Edleman, Eisenhard, Evans, Erdman, Fischer, Frei, Fermer, Flexer, Finck, Farmer, Frick, Gut, Gabel, Glick, Huber, Hamman, Horlacher, Herr, Helfrich, Hittler, Heichel, Hamberger, Hartzel, Hains, Hartman, Haeil, Heinrich, Hertz, Hittel, Heiser, Henig, Hilet, Hill, Heimbach, Ivans, Ihrich, Jacoby, Jung, Jarrit, Kouch, Knorr, Koehler, Kline, Knaedler, Knauss, Klingeschmid, Keck, Klotz, Klneck, Kemmerer, Kimmel, Keem, Kaeler, Lindt, Leibert, Laudenschlager, Leibenssent to the Lutheran congregation in 1760 by Adam Plank is still in possession of the congregation, as well as a pewter plate presented by George Hoffman in 1742, a communion cup presented by Johannes Helfrich in 1748 and a very fine communion tankard containing the following inscription, 1769 A. B., G. M., G. B., and a "Schlatter Bible." The above mentioned tankard is still used by the congregations at their communion services.

Before the days of the public schools the congregation maintained a parochial school; just when the first school was erected cannot be ascertained, but tradition places it at quite an perger, Loeh, Leydi, Laipert, Mohr, Moser, Meier, Miller, Mercker, Mertz, Mooty, Martin, Mechlin, Neumoyer, Neitz, Nonemaker, Nass, Ott, Olp, Pogoy, Plank, Propst, Perts, Ritter, Roth, Rothermel, Reitz, Rischer, Rockell, Reite, Ruch, Reichart, Reiner, Schand, Stephen, Scholl, Schuerr, Schumaker, Scherrit, Schaeffer, Schmidt, Sauerwine, Spengler, Sturtz, Stuber, Schuler, Steininger, Sterner, Schnair, Schnerrit, Schwartz, Schever, Schneider, Strauss, Sensenderfer, Stiel, Toeller, Tutt, Ton, Tauber, Vetter, Voight, Woeder, Wolfgang, Waeber, Wart, Wenner, Walter, Wescho, Wider, Weick, Weigand, Waetzal, Ziegenfus.

JERUSALEM CHURCH, WESTERN SALISBURY.

The old pewter baptismal dish which was pre-early period. Rev. Helfrich reports to Coetus in 1785 for Western Salisbury, twenty families, six baptisms, one school, and twenty scholars. The congregation still owns a school-building, which it now however rents to the township for school purposes. The present edifice was erected in 1819.

The cemetery, which is large and well kept, contains the ashes of many of the early settlers of the Macungie region, as well as those of quite a few friendly Indians. Tradition also locates here the grave of the massacred Frantz family. The cemetery has been carefully plotted and a record of every burial is made. So that whether a grave has a headstone or not it can easily be located. Among the oldest graves whose tombstones may be deciphered are:

	Born.	Died.
Christofel Andreas,	1745	1817
George Michael Bader,	1728	1771
Michael Biery,	1739	1800
Jacob Bogert,	1748	1802
Jacob Bogert,	1731	1798
Elizabeth Bogert,	1767	1867
Johan George Gluck,	1749	1816
Henrick Kemmerer,	1740	1801
Lorenz Klein,	1735	1819
Conrad Marck,	1745	1807
Martin Ritter,	1749	1827
Heinrich Roth,	1688	1754

LUTHERAN.

Rev. Daniel Schumacher,	1759-1763
Rev. J. F. Schertlein,	1766-1769
	1764-1765
	1769-1793
Rev. Jacob Van Buskirk,	1796-1799
Rev. George F. Ellison,	1793-1796
Rev. Johannes P. F. Kramer,	1800-1803
Rev. John G. Roeller,	Supply,
Rev. John Casper Dill,	1803 and 1804
Rev. John Conrad Jaeger,	1805-1808
Rev. Henrick Heine,	1808-1817
Rev. John G. Strecher,	1817-1819
Rev. Benjamin German,	1819-1848
Rev. William German,	1848-1851

CONGREGATIONAL VESSELS AND SCHLATTER BIBLE.

LIST OF PASTORS.

REFORMED.

Rev. John Philip Boehm,	1734-1736
Rev. John Henry Goetschy,	1737-1739
Rev. John William Straub,	1741-1744
Rev. John Philip Leydich,	1748-1770
Rev. Conrad Steiner, Jr.,	1770-1771
Rev. John George Witmer,	1771-1779
Rev. John Henry Helfrich,	1779-1785
Rev. John Henry Hoffmeier, .. (Supply)-	1791
Rev. Jacob William Dechant,	1805-1815
Rev. Daniel Zellers,	1815-1857
Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs,	1857-1876
Rev. Thomas Reber,	1876-1892
Rev. Charles E. Schaeffer,	1892-1896
Rev. Preston A. DeLong,	1897-1899
Rev. J. P. Bachman,	1900-1908
Rev. John Baer Stoudt,	1908-1911
Rev. Daniel Schaeffer,	1911-

Rev. Jacob Vogelbach,	1852-1857
Rev. William Rath,	1857-1889
Rev. Myron O. Rath,	1890-

NEW JERUSALEM UNION CHURCH, EASTERN SALISBURY.

From the original records of this union congregation which have fortunately been carefully preserved and which are now kept in a fire proof safe by Mr. James W. Larash, we learn that the first house of worship was erected in 1759. The record is in the handwriting of Rev. Daniel Schumacher, and begins:

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN.

The Christian Evangelical Lutherans and Reformed, both adhering to the Protestant religion, have together erected a church in Salzburg township in Northampton county, in the year of the Lord, 1759. This church was built after the Indians had again ceased to burn and to kill in this neighborhood, and by poor people only, who were, however, assisted by their brethren with small contributions."

"The first preacher on the part of the Reformed Congregation at the dedication of this new church, was the Rev. Rudolph Kidwiler, popularly known as the Swiss preacher. A Lutheran minister had also been selected for the dedication, but it was not possible for him to be present. The second preacher on the part of the Lutheran congregation was the Rev. Daniel Schumacher. His text at the dedication of this new church was from the Prophet Haggai, Chap. 2, vs. 7, 8 (9). "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, and in this place will I give peace." Held 1759, Sixth Sunday after Trinity, in the afternoon at 2 o'clock."

"The first elders and deacons were: Christian Kaub and Matthis Gurth, Conrad Jacobi and John George Weber."

"The deacons who were elected at the beginning of the new church, have the right for themselves and also for those elders and deacons who shall succeed them, to sit side by side in their pew, and the offerings that shall be gathered at the service held by either preacher, shall be carefully preserved by both congregations and elders and applied to the church.

(Signed)

CHRISTIAN KNAUB, Lutheran Deacon

*George WEBER

CHRISTIAN LIESZ

CONRAD JACOBI, Reformed Deacon."

*"Because George Weber separated from our church, Christian Leisz, whose name comes next, was elected in his place a Lutheran Deacon."

John Rudolph Kidenweiler, January 2, 1717, came to Pennsylvania from Basel, Switzerland. He is often referred to as "Der Schweitzer Pfarrer." He qualified at Philadelphia, September 28, 1749. He came with the Swiss Colony to the upper end of the county to the "Swiss Eck," and preached to his countrymen in the houses and groves. In 1750 he founded the Weisenburg congregation. In 1754 he became pastor of the Longswamp congregation and served as their pastor for a period of seven and one-half years. In 1763 he accepted a call from the Great Swamp Congregation, and died there the following year, October 2, 1764.

The Rev. Daniel Schumacher, after preaching three years in Nova Scotia, was obliged to leave there because the people were too poor to support him. He came to New York, and from there the Rev. John A. Weygand recommended the theological student, Schumacher, to the ministerium for ordination. For some reason Schumacher was never received into the Ministerium. It is known that he served a number of congregations in Berks and Lehigh counties from 1754-1774. From 1755-1758 he was pastor of Trinity Church, Reading, and also served other congregations in that vicinity. He labored in Egypt and at one time had as many as sixteen congregations. His remains are buried in the graveyard of the Weisenburg Church, Lehigh county. In the Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, his private baptismal records, containing several thousand baptisms, are found. He wrote a very legible hand. His records in this congregation dated from July 22, 1759, the day of dedication with one or two interruptions to 1768.

Baptisms were generally administered by him in church on the occasion of his visits on Sunday. When performed elsewhere he indicates the place. The first baptism recorded is that of George David, a son of David and Martha Hamman, born July 11, 1759; baptized July 22, 1759. The sponsors were George Spohn and his wife, Maria. The names of families that appear in this old record, besides those mentioned are: Kaub (may this not be the original spelling of the name, now so numerous in this vicinity, Cope?), Herzog, Eberhard, Weber, Miller, Emich, Schoener, Giesz, Claus, Boehm, Wagner, Hartman, Duerr, Smetzer, Brasser, Luzarus, Kutz, Stahl, Gorges, Nagel, Theyle, Mertz, Rentzheimer, Rasmus, Gernet, Lehr, Stuber, Appel, Rubb, Schneider, Kaiper, Grumbach, Ziesloff, Schwencker.

In 1769, Rev. Lizce baptized two children. The last baptism in this book was on May 21, 1786, when Rev. Carl Christoph Goetz, Preacher at Jordan, baptized John George, son of John William Kaup (or Cope) and wife (nee Rentzheimer), born January 12th. The sponsors were George Kaup and Christina Rentzheimer.

There is only one list of communicants found in this record, dated April 23, 1791.

1. Elder Henry Rentzheimer.
 2. Michael Stahl.
 3. Christian Gernet.
 4. Peter Stoehr.
 5. John Gernet.
 6. Conrad Rau.
 7. George Gernet.
 8. George Ueberroth.
 9. George Duer.
 10. George Kaup.
 11. Frederick Kaup.
 12. Peter Nagel.
1. Catharine Rentsheimer.

2. Elizabeth Gernet.
3. Elizabeth Steohr.
4. Elizabeth Gernet.
5. Margaret Rau.
6. Margaret Gernet.
7. Barbara Dur.
8. Maria Teyler.
9. Agnes Ueberroth.
10. Susanna Kaup.
11. Catharine Moren.
12. Maria Frone Arassmuss.
13. Maria Margaret Teyle.
14. Hannah Nagel.

"Of this list of communicants, it will be of interest to learn that 'Elder Henry Rentzheimer,' whose name appears first on the list, was a clock maker, and quite recently we saw one of his clocks, containing chimes, in the home of Mrs. Elmer Reiss, near Friedensville, made by Henry Rentzheimer in 1789, for John Ehschelman, the great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Reiss."

Rev. C. J. Cooper, D.D., History of Jerusalem Church, Eastern Salisbury, in Volume II. Proceedings of Lehigh County Historical Society, page 74.

In the rear of the church record one comes across the following entry:

"ALPHA OMEGA."

"A list of articles that have been bequeathed and contributed in the Evangelical Lutheran Church, as follows:

"Anno 1759, Elizabeth Ottern gave a white table cloth for the Lutheran congregation. Anno 1760, Martin Schneider gave a pewter cup for use in the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, for the Lutheran congregation, and also a white cloth."

The numerical growth of the congregation was slow, impeded probably by the organizations of other union congregations in comparative close proximity. So that when at the close of the 18th Century, when the log structure of 1759 became delapidated and unsafe the spot was abandoned for church purposes because the congregation was too small and the people were too poor to erect a new house of worship. Another reason for the decline of the congregation is found in the gruesome tale of how, shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War, the devil one night slew, dismembered and carried away from the cemetery the body of a certain Tambour Yokel. That this legend powerfully affected the community cannot be gainsaid, for even today the story is widely circulated and frequently credited and there are still people to be found who will drive several miles extra on a dark night to avoid passing the cemetery.

THE LEGEND OF TAMBOUR YOKEL.

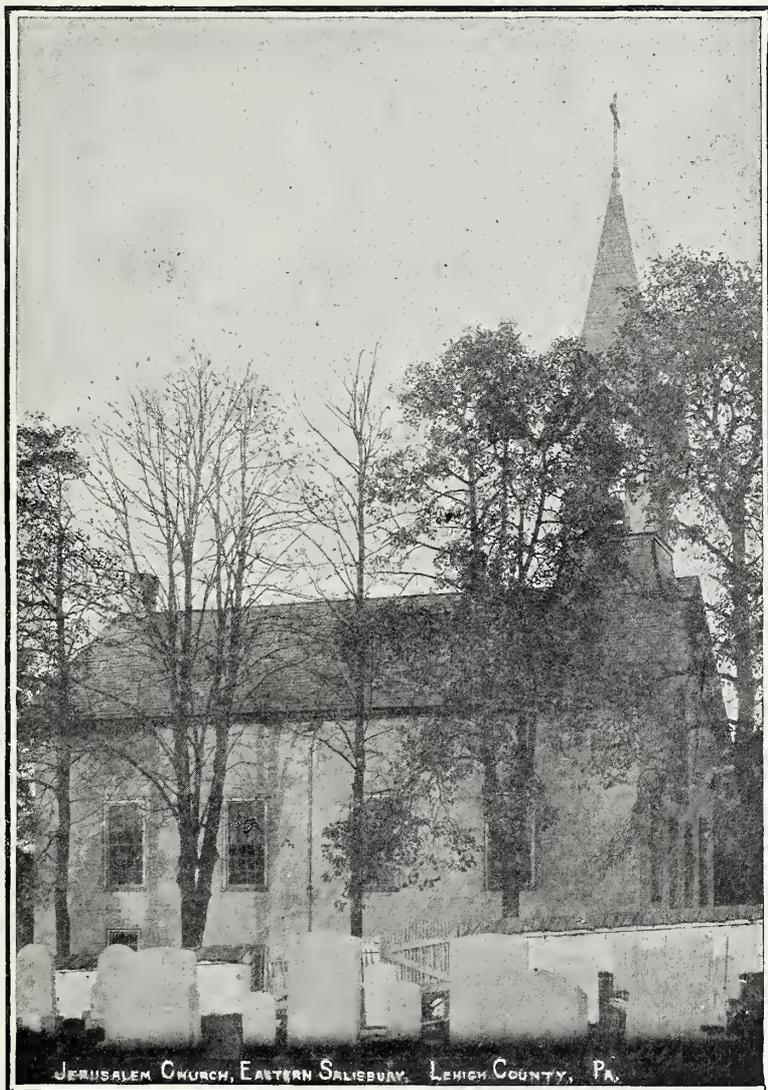

By JOSEPH HENRY DUBBS, D.D., LL.D.

Tell the story with bated breath—
 A story of horror, and gloom, and death.
 A little church on a lonely hill;
 A churchyard near it, calm and still.
 Fair in the morning's early light
 Dark and gloomy it seems at night.
 Then it is said in the olden time,
 Happened a nameless deed of crime:
 And stalwart men with swiftest pace,
 Haste when they pass that dreadful place.
 Home, with the troops from the war had come
 Tambour Yokel, who beat the drum:
 A worthless wretch, who on his way
 Had learned but arts of a bird of prey;
 Who had sold, it was said, in the dreadful strife,
 His soul to Satan to save his life.
 "Now where," he cried, "is my ancient foe?
 I have come from the battle to lay him low."
 "Peace! Peace!" they answered. "Your boast is vain;
 That man will never fight again;
 The foe you hated, and sought to kill
 Now rests in the churchyard on the hill."
 "Ho! What of that?" the drummer cried,
 "Perhaps it was well the coward died;
 But I know a way, as you'll see to-night,
 To bring the man from his grave to fight."
 Then a dreadful oath the ruffian swore,
 He would call him forth to fight once more.
 In their cups that night, at the tavern near,
 His comrades met him with mock and jeer:
 "Ho, wizard!" they cried, "why don't you go
 To the churchyard now to meet your foe?"
 Then Tambour Yokel cursed and swore,
 And sallied forth from the tavern door.
 "Come forth!" he cried, through the startled night,
 "Come forth, thou fiend, from the grave and fight!"
 He reached the churchyard gate and then
 The fearful challenge was heard again.
 But soon a cry that was wild and shrill
 Was heard from the churchyard on the hill.
 "Help! Help!" he cried, but none drew near,
 His comrades trembled, aghast with fear,
 In silence waiting—that godless crew—
 While cries still fainter and fainter grew.
 Next morning they came, with silent tread
 Seeking their comrade among the dead.
 There, mid the graves, the man they found,
 Naked and cold on the trodden ground:
 Scattered his garments, far and wide;
 Bloody the soil where the wretch had died.
 And this was all: but who can tell

Who wounded the victim, and how he fell?
 Did a panther perchance, of the forest tear
 The limbs of the wretched boaster there?
 Or, was it the fiend, as the neighbors say,
 That bore his godless soul away?
 Ah! none can tell,—nor cared to know
 But a mighty hand had laid him low.

ganized and the present edifice was erected. The cornerstone was laid on Ascension day, May 13, 1847, and the church dedicated October 9th and 10th of the same year. The building committee consisted of David Giess, David Moritz, Solomon Diehl, Solomon Boehm.

The growth of the congregations was very

JERUSALEM CHURCH, EASTERN SALISBURY, LEHIGH COUNTY, PA.

NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH, EASTERN SALISBURY.

Yet, with a shudder, men still relate
 The tale of Tambour Yokel's fate;
 And none forgets the legend grim—
 How a fearful judgment was sent to him.

In 1847 after a period of more than 50 years the congregation of Eastern Salisbury were re-or-slow, not being located in an industrial center, the drift has been away from them. The membership has rarely exceeded one hundred on either side. The church was renovated in 1884 and again in 1898, when a steeple was placed upon the church. In 1885 the Morgenland Cemetery Association was formed, composed of members of the congregation, for the purpose of enlarging, improving and maintaining the cemetery. In the two cemeteries rest the ashes of over 700 persons, among whom are 25 veterans of the Civil War. Many of the early graves have no head stone; while others, time has so effaced that the inscriptions are no longer legible.

The oldest graves on whose tombstones the names can be deciphered are: Christian Giess, born in Nassau, Europe, 1720; died May, 1803. William Moritz, born May 12, 1720; died May 25, 1797. Eva Moritz, born September 29, 1727; died April 26, 1791. John Moritz, born April 15, 1760, died June 29, 1847. Helena Catharine (nee Ebert), wife of John Moritz, born March 16, 1766; died January 29, 1862. John William Stuber, born August 19, 1768; died October 6, 1853; 85 years, 1 month and 17 days. Jacob Jacoby, born August 28, 1789; died March 7, 1867; 77 years, 6 months and 8 days. Elizabeth Jacoby, born September 15, 1788; died December 15, 1857; 68 years and 3 months. There is one stone marked "Oct. 7, 1769, 1st Jacob Sam, 1 year, 3 mos."

The organization of the Reformed wing of the Union congregation of Eastern Salisbury antedates the erection of the union church in 1759 by more than a decade, and was originally known as the church on the Lehigh or Big Lehigh. Schlatter, the official visitor of the Reformed churches in Pennsylvania, makes the following entry: From Wednesday to Saturday the 24th, 25th, and 26th (June, 1747), I visited the congregations in Manatawny, Maguncly, Egypt and on the Lehigh, a circuit of forty-five miles and came near to Bethlehem, a location of the Moravians, and here in the providence of God I met Jacob Lischy, who was at time attached to that sect," "In the afternoon (June 28) I went nine miles further (from Saccony) to a place called Springfield or Schuggenhaus, In this region there are four or five small congregations, namely Saccony, Forks of Delaware, Springfield and Lehigh, which would be able to contribute about thirty-three pounds or 233 Dutch guilders for the support of a minister. Here, too, there is great need of an able minister, since Bethlehem the seat of the Moravians is near to it. This would be the tenth charge."

In 1752 Rev. Schlatter reports to the Authorities in Holland, under whose care the Reformed church in Pennsylvania were then, that the congregations of Great Lehigh, Little Lehigh, Forks of Delaware, Saccony, Springfield, Heidelberg, Egypt, Jordan, Magunchy, Allemangel, Schmaltzgass and Manatawny are without shepherds and long for faithful guides. Reverend Leonard Schnell, a Moravian Missionary, and one of the founders of the Emaus congregation, left the Moravian church in 175— and is said to have preached to congregations in Salisbury and Saucon. The outbreak of the French and Indian war and in particular the Massacres in the upper parts of the county threw everything in state of confusion and it was left for Reverends Kidenweiler and Schumacher to re-organize the work in 1759, "After the Indians had again ceased to burn and kill":

LIST OF PASTORS SINCE 1847.

REFORMED.

Rev. Maximilian Stern, D.D., . . .	1848-1852
Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs,	1852-1855
Rev. Simon K. Gross,	1855-1857
Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs,	1857-1864
Rev. D. F. Brendle, D.D.,	1866-1872
Rev. N. Z. Snyder, D.D.,	1872-1907
Rev. F. C. Brown,	1908-Present.

LUTHERAN.

Rev. Joonna Yeager,	1847-1883
Rev. W. Wackernagel,	1882-1886
Rev. W. F. Schoener,	1886-1901
Rev. W. Wackernagel,	1901-1902
Rev. E. H. Eberts,	1902-1903
Rev. H. A. Kunkle,	1903-1907
Rev. C. J. Cooper,	1907-Present.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The following is a partial list of the early settlers of Salisbury township and vicinity, with places of birth as they appear on the Emaus Moravian church record:

Sebastian Knauss, Titelsheim, Wetteran; Anna Catharine Knauss, Palatinate; Jacob Ehrenhardt, Marstadt, near Worms; Barbara Ehrenhardt, Boehn, near Manheim, Palatinate; Samuel E. Koop, Sindelfinger, near Stuttgart; Anna Catherina Kopp, Bushweiler, Lower Alsace, near Strassburg; Johannes Knauss, Titelsheim; Maria Catherina Knauss, Mutterstadt, near Manheim; Johannes Kohler, Brettach, in Wurtenberg; Eva Kohler, Swabia; George Hartmann, Bischofsheim, Palatinate; Christina Hartmann, Kellebach, Baden; Fred Rauchenberger, Widmus in Marienborn, erzogen in Wurtenberg; Maria Goetschy Rauchenberger, Berneck-Winthal, Switzerland; Rosina Moz, Kalkendorf, Alsace; Catharina Wezel, Oppa-Manheim, Palatinate; Christopher Schuez, Seifhennerdorf, Saxon; Anna Christ Schuez, Seifhennerdorf, Saxon; Andrew Giering, Boll, Wurtenberg; Matthew Wesner, Dornhammer, Wurtenberg; Andrew Eisenhardt, Dachtel, Wurtenberg; Fred. Romig, Itlingen, Palatinate; Henrich Tesch, Igelheim, Kur-Pfaltz; Abraham Zeigler, Freudenstadt, Schwartzwald, Wurtenberg; Christopher Weiser, Wurtenberg.

In addition to these among the first settlers were: Philip Geisinger, Solomon Jennings, Abraham Körper, Mathias Egner, Henry Roth, John Martin Barmberger, George Stoudt, Gottfried Serfass, John Reiss, Abraham Transo, Valentine Steinmetz, George Klem, Jacob Mohr, Frantz Ritter, Peter Bogert, Rudolph Smith, Henry Ritter, Andreas Hertz, Michael Hittel, Christian Kaup, Conrad Jacoby, William Albert, George Weber and a family named Schneider.

TAX LIST OF SALISBURY, 1762.

Christian Kaup, Collector.

Andrew Astrum,...	8	Rudolph Smith,....	8
William Albert,...	12	Christopher Shitz,.	6
Peter Bauer,.....	4	Ulrich Sanrit,.....	6
Peter Bogger,.....	20	Bernit Winsh,.....	5
George Stoud,.....	16	George Weis,.....	7
Frederick Bassman,.	7	Jacob Mine,.....	5
Henry Burger,....	4	Philip Wagner,....	4
Daniel Creutz,.....	5	Tobias Wandel,....	4
Michael Danner,...	6	George Ziegler,....	5
George Dut,.....	10	Jacob Zimmerman,.	4
Michael Fink,.....	7	John Jennings, Esq.,	9
Richard Freeman,...	30	abated	6
abated	14	Bernard Straup,....	13
Christian Giess,...	8	Geo. Adam Blank,...	23
Andrew Gearing,...	7	Michael Hutler,....	13
Andrew Gabel,.....	6	Mathias Wesner,....	5
Mathias Gurt,.....	8	Henry Heiser,.....	11
Andreas Hartz,.....	10	Adam Witter,....	10
Peter Hertzog,....	4	Jacob Sauerwine,...	4
Peter Hartman,....	4	Yost Walb,.....	4
Henry Jacoby,....	6	Christian Weiser,...	4
Conrad Jacoby,....	10	Peter Spengler,....	6
Christian Kassel,...	20	Simon Brenner,....	6
Christian Kaup,...	7	George Wolf,.....	8
Laurence Kols,....	4	Martin Frölich,....	7
Bastian Knauss,...	22	George Louer,....	4
Henry Keck,.....	10	Jacob Moor,.....	6
Philip Kunius,....	6	Peter Miller,.....	4
Henry Kuhns' wid- ow,	15	John Martin Dör,...	4
Michael Ott,.....	5	David Deshler,.....	9
George Leibert,....	22	John George Schnepf,	4
Michael Loury,....	4	Abraham Rinker,...	8
John Melchert,....	9	Leonard Able,.....	7
Balter Riegel.		Simon Leiber,.....	5
Henry Ritter,.....	18	Peter Shwab,.....	4
Michael Rothrick,...	8	Adam Grisher,.....	6
Leonard Reichert,...	6	John Weaver,.....	4

Single men.

Casper Ritter.	Philip Ebert.
Michael Kern.	Godfried Richard.
John Graus.	Michael Martin.
George Richard.	Jacob Neass.
John Kidd.

SALISBURY TOWNSHIP.

The assessment made by the Commissioners of Northampton County for Salisbury township in 1812 contains the following names:

John Bogert.	William Reinbold.
Abraham Bidelman.	Nicholas Rimmel.
Jacob Buchecker.	John Ritter.
George Bieber.	Abraham Spinner.
Jacob Bierey.	David Sholl.
Jacob Brang.	Rudolph Smith.
Michael Bauer.	John Stuber.
Henry Bairrie.	William Stuber.
Henry Bauer.	Daniel Seigfried.
Tobias Barnet.	John Snyder, Sr.
Jacob Christ.	John Snyder, Jr.
John Deatrich.	George Single.
Stephen Dool.	John Spinner.
George Deily,.	Jeremiah Shiffert.
Christian Dutt.	Jacob Spinner.
John Diehl.	David Spinner.
Daniel Diehl.	Jacob Shnyder.
Jacob Diehl.	Henry Sutler.
Israel Dool.	Henry Shiffert.
Christiam Deiley.	Jacob Shiffert.
George Ehrich.	Conrad Stare.
George Eshbach.	Jacob Sheaver.
John Eshbach.	Christian Stump.
Jacob Ehrenhard.	Joseph Jost.
Thomas Everett.	Philip Krauss.
William Espelling.	Frederick Kocher.
Henry Fetter.	Jacob Kachline.
Jacob Fox.	John Keck.
Peter Fink.	Peter Kline.
George Gernet.	Stoffle Kline.
John Gernet.	Jacob Knauss.
George Adam Klein.	Henry Kemmerer.
George Geiss.	Martin Kemmerer.
George Geissinger.	Andrew Keck, Sr.
Philip Gross.	Andrew Keck, Jr.
John Goebel.	Nicholas Kleckner.
John Gering.	George Keiffer.
Christian Gernet.	Adam Klein.
Daniel Gross.	Michael Klein.
John Hutchinson.	Philip Klein.
Christian Heiberger.	Daniel Klein.
George Henry.	Solomon Keck.
John Horlacher.	Henry Keck.
Abraham Horlacher.	John Kemmer.
George Heist.	John Knauss.
Jacob Horlacher.	Joseph Klewell.
Joseph Jost, Jr.	John Knauss.
Casper Kleckner.	Joseph Knauss.
John Klewell.	George Keck.
William Kruver.	Peter Shitz.
Adam Laudenslager.	Peter Schlecter.
Martin Leibert.	Michael Streibich.
Solomon Lukes.	Peter Swager.
Joseph Line.	Samuel Toon.
John Line.	Adam Uberroth.
Martin Lazerous.	George Uberroth.
France Ludwig.	Nicholas Uberroth.
John Moritz.	David Uberroth.
John Meyer.	George Wetzgar.
George Meyer.	Peter Waldman.
Sam Masteller.	Jacob Wild.
Christian Nagle.	Jacob Weil.
Widow Nagle.	George Weber.
John Rese.	John Wagener.
Martin Ritter.	John Weider.
Henry Ritter.	Peter Weber.
Martin Ritter.	Philip Weber.
Hartman Reinhard.	Frederick Winsh.
Simon Reinsmith.	Abraham Worman.
Jacob Reise.	George Yohe.
Ludwig Reinbold.	Abraham Ziegler.

Leonard Geiger. Frederick Winsh.
Matthias Greiling. Abraham Neuhard.

Single Freemen.

Michael Fink. George Moritz.
Henry Bower. Jacob Reese.
John Bower. Christian Klewell.
Peter Graver. John Rau.
John Spinner. Ludwig Reinbold.
John Reinbold. Jacob Sutor.
David Geissinger. Daniel Ritter.
Samuel Masteller. William Dool.
Henry Masteller. Peter Slyter.
Jacob Fox. Adam Nagle.
Abraham Stare. Benjamin Keck.

Unseated lands, sixty-five different names.

Abraham Transeau and his wife, Elizabeth Munster, migrated from the Palatinate in 1730. On March 30, 1736, he took out a warrant for 150 acres in the township. This tract adjoined the Peter Bogert plantation. On Jan. 1, 1741, his daughter, Anna Catharine, married Sebastian Knauss. The name Transeau has long disappeared from the annals of the township, but is still extant in Northampton county.

Henry Roth, by a warrant dated Sept. 28, 1738, secured 300 acres of land in the township. On Dec. 15, 1743, he, together with Martin Bamberger, gave a deed for the land on which the Salisbury church had already been erected. He was born June 16, 1688, and arrived at Philadelphia Aug. 17, 1733, together with his wife, Catherine, aged 40 years, together with the following children: Anna Eve, Francis William, and Catherine. His son, Francis William Roth, was born Dec. 19, 1721, and died very suddenly Dec. 28, 1857. He was married to Anna Margaret Grim, a daughter of Egidius Grim, who was born July 22, 1727, and died November 22, 1746. They had one son, Frantz. To him and his second wife, Elizabeth, there were born five children: Henry, who in 1770 resided in Hampshire county, Virginia; Mary Magdalena, married to George F. Knauss; Elizabeth, married to Abraham Seider; Margaret and Catherine. It is quite probable that Henry Roth was related to Daniel Roth, a Swiss pioneer, who settled in Whitehall township, at what is now the village of Sherersville.

Adam Blank settled in the township at a very early date in 1760, four years before his death, he presented the Lutheran congregation of Western Salisbury with a pewter baptismal dish (see illustration). His wife, Margaret, died in the month of February, 1770, aged 65 years. Their children were: Christopher, George, George Adam, John, Anna Margaret, Catherine, and Anna Elizabeth. The communion tankard of the above-named congregation, date 1769, contains the following initials, A. B., G. M., G. B., of which A. B. and G. B. in all probability stand for Adam Blank and George Blank. George Adam was in 1764 assessed for 300 acres of land.

Adam Wieder was taxed in 1762 to the amount of ten pounds. He died in 1798. His children were: John Adam, born Oct. 13, 1750; died July 20, 1825. He married Christina Duth, and had six sons and four daughters: Michael, John, Valentine, Casplar, Ludwig, Margaret, wife of Henry Kern, Mary Elizabeth, wife of Dorias Aeck; Eve, wife of Christian Meyberger, and Elizabeth, wife of John Tapper.

Frederick Rauschenberger was born May 14, 1715, in Widmus in Marienborn, but was reared in Wurtemberg. He was married April 3, 1736, in Worcester township, by Rev. J. P. Boehm, to Fiana Barbara Goetschy, a daughter of Maurice Goetschy, and a sister to Rev. John Henry Goetschy, the boy preacher of the Colony. She was born in Berneck, in Winthal, Switzerland, and came to Pennsylvania with her parents May, 1735. Some time after marriage they removed to Salisbury township. His residence was on the northern slope of the mountain, southeast from Emaus.

Martin Ritter came to Pennsylvania in 1732, and soon after his arrival secured a patent for a tract in Salisbury township, west of the present village of Waldheim. He was the father of seven children: Martin, Henry, John, Daniel, Michael, Jacob and Gretchen (Mrs. Solomon Klein).

Henry Keck, a native of the Upper Palatinate, Bavaria, landed at Philadelphia Oct. 12, 1732. He and his wife were sold as redemptioners to a party in Chester county for a period of about four years. Several years after the expiration of their term of service they came to the Zimmerman tract in Salisbury township. The date of the warrant is 1734. When they came to the township a log house and barn had already been erected and an orchard planted. In 1753 Mr. Keck purchased the tract, paying for it 15 pounds and 10 shillings. Tradition has it that when he first came to the township all the grist had to be taken to White Marsh or Sandy Run, Montgomery county. Among his children were four sons: Frederick, Henry, John and Andrew.

The Kline families, which are numerous, are apparently from two distinct lines. The first of which is the Lorenz Kline family. His father, Philip Wendel Klein, settled in Weisenberg prior to 1750. Among his children were John Adam, Peter and Lorenz. The latter was born Feb. 15, 1735, and died Jan. 6, 1819, and his wife, Eva, nee Stettler, was born Dec. 25, 1740, and died Nov. 25, 1824. They lived in the township and raised the following children: Christofel, Elizabeth, Peter, Anna Margaretha, Berndt, and Magdalena. The other line of this family are descendant from two brothers, Philip and Adam, who came from Goshenhoppen to Salisbury in about 1790. Philip was married to Anna Margaretha, a daughter of Lozefne Klein. They had issue: Solomon, Daniel, Elisabeth, Anna, and Susanna. Adam married Elisabeth Sneider, and had issue: David, George Adam, Samuel, a minister of the Gospel; Frederick, Hannah, Catherine, Susanna, Mrs. Deily, Francis, and Eva.

In 1753 Peter Bogert, a native of the Middle Palatinate purchased from Abraham Körper a tract of 294 acres, to which he later added several more tracts, most of which is still in possession of his descendants. Mr. Bogert was born Dec. 13, 1721, his sponsors were his grandparents, Bardel Bogert and his wife, Anna Barvel. He had two sons, John and Jacob.

John Henry Knauss and his brother, Sebastian, settled in the township about 1740. They were born in Tittlesheim Veteravia, and came to Pennsylvania with their father, Ludwig Knauss prior to 1728. They both became the progenitors of large families.

Jacob Bieber, at the close of the Revolutionary period, purchased the Roth homestead. The family had become financially embarrassed on account of the War. Mr. Beiber was born Dec. 24, 1731, and died Oct. 16, 1798. To him and his wife, Christina Steinbrenner, with whom he lived in holy wedlock forty years, were born eight sons and two daughters. Henry G. Bieber, a descendant owns and lives on the original tract.

Michael Biery, of Swiss ancestry, Canton of Bern, migrated from Longswamp township at about the time of the War of Independence. He was born Aug. 2, 1739, and died Sept. 5, 1800. He reared a family of eight children, four sons and four daughters.

A family by the name of Stout were settled on the farm now owned by Reuben Spinner before 1768. In that year Jacob Spinner came from Philadelphia, attracted by the shad-fisheries in the Lehigh River. He married one of the daughters of the Stout family, and in 1781 his name appears on the assessment list. He settled on the Stout farm. He had four sons: Jacob, Abram, David, and John. They all settled in the township. Jacob settled where John Miller now owns; his family all emigrated. Adam settled where Edwin Miller now lives; his family all died in early life. David settled where Addison Morey—whose wife is a grand-daughter—now lives. John settled on the Stout farm, and married Susan Walton. He was born in 1777, and died in 1869, aged ninety-two years. He left two children: Reuben and Mrs. Solomon Diehl. The old Stout house is still standing and is probably the oldest in the township.

The Giess family are descendants of Christian Giess, who was born in Nassau, Germany, May 12, 1720, and died May, 1803. His remains lie buried in the Eastern Salisbury cemetery. In 1860 Philip Giess built the tavern known as the Salisbury Square Hotel. He had two sons: Solomon and David. Solomon lived and died on the homestead. The tavern was kept for many years by Mrs. George Gauf, a daughter of David. A distillery was built many years ago on the place and in operation. It was rebuilt in 1862, but not again opened.

William Moritz came from Germany before 1781, as in that year he is assessed on real estate. He had a son, John, who also settled in the township. John had three sons: Daniel, David, and John George. Daniel was born in 1800, and settled on the farm of his father; David, now living, was born in 1803, and settled near the homestead, where he still resides. John George settled in Saucon township.

Daniel Diehl came to Salisbury township from Upper Saucon, and settled on the Lehigh Mountain, where Winfield Butz now lives, about 1790. He was at that time married. His sons were: John, Jacob, and Abram.

Jacob Merkle was assessed on property in Salisbury in 1781. He lived in Bucks county, near Quakertown. His son, William, was born there about 1793, and about 1813 came to Salisbury, and settled on the property, part of which is now owned by Jacob Moritz. William Markle died in 1872, and left six children: Jacob, Juliana (Mrs. Solomon Boehm), Mary (Mrs. David Sheetz), Reuben, Adam, and Diana (Mrs. Josiah Siegers).

In the extreme eastern end of the township Tobias Weber built a house in 1744, on what is known as the Simpson tract. He sold it Nov. 2, 1747, to Jobst Vollert, who the year previous removed from Coventry, Chester county, to Bethlehem and became landlord at the Crown inn. In September, 1754, he added to his holdings Anthony Albrecht plantation. These two tracts he sold in 1755 to the Moravians.

George Hartman was another one of the early occupants in this eastern section. He purchased a tract of eighty acres of mountain land in 1744. It was occupied for a number of years by Cornelius Weygandt. It is supposed that the old farm house, still standing, was erected in 1759. This tract too soon passed into the hands of the Moravians, who added to their holdings until they owned about five hundred acres, on the south side of the Lehigh. In 1769 they began to rent out these tracts for farming purposes.

For more detailed information of many of these early families see the biographical part of this work.

EARLY ROADS.

In the year 1753 the road from Bethlehem to Macungie (Emaus) was proposed. The Moravians, in their travels between the two places firm the original. It was not laid out until 1760, and passed through the plantations of George Stoudt, Rudolph Smith, Henry Ritter, Adam Wieder, Adam Plank, Andreas Hertz, Sebastian Knauss, Michael Hittel and Lewis Klotz, respectively. Where the road met the old Philadelphia Road, which led from the latter place to Mauch Chunk and which is said to follow an old Indian trail, at what is known as Schwartz's Crossing. This road became a part of the trail of the Moravian missionaries, which led from Bethlehem to the Carolinas. Their stopping places in the province were: Macungie, Longen Platz, Ziegler's Platz, Weiser's Platz, Oley Schoolhouse, Reddingston, NONNEMACHER HOMESTEAD NEAR BIG ROCK, SALISBURY TOWNSHIP.

followed an old Indian trail, but as the travel between the two places increased the need for a public road was felt more and more and a petition was presented to the Court. In December, 1756, the following action of the Court of Quarter Sessions was recorded: "Petitions of divers inhabitants of Upper Milford and Salisbury townships for a road from Sebastian Knows's to and through Bethlehem to the road leading to Easton was allowed, and Sebastian Knows, Francis Roth, Adam Shaler, Lewis Klots and John Okely, or any four of them, are appointed to view and, if they see occasion, to lay out the said road, and to make return thereof and an exact plan to the next court, after the same is laid." Counter-petitions were presented at the June court, 1757, and the court refused to con-

Modecreek, Reim's, Warwick, Lancaster, Wright's Ferry, Yorktown.

In 1760 also a road was laid out to "Solomon Jenney's plantation." A road was later laid across the hill which connected with the fording-place across the Lehigh, near the old Griesemer farm-house. This passed through Rittersville and Shoenersville, and led to the Wilson Mill in Allen township, now Northampton, and continued North to Gnadenuetten.

At the first term of court held in Lehigh county, December 21, 1812, there was presented a petition of the inhabitants of the upper end of Salisbury township for a road "to begin at the public road leading from Emaus to Allentown; thence from said road to Martin Ritter's tavern, a southeasterly course up a valley and near to the top of Lehigh hill, to intersect the public road leading to Philadelphia at Nicholas Kreamer's lot of land. Abraham Griesemer, Peter Dorney, (saddler); John Grobel, Jonathan Knauss, John Horlacher and Goddard Morey, were appointed viewers to examine and lay out.

On the 24th of February, 1813, a petition was presented to the court, setting forth that the road lately laid out from the public road leading from Emaus to Allentown, near Martin Ritter's tavern was totally unnecessary, and (if confirmed by the court) would be extremely burdensome to the inhabitants of said township at large, and praying the court to appoint viewers to the road and report. Other viewers were appointed, who made a report on the 4th of May, the same year, in which they declared they had laid out a road. This action was confirmed by the court on that day.

On September 5th, 1815, viewers appointed in May last to view and lay out a road reported road laid out. Beginning at the Emaus and Bethlehem road, near the house of Martin Ritter, Jr., in Salisbury township; running into the public road leading from the borough of Northampton to the city of Philadelphia, near the house of Jacob Kaechline, in said township; running through land of Martin Ritter, along land of John Kemmerer, Andrew Keck, John Wagner and Jacob Warman; and to vacate part of a public road, beginning at the bridge of David Deshler's mill-race and from thence leading from Emaus to Bethlehem, at or near the corner of Henry Ritter's fence, in said township.

This last road mentioned as vacated is recited in the order as having been laid out in 1770, and is noticed as being "useless, inconvenient, and burthensome."

At August session, 1818, viewers appointed at previous court reported road laid out from mill-dam of James Wilson, Esq., in Salisbury township, to intersect public road leading from borough of Northampton to Water Gap, near the house of Jacob Newhard, in South Whitehall. November term, report confirmed so far as relates to road from Mill-dam of Wilson to borough of Northampton.

With the exception of the road from Allentown to Hellertown and from Emaus to Allentown, the dates of the laying out of which have not been ascertained; the roads here given are all the roads of any importance laid out before 1820. Numerous small and cross roads have been opened since, but those mentioned above continue to be the chief highways of the township.

OLD TAVERNS.

In the year 1763 there were no taverns in Salisbury township. The first shown by the Northampton County records to have had license to keep tavern in the township are in 1786. At the June term of court Martin Ritter, Caspar Weaver, Christian Hummel and George Krush were licensed. There was a tavern along the Emaus road near the Eastern Salisbury church, during the Revolutionary period, from where the drummer boy of "Salisbury legend" set out for the congregational burial ground to call forth his enemy to mortal combat. Tradition has failed to preserve the name of the lord or the definite location.

Two hotels in Salisbury township figure in what is known as Freis Insurrection the year 1799. The one a log tavern conducted by Rudolph Schmidt, at what is now Mountainville, where the retinue of Fries, Hany, and Getman halted for a short time, and the other at what is sometimes called "Salisbury center," where a certain Mr. Mohr kept the tavern. Here is said the company halted for a while and added a number of recruits before marching to Bethlehem.

In 1818 William Gruber, Philip Giess, Lewis Christ, Martin Ritter and Rudolph Smith were granted license. At about this time a tavern was opened in Emaus. In 1850 the Eagle Hotel was built in Emaus by Henry Fisher.

The old tavern-stand on the Mountain road, above the Idlewild Hotel, was established by John Keck in 1826-27, and kept by him eight or ten years, when he died. His widow kept it for several years, and married Henry Wold, who kept it till his death.

A tavern stand between Allentown and Mountainville was opened in 1812 by George Keck, who kept it many years.

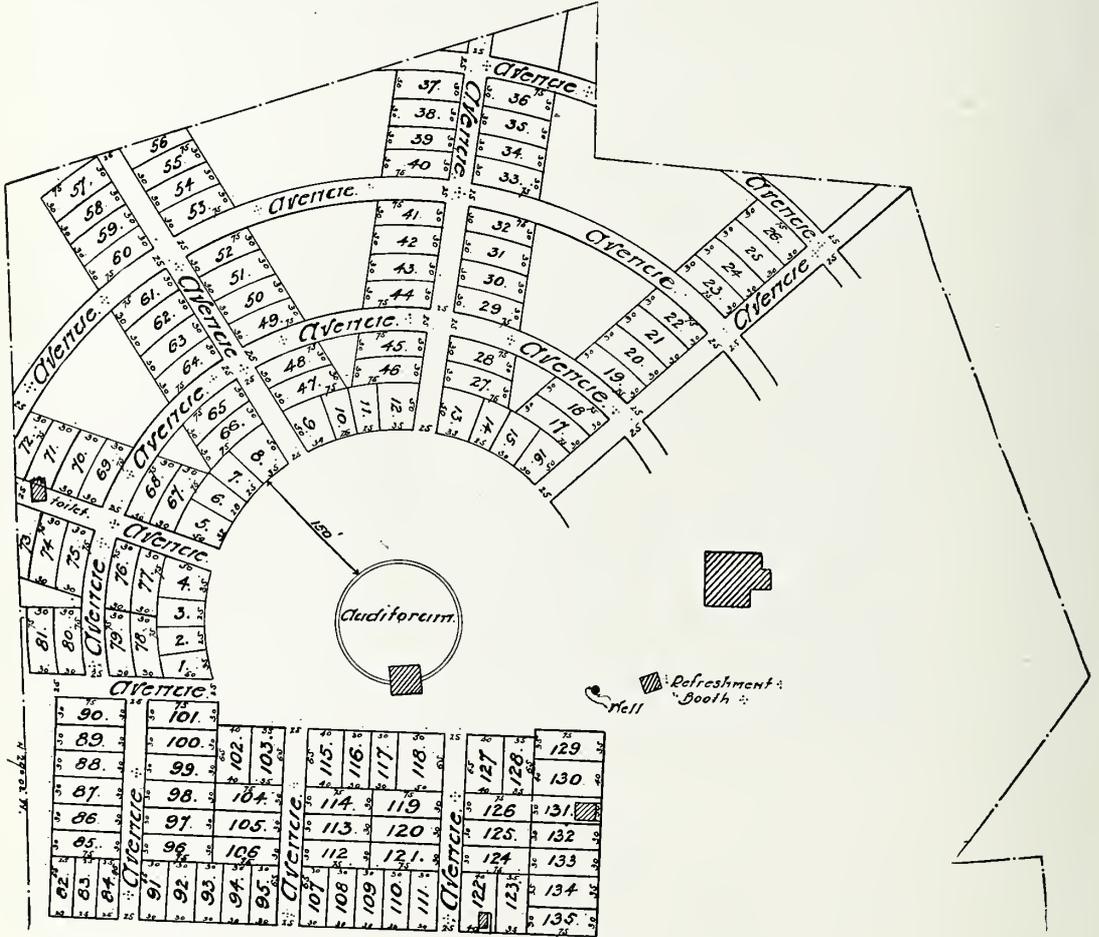

SCHOOLS.

During the early period of the township, though having few schools, enjoyed, nevertheless, special educational advantages. The children living in the eastern part attended the Moravian schools at Bethlehem, which were at this time the best schools in the colonies. Those in the western end attended the Moravian school at Emaus (see history of Emaus), and the church school of the Salisbury congregation. The children of the families living in the central part attended the schools in Allentown, while those of the few families living between Allentown and Bethlehem attended the schools at Rittersville, where Moravian teachers were usually employed.

The schools in Emaus, Fountain Hill and Aineyville (now South Allentown) were up to the time of their incorporation a part of the public school system of the township. The exact dates of the erections of the first rural school houses are somewhat uncertain. Merkel's schoolhouse is said to have been erected about the year 1820; Ritter's, Hofford's, Yost's, Eisenhard's, during the decade between 1830 and 1840, and schools in Mountain the following decade. As the population increased and education became afforded in the splendid schools in the boroughs and cities almost surrounding the township, and in the higher institutions of learning of the Moravian College, and Girls' School in Bethlehem, Lehigh University, in South Bethlehem, Bishopthorpe School for Girls in Fountain Hill, Muhlenberg College and Preparatory School, the Allentown College for Women, and the several business schools in Allentown. All of which the within easy reach from almost every part of the more popular, the following districts were formed and the building erected: Wiand's, Keck's, Jetter's, Aineyville, and Mountainville. Recently the Mountainville schoolhouse was abandoned and a handsome single-room building erected at Summit Lawn. The schools at Hofford's and Bethlehem Woods were abandoned with the erection of the two story brick buildings near Bethlehem in 1880, and at Mountainville in 1883. These are the only graded schools in the township. Unusual educational advantages are township through the network of trolley and railway lines. Of the schoolhouses erected before the Civil War, all have been rebuilt, with the exception of the Salisbury Church schoolhouse, which is owned by the congregation and rented to the township.

PLAN OF WALDHEIM PARK.

THE SOUTH MOUNTAIN.

The southern boundary line of the township is the summit of the South or Lehigh Mountain.

The view from its slopes and top is most delightful. The rivulets from the mountain side wind their way through green meadows to the little Lehigh in the distance, while far across fertile fields dotted with spacious farm buildings, appear the "gravel hill" behind which looms up the majestic Blue Mountains. Beautiful cottages are being erected on its slope. The most noted of which is the Burns residence. On the crest of the Mountain along the Coopersburg Pike and the Philadelphia trolley line is the charming little hamlet of Summit Lawn. To the left of the trolley line on the very crest of the mountains nature has heaped one upon another a number of immense bowlders. They are known as the Big Rock and are visited by hundreds annually. The view of the Saucon Valley is one of the finest in Eastern Pennsylvania.

WALDHEIM PARK.

To the west of Mountainville on the slope of the mountain is located the beautiful Waldheim Park. It comprises a part of the original Ritter homestead. The park is under the control of the United Evangelical Waldheim Association, and immediately governed by a board of seven-teen directors who are elected annually by the stockholders. The officers of the board are: President, L. H. Mertz; vice president, E. J. Rapp; secretary, E. S. Woodring; treasurer, Charles W. Knouse. Waldheim was purchased September 12, 1904. Since this time the park has been beautified and improved and bids fair to become one of the most popular pleasure grounds. Besides being richly endowed by nature for this purpose it is under the control of the Church which exercises a moral censorship over all its activities. The improvements consists of two never-failing wells, play grounds for children, croquet and baseball grounds, a splendid auditorium, which at the time of its erection was said to be one of the largest in the state, a dining hall where upwards of 300 guests can be seated at one time, an electric system and forty-eight cottages, the latter number is constantly increasing. The western end is laid out as a picnic ground. During the park season Waldheim is continuously occupied by Campmeetings, Chautauques, Family Reunions and Sunday school picnics.

MOUNTAINVILLE.

At the foot of the mountain, along the Philadelphia pike, at the insertion of the Emaus road is located the beautiful village of Mountainville. It is built on land at one time in possession of Rudolph Smith, who erected a log tavern at the cross road prior to 1800. In 1856 it was replaced by the present large stone hostlery conducted by Samuel Parsons. A few years prior Charles Witman and a certain Mr. Snyder came into the possession of the Smith homestead, and laid it out in building lots, a number of houses were erected which became the nucleus of the town. A post office was established in 1856, with Edwin Sell as postmaster. After a year it was removed to some other part of the township, but was soon returned again and Reuben Kemmerer appointed postmaster, who continued until 1880, when Miss Amanda Scheetz was appointed postmistress. With the development of the rural delivery system the office was abandoned.

The Mountainville Evangelical congregation had its origin in the house of William Bortz, where the first service was held in 1858 and where Moses Dissinger, C. K. Fehr and others held occasional services for a number of years. In 1863 a church was erected, the membership at the time was only ten. In 1877 it was made a part of the Emaus circuit. The membership gradually declined and services were finally discontinued. A union Sunday school holds its sessions in the edifice.

Rev. M. O. Rath, the pastor of the Lutheran congregation of Emaus and Western Salisbury, conducts services fortnightly in the Odd Fellows hall.

Walter Scheetz established a carriage factory in 1874, which he continued to operate for many years, but which was closed some years ago and is now occupied by a silk-mill.

Recently a number of comfortable residences have been erected, among them that of Dr. H. F. Bean. The trolley lines have made it a suburb of Allentown. The present population is about five hundred.

This is the only village in the present township. The boroughs of Emaus, Fountain Hill, and South Allentown and a part of the City of Allentown having been cut out of it. That part of the township thus remaining is purely agricultural, containing some of the finest farming land in the county.

CHAPTER XLII.

SOUTH WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP.

This township occupies a central situation in Lehigh county. The surface is nearly level, excepting the "Huckleberry Ridge," which extends across the center of the township from east to west about four miles. The soil is generally fertile and in a high state of cultivation for farming purposes.

The township is watered by two creeks,—the Jordan and the Cedar. Jordan Creek flows through the northern portion from west to east, and furnishes power for one grist-mill. It is turbulent some seasons of the year, overflowing its banks and carrying along everything in its way but at other seasons it is perfectly dry. Hence it is unreliable for manufacturing purposes,—the grist-mills requiring steam power during certain parts of the year. Its volume is gradually decreasing. Cedar creek flows from west to east across the southern portion and has its source just across the boundary line in Upper Macungie, where a large spring has a sufficient flow of water to run a grist-mill a few hundred yards from its fountain. It is a remarkable stream. "Its volume appears invariable in wet or dry weather. It never freezes, the grass, which grows to the water's edge, appears green all seasons; and it is always uncovered, the water dissolving the snow as it falls."

The winding length of the former in the township is about six miles, and of the latter about five miles.

EARLY SETTLERS.—At the organization of Northampton county in March, 1752, the territory which now embraces South Whitehall was included in that portion of land known as the "back parts of Macungie," or "the Heidelberg District." By referring to the history of old "Whitehall township," which included the present Whitehall, and North and South Whitehall townships, there will be found much interesting matter bearing upon the early settlers of this township. An assessment-roll there of 1762 contains the names of those who were living within the limits of this township at that time. Among the settlers of this township, the following may be mentioned:

Nicholas Kern, John Griesemer, George Knauss, Lorentz Guth, Peter Troxell, Jacob Henninger, Adam Haberle, Paul Tussing, George Guth, Peter Hoffman, Leonard Heuchel, Peter Herr, George Ruch, Conrad Crumbach, Frederick Reitz, Jacob Schnerr, Dietmer Werner, Frederick Schwander, John Roth, Michael Schneider, Jacob Wenner, Daniel Dorney, Leonard Steinger, George Glick and Adam Goebel.

One of the earliest tracts of land purchased in this township was by Nicholas Kern. He took out warrants for lands Dec. 3, 1735, and Oct. 28, 1737, and some of these lands he sold to Laurence Good (or Lorenz Guth), Feb. 27, 1739. He afterwards, Nov. 24, 1737, and March 15, 1738, warranted lands on the south side of the Blue mountains, now Slatington. There he settled and afterward died in 1747. A portion of his large family settled at his home south of the Blue mountains. In 1783, Jacob Kern, of Whitehall, was in possession of tracts known as "Kern's Folly," "Kernsberg," and "Delay." A part of these lands he sold to Peter Meyer (or Moyer). The land lies in North Whitehall and in the northeastern part of this township. Mechanicsville lies on a part of it. In 1819, Peter Meyer sold 112 acres to his son, Peter, who resided in North Whitehall. Simon Meyer, a son of Peter, lived at Meyersville, and kept the hotel on the property. Simon Meyer bought it from George Gangwere in 1852.

Lorenz Good (or Guth) a native of Switzerland, came to this country on September 19, 1738, and then he purchased from Nicholas Kern and his wife, Mary Margaret, three tracts of land, warrants for which had been granted to Kern, Dec. 3, 1735, and Oct. 28, 1737, and 100 acres Feb. 24, 1737. The former embraced 200 acres. All these tracts lie in South Whitehall, and were patented to Lorenz Guth by the proprietaries, May 28, 1760. On June 12, 1741, Guth had taken out a warrant for 47 acres, which was embraced in the same patent. He also took out a warrant for other lands on Nov. 1, 1749, for 46 acres, known as "Guth's Pleasure." It adjoined the lands of Peter Troxell and Nicholas Kern. On April 10, 1755, another warrant was issued to him, called "The Spring," which contained sixteen acres, and adjoined John Weaver and Nicholas Kern. Still another warrant of 50 acres is dated Oct. 23, 1755, called "Guth's Delight," and adjoined the Reformed church property. These lands were patented to Guth, March 17, 1769, and Dec. 13, 1769. By the year 1769, Lorenz Guth had in his possession 759 acres of land.

He erected the house in which his great-great-grandson, Elias Guth, resided. Its walls are two feet thick, with small windows. Logs were fitted to these and made so as to wedge in tightly, and used in case of attacks by Indians. In times of danger the neighbors used to gather here. An acre of ground surrounding this house was enclosed with a stone wall two feet thick and seven feet high, and there the cattle were kept. It is not known whether any attack was ever made upon this house. He died prior to March 20, 1770, leaving a widow, Salome, and six children.

Before 1743 Caspar Wistar was in possession of 738 acres of land with six per cent. allowance. This land lay in what is now Whitehall, North Whitehall, and South Whitehall. In the same year he sold to Peter Troxell .200 acres: in May, 1792, he sold to Peter Kern 380 acres, and in May, 1798, he sold of the remainder of his tract, 188 acres, to Godfrey Haga. The Troxell land is situated in Whitehall and South Whitehall. The land bought by Peter Kern lies in South and North Whitehall. The tract purchased by Godfrey Haga was in 1804 bought by Samuel Sieger, of Siegersville.

ERECTION.—A petition was presented to the January term of Northampton county court in 1810, asking for a division of Whitehall township. The court appointed George Palmer, John Lerch, and Michael Snyder to inquire into the propriety of a division, and if thought advisable to divide it. These viewers made a report in November of the same year, in which they declared they had divided the township; and at the same term of court, it was declared that the township be divided according to the report, and one part, lying northward of the division line, to be named North Whitehall, and the other, South Whitehall.

TAXABLES IN 1812.—The assessment-roll for the township was not made until late in the year of 1812. It was as follows:

Peter Albrecht	Jacob Bortz
Christian Acker	John Billig
David Beery	John Bieber
Abraham Butz	Jacob Brown
Frederick Braumiller	Adam Droxsell
Henry Beek	William Dilman
Henry Beery	John Droxsell
Jacob Beery	Jacob Droxsell
Peter Butz	Daniel Droxsell
Daniel Butz	Peter Droxsell
Peter Butz	Peter Droxsell, Sr.
Solomon Butz	Peter Droxsell
Samuel Brobst	Adam Dorney
Daniel Brobst	Peter Dorney
Abraham Blumer	Adam Dorney
Henry Blumer	John Dorney
Henry Bortz	Laurence Droxsell

Casper Dick	George Leibenguth
Peter Eberhard	George Meyer
Peter Frantz	Anthony Musick
Michael Freyman	William Miller
Valentine Fasold	Abraham Miller
John Frey	Henry Mickle
Christoph Freyman	Jacob Mickle
John Flexer	Christian Mickle
Lawrence Good	Peter Mickle
Peter Good	Daniel Miller
George Gangeware	Peter Marcks
Thomas Gangeware	Peter Miller
Solomon Greisman	Henry Minck
John Gromer	Nicholas Minck
Peter Grimm	Jacob Manerer
Abraham Greisemer	Christoph Mohr
George Glick	Peter Meyer, Sr.
Daniel Glick	Jacob Meyer
John Glick	George Henry Mertz
Daniel Glick	Henry Mertz
Adam Glick, Sr.	Joseph Mickle
Adam Glick	Laurence Neuhart
Henry Glick	John Neuhart
John Glick	Peter Neuhart
Peter Glick, Sr.	Frederick Neuhart
Peter Glick	Jacob Neuhard
Adam Glick	George Neuhard
Henry Glick	Daniel Neuhard
George Henninger	Frederick Paul
Jacob Hartman	Casper Peter
George Hill	Widow Rabenold
Jacob Hoffman	Peter Rhoads
Adam Heberly	Abraham Rhoads
Jacob Hubler	John Rhoads, Sr.
Henry Hoffman	John Rhoads
Peter Hoffman	Godfrey Rhoads
John Helfrich	Daniel Rhoads
Michael Helfrich	George Jacob Rhoads
Philip Hammel	Jacob Rhoads
Jacob Henninger	Peter Rhoads
Frederick Hill	Henry Reitz
Jacob Hill	Daniel Rabenold
John Hill	Nicholas Rabenold
Joseph Henry	William Rohn
Jacob Henninger	Christian Rutt
Christian F. Henninger	Peter Resch
Widow Haman	Leonard Steining
Jacob Herman	Abraham Schneider
Jacob Hartzell	Leonard Steining
Jacob Jodder	Philip Steining
Jacob Jund	Philip Schantz
George Jund	George Schneider
Daniel Jund	Peter Schneider
Abraham Jund	Jacob Schantz
John Junger	Samuel Seager
Gideon Junger	John Schaad
Daniel Schreiber	Samuel Sieger
John Koehler	Simon Strauss
Joseph Kern	Peter Seifried
Peter Kern	Solomon Seifried
George Adam Kemmer	Henry Schneider
Jonathan Knauss	John Scheuenbouch
Adam Kolb	Jacob Schnerr
Henry Kolb	Abraham Sterner
Philip Krach	John Smith
Jeremiah Kershner	Adam Swander estate
George Frederick Knauss	Jacob Swander
Solomon Knauss	Adam Swander, Jr.
George Knauss	Christian Steining
Philip Kock	John Stephan
Gottlieb Keiper	Abraham Sterner
Nicholas Kramer	Henry Swander
Joseph Levan	John Strauss

George Strauss	Henry Rhoad
John Shiffert	Michael Weider
Isaac Stephen	Peter Derr
James Segreaves	George Shnyder
Henry Schoener	Adam Sterner
Ludwig Sauerwine	Henry Rhoad
Henry Sterner	Gustaf Ibach
Michael Sauerwine	John Kepp
John Shiffert	Charles Gangeware
John Weider	John Laudenslager
George Wenner, Sr.	John Rhoad
George Wenner	John Knechel
Nicholas Wolf	Christian Fenstermacher
Peter Frantz, Jr.	Philip Fenstermacher.
George Ueberroth

SINGLE FREEMEN.

Peter Woodring	Joseph Good
John Swander	George Good
Henry Dorney	John Good
Daniel Knauss	John Rhoad
Daniel Troxell	Christian Hoffman
Daniel Good	John Siegfried
Daniel Good	Michael Helfrich

At a later period several attempts were made to again cut the two Whitehall townships so as to make three out of them. After a number of failures to make such a division, the petitioners were finally successful in 1864. Then the eastern portion of South Whitehall and the southeastern portion of North Whitehall were detached from their respective townships, and formed into the township of Whitehall. When Allentown was incorporated into a city a small portion of the eastern corner of the township was also taken from it and made a part of the city.

CHURCHES.—The following churches have been established and carried on in this township:

Jordan Lutheran.—The first ministrations to the Lutheran people in the Jordan region occurred in the year 1734, when Rev. John Casper Stoever baptized, on Feb. 6th, Margaret, daughter of John Lichtenwalner. In 1736, a Rev. Mr. Schmidt was said to have preached occasionally to them and in 1738 Rev. Streiter visited the Jordan region. Rev. John Justus Jacob Birkenstock became pastor of the Jordan congregation. In the baptismal records of the congregation, the first baptism is dated April 20, 1740. Rev. Schindel stated in 1845 that the first record of baptism was dated Feb. 25, 1739. As pages one, two, and three are missing from the old record, Rev. Birkenstock may have baptized children here in 1739.

In 1744 the congregation secured by warrant a tract of fifty acres of land. In 1845 the centennial of the congregation was observed, which would indicate that the first building was erected in 1745. The first church building was of logs and stood near the north wall of the old burial ground. It was used jointly by the Lutheran and Reformed until about 1752 when the Reformed erected a building half a mile to the east. Rev. Birkenstock was pastor at Jordan until October, 1750. Rev. Jacob Frederick Schertlein became the pastor in 1752 and remained such possibly until 1767.

During the pastorates of Revs. Birkenstock and Schertlein the following were among the members of the congregation: Frederick Schaefer, Peter Kocher, George Ruch, Christian Braun, Henry Acker, Philipp Schmeyer, Adam Diehl, Nicolaus Saeger, Melchior Kloss, Tobias Mosser, Matthias Egner, Frederick Seitz, Ulrich Sensinger, Adam Koch, Christoph Stettler, Abraham Lang, Ludwig Zimmerman, Adam Brauss, John Lichtenwalner, Melchior Schmidt, Wilhelm Rabenolt, Jacob Schlauch, Adam Haeberly, Jacob Acker, Paul Tuissing, Henry Steining, George Steininger, George Hoffman, Leonard Steininger, John Roth, John Sieger, Dewald Kuntz, John George Hausser, Michael Mosser, John Mosser, and Frantz Oberkirsch.

Rev. John George Jung was pastor from 1769 to 1772.

During his pastorate Rev. Henry Melchoir Muhlenberg visited him on July 11, 1770, and states in his "Journal," that the congregation had erected a parsonage of wood, two stories high and had commenced a stone church building. This was completed in 1771. It had a brick floor, with galleries on three sides, a wine glass pulpit, and plain benches. Rev. Daniel Lehman became pastor in 1775 and served until 1778. His successor, Rev. Theophilus Emanuel Franz was pastor from 1779 to 1784.

Rev. Carl Christopher Goetz was pastor from 1784 to 1789, and Rev. John Caspar Dill from 1791 to 1796. Rev. George T. Ellison was pastor from 1796 until his death in 1798 when Rev. Dill became pastor a second time and continued until 1806. Rev. Henry Anastasius Geissenhaimer succeeded Pastor Dill and filled the pulpit until 1814. During his pastorate a new stone parsonage was built in 1811, the church building repaired and an organ purchased. Rev. George Wartman and Rev. Joseph Doering became pastors in 1814, serving alternately, until 1837 when Rev. Jeremiah Schindel became pastor, serving twenty-four years, until 1861. During his pastorate a new church was built, the corner stone of which was laid July 31, 1842 and the building was consecrated June 4, 1843. The total cost of the church was $3,581.24. When Rev. Schindel took charge of the congregation he also was pastor of six other congregations and served part of his time at seven other congregations. When Rev. Schindel resigned in 1861 he was a member of the state senate and in April he entered the United States army as chaplain of the 110th Penna. Vol. Regt. He died at Allentown July 2, 1870. Rev. Owen Leopold was elected pastor May 11, 1861 and served for twenty-two years. His successor was Rev. F. K. Berndt, who served until 1889. Rev. M. J. Kuehner succeeded him in 1890 and was succeeded by Rev. Henry E. Semmel, the present pastor.

In 1850, a fine, two-story brick parsonage was erected on the opposite side of the road and occupied by the pastors until 1900; since then by the organist, George A. Acker, who has also served as the sexton.

In 1868 the church was renovated and frescoed and the basement fitted up for a Sunday school room. In 1886, a fine, shapely, slate-covered steeple, 138 feet high, was erected, which is visible as a conspicuous point for many miles. It was repainted in 1903 and in 1910 the interior of the church was re-decorated. A new organ was purchased in 1888.

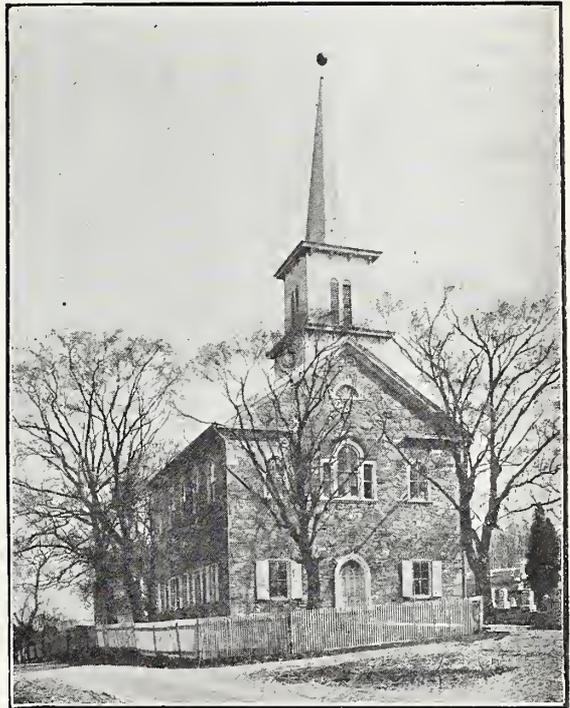

The old burial ground contains many old tomb-stones, while the cemetery, south of the church, covers three acres of the forty-three acre farm. Until June, 1883, this congregation, in connection with five other congregations, formed a pastoral charge; but since that time it is self-sustaining. Then it had 600 members, and two German and two English services per month. The membership is now 500.

Jordan Reformed.—Members of the Reformed faith were settled in this vicinity as early as 1738 and from 1740 to 1752 baptisms of their children are recorded in the Lutheran record book and Lutheran and Reformed worshipped in one building. In 1752, Lorenz Guth presented the Reformed with a 50-acre tract of land, half a mile east of the Lutheran building, and a log church building was erected in six weeks. It had small windows, and logs, sawed lengthwise, resting at either side on blocks and stumps, served as seats. A second and larger building was later erected which stood until 1808, when the present stone building was erected, with a frame steeple, 110 feet high. This is one of the oldest church buildings in the county and is a fine example of the architecture of that period.

This congregation is a daughter of the old Egypt congregation and enjoys the distinction of having had but seven pastors in its 162 years of existence. They are Revs. John Jacob Wissler, John Daniel Gros, Abraham Blumer, John Gobrecht, Joseph S. Dubs, Edwin J. Fogel, and the present pastor, Rev. Frank A. Guth. Its membership is 400. The church building was repaired in 1871 and repainted in 1907. Two cemeteries are attached to the church, the first lying to the north and the new to the east.

In the new cemetery, near the northeastern fence, Daniel Stettler erected a stone vault in 1893. It is twelve feet wide and eight feet high.

JORDAN REFORMED CHURCH, BUILT 1808.

He was a prominent and useful citizen of Guthsville and the post office was named after him.

Among early members of this congregation were:

Peter Troxell	Adam Dorney
Samuel Music	John Lehr
Philip Lehr	Daniel Dorney
Peter Bechler	Peter Lehr
Paul Gros	Adam Eppeler
Adam Heberly	Christian Jacob
Lorentz Guth	Jacob Troxell
Peter Guth	Gottfried Roth
Adam Guth	John Roth
Lorentz Guth, Jr.	Daniel Troxell
Michael Schneider	Nicholas Gebhard

EVANGELICAL.—The Evangelical religious denomination has had many sincere and earnest devotees in South Whitehall from the beginning of its flourishing history in Lehigh county. One of the places which is particularly prominent in the township as well as in the Church history, is situated in the southern section, near the County Almshouse, and known as Mertz's church, or "Der Bet Hugel" (The Hill of Prayer). This was in 1831, and Henry Mertz, a highly-honored and substantial citizen of that community (commonly called "General" Mertz, on account of his great prominence and activity in military matters), was one of the first converts in the new movement and one of the most earnest members in its successful establishment.

UNITED BRETHREN.—This religious sect began its efforts in this vicinity about 1867 by organizing a congregation with eight members whose first humble but very hopeful meeting was held in the hall above the store at Guthsville, and in two years they accomplished the erection of a modest church in the village. Earnest services were regularly held in this building until 1872 when it was sold to the township school directors and the congregation immediately afterward erected a larger frame building at Orefield along the State Highway, about 150 yards south of Siegersville, on a lot of ground, 100 feet front by 150 feet deep. It is one-story, adjoining the northern line of the lot, 24 by 36 feet, kept in good order. A burying-ground is set apart to the south and west of the building, with 12 marked graves, and some mounds unmarked. A Sunday school has been conducted there from the beginning in connection with the religious services. The membership has been small.

GERMAN BAPTISTS.—A small number of persons who were identified with the German Baptist denomination began to hold meetings in the home of Tilghman Sherer at Wenersville in 1869, and within a year they succeeded in putting up a frame church building; and they continued to hold services there until 1901. The leading members were Tilghman Sherer and wife; Samuel Wertman and wife; Gideon Guth and wife; Willoughby Guth and wife; Mrs. George Wenner; Thomas Wenner, wife and family; Daniel Kerschner, Matthias Heiser; and William Hayman.

The preachers were: William Desch, of Macungie; William Moore, of Bucks county; William Larosh, of Macungie; and Rev. Schlag, of Philadelphia.

A small cemetery was connected with this church and in it were buried Thomas Wenner, Eliza Wenner (daughter of Reuben), Tilghman Sherer and his wife, Sarah M., Gideon Guth and his wife, Sarah, and several other persons whose names could not be ascertained.

The church building was purchased by Chester P. Wenner in 1905, and since then he has used it as a warehouse for storing farming implements.

EMANUEL GROVE.—The Emanuel Grove Campmeeting Association is located in the township near Wescoesville, along the Allentown-Kutztown trolley road. It was organized in September, 1908, and incorporated under the State laws, March 1, 1909. After the purchase of a woods, such trees as were of no use for shade were cut down and converted into lumber upon the premises, and the lumber was utilized in erecting eighty permanent cottages, 10 by 14 feet in dimensions; and the grove contains an auditorium, 70 by 80 feet in dimensions. In 1910 twenty more cottages were built; also two private cottages. In 1911 a baptismal pool was constructed in the central part of the Grove. The following year a drinking fountain was built, the water being drawn from the well by means of an electrical arrangement. In 1910 an artesian well was drilled to the depth of 230 feet, which had excellent water at 100 feet.

The Association is undenominational and formed only for the purpose of holding camp meetings. In 1908 the Twelfth Street Baptist church held its camp meeting in this grove which was the first to be held there. A union camp meeting was held there in 1909. In 1910 the Seven Day's Adventists, the Free Methodists, and the Twelfth Street Baptist church, Allentown, held meetings there; in 1912 the Twelfth Street Baptist church, Allentown, held their third meeting there; so did the Seven Day's Adventists again.

SCHOOLS.—The early schools of the township were connected with the Lutheran and Reformed churches from a very early date for many years. At the organization of these congregations they were at first supplied, not by pastors, but by teachers, who used to read sermons for the congregations on Sundays and the baptism of children in the Lutheran Church, extending back to 1739, the schools evidently existed prior to that date. The noble German forefathers, at a time when they could not yet afford to be supplied by a regular pastor, nevertheless felt the necessity of having their children taught in parochial schools. A school house was erected in 1833 on a lot of land near Simon Moyer's hotel, which was a gift from Nicholas Kramer. A society was formed with John Scherer as president, and stock was issued at $9 a share.

It was used for quite a number of years. On May 26, 1877, the lot was exchanged with Samuel Hermony for another near by, but no house was erected on it.

From the year 1828 to 1839 the township of South Whitehall appropriated the following amounts for the education of poor children within its limits:

1828,	$ 9 32	1835,	$70 85
1830,	10 87	1836,	42 50
1833,	43 91	1837,	101 85
1834,	25 61	1838,	152 83

In 1839 the township accepted the school law, and the officers of the first board of directors were George Ibach, president; George Frederick, secretary; and Solomon Griesemer, treasurer. There were then 438 taxable citizens, and the first State appropriation amounted to $234.24; and at once arrangements were made to erect schoolhouses from term to term. There was considerable opposition to the public schools for quite a time, and even as late as 1847, an attempt made to abolish the system. On the 29th of May, in that year, a meeting of the citizens was called to convene at the public house of Alexander Loder, at Wenersville. The object of the meeting was, if possible, to rescind the previous favorable action of the township on the school question and reject the school law, but it failed, and the schools were continued. In 1855 the township had 15 schools, 813 pupils, tax, $1,514.98; in 1877, 12 schools, 650 pupils, tax $2,633; in 1883, 13 schools, 689 pupils, tax, $5,741.91.

The following statement shows the time, location, and cost of the thirteen buildings acquired by the township from 1839 to 1883:

1839	Solomon Griesemer,	$	1	00
1839	Isaac Troxell, Jordan Bridge,		1	00
1856	Benjamin Rabenold, Snyderville,		375	00
1860	Reuben Butz, Cedarville,		1,500	00
1861	John Kratzer,		1	00
1861	William Wenner,		1	00
1866	John Heilman, Crackersport,		24	00
1870	E. F. Butz,		28	79
1870	Frank Marsteller,		22	50
1870	Thomas Hertz,		58	12
1871	Daniel Stetler, Guthsville,		1,050	00
1882	Alexander Guth, Guth's Station,		125	00
1882	Edwin C. Jacoby, Walbert's Station,		98	99

In 1883, the township erected two school buildings; one at Guth's Station, costing $1,662.53, and the other at Walbert's Station, costing $1,673.98.

School Board, 1913.—Charles Sittler, President; William Moore, secretary (Cetronia); Clinton Henninger, treasurer; E. Abiah Jacoby, Wilson F. Shankweiler.

School.	Teacher.	Terms.
Guthsville,	Elmer Wenner,	5
Hoffmans,	Samuel P. Guth,	27
Mechanicsville,	Roma George,
Iron Br.,	Robert Saul,	6
Guth's Station,	G. S. Schrope,
Kratzer's,	Earl Israel,	1
Griesemers,	Mrs. Mannie Laudenslager,
Dorney's Park,	William Nonnemaker,	31
Cetronia,	S. C. Schmoyer,	25
Cetronia,	Emily Schuler,	6
Crackersport,	Marvin B. Wetzel,
Wall Sta.,	Russell Freyman,	1
Snyder's,	William Gensler,
Knappenberger s.,	Milton Fries,	15
Weners,	Oscar Wissler,	10

The registered children of school age in 1912 were 524; in 1913, 543. The average cost per month for 1911-12 was $2.35; for 1912-13, $2.36.

Some of the earlier teachers of this township before 1890, covering a period of fifty years were the following: Edwin Heilman and his five sons, O. J., Samuel, William F., Edgar J., and Jacob D., and daughter, Susan; Thomas Benner, and his son, H. A. I.; the Kerschners, George, Charles, Daniel, and Henry; Peter and M. J. Hoffman; Elias J. Guth, Edmund Reinhard, E. Morris Haas, Samuel S. J. Kern, and John D. Gensler.

An extraordinary Local Institute was held in the Jordan Reformed church in the fall of 1886, which was attended by the State Superintendent of Common Schools, Dr. E. E. Higbee, who delivered a most interesting address, having been the greatest occasion of this kind in the school history of the township.

EARLY MILLS.—There are three mills in the township in active operations, one on Jordan creek, and two on Cedar creek. Three others are mentioned as having been on the Cedar creek but they were destroyed.

Wehr's Mill is on the Jordan creek, one-half mile east of Guthsville bridge. It was built by Ephraim Sieger in 1862. The motor power was supplied wholly by two large breast water-wheels for many years, then a steam engine was added to supply power when the water became too low. The interior was destroyed by fire in 1880, and immediately repaired, the engine having been in a separate building was only slightly damaged. The building is of stone, three story. The "Roller System" was introduced with machinery of the latest and best design, including a turbine water wheel, the steam engine still being used when necessary. The dam is of concrete, one of the best constructed in this part of the county. William Wehr became the owner in 1897 and by his energy and practical knowledge of milling has since then built up a large wholesale and retail business.

Schantz Mill was situated at the head of the Cedar creek, in Upper Macungie township at the eastern corner, just across the line of South Whitehall, half a mile west of the Poor House. It was a five-story stone structure, erected in 1790. A strong supply of water proceeded from several large springs which bubbled out of crevices in a limestone formation. Henry Bortz first owned the property and in 1811 it passed to his son-in-law, Jacob Schantz; and long afterward to Schantz's son, Hiram. During this time the roller process was introduced. David Koch purchased it in 1888 and it was continued in successful operation until 1902 when the waters were appropriated by the City of Allentown, and damages allowed, amounting to $13,000. The mill was torn down and the springs were surrounded by a stone wall to preserve the large flow of water from contamination. It is more fully described in connection with the water works of the city.

Bortz Mill was a two-story frame structure on Cedar creek near the Poor House, established in 1794 by Caspar Weaver. Subsequent owners were Daniel Butz and Reuben Butz. From 1866 to 1869 it was owned and operated by David Butz; from 1869 to 1882 by Charles Wenner; and from 1882 to 1893 by Matthias Bortz, when he died. His estate carried it on until 1903; then the City of Allentown appropriated the waters of the Schantz Spring, the head and source of the creek, and the estate was allowed $7,000 for damages to the plant. In 1912 the estate demolished the building and erected in its stead two frame houses. An old two-story cut-stone dwelling, used in connection with the grist mill, is still a superior building, its style of architecture indicating that it was put up before 1800. It is occupied by the widow, Mrs. Arabella Bortz.

Romig Mill, is a three-story stone building on Cedar creek, half a mile below the Poor House. Edwin H. Romig became the owner in 1887 and carried it on till 1908, when his son, Augustus W., succeeded him and he has operated it since. It was built by Henry Mertz before the Revolution, and subsequently occupied by a number of millers. Previously the building was used as a fulling mill.

Haines Mill (generally known for years as "Cedar Creek Mill"), is a large three-story stone building on Cedar creek at Cetronia. It was built by an early settler named George Knauss before the Revolution who had in that vicinity 300 acres, and subsequently owned and carried on by his sons, George Frederick, and Philip, his grandson, Daniel Knauss, and Charles Mertz, Asa Balliet, and Solomon Lichtenwalner, the last named having had it two years and died in 1869. His son, Hiram A., then owned it till 1885, and his grandson, Lafenus H., till 1905 when Jacob Haines became the owner. It was soon afterward destroyed by fire. He rebuilt it and has operated it since. The roller process had been introduced in 1887.

Wilt Mill was situated on Cedar creek, one-fourth of a mile east of the Lichtenwalner mill. It was erected by George Frederick Knauss about 1800 and carried on by him until he died in 1850. He was succeeded by John Dorney from 1850 to 1871; by Dorney's sons, Tilghman and Daniel D., and John Butz for several years; then by Allen Wilt for twenty years. It was destroyed by fire in 1896 and not rebuilt, notwithstanding a superior water-right.

IRON-ORE MINES.—Iron ore was discovered a hundred years ago at different places in the township, and mining operations were carried on from 1820 to 1890, producing altogether many hundred thousand tons. These operations are mentioned in the description of Guth's Station and Hoffmansville.

Seven mines were in operation in 1884: Calvin Guth, Frank P. Guth, Kline & Albright, Koch & Balliet, Daniel Henry, Sieger Bros., and Thomas Rhoad (near Scherersville).

In 1847, Peter Moyer, a blacksmith of the township, invented an ore washer which came into general use. It was afterwards improved by Samuel Thomas.

VITRIFIED BRICK PLANT.—In 1896, Dr. H. K. Hartzell, William F. Mosser, and Andrew Keck embarked in the manufacture of vitrified brick in the township, near Guth's Station on the C. & F. R. R. A superior plant was established and a fine circular smoke-stack, 124½ feet high, was erected, with ovens having a capacity of 50,000 bricks; and 15 acres of land with a large deposit of shale material was purchased. Active and successful operations were carried on by them for a number of years. In 1910 a re-organization was effected as the Allentown Brick Co., with H. L. Dougherty as president and J. R. Connelly as superintendent and the business was carried on until 1913. The character of the brick was recognized as superior.

POTTERY.—In 1877 Charles Guth embarked in the business of manufacturing pottery in the township along the road one-half a mile south of Guthsville and carried it on four years. The glazing was reputed to be imperfect and therefore the enterprise came to be abandoned.

POWDER WORKS.—The Pennsylvania Trojan Powder Works was organized in Allentown in 1905. It was first known as the Allentown Non-Freezing Powder Co., and the change was made in 1908. The plant is located at the Iron Bridge, along the line of the C. & F. R. R., on what is known as the Eberhard farm. Ten acres of ground are occupied and the company employs 85 men. The organizer was Jesse B. Bronstein, and he has been its active head. Trojan powder is used as a substitute for nitro-glycerine and dynamite. It is a radical departure from the old kind of dynamite and after its great value was established the business of the company grew very rapidly. The U. S. Government uses large quantities of it in the construction of the Panama Canal and it is used by large mining operators in mining copper in Mexico, California, Nevada, Montana, and other sections of the West.

The plant was established in Lehigh county because of the extensive quarries in the manufacture of great quantities of cement. The business grew from 200,000 pounds monthly to 400,000. The officers of the company are: Pres., W. E. Hall, New York; vice-pres., Jesse B. Bronstein, Allentown; sec. and treas., John Bronstein, Allentown.

COUNTY BRIDGES.—There are four county bridges in the township which span the Jordan creek, and one, the Cedar creek:

Guthsville Bridge was first a stone, two-arch structure, erected in 1811; and in 1858 a single-span covered wooden super-structure was substituted which has been continued until now. But this has recently been condemned and arrangements are being made to put a substantial iron bridge in its place.

Sieger's Bridge is situated at Wehr's Mill. It is a wooden, one-arch, covered structure, 150 feet long, built in 1841, and is in a good state of preservation, painted red.

Guth's Bridge is a single-span covered wooden bridge, 120 feet long, similar to the Guthsville bridge, which was erected in the same year, 1858, and rebuilt in 1882. Previously, from the time of the earliest settlements, the creek was crossed by a ford at this point.

Troxel Bridge is a fine, three-arch stone structure, 250 feet long, including approaches, which was erected in 1832. It is situated several hundred feet south of the Iron Bridge..

Two other bridges span the Jordan near the Troxel Bridge: the "Iron Bridge" of the C. & F. R. R.; and the long iron bridge of the A. & S. trolley line (described in the township history).

Poor-House Bridge was erected across Cedar creek by the county in 1856, about 300 feet north of the main building. It is 200 feet long with side stone guard-walls, one span, 20 feet long, over the creek being constructed of iron, and the other, also 20 feet long over a tail-race of the Bortz Mill (a short distance above), being constructed of wood, in a poor state of repair.

Iron Eridge is the name of a prominent locality in the northerly portion of the township, without any collection of buildings or business interest in the immediate vicinity. It takes its name from a long and high superior iron truss-bridge crossing the Jordan creek and the wide ravine, on the Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R.

In 1857 it was known as the largest iron bridge in America. It is still visited by many persons from all parts of the country every year. What greatly adds to the attraction is the charming scenery by which it is surrounded.

The Jordan Valley at this point is nearly a quarter of a mile wide on the grade of the railroad, and about 1,000 feet on the level of the creek; and the railroad is nearly 90 feet above the creek. The length of the bridge is 1,165 feet. Its superstructure consists of 11 spans of suspended truss, each 100 feet long, and 16 feet high, which are supported by cast-iron pillars set on solid masonry.

It was erected from August, 1856, to July, 1857, under the direction of F. C. Lowthrop, civil engineer and contractor, and cost $77,000.

The railroad and bridge were constructed by the Lehigh Crane and Thomas Iron Companies in 1857 at an expense of $260,000.

RAILROADS.—The C. & F. R. R. extends across the northerly section of the township, in length five miles.

There are two electric trolley lines: In the easterly section, from Allentown to Slatington, via Siegersville, in length six miles; and across the southerly section from Allentown to Kutztown, via Cetronia, in length three miles.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—Prior to 1840, the Justices of the Peace were elected for districts embracing several townships and their names will be found in the Civil List of the county.

From 1840 to the present time, the following incumbents have filled this office in the township:

Solomon Gable, 1840.	Moses G. Hoffman, 1868-
Henry Guth, 1840	93
Charles Hittel, 1842.	Calvin Guth, 1868-73
Daniel J. Rhoads, 1844.	A. S. Heffner, 1873-78
John Eisenhard, 1845	Milton R. Schaffer, 1878-
John Smith, 1846	85
Daniel J. Rhoads,	Aaron M. Greenawald,
1849-64.	1893-1914
Charles Guth, 1850-60	Daniel H. Miller, 1885-
James F. Klein, 1860-65.	90.
Frank J. Newhard,	O. E. Gruver, 1890-92
1864-66.	Joseph M. Gruver, 1892-
John H. Nolf, 1865-68	94
William Walbert,	Llewellyn H. Guth, 1894-
1866-68.	1915

POLLING PLACE.—There is only one polling place in the township, which is situated at Wenersville, near the center of the township, and here the elections have been held from the beginning of this election district.

POST OFFICES.—The following post offices are maintained in the township:

Stettlersville and Orefield.

The following have been discontinued: Guth's Sta., Walbert's, Ringer's, Eckerts's, and Cetronia.

PROPOSED COUNTY SEAT.—When the movement was started in 1812 to establish a new county out of that portion of Northampton county which lay west of the Lehigh river, many prominent and influential men, who lived in the vicinity of Guthsville, exerted themselves to secure the selection of the village as the place best adapted for the county-seat on account of its situation in the geographical center of the large area of territory to be erected into separate county, but their efforts proved unavailing and the advocates of Allentown were successful.

COUNTY ALMSHOUSE.—The public institution, established by the county authorities for the relief of the poor, was located by them in South Whitehall township, a short distance south of Dorney's Park. For complete description of it, see Chapter XVI, Public Charities.

PUBLIC ROADS.—The township is well supplied with public roads, and several prominent thoroughfares extend from Allentown; one westward through the central portion by way of Guthsville to Schnecksville, or to Lowhill; another southwestward, via Cedarville to Fogelsville; and a third, northward, the length of the township through the central portion, from Dorneyville, via Wennersville and the cross-roads on Huckleberry Ridge, to Ironton and Slatington.

LEIBELSPERGER HOMESTEAD ON HENRY LEH FARM.

State Highway.—In 1911 the state road from Allentown to Walbert was extended to Guthsville; in 1912, to Siegersville, and in 1913, to Schnecksville.

POPULATION.—The enumeration of the township by the U. S. Census since its erection in November, 1810, has been as follows:

1820,	1,623	1870,	*2,748
1830,	1,952	1880,	2,884
1840,	2,290	1890,	2,204
1850,	2,913	1900,	2,472
1860,	4,085	1910,	2,497

*Whitehall township was taken partly from this township in 1867; which will explain the marked reduction in ten years.

In 1880, the enumeration of the villages in the township was reported separately by the census as follows:

Cedarville,	135	Hoffmansville,	78
Crackersport,	65	Mechanicsville,	100
Guthsville,	138	Sherersville,	56
Griesemersville,	76	Siegersville,	36

The inmates of the county almshouse were reported as numbering 286.

PATRIOTIC SPIRIT.—The militia organization was kept up actively in Guthsville and the surrounding township until the Civil War broke out in 1861, the village having supplied a company of "Troopers," as well as of "Infantry"; then pug-nacity took the place of jocosity, and when President Lincoln issued his call for troops, twenty-two men responded promptly.

Battalion Day was a great institution for the people of Guthsville and the surrounding county for miles, and they supported its annual celebration in the village on Whitmonday with much enthusiasm; indeed, the merriment was so impressive to many that its effects were felt for many days afterward. Pure rye whiskey is reported to have been abundant at three cents a drink with a cigar thrown in; the evening was passed in vigorous dancing and uproarious jubilation; and at midnight there followed fighting and confusion. Hucksters were numerous who supplied home-made beer, cakes, and candies; and many "merry-makers" had strings of copper pennies around their necks to increase the clatter by their jingling. And such were the "good old times" before the Civil War.

Soldiers of '61.—Some of the soldiers who enlisted during the Civil War from Guthsville and the vicinity, whose names have been recalled in 1913, were the following:

Aaron Beissel	Alfred Hoffman
Franklin Beissel	Moses Hoffman
Charles Beltz	Henry Kern
John Culbertson	Dr. Josiah Kern
Alfred Diehl	Edwin Miller
Daniel Farber	Franklin Miller
Henry Gruber	Matthias Miller
William Guth	Edwin Moyer
Harrison Guth	Eli Peter
Martin Guth	Edwin Reinert
Thomas Guth	Charles Resch
Phaon Guth	Amandus Sieger
David Guth	William Sieger
Moses Guth	Franklin Schmidt
Eli Hartman	Tighman Schmidt
John Hartman	Henry Seip
Edwin Hauser	Henry Savitz
Thomas Hoffman	Evan Strauss

One of the county veterans, now living near Guthsville in good health, is Charles Sauerwine, who was enlisted as a private in Co. A, 14th Regt. U. S. Vol. Inf., and served from March 3, 1862, to March 3, 1865, when he received his honorable discharge. He took a very active interest in the erection of the Soldier's Monument on the Jordan Lutheran Church cemetery.

Of the above, four were surviving in October, 1913: Henry Gruber and William Guth, of Siegersville; Thomas Guth, of Allentown, and Martin Guth, of California.

Soldiers' Monuments.—In 1893 a Soldiers' Monument, to commemorate the services of men from this vicinity who were enlisted in the several wars of the United States, was erected in the cemetery of the Jordan Reformed church, near the southeast corner of the building. It is made of concrete, in the form of an obelisk, about 20 feet high, (which is surrounded by a wooden frame on account of its cracked and crumbling condition), surmounted by three muskets, standing "stack arms," with four diminutive wooden cannon at the four corners of its base. Midway up the respective sides, four marble tablets are set in the obelisk and on three of them the names of the soldiers are inscribed, as follows:

1776. East side.

Peter Gross

1812.

Henry Guth Conrad Kerschner
Henry Resch Adam Hayberger
George Resch

1848.

Reuben Benner

1861 North side.

Moses Hoffman,Co. I, 41 P. V.
E. J. Peters,Co. I, 41 P. V.
Alfred Diehl,Co. K, 47 P. V.
Frederick Fisher,Co. F, 47 P. V.
Samuel McCandless,Co. G, 47 P. V.
Nicholas Helm,Co. G, 176 P. V.

1861 South side.

Henry Kern,Co. E, 47 P. V.
Samuel A. Guth,Co. I, 47 P. V.
Charles Beltz,Co. B, 176 P. V.
Henry M. Larosch,Co. E, 176 P. V.
Alfred Miller,Co. D, 176 P. V.
Edgar A. Fink,Co. I, 2 Inf.
Joseph Strasburger,Co. K, 4 N. Y. V. C.

In 1894, a similar Soldiers' Monument was established in the Jordan Lutheran church cemetery near the middle of the western line. It is a plain obelisk, 25 feet high, made of concrete, coated with cement, and surmounted by a bronze eagle with wings out-stretched; but its edges and the corners of the base show marked signs of decay. The cost was raised by subscriptions, the most active solicitor having been Charles Saurwine, an old veteran, accompanied by his wife, who reside near Guthsville. The names of deceased soldiers from this community are inscribed on three sides as follows:

1776.

George Deily Samuel Sieger

1812.

Christian Derr Solomon Rabenold
Isaac Hamman Henry Schantz
Peter Kline Jacob Schantz
Andrew Krause John Strauss
George Kuhns George Xander
Lucas Rabenold

1861 North side.

John Deily,Co. B, 176 Reg. P. V.
John Hahn,32d Cavalry.
Edwin Houser,Co. K, 47 Reg. P. V.
John Helfrich,Co. G, 47 Reg. P. V.
Moses Klotz,Co. K, 47 Reg. P. V.
Lewis Kratzer,Co. B, 176 Reg. P. V.
Jonas Rabenold,Co. B, 47 Reg. P. V.
Lewis Seip,Co. B, 47 Reg. P. V.
William Sieger,Co. B, 47 Reg. P. V.

1861 West side.

Moses Guth,Co. K, 54 Reg. P. V.
Franklin Miller,Co. B, 176 Reg. P. V.

Both of these monuments were dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

THE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN is being established in the township about 300 yards southeast from Cedarville. Building operations were begun in August, 1913, by laying the foundations of a large structure 180 feet long and 60 feet deep, and this is to be followed by other structures.

GUTH HOME.—Lorentz Guth emigrated from the Palatinate to America in 1738, and by 1769 he had come to own 759 acres of land. He was the founder of the Jordan Reformed church, near Walberts, having donated 56 acres for church purposes and a church farm. In 1745 he erected a two-story stone dwelling-house near the south side of the Jordan, which is still in a good state of preservation and used as a dwelling. His great-great-grandson, Elias J. Guth, is the present owner and occupant. Its walls are two feet thick. The windows were originally with four small panes of glass, but these have been replaced by modern windows. The old windows were fastened to logs on the inside, so as to resist attacks by the Indians, during times of danger, as in 1755 and 1763. The settlers of the neighborhood gathered here to spend the night in safety. Heavy plank-riveted doors were placed at the entrance. In the gable ends, loop-holes were constructed to enable riflemen to defend the property and its inmates. The original roof was thatched but in course of time it was changed to shingles. The ground floor was laid with brick, in mortar. The kitchen had a huge fire place, 14 feet long and 7 feet high, with a bake oven built in the rear; and over the fire place there was a smoke house. A wall stove was used to heat the parlor, which consisted of rough cast-iron plates, extended through the wall to the fire place.

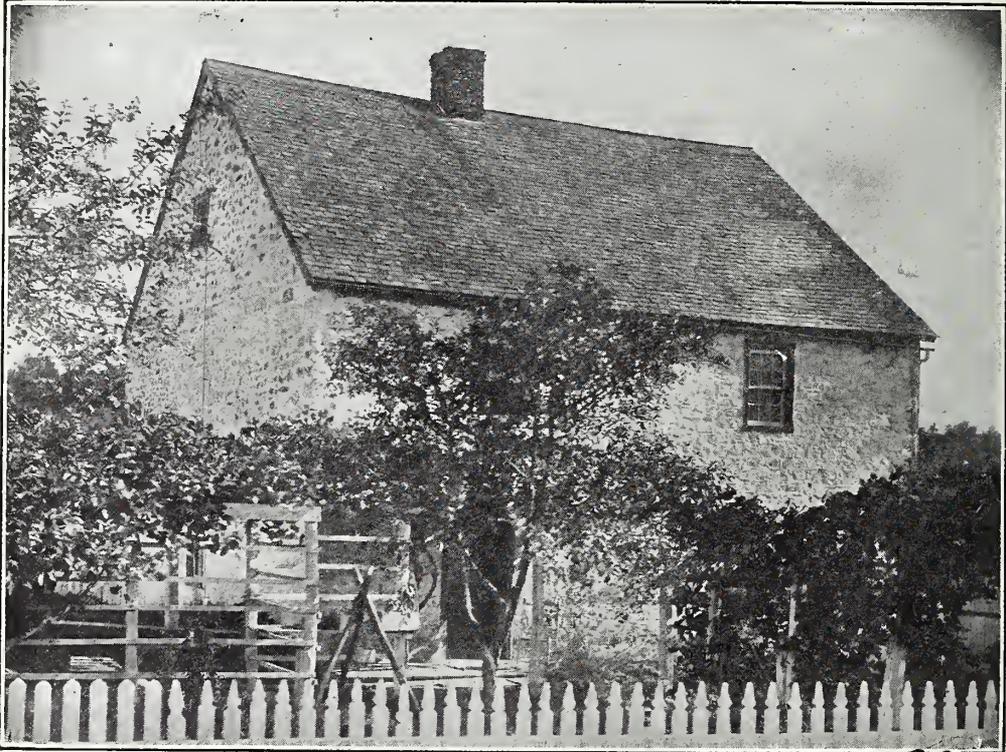

A lot of ground containing 60 perches, adjoining the house, was inclosed by a wall two feet thick, and seven feet high, which was used as a stockade for cattle, and also for defense when the settlement was invaded by Indians.

GROUSE HALL.—Lynford Lardner, (named after a friend and near relative of the family, Rev. Thomas Lynford, Rector of St. Nicholas's, Acon, and a Chaplain in Ordinary to King William and Queen Mary) was born July 18, 1715, the son of Dr. John Lardner, a physician of Grace Church, St., London and Woodford, Epping Forest, Sussex, and his wife, a Miss Winstanley.

He spent some time at the University of Cambridge, but afterwards went into a counting-room in London. The family wished to obtain a government office for him, but in this they were unsuccessful, and the influence of his brother-in-law, Richard Penn (who married his sister, Hannah Lardner) made an opening for him in Pennsylvania. When about 25 years of age, he emigrated to America, sailing from Gravesend on May 5, 1740, and arrived at Philadelphia in the beginning of September. He resided for some time on the Penn property, and as a member of the Land Office participated in the management of the wild regions of which that family were lords paramount, and to some extent he was also their commercial agent. He succeeded James Steele in the position of Receiver-General or Collector of Quit-rents, Purchase Mon-

John Swift, so often mayor of Philadelphia); John Wallace (son of a Scotch clergyman) and John Inglis. Social entertainments had always been a feature of provincial life, and the arrival of a governor, the close of a mayoralty, or an official conference, was the occasion of gathering around a well-covered board. The stately minuet, moreover, had been learned by the gayer ladies and gentlemen, and parties had been given by John Sober and others at the Bachelor's Hall; but in 1748 it was thought that a subscription ball, in which married men might join, would be a de-eys, &c.; and in 1746 was made Keeper of the Great Seal of the Province, holding both offices several years. The Receiver-General had a salary of from £300 to £400 and the Keeper was paid in fees for attesting the laws.

HOME OF LORENTZ GUTH, BUILT 1745.

In 1746, Lardner became the owner of Colli-day's paper-mill in Springfield township, and afterwards was interested in the manufacture of iron; but at no time was he in the mercantile business. In the winter of 1748-9, the dancing assembly was instituted, which, with intermissions, has been kept up for upwards of 150 years, and Lardner was manager of the first assembly, the other managers being John Swift (ancestor of lightful institution. The tax was 40 shillings, and this paid for an entertainment every Thursday, from the first of January to the first of May, beginning "precisely at six in the evening and not by any means to exceed twelve the same night," and for complimentary tickets to the ladies. The entertainment was moderate, consisting chiefly of something to drink. There were 59 subscribers, including the managers.

Lardner was made a Justice for Lancaster county in 1752, and about that time relinquished the Seal. He was called to the provincial council, June 13, 1755. In March, 1756, he was chosen lieutenant of the troop of horse, organized in connection with two companies of foot and one company of artillery for the defense of the city. He was also one of the Commissioners to spend the money which the Assembly about this time voted for the King's use. He declined re-appointment the following year, but served subsequently in the same capacity. He was some time a trustee of the College of Philadelphia and a member of the American Philosophical Society. After his marriage he resided on the west side of Second street, above Arch, and owned several houses in that locality, besides farms outside the city. His country seat was "Somerset," part of which is known as "Lardner's Point," on the Delaware, near Tacony.

Lardner had a shooting box on one of his tracts in Northampton county, to which he gave the name "Grouse Hall." He was also a member of a club which hunted foxes in the neighborhood of Gloucester, N. J. His obituary notice said, "It was the business, the purpose of his being next to obeying Him to whom he is gone, to please and instruct. Kindness and a desire of making all around him happy, were the motives of his actions, and with all the capacity requisite for making a figure in a contentious world, moderation, cheerfulness, affability and temperance were the acts of his excellent life." He died October 6, 1774, and was buried at Christ church. He married, October 17, 1749, Elizabeth, daughter of William Branson, a merchant of Philadelphia, and a man of wealth, a letter of 1743 saying that he was worth £4,000 a year in course of trade, besides £400 a year in rent of houses in town. Mrs. Lardner was born in 1732 and died August 26, 1761. Mr. Lardner married the second time, May 29, 1766, Catharine Lawrence, who survived him. He had seven children.

As residents of Lehigh county, that part of Mr. Lardner's life history connected with Grouse Hall is of more interest to us than is that of his life elsewhere. The first owner of the tract was George Rowe, who secured it by a warrant from Thomas and Richard Penn, dated October 13, 1737. By non-compliance with the terms of the warrant it became void and Lynford Lardner secured it by a warrant, dated August 9, 1745, and also an adjoining tract by a warrant of September 10, 1747. These tracts were united into one tract and a patent dated September 10, 1747, was issued for them, containing 195 acres.

Quoting the words of the patent, we find the following: "And whereas, said Lynford Lardner hath caused sundry buildings and improvements to be made and erected upon said 195 acres, now called or known by the name of Grouse Hall, now, at the request of said Lynford Lardner, we would be pleased to grant him a confirmation of the same." Lardner was required to pay £30, 4sh., and 6d. Grouse Hall was apparently known as such as early as 1747, and a building had been erected by that time.

Lardner's plantation of the grange, in Northampton county (now included in Lehigh), was formed of three tracts, the first of which was warranted August 25, 1738, to Reese Phillips, described as a tract near Macungie. The second was warranted to Henry Deering on May 20, 1743. Neither complied with the conditions of the warrants and they became void. September 16, 1749, a warrant was issued to Lynford Lardner for these tracts and a third tract, and on September 26, 1750, a patent was issued to him for three tracts lying contiguous, forming one tract of 305½ acres, called the Grange, of the manor of Pennsburg.

Lardner's will, executed September 30, 1774, was probated October 25, 1774. To his son, James, he gave all his rights in warrants of land received. Then follows this clause: "Item, Whereas, I have lately formed a plan to divide my two contiguous plantations in the County of Northampton, one of them called Grouse Hall and the other called the Grange," etc. He then directs that 150 acres be surveyed off to make another plantation, called Springwood, and devised the same to his son, James, to whom he also bequeathed his paper mill in Springfield township. To his daughter, Frances, he bequeathed his plantation of Grouse Hall, "now in tenure of George Rough," and to his daughter, Hannah, the Grange, "now in the tenure of John Rough."

It is probable that the names Rowe and Rough refer to the same man, namely, George Ruch who, in the tax list of 1764, was taxed for 400 acres of lands on which he lived, but did not own; and in 1772 was taxed £12 for land he lived on, while John Ruch was taxed £10, 16sh., for the land on which he lived.

James Lardner having died in his minority, the four remaining heirs of Lardner, conveyed to Henry Reitz, of Whitehall township, on March 11, 1794, for £957, 18 sh., the plantation of Springwood, containing 154½ acres, "together with liberty if found necessary for watering the meadow on the hereby granted premises to dam the water of Little Cedar creek as high as a large stone, now standing in the said creek, near the small spring between the line and William Lohr's fence." Henry Reitz and his wife, Magdalena, on April 1, 1797, conveyed to Samuel Probst, their son-in-law, a message and 122 acres and 123 perches, and to Daniel Probst a message and 104 acres and 137 perches of this tract. From the Probsts it descended into the Xander family, then into the possession of the late Joseph E. Balliet; now it is owned by Col. H. C. Trexler, who has converted it into a beautiful and attractive spot.

The plantation of Grouse Hall, then described as containing 278 acres and 14 perches, was sold November 20, 1805, by John and William Lardner, executors of their sister, Frances, to Caspar Schoenebruch, and Schoenebruch sold parts of the tract to various persons, among them Joseph Bock and John Krack; and to Joseph Henry he sold a message and tract of 122 acres and 98 perches on May 16, 1812. Henry sold his tract to Henry Strauss on April 5, 1814. From the Strauss family it passed to Tilghman H. and John Dorney; now it is owned by Robert R. Ritter.

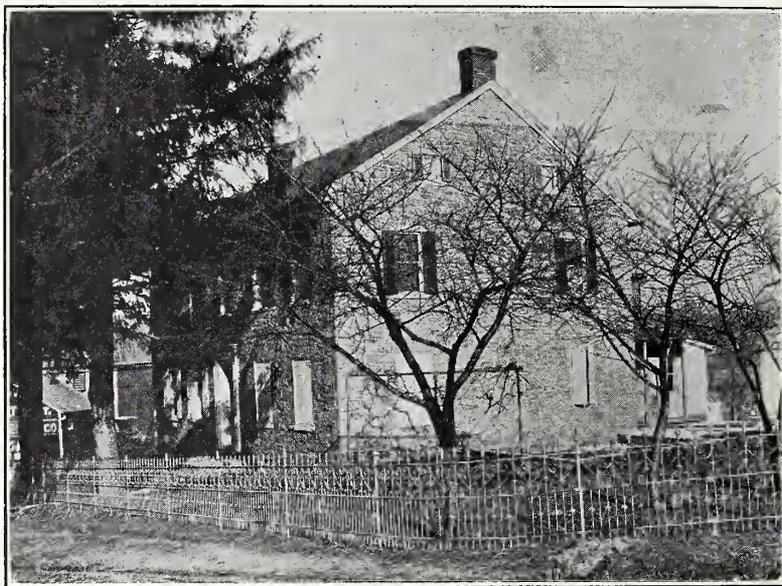

vania, were written by Lynford Lardner to William Farsons, of Easton:

PHILADELPHIA, May 10, 1753.
 "DEAR SIR: The bearer is my tenant at Grouse Hall. He agreed with a person who lives upon a part of the same tract to clear annually a quantity of meadow ground in lieu of rent. This he has not only neglected to do, but has likewise sowed two following crops of wheat upon the same spot, spends most of his time abroad and has destroyed a considerable quantity of young timber to make fences for the security of his wheat, when at a small distance an abundance of that more proper for the purpose might be collected. In short, I am a great sufferer through his idleness and rascality. I would therefore, beg you to apply to Mr. Gordon in this affair and give him any fee you think proper in the case. Your affectionate friend,

LYNFORD LARDNER.

WINDSOR, Dec. 29, 1753.

"This will be delivered to you by Peter Troxel, who bound himself in a bond and warrant with HOUSE BUILT BY DANIEL TROXELL, 1800.

The location of the building, called Grouse Hall, has been fixed by different writers in different localities.

One writer gives the house, built by Peter Troxell, in 1744, near the Jordan, as the place. Troxell purchased this land from Caspar Wistar as early as 1743. Another writer fixed the location at Guthsville, while a third stated that the land was owned by the Wenner family. The last statement comes nearest to the facts as the Wenner family purchased part of the Grouse Hall tract.

The following letters in the manuscript collections of the Historical Society of Pennsyl-

Jacob Wert for 287 pounds. He informs me only one-half of the stock at Grouse Hall lies as yet under an execution. If so, I consent that he takes any legal method to secure the other one-half to himself, exclusive of household goods, as the only satisfaction he is likely to obtain from his brother bondsman. This much I have promised to write you."

LYNFORD LARDNER.

It seems probable that Troxell lost the amount of the bond, as on Jan. 12, 1754, he mortgaged his house and 200 acres of land to Lynford Lardner for 294 pounds.

On Scull's map of Pennsylvania in 1770, Grouse Hall is located between the Cedar and Jordan creeks. By the survey of a road, laid out in 1753, from Lower Milford to Kern's Mill, now Slatington, over 25 miles in length, we find that the road passed through the Jordan creek and land of Peter Troxell, Lynford Lardner, and vacant land, to the Cedar creek, the distance from Jordan creek to Lardner's plantation being 284 perches and from there to the Cedar creek two miles.

A distance of 284 perches from the Jordan extends to the lane running west through land belonging for many years to the Wenner family now the property of John Eckert, and years ago this lane apparently ran some distance farther than it does to-day, for, if extended, it would reach Grouse Hall, and it was evidently the only outlet.

In conversation with Mr. David Schoudt, of Allentown, in 1909, when 90 years of age, he stated that he had heard old people say that Lardner's house was a long, low building.

In 1909 Charles Wenner stated that the greater part of this house was still standing. It was built of stone with graveled sides, originally 43 feet long and 25 feet wide, a part having crumbled away. The interior is one long room with a small cellar under the southern end, where a splendid spring is still active. At the northern end is a large fireplace, capable of roasting an entire deer. A staircase leads to a small attic.

INDIAN TROUBLES.—Like most of the early settlements in the upper portion of the county, it appears that this township was also visited by the Indians in their cruel incursions during the French and Indian War, more especially in 1763, when Governor Hamilton called the attention of the Pennsylvania Assembly to the sad condition of its settlers, reporting "that their houses were destroyed, and their farms laid waste."

In the Hallische Nachrichten, (German Ed.) p. 1125, it is stated that at a meeting of Synod of the Lutheran Church of Pennsylvania held in 1763, at Philadelphia, no delegates or representative from the Jordan congregation could attend that body on account of the dangerous situation of affairs caused by the Indians.

INDIAN HOLE.—The eastern extremity of "Huckleberry Ridge" is near the village of Guthsville and the sloping woodland is locally known as the "Green Mountain." At its base there are patches of ground where the Indians evidently prepared spears and arrow-heads, tomahawks, etc., out of flint, because so many small particles of this hard material or "chippings" are still found in that locality, and numerous completed specimens are exhibited as having been discovered by relic-hunters. And the "Indian-Hole," a large lime-stone fissure, of supposed great depth, is east of the village, near the north side of the Allentown road, where, it is said, an "Indian Princess" had her home. The entrance is at the foot of an embankment in a field, and its sloping, semi-circular surface has the appearance of having been washed away by the raging, swirling floods of the Jordan valley. The creek is not far away and when its banks become over-flooded the surplus waters rush along a ravine to this entrance and disappear through the large fissure in the limestone strata. This peculiar, natural formation has attracted much attention; but its depth has not been fathomed.

VILLAGES.—Villages have been formed in various sections of the township. They are:

Guthsville	Cedarville
Hoffmansville	Dorneyville
Snydersville	Griesemerville
Crackersport	Greenawald
Walbert's Station	Sherersville
Guth's Station	Seiple's Station
Wennersville	Mechanicsville
Half-way House

GUTHSVILLE is situated on the west bank of the Jordan, six miles northwest of Allentown. The land was taken up in 1780 by Adam Guth, a son of Lorenz Guth, Sr., and Michael, Adam's son, located here in 1782. Henry, another son of Adam, about this time, established a hotel and carried it on for a long while. It was a small two-story log building (afterward weather-boarded), and stood 200 feet west of the present hotel where Jacob Bloch erected a two-story brick dwelling-house about 1880. Its last proprietor for many years was Aaron Guth. In 1851 he erected the present superior two-story brick building to take its place, and there carried on a successful hotel business for a considerable time. His successors were Jesse Miller, Charles Sieger, Edward Driesbach, Jeremiah Klotz, Peters & Seiberling, Ellen Bortz, Silas Kerschner, Joseph Mickley, Llewellyn Henninger, Kuhns & Schankweiler (1906-11), and since 1911, Wilson F. Schankweiler, who equipped the place with modern improvements and introduced a strong supply of spring water.

This locality is sometimes called "Five Points," from five roads concentrating here: northwest to Claussville; north to Siegersville; south to Walbert's Station; southwest to Lutheran church and Fogelsville; west to Snyder'sville. The "State Highway" was extended through the village from Wennessville to Siegersville in 1911. As an evidence of the popularity of this point, the following vehicles passed the hotel, on Sunday, Sept. 28th, 1913, from 2 to 6 p. m.: 330 automobiles, 130 motorcycles, 20 bicycles, and 50 teams.

In 1855 a three-story brick store-building was erected by Daniel Kemmerer on the corner opposite the hotel, and he carried on a business in general merchandise for many years. His successors were Thomas Seislove, Peter Lerch, Levi Stern, Joseph Gruber (13 years), Henry F. Druckenmiller (1894-1906), and Henry P. Wehr, since 1906.

In 1871 a P. O. S. of A. Camp was instituted here but discontinued in a few years. In 1888 a second camp, No. 378, was instituted which has been conducted in a very successful manner until now, the membership in 1913 having been 128. In 1892, the camp purchased the property and since then it has been known as the "P. O. S. of A. Hall."

A postoffice was established in this building in 1879, named "Stettlersville," after Daniel Stettler (son-in-law of Henry Guth), the oldest resident of the village. The name of that village could not be selected because "Guth's Station P. O." nearby had been previously established. The parcel-post was begun Jan. 1, 1913.

In 1810, Joseph Guth started a tannery here and carried it on sixty years until he died, when the business was discontinued. Jacob Kressly then became the owner of the property and he converted the building ("bark-shed") into a machine shop, which he carried on until 1909, then changed it into two small frame dwellings.

Peter A. Guth, son of Joseph, embarked in the business of sawing lumber at the close of the Civil War. He built several mills here and carried on the business extensively for ten years; then it became difficult to secure a supply of timber and he was obliged to abandon his operations.

Aaron Guth started the manufacture of building brick in the village before 1854. He erected a large kiln near the south bank of the Jordan, west of the road, and carried on the business until the race track was constructed in 1861. His production was many thousand and all were used in the erection of the brick buildings at Guthsville, including the hotel and store, and the Stettler, Snyder, Haas, Ritter, Diehl, Shuler, and Hoffman dwelling-houses. Cord-wood was consumed for burning the brick.

The butchering business has been carried on here extensively for some years by Franklin Miller, Jeremiah Haas, Josiah Lambert, and Llewellyn Lentz (ten years). The last named was succeeded by Clinton T. Snyder, who rebuilt the slaughter-house in 1905 and he has since developed a large trade which reaches out into the surrounding country many miles.

Uriah Shuler started the first carpet-weaving shop in the village in 1908, adjoining the store, and he has since made rag carpets there. He taught himself and constructed his loom.

In 1852 a blacksmith shop was started opposite the only hotel building where it was carried on for some years by Moses Diehl and Jacob Lobbach. A second was put up near the county bridge where Charles Kerschner and his sons did a large business until 1890.

In 1911, S. T. Ritter erected a frame machine shop at the road leading to Guth's Station for repairing and dealing in gasoline engines, and also repairing farming implements and autos.

In 1890, Silas Kerschner, (while owner of the hotel property), erected a bakery near the hotel, which was carried on until 1909 by Charles Rhoads and George Cresser as partners, Jacob Kressly, William Guth, and M. S. Laub, and last by Eugene Hausman. An ox was roasted in this bake-oven, for a Democratic mass-meeting held in the village to celebrate the election of Woodrow Wilson as President, and during its consumption there was much merriment.

Race track.—Aaron Guth was an enterprising, useful citizen of the village. Besides carrying on the hotel, he embarked in the business of encouraging speedy horses by laying out a trotting half-mile track along the Jordan east of the bridge. This was before 1860, and it attracted many persons from distant places who were fond of fast driving. But it was found too small; so in 1861 he established a mile track (egg-shaped), along the Jordan west of the bridge, and enclosed the three-sides in a board fence, 8 feet high, with an entrance several hundred feet west of the hotel, and shedding westward from this entrance for the display of live-stock, and stabling the horses brought to the place. It was largely patronized for two years by prominent horsemen from Allentown, Bethlehem, Easton, Reading, and other cities; David Gilbert, of Griesemersville, and George Snyder and his son of Snyderville (prominent horse-jockeys), were influential supporters of this local institution. But the "depression of war time" obliged Mr. Guth to suspend operations. A "circular" half-mile track was then constructed out of the eastern end and used for many years until 1885.

Local Fair.—During the years 1861 and 1862 certain enterprising men of Guthsville substituted a local fair and horse-racing in the place of the abandoned Battalion-Day. A track was constructed in the immediate vicinity where the racing was held.

Sunday school was organized in 1908 in the public school building and it has been maintained since. In 1913, the enrolled membership was 130. Its superintendent has been George Rex.

The United Brethren in Christ erected a frame church in the village in 1867 and used it only two years when they established another church south of Siegersville and sold the building to the township, and it was occupied as a public school until 1905, when the school was transferred to a new brick building in the village, and the church was then sold to C. J. Laudenslager, who has since used it in carrying on his trade as a plumber.

Old Buildings.—Next to the “bark-shed” frame houses, there is a fine old two-story cut stone dwelling-house on the west side of the “state road,” which was erected before 1800 by a descendant of the Guth family, and this attracts much attention by its substantial colonial ap-man; and additional dwellings having been put there the place took the name of Hoffmansville. The hotel was afterward owned by Frank C. Balliet and George Keiser; and in 1868 it was discontinued.

Iron ore was first discovered here about 1820 by George Guth and he operated the plant for a number of years when he was succeeded by his sons-in-law, Joseph Kern and Phaon Albright, who continued the business in a successful manner until 1855. James F. Kline, having married Kern's daughter, then took his interest in the plant, and it was then carried on very extensively and very profitably under leases with the Crane Iron Co., Bethlehem Iron Co., and Thom-pearance; and another stands opposite the store which is shown by the accompanying illustration, erected in 1835 by Henry Guth.

HENRY GUTH HOMESTEAD, BUILT 1835.

Population.—In 1884 there were 40 dwellings and about 200 population; in 1913, 31 dwellings and 141 population.

From 1890 to 1900, the community supported the Guthsville Mutual Aid Association, which had a membership of 300.

HOFFMANSVILLE is situated on a portion of the Peter Kern tract in the northern section of the township, a half-mile from the Siegersville station on the trolley line. In 1813 Joseph Kern, a son of Peter, and son-in-law of George Guth, purchased from his father, 201 acres of this tract and erected a brick dwelling-house which is still standing. It was converted into a hotel about 1830 by a subsequent owner, John Hoff-as Iron Co., for upwards of thirty years; then the operating expenses became too great on account of pumping out enormous quantities of water and the plant was abandoned. The property is now owned by Dr. Molton Kline (son of James), who has practiced his profession at Hoffmansville since 1891, having been previously at Guthsville from 1876 to that time. During the early operations at this plant, the ore was washed by the waters of the Jordan through long troughs west of the highway, on the north side of the creek, from where the ore was hauled in four and six-mule teams to different furnaces until the railroad was opened to Guth's Station in 1857. By the excavation at the village, adjoining the road on the east several hundred feet long, it is evident that many thousands of tons of ore were removed.

Upon the discovery of additional iron ore there by Joseph Kern in 1841, the business life of the place was revived and another hotel was started in a two-story brick building erected by John Kuhn on the opposite side of the road, which he carried on until he died. His sons Edward and Nathan succeeded him and they conducted the place for five years. Different parties occupied it until 1910, when the license for a tavern was refused. John G. Gackenbach has since conducted a "temperance hotel." From 1841 this business center was called Orefield.

The mines were reached by railroad extension of the Ironton R. R. from Siegersville. The great and deep exposed excavations, and the large banks of waste materials, plainly visible to the east of the highway, are evidence of the extensive ore operations at this point.

SNYDERVILLE, recently named "Sunnyside," was started by George Snyder in 1835 by the erection of a two-story brick hotel near the westerly line of the township and carrying on a very active and successful business for many years. He dealt extensively in horses with a son as partner and they took great interest in the racing tracks at Guthsville—about a mile distant to the northeast. It was afterward owned by John Snyder and he was succeeded by his son, Abraham. Alfred Wiltrout has been the proprietor since 1906. It was enlarged and improved, and then much appreciated as a "Club-House."

For a time George Snyder dealt extensively in plows and farm wagons.

CRACKERSPORT.—Leonard Steinger and his brother were pioneer settlers in the vicinity of the little village of Crackersport. When they reached the locality as complete strangers, it was a wilderness, with great forests of tall oaks round-about, and it is said that they climbed to the top of the highest trees in order to ascertain if there were any smoking chimneys or crowing roosters and in this manner discover the locality of immigrant settlers who had preceded them. The site of the village came to be owned by John Billig and he occupied the land for many years. He established a tavern there and carried it on for a while. He was succeeded by Jeremiah Troxel and Joseph Kelchner; then by Aaron Walbert who discontinued it as a public house.

A carriage factory was carried on by Daniel Stauffer from 1860 till he died in 1893, and continued by his son Harvey for two years afterward.

A "Temperance Hall," one-story frame building, 24 by 40 feet, was founded here in 1849 by the Sons of Temperance, South Whitehall Division, No. 391. The charter members were:

Simon Keck
Ephraim Reinhard
Solomon Fries
Josiah Strauss
Henry Hertzell
Aaron Kepp
Benjamin Moyer
Alexander Knauss
Gideon Guth

Daniel Kerchner
Jonas Reinhard
William Eisenhard
Henry Danmberger
Edwin Acker
John Huber
Joseph Hammel
Amos Fries

It was maintained until 1908, when it was sold to Edgar Kocher and he converted it into a private dwelling.

WALBERT'S STATION was established on the C. & F. R. R. at its opening in 1857 and named after Solomon Walbert, an old and highly honored resident property-holder of the vicinity. Here, near the railroad, is a point of concentration for three public roads crossing one another, which was the western terminus of the first section of "state road," constructed in 1910 on the route from Allentown to the Blue mountains, which came to be commonly known as the "Wennessville Pike."

Elias Henninger started a hotel near the cross-roads and carried it on for some years when he was succeeded by his son, Amandus. In 1870, E. C. Jacoby became the owner and he conducted it for 27 years until his decease. Henry Weidner then purchased the property. A number of parties then carried on the place without a license until 1909 under a lease from Weidner's widow; since then Albert J. Reichert has been the proprietor.

A store was conducted here for some years but for want of proper support it was abandoned.

In 1913 it contained nine dwellings and a school house.

GUTH'S STATION is a recognized village which started with the opening of the C. & F. R. R., and became an active and profitable shipping point for iron ore, for thirty years and afterward; also for vitrified brick for upwards of fifteen years. Besides the station, a hotel and store were established there and these have been continued until the present time. Calvin Miller conducted the hotel from 1874 to 1909; and since then, William Troxell. Mr. Miller and his son were the store-keepers for many years; then Morris Miller and Valentine Kleppinger; and since July, 1913, De Long Brothers.

One of the first mining operations was started here about 1830 on the land of Daniel Guth, and continued for sixty years; and Knappenberger Brothers (David and Henry) were active and enterprising miners for many years on leasehold interests.

Extensive limestone quarries were carried on. Both have been abandoned and the working people have left.

In the mining of the iron ore here, the mineral was first screened, not washed, and it was raised by a windlass and carried in baskets. Then it came to be washed by a natural flow of water through prepared ditches; and afterward steam-power was introduced, with the first experiments made in this vicinity.

WENNEERSVILLE is located on a farm which was owned by George Wenner. In 1837 his son, William, bought a part of this farm and erected a hotel on it which he carried on for some time. His successors were Charles Guth, Gideon Guth, Alexander Loder, Josiah Strauss, and Jonas Renninger.

In 1840 Gideon Guth started a general store and conducted it several years.

tian acquired the property in 1857, and in 1877 put up an addition at the west end. His wife was a daughter of Steininger. He conducted the stand from 1871 to 1889, then G. A. Gaumer took possession, and he has carried it on since then. His wife is a daughter of Col. Bastian.

CEDARVILLE.—Before 1800, the site of this village was owned by the Knauss family. In 1852 the land was owned by Charles Mertz (who carried on the Haines mill for a number of years), and about 1858 he laid off and sold building lots which led to the formation of a village at this point and came to be called after the creek. In 1884 it contained twenty dwellings.

The prospective enlargement of the City of Allentown has been extended to Cedarville.

SIEGER HOMESTEAD, HOFFMANSVILLE.

A blacksmith shop was started in 1858. The first machine-shop was erected in 1866 by Thomas Wenner; and a second was put up in 1873.

In 1869, certain German Baptists established a frame church here and carried on a religious organization until 1901; and they had a small cemetery connected with the church. Since 1905 this building has been owned by Chester P. Wenner and used by him for storing farm implements.

Half-Way House was established by one Steininger in 1812 in the east end of a stone building on the road from Allentown to Fogelsville, "mid-way," as its name indicates, and he conducted a hotel business for many years. Col. D. H. Bas-

Thirty-sixth street would be, if laid out, at the Haines Mill; and Hamilton street would follow the line of the village thoroughfare.

Postoffice.—A postoffice was established in the village in 1888. The citizens had suggested the name of Cedarville to the Department but this was refused; after some correspondence, the department peremptorily proposed the name of Cetronia and this was accepted. Since then, the locality has been sometimes called by that name. The postmasters were Solomon Dorney, H. O. Weaver, till his death (son-in-law of Dorney) and Peter Weaver (grand-son of Dorney). It was discontinued in 1907 upon the establishment of the R. F. D., through this section of territory.

A general store was carried on by the post-masters. It is continued by Peter Weaver in the name of his father's estate.

A hotel was started in 1855 by James A. Yeager, and his successors have been Henry Herbine, Henry Gilbert, Elias George, Owen Kern, and John Morrow.

Charles A., Daniel A., and Edwin H. Muse, sons of Edwin (who at the age of 76 years is the oldest survivor now at Cedarville), established a dumb-waiter works in the village in 1909 and put up a superior three-story building where they have since manufactured upwards of 400 waiters for household use and forwarded them to various places such as Allentown, Bethlehem, Catasauqua, Tamaqua, Harrisburg. When not in use, it is concealed beneath the floor where it is held in place by a self-acting spring; but when in use, the spring is released by a slender iron rod and the waiter ascends automatically.

John Knappenberger started a blacksmith-shop here, at the cross-roads in 1860 (after having carried on the business for several years nearby), and he continued it for twenty years. He was succeeded by his son, Milton, from 1880 to 1909, and his grandson Oliver from 1909 to the present time.

The dwellings in that community number 100 with an estimated population of 500.

A village began to be formed a short distance west of Cedarville about 1900, and in 1913 it contained 50 dwellings. It is called Cetronia.

In 1905 a band was organized by William Kiebach, Edward Dorney, and Edward Glick, with 30 musicians, mostly from the village, and in 1908 they erected a frame hall for their meetings and practice.

Cedar Creek Church is situated in Cedarville, near the cross roads. It is a two-story brick structure, built in 1855 at a cost of $5,000 by members of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations, and rebuilt by them in 1886. The steeple is 113 feet high. It is equipped with a pipe organ and heated by hot air heaters in the basement. The capacity of the auditorium is 600. The membership is about 500, the Lutheran being more than half. Five acres of ground are connected with the church where a burying ground has been established, and the bodies of six veteran soldiers have been buried in it:

John Fahringer	Laurence Keck
Henry Hartzell	Ogden Lewis
Daniel Heimbach	James A. Yeager

The pastors have been:

Lutheran.	Reformed.
Jeremiah Schindel	Joseph Dubs, 1855-67
William Rath	Edwin J. Fogel,
Owen Leopold	1867-1911.
Elmer Leopold (son)	Franklin Guth, 1911-14
P. A. Behler, 1910-13

A Sunday school has been conducted in the basement since 1855.

Evangelical Church.—In 1855, members of the Albright Evangelical Association secured a lot of ground from Abraham Knauss and erected a small brick building costing $3,000, which formed a charge with Texas, Wescosville, and Macungie.

Grace Church.—The Evangelical Association erected a one-story frame building in 1896 for religious services, nearly opposite the Union Church. The dimensions are 40 feet along the road by a depth of 20 feet. The congregation has been small.

Poultry Farm.—In 1909 Col. Harry C. Trexler, of Allentown, embarked in the business of conducting a poultry farm in this township, locating it on 19 acres of land along the northerly side of Cedar creek, on the road to Fogelsville, opposite the Union church, and this has since been under the successful management of David Kehm. In the fall of 1913, the poultry comprised about 2,500 chickens (Leghorn and White-Rock), 300 guinea fowl, 200 turkeys, 150 ducks, 80 English pheasants, and 6 geese, and numerous Antwerp pigeons. There were several hundred capons, each weighing upwards of two pounds, and some having reached 14 pounds.

DORNEYSVILLE is situated about a mile east of Cedarville at a prominent cross-roads, which is a mile southwest of Allentown. A hotel was established here at a very early period by Peter Dorney and conducted by him and his sons until 1871 and the business led to the formation of a small village. Their successors were Edwin Muse, Nathan Frederick, David Gilbert and James A. Yeager, the last named from 1875 to 1897; and since then Yeager's son, Tilghman. The place includes five dwellings, but no store nor industry of any kind.

Dorney Park.—Dorney Park was founded by Solomon Dorney about 1860. He owned several hundred acres of land in the southern extremity of South Whitehall township, along Cedar creek, and when he sold his farm, reserved about fifteen acres (including the mansion-house), for himself for the purpose of establishing a "trout-hatchery." He constructed a number of trout ponds and stocked them with great quantities of trout, and within ten years he developed an extensive business, sending trout to all parts of the country, more especially to the markets at Philadelphia and New York, and realizing from $1.00 to $1.50 a pound. The place came to have a wonderful reputation for trout-fishing, and during the season many fishermen went there from all parts of eastern Pennsylvania.

About 1870, Mr. Dorney secured a hotel license and then directed his attention more towards the development of a park for picnics and amusements of all kinds. He put up the necessary buildings and it soon came to be a very popular resort during the Summer. Excursions by Sunday schools and societies of all kinds were largely patronized, more especially after a railway to the place was constructed to facilitate convenient access. All the improvements there for the accommodation of the numerous patrons and the encouragement of recreation and pleasure, cost upwards of $75,000. Summer boarders from all parts of the country found satisfactory entertainment. Naturally as the park feature was developed, the hatchery came to be discontinued. The swimming-pool was a very attractive part of the enterprise, said to have been the largest artificial pond for this purpose in the world.

Charles A. Dorney, brother of the park proprietor, constructed a trolley line from Allentown to the place at great expense and this was extended to Kutztown where it came to be connected with a similar line from Reading. The trolley company then purchased the park in 1900 and has since operated it in connection with the railway. It still continues to be a popular resort.

Dorney Bakery was established in 1878 by Frank T. Dorney who has conducted it since. He employs four people, and has two teams on the road.

GRIESEMERVILLE.—In 1806, Abraham Griesemer built a tavern here and carried it on for many years. He was succeeded by his son and grandson, both named Solomon, who conducted the place until 1876; and then by the second Solomon's son, David Griesemer. In 1883, another son, Alfred, became the owner and he still has the property, being in the family name for 175 years. The original farm contained 500 acres, and included the fair grounds, the Greenwood cemeteries, and the Allentown hospital grounds. The first building was of log; the second of stone and log, which was torn down in 1860; and the third is three-story brick.

A tannery was established in 1829 by Peter Ludwig who operated it for a considerable time; and it was subsequently carried on by his sons, Solomon and Charles. In 1884 the owner was William Young, of Allentown.

GREENAWALD, a suburb of Allentown, is in the township along the Slatington trolley line. It was established by A. M. Greenawald who located there on a forty-seven-acre farm in 1882, and subsequently increased his real estate holdings until he owned 180 acres; and a part of this land he laid out in building lots. Since 1882 fifteen substantial dwellings have been erected; among them is the fine residence of Mr. Greenawald (built in 1911), the South Whitehall Beneficial Association Hall (built in 1911), the Alfred Lawfer store (the first business place), the D. D. Trexler and Clinton Blose cement block residences, and the F. O. Messinger bungalow (built in 1912). The village has 25 dwellings and is growing rapidly. A union chapel was organized there in the Fall of 1912 by the following persons: A. M. Greenawald, C. Sittler, Charles Albright, Solomon Fries and Rev. P. A. Behler. A public schoolhouse known as "Kratzer's," is two squares away.

SHERERSVILLE is situated near the northeastern line of the township, on the Jordan creek, and adjoins the City of Allentown at the extremity of North Eighteenth street. The first settler here was Daniel Roth in 1737. Gottfried Knauss settled here in 1747 and in 1769 built a stone house, recently demolished. The land was owned by Judge Peter Rhoads from 1778 to 1814 and by his son John from 1814 to 1837. A hotel was established here in 1837 by John Sherer, after whom the village took its name, and he carried on the business for many years. He was succeeded by his son, Joseph, Henry Roth, Henry Schwentzer, Granville Gernert, Silas Seagreaves, Charles Hoch, and Walter S. Schneck. The last-named having died in possession, his widow has continued the business until now. The property includes eight acres of land.

SEIPLE'S STATION was established as a shipping point when the C. & F. R. R. was opened for traffic in 1857. Jacob Seipel erected a brick house there, near the township line, and securing a license for a hotel he carried on the business until after 1884. He was succeeded by Madison Strauss, Henry Kern, Joseph Metzger, William A. Wieder, Henry Zeffass, William Freyman, and Lewis Steckel, the last-named since 1912. Wieder secured a postoffice and officiated as the first postmaster from 1887 to 1890 when he removed to Whitehall (Cementon). In 1913 the village had 12 dwellings with a population, but no store.

MECHANICSVILLE is situated near the northeast corner of the township. The first dwelling was put up by John Scherer about the year 1829 on a part of the old Peter Moyer farm, having been a log house which afterward became the property of Samuel Troxell.

In 1850, John Scheetz established a large carriage factory, soon built up a large trade, and came to employ a number of mechanics from which the village took its name. Some years later another factory was started by Paul Kratzer and this has been continued to the present time by Levi Klotz, and Alfred J. Harmony; and since 1890 by Henry A. Albright, who has employed from three to six hands.

In 1849 John Minnich erected a hotel, and soon afterwards also started a general store, which he conducted together for many years. Succeeding proprietors were Victor B. Schwartz, Thomas Smith, Charles Culp, Lewis Steckel, and Clarius Ritter, and since 1910, John C. Moyer.

In 1913, the village contained about 20 dwellings and 100 population.

sembled at only a few places, gushing out thence in greater volume and force. This range of hills is too low to furnish such supplies of water, but running as they do with the Blue mountains, it may be supposed that the few springs of the dry land come from the mountains and are here raised through subterranean canals, as by an elbowed-pipe."

OLDEST HOUSE IN COUNTY.—The oldest dwelling-house in Lehigh county is situated in OLDEST HOUSE IN LEHIGH COUNTY, BUILT BY PETET TROXELL, IN 1744.

BIG SPRING.—The following extract is taken from "Travels in the Confederation," 1783-84, by Johann David Schoepf, to show the early recognition of a great natural curiosity in this township. This was subsequently known for many years as Schantz's Spring, and in 1898 came to be the chief water-supply of the City of Allentown:

"Three miles from Allentown is the famous curiosity of the region, the so-called 'Big Spring,' which breaks out of the earth in a vein large as a man's leg and within the first hundred rods of its course sets three mills going. It appears that in this hilly and dry country the water is assembled at a point 500 feet from a turn in the public road before passing under the "Iron Bridge" on the C. & F. R. R. It is a two-story stone building, 30 feet front by 21 feet deep, with an attic, erected by Peter Troxell in 1744. The accompanying illustration shows its present appearance. A commodious hearth occupied a large part of the kitchen and in its removal some years ago the mantelpiece was found to contain the figures "1744." The floors are of oak, and several of the small deep-seated windows still have the original oaken frames. Some of the original latches are still on the doors.

The builder was one of the first settlers of the township, and in the early times his name was spelled variously, as Drachsel, Draxel, Droxel, Trachsel, Traxel, and Troxel. He was a native of Switzerland and emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1733, when 42 years old. He settled at Egypt in 1734, the birth of a son being mentioned in the Reformed church records of that place in that year, and he was a deacon in 1737. In the year 1743 he secured two tracts of land containing 100 acres, of which he then had possession, and in 1754 he borrowed £294 from Lynford Lardner, placing a mortgage on the property for security, and there the land is described as "situtural work is of heavy oak timber, all in a fine state of preservation.

BLUMER HISTORIC HOME.—Rev. Abraham Blumer was a distinguished divine who lived in South Whitehall for many years, and about 1785 erected a fine, two-story stone mansion which is still standing in a good state of preservation a short distance north of the "Iron Bridge" on the C. & L. R. R. It is readily recognized by five tall ever-green trees before it and by the ornamental windows at either end, and this he occupied until his decease in 1822 at the age of 85 years.

TROXELL BARN, BUILT 1806.

ated on a branch of Lehi creek, called Indian creek."

In 1816, Peter Troxell (Jr.) conveyed a tract of 194 acres, including the old mansion to his sons, Daniel and Peter, who made partition of the property in 1817 and Daniel took the homestead. A grandson, Daniel, became the owner in 1840, and he in 1854 sold it to Monelius Minnich, who is the present owner.

A most remarkable barn with stone gable ends is on the property, built by Peter Troxell, Jr., in 1806. Its dimensions are 74 feet long and 46 feet deep. On the front, there are 14 windows above the 8-foot overshoot; and in the ends, 16 long narrow windows for ventilation. The walls are two feet thick; the structure of the roof is of heavy oak timber, all in a fine state of preservation. Rev. Blumer was born in Switzerland in 1736, and lived to become one of the most prominent clergymen of the Reformed church in its early history in America. He was matriculated at Basel in 1754, and ordained in 1756. After a distinguished career of 15 years, he emigrated to New York in 1771, and appearing before the Coetus, he was selected for the charge in Pennsylvania which comprised four congregations, Egypt, Jordan, Schlosser's (Unionville), and Allentown. Until 1785, he lived in the parsonage of this charge, located in Moyer's Valley, but having then purchased a farm of 195 acres from Bartholomew Huber, he soon afterward built the house mentioned and moved into it. He continued to preach in this charge for thirty years until 1801, when he retired from the ministry.

CHAPTER XLIII.

UPPER MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP.

BY REV. FRANK P. LAROS.

ERECTION.

Macungie township was divided into Upper and Lower Macungie May 3, 1832. The township of Upper Macungie, under this division, is bounded on the northeast by South Whitehall, on the southeast by Lower Macungie, on the north and northwest by Lowhill and Weisenberg, and on the southwest by Berks county. The area of the township is twenty-four and one-half square miles, or fifteen thousand, six hundred, and eighty acres. It is well populated. The population for the various decades is as follows: 1840—1,769; 1870—3,061; 1880—3,023; 1890—2,511; 1900, 2,081; 1910, 2,609.

LAND WARRANTS.—Following is a list of the land warrants in this township:

	Acres.
Casper Blyler, April 29, 1746,	180
Conrad Bean, Aug. 16, 1756,	45
John Baar, Jan. 3, 1771,	73
Jacob Eagner, May 8, 1750,	153
Andrew Eisenhart, Dec. 9, 1767,	237
Andrew Eisenhart, Jan. 17, 1769,	112
George Free, March 4, 1745,	169
Nicholas Free, Aug. 30, 1746,	86
Christian Gorr, March 1, 1744,	103
Christian Gorr, Jan. 17, 1745,	70
Jacob Hoenberger, Sept. 12, 1744,	135
George Hoffman, Jan. 6, 1753,	27
Adam Heberly, Jan. 9, 1788,	116
Leonard Heychler, March 7, 1766,	27
John Jarrett, Oct. 26, 1752,	46
Edward Jarrett, April 12, 1771,	90
Jacob Koller, Jr., Feb. 20, 1745,	67
Jacob Koller, Jr., Feb. 20, 1745,	50
Philip Kebler, Feb. 28, 1754,	45
George Kebler, June 4, 1754,	154
George Kerr, May 2, 1770,	44
George Moltz, Feb. 15, 1734,	78
George Mayne, July 18, 1750,	25
John George Miller, Feb. 28, 1759	30
Henry Nobloch, Aug. 5, 1765,	46
John Adam Overcast, April 11, 1753, ...	151
John Reis, April 25, 1750,	34
George Rupp, March 25, 1786,	145
Caspar Rels, March 13, 1752,	121
Anthony Rissell, June 7, 1753,	125

Valentine Shick, Sept. 4, 1745,	77
Jacob Shoemaker, Nov. 18, 1746,	30
Jacob Strong, Aug. 10, 1752,	78
Frederick Sikes, April 11, 1753,	33
Frederick Seitz, June 15, 1757,	20
Philip Shearer, Sept. 28, 1765,	34
Martin Speigle, Nov. 11, 1767,	48
Peter Trexler, Aug. 15, 1749,	96
Godfreidt Tippendewer, Aug. 22, 1754, .	200
Jacob Wagoner, Nov. 23, 1752,	39
Matthias Weaver, Dec. 10, 1792,	7
Jacob Witchner, Nov. 16, 1767,	19

PIONEER SETTLERS.—It is difficult to ascertain the names of those who first took possession of the land, as many of the old deeds cannot be found and the present owners are unable to furnish the data. The earliest grant of land of which there appears to be any record is that of George Moltz who received a warrant dated Feb. 15, 1734, for seventy acres.

A warrant, dated Aug. 23, 1735, for a certain tract of land situated near Maxatawny, containing two hundred acres, with the usual allowance of six acres for roads, was granted to Stephen Starlan; but not having complied with the conditions therein specified, upon application a warrant for the same tract, dated March 14, 1742, was granted to George Haan. John Lichtenwallner, the ancestor of the Lichtenwalners, took possession of the tract of two hundred acres, to whom a patent of confirmation was issued, dated May 4, 1752, for the consideration of thirty-one pounds. This tract, together with three other contiguous tracts, containing in all four hundred and thirteen acres and three-quarters, John Lichtenwalner, the elder, granted unto his son, John, by deed dated March 15, 1765, who died intestate in 1796, and left real estate amounting to nine hundred and fifty-two acres, valued at five thousand and ninety pounds, which was equally divided among his ten children,—John, George, Peter, Christopher, Jacob, Catharine, married to Mathias Leibelsberger; Ann; Mary, married to George Schaeffer; Barbara, married to Philip Leibelsberger; Margaret; and Magdalena.

John accepted the two farms lying about half a mile west of Fogelsville. Upon his death they passed into the hands of his son, John, who bequeathed them to his two sons, John H. and William C. Lichtenwalner. The homestead of the Lichtenwalner family is now in the possession of Peter R. Bear, Esq. Upon the death of William C. Lichtenwalner, his farm passed into the hands of his widow and children.

After the youngest child had become of age, according to the stipulation of the will of William Lichtenwalner, the farm was sold. On Dec. 9, 1899, Jonas Moyer bought the farm from the Lichtenwalner estate. After the death of Jonas Moyer, February, 1891, by the provision of his will it passed into the possession of his son, Frank. At the death of Frank Moyer, Aug. 13, 1903, who died intestate, the farm became the property of his brothers, Alfred and Richard Moyer. Alfred Moyer died the 18th of January, and having died intestate, the farm became the property of his brother, Richard Moyer, in whose possession the farm is at this time.

Moyer's land at Fogelsville was among the earliest settled. On Aug. 23, 1735, a warrant was issued to John Michael Koontz, for one hundred and fifty acres, and surveyed Sept. 6, 1736; but failing to comply with the conditions thereof, "sold and assigned his right, if any he had, to Abraham Yeakle, of Macongy," who had it surveyed by Edward Scull, Sept. 7, 1736.

Yeakle entered upon it and improved it, and sold it to Hans Jacob Meyer (Moyer), May 10, 1737. Another tract of land containing forty-nine acres and eighty-four perches, in pursuance of a warrant dated Oct. 12, 1738, was surveyed to Hans Jacob Meyer, Nov. 14, 1739. These two tracts Meyer occupied as one plantation or farm, which he granted to his eldest son, Nicholas, by deed dated June 22, 1761. In 1783 Nicholas Meyer died, and it now became the property of his son, Jacob. Solomon and Daniel Moyer inherited the farm from Jacob, their uncle, and upon the death of Solomon Moyer it passed into the possession of Daniel Moyer. Jacob Moyer died the 8th of March, 1852. He was buried in a private burial ground on his farm. This farm is now in possession of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company.

The farm now in possession of Robert A. Reichard, of Allentown, and formerly owned by Levi Kramlich, known as the Keck farm, containing one hundred and forty acres, was warranted April 30, 1740, to Balthazer Yeakle. Conrad Keck received a patent for it, Feb. 21, 1812. Upon his death it passed into the possession of his son, John, who died in 1847, when his oldest son, Ephraim, purchased the property, and sold it the same year to Joseph Miller.

Richard Hockley, a merchant of Philadelphia, received a warrant dated Feb. 8, 1742, for a tract of land containing four hundred acres, situated near Fogelsville, formerly the properties of the Mohrs, and the property of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. This tract was sold by Richard Hockley to Richard Johnson, of Germantown, Jan. 11, 1743. William Morry, of Upper Saucon, purchased the land from Johnson, in 1749. After Morry's death his sons, Jacob and William, became the owners. On Dec. 29, 1760, Herman Mohr, the ancestor of the Mohrs, purchased the 400-acre tract for five hundred and fifty pounds. Nicholas and Herman, sons of Herman Mohr, received the estate upon the death of their father in 1777, except twenty acres, which was given to his son, John. Herman Mohr had nine sons: Nicholas, Herman, Frederick, John, Jacob, Henry, Peter, William, and Christopher. Before any division of the property was made Nicholas died, being drowned when attempting to ford the Brandywine in a freshet during the War of the Revolution. He was engaged in the wagon-service to provision the Continental Army in response to a requisition from Washington, when only eighteen years of age. His brother, Herman, went to search for his body, but found only a few bags of grain which had lodged in the branches of a tree. This occurred in 1777, shortly before the army went into winter quarters at Valley Forge. The undivided half of the farm was bought by his brother, Henry, for fifteen hundred pounds.

Philipp Gabriel Fogel, the ancestor of the Fogel family, was one of the early settlers, having landed at Philadelphia, in 1731. A sketch of the family follows in the second volume of the county history.

Egidius Grim purchased between seven and eight hundred acres of land in the western part of the township, in the vicinity of the Ziegel's church. A patent deed from the proprietaries of Pennsylvania for three hundred and fifty acres is dated Feb. 14, 1743. The tract was bequeathed in 1760, to his two sons, Jacob and Heinrich, the former receiving two-thirds and the latter one-third of the tract. In 1793, Heinrich Grim left to his son, Jacob, father of Sem Grim, who resided at Allentown, a tract "containing two hundred and sixty acres and thirty-three perches, together with all the buildings, which was valued at that time at eight hundred and fifty pounds.

Jacob Schwartz received a warrant dated Feb. 3, 1768, for a tract of land near Trexlertown, containing one hundred and fifty acres. His son, Isaac, purchased the property in 1792. Jacob, son of Isaac Schwartz, came into the possession of the farm upon his father's death. When Jacob Schwartz died the property passed into the hands of his son, Henry, who sold it to George S. Albright. It is now in the possession of Peter Albright, the son of George S. Albright.

George Rupp, the ancestor of the Rups, came from Germany in 1750 and settled near the present village of Chapman's, on a farm containing several hundred acres. He was married Jan. 23, 1750, to Ursula von Peterholtz. The old family Bible now in the possession of Lewis Rupp, one of the descendants, contains the name of Herman Rupp, a son of George, who was born in the township, Nov. 7, 1756, and was married to Barbara, daughter of Michael Biery. Herman Rupp had one son, Jacob, who was born July 13, 1787. He was married to Polly Fogel, and had three sons, Herman, Benjamin, and Tilghman, and three daughters: Sallie, married to John Gibbons, a lawyer; Mary, married to David Schall; Eliza, married to Victor Blumer. The old home of Jacob Rupp was for a number of years in the possession of Joseph Rupp. It was sold by him to Henry Fenstermacher.

George Ludwig Breinig, whose descendants are among the most prosperous and esteemed in the township, came from Germany, and purchased the farm at Breinigsville, now in the possession of Philip Moatz. He was born Jan. 31, 1733, and died May 12, 1812, aged 79 years, and 12 days. His wife Christiana, was born July 8, 1734, and died Oct. 31, 1816, aged 82 years, 3 months, and 23 days. Their remains are buried in the cemetery of the Lehigh church. They had three sons: George, Peter, and Jacob, and several daughters.

Upon the death of his father, George received the old homestead, and engaged in farming. He was born June 7, 1764, and died April 20, 1823, aged 53 years, 10 months, and 13 days. He was married to Anna Elizabeth Egner, who died in 1848, aged 81 years.

George Breinig had three sons and one daughter. George, who moved to Hanover township; Benjamin, who settled in Whitehall; Jesse, who died at Breinigsville. Jesse Breinig had two daughters. One died young and the other became the wife of Dr. David Moser, whose two children resided in Ohio. Jacob, son of George Ludwig Breinig, came into the possession of the two tracts containing about two hundred acres, now the property of William and Charles Breinig. Jacob was born May 27, 1767, and died March 16, 1823, aged 55 years, 9 months, and 17 days. He was married to Barbara, daughter of John Butz, who died Dec. 30, 1857, aged 82 years, 11 months, and 20 days. There were four sons and three daughters born to them: John, William, Jonathan, Jacob, Elizabeth, married to Nathan Grim; Hettie, married to Jacob Shimer, of Williams township, Northampton county; Polly, who became the wife of Solomon Fogel. Jacob, the oldest son, resided on the old homestead, near Breinigsville, until his death. The farm is now in the possession of his son, William.

Peter, the youngest son of George Ludwig Breinig, became the owner of a farm containing one hundred and twenty acres, which is now the property of the Jonathan L. Butz estate. He built the tavern in Breinigsville, and carried on the hotel business for some years. He was born Feb. 22, 1771. In 1792 he was married to Magdalena Egner; they had four sons, Peter, Jacob, Isaac, and David, and several daughters. Jacob and Isaac moved to Allentown. Their descendants reside there still. David was a physician and moved to New York, where he died. Peter is the father of Thomas C. and Dr. P. H. Breinig, deceased, formerly of Bethlehem. The elder Peter Breinig died Dec. 8, 1827, aged 56 years, 9 months, and 16 days, and lies buried at the Lehigh church.

Wilhelm Heintz (Haines), came from Germany in 1751, when he was about eighteen years of age, and settled near Trexlertown, where he soon purchased about two hundred acres of land, some of which was formerly in the possession of Benjamin Haines, now the property of Horace Lichtenwalner. He was married to Barbara Wink. There were six sons and two daughters born to them: William, Jacob, George, John, Peter, Adam, Sarah, married to John Koch; and Maria, married to a Bechtel, and, upon his death, became the wife of Erdel. The land now in the possession of William Yoder was also the property of Wilhelm Haines. The hotel property formerly owned by William Yoder, now the property of H. W. Haring, was also owned by Haines. It was built by Jeremiah Trexler, and enlarged by Benjamin Haines. The elder Haines (Wilhelm) also purchased two farms, one containing one hundred and thirty acres, and the other one hundred acres, which passed into the hands of his children, the one farm becoming the property of Jacob Steininger, now owned by E. M. N. Minnich, and the other the property of Eli Lichtenwalner. Wilhelm Haines was one of the building committee of the Trexlertown church, the cornerstone of which was laid in 1784. He was buried in the cemetery adjoining.

Peter Haines, one of the sons of Wilhelm Haines, was born Aug. 29, 1765. He purchased a tract of six acres and thirty perches of land near Trexlertown, in 1798, from his father, for four dollars, where he first lived. He was married to Maria Barbara, daughter of Gottlieb Becker, March 25, 1799. He died Oct. 5, 1829, aged 64 years, 1 month, and 6 days.

Daniel Schmoyer purchased a tract of land containing two hundred acres and three perches, which is now in the possession of Samuel Butz, Esq., of Allentown. The deed is dated May 1, 1798, and was given them by Caspar Wistar Haines and Catherine Haines, of Germantown. This was a part of a tract containing nine hundred and fifty acres, which Caspar Wistar, of Germantown, had patented Sept. 1, 1729, and left to his daughter, Margaret Haines, and in 1793 left by her last will and testament to her four children: Caspar Wistar Haines, Catherine Haines, Josiah Haines, and Reuben Haines. The farm is situated about a mile northeast of Breinigsville.

Hon. Herman Rupp was the son of Jacob Rupp, whose grandfather came from Germany. He was born in Upper Macungie, near Ruppsville, where George Rupp, the ancestor of the Ruppss, had settled.

Herman Rupp was popular among all classes and was called to fill various positions of trust. He served as brigadier-general of the militia of Pennsylvania from 1849 to 1859. The Allentown Democrat, in an obituary notice of him, published a few days after Mr. Rupp's death, contained the following: "He was a man of many friends and widely known. He was universally esteemed for his kind and generous disposition and fine social qualities. He was a man who formed strong ties of friendship, and was very popular among all classes of people... He was a farmer by occupation, and owned one of the finest plantations in his township. He was a public-spirited citizen, and ever took a deep interest in politics. An ardent Democrat by profession, he always followed the fortunes of his party, and on several occasions shared its honors. He was elected to the lower House of the Legislature for the sessions of 1855-56-57, and performed his duties with and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. Besides the above he frequently held other positions of honor and responsibility, at the time of his death being one of the justices of his township. He was often called upon to take charge of important trusts, and frequently appointed by the court to serve as road-viewer and in similar capacities, in which his sound judgment was called into requisition. He maintained a high social position, and from his habits of industry and general demeanor so built himself up in the esteem of the people as to create a high respect for his character as an intelligent and honest man and valuable citizen." He died Aug. 8, 1877, and brought his age to about 60 years. His son, Joseph C. Rupp, was recorder of deeds for Lehigh county, 1883-1886.

TAX LIST OF MACUNGIE TOWNSHIP, 1762.

Mathias Riessel, Collector.

	£		£
Jacob Acker,	10	Andreas Kohler, ...	4
Joseph Albrecht, ..	24	Henry Knobloch, ..	7
John Albrecht,	22	John Klein,	8
Ludwig Andrew, ..	12	Adam Klein,	7
Jacob Bear,	6	Valentine Kayser,...	6
Adam Brauss,	20	Jacob Kuhns' wid-
Christopher Buchert,	5	ow,	12
Adam George Bortz,	11	Thomas Kutz,	18
Melchert Bear,	24	Frederick Kehler, .	7
John Bear,	14	Dewald Kuntz,	8
George Brown,	4	Laurence Kenly, ...	20
George Beckbrod,..	4	Henry Kuhns,	4
Michael Basler,	5	Michael Kiechly, ...	19
Henry Desh,	6	France Kühll,	4
John Dangel,	9	Lewis Klotz, Esq.,..	20
Adam Desh,	10	David Kern,	4
Godfried Dieffen-		Matthias Ludwig,...	20
derfer,	7	Ludwig Larash,	11
Jacob Derson,	4	John Landauer,	6
John Dieffen-		Ludwig Merkley, ..	8
derfer,	6	Leonard Meyer,	18
John Eigner,	12	Nichs. Meyer,	24
Matthias Eigner, ..	12	Herman Moor,	26
George Edelman, ...	6	Anthony Moll,	9
Jacob Eckman,	7	Christopher Miller,
Andrew Eisonhard,.	14	Jr.,	0
John Folk,	6	Bartholome Miller, .	18
Melchert Fogelman,	7	Burkhard Moser, ..	10
Adam Fisher,	5	John Merkel,	20
John Fogel,	22	Dewald Mechlin, ...	18
Jacob Fogel,	10	Peter Mechlin,	6
Jacob Fogelsang,...	4	George Miller,	5
Andreas Fetzer, ...	7	George Neidig,	6
Simon Fries,	7	Michael Oberkirsch,	6
Jacob Grim,	20	Frederick Romich, .	33
Dietrich Gommer,..	22	Christian Ruth,	26
Henry Geiss,	8	John Reis,	18
George Gorr,	18	George Rupp (Broke
Leonard Groninger,	6	a leg),	0
George Good, Jr., .	15	Matthias Riessel, ...	13
Martin Ginkinger,..	20	George Rick,	4
George Hetler,	4	Adam Road,	6
Peter Haas,	15	Anthony Rischel, ..	4
Simon Hayn,	15	Michael Rischel's
David Haylin,	9	widow,	22
John Haylin,	6	Ludwig Rischel, ...	6
Matthias Haylin, ..	6	Daniel Shmyer, ...	10
George Hagely,	9	George Schreiniere,	6
Barthol Huber, ...	6	Michael Stocker, ..	7
Peter Haft,	6	Frederick Shaffer, ..	15
Christian Haysler,..	5	Bernard Steinway, .	4
William Hayntz, ...	18	Yost Schwalb,	6
Adam Haberle,	10	Jacob Shlauch,	22
Philip Hammel,	7	Bernard Smith,	16
Philip Hager,	4	Henry Shad,	26
Michael Henninger,	8	Melchert Smith, ...	30
Jacob Herman,	18	George Steininger, .	20
Leonard Heiser, ..	6	Melchert Seip,	6
Isaac Jearret,	12	Christopher Stedler,	32
John Jearret,	24	Frederick Spiegel, .	4
Edward Jearret,	11	Jacob Schwartz,	13
Philip Jearret,	6	Frederick Seits, ...	16
Jacob Kimmel,	6	Philip Shmyer,	4
Peter Kayser,	24	Baltzer, Smith,	22

Jacob Sutter,	4	Stephen Wunder, ..	7	Jacob Krim, Jr.	Frederick Romig
Christian Syder, ...	8	Jacob Wagner,	16	John Kline	Philip Rutt
Michael Shmyer, ..	15	Michael Warmkes-		Nicholas Kline	Matthias Riffle
Christopher Smith, ..	5	sel,	6	Michael Kame	George Reiss
Jacob Shmyer,	12	Philip Walther, ...	14	Jacob Kieser	Daniel Reish
Peter Trexler, Sr., ..	60	Henry Wetzel,	12	Henry Knappenberger	George Rishel
Jacob Tanner,	14	John Weaver,	6	Peter Kieser, Jr.	Frederick Rup
Abraham Tanner, ..	6	Mathias Wick,	4	Conrad Knappenberger	Leonard Rishel
John Trexler,	30	John Wetzel,	22	Andrew Koller	Adam G. Scip
Peter Trexler, Jr., ..	13	Melchart Ziegler, ..	9	Duwald Kuntz, Jr.	John Smith
Daniel Torney, ...	17	Joseph Zib,	6	Duwald Kuntz	Jacob Struby
George Wagner, ...	6			Leonard Koon	Peter Smith

Singlemen.

Philip Arnold.	John Lichtenwalner.
Adam Braus.	John Romich.
Jacob Bear.	Christian Ruth.
Peter Geiss.	George Schlicher.
Valentine Hock.	Philip Shaffer.
Samuel Jearet.	Michael Stahl.
Leonard Kuhn.	Abraham Schwartz.

Assessment made by the commissioners of Northampton county, at Easton, Dec. 27, 1781, of the township of Macungie:

John Albrecht	George Graber	David Litzweiler	Henry Stettler
Jacob Acker	Deeter Gaumer	Rudolph Larrosh	George Steinger
Jacob Boskirk	Henry Gaumer	Nicholas Litteroch	Jacob Shankwald
Conrad Bry	Frederick Gaumer	Matthias Ludwig	Valentine Shaffer
Adam Bare	Casper Gann.	John Muth	Michael Shaffer
Henry Bower	Casimer Grenemeyer	Leonard Meyer	George Shaffer
Jacob P. Bare	Daniel Groninger	Leonard Miller	Jacob Swartz
John Bare	Henry Geiss	Peter Miller	Philip Swartz
Widow Bare	Henry Gnoblock	Valentine Miller	Jacob Stephen
Henry Brobst	John Gaumer	Jacob Mertz	Philip Steinmetz
Jacob Bare	Peter Garies	John Merckle	Adam Stephen
George Braus	Nicholas Gebhard	Stofle Merckle	Peter Slosser
Adam Braus	Peter Hammel	Herman Moor	William Smith
George Breinig	William Haintz	Jacob Meyer	Michael Stener
Adam Bortz	Jacob Herman	John Moor	Peter Trexler
Peter Butz	Peter Haas	Jacob Moor	Peter Trexler, Jr.
John Butz	John Haas	Henry Moor	John Trexler
Michael Berry	Adam Heberly	Nicholas Meyer	John Trexler, Jr.
Sini Berry	Henry Haas	Jacob Meyer	Jeremiah Trexler
Peter Crack	Simon Hein	Christian Miller	Peter Trexler
Conrad Crack	John Heinly	Andrew Miller	Daniel Torney
John Diess	John Heinly, Jr.	Nicholas Miller	John Torney
Bastain Druckemiller	Peter Haff	Peter Mattern	John Wetzel
Gottfrey Dieffendorfer	John Held	Henry Mattern	Iraan Warmhessel
John Dieffendorfer	Henry Heisland	Ludwig Meckelly	Matthias Westgo
Jacob Danner	George Heninger	John Morser	Jacob Wagner
Widow Danckles	George Hepler	Burghard Meinert	George Wolbert
Adam Dish	Leonard Heuchel	Frederick Mabus	Philip Walter
John Dubler	Michael Hisgy	George Morgan	Christian Weaver
Martin Dormeyer	Nicholas Hun	Lawrence Miller	Matthias Weaver
Martin Dul	Herman Hartman	Conrad Meitzler	Jacob Weaver
George Dutt	Michael Yiesly	Henry Romig	John Wertz
Dewalt Duss	Edward Jarret	Jacob Romig	Philip Ziegler
Andrew Eisenhard	Isaac Jarret	John Romig	George Zimmerman
Adam Epler	Daniel Hughes	Frederick Romig, Jr.	Reuben Haintz
Henry Eigner	Cornelius Hughes	George Rup	Andrew Fitzger
George Fetzer	Daniel Knowse	Christian Ruth	Jacob Biessel
Christian Fisher	Daniel Knowse, Jr.
Thomas Flexer	Henry Koch.
Thomas Fermer	George Korr
Peter Fuchs	Lawrence Keenly	John Finch	John Kiesser
John Fogle	Jacob Kechel	John Hunberger	Borriet Honig
Peter Fink	Peter Keiser	Enos Evan	Michael Hobach
George Fetterman	Valentine Keiser	Michael Muhley	George Hitteler
John Gunewold	Henry Krim	Matthias Gaumer	Herman Rupp
		Henry Muylar	Melchior Riffle

Single Freeman.

Nicholas Swabenhouser
John Koller
Philip Jacob Bare
Jacob Herman
Peter Moore

Nicholas Meyer
Deeter Danner
John Forret
Peter Geiss
Henry Finch

Nicholas Geiss
Charles Gachenbach, Jr.
Peter Geiss
Peter Haas
John Haas

Daniel Karr
Jacob Klein
Peter Peter
George Kemmerer
Michael Kim

Reuben Haintz was assessed at £40; Henry Stettler and Peter Troxel, each £10; Deeter Gowman, Michael Shaffer, John Lichtenwalder, each £9; Frederick Romig, £8; John Albrecht, Adam Epler, Matthias Riffle, Nicholas Mayer, John Wetzler, and John Trexler, Jr., each £7; Jacob Swartz, Matthias Westgo, Daniel Torney, William Haintz, John Fogle, Isaac Jarret, Peter Kiesser, Henry Moor, Herman Moor, Leonard Moor, and Adam Smith, each £6; all others are assessed for lesser amounts.

Assessment made by the commissioners of Northampton for the township of Macungie for the year A. D. 1812:

Widow Albrecht
Jacob Albrecht
Christopher Andrew
Jacob Andrew
Henry Brobst
George Braus
Jonathan Butz
John Butz
Peter Butz
John Butz, Sr.
Nicholas Becher
Job Barger
Christian Barger
Christian Bartz
Jacob Bartz
Henry Bartz
Jacob Bartz
Henry Bartz, Sr.
John Bartz
Peter Brecht
Michael Bastian, Jr.
Michael Bastian, Sr.
David Brown
George Breinard
Jacob Breinig
Peter Breinig
Michael Brush
George Breinig
Melchior Bare
George Boch
Peter Bader
Daniel Bastian
Henry Breish
Daniel Bamer
Henry Boger
John Bieher
Henry Bartz, Jr.
Michael Billeg
Henry Christman
George Christman
Jacob Christman
Thomas Crag
John Clauss
Frederick Cradikartz
Christian Danekle
Jacob Danekle
George Danekle
Peter Dormoyer
Henry Deiffendorfer

Jacob Deiffendorfer
Philip Deiffendorfer
Jonathan Deiffendorfer
John Dressler
Jonathan Dible
John Donner
Jacob Donner
Jacob Debler
David Deshler
Jacob Donner
Rev. Jacob Dechand
Jacob Dhill
Rev. I. Casper Dill
Widow Desh
John Eissenhard
Daniel Eissenhard
Andrew Eissenhard
Henry Egmer
Christian Edinger
Andrew Edinger
George Eisenhard
Philip Erlewine
John Fogle
Herman Feringer
Daniel Daniel
Peter Fegele
David Fegele
Joseph Feetz
Abraham Fink
Christian Fink
John Frauenfeld
John Fogle, Sr.
Solomon Fogle
Jacob Flexer
John Gernet
Daniel Gebhard
Jacob Grimm
Frederick Gaumer
Henry Grimm
Matthias Gaumer
Henry Gaumer
Adam Gaumer
Deater Gaumer
George Garr
Laurence Garr
Abraham Gebhard
Peter Grammer
Henry Grammer
Charles Gachenbach, Sr.

William Hines
Peter Hains
Jacob Hains
Adam Hains
George Hains
Henry Hittle
Jonathan Haman
John Huber, Sr.
Jonathan Haman
John Huber, Jr.
John Holder
Jacob Heverly
Michael Hiskey, Jr.
Michael Hiskey, Sr.
Philip Haas
Gabriel Harge
Henry Hartzell
John Heinley
Daniel Haaf
John Haaf
George Haas
Henry Haas, Jr.
Henry Haas, Sr.
Peter Haas, Jr.
Isaac Haas
Jacob Haas
Joseph Hamman
John Held
Rev. Henry Hyman
John Hiskey
Daniel Juhs
John Jerret
Henry Jacoby
George Jacoby
George Jaxheimer
Samuel Jaeger
John Jacoby
Isaac Jerret
Henry Jerret
Michael Jacoby
Henry Knappenberger, Sr.
Andrew Koller
Henry Klein
John Keiper, Jr.
Andrew Klotz
Valentine Keneley
Michael Keinaid
Valentine Keiper
Widow Kehler
Henry Kern
Widow Knedler
Henry Koch
John Keisser
Henry Koch, Sr.
John Koch
Philip Knauss
George Knauss
Daniel Korn
Daniel Korn
Philip Kuns
Jacob Kuns
Philip Kuns
Henry Keck
George Kuns
John Kutter
Nicholas Keisser
John Kaul

Abraham Kichlay
Michael Kerr
Henry Kerr
Dewald Kuns
Benjamin Knauss
Daniel Knauss
Conrad Keck
George Krauss
Nicholas Kreamer
Henry Keck
Philip Knappenberger
Henry Knappenberger, Jr.
John Lichtenwallner
Jacob Lichtenwallner
George Lichtenwallner
George Lichtenwallner
John Leinbach
Joseph Loras
Philip Lauer
George Laudenslayer
Nicholas Litzenberger
Adam Litzenberger
Henry Long
Henry Ludwig
Isaac Loros
Peter Loros
Henry Loros
Nicholas Loros
Lewis Loros
Joseph Loros
George Lessig
Jacob Merchall
Widow Miller
Philip Moyer
Christian Merchall
Philip Mertz
Nicholas Muth
Conrad Mertz
Jacob Miller
John Masteller
John Meckley
Philip Mellig
Henry Mertz
Daniel Meyer
Jacob Meyer
George Miller
Solomon Mohr
John Meyer
John Marks
Jacob Marks
Henry Moitzler
Henry Mattern
George Mattern
Harman Mohr, Sr.
Harman Mohr, Jr.
Henry Mohr
Henry Mink
John Mohr
Daniel Meyer
Conrad Meitzler, Sr.
Conrad Meitzler, Jr.
Andrew Miller
Nicholas Miller
Ludwig Merckle
Nicholas Minch
Jacob Mohr
Harman Mohr

Henry Mertz
 Peter Mohr
 Benjamin Mill
 John Nerper
 George Neitz
 Peter Neidlinger
 Conrad Neumier
 Christian Nerfer
 Jacob Neuman
 Philip Ruth
 Jacob Romich
 Peter Romich
 Henry Romich
 Jacob Romich
 Jacob Rothrock
 Leonard Romich
 Abraham Romich
 John Romich
 Jacob Reiss
 Andrew Reiss
 Henry Roth
 George Rupp
 Daniel Reish
 Peter Reddler
 Daniel Ruch
 George Reiss
 Herman Rupp
 Jacob Rupp
 Henry Shedler
 George Steiningger
 George Steiningger, Jr.
 Peter Sheriff
 John Sheffler
 John Smith, Sr.
 Benjamin Smith
 Jonas Smith
 Melchior Smith
 John Smith, Jr.
 Jacob Shankweiler
 Daniel Shankweiler
 Solomon Seider
 Philip Smeyer
 Abraham Smeyer
 Daniel Smeyer
 Philip Smeyer

Jacob Smeyer
 Peter Smeyer, Sr.
 Jacob Sheffer
 Samuel Seeger
 Christopher Stedler
 Henry Stedler
 Daniel Stedler
 Jacob Stephen
 Solomon Swartz
 Jonathan Stephan
 George Sheffer
 Jacob Shuller
 George Schleicher
 Isaac Swartz
 Abraham Swartz
 John Schnierr
 Daniel Steiningger
 Michael Sheaffer
 Solomon Smeyer
 Jacob Shoemaker
 Jonathan Swartz
 Solomon Sheaffer
 Jacob Sheaffer
 Jacob Smith
 George Swartz
 Jacob Swartz
 Peter Seip
 Nicholas Slaugh
 Michael Shnyder, Sr.
 Michael Shnyder, Jr.
 Daniel Shnyder
 Frederick Stephen
 John Stephen
 Abraham Server
 George Shifferd
 Adam Singmaster
 John Shaub
 Daniel Swartz
 Reuben Trexler
 Charles Trexler
 Jeremiah Trexler
 Jonathan Trexler
 John Trexler
 Peter Trexler

John Wack
 Jacob Weiss
 Philip Westgo
 Jacob Wichert
 Solomon Westgo
 Casper Weaver
 Henry Walwert
 Jost. Weigandt
 Jacob Wagner
 John Willoner
 John Weitman
 George Wagener
 Peter Wertz
 John Wertz, Sr.
 John Wertz, Jr.
 Peter Wolf, Jr.
 Peter Wolf, Sr.
 Henry Wolf
 Philip Ziegler
 John Yeingline
 Daniel Mechlay
 Henry Meitzler
 Henry Mertz
 John Muth
 Jacob Meyer
 William Mohr
 Michael Mosser

Andrew Miller
 George Miller
 Jonathan Miller
 Daniel Miller
 Nicholas Miller
 Jacob Nerfer
 Peter Nerfer
 John Romich
 Jonathan Romich
 Daniel Slaugh
 Leonard Steiningger
 John Shoener
 Isaac Stephen
 John Shnyder
 Jacob Steiningger
 Daniel Traxsell
 Adam Weiss
 Solomon Wolvert
 Jost Weigandt
 Solomon Wiehart
 Jonathan Wolf
 George Zimmerman
 George Dunkel
 Jacob Desh
 Daniel Barr
 George Jaxheimer
 Reuben Kensley

Single Freemen.

Christian Andreas
 George Brauss
 Jacob Brauss
 Nicholas Batter
 Jacob Deiffendorfer
 Andrew Eisenhard
 Andrew Eisenhard
 David Grim
 Henry Gaumer
 George Greenemier
 Peter Haas
 Benjamin Haines
 Jacob Huber
 Adam Heverly
 Philip Harman
 Adam Hertzell
 George Knappenberger
 Conrad Keck
 Andrew Knedler
 John Knedler
 Deobald Kuns
 Henry Kuns
 George Kuns
 Michael Kern
 Nicholas Kern

George Letzenberger
 Benjamin Smith
 Jacob Lichtenwalder
 George Litzenberger
 Frederick Leinbach
 George Ludwig
 John Mohr
 Henry Mohr
 John Mechley
 Christian Unger
 George Van Buskirk
 Philip Wetzell
 Zachariah Wagener
 Matthias Westgo
 Henry Westgo
 Ludwig Weidner
 John Wetzell
 Matthias Weaver
 Peter Walbern
 George Walbern
 John Weiandt
 Jacob Woodring
 Christian Weaver
 Joseph Westgo
 John Wetzell

EARLY MILLS.

There were a number of early mills in the township, saw-mills, grist-mills, and flour-mills. The majority of them served a three-fold purpose. These mills are only operated at present as grist-mills.

One of these mills is the Schantz's mill, situated about five miles west from the City of Allentown, at the famous Schantz's Spring, the most remarkable spring in the county, propelling a saw-mill at its very source. This mill is located at the very source of the Cedar creek. The first settler at the spring was John George Guth. In 1743 he purchased a tract of land, two or three square miles, along Cedar creek, and erected three water-powers in such a way that they did not interfere with one another. He built his home about a mile above Schantz's Spring, where he resided. This dwelling was torn down in 1868. He erected a mill at the spring, and granted certain water-rights until 1766, when he sold the mill property and sixty acres of land to his son, John George Guth, Jr., but reserved certain water rights. In 1774 Adam Eppler became the owner of the mill. In 1786 it came into the possession of Philip Bortz, together with twelve acres of land and water power. Jacob Schantz, who became the owner of the property in 1792, came to this country when quite a young man as one of the Redemptioners, and was sold to Peter Kohler, of Egypt, for his passage. Having a knowledge of milling, he was placed with Philip Bortz. After he had served his time he continued to work for Bortz, and was married to his daughter. When he came into the possession of the mill with two tracts of land, he kept hotel in the log dwelling which was two hundred feet in length. Battalions were held here for many years. Schantz rebuilt the mill, and also erected a stone dwelling house, which is still standing. In 1818 the property passed into the possession of Jacob Schantz, Jr., who built the mill race. Hiram Schantz, his son, became the owner of the property in 1844, who erected the present mill in 1856. Later it was sold to David Koch, who in 1900 sold it to the city of Allentown. To this mill the people came from far and near to have their grain ground. From this spring a pipe line has been laid to furnish its clear and crystal waters to supply the citizens of the City of Allentown.

Haas Mills.—These mills are located in the northern part of the township near the line of Lowhill township, along the stream known as the Haas creek. The first mill built in this region was log mill and was owned by a man named Riffle. This mill was used to make grist, and flour was also made. It was located near the site of the present mill in the meadow adjoining. This mill was purchased by Henry Haas, who came from Germany. In 1795 he built a grist-mill and flour-mill on the site of the present mill. It was a stone structure with a dwelling attached. He continued to operate this mill until his death in 1830. At the death of his father, Jonas Haas, he came into the possession of the mill. In 1839 Jonas built the present mill, which is still well preserved, and is still used as a grist-mill. The mill is a stone structure, 40 feet long by 30 feet wide. After the death of Jonas Haas, March 31, 1858, his son, Levi Haas, became the owner of the mill. He continued to operate the mill as a grist- and flour-mill, until his death in 1883. Levi Haas and John Haas, his sons, then became the owners of the mill. In 1892 Levi Haas became the sole owner of the mill. Since 1896 the making of flour has been discontinued. It is only used as a grist-mill. The farmers from Lowhill, North Whitehall, Whitehall, and Macungie townships, bring their grain to this mill to have it ground, and the owner is still doing a prosperous business. The motive-power to operate the mill is gotten from the Haas creek. This mill has been in the possession of the Haas family for four generations.

Albright's Mills.—The mills formerly known as Albright's, are located in Lower Macungie township, near the village of Trexlertown, were formerly located in Upper Macungie township. These mills were among the first in the township. It is said to have first been located near the Allentown and Reading trolley line. Later it was moved further down the stream and again at a later period to the present site. It is located along the Spring creek. The mill is a stone structure. The people of Fogelsville and the surrounding community took their grain on horseback to this mill before the roads were laid out above Trexlertown. The grist-mill, flour-mill, and saw-mill, and twenty-three acres of land were sold, Feb. 27, 1815, by Jacob Albright, to Nicholas Kremer, for $18,000 dollars. This property is the same which Deobold Albright, by his deed of partition dated Aug. 17, 1811, recorded at Easton in the county of Northampton. Jacob purchased the property in the same year from Kramer for $20,000. The property was sold to Peter Mohr and John Helffrich, Feb. 7, 1822. In 1827 Henry Mohr bought it for 14-110 dollars. Henry Mohr sold it to John Mohr, Aug. 13, 1835. John Mohr, dying intestate the mill was purchased by John H. S. Mohr, his son, when he became of age, Nov. 10, 1857. After operating it for several years it passed into the possession of George S. Albright.

The mill was later operated by John Albright. After the death of George S. Albright, it was operated by several of the heirs. In 1900 these heirs sold the property to James K. Moser, of Allentown. In 1901 Reuben Guldin purchased the mill from James K. Moser. Mr. Guldin is still operating the mill. It is used at this time as a grist-mill, the farmers from the surrounding community giving it their liberal patronage.

Fogel's Mills.—Solomon Fogel built the first steam roller mill in Fogelsville, and was used for this purpose for several years. It was a flour and grist-mill. The steam roller process was at this time a new venture, and it did not prove profitable. It was in operation during the 60's. After several years of operation it was abandoned and later on dismantled. Some of the men living in Fogelsville, who then were boys, tell how they would load several bags of grain on a sled and pull it to the mill and in a short time they could take their flour along home again. On account of a lack of railroad facilities the coal had to be hauled a great distance which entailed too great an expense to make the mills a profitable investment. The foundry which was connected with it was continued for some time after the milling was abandoned. The site is still known but that is all that remains of the former mill and foundry.

INDUSTRIES.

Fogelsville Mills.—The leading industry of Upper Macungie township is the Fogelsville plant of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. The company began to erect this plant in November, 1905. The product which is manufactured by this plant is the Lehigh Portland Cement. The brand of this cement has become famous not only in America, but throughout the whole world.

The plant is located about one mile north of Fogelsville. For many years it was known that there were rich deposits of rock in this region suitable for the manufacture of cement, but at the time of its discovery it did not attract sufficient attention on account of the rich deposits of iron which were contained in nature's vast vaults of the township, which industry was then in its bloom. The importance of these rock-beds was in a large measure dwarfed by the colossal operations in iron and because the manufacture of cement was then in its infancy in America. Finally efforts were made to interest the capital of the country in the manufacture of cement in this region. After several futile attempts to interest cement manufacturing companies of other states in the manufacture of cement in this locality, the attention of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company was called to the rich deposits of cement rock in this section of the county. After a careful survey of the premises it was soon discovered that the extensive formation of rock possessed all the qualities desirable for the manufacture of the best cements. The value of the deposits thus revealed was soon recognized by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. Through the enterprise of the company steps were immediately taken for the acquisition of a large amount of desirable property in this cement belt. The properties of William Mohr, L. J. Mohr, Daniel Moyer, were immediately acquired and very soon afterward the property of Levi Kuhns and the Solomon Mohr, Jr., estate, was purchased. In the fall of 1905 the company took steps toward realizing upon their investment by beginning the erection of the mills. The plant, which was erected by the company, including a boiler house, with ten large boilers having a capacity of 3,000 horse-power, to which are attached ten automatic-feed stokers, an engine room fitted out with large and powerful engines and electric generators, which furnish the electric lighting for the plant, a crushing-plant, containing one No. 9, Alls-Charmers crusher, and five No. 5, Gates crushers, which crush the raw materials for the mills, having a capacity of 2,000 tons of rock in ten hours, a drying plant for the drying of the stones, a stone-storage, a raw grinding department, a kiln room, in which ten kilns are placed, each of which is eight feet in diameter, and 125 feet long, a coal house, a coal grinding department, a coal-storage, a clinker grinding department, a cement grinding department, all of which are in separate buildings. A large stock-house was erected in three sections, nearly 1,000 feet long and 125 feet wide with two large packing rooms, having a capacity of 700,000 barrels of finished cement. There is a large conveyor built in three sections to convey the finished product into the stock-house. In the packing rooms are eight machines which tie bags before they are filled, and eight automatic cement-packing and weighing machines. The company also built a large machine-shop, 185 feet long by 65 feet wide, a blacksmith-shop, 65 feet long and 20 feet wide, a boiler shop, 45 feet long and 20 feet wide, a carpenter shop, 75 feet long and 20 feet wide, a ware-house, 90 feet long and 20 feet wide, a horse-stable, 75 feet long and 33 feet wide, in which are thirty-three horses, which are used about the plant. There were also five cooling dams built to cool the water used for milling purposes, coming out of the condenser, which is used over again, to which is added a supply of fresh water pumped from the company's large dam by a rotary pump, having a capacity of pumping 20,000 gallons in ten hours. The company erected a residence for the superintendent, an office building, a boarding house, and dwellings for the employees.

In March, 1907, the necessary buildings having been erected the manufacture of cement was begun for the first time in this locality, from which the community has reaped a lasting benefit. In the development of this industry in this region the citizens of the community saw for the first time how cement is being manufactured. In view of the fact that many of the vicinity and the immediate community obtain employment in these mills it has and will ever prove a great boon to the community and will prove a potent factor in the development, growth, and progress of the community.

In opening of the quarry in 1907, it was soon discovered that there was also a large deposit of limestone which avoids the necessity of importing this material from other places and which forms a valuable asset to this plant to manufacture a grade of cement to compete with any grade of cement manufactured.

The plant is located on about twenty acres of land, and the quarry contains about twelve acres. The resources are scarcely possible to be over-estimated. The company, having about 1,300 acres of land at its disposal for the manufacture of cement and agricultural purposes, this industry has practically unlimited resources and its continued operation secured.

The manufacture of cement is a very interesting procedure, as it is performed at these mills. A short description follows. The attention of the reader is first directed to the large quarry from which the raw material is gotten.

The quarry contains twelve acres of land. The breast of the quarry is sixty feet deep. The stone are drilled by two large well-drill machines. These machines drill a six-inch hole the full depth of the quarry. After all the holes are drilled they are loaded with dynamite, sometimes as much as twelve tons of dynamite being loaded into these holes for one blast. This blast is set off with an electric current, from the large generator at the mills. Such a blast loosens as high as 75,000 tons of rock. This rock is then loaded on five-ton cars by large steam shovels. These cars run by gravity to the foot of the plane whence they are hoisted and dumped into a large No. 9, Gates crusher. The crushed stone then pass up a large elevator into a stock bin. From this bin they pass into five No. 5 Gates crushers, from which they are taken by elevators on to belt conveyors to stone driers, of which there are five, being six feet in diameter by 60 feet long. The stone is here dried from the waste heat from the kilns. The stone is then carried from the driers to the stone storage, which holds 30,000 tons of crushed dried stone. From here the stone is carried to the raw grinding department. The stone then pass through eight large commutators or ball mills. Here the stone is crushed to a fineness of 56 per cent. The material is then conveyed by means of conveyors and elevators into stock bins. From these bins it passes through tube mills, 16 feet long, by five feet in diameter. There are eight of these tube-mills. The material passes out of these mills at a fineness of 95 per cent. From these mills it passes through elevators into stock bins about 180 feet long and 12 feet wide, and 15 feet high. The material passes out these bins by conveyors into kilns, eight feet in diameter, and 125 feet long. As the material passes through these rotary kilns, pulverized gas coal is added for burning purposes. This coal is pulverized by six Fuller mills to a fineness of 95 per cent. This coal is conveyed into stock-bins in the kiln rooms. Compressed air is used to blow the coal into the roasters to burn the material for cement. The material is then burned into a clinker. These clinkers then pass up large elevators into coolers from which they are tapped below into a large scraper line. The clinkers are then conveyed upon scales and weighed, from which they pass up through elevators, come down through four sets of rolls where it is crushed, after it passes up through elevators into large stock bins, holding 5,000 barrels of clinker, after which it passes through twenty griffin mills. These mills do the preliminary grinding. From these mills it passes through elevators into stock bins. From these bins it passes down through eight tubes, five feet by sixteen feet, out of which it comes finished cement at fineness of 95 per cent. From here it is conveyed to an elevator, through which it passes up to conveyors which convey the finished product into the stock house.

These mills have a daily output of 5,000 barrels of manufactured cement, ready and prepared for the market. For the performance of this work the company employs about 425 men, including quarrymen, and mill hands. The foregoing process of making cement is regarded as being the best method in vogue to produce a high grade of cement. This plant is modern in construction and the quality of the product compares favorably with the best produced in Europe or America. This type of cement manufactured by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company is used by the government for fortifications and dry-docks. The product, as manufactured at the Fogelsville mills, has been used on the greatest architectural feats of cement construction in the world. From these mills went cement for the construction of the Panama Canal and the large Allentown bridge, and vast railway improvements in this country. The superintendent of these mills is George Moritz, and his assistant, Martin Lehr, both of East Fogelsville.

Sittler's Machine Works.—These works originated with William Sittler, who was operating a machine shop and foundry in that part of the township as the New Mauch Chunk. He made the first patterns of the Excelsior mowing machine. In 1892 he moved his place of business to Trexlertown and located near the branch of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville railway, which leads to Breinigsville and Kline's Corner. William Sittler built the shop which is standing on the same site at present. William Sittler continued the business until his death, Jan. 2, 1900. In 1892 his son, Henry Sittler, became associated with his father in the business at Trexlertown. After the death of his father the property went into his possession, being the only child. Being the sole successor of his father, he continued the business and is still operating the works. In 1901 Henry Sittler built a large warehouse and paint shop. In 1902 he purchased the Fogel's property below the railroad, which was formerly a grain depot, and upon which is a large building, which is used to store the agricultural implements, and shedding for the storing of lumber. The buildings cover about one and one-half acres of land. The business is principally the manufacture of farm wagons and agricultural implements. The business has been successfully conducted since its beginning. There are seventeen men employed in the manufacture of these implements.

Trexlerstown Knitting Mills.—These mills are owned and operated by Silas G. Croll and John Y. Schultz, of Trexlerstown. The mills were established in January, 1912. They occupy the store house and dwelling of the Gideon Yoder estate. The company purchased the property from the Yoder estate in March, 1911. The property had previously been used as a general merchandise store, but for a number of years the merchandise business had been discontinued. The building occupied by the knitting mills is a brick structure, part of which is three stories high and the dwelling part which is two stories high. The building is 27 feet by 50 feet and 27 feet by 40 feet. On the first floor are ten Nye and Tredegar knitting machines, each machine having a capacity from 20 to 25 dozen per day. These machines are operated by two operators. On the second floor are eight finishing machines operated by eight operators, each machine having a capacity of 50 dozen per day. On this floor are also a number of stock rooms. When the plant is running full it produces 175 dozen finished wear per day. The product of these mills is underwear. The power to run these machines is furnished by a steam boiler and engine. An electric dynamo is also attached, which furnishes the power for the lights which are used for lighting purposes in the mills. Since their establishment the mills have been running regularly, except during a part of the summer months, a part of July and a part of August, during which months industries of this class are usually not in operation. The mills employ 15-17 operators regularly, and besides these there are from 30-40 in private homes, who at their leisure perform the work of taping. These mills are the youngest industry in the township.

Fogelsville Shirt Mills.—These mills were put into operation June, 1912. They are the branch of the Alburts Shirt Mills, operated by R. F. and R. J. Butz. This branch was started to increase the output of the Alburts shirt mills. There is always a great demand for the manufacture of shirts and therefore these mills took this step to supply the increasing demand made upon their plant. These mills are located in the building which was formerly used as a canning factory at Fogelsville. The building is owned by L. J. Mohr. In the spring of 1912 arrangements were made between the operating company and the owner of the property for the manufacture of shirts. An agreement was made and the operating company rented the building. Immediately steps were taken to install machinery. Twenty-two machines were installed, stitchers and two union specials. The room which is occupied by the mills is 30 feet by 60 feet. In June, 1912, the factory was put into operation. This was a new style of industry for the community and it took some time before enough hands could be secured to operate the factory. After having been in operation for nearly two years the industry promises to be a permanent fixture for the community. There are twenty men, women, boys, and girls employed in the mills. The work which is done is the making of sleeves. These are then taken to the Alburts shirt mills where they are used in the manufacture of finished shirts. The operators have in this short time developed a large degree of proficiency, producing nearly 700 dozen pairs of sleeves per week. The machines are driven by the power furnished by a large gasoline engine. The mills have been running uninterruptedly since their establishment, except for the making of necessary repairs.

VILLAGES.

There are a number of villages in the township, the largest of which are Trexlerstown, Fogelsville, Breinigsville, and Chapman's.

Trexlerstown is a post village, distant eight miles from Allentown, on the road from Allentown to Reading, which was founded by the Trexlers. It is situated along the route of the Reading and Allentown Traction Company. It is regarded as the oldest town in the valley, the Macungie valley. It has a Reformed and Lutheran church, two schools, three hotels, a store, a tinsmith shop, a Masonic hall, and a grain, coal, and lumber depot. It is situated along the Catasauqua and Fogelsville railway, in the midst of a fertile farming district. It was formerly a great center for the mining of iron-ore. The population is 400, occupying nearly fifty dwellings.

Dr. Pulte practiced medicine at Trexlerstown many years ago, removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he founded a medical college. He died there in 1883. Dr. W. S. Herbst practiced medicine here for many years. Dr. H. H. Herb resides here and practices medicine.

Fogelsville was named after Judge John Fogel, who built the old hotel in 1798, which was the first building in the place. This building was torn down in 1883, and on the same site a large and commodious brick tavern was erected by Kistler and Lenhart. Here Judge Fogel carried the trade of dyeing, kept a hotel, and a small store. Most of the old landmarks have disappeared. The old stone building in which Solomon and Willoughby Fogel kept store is still standing, but in late years has been greatly remodelled. The town has some very nice residences, two hotels, two churches, an Odd Fellows' hall, two schools, three stores, a tailoring establishment, a saddler-shop, a shirt-factory, and a grain and lumber and coal depot, with which a creamery is also connected. A limestone quarry is situated here, from which stones were taken for building purposes, and from which lime was formerly burned, but which is now used to furnish stones for the improvement of the roads. Formerly it had two savings banks, which, however, were closed during the panic of 1873. It has a postoffice, and is the township seat where all the elections are held, for the upper district, of the township. It has a population of 425, occupying 72 dwellings. Fogelsville has the honor of sending forth from its midst more professional men than any other town of its size in the entire county. Among them were some of the ablest preachers of their generation, able and successful physicians, able teachers, successful university professors, and several very able musicians. Among the foremost clergymen were Rev. W. A. Helffrich, D.D., and Rev. E. J. Fogel, D.D., both of whom have passed into the great beyond, and Rev. Madison Peters, D.D., of New York City. There is a physician residing in the place, Dr. C. E. Helffrich, son of the late Rev. W. A. Helffrich, D.D., one minister of the Gospel, several school teachers and two university professors, one of which is an ordained minister of the Gospel.

East Fogelsville, which is about three-fourths of a mile distant from Fogelsville proper, no doubt was given the foregoing name on account of its proximity to the parent town. This village was established in 1905, since the erection of the Fogelsville Mills of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. This village was established by the company for the housing of its employees, for which purpose substantial and convenient dwellings were erected. A schoolhouse was erected by the township for the convenience of the people living in this section. This village has a population of 135, occupying thirty-three dwellings.

There is also a village composed mostly of foreigners, who are employed at the Fogelsville Mills, situated about one mile northwest from Fogelsville. The dwellings were erected by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company for the housing of the foreign element, working at the Fogelsville Mills. The population of this village is about 200 living in about twenty-four dwellings.

Breinigsville is a beautiful village located along a branch of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railway, a branch of the P. and R. Railway. The town was named after George Breinig, who settled on a tract of land in its vicinity, containing 123 acres in 1789. This property is now in the possession of Charles Breinig. The original dwelling is still standing.

The town was formerly a great center for the mining of iron-ore, and furnished employment to many men. These mines have been abandoned. It has a United Brethren church, one school, one store, a hotel, a lumber, grain, and coal depot, and a carriage works, and a postoffice, and a veterinary surgeon. The population is 200, living in forty-five dwellings.

Chapman's, a small village on the Catasauqua and Fogelsville railway, and about eight miles distant from Allentown, was named after Charles W. Chapman, formerly superintendent of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railway. Since the building of the Fogelsville mills of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company, this village has been enthused with new life which has resulted in the erection of a number of modern dwellings. It has a postoffice named Litzenberg, one store, a hotel, a grain, coal, and lumber depot, and a blacksmith shop. It has a population of 117, occupying thirty-three dwellings.

Ruppsville, Krocksville, Newtown, and Haafsville sometimes called Frogtown are smaller villages of the township, which have no postoffices.

CHURCHES.

Trexlertown Church.—The Rev. Michael Schlatter, the missionary who sailed from Holland in 1746, mentions in his journal that he visited the Trexlertown congregation on the 25th of June, 1747, and that on the 29th of January, 1749, he received letters from this congregation to come to administer the communion to its members, which Rev. Philip Boehm took upon himself to do at the earnest request of Rev. Schlatter. In spite of the foregoing facts it is found that only on the 26th of May, 1784, was the erection of a church edifice begun. This building, the dimensions of which were 46 feet by 60 feet, is still standing and used as a house of worship by the congregations at Trexlertown. The cornerstone was laid with appropriate religious services, into which four kinds of grain were placed, wheat, rye, oats, and buckwheat, besides the creeds of both the Reformed and Lutheran denominations, a bottle of wine, and the constitution of the church. The church was erected as a union church, for the worship of both Reformed and Lutheran congregations, and that neither congregation might take advantage of the other, and that neither might be censured, the above mentioned articles were deposited into the cornerstone by twelve small children. In the choosing of the name for the church, lots were cast to determine which of the congregations should be mentioned first, and the name Reformed was always to be mentioned first, so that the church is known by the name of the Reformed and Lutheran church of Trexlertown. The church was consecrated to the worship of Almighty God on the 17th of April, 1785, Rev. John Helffrich, representing the Reformed congregation and Rev. Caspar Diehl representing the Lutheran congregation, officiating. The centennial of the church was celebrated on Whitsuntide, 1884. The church has been repaired at different times and modernized. In 1879 a steeple was erected, and a bell weighing 1,100 pounds was installed, at an expense of $1,400. The house for the sexton, belonging to the church, was rebuilt at a cost of $800. In addition to the old burial ground, a cemetery was purchased later on, which was laid out into burial lots. The congregations are strong, numerically and financially. The pastors who have served the Reformed congregations are the following: Rev. John H. Helffrich, 1784-1810; Rev. Jacob William Dechant, 1811-1815; Rev. Daniel Zellers, 1815-1857; Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, 1857-1876; Rev. Thomas Reber, 1876-1891; Rev. M. H. Brensinger, 1891 to the present. The pastors who have served the Lutheran congregation are the following: Rev. Caspar Diehl, 1784-1806; Rev. Henry Anastasius Geissenhainer, April 15, 1806-1814; Rev. George Wertman, and Rev. J. Doering, 1814-1837; Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, 1837-1859; Rev. E. B. Kramlich, 1859-1903; Rev. Irwin B. Ritter, 1903-1908. Rev. David Kauffman, who began his pastorate in 1909 and continues as pastor at present.

St. John's Reformed Church, at Fogelsville.—This church was organized as a Union church by the members of the Trexlertown and Ziegler churches. Jacob Moyer and Judge John Fogel donated one and one-half acres of land upon which to erect a church and to be used for burial purposes. At a meeting held October 4, 1834, it was decided to build a Union Lutheran and Reformed church. A building committee was elected, composed of Henry Mohr, and Jacob Moyer (Reformed); and John Lichtenwalner, and Daniel Schlauch (Lutheran); and Solomon Fogel, treasurer; Benjamin Fogel, John Keck, Peter Musselman, and Jonathan Mohr were appointed to solicit subscriptions. The cornerstone was laid on Whitsuntide, 1835, at which occasion Rev. John Helffrich preached the sermon. The church was dedicated in the fall of the same year. On Nov. 15, 1835, an election was held for pastors, which resulted in Rev. C. G. Herman being chosen by the Reformed congregation, and Rev. Isaac Roeller, by the Lutheran congregation. Rev. C. G. Herman continued to serve the congregation until Feb. 23, 1862, when his son, Rev. A. J. Herman, succeeded him. Rev. Isaac Roeller resigned as pastor of the Lutheran congregation, January 6, 1850, who was succeeded, March 3, 1850, by Rev. Jeremiah Schindel. Rev. E. H. M. Sell succeeded Rev. Schindel. Rev. O. E. Leopold became the pastor in 1861. In 1874 the Lutheran congregation, with their pastor, Rev. O. E. Leopold, withdrew from the old church and built the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church, a sketch of which follows. A few of the Lutheran congregation, however, remained in the old church, organized, and called Rev. W. G. Mennig as their pastor, who was assisted by Rev. C. E. Hay. Rev. Singmaster preached for the Lutheran congregation until 1896. Since that time there have been no services conducted by any Lutheran congregation. Most of the Lutheran membership remaining with the mother church have become members of the Reformed congregation. The church is solely used by the Reformed at present.

The church edifice which was originally a building, 60 feet long and 40 feet wide was built of stone and was plastered on the outside. This structure was extensively remodelled in the last few years, 1910-1911. An addition of 20 feet was built to the length and 40 feet in width to correspond with the former structure. The galleries were torn out, the floor was raised, and a basement was made and equipped for the use of the Sunday school, which had formerly met in the school house. The auditorium was equipped with new furniture, the floors carpeted, the walls frescoed, and an acetylene gas plant was installed for lighting purposes. A gallery was built in the rear, thus giving the auditorium a seating capacity of 400. The building is heated by steam heat. The cost of the remodelling was $9,000. The re-consecration of the church building took place on the 4th of June, 1911. The following ministers took part in the services: Rev. P. H. Fogel, of Fogelsville; Rev. James O. Oswald, of Slattington; Rev. Madison Peters, of New York City, and the pastor. In 1913 a pipe organ was installed at a cost of $2,100. The following ministers took part in the services of dedication which were held on the first of June, 1913; Rev. C. E. Kerschner, of Allentown; Rev. W. F. Curtis, president of the Allentown College for Women; Rev. W. L. Meckstroth, of Mertztown, Pa.; Rev. William U. Helffrich, of Bath, Pa., student, Henry J. Herber; Rev. E. J. Laros, of Philadelphia, and the pastor.

The first consistory of the Reformed congregation was composed of the following: Elder, Jacob Moyer; deacons: Joseph Fry, Jonathan Mohr, Isaac Haas, and Henry Rauch. The first officers of the Lutheran congregation were the following: Elder, Adam Litzenberger; deacons, Samuel Fetherolf, John Lichtenwalner, Daniel Kuntz, and Henry Stettler. The first Sunday school superintendent was A. W. Held. The following Lutheran ministers served in this church: Rev. Isaac Roeller, 1835-1850; Rev. J. Schindel, 1850-1858; Rev. E. H. M. Sell, 1859-1860; Rev. Owen Leopold, 1861-1874. After the departure of the Lutheran congregation, the following ministers of the General Synod Lutheran Church preached here: Rev. W. G. Minnich, Sept. 3, 1875-July 1, 1883; Rev. Hay, Aug. 26, 1883-July 27, 1884; Rev. J. A. Singmaster, Oct. 5, 1884-Jan. 9, 1887; Rev. Berndt, Feb. 20, 1887-Oct. 25, 1887; Rev. Fritch, March 30, 1888-March 21, 1891; Rev. J. A. Singmaster, April 26, 1891-Nov. 1, 1896, after which the Lutheran services were discontinued.

St. John's Lutheran Church, Fogelsville, Pa.—A meeting of the members of St. John's Lutheran congregation, hitherto worshipping in the old Union church, was held Dec. 14, 1872, to take such action in reference to the building of a new church as seemed proper to them. The object of the meeting was expressed in the following words: "Whereas, the house of worship built by our fathers, and in which they were accustomed to assemble for the purpose of worshipping their God, has become more or less dilapidated, and is no longer meeting our wants, and, believing it to be due to the memory of our fathers that we should not suffer any dilapidation of that which they have reared for us, but, on the contrary, to profit by their example and continue the work by them commenced, and believing that the time has arrived in which a new and appropriate house of worship could be built by taking proper action, therefore a preliminary meeting of some of the Lutheran members was held in order to devise means by which such a result might be obtained."

Encouraged by liberal subscriptions from the members, a building committee was appointed, consisting of John H. Lichtenwalner, Joseph Miller, Samuel Kuhns, Moses Rabenold, and Adam Stettler. In order to avoid dissatisfaction an election was held, Feb. 8, 1873, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the Lutheran members of St. John's Lutheran church were in favor of dissolving the relation hitherto existing between them and the Reformed congregation, which resulted in favor of a separation, by a large majority, only four dissenting. The building committee took immediate steps to prosecute the work of erecting a new church, and on May 24, 1874, the cornerstone was laid. Services were conducted in the Union church, in which Revs. S. K. Brobst, Professor G. F. Miller, M.

J. Kramlich, and O. E. Leopold, the pastor, participated. The church was dedicated July 4, 1875, on which occasion Revs. William Rath, J. D. Schindel, M. J. Kramlich, and O. E. Leopold took part in the services. The church edifice is a brick building, seventy feet in length and forty feet in width, with a basement for Sunday school purposes, and was erected at a cost of $13,000. The pastor at the time of the erection of the church, was Rev. O. E. Leopold. The first church council consisted of the following: Elders, Samuel Kuhns and John H. Lichtenwalner; deacons, Joseph Miller, Edwin B. Clause, Moses Rabenold, and Charles Musselman; trustees, Henry Stine, treasurer; Samuel Kuhns. The first superintendent of the Sunday school was John-Lichtenwalner.

The present church council consists of the following: Elders, Daniel Roth and John Eisenhard; deacons, Harvey Mohr, Richard Kramlich, Andrew Walter, and Jacob Frye; trustee, Sherwood Schaffer; treasurer, Edwin Miller. The superintendent of the Sunday school is Charles Henninger.

The following pastors served the congregation: Rev. Owen Leopold.* He was succeeded by his son, Elmer O. Leopold, who served from 1904-1909; he was succeeded by Rev. J. F. Keller, in 1909, who serves as the pastor at present.

United Brethren Church.—A United Brethren church was built at Breinigsville in 1880, which belongs to the Lehigh mission. Before the founding of this church, Revs. B. K. Keck, and J. Lowry, had held services at the private houses of those who had leanings toward this denomination. These ministers belonged to the Winebrennarians, and later were received into the United Brethren Church. The cornerstone was laid in 1880, while Rev. W. H. Uhler was the pastor of the congregation. The presiding elders, Revs. H. H. Gelbach and L. W. Craumer and Pastor Uhler took part in the services. The building is a brick structure and was dedicated in 1881, the foregoing elders and the pastor, Rev. W. H. Uhler, officiating.

The first trustees were Reuben Butterweck, Rev. F. J. Butterweck, and Jonathan Bear. The first and present class leader was Jonathan Bear, he having served in this capacity uninterruptedly since the organization of the congregation. Frank Shimer was later appointed a trustee. The present trustees are Jonathan Bear, William Bear, and Frank L. Bear. The membership at one time was between 35 and 40. The church was located in a Reformed and Lutheran community which accounts for the fact that it never became a large congregation. The congregation was served regularly by pastors until 1912. Since that time regular preaching services have been discontinued. The congregation is occasionally supplied with preaching services by ministers of the East Pennsylvania Conference. Although they have no regular preaching services Bible meetings are held on Sunday evenings and mid-week prayer-meeting are conducted by the class leader. There is a Sunday school connected with the church of which Jonathan Bear is the superintendent. The following pastors have served the congregation: Rev. W. H. Uhler, 1880-1881; Rev. H. B. Spayd, Rev. P. L. Haines, Rev. M. H. Miller, 1896 and 1899; Rev. W. Lamey, 1895-1896; Rev. L. B. Koons, 1897-1899; Rev. J. R. Blecker, 1900-1901; Rev. Lehr, 1901-1902; Rev. L. B. Koons, 1902-1907; Rev. Peiffer was associated with Rev. Koons from 1905-1907; Rev. Richter, 1908-1909; Rev. M. H. Miller, 1909-1911; Rev. R. S. Arndt, 1911-1912. In this denomination the pastors are appointed every year by the presiding elder, occasioning very often a change of pastors each year. They were changed and appointed in the fall of year. The regular preaching services have been discontinued since 1912.

*Rev. Owen Leopold served the congregation from 1874 until his death in June, 1904.

FAMILY GRAVEYARDS.

There were a number of these private graveyards in the township. There are only two of them remaining; the Trexler burial-ground situated at Breinigsville on the farm of John R. Gonser, and the Grim burial ground, situated near the Grim's independent district schoolhouse. There were several in the vicinity of Fogelsville. On the farm now owned by George Albright, a number of the Fogels had been buried. On the property now owned by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company, viz, on the Moyer and the Mohr farms, these burial grounds were formerly located. These have been removed to the St. John's Union cemetery, of Fogelsville, having given way to the development of the cement industry. The following were buried in these plots: On the Moyer farm, Hans Jacob Moyer, the progenitor of the Meyer family, and the Grim burial ground, situated near the Grim's independent district school house, on the farm owned by Henry Grim, aged 80 years, a descendant of Egidius Grim. The farm has been in the family for five generations.

John Jacob Moyer, born May 29, 1763; died March 8, 1852, aged 88 years, 9 months, and 9 days.

Daniel Moyer, born Dec. 30, 1768; died Nov. 28, 1843, aged 75 years, and 28 days.

Maria Moyer, nee Schubert, wife of Daniel

Moyer, born Jan. 17, 1778; died Nov. 2, 1845; age, 67 years, 9 months, and 16 days.

There are two other graves upon which the inscription on the stones is illegible.

The following were buried on the Mohr burial ground:

Herman Mohr, the progenitor of the Mohr family.

Heinrich Mohr, born Dec. 8, 1756; died Feb. 16, 1843, age, 86 years, 2 months, and 8 days.

Magdalena Mohr, wife of Heinrich Mohr, born Sept. 24, 1761; died Nov. 22, 1815; age, 54 years, 5 months, and 5 days.

Herman Mohr, born March 27, 1754; died Feb. 8, 1840; age, 85 years, 10 months, and 12 days.

Anna Margareth, wife of Herman Mohr, born April 26, 1761; died Nov. 5, 1845; age, 84 years, 6 months, and 9 days.

Herman Mohr, born July 2, 1786; died Sept. 12, 1832; age, 46 years, 2 months, and 10 days.

Anna Maria, nee Stettler, wife of Herman Mohr, born July 30, 1786; died July 8, 1847; age, 60 years, 11 months, and 8 days.

Peter Mohr, born March 9, 1782; died Sept. 19, 1830; age, 48 years, 6 months, and 10 days.

There were also a number of children buried on this burial ground the names of whom are not known.

Grim Burial Ground.—The following inscriptions appear on that burial ground:

Nathanael Grim, son of Jacob Grim and his wife Catharine, nee Hottenstein; born Feb. 11, 1793; died Aug. 28, 1793; age, 6 mos. 17 dys.

Elizabeth Catharina Grim, wife of Heinrich Grim; born Dec. 13, 1774; died Dec. 24, 1852; age, 78 yrs. and 11 dys.

Rachel Grim, daughter of Heinrich and Catharina Grim; born May 12, 1797; died Sept. 9, 1864; age, 67 yrs., 3 mos. and 27 dys.

Heinrich Grim; died April 3, 1829; age, 73 yrs. and 18 dys.

Esther, daughter of Jonas and Elizabeth Grim; born Dec. 21, 1830; died Jan. 9, 1832; age, 1 yr. and 19 dys.

Esther Walbert; 21 dys; 1831.

Esther Grim; died April 30, 1831; age, 15 yrs., 6 mos. and 15 dys.

Maria, daughter of Solomon Grim and his wife Maria; born March 7, 1835; died June 1, 1835; age, 2 mos. and 24 dys.

Emilia, daughter of Solomon Grim and his wife Maria; born April 28, 1836; died Jan. 10, 1839; 2 yrs., 8 mos. and 12 dys.

Persival Heirum, son of Solomon and Maria Grim; born Nov. 18, 1838; died May 18, 1842; age, 3 yrs. and 6 mos.

Karl Jeremias, son of Solomon and Maria Grim; born No. 20, 1840; died May 21, 1842; age, 1 yr., 6 mos. and 1 day.

Several graves without an inscribed tombstone appear on the burial ground among which are the graves of Egidius and Jacob Grim, Egidius being the pioneer settler.

Trexler Burial Ground.—A cement wall surrounds the burial plot into which was inserted a marble slab with the following inscription: "Within this inclosure lie the remains of Peter Trexler (1st) and his wife Catharine, who came to this country prior to 1720. He purchased the farm upon which they are buried on No. 18, 1729."

Peter Trexler, came from Germany prior to 1720. Died 1758.

Catherine Trexler, wife of Peter Trexler, came from Germany prior to 1720.

Ruben Peter Trexler, born Feb. 1, 1721; died Aug. 25, 1798; age, 77 yrs., 7 mos. and 25 days.

Catharina Trexler, nee Winck, wife of John Peter Trexler, born Aug. 7, 1728; died Aug. 14, 1815; age, 87 yrs. and 7 days.

Johannes Trexler, born Oct. 12, 1750; died June 22, 1829; age, 78 yrs., 8 mos. and 10 dys.

Jonathan Trexler, born May 1, 1762; died May 11, 1846; age, 84 yrs. and 10 dys.

Elizabeth Trexler, nee Horlacher, wife of Jonathan Trexler; born Jan. 9, 1772; died April 3, 1854; age 82 yrs., 2 mos. and 25 dys.

Johannes Petrus Trexler; born Jan. 2, 1772; died Mar. 9, 1828; age, 56 yrs, 2 mos. and 7 dys.

Rachel Trexler, nee Fogel, wife of Johann Peter Trexler; born Sept. 11, 1784; died Jan. 1, 1867; age, 82 yrs., 3 mos. and 21 dys.

Sophia Trexler, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth Trexler; born Mar. 4, 1793; died Oct. 9, 1864; age, 71 yrs., 7 mos. and 5 dys.

David Trexler, son of Jonadan Trexler and his wife Elizabeth; born Nov. 27, 1796; died Aug. 20, 1823; age 26 yrs., 8 mos. and 23 dys.

Solomon Trexler, son of Jonadan Trexler and his wife Elizabeth; born May 22, 1810; died Aug. 31, 1814; age, 4 yrs., 3 mos. and 10 dys.

Maria M. Trexler, nee Diefenderfer, wife of Jonas Trexler; born April 1, 1815; died Feb. 5, 1850; age, 34 yrs., 10 mos. and 4 dys.

Lydia Lichtenwalner, daughter of Sem. and Maria Lichtenwalner; born Aug. 11, 1834; died Dec. 28, 1834; age, 4 mos. and 17 dys.

SCHOOLS.

Early Schools.—One of the earliest schools in the township was taught in the building known as the Sand Hill schoolhouse, situated in the eastern part of the township, near the line of South

Whitehall township, on the road leading from Fogelsville to Allentown. Jacob Bachman and his wife, Maria, gave one acre and sixty-three perches of land for school purposes, for the sum of five shillings, by deed dated Sept. 27, 1806, to Jacob Woodring, David Brown, and Christopher Mohr, of Whitehall, and John Meyers, of Macungie township, "trustees for and in behalf of such contributions as may hereafter be contributed toward building or erecting a schoolhouse on the hereafter granted lot or piece of land." This building was sold to Jonathan Litzenberger, who paid $500 for it. The building was still in the early days of the writer, but it has now succumbed to the ravages of time and practically all traces of its location are now obliterated. Some of the teachers who taught here were Dawes Rudy, Nathan Snyder, John Lenhart, John Beck, Jacob Graul, William Woodring, John Wint, Solomon Brobst, and Charles Unbescheiden. This building was used for school purposes until 1845. For a long time this place was notorious for its supposed presence of spooks which persons claimed to have seen, and the result was that the superstition gained such a firm hold upon some people that they dreaded to pass the place by night. But no doubt at this writing the superstition has given way to greater enlightenment, and that the spook stories belong only to the innocent days of the past.

What was possibly the earliest schoolhouse in the vicinity of Fogelsville, was erected on the Jacob Moyer farm, and was about a half mile distant from Fogelsville to the northwest. Samuel Wagner taught here during the years 1828 and 1829. The building was a log schoolhouse.

Another log schoolhouse stood upon the land of Samuel Kuhns, about a mile east of Fogelsville, on the road leading to Allentown. This was known as Keck's school. School was taught here until the public schools were commenced, when it was changed into a dwelling. It was torn down more than twenty years ago and all traces of it have been obliterated. Amos Morris taught school here in 1835.

Another school was that which was known as Miller's school. The land upon which this schoolhouse was built was donated by Andrew Miller, consisting of nearly four acres. The first schoolhouse was a log building. This was later changed into a dwelling house. The house was rented and the income thereof was expended for school, other than that provided by the school board. This dwelling is now owned by William George. After the log schoolhouse was no longer adequate for the housing of the pupils a schoolhouse of brick was erected on the western end of the school property. This brick building is still standing and used for school purposes, despite the fact that there have been years when the building was filled to its utmost capacity. Among the teachers who here were A. C. Hittle, P. P. Mohr, Wallace Zimmerman, John Eisenhard, and Samuel Gehringer, the latter teaching here at present.

In Fogelsville, a double schoolhouse of stone was built on the land granted for school purposes by Solomon Fogel, the grant consisting of one acre. This building was the first schoolhouse in these parts which was supplied with a steeple and bell. It was built in 1838 by the St. John's Lutheran and Reformed church, which was then a Union church. When the public school system, accepted in 1842, at a meeting held by the members of St. John's church, "it was unanimously decided that the schoolhouse should be used for a free school, and given up to the directors of the free schools of Upper Macungie without rent." At a meeting of the congregation held on the 30th of July 1843, it was unanimously decided "that the treasurer of the St. John's church and schoolhouse is requested to give a deed of conveyance of the half of the schoolhouse to the president of the school directors of the Upper Macungie township school district." It was used for school purposes until 1867, when it conveyed to J. H. Straub, who changed it into a dwelling. It is now owned by the St. John's Reformed church. Among the teachers who here were John N. Lichtenwalner, William C. Lichtenwalner, Mrs. Emma Fogel Innes, G. H. B. Reiff, Samuel P. Reber, and Dr. E. O. M. Haberacker.

A double schoolhouse of stone was erected at the same time that the church was erected. It was owned by the church. In one room school was taught, and in the other part of the building the teacher lived. George Desch was one of the teachers, and resided in the building. In 1882 it was torn down, and a new building erected on the old site for the use of the sexton of the church.

For the year 1833 the township paid for the education of the poor, under the act of March 29, 1824: $8.37; 1834, $23.80; 1835, $76.18; 1836, $57.25; 1837, $83.92; 1838, $73.17; 1839, $130.80.

Public Schools.—The common school law, which was passed in 1834, did not meet with the favor of the people at large. Very many were opposed to pay a tax for school purposes. The system was not at once accepted, but through the efforts of Solomon Fogel, David Schall, Solomon Kuder, and others, the people voted in favor of accepting it, with the understanding that in a year or so if they felt so disposed, they could have the old system re-established. The school board levied a tax but did not at once venture to collect it. With the money which was received from the state a number of schoolhouses were erected. After the schools were in operation for a few years under the new system, they grew in favor with the people from year to year, until there are now not any to be found who openly oppose them. The public school system was finally accepted by the township in 1842. The following were the officers of the first school board: David Schall, president; John Lichtenwalner, secretary; Solomon Fogel, treasurer. Before the office of the county superintendent had been created, Dr. H. J. Haberacker conducted the examination of teachers for the township.

In 1856 the district had eleven schools and 590 pupils enrolled. The teachers received a salary of twenty-five dollars per month, which was regarded as a princely salary. Superintendent H. H. Schwartz, in his report of 1860, says: Upper Macungie has efficient directors, and their schools have filled with able teachers, who in accordance with the wish of the board, organized last fall a teachers' association, and met regularly every two weeks. The salary of the teachers in 1860, was $28 per month, which was the highest paid by any district in the county, outside of Allentown and Catasauqua. The report of 1868 contains the following: "The building erected in the thriving village of Fogelsville, was built according to a plan suggested by the Hon. J. P. Wickersham, at the teachers' institute held at Catasauqua in November, 1866. It is but just to observe that the citizens contributed about $1,300 toward the erection of the building, and it is the only one in the county furnished with Uhlinger's patent school desks, also furnished by the citizens." All the schoolhouses are substantial brick buildings. Three of the buildings have been erected in the last few years. The schools are supplied with full sets of outline maps, and a wall map of the state. The present school board is composed of the following: Clayton Trexler, Amos Stauffer, Irvin Poh, George F. Haas, and R. J. Schmoyer. The schools of the township are the following: Breinigsville (upper), taught by Miss Edith Walbert; Breinigsville (lower), taught by John Shoemaker; Millers, taught by Samuel F. Gehringer; Stettler's, taught by James Barner; Kuhnsville, taught by Irwin Stettler; Clover Dell, taught by Fred Wendling; Leibensperger's, taught by Miss Carrie Kuhns; Schaeffer's, taught by Wilson Saul; Trexlertown (advanced), taught by Harvey Walbert; Trexlertown (primary), taught by Miss Eva Grammes; Schlough's, taught by Charles Smith; Newtown, taught by Levi Trexler; Fogelsville (advanced), taught by P. P. Mohr; Fogelsville (primary), taught by Miss Catherine Seibert. In 1867-68 the teachers received a salary of forty dollars per month; in 1883-84 the average salary was thirty-three and a half dollars. In 1912-13 the teachers received from forty to fifty dollars; the first year teachers receive forty dollars, the second year teachers receive forty-five dollars, and after that they receive fifty dollars. The average salary received was forty-eight dollars. The report of the school year of 1912-13, shows 390 pupils and fifteen teachers. The total receipts for school purposes, $10,704.60, and the valuation of the school property, $17,000. The school term is seven months.

Independent School.—An independent school district was formed in the township by an act of the legislature in about 1860. It is known as Grim's Independent District. It has one school with seventeen pupils enrolled. The salary of the teacher is fifty dollars per month. The teacher is Miss Frances Werley. The school term is eight months. The school directors are as follows: Wilfred Herman, Willoughby Danenhower, Emanuel Dietrich, and George Mengel.

OFFICIALS.

Early Officials.

Constables.—The first constable of whom there is any record was John Brandenburg, appointed in 1737. Joseph Olbert was appointed constable by the court of quarter sessions, held at Easton, in October, 1752. Adam Braus was appointed Sept. 16, 1755.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.*

- 1840—David Schall, Willoughby Fogel.
- 1845—David Schall, Willoughby Fogel.
- 1850—David Schall, Willoughby Fogel.
- 1855—David Schall, Willoughby Fogel.
- 1857—William C. Lichtenwallner.
- 1860—John Albright.
- 1861—Solomon Fogel.
- 1865—Henry Stine.

* Prior to 1840 the justices having jurisdiction over this territory were elected in districts, and their names will be found in the civil list of the general history.

- 1866—Solomon Fogel.
- 1868—John Albright.
- 1869—Thomas C. Breinig.
- 1874—Robert H. Fogel, Herman Rupp.
- 1877—William F. Roth.
- 1878—A. D. Fegely.
- 1879—Robert H. Fogel.
- 1880—William F. Roth.
- 1881—Robert B. Spinner.
- 1884—Peter R. Bear.

PRESENT OFFICIALS.

School Directors.

- Clayton Trexler.
- Amos Stauffer.
- Irvin Poh.
- George F. Haas.
- R. J. Schmoyer.

Supervisors.

- Wilson Leiby.
- William Moatz.
- Dr. E. H. Kuhns.
- Assessor*, Hiram Fegley.
- Tax Collector*, Lloyd Huff.
- Constable*, Elmer Krause.

Auditors.

- Elias Bear.
- Harry Eisenhard.
- Hiram Fegley.

UPPER DISTRICT.

- Justice of the Peace*, Peter R. Bear.
- Registration Assessor*, Alvin J. Desch.
- Judge of Election*, Rev. John F. Keller.
- Inspectors*, Fred Bittner and Charles F. Miller.

LOWER DISTRICT.

- Justice of the Peace*, Silas Croll.
- Registration Assessor*, A. J. Grammes.
- Judge of Election*, Elenius Reinhard.
- Inspectors*, Irving I. Stettler and William S. Bortz.

CHAPTER XLIV.

UPPER SAUCON TOWNSHIP.¹

The territory comprising the township of Upper Saucon² was first entered upon by Europeans, for the purpose of settling therein, between the years 1730 and 1735. Its original white settlers consisted of a mixed population of English, German,³ and Welsh descent, and belonging to the Quaker, Mennonite, German Reformed, and Lutheran denominations. The neighborhood of Coopersburg was settled almost exclusively by Mennonites, that portion of the township lying between Limeport and Lanark almost as exclusively by Quakers, while in the balance of the township the population was mixed, the Germans and Lutherans probably predominating.

A knowledge of the settlement of the township can be conveyed in no way better than by the following:

HISTORY OF ORIGINAL TITLES.

(The order in which the tracts are referred to is according to the dates of the warrants, the numbers refer to the map.)

Nos. 26 and 42. On the "three and twentieth" day of August, 1682. "William Penn, Chief Proprietor and Governor of "ye Province of Pennsylvania," by Indentures of Lease and Release, conveyed to Matthew Marks, of Folkstone, county of Kent, carpenter, the quantity of five thousand acres of land, to be allotted and set out in said Province in accordance with the terms of said indentures. On March 13, 1682 Marks conveyed his title to these lands to Richard Haynes, Jr., of London, merchant."⁴ These indentures were made in England, the land to be located and surveyed thereafter. On Dec. 12, 1700, a warrant was issued to the heirs of Haynes, "who had died in the mean time," in pursuance of which there was surveyed and patented, to them in 1730, in the right aforesaid, the aforesaid quantity of land, three tracts, of one hundred and fifty acres each, of which were located on or near "Saucong" Creek.

On June 23, 1743 the heirs of Haynes for the consideration of £220; 17 shillings, conveyed these three tracts to Joseph Samuels of Saucong Creek, joiner. He settled on the tract designated in his deed as No. 2. "Northern half of No. 42," established his residence on the site of the mansion house on the farm now belonging to the Isaac B. Meyers estate. On Nov. 23, 1747 he conveyed the tract to Henry Brunner, of Oley, by whose descendants a large part of it has been held ever since. Mrs. Isaac B. Meyers being a great-great-granddaughter of his. The tract is now owned by the Isaac B. Meyers estate, the John G. Blank estate, Newberry Ulmer, Edward Ulmer, and William Trumbore.

No. 26. On July 4, 1743, Samuels conveyed the tract designated on his deed as No. 1, to David Owen of Philadelphia, who established his residence on the farm now of Frank B. Heller. A large part of this tract too, might be said to have remained in the family ever since. Paul Heller, grandfather of Frank B., having purchased it from his step-daughter, Elizabeth Owen, a great-granddaughter of David Owen. The tract is now owned by Frank B. Heller, William Mast, H. T. Erdman, O. G. Erdman, Augustus S. Ohl, J. M. Erdman, Alfred A. Sell, Henry Shiffert, and W. N. Simon.

No. 42. (Southern half.) On July 4, 1743 Samuels conveyed his remaining tract to his son, Isaac, who established his residence on the farm now of Alfred A. Sell. The tract is now owned by Alfred A. Sell, Charles E. Weaver, William Moyer, William Cressman, Edward Ulmer, and the John G. Blank estate.

Nos. 38 and 118. A short time before his death, in 1718, William Penn made his last will and testament, in which, among many other bequests, he bequeathed to his grandsons, Springet Penn and William Penn, each the quantity of ten thousand acres of land, to be allotted and set out in some proper and beneficial places in the province of Pennsylvania. On April 16, 1729, Springet Penn conveyed his title to these lands

¹ Compiled by Frank B. Heller.

² "Saucon," Indian origin, derived from Sakunk, a name apparently first applied to an Indian village at the mouth of Saucon Creek, and afterwards to a large tract of country lying on both sides of the creek from its source to its mouth. Sakunk was derived from Sa-ku-wit, the mouth of a creek.

³ Mostly Palatinates.

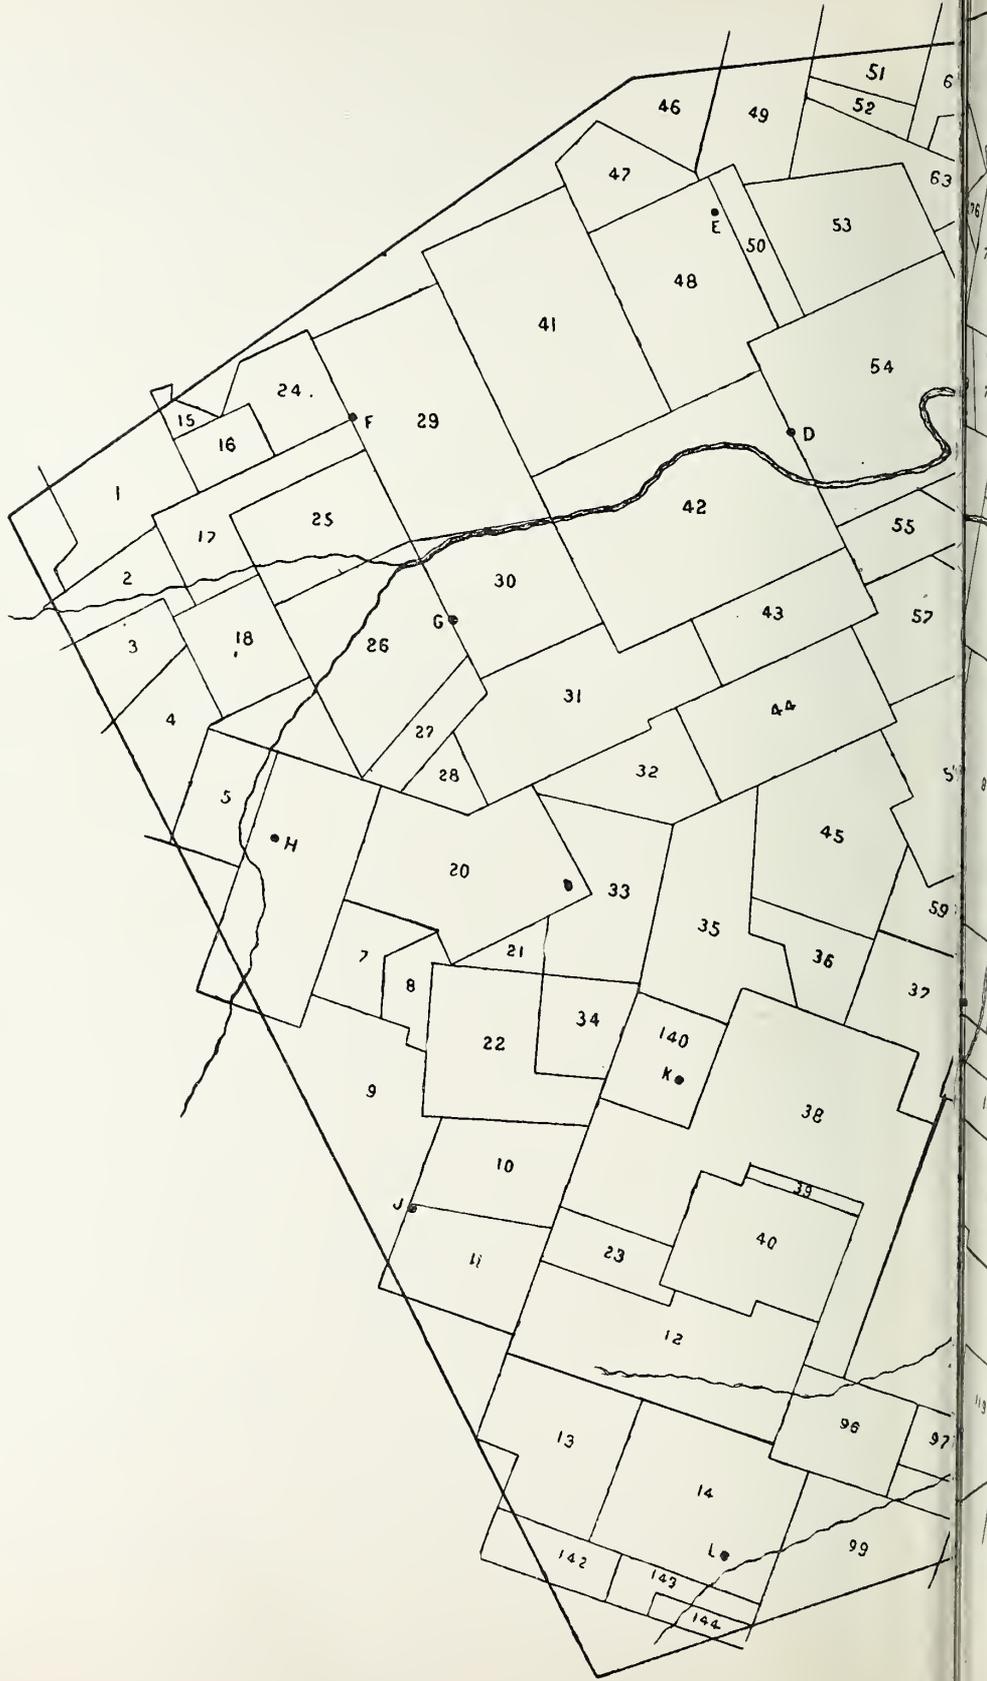

⁴ The apparent discrepancy in these dates is accounted for by the fact that the legal year of England then began on March 25, hence the 23d of August occurred before the 13th of March.

1 per pea the sett lish ing forn neig excl tow alm bala mix prec
A can foll

(
to i nun
N eth'
Chi of I leas cour thou in s of s conv
Hay dent loca 1700
Hay

1
2
a na at tl a la creel derib
3
4 cour glan
Aug

(DIAGRAM) SHOWING LOCATION OF ORIGINAL SETTLERS
 OF UPPER SAUGON TOWNSHIP.

p p th se li ir fo no ex to al ba m pr

ca fo

to nu et C

of le: co
th in of co
H de loc
17
H
—

2
a 1
at a 1 cre dei
3
4 cot gla
Au

to his brother, William, who soon after conveyed his title to all to William Allen, to whom a warrant, under date of March 5, 1730, was issued, in pursuance of which the land was located and surveyed to him, one tract of three hundred and seventy-two acres and another of three hundred acres falling within the township. Allen soon after sold the greater part of the three-hundred-and-seventy-two-acre tract to Philip Geissing, and the greater part of the three-hundred-acre tract to John Reezer, both to yield and pay to him, if lawfully demanded, a quit-rent of one pepper-corn annually. The three-hundred-and-seventy-two-acre tract is now owned by Henry Bean, Daniel Detweiler, Jacob Greenwald, Morris C. Schneck, S. L. Stephens, John H. Stroud, F. C. Black, the Thomas Trumbore estate and is occupied by the new cemeteries adjoining the Blue Church property. The three hundred acre tract is now owned by A. F. Landis, John Jacoby, Sylvanus Landis, Harry Fehnel, Jessiah Frantz, Oscar Landis, the P. and R. R. Co., and constitutes a part of Coopersburg.

No. 94. On Jan. 30, 1732, a warrant was issued to Casper Wistar for several tracts of land, one of three hundred acres of which was located in the township. On May 24, 1737, Wistar conveyed his title to this tract to George Zewitz, to whom or to Wistar it was confirmed by patent about this time. The tract is now owned by Henry Landis, the Samuel Hartranft estate, the Michael Landis estate, the W. G. Landis estate, the Rev. Jacob S. Moyer estate, Rev. M. O. Rath, Charles Beck, H. G. Hartman, David Bassler, J. J. Geissing, Annie Clymer and W. H. Fogel.

No. 40. On June 8, 1734, a warrant was issued to Christian Newcomer, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, May 8, 1738, a tract of one hundred and twenty-one and a half acres. The tract is now owned by S. L. Stephens, Monroe Wimmer, Jeremiah Wannemaker, and Miss McIntosh.

No. 44. On Oct. 23, 1734, a warrant was issued to John Burk for one hundred and fifty acres, but he not complying with its terms it became void, and another warrant for the same tract was issued to Michael Cyder, or Seider, in pursuance of which it was patented to him Sept. 20, 1752. Burk had established his residence on the site of the present mansion-house on the farm of Samuel Seider (deceased); he had also further improved the land, for all of which Seider paid him a sum mutually agreed upon. The greater part of this tract has remained in the Seider family ever since. It is now owned by P. S. Fenstermaker, a lineal descendant of Michael Seider, Jacob Rice, Charles Schnell, Oliver Schnell, the W. P. Weidner estate and John Beck.

No. 29. On Nov. 9, 1734, a warrant was issued to Henry Keiber, alias, Geber, in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him a certain tract of land situate on "Saccoon" Creek, and on the 7th of December, 1739, another warrant issued to him for another tract, adjoining the above, but he failing to comply with the terms of his warrants, the land was forfeited to the proprietaries, who caused another warrant, bearing date Dec. 18, 1742, to issue to Henry Taylor for the two tracts. In pursuance of this latter warrant there was patented to Taylor, June 20, 1743, a tract of two hundred and twenty-seven and a half acres. Fully one-half of the tract remained in the family, "though under the name of Schneider" until quite recently, it is now owned by James Lichtenwalner, Charles B. Egner, W. H. Walbert, Stephens and Slough and Paul Mattes.

No. 25. On March 17, 1735, a warrant was issued to Owen Owen for a tract of land situate near the head of "Socung" Creek. In pursuance of this warrant there was patented, Sept. 26, 1735, to the said Owen a tract of one hundred acres. After the death of Owen the tract came into the possession of his son, David, who conveyed it to Christopher Hansel, Jan. 8, 1760. Hansel was the first to erect a dwelling thereon, which he did on the site now occupied by the mansion-house on the farm of James Kidd. It is now owned by James Kidd, Charles B. Egner, W. H. Knappenberger, Theodore Gessner and the heirs of Abraham Heller, dec'd.

No. 67. On Oct. 31, 1735, a warrant was issued to Samuel Newcomer, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, March 28, 1738, a tract of two hundred acres. He established his residence on the site now occupied by the old Yeager homestead. The tract is now owned by Hiram Yeager, Oscar Weaver, L. W. Weaver and others.

No. 54. About 1735 a warrant was issued to William Murry (Mory), in pursuance of which there was patented to him soon after a tract of three hundred and fifteen acres, on Saucon Creek. The tract is now owned by S. L. Stephens, Jonathan Haas, Lewis Trexler, Thomas D. Scholl, W. S. Stephens, William Trumbore and G. R. Heller.

No. 95. About 1735 a warrant was issued to George Bachman, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, June 4, 1737, a tract of three hundred and thirty-four and a half acres. He established his residence near the site of the present Barron House, in Coopersburg. The tract is now owned by I. O. Solliday, Henry Landis, Margaret Stopp, A. M. Landis, the Jacob Yoder estate, J. M. Ritter, F. C. Blank, and George D. Young. It is farther occupied by the Mennonite Brethren in Christ meeting-house grounds, and a large part of the borough of Coopersburg.

No. 12. About 1736 a warrant was issued to Henry Rumfield, in pursuance of which there was patented to him soon after a tract of two hundred acres, now owned by Mrs. Newton Young, William Weaver, Harry Lambert, Frank Binder, Mrs. John H. Stroud, and L. W. Weaver.

No. 90. On Jan. 4, 1737, a warrant was issued to John Rothrock, in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him a tract of one hundred and one acres. This soon came into the possession of Henry Weber, who established his home on the farm now of C. A. Buck. It is now owned by C. A. Buck, Mrs. A. W. Reinhard and Mrs. James Marsteller.

No. 140. On Jan. 9, 1737, a warrant was issued to Conrad Walb, in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him a tract of seventy-six and three-quarters acres. This descended to his children, two of whom sold their interest in it to Philip Geissinger, who, with Jacob Walb, Andrew Walb, and Barbara Walb, applied for a patent for the same, which was granted April 24, 1758. The original homestead on this tract was erected by Conrad Walb, on the site now occupied by the tenant-house on the farm of Ephraim Geissinger. About ten acres of this tract are occupied by the Blue Church, its grounds and the adjoining cemeteries. The balance of the tract has remained in the Geissinger family ever since, and is now owned by Llewellyn E. Walter, a lineal descendant of Philip Geissinger.

Nos. 89, 106, 108. On Sept. 27, 1737, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Valentine Young, in pursuance of which there were patented to him three tracts, amounting to two hundred and eighteen and three-quarter acres, now owned by C. A. Buck, Jacob Leydich, John Huber, Jeremiah Gangaware, L. J. Gangaware, and the George Henn estate.

No. 14. About 1737, George Morsteller had issued to him a warrant, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, March 25, 1740, a tract of two hundred acres, now the property of Edwin S. Kuhns, Deborah Beichlag and Elmer Carl. It is farther occupied by the village of Locust Valley.

Nos. 46, 47, 48, 49. About 1737, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to John Tool, in pursuance of which there were patented to him about 1757 several adjoining tracts, amounting to three hundred and seventy acres, now owned by Henry Boehmer, F. W. B. Wittman, Esq., W. S. Stephens, Edwin Hartman, E. H. Wieder, Frank Weber, Harvey Minnich, J. R. Berkenstock, Morris Esterly and others.

No. 41. On Feb. 20, 1738, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Valentine Steinmetz, in pursuance of which there were patented to him, Feb. 9, 1760, and at various times thereafter, four adjoining tracts, amounting to three hundred and thirteen and three-quarters acres. He established his residence on the farm now owned by the John H. Laubach estate. The tracts are now owned by the John H. Laubach estate, J. G. Blank estate, Voortman Brothers, Harvey Minnich, Jacob Trapp and others.

No. 85. On Feb. 20, 1738, a warrant was issued to Michael Weaver, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, Nov. 11, 1741, a tract of one hundred and twenty-five and a quarter acres, now owned by Solomon Hartman, Daniel Hartman and Mrs. James Marsteller.

No. 58. On June 26, 1738, a warrant was issued to Benedict Caman (Gehman) for one hundred acres of land; but he not complying with its terms it became void, when another was issued to Balthausen Beil for one-half of it, and one to Samuel Newcomer for the balance and an adjoining tract of twenty-five acres. These were patented to them March 22, 1743.

Beil's tract is now owned by the W. P. Weidner estate, and Jacob Buchecker and Newcomer's by Mrs. Orlando Clauser, James Bahl, Frank Hartman and others.

Nos. 111 and 112. On July 28, 1738, a warrant was issued to John Apple, in pursuance of which there was patented to him thereafter a tract of three hundred acres, now owned by Jacob Grim and George Rabich.

Nos. 60 and 92. On Sept. 13, 1738, a warrant was issued to Richard Thomas for three hundred acres of land; but he not complying with its terms it became void, and on Jan. 2, 1741, another warrant issued to John Blackledge, alias Blockley, for the same tract, and an adjoining one,—the two, upon being surveyed, amounting to three hundred and sixty acres. These were patented to Blackledge Feb. 22, 1748. The first residence on the tract stood on the site of the mansion-house on the farm of the late Andrew Wint. The tracts are now owned by the Thomas Laubach estate, Mrs. A. W. Reinhard, W. E. Steinmetz, Abraham Yoder, John Laubach, W. H. Wittmer, Amandas Lambert, Jonas Xander, Ammon Kratzer and Robert Ohl. The two latter and the Centre Valley School House are on the smaller tract.

No. 43. On Oct. 4, 1738, a warrant was issued to Joseph Samuels for a tract of ninety-two and a half acres, adjoining Nos. 2 and 3 of the tracts purchased by him from the heirs of Haynes; but he not complying with the terms of his warrant it became void, and another was issued to Henry Brunner, Nov. 23, 1747, in pursuance of which the tract was patented to him May 22, 1761. It is now embraced in the farms of Isaac B. Meyers, Newberry Ulmer and Alfred A. Sell.

No. 27. On Oct. 27, 1738, a warrant was issued to Owen Owen, by virtue of which there was patented, Dec. 13, 1769, to his son, David Owen, a tract of forty-five and a half acres, designated as "Patience," and adjoining No. 1, of the Haynes tracts, "heretofore referred to as having been purchased by him of Joseph Samuels." The tract is now included in the farms of Jacob M. Erdman, Frank B. Heller, O. G. Erdman, A. S. Ohl and Horace C. Shaffer.

No. 117. About 1738 a warrant was issued to John Yoder, in pursuance of which there was patented to him soon after a tract of 161½ acres, now owned by the Jacob Yoder estate, the John Yoder estate, C. D. Ott, Mrs. H. G. Yoder, the Henry Brinker estate. It is farther occupied by the grounds belonging to the old Mennonite meetinghouse.

No. 114. On June 8, 1739, a warrant was issued to George Strahan for one hundred and thirty-five acres, which seem to have been confirmed by patent to Peter Hillegass, some time thereafter. The tract is now owned by the Peter M. Landis estate, George Stroup, William H. Dorney and Titus Mohr.

Nos. 30, 28 and 20. On Aug. 11, 1739, warrants were issued to John Pugh for three hundred and fifty acres of land, one tract of one hundred and sixteen acres, and another of thirty-four acres, which were patented to Abraham Danahower, Dec. 20, 1753.

The 116 acre tract is now owned by Frank B. Heller, John Mock, and Charles E. Weaver, and is farther occupied by Seider's School House. The 34 acre tract by John Mock and Horace C. Shaffer. The remaining 200 acres, designated as "Hickory Dale," were patented to John Bitz, alias Pitz, Sept. 9, 1811, and are now owned by the Peter H. Trexler estate, Frank Schlener, William Kies, H. C. Shaffer, John Mock, Harvey Yoder, E. Z. Young, John Gaul, and the Wendle Simon estate.

Nos. 86, 87 and 88. On Nov. 7, 1739, a warrant was issued to Henry Weber, in pursuance of which there was confirmed to him by patent, Sept. 11, 1759, a tract of fifty and one-half acres, now owned by the Samuel Adams estate and Mrs. James Marsteller.

No. 55. On Jan. 21, 1740, a warrant was issued to William Morey, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, Feb. 14, 1744, a tract of fifty acres, now owned by Lewis Trexler.

No. 9. About 1740, Carl Lutwich Keiper first occupied a tract of about two hundred acres, now owned by Wilman Keck, Owen Engleman, Charles Miller, C. R. Groman, Mrs. Fred Jordan, Oscar Young and Mrs. Henry Fink, a part of the tract falls in Lower Milford.

No. 31. About 1740 a warrant was issued to John Thomas for two hundred acres, now owned by William Mast, S. L. Stephens, Thomas P. Sell, Clayton De Witt, and Christian Bailer.

Nos. 120, 121. In 1740, Tobias Bahl first occupied a tract of three hundred acres, now owned by John Kauffman, the John Bahl estate, Thomas Hackman, Thomas Iron Company, John Beidelman and others.

No. 17. On April 1, 1741, a warrant was issued to Owen Owen, by virtue of which there was surveyed to his son, Thomas Owen, a tract of ninety acres. This was conveyed by him to Christopher Hansel, to whom it was patented Nov. 19, 1759. The tract is now owned by Charles B. Egner, E. D. Jeans, Theodore Gesner, A. W. Trumbauer, Alvin Kehm and Peter H. Ohl.

No. 53. On April 1, 1741, a warrant was issued to Christian Menier for one hundred and thirty-seven acres; but he not complying with its terms it became void, and another issued to William Mory, March 29, 1743, for the same tract. It was confirmed to him by patent Feb. 14, 1744, and is now owned by the Elias Helmlener estate. This tract remained in the Mory family from the date of its patent until quite recently.

No. 50. On May 9, 1741, a warrant was issued to William Murry for a tract of thirty acres; this was confirmed to him by patent Feb. 14, 1741, and is now embraced in the farm of Edwin Hartman.

No. 68. On Oct. 19, 1741, a warrant was issued to Samuel Newcomer, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, March 22, 1743, a tract of forty-nine acres, now owned by the Charles T. Yeager and Abraham Diehl estates.

Nos. 8, 22, 10 and 21. On Jan. 10, 1742, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Samuel Everard Kop, Peter Marsteller, and Philip Geissinger, in pursuance of which there were surveyed to Kop one tract of one hundred and thirty-four and three-quarters acres and another of thirty-six acres, to Marsteller one of ninety and three-quarters acres, and to Geissinger one of twenty-two and a half acres; but Kop and Marsteller failing to comply with the terms of their warrants they became void, when another warrant was issued to Geissinger for the four tracts, amounting to two hundred and eighty-four acres; these were confirmed to him by patent Sept. 14, 1750, and are now owned by Mark Ruhe, Martin Simon, James Schnable, Oscar Young, Charles Walter, Jacob Seidel, Tilghman Kline, John Gaul and George Bienking.

No. 115. On Feb. 14, 1742, a warrant was issued to Christian Rinker, in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him soon after a tract of two hundred acres, now owned by Sylvanus Fry, Abraham Yoder, Charles Xander, and Milton Kleppinger.

No. 36. On Feb. 25, 1742, a warrant was issued to Balthausar Beil, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, Nov. 29, 1758, a tract of fifty-five and three-quarters acres, now owned by Henry Hersh, Menno Huber, Reuben Huber and John Mumbauer.

No. 6. On June 3, 1742, a warrant was issued to Thomas Mayberry, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, December 28th of the same year, a tract of two hundred and eight and a half acres. The tract is now owned by John Yoachim, William Miller, Lizzie Clader, Mrs. Henry Fink, Victor Cressman, C. W. Shaffer, L. J. Shaffer, Frank Schlener, the Gideon Roth estate, the Peter H. Trexler estate and Raymond Ritter. The sites of the village of Limeport and Dillinger's school-house are on this tract. Adam Warner seems to have had some title to the tract prior to Mayberry's occupancy of it, "probably a warrant which he allowed to lapse."

No. 37. On June 22, 1742, a warrant was issued to Rev. John Justus Jacob Berkenstock, in pursuance of which there was patented to his son-in-law, Peter Fuchs, March 1, 1775, a tract designated as "Foxcraft," and containing one hundred and ten and three-quarters acres. Berkenstock established his residence near the site of the present residence of Joseph E. Illick. The tract is now owned by Joseph E. Illick, Jacob Greenawalt and Genaah Jordan.

No. 45. About 1742, a warrant was issued to David Owen, by virtue of which there was surveyed to him soon after a tract of one hundred and fifty acres, now owned by C. J. and P. K. Erdman. The tract has been held by the Erdman family about 165 years.

No. 34. About 1742 a warrant was issued to George Bachman, in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him a tract of forty acres, now owned by Frank Kiess, Oscar Young and Harry Cramer.

No. 35. About 1742 a warrant was issued to George Reinhard, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, Nov. 10, 1762, a tract of one hundred and sixty-two acres, now owned by Norman J. Reinhard, Mrs. Elizabeth Yellis and Genaah Jordan.

No. 135. On Feb. 22, 1743, a warrant was issued to John Miller for a tract of seventy-one acres, but for some reason the tract was patented to John Yoder, Dec. 22, 1764. It is now owned by Edwin Fehnel and others.

Nos. 103, and 104. On Jan. 24, 1744, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Philip Trapp for several tracts of land, amounting to two hundred and ten acres. These were confirmed to him by patent, Dec. 14, 1762. Two of these tracts form the site of the village of Friedensville from the hotel to the school-house, the other is on the Lehigh mountain and remains woodland.

No. 93. About 1744 a warrant was issued to Andrew Wint for a tract of ninety-eight acres, which was confirmed to him by patent March 25, 1745. It is now the site of the village of Centre Valley.

No. 74. About 1745, Balthausar Beil first occupied a tract of about thirty-two acres, now the property of Henry Hartman.

No. 32. About 1745 Peter Marsteller drew a warrant in pursuance of which there was surveyed to him soon after a tract of eighty-six acres, now owned by John Kropf, John Pospischilla and Ezekiah Brinker.

No. 33. On Feb. 3, 1746, a warrant was issued to William Pitz, in pursuance of which there was patented to his son, Henry Pitz, May 2, 1788, a tract of one hundred and nineteen and a half acres, designated as "Pitzburg," now owned by Stive Sabler, William Schlosser, A. A. Sell, and George Schmelzer.

No. 113. On May 14, 1746, a warrant was issued to Henry Cressman for a tract of sixty-nine and a quarter acres, now the property of Michael McGovern.

Nos. 65, 71, 72, 73. On Oct. 13, 1746, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Peter Messemer and Jacob Lodwig for several adjoining tracts, amounting to two hundred and twenty-two acres, their interest in all of which they conveyed to Andrew Wint, to whom it was confirmed by patent June 2, 1763. The lands are now owned by L. W. Weaver and Jacob Hartman.

No. 105. About 1747, Erasmus Boschius first occupied a tract of twenty acres, now the site of that part of the village of Friedensville, lying south of the hotel.

No. 125. On Dec. 9, 1748, a warrant issued to Jacob Zewitz for a tract of one hundred acres, now owned by Elias Sassemann, Wallace Eisenhard and James Rau.

No. 4. About 1748, Frederick Derfingher first occupied a tract of one hundred and eighty acres, patented April 12, 1788, to Daniel Smith, and now owned by George Schrammel, the heirs of Henry Erdman, dec'd, and John Yoachim, a part of the tract falls into Milford.

Nos. 5 and 19. On Feb. 10, 1749, warrants were issued to David Owen, in pursuance of which there was patented to him Dec. 13, 1769, one tract of sixty-four and a half acres, designated as "Perplexity," now owned by John Yoachim, A. P. Shaffer, and Llewellyn H. Bitting, and another of forty-nine acres, now owned by A. S. Ohl and the estate of Solomon B. Reinhard.

No. 2. On March 2, 1749, a warrant was issued to John Elfree for a tract the extent of which cannot now be ascertained, but in pursuance of which a tract of fifty-eight acres, designated as "Duttsburg," was patented to George Dutt, Nov. 23, 1789. It is now owned by Hiram Koch, Charles Bachman, and Frederick Newhard.

No. 1. On July 20, 1749, a warrant was issued to John Koehler, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, Jan. 12, 1760, a tract of one hundred and forty acres, now owned by Wilman Reinbold, Charles Shuler, Harvey Woodring, F. Newhard, Myron Schantzenbach, A. W. Trumbauer and John Karness.

No. 80. On Dec. 21, 1749, and at various times thereafter, warrants were issued to Anthony Boehm, in pursuance of which there were patented to him, Nov. 13, 1762, three tracts amounting to one hundred and twenty-six and a half acres, now owned by Frank Hartman, Solomon Hartman, and the William H. Mohr estate.

No. 24. On May 21, 1750, a warrant was issued to Jacob Bachman, in pursuance of which there was patented to Philip Sharry, Feb. 11, 1794, a tract of seventy-one and one-fourth acres, designated as "Philipsburg," now owned by Elias Walb.

No. 7. On Aug. 7, 1750, a warrant was issued to Valentine Sherrer, in pursuance of which there was patented to Conrad Miller, Jan. 24, 1809, a tract of fifty-nine and a half acres, designated as "Millerstown," now owned by Raymond Ritter.

No. 3. About 1750, Frederick Gardner first occupied a tract of unknown extent, but the lands of Anthony Groff and Edwin Clewell are known to be part of it.

No. 16. On May 10, 1752, a warrant was issued to Thomas Owen, in pursuance of which there was patented to Mathias Egner, Jan. 25, 1790, a tract of thirty-nine acres, designated as "Gaul," now owned by E. D. Jeans. Edward M. Smith, Theodore Gesner and the Iobst estate.

No. 18. On Nov. 10, 1752, a warrant was issued to Thomas Owen, in pursuance of which there was patented to Mathias Egner, April 11, 1789, a tract of eighty-five acres, now owned by O. G. Erdman, Peter H. Ohl, Alvin Kehm, Jacob Sell and Frank B. Heller.

No. 69. On Jan. 4, 1754, a warrant was issued to John Newcomer, in pursuance of which there was patented to him, June 5, 1755, a tract of one hundred and twenty-six and one-half acres, now owned by Henry Hook, Mrs. William Erdman and others.

No. 56. On March 16, 1754, a warrant was issued to Balthauser Beil, in pursuance of which there was confirmed to him by patent, May 25, 1765, a tract of forty-two acres, now owned by Hiram Yeager and Henry Yeager.

For the following tracts no dates can be given:

No. 102. Matheis Otto first occupied a tract of about one hundred and twenty-five acres, which now forms the site of that part of the village of Friedensville lying north of the school-house.

Nos. 127, 128. Jacob Gongwer first occupied a tract of one hundred and fifty acres, now owned by T. H. Diefenderfer, Esq., and Amandas Hafler.

No. 91. Ludwig Bush first occupied a tract of thirty-four acres, now owned by Tilghman Young.

Nos. 130, 133. Adam Kurtz was the original owner of a tract of one hundred and fifty-eight and one-half acres, of which the lands of Thomas B. and Joel B. Weber are a part.

No. 129. John Philip Flexer first occupied a tract, of unknown extent, of which the lands of Mrs. E. G. Thomas are known to be a part.

No. 122. John Rothrock first occupied a tract of 130 acres, now owned by the Griffith Albright estate, Amandas Hafler, Mrs. John Bitz, and the Samuel Adams estate.

No. 49. John Tool drew a warrant for a tract of 100 acres now owned by Henry Reichard, William Hohe, Raymond Brown, Mrs. Tobias Kessler, and Servitias Diehl, a part of the tract falls into Salisbury.

No. 96. John Adam Stout first occupied a tract of 85 acres, now owned by S. L. Stephens, Peter Dietz, John Roth, H. G. Koch, and Lewis Roebuck.

No. 97. George Bachman drew the warrant for a tract of 38 acres, now owned by T. S. Cooper, Charles Shaffer and John L. Deily.

No. 98. Cornelius Crump first occupied a tract of 77 acres now owned by T. S. Cooper and Morris Reichenbach.

No. 137. Christian Fry first occupied a tract of 103 acres now owned by Alfred H. Mohr, Charles Fisher and A. F. Landis, a part of the tract falls into Bucks county.

No. 119. Coopersburg Station, and the farm of Dr. A. M. Gary occupy a part of a tract of 175 acres originally owned by John Yoder; about half of the tract falls into Bucks county.

Other original titles to tracts were held as follows:

No.	No.
11 George Bachman.	82 Anthony Boehm.
13 George Bastian.	83 Anthony Boehm.
15 Jacob Kebler.	84 Anthony Boehm.
23 George Bachman.	99 George Bechtel.
39 George Bachman.	100 Jacob Weaver.
52 Adam Romich.	101 Andrew Geissinger.
57 Henry Bachman.	107 Christian Fox.
59 Henry Bachman.	109 Bastian Nave.
61 Peter Rhinehardt.	110 Melchior Baer.
62 Lutheran Congregation of Upper Saucon.	116 Adam Romich.
63 William Schaffer.	123 Peter Bower.
64 William Mory.	126 Jacob Landis.
66 Balthauser Beil.	131 Jacob Weaver.
70 Balthauser Beil.	132 Henry Rinker.
75 Peter Messemer.	134 Daniel Kiever.
76 Henry Weaver.	136 Peter Mosteller.
77 Henry Weaver.	138 Christian Smith.
78 Henry Weaver.	139 Adam Romich.
79 Francis Hartman.	141 John Apple.
81 Henry Geissinger.	142 Leonard Boydelman.
	143 Jacob Bachman.
	144 Peter Cortz.

The accompanying map shows how the territory of the township was originally sub-divided into tracts. The numbers on the map correspond with those preceding the description of the respective tracts as given in the text.

The letters refer to places now more or less prominent: thus;

A Colesville.	L Locust Valley.
B Hartman's School House.	M Coopersburg O. F. Hall.
C Friedensville Church.	N Coopersburg Station.
D Heller's Tavern.	O Yoder's School House.
E Wittman's Corner.	P Mennonite Meeting House.
F Cross Roads at Egners.	Q Centre Valley Hotel.
G Seider's School House.	R Centre Valley Station.
H Dillinger's School House.	S Centre Valley School House.
I Limeport.	T Roth's School House.
J Crossroads at C. R. Groman's.	U Spring Valley.
K Blue Church.	V Franklin School House.

The Germans seem to have found the new country more congenial than their English brethren, for the decendants of the Geissingers, the Yoders, the Gehmans, the Neikummers, the Reinhardts, the Morys, the Wints, the Gongwers, the Webers, the Mostellers, the Egners, the Berkenstocks, the Rothrocks and the Rumfeldts are still here, while the Owens, the Samuels, the Mayberrys, the Warners, the Pughs, the Blackleges, the Thomases, the Williamses and the Tools, have all passed away without leaving a single descendant bearing their names in the township.

Organization.—Saucon was erected into a township in March, 1743, upon the petition of Christian Neikummer¹, Philip Geissinger, George Zewitz, Henry Rinker, John Yoder, John Rezer, Christian Smith, Henry Bowman, Samuel Neikummer, Benedict Gehman, Valentine Steinmetz, Henry Rinker, Jr., George Trohn, Adam Warner, Owen Owen, Thomas Owen, John Williams, John Tool, John Thomas, Joseph Samuels, Isaac Samuels, William Mory, Michael Weber, John Apple, Jacob Gongwer², Henry Keiber, George Bachman, George Mosteller³, and Henry Rumfeld.⁴ Whether the two Saucons were originally erected into one or two townships does not seem possible to determine, but as constables and supervisors were appointed in 1743 for both Upper and Lower Saucon, and as there was among the petitioners but one who is not known to have resided within the limits of what is now Upper Saucon it would be easy to conclude that it was erected into a township by itself. On the other hand the signers set forth in their petition, that they had unanimously agreed to have the township known as Saucon (no distinguishing prefix) and it would be just as easy, therefore, to conclude that they desired the erection of but one township out of the whole territory. It is possible, and quite probable too that a difference of opinion may have existed between the citizens of the two sections. That Upper Saucon desired the erection of but one township while Lower Saucon desired a separate organization and therefore refused to join in the petition. But however this may be, each of the two divisions had assumed a separate organization prior to 1750 and Upper Saucon then had an area somewhat exceeding fourteen thousand acres, outlined thus: (the dotted line represents the present, South Eastern boundary.)

Its territory was reduced in extent on two occasions since that time, first in 1752, when its 1 Now Newcomer.

2 Now Gangaware.

3 Now Marsteller.

4 Now Rumfield.

southern projection was cut off to straighten the line dividing the two counties, and again in 1879, when the borough of Coopersburg was erected out of a part of it. It was enlarged in 1839, when its northwestern boundary was removed from the foot to the top of the Lehigh Mountain. It now contains 23.8 square miles, or an area of fifteen thousand two hundred and thirty-two acres, inclusive of Coopersburg.

Our history thus far has served to inform our readers as to the names borne by the pioneer settlers of the township, and in order to inform them as to who followed these, or were added to their number after the expiration of what might be termed the experimental era, we will introduce a few tax-lists.

UPPER SAUCON, 1762.

Philip Hall, Collector.

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Apple, John,25 | Geissinger, Henry, ..16 |
| Apple, Martin,30 | Gangewere, Jacob, ..20 |
| Brincker, George, ... 4 | Gangewere, Michael, .10 |
| Brunner, Henry,27 | Geissinger, Philip, Jr., 20 |
| Bitz, Henry, 5 | Gon, Hannes, 6 |
| Bush, Ludwig, 5 | Geissinger, Philip, ...60 |
| Baal, Philip,20 | Geissinger, Jacob, ...25 |
| Brang, Jacob, 5 | Goodman, Philip, 4 |
| Buchecker, Henry, ..15 | Hayntz, Burgort, 4 |
| Beahm, Anthony, ...25 | Hall, Philip,16 |
| Byel, Baltzer,30 | Hansel, Stophel,20 |
| Buchecker, Philip, ..18 | Johnson, Christopher, 12 |
| Bachman, Henry, ...20 | Knepple, Peter, 8 |
| Barlip, Andrew, ... 4 | Knepple, Melchort, ..12 |
| Bechtel, Jacob,16 | Kurtz, Peter,10 |
| Bachman, George, ..18 | Kah, John, 9 |
| Bitz, William, 7 | Kehler, Gabriel, 7 |
| Blanck, George, 7 | Kirshner, George, ...10 |
| Drap, Philip,16 | Kocken, Henry,15 |
| Diel, Christian,16 | Lantes, Peter, 4 |
| Dannenbauer, Abra- | Ludwig, Jacob, 7 |
| ham,15 | Luckenbach, John, .. 6 |
| Eshelman, Jacob, ...10 | Master, Adam, 5 |
| Erdman, Andrew, ...18 | Montz, Jacob,30 |
| Fox, Christian, 4 | Musselman, John, ...18 |
| Flexer, Michael, ... 5 | Miller, Henry, 6 |
| Franck, Peter, 5 | Meyer, Jacob,18 |
| Franck, George, 4 | Marsteller, Frederick, 5 |
| Fox, Peter,10 | Mory's widow,18 |
| Frank, Adam, 6 | Molack, Jacob, 4 |
| Grosh, George, 5 | Newcomer, John,25 |

- | | |
|----------------------------|---------------------------|
| Newcomer, John, ...24 | Simon, Baltzer, 5 |
| Owen, David,26 | Stinmetz, Valentine, ..10 |
| Owen, Thos., 7 | Thyss, Peter,16 |
| Rincker, Christian, ..14 | Tool, John,28 |
| Rinker, Uly, 7 | Wind, Andrew,14 |
| Rieser, David,17 | Weaver, George, 6 |
| Rumfeld, Henry,14 | Weaver, Henry,30 |
| Reinhard, George, ..12 | Weaver, Jonas, 5 |
| Shreater, John, 4 | Walther, George, 9 |
| Snyder, Michael,15 | Young, Valentine, ...17 |
| Shenker, George,10 | Yoder, Jacob,25 |
| Sebitz, George,10 | Yoder, John,28 |
| Shenner, Henry, ...22 | Ziegler, Jacob, 7 |
| Shenner, Mathias, ... 4 | Zeitsloff, Gerhard, .. 8 |
| Seiger, Gabriel,10 | Zebitz, Abraham, 4 |
| Sell, Henry, Senior, ...20 | Zoller, Philip,13 |
| Siffert, George, 4 | Zebitz, Henry, 6 |

Single Men.

- | | |
|-------------------|-----------------|
| Samuel Bachman. | Isaac Samuel. |
| John Bachman. | William Samuel. |
| George Bitz. | Hannes Smith. |
| Casper Bop. | Aquilla Tool. |
| George Dreisbach. | Stephen Tool. |
| John Geissinger. | Caspar Yoder. |
| Jacob Orth. | |

DECEMBER 27, 1781.

- | | |
|---------------------|----------------------|
| William Bell. | Isaac Samuels. |
| Conrad Brinker. | Abraham Seider. |
| Baltzer Buchecker. | Gerhard Seisloff. |
| Philip Buchecker. | John Stahl. |
| John Bieber. | Peter Stehr. |
| John Bachman. | Philip Siller. |
| Philip Bahl. | George Swenker. |
| Andrew Brunner. | George Kun. |
| Jacob Bittenbender. | Peter Kneply. |
| Mathias Derr. | Charles Ludwig Koch. |
| Charles Derr. | Jacob Keply. |
| — Hottenstein. | Adam Kortz. |
| Mathias Egner. | Nicholas Kortz. |
| Andrew Erdman. | John Koch. |
| Jacob Eshelman. | John Kooken. |
| John Einhard. | Jacob Kappers. |
| George Erdman. | Daniel Kooper. |
| Michael Flixer. | Michael Ludhap. |
| Peter Fuchs. | Peter Laubenstein. |
| William Grothouse. | Peter Lynn. |
| Philip Geissinger. | Felix Lynn. |
| Conrad Giess. | John Lister. |
| Henry Geissinger. | Samuel Lister. |
| Abraham Geissinger. | Peter Meyer. |
| John Geissinger. | Jacob Mory. |
| Jacob Gangware. | Gotthard Mory. |
| Frederick Huff. | Jacob Meyer. |
| John Holdeman. | Jacob Molloch. |
| Esther Hall. | William Mory. |
| Daniel Horlocher. | Widow Musselman. |
| Francis Hartman. | William Mory. |
| Michael Hillegass. | John Newcomer. |
| Christopher Jason. | John Newcomer, Jr. |
| Valentine Jager. | David Owen. |
| Adam Kuper. | David Owen, Jr. |
| Melchoir Kneply. | Thomas Owen. |
| Bastian Ruff. | David Reeser. |
| George Ruff. | Casper Rumfield. |
| John Rumfield. | George Rumfield. |
| John Shoudt. | Henry Reinhard. |
| Philip Sharry. | Leonard Reichard. |
| George Shaffer. | Adam Romig. |
| Peter Shaffer. | Jacob Rumfield. |

David Snyder.
Henry Sell.
Aquila Tool.
Michael Weaver.
Adam G. Weaver.
Philip Wind.
Ehrhard Weaver.

Additional Taxables.

John Greter.
Jonathan Owen.
Benedict Fink.
George Bachman.

Single Freeman.

Andreas Erdman.
Yost Erdman.
Andrew Reinhard.
Andrew Shaffer.
Henry Yonson.
John Bitting

Peter Wash.
Henry Wind.
Henry Weaver.
Simon Walter.
Abraham Yoder.
Christian Young.
Michael Ziegler.

George Frank.
Philip Dotterer.
Peter Bush.
Jacob Bender.

Samuel Meyer.
Martin Apple.
John Susloff.
Peter Eshelman.
Peter Sell.
Jacob Meyer.

Jacob Weiss, Sr.
Andrew Weiss.
Valentine Weidener, Sr.
Valentine Weidner, Jr.
Jonas Weber.
Peter Wichall.
Jacob Weber.
Joseph Welt.
John Waldman.
John Weber, Jr.
Jacob Werst.
Jacob Ott.

Widow Owen.
Solomon Rumfeld.
Leonard Reinhard.
Adam Rudenhauer.
Andrew Reinhard.
Henry Reinhard, Sr.
Jacob Erdman.
Peter Fuchs.

Abraham Fretz.
Benedict Fink.
Philip Flexer.
Joseph Funk.
Peter Frank.
John Frank.
Joseph Frey, Sr.
Joseph Frey, Jr.
Samuel Geissingner.
David Gangeware.

John Garnet.
Jacob Gangaware.
John Geissingner.
Henry Geissingner.
Abraham Geissingner.
John Geissingner.
Abraham Geissingner.
Jacob Gramm.

George Garner.
Henry Gangaware.
Abraham Geissingner.
Daniel Geissingner.
Jacob Hartman.
George Horlocher.
John Horlocher.

Jacob Hartzell.
John Hillegass.
Adam Heller.
Abraham Hottle.
Michael Hottel.
John Hottle.
John Jacoby.

John Janson.
Frederick Jordan.
Melchoir Kneply.
Peter Kneply.
John Kneply.
Nicholas Kramer.
Joseph Koch.

Henry Knauss.
Tobias Koch.
Carl Ludwig Koch.
George Koch.
Henry Reinhard, Jr.
John Rumfeld.
Christian Rinker.

John Dotterer.
John Frank.
John Young.
John Moore.
John Apple.

Casper Rumfeld.
Samuel Reichard.
Jacob Ruff.
John Reisser.
David Reisser.
Joseph Rothrock.
George Reinhard.
Daniel Romich.
John Romich.
Conrad Rickert.
Peter Sell.
Valentine Shaffer.
John Seider.
Abraham Seider.
Abraham Sheaffer.
Frederick Stoll.
George Shantzenbach.
Jacob Shantzenbach.
Conrad Steer.

Christian Sheaffer.
George Sheaffer.
Valentine Sheaffer.
Jacob Stauffer.
Jacob Schneider.
Philip Sharry.
Abraham Smidt.
Daniel Schmidt.
Philip Sellers.
Jacob Seider.
Stephen Tool.

Jacob Weiss.
Henry Wind.
John Waldman.
Henry Walman.
Peter Weber.
Frederick Weidman.
Andrew Wind.
John Weber.

George Werst.
Peter Young.
Casper Young.
Henry Young.
Christian Young.
John Young.
Henry Yotter.

Abraham Yotter.
John Yotter.
Valentine Young.
Martin Zeisloch.
Jacob Yotter.
Abraham Ziegler.
Martin Apple.

John Stahl.
George Deily.
Valentine Ruff.
Leonard Ox.
George Reinbold.
John Weaver.
Jacob Hubcr.

Widow Bitting.
Stoffle Ziegler.
Philip Koch.
John Hall.
Jacob Smith.
Henry Ott.
John Tisson.

Single Freeman.

John Seider.
Jacob Yotter.
Peter Yotter.
Philip Buchecker.
Jacob Bachman.

Total tax, £460 7s 9d. Frederick Huff, collector.

ASSESSMENT FOR 1812.

Jacob Arnold.
John Apple.
George Alshouse.
Widow Alshouse.
Henry Buchecker.
John Bastian.
Philip Buchecker, Jr.
Philip Bahl.
Baltzer Buchecker.
George Blank.
Abraham Berkenstock.
George Brinker.
Michael Benner.
George Bachman.
Conrad Brinker.
Tobias Bahl.
Jacob Bahl.
Widow Bachman.
Jacob Berger.
David Bachman.
Enoch Bachman.
George Brinker.
George Buchecker.
Philip Buchecker.
Jacob Bachman.
David Bachman.
Henry Buchecker.
George Christ.
Daniel Cooper.
Jacob Dietz.
Daniel Derr.
Jacob Drenkler.
John Drohn.
David Derr.
Philip Dotterer.
Jacob Everroth.
Jacob Erdman.
John Everhard.
Solomon Egner.
Daniel Egner.
John Egner.
Peter Egner.
John Erdman, Sr.
Andrew Engleman.
Jacob Engleman.
Jonathan Kauffman.
Peter Kurtz.
Nicholas Kramer.

Michael Koch.
Jacob Kneply.
Job Koch.
Jacob Koch.
Philip Kauffman.
Rudolph Kauffman.
David Kauffman.
Samuel Lander.
Magdalena Leob.
Jacob Lander.
Andrew Werst.
Michael Landis.
Peter Laubenstine.
Peter Lynn.
Jacob Mory.
Peter Mory.
David Mack.
Philip Mushlitz.
William Mory, Sr.
William Meier.
Andrew Martin.
William Mory, Jr.
George Mushlitz.
Jacob Mory.
Joseph Mill.
Gotthard Mory.
Frederick Mohr, Sr.
Frederick Mohr, Jr.
Abraham Meier.
Samuel Meier.
Peter Meier.
Jacob Miller.
Conrad Miller.
George Miller.
Jacob Meier.
Philip Newcomer.
John Newcomer, Sr.
Henry Newcomer.
Abraham Newcomer.
John Opp.
Mathias Ochs.
Michael Ott.
Peter Weber, Jr.
George Weber.
Adam Wint.
Andrew Walter.
Jacob Wentz.
Philip Windt.

Jonathan Bachman.
 Christian Kauffman.
 Isaac Rumfeld.
 George Buchecker.
 Melchior Knepley.
 Christian Young.
 John Johnson.
 Henry Reichard.
 John Newcomer.
 David Derr.
 John Shnyder.
 George Hottle.
 William Bitting.
 Philip Smith.
 Daniel Romich.
 Henry Weidner.
 George Mushlitz.
 Michael Fasbinder.
 Amos Brunner.
 John Knepley.
 Jacob Bahl.
 Jacob Ziegenfuss.
 Jacob Meier.
 Jacob Frank.

Jacob Dotterer.
 George Rumfeld.
 Philip Rumfeld.
 George Hillegass.
 Peter Meier.
 Samuel Meier.
 Andreas Wind.
 William Harlachner.
 John Scotland.
 Peter Buchecker.
 John Derr.
 Jacob Meier.
 John Jacoby.
 Peter Wind.
 Peter Cooper.
 Solomon Brinker.
 Charles Clemmer.
 Mathias Zeislove.
 Abraham Dietz.
 Samuel Fink.
 Abraham Yotter.
 Jacob Bach.
 John Deily.

road was built in 1875. Except for a few short stretches it followed the old road from Allentown to the countyline beyond Coopersburg. It was declared a free road again, by court, June 7, 1909. It is now being rebuilt under state auspices. The North Pennsylvania Railroad passes through the township. It was completed and opened for traffic in 1856. The first passenger train passed through the township December 26 of that year. It is now under lease to the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, and is known as its Bethlehem branch. Centre Valley and Saucana are the only stations in the township.

The railroad of the Saucon Iron Company was built about 1870. Its entire length of about two and one-half miles was in the township. It was abandoned about 1890.

CHURCHES AND CONGREGATIONS. Seven buildings, dedicated to the service of God, stand in the township, viz: the old Mennonite Meeting House, near Coopersburg, the St. Paul's "Blue" Church, the Frieden's Church, at Friedensville, the Meeting House of the United Mennonite Brethren in Christ near Coopersburg, the Meeting House, formerly of the English Methodists, but now of the New Reformed at Friedensville, the Meeting House, formerly of the Free Methodists, but now of the Baptists at Centre Valley, and the Union Chapel in Centre Valley.

The first Meeting House of the Mennonite congregation, near Coopersburg, was built about 1738. It was constructed of logs, with a swinging partition in the middle, which divided it into two apartments; one of these was used for church, the other for school purposes, but when on extraordinary occasions the attendance upon Divine worship was larger than could be accommodated in one apartment, the partition would be raised and the two apartments thrown into one; this seems to have been a very temporary structure, for we find it replaced by another in 1747, and built on the same plan. The present Meeting House was erected in 1841, and is the third which occupies the site. The first congregation serving here was what are now known as "the old-school Mennonites," but as there are scarcely half a dozen families remaining in the neighborhood which still adhere to the creed of their fathers, these have had no regular pastor here since the death of Rev. Samuel Moyer, in 1877. The new-school Mennonites are now the only denomination holding services here regularly but those of the old school still retain all their original rights and privileges. It is impossible now to fix the order in which this congregation

Total tax, $609.

The taxes in those days were trifling compared with present rates. A farm of two hundred acres paid from eighty cents to one dollar and fifty cents. Laborers paid from ten to twelve cents, while those classed as "poor" paid no taxes, though some of them owned from thirty to forty acres of land. In 1763 the inhabitants of Upper Saucon were classified thus: eighty farmers, nine laborers, two tavern-keepers, two weavers, one carpenter, three blacksmiths, one miller, one doctor, one cooper, four poor, with neither shoemaker, saddler, tailor, wagoner, mason, nor tanner. In 1773 the township contained five thousand seven hundred and ninety-two acres of cleared land one thousand and twenty-eight acres of which were in grain. In 1752 the township had a population of six hundred and fifty souls.

ROADS.—The township is covered by a network of roads, but owing to the imperfect manner in which the early records were made and the change in the names of the points that fixed their termini, as well as those of the land-owners whose lands abut on the roads, it is very difficult to recognize local roads after the lapse of so many years, and even with some of the more important ones we are only able to fix the date of their opening approximately. The road entering the township on the Lehigh Mountain, near Lanark, passing Lanark and Heller's tavern to a point near the residence of William P. Weidner, and thence to Locust Valley, was opened about 1750. The road from Coopersburg to Bethlehem, via Centre Valley, Friedensville, and Colesville, in 1755. That from Friedensville to Limeport, via Heller's tavern and Seidler's school-house, in 1773.

The Allentown and Coopersburg turnpike was ministered to by its pastors, owing to the fact that no records were kept, and that two or three sometimes preached here at the same time, but the following is learned from their tombstones in the adjoining cemetery: Jacob Meyer died May 4, 1790, and served till his death,—how long does not appear. Samuel Moyer, the elder, died about 1832. Michael Landis died Aug. 5, 1839, after a service of thirty-five years.

preached here for some time. Christian Clemmer, of Berks County, preached here about twenty years and died in 1883. A new-school minister, Jacob S. Moyer, "new school," died in 1909, after a service of twenty-four years. Andrew B. Shelly, Elwood Shelly and William Fretz, all new school, are the present incumbents.

Many theories might be advanced as to the date and also as to the site of the first church

ST. PAUL'S (BLUE) CHURCH.

William Landis died Aug. 4, 1848, after a service of eight years. Valentine Young died April 27, 1850, after a service of forty years. Samuel Moyer, the younger, died Aug. 24, 1877, after a service of about twenty years. The latter first preached for the new school, but returning to the faith of his fathers, closed his life as a minister of the old school. John Oberholtzer organized the new-school congregation, and edifice erected by the Lutheran congregation now serving at the Blue Church. But as one theory is apparently as strong as the other, we will content ourselves by enumerating the several circumstances upon which theories might be based and leaving our readers to form their own theories and deduct their own conclusions. The warrant for the land on which it stands was drawn by Conrad Walb, Jan. 9, 1737. The records of the Lutheran congregation serving here date back to 1740. In 1745 they informed Muhlenberg that they were provided with a church and school-house. On March 16, 1754, a warrant was issued from the land-office to Andreas Wind, in trust for the Lutheran congregation of Upper Saucon, for twenty-five acres of land, which was located near the site of the present residence on the farm of Jacob Hartman, near Friedensville.

On Dec. 30, 1757, Philip Geissinger entered into an agreement with Andreas Erdman and George Reinhardt, in behalf of the Lutheran congregation of Saucon, in which, for the consideration of £3, 2s. 6d., he bound himself to convey to the said congregation (after receiving a patent for his land) the undivided half of four acres, three and one-half acres to be considered as sold, and one-half acre as donated. In 1758, Andreas Wind sold the interest of the Lutheran congregation in the land, for which a warrant had been drawn by him. On April 24, 1758, Philip Geissinger, obtained his patent for his land, and on Sept. 4, 1761, he conveyed to George Reinhardt, Andrew Erdman, George Kirschner, and Balhauser Beil, elders and vestrymen of the Evangelical or Lutheran congregation of Upper Saucon, one full moiety or equal half of four acres for the use of said congregation. Tradition also has it that the members of the congregation at one time contemplated building their church on the farm of Rev. Berkenstock (lately Solomon Greenawald), but were induced to change their plans by the liberal offer of Philip Geissinger. From these facts we may safely conclude that the congregation was organized no later than 1740, that they had a church and school-house somewhere in 1745, that they had no place of worship which was satisfactory to all of them in 1754, and that the first church was built on the present site about 1758.

When it became a union church of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations cannot now be ascertained, and it is not safe to date this event prior to 1802; but here the record opens with a book, on the first page of which is an inscription, which, translated, reads thus: "Church book of the Evangelical Reformed congregation in Upper Saucon township, called Organ Church, begun by John Henry Hoffmeier, present minister of the congregation, and member of the reverend Synod, in the year of Christ, 1802."

But the church was not then really a union church. The Reformed congregation enjoyed their privileges by sufferance only, they did not acquire vested rights until January 21, 1826, and then through the following transaction: On this date John Egner, and Peter Heist, "Lutheran church officers," conveyed to David Geissinger, "then owner of the tract of land of which the church property was originally a part," the original four acres and an adjoining tract of 2 acres and 128.8 perches acquired by the congregation by purchase May 27, 1816, and on the same date, January 21, 1826, the said David Geissinger conveyed to John Egner and John Berger, elders and vestrymen of the Lutheran and "Presbyterian" church, of Upper Saucon, for the use of the congregations, the said two tracts together with another tract of 1 acre 4.2 perches, making the whole tract then owned by the congregations 7 acres, 133 perches. This has been added to by purchase since, making the whole tract now owned 8 acres, 156 perches.

The above transaction not only conferred upon the Reformed congregation, vested rights, but it also cured the very manifest defect in the original title.

The present church, is the third occupying the site. The first, built of logs, stood in the southwestern corner of the old cemetery; the second built of stone, stood partly on the site of the present one, though extending a little farther south and west. This, it would appear from Rev. Hoffmeier's record, was known as "the Organ Church." When it was built cannot be ascertained. The present one was erected in 1833 at a cost of $5,173.81.

The following, taken from the discourse of Rev. John Vogelbach, on the occasion of the centennial anniversary of the founding of the Lutheran congregation, furnishes a catalogue of the ministers of the same.

In 1745, Rev. H. A. Muhlenberg, who then served several congregations in Philadelphia and vicinity, was appealed to by the Saucon congregation to come and serve them with word and sacrament. He did so, but resigned at the end of a year on account of ill health and the great distance he had to come. He then sent to them one Vigero, a teacher, who committed sermons and delivered them to the congregation, Muhlenberg visiting them on occasions of communion and confirmation.

On Aug. 15, 1748, the first congregational conference of the Lutheran Synod was held in Philadelphia, and the Saucon congregation was represented in it. In the autumn of 1748, Vigero left them. In March, 1749, Rudolph Heinrich Schrenk came from Lüneburg to Philadelphia, and Muhlenberg at once recommended him to the congregation, whom he served for some time on probation. He was ordained Nov. 5, 1752, and continued to serve them till 1754, when he accepted a call to Raritan, N. J., returning, however, occasionally, to preach for them. Schrenk's successor was Johannes Andreas Friederici (or Friedrichs), first as layman, then as ordained minister. He served about eight years, a part of which time he lived beyond the Blue Mountains. In 1763, Johannes Joseph Roth, a Catholic student, came into the neighborhood, interested himself in the congregation, and asked to be admitted into the Lutheran Synod, and become pastor. In October of the same year he was admitted and installed. He died in 1764, and was buried in the cemetery belonging to the church. Who served them from 1764 to 1769 does not appear, but communion was held regularly, except perhaps in 1769, when no record was made. In the latter part of 1769, Jacob Van Buskirk, from Germantown, came here, but when he left and who his successor was does not appear. It was very probably George Frederick Ellisen, who is recorded as having held communion here Sept. 29, 1793. After his departure the congregation were for several years without a regular pastor, but the sacraments were regularly administered by pastors of neighboring congregations. In 1800, Rev. F. W. Geisenheimer administered the Lord's Supper. Rev. Professor Roeller, of Goshenhoppen, preached here too. From 1800 to 1803, Johannes F. Cramer preached in the other congregations belonging to the charge, and therefore probably here, too, though the records are silent as to him. On April 12, 1806, Frederick Plitt confirmed catechumens and administered the Lord's Supper. He preached here only a short time, was addicted to drinking, and soon after he left was found drowned in a mill-dam at Mifflinburg, Columbia county. Rev. Heiny succeeded Plitt, and served nine years. He was succeeded by Heinrich G. Stecher, who served two years.

¹The word "Presbyterian" used above is taken from the deed, but it manifestly means Reformed.

In 1819, Rev. Benjamin German was called. He accepted, entered upon his pastorate in the spring of 1820, and continued to serve until his death, which occurred in September, 1848. He was buried in Allentown. His brother, William German, succeeded him, and he too remained in the service of the congregation until his death, June 26, 1851. He was buried at the Salsburg Church. The vacancy occasioned by the death of William German was temporarily filled by Augustus L. Dechant, then a Reformed licentiate.

On March 3, 1852, Rev. John Vogelbach accepted a call from the congregation, and served them until March, 1857, when he followed a call to Philadelphia.

In May, 1857, Rev. William Rath assumed the pastorate, was assisted during the later years of his service by his son, Rev. Mron O. Rath. He resigned in 1888, was succeeded by Rev. E. A. Yehl, who resigned in 1893, and was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Kistler, the present incumbent.

When where and by whom the Reformed congregation now worshipping in the Blue church was organized and who its members were does not now seem possible to ascertain if indeed there was such an organization prior to the nineteenth century. Almost certain it is that they had no church building, nor perhaps a regular place for their services, prior to 1802, when Rev. Hoffmeier's record was made. This record was continued in the handwriting of Rev. Hoffmeier until 1806, when it stops, not to be resumed again until 1825, and then by Rev. Daniel Zöller. In 1826 Rev. Samuel Hess assumed the pastorate and continued to serve until 1867, when he resigned on account of advancing years and declining health. He was in turn succeeded in 1868 by Rev. Amandas N. Zeigler in 1873 by Rev. Robert C. Weaver, in 1891 by Rev. Jacob G. Dubbs and in 1913 by Rev. Thomas M. Kresley.

Frieden's Church, at Friedensville, was built in 1793, enlarged in 1817, and rebuilt in 1839. It is a Union Church of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations. The Lutheran congregation here was organized by Rev. John Conrad Yeager, who continued to preach for them until 1731, when he was succeeded by his son, Joshua, who served until 1885, when he resigned, was succeeded by Rev. A. R. Horne, D.D., who served until 1902, was succeeded by Rev. H. A. Kunkle who served until 1907 and was succeeded by the present incumbent, Rev. C. J. Cooper, D.D.

The Reformed congregation was organized by Rev. John Henry Hoffmeier, who preached for them until about 1815, when he was succeeded by Rev. Dechant. Dechant was succeeded, "at what time we know not," by Rev. Daniel Zöller, who served till 1857. In 1857, Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs was called, and ministered to them until 1871, when he resigned. He was succeeded by Rev. Richard T. Apple, who served two years, and was succeeded, in 1873, by Rev. R. C. Weaver. The present incumbent, Rev. Jacob G. Dubbs, has served since.

The Meeting House of the United Mennonite Brethren in Christ, near Coopersburg, was erected and the congregation organized in 1869.

This organization was effected principally by Rev. Abel Strawn, who preached for the congregation until the close of the year 1881, when, according to a decree of Conference, which provided in substance that no minister should serve the same congregation for a period exceeding three years, he was succeeded by Rev. Abraham Kauffman, who, in 1884, was succeeded by Rev. Jonas Musselman.

The Meeting House of the Methodist Episcopal congregation at Friedensville, was built by Dr. H. S. Clemens, and the congregation organized in 1863, by Rev. Nathan B. Durell, of the Philadelphia Conference. The congregation was served by the following pastors: Rev. Durell, from 1863 to 1865; Rev. Cummings, from 1865 to 1868; Rev. Kimble, from 1868 to 1871; Rev. Harrison, from 1871 to 1874; and Rev. Harkins, from 1874 to 1877, since which time the congregation has remained without a pastor. The church building has recently passed into the hands of the new Reformed Church and the congregation worshipping there are ministered to by Rev. D. G. Wiegner.

The Meeting House of the Free Methodists, at Centre Valley, was erected and the congregation organized in 1883. The congregation was ministered to by Rev. Manshart, but it soon declined and the Meeting House was acquired by the Baptist denomination, since which time the services there were conducted by Revs. West, Hanna and Sutton. The chapel at Centre Valley was erected in 1885 by an association consisting of Lutherans, Reformed and Mennonites. Those who worship there belong to congregations elsewhere. The pastors of the congregations at the Blue Church preach there regularly.

SCHOOLS.—The first schools established in the township were parochial or church schools, and were opened simultaneously with the organization of the congregations to which they belonged; the first about 1738, by the Mennonites, the second about 1740 to 1745, by the Lutherans. The buildings in which they were held are noted and described under the head of churches. A third building, used for school and doubtless for church purposes also, was erected by the Quakers about 1745, on lands of John Thomas, now Clayton DeWitt, but the school, the congregation, and the church have all passed away; and this might almost be said of the old, well-filled cemetery; for it is obliterated and its site is occupied by the house-yard of Mr. DeWitt. The names of but two teachers of this era are preserved to us,—Vigero, who taught and preached at the same time for the Lutherans and Peter Knepley, of whom we find the following entered in the first church book of the Lutheran congregation now serving at the Blue Church: "June 23, 1757, Peter Knepley, the schoolmaster, married to Christina Gangaware." Later, as the settlements pushed farther away from these places, more school accommodations became necessary, and schools were opened in private houses. Of the earlier of these we know nothing, but schools of this kind are known to have been held at the houses of John Egner, now James Kidd, Erhard Weaver, now Charles E. Weaver; William Samuels, now Alfred A. Sell; Frederick Wittman, now John Yoachim; David Horlocher, now I. B. Meyers and doubtless others. It is impossible to define or limit the era of this kind of schools. Some of them were continued in neighborhoods long after school-houses had been erected in others, and some were opened even in the neighborhood of school-houses,—these latter to meet a desire then beginning to be felt for instruction in the English language, "the teaching in the school-houses, except that of the Quakers being almost exclusively in German.

During the last quarter of the eighteenth century school associations began to be formed in the several neighborhoods, funds raised, school-houses erected, and teachers employed. Some of the earlier of these teachers scarcely deserved the name; there was no system in their employment. Frequently an individual, "who was none other than a tramp," would go into a neighborhood, make some pretense to mental culture, open a subscription for pupils at so much per head, and if successful in collecting a sufficient number, would open a school, or an apology for one, with his birch on his desk and his flask inside or in his pocket. It is related of the last one who taught at the Quaker school-house, heretofore referred to, that he loved his dram, and that on the last day of his term some of the larger boys presented him with a bottle of whiskey, got him drunk, and persuaded him to play on the violin, while they engaged in dancing. One or two lessons of this kind would suffice to make the people more circumspect in the employment of teachers, and thus the schools were improved. About 1825 English began to be slowly introduced. In 1828 provision was made for the education of the poorer class, and Upper Saucon paid for that purpose as follows: 1828, $12.95; 1830, $14.42; 1833, $30.22; 1834, $76.41; 1835, $137.95; 1836, $142.61; 1838, $167.92.

In 1834 when the common-school law was passed, it produced intense excitement in the township. Violent opposition to it developed itself, and at the election upon the question of its adoption but few votes were cast in its favor, its supporters became the objects of the enmity of whole neighborhoods, and in this way were induced to abandon the contest. So intense was the feeling against it that during the time that its adoption was optional, when a politician desired to have the full vote of the township, brought out all he did was to have a rumor spread that the school law would be voted upon, and almost the last man would be out. It was not adopted until 1848, when its adoption became obligatory. Six schools had been established prior to this time by associations at the following places: Blue Church, Friedensville Church, Mennonite Meeting House, Coopersburg, one near Heller's Tavern, known as Heller's, and one near Seider's store, known as Seider's.

Of the teachers of the last two described and overlapping eras, the names of the following are preserved: Frederick Arnold, who taught at the house of John Egner and at Seider's school-house; Jesse Samuels, who taught at the house of William Samuels and at Seider's; Daniel Fried, who taught at Frederick Wittman's; _____ Proctor, _____ Oberholtzer, _____ Jenkins, Peter Gerhard, Michael Urffer, Anthony Loutenberger, Joseph Wittman, Andrew K. Wittman, and George Blank, who taught at Seider's; John Lobb, David Minichinger, John H. Bernd, and a Mr. Musselman taught at the Blue Church; Gibson Innes, John Wilson, Lewis Bannister, and Joel Tarre, who taught at Coopersburg; _____ Barthalmus, _____ Rudy, and _____ Riedy, who taught at Heller's; and Henry Knipe, who taught at a school-house which stood near the site of the residence of Enos Rechenbach, and which was superseded by the one built later at Coopersburg. An old school-house stood where the Saucon Iron Company's railroad crosses the road near the residence of Reichard. It was taken down about the year 1800, and another one built on the present site of Heller's. This was destroyed by fire in 1808, another erected in 1809, and the present one in 1895.

We have now reached the day of public schools and of records. The township took the first step toward the adoption of the new system at the spring election in 1848, when the following board of directors were elected: Sanford Stephens, Henry Erdman, John Brunner, Jacob Rice, Charles E. Christ, and George Blank. These organized by electing Charles E. Christ as president, and George Blank as secretary. They raised by taxation for school purposes the first year $536.86, but this was found to be insufficient, and three hundred dollars were borrowed. They built two school-houses the first year, one called the Socritarian, opposite the site of the present Centre Valley school-house, at a cost of two hundred and twenty-five dollars, and another, called the Franklin, near the residence of Philip Gangaware, at a cost of two hundred and ninety-five dollars. The following teachers were appointed: Aaron L. Butterwick, to teach at the Blue Church; Augustus F. Hallenbach, at Friedensville; Mary Jenkins, at Heller's; George Blank, at the meeting-house; George R. Gates, at the Socritarian; Uriah Brunner, at the Franklin; William T. Cramer, at Coopersburg; and Solomon Fehr, at Seider's. The school-term was fixed at six months, and the salary of teachers at twenty dollars a month. The schools were attended by five hundred and fifty-three pupils,—three hundred and four males and two hundred and forty-nine females. The average attendance was thirty-four. Four hundred and twenty-nine learned English, one hundred and twenty-four German, thirty-six grammar, sixty-five geography, and two hundred and thirteen arithmetic. Since then additional school houses were built, and schools opened as follows: Locust Valley, in 1850; Washington, in 1853; Yoder's, in 1858; Dillinger's, in 1859; Hartman's (called Union), in 1861; Webster's, at Friedensville, in 1873; and a second one in Coopersburg, in 1876. Until 1854 the school at Friedensville was held at the church, but in that year a school-house was erected. The school at the Blue Church was held in the basement of the church until 1868, when a school-house was built. The school at the Meeting House was held in a school-house belonging to the Mennonite congregation until 1883, when a new one was erected. The old school-house at Coopersburg, which, on account of its shape, was called the Octagon, was replaced by a new one in 1857. The one at Centre Valley in 1859, the Franklin in 1874, the Washington in 1875, and the Locust Valley in 1879. Seider's and Heller's schools until recently were held in old association school houses but these were replaced by modern brick structure with steeples and bells, the former in 1896 and the latter in 1895.

The school-houses are all furnished with blackboards, patent desks, maps, charts, globes and flags. The pupils are furnished with the necessary text-books and stationery at the public expense.

The estimated value of school property in the township is $30,000. Twelve schools were in operation during the term of 1912-13, and these were attended by 511 pupils. The expense of maintaining them was $7,000.00.

GEOGRAPHY AND STATISTICS.—Upper Saucon is bounded on the northeast by Lower Saucon, Northampton county, on the southeast by Springfield, Bucks county, on the southwest by the Upper and Lower Milford, and on the northwest by Salisbury. The surface is undulating. On the northwest is the Lehigh or South Mountain. Entering the township near its southernmost corner is the Chestnut Hill range which divides the southern part into two watersheds, each of which is drained by a branch of Saucon Creek, but as the latter range runs out near the centre of the township, the two branches of the creek unite. One branch of Saucon Creek enters the township at Limeport, the other rises near Locust Valley. A third small tributary, near the western corner of the township. It flows out near Saucon. The township abounds in iron, limestone and zinc. Its vegetable productions are wheat, rye, oats, corn, potatoes, clover, timothy and the various fruits and garden vegetables incident to the latitude. The leading industry, as in most rural communities, is agriculture. Of grist-mills there are eight; two at Centre Valley, J. J. Geissinger and Young Bros., proprietors, three near Coopersburg, J. M. Ritter, J. H. Stroud and A. F. Landis, props., one near Limeport, Ambrose Miller, prop., one at Standard, Wm. Mast, prop., and one near Lanark, Wm. Cressman, prop. Of saw-mills, three: Mast's, at Standard, and Ritter's and Stroud's near Coopersburg. Of stores, nine: Frank Mullen's, Horace Fulmer's and Gum Bros., at Center Valley; Morris Ritter and Thomas Couner's at Friedensville; William Slifer's, at Saucon; Elmer Carl's, at Locust Valley; Lewis Trexler's, at Lanark and H. T. Erdman's, at Standard. Of coal yards, two, both at Center Valley: J. A. Fulmer and George Hartman, props. Of hotels, seven: The Windsor, J. R. Weaver, prop.; The Grand, J. R. Wilt, prop., and the Bald Eagle, J. A. Fulmer, prop.; at Centre Valley, Heller's, at Lanark, Wm. Trumbore, prop.; The Eagle, at Friedensville, Charles H. Keller, prop., and the Saucon, Lewis Kemmerer, prop. One foundry and machine shop at Locust Valley, Hersch & Hartman, props. One creamery at Lanark, Robert Schaffer, prop. One carriage factory at Centre Valley, Charles H. Schantz, prop., besides, there are two or three each of smitheries, tinware, and cobbling establishments. Of the eight or ten iron ore beds so vigorously operated before, all are idle. The zinc mines at Friedensville, formerly a hive of industry are abandoned and the machinery dismantled. The tanneries and brick-yards have disappeared.

The assessed valuation of real estate is $1,244,471; occupations, $102,270; horses (684 head), $70,985; cows (780 head), $31,110; total, $1,448,836.

According to the several census reports the population was as follows: In 1820, 1,642; in 1830, 1,906; in 1840, 2,072; in 1850, 2,372; in 1860, 2,943; in 1870, 3,487; in 1880, 3,224; in 1890, 2,832; in 1900, 2,271; and in 1910, 2,415. There are 1,054 taxables in the township, 603 freeholders, 315 tenants, and 136 single men.

There are 14,896 acres of cleared land and 1,081 acres of timber land in the township. The township contains five villages, viz: Centre Valley, Friedensville, Colesville, Locust Valley and Saucona. The larger portion of Limeport is in Lower Milford. Lanark and Standard are hamlets.

Post-offices were established as follows: What is now the Centre Valley post-office was established Nov. 27, 1827, under the name of Fryburg; This name was changed to Coopersburg, June 25, 1832. The office was removed to and named Centre Valley June 9, 1849. Saucon Valley post-office was established Aug. 25, 1841, and discontinued July 16, 1861. It was held at the present location of the Lanark post-office. Friedensville post-office was established Feb. 16, 1843. The present Coopersburg post-office, Feb. 8, 1850. Lanark, July 25, 1862. Locust Valley, Feb. 4, 1863 (lately discontinued). Standard, Aug. 21, 1893 (discontinued June 15, 1904).

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The earlier justices of the peace were appointed by or through the authority of the king of England. They were known as "His Majesty's Justices of the Peace." The names of two of these who resided in Upper Saucon have come to our knowledge. They were Thomas Owen and Henry Kookken. Beginning in 1763, the justices of the courts were commissioned from among the justices of the peace and Henry Kookken was thus promoted in 1776.

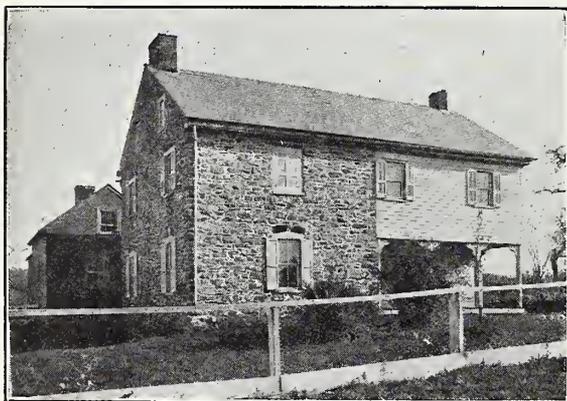

After the organization of Lehigh county, the justices of the peace were elected by districts of two or three townships each. Upper Saucon and Upper Milford constituted district No. 2. The justices elected under this arrangement were the following:

Daniel Cooper, commissioned. . . . Dec. 12, 1815
 William H. Long, commissioned . . . July 3, 1821
 Peter Cooper, commissioned. . . . Aug. 13, 1821
 Thomas Romig, commissioned. . . . July 29, 1831
 Daniel Fritz, commissioned. . . . Dec. 9, 1831
 Philip Pierson, commissioned. . . . May 12, 1834
 Charles W. Wieand, commissioned Apr. 1, 1836
 Andrew K. Wittman, commissioned Mar. 8, 1837

Since 1840 the justices have been elected as now. They were: Andrew K. Wittman, 1840 and 1845; Philip Pierson, 1840; Charles E. Christ, 1845; Joshua Fry, 1850; Charles W. Cooper, 1850, 1855; George Blank. 1855, 1860, 1865, 1870; Henry B. Person, 1856, 1861, 1866, 1871; William H. Snyder, 1875, 1880, 1885, 1890, 1895; G. W. Brinker, 1876, 1881, 1886, 1891; P. S. Fenstermaker, 1895, 1900; A. H. Huff, 1896; O. J. Biehn, 1901, 1906; W. H. Walbert, 1904, 1909; C. E. Biehn, 1911; A. E. Rinn, 1912.

Among the citizens of the township who served in public positions above those of township offices we know of the following: Joseph Fry, in the state legislature, constitutional convention of 1837-8, and in congress; Jacob Erdman, in the state legislature, congress and as associate judge; Dr. Thomas B. Cooper, in congress; Dr. Jesse Samuels as prothonotary and in the state legislature; Peter Cooper, as deputy surveyor-general; John Philip Wint, William Stehr, Joshua Fry, Peter Knepley and Frank B. Heller in the state legislature; W. H. Snyder, as prothonotary; Philip Pierson and Henry B. Pierson, as commissioners; George Blank, as county surveyor, and John Blank as poor director.

PRESENT APPEARANCE OF DAVID OWEN'S HOTEL, OPENED IN 1748.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.—In 1748 David Owen, of Upper Saucon, applied for and was granted a license to open a tavern. He then resided on the farm now of Frank B. Heller and is not known to have owned any other improved land in the township at the time, hence it is safe to assume that the hostelry was located there and now forms a part of the tenant house on said farm.

About 1745, George Bachman opened a hotel, known as "The Seven Star," on the site of the present Barron House, in Coopersburg. Heller's tavern was opened by a Mr. Keimley about the beginning of the nineteenth century. About the same time another was opened on the site of the old Weidner residence along the turnpike, by Jacob Seider. This was discontinued about 1831, and the Centre Valley Hotel took its place. The Colesville Hotel was opened in 1815 by Philip Bahl. Peter Knepley opened a store in the hall of Heller's tavern soon after its erection. Solomon Keck another in Coopersburg and John Seider a third opposite Seider's school-house. Another store, and very probably the first in the township, was held on the site of the present residence of Mr. Deily beyond Coopersburg, late Aaron N. Laros. George Zewitz appears to have been the owner of a mill which stood on the site of the present Geissing mill at Centre Valley, prior to 1752, and Henry Kooken built a grist and saw mill on the site of the late Dillinger's mill near Limeport prior to 1773. David Owen operated a saw mill and hat factory on the site of the present Mast's mill at Standard about the middle of the eighteenth century.

John Philip Wint operated a tannery on the farm now owned by W. S. Stephens. Andreas Kurtz another on the farm now owned by Augustus S. Ohl, and Andreas Wint a third on the site of the present residence of Mrs. Jonathan Schwartz at Centre Valley. All these were erected prior to the close of the eighteenth century. A fourth tannery was located in Coopersburg nearly opposite the present creamery, and a fifth on the late Dubbs farm at Locust Valley. All of them have disappeared. Old cemeteries are known to be situated on farms now owned by John Yoachim, Alvin Kehm, Joseph E. Illick, Clayton DeWitt, Stephen Sabler, Mrs. James Marsteller, Solomon Hartman and Solomon Mory. Some of these are entirely obliterated, others in ruins, while one (that at Solomon Hartman's) is surrounded by a wall and some of the graves marked by neat tombstones.

FRIEDENSVILLE ZINC MINES.

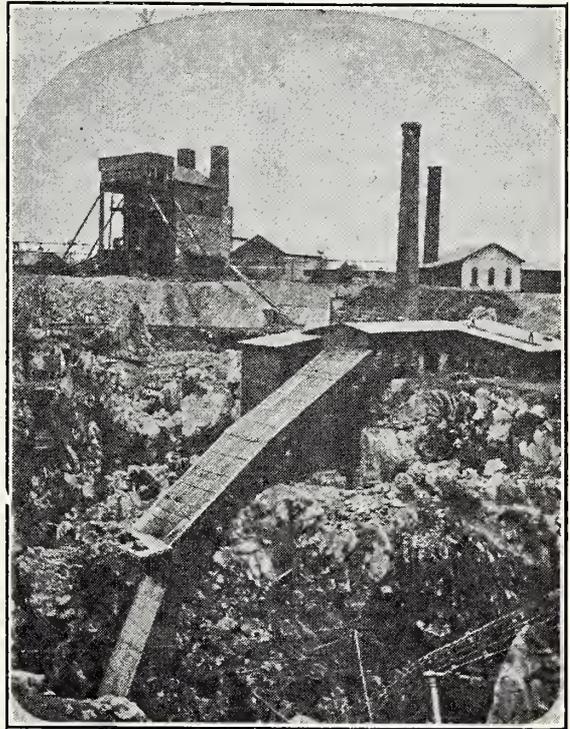

THE ZINC-MINES AT FRIEDENSVILLE.—The discovery of zinc at Friedensville, (like many another important discovery), is generally accredited to the one who first made it known rather than to the real discoverer. The following develops the true process of its discovery, and will serve to place the honor where the same is due. On the west side of the road leading from Friedensville to Bethlehem, at a distance of about 150 perches from the base of the Lehigh mountain, in the middle of a field fertile and productive in every other part, there was a depression resembling in shape a large bowl, about three hundred feet in diameter, and about twelve feet in depth. On this spot, with the exception of a few sickly weeds, no vegetation would grow. This sterility was attributed by many to the presence of mineral substances in the soil deleterious to plant-life, but beyond this no one ventured. The place was visited by one of the State geologists, but he made no report of his observations. On the edge of the hollow a number of boulders, resembling limestone, projected from the surface. These Mr. Ueberroth, the owner of the land, attempted to convert into lime by the usual process, but failed, the whole mass melting together in the kiln. After this the place was made a repository for rubbish and the stones picked from the farm, and so it remained until 1845, when Mr. Andrew K. Wittman was called as surveyor to trace a line between lands of Mr. Ueberroth and one of his neighbors. While thus engaged his attention was attracted to these boulders, and he took pieces of them along home to add to a collection of minerals he was then forming. Taking much interest in minerals, and being of an investigating turn, he resolved upon a test of his recently-acquired specimen, resorting first to the blowpipe, then to acids, and finally to the crucible. By the latter process he succeeded in obtaining about two ounces of metal, which, from his knowledge of metals, he knew to be zinc. On the following day he met Mr. Ueberroth, told him of his discovery, and gave him a portion of the metal. On the afternoon of the same day Ueberroth visited Bethlehem, and stopped at Leipert's Hotel, where he exhibited his metal to some friends. Among the sojourners at the hotel at the time was Professor T. H. Roepper, who overheard the conversation between Ueberroth and his friends, saw the metal, and lost no time in proceeding to Friedensville and getting a supply of ore, of which he soon succeeded in making brass by mixing it with copper. Roepper then went to Philadelphia, made the discovery known, and has since been accredited with it by nearly every one who undertook to write about it, while Mr. Wittman, the real discoverer, has hardly been noticed or mentioned by any.

After this, timid efforts at mining the ore and reducing it to metal were made by various parties, but with little success until 1855, when the Pennsylvania Lehigh Zinc Company was incorporated, with a capital of $1,000,000, works erected, and mining and manufacturing pushed with vigor. Up to 1859 the product of the mines was converted into white zinc paint, or oxide of zinc, exclusively. In 1859 the manufacture of metallic zinc by the Belgian method was begun, and in 1865 a rolling-mill for the manufacture of sheet-zinc was added.

The ore consists principally of silicate of zinc, but large masses of carbonate of zinc are also found, and both are of superior quality. It is found in small veins mingled with clay in the cavities of the magnesian limestone, which is the prevailing rock, and also in large masses of thousands of tons. As high as 17,000 tons of ore have been raised in a single year, and the only drawback to the more successful prosecution of the work that has thus far presented itself is the large quantity of water that accumulates in the mines. Various pumping engines were introduced from time to time, but none that was equal to the work assigned to it until 1872, when "The President," a mammoth engine, was erected and put in operation, and which realized in a full measure the expectations of the company, as it easily and speedily rid the mines of water. As this was considered at the time the largest pumping engine in the world a description of it may not be uninteresting.

FRIEDENSVILLE ZINC MINES.

(From rare photograph owned by B. L. Miller, Ph.D., Prof. of Lehigh University.)

It was a vertical condensing engine, ten feet stroke with a cylinder of cast-iron one hundred and ten inches in diameter, and weighing forty tons. It had two fly-wheels, thirty-five feet in diameter, weighing, ninety-two tons apiece; four walking-beams, weighing twenty-four tons apiece; twenty-six other pieces weighing over seven tons apiece, while the nut, made of steel, which secured the piston-rod to the cross-head, weighed eleven hundred pounds. The total weight of the engine was six hundred and sixty-seven tons. Sixteen boilers supplied the steam for it. It had thirty-three hundred horsepower and was capable of raising seventeen thousand gallons of water per minute from a depth of two hundred and twenty feet.

But, Alas! "How are the mighty fallen." The zinc mines, late a hive of industry, a center of activity, a source of wealth to some and of livelihood to many, are abandoned, their workings crumpling and decaying, their machinery dismantled, even the "President," that giant of energy, has been reduced to common junk by a still mightier giant, dynamite. But as the indications are that the supply of ore is far from being exhausted, let us hope that the abandonment is but temporary.

EARLY FAMILIES.

OWEN.—The Owen family were of Welsh origin. They were among the first immigrants to the state, and some of them became prominent in colonial days. Griffith Owen was a member of the Colonial Council from 1685 to 1707. John Owen was sheriff of Chester county in 1730. Owen Owen was sheriff of Philadelphia county in 1728, and coroner in 1730. After this he came to Saucon, took up lands and, as it seems, lived here at least part of the time. His wife's name was Margaret ———, and they had at least three children—Thomas, David and Margaret. The latter married Richard Thomas, and is not known to have left any descendants. Thomas became one of his majesty's justices of the peace. He is not known to have had offspring. David, with his wife, Sarah ———, had eleven children: Thomas, David, Jonathan, Nathan, Joseph, Rachel, Mary, Sarah, Abigail, Lydia and Elizabeth. Of these, Thomas left three children. Nothing more is known of him. David, with his wife, Margaret ———, had four children: Solomon, David, Elizabeth and Hannah. Jonathan has been lost sight of. Nathan had two daughters,—Hannah and Sarah. Joseph, with his wife, Susana B. Hartzell, and two children, moved to Tennessee about 1794. Rachel, with her husband, Samuel Bachman, moved to the same state. Mary married William Grothouse. Sarah, Jonathan Scott, and Abigail, Jacob Ziegenfuss. Nothing is known of their descendants. Lydia married Henry Weber and is the grandmother of Thomas B., and Joel B. Weber, of Saucon, and Elizabeth married Abraham Seider and is no doubt the grandmother and great-grandmother of some of the Seiders living in different parts of the county. Of the younger David's children, Solomon married Catharine Beil, and had one daughter, Elizabeth, who became the wife of Rev. Samuel Hess. David appears to have died in youth. Elizabeth married Henry Engleman and is the grandmother of Clinton Engleman, of Allentown, and M. L. Engleman, of Coopersburg. Hannah married Adam Romig and is not known to have had any descendants. Of Nathan's daughters, Hannah married Peter Lynn and is the grandmother of Jeremiah Lynn, of Allentown, and Sarah married Andrew Engleman, and is the grandmother of Rufus Erdman, late prothonotary of Lehigh county.

ERDMAN.—For record of the family see Vol. II.

HELLER.—Christopher Heller, the progenitor of a very large proportion of the Hellers living in eastern Pennsylvania and in fact all over our country, left his home in Petersheim, along the Rhine, in Germany, early in the year 1738. He was accompanied by at least one of his sons, together they proceeded to Rotterdam where they embarked on the ship "Winter Galley" for America. They arrived at Philadelphia Sept. 5, 1738, and apparently without unnecessary delay, struck out to acquire a foothold and secure a home and landed possessions in the country of their adoption. We find them soon after on a tract of about 200 acres (No. 9 on the map), near the present village of Limeport. He acquired some, and probably full though not original title to it. His stay here was of short duration, but long enough to afford him time to assist in founding the Chestnut Hill church. While still holding title to this land, we find him on Sept. 8, 1742, drawing a warrant for a tract of 176 acres "designated Delay" near the present village of Seidersville, Northampton county. During the following year he erected a substantial log house and soon after a barn of the same character and material, "both still standing." He resided here until his death. He was born 1688, died 1778, and is buried in the old cemetery at what is now the Lime Kiln School House, west of the furnace near Hellerstown. He had as far as has been ascertained six sons: 1st, John Dieter, or as we sometimes find him referred to, "Joseph." But little is known of him. He was employed by the Durham Furnace Co. in various capacities; at one time being engaged in transporting cannon balls to Philadelphia during the Revolution. He served four years as a member of Captain Calhoun's company of the tenth Pennsylvania line and was discharged in 1781. He afterwards lived in the country along the Susquehanna and acquired considerable real estate. Save that he had a family, nothing definite is known of his descendants. He was born 1719 and died in 1800. 2nd Simon.—This son at least was a fellow passenger with his father on ship-board, for being over 16 years of age he had to register on his arrival. He drew a warrant Oct. 3, 1746, for a tract of land near what is now Hellertown, which with additional acquisitions ultimately contained 215 acres. About 25 acres of this tract was on the east side of Saucun Creek, and on this he erected a saw and grist mill, now known as Wagner's mill. He sold out here in 1764 and with his whole family removed to Plainfield township. Here he acquired about 600 acres of land on which was a saw mill and a hotel, now or lately, the "Woodley House" at Wind Gap. He assisted in organizing the Plainfield Reformed congregation, was interested for the government in border affairs, served on the board of viewers to lay out the road through the Wind Gap, and on to Wyoming. His first wife's name was Louisa Dietz, of Milford township. After her death he remarried, transferred his property to his son Jacob, moved across the mountain, acquired about 500 acres of land, built a log house, assisted in founding the Hamilton Township Church, died and was buried at the Plainfield church. He was born June 18, 1721, died May 20, 1783. He had sixteen children: 1st Sopronia, 2d Elizabeth, 3d Jacob, 4th Abraham, 5th Margaretta, 6th Sarah, 7th Daniel, 8th John, 9th Anthony, 10th Catharine, 11th Maria, 12th Michael, 13th Simon, 14th Veronica, 15th Louisa, and 16th Mary. The descendants of the late Peter Heller, of Allentown, are the only descendants of Simon Heller we know of in the county.

3rd Michael—This son arrived in America in 1749, eleven years after his father. On July 31, 1750, he drew a warrant for a tract of land containing 250 acres, now forming a large part of the site of Hellertown. It also included what is now known as the Stever farm, the old stone house on it was built by him. He was the founder of the town, became one of the wealthy and influential men of his county, contributed generously of his means to the Revolutionary cause, was a member of Col. Anthony Lerch's Saucun cavalry, that was the first to respond to the call for help in the Indian war of 1756, and which was the first body of armed men to reach the scene of the massacre of the Moravians above the Lehigh Gap and compelled the Indians to remain above the mountains, thus saving Bethlehem, Nazareth and Easton. His wife's name was Catharine Keiper, a daughter of Carl Ludwig Keiper, who resided near the present village of Limeport. None of his descendants are known to live in Lehigh county. He was born 1726, died 1803, and is buried at the Lime Kiln School House.

4th Daniel.—There is no record of this son's arrival in America, and he probably came with his father and elder brother, Simon. Being under sixteen years of age he was not required to register, hence there would be no record. He made his home with his father and upon his death became the owner of the homestead and plantation. He was a carpenter and wheelwright. During the revolution he associated himself with two of his sons and a nephew, and they did an extensive business in Hellertown, making and selling wagons for use in the army. The enterprise was a losing one, but he saved enough to enable him to buy a farm for each of his children. His wife's name was Mary Keiper, another daughter of Carl Ludwig Keiper. His children's names as far as ascertained were Michael, a potter; John Dieter, a farmer; Mathias and Jeremiah, wheelwrights. The two former we have lost sight of Mathias removed to Northumberland county, near Berwick, where now reside many of his descendants. Jeremiah settled north of the mountains and west of the Lehigh. Daniel, the father, was born 1726, died 1803, and with his wife is buried at the Lime Kiln School House.

5th Ludwig.—This son arrived in this country Oct. 3, 1753. The voyage was made in the ship "Eastern Branch." His relatives drew a warrant for a tract of land of 25 acres in his name Sept. 11, 1751, two years before his arrival. Little else is known about him, but that he also did service for the Durham Furnace Company, later moved to Bucks county and later still to Hamilton township, Monroe county. He was born about 1728, died 1807, and is buried at Hamilton Church.

6th, Christopher, junior, arrived in this country on the ship "Duke of Bedford" in 1751. It is evident from a number of circumstances that he made his first home in America on the farm near Limeport in which his father became interested soon after his arrival and that he remained there for about ten years; later it appears he, too, moved to the neighborhood of Hellertown and thence to a point on the Delaware river near Belvedere, New Jersey. He took much interest in mills and provided nearly all his children with a mill of some kind. He was the third son of Christopher, senior, to marry a daughter of Carl Ludwig Keiper. Her name was Elizabeth. He was born 1731, died 1805, and is buried at Stone Church, Upper Mount Bethel township, Northampton county. His children were Michael, Elizabeth, Magdalena, Solomon, Daniel, Joseph and Catharine. Of these Joseph and Michael remained in Lower Saucon, while the rest probably went with their parents to Upper Mount Bethel. Two of the sons of Michael drifted back to Lehigh county, both locating in Upper Saucon, "wither they were followed by their parents in their old age," and from these most of the Hellers now living in the county have descended. Michael, the father, born Jan. 9, 1758, died June 12, 1849, married Magdalena Buchecker, and had six children: George 1778-1794, Daniel 1781-1789, Paul 1784-1871, Mary Magdalena 1788-1812, Tobias 1789-1854, and Joseph 1797-1801. Of these Paul married Catharine "Owen," maiden name Beil and had three children: Abraham, Owen and Mary. Tobias married Susanna Rentzheimer and had five children: Charles, Amos, Priscilla, Catharine and Susan. Mary Magdalena died unmarried. Of Paul's children, Abraham married Mary Egner and is the father of Frank B. Heller, of Upper Saucon, Permelia C., widow of Edwin Neimeyer, of Emaus, and Sylvesta A., wife of Alfred A. Sell, of Upper Saucon. Owen married Leah Brunner and resides with his son, Llewellyn, in Bethlehem. Mary married Peter Trexler and is the mother of John J. Trexler, of Perkasio, Bucks county, the late Peter H. Trexler, of Limeport, the late Mrs. Daniel Weaver, the late Mrs. Edwin Miller and Mrs. John Cope, of Allentown.

Of Tobias' children, Charles married Elizabeth Burt and removed to Philadelphia. His children are Burt, George R., Charles F., Napoleon, Mary, Eve and Jennie. Amos married Angelina Bieber and afterwards Eliza Ritter, his children are Ann, Sallie, Elmira, Carrie, Oliver, Edgar, Hiram, Alfred and Wilson.

Priscilla married the late Frederick Wunder, of Emaus, and had no children. Catharine married Jonathan Rumpf and is the mother of Mrs. Milton Dotterer, of Allentown; Mrs. Lando K. Moyer, of Coopersburg, and Mrs. Solomon Ritter, of Allentown. Susan married the late Charles H. Erdman, of Upper Saucon, and is the mother of Harvey T. Erdman and Owen G. Erdman, of Upper Saucon.

HON. FRANKLIN BENJAMIN HELLER,¹ who occupies the Owen homestead in Upper Saucon township was born Sept. 11, 1844, on the same tract which had been in the Owen family from 1743 until 1820. He is a son of Abraham and Mary B. (Egner) Heller. His education was obtained in the public schools, the Freeland Seminary which is now Ursinus College and by close application to books and the use of midnight oil. He taught school for thirteen terms, from 1863 to 1876, holding a permanent certificate for some years before he left the teaching profession. He taught school near Coopersburg for 6 years and near Limeport for 7 years. Mr. Heller has been a student and great reader all his life. In the fall of 1876 he was elected as a Democrat to the State Legislature and re-elected in 1878; served with marked ability as a member of the Committee on Education.

Mr. Heller was engaged as an agriculturist for some years but later he rented the 100 acre farm and continued to superintend its successful cultivation.

Frank B. Heller

He was appointed, in 1900, as a trustee of the State Hospital for Insane at Norristown, and has served up to the present time. He is the secretary of the Board of Trustees since 1908. Socially he is a member of Coopersburg Lodge, No. 390, I. O. O. F., and of the Saucona Encampment, No. 117; is a past grand and past representative to the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows; and has served Blue Church as a deacon and elder.

He was married June 15, 1875, to Mary J. Dillinger, daughter of William D. and Helena (Person) Dillinger. They have two children, viz: (1) Robert A., married to Florence, a daughter of Zacharia Heist. She died in 1911, leaving one daughter—Beatrice—who now lives with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Heller; another daughter, Evelyn, preceded her mother in death. Mr. Robert A. Heller is connected with the Minnesota Seal Flouring Mills, at New Prague, Minn. (2) Nellie M. married Isadore Selig. They reside in Lower Milford township and have two sons: Frederick Bernhard, and Harold Heller Selig.

REINHARD FAMILY.²

Johann Georg Reinhard, the progenitor of what is known as the Lehigh County Reinhard family, came from the Palatinate in Germany and settled in Upper Saucon township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, Pennsylvania. The dates of his birth and arrival in America have not, thus far, been ascertained; but it is believed that his birth dates before the year 1720, for, in the month of December, 1740, he made application to the authorities of the then Province of Pennsylvania for a tract of land, which was surveyed to him in April, 1741. It is presumed that he must at least have attained his majority when this took place.

This tract of land of 122 acres and the usual allowance, the patent for which was not granted until November, 1762, is situate a short distance, about north of St. Pauls (Blue) Church, in Upper Saucon township, and comprises, in part, the original Reinhard farm in that township. In the year 1775, he conveyed this farm to his fifth child, his son, Henry; whose executors, in the year 1826, sold it to Jacob Marder. It then remained out of the family name for eighty-two years,—until the year 1908,—when it was purchased by Norman J. Reinhard, a lienal descendant of the Henry mentioned above.

Johann Georg Reinhard was an elder in the Lutheran congregation of the "Blue" Church for a term including the year 1761. He was married to Maria Barbara, daughter of Philip and Maria Sarah Raub. According to the baptismal records of the "Blue" Church they had ten children, whose names follow, and for purposes of distinction we consider them as the second generation, viz: (The year of birth follows each name.)

- | | |
|--------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Maria Sarah, ...1744 | 7. Andrew,1756 |
| 2. Anna Elizabeth, 1746 | 8. Catharine Bar- |
| 3. Abraham,1748 | bara,1758 |
| 4. John George, ...1750 | 9. Elizabeth Mar- |
| 5. Henry,1751 | garet,1760 |
| 6. Eva Elizabeth, ..1753 | 10. Anna Maria, ..1763 |

Of these (1) Maria Sarah, (5) Henry, (7) Andrew, and (8) Catharine Barbara, are the only ones of whom further information has, thus far, been obtained. The last named of these four—Catharine Barbara—married a Mr. Rehs and removed to Springfield township, Bucks county, where she is buried.

Maria Sarah, married Leonard Andre, of Plainfield township, Northampton county, Pa. They had eight children, viz:

- 1—Magdalena, married Joseph Keller.
- 2—Leonard,
- 3—Adam,
- 4—Michael.
- 5—Christina, married Adam Butz.*
- 6—Anna Maria, married Martin Herter,
- 7—Elizabeth, married John Hohenshield,
- 8—George, married Catharine Dreisbach,

Henry, married Catharine Maria Feger, born 1759. They had eleven children, viz:

- 1—Maria Barbara—1776—died in childhood.
- 2—John George—1778—married Dorothy Schaeffer.
- 4.—Henry—1782—married Margaret Catharine Ward.
- 5—Valentine—1785—died in childhood.
- 6—Catharine—1787—married George Adam Weber.
- 7—Jacob—1789—married Susanna —.
- 8—Elizabeth—1792—married John Peter Weber.
- 9—Hannah—1795—married David Rinker.
- 10—Abraham—1797—married Magdalena Mohry.
- 11—Solomon—1800—married Susanna Schaeffer.

From these last above mentioned eleven children—nine of whom had families—the Reinhard's at present residing in Northampton and Monroe, and for the most part in Lehigh and Bucks counties, as well as in many sections of the United States, are descended. Through intermarriages of the females the following named became the heads of families and whose wives were of the fourth and fifth generations:

Henry Weber	Reuben Siegfried
John Schleider	James W. Dotterer
Simon Walter	Henry T. Rader
Thomas Bitting	Levi Weaver
Joseph Diehl	Levi Riegel
Charles Diehl	Archibald C. Pascoe
William Clewell	Edwin Keenly
Charles Knauss	Solomon S. Bachman
Charles Snyder	Francis S. Kemmerer
Michael Beck	Israel Jones
Abraham Geissinger	Franklin M. Hinkel
Jonathan Fetterman	William Heil
Isaac Widdass	Martin Strone
Linford Lawrence	William Rothenberger
Thomas Weber	Albert V. Meeks
James Walters	Oliver D. Giffin
Michael Kehrer	William Yoder
Abraham Shick	Lewis Lacks.
Benjamin Sterner	Lewis Balliet
Henry A. Gross	David R. Hottle.
	Edwin Solliday, and others.

Andrew, married Catharine Ziegenfus, born 1758. They had six children baptized at the "Blue" Church when, about the year 1799, they

1. Sketch written by William J. Dietrich.
2. Genealogy compiled by Osman F. Reinhard.

removed to Albany township, Berks county, Pa., where they had a seventh child—Jacob—born 1801, who married Catharine Sousley, and they had eight children, viz:

- 1—Lydia—1826—married John Henry.
- 2—Benjamin—1828—married Elizabeth Leiby.
- 3—Daniel—1829—married Catharine Stump.
- 4—Sarah—1831—married Daniel Brauscher.
- 5—Jacob—1836—
- 6—William—1838—married Sybilla Komp.
- 7—Isaac—1840—
- 8—Mary Ann—1845—married Wilson Levan.

Of the first six children of Andrew, above referred to, viz:

- 1—John H.—1783.
- 2—John—1785.
- 3—Anna M.—1787.
- 4—Andrew—1790.
- 5—Anna B.—1793.
- 6—Catharine—1798, nothing further has been learned than what is here given.

Children of John George Reinhard (3) and Dorothea Schaeffer, his wife:

(Fourth generation.)

1. Catharine (4) b. Oct. 18, 1799—m. Henry Weber, b. Jan. 19, 1801.
2. Elizabeth (4), b. Jan. 23, 1801—m. John Schleider, b. Sept. 4, 1797.
3. Sarah (4), b. March 11, 1802—m. Simon Walter, b. Oct. 9, 1801.
4. Henry (4), b. Jan. 20, 1804—m. Christiana Leopold, b. April 3, 1806.
5. Joseph (4), b. May 1, 1805—m. Sarah Anna Hopper—(6 children.)
6. Hannah (4), b. April 14, 1807—m. Thomas Bitting, b. July 29, 1805.
7. George (4), b. Dec. 11, 1808—m. Hannah Kemmerer, b. Dec. 17, 1807.
8. Esther (4), b. Aug. 16, 1812—m. Joseph Diehl, b. Oct. 21, 1806.
9. Julia Ann (4), b. Sept. 26, 1814—m. Charles Diehl, b. July 30, 1810.
10. Appollonia (4), b. March 6, 1816—m. William Clewell, b. June 15, 1807.
11. Lucy Ann (4), b. Jan. 31, 1817—m. Charles Knauss, b. Nov. 21, 1810.
12. Susanna (4), b. Jan. 29, 1818. Died in childhood.
13. Aaron (4), b. Jan. 14, 1819—m. Sarah Fink, b. June 10, 1828.

Children of Joseph Reinhard (4) and Sarah Anna Hopper, his wife:

(Fifth generation.)

1. Matilda Louisa (5), b. Feb. 26, 1826—m. Edwin Keenly, b. Feb. 4, 1825.
2. Edward Francis (5) b. Sept. 24, 1827—m. Salome Rockel, b. Dec. 31, 1829. They had 14 children, of whom Prof. Henry J. Reinhard, of Catasaqua, Pa., b. May 23, 1856, is the fourth.
3. Jeremiah Daniel (5), b. Dec. 9, 1830, m. Elizabeth Jacob, b. June 29, 1832, of North Whitehall Township. They had 17 children, of whom Osman F. Reinhard, of Bethlehem, (Cashier South Bethlehem Nat. Bank), b. Oct. 9, 1855, is the fourth. (Osman was born in Washington Township, Lehigh County, Pa.)
4. Eliza Henrietta (5), b. April 4, 1833. Died in childhood.
5. Reuben Augustus (5), b. June 22, 1838. Died in boyhood.
6. Mary Ann Elizabeth (5), b. April 20, 1841. Died in childhood.

The foregoing embraces a sketch of the family in part to the fourth generation and in part to the fifth generation inclusive. The sixth, seventh and eighth generations combined are too numerous to publish in connection with this sketch. A more complete genealogical family history, embracing practically all the families in detail, is in course of preparation by Osman Franklin Reinhard, of Bethlehem, Pa., and will be published separately at some future time in book form.

Edward Francis Reinhard, son of Joseph Reinhard (1805-1889), was born in Saucon township, Lehigh county, Sept. 24, 1827. He was educated in a private academy at Egypt, under Prof. Bernd, walking daily from "Blue" Church in Saucon township, to Egypt to attend the academy. He taught a subscription school at Schnecksville, having at times upwards of 125 pupils enrolled, many of whom became professional men. He also taught at the Stone Church, and was a man of varied accomplishments. He was accounted one of the leading surveyors of the county and did much in this line. He was by trade a stone cutter, which he followed regularly. He was organist at the Unionville Church and the Stone Church for a number of years; also a justice of the peace of Lehigh township, where he resided from 1850 until his decease. He was a political leader in his district. He was a member of the U. B. Church, serving it as a local preacher and as a church official. He died April 15, 1902, and was interred at Pennsville, Northampton county, Pa.

Edward Francis Reinhard married Salome Rockel, daughter of Henry Rockel, of Schnecksville, born in Dec., 1829, died Dec. 30, 1904. Issue:

- Mary A. Reinhard, born Dec. 8, 1850.
 Louise R., born Aug. 10, 1852.
 Charles B., born June 6, 1854.
 Henry J., born May 23, 1856.
 Alfred J., born June 12, 1858.
 James M., born Sept. 24, 1859; died Oct. 14, 1860.
 Jeremiah, born Nov. 18, 1861.
 Sarah A., born May 8, 1863.
 Anna M., born March 29, 1864; April 15, 1865.
 Sylvester O., born Nov. 12, 1865.
 Ellen, born July 8, 1867.
 Laura A., born Dec. 27, 1869.
 Amanda, born Oct. 4, 1871.
 Edward F., born March 23, 1873, died Feb. 11, 1879.

PROF. HENRY JOSEPH REINHARD, eldest son of Edward Francis Reinhard, was born May 23, 1856, near Cherryville, Northumberland county, Pa. He was educated in the public schools; Keystone State Normal School, graduating in 1876. He then took a scientific course in 1878. He began teaching in Millport, Carbon county and taught there two terms. Afterward he completed his course in the State Normal School and after graduating, taught at Cherryville six consecutive terms (1876-1882). He taught at Paryville, Pa., from 1882 to 1889. In 1889 he located at Catasaqua, Pa., and has been teaching there ever since, being the principal of schools since 1899. He taught in the intermediate department from 1889 to 1899.

He is a member of Bruce Commandery, No. 214, Knights of Malta. He was a local pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church at Parryville in 1886, and has served as supply to nearly all of the churches in Catasauqua; is Sunday school superintendent and member of the official board of his church.

Prof. Reinhard married Elizabeth M. Hummel, daughter of William and Matilda (Solt) Hummel, of Allen township, Northampton county. Issue: Carrie V., Beulah B., and Curtis H. Reinhard.

Carrie V. married William M. Lewis, who is general manager of the Rockville, Conn., Gas & Electric Co.

Beulah B. married J. Edwin Griggs, clothing manufacturer of Sommerville, N. J.

Curtis H. is an electrical engineer and is serving in a managerial position for a large New England company.

All are graduates of Catasauqua High school. The daughters are both accomplished in music and art.

COOPER FAMILY.

Daniel Cooper, born at Dillenburg, in the Duchy of Nassau, March 31, 1752, arrived in this country about 1770. He located in Goshenhoppen in the present limits of Montgomery county. On Nov. 3, 1778, he married Elizabeth Gery, daughter of Jacob Gery, of Goshenhoppen, and soon after removed to what is now Coopersburg. After settling here he was followed to this country by his parents, Wilhelm Cooper, born Aug. 24, 1722, and Gertrude Cooper, born Sept. 12, 1724. Daniel had ten children, viz.: Jacob, John, Peter, William, Charles, Daniel, Catharine, Elizabeth, and two others who died in infancy. Of these, Jacob removed to Philadelphia in his youth, engaged in mercantile enterprises which rendered frequent trips to New Orleans necessary; died of yellow fever on one of these trips and was buried in the ocean. He left an only son, Dr. Daniel Cooper, who located in Lebanon county. John died in 1847, leaving an only daughter, Layetta, late Mrs. Elias Nitrauer, of Upper Saucon, she left no issue. Peter, born Dec. 26, 1790, married Susanna Buchecker, daughter of Daniel Buchecker, died May 19, 1837, leaving four children, viz.: Milton, Charles W., Esq., Dr. Thomas B., and Anna Matilda. William removed to Schuylkill county in his youth and nothing is known of his descendants. Daniel married Sarah Ott, died in 1864, leaving several children, none of whom can be traced. Charles died in youth and without issue; Catharine married Jacob Seider and was the grandmother of the late Mrs. Edwin Kline, of Allentown; and Elizabeth married Abraham Slifer, removed to Flourtown, where she died in June, 1867.

Of Peter's children, Milton, late of Coopersburg, had no children; but had adopted several daughters. Charles W., late of Allentown, was twice married to daughters of Hon. Jacob Erdman, of Upper Saucon; his descendants live in Allentown. Thomas B. married C. Elamina Shantz, and died at Coopersburg in 1862, leaving seven children, viz.: Tilghman S., Dr. Thomas E., Amanda, Ellen, Alice, Llewellyn, and Oscar. The two latter of whom died in youth, Tilghman resides at Coopersburg. Thomas E. died at Coopersburg. Ellen, wife of Joseph Hope, lives in New York. Alice, wife of Josephus Lynn, lives at Freemansburg, and Amanda resides with one of her sisters. Wilhelm Cooper died Jan. 23, 1809, and Gertrude, his wife, April 21, 1812. They also had a daughter, Catharine. She became the wife of Jacob Berger. After the death of his first wife, Daniel Cooper (the elder) married Margaret Brunner, widow of John Brunner.

BLANK FAMILY.

John George Blank, the ancestor of the Blank family, was born in 1729 and died in 1799. He came to Saucon, (whence we know not), about 1750, married Elizabeth Steinmetz, daughter of Valentine Steinmetz, and after the death of his father-in-law succeeded to and settled upon his estate, taking up his residence on the farm now belonging to the John H. Laubach estate. How many children he had can not now be determined, but he had at least one son, also named John George, who had nine children, viz.: George, John, Jacob, Abraham, Charles, David, Mary, Lydia, and Sarah. Of these George and David died unmarried; John married Esther Clemmer, and had six children—George and Charles H., late of Coopersburg; Edwin H., late of Allentown; Benjamin F., now of Allentown; Eliza, late wife of William P. Weidner, of Saucon, and Elamina, late wife of Simon Troxell. Jacob married a Miss Hiltenbeitel; nothing is known of his descendants. Abraham married Mary Bahl, and was the father of the late Jacob and John G. Blank, of Upper Saucon; Abraham Blank of Allentown, Mrs. John H. Laubach, late of Upper Saucon, and Mrs. John Metzger, late of Allentown. Charles married Priscilla Fry, and resided in Bethlehem. Mary married Jacob Bahl and resided in the same town; Lydia married Nathan Eberhard, and died without issue, and Sarah married David Schneider, late of Emaus.

EGNER FAMILY.

John Mathias Eichener, Egner, Egner arrived in this country and took the oath of allegiance, Sept. 30, 1727. He settled near the present Lehigh Church in Lower Macungie. He was born 1693, and died 1771. He had but one son of whom we have definite knowledge, and he seems to have been the progenitor of all the Egners now living in the county. His name, like his father's was John Mathias. He married Barbara Knappenberger, settled on the farm now owned by James Kidd, in Upper Saucon, and raised a family of ten children, viz.: Mathias, Henry, John, Daniel, Peter, Solomon, Christina, Eve, Catharine, and Elizabeth. Of these Mathias married a Miss Aughster, and had two children—Charles and Elizabeth. Henry married Catharine Schneider and had six children—Thomas, Sarah, Catharine, Esther, Elizabeth, and Judith. John married Catharine Boger, and had six children—Jesse, Samuel, Leah, Judith, Anna, and Mary. Daniel married Christina Steininger, and had two children—Isaac and Hannah. Peter married Susanna Stout, and had two children—David and Elizabeth. Solomon married Lydia Shuler, removed to the West and nothing is known of his descendants. Christina married Elias Weaver and was grandmother to Joseph Weaver, late of Emaus. Catharine married Casper Wieder, and was grandmother to Edwin E. Wieder, late of Emaus, and Mrs. Abraham M. Shaffer, late of Limeport, whose son, Morris A. resides in Allentown. Eve married John Weaver and was grandmother to William H. Weaver, late of Coopersburg. Job Weaver, late of Centre Valley and Ephraim Weaver late of Upper Saucon, and Elizabeth, married John Hottel, was the mother of Samuel Hottel, late of Lower Milford and grandmother of Wilson and Benneville Hottel, late of Limeport.

Of Mathias' children, Charles died without issue, and Elizabeth became the wife of Jacob Ritter and after his death, of Solomon Wieder. Of Peter's children, David died in Emaus, and his only surviving son, William, resides in Bucks county, and Elizabeth married John H. Bernd and was the mother of the late Mrs. Max Miller of Emaus. Of Henry's children, Thomas married Hannah Wieder, and was the father of the late J. Adam Egner, of near Limeport, Daniel Egner, of Coopersburg, Willoughby Egner, who died of disease contracted during the Civil War. Charles B., of Emaus, Ambrose of Philadelphia, Mary, wife of the late Solomon Weber, of Allentown, Sarah, widow of Charles H. Blank, late of Coopersburg; Amanda, late the wife of Charles B. Schneider, of Upper Saucon; and Henry and David, both of whom died in youth. Sarah married Durse Rudy, and was the mother of Professor Charles Rudy, of Paris, France, and of the late Mrs. Peter Gross, of Slatington. Catharine married John Horlacher, was the mother of the late Mrs. Jacob Cooper, and grandmother of Rev. Dr. Cooper, of Allentown. Esther died unmarried. Elizabeth married Solomon Gangaware and after his death, Nathan Rau. She was the mother of Mrs. Samuel Schaffer, late of Vera Cruz, and Quintus Rau, of near Locust Valley. Judith married Jacob Michael, late of Allentown, where some of her descendants are now living.

Of John's children, Jesse married Esther Koehler, and left no issue. Samuel first married Theresa Stahler and had a daughter, Angelina, late Mrs. Francis Schwartz, of near Emaus. After the death of his first wife, he married Sarah Lynn, and again had a daughter. Henrietta, late Mrs. William Rahn, of Bucks county. Leah married David Engleman, and was the mother of Uriah Engleman, late of Ohio, William Engleman, late of Emaus, and Mrs. W. T. Cramer, late of Philadelphia. Judith married Jonathan Smith and her only child was Henrietta, wife of the late Charles Michael, of Allentown, Anna, married David Erdman, and was the mother of the late Ammon Erdman, of Upper Saucon, the late Mrs. Francis Brunner, of Bucks county, and Mrs. Alfred Ritter, of Upper Saucon, and Mary married Abraham Heller and was the mother of Frank B. Heller, of Upper Saucon. Mrs. E. H. Neimeyer, of Emaus, and Mrs. Alfred A. Sell, of Upper Saucon. Of Daniel's children, Isaac married ——— Bachman, and was the father of the late G. F. Egner, of Allentown, and Mrs. Newton Kemmerer, of Emaus. And Hannah married Charles Kidd and left no issue.

BERKENSTOCK FAMILY.

Rev. John Justus Jacob Berkenstock, the ancestor of the Berkenstock family in this county, came to Upper Saucon about 1742. He settled on the tract designated on the map as No. 37, now so well known as the old Greenawalt farm. He is known to have had one son, John George, and two daughters—Salome, and another whose name is not known. Salome married Peter Fuchs and had no issue; the other daughter married Peter Laubach, and is known to have had one daughter, Mary, who married John Greenawalt, and was the mother of the late Solomon Greenawalt, who died in the old homestead, and the grandmother of Jacob L. Greenawalt, now residing at Centre Valley. John George had two sons, John and Abraham. The latter John had four sons, two of whom died in infancy, the other two named, John and Henry; of these John died without issue, and Henry had three sons and two daughters. John late of Lower Milford; Samuel, late of Bethlehem; Charles, who died in youth; Elizabeth, late the wife of Daniel Stoneback; and Mary, who died in youth. Abraham married Elizabeth Ochs, and was the father of Mrs. Jacob Bowman, late of Upper Saucon, and Thomas Berkenstock, late of Emaus, and the grandfather of the late Owen Bowman and Mrs. John Ackerman, of Allentown, and of James R. Berkenstock, of Upper Saucon. Rev. Berkenstock in his old age becoming possessed of a desire to re-visit his Fatherland, undertook the journey thither, intending to return soon again, but had scarcely reached the old hearthstone, when he died and was buried with his fathers. His widow died here in 1756, and was buried in the cemetery on their own farm.

GEISSINGER FAMILY.

Philip Geissinger, a Mennonite from the Palatinate, seems to have arrived in this country and settled at some point in Bucks county about 1725. He was naturalized by Act of Assembly in 1731. About 1737 he settled near the site of the present Blue Church in Upper Saucon. His wife's name was Anna Mary; they had eleven children, viz.: Philip, Jacob, Henry, Daniel, John, Samuel, David, Abraham, Anna, Elizabeth, and Barbara. Of these David died in infancy. Philip is not known to have had offspring. Jacob with his wife, Magdalena, had five children—Henry, wife Barbara, twelve; John, twice married, first wife, Anna, ten, second wife, Anna, one; Samuel, wife, Anna, four; Daniel, wife, Elizabeth, eight; Anna, husband, Christian Baer, ten children; Elizabeth, husband, Rudolph Kauffman, seven children; Barbara, husband, Isaac Bauer, seven children. All these seem to have removed from the township at an early day and it seems impossible to follow them further. Abraham remained in the old homestead, and his descendants are still within sight. His wife's name was Barbara. They had four sons, viz.: Henry, Philip, Jacob and Abraham; Of these, Henry had three children—Ephraim, who remained in the old homestead, and died, married, but with no issue; Mary, the late wife of David Stover; and Elizabeth, late the wife of Israel Walter. Philip had two children—Abraham, late of New Zionsville; and Mary, who is not known to have any descendants. Jacob had three sons: Rev. John, Jacob, and Abraham; Abraham, of Bucks county is a son of Rev. John.

Among Abraham's children were: Samuel, David, Abraham, and Jacob, all late of Centre Valley.

SAMUELS FAMILY.

Joseph Samuels, the ancestor of the Samuels family arrived in this country from Wales about 1735 to 1740. He settled on the farm now belonging to the estate of Isaac B. Meyers, in 1743. His wife's name was Sarah, and they had one son, Isaac, who with his wife, Eleanor, had two children, William and Jane. The latter married Jesse Silcott, and is not known to have had issue. William, born Dec. 2, 1764, married Mary Foulke, and had four children: Jesse, William, Jane, and Maria. Of these Jesse, born March 17, 1795, married Mary Engleman, and had two children: Francis E. and Eliza. William, married Lydia Becher, and had five children: Jesse, Mary Ann, Mathilda, Amanda, and Jennie. He removed to Indiana in 1837. Jane died unmarried and Maria married James Reinhard and was the mother of the late Edwin W. and Obediah Reinhard, of Upper Saucon. Of Dr. Jesse Samuels' children, Francis E. had three children—Alfred, deceased; Henry, now or late of Allentown; Mary, wife of Francis Balliet, of Allentown; and Eliza, who married Nathan Mertz, had three children, and removed to Sunbury, Northumberland county.

BRINKER FAMILY.

George Brinker, of Odenwald, Germany, came to this country about 1760-70. He settled on the farm now belonging to the estate of Wendel Simon, deceased, and is known to have had a son named Conrad. Conrad married Catharine Miller and had twelve children, viz.: George, Jacob, Solomon, Conrad, Barbara, Elizabeth, Margaret, Magdalena, Maria Anna, Maria, Susanna, and Eve. Of these, George married Eve Bitting and had ten children, viz.: John, George, Henry, Adam, Andrew, Theresa, Catharine, Elizabeth, Sallie, and Eve. Jacob married Elizabeth Schleider, and was the father of the late Abraham Brinker, of Salisbury, and Samuel Brinker, of Allentown. Solomon married Catharine Bitting and was the father of the late Francis Brinker, of Saucon and Ehrhard Brinker of Salisbury. Conrad married Catharine Schaffer, and was the father of the late Jacob Brinker, of Upper Saucon, and Aaron Brinker, of Bethlehem; Barbara married Andrew Walter and was the mother of George, Andrew, and Solomon Walter, all late of Upper Saucon. Elizabeth married George Walter, and was the mother of the late George Walter, of Vera Cruz. Margaret married George Reinbold, and was the mother of the late Andrew Reinbold, of Upper Milford. Eve married Henry Weaver and was the mother of Job Weaver, late of Centre Valley. Susanna married Joseph Kuhn, and was the mother of Jacob Kuhn, late of Upper Saucon; Magdalena married George Wagner, Maria Anna, Henry Lunger, and Maria, Jacob Daubert. Nothing is known of the descendants of the latter three. Of the latter George's children: John married Mary Jacoby, and was the father of the late George W. Brinker, of Upper Saucon. George married Ellen Schaffer and had no children. Henry was the father of Owen Brinker, of Easton. Adam was the father of the late Franklin Brinker, of Salisbury and of Mrs. Isaac Solliday and Mrs. George Young, of Coopersburg. Andrew was the father of Mrs. James C. Gerhard, of Centre Valley. Theresa married Solomon Reinhard, and was the mother of Solomon B. Reinhard, late of Centre Valley. Catharine married John Kiehl and was the mother of the late Mrs. George Stehr, of Bethlehem. Elizabeth married Wyandt Cope, and was the mother of John Cope of Allentown, and of Mrs. William Doney, of married Francis Hess, the latter two lived at or near Bethlehem, nothing is known of their descendants.

CHAPTER XLV.

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP.

COMPILED BY DR. RALPH T. SNOWDEN.

Washington township lies in the northeastern part of the county. It is bounded on the north by Carbon county, on the east by the Lehigh river and Northampton county, on the south by North Whitehall and Heidelberg townships, and on the west by Heidelberg township. It has an area of twenty-four and a third square miles, or 15,590 acres. The population in 1910 was 3,477.

Trout creek is the principal stream. It rises in Heidelberg township, flows in a southeasterly direction, and empties into the Lehigh river at Slatington. Numerous springs are found along the mountains, the waters of which flow into the above-mentioned stream.

The surface formation is mountainous and hilly. In the valleys many fine farms are found which are very productive.

The greater portion of the township is devoted to agriculture. Slate is found in the northern part along the Blue Mountains, and is the leading industry.

ORGANIZATION.

The territory now included in Washington was a part of the large township of Heidelberg, settled in 1752, and it was not organized as it now exists until 1847. At the November term of court in that year the following report was made:

"August 31, 1847, Jesse Samuels, Benjamin Fogel and Charles B. Shimer, Commissioners appointed by the Court to enquire into the expediency of dividing the township of Heidelberg into two separate townships, report, that, having first given the notice required by law of the time and place of their meeting, they met at the house of Charles and David Peter, in said township of Heidelberg, on the sixteenth day of August, instant, and having first been sworn according to law and the order of said court, did inquire into the propriety of granting the prayer of the petitioners, and having deemed the division of the said township of Heidelberg to be necessary, they did proceed to divide the same by making the proposed division line therein, which they have designated by sufficient land marks as follows: Beginning at the point at which the division line between the townships of North Whitehall and Low-hill intersect the line of said Heidelberg, said point being east distant eleven perches from the dwelling house of Jacob Hensinger, and running thence by magnetic-bearing north twenty-four and a quarter degrees west by a line of marked trees and other monuments through lands of Jacob Hensinger, John Hausman, George Hoats, Frederick Krause, Philip Handwerk, Andrew Peter, Jonas Peter, Godfrey Peter, Henry Blose, George Metzgar, John Roeder, Daniel and Elias Roeder, ——— Muth, George Rex, William Rex, Jacob Bachman, Jacob Rex, Elias Snyder, Christian Snyder, Jonas Blose, John Blose, Stephen Balliet and others, twenty-four hundred and twenty perches to a point on the summit of the Blue Mountain on the line of the township of East Penn, Carbon Co., said point bearing south thirty-eight degrees, east distant one hundred and twenty-five perches from a stone set for a corner on the east side of the public road leading from the Lehigh Furnace, in said Heidelberg Township, to Dinkey's Tavern, in said township of East Penn. And the undersigned would also beg leave to report it as their opinion that it is proper and expedient that the said township of Heidelberg should be divided into two townships, agreeably to the above-described line of partition and the draft hereunto annexed."

The report was read in open court, Sept. 1, 1847, and held under advisement, and on the 6th of December, 1847, it was confirmed, and it was ordered that the township of Heidelberg be divided into two separate townships, agreeably to the division line aforesaid, and that the western division retain the original name of Heidelberg, and that the eastern division or portion of said township be called "Dallas township."

The first election in Dallas township was held March 17, 1848, the officers elected being as follows:

Moses Lentz and Nathan Miller, constables.
Joseph Paten, judge.
John Balliet and Tilghman Kuntz, inspectors.
Thomas Kuntz, assessor.
George Rex, auditor.
Stephen Schlosser, justice of the peace.
Benjamin S. Levan, Jacob F. Hailer, John Rex and John Reber, school directors.

These were the last as well as the first officers elected for Dallas township, for, by act of the assembly the name was changed to Washington on April 21, 1848.

PIONEER FAMILIES.

The earlier settlers of this township came originally from Switzerland and Germany.

Their names may be seen in the list of land warrants granted to them.

For a fuller description of them and their descendants, see index in another part of the work.

LAND WARRANTS.

Following is a list of warrants for land, with names of parties and date of warrants for that portion of Heidelberg township now Washington:

		Acres.
Adam German,	Nov. 16, 1786,.....	14
Adam German,	Nov. 16, 1786,.....	101
Adam German,	April 17, 1792,.....	15
Adam German,	April 17, 1792,.....	36
Henry Geiger,	Oct. 25, 1765,.....	46
Henry Houser,	April 25, 1744,.....	167
Henry Hoffman,	Jan. 26, 1749,.....	108
John Handwerk,	Nov. 9, 1758,.....	57
Elizabeth Hoffman,	Nov. 30, 1765,.....	15
Nicholas Handwerk,	Aug. 12, 1766,.....	110
George Hofe,	Jan. 2, 1769,.....	29
Frederick Kern,	May 4, 1748,.....	149
John Kuntz,	Nov. 17, 1790,.....	7
Johannes Kunkle,	Oct. 29, 1769,.....	91
Michael Kunkle,	Oct. 29, 1769,.....	41
John Kern,	Mar. 27, 1769,.....	370
Jacob Moyer,	Mar. 24, 1749,.....	100
Jacob Moyer,	Dec. 6, 1749,.....	100
Jacob Mowrer,	Dec. 15, 1743,.....	33
Jacob Mowrer,	Dec. 15, 1743,.....	182
Jacob Mowrer,	May 15, 1745,.....	33
Peter Missemmer,	Feb. 7, 1752,.....	25
Peter Missemmer,	Dec. 14, 1753,.....	174
Peter Missemmer,	Dec. 31, 1773,.....	28
Peter Missemmer,	Aug. 12, 1776,.....	32
George Nyhart,	May 30, 1750,.....	112
Henry Oswald,	Jan. 31, 1749,.....	63
Jacob Peters,	Mar. 12, 1752,.....	31
Rudolph Peters,	Jan. 28, 1754,.....	74
Adam Reeder,	Aug. 5, 1752,.....	27
John Rockel,	Feb. 10, 1755,.....	112
William Rex,	Oct. 31, 1753,.....	86
Michael Remaley,	Aug. 5, 1767,.....	32
John Rockel,	Aug. 10, 1765,.....	28
Peter Ruch,	Oct. 24, 1765,.....	38
Simon Wehr,	Oct. 3, 1753,.....	161
Simon Wehr,	April 6, 1787,.....	6
Leonard Wasson,	Aug. 7, 1766,.....	50
Simon Wehr,	Aug. 15, 1767,.....	25

MILLS.

The first grist mill within the present limits of Washington township is thought to have been located on Trout creek, near Custers, and to have been built before the first of the Kern mills, which stood where the remains of the old saw mill are, above Trout creek bridge.

A large grist mill was built by ——— Frantz, on a branch of Trout creek, about 1814. It became the property of Jacob Kuntz, and by him was sold to his son, Tilghman Kuntz, who sold it to Samuel Oswald about 1873. It was destroyed by fire in 1912, and is being rebuilt by Charles P. Oswald, who purchased the property from his father.

In 1866, William Krause built an extensive grist mill at Slatedale, near the site of the old mill which had been built by one Hammel. In 1882 it was destroyed by fire, and in 1883 was rebuilt with all the latest improvements for making flour. It was operated until the death of Mr. Krause in 1906. Since then it has become the property of H. W. Bloss. It is not operated at present.

Another grist mill was carried on near the saw mill on the creek by Jonas Bloss, and later by his son Peter. Upon the death of Peter it passed into the possession of Benjamin Remaley, who retained it until his death in 1905, when his son John operated it until 1912, when it was purchased by Nevin Rauch. It is at present out of commission.

The first saw mill was on Trout creek, above the present Trout creek bridge, and was built before 1756, and subsequently removed to where the Mantel factory now is. This was where Franklin got his timber sawed for Fort Allen. In 1844, George Kern, son of John, repaired the old mill, and when ready to run he wanted something to keep his accounts on. He went to the store of David and Charles Peter, who then kept a variety store, three miles from Slatington, to buy a slate. They had them to sell, but George thought forty-five cents "sicsaen zu hoch" (too high) and went home without buying one, took an axe, and went out to the ledge back of the mill and split off a piece of the out-crop of rock, smoothed it off a little, squared it, and hung it up as his account slate, and used it three years before he knew he had slate on his land.

At present no saw-mills are being operated, as all work is done by the new mills operated by steam.

PUBLIC ROADS.

Of all the roads in the township, the most important one was the one called the old Mauch Chunk road, leading from Allentown to Mauch Chunk, passing through the township above Neffs, and ending at Lehigh Gap. The township is at present well supplied with excellent roads.

A State road was built in 1908, extending from the borough of Slatington to the boundary of Heidelberg township, a distance of nearly three miles, passing through the villages of Williamstown, Franklin, Slatedale and Lehigh furnace.

The supervisors at present are Blasius Hoffman, and Wilson Blose, appointed in 1912, in place of Emanuel Wehr, who resigned on account of ill health, and Alfred H. Lentz.

The following is a statement of the roadway account for the year 1912:

Tax duplicate,	$6,715 31
Tax, foreigners,	118 00
Additional taxes col.,	50 60
County abatement,	480 00
Received from State Treas.,	1,940 00
Outstanding tax col.,	452 25
Error in ac. Paul Lentz,	124 03
	<hr/>
	$9,880 19
Expenses,	7,423 57
	<hr/>
Balance in treasury,	$2,456 62

- 1864—Israel Sensinger, Jonathan Bear.
- 1865—Jacob Blose, Jonathan Bear.
- 1866—George Blose, Henry John Peter.
- 1867—Henry Peter, George Blose.
- 1868—Henry Peter, Jacob Blose.
- 1869—Monroe Peter, Paul Kern.
- 1870—Monroe Peter, Israel Sensinger.
- 1871—Monroe Peter, Israel Sensinger.
- 1872—Israel Sensinger, Jacob Blose.
- 1873—Gideon Lentz, Jacob Blose.
- 1874—Gideon Lentz, Jacob Blose.
- 1875—Gideon Lentz, Jacob Blose.
- 1876—Monroe Peter, Daniel Kemmerer.
- 1877—Monroe Peter, Francis Blose.
- 1878—Monroe Peter, Phaon Dorward, Francis Blose.

FREDERICK KERN HOMESTEAD, AT EMERALD, BUILT IN 1786.

The following is a list of the supervisors since the formation of the township:

- 1848—John Fenstermaker, Jacob Remaley.
- 1849—Daniel Peter, Henry Peter.
- 1850—Henry Geiger, George Blose.
- 1851—George Peter, Jacob Remaley.
- 1852—John G. Peter, Nicholas Peter.
- 1853—Daniel Sensinger, Henry Henritzky.
- 1854—Phaon Dorward, Daniel Peter.
- 1855—Moses Lentz, Daniel Peter.
- 1856—Joseph German, Phaon Dorward, George Rex, Henry Henritzky.
- 1857—Daniel Hausman, George Rex, George Blose.
- 1858—Gideon Lentz, Daniel Hausman.
- 1859—George Blose, Gideon Lentz.
- 1860—Joseph German, Jacob Blose.
- 1861—Charles Dorward, Henry Peter.
- 1862—Israel Sensinger, Charles Dorward.
- 1863—Israel Sensinger, Charles Dorward.

- 1879—Francis Blose, Monroe Peter, Phaon Dorward.
- 1880—Monroe Peter, Moses Lentz, Francis Blose.
- 1881—Monroe Peter, Moses Lentz.
- 1882—Phaon Dorward, Moses Lentz.
- 1883—Phaon Dorward, Moses Lentz.
- 1884—Monroe Peter, Moses Lentz.
- 1885—Daniel Kemmerer, Moses Lentz.
- 1886—Francis Blose, Moses Lentz.
- 1887—Monroe Peter, Moses Lentz.
- 1888—Monroe Peter, Moses Lentz.
- 1889—Moses Lentz, John C. Hankey.
- 1890—Francis Rehrig, John C. Hankey.
- 1891—Uriah Krause, John Hoffman.
- 1892—Uriah Krause, John Hoffman.
- 1893—John Reppart, John Hoffman.
- 1894—John Reppart, John Hoffman.
- 1895—Paul Miller, John Hoffman.
- 1896—Paul Miller, John Hoffman.
- 1897—Emanuel Wehr, Peter Kern.

1898—Emanuel Wehr, Gideon Lentz.
 1899—Gideon Lentz, Emanuel Wehr.
 1900—Alfred Hunsicker, Oliver Olewine.
 1901—Oliver Olewine, Alfred Lentz.
 1902—Alfred Lentz, Oliver Olewine, Alfred Hunsicker.
 1903—Alfred Hunsicker, Peter Kern.
 1904—Wilson Blose, Emanuel Wehr, Peter Kern.
 1905—James R. Kressly, Francis Blose.
 1906—Nathaniel Dorward, 2 yrs.; Levi Paules, 1 yr.
 1907—Charles P. Oswald.
 1908—John C. Hoffman.
 1909—Emanuel Wehr.
 1910—Blasius Hoffman.
 1911—Alfred H. Lentz.

RAILROADS AND TROLLEY.

The Schuylkill and Lehigh Railroad, a branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, extending from Reading to Slatington, passes through the township. Beginning about one-half a mile west of Best's Station, and ending at Little Run Junction at Franklin, a distance of about two and a half miles. From there it uses the branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad to Slatington.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has a branch extending from Slatington to the Saegersville quarries, a little beyond Slatedale, a distance of about four miles. Also, one called the Welsh-town branch, leading to the quarries northwest of Slatington, a distance of about two miles.

The Lehigh and New England Railroad, 32 miles long, extending from Danielsville, Northampton county, to Tamaqua, Pa., parallels the Lehigh Valley Railroad a short distance below Lehigh Gap. It crosses the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Lehigh Gap from the east to the west side. The constructors were MacArthur Bros. Co., of New York and Chicago. They have a branch office at Slatington since January 17, 1911. The bridge across the Lehigh was commenced February 15, 1911, and completed January 1, 1912.

The Lehigh Valley Traction Company has a branch extending from Slatington to Slatedale, a distance of three miles. The Allentown and Slatington line runs through the township a distance of four miles.

TELEPHONE AND ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANIES.

Communication between the villages, and the leading farmers of the township, to all parts of the country, is furnished by the telephone, of which there are two lines, the Bell and the Consolidated Telephone Companies of Pennsylvania.

The churches, hotels, stores, and many of the residences of the villages of Emerald and Slatedale are lighted by electricity, which is supplied by the Lehigh Valley Light and Power Company of Slatington.

The Lehigh Navigation Electric Company, who are building a line through Pennsylvania and New Jersey, are passing through the township from north to south. They have purchased the right of way, which includes a width of one hundred feet, from the owners of the properties through which the line passes.

OLD STORE AND HOTEL.

About one-half a mile from Best's Station is located the oldest store and hotel in the township, and without doubt in the county, as it has been in existence for over one hundred years. It was originally owned by Wilhelm Fenstermaker, who was a prominent man in this locality, and who represented this county in the legislature, and was one of the commissioners of the county in 1812. After being in his possession many years he sold it to one ——— Treichler, who kept it for a number of years, when he disposed of it in 1843 to David and Charles Peter.

The Peters operated it until 1857, when Charles retired from the firm, and David became sole owner of the property. He carried on the business until his death in 1890, when it came into possession of his son Alexander, who held it until his death in 1896, when his son, James S. Peter, became the owner.

In 1906, the present owner attached a frame building, 24 x 50 feet, and three stories in height, in which he has included all modern improvements. On the upper story is a large hall room, where Peter's Defiance Council No. 298, Jr. O. U. A. M., hold their meetings.

The council numbers 210 members, and the following named comprise the present officers:

Councillor, Edgar Reitz.
 Vice Councillor, Charles Wehr.
 Junior Past Councillor, Alvine Blose.
 Financial Secretary, Benj. C. Kuhnsman.
 Record Secretary, Edward Miller.
 Asst. Recording Secretary, John Lentz.
 Treasurer, William Kuhnsman.
 Conductor, Edwin Peters.
 Warden, Henry Reitz.
 Inside Sentinel, Harvey Hollenbach.
 Outside Sentinel, Marvin Peter.

In 1848, by an act of assembly, this place was made the polling place for the township, and it continued to be so until 1892, when the district was divided into three election districts. It still remains the polling place for the Southern district.

All business for the township has been transacted at this place from its organization up to the present time.

VILLAGES.

The villages of Washington are Slatedale, Emerald, Williamstown, Lehigh Furnace, Frieddens, Newhards, Newside and Bests .

SLATEDALE.—This is the largest village in the township, and was formerly named Labarsville. It lies three miles west of Slatington, and is connected with it by a trolley line, owned by the Lehigh Valley Traction Co. It is also the terminus of a branch of the Lehigh Valley R. R. The land upon which the village stands was owned by George and Nelson Labar, Charles many years. Upon the death of Mr. Lewis the heirs sold it to Aaron Werley, who is the present owner. The next hotel was opened in the house owned by Lewis Fink. John E. Balliet was the first landlord, receiving a license in 1881. Mr. Fink sold the property to Fred Horlacher, of Slatington. About seven years ago it was destroyed by fire, when the owner erected a fine three-story brick building in its place. It is now leased by Korn and Hamm.

Stores.—The first store was opened by Morris and Hall, who ran it for several years, when it was sold to Abraham Gish and Robert Drake.

HOUSE ALONG SLATINGTON TROLLEY, WEST OF HOFFMAN'S, BUILT IN 1797.

and Magdalene Kunkle, and Andrew Klotz. In 1848, Joseph German became the owner of the Kunkle property, and divided it into lots. A few years afterwards the Locke Slate Co., purchased the interests of the Labars, and changed the name of the village to Slatedale. Locke is the principal street, containing most of the business places, besides many fine residences.

Hotels.—The first hotel was built in 1851 by Thomas Brensinger and George Krause. Brensinger kept it for nine years, Levi Krause three years, and William Krause, two years. It was then sold to John Lewis, who conducted it for

They ran it for several years, when they disposed of it to Francis Shenton, who removed it from a frame building in 1868 into the commodious brick building it now occupies. Mr. Shenton sold it some years ago to his son Frank E. Shenton, who is the present owner.

In 1868, Lewis Fink built a store where the hotel of Fred Horlacher now stands, and took for a partner Joseph German. The partnership lasted one year, when German erected a store of his own, which he run for several years, when he went out of business. Mr. Fink after some years built a new store near the old one and kept it until seven years ago, when it was destroyed by fire and was never rebuilt.

The next store was erected by Harrison Roseberry, who sold it to Elias H. Krause, the present owner.

The Royal Blue Slate Company also a few years ago built a store, which they now operate.

A few years ago Wilson Rex erected a fine building on Mill street, in which he keeps a general supply store.

James P. Kern, in 1910, converted part of his building into a store room, where he keeps a full line of groceries and green goods.

P. F. Muthard is the proprietor of a candy and cigar store, and Miss Minnie Dorward of a millinery.

here was Dr. L. Snyder, who came here in 1868, but only remained a few months. A Dr. Turner, from New Jersey, came here in 1869 and remained until 1871.

Dr. Ralph T. Sowden came here from Shamokin in May, 1880, and is still in active practice. In July, 1912, his son, Edgar L. Sowden, who served as an interne at St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem, associated with him in practice.

Dr. Rollo C. Peters, a graduate of the Philadelphia Dental College, came here in 1912, and located in Rex's building.

Secret Societies.—P. O. S. of A.—On Dec. 1, 1897, a dispensation was granted by the State Camp to institute Camp No. 323, P. O. S. of A. On Dec. 9 they met in the hall owned by OLDEST HOUSE IN SLATEDALE, BUILT ABOUT 1820.

In 1910, R. D. Hollenbach erected a store room on Grant street and conducts a gent's furnishing store.

The village has a first class bakery, owned by E. J. Gross, and a meat market owned by George Williams.

James F. Blose conducts a coal and lumber yard. He has been in business for the past fifteen years, and furnished the lumber for all the buildings erected during this period.

The village also has two barber shops, run by Henry J. Schaller and John H. Thomas. Also, two shoemaker shops, run by Edwin Wanamaker and Robert Ebert. William Yoxheimer has a blacksmith shop on Grant street.

The village has three churches and a four-roomed school building, mention of which is made elsewhere.

Physicians.—The first physician who located

Thomas H. Shenton, where they were duly instituted, and the following named officers were installed:

Past President, John M. Jones.
 President, Elias H. Krause.
 Vice President, Thomas Lewis.
 Master of Forms, Lewis Fink.
 Recording Secretary, Henry J. Schaller.
 Asst. Recording Secretary, Henry O. Mack.
 Financial Secretary, George W. Morris.
 Treasurer, Ralph T. Sowden, M.D.
 Conductor, Aaron Weiss.
 Inspector, John Lloyd.
 Outside Guard, John B. Mack.
 Chaplain, Tilghman Paules.
 Right Sentinel, Griffith R. Williams.
 Left Sentinel, Evan Williams.

The camp has at present 191 members in good standing, and is in a prosperous condition.

I. O. R. M.—On March 27, 1911, Kittatinny Tribe, No. 445, I. O. R. M., was instituted in

P. O. S. of A. hall, and the following officers installed:

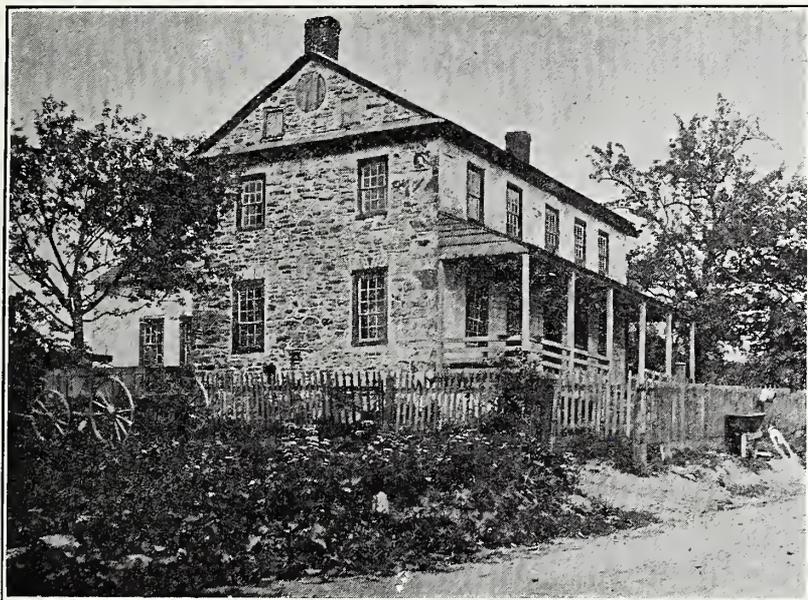

Prophet, Norman Shenton.
Sachem, Oscar A. Blose.
Senior Sagamore, Stanley Balliet.
Junior Sagamore, Quincy Ferber.
Chief of Records, Stanley Smith.
Collector of Wampum, Ralph L. Blose.
Keeper of Wampum, William G. Blose.
Guard of the Wigwam, Robert Ebert.
Guard of the Forest, Cornelius Kolp.

The tribe now numbers 105, and are in a flourishing condition.

Band.—On May 3, 1891, the young men of this place met and organized what is called the of fire, a fire company was formed in 1906. Two chemical engines, with a capacity of 40 gallons each, were purchased at a cost of $800.00, the money having been collected from the citizens of the place by James P. Brady. H. W. Bloss presented the company with 500 feet of hose. On December 3 a charter was granted them, who styled themselves Citizens Fire Co. No. 1. The following are the officers of the company:

President, John M. Jones.
Vice-President, Elmer Werley.
Recording Secretary, Norman Shenton.
Financial Secretary, George W. Morris.
Treasurer, Ralph T. Sowden, M.D.

HOMESTEAD ABOVE SLATEDALE, BUILT IN 1700. IT HAD BEEN IN POSSESSION OF HENRY FENSTERMACHER AND FAMILY FOR MANY YEARS, AND EARLIER BY THE HENRITZY FAMILY.

Slatedale Band. Of the original members only one, Griffith R. Williams, remains with the present band. Llewellyn Jones is the teacher and leader. They number 36 members. From spring until fall they have more engagements than they can accept. The officers are:

President, John M. Jones.
Vice President, William W. Morris.
Secretary, George W. Morris.
Treasurer, Ralph T. Sowden, M.D.

Water Supply.—The village is supplied with water from the Washington Water Supply Company, who have their reservoir about two and one-half miles from the village. The water is obtained from springs flowing along the Blue Ridge.

Fire Company.—For better protection in case

Post Office.—Previous to 1883 mail was served from the Slatington post office. The first postmaster was Lewis Fink, who received his commission in June, 1883. The succeeding postmasters have been H. W. Bloss, William Merscher, and Frank E. Shenton.

Population.—The village has a population of between 900 and 1,000 inhabitants.

EMERALD.

Emerald, formerly called Franklin, is situated on the branch of the Lehigh Valley R. R., about one and a half miles west of Slatington. The trolley runs through a portion of the village. The first settler was Nicholas Kern, who built the house now in possession of Benjamin Remaley's estate, in 1849. The house owned by the estate of John Parry was his barn. He next built the farm house owned by his son Robert, who sold it to his son-in-law, John Roth, and who sold it to Victor Dilliard.

The hotel was built by William B. Williams in 1868. He was the landlord for many years, when he sold it to his son, Frank Williams. The latter occupied it for several years, when he leased it to Edwin Fry, the present occupant.

The first store was built by Tilghman Kuntz, about forty years ago, and was managed for several years by his son, Francis Kuntz. It was sold to Ezra Peter, and was managed by his son, Osville S. Peter, until the year 1883, when Jesse B. Kimes and Robert Dorward became the owners. Thomas Brensinger and Lewis Smith kept it for some time, when it became the property of Daniel Thomas, and the store was discontinued.

The next store was built by John F. Smith, the present owner, in 1885. He kept it until 1902, when he rented it to Ernest Koegel, who run it until 1905, when A. C. Nolf took possession.

Another store was built some time in the '70s by William W. Hughes, who conducted it for about fifteen years, when his son William got possession. For several years different parties occupied it for short periods. At present it is kept by Appanas Deleykanich.

The village has a barber shop, kept by James Fenstermaker, also two churches, a school house, and a factory, mention of which is made elsewhere.

Coal Yard.—About fifty years ago Tilghman Kuntz and Robert Kern started a coal yard, which they held in partnership for about ten years, when Mr. Kuntz sold his interest to Mr. Kern, who retained possession until 1907, when he sold it to his son, Weston Kern. In 1910, Mr. Kern erected a building 100 x 30 feet, through which the railroad track runs, dumping the coal into shoots. Has an elevator 70 x 34 feet and 35 feet high, and a large shed for stabling his horses and wagons.

Water Supply.—The village is supplied with water from the Washington Water Supply Company.

Hose Company.—In 1909, the citizens organized a hose company, styled Star Hose Company. In 1911, they erected a two-story building, the upper story being fitted up for their business meetings. They moved into it on January 29, 1912. The officers are as follows:

President, Wm. N. Rauch.
Vice-President, Oliver Butz.
Secretary, Willard P. Oswald.
Treasurer, Weston H. Kern.

Directors, Charles E. Moyer, Oliver Butz and Jeremiah Oswald.

Secret Societies.—On the evening of April 22, 1912, a commandery of the A. O. K. of M. C. was organized in the hall of the hose company, with 38 charter members. The following named officers were duly installed:

Past Commander, Wm. N. Rauch.
Commander, Oscar D. Kern.
Vice-Commander, Harry Yoxheimer.
Chaplain, A. C. Nolf.
Recording Scribe, Willard P. Oswald.
Financial Scribe, Charles E. Moyer.
Treasurer, George L. Reitz.
Marshal, Ralph Roth.

Outside Guard, W. J. Smith.
Trustees, L. A. Dorward, E. H. Frey and A. C. Nolf.

Post Office.—A post office was established in 1885, and as no two offices with the same name can be located in the same state, the office was named Emerald. The first postmaster was John F. Smith, who retained the office until 1905, when A. C. Nolf, the present postmaster, was appointed.

The village has a population of between 400 and 500 inhabitants.

LEHIGH FURNACE.

Lehigh Furnace is a small hamlet with a population of less than fifty. It contains a store kept by Charles Neff, a wheelwright shop owned by Levi Rex, and the ruins of the old furnace which many years ago gave employment to all of the people in the surrounding neighborhood. In 1826, Stephen Balliet and Samuel Helffrich purchased from Christian Snyder and Christian Blose about twenty-five acres of land, lying at the foot of the Blue Mountain, upon which in the same year they erected a furnace, the dimensions of which were: height, 30 feet; bosh, about 8 feet. It was "blown in" in the latter part of the summer of 1826, the ore used being brought by wagons from a bed in Ironton owned by them.

Mr. Helffrich died in 1830, and two years later his interest was purchased by Stephen Balliet, who operated the furnace until his death, in 1854, after which it was carried on by his heirs for several years, and sold by them to Cooper & Hewitt, of New York. It is now owned by H. W. Bloss, of Slatedale.

The location for the furnace was chosen near the Blue Ridge because of the quantity of wood on the mountain for making charcoal. One Applebach was the first superintendent, but was soon succeeded by Samuel Lewis, later of Allentown, who conducted the business about four years, when Benjamin S. Levan took charge, and continued till the death of Mr. Balliet in January, 1854, when he became the superintendent of the Lehigh Valley Iron Company, located at Coplay.

In order to get experienced men to work the furnace they went to Berks county and induced men to leave the employ of the Trexlers, who operated a furnace near Shamrock. Among those who settled here and raised families were Benjamin Hartline, Joel Schnabel, John Reppart, Samuel Paules, Daniel Paules, William Steele, Abraham Bechtel and George Renninger, the latter being the only one of the above named that is still among the living. He is now 94 years old.

one mile and a half from the village, and kept it until his death, in 1876, when his son, Osville C. Peter, got possession. In 1886, he removed his shop into the village.

During the time John Geiger had charge of the store a postoffice was established, and received the name of Hoffmans. Mr. Geiger was appointed postmaster. His successors have been Francis Hoffman and Walter Handwerk.

The population of the village is about 125.

In this village is a house occupied by the organist and sexton, Henry J. Bentz, which was used as a private school building a number of years before the erection of the church in 1847.

HOUSE OWNED AND OCCUPIED BY JOHN F. PETERS, BUILT 1799.

FRIEDENS (P. O. Hoffmans), lies about one mile south of Slatington, on the trolley road leading from Slatington to Allentown.

The land on which this village is situated was owned at an early date by John Peters. It contains 25 dwelling houses, a store, a tinsmith shop, a school house and a Union church.

The first store was opened by B. W. Kern in 1884. He was followed by John Geiger, Francis Hoffman and Walter Handwerk. In 1841, Eli Peter established a tinsmith shop about

The first dwelling was of logs, and stood about the same place as the present dwelling, now used by the organist, and a property of the church. The present house was erected for a two-fold purpose, as a place where the youth of the community were to be instructed, and as a dwelling for the organist, the teacher always being the "foresinger" of the church.

Joel Geiger was for a number of years the teacher and foresinger; so was Calvin Guth. James Snyder was another; later, he was at Mickley's church in the same capacity. Also, Wm. F. Andreas, the latter two, with Henry Andreas, taught under the free school system.

Since 1881 the new school house was built and the Ladies' Aid Society of the church uses the school room as their place of meeting. The church council also meets in the same room.

WILLIAMSTOWN, named after Henry Williams, who owned most of the land on which the hamlet is situated, adjoins the borough of Slatington. About one-half of it was destroyed by fire in 1908 and was never rebuilt.

The hamlet contains a school house and a Greek Catholic church.

Most of the inhabitants are foreigners, and number between 75 and 100.

NEWHARDS.—This is a small hamlet located about one mile south of Friedens. It contains twelve houses, a hotel kept by Preston E. Lentz, a blacksmith shop owned by Joseph Olewine, and a school house. It has a population of about fifty inhabitants.

BESTS.—This is the name of a station on the Schuylkill and Lehigh Railroad. The place contains a hotel and store in the same building, also the postoffice, and is owned by Jarius Krause. A blacksmith shop owned by Martin Kuhnsman, and about one-half dozen farm houses in the immediate vicinity. The number of inhabitants is about 35.

NEWSIDE.—This small village, formerly called Washington Square, lies in the western part of the township, about four miles from Neffs. It was founded in 1850 by Nathan Peter, who obtained the land from his father, Andrew Peter. He built a store room in the same year, and conducted a general store until 1876, when it was discontinued. In 1901, the firm of F. N. Peter & Bro. erected a new store building, which is still in operation.

In 1851, the owner erected a hotel, which was kept by him until 1873, when it was closed until 1900, when it was remodeled and sold to Jacob Hahn, who sold it to John Williams, the present owner. The present landlord is Jacob Gum.

In 1862, Mr. Peter built a small foundry and began making plows, which was named the "Peters Plow," and which found a ready market in this and the surrounding country. He continued in the business until 1878, when the foundry was destroyed by fire. His sons, Frank and Francis Peter, under the firm name of F. N. Peter & Bro., built a new foundry on the site of the old one, the dimensions of which are about 200 x 50 feet.

They turn out all kind of work pertaining to foundries, but make a specialty in the manufacture of cast iron fences.

Since the death of Frank Peter, in 1907, his interests are looked after by his son, Stanley Peter.

They have a capital of $25,000 invested in the business, and employ 21 men.

In 1901, the postoffice, which had been located at Deibertsville, was removed to this place, and Francis Peter appointed postmaster.

The village contains 13 dwelling houses and has about 50 inhabitants.

RELIGIOUS HISTORY.

Friedens church, located at Hoffmans, was the first built in the township, having been erected in 1847. It was rebuilt in 1880, and remodeled in 1908. It is built of stone, and the outside is plastered and painted red, resembling brick.

The pastors of the Lutheran congregation have been as follows: Revs. Jeremiah Schindel, William B. Roth, Thomas Steck (1859-67), J. H. Renninger (1867-89), J. B. Fox (1889-1901). Rev. J. H. Longacre is the present pastor.

The Reformed congregation has been ministered to by the following pastors, viz: Revs. Erasmus Helffrich, Levi K. Derr, William J. Peters, Nevin Neffrich, Augustus Piscator and James O. Oswald, who is the present pastor.

The present officers of the church are: Lutheran—Elders, William H. Smith and Albert Leiser; deacons, Henry Leiser, George Wassum, Milton Sleicher and John Hausman. Reformed—Elders, Paul Lentz and Lewis H. Peter; deacons, Edward Rockel, Edgar Miller, Edwin Peter and Lewis Benninger.

The Reformed membership numbers 351, the Lutheran between 185 and 200.

The Methodist Episcopal, located at Slatedale, was begun in 1856, but the structure was not completed until 1858. Owen W. Owens and Stinson Hagaman constituted the building committee. In 1888, under the pastorate of Rev. O. C. Burt, the church was remodeled.

On March 4, 1908, the property was sold to the Shenton Land Co., who needed the same for dumping purposes for their waste material. Out of the grave yard, connected with the church, 188 corpses were removed in the same year. The remains were re-interred into the Evangelical cemetery, located above the village. The work was supervised by Undertaker James A. G. Hunsicker, with a number of assistants, and the expenses incurred were borne by the church.

In 1910, they purchased a lot on Locke street from Thomas H. Shenton, and under the management of Rev. F. H. Huth, of Bethlehem, erected a new church at a cost of $4,000. The same was dedicated Dec. 11, 1910. The building committee consisted of Frank E. Shenton, Alvin Weiss and James P. Brady.

The first pastor was Rev. John Jones, and the succeeding ones: Jacob Schlichter, _____ McGee, _____ Barr, _____ Powers, _____ Durell, E. Townsend, B. F. Powell, O. C. Burt, Otho Brandt, _____ Thompson, _____ Dougherty, _____ Toy, _____ Byers, _____ Comly, _____ Judd, _____ Bassford, _____ Kerslake and others. The congregation at present is supplied by Mr. Jackson G. Everett, of Leighton, a local preacher.

Reformed church. This clause, in 1889, saved the uncompleted church from falling into the hands of commercial men, and converted into a factory. The unfinished church, in 1889, was sold by the sheriff to Keck & Co., Allentown.

From them it was purchased by Lafayette German and Henry Kern who, at a reduced price sold it to a committee of the original organizers. The church was first known as St. Paul's Lutheran and Reformed church, but after its re-purchase, at the suggestion of Wilson Rex, it was named "Holy Trinity" church. Much gratuitous labor was done by the organizers in the erection of the building, special mention being given to William Steele.

DEVIL'S PULPIT, ON BLUE MOUNTAIN.

The following named persons are the trustees of the church, which are the proper officers: Alvin Weiss, John Thomas, Joseph Bolton, Henry Hartline, Frank E. Shenton, James P. Brady, Henry Thomas, James G. Bolton and Norman Shenton.

The Lutheran and Reformed Church at Slate-dale was organized in 1888 by the following: Rev. J. S. Renninger, H. W. Bloss, Wilson Rex, Peter Ferber, J. H. Snyder, Henry Kern, William B. Krause and William Steele. The original building committee was H. W. Bloss, chairman; J. H. Snyder, secretary; Lafayette German, treasurer; Peter Ferber and Daniel Heintzelman.

Joseph German sold the lot, 100 x 150 feet, for $200.00, with a stipulation in the deed that the ground can only be used for a Lutheran and

At first services were held in the basement, but through the untiring efforts of the Ladies' Aid Society the upper part was finally finished and furnished. The seats were presented by Rev. Nevin Helffrich.

The building is of brick, 40 x 70 feet, with a basement. The cost of the completed church was about $6,400. The ministers were as follows: Lutheran—Rev. J. S. Renninger (1888-89); J. B. Fox, 1889-May 1, 1901 (died); J. H. Longacre, Jan. 1, 1902. Reformed—Rev. Nevin Helffrich started the mission; Augustus Piscator, April 10, 1903-April 30, 1909; James O. Oswald, March 1, 1910.

The officers of the church are as follows: Lutheran—Joseph Sensinger and James Rehrig, elders; Hiram Hartline, Tilghman German, Richard Rau and Victor Wertman, deacons. Re- formed—Frank Frantz and Menno Krum, elders; Edward Frantz, John Reitz, Howard Blose and Ralph Snyder, deacons.

The Reformed have a membership of 247, the Lutheran between 80 and 90.

Evangelical Association.—This denomination has two churches in the township. The first church was built in Slatedale in 1860. It was a stone building, 24 x 30 feet. The congregation having increased, more room was required. In 1881, under the pastorate of the Rev. J. C. Bliem, a new brick church, 34 x 50 feet, was erected. To accommodate the members residing in Franklin, a chapel was built there in 1885.

For further information, see "History of Evangelical Church."

St. Peter's Independent Evangelical Church.—This church is located at Emerald and was erected in 1894.

When the Evangelical Association split in 1894, and divided into two factions, the seceding faction styling themselves "The United Evangelical Church." The adherents of the seceding faction of this place decided to build a church of their own. In October, 1894, they purchased the ground on which the church is built from Daniel Thomas and at once began operations. The church was dedicated in December of the same year. The building committee comprised the following: Justus Moyer, Peter Kern, Peter Oswald, A. C. Nolf, Oliver Yehl, Lewis Kuntz.

The building is of frame, and, including the lot, cost $3,500. They also have a double dwelling connected with the church, in one part of which the pastor resides.

The following named pastors have served the congregation: Revs. I. J. Reitz, D. S. Stauffer, John Woehrle, J. D. Kistler, A. W. Warfle and J. T. Layton.

The church membership is 90.

The following are the present officers: Stewards, Jeremiah Oswald, Osville Snyder and John K. Peter; trustees, Jeremiah Oswald, Peter Oswald, A. C. Nolf, Willard Oswald and Albert J. Sechler.

Greek Catholic.—This church is located at Williamstown. For several years the congregation held services in the school house. In 1909, they purchased the property owned by the Estate of Hugh Parry, and erected on it a frame church building at a cost of $4,500. Their pastor is the Rev. John Olsovsky, who resides at Catasauqua.

PRIVATE GRAVEYARDS.

At the foot of the Hazel Dell Slate Company's high dump, among several large maple trees, and a tall pine tree, on the north bank of Trout creek, is a private graveyard of the Kern family, who were the owners of the property. This graveyard was about 260 yards east of the original dwelling and barn. A number of citizens now living stated that up to 1890 the graveyard was kept in repair, and that fully fifteen graves could be seen, and that six or more of them had grave stones upon which were inscriptions. John J. Paules, of Slatington, recalls that one tombstone bore the inscription,

"Maria Kern, died in 1787."

Two broken slate stones remain standing, but the inscriptions are all defaced. Among those buried are: Frederick Kern (son of the pioneer), "Blind" Nicholas Kern.

Another graveyard was located on the farm now owned by Leon P. Rex. It could be seen until about 1850. Since then the plow-share passes over the site, which is supposed to hold the mortal remains of George Rex and some members of his family. The farm upon which this graveyard was located was originally settled by George Rex, and the land warrant bears date 1739.

SCHOOLS.

The earliest information obtainable concerning the schools of the township relates to the year 1812, when a log building was situated where Edward Kern now lives near Lehigh Gap. The teacher was one Moyer, and the medium of education was exclusively German.

Later, about 1815, Dorsey Rudy held school in a log building where the Friedens church now is. In 1818, Moyer had a school where John Bauer now lives, near Rex's school building.

The first English school in the township was doubtless that which was opened by William Kern about 1820 in the old mill which stood in the middle of the road at the end of Trout creek.

The next English school was opened in 1847 at the house of David and Charles Peter by George Rinehart, and was taught at a later period by Cochran Sterling, who received eight dollars per month, and "boarded round." One still later was opened at Blose's mill. The building still remains standing.

The course of study was reading, writing, singing, spelling, arithmetic as far as the fundamental rules, and generally the catechism. The course in reading embraced the A. B. C. book, the Psalter, and the New Testament. Many children whose parents could not afford to pay for their tuition, grew up in ignorance. The records still existing of transactions during those times, show that very few of the women and many of the men could not even write their own names.

The school law providing for free education passed the legislature in 1834. Heidelberg, of which Washington was then a part, voted against its acceptance until 1848, when it was finally adopted. On this account they lost the money appropriated towards the maintenance of the schools from 1834 to 1848.

Washington, on becoming a separate township, was divided into seven districts: Friedens, Furnace, Peters, Bachmans, Rexs, and two in union with Heidelberg and Whitehall. It now comprises thirteen districts, three of which contain two schools, and two three schools each. The school houses now in use are all good brick structures, about 25 x 35 feet, and cost on an average about one thousand dollars each.

Friedens District.—School was held in the building owned by the church, until 1881, when the present school house was built.

Furnace District.—The first school house was a log building located at Blöse's mill, and is still standing. In this building the late William H. Ainey, of Allentown, was one of the teachers. The next was of stone on the site of the present buildings. The first brick building was erected in 1876. A graded school was established in the district in 1895, when an additional building was erected. Since 1908 only one of the schools has been opened.

Rex's District.—The first school house was a log building, and stood where John Bauer now resides. The next was a frame building on land of Jacob Rex. In 1872 a brick building was erected about one-fourth of a mile from the old one. In 1906 a graded school was established, and an addition added to the old building.

Peters District.—The first building stood on the property now owned by Oliver DeLong, and was built of logs.

In 1860, a frame building was erected on the property of David Peter; this was followed by another in 1872. In 1880, the first brick building was erected. In 1899 a graded school was established and an addition added to the old one. Only one of the schools is now being used.

Newhard's District.—For many years school was kept in an old log building about one-half a mile from the present one, on land of Henry Peters. The present school house was built in 1876.

Williamstown District.—The first school house was a frame building, and was built in 1862. The present brick building was built in 1882.

Lehigh Gap District.—There have been three school houses in this district. It was the pioneer pedagogue, Moyer, to whom allusion has already been made, who taught school in 1812. A fairly good frame building succeeded the one in which he taught, and in turn was supplanted by the present brick building, erected in 1882.

Remaley's District.—The school in this district was an outgrowth of the village of Friedens. The present school house was built in 1870.

Renninger's District.—The present school house, built in 1877, was the first in the district.

Hoffman's District.—The first building was of frame, and in 1879 was sold to Tilghman Raber, who made it into a dwelling house. The present building was erected in the same year, and was located on the opposite corner from where the old building stood.

Newside District.—The present school house, built in 1889, was the first in the district.

Franklin District.—Two brick buildings were erected in 1876. In 1904 these were torn down and a fine two-story brick building was erected on the site. The building contains four class rooms and a basement.

The citizens of Franklin paid for building the cupola and furnished the bell.

It is heated by a hot air furnace, and it supplied with water from the Water Supply Company. A fire escape was attached to the building in 1908. The cost of the building was about $7,000.

Slatedale District.—A two-roomed brick building supplanted the frame building in 1882. In 1900 an addition was added to it. Because of the encroachment of the slate quarries, adjoining the schools, it was found necessary to select another site to accommodate the children. A plot of ground, 150 x 180 feet, was purchased from Lafayette German and Hugh Edwards near the center of the village for the sum of $2,050. In the fall of 1911 the foundation which is of concrete was made, and the building completed in 1912.

It is a two-story brick building, and is one of the finest in the county. It contains four class rooms, a director's room, and a supply room. The basement is divided into apartments, one for the children to use in inclement weather, and the other for the heating apparatus and fuel. The floors of the halls and corridors are concreted and the stairways, there being two of them, are furnished with slate stone steps. A brick wall, on each side of the corridor, is built from the basement to the cupola. The building has four exits, two on each end. It is heated by the hot air gravity system. It is supplied with water from the water company. A lavatory and a bubble fountain is placed in the hall, for the use of the children. The bell was presented by Thomas H. Shenton, one of the directors. The cost of the building alone was $10,000.

The township, in 1911, issued bonds to the amount of $13,000, payable within fifteen years, at 3½ per cent., which were readily taken at par.

The school term is eight months. The tax rate is six mills. The amount collected for 1912 was $6,907.41. The number of pupils enrolled was 591, and the number of teachers employed 19. The following are the names of the teachers employed during the term of 1912-13, and the schools taught:

1. Friedens, Leda Rex.
2. Newhards, Raymond Hollenbach.
3. Remaley's, Charles Kunkle.
4. Peter's Secondary, Granville Krause.
5. Peter's Primary, Winnie Seip.
6. Hoffman's, Flossie Krause.
7. Newside, George Hoffman.
8. Lehigh Gap, Howard Steckel.
9. Williamstown, Edward Handwerk.
10. Franklin Grammar, Sidney R. Peter.
11. Franklin Secondary, Harry Yaxtheimer.
12. Franklin Primary, Lizzie Roth.
13. Rex's Secondary, Irwin Kemmerer.
14. Rex's Primary, Lillian Neff.
15. Slatedale Grammar, Henry J. Schaller.
16. Slatedale Secondary, Cora Engle.
17. Slatedale Primary, Ina Kern.
18. Renninger's, Verna German.
19. Furnace, Claude Peters.

The official records of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh show the following to have been elected school directors:

- 1850—Daniel Peter, Jonas Hoffman.
 1851—Benjamin Levan, Boas Hausman.
 1852—John Hausman, Stephen Kern, Peter Roth, Chas. E. Beck, Tilghman Kuntz, Jacob Remaley.
 1853—John Fenstermaker, Daniel Hunsicker.
 1854—Stephen Kern, Jonas Blose.
 1855—Peter Wert, Moses Kuntz.
 1856—Daniel Krause, Peter Reber.
 1857—Lewis C. Smith, Daniel Wehr.
 1858—Henry Peter, William F. Mosser.
 1859—Thomas Kuntz, Frederick Eberhard.
 1860—Stephen Kern, Monroe Peter.
 1861—Stephen Schlosser, Daniel Peter.
 1862—George Krause, John C. Hankey.
 1863—Edwin Scheckler, David Peter.
 1864—Ezra Peter, Henry Hoffman.
 1865—Francis Shenton, Thomas Kuntz.
 1866—Stephen Schlosser, David Peter.
 1867—David Hollenbach, Henry Peter.
 1868—Stephen Kern, Christian Snyder.
 1869—Francis Shenton, Nathan Peter.
 1870—Daniel Peter, William Krause.
 1871—
 1872—Joseph Hunsicker, Stephen Kern.
 1873—Francis Shenton, Nathan M. Kern.
 1874—Ezra Peter, Thomas Casey.
 1875—David D. George, Emanuel Wehr.
 1876—Jacob Krum, Peter Newhard.
 1877—Samuel Oswald, Tilghman Kuntz.

- 1878—David George, George Rex.
 1879—Alfred Lentz, Daniel Sauerwine.
 1880—David Hollenbach, Emanuel Wehr, Alfred Dorward.
 1881—Francis Shenton, David Reber.
 1882—Alfred Lentz, Reuben Bittner.
 1883—Peter Kern, Emanuel Wehr.
 1884—Aaron Handwerk, Lewis B. Geiger.
 1885—Alfred Lentz, Reuben Bittner.
 1886—Justus Moyer, Peter Kern.
 1887—Chas. H. Kistler, Lewis B. Geiger.
 1888—Alfred Lentz, David Reber.
 1889—Justus Moyer, Peter Kern.
 1890—Lewis B. Geiger, Elias Best, Chas. H. Kistler.
 1891—H. W. Bloss, David Reber.
 1892—Justus Moyer, Alvin Semmel.
 1893—Alfred Lentz, Francis A. Peter.
 1894—H. W. Bloss, David Reber.
 1895—Oliver A. Krum, Henry F. Hollenbach.
 1896—James A. German, Francis A. Peter.
 1897—David Reber, H. W. Bloss.
 1898—Lewis A. Dorward, Alvin P. Semmel.
 1899—Francis A. Peter, James A. German.
 1900—H. W. Bloss, David Reber.
 1901—Lewis A. Dorward, Nathaniel H. Smith.
 1902—Francis A. Peter, William W. Morris.
 1903—H. W. Bloss, David Reber.
 1904—Lewis A. Dorward, Nathaniel H. Smith.
 1905—Francis A. Peter, James P. Brady.
 1906—Henry F. Hollenbach, R. T. Sowden.
 1907—Lewis A. Dorward, William H. Krum.
 1908—Francis A. Peter, Benjamin C. Kuhnsman.
 1909—Thomas H. Shenton, R. T. Sowden.
 1910—Lewis A. Dorward, William H. Krum.
 1911—Thomas H. Shenton, 6 yrs.; Lewis A. Dorward, 4 yrs.; Francis A. Peter, 4 yrs.; William H. Krum, 2 yrs.; Benjamin C. Kuhnsman, 2 yrs.

THE SLATE INTERESTS.

The most important industry in this township after farming is the quarrying of slate. The first quarry opened in what is now Washington township, was opened at Slatedale, in 1848, by George and Nelson Labar. It was purchased by the Locke Slate Co., and for many years was superintended by Francis Shenton, one of the partners. Upon the death of his partners, Mr. Shenton became the sole owner and retained possession of the same until his death, when it passed into possession of his son Thomas. In 1904, he sold it to the Shenton Land Co. for the sum of $50,000.

Shenton Land Co.—This company was organized in 1904 by the following named stockholders: A. L. Rice, S. M. Rice, Frank Jacobs, Judge F. M. Trexler, H. H. Misson, Thomas Zellner, A. Klotz (Bellaire, Ohio), M. L. Blackburn, M. M. Rice, H. A. Mathieu and J. Wm. Mathieu.

Since the formation of the company, H. H. Misson purchased the interest of Judge F. M. Trexler, and S. M. Rice that of M. L. Blackburn.

The officers are, A. L. Rice, president, and H. H. Misson, secretary and treasurer.

They purchased the property formerly owned by Thomas H. Shenton for the sum of $50,000.

The Provident No. 3, Royal Blue, Manhattan, Columbia, Crescent and Thomas H. Shenton quarries are located on the property.

Eureka.—This is a limited partnership association, organized in 1894, with a capital of $10,000, composed of the following named stockholders: R. F. Muschlitz, Thomas Zellner, F. A. Kreitz, Morris Hoats, and Reuben Helffrich. The following are the officers: President, Reuben Helffrich; secretary, F. A. Kreitz; treasurer, R. F. Muschlitz. They manufacture roofing slate and slate products in the rough, and employ 90 men.

Blue Valley.—This company was incorporated in 1896, with a capital of $50,000. They worked it until 1910, when they leased it to the following named parties: F. A. Kreitz, R. F. Muschlitz, S. D. Behler, James G. Rauch, Henry R. Helffrich, L. H. Yeager, Charles W. Yenser and Thomas Johnson, who were incorporated in 1910 with a capital of $20,000. The following are the officers: President, Reuben Helffrich; secretary, Charles C. Bechtel; treasurer, S. D. Behler; superintendent, Charles W. Yenser. They employ 66 men.

Slatington Slate Co.—This company was established in 1852 by Henry Kuntz. It was incorporated in 1894, with a capital of $25,000. They operate the Mountain quarry and factory, located on the Welshtown branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and also the Franklin Tunnel quarry at Emerald. The officers are: President, Dr. F. O. Ritter secretary, C. M. Sandt; treasurer and general manager, S. B. Costenbader. They employ 50 men at the Mountain quarry, and 65 at the Franklin.

Fairview.—This company was established in 1890, and incorporated in 1906, with a capital of $5,000. S. B. Costenbader is the president and treasurer, and Charles D. Thomas, secretary. The number of men employed is 35.

Blue Vein Slate Co.—Were incorporated in 1911, with a capital of $20,000. The following are the officers of the company: A. S. Haines, president and treasurer; William D. Ritter, vice-president; J. O. Haines, secretary; John J. Paules, superintendent. Their quarry is located at Slatedale. They manufacture roofing slate, blackboards and school slate, and employ 34 men.

The Provident Slate Co. is operated by A. S. Haines and Martin Koons. They operate a quarry on the Washington vein (No. 1), near Emerald, and one (No. 3) at Slatedale, on the Locke vein. They have a capital of $50,000 invested. They employ about 75 men.

Ellis Owens' Sons operate a quarry located at Slatedale, on the property of the Carbon Slate Co. They began operations in 1912, and have a capital of $15,000 invested. They manufacture roofing slate, blackboards and school slate, and employ 24 men.

Ellis Owens Slate Co.—This company is composed of Ellis Owens and William H. Williams. Their quarry is on the property of Rex and Bittner, near Slatedale. They have a capital of $10,000 invested. They manufacture roofing slate and rough blackboards. They employ 24 men.

Lehigh Structural Slate Mfg. Co.—This company was incorporated in 1907, with a capital of $25,000. The officers are: Thomas Bolger, president and manager James Bolger, secretary; H. H. Misson, treasurer; J. P. Wiswell, superintendent; Albert Rice, Moses Rice, Henry Myers, H. A. Mathieu. They are located at Slatedale, on the property of the Shenton Land Co. They manufacture all kinds of structural products and finished blackboards.

The Thomas H. Shenton Quarry.—This quarry is located at Slatedale. Mr. Shenton began operations in 1899, and has a capital of $50,000 invested in the plant. He has one of the largest and best equipped factories in the country for the manufacture of slate electrical supplies, such as switch-boards, panel-boards, linings and switch bases. The products are shipped to all parts of the United States. Besides the specialty of manufacturing electrical products, he also makes roofing slate and blackboards. He employs 55 men.

Columbia.—This company was started by Dr. A. P. Steckel, who began operating in 1876, and continued until his death in 1897. The estate continued in business until 1906, when the present company was incorporated, with a capital of $25,000. The company comprises the following members: F. P. Steckel, president; H. B. Stechel, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Ursula A. Werley, Mrs. Chevis Fronsberger, W. I. Gahr. This company employs 50 men.

Acme Structural Co.—This company is located at Emerald. They organized in 1912, and comprises the following members: E. D. Oswald, W. P. Oswald and Charles Moyer. Capital invested, $2,000. They manufacture slate sink-tops and urinals.

Trout Creek Slate Co.—This company works a quarry near Slatedale. William E. Roberts is the owner and manager. He has a capital invested of $5,000 and employs 15 men.

Williams & Lentz.—This company is composed of William Williams and Julius Lentz.

They operate a quarry near Emerald, and began operations in 1912. They have a capital invested of $8,000, and employ 12 men.

The Cambridge Slate Co.—This company was incorporated in 1898, with a capital of $20,000. They operate a quarry about two miles northwest of Slatington. They manufacture roofing slate and blackboards in the rough. The officers are: President, D. R. James; secretary, W. J. James; treasurer, B. F. James; superintendent, Henry Maxwell, Jr., John R. James, William Wilhelm, Mrs. Henry Maxwell, Mrs. Pierce (Harrisburg). They employ 50 men.

The Genuine Franklin Slate Co.—This company was incorporated February 21, 1907, the incorporators being: E. D. Peters, Harry Shertzinger and O. A. Neff, with a capital of $20,000. The quarry is located near Emerald. They manufacture roofing slate. The following are the officers: Edw. M. Peters, president and secretary; Charles D. Peters, treasurer. They employ 26 men.

Thomas Zellner operates a factory near Slatington. Capital invested, $10,000. He manufactures blackboards and all kinds of structural products. He employs 15 men.

Leander Snyder has a small factory at Slatedale. He manufactures mantel stock in the rough. He has a capital invested of $700.

Monarch Blackboard and Structural Slate Co.—This company is located at Custers, and manufactures finished blackboards and all kinds of structural products. Mrs. W. W. Bowman is the principal owner, and has associated with her Thomas Wertman. They employ 6 men.

Hazel Dell Slate Co.—This company began operations in 1893, and comprised the following members: D. D. Roper, A. L. Rice and S. M. Rice. They continued in business for twenty years, when a new company was formed, which is composed of the following named members: O. Halloran, president; A. S. Morgan, secretary and treasurer; James Paules, superintendent; John Stewart, Edward Schenerlein, A. Klotz, S. M. Rice, agent for the Estate of A. L. Rice. They were incorporated Jan. 15, 1913, with a capital of $30,000. They employ 40 men.

The Crescent Slate Company of Slatington, was incorporated on November 27, 1909, with a capital of $20,000, fully paid. The officers are: Dr. J. S. Mack, secretary and treasurer; J. W. Mack, president, and Mrs. S. A. Mack. The firm employs 40 people. They manufacture roofing slate and rough blackboards. The quarry is located at Slatedale. The company is under the management of J. W. Mack, and is noted for the manufacture of the Federal Government roofing slate.

The Washington Slate Company of Slatington, Pa., was incorporated in 1891 with a capital of $30,000. They have 1,700 feet of open vein, of hard, excellent slate. The organizer of this company was A. P. Berlin, who served as the first president. The present officers are: Hon. A. J. Kern, president; A. S. Morgan, secretary and manager; Hon. A. S. Haines, vice-president, and W. W. Morgan, treasurer. They employ 80 people and have markets all over the world.

The Carbon Slate Company was organized in 1888 and incorporated in 1902, with the following officers: Ellis Owens, president Robert G. Pierce, treasurer, and Joseph Richards, secretary, and with a capital of $45,000, fully paid. Their offices are located at 549 Main street, Slatington, Pa. They are the principal exporters in the United States and shipped as many as 120 carloads on one occasion. They make mostly roofing slate and employ 175 men.

The Bachman Slate Company was organized and incorporated in 1903 by J. N. Bachman, president and treasurer; O. W. Bachman, secretary; M. A. Bachman and I. P. Bachman. The above are officers and directors. This is a close corporation with a capital of $50,000. They manufacture roofing slate and everything in the line of slate products. They employ 35 people and have one of the largest factories in this region.

The Blue Mountain Slate Company is a private partnership concern and employs 45 men. They manufacture roofing slate and other slate products. They have their offices at 620 Main street. The company began business in 1898, and has continued up to this time. Their quarries are located in Washington township, near Slatedale. This firm sold slate to the government and has as its head James Owens.

The Manhattan Slate Company has officers: A. L. Rice, president and general manager, and C. S. Stettler, superintendent, and employs from 60 to 70 people. It is in operation since 1905.

The Thomas Slate Company, Limited, was organized in 1909. They operate a quarry at Slatedale and employ 25 men. They manufacture roofing slate and blackboards. They have invested about $15,000. The officers are: O. A. Blose, president; James P. Kern, treasurer and secretary, and Howard Smith, Superintendent.

The Highland Slate Company is a private partnership and was organized in May, 1905, by Alvin Weiss, Henry H. Kern, Oliver F. Kern and Henry J. Balliet. This company operates on the Saegersville or Meadow Brook vein, and employs 30 men. They manufacture roofing slate and structural stone. The officers are: Oliver F. Kern, president; Alvin Weiss, secre-rary and treasurer, and Henry J. Balliet, superintendent. Mr. Weiss is also secretary and treasurer of the Royal Blue Slate Company.

The Royal Blue Slate Company was organized in 1902 by Alvin Weiss, Henry H. Kern and Oliver F. Kern. The quarry is located at Slatedale. They manufacture roofing slate and school slate and employ 55 men. The quarry is 250 feet deep and the capital invested is about $30,000. The officers are: Oliver F. Kern, president; Alvin Weiss, secretary and treasurer, and Henry H. Kern, superintendent.

M. J. Roberts & Company was organized in 1894 and have their offices at Slatington and their quarry near Slatedale. They employ 25 men and manufacture roofing slate and blackboards. It is a close company. There are three owners: M. J. Roberts, Hugh J. Roberts and William E. Roberts, among whom the business is transacted.

The Bittner Slate Company was incorporated in 1900 with a capital of $10,000, but the investment amounts to $50,000. The president is Edwin W. Bittner; Adam Bittner is the secretary and treasurer, and Phaeon Bittner is the vice-president. The company operates on the Saegersville vein and have all the large vein slate. They manufacture bolt blackboards and roofing slate. In 1912 they abandoned their old quarry, which was almost 300 feet deep, and opened a new one 60 feet in length on the same vein. They employ 21 men.

ELECTION DISTRICTS.

On September 10, 1892, the township was divided into three election districts, viz: Eastern, Western and Southern. The polling place for the Eastern district was established at Emerald, for the Western at Slatedale, while the Southern retained the old place at Peter's Hotel. The following election officers were appointed:

Eastern District.—Judge, Preston Mantz; inspectors, Oliver A. Krum, Oscar Kern registration assessor, Wm. C. Kuntz.

Western District.—Judge, James Krum; inspectors, Owen Lewis, J. A. M. Riedy; registration assessor, John M. Jones.

Southern District.—Judge, J. K. Ward; inspectors, Lewis O. Blee, Elias Best; registration assessor, Lewis Kemmerer.

The present election officers are:

Eastern District.—Judge, Charles Moyer; inspectors, George Reitz, Nathaniel Mack; registration assessor, John J. Peter.

Western District.—Judge, Ralph L. Blöse; inspectors, Elmer Werley, Samuel A. Sowden; registration assessor, John M. Jones.

Southern District.—Judge, Charles P. Oswald; inspectors, Wesley Peter, Edward Miller; registration assessor, Alvin Blöse.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The justices elected for this township since its organization have been as follows:

	Commissioned.
Stephen Schlosser,	April 11, 1848
Boas Hausman,	April 9, 1850
Lewis C. Smith,	April 9, 1850
Levi Krause,	April 10, 1855
Henry Kuntz,	April 10, 1855
William F. Mosser,	May 2, 1859
Henry Kuntz,	April 10, 1860
Alexander Peter,	April 14, 1863
Benjamin J. Schlosser,	April 11, 1865
Alexander Peter,	April 14, 1868
Lewis C. Smith,	April 8, 1870
Lewis H. Roth,	April 9, 1872
Alexander Peter,	April 15, 1873
Lewis H. Roth,	April 19, 1877
Alexander Peter,	Mar. 25, 1878
Lewis H. Roth,	Mar. 30, 1882
Osville S. Peter,	April 6, 1883
Alexander Peter,	April 6, 1883
A. C. Nolf,	April 11, 1884
Alexander Peter,	April 12, 1888
A. C. Nolf,	April 20, 1889
Alexander Peter,	April 20, 1893
A. C. Nolf,	April 24, 1894
Wilson Rex,	April 16, 1898
James S. Peter,	April 4, 1899
Wilson Rex,	April 9, 1903
James S. Peter,	April 9, 1904
Wilson Rex,	April 9, 1908
James S. Peter,	April 26, 1909

CONSTABLES.

Names of constables who have served since 1848:

- 1848—Moses Lentz, Nathan Miller.
- 1850—Gideon Lentz, Daniel Saeger.
- 1851—Gideon Lentz.
- 1852—John Kern.
- 1853—John Kern.
- 1854—Tilghman Kuntz.
- 1855—Nathan Eck.
- 1856—John Kern.
- 1857—Stephen Miller.
- 1858—Daniel Geary.
- 1859—John Anthony.
- 1860—John Kern.
- 1861—Joshua Dorward.
- 1862—Joshua Dorward.
- 1863—Menno D. George.
- 1864—Tilghman Yehl.
- 1865—Tilghman Yehl.
- 1866—Tilghman Yehl.
- 1867—Tilghman Yehl.
- 1868—Joshua Dorward.
- 1869—Joshua Dorward, James Krause.
- 1870—Joshua Dorward.
- 1871—Joshua Dorward.
- 1872—Samuel Kunkle.
- 1873—William Deibert.
- 1874—William Deibert.

1875—William Deibert.
 1876—Wilson Blose.
 1877—John C. Hankey.
 1878—John C. Hankey.
 1879 to 1905—Daniel A. Weiss.
 1905—George F. Thomas.
 1908—Frank B. Williams.
 1911—George T. Williams.

AUDITORS.

The following is a list of the auditors who have served from 1848 to 1913:

1848—John Rex.
 1849—Reuben Peter.
 1850—John Fenstermaker.
 1851—Charles E. Beck.
 1852—Thomas Kuntz.
 1853—Charles Peter.
 1854—Reuben Peter.
 1855—William Mosser.
 1856—Henry Kuntz.
 1857—Jonas Hoffman.
 1858—David Peter.
 1859—Henry Kuntz.
 1860—Stephen Schlosser.
 1861—Joel P. Geiger.
 1862—David Peter.
 1863—Tilghman Kuntz, Emanuel Wehr.
 1864—Benjamin Schlosser.
 1865—David Peter.
 1866—David Hollenbach.
 1867—D. J. Peter.
 1868—Thomas Casey.
 1869—William Blose, 1 yr; Moses Lentz, 2 yrs.; William Sourwine, 3 yrs.
 1872—David Hollenbach.
 1873—Monroe Peter.
 1874—Francis Kuntz.
 1875—Benjamin D. Wehr.
 1876—Daniel Thomas.
 1877—Daniel Sourwine.
 1878—Charles Fenstermaker.
 1879—William Blose.
 1880—Elias Best.
 1881—Ezra Peter.
 1882—Henry Sourwine.
 1883—Robert Kern.
 1884—Henry W. Dorward.
 1885—Henry Sourwine.
 1886—Daniel Sourwine.
 1887—James S. Peter.
 1888—Henry Sourwine.
 1889—Wilson Rex.
 1890—J. A. M. Riedy.
 1891—Benneville J. Blose.
 1892—Benjamin George.
 1893—Paul W. Lentz.
 1895—Wilson Rex, 1 yr.
 1896—Wilson Rex.
 1897—Benjamin D. Wehr.
 1898—Frank E. Shenton.
 1899—Alfred Dorward.
 1900—Leon P. Rex.
 1901—Frank E. Shenton.
 1902—Alfred Dorward.
 1903—Leon P. Rex.

1904—Frank E. Shenton.
 1905—Alfred Dorward.
 1906—John F. Peter.
 1907—Frank E. Shenton, Pearl Prutzman, 1 yr.
 1908—Pearl Prutzman.
 1909—Edwin Follweiler.
 1910—Frank E. Shenton.
 1911—William N. Rauch.

NAMES OF ASSESSORS, WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP.

1848—Thomas Kuntz.
 1849—Chas. E. Beck, George Rex. Stephen Schlosser.
 1850—John Balliet.
 1851—David Peter.
 1852—Lewis C. Smith, Chas. Kern, Benj. S. Levan.
 1853—Levi Haas.
 1854—George Rex.
 1855—Thomas Kuntz, Nathan Peter, D. Reinhart.
 1856—Levi Krause.
 1857—Levi Krause.
 1858—John C. Hankey.
 1859—John C. Hankey.
 1860—John C. Hankey.
 1861—John C. Hankey.
 1862—Lewis Henritzy.
 1863—Lewis Henritzy.
 1864—Thomas Kuntz.
 1865—Albert Kunkle.
 1866—Daniel Sourwein.
 1867—Lewis C. Smith, William Blose, Jacob Wert.
 1868—Daniel Sourwein.
 1869—Daniel Sourwein.
 1870—Daniel Sourwein, Wm. Blose, Moses Lentz.
 1871—Daniel Sourwein.
 1872—Daniel Sourwein.
 1873—Daniel Sourwein, Chas. Fenstermaker, Henry Fenstermaker.
 1874—Daniel Sourwein.
 1875—Chas. Fenstermaker.
 1876—Chas. Fenstermaker, Robt. Kern, Wm. Blose.
 1877—Chas. Fenstermaker.
 1878—Wm. F. Andreas.
 1879—Chas. Blose, George Krause, Daniel Thomas.
 1880—Chas. Blose.
 1881—Chas. Blose.
 1882—Chas. Blose.
 1883—Chas. Blose.
 1884—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1885—Lewis Kemmerer, Robt. Kern. Chas. Fenstermaker.
 1886—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1887—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1888—Lewis Kemmerer, Emanuel Wehr, E. W. Bittner.
 1889—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1890—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1891—Lewis Kemmerer, E. W. Bittner, Robt. Kern.
 1892—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1893—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1894—Lewis Kemmerer.
 1895—Oscar B. Peter.
 1898—Oscar B. Peter.
 1901—Oscar B. Peter.
 1904—Charles Blose.
 1907—Charles Blose.
 1910—Charles Blose.

CHAPTER XLVI.

WEISSENBERG TOWNSHIP.

SUPPLIED BY SOL. F. RUPP, ESQ.

Topography.—Weissenberg township is situated in the western part of Lehigh county, northwest from Allentown, the eastern corner being about 12 miles distant. It is bounded on the northeast by Lowhill, on the southeast by Upper Macungie, on the southwest by Berks county, and on the northwest by Lynn. It is six and a half miles long and five and a half miles broad, and contains an area of 21,120 acres. The surface is hilly and broken.

A ridge or water-shed extends in a curve through the township, dividing the waters of the Lehigh from those of the Schuylkill basin, about three-fourths of the township being in the former and one-fourth in the latter. The principal waters are the following, viz: Schaeffer's Run and Spring Creek in the south; the two forks of Haas' Creek in the east; Lion Creek, with its branches, Willow Creek, Weiss' Run, and Holben's Creek, in the centre and northeast; the tributaries of Sweitzer's Creek, named after the first settlers on its headwaters, in the north and northwest; all of which belong to the Lehigh basin; and the Silver Creek, with its branches, forming the headwaters of Saucony Creek, in the west and southwest, in the Schuylkill basin. The township is thus well watered, a spring of running water being found on nearly every farm.

The soil is mostly gravel, varying from light and poor on some of the hills to a heavy and fertile sandy loam in many of the valleys. Nearly every creek and rivulet is bordered by meadows.

This is almost entirely an agricultural township. The farms vary in size from a few acres to several hundred, and are generally well cultivated. A kind of mixed husbandry is practiced, and a judicious rotation of crops is observed. The farmers are careful to save all the manure they can, and a great amount of lime, together with some phosphate, is applied. The principal productions are rye, corn, potatoes, oats and wheat. Some parts of the township are especially adapted to potato growing. Horses, cattle, and hogs are raised in numbers, together with some sheep and poultry. Bee-keeping is also engaged in. Nearly all kinds of fruits common to the temperate latitude flourish here, such as apples, cherries, pears, plums, grapes, and peaches, together with berries of many sorts. Grapes and cherries seem to be indigenous to the soil, and could be raised in great quantities. Apples are not now raised as abundantly as formerly, but quite a number of orchards are cultivated, including peaches. For the past eight years most of the apple orchards have been injured by the San Jose scale and some of them entirely destroyed.

In early times the greater part of this township was covered with forests, and at present perhaps six per cent. of the entire area is covered with woods. The woods that remain are mostly situated on the tops and sides of hills, and consist mainly of chestnut timber, with here and there tracts of hickory, chestnut, oak, and white oak, interspersed with pine, maple, ash, walnut, birch, and wild cherry. The chestnut blight has affected a large proportion of the chestnut timber in every section of this township since 1910 and apparently with increasing damage.

No minerals are found in the township, but building stone, such as sandstone and a kind of slate, are found on most of the farms. Quartz is also found in many places, but is of no value.

The houses, nearly all two stories high, are mostly built of wood or stone; very few of bricks. Of the wooden houses, those more recently built are frame and the older ones log. The barns are mostly frame, with stone basements, and are generally quite capacious.

There are in the township at present five grist mills, three saw mills, five hotels, five stores, three postoffices, one carriage factory, two villages, four churches, and eleven school houses.

The inhabitants are the descendants of German settlers, who still speak the Pennsylvania German language. They are, as a rule, industrious, frugal, and intelligent, and very few cannot read and write. They mostly belong to Reformed and Lutheran Churches, but a few are members of the United Brethren organization.

Organization.—Weissenberg township was formed out of the "Backparts of Macunjy" and part of Allemangel, the greater portion being of the latter, and was erected as a township in 1753. Weissenberg is derived from Weiss, meaning "white," and burgh, a "castle" or "fortress," and was named after Weissenberg, a fortress and town in Alsace, from the vicinity of which most of the settlers had come. Weissenberg was settled by Palatinates and Swiss. The first settlements took place in 1734, on and around the highlands in the vicinity of the present Ziegel Church. The first settlers came from Germantown, through Oley, and later over Goshenhoppen, through Rittenhouse Gap. The Palatinates had moved to Long Swamp; but Long Swamp being a level plain, deficient in water and heavy wood, and overgrown with ground-oak did not suit them. So they went over the plain toward the Blue mountains, and founded the settlement of "Allemandel," their road being along the Indian trail on the high ridge in Weissenberg, which forms the water-shed between the Lehigh and Schuylkill Rivers. In "Allemandel" and Long Swamp, in what was then called the "Backparts of Macunjy," settled those who followed, and formed what is now Weissenberg.

The Palatinates.—During the wars of Louis XIV., of France, in the year 1674, Marshal Turenne disgraced his name by barbarously ravaging the Palatinate, which was abandoned to the ferocious license of his troops, and became a scene of indescribable desolation. In 1685 the King revoked the Edict of Nantes, annulled the privileges granted to the Huguenots, prohibited the exercise of their religion, and ordered their temples to be leveled with the ground. Multitudes of the Reformed then went to England, Holland, Germany, and Switzerland.

Again, in 1688, the King gave orders for the wholesale devastation of the Palatinate, and so successfully was it carried out that this once rich and smiling land was converted into a desolate wilderness. The houseless peasants, to the number of a hundred thousand, wandered about in abject misery imprecating the vengeance of heaven upon the cruel tyrant who had caused their ruin. And again, from 1702 to 1713, during the war of the Spanish Succession, the Palatinate was the scene of ruin and devastation. Thus their homes were destroyed and their lands laid waste three times within a period of thirty years. It is no wonder that the Palatinates concluded to find a home in the wilds of America. By these successive visitations the people had been reduced to abject poverty, and many found themselves without means to get away. Some by selling their all were enabled to pay for their transportation; and others when brought to Philadelphia were sold by the ship captains for their passage. These settled mostly in Goshhoppen. By the time they settled Weissenberg the Palatinate had partially recovered from its ruinous devastations, and their financial condition was much better than that of those who had emigrated before.

Some of the first settlers of Weissenberg came to Pennsylvania as early as 1725. They first went to Goshenhoppen and Oley, where they stayed for several years. Egidius Grimm, one of the pioneer settlers, passed over Rotterdam to Deal, and then to Pennsylvania in 1728, but did not settle in Weissenberg till 1734.

In Goshenhoppen and Oley the land had mostly been taken up before the year 1730; so those that came at that time stayed there for several years, and then went over Long Swamp to Weissenberg. Some of those that settled in the vicinity of the present Ziegel's Church, among them Adam Braus, Peter and Egidius Grimm, were there in the summer or fall of 1733 to look out places for settlement, and the following spring moved there with their families. During 1734 only a few families settled within the present limits of Weissenberg; but the following year more came, among them Ludwig Reichard and Conrad Neff. From that time the township rapidly filled up and by 1750 all the most suitable places for homes were occupied.

Leonard Danner settled early in Weissenberg where he bought a farm which had been taken up by William Weirich. He had seven children: Jacob, John, George, Judith, Polly (who was married to Emanuel Rupp), Catharine (married a Mr. Arnold), and a daughter (married a Mr. Tilghman). He sold his farm to his eldest son in 1815; and the son sold it in 1820 to Peter Lichty and moved to Buffalo Valley in Union county, Pa. John located in Allentown. George remained in Weissenberg, bought a farm adjoining his father's and afterward also a part of the homestead and carried on farming. He married Catharine Barner and had four children. Charles (who became the owner of the homestead, George (located in Allentown), Catharine (married Joseph Bear), and Lucy (married Daniel Kuhns). Some descendants of this family name have continued in the township.

Frederick Hyneman was of English descent and emigrated to Philadelphia where he married Catharine Kline, of that place. He left in 1793 on account of the yellow fever and went to Lancaster, Pa., later he located at Bobst's Manor House, in Weissenberg township, Northampton county, afterward named Hynemansville. He had eight children: George, John, Frederick, Jacob, Kitty, Elizabeth, Sallie and Mary.

George had three children, John, William and Elnora, who resided at Philadelphia. He served for many years as a teacher in Weissenberg and adjoining townships, having been one of the first teachers who taught English in this township.

John went to Reading, married, and remained there.

Frederick also went to Reading, married there, but located at Allentown and had two sons, Augustus and Charles. He was born June 26, 1783, and died May 9, 1829.

Jacob and Elizabeth died single.

Kitty married a Mr. Goodman, of Philadelphia, and lived there.

Sallie married Jacob Kramlich and had fourteen children, who lived at Hynemansville many years. All moved to Ohio, excepting George, who located in Longswamp, and Kitty, who married Charles Weitknecht.

Mary married Conrad Ihrle, of Philadelphia, and upon his death she and their five children (Charles, Eliza, Catharine, Edmund and Ann Louisa) moved to Hynemansville. Charles, the first named, served as sheriff of Lehigh county from 1847 to 1850.

No one of this family name has survived in the township.

The following list is taken from the Colonial Records, and show the names of some of the first settlers, the day of registry in Philadelphia, and the name of the ship upon which they arrived:

Jacob Weiss, June 22, 1728, on ship "Albany" from Rotterdam.

Hans Ulrich Frey, June 21, 1729, on ship "Martenhouse" from Rotterdam.

Christoph Frey, June 21, 1729, on ship "Martenhouse" from Rotterdam.

John Daniel Werly, June 21, 1729, on ship "Martenhouse" from Rotterdam.

Michael Thomas, Aug. 29, 1730, on ship "Thistle of Glasgow" from Rotterdam.

Casper Hartmann, Aug. 29, 1730, on ship "Thistle of Glasgow" from Rotterdam.

Caspar Hartmann, Aug. 1730, on ship "Thistle of Glasgow" from Rotterdam.

Hans Jacob Bär, Nov. 30, 1730, on ship "Joyce" from Rotterdam.

John Bar, Nov. 30, 1730, on ship "Joyce" from Rotterdam.

Heinrich Schüssler, Sept. 26, 1732, on ship "Mary" from Rotterdam.

Georg Schüssler, Sept. 26, 1732, on ship "Mary" from Rotterdam.

Hans Jacob Schüssler, Sept. 26, 1732, on ship "Mary" from Rotterdam.

Heinrich Schüssler, Sept. 26, 1732, on ship "Mary" from Rotterdam.

Hans Peter Werly, Sept. 26, 1732, on ship "Mary" from Rotterdam.

Christian Hoffmann, Sept. 30, 1732, on ship "Dragon" from Rotterdam.

Leonard Schlosser, Sept. 30, 1732, on ship "Dragon" from Rotterdam.

Peter Schlosser, Sept. 30, 1732, on ship "Dragon" from Rotterdam.

Georg Ludwig Schutz, Sept. 30, 1732, on ship "Dragon" from Rotterdam.

Georg Bär, Oct. 11, 1732, on ship "Pleasant" from Rotterdam.

Hans Peter Frey, Aug. 17, 1733, on ship "Samuel of London" from Rotterdam.

Friederich Leiby, Aug. 17, 1733, on ship "Samuel of London" from Rotterdam.

Heinrich Brunner, May 29, 1735, on ship "Mercury" from Rotterdam.

Johannes Weiss, May 29, 1735, on ship "Mercury" from Rotterdam.

Casper Bleuler, May 29, 1735, on ship "Mercury" from Rotterdam.

Valentin Diehl, Sept. 12, 1734, on ship "St. Andrew" from Rotterdam.

Abraham Diehl, Sept. 12, 1734, on ship "St. Andrew" from Rotterdam.

The settlers usually put up temporary huts; or they stayed with a family that had come before, and went to find a suitable place for location. They always chose places by the side of a spring of pure water, and usually at the entrance of a valley or where several valleys met. After they found a place for location they built a log hut or house upon it, with the bare earth for a floor, and covered it with leaves. Some had bark and boards for roofs. After they had built their houses, they selected a tract of land by marking the trees along the lines around it. Some marked off large tracts in this way, from 400 to 600 acres; but they soon received notice from the proprietors to pay for the land, which they at first refused, alleging that the proprietors' agents had offered to give the land gratis if they would only come and settle on it. Some refused for a long time to pay for the land. The greater part of the land was taken up by applications for from 50 to 100 acres, one man often making three or four applications, usually at intervals of several years. After the township had been considerably settled many applications were for smaller tracts. From 1760 to 1780 there were speculators, such as Daniel Knouse, Michael Bobst and Jacob Greenwald, who took up vacant tracts and held them, and afterwards sold them at large profits.

Weissenberg was thickly settled during the French and Indian war, and while the Indians drove many of the inhabitants of the surrounding townships from their homes, Weissenberg was very little molested. The early settlers passed into Weissenberg, and naturally it became at once more thickly inhabited than the townships farther north and west. And while the Indians drove the people away in Lynn and Heidelberg, they found them too numerous in Weissenberg to commit serious outrages, although on several occasions the people were also greatly alarmed.

Clothing of the Pioneers—Domestic Employments.—When the clothes that the settlers brought along with them were worn out they made them out of sail cloth, a coarse stuff which they bought at Philadelphia. But these were not warm enough for the winter weather, and they often had to put on three to four pairs of pantaloons, and also as many coats. Next they turned their attention to the cultivation of flax and the raising of sheep. Then they commenced to wear linen clothes in summer and woolen in winter. But they were all home-made, the women doing the spinning and the men the weaving. Musical was the sound of the spinning wheel from early morn till late at night, and many are the anecdotes that could be related of it. All the women were able to spin, and often three or four spinning wheels were used by the women of one family. Looms were also to be seen in a good many houses, at least a third of the men being weavers. The people for a long time wore home-made clothes, both during week days and Sundays, in summer, linen, and in winter the men linsey-woolsey and the women flannel. After calico had become cheaper, women commenced to wear it, and many a lass felt proud if she could boast of a calico dress. Nearly all the people wore clothes of home-made stuff till about 1850; after that time it became rarer every year, until about 1890 when it was seen no longer.

Character and Customs.—The people were religious, honest, sober, and industrious, and were thus well fitted for settling a new country; and as a whole they were very sober and moral until after the Revolutionary war. After the return of the soldiers their condition greatly changed. Many of those who had served in the war lost their habits of steady toil, and after the excitements of a soldier's life did not feel like farming or working at the bench or anvil. Many had also become habituated to the excessive use of strong drink. Whiskey then was in plenty, nearly every farmer distilling his own apple-jack, and selling to all who wanted to buy which cause much drunkenness among the people for a long time. Hotels also became more numerous, and every Saturday evening the landlords used to have frolics. It was seldom that a frolic was held without several fights. It was customary for a long time for the farmers to make "corn matches," to husk corn in the day and have a frolic in the evening.

"Schnitzing" parties were also held. People who wanted to cook apple butter invited their friends to come and help make the "schnitz." After the schnitzing was done a frolic was held and the dancing often kept up till near daylight.

"Shooting in the new year" was another habit of the German people. All the people went "to shoot in new year." Sometimes there were crowds of from twenty or thirty together, starting at midnight and going from house to house, shooting the old year out and the new year in. On all these occasions it was customary to have plenty of whiskey, and to give as much as people wanted to drink. "Frolics," corn matches, "schnitzing" parties, and "shooting in the new year" are things that nowadays seldom happen. While drunkenness is still a great evil, it is not near as great as it was one hundred years ago. For a long time people thought they could not perform a day's work without having as much whiskey to drink as they wanted, and until 1870 it was customary for farmers, during hay-making and harvest, to give plenty of whiskey to their hands.

The gayety of the Palatines, from which has arisen the saying, "The Merry Palatinate: may God preserve it so!" the kindly disposition of the Swabian, known over the whole world; the tenacity of the Swiss, who does not permit himself to be beaten in any way, and the hard-headedness of the old-time German,—these are characteristics to be found in Weissenberg and Low-hill down to the present day. A merrier disposition will hardly be found anywhere, there is not a more hospitable people, but it will also be difficult to discover harder and more obstinate heads than here. During the long winter evenings, and especially in times of good sleighing, it has always been the custom for social gatherings, consisting of relatives and friends, and perhaps three or more families, to gather together at each other's homes. The large wooden sleighs are hitched up and loaded to their utmost capacity, and driven to the designated place, where already many of the invited have gathered. Then the evening is passed in enjoying the hospitalities of the host and in festivities, extending often into the early hours of the morning. Driving and visiting are among the established customs of this community.

A wedding was the occasion for the greatest display of hospitality and merry-making, and the sport was often mad and wild. The threshing-floor was bedecked with greens and turned into a dancing floor, where young and old swung in merry circles.

It is not wonderful that the long and numerous harvest-time festivities often required from six to eight large, fat hogs, and frequently more than an ox; and that old John Wickell, the butcher, who received many invitations to these feasts, said, "When I have butchered the hogs and made the sausage, I get nothing for it but the devil's thanks!"

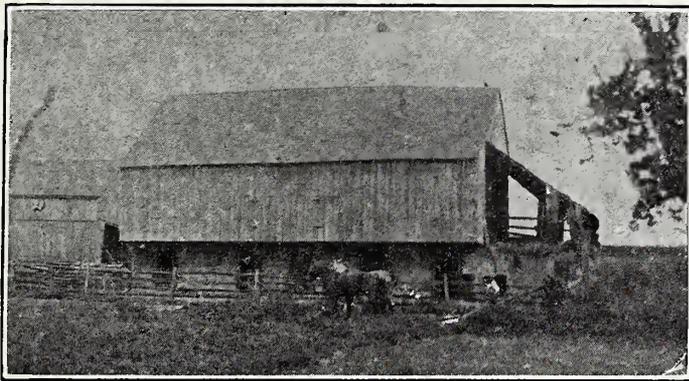

Hardships—Early Occupations—A Distant

Market.—The first settlers of Weissenberg had to endure many hardships and difficulties, Long Swamp, a large strip of unsettled land, lay between themselves and Oley, and they had to pass it when they wanted to have any intercourse with the people of the latter place. Over this unoccupied region there were no roads, simply paths, through which it was difficult to get with teams.

The people not being able to build mills during the first years, took their grain on horseback to Oley to mill, a distance of from ten to fifteen miles.

The first settlers had trades, such as carpenters, weavers, shoemakers, smiths, tanners, wheelwrights, nailmakers, hatters, dyers, tailors, etc. As weavers came Daniel Stettler, David Xander, Casper Sunn, Bernd Rupert, Nicholas Beesaker; as a baker, Daniel Zoller; as tanners, Philip Henn and Jacob Greenawald; as a tailor, Jacob

Support of Revolution.—The people of Weissenberg took an active part in the Revolutionary war. As soon as the war broke out, Michael Bobst, of Hynemansville, raised a regiment of soldiers in Weissenberg and adjoining townships. Bobst was to be their colonel, David Xander major, and Jacob Mummy a captain. A great many of the men of Weissenberg joined this regiment, as, for instance, four out of the Boger and two of the Holben families. They went to New York, joined the army of Washington, fought in the battle of Long Island, under Gen. Sterling. Many of them were captured after the defeat of the American army, among them being Jacob Mummy and three of the Bogers. Only one of them, viz., Adam escaped. The three captured were among those that were imprisoned in a church for some time, and later in ships; all three died. Later in the BARN ON HENRY RUPP FARM, BUILT IN 1794.

Stine; as a hatter, Gottlieb Ettinger; as blacksmiths, Adam Bear and Killian Leiby; as nailmakers, John and Killian Leiby; as a sickle-maker, Daniel Knouse.

For a long time the only market at which the farmers could sell their products was at Philadelphia. Everything they wanted to sell had to be hauled on a wagon to Philadelphia. It took them from Monday morning until Friday evening to make a trip. Usually a party of from fifteen to twenty went together. They took horse feed and their own food along for a whole week. They slept in the bar rooms of the hotels, lying on the floor around the stoves. This was the only way of transportation until the Schuylkill and Lehigh Canals were built. After that they sold their products to dealers along the canals, who sent them by boat to market. The farmers generally were very rough in going to and returning from Philadelphia, and played many tricks on people living along the road.

war, while the British army was lying at Philadelphia, there was an encampment at Hynemansville to recruit and drill soldiers for Washington's army. They joined the army when the British evacuated Philadelphia, and were engaged in the pursuit of the British through New Jersey.

After the close of the war, those that had been Tories were required to take the oath of allegiance to the government. Some of the Tories of Weissenberg refused, one of them, George Koster, abandoning his property and fleeing the country. Another, a Mr. Grow, was requested to come to Hynemansville to take the oath, but when he came there he refused to swear. The officers then took hold of him with the intention of tarring him. He was a very strong man, and a scuffle ensued, in which he kicked over the tar keg. At last they succeeded in getting him down, they rolled him around in the tar till he was dripping when they let him go and he started for home. It is said that his path could be traced by the tar from Hynemansville to his house. Several days later he came and took the oath of allegiance.

Improvement of Condition.—As soon as the condition of the settlers had somewhat improved they commenced to put up better houses. By this time saw mills had been built, board and shingles became plenty, and stone was always to be had in abundance. About the years 1750 to 1760 we find that many of the first houses were torn down and new ones built. People also built two-story houses with cellars under them. At first they used to go up from one story to the other by means of ladders, but now they put in stairs. Some of the houses that had been built were out large orchards of apple trees. The trees grew rapidly, and soon the farmer found himself amply rewarded for his labor. About the year 1765 distilleries were built, and the distilling of rye and apple-jack commenced. All that the farmers wanted to sell had to be hauled by wagon to Philadelphia, and they at once saw that the best way was to convert their surplus grain and apples at home into whiskey, as that greatly lessened the cost of transportation. The sale of whiskey was the main means for a long while by which farmers raised money. As the old trees gave out, new ones and more were planted, and thus the supply of apples was increased till about 1820; then the people neglected their orchards, and the quantity of apples yearly propped up and cellars dug out under them. The houses were as yet all built of logs. About 1775 the people commenced to build of stone; but it was after 1800 that those large stone buildings were put up which are still standing.

BLEILER HOMESTEAD.

As soon as the settlers had cleared a small tract of land they fenced a portion of it as a garden. In that garden a part was set aside for planting the seeds that they had brought along with them, which included, besides the usual garden seeds, those of apples, pears, peaches, and cherries. Thus in the very outstart they commenced the raising of fruit trees, the most important being the apple. By the time that they had portions of the land cleared they had also raised fruit trees. Thus they commenced to set diminished during the next thirty years, when nearly all the distilleries were torn down. From 1870 the people again commenced to set out fresh orchards, and the supply of apples was largely increased. The distilling of rye was kept up till the building of the Lehigh Canal, which opened a better market for the surplus grain of the farmers.

Weissenberg was overgrown with heavy wood when the first settlers arrived. Being a hilly country, interspersed with fine valleys, they commenced first to clear the valleys, and sowed them with grain. The first crop was buckwheat, and then followed rye. The virgin soil yielded heavy crops. So they kept on, clearing yearly more land and treating it in the same way, till towards the latter part of the last century when the fertility of the soil was greatly decreased and in many cases the land became so poor that it was not cultivated for years. Sometimes that which was cultivated would hardly yield more than the seed. It thus became a serious question with farmers what to do and they turned their attention to the application of gypsum, or land plaster. This improved their crops for a while, but it soon became apparent that it would do only for a time, and that in the end it would make the land poorer. Many of the farmers sold out and went to other regions, and those who remained could not do more than make a living.

About the year 1820 the farmers began to put lime on the soil, and it greatly increased its fertility. Since that time much lime has been applied and always with marked effect. While hardly anything grew before the application of lime, afterwards all the grains grew abundantly. The grains usually cultivated were rye, oats, corn, wheat, and buckwheat. Buckwheat, which one hundred years ago was the main crop, is now seldom seen. The grasses cultivated are clover and timothy. Flax also, for a long time largely raised, is now not seen, and has been very little cultivated during the last seventy years, except from 1853 to 1868.

During the war, cotton had greatly risen in price, and many people sowed flax, and old spinning wheels that had been stowed away for years were again brought into use. Potatoes, now one of the principal crops of the farmers of Weissenberg, of which every year from sixty to seventy thousand bushels are raised and sold, were not raised for sale till about the year 1840, and then they were mostly sold in the coal regions.

Efforts to Retain German Language and Exclude English.—Weissenberg was mostly settled by Germans. The Werles, Bittners, and Gehringers, were of French descent and left France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. They first went to Germany, and by the time they reached this country they spoke the German language. This language was spoken by all the people prior to the year 1800. Soon after that time several Englishmen settled here and they made efforts to have English taught in the schools. This was strongly opposed by the people, and in many of the schools, particularly the church schools, it was positively forbidden.

About the year 1830 the Germans of Pennsylvania made a general effort to retain the German language. Die Alte und Neue Welt (the Old and New World), a German newspaper printed at Philadelphia by Dr. Wesselhoeft, defended it with great ability. A general State convention was called to defend the German rights, and the German counties were urged to send delegates, and each township to hold meetings and pass resolutions in regard to the matter. Such a meeting of German farmers and mechanics was held June 3, 1837, at Hynemansville, in Weissenberg township, and the purpose of the meeting was explained in speeches by Dr. Wesselhoeft and others. A committee was appointed to draft a preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by the meeting. They were as follows:

“Es gewährt uns ein besonderes Vergnügen, heute zu einem Zwecke uns versammelt zu haben, welchen wir vor einem Jahre noch kaum zu erreichen hofften. Doch eine gerechte Sache schreitet immer voran und wir werden sehen dasz wir vor unpartheiischen Richtern, siegen werden. In der Convention ist der Vorschlag gemacht worden, ‘in deutschen Countys auch die Verhandlungen der Courten in deutscher Sprache zu führen.’ Das war schon längst unser aller Wunsch, und unser ganzes Bestreben gehe dahin dies zu erreichen. Da dieser Vorschlag aber so ganz günstig für unsere Sache ist, so müssen wir aus allen Kräften ihn zu unterstützen suchen; denn lassen wir diese Gelegenheit unbenutzt vorüber gehen, so ist unsere Sprache unterdrückt, unsere deutsche Kirchen gehen zu Grunde, und mit ihnen lassen wir unseren Kindern das Beste rauben, deutsche Redlichkeit, Glauben, und Fleisz. Das darf aber nicht sein so lange wir es noch verhüten können. Und das können wir jetzt,—in die Constitution müssen wir einen Artikel haben, der unserer Sprache gleiche Rechte mit der englischen gibt, wenigstens in deutschen Countys die deutsche Sprache bei der Court einführt; und um dies zu erreichen laszt uns Petitionen an die Convention zu Tausenden schicken,—dann musz sie es thun wenn sie gerecht sein will. Aber alles was geschieht musz schnell geschehen, damit es noch früh genug an die Convention kommen kann: Daher “Beschlossen, Dasz wir einen Artikel in der zu bildenden Constitution, welche die Einführung der deutschen Sprache bei den Courten in deutschen Countys beabsichtigt, unseren vollen ungetheilten Beifall geben.

“Beschlossen, Dasz wir alle gesetzliche Mittel ergreifen wollen, dasz ein solcher Artikel in die Constitution komme, und zwar auf dem Wege der Petition durch Subscription.

“Beschlossen, Dasz wir völlig übereinstimmen mit dem Vorschlage am 17, Juni, Samstags, am Wirthshause von Guth in Süd-Whitehall eine allgemeine County Versammlung zu halten.

“Beschlossen, Dasz wir alle Townships von unserem County dringend ersuchen ihre Deputirten zu der County Versammlung zu schicken.

“Beschlossen, Dasz ausserdem jeder Einwohner, der der Sache günstig ist, eingeladen wird, bei der County Versammlung zu erscheinen, um mit Nachdruck an dem Werke helfen zu können.

“Beschlossen, Dasz alle deutsche County im Staate aufgefordert werden so schnell als möglich ähnliche Maszregeln zu ergreifen, um durch Versammlungen und Petitioner den Vorschlag in der Convention durchzusetzen.

“Beschlossen, Dasz alle deutsche Zeitungsdrucker in unserem Staate, welche der deutschen Reform günstig sind, gebeten werden, diese Verhandlungen in ihren respectiven Blätter aufzunehmen; dagegen alle Drucker, welche der Sache just halber oder gar nicht günstig sind, hiermit dringend ersucht werden diese Verhandlungen nicht aufzunehmen, damit wir endlich einmal in den Stand gesetzt werden Freund und Feind zu unterscheiden."

Translation.

"Preamble: It gives us particular delight to be assembled to-day for a purpose which a year ago we did not hope to obtain. Yet a righteous cause always moves forward, and you will see that before impartial judges we shall win. The proposition was made in the convention to have in the German counties the proceedings of the courts held in the German language. This was already for a long time our wish, and our whole exertion will be to obtain it. As this proposition is so entirely favorable to our cause, we must try to assist it with all our strength, for if we let this chance pass by without making use of it, then our language will be suppressed, our German churches go to destruction, and with them we shall rob our children of that which is the best, German honesty, faith, and diligence. This must not be so long as we can prevent it; and this we can do now. We must have an article in the constitution which gives to our language equal rights with the English, at least the use in German counties of the German language in the courts, and to obtain this let us send petitions by thousands to the convention, then the convention will do it if it be just. But all that is to be done must be done quickly, so that it will reach the convention before it is too late. Therefore,

"Resolved, That we give our full and undivided assent to an article in the new constitution, which in German counties tends to introduce the German language into the courts.

"Resolved, That we use all lawful means, by the way of subscriptions to petitions, to have such an article in the constitution.

"Resolved, That we fully agree with the proposition to hold a general county meeting at the public house of Guth, in South Whitehall, on Saturday, the 17th of June.

"Resolved, That we urgently beseech every township in our county to send deputies to the county meeting.

"Resolved, That besides these deputies every inhabitant who is favorable to the cause is invited to be present at the county meeting to assist the cause by his presence.

"Resolved, That all German counties in the State are requested as soon as possible to take like measures to put, by meetings and petitions, the proposition through in convention.

"Resolved, That all publishers of German newspapers in our State who are favorable to the German reform are requested to publish these proceedings in their papers, whilst all publishers that are not favorable, or are only partially favorable, are hereby earnestly requested not to publish these proceedings, so we shall at once be able to distinguish our friends from our enemies."

By such strong efforts the German fathers succeeded for a long time to prevent the speaking of the English language in our township.

Pioneer Families.—The following pioneer settlers located in the township and became the heads of families many of whose descendants have continued here until now. The time of their arrival was prior to 1750.

Jacob Bachman.	Philip Wendel Klein.
Jacob Barner.	Abraham Knerr.
Hans Bär.	George Schumacher.
Michael Brobst.	Jacob Schumacher.
Leonard Danner.	Rev. Daniel Schumacher.
Nicholas Gehringer.	Christian Seiberling.
Valentine Graumlich.	Frederick Seiberling.
Jacob Greenewald.	Daniel Stettler.
Egidius Grimm.	Peter Weiss.
Rev. Johann Heinrich Helffrich.	Sebastian Werle.
Peter Herber.	George Rupp.
Jacob Holben.	David Xander.
	Frederick Hyneman.

TAX LIST OF WEISENBURG TOWNSHIP, 1762.

John Beaker, Collector.

	£		£
Michael Acker,	5	Jacob Herber,	11
Michael Braucher, . .	14	Frederick Hirsch, . .	6
George Braucher, . . .	4	Ernest Kloss,	5
George Brinich,	9	Melchert Kloss,	7
Philip Bogger,	6	Philip Kleinert,	17
John Brown,	5	Daniel Knaus,	16
Michael Bauerman, . .	12	Martin Karg,	4
Frederick Beck,	9	Jacob Klein,	7
John Becker,	5	Peter Konfort,	6
Thomas Baltzer,	8	Peter Kroh,	7
Thomas Baltzer,	5	Adam Klein,	6
Casper Bauer,	7	Valatine Kramlich, . .	8
Jacob Bachman,	8	Philip Kiessener,	5
Jacob Bieber,	4	Nichs. Kindt,	5
Jacob Bogger,	4	Adam Leibelsperger, . .	13
Peter Dick,	6	Dewald Meyer,	12
Valatine Dear,	5	George Miller,	4
Rudolph Ehebrecht, . .	5	George Merkel,	6
Mendel Fry,	4	Jacob Merkel, poor, . .	0
Nichs. Gift,	8	John Nichs. Manebach,	6
John Nichs. Gift,	4	Nichs. Gerringer,	7
Nichs. Gerringer,	7	Adam Gift,	10
Adam Gift,	10	John Gackenbach,	10
John Gackenbach,	10	George Gudekunst,	5
George Gudekunst,	5	Joseph Gerber,	11
Joseph Gerber,	11	Mathias Gift,	8
Mathias Gift,	8	Jacob Grünenwald,	12
Jacob Grünenwald,	12	Henry Gackenbach,	12
Henry Gackenbach,	12	Conrad Grim,	14
Conrad Grim,	14	Sebastian Gerringer,	5
Sebastian Gerringer,	5	Jacob Holve,	10
Jacob Holve,	10	John Diel Herman,	4
John Diel Herman,	4

Daniel Steadler, ...	6	Philip Wageman,...	4
Christian Sheib,....	5	Anthony Walther,..	12
Henry Shaffer,....	4	Adam Weaver,....	4
Everhard Smith,....	11	Andrew Wild,.....	8
Christian Syberling,.	8	Peter Weis,.....	20
Martin Shob,.....	9	Sebastian Werle,...	6
Henry Switzer,....	4	Jacob Yentzer,.....	7
Andreas Wagner,..	6

Single men.

Laurence Bachman.

Taxables in 1781.—The commissioners of Northampton county on Dec. 27, 1781, made the following assessment for the township of Weissenberg, which shows who were then its taxable inhabitants:

Michael Brobst.
 Jacob Bare.
 George Braucher.
 John Bare.
 Adam Bare.
 Nicholas Bachman.
 Frederick Bock.
 Michael Bowerman.
 George Bowerman.
 Christian Braucher.
 Godfrey Boger.
 Adam Boger.
 Christian Boger.
 Jacob Bawall.
 Jacob Bemer.
 Nicholas Bisecker.
 Conrad Beesinger.
 Philip Benninghoff.
 Conrad Bapp.
 John Derr.
 John Delong.
 Stoffe Dresher.
 Conrad Deel.
 Adam Deel.
 Stoffe Ettinger.
 Baltzer Fritz.
 George Fritz.
 David Fry.
 John Foch.
 John Fitter.
 William Fry.
 Jacob Greenewald.
 Jacob Greenewald, Jr.
 John Gackenbach.
 Nicholas Gisinger.
 Valentine Gramlich.
 Paul Gramlich.
 Charles Gackenbach.
 Henry Herber.
 Lawrence Holby.
 Vendle Holby.
 Jacob Holby, Jr.
 Dewalt Holby.
 Jacob Herber.
 Frederick Hirsh.
 George Helfrich.
 John Jompert.
 George Krim.
 Jacob Krim.
 Conrad Kopff.
 John Knerr.

Single Females.

Christian Knouse.
 Jonathan Knouse.
 George Greenewald.
 Jacob Shoewalter.

Peter Kline.
 Jacob Kloss.
 John Kutz.
 Ernst Kloss.
 Daniel Knouse.
 Philip Kissner.
 Leonard Kopff.
 George Koster.
 George Kroh.
 John Lichtenwalder.
 Jacob Leibelsberger.
 George Lessig.
 Killian Leiby.
 John Maurer.
 Jacob Musgenung.
 Christian Marburger.
 Henry Moser.
 Valentine Miller.
 Leonard Myer.
 Nicholas Myer.
 George Nungesser.
 Conrad Neff.
 Henry Notestine.
 Eberhard Ohl.
 George Richard.
 Michael Rishel.
 Leonard Ruppert.
 Melchoir Seip.
 Abraham Steinbruch.
 George Shoemaker.
 John Sieger.
 Christian Sieberling.
 Daniel Stettler.
 Philip Stettler.
 Michael Shaller.
 John Shafer.
 Stoffe Sterner.
 John Shieferstein.
 Jacob Stine.
 Peter Trexler.
 Peter Trexler, Jr.
 Peter Weiss.
 George Weiss.
 Sebastian Werle.
 Nicholas Werle.
 Andrew Wagner.
 Daniel Wirth.
 Yost Wirth.
 John Witt.
 Michael Werle.
 David Zander.

Jacob Eddinger.
 David Boger.
 John Braucher.

Taxable Residents of 1812 were as follows:

Daniel Acker.
 Michael Acker.
 George Acker.
 George Acker, Jr.
 Peter Bear.
 Daniel Bear.
 Henry Bear.
 Jacob Bear.
 Peter Bear.
 Jacob Beal.
 Adam Bear, Jr.
 John Beitner.
 Philip Brobst.
 Paul Bachman.
 Nicholas Bachman.
 Andreas Bachman.
 Peter Bachman.
 Michael Barner.
 Nicholas Bachman.
 David Bachman.
 Jacob Billig.
 Henry Reichard.
 Christian Boger.
 Christian Boger, Jr.
 Adam Boger.
 Henry Derr.
 John Derr.
 Jacob Derr.
 Nicholas Derr.
 Leonard Derr.
 David Eberhard.
 Jacob Edinger.
 Daniel Falk.
 Solomon Falk.
 Mathias Falk.
 Jacob Freth.
 George Freth.
 Abraham Fenstermacher.
 Jacob Gachenbach.
 Jacob Geho.
 George Lorance.
 Paul Kramlich, Jr.
 Ludwig Kachenbach.
 Gideon Grimm.
 Paul Kramlich.
 Jacob Kramlich.
 Abraham Greenewald.
 Christian Greenewald.
 Jacob Grimm.
 George Grimm.
 Peter Gariner.
 John Gariner.
 Charles Gachenbach.
 Henry Halfrich.
 Daniel Helfrich.
 Henry Hobler.
 Danel Hase.
 John Hartman.
 Peter Hartman.
 Friederich Hope.
 Friederich Heyneman.
 Andreas Hartman.
 Philip Hartman.
 Peter Holwein.
 Jacob Holwein, Jr.
 Laurence Holwein.
 John Hartman.
 Christian Holwein.
 John Henry.
 Philip Hawer.
 George Heyneman

Barnet Jaeger.
 Adam Smith.
 Daniel Krauss.
 Jonathan Krauss.
 Daniel Kuns.
 Laurence Klein.
 Jonathan Klein.
 Peter Klein.
 Conrad Keck.
 Jacob Kraul.
 Philip Kuntz.
 George Kupp.
 Jacob Knerr.
 John Knerr.
 Abraham Knerr.
 D. Jacob Breifogel
 Nicholas Gramer.
 Jacob Stahlnecker.
 George Kunkle.
 Peter Krommer.
 Peter Kocher.
 Henry Kramer.
 Christian Leibel.
 John Leibel.
 William Leibel.
 John Leibel.
 Balzer Lutz.
 Andrew Lindemuth.
 Mathias Leibelberger.
 John Lichtewalter.
 Daniel Moyer.
 Jacob Miller.
 Widow Merckle.
 Daniel Moyer.
 Daniel Moyer, Jr.
 Nicholas Moyer.
 Widow Muthard.
 Jacob Mume.
 Peter Maurer.
 Ludwig Nolf.
 John Notestine.
 Peter Naff.
 Adam Old.
 George Old.
 John Plyler.
 Michael Plyler.
 Peter Pauley.
 Jacob Plyler.
 Paul Plyler.
 Andrew Rupp.
 Philip Rauch.
 Henry Rauch.
 Henry Reinsmith.
 Henry Reichard.
 Michael Reichard.
 Michael Rabenold.
 George Shubert.
 John Siegfried.
 Philip Statler.
 Jonathan Shoemaker.
 John Shoemaker.
 John Sauerwine.
 George Smith.
 Philip Smith.
 Jacob Sassemann.
 Frederick Sauberling.
 Anthony Stine.
 George Shoemaker.
 Michael Smith.
 Jacob Siegfried.
 John Seip.

Daniel Shoemaker.
Jacob Sittler.
Christian Smith.
Jost Shnyder.
John Fogel.
Frederick Wilraub.
John Wannemacher.
Samuel Weindt.
Daniel Wirth, Jr.
Frederick Walbert.
Jonathan Walbert.
Jacob Walbert.
Michael Werly.
Henry Weiss.

Michael Werly, Jr.
Andreas Werly.
Nicholas Werly.
Christian Weiss.
Valentine Werly.
Daniel Wurth.
Dewald Werly.
Andrew Wagener.
Nicholas Wilt.
Dewald Xander.
Daniel Xander.
Henry Xander.
Peter Zimmerman.

Single F eemen.

Daniel Krauss.
Solomon Rupp.
Philip Rauch.
John Sauerwine.
Michael Werly.
Peter Xander.

George Xander.
Peter Sauberling.
John Grimm.
William Geringer.
Reuben Selich.
George Selich.

Ziegel Church.—On the south side of the Blue Mountains extends parallel with the mountain range, a strip of mountainous land known as the "Gravel," which begins at the Delaware River in New Jersey, and, intersected by the Lehigh and Schuylkill Rivers, reaches far into Lebanon county. Strictly speaking, this range is more hilly than mountainous, and its dales distribute the purest waters in all directions. In some places, as in Weissenberg, Lowhill, Lynn, and Heidelberg, where it includes these townships, it is from thirteen to fourteen miles broad; at other places it narrows its borders to near the Blue Mountains. On its southern border it blunts into the beautiful valley known by the Indians as "Kittatinny," which reaches to another chain of mountains, known as the Lehigh Mountains. This large and fertile valley, which partly includes Northampton, Lehigh, Berks, and Lebanon counties, is the richest and most beautiful in Pennsylvania. However, the "Gravel" surpasses it in springs, excellent water and forests.

The first German Reformed and Lutheran emigrants came from Philadelphia to the "Gravel," where were large forests, springs, and plenty of good water. Here in the dales where the rivulets riffled, where wood was in abundance, and especially lured by these hills and ravines which reminded them of the Fatherland, they founded their new homes. For this reason the "Gravel," with its stony soil, was settled earlier than the valley with its stoneless and rich soil, now known as Macungie and Maxatawny townships, which the emigrants passed to reach the "Gravel." Later when other colonists came and settled in the valley, the rich soil was also appreciated.

An early immigration to Lehigh was in the western part in Weissenberg, Lynn, and Heidelberg, and became the foundation of the Long Swamp congregation in Berks county, the Ziegel, Weissenberg, Lowhill, Ebenezer, and Heidelberg in Lehigh county, and Allemangel in Berks county.

In the years 1734 and 1735,—some still earlier,—numerous families came from Oley and Goshenhoppen to the Kittatinny Valley, by way of the Indian path crossing the Lehigh Mountains, through the Rittenhouse Gap. Another Indian path led across the mountain more east, near Zionsville, in Upper Milford. Some of these families settled in Long Swamp, others moved north to the gravel region as far as the Schochary Ridge and surrounding country, where they became known as the "Allemangel settlement." From the Long Swamp Church across the valley lies the "Gravel." This highland forms itself through Weissenberg and Lynn townships towards the Schochary hills in another ridge, over which was also a well-trodden Indian path. This ridge divides and forms the water-sheds of the Lehigh and Schuylkill Rivers. From it the summit of Lehigh county opens many dales and ravines which gradually sink deeper, forming high banks covered with heavy timber and excellent creeks, which contribute on the right side to the Jordan, and on the left to the Antalaunee. The families followed this summit, and were attracted by the fine forests and clear water, which accounts for the early settlements of Weissenberg, Lynn, Kistler and Antalaunee Valleys. Each following year brought small and large trains of emigrants which strengthened the colonies. The territory of the Ziegel Church lay between the extremes of Long Swamp and Lynn, and especially where this summit begins. The ridge here inclines obliquely into the valley, and forms, towards northeast, the little valley of Macungie, with a creek bearing the same name, which gave the name to both the Macungie townships. Toward the west of the Ziegel Church extends another small valley from the north inclining to the large valley towards the southeast, forming the Ziegler and Haas Knobs. On the ridge dividing these two valleys stands the Ziegel Church. Many of the emigrants settled on the slopes and dales of the ridge on which the church stands, and built their log cabins near springs and creeks. Hence, early in the beginning of the 18th century the origin of the Ziegel congregation was caused, making it one of the oldest congregations in the county.

The organization of the congregation was effected in the year 1745. Its property was bought a few years later, and the building of the church occurred still later. In the meantime services were held in the houses of the members, where sermons were read by the schoolmaster, and occasionally by a minister from a distance. The old church record registers baptisms from 1730 to 1740. In 1747 Rev. Michael Schlatter visited the Ziegel Church on his missionary travels to the German Reformed congregations of Pennsylvania. The Ziegel (then called Macungie), the Allemängel (Ebenezer, in Kistler Valley), and Schmalzgasz (Salisbury) were classed by Schlatter as the twelfth pastoral charge. Having no church building and no minister for the first ten years, a pastor from a distance came to administer Michael, Reformed minister, and Rev. Jacob Friederich Schertlein, Lutheran minister, as a Union Church for the Reformed and Lutherans.

Among the families that organized the congregations were Adam Braus, Ludwig Reichard, Bernhard Schmidt, Nicolaus Mayer, Peter Haas, Georg Schaefer, Karl Koon, Urban Friebe, Johann Merkel, Daniel Knauss, Michael Shatz, Johannes Hergerether, Egidius Grimm, Zacharias Heller, Friedrich Windisch, Adam Weber, George Boyer, Johann Nicol Gift, Georg Wendel Zimmermann, Michael Old, Heinrich Gag-

ZIEGEL CHURCH, STRUCK BY LIGHTNING IN 1887.

the communion. In this way the members had also requested Rev. Mr. Schlatter to visit them, and through his encouragement caused the erection of a church building. Rev. Boehm, persuaded by Schlatter, accepted their invitation.

In 1749 the congregation met and resolved to build their first church. It was built of rough logs in primitive style with no floor. The pulpit was on trestles. The church contained a rough home-made table; the seats were huge logs resting on blocks; the roof was covered with tiles made by one of the members. July 29, 1750, the church was dedicated by Rev. Philipp Jacob enbach, Melchior Ziegler, Philipp Kleinert, Peter Heimbach, Bartholomäus Miller, Georg Adam Liebensperger, Jacob Kuntz, Albrecht Stimmel, David Muszgenug, Michael Confert, Andreas Sassamanshausen, Georg Schumacher, Melchior Seib, Heinrich Miller, Johannes Vogel, Jacob Kimmel, Johannes Hermann, Conrath Neff, Johannes Heider, Adam Schmidt, Philipp Wendel Klein, Johannes Bar, Yost Schaeffer, Philipp Fenstermacher, Friederich Hirsch, Jacob Acker, Georg Falk, Daniel Stettler, Jacob Weitknecht, Johannes Doll.

The following agreement of the Lutheran and Reformed congregations was made respecting worship in the Ziegel Church:

May the Christian Congregation listen to the terms of the agreement made in Weysenburg.

Since it has pleased Almighty God and it has been His permissive will, that in our union church we have come so far by the grace of God as to be willing to hold the first divine service, with the invocation of His most holy name by both confessions, two weeks from next Sunday, on July 29th, the seventh Sunday after Trinity, we have come together beforehand, both Evangelical Lutheran as well as Evangelical Reformed members, to make fitting regulations for the manner in which preaching and teaching shall be conducted in it.

1. The church in Weysenburg shall be a union church for the Evangelical Lutheran as well as for the Evangelical Reformed confessors. Each congregation may call a teacher or preacher as the members of the consistory and the whole congregation shall approve.

2. Our church shall be opened two weeks hence, with a sermon and an invocation of the triune God; together with songs of praise to the Lord our God, and the dedication shall take place at eight o'clock in the morning by both congregations.

3. If it be possible for the Evangelical Lutheran as well as for the Evangelical Reformed minister to preach, one of the two ministers shall preach the dedicatory sermon and the other a short sermon appropriate for the consecration of the church, for the reason that both ministers serve several congregations on Sunday.

4. But if it cannot be so arranged that the one as well as the other minister can be present on the above mentioned Sunday, the 7th Sunday after Trinity of July 29th, it is agreed by all the undersigned members in Weysenburg to choose and call a minister by both of the congregations, who will be able to perform the act of dedication unhindered.

5. If the Evangelical Lutheran minister should thus be chosen, the Evangelical Reformed people shall make no objection and if the Evangelical Reformed minister should be the one chosen, the Evangelical Lutheran members shall make no objection at the dedication; that everything may be done honestly and orderly, as befits Christians.

6. When divine services, with invocation of God's most holy name, are to be held in the above named union church, the one congregation shall not oppose the other, but divine worship shall take place alternately, the Evangelical Lutheran preacher on the fore or afternoon and also the Evangelical Reformed preacher either on the forenoon or afternoon, every Sunday or every two, three or four weeks, one after the other according to the engagement made with the minister, so that a regular order may be maintained therein.

7. It is agreed and appointed, that each congregation, the Evangelical Lutheran as well as the Evangelical Reformed, shall render an account of the alms in Weysenburg every quarter or half year, all of which shall be laid aside for the building of the Church.

8. It is agreed and appointed, that in this union church in Weysenburg every year the salary or wages of both the above mentioned Evangelical Lutheran as well as the Evangelical Reformed ministers shall be paid in common by the two congregations, and each minister shall be paid according to the terms of the call given to him by the congregation.

9. Finally the ministers, called by the Evangelical Lutherans as well as by the Evangelical Reformed, shall accept no fee for the instruction and confirmation of the children preparatory to the Lord's Supper nor shall they take anything for baptizing children.

Macunshy, the 6th of July, 1750.

This is to certify that the Evangelical Lutheran Confessors concur with the points of the above agreement:

Jacob Friedrich Schertlein, Luth. Min.	Philip Jacob Michael, Ref. Min.
Peter Trexler.	Giedon Grimm.
Joh. Gackenbach, Elder.	Nicolaus Maior.
Adam Brauss.	Peter Haas.
Jacob Schumaker.	George (A.) his mark
Philip Wendel Klein.	Adam Leibesperger.
Ludwig Reichard.	Melchior Kloss.
Johannes Merckel.	Johannes Baehr.
Bernhard Schmidt.	Daniel Knauss.
Michael Bauermann.

Three years after the church was built, Adam Brauss, in the interest of the congregations, took out a warrant for a tract, consisting of 42 acres of land. In 1771 this land was, through Adam Brauss (Reformed) and Jacob Grimm (Lutheran), patented to the congregations. While the church was in course of construction, a school house was also built. Prior to the school house, children were taught in a house near the church and also in Siegfriedsdale, three miles distant from the church. This was burned, and a more substantial one took its place.

Originally the Ziegel Church was called "Macungie," being in the immediate neighborhood of the Macungie Creek and Valley. Macungie, the abbreviation of the Indian word "Mauckkuntshy," signifies "eating place of bears." Leaving the barren, snow-covered gravel, the bears sought their pasture in this valley, and hence its name. Rev. Schlatter records the Ziegel Church under the name "Macungie," and by the first surveys it was located in that township, but in later surveys that part containing the church was added to Weissenberg. The name Ziegel was then substituted on account of its tile-covered roof. Dr. Harbach erroneously mentions in his book, "Schlatter's Life and Travels," page 160, foot note 3, the Trexlertown as the Macungie congregation. The travels of Schlatter into the interior of Pennsylvania occurred in 1747; at that time there existed no other congregation in Macungie except Ziegel and Trexlertown was not organized till 1784. The old Macungie congregation was the Ziegel.

Jacob Friedrich Schertlein (Lutheran) and Philipp J. Michael (Reformed), the ministers who dedicated the first church, were the first pastors of the congregations. Schertlein was an able Lutheran minister and of high standing. Michael was no minister by profession, not even a school-master, but a weaver by trade; however, he was not immoral, and judging from his handwriting, especially as he kept the records of the churches, his education must have been limited. Nor was he without talent, for the members lauded his preaching. But he was without ordination,—a squatter in the church. He organized other congregations in Lehigh and Berks counties. The Michael Church in Berks was named in honor of him. He influenced his members against the Coetus established by Schlatter, and withstood in all respects the synodical organization of the Reformed Church.

Michael's successor was Peter Miller, an equivalent in propensities, also unordained, yet exceeded him in intelligence, being a schoolmaster from Europe. He had settled in Allemängel, near Ebenezer (now Tripoli), taught school, read sermons for the congregations in Lynn and Heidelberg, and finally declared himself minister of the gospel. After serving Ziegel congregation he preached in Ebenezer, and died there, and is buried in the graveyard of that congregation.

Who the Lutheran ministers were that served the congregation from the time of Schertlein's resignation to 1781 is not known. Very likely there were none for some years. A certain Fritz served a short time. He must have been a spiritus frumenti subject, for in the De Long Church he fell from the pulpit, being too drunk to keep his balance.

South from the church, in a dale entering the Kline Valley, was an Indian village, quite near the farm of Jesse Grimm. The Indians had a burial place here. Years ago many Indian relics, such as tomahawks and arrowheads were found. Farther down the valley, near Breinigsville, lived old Peter Trexler, with whom the Indians were on the most friendly terms. Mrs. Trexler often baked bread for them and gave them small presents, in exchange for which they bought game and smoked their pipes of peace. Later, when the forest gave way to civilization, the Indians left their village, and occasionally returned to visit their burial ground. Between 1754 and 1763, when the Indians became unruly, they also disturbed the Zeigel congregations.

Rev. John Henry Helffrich, the first ordained Reformed minister of the Ziegel congregation, kept a diary while on his voyage to America, and the following is from it:—

"On Sept. 6, 1771, in company with his step-brother, Rev. Albert C. Helffenstein, and Rev. I. G. Gebhard, three missionaries for the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania, appointed by the Holland Synod, Rev. Helffrich sailed from Amsterdam. The same day, at noon, the ship stranded, large vessel to relieve them. On the third day they were overtaken by a storm, and as the Texel was reached the storm increased so much that three anchors were cast. The storm lasted seven days, and the vessel was so disabled that they were obliged to sail to Newcastle for repairs. From Newcastle they started again, only to be overtaken by a second storm. On the 21st of October the ship entered the Channel. They encountered the severest storm, which drifted them to the coast of France. The ship was obliged to sail to Caen for repairs again, and after six days' delay again set sail. On the 4th of November, the Atlantic was reached. Two days less than two months was required from Amsterdam by way of the English Channel to reach the ocean. On the ocean they were favored for several days with good winds, and their voyage was prosperous. On November 9th, they encountered their enemy in a new form, viz., thunder-storms and water-spouts to their right and left. They were drifted near the islands of Azore. For eight days the wind was in direct opposition to them. Another storm overtook them, the rudder, masts, and rigging were destroyed, and all hopes of safety abandoned, and the vessel given its own course. The next week following the voyage was tedious, and the provisions and water began to get low. On the 27th of November, a hog was slaughtered, for the beef was eaten, and ham, bacon and peas, and all the flour was ruined by the rats. From the 27th of November to the 11th of December, after the ship carpenter's repairs, the voyage progressed finely. A dolphin and several large fish were caught, which added to their limited store of provisions. On the 11th of December another storm destroyed the mainmast, and many of the sails were lost and torn. December 12th, a second mast and the ship-beak were broken. The prospects were gloomy. The provisions were saturated with ocean water and unpalatable. On December 25th, the drinking water was distributed in small quantity; each passenger received for his share two and a half glasses, which included their tea or coffee and soup. Their thirst, owing to the saturated and fast-decomposing meat, became intense. A few peas were left, which were served twice a week with bacon and four hams were on board. They suffered hunger and thirst, and ten days with favorable weather was required to reach New York. The 1st of January they hailed a whaler. On January 7th storm; the waves washed the deck, and took overboard the last hog and sty, which was kept for an emergency. Helffenstein and Gebhard and two other passengers were also washed overboard, but rescued. The storm drifted the vessel toward shore; but six days later, while sounding, the weight sank 12,000 feet and still no bottom. The next day they sailed 104 miles, and sounded bottom at 210 feet. January 13th, again 100 miles, and saw the coast of New Jersey; at 8 P. M. the lights of, and at midnight anchored at, New York. On Jan. 14, 1772, they stepped on American soil. The voyage was accomplished in four months and eight days, encountering seven storms, two water-spouts, thirst and hunger. Now the same voyage is made in nine days."

Having landed in America, the position of the early settlers was anything but agreeable and comfortable. Still they were in the land of their hope, but were now obliged to locate and find suitable lands for homesteads. There was no want of locations and good lands. The soil was fertile, and awaited the plow and farmer, but to reach the sections was difficult. They were directed toward the Blue Mountains. To the Lehigh Mountains it was not so difficult, for roads were already broken, but over the Lehigh Mountains, the Kittanning Valley, and across to the Blue Mountains was an impenetrable forest land. An Indian path leading through Rittenhouse Gap was used, which was enlarged by axe and elbow-grease for the accommodation of steads, and found encouragement from their already established neighbors. The writer of this article was told by veterans, buried long ago, that after the settlers had decided on a homestead they drove their wagon under some trees near a spring or creek; a kettle hung to a cross-piece, supported by two wooden forks, was their kitchen, the wagon with its covered roof the bed-room, and the forest with its blue sky their house. Huts, equal to the modern charwagons, and took weeks till the settlers arrived at their destination.

ZIEGEL CHURCH, STRUCK BY LIGHTNING IN 1907.

The first settlers of this congregation were a small party that started together from the Palatinate. They mostly brought money. Such families as the Brauszs, Reichards, Haas, Gagenbach, Grimms, and Lichtenwallners were even wealthy. They bought their horses, wagons, stock, and agricultural implements in Philadelphia. The emigrants who had to pay for their sea voyage came later, selected homecoal-burner's, were their next attempt, which they lived in till, by rotation, they could help each other to build log cabins which only had one room, without floor, and covered with rush and sod. Cellars were out of the question. Agriculture was the most important thing. As soon as the temporary cabin was finished they cleared portions of forest, and year after year they kept on until they were supplied with sufficient tillable land. While thus engaged their wives cultivated the gardens—raised lettuce, turnips, cabbage, etc.—and the kitchen soon had the odor of greens and vegetables. Early with the building of their cabins they planted apple seeds, and in years afterward they had a good supply of apples, which they distilled into apple-jack, and exchanged in Philadelphia for necessaries or money. From experience during the winter they learned that their cabins were not cold and snow-proof, so they improved and enlarged them. One of the first saw-mills was near the church, where the little rivulets combined enter the Macungie Valley, later called Schuyler's saw-mill. As soon as boards were to be had the carpenters modernized the cabins, added floors, rooms, and shingle-roofs. The log stable gave place to log barns with threshing-floors, and on the right and left sides stalls for cattle and horses, and the usual lofts for grain and hay. The logs used in cabins and barns were "chinked" with straw and clay, making warm houses; later they added cellars to store the potatoes, which heretofore were covered with earth. The furniture was mostly brought from Europe, some was bought in Philadelphia, and some the settlers made themselves. A table, chairs, bench, chests, stove, and bedsteads constituted a good outfit. Linens they brought from Germany.

Flour was the scarcest article, and not to be had on this side of the Lehigh Mountains. They usually brought it from Groshenhoppen and Oley, and owing to break-neck roads could only bring small quantities at a time. This was remedied, however, for in Klinsdale a mill was erected,—the mill now belonging to Charles Kline. This was the first in the settlement. Notwithstanding that flour was scarce they never suffered for food. The forests were full of game, and the creeks abounded in fish. Deer, bears, wild turkeys, doves, ducks, and quail were in abundance, and their tables were covered with these palatable.

Their greatest want was clothes. Those brought from Europe were worn out. They bought goods in Philadelphia usually used for sails of vessels, which was of coarse fibre. It was made into garments, and in winter two or three suits would cover them to shield them from the cold. But to buy required money, and their money was almost gone, so they raised flax for supply. Spinning began early in the fall and continued till spring. Looms sprung up, and gradually increased till nearly every tenth house had its loom. The German wives prided themselves upon their chests full of home-made linens, and their husbands were proud to wear the linen shirts of their own industry. Later they raised sheep and wool, which was interwoven with flax, and soon warm garments were made from wool alone.

Most of the settlers had learned a trade, and hence there were tailors, smiths, carpenters, shoemakers, and millers, who helped each other and made the settlement rather independent. Physicians were wanting for many years. The strong, healthy German nature helped itself; a few domestic remedies such as certain teas, etc., were all they had for medicines. A few old ladies acted the midwife. Chills and fever, very common at this time, were treated with soups and full doses of patience.

All business and exchange were transacted in Philadelphia. All they needed was brought from there, and all their products which they wished to exchange for money were taken there. And all was carried on by teams of individual parties, and passed through Groshenhoppen, from where a good road led to Philadelphia, making the trip to Philadelphia and return in five or six days.

Before the church was built the settlers held services in their houses, at which the schoolmaster officiated by singing, prayer, and reading a sermon. While the schoolmaster was absent or wanting, one of the members would take his place. Gradually these schoolmasters improved, became a necessity, and were called "home-made ministers." But at the time when this church was built the members went to Philadelphia to engage a real minister, but not succeeding, they were obliged to be satisfied with these substituted sermon-readers. They became reconciled to these readers, and they served all the congregations on the north side of the Lehigh Mountains. Before their church was built, and even long ere they had burial places, they buried their dead on their own land, and hence the old farm burial places of those times were enlarged by relatives being buried aside of their fathers and mothers, and many of these may be seen in the western part of Lehigh, and especially Berks county. It was necessary in the old times to have their services of reading, but the effects were not good. Many of these readers finally declared themselves ministers. And when the organized Coetus (Synod) of Rev. Schlatter sent calls to European ministers to serve these congregations, and they came to take charge of these charges, these very same readers influenced the members against the European ordained missionaries.

A certain Michael was such a reader, and the first Reformed preacher of the Ziegel congregation. What spiritual food the congregation then had can easily be imagined. But for many years this was their only resource. Besides their public services they lacked Bibles, hymn-books, and religious books. Family worship was forgotten, and the welfare of the soul was of secondary consideration. On such basis the congregation rested, and was to improve. Near the end of the period of these readers the Revolutionary War began. In the winter of 1777 to 1778 Washington was quartered at Valley Forge. The winter was severe, and the situation for the soldiers heartrending. This congregation provided to the best of their limited means such articles as shoes, garments, and food, and sent them. In the following spring, when Congress provided more for its army, members of this congregation enlisted in the army and fought for liberty till the end, and brought home with them corrupted morals of army life.

Taking into consideration the conditions and surroundings of this and neighboring congregations which prevailed to the end of the Revolution, we need not be surprised at the decline of Christianity, which increased for many years. The first settlers had died. From the beginning there were few schools, and those only in session a few months every winter. Year after year they grew worse, for the European teachers died, and in their stead incompetent men were often appointed. Besides, many children lived too far from the school houses, some five and six miles. Most parents objected to their children going such a distance, and kept them home at work. The European school knowledge was buried with the early settlers, and the knowledge diffused by later teachers had a strong taint of illiteracy. The church interests of the congregation lacked pastorship and fostering. They stood under the leadership of readers, who were the personification of ignorance and unordained, and concerned themselves little about church government. They served merely for the sake of pay, flattered the members, left their transgressions unchastised because they themselves often were guilty of the grossest misdemeanors. Their stock of books was contracted to Arndt's "Wahres Christenthum," Bible, hymns, a book of sermons, and prayer-book. Notwithstanding these books were of the best kind, they were still not sufficient for their Christian furtherance. The war enhanced the evil still more. Many returned from the war with their morals paralyzed, which resulted in the common frolics and gay living and games and sparring. The church, having lost its stronghold and respect, could not interfere, and things took their own course. The church sunk to stupidity and spiritlessness; members finally decided that they only needed the sacraments and services every four weeks, and ceremonies for the dead, and weddings.

After a period of forty years the reign of the readers ceased, and the Ziegel congregation was supplied with ordained ministers. In 1778, Rev. John Henry Helffrich was elected as their pastor. He answered the call of Coetus in 1772 and came as missionary. He was brought from Philadelphia by the Kutztown congregation, and lived there two years, but moved into the bounds of the Ziegel congregation. The Kutztown congregation had accepted the jurisdiction of Coetus, but when Helffrich tried to bring the Ziegel congregation under its influence he met with opposition. There were two readers still in the neighborhood. Hentzel was Helffrich's predecessor in Kutztown, and was deposed on account of his loose morals. The other, a certain Roth, for similar reasons, was discharged from the Weisenberg congregation, which also chose Helffrich for their pastor. Stimulated by chagrin and jealousy, they succeeded in making the Ziegel obstinate and rebellious. Since Helffrich could not succeed, he resigned. Later, when the congregation saw the progress of the other churches under the sway of able ministers, they consented to be admitted to Coetus, and elected Helffrich again as their pastor.

The second church was built during the pastorate of Rev. John Henry Helffrich. The small log church that was built in 1749, and had seen forty-five years of services, became too small, and had to make room for better accommodations. In 1795 the congregation resolved to build a church befitting the times. The members were divided among themselves as to where the new church was to be built. The old church was on the western corner of the old burial ground, and many wanted the new church opposite. It was finally decided that they vote by throwing their hats to the place of their choice. The most hats were found on the place opposite the old church, and the new building was erected there.

May 16, 1796, Revs. Helffrich and Obenhausen officiated at the corner-stone laying, and in the fall of the same year the same ministers dedicated the new church.

Most of the churches erected about that time in Eastern Pennsylvania had something in common in the plan in which they were constructed. It may be said the time had its style of architecture entirely distinct from later plans of construction. After this style the second Ziegel Church was built. Following was the method of construction: The building was of stone, greater in width than in depth, yet almost square. Large double doors opened on the front and on both sides, and on either side of these doors an oblong window, protected by shutters, was let into the wall. Over the doors was put a beautiful, artistic, and finely-carved lintel about a foot wide. On the second floor there were windows on three sides, all alike, and above there was a semi-circle. The two middle windows in the gable ends had also on the right and left small windows at the sides, which gave an air of propriety to the whole, and the church throughout a sacred appearance. Each gable end had a circular window, similar to the roses in the old Gothic style. The rear wall of the church had in each story towards the sides two windows, because in the middle stood the pulpit, above which a small window admitted light as well as cool air in summer.

The arrangements of the interior was made with reference to the doors. An aisle running in from each door divided the room into four parts. Near the side entrances were steps leading to the galleries. Along the rear wall, upon pillars, stood the pulpit, in the form of a tulip with space for only one person, and a sounding-board above it. The pulpit stairs ascended from a passage along the wall about four feet long and three wide, which was known as the pastor's seat. In front of the pulpit, in a large clear space, stood the altar. This was not a vessel such as is generally found, but was rather an altar, constructed after the fashion of the Ark of the Covenant, and decorated with a black vestment, which was covered during communion service with a white cloth. In later times the pulpit was decorated with the same kind of a black vestment. The galleries rested upon seven columns, and extended around the three sides from the pulpit, and their fronts were so high that no one seated in them could see the minister at the altar. At first the gallery on the right of the pulpit contained the organ, but later it was removed to the one immediately facing the pulpit. The congregation was distributed according to age and sex in the different parts of the church. The fronts of the galleries, as well as of the doors and windows, and the sides of the pews were painted white; the pews themselves, which formed the greatest part of what struck the eye, were unpainted, and in the course of time obtained a dull brown color, which made a solemn, dreary impression upon

The efforts of Rev. John Henry Helffrich, as before stated, were especially directed towards bringing the congregation into alliance with the Coetus (Synod), in order to obtain for it a more certain establishment as a church. When this was accomplished he devoted himself with all the energy of his nature towards securing a higher the mind. The frame-work of the roof was laid the long way upon the walls. Although this style of construction was apparently clumsy and not ecclesiastical in appearance, still the pulpit, with its sounding-board, made preaching an easy matter in these churches, deficient, alas! in almost every respect.

THE PRESENT ZIEGEL CHURCH.

and better order of things. His well-prepared sermons, delivered with earnestness and in love; his strict discipline, without sharpness; his elementary instruction of the young, and his untiring industry bore their natural fruit. Yet the progress was only partial. The congregation advanced in ecclesiastical matters, but this advance was mostly in forms. There was a lack of appreciation of the advantages of mental culture among the people. In fact, so limited was this appreciation that it was impossible to use the Heidelberg Catechism in its entire form in the instruction of the children. Neither were the young prepared by previous training to commit the larger answers, nor were they even inclined to do so. Many could neither read nor write, while others had never been within the four walls of a school house. To overcome some of the difficulties, Rev. Helffrich rewrote and simplified the Heidelberg Catechism, inserting the principal questions (with their numbers), so that every child could go over the whole catechism and memorize many of the questions thus simplified. Through these means, the Heidelberg Catechism was prevented from falling into disuse in his congregation. The children were instructed every Sunday before divine service, and by the help of his explanations and illustrations were enabled to commit the catechism to memory. Later he had this abridgment printed, and every child was required to have a copy, as well as the Heidelberg Catechism. It is still used as a catechism in Sunday schools to this day.

Externally also, through his labors the church obtained new life. Veneration and love for the church sprang up in the people, and the church was constantly building a surer foundation. Towards the attainment of a complete revivification, the proper conditions were, however, wanting. The schools were badly conducted, the literature necessary for the advancement of popular education was entirely wanting, and the spirit of the times tended downwards. Beyond all, there was a lack of spirit in the German Churches of America which was everywhere more or less perceptible. It will be thus seen that it was more necessary to check this downward tendency than to think of spiritual development. Yet the good seed was sown by willing ecclesiastical hands, and this self-same seed began to spread its roots, and in its own appointed time brought forth fruit in abundance.

After Rev. Helffrich's death in 1810, Heinrich Diefenbach was called to serve the congregation provisionally. A son of Rev. Helffrich had begun to study theology, and it was agreed that Rev. Diefenbach should serve until the son should receive a license from the Synod to preach. The congregations of the Heidelberg, Lynn, and Low-hill Churches also joined in this provisional arrangement, and after a service of five years Mr. Diefenbach peaceably surrendered his charges to John Helffrich, after he had completed his studies in Philadelphia under Dr. Helfenstein, and had received his license from the Synod. John Helffrich was chosen as pastor in 1816, and served this and the other congregations above named for a period of thirty-five years, until his death in 1852.

Between 1820 and 1830 a schism known under the name of "the Free Synod" arose in the Reformed Churches of Eastern Pennsylvania especially, the seed of which was industriously sought to be sown also in the Zeigel congregation. Nor was it in vain, for the seed took root, and not a small portion of the members were favorably inclined to the idea. The Lutheran minister, Johann Konosky, seceded about this time from the Lutheran Synod, and drew with him all his congregations, among them the Lutherans of the Ziegel Church. Thereupon the Reformed congregations also wished to separate from their Synod. This purpose Rev. Helffrich opposed with all the earnestness of his nature. To disprove what the schismatics loudly proclaimed—that the old Synod desired to enslave the people—he obtained from the Synod a written declaration, addressed to the Ziegel Church, that it should not at any time be obliged to do anything to the loss of its freedom. This writing, composed in the Synod at Lebanon, in 1829, and attested under the hands of the synodical officers, was read to the Ziegel congregation, and the spirit of Free Synods, even if not entirely exterminated, lost its hold upon the people.

Another disturbance which shook the church in his time was that created by the birth of the spirit of fanaticism. This excitement pervaded the whole German Church, more or less, everywhere. It took its origin outside of the church, and sought to press its way from without into the church. It naturally tended to the establishment of the "anxious bench," and showed in many congregations into which it was introduced its corrupt and unchristian nature. From the rise of this spirit, so little in consonance with the spirit of the Reformed Church, Rev. Helffrich could foresee the promise of but little good. He did not permit himself to give the movement any countenance, but, on the other hand, took a position too far in the extreme, and too far, perhaps, behind the times. He constantly said to his flock, "We will abide by the old customs; let us cultivate these." In the Ziegel Church, too, the fanatical spirit attempted to obtain a foothold, but, owing to the opposition of their pastor, the church remained unharmed by the storm that swept over other churches like a scorching blast.

About the year 1840, Rev. Helffrich founded the first Sunday school in this congregation, the members willingly lending themselves to the project.

On Whitsunday and Whitmonday, the 8th and 9th of June, 1851, the church celebrated the memory of its foundation by holding a centennial jubilee. The church was splendidly adorned. The walls, windows, organ, pillars, pulpit, etc., having been hung with evergreen, flowers, and fir branches. Four sermons were preached to the immense concourse by Revs. C. G. Herman, Jeremiah Schindel, and W. A. Helffrich. Historical tablets on each side of the pulpit showed the numbers 1745 and 1845, signifying that a completed century lay in the past. In this period a rich and blessed congregation had arisen out of the wilderness. From the toil and cares of the old German fathers had sprung opulence and ease. There, at the side of the church, in the formed side every other Sunday. The sermon had a known and active Christianity which became visible in practical results in the daily life of the people. A chandelier and lamps were purchased for the purpose of holding evening services, and it was here that the first of these was held. The prejudice against them quickly disappeared. The more frequently divine services were held the more industriously and in greater numbers came the congregation to the house of God, so that frequently there was not room for all.

The Heidelberg Catechism, never omitted in instruction, was now introduced in its full form, and made the groundwork of church life. The practice of the discipline inculcated by the catenortheastern part of God's acre, sleep, mostly with unmarked graves, all of those who laid the first corner-stone of this church. No stone marks the resting place of the first departed of the fathers. Slate was used as headstones, but this soon crumbled from rain, frost, and heat, and now scarcely any inscription can be read. Later a small number of sandstones were erected, which are still standing, and the inscriptions are legible, but fast decaying; and still later there appeared memorial stones in marble.

HOMESTEAD OF REV. JOHANN HEINRICH HELFFRICH.

In 1852, the year following the celebration, the pastorate became vacant through the death of Rev. John Helffrich, and his son, William A. Helffrich, who had assisted his father in his clerical labors for seven years, was chosen as his successor. Divine service began to be held more frequently, and there was preaching on the Rechism and constitution of the church met with approbation; it was forceably impressed upon the catechumens, and especially directed against the immoralities of the corrupting "frolics." The consecration of the consistories was now accomplished with genuflexion and the laying on of hands, according to the direction of the constitution, a thing which had never before been done. Communion services were held more frequently; and kneeling in prayer during the preparatory services was now introduced. Many knees, at first very stubborn, learned in time to bend willingly.

About the year 1860 the Bible class came into existence. Members assembled in each other's homes, and engaged in singing, prayer, admonition, and the reading of Scriptural selections, upon which they made observations. Weekly prayer-meetings were held either in the church by the pastor or in their homes by the members themselves. There was also an increase of activity in regard to missions.

During the fall of 1862, among all the excitements and disturbances of the Civil War, the congregation resolved to build a new church, the old edifice having stood for sixty-eight years, and its capacity became too small. On Ascension day, 1862, the corner-stone of the new building was laid. The immorality of the so-called "Hucksters" (generally prevailing at this time in Eastern Pennsylvania) became, during the construction of the new building, the occasion for an unholy strife. These hucksters, who sold cakes, drinks, etc., under booths at all worldly gatherings of the people, had also for a long time been offering their wares, even at sacred festivals on the Sabbath day, bidding defiance to the Church. Under these tents or booths hundreds of people stood engaged in light, trifling conversation and in buying, while in the church divine service was being conducted. The building committee took the arrangement of the corner-stone laying festival out of the hands of the consistory and gave permission to the hucksters to carry on their immoralities. Under a resolution of the Eastern Pennsylvania Classis, no minister was permitted to be present at any church festival at which huckstering was carried on, and in obedience to this resolution the Reformed pastor remained absent from the ceremonies. The friends of the hucksters made this the pretext for a controversy which aroused much excitement. When the church, on Whitsunday in the following year, was to be dedicated, and the hucksters again received permission from the same source to be present, the Reformed Consistory resolved not to hold their services in conjunction with the Lutherans (who allowed themselves to be led by the friends of the hucksters) but appointed a later day. The dedication was then held on the 26th of June, 1864, without hucksters, and Revs. J. S. Herman and W. A. Helffrich, Reformed ministers, conducted the services.

The church was one of the largest in the county, and a beautiful brick building. Its belfry and towers arose high in the air from the spot where the old church stood. Five high Gothic windows on each side, and an addition to the building containing the pulpit, gave it a sacred appearance. The galleries rested on iron pillars. Above the pulpit a Gothic bow extended along the small rear wall, and divided the addition from the main building. A hall at the entrance in the front part of the church, from which steps ascended to the galleries, prevented all disturbing noises from being heard within. All the wood-work of the interior was artistically painted, and ceiling and walls were beautifully frescoed. The gentle half-light caused by the curtains at the windows and the dark colors of the paint left a solemn impression upon the mind.

The congregation pursued a new and excellent plan for paying off the church debt. Upon the completion of the building it appeared a considerable debt remained, which would not be defrayed by the subscriptions and both consistories met and made a statement showing how much each member would be compelled to contribute in order to pay off the debt at once, these statements being based upon the ability of each to pay. They then submitted this statement to the members, with an explanation of their plan, and but three or four were unwilling to pay the sums asked. The tri-centennial jubilee and anniversary festival in memory of the publication of the Heidelberg Catechism was celebrated by this congregation during the construction of the church.

This church was destroyed by lightning on July 6, 1887. The following description of the remarkable occurrence in its history was taken from the church record:

On the 6th of July, 1887, this neighborhood was visited by a terrible storm that sent fear and consternation to many hearts. The constant rolling and crash of thunder were something uncommon and the quick succession of lightning flashes, together with torrents of rain which poured from dark clouds, was an exhibition by the elements which even the oldest citizen had never witnessed before. At about five o'clock in the afternoon a shaft of electricity struck the high steeple, passed down into the building, and ignited it in various places. The shaft was witnessed by the organist, Mr. Stump, who resided across the road from the church but unassisted he was not able to extinguish the flames; however, with the help of a few neighbors, the communion service and baptismal font, together with the old, original Bible and a few other articles of furniture were rescued, but the building and all its remaining furniture were destroyed by the flames. Before night the church was entirely consumed.

The excitement was intense and soon a large concourse of people were on the premises witnessing the conflagration, but bowing in humble submission to what they interpreted as the unmistakable will of Divine Providence.

The following Friday evening, July 8th, the two church councils took official action and decided to rebuild the church immediately, and they elected two representatives from each congregation as a building committee:

Lutheran.—Benneville Acker and James Lichtenwalner.

Reformed.—Stephen Smith and Jesse Loras.

Mr. Acker was selected as the overseer of the building operations, and the dimensions of the building were fixed at 50 feet front and 75 feet deep. The corner-stone was laid on Aug. 21, 1887; and the dedication took place with appropriate ceremonies on April 7, 1889. The total cost was $13,232.14.

The building of 1863 had no basement, but the new building included a basement, and in general appearance was practically the same as the former, with the exception that the steeple was not so high.

The building of 1887 was also destroyed by lightning on Oct. 4, 1907, and steps were taken for rebuilding it in the following year. The joint building committee was composed of:

Lutheran.—Solomon Heffner and Benjamin D. Folck.

Reformed.—Peter F. Bear and Charles Bleiler.

The re-building was given out by contract and the total cost was $16,491.34. The walls were the same, and the steeple was made still less in height.

The dedication took place exactly one year after the fire.

The corner-stones in the front wall indicate the time when the four churches were erected, as follows:

1796	1887
1863	1908

The Sunday school was first organized in 1840.

The original church and graveyard were on the south side of the public road. The second church (stone, 1796) was placed on the north side. In 1874, a cemetery was also established on the north side, which was enlarged in 1903.

The joint membership in 1913 was 800, about equally divided.

For some time the subject of individual cups in administering the Holy Communion had been discussed by different members of the Ziegel congregations without reaching any definite conclusion. Finally two prominent and long-continued members of the Reformed denomination, Mr. Henry F. Rupp and Mr. Peter F. Baer, quietly determined to secure a complete set of cups and present them, with the sanction of the vestry, to the congregation. Accordingly, they purchased a superior set, comprising 432 cups made of cut glass and twelve aluminum platters, and on Easter Sunday, 1913, the pastor, Rev. William M. Meckstroth, immediately after church service in the morning, requested the members to assemble in the Sunday school room for the purpose of participating in an unusual ceremony which would doubtless prove very interesting to them. Upon assembling there, the Reverend took great pleasure in announcing that Mr. Rupp and Mr. Bear had a surprise for them and this was in the shape of a much-desired individual communion set, comprising 432 cups, but the members would have to take action in such an important change in their religious ceremony which had prevailed in the Ziegel Church for upwards of 150 years. A motion was therefore made that the individual service should be adopted and that the useful gift of the generous donors should be accepted by the Vestry with an expression of appreciation by the congregation which was adopted unanimously. The presentation was then made by Mr. Rupp, and Rev. Meckstroth, in appropriate remarks, accepted the gift in behalf of the congregation.

The first use of the gift was made on the second Sunday after Easter, and its great utility and convenience were highly appreciated by the communicants.

Lutheran Ministers.—Jacob F. Schertlein, Daniel Schumacher, Daniel Lehmann, Johann F. Obenhausen, Heinrich Geisenhainer, G. Wartmann, J. Daering, Johann Konoske, Jeremiah Schindel, Owen Leopold, Elmer Leopold, J. Franklin Keller.

Reformed Ministers.—Philipp J. Michael, Peter Miller, ——— Fritz, John Henry Helffrich, Heinrich Diefenbach, Johannes Helffrich, William A. Helffrich, Nevin A. Helffrich, William M. Meckstroth.

It appears that the Helffrich family supplied Reformed ministers for this church from 1778 until 1906, excepting eight years, a period of one hundred and twenty years.

Weissenberg Church.—This church was known during the 18th century as the Weissen Church. It stands in the northeastern corner of the township, near the line of Lowhill township. It is a union church, all the buildings and lands being owned in equal right by the Reformed and the Lutherans. The congregations extend on the north to Heidelberg Church, on the south to Ziegel Church, and on the west to Jerusalem (Allemängel) Church. All the region in which the congregations dwell is very hilly, with narrow valleys, well watered by many small brooks. Its settlement took place contemporaneously with that in Allemängel, indeed belongs to it. The later arrivals who could not conveniently find room in Allemängel moved farther towards the east and founded this community. The first pioneers were Petrus Herber and Peter Weiss. The former first dwelt at Oley, in Berks county, where his son, John Jacob, married Dorothea, a daughter of Jost Heinrich Sassamanshausen. The wanderers to this region were Swiss, Palatines, and Wurtembergers, and many of them had dwelt some time at Oley, Goshenhoppen, Falkner's Swamp, and other places south of the Lehigh Mountains before they settled in this region. Their relatives and acquaintances, who preceded them, had colonized these places, and many tarried with them before they settled in Weissenberg. They could not find among them such farms as they cared to select; so the heads of families gathered together, hunted up suitable land and tracts, and later brought their families there. Many of their names appear on the colonial records, showing that they wandered hither about the year 1730; but most of them did not settle here until about 1740, between which year and 1750 the principal settlement took place. Many of the original families have died out or moved away from this region, and their names have disappeared entirely.

The following names appear on the church records as those of the first settlers:

Petrus Herber.	Jürg Knödler.
Jacob Herber.	Georg Schüssler.
Peter Weiss.	Eberhard Schmidt.
Jacob Holben.	Jürg Kind.
Theobold Kempfer.	Johann Adam Klein.
Johannes Ehrenhard.	Sebastian Werly (Werlein).
Heinrich Krechloch.	Peter Franz.
Johannes Krechloch.	John De Long.
Jacob Bachmann.	Jacob Heilmann.
Christian Müller.	Friederich Säuberling.
Andreas Riess.	Mathäus Schneider.
Johannes Carral.	Johann Diedrich Hermann.
George Zimmermann.	Heinrich Hartmann.
Johannes Zerfass.	Wilhelm Schmetter.
Valentin Derr (Dürr).	Andreas Eschbach.
Peter Weiss.	Peter Kocher.
Heinrich Georg.	Peter Schopp.
Johannes Georg.	Phillip Scholl.
Adam Bär.	Friederich Weigand.
Leonhard Frey.	Jacob Senser.
Jacob Grünewald, Sr.	Jost Diehl.
Wendel Holben.	Sebastian Gehringer.
Michael Braucher.	Michael Hallenbach.
Nicolaus Kemp.	Peter Rabenold.
Martin Buchmann.	Johann Meyer.
Valentin Graumlich.	Peter Bahl.
Michael Bieber.	Daniel Stettler.
Michael Bock.	Johann A. Geiss.
Jürg Emmerich Schick.	Johann Knörr.
Andreas Sinckell.
Jürg Sieger.

The congregations take their origin from the year 1747. Divine services had, however, been held at the homes of members before that time, undoubtedly by Rev. Kidenweiler, who resided in this neighborhood, and was known by the name of the "Swiss minister." By this time Jacob Holben had been elected an elder of the Weissenberg Church. The construction of the first church building dates from June, 1754. Like all other churches in those early times it was built of logs, but was somewhat better constructed than most of them. In 1754 handicrafts were already better represented, and it is said there was at that time a saw mill in operation in the Allemängel and Kistler Valleys turning out boards and shingles. The Rev. Daniel Schumacher is authority for the statement that it was dedicated by the Revs. Rudolph Kidenweiler and Jacob Friedrich Schertlein, the first two pastors of the church. Soon after building the church, a school-house was also erected.

About 1765 there arose here an unfortunate fight, which increased until the greater part of the Reformed congregations seceded and formed the Lowhill Church. They were the original settlers, and numbered the most; but as they could not obtain any title for various reasons to the Allemängel Church in Kistler Valley, they had moved farther towards the east, and really originated this church. They intended at the same time, however, to allow equal share to the Lutherans. Now, it happened that the latter, having a better minister, Rev. Daniel Schumacher, obtained more influence than the Reformed members, who, under Rev. J. Michael, did not increase. This was the beginning of ill feeling. Soon there followed offensive expressions, and the fires of discord broke out. Whatever was desired by the one party was opposed by the other. So, after a while, the Bachman, George, Weiss, Mannebach, and a portion of the Holben families, separated from this congregation, and began the Lowhill as a purely Reformed Church. But some remained in Weissenberg, as the Herber, Fry, and the other part of the Holben families. They could not tear themselves away from their old homes and their dead. The Weissenberg Church remained a union church, but the Reformed members formed but a small part of it, as they do to the present day.

During the time of the Indian troubles this community suffered greatly. Several dwellings were burned down, and the greater part of the inhabitants fled to parts farther south.

In the War of Independence several members of the congregation served as soldiers. Their names are not known. When, in the winter of 1777-78, Washington's army lay encamped at Valley Forge, the people hereabouts sent down food and clothing to relieve its wants.

It is peculiar that in most of the settlements made by the Germans in America, warrants for the lands taken were not obtained by the squatters from the proprietaries till twenty, thirty, and more years after they had possession. The reason was this,—because the immigrants were led to believe in Germany that in America all the land was free, and that it was only necessary to enter and take possession of it, in order to become the owners of it. Under this impression nearly all the wanderers arrived here, hunted out such farms as suited them, and where they found them unoccupied, took possession of them without thinking they would ever be called on for pay. When the authorities insisted later on these squatters purchasing warrants for the lands taken, they did so gradually. The freeing of the land from the purchase money imposed by the State and the taking up of their deeds patent consumed a great deal of time, and valid titles for much of the land in this community were not obtained till the 18th century.

In the time of Pastor Schumacher many baptisms were held at the homes of the members, and these were always celebrated with feasts, after the manner of the Palatines. The church record shows that frequently two or three pair of godfathers and godmothers stood for one child. An example is taken from the church book: "At the baptism of Johannes Christianus Reiss, an infant son of Johann Daniel Peter, on the 1st of March, 1760, the following persons stood as godfathers and godmothers, viz: Daniel Schumacher, the Lutheran minister, and Maria Elizabeth, his wife; Johann Heinrich Widersheim, elder of the Reformed Church in Lynn, and the Widow Anna Elizabeth Yuncker; Peter Bahl and Catharina, his wife; and also Johann Diel Hermann and Anna Barbara, his wife,—eight persons, besides the minister.

On the 7th of November, 1803, the congregation having resolved to build a new church, a constitution was adopted, by which its construction and the future conduct of the church should be regulated. The church was built of logs, well constructed, and appropriate for those times. It was completed in the year 1804, and dedicated with appropriate services, conducted by Rev. John Henry Helffrich, the Reformed minister, and Rev. J. F. Obenhausen, the Lutheran minister.

The consistory for that period who signed the attestation were Jacob Herber, Simon Georg, Heinrich Schneider, Mathias Sentell, Lorenz Holben, Abraham Grünwald, Philipp Herber, John Weiss, Heinrich Weiss, John Sieger, Heinrich Kregloh, Theobald Holben, Sebastian Werlein, Michael Werlein, Andreas Buchmann, Georg Rau, Andreas Bittner, Nicolaus Werlein, Valentin Werlein, Jacob Schumacher, Peter Hallenbach, Peter Rau, Sabastian Ettel, Frederick Seiberling, and Theobald Werlein.

The third church was built in 1830, of stone. The congregation confirmed their old constitution, according to which this building also was put up. On the 30th of May, 1830, the corner-stone was laid, with services conducted by Rev. John Helffrich, the Reformed minister, and Rev. Georg Wartmann, the Lutheran minister, both of whom preached sermons on that day. In fall, the same pastors conducted the dedicatory services. The record of the building of the church is witnessed by the following:

Building committee: Nicolaus Werly, Michael Frey, Andreas Bittner, Philipp Herber.

Lutheran elders: John Weida, Peter Buchmann.

Reformed elders: Andreas Rupp, Philipp Herber.

Reformed deacons: Jacob Blessler, Michael Frey, Abraham Grünwald, Jacob Herber.

Lutheran deacons: Johannes Seibert, Solomon Rabenold, Frederick Dengler, Andreas Werly.

Treasurer: Jacob Herber.

School teacher: Heinrich Busse, served 42 years, born in Prussia, 1772, and died in 1857.

The centennial jubilee was held by the congregation on the 21st of September, 1851. In the morning Rev. Jeremiah Schindel, the Lutheran minister, preached, and in the afternoon Rev. William A. Helffrich, the Reformed minister. The venerable father, Rev. Johannes Helffrich, was also present, and took part in the celebration.

The fourth (and present) church was built of brick, in the year 1864. The corner-stone was laid by Rev. A. J. Herman, of the Reformed, and Rev. O. Leopold, of the Lutherans.

The Reformed ministers of the congregation were:—

Rudolph Kidenweiler, a Swiss; he founded the church; he preached also for the Long Swamp congregation seven and a half years. He left this church in obedience to the call from the "Grosse Schwamm" Church, south of the Lehigh Mountains, where he died and was buried. His headstone still stands upon the cemetery of that church, with the following inscription: "Here lies buried the departed reformed Preacher, Johannes Rudolph Kitweiler; his age was 47 years, 9 months; he was born on the 2d of January, 1717, and died the 2d of October, 1764."

Philipp Jacob Michael, who began his service here in the year 1761.

Johann Heinrich Helffrich followed, and was the first preacher from the Synod, with which he brought this church into union. He served this congregation with the Lowhill before the latter had the dispute with the Weissenberg. Father Jacob Herber was a brother-in-law of Rev. Helffrich, both having married daughters of Sassamanshausen. Friendliness induced Rev. Helffrich to serve this congregation, and through his efforts peace was restored. After the Lowhill Church became a Union Church the same ministers served both that and this congregation, and the two were regarded as one.

Heinrich Diefenbach preached from the death of Rev. Helffrich in 1810 till 1816.

Johannes Helffrich, the son of John Henry Helffrich was chosen after the completion of his studies in 1816, and preached up to the time of his death in 1852. In 1845 his son, William A. Helffrich, was appointed his assistant by the East Pennsylvania Classis. He served till the year 1860.

Alfred J. Herman was chosen minister in the same year. He was followed by J. O. Oswald and Oswald by F. P. Laros.

The Lutheran ministers were:—

Jacob Friederich Schertlein.

Daniel Schumacher, an able and well-educated minister from Germany. He came to this region when a young man, and married Maria Elizabeth, a daughter of Georg Steigerwald. On the 11th of December, 1757, he delivered his first sermon. He lived with this community all his lifetime, died here, and lies buried in the old graveyard, with no stone marking his grave.

Hermann Jacob Schellhard, who preached here from 1770 to 1780.

Daniel Lehman.

J. F. Obenhausen, who resided within the limits of the Ziegel community.

Friederich Geisenhainer.

George Wartman and J. Däring, who dwelt with the Jordan community, and served the same congregations.

Jeremiah Schindel, elected in 1837.

Owen Leopold. He was followed by his son, Elmer O. Leopold, and afterward by J. Franklin Keller.

Schools.—No sooner were the Palatinates and the Swiss Germans, established in their new homes in Weissenberg, than they began to establish schools; but in this, as in everything else, they had to contend against great difficulties. Being poor and just settled in the wilderness, their means were scanty indeed. To cut down trees, build houses, clear the land, they were impelled by their bodily wants. Doing this was not the work of a day, and years of unremitting toil elapsed before they had anything to sell, and then, when they had it, there was no market at which to dispose of it. After they had gathered together congregations and schools, they often had no ministers, teachers, nor money to procure them. Hence churches and schools were few in number and far apart. At first there seem to have been no schools except those at the churches. These were under the control of the men that led in singing on occasions of public worship, and were termed church schools. For a long time this township had only two churches and probably only two schools, so it often happened that children had to go four or five miles to school. After a while, probably in 1770, other schools were established in parts most remote from the churches, wherever suitable rooms could be obtained. At these the teachers at the churches taught annually for a certain time, after their schools had closed. This state of affairs continued for about fifty years, probably to near the close of the 18th century.

During this time the schools were conducted entirely in the German language. The course of study was reading, writing, singing, arithmetic as far as the fundamental rules, and probably the catechism. The course in reading embraced the A, B, C book, the Psalter, and the New Testament. The girls it was not thought necessary should study more than reading, the catechism, and singing. Many children grew up with no schooling at all, others with very little. The records, still existing, of transactions done during those times show that scarcely any of the women and a great many of the men could not even write their own names. Of those born in Germany, nearly all of the men and some of the women could write. The teachers during the beginning of this period were all men that had been educated in Europe, but some of them became ministers, and less qualified men took their places as teachers. So the schools suffered. From that time until the adoption of the common school system many taught school who had no qualifications whatever to recommend them.

Among the teachers in the township between 1834 and 1840 were Allenborn, Reichelhelm, Flotto, Joch and August Griebler, who were brought here by Rev. John Helffrich. The studies included German, Latin, Greek, Natural Philosophy, Geography, Ancient History, Physiology, Biblical History, religious instruction and letter writing for composition. The school building was where M. H. Smale's home now is, and it was known as Helffrich's Academy."

In 1841 Amandus Stettler began an English school at Daniel Helffrich's place (later Stein's store); and a year afterward William Cramer also began an English school near Hynemansville in the Xander school house. [From Rev. W. A. Helffrich's Autobiog.]

Eilen Thal Schuhl (Owl Valley School.)—Probably the third school in the township was the Eilen Thal School. About the year 1780 a movement was set on foot to erect a church and a school house in the western part of the township, about three-fourths of a mile southeast of the present village of Stein's Corner, in Lynn. The next year six acres of land were bought from George Grim by the Reformed and Lutheran congregations for the purpose of building thereon a church and a school house. The school house was built, but the church was not. Preparations had been made for building, and the stones had been hauled there, when the project was abandoned. The school house stood upon a hill. It was built of heavy timber, and provided with a large stove, into which quite large logs could be put for heating the room.

Of the school we know but little, though it was kept up about forty years. The only teacher of whom we have any knowledge was a Mr. Widch, who taught there about the year 1810. About the year 1820, the building having become old and dilapidated, and a road having been laid out through the valley, an adjoining tract of land was bought from John Grim, and a new school house was erected in the valley, a short distance from the site of the old one. This was also a wooden building, built of chestnut timber given by one Natstein. It was a double building, one part for German teaching and the other part for English, or a dwelling for the teacher. Here the school was kept up until some time after the common schools had been organized.

When the township was divided into school districts and school houses built by the township, this school was discontinued, being succeeded by the Grim's and Gackenbach's schools. Among the teachers who taught in this second Eilen Thal school house may be mentioned George Heyneman (who taught English school), Ring, Wenzel, Everitt, Joe Pike, and David Stettler. When the school was discontinued, the land was sold and the money divided among the nearest churches.

An amusing anecdote is related of one of the early teachers at this last school house. It seems he had a particular place at which he always sat, where there was a hole in the wall. The pupils, who were nearly all large boys, conceived the idea of having some fun at the expense of the teacher. So every day one of them would go out, get a pole, thrust one end through the hole and poke the teacher's ribs. He would then jump up, seize his hickory, and run out, but by the time he reached the outside the miscreant had disappeared in the woods. This continued for a long time, but at last the teacher succeeded in catching one of them, and gave him such a thrashing as struck terror into the rest.

Moyer's School.—This was the fourth school in the township. The first building stood at a corner of a field on the farm of Nicholas Moyer, now occupied by Benjamin Fries, near Willow Creek. The district must have been organized and the school house built before the year 1800. The school house was built of logs and the school was kept up until the year 1830 or 1832, when the building, being old and dilapidated, fell into disuse. The teachers were Dornecker, Lauhenstein, and Conrad Dower, all Germans.

From here the school was removed to an old house on the farm of Jonathan Schumacher, now occupied and owned by Henry F. Rupp, about a quarter of a mile north of the present village of Seipstown, where it was kept up for about seven years, the principal teacher being Conrad Dower.

In the year 1839 the district was reorganized, and a new school house, known as the "schuhhaus am Schmidt-schap" ("school house at the blacksmith shop"), was built on the land of Jonathan Wieand, near Heberly's blacksmith shop. Here the school was kept up until the spring of 1851. The teachers were John Hossy, Geiger, Berndt, Henry, Mühlhaus, Charles Ziegler, Frank Haines (two terms), and Detweiler. The last two named taught common schools.

When the common school houses were built in the summer of 1852, this school was again removed to near its old site, a school house being built on the land of Daniel Moyer, at the cross-roads, above Bittner's mill, about a quarter of a mile from the original site. Among the teachers may be mentioned Henry Quier, Frank Herber, Joel Bittner, Franklin J. Schumacher, Ralph P. Sowden, Solomon F. Rupp, O. D. Quier, Benedict P. Weiss, Daniel W. Benedict, Menno Heffner, Wallace Zimmerman, Isaac Haines and Franklin Stettler.

These district schools were under the management of a committee of trustees elected by the patrons of each district. They employed the teachers, who received from two to three cents for every child present per day, which amount the teachers had to collect themselves. The teachers boarded around mostly. The German language was mostly taught, though the English language was introduced much earlier into these private district schools than into the church schools. The furniture of these schools was of the rudest kind. There were no desks, but a row of tables, like a huckster's stand, the whole length of the school room.

Weiss's School.—This school house stood on the premises of Henry Weiss, now known as Weiss's tannery. The district was organized and the school house built probably some time between the years 1822 and 1825. The school was kept up at this place until the common schools had been in operation for several years, when it was succeeded by Buck's school. The teachers were Elanius Kramlich, Amandus Stettler, David Stettler, and others.

Smithville School.—This school had its origin about the year 1819, and was opened in the dwelling house of Mr. Burtz, about one-half mile northwest from Hynemansville. The teachers were Ferdinand Berkenmeyer, Peter Maurer, Samuel Wagner, and others. After some time this school was removed to the Maurer farm, where Nathan Moser was the principal teacher.

About the year 1843 or 1844 a school house was built by Gidion Barner, John Helffrich, George Danner, George Eisenhard, Jacob Werly, Jonas Metzger, Benjamin Grim, and others on land owned by Jonas Metzger. The teachers were Samuel Eisenhard, W. A. Fenckner (the chocolate man), Philip Belling, William Stettler, and others. When the common school houses were built this school was discontinued, a school house being built at the road between the present village of New Smithville and the Barner's farms, known at first as the Metzger's, then as Barner's, and now as New Smithville school. Among the teachers were Phaon Baer, Jacob Lichty and Samuel W. Hacock.

Acker's School.—Some time after the year 1800, a school was opened on the farm of Michael Acker, now owned by Jacob Grim. It was kept up, with perhaps slight intermissions, until near the time when the common schools came into operation, and was succeeded by Apple's school. Some of the teachers were Daniel Helffrich, Wilhelm Schreiber, and Frederick Kengle. Among those at Apple's may be mentioned William Rupp, Franklin Acker, Amandus Knerr, Cyrus Rhodes, and ——— Heilman.

Seiberling's School.—About the year 1834 a school was opened in the village of Mount Pleasant (now known as Seiberlingsville), and kept up with slight intermissions for upwards of fifty years. Probably the first teacher was Andreas Ring, and he was followed by several English teachers from Bucks county, Elias Keiper (of Allentown), Joe Pike, and others. Among the teachers who taught common school here were Charles Leiser, Lavinius Holben, and Emma Seiberling. Gottlieb Souders often taught summer school here.

Centre School.—This was started about the year 1830 in an old house on the premises of John Bleiler, tanner. The building was an old dwelling house that had become too dilapidated to be rented. The first two years the school was taught by Wilhelm Schreiber, a German. Then came Samuel Wagner. In 1834, the building having become too poor, the school was removed to another old house on the premises of Rev. John Helffrich, where it was kept up two years. The teacher was Orlando Knapp, an Englishman. In 1836 the school was again removed to an old hatmaker's shop on the premises of Jonathan Xander, where it was kept up two years, the teacher being Amandus Stettler. But the shop becoming too small, the school was moved to an old house at Holben's, Mr. Stettler continuing as teacher. During these ten years the furniture of the school consisted of the rudest kind. The teachers received a certain amount per day for each pupil, and most of them boarded around.

About the year 1840, a school district was organized by Henry Kramlich, Benjamin Bear, Andrew Hartman, Joseph Bear, Christian Kramlich, Benjamin Zimmerman, and others. Andrew Hartman gave the land, and Benjamin Bear and Christian Kramlich were the builders. The school house built was a stone structure, about three-fourths of a mile northeast of Hynemansville, on the road to Lyon Valley, and received the name Centre School House. It continued to be used for a period of thirty-three years, until the Seipstown school house was built in 1873, when the Centre school was discontinued.

The teachers who taught at Centre were William Wittemeyer (a German), William Tippe Cramer (an Englishman from Philadelphia), Frank Haines, Amandus Stettler, David Stettler, Elanius Kramlich, and several others prior to the adoption of the common schools in 1849. After the adoption of the common schools, Gottlieb Souders, an educated man from Germany taught here for many years, and the school had a very high standing. Franklin Bender and some others also taught here. O. D. Quier was the last teacher. During the time of the Township Institute, it was mostly held here. A debating society also held its meetings here during the winter of 1872 and 1873. The house has since been torn down, and not a vestige of it now remains to mark the spot.

Private Schools.—Besides the district and church schools, there were also a number of private schools at different periods in different parts of the township. Sometimes it happened that men of means had a large family of children, whom they wished to educate better than was usual, so they fixed up a room and got a teacher, and had school in their houses for their own and their neighbor's children. Among these were the first English schools. Sometimes, also, it happened that persons of some education got out of employment, and, finding a room at a suitable place, opened a school. Thus, about the year 1825 or 1826, Jesse Grim fixed up a room on his spring house, got teachers from abroad, and had English school kept for a period of about ten years. Killian Leiby, Jr., also taught English school in his house some time after the year 1800. This man was a sort of "Jack at all trades." He cultivated a small farm, was something of a horse doctor, taught music, and is said to have been an expert player on the violin. He was also a nailmaker, having made all the nails used in building the second Ziegel Church. In his later years he was known to go around casting tin spoons. At the time when he taught school he lived where George Kuhns now lives. Nathan Moser also taught school of this kind some time about the year 1830, in a small shop at his home, on lands now owned by David Stettler, about a quarter of a mile south by east of Claussville.

Henry Busse, the veteran teacher at the Weissenberg Church, taught school at one time at Feldi Werly's, in the kitchen. At Dewald Werly's there was school for several terms in the garret of an old distillery.

About a hundred years ago, one Martin Brechall, a Hessian, taught school at John Nicholas Werly's, in the kitchen. Here the bustle of the school room mingled with the hum of the busy housewife's spinning wheel. He seems to have been an expert with the rod as well as the pen. He wielded the former with an iron hand. His pupils were mostly grown-up boys and grown-up girls. They sat on both sides of a table, ranged through the middle of the kitchen, while he sat behind, with his back to the pupils and his face towards the wall. Yet whenever a pupil did the slightest mischief he was sure to be detected and punished without mercy. Occasionally some young sharper would think, "Well, now, he won't see me," and begin to make fun. The next moment "whack" came the hickory. For a long time the pupils could not see how he detected them so soon, but at last they found out that while he sat with his back turned towards them, he was looking at a mirror which reflected the whole room. He was an excellent German penman, and many of his pupils attended school merely for the purpose of learning to write. When he was not teaching he went around filling out baptismal certificates.

Rupp's School.—This district is in the eastern corner of the township. The school house stands on a hill once wholly overgrown with chestnut woods, but now mostly cleared. For a long time this district had no school. That part west of the school house belonged to the Moyer's district, while that part lying east of it belonged to a district of which the school house stood in Macungie, on the hill, above Fogelsville, at the public road leading from that place to Seipstown. The school house above Fogelsville must have been built a considerable time before the year 1800, for persons who attended the school there between the years 1810 and 1820 say that it was an old building then. It had two rooms and a cellar, and served also as a dwelling for the teacher at various times. When this school was removed to Fogelsville, this part of Weissenberg had no school until Nathan Moser opened his private school about 1830. This was not continued longer than a few years. While the Moyer's school was at Schumacher's, the children of this district attended there. About the year 1839 a school was opened in an old house on the farm of Samuel Heffner, the teacher of which was Joe Pike. A few years later it was removed to an old building on the farm of Jonas Kern (now known as the Frank L. Knerr farm), about three-eighths of a mile south of the present school house. This building was one that had been used as a distillery. The school room had no desks, but some old tables and a carpenter's bench, at which the pupils sat. Here the school was kept up until the spring of 1852.

The principal teacher before the common schools was John Hossey. Jonas Kunkle taught here for two terms, and Levi Haas one term. In the summer of 1852 a new school house was erected by the township, built by David Moser for $320. It was built by the side of the road, in the middle of a large forest, upon the land of Jonas Kern, hence the school was long known as Kern's school. It has been called Rupp's since 1880. It was a stone structure, 26 feet long and 22 feet wide. At first the desks were placed along the wall, but they have since been changed several times. The room was originally very cold, and many children had their feet frozen there, but it was repaired and made more comfortable. For the first two terms the school was taught by Jonas Kunkle. In the fall of 1854 it was taken in charge by Oliver Holben, since a professor in various European and American colleges; afterward engaged in a New York college, and a Virginia college and who died in 1910. He boarded in the school house, and slept in the garret. He taught one term, and was a successful teacher. The school then numbered some seventy pupils. The next teacher was Henry Knerr, one term. Then again Jonas Kunkle two terms, who was a good teacher for those times. Next followed Daniel Kuhns, one term, who became a country merchant at Weidasville, now retired at Allentown.

In the fall of 1859 the school was placed in the hands of James Schumacher. He was an educated and experienced teacher, but rather too severe, and often unreasonable in his punishment of pupils, hence he had great difficulties here. He taught one term. When the Civil War broke out he became a soldier, and gave his life as an offering to his country. The next teacher was George Gosman, a graduate of Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio, and an able teacher, but he soon fell into a misunderstanding with some of his patrons and had a vast amount of trouble. When the term was over, he went to Maryland, thence back to Ohio, and afterwards to Europe. He spent a considerable time in Switzerland, Italy, and Greece and served as professor in colleges at Rome, Paris, and Athens. He married in Switzerland, and returned to Tiffin, Ohio, where he practiced law for some time. When last heard from by his Pennsylvania friends he was in California. During the winter of 1861 and 1862 the school was taught by David Y. Shaub, of Hereford, Berks county, a professional teacher, who afterwards became a German Reformed minister. The next teacher was Eugene Haberacker, son of Dr. Haberacker, of Fogelsville, who taught one term. He is now a physician at Tyrone, Pa. Next came Milton Bernhard, of East Texas, one term.

In the fall of 1864 the school came in the charge of John Rupp, an attorney-at-law at Allentown, who taught three terms; then came Benjamin Rupp, who taught two terms. The last two were professional teachers, and both law students at the time. The next teacher was Solomon F. Rupp, one term. Then came Uriah Sieger and Owen D. Quier, each one term. In the fall of 1872 the school came in charge of Henry F. Rupp, by whom it was till 1890; then by Solomon Rupp until 1899; and since by different teachers.

Common Schools.—When the common schools were first established in Pennsylvania the people of Weissenberg were bitterly opposed to them; hence, whenever the question came up at the annual township elections, the people voted them down, though a few men like Joshua Seiberling made strenuous efforts to have the system adopted. But when the law was changed, so that the minority in a township could accept, things took a different course. In 1849, Joshua Seiberling drew up a petition asking the county court to appoint a board of school directors for the township. This petition was given into the hands of George Muse, who obtained some twenty signers to it. It was then presented to the court, when Joshua Seiberling, George Muse, Paul Bleiler, Frederick Wallace, George S. Eisenhard, and John Gehringer were appointed as a board of school directors. They organized a system of public schools for the township. The first school board was, however, in power but a short time, for at the next election they were all defeated, and an entirely new board was elected.

The second board consisted of Henry Werly, Jacob Walbert, Samuel Heffner, Daniel Leiby, John Griffee, and Jeremiah Derr.

The present board consists of Peter O. Fritz, Oliver Oldt, John Gehringer, Frank Bittner, and Llewellyn Danner.

School Houses.—During the first two or three years the common schools were held in the old buildings. In the year 1852 the township was divided into school districts, and, with few exceptions, new school houses were built during this and the few following years. These buildings were stone structures, poorly built by contract, about 20 by 30 feet in size, with rooms 8 feet high, and desks placed along the wall. Sometime later an independent district, called Grim's was formed out of parts of this and Macungie townships, also a joint district with Lynn. Here larger and better buildings were put up, made of brick.

In 1873 the Seipstown district was formed out of part of Rupp's (then called Kerns'), Zeigel Church, and Centre. The school house at Seipstown was built by contract by Peter Seip, of bricks, about 26 by 32 feet in size, with room about 11 feet high, furnished with board desks; since then improved furniture has been introduced.

At the Weissenberg Church the school was kept in a room in the dwelling house until 1877, when a new brick school house was built by contract by William Bear, one of the directors.

At Ziegel Church the school was also kept in a room of the dwelling house until 1878, when, a new dwelling house having been erected by the congregation, the old house was repaired, the school room enlarged, and furnished with patent desks.

Since 1880, the township has maintained eleven school houses and also one jointly with Lynn. In April, 1913, the schools, teacher, and attendance were as follows:

School.	Teacher.	Enrolled.
Rupp's,	Martha Sechler,	20
Seipstown,	Paul S. Christman,	38
Moyer's,	Annie Bear,	11
Ziegel Church,	Victor Ziegler,	29
Apple's,	Leroy E. Werley,	19
Smithville,	Constant Zimmerman, ..	20
Grim's,	Daniel W. Benedict, ...	12
Gackebach's,	Warren A. Loch,	18
Buck's,	O. R. Bittner,	23
Weissenberg Church, ..	George J. Ross,	24
Hynemansville,	Maurice H. Smale,	28
Miller's (with Lynn), ..	Elmer W. Fisher,	23

265

Terms and Salary.—When the common schools were first started in this township the term was fixed at four months, of twenty-four days to a month. The salary paid to the teachers was $18 per month in the winter of 1852-53. From that time it rose until 1860, when they received $28 per month. In the fall of 1863 the term was increased to five months, of twenty-two days each; two days of each month being granted to the teachers for holding institutes. At the close of the Civil War the salary had risen to from $40 to $45 per month, according to the grade of the certificate. This was during the times when Jonas Ettinger, Jacob Madtes, David Peter, Solomon Knerr, Henry German, Peter Seip, Charles Ziegler, and others formed the school boards.

During the war this township furnished its quota of soldiers by way of substitutes raised by the school board. These cost an immense amount of money, which had to be raised by means of taxes, called bounty taxes, levied and collected by the school board. For this the directors were blamed, though unjustly, and other men elected in their places; consequently the school suffered. The salary was decreased, the term diminished, and the institute stopped. After several years had elapsed the term was restored, the salary again increased, and through the efforts of some of the teachers the institute again started. Then the schools again flourished. At the beginning of the great panic the salary was $38 dollars per month for the professionals. In 1880 it dwindled down to $24 per month all through, and the institute died out. In 1884 the salary was $29 per month; it has since been raised to $50.

Teachers and Progress.—Before the common schools were organized the teachers were mostly Germans, and the schools nearly all conducted in German, but with the advent of the common schools came the English language. At first it was taught in its elements, that is, in a small way, but gradually it obtained a firm hold and crowded the German out. Before the common system the schools were few, and many children received only a few months' schooling. The common system made schools more numerous, and brought the children into them, for when a person had to pay taxes he wanted to have the value of his money. The teachers at first were no better qualified than before. Several amusing anecdotes will illustrate this. It is said that the first county superintendent for Lehigh once examined a German applicant for a school in a neighboring township. It was in arithmetic. First he gave him a problem in addition, then in subtraction, which he solved, but when it came to multiplication, there he stuck. The superintendent asked, "Mr. ———, did you never study this?" The teacher replied, "Das addiren und das subtrahendiren habe ich gelernt, aber das multipliciren und das diffidiren habe ich noch nie gekant,"—"Addition and subtraction I learned, but multiplication and division I never knew". Another one, on being asked, "Herr M———, was wissen sie von Grammar?" replied, "Ich hab mein lebtage nie gekramert."—"Mr. M———, what do you know of grammar?" "I never was a pedlar in my life").

Soon, however, young men began to go to seminaries, academies, and later to normal schools, to prepare for teaching; then the schools improved. The introduction of the English language into the schools was soon followed by the introduction of geography and grammar in some schools as early as 1852. The children who studied geography and grammar were, however, the exception, not the rule, as late as 1860. About that time mental arithmetic was introduced, followed ten years later by history. The teaching of grammar was not a very great success in most of the schools until the introduction of "Reed & Kellogg's Grammar," about 40 years ago. Afterward algebra, bookkeeping, and physiology were introduced into some of the more advanced schools. Occasionally some children studied German exclusively as late as 1870.

The Sunday schools and churches are still German; but the children, nearly all of whom learn to talk English, are beginning to understand less of the High German than of the English, because they learn everything in school in English, and talk the Pennsylvania German, which is a mixture of the two, into which they bring more English words every year.

Other Educational Institutions.—At every church, and at some of the school houses, there are kept up Sunday schools, which serve to prepare the children to become members of the church. There also have been at different times and places debating societies in the township.

Justices of the Peace.—Prior to 1840 the justices having jurisdiction over this territory were elected by districts, and their names will be found in the civil list of the general history.

	Commissioned.
Jonas Seiberling,	April 14, 1840
Geo. S. Eisenhart,	" 14, 1840
John W. Helffrich,	" 11, 1843
Joshua Seiberling,	" 15, 1845
Fred. A. Wallace,	" 11, 1848
Francis Weiss,	" 9, 1850
John H. Helffrich,	" 15, 1851
Francis Weiss,	" 10, 1855
Henry P. Grim,	" 13, 1858
Francis Weiss,	" 10, 1860
Joshua Seiberling,	" 30, 1861
Francis Weiss,	" 11, 1865
Joshua Seiberling,	" 17, 1866
Francis Weiss,	" 8, 1870
Jacob Lichty,	" 9, 1872
Francis Weiss,	March 13, 1875
Saml. W. Hacock,	" 21, 1876
Jacob Lichty,	" 19, 1877
Saml. W. Hacock,	April 9, 1881
Francis Weiss,	March 30, 1882
Solomon F. Rupp,	May, 1885

Samuel N. Hacock,	"	1886
Solomon F. Rupp,	"	1890
Oscar P. Werley,	"	1891
Solomon F. Rupp,	"	1895
Oscar P. Werley,	"	1896
Solomon F. Rupp,	"	1900
George J. Ross,	"	1901
Solomon F. Rupp,	"	1905
D. W. Benedict,	"	1906
Solomon D. Rupp,	"	1910
D. W. Benedict,	Dec.	1911

Private Graveyards.—Besides the church cemeteries there is a graveyard on the land of Jesse Grim, in Weissenberg township, which was started in 1801. The first persons buried there were Daniel and Catharine Grim, who died only eight days apart. Few persons are buried there. There is another on the farm of Benjamin Leiby, near Stein's Corner, 20 by 30 feet, on which seven graves are marked with stones and still visible. One of the head-stones has a plain inscription—C K 1763 (possibly Conrad Krim).

In the earlier times persons were buried on their own farms, but the places were not fenced as graveyards, and are generally not known at the present; and those which are known are farmed as any other land. There are places visible in some parts which are said to be Indian graves, particularly upon the lands of Jesse Grim.

Industries.—Grim's grist and saw mills are situated at New Smithville, on Silver Creek, on a tract of land surveyed Aug. 12, 1783, for John Gackenbach, Sr., who built a log grist mill and saw mill on it, and sold it, July 21, 1794, to John Gackenbach, Jr. Several years later (1797) he sold it to Abraham Smith, who had it till 1808, when he sold it to Gidion Grim, grandfather of the present owner. He built a stone dwelling house there in 1810, and a stone mill in 1817, both of which are still standing. From Gidion Grim the property passed to his son, Benjamin, from whom his sons, Jonathan, Gidion, and Willoughby, obtained it, the last named now owning it. The mill is still in a good condition considering that it was built nearly 100 years ago. It has a good water-power and runs all the year round. It has a good custom business. A saw mill has been used with the grist mill.

Kline's mill is situated on Schaeffer's Run, in the southern part of the township. About the year 1770, Peter Kline bought the property from Mr. Kleinert, and soon afterwards erected a log grist mill. A few years later the mill caught fire and burned down, and a second was erected (also built of logs), which stood until the year 1875, when a large frame mill was built in its place. The present mill is conveniently arranged, and has both water power and steam power. Peter Kline gave the property to his son, Lorentz, about the year 1800. Lorentz, having no children, gave the property to his nephew, Charles Kline. Charles divided his property between his children, and gave the mill to his son, William, who sold it to John Lackey, the present proprietor.

Holben's mill is situated on Willow Run, near the central part of the township. This is a very old mill and is supposed to have been built by Joseph Siegfried. It was built of logs and stood till 1845, when a new one was built, also of logs. About 110 years ago a dwelling house was built adjoining the mill, which is still standing. The mill is run by water power. It had many owners. The present owner and occupant is Jacob Herman.

Greenawald's mill is situated on Sweitzer Creek, in the western part of the township, and was built by Jacob Greenawald about 130 years ago. The second mill is there now, built of logs. The mill is run by water power. Its present owner is Frank B. Leiby. A saw mill was carried on there until recently, and a tannery for many years.

Bittner's mill is situated on Lynn Creek, in the eastern part of the township and was built about 130 years ago. It was used for making linseed oil afterwards; also, for making chop and cleaning clover seed. In 1881 a new mill was built, which is used only for milling. Flour and chop are made. The present owner is James M. Snyder.

Schuler's mill, on Spring Creek, in the southern part of the township, was used at one time for chopping, and also for cleaning clover seed. It was built by a man named Knauss about 1770. It was demolished fifty years ago.

Bear's saw mill is on Lyon Creek, in the eastern part of the township, probably built by Valentine or Paul Kramlich 130 years ago. The property is now owned by Edwin and Charles Bear.

There was in 1884 but one tannery in the township, viz: at Joseph Weiss'. It was started about 1855 and operated 50 years.

At one time there were also tanneries at Heffner's, Bleiler's, Balliet's, and Greenawald's, all started about 1810 or 1815, except Greenawald's, which was somewhat earlier. They were discontinued about 1870.

There were seven distilleries in Weissenberg township in 1885, viz: Jonas Bittner's, Levi Werly's, Penrose Werly's, Edwin Greenawald's, Jacob Holben's, Levi Weida's, and Fenstermacher's, and used for distilling apple-jack. There was a time when there were perhaps more than fifty in operation. They were most numerous from 1800 to 1825. Among the old distilleries that were once used, but now torn down we might mention those on lands now or late of Silas Kershner, Levi Knerr, Schuler & Hausman, Rupp's estate, Nathan Mohr, Jonas Diehl, Samuel Heffner, John Bleiler, Solomon Bear, William Gebhard, Jesse Grim, Solomon Grim, Daniel Gehringer, Solomon Knerr, estate of the late Paul Bleiler, Joseph and Reuben Holben. Those at Jesse Grim's and Daniel Gehringer's were used for distilling grain, and did an extensive business in their day. One hundred years ago apples were very plenty in this region, and much apple-jack was made. But for a time people neglected the planting of apple trees. The old trees wore out, apples became scarcer every year, and one after another the distilleries were torn down. Thus, what was at one time a large and lucrative business in this township fell, so that it is now hardly worth taking into consideration. At present people are again setting out trees, and orchards become more numerous, but distilling whiskey will hardly ever again reach the extent that prevailed from 80 to 100 years ago.

About 1893, Oliver J. Reitz established a distillery one mile north of Seipstown. For three years it was devoted to the making of apple brandy; then he added rye whiskey. It was carried on actively until 1913.

The "State Road" from Allentown to Harrisburg passes through the southern section of the township by way of Seipstown and New Smithville.

The total length of public roads in the township is 118 miles.

The telephone was first introduced here in 1908. The total length of lines in 1913 was estimated at 20 miles.

A carriage factory was carried on here from 1850 to 1880 by Charles Ihrie and did a flourishing business, employing from 10 to 15 hands.

Villages.—Seipstown, the principal village of Weissenberg, is situated on an eminence in the eastern part of the township, on the road leading from Allentown to Hamburg. It contains a store, tavern, church, school house, carriage shop, blacksmith shop, and about twenty dwelling houses. It was founded by John Seip, whose grandfather, Melchior Seip, came from Wurtemberg before 1747 and settled in what is now Upper Macungie township. John Seip bought the property from Henry Mohr in 1819, and moved there in the spring of 1820. At that time there was only an old log house standing on the south side of the road at what is now the central part of the village. About five years later he commenced keeping a temperance hotel and in 1850 obtained a license to keep a tavern; and then he built several new dwelling houses. In 1861 a store was opened by Thomas D. Mohr, and the postoffice was obtained by Peter Seip in the following year. Most of the houses were built before 1875. The present owner of the hotel property is Milton Herber. Edwin Herman carries on the store and Peter O. Fritz the saddlery. Carriage manufacturing is carried on by James M. Sechler. The school house was built in 1873, and the church (United Brethren) in 1876. The village at present has a population of 75. Most of the houses in the village are built of wood; few are of brick. The people belong mostly to the Reformed and Lutheran congregations. A few are United Brethren.

Zion's United Brethren in Christ.—This church was organized in 1874 by Rev. Samuel Etter. The original members were Nathan Mohr, his wife, Hannah, and two daughters, Elmena C. and Mary S., Levi Stettler and his wife, Hannah, Christian Seip, Jonas Walbert and his wife, Salome. The congregation was organized by the election of Levi Stettler as class leader, and Nathan Mohr as steward. Nathan Mohr, Levi Stettler, and Jonas Walbert were elected as trustees. In 1876 the church was built; the corner-stone was laid in July, by Samuel Etter and Benjamin Keck, and dedicated in December of the same year by Hezekiah Licht. It is near Seipstown. The succession of ministers has included Samuel Etter, Benjamin Keck, John Lowry, W. Uhler, Henry Y. Spaeth, and Ephraim Licht.

Hynemansville has a fine location near the central part of the township, on the road leading from Fogelsville to Lynnville. It consists of a store, hotel, and a few dwelling houses. This is the oldest village in the township, dating back to the French and Indian War. About 1740, Michael Bobst settled there, and soon afterward commenced to keep a tavern, his place being known as Bobst's Manor House. The Manor House and its proprietor figured extensively in the early history of this region. Being situated on the trail followed by the Indians in passing from the Lehigh to the Blue Mountains, and by the earliest settlers of this region, it became, long before any public roads were laid out, a highway of considerable use. When the main road from east to west, was laid out, the Manor House greatly prospered, and its proprietor became widely known. Later on, he also engaged in the mercantile business, and carried on both hotel and store. About 1800 he sold out to Frederick Hyneman, of Philadelphia, and Hyneman was then engaged for many years in the store business. During the time that he kept the store he rented the hotel, and it had many proprietors, among them Knerr, Dornblaser, Schick, Leiser, and Krasely. In 1845, Dr. Frederick A. Wallace, of Easton, took possession of the store, and kept it till 1850, when it passed into the hands of Elias Wetherhold. Now it is carried on by Wellington Hoffman, and the hotel is kept by Wilson A. Acker. It is the place where the elections of the township are held. They have been held here (except a few years when held at Seiberlingsville), since Weissenberg and Lynn became separate election districts. A post-office was established here July 22, 1862, and continued until 1905.

Seiberlingsville is situated on the road leading from Fogelsville to Tamaqua, about a mile north west from Hynemansville. It consists of a tavern, postoffice, and a few dwelling houses. It has a beautiful location, being situated on an elevated ridge, which gives a fine view of the surrounding country. About 1790, Jacob Mumi built a log house there in the woods. Soon afterward his son, Jacob, was licensed to keep a tavern and it has been kept up until now, the present landlord being John F. Fisher.

In 1825 a store was started by Gerhard and Frederick Belo. They also had at the same time a store at Tripoli, in Lynn township. Frederick attended the store at Mumi's. Joshua Seiberling came there in 1836, and changed the name to Seiberlingsville.

The name of the postoffice is Seiberlingsville, established Feb. 2, 1841. The first postmaster was Joshua Seiberling, who held the office upwards of 30 years. Dr. Frederick C. Seiberling was engaged in the practice of medicine here for ten years.

St. Paul's Church is situated in Seiberlingsville, in Weissenberg township. It is a Union Church, owned by Lutherans and Reformed. The foundation of the church was accomplished in the year 1857 by members of the Ziegel, Weissenberg, Lowhill, and Wesnersville congregations. After organizing it they purchased a piece of land and built a church, of which the cornerstone was laid the 7th of June, 1857, and in the following year it was dedicated.

The Reformed ministers of the congregation have been Rev. C. J. Hermann and his son, Alfred, J. O. Oswald and F. S. Loras. The Lutheran ministers have been the same that have served the Ebenezer, Jacksonville, Jerusalem, and St. Peter's Churches, namely, Owen Leopold, F. Zuber, J. Klein, H. S. Fegley and A. O. Ebert.

New Smithville is situated on Silver Creek, in the southwestern part of the township, and consists of two stores, tavern, grist mill, saw mill, and several dwelling houses. About 1812, Michael Reichert obtained license to keep a tavern there. The place had a postoffice—Weissenberg, established June 28, 1830, removed to Hynemansville in 1848. In 1850 the postoffice was again located here, where it remained until 1853.

Werlysville has a fine situation in the northern part of the township, on the road from Claussville to Lynnville. It contains a store, tavern, and a few dwelling houses. It was founded by Daniel Bittner about 70 years ago.

Buck Horn Hotel is in the eastern part of the township, on the road from Claussville to Kutztown. It was started by David Moser, who was licensed to keep a tavern in 1862. It was kept up forty years, then discontinued.

Mohr's Store is near Ziegel Church, in the southern part. A hotel was started there by Daniel Stettler about 80 years ago. It was purchased by Thomas D. Mohr in 1865. He started a store and kept both store and hotel for ten years, when he discontinued the hotel, and kept the store until he died. It is now carried on by Amandus Eli.

Fritz's Store is in the southwestern part, on the road from New Smithville to Hamburg, about one-quarter of a mile from the former place. Samuel Fritz kept store there from 1850 to 1900. He obtained a postoffice there in 1853, known as Weissenberg, and had it for 32 years, except one year (1868), when it was at Smithville.

Grim's Hotel was situated in the northwestern part, near the Lynn township line, on the road to Allemängel. It was a very old hotel stand; kept prior to 1781 (probably since about 1760). It used to be the election place for Lynn and Weissenberg townships in the long ago, both townships holding their elections at the same place, but depositing their votes in separate boxes. The elections were held there till 1817. The hotel was discontinued about the year 1812. Its proprietor was George Grim.

Bobst's Hotel.—About the year 1812, Philip Bobst was licensed to keep a tavern at what was Solomon Grim's place, on Silver Creek, in the western part of the township, on the road from Hynemansville to Hamburg, which was much used at that time, but now seldom traveled, as other and better roads have been laid out leading towards the same place. The tavern was kept by him till 1819, and then abandoned.

German's Store Stand.—At what is now Sweitzer's store stand Dewalt Werly was licensed to keep a tavern about the year 1830, and he kept it for about 20 years, when it was discontinued. About 60 years ago Henry German started store there, at what is called Sweitzers.

It is now carried on by James Sechler, and a post-office is there named Sweitzer, established in 1891.

Helffrich's Stand.—Henry Helffrich obtained a license to keep a tavern at what was then called Helffrich's Stand (now Stine's) prior to 1815. He was a jeweler by trade, which business he carried on in connection with the hotel. About 1838, Daniel Helffrich, a brother, built a store house there. Both have been discontinued.

California House.—This was a hotel stand in the northern part of the township. About 50 years ago Jonas Werly obtained a license to keep a tavern, but it was maintained less than 20 years.

Grandfathers' Clocks.—Benjamin Miller, of Germantown, made a "grandfather's clock" in 1775 for Peter Weiss, of Weissenberg, and upon his death, it became the property of his daughter, who married Andreas Stettler. It then passed to their son, Aaron, and in 1910 to Aaron's son, David, the present owner. It is in fine condition and keeps accurate time. It has been in the Stettler family for upwards of 100 years, in the vicinity of Seipstown. The face is of brass, with Roman figures. The accompanying illustration represents the inscription on the door leading to the pendulum.

Another "grandfather's clock," made in 1806 by Peter Hifft, is in the possession of Solomon F. Rupp, Esq. It was purchased by his father and it has been in the dwelling house on the homestead in Weissenberg for upwards of fifty years. It stands in a corner of the 'Squire's office as a highly appreciated memento of "ye olden times;" and the slow, regular, distinct tick-tock of its long pendulum, and clear, high, sharp tone of its bell in announcing the passing hours day after day constitute an interesting feature of domestic life in this country home.

1775

P W

CHAPTER XLVII.

WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP.

The township of Whitehall, as originally constituted, embraced all the territory in the three townships along the western bank of the Lehigh river, covering a distance of eight miles and extending westward an average width of six miles, which are named Whitehall, North Whitehall, and South Whitehall. These districts will be treated in a chronological manner; first as a whole until the first subdivision in 1810, then the respective sub-divisions.

ORGANIZATION.—Whitehall township, the most historic of all the townships in Lehigh county, was established in 1753. Among the manuscripts of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia there is one which is endorsed, "Petition for forming Whitehall township, presented at the first Court in Northampton county, and allowed. The lines were never run out." It reads as follows:

"To the Worshipful, the Justices of the County Court of Quarter Sessions, held at Easton for the County of Northampton, the 16 June, 1752.

"The humble Petition of Divers of the Inhabitants of the said County, situate in the back parts of Hydelberg & Macongy Sheweth—

"That there being a considerable number of Inhabitants settled in the back parts of Hydelberg & Macongy to a large extent and have not yet been formed into a Township,

"Your Petitioners therefore pray that a line may be run dividing your Petitioners from Hydelberg and Macongy to form a Township.

"And your Petitioners shall pray.

Jacob Yunt	John Shett
George Kern	Jacob Wirth
Lohrentz Guth	Reynard Benny
John Troxel

"Petition for a new township allowed, and Mr. Scull, Surveyor, to run out the lines."

The only record of the erection of the township among the records of the Court at Easton is this: "Now, March 20, 1753, Whitehall township is returned and allowed."

A large portion of the township was known by the name of Egypt, and in 1752, Michael Hoffman was appointed constable. There are returns of the Overseers of Roads in the township of Egypt, dated March 21, 1753, which are signed by Jacob Jund and Paul Palliet, as well as a return of the Overseers of the Poor of the same date, and signed by Jacob Kohler and Lawrence Good.

Other records of early township officials are as follows:

"White Hall Township, Sep. 20, 1757. I, Michael Troxel, Overseer of the Highways for aforesaid township, do return Peter Burkholder and Peter Troxel, Jr., to serve the said office the ensuing year. To the Hon. Court at Easton. Michael Drachsell."

"Mar. 20, 1762. Was Chused Jacob Coller & Daniel Traxel to be Supervisors of the roads or highways for the ensuing year from the Inhabitants of Whitehall Township. Jacob Coller."

"At the house of Peter Burkhalter, 20th of March, 1762, we the freeholders of Whitehall township chose Jacob Kohler and Daniel Traxel to be overseers of roads and highways of said township.

Lorentz Guth,
Christophel Baer."

A record identical with the above and of the same date is signed by Paulus Baliet, Peter Burkhalter, Johannes Griesemer, Leonhart Heuchel, Jacob Mueckli, Adam Deshler, and Jacob Coller.

In 1753, Godfrey Knauss was appointed constable of Whitehall township, which then embraced what now comprises the townships of Whitehall, North Whitehall, and South Whitehall, and a portion of the city of Allentown. The selection of the name was made by the English officials of the county, for the local name was "Egypt." The name is said to have originated from the fact that the land in Whitehall was more fertile and more corn was grown than in Lynn and Albany townships, which section was then called "Allemaengel," meaning, "all want."

In 1752, the territory comprising the townships of Lynn, Weisenberg, Heidelberg, Lowhill, and Whitehall was estimated to contain about 800 inhabitants. In 1762 Whitehall township contained 147; in 1772, 156, which increased to 248 in 1785, and the census of 1790 was 1,253.

In 1773, the township had 6,070 acres of cleared land, of which 1,223 acres were covered with grain. There were 117 farmers, two blacksmiths, one weaver, one tailor, and three tavern-keepers. Laborers received from ten to twelve cents a day. Houses rented at from eight to twelve dollars a year, including fuel and the use of several acres of land. Taxes were light; the tax on a 200-acre farm was from eighty cents to one dollar and a half. Between 1790 and 1800 the tax on an 80-acre farm, including a grist- and saw-mill was nine dollars.

The territory of the township was over seven miles square, and this was continued as a political body for purposes of local government until 1810. Then it was divided into two parts, the divisions being called North Whitehall and South Whitehall. The former contained over 27 square miles of territory with a population of 1,600, and the latter about 22 square miles with a population of 1,300. The line of division between the townships extended from the corner of Lowhill and Macungie townships on the west to the Lehigh river at Coplay on the east.

On Feb. 4, 1867, a petition, signed by taxpayers of the two townships, was presented to the Court of Quarter Sessions praying for the erection of a new township out of the two districts named, and three commissioners, George Blank, Martin Kemmerer and Robert Yost, were appointed to inquire into the matter. On Sept. 12, 1867, they presented their report with a favorable recommendation, which was submitted to the electors of the two districts, and on Oct. 8th the election returns were presented to the Court which showed a majority of the votes for the new township. On October 31st, the Court made a decree directing a new township to be erected and called East Whitehall; but on further consideration, the Court, on November 6th, changed the name to Whitehall.

The territory of the new township, as then laid out, was described as follows: Beginning at the N. W. corner of Allentown (10th and Liberty streets) thence North $34\frac{3}{4}^{\circ}$ West, to the stone barn of John Schwartz, in N. Whitehall; thence North $17\frac{1}{4}^{\circ}$ West to a stone; thence North 67° East to the Lehigh River on the north side of Yellis' Mill; thence along the Lehigh River to Allentown; thence along the City limits to the Jordan creek; and thence further along the City limits to the place of beginning; containing about twelve square miles. The estimated population was 3,100.

FIRST-CLASS TOWNSHIP.—In 1899, the Legislature of Pennsylvania passed an Act of Assembly, providing for two classes of townships, according to the U. S. Census, and such townships as were found to contain 300 population to the square mile of territory should be declared by the Court as Townships of the First Class, with certain specified municipal rights for supplying light, highways, sewers, by Commissioners at the public expense. The township was ascertained by the census of 1900 to contain a population of 7,935, or 661 to the square mile, and the Court declared it to be a township of the first class; and as such it has since been governed.

Township Commissioners.—The township having been declared a "First-Class Township," under the Act of 1899, and the following commissioners having been duly elected in November—Tilghman Weaver, Cementon; James F. Everett, Egypt; Franklin H. Kiechel, West Catasauqua; William F. Koehler, Fullerton, a preliminary meeting was held on Feb. 20, 1900, in West Catasauqua, at the hotel of Silas M. Newhard; and on March 5, the following of ficers were elected, and appointments made: Mr. Kiechel as president of the Board, Mr. Everett as vice-president, and Sylvester Peter as clerk. Edward H. Ritter was the treasurer chosen at the general election. The meetings were held at different places in the township, and finally the regular place was fixed in the township high-school at East Hokendauqua.

Supervisors.—The following road supervisors were the first appointees:

Upper District.—James M. Schneck.

Lower District.—Daniel Wright.

Middle District.—Henry Lazarus.

Hokendauqua District.—(No appointment).

Patrick J. McNally has served as clerk of the Board since April, 1905.

The first contract for lighting the streets of the populous districts of the township was made with the Cementon Electric Light and Power Co., in August, 1901.

Fire-plugs were directed to be placed in Cementon in November, 1913, as a protection against fire, the water being supplied under contract with the Clear Springs Water Co., and they will be established in the other towns of the township during 1914. A fire company was recently started at Cementon; also at Fullerton.

The total length of the several public roads in the township is fifty-seven miles.

The Board, in November, 1913, was constituted as follows:

Cementon.—O. E. Gruver, president.

Egypt.—A. L. Hoffman.

Hokendauqua.—Hugh Porter, vice-pres.

West Catasauqua.—Edgar J. Butz.

Fullerton.—Tilghman M. Snyder, P. J. McNally, secretary; Erwin W. Semmel, treasurer.

Board of Health.—The township commissioner established a Board of Health in 1902 for the regulation and control of the local sanitary affairs, and appointed Philip Storm as health officer who served until his death in May, 1913. He was succeeded by John Roberts.

LAND AND CREEKS.—The greater portion of the township is productive limestone under high cultivation. It is mostly level, excepting the northwestern portion where it is interspered with numerous hills. The most abundant mineral is limestone which is quarried in great quantities along the Lehigh river and also the Jordan and Coplay creeks. Cement is abundant and larger works have been established for its extensive manufacture. Deposits of iron ore have also been found, and some fire-clay.

The Lehigh river forms the eastern boundary line. The Jordan creek flows in a very winding course through the southerly section into the city of Allentown. The "Cave Spring" or "Helfrich's Spring," a great natural curiosity, is situated along its course a short distance north of the Helfrich grist mill; which was described in the Rupp History of Lehigh (1845, p. 131) as having been "near the mouth of a limestone cavern, two miles from the borough of Allentown, whose entrance was ten feet high, and whose depth into the hill had been penetrated 100 feet to a stream of water."

The Coplay creek (known formerly as Indian creek), enters the township from North Whitehall, and flows through the central portion by way of Egypt into the Lehigh river at Hoken-dauqua. It drains a large, fertile section of the township.

Mill creek flows along the entire length of the northerly boundary line and empties into the Lehigh river at the old Yellis Mill, half a mile above the village of Cementon.

Helfrich Spring.—A large spring of limestone water is situated in Whitehall township, along the Jordan creek, two miles north of Allentown, and its large and never-failing supply gave it distinction in the early history of the county. Before 1872, for seventy years it was known as the "Grim Spring," after the owner during that long period; and previously for thirty years as the "Blank Spring." Since 1872 it has been known as the "Helfrich Spring." The present owner, Sylvester Helfrich, inherited it, with a farm of 145 acres, from his father, Reuben Helfrich, in 1891.

Minsi Fishing Club.—In 1908, a fishing club was organized and named "Minsi," which secured the right of establishing a fishing-place at the Helfrich Spring. The necessary improvements were made to the large natural basin and many thousands of trout were supplied. The club has twenty-three members; the officers are: President, Frederick Krause; vice-president, N. E. Worman; secretary and treasurer, Charles Berger. The "Mickley Road" extends along the easterly side of the large basin, and numerous automobile parties riding by this route look with much interest at this picturesque locality.

EARLY SETTLERS.

Jacob Kohler appears to have been the first settler of Whitehall township, having located there between the year 1728 and 1730, according to the late Edward Kohler, Esq., in his historical sketch of Egypt. He was a native of Muehlhausen, Switzerland, and lived some time on the land before he secured title by a warrant dated July 15, 1734, for 150 acres, the first warrant in the township.

Nicolas Kern was also an early settler, having secured warrants dated Dec. 3, 1735, and Oct. 28, 1737, for 300 acres, which he deeded to Lawrence Guth in 1739.

John Eigender or Aigenter, who arrived at Philadelphia, Sept. 21, 1731, took up a warrant as early as Dec. 7, 1734, for 200 acres on the Jordan Creek, but lived there only a short time, and his land came into the possession of Jacob Wertz, and later the Horlacher family.

Michael Hoffman, who landed Oct. 11, 1732, received 150 acres by warrant Sept. 22, 1737.

Peter Troxell, who arrived Aug. 17, 1733, settled here not long after his arrival, for in September, 1734, his son David was baptized by Rev. Boehm, and he secured his first warrant for 300 acres on Oct. 15, 1737. On the same ship came others who settled in the township; John Lichtenwalner, who received his first warrant for 100 acres on Sept. 6, 1738; George Ruch, who received 100 acres on Oct. 13, 1737; and Ulrich Flickinger, on Jan. 19, 1743, secured 150 acres. On Aug. 28, 1733, arrived Daniel Roth who applied for 150 acres on May 25, 1737; John Jacob Mickley, who secured 76½ acres on Nov. 5, 1745, and John Jacob Schreiber, who warranted 150 acres on Sept. 22, 1740.

On Sept. 28, 1733 Ulrich Burghalter, Abraham Wotring, and John Nicholas Saeger landed at Philadelphia. Burghalter secured 160 acres of the best land of the township on Feb. 4, 1743; Wotring secured 200 acres on Oct. 16, 1738, and Saeger warranted 250 acres on March 28, 1737.

Frederick and Michael Newhard arrived Sept. 26, 1737, the former secured 203½ acres on Feb. 1, 1742, on the same date that George Kern secured 203 acres, and the latter (Michael) secured 200 acres on June 14, 1738.

John Troxel, who arrived Aug. 30, 1737, took up 250 acres on Oct. 28, 1737, but by non-compliance, it became void and his son Peter Troxell secured it by warrant Jan. 26, 1743.

Lorentz Guth arrived Sept. 19, 1738, and the following 27th of February purchased 300 acres from Nicholas Kern.

Jacob Showalter, a Mennonite, settled along the Lehigh at an early date.

The above instances show that in most of the cases land warrants were secured three or four years after the arrival in America. A number of the early settlers spent the first few years in Philadelphia (Montgomery) county before going into the wilderness farther north. It required much courage to venture into a strange country where there was danger of attacks by hostile Indians and wild beasts. History does not record any attacks by Indians in Whitehall prior to 1763, though it is probable that the upper part of the township was visited by them from 1755 to 1757, when a large number of the inhabitants of Heidelberg and Lynn townships were killed or taken prisoner.

The accompanying map, with the following description, shows how the tracts of the first settlers were located.

Abraham Wotring, the greater part of whose land lay in the present North Whitehall township, secured 201 acres and 26 perches by warrant Oct. 16, 1738. He died Nov. 28, 1752, and a portion of the land came into the possession of his son-in-law, John Schneider. On Oct. 8, 1763, Schneider with his wife and three children were killed by Indians and their home was burned. Nicholas Marks, Schneider's son-in-law, secured the land and in 1780 sold it to George Remely of Heidelberg township. Remely's heirs sold it in 1801 to George and Henry Frantz. The greater part is now owned by descendants of Henry Frantz.

John Jacob Mickley secured 76½ acres on Mill creek by warrant on Nov. 5, 1745. In 1752 and 1755 he secured additional tracts adjoining Wotring's land on the west and Ulrich Flickinger's on the east. In 1768 he owned 50 acres of cultivated and 195 acres of uncultivated land. On this tract, two of his children were killed by Indians in 1763, on the same day as the Schneider family. John Martin Mickley, second son of John Jacob, secured the greater part of this land after his father's death in 1769, and purchaser 27 a. 97 p. from Peter Troxell on Oct. 8, 1771, and 16¾ acres from his brother, Jacob Mickley, on Jan. 6, 1786. On Oct. 15, 1794, Martin Mickley sold the homestead and 308 acres to Jacob Dinkey for £1,900, and removed to Adams county.

Ulrich Flickinger took up a tract of 160 acres on Mill creek on Jan. 19, 1743, and on Oct. 24, 1752, secured another tract of 142 acres adjoining. In 1768, only 60 acres of this land was cultivated. After his death in 1792 his son Peter secured the land and sold it; then with his brothers, Jacob and George, removed from the township.

George Ringer warranted a tract of 86¾ acres at the mouth of Mill Creek on Dec. 29, 1748; on which, in later years, Yellis' mill was located. He subsequently secured additional tracts warranted by Jacob Alleman in 1748, on which was located a large spring and Michael Kelchner secured several tracts from 1754 to 1772 adjoining lands of Flickinger, Ringer, and Jacob Kohler.

West of Kelchner's land and south of the Mickley tract was located the large plantation of John Peter Troxell. The first warrant for this was taken up by his father, John Troxell, on Oct. 28, 1737, for 250 acres. The requirements not having been complied with, the warrant became void, and his son secured it Jan. 26, 1743. On this tract he built a large stone house in 1756 which still stands. On May 28, 1768, he sold all his land (410 acres) to Peter Steckel for £1,420, and removed to Maryland.

Peter Steckel was a resident of Whitehall township as early as 1742, residing for some years on a tract further north. In 1768, when he purchased the Troxell farm, 150 acres of it were cultivated. He was one of the most progressive farmers of his day and constructed an Archimedes' screw to water the higher ground on his land. He died in 1784. His sons, Henry and John, received the land by their father's will. His son Jacob received 20 acres and £50; his sons, Daniel and Peter, £200, and each of his four daughters, £50. The old stone homestead was in the possession of the Steckel family over 100 years.

Adjoining the above mentioned tract on the west was the land of John Nicholas Saeger, who warranted 250 acres on March 28, 1737, and a tract of 40½ acres on Jan. 24, 1739. The greater part of this land is located in North Whitehall, owned by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company. John Nicholas Saeger died in 1762, and bequeathed his land to his two eldest sons, Samuel and Christian, who were each taxed in 1768 for 65 acres of cultivated and 85 acres of uncultivated land. The old homestead came into the possession of Nicholas Saeger, son of Samuel, whose son, Gen. Joseph K. Saeger, became the owner after the death of his father, Nicholas, in 1829, and Gen. Saeger bequeathed it to his son, the late Eli J. Saeger.

South of the Saeger tract, Ulrich Burkhalter secured 300 acres by purchase from Richard Hockley on Feb. 4, 1743, which he conveyed by deed of gift to his only son, Peter, on Nov. 9, 1754. He died in 1762. His son secured additional land and in 1768 was the owner of 130 acres of cultivated and 240 acres of uncultivated land. This land, considered by old settlers as the finest in the township, later came into the hands of the Breinig family.

Adjoining the Burkhalter tract on the east was the first settlement in the township, that of Jacob Kohler, who secured 150 acres by warrant July 15, 1734, the earliest dated warrant in the township. On Oct. 28, 1737, he secured an additional 100 acres. In 1755 he built the first grist-mill on his land along the Coplay creek. On the east bank of the creek, near the southern line of Kohler's land, was the wigwam of an Indian, who lived for some years on Kohler's land, and whose family were on friendly terms with the white settlers. On August 24, 1769, Jacob Kohler deeded his land to his two sons, (Peter, the elder, receiving 155 acres, and the mill property, and Jacob receiving 193 acres). The mill and considerable land are still owned by the family. Lewis Kohler, the present owner, received it from his father, Aaron, who received it from his father, Peter, son of Peter Kohler, Sr., and descendants of Jacob Kohler, Jr., still own portions of the original tract.

South of the Kohler land lay the 203-acre tract which George Kern warranted on Feb. 1, 1742. This land remained in the Kern family for many years. The greater part is now owned by a cement company. Adjoining this land on the south was the 203½-acre tract which Frederick Newhard secured by warrant of Feb. 1, 1742. A few years later he sold it to Adam Deshler, who erected a stone dwelling in 1760 which was used as a place of refuge in the Indian troubles and called Fort Deshler. This is still standing. He also erected a grist-mill, which he conducted some years, the site being unknown. Adam Deshler secured additional land and in 1768 owned 130 acres of cultivated land and 258 acres of uncultivated land. He died in 1781 and his son, Adam, Jr., became the owner of the homestead. He died in 1790, and his only son, David, became the owner. David Deshler's son, James, became the owner at his father's death in 1827. James Deshler died in 1842. His sons were Jacob G., D. J. F., and Peter W. H. The property passed through several hands and in 1899 100 acres of it were sold to the American Cement Company.

Between the Kohler, Kern, and Deshler tracts and the Lehigh River, Jacob Showalter settled on a large tract of 450 acres between 1750 and 1752. He was a member of the Mennonite church on the east side of the Lehigh, where a number of families of that faith had settled. There is no record of a warrant for the land and as Showalter had no title, John Moore, sheriff of the county, sold a half interest in the tract to William Allen, on June 20, 1759, and on Dec. 12, 1759, Allen purchased the other half interest from Showalter. A few days later on Dec. 31st, Allen sold the tract to the Showalter family, divided into smaller tracts, as follows: Joseph Showalter, 150 acres; John Showalter, 100 acres; Jacob Showalter, 100 acres; and Peter Basler, a son-in-law, 100 acres. The amount in each case was £169. Joseph Showalter sold his tract on April 1, 1771 to Conrad Leisenring. John Showalter, at the same time, sold his tract to Christopher Kern, and Jacob Showalter, Jr., sold his tract to George Koehler. The Showalters then removed to Lancaster county, except the father, who resided with his son-in-law, Peter Basler, until his death in 1773, when Basler sold his tract of 100 acres to Philip Jacob Schreiber and also removed to Lancaster county. Jacob Showalter, Sr., had among other children, sons Valentine, Peter, and Joseph; and a daughter married to Henry Funk.

Conrad Leisenring secured a tract of 62½ acres adjoining on the north which had been warranted by Peter Showalter in 1752. The first house on this tract was built of logs by Jacob Showalter, Sr., about 1752, and stood between the spring-house and the small house in the rear of the larger house. The spring house under which there is a very large spring, is said by some to have been built by the Showalters, and this is still standing. Conrad Leisenring died Aug. 14, 1781, and on April 18, 1789, his eldest son, Conrad, Jr., purchased from the heirs the entire estate of 212 acres, paying to each of his six brothers and sisters, £70. He demolished the house, and in 1794 erected a large stone barn, in which the family resided until the large stone house then in course of erection, was completed in 1796. This is still standing.

Across the road is an old red building, partly log and partly stone, which is very old. Daniel Leisenring resided in this building, and here his son, William, was born in 1818. The small stone house in the rear of the larger dwelling was built in 1816 by Conrad Leisenring, Jr., for his mother, Sybilla, as directed by his father in his will dated in 1781, the year of his death. A box wood plant stands alongside the house, which was planted by Catharine, wife of Conrad, Jr., in 1816. Another building formerly stood on this tract south of the dwelling-house and was used first as a distillery and later as a tannery. The old stone barn was converted into dwellings. In 1820, Conrad Leisenring, 2d, conveyed to his son, Conrad, 3d, 87 acres of his land with the use of the stone building occupied as a distillery during his life only, which was located

the and ner ter to-as hn oo es.
oad
e, ob
r. er is 3. p r r
;
y n e
y

130 acres of cultivated and 240 acres of uncultivated land. This land, considered by old settlers as the finest in the township, later came into the hands of the Breinig family.

Adjoining the Burkhalter tract on the east was the first settlement in the township, that of Jacob Kohler, who secured 150 acres by warrant July 15, 1734, the earliest dated warrant in the township. On Oct. 28, 1737, he secured an additional 100 acres. In 1755 he built the first grist-mill on his land along the Coplay creek. On the east bank of the creek, near the southern line of Kohler's land, was the wigwam of an Indian, who lived for some years on Kohler's land, and whose family were on friendly terms with the white settlers. On August 24, 1769, Jacob Kohler deeded his land to his two sons, (Peter, the elder, receiving 155 acres, and the mill property, and Jacob receiving 193 acres). The mill and considerable land are still owned by the family. Lewis Kohler, the present owner, received it from his father, Aaron, who received it from his father, Peter, son of Peter Kohler, Sr., and descendants of Jacob Kohler, Jr., still own portions of the original tract.

South of the Kohler land lay the 203-acre tract which George Kern warranted on Feb. 1, 1742. This land remained in the Kern family for many years. The greater part is now owned by a cement company. Adjoining this land on the south was the 203½-acre tract which Frederick Newhard secured by warrant of Feb. 1, 1742. A few years later he sold it to Adam Deshler, who erected a stone dwelling in 1760 which was used as a place of refuge in the Indian troubles and called Fort Deshler. This is still standing. He also erected a grist-mill, which he conducted some years, the site being unknown. Adam Deshler secured additional land and in 1768 owned 130 acres of cultivated land and 258 acres of uncultivated land. He died in 1781 and his son, Adam, Jr., became the owner of the homestead. He died in 1790, and his only son, David, became the owner. David Deshler's son, James, became the owner at his father's death in 1827. James Deshler died in 1842. His sons were Jacob G., D. J. F., and Peter W. H. The property passed through several hands and in 1899 100 acres of it were sold to the American Cement Company.

Between the Kohler, Kern, and Deshler tracts and the Lehigh River, Jacob Showalter settled on a large tract of 450 acres between 1750 and 1752. He was a member of the Mennonite church on the east side of the Lehigh, where a number of families of that faith had settled. There is no record of a warrant for the land and as Showalter had no title, John Moore, sheriff of the county, sold a half interest in the tract to William Allen, on June 20, 1759, and on Dec. 12, 1759, Allen purchased the other half interest from Showalter. A few days later on Dec. 31st, Allen sold the tract to the Showalter family, divided into smaller tracts, as follows: Joseph Showalter, 150 acres; John Showalter, 100 acres; Jacob Showalter, 100 acres; and Peter Basler, a son-in-law, 100 acres. The amount in each case was £169. Joseph Showalter sold his tract on April 1, 1771 to Conrad Leisenring. John Showalter, at the same time, sold his tract to Christopher Kern, and Jacob Showalter, Jr., sold his tract to George Koehler. The Showalters then removed to Lancaster county, except the father, who resided with his son-in-law, Peter Basler, until his death in 1773, when Basler sold his tract of 100 acres to Philip Jacob Schreiber and also removed to Lancaster county. Jacob Showalter, Sr., had among other children, sons Valentine, Peter, and Joseph; and a daughter married to Henry Funk.

Conrad Leisenring secured a tract of 62½ acres adjoining on the north which had been warranted by Peter Showalter in 1752. The first house on this tract was built of logs by Jacob Showalter, Sr., about 1752, and stood between the spring-house and the small house in the rear of the larger house. The spring house under which there is a very large spring, is said by some to have been built by the Showalters, and this is still standing. Conrad Leisenring died Aug. 14, 1781, and on April 18, 1789, his eldest son, Conrad, Jr., purchased from the heirs the entire estate of 212 acres, paying to each of his six brothers and sisters, £70. He demolished the house, and in 1794 erected a large stone barn, in which the family resided until the large stone house then in course of erection, was completed in 1796. This is still standing.

Across the road is an old red building, partly log and partly stone, which is very old. Daniel Leisenring resided in this building, and here his son, William, was born in 1818. The small stone house in the rear of the larger dwelling was built in 1816 by Conrad Leisenring, Jr., for his mother, Sybilla, as directed by his father in his will dated in 1781, the year of his death. A box wood plant stands alongside the house, which was planted by Catharine, wife of Conrad, Jr., in 1816. Another building formerly stood on this tract south of the dwelling-house and was used first as a distillery and later as a tannery. The old stone barn was converted into dwellings. In 1820, Conrad Leisenring, 2d, conveyed to his son, Conrad, 3d, 87 acres of his land with the use of the stone building occupied as a distillery during his life only, which was located

MAP OF WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP SHOWING
FIRST LAND GRANTS
COMPILED FROM RECORDS
FURNISHED BY
THE LATE R. J. NEWHARD
& CHAS. ROBERTS
BY
L. J. H. GROSSART, C. E.
ALLENTOWN, PA.
SCALE 100 P. 1" = 1 MILE 1-19-04.

on land conveyed to his son, Daniel, with free ingress, egress, and regress, and the right to take water out of the springs and lead the same to convenient ditches. The Whitehall Portland Cement Company and the town of Cementon are located on this land.

South of the Showalter land, John Jacob Schreiber secured 250 acres along the Lehigh by warrants in 1740 and 1749. His son, Philip Jacob Schreiber, added to this, and patented on Feb. 10, 1763, 402 acres and 60 perches. In 1768 he had 90 acres of cultivated and 310 acres of uncultivated land. In 1773 he bought the Basler tract of 100 acres adjoining on the north. The house he erected in 1799 still stands. His son, Jacob, received the northern half and his son, Daniel, the southern. The borough of Coplay and the works of the Coplay Cement Company are on this tract.

Michael Hoffman secured as early as 1737 a warrant for 150 acres which was situated south of the Deshler tract and west of the Schreiber land. In 1744 he patented a tract of 163 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres and in 1763 an adjoining tract of 94 acres. In 1768 he owned 80 acres of cultivated and 270 acres of uncultivated land. He died in 1786, leaving two sons, John and Michael, who received his land, a portion of which was located in the present North Whitehall.

Christian Bertsch patented a tract of 253 acres in 1786, located west of Hoffman's land; and adjoining Bertsch's land was a tract of 213 acres owned by Daniel Roth, who secured it by warrants from 1743 and later.

Adjoining this on the east was Jacob Mickley, Jr.'s, land, who lived here as early as 1762, having left the homestead on Mill creek. In 1789 he was the owner of 278 acres on which the village of Mickley's is now located.

A tract of 550 acres between Mickley's land and the Lehigh river was granted by William Penn to William and Margaret Lowther on Dec. 1, 1733. On April 1, 1754, Nicholas Scull, as sheriff, sold this tract to William Parsons, who, on April 15th, sold it to Richard Peters. On April 16th Peters sold it to William Allen and Joseph Turner. On Dec. 4, 1761, Allen and Turner sold 187 acres of it to Adam Deshler for £339, who sold 100 acres of it to Jacob Mickley on May 7, 1762. The Thomas Iron Company eventually became the owner of 185 acres.

In 1785, Henry Biery owned a tract of 200 acres on Coplay creek, adjoining the Mickley tract. On this tract still stands the old stone school-house, in which Mickley's church congregation was organized. At the mouth of Coplay creek, Jacob Hartman owned a tract of 25 acres and here he kept a flat-bottomed boat, with which he ferried passengers over the river as early as 1785.

Adam Miller owned a tract of 292 acres along the Lehigh, adjoining the Biery and Hartman lands, parts of which he patented in 1788, 1789, and 1801. He died in 1815, aged 91 years. His descendants owned the land many years and West Catasauqua is located on the tract.

Michael Kolb owned a tract of 167 acres west of Miller's land, of which he had 45 acres cultivated in 1768. He and his wife died a few weeks apart in 1812, and his daughters received the land, two of whom married into the Roth family.

Adjoining the Kolb land, Daniel Newhard patented a tract of 86 acres in 1788. He died a bachelor in 1801, and his estate, amounting to 125 acres, was valued at £937. His brothers and sisters, and nephews and nieces were his heirs, and his niece, Elizabeth, wife of George Shick, and daughter of his elder brother, Christopher Neuhard, who was killed in the Revolution, accepted the land at the valuation.

West of this tract was the Godfried Knauss tract, which was first taken up by Daniel Roth, Sr., in 1737. Godfried Knauss, Sr., became the owner in 1761, and by 1768 he had 100 acres cultivated and 200 acres uncultivated. On this tract he built in 1769 a stone house which was recently torn down. The line between Whitehall and South Whitehall townships runs through this land. He died in 1777; then his son, Godfrey, Jr., secured the land north of the Jordan creek and that south of the creek was sold to Judge Peter Rhoads. Descendants of the Knauss family still own a considerable portion of the land.

One of the most interesting tracts in the township is that warranted by John Aigander in 1734 and 1737, containing 318 acres, along the Jordan creek. Jacob Wertz secured it in 1749 and sold it Sept. 4, 1751 to George Hoffman, who sold it, Jan. 26, 1754, to Michael Harlacher for £250. Harlacher sold 134 acres to Daniel Harlacher, on Oct. 9, 1766 for £275, and 103 acres to his son-in-law, Christopher Blank, on Oct. 10th, for £225. The western portion of the tract was secured by Conrad Marks in 1784, whose descendants still own a portion of it.

Peter Blank, son of Christopher, secured 120 acres of the tract in 1790. In 1799 his son-in-law, John Helfrich, secured the land and the greater part is still owned by his descendants. On this tract is the famous "Indian cave," and numerous large springs, as well as the Helfrich grist-mill, the old school house near the bridge, and the site of an ancient cemetery, where only one tomb stone remains, dated 1775.

Adjoining this tract on the east was Stephen Snyder's land, part of which, 85 acres, he purchased from Jacob Yundt, in 1750, and 183 acres of it he patented in 1786. He and his wife (who was a daughter of Frederick Newhard), died a week apart, in March, 1796. Fullerton is located on a part of this land and John Diefenderfer subsequently became the owner of a portion of it.

Jacob Yund secured by warrants dated May 9, 1750 and June 12, 1750, a tract of 278 acres extending from "Biery's Bridge," along the Lehigh, to Snyder's tract. In 1757 he built a stone house on the tract which stood until a few years ago. He died in 1760 and his son George became the owner in 1771. In 1768 his widow owned 50 acres of cultivated land and 175 acres of uncultivated land. George Yundt died in 1828 and the property was divided among his five sons, John, Abraham, Daniel, George, and Jonas.

South of the Snyder land was a tract of 143½ acres which Giles Windsor sold May 13, 1768, to Francis Hartman, who sold it on Jan. 1, 1776 to Peter Newhard and Abraham Sterner. Newhard sold his portion to Sterner on Jan. 20, 1785, whose descendants still own a portion of the land.

Frederick Newhard purchased from John Eastburn on Nov. 28, 1746, a tract of 250 acres adjoining the Aigander tract, and land of William Allen. He secured an adjoining tract of 65 acres. After his death in 1765, his widow was assessed on 90 acres of cultivated land and 210 acres of uncultivated land. His sons, Frederick and Laurence became the owners of the land, and in 1790 Laurence built a stone grist-mill which still stands.

Francis J. Newhard, a lineal descendant of Frederick, and Samuel J. Koehler (whose wife was a descendant of Laurence Newhard), still own a large part of the original tract. The balance of the land included in Whitehall township was owned by William Allen for many years and was not settled upon until a comparatively recent date.

TAX LIST OF WHITEHALL TOWNSHIP, 1762.

Samuel Seger, Collector.

	£		£
Felix Arner,	10	David Deshler, ...	24
Paul Balliet,	50	Jacob Dormeyer, ..	5
Joseph Balliet,	5	Andreas Dormeyer, ..	5
Peter Born,	5	Adam Deshler,	42
Peter Basler,	10	Henry Eal,	6
John Berret,	7	Paul Eberhard, ...	5
Christopher Bear, ...	24	Henry Funk,	10
Peter Burkholter, ..	30	Ulrich Flickinger, ..	16
Christopher Blanck, ..	16	Peter Flickinger, ..	5
Peter Bechler,	4	Michael Foltz,	6
William Creutz, ..	7	John Gressman, ...	7

	£		£
Peter Good,	12	Yost Meyer,	6
Paul Gross,	5	Jacob Mickly,	16
George Good,	10	Nicholas Marx, ...	4
Laurence Good,	99	Frederick Neuhart, ..	22
(Abated 10)		Henry Nehlich,	6
Christopher Gong- wear,	6	Michael Neuhart, ...	18
Conrad Grob,	14	Andreas Ohlwine, ..	6
Conrad Grumbach, ..	7	Peter Reader,	6
Adam Geibel,	6	George Ringer,	8
John Greissemer, ...	20	Michael Ringer, ...	7
Conrad Grack,	6	George Ruch,	13
Michael Hoffman, ...	28	Peter Rhoads,	6
Martin Harter,	6	Daniel Roth,	8
Carl Hornberger, ..	7	John Roth,	7
George Henry,	5	Frederick Reitz, ...	7
Jacob Hussing,	6	Stephen Shnyder, ...	9
George Hoffman, ..	7	Conrad Schlosser, ..	5
Adam Haberle,	14	John Showalter, ..	12
Peter Hoffman,	8	Joseph Showalter, ..	14
Leonard Heüchel, ..	9	George Steary,	8
Peter Herr,	12	Martin Samel,	5
Nicholas Hertzog, ..	6	John Sieger,	7
Henry Heffelfinger, ..	16	George Smith,	6
David Haan,	6	Michael Struby,	12
George Houser,	5	Jacob Son,	5
Jacob Härdel,	6	John Shnyder,	16
Daniel Horlacher, ...	20	Peter Steckel,	25
Michael Kelchner, ..	7	John Shad,	15
John Ehrenhard Knappenberger, .	5	Samuel Saeger,	12
George Kop,	7	Christian Saeger, ...	12
George Knauss,	30	Daniel Schneider, ..	9
Peter Keass,	5	Peter Schlosser, ...	8
Peter Keppel,	4	Adam Schneck,	9
Joseph Kennel,	10	Jacob Schnerr,	12
Jacob Kennel,	6	Michael Schnerr, ...	5
Godfried Knauss, ...	22	Jacob Schreiber, ..	20
Jacob Kohler,	45	Leonard Steininger, ..	20
George Kehler,	8	Henry Shnyder, ...	4
Jacob Kern,	28	Jacob Showalter, ..	14
Adam Koch,	7	Henry Turny,	12
Peter Kohler,	9	Paul Tussing,	14
George Leibenguth, ..	11	Peter Traxel,	45
Adam Miller,	8	Nicholas Traxel, ...	16
Nicholas Meyer, ...	9	Michael Traxel, ..	16
Jacob Mickly, Jr., ...	10	Daniel Traxel,	16
Jacob Miller,	10	Peter Traxel,	18
Jacob Moritz,	9	Jacob Wittmer,	8
Magdalena Meyer, widow of Martin,	6	Ulrich Würth,	10
Adam Maurer,	12	Jacob Wolf,	7
Anthony Mies,	4	Samuel Wotring, ..	10
		Dietemer Werner, .	6
		Jacob Yound's wid- ow,	10

Singlemen.

Philip Diel.	Samuel Muse.
Jacob Flickinger.	George Ruch.
Nicholas Fox.	George Schreiber.
Jacob Faar.	Daniel Showalter.
Daniel Good.	Valentine Showalter.
Engelhard Hoffman.	Christopher Shnyder.
Andreas Jänky.	Jacob Sager.
Michael Kolb.	Nicholas Sager.
Jacob Kolb.	Leonard Sebold.
Jacob Kohler.	George Steinger.
Dewald Kennel.	Martin Schnerr.
Jacob Meyer.

INDUSTRIES.

The following industries have been carried on in the township outside of the towns:

THOMAS IRON-WORKS.—The large iron furnaces at Hokendauqua were established in 1854. The first meeting in this behalf was held at Easton, February 14th, which was attended by the following persons:

Catasauqua —	New Jersey —
David Thomas	Ephraim Marsh
Samuel Thomas	William H. Talcott
Mauch-Chunk —	Easton —
E. A. Douglass	Dr. Henry Detwiler
Bethlehem —	Peter S. Michler
Chas. A. Luckenbach	John Drake
Michael Krause	Derrick Hulick
John P. Scholl	Russel S. Chidsey
New York —	John T. Knight
Benjamin G. Clark	Daniel Whitsell
	Carman F. Randolph

The capital was fixed at $200,000, and the first Board of Directors comprised the following members:

E. A. Douglass	John Drake
William H. Talcott	Russel S. Chidsey
Ephraim Marsh	C. A. Luckenbach
Peter S. Michler

And Samuel Thomas was selected to superintend the erection of the proposed furnaces.

Besides the persons mentioned, the following also became subscribers in making up the total subscription of 4,000 shares, $200,000:

Jacob Singmaster	B. I. Leedom
John Thomas	Augustus Wolle
William Reed	I. V. Williamson
John Brown	Thomas Butz

Additional subscribers during the year 1855 were:

Joshua Hunt	John D. Locke
Charles H. Dexter	John F. Starr
Wm. H. Sayre, Sr.	Enoch Locke
Valentine W. Weaver	Augustus G. Richey
Thomas McKeen	John W. Quincy.
Enoch Ketcham

The site selected was at Hokendauqua, where two farms were purchased by David Thomas, the property of Thomas Butz, containing together 185 acres, situated along the west bank of the Lehigh river, and he was elected as the trustee to hold this real estate and others afterward acquired, and convey any portion as occasion might require. Total area purchased became 294 a., 65 p., at cost of $120,502.

The work of erecting two furnaces was begun on March 1st, and at the same time a town was laid out to accommodate the employees at the works. The furnaces were substantially built, each 60 feet high, and 18 feet bosh, with two blowing engines, each 500-horse power, and equipped with the proper appliances.

No. 1 Furnace was put in blast June 1, 1855, and No. 2 on October 23d. They were a complete success from the first blast, and the pig metal was equal to the best in the country; and their operation continued though shortly afterward a great panic prevailed throughout the country. Indeed their successful operation was so great that two additional furnaces were erected in 1861 and 1862 to meet the demands of their increasing trade, called No. 3 and No. 4; each 55 feet high and 18 feet bosh, but afterward made 65 feet high, which were equipped with two large blowing-engines.

In 1872 and 1873, furnaces No. 5 and No. 6 were added to the Hokendauqua plant, each 60 feet high and 18 feet bosh.

In 1867, two furnaces erected at Lockridge (Alburtis) became the property of the Thomas Iron Co., and were called No. 7 and No. 8.

In 1882 this company bought the Keystone furnace at Chain Dam near Easton (63 feet high and 16 feet bosh), and was called No. 9.

With these nine furnaces, the company had an annual capacity of 120,000 tons. The capital of the Company was necessarily increased with this wonderful development of their business and by 1884 it had reached a capitalization of $2,000,000.

Large beds of iron ore were secured in Lehigh and Berks counties, and also in New Jersey, to keep up the running supply of the Company's furnaces, and to provide for its transportation to the Hokendauqua plant, the management united with the Crane Iron Co., in establishing the Catasauqua and Fogelsville Railroad in 1856, and in 1882 secured the complete ownership of the Ironton Railroad, for handling the ore, coal, limestone, and iron, in the extensive manufacturing operations at Hokendauqua and in doing this, sixteen locomotives became a daily necessity.

The town of Hokendauqua was laid out by the company Nov. 9, 1854. A number of the town-lots were sold, but subsequently they were re-purchased so as to be able to control the whole property, excepting one, which was owned by Joseph McFetridge (who was in the employ of the company from April 18, 1854, to 1905).

The company donated lots for school and church purposes, and also contributed $5,000 toward the Presbyterian church and parsonage.

In 1864, the town was established into an independent school district and so continued for upwards of 40 years; and it was supported mainly by taxes assessed against the Company. The second floor of a large brick building was set apart by the Company for the use of its employees as a library and reading-room. This was continued until 1906.

The town has been supplied with spring water by the Company under a water system, pumped from a spring on the river-bank. The company erected handsome residences there for its general superintendent and superintendent, beside substantial two-story brick dwellings for its employees, numbering 148.

In 1904, the Company celebrated its semi-centennial anniversary at Hokendauqua which was attended by stockholders and invited guests numbering upwards of 500. Among its numerous employees 88 were in its continuous employment upward of twenty years, 9 upward of forty years, and one of them even fifty years (Joseph McFetridge).

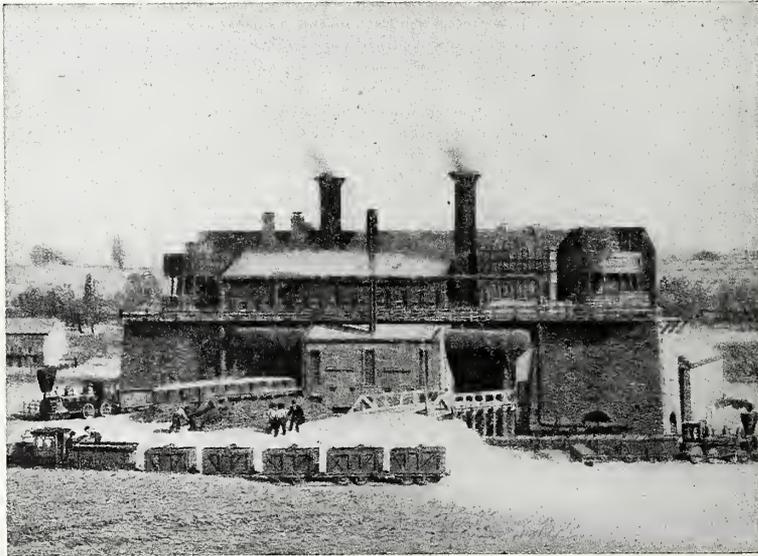

In 1904, the stock issued was 50,000 shares, held by 487 stockholders (211 men, 193 women, and 83 estates, trustees, and banks).

The company showed a remarkably patriotic 1897, and served as general superintendent from 1867 to 1893.

Edwin Mickley was prominently identified with this Company from 1858 until 1889 in superintending the mines, and constructing and managing the furnaces in a successful manner.

Benjamin G. Clarke was president of the company from 1887 to 1892, when John F. Knight succeeded him and served only two months, when he died. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., was president of the company from 1893 to 1913. R. H. Sweetser is president, James W. Weaver, secretary, and W. E. McKee, superintendent of the company. The several furnaces and mines of the company are valued at $2,911,000, and its railroad holdings at over $1,000,000.

THE THOMAS IRON COMPANY IN 1859.

spirit in liberality to its employees, in the payment of war taxes ($200,000 from July, 1864 to December, 1866), and in contributing $300 toward the Soldier's Monument in Fairview Cemetery.

David Thomas (after whom the Company was named) was connected with the Company from its organization in 1854 to his death in 1882.

Samuel Thomas, his son, was also connected with it from its organization to his death in 1906; served as superintendent at Hokendauqua from 1854 to 1864, and officiated as president from 1864 to 1887 (excepting one year, altogether 22 years).

John Thomas, another son, was also connected with it from its organization to his death in

The different plants of the Company are:
Hokendauqua, 6 furnaces (5 out of blast).

Lock-Ridge (Alburtis), 2 furnaces.

Island Park, 1 furnace (Northampton county).

Hellertown, 2 furnaces (Northampton county).

The Company came to own about 6,400 acres of mining properties in New Jersey and about 1,600 acres in Pennsylvania (one-fourth being in Lehigh county), and at all the furnaces about 600 acres.

CAR-WHEEL AND AXLE-WORKS.—This industry was established in 1866 in Whitehall township, between the Lehigh Valley R. R. and the public road to Allentown, a mile south of Catasauqua by James W. Fuller, James McKee, and others who traded under the name of McKee, Fuller & Co., for the manufacture of car-wheels. In 1879 the plant was enlarged by the addition of a forge and car-works, and by 1882 the business had increased so as to turn out upwards of 1,800 eight-wheel railroad cars worth $2,800,000. In 1884 the capacity was increased to $4,000,000; the employees numbered from 1,200 to 1,500, whose monthly pay exceeded $25,000; and the length of the buildings extended along the road for nearly a mile from Ferndale station to Gap Junction. In 1891 the manufacture of cars was abandoned, and the plant has since been directed toward car-wheels and general castings.

In 1901, the business was incorporated as the Lehigh Car Wheel and Axle Works, and besides car wheels, the production has since been special castings and crushing machinery, and the "Lehigh Fuller Pulverizing Mills." The employees number from 200 to 250. Officers, James W. Fuller, president and general manager, and Joseph S. Elverson, secretary and treasurer.

LEHIGH FOUNDRY was established on property to the north in 1900 by James W. Fuller repaired but the interior was never rebuilt. This occurred on a Saturday night when the employees were away; otherwise, if in active operation, there might have been loss of life.

FREDERICK CAR-SHOPS.—In 1866, Thomas Frederick, Charles F. Beck, and Abraham Wisser associated as partners trading as Frederick & Co., for the manufacture of railroad cars in Whitehall township along the public road to Allentown a mile south of Catasauqua, and erected a large building, 1,000 feet long, which embraced the foundry for car castings, blacksmith shop and car-shop. The employees numbered about 200 and the operations were carried on for nearly ten years when the company failed, owing to the general panic which prevailed from 1873 to 1876. The plant was purchased by McKee, Fuller & Co., and merged in their car-wheel works which adjoined it on the north.

JOHNSON STEEL WORKS.—In Whitehall township, nearly opposite the mouth of the Catasauqua creek, along the west bank of the Lehigh river, Henry Johnson, a native of Eng-and others for the manufacture of gray-iron castings, and it has since been in successful operation, under the management of the same officials, with employees numbering from 50 to 150.

LEHIGH CAR WHEEL AND AXLE WORKS, FULLERTON.

In 1876, H. K. Flagler, then of Boston, came to this locality to embark in a new enterprise for manufacturing iron tubing. He erected a building 500 feet long and 200 feet wide between the Lehigh Foundry and the Fuller Car Wheel Works, equipped it with machinery, and manned the plant with 50 expert mechanics, who came with him; but by the time it came to be put into successful operation, it was purchased by the National Tube Works and dismantled. Then the property was secured by the Lehigh Car Wheel and Axle Works, and used as a shop for erecting and painting cars. In 1883 the interior part of the building between the ends was crushed in by a very heavy snow-fall, damaging many cars and two locomotives. The ends were land, established a new and valuable industry on five acres of land for the manufacture of cold rolled steel (used in the production of plates of all kinds, keys, bells, clock-springs, and nickle-plated work of different varieties). This was in 1879, but he had hardly set his great enterprise in successful operation when he died, his death occurring in December, 1881.

The mill was one-story, 36 by 174 feet, with an annex 70 by 100 feet; equipped with special rolls run by four engines; and its monthly production was from 150 to 200 tons, which sold for $200 per ton. The employees were limited to four and six men.

His son, George, who had till that time become an expert mechanic in this particular line of work, then returned to Catasauqua from New York (where he had been engaged as a roller of cold steel), purchased the plant from his father's estate, improved it, and carried it on successfully until he died in 1903. In 1896 the nickel-plating building, situated a short distance from the main building, was destroyed by fire but not rebuilt. The damaged end of the main building was repaired and the nickel-plating was abandoned. He first effected his sales through an agent at New York City, but he soon secured enough trade by voluntary orders and these kept his plant very busy. He employed from 10 to 12 men. After his death, his widow conducted the plant for a year when she was obliged to suspend further operations on account of competition from larger mills of a similar character at Pittsburg, Haverstraw (N. Y.), and Cleveland (O). The property is still owned by the estate. It has been occupied, under lease, by J. Arthur Williams, since 1907, who has conducted there the Hercules Metal Works for the manufacture of high-grade brass, bronze, and copper castings.

Previously, from 1865, for several years, an establishment was carried on here for the manufacture of shovels and hoes by George W. Bogh and others; and they were followed by David G. Morris and his brother, Samuel, who occupied the buildings a few years in the manufacture of iron billets out of scrap iron, and forged drawheads for railroad cars.

Cold rolled steel was first made in the United States at Haverstraw in 1876 by Henry Johnson, who introduced the process from England. Upon his locating at Catasauqua, at the termination of his contract in 1879, he was the first to introduce the process in Pennsylvania.

HERCULES METAL WORKS.—On Jan. 1, 1904, J. Arthur Williams, of Catasauqua, embarked in the business of manufacturing high-grade brass, bronze, copper, and machine castings, including a line of trolley wheels. He first leased the foundry of the Crane Iron Co., located at the east end of the furnace, and conducted the place there for three years; then he leased the northern part of the abandoned Johnson Steel Mill in Whitehall township, along the public road to Allentown, a short distance south of the Catasauqua Race-street Bridge, equipped it with the necessary machinery, and there he has continued the business until the present time. He employs from four to six men.

HELFRICH MILL.—Jacob Wertz settled on a tract of 300 acres of land in Whitehall township, along the Jordan creek, and secured a patent for it in 1750, and he sold this tract to George Hoffman in 1751. Hoffman borrowed money in 1753, giving this land as security, and then, it is believed, he erected a log grist-mill on this land along the Jordan. This mill is mentioned in 1770 in connection with religious services.

Michael Horlacher was the owner in 1754; and Christopher Blank in 1766, and twenty-four years afterward Blank sold to his son, George Adam, a part of the land including the mill, and the water-right for the mill-race. In 1802, Peter Grim became the owner, and in 1807 he erected a two-story stone mill on the site of the old log-mill. Grim died and left an only child, a daughter married to James Deshler, and upon her decease the stone grist-mill and 55 acres were purchased by Reuben Helfrich in 1872.

Helfrich operated the mill until his death in 1890, and during this time, the plant became known as the Helfrich Mill. In 1891, his son Thomas purchased the property, and he has carried on the milling business until the present time. A saw-mill adjoining was run from the beginning until 1807, and then this part of the industry was abandoned. A wide, well-kept mill-race extends to the mill from the Helfrich spring, about 60 perches to the north, several perches from the Jordan, and the large and constant flow of water from this spring, without the construction of a dam as a supply basin, has been the only source of power during the long period of 160 years. This is the only grist-mill in the county now run in this manner, directly from a spring. Before 1900 there was a similar mill at the head of Cedar-creek, which was driven by the Schantz Spring, without even a mill-race.

NEWHARD MILL.—In 1746 George Frederick Newhard purchased 250 acres of land along the Jordan creek, which now adjoins Allentown at the northern extremity of Sixth street. In the partition of his estate in 1789 his son, Laurence, secured the southeastern portion of the land with rights for maintaining a mill dam and race on the tract to carry on a projected grist-mill. In 1790 Laurence erected a two-story stone mill along the Jordan, and carried on the milling business until his death in 1817, when the ownership of the mill passed to two of his sons, John and Daniel. In 1834 John became the sole owner of it and he continued the business until 1850. Subsequent owners until 1864 were John Newhard's son, Joseph, and Peter Roth. In 1865 Thomas Strauss purchased the mill and owned it until he died May 11, 1913. He carried it on thirty years then leased it to Henry W. Schleifer, who has continued as tenant until the present time.

PAINT MILL.—On Aug. 1, 1867, Jacob Breinig, Alfred J. Breinig and Tilghman G. Helfrich associated together for the manufacture of fertilizer, and they established a plant along the Mickley road in Whitehall township, near the Helfrich grist-mill. After conducting the business for seven years they enlarged the plant by adding the manufacture of paint, and since then they have carried on the business under the name of Allentown Manufacturing Co., the production of paint being the principal part of the industry. They employ an average of twenty hands. This company became the successor of Jacob Breinig, who had started producing paint in 1855, and fertilizer in 1860.

NEWHARD STONE-CRUSHER.—In 1900, F. J.

blocks upward daily, and ornamental work according to orders.

The school-house was converted into a dwelling before 1850 by Reuben Helfrich who then enlarged it and for a number of years it was occupied by foremen who superintended the quarry operations nearby.

GARBAGE CREMATORY was established in 1900 by the municipal authorities of Allentown along

VIEW OF LARGE SPRING.

Newhard put up a crusher-plant along the Mickley road in Whitehall, half a mile north of the city line of Allentown, on his farm of 76 acres, and here he has since carried on the business of supplying large quantities of crushed limestone for concrete work and paving. He averages 40 tons daily and employs from 8 to 12 hands. He is the last survivor in name of the Newhard family which first settled on this land in 1746, and has lived on the property since his birth in 1843.

the Mickley road in Whitehall about a mile north of the city line, for burning the garbage collected in the city and the plant has since been maintained there until the present time.

CLEAR SPRINGS WATER CO.—The Whitehall Water Co. was organized by a Mr. Balliet in 1892 for the purpose of supplying Cementon with water by gravity from the Leisenring spring, a short distance west of the town; and this supply has been continued until the VIEW OF PORTION OF 180,000,000 GALLON DAM.

CEMENT BLOCKS.—In 1907, H. C. Long established an industry in an old one-story stone township school-house, situated along the Mickley road, at the county bridge, for the manufacture of building blocks and ornamental work (columns, vases, etc.), out of cement. He carried on the plant for one year; then Joseph Mickley became associated with him, and they have since conducted the business under the name of Long & Mickley. They make from 150 present time. But in 1900, the Clear Springs Water Co. was organized by Mahlon and John Kemmerer and others for the purpose of supplying the inhabitants of Egypt, Cementon, Siegfried, Northampton, Coplay, Hokendauqua, North Catasauqua, West Catasauqua, Catasauqua, and Fullerton with clear spring water, and in this behalf they purchased the water supply mentioned and the old grist-mill at the mouth of Mill creek (formerly called for years the "Fogel & Straub Mill," but then the "Fisher Mill"), and the land along the creek for a mile.

In the ravine above the mill, they constructed a superior dam, half a mile long, with a capacity of 100,000,000 gallons, backed up by heavy masonry, 500 feet long, 32 feet high, 12 feet thick at the bottom and five feet at the top. A "gate-house," with three sets of screens, is located at the centre of the wall where large iron pipes are connected with the pumping-station, erected on the site of grist-mill; and thence the water (drawn from different levels in the dam so as to be free from foreign materials), is pumped into a receiving reservoir on the top of "Lincoln Heights," to an elevation of 325 feet, about a mile south of the dam.

The reservoir is 200 feet square, and thirteen feet deep, with a capacity of 3,000,000 gallons; and in the centre there is an aerating device for purifying the water as it flows from the pipe.

were made here as early as 1733. The place came to be established on land taken up by Jacob Kohler and Peter Steckel, the former having started a grist-mill in 1755 which has continued in the family in a direct line to the present time, and the latter's son started a store and hotel in 1790 which he carried on for thirty years.

The Egypt church was founded here in 1734 and erected in 1764; and an English school distinct from the church, was encouraged and built in 1808, and sustained for fifty years till the compulsory common school system was inaugurated. The Egypt graded school, with eight rooms and spacious play-ground is the equal of the best public school in Pennsylvania for convenient arrangement, sanitary situation, and educational facilities.

The real development of the place began after the establishment of the American Cement Works in 1884; then it contained a church,

WINTER SCENE OF 3,000,000 GALLON RESERVOIR.

From this reservoir, the water is distributed through mains by gravity to the several places named. The total length of mains laid is forty-three miles. The daily supply from the reservoir is 1,000,000 gallons.

TOWNS.

The township includes five towns, each of considerable area and population, excepting the last:

Egypt	West Catasauqua
Cementon	Fullerton
Hokendauqua	Mickley's

EGYPT is a progressive town in the northern section (western political division) of Whitehall township, on Coplay creek, one mile west of Cementon on the Lehigh river and seven miles north of the county-seat. The first settlements school, store, hotel, thirty-seven dwellings, 175 inhabitants, railroad branch, and post office.

Vast deposits of superior cement rock have been quarried in the vicinity for 40 years, where some of the largest cement works in the world have been established and carried on.

In 1828, the first threshing-machine in Lehigh county was made at Egypt, by James Deschler and Joseph Saeger; though about this time one was made at Macungie by Benjamin Fogel.

In 1870 the lots were sold according to a regular plan, and the improvements made accordingly; and that year seven dwelling-houses were erected. And in 1870 Edmund Kohler secured a patent for the last thirteen acres of unpatented land at Egypt, for which his grandfather, Jacob Kohler had made application in 1765.

The erection of this political district into a "first class township" in 1901 gave an impetus to local improvement. In November, 1913, the situation of the town was as follows:

Churches,	2
Schools,	8
General Stores,	3
Bakeries,	3
Sundry Stores,	4
Hotels,	3
Grist-mill,	1
Silk-mill,	1
Stone-Crusher,	1
Saddlery,	1
Barbers,	2
Coal Yards,	2
Meat Chop,	1
Bottling-Works,	1
Blacksmith Shop,	1
Poultry Farm,	1
Tinsmith,	1
Carpenters,	6
P. O. S. of A. Hall,	1
Post Office,	1
Justice of the Peace,	1
Beneficial Societies,	3
Young People's Society,	1
Pool-room,	1
Population,	1,200
Automobiles,	15
Branch of Ironton R. R., ...	1
L. V. Transit Railway,	1
Company Water Supply,	1
Company Electric Lighting, ..	1

INDUSTRIES AT EGYPT.—The following varied industries have been established and carried on at Egypt.

Grist-Mill.—In 1755 a log grist-mill was erected by Jacob Kohler along the Coplay creek, a short distance below the Egypt church. In 1769 he sold the mill and 155 acres of land to his son, Peter, who carried it on until he died in 1793, when it became the property of his grandson, Peter. A large three-story stone mill was erected by the grandson in 1809 on the same side of the old "King's Highway" (Mickley road) but 100 feet to the north of the log mill; and there the business has been continued by the original pioneer miller's descendants in a direct line to the present time, the successors during the past century having been Aaron Kohler, Lewis A. Kohler, and the sons of Lewis, Geo. A., and Dallas R. It is a custom-mill, where the old process flour is still ground on mill-stones, driven by water-power (at times by gasoline engine when the water becomes too low).

Tannery.—In the year 1801, Peter Leisenring erected a tannery on land which shortly afterward (1808) came to adjoin the English School lot on the east, and here the business was carried on for upward of eighty years until 1884. Besides Leisenring, the proprietors were William Wetherhold, William Burkhalter, Charles Troxell, Aaron Kachline, and Alfred D. Kachline. The building then erected is still standing. It is a two-story frame structure, 20 by 30 feet, set on a stone foundation three feet above the ground, doubtless as a precaution against floods in the Coplay creek, which flows through the property a short distance to the south. It has been occupied as an unpretentious residence for twenty years, latterly by foreigners.

Cement Works.—The real development of Egypt and vicinity began in 1884 with the establishment of the cement industry along the Coplay creek, on lands of Edmund Kohler and William Lazarus, south of the Egypt church. The promoter of the enterprise was Christian L. Knauss, and through him some capitalists, among them James M. Wilcox, Robert W. Leslie, and Franklin Thompson (president of P. R. R. Co.), organized the American Portland Cement Co., who secured about 40 acres of land and erected a plant for the manufacture of cement, which was known as the "Egypt" plant. Subsequently the name was changed to American Cement Co., and other plants were erected to meet the increasing demands of trade, known respectively as the "Pennsylvania," "Columbia," "Giant," "Central," and "Reliance," and additional tracts of land were secured until the Company came to own over 400 acres.

Carriage-works. On the premises, where the fine residence of E. E. Long is located, a carriage works was carried on along the road-side for upwards of twenty years by Cyrus A. Koons and James Newhard whose carriages and wagons had a good reputation for superior workmanship.

Isaac U. Deturck, of Kutztown, located in the town in 1868 and conducted a machine repair shop and dealt in farming implements until 1875.

Coal yard.—In 1870 Lewis A. Kohler established a coal yard north of the grist-mill, and after carrying on the business for a number of years, transferred it to his sons, George A. and Dallas R., who have conducted it until now in connection with the grist-mill.

Bakery.—A bakery was started at Egypt in 1888 by Francis Woodring and Edwin Ritter his brother-in-law. They erected a plant and carried it on for some time when Ritter became the sole owner and he conducted the business until 1896. His successors were Wilson H. Schneck till 1898, and Keefer and Lindaman till 1900, when the Egypt Bakery Co. was organized by O. E. Leh, E. E. Long, Joseph D. Peters, John O. Kohler, John W. Eckert, and others, who purchased the plant and have carried it on until now.

In 1898 Tilghman Weaver embarked in the business also on Main street, and after carrying it on several years sold it to the company mentioned. The two bakeries have since been carried on by this company in a successful manner. The total weekly production is about 15,000 loaves of bread, and they employ four teams for delivery throughout the surrounding country for many miles.

A third bakery was started by John Kohler about 1900. It was carried on by him and other parties until 1911 when Morris Lindemuth became the owner and he has carried on the business until now.

Saddlery.—In 1901, Dr. H. D. Leh and James W. Peters embarked in the business of supplying and repairing harness at Egypt, employing a saddler to carry on the place for the convenience of the community. After directing it for three years they sold the business to Oscar N. Snyder and he has continued it with increasing success until now.

Bottling Works.—In 1902, David H. Lindaman began the business of bottling beer and soft drinks at Egypt, and erected a plant near the Coplay creek along the Ironton R. R. on the road to Ruchsville. He conducted it seven years, then sold it to George W. Keefer who has since carried on the business. He employs four teams and his trade extends throughout the surrounding county from ten to fifteen miles.

Stone Crusher.—In 1905, O. E. Leh and Joseph Peters purchased the old Josiah Steckel farm, southwest of Egypt, near the Ironton R. R., and opened a superior bed of hard rock where they erected a crusher-plant and have since supplied large quantities of crushed stones of all sizes for road purposes and concrete work. At the same time they put up chutes and have since carried on a coal business.

Leh Poultry Farm.—In 1909 Oliver E. Leh embarked in the business of conducting a poultry farm at Egypt with all the modern appliances and conveniences of incubating and raising chickens, and for this purpose enclosed eight acres of land and erected eighteen buildings. He has since made a specialty of the white leghorn breed and has on hand from 2,000 to 4,000. It is recognized as a model farm, under the management of his son, Robert J. Leh. He has also a considerable supply of pigeons.

Silk Works.—In 1911, H. J. Feldhege and E. T. Zellner of Coplay established a fine two-story brick plant at Egypt, covering 20,000 square feet, for the manufacture of broad silks and they have since traded under the name of H. J. Feldhege Silk Manufacturing Co. Employees number 300; and the annual product is from $350,- 000 to $400,000, sold through their own office at New York City, and forwarded to all parts of the country.

This company is also operating three similar plants, two at Walnutport and one at Siegfried. Their total production is about $1,000,000; and all employees number 600.

Blacksmith-shop.—Joseph Koons started the first blacksmith-shop at Egypt about 1850 and carried on the business for some time. He was followed by Solomon Kratzer, John Krasely, Daniel Sheirer, and Augustus M. Lamb; then by several others for short periods until 1909. In 1911 Ezra M. Young erected a new shop and he has continued the business until now—having previously operated a shop for fifteen years in Monroe county.

GENERAL STORES.—The store business was conducted at Egypt in connection with the hotel by the proprietors in the west end of the building from 1796 until 1885; then a partnership, consisting of the proprietor, E. E. Long, Oliver E. Leh, and John W. Eckert, carried it on there until 1904 when the property was sold to O. P. Werley for hotel purposes and Mr. Long erected the superior two-story cement-block, store-stand on the opposite corner and the partnership continued the business there until 1909. O. J. Fenstermacher & Co. then became the owners and they have continued it until now.

Augustus K. Kelchner started the second store in Upper Egypt about 1857 and carried on a general business until 1897. H. W. Hankee and his brother, Lansford, became his successors and they have conducted the stand until now.

In 1895, J. W. Peters started a third store a short distance south of the corner where the Long store came to be located in 1904, and he conducted the business four years; since then J. W. Peters & Co. have continued it until the present time.

Besides these three large general stores, there are four smaller stores of different kinds.

POST-MASTERS.—The mail matter of this community was received at the Siegfried Post-office until 1870, and forwarded to the Kelchner store at Upper Egypt for the convenience of the people where they called for the letters, etc.; then a post office was established. The post-masters have been:

John Koch, Jr., 1872-75.

Ephraim Long, 1875-85.

Walter K. Long, 1885-89; 1893-97.

Oliver E. Leh, 1889-93; 1897-1907.

Alfred H. Leh, 1907-13.

Wilson H. Schneck, 1913—.

HOTELS.—Three licensed hotels are at Egypt. The Werley House was erected by Jacob Steckel in 1796 and he carried it on as a public tavern until 1815. Then it was discontinued for 32 years. In 1848 William Leisenring re-established the place as a tavern and the business has been continued there until the present time, his successors having been David Fatzinger, Tilghman Kohler, John Koch (1870-75), Ephraim Long (1875-85), Eugene E. Long (1885-1904), and Oscar P. Werley (1904-14).

The American House was started by Charles W. Miller in 1887 and he carried on the business until 1904; then different parties were there to 1911; and Koch has been the proprietor till now.

The Far-view House was started in 1897 by Fatzinger & Oberholtzer. Different parties conducted the place till 1903; since then, John Berg (who has acted as a notary public, and also as interpreter and agent for many foreigners).

WATER.—Previous to 1905, the place was supplied with water from cisterns and three wells; then mains were laid by the Clear-Spring Water Co. and water has since been supplied from its reservoir on Laurel Hill near Cementon.

LIGHT.—The inhabitants of the town used coal oil, and the streets were unlighted until 1896; then the American Cement Co. put up poles and wires and supplied electric light until 1913, when E. E. Long, O. E. Leh, and Harry Grammes organized the Egypt Electric Light and Power Co., and purchased the plant of the Cement Co., and they have since secured the light from the Catsauqua Electric L. & P. Co.

EGYPT SCHOOL.—The eastern portion of Egypt has been known as "Eagle Point," and on account of its elevation commands a "far-view." The large, two-story, brick school-building of the town is situated there. It has eight graded class-rooms, with two lunch-rooms and a large basement for a play-room in inclement weather; and a play-ground which is the largest in the township. A library of 500 volumes has been collected, embracing history, biography, poetry, and fiction. The classes are under the supervision of Miss Mary Downs (a teacher for 16 terms), and the pupils number 275, more boys than girls, with a large population of "foreign" children. This is a model building, superior and attractive, and reflects great credit upon the enterprise and progressive spirit of the community. It was erected in 1907. Previously these classes were in two one-story brick buildings, one at the "far-view" point, the other opposite the historic Egypt church, which have since been unoccupied.

The old one-story stone building near the county bridge, known as the "English School of 1808," is still standing, occupied as a residence and owned by H. P. K. Romig, where the owner and his wife while children attended "special" school until about 1860 when it was discontinued.

The teachers were:

Thomas Fitzgerald	John H. Oliver
Michael Kraemer	Alfred B. Schwartz
Henry Scholl	Erastus Rhoads
William Osman	Amos Steckel
Russell Ward	David Stern
John K. Clifton	Emma M. Kachline

The following particulars are given in "Sketches of Lehigh Valley" (p. 17), relating to this school:

"Until this time (1804), in the school at the Egypt church only German was taught and many of the inhabitants expressed the wish that their children might be educated in English; so, in this behalf, "The English School Society" was organized in the year 1808 for the purpose of establishing an English school. This society then sold stock certificates at $10 a share. Among the trustees, whose name can be recalled, was Jacob Saeger; and Jacob Steckel served as a school teacher. There were 44 shares of stock sold, and a quarter of an acre of land was purchased from Jacob Kohler for the sum of $40, on which a one-story stone school-house was erected which cost $412.30, together $452.30. On the 26th of December, 1808, there was an election held for trustees, etc., and then Abraham Zerfasz, David Deschler, Nicholas Saeger, and Peter Ruch were elected as trustees, and Jacob Steckel, Nicholas Kern, Jacob Saeger, and Nicholas Saeger, Esq., as a committee to formulate Rules and Regulations for the Society. On the 3d of January, 1809, Jacob Kern from Mount Bethel started the English school at a salary of $14 per month."

DISTRICT COMMISSIONERS.—The following commissioners from the Egypt or Western District have served on the board since the township was made a "first-class" township under the Act of 1899:

Tilghman Weaver, 1901-03.
Oliver E. Leh, 1903-07.
Stanton Ritter, 1907-09.
Harry G. Gangewere, 1909-11.
Albert E. Hoffman, 1911-15.

DISTINGUISHED MEN.—The following prominent men were born and reared at or in the vicinity of Egypt:

Revolutionary patriots.—Peter Kohler, Peter Burkhalter and Col. David Deshler.

Ministers.—Lewis Steckel, Amos Steckel, John Lindaman, Francis Lindaman, Joseph Freeman, of the Reformed church; and Franklin Berndt, of the Lutheran church.

Lawyers.—Hiram H. Schwartz (served as first Orphans Court Judge of Berks county), and Eli G. Schwartz.

Teachers.—William Steckel, Henry Steckel, Willoughby Kohler.

Physicians.—The physicians who practiced their profession at Egypt were Drs. William Kohler, 1840-1870; John P. K. Kohler, 1861-1865, (surgeon in the army); Josiah Koch, 1875-1887, Victor H. Heebner, H. D. Leh, 1887-1914; Edwin H. Minner, 1911-1914; and Drs. Dreple and Williams.

BRIDGES.—There are two county bridges in the town of Egypt, crossing Coplay creek: one a covered wooden, one-span bridge, erected in 1850, which was repaired and strengthened in 1911; the other a one-span iron bridge with a long retaining wall along the Kohler Mill dam, erected in 1907 to take the place of an open wooden bridge which had been maintained there for over an hundred years.

HALL.—The only hall is that of P. O. Sons of America, built on Main street in 1900, of brick, three stories, 40 by 60 feet at a cost of $8,000. It is occupied by the Egypt post office, and a barber shop on the first floor; office of Squire Kachline, and dancing room on second floor; and three societies on the third floor.

BENEFICIAL SOCIETIES.—Three beneficial societies are maintained at Egypt:

P. O. S. of A., Camp No. 168, instituted June 21, 1897; members, 85.

I. O. of Red Men, Cahota Tribe 97, instituted Nov. 28, 1902; members, 195.

K. G. E., Lehigh Castle 510, instituted Mar. 13, 1913; members, 54.

LANDMARKS.—The following noteworthy landmarks are situated at or near Egypt, which are in a good state of preservation:

Fort Deshler, built by Adam Deshler in 1760. It is a substantial stone building and was used as a place of refuge in the days when Indian war parties made incursions into the townships.

Troxell or Steckel Homestead.—This is a large two-story stone house with this German inscription on a small plastered surface on the front wall: "1756. Gott behut dis Haus vor aller gefahr, führ unsre Seel' ins Himmel's Saal. Johan Peter Trachsel und Maria Magdalena." The house became the property of Peter Steckel in 1768 and was in the Steckel family over one hundred years.

Burkhalter House, built by Peter Burkhalter, Revolutionary patriot, about 1770. It stands half a mile west of Egypt.

Leisenring House, between Egypt and Cementon, built by Conrad Leisenring in 1796.

Schreiber Homestead, built by Jacob Schreiber in 1799.

English School House, a one-story stone building, built in 1808.

Kohler Grist-mill, erected in 1809 by Peter Kohler.

Steckel Hotel, built by Jacob Steckel in 1790, of cut stone, two stories high, to which additions have been made.

Dinkey Homestead, along Mill creek.

MILITARY MEN.—The following residents of Egypt or vicinity participated in the several wars of the country.

Revolutionary War.—Capt. Adam Zerfass, Capt. John Moritz, Lieut. Nicholas Saeger, Lieut. Abraham Wotring, Ensign Jacob Kern, Ensign Abraham Wotring, Jr., Privates Jacob Schreiber, Christian Bertsch, Peter Burkhalter, Jr., George Flickinger, Jacob Steckel, Henry Steckel, Christopher Kern, Michael Ringer, John Kern, Jacob Kohler, Martin Mickley, Peter Mickley, John Leisenring, Peter Deshler, Adam Deshler, Conrad Leisenring, John Bertsch, Jacob Flickinger, George Koehler, Jacob Mickley, George Kern, Peter Basler, George West, and John Grob.

War of 1812-14.—Peter Burkhalter, John Deichman, David Deshler, Michael Frack, George Kern, Benjamin Kohler, Peter Leisenring, Daniel Leisenring, Jacob Schreiber, and Solomon Steckel were in Capt. Peter Ruch's cavalry company, and Michael Zellner, and a Mr. Kelly, the latter of whom died soon after the war, were in a company commanded by Capt. George Dinkey.

Civil War.—Reuben Roth (who died in the service), Josiah Steckel, Herman Peter, Willoughby Peter, William Frantz, Reuben Frantz, John Fisher, Andrew Kratzer (who died in service), Jacob Kramer, James A. Bates, Owen Kern, Lewis D. Steckel, Stephen Leh, Reuben Ruch, Edwin Knecht, Henry Laury, Dr. John P. Kohler.

CEMENTON is located in the northwestern section of the township on the west bank of the Lehigh river, about a mile above the borough of Coplay. The first settler here was Jacob Shwalter, a Mennonite, who, with his sons, settled on a tract of 450 acres about 1752. Not having secured a clear title, he was compelled to purchase the land from William Allen, who had secured a patent in 1759. In 1771, Joseph Shwalter sold 150 acres to John Conrad Leisenring, whose descendants owned the land for 125 years.

A ferry was established here at an early date. In 1760, a man named Feitner is mentioned as the ferryman at this place. In later years it was called Siegfried's Ferry, after Colonel John Siegfried, who kept a tavern on the Northampton county side from 1770 until his death in 1793. After the bridge was erected in 1828, both settlements on each side of the river were called Siegfried's Bridge, until 1856, when the railroad company established a station on the west bank of the river and named it Whitehall, after the township, and it was so known until 1901 (shortly after the Whitehall Portland Cement Co. established its plant here), when the name was changed to Cementon. Peter Leisenring built the first house on the site of the town in 1818.*

A bridge over the river, a wooden, covered structure, of three spans, was erected in 1828 by an incorporated company. It was swept away by the great flood of June 5, 1862, but immediately rebuilt after the same style. The high water extended to the Valley House and carried many drowned people in its current down the valley. The western span, adjoining Whitehall, was blown down by a great storm in 1871, and immediately restored. From the time of its erection in 1828 until 1893 toll was required for teams, pedestrians, etc., in passing to and fro; then it was declared a free county bridge by the courts of Northampton and Lehigh counties upon the application of the respective county commissioners, and as such it has since been maintained by the two counties at their joint expense. It was made free of toll for pedestrians some years before 1893.

About 1890, Albert Leisenring, M. S. Kemerer, Thomas Righter and others organized the Whitehall Land Improvement Co., bought several farms in the vicinity of Whitehall and laid them off into building lots; then sold many of the lots and encouraged building operations. In 1899 this company organized the Whitehall Portland Cement Co., and founded an industry on a tract of 120 acres of land which contained an inexhaustible supply of first-class cement rock and this has been operated in a most successful manner until the present time. The plant was enlarged in 1903. The corporate name was changed to Whitehall Cement Co. in 1911, and since then A. Hochstrasser has been superintendent of the works. The employees number from 200 to 250, and the annual production is 1,400,000 barrels.

Near the works, in an elevated position, known as "Dewey Heights," the company erected two rows of ten double, two-story frame dwelling-houses for the accommodation of some of its working people.

From 1902 to 1909 the company supplied the town with electric light.

In 1895 Milton Steinmetz started a bottling works and carried it on five years. He was succeeded by William Steinmetz from 1900 to 1907, and since then the plant has been operated by John Rumsy (with four to seven teams according to trade and six employees), for the Northampton Brewing Co., owner of the property.

In 1884 the village contained two stores, two hotels, a school house with two schools, railroad station, and 300 inhabitants. In 1913 it was recognized as a town of 1,200 inhabitants, with 160 dwellings, three large hotels, one general store, Union church, large cement works, employing 200 hands, large graded brick school edifice, and improved railroad accommodations.

The water for domestic uses has been supplied by the Clear-Springs Water Co., of Catsauqua since 1899; and the electric light by the Catsauqua Electric L. & P. Co.

The old Leisenring home, erected in 1796 on the hill west of the town is still standing in a good state of preservation.

Old surviving inhabitants at Cementon in November, 1913, were George Gogle, aged 82 years, Mrs. Samuel Schaffer, 81 years, Mrs. Henry Laury (nee Leisenring) 77 years, (born and reared on the homestead and always resided here).

John Stofflet carried on successfully a farming implement business and repair shop very extensively on the main street, near the bridge, from 1885 to 1905.

DEPARTMENT STORE.—In 1891, O. E. Gruver started a general store on the opposite side of the street from where it is now and carried on a large and increasing business until 1913 when he moved into his present spacious three-story brick building and has since conducted there a fine department store. And the post office was then located in the store.

Jacob Jones began keeping a store at this village in 1844, and in connection with the mercantile business he conducted a "temperance hotel."

POST OFFICE.—A post office by the name of Cementon was established by the post office department Feb. 27, 1891. The inhabitants suggested the name of Whitehall, but this had already been taken for another locality in the state, and Cementon was substituted because the village was in the cement region. The postmasters have been:

John Roth, 1891.

Erwin Semmel, 1892-95.

Charles Schaeffer, 1895-1911.

Jeremiah F. Troxell, 1911-.

LODGE HALL.—In 1890, the Whitehall Beneficial Society was organized and a two-story brick building was then erected, with the first floor set apart for store purposes, and the second for hall and amusement purposes. Gruver occupied the first floor for twenty-one years. The Woodmen of America also hold their meetings in this hall.

HOTELS.—Valley House was originally the Siegfried Inn; and continued as such until 1852 when it was demolished by Thomas McKee. The present three-story building was erected in its place, and the name changed to Whitehall Hotel.

William Miller afterward became the proprietor, changed the name to Valley House, and carried on the business until 1890, when William A. Wieder became the owner and he has conducted the place until the present time.

Laurel House was established by David Peter in 1868 and named after "Laurel Hill" in the village. He carried on the business for a number of years, and he was succeeded by different parties, the last being Tilghman Smith, since 1910.

Central House was erected in 1893 by John M. Newhard and conducted by him until 1895. Numerous changes followed until 1912 when John Schwartzson became the proprietor.

PHYSICIANS.—The practicing physicians in the village have been Dr. Aaron Becker from 1871 to 1876; and Dr. N. C. Peters from 1888 to the present time.

SCHOOLS.—A two-story brick school house was erected by subscription at Whitehall Station at the instance of Leslie Miller, Benoni Bates, and others; the first floor was occupied by a general store. A special school was conducted in it for several years; afterward used by the district for school purposes; and in 1868 it was purchased by the school directors who tore it down and erected in its place a larger two-story brick building. In 1884 there were two schools in it with fifty-eight pupils. It occupied the site of the Central House on Main street. In 1892 a superior and attractive two-story brick edifice with six rooms was established by the township on "Lincoln Heights," and in it six schools are conducted.

HOKENDAUQUA is situated on the west bank of the Lehigh river, and adjoins the borough of Coplay on the southerly side. It was established and named by the Thomas Iron Co. in 1854, and here the works and office have since been maintained.

The place derives its name from a small creek which empties into the Lehigh river on the eastern side, about half a mile above the town. It is an Indian word in the language of the Delaware tribe, consisting of two syllables: Hockin, which signifies land, and Dochive, which signifies searching for. It would seem, however, that this expressive word was rather applied to the Irish settlers who sought a place for settlement in 1730 and located here.

But it is also said that an Indian village was situated along this creek which was called Hockyondocquay, and that Edward Marshall and his associates rested near by, at the end of their first day's journey on Sept. 19, 1737, while making the famous "Indian Walk." The land, on which the iron works came to be located more than 100 years afterward, was not included in the "walking purchase," the limit having been on the eastern bank of the river.

THOMAS IRON Co.—William Lowther secured land here from the Penns in 1733, and afterward the Thomas Iron Co. obtained 185 acres, subsequently increased to 240 acres, where they established their extensive iron works and laid out a town for the accommodation of their working people. At first they designed to sell off these lots but they changed their purpose so as to be master of the situation at all times with respect to the complete management of their costly industrial enterprise.

After erecting furnaces 1 and 2 at an expense of several hundred thousand dollars they donated a large lot of ground and contributed altogether $5,000 towards the erection of the Presbyterian church; they laid water pipes along the streets and supplied the place with water, and they provided means for the protection of the people against fire.

Within ten years the company erected a large number of dwelling-houses to accommodate a thousand inhabitants, and their superior control of local affairs in this time built up a model community. Only one property was sold to an employee, which was in 1855, and he came to be one of their most faithful workmen during their prosperous career of sixty years. This was John McFetridge who started as a locomotive engineer, which position he filled for three years; then served as yardmaster at the works continuously for forty-seven years and as storekeeper for one year, when he retired in 1905, making a total service with the company of fifty-one years, a most extraordinary period which is worthy of special mention. He is still living in the same dwelling-house where he started, in good health at the age of eighty-two years with the respect and admiration of the community for his exemplary character.

The works of the Thomas Iron Co. are described elsewhere in this publication with other important industries.

STORES.—John Evans and John Nevins started a general store in the center of the town in 1856. After conducting it four years they sold it to John Christman who carried on the business for forty-nine years. George Issermoyer then became the proprietor and he has continued it until now.

William Roberts carried on a small general store from 1861 to 1893; his son, John, succeeded him from 1893 to 1911; and Shamp & Lamont have continued the business since 1911.

BAKERY.—Samuel Nevins embarked in the baking business in 1857 and after carrying it on for some time his son became his successor who operated it for a number of years (now one of the foremen in the iron works). Different parties have since had it for short periods.

There are no tradespeople in the town because the working people are employed in the different departments of the Thomas Iron Works and the houses which they occupy are owned by the Iron Company.

AGED MEN.—Besides John McFetridge, there are two other aged men at Hokendauqua who were also in the employ of the Iron Company for upwards of forty years: Thompson Porter, 74 years; Adam Faulkner, 86 years.

HOKENDAUQUA HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.

INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT.—Certain inhabitants of Whitehall township, in the village of Hokendauqua, presented a petition to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lehigh county on Sept. 16, 1864, praying to be established into an independent district for school purposes. The court appointed John D. Lawall, Solomon Griesemer, and O. L. Schreiber as commissioners to make the necessary inquiries, who made a favorable report; and the Court confirmed this report April 7, 1865, and established "The Hokendauqua School District, as a separate and independent district in the school system of Lehigh county. It then contained 145 dwelling-houses, 700 inhabitants, three stores, large iron works, school building (with three schools), and the Presbyterian congregation.

This independent school district was maintained nearly fifty years in a successful manner; but when the new school code of 1911 was put into operation in Lehigh county, the district was abandoned and the town of Hokendauqua was included in Whitehall township. Rebecca Mc-

Fetridge (daughter of John) was a teacher in the district twenty-five years.

FERRY.—There was a ferry here across the river, called "Hartman's," from a very early period, and it was carried on until the erection of the bridge by the two counties. At the west end a tavern was conducted for many years, starting before the Revolution. The two-story stone building is still standing.

ORE-WASHERY.—At Hokendauqua, an ore-washery was carried on by miners of ore in the township, because they could not secure water in the immediate vicinity of the mines. It was located below the dam, from which the water was obtained, and it was operated for a number of years until about 1854, when it was discontinued.

WEST CATASAUQUA.—The land, where the town is located, was previously owned by Adam Miller, and a town was laid out by Joshua Miller. Orange M. Fuller also laid out part of the town and sold building lots. The locality was first known as "Pleasant Hill" on account of its elevation above the river and the "pleasant" view which it commanded; but it was afterward named West Catasauqua from its connection with the thriving industrial borough on the east side of the river. The L. V. R. R. extends through the eastern portion; and the junction of the Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R. with the L. V. R. R. is at this place, its "round house" for the engines being at the northerly line. Two bridges span the river, a long iron county bridge at the northern end, and the bridge of the Lehigh Valley Transit Co., at the southern end.

The population in November, 1913, was estimated at 1,000; in 1884, it was 595.

SCHOOL.—A double brick school building was erected in 1876 and there were two schools with 194 pupils. A superior two-story brick building was erected in its place in 1905.

STORES.—In 1884 Orange M. Fuller erected a two-story frame store building and rented it to Samuel Hock who started a small business and carried it on for a year, when George Smith purchased the store and property, and he has since conducted the place.

In 1908 Hiram Woodring put up an attractive two-story cement-block store building and has since carried on a general mercantile business.

There are several small stores besides in the town; also a meat-shop and two barbers.

CHURCH.—The United Brethren in Christ erected a one-story brick church, with basement, 34 by 44 feet, in 1885, and named it "St. John's." Religious services were conducted at irregular times for about twenty years. Then the building was sold at public sale, and a Sunday school association purchased it and there a school has since been maintained for the benefit of the community. It was burned down in 1891 and immediately rebuilt.

BAND.—The West Catasauqua Band was organized in 1903. A new hall for practice was secured in November, 1913.

MARBLE-YARD.—Elmer M. Berndt established a marble-yard in 1900 and has carried it on since.

HOTEL.—August Eagle built a hotel at West Catasauqua in 1872 and named it the Fairview. It is a three-story frame building on the road to Catasauqua near the long iron bridge which spans the river. He carried it on nineteen years.

plant and carried it on for a time; and he was succeeded by McKee, Fuller & Co., who enlarged the industry and came to employ 1,000 hands.

A rolling-mill was started in the same location about 1865 by the Catasauqua Manufacturing Co.

The town in area is about one and a half miles long by a mile wide, situated along the west bank of the Lehigh river, half a mile south of West Catasauqua, and occupies an elevated position.

The place was originally named "Ferndale." It was so known in 1871 when the Presbyterian church was erected. The land was patented to Jacob Yund, Stephen Snyder, and Giles Winsor.

These great enterprises were the foundation of

PLEASANT HILL SCHOOLHOUSE, WEST CATASAUQUA.

His successors have been: Fritz Hermany, 1891-96; Henry Steitz, J. D. Kingcaid, C. P. King, since 1911.

FAIRVIEW CEMETERY is located in the township on the west side of the Lehigh river, opposite Catasauqua. It was laid out by James W. Fuller, Esq., and sold to an incorporated association which has since maintained it in a most excellent condition. A soldiers' monument was erected there in 1866 by the people of Catasauqua.

Being more immediately identified with Catasauqua, a more extended description of it, including the important historical details, will be found in the chapter relating to that borough.

FULLERTON.—The first industry to be established in this locality along the L. V. R. R. was the car-wheel works of Frederick & Co., before 1865; James W. Fuller then bought the town, and it was named after the iron-master.

In November, 1913, the population was estimated at 2,000; in 1884 it was 550.

[For the history of the Dent Hardware Company, the Kurtz Furniture Company, and the McBride Silk Company, all located at Fullerton, see the following chapter (XLVIII) on Industries:]

SNYDER BAKERY.—Tilghman M. Snyder started a bakery in Fullerton on Main street in 1892 and has conducted the business until now, employing three bakers and running two delivery teams.

GENERAL STORE.—George P. Diefenderfer embarked in a general store business at Fullerton in 1898, having erected a fine cement block building.

Five small stores are also carried on in the place.

POST-MASTERS.—The following postmasters have served at Fullerton:

Albert Williams.	Gwilym Davis, 1889-93.
John P. M. Wint,	F. G. Kurtz, 1897-1914.
	1893-97.

The population estimated in December, 1913, was 2,000.

Two churches are maintained in this growing town: Ferndale Presbyterian since 1871, and St. John's Union since 1886.

A superior two-story brick school building was erected here in 1906.

A newspaper agency was established in 1897 by John P. M. Wint, Esq.

HOTELS.—The Fullerton Hotel, a three-story frame structure, was erected in 1868 by Joseph Berkenstock, and rebuilt in 1882 by Joseph Ludwig. Since 1911 it has been conducted by John Gaal. A hall for entertainment is connected with the hotel.

The Windsor House, a three-story frame structure, was built in 1890 by C. W. King, and carried on by him ten years; then by T. J. Diefenderfer for five years; and since 1905 by George L. Snyder. It has twenty-eight rooms.

The St. Charles Hotel, a two-story frame building was erected by William Behny in 1893

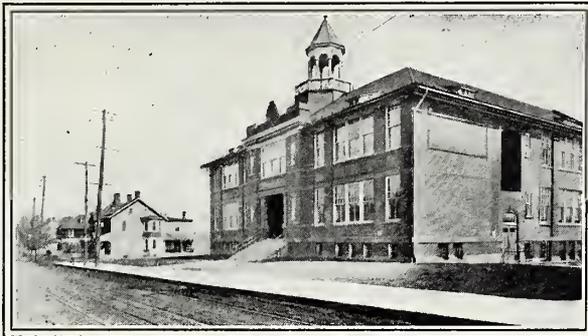

It is in the center of Whitehall township, midway between Allentown and Egypt.

CHURCHES.

The churches in Whitehall are the following:

Egypt	Fullerton
Mickleys	Presbyterian
Hokendauqua	Union
Cementon

EGYPT CHURCH.—The earliest settlers of the township in the vicinity of Egypt were almost exclusively members of the Reformed church. The Balliets and the Voeturns (now written Wotring or Woodring), were of Huguenot descent; the Schreibers were natives of Niederbronn, in Alsace; the Schaadts emigrated from the province of Hannau and were long familiarly known as the Hannauers. But the greater number among them were the Kohlers, Kerns, Burgalters, Mickleys, Troxels, and Steckels, who were natives of Switzerland; and Egypt was for that reason often called a Swiss settlement. They having been members of the Reformed Church in Europe, it was but natural that they should organize a congregation holding to the same religious confession. There were from the FULLERTON SCHOOL BUILDING.

and he carried it on until 1906. Since then, his successor has been Edward Wehrle.

HILL-SIDE CEMETERY.—F. G. Kurtz and William Behny established a cemetery in the town in 1908, and called it "Hill-side."

MICKLEY'S is a small village on the Mickley Road, about a mile southwest from Hokendauqua. It consists of a prominent church (with two cemeteries), hotel, and fifteen dwelling-houses. The name was derived from the Mickley family. Jacob Mickley, son of the emigrant, Jacob Mickley, removed from Mill creek, and settled here about 1760. A descendant, Edwin Mickley, became very prominently identified with the Thomas Iron Company at Hokendauqua.

beginning some Lutherans in the neighborhood, including such families as the Saegers and the Ruchs, but it was not till many years afterward that they found themselves sufficiently numerous to organize a separate congregation.

For a number of years after the organization of the congregation, and before the building of a church, religious services were held alternately in the houses of Peter Troxell and George Kern.

The oldest document in the possession of this Reformed congregation is a baptismal record, bound in the most primitive manner, with strips of buckskin serving as clasps. The title-page bears the motto: "Omnia ad Dei gloriam Salutemque nostrarum animarum," and a German inscription of which the following is a translation: "Baptismal record of the congregation at the Lehigh, in which are to be recorded the names of the children baptized, the names of their parents, and also the names of their sponsors. Commenced March 22, 1739."

The first baptism recorded was by Rev. John Philip Boehm on September 23, 1734; David, a son of Peter Troxell. The sponsors were Nicholas and Mary Margaret Kern. Rev. Boehm, (a native of Hochstadt, Germany, where he was born Nov. 25, 1683), came to America in 1720 as a teacher. In the absence of a minister in the section of the Schuylkill Valley where he settled he held religious services in the capacity of a "reader," and in 1725 administered his first communion at Falkner Swamp, Skippack, and Whitemarsh. He was regularly ordained Nov. 23, 1729, in New York city. He held services at the Egypt church in 1739 and 1740, at which he baptized children; and in 1741 he baptized five. His last service here was on April 28, 1749 when he administered communion, and he died the following day at the home of his eldest son.

Rev. John Henry Goetschius, of Zurich, Switzerland, then only eighteen years old, made the second entry in the church book. It records the baptism on October 26, 1736, of John, son of "the respectable Peter Traxel, church censor of the Reformed congregation here." On July 27, 1737, he baptized Peter, son of Daniel and Anna Margaret Roth, and on March 22, 1739, daughters of Abraham Wotring and Michael Hoffman. His last entry was dated May 13, 1739. In 1740 three children were taken to Saucon church, 15 miles away, where they were baptized by Rev. Dorsius.

From 1741 there was no pastor until Rev. John Conrad Wuertz became pastor in 1742, serving until 1744.

Rev. Michael Schlatter visited Egypt in June, 1747, and in September of that year, at the first Coetus of the Reformed church, held in Philadelphia, Abraham Wotring was the delegate from Egypt. At this time the congregation was without a pastor and wrote the following letters to Rev. Michael Schlatter, the missionary superintendent, which were found among the papers relating to the history of the Reformed Church at The Hague, Holland, by Rev. Dr. Hinke:

(Grosser) Great Lechau above Makunschi,

Reformed Congregation, May 1, 1747.

We the undersigned obediently submit to your Reverence with all due humility and sorrow that for a considerable time our Reformed congregation has been very poorly provided with teachers and ministers and still is, they can neither be regarded as true shepherds nor as hirelings, as they themselves appear very rarely even after they have announced divine services, so that the people must return home empty. What grieves us most is the fact that our poor, deplorable children are not instructed in, nor provided with the teaching of God's Word. Yet there is a considerable number of Reformed households in our congregation; which for the most part are blessed by the dear Lord with many children. If therefore, there is one place in the country which needs true and diligent teachers it is certainly this, especially, because we are surrounded by many sects, so that it is to be feared, if there is no assistance from our dear brethren in the faith, that in time a division and noticeable damage will take place, which the dear Lord may graciously prevent.

Our unanimous urgent petition and request is therefore addressed to your Reverence to look favorable upon us, your brethren, in the faith and to assist us as much as possible that we may be provided with a capable ordained minister and teacher.

You will not only do a God-pleasing work thereby, but you will also create in us and our pitiable children a hearty joy. And we shall implore God for your continued welfare that He may bless you more and more in body and soul.

Looking forward with assurance to friendly answer. We remain with all due respect,

Your obedient servants,

Paulus Balliet	Joh. Peter Drachsel
Daniel Burger	Michael Drachsel
Ulerich Mussle	Nicolaus Drachsel
Henrich Rötter	Jacob Letner
Joh. Jacob Ferber	George Mertz
Phil. Jac. Shellhammer	Peter Miller
Joh. Meyer	Jacob Dauber
Jacob Weber	Joh. Schatz
Ulerich Flickinger	Phil. Leibenguth
Joh. Schneider	Georg Kern
Joh. Nemo Ohl	Michael Newhard
Joh. Nicolas Schneider	Jacob Mickley
Hein Hauser	Abraham Wotring
Hein Hoffman	Michael Hoffman
Jac. Matzinger	Ulrich Burkhalter
Joh. Drachsel	Jacob Kohler

Heydelberg Congregation,
5th of 9 br, 1748.

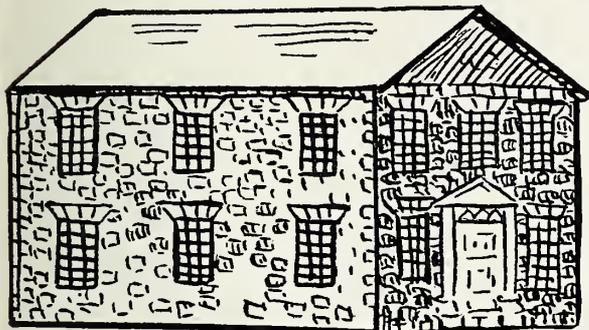

In as much as Daniel Burger, elder of the Reformed Congregation in Heydelberg township, in the name of the congregation there, as well as in behalf of the congregation of Egypt, has urgently requested the Reverend Coetus for assistance in securing a regular minister and as they (the members of Coetus), have consented in writing to grant our request in case the congregation would subscribe fifty pounds of Philadelphia money toward the annual salary of a minister; hence, we, the members of the consistories of the above mentioned two Reformed congregations have put forth our utmost efforts, have appealed to all the members of the two Reformed Congregations and have put down how much could be raised and given yearly.

As a result the congregation of Egypt can raise: £22, 13s. The congregation of Heidelberg, £19, 15s. Both, £42, 8s. Hence at present we cannot possibly raise more, yet we have the hope that the Reverend Coetus will not, for this reason, deny us a regular minister but will kindly assist us in it.

We remain, with every conceivable respect, and endeavor to be, 'The Reverend Coetus',

Most Obedient Servants,
 Daniel Burger Michael Hoffman
 Ulerich Musslie Joh. Nic. Schneider
 Jacob Micklie Joh. Weber
 Abraham Wotring (his mark)
 Jacob Kohler Joh. Drachsel

In response to this request, the Coetus of 1748

STONE CHURCH AT EGYPT, BUILT 1785.

answered that if at least £50 be raised, they would send a request to the Synod for a minister.

Rev. John Jacob Wissler became the pastor at Egypt in 1752, at a yearly salary of £35, and served until his death in 1754. From 1754 until December, 1764, the congregation was served by pastors of the vicinity, who preached occasionally.

In 1764 the Lutheran congregation at Egypt was first organized, the members having previously been compelled to travel some distance to attend a church service of their own denomination; then the Reformed and Lutheran congregations agreed to build a church, and Peter Steckel of the Reformed and Christian Saeger of the Lutherans presented to each congregation respectively a half-acre of land and the church was built across the line, by provision in a written agreement "for the united use of the High and Low churches," (meaning the two churches interested). And in that year a "Union Church" was erected. The building was constructed of rough logs; and the pews were made of planks laid on blocks of wood.

In 1785 the second church was built of stone, in dimensions, 40 by 50 feet, with galleries on three sides; on the fourth side there was an elevated pulpit, and a large, square altar in front of it.

The accompanying illustration of this church was taken from a drawing made by a brother of Rev. Gobrecht, pastor from 1801 to 1831.

The two congregations, prior to erecting the new building, entered into an agreement, of which the following is a translation:

"This 18th of April, Anno Domini, 1785, we, the members of the Evangelical Reformed and the Evangelical Lutheran congregations, belonging to the parish of Egypt, in Whitehall township, Northampton county, in the State of Pennsylvania, have bound ourselves and agreed to erect a new stone church, 50 feet long and 40 feet broad, for joint use, and we herewith give to our joint architects, chosen for that purpose, namely, Peter Kohler, Esq., Samuel Saeger, Philip Jacob Schreiber, Adam Zerfass, Jacob Mickley, and Nicholas Saeger, Sen., full power to place the above-mentioned church upon one of the most suitable spots on our joint church lands. We also bind ourselves and each other to contribute to the requisite and necessary expenses according to our ability, until the said church is built and completed, which we hereby certify to with our own signatures, on the above-mentioned day and date."

Peter Kohler
 Samuel Seeger
 Jacob Mickley
 Nicolaus Seeger, Sen.
 Peter Burkhalter
 Peter Deshler
 Georg Koehler
 Johannes Moritz
 Friedrich Neuhart
 Johannes Hoffman
 Christian Seeger
 Nicholas Saeger
 (Tanner)
 Daniel Kern
 Johannes Grob
 Philipp Jacob Schreiber
 Adam Zerfass
 Heinrich Steckel
 Jacob Meyer
 Engelbert Hoffmann
 Wilhelm Laury
 Abraham Hartmann
 Jacob Kohler
 Caspar Ritter
 Georg Flickinger
 Jacob Fischer
 Adam Traxel
 Johannes Steckel
 Jacob Geiger
 Jacob Laub
 Michael Neuhart
 Theobald Herzog
 Adam Deshler
 David Neuhart
 Johannes Schantz
 Jacob Kern
 Peter Burkhalter, Jun.

Johannes Meyer
 John Kern
 Georg Schad
 Christoph Kern
 Jacob Shantz
 Adam Scheurer
 Jacob Seeger
 Johannes Schad
 Michael Neuhart, Jun.
 Peter Neuhart
 Peter Hoffmann
 Philip Knappenberger
 Jacob Mueller, Sen.
 Heinrich Ruch
 Christian Traxel
 Jacob Flickinger
 Peter Meyer
 Jacob Steckel
 Peter Kern
 Georg Remely
 Philipp Roth
 Nicolaus Traxel
 Johannes Kocher
 Sebastian Mueller
 Michael Ringer, Sen.
 Heinrich Jehl
 Andreas Siegfried
 Nicolaus Herzog
 Jacob Hartmann, Jun.
 Christian Bertsch
 Andreas Fuchs
 Andreas Jehl
 Heinrich Biery
 Lorenz Ruch
 Martin Mickley
 Georg Jacob Schneck

Abr. Blumer, Minister.

Joh. Caspar Dill, Minister.

The laying of the cornerstone of the new church took place June 13, 1785, at which time sermons were preached by Revs. Blumer and Shellhard, before a large assemblage of people, and a copy of the following resolutions was placed in the cornerstone:

"As we, the Evangelical Lutheran and Reformed congregations in Whitehall township (otherwise called Egypt), have agreed to build a house of God for our common use, therefore have we drawn up the following articles:

I.

No minister shall be admitted into the church, who is erroneous in doctrine, or is scandalous in conduct, or who was not lawfully called to the ministry.

II.

Both congregations shall have an equal right and share in this church.

III.

In order to guard against misunderstanding and dispute, it is established, with approbation of both congregations, that none shall obstruct the other in the service of God, but each shall hold justly to its alternate time.

All repairs, which shall become necessary to this house of divine worship, shall be paid jointly.

V.

The consistories of the congregations, and the pastors chosen, shall conduct the congregations to the best of their abilities, and keep in order the accounts pertaining to the church.

EGYPT CHURCH.

Done this 13th day of June, 1785, and signed with our own signatures, by us, the Architects, Elders and Deacons of both congregations, on the day on which the cornerstone was laid."

Peter Kohler	Samuel Saeger
Ph. Jacob Schreiber	Adam Zerfass
Jacob Mickley	Nicholas Saeger
Michael Neuhart	Nicholas Hertzog
Michael Neuhart, Jun.	Jacob Laub
John Hoffman

Abr. Blumer, Pastor.

Joh. Caspar Dill, Pastor.

The treasurers of the two congregations, Peter Burkhalter, Esq., and Samuel Saeger kept accurate and detailed accounts of all receipts and expenditures. An assessment was laid upon each member, according to his means, which amount he was required to pay. The members of the Reformed congregation were assessed £545, 2 sh., 6½d.; of the Lutheran £262, 17 sh., 4 d.; paid by instalments.

In 1821, the Lutheran ministers of this district held a conference in the Egypt church; and in 1839, the East Pennsylvania Classis of the Reformed church convened here.

The third edifice was erected in 1851, a large and attractive brick building, 50 by 65 feet, with a spire and bell. The total cost amounted to $9,252.91, paid by subscriptions of members of both congregations. A new steeple was erected in 1874. Its height is 140 feet; the weight of the bell is 750 pounds; the cost was $2,524.

The church was remodeled in 1874; and again in 1905, at an expense of $5,000.

The area of land owned by the congregation is 11 acres, 156 perches.

Pastors.—The pastors were as follows:

Reformed.

John Philip Boehm, 1734-36.	Abraham Blumer, 1771-1801.
John Heinrich Goets- chius, 1736-39.	John Gobrecht, 1801-31.
John Conrad Wuertz, 1742-44.	Joseph S. Dubbs, 1831-68.
John Jacob Wissler, 1752-54.	Samuel A. Leinbach, 1868-84.
J. Daniel Gros, 1764-70.	William R. Hofford, 1884-1900.
	George P. Stem, 1901-

Lutheran.

Daniel Schumacher, 1757-60.	Conrad F. Plitt, 1800-01.
Jacob Van Buskirk, 1769-70; 1789-99.	Johann C. Dill, 1801-06.
John George Yung, 1771-73.	Henry Geissenhainer, 1806-10.
Daniel Lehman, 1774-78.	W. Meendsen, 1810-59.
Theophilus E. Frantz, 1780-83.	Thomas Steck, 1859-67.
Herman J. Schellhardt, 1784-86.	Josiah S. Renninger, 1867-88.
Carl C. Goetz, 1786-89.	Jacob D. Schindel, 1888-1908.
	Elmer O. Leopold, 1908-

There are two cemeteries connected with this church, one adjoining the building, and the other several hundred feet to the east.

Organists and Teachers.—The first teacher, or "Vorsinger," was Conrad Schneider. When he began his service at Egypt is not known. He was no organist and the congregations having purchased an organ, he was compelled to resign his position. He was succeeded by Jacob Strein in 1786, who served 18 years. He was a competent man and very good in keeping records and accounts. In 1804 he resigned and moved to Lancaster. His successor was Henry Hempting, who came from Hamburg, Berks Co., Pa., and remained until 1810. He was succeeded by Adam Gilbert; Peter Ruch, Daniel Schreiber, and John Neuhart having gone to Rehrersberg to bring his family to Egypt. It took three days and each was paid one pound and ten shillings for the service rendered. Gilbert remained until 1822. His successors were: Theodore Storb, 1822-24; Johann Daniel Eisenbrown, 1824-29; Christian Schick, 1829-36; John Berndt, 1836-46; Francis G. Berndt, 1846-87; Robert A. Benner, 1887-1901; William H. Snyder, 1902-14; Laurence Acker, 1914—.

As long as the organist was also teacher, he received 33½ cents a month for every child. After the free school system was introduced, he was paid by the school directors. As organist he had to collect his own salary, and for every funeral he served he could ask 75 cents. After the year 1900, the organist received a fixed salary and was no longer compelled to collect it.

"Father" Berndt (as Francis was familiarly called), was the last organist who also taught the school. He was highly respected not only in Egypt church, but in the whole community. He took a prominent part in the educational matters of the county and even of the state. He assisted in the preparation of many young men who afterwards entered college and became useful and honored in their several callings. Egypt and vicinity can perhaps point to as many young men and women educated for the professions as any community of its size in the state, and a great deal of the influence exerted can be attributed to Father Berndt. He was also a good organist and teacher of music. His instruction and the rules and principles instilled by him are to be seen and felt in the Egypt church to this day. He was also of great help to the pastors in their work. After he retired from the position so long and so faithfully occupied by him, he lived near the church with his son-in-law, Hiram Ruch and wife Maria. He still took an active part in the work of the church and Missionary Society, was never away from his accustomed place in church and was liberal even beyond his ability. Like the name Mendsen, the name Berndt will continue to live and be honored for generations to come. On March 12, 1891, he quietly fell asleep, aged 72 years, 6 months, and 13 days, and was buried March 17th. A large concourse of people gathered at the old church, including many clergymen from the county, and from a distance.

School Houses.—There was a school house before the first church of 1764, as was customary in those early days. The teachers would read printed sermons in the school house when the pastor could not be present or the congregation was without a regular pastor. In 1787, a school house was erected and Philip Jacob Schreiber and Adam Zerfass were the respective treasurers. Members of the Reformed congregation contributed 71 pounds, 10 shillings, and 8 pence, and those of the Lutheran congregation contributed 28 pounds, 6 shillings, and 2 pence towards its erection ($267). This account was audited on August 9, 1801, and everything found correct. The school house was built of logs, two stories high; and it was used until 1829. In the winter of 1829-30, it took fire and was totally destroyed. A new stone school house was erected in its place, costing $1,537.54. It is still in good condition, occupied by the organist and his family.

In this building the public school was held until 1871, when the directors of Whitehall township built a new school house in Egypt. Father Berndt continued to teach in the new school house until 1883. The pastors of the congregation were accustomed to have their catechetical instructions in the old school house, and here the children were baptized. It was the meeting place for business transacted by the congregations or the church councils. In unpleasant weather the members gathered there before the services began in the church; and, as is still the custom, communicants go there to be recorded for the communion.

The first English school in the township was here. "The English School Society," of Egypt, was organized in 1807, and had for its object the instruction in English. It continued its work until 1857. The free school system began in 1834.

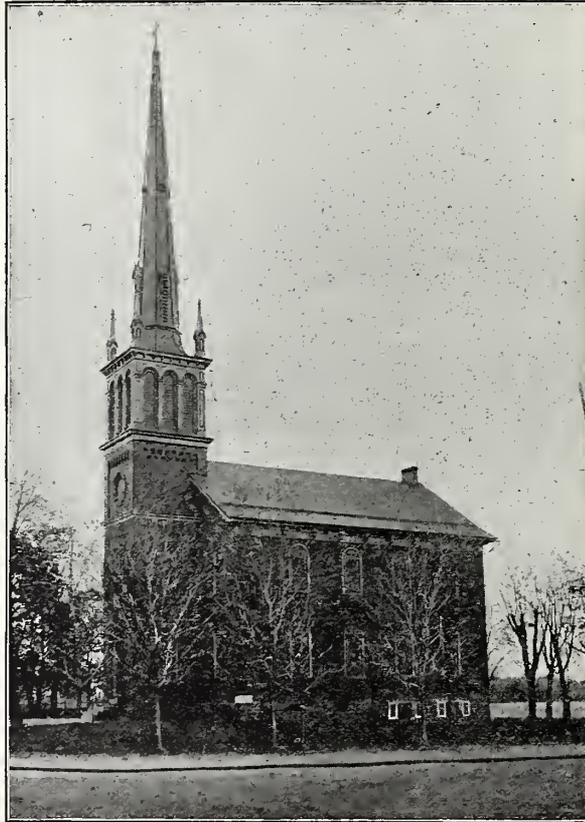

Sunday school.—The Sunday school of Egypt church was begun in 1844, and held its sessions in the school house until 1847, when it was discontinued. William Leisenring, of Cementon, who lived in Egypt for some years, was the first superintendent. In 1894, in the fall of the year, the Sunday-school celebrated its fiftieth anniversary; the church was appropriately decorated, and neighboring Sunday schools were represented. Addresses were made by the two pastors. The venerable William Leisenring also made a very interesting address; also Edwin Mickley, of Mickley's, Pa., who was a pupil of this Sunday school fifty years ago. Augustus Kelchner, Esq., a scholar fifty years ago, was present.

The reason why the Sunday school did not have a continuous life after 1847, was because Sunday schools were not yet generally introduced in that neighborhood; also because the Lutheran pastor, Rev. F. W. Mendsen, showed opposition to the movement. He was sincere and conscientious in his opposition and won many to his views. He held to the old custom of "Kinderlehre." Every month, on Sunday mornings before the regular service began, he gave religious instructions to the children of the church.

No school was held in the church of 1785 but when the present church was erected, a basement was provided for such a purpose. Old pupils said that the school was held only during the summer months and discontinued during the winter. Edward Kohler, Esq., was one of those who revived the school and prepared a constitution. With him was associated Charles Troxel. In 1867 Reuben Steckel was the superintendent but how long we do not know. Father Berndt took an interest in the school and he and his daughter Maria worked energetically for it. In 1884, Revs. A. J. L. Breinig and Alfred Lo-

The Organs.—The first organ was purchased in 1786, and it was this organ that gave the name "Organ Church" to the Egypt church. It was erected by Mr. Dannenberg, of Lititz, Pa. The Reformed congregation contributed 71 pounds, 8 shillings, and 2 pence, and the Lutherans, 28 pounds, 15 shillings, and 4 pence. Outsiders contributed 22 pounds, 16 shillings, and 1 pence. The organ cost 145 pounds or $386.67. Dannenberg's son received three pounds—"das gewoehnliche trinkgeld." Martin Mickley and Adam Troxell each received 13 shillings and 6 pence

MICKLEY'S CHURCH.

bach became superintendents. In 1888, Rev. O. S. Scheirer was the Lutheran and Mr. Lewis Kohler the Reformed superintendent. Since then the superintendents were David Schneck, A. M. Laub, Eugene Laub, Wilson H. Schneck, Robert A. Benner, William Kern, Francis Lindaman, Phaon Fatzinger, Lewis Breinig, Lewis Kohler, Preston Breinig, and Milton Steckel. On account of the unsanitary condition of the basement the sessions were held in the auditorium until the repairs of 1906 were made, then they were resumed in the basement.

"zehrgeld," for bringing the organ from Lititz. Peter Kohler received 2 pounds and 2 shillings for boarding and lodging the two Dannenbergs during their work in placing the organ. With other incidental expenses the whole cost of this organ was 154 pounds, 2 shillings, and 9 pence, or $411.04. With several repairings, it served the congregations for eighty-four years.

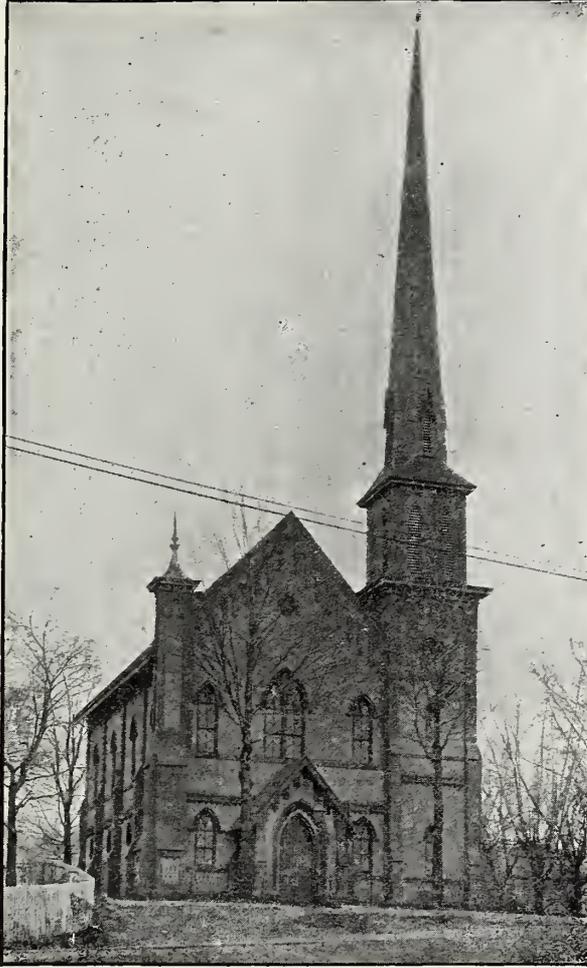

In 1870 the present organ was erected by Charles Hanzelman, of Allentown, at a cost of $2,500. It has rendered good service and is still in good condition. On March 22, 1869, a meeting was held to decide whether the old organ should be repaired or a new one purchased. The vote stood 42 for remodeling and 38 for a new organ. As the vote was not satisfactory a second election was held on August 22, 1869, and resulted in 66 votes for and 20 against a new organ. A committee was at once appointed to procure the new organ and on September 25th it was dedicated.

MICKLEY'S CHURCH.—Mickley's church in this township, was organized as a Union church

On Reformed side: Elders, David Biery, Peter Roth; deacons, Reuben Schreiber, Jacob Seipel, Henry Schadt, Peter Butz; trustee, John Schadt; and presiding officer, Charles Troxell.

Thomas Butz was elected treasurer for both congregations, and served until after the dedication of the new church, when David Eberhard succeeded him, and served until his death, Aug. 21, 1869; Nathan Eberhard succeeded him, and served until 1899, when Tilghman Helfrich was elected.

HOKENDAUQUA PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

(Lutheran and Reformed), on April 1, 1849. After its organization, the following were selected as the first church officers:

On Lutheran side: Elders, Solomon Kemmerer, Reuben Paul; deacons, Nathan Eberhard, David Gross, Jesse Reichard, Thomas Paul; trustee, George Kemmerer; and presiding officer, John Sheirer.

A building committee was also appointed, consisting of Jacob Mickley, Peter Miller, Peter Mickley, and David Eberhard, and steps taken towards erecting a church building. The cornerstone was laid May 27, 1849, and the dedication took place November 17th and 18th. The land on which the church building stands, as well as that used for the old burial ground, and the adjoining woodland, were donated by Daniel Roth, David Biery, and Joseph Biery. No regular pastors were called until 1850.

In 1869, the building was repaired at a cost of $5,000, and re-dedication services were held November 28th.

In 1881 a superior, ornate steeple was added, with an elevation of 139 feet; and a fine-toned bell, weighing 1,800 pounds, was placed in it, the gift of Thomas F. Butz, Eliza A. Troxel, and Ellenora L. S. Weaver. In 1882, a pipe organ with eighteen stops, was presented to the church by George H. Stem and family of Steniton.

Lutheran.

Jeremiah Schindel,	1850-59.	F. J. F. Schantz, 1861-66.
E. B. Kramlich,	1859-60.	Carl Schlenker, 1866-67.
W. G. Mennig,	1860-61.	J. D. Schindel, 1867-1908.
		J. J. Schindel, 1908- .

Organists.

F. G. Berndt	J. Alfred Fatzinger
Jacob Slemmer	James B. Snyder, 1874-
John S. P. Faust	1893.
John Leonhard	A. J. Benner, 1894-1902
Benjamin Seam	A. L. Held, 1902-13.
Joseph Gackenbach

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Among the first inhabitants of Hokendauqua were seventeen members of the Catasauqua Presbyterian church

BUTZ SCHOOLHOUSE.

In 1899 the church was remodeled; and in 1907, a one-story cement-block extension with a basement, was added at the rear of the church.

In the fall of 1913, the membership was: Lutheran, 700; Reformed, 500.

A Sunday-school has been conducted in the church from the beginning, the superintendent since 1905 having been Henry E. Fenstermaker.

Two cemeteries are connected with the church; one adjoining it on the same side of the road, the other on the opposite side. The sexton since 1902 has been F. G. Oswald.

Pastors.—The pastors have been:

Joseph S. Dubs, 1850-52.	William R. Hofferd,
A. J. G. Dubbs, 1852-60.	1863-1900.
Joseph H. Dubbs,	Thomas H. Krick,
1860-63.	1900- .

and they conducted religious services in various places of the town for twelve years until 1866 when the congregation took steps to establish an edifice for themselves on three lots of ground donated by the Iron Company. The corner stone was laid Aug. 11, 1867, and the church was dedicated with appropriate services on Sept. 26, 1869. The minister who served these devoted people for fifteen years, which resulted finally in the establishment of this church, was Rev. Cornelius Earle of Catasauqua; then Rev. James A. Little was chosen as pastor and he has continued his faithful services to the present time, a continuous period of forty-four years, in which he was aided and encouraged by the devotions of his wife. George Williams was a Sunday school teacher and superintendent for forty continuous years. In November, 1913, the membership of the church was 126; of the Sunday-school, 232.

Samuel Thomas was an active member of the vestry from the beginning of the church until he died in 1909, a continuous period for upwards of fifty years.

The congregation was regularly incorporated by the Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh county on Nov. 8, 1855, and the trustees named in the charter were some of its most prominent members: Samuel Thomas, David Thomas, Walter W. Walters, Samuel Kinsey, Charles D. Fuller, and Jacob Mickley, Jr.

The parsonage was erected in 1884. The previous parsonage was on the opposite corner from the church.

The slender and attractive steeple has an elevation of 131 feet; and its base is 600 feet above the level of the sea.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.—A one-story brick building, 30 by 50 feet, with tower and bell, was erected in 1884 as a "Union Church" at Cementon by members of the Lutheran and Reformed denominations who had been connected with the Egypt Church till then, and there they have conducted religious services on alternate Sundays until the present time, the respective pastors being the same as at the Egypt church. The building committee was S. Kemmerer, J. M. Laub, J. H. Stofflet, and B. Bartholomew. The lot was donated to the congregations by Maria Leisenring, a daughter of Peter Leisenring.

FERNDALE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH was built in 1871, through the encouragement of David Thomas, who gave the members an old frame barn, twenty-four feet square, which was re-modeled and comfortably furnished for religious purposes; and at the same time a Sunday school was instituted with Edward Edwards as superintendent. It was dedicated June 11, 1871, and an organization was effected with twelve members, of whom Edward Edwards, and Joseph Davis were selected as the first elders.

In 1873 the building was enlarged. In 1884 the congregation had 80 members, the Sunday school, 200.

In 1890 an attractive brick edifice was erected on the northwest corner of Front and Franklin streets and appropriately furnished and here services have since been conducted. The pastors, Revs. C. Earle, D. Griffith, and J. A. Little of that vicinity were active in its establishment. Rev. J. F. Pollock has served the congregation since 1909, and he has also acted as superintendent of the Sunday school. The membership of the church is 30; of the Sunday school, 100.

FULLERTON UNION CHURCH.—For a number of years from 1875, the citizens of Fullerton conducted a Sunday school known as the Jordan Union Sunday school in the old stone school house known as Sterner's. A desire for a separate Sunday school building was soon manifested and the Fullerton Chapel Association was organized and a chapel erected. The first services held in the building were for Christmas, 1886. The trustees of the association at the time of the erection of the chapel were Henry Kurtz, T. F. Diefenderfer, and T. M. Snyder.

In 1889 a new organ was purchased; the steeple erected and an 800-pound bell installed. The services were conducted by the pastors of the Reformed and Lutheran congregations at Mickley's and Catasauqua.

Rev. Thomas H. Krick became the pastor of the Coplay charge, to which Fullerton belonged by action of Lehigh Classis in August, 1901. In June, 1902, a Reformed congregation was organized with 126 members. The first officers of the congregation were: Elders, E. E. Diefenderfer, Matthew King; deacons, John A. Benner, William Newhart, Jonas Diefenderfer, and R. H. Hartman; Trustee, F. G. Kurtz. Rev. Thomas H. Krick has been the pastor since the organization of the congregation.

On Aug. 7, 1902, a Lutheran congregation was organized with 144 members and it was received into the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania in February, 1903. The following persons constituted the first Consistory: Elders, W. H. Krone and James W. Yost; Deacons, Charles P. Marshall, Milton A. Faust, John A. Storm, and Oscar E. Scheirer; Trustees, Edwin J. Smith and Michael Waverick.

The pastors have been:

J. A. Lambert, 1902-03 J. H. Raker, 1907-12
J. W. Mattern, 1903-07 J. W. Koch, 1912-

U. E. CHURCH.—About 1896 twenty-eight members of the United Evangelical denomination, from the vicinity of Egypt for several miles, put up a small frame church in the upper portion of Egypt, and religious worship has been conducted there since at irregular periods. Revival meetings were held here during November, 1913.

SCHOOLS.—The first school in the township was conducted in connection with the Egypt church and the education of the children was carried on there by its teachers until 1798, when a one-story stone building was erected at Mickley's, two and a half miles south of Egypt, and this was occupied until the township accepted the common school system in 1844. This was then replaced by a larger stone building which was used until 1873 when it was converted into a dwelling. At that time a double brick building with a spire and bell was erected at East Hoken-dauqua for school purposes, situated about half a mile from Mickley's, and it was attended by 90 pupils.

The next school building was put up in 1809 along the Jordan creek at Newhard's Bridge, situated five miles southeast of Egypt. It was built of stone and is still standing. It was occupied as a school until 1856, when another stone schoolhouse was erected about half a mile distant, near "Clapboard-Town," which was in use until 1879, when a brick building was put up near by in its place. In 1884, the pupils in attendance numbered 40.

SCHOOL BUILDING, EGYPT.

A stone school house was erected at Schreiber's before 1830 and was attended by children who lived at Coplay and Hokendauqua until 1869, when separate brick buildings were put up at the places named.

The schoolhouse at Sterner's was erected in 1870 and enlarged in 1882. In 1884 it contained 4 schools and 194 pupils.

The schoolhouse at Newhard's was erected in 1878, and in 1884 had 27 pupils.

The Schaadt schoolhouse was first erected in 1839; and in 1868 a stone building was substituted. In 1884 there were 38 pupils.

The Butz schoolhouse was a frame building erected in 1869, and in 1884 had 38 pupils.

The Egypt schoolhouse was built at Fairview in 1871 and had a steeple and bell. It has two rooms, and in 1884 there were 90 pupils.

The Kleckner school was erected in 1874. It was a brick building, and in 1884 had 27 pupils.

The Whitehall (Cementon) schoolhouse was put up in 1868. It was built of brick, two stories, with a spire and bell. It had two rooms and in 1884 there were 58 pupils.

In 1912 the county embraced twenty-six districts; with 494 schools, 517 teachers, 19,051 pupils; expended $629,530 in the cause of general education; and the State appropriation was $100,690.

DIRECTORS AND TEACHERS.—The following constituted the directors and teachers of the township in the year 1912, with the school-buildings where the system of education is carried on:

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Pres., Thomas Porter, Jr.

Sec., William R. Vaughn.

Treas., Thomas J. Butz.

H. E. Fenstermaker.

Clinton A. Knoll.

Milton Steckel.

Dr. Henry D. Leh

Supervisor of Schools, William F. Heilman, 1227 Turner street, Allentown.

TEACHERS.

High School (1904)

P. H. Breinig, principal; W. A. R. Handwerk.

Egypt School (1906)

Mary Downs, pr.

Carrie Hollenbach

Ruth Porter

Estella Butz

Mary Laub

Myrtle Clark

Clarissa H. Breinig

Florence Keefer

Cementon School (1892).

H. W. Stephens, pr.

Helen Cummings

Maude R. Marburger

Ruth E. Mitchell

Hilda Burnell

Franklin T. Oswald

Hokendauqua School.

P. A. Bartholomew, pr.

Maria Williams

Bessie Troxell

Florence McKeever

Mae Porter

Rebecca McFetridge

West Catasauqua (1905).

Dallas N. Semmel, pr.

Rebecca Stuart

Harriet G. McHenry

Barbara Smith

Mary McKeever

Fullerton (1906).

Albert L. Held, pr.

Miriam Porter

Jennie Heilman

Laura Johnson

Helen Israel

Jennie Bachman

Caroline Hacock

Mabel C. Lazarus

Edna Lazarus

B. Marie Harding

West Coplay.—Harold Kuhns, pr.; Harvey Greaves.

North Coplay.—William Shetlock.

Kleckner's.—O. P. Leh.

Butz's.—Lyman D. Koehler.

Schaadt's.—Sylvanus F. Peters.

Newhard's.—Florence Freyman.

REMINISCENCES.—During the past twenty years the writer, the Editor-in-chief of this history, has visited many aged people who were natives of the three Whitehalls and obtained many interesting facts and anecdotes about the old families. The persons from whom the greatest amount of information was obtained were: Mrs. Catharine Eberhard (nee Schreiber, born in 1812); Owen Rhoads, (born 1811); William Leisenring, (born 1818); and Tilghman Freyman, (born 1819). Information was also secured from Aaron Kohler, (born 1809); Euphemia Kohler, (born 1807), Enoch Newhard, (born 1811); Mrs. Peter Roth, (born 1813); Mrs. Tilghman Troxell, (born 1817); Stephen Freyman, (born 1810); John Diefenderfer, (born 1821); Owen Diefenderfer, (born 1827); Mrs. Salome Snyder, (born 1824); Reuben Leisenring, born (1824); Peter Graff; Moses Woodring; Mrs. Mary Albright (nee Steckel); Dr. Louis B. Balliet; Erastus Rhoads; and Solomon Ruch.

From the persons named and other sources have been secured such interesting bits of information as the story of how one of the little daughters of Jacob Kohler, while playing with a child of an Indian, who lived in a wigwam nearby, chopped off a finger of the Indian maiden and her father's wrath was appeased by the gift of a pailful of milk; of the great drought in 1762, when there was no rain from May to September, and rye was harvested in June and corn in August; of how the Graff family, having been alarmed by rumors of an Indian attack, fled from home, and, returning at night, one of the men drew a sword and struck at a dark shape, which he thought was an Indian, and cut off a corner of a table, which, a few years ago, was still owned by a descendant; of how Sybilla, widow of Conrad Leisenring, frequently paddled up the Lehigh river in a canoe and attended services at the Stone Church; of how Lorenz Ruch, the strong man, who, when his brother had loaded a large wagon with produce and was ready to go to Philadelphia, with his hands upset the loaded wagon, and by the time it was re-loaded he himself became ready; of "Tippy's" freshet in the Lehigh in 1786; of how the farmers, returning from Allentown, stopped to water their horses at John Rhoad's well at Sherersville, because the animals wouldn't drink the Allentown cistern water; of the Burkhalter (later the Breinig) farm, called "King's furrow" land, or "Heart of Whitehall," because it was considered such fine land; of Charles Burkhalter, who wore a half linen suit, and was called "der halblina gentlemann," who went to New York, entered the wholesale dry-goods business, became a millionaire, and married into the Havemeyer family; of a feeble-minded resident of the township, who often slapped his knee and said: "A constitution with a vice-president"; of Weidaman, the old German peddler, who spoke several languages and often delivered long speeches alone in the woods, and, when among people became reticent, but when the remark was made: "Sie sprechen nicht," responded "Die Bäume sprechen auch nicht"; of the year 1816 without a summer, when there was frost every month, and on July 5th ice as thick as a window pane; of the drought of 1820, when all the springs ceased to flow; of the gilded star which years ago, hung from the canopy over the minister's pulpit at Egypt church; of the nicknames of "Flet" Peter, "Fuhrman" Peter, "Blotch" Peter, and "Gentleman" Peter Roth; of "Schnitz" Peter, "Schwartz" Peter, and "Gentleman" Peter Troxell; of "Duvok" John, and "Shriner" John Troxell; of "Lang" Mike, "Dick" Mike, and "Glax" Mike Newhard, and of "Gros" Daniel, and "Glax" Daniel Newhard; with many other anecdotes of a like nature.

COUNTY BRIDGES.—Spanning the Lehigh river are two county bridges at Catasauqua, the Hokendauqua bridge, the bridge at Coplay and the bridge between Cementon and Siegfried, the last three of which are owned jointly by Lehigh and Northampton counties.

Those spanning the Jordan creek are Steckel's, on the road from Allentown to Catasauqua, erected of stone, with three arches in 1832 which was swept away by a flood in 1839, and rebuilt of wood in 1840, the first of the kind in the county; Newhard's, on the road from Allentown to Siegfried Bridge, erected of stone with three arches in 1809, and rebuilt in 1834; one on the road from Allentown to Slatington, at Sherersville, first erected of stone, with two arches in 1822, and replaced by an iron structure; and one spanning the Coplay creek at Egypt, was constructed of wood in 1850.

RAILROADS.—The Lehigh Valley Railroad extends along the river the entire length of the township, about six miles, with the following passenger stations: Fullerton, Catasauqua, Hokendauqua, Coplay, and Cementon.

The Catasauqua and Fogelsville R. R. extends from West Catasauqua westwardly through the central portion of the township, about two miles, with one small station, Seiple's, at the township line.

The Ironton R. R. extends from Coplay westwardly through the northerly section, by way of Egypt, about two miles.

MICKLEY ROAD.—Immediately after Whitehall was declared a first-class township under the Act of 1899, the commissioners instituted steps to improve the main thoroughfare leading through the central portion of the township from the northern line of Allentown at the extremity of Seventh street to Mill B of the Lehigh Portland Cement Co., near Egypt.

EARLY LICENSES.—The early licenses for conducting taverns in the township were issued to the following persons:

Adam Deshler, 1757	George Hoffman
Paul Balliet, 1759	Michael Snyder
Henry Berger, 1759	Peter Kern
Leonard Heughle, 1760	Jacob Hartman
Peter Troxell, 1761	Daniel Kern
Peter Kohler, 1764	Conrad Lintz
Daniel Good, 1769

Licenses issued in 1812 were:

George Gangawer	Peter Dorney
Joseph Levan	John Moore
Henry Good	Michael Sieger
Peter Butz	Christian Troxell
Abraham Griesemer	Peter Rumble

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following Justices of the Peace have served in this district:

Peter Kohler, commissioned May 28, 1779; re-commissioned Aug. 30, 1791; Nicholas Saeger, commissioned April 21, 1794; George Yundt, commissioned Feb. 6, 1811; Peter Gross, commissioned March 20, 1812; Nicholas Saeger, commissioned March 20, 1912; Jonas Hecker, commissioned Dec. 12, 1823; Daniel Saeger, commissioned Aug. 28, 1826; Henry Burkhalter, commissioned July 9, 1830; George Frederick, commissioned May 21, 1834; Joseph Kohler, commissioned March 7, 1838, and Edward Kohler, from 1840 to 1874. The later justices have been:

Simon H. Price, 1869-74.	Henry Hartman, 1872-77.
Aug. K. Kelchner, 1874-79; 1888-98.	James B. Snyder, 1877-94.
A. D. Kachline, 1879-84; 1909-16.	F. L. Roth, 1894-99.
Charles Schaeffer, 1884-88.	Eugene A. Laub, 1899-1901.
John P. M. Wint, 1898-1908; 1914-20.	Osville A. Gruver, 1901-06.
Newton O. Peters, 1908-09.	Thos. C. Lindaman, 1906-08.
	George W. Spiecht, 1908-14.

ENUMERATORS.—The enumerators of Whitehall township for securing the U. S. Census of 1910 were:

Western District, Harry B. D. Metzger.
 Eastern District, Charles W. Erdell.
 Middle District, Franklin Oswald.
 Lower District, John Jordan.
 Hokendauqua District, Thompson Porter.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

INDUSTRIES.

AGRICULTURE.

The agricultural development of the county began in the early part of the eighteenth century. The first permanent settlements were made in the limestone valleys in the eastern part of the territory now included in Lehigh county. The early settlers were hardy, hard-working, economical people, and through their methods of industrious farming this section soon developed into one of the most prosperous of eastern Pennsylvania.

The early settlement was rapid, and even the less desirable lands were occupied at an early date. The agricultural development in the limestone valleys was more rapid than elsewhere, owing to the smoother topography and richer soils, as well as to better transportation facilities.

Changes in farming methods have been gradual and have only been made where it was certain that decided improvement would result. Many of the present agricultural practices have been in use for years and are well suited to local conditions. For some years after the Civil War wheat brought a high price and was grown largely to the exclusion of other crops. After the western lands began to produce wheat the prices declined, so that the acreage devoted to wheat was reduced and other crops substituted.

In general Lehigh county is in a very prosperous condition. The agricultural practices have been evolved through years of experience by practical and industrious farmers and are on the whole very satisfactory. The land is kept in a productive state and yields indicate little or no deterioration, except in a few cases where the soil is naturally unproductive or where poor methods have been employed. The good condition of most of the farm lands and the attendant good crop yields are doubtless due to the systems of rotation used, to thorough tillage of the soil, to the use of a leguminous crop such as clover in the rotation, and to the plowing under of barnyard manure and other organic matter. These natural means of maintaining good crop yields are supplemented by applications of commercial fertilizers for certain crops and by the use of lime.

As the country has become more thickly settled the farms have decreased somewhat in size and this has led to a more intensive type of farming. With the exception of small areas in the vicinity of some of the larger towns devoted to truck farming, the land is used for general farming. The principal crops grown in the county are wheat, corn, grass, clover, and potatoes.

According to the 1910 census, nearly 29,000 acres were devoted to wheat in 1909, a larger acreage than that used for any other single crop grown in the county. Wheat is produced to best advantage on the Hagerstown loam, Hagerstown silt loam, and Chester loam, but is grown on practically all of the cultivated soils in the county. Yields are highest on the Hagerstown loam, but the Chester loam is reported by some to produce a wheat of slightly better grade. Winter wheat is grown exclusively.

The acreage devoted to corn is somewhat less than to wheat. Irish potatoes have largely taken the place of corn in some sections. Most of the corn grown is used in the county, being fed to the farm stock. Corn, while grown on all of the soils, does best on the Hagerstown loam and Chester loam.

The oat crop has a smaller acreage than corn. The oats are fed mainly to work stock, and the surplus is sold.

Next in acreage is rye. This crop is grown in some parts of the Berks shale loam region in preference to wheat, but small areas are devoted to it throughout all sections of the county.

Irish potatoes have become one of the most important commercial crops in the county. According to the census of 1910, over 12,000 acres were planted for this crop. The increasing success in growing potatoes has led to a greatly increased acreage in the past two years. It is estimated that in Lehigh county nearly 2,000,000 bushels were produced in 1912, the season being particularly favorable for the growing of this crop. The greatest development of the potato industry has been in the northern part of the county, on the Berks shale loam. This soil is especially adapted to Irish potatoes, although in seasons of light rainfall the yields are materially lowered. The potatoes grown on this soil are of especially good quality, and bring a high market price. The Hagerstown loam, especially in the western part of the county, is used extensively for the commercial production of potatoes, and is well adapted to the crop. Potatoes are grown to a less extent on the other soils. Buyers come into the county in the fall and purchase the potatoes direct from the farmer. In some cases only a few acres of potatoes are grown, while in others 40 to 50 or more acres are devoted to this crop. The growing of potatoes is being extended, especially on the Berks shale loam, where it has resulted in an increase in the value of farm lands. The late varieties of potatoes are grown most successfully. These include the Sir Walter Raleigh, Carmen, Klondyke, Vulcan, Million Dollar, and others.

Timothy and clover are grown over a large total area in the county. Much of the hay is sold. The crops are also used as forage for stock and for turning under to supply organic matter to the soil.

Many different kinds of vegetables, including beans, peas, tomatoes, celery, radishes, beets, turnips, onions, cabbage, sweet potatoes, and others, are produced on truck farms in the vicinity of the larger towns. Not enough truck, however, is produced within the county to supply local demands. The Schuylkill fine sandy loam and the Wheeling loam are especially adapted to vegetables, but these types are limited in extent. Good yields of the truck crops may be obtained on any of the principal soil types of the area.

Tobacco was formerly grown to some extent on the Hagerstown loam. This crop was discontinued largely on account of unsatisfactory market conditions. The Hagerstown loam is well adapted to tobacco.

At one time buckwheat was grown rather extensively, largely on the Berks shale loam. The acreage devoted to this crop has declined, however, so that now it is grown only in small patches.

Alfalfa is grown in a few fields on the Hagerstown loam, Berks shale loam, Lansdale silt loam, Chester loam, and the Wheeling silt loam. The crop seems to do well on these soils, and fair yields are obtained. The acreage of this crop could be increased to advantage. On the Hagerstown loam it is reported to have been killed out one winter by freezing.

Small areas of the various soils of the county are used for growing broom corn. The crop does well and would probably prove profitable if grown more extensively, as the loam soils of the county are well adapted to it.

Dairying is not practiced on an extensive scale by individual farmers in the county, although in the aggregate the proceeds from the dairy industry are important. Near Allentown and the other towns of the county a number of small dairies supply the local demand. Many farmers throughout the county keep a few cows and make butter, which is sold in the towns. Dairying is most important in the southern part of the county. There are a number of creameries in the vicinity of Limeport and other small towns. These creameries buy the milk or cream from the farmers and make butter, which is either sold locally or shipped to outside points. Many farmers in this section, especially near the Perkiomen Railroad, own herds of 5 to 15 cows, and ship milk to Philadelphia.

The dairy herds are composed largely of grade stock. Grades of Holsteins, Jerseys, and Shorthorns predominate. Few steers are fattened in the county. Some are shipped in and fed during the winter, but the number is small. A few hogs are kept on every farm, the Chester White being the principal breed. There are a few small flocks of sheep in the county. Some horses are raised for local use.

The greater part of Lehigh county is well suited to the production of fruit. Few of the orchards are handled scientifically, however, and fruit growing on a commercial scale has not been developed to any extent. A few commercial orchards are being started and should prove successful if managed properly. Nearly every farm has a small apple orchard which supplies fruit for home use. In many cases a surplus is sold at local markets. Many of these small apple orchards show the effects of San Jose scale, some having been irremediably injured. Where the trees are sprayed with proper solutions, the orchards are in good condition. The Chester stony loam and Chester loam soils are especially suited to apples. The commercial production of apples should prove profitable on these soils. The principal varieties of apples grown are the Baldwin, Fallawater, Smokehouse, Rhode Island Greening, Grimes Golden, Smith Cider, Early Harvest, and others. According to some, the Rhode Island Greening and Grimes Golden do especially well on the Hagerstown loam.

Peaches are not grown as extensively as apples, but there are a few small commercial orchards of this fruit which are well handled and are quite profitable. The best varieties for this section are the Elberta, Early Crawford, Wonderful, Carmen, and others. Peach trees do especially well on the Penn stony loam and Penn gravelly loam. The Lansdale stony loam, Berks shale loam, and Chester loam are also well adapted to peaches. The trees do quite well on the Hagerstown loam.

Grapes of good flavor and quality are grown throughout the county and thrive on all the main soil types. Individual plantings are confined to very small areas. Plums, cherries, pears, bush fruits, and berries do well in this region, but are not grown in large single areas.

The best fruit soils of the county are the Chester loam, Chester stony loam, Penn stony loam, Penn gravelly loam, and Berks shale loam. Owing to the proximity of large markets and the comparatively low price of much of this land the fruit-growing industry could undoubtedly be extended with profit in Lehigh county.

The farmers of the county follow definite systems of crop rotation. The one in most general use consists of corn, oats, wheat, and grass. The sod is usually plowed in the spring for corn, though fall plowing gives better results, especially in dry seasons. Corn is cultivated four or five times before "laying by." It is generally cut by hand, though in some cases harvesters are used. The husking is done in the field. The corn is followed by oats. After the oats are harvested the land is plowed, and in the fall wheat with grass seed is drilled in. The following spring clover is sowed in the grass and wheat. The following year the grass is cut for hay. The field is used for hay or pasture for one or two years, and the land again prepared for corn. Rye sometimes takes the place of wheat or oats. Where potatoes are grown extensively on the Berks shale loam and Hagerstown loam the rotation generally consists of grass, potatoes, and wheat.

Commercial fertilizers are used extensively in growing various crops, particularly for potatoes and grain. According to the 1910 census, about $140,000 was expended for fertilizers in Lehigh county in 1909. Some farmers mix their own fertilizers on the farm. Various kinds and amounts of fertilizers are used, in some cases upward of 800 or 1,000 pounds of high-grade fertilizers, rich in phosphoric acid and containing some potash, being applied. For wheat about 200 to 400 pounds of fertilizer per acre is applied at the time the seed is sowed. Many farmers use grades of fertilizers containing 8 to 12 per cent. of phosphoric acid, with about half that percentage of potash. Fertilizers with 8 or 10 per cent. of phosphoric acid and about half as much potash is usually the grade used. The mixtures rarely ever contain more than 1 or 2 per cent. of nitrogen, and often more. The nitrogen is supplied by the use of stable manure and by the growing of clover and the turning under of timothy and clover. Stable manure is usually applied to the sod before plowing for corn or potatoes. The amount of stable manure added to the land varies widely, but all that is made on the farm is generally used.

The liming of the soil was for many years a common practice throughout Lehigh county. Many old kilns still stand in different sections where the limestone was burned. It is said that liming was overdone at one time, and the land showed the effects of too heavy applications. For a number of years after commercial fertilizers were introduced little or no lime was used. During the last few years, however, liming has again become popular. The lime is applied on sod about once during each rotation, in amounts ranging from 25 to 40 bushels, or possibly more, per acre. In some sections the cost of lime and the labor of hauling it from the railroads are considered prohibitive by many farmers. The cost in many sections would be about 15 cents a bushel after transportation charges were paid. Near the lime kilns the cost is 8 to 10 cents per bushel. There is a diversity of opinion among the farmers concerning the merits of lime. Those who use it claim a material benefit, and others who do not use it believe it would be a benefit to the land, but are deterred by the difficulty of securing the material. In general, lime is hardly needed by the soils so long as a good stand of clover and grass is secured. Most of the soils have a mellow, loamy texture, and lime is not needed to ameliorate the physical condition. The good drainage prevents a sour condition of most of the soil. However, liming on many farms that have not received an application for some time would doubtless increase the yields to some extent. In case of uncertainty as to the need for lime, a small amount could be used on certain fields and its value determined by inexpensive experimentation. The same form of experiments could be carried on profitably with fertilizers by individual farmers.

The farm buildings throughout the county are well built and are kept in good condition. Many of them are of stone or brick. In general the buildings and improvements in the limestone valleys are somewhat better than in other parts of the county. Modern farm implements are in general use. Considerable care is given to sheltering the farm machinery and keeping it in good condition.

Owing to the opportunities for employment offered by the manufacturing and transportation industries of the section, labor for farm work is somewhat scarce. However, the work is done by the entire family on most of the farms, so that extra help is not needed. When employed by the year farm hands are paid $15 to $20 a month with board. Day laborers are paid about $1 a day, and at harvest time up to $1.50 a day.

Farms range in size from a few acres up to 200 acres. The census of 1910 gives the average size of farms in Lehigh county as 58.2 acres.

About two-thirds of the farms are operated by the owners. Most of the rented farms are in the limestone valleys and near the towns. The share system of tenure is the most common. The owner furnishes the land, buildings, and permanent fixtures, pays for half the seed and fertilizer, and receives half of the crops produced.

Land values vary greatly, depending on character of the soil, topography, condition of farm buildings and improvements, and proximity to towns and railroads. In the limestone valleys the values range from $75 to $150 an acre, while in the Berks shale loam the values are from $35 to $75 an acre. In other sections prices range from $25 to $65 an acre, or more. These figures do not take into account speculative values of possible suburban extensions.

The farmers throughout Lehigh county are in a prosperous condition and practice a well-developed system of practical agriculture. Dairying might be more widely developed to advantage, as large quantities of dairy products are consumed locally, and New York and Philadelphia afford good and easily accessible markets for milk and butter. While a few farmers have silos, more of these should be constructed to furnish green feed for stock throughout the winter. The introduction of better breeds of dairy stock would prove profitable. The potato industry is very important in the county, and could doubtless be extended with profit, especially on the Berks shale loam. Fruit could be more extensively grown in certain parts of the county to advantage. A larger acreage should be devoted to truck farming, mainly to supply local demands. Considerable poultry is raised throughout the county, this industry being given primary attention on many farms. This is a profitable branch of agriculture which might be extended.

On the whole, in view of the accessibility of large markets and the adaptability of the soils to a wide variety of agricultural products, the agriculture of Lehigh county should be made more intensive, greater attention being given to the production of special crops, which produce a greater revenue than the general farm crops.

SOIL.

Thirty-one soil types are found in the county.

In the South mountain region two types of the Chester series are mapped, the Chester loam and stony loam. These are formed by the weathering of gneiss rocks which largely form these mountains. The roughest areas are mapped as Rough stony land.

The Blue mountain region, the rocks of which are mainly sandstone, includes areas of Rough stony land. The less stony lower slopes are occupied by the Dekalb stony loam and Dekalb loam. The stony loam type of this series is found in small sandstone and quartzite areas in the South mountains.

Near the border of areas of the Triassic formation, trap-rock dikes are found, and these on weathering form the Montalto stony loam and Montalto clay loam.

The Triassic shale and sandstone formations in the southern part of the county give rise to the Penn series, of which the Penn silt loam, shale loam, stony loam, and gravelly loam are mapped.

The lighter colored rocks of the Triassic formation give rise to the Lansdale silt loam and stony loam. Where adjacent to the dikes of trap rock, contact metamorphism has produced conditions giving rise to the formation of the Lehigh shale loam.

The Hagerstown series, including the Hagerstown stony loam, loam, and silt loam, is derived from limestone. The loam and silt loam types constitute the best farming land of the county, while the stony loam is inextensive and of little agricultural importance.

The Martinsburg shale, with the interbedded sandstone, on weathering and decomposing, gives rise to the soils of the Berks series in the northern part of the county. These are the Berks stony loam, shale loam, and silt loam. The shale loam is the most extensive soil in the county and is rapidly becoming a very valuable soil owing to its especial value in the production of Irish potatoes. It is locally known as "gravel land."

In depressions in the Martinsburg shale and Triassic formation the Lickdale clay loam has been formed.

The second bottom or terrace land is mapped as the Wheeling gravelly loam, loam, and silt loam. The Holston soils differ from the Wheeling in that they do not show any evidence of admixture of glacial materials. The first bottom soils are mapped as Schuylkill fine sandy loam and Huntington silt loam.

General farming is practiced on all the cultivable lands. The Hagerstown loam and silt loam, Penn silt loam, Lansdale silt loam, and Chester loam are best for ordinary farm crops. The Berks shale loam is especially adapted to potatoes. The Chester soils are best suited to apples and the Berks shale loam and Penn stony loam and gravelly loam to peaches.

Two types, the Huntington silt loam, and Dekalb stony loam, are least suitable for cultivation in their present condition. The rough stony land is not tillable.

The following table gives the actual and relative extent of the several soil types in Lehigh county:

Areas of different soils.

Soils.	Acres.	Per cent.
Berks shale loam,	78,976	35.9
Hagerstown loam,	47,360	26.5
Gravelly phase,	10,880
Chester stony loam,	15,552	7.1
Huntington silt loam,	8,576	3.9
Chester loam,	8,448	3.8
Dekalb stony loam,	8,192	3.7
Rough stony land,	5,888	2.7
Hagerstown silt loam,	3,840	1.7
Dekalb loam,	3,520	1.6
Penn gravelly loam,	3,392	1.5
Murrill loam,	2,752	1.3
Wheeling silt loam,	2,688	1.2
Berks silt loam,	2,688	1.2
Lickdale clay loam,	2,432	1.1
Berks stony loam,	2,304	1.0
Penn shale loam,	2,240	1.0
Montalto stony loam,	1,216	0.6
Penn stony loam,	1,152	.5
Schuylkill fine sandy loam,	1,152	.5
Holston gravelly loam,	1,024	.5
Lansdale silt loam,	896	.4
Wheeling gravelly loam,	832	.4
Holston silt loam,	832	.4
Montalto clay loam,	768	.4
Hagerstown stony loam,	640	.3
Penn silt loam,	384	.2
Lehigh Shale loam,	384	.2
Wheeling loam,	320	.1
Lansdale stony loam,	320	.1
Upshur shale loam,	256	.1
Mine dump,	256	.1
Total,	220,160

TREXLER FARMS.

Deer-Park Reservation.—In 1901 Col. Harry C. Trexler embarked in a great agricultural enterprise which has attracted marked attention, not only in Lehigh county, but throughout the entire State of Pennsylvania. He then began to purchase farms in North Whitehall and Lowhill townships along the Jordan and Mill creeks in the vicinity of Schnecksville, ten miles northwest from Allentown, and until this year he has secured altogether twenty-four farms, which cover a total area, in contiguous tracts, amounting to 2,500 acres. He immediately began to turn up the soil of the hilly, unprofitable land and sow seeds in order to secure permanent pasture, and when these made their appearance he set apart about 1,000 acres, enclosed with an 8-foot wire fence, and placed there seventy deer and several buffaloes and elk. This was in 1908, and the land took the name of "Trexler's Deer-Park." The animals have increased in number and now the herds numbers several hundred deer, 20 elk, and 15 buffaloes. They have become a great curiosity, and many persons are seen almost daily, especially on Sundays, driving or walking along the road from Schnecksville through the park for several miles, to see the wild animals grazing on the hill-sides.

Peach Orchard.—The profitable land Col. Trexler has kept for farming purposes, excepting about 300 acres, on which he has planted peach trees and apple trees, about 22,000 of the former and 5,000 of the latter. He started the large orchards in 1905. Soon afterward he began to realize crops; and last season they were large, profitable and encouraging, 50,000 baskets of peaches and 500 barrels of apples. Like the "Reservation," these orchards have also attracted much attention, and many farmers and fruit growers are watching the result of this experiment. But it can be said that the enterprise of Col. Trexler is not, and was not started as an experiment. He took up the matter as a business proposition, and, like his other large enterprises, he has made this too, a success.

From the beginning, the Colonel has had the assistance of an experienced farmer to look after and manage this great undertaking for him, Mr. P. S. Fenstermacher, of Allentown. The superintendent of the orchard has been Mr. Carl Lindee, who resides on the place.

Some of the first efforts in the county towards the extensive production of peaches in large orchards were made about thirty years ago, by William Slifer, of Spring Valley, in the lower end of the county. He was followed by Samuel Brandt and Benjamin Dalrymple, of New Jersey. Brandt took some thousands of young trees to Lowhill township and gave them to certain farmers with instructions how to plant and care for them, for which his compensation was to be one-half of the crops. But the farmers were indifferent and the undertaking proved a failure.

FRITCH FARMS.

Dr. D. D. Fritch, the large miller at Macungie, is worthy also of special mention for his enterprise in respect to the successful cultivation and production of potatoes by a crop rotation different from that generally followed by the farmers of Lehigh and Berks counties. His large farm, with its attractive, substantial buildings, which adjoins the borough of Macungie on the west, has attracted public attention for many years. His annual crops of potatoes have been phenomenal, and quite naturally he has come to be recognized as the "Potato King of Lehigh." And this he has accomplished on land generally said to be not adapted for potatoes. The details will be found in the personal sketch of Dr. Fritch which appears in the biographical annals of this publication.

Many farmers in Lynn township have been particularly successful in the production of large quantities of potatoes, and this has made the stations along the railroad prominent shipping points, mention being made in the narrative of the township.

ECKERT FARMS.

Several miles northwest of Allentown along the main thoroughfare, John Eckert has several adjoining farms which have been recognized for their superiority. The buildings and general appearance reflect his care and management and his herds of Jersey cattle attract much attention. Mr. Eckert was president of the great Lehigh County Agricultural Society for many years.

COOPER'S CATTLE SALES.

Another subject worthy of mention in this chapter is the great and commendable enterprise of Tilghman H. Cooper for his efforts at Coopersburg, covering many years, in importing, introducing and popularizing the Jersey breed of cows, with a fine pedigree. His annual sales on Decoration Day have popularized Lehigh county to a remarkable degree throughout the United States and through them many distinguished farmers from distant states were led to visit the county and witness her progressive spirit in agricultural matters as well as industrial. He had started these sales in "Madison Square," at New York city. His farm of several hundred acres is regarded as a model.

HARDNER FARMS.

The Hardner farms, embracing about 650 acres, are located in Lowhill, North Whitehall, South Whitehall and Upper Macungie townships. The joint corner of these four townships is situated on his land. He is recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of the county and produces large quantities of potatoes and rye, of the former about 8,000 bushels annually. He embarked in agricultural pursuits in 1904 and from the beginning his farms have been under the general supervision of D. G. Hopkins.

CLIMATE.

The table below gives the normal monthly, seasonal, and annual temperature and precipitation for this section of Pennsylvania. These records are from the Weather Bureau station at Mauch Chunk. While the station is about 26 miles north, the records are fairly representative of conditions in Lehigh county.

Normal monthly, seasonal, and annual temperature and precipitation at Mauch Chunk, Carbon County, Pa.

Month.	Temperature.			Precipitation.
	Mean.	Absolute maxi- mum.	Absolute mini- mum.	Mean.	Total amount for the driest year.	Total amount for the wettest year.	Snow, average depth.
	° F.	° F.	° F.	Inch.	Inch.	Inch.	Inch.
December, ..	31	65	—5	4.2	5.7	7.9	7.8
January, ...	27	64	—13	3.6	5.1	4.5	11.0
February, ..	28	67	—14	4.3	2.0	7.2	12.6
Winter, ...	29	12.1	12.8	19.6	31.4
March,	36	75	—9	4.7	2.5	4.9	8.7
April,	49	92	14	3.3	6.3	5.4	1.8
May,	60	97	28	5.1	3.0	0.6
Spring, ...	48	13.1	11.8	10.9	10.5
June,	69	99	38	3.8	1.7	8.9
July,	72	104	41	5.2	5.4	6.6
August,	71	99	36	4.8	2.1	3.6
Summer, ..	71	13.8	9.2	19.1
September, ..	64	97	30	3.9	1.3	7.9
October,	51	91	20	3.6	2.8	5.8
November, ..	41	74	12	4.0	3.0	1.6	3.2
Fall,	52	11.5	7.1	15.3	3.2
Annual, ..	51	104	—14	50.5	40.9	64.9	45.1

The mean annual temperature is 51 degrees F. The average rainfall of 50.5 inches is well distributed throughout the year.

The average date of the last killing frost in the spring is May 3, and of the first in the fall October 11. The latest date reported in the spring is May 29, and the earliest in the fall September 22. The figures indicate that there is a growing season of 153 days in which there is no danger of frost. In Lehigh county, however, the season is probably somewhat longer. [U. S. Soil Survey.]

FURNACES.

HAMPTON (SIGMUND) FURNACE. This industry was situated in Upper Milford township, along the north branch of the Perkiomen creek, near the southwesterly line of Lehigh county. It was built by David Heimbach, Wisserman, and Coverly, in 1809, but Heimbach soon bought the interest of his partners, and conducted the furnace alone for 23 years. It was then called "Hampton Furnace." Different parties owned the property during the next 18 years; then Frederic Sigmund purchased a fourth interest, comprising then the furnace and 67 acres of land, and in the next nine years secured the other three-fourths interest. He conducted it until his decease in 1860. During this time it came to be known as "Sigmund's Furnace." His sons, Albert and Henry, became his successors. They operated it together for five years; then Henry became the sole owner and he operated it until 1868, when it was abandoned. It was a prominent industry during the Civil War. In its early days, "ten-plate" wood stoves were made there which had a wide sale and secured a great reputation for heating and cooking purposes. Later it was devoted wholly to the production of pig-iron. A recollection of it is still preserved in the name of the post-office maintained there.

It was 6 feet wide at top of the bosh, and 32 feet high on the inside. In 28 weeks of the year 1857 it turned out 722 tons of first-class car-wheel iron, made of neutral and somewhat magnetic black oxide from the Barto mines, 7 miles southwest, mixed with brown hematite ore from neighboring lower silurian limestone land.

LEHIGH FURNACE was situated in Washington township, Lehigh county, at the base of the Blue mountains, along the head waters of Trout creek, four miles southwest from the Lehigh Water-Gap. This locality was selected on account of its nearness to large quantities for burning charcoal; and also of the running water there. It was built in 1826, by Stephen Balliet and Samuel Helffrich, 7½ feet wide and 31 feet high on the inside, and blown-in shortly afterward. In 1857, during 26 weeks, it produced 554¾ tons of pig-iron out of brown hematite ore from South Whitehall township, nine miles to the southeast. Helffrich died in 1830. Two years later his interest was bought by Balliet, who operated the furnace until his decease in January, 1854. Afterward, for several years, it was carried on by his heirs; then it became the property of Cooper and Hewitt, of New York, who held it for upwards of thirty years, but discontinued its operation about 1880. The present owner of the land is Henry W. Blose. The original tract contained 25 acres; other adjoining tracts were subsequently purchased.

The first manager was named Applebach. He was succeeded by Samuel Lewis, Sr., later of Allentown, who managed the furnace four years, until 1832. Benjamin S. Levan filled this position afterward until 1854.

The great Crane Furnace is described minutely in the narrative of Catasauqua; and the Thomas Furnace in the narrative of Whitehall township (Hokendauqua) in this publication.

IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRIES.

FIRST ENGINE IN LEHIGH COUNTY—THE IRON INTEREST.—In connection with the history of industrial enterprises in Allentown we note the interesting fact that the first engine in the town or county was introduced in the year 1837, by Joseph K. Saeger. He came here from North Whitehall to establish a foundry and machine-shop, and carried on such an establishment successfully for about twelve years, when he retired from the business, though he continued to reside in Allentown until his death, in 1855. His son, Eli J. Saeger, took an active part in setting up the engine. This engine was built by Rush & Muhlenberg, of Philadelphia. It is still in existence, and having served well for a number of years the purpose for which it was designed, was finally relegated to what may be called a subordinate position among the ponderous modern engines and other machinery of the Thomas Iron Company of Hokendauqua. The little engine looks quite quaint, particularly because, though very small, it is a beam engine.

The people of Allentown were quite early astir to secure the benefits of iron manufacture in their midst. A meeting of citizens was held at the hotel of George Wetherhold, on Jan. 23, 1845, "for the purpose of adopting measures for forming a company to erect an anthracite furnace for the manufacture of iron at or near Allentown." J. W. Hornbeck was elected president, and S. A. Bridges secretary. A committee of five persons was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting. One of these resolutions stated that it was "considered of vast importance to this community that an anthracite furnace for the manufacture of iron should be established among us," and it was therefore resolved that a committee of five should be appointed to solicit subscriptions of stock under the general provisions of the law of 1830. This committee was duly appointed, and consisted of William H. Blumer, William Saeger, William Edelman, George Probst, and George Keck. It was expressed as the opinion of the men who drew up the resolutions that a capital of forty thousand dollars would be sufficient to carry out the project. Nothing whatever resulted from this movement, but it would doubtless have borne fruit had not the object aimed at been reached very speedily by the enterprise of others. The latter action was that which brought into existence the Allentown Iron-Works, one of the most prominent and successful establishments of the valley. Samuel Lewis, afterwards the superintendent of the works, a native of Chester county (born in 1805), was indirectly, but none the less surely, the means of bringing into operation at Allentown this industry. He had been reared in the iron trade by his father, had worked under that celebrated ironmaster, James Coleman, at Elizabeth Furnace, in Lebanon county, and also at the Lehigh by the Blue mountains, and later became engaged in the coal trade at Broad mountain, back of Port Carbon, above Pottsville. He had thus become not only familiar with iron manufacture, but obtained a wide knowledge of the mineral region of Eastern Pennsylvania. In 1845 he was employed by Bevan & Humphries, a prominent and wealthy shipping firm of Philadelphia, who were on the alert for investments, to make an examination of the Lehigh Valley with especial reference to the location of an anthracite furnace, for the making of iron with anthracite had by this time been demonstrated as entirely safe and successful by the five years' operation of the Crane works at Catasauqua. In the winter of 1845-46 he reported to Messrs. Bevan & Humphries in favor of Allentown as a location for the proposed furnaces, his decision being induced by the close proximity of ore-beds and the transportation facilities offered by the canal. He had not long left the capitalists' office when he chanced to meet Mr. Benjamin Parry, a noted foundryman, and Messrs. Haywood & Snyder, no less noted as engine-builders. He told them of the project under discussion, advising them to go to Messrs. Bevan & Humphries. They were not slow to act upon this advice, and before their conference had ended Mr. Parry had promised his assistance in building the furnaces, and Messrs. Haywood & Snyder had received a heavy contract for building engines and making other machinery, with a check for five thousand dollars to bind the bargain. Such was the method of the firm when they once decided on a course of action. Messrs. Bevan and Humphries bought on the 1st of April, 1846, seventy-two acres of land from Adam Sterner, paying therefor one hundred dollars an acre. The title-papers were received on the 9th of April, and on election day in October the company produced its first pig-iron. The furnace, to be sure, was small as compared with those now in use. It was thirty-five feet in height, and had twelve feet bosh or diameter. Furnace No. 2, built the following year, was of the same size. Together they had a capacity of about two hundred and fifty tons of iron per week. In 1851 the works were sold to a corporation, chartered, with two hundred thousand dollars capital, as the Allentown Iron Company, and composed of David E. Wilson, Henry King, Esq., Christian Pretz, and Samuel Lewis, of Allentown, and Joseph Cabot, Nalbro Frazier, Benjamin W. Frazier, and Charles Cabot, of Philadelphia. Of this company Joseph Cabot, who had been associated with Messrs. Bevan & Humphries, was elected president, and held that office until his death, in 1878, when John Lawler Welsh succeeded him. He in turn was succeeded, in 1881, by Mr. Fred. Prime, Sr. After the change in the company, Nos. 3 and 4 Furnaces were built in 1853 and 1854, and No. 5 Furnace in 1872, and Nos. 1 and 2 enlarged. Nos. 3 and 4 were each fifty-five feet in height, with sixteen feet bosh, and No. 5 was sixty-five feet in height, with seventeen feet bosh. Samuel Lewis, of Allentown, was the superintendent of the works from the start until 1878, and to him was very largely due their wonderful success, for few furnaces in the country have yielded greater returns than have these. His successor was Stephen B. Neumoyer. The ores used by the company were obtained, the hematites from Berks and Lehigh counties, and the magnetic from New Jersey principally, and the iron made from them always had a high reputation. The works when running at full capacity employed a very large number of men, and were a potent factor in Allentown's prosperity.

ALLENTOWN ROLLING MILLS.

The Allentown Rolling-Mill, second in age among the iron-works of the city, dates as an organized industry, from 1860, but it absorbed an establishment five years older, as well as two others started soon after its own origin. To begin with the institution antedating the rolling-mill we will say that, in 1855, Samuel A. Bridges, Nathan German, and James W. Wilson bought from Henry Nonnemacher, eighty-five acres of land in what is now the Sixth ward, with a view of establishing a foundry and laying out a plat of lots as an addition to Allentown. Both projects may be described as successful. The company laid out streets and sold off one hundred thousand dollars worth of lots. Their foundry was carried on successfully for a number of years, and finally, Mr. German having retired and Messrs. Thayer and Erdman becoming partners, sold, in 1878, to the Allentown Rolling Mill Company for one hundred thousand dollars. This company, as we have said, was organized in 1860. Benjamin Haywood, of Pottsville, was one of the leading spirits in the enterprise, and Christian Pretz, Samuel A. Bridges, John D. Stiles, and others, of Allentown, were heavy stock-holders. The Lehigh Rolling-Mill had been started in 1861, by Samuel Lewis. Merchant bar-iron was the original product of this mill, but a year after it was established the manufacture of railroad-spikes and boiler-rivets—the latter made by the Butterworth solid die process—was added. Joseph B. Lewis was superintendent of the mill from the start until July, 1866, and after that time it was carried on under Francis S. Kent and Thomas C. Brainerd, managers. It became, in 1864, the property of an incorporated company, consisting of Samuel Lewis, president; Charles Cabot, John Cabot, Edward W. Etting, Joseph Cabot, Frank S. Kent, and Thomas C. Brainerd. Through the mis-appropriation of funds by a member of the New York and Philadelphia firms, through whom the product of the Lehigh mills was put in the market, the company failed and the works were sold at sheriff's sale, being bidden in by Henry Schnurman, who leased them for one year to Reuben S. Shimer and Thomas J. Saeger. These gentlemen carried them on for a time, and they then passed into the hands of a receiver, by whom they were transferred to the Allentown Rolling-Mill Company in 1868. The Roberts Iron Company was organized in 1862, the principal stockholders being George B. Roberts, Algernon Roberts, and Edward Roberts, Sr., of Philadelphia; A. Pardee and George B. Markle, of Hazleton; William Lilley, of Mauch Chunk; Eli J. Saeger and Samuel McHose, of Allentown. This company built two blast-furnaces and operated them until 1871, when they were merged with the property of the Allentown Rolling-Mill Company. This organization carried on business until 1882, when a charter was obtained for the Allentown Rolling-Mills, which corporation succeeded to the property and business of the Allentown Rolling-Mill Company. The products of the works were pig-metal, iron rails, merchant bar-iron, rolled shafting and car-axles, rolled beams and angles, railroad chairs and fish-plates, bolts, nuts, rivets, locomotive turn-tables, steam-engines, and shafting, mill-gearing, blast-furnace and rolling-mill castings, mining-pumps, etc. When in full operation the works gave employment to 1,200 men and produced about 25,000 tons of pig-metal and 30,000 tons of rail, merchant iron, and other finished irons per annum.

This corporation was continued until May 1, 1914, when the Aldrich Pump Company was organized to take its place and has since conducted this large plant. H. W. Allison, of Allentown, was secretary and treasurer for many years until his decease, when he was succeeded by Horace Hudders. R. H. Aldrich is the general manager. The plant covers ten acres along the L. V. R. R., and gives employment to upwards of 200 hands. The trade extends throughout the United States and into foreign countries.

The Lehigh Iron Company was organized in the latter part of 1867. The works comprised two anthracite blast-furnaces. The furnace known as No. 1 was built in 1868, and that as No. 2 in 1872. The enterprise was projected by Hon. William H. Ainey, president of the Second National Bank of Allentown. After Mr. Ainey, Mr. E. J. Hart, a wealthy merchant of New Orleans and a former resident of Allentown, held the next largest interest. The balance of the stock was held almost entirely in Lehigh county. The first directors of the Lehigh Iron Company were William H. Ainey, Asa Balliet, Aaron Balliet, Thomas Barber, and Hiram Balliet. The works were located at Aineyville, on the west bank of the river Lehigh, and near the junction of the Lehigh Valley and East Penn Railroads. They were in operation until 1906 and are now dismantled.

The Wm. F. Mosser & Son Iron Foundry and Machine Shop, located at Second and Union streets, Allentown, was begun by William F. Mosser, in 1863, as the Lehigh Valley Axle Works, making wagon and carriage axles. A few years later Edwin F. Camp associated with him. They were then engaged as iron-founders, forgers, and machinists. In 1869 the firm consisted of Charles H. Ruhe, Benjamin F. Roth, and William F. Mosser. In 1872, Charles H. Ruhe retired. At some time (date unknown) Mr. John Neligh had also been a member of the firm, but later removed to Ohio. Benjamin F. Roth retired from the firm in 1880, after which William F. Mosser personally conducted the business until 1890, when his son, Charles, was admitted and it was known as Wm. F. Mosser & Son. In 1901, John Greenall associated himself with the firm as a partner, but the business name was not changed.

The plant consists of one-story brick-buildings with the exception of the storage and office rooms, which are two story, and employs from 60 to 120 men. A large amount of the business is devoted to the repairing of machinery. A specialty is made of repairing cement machinery.

In 1837 Joseph K. Saeger established a foundry and machine-shop in Allentown, which he carried on until 1853, when Thomas Barber became the owner. Later Edward Sherer became a member of the firm. Upon Mr. Barber's death, in 1879, his son, William H., became the sole proprietor.

Geo. W. Curtiss & Co. established a spike factory in the First ward, about 1863, which subsequently was owned by Nathaniel Tay, who sold it to James W. Wilson & Son, in June, 1871. The product of the factory consisted of railroad and mining spikes, of which from five to six tons were made per day and shipped to points in the West and South.

BOILER WORKS.

In 1863, James B. Cole and Abiel Heilman started a boiler works at Front and Linden streets, for manufacturing boilers, tanks, gas apparatus and all kinds of plate work. Cole died in 1883 and Heilman carried on the plant as the Heilman Boiler Works until his death in 1892. A company with this name was then organized by Mrs. Mary E. Heilman, Samuel F. Jordan, and James N. Rhoda, who have since conducted the works and employed from 75 to 100 hands.

Matthew Rhoda and John T. Noble established a boiler shop in the Hope Rolling Mill, in the spring of 1865.

The Allentown Boiler Works is situated between the L. V. R. R. and the Central R. R. of N. J., near Hamilton street.

It was founded in 1883 by Charles Collum. His only associate was John Allen, but at the end of a few months Joseph F. Barber was also admitted to partnership. Both partners withdrew from the firm after several years. Mr. Collum successfully conducted the business by himself for several years, and erected a new shop at Third and Walnut streets, when John D. Knouse became interested, and together they built up one of the leading industries of Lehigh Valley. Their business grew so rapidly that they were compelled to enlarge and they removed their shops to the present desirable site.

The plant under normal conditions steadily employs more than a hundred men, covers $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land and is thoroughly up-to-date in every particular and is equipped with the best modern machinery and is one of the few plants here that has had no strikes and shut downs. The products of the concern—including everything in the line of sheet iron and hot water boilers and drying kilns for cement plants—are shipped, not only to all parts of the United States, but also find a ready market abroad, including Cuba, Canada, and the Philippine Islands. It is worthy of note to state that this firm equipped such prominent buildings as the White House at Washington; United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., and the gigantic mercantile house of Siegel & Cooper, of New York City.

J. H. and T. J. McDermott began trading as McDermott Bros., at Bethlehem in 1895, and they conducted a boiler shop there for five years, when they removed to Allentown. They established their shop at Third and Washington streets and they have since carried on the manufacture of boilers, tanks, stacks, rotary kilns, dryers, coolers, and all kinds of wrought-iron and plate work. They employ 80 men.

P. F. and B. J. McDermott, who were identified with the McDermott Bros. until 1908, embarked in business for themselves and have since traded under the name of the McDermott Engineering Company, in the manufacture of similar iron work, including structural steel stairs, bridges, and ornamental fences. They employ 40 men. Their plant is situated at Jordan and Whitehall streets.

The cutlery establishment of C. F. Wolfertz & Co. was founded in 1862, by C. F. Wolfertz. In 1873 the firm became Wolfertz & Waldman, and in 1879 the sons of Mr. Wolfertz entered the firm. The business is now conducted by Charles W. Wolfertz.

AMERICAN STEEL AND WIRE COMPANY.

The American Steel and Wire Company, a subsidiary Company of the United States Steel Corporation, locally known as "The Wire Mill," is located at the foot of Lehigh street on the banks of the Little Lehigh river on a property comprising sixteen acres.

This plant is devoted to the manufacture of wire products and occupies a unique position in this community in that practically all of its product is exported. Its close proximity to the seaboard places it in an advantageous position for this purpose. It has been closely identified with the commercial and industrial history of Allentown for the past quarter century and has a remarkable record for continuous operation.

The original name of the plant was the Iowa Barb Wire Company, which had its inception in Johnstown, Pa., in the early '80's. It subsequently removed to South Easton, Pa., from whence it was removed to its present location in 1886. Operations were begun in Allentown late in that year and were principally confined to the manufacture of barbed fence wire, for which there was a productive capacity of 25 tons per 24 hours. The wire for this commodity was supplied by two departments: wire drawing and wire galvanizing. These operations required the service of approximately 200 men.

During the first year of operation the plant was dependent on outside sources for the supply of rods, from which the wire is drawn, considerable quantity of which was imported. After a steady and consistent growth in business it was decided to add a rolling or rod mill, which would enable the controlling of the source of rod supply, as well as effect desirable economies. This important addition started operations early in 1890. The output at first was approximately 100 tons per 24 hours, and gave employment to 75 additional men. At this time the output was almost exclusively for domestic consumption and the rapid expansion of this trade made necessary frequent extensions to productive equipment, including the installation, in 1893, of a wire nail department. This increased the output to 150 tons per 24 hours.

In 1894 the company united with similar industries, located in Pittsburgh, Pa., Cleveland, O., and Chicago, Ill., in the formation of the Consolidated Steel & Wire Co. The rapid growth of the plant continued so that by 1899 the output reached 300 tons per 24 hours. It was in this year that a further amalgamation of various mills brought the local mill into the American Steel & Wire Co., and later, in 1901, as part of that company, into the United States Steel Corporation.

This combination naturally resulted in the redistribution of business along geographical and economic lines, with the result that the output of this plant was set aside almost entirely for foreign markets.

The various re-arrangements and extensions to power and productive equipment, combined with the most efficient methods and processes known, have brought the output up to 500 tons per 24 hours, or in excess of 100,000 tons per annum at the present time. This tonnage includes barbed wire, nails, galvanized wire, bright and annealed market wires, staples, hoops, etc.

These commodities have a very wide range of distribution, being sent to the United Kingdom, the Orient, South America, and in fact, all parts of the civilized world. A shipment of barbed wire has been made to Iceland.

The magnitude of this yearly output will be better understood, perhaps, when it is stated that the nail machines alone produce over 100 kegs of 100 lbs. each for every hour of operation and this product requires over 600,000 kegs to contain it. The size of the nails vary from $\frac{1}{4}$ " x No. 22 Ga. to $9\frac{5}{8}$ " x $\frac{3}{8}$ " Ga. The nails, in addition to being supplied in kegs of various sizes, are also supplied in paper packets, packed in wooden cases, kegs and bags. These packets contain anywhere from $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. to 14 lbs. The same diversity is found in the packages of barbed and market wires.

An interesting exhibit is formed by the great variety of packages, units of weight, labels, etc., required for these commodities. The specifications governing such orders are the result of laws and conditions existing in the countries from which they emanate. For instance, a large quantity of barbed wire on reels is furnished wrapped in straw and covered with burlap. This material is put up in this manner to facilitate transportation across mountains by muleback. Labels and markings are made to conform to customs regulations.

In order to give some conception of the evolution of this plant and its present claim as the most important industrial factor in Allentown, it will be necessary to call attention to a few statistics.

When the plant started in 1886, the annual tonnage output was approximately 7,000, and employment was given to 200 men, whose wages annually aggregated $130,000.00. At the present time the plant is producing in excess of 100,000 tons per annum and employment is given to over 1,200 men, with an annual pay roll amounting to over $800,000.00. During the year 1911 there were 13,413 loaded cars inbound and outbound handled and during the same period over 90,000 tons of coal were consumed.

The plant is now equipped with modern steam and electric units which drive the machinery of the various departments and furnish illumination.

The individual machines are the best obtainable and it is the aim to keep them up-to-date and in first-class repair all of the time so that the highest efficiency may be obtained. The producing machines, particularly, are grouped and manned with this end in view. In this connection it may be stated that the so-called "efficiency" methods as applied to manufacturing, which have received so much attention in the public press during recent months have had the careful study of the company's experts and have been in practical application for years past, with gratifying results.

The auxiliary departments, such as machine-shop, carpenter-shop, store-house, etc., are in keeping with the rest of the plant in point of completeness.

A department of the plant, which is considered of as much importance as any of the departments, is the volunteer fire department. This is composed of employes from the various departments. These men respond to all calls for practice, as well as fires. They have at their disposal a full line of equipment which is in strict accordance with underwriters' specifications. A complete fire alarm system operates over the entire property and fully equipped hose-houses are located at short intervals. These men drill regularly so that the danger of disastrous fires is reduced to a minimum.

One of the principal factors which has contributed to the success of this plant is the stable and contented condition of the labor employed. It is a remarkable fact that here are 247 employes, or over 20 per cent. of the entire number, who have been continuously connected with the plant for ten years or more, and that of this number 92, or 8 per cent., have been here 20 years or more. This condition is true throughout all departments, the average length of service being very high. This fact is the result of the consistent policy of the company to give every consideration looking to the welfare of the employes.

While insisting on a commensurate return, a high rate of wage is maintained. Bright and sanitary working quarters are provided. A fully equipped hospital, with a surgeon in attendance, to give prompt aid to the sick and injured is located on the premises. Compensation is given employes or heirs for injuries, loss of life and time, as the result of accidents within the plant, under the provisions of a very liberal benefit plan. This plan, while entirely voluntary in character, follows the lines of the most approved Workmen's Compensation Acts in force in many of the states.

The cases of sick and needy employes are also carefully considered by committees and disbursements made as seems necessary.

There are regular and systematic inspections of the plant by various committees composed of workmen and foremen, to locate and correct conditions where there is danger of accident. This is part of the general safety plans of the company and is under the general direction of a chief safety inspector. The completely organized efforts of the company along this line are well known to those who are in touch with the steel industry, as the matter has been variously treated in magazine articles from time to time. The scope of the work done locally may be indicated by the fact that $30,000,000 was expended during the last four years for this purpose and expenditures are being made currently at about the same rate.

Liberal pensions are provided under the Carnegie-Steel Corporation Pension Plan.

Since 1903 the corporation has annually offered stock to employes, payable on the installment plan. This plan provides for the payment of bonuses on each allotment annually for five years and an extra sum at the end of this period, as an incentive to continuous service. This provides the employe, who is desirous of taking advantage of it, with an additional source of revenue, which is virtually perpetual in character. The success of this plan is evidenced by the fact that 25 per cent. of all the employes here are stockholders of the Corporation.

One of the most successful institutions of the plant is the club house, where a first class dinner is served at noon every working day, to the heads of manufacturing and accounting departments. This meal is prepared in a modern kitchen, which is part of the club house, and is supplied at nominal cost. After dinner brief meetings are held, where there is an exchange of ideas in connection with the operation and welfare of the plant. This plan is common to all mills of the company and is equally beneficial to company and men.

L. F. GRAMMES & SONS.

The firm of L. F. Grammes & Sons, Allentown, Pa., was founded by Louis F. Grammes, in a small way, in 1876, in a room on the second floor of the old H. Leh & Co. building, 626-630 Hamilton street.

Although difficulties and deprivations were met during its earlier days, yet through the keen and persevering mind of its founder and the diligent co-operation of his sons, the business was successfully developed step by step until it became the most extensive of its kind in the world, its business extending into every country on the globe.

The condensed history of this firm is that of growth,—one place after the other was found inadequate, until in 1907, the present modern mammoth brick factory was erected at corner of Jordan and Union streets, with a floor space of 100,000 square feet and employing more than 400 people. In this plant is manufactured a complete line of cigar-box machinery, wood-working machinery, wire nails, escutcheon pins, metal name plates, brass signs, stamped metal goods, metal advertising novelties, machinery guards, and hundreds of other articles. The method of business is unique, in that it is almost entirely conducted by mail, which gives this firm the distinction of being the largest customer of the Allentown, Pa., postoffice.

Lewis F. Grammes, deceased, founder of the firm of L. F. Grammes & Sons, was a son of Asa Grammes and Susanne (Moser) Grammes, and was born in Heidelberg township, Lehigh county, January 30, 1845. He learned the trade of machinist at the old Barber foundry. He was a natural born mechanic, being able to do journeyman's work at the end of his first year of apprenticeship. Later he was foreman for three years of the machine-shop of Merrill & Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

He was an inventor of machinery, having numerous patents on knitting machines, wood-working machines, and nailing machines. The nailing machine, of which he is a patentee, is considered a great piece of workmanship and is used all over the world where boxes are made. In the mechanical world, this nailing machine ranks in the same class as the linotype machine.

Many of Allentown's leading machinists owe their excellence to the tutorship of Mr. Grammes. Among his pupils were Emil A. Hirner, inventor and head of the Hirner & Henninger Co., Lafenus Gift, and Charles B. Wanamaker.

Mr. Grammes was a representative in councils for two terms in the Fifth ward; also school director in the Fourth ward and a member of the Board of Water Commissioners. He was a member of the Liberty Fire Company and also the Schwanewart Recreation Club and a charter member of the Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M.; member of Allen Chapter, R. A. M. and Allen Commandery, Knights Templar. He was a member of Zion Reformed church for 47 years.

On March 13, 1868, he was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. Weber, daughter of George Weber, of Easton. He passed away, April 26, 1911, at his home, No. 397 Union street, in his sixty-seventh year, of what doctors pronounced myocarditis. His wife and the following children survive: Harry A., Charles W., J. Frank, Mrs. L. C. LaBarre, and Louis G. Grammes. Three children preceded him in death: Allen Grover, Elizabeth Marguerite, and an adopted child, Mamie Amanda Franks.

The only brother surviving Mr. Grammes is Asa P. Grammes, of New Hope, Bucks county, supervisor of the Delaware Division Canal. Three sisters remain: Mrs. Ellen J. Colle, Miss Amelia S. Grammes, and Miss Tevillia C. Grammes, of Allentown. Mrs. Henry T. Kleckner was a deceased sister.

Mr. Grammes was highly respected by all who came to know him or had any business dealings with him. He possessed strong and elevated religious convictions, but at no time made any outward display of them.

After the death of Mr. Grammes, Harry A. Grammes became the senior member and managing director of this firm.

Harry A. Grammes was born in this city, December 6, 1869. At the age of sixteen years he learned the trade of blacksmith, then machinist, and draughtsman, following them in different cities. These trades were not learned by him because of his choice; but because of his father's conviction of the value of a trade to all his sons. Harry A. Grammes' trend always was along business lines. Even in his boyhood days, before his apprenticeship, he made a specialty of supplying the neighbors with fresh produce direct from his grandfather's farm. He also supplied his "trade" as he termed it, with kindling shavings, at so much per bag. Later he equipped himself with a small hand printing press and printed visiting cards and, by advertising in the popular mail order magazines, found remarkable demand for them.

In 1891 he sought to work out higher ideals and became a salesman and traveled over the greater portion of the United States, continuing in this position until 1894, after which he engaged in the manufacturing business with his father, and in which he has taken active part ever since.

He is a strong believer in printer's ink and because of this, and in the carrying out of the belief that anything that is worth doing, is worth doing well, and his inherited keen business instincts, his success has been such as has been unparalleled.

Harry A. Grammes was one of the organizers of the Citizen's Deposit & Trust Company and since that time has served as a director. He also served as a trustee of the Chamber of Commerce for six years. He is a member of Salem Reformed church. Socially, he is a member of all the bodies of the Masonic fraternity, as follows: Greenleaf Lodge, No. 561, F. & A. M., of which he is a past master; Allen Chapter, No. 203, R. A. M., Allen Council, No. 23, of which he is a thrice illustrious grand master; Allen Commandery, No. 20, Knights Templar, and Lu Lu Temple A. A. O. N. M. S., of Philadelphia.

In June, 1900, he married H. Blanche Horne, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. A. R. Horne, of Allentown, Pa. They have these children: Louise F., Harriet A., Lucile H., and Jermima E.

Equally associated with him are his two brothers, Charles W. and J. Frank Grammes, each performing an important office in the organization, the former being foreman of the Brass Name Plate Department and the latter foreman of the Machinery Department. Both learned the machinist trade under their father's instructions and, because of the inheritance of the valuable traits of integrity and inventive genius, are playing a most important part in the success of this enterprising firm.

BONNEY VISE AND TOOL WORKS.

The Bonney Vise & Tool Works, as its name implies, is engaged in the manufacture of vises, small tools, and drop forgings. Employees number about 150 men. The original shop was started in 1876, by Mr. C. S. Bonney, under the title of C. S. Bonney, in a small shop on Barker street, west of Sixteenth, in Philadelphia. At that time the line of goods manufactured consisted entirely of small vises and, as far as is known, C. S. Bonney was the first one to make this line of small vises in the United States. The factory employed about six people and occupied one room, renting power. From time to time the factory was enlarged and additional help was employed and many new lines of goods were added to the ones already put upon the market.

As the business increased in size, several other concerns were taken over and incorporated in the Bonney Vise & Tool Works, the firm having continuously remained in Philadelphia until February, 1909, at which time the factory was moved to Allentown, and the plant formerly used by the Allentown Hardware Co. was bought and adapted for the usage of the Bonney Vise & Tool Works. A drop forging establishment was added and many new lines were started which have since contributed to the employment of many machinists. Goods are shipped from this factory to points all over the United States and to many foreign countries. All of the goods shipped out bear the name of Allentown and advertise this city extensively. It may safely be said that nine out of ten hardware companies are now using or have at some time in their career been large buyers of the product of the Bonney Vise & Tool Works.

The officers of the Company are: President, J. E. Durham; vice-president and secretary, J. E. Durham, Jr.; vice-president and treasurer, F. S. Durham, who have been for many years residents of Allentown and identified with its business interests.

MACHINE-SHOPS AND FOUNDRIES.

Henry Nadig, from Neffsville, an expert mechanic, located at Allentown, at the southwest corner of Fourth and Court streets in 1869, and embarked in the manufacture of steam and gasoline engines, which he carried on with his brother Philip, as Nadig & Bro., until 1899. They employed from ten to twenty hands, and their trade extended throughout Lehigh county into the adjoining counties. They were succeeded by Chas. H. Nadig, son of Henry, who still conducts the business. He also repairs auto engines.

Taylor Mill Supplies.—Wm. H. Taylor started a store at Paterson, N. J., in 1867, to supply iron and wood-working machinery, mine and mill supplies, and tools of every description, and two years afterward removed to Allentown. In 1879 his son became associated with him and they traded as William H. Taylor & Company. The father died in 1880, and the son has since carried on the business. In 1883, the firm erected a two-story brick building for a store and ware-room at No. 256 Hamilton street, and there the business has since continued with trade extending throughout the United States and into foreign countries.

Charles Spangler established a brass foundry and machine shop at Third and Walnut streets in 1881, for the purpose of supplying general brass and iron castings, and here he has since carried on a successful trade. He makes a specialty of bake-oven castings. His shop is a two-story cement block building, 90 by 145 feet, and he employs 28 hands. Since 1908 he has also manufactured electro-textile machines. Heretofore these machines were imported from Paris. They are controlled by foreign patents. He is the only manufacturer of them in eastern Pennsylvania.

In 1884, David Kline started the manufacture of building hardware and jobbing supplies and put up a one-story brick building, 60 by 225 feet on Mill street, at Eighth (now L. V. T. Co. concrete bridge). Afterward M. H. Knauss became associated with him and they traded as the Novelty Iron Works until 1905, B. D. Keck having become a partner in 1902. In 1905, the company was incorporated as the Kline Hardware Company. Kline died in September, 1912. The officers are Thomas W. Milnor, president; B. K. Keck, secretary and treasurer; and M. H. Knauss, vice-president and manager. Their trade extends throughout United States and Canada. They employ from 25 to 30 hands. The following employees have worked in the plant for upwards of twenty years: William and Alfred David (brothers), Wilson and Harvey David (brothers), Wilson Schaffer, and Levi Buss.

R. Meisterknecht, in 1898, began the manufacture of all kinds of brass goods, bronze and composition castings, and also nickel and electroplating, at Nos. 714-718 North Fourth street, under the name of the Vulcan Brass Works, and he has continued the plant until now. He employs five hands. His trade covers eastern Pennsylvania.

G. H. Dougherty established a foundry at Third and Cedar streets in 1900 for manufacturing gray iron castings. He employs 20 men.

Harry Sittler started the Adelaide Brass Foundry at Fourth and Linden streets, in 1903. He manufactures brass and bronze castings, and employs six men.

In September, 1908, Edwin S. Brey, James A. Krause, Irwin W. Leiss, and John Pudliner associated together as the Brey & Krause Manufacturing Company, for making brass hardware castings for building purposes, with slate, marble, and toilet hardware as a specialty; and E. A. Butz, H. E. Berndt and Frederick Kleinbach united with them in 1909, when the firm was incorporated. They were located at Jordan and Union streets from 1908 to 1910; then they put up a plant at Front and Chew streets, which they enlarged in 1911. They employ from 40 to 50 hands, and their trade extends throughout this country, and into Mexico and Canada.

In 1907, H. B. Weaver and James Bowen established a furnace at Brick and Furnace streets, along the west side of the L. V. R. R., for the manufacture of cold-blast charcoal iron, and this they have since operated successfully under the name of the Allentown Iron Manufacturing Company. They employ 8 to 10 hands, and ship their product to all parts of the United States.

On the east side of the railroad, the Blanc Stainless Cement Company had been carried on for some years, but having suspended, the above-named parties embarked there, in August, 1914, for the manufacture of oxide and zinc, under the name of Lehigh Smelting Company, with H. B. Weaver as president; A. K. Jacks, treasurer; and David J. Nagle, secretary. Experiments are now being made preparatory to operating this new enterprise at Allentown.

Phaon Albright began the manufacture of wrought iron tubes and coils, and iron and brass steam separators. His plant is at the southeast corner of Third and Union streets.

Joseph Reuber engaged in 1890 in making building contractors' supplies, structural iron work, and heavy iron fencing, on Chew street, near Third, along the railroad. In 1900, his sons, Tilghman and Edmond became associated with him and they have since traded as Jos. Reuber & Sons. They employ 10 to 15 hands and their trade extends through eastern Pennsylvania.

John Cope started making iron fences of all kinds at Ninth and Walnut streets in 1900 and continued there till 1907; then Jonas H. Rupp became his successor and since then the plant has been carried on at 1026 Chestnut street, with fittings at Front and Linden streets. After operating the plant for many years, he was succeeded by his son, George O., and grandson, Lewis, who have since carried on the business with 10 to 20 hands. Their trade extends through the United States.

BRYDEN HORSESHOE WORKS, CATASAUQUA.

In 1892, E. A. Hirner, A. F. Henninger and O. H. Mink embarked in the business of manufacturing knitting machinery, under the name of the Excelsior Knitting Machine Manufacturing Company. In 1897 they removed to Washington and Meadow streets, where they erected and equipped a one-story brick building, 60 by 150 feet, and there they have since carried on a successful business. They employ 25 hands.

In 1902, John T. Lindstrom engaged in the manufacture of Corliss valve steam traps and three to five hands. He also repairs autos and wagons.

John J. Hanlon started a plant in 1900 along the L. V. R. R., at Sycamore street, for the manufacture of ornamental iron work of all kinds. His brother, Thomas, has been the manager. He employs from 5 to 10 hands. His trade is mostly local, though it extends into the surrounding counties.

The Sprague Machine Company, of South Bethlehem, was incorporated in December, 1910, by Pres., H. W. Sprague; Treas., W. F. Danzer; Sec., I. W. Miller, and C. S. Snyder, with a capital of $18,000. The plant is a three-story brick and concrete building and the firm employs twenty-five men in the manufacture of suit forms, cigar cutters, and stair and ornamentation work. Mr. Sprague was formerly engaged in general machine work in the Sprague & Snyder Machine Shop, at Rittersville.

DENT HARDWARE COMPANY.—This company was formed in 1894 by H. H. Dent, Henry P. Newhard, Charles C. Kaiser, C. W. Wackernagel, and George H. Brightbill, as a partnership concern. In 1895 it was incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000, by the same men, the latter two of whom withdrew from the company in 1901. The business was started in a small way in a building 45 by 100 feet. The plant has enjoyed a continual growth and now consists of a fine fire-proof and sanitary office building, 40 by 60 feet; a main building 456 by 45 feet, containing the machinery, polishing and painting departments; an iron foundry, 60 by 250 feet; a brass foundry, 60 by 210 feet; a smelting building, 28 by 60 feet; a powerhouse, 60 by 100 feet, and two warehouses, 50 by 100, and 50 by 210 feet.

The company manufactures refrigerator trimmings, iron toys and hardware specialties. They manufacture an extensive line of trimmings, original and artistic in design and mechanism, and for assortment unequalled by any manufacturer of this class of work, the patents for which are owned by the company. Every part of the work is made in this plant, which furnishes 90 per cent. of all the refrigerator trimmings used in the world. The reputation for finish and mechanical construction which their goods have attained, and their custom of prompt shipment, has built up for them a large and constantly increasing business among the largest refrigerator manufacturers in the country. The plant represents an investment of $400,000 and employs 400 people. Owing to the generous treatment accorded their employees, the company has never experienced any labor difficulties and the plant has been in constant operation, a record unequalled in the county. The officers are: H. H. Dent, president, who has charge of the sale of goods; Henry P. Newhard, secretary, who handles the manufacturing end; and Charles C. Kaiser, treasurer.

BRYDEN HORSESHOE WORKS.—This establishment, which is now one of the leading horseshoe works of the world, was organized in 1882, when Joshua Hunt, Oliver Williams, and P. F. Greenwood associated for the manufacturing of horseshoes according to the method developed by George Bryden, of Hartford, Connecticut. For a more detailed history see page 581, of this volume.

MOTOR TRUCKS.

INTERNATIONAL MOTOR WORKS.—The Mack Brothers located at Allentown in 1905 for the purpose of carrying on the manufacture of commercial motor trucks and secured a property on Mill street, extending from Lehigh avenue to Eighth, which they improved with additional buildings to meet the increasing demands of their business, which was developed to extend throughout the United States. They operated the plant until 1911, when it became consolidated with the Saurer Motor Company, of Plainfield, N. J., and incorporated under the name of the International Motor Company, which has since conducted the business at Allentown, employing from 250 to 500 hands, and producing trucks to carry from one ton to seven and one-half tons. Their trade extends over the world. This large plant is under the direction of the vice-president, E. C. Frick, at New York, who is assisted by R. M. Eckert, of Allentown. Since 1905, the general foreman of the assembling department has been P. J. Briody; and of the machine department, Joseph Pellozoni. The plant in 1910, was inventoried at $1,250,000.00.

FIRE ENGINES.

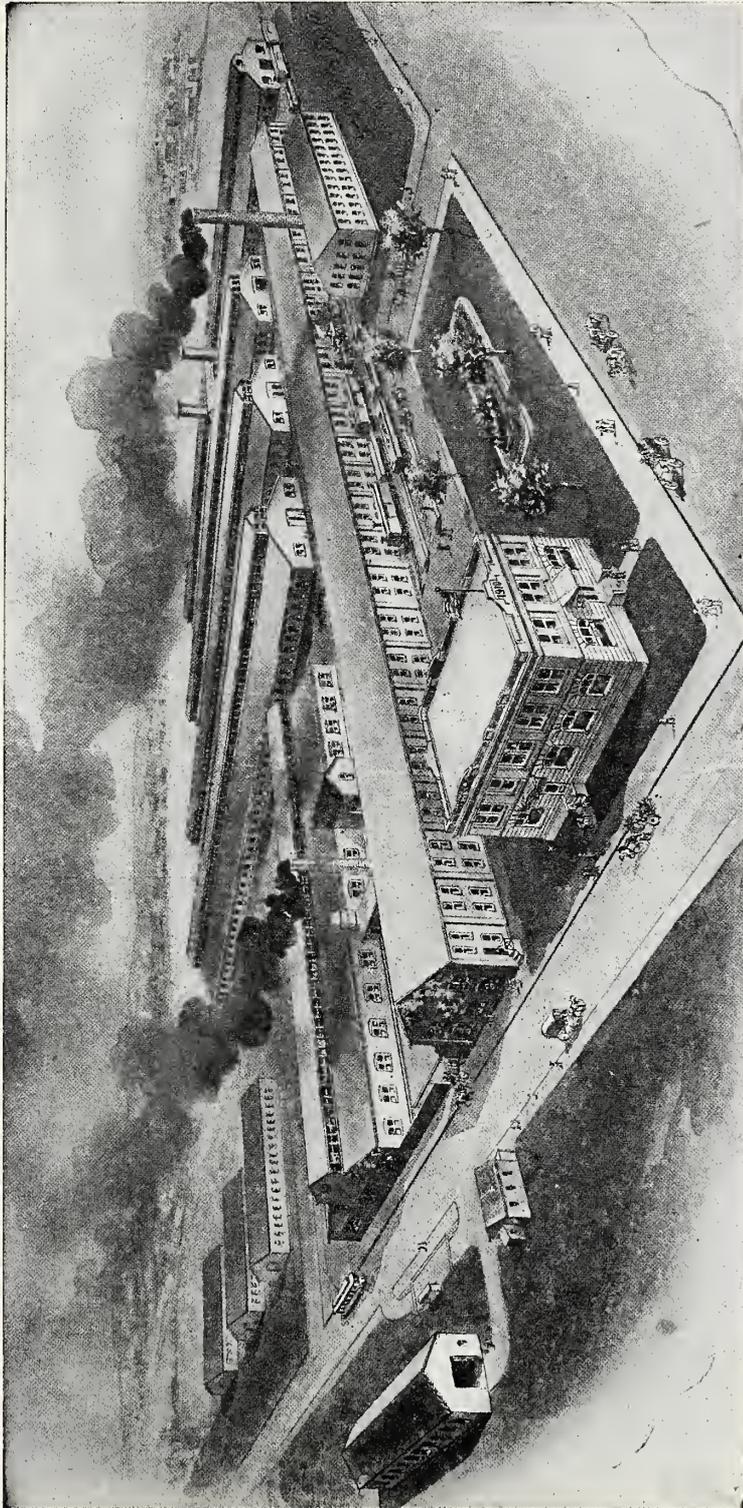

Auto fire engines were made at Allentown in a large building at Third and Walnut streets, by a party from St. Louis, Mo., during 1912 and 1913, and their product was shipped to all parts of the United States. They employed 150 hands.

GARAGES.

Dietrich Motor Car Company was established at Allentown in 1902 by O. H. Dietrich, and G. J. Heintzleman, Valentine Guldin, Mrs. Lizzie A. Dietrich and William T. Leh associated with him in its incorporation in 1907, with a capital of $25,000. They erected, in 1909, a superior 3-story re-enforced concrete building, 62 by 230 feet, on Linden street, Nos. 942-52, and equipped with the necessary machinery and improvements for a garage. They are distributors of automobiles and supplies of all kinds, employing from 35 to 40 hands.

Krause Garage.—In 1905, E. A. Krause engaged in the automobile business and established a garage at Walnut and Church streets, and there he dealt in the Maxwell, Columbus, Regal and Rambler cars until 1912, when he removed to the northeast corner of Law and Court streets.

Other prominent garages are Lawfer Auto Company, Berwin Auto Company, Allen Motor Company, Allentown Auto Company, Wink Motor Car Company, Klein Motor Car Company, DENT HARDWARE COMPANY, FULLERTON, PA.

Bee Auto Company, Ideal Motor Car Company, Keystone Garage, L. V. Motor Company, and Victor H. Steckel. Dealers in automobile supplies are Alexander Auto Supply Company, Allentown Auto Supply Company, Auto Supply Company, V. H. Steckel, and L. G. Grammes.

METAL CORNICE WORKS.

In 1875, James N. and Frank H. Hersh embarked in the manufacture of galvanized and copper cornice work for buildings, and also of setting up hot air furnaces. Since 1907, the business has been conducted by G. Willis, Edgar E., and Harvey, sons of James N. Hersh, deceased. The factory has been in their large store building at No. 820 Hamilton street. They employ from 60 to 80 hands, and their trade extends throughout eastern Pennsylvania.

Jacob Miller and Daniel Mauger engaged in metal cornice work in 1884 and traded as Miller & Mauger until 1897. Mauger continued the business alone until May, 1913, when the partnership with Miller was resumed. The shop has been at No. 112 South Church street since 1911.

In 1897, Jacob Miller started in the business for himself at Sixth and Court streets. He was there eight years; at Sixth and Linden five years; and for three years at No. 130 North Sixth street, when he sold out to his son, J. Aug. Miller, who has continued it until now.

C. H. Ettinger and George Mell started in this business in 1900 at No. 123 North Seventh street, and traded as the Ettinger-Mell Company, until Mell died in 1906, then Mr. Ettinger's brother, Edwin N., joined him, and they have since traded as C. H. Ettinger & Company. They employ from 6 to 12 hands; their trade is local.

In 1901, Joseph A. Best and Lewis A. Acker began business as a firm trading as J. A. Best & Company, and have since made and put up metal cornices in connection with putting up the Ajax hot air furnace and with tinsmithing. Their works is at No. 440 North Tenth. They employ from 20 to 25 hands. Best had been in the business as a partner of Wm. F. Neff from 1894 to 1890.

CHANDELIERS.

E. H. Odenheimer and C. D. Butz have traded since 1908 as the Royal Chandelier Company in the manufacture of all kinds and styles of gas and electric fixtures, shades, stands and brass spinning; also do electro and nickel plating. They started at Oak and Howard streets in a small way and remained there till 1910, then removed to Hall and Maple streets to secure larger quarters. They employ 12 hands and forward supplies to all parts of the country, reaching trade through illustrated catalogue.

Joseph S. Ritter located at Oak and Howard streets in 1912 and has since carried on the same business with three hands.

CARRIAGE MAKING.

The early manufacturers of carriages in Allentown were Charles Scattergood, Stephen Barler, Jacob Kramer, Peter Lehr, Snyder & Hendricks, William Frey, and Reuben Engelman.

Tilghman Statler carried on a factory at Sixth and Linden streets, from 1842 to 1910.

William Wolf started at 326 North Seventh street in 1835 and was in the business until 1855, when he was succeeded by his son. William continued it until he died in 1886. His four sons, William H., Eugene A., Charles F., and Harvey A., have since operated the factory for the estate. They have been engaged mostly in the manufacture of delivery wagons on orders.

Ludwig Wolf started in 1838 and continued for sixty years, when he was succeeded by his sons, Lewis H., and Allen D. This factory is at the southeast corner of Turner and Church streets.

Charles L. Christ and Albert P. Peters have traded as Christ, Peters & Company since 1881, in the manufacture of carriages and light wagons; also building auto bodies for delivery trucks. Employ 10 to 12 hands; factory at Hall and Maple streets; trade local.

William Sechler, Oscar B. Layton, and Daniel Diehl have traded since 1906 under the name of the Enterprise Carriage Works at 1025 Oak street. Weber & Schoener had previously carried on this small plant from 1900 to 1906.

In 1887, Avon Barnes and Peter B. Cunningham associated together under the name of the Allentown Platform Company, to make wagon platforms (5th wheel), gears, etc., and were located for a year in the rear of No. 136 South Fifth street. During this time they erected a two-story brick building, 70 by 100 feet, with an extension at the northwest corner of Fifth and Lawrence streets, and there the firm have continued the business until now. The junior member died January, 1912, but his interest is held by the estate. They employ from 7 to 10 hands. Their product is shipped throughout the United States and to foreign countries. Some of their employees have been in the works for many years: Charles Hacket, 26; Irvin Bortz, 24; William Merkel, 18; Isador Kuder and Emil Wolf, 15.

FURNITURE FACTORIES.

The manufacturing of furniture by machinery for the wholesale trade was started by Henry Berkemeyer in 1870 at the southwest corner of Race and Hamilton streets, on the site on which is now located the Reading Jersey Central passenger depot. About the year 1872 Mr. C. A. Dorney joined Mr. Berkemeyer, and the name of the firm was changed to Berkemeyer & Dorney. They manufactured a general line of cheap and medium furniture and sold most of it, unfinished, through the coal regions. This partnership was dissolved in 1877. Mr. Dorney sold his interest to T. B. Faust and Eli Hoffman, and the firm name was changed to that of T. B. Faust & Co. This firm continued the business until the death of T. B. Faust, when Mr. Dorney again entered the firm. He and B. M. Krause purchased the T. B. Faust and Eli Hoffman interest, and the name was changed to C. A. Dorney & Co. In 1883 E. H. Stein, Esq., purchased the Henry Berkemeyer interest and the business was conducted by these partners until October, 1885, when Charles Ziegenfus purchased the E. H. Stein interest. In June, 1886, their factory was destroyed by fire. They immediately rebuilt and changed their line of manufacturing to that of sideboards, and with increased facilities they doubled and trebled their business, and their ware became known all over the Eastern and Middle States. In the year 1893 they incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania as the C. A. Dorney Furniture Co., with a capital of two hundred thousand dollars, and the first officers and directors were as follows: President, C. A. Dorney; secretary, B. F. Krause; treasurer, Charles Ziegenfus; directors, Charles E. Ziegenfus and C. B. Krause. In the year 1895 B. M. Krause, C. B. Krause, and E. H. Stein sold all their stock to C. A. Dorney and Charles Ziegenfus. In the year 1898 Mr. Dorney retired from the corporation and sold all his holding to Charles Ziegenfus and sons, and the following officers and directors were elected: President, Charles Ziegenfus; secretary and treasurer, Charles E. Ziegenfus; Directors, Mrs. Charles Ziegenfus, J. Walter Ziegenfus, and Harry E. Ziegenfus. The company always conducted a retail store in connection with their wholesale business, and were for many years located at 333 and 335 Hamilton street. In 1908 they purchased the Troxell homestead at 612 Hamilton street, and Charles Ziegenfus & Sons erected thereon a six-story re-enforced concrete building, into which the company moved the retail stock, and they now have one of the very best appointed retail stores in the state. Their manufactured wares are sold largely in greater New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., and Boston. They give employment to about one hundred and fifty men.

In 1880 B. F. Schlegel, a carver and designer by trade, started a new industry in Allentown; that of parlor suite frames. He was the pioneer in this line of business. In 1881 he founded a company and Eli J. Schneck and Charles Ziegenfus became interested in the business, and the name was changed to Schlegel, Ziegenfus & Co. In 1884, after several disastrous fires, the firm went out of business, and B. F. Schlegel started the business of upholstering parlor suites. E. J. Schneck formed a partnership with George H. Bear, under the firm name of E. J. Schneck & Co. They manufactured tables and hat racks. In 1887 Mr. Bear retired from the firm and the business was continued by E. J. Schneck & Sons. George H. Bear launched out for himself in the same line of business, and later his brother, Charles A. Bear became associated with him, and they are now known as the G. H. Bear Furniture Co. The firm was incorporated in 1904 and established a large plant at Fifteenth and Green streets, where they employ 75 hands.

All the parlor frame factories might be called off-shoots from B. F. Schlegel, who was the pioneer in that line of manufacture. There were a number of other firms engaged in the manufacture of parlor frames but they have long since gone out of the business.

E. J. SCHNECK & SONS are engaged in the manufacture of parlor and library tables, extension dining tables and hall stands in all kinds of wood, in a three-story brick building at 1025-1027 North street, where they employ upward of fifty men. The business was started by Eli J. Schneck in 1881 with Charles Ziegenfus and B. F. Schlegel as Schegel, Ziegenfus & Company. In 1885, Schneck and George H. Bear organized the firm of E. J. Schneck & Company, with a factory on Court street, near Fourth, which was afterward removed to Ridge avenue and Chew streets. On Jan. 1, 1890, upon the withdrawal of Mr. Bear, Harry G. and Charles J. Schneck became associated with their father under the name of E. J. Schneck & Sons, which firm still conducts the business.

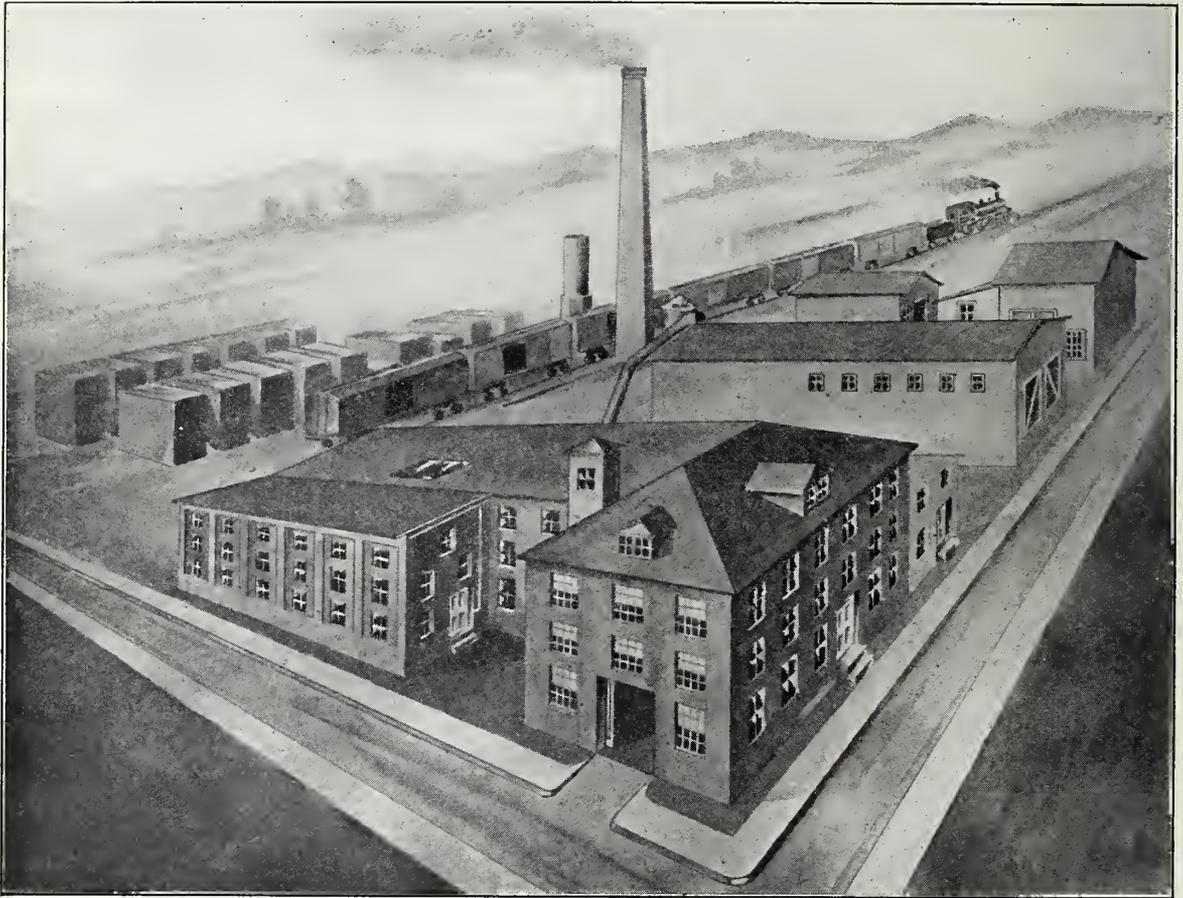

YEAGER FURNITURE CO., at Allentown, was started in 1885 by John Klunter and Wm. R. Yeager, who traded together for ten years under the name of Klunter & Yeager. Their plant was situated at the corner of Court and Hall streets. They first manufactured adjustable window frames and afterward developed into making frames for parlor, dining room and library furniture, with a specialty in odd and fancy chairs. They began with 50 employees and continued in that locality three years, when the plant was removed to the foot of Lehigh street.

In 1895, Mr. Yeager became the sole owner and then organized and incorporated "The Yeager Furniture Co., which has continued the enterprise with increasing prosperity until now, with Mr. Yeager as its secretary and treasurer. The plant has been enlarged several times, with its equipment of machinery improved to date, to answer the great demands of its increasing trade, and in the last twenty years it has come to be one of the largest and most popular establishments in the country with a reputation for "high-class" amongst leading competitors of the country to furnish prominent and costly dwelling houses as well as leading hotels and office buildings. As a natural consequence, during the past twenty years, this company contributed very materially in building up and extending the business reputation of Allentown as the "Queen City" of the progressive and flourishing Lehigh Valley.

KURTZ FURNITURE WORKS.—In 1892, F. G. Kurtz, W. B. Schaadt, and George J. Henn artistic productions, which extends throughout the business world. Its accomplished representatives and designers attend all the great furniture expositions. The employees in the plant have been increased to 250. A fine store was opened by this company in October, 1913, at No. 22 North Seventh street, Allentown, for the purpose of supplying patrons with all kinds and styles of furniture direct from the factory.

KURTZ FURNITURE WORKS, FULLERTON.

Having come to be a recognized authority on classical furniture, it has been selected from embarked in the business of manufacturing parlor furniture frames at Fullerton and continued it as a partnership until 1904. Mr. Henn having died, the company was then incorporated with a capital of $20,000, and the following as its board of officers and directors: W. B. Schaadt, president; F. G. Kurtz, treasurer; Thomas A. Jacoby, secretary; Thomas F. Dieffenfer, and James L. Marsteller. The plant is on the southwest corner of Front and Franklin streets, covers 40,000 square feet of floor space, and employs 120 hands. It is equipped with the latest wood-working machinery and produces annually about 15,000 sets of frames for parlor suites. The lumber used is maple and birch and shipments are made in solid cars to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Baltimore. Messrs. Kurtz, Schaadt and Jacoby are the managers.

JOHNSTON & SWARTZ, manufacturers of parlor frames, are located in a three-story brick building, 120 by 40 feet, at 325-335 Union street. The firm was organized in March, 1887, by Thomas Johnston and Christian Swartz, succeeding Waldemar Grossman. Upon the death of his father, Walter C. Swartz became the active head of the business, the senior partner living retired. They employ over a hundred hands in the manufacture of mahogany, walnut, cherry and other wood parlor suit frames, which they sell exclusively to jobbers.

GOTTLIEB BUEHLER & Co., the largest parlor suit frame makers in the city, were established in January, 1897. Their large brick factory is situated 301-325 North Front street. They employ a large number of men and produce frames of all kinds, including fancy chairs and couches, which are shipped to all the large cities in the East. They rank amongst the most extensive parlor suit frame manufacturers in the country.

WM. D. SCHANTZ Co., was incorporated in March, 1913, by Wm. D. Schantz, H. L. Schantz and R. K. Schantz, for the manufacture of furniture frames for mission and library chairs as a specialty. They employ twenty hands, and their trade extends to the large cities. The plant is at Front and Turner streets. It was formerly occupied by the Keystone Cement Block Company, which carried on there the manufacture of cement blocks from 1908 to 1913, when it suspended, and Wm. D. Schantz purchased the property.

BOEHM & SPIEGEL Co., manufacturers of parlor frames, Allentown, are a partnership concern and were organized in 1905, in Bethlehem, Pa. In August, 1911, they located in Allentown. They employ 35 men and ship their goods all over the country.

PLANING MILLS.

In 1865, Levi Butz, Benneville Frederick, and Solomon S. Frederick, associated under the name of Butz, Frederick & Company, for the purpose of conducting a planing mill, and established their plant on Walnut street between Ninth and Tenth. They continued there six years, when they removed to a large lot at Howard and Maple streets, where they erected a superior two-story brick mill, with basement, 45 by 80 feet, and equipped it with all the necessary machinery for supplying all kinds of wood building materials. They developed a large trade and came to supply the mill work for the leading churches at Allentown and in the surrounding districts. The members who now constitute this firm are Elmer E. and Harry O. Butz, and Frank H. and Joseph Frederick. They employ from 25 to 40 hands.

F. W. Weil started doing planing mill work of all kinds at 1030-31 Linden street, about 1870, and has carried it on successfully until the present time, having traded under the name of F. W. Weil & Company. For some years he drifted gradually into interior work such as bank, office and store fixtures, and since 1913 his plant has been devoted to it. He employs from 15 to 20 hands. His son, Robert, has assisted in its management since 1904.

In 1882, J. S. Kern and his son, William A., started a planing mill in the First ward for the manufacture of sashes, doors, blinds, moulding, etc., and they carried on the business until the death of Mr. Kern, when the sons, William A. and Howard E., became the successors, who have since traded under the name of Kern & Bro., now located at 213 Turner street.

Col. Harry C. Trexler, and Fred H. and Edward J. Sterner (brothers), associated together as the Trexler Planing Mill Company, in 1890. They first located at Linden and Church streets and started the manufacture of building frames and lumber of all kinds in a small way, with only three hands. In four years they were required to move into larger quarters in the Yeager Furniture Company building, and there they operated a plant with ten hands for only a year, when they established a large plant at the southwest corner of Thirteenth and Liberty streets, 60 by 240 feet, and enlarged it in 1907. They have since employed from 40 to 50 hands and produced large quantities of building materials for local trade and eastern Pennsylvania. John Wavreck has been a draftsman and foreman since 1893, and F. J. Case since 1894. Frank T. Hagenbuch has been manager since 1898. The present foreman is J. J. Frederick.

Elmer E. Ritter and Andrew A. Smith began trading as building contractors under the name of Ritter & Smith, in 1890. In 1899 they established a planing mill at Jefferson and Gordon streets, for all kinds of mill work, and have since conducted a successful business, employing from 25 to 30 hands. Their trade is local, extending into the surrounding counties.

In January, 1905, Amandus Albright and son, Milton J., started a planing mill for mill work of all kinds on premises at the rear of 315 to 323 West Fourteenth street, and have since conducted a successful business, employing from 30 to 45 hands. Their trade is mostly local. Another son, Victor J., has been foreman of the plant.

In 1911, Wm. H. Downing and John J. Mosser began trading as the Allentown Packing Box Company, for the manufacture of all kinds of wooden packing boxes. They employ twelve hands and their product is shipped into the surrounding counties. Their factory is at Front and Chew streets.

Washing Machines.—H. F. Kuhns, after following the manufacture of washing machines at Fullerton from 1900, to April, 1914, removed to Allentown. He located on Fourth street, near Court, where he has since continued the business. He secured a patent in August, 1914, for an improved washing machine, which he has called the "Reliance."

THE G. F. ERICH COMPANY, are extensive trucks and teams are loaded. In addition to the high state of efficiency attained in the warehouse, short cut methods have been installed in the office.

The G. F. Erich Company was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania on March 13, 1913, with a full paid capital of $25,000. The following are its officers: G. F. Erich, president; L. H. Rupp, vice-president; A. G. Newhard, secretary and treasurer.

SLATE.

The discovery of slate in Lehigh county was made in the upper section, at Slatington, in 1844. Thence the business extended in a most remarkable manner into Washington township and in the past seventy years it has been developed into immense proportions, with trade extending into all parts of the world. For the early discovery of slate, the reader is referred to wholesale and retail dealers of building supplies and coal, located at 513-539 North St. Cloud street, near Liberty, Allentown.

ERICH ESTABLISHMENT, ST. CLOUD, NEAR LIBERTY STREET.

About the year 1891, H. K. Erich established himself in the coal business at Twentieth and Fairview streets. He was succeeded in 1902 by his son, George F. Erich, who added all kinds of building supply material and was very successful in his business venture from the beginning. In 1913, the firm of George F. Erich & Company purchased about one acre of ground from George & Flexer, who were engaged in the coal business on St. Cloud street, near Liberty. In 1913, after the incorporation of the G. F. Erich Company, a warehouse of hollow tile, 110x54 feet, was erected upon these premises, besides other shedding was built, and six additional coal pockets were constructed. The business is located on the West End branch of the L. V. R. R. The commodious and well-arranged two-story warehouse is separated from the office by a drive-way where all the historical narrative of Slatington. The following narrative shows its development in the township.

The Lehigh Slate Co. was chartered in 1854, with a capital of $150,000. A quarry opened in 1848, by Robert McDowell, was named "Washington," after the township. The first derrick was erected here in 1857, by Charles Peters and Boas Hausman. The "Franklin" was opened soon afterward, the "Mantel" in 1860, and the "New Bangor" in 1868. The business of this company was continued till 1881, when it became the property of J. Hess & Co., of Easton.

The "Williams" quarry, several hundred feet north of the railroad station, was opened in 1863 by David and Owen Williams, and came to be developed into a valuable property, more especially for school slate. David Williams opened a quarry near-by in 1869, mostly for school slate. In 1877 he put up a large factory for mantel and school-slate.

The "Keystone" was opened in the same year, about a thousand feet farther north, by H. O. Wilson, J. Hoffman, William Peters, L. C. Smith, and H. J. Hankee; and in 1868 they associated together and traded under the name of the Keystone Slate Co. In twenty years it was estimated to be worth $85,000, owned by Dodson Brothers, and operated by Cassel & Co.

The "Douglass," along Trout creek, one-third of a mile west of Slatington, was opened in 1849, by Robert McDowell, and, after operating it successfully for twenty years, he sold it to Morgan Jones. Afterward it was owned by Henry Kuntz. He also opened the "Bangor" in 1867.

Owen Jones and William Roberts opened a productive quarry in 1845 along the West Branch of Trout creek, and the settlement there came to be called "Welshtown"; and in twenty years it was owned by Benjamin Kern and carried on by R. R. Hughes & Co.

was opened near by in 1867 by Danner, Shifely, & Coward. Both were subsequently owned by Benjamin Kern.

The "Blue Vein" quarry, on Trout creek, was opened in 1866, by D. D. Jones, O. Saylor, and others. In 1868 a company was chartered for $75,000, which was afterward owned by M. H. Horn.

The "Penryn" was opened in 1864 by Hugh Hughes and D. D. Jones, which came to be wholly owned in 1868 by Jones, and the hamlet cutting box knife operated by a foot treadle. A developed there took the name of Jonestown. Near by the "Demarara" was opened in 1856, by Nelson Labar and F. Smith, and afterward operated by the Demarara Slate Co., and owned by Warthman & Peters.

The "American" was opened in 1864 by Thomas Kern, who formed the American Slate Co. with a capital of $125,000. It was after-

INTERIOR OF G. F. ERICH COMPANY'S OFFICE.

The "Franklin" quarry was opened about 1852, and in 1867 Jones & Williams bought the property for $89,000, which included a 25-horse power engine. It was afterward owned by the Henry Williams Estate and valued at $140,000. Nearby was the "Star," opened by Daniel Thomas in 1868, and operated by Owen A. Williams, valued at $60,000.

The "Eagle" quarry was opened in 1867, and shortly afterward Henry Kuntz and Philip Woodring bought it and carried on successful operations there.

The "Monitor" quarry was opened in 1867 by Stephen Danner, on the W. Branch of Trout creek, and R. Knecht was associated with him in carrying on the business. The "Madison" ward owned by Dr. John J. Detweiler and operated by Joel Neff.

The "Harry Williams," on Trout creek, was opened in 1850, by William J. Roberts, and afterward owned and operated by the Blue Mountain Slate Co., capitalized at $150,000. Near by was the "Trout Creek" quarry, opened by David McKenna and Z. Thomas, in 1865, and afterward owned and operated by the McDowell Slate Co. It was valued at $125,000.

The "Glencoe," one mile west from Slatington, was opened in 1856 by M. D. George, and operated by the Glencoe Slate Co., with a capital of $40,000. Next was the "Conway," opened in 1866, by Dr. H. O. Wilson; next the "Brooklyn," opened in 1866, by David McKenna and Z. Thomas; next the "Humboldt," opened in 1866 by Henry Wert; next the "Hoffman," opened in 1868, by William Weiss and William Roth; and next the "Joy," opened in 1847 by T. Weiss.

The "Locke," two and one-half miles west of Slatington, at Slatedale, was opened in 1848, by George Labar and his brother, Wilson, and operated by the Locke Slate Co., valued at $150,000.

The "Enterprise," opened near by in 1868, by Francis Shenter, and carried on by the Enterprise Slate Co., was valued at $75,000, and the "Excelsior," in 1864, by T. Weiss.

The "Hope" was opened a mile beyond, in 1861, by Owen Lloyd and operated by the Hope Slate Co., valued at $65,000.

The "Diamond" was opened a mile farther west, in 1848, by Schall & Balliet. It was operated by the Diamond Slate Co., in 1863, and afterward owned by William Herbst.

The "Kern," near Slatington, was opened by J. Kern and others, in 1867, and afterward owned by D. D. Jones.

From these numerous operations and the great enterprise of their several owners it is evident that the slate business employed several thousand hands all the time, required an investment of several millions of dollars, and contributed a great deal toward the comfort and enrichment of the community; and in relative importance it was next to agriculture.

According to the United States census, the Slatington region has more quarries in active operation, and produces more roofing, school and factory slates, than any other section of the country. In 1907 the production was reported: Roofing, 200,000 squares; school, 24,000 cases; black-boards, 670,000 square feet; structural, 390 cars; seventy-five quarries were in operation to supply the materials mentioned.

To enable the reader to form a proper idea of the great use and value of slate for building purposes, the following productions are mentioned:

Flagging	Rails
Flooring	Wash-tubs
Tiling	Bath-tubs
Moulding	Sinks
Vestibuling	Meat-tanks
Wainscoating	Water-tanks
Linings	Vats
Mantels	Mangers
Hearthstone	Billiard-tables
Steps	Counter-tops
Risers	Tablets
Platforms	Bar-fixtures
Sills	Urinals
Lintels	Currier-tables
Shelves	Vaults
Balusters	Cisterns

Seventy years ago the slates were imported from Wales, where quarries have been worked since the twelfth century. Since then, from a small beginning, the trade has been developed to an annual production of $4,000,000.

Prior to 1909 all the slate produced in Pennsylvania was quarried in Lehigh, Northampton, and York counties, the proportion of Lehigh county having been 29.58 per cent. The total output in 1908 was $3,902,958, or 61.79 per cent. of the total value in the United States. The percentage of mill-stock was 73.59; and of roofing-slate 59.21.

The early operations were slow, tedious, dangerous and costly, but the later were much improved and simplified by the introduction of steam and machinery.

The character of the slate is recognized as superior in every way for roofing, black-board, school and building purposes, with a uniform, un-fading and durable color.

The quarrying and manufacture of slate is very interesting to the on-looker. The rock is taken out by removing the top surface, which varies in depth. In some cases the deposit crops out on the surface, and again it is found from ten to fifty feet below. After this top soil is removed, the rock is loosened by blasting, the large blocks are removed from the quarry by hoisting them out by means of a cable, carried securely on a heavy steel rope to the top of the derrick, thence lodged on a truck and run into sheds, where they are turned over to the block makers, or sent to the blackboard and mantle factories.

The block maker, with the aid of a steel chisel and beetle, made for the purpose, first "sculps" the large block into smaller ones of a certain width, and the entire length of the large block, from the time the slate leaves the quarries, until split up, is kept moist in order to work well. In watching the process of splitting these blocks, a hair line is seen running entirely through it. This opening resembles a hair line, and by skillful blows applied on each side of a notch cut at the end of the block in the shape of a V, it is turned in the direction that the worker wants it to go, until the block falls apart on either side of this mark. The long, narrow blocks are then split into blocks of about two to three inches in thickness, and when in this shape, by means of a beetle and a well applied blow, at a notch cut for the purpose, the large slab is broken across the grain into blocks of various lengths. These blocks are placed in piles on the left hand of the splitter, who is seated on a low bench. He then takes a block beside his left thigh, and with a wooden mallet and a broad, thin chisel, about two inches wide and twelve inches long, tapering to an edge, splits it through the middle, by setting the thin chisel on the upper edge of the block and gently tapping on the top of the chisel two or three times with the mallet, which wedges it into the block, and splits it through as evenly as if it had been sawed, the splitter then continues dividing the block into equal halves until they are reduced to the thickness of roofing slate.

These thin pieces of slate, of irregular sizes, are placed by the splitter on a small bench on the left side of the dresser, who takes each piece separately, and with a machine invented for the purpose, cuts them into the largest size they will make. He cuts them by means of a large steel knife, which works similar to an old-fashioned gauge guides his eye, which he puts the slate against, pressing his foot upon the treadle, and drawing the heavy steel knife down, cuts the edge clean and straight. He continues cutting the four sides until the slate is blocked to the proper size. These blocks are then assorted by the dresser, as he dresses them, into the various classes they belong, the thin and even slate being designated as No. 1, the thick and uneven as No. 2, etc., and are afterward piled on edge, along the bank, to await shipment.

SILK MILLS.

PHOENIX SILK MANUFACTURING CO.—Rodney Hawks in 1810 started the first power silk mill in America at Mansfield, Conn., in a building 15 by 20 feet, which is still standing. His grandsons still carry on the business.

John Ryle, father of Reuben Ryle, of this city, built the first silk mill in Paterson, in 1840. To-day, Paterson, the "Silk City" of the United States, has 292 silk mills, 32 of which were added last year. They occupy 160,000 square feet of floor space, employ 40,000 men and women, have 21,000 looms, and produce $30,000,000 worth of goods annually, for which the dye works dye 30,000 pounds of silk daily.

These figures are shown to indicate the vast extent of the business and to show Allentown's proportion of it.

The Adelaide, which was the pioneer silk mill in Pennsylvania, has developed and expanded wonderfully in these thirty years. Three additions were built to the original plant, making an open square filling the block bounded by Race, Linden, and Court streets, and the L. V. R. R. In the year 1905 a large new ribbon weaving plant was built on the block bounded by Third, Bryan, Turner, and Chew streets. The Adelaide, when running full handed, employs 1,900 men and women. The mill has been continuously under the management of members of the same family. Louis Soleliac came to Allentown from Paterson as its first superintendent, and, upon his death, November 19, 1899, his son, Edwin A. Soleliac, succeeded him, and has continued the successful general manager ever since.

Mrs. Patrick Rush, forelady of the soft silk winders, is the only one of the original employes still with the concern. The same company also has another mill at Pottsville in this State.

The opening of the Adelaide Mill was made a great social occasion on Thursday, November 17, 1881. A special train brought 108 guests from New York and Paterson for the opening. In the party, among others, were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tilt, Mayor Gilmore, of Paterson; Mayor George H. Hartford, of Orange; D. Faust, a Philadelphia banker; C. R. Bigelow, ex-controller of New York; Hon. G. A. Hobart, President of the New Jersey Senate, and later Vice-President under McKinley; Hon. John Hill, of Boonton; John Cook, Vice-president of the Danforth Locomotive Works of Paterson; C. L. Corinth, of New York; Col. C. K. Jameson and wife, of New York; W. W. Kurtz, the banker, and Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Lucas being president of the Women's Silk Association of the United States; Messrs. Keim and Lorenz, of the P. & R. R. R.; Judge J. Hagenman, of Reading; Judge Stanton, of Wilkes-Barre; Congressman William Mutchler, of Easton; all the officers of the Phoenix Silk Manufacturing Co., of Paterson, and representatives of the press of New York, Philadelphia, Paterson, and the Lehigh Valley.

More than a thousand invitations had been issued and fully 2,000 people swarmed through the mill all afternoon on a tour of inspection and to see the plant in operation.

The reception committee consisted of Dr. E. G. Martin, R. E. Wright, Jr., C. H. Ruhe, Dr. H. K. Hartzell, A. G. Reninger, S. A. Bridges, Edward Harvey, Samuel Lewis, Joseph Young, John E. Lentz, John Rupp, S. M. Keiper, H. C. Trexler, W. H. Barber, W. P. Huber, William Saeger, Joseph Schnurman, L. H. Yeager, Joshua Stahler, H. Weinsheimer, Tilghman Schadt, William Berkemeyer, Milton M. Kline, and John Newhard.

With the Allentown band supplying the music, the visitors were welcomed at the plant and Mayor E. G. Martin made the dedicatory address, closing in these words: "Actuated by these sentiments and inspired by these hopes, we now, in the name of the subscribers and the Phoenix Manufacturing Co., dedicate this building to the industry of silk manufacture, with the hope that it may prove to be the nucleus of a great and extensive enterprise in the Lehigh Valley; and we christen it in honor of the wife of the distinguished president of the company—The Adelaide Silk Mills.”

A copper box was placed in the cornerstone and within it were placed these articles: A copy of each of the papers published in Allentown, a copy of a pamphlet containing a history of the Lehigh Valley, a photograph of each subscriber to the silk mill fund, and a history of the project, all supplied by the building committee, and these supplied by the Phoenix Co.; Photographs and autographs of the members of the company, silk handkerchiefs, invitations, ribbons, fancy silk work, etc. Jacob Miller sealed the box, and it was laid in the cornerstone.

At 2 p. m. a banquet was served on the fourth floor by George P. Heitting, of the Metropolitan Hotel, New York city. The diners numbered 160.

Grace was said by Rev. Dr. Burchard, of New York, (he who defeated Blaine and elected Cleveland President in 1884 with his famous alliteration of “Rum, Romanism and Rebellion”). Speeches were made by Mayor Martin, Albert Tilt, Congressman S. A. Bridges, Mayor Gilmore, Col. T. H. Good, John Ryle, of Paterson, pioneer of the silk industry, in America, and who on April 1, 1886, opened the Pioneer Silk Mill at Seventh and Allen streets, now the Allentown Mill; Robert E. Wright, Jr., Mrs. John Lucas, Congressman Hill, and Hon. G. A. Hobart.

The evening was devoted to dancing in the mill to the musical program of 30 numbers by the Maennerchor Orchestra of 30 men, of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Tilt led the grand march. Col. Good was master of ceremonies and he was assisted by Edward Ruhe, R. E. Wright, Jr., Dr. E. G. Martin, E. S. Wertz, Jacob Mosser, Dr. A. J. Martin, H. T. Kleckner, H. K. Kurtz, W. K. Ruhe, E. H. Reninger, and G. H. Wartman. It was estimated at the time that 2,000 people were present.

The Daily City Item at that time gave the following history of the enterprise:

The original intention was to erect a building which would cost about $45,000, but everything seemed to glide along so smoothly and serenely, that the plans and specifications were enlarged from time to time until it was decided that about $65,000 should be expended on the structure. But ere it was finished it was ascertained that this sum would be insufficient and the amount was increased to $85,000, which is more than enough to discharge all the expenses incurred by the erection of the building, its entire cost being a little less than that amount.

The Phoenix Silk Co. has already placed $150,000 worth of machinery in the building and the three lower floors are now occupied in spinning silk, employment being given to nearly three hundred boys and girls. After to-day the weaving machinery will be put on the fourth floor, and the weaving of silk commenced in a short time. The history of the project is of peculiar interest at this time, and a number of interesting facts will be found below.

In the spring of 1880, the Phoenix Manufacturing Company of Paterson, N. J., through R. M. Elkings, real estate agent of said city, advertised in New York papers for a site in the Eastern States suitable for the location of a silk mill. This advertisement coming to the notice of the people of this city, a correspondence was had, which resulted in a visit to the city of Allentown by the parties from Paterson, N. J., principally interested in the enterprise, viz: Albert Tilt, president of the Phoenix Silk Co., and Emil Greef, Philip Gallagher, and R. M. Elkings.

The general advantages of the city as to labor, competent railroads, cheap living, etc., were satisfactorily shown to the visitors, and they being favorably impressed, intimated a location (the site upon which the Adelaide Mills now stand) and expressed a desire that the citizens of Allentown should in some way identify themselves with the enterprise.

The matter was accordingly submitted to the Board of Trade of the city of Allentown, under whose auspices a meeting of citizens was called for the purpose of determining upon some means whereby the enterprise might receive the proper support.

Upon such a meeting being held, a committee consisting of Messrs. Aaron G. Reninger, H. A. Stillwagen, Robert E. Wright, Sr., and W. R. Lawfer, was appointed to solicit subscriptions from the citizens for the purchase of the ground selected and the erection of a building suitable for the manufacture of silk. The committee at once carried forward the work and with such success that on the tenth day of July, 1880, another committee consisting of Charles W. Cooper, Aaron G. Reninger, and Morris L. Kauffman was appointed and empowered to proceed to Paterson and close the contract with the parties there for the erection of buildings and machinery for the purpose mentioned.

The last two named gentlemen on the committee named to solicit subscriptions not being able to serve, Charles W. Cooper, T. H. Good, and D. O. Saylor, as volunteers, were appointed in their stead, to aid the other members of the committee to complete the work which had been pushed forward so successfully.

Morris L. Kauffman, Esq., was appointed the trustee for the proper application of the fund subscribed, and known as "The Silk Factory Fund."

The title to the property is held in the name of Levi Line until such time as the Phoenix Manufacturing Company should demand the title under their agreement, a deed for which was placed in the hands of Morris L. Kauffman, the trustee in escrow.

Levi Line, after due advertisement and proposals being received, awarded the contract for the erection of the building to Thomas W. Snyder, after receiving the approval of the executive committee appointed at a meeting of the subscribers known as the Silk Factory Fund Association, which committee consisted of Messrs. James K. Mosser, David O. Saylor, Col. T. H. Good, Aaron G. Reninger, and H. A. Stillwagen, the contract price being $14,970.66.

The erection of the building was under the superintendence of Thomas Steckel, for Levi Line and the subscribers; A. J. Derron, Jr., & Co., being the supervising architects.

During the third week of September, 1880, the ground was broken for the foundation of the building from which time rapid progress was made in the work of erection.

It becoming apparent to the executive committee that the amount subscribed and covered by the mortgage of $70,000 would be insufficient for the completion of the buildings, efforts were made for further subscriptions. Several meetings of all the subscribers being held, a second mortgage of $15,000 was given upon the premises, the bonds secured by this mortgage being willingly taken by the parties who had originally subscribed for the first mortgage bonds; the balance of the cash was obtained from the Allentown National Bank, by placing the unissued bonds amounting to $12,000 as collateral security; twenty-four of our prominent citizens guaranteeing payment thereof to the bank, which guarantors were obtained in the course of three hours.

The engine was built by the Buckeye Engine Company, at a cost of $4,900, and it was 150-horse power.

All disbursements were made through Morris L. Kauffman, the trustee, the bills being first approved by Thomas Steckel, the superintendent, and an order granted by the executive committee.

It is said by those who are in a position to know that the Adelaide is one of the finest and handsomest silk mills in the country, and the largest in the state. It is four stories high, 250 feet long, and 50 feet wide. The extension on the west side is also quite capacious and supplied with large vaults and safes in which to store the valuables of the mill. The business department is also located in this portion of the building and is handsomely and conveniently arranged for the prompt transaction of business. The walls of the entire structure are built of excellent brick, resting upon a solid foundation of cemented stone. The floor in the basement is of cement, preventing all moisture and dampness. The works are abundantly supplied with water and gas and all other conveniences. The Jordan Meadow Branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad connects with the mill, which renders the receiving and shipping of goods and materials a matter of great ease.

PIONEER SILK MILL.—John Ryle, said to have been the first manufacturer of silk in the United States, established a silk mill in Allentown, at the corner of Seventh and Allen streets, in 1886, being the second mill of this kind started at Allentown, the first having been the Adelaide. It was operated under the name of the Pioneer Silk Co., until 1901, with John A. McCollum, Sr., as superintendent; then it was purchased by the Allentown Silk Co., which has carried on the plant until the present time.

PALACE RIBBON MILL.—This mill was built in 1893, by Max Wolff, on Auburn street, in the Twelfth ward. It is a three-story brick building, 50 by 425 feet. The company manufactures all kinds of plain and fancy ribbons. The annual production is 3,500,000 yards, with 126 looms and 25,000 spindles. The employees number 350. The officers have been Max Wolff, president and treasurer; and William Reichmann, secretary. John Graeflin has superintended the mill since 1897.

WEILBACHER SILK MILL.—This mill at Front and Gordon streets, was erected in 1897, by Franklin Weilbacher. The plant covers half a block, and comprises two four-story brick buildings, each 50 by 140 feet. He carried on the business five years, then leased the plant to the present operators. Joseph L. Haas is the superintendent. The employees number 400.

RIONOR SILK MILL.—This plant was erected in 1899, on Auburn street, in the Twelfth ward, by Charles A. Zinderstein. He adopted the name from the names of his two children, Marion and Norton, and carried on the business of manufacturing narrow ribbons until his decease, in 1902. Then the Rionor Silk Co. was incorporated, and C. T. Davis, of Allentown, has since filled the offices of secretary and treasurer. H. Hauptman has superintended the plant since Oct. 1, 1904. The plant was enlarged in 1902.

It produces annually 40,000,000 yards; the employees number 135.

LECHA SILK MILL.—The Lecha Silk Co. was incorporated Nov. 15, 1901, by John A. McCollum and Charles Riber, who had been connected with the Pioneer Silk Co. The plant is located at Twelfth and Monroe streets, is extensively engaged in the manufacture of high-grade silk ribbons, and employs 150 hands. The officers of the Company are: President, Hugh E. Crilly; secretary and treasurer, John A. McCollum.

KALTENBACH & STEPHENS SILK MILL.—This firm became incorporated in New York, in 1891, under the name of Kaltenbach & Stevens, for the manufacture of silk ribbons. In March, 1907, they established a large mill in

The general manager of the Allentown plant is Otto Suther, whose son Julius, is assistant. The main office of the corporation is at Newark, N. J.

WINONA SILK MILL is situated at Mountainville, in Salisbury township, and comprises a building 40 by 80 feet, erected in 1909, with an addition 70 by 85 feet, erected in 1912. The incorporators of the company were: President, M. J. Kauffman; vice-pres. and general manager, John J. Weaver; secretary, M. A. Biting; William Daubenspeck, and Walter Crush. The plant produces broad silks, and employs 36 hands.

KEYSTONE TEXTILE Co.—Edwin F. Miller, Paul L. Semmels, Alfred Soland, Charles N. Gossard, D. F. Kelchner, and Charles S. Madeira associated together for the manufacture of QUEEN CITY SILK MILL.

East Allentown, 92 by 350 feet, which was equipped with machinery and started with 100 hands. The business was conducted in a most successful manner, which necessitated an enlargement of the plant; and, accordingly, a second mill was built in 1909; a third in 1910, and a fourth in 1914. This large enterprise now operates 500 looms and employs upwards of 500 hands.

These mills produce only narrow ribbons, with an annual capacity of 50,000,000 yards. They manufacture the famous blue ribbon which is distinctively used by the Pabst Brewing Co., of Milwaukee, as a popularizing advertisement of the beer of that western city, and produce annually on order 20,000,000 yards.

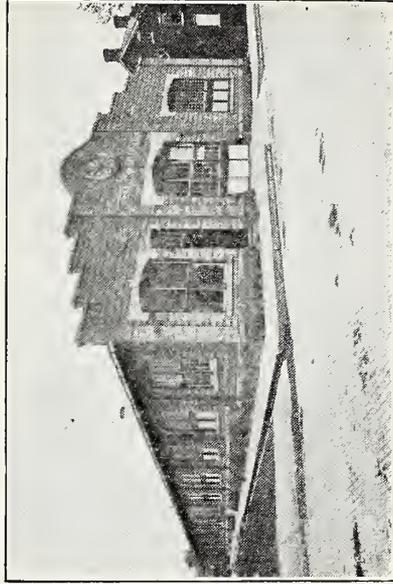

broad silks, under the name of The Keystone Textile Co., and became incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $125,000. They established a plant, 50 by 200 feet, in South Allentown, at Furnace and Godfrey streets, which was equipped with 100 looms, operated by electric power. They employ 60 hands and produce weekly 15,000 yards.

HUNSICKER, GOOD & Co.—In 1908, Charles O. Hunsicker, Israel F. Good, and Herbert J. Hunsicker organized a company for the manufacture of fine silk ribbons and have since traded as Hunsicker, Good & Company. Their plant comprises a three-story brick building, 50 by 60 feet. They employ 35 hands.

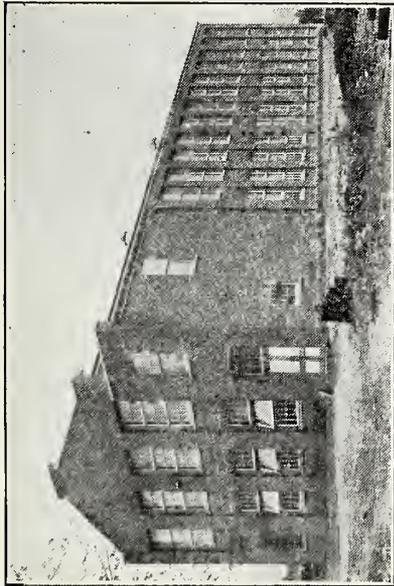

POST & SHELDON SILK MILL.—This great

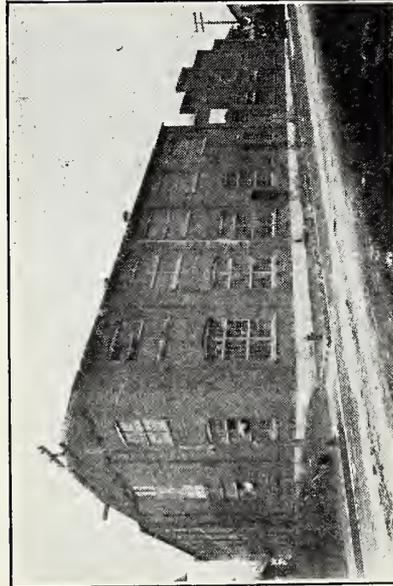

WALNUTPORT SILK Co., WALNUTPORT.

H. J. FELDHEGE SILK Co., SIEGFRIED, PA.

WALNUTPORT SILK Co., WALNUTPORT.

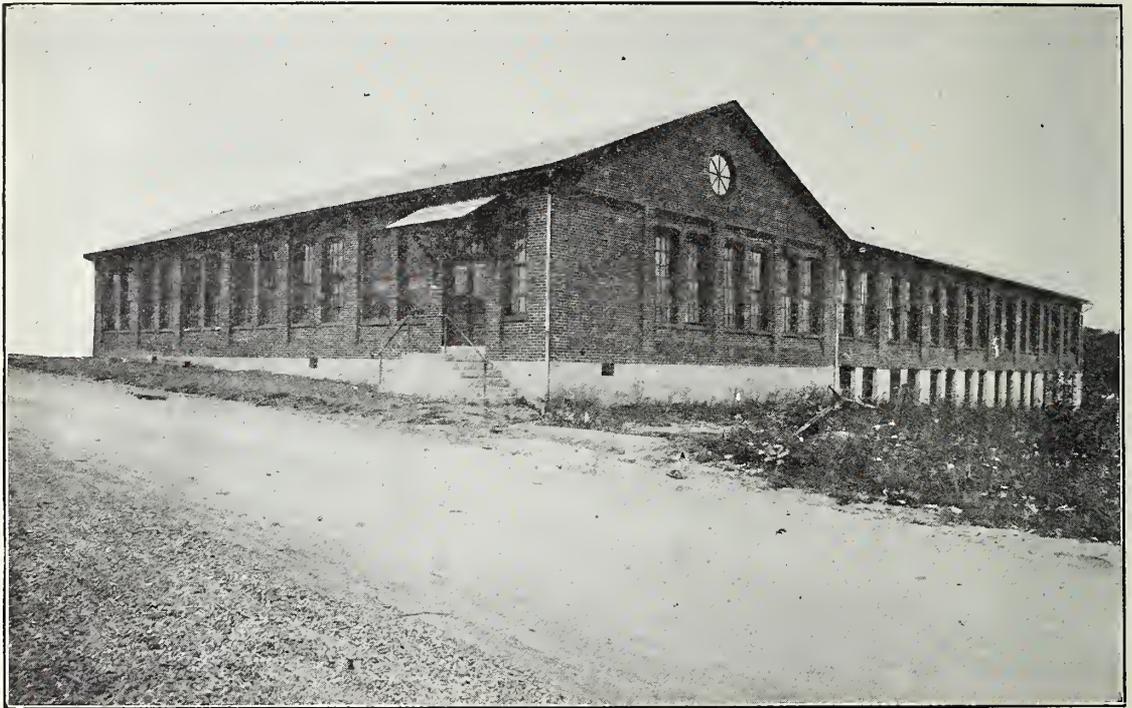

H. J. FELDHEGE SILK Co., EGYPT, PA.

corporation was organized in 1901, and operates three prosperous mills in Lehigh county at Allentown, Slatington and Slatedale. The mill at Allentown is 210 by 210 feet, operates 280 looms, employs upward of 200 hands, and produces large quantities of broad silk.

QUEEN CITY SILK CO. was organized and incorporated in 1907, at Allentown, by Thomas H. Kinney, Leo Schimpff, and John McCollum, Sr., with the first-named as manager. The plant is situated at Twenty-first and Linden streets, and equipped with the necessary machinery, in-prise in the borough of Macungie, and produces annually large quantities of silk bindings and ribbons, amounting to $60,000. It was organized in 1908 by G. Byron Kleppinger as the manager, with Dr. D. D. Fritch as the president. The plant consists of a one-story brick building, 50 by 74 feet, with a brick annex, 50 by 80 feet, and employs upward of 30 hands. It is run by electric power, day and night, on two shifts.

MCBRIDE SILK MILL.—In August, 1911, John and William J. McBride (brothers), of Catasauqua, established a silk-mill at Fullerton, a cluding 100 looms for the manufacture of silk ribbons, employs 260 hands, and has an annual production of $700,000.

MCBRIDE BROS. SILK MILL, FULLERTON.

STATE SILK CO. was incorporated in 1911 by H. Kahn, of New York City, and I. Saperstein, and Charles Saperstein, of Allentown, for the manufacture of broad silks. They run 50 looms and employ 40 hands.

WIDMER SILK CO. was organized in 1913 by Godfrey Widmer and George Van de Water for manufacturing broad silks, with Mr. Widmer, of Allentown, as president and general manager. They run 60 looms and employ 40 hands. Their plant is at Fourteenth and Liberty streets.

MACUNGIE SILK CO. is a prosperous enter-one-story brick building, 84 feet long by 42 feet wide, with a two-story brick annex, 108 feet long by 48 feet wide, and a brick building for engine and boilers. The plant is situated at the corner of Quarry and Mulberry streets and they have since carried on the manufacture of broad silks and linings, under the name of McBride Brothers. They employ 65 hands.

H. J. FELDHEGE SILK COMPANY.—In 1912 the H. J. Feldhege Silk Company of Egypt, was organized by H. J. Feldhege and E. T. Zellner, where they employ 250 people. The following year the same people started a mill at Siegfrieds. Besides these mills, Mr. Feldhege is the sole proprietor of two silk mills at Walnutport, which were started in 1913. The company manufactures broad silk and employ 600 hands at the four mills.

SILK MILL SUPPLIES.—In 1900, Isaac A. Hall, of Paterson, N. J., erected a large five-story brick building along the L. V. R. R., south of Hamilton street, near the passenger station, for the purpose of manufacturing reeds, loom harness, and silk mill supplies, and has since carried on a successful business, employing 70 hands. His trade extends in the states of Pennsylvania and New York. His residence is at Paterson. The local manager since 1912 has been Franklin Van Gieson.

BOBBIN WORKS.—In August, 1901, H. A. Mack, James K. Bowen, and Avon Barnes associated together as the H. A. Mack Manufacturing Company, for the manufacture of high grade silk bobbins as a specialty, including train, organ, and doubler bobbins, made under the Mack patents. In 1902, they became incorporated as the Allentown Bobbin Works; and in 1904 located at Nos. 417-31 North Fourteenth street, where they erected a two-story brick building, 40 by 160 feet, and equipped it with special machinery. They employ 75 hands and their trade reaches throughout the United States.

SHUTTLES.—G. Pavia, L. Pavia, C. C. Sacco, and P. Rescinguo, have traded as the Pavia Shuttle Company since 1906, at Hall and Maple streets, in the manufacture of weaving shuttles and silk loom supplies; employ 10 hands; forward product to all parts of United States. This is one of the largest factories in the country wholly devoted to shuttles.

NATIONAL WARPING AND WINDING CO.—In August, 1914, Leonard Orcurto and Alphonse Lova, of Philipsburg, N. J., located at Allentown, and began trading as the National Warping and Winding Company, for the manufacture of silk goods. They secured a large ware-room on Hall street, south of Hamilton, which is being equipped with the necessary machinery and will employ from 25 to 50 hands.

BRADFORD WINDING CO. is at 613 Court street, Allentown, with 40 machines, run by electric power. They employ 30 hands, and ship their cones to all parts of the country.

NATIONAL SILK DYE WORKS.—Edward Lotte was born at Paris, France, in 1811, and became a leather merchant. He identified himself publicly with the Republican movement there and, in 1855, was obliged to emigrate. He was in England three years, then proceeded to Pennsylvania and located at Reading, but soon after moved to Philadelphia, where he embarked in the business of stamping and embroidery. His son, Edward A., born at Paris in 1845, learned the trade of skein silk dyeing at Philadelphia, and was employed at different dye-works until 1879, when he engaged in the business for himself, and continued until his decease, in 1884. His sons, Edward F. L. and Charles E., then carried on the business under the name of Lotte Brothers, until 1899, when they sold the plant and located at Allentown, where they have since been engaged most successfully until the present time. Besides the works at Allentown, they have established large works at Williamsport, Pa., and Paterson and Dundee Lake in New Jersey. On Jan. 1, 1909, these several works were incorporated under the name of the National Silk Dyeing Co. and employ 3,000 hands. At Allentown they employ 700, and the manager is Walter C. Lotte. They dye large quantities of goods from mills in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and the New England States.

ALLENTOWN SILK DYEING WORKS.—In 1864 William Ross embarked in the business of dyeing silk materials and established a plant at 345 North Seventh street, which he carried on there until 1888, when it was removed to 417 Sumner avenue, where it was continued by him until 1895. His son, Richard F., became his successor, and has since conducted the business under the name of Allentown Silk Dyeing Works. He employs 15 hands.

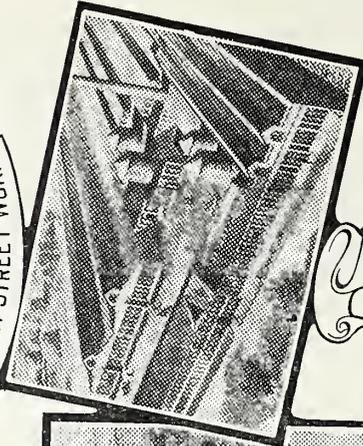

PICKUP & KEAN started in 1910, to mercerize and dye cotton yarns. They have a large three-story building, 75 by 175 feet, on Sumner avenue, and employ 45 hands.

THE ALLENTOWN SPINNING COMPANY, located at the northwest corner of Gordon and Jordan streets, was established in 1886, by Robert Barbour, the father of the present president. It is a Pennsylvania corporation and the capital originally invested was $200,000.00, and the number of employees was about 300. The concern has now an invested capital of more than $1,000,000, and employs 700 people. A superior grade of jute yarns and twines are manufactured which have a ready market in this country and in Canada. The business consumes a floor-space of 170,000 square feet. The buildings are all modern, and a 1700-horse power engine furnishes the power that runs the machinery.

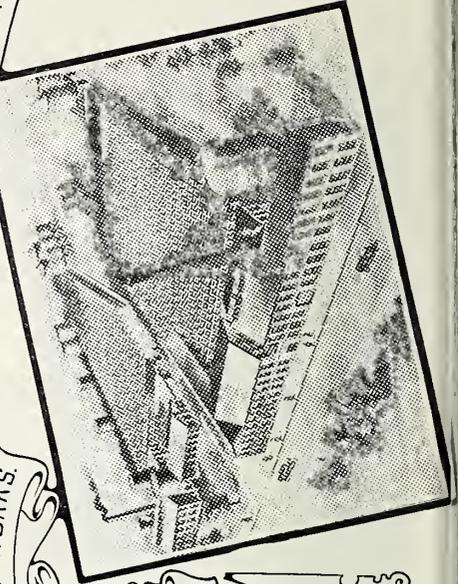

The present officers are: President, J. E. Barbour; vice-president and general superintendent, D. R. Malcolm; secretary, Malcolm Hain; and treasurer, John Edwards. All the officers except D. R. Malcolm reside in Paterson, New Jersey, where the same company has a branch factory, where a similar grade of product is manufactured and 150 people are employed

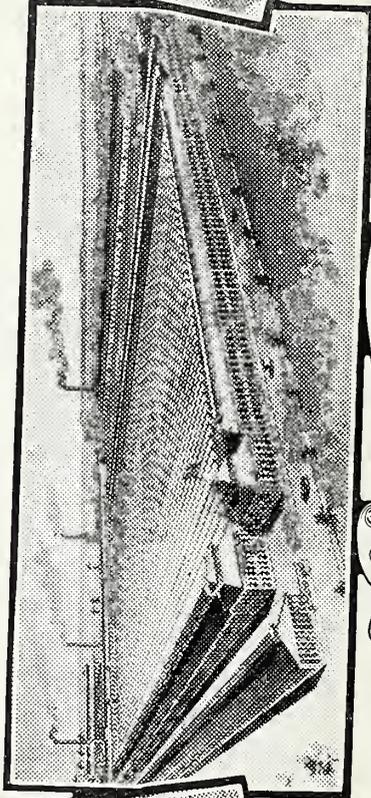

VAN HOUTEN STREET WORKS.

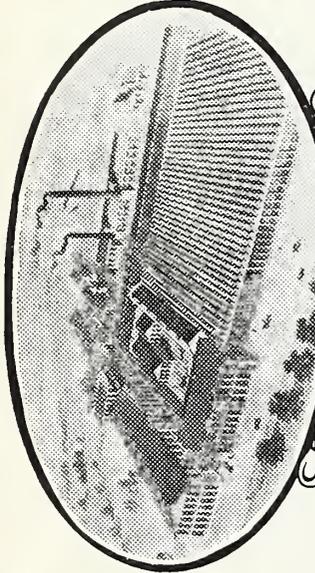

WOOD STREET WORKS.

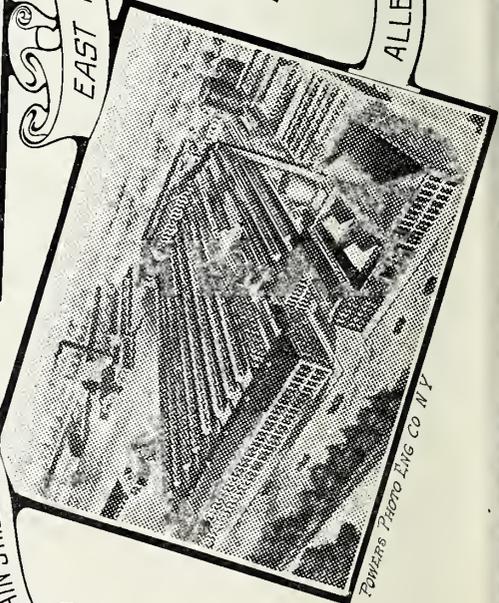

ALLEN WORKS.

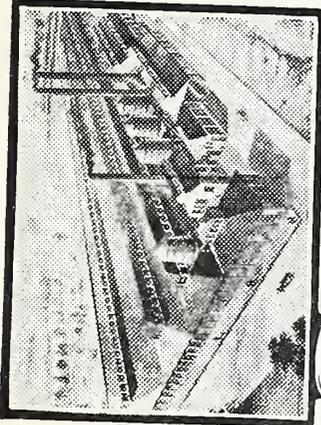

EAST FIFTH STREET WORKS.

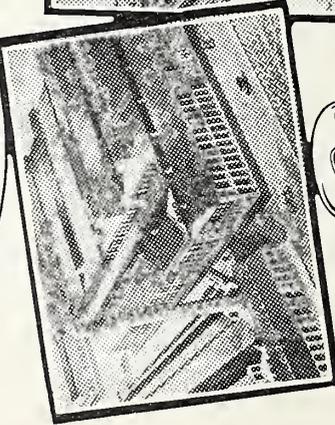

DUNDEE LAKE WORKS.

EAST MAIN STREET WORKS.

WILLIAMSPORT WORKS.

VALLEY WORKS.

Powers Photo Eng Co N.Y.

by them. D. R. Malcolm is connected with this concern since the year 1890. His son, James F. Malcolm, is the assistant superintendent of the Allentown plant, in which city he and his father reside since coming to this country.

ALLENTOWN KNITTING CO. was organized by Andrew K. Jacks, C. W. Knouse, and Wilson M. Gift, for manufacturing ladies' and children's knit underwear, with Mr. Gift as the superintendent. Their plant is at 36-38 South Church street, Allentown. They employ 32 hands, run 21 knitting and 14 sewing machines, and produce daily 300 dozen.

SWISSONIA KNITTING MILLS were erected in 1903 by John J. Taylor, at No. 32 North Fountain street, for the manufacture of ladies' light knit underwear. The plant consists of a three-story brick building, 60 by 110 feet, where 37 knitting machines and 60 sewing machines are in constant operation, affording employment to 120 hands.

In 1913, A. M. Sanderowitz started a plant at 157 Gordon street for manufacturing nainsook underwear and jean drawers, and afterward removed it to 25 North Hall street. He employs from 20 to 25 hands.

In May, 1914, Louis Dennison and Maurice Sanderowitz started a plant at 954 Jackson street for manufacturing loose-fitting underwear, and have since traded as the D. & S. Manufacturing Company. They employ from 30 to 40 hands, and sell their product to jobbers at New York City; also in the southern states.

In the summer of 1914, Patterson & Humes, at 113 South Seventh street, started making knitted underwear.

In February, 1914, C. E. Brooke began trading as the C. E. Brooke Knitting Company, for the manufacture of children's waists. His factory is at No. 722 Linden street, and he employs from 30 to 35 hands. His trade extends throughout the United States.

In 1902, E. A. Hirner, A. F. Henninger and O. H. Mink incorporated the Novelty Hosiery Company for the manufacture of fine silk half hose. They erected a three-story brick building, 260 by 340 feet, and equipped it with the necessary machinery; and have since conducted a large business, employing from 200 to 300 hands. Their trade extends over the United States.

The Alacrity Knitting Mill Company was incorporated in 1910 by J. C. Smith, William Sinwell, and William Stuber, with a capitalization of $15,000. The factory is located at 824 Cherokee street, Fountain Hill, where they employ 28 people in the manufacture of a fine grade of seamless hosiery. The building, a two-story brick, 22 by 100 feet, is equipped with electricity and steam power. The product is sold direct to firms in the large cities.

CEMENT MILLS.

To the general public cement is usually associated with the numerous works of the Romans; but the mortar used in their constructions was not cement, but a mixture of slaked lime and pozzolana, a volcanic dust, which was found in large quantities in Italy. It was not until the end of the Eighteenth Century that the true principles of hydraulic cement were discovered by Smeaton.

The first class, or natural, was made by Joseph Parker, in 1796, who discovered what he called "Roman Cement." This was practically the first cement of commerce and gave excellent results. Investigations by Gen. Sir William Paisley and, contemporaneous with him, by Vicat, a French engineer, resulted in the production of Portland cement, artificially made by calcining mixtures of chalk and clays at high temperatures to incipient vitrification.

While these experiments were going on Joseph Aspdin, a brick-layer or plasterer, took out a patent in England, in 1824, on a high grade artificial cement, which was the first Portland cement on the market. It obtained its name from its resemblance to the celebrated Portland stone, one of the leading building materials in England.

Natural cement was used in the United States as early as 1818. In the construction of the Lehigh Canal it was manufactured at Lehigh Gap, from 1826 to 1830, and at Siegfried's, from 1830 to 1841, by Samuel Glace, employed by the canal company as supervisor, and a resident of Catasauqua from 1841 to the time of his decease, in 1892.

FIRST CEMENT MILLS.—The first cement mill in this section of country was at Lehigh Gap, between the canal and river, opposite Craig's hotel. The kilns were four in number, 10 to 15 feet in height, conical in shape and built against the bank of the canal. The rock was hauled by teams six miles from the ridge above Palmerton to the mill. The deposit became exhausted until 1830, when the mill was abandoned. It was destroyed by the flood of 1841.

While constructing the canal at Siegfried's, another deposit of cement-rock was found, and thereupon, in 1830, Mr. Glace erected a second mill at that place with four kilns, which was operated by him until 1841. The capacity was ten barrels per day. Subsequently, about 1860, this mill was leased by Messrs. Menninger, Kohl, Eckert, and Ackerman, and operated for a time, when it was sold to the Lawrence Cement Co., and abandoned. The ruins can still be seen along the river bank. These facts have been taken from a small pamphlet, published by William H. Glace, Esq., of Catasauqua, Mr. Glace's son, in 1912, entitled "A Narrative of Hydraulic Cement in the Lehigh Valley," which shows that his father was the first person who made cement in the great Lehigh region.

COPLAY WORKS.—Excavations made by the L. V. R. R. Co., along the west side of the river, laid bare an extensive formation of cement-rock similar to what had been discovered on the opposite side of the river twenty-five years earlier. The value of the deposit was soon recognized by David O. Saylor, Esaias Rehrig and Adam Woolver, who organized the Coplay Cement Co., in 1866, and secured a large amount of desirable property. They built two small kilns for burning the stone and fitted out an old distillery building near the railroad station for a grinding mill. The business was started in a small way, but, finding it profitable, the owners enlarged the plant, in 1869, by erecting a mill near-by and two additional mills, which increased their capacity to 250 barrels a day. In 1870 they opened a new quarry, and in 1871 put up an additional mill.

Until this time, only natural cement had been made; then Mr. Saylor discovered a process, secured a patent, and named it "Anchor." In 1873 they started the manufacture of "Portland" cement and named it the "Saylor Portland," which became popular and in great demand, which necessitated other enlargements in 1874, 1875, 1877, and 1882, which gave them altogether 17 kilns, 13 for "Portland" cement and 4 for "Anchor," with a daily production of 600 barrels, and employees numbering 150.

This company is recognized as the first to have made "Portland" cement in large quantities, and its quality is equal to the best foreign brands. It has been extensively used for many years in the construction of government works. In 1890 it produced 170,000 barrels in six months.

In 1892 and 1893 the methods of manufacturing cement underwent a change. The rotary kilns were introduced by some companies and by the Coplay Co. in 1899; but this company favored the Schoefer process, known as the "Dutch Kilns," and they used them until 1904.

In 1914, electric power was introduced for operating the plant. Mill A was dismantled in 1906 and used for a bag-house until 1914, when it was destroyed by fire. Mill B contains three 100-foot rotary kilns with a daily capacity of 1,700 barrels. Mill C contains ten 60-foot rotary kilns with a daily capacity of 2,800 barrels.

The company owns and operates two large quarries, in which the rock materials are recognized as of the best in the cement belt, one opened by Mr. Saylor along the Lehigh river, and the other on the Schaadt farm in West Coplay, which they purchased in 1900 for the sum of $100,000. The company employs 400 hands. The chief chemist is H. S. Hartzell.

The superior Saylor Portland Cement has been in extensive use for a period covering forty years, which evidences the popularity of this company's product. Architects and builders throughout the country have given it preference in the construction of piers, sewers, bridges, aqueducts, reservoirs, factories, and massive buildings of all kinds. Many medals have been awarded to the company for the excellence of the samples of their cement placed on exhibition at expositions.

The officers of the company are: President, Ferdinand L. Loeb; vice-pres. and general manager, C. H. Breerwood; secretary, George A. Christ; treasurer, Joseph L. Berg. Capitalization, $3,000,000.

AMERICAN WORKS.—The American Portland Cement Co. was organized in 1885, by Frank Thompson, Alexander McGough, Dr. Filbert, Robert W. Leslie, John W. Trinkle, John W. Eckert, and James Brand, and purchased 400 acres of land in Whitehall township, near Egypt, comprising parts of the Lazarus, Kohler, Rhoads, Schadt, and Woodring farms, besides other tracts, on which they established four large mills, with a combined capacity of 1,800,000 barrels a year. In 1898, the plant was sold for $3,000,000.

In 1912 the company was re-organized under the name of Giant Portland Cement Co., with a capital of $4,000,000. The officers in 1914 were: President, Charles F. Conn; vice-pres., Charles J. Rhoads; secretary, J. F. Lennig; treasurer, F. J. Jiggins, and the main office is at Philadelphia. A second plant is also operated at Norfolk, Va. The total daily production is 6,500 barrels.

LEHIGH PORTLAND CEMENT CO.—The Lehigh Portland Cement Company was organized by capitalists from Allentown, in 1897, and established a plant for the extensive manufacture of cement at Ormrod, one mile west of Egypt, in North Whitehall township, along the Iron-ton R. R., where they secured a tract of 150 acres with inexhaustible deposits of cement rock.

The company now owns eleven mills and its annual capacity is 12,000,000 barrels. Among the largest works upon which this cement was used was the Galveston Causeway, two miles long and 119 feet wide, in the construction of which 100,000 barrels of this cement was used.

Col. H. C. Trexler is the president; George Ormrod, 1st vice-president; E. M. Young, 2d vice-president; C. E. Gower, 3d vice-president; George G. Sykes, secretary; Alonzo F. Walters, treasurer, and R. R. Bear, chief engineer. The works of the company are located at Ormrod, West Coplay, Fogelsville, Newcastle, Pa., Mitchell, Ind.; and Mason City, Iowa.

THE WHITEHALL PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY, at Cementon, is capitalized at $550,000, and has a daily production of 4,200 barrels. The president is W. H. Harding; vice-president, W. O. Lentz; secretary and treasurer, W. C. Kent, and superintendent, Arnold Hochstrasser.

PRODUCTION IN 1913.—According to returns received by the U. S. Geological Survey up to January 12, 1914, it is estimated by Ernest F. Burchard, that the quantity of Portland cement manufactured in the United States in 1913 was approximately 92,406,000 barrels, compared with 82,438,096 barrels in 1912, an increase of about 9,967,900 barrels, or 12 per cent. On account of a large surplus of production over shipments, stocks of cement at the mills apparently increased more than 45 per cent., or from 7,811,329 barrels, in 1912, to 11,375,000 barrels, at the close of 1913. In 1913 the relation between production and shipments were the reverse of those for 1912, when shipments exceeded production.

Although few definite statements as to selling prices are at hand it is evident that the average value per barrel was appreciably higher than in 1912. Increases of 10 to 25 cents a barrel are reported from several plants in the Central and Eastern States, but there were slight decreases reported from a few plants in the Rocky mountain district.

The following table gives the estimated production, shipments and stocks for 1913 and the actual production, shipments, and stocks for 1912, together with the per cent. of change.

	Lehigh District		Eastern Pa. and Western N. J.
	1912	Estimate 1913	1912	Estimate 1913
Production,	24,762,083	27,079,000	27,079,000	Increase 9.4
Shipment,	26,013,891	26,734,000	26,734,000	Increase 2.8
Stock,	1,927,495	2,332,000	2,332,000	Increase 21.0
	Total.
Production,	82,438,096	92,406,000	92,406,000	Increase 12.1
Shipment,	85,012,556	88,853,000	88,853,000	Increase 4.5
Stock,	7,811,329	11,375,000	11,375,000	Increase 45.6

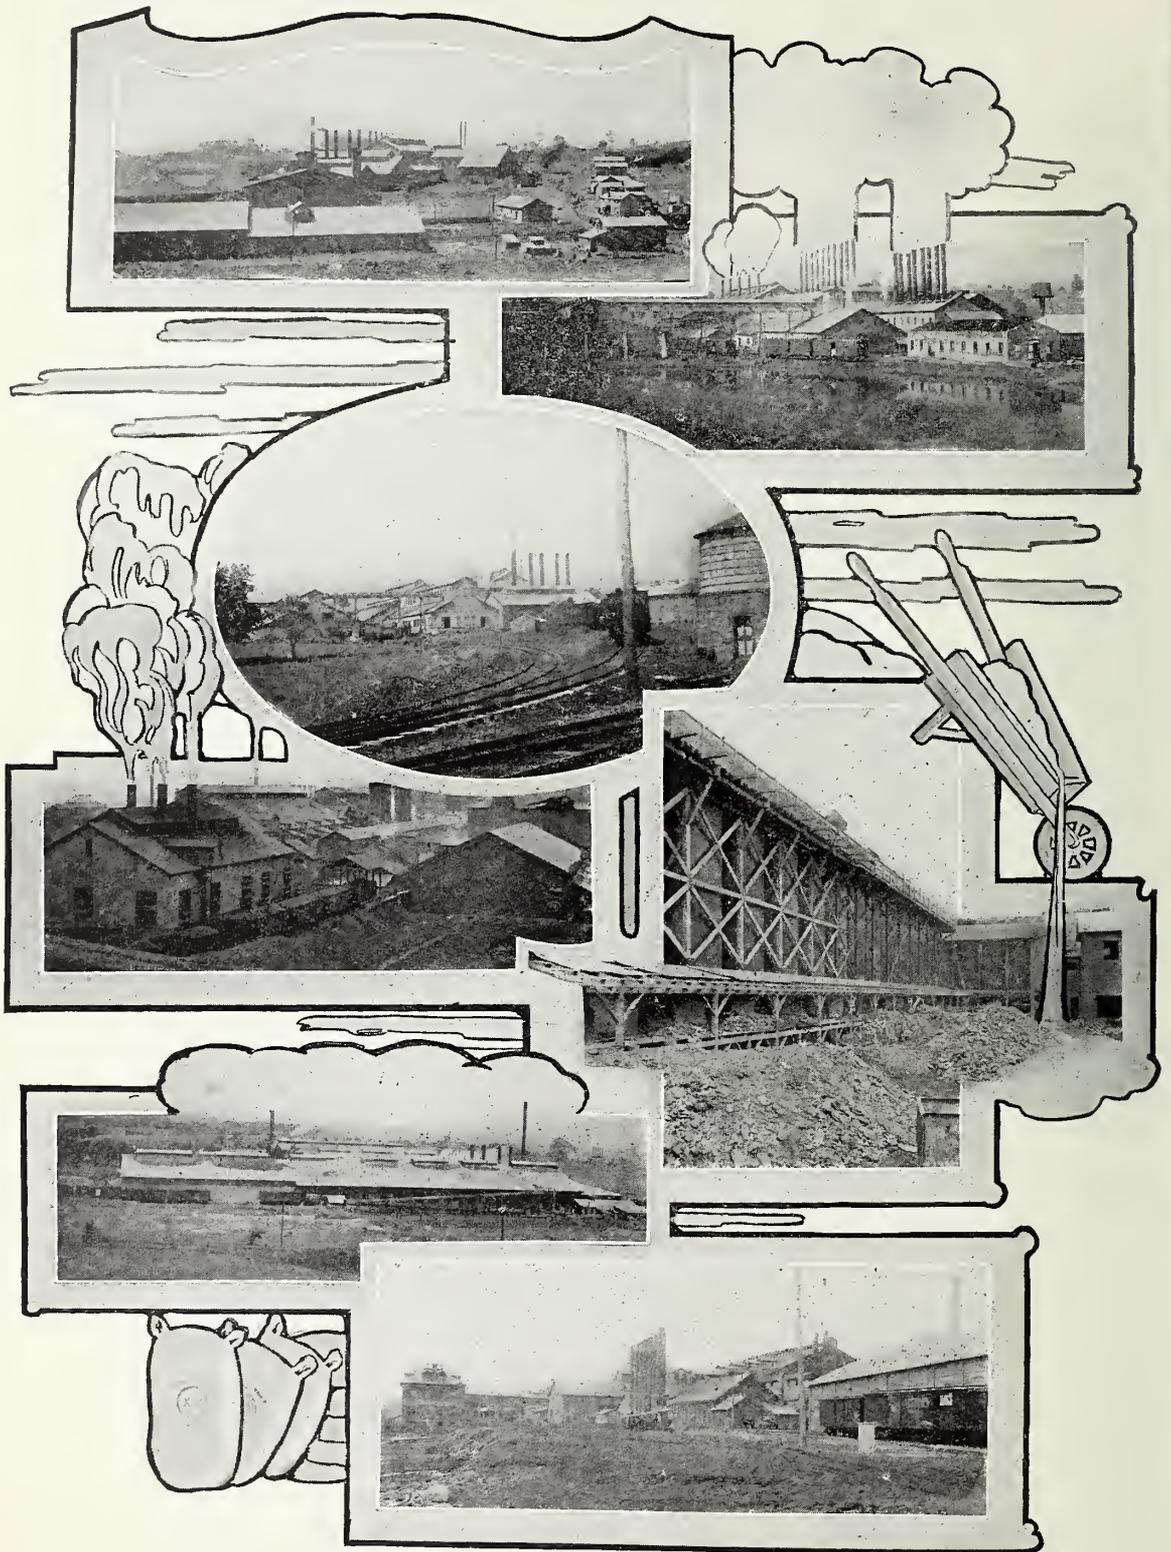

The Lehigh District (comprising eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey), has, except in four years, shown a steady increase in production of Portland cement from 1890 to the present time. The years in which slight decreases were recorded are 1893, 1908, 1911, and 1912. The first two decreases were coincident with years of general business depression, but the decrease in 1911 and 1912 may perhaps be attributed in large part to an overproduction in 1910 and to the building of many mills in other parts of the United States which have restricted the trade territory of the Lehigh district. The production for 1913 was 27,139,601 barrels and the shipments were 26,659,537 barrels, valued at $22,342,102, or 83.8 cents a barrel. This production represented an increase in quantity of 1,897,454 barrels compared with the production for 1912, and an average increase in price of 16.4 cents a barrel. The production of white Portland cement from two plants in this district is included in the figures for 1913. Both the production and shipments in this district reached a new high record in 1913.

The following table shows the annual production of Portland cement in the Lehigh district since 1890, the total production for the country, and the percentage of the Lehigh district output each year compared with the total production:

Portland cement production in the Lehigh district and in the United States, 1890-1913, in barrels.

Year.	Lehigh district output.	Total output, United States.	Percentage of total manufactured in Lehigh district.
1890,	201,000	335,500	60.0
1891,	248,500	454,813	54.7
1892,	280,840	547,440	51.3
1893,	265,317	590,652	44.9
1894,	485,329	798,757	60.8
1895,	634,276	990,324	64.0
1896,	1,048,154	1,543,923	68.1
1897,	2,002,059	2,677,775	74.8
1898,	2,674,304	3,692,284	72.4
1899,	4,110,132	5,652,266	72.7
1900,	6,153,629	8,482,020	72.6
1901,	8,595,340	12,711,225	67.7
1902,	10,829,922	17,230,644	62.8
1903,	12,324,922	22,342,973	55.2
1904,	14,211,039	26,505,881	53.7
1905,	17,368,687	35,246,812	49.3
1906,	22,784,613	46,463,424	49.0
1907,	24,417,686	48,785,390	50.0
1908,	20,200,387	51,072,612	39.6
1909,	24,246,706	64,991,431	37.3
1910,	26,315,359	76,549,951	34.4
1911,	25,072,108	78,528,637	33.1
1912,	24,762,083	82,438,096	30.0
1913,	27,139,601	92,097,131	29.5

VIEWS OF CEMENT MILLS IN LEHIGH COUNTY.

EARLY MENTION OF CEMENT.—The following mention was made of cement in 1828, by Mrs. Anne Royall, in her book describing a trip from Philadelphia to Easton and vicinity, entitled: "Mrs. Royall's Pennsylvania":

"The tavern where we breakfasted stands between the Blue Ridge and the stream just mentioned (the Aquashicola). Over this creek, there is a very handsome bridge. The stream runs very swiftly over a bed of rocks, and has its hills parallel to it. A little beyond the creek, in full view of the tavern, the canal and several of the locks appear: also kilns where the cement used in constructing the walls is burnt, and likewise the mills in which it is ground. I walked on to the canal not yet walled up, and the kilns and mills for preparing the cement being mentioned I can add nothing more, as I would not have had time to examine them before the stage would call. I saw a great dust flying out of the mills and the men who carried the ground cement away in bags, to load the wagons, were covered with dust. I saw a few carpenters at work upon wood, but could not discover their object. The canal seemed to be nearly the size of other canals and the workmanship of the locks seemed to be skillfully done. This cement is a sort of stone which, when prepared, is used in masonry and answers a better purpose "than lime, so it is said. I never heard of it until this day and great quantities of it are said to lie in the neighborhood. The enterprising Mr. White, of the Lehigh Company, is said to have discovered the cement."

BOOTS AND SHOES.

At the Pennsylvania State Shoe Manufacturers' Association meeting held at Allentown on March 6, 1900, Henry Leh, senior member of the firm of H. Leh & Co., shoe manufacturers of Allentown, presented the theme, "Shoemaking in Allentown, the Old and the New Way," as follows:

"Mr. Toastmaster, Gentlemen of the Pennsylvania Shoe Manufacturers' Association, and distinguished guests:

"Fifty years ago in going along our main thoroughfare at the noon hour one would not meet a single team and very few persons. Look at the throng of mankind moving at this same time of day now! Then we were a town of 3,500, now we have 35,000, and with the surroundings can easily swell it to double the number. Now we have single industries in our midst that employ as many people as there were men in our town fifty years ago.

In a conversation several days ago with one of the head men of a cement mill nearby I was informed that their mill shipped more than one hundred and fifty carloads of cement daily during the last year, and when the buildings they are now erecting are completed, they will in the near future produce two to three hundred carloads, or from 20,000 to 30,000 barrels of cement a day, being the largest cement mill in the world. This is only one of the many similar industries surrounding us.

"But to come to the subject of shoemaking a half a century ago, we find great changes compared with to-day.

Then the manner of dress was different from that of to-day. Men all wore boots. Children, four or five years old, who were the pride of the family, were not in full dress without a pair of boots. Women wore shoes made of lasting, mostly in colors, like brown and grey. Some were made out of Tampico pebble goat and brush kid.

"For every-day wear ladies wore shoes made out of extra heavy kip and calf, that had nearly all hand-pegged bottoms. All heavy boots and brogans were made out of the heaviest wax upper and kip, and were pegged; and the fine Sunday boots out of domestic calf and French calf, were hand-sewed and pegged.

"In those days boots and shoes were made to last a year, so that the heaviest leather that was made was always selected by the customer. A manufacturer whose product did not wear a year was not considered a good shoemaker, and those who got shoes that did not wear this length of time were considered to be deceived and thought they did not receive full value, and as a rule claimed a deduction when they bought the next pair. A shoe manufacturer had a back seat who could not supply such a demand.

"How does it compare with the present, as we are making them to-day?

"Mining shoes were made out of the very heaviest wax upper, as thick as harness leather, which were made mostly hand-sewed, and which were sold at wholesale at $24 a case of twelve pair and were retailed at $2.75 to $3 a pair.

"After the Civil War women's grain shoes were sold by Eastern manufacturers at $2.50 a pair. Similar shoes have been sold since at 80 cents a pair. At that time we could readily see a profit. Now, as most of you shoe manufacturers will bear me out, we do not know on which side the balance is struck.

"Most of our uppers were cut in our building ready for the shoemaker. Soles were marked on the side of the leather. These were then taken twenty to thirty miles in the country to shoemakers, who finished them. Shoes were then all made only in one width to a size. Individual cartons were unknown in those days.

"Then there were no railroads in this vicinity. A journey to Philadelphia was made by stage, starting from Allentown at two o'clock in the morning, arriving in the city early the next evening. A trip to New York occupied at least a week, as the nearest railroad was at Somerville, N. J. Freights came mostly by boat, and some by team and stage.

"On selling trips the product was taken along, as the wagon was specially built for the purpose, and delivered immediately on being sold. The storekeeper would come out to the wagon and make his selection. As this was a hard and inconvenient way improvements were considered and later shoes were sold from samples.

"During the Civil War our firm had one of the first army contracts. The committee came to Allentown on the Sabbath to ascertain whether we had shoes on hand, and on the following day they sent us an order for the shoes in stock and besides instructed us to make more, which was the start of our army work.

"At this time we went to the numerous tanners in all of Lehigh and adjoining counties, bought and contracted for all the wax upper leather finished and in the vats. This leather was very plentiful and low in price, but in a very short time it was worth one dollar a side more. Quite frequently we sold large quantities of this upper leather to our highly esteemed and deceased friend, Mr. Mundell, of Philadelphia, who was one of the best army shoe manufacturers in the Civil War. Mr. Mundell, who was kindly disposed and open-hearted, gave us help and advice that was highly appreciated.

"The first McKay machine successfully run was in about 1861. The first machine-sewed shoes were bought by us from Ziegler & Sutton in 1862. Mr. Ziegler, the senior member of the present firm of Ziegler Bros., of Philadelphia, was a member of that firm. Most of the McKay sewed shoes at that time had extra heavy soles and had two rows of sewing, as one row was not considered sufficient to hold the heavy sole to the upper.

"About thirty-five years ago, when we started to manufacture by machinery, there was no factory in Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia, and none from here to Cincinnati. Look at the factories in the same section to-day. A great many small towns are supplied with one or more shoe factories and the product of Pennsylvania is increasing yearly, so that we are a lively competitor with the East.

"I will not attempt to discuss shoemaking of the present day, as most of you are around it daily and are sufficiently acquainted with it, without my alluding to it."

In the absence of Mr. Leh his paper was read by his son, John Leh.

H. Leh & Co. was the first shoe manufacturing firm in the city, having been established in 1850. William S. Young and Henry Leh formed a partnership for the manufacture of shoes in 1859. In 1866 John E. Lentz was admitted to the firm, which became John E. Lentz & Co. in 1871.

John E. Lentz, in 1867, embarked in the business of manufacturing misses' and children's shoes and carried on the business very successfully for upwards of thirty years, until 1901. He was succeeded by a brother, Silas Lentz, and one of his travelling salesmen, Lewis M. Bleich, who traded as Lentz & Bleich for eight years, when the senior partner died and the partnership was terminated. B. F. Nickum followed them and has since carried on the business under the original name, "Honest Shoe Manufacturing Company." He is located on three floors at 18-22 South Sixth street, and employs 46 hands.

The American Shoe Manufacturing Company was organized in 1856, for the manufacture of gents', youths' and boy's McKay shoes, and the business was carried on successfully for fifty years, when it became incorporated, with W. K. Long as president; Wm. J. Koons, secretary; and J. M. Schwoyer, treasurer. Their factory comprises a three-story brick building, 28 by 105 feet, at Twelfth and Maple streets, where they employ 75 to 80 hands, and produce daily 800 pairs of shoes.

L. L. Roney and C. E. Berger traded as Roney & Berger Company from 1878 to 1904, in manufacturing ladies', misses' and children's shoes. Then A. H. Boas and J. J. Hauser purchased the plant and have traded since under the same name. The factory is at Hall and Maple street, and they employ 150 hands.

N. A. Haas, H. E. Haas, Robert E. Haas, and Charles E. Berger have traded as the Haas-Berger Company since 1912, in the manufacture of shoes for misses, children and growing girls as a specialty. The factory is at Hall and Maple streets, where they employ from 60 to 70 hands.

The Allentown Shoe Manufacturing Company, at 20 North Eighth street, was organized in 1892, and incorporated in 1893. They manufacture boy's and youth's shoes and have an average output of 2,000 pairs a day. They sell to the jobbing trade only. Jacob H. Burger is the president; W. J. Hartung, vice-president; C. J. Burger, secretary; Henry J. Grim, treasurer; and Joseph Hartung, superintendent.

N. A. Haas, H. H. Farr, and J. L. Farr started in 1898 in the shoe business at Allentown, under the name of the Lehigh Valley Shoe Company, for the manufacture of youths' and little gents' shoes, to which were subsequently added men's, boys' and Goodyear-welt shoes. They produce upward of 5,000 pairs weekly and employ 175 hands. Their present factory is a four-story brick building, situated at Chestnut and Howard streets, 40 by 100 feet, which was erected in 1905.

The Wolfe Shoe Manufacturing Company, located at the corner of Hall and Court streets, Allentown, Pa., was established in 1888, by Frank C. Wolfe and Wilson Muschlitz, under the name of Wolfe & Muschlitz. The firm continued thus until 1891, when George F. Wolfe, father of Frank C., purchased the interests of Wilson Muschlitz, and the firm adopted the firm name of Wolfe Shoe Manufacturing Company. About a year afterward F. C. Wolfe retired, when George F. continued the business alone under the same name. After the death of George F., in 1909, his three sons, George W., Charles F., and Samuel T., purchased the business from their father's estate and continued under the same name. The company makes a specialty of manufacturing women's and boys' shoes, and employs fifty people.

The firm of Philip Schneider Company was established in 1890 and was then known as the Philip Schneider Shoe Manufacturing Company. Mr. Schneider erected the brick factory building, which measures 110 by 50 feet, and continued in business until his death in 1908. The firm manufactures an average of 950 pair of ladies', misses', boys' and youths' shoes per day, and employs 150 people. The firm sells direct to retail trade, and the middle Atlantic states constitute the bulk of this trade. After the death of Mr. Philip Schneider, the Philip Schneider Company was organized by James M. Schneider, Milton Kline, and Howard F. Weaver, constituting a partnership concern. The factory is located in the Eleventh ward, on the corner of Wayne and Jefferson streets.

The C. F. Stahler Shoe Company, located at 1133-39 Maple street, Allentown, was organized on April 1, 1910, by C. F. Stahler and son, Harold B. After continuing in business for one year Harold B. Stahler died and was succeeded in the partnership by Morris D. Bauer. The factory is a brick building, measures 40 by 75 feet, has three floors and a basement, which space is all utilized by the enterprising firm. The firm makes a specialty of manufacturing men's and boys' shoes and finds ready market for its product throughout the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware; however, the largest markets constitute the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, D. C. Mr. Stahler personally supervises the interests of the first two cities, and is assisted by three men employed as travelling salesmen. The firm gives employment to fifty people.

The partnership of Callahan & Meyers, shoe manufacturers of Allentown, was established in June, 1906. It is the outgrowth of William C. Callahan, who had first been established at High Bridge, N. J., where he has been in business about two years prior to 1906. His associate is J. Meyers, who was a retail shoe merchant at Penn Argyl, Pa., for fourteen years prior to his association with Mr. Callahan. Upon the removing of the factory building from High Bridge, N. J., to this city in 1906, Mr. Meyers associated himself with Mr. Callahan. The firm manufactures women's, children's, and small gents' shoes. In 1911 the firm erected the six-story brick factory building, located at the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Liberty streets, and occupies it since January, 1912. They employ 100 people.

The Greenburg & Miller Shoe Company, during the summer of 1914, secured the Southdown Knitting Mill at Jordan and Tilghman streets, which they converted into a plant for the manufacture of misses' and children's shoes, with a specialty of children's sandals.

SHOE HEELS.—John O'Keefe embarked in the business of manufacturing leather shoe heels at Newark, N. J., in 1902, and carried on this industry for five years, when he removed to Allentown. He has since conducted a successful plant at No. 1219 Monroe street, employing from 12 to 15 hands. He disposes of ten tons of leather boards monthly, and fifteen tons of top pieces, made from shoulder leather. He uses special patented machinery for cutting, compressing and stamping the pieces which form the heels. This is a unique industry in this section.

BRICK-MAKING.

BUILDING BRICK.—The manufacture of brick at Allentown was started soon after the county was erected in 1812, and the county seat was located here. The yards were in the southern section near the Little Lehigh, on the site of the wire mill, and the early brick-makers there were John Nonnemacher, Henry Worman and Jacob Egge. The flood of 1862 caused its suspension and then kilns came to be established in the northern section, at Gordon, Allen and Tilghman streets.

Jacob W. and Albert P. Grim conducted a yard south of the Little Lehigh and west of Eighth street from 1888 to 1907, when they were succeeded by the Ochs & Frey Brick Company.

John and Lewis Nonnemacher had a yard at Twelfth and Liberty streets from 1886 to 1902, employing 25 hands and producing 30,000 brick daily. They were followed by Wm. H. Hausman from 1902 to 1911.

William Mattern started in the business at Tenth and Allen about 1860. He was succeeded by his son, David, for upward of thirty years. His grandson, Edward, has followed it since 1906. He employs 20 hands and produces 18,000 brick daily.

Daniel Swoyer carried on a plant at Ninth and Allen streets from 1876 to 1900. Then his sons, Oscar D., Wm. J., and Moses E., located at Fourteenth and Allen. After carrying it on until 1904, they became incorporated as the Swoyer Brothers Brick Company, and have since carried on a very successful business, employing 75 hands and producing daily 70,000 brick.

Richard L. and Robert J. Frederick have operated a plant at Fifteenth and Allen since 1902. They employ 30 hands and produce annually five million brick.

FIRE-BRICK.—In 1854 a large fire-brick works was established by Samuel McHose and O. A. Ritter at the foot of Gordon street, along the L. V. R. R., and extending to Chew, and they conducted a successful business for twenty years under the name of McHose & Ritter. Then D. O. Saylor secured the interest of McHose and the large plant was continued for upward of twenty more years under the name of Ritter & Saylor, Charles T. Ritter having taken his father's interest upon the father's decease. Saylor's interest was then purchased by Eugene Gardner, and the business was carried on under the name of Ritter & Gardner until 1900, when it was discontinued. The dimensions of the building were 210 by 260 feet, including four kilns with a total capacity of 134,000 brick, and an annual production of 3,500,000 brick of every description for blast furnaces, rolling mills, steel mills, foundries, and gas works. The clay was obtained at the Wood-bridge mines in New Jersey. In its earlier history, the plant employed from 80 to 100 hands, but in its later history from 40 to 50.

The Industrial Fire-brick Works was established by Downing and Lewis in 1873 in East Allentown. In 1875, Joseph Downing became the owner and he carried on the business successfully for upward of twenty years, when he was succeeded by his nephew, William Downing, who has continued operations there until the present time. The hands employed number from 20 to 30, and the monthly production is about 100,000 fire brick of various kinds.

GRANITE AND TILE WORKS.

Wentz & Company, extensive manufacturers of granite and marble work of all kinds and dimensions at Kutztown for many years, located at Allentown in the spring of 1914, having removed their plant to a tract of land on Hamilton street at Twentieth, just beyond the city limits, along the trolley line at Griesemerville, in South Whitehall township. They employ 30 to 40 hands. Their monuments and stone work are shipped to all parts of Pennsylvania. The officers and directors of the company are Wm. Wentz, president; P. L. Hentzinger, secretary and treasurer; James Wentz, Laurence Rupp, Harry Bascom, Charles Hollenbach, and E. F. Ebbert.

In 1901, John Kline and George Sacks started in this business at 433-39 North Thirteenth street. They employ from 30 to 35 hands. Their trade extends through eastern Pennsylvania.

Among the early marble workers here were Jacob Biebighouse, John Eisenbrown, and P. F. Eisenbrown, Henry Breinig, Jacob M. Romig and brother, R. H. Kramm, Tilghman Schmeier, E. H. Lentz, and Walter Losch.

In 1898, Fulton Bowman and son, Earle, engaged in the business of setting up wood and tile mantels of all styles and putting down all kinds of tile, terrazzo, marble mosaic, and interior marble and slate work, and have since carried it on successfully, extending their trade throughout Lehigh and adjoining counties. They were located at No. 829 Hamilton street until 1908; since then they have been at No. 944. They employ from 5 to 10 hands.

Belfi Brothers, of Philadelphia, in the same business, have maintained an office at Allentown since 1908.

HOTELS.

HOTEL ALLEN.—The first boniface of Allentown was George Wolf, who kept a tavern on the site of the Hotel Allen from 1762 to 1768. In 1773, the house was known by its sign, "The King of Prussia." About 1800, John Fetter built a two-story structure on the site, and in 1810, George Savitz became the proprietor and called the inn, "The Square and Compass." He was landlord until 1818 and was succeeded by Daniel Kramer. Subsequent proprietors were George Haberacker, Charles Seagreaves, Samuel Gumpert, 1836-40; David Heller, Reuben Moyer, Charles Ihrle, David Stem, T. H. Good, 1849-53; William Craig, David Kiefer, Reed & Yohe, J. F. Newhard, Robert D. and W. C. P. Kramer, 1869-77; W. C. P. Kramer, 1877-78; Col. T. H. Good, 1879-85; Mullen & Ross, 1886-1890; and John H. Harris, 1890-1906. In 1906, John C. Schwartz and Carson W. Masters became the proprietors, and the property was improved, so that to-day there is no better equipped hotel in the Lehigh Valley. The building is of six stories, with a frontage of 40 feet on Hamilton street, and a depth of 100 feet on Seventh street. It contains 150 rooms, some with private baths, with all modern conveniences, and the service and cuisine are of the best. During the summer months, the "rustic porch garden," where an excellent orchestra entertains the guests, is a great attraction.

LAFAYETTE HOTEL, ALLENTOWN.

CITY HOTEL, 26-30 NORTH SEVENTH STREET, ALLENTOWN.

AMERICAN HOTEL.—In 1810, Abraham Gangawere built a two-story frame building at Sixth and Hamilton streets, where he kept a tavern for many years. He was succeeded by Jacob Stem, Charles Craig, John Gross, and Jonathan Kolb. Charles Seagreaves then became the owner and called the place, "The Northampton Inn." He enlarged the building by adding two stories and a brick addition. The stage coach line, of which Mr. Seagreaves was one of the owners, made its headquarters at the tavern. An alley formerly adjoined the hotel on the east, which space was later added to the building. The hotel is now five-story, 90 by 220 feet, and is owned by George W. Seagreaves, son of Charles. After Charles Seagreaves relinquished the management, the landlords were John Y. Bechtel, 16 years; Col. T. H. Good, 1865-67; Tilghman W. and W. P. C. Kramer, 1867-69; Jos. F. Newhard, 1870-84; Howard A. Hayden, and the owner, George W. Seagreaves. The present proprietor is J. Frank Jones. The hotel is noted for its excellent cuisine and is well patronized by commercial salesmen and the travelling public.

PENN HOTEL.—In 1810, George Rhoads opened a hotel in a frame building on the present site of this hostelry, which was later kept by Adam Miller, in 1845; Thomas Ginkinger, Ephraim Yohe, Samuel Henry, Tigher & Henning, and John Cole. The building was then occupied as a grocery store for eight years, and re-opened as a hotel in 1879 by Bittner & Hartman. Joseph Hartman, the owner, was proprietor for some years, and was succeeded by Wm. J. Gilbert. Later C. D. Strauss conducted it, and the present landlord is H. M. Hillegass. The building, a four-story brick structure, is located at Seventh and Linden streets.

LAFAYETTE HOTEL.—The first tavern on this site, at 133-137 North Seventh street, was built by John Moll about 1812. It was then known as "The Black Horse Tavern," and was later kept by Daniel Moyer, and Aaron Shifferstein. A Mr. Gangaware then conducted it for some years, followed by his son-in-law, Samuel Moyer. Owen Keiper then became the owner and conducted it until his death, after which his son, Allen, conducted it until his death. The widow, Mrs. Ann Keiper, then conducted it until 1885, when Kressley & Guth became the proprietors until 1893, when Albert J. D. Guth became the sole proprietor, and conducted it until his death in March, 1904. He was succeeded by the present proprietors, his sons, Elmer A. and George E. K. Guth, conducting the business as Guth Brothers. The hotel has 60 rooms and all modern conveniences.

HAMILTON HOTEL.—This building was erected as a private residence by John Evans, Esq., in 1819. At his death, a few years later, it was converted into the "Court House Hotel," by George Haberacker, who kept it a number of years, and was succeeded by men named Kramer and Bittenbender. In 1855, Hon. Henry King purchased the property and resided there, and in 1865, Hon. John D. Stiles became the owner and resided there until his death. His son, C. Fred Stiles, re-established it as a hotel and the present proprietor is H. H. Smith.

CITY HOTEL.—In 1871, William Yohn built this hotel, who kept it for a time, and was succeeded by B. F. Yost and others. It was then called the Centennial House, which name was changed to the Kramer House by W. P. C. Kramer in 1879, and subsequently to the Merchants Hotel and the City Hotel. C. C. Kocher is the present proprietor.

The Bellevue Hotel, at 402-404 Ridge avenue, the West End, at Chew and Madison, and the Walton, at Eighth and Tighman streets, are the largest among the hotels in outlying sections of the city. Other hotels are: Union, Franklin, Germania, Columbia, Sterling, Lehigh, First Ward, Mansion, New Bingham, Acorn, Fairview, Grand, and Mt. Airy, with others of lesser size.

Several hotels that existed for many years are worthy of mention. The Eagle Hotel, at the northwest corner of Seventh and Hamilton streets, was built in 1832, by Jesse Grim. Its landlords were Christian Copp, Jacob H. Ritter, Reuben Strauss, Tilghman Good, George Wetherhold, James Trexler, under whom it was burned down in 1848 and rebuilt, Eli Steckel, James Eschbach, Thomas Lichtenwalner, Henry Bachman, Moses Schneck, Valentine Weaver, Sieger & Weaver, Sieger & Hottenstein, Levi Hottenstein, and Hottenstein & Sons.

A famous hostelry of the past that existed over 130 years, was the Cross Keys, at the northwest corner of Eight and Hamilton streets. As early as 1772, Henry Hagenbuch kept a tavern there in a stone building, later replaced by a brick building, and owned by Jacob, Benj. J. and Chas. Hagenbuch until 1872, when Reuben M. Gernert became the owner.

The Black Bear Hotel stood on the site of Hess Bros. store. In 1869, it was called the Balliet House, kept by Asa Balliet. In 1879, W. R. Drumbore was the proprietor. It was succeeded by the Grand Central Hotel, kept by Victor D. Barner.

A hotel at the southwest corner of Seventh and Linden streets was kept by John Nicholas Fox from 1772 to 1809. Other landlords were Jacob Mickley, Michael and Peter Schneider, Abr. Beidelman, Abr. Gangewere, Michael Rice, Reuben Moyer, and Henry Leh, under whom it burned down about 1859 and was not rebuilt.

The Golden Lamb, on Water street, near Lawrence, was kept by Caspar Kleckner, Fred. Kocher, Gideon Fusselman, and Thomas Totten until 1830. Barthol Hittel kept a tavern at the southwest corner of Eighth and Hamilton streets in 1781, where Elizabeth Kauffman conducted it in 1812.

Capt. John F. Ruhe kept a tavern from 1812 to 1820 at the east side of Seventh street, between Hamilton and Linden, called "The Rainbow," and later in a building on Union street, above Seventh. The "Hornet's Nest," on the northeast corner of Seventh and Walnut, was a famous hostelry, kept by John Miller and John Weil. The Mansion House, formerly known as "The Spread Eagle," was kept from 1815 to 1825 by Derheimer Bros. Henry Gross kept a tavern on the site of the Germania as early as 1812. The "Bull's Head," the resort of gamblers, was built about 1829, at Fifth and Linden, by John Reaser. It was kept in 1814 by Wm. Rinker and in 1840 by Michael Rice. The Rising Sun was at Tenth and Hamilton, and the Anchor at Seventh and Liberty. Caspar Kleckner built the "Lumberman's House," near the Lehigh, about 1817, which stood until a few years ago, and in 1833 built the Lehigh House, which he kept until 1841, when his son-in-law, John G. Schimpf, kept it until 1858. In 1843, D. H. Washburn opened a temperance house in J. F. Ruhe's former hotel on Union street. A tavern was kept at Worman's Spring from 1821 to about 1855 by Conrad and Abraham Worman, and Edwin Keiper, and in 1867, the Mansion, later the Fountain House, was built there by James Crader and Peter Burns. It was kept by R. P. and W. P. C. Kramer from 1872 to 1875, and later by Samuel Adams, and was in operation about twenty years.

BREWING AND BOTTLING.

LIEBERMAN BREWERY.—In 1845, John Oberly embarked in the business of brewing lager beer at Allentown, and then established his brewery at the northwest corner of Sixth and Union streets. He carried it on until 1864, when Joseph Lieberman became the owner. The place was then called the "Eagle Brewery," and Mr. Lieberman conducted it successfully until his decease in 1900. His sons, Joseph A. and Charles L., then continued the business under the name of Joseph Lieberman's Sons until 1910, when an incorporated company was organized as The Lieberman Brewing Company, which has carried on the business until now. Employees number 18; the annual capacity is 20,000 barrels. A bottling works is connected with the brewery.

KERN BREWERY.—The next brewery was started about 1860 by Leopold Kern on Lawrence street, between Seventh and Eighth and he carried it on for twenty years. A man named Franklin, of Easton, then became the owner, and Charles Ritter carried on the business as lessee for several years, when it was suspended and the building was converted into dwellings.

DAUFER BREWERY.—This brewery was started on North Eighth street, No. 16, in 1869, and the beer vault was established on a large lot at Jefferson and Laurence streets, by Henry Koenig and his brothers-in-law, George D. and Francis Däufer, who traded under the name of H. Koenig & Company. They continued the business there until 1876, when the plant was removed to the lot where the vault was situated and they erected a brick hotel building and a two-story frame brewery. The enlarged plant was carried on under that name until 1890, when it was changed to Däufer & Company, and it was conducted by Däufer & Company until 1911, when it was sold to Martin E. Kern. In the beginning the capacity was 2,000 barrels of lager beer; this was gradually increased and in 1911 it was 12,000 barrels. The Däufer Brewing Company was then incorporated and the plant was rebuilt, enlarged and equipped with the latest improvements. Employees number 24; capacity 40,000 barrels. A bottling department is attached.

NEUWEILER BREWERY.—In 1878, Benedict Nuding built the Germania Brewery on South Seventh street, at the rear of the hotel of this name, with a capacity of 4,000 barrels, and conducted it until 1900; then Lewis F. Neuweiler became associated with him and they traded under the name of the Nuding-Neuweiler Brewing Company until 1900. The capacity was increased to 20,000 barrels a year. Neuweiler purchased Nuding's interest and substituted his two sons, Charles and Louis, Jr., in his place, and since then the business has been carried on in the name of L. F. Neuweiler & Sons. Owing to their rapidly increasing trade, a block-square of land was secured at Front and Gordan streets in 1911, when a new plant was started, thoroughly equipped with the latest and best machinery and completed by April, 1913; and they removed to their new quarters on April 28th. They employ 40 hands. Their annual capacity is 50,000 barrels. The bottling department was started in 1906; its daily capacity is 100 barrels.

WISE BREWERY.—James Wise established a was followed by Knauss & Lichtenwalner, M. D. Lichtenwalner, and J. J. Hottenstein to 1882, when the brewery was discontinued. Frederick Horlacher rented the bottling works and conducted them to 1896, and his son, Frederick H., to 1905. Different parties have been there since, the last, Milton Neuman, since 1912.

ESTABLISHMENT OF LEWIS D. CLAUSS.

small brewery in 1866 for the manufacture of ale and porter at the northeast corner of Fourth and Hamilton streets, which included a bottling works. He carried on the place until 1875. He

Daniel Wise, the father of James, after conducting bottling works at several places, located at Allentown in 1850. He established a place at Sixth and Union streets, which he carried on until 1860, and his son, James, followed him until 1866, when he removed the plant to Fourth and Hamilton streets.

CLAUSS BOTTLING WORKS was established by L. D. Clauss at 318-20 North Franklin street, Allentown, in 1900, for manufacturing and distributing "soft drinks." The building is three-story, 60 by 120 feet. He employs eight hands and has two teams and two auto trucks for distributing his production throughout Lehigh county and the adjacent territory of the surrounding counties.

GOUNDIE, MOLL & Co.—In 1898, Goundie, Moll & Company began a bottling business in East Allentown. In 1902, they were succeeded by Frank Guth, who carried on the works for three years. Then Charles H. Wittman became the owner and he has since operated the place, employing from 7 to 10 hands.

Nearby, at Front and Court streets, Arbogast & Bastian have carried on a factory since Dec. 1, 1911, employing two men, who make 300 barrels weekly.

The Lehigh Barrel Works was started by Levi Uhler in 1905 and operated by him for three years. He was succeeded by Schaffer, Christ & Piehl, from 1908 to 1911; by Charles Sauber from 1911 to 1912; and by Harvey & Ward from 1912 to 1913, when it became a repair shop.

BOTTLE WORKS.—The manufacture of flint bottles at Allentown was started in 1901 by the Standard Bottle & Glass Company, at Sumner avenue and North Sixteenth street. The plant was operated two years, when it was purchased by the Allentown Flint Bottle Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, capitalized at $20,000. In 1905, the plant was destroyed by fire, but it was rebuilt immediately and enlarged to sixteen shops.

KEYSTONE BARREL WORKS, ALLENTOWN.

KEYSTONE BARREL WORKS.—Joseph Hitzel started the manufacture of kegs and barrels in 1905 at Nos. 11-27 North Railroad street, and carried on the small factory for a short time, when he was succeeded by H. & M. Swoyer, who conducted the place till 1910; they were succeeded by Moses Swoyer from 1910 to 1913; and since then Frank Hitzel, son of Joseph, has conducted it as a branch of his Bethlehem factory. He employs in the several plants about twenty people. The success of Mr. Hitzel is due in large measure to his own detailed knowledge of the manufacturing end of the business. He had learned the cooper trade from his father, Valentine, when a lad of fourteen. The trade which Mr. Hitzel built up extends all over eastern Pennsylvania and into New Jersey.

The product is medicine, liquor and soda bottles, in sizes varying from one-half ounce to a quart, and the trade is mostly local. This enterprise employs 140 men and boys. It is situated along a branch of the L. V. R. R. The officers are: E. W. Fox, Reading, president; L. R. Roth, treasurer; and C. F. Nester, secretary, both of Allentown.

CIGARS.

Some of the earliest manufacturers of cigars at Allentown were John Eckert, Owen Blumer, Samuel Nonnermacher, John F. Ruhe, and Charles Ruhe. John F. Ruhe was succeeded by his son, Charles A., and Charles A. Ruhe by his sons, Joseph, Charles, and Frederick, who were followed until now by Edward, John and George.

William Nonnermacher (son of Samuel), was in the business from 1870 to 1910, with James Smith as a partner for the first several years. The factory was on Hamilton, near Hall. He sold the store to the United Cigar Co., but his son, Frank S., and Frank W. Bear became his successors and they have since manufactured cigars on Lumber street, north of Chew.

The oldest surviving cigar-maker, aged over 80 years, is Simon Snyder, on Seventh street, south of Walnut.

Josiah Werley has been in the business at No. 939 Hamilton street since 1887; and Edwin S. Gerhart at No. 31 North Tenth street, since 1894.

HUNSICKER & Co.—In 1882, Francis P. Hunsicker embarked in the manufacture and completion of their building at Ridge avenue and Green street, in 1911. The factory is 120x42 feet. It is a three-story brick building. The firm employ about 200 people. They manufacture the famous "Councillor Cigar."

Recent extensive manufacturers at Allentown are Victor Thorsch Company, Bondy & Lederer, "44" Cigar Company, and Bayuk Bros. Company.

There are about forty small manufacturers.

The U. S. Revenue from cigars made at Allentown for the year 1913-14 was $482,505.

CIGAR BOXES.—In 1876, John M. Stevens embarked in the business of manufacturing cigar boxes on South Church street and he carried it on until he died in 1900. Then A. H. Balliet became the owner and removed the plant to Lumber and Chestnut streets, where he conducted it successfully until 1907, when his increasing trade required him to provide larger quarters. He ac-sale of cigars at 727 Hamilton street, and continued there with increasing success and trade, gradually extending throughout Lehigh and the surrounding counties for thirty years. Then enlarged accommodations became necessary, and in this behalf he secured the premises on North Seventh street, adjoining the Allentown National Bank building, where he erected an 11-story stone structure, the highest, if not the finest, store and office building in the prosperous city of Allentown, which has become generally recognized as the "Queen City of the Lehigh Valley," on account of its fine stores and banks, and its enterprising merchants and manufacturers. He employs 17 hands, and produces annually five millions of high-grade cigars.

ALLENTOWN FLINT BOTTLE COMPANY.

ALLEN R. CRESSMAN SONS, extensive cigar manufacturers of Pennsylvania, have a branch factory located in Allentown since 1909. The firm was located in the Nagle building until the cordingly erected a large and substantial five-story brick factory at the corner of Franklin and Warren streets, 80 by 160 feet, and equipped it with the most improved machinery. He has a large local trade and employs from 250 to 275 hands. He also produces large quantities of pyrographic boxes and novelties, and hosiery boards. Since 1907 he has also been engaged in producing cigar box lumber, importing the cedar logs from Cuba. His yard extends to Fifteenth street, where great and costly piles of logs can be seen in stock. The annual capacity of his plant is 12,000,000 feet. Frederick W. Doll has been superintendent of the works since 1904; and C. S. Frederick manager in the office since 1910.

In 1892, Edwin H. Diefenderfer started manufacturing cigar boxes at the rear of No. 727 Hamilton street, where he continued until 1905. He then removed to the rear of his home, No. 219 North Jefferson street, where he has carried on the business until now. He employs several hands. His trade is local.

PAPER BOXES.—Wm. H. Ryan, Wm. R. Klein, and E. W. Gilbert have traded since 1879 under the name of W. H. Ryan & Company, in manufacturing paper boxes of all kinds; employ from 50 to 70 hands.

H. T. Rose and R. M. Rex were also engaged in the business for some time.

Allentown Paper Box Company was organized in 1914 (March) by Louis E. La Roche, H. O. Ritter, and R. H. M. Rhoda. Their plant is at 42 South Church street, Allentown. They employ 35 hands and manufacture daily upwards of 5,000 paper boxes of various sizes.

GAS WORKS.

Gas was first introduced in the town by Dr. William F. Danowsky, who erected small works on his own lot for household use in 1850.* Not long after this he was induced to supply a few merchants and others in his immediate neighborhood, and for this purpose laid zinc mains along the north side of the street in the block in which he resided, Hamilton street, between Seventh and Eighth. His experiments proved completely successful, and a great desire was kindled among the people to have this method of lighting generally adopted. The capacity of the works was of course small, yet a portion of those desiring gas in various parts of town could readily have been accommodated if it had not been for Dr. Danowsky's inability to meet the heavy expense of laying street mains. The novel idea was suggested in this emergency that persons desiring the use of the gas should provide themselves with gum or leather receptacles to be kept in their cellars or other convenient places to connect with the house or service pipes, and these receptacles were then filled as often as they became exhausted from a huge rubber bag, which, after being filled at the works, was carted about to the residences of consumers. Such was the beginning of the use of gas as an illuminator in Allentown.

In the course of a year or so Dr. Danowsky, yielding to the requests of many citizens, erected works on a much larger scale than the original ones, on the old school lot next to the jail. Zinc mains were laid along Hamilton street to Ninth, and on several other prominent streets. The business grew steadily and prosperously. In 1853, Mr. Nathan Laudenslager became associated with the originator of the works, and soon assumed superintendence of them. Dr. Danowsky having numerous applications to erect gas-works in other towns, concluded to sell out his interest here, and to accept the engagements offered him elsewhere, which proved to be quite remunerative. He found ready purchasers in Messrs. Blumer, Line & Co., who, with Mr. Laudenslager, became the sole owners in 1859. Prior to this time, however, Danowsky and Laudenslager erected the works on Jordan creek, at Fourth and Hamilton streets, which were rendered necessary by the increased consumption of gas in stores and dwelling-houses.

Mr. Laudenslager remained in partnership with Messrs. Blumer, Line & Co. until 1871, when he sold to them his half-interest. There were at that time about eight miles of iron pipe in use, the zinc ones having been discarded in 1854. The consumption reached nearly a million cubic feet per annum, which was paid for at the rate of three dollars and fifty cents per thousand feet. About this time a charter was granted for a new company, but no organization was made under it, and the only effect was to cause a reduction in the price of gas. In 1872-73 the gas-works, near the depot, were built, and the company thus obtained greatly increased facilities for the production of gas. The company had a large number of patrons, and did quite a successful business, but at length became very seriously involved in other enterprises they were carrying on and failed. The works were sold by the sheriff in 1878, and William W. Kurtz, of the firm of W. W. Kurtz & Co., bankers and brokers of Philadelphia, became the purchaser. The business was conducted by him until 1882, when the works passed into the possession of a company, incorporated January 3d of that year, under the title of the Allentown Gas Company, with a capital of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The incorporators were William W. Kurtz, William B. Kurtz, M. L. Kauffman, Robert Iredell, Jr., C. W. Cooper, A. J. Martin, E. S. Martin, William H. Sowden, and H. K. Kurtz.

Bethlehem and Catasauqua became merged with Allentown, Dec. 23, 1913, and from that time the business has been conducted under the name of the Allentown-Bethlehem Gas Company.

The total production at Allentown for the year 1913 was 180,000,000 feet of gas. The plant at Allentown comprises four gasometers with a total capacity of 1,400,000 cubic feet. The total length of mains is sixty miles.

John A. Frick has filled the position of vice-president and manager at Allentown since 1908.

*It may interest some to know that the first city in the United States lighted with gas was Baltimore, in 1821. Boston followed in 1822, and in 1823 the New York Gas-Light Company was started, although not in operation until 1827.

His predecessor for twenty years was A. F. Bigelow.

John Shafer has been in the continuous service of the company at Allentown since 1876, a period covering thirty-eight years, mostly as foreman; William Ziegler, as gas-maker for nineteen years; William Watkins as street foreman for seventeen years. E. H. Reninger, Esq., has been the solicitor for upwards of twenty years.

The office has been in the Commonwealth building since 1905. It was at No. 540 Hamilton street from 1888 to 1905.

The first location of the gas plant was at No. 707 Hamilton street; the second, near Fifth and Linden; the third, on the site of the L. V. R. R. station; and the fourth, where it now is, at Third and Union streets, since 1876.

ELECTRICITY.

Electric lighting in Allentown was started by William A. Roney in 1882. He was then running a shoe factory, and the engine which supplied the power there in the daytime was used to operate a 10-arc light dynamo in the night time. He furnished light in this manner until March 14, 1883, when the Allentown Electric Light & Power Company was organized with a capital of $50,000, and Mr. Roney as president. Subsequently the capital was increased to $300,000, and the plant at Penn and Maple streets was enlarged to a capacity of 350 arc lights and 500 incandescent lights, requiring seven engines of 450 horse-power. But the demands kept increasing, a new plant came to be established by the Lehigh Valley Traction Company, which purchased the other, and has since carried on the electric lighting of the city and supplied its patrons with electric power. The public lights number 430½ arc (the one-half of the Lehigh river bridge light being paid by the county commissioners), and 489 incandescent. Further particulars are given in connection with the electric railway system.

TELEGRAPH.—Soon after 1850, the telegraph service began to be operated in this section of country by local companies, which were extended from city to city, and in 1854, the first telegraph wire entered Allentown. It was strung on poles along Hamilton street to the building at No. 616, and Daniel Klotz received the first message as the operator. He maintained an office there for some years.

The rates between the cities then were practically prohibitory, because the cumulative rates of the several companies, over whose lines the message had to pass, amounted in some cases to $15 for ten words, and the time of delivery was uncertain, even doubtful. The progress until now, a period of 60 years, has become so marked that the maximum rate for ten words covering a distance of 3,000 miles has been reduced to $1, with the assurance that the message will be delivered.

W. U. Co.—The Western Union Telegraph Company secured the plant here in 1875, and the office was moved to No. 532 Hamilton street, and additional wires were put up to meet the increasing demands of the business. The hours of business extended from 8 a. m. to 12 p. m.

In 1882 the office was removed to No. 704 Hamilton street, and in 1895 to No. 619, by which time the wires to New York City had increased to nineteen, including connections to Philadelphia, Reading, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, and Buffalo, and the employees in the office from three to six.

In 1905 the office was removed to larger quarters in the basement of the Allentown National Bank building, at Centre Square, and the wires were increased to thirty-six. From 1910 to 1913 this office came to be a repeating centre for Reading, Pottsville, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. In July, 1914, there were twelve employees and fifteen messengers; and the office handled monthly as a relay centre, about 18,000 messages.

The following have been the managers in the Allentown office: Daniel Klotz, Harry E. Moss, 1875-82; Kirk de Belle, 1882-86; Edward Derr, 1886-95; Thomas Hagenbuch, 1895-1902; G. R. Daniels, 1902-10; H. L. Hilton since 1910.

The present efficient local manager started with the company as a messenger boy in the office at Wilkes-Barre, and by his fidelity and studious application, he was promoted from one place to another until he came to fill successfully the present important position. Miss M. M. Earich entered the service of the company as a clerk in 1900, and recently was promoted to the responsible position of cashier. The chief operator, Clarence Ulmer, started with the company as a messenger boy in 1902.

Postal-Cable Co.—In 1882, an independent telegraph line was established in the East Penn Valley by the Lehigh Telegraph Company, with its general office at Macungie, and the promoter of this enterprise was K. O. Markley. This was absorbed by the Bankers and Merchants Telegraph Company in 1889; and two years afterward, this became merged in the Postal Telegraph Cable Company.

The first office was located in the Hotel Allen, at Allentown, and the first manager was C. H. Rockel, who started in 1886. Subsequently the offices were removed to No. 647 Hamilton street, Centre Square (Chronicle and News building), No. 612 Hamilton street, until 1907, when they were changed to the basement of the Second National Bank building, on Centre Square, and there they have continued until the present time. Subsequent managers at Allentown have been Daniel E. Lerch, C. O. Stager, and E. H. Breinig (since 1911).

The monthly business at Allentown numbers from 6,000 to 8,000 messages, requiring three operators and clerk, and from five to nine messengers.

This telegraph line connects with the Commercial Cable Company, and extends three-fourths of the way around the earth. It has connections with all the wireless systems of the world.

TELEPHONE.—The telephone was introduced at Allentown about 1880 by Samuel Cortright and Mr. Clute, of Mauch Chunk, where they had previously started the enterprise. Mr. Clute was the electrician who attended to its proper establishment and operation, and Mr. Cortright secured the patrons and looked after the financial end. About fifty patrons were obtained, including the Allentown National Bank; Second National Bank; Kauffman & Renninger, attorneys; Thomas B. Metzger, Esq.; James K. Mosser, M. S. Young; Yeager & Culbertson; Allen Hotel; and American Hotel. It was looked upon as an experimental enterprise; but the promoters were persistent and persevering and soon satisfied the business men of the city that it was both useful and necessary.

The first exchange was located near Sixth and Hamilton streets. In 1890, it was at No. 544, in what is now the Kramer building, and when the large new buildings on the corner were destroyed by fire, Oct. 13, 1893, it was removed to above Sixth, where the moving picture show is operated. Thence it was transferred to Linden and Hall streets, where it has continued until now.

Bell Company.—Previous to 1908, the business was carried on in the name of the Pennsylvania Telephone Company, then it was changed to the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, which has since operated the plant in a most successful manner, with daily calls numbering about 25,000, and employees about 70. A superior fire-proof three-story brick structure was put up in 1914, which is equipped with the best appliances and the most recent improvements in telephony, at an expense of $20,000. It displays in a remarkable manner the modern facilities for the prompt dispatch of business.

Besides Mr. Clute, two of the early local managers were Charles A. Matcham and Charles Smith. Ernest Ritter served from 1904 to 1912; and Edward J. Coover has served since February, 1912.

Consolidated Co.—In the latter part of 1899, the Lehigh Telephone Company was organized at Allentown, and the active parties in its organization were Thos. J. Daugherty, Wilson J. Hartzell, George Albright, Frederick E. Lewis, Charles Mans, E. C. Clymer, Franklin Hersh, Samuel J. Ritter, and Robert E. Wright, who constituted its board of directors, with the first-named as president. F. A. Demarest, an experienced telephone line builder, established its lines north to Siegfried and south to Macungie, and business was started in August, 1900, with five hundred subscribers. Within two years the subscribers increased to several thousand, which evidences the great appreciation of this local enterprise. Afterward a consolidation with other lines was effected, which had established exchanges at Slatington, Lehigh, Mauch Chunk, Hazleton, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Carbonale, and Reading, and the combination came to be known as the "Consolidated Telephone Company of Pennsylvania."

In 1906, the "magneto" system was abandoned at Allentown, and the "automatic" introduced; and this was the first "four-party service" in the United States, which is still in use. The subscribers have been increased to 4,000, and the lines of this company now reach every community in eastern Pennsylvania, with extensions into New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland.

On Oct. 1, 1913, the company was re-organized under the name of the "Consolidated Telephone Company." The monthly business has been developed to 600,000 messages. To meet increasing demands, the company is now re-building its entire plant at Allentown at a cost of $130,000, which will embrace the removal of all exposed wires to cables underground, and the erection of a new fire-proof building at the present location, No. 110 North Seventh street, fully equipped with the most recent improvements. The local men in the management of the company are Col. H. C. Trexler, and E. M. Young, of Allentown; and Leonard Peckitt, of Catasauqua.

Herbert H. Weibel has efficiently filled the position of district superintendent since 1905. The local agent is A. T. Frederick, who has been employed by the company since 1900, he having secured the first contracts to supply its service to patrons in this community. The office and exchange have been at No. 110 North Seventh street from the beginning of the company.

DEPARTMENT STORES.

H. LEH & CO.—Henry Leh embarked in the shoe business at Allentown in 1850, and continued it for thirty years. Then he located his store at 626 Hamilton street, and added dry goods

He carried on a successful business until his death in May, 1910, having in this time purchased the business of Breinig & Leh. He was succeeded by his two sons, George H. and John, and his son-in-law, H. B. Koch, who have since traded as H. Leh & Company. In 1912 they erected a superior and commodious modern 5-story department store, which is recognized as one of the finest stores in the country. They have 25 departments and employ from 150 to 200 hands. Their patrons come from all parts of eastern Pennsylvania.

ZOLLINGER-HARNED Co.—Wm. R. Lawfer started a general dry goods store in 1865 and carried on a large and successful business until 1902, when the corporation of Zollinger-Harned Company was organized. The store has been since developed to comprise 26 departments, which employ from 120 to 150 hands.

HESS BROS.—Max Hess and Charles Hess, merchants of Perth Amboy, N. J., embarked in the dry goods business at Allentown in 1897, when they secured one-half of the Grand Central Hotel on Hamilton street, below Ninth. They have since traded as Hess Brothers, and gradually enlarged their store until it has come to be one of the largest, finest and most complete department stores in Pennsylvania. It comprises 46 departments and employs 500 hands, and its trade extends into all parts of eastern Pennsylvania. The large and flourishing business was incorporated in 1911 with the following directors: Max Hess, Charles Hess, Solomon Hoffman, Wm. T. Harris, W. H. Behringer, and John Diefenderfer, and a capitalization upwards of a million dollars.

GLOBE STORE.—Cleland, Simpson & Taylor established a dry goods store at the southeast corner of Centre Square in 1883, and soon after removed to the northwest corner. In 1896, John Taylor purchased the interest of Messrs. Cleland and Simpson, and the firm became John Taylor & Company. It was incorporated in 1906 with Mr. Taylor as president and treasurer, and E. E. Knerr as secretary. The firm occupies four floors, employ 100 clerks, and has a large retail trade.

BITTNER, HUNSICKER & Co.—In 1857, Owen Hunsicker and Elias Bittner began to trade as Hunsicker & Bittner, at Pleasant Corner, in Lehigh county, in conducting a general country store, and they continued four years, when Hunsicker died and Bittner's brother, Peter, became associated with him and they traded together as E. & P. Bittner until 1872. In the meantime Henry W. and James F. Hunsicker had moved to Allentown and carried on a dry goods business as Hunsicker Bros. Then Elias Bittner also removed to Allentown, and the three began a wholesale and retail business at 813 Hamilton street, under the name of Bittner & Hunsicker Bros, which was continued for fourteen years, Frank D. Bittner (son of Elias) having become a partner in 1882. In 1886, the retail department of the business was discontinued and the firm name was changed to Bittner, Hunsicker & Company, which has been used until the present time. In 1891, the firm put up a new store building at 16-18 North Seventh street, but remained there only five years when they were obliged to secure larger quarters and accordingly established themselves in a new and superior four-story brick building on the opposite side of the street, at Nos. 23-25, 30 by 270 feet, and there they have since carried on a very large and successful wholesale dry goods business, with trade reaching throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and also part of New York. In 1903 their store and property were destroyed by fire, but the building was rebuilt by them without hesitation and the store replenished with a new and complete stock in every line of goods. They have twenty travelling salesmen on the road securing orders, and employ from 30 to 40 hands in the store. In 1914, the firm was constituted of Elias Bittner, James F. Hunsicker, and Frank D. Bittner.

KOCH BROS.—In 1876, Franklin W. Koch and Wilson C. Shankweiler engaged in the clothing business at Allentown at 618 Hamilton street, after having learned this branch of trade under the firm of Breinig & Leh, and they traded as Koch & Shankweiler. In nine years they had prospered so much that they were able to buy the old Allen Hotel property at the northeast corner of Central Square, and then they erected a modern five-story brick building, 47 by 110 feet, to take its place, the store to occupy the first floor and the hotel the other stories. In 1886, the junior partner died and his interest was purchased by Thomas J. Koch, brother of the senior partner. The business was then developed gradually to large proportions under the firm name of Koch Bros., which necessitated the enlargement of the building in the shape of an L towards Church street. They continued together for twenty years when the senior partner was accidentally killed in a railroad wreck in England. The surviving partner purchased his brother's interest, but he has since continued the large and flourishing business under the name of Koch Bros. The adjoining properties on the east (641 and 643) have since been purchased with the view of enlarging the building for the accommodation of the increasing trade of the Hotel Allen, as well as of the clothing establishment. Patrons come from all parts of eastern Pennsylvania, and 200 hands are employed in carrying on the business.

BREINIG & BACHMAN.—In 1888, George F. Breinig and Alfred P. Bachman associated together and began to trade as Breinig & Bachman, at Allentown, in the clothing business. They started at No. 632 Hamilton street, but their success was so marked that in three years they purchased the Weinsheimer property on the southeast corner of Sixth and Hamilton streets, and erected a fine new five-story brick store building, with the stories above the first floor set apart for office purposes. To the surprise of the city and the amazement of the young, enterprising merchants, their superb structure was destroyed by fire on Oct. 13, 1893; but to such indomitable spirits the shock was only momentary, for they immediately set about to resume business and rebuild their great clothing emporium. This was accomplished in 1894, and there they have since conducted a most successful business as gents' clothiers and furnishers. They employ from 30 to 50 hands.

SHANKWEILER & LEHR.—In 1890, Lewis O. Shankweiler and William C. Lehr started dealing as Shankweiler & Lehr in the clothing business for men and boys. They began doing business at No. 643 Hamilton street, but in two years they secured the valuable southeast corner property at Center Square and erected a commodious four-story brick building to meet the demands of their increasing business and there they have continued until the present time in a most successful manner. On Feb. 23, 1914, their establishment was visited by the "Fire Demon," but not disheartened, they made immediate repairs and resumed business with increased determination and enterprise. They occupy the entire building and employ from 50 to 60 hands.

KUHNS & KERSCHNER was established in 1898 by B. F. Kuhns and D. J. Kerschner, with Lewis Sourwein, who retired in 1910. They conduct a large furnishing and clothing store at 719-21 Hamilton street and employ twenty-five people. A men's hat department has recently been added and the firm now carry in stock everything in men's furnishings except shoes.

M. S. YOUNG & Co.—In 1843 Stephen Barber embarked in the general hardware business at No. 740 Hamilton street, and shortly afterward Joseph Young was admitted as a partner, when they traded as Barber & Young. M. S. Young then became a partner, and upon the decease of Mr. Barber, his interest was secured by E. B. Young and Reuben P. Steckel, and the partners then traded under the name of M. S. Young & Company, which name has been continued until now. In 1896, the partners were Reuben P.

Steckel, E. M. Young and Wilson P. Ludwig. In 1907 Mr. Steckel retired, and the remaining partners have since retained the old and influential name of M. S. Young & Company. They employ 42 hands and their large trade extends throughout eastern Pennsylvania and western New Jersey.

F. HERSH HARDWARE CO.—In 1858, Franklin Hersh started at Allentown in the hardware business. In 1865, the partnership was Hersh, Mosser & Co., and in 1876, it was F. Hersh, Sons & Company, consisting of the father, two sons, (Henry D. and George T.), and O. S. Grim; and by 1896, A. R. Lewis took the place of Mr. Grim. The founder, Franklin Hersh, died Jan. 29, 1900. In 1903, the firm was incorporated as F. Hersh Hardware Company, comprising Henry D. Hersh, George T. Hersh, Arnold R. Lewis, Wm. N. Eberhard, and John F. Hersh. The superior site at Hamilton and Lumber streets was secured in 1884, and the firm erected a large brick building, 61 by 230 feet for the business (the corner half being occupied by the firm and the other half by Hersh Brothers, who are engaged in the stove, tinware and graniteware business). They employ 35 hands and their trade extends through eastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey.

EBBECKE HARDWARE CO.—In 1881, M. C. Ebbecke began trading as a hardware merchant at No. 606 Hamilton street, and continued by himself for five years, when Samuel S. Moyer became a partner. In 1895, the business was incorporated under the name of Ebbecke Hardware Company, with Mr. Ebbecke, John F. Ebbecke, Wm. B. Fogelman, and Charles Kramlich as the interested parties. In August, 1914, a re-organization was effected with John F. Ebbecke, president; Wm. B. Fogelman, secretary and treasurer; Henry B. Arnold; and Charles A. Kemmerer as the managers, and owners of the store. They employ seven hands and their trade is local.

C. Y. SCHELLY & BRO.—In 1883, Cyrus Y. and Joel P. Schelly associated together as C. Y. Schelly & Bro., to carry on a general hardware business at Allentown. They located at 32 North Seventh street, and there the store has been maintained in a successful manner until the present time, covering a period of thirty years. In 1911, the firm was constituted of Cyrus Y. Schelly, James Y. Schelly, and W. J. C. Troxell, who have continued the old name. They employ from 25 to 30 hands, and their trade extends throughout eastern Pennsylvania.

ARBOGAST & BASTIAN.—In 1887, Wilson Arbogast and M. C. Bastian established an abattoir at the foot of Hamilton street along the Lehigh river, and began the slaughter of live stock and the sale of all kinds of fresh and smoked meats to the retail trade at Allentown and in the surrounding country for many miles. Their first building was only 30 by 40 feet, but by 1894 they had enlarged it to 140 by 250 feet, and come to slaughter weekly from 400 to 500 hogs, 70 to 100 steers, and 40 to 50 lambs and calves each. During the succeeding twenty years until now their plant was extended and improved at different times to meet the great demands of their increasing trade, accordingly slaughtering more live stock and employing more men. They have a complete refrigerating plant, and also supply the public with large quantities of artificial ice.

BUTZ PRODUCE HOUSE.—In 1886, the Butz

MISCELLANEOUS INDUSTRIES.

APRONS.—In August, 1913, A. Karol and J. Finberg started the manufacture of ladies' and children's aprons and petticoats at No. 443 North Second street, under the name of Royal Apron and Petticoat Company. In October following, they removed to No. 414 Gordon street, and then G. Karol and S. Carl became associated with them in the enterprise. They employ from six to ten hands.

ART GLASS WORKS.—J. F. Wallace, after following the manufacture of art and stained glass work, mirrors, and beveled plate glass at Philadelphia for twelve years, located at Allentown in 1906, and has since carried on the business in a successful manner under the name of Allentown Glass and Mirror Works. He employs from four to six hands. His shop is at 717-19 Linden street. His trade is mostly for churches and fine mansions in eastern Pennsylvania. He has been identified with this special business for 30 years.

SCHLAFER BAKERY, 806 SOUTH SIXTH STREET, ALLENTOWN.

Brothers, of Allentown (D. Alvin, Oscar E., and T. Ambrose), engaged in the wholesale fruit, produce, fish and oyster business on North Seventh street, and continued there until the firm removed to their four-story cement block building, 61 by 61 feet, at 716-20 Turner street, which was erected in 1906. Oscar E. Butz withdrew from the firm in 1904. They have a large trade and employ 15 hands.

GOMERY PRODUCE HOUSE.—In 1894, Albert D. and John E. Gomery, trading as Gomery Bros., began a wholesale business in groceries and fruits at 18 North Tenth street. They continued there until 1901, when they secured the Evangelical church at 919-21 Linden, which they remodeled and enlarged and here they have since conducted a very large trade, with the assistance of 32 hands.

Melvin B. Neff started in March, 1903, and in November following, W. F. Neff, J. B. Chattoe, and Charles Seem became incorporated as Neff, Chattoe & Company, for the manufacture of art and stained glass work for churches, residences and public buildings. They employ from 5 to 10 hands, and their trade extends throughout eastern Pennsylvania. The factory is at 429-31 North Howard street.

SCHLAFER'S BAKERY is located at the corner of Sixth and St. John streets, Allentown. The proprietor, John Schlafer, in 1910, bought the property and good-will from Stephen Kline, who built the large brick building in 1906, seen in the illustration. Mr. Schlafer owns a half block of ground on Sixth street with a depth of 75 feet on St. John street. Mr. Schlafer is a native German and one of those industrious and enterprising men who have helped to build up many American communities. His bakery is conducted along modern lines and is a model of cleanliness, giving employment to a number of men.

BAND HORNS.—William Kaempffe emigrated from Germany to America in 1866. He located at Allentown in 1911 and engaged in the manufacture and repair of band instruments at No. 453 Gordon street, and has since followed the business there.

BEDS AND BEDDING.—In 1910, Lewis Dennison, of Allentown, organized the Lehigh Star Bedding Company, for the manufacture of all kinds of beds and bedding, and they secured the "Car Barn" on Lehigh street at the Little Lehigh creek, where they have since conducted a successful business with hands numbering from 75 to 80. Their trade extends throughout Pennsylvania. Mr. Dennison has since been the president and manager.

BOOK-BINDERS.—Jas. H. Wright & Company have been making blank books, election supplies, book-binding, ruling leaves, etc., since 1877; on Centre Square since 1910; employ 5 hands.

Homer G. Berkemeyer, is in the same business since 1899, and at No. 113 South Seventh street, since 1911. He employs 10 hands, and supplies firms throughout Pennsylvania.

Chas. E. Searle and John W. Dressler engaged in this business in 1905. In 1911, Wm. B. Bachman became a partner, and the firm became incorporated as Searle, Dressler & Company. They then established their plant—two-story brick building—at No. 1210 Turner street, and have since carried on a large business, employing from 30 to 40 hands, with illuminated calendars as a specialty. Their trade is mostly in the Middle States.

BOYS' CLOTHING.—F. Schwartz began the manufacture of boys' clothing at No. 20 North Seventh street in 1888, and carried on the business there until 1892, when he removed his factory to Hamilton, near Ninth, and continued there three years. His son, Edwin G., then became a partner and the firm located at Seventh and Turner streets until 1907, when they erected a fine substantial three-story brick building, 80 by 115 feet, at 1013-1019 Linden street, where they have since employed from 120 to 130 hands. Their trade extends through the Middle States.

BRUSHES.—Charles C. Clauss, a German immigrant, located at Allentown in 1858, and became the first brush maker in this inland town. He then opened a shop and embarked in the business and carried it on very successfully until 1875, employing 5 hands and extending his trade throughout Lehigh and surrounding counties. He taught a number of young men how to make all kinds of brushes and they too, came to embark in the business at Allentown. His place, for the greater part of the time until 1875, when he retired, was on Chew street, between Eighth and Ninth street. He is still living in retirement at an advanced age, beyond four-score years.

Benedict Oswald was one of Clauss's apprentices. He was engaged in making brushes at No. 342 North Fifth street from 1870 to 1902, when he died. He employed from eight to ten hands and his production was shipped throughout Lehigh and adjoining counties. He was succeeded by his son, Edward, who has continued the business until now. He employs four hands. He also sells many brushes made elsewhere.

George M. Bernhard has been engaged in this business at No. 421 Pine street, from 1879 to the present time. He employs four hands.

CHINA AND GLASSWARE.—The extensive business of this prosperous chinaware firm at Allentown, No. 20 North Seventh street, was founded in 1875, by Leshar H. Yeager and J. M. Culberson, who traded together as Yeager & Culberson for five years, when Mr. Culberson retired and the business was conducted very successfully by Mr. Yeager under the name of L. H. Yeager & Company for thirty-two years, until Jan. 1, 1912, when he retired from the business and his son, Charles H. Yeager became his successor, who then organized and incorporated the L. H. Yeager Company for the purpose of conducting the same business, wholesale and retail, and this the company has done in an equally successful manner until the present time. The large stock in the three-story establishment comprises all varieties of china, glass and queensware, lamps and fixtures, silver-plated ware, statuary in bronze of attractive designs, and cutlery of every description. This store is one of the largest, most attractive, and best equipped in eastern Pennsylvania, with a reputation for honest dealing and complete satisfaction not surpassed by any other.

ALLENTOWN CROCKERY CO.—In 1893, W. M. Gift, A. K. Jacks, and C. W. Knouse associated together to carry on the business of dealing in china, glass, silver, queens and earthen-ware of all kinds, and located at 37-41 South Seventh street. They are importers and jobbers and conduct a large wholesale and retail trade. They occupy a three-story brick building, 60 by 230 feet. The firm was incorporated in 1904 as the Allentown Crockery Company. (Part of the building in the rear is taken up by the Allentown Knitting Company, which is composed of the same members.)

Barr and Bachman, electrical contractors of Allentown, were established in November, 1911, and were first located at 724 North Seventh street, but removed to 1033 Hamilton street on May 1, 1912. The firm employs ten people and makes a specialty of installing electric lighting systems for country homes. They carry a full line of electrical supplies, and installed the electrical apparatus in the Lyceum theatre, Allentown; The Fretz Clothing Company, Pipersville, Bucks county; and an equally large contract for the same company at Bedminsterville, and the Durham Valley Rolling Mills at Durham, Pa.

ROLLER-SMITH CO.—This is a New York corporation, who have a manufacturing plant located in Hanover township, near Bethlehem. They employ upwards of 125 people, and occupy a brick factory building, two stories high, 80 by 100 feet in dimensions, with an addition of 80 by 20 feet, a one-story building. The firm are manufacturers of electrical apparatus, which include measuring instruments, volt meters, resistance measuring apparatus, circuit breakers, and switch board protective apparatus. The concern is a consolidation of the Switch Board Equipment Company, of Bethlehem, and the Whitney Electrical Instrument Company, of Penacook, N. H. Recently they also took over the business of the Columbia Meter Company, of Indianapolis, Indiana. The officers are: President, F. W. Roller, of East Orange, N. J.; vice-president, D. R. Smith, of Stanley, N. Y., and treasurer P. V. R. Van Wyck, of Summit, N. J. H. D. Bean, is the factory manager.

FLORISTS.—E. N. Kroninger started in 1889 at Fogelsville, and in 1892 removed to Salisbury township, along the Emaus road, where he has since conducted a wholesale green-house business. He has ten hot houses, with 120,000 square feet of glass, and employs fourteen men, with from 10 to 15 extra hands in the busy season. His specialty is carnations, shipping many thousands to New York, Boston, and other large cities. He also produces large quantities of fine tomatoes for which he has a large trade.

John F. Horn engaged in the business of raising all kinds of flowers at Rittersville in 1892. In 1900, his brother, Charles H., became associated with him and they have since traded as J. F. Horn & Bro., in a most successful manner. Their plant has been enlarged to embrace sixteen green-houses, and to cover 15 acres of ground requiring the employment of 10 to 20 hands. Their trade is local. Their salesrooms at Allentown have been at No. 20 North Sixth street since 1900. Previously they were located on Hamilton street, opposite the Court House.

Andrew Yeager started in the business in 1893, at the southwest corner of Sixth and Green streets, on ground occupied previously by his father and grandfather for many years. The lot is 120 by 270 feet. He employs three hands.

Otto Swoyer engaged in the flower business at 424 North Eleventh street in 1905. His premises are 118 by 180 feet, with three hot houses, devoted to the cultivation of carnations, chrysanthemums, and bedding plants. He employs several hands and his trade is local. He succeeded Charles Fetzer, who had carried on the place for twelve years.

John H. Sykes started a new hot-house for flowers of all kinds at 920 South Tenth street in 1906, on four acres of ground. He now has nine hot-houses, thoroughly equipped and employs from five to ten hands. His trade is local. He had been in the employ of J. F. Horn & Bro. for seven years. He has in use 25,000 square feet of glass.

Ernest Ashley, from Gloucestershire, England, located at Allentown in 1900. He established a "hot-house" at Fourth and Tilghman streets, where he continued until 1910, when he removed to a larger plant in Hanover township, along the Bethlehem pike, now in the Fourteenth ward, to accommodate his increasing trade. He employs nine hands. His store has been located at No. 943 Hamilton street since 1912. It was previously at the northwest corner of Eighth and Hamilton streets.

GRIST MILLS.—David Deshler's grist-mill, built prior to the Revolution, on the Little Lehigh, was operated after his death by John Wagner and John Wagner & Son, and later by A. A. and J. D. Wagner. In 1835, another mill was built opposite the first, and it was operated in 1853 by G. C. Von Tagen, when both mills were bought by the Allentown Water Company, to secure additional water-power for pumping water to the reservoirs.

Daniel and Jacob Saeger built, about 1814, a stone mill that stood south of the present C. R. R. of N. J. passenger station, from which they sent large quantities of flour by water to Philadelphia. John Romig, Sr., and William Roth were succeeding owners, followed in 1845 by Christian Pretz and Henry Weinsheimer. In 1828, Jacob Saeger and George Keck built the Hanover Mill, between the canal and the Lehigh. In 1836, it was purchased by Charles and William Saeger, and Sol. L. Keck. William Saeger became the sole owner and his sons converted it into a merchant roller mill in 1882.

It is now known as the Saeger Milling Company, and conducted by John F. Saeger, son of Jacob H., and grandson of William Saeger.

Schreiber's Mill, on the Little Lehigh, was built about 1830 by Henry Fried. George Edelman added a distillery, and the last operator was Edward Schreiber.

ARTIFICIAL ICE.—Geo. D. Fister, grocer, in 1912, organized the Allentown Merchants' Ice Company, which established a plant, 100 by 127 feet, at Fifth street and Sumner avenue, and this has since been in successful operation. They produce daily 100 tons for local consumption and employ from 12 to 15 hands. The directors and officers are: George D. Fister, president; Francis Gildner, secretary; H. M. Gangavare, treasurer; H. G. Kramlich, E. E. Fenstermacher, E. N. M. Minnich, and V. F. Frey.

The Allentown Ice Company, and Arbogast & Bastian are also engaged in the manufacture and sale of large quantities.

ICE CREAM.—Peters and Jacoby embarked in the business of manufacturing ice cream and fancy cakes in 1888, at No. 627 Hamilton street, and as they extended it, additional places were located at No. 122 North Seventh street, and at Catasauqua. In 1894, they became separated, L. P. Peters taking the Seventh street stand, and the other partners taking the other stands.

The latter continued the old name and were incorporated in 1906, with W. G. E. Jacoby, as president; H. S. Kramer, secretary; and A. L. Peters, treasurer. The Hamilton street stand was injured by fire in the fall of 1913 and immediately repaired in a most attractive manner. They employ 45 hands and have developed a large trade, including catering.

Other large producers are Loux Creamery Company, Asa H. Neimeyer, Wm. Kohler, John W. Arnold, E. H. Beltz, and W. S. Rank.

STAR LAUNDRY was organized in August, 1909, by A. W. Schmeyer and son, Harry W., under the firm name of H. W. Schmeyer & Company, and trading as the Star Laundry. The laundry is located at the corner of Hall and Court streets and employs fifteen people.

ELECTRIC LAUNDRY, located at Fountain Hill, was established in 1895, by A. M. Hollenbach, who is the owner and proprietor. It is located at the corner of Bishopthorpe and Cherokee streets. The building is a two-story brick, 50 by 90 feet in dimension. It affords employment to 25 people.

MEDICINE CAPSULES.—In 1896, J. K. Bowen and others organized the Grape Capsule Company for the manufacture of gelatin capsules and bougies suppositories, and have carried on the business at 349-59 Union street, with 15 to 20 hands. Their trade extends throughout the United States.

MUSIC HOUSE.—In 1876, Gerhard C. Aschbach embarked in the business of supplying musical instruments and publications, and located at No. 810 Hamilton street. Soon afterward he removed to a store below Sixth street, and he continued in that locality until 1891, when he purchased the Reichard property at No. 539, and there the business has been carried on until now. He died in 1913 and was succeeded by his son, Gerhart C.

Horace S. Schultz started in the music business at Quakertown in 1878. In 1885 he removed to Allentown, where he has since dealt in musical instruments and sheet music. He also tunes pianos.

Fred Kramer has followed this line of business for thirty-four years. He located at 544 Hamilton street in 1892. His store was burned down in 1893; then he erected a commodious four-story brick building to meet the increasing demands of his trade. He started with a few hands and his employees were gradually increased until now he has seventeen, which evidences the growth and volume of his business.

ORGANS.—Pipe organs for churches were made here from 1850 to 1870 by Chas. F. H. Hantzelman at Ninth and Walnut streets; and cabinet organs from 1870 to 1880 by Christian Scheffle, Peter Neff, and John Florey. Pianos were made by Simon Sweitzer from 1830 to 1870 at 928 Hamilton street.

PET STORE.—Pet Supply Company was incorporated in 1914 by Harvey H. Heiney, Samuel J. Heiney, Wm. H. Smith, and John D. Payne, with a capital of $15,000, for dealing in all kinds of pet birds and animals. Their rooms are at No. 122 North Seventh street, Allentown.

POTATO CHIPS.—John Yoder removed from Freemansburg, N. J., to Allentown in 1892, and embarked in the manufacture of potato chips at No. 431 Green street, and traded as the Keystone Potato Chip Company for a year. Then T. B. Clewell and his son, Aaron F., became the owners and they have since conducted a successful business with four and six hands. Their trade extends throughout Pennsylvania.

POTTERY.—Charles W. Bach, a German, was engaged in carrying on a small pottery at Allentown, on North Penn street, No. 416, from 1883 to 1908, when he died.

PRINTERS.—Haas Printing House was established in 1903, at No. 312 North Jefferson street, by H. Ray Haas, when not yet 17 years of age, starting with a small foot-press in a little room. In 1904, his father, Milton Haas, became associated with him, and in 1910 they erected a three-story building and equipped it with modern machines and types for book and job printing.

Charles M. Rehrig started in the printing business at Catsauqua in 1890, and in 1892 removed to Allentown, where he continued until his decease in 1913. His son, Richard D., became his Oliver A. Iobst began the printing business in the Morning Call building on South Sixth street, and continued there until 1910, when he removed to 123 North Seventh street, and has since traded as the Francis Printing Company, employing five hands.

In 1911, H. W. Roberts organized the Allen successor and has since traded under the name of Rehrig & Company. The shop has been at Sixth and Walnut since 1905. He does all kinds of commercial printing and manufactures rubber stamps. He employs five hands.

H. RAY HAAS & COMPANY.

Harvey H. Knerr has been trading since 1899 under the name of the Knerr Printing Company, at 20 South Eighth street. He does general printing and employs fifteen hands.

Printing Company, at 713 Linden street, for general printing and making rubber stamps and stencils. In October, 1913, the office was removed to 1011 Hamilton, where he employs eight hands.

B. F. Fenstermaker started a printing shop in May, 1897, at 524 Hamilton street, but two months afterward he was succeeded by O. K. Mohr, who carried on the business at 727 Turner street, until May, 1914, when O. T. Weaver became the proprietor and he has since traded as the O. K. Printing Company. He does all kinds of commercial printing, with town and city directories as a specialty. He employs ten to fifteen hands.

Berkemeyer, Bechtel & Company started a general printing business at Allentown in 1895. R. N. Keck purchased the interest of Mr. Bechtel, and Francis M. Berkemeyer, that of C. F. Berkemeyer, and the business has since been carried on as Berkemeyer, Keck & Company, at Ninth and Hamilton streets.

Searle, Dressler & Company, David H. Jacks, Levi J. Andres, Fred W. Bohlen, Horace Heist, Daniel Holben, Elmer E. Knittle, Harry W. Osmun, Wm. F. Schlechter, Edwin C. Snyder, B. G. Stauffer, Chronicle and News Publishing Co., and Welt-Bote Publishing Co., are also engaged in this business.

HOME SUPPLY COMPANY.—In December, 1912, Henry S. Haltzell, of Allentown, and capitalists of Scranton, organized the Standard Home Supply Company, for the purpose of carrying on a general order business, and of publishing catalogues and magazines, and of handling all kinds of mailing lists. They secured the large three-story brick building on the northeast corner of Green and Penn streets, formerly occupied by the Alvarez Cigar Company, and equipped it with all the necessary printing, stereotyping and adding machines, at an expense of $35,000. The magazine, Spare Moments, is published here; which has an issue of 250,000 copies. They employ now 30 hands; but the plant is being improved for its special purposes and many more hands will be employed. The company is capitalized at $750,000. Mr. Haltzell has been the general manager.

SADDLIERIES.—F. G. Sieger and Henry Stettler embarked in the business of manufacturing of harness at Hamilton and Hall streets in 1869, then in Odd Fellows building, and continued there until 1875, when they removed to No. 712 Hamilton street. They employed from eight to ten hands. In 1876, Stettler died. Sieger continued the business until he died in 1909, when his son, A. H. Sieger, became successor, who has carried on the stand until now. He employs six hands. He deals extensively in trunks, satchels, etc.

L. A. T. Wartman was in the business from 1870 to 1899 at Eighth and Hamilton, with his son as a partner. His son-in-law was also connected with the firm for a time. Then George J. Guth and his brother, Harry S., became the purchasers and conducted the business under the name of L. A. T. Wartman Company until 1911, when the name was changed to George J. Guth & Bro. In 1910, the store was removed to No. 832, where it has been carried on until now. They employ eight hands.

Previous saddlers for many years were Peter Huber and Levi Woodring.

SHIRTS.—In 1899, Harvey J. Weiss began the manufacture of shirts under the name of the Allentown Shirt Company. He was at Sixth and Hamilton until 1909, and Eighth and Hamilton until 1914. Since then he has been located at 237 Madison street, filling orders by cutting the shirts and having them sewed by nine employees at their homes.

SOAP WORKS.—Samuel M. Miller and his son, J. Robert, started in 1905, the manufacture of plain soap in a building on South Third street, along the Little Lehigh creek, and the business was carried on by them until they died; since, the son's widow, Mrs. Anna M. Miller has conducted the works.

Victor De Journo has been in this business at Twentieth and Walnut street for several years; and Painter & Spahn since April, 1914.

TANNERIES.—A tannery was established in Allentown on the east side of Lehigh street, near the Little Lehigh, by David Deshler, about 1770. It was located on the lower end of the Nonnemacher property. Thomas Mowharter became the owner about 1786 and he operated it for twenty years. Subsequent parties there were: David Mertz and William Mosser until 1850; and Jacob Messer from 1850 to 1855. Then Wm. F. Mosser, James K. Mosser, and Peter K. Grim, organized a partnership which traded there as Wm. F. Mosser and Company, but only for a year, when James K. Mosser withdrew. The plant was discontinued and other partners established a tannery on the rear of the opposite lot and there carried on the business as Mosser & Grim until 1881, when Mosser died and his estate continued the tannery for several years. They employed 15 hands and prepared upwards of 300 hides a week, which were shipped to New York and Boston. In the Boston fire of 1873 they suffered a loss of $10,000.

When Jas. K. Mosser withdrew from Wm. F. Mosser & Company in 1856, he associated with Thomas Keck in establishing a large tannery on the east side of the Lehigh river (now East Allentown), below the Bethlehem pike, along the L. V. canal, and a very extensive business was carried on for about forty years. The main building was 42 by 366 feet with two wings, and the hands employed number from 50 to 75. The annual product was about 30,000 hides. They had large warehouses at New York and Boston.

In 1852, William Grim engaged in the business of furnishing hides at Allentown. He carried on the business at 808 Hamilton street for six years. Then Walter J. Grim became the purchaser and he carried it on very successfully until 1891 at the northwest corner of Ninth and Hamilton street.

A number of tanneries were conducted in different parts of Lehigh county until about 1890, when they were compelled to suspend operations. Most of them had dealings with Walter J. Grim.

GEORGE L. WEISEL MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS, located at the corner of Pike and Church streets, Rittersville, was established in 1900, by Mr. Weisel, the present proprietor, who learned the trade of stone-cutting in 1870. His establishment is equipped with all modern machinery and his work is of a superior quality.

eries, 11 bricklaying contractors, 11 brokers, 27 building contractors, 52 butchers, 18 carpentering contractors, 10 carpet cleaners, 2 cattle powder dealers, 18 cementers, 2 chemists, 3 chinaware dealers, 3 chiropodists, 65 cigarmakers, 8 civil engineers, 19 clothing stores, 34 coal and wood dealers, 34 retail and 5 wholesale confectioners, 12 creamery products dealers, 3 crushed stone dealers, 3 cut stone dealers, 3 cutlers, 3 department stores, 29 dentists, 106 dressmakers, 24 drug stores, 32 dry goods stores, 3 dry cleaners, 9 dyers, 9 electrical contractors, 2 express companies, 2 fertilizer dealers, 8 fish dealers, 16 flour and feed dealers, 4 fruit dealers, 13 furniture stores, 2 furrriers, 5 garages, 100 grocers, 12 hair dressers, 6 hardware dealers, 6 hat dealers, 3 hide dealers, 2 horse dealers, 8 horeshoers, 83 hotels and saloons,

GEORGE L. WEISEL RESIDENCE AND MARBLE WORKS, RITTERSVILLE.

WHIPS.—In 1911, Jacob D. Shade removed from Philadelphia to Allentown to continue making flexible leather team and cart whips. His place is on Linden, below Sixth. He was engaged at Philadelphia for thirty years. He also made leather fly-nets during the summer season. But both of these productions have been much reduced since the more general use of automobiles. His trade is at Allentown and Philadelphia.

In 1914, the classification of the business men of the city as dealers and in various occupations was as follows:

Four accountants, 1 agricultural implement dealer, 4 architects, 1 art dealer, 1 artesian well digger, 5 artists, 4 auctioneers, 14 auto dealers, 1 auto livery, 5 auto supply dealers, 4 awning makers, 23 bread bakers, 8 pretzel bakers, 2 biscuit bakers, 4 banks and 4 trust companies, 75 barbers, 5 belting dealers, 3 bicycle and motorcycle dealers, 9 blacksmiths, 5 book-binders, 7 book and stationery dealers, 7 bottlers, 5 brew-

18 ice cream dealers, 63 insurance men, 17 jewelers, 1 junk dealer, 6 ladies' tailors, 10 laundries, 70 lawyers, 12 lime dealers, 7 liquor dealers, 9 liverys, 4 loan companies, 10 local express companies, 3 lumber dealers, 12 machinists, 3 mantle and tile dealers, 8 masseurs, 35 milliners, 10 musical instrument dealers, 54 music teachers, 4 meat dealers, 3 news agencies, 10 newspapers, 28 nurses, 5 oil dealers, 10 opticians, 4 osteopaths, 8 paint dealers, 31 painters and paperhangers, 10 plastering contractors, 10 photographers, 83 physicians, 13 piano tuners, 26 plumbers, 8 poultry dealers, 4 powder dealers, 21 printers, 80 real estate dealers, 3 rubber stamp dealers, 5 saddlers, 3 sewing machine agents, 17 shoe dealers, 10 shoe factories, 6 sign painters, 2 screen makers, 2 slaters, 1 storage room, 22 stove dealers, 2 public stenographers, 35 tailors, 1 taxidermist, 4 tea and coffee stores, 4 typewriter dealers, 7 undertakers, 4 upholsterers, 4 veterinary surgeons, 3 vulcanizers, and 6 wall paper dealers.

CHAPTER XLIX.

DIRECTORY OF FAMILY REUNIONS.

For the history of these families see volume II.

BITTNER-WERLEY.

The first reunion was held at Pleasant Corner, Sept. 8, 1900. The officers for 1912 were: President, F. D. Bittner, Allentown; vice-president, P. W. Bittner, Pleasant Corner, Pa.; secretary, A. E. Bittner, Allentown; historian, A. J. Bittner, M. D., Allentown, Pa.; treasurer, Peter Bittner, Pleasant Corner, Pa.

BORTZ.

The ninth annual reunion of the Bortz family was held at Dorney Park, Friday, Aug. 17, 1912. Officers: President, Edwin H. Bortz, Allentown; vice-president, Marcus Bortz, Allentown; secretary, Clinton Bortz, of near Schantz's Spring; treasurer, William Bortz, Wescoesville.

BUCHMAN.

The Buchman family held their sixth annual reunion at Sand Spring Park, Aug. 14, 1912. Officers: President, A. J. Buchman, Allentown; vice-president, George A. Buchman, Stewartsville; secretary, George E. Newhard, Allentown; treasurer, Ulysses H. Buchman, Orefield; historian, George A. Buchman, Allentown.

BUTZ.

The second annual reunion was held at Dorney Park, August, 1913. Officers: President, Rev. C. A. Butz, Bethlehem, Pa.; vice-presidents, Oscar W. Butz, Allentown; Frank Butz, Allentown; Howard E. Butz, Huntingdon, Pa.; James Leiby Butz, Esq., Newport, Pa.; secretary, Erwin F. Keck, Allentown; treasurer, Elmer W. Butz, Breinigsville; historian, Elmer E. Butz.

CARL.

The fourth annual reunion of the Carl family was held at Macungie, Pa., the last Saturday of July, 1912. Officers: President, Michael Carl, Macungie; vice-president, George Carl, Emaus; secretary, Morris Carl, Emaus; treasurer, John Carl, Emaus.

CLAUSS.

The tenth annual reunion of the Clauss family was held at Waldheim Park, July 30, 1912.

Officers: President, David Clauss; vice-president, Harold K. Marks; secretary, E. P. Clauss; treasurer, J. D. Clauss; historian, George F. Knerr, Allentown.

DRUCKENMILLER.

This family held its annual reunion at Dorney Park, Wednesday, July 30, 1912. Officers: Rev. G. D. Druckenmiller, of Hamburg, Pa., president; S. F. Druckenmiller, of Weatherly, Pa., vice-president; C. A. Truckenmiller, of Reading, secretary; J. Myron Shimer, of Philadelphia, historian.

DRIESBACH.

The first annual reunion of the Driesbach family was held at Central Park, Sept. 3, 1910. The association publishes a family magazine, of which Rev. Luther D. Lazarus, of Bethlehem, Pa., is the editor. Officers: President, A. P. Driesbach, Allentown; vice-president, M. L. Driesbach, Allentown; secretary, F. S. Driesbach, Allentown, Pa.; treasurer, C. Wilson Dech, Allentown; historian, Rev. S. A. Bridges Stopp.

FREEMAN.

The first annual reunion of the Freeman family was held at Central Park, Aug. 10, 1912. Officers: President, Rev. Joseph Freeman, Allentown; vice-presidents, Amos D. Freeman, Easton; secretary and treasurer, Miss Caroline Freeman, Easton. Rev. Charles Freeman, of Hamburg, was appointed historian.

FINK.

The eighth annual reunion of the Fink family was held Aug. 11, 1912, at the farm of William Fink, in Salisburg township.

GREENAWALT.

The sixth annual reunion of the Greenawalt family was held at Waldheim Park, Aug. 24, 1911. Officers: President, William Frantz, of Center Square, Pa.; vice-president, William Bernhard, of Lynne Valley, and Harry Greenawalt, of Los Angeles, Cal.; secretary, Mrs. Findley Braden, Doylestown; corresponding secretary, Miss May A. Frantz, Philadelphia; treasurer, William J. Greenawalt, Allentown.

GEHRIS.

The fourth annual Gehris and Gackenbach reunion was held June 16, at the residence of H. C. Fegley, south of Breinigsville.

GUTH.

The sixteenth annual reunion (1912) of the Guth family, was held on the old Lorenz Guth homestead, at Guth's Station. Officers: President, L. H. Guth, Walberts; vice-president, Elias Guth, Guth's Station; secretary, John Guth, Allentown; treasurer, Elias J. Guth.

HANDWERK.

This family held its first reunion this year (1912) at Neff's Park. Officers: President and historian, E. M. Handwerk, Germansville; vice-president, Henry C. Handwerk, Slatington; secretary, William F. Handwerk, Egypt; treasurer, Nathan Handwerk, Saegersville.

HAAS.

The annual reunion of the Haas family was held at Neff's, on Saturday, Aug. 19, 1911. Officers: Peter Haas, Bethlehem, president; Joshua Haas, Schnecksville, vice-president; Benjamin Haas, Allentown, secretary; and Frank Haas, Fogelsville, treasurer.

The descendants of Philip Haas held their fourth annual family reunion at Dorney Park, Aug. 9, 1911. Officers: Henry Mohr, Allentown, president; Mrs. Oliver Weaver, Allentown, vice-president; M. W. Romig, Allentown, secretary; and Charles E. Kern, Allentown, treasurer.

JACOBS.

The fifth annual reunion (1912) of the Jacobs family was held at Sand Springs Park. Officers: Clement A. Jacobs, president; Rev. J. G. Kerschner, vice-president; Roger S. C. Riedy, Rev. H. A. I. Benner; Wesley Wotring, treasurer, Osman Reinhard.

KERCHNER.

The Kerchner family held its fifth annual (1912) reunion at Waldheim Park. Officers: George F. Kerchner, of Lower Macungie, president; Simon Eisenhard, of Vienna, Bucks county, and Dr. Q. D. Arner, of Allentown, first vice-presidents; and George H. Welty, of Nazareth, vice-president; Kate Faust, secretary; and Peter Faust, treasurer.

KNECHT.

The first reunion of the Knecht family was held at Waldheim Park in 1908; annual reunions were held for the next three years. In 1911, the association decided to meet biennially. Officers:

President, Rev. Thomas Knecht, Sr.; vice-president, Evan Knecht; secretary and historian, Dr. D. George Knecht, Allentown; treasurer, Hiram Knecht.

KLOTZ.

The Klotz family held their twelfth annual reunion at Neffsville Park, Aug. 14, 1912. Officers: President, Richard Klotz, of Fogelsville; vice-president, Ed. Klotz, of Lowhill; secretary, Phaon S. Klotz, of Walnutport; treasurer, George Klotz, of Lowhill.

KRAUSE.

The John Krause family held its annual reunion at Neff's, July 30, 1912. Officers: President, John J. Krause; vice-president, Richard Krause; secretary, Granville Krause, all of Allentown; treasurer, Paul Krause, of Newside, Pa.

The Frederick Krause reunion was held at Neff's, Aug. 6, 1912.

KISTLER.

The annual reunion of the Kistler family was held at Neff's, Aug. 21, 1912. Officers: President, Henry D. Kistler, New Tripoli; vice-president, Edwin D. Kistler, Stony Run; recording secretary, Elmer C. Kistler, Lynnville; corresponding secretary, Dr. W. P. Kistler, Allentown; assistant recording secretary, P. W. Kistler, Centreport; treasurer, C. K. Kistler, New Tripoli. This reunion is always very largely attended.

KUHNS.

The descendants of Dewalt Kuhns held their seventh annual reunion on the old homestead near Walbert's Station, July 26, 1912.

LAMBERT.

The Lambert family held its annual reunion for 1912, at Central Park, Aug. 17, 1912. Officers: President, Rev. W. A. Lambert, of South Bethlehem; vice-president, Amandes L. Lambert, of Centre Valley; secretary and treasurer, Frank E. Lambert, of Catasauqua.

LICHTENWALNER.

Officers: James P. Lichtenwalner, Jr., president; Charles Lichtenwalner, vice-president; John H. Lichtenwalner, secretary; Hiram A. Lichtenwalner, treasurer; and the late E. J. Lichtenwalner, Esq., was historian. In 1914 he was succeeded by his sister, Mrs. Elda De Belle.

LUTZ.

The Lutz family reunion of 1910 was held in the grove on the old Lutz farm, now belonging to Rev. J. O. Oswald, near Kempton. Officers:

President, W. L. Lutz; vice-president, Mrs. Sarah Mosser; secretary, John O. Baer; assistant secretary, A. R. Greenawalt; treasurer, Allen Lutz.

MILLER.

The Miller family of the lower end of Lehigh county held their annual reunion for 1911 in Miller's Grove, Zionsville. Officers: A. S. Miller, Zionsville, president; Addison Miller, Allentown, vice-president; Ambrose Miller, Reading, secretary; Thomas Krause, Powder Valley, treasurer; Mrs. Kate Klint.

The fifth annual reunion of the Miller family of the upper end of the county was held at Neff's, Aug. 22, 1912. Officers: President, Henry Miller, Siegfrieds; vice-presidents, Dr. Mahlon Miller, Northampton; George Miller, Ormrod, David A. Miller and Warren K. Miller, Allentown; secretary, Harvey C. Reinhard, Coplay; assistants, John Miller, Northampton, and Alex Miller, Coplay; treasurer, Monroe Miller, Northampton; historian, Rev. George Miller, Pottstown; historical committee, William T. Koehler, Fullerton; D. A. Miller, Allentown; John H. Miller, Northampton; Harry G. Miller, Slatington; George A. Miller, Slatington; and Wesley P. Miller, Coplay.

NICHOLAS.

The fifth annual reunion (1912) of the Nicholas family was held at Dorney Park. Officers: Samuel Nicholas, of Northampton, president; Ephraim Nicholas, of Coplay; Alonzo Nicholas, of Doylestown, and Rev. Henry Nicholas, of Summit Hill, vice-president; Clasko Hallman, of Coplay, secretary; D. D. Nicholas, of Cherryville, assistant secretary; Thomas Nicholas, of Cherryville, treasurer.

NEWHARD.

The fourth annual reunion of the Newhard family was held at Dorney Park, Wednesday, Aug. 15, 1912. Officers: James D. Newhard, Allentown, president; George B. Newhard, Allentown; Capt. Thomas Newhard, Stroudsburg; E. W. Newhard, Lehigh; B. Waller Newhard, Shamokin; Stephen Newhard, Cherryville; William J. Newhard, Northampton, vice-presidents; Rev. J. E. Reichard, Packerton, recording secretary; Charles R. Roberts, Allentown, corresponding secretary; Joseph P. Fry, Allentown, treasurer; Charles R. Roberts, Allentown, historian.

REX.

The Rex family held their annual reunion at Neff's Park, Saturday, Aug. 31, 1912. Officers: President, C. A. Rex, Mauch Chunk; vice-president, William H. Rex, Lehigh; secretary, Wilson A. Rex, Slatedale; assistant secretary, C. M. Rex, Lehigh; treasurer, Fred. W. Rex, Lehigh.

REINHARD.

The first reunion of this family was held at Waldheim Park in 1912. Officers: Alvin Reinhard, of Hellertown, president; W. H. Reinhard, of Stroudsburg, vice-president; Prof. Reinhard, of Catasauqua, treasurer; and Osman F. Reinhard, of Bethlehem, secretary.

SCHMOYER.

Officers: President, A. I. Schmoyer, Allentown; vice-president, Rev. George A. Kercher, Norristown; secretary, Jacob A. Schmoyer, Trexlertown; treasurer, J. J. Schmoyer, Macungie; historian, Rev. M. B. Schmoyer.

SENSINGER.

The eighth annual reunion of this family was held at Neff's, Saturday, Aug. 10, 1912. Officers: President, A. A. Driesbach; vice-president, W. A. Fritzing, Slatington; recording secretary, Alvin Weiss, Slatedale; corresponding secretary, Malcolm Hummel; treasurer, Joseph Sensinger, Schnecksville.

SECHLER.

The fifth annual reunion of the Sechler family was held in the orchard at the home of George Sechler, at Jacksonville in 1912. Officers: President, Mendon B. Sechler; vice-president, Joseph Sechler; treasurer, George F. Sechler; recording secretary, William Sechler, Mahony; corresponding secretary, William Sechler, Kutztown.

SCHERER.

The Scheirer family, which bears the distinction of having introduced the idea of family reunions into Lehigh county, held their nineteenth annual reunion at Neffsville, Aug. 13, 1912. Officers: President, Joseph H. Scheirer, Pleasant Corner; secretary and treasurer, Rev. David Scheirer, of Weaversville.

SEIPEL.

The Seipel family held its annual reunion on the campus of the Allentown College for Women Aug. 21, 1912. Officers: President, Dr. Samuel C. Seipel, Easton, Pa.; vice-president, Rev. William F. Curtis, Allentown, Pa.; second vice-president, Levi H. Seipel, Easton; secretary, William F. Seipel, Easton, Pa.

WESCOE.

The descendants of Philip Vesqueau (Vescoe) a Huguenot refugee, met in their first annual reunion at Waldheim Park. The officers elected were: Robert P. Wescoe, Allentown, president; Milton H. K. Laros, and Jacob Swartz, Allentown, vice-presidents; Edwin C. Jacoby, Allentown, secretary; C. Herbert Wescoe, Allentown, assistant secretary; William H. Walbert, of Emaus, treasurer; Ralph E. Shaner, Jr., of Pottstown, historian.

WOTRING.

The eighth annual reunion of the Wotring family was held at Sand Spring Park, Aug. 10, 1912. Officers: President, R. D. Wotring, Allentown; vice-president, Robert Wotring, Neff's; secretary, George F. Wotring; treasurer, R. D. Wotring, Allentown; executive committee, R. D. Wotring, George F. Wotring, and Robert Wotring; poet, Rev. Albert Peters, Lancaster; historian, Rev. W. H. Wotring, Nazareth, Pa.

WETZEL.

The fifth annual reunion of the Wetzel family was held in Barner's Grove, Macungie, in August, 1912. Officers: S. K. Wetzel, president; R. F. D. 1, Macungie; Dallas Graber, vice-president, East Greenville; John Dierolf, second vice-president, Barto; John Wetzel, secretary, R. F. D. 6, Allentown; David Wetzel, assistant secretary, Siesholtzville; George Bear, assistant secretary, 243 North Tenth street, Allentown; J. P. Bear, assistant secretary, East Greenville; Sylvanus Mohr, treasurer, Vera Cruz.

WILT.

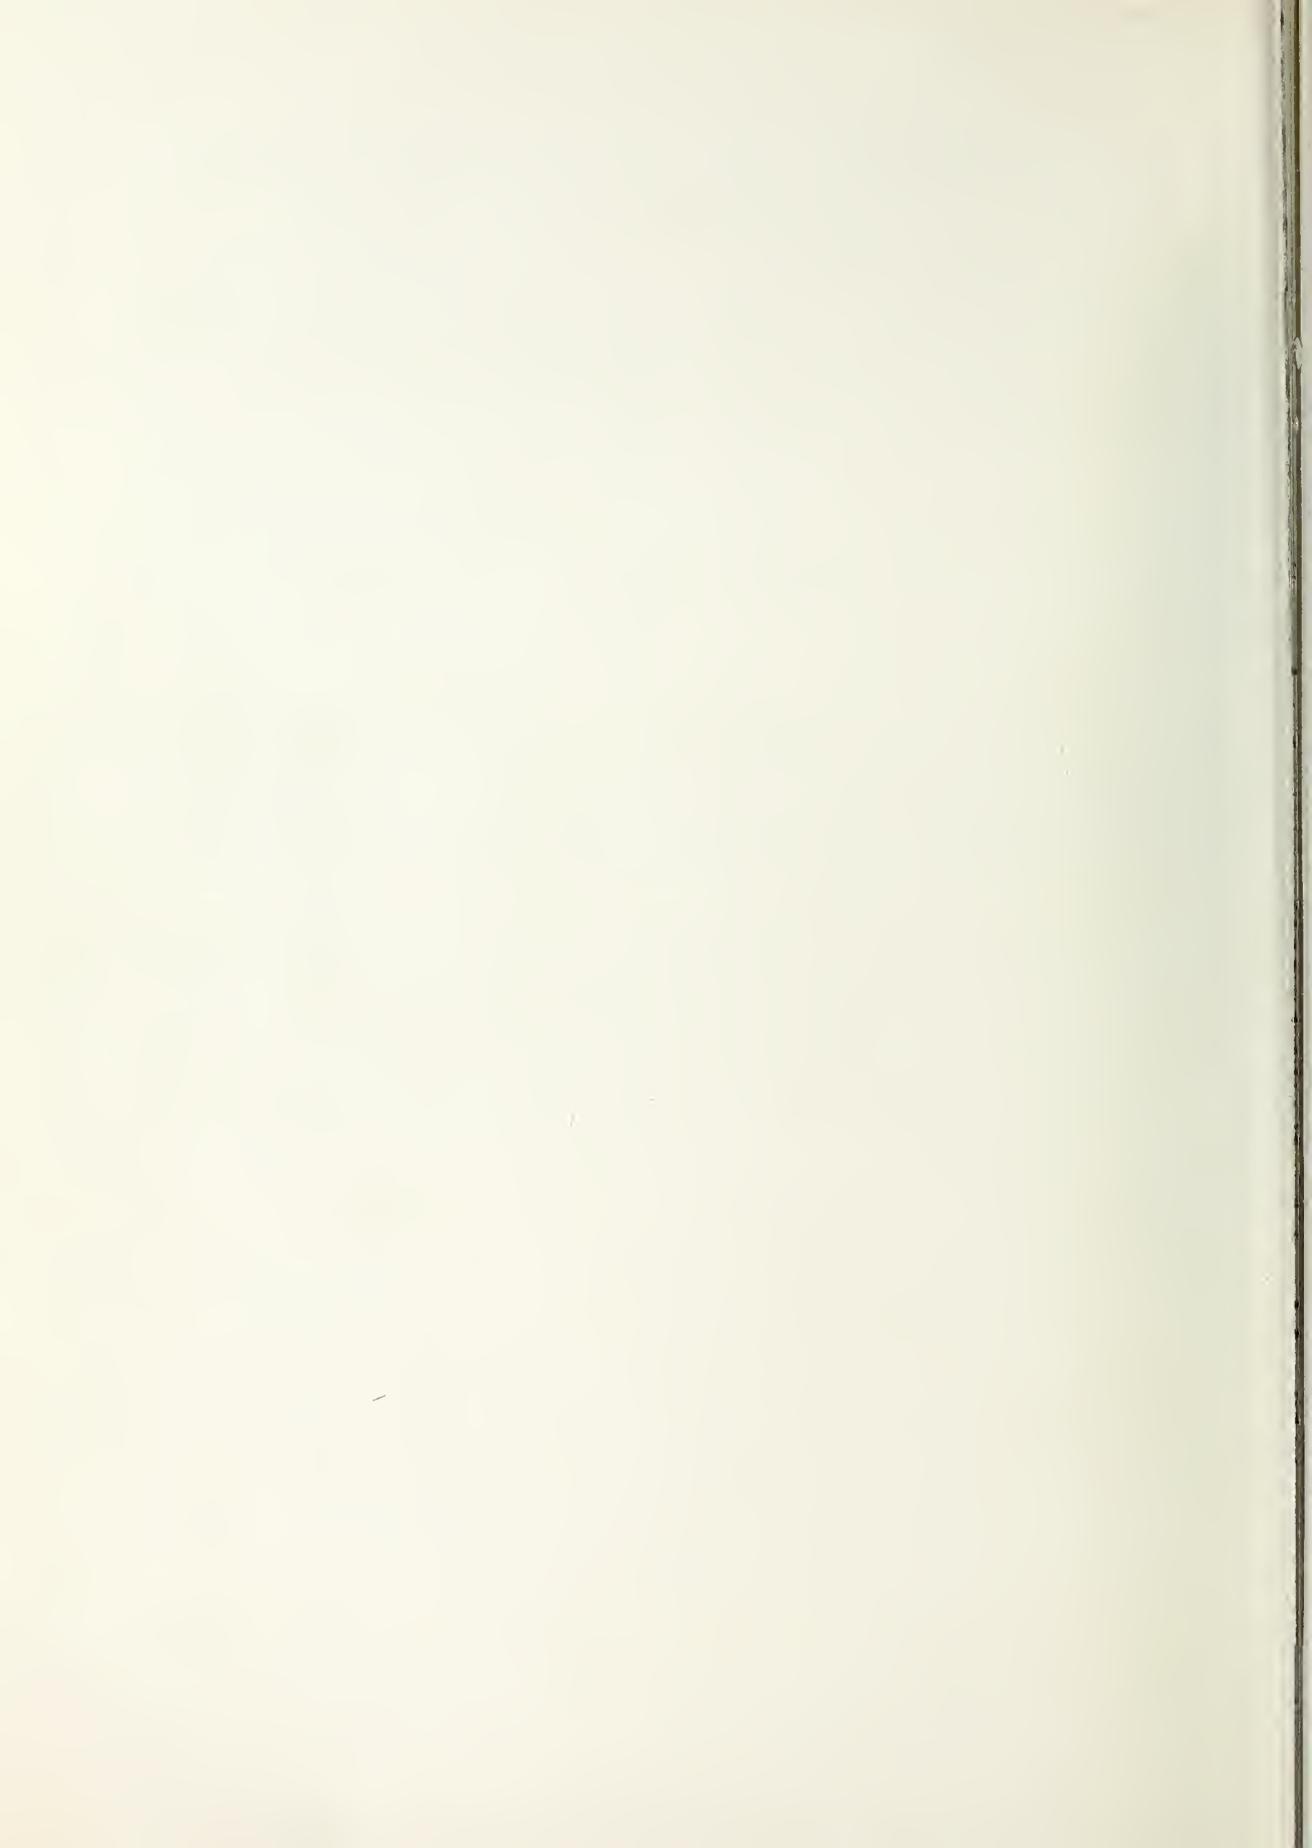

The descendants of Joseph Wilt held their annual reunion at Waldheim Park, July 27, 1912. Officers: President, Prof. J. O. Knauss, Emaus; Prof. Owen R. Wilt; treasurer, Abner S. Wilt, Allentown.

WIEDER.

The Wieder family held its third annual reunion at Waldheim Park. Officers: President, H. J. Wieder, Allentown; vice-president, William Romig, East Texas; treasurer, John Koch, Wescoesville; secretary, Emma Kratzer, Emaus, assistant secretary, Miss Schaffer, Emaus; historian, Levi Wieder, Allentown.

WETHERHOLD.

The Wetherhold family held its seventh annual reunion at Neff's Park, Aug. 20, 1912. Officers: President, John Wetherhold, Balliettsville; secretary, Joseph Beck, Allentown; treasurer, James Wetherhold, Schnecksville; historian, Oscar Wetherhold, Reading, Pa.

INDEX

GEOLOGY, 1.

- Geological Time Scale, 2.
- Physiography, 2.
- South Mountain Region, 2.
- Limestone Valleys, 3.
- Slate Hills, 3.
- Blue Mountains, 3.
- Economic Development, 3.
- Geological Formation, 4.
- Pre-Cambrian Rock, 4.
- Cambrian Rock, 5.
- Hardstone Quartzite, 5.
- Limestone, 6.
- Martinsburg Shales, 7.
- Silurian Rocks, 7.
- Triassic Rock, 7.
- Shawangunk Conglomerate, 7.
- Brunswick Shale, 8.
- Brunswick Conglomerate, 8.
- Trap Rock, 8.
- Pleistocene Rock, 8.
- Glacial Drift, 8.
- Recent Rock, 9.
- Recent Alluvium, 9.
- Geological Structure, 9.
- Historical Geology, 9.
- Geological Events, 9.
- Mineral Resources, 12.
- Building Stone, 12.
- Lime, 12.
- Cement, 12.
- Slate, 12.
- Clay, 13.
- Sand, 13.
- Ores, 13.

FLORA, 15.

INDIANS, 18.

- Minsi Tribe, 18.
- Lenni Lenape, 18.
- Unami, 19.
- Unalachtigo, 19.
- Envoy of Manitou, 27.
- Funeral Customs, 27.
- Religion, 27.
- Stone Tools, 28.
- Bibliography, 36.
- Walking Purchase, 36.
- Furniss Thomas, 37.
- Weiser Conrad, 38.
- Penn Thomas, 39.

GERMAN PIONEERS, 41.

- Early German Migrations, 43.
- Character and Resources, 43.
- Achievements, 52.

FIRST SETTLEMENT AS PART OF BUCKS COUNTY, 54.

- Nationality of Settlers, 60.
- Manners and Customs, 63.
- First Road Laid Out in 1735, 69.

- Upper Milford Township Organized, 71.
- Saucon Township Organized, 71.
- Macungie Township Organized, 72.
- Organization of Other Townships, 73.

FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR, 75.

- Ravages of the French and Indians, 76.
- Indian Massacres, 77.
- Fort Everett, 86.
- Kern's Mill, 93.
- Indian Road, 94.
- Owners of Wagons and Horses, 96.

INDIAN MASSACRES OF 1763, 100.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR, 114.

- Col. Mile's Regiment, 122.
- Capt. Craig's Company, 123.
- Capt. Hagenbuch's Company, 127.
- Muster Roll of First Battalion of Northampton County, 132.
- Capt. Johnson's Company, 132.
- Capt. Graff's Company, 133.
- Capt. Sheimer's Company, 133.
- Capt. Robert's Company, 134.
- Capt. Klinehantz's Company, 134.
- Capt. Rhoad's Company, 134.
- Capt. Wagoner's Company, 135.
- Liberty Bell, 137.
- Arms Received at Allentown, 140.
- Continental Money, 147.
- Muster Roll of Second Battalion, 148.
- Muster Roll of Third Battalion, 152.
- Sugar Loaf Massacre, 155.
- Muster Roll of Volunteers' Company, 156.
- Muster Roll of Capt. Deal's Company, 159.
- Muster Roll of Adam Serfass' Company, 160.
- Rhoads, Peter, 161.
- Kohler, Peter, 162.
- Deshler, Peter, 162.
- Balliet, Stephen, 162.
- Trexler, Peter, Sr., 163.
- Breimig, George, 163.
- Trexler, Peter, Jr., 163.
- Graff, George, 163.
- Hagenbuch, Henry, 163.
- Deshler, Charles, 164.
- Geiger, Henry, 164.
- Weitzel, John, 164.
- Leimbach, Frederick, 164.
- Mewhorth, Thomas, 164.
- Boehm, Philip, 164.
- Jennings, John, 164.
- Officers in the Revolutionary War, 164.
- Officers of Northampton County, 1776-1790, 165.

FRISB REBELLION, 166.

- Arrests Made, 181.
- President's Proclamation, 187.
- Governor's Message, 189.
- Troops Called Out, 189.
- Address of William Macpherson, 191.
- Address of Rev. Charles Helmuth, 193.

- Prisoners Rescued at Bethlehem, 183.
 Examination of John Fries, 197.
 Army's March, 198.
 Trial of John Fries, 201.
 Pardon of John Fries, 206.
 Petition of John Fries, 207.
 Proclamation of President Adams, 208.
- ORGANIZATION OF LEHIGH COUNTY, 212.
 Court House and Jail, 216.
 Federal and State Officials, 218.
 County Officials, 219.
 Justices of the Peace, 222.
- BENCH AND BAR, 224.
 Colonial Justices, 224.
 Judges, 226.
 Rhoads, Peter, 226.
 Rush, Jacob, 226.
 Spayd, John, 227.
 Porter, Robert, 228.
 Mallery, Garrick, 228.
 Banks, John, 228.
 Jones, John Pringle, 229.
 McCartney, Washington, 229.
 Maxwell, Henry D., 230.
 Findlay, John K., 231.
 Maynard, John, 231.
 Longaker, Abram B., 231.
 Harvey, Edward, 231.
 Albright, Edwin, 232.
 Trexler, Frank M., 232.
 Groman, Clinton A., 233.
 Associate Judges, 233.
 Attorneys, 233.
 Trials, Important, 246.
- EDUCATION IN THE COUNTY.
 Schools, Early, 248.
 Schools, English, 249.
 Schools, Old Sites, 250.
 Schools, Endowments, 249.
 Schools, Furniture, 252.
 Schools, Higher Grades, 253.
 Schools, Teachers, Early, 252.
 Schools for Poor Children, 254.
 Schools, Statistics, 255.
 Schools, Superintendents of, 256.
 Schools, Higher Institutions, 259.
 Cooper, C. W., 256.
 Good, Tilghman, 258.
 Schwartz, H. H., 258.
 Ross, Jacob, 258.
 Young, E. J., 258.
 Krauss, J. O., 259.
 Allentown Academy, 259.
 Allentown Seminary, 260.
 Kessler, Rev. Christian R., 261.
 Allentown Collegiate Institute, 263.
 Muhlenberg College, 263.
 Allentown College for Women, 268.
 Hofferd, Rev. William R., 269.
 Curtis, Rev. William F., 272.
 Bishopthorpe Manor, 273.
 Bethlehem Preparatory School, 274.
 Allentown Preparatory School, 275.
 Allentown Business College, 275.
 American Commercial School, 276.
- NEWSPAPERS, 277.
 Republikaner, 277.
 Der Friedens Bote, 278.
 Lehigh Centinel, 279.
 Allentown Democrat, 279.
 Bulletin, 279.
 Daily City Item, 280.
 Telegram, 280.
 Chronicle and News, 280.
 Morning Herald, 280.
 Lehigh Register, 281.
 Morning Call, 281.
 Allentown Leader, 282.
 Lehigh Herald, 282.
 Evening Dispatch, 282.
 Daily Bulletin, 282.
 Union Gazette, 282.
 Lehigh Valley Review, 282.
 Labor Herald, 282.
 Catasauqua Herald, 282.
 Journal, 282.
 Slatington News, 282.
 Satington Star, 283.
 Coopersburg Sentinel, 283.
 Jugenfreund, 283.
 Lutherische Zeitschrift, 283.
- MEDICAL PROFESSION, 284.
 Physicians, Early, 284.
 Medical Societies, 287.
 State Dispensary, 288.
 Homeopathy, 288.
 List of Physicians, 291.
 Veterinarians, 295.
 Registered Veterinarians, 295.
 Osteopathy, 296.
 Registered Osteopaths, 296.
 Dentistry, 296.
 Registered Dentists, 296.
- WAR PERIODS.
 War of 1812-1814, 298.
 Muster Rolls, 299.
 Mexican War, 302.
 Civil War, 303.
 Muster Rolls, 303.
 First Regiment, 307.
 Ninth Regiment, 309.
 Forty-sixth Regiment, 310.
 Forty-seventh Regiment, 312.
 Ninety-second Regiment, 326.
 One Hundred and Twenty-third, 327.
 One Hundred and Seventy-sixth, 329.
 Two Hundred and Second, 334.
 Two Hundred and Ninth, 335.
 Militia of 1862, 337.
 Emergency Troops, 1863, 339.
 Militia of 1863, 340.
 Forty-first Regiment, 341.
 Public Support of Civil War, 342.
 Spanish-American War, 1898, 343.
 Old State Militia, 345.
 Battalions, 348.
 Jordan Artillerists, 349.
 Allen Infantry, 349.
 Allen Continentals, 349.
 National Guards, 351.
- CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, 358.
 County Home, 358.
 St. Luke's Hospital, 359.
 Homeopathic Hospital, 363.
 Phœbe Deaconess Home, 365.
 Good Shepherd Home, 367.
 Allentown Hospital, 367.
 Children's Home, 371.
 Rescue Mission, 372.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS, 373.

Early Roads, 373.
 Slatington Road, 373.
 Reading Road, 373.
 Heidelberg Road, 373.
 Lehigh Canal, 374.
 Railroads, 377.
 Lehigh Valley, 377.
 Catasauqua and Fogelsville, 378.
 East Penn, 378.
 Ironton, 379.
 Central R. R. of N. J., 379.
 Berks County R. R., 379.
 Perkiomen R. R., 379.
 Trolley Lines, 380.
 County Bridges, 381.
 Post Offices, 383.
 Rural Routes, 384.

CENSUS OF COUNTY, 385.

Allentown.

Founding, 388.
 Early Tax List, 390-391-392.
 Defence Against Indians, 392.
 First Settlers, 394.
 Lots, Ground Rents, 395.
 Allen Family, 397.
 Trout Hall, 409.
 Ferry, 411.
 Early Churches, 412.
 Post Office Established, 415.

Borough.

Borough, 417.
 First Election, 417.
 Officials, 420.
 Northampton Bank, 424.
 Bridges, 427.
 Floods, 428.
 Allentown Stage Coaches, 430.
 Water Works, 431.
 Fires, 433.
 Early Schools, 437.
 Prominent Visitors, 443.

City.

City, 447.
 Officials, 448.
 Public Library, 451.
 Soldiers' Monument, 453.
 Electric Railways, 453.
 Fire Department, 455.
 Banks in, 466.
 Parks, 469.
 Theatres, 471.
 Bridges, 471.
 Fair, 474.
 Building Associations, 482.
 Historical Society of Lehigh County, 483.
 Band, 483.
 Secret Societies, 485.
 Cemeteries, 491.

CHURCHES.

Reformed.

Zion, 495.
 St. John's, 499.
 Salem, 502.
 Christ, 503.
 Trinity, 504.
 Grace, 504.
 St. Andrew's, 505.
 Dubs Memorial, 506.

St. Paul's, 506.
 St. James, 506.
 St. Mark's, 506.

Lutheran.

St. Paul's, 507.
 St. John's, 510.
 St. Peter's, 512.
 St. Michael's, 512.
 St. Stephen's, 514.
 St. Luke's, 515.
 St. Joseph's, 516.
 Grace, 517.
 Christ, 517.
 St. James, 519.

Presbyterian.

First, 519.
 Westminster, 521.

Methodist Episcopal.

Linden Street, 521.
 Calvary, 522.
 African, 550.

Protestant Episcopal.

Grace, 522.
 Mediator, 523.

Baptist.

Sixth Street, 523.
 Twelfth Street, 524.

Evangelical Association, (In County).

Upper Milford, 524.
 Cedar Creek, 525.
 Emaus, 530.
 Slatington, 531.
 Slatedale, 531.
 Emerald, 531.
 Catasauqua, 531.

Evangelical Association, (In Allentown).

Salem, 527.
 Ebenezer, 528.
 Immanuel, 528.
 Zion's, 530.

United Evangelical, (In Allentown).

Trinity, 533.
 Bethany, 533.
 Seibert, 535.
 Grace, 537.
 Zion's, 537.

Evangelical, United (In County).

Catasauqua, 537.
 Egypt, 538.
 Emaus, 538.
 Slatington, 538.
 Emerald, 538.
 Hosensack, 539.
 Cetronia, 539.
 Vera Cruz, 539.

Evangelical Ministers.

Rev. John Schell, 540.
 Rev. Solomon Neitz, 540.
 Rev. John P. Leib, 541.
 Rev. J. M. Saylor, 541.
 Rev. Moses Dissinger, 542.
 Rev. B. J. Smoyer, 543.
 Gen. Henry Mertz, 543.
 Rev. David Mertz, 544.
 U. E. Waldheim Assn., 545.

Holiness Movement.

Ebenezer, 546.

United Brethren.

Grace, 546.
Zion, 547.

Mennonite Brethren in Christ.

Origin, 547.
First Church, 548.
Second Church, 548.

Mennonite.

Chew Street, 549.

Swedenborgian, 549.Free Methodist, 549.New Reformed, 550.Jewish.

Keneseth Israel, 550.
Sons of Israel, 551.
Agodas Achim, 551.

Catholic, Roman.

Immaculate Conception, 551.
Sacred Heart, 554.
St. John the Baptist, 555.
Our Lady, 556.
St. Peter and St. Paul, 556.

Catholic, Greek.

St. Mary's, 556.

ALBURTIS.

Erection of, 557.
Incorporation of, 557.
Lockridge Furnace, 558.
Shirt Factories, 559-60.
Ribbon Mill, 560.
Christ Chapel, 561.
Memorial Presbyterian Church, 562.
Schools, 564.

CATASAUQUA.

Original Title, 565.
Irish Settlement, 565.
Early Residents, 565.
Indian Relics, 566.
Incorporation, 567.
First Taxables, 568.
Additions to, 569.
Officials, 570.
Town Hall, 570.
Fire Companies, 570.
Abattoir, 573.
Ice, 573.
Bakeries, 573.
Boiler Works, 573.
Breweries, 574.
Brick Yards, 574.
Carriage Works, 575.
Cigar Factories, 575.
Crane Iron Works, 575.
Foundries, 578.
Grist Mills, 580.
Horse Shoe Works, 581.
Planing Mills, 581.
Goldsmith & Son, 582.
Rolling Mill, 583.
Rubber Works, 583.
Silk Mills, 584.
Local Improvements, 586.
Water Works, 588.
Railways, 591.
Post Office, 592.
Gas Works, 592.

David Thomas and Contemporaries, 593.
Occupations, 598.
Hotels, 599.
Political Animosity, 600.
Mexican War, 601.
Floods, 601.
George Taylor House, 602.
Aged Residents, 604.
Churches, 605.
Cemeteries, 617.
Monument, 618.
Schools, 619.
Newspapers, 622.
Lodges and Clubs, 623.
Banks, 626.
Old Home Week, 629.

COPLAY.

Incorporation, 631.
Churches, 632.
Industries, 633.
Bank, 634.

COPPERSBURG.

Early Settlers, 635.
Corporation, 636.
Churches, 636.
Public Houses, 637.
Stores, 637.
Industries, 637.
Bank, 637.
Cooper's Stock Farm, 638.
Dr. Boyè, 640.

EMAUS.

Founding of Town, 641.
Town Regulations, 643.
Moravian Congregation, 648.
Early Settlers, 649.
Schools, 650.
Churches, 652.
Band, 653.
Industries, 654.

FOUNTAIN HILL.

First Settlers, 656.
Bishophorpe School, 567.
St. Luke's Hospital, 567.
Churches, 568.
Cemetery, 658.

MACUNGIE.

Incorporation, 659.
Streets, 660.
East Macungie, 660.
House Tax War, 660.
Churches, 661.
Schools, 663.
Water System, 664.
Town Hall, 664.
Band, 665.
Industries, 665.

SLATINGTON.

First Settlers, 673.
Old Buildings, 674.
Discovery of Slate, 674.
Incorporation, 676.
Water Works, 677.
Railways, 678.
Newspapers, 679.
Fire Companies, 679.

- Banks, 681.
 Officials, 682.
 Societies, 684.
 Military Company, 685.
 Industries, 686.
 Churches, 690.
 Cemeteries, 694.
 Schools, 694.
- SOUTH ALLENTOWN.
- Incorporation, 696.
 Fire Company, 696.
 Industries, 696.
 Churches, 697.
 Schools, 697.
- BETHLEHEM (WEST SIDE).
- Early History, 698.
 Indian House, 698.
 Revolutionary Burial Ground, 698.
 Bridges, 699.
 Islands, 700.
 Industries, 700.
 Bank, 701.
 Hotels, 701.
 Churches, 702.
 Schools, 703.
 Corporation, 704.
 Consolidation, 704.
- HANOVER TOWNSHIP.
- Erection, 705.
 Early Settlers, 706.
 Early Roads, Etc., 708.
 Industries, 709.
 Nain, 710.
 Schoenersville, 710.
 Rittersville, 711.
 East Allentown, 711.
 Churches, 712.
 Beulah Park, 714.
 Cemeteries, 715.
 Schools, 715.
- HEIDELBERG TOWNSHIP.
- Erection, 717.
 Division, 717.
 Land Warrants, 718.
 Tax Lists, 719.
 Pioneer Settlers, 721.
 Heidelberg Church, 724.
 Soldiers' Monument, 727.
 Burial Ground, 727.
 Schools, 727.
 Industries, 728.
 Germansville, 730.
 Saegersville, 731.
 Pleasant Corner, 732.
 Handwerk Home, 734.
 Old Time Politics, 735.
 Public Roads and Bridges, 736.
 Summits, 737.
 Reservoir, 737.
- LOWHILL.
- Erection, 738.
 Land Warrants, 738.
 Tax Lists, 739.
 Present Land Owners, 740.
 Earl Mills, 741.
 Industries, 742.
 Claussville, 743.
- Weidasville, 743.
 Lyon Valley, 743.
 Ruhetown, 744.
 Bittner's Corner, 744.
 Leather Corner, 744.
 Early Road, 744.
 Churches, 745.
 Schools, 749.
 Lodges, 750.
 Mail Service, 751.
 Officials, 751.
- LOWER MACUNGIE.
- Erection, 752.
 Mills, 752.
 Early Settlers, 753.
 Centerville, 757.
 East Texas, 759.
 Wescoesville, 759.
 Hensingersville, 760.
 Weilersville, 761.
 Churches, 761.
- UPPER MILFORD.
- Erection, 766.
 Pioneer Settlers, 767.
 Tax Lists, 772.
 Prominent Citizens, 775.
 Old Roads, 777.
 Early Schools, 779.
 Division of Township.
 Zionsville, 782.
 King's Highway, 783.
 Zionsville Station, 784.
 Shimersville, 785.
 Milestones, 785.
 Vera Cruz, 786.
 Industries, 787.
 Churches, 789.
- LOWER MILFORD.
- Hosensack, 795.
 Hosensack Valley, 796.
 Krausedale, 796.
 Dillingersville, 797.
 Limeport, 797.
 Mills, 799.
 Industries, 800.
 Taverns, 802.
 Churches, 802.
- LYNN.
- Erection, 810.
 Land Warrants, 810.
 Tax Lists, 811.
 Pioneer Settlers, 812.
 Old Homesteads, 813.
 Historic Houses, 814.
 Knights of the Golden Circle, 816.
 French and Indian War, 816.
 Mills, 817.
 Industries, 819.
 Bridges, 820.
 Roads, 821.
 New Tripoli, 821.
 National Bank, 824.
 Lynnport, 825.
 Jacksonville, 826.
 Wanamaker, 826.
 Steinsville, 827.
 Slateville, 827.
 Lynnville, 828.

Mosserville, 828.
 Officials, 829.
 Churches, 829.
 Family Graveyards, 835.
 Schools, 837.

NORTH WHITEHALL.

Erection, 841.
 Early Settlers, 841.
 Tax List, 843.
 Indian Massacre, 843.
 Churches, 845.
 Schools, 849.
 Military Spirit, 851.
 Mineral Deposits, 853.
 Early Roads, 855.
 Bridges, 855.
 Railroads, 856.
 Justices, 857.
 Schnecksville, 858.
 Siegersville, 860.
 Kernsville, 861.
 Ruchsville, 861.
 Ormrod, 862.
 Ballietsville, 862.
 Unionville, 863.
 Neffsville, 863.
 Laury's, 864.
 Rockdale, 864.
 Deer Park, 865.
 Sand Spring, 865.

SALISBURY.

Erection, 867.
 Churches, 867.
 Tax Lists, 875.
 Early Settlers, 876.
 Early Roads, 878.
 Old Taverns, 879.
 Schools, 879.
 Waldheim Park, 881.
 Mountainville, 881.

SOUTH WHITEHALL.

Early Settlers, 882.
 Erection, 883.
 Tax Lists, 883.
 Churches, 884.
 Schools, 886.
 Mills, 887.
 Bridges, 889.
 Roads, 890.
 Population, 890.
 Military Affairs, 890.
 Guth Home, 891.
 Grouse Hall, 891.
 Indian Hole, 895.
 Guthsville, 895.
 Hoffmansville, 897.
 Walbert's Station, 898.
 Guth's Station, 898.
 Wenersville, 899.
 Cedarville, 899.
 Dorneysville, 900.
 Dorney Park, 900.
 Griesemersville, 901.
 Sherersville, 901.
 Seiple's Station, 901.
 Mechanicsville, 901.
 Old Buildings, 902.

UPPER MACUNGIE.

Erection, 904.
 Land Warrants, 904.
 Pioneer Settlers, 904.
 Tax Lists, 907.
 Early Mills, 910.
 Industries, 911.
 Trexlertown, 914.
 Fogelsville, 914.
 Breingisville, 915.
 Chapman's, 915.
 Churches, 915.
 Family Graveyards, 918.
 Schools, 919.
 Officials, 921.

UPPER SAUCON.

Original Land Warrants, 923.
 Organization, 928.
 Tax Lists, 929.
 Churches, 931.
 Schools, 935.
 Officials, 937.
 Zinc Mines, 939.
 Early Families, 940.

WASHINGTON.

Organization, 949.
 Land Warrants, 950.
 Mills, 950.
 Public Roads, 950.
 Officials, 951.
 Internal Improvements, 952.
 Old Stores and Hotels, 952.
 Slatedale, 953.
 Emerald, 955.
 Lehigh Furnace, 956.
 Frieden's, 957.
 Churches, 958, 959.
 Private Graveyards, 960.
 Schools, 960.
 Slate Industry, 962.
 Officials, 965.

WEISENBERG.

Topography, 967.
 Organization, 967.
 Early Settlers, 969.
 Character and Customs, 970.
 Tax Lists, 974.
 Churches, 976.
 Schools, 990.
 Private Cemeteries, 996.
 Hynemansville, 997.
 Seiberlingsville, 998.

WHITEHALL.

Organization, 1000.
 First Class Township, 1001.
 Early Settlers, 1002.
 Tax Lists, 1006.
 Industries, 1006.
 Egypt, 1012.
 Hokendauqua, 1018.
 West Catasauqua, 1019.
 Fullerton, 1020.
 Mickley's, 1021.
 Churches, 1021.
 Reminiscences, 1030.
 Bridges, 1031.
 Roads, 1032.

INDUSTRIES.

Agriculture, 1033.
Soil, 1036.

Farms.

Trexler Farms, 1037.
Fritch Farms, 1037.
Eckert Farms, 1038.
Cooper Stock Farm, 1038.
Hardner Farms, 1038.
Climate, 1038.

Iron Industries.

Furnaces, 1039.
First Engine, 1039.
Allentown Rolling Mill, 1040.
Boiler Works, 1041.
American Steel and Wire Co., 1042.
L. F. Grammes & Sons, 1044.
Bonney Vise and Tool Works, 1045.
Machine Shops and Foundries, 1046.
Dent Hardware Co., 1048.
Bryden Horseshoe Works, 1048.
Motor Trucks, 1048.
Dietrich Motor Car Co., 1048.
Krause Garage, 1048.
Metal Cornice Works, 1050.
Chandeliers, 1050.
Carriage Works, 1050.

Furniture Factories, 1050.

Yeager Furniture Co., 1051.
Kurtz Furniture Co., 1052.
Johnson & Swartz, 1053.
Gottlieb Buehler & Co., 1053.
Wm. D. Schantz & Co., 1053.
Planing Mills, 1053.
Washington Machines, 1054.

Slate Industry, 1055.Silk Mills, 1057.

Phoenix Silk Co., 1057.
Pioneer Silk Mill, 1059.
Weilbacher Silk Mill, 1059.
Lecha Silk Mill, 1060.
Kaltenbach & Stephens Silk Mill, 1060.
Winona Silk Mill, 1060.
Keystone Textile Co., 1060.
Hunsicker, Good & Co., 1060.
Post and Sheldon Silk Mill, 1060.
Queen City Silk Co., 1062.
Slate Silk Co., 1062.
Widmer Silk Co., 1062.
Macungie Silk Co., 1062.
McBride Silk Mill, 1062.
H. J. Feldhege Silk Co., 1062.
Silk Mill Supplies, 1063.
Bobbin Works, 1063.

Shuttles, 1063.

National Warping and Winding Co., 1063.
Bradford Winding Co., 1063.
National Silk and Dye Works, 1063.
Allentown Silk Dyeing Works, 1063.
Allentown Spinning Co., 1063.
Allentown Knitting Mills, 1065.
Swissonia Knitting Mills, 1065.
Alacrity Knitting Mills, 1065.

Cement.

First Mills, 1065.
Coplay Works, 1066.
American Works, 1066.
Lehigh Portland Co., 1066.
Whitehall Portland Co., 1067.

Boots and Shoes, 1069.Brick Making, 1071.

Granite and Tile Works, 1072.

Hotels, 1072.

Brewing and Bottling, 1074.
Cigars, 1076.
Hunsicker Co., 1077.
Allen Cressman Sons, 1077.
Paper Boxes, 1078.
Gas Works, 1078.

Electricity, 1079.Telegraph and Telephone, 1079.Merchants, 1080.

Art Glass Works, 1083.
Schlafer Bakery, 1083.
Band Horns, 1084.
Beds and Bedding, 1084.
Book Binding, 1084.
Boy's Clothing (Mfg.), 1084.
Brushes, 1084.
China and Glassware, 1084.
Allentown Crockery Co., 1084.
Roller-Smith Co., 1085.
Florists, 1085.
Grist Mills, 1085.
Ice and Ice Cream, 1086.
Laundries, 1086.
Printers, 1086.
Home Supply Co., 1088.
Saddleries, 1088.
Shirt, 1088.
Soap Works, 1088.
Tannerries, 1088.
Whips, 1089.

2073

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

<http://stores.ebay.com/Ancestry-Found>

Thank you for your order !

This media compilation, our respective advertisements and marketing materials are protected under U.S. Copyright law. The Federal Digital Millennium Copyright Act and various International Copyright laws prohibit the unauthorized duplication and reselling of this media. Infringement of any of these written or electronic intellectual property rights can result in legal action in a U.S. court.

If you believe your disc is an unauthorized copy and not sold to you by Rockyguana or Ancestry Found please let us know by emailing at <mailto:dclark4811@gmail.com>

It takes everyone's help to make the market a fair and safe place to buy and sell.